

INDIAN RECORDS SERIES
BENGAL IN 1756-1757

A SELECTION OF PUBLIC AND PRIVATE PAPERS
DEALING WITH THE AFFAIRS OF THE
BRITISH IN BENGAL DURING THE REIGN OF SIRAJ-UDDAULA

EDITED
WITH NOTES AND AN HISTORICAL INTRODUCTION
BY S. C. HILL

LATE OFFICER IN CHARGE OF THE RECORDS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA
AUTHOR OF 'MAJOR-GENERAL CLAUD MARTIN,'
'THREE FRENCHMEN IN BENGAL'

VOL. I

PUBLISHED FOR THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA
LONDON
JOHN MURRAY, ALBEMARLE STREET
1905

V2, L : 8.262. L5

D5.1

343

PREFATORY NOTE.

THE series of which the present volumes form a first instalment is in some measure an outcome of a suggestion made to the Government of India by the Royal Asiatic Society in June, 1900. The Society then pointed out the service which would be rendered to Oriental learning by the issue of a series of volumes bearing upon the history of India, particularly in ancient and medieval times, such as texts or translations of works by native writers, indexes, monographs, dictionaries of proper names, maps, and other materials for historical research. The suggestion was favourably received by the Government of India, and, with the concurrence of the Secretary of State, arrangements have been made for the publication, under the auspices of the Royal Asiatic Society, of an 'Indian Texts Series' on the lines indicated. Several volumes are already in hand, and will be issued in due course.

When adopting the proposal thus made to them, the Government of India decided to extend its scope by preparing a companion series to deal with the more modern history of India. This is to comprise selections, notes, or compilations from the records of the Indian Government, or of the India Office in London, and will be known as the 'Indian Records Series.' The volumes now published will be followed by others on 'The History of Fort William, Calcutta,' containing papers selected by the late Dr. C. R. Wilson; 'The Reports of Streysham Master on his Tours in Bengal and Madras, 1676-1680,' edited by Sir Richard Temple, Bart., C.I.E.; 'Papers Relating to the Administration of Lord Clive,' by Mr. G. W. Forrest, C.I.E.; and 'The History of Fort St. George and other Public Buildings at Madras,' by Colonel H. D. Love, R.E.

It is only necessary to add that the various editors have full discretion as to the treatment of their subjects, and are therefore alone responsible alike for what is included and what is omitted.

June, 1905.

CONTENTS OF VOL. I.

	PAGE
PREFATORY NOTE - - - - -	v
PREFACE - - - - -	xvii

INTRODUCTION

CHAPTER
I.	THE KINGDOM OF BENGAL - - - - -	xxi
II.	THE EUROPEAN SETTLEMENTS IN BENGAL - - - - -	xxxiv
III.	THE QUARREL BETWEEN THE NAWAB AND THE BRITISH - - - - -	xliv
IV.	THE TREACHEROUS SEIZURE OF COSSIMBAZAR FORT - - - - -	lvi
V.	THE EXPULSION OF THE BRITISH FROM CALCUTTA - - - - -	lxiii
VI.	THE BLACK HOLE - - - - -	lxxvi
VII.	HOW THE NEWS WAS SENT HOME - - - - -	xcviii
VIII.	THE DEFEAT AND DEATH OF SHAUKAT JANG - - - - -	cii
IX.	THE STAY AT FULTA - - - - -	cix
X.	THE ACTION OF THE MADRAS COUNCIL - - - - -	cxix
XI.	THE EXPEDITION TO BENGAL - - - - -	cxxv
XII.	HUGLI, CHITPUR, AND THE TREATY OF THE 9TH FEBRUARY - - - - -	cxxxii
XIII.	THE CAPTURE OF CHANDERNAGORE - - - - -	cxlix
XIV.	THE BREAKING OF THE TREATY - - - - -	clij
XV.	PLASSEY - - - - -	cxcii
XVI.	THE DEATH OF SIRAJ-UDDAULA - - - - -	cc
XVII.	CONCLUSION - - - - -	ccvii

SELECTION OF PAPERS—VOL. I.

