

Dhananjayrao Gadgil Library

GIPE-PUNE-000916

LIFE OF LORD LAWRENCE

VOL. II.

Lammie

BIographies in Facts

OF

LORD LAWRENCE

BY

R. BOSWORTH SMITH, M.A.

LATE FELLOW OF TRINITY COLLEGE, OXFORD : ASSISTANT MASTER AT HARROW SCHOOL :

AUTHOR OF 'MOHAMMED AND MOHAMMEDANISM'

'CARTHAGE AND THE CARTHAGINIANS'

ETC.

IN TWO VOLUMES

VOL. II.

WITH PORTRAITS AND MAPS

THIRD EDITION

LONDON

SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15 WATERLOO PLACE

1883

All rights reserved

V2, L. M69w

B3.2

916

CONTENTS

OF

THE SECOND VOLUME.

CHAPTER I.

THE HOUR AND THE MAN.

MAY—JUNE 1857.

PAGE

Scope of chapters on the Mutiny—Sir John Lawrence the ruling spirit in the Punjab—'Not our system, but our men'—Resources of Punjab—Europeans—Regulars—Irregulars—Which way would the Irregulars go?—Distribution of Troops—Chief subordinate Officers where placed—Sir John Lawrence at Rawul Pindi—Montgomery at Lahore—His Idiosyncrasies and his Measures—Disarmament of Sepoys—Extreme difficulty of the Question—Other Precautions—Umritsur and Ferozapore—Sir John Lawrence's Opinion of Lahore Officers—'Pucca trumps'—His Illness—His first Measures—'Retake Delhi'—His Mind imperial, not provincial—His first Telegrams—His first Letters—His Predictions—Determines to raise fresh Troops—The Movable Column and Neville Chamberlain—Responsibility of each District Officer—Council at Rawul-Pindi, and what went on there—General Reed—Letter to Mangles—Sir John Lawrence's Humour—Stirring Letters to General Anson—A forward Policy—'Do something'—'Take a wide view'—'Avoid isolation'—Letters from General Anson, and differences of opinion—State of things at Umballa—Loyalty of 'protected' Sikh Chiefs, Puttiala, Jheend, and Nabha—Anson will not disarm the Troops—Vie vis of Lawrence—Commissariat requires sixteen days!—Cholera—Death of Anson—Sir Henry Barnard—Narrow escape of Siege Train—Advance on Delhi—Battle of Budli-ke-Serai—Our Position on the Ridge—On what did our hopes rest? 1

CHAPTER II.

MUTINY POLICY OF JOHN LAWRENCE.

MAY—JUNE 1857.

Practical Justification of Sir John Lawrence's Policy—Maxims in dealing with Mutiny—Move Irregulars in from Frontier—Isolate the Regulars—Raise fresh Troops—Utilise national Feelings of Sikhs—Keep the Administration going—Don't go too fast—Report everything—Coke—Wilde—

Advantages of Position at Rawul Pindi—Less worry, more Work—Bird's-eye view—Near to frontier—Telegraphic communication—'I like issuing orders by telegraph'—Knowledge of his Subordinates—'Give the horses their heads'—Enormous Correspondence—Lady Lawrence at Murri—Reminiscence by Lady Lawrence—By Edward Thornton—'A flagrant escapade'—What it shows—'Hang the cul-de-sac!'—Caution of Sir John Lawrence—Letters to Montgomery—Prudence—Letters to Lord Elphinstone and Major Hamilton—Advocates strong Measures at first—Opinion of Hodson—Letters to Lord Canning, Hervey Greathed, and Colvin—Utilises his Knowledge of Delhi—Bartle Frere and his pre-eminent Services in the Mutiny—'The extremities must take care of themselves'—Frere and Lawrence compared—Mutinous letters intercepted—Outbreak in Peshawur District—Importance of Peshawur—'A nest of devils'—A Master-Stroke—Its Influence on Borderers—Exploits of Nicholson—'Terrible courage'—Disaffection of Irregular Cavalry—Fate of the Fifty-fifth and John Becher—Lawrence obliged to recall to Peshawur Regiments which he had sent off for Delhi—General Reed goes to Delhi—Was General Johnstone to come to Peshawur?—Lawrence proposes to give Sepoys their Discharge as a Safety-Valve—His Love of Justice—His Mercy—'Clemency Canning'—Correspondence with Edwardes and Cotton—'Punish to deter, not for revenge'—Punishment Parade at Peshawur—Eighty men's lives saved by Lawrence—Outbreak at Jullundur—Lawrence's Advice—Incapacity of Johnstone—Four Native Regiments go off for Delhi—Indignation of Lawrence—'Some of our Commanders are worse enemies than the Mutineers themselves'—George Ricketts at Loodiana, and his Exploits—General Gowan—Disarmament at Mooltan by Crawford Chamberlain—Selected by John Lawrence for the Purpose—Napoleonic policy—'Push on'—Save the well-disposed—Separate Punjabis from Hindustania, and save them—Proclamation to Sepoys

CHAPTER III.

