

With the compliments of INDIA'S J. C. Coyajee
CURRENCY AND EXCHANGE

PROBLEMS

1925—1927

Dhananjayrao Gadgil Library

GIPE-PUNE-006866

BY

J. C. COYAJEE

THE BOOK COMPANY,
4, 4A, COLLEGE SQUARE,
CALCUTTA.

Published by
GIRINDRA NATH MITRA
4/4A, College Square,
CALCUTTA.

Printed by S. Basu
at the KALITARA PRESS
16, Townshend Road, Bowbazar,
CALCUTTA.

NOTE.

I venture to place this brochure before the public in the hope that it might assist the public in general and students of economic matters in particular, to make up their minds about the main issues in the present controversy on Indian Exchange and Currency. The articles contained in the brochure have appeared as recent contributions to local newspapers. I am obliged to the "Statesman" for the publication of one of the interviews. My obligations are even greater to the "Forward" and to its editors who have displayed a generous and impartial spirit in allowing many of the other contributions to appear in its columns. Obviously a newspaper follows the true path of journalistic duty when it allows both sides to have their say, leaving the public to sit in judgment on the issues. I have also to thank Mr. H. Sinha, M. Sc., Mr. Manoranjan Bhattacharyya M. A. and Mr. S. Roy M. A. for encouragement or assistance in getting the pages through the press.

J. C. C.

Contents

	Pages
I. The adjustment of prices to the 1s. 6d. ratio, and the admissions of Sir Purushottamdas and of Mr. Madon in that connection—Co-operative statistics disprove the allegations of injury to Indian agriculture from the ratio.	1—5
II. Alleged impossible burdens laid on the agriculturists by the Exchange—Evidence of co-operative statistics—No evidence that burden of agricultural debts has been increased—Has the purchasing power of the agriculturists fallen?—Limits of the influence of any Exchange policy on agricultural prosperity.	6—12
III. Allegations of manipulation of currency refuted—The influence of contraction of currency shown to be exaggerated—Factors which are likely to ensure the maintainability of the 18d. ratio.	13—19
IV. The verdict of co-operative statistics further examined—The agriculturist's interest in import—The agriculturist and the price of silver—Land revenue and the ratio—Who gains what the farmer loses?—World factors affecting agriculture.	20—27
V. Diversity of views on gold-currency—Futility of a slender gold-currency—Arguments for gold currency examined—Difficulties in the way of working a full gold standard in India—Cost of a gold currency.	28—34

	Pages
VI. The Fowler Committee's Report answers and over-rules all the arguments of our critics—What is a natural ratio?—The success of the policy of 1898 is a happy augury for similar policy proposed now.	35—38
VII. The real test of the value of the Currency Report—The place of that Report in the Economic history of India—The Report is a landmark in Economic Liberalism—The numerous inconsistencies of the critics.	39—43
VIII. A letter to the Statesman in reply to Mr. G. Birla.	44
IX. A letter to the Statesman in reply to Sir Purushottamdas Thakurdas.	45—46