NO.	PAGE
1. Letter from the French Council at Chandernagore to the Council at Masulipatam, 26 April, 1756 - - - Pondicherry Records.	1
2. Letter from Messrs. Watts, Collet, and Batson at Cossimbazar to the Council at Fort William, 25 May, 1756 Madras Records, 1756.	1
3. Ditto, ditto. 31 May, 1756. (1) - Madras Records, 1756.	2
4. Ditto, ditto. 31 May, 1756. (2) - Madras Records, 1756.	2
5. Letter from the Nawab at Rajmehal to Coja Wajid, 28 May, 1756 - 3 Orme MSS., India, IV., p. 999.
6. Letter from the Nawab at Muxadavad to Coja Wajid, 1 June, 1756 - 4 Orme MSS., India, IV., p. 1000.
7. Letter from the Nawab in the way to Calcutta to Coja Wajid. Undated - - - Orme MSS., India, IV., p. 1001.	5
8. Letter from Messrs. Watts, Collet, and Batson at Cossimbazar to the Council at Fort William, 2 June, 1756 Madras Records, 1756.	5
9. Letter from M. Vernet and Council at Cossimbazar to the Dutch Director and Council at Hugli, 3 June, 1756 - - - 6 Vernet Papers, The Hague.
10. Ditto, ditto. 4 June, 1756 - - - Vernet Papers, The Hague.	7
11. Letter from Messrs. Watts, Collet, and Batson at Cossimbazar to the Council at Fort William, 4 June, 1756 Madras Records, 1756.	8
12. Letter from Mr. Collet at Cossimbazar to the Council at Fort William, 4 June, 1756 - - - Madras Records, 1756.	9
13. Letter from Mr. Francis Sykes at Cossimbazar to the Council at Fort William, 4 June, 1756 - - - Madras Records, 1756.	9
14. Letter from M. Vernet and the Council at Cossimbazar to the Dutch Director and Council at Hugli, 6 June, 1756 - - - 10 Vernet Papers, The Hague.
15. Letter from the Council at Fort William to the Dutch Director and Council at Hugli, 7 June, 1756 Bengal Correspondence, The Hague.	12
16. Letter from the Council at Fort William to the Council at Fort St. George, 7 June, 1756 - - - Madras Records, 1756.	12
17. Letter from the Council at Fort William to the Council at Fort St. George, 8 June, 1756 - - - Madras Records, 1756.	13
18. Letter from the Dutch Director and Council at Hugli to the Council at Fort William, 8 June, 1756 Bengal Correspondence, The Hague.	14
19. Letter from the French Council at Chandernagore to M. de la Bretesche at Patna, 9 June, 1756 - - - Pondicherry Records.	15
20. Letter from M. Vernet and the Council at Cossimbazar to M. La Tour at Patna, 10 June, 1756 - - - Vernet Papers, The Hague.	16
21. Letter from the Council at Fort William to the Dutch Director and Council at Hugli, 13 June, 1756 Bengal Correspondence, The Hague.	16

CONTENTS

ix

NO.	PAGE
22. Letter from the French Council at Chandernagore to the Captain of the French East India Company's Ship in Balasore Road, 15 June, 1756 - - - - - Pondicherry Records.	18
23. Letter from the Dutch Director and Council at Hugli to the Council at Fort William, 16 June, 1756 - Bengal Correspondence, The Hague.	18
24. Letter from M. Le Conte at Chandernagore to M. Courtin at Dacca, 19 June, 1756 - - - - -	19
Fort St. George Select Com. Consultations, 9 November, 1756.
25. Letter from the French Council at Chandernagore to M. de la Bretesche at Patna, 20 June, 1756 - - - - - Pondicherry Records.	22
26. Letter from M. Le Conte at Chandernagore to M. Courtin at Dacca, 21 June, 1756 - - - - -	24
Fort St. George Select Com. Consultations, 9 November, 1756.
27. Letter from the Council at Fort William on board the Dodalay to Mr. Adrian Bisdorn, 25 June, 1756 - - - - -	25
Bengal Correspondence, The Hague.
28. Consultations of the Dutch Council at Hugli, 25, 26, and 27 June, 1756	25
Bengal Correspondence, The Hague.
29. Letter from the Dutch Council at Hugli to M. Vernet, 27 June, 1756 -	33
Vernet Papers, The Hague.
30. Dacca Consultations, 27 June, 1756 - - - - -	34
Fort St. George Select Com. Consultations, 9 November, 1756.
31. Ditto, ditto. 28 June, 1756 - - - - -	36
Fort St. George Select Com. Consultations, 9 November, 1756.
32. Secret Consultations of the Dutch Council at Hugli, 28 June, 1756 -	37
Bengal Correspondence, The Hague.
33. Letter from the French Council at Chandernagore to the Captain of the French East India Company's Ship in Balasore Road, 28 June, 1756 - - - - - Pondicherry Records.	38
34. Letter from the French Council at Chandernagore to M. de la Bretesche at Patna, 28 June, 1756 - - - - - Pondicherry Records.	39
35. Letter from the Nawab to the Council at Fort St. George, 30 June, 1756	39
Fort St. George Public Consultations, 17 August, 1756.
36. Letter from the French Council at Chandernagore to the Council at Masulipatam, June, 1756 - - - - - Pondicherry Records.	39
37. Captain Mills' Narrative of the Loss of Calcutta with the Black Hole, 7 June to 1 July, 1756 - Orme MSS., O.V., 19, pp. 77-92.	40
38. Letter from Messrs. Watts and Collet at Chandernagore to the Council at Fort St. George, 2 July, 1756 - - - - -	45
Fort St. George Public Consultations, 17 August, 1756.
39. Letter from Chandernagore concerning the Consequences of the Capture of Calcutta, 3 July, 1756 - - - - -	48
Fort St. George Select Com. Consultations, 9 November, 1756.
40. Letter from the Dutch Council at Hugli to the Supreme Council at Batavia, 5 July, 1756 - - - - - State Archives, The Hague.	53

