INTRODUCTION.

[NOTE.—All values are given in this volume as “tens of rupees,” a denomination which, while not subject to the charge of inaccuracy attaching to that of “£ sterling,” calculated at the nominal exchange of 2s. to the rupee, nevertheless enables comparisons to be made with the figures in any past volumes in which that expression of values was employed. The sign Rx. is used to signify tens of rupees.]

SECTION I.—SEA-BORNE FOREIGN TRADE.

CHAPTER I.

GENERAL SUMMARY.

The import tariff imposed on the 10th March 1894 was extended on the 27th December of the same year by the inclusion in the schedule of taxable articles of cotton goods and yarns, which had been exempted when the tariff was framed early in the year, and certain other articles. Whatever restriction the tariff imposed upon trade was sensibly increased by the low rates of exchange ruling throughout the year and the constant fluctuations in them. The highest rate quoted for bank bills on demand in Calcutta was 1s. 1 $\frac{3}{8}$ d., and the lowest 1s. 0 $\frac{1}{2}$ d., the difference being 10·18 per cent. The restriction of the tariff was, however, not material, for cotton goods and yarns were not affected until the beginning of the last quarter of the year, and for some time before that the imports of these goods had been unusually active in anticipation of their inclusion with the other imports subject to import duty. The decline in other goods was rather the result of the reaction from the extremely and abnormally large imports of the preceding year than of the operation of the tariff.

The imports and exports of the year are set out below in comparison with those of the preceding four years :—

	1890-91.	1891-92.	1892-93.	1893-94.	1894-95.

The features of the import trade are a decline (of about 5 per cent.) in merchandise, and a very much greater decline in gold and silver. The import trade generally was reduced by Rx. 12,655,768, or 13·7 per cent. In merchandise the reduction amounted to Rx. 3,789,519, in gold to Rx. 1,390,250, and in silver to Rx. 7,476,000.

The export trade generally increased by Rx. 6,500,689, or about 5·6 per cent., the increase being largest in gold, which left India in quite abnormal quantity; this export accounted for Rx. 4,225,090, being two-thirds of the total increase. In Indian merchandise the increase amounted to Rx. 1,748,849, or 1·7 per cent. There was a large increase in the re-export of imported goods, and in silver there was a small decline.

The total trade—imports and exports together—was—

Excluding Government transactions—

	Rx.		Rx.
1890-91 - - -	193,162,014	1893-94 - - -	202,854,540
1891-92 - - -	192,489,315	1894-95 - - -	196,699,461
1892-93 - - -	193,079,831

Including Government transactions—

	Rx.		Rx.
1890-91 - - -	196,260,383	1893-94 - - -	206,086,249

1892-93 - - -	196,829,486

The trade was about 3 per cent. smaller than in 1893-94, but it was larger than in any of the years preceding that year.

In 1893-94, in consequence of the suspension of the sale of Council bills for some months, the exports exceeded the imports by only about Rx. 18,000,000; in 1894-95 the exports exceeded the imports by the very large sum of Rx. 37,250,000.

CHAPTER II.

IMPORTS OF MERCHANDISE.

The values of imported merchandise since 1869-70 stand thus:—

	Exchange.	Rx.
Annual average, 1869-70 to 1873-74 - -	d. 22·770	31,837,600
Annual average, 1874-75 to 1878-79 - -	20·981	36,603,400
Annual average, 1879-80 to 1883-84 - -	19·774	47,950,000
Annual average, 1884-85 to 1888-89 - -	17·656	58,515,400
1889-90 - -	16·566	66,560,121
1890-91 - -	18·089	69,034,900
1891-92 - -	16·733	66,587,457
1892-93 - -	14·984	62,605,030
1893-94 - -	14·546	73,956,957
Annual average, 1889-90 to 1893-94 - -	16·183	67,748,893
1894-95 - -	13·1	70,167,438

The year 1893-94, like the year 1890-91, was marked by strikingly large imports, and in both cases the increase of trade was due in large measure to speculation. Importers sent out goods in hot haste when exchange temporarily rose in 1890 in consequence of impending legislation to increase the purchase of silver by the United States Treasury, and in 1893 in consequence of the closure of the Indian mints and the suspension of the sale of Council bills. The imports of 1893-94 were largely in excess of the requirements of the markets, and considerable stocks remained in the hands of dealers when the import duties were imposed in March 1894. The immediate consequence was, of course, that the traders decided to make the whole of the profit to be made out of goods to the price of which they were able to add the import duty before ordering new supplies. So fully supplied were the markets that the import trade would have shown a much more important decline than the one-twentieth which appears in the statistics but for one circumstance. The import duties, as imposed in March 1894, did not touch cotton yarns or fabrics, but it was known that the Government of India supported the Indian public in claiming that these goods should not be exempted from the taxation which had been imposed on most other classes of merchandise, and as the months passed by it became increasingly evident that their inclusion in the schedule of dutiable goods might very soon be expected. Acting on this anticipation a considerable quantity of these goods was pressed on the market, which would otherwise probably not have reached India until long after the end of the year, in the hope of avoiding payment of the anticipated duties. The trade in these goods is relatively so large that these operations made a substantial difference, and at the close of the year the total import value had declined to a much smaller extent than might have been expected.

The decline in the import trade was spread, though unequally, over Bengal, Bombay, and Burma, this last-named province showing a relatively very large fall. The trade of Madras and of Sindh did not share in the general decline. The figures are as follow for the last three years:—

	1892-93.	1893-94.	1894-95.	Increase + or Decrease - in 1894-95.
	Rx.	Rx.	Rx.	Rx.
Bengal	23,225,266	29,199,731	26,647,183	-2,552,548
Bombay	25,269,580	29,307,616	28,821,849	- 485,767
Sindh	3,416,798	4,216,591	4,509,042	+ 292,451
Madras	5,248,396	6,046,430	6,720,013	+ 673,583
Burma	5,444,990	5,186,589	3,469,351	-1,717,238

In Western India the decline in Bombay was to a large extent compensated by an increase in Karáchi; in Southern India there was an increase; and the decline was practically confined to Bengal and Burma. The reason for the decline in Bengal is easy to see. The trade of 1893-94 was excessive and largely speculative, and there was naturally a reaction in the following year. The same may be said of Bombay, where, however, the restriction which followed the very large imports of 1893-94 was much smaller than in Bengal.

This reason cannot be assigned in respect of Burma. In that province, it is said, the means of the people for the purchase of imported goods were narrowed by the successful combination of the rice millers during the last two years to refuse to give to the cultivators of rice the high prices which had prevailed for a considerable period. As rice is the principal product of Burma and its principal export, the reduction of price which was effected by the combination must have reduced the purchasing capacity of the cultivators. On the other hand, these latter had largely profited for some years by a range of prices certainly not justified by the course of prices in Europe, and the substitution by the rice millers of combination for competition was a measure which they were compelled to take to preserve the existence of the trade. As usual with the cultivator in Burma, he spent his money as soon as he got it, and had no savings to fall back upon when prices were lowered. As usual, too, with the rice millers, the combination has not held together; prices of rice have again risen to a high level, and imports into Burma in the first quarter of the present year have been made on a large scale.

The prices of staple imports were affected to some extent by the imposition of the duties, and in the middle of 1894 they had reached a relatively high level, which, however, has not been entirely maintained.

Taking the prices of March 1873 as = 100, the following table shows the variations in the prices of staple imports since then at Calcutta:—

In 1893-94 in two heads only—coal and provisions—was there a decrease. In all the other cases—with the single exception of liquors—the increase was substantial, and in most cases abnormally large.

In 1894-95 in six heads only was there an increase, and in one of these—cotton manufactures—the increase was only fractional. It was also very small in the case of dyeing and tanning materials and sugar. The decreases were in all cases substantial, and in some abnormally large.

For each of the classes under which the items are grouped in the trade returns the values of the trade in the last five years are stated below in Rx. :—

Liquors.

Malt Liquor.—The large imports in 1891-92 and 1892-93 were not maintained in 1893-94, and last year the quantity imported further declined to 2,514,041 gallons, which, however, is in itself a large import. The quantity of beer brewed in India in 1894 amounted to over 6½ million gallons, of which 3,267,000 gallons were purchased for the troops by the commissariat.

During the three or four years ending with 1892-93 the imports of malt liquor were advancing so rapidly that it was becoming something of a problem to discover the throats for which these large quantities were being imported, and what was the utmost limit possible of consumption. However, in 1893-94 the imports fell, and the fall was succeeded by another last year. The reduction of the imports in the last two years was coincident with a considerable increase in local production, which may possibly be regarded as the cause of the fall in the importation. The imports and local production in the last five years are stated below :—

	Imported. Gallons.		Locally brewed. Gallons.
1890-91	2,785,574	1890	5,192,572
1891-92	2,973,943	1891	4,745,803
1892-93	3,052,894	1892	4,831,127
1893-94	2,787,672	1893	5,532,725
1894-95	2,514,041	1894	6,121,905

The average value of the imported beer is declared at a little over one rupee nine annas a gallon.

Spirits.—Unlike malt liquor there has been an increase in the trade in the last three years; but the trade is not equal to what it has been in previous years, and it gives no tangible indication of substantial progress beyond a certain point. Brandy has again given way in favour of whisky, the imports being respectively 240,010 gallons and 466,454 gallons:—

	Gallons.		Gallons.
1885-86	936,984	1890-91	1,055,984
1886-87	1,064,386	1891-92	1,010,247
1887-88	1,084,487	1892-93	1,057,347
1888-89	1,119,367	1893-94	1,067,373
1889-90	1,100,414	1894-95	1,093,115

The importations of "brandy" from Germany have not declined, but the increase is small. The following figures give the quantity of brandy in gallons imported from the United Kingdom and the continental countries:—

	1893-94.	1894-95.
United Kingdom	108,802	76,478
France	129,321	117,826
Germany	31,922	32,662
Holland	3,265	4,251
Belgium	6,209	3,602

Of "whisky" also 11,119 gallons were received from Germany in 1893-94 and 7,556 gallons in 1894-95. The character of such importations may be inferred from the fact that it was pertinaciously argued last year on behalf of some distillers in Austria that it was legal under the Merchandise Marks Act to import liquor labelled "Glasgow whisky—made in Austria."

Wines.—The increase in 1893-94 was, as suggested, merely temporary, and it has been followed by a decline. The same remark applies to liqueurs.

Provisions.—The imports of the principal among the enumerated items have been as follows in the last three years:—

	1892-93.	1893-94.	1894-95.
Fish, dry, salted	18,129,876	18,500,123	17,686,521
" wet, "	13,821,584	4,516,387	4,903,271
Bacon and hams	793,005	954,854	969,927
Cheese	790,231	826,943	906,968
Butter	315,278	289,348	301,997

Fishmaws and sharkfins	1,578,276	1,297,589	1,290,519
Dates	839,682	823,171	752,984
Other dried fruit	103,058	130,989	109,910

The value of the enumerated kinds of provisions which are mentioned above, with two or three trifling exceptions, was:—

	Rx.
1892-93	1,145,504
1893-94	1,105,404
1894-95	920,179

There is besides a large quantity of unenumerated goods which it is practically impossible to specify. These are mainly canned fish and meats, preserves, jams and jellies, biscuits, condiments, and the innumerable "tinned stores," as they are called, which play an important part in Anglo-Indian households. The value of these goods is:—

	Rx.
1892-93 - - - - -	716,550
1893-94 - - - - -	677,464
1894-95 - - - - -	655,765

The imports of wet salted fish remain at about the low level to which they fell when an import duty to countervail the excise duty on salt in Burma was imposed. But if the imposition of the duty was a cause and not merely a coincidence, it is noticeable that the imports of dry salted fish, which are imported, like the wet fish, from the Straits into Burma, have not declined in that province, though the imports into Bombay have fallen.

It is difficult to see the utility of importing flour from such countries as Italy, China (Hong Kong), whence American flour is imported, and the Straits, when the Indian flour-mills produce an article of very superior quality, which is largely exported to foreign countries.

The extensive importations of dates are of a fluctuating character, the quantities imported depending on the abundance or otherwise of the crop in Arabia and Asiatic Turkey. Nearly nine-tenths of the imports are brought to Bombay and Karáchi, and dates are certainly not commonly found in the markets in other parts of India.

Australia made a little show last year in the list of countries whence provisions are imported, the result of the work of the two Commissioners sent to India from Victoria to push business. Judging from advertisements it would seem that the trade is continuing.

Salt.—There was a very large increase in the quantity imported:—

	Tons.		Tons.
1889-90 - - -	410,808	1892-93 - - -	360,042
1890-91 - - -	395,243	1893-94 - - -	412,876
1891-92 - - -	373,953	1894-95 - - -	508,375

The quantity of the imports is in a definite measure dependent on the freight market. Given the prospect of a good demand for space for export cargo, steamers and sailing vessels come out readily, and many carry salt instead of ballast. To Rangoon as well as to Calcutta last year's imports of salt were in excess of the demand for consumption, and at the end of the year the stocks in bond were materially in excess of the stocks at the end of the preceding year. Nevertheless, the consumption was $1\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. in excess of that of 1893-94.

1891-92 - - -	34,451,228	1894-95 - - -	34,150,507

The larger consumption was influenced by a fall of price for both imported and Sambhar salt. The price of Liverpool salt at Calcutta, as shown below, fluctuates violently and fell heavily last year:—

Salt is imported almost entirely into Bengal and Burma, and the imports into these two provinces in the last five years are as follow:—

Her Majesty's Consul-General at Vienna reported in 1894 that the Union Bank of Vienna had taken up the shipment of cargoes of salt to India, but there would seem to have been some mistake, for no salt has reached India from Austria.

Spices.—The imports consist mainly of betelnuts, cloves, and pepper. Cloves are imported from Zanzibar to Bombay, whence a material proportion is re-exported to England; betelnuts from the Straits and Ceylon into Bengal and Madras; and pepper from the Straits into Bengal in competition with Indian pepper produced in other provinces and in Travancore. It is a fairly large trade, averaging about Rx. 850,000 up to 1892-93, when it fell to Rx. 624,000, the demand for betelnuts being small. In 1893-94 there was a revival in the trade, the value reaching Rx. 873,655; but last year it fell again to Rx. 777,106, in consequence of a small importation of pepper, the trade in that spice being of a very uncertain and fluctuating nature. Cloves also declined materially, as the result of shorter supplies than in 1893-94, but the trade in that year was affected by the fact that the Zanzibar crop of cloves was the largest and the prices about the lowest on record.

Sugar.—The quantity and value of the imports have been as follow in the last six years :—

With the increase in the production of beet-sugar in Europe, the cane-sugar of Mauritius has been gradually thrust out of the European markets, and the Mauritius sugar-planter has found himself obliged to turn to the markets in the silver countries of the East. He has not been saved from this necessity even by the depreciation of the exchange between silver and gold, which, according to some, enables the producer in the silver countries to weather any storm and to smile at the competition of the producer in the gold countries. For some years past the sugar-planters of Mauritius have been looking more and more to India as an outlet for their produce, and when the tariff of March 1894 imposed an import duty of 5 per cent. on their and all other sugars, their minds were filled with alarm. Representations were at once made on their behalf to the Government of India protesting that the duty was protective of Indian sugar and that the Mauritius sugar trade would be ruined.

The answer to these protests was that Mauritius sugar was consumed in Western India, where production was on an insignificant scale, the climate being unsuitable, and that the sugar of the producing tracts in Northern India could not penetrate to Western India in competition with imported sugar in consequence of the cost of transit; and the planters were recommended to wait and see whether any of the usual effects of protection became visible in due course. No further complaint has been heard from them, and it may reasonably be assumed that they have discovered that their fears were groundless. The imports from Mauritius in the last five years have been as follow, and it is evident from them that the operation of the tariff of March 1894 has had no effect at all on the trade in Mauritius sugar during the first year of its existence :—

	Cwt.		Cwt.
1890-91 - -	1,494,945	1893-94 - -	1,361,649

Of the total quantity of $2\frac{1}{2}$ million cwt. imported in the year $1\frac{3}{4}$ millions were received from Mauritius, three-quarters of a million from other countries. The main sources of supply, other than Mauritius, are shown in the subjoined table :—

	1890-91.	1891-92.	1892-93.	1893-94.	1894-95.

Ceylon - - -	1,935	1,082	4,921	17,161	7,393

As observed when writing last year, the table shows (1) that the imports from the United Kingdom have undergone such rapid restriction that the trade would seem to have approached complete extinction, and (2) that the continental countries make no headway in the competition between their beet-sugars and the cane-sugars of Mauritius, China, the Straits, and Java, which continue to furnish India with the bulk of the sugar required from foreign countries.

Tea.—This trade maintains a high level, though the imports last year were smaller than in 1893-94. The imports are :—

	Lbs.	Rx.		Lbs.	Rx.
1890-91 - -	4,770,008	325,141	1893-94 - -	7,687,757	572,006

1892-93 - -	6,022,883	443,336

The sources of supply are China, Ceylon, the Straits, and Java, from which countries the imports in the last five years have been :—

	China.	Ceylon.	Straits.	Java.

1894-95 - - -	4,630,327	901,971	413,417	362,366

The Ceylon tea is consumed in India, but the greatest part of the other imported tea is re-exported, going chiefly to the Persian market by sea, and to the Afghanistan market by land.

Metals and Manufactures of Metal.

Hardware and Cutlery.—The value of the imports in the last five years has been :—

	Rx.		Rx.
1890-91 - - -	1,197,614	1893-94 - - -	1,301,690
1891-92 - - -	1,238,994	1894-95 - - -	1,283,897
1892-93 - - -	1,217,754

It can hardly be inferred from these figures that the imposition of the import duty of 5 per cent. has had any effect on the trade; for though the trade last year was slightly smaller than that of 1893-94, the trade of that year, like the import trade generally, was exceptionally large. Imports from the United Kingdom amounted to Rs. 1,045,355, being the great bulk (between 81 and 82 per cent.) of the trade, the remainder being imports from the Continent, chiefly from Germany, Belgium, and Austria.

Copper.—The imports of the last five years have been :—

1890-91	-	-	Cwt.	446,448	1893-94	-	-	Cwt.	591,109
1891-92	-	-		511,088	1894-95	-	-		354,107
1892-93	-	-		420,762

As in the case of many other imports, advantage was taken in 1893-94 of the conditions of exchange to fill up the markets after a small import in the preceding year. Apparently stocks were so heavy that it was not profitable to import and pay duty on further stocks until the demand became equal to the supply.

The principal sources of supply in the last three years were :—

The imports of iron have fallen to a lower level than has been known for more than a decade. It is not at all likely that the import duty—which is assessed at only 1 per cent. ad valorem on the great bulk of the imports—can have had any influence on the trade. There are, however, other factors at work to prevent the growth of the imports of iron: pig iron and castings made at Barakar interfere with the development of those classes of imported iron; ready-made tools and implements are being imported instead of the raw material from which such implements were fashioned by crude native methods; the railway companies sell each year larger quantities of old iron and scrap, which are taken in preference to material imported direct, because they are supposed, no doubt with reason, to possess a guarantee of quality in the fact that they have been used on a railway line or in a railway workshop; and, lastly, for certain classes of goods, steel has rapidly superseded iron in recent years, as a glance at the foregoing figures will show.

