* This table is given only for 1887-88, all the others being for a series of five years. In the quinquennial Statements (of which the last was issued three years ago) there are added tables of the trade with Countries for the five latest years, with particulars of Articles under each Country.

STATEMENT
OF THE
TRADE OF BRITISH INDIA
For 1887-88.

INTRODUCTION.

[NOTE.—All values are given in this volume as “tens of rupees,” a denomination which, while not subject to the charge of inaccuracy attaching to that of “£ sterling,” calculated at the nominal exchange of 2s. to the rupee, nevertheless enables comparisons to be made with the figures in any past volumes in which that inaccurate expression of values was employed. The sign Rx. is used to signify tens of rupees.]

The following statement gives a comparative view for five years of the foreign sea-borne trade of British India:—

The imports of merchandise exceeded those of the preceding year by Rx. 3,723,351, and the exports by Rx. 2,042,802. In both years the rise of imports was very much greater than that of exports.

Referring to the table on page 20 of the last "Statement," it will be observed that it was during the last four months of the financial year that the expansion mainly took place.

The principal items of private merchandise (not including re-exports) in which increases or decreases of value appear are enumerated below:—

* In the Indian Trade Accounts, during recent years, the following classification of articles, based generally on that adopted by the Board of Trade, has been employed, viz. :—

I.—Animals, living.

II.—Articles of food and drink.

III.—Metals, and manufactures of.

IV.—Chemicals, drugs, medicines and narcotics, and dyeing and tanning materials.

V.—Oils.

VI.—Raw materials and unmanufactured articles.

VII.—Articles manufactured and partly manufactured.

In the above statement, however, Nos. III., IV., and V. are included under "Manufactured and partly manufactured." The order in which the articles are arranged under each class is that of the value of the articles, and materials for them, are placed together first.

^{ports.} Sugar.—It was explained in last year's report that an effect of the operation of the system of bounties in Europe was to throw upon the Indian markets a great quantity of cane sugar, unable to compete with the artificially stimulated beet sugar. In 1887-88 the import increased again by 58,924 cwt.

Liquors.—Of malt liquor there was the largest import ever known, amounting to 2,138,518 gallons, the value being about 25 per cent. in excess of that of the previous year. So far the competition of Indian-brewed beer has had no effect on the trade in beer imported for general consumption, though it has very largely reduced the importations by the State, the beer brewed in India being now extensively issued to the troops. At one time it seemed that imported beer was losing its hold on the market, but the light German and Austrian beers were opportunely introduced, and light English ales were then specially brewed to compete with them, and the result is that the importation of beer is extremely large.

The quantity of spirits imported, 1,084,487 gallons, was only about 2 per cent. in excess of that of the previous year, while the value was a great deal less, the fall being mainly in brandy, of which the importation continues to decline, while what is imported is largely very cheap and unwholesome spirit. Of whisky, on the other hand, the consumption increases, the quantity in the year under report being larger than that of brandy. Gin keeps up steadily, the largest proportion of it going to Burma.

The value of the trade in liquors of all kinds was about 7 per cent. more than it was five years previously, a small advance considering the great increase in European population, who form the bulk of the consumption.

Provisions.—The imports of flour are not on the increase; the trade of the year exhibits a considerable decline, which may be attributed to the recent improvements and extensions in the local manufacture of flour.

The importation of salted fish must of necessity, Mr. O'Connor thinks, be stimulated by the increase of the salt tax effected in January 1888, unless the effect of the increase is counteracted either by the extension of the concession of free salt to Indian fish-curers or by the imposition of a countervailing import duty on salted fish. The trade of 1887-88 was more than 8½ per cent. in excess of that of the previous year. During the current year the augmentation continues on a very considerable scale. This increase is largely in imports from the Straits into Burma, where the tax was raised from three annas to one rupee per maund. Salted fish is used to a great extent as a substitute for salt by rice-eating people.

Salt.—There was an increase of over 7,000 tons in the imports. About 15,000 tons came from the new salt works at Aden referred to in the last report.

Spices.—An increase of imports and decrease of exports followed a decrease of imports and increase of exports. The clove trade almost doubled; the crop having been very abundant in Zanzibar. Pepper was imported to the extent of over 2½ million lbs., although in the same year India exported over 7 million lbs. of pepper of her own production; the explanation probably is that freight from the Straits to Bengal was as cheap as from Southern India.

Tea.—A decided falling off occurred in imported tea, which, however, amounted still to the large quantity of 3,623,872 lbs. Mr. O'Connor urges, as he has done before, that Indian tea-planters should endeavour themselves to meet this large internal demand.

Silk.—Imports of both raw and manufactured silk increased. The time seems to be approaching when India will cease to export, and will be dependent on foreign countries for her own supplies. The trade was stimulated by the demand for Burma consequent on the comparative restoration of order in the province. The imports are mainly from China to Bombay, and from the Straits to Burma; and most of what is imported into Bombay is woven into the shapes and designs fancied by the Burmese, and sent to Burma.

Cotton Manufactures.—The overstocking of the markets in the preceding year was naturally followed by a falling off, which would have been greater than it was but for the exceptional activity of the demand in Burma. Under twist and yarn there was in fact an increase of more than 2½ million lbs., of which over 2 million lbs. were in the imports into Burma. The remainder of the increase was in Bengal; and on this the Collector of Customs makes the following remarks:—

“The figures of the total imports of twist and yarn, including grey and white and coloured, show an increase in both quantity and value over last year; for though in 40s., which comprise more than half the imports of grey and white twist, there was a slight falling off, there was an increase in some of the other counts—more especially in numbers higher than 40s. The trade in these goods during the year has been satisfactory to importers and dealers; prices remained at a remunerative level, and notwithstanding the increase in the imports, stocks at the close of 1887 were considerably lower than for the corresponding period of 1886. The year's trade shows that the position of foreign imported twist and yarn has been well maintained in the market notwithstanding the keen competition of the Indian-made article. The prosperity of the Indian weaving mills has no doubt contributed to this. It is noticeable how the supplies of grey and white twist from India are going up; for the three previous years the English and Indian supplies were about equal, but for the past year we have received 7,093,835 lbs. only from England, against 8,411,420 lbs. from India.”

Coal.—The bulk of the imports is into Bombay and Burma. Both provinces took an unusually large quantity, Burma as a consequence of the great enlargement of river steamer traffic, and Bombay because of the activity in the cotton mills which marked the year.

Except in Madras, Bombay, and Burma, the railways of India now use native coal where wood is not cheaper and more convenient.

Metals.—While the quantity of copper declined by about 13½ per cent., the value was higher than that of the preceding year. These features were the consequence of the operations of the French Copper Syndicate. As another consequence of the speculative increase in prices, the re-exports of copper were abnormally large, about 47,000 cwt. having been shipped, of which more than 39,000 cwt. went to England, as against an average export in the four preceding years of 11,200 cwt. annually.

Imports of iron increased nearly 32 per cent., the quantity imported having risen from 164,020 tons to 216,079 tons. There has been a large development of trade in galvanised iron, now largely used in the plains for roofing sheds and workshops, and in the hills for residences. In piping and tubing the constant progress of waterworks and drainage in municipal areas has brought about a great increase of imports. Steel also steadily and largely increases; much of it is of poor quality, used for hooping instead of iron.

The trade in lead, which is most largely imported in the form of sheets for the lining of tea chests, expands with the expansion of tea exports. About 72,000 cwt. of sheet lead for this purpose were imported during the year, the total imports of all descriptions of lead being about 112,000 cwt.

Hardware and Cutlery.—The value of the imports of the innumerable varieties of goods classified under this general designation has reached the large sum of Rs. 1,093,939, the trade having no doubt been greatly stimulated by the fall in prices, or perhaps, to speak more accurately, by the substitution of cheap and inferior articles for the more highly priced though more lasting qualities which were imported some years ago. The fall in the gold price of silver has been beneficial to the electro-plating industry, and the cheapening of the processes of making steel and iron has enabled manufacturers to put large quantities of cutlery and other goods made of steel and iron on the Indian markets at very cheap rates. The trade in such goods from Austria and Belgium has increased in recent years, and in this connexion it may be remarked that continental manufacturers place on the Indian market a mass of cheap and inferior goods fraudulently marked with English trade marks. There is a prospect of such practices being stopped now that a Merchandise Marks Act has been passed for India.

Machinery and Millwork.—The improvement under this head was maintained. Allowance being made for the fall in prices, it is evident that there has been a great revival of the demand for industrial appliances, especially for the cotton manufacturing industry.

Oils.—Mineral oils form the bulk of the imports. The quantity declined from 31,949,633 gallons to 31,421,559 gallons, but the value rose from Rs. 1,259,958 to Rs. 1,274,476.

Whether the further progress of the trade was temporarily interrupted by higher prices, or by the imposition of a duty of half an anna a gallon in January, is not quite clear. But the use of the oil has become so common, and its advantages, when compared with the smoky and dull light given by the vegetable oils which kerosene is superseding, are so much appreciated, that it is improbable that the trade will not further advance; indeed, it has so advanced during the current year (1888-89). Petroleum in abundance has been found in Afghanistan, but its quality makes it unfit for use except as fuel for locomotives. The petroleum of Upper Burma is used to, but a small extent for illumination, being chiefly employed for machinery. The wells of Arakan are not now worked, except in a very small way by natives, the European company formed for their working having failed. There are hopes of finding large quantities of oil in the Rawal Pindi district, where the oil is now used in a small way for making gas by the military authorities, and a concession of mining rights has recently been given on very liberal terms to an association of capitalists who propose to seek for oil in that district. But, so far, it may be said that India is entirely dependent on its imports for mineral oil for illumination. Until recently the United States had the practical monopoly, but Russian oil is now making a considerable figure in the trade, as will be seen below:—

	From United States.		From Russia.

It is worthy of note that India imported about 282,000 gallons of linseed oil from England, and about 518,000 gallons of groundnut oil from the Straits, although the country produces the raw material in great quantities and possesses every facility for the manufacture of the oil.

Clocks and Watches.—The number rose from 96,052 to 125,309, much the largest yet recorded. The number increased much more largely than the value, a result of the introduction of the Waterbury and other cheap watches to the people of India.

Corals.—These are mainly imported into Calcutta, which indeed is now the only real market for them in the world. Coral beads worn as a necklace by men are much esteemed in the North-West Provinces, Rajpootana, and Nepal. The coral fishery at Naples is stated to be in a declining condition, only about 100 boats being employed in it as compared with 500 when the trade was flourishing.

Paper.—The value of the trade rose from Rx. 316,677 to Rx. 418,307, the increase being common to all kinds. Cheap German and Austrian papers are being vigorously pushed in the Indian market. Belgian paper is also being pushed, the imports being mainly cheap writing papers and envelopes. At the same time that this development of the import trade has occurred there has been substantial and satisfactory progress in the Indian paper-making industry as regards both quantity and quality. The mills now make very good paper indeed, and their supplies to Government offices extend over a wide range of qualities. Projects for new mills are talked of. It is remarkable, however, that no real attempt has as yet been made to make railway passenger tickets. Last year there were about 95½ million passengers on the Indian railways, and probably there will be 100 millions this year. It would seem that the making of tickets for these constantly increasing numbers is an industry which would occupy a large mill, in the manner most suitable for machine work, on an article of unvarying quality and great quantity.

Matches.—These exhibit a further increase over that of 1886-87. This trade will certainly attain to considerable dimensions in the near future.