NO.	PAGE
41. Letter from Messrs. Watts and Collet at Chandernagore to the Council at Fort St. George, 6 July, 1756 Fort St. George Public Consultations, 22 August, 1756.	56
42. Letter from the Council at Fulta on board the Doddaley to Messrs. Watts and Collet, 6 July, 1756 Fort St. George Public Consultations, 22 August, 1756.	57
43. Letter from Messrs. Watts and Collet at Chandernagore to the Council at Fort St. George, 7 July, 1756 Fort St. George Public Consultations, 22 August, 1756.	58
44. Letter from the Council at Fulta to Coja Wajid, etc. Fort St. George Public Consultations, 22 August, 1756.	59
45. Letter from M. Vernet to M. La Tour, 7 July, 1756 Vernet Papers, The Hague.	59
46. Letter from Messrs. Watts and Collet at Chandernagore to the Council at Fulta, 8 July, 1756 Fort St. George Public Consultations, 8 September, 1756.	60
47. Letter from Mr. Sykes at Cossimbazar, 8 July, 1756 Orme MSS., O.V., 19, pp. 167, 168.	61
48. Letter from Mr. John Young from the Hôtel des Prusses to Mr. Roger Drake, 10 July, 1756 Orme MSS., O.V., 19, pp. 53-56; and India, IV., p. 944.	62
49. Protest of the Late Inhabitants of Calcutta against Mr. Charles Manningham's going to the Coast, 10 July, 1756 Orme MSS., O.V., 19, p. 59; Orme MSS., India, IV., p. 749.	66
50. Letter from the Council at Dacca to the Court of Directors, 12 July, 1756 Parl. Sel. Com. Rep., p. 212; I.O., Bengal Letters Recd., 1757, p. 239.	67
51. Letter from the Council at Fulta to Messrs. Watts and Collet, 13 July, 1756 Fort St. George Public Consultations, 8 September, 1756.	70
52. Letter from the Council at Fulta to the Council at Fort St. George, 13 July, 1756 Fort St. George Public Consultations, 29 August, 1756.	71
53. An Account of the Capture of Calcutta by Captain Grant, 13 July, 1756 British Museum Additional MS., 29, 209.	73
54. An Account of Captain Grant's Retreat from Calcutta Orme MSS., O.V., 19, pp. 173-180.	89
55. Letter from the Council at Dacca to the Council at Fort St. George, 13 July, 1756 Fort St. George Public Consultations, 8 September, 1756.	95
56. Extract from Fort St. George Public Consultations, 14 July, 1756	96
57. Letter from Messrs. Watts and Collet at Chandernagore to the Council at Fulta, 14 July, 1756 Fort St. George Public Consultations, 8 September, 1756.	97
58. Notification to the Honourable Company's Covenanted Servants on board the Fleet, 14 July, 1756 Orme MSS., O.V., 19, p. 52; and India, IV., p. 943.	98