THE PUNJAB AND DELHI.

JUNE—JULY 1857.

What our Presence on the Ridge implied—Three striking Illustrations of Lawrence's Character in three Parts of Punjab at same Time—Arrival of Guides at Delhi—Their March—'The Ladies' of the Guides and John Lawrence—His romantic Affection for the Guides—'Get them to keep themselves clean and dry'—'Their old battered faces'—Reminiscence by Sir Henry Daly—'The biggest man I have ever seen'—'King John'—Magnanimity—Neville Chamberlain sent to Delhi—Nicholson made Brigadier-General—Significance of this—Alexander Taylor sent to Delhi—His Character and History—What he did at Delhi—Reminiscence by him—'Nikkal Seyn's Fakirs'—James sent to Peshawur—'I will get on with anybody'—Arthur Brandreth—His Characteristics—Reminiscence by him—Nihal Sing Chachi—Opinions about Hodson—Lawrence refuses to employ him—'Hodson's Horse'—The 'old Sikhs'—A two-edged Weapon—Disappointment when Delhi did not fall—Projects of Assault—Differences of Opinion—Incessant fighting—Exploits and Heroes of

Delhi Field Force—Besieged, not Besiegers—Sufferings and Losses—Stream of Reinforcements to Mutineers—General Barnard—His Strength and Weakness—His Death—Baird Smith—‘A gamester’s throw’—Why was the Ridge not given up?—Unique Position of Sir John Lawrence—Holds all the Threads in his Hands—His Influence on the Ridge—In Delhi itself—Fate of a Kashmiri—‘I was there, and therefore I know it was so’—His Correspondents before Delhi—Supplies sent by him—Pioneers, Sappers and Miners, Baggage—Animals, Carriage, Sand-Bags, Saddles, Tents—Prudent Audacity—‘Too much zeal’—‘Don’t let the Punjabis see their strength’—Careful mixture of Races in new Regiments—Divide et Impera—Letters to Edwardes, Montgomery, Cotton, Reed, Daly, and Lord Canning—Few from Lord Canning—Why?—Advised suppression of General Hewitt—Overtures from King of Delhi—Critical Condition of our Army at Delhi—Dangers at Lawrence’s own Doors—Rawul Pindi—Jhelum—Sealkote—What was to be done?—‘Symptoms of Uneasiness’—Disarmament at Rawul Pindi—Personal Courage, Presence of Mind, and Humanity of Lawrence—Letter of Arthur Brandreth—Rising at Jhelum—Partial Success—Rising at Sealkote—Complete Success—The Station sacked—Escape of the Mutineers—Nicholson Brigadier-General at the Head of his Column—Differences of Opinion—Disarms two Regiments—‘Don’t write long yarns’—His Flank March—His Endurance—Anecdotes—Destruction of Sealkote Mutineers—Views of Sir John Lawrence—Always regards the ultimate as well as the immediate Consequences—Sends Nicholson to Delhi

84

CHAPTER IV.

ABANDONMENT OF PESHAWUR.

JUNE—AUGUST 1857.

What if Delhi should not fall?—Limits to Loyalty even of Sikhs—Hypothetical Abandonment of Peshawur—Statesmanlike View—Three Reasons for detailed Explanation of Sir John Lawrence’s Policy—Lord Cranbrook’s Taunt—Lord Lawrence’s own Wish—Colonel Randall—Correspondence with Herbert Edwardes and Lord Canning—‘We must look ahead’—Advantages and Disadvantages of Peshawur—Views of Edwardes and Cotton—‘Delhi is not India’—‘Don’t let yourself be sucked to death by inches’—‘Let Delhi go’—‘Edwardes’ Plan would have required us to retain all the European troops in the Punjab’—Practical Answer of Sir John Lawrence—‘Delhi is the critical Point’—Appeals for more Aid from Delhi—Whispers of Retreat from Greathed and General Wilson—Critical Position in Punjab—Answer of John Lawrence—‘I look for neither fame nor abuse’—His ‘unalterable Resolution’—This is the crisis of our fate—Letters to Wilson, Daly, Norman, Edwardes, Cotton, Lord Canning—Termination of Peshawur Episode—What does it show?—Peshawur the ‘dream and the madness’ of Dost Mohammed’s Life—Lawrence alone knew the exact State of Things in Punjab and at Delhi—Memorandum by Sir John Lawrence after Mutiny—His Views supported by Sir James Outram and Sir Neville Chamberlain—Remark by Princes

Albert—Marked Features in Lawrence's Character brought out by Peshawur Episode—Breadth of View—Vitality of Action—Fearlessness of Responsibility—Loyalty—Local Experience—Moral Courage—Two Kinds of Courage—Remark to Lady Trevelyan—The 'Happy Warrior'.	PAGE 134
--	-------------

CHAPTER V.

