PREFACE

The thesis set forth in the following pages was first developed under the title "Foundations of Economic Value." It might have been related with almost equal pertinence, however, to anthropology, psychology, sociology or economic history, and the present title more fully indicates its field.

The author expresses her gratitude to those members of the Faculty of Harvard University and Radcliffe College who generously assisted her in the development of her thought, even when, in some instances, it ran counter to their own: to Professor A. M. Tozzer in anthropology, Professor R. B. Perry in philosophy, and Professor A. P. Usher in economic history. Less directly, but even more fundamentally, however, she is indebted to the stimulating and sustaining influence of her three teachers in economic theory, Professors T. N. Carver, F. W. Taussig and A. A. Young.