CONTENTS

xi

NO.	PAGE
59. Extract from Fort St. George Select Committee Consultations, 14 July, 1756	99
60. Letter from Mr. Roger Drake on board the Syren off Fulta to the Council at Fort St. George, 14 July, 1756	99
Fort St. George Public Consultations, 29 August, 1756.
61. Letter from Messrs. Watts and Collet at Chandernagore to the Court of Directors, 16 July, 1756	99
I.O., Home Series, Misc., 94; Bengal Letters Recd., 1757, p. 216.
62. Account of the Loss of Calcutta by Mr. Grey, junior, June, 1756	106
I.O., Home Series, Misc., 94; Bengal Letters Recd., 1757, p. 231; Orme MSS., India, IV., p. 821.
63. Duplicate Letters from Mr. J. Z. Holwell at Muxadavad to the Councils at Bombay and Fort St. George, 17 July, 1756	109
I.O., Bengal Letters Recd., p. 199; Fort St. George Select Com. Consultations, 28 September, 1756.
64. Letter from Messrs. Watts and Collet at Chandernagore to the Court of Directors, 17 July, 1756	116
I.O., Home Series, Misc., 94.
65. Letter from Messrs. Watts and Collet at Chandernagore to the Council at Fort St. George, 18 July, 1756	118
Fort St. George Public Consultations, 8 September, 1756.
66. Governor Drake's Narrative, 19 July, 1756	118
Orme MSS., India, IV., pp. 956-1001; I.O., Home Series, Misc., 192.
67. Declaration by Mr. Francis Sykes	162
Orme MSS., India, IV., pp. 1001, 1002.
68. Letter from Mr. W. Lindsay on board the Syren off Fulta to Mr. Robert Orme concerning the Loss of Calcutta, July, 1756, with 'List of Company's servants saved.'	163
Orme MSS., India, IV., p. 818; O.V., 19, pp. 125-142.
69. Letter to M. Demontorcin from Chandernagore, 1 August, 1756	173
Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris, No. 9, 161.
70. Letter from Mr. J. Z. Holwell at Hugli to the Council at Fort St. George, 3 August, 1756, with various Lists	185
Fort St. George Select Com. Consultations, 28 September, 1756.
71. Letter from Major Killpatrick on board the Delawar off Fulta, to the Council at Fort St. George, 5 August, 1756	192
Fort St. George Select Com. Consultations, 28 September, 1756.
72. Captain Mills' Account of what happened to him after he came out of the Black Hole, 10 August, 1756	194
Orme MSS., India, VII., p. 1826.
73. Letter from the Council at Vizagapatam to the Council at Fort St. George, 13 August, 1756	195
Madras Records, 1756.
74. Fort St. George Public Consultations, 17 August, 1756, containing Letters from the Nawab to Mr. Pigot and M. Renault	195

NO.	PAGE
75. Letter from the Council at Fulta to the Council at Fort St. George, 18 August, 1756 - - - - -	197
Fort St. George Select Com. Consultations, 28 September, 1756.
76. Letter from the Secret Committee at Fulta to the Council at Fort St. George, 19 August, 1756 - - - - -	198
Fort St. George Select Com. Consultations, 28 September, 1756.
77. Letter from the Council at Fort St. George to Admiral Watson - - -	199
Fort St. George Public Consultations, 20 August, 1756; Orme MSS., India, III.
78. Extract from Fulta Consultations, 20 August, 1756 - - - - -	200
79. Mr. Holwell's Minute and Dissent in Council, 20 August, 1756 - - -	201
Holwell, India Tracts, p. 333.
80. Mr. Holwell's Minute on the Fulta Consultations, 13 August, 1756 - -	202
Holwell, India Tracts, p. 333.
81. Letter from the President to Mr. Holwell, 12 August, 1756 - - -	204
Holwell, India Tracts, p. 336.
82. Extract from Fort St. George Select Committee Consultations, 21 August, 1756 - - - - -	204
83. Extract from Secret Committee Proceedings at Fulta, 22 August, 1756 -	204
Fort William Select Com. Consultations.
84. Letter from M. Fournier at Chandernagore to M. le Marquis Dupleix at Paris, 24 August, 1756 - - - - -	204
Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris, No. 9,165.
85. Letter from Admiral Watson to the Council at Fort St. George, 25 August, 1756 - - - - -	206
I.O., Home Series, Misc., 94, p. 168.
86. Letter from M. Renault at Chandernagore to M. le Marquis Dupleix, 26 August, 1756 - - - - -	206
Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris, No. 9,165.
87. Letter from Mr. Manningham at Masulipatam to the Council at Fort St. George, 28 August, 1756 - - - - -	212
Fort St. George Public Consultations, 6 September, 1756.
88. Letter from the French Council at Chandernagore to the Council at Masulipatam, 29 August, 1756 - - - - -	213
Pondicherry Records.
89. Letter from the Council at Fulta to the Court of Directors, 17 September, 1756 - - - - -	214
I.O., Bengal Letters Recd., 1757; Par. Sel. Com. Rep., 1773.
90. Letter from the Council at Fulta to the Council at Fort St. George, 17 September, 1756 - - - - -	219
Fort St. George Select Com. Consultations, 9 November, 1756.
91. Opinion of the Select Committee at Fort St. George as to the conditions of the Expedition to Bengal - - - - -	222
Fort St. George Select Com. Consultations, 29 September, 1756.
92. Fort St. George Select Committee Consultations, 1 October, 1756 - - - - -	223