Umbrellas.—The number imported was 4,683,185, a large increase on the trade of the preceding year. Of this number 3,218,441 were imported from England and 1,460,316 were paper umbrellas (kettisals) from China and the Straits.

Rice.—There was a material recovery from the depression of the preceding year, the figures for husked rice having been—

Exports from Burma were smaller than in the preceding year, prices having been kept on a level too high for the markets of the Straits Settlements by a continued demand for Upper Burma, where the harvests were deficient. The slightly restricted export from Burma was, however, more than compensated by a very large increase in the exports from Bengal, where the rice harvest was a good one.

The following comparative statistics for a series of years will be interesting in connexion with the Indian export rice trade:—

Dividing into two equal periods the last ten years, the result of net annual increases or decreases of sea-borne exports comes out thus :—

It will be seen that in 1887-88, although the quantity of rice sent from Burma, by sea, to foreign countries fell off, the total exports from Burma were greater than in the preceding year.

Wheat.—The following table showing exports of wheat from different parts of India dates from the year during which the removal of the export duty took effect (January 4, 1873) :—

The sudden expansion of the trade consequent on the removal of the duty, and the start taken by Bombay from 1880-81 in the race with Bengal, are remarkable features in this statement.

In the last year of the series there was a very great decline, owing to the poor harvests.

The price of wheat in England was lower in 1887-88 than in 1886-87 by about 17d. a quarter, but the lower average rate of exchange and freights more than compensated for the fall in price, and there would have been a very active export if there had been any large surplus quantity of wheat to export. The spring harvests of 1885 and 1886 in the Punjab and the North-West Provinces were, however, on the whole very bad, and stocks ran so low and prices so high that there was really no room for business.

The following remarks on the Indian wheat trade were made by Sir J. Caird at a meeting of the Society of Arts in April last :—

“ Whenever there is a considerable surplus of food grains in India it is profitable to export wheat. But when there is little or no surplus, wheat cannot be sent away, as it is wanted for home consumption at a higher price than can be given for export. And, though exchange and freights were lower in 1887 than in 1886, the export rapidly diminished. Prices of wheat in India rise and fall not so much from scarcity or abundance of wheat alone, but in unison with the price of the other principal food grains. The retail price of wheat of Northern India in January last was one-half dearer than in 1885. Such a rise of price, when caused by scarcity in India itself, at “ once puts a stay on export. The wheat trade is thus found to be a safety valve, for when the prospect of a material diminution in the food grains leads to a serious rise in local prices, relief is immediately afforded by the profitable retention in the country of wheat grown for export. I have on several occasions expressed the opinion that India, both from its large population, which was every year rapidly increasing, and from its comparatively limited extent of further available wheat land, could not be depended on for large and continuous supplies of wheat to Europe.”

The imports of wheat and wheatmeal and flour into the United Kingdom in the last four years have been as follows:—

While imports from India fell off largely in the two last years, the enormous advance in supplies from Russia in 1888, and a more moderate one in those from America in the preceding year, will be noticed.

Tea.—The increase in the year before of nearly 10 million lbs. was followed by another of nearly 9 millions.

In another year or two, Mr. O’Conor observes, England will probably import as much Indian as China tea, and thereafter Indian tea will gradually oust Chinese tea from the English market. There still remain the Australian and American markets, the former with an average consumption of about 20 million lbs. at least, and the latter 70 million lbs. In other words, there is an outlet for Indian tea, if properly worked, which will double the Indian tea trade even without any expansion in the English market.

This expansion of the exports of Indian tea at the expense of China tea will be very apparent from the following statement of the imports of the United Kingdom, for a series of calendar years, from the principle sources of her supply:—

In connexion with this subject the subjoined article, which appeared in the “Times” early in 1888, is of interest:—

“ A special committee of experts of the Shanghai Chamber of Commerce has reported, on the invitation of the Chinese Government, on the decline in the exports

“ of China tea. Between 1881 and 1886 this export decreased by about 24,000,000 lbs., while that of Indian and Ceylon teas increased by nearly 35,000,000, and the past year is expected to show a still more striking disparity. The report recommends the despatch of intelligent and practical Chinese to India and Ceylon to study the methods of cultivation and preparation there, and the establishment, at government cost, of one or two factories in tea-producing districts with modern machinery, to teach Chinese how their successful competitors beat them. The present primitive methods of preparation in China can only be carried on under the most favourable climatic conditions, and wholly fail under the influence of any untoward circumstances. Hence the inequalities in the produce of different seasons. The points requiring the greatest change are firing and fermentation. The China producers fire the teas more rapidly and negligently than in former years, and, in consequence, in a few months they become vapid and flavourless. Fermentation also is interrupted, and it is to proper fermentation that Indian teas owe the strong rich liquor for which they depend on their reputation. What is wanted in China is a strong tea, full of aroma, and so perfectly cured that it will retain its qualities for a long time. The system of attempting to make large quantities of tea ready for export under one mark (‘ chop ’), and purporting to be of the same quality, is one of the main causes of deterioration. It means delay in collecting the quantity, and consequent staleness and deterioration in the leaf. In India the ‘ chops ’ are small, and consist of the pickings of a single day, when the leaves are fresh and retain all their best qualities. Frequently inferior qualities are mixed, and although these may escape detection in China, the voyage to Europe brings out the coarse flavour. Japan is stealing away the green tea trade from China, as India and Ceylon are taking that in black tea. The transit dues in China itself heavily handicap Chinese tea in competition. Finally, the report recommends that foreigners be allowed to set up tea-curing establishments in the interior, where modern machinery can be used and every care taken in the preparation, so that the article may no longer deserve the reproach of being ‘ perspiration-saturated stuff.’ From this and other reports on the subject (which is of immense importance to the trade of China) which have been summarised in these columns it will perhaps be gathered that Indian and Ceylon teas are beating those from China simply because they are in every way better—better cultivated, better collected, better cured, better packed, more honestly sold, and cheaper.”

Coffee.—With a decline in the quantity the value of the exports nevertheless rose, in consequence of a great rise in price, caused partly by failure of the Brazilian crop and partly by speculation.

Cotton.—The exports of raw cotton were slightly less than in the preceding year, but the value was greater.

Of the total quantity, 5,374,542 cwt., the exports to England amounted to 2,139,698 cwt., being not quite 40 per cent. of the whole. Only about a third of this is consumed in England, however, quite two-thirds being re-exported to the Continent. The level of price for cotton has fallen so low that many use cloth now made from the finer American or Egyptian cotton who used cloth made from the coarser Indian cotton 10 or 15 years ago. The Lancashire mills are, moreover, not nearly so extensively employed on the manufacture of the coarser kinds of goods for the Indian markets as they were before the Bombay manufactures took their present development. Hence their exports of goods to India are largely of the finer kinds, in which the Bombay mills do not compete as yet to any great extent, and their consumption of Indian cotton has proportionately declined. Our cotton is now most largely used in India itself, on the European Continent where it is manufactured into blouses and other garments for the peasantry and artisans, and to a smaller extent in China for the same purpose and for wadding.

The steady enlargement of the trade with China in Indian cotton manufactures will be seen by reference to the table on page 19.

The chief outlet for the woven goods of the mills is in India itself, and it will no doubt continue to be the chief outlet, for mill-woven goods are surely and rapidly superseding the hand-loom manufactures of the country. For yarn on the other hand the markets of China and Japan offer an extensive field for the Indian spinner, though he may presently find Japan closed against him, for that enterprising people has already about 300,000 spindles at work in steam mills, and the industry will be greatly developed within a few years. But the Bombay spinner will probably continue to hold the field in China, and he will also presently acquire other extensive markets in the other countries of Southern Asia and in Eastern Africa. As regards the market in China the following extract from the Report on the trade of China for 1887 published by the Imperial Maritime Customs is interesting :—

“ The reports of some of the Commissioners of Customs, as well in the north as in the south of China, make special reference to this commodity to point out that the yarn from Bombay is gradually taking the place of that from Manchester in the markets of China, and the average opinions of the dealers in the yarns, as expressed in these reports, gathered in from widely distant places, is that Bombay yarn is a better wearing article when woven into cloth than is Manchester yarn. India, at length, is sending to China a staple article of commerce mutually beneficial to both nations.”

While the bulk of the trade in yarn is still with China and Japan, the greater part of the trade in piece goods is carried on with the eastern coast of Africa (partly through Aden as an entrepôt) and with Ceylon and the Straits. A good deal of the piece goods trade consists of dyed and printed cloth exported from Madras, while the largest part of the exports of yarn is from Bombay.

The following table shows the progress of the cotton spinning and weaving industry in India since 1876 :—

Silk.—This trade, although there was a slight improvement in the year under review, is decaying steadily, and there seems to be little hope of its revival and restoration to the position it occupied half a century ago. Efforts are being made in Bengal to eradicate the silkworm disease after the system of M. Pasteur, which has produced successful results in France and Italy. If these attempts succeed, the Bengal silk industry may recover. There is also the possibility of an extensive trade in the wild silks, but there are obstacles to the development of this which were mentioned in last year's report. At present the export of wild silk represents about 38 per cent. of the total exports. The cocoons exported are nearly all those of wild worms.

Seeds.—The trade in the principal kinds of oilseeds was as follows in the last three years :—

	1885-86.	1886-87.	1887-88.
	Cwt.	Cwt.	Cwt.
Castor - - -	670,537	610,898	720,951
Earthnuts - -	656,670	945,895	1,261,637
Linseed - - -	9,510,139	8,656,933	8,422,703
Poppy - - -	695,097	612,654	456,308

Til or jinjili -	1,759,343	2,114,484	2,747,270

Linseed and rapeseed both did badly in the year. These seeds are most largely grown in the North-West Provinces and the Punjab, and the failure of the winter rains which lessened the field of wheat also lessened the yield of these seeds. The trade in poppy seed was also very bad. Tilseed, castor seed, and earthnuts, on the other hand, were exported in largely increased quantities. The trade in Mowra seed was doubled, and it may be hoped that it will permanently keep a place as an article of export. There was an extraordinarily large shipment of fenugreek seed to Italy from Madras, the reason of which is not explained.

Of the total export of 16 million cwt. of seeds, about $8\frac{1}{2}$ million were destined for the European Continent, $6\frac{1}{2}$ million for England, and most of the remainder (almost all linseed) for the United States.

It must be mentioned that the competition of the Argentine Republic with India in the supply of linseed to England is becoming active. Last year there were imported into England 268,000 quarters of linseed from South America, of which 244,000 quarters came from the Argentine Republic. The imports from Russia were also much larger than for the last four years, amounting to about 626,000 quarters.

Jute.—The jute crop was a very good one, and exports were on a considerable scale. The same was the case with goods made of jute, the expansion of the year being mainly due to extensive shipments to Australia. After some years of drought there, and consequent trade depression, there was a good wheat harvest, and a successful sheep-shearing; hence wheat and wool were exported in large quantities, and there was an active demand for bags and packs.

Hides and Skins.—The trade in raw hides and skins again fell off, but there was an advance in those dressed or tanned. The Madras tanneries have made good progress; of the total value of exports, Rx. 2,526,666, those from Madras ports amounted to Rx. 2,068,388.

Saltpetre.—The trade of the year was lower than in 1886–87 or in the six years preceding. It is exposed to great competition from nitrate of soda, and the restrictions to which the trade is necessarily subject in India for the protection of the salt revenue no doubt make competition more difficult with an article not subject to similar restrictions.

