PREFACE.

IN the First Series of these Fragments I addressed myself chiefly to young persons; and, in like manner, my principal object in this continuation is to engage the attention of those who, from having entered the service in less stirring times than I passed through, may perhaps have found it more difficult to gain experience for themselves.

I have likewise ventured to introduce some odds and ends of technical information which seemed calculated to interest or to amuse other people not directly connected with the sea.