CONTENTS

xiii

NO.	PAGE
93. Letter from Isle de France to the Directors at Paris, 2 October, 1756 Archives Nationales, Paris.	227
94. Letter from Colonel Clive at Fort St. George to his Father, 5 October, 1756 Clive Correspondence, Walcot, Vol. XI.	227
95. Return of Troops ordered for Bengal, 5 October, 1756 Fort St. George Select Com. Consultations, 5 October, 1756.	228
96. Letter from Colonel Clive at Fort St. George to Mr. W. Mabbot, 6 October, 1756 Clive Correspondence, Walcot, Vol. XI.	228
97. Letter from Colonel Clive at Fort St. George to Mr. Roger Drake, senior, 7 October, 1756 Clive Correspondence, Walcot, Vol. XI.	229
98. Letter from M. Baussett at Chandernagore to M. le Marquis Dupleix, 8 October, 1756 Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris, No. 9, 162.	229
99. Letter from M. de Leyrit at Pondicherry to the Council at Fort St. George, 9 October, 1756 Madras Records, 1756.	232
100. Letter from Colonel Clive at Fort St. George to the Secret Committee at London, 11 October, 1756 Clive Correspondence, Walcot, Vol. I.; Orme MSS., India, X., p. 2350.	232
101. Letter from the Council at Fort St. George to Colonel Clive, 13 October, 1756 Fort St. George Select Com. Consultations, 13 October, 1756.	233
102. Letter from the Council at Fulta to the Council at Fort St. George, 13 October, 1756 Fort St. George Select Com. Consultations, 9 December, 1756.	237
103. Letter from the Select Committee at Fort St. George to the Select Committee at Fort William, 13 October, 1756 Fort St. George Select Com. Consultations, 13 October, 1756.	237
104. Letter from Mr. Pigot to the Nawab of Bengal, 14 October, 1756 Fort St. George Select Com. Consultations, 13 October, 1756.	241
105. Letter from M. Barthelemy at Pondicherry to M. de Moras, 16 October, 1756 Archives Coloniales, Paris.	243
106. Letter from Mr. J. Z. Holwell at Fulta to the Council at Fulta, 25 October, 1756 I.O., Bengal Letters Recd.; Holwell, India Tracts, p. 337.	244
107. Fulta Consultations, 25 October, 1756 I.O., Cor. Mem., 1757, No. 16 (ap. to General Letter of 31 Jan., 1757).	247
108. Letter from Mr. W. Tooke at Fulta to the Council at Fulta, 10 November, 1756 Orme MSS., India, IV., p. 943; O.V., 19, p. 51.	248
109. Narrative of the Capture of Calcutta from 10 April, 1756, to 10 November, 1756, by W. Tooke Orme MSS., India, IV., p. 885; O.V., 19, pp. 5-46.	248
110. Letter from the Select Committee at Fort St. George to Admiral Watson, 13 November, 1756 Fort St. George Select Com. Consultations, 13 November, 1756.	301

NO.	PAGE
111. Letter from the Select Committee at Fort St. George to the Select Committee at Fort William, 14 November, 1756 -	302
Fort St. George Select Com. Consultations, 13 November, 1756.
112. Letter from the Dutch Council at Hugli to the Supreme Council at Batavia, 24 November, 1756 -	302
State Archives, The Hague.

MAPS AND ILLUSTRATIONS

	PACING PAGE
I. Bengal (after Rennell) - - - - -	xxi
II. Siraj-uddaula. From Major J. H. Tull Walsk's 'Murshidabad'	xlii
III. William Watts. From a painting in the possession of E. H. Watts, Esq. - - - - -	lvi
IV. Bigam Johnson. From a painting in the possession of E. H. Watts, Esq. - - - - -	lx
V. The Environs of Fort William (after Lieutenant Wells) - - -	lxx
VI. John Zephaniah Holwell. From a painting in the possession of the Trustees of the Victoria Memorial, Calcutta - - -	lxxxvi
VII. Admiral Watson. From an engraving by Fisher after a painting by Hudson - - - - -	cxx
VIII. Lord Clive. From an engraving by Bartolozzi after a painting by Dance, in the possession of the Earl of Powis - - -	cxxxiii
IX. Plan of Chandernagore. By Mouchet - - - - -	cli
X. Battle of Plassey. From Broome's 'History of the Bengal Army'	cxcv
XI. Muhammadan Women Mourning. From Hodges' 'Travels in India, 1780-83' - - - - -	ccviii

CORRIGENDA.

- Page 15, line 15, for Brisdom read Bisdrom.
Page 96, line 19, for Beecher read Becher.
Page 110, note 2, refers to Mrs. Pearce's Bridge, and not to Griffith's House.
Page 192, line 1, for Kilpatrick read Killpatrick.
Page 204, line 24, for Furnier read Fournier.
Page 227, line 21, for Clenforts read Clonfert.
Page 228, lines 11 and 15, for 573 read 595.
Page 229, line 13, for 1753 read 1756.
Page 257, delete note 1.
Page 266, line 37, delete Probably means.
Page 273, line 38, for pp. 306, 307 read pp. 307, 308.
Page 276, line 31, for Home Series Misc. 24 read Home Series Misc 82.