Indigo.—There was some recovery in the value of exports, but no indication of progress in this branch of trade.

Cinchona Bark.—There was an advance on the trade of 1886–87, the quantity exported having risen from 1,286,900 lbs. to 1,449,313 lbs., accompanied, however, by a largely reduced value, the result of a fall in prices. Nearly the whole of the export is from Madras, the bark produced in Bengal (at least in the Government plantations) being manufactured there for consumption in India.

Government stores.

The value of these transactions was less than in 1886–87 by about 13 per cent.

Railway material, which constitutes nearly half of the whole imports, declined by about Rx. 644,000, and there was also a material decline in imports of arms, ammunition, and military stores.

There was an increase in the imports of coal, drugs, and medicines, boots and shoes, machinery, metals, iron, paper, parts of ships, and telegraph materials, a substantial part of the increase being due to the requirements of the recently annexed province of Upper Burma.

Treasure.

The imports of gold during the year were a little larger than they had been in either of the two preceding years, though still much below the average of former years. The imports of silver were also much larger than in the preceding year and much in excess of the average.

The following were the net imports of gold and silver respectively during the past seven years :—

Not including some trifling realisations on "imports by post, &c." the gross amounts realised as duties on imports from 1882-83 (from which year duties on nearly all articles of trade were abolished), and as duties on exports, are embraced in the following statement:—

Petroleum was added to the list of dutiable imports from 10th February 1888. The increase under liquors is accounted for by the raising of the duty on spirits from 14th January 1887.

The increase in the foreign import trade of Burma was very remarkable (from Rx. 3,710,054 to Rx. 5,689,542). The trade of 1883-84 was the largest previously on record. It fell off after the annexation and the troubles and disturbances which ensued, but in 1887-88 the imports reached an unprecedented figure. If tranquillity can be ensured, the trade of Burma must continue to expand from year to year with the development of railways and other easy means of communication reaching throughout the country and towards the markets of South-Western China.

United Kingdom.—The trade with the United Kingdom stands compared with that of former years as follows:—

Under imports there, was a large fall, amounting to more than $8\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. in cotton goods, the result of previous overstocking; but the trade in some of the other great staple imports from England (apparel, coal, hardware and cutlery, railway material, machinery and millwork, silks and woollens) increased materially, and consequently the total value of all imports exhibits an increase of a little under 5 per cent.

Exports of Indian produce to England have been practically stationary for the last four years. An increase of nearly 33 per cent. in re-exports was due almost entirely to speculative action in copper. Prior to 1887-88, as might be expected, copper was an import from the United Kingdom, not an export, but during that year, in consequence of the inflation in the price of the metal, 39,206 cwt. of copper were reshipped to England for sale there.

China.—The following statement combines in one the trade with Hong Kong and with the Treaty Ports:—

Three statistical tables will now be given with the object of presenting clearly to view the great features of the trade with China. In the first, China's trade with India is compared with her trade with the United Kingdom for three years. The second table is an epitome of the first, the four chief staples being given separately, and the trade with the United Kingdom and with India being shown in one. The third table exhibits for several years past the exports to China from the United Kingdom and from India respectively of opium and of cotton goods.

(In the case of the exports from India in the above table the period embraced is really the financial year.)

It will be seen from the first of the above tables that the imports and exports of China to and from the United Kingdom roughly balance one another. Taking the United Kingdom and India together, the average annual excess for the three years of exports over imports was 10,817,342*l.*, while, taking India alone, it was 10,909,527*l.*

The year 1887 having been the first in which the new arrangements under the Chefoo Convention took effect, the whole of the imports of opium into China were for the first time taken cognizance of and recorded by the Foreign Customs. The Statistical Secretary at Shanghai says that in the northern ports there is a concurrence of opinion that the taste for foreign opium is languishing, preference being given to that produced in Manchuria and some provinces of China proper.

The decline in value of exports of opium to China is to some extent set off by the steady annual increase in exports of cotton goods from India. From the reports of Customs Commissioners in China it appears that yarn from Bombay is gradually taking the place of that from Manchester, being found to be a better wearing article when woven into cloth.

France.—Imports were relatively considerable, chiefly as the result of an active trade in coloured cotton goods, which nearly doubled in quantity and value. Clocks and watches, brandy and wines, also gave increased values, while silk goods and apparel rather declined. The establishment of a regular service by the Messageries Maritimes with Bombay will probably give a stimulus to the import trade.

Most of the staple exports to France shared in the general decline of the trade. Coffee, cotton, hides and skins, jute, lac, cocoanut oil, oilseeds, pepper, all fell away more or less materially. The only exceptions are indigo, raw silk, and horns. Wheat slightly increased in value as the result of the higher prices in India, but the quantity was smaller.

Italy.—On both sides there was a decline in this trade. The import trade comprises a great variety of articles, of which corals are much the most important. These, as well as glass beads and false pearls (another prominent item), show diminished values.

As with the other continental countries, cotton is about the most important staple of the export trade. The quantity exported last year was smaller, but the value a little larger, than in the preceding year, prices having risen in Bombay. The export of wheat fell from 5,212,305 cwt. to 3,073,764 cwt. The extent of the wheat trade depends entirely upon price; with good crops in India, Italy will always take a considerable supply, but the crops were not good, while South Russia had the most abundant wheat harvest known for years. The hide trade also fell off, as did the trade in raw silk, while the export of jute was comparatively very large.

Austria.—The trade with Austria in 1887-88 showed further improvement on the great advance of the preceding year. The total imports and exports (Indian goods) for three years were in value:—

—		Imports.	Exports.
		Rx.	Rx.
1875-76	- - -	451,885	2,005,357
1876-77	- - -	723,864	2,634,303
1877-78	- - -	770,933	2,722,048

Some proportion of the imported goods must be of Italian and German origin, but apart from those it is clear that Austrian imports to India are being pushed with some energy. The maintenance of the subsidised line of the Austro-Hungarian Lloyd's steamers as a regular service between Trieste and Bombay has much to do with the development of the trade. Exports of Indian goods to Austria have not increased at all as fast proportionately, but they are greatly in excess of the imports. They consist mainly of cotton, indigo, hides and skins, and jute.

Belgium.—While imports increased exports fell off. A large decrease in wheat, and a smaller one in cotton, account for the decline.

Germany.—The direct trade with Germany is still small, much of it being carried on through England, but it is increasing with speed. Among the principal imports is salt, brought to Burman ports, whence is shipped the rice so extensively used for distillation in North Germany. India received 23,000 tons of salt from Germany during the year, a much smaller import than in the preceding year, but that year's imports were unprecedentedly large, being four times in excess of the average. There was also a tolerably large import of German beet sugar, a trade which is practically new. The trade in German woollens is increasing, the imports of last year amounting to 440,000 yards. Matches are the only other import of any consequence.

There was a considerable increase in the exports of cotton, indigo, rice, and jute, which are the largest exports to Germany.

Russia.—From European Russia India imports practically nothing.

A new trade has sprung up, however, within the last two years with Asiatic Russia in petroleum shipped from Batoum. The anticipation has already been realised that the importation of this oil was the beginning of a formidable competition with American oil. The imports were:—

—		Gals.	Rx.
1886-87	- - -	1,577,392	67,043
1887-88	- - -	5,036,055	227,274

Cotton and indigo are the principal exports to European Russia. In both there was a large increase of trade.

United States.—With a falling off in imports from Rx. 1,170,332 to Rx. 1,030,279 an advance appears in exports of Indian goods from Rx. 3,190,977 to Rx. 3,722,059. The bulk of the imports consists of mineral oil, and the decrease is due to a decline in that trade, which fell from 29,144,765 to 25,038,620 gallons.

Arabia.—Exports somewhat fell off, rice, wheat, and jowari and bajra (the largest exports) having been in smaller demand. The export of coffee amounted to 10,499 cwt. This trade is a testimony to the merits of Indian coffee, which could not be wanted in these regions unless it was so good as to be capable of substitution for Arabian coffee, whether for local consumption or for re-export to places where Mocha coffee is appreciated.

Australia.—The imports of copper showed a material increase, due partly to quantity and partly to a rise in price. There was also a larger increase of coal, with a smaller import of horses. These three items continue to comprise practically all the import trade with Australia.

The exports of gunny bags, which had been on a relatively small scale during the continuance of the drought from which the Colonies suffered for some time before 1887, expanded greatly with the return of good harvests. The exports of rice and castor oil also increased, and the trade in tea exhibits a most satisfactory expansion. It is to be hoped that Indian tea has at last taken firm hold of the Australian market, which has a capacity for consuming at least 20 million lbs. of tea even at present.

The number and tonnage of total shipping, with cargoes and in ballast, which Shipping entered and cleared at Indian ports from and to foreign countries, was as follows for two years :—

—		Number.	Tons.	Average tonnage.
1886-87	- -	10,584	7,172,193	678
1887-88	- -	10,893	7,189,465	660

The increase in tonnage was but fractional, being only 17,272 tons more than in the previous year, while the number of vessels was 309 more. The average tonnage has again fallen off.

The following table is for steamers only :—

—		Entered.		Cleared.
		No.	Tons.	No.	Tons.
1886-87	- -	1,602	2,342,690	1,620	2,398,164
1887-88	- -	1,585	2,411,272	1,605	2,472,222

There is a steady increase year after year in the proportion of steam to sailing tonnage.

According to nationalities, the following was the distribution of the total shipping during 1887-88 :—

—		No.	Tons.	Average tonnage.

The shipping of the following nationalities has increased as compared with the year before—Italian, Austrian, American, Arabian, Swedish and Turkish; while in respect to the following there was a falling off—German, French, Norwegian, Dutch. As to the latter, the service of mail steamers calling regularly between Madras Ports and the Straits, which raised the figures during the two preceding years, appears to have either ceased or become less frequent.

Although the volume of the trade with France stands in advance of any other continental countries and of the United States, yet the French shipping engaged in the trade with India does not attain to the Italian, Austrian, German, or American.

Omitting Upper Burma, which is now British territory, the land trade across the frontier compares as follows with that of the previous year :—

	Tens of Rupees.

The trade with Nepal stood as follows :—

	Tens of Rupees.
	1886-87.	1887-88.
Imports :
Merchandise - -	1,669,738	1,644,006

Merchandise - -	860,639	1,120,148
Treasure - -	14,151	17,039
Total -	874,790	1,137,187

The very large increase in the exports to Nepal was mainly due to a development of trade in cotton piece goods, brass and copper, provisions, betelnuts and other spices, and sugar.

The trade with Cashmere shows a substantial increase, which is attributable to the ruler of that State having taken off the heavy import duty levied on wheat, and having freed all exports.

The rail-borne trade across the South Afghan border is rapidly displacing the caravan trade, and with the further extension of the line to the Khwaja Amran range there will no doubt be a further large development of traffic. It must be observed, however, that the bulk of the trade is in exports, and that more than half of these consists of railway material, while a substantial proportion of the remainder is sent to Quetta for the requirements of the large military and civil population established there. The trade with parts beyond Quetta is as yet not large, and perhaps it can hardly be expected to become so until Kandahar is reached.