The imports of steel were rather smaller than in 1893-94, but the trade in that year was quite exceptionally large, and even the reduced quantity imported in 1894-95 is markedly in excess of the trade of any preceding year. Indeed, the progress of this trade is remarkable.

The following are the principal forms in which iron and steel are imported:—

Iron.	1893-94.	1894-95.	Steel.	1893-94.	1894-95.

Belgium and Germany continue to compete actively in India with iron and steel of British manufacture, and the figures in the subjoined table, which show the extent of the competition, merit attention:—

Copper, iron, and steel represent 94 per cent. of the quantity and 86 per cent. of the value of all imported metals. The imports of the other metals have been as follow:—

Others - - -	5,713	5,164	6,287	4,592

The total value of all kinds of metals has been during the five years:—

	Rx.		Rx.
1890-91 - -	5,646,147	1893-94 - -	6,278,592
1891-92 - -	5,655,072	1894-95 - -	5,061,763
1892-93 - -	5,382,017

The increase in 1893-94 was largely due to the cause which increased the import trade generally, and there can be little doubt that the decline in 1894-95 was a temporary reaction due to the existence of an overstocked market, at least, as regards iron and steel, for, as said before, the duty on those metals of 1 per cent. can have had no substantial effect. In the case of the other metals the duty is 5 per cent., and the incidence of this, especially following a year of heavy import, probably affected the trade of the year. There has, however, been a large increase in the first four months of the present year.

Machinery and Millwork.—Railway Material.—The imports have been :—

	Machinery.	Railway Material.
	Rx.	Rx.
1890-91	2,063,863	2,001,853
1891-92	2,111,596	1,484,173
1892-93	2,359,103	1,032,939
1893-94	2,518,038	1,242,977
1894-95	2,442,433	1,556,967

There was a small decline in machinery, following a large importation in 1893-94. The imports of railway material were larger than they have been for some years. The imports of railway material by Government, which are not included in the foregoing figures, were also tolerably large; they are shown here for the last five years :

	Rx.		Rx.

Chemicals, Drugs, Medicines and Narcotics, and Dyeing and Tanning Materials.

The value of the trade in Chemicals was in 1893-94 Rx. 357,152, and in 1894-95 Rx. 412,326. The trade has largely increased each year during the last five years. In the specified items chemicals for paper-making rank the highest, the value in 1893-94 being Rx. 88,993 and last year Rx. 88,497. Alum, sulphuric acid, bicarbonate of soda, sal-ammoniac, and sulphur are amongst the other principal items; but not much less than half the whole value is placed against "other sorts," unspecified.

In Drugs, Medicines, and Narcotics there is a much larger trade than in chemicals :—

	Rx.		Rx.
1890-91 -	632,146	1893-94 -	771,525
1891-92 -	650,425	1894-95 -	736,785
1892-93 -	662,815

Much of the trade consists of undescribed drugs and medicines, the miscellaneous stock of a pharmacy. Of the described kinds the most important are camphor and tobacco in all its forms, unmanufactured and manufactured. The value of imported tobacco was Rx. 247,635 in 1893-94 and Rx. 217,992 last year.

There was a material reduction in the imports of camphor, probably the consequence of the warlike operations in China, most of the camphor brought to India having its origin in Formosa.

Dyeing and Tanning Materials.—The value of the imports consisted last year to the extent of 77 per cent. of aniline and alizarine dyes. The trade in these mineral dyes has increased very rapidly in recent years and has assumed material importance :—

		Rx.
1890-91	3,857,648	353,994
1891-92	5,592,155	458,191
1892-93	5,923,865	501,921
1893-94	6,288,265	533,104
1894-95	5,978,723	552,344

They are mainly alizarine, of which 4,187,952 lbs. were imported, only 1,790,771 lbs. being aniline. To the extent of nine-tenths these dyes are landed in Bombay and Karachi. Only about 4 per cent. of the imports are brought to Calcutta, the people of the districts most conveniently supplied with imported goods from that port being more given to wear uncoloured than coloured clothing. The dyes are mostly of continental origin, the sources of supply of our imports being:

The total value of all the dyeing and tanning materials imported was Rx. 717,183, alizarine and aniline dyes being represented in that sum by Rx. 552,344, being, as stated above, 77 per cent. of the whole. The imports of other dyestuffs and tans stand thus:—

Oils.

Mineral Oil.—Imports have been:—

	Gallons. (000's omitted.)	Rx.
1890-91	54,235	2,362,219
1891-92	58,109	2,368,140

1893-94	86,609	3,275,585
1894-95	53,441	2,122,999

In 1893-94 there was an excessively large importation of kerosene oil from the United States, which was due partly to speculation in view especially of the anticipation which existed that an increase of the import duty would form part of the fiscal measures which were supposed to be under consideration, and partly to the desire to prevent Russian oil from taking possession of the market, which it threatened to do. The imports were in fact so large as to be greatly in excess of the offtake, and they were accompanied by a great fall in prices.

In 1894-95 the position as between Russian and American oil was greatly modified, for while the imports of Russian oil decreased those of American oil decreased far more largely, the decline being so heavy that the total imports of oil fell to the point at which they had stood five or six years previously. Stocks fell to a very low level, holders no doubt not being inclined to order out fresh supplies until they had obtained all the profit to be had out of the tariff arrangements, one of which was the doubling of the import duty. Prices then began to rise, reaching a relatively high level in the first few months of the present official year. These conditions of reduced imports and stocks have, however, brought about another flow of oil to India, and the imports in the first four months of the present year have been on a very large scale.

The following figures show the imports from Russia and the United States respectively in the last five years:—

	United States.	Russia.
	Gallons.	Gallons.
1890-91 - - -	32,692,946	19,843,423
1891-92 - - -	27,293,985	28,333,635
1892-93 - - -	26,264,630	38,086,703
1893-94 - - -	49,426,851	34,045,789
1894-95 - - -	24,320,253	26,613,268

The year has seen a sensible development of the importation of kerosene oil in bulk, nearly 7,000,000 gallons having been so imported, of which 4,000,000 were brought to Calcutta and the remainder to Madras. Arrangements have now been made at Bombay also for the reception of oil imported in bulk, and it seems probable that the importations of what is called "bulk oil" will presently exceed the imports of "case oil."

The greatest part of the oil imported is used for illumination. For that purpose the oil produced in India is but little used as yet, though considerable quantities enter into consumption for lubricating and other purposes. In 1893 (the latest year for which returns have been received) about 10,276,000 gallons were produced in Upper Burma, which is a large increase on the figures of preceding years. Elsewhere the quantity produced is as yet trifling.

Apart from mineral oil, which is mainly kerosene, the import trade in oils is of no importance, consisting chiefly of a relatively small trade in linseed oil from England, coconut oil from Mauritius and Ceylon, essential oil from the Straits, and animal oil from England.

Raw Materials and Unmanufactured Articles.

Coal.—The imports of coal, coke, and patent fuel have been:—

	Tons.		Tons.
1888-89 - - -	833,478	1892-93 - - -	648,185
1889-90 - - -	601,670	1893-94 - - -	555,280
1890-91 - - -	784,664	1894-95 - - -	823,314
1891-92 - - -	736,971

This trade is subject to violent fluctuations, the imports, like those of salt, being in some degree dependent on the state of the export freight market. After having fallen year by year for three or four years, last year saw a great recovery. Still the quantity imported was smaller than the imports of six years previously, and if regard is had to the development in the last decade of manufacturing industries and of railway and steamer communications, the inference cannot be resisted that this trade is on the road to extinction, though perhaps the point of extinction may be a long way off yet.

Western India (Bombay and Sindh) takes the bulk of the imports, the distribution of which is as follows (in tons):—

	1890-91.	1891-92.	1892-93.	1893-94.	1894-95.
Bombay and Sindh -	687,200	621,030	541,160	461,912	696,063
Burma - - - -	36,599	48,085	27,814	19,450	35,419
Madras - - - -	50,818	45,044	66,380	65,805	82,664
Bengal - - - -	10,047	22,812	12,831	8,113	9,138

The production of coal in India in 1894 amounted to 2,820,652 tons.

Cotton.—The imports of Asiatic cotton declined and imports of non-Asiatic cotton increased very largely. The imports of each sort have been as follows:—

	Asiatic.	Non-Asiatic.
	Cwt.	Cwt.
1890-91 - - - -	80,165	4,071
1891-92 - - - -	64,123	17,135
1892-93 - - - -	58,920	48,552
1893-94 - - - -	57,624	36,868
1894-95 - - - -	19,747	58,230

The Asiatic cotton came principally from Persia and Mekran, and some, at any rate, of the decline in the imports is stated to be due to the diversion of much trade in Persian cotton to Russia by the Caspian instead of to India by the Gulf. The non-Asiatic was imported: from Egypt, 42,674 cwt.; United Kingdom, 12,619 cwt. (either American or Brazilian); Zanzibar, 2,936 cwt., this cotton being a fine and long staple approximating to Sea Island cotton. During the first four months of the present year 30,334 cwt. of non-Asiatic cotton have already been imported. As stated last year, the manufacture of the finer counts of yarn in India has in fact already passed out of the experimental stage. The question a few years hence will probably be whether India can produce cotton capable of producing in a spinning mill the finer counts of yarns, say from 30's. to 50's. At present, however, the business is too small to present any temptation to the cultivator to attempt the production of cotton for which he might be unable to find a market in competition with imported cotton.

Silk.—The large imports of 1893-94 have been followed by a more restricted trade in 1894-95:—

	Lbs.	Rx.
1890-91 - - -	2,406,239	1,115,068
1891-92 - - -	2,701,069	1,264,003
1892-93 - - -	2,292,846	1,016,080
1893-94 - - -	2,947,595	1,360,179
1894-95 - - -	2,494,496	1,036,533

This is almost exclusively a Bombay trade, the raw silk being imported there from China, Japan, and the Straits, for manufacture in the silk mills. There are mills in Calcutta also, but these, which are on a smaller scale, supply themselves much more from local production. There is no production of silk in Bombay.

Wood.—The importation of teakwood, to which attention has been drawn on former occasions, is attaining considerable dimensions. The trade in the last five years has been:—

	Cubic Tons.	Rx.
1890-91 - - -	4,164	27,975
1891-92 - - -	3,095	19,375
1892-93 - - -	2,708	18,323
1893-94 - - -	8,321	48,013
1894-95 - - -	17,238	114,510

The wood is imported into Bombay from Siam in competition with Burma teak.

Wool.—The importation of wool by sea is relatively small. Last year the quantity imported was a little less than half a million pounds, value Rx. 132,419. Most of the foreign wool imported into India is received overland from the countries across the Western and Northern frontiers, and much of it is re-exported. The imports by sea are also largely re-exported, and only a small portion—that which is received from Australia—is consumed in local manufacture; these imports amounted to 59,000 and 49,000 lbs. in each of the last two years. The woollen factories of India are still, however, only in their infancy as regards the weaving of the better classes of fabrics.

Manufactured Articles.

Cotton Yarn.—The imports of cotton twist and yarn in the last decade have been as follows:—

1885-86 - - -	Lbs.	45,915,000	1890-91 - - -	Lbs.	50,971,000
1886-87 - - -	49,014,000	1891-92 - - -	50,404,000
1887-88 - - -	51,543,000	1892-93 - - -	38,277,000
1888-89 - - -	52,587,000	1893-94 - - -	42,807,000
1889-90 - - -	46,383,000	1894-95 - - -	41,483,000

With the imposition of the import duty at the end of December 1894 it became desirable to keep a record of the counts of the yarn imported, and arrangements were made for this purpose in the Custom-houses. They did not come into effect, however, until the year was nearing its close, and the figures are therefore quite fragmentary. There is, however, no doubt that they indicate with a very near approach to accuracy the relative proportions of the different counts, and they confirm the statements which have frequently been made that, as regards grey yarn, there is hardly any importation below No. 25, and that the bulk of the trade is limited to the numbers from 26 to 50, the real trade being in the numbers from 30 to 40. There is a much larger proportion of coloured yarn imported of No. 25 and under. The figures are subjoined for mule twist and coloured yarn :—

	Mule.	Coloured.
	Lbs.	Lbs.
No. 20 and under - - -	64,664	370,223
21 to 25 - - -	6,442	519,845
26 to 30 - - -	1,497,559	472,510
Above 50 - - -	286,912	156,475

It was observed in the review of the trade of 1893-94 that the importation of yarns is a declining trade, and that the imports ought to have steadily grown in at least the same ratio as the population, if the competition of the yarn spun in the Indian mills had not interfered with them. The remarks then made need no modification: "As one mill after another has been established in different sections of the country, as the counts of yarn made in them have gradually advanced from the low numbers first exclusively made to the higher numbers up to and above 20's and 24's, and as railway development has placed these yarns and the cloths made from them within easy reach of the people, the effect has been that the region within which hand-loom weaving is practised has been slowly restricted, with the result that there is a continuously smaller demand for the foreign yarn used for such weaving. Its place is being taken by Indian yarn, by Indian mill-made cloths made of yarn spun in the Indian mills, and by the manufactures of the Lancashire looms."

Cotton Fabrics.—The closing of the mints in June 1893, and the consequent temporary rise in the exchange value of the rupee, were followed by a rush of these goods, as well as of cotton yarns, importers desiring to compensate themselves for the slackness of the trade of the preceding year and to take advantage of the higher value of the rupee. It is probable that this great speculative trade in 1893-94 would have been followed, as is ordinarily the case, by a pause in 1894-95; but a renewed incentive to speculation was given by the prolonged discussion of the propriety of including cotton goods in the import tariff—a discussion which was followed by the knowledge that the Government of India were in favour of such inclusion. The hope that the duties would be imposed became an anticipation in the second half of the year, and then a very large speculative business was entered upon, with the result that the importations of grey and white goods were much in excess of the inflated imports of 1893-94, and though the trade in coloured goods was not so large it was much larger than in any preceding year since 1887. The imports in the last ten years have been :—

	Grey (Unbleached).	White (Bleached).	Coloured, Printed, or Dyed.
	Yards.	Yards.	Yards.

1894-95 - - -	1,352,271,000	497,332,000	408,072,000

During the present year imports have, as might have been expected after two years of inflation, fallen away—at any rate so far as the trade of the first four months of the year is concerned. But it would be rash to attribute any portion of this decline to the effect of the Customs duty in restricting consumption. The import duties which were levied on cotton goods before 1882 did not restrict consumption, and they are not likely to do so now. The present restriction may, with greater reason, be attributed to the disinclination of traders to pay duty on goods which they would not be able to sell until the market was cleared of the accumulated stocks imported before the imposition of the duty.

Arrangements were made, shortly after the imposition of the import duty, to specify the main classes of the piece-goods trade. The figures are, like those of the counts of yarn, fragmentary, the record having commenced only a short time before the close of the year; but they show with some approach to accuracy the relative proportions of the different classes of goods:—

Although no record exists of the counts of the yarn of which these descriptions of fabrics are woven, and no exact statistics on the subject are obtainable even from importers in India or exporters from England, the fineness of the yarn in the goods specified is well enough known to enable an approximately accurate inference to be drawn of the counts of yarn. Thus in grey goods, which form the great mass of the imports of cotton piece goods, the yarns used in shirtings and in chadars, dhutis, saris, and scarves, are of the medium counts—say from 30's to 40's—and these descriptions of goods constitute 80 per cent. of the imports specified above, while they would be found, if we had complete statistics, to constitute at least 90 per cent. of the whole imports of grey goods. Some of the other specified descriptions are also woven of the medium and finer classes of yarns, and among these may be enumerated jaconets, mulls, and madapollams. It is in fact only in the case of printers, T-cloths, domestics, jeans, sheetings, and drills, that the lower counts of yarn (20's and under) are freely employed. These classes of goods constitute less than 4 per cent. of the classes specified above and are perhaps not 2 per cent. of the imports. On this point the statistics which are being obtained during the current year will throw clear light.

In white and coloured goods the proportion of the classes made of the coarser yarns (20's and under) would seem to be even smaller than it is in grey goods.

In addition to the three great classes of piece goods, grey, white, and coloured, referred to above, the principal other kinds of cotton manufactures imported are:—

	Value in 1894-95. Rx.

The value of the imports of cotton yarns and woven goods in the last three years was:—

	25,625,865	32,377,469	32,673,628

In 1892-93 the value represented about 41 per cent. of the whole import trade; in 1893-94 about 43 $\frac{3}{4}$ per cent.; and in 1894-95 about 46 $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.

The imports of yarns and piece goods were thus distributed among the Indian provinces last year, the proportions varying but little from year to year:—

	Yarns, Lbs. (000's omitted.)	Piece Goods, Yards (000's omitted).
		Grey.	White.	Coloured.
Bengal - - - -	10,851	820,880	203,378	125,010

Madras - - - -	14,096	100,961	23,581	34,900
Burma - - - -	3,831	5,165	23,900	15,075

About 60½ per cent. of the grey piece goods are imported into Bengal and 31½ per cent. into Bombay and Sindh, the bulk of the remaining 8 per cent. being taken by Madras. Of the white goods about 50 per cent. are imported into Bombay and Sindh, and 41 per cent. into Bengal, the remaining 9 per cent. being equally divided between Madras and Burma, which latter province takes but a small quantity of grey goods. Of coloured goods the proportion taken by Bombay and Sindh is about 57 per cent., by Bengal about 30½ per cent., by Madras about 8½ per cent., Burma taking ¼ per cent. Thus it appears, as was said in the review of the trade of 1893-94, "that while Bengal takes two-thirds of the imported grey goods, that province takes two-fifths of the white goods, and less than one-third of the coloured goods. In Western India the use of bleached (white) goods, which are generally finer than the grey goods, and of coloured goods, is more common than in the regions supplied through Calcutta, and besides the fabrics of the Indian mills have to a larger extent than in Eastern India displaced imported grey goods."

The bulk of all these goods continues to come to India through Manchester. The proportions received in the last two years from the United Kingdom were:—

	1893-94.	1894-95.
	Per Cent.	Per Cent.
Yarns - - - -	97·2	97·3
Grey piece goods - -	99·8	99·7

Silk Goods.—After two years of greatly augmented imports of silk piece goods there was a substantial fall in 1894-95, as might have been expected from the coincidence of an accumulation of stocks in the market and the imposition of the import duty. The quantity of piece goods imported fell to less than ten million yards, which was below the level of any of the preceding four years. The value of the trade in the five years was:—

1890-91 - - - -	Rx.	1,386,362	1893-94 - - - -	Rx.	1,827,874
1891-92 - - - -	-	1,750,695	1894-95 - - - -	-	1,277,420
1892-93 - - - -	-	1,801,571

As much as 69 per cent. of the imports are brought to Bombay and 20½ per cent. to Burma, only about 9 per cent. being brought to Bengal.