P R E F A C E.

THE object of this Selection of Papers is to throw as much light as possible upon the Revolution by which the power of the Muhammadan Government was broken up, and the way prepared for British domination, in Bengal.

For this purpose I have myself examined not only the Records in Calcutta, but those in London, Paris, and the Hague. The publication of an admirable Press List of their Records by the Government of Madras made a personal examination of these documents unnecessary; and a few Records from Pondicherry, which I have included, were sent me by the French authorities. The Right Honourable the Earl of Powis most kindly gave me access to the family papers used by Malcolm in his 'Life of Robert, Lord Clive.' Their great value lies in the fact that many of them are private letters, in which Clive freely expressed his feelings to friends or relatives. They are, I think, necessary to the full appreciation of his many-sided character; and if they detract in any degree from its heroic aspect, they at any rate make him more human, and so the student is better able to understand the part played in the events of the time by his colleagues, Drake and Watson, whom History has relegated to an inferior position, or men like Watts and Scrafton, who worthily filled subordinate yet necessary parts, but are now almost forgotten.

In making this Selection my two chief difficulties were the absence of documentary evidence upon certain points, and the superabundance of information upon others. The former has been partially overcome by the discovery amongst the Dutch Records of copies of letters from the Council of Fort William, the originals of which have disappeared.¹ As regards the latter difficulty, I have excluded all those papers and portions of papers which I consider of little importance or which seem to have no distinctive historical bearing. I may mention that in the middle of the eighteenth century communication between England and India was so tedious that an exchange of letters generally occupied a whole year; consequently, the despatches, or 'general letters,' of the East India Company to its Settlements, as also the replies from those Settlements, are lengthy documents dealing with a multitude of different subjects, more especially those connected with commerce. This has forced me to omit long passages from these letters, but as references are given in the 'Contents' to the sources from which I have taken my originals, the student can if he pleases refer to them himself without much trouble.

¹ Amongst these is the Council's declaration of war against the Nawab after the recapture of Calcutta, Vol. II., p. 83.

The documents selected from the French and Dutch Records have never, I believe, been published, though I think it is certain that Colonel Malleeson must have had access to many of the former. The difference of tone in the Records of the two nations marks very clearly the fact that the Dutch were our allies and the French our enemies, and, in truth, some of the French papers have been included not because of their historical value as accurate accounts of what really happened, but as written records of the rumours and beliefs prevalent at the time amongst the people of the land; for action is based rather upon belief than upon fact, and, without knowing what the people and the Native Government thought of the British, it is not possible to understand clearly either why Siraj-uddaula behaved as he did, or why the inhabitants of Bengal were absolutely apathetic to events which handed over the government of their country to a race so different from their own. I translated all the French documents and a few of the Dutch myself. Translations of the remainder were sent me by Dr. Colenbrander.

As regards the Indian Government Records, amongst which we have to include the Orme Manuscripts, there is decidedly less novelty. Some important papers were published by Malcolm; others more recently by Colonel Temple and that delightful writer, Dr. Busted, in whose pages, as in those of the Rev. H. B. Hyde and the late Dr. C. R. Wilson, there are many suggestions as to possible sources of information. A very large number of papers was published over a hundred years ago by Holwell, Verelst, Vansittart, Ives, Watts, and Scrafton, and also in the Reports of the Parliamentary Select Committees on Indian Affairs, not to mention the newspapers, magazines, and Government Gazettes. About twelve years ago my predecessor, Mr. G. W. Forrest, C.I.E., caused a large collection of papers from the Madras Records (covering the whole period during which Clive was in India) to be printed in the Government Central Press at Calcutta. This rendered it unnecessary to make fresh copies of several of the Records included in this Selection, and so saved much time and trouble. These have, of course, been compared in every instance with originals in London or Madras.

I ought to add that the idea of including extracts from the magazines and newspapers of the period (Appendix II.) was suggested by Mr. T. R. Munro's discovery of some lists of the Black Hole victims in the Scots Magazine.

The question of the most suitable spelling of Indian words and names of persons and places has been one of much difficulty. To modernize them entirely would have altered the whole complexion of the old Records. I have tried, therefore, merely to observe something like uniformity in each particular document, and have given in the introduction and index the correct spelling according to the accepted system of transliteration for the various languages to which the words and names belong. I presume no apology is necessary for alterations in the punctuation, though even here I have left the old punctuation in all cases where an alteration was not absolutely necessary to make the meaning intelligible.