Trade with Cabul is not progressing as it might have been expected to do, seeing that the railway runs right up to its border, and that the country has been free for the last few years from serious political convulsions. Whether the stagnation of the trade is to be attributed to Russian customs restrictions on the border of Northern Afghanistan, impeding the progress of transit trade between India and Central Asia, or to the illiberal fiscal régime of the Ameer, or to tribal disturbances from time to time, it is certain in any case that the trade gives no indication of material increase. The sale of Russian goods is stated in a Consular report to be yearly increasing in Persia and in the neighbouring Afghan territory, from which British goods are being driven out.

The trade with Ladakh is really almost entirely transit trade to and from Central Asia. The exports from India to Ladakh in 1887-88 were valued at Rx. 77,624, and imports at Rx. 91,927, the former showing an increase of Rx. 18,520, and the latter of Rx. 33,935. An extraordinary demand for charas enhanced its price considerably, and led to much speculation. European piece goods were exported in greatly increased quantities, no doubt mostly in exchange for the abnormal imports of charas. The value of Indian tea sent to Ladakh increased from Rx. 9,782 to Rx. 10,460; but of that re-exported to Turkestan the value declined from Rx. 9,979 to Rx. 9,220. The prohibition of the sale of Indian teas in Yarkund took effect in the autumn of 1887. The Chinese authorities there are reported to have burnt three merchants' loads as a warning to others.

The statistics of Indian trade cannot be considered as absolutely complete without adding to the foreign trade of British India that of the Foreign Possessions in the peninsula. Unfortunately these cannot be given up to date, it having been found impossible, after repeated efforts for years past, to obtain the required particulars from the local authorities. However, the following tables will furnish an idea of the value and particulars of this trade:—

Trade of 1885-89.

In conclusion, the leading features of the current year's trade will appear from the following statement, the figures being taken from the latest monthly account received. It will be seen that the two-thirds of the year (up to 30th November 1888) show an enormous advance of imports, while the increase of exports is a little more than one-third as large. The principal head of increase is cotton manufactures (Rx. 2,951,148), under which head there was in the preceding year a great falling off. The import of mineral oils (now subject to duty) increased largely. Malt liquors increased, while spirits and wines fell off. Under exports, there was a decline in rice, and an improvement in wheat; the latter, however, was inconsiderable in amount as a set-off against the great decline of 1887-88. Exports of coffee improved, although imports did so too. Raw cotton fell off by Rx. 2,398,814. In jute, both raw and manufactured, a satisfactory advance appeared.

Under Secretary of State.

* This table is given only for 1898-99, all the others for a series of five years. Every fifth issue (of which the last was four years ago) contains, instead of the above, separate tables of the trade with Countries for the five latest years, with particulars of Articles under each Country.

STATEMENT

OF THE

TRADE OF BRITISH INDIA

For 1888-89.

INTRODUCTION.*

[NOTE.—All values are given in this volume as “tens of rupees,” a denomination which, while not subject to the charge of inaccuracy attaching to that of “sterling,” calculated at the nominal exchange of 2s. to the rupee, nevertheless enables comparisons to be made with the figures in any past volumes in which that inaccurate expression of values was employed. The sign Rx. is used to signify tens of rupees.]

The aggregate statistics of the foreign sea-borne trade of British India are compared in the following table for five years:—

* This Introduction is, especially in the remarks under the various heads of trade, to a large extent based on the Review of the Trade of India by Mr. J. E. O'Connor, Assistant Secretary to the Government of India in the Department of Finance and Commerce.

The trade thus continued in the course of steady development by which it has been marked now for several years. Whereas, however, in the two preceding years imports advanced by greater strides than exports, in the year now reported on, the increase of exports far exceeded that of imports. During the past seven years the value of imports and exports of private merchandise has been as follows :—

	←	Imports.		Exports.
		Rx.	Rx.	Rx.	Rx.
1882-83	-	50,008,041	83,400,866
1883-84	-	52,703,891	83,121,296
1884-85	-	53,149,311	83,200,528
1885-86	-	51,811,636	83,827,840
1886-87	-	58,661,462	88,428,660
1887-88	-	62,384,813	90,471,462
1888-89	-	66,570,318	96,978,171
		395,224,972	614,288,822

*Average of 7 years =
Imports: 564,6919
Exports: 879,1846*

Imports were, in the last year of the series, 16½ millions more than in the first year; exports only 13½ millions.

Of the increase of Rx. 4,185,505 under imports in 1888-89, the bulk was due to cotton goods. The increase under exports (Rx. 6,506,709) was distributed under various heads, notably jute and cotton (both raw and manufactured) and wheat; against which, however, must be set off a serious decline of rice exports.

Government stores.

There was an increase in the imports on Government account of coal, arms and ammunition, books, machinery, metals, and a smaller importation of paper, telegraph and railway material, and other items of small importance.

Treasure.

The following were the net imports of gold and silver respectively during the past eight years :—

	←	Tens of Rupees.
		Gold.	Silver.
1881-82	-	4,848,984	5,379,060
1882-83	-	4,930,871	7,480,227
1883-84	-	5,462,505	6,405,161
1884-85	-	4,671,937	7,245,631
1885-86	-	2,762,935	11,606,628
1886-87	-	2,177,065	7,155,738
1887-88	-	2,992,481	9,228,751
1888-89	-	2,813,984	9,246,679
		Total 30,652,712	63,478,555

*Average of 8 years.
Gold = 3831964
Silver = 8968482*

The imports of gold were rather less than in 1887-88 and those of the last four years much below the average of former years. The imports of silver were slightly larger than in the preceding year and much in excess of the average.

Balance of trade.

The aggregate value of merchandise exported from India by sea exceeds annually, as is well known, the value of the imports by a very large amount. In view of this fact, it becomes an interesting question to what extent a balancing of the trade of British India can be arrived at. The net imports of treasure account for less than half of the net exports of merchandise. The bills drawn on India by the Secretary of State, and bills similarly drawn by the Bank of England for the payment in this country of interest on Indian securities encased for that purpose, act in the same way as remittances to India of bullion and specie, while the securities themselves must be treated as exports or imports according as they are transferred to this country or re-transferred to India. Taking into account these several factors, the following statement gathers up the results for a series of years, and shows a balance unaccounted for on the side of imports to the average annual extent of nearly Rx. 1½ millions.

* These particulars were obtained, down to the year 1884-85, from a statement furnished by the Bank of Bengal and for subsequent years from the Bank of England.
 † This includes a sum of Rs. 607,168 specially remitted by the purchase of gold at Bombay

This decided excess on the import side of the account may perhaps be explained by (1) an unknown amount of annual private remittances from India to England; (2) the non-inclusion of freight in the valuation of exports, while they are included in that of imports; (3) errors of valuation.

* In the Indian Trade Accounts, during recent years, the following classification of articles, used generally on that adopted by the Board of Trade, has been employed, viz. :—

- I.—Animals, living.
- II.—Articles of food and drink.
- III.—Metals, and manufactures of.
- IV.—Chemicals, drugs, medicines and narcotics, and dyeing and tanning materials.
- V.—Oils
- VI.—Raw materials and unmanufactured articles
- VII.—Articles manufactured and partly manufactured.

In the above statement, however, Nos. III., IV., and V. are included under "Manufactured and partly manufactured." The order in which the articles are arranged under each class is that of the value of the trade in them, except that textile manufactures, and materials for them, are placed together first.

Sugar.—A recovery of prices in Europe had the effect of diminishing the imports into India, and also of interrupting the trade which had been stimulated by depressed markets in Europe in the export of refined sugar from England, the Continent, and Java, to India. Practically all the imports of the year were from Mauritius, China, and the Straits, as used to be the case until within the last three or four years.

Liquors.—A further increase took place in the importation of malt liquor.

The development in the last three years is due to the importation of very light ales, which people may drink without serious apprehension of the consequences. The increase in the consumption of imported ales has not, however, apparently interfered with the production of beer in India. This continues to increase, and the quantity brewed in India is now more than double the quantity imported. Deducting the purchases for the army the quantity of Indian beer available for the civil population was about as large as the quantity of beer imported. The competition between the two has become effective since breweries have been established in the plains.

For some years past the consumption of whisky in India has been overtaking that of brandy; and now it heads the list of spirits. A greater quantity of spirits was imported, of a less total value.

Grain and Pulse.—The pressure of high prices of food grains, owing to scarcity in various tracts, gave a great stimulus to the import trade. The quantity of the imports rose from 29,289 cwt. to 326,758 cwt. Almost all the grain, consisting largely of wheat, came from the Persian Gulf and Arabia.

Provisions.—The importation of flour still continued, though on a decreasing scale. The flour mills in Bombay not only supply local requirements almost entirely, but are able to export largely, while the Calcutta mills are not only unable to export, but cannot meet the local demand, which was supplied by the importation of about 1,126,000 lbs. from Hong Kong, Singapore, Australia, and other places.

Salt.—While a rise in price led to an increase in the value of salt imported, in the quantity there was a material decline. The causes of the decline are stated to be: (1) the increase in the rate of duty, which was raised in January 1888 in Bengal from Rs. 2 to Rs. 2½ the maund, and in Burma from three annas to one rupee the maund; (2) in Burma there had been an abnormally large import just before the increase of duty, speculators having probably obtained information of the intention of Government; the large stocks thus accumulated were of course drawn on and exhausted before new supplies were landed at the higher rate of duty; (3) local manufacture has been very active in Burma since the increase of duty; (4) salted fish, cured with untaxed salt and imported free of duty, to some extent took the place of fish cured locally with taxed salt; (5) the Chinese administration of Yunnan has interfered to prevent the importation of salt from Upper Burma into that province, and has materially reduced the dimensions of what was an active trade; (6) the price of imported salt, irrespective of the increase of duty, has been greatly increased, apparently in consequence of the action of the English Salt Syndicate.

It should be noted that imports actually declined only in Burma. In Bengal there was a substantial increase, but the increased importations more than kept pace with consumption, for while the imports increased by 6 per cent. the quantity bonded increased by 67 per cent.

The increase of price in Bengal caused by the action of the Salt Syndicate ought to have had the effect of enabling Sambhar salt to compete with Liverpool salt closer to the coast than had previously been feasible, for the increase is from 15 to 20 rupees per 100 maunds; but the railways find it more profitable to carry Liverpool salt from Calcutta up the line than to bring salt from Sambhar and Agra down the line. They have therefore given more favourable rates to Liverpool salt, and by preventing competition have kept up the price of salt to the people.

The operations of the Italian Company at Aden, referred to in previous reports as having obtained a monopoly of the manufacture of salt at that place, are beginning to show prominently in the trade accounts. The importation of salt from Aden commenced in 1886-87 with 2,325 tons; they amounted the following year to 15,004 tons; and in the year under review to 17,397 tons.

Spices.—It will be observed on reference to the above table that, although a greater quantity of spices was imported to the extent of 8½ million lbs., yet the total value was less by Rs. 76,290.

Tea.—The imports were on a larger scale than has yet been known, amounting to 4,767,004 lbs. The bulk of the imports was from China and the Straits into Bombay: Thence about half was reshipped chiefly to the ports in the Persian Gulf, whence it is distributed in Persia and the adjacent countries. A considerable quantity is also sent by land from Bombay through India into Northern and Southern Afghanistan.

Cotton Manufactures.—The enormous expansion of the trade in cotton goods was in the main of a speculative character, caused by the condition of the English manufacturing industry rather than by the condition of the Indian market.

Comparing the trade of the year with that of 1883-84, it will be found that, while the quantity has increased about 16 per cent., the value has increased by only about 8 per cent., indicating a heavy reduction in prices.