SIEGE AND CAPTURE OF DELHI.

JULY—SEPTEMBER 1857.

Sir John Lawrence leaves Rawul-Pindi and arrives at Lahore—Nicholson and his Column—He 'bags' a Battery—Drawbacks to his Appointment—The Lahore Authorities—Condition of Sepoys—To be pitied as well as blamed—Outbreak of 26th Regiment—Their Escape and their Annihilation—Conduct of Cooper—The Crisis in the Punjab—His own Account of his Proceedings—Opinions of Lord Canning, Sir John Lawrence, and Lord Stanley—'That nauseous despatch'—Outbreak at Ferozepore—Brigadier Innes—Outbreak at Peshawur—Annihilation of 51st Regiment—Letters from Edwardes—'News from Lucknow'—Death of Sir Henry Lawrence—Sensation produced by it—His permanent Influence—The two Brothers once more compared—The last man from the Punjab—Runbeer Sing and the Kashmere Contingent—Run to Jullundur—No Reinforcements from England—The Siege Train—Condition of Mutineers in Delhi—Arrival of Nicholson on the Ridge—His Appearance and Reception—His great Exploit at Nujjufghur—Nobody looks askance at him now—'Knight him on the spot'—'Two Irregular Pillars'—Letters to Lord Canning, Lord Elphinstone, Mangles, Colvin, Neville Chamberlain, Nicholson—'Take Delhi, or perish in the struggle!'—Floods and Pestilence—'Old Nick' is a forward fellow—Nicholson's Complaints of Everything and Everybody—General Archdale Wilson—'Keep him up to the Mark'—Letters to Wilson, Norman, Greathed—Anxious to save Sikhs in Delhi—Nicholson's Opinion of Randall—Arrival of Siege Train, of Jummoo Troops, and Wilde—'We have sent every man we could spare, perhaps more'—Letters to Frere and Nicholson—Excitement of Nicholson—Letter from him—His 'pen-and-ink work'—Honours in store for him—Condition of the General in command—Fortifications of Delhi—Alexander Taylor—The Batteries—The Bombardment—Efforts of the Mutineers—The Breaches—The Assaulting Columns—The Assault—Nicholson falls—Critical Condition of our Force—'Fall back or go on?'—Capture of City and Palace—Capture of the King—Capture of the Princes—Their Murder—Character and Career of Hodson—Death of Nicholson—His Burial—Opinions of Hope Grant, Herbert Edwardes, Colonel Randall—Grief of Sir John Lawrence—His General Order—His Opinion—Results of Fall of Delhi on Mutiny—Who had done most towards it?—Sir John Lawrence and his Subordinates—Their relations to each other—Did his Subordinates save the Punjab in spite of him?—Some Characteristics of Sir John Lawrence—Opinions of Sir Robert Montgomery, Sir Herbert Edwardes, Sir Henry Norman, Sir Archdale Wilson, Lord Canning	166
---	-----

CHAPTER VI.

JOHN LAWRENCE AS A CONQUEROR.

SEPTEMBER 1867—FEBRUARY 1859.

PAGE

Delhi did not fall too soon—Rising at Murri—Lady Lawrence—Rising at Gogaira—Critical Condition of Punjab—The Punjabis feel their Strength—'All that I have done has been off my own bat'—Prudence of Lawrence—The Jungles—Reinforcements from Lahore—Redress of Grievances—Condemnation of Cruelty—Crawford Chamberlain and his Exploits—Letters from Lawrence—Suppression of Insurrection—Arthur Brandreth succeeded by Edward Paske—Reminiscence by Paske—Gravest Cause of Anxiety—Condition of Delhi—Deaths of Colvin and Hervey Greathed—Delhi ultimately to revert to Sir John Lawrence—Martial Law—Looting of Delhi—Moving Scenes—The Prize Agents—The Military Governor—The Magistrate—The Palace and the King and Queen—'Plough up Delhi'—'Sow its site with salt'—'Destroy the Jumma Musjid'—Views of Sir John Lawrence as to the Shahzadahs—The Population of the City—The Prize Agents, the King, the City, and the Palace—The Reign of Terror—The Military Commission and the Special Commissioners—Did Sir John Lawrence swim with the Stream?—Hodson's Guarantees—Letters to Lord Canning, Lord Elphinstone, General Penny—Lawrence goes down to Delhi to stop further Bloodshed and Plunder—His Measures—Takes away Powers of Life and Death from Individuals—Striking Reminiscence by Sir Richard Temple—Condemnation of what had been done—'It is not half strong enough'—Disposition to Revenge in Imperial Races—General Character of English Rule in India—Views of Lord Elphinstone, Lord Canning, the Queen—Reminiscence of Lord Canning by Sir Frederick Halliday—Lady Lawrence joins her Husband at Lahore, and leaves for England . 230

CHAPTER VII.