Woollen Goods.—Of the trade in woollen goods much the same remarks may be made as of the trade in silk goods. The quantity of piece goods imported in 1893-94 was very large, and in excess of the offtake; the imports in 1894-95 were therefore on a much reduced scale. The total value of the trade in the five years was:—

Other Manufactured Goods.—Of the other articles enumerated in this class the following are the most important. The value of the trade in each of the last five years is here specified :—

With two exceptions of no importance, the very noticeable increase in the imports of 1893-94 has not been maintained, and the trade has declined more or less substantially. It is difficult to resist the inference that the increase in the importations of 1893-94 was, to a great extent, speculative and out of proportion to requirements, and that the imposition of the import duties induced importers to wait until stocks were worked off before ordering new supplies.

The list appended states, in the order of their importance, the principal articles of merchandise imported into India :—

The two first items comprised 54 per cent. of the whole value of imports in 1893-94 and 55½ per cent. last year.

General Distribution of the Import Trade.—The total value of the imports of foreign merchandise in 1893-94 and 1894-95 was thus distributed among the principal countries with which the trade is carried on:—

CHAPTER III.

EXPORTS OF MERCHANDISE.

I.—Exports of Foreign Merchandise.

The large increase in the re-export of imported goods which might have been expected to follow the great increase in the import trade in 1893-94 did not occur in that year, but it showed itself in 1894-95, when there was an increase of 14 per cent. over 1893-94. The figures of the last five years are:—

1890-91	Rx.	4,233,529	1893-94	Rx.	4,431,975
1891-92	Rx.	4,485,179	1894-95	Rx.	5,057,561
1892-93	Rx.	4,590,290

Comparing the foregoing figures with those of the imports for the same period, it may be said that about 6½ per cent. of the merchandise imported is re-shipped by sea from India. Perhaps half as much is exported by land, and it will probably be an approximation to the truth to say that nine-tenths of the merchandise imported are consumed in India, the remaining tenth being sent to other countries, the bulk of the trade being conducted with the Arabian, Persian, and African coasts, with the Straits Settlements, and with the United Kingdom. With Ceylon the trade is relatively small, not half what it is with the Straits, though being so much closer it might have been supposed that the trade would be larger. The explanation is that Colombo is so happily situated geographically that it is admirably adapted to be an entrepôt for the supply of Southern India and other neighbouring regions, and that there is no necessity for that port to receive supplies of European goods, except direct from Europe.

The share of the trade with each country is shown below:—

Over 95 per cent. of the trade in 1894-95 was carried on from Bombay and Karáchi, the bulk of the trade (to the extent of about 82 per cent.) being Bombay trade.

The principal articles of the trade and their values are shown below :—

To the extent of 44 per cent. the trade consisted of cotton goods and yarn. The only other articles of any importance are wool, tea, and sugar.

The trade in tea is increasing year by year, the exports last year reaching the figure of 4,340,000 lbs., most of it being China and Java tea shipped from Bombay to Persia. Until recently this trade was chiefly carried on overland through Afghanistan, but the oppressive transit dues levied by the Amir have combined with the greater cheapness of cost and the shorter time occupied in reaching the Persian markets by sea from Bombay via Bushire and Bandar-Abbas, and the markets of Russian Turkistan via Batoum and the Caspian, to practically extinguish the transit trade through the Amir's dominions.

Indian tea is also being more largely shipped to the Persian market in competition with foreign tea, as will be seen from the figures of the exports of both kinds given below :—

	Foreign Tea.	Indian Tea.
	Lbs.	Lbs.
1889-90	1,673,175	1,118,126

1893-94	3,306,020	2,497,525
1894-95	3,961,397	3,172,806

In a report from the Vice-Consul at Meshed it is stated that the Indian tea received in Persia is of very inferior quality, but merchants in Calcutta (where the tea is bought which is shipped from Bombay to Persia) say that this is not the case, the purchasers giving very good prices and getting tea of good quality; and this statement is in accordance with the declared value of the shipments from Bombay, the average of which is but little short of 12 annas per pound—at which price the tea should be of very fair quality. The Indian Tea Association has set on foot an inquiry to ascertain the foundation for the Vice-Consul's remark.

A small quantity of both foreign and Indian tea was also exported to Asiatic Russia, and as the Russians have given advantages to tea brought by sea to Batoum and thence conveyed to Russian Turkestan over tea carried thence through Afghanistan and Persia,—these routes being indeed practically closed to goods from India by the new fiscal regulations;—this trade may increase.

The other items of the re-export trade do not call for special notice.

II.—Exports of Indian Merchandise.

1888-89	92,642,735	+ 7·2

It was observed last year that the trade of 1891-92 was abnormally swelled by a remarkable export of wheat, rice, and other food-grains, consequent on the famine in Russia. The large quantities then exported, and the great rise in prices of these food-stuffs, made the trade of that year quite exceptional.

In 1892-93 the trade, though showing a smaller aggregate value, was in fact much better all round, with the single exception of food-stuffs, than in 1891-92; but the restriction of the exports of those articles within normal limits, and the great fall in their values which followed on good harvests in the United States, Russia, and Continental Europe generally, brought the aggregate value of the trade down to a lower level.

The year 1893-94 was again exceptional. The closure of the mints on the 26th June 1893 disorganised the exchange between the rupee and the dollar, and, in consequence, dislocated the trade between India and the silver-standard countries of Eastern Asia. In opium and in cotton yarns and cloth there was a heavy decline, which was hardly counteracted by the increase in most of the other great staples of trade. The price of rice and wheat in Europe also fell to the lowest point on record, and the exports of these and other food-stuffs remained at a low level. The net outcome was that the trade of the year was only fractionally larger than in 1892-93.

In 1894-95 there was a general and very satisfactory revival of trade in most of the important articles of trade; but this recovery was counteracted by a heavy decline in cotton and oilseeds, and such is the prominence of these two classes of goods in the Indian export trade that the aggregate result of the year's trade was but 1·7 per cent. in excess of that of 1893-94. In the case of both cotton and seeds the decline was due to a combination of insufficient supplies due to bad crops in India and stagnant demand, with low prices, in Europe.

In the following list the principal articles in the trade and their values for the last five years are shown (in Rx.) :—

The greatest part of the decline in the export of seeds was, it should be remembered, due to the restriction within normal limits of the trade in rapeseed, for which a most exceptional demand had existed in the preceding year owing to the failure of the European colza harvest. The decline in the export of sugar also followed a most unusually large export in 1893-94, which was due to speculative transactions.

On the woole, considering that there was a decline in only two articles of the first importance; that in one of these the decline was mainly a return to normal limits after an abnormal year; that the same remark may be made of another of the five articles in which a decrease is shown; that in provisions the trade is relatively unimportant and the decline was small; that Indian silk is an article subject to great vicissitudes and that there is but a stagnant demand for it in ordinary times; and that our trade has had to contend with the existence of deep depression in Europe, America, and the Australian Colonies, as well as a continuous fall throughout 1894 in the prices of almost all commodities; it is not too much to suggest that the results may be regarded without dissatisfaction.

The following is a statement of the prices of the principal articles of Indian export, the prices in 1873 being taken to represent 100 :—

The run of high prices has continued now for three consecutive years. The world is so largely dependent on Brazil for its supply now that Ceylon has given up coffee, and the conditions in that country are so uncertain that speculative influences have been in successful operation for a considerable time past. The range of high prices has not, however, been effectual in increasing the supply from India materially, for coffee planting has been beset with difficulty and disappointment, and the area under the plant continues to be very restricted. In Travancore, following the example of Ceylon, coffee has been largely abandoned in favour of tea, and in British India, according to the agricultural returns, the area has substantially diminished during the last four or five years.

The condition of the rice trade in 1893-94 was particularly bad, but there is a very great improvement to record in 1894-95, the total exports of the year being larger than they had ever been except in 1890-91. The combination of the millers in Burma to keep prices down, to which reference was made in the review of the trade of 1893-94, continued to the end of the calendar year, but gave way when the new rice came to market in January 1895, under the influence of better markets in Europe and elsewhere outside Indian limits. There was consequently a very large shipment of rice during the first three months of 1895, the quantity available for supply being increased both by a very good harvest and by a reduced demand for Burma rice in India. The shipments of rice from Burma to India in 1893-94 reached the unprecedented figure of seven million cwt.; in 1894-95, though the quantity was very large compared with previous years, it was much less than in 1893-94, being under 5,400,000 cwt. From Bengal also a good harvest permitted the export of a greatly increased quantity, though it is becoming clearer each year that the Bengal surplus of rice for export to foreign countries is not augmenting, and that, on the contrary, Bengal has to import from Burma a certain, though still comparatively small, quantity to fill the deficiency of rice of the commoner kinds.

The considerable increase in the exports from Bombay consisted to some extent of Burma rice sent thither and exported thence to foreign countries.

The extent to which Indian rice is subject to competition with rice from Saigon and Bangkok will be apparent from the subjoined figures of the exports from those ports in the last six years:—

	To Europe.	To China.	To Straits.	To Other Countries.	Total.
	Tons.	Tons.	Tons.	Tons.	Tons.
1889 - - - - -	90,446	278,110	153,814	60,667	583,037
1890 - - - - -	111,435	602,641	142,973	131,435	988,484
1891 - - - - -	40,355	337,563	131,523	74,151	583,592
1892 - - - - -	209,850	299,532	202,789	50,957	763,128
1893 - - - - -	196,665	701,478	269,631	92,436	1,260,210
1894 - - - - -	149,431	507,857	249,108	126,522	1,032,918

These figures show that the competition is substantial, and it may be noted that Bangkok rice is now competing with Burma rice in Brazil as well as in China, the Straits, and Europe.

There is not so much vigour in the competition from Saigon, where last year the tax on rice-fields was increased by 10 per cent., and the export duty was also augmented; it now stands as follows:

On rice exported to France and the French Colonies - 17 centimes per 100 kilos.
 On rice exported to other countries (with a surtax of 5 centimes per 100 kilos on rice exported to ports other than those of Europe, Australia, and America) } 26 centimes per 100 kilos.

This table is retained here for the purpose of showing the inaccuracy of the general idea that the wheat trade has expanded enormously since its first commencement. The fact is that the commencement of the trade dates practically from the first year of the series in the table; and it will be seen that though the trade has been subject to great vicissitudes and has oscillated violently, the highest level attained in any year has been but little in excess of the level of 1881-82, while it has frequently been far below that level. There is one striking exception in the year 1891-92, an entirely abnormal year when the Russian wheat and rye crops failed, while the harvests generally in Continental Europe were extremely bad, and there was for some months a wild speculation in wheat with an extraordinary rise in prices. Leaving this year out of account, it will be observed from the table that during the series of 13 years the quantity of wheat exported was only three times in excess of the quantity exported in 1881-82, while in nine years out of the 13 it was much below that level. Since 1891-92 there has been a progressive decline in the exports in consequence of poor to average harvests in parts of India which raised prices here to a point that made shipment unprofitable, while on the other hand, with unusually abundant harvests of wheat, the United States presented such plenteous supplies to the world as to send prices down to what might be thought the lowest possible level if one did not constantly see that there were still lower depths of prices at which wheat would be grown and sold. The Argentine Republic too has rapidly come to the front as an exporter of wheat, 1,608,000 tons having been shipped from that country in 1894.* In the presence of such conditions the Indian export trade last year seemed to be

* The increase in the export of wheat from the Argentine Republic is remarkable. In a report by the Secretary of Her Majesty's Legation at Buenos Ayres, it is stated that this country, which as late as 1880 had imported wheat, had actually in 1893 taken rank as the third most important exporter of wheat in the world. The exports are stated thus:—

	Tons.
1889	22,806
1891	395,000
1892	470,000
1893	1,008,000
1894	1,608,000
1895 (three months)	371,708

And he says "no other country in the world can produce a quarter of wheat more cheaply."

approaching the vanishing point. But abundant supplies and unprofitable prices do not permanently prevail in the wheat market more than in any other market. Since the close of the year there has been renewed activity in the trade, and the prospects for the remainder of the year are encouraging, for the wheat supply of the world is estimated on good authority to be distinctly defective compared with the last two years.

The exports of wheat from Calcutta fell so heavily that the trade was quite insignificant. That there will be a material recovery from this great fall is certain, but it is equally certain that Calcutta will never again take such a prominent position in the shipment of wheat as in the early days of the trade. The great sources of the supply of wheat for export lie in the fields of North-Western and Central India, and the greatest part of the grain, so far as it is intended for export, must find its way to Karáchi and Bombay. Last year quite five-sixths of the whole trade was done at Karáchi.

The principal destinations of Indian wheat in the last three years were as follows (cwt., 000's omitted) :—

	1891-92.	1892-93.	1893-94.	1894-95.
To the United Kingdom - - -	12,345	7,413	6,093	4,768

" Italy - - - - -	1,062	689	409	3
" Germany - - - - -	663	902	38	216
" Holland - - - - -	523	386	356	242

The quantity shipped to these countries amounted to 98 per cent. of the whole exports of the year. Less than half of the exports of Indian rice is consumed in Europe, but the case is different with Indian wheat, of which only a trifling fraction is consumed elsewhere than in Europe, mainly in the United Kingdom.

Wheat-flour.—With the decline in the exports of wheat the trade in wheat-flour also declined, but in this article the fall was comparatively slight, and the trade may be regarded as having reached a satisfactory stage of development, though there is a prospect of much greater development yet :—

	Lbs. (000's omitted)		Lbs. (000's omitted)
1887-88 - - -	36,082	1891-92 - - -	61,028

1890-91 - - -	47,036	1894-95 - - -	65,916

The quantity exported to the United Kingdom increased from 421,000 lbs. to 698,000 lbs., and 335,000 lbs. were sent to Belgium. These, it may be anticipated, are but the small beginnings of a large trade in the future with Europe. With cheap Indian labour it ought to be possible for India to compete not unsuccessfully with European and American millers. This is in the future, however; for the present the bulk of the trade is carried on with Mauritius, Aden, Arabia, Ceylon, the East African Coast, and Egypt.

Jawár and Bájra and Pulse.—The trade in the millets was a little better than in 1893-94, but still rather beneath par. The exports of pulse were very low, but during the last five years there has been a curious rise and fall in this trade in alternate years :—

	Jawár and Bájra.	Pulse.
	Cwt.	Cwt.
1890-91	1,095,952	301,035
1891-92	1,572,882	785,709
1892-93	920,366	435,993
1893-94	752,745	850,635
1894-95	814,269	440,025

Provisions.—This trade represented a value of Rx. 484,786, exclusive of the value of wheat-flour (Rx. 368,368), which has been treated in a preceding paragraph. The trade is expanding, though slowly; the principal items are ghi, dried fish (salted and unsalted), fruits and vegetables, and fishmaws and sharkfins. A large proportion of the trade represents articles consumed by natives of India in the neighbouring countries, such as Ceylon, the Straits, Aden and Arabia, Mauritius and Zanzibar. The trade, therefore, is hardly likely to expand very rapidly.

Salt.—A new trade seems to be in course of development in the export of salt from Madras to the Straits Settlements. It began with an export of 514 tons in 1888-89, and then ceased for three years, after which it recommenced with an export of 478 tons in 1892-93, followed by 1,175 tons in 1893-94, and last year the quantity exported amounted to 10,032 tons. It is not easy to say whether the trade will continue, and in any case it does not promise to be of commercial importance.

Spices.—These consist mainly of ginger, pepper, and chillies (capsicum). The export of ginger has been increasing during the last three years and last year the trade was relatively large, amounting in quantity to about $10\frac{1}{4}$ million lbs., value Rx. 248,000. This trade is largely carried on with the United Kingdom, unlike the trade in pepper, of which a large proportion is sent to the Continent, very little being shipped to the United Kingdom. Apart from the Continent the principal consumption of Indian pepper is in East Africa, Arabia, Aden, Persia, and Turkey. The trade has been falling off during the last two years. The trade in chillies is, to the extent of at least seven-eighths, with Ceylon and the Straits.

Sugar.—The subjoined figures show the trade in the last ten years:—

—	Refined.	Raw.	—	Refined.	Raw.
	Cwt.	Cwt.		Cwt.	Cwt.
1885-86 - - -	24,942	1,142,596	1890-91 - - -	28,768	795,973

1889-90 - - -	111,323	1,309,321	1894-95 - - -	60,179	958,107

The increase in the exports of refined sugar in 1893-94 was due, as stated at the time, to a more or less speculative and temporary business. The export of unrefined sugar has also fallen away to what may unfortunately be regarded as normal dimensions.

Tea.—The exports of the last ten years are given below:—

—	Lbs. (000's omitted.)	Rx.	—	Lbs. (000's omitted.)	Rx.
	1885-86	68,784		4,306,133	1890-91

1889-90	103,760	5,277,650	1894-95	129,099	7,555,745

In 1894-95 the quantity exported greatly increased and the prices obtained were higher even than in 1892-93, which was an unusually good year. The prophecies of the planters that the closure of the mints would be the signal for the ruin of their business have happily not been fulfilled, nor are they likely to be fulfilled. The average prices realised at the auction sales in Calcutta during the last six years were as follow, in annas and pie per pound:—

The exports are in lbs. (000's omitted):—

The United Kingdom continues to be the great market for Indian tea, as much as 92 per cent. of the exports of the year having been shipped thither. Of the small quantity not shipped to the United Kingdom Australia takes a considerable but unfortunately not an increasing share: Indian tea seems to make no headway in the colonies in competition with China and Ceylon tea. Persia during the last four years has been taking larger quantities. As regards the trade with Persia Her Majesty's Consul at Bushire writes in his report for 1894: "There has been a strong demand throughout the year for Indian and Batavian teas, which seem to be steadily supplanting the China teas in favour with the Persian consumer. Heavy consignments, chiefly from India, were received by native merchants who found no difficulty in disposing of them at a good profit. It was, however, at the port of Bandar-Abbas that this trade received its most vigorous impulse, the import being more than double that of the previous year."

Some of the tea at any rate imported into Bandar-Abbas was destined for consumption in Russian Asiatic territory, and it seems probable that the effect of recent fiscal arrangements of the Russians will divert the transit trade to Batoum and the Trans-Caspian Railway.

A new feature in the trade of the year is the largely increased export to Asiatic Turkey, and it is to be hoped that the exports to this country may become larger. Exports to the United States and Canada have also developed very greatly, though the aggregate is still relatively trifling.

A good deal has been said in trade reports from China of the gratifying revival in the tea trade which marked 1894, and it seems that the quantity exported was slightly larger than it had been in the preceding year. China tea, however, has not succeeded in competing with Indian tea in that great market, the United Kingdom, which takes more than nine-tenths of our tea and nearly as much of Ceylon tea. The following are the imports from India, Ceylon, and China into England in the last eleven years (quantity stated in lbs., 000's omitted):

	From India.	From Ceylon.	From China.		From India.	From Ceylon.	From China.
1884	63,208	2,211	143,771	1890	101,771	42,491	73,743
1885	64,382	4,242	139,673	1891	109,638	61,900	62,284
1886	73,467	7,144	145,308	1892	111,711	66,042	57,051
1887	84,645	13,062	119,799	1893	115,023	72,631	56,209
1888	89,874	22,509	105,735	1894	118,380	76,311	43,763
1889	95,384	32,673	88,558

Steadily and surely, year by year since 1886, the importation of China tea into England has fallen and that of Indian tea has increased, until last year close on three pounds of Indian tea were imported for every one pound of China. This latter tea still retains its hold of the Australian and American markets, where quality in tea is hardly yet appreciated except by a select few, and where Indian tea consequently has not been able to find its way in considerable quantity.