Metals.—The effect of the high prices of copper maintained by the French Syndicate which recently collapsed is clearly manifest in the reduced imports of the year, as shown below:—

	Cwt
1884-85	552,420
1885-86	652,973
1886-87	615,049
1887-88	532,635
1888-89	98,490

The importations of iron fell away somewhat though still remaining at a high level, while the imports of steel increased; they have about doubled in five years.

No practical development of the iron-making industry, has as yet taken place in India. The Barakar works, where an industry of the first magnitude might be created by the expenditure of capital and the application of skill, are still limited to the production of cast iron in comparatively trifling quantities, although the State and the public require and import close on a quarter of a million tons of iron and steel yearly, without including the quantities imported in other shapes such as machinery and mill-work and railway material.

Machinery and Millwork.—The year's imports were exceptionally large as a consequence of the opening of several new mills in different parts of India.

Quinine.—The very low price to which quinine has fallen has greatly stimulated its import. The fall in price has enabled quinine to more than resume its place in India, and has, for the time, slightly restricted the use of alkaloids made in the country.

Oils.—The importation of mineral oils has progressed in the following manner during recent years:—

	Gals.
1883-84 - - - -	13,883,838
1884-85 - - - -	27,306,999
1885-86 - - - -	21,311,942
1886-87 - - - -	31,949,633
1887-88 - - - -	31,421,559
1888-89 - - - -	39,951,885

Thus the quantity imported last year was almost three times as large as the imports of six years ago. The use of mineral oil as an illuminant is now quite common in India, and is indeed in urban tracts the rule rather than the exception.

These large importations of mineral oil have affected the domestic economy of the natives in two ways: the oil has displaced vegetable oils, and the tinned iron cans in which the import is made have displaced the earthen jar and the brass pot to a large extent. An importation of 30 or 40 million gallons of oil means also an importation of from 6 to 8 million cans of 5 gallons each. These millions of cans were for some considerable time cut up by tinsmiths for the manufacture of other articles, but now they are also commonly used to hold and convey grain and other stores, water and other liquids, and they are amongst the most common objects in an Indian bazaar. They are also used as building materials in the repairs of roofs.

Russian oil, the importation of which commenced only three years ago, and which is said to be on the whole not quite equal to American oil in quality, but is appreciably cheaper, is competing with remarkable activity with American oil, as will be seen from the following figures:—

Rice.—The trade in husked rice was bad in 1888-89. In 1887-88, although the exports from Burma were low, Bengal rice was shipped in quantities which more than made up the deficiency from Burma. In the following year, however, the exports

from Bengal declined greatly, for the harvest was inferior, and prices kept at a high level. From Burma they also fell off. The exports from Burma have fallen steadily since 1885-86, bad crops and high prices in Lower Burma combining with a great demand for Upper Burma, both for the consumption of the people as well as of the troops and military police, to restrict the quantity available for export.

The exports to Europe (including therein for this purpose Egypt, as the shipments to that country are only nominally trade with it, being to Port Said for orders) were about 53 per cent. of the whole; in 1887-88 they were 55 per cent. of the whole. The lesser half is all used for food in Asiatic countries, and in coolie-employing colonies elsewhere.

The exports of rice from Saigon and Bangkok are large, and increasingly important from the latter place. In the last five years the exports have been:—

				From Saigon.	From Bangkok.
				Tons.	Tons.
1884	-	-	-	508,767	279,036
1885	-	-	-	436,905	217,179
1886	-	-	-	495,839	215,381
1887	-	-	-	406,541	402,165
1888	-	-	-	498,291	455,541

The two ports exported in the last year of the series 953,832 tons, against 1,138,411 tons exported from India. Their exports to Europe only reached about 178,000 tons, their principal customers being in China, the Straits, and the Eastern Archipelago. In these regions the two ports have practically thrust Indian rice from the market.

Wheat.—Exportation of wheat was on a restricted scale, although much larger than in 1887-88. In the current year the trade has fallen off again.

The wheat harvest in those tracts whence Calcutta is supplied for export was a failure, the crops being more or less deficient in Behar, Oudh, and the North-Western Provinces. Prices at the same time ranged very high, and hence exports from Calcutta fell to a very low level. In the Central Provinces, Berar, the Punjab, and Sindh, on the other hand, the wheat harvest was good throughout—in some tracts excellent—and exportation was active from Bombay and Karachi. While the exports from India have been on a comparatively small scale during the last two years, and are likely to continue small for a third year, the Russian exports of wheat, with a succession of splendid harvests, were very large in those two years, especially in 1888, when it was more than three times the Indian export. The quantities exported from Russia were:—

				Cwt.
1886	-	-	-	25,581,000
1887	-	-	-	33,247,000
1888	-	-	-	59,305,000

In connexion with the discussion at present proceeding as to the need of improving the quality of Indian wheat by the elimination of dirt, Mr. O'Connor points out that the most effectual way of doing this is to adopt the American system of elevators. The Russians are now introducing them in order to be better able to compete with India.

Flour.—The export trade in flour was but little larger than in the previous year, amounting to 36,290,371 lbs. It is hoped that the trade is as yet very far from its limit of expansion. The exports so far are chiefly to Aden and Arabia, Ceylon and the Straits, Mauritius, Zanzibar, Abyssinia, and Cape Colony, practically none of the wheat-flour going to Europe, which takes the bulk of the exports of wheat.

Tea.—While the imports of Indian tea into England continue to increase, those of Chinese tea continue to diminish.

The trade with Australia is slowly expanding, but Indian tea seems as far off as ever from getting a hold of the American markets.

Coffee.—The exports of coffee from India fell from 370,458 cwt. to 273,775 cwt.; but the value increased in consequence of a great rise in price caused partly by failure of the Brazilian coffee crop and partly by speculation. The trade is stated to have generally no promising features of future development.

Cotton.—The statistics of raw cotton exported give no indication of an increasing trade. The causes of the lack of progress are the increased consumption of cotton in the Indian mills, deficient harvests, and the increasing use of American and Brazilian cotton in competition with Indian, the fall of prices having much stimulated the use of the finer and larger stapled descriptions. The exports to the United Kingdom and to China showed a great decline, while there was an increase in the exports to Continental countries. While in the total exports there was a slight decline in quantity, the value considerably increased.

The exports of cotton yarn have increased 158 per cent. in the last six years, being at the rate of more than 26 per cent. annually. The progress in cotton piece goods, while very substantial, falls far short of the advance made in the export of yarns.

The following are the statistics for three years of the Indian cotton spinning and weaving industry:—

—	Number of Mills.	Number of Spindles.	Number of Looms.
1886-87-	94	2,261,661	17,455
1887-88 -	97	2,375,789	18,840
1888-89 -	105	2,624,578	21,676

Silk.—The following statement shows that the export of cocoons and of waste silk increases as that of reeled silk declines:—

—	1883-84.	1884-85.	1885-86.	1886-87.	1887-88.	1888-89.
Raw (reeled) -	672,710	531,205	358,071	449,515	453,568	433,473
Chasam (waste) -	886,045	953,183	1,023,807	1,020,595	998,235	1,313,874
Cocoons -	44,059	82,713	56,889	113,814	173,374	374,567

Seeds.—A diminished export of seeds was accompanied with an increase of value. This is accounted for by a material increase in the price of rape seed.

Cotton seed is specified separately in the returns for the first time this year. The exports amounted to 135,581 cwt. The quantity is probably not a tenth of that available for export, and it may be observed that the United Kingdom imported in 1888 more than 5 million cwt. of cotton seed (value 1,657,432*l.*), of which only 81,300 cwt. came from India, the bulk being imported from Egypt and Brazil.

The trade in seeds is carried on mainly with England and the European Continent. England takes the bulk of the linseed exported, some also going to the United States, and the Continent the bulk of the other descriptions.

Oils.—The value of the exports of oils declined, the result chiefly of a restricted export of castor oil, for which there was but a limited demand in England and Australia, the two countries to which it is mainly exported. Cocoa-nut oil, which is mainly sent to England, the Continent, and the United States (for use principally as a basis in the preparation of toilet oils and soaps), was more largely shipped. Mr. O'Connor does not anticipate any substantial development of the trade in oils as long as the bulk of the exports consists of castor and cocoa-nut. In course of time, he observes, when India begins to manufacture oil from the linseed, rape seed, poppy seed, and other oil-seeds which are now exported in such great quantities, this head of the trade returns will become increasingly important, but there is no indication as yet of the commencement of this industry.

Jute.—The jute crop, following that of 1887, was again a very good one, and the exports reached a high figure, prices at the same time having increased nearly 20 per cent.

A movement has lately been initiated in the United States for the substitution of cotton bagging instead of jute for cotton bales. The movement originated with resentment at high prices maintained by the Jute Bagging Trust, but it is claimed for cotton bagging that its merits are greater than those of jute, and it is possible that the substitution may be generally made. In this case some 30,000 tons of jute, used for this purpose, will no longer be required. But this quantity is not more than about 7 per cent of the average of the shipments to foreign ports, and the reduction in the exports, even if the movement amongst cotton balers in the United States should take full effect, will probably not appreciably affect the trade generally. The total export to the United States from India in 1888-89 was 1,681,870 cwt.

In jute manufactures there was a very marked expansion, the result mainly of increased shipments of bags to England, China, and Japan.

Saltpetre.—This is a branch of trade which seems to have no capacity for expansion, fluctuating only from year to year within narrow limits. The trade is practically no larger now than it was twenty years ago. The protection of the salt revenue requires that saltpetre refineries should be worked under restriction, and such restriction no doubt enhances the cost of production and makes competition with nitrate of soda difficult, so far as the trade to Europe is concerned. A substantial proportion of the trade however—about 30 per cent.—is with China, the Straits, and Eastern Africa.

Cinchona Bark.—The quantity of cinchona bark exported rose from 1,286,900 lbs. in 1886-87 to 1,449,313 lbs. in 1887-88, and to 3,074,090 lbs. in the following year. This expansion was accompanied by a largely reduced value, the result of a fall in prices which has been so heavy that cinchona has been sold below the cost of production. Production in fact has outrun consumption for the time being. Nearly the whole of the export is from Madras, the bark produced in Bengal (at least in the Government plantations) being manufactured there for consumption in India. It is now made into sulphate of quinine at a cost which is not higher than that of the imported drug, low as that is.

duties.

The subjoined statement gives the gross realisations on account of Customs duties for a series of years, not including some small and unclassified imports by post, &c. :—

	Tens of Rupees.

	Arms, Ammunition, &c.	Liquors.	Opium.	Petroleum.	Salt.	Rice.
1882-83	16,874	417,809	280	—	1,764,854	831,994

1885-86	16,874	418,164	280	—	1,820,749	743,849
1886-87	21,711	488,197	428	—	1,979,128	708,412
1887-88	22,370	527,792	255	13,709	1,894,487	756,498
1888-89	26,089	548,284	306	117,489	2,301,427	612,673

The net import duty increased by about 23 per cent., mainly as the result of the new duty of half an anna per gallon imposed since February 1888, on mineral oil. The net export revenue on the other hand declined by 19 per cent., the exports of rice from both Burma and Bengal having been greatly restricted.

With a view to show the relative commercial importance of the several large ports, Trade of the coasting trade is added to the foreign (private only) in the two next statements in different ports.