JOHN LAWRENCE AS A PACIFICATOR.

SEPTEMBER 1857—JULY 1858.

Views of the Queen and Prince Albert on the Emergency in India—Sir Colin Campbell Commander-in-Chief—Earnestness of Lawrence's Letters during his last Eighteen Months in India—Vox cygnea—Letters from and to Sir Colin Campbell, from and to General Mansfield, Chief of the Staff—Mansfield's View of Lawrence—First Relief of the Residency at Lucknow—Havelock and Outram—Second Relief by Sir Colin Campbell—Abandonment of the Residency and Death of Havelock—Appeals to Lawrence for Aid—His Answer—Stream of Reinforcements from him to Sir Colin Campbell—Was the War to be one of Extermination?—Lawrence in favour of 'discriminating amnesty'—Presses his Views on Mansfield, Colin Campbell, and Lord Canning—Capture of Lucknow by Sir Colin Campbell—Confiscation Proclamation in Oude—Its perplexing Character—Condemned by Lawrence, Outram, and Lord Ellenborough—Lord Ellenborough's Letter and Resignation—Sir Robert Montgomery, Chief Commissioner of Oude—Punjab the Nurse of Indian Statesmen as well as Heroes—Instances—Punjab Traditions still unbroken—Old Pun-

jabis come back—Lessons to be drawn from the Mission of the Lumsdens to Candahar—Silence of Lord Dalhousie—He speaks out at last—Correspondence with him—Correspondence with Sir Charles Trevelyan—His Career—Remarks of Macaulay—Letters of 'Indophilus'—The Lawrence Asylum—Civil Service thrown open to Competition—Views of Lawrence—'Justice degenerating into a savage revenge'—'General war of white man against black'—Illustrations—A 'white Pandey'—'Peafowls, partridges, and Pandies'—'The Avenger'—'Do you fear God or man?'—Appeals by Lawrence in favour of Amnesty to Sir Colin Campbell, to Lord Canning, to Lord Dalhousie, to Lord Stanley—Striking Letters—'We want a discriminative amnesty and a dictator'—Correspondence with Meredith Townshend—The 'Friend of India'—'England may not awake before it is too late'—Fall of Gwalior—Its Recovery by Sir Hugh Rose—Sir Robert Napier in Central India—'Deal largely with the Sepoy question'—At last Lawrence's Views win the day—Fifteen thousand Punjab Sepoys sent to their Homes without Mishap—The 'Wafadar Pultan,' or 'Faithful Regiment'—Rewards of faithful Sikh Chiefs—Forced Loan repaid—Cry for 'Elimination of all Unchristian principles from Government of India'—How this came about—What did it imply?—Religious Character of chief Punjabi Officers—Religious Belief of Sir John Lawrence—Manifesto of Sir Herbert Edwardes—Reply of Sir John Lawrence—Its comprehensive and tolerant Character—His Views on the Bible in Schools, on Christian Missions, on the Endowment of native Religions by the State, on the recognition of Caste, on the observance of Holy Days among the Natives, on Native Codes of Law, on public Religious Processions—'Christian things done in a Christian way'—'Unchristian things done in the name of Christianity'—Toleration and its Growth—Mosque at Agra given back—The Queen's Proclamation—Magna Charta of Religious Liberty	267
--	-----

CHAPTER VIII.

RECOGNITION OF SERVICES.

JANUARY 1858—FEBRUARY 1859.

