FOREWORD

That attractive samples and well-prepared advertising matter, in the commercial language of the country, constitute effective means of stimulating the interest of prospective foreign customers is almost axiomatic, and this is as true in the more intensive cultivation of older markets as it is in the preliminary testing of new fields. The fact is not generally realized, however, that samples and catalogues to foreign destinations can not simply be dropped in the mails, as they are for domestic distribution. Even single copies of catalogues are dutiable in some countries, and not all governments take the same view of what constitutes a sample and when it has no commercial value. Moreover, a method of shipment that serves admirably for one area may be exactly the wrong thing to do in another.

Failure to take account of tariff regulations and related conditions of admission into a given country all too frequently results in the waste of costly catalogues and samples through nondelivery or in arousing resentment on the part of the prospective customer by being called upon to go through tedious formalities and to pay sizeable charges on packages for which he has not asked. To help American exporters avoid such experiences is the purpose of this handbook. It carries full information on every essential point that a shipper needs to know in sending samples and printed advertising matter to any country of the globe.

On shipments sent by mail postage should in all cases be fully prepaid. Where customs duties are involved, they can not be prepaid except on printed advertising matter sent by mail to certain British areas; but there are other ways of handling the situation, which are discussed herein.

So many changes have occurred in the information contained in the first edition of this handbook—published in 1929 and twice reprinted—that it has been rewritten to incorporate these changes and to add certain further information helpful to export managers and others charged with placing advertising matter in the hands of foreign customers.

This study is based upon the most reliable foreign sources of information available, and is believed to be correct as of July 15, 1932. Where the customs laws are not clear as to the treatment of samples and advertising matter, American consuls and commercial attachés have checked and elaborated the results of research made in the Division of Foreign Tariffs. Grateful acknowledgment is here given to these representatives of the United States in foreign countries and also to the Division of International Postal Service of the United States Post Office Department for their cooperation in making this bulletin complete and accurate.

Special problems on the shipment of samples and advertising matter to a particular country may be submitted to the Division of Foreign Tariffs, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, at Washington, or to any of the district offices of the bureau. Questions of a distinctly postal nature should be addressed to the Division of International Postal Service, Post Office Department, Washington. Samples of the commodities and advertising matter involved should accompany the request.

FREDERICK M. FEIKER, Director,
Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

JULY, 1932.

APPENDIX

UNITED STATES NONCONTIGUOUS TERRITORIES

ALASKA, HAWAII, PUERTO RICO, AND VIRGIN ISLANDS

There are no customs formalities governing trade between the United States proper and Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and the American Virgin Islands beyond the usual export declaration (Form 7525) made out on all freight and express shipments from continental United States. Such shipments are governed by interstate commerce regulations. Foreign goods entering these Territories fall under the provisions of the United States customs tariff, except in the Virgin Islands, which have their own tariff.

Domestic postal regulations also apply, except that a postal export declaration (Form S-250) is required on packages valued at $25 or more shipped from one business concern to another. Similarly, the United States marking and consular regulations on foreign goods govern in these Territories.

In Puerto Rico certain goods are subject to an internal-revenue tax, ranging up to 10 per cent (and even higher on a very few commodities), with a 2 per cent ad valorem sales tax on all goods not subject to the internal tax. These taxes apply to all sales, whether the goods be of local, United States, or foreign origin, but neither is levied on printed advertising matter for free distribution. There are also special regulations in Puerto Rico relating to pharmaceutical preparations of both foreign and domestic manufacture.

GUAM

Imports from the United States, if forwarded with the proper documents, are not subject to duty in Guam. Samples of no commercial value from any source, not being subject to duty, would not require special documentation, nor would advertising material sent by mail as "printed matter."

Mail of all classes sent to Guam from the United States is considered as domestic mail, and the domestic regulations govern, except that the postal export declaration (Form S-250) is required on shipments valued at $25 or more forwarded from one merchant to another.

There are no regulations in regard to the marking of goods or packages imported into Guam.

All shipments to Guam from the United States must be accompanied by a certificate of origin. This sworn certificate may be appended to the commercial invoice, which must furnish the following information: A description of the goods, showing their character, quantity, and price; the name of the consignee, the name of the vessel, and the place to which the goods are consigned; marks and numbers on packages; value of the goods; and all costs incurred in packing for shipment.

The invoices must be made out in United States currency and must be sworn to by the shipper.

Shipper's export declaration Form 7525 should be filled out for freight and express shipments.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS

Imports from the United States into the Philippines on direct bill of lading are free of duty. Samples and advertising material sent by sample post or as "printed matter" do not require documents of any kind.

The United States domestic mail regulations govern all classes of mail sent from this country to the Philippines, except that the postal export declaration (Form S-250) is required on packages to merchants if valued at $25 or more.

All imported articles of foreign manufacture such as are usually or ordinarily marked, stamped, branded, or labeled and all packages containing such or other imported articles must respectively be plainly marked, stamped, branded, or labeled in legible words in a conspicuous place to indicate the country of their origin and the quantity of their contents; and until so marked, stamped, branded, or labeled they are not delivered to the importer. Should any article of imported merchandise be marked, stamped, branded, or labeled to indicate a quantity, number, or measurement not actually contained in such article, no delivery of the same will be made to the importer until the mark, stamp, brand, or label, as the case may be, is changed to conform to the facts of the case.

Commercial invoices in duplicate should accompany shipments by parcel post, freight, or express from the United States to the Philippines. This invoice should contain an accurate description of the itemized merchandise, showing the quantity, weight, and value, marks and numbers on packages, and destination of goods. In order to obtain preferential duty-free importation the following certificate of origin should be printed, written, typewritten, or stamped upon the invoice and signed by the shipper:

I hereby certify that the above-described articles are of the growth, product, or manufacture of the United States or its possessions, and that no drawback of import duties has been or will be claimed thereon, and that this invoice is true and correct in all particulars.

Both copies of the invoice must be signed.

Shipper's export declaration Form 7525 should be filled out for freight and express shipments.

TUTUILA (AMERICAN SAMOA)

While there is no direct provision for the duty-free importation of samples of no value and advertising matter into the American islands of the Samoan group, of which Tutuila is the most important, small parcels of either samples or advertising would not be held for duty, whether sent by sample post or as "printed matter," or by parcel post. Other samples would be subject to the general rate of 15 per cent of the value applying on most commodities. (The United States is considered a "foreign country" in so far as the customs are concerned.)

The regulations governing the United States domestic mail are in effect for all classes of mail to Samoa except that the export declaration (Form S-250) is required on all shipments valued at $25 or more forwarded by one merchant to another.

There are no regulations in regard to the marking of goods or packages to these islands.

No special documents are required on shipments to American Samoa. The ordinary commercial invoice and ocean bill of lading suffice. The usual shipper's export declaration (Form 7525) should be filled out for freight and express shipments.