In round numbers, the results as regard the foreign trade may be thus summarised. The trade of Bombay increased by 6 millions (imports 1, exports 5); that of Calcutta by 3½ millions (imports 2½, exports 1); that of Karachi by 2½ millions (imports 1, exports 1½). On the other hand the trade of Rangoon fell off by over ½ million, and that of Madras by ¼ million; the decline in both cases occurring in the imports.

From the province of Burma generally there was a decline in the exports, due mainly to the deficiency of the rice harvests; but those from the port of Rangoon showed an increase. Although the volume of the sea-borne trade of Burma compared unfavourably with that of the immediately preceding year, it was better than that of any other previous period.

Japan is for the first time included in this statement, exports thither having increased as follows:—

United States.—There are two features of importance in the trade with the United States. In both the imports of petroleum and the exports of jute there was a considerable decline in the year under review, and it is possible that the reduction in each case may be more than temporary. The reason for the latter is referred to at page 12.

The competition of Russian with American petroleum in India has become most active, and (unless there is truth in the rumours now being circulated that indications exist of the approaching exhaustion of the oil sources at Baku) will probably increase in vigour.

Belgium.—From Belgium there has been a large increase in the imports of aniline and alizarine dyes, window glass and glassware, hardware and cutlery, iron and steel, paints and colours, and woollen goods. Belgian imports to India have increased in the last five years 113 per cent. Exports thither, consisting mainly of cotton, wheat, and oil-seeds, have increased in the same period about 50 per cent. It must be observed however that, while the imports from Belgium have steadily augmented from year to year, exports have fluctuated much, and that the increase here noted is due to an unusually large export of wheat and cotton during the year. The trade in wheat is largely the result of the increased taxation of imported wheat by the French Government. To evade it the Belgians have been exporting bread across the frontier to France, so that the protective duty has mainly had the effect of injuring French millers and bakers.

Italy.—Imports from Italy increased largely, amounting to the highest sum yet recorded, but exports showed a great decline, due in large measure to a reduction in the exports of wheat. The abundant harvests of Southern Russia so lowered prices that the Italian grower of wheat found competition with Russian grain difficult, and Indian wheat of course was largely excluded.

Austria.—In the last five years the imports from Austria have increased about 61 per cent., and the exports thither of Indian goods about 30 per cent. The imports of apparel, hardware and cutlery, printing paper and stationery, silk (mixed) goods, soap, toys, and woollen goods, have greatly increased, the development of the trade in woollens being particularly marked.

The exports of cotton (two-thirds of the whole export trade), indigo, and jute have increased in the same period, cotton especially.

Germany.—Imports from Germany are as yet small, but they have been increasing rapidly, having risen in five years 167 per cent. The imports are of a very miscellaneous character, the most prominent items being woollen goods, salt, beer and spirits, hardware and cutlery, and aniline and alizarine dyes.

The exports have increased in about the same proportion, namely, 164 per cent. They consist mainly of cotton, indigo, jute, and oil-seeds. With the establishment of lines of steamers trading direct between India and North Germany this trade ought to continue to expand.

Russia.—The following is a quotation from the "Englishman's Overland Mail" of 27th March 1889:—

"One of the consequences of the imports to India of Russian petroleum would seem to have taken the form of an extension of the direct trade with Russia in indigo. In this, as in many other departments of commerce, England is to a great extent losing its place as a distributing centre. Thus, last year Russia took 1,623 cwt. of Indian indigo, valued at over five lakhs of rupees. The figures for the previous 12 months were 416 cwt., of the value of nearly one and a quarter lakhs. The direct trade that is springing up between India and the European continent is one of the most noticeable features of the commercial situation of India."

Australia.—The decline in the trade with Australia is chiefly due to the practical cessation of the imports of copper (see p. 8). Since the fall of the Syndicate the imports of copper into India have been resumed.

Shipping.

It will be seen that the number and tonnage of the total shipping entered and cleared at Indian ports during 1888-89 were both less than in the preceding year, but that the average tonnage slightly increased.

	Number.	Tons.	Average tonnage.
1886-87	10,584	7,172,193	678
1887-88	10,893	7,189,465	660
1888-89	10,485	6,983,332	666

The following relates to steamers only:—

	No.	Tons.	No.	Tons.
1886-87	1,602	2,342,690	1,620	2,398,164

1888-89	1,608	2,506,931	1,632	2,561,431

The distribution according to nationalities was as follows:—

	No.	Tons.	Average tonnage.
British	3,690	5,713,012	1,548
British Indian	2,196	3,311,054	1,422

Others	98	15,838	161
	1,251	793,171	634
Native	3,348	166,095	50

The above table shows a very marked increase in French shipping, and as decided a falling off in American and Dutch. In all other foreign shipping there was a decline, except in Italian.

The frontier land trade* is shown below for the last three years, in the first of which the trade with Upper Burma ceased to come within the category of foreign trade.

These figures include exports of railway material for the Sind-Pishin Railway to the value of Rx. 1,088,719; while railway material re-imported into India amounted in value to Rx. 58,691. These items, together with supplies of various kinds for the troops, civil establishments, and population of Quetta, cannot properly be regarded as external trade. It is not possible to say how much of these goods goes beyond Quetta until a system of registration is established there; but Mr. O'Conor considers that it is not very wide of the mark to say that at least five-sixths of the imports and exports across the Beloochistan frontier may be disregarded in considering the foreign trade of India.

The only two countries the trade with which exceeds one million in value are Nepal, and Cashmere. Summaries are appended of the imports and exports for two years:—

The reduction in the trade with Nepal occurred principally in imports, and is entirely accounted for by reduced imports of rice, wheat, and other grains. Crops were as bad in Nepal as in India, and for some time the Durbar laid an embargo on the export of such articles.

The increased imports of treasure from Cashmere include remittances by the Durbar on account of the Jammu Waterworks and the railway to the same place.

The tracts beyond the Oxus are now practically closed to goods from India by the Russian Customs regulations, and by the difficulty of competition between goods that reach their destination by animal carriage from Peshawur to Balkh and goods that reach their destination or approach very close to it by rail, as the Russian goods do. The Russians, in addition to the advantages they possess in the railway, are about to establish a Bank; and are in other ways fostering their trade. The Indian trade on the other hand, after it leaves Peshawur, has to pass through a country where toll is taken on every camel-load in the most rigorous and indiscriminating way. With such differences in conditions it is easy to understand that British and Indian goods exported to Afghanistan from India can find no market beyond Cabul, and that Russian goods must fill the markets north and west of that city. The Political Officer in the Khaiber wrote in August 1888:—"If the officials in Afghanistan could be induced to treat the merchants and carriers in a more generous and liberal spirit, not only would trade greatly increase, but there is a certainty of their income being equally raised. But crushing tolls and other measures are not only injuring their revenue, but are also ruining the trade with India and driving the camel and mule owners from this line to other localities, or—what is even worse—inducing them to sell their animals and gain a living by other means."

* Statistics for five years of the frontier trade with various countries will be found in the Statistical Abstract relating to British India.

The trade in tea exported beyond the frontier via Ladakh has been nearly killed by the prohibition of the use of Indian tea in Chinese Turkestan. On the other hand, exports of European piece-goods continue to increase.

In the trade with Thibet there was no falling off such as might have been anticipated from political conditions. There are only three articles of any consequence in this trade—borax, salt, and raw wool. In each of these there was an increase, the development of the trade in salt being conspicuous, following as it did immediately on the increase of the duty on salt in British India. Salt imported over the Himalayas not being charged with any duty, the increase of 8 annas a maund in taxed salt enabled the untaxed salt to compete with it over a wider area.

Trade of 1889-90.

The nine months of the current year (April to December 1889) for which accounts have been received show an advance under imports of Rx. 546,094, and under exports of Rx. 6,742,239. The following are some of the chief variations from the trade of the corresponding period of the preceding year:—

IMPORTS.—Increases.—Metals (Rx. 1,387,057); piece goods, coloured (Rx. 479,979).
Decreases.—Piece goods, grey (Rx. 600,479); piece goods, white (Rx. 633,290).

EXPORTS.—Increases.—Cotton, raw (Rx. 3,000,133); rice, husked (Rx. 1,788,533); seeds (Rx. 1,431,898); jute, raw (Rx. 582,541); cotton twist and yarn (Rx. 520,084); sugar (Rx. 417,948); jute manufactures (Rx. 338,789); opium (Rx. 140,876); indigo (Rx. 117,359).
Decreases.—Wheat (Rx. 1,221,835); coffee (Rx. 546,058); tea (Rx. 193,077).

INTRODUCTION.*

[NOTE.—All values are given in this volume as “tens of rupees,” a denomination which, while not subject to the charge of inaccuracy attaching to that of “£ sterling,” calculated at the nominal exchange of 2s. to the rupee, nevertheless enables comparisons to be made with the figures in any past volumes in which that inaccurate expression of values was employed. The sign R.x. is used to signify tens of rupees.]

Our first table is, as usual, one exhibiting the foreign sea-borne trade of British India for five successive years :—

* This Introduction is, especially in the remarks under the various heads of trade, to a large extent based on the Review of the Trade of India by Mr. J. E. O'Connor, Assistant Secretary to the Government of India in the Department of Finance and Commerce.

The above figures show a steady and healthy expansion of the total trade from year to year.

The imports of merchandise, it will be seen, were indeed somewhat below those of the preceding year, but these depend mainly on cotton goods, which are apt in one year to be sent to India in excess of the demand, so that a temporary lull follows. There was also a heavy decline in railway material and coal. The latter is no unhealthy sign. The increase of exports amounted in value to nearly Rx. 6½ millions—about the same as the increase in the year before. This occurred chiefly under cotton, jute, rice, and oil-seeds, and was also partly due to rise of prices.

Government stores. Railway materials, which constitute the largest importations on account of the State, have been declining continuously since 1885.

The importation of printing paper has entirely ceased, and that of writing paper has materially declined, owing to the substitution of paper made in the Indian mills, whose productions have now attained a very fairly high level of quality.

Treasure. Net imports of silver increased by Rx. 1,691,196. The enhanced imports of gold were a noticeable feature of the year, the net increase amounting to Rx. 1,801,370. During the four previous years gold imports had greatly declined, but the net imports of 1889-90 (Rx. 4,615,304) almost amounted to the figure of 1884-85.

Comparison with trade of 1888-89 (detailed). Increases and decreases of the principal articles of private merchandise (re-exports not included) are summarised below:—*

* In the Indian Trade Accounts, during recent years, the following classification of articles, based generally on that adopted by the Board of Trade, has been employed, viz. :—

I.—Animals, living.

II.—Articles of food and drink.

III.—Metals, and manufactures of.

IV.—Chemicals, drugs, medicines and narcotics, and dyeing and tanning materials.

V.—Oils.

VI.—Raw materials and unmanufactured articles.

VII.—Articles manufactured and partly manufactured.

In the above statement, however, Nos. III, IV., and V. are included under "Manufactured and partly manufactured." The order in which the articles are arranged under each class is that of the value of the trade in them, except that textile manufactures, and materials for them, are placed together first.

Sugar.—The imports of sugar continue on a large scale. During 1889-90 the value Imports. was Rx. 2,200,049. Of this, Rx. 267,611 represents the value of the re-exports, so that the great bulk of the imports was for consumption in the country. It comes chiefly from Mauritius, but cargoes were received from China, the Straits, Ceylon, England, Germany, France, Belgium, and Austria.