Even the closing of the mints seems to have had no effect at all in stimulating the competition of the Chinese in the market for our tea, though it was freely prophesied that that measure would blast and ruin the Indian industry and restore Chinese ascendancy.

Calcutta is now, and always will be, the great centre whence Indian tea is exported; but, in consequence of the increasing demand from Persia and Asiatic Turkey, the exports from Bombay and Karáchi are increasing. The distribution last year was as follows:—

	Lbs.
Bengal	123,000,733
Bombay	2,828,746
Sindh	1,067,359
Madras	2,149,006
Burma	53,472
Total	129,099,316

To the quantity of tea given above as exported from British India should be added about 780,000 lbs. exported from Travancore and Cochin.

The present dimensions of the competition of Ceylon with India will be apparent from the subjoined figures for the years 1893 and 1894:

	1893.	1894.
Total exports	Lbs. 84,406,064	Lbs. 84,591,714
Of which exported—
To United Kingdom	75,500,077	75,348,644
To Australia	6,968,956	7,446,782
To India	964,104	874,205

A new competitor for India has now arisen in Natal, where, as in India, and especially in Ceylon, coffee has given way to tea, of which about 600,000 lbs. were produced last year.

Chemicals, Drugs, Dyes.

Saltpetre is the only chemical product of any importance exported from India, the trade in borax having dwindled to insignificance in face of the competition of Italy and the United States. Saltpetre also has to contend against such keen competition that it can make practically no headway, the trade having for a great many years fluctuated within certain well-marked limits. In the last five years the trade has been as follows:—

	Cwt.	Rx.
1890-91	399,690	380,059
1891-92	389,185	365,618
1892-93	443,931	438,940
1893-94	321,933	338,102
1894-95	352,985	411,365

With the gradual supersession of that form of gunpowder in which saltpetre is an essential ingredient by explosives made of other substances, and with the increasing use of frozen and chilled meats in supersession of preserved meats, the uses of saltpetre are gradually narrowing, and it is unlikely that we shall ever see a large expansion of our trade unless indeed some entirely new and extensive use for saltpetre is discovered. What is more probable, perhaps, is the slow reduction of the trade in the not very remote future to the quantity which the Chinese will continue to take for the manufacture of fireworks. In that case this industry will be added to the list of the old industries in which India was once pre-eminent, which have stagnated and then decayed.

Chinchona bark is the only separate item of importance in the group "Drugs and Medicines," and this article has rapidly lost a great measure of its importance in recent years owing to the competition of other countries having so lowered the price of the drug, which planters once thought would be the source of untold wealth, as to make it what is commonly called "a drug in the market." The exports in the last five years have been:—

	Lbs.	Rx.
1890-91	2,995,845	133,780
1891-92	2,693,859	97,936

1893-94	1,665,647	46,220
1894-95	1,737,318	43,571

The exports would have been even smaller during the last two or three years if their volume had not been kept up by the bark sent for sale from estates whose owners got rid of their trees, root and branch, finding chinchona bark not worth the expense of cultivation. But though the bark has ceased to justify the expectations once formed of it as an article of export, and India will probably, under ordinary circumstances, never be a large exporter of the article, the cultivation of the tree by the Government has had a most useful effect in supplying large quantities of febrifugal alkaloids and the sulphate of quinine to the fever-stricken population of malarious regions in India.

Opium.—The exports are :—

Cochin-China	480	880	2,170	2,850	1,400

Prices took a quick upward turn last year, the result of speculative action arising out of the war between China and Japan and the continued deficiency in the yield of the opium fields of Northern India, with the consequent exhaustion of the reserve stocks available for sale for export.

Tobacco, unmanufactured, of which the bulk is exported to Aden for consumption there and on the neighbouring Arabian and African coasts, shews some indications of being a trade likely to increase; but the increase in the export of cigars is quite marked: in these the trade has been as follows in the last five years :—

—	Lbs.	Rx.
1890-91	410,615	40,352
1891-92	457,887	42,672
1892-93	517,970	43,096
1893-94	519,197	50,629
1894-95	593,539	60,804

There has thus been a steady increase year by year in the exports, which are mainly from Madras (426,522 lbs. last year), the bulk of the remainder being from Burma. It is satisfactory to note that as much as 177,092 lbs. were shipped to the United Kingdom, where, by the way, the tobacconists charge the same price for Madras cigars that they charge for Manilas, which, in India, cost from 25 to 50 per cent. more than Madras cigars. This is the effect of the British import duty which is levied on weight, and the Madras cigar is heavier than a Manila of equal bulk.

Cutch.—This trade has not, as figures go, a flourishing aspect, the exports being :—

—	Cwt.	Rx.
1890-91	156,493	236,355
1891-92	197,059	317,296

1893-94	187,115	337,890
1894-95	155,032	292,136

The limitation of the trade is, however, ascribed by the Chief Collector of Customs in Burma, whence the bulk of the article is exported, not to absence of demand, but to absence of supplies, due to "the Government having further limited the issue of licences in some of the cutch-producing districts, and to the period allowed for cutch-boiling having been reduced from six to four months; also to the extension of forest reserves." The demand from outside markets, he says, was fairly good.

Indigo.—The exports of the last ten years were as follow :—

—	Cwt.	Rx.	—	Cwt.	Rx.
1885-86	132,495	3,783,160	1890-91	118,425	3,073,125
1886-87	135,396	3,691,677	1891-92	125,327	3,214,076
1887-88	139,644	3,890,649	1892-93	126,703	4,141,179
1888-89	142,447	3,948,594	1893-94	131,399	4,182,128
1889-90	157,116	3,863,084	1894-95	166,308	4,745,915

Last year's exports were the largest known for a considerable period, the yield of this precarious and uncertain crop in Bengal having been quite unusually abundant. From Madras, too, the exports increased, and the year was a good one generally for the cultivators of the dye both in Northern and Southern India, though prices were not up to the level of the two preceding years, the abundance of the yield more than compensating for the fall in price. The article is one of those for which the demand is assured but limited: a good yield is ordinarily accompanied by a fall in price, and a deficient harvest brings about a rise in price, but neither price nor demand rises above a certain point, indigo substitutes being then employed in preference. The exports from Bengal and Madras respectively have been as follows in the last six years :—

—	Bengal.	Madras.
1889-90	91,835	53,889
1890-91	69,819	40,696
1891-92	98,075	19,718
1892-93	61,637	47,116
1893-94	76,398	42,751
1894-95	106,830	44,974

Myrabolams.—In the export of this article, which is a tanning as much as a dyeing material, there was an appreciable increase in the year, due probably to some speculative movement :—

—	Cwt.	Rx.
1890-91	655,195	300,714
1891-92	790,802	393,690
1892-93	667,549	336,709
1893-94	830,529	415,048
1894-95	1,123,113	464,976

Myrabolams are collected chiefly in the forests of the Central Provinces, and the export centre for the trade is Bombay, whence nine-tenths of the total quantity are shipped to the United Kingdom and the Continent.

The other exported dyes are of no importance, Turmeric alone being shipped in any appreciable quantity. It would, however, be almost as correct to class this article under Provisions as under Dyeing Materials, for its largest use in India is as a curry-stuff, and that is also the use to which are put more than half the exports.

Oils.

The trade consists in the main of the export of castor oil and cocoanut oil. The former is largely a Bengal product, exported to the United Kingdom, Australia, the Straits, Hong Kong, Mauritius, and the Cape, its principal use being as a lubricant. Cocoanut oil is mainly a Madras product, exported chiefly to the United Kingdom and the European continent, its principal use being in the manufacture of soap and the preparation of perfumed toilet oils. To these two we may add in very much smaller quantity some other vegetable oils, namely, (1) essential oils of sorts used for perfumery; (2) linseed oil, used for painting; (3) mustard and earthnut oil, used mainly in cookery; (4) til or jinjili, used for soap-making and also as a substitute for or adulterant of olive oil; and, finally, paraffin wax, exported for candle-making.

Last year there was an abnormally large increase in the export of cocoanut oil from Madras, the result of a sudden and large demand from the United States and also from the Continent, arising out of a scarcity of supply of the other oils which enter into the manufacture of soap.

The total exports of all kinds of oil have been as follow :—

1890-91	-	Rx.	563,784	1893-94	-	Rx.	535,881
1891-92	-		604,046	1849-95	-		775,016
1892-93	-		633,626

The increased trade value of the year amounts to Rx. 239,135, and of this as much as Rx. 183,083 is the increase in the value of cocoanut oil. This trade is still further increasing in the present year; but it has always been of a fluctuating and uncertain character, and it is not unlikely that a relapse will present itself before long.

The exports of paraffin wax, though not so large as in 1893-94, continue on a satisfactory scale. The trade necessarily depends on the quantity of petroleum, of which it is a by-product, passed through the Rangoon refinery :—

Coal.—There was but little of an increase in trade last year: but the future of the trade may be regarded as assured unless coal is discovered and worked in Ceylon or the Straits. In that case Indian coal will continue, as at present, to be burnt chiefly in India. The exports are—

Cotton.—The exports of the last 14 years have been as follow (in cwt., 000's omitted):—

The quantity of Indian cotton taken by the United Kingdom grows smaller and smaller from year to year. As recently as 1887-88 the proportion of the whole exports sent to the United Kingdom was still as much as 40 per cent., even though the Suez Canal had long been operating to bring the continental markets into direct relations with India. Since then the proportion has been gradually reduced from year to year, until last year it was less than 10 per cent. Even of this small proportion more than half is reshipped from England to the Continent, so that in fact not 5 per cent. of our exported cotton is now consumed in the United Kingdom. Indian cotton finds its largest market on the European continent, where it is used for the spinning of the stout yarns employed in weaving the clothing of the artisan and the peasant, and in Japan, where it is being spun in the mills there in substitution for the Indian-spun yarn with which until recently we supplied Japan. China has also ceased to take Indian cotton in any quantity, the local spinning of yarn by the people in their homes having given place to the importation of yarn spun in the Bombay mills.

The year was a very unsatisfactory one for exporters. The quantity of cotton available for export was extremely small, owing to the smallness of the crop, combined with the increase in the consumption of the mills, and prices ranged generally above the level of the prices in the European markets. The conditions of the trade are stated with great clearness and precision in the circulars of Messrs. Lyon and Company, of Bombay, for which I am indebted to the courtesy of Mr. A. F. Beaufort of that firm, whose painstaking accuracy is well known. From these circulars I make the extracts subjoined:—

Khandesh.—The supply of 241,000 bales fell short of the returns of the previous season by 50,000 bales; were smaller than the receipts of the previous one by 5,000 bales, of the average of the two preceding exceptionally large ones by 114,000 bales and 20,600 bales or 7·8 per cent. under the mean of the decade.

Barsi and Ahmadnagar.—A short yield was looked for in this presidency, but in the absence of detailed returns from the Nizam's territory, little reliance can be placed on estimates regarding a crop which is practically entirely grown in a Native State. But 56,000 bales in all were received; 50,000 less than in the previous season; 54,000 less than in the preceding one; 105,000 less than the mean of the four seasons 1888-89 to 1891-92; and 62,000 under the average of the decade.

Berar.—215,000 bales in all came in, being 60,000 bales under the receipts of the previous twelve months; 40,000 less than in the one before; no less than 182,000 smaller than in the four seasons 1888-89 to 1891-92; and 96,000 bales less than the mean of the previous ten years.

The total supply of Oomra growths, 512,000 bales, was the smallest for seven years. It was 160,000 bales less than in the previous season; 99,000 smaller than in the preceding one; as much as 372,000 less than the average of the four crops of 1888-89 to 1891-92; and 179,000 bales less than the decennial mean.

Hinghaghāt.—This crop, the produce of the Central Provinces, has practically ceased to be exported beyond its boundaries; the mills virtually take the whole of it now.

Dhollera.—In the final forecast of the local Government, the crop was placed at 453,000 bales or 9,000 bales more than in the preceding one but 135,000 under an average. The receipts in Bombay in the season came to 396,000 against 385,000 bales in the previous one or 11,000 more. They were 105,000 under those of 1892-93—an exceptionally large crop—but 12,000 bales above the mean of the decade.

Broach.—Only 105,000 bales in all reached Bombay; 26,000 under the previous small crop; 101,000 under the mean of the preceding four; and 55,000 bales, or 39 per cent. less than the average of the decade.

Coompta and Dharwar.—The actual receipts at Bombay in the past season, 207,000 bales, were even larger than in the preceding one (200,000 bales); exceeded the mean of the preceding seven years by 65,000 bales; and passed the average of the decade by 73,000 bales.

Westerns.—25,000 bales reached this port, or 16,000 bales less than in the previous season, but only 2,000 bales less than an average supply.

Bengals.—The total receipts last season of 235,000 bales were 23,000 less than in the previous one; 34,000 more than in the preceding one, but 25,000 bales under the mean of the decade.

Sind.—The decrease in the estimate of yield has been proved nearly correct by less coming to Bombay, but more has evidently been exported direct to Europe from Karachi. Total receipts 34,000 bales against 59,000 in the season before and an average of 37,000 bales.

Persian.—Less reached Bombay than in any recent season, only 6,000 bales being received, as compared with 11,000 in the season before, and an average in the decade of 19,000 bales.

Other growths.—Nearly 18,000 bales were received, as compared with over 8,000 bales the season before and a mean in the decade of 3,400 bales. The bulk of the receipts were Egyptians, in which an increasing trade is being done, 15,779 bales of 392 lbs. (equal to 8,836 bales of 700 lbs. each), having been imported in the twelve months; also 421 bales (392 lbs.), equal to 330 bales of 500 lbs. of Americans, as compared with—in Bombay bales of 392 lbs.—6,202 and 5,703 bales of Egyptians in 1893-94 and 1892-93, and 181 and 339 bales of Americans respectively. Zanzibar sent 449 bales as against 1,772 bales in the previous season; Rangoon 12 against 358; Liverpool returned 209 bales of Bombay cotton and other places 12 against 37 bales.

* Estimated for Bombay Island mills.

We have to go back five-and-thirty years to 1859-60 to find a season in which the exports to Europe from Bombay did not exceed 600,000 bales. Last season they only reached 526,000 bales, but whereas in the former one 551,000 bales or 97·5 per cent. were despatched to the United Kingdom and only 14,000 (565,000 in all) to the Continent, in the latter only 28,000 went to Great Britain and 498,000 bales or 94·6 per cent. to the rest of Europe. The supply to Europe fell off, as compared with the previous season, by 383,000 bales or 42 per cent.; it was 399,000 bales or 43 per cent. less than the mean—925,000—of the previous four seasons, and 505,000 bales or 49 per cent. smaller than the decennial average. Bearing in mind that the local prices of Bombay staples have ruled, practically throughout the season, at above the relative value of Americans, it is scarcely surprising to find that less has gone to the Far East, virtually all to Japan; but the falling off was only 13,000 bales or 12 per cent. China takes little now from India, but the trade with Japan is pretty certain to continue to expand. Calcutta and the Coast ports received 12,000 bales or 33 per cent. more than in the previous year and 10,000 more than the mean of the decade. As a matter of fact the increase was much greater, as a good deal of cotton now goes by the Bengal-Nagpur line direct to the Calcutta mills by rail from Berar and the Central Provinces, which previously went by sea from Bombay. Apart from Europe 143,000 bales were sent away last season from this port, 1,000 less than in the previous one, but 46,000 or 47·5 per cent. more than the average of the preceding ten years. The total exports from Bombay to all ports last season were but 669,000 bales, the smallest aggregate since 1858-59—six-and-thirty years ago. They were 384,000 bales or 36·5 per cent. less than in the previous season, 891,000 bales or 57·1 per cent. smaller than in 1889-90, in which season the receipts at this port were nearly two and a quarter million bales as compared with rather less than one and a half million bales in the past one and 459,000 bales, or 40·7 per cent. less than the average aggregate exports in the preceding ten years. While the exports fell off last season, as compared with the previous one and with the mean of the decade, by 36·5 and 40·7 per cent. respectively, the actual supply of cotton available at Bombay last season showed a diminution as compared with each of these periods, of but 13 and 10·4 per cent. respectively. The difference was accounted for by the increased consumption of the Bombay island mills. What they actually consumed last season will not be known for another six weeks, but we place it at 825,000 bales—an increase on the previous one of 94,000 bales, or 12·8 per cent., on the mean of the preceding four of 88,000, or nearly 12 per cent., and on the average of the decade by 236,000 bales or just over 40 per cent. We place our estimate of consumption at this high level after very careful enquiries. It must be borne in mind that during the previous three seasons the trade was in a very depressed condition owing to the China markets being overweighted with Bombay yarns, causing short time to be largely resorted to, while just two years ago the currency policy of the Government of India closed the mints, causing an immediate serious decline in exchange between Bombay and the Far East and a complete disorganisation of the trade. The shipments of yarn to China and Japan, which in the calendar year 1892 had risen to over 407,000 bales (400 lbs.), promptly fell in the following one to under 312,000 bales, a decrease of 95,000 bales or over 23 per cent.; but last year there was a recovery to 349,000 bales, an increase on 1893 of 37,000 bales or 11·8 per cent. They were, however, still considerably under the returns of 1890 and the following year. The present condition is a very healthy one in so far as the majority of the Bombay mills have sold their production well on towards the end of the year at remunerative rates which will keep them going on full time till certainly well on to Christmas. Whether the anticipations of the immediate future increased requirements of the inhabitants of the Celestial Empire will be borne out is a matter of more serious moment to the Jewish and native speculators who have assisted to place the local mills, by their free purchases, in their present satisfactory condition. Assuming that our estimate of consumption be borne out, the actual quantity of cotton disposed of last season in Bombay was 1,494,000 bales (of 392 lbs.), a decrease of 290,000 bales, or over 15 per cent., on the previous season; of 223,000 bales, or 12·8 per cent., on the mean of the preceding ten years; and of 702,000 bales, or nearly 32 per cent., below the returns of the record season and crop of 1889-90.

Exports from India for the year ending 30th June.—The aggregate clearances, measured in bales, to Europe, from the six cotton ports in the past season were under 768,000 bales, a decrease on the previous one of 461,000 bales or 37·5 per cent., and on the average of the three preceding ones of 398,000 bales or 34·1 per cent. As compared with the exceptionally large shipments of 1889-90, they were smaller by no less than 1,102,000 bales or nearly 60 per cent.; in fact, we have to go back six-and-thirty years to find a similar small export. But whereas in that season the total exports and mill consumption combined did not reach 700,000 bales, in the past one they exceeded 2,250,000 bales.

Bombay's share of the export trade, usually about 80 per cent., fell last season to 68·4 per cent. Karachi maintained her position and for the second season in succession despatched over 75,000 bales—an exceptionally large quantity, equal to 9·8 per cent. of the entire trade. On the other hand, the supply from Calcutta fell off heavily, her share being only 6·8 per cent. Madras also had to deal with a smaller crop, and her ratio fell to 5·4, Cocoonada's to 2·2, but Tuticorin, which did nearly as much as in the previous season, rose to 7·4 per cent. Just 80 per cent. of the total clearances were made in the last six months of the season.

