from New York; a member of Congress from that state in 1795, serving until 1801, in which year he was chosen Mayor of New York City. Through the misconduct of a clerk Livingston became a public defaulter. At this period he went to New Orleans, and, meeting with great professional success, paid back every dollar he owed the government. He was the author of the Criminal Code for Louisiana; represented that state in Congress from 1823 to 1829; was United States Senator from 1829 to 1831; a member of Jackson's Cabinet from 1831 to 1833; and then minister to France until the close of 1835. He was the youngest brother of Chancellor Livingston	197
A TYPICAL CHARLESTON (S. C.) MANSION, THE GEORGE EVELEIGH HOUSE IN CHURCH STREET.—From Harper's Magazine , vol. cxxxi., after a drawing by Alice R. Huger-Smith	201
SAMUEL D. INGHAM.—From a lithograph. In 1829 President Jackson appointed him Secretary of the Treasury, but he resigned in 1831 on account of his objection to the "Kitchen Cabinet"	205

AMOS KENDALL.—From Harper's Magazine , vol. lxix. Kendall was Postmaster-General (1835-40) in Jackson's Administration, and with Francis P. Blair, the editor of The Globe , formed the famous "Kitchen Cabinet." These two men were frequently consulted by the President as confidential advisers. To avoid observation they were accustomed to enter the White House by a back door. On this account the opposition party, who believed the advice of these two men caused Jackson to fill nearly all the offices with Democrats, after turning out the incumbents, called them in derision the "Kitchen Cabinet"	213

WILLIAM J. DUANE.—From a lithograph. Secretary of the Treasury in 1833 and opposed to Jackson's action in the matter of the United States Bank. In consequence of this President Jackson dismissed him within four months of his appointment, naming in his stead Roger B. Taney .	225
ANDREW JACKSON.—From an engraving by G. Kruell after the lithograph by La Fosse; copyrighted by M. Knoedler & Co.	Facing p. 226
LEVI WOODBURY.—From an engraving by G. F. Storm after a drawing by J. B. Longacre. Levi Woodbury, chosen United States Senator in 1825 from New Hampshire, was instrumental in winning over New Hampshire from the Federalist to the Jackson interest, and he was received into the intimate counsels of President Jackson. He was editor of the New Hampshire Patriot, also one of the officers of a bank at Concord and knew what the branches of the United States Bank could do to dominate credit and control exchanges	230
BENJAMIN LUNDY.—From an engraving in the Print Collection, New York Public Library. Lundy was born in Hardwick, New Jersey, January 4, 1789, and became an abolitionist about 1815, from which time until his death, in 1839, he continued to travel about the country preaching and publishing journals and pamphlets against slavery. His work resulted in converting William Lloyd Garrison, who began the publication of the Liberator at Boston in 1831	234
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON.—From an engraving by H. W. Smith. Founder of the Liberator at Boston in 1831, a weekly newspaper and uncompromising opponent of slavery, which was discontinued in 1865, when the result for which he had devoted the best energies of his life had been effected by the Emancipation Proclamation of President Lincoln. Mr. Garrison founded, in 1832, the American Anti-Slavery Society, and was its president from that time until 1865	236
CALEB CUSHING.—From a photograph by Gardner, Washington, D. C. A colleague of J. Q. Adams in Congress, of which he was a member (1835-1843). He advocated the policy of war with Mexico. In 1853 he served as Attorney-General in President Pierce's Cabinet, and in 1860 he was president of the Democratic convention at Charleston	241

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.—From an engraving after a painting by A. B. Durand. (See other portraits of Mr. Adams, page 84 and facing page 155, vol. vi., of this work.) He was President of the United States from 1825 to 1829. In 1831 he was elected to Congress and continued there until his death in 1848. While in Congress he was champion of the Right of Petition, and a steadfast opponent of the southern opposition to petitions for the abolition of slavery	249
ALEXANDER, LORD ASHBURTON.—From a painting by Sir T. Laurence after the engraving by A. R. Artlett	259
MARSHFIELD, THE RESIDENCE OF DANIEL WEBSTER, WHERE HE DIED OCTOBER 24, 1852.—From Harper's Magazine , vol. vi.	263
DANIEL WEBSTER IN HIS LATER YEARS.—From an engraving by H. W. Smith after the painting by J. Ames	267
STEPHEN FULLER AUSTIN, STYLED THE FOUNDER OF TEXAS, 1823.—He was the son of Moses Austin, of Connecticut, who in 1820 received from Mexico permission to colonize 300 families in the province of Texas. Moses Austin died June 10, 1821, and his son, Stephen, carried out his father's plan and introduced, in 1821, the first Anglo-American colonists in Texas. Later, in 1835, he became commander-in-chief of the Texan army in the revolution against Mexico, and was appointed commissioner to the United States. In 1836 he was a candidate for President of the new republic, but was defeated by Sam Houston, who appointed him Secretary of State	272
SAM HOUSTON.—After an engraving by J. C. Buttre from a daguerreotype by B. P. Page. In April, 1836, General Houston attacked Santa Anna's much larger force with his small band of Texans, captured the Mexican President and forced him to acknowledge the independence of Texas. Houston then got into diplomatic relations with the United States, which, though acknowledging in 1837 the independence of Texas, did not entertain the Texan proposals for annexation. For another portrait of Houston see page 69, vol. vii., of this work Facing p.	274
THE CITY OF AUSTIN, TEXAS, IN 1840.—From a lithograph . .	277