End of East India Company—Congratulations to Sir John Lawrence—Honours—Lord Panmure and the G.C.B.—Freedom of the City of London—Baronetcy—Seat in the Privy Council—Seat in the new Indian Council offered him—Letter of Lord Stanley—Why not a Peerage?—Resolution of Court of Directors and Proprietors—Annuity of 2,000*l.*—Speeches of Sir Frederick Currie and Captain Eastwick—Quotation from Eastwick—'Nurm and Gurm'—Remark of Lord Clyde—Correspondence with Lord Clyde—Letter to Currie on his Services and their Reward—Was Lawrence to be Governor-General?—Heimweh—'I am fairly used up, and want to go home'—'You appear to be an evergreen'—Who was to take his place in the Punjab?—Lawrence's Views of Montgomery, Edwardes, Frere, &c.—Lieutenant-Governor of Punjab—Presses for 'honours' for his Subordinates—Letters to Lord Stanley—Sir Alexander Lawrence and Charles Bernard—Letter to his Sister Letitia—Outbreak of Cholera at Murri and Peshawur—Letter to Sydney Cotton on Condition of Soldiers—Last Visit to the Frontier—Reminiscence by Temple—

State Visit to Maharaja of Kashmere—Jung Bahadur—His Services and Views—Reminiscence by J. H. Batten—'I would have let down the Maharani on Jan Larens'—'Don't go yourself'—'Won't something happen when he goes?'—Leave of Absence asked for and given—Condition of Country—Danger of too many Punjabi Troops—First sod of first Punjab Railway—Tam bello quam pace—'He could do a little mischief'—Farewell Address to Sir John Lawrence from Punjabis—His Reply—He sets Sail—'Be prepared for such a reception in England as no one has had for twenty years'

327

CHAPTER IX.

HOME LIFE IN ENGLAND.

FEBRUARY 1860—DECEMBER 1863.

The Dover Pier—The Family Meeting—Addresses of Congratulation—The Guildhall—Speech of Sir John Lawrence—Willis's Rooms—Address by 8,000 Persons—Letter of Mr. Gladstone—D.C.L. at Oxford and Cambridge—Scene at Oxford—Newdigate Prize Poem—Reminiscence by Mrs. Kensington—Visit to Windsor—The Queen's View of his Services—Present to the Queen—Letter of Sir Charles Phipps—Interviews with Prince Albert—His Opinion of Prince Albert—Letter of Arthur Kinaird to the 'Times'—Article in the 'Times'—Order of the Star of India—The first Investiture and the Insignia—Domestic Life of Sir John Lawrence—Dislike of fashionable Society—Mrs. Hayes and Nora Lawrence, Daughter of Sir Henry—Visit to Ireland—House and Household—Friendship with Captain Eastwick—Missionary Speech of Sir Herbert Edwardes—Visits to Worthing, Richmond, Inverary Castle—The Duke of Argyll's Opinion of Lawrence—Friendship with the Duchess—Freedom of the City of Glasgow—Reminiscence by Dr. Macduff—Birth and Death of Daughter—Tenderness of Lawrence with Children—Southgate House—Country Pursuits—Reminiscence by Rev. John Smith, of Lyme—An awkward Hamper—New Friends—The Charles Bradleys, the Caters, T. C. Sanders—Never a Party Man—Views on Russo-Turkish and American Civil War—Simplicity of Life—Liberality—Modesty—Character of his Religious Belief—Reminiscence by Captain Eastwick—The new Indian Council—Work not congenial to him—His Colleagues and his Chief—Extracts from Diary of one of his Colleagues—Death of Outram—Buried in Westminster Abbey—Lawrence himself afterwards buried near him—Dean Stanley—Bust by Woolner—Letters to Dr. Hathaway—Retirement of Lord Stanley from India Office—Impression left by him—His Speech at Mansion House on Sir John Lawrence—'Heroic Simplicity'—Sir Charles Wood succeeds—Character of his Rule—Reorganisation of India—His Energy and Ability—Abolition of local European Army—'White mutiny'—Lord De Grey Under-Secretary for India—Reminiscence by him as Marquis of Ripon and Governor-General—Return and Death of Lord Canning—Lawrence expected to succeed him—Lord Elgin—Character of his Rule and early Death—Who was to succeed now?—Unwritten Law—Border War decides the Question—'You are to go to India as Governor-General'—Reminiscence by Lady Lawrence—Last Days in England—Love for his youngest Son Bertie—The Parting Scene

358

CHAPTER X.

JOHN LAWRENCE AS VICEROY OF INDIA. 1864.