Compared with the previous season the exports in the past one to Great Britain fell 53,400 bales or 38·2 per cent., and to the Continent of Europe 407,600 bales or 37·4 per cent. ; total, as remarked above, 461,000 bales or 37·5 per cent. The despatches to United Kingdom of only 86,000 bales were the smallest since the early days of the present century. But five years ago India sent to the mother country over half a million bales annually, but now England's requirements of Surats are less than those of Japan, and it appears as if in a few years she would cease to take any. As a matter of fact the increased requirements of the Bombay island mills alone in the past twelve months were larger than the total requirements of Indian cotton by England in the same period. The relative proportion of the despatches by each of the ports to United Kingdom and to the Continent last season are as under :—

	To United Kingdom.	To Continent.
	Per Cent.	Per Cent.
Bombay - - - - -	5·3	94·7
Karachi - - - - -	1·9	98·1
Calcutta - - - - -	13·1	86·9
Madras - - - - -	46·2	53·8
Cocoonada - - - - -	37·6	62·4
Tuticorin - - - - -	42·9	57·1

It will be seen that the proportion exported to Great Britain from the three Madras ports is still a larger one, due no doubt to the absence of the same freight facilities as can be secured in Bombay and Calcutta, for the trade is undoubtedly only a depôt one, little of these staples being actually consumed in England.

The quantity of cotton sent from India to Japan, China, Australia, Ceylon, and other foreign eastern ports in the past season compare as under with the three preceding ones :—

	1894-95.	1893-94.	1892-93.	1891-92.

The exports to these countries show an increase last season on the previous one of nearly 4,000 bales or 2½ per cent., and on the mean of the two preceding ones of 20,000 bales or over 13 per cent. Four seasons ago Japan took the largest quantity she has ever done, viz., 138,000 bales or 80 per cent. of the total shipments to foreign eastern countries; in the next one 10,000 bales less, but 91·7 per cent. of the aggregate; the following season a further falling off of 5,000 bales (95·8 per cent.) ; and last season 122,400 bales or 1,000 less, accounting for 92·3 per cent. of the exports eastwards.

Hong-Kong takes but little as compared with 50,000 to 60,000 bales a decade ago. Ceylon's only mill now takes a couple of thousands annually, while the bulk of the 850 to 900 bales sent to Australia consists of free cotton from Calcutta.

Prices of Bombay Cotton since 1872.

As enquiries constantly reach us regarding the course of rupee prices in Bombay, we have compiled the annexed table showing the average rates current in this market for the three leading growths during each of the past four-and-twenty seasons. We also attach the rates of freight quoted for cotton hence to Liverpool via Suez Canal and exchange for demand bank bills on London in the first weeks of January, April, and July in each year. An examination of the prices in quinquennial periods shows that the average rate in the first was Rs. 210, in the second Rs. 205, in the third Rs. 195, and in the fourth Rs. 215, while in the last four the mean was Rs. 195, the average for the entire series Rs. 204. In the same periods the value of Mid-Uplands in Liverpool averaged in the first 6½, in the second 6⅞, in the third 5⅞, in the fourth 5⅞, and in the last three 4⅞. We do not draw a comparison between the prices of "Fair" Dholleras in Liverpool in the past and present, because the "Fair" of the present day is a totally different grade to that of a quarter of a century ago, and the comparison therefore would be valueless. Freights, it will be noticed, have fallen from 55s. and 60s. to 15s. and 20s., and exchange from 1s. 11d. to 1s. 1d.

Columns 1 and 2 give the average annual prices per lb. of Mid-Uplands and Fair Dholleras in Liverpool and are taken from Mr. Ellison's circulars.

Column 3 gives the average price per candy of 784 lbs. of "Oomra," "Dhollera," and "Broach" cotton in Bombay during the first week of each month of the season, January to June.

Columns 4, 5, and 6 give the prices in Bombay in the first week of January, April, and July of average quality Dhollera cotton.

Columns 7, 8, and 9 quote the rates of freight per ton of 40 c. ft. ruling in the first week of the same three months for steam tonnage for cotton via Suez Canal.

Columns 10, 11, and 12 give the rates ruling in the same periods for demand bank bills on London.

Hides and Skins.—The exports of the last five years have been as follow:—

	Hides.		Skins.
	No.	Rx.	No.	Rx.
1890-91	6,803,566	1,695,401	5,377,855	465,154
1891-92	6,707,397	1,723,884	6,715,953	643,159
1892-93	6,739,740	1,761,469	8,477,905	876,703
1893-94	7,409,879	1,948,482	6,370,835	618,968
1894-95	8,050,886	2,088,918	7,674,551	790,658

The trade of the year was active, the supply being abundant and the demand well sustained. The prolonged rains of the south-west monsoon of 1894 are said to have been destructive to cattle and beneficial to the hide trade. The largest consumption of Indian hides is on the European continent, in Germany and Italy especially, the former country being much the largest customer for our hides. The smaller skins are taken chiefly to the United States, where there was a great revival of demand for them after the depression of the preceding year.

Jute.—The exports in the last 13 years were as follow (cwt., 000's omitted):—

What was said of this trade in the review of the trade of 1893-94 will bear repetition. It was said that the trade in raw jute

“is more speculative and uncertain than any other trade in the country. The crop is grown almost exclusively in a certain limited section of Bengal, and a good season or bad season therefore is the most material factor in the trade. With other crops, such as rice, wheat, and oilseeds, the area over which they are cultivated is so extensive that the effects of a deficient crop in one place are, to a material extent, not apparent in the general trade if there has been a fairly good season in other places where the product is cultivated. With jute the case is different, for a bad season or a good season means a good, bad, or indifferent supply, the whole crop being equally affected. The trade consequently from year to year presents the most changing appearance. The crop is relatively small and prices run up, or it is relatively large and prices run down, or—the conditions of the trade favouring all speculative combinations—an abundant supply may be coincident with high prices. The whole business is closely analogous to transactions in the stock and share market.”

In 1893 the outturn of the crop was relatively deficient, and while exports declined, prices were run up to an abnormal point. In 1894 the crop was singularly abundant, and the exports were the largest known, but prices fell materially.

The declared export values of the last eight years averaged—

The destination of the jute has been as follows (cwt., 000's omitted):—

Manures.—There was a very large increase in the exports of the year, and if the trade should continue on and above this level it must be regarded as one of some considerable importance. The exports, however, consist mainly of animal bones, and it is possible to connect the large export of hides and skins in the year with the increase in bones. Whether or not the trade should continue at the high level attained, the figures merit attention:—

	Tons.	Rx.
1890-91	62,698	339,404
1891-92	44,977	236,814
1892-93	48,616	250,642
1893-94	51,390	280,804
1894-95	79,728	478,557

The exports are mainly to the United Kingdom, Germany, and Belgium.

Rice-bran.—Like animal bones, this substance must be regarded as a waste material in the present conditions of the country. There is no demand for it here, but it is sought by other countries as a cattle-food, and is now a not inconsiderable article of export. It is evolved in the Burma rice-mills in the husking and cleaning of rice, and the price obtained for it is of material assistance in augmenting the profits of the industry. The quantity available for export depends on the quantity of rice passing through the mills. The exports are for the last four years, for which alone figures are available:—

—	Tons.	Rx.
1891-92	78,242	235,961
1892-93	64,783	232,525

The trade in the principal kinds of oil-seeds was as follows in the last seven years (cwt., 000's omitted):—

Though the exports of the year were much smaller than in 1893-94, which was a year of abnormal activity, the quantity shipped was larger than in any other year. In 1893-94 there was a quite extraordinary demand for rapeseed in consequence of an inferior colza crop in Europe, and the Indian rapeseed crop happened to have been unusually abundant, so that the demand was fully met. Last year the crop was not quite so good and the demand abated, but the exports were still unusually large. The value of the exports of 1893-94 was as much as 44 per cent. in excess of that of the preceding year; in 1894-95 the value was 15 per cent. less than in 1893-94. For linseed the demand in England was inactive and prices excessively low, owing to the great abundance of all kinds of cattle-food and to the competition of Argentine linseed.

Nearly 60 per cent. of the exports was shipped from Bombay and 11 per cent. from Karachi, so that the seed trade is a Western India trade to the extent of nearly three-fourths.

Silk.—Exports are as follow in lbs. (000's omitted):—

—	Reeled.	Chasam (Waste).	Cocoons.	Total Value in Rx.
1885-86	358	1,024	57	332,251
1886-87	449	1,021	114	484,339
1887-88	453	998	173	480,811
1888-89	433	1,314	374	518,751
1889-90	593	1,233	263	639,818
1890-91	503	1,112	146	521,069
1891-92	519	1,012	132	518,627
1892-93	655	1,087	77	617,574
1893-94	613	1,081	77	698,099
1894-95	511	794	26	502,009

The trade fell back, after profiting by an active demand in 1893-94, into its normal condition of stagnation. The year was not a good one for silk spinners and weavers, and stocks of the raw material accumulated with a heavy fall in prices to the lowest point on record. Manufacturers were hopeful for a better year in 1895, and the hope has so far been realised, with some indication of improvement in the position of Indian silk.

The trade in the silks of the undomesticated worms (tasar, munga, eria, &c.) has fallen off to a point which seems to indicate approaching extinction, less than 84,000 lbs. having been exported during the year. It is stated that this is due to such a fall in prices in the English market as to make trade impossible. Great pains have been taken for years in England, with complete success, to effect improvements in connection with the spinning, weaving, and dyeing of such silks, and this result is therefore disappointing.

Teak Timber.—Exports for the last 14 years:—

—	Cubic Tons.	Rx.	—	Cubic Tons.	Rx.
1881-82	56,377	506,792	1888-89	52,609	575,263
1882-83	59,187	611,260	1889-90	71,342	762,998
1883-84	46,471	525,447	1890-91	42,803	425,303
1884-85	47,556	532,129	1891-92	49,190	474,852
1885-86	50,076	550,515	1892-93	58,350	570,102
1896-87	23,946	223,154	1893-94	45,964	457,447
1887-88	40,446	367,274	1894-95	56,495	570,130

The exports of the year were larger than those of 1893-94, but it is stated that the business was not profitable in consequence of dropping prices. From Siam teak is exported in increasing quantity, equal now to about half the quantity exported from India. This competition, which is active in India as well as in Europe—for a good deal of Siamese timber is brought to Bombay—and the restrictions of forest conservancy, combine to prevent the teak trade from increasing.

Wool.—Exports in the last eight years:—

—	Lbs. (000's omitted.)	Rx.
1887-88	23,877	972,346
1888-89	21,961	968,753
1889-90	23,870	1,085,637
1890-91	21,345	968,322
1891-92	22,314	1,013,864
1892-93	24,718	1,116,578
1893-94	24,249	1,079,772
1894-95	31,150	1,376,850

The unusually large exports are ascribed to speculative business arising out of the conditions of exchange. It is improbable that the speculations were very profitable, for prices kept moving downward throughout the year until they reached a very low point.

Articles Manufactured and partly Manufactured.

The following figures indicate the relative proportions of each principal class of manufactures in the last five years:—

Cotton Yarn.—The exports of the last 10 years have been:—

—	Lbs. (000's omitted.)	Rx.	—	Lbs. (000's omitted.)	Rx.
1885-86	78,242	2,755,252	1890-91	169,275	6,543,364
1886-87	91,804	3,336,361	1891-92	161,253	5,771,033

1889-90	141,950	5,748,732	1894-95	158,854	5,672,024

The heavy decline in the trade in 1893-94 was due, firstly, to trade with China having been largely overdone, and, secondly, to the dislocation of the exchange between India and China caused by the closure of the mints. During the second half of 1892 and the early months of 1893 the exports to China had been excessive, the supplies on that market found no ready sale, and prices were dropping from week to week. Business became so unprofitable that it was agreed, after prolonged discussion, about the end of April 1893, that the mills should work for only three days in the week. This was still the position when the mints were closed, the suddenness of that event aggravating the trouble of the millowners. Gradually, however, better conditions presented themselves, and as early as the first month of 1894 the mills were working steadily and profitably. This position of affairs has since continued notwithstanding the operation of the war between China and Japan, and all well-managed mills in India are now in a sound position. The exports of yarn in the first five months of the present official year are about the same as the same period of 1894-95, and it may be observed that the mills are not now so exclusively directing their attention to the supply of the China market as they did before the closure of the mints, but are seeking and finding remunerative outlets for their yarns and cloths in India.

Cotton piece goods.—The exports of cotton piece-goods (grey, white, and coloured) in the same period of 10 years have been:—

—	Yards. (000's omitted.)	Rx.	—	Yards. (000's omitted.)	Rx.
1885-86	51,528	810,005	1890-91	67,639	1,040,414
1886-87	53,360	878,288	1891-92	73,351	1,132,182

1889-90	59,462	911,179	1894-95	85,247	1,360,007

The trade in woven fabrics suffered in 1893-94 neither so heavily nor so long from the depression of that year as the trade in spun yarns, and the recovery has been more complete, the trade of last year being absolutely and relatively very large. The trade in white (bleached) piece goods is quite unimportant, the bulk of the trade being in grey (unbleached) goods. These are goods of coarse texture and low value, but coloured goods (dyed, coloured, or printed) are taking a large place in the exports, their consumption in Ceylon and the Straits being considerable and increasing.

The distribution of the exports of yarns and piece goods in the last three years has been as follows:—

—	Yarn, Lbs. (000's omitted).			Piece Goods, Yards (000's omitted).

The preceding figures show that the exports of yarns have declined in a material degree in the trade with Japan. It may safely be said that this decline was certain to occur in view of the energy with which the Japanese have been building and extending cotton mills for the spinning of yarn required not only in Japan but in the neighbouring countries of Eastern Asia now supplied from the mills of Bombay and Lancashire. The Board of Trade Journal for last June says that in February 1895 there were 47 cotton-spinning establishments in Japan, the aggregate number of spindles at work being 492,979; in 1887 there were only 70,220 spindles. So far as the Japanese intrusion upon this trade is successful, it must necessarily be followed by an increasing demand from that country for Indian raw cotton. The decline in the trade would probably not have been so pronounced if it had not been, first, for the outbreak of plague in Hongkong and Canton, and later, the outbreak of war between China and Japan.

The following figures show the proportion of the different kinds of piece goods in the export trade (yards, 000's omitted):—

	1893-94.	1894-95.
Grey (unbleached)	57,761	68,385
White (bleached)	142	297
Coloured, printed, or dyed	14,812	16,565

The total value of the yarns exported amounted to Rx. 5,672,024, the exports from Bombay being represented by a value of Rx. 5,257,900, or nearly 93 per cent. of the whole.

The value of the cotton goods exported amounted to Rx. 1,476,656, the proportion shipped from Bombay being in this case much smaller than in the case of yarns, amounting to Rx. 919,956, or 62 per cent. Madras does a considerable trade in these goods (especially in dyed goods), the value of the trade of that province being Rx. 523,709, or about 35 per cent. of the whole.

The Bombay Millowners' Association in their report for 1894 write:—

“In their report for 1893 the then Committee had to record a very depressed state of trade from which recovery seemed likely to be slow and by no means immediate. It is gratifying to state, however, that notwithstanding the war in the Further East, there has been a decided improvement in the trade, and more especially since the end of last year a better feeling has been apparent all round, and it is believed that the majority of well-managed mills have been working to a fair profit. The improvement in the condition of the trade has not apparently been sufficiently marked to lead to the erection of new mills, only one mill having been added to the list of those in operation in all India during the year 1893. There has, however, been an increase of 73,819 spindles and 2,990 looms during the twelve months, showing that extensions and improvements have not been altogether at a standstill. The increase in the number of looms is noteworthy as showing a tendency to bestow greater attention to the requirements of the country itself, and therefore to place less dependence on the export trade in yarns.”

The progress of the spinning and weaving industry in the last five years is shown in the table appended:—

Year.	Number of Mills.	Number of Spindles.	Number of Looms.
1890-91	125	3,197,740	23,845
1891-92	127	3,268,524	24,670
1892-93	130	3,378,303	26,317
1893-94	137	3,534,581	29,392
1894-95	144	3,710,925	34,116

The mills are thus located:—

	Mills.	Spindles.	Looms.
Bombay Presidency	100	2,639,412	27,004

Nearly 140,000 persons are stated to have been employed in the mills at the end of 1894-95, and the capital invested is returned at over Rx. 12,000,000; but several of the mills, private concerns, make no return of their capital, the figures being confined to mills worked by joint stock companies.

The Bombay Presidency contains 71 per cent. of the spinning and 79 per cent. of the weaving capacity of the Indian mills. Out of the 100 mills in that province, 67 are located in the city and island of Bombay. These 100 mills employ an average of about 100,000 persons daily. The capital invested in them (that is, in those of them which are joint stock companies) is Rx. 8,502,000.

Jute.—The value of the exports of manufactured jute in the last 10 years has been :—

	Rx.		Rx.
1885-86	1,130,808	1890-91	2,481,961
1886-87	1,151,858	1891-92	2,513,100
1887-88	1,746,360	1892-93	3,237,993
1888-89	2,571,478	1893-94	3,441,787
1889-90	2,791,242	1894-95	4,210,834

The exports of gunny bags and cloths have been as follow, 000's omitted in both cases :—

	Bags.	Cloth.		Bags.	Cloth.
1885-86	63,760	20,154	1890-91	98,749	29,854
1886-87	64,570	12,799	1891-92	106,251	37,289

1888-89	99,791	15,161	1893-94	131,267	60,670
1889-90	97,416	37,144	1894-95	143,444	103,117

The destinations of the bags have been :—

	1892-93.	1893-94.	1894-95.
United Kingdom	21,746,768	21,373,644	27,950,803
United States	19,213,800	24,538,500	25,881,800
Australia	23,826,306	20,097,685	27,958,900
China	12,328,050	9,375,750	6,655,850
Straits	15,796,764	19,943,340	15,623,065
South America	8,228,950	9,638,775	12,053,650
Egypt	4,958,520	6,652,450	4,495,300
Other countries	17,875,828	19,646,683	22,824,952

The trade has progressed by great strides year by year since 1889, and the large increase last year has been a great encouragement to the mills, which have done a very profitable business, worked full time, and given good dividends, with the result of a general rise in the value of their shares, and extensions of spinning and weaving power, as the appended figures relating to the mills in Bengal show :—

	1891-92.	1892-93.	1893-94.	1894-95.
No. of mills	25	25	26	26
No. of looms	8,543	8,814	9,417	9,635
No. of spindles	171,134	177,718	189,080	192,750
No. of persons employed—daily average	65,001	66,013	67,931	72,182
Nominal capital (figures incomplete) Rx.	3,104,500	3,409,950	3,444,930	3,696,225

Besides these mills there are two others, one at Cawnpore and one at Vizagapatam, also employed in the manufacture of gunnies according to the returns, but the Vizagapatam mill uses the fibre of Indian hemp, not jute.

The large exports of bags to the United Kingdom would seem to indicate that the time is approaching when Dundee will find it necessary to retire from competition with Calcutta in that line of jute manufacture. There are other lines, however, in which the manufacture of that article can be carried on by Dundee without fear of effective competition from Calcutta, and perhaps those who anticipate the extinction of the manufacturing industry in Dundee as a result of Calcutta competition in the supply of gunny bags will find reason to believe that they have been rash.

