for a share in the national dividend. It lies also in the encouragement of factory laws, of educational and sanitary laws, by which the health, and strength, and happiness of the labouring class may be preserved. It lies in the exercise of political power, so that the instrument of government may not be used for the selfish aggrandisement of the few, but for the advantage of the many. It lies in the furtherance of public opinion and Christian sympathy for the purpose of encouraging all individuals in the community in their efforts to live an honest and decent life. Notwithstanding the concentration of wealth, it is doubtful if these great forces have ever been so active, or so powerful, as at the present time.