PAGE

Scope and Object of chapters on Viceroyalty—Would it have been well if Sir John Lawrence had died after the Mutiny?—Approval of his appointment by all parties—The 'Times'—Letters from Lord Shaftesbury, Bishop Wilberforce, Duke of Argyll, Duchess of Argyll, Florence Nightingale—Views of Anglo-Indian newspapers—Dr. Hathaway, his Private Secretary—Incident of Voyage out—Reception in Calcutta—Sir William Denison—Special difficulties of a civilian Viceroy—Special Advantages—Arrears of work cleared up—Frontier War at an end—Order Re-established—Independence and energy of Sir John Lawrence—Anecdotes—Dislike of Etiquette—Dislike of Extravagance—Reforms in the Household—Attacks of Indian newspapers—Their personalities—Dean Stanley and the American Press—A nest of Hornets—Anecdotes—Story of Moravian Missionaries—Reminiscences by Dr. Hathaway and Dr. Farquhar—Story of the Ostrich—Meets Bishop Cotton—Cotton's Character, Career, and Death—Viceroy's power increasingly checked by his Council and Secretary of State—Duties of Viceroy—His boxes—'No Arrears'—'What you do, do thoroughly'—Members of his Council—Sir Charles Trevelyan—Sir Robert Napier—Sir Henry Maine—Sir Hugh Rose—Chief Provincial Governors and Chief Secretaries of Departments—Their ability—Letters to Captain Eastwick, Sir Erskine Perry, Sir Frederick Currie—Sailors' Home—Sanitary Reforms in Calcutta—Sir John Strachey—Trevelyan's Budget—Frere's attack on Punjab Frontier Policy— A Deus ex Machina —Sir John Lawrence goes to Simla—Meets old friends in Delhi district—Visit to Kussowlie—Account of eye-witness—Question of migration of Government to Simla and change of Capital—Letters from and to Sir Charles Wood—Advantages of Simla—The Permanent Settlement and its extension—Its abuses in Bengal and its possible advantages—Friction with Sir Hugh Rose—Strained relations between Governor-General and Commander-in-Chief in India, common—Why?—Correspondence with Sir Charles Wood—How to mend matters—Sir John Lawrence saves the walls of Delhi—How to deal with Medical theories—Friction with Sir Bartle Frere—Frere and Lawrence compared and contrasted—Good work done by each—Subjects of dispute with Bombay Government—Financial Control—'Spend the money first and explain afterwards'—Correspondence—General Richard Strachey—Magnanimity of Lawrence—His appreciation of Frere	389
--	-----

CHAPTER XI.

THE GREAT DURBAR AT LAHORE.

OCTOBER 1864.

Week at Lahore stands alone in his life—General Character of Durbars—Specialities of this—The gathering and splendour of the Chiefs—Arrival of Sir John Lawrence—Reception at the Railway Station—Private Durbar for great Chieftains—Sir Robert Montgomery Lieutenant-

Governor of the Punjab—A long day's work—Investiture of Raja of Kuppurthala with Star of India—Opening of 'Lawrence Hall'—Speeches of Sir Robert Montgomery and Sir John Lawrence—The great Durbar—Mixture of races and languages—Ambassadors from Cabul and Khokand—Historical significance of this Durbar—Rapid change in Punjab—Contrasts of past and present—The chief Durbaris—The Ceremonial—Speech of Sir John Lawrence in Hindustani—Its effects and significance—Leaves Lahore—Letters to and from Sir Charles Wood—Letter from the Queen 442

CHAPTER XII.

THE VICEROYALTY. 1865-1866.

India a Country of violent contrasts—The Cyclone at Calcutta and its effects—Letters from Sir John Lawrence—Visit to Delhi—Arrival of Lady Lawrence from England—Death of Sir Alexander Lawrence—Letter from the Queen—Financial difficulties—Sir Charles Trevelyan and the Income Tax—He, Montgomery and Edwardes go home—Biography of Sir Henry Lawrence—Changes in Council—Sir Robert Napier in command of Bombay army—His Services—Punjabization of India—How far true—Lawrence's view of patronage and services—Colonel Richard Strachey, and Lawrence's opinion of him—Bhotan War, its causes and difficulties—Its Vicissitudes—Its equitable termination—Sir William Mansfield Commander-in-Chief of Indian army—Life at Simla—Reminiscence by Lady Lawrence—Anecdotes illustrating Lawrence's humour and bluntness of speech—Death of Mrs. Hayes—'The Punjab and Grateley'—Life at Barrackpore—The Edward Brandreths—Changes in Viceregal Household—James Gordon and Seymour Blane—Resignation of Sir Charles Wood—His services and relations to Sir John Lawrence—Raised to Peerage as Lord Halifax—Succeeded by Lord de Grey—Letter from him—Commercial disasters—Speculation—The Bombay Bank—The Orissa Famine—Physical features of Orissa—Divided Responsibility—The Board of Revenue and Cecil Beadon—Part borne by Sir John Lawrence—Reminiscence by Dr. Farquhar—Letters by Sir John Lawrence to Secretaries of State—The Famine Commission—Opinions of Sir George Campbell, Lord Northbrook, Sir Stafford Northcote—Lord de Grey's Indian policy—Lord Cranborne succeeds him—His vigour—Grievances of local army settled—Extension of irrigation—Earliest efforts of Sir John Lawrence for irrigation—His views on the subject—Great works begun—Views of railways—Raciness of Lord Cranborne—Letter from him—Great Durbar at Agra—Its Characteristics—Honours conferred—Maharaja of Joudpore—Speech of the Viceroy—Visit to Gwalior—Its History—Anecdote of Scindia . . . 457

CHAPTER XIII.

