

Dhananjayrao Gadgil Library

GIPE-PUNE-002708

CRITICAL MISCELLANIES

CRITICAL
MISCELLANIES

BY JOHN MORLEY

VOL. II.

London
MACMILLAN AND CO.
AND NEW YORK
1888

All rights reserved

First printed 1886
Reprinted 1888.

κ M 38

B8.2

2708

CONTENTS OF VOL. II.

VAUVENARGUES.

	PAGE
The influence of Pascal	1
Vauvenargues holds the balance between him and the votaries of Perfectibility	4
Birth, education, and hard life of Vauvenargues	4
Life in Paris, and friendship with Voltaire	10
His religious sentiment	12
His delicacy, reserve, and psychagogic quality	15
Certain inability to appreciate marked originality	17
Criticisms on Molière, Racine, and Corneille	19
Comparison with English aphoristic writers and moralists	20
Character the key to his theory of greatness	25
His exaltation of spontaneous feeling, a protest against Rochefoucauld and Pascal	26
His plea for a normal sense of human relation, the same	28
His doctrine of the Will connected with his doctrine of Character	29
Antipathy to ascetic restrictions	33
Two ways of examining character: that followed by Vauvenargues	34
Examples of his style	36
The beauty of his nature to be read in his face	40

TURGOT.

I.

	PAGE
Birth and family descent	41
His youth at the Sorbonne	47
Intellectual training	52
His college friends : Morellet, and Loménie de Brienne .	54
Turgot refused to become an ecclesiastic	56
His revolt against dominant sophisms of the time	60
Letter to Buffon	61
Precocity of his intellect	65
Letter to Madame de Graffigny	65
Illustrates the influence of Locke	69
Views on marriage	72
On the controversy opened by Rousseau	72
Turgot's power of grave suspense	76

II.

First Discourse at the Sorbonne	78
Analysis of its contents	80
Criticisms upon it	86
It is one-sided	87
And not truly historic	88
Fails to distinguish doctrine from organisation	89
Omits the Christianity of the East	90
And economic conditions	92
The contemporary position of the Church in Europe	93

III.

Second Discourse at the Sorbonne	96
Its pregnant thesis of social causation	97

CONTENTS.

vii

	PAGE
Compared with the thesis of Bossuet	99
And of Montesquieu	100
Analysis of the Second Discourse	102
Characteristic of Turgot's idea of Progress	106
Its limitation	108
Great merit of the Discourse, that it recognises ordered succession	110

IV.

Turgot appointed Intendant of the Limousin	111
Functions of an Intendant	112
Account of the Limousin	114
Turgot's passion for good government	118
He attempts to deal with the Taille	119
The road Corvée	121
Turgot's endeavours to enlighten opinion	126
Military service	129
„ transport	131
The collection of taxes	132
Turgot's private benevolence	133
Introduces the potato	134
Founds an academy	135
Encourages manufacturing industry	136
Enlightened views on Usury	137
Has to deal with a scarcity	138
His plans	139
Instructive facts connected with this famine	142
Turgot's Reflections on the Formation and Distribution of Wealth	149

V.

Turgot made Controller-General	150
His reforms	151

	PAGE
Their reception	153
His unpopularity	156
Difficulties with the king	157
His dismissal	158
His pursuits in retirement	159
Conclusion	162

CONDORCET.

Condorcet's peculiar position and characteristics	163
Birth, instruction, and early sensibility	166
Friendship with Voltaire and with Turgot	170, 171
Compared with these two great men	172
Currents of French opinion and circumstance in 1774	177
Condorcet's principles drawn from two sources	180
His view of the two English Revolutions	181
His life up to the convocation of the States-General	183
Energetic interest in the elections	189
Want of prevision	191
His participation in political activity down to the end of 1792	193
Chosen one of the secretaries of the Legislative Assembly	198
Elected to the Convention	200
Resistance to the Jacobins, proscription, and death	201
Condorcet's tenacious interest in human welfare	210
Two currents of thought in France at the middle of the eighteenth century	215
Quesnay and the Physiocrats	216
Montesquieu	219
Turgot completed Montesquieu's historical conception	222
Kant's idea of a Universal or Cosmo-Political History	226

CONTENTS.	ix
	PAGE
Condorcet fuses the conceptions of the two previous sets of thinkers	229
Account of his Tableau des Progrès	230
Omits to consider history of moral improvement	233
And misinterprets the religious element	234
His view of Mahometanism	238
Of Protestantism	240
And of philosophic propagandism	241
Various acute remarks in his sketch	243
His boundless hopes for the future	244
Three directions which our anticipations may take :—
(1) International equality	246
(2) Internal equality	247
(3) Substantial perfecting of nature and society	248
Natural view of the formation of character	252
Central idea of all his aspirations	253

JOSEPH DE MAISTRE.

The Catholic reaction in France at the beginning of the century	257
De Maistre the best type of the movement	262
Birth, instruction, and early life	263
Invasion of Savoy, and De Maistre's flight	268
At Lausanne, Venice, and Cagliari	270
Sent in 1802 as minister to St. Petersburg	275
Hardships of his life there from 1802 to 1817	276
Circumstances of his return home, and his death	285
De Maistre's view of the eighteenth century	287
And of the French Revolution	291
The great problem forced upon the Catholics by it	293

	PAGE
De Maistre's way of dealing with the question of the divine method of government	293
Nature of divine responsibility for evil	294
On Physical Science	298
Significance of such ideas in a mind like De Maistre's	299
Two theories tenable by social thinkers after the Revolution	303
De Maistre's appreciation of the beneficent work of the Papacy in the past	307
Insists on the revival of the papal power as the essential condition of a restored European order	313
Views Christianity from the statesman's point of view	314
His consequent hatred of the purely speculative temper of the Greeks	316
His object was social or political	318
Hence his grounds for defending the doctrine of Infallibility	319
The analogy which lay at the bottom of his Ultramontane doctrine	320
His hostility to the authority of General Councils	323
His view of the obligation of the canons on the Pope	325
His appeal to European statesmen	326
Comte and De Maistre	329
His strictures on Protestantism	331
Futility of his aspirations	335