To some extent the exports to the United States represented a diversion of trade, the route to the States via Hong Kong, which has hitherto been largely employed, having been superseded temporarily, in consequence probably of the hostilities in the China seas, in favour of direct trade. The decline in the exports to the Straits, which are to some extent intended for China, may also be set down to the war.

Noticeable as is the increase in the export of bags, that of jute cloth is even more remarkable. In five years it has risen from less than 30 million yards to over 103 million yards, value Rx. 985,032. About four-fifths of this cloth is shipped to the United States. The distribution of this increasingly important trade last year was :—

	Yards.
United States - - -	80,247,694
United Kingdom - - -	15,693,708
China - - -	3,087,550
Australia - - -	736,270
Other countries - - -	3,351,505

Silk Manufactures.—In 1893-94 the exports were larger than they had been since 1890-91, the increase in the year corresponding to the increase in the exports of raw silk. In 1894-95 with a decline in the exports of raw silk there was a decline in the exports of silk goods to a point lower than has been touched for years. This trade, in fact, and the trade in raw silk, have for years been in a decadent condition. The exports of both the unmanufactured and of the manufactured article are unable to rise beyond a certain point, and any revival of activity is invariably found to be of a temporary nature, the trade speedily relapsing into its ordinary stagnation. At the same time, the silk-weaving industry in the mills established in Bombay and Calcutta, though not large, is active and vigorous, but the manufactures of these mills find their markets in India. The value of the exports of manufactured silk last year was only Rx. 167,198.

Woollen Manufactures.—In these the trade increased in 1893-94 from Rx. 120,080 to Rx. 146,662, and last year there was a further small increase to Rx. 151,342. Until last year the only classes of these manufactures that were specified in the returns were piece goods and shawls. Arrangements were made from the beginning of the year to specify also carpets and rugs, which, it seems, formed the great bulk of the unspecified other sorts. This item of carpets and rugs is in fact much the most important in the trade, as is apparent from the following figures of the value of the trade in 1894-95 :—

	Rx.
Carpets and rugs - - -	115,634
Piece goods - - -	1,335
Shawls - - -	24,562
Other sorts - - -	9,811

These figures show that almost all the exports consist of the finer productions of the hand-loom, what may be described as art fabrics,—namely, carpets and shawls. The productions of the power-looms of the mills do not as yet find a market outside India. To the extent of Rx. 92,535 the carpets were shipped to England, while of the shawls the bulk were sent to Persia, Egypt, Arabia, and Asiatic Turkey.

Coir.—The trade of last year was better than in 1893-94; but it does not progress. The value of the trade in the last five years was :—

	Rx.		Rx.
1890-91 - - -	194,801	1893-94 - - -	213,782
1891-92 - - -	244,929	1894-95 - - -	222,461
1892-93 - - -	232,279

Tanned Hides and Skins.—The exports of tanned hides and skins (mainly from Madras) in the last five years have been as follow, most of the exports being to England :—

	Cwt.	Rx.
1890-91 - - -	272,376	2,535,363
1891-92 - - -	290,401	2,818,959
1892-93 - - -	297,875	2,953,762
1893-94 - - -	266,465	3,233,877
1894-95 - - -	315,035	3,680,364

In both the larger hides and the smaller skins, chiefly goat and kid, there was a great increase in the trade, accompanying a similar increase in the export of raw hides and skins.

These skins are tanned in the Madras Presidency and are exported thence and from Bombay to the United Kingdom, Belgium, France, the United States, and the Straits, the bulk of the exports being to the United Kingdom. The increased trade in the year testifies to the resumption of activity in the leather trades in England.

Lac.—A glance at the figures appended will show how speculative and fluctuating is this trade, the quantity exported and the price varying from year to year in a remarkable way:—

—	Cwt.	Rx.
1889-90 - - - -	90,238	488,513
1890-91 - - - -	147,160	781,264
1891-92 - - - -	137,465	750,531
1892-93 - - - -	125,613	780,163
1893-94 - - - -	122,905	960,227
1894-95 - - - -	160,605	1,405,933

Prices for the last three years have been high; in 1893-94 they rose to an extremely high point, but this was much exceeded last year. It was said in the review of the trade for 1893-94, and may be repeated here, that "India has a practical monopoly of this article, but the quantity available is by no means unlimited, and the conditions of the trade are such that speculative 'corners' in it are easy and not infrequent."

Oilcake.—The export continues very close to the high figure reached in 1893-94:—

—	Cwt.	Rx.
1889-90 - - - -	297,471	74,721
1890-91 - - - -	334,023	88,442
1891-92 - - - -	402,090	104,520
1892-93 - - - -	390,862	118,495
1893-94 - - - -	469,866	140,378
1894-95 - - - -	461,876	140,266

Paper.—A small beginning was made in 1893-94 in the export of printing and writing paper from Bengal to Ceylon, Java, the Straits, and even to Australia. The export value was only Rx. 3,827, and in 1894-95 it has increased to Rx. 8,036. A very trifling trade still, but it may be hoped that it is but a beginning.

The value of articles exported by post (which are not specified in the returns) was as follows in the last five years:—

1891-92 - - -	141,672	1894-95 - - -	163,026
1892-93 - - -	155,739

General distribution of the Export Trade.—The total value of the exports of Indian produce and manufactures in 1893-94 was thus distributed among the principal countries with which the trade is carried on:—

—	Rx.	Per Cent.	—	Rx.	Per Cent.
1. United Kingdom -	32,795,328	31.6	9. Ceylon - - -	3,262,299	3.1
2. China - - -	12,548,725	12.1	10. Italy - - -	2,980,601	2.9
3. France - - -	8,660,680	8.3	11. Austria - - -	2,438,977	2.3
4. Germany - - -	7,718,877	7.4	12. Japan - - -	1,663,701	1.6
5. United States -	5,838,449	5.6	13. South America -	1,621,060	1.6
6. Straits Settlements -	5,238,985	5.0	14. Holland - - -	1,431,033	1.4
7. Egypt - - -	4,627,748	4.5	15. Australia - - -	1,325,522	1.3
8. Belgium - - -	3,786,302	3.6	16. Mauritius - - -	1,243,143	1.2

Our export trade to the Continent was Rx. 28,153,000, the exports to the United Kingdom being substantially larger, namely, Rx. 32,795,000. But if the exports to Egypt are added to the exports to the Continent, which may be done since most of the exports are only nominally to Port Said, then the exports to the Continent were almost exactly equal to the exports to the United Kingdom.

CHAPTER IV.

TRADE WITH COUNTRIES.

In the subjoined table are given the figures of our trade (merchandise only) with the several divisions of the world during the last five years:—

	1890-91.	1891-92.	1892-93.	1893-94.	1894-95.
	Rx.	Rx.	Rx.	Rx.	Rx.

With America - - -	6,429,218	6,402,833	7,301,177	6,724,435	8,892,135
With Australia - - -	1,476,605	1,261,413	1,357,228	1,267,254	1,574,224
Total - - -	169,170,622	174,623,467	169,141,027	180,404,547	178,982,437

In 1893-94 trade with Europe alone increased, and that largely, the conditions of exchange following the closure of the mints having given a temporary and speculative impetus to the imports from that continent. The same conditions temporarily depressed our trade with Asia and Africa, and our trade with America and Australia was restricted as the result of acute trade and financial depression. The stimulus to imports from gold-standard countries, and the discouragement to exports to silver-standard countries soon came to an end, lasting in fact only about four or five months after the mints were closed, and these conditions were succeeded in 1894-95 by others which had the converse effect. The exchange value of the rupee fell heavily in the last quarter of the year 1893-94 and the early months of 1894-95; and this reduction of the level of exchange, which restricted the ample flow of imports that had been going on for some time, was followed by the imposition of import duties which had the temporary effect of further reducing the import trade. The reduction of exchange, and the adjustment of the factors of interchange with Asiatic countries, brought about a revival of trade with them which was only checked by the plague in Hong Kong and the outbreak of hostilities between China and Japan. The increase of the price of opium, compensated however, in the aggregate of trade values, for such check, and as the general result of the year's operations we find a substantial increase in our trade relations with the world generally, Europe excepted.

The following table shows the value of the merchandise interchanged in the last five years with the principal countries with which we have commercial relations:—

European Trade.

Our trade in merchandise with the European Continent was last year about 66½ per cent. of our whole trade with the world, amounting to Rx. 119,472,701 out of an aggregate of Rx. 178,982,437. The proportion would be larger if we took into account the trade with Egypt, the greatest part of which is really trade with Europe, but here we are dealing with direct trade. In fact, about two-thirds of our transactions in merchandise, and four-fifths of our transactions in gold and silver, are conducted with Europe. The trade with the United Kingdom is 71 per cent. of the trade with Europe. The bulk of the imports into India comes from the United Kingdom (89 per cent. last year), but the exports from India are much more equally divided amongst other European countries:—

United Kingdom.—The trade with the United Kingdom declined by 6·6 per cent. in 1892-93, the decline being followed by an increase of 12 per cent. in 1893-94, the increase being chiefly in imports, which were augmented by as much as 18 per cent. It might have been expected that such an inflation of trade would have been followed in 1894-95 by an almost proportionate contraction, but the reduction in fact was less than 2 per cent.

The import trade was as follows:—

	Rx.		Rx.
1890-91 - - -	52,101,868	1893-94 - - -	52,001,013
1891-92 - - -	48,271,400	1894-95 - - -	51,105,757
1892-93 - - -	44,005,841

the decline being 1¼ per cent. The decline in the imports in 1892-93 was due to a restriction, and the increase in the two succeeding years was due to an expansion, in the imports of cotton yarns and fabrics, as is apparent from the following figures:—

	1891-92.	1892-93.	1893-94.	1894-95.
	Rx.	Rx.	Rx.	Rx.
Value of cotton yarns - - -	3,432,094	2,606,482	3,014,592	2,766,298
Value of cotton fabrics - - -	24,614,008	22,364,694	28,541,981	29,267,888

The imports of yarns and cotton goods in 1893-94 were greatly stimulated by the conditions of exchange consequent on the closure of the mints. The imports continued with such great activity to the end of the year, that it was anticipated that the trade of 1894-95 would exhibit a substantial restriction. But the anticipation that cotton goods would be added to the import tariff gave a speculative stimulus to trade which was about as strong as the stimulus temporarily given by the conditions of exchange in the preceding year, and imports of grey piece goods, which are the bulk of the trade, have continued on a very large scale from April to August 1895. The imports of white goods from April to August have been smaller than in the same period of 1894, but a good deal larger than in 1893. In coloured goods only has there been a decline during this year. Thus for more than two years in succession the trade in cotton goods has been inflated by speculative trading, and it is only reasonable to expect that the trade will, now that the import duty has been imposed, be conducted on a restricted scale until the bulk of the stocks imported before the date on which the duty came into operation has been worked off. It is also quite possible that the agitation being carried on by the Lancashire manufacturers for the repeal of the duty may, in consequence of the uncertainty generated regarding the maintenance of the tax, have the effect of making importers pause and consider still further before undertaking fresh business.

The fluctuations in the other imports from the United Kingdom call for no particular remark. In most of the cases where trade was contracted the restriction followed an inflated trade in the preceding year. The principal items and their value in the last three years are these :—

A decline of about $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. followed the increase of 1893-94.

The decline in cotton, wheat, and sugar is very noticeable. The contraction of the export of wheat to the United Kingdom is probably only temporary, the result of a disparity of price-levels in England and India, arising out of the abundant supplies available from the United States, the Argentine Republic, and other countries. The decline in linseed is also only transitory, following a year of exceptional exports. But the contraction of the trade in cotton and sugar is due to causes which will operate permanently.

The trade (merchandise) of India with the United Kingdom has represented the following proportion of her trade (merchandise) with the world in the last five years:—

	Per Cent.		Per Cent.
1890-91	50.0	1893-94	48.0
1891-92	47.4	1894-95	47.4

1894-95	1,194,115	2,443,366

Both imports and exports declined in 1894-95, the decline following on a greatly expanded trade in the preceding year. The imports are very diverse in their character; apparel, cotton goods (white and coloured) and cotton yarn, mineral dyes, glassware (including beads and false pearls), paper, silks and woollens, are the most important. The total of the export trade was affected by a heavy decline in the exports of cotton, which is the great staple of the exports to this country.

Here, as in the case of Austria, imports and exports have both declined after a very large trade in the preceding year. The subjoined list shows the principal articles imported from Belgium:—

1893-94	1,138,262	10,694,311
1894-95	860,430	8,681,704

The imports are mainly apparel and millinery, clocks and watches (of which a large proportion are of Swiss origin), coloured cottons (prints and muslins), in which there is an extraordinary decline, saffron, glass beads and false pearls, brandy and wines, provisions, and silk goods, which last-mentioned articles have declined about 50 per cent.

The export trade fluctuates considerably. The large increase in 1891-92 was caused by an abnormal export of wheat, the result of a serious deficiency in the French and other European harvests, and in 1893-94 the expansion of exports was mainly due to an abnormal export of rapeseed, the result of a serious deficiency in the European harvests of colza. Linseed was also exported in considerable quantity.

Last year there was a restriction in the exports of coffee, cotton (a very large decline, due in some measure to the fact that, taking quality into account, American cotton was cheaper than Indian cotton), wheat (an enormous decline), linseed, rapeseed, and til seed. The export of rapeseed in 1894-95, it should be noted, though smaller than in 1893-94, was vastly larger than the trade of the years before. The exports of earthnuts also were very active and greatly in excess of the trade of previous years.

The importation of "brandy" valued at Rs. 2½ a gallon does not seem to have received an effective check as yet, though the imports in the last three years have remained stationary at about 32,000 gallons. Of German "whisky" we received 7,556 gallons last year, but worse than all is the importation of 107,686 gallons of "other sorts" of spirit, which are largely "white spirit" imported for local conversion, with the aid of colouring and flavouring matter and gaudy labels, into choice brandy and whisky.

The exports to Germany have increased without a check for the last five years. The values of the principal items in the trade are stated below:

1893-94	207,501	1,479,810
1894-95	168,982	1,431,239

There was a substantial decline in the imports of manufactures of cotton and wool, which are, with mineral dyes, the largest items in the trade. In the export trade there was a decline in linseed and rapeseed, in which seeds there was an abnormally large trade in 1893-94, and though the exports of indigo increased, the increase did not set-off the decrease in oil-seeds.

1894-95	342,039	2,996,303

Corals form the largest item in the import trade, and in these though there was an increase in quantity there was also a very heavy fall in price, reducing the value of the trade from Rx. 159,328 to Rx. 103,261. The export trade declined in consequence of a great contraction in cotton and the practical cessation of the wheat trade.

Russia.—Although this section treats of European trade, it is convenient to treat European and Asiatic Russia together, for our trade consists of the import of petroleum from Batoum on the Asiatic side of the Black Sea and of the export of cotton, indigo, and seeds to Odessa on the European side of the Black Sea and of tea (foreign, not Indian) to Batoum :

	Imports.		Exports.
	(From Asiatic Russia.)	(To Asiatic Russia.)	(To European Russia.)

1894-95	1,007,381	30,162	450,024

The decline in the imports of petroleum in 1893-94 was followed by an even larger decline last year.

The sudden appearance of an export trade with Batoum is due to the partial diversion, explained in the section of this review which treats of trade with Afghanistan, of the trade in tea which hitherto has reached Russian Turkistan through Persia and Afghanistan.

The trade with European Russia consists of cotton, indigo, and seeds. As in the trade with other European countries the export of cotton declined heavily.

African Countries.

Abyssinia.—The exports to this country consist mainly of cotton piece goods, in rice (a trade which has taken a lively start in the last two years), and in jawár and bájra. The trade in these millets was large until 1893-94, but since that year it has been very greatly reduced. The import trade is insignificant; the export trade for the last five years has been :

1890-91	-	-	Rx.	275,173	1893-94	-	-	Rx.	202,814

1892-93	-	-	Rx.	257,650

Cape Colony and Natal.—The import trade of both these colonies is trifling. The export trade has been as follows :

	—	To Cape.	To Natal.
		Rx.	Rx.
	1889-90	189,203	246,310
	1890-91	130,212	129,835

	1893-94	239,299	174,362
	1894-95	226,210	220,831

In both cases the largest items in the export trade are rice and gunny bags, with some ghi sent to Natal for the Indian coolies there.

	1893-94	171,371	3,722,627
	1894-95	282,291	4,669,041

The great increase in imports was largely due to an expansion of the trade in cotton, imported for the spinning of the finer counts of yarn in the Bombay mills : the imports reached 42,674 cwt. There was also a material increase in the imports of cigars and cigarettes, and salt, the trade in which began three years ago, reached the substantial figure of 33,163 tons.

Rice and wheat form the bulk of our exports to Egypt, but they are not really trade with that country, the grain only going to Port Said for orders. The trade in wheat fell to a very low point, and per contra the exports of rice were large. The only other two articles taken by Egypt in quantity are indigo and gunny bags, the former to dye the garments of the peasantry and the latter for the packing of grain ; in the former there was a material increase, but the trade in gunny bags declined substantially.

The colony depends entirely on its sugar, which is almost the only thing it sends to India or to any other country. In 1892-93 there was a restricted import of sugar, the result of the disastrous cyclone of 1892 : in 1893-94 there was a larger supply with the not invariable accompaniment of good prices ; in 1894-95 the imports were unprecedentedly large .

Last year, immediately after the imposition of the Indian import duties, the planters and the Government of Mauritius expressed the strongest apprehension that the import duty, in consequence of its protective effect on Indian sugar, would be destructive of the trade in that article carried on between Mauritius and India. Representations on the subject were made through Her Majesty's Government to the Government of India, who expressed the opinion that there was no real ground for the apprehension expressed, since sugar could not be profitably produced on a large scale in Peninsular, and especially Western India, where only imported sugar was largely consumed, and that the cost of transport of sugar from Northern to Western India was prohibitive of competition even when the imports were weighted with a 5 per cent. duty. The foregoing figures show that this opinion was correct, and, as the planters have not repeated their complaint, it may be assumed that they have acquired some knowledge of the facts.

There is nothing special to notice in the exports to Mauritius. As observed in the review of the trade of 1893-94, the island "is in effect an Indian colony, two-thirds of its inhabitants being settlers from India employed on the sugar plantations and in huckstering business. Our exports to Mauritius consist almost entirely of the necessaries and small luxuries of life for these people: grain and pulse, chiefly rice, provisions, oils, spices, and gunny bags for the packing of sugar."

The two articles—ivory and cloves—which form the staple of the import trade are subject to great fluctuations. Last year there was an increase in ivory and a decline in cloves. The exports consist chiefly of Manchester and Bombay cottons in about equal proportions, rice and other grain, provisions, spices, and sugar. There was some increase in the export of Bombay cottons, but the trade has been allowed to recede from the dimensions attained in 1890-91 and 1891-92. Rice was exported in unusually large quantity.