The exports are mostly from Madras. They consist in the bulk of unrefined sugar, whereas the imports into Bombay are mainly of refined sugar. Mr. O'Connor asks:

“ Is there any sufficient reason why Madras or Bengal or Northern India should not supply the requirements of Bombay in refined sugar? Why should we import any refined sugar from the United Kingdom into Bombay when we export refined sugar to the United Kingdom from Bengal and Madras? Why also should we export sugar to Ceylon from those Presidencies and receive sugar from Ceylon into Bombay? It would be interesting to learn the causes of these features of the sugar trade in India. If they were known and discussed they would perhaps disappear, and India cease to be an importer of an article which she produces in abundance herself.”

Provisions.—The import of salted fish still continued on an extensive scale, though not so large as in the previous year. Of 18,000,000 lbs. imported, Burma received about 10½ million lbs. from the Straits, the increase of the salt duty having given a stimulus to this trade, which is free of duty. About 5,000,000 lbs. were imported into Bombay from the Mekran and Arabian coasts.

Liquors.—Under this head there was a decrease on the whole, spirits as well as wines having been imported in smaller quantities, while the importation of malt liquor increased. The fluctuations in the import of malt liquor are curious. In 1875 the imports suddenly fell from an average of about 1½ million gallons to an average of a little more than one million, remaining at this point for ten years, when they began to increase. The trade since 1884-85 has been steadily augmenting year after year, and its dimensions now are nearly three times as great as they were at that time. Various causes in combination may be assigned for this remarkable augmentation of trade. The character of the beer has changed, and many are able to drink the lighter qualities now imported who were unable to drink the heavier beers of former years. There has been a great increase in the classes of the European population accustomed to drink beer habitually—artisans, workers in mills and factories, men employed on railways and inland and coasting steamers, and so forth. There has also been created a taste for beer among the Madras coolies, who work for high wages in Burma and return annually to Madras with their earnings. The strength of the British army has been largely augmented, and the prices of beer have materially fallen. But it is hardly likely that these causes alone can have brought about such a sudden development in consumption, and the most effective cause may perhaps be sought in competition. The English brewers keenly felt the competition of the German and Austrian brewers, and actively sought to retain a market which seemed to be undermined from without by Continental and from within by Indian beer.

The trade in spirits does not increase much, if it can be said to increase at all. The imports of the year were smaller than those of the preceding year. The consumption of gin and rum is distinctly on the decline, the imports of rum having fallen to less than half what they were five years ago. Possibly the place of imported rum is being taken by rum distilled according to European methods in India. The largest share of both these liquors is consumed in Burma, much of the rum being no doubt drunk by the Madras troops as well as by the British soldier.

The trade in wines is still less flourishing than that in spirits. Imports of champagne are only half what they were some years ago. Claret has steadily fallen off year by year. Sherry has fallen to a very low point. Port appears to be recovering, but the imports do not exceed what they were many years ago. Other sorts of wines, including those of Germany, Italy, Greece, and Australia, have increased substantially, but the total quantity of all wines imported in 1889-90 exceeded that imported five years previously by less than 1 per cent. In the same period liqueurs have increased about 27 per cent., but the imports are very small.

Salt.—The increase of price in Liverpool salt has had the effect of reducing imports from England and of increasing imports from other countries which immediately made haste to compete. The imports of the last three years have been as follows:—

	1887-88.	1888-89.	1889-90
	Tons.	Tons.	Tons.
United Kingdom	339,651	337,089	285,767
Germany	23,187	7,711	45,439
Arabia	42,633	20,129	35,736
Aden	15,004	17,397	33,782
Other countries	3,422	16,484	10,084
	423,897	398,810	410,808

The average import annually for these years amounts to 411,172 tons. In the three calendar years 1887, 1888, and 1889, the quantity of salt produced in India gives an average annual production of about 1,051,000 tons.

Tea.—The conditions under which an extensive import of tea is carried on are not dissimilar to those under which sugar is imported. India produces tea and exports it in large quantities, and imports considerable quantities, of which a portion is re-exported, the rest being consumed in the country. Last year it imported about 5,383,000 lbs., a larger quantity than ever before. The tea came from China, the Straits, Ceylon, and Java, and some of it (1,849,429 lbs.) was re-exported by sea, mainly to Persia. Some portion also was re-exported by land to Afghanistan. The rest was consumed in the country.

Cotton.—Imports of raw cotton amounted to the comparatively large figure of 116,000 cwt, mainly from Persia and the Mekran coast, and practically all brought to Bombay. The Customs authorities at Bombay say: "Persian cotton is white in appearance, but the fibre is poor, and it does not fetch so high a price as cotton grown on this side of India. It is freely used for mixing with superior descriptions, and the admixture is then offered for sale as the produce of certain districts in India."

The decrease in the recorded values of cotton goods was 5 per cent., and of twist and yarn 7 per cent.

The decline has been general, except in Burma; being heaviest in Bengal, where, it would seem, the transfer of part of the trade in yarn and woven goods to Bombay and Karachi is beginning to be visible in respect of white and coloured goods. The supply of goods to marts north of Cawnpore can now be made by the Indian Midland and the Bombay and Baroda lines with greater convenience from Bombay than from Calcutta, and increasing exports from Karachi naturally bring about increasing imports to a port which is convenient as a distributing centre for a considerable region of North-Western India.

The total imports of cotton yarn and woven goods from all countries amounted to Rs. 29,874,000, the value of imports from the United Kingdom representing about Rs. 29,408,600, or 98½ per cent. of the gross total.

Woollen Goods.—In woollen piece goods there was a decrease, though shawls were imported in much larger number (901,000). Shawls are very popular with the male population of Bengal, into which province more than four-fifths of the imports are brought. They are not creditable to the artistic sense of the Bengalis, being generally violently coloured and figured, but they are cheap, the average valuation standing at between 2½ and 2¾ rupees for each.

Woollen piece goods are also largely used in Bengal by the well-to-do classes, but that province does not consume silk goods to any extent. The imported silks are mainly used by Europeans, the small use made by natives of silk being limited, speaking generally, to saris of native silks worn by women. The case is different in Bombay and Burma, where silks are largely worn by men and women alike.

Metals.—The most prominent feature of the year's trade in this group was the prompt return of activity in the importation of copper following on the fall of price which ensued on the collapse of the "corner" established by the Société des métaux. As soon as prices were raised abnormally by the operations of that ring, importations fell off, and indeed were almost completely suspended; as soon as prices fell importations recommenced on a large scale. The demand was even smaller than would seem from the imports of 1888-89, for in the previous year India had re-exported, to take advantage of the rise in price, the unusually large quantity of 47,000 cwt. Zinc followed much the same course as copper, in conjunction with which it is used in India.

Machinery, &c.—The continued development of manufacturing industry in India is attested by the large and rapid increase in the imports of machinery and millwork. The imports of 1888-89 were at an exceptionally high figure, but were exceeded by those of the following year.

Dyes.—An increase is shown under dyes, largely due to the ever extending use of aniline and alizarine dyes by native dyers. The imports of these during the year amounted to about 57,682,000 ounces, being nearly five million ounces in excess of those of the preceding year. Their employment has caused the imports of madder (or manjit) from Persia and Cabul to fall to such a low level that the trade would seem to be on the point of extinction. In 1886-87, 19,125 cwt. of madder were imported, chiefly from Persia; last year only 2,646 cwt. Cochineal remains stationary, but this material is used more in the colouring of confectionery than for textile fabrics. Saffron also increases slowly; it is used almost exclusively in food and Hindu religious ceremonies.

Mineral Oils.—The very great increase under this head results from the rapidly extending consumption of kerosene as an illuminant in India.

Russian oil, of which not a gallon was imported before 1886, has taken a firm hold of the market, as will be seen from the subjoined figures showing the imports in each of the last five years from the United States and Russia in Asia, the two countries whence most of the imported mineral oil is received:—

		From United States.	From Russia in Asia
		Gals.	Gals.
1885-86	- - -	20,229,350	—
1886-87	- - -	29,144,942	1,577,392
1887-88	- - -	25,040,517	5,036,055
1888-89	- - -	20,653,975	17,516,003
1889-90	- - -	35,882,120	15,961,875

The enormous increase in the imports from the United States during the year would seem to have been mainly speculative, and to have been designed to force Russian oil out of the market. The latter has, however, come into use far more largely at Bombay than at Calcutta, the imports into Bombay having been about 10½ million gallons, while Calcutta imported only about 1½ million gallons, this being half the quantity imported in 1888-89. This decline in the imports into Calcutta has been attributed to a prejudice created against the oil in the beginning owing to the quality not being satisfactory. But it is freely used in the Western Presidency and in Northern India, and no prejudice against it has ever existed there. It seems more likely that it is not a question of lack of demand in Calcutta, but of convenience of a market. For the steamers which bring the oil to India, Bombay is a more convenient port than Calcutta in which to obtain return cargoes of the merchandise which Russia takes in greatest bulk, namely, cotton and seeds.

Exports
(Indian produce and
ture).

Rice.—The trade in husked rice was much better than in the preceding year, exports from Burma having greatly increased with large available supplies. From Bengal, on the other hand, exports were again smaller, prices, under the influence of deficient harvests, having reached a level that made trade difficult when prices in Europe did not respond.

From Siam and Cochin China alone the exports of rice are not much less than half those of all India. Then there is the rice from Japan and Italy, and we must also reckon with the other grains which compete with Indian rice for distillation.

Of the exports 52 per cent. went to Europe and 32½ per cent. to Asia, leaving about 15 per cent. for the coolies of Mauritius and Réunion, of the West Indies and South America, and for Australia. The European demand was slightly smaller than in either of the two preceding years, when it was equal to 55 and 53 per cent. of the whole respectively. It is possible that the present year may again show a slightly smaller relative demand for Europe in consequence of the Italian Government having raised the duty on rough (cargo) rice closer to the level of the duty on cleaned rice, and thus interfered with an active re-export trade carried on by Italian millers with great profit from State bounties.

It is practically almost impossible to ascertain the ultimate destination of great part of the rice exports. Of the total quantity assigned to Europe, about 14 million cwt., nearly 8½ million cwt. are placed against Egypt and Malta. In the first of these cases the rice is shipped to Port Said for orders to be received there by the master of the ship as to the port of destination; in the second case the rice is stored for re-shipment to other Mediterranean ports. The system obscures the effects which changes of fiscal legislation in Italy, Turkey, Austria, the States lying between Turkey and Russia, or in other countries, may have upon the direction and extent of our rice trade with Europe.

The figures in this report relate of course only to the rice sent out of India, but in order to form a right estimate of the comparative prosperity from year to year of the Burma rice trade, the large supplies to Upper Burma should be taken into account. From this point of view the following statement is interesting; in which the statistics are those of the calendar years, as the 31st of March falls in the middle of the busiest season, while the rice exported within any calendar year is almost without exception the produce of the harvest which is gathered in January of that year. The following table gives the exports by the calendar year from 1878:—

Wheat.—The exports of wheat in the last ten years have been as follows:—

	Cwt	Rx.
1880-81	7,444,375	3,277,942
1881-82	19,363,520	8,604,081
1882-83	14,144,407	6,068,984
1883-84	20,956,495	8,377,561
1884-85	15,830,754	6,309,140
1885-86	21,090,519	8,002,350
1886-87	22,263,320	8,625,864
1887-88	13,538,169	5,562,373
1888-89	17,610,081	7,522,676
1889-90	13,799,224	5,791,377

The exports from Karachi were larger, and those from Bombay and Calcutta smaller, than they have ever been since the development of the trade. It is doubtful whether Calcutta will in future export as much wheat as in 1883. The great wheat-producing tracts have now by the completion of the Indian Midland Railway come within the zone of Bombay, and the exportable wheat of the North-Western Provinces (west of Cawnpore), of Oudh, the Punjab and Central India will doubtless be shipped from Bombay and Karachi whence homeward freight is much lower than from Calcutta.