To the Selection is prefixed an Historical Introduction based mainly upon the documents now published, but partly upon the works of contemporary writers like Orme, Ives, Holwell, Scrafton, Watts, and Ghulam Husain Khan. In this Introduction I have dealt in greatest detail with points which, I believe, have not been cleared up by earlier writers, or in regard to which I think previous conclusions need some modification. At the same time, as I know well that neither official records nor contemporary writers are always absolutely trustworthy, I have tried to avoid all criticism of the statements and opinions of my predecessors.

The illustrations which will be found in this work have been taken from various well-known sources, with the exception of the portraits of Mr. and Mrs. Watts and the picture of Mr. Watts concluding the Treaty with Mir Jafar and his son Miran. These have been photographed from pictures in the possession of Mr. E. H. Watts of Hanslope Park, Buckinghamshire, and are now for the first time presented to the public.

Amongst the many persons from whom I have received much valuable assistance I wish more particularly to offer my thanks to Lieutenant-Colonel D. G. Crawford, I.M.S., M. Henri Omont and M. Charles de la Roncière of the Bibliothèque Nationale at Paris, Dr. Colenbrander of the State Archives at the Hague, Mr. J. A. Herbert of the British Museum, and Messrs. A. N. Wollaston, C.L.E., William Foster, and F. W. Thomas of the India Office. Prof. Blumhardt has very kindly assisted me in identifying many almost unrecognisable names of persons and places.

The very laborious task of correcting the proofs and comparing them with the original documents has been performed by Miss Hughes of the Royal Asiatic Society, to whom I am much indebted for the care and pains she has bestowed upon a piece of work the difficulty of which can be appreciated only by the few persons who have had to deal with similar papers.

S. C. H.

INTRODUCTION.

CHAPTER I.

THE KINGDOM OF BENGAL.

¹ 'The Paradise of India.'—J. LAW.¹

THE kingdom of Bengal, a province subject to the Emperors of Delhi, comprised in the middle of the eighteenth century the three districts of Bengal Proper, Bahar, and Orissa, and occupied the lower valleys of the Himalayas and the deltas of the Ganges and Brahmaputra Rivers. It was governed by Nawabs or deputies of the Emperor, sometimes appointed from Delhi, but more often merely confirmed by their nominal master in an office which they had seized by force, and which they strove to make hereditary. For five hundred years these Nawabs had been, by race if not by birth, foreigners to Bengal. They were Afghans,² Moghuls, or Persians.

Without entering into detail, it is sufficient to say that the British on their arrival in Bengal found it inhabited by a people the great bulk of whom were Hindus, governed by a Muhammadan minority. The Nawabs, relying as they did for their supremacy on a foreign soldiery, considered it wise to hold their warlike followers in check by the employment of up-country Hindus in many of the high offices of State, both civil and military, and in the government of subordinate divisions of the kingdom. These Hindus were especially influential in matters of finance, for the commerce of the province was almost entirely in the hands of great merchants, most of whom were up-country Hindus, like Omichand and the Seths, though a few were Armenians, like Coja Wājid and Aga Manuel. Most of the leading men in the country then were foreigners, and the real Bengalis were seldom of sufficient importance to be mentioned by native historians, though in the 'Records' of the East India Company occur the names of such men as Govind Rām Mitra and Raja Naba Krishna, the founders of families which have risen to wealth and influence under British rule.

¹ Vol. III., p. 160, note.

² Afghan and Pathan are used synonymously.—Wilson

We know very little of Bengal and its inhabitants previous to the Muhammadan invasion in A.D. 1200, but certain minor districts were long left in the hands of the Hindu nobles, and in the pages of Scrafton and Holwell we find descriptions of parts of Bengal which retained even in 1750 many traces of the primitive Hindu manners and government. But these were exceptions, and the Bengali nation had become a subject race absorbed in the ordinary concerns of life, and apathetic to all affairs of State and government. Temperate and abstemious, charitable, ready to sacrifice their lives for the preservation of their religious purity, their women chaste and affectionate, they were 'almost strangers to many of those passions that form the pleasure and pain of our lives. Love—at least, all the violent tumults of it—is unknown to the Gentoos' (Hindus) 'by their marrying so young. . . . Ambition is effectually restrained by their religion, which has by insurmountable barriers confined every individual to a limited sphere, and all those follies arising from debauchery are completely curbed by their abstaining from all intoxicating liquors. But from hence also they are strangers to that vigor of mind and all the virtues grafted on those passions which animate our more active spirits. . . . Their temperance and the enervating heat of the climate starves all the natural passions, and leaves them only avarice, which preys most on the narrowest minds.'¹

It may seem strange that a people so gentle, peaceful, and apparently docile, should have changed so slightly under five hundred years of Muhammadan rule, but this absence of change is easily explicable by the existence of the institution which we call 'caste.' This, with its multitudinous subdivisions, broke up the Hindus into a number of groups, the individuals of which were bound for life to the sphere in which they were born, and the same principle which made a country like Bengal, in which the soldier caste was almost extinct, submit without effort to an invader, was the means of preserving uninfluenced the trades, manufactures, and occupations of the other castes;

¹ Scrafton's 'Reflections on the Government, etc., of Indostan,' p. 16.