The conditions of the trade in 1894-95 were exactly the reverse of what they were in 1893-94. In that year the importation of kerosene oil, which constitutes nine-tenths of the import trade, was stimulated by the state of exchange which for a time gave an advantage to the United States in competition with Russia, and the opportunity was taken to endeavour to oust Russian oil from the Indian market. The import of oil was therefore carried on on a scale of unprecedented magnitude, but the speculation came to an end in a few months by the fall of exchange, the overstocking of the market, and, finally, the doubling of the import duty. Accordingly the imports in 1894-95 show a heavy fall, but this has been as temporary as was the large importation of the preceding year, for reduced imports have been succeeded by a large rise in price, and the flow of imported oil is now very strong in consequence.

In the export trade the converse feature is exhibited, the trade of 1893-4 having been depressed, and that of 1894-95 singularly active.

The imports from the States now consist (to the extent of about 95 per cent.) of the following articles :—

On the whole there has been a more or less complete recovery from the depression of 1893-94, a depression partly due to the operation of the McKinley tariff which has since been much modified, and partly to labour troubles and to trade and financial depression.

The jute goods which are exported to the United States consist most largely of gunny cloths, and the extra-abundant crop of cotton in the States, which by the reduction of prices injured the sale of Indian cotton in Europe, had some compensating effect in widening the market for another Indian industry. The increase against seeds is due to a partial recovery of the trade in linseed, which during the three previous years seemed to be approaching extinction.

The principal import from Aden is salt, of which the quantity imported at Calcutta was not as large as in the preceding year, though it was well above the average. The exports of cotton piece goods, rice, and millets, and tobacco substantially increased; in piece goods especially there was an unusually large trade, and it is to be hoped that Bombay cloth may fill the markets of Somaliland and the region behind it in the near future.

The imports of pearls from Arabia were greatly in excess of the average imports; from Persia also there was a large increase, and the fishing must have been good. It is stated also that there was a rise in prices in Bombay. There was a large increase in the export of rice.

The remarks on the subject of the importation of Ceylon tea made in the review of the trade for 1893-94 may be re-produced here: "Ceylon tea is brought to India (mainly Bombay) for consumption here by Europeans, and it competes directly with Indian tea, or rather, has the field practically to itself in Bombay, either because the charges for transport from Calcutta to Bombay restrain or prohibit competition (and yet much tea is sent from Calcutta to Bombay for export to Persia), or because the persons who deal in the Calcutta tea market have not yet had their attention directed to the fact that Ceylon supplies Western India with tea to the extent of nearly a million pounds a year. The longer the trade is allowed to establish itself, the more difficult will competition be found."

In other respects the import trade from Ceylon resembles very closely, and is in the nature of, coasting trade, and no particular comment on it need be made.

Two-thirds of the export trade to Ceylon are represented by rice, in which there was some increase. The export of Indian coal to Ceylon has increased, but is still small:—

It will be seen that while in this period the imports from China have about doubled, the exports to that country have not increased at all. This stagnation is due to the contraction in quantity and fall in price of opium, which is the main export to China, and also to the practical disappearance of the trade in raw cotton. Although compensation has been obtained for some of the decline in these two articles by the rapid increase in the trade in cotton yarn, the net result is that the aggregate export trade to China shows no increase in a quarter of a century.

There is a striking contrast in the features of the trade in 1893-94 and 1894-95. In the former of these two years the immediate consequence of the closure of the Indian mints was to dislocate the exchange between the rupee and the dollar which had always remained at a practically uniform level while rupees were freely coined in the mints. For some months and until the necessary adjustments were made, the trade between the two countries was disorganised. A temporary stimulus was given to imports, while exports were correspondingly discouraged. The trade in cotton yarn had been so overdone for a year or more preceding the closure of the mints that when they were closed the cotton mills were by agreement working short time in order to effect a diminution of stocks and an increase of price in their yarn in the China market. The closure of the mints practically stopped further trade for a short time. The price of opium also ruled low, though the quantity available for export was not large. Thus there was a great increase in imports and a heavy fall in exports.

In 1894-95 we find these features reversed, the import trade having fallen and exports increased. Though the trade in yarns was not equal to that of 1892-93, in which year the shipments were so excessive as to lead to the agreement that the Indian mills should reduce further supplies by working short time, they were well up to the average. The value of the opium trade also was greatly increased, though there was no increase in quantity, by a considerable rise in price, mainly speculative. Considering all the conditions adverse to the free course of trade with China which existed during the year, it is astonishing that it should have progressed as well as is shown by the figures in the foregoing table and by the admissions of the merchants engaged in the trade. The conditions are thus described in the opening paragraph of the report of the Imperial Maritime Customs of China on the trade of that country for 1894:—

During the spring serious drought prevailed in the south, and concurrently the bubonic plague appeared in Canton and Hong-Kong; business with the colony suffered a severe check, and traffic was hampered by the introduction of quarantine at most coast ports. In the summer the political outlook became very threatening and culminated on 1st August in a declaration of war against Japan. This announcement naturally produced great uncertainty and dread of attack at the coast ports—a state of affairs no less unsettling to trade than war itself. Measures of coast defence were adopted and certain anchorages barricaded or partially closed, causing considerable inconvenience and extra expense to shipping and resulting in an increase in rates of freight, passage, and insurance; at the same time aids to navigation were removed at many ports. Floods damaged cereals in the north, and during the autumn a succession of destructive typhoons in South China injured the rice and sugar crops, while the mobilisation of troops throughout the provinces withdrew large bodies of men from their peaceful pursuits, which disturbed industries and entailed additional taxation on trade to meet the increased military expenditure. During the year sterling exchange fluctuated over 15 per cent.

The writer of the report says that “the year 1895 will probably see at least 360,000 spindles, 3,000 looms, and numerous cotton gins ready to operate in some 15 mills in course of construction or to be erected at Shanghai, Ningpo, and the Yangtze ports.” As yet, however, the Indian cotton industry does not seem to be affected by the threatened or actual competition, for the exports to China during the current year of yarns and piece goods are very large.

The trade with Japan in 1893-94 was affected like the trade with China, and by the same cause. In 1894-95 reversal of the features of 1893-94 was not so complete as in the case of China, for while exports made a complete recovery, imports did not decline from the great advance of the preceding year, but, on the contrary, increased. This increase was due to a quite remarkable development of the trade in Japanese matches, which are now to be found everywhere in India. The value of these matches last year was Rx. 107,851 against Rx. 22,837 in 1893-94, and in addition a large quantity is imported via Singapore. The matches are not very good, but they are very cheap. There was a decline in the imports of both coal and copper.

The export trade is limited mainly to raw cotton and cotton yarn, and the trade in each of these articles for the last six years presents an interesting contrast:—

—	Raw Cotton.		Cotton Yarn.

As the exports of cotton yarn have fallen, the exports of raw cotton to feed the Japanese mills have increased. We have lost a trade of something under a million Rx., but a larger trade has been created in the same period. Some seem to think that what has happened in Japan will also happen in China. Perhaps it will, but the change will be spread over a vastly longer period, for the countries, their inhabitants, and their conditions are very dissimilar. If the Japanese have effected their political and economical revolution with feverish haste, the Chinese will set about a similar task with cold and cautious deliberation. When the revolution is effected it is certain that the result for the trade of India will be what we see in our intercourse with Japan; the trade will increase much more rapidly and satisfactorily than it can ever do in present conditions. The greater the prosperity of India's neighbours, the better for India and the trade of India.

Java.—The trade is small, consisting chiefly of the import of sugar for consumption in India and of tea for re-export to Persia. The import of sugar last year was relatively very large, amounting to 140,030 cwt., value Rx. 168,037. In exchange we send opium, which is the bulk of the export trade.

The imports comprise cotton and wool, provisions (mainly dates and other dried fruit), skins, asafoetida, and pearls. As in the case of the trade with Arabia, the trade in pearls (which in both cases come from the same fishing grounds) very largely increased, this increase accounting for the larger aggregate of the import trade, for in most other articles there was a decline.

The export trade is largely limited to foreign re-exported goods, their value being Rx. 1,652,528 against Rx. 727,547, the value of Indian goods exported, the former being thus twice as large as the latter. Our trade in 1893-94 was affected like the trade with other silver-standard countries, and the trade of 1894-95 shows, as in other cases, a complete recovery. In Manchester cottons a very large business was done, and there was a great increase in the exports of tea, foreign and Indian. This trade in tea has been as follows in recent years:—

	Foreign Tea.	Indian Tea.

Now that the Russians have imposed a prohibitory duty on tea imported into Russian Turkistan through Persia and have granted facilities for its importation into that region via Batoum and the Caspian, it will be interesting to note whether the trade of which the figures are here given will decline. We have no statistics of the quantity of tea passing from Persia into Russian Turkistan, and it is not possible, therefore, to estimate how far this trade will be affected. In the first five months of the present year there has certainly been a considerable decline as compared with the trade in the same period of 1894-95.

Siam.—As was observed last year, this trade requires notice only because of the curious fact that there is now a regular import of teakwood from that country, competing with Burma teak in the Indian market. The imports are:—

The goods that reach us from the Straits are only partially productions of that colony; to some considerable extent the trade is transit trade, Singapore being a depôt for Chinese, Japanese, Javanese, Cochin-Chinese, Siamese, and other merchandise; and to that port also a large proportion of the exports from India are sent in transit to the places mentioned.

There is nothing calling for particular remark in the long list of imports, which in the aggregate show a decline. In the export trade there was a considerable increase in rice and opium which form the largest proportion of the trade. In its general features the trade of the last two years with the Straits resembles the trade with other silver-standard countries. It is satisfactory to note a large increase in Indian yarn, following the increase in 1893-94.

In both dates and horses, the principal imports, there was a decline. Exports increased, the trade in both Manchester and Bombay piece goods having largely augmented.

The principal imports are horses, of which the value was last year Rx. 159,305. Next comes coal, value Rx. 47,839. Copper has also hitherto been a staple import, but only a trifling quantity was imported in 1894-1895.

The display of samples of provisions and wines made by the Commissioners who came to India from Victoria in 1894 to open up an Indian market for such goods seems to have had some little effect, for the trade has increased, but it is still a trifling business.

Exports are limited chiefly to gunny bags, tea, and castor-oil. A few other articles, such as rice, linseed-oil, and provisions, are exported in small quantity. The trade in gunny bags was last year unusually large, amounting to nearly 28 million bags, the exports of previous years ranging between 20 and 24 millions in number. The exports of tea in the last five years have been—

This trade expands very slowly. The Australian colonist has a fancy for boiling his tea, and though Indian tea is very good as an infusion, it is a very disagreeable decoction. Colonial habits must change before this trade can become as large as it ought to be in a market of such large dimensions as the Australian colonies.

CHAPTER V.

PROVINCIAL TRADE.

The figures of the trade of each province stand thus (in Rx.) :—

Taking imports and exports of merchandise together, the share of each province in the whole foreign trade of India stood as follows during the last four years :—

	1891-92.	1892-3.	1893-94.	1894-95.
	Per Cent.	Per Cent.	Per Cent.	Per Cent.
Bombay - - - -	38·02	38·86	37·72	35·31

Madras - - - -	9·19	9·68	9·82	10·73
Burma - - - -	8·92	8·66	6·89	7·42
Sindh - - - -	6·48	4·46	6·12	5·95

The trade of Bombay sensibly declined, as did that of Sindh. The trade of the other provinces increased.

The import trade increased only in Madras and Sindh—two provinces whose share of the import trade is small. In Bengal and Bombay, whose import trade amounts to Rx. 55,469,032 out of a total of Rx 70,167,438, a material decline—much more pronounced in Bengal than in Bombay—followed the greatly inflated import trade of 1893-94.

In Burma there was a very heavy decline following a decline in each of the two preceding years. The fall is attributed, as it was in 1893-94, to the restriction of the purchasing power of the people caused by the fall in the price of rice, which is the staple production of the province.

In exported merchandise a decline is visible only in Bombay and Sindh, the exports of the other provinces having increased. That the trade of Western India should have fallen off is not surprising considering the great importance in the trade of cotton, oil-seeds, and wheat, in all of which there was a restricted trade.

The following table shows the nature of the import trade and of the export trade (Indian produce) of each province:—

The exports from Bengal are chiefly raw and manufactured jute (of which this province possesses a practical monopoly), tea, opium, rice, oilseeds, indigo, and raw hides.

The exports from Bombay are raw and manufactured cotton, oilseeds, wheat, opium, and raw wool.

Madras exports tanned skins (of which article this province has almost a monopoly), coffee, raw and manufactured cotton, indigo, seeds, rice.

From Sindh the exports are wheat (the centre of this trade apparently rapidly gravitating to Karáchi), seeds, raw cotton, and raw wool.

The export trade of Burma is limited to rice and teakwood.

The trade and navigation of India with foreign countries have been distributed during the last five years, in the following proportions, between the five chief ports. Treasure is included in the trade here:—

GOVERNMENT STORES.

The total value of these transactions was Rx. 3,550,589, that of the preceding year having been Rx. 3,231,709. Imports of stores amounted to Rx. 3,361,555 against Rx. 3,064,475 in 1893-94—the result of a larger importation of arms and ammunition and railway material, these classes of stores having been imported on a relatively small scale in 1893-94.

During the last five years the value of imports and exports on account of Government have been as follows (in Rx.) :—

	Imports.		Exports.
	Stores.	Treasure.	Stores.	Treasure.
1890-91	2,940,470	15,000	91,626	51,272
1891-92	2,844,926	—	137,581	143,500
1892-93	3,660,247	—	59,479	29,929
1893-94	3,064,475	36,000	65,779	75,455
1894-95	3,361,555	22,200	98,779	68,055

The increase in the value of imported stores between 1890-91 and 1894-95 is largely due to increased imports of arms, ammunition, and military stores, and of articles used for the manufacture of arms and ammunition in India, such as hardware and cutlery (tools and implements), machinery, copper, steel.

On the other hand, some classes of stores are now imported on a very reduced scale, in consequence of their supersession by articles of the same kind made in India. Thus, the manufacture of boots by the Army Equipment Factory at Cawnpore has resulted in the cessation of the importation of boots. Quinine also has disappeared from the list, having been superseded by the locally manufactured quinine and the alkaloids of cinchona. Malt liquor is also no longer imported, the supply of the troops, so far as it is not met by Indian beer, being arranged for by the officers commanding regiments without the intervention of the State. Printing paper also has almost ceased to be imported, and the imports of writing paper are on a greatly reduced scale, as are the imports of other kinds of paper.

CUSTOMS REVENUE.

On the 10th March 1894, three weeks before the expiry of the year, a new tariff was imposed, subjecting to duty practically all the articles (with the important exceptions of cotton yarn and cotton piece-goods) that were subject to duty under the former tariff as it stood in 1875, the rates also being the same. This tariff was amended on the 27th December 1894 by the inclusion in it of cotton yarn and other manufactures of cotton. It was also further provided that all articles not enumerated in the schedules should be subject to duty.

The articles which were subject to duty before the 10th March 1894 were of a special character and subject to special rates of duty, which have remained unaltered, with one exception, namely, petroleum, the duty on that article having been doubled on the 10th March 1894.

The gross revenue from imports, salt excluded, has been :—

* Duty imposed in August 1893.

The difference between the sum of Rx. 987,598 and the total of Rx. 2,895,426—namely, Rx. 1,907,828—may be taken to represent the sum obtained by the imposition of the new tariffs of March and December 1894. The sum is, in fact, larger, for a deduction should be made from the revenue obtained from petroleum to represent the doubling of the duty in March 1894, and nearly the whole of the duty obtained on imports by post was due to the new tariff. It would be approximately correct to say that the revenue obtained in 1894-95 from the new tariff was Rx. 2,000,000.

Of the articles from which this sum of Rx. 2,000,000 was realised, the more important are specified below :—

Articles of Food and Drink returned Rx. 296,840, the principal items being :—

	Rx.
Sugar - - - - -	140,674
Provisions - - - - -	45,828
Spices - - - - -	37,774
Fruits and vegetables - - - - -	35,260
Tea - - - - -	30,706

From Chemicals, Drugs, and Dyes, the relatively small sum of Rx. 91,660 was obtained, the chief items being :—

	Rx.
Drugs, medicines, narcotics - - - - -	34,703
Chemical products and preparations - - - - -	25,799
Dyes and tans - - - - -	31,158

The revenue from articles grouped under Metals and Articles made of Metal is considerable, the bulk of the revenue being obtained from silver. The principal items are shown below :—

	Rx.		Rx.
Hardware and cutlery - - - - -	71,931	Lead - - - - -	1,276
Copper and brass, including patent or yellow metal, lametta, and orsidue - - - - -	77,265	Silver - - - - -	348,951
Iron - - - - -	22,589	Steel - - - - -	6,247
		Tin - - - - -	16,620
		Zinc - - - - -	6,129

The bulk of the iron and steel imported is taxed at 1 per cent., while all other kinds of metals are taxed at 5 per cent.

From Oils (petroleum excepted) only Rx. 5,729 was obtained. The importation of vegetable and animal oils is trifling.

The largest items of all are Cotton yarns and other manufactures of Cotton. Although the duty on these was imposed only on the 27th December, and was, therefore, levied for only 95 days of the year, the revenue obtained was Rx. 384,310.

The duty on yarns was Rx. 41,753. From the details given by the Custom-houses it appears—as is shown also elsewhere in this review—that the importation of the lower counts of yarns practically does not exist. The returns show that out of the total of Rx. 15,576 obtained from mule and water twist Rx. 87 were obtained from No. 15 and lower numbers, and Rx. 22 from Nos. 15 to 24. In doubled mule twist only Rx. 4 were obtained on counts up to No. 24.

The sums obtained on woven fabrics were:—

	Rx.
Grey piece goods	192,952	The bulk of it being obtained from shirtings and dhutis, sáris, chadars, and scarves.
White piece goods	84,083
Coloured, printed, or dyed piece goods	58,008
Handkerchiefs and shawls in the piece	2,315
Hosiery and other manufactures	2,920

Of the other articles enumerated in the tariff schedules those noted below are the most important. The articles specified here are those on which the revenue obtained Rx. 10,000 and upwards:—

	Rx.
Glass and glassware	31,810

The total gross revenue from all articles subject to import duty, salt excepted, was Rx. 2,895,426. On the same articles the drawbacks and refunds in the year amounted to Rx. 63,621, the net revenue being Rx. 2,831,805, which was nearly 98 per cent. of the gross revenue. The drawbacks amounted to Rx. 37,886; these are given to the extent of seven-eighths of the import duty on articles re-exported from India. The refunds amounted to Rx. 25,735; these are given in special cases where exemption is allowed after payment of duty or where duty has been erroneously charged, but the bulk of the refunds represents the difference between the specific duty chargeable on the import of arms and the rate of 10 per cent. ad valorem payable when the arms are sold by the dealer to persons authorised to possess arms.

Since 1880 the export tariff schedule has contained but the one article (rice) on which duty is levied. In August 1893 rice-flour was added, in order to remove possible doubt whether it was legal to tax rice-flour as rice. The gross and net duty realised in the last five years have been:—

CHAPTER VI.

BALANCE OF TRADE.

The excess of exports over imports, including treasure as well as merchandise, for each of the last ten years was (in Rx.) :—

In 1893-94 a temporary inflation of the import trade and an equally temporary restriction of the export trade, following on the closure of the mints, combined with a great reduction in the amount of Council bills, left the excess of exports over imports very low. These exceptional conditions did not exist in 1894-95, when trade and Council drawings were conducted on the normal basis.

