THE ART OF LETTERS

By ROBERT LYND

Author of "Old and New Masters"

Demy 8vo, cloth, 15/- net

Mr. Lynd's new volume is as varied in its contents as his "Old and New Masters," which received high critical appreciation, and which has run into three impressions. In "The Art of Letters" Mr. Lynd writes of the labour of authorship, of the theory of poetry, of the critic as destroyer, of the personality of William Morris, of Oscar Wilde, of George Meredith, of Tennyson, of the politics of Swift and Shakespeare, of Pepys, Bunyan, Campion, Donne, and many others. A critic has said of Mr. Lynd that "he is never displaying himself or his own power over words (though his wit is delightful and his power over words consummate); he is interpreting his subject, revealing to us the mind of the author whose work he criticizes."