1836.—From W. W. Dexter's Texas, Imperial State of America	282
OLD CAPITOL AT HOUSTON, TEXAS, 1837.—From W. W. Dexter's Texas, Imperial State of America . The first Capitol of Coahuila and Texas was at Saltillo in 1824, and then moved to Monclova. The first Capitol of the Republic of Texas was at Columbia, 1836; moved to Houston, 1837; moved to Austin, 1839; moved to Washington temporarily in 1842, then to Houston, and finally to Austin again	284
OLD CAPITOL AT AUSTIN. BURNED NOVEMBER, 1881.—From W. W. Dexter's Texas, Imperial State of America	286
MERIWETHER LEWIS.—From an engraving by S. Hollyer after the painting by Charles Wilson Peale. Both the United States and Great Britain laid claim to the whole of Oregon. The American claim was based on the discovery of the Columbia River by Captain Grey in 1792, and on the expedition of Lewis and Clark, who (1804-06) explored the country from the Mississippi to the mouth of the Columbia. By this expedition the United States was enabled to connect the claim to Oregon with the purchase of Louisiana	290
BLANK CERTIFICATE OF THE AMERICAN SOCIETY FOR ENCOURAGING THE SETTLEMENT OF THE OREGON TERRITORY.—From an original broadside, 1831, in the New York Public Library	291
WILLIAM CLARK.—From an engraving by S. Hollyer after the painting by Charles Wilson Peale. Clark was appointed a member of Captain Lewis's expedition to the mouth of the Columbia River in 1804-06. The success of the expedition was largely due to Clark's knowledge of Indian habits. In 1813-21 he was governor of the Mississippi Territory, and in 1822-38 Superintendent of Indian Affairs at St. Louis	292
NATHANIEL J. WYETH.—From Harper's Magazine , vol. lxxxv. Nathaniel J. Wyeth organized a movement for the colonization of Oregon, and between 1831 and 1836 led two expeditions across the American continent	294
ROBERT J. WALKER.—From Harper's Magazine , vol. xlv. Mr. Walker was Secretary of the Treasury during the Administration of President Polk, 1845-49. In 1857-58 he was governor of Kansas Territory, but resigned, being "unwilling," he said, "to aid in forcing slavery on that Territory by fraud and forgery"	298

WALL STREET, NEW YORK, ABOUT 1847.—From Harper's Magazine , vol. cxvii.	304
DAVID WILMOT.—From Harper's Weekly . He was representative in Congress from Pennsylvania (1845-1851). On August 8, 1846, while a bill authorizing the President of the United States to expend $3,000,000 in negotiations for peace with Mexico, by purchase of territory, was pending in Congress, Wilmot moved to add an amendment "That, as an express and fundamental condition to the acquisition of any territory from the republic of Mexico by the United States, neither slavery nor involuntary servitude shall ever exist in any part of said territory." This proviso was adopted by the House, but it failed of final action. It was the basis of the organization known as the Free-Soil party in 1848, and of the Republican party in 1856	308
WINFIELD SCOTT AT THE AGE OF 37.—From an engraving by A. H. Ritchie after a painting by C. Ingham. Scott was commander-in-chief in the Mexican War, 1846-48 . . .	311
SUTTER'S FORT, COLOMA, CALIFORNIA, AS IT WAS IN 1848.—On January 24, 1848, ten days before the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo was signed, gold was discovered by James W. Marshall in the earth taken from Colonel Sutter's mill-race. Early in the Mexican War General Frémont hoisted the American flag over Sutter's Fort, and so took the first step towards making California a State of the Union. The illustration here shown is from Gertrude Atherton's California . Taken from California Illustrated , 1853	314
SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, 1850.—From Gertrude Atherton's California . Taken from The United States , illustrated, published by H. J. Meyer. In 1839 Captain John A. Sutter established a fort, now included within the city limits, but the city was not laid out until 1848, after the discovery of gold. The thousands of gold-seekers who arrived in the country came up the river to Sacramento in steamers and sailing-vessels, and from that point proceeded by land to the mines	317
SAN FRANCISCO.—This is an authenticated picture of the city as it appeared in 1846-47. From Gertrude Atherton's California . Reproduced from an old print . . .	319

HOWELL COBB.—From an engraving by T. Doney made for the Democrat Review. Howell Cobb was a member of Congress from Georgia, 1843-51, Speaker of the Thirty-first Congress (1849), being chosen over Robert C. Winthrop, of Massachusetts. He was Governor of Georgia from 1851 to 1853; again returned to Congress in 1855, Secretary of the Treasury under President Buchanan (1857 to 1860). He supported the Confederate Cause in 1860-61, and was chosen president of the convention at Montgomery, Alabama, that organized the Confederate government, February 4, 1861. At the close of the war he opposed the reconstructive measures of the national government	331
JOHN PARKER HALE.—From Harper's Weekly, April 24, 1858. Mr. Hale was United States Senator from New Hampshire, 1847-53, and counsel, in 1851, in the trials which resulted from the forcible rescue of the fugitive slave, Shadrach, from the custody of the United States Marshal in Boston. In 1852 he was nominated by the Free Soil party for President of the United States, with George W. Julian for Vice-President, and received 157,680 votes	334