The decline in the trade of the year was due entirely to insufficient crops in the tracts whence Calcutta and Bombay draw their supplies. In the Punjab and Sindh the harvests were abundant, and consequently from Karachi was shipped more than from all the rest of India put together.

Flour.—This trade is of quite recent creation. It is almost exclusively a Bombay trade, more than 48 million lbs. having been shipped from that port, where the flour is made in steam mills according to European methods, Persian wheat being employed to a large extent as being cheaper than Indian wheat. Very little goes to Europe as yet, only about 330,000 lbs. having been shipped to Belgium last year; but in course of time Indian flour should take its place with American in the English market.

Tea.—The exports continued on a large scale, but there was a heavy fall of prices in the year.

It is satisfactory to see the increase in the exports to Persia and the neighbouring countries. This increase to a large extent means a diversion of trade from Afghanistan, the extortionate dues charged in that country on tea from India in transit to countries beyond making the continuance of that route unprofitable. Hitherto the tea sent from India to Persia has been most largely foreign tea, from China and Java. Although the exports of such tea are still larger than those of Indian tea (1,673,000 lbs. were exported in the year), it would seem that it has lost the monopoly it possessed.

While the imports of Indian tea into England go on increasing, those of China tea continue to diminish. The following are the imports from India and China into England in the last six years :—

		From India.	From China.
		Lbs.	Lbs.
1884	- - -	63,208,309	143,770,806
1885	- - -	64,382,015	139,673,354
1886	- - -	73,466,795	145,308,298
1887	- - -	84,645,103	119,709,265
1888	- - -	89,873,653	105,735,129
1889	- - -	95,384,143	88,558,037

At last therefore England is taking more, and materially more, of Indian than of Chinese tea. An incident of interest to the tea trade was the reduction of the English import duty at the end of the year from sixpence to fourpence a pound.

Sugar.—There was a considerable revival in the trade in sugar, due probably to the remarkable fluctuations of price in Europe during the year, which led to much speculation. But the exports are still far below the point they reached several years ago before the extension of the beetroot sugar industry in Europe, fostered by bounties, brought prices down to a ruinous level.

Cotton.—The exports of raw cotton reached a quite unusually high figure, being in fact larger than the exports of any year since 1871, when the exports amounted to about $7\frac{1}{2}$ million cwt. But for this increase in the exports of cotton the trade of Bombay would have shown a decline in the values of exports generally in the year.

The Continent consumes about four-fifths of the exports, much of the cotton shipped to England being re-exported thither.

The quantity of cotton yarn exported has increased 184 per cent. in the last seven years, being at the average rate of more than 26 per cent. annually.

The progress of the spinning and weaving industry since 1876 is shown in the table appended :—

	Number of
	Mills.	Spindles.	Looms.
1876-77 - - -	47	1,100,112	9,139
1877-78 - - -	53	1,289,706	10,533

1889-90 - - -	114	2,934,637	22,078

Upwards of 98,000 persons are stated to have been employed in the mills at the end of 1889-90, and the capital invested is returned at 101 million of rupees; but several of the private mills make no return of their capital, the figures being confined to mills worked by joint stock companies.

In a Consular Report on Japan for the year 1889 it is stated that the import of cotton yarn into that country declined to the extent of 344,065*l.* in value, and that this large increase took place chiefly in the imports from Bombay. The comparative consumption in Japan of Bombay and English yarns is shown below for two years:—

	1888.	1889.
	Lbs.	Lbs.
British yarns - -	26,564,000	26,504,800
Bombay yarns - -	31,888,000	25,489,200

Jute.—Under raw jute the slight decrease in quantity was accompanied by a very large increase in value.

The increase in the manufactured material was entirely in cloths, not in bags, the result of a large demand for England and the United States.

Manures.—In 1888-89, 36,371 tons were shipped. Last year the exports were still larger, amounting to 45,673 tons, mainly bones. It appears that there has been quite a hunt for bones by export agents in every village adjacent to a railway line all over Northern India. It is instructive, Mr. O'Connor remarks, that, while Indian Agricultural Departments are discussing the uses and merits and the need of fertilisers, the Indian peasant is quietly selling, for export to foreign parts, every fragment of the best fertiliser he can find lying about the soil.

The following is a statement of the gross realisations on account of Customs duties for a series of years, not including some small and unclassified imports by post, &c. :—

The net import duty, which in the previous year had increased by about 23 per cent., mainly as the result of the new duty on mineral oil, showed a further increase of 7 per cent.

The export revenue fell off by 19 per cent., owing to the restriction of the rice trade.

Trade increased in every province, most largely in Burma, whence the export of rice was active, and but slightly in Bengal and Bombay. The rate of increase per cent. in each province was as follows: Bombay, 0.64; Bengal, 2; Madras, between 9 and 10; Burma, 19; Sind, about 14. In Bengal the small increase which is shown is due rather to increased export values—prices of jute and rice, for instance, having largely increased—than to an increase in the quantities exported. Imports were not so large as in the preceding year.

In Bombay also the import trade was slightly smaller, and the increase in export values was mainly due to the large quantity of cotton available for export combined with an increase in the price of it. This abundant supply of cotton saved the trade of Bombay from exhibiting an actual decline.

The usual statement follows of the amount of private trade with various countries, in order of importance:—

United Kingdom.—In the 20 years which have elapsed since 1871 the total trade of India has increased by about 77 per cent., but the trade with England has increased by only 56 per cent., and the proportion which trade with England bears to the whole trade is slowly declining. From a proportion of about 63 per cent. of the whole in 1870, it fell to about 56½ per cent. in 1880, the opening of the Suez Canal having caused a diversion of trade which formerly went through England. Five years later the proportion was about 55½ per cent., and now it is about 54 per cent. England, however, still has more than half the whole Indian trade, and her colonies have a substantial proportion of the remainder. The trade with England to-day is as large as was the whole trade of India with the world 20 years ago. This trade is compared below for five years:—

Germany.—The sudden increase in the trade with Germany merits attention. The following are the figures of imports and exports of merchandise in each of the last five years :—

—		Imports	Exports
		Rx.	Rx.
1885-86	- -	120,069	408,225
1886-87	- -	160,300	784,636

1888-89	- -	248,016	1,505,508
1889-90	- -	563,912	2,782,311

If this rate of increase, or anything approximating to it, should be maintained in the future, the trade between Germany and India will become one of considerable dimensions. Some attribute the marked increase in imports from Germany in the two last years to the operation of the English Merchandise Marks Act, the rigid administration of which had the effect of interfering with the transshipment trade and has led to the establishment of direct trade with India. This may be the case as regards some of the imports, but a material portion of the increase in the trade of the year was in the import of salt, the price of which ranged at a very high level in Calcutta and Rangoon throughout the year. The German lines of steamers established recently for direct intercourse with India must necessarily come out laden with salt until the import trade has so far increased that they can fill up with better cargo.

Russia.—From Russia an import trade has been created in the last four years which last year amounted to about Rx. 742,000, the imports consisting almost entirely of petroleum from Batoum. Contemporaneously with this import trade an export trade has been developed, the value of which has averaged in the four years Rx. 433,000, the average of the trade of the previous ten years having been only Rx. 100,000. The exports consist mainly of raw cotton, seeds, and indigo. The yarn and cloth spun and woven by the Russians from this raw cotton are sent into the markets of Central Asia, whence Indian cottons are rigorously excluded. Indigo from India is also kept out from the same region by heavy duties, and the people are compelled to obtain the dye, or stuffs dyed therewith, through Russia.

Trans-frontier trade

There was thus a falling off in the import trade, while the exports increased materially. A portion of the decline in the imports can, however, be accounted for without any reference to the condition of trade. In 1888-89 the Cashmere Durbar remitted a large sum of money to India in connexion with the construction of the Jamu railway line, and much less treasure was brought from the State last year. The difference accounts for nearly half of the whole decrease. The remainder is accounted for by a heavy decline in the imports of teak brought down the Salween from Karennee and Zimmé. This, it is stated, was largely due to the haste of the traders to get down to the registering post at Kado before the end of March 1889 all the timber they possibly could in order to escape payment of the enhanced duty of 7 per cent. which was levied with effect from the beginning of the year under review.

The above figures include imports by the Sind-Peshin Railway to the value of Rx. 299,704, and exports Rx. 1,763,971; but a material portion of this is really internal trade. Quite half the exports of the year consisted of railway material for the maintenance of the line and its extension, and the remainder consisted largely of supplies for Quetta and other settlements within the frontier. Of the imports also it is difficult to say how much really represents external trade. Arrangements are being made to reorganise the system of registration in such manner that the returns will include only foreign trade.

The following statement shows side by side for two years the trade of the three trans-frontier countries with which India has the largest commerce :—

In the case of Nepal both imports and exports increased. In 1888-89 an embargo was placed by the Durbar on the export of grain in consequence of a poor harvest. This having been removed the export of rice to India was carried on very largely, stimulated by the high prices which followed a scanty harvest in Behar. On the other hand the trade in timber somewhat fell off owing to regulations made by the Durbar impeding the trade.

The timber trade with Cashmere declined, but in most of the other larger lines of import trade (ghee, hides and skins, fruits, woollen goods and shawls) there was a substantial increase. The shawl trade remains much smaller than it used to be in the time of the late Maharaja. The export trade shows a large increase in European and Indian piece goods, and a small increase in tea, most of which, it is satisfactory to observe, is Indian tea.

The revival of trade with Cabul is attributed by the local authorities of the Punjab chiefly to the cessation of disturbances in the dominions of the Ameer, a circumstance which accounts for the larger trade done with Cabul in all the principal articles. The disturbances referred to are the Ghilzai and Afghan-Turkestan troubles.

The causes which have combined to prevent the growth of trade (internal disturbances excepted) continue to operate with increased intensity. Russian competition is keener and the facilities of transit in trans-Caspian territory greater, while the Russian fiscal restrictions against the intrusion of English and Indian goods from the East are increasingly severe. The transit duties levied by the Ameer are practically prohibitive of trade from the Indian frontier beyond the zone of Cabul, and latterly the effect of these heavy dues has been increased by relatively light dues imposed on goods imported from Russian territory into Afghanistan.

The heading of Western China is a new feature in the returns, the registration having commenced in June 1889. Imports were trifling, amounting only to Rx. 13,817, raw silk, grain, ponies, and hides being the principal items. The exports consisted chiefly of raw cotton (value Rx. 44,700 out of a total of Rx. 52,629), salt constituting the bulk of the remainder. It may reasonably be expected that the trade will largely increase.

Trade of Aden.

In the Indian trade accounts Aden is treated as a foreign country. As, however, it is actually a dependency of the Presidency of Bombay, it may be interesting to give here a tabular view of the entire trade of the dependency. The figures below are for 1889-90, and are arranged under the divisions adopted in the local trade report :—