As regards gold, it was remarked in the review of the trade of 1893-94 that—

The outflow of gold which marked 1892-93 continued in 1893-94, though on a smaller scale. In 1892-93 the exports considerably exceeded the imports—a circumstance for which there was only one precedent in the famine year of 1878-79, when the people parted with their gold to relieve their distress. No similar reason existed in 1892-93, when the gold was exchanged for silver simply as a profitable mercantile transaction in view of the fall in the gold value of silver. The same reason existed in 1893-94, but the business was not carried quite so far, and the imports exceeded the exports, though the excess was not nearly as large as it was in former years. The export of gold has continued actively since the beginning of the present year with the further fall in the gold price of silver.

It will be seen that the export of gold in 1894-95 was extremely large—so large as to form a complete reversal of the ordinary course of the trade in this metal. The fall of exchange was so great, and the gold value of the rupee declined so heavily, that the inducement to sell gold was irresistible. The speculation continued through the first half of the present year, but not on such an extensive scale as in 1893-94, for the six months have ended with a net import of gold, though not a large one. Imports of gold will doubtless be much larger in the remaining months of the year.

The imports of silver were much smaller than they have been in recent years since the Indian mints became the common sink for the silver of the world, rejected in every country, except India, that could afford to pay for it. The value of the imports is still, however, almost quite as large as in 1883-84. The reduction of the imports may be taken as signifying that the speculation in the metal which marked the first twelve months following the closure of the mints is approaching its end, and that the imports at present are not very much in excess of ordinary requirements. If this is the case the inference may be drawn that more than half of the yearly additions made to the currency before the closure of the mints must have gone forthwith into the melting-pot for conversion into ornaments, or into the earth for addition to hoards. The actual destinations and uses of the metal are still very obscure, but it has become certain, at any rate, as the result of inquiry, that the coinage of the native mints has had relatively little influence on the imports. Below are shown, side by side, the quantity imported and the quantity passed into the native mints in the last four years:—

QUANTITY IMPORTED (Net).			QUANTITY passed into the NATIVE MINTS.
		Ounces.			Ounces.
1891-92	-	32,348,438	1891	-	4,147,266
1892-93	-	45,523,512	1892	-	5,817,070
1893-94	-	54,328,973	1893	-	7,476,500
1894-95	-	27,040,022	1894	-	3,297,435

Thus it appears that the coinage of the native mints in the last two years has amounted to 10,773,935 ounces, being about 13 per cent. of the net imports. Therefore, after allowing for that quantity of silver which was imported by the banks and taken over by the Government for coinage in 1893-94, a very large quantity remains to be accounted for. It must have been (1) absorbed in the manufacture of ornaments; (2) sent across the frontiers into the neighbouring countries; (3) buried as a hoard, either in substitution of the disinterred rupees or as additions to existing hoards; and (4) left in stock with dealers. But in what proportion the imported metal has been employed in these ways there are absolutely no means of saying with the least degree of precision.

Immediately after the closure of the mints the rupees of the Government of India were sent back in very large quantities from Ceylon, Mauritius, the Persian Gulf, and other places where they were (and are) current. But the needs of trade in those places soon required that the rupees should be restored to the currency, and the outward flow of rupees was resumed. The statistics are not complete, for they exist only from August 1893 for imports, and from October 1893 for exports, but they are sufficient to show what happened, and they are here appended:—

IMPORTS.		EXPORTS.
	Rx.		Rx.
August 1893 to March 1894	809,392	October 1893 to March 1894	402,280
1894-95 (12 months)	814,452	1894-95 (12 months)	1,301,706
April 1895 to August 1895	313,986	April 1895 to August 1895	593,590

With the exception of these rupees the imports of silver in 1894-95 consisted almost exclusively of bar silver from London, a small quantity only being received from Australia, which country had, after the discovery of the Broken Hill mines and until the closure of the mints, been a rather large exporter of silver to India.

The descriptions of silver imported in the year were as follows:—

	Rx.
Bars, from London	6,864,443
Rupees (Government of India)	814,452
" (German and British East Africa)	19
Dollars	117,609
Other coin	6,204

The gold exported during the year was almost all sent to London.

CHAPTER VII.

SHIPPING.

The returns show a recovery from the decline of the two preceding years. The average tonnage of vessels continues to increase. The total number and tonnage of the shipping (steam and sailing) with cargoes and in ballast, which entered from and cleared to foreign countries during each of the last eight years, are as follow :—

Year.	No.	Tons.	Average Tonnage.
1887-88	10,893	7,189,465	660
1888-89	10,485	6,983,332	666
1889-90	10,673	7,315,586	685
1890-91	11,023	7,684,954	697

1893-94	9,995	7,665,886	767
1894-95	10,577	8,255,822	780

Steamer tonnage represented 82 per cent. of the whole. The total number of steamers which entered and cleared was 4,372, with an aggregate burden of 6,812,489 registered tons, the average tonnage of each steamer being 1,558 tons. About 5 per cent. of the steamers which cleared left in ballast.

Of the total of 8,255,822 tons, the entries from and clearances to the United Kingdom were 2,784,642, and 33·7 per cent. of the total, against 34·6 per cent. in 1893-94. Entries from and clearances to British possessions increased from 2,436,109 tons to 2,773,096 tons. There was also an increase in the number and tonnage of vessels entered from and cleared to foreign countries :—

—	No.	Tons.
1893-94	2,808	2,575,413
1894-95	2,830	2,698,084

The relative proportions of tonnage entered and cleared last year were as follow :—

From and to the United Kingdom, about 33·7 per cent. of the whole.

„ „ British Possessions „ 33·6 „ „

„ „ Foreign countries „ 32·7 „ „

The vessels carrying the trade of India for the most part fly the British flag, the tonnage of vessels sailing under that flag representing 82 per cent. of the whole in the last two years.

The tonnage of vessels under foreign flags was 12·4 per cent. of the whole, about the same as in the two preceding years.

The proportion of the tonnage of vessels under the British Indian registry was about 3½ per cent. of the whole. These are all sailing vessels of small tonnage.

The total number of vessels under foreign flags which entered and left last year was 1,182 against 1,155 in 1893-94, their burden aggregating 1,025,993 tons, against 972,848 tons in 1893-94. The principal flags were :—

The increased tonnage under the German and Austrian flags, and the decline of the French, Italian, and American flags, are conspicuous.

The native craft employed in the foreign trade are slowly but surely disappearing :—

SECTION II.—TRANS-FRONTIER TRADE.

CHAPTER VIII.

The trade (merchandise and treasure) in the last four years was as follows :—

The following figures give the trade with each principal country in the last four years. These figures are for merchandise only, the record of treasure being quite incomplete and untrustworthy. The countries are arranged geographically, proceeding from west to east along the line of frontier :—

Zimmé - - -	195,598	232,601	316,615	228,543

There was an increase of nearly 14 per cent. over the value of the trade in 1893-94, taking merchandise and treasure together, and of 8½ per cent. in merchandise alone, the interchanges with only seven out of the twenty-one countries named above having declined. Amongst those seven the largest decline is shown against the territory subject to the Amir of Afghanistan, namely, Kabul and Kandahar. The trade with Siam and Zimmé also substantially decreased, but elsewhere the decline was of no importance.

The frontier trade may be classed in three great groups, as shown above:—

- (1.) The trade of the North-West Frontier, which crosses the frontiers of Sindh, British Baluchistan, and the Panjab, and is conducted chiefly with Kandahar (by railway); with Kabul, the border country lying between India and Afghanistan, and Kashmir. This trade amounted in the year to Rx. 3,279,934, and was about 35·7 per cent. of the whole trade.
- (2.) The trade on the North and North-East Frontier, which crosses the frontiers of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, Bengal, and Assam. This trade amounted in the year to Rx. 3,481,718, and was nearly 38 per cent. of the whole trade. It is carried on chiefly with Nepal and Thibet, the trade with the latter country being, however, relatively insignificant.
- (3.) The trade on the East Frontier, which crosses the frontier of Burma, and is conducted with China, Siam, the Shan States, Karenni, and Zimmé. This trade amounted to Rx. 2,303,136, and was 25 per cent. of the whole trade.

The hill country lying north-east and east of Assam has been omitted from the specification, not being worth consideration from the trade point of view. Much of it, moreover, can hardly be regarded, in present circumstances, as trans-frontier country.

North-West Frontier.

The bulk of the trade which crosses this frontier is carried on with Kandahar, Kabul, Bajaur, and Kashmir.

The value of the trade with Kandahar during the last three years has been:—

	1892-93.	1893-94.	1894-95.
	Rx.	Rx.	Rx.
Imports - - -	234,428	335,849	299,090
Exports - - -	297,657	328,172	309,762

The imports consist chiefly of fruits and nuts and raw wool. Under both heads there was a considerable increase in 1893-94, but as regards fruits the trade was not sustained last year. This trade has been monopolised by the Amir with the bad results which invariably follow the adoption of such a course. In the export trade the only noticeable variation was in iron, and it would seem that there must have been some special circumstances attending this trade in 1893-94. The local reports on the trade of Kandahar are, however, meagre and unintelligently compiled, and no useful information can be extracted from them.

The trade with Kabul in the last three years has been :—

—		1892-93.	1893-94.	1894-95.
Imports	- - -	Rx. 220,850	Rx. 188,831	Rx. 160,400
Exports	- - -	610,501	405,215	267,365

The decline of our trade with Kabul has been progressive for many years, and it is now materially smaller in extent than when the Amir Abdurrahman was set by the Government of India to rule over Afghanistan in 1880. The causes of this serious restriction of trade have been discussed in more or less detail in the reviews of trade for several years in succession, and it is not necessary to say much more on the present occasion than to recapitulate them and to add that they continue to exist and to be more effective year by year. The trade with Kabul may be divided in two main heads, the home trade and the transit trade. The home trade is the trade in articles produced in Afghanistan and exported to India in exchange for articles of non-Indian and Indian origin imported from India into Afghanistan for consumption in that country. The transit trade is the trade in goods from Persia and Russian Turkistan imported into India via Afghanistan in exchange for goods of non-Indian and Indian origin required for consumption in Persia and Russian Turkistan.

Under both these main heads the trade has been steadily dwindling away.

The home trade is declining because the Amir seems resolved to become the only trader in his dominions. Article after article has been monopolised by him, and the only trade in them that can now be carried on is conducted by persons to whom the Amir has leased the monopoly, these persons prescribing the terms and conditions on which other traders are permitted to import and export the monopolised merchandise. These goods include the principal articles of merchandise produced in Kabul and exported to India, such as horses and fruits, and it is understood that the trade in cotton goods exported from India has also been taken in hand by the Amir. He has further prohibited the import of salt from India, and ordered that salt shall be imported only from Russian Turkistan.

In these circumstances it is natural that the goods which have been monopolised should so rise in price as to materially restrict the consumption, and that the same results should be brought about to a greater or less extent in all other goods which are worth trading in, for the general trader cannot be expected to compete with persons who are favoured with money advances and other privileges, and he withdraws from an unequal competition, leaving the articles in practically the same position as if they also had been monopolised.

The transit trade has already, it may be said, ceased to exist, for two reasons. Firstly, the transit duties imposed by the Amir are in effect prohibitive. Thus, for instance, the tax on tea has been recently increased three-fold, and now stands for each camel-load weighing $5\frac{1}{2}$ Indian maunds at Rs. 189-6-0, or say $6\frac{1}{2}$ annas per lb., which is roughly about 100 per cent. ad valorem. On all other goods passing in transit through Afghanistan similarly crushing dues are imposed. Even if no other duties were imposed on the passing of these goods into Russian territory, they would be sufficient, taking into account the cost of caravan conveyance from Peshawar to the Oxus, to destroy the trade. But they do not stand by themselves, the Russians having interferred to crush out whatever possible vitality might have been left in a trade subject to such exactions as the Afghan transit dues. The Russians have long desired to put an end to the importation via Persia and Afghanistan into Russian Asiatic territory of Indian goods or European goods imported from India, and at length the intention has been carried into effect by the establishment of a customs line to enforce the prohibitory regulations. The prohibition serves three objects: first, British and British-Indian goods are placed on a very unfavourable footing in competition with Russian goods; second, a considerable amount of traffic is secured for the trans-Caspian railway, over which the bulk of the import and export trade of the territory lying between the Oxus and the Caspian will in future be conveyed; third, the regulations will have the effect of giving an impetus to the development of the trade of the port of Batoum. These customs regulations, which came into operation in December 1894, may be summarised as follows :

1. Persian and Afghan goods may be imported into trans-Caspian territory and Bokhara on payment of a duty of 5 per cent. ad valorem.

2. The importation into those countries of European and Anglo-Indian goods is prohibited, with the exception of—heavy duties being levied on the articles of which importation is permitted.

On the other hand, simultaneously with the enforcement of these regulations, the port of Batoum was opened to British and British-Indian goods for Central Asia on payment of an import duty averaging about $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.

These arrangements have had the desired effect. The traders with Central Asia cannot compete in trans-Caspia and Bokhara with goods imported into those regions speedily and safely by sea and railway, and paying a relatively light duty when their goods have to bear the cost and risks of a tedious and difficult caravan journey and pay practically prohibitive duties. The trade has therefore been diverted, and a considerable proportion of the trade which has hitherto been shown as exported to Kabul will now be included in the accounts of the sea-borne trade. For instance, tea, as has been said above, is subject to Afghanistan transit dues amounting to $6\frac{3}{4}$ annas per lb., quite apart from any illegal dues that may be extorted in transit. On arrival in Russian territory it is subject to an import duty of nearly 15 annas per lb., making a total duty of Rs. $1\frac{2}{3}$ per lb. on tea which can be imported more cheaply, expeditiously, and safely via Batoum on payment of a duty of $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. ad valorem, or say from half an anna to one anna (one-thirtysecond to one-sixteenth of a rupee) per lb.

The causes above set out are the most potent factors in the decline of the trade with Kabul. The second of the two is not of particular importance to India, for after all it is in substance only the diversion of trade from one route to another, and it is perfectly possible that, unnecessarily violent as have been the means taken to effect the diversion, the greater cheapness and safety of the sea route may bring about a substantial increase of our trade with Russian trans-Caspian territory. The first factor, however, namely, the Amir's fiscal policy, is fatal to the continuance of trade. It must diminish consumption by imposing the most vexatious and unjust restrictions and by raising prices, and a diminished consumption must be followed by restricted production. Both imports and exports must decline alike until the régime is found too oppressive to be borne.

To these two causes of decline, which are permanent and one of which at least has been operating for a long time more or less effectively, a third cause may be added in the Waziristan and Chitral Relief expeditions to account, by the diversion of carriage from the work of trade, for some portion of the decline in the trade of the year. This, however, is a cause which can only operate for a short time.

The principal articles of our trade with Kabul in the last three years are these:—

While the trade with Kabul has been dwindling, the trade with Bajaur has been increasing with quite remarkable rapidity, the progress made being due, it is said, to the maintenance of peace and order among the tribes.

About half the imports last year consisted of ghi, and it is said that Bajaur ghi is superseding Kabul ghi because the latter has been found to be adulterated with fat, and is therefore objected to in Peshawar. The bulk of the exports is represented by cotton piece goods and yarns, and these have greatly increased.

It is probable that the record of trade with Bajaur in 1895-96 may present a pause in progress in consequence of the occupation of the valley by the Chitral Relief Force.

The trade with Kashmir has been subject to great fluctuations in the past. Drought, famine, pestilence, maladministration, and difficulty of communications, have all tended from time to time, separately or conjointly, to restrict the development of trade. Kashmir, however, is moving forward to civilisation; the railway connects Jamu with the Indian railway system, and a daily tongha service connects Srinagar with Rawalpindi; the administration has been substantially improved, the roads are being made more fit for traffic, the postal administration is in the hands of the Indian Postal Department, the valley is resorted to in increasing numbers every year by European visitors for the season, and it is the principal highway for the trade of India with Chinese Turkistan. All these circumstances have tended to expand trade, and it is probable that in the future a large development will be witnessed. Ghi, timber, and woollen goods are the principal imports; cotton piece goods and yarn, salt, sugar, tea, and metals the principal exports.

N. and N.-E. Frontier.

The trade with Thibet continues small, though there was a substantial increase in the imports and a smaller increase in the exports last year, which may perhaps be attributed to the working of the arrangements in connection with the trade mart at Yatung.

The trade with Nepal is far more considerable than the trade with any other country across the Indian frontiers, but it is a fluctuating trade, much of it (that which is carried on between the Terai and the adjacent districts) being very local in character, rising or falling with a good or bad season. Last year the trade was larger than in any of the preceding three years, though the increase above the trade of 1891-92 was but trifling. The conditions of interchange with this country have for many years remained unchanged, and to all appearance they will remain unchanged for long years to come. The Indian roads when they touch the British border degenerate into a track; there is no sign that railways will advance nearer the frontier than the point they have now reached or that they will be constructed in Nepal by the Darbar; the country is a sealed book to Europeans, who are not allowed to reside or travel in the country; and the authorities of the State impose great restrictions on the trade. As long as these conditions remain in existence the development of trade cannot be rapid. The imports are mainly rice, other grains, ghi, provisions, and oilseeds from the Terai.

E. Frontier.

Trade with Western China has again increased. The only important article of import is raw silk, and in this and manufactured silk there was a decline, the total value of the imports being somewhat smaller than in 1893-94, though more than double those of 1892-93. Exports, however, increased very largely, a considerable trade having been done in raw cotton and cotton piece goods and yarn.

The trade of Burma with Western China, Siam, and the other regions on the Eastern frontier amounted last year to the substantial figure of Rx. 1,636,399.

General.

The nature of the trade carried on across the frontiers will be understood from the subjoined list of the principal imports and exports and their values in 1893-94 and 1894-95 :—

SECTION III.—COASTING TRADE.

CHAPTER IX.

The total trade, imports and exports, merchandise and treasure, was in the last ten years :—

1885-86 - - -	Rx.	57,598,286	1890-91 - - -	Rx.	65,586,392
1886-87 - - -	-	56,165,363	1891-92 - - -	-	67,896,004

1889-90 - - -	-	59,211,043	1894-95 - - -	-	70,317,044

Taking the export value, as representing the actual value, the trade of the last five years compares thus in Rx. :—

20. Tea - - -	112,508	253,820	128,218	168,950	194,692

The heavy fall in raw cotton is explained by the deficiency of the crops which is commented upon elsewhere in this review. In manufactured cotton—yarn and woven goods—there was a large increase.

The trade in food-grains has declined after three years of activity, the result of deficient harvests in Bengal and Madras which required large supplies from Burma:

COASTING SHIPPING.

The following table gives the number and registered tonnage of the vessels engaged in the coasting trade during the last five years (000's omitted in tonnage):—

1894-95 - - -	9,697	10,243	2,788	200	144,289	2,544

It will be seen from this table that more than three-fourths of the tonnage engaged in the coasting trade is now steamer tonnage, which constitutes about 79 per cent. of both entries and clearances. Native craft are gradually dwindling in numbers and tonnage, but they are still numerous.