THE VICEROYALTY—continued. 1867-1868.

Efforts to relieve distress in Orissa—Speech of Viceroy—Frere, Beadon, and Denison go home—The Yule brotherhood—Colonel Henry Yule—Sir George Yule and Sir William Muir—Services of Muir—Question of

Mysore—Views of Lawrence—Resignation of Lord Cranborne—Sir Stafford Northcote succeeds—Financial difficulties again—Agitation about Licence Tax—Views of Lawrence—Comparative merits of English and Native rule—Letters of Sir John Lawrence—The Nawab of Tonk—Yun-Nan—Yakoob Beg—Bokhara—The Abyssinian war and Sir Robert Napier—His Services—Opinion of retention of Candahar—Should India bear the expenses of Imperial wars?—Views of Sir John Lawrence—His relations to Sir Stafford Northcote—Sir Stafford Northcote's opinion of him—Ill-health of Sir John Lawrence—Talks of Retiring—His difficulties with his Council—Great Durbar at Lucknow—Its historical significance—Family interest attaching to it—Marriage of Sir John Lawrence's eldest daughter—Lady Lawrence leaves for England—Norman Macleod—Sir John Strachey—Sir Henry Durand, and difficulties in dealing with him—Rapid Progress in all respects in 1868—Letters to Sir Stafford Northcote—Views on Travellers in Central Asia, on Ireland, on the Afghans—Lord Mayo to succeed him—'Black Mountain' Campaign—Duke of Argyll succeeds Sir Stafford Northcote—Reminiscence by Sir John Strachey on Viceroyalty of Sir John Lawrence

CHAPTER XIV.

TENANT-RIGHT AND FOREIGN POLICY. 1864-1869.

Two Questions most Characteristic of Viceroyalty—Difficulties of Tenant Right question—Moral courage of Lawrence in dealing with them—No other Viceroy could have done what he did—Disputes in Bengal—The Zemindars and the Ryots—Indigo Cultivation—What is 'fair rent'?—Letters to Captain Eastwick and Sir Erskine Perry—Sir Henry Maine his chief helper—'Specific performance'—Letter to Sir Stafford Northcote—Tenant Right in Oude—Lord Canning's Proclamation—Its Object and Effects—Sir Charles Wingfield and Sir Henry Davies—Rights of Cultivators extinguished—Tremendous outcry against Sir John Lawrence—His moral Courage—Letters to Sir Charles Wood, Sir Frederick Currie, Captain Eastwick—Sir John Strachey, Chief Commissioner of Oude—His Efforts—Settlement of the Question—Tenant Right in Punjab—New Settlement there, and danger of Agrarian Revolution—Debate at Simla—Views of Sir John Lawrence, Sir Henry Maine, Sir John Strachey, Mr. Seton-Karr—Reminiscence by Sir John Strachey on Sir John Lawrence and Tenant Right question—John Stuart Mill—Cry for a Territorial Aristocracy—Doomed to Failure—His view of Sir John Lawrence's Character—Foreign policy of Sir John Lawrence—Continuous policy from Lord Ellenborough to Lord Northbrook—Personal knowledge of Sir John Lawrence—'Masterly Inactivity' and its meaning—Progress of Russia in Central Asia—How was it to be met?—'Backward' and 'Forward' policy—The Scinde School—Its advocates and their views—The Punjab School—Its advocates and their views—Practical maxims of Lawrence in dealing with Afghans and Russians—Steps taken during his Viceroyalty—Life and Character of Dost Mohammed—His relations to us—His Advice to Lawrence—Scramble for empire at his death, and its vicissitudes for five years—The rival candidates, Afzul Khan, Azim Khan, and Shere Ali—Strange Career and Character of Shere Ali—The Saul of Afghan History—His relations to successive Viceroys—Resolution and consistency of Lawrence—Recognition of de facto rulers—Goodwill to Afghans—Views of five successive Secretaries of State on his policy: Sir Charles Wood, Lord de Grey, Lord Cranborne, Sir Stafford Northcote, Duke of Argyll—Occupation of Quetta—Why urged by 'Forward School'—Sir Stafford Northcote and 'Russophobia'—Sir Henry Rawlinson's memorandum—How viewed in India—Sir John Lawrence's Legacy to his successors—How would he have dealt with Russia, had he been in Lord Lytton's place?—Weight of Indian authority on his side—General Character and Results of his Viceroyalty—'I am only a cracked pot'—Judgment of Dr. George Smith, editor of 'Friend of India'—Influence of Sir John Lawrence's private Character, and of his Viceregal Court—'Those niggers'—Hindrances to Christianity—Lord Mayo reaches India—Farewell Dinner to Sir John Lawrence—Speech by Sir William Mansfield—Speech of Sir John Lawrence—'Be just and kind to the natives of India'—The best of services—Reminiscence by Colonel Randall—Striking scenes in Government House—Lord Dalhousie, Lord Canning, and Sir John Lawrence—Reception of Lord Mayo—Sir John Lawrence leaves for England—Character of his forty years in India . . .

CHAPTER XV.

LAST YEARS OF LORD LAWRENCE. 1869—1879.

Character of Sir John Lawrence's last ten years—Lands in England—Broken health—The Peerage—Letter of Mr. Gladstone—His Pension and his Maiden Speech—'Lord Lawrence of the Punjab and Grateley'—Changes in his family—His Sons—Marriage of his Daughters—The Buxton Family—The Home Circle—Miss Gaster—His Friends old and new—His Sunday afternoons—Visits to Lynton, Clifton, &c.—The first School Board—Why did Lord Lawrence stand for it?—Elected Chairman—Reminiscence by Mr. Lafone—Character of his Chairmanship—His dislike of Boards—Reminiscence by Edward Buxton—Reminiscence by Lady Lawrence—Tour on the Continent—Paris, the Riviera, Rome, Naples—Eruption of Vesuvius—The Tyrol—His last Tour—Work in London—School Board—Guy's Hospital—'Megara' Commission—Marriage of his eldest son, John—Brockett Hall—His fondness for it—Retires from School Board—Reminiscence by Mr. Croad, Clerk of Board—Speech of John Bright—Charitable work in London—His opinion of Missions and Missionaries—His youngest son sent to Harrow—The Harts and the Lawrences—Visits of Lord Lawrence to Harrow—Failure of Eyesight—Reminiscence by Lady Lawrence—An unsuccessful operation—Great sufferings—Loss of Sight—Partial recovery of one Eye—Mr. Bowman and other friends—Marriage of his daughter Emily to Henry Cunningham—His right hand on the School Board—Autumn in Inverness—Reminiscence by Miss Gaster—Anecdotes of Lord Lawrence—Autumn at Stonehouse, Isle of Thanet—Brought to the front by aggression on Afghanistan

—Speeches in the House of Lords—Interest in India—Knowledge of battles going on—His policy pursued by his successors, Lord Mayo and Lord Northbrook—The Umballa Meeting—The Simla Meeting—Attitude of Shere Ali—Conditions of the problem the same—Change of policy by Lord Salisbury—Letter of Sir Bartle Frere, and its aggressive proposals—Occupation of Quetta—Answer of Lord Lawrence—Continuity of policy proved by letters of Lord Mayo and Lord Northbrook—Rejoinder of Sir Bartle Frere—Government of India resists Lord Salisbury's proposals—Resignation of Lord Northbrook—Lord Lytton, Governor-General—The policy of Aggression—Sir George Colley—His opinion on the Frontier 'worth that of twenty Lawrences'—His Character and Career—Hannibal and Phormio—First steps of Lord Lytton—His threats—Occupation of Quetta—The Peshawar Conference—Residence of British officers in Afghanistan insisted on—Pathetic appeal of Shere Ali—Who was in the right?—Reticence of Indian and English Governments on the whole question—Feelings and objects of Lord Lawrence—Reminiscence by Miss Gaster—Her services to Lord Lawrence—Question put by Duke of Argyll—Answer of Lord Salisbury—Its Results—Reception of Russian Embassy at Cabul—What ought we to have done?—What did we do?—Mission of Sir Neville Chamberlain—War resolved on—Could anything be done to stop it?—Attitude of Lord Lawrence—His difficulties and his resolve—His first letter to the 'Times'—His Predictions—'A shot between wind and water'—Its results—Other letters to the 'Times'—'A war the evidence for which we are ashamed to produce'—Lord Lawrence, Chairman of Afghan Committee—His correspondence with Lord Beaconsfield—The 'Scientific frontier'—Meeting of Parliament—Views of high Indian authorities—Treaty of Gundamuck and Yakoob Khan—Objects of the war secured, for a month or so—'They will all be murdered, every one of them'—Renewal of war—Battle of Maiwand—Results of the two wars—'You may do your worst, but the issue is in the hands of God'—Energy and moral courage of Lord Lawrence—Marriage of second son Henry—Lord Lawrence's last visit to the House of Lords—His last speech—His last illness—His last moments—His death	596
---	-----

ILLUSTRATIONS TO VOL. II.

PORTRAIT	to face title-page
PLAN OF DELHI, 1857	„ page 166