'for while the son can follow no other trade than that of his father, the manufactures can be lost only by exterminating the people.'¹

It is easy to see also that this indifference of the mass of the people towards the Government would be a serious drawback to a weak Government in the event of conflict with external forces, and would become a source of very great danger if, by misgovernment, indifference were changed into dislike. The accounts of Muhammadan rule by Muhammadan writers do not, I must own, show any signs of such misgovernment as would impel an Oriental race to revolt—in fact, I think every student of social history will confess that the condition of the peasantry in Bengal in the middle of the eighteenth century compared not unfavourably with that of the same class in France or Germany—but it would seem as if there was at this time a revival of Hindu feeling coincident with the gradual weakening of the Muhammadan power throughout India as a whole and more particularly in Bengal. Thus, we find that the partisans of the British were almost all Hindus or protégés of the Hindus, and M. Law tells us that the Hindu Zamīndārs of Bahar would have replaced Sirāj-uddaula by a Hindu ruler if it had not been for the influence of the Seths. The disaffection of the Hindu Rajas to the Muhammadan Government had been noticed by other observers—e.g., Colonel Scot wrote to his friend Mr. Noble in 1754 that

'the Jentue' (Hindu) 'rajahs and inhabitants were much disaffected to the Moor' (Muhammadan) 'Government, and secretly wished for a change and opportunity of throwing off their tyrannical yoke.'²

The fact that the commerce and manufactures of the country were almost entirely in the hands of the Hindus naturally brought them into close connection with the European merchants, who had settled in the country for the purpose of trade, and so produced a kind of tacit alliance based mainly upon their material interests.

The story of the settlement of the Europeans in Bengal has been told by many writers, and it is therefore unnecessary to go back to an earlier date than the year 1700, when the British were already settled at Calcutta or Fort William, the French at Chander-nagore or Fort d'Orléans, and the Dutch at Chinsurah or Fort Gustavus. These Settlements were wealthy and flourishing, and to the natives, who were unacquainted with the science of fortification, they appeared strong and well able to defend themselves against any attack by the native Government. It can therefore be easily understood how there gradually grew up in the minds of the Bengali Hindus an idea that if the worst came to the worst they might find in the presence of these foreigners a means of escape from the ills by which they were oppressed.

¹ Scrafton's 'Reflections,' p. 9.

² Vol. III., p. 328.

The chief events which took place in Bengal from the beginning of the eighteenth century were as follows :

1701-1725.

In the year 1701 a Brahman convert to Muhammadanism named Murshid Kulī Khān¹ was appointed Diwān, or financial representative of the Emperor of Delhi in Bengal. He quarrelled with the Governor, Nawab Azīm-ushshān,² and transferred his office from Dacca (the capital of the province) to the town of Mukshadabad, which, in 1704, he renamed after himself Murshidabad, though he did not receive the double office of Governor and Diwān till the year 1713. His influence at Murshidabad was speedily felt by the Europeans. As early as 1706 he exacted 25,000 rupees from the British in return for permission to establish a Factory at Cossimbazar, so as to facilitate the coining of their bullion at the Royal Mint in Murshidabad. By 1713 his jealousy and exactions had grown so troublesome that the British sent an embassy under Mr. Surman to Delhi to obtain a new Farmān or Patent³ from the Emperor. This was granted in the year 1717, and was produced in triumph at Murshidabad; but Murshid Kulī Khān chose to interpret it in a sense much less liberal than that taken by the British, and the latter thought it prudent to feign contentment with his wishes, for at any rate, even with the modifications he proposed, it legalized their position, and also gave them immense advantages over their commercial rivals, the French and Dutch.

1717.

Murshid Kulī Khān was the author of many financial reforms, which greatly increased the Emperor's revenues in Bengal; but his rule was a heavy one, especially to the Hindus. It is said that he destroyed all the Hindu temples in Murshidabad and for four miles round to provide materials for his tomb at Katra.¹ On the other hand, it was during his reign that the great financial house of Jagat Seth rose to the pinnacle of its wealth and greatness. This family was founded by a Jain² merchant named Mānik Chand, who died in 1732, but who had apparently handed over the management of his business in Bengal to his nephew, Fath Chand. In 1713, when Murshid Kuli Khān was made Governor of Bengal, Fath Chand was appointed Imperial Banker, and given the title of 'Jagat Seth,' or 'Merchant of the World.' He died in 1744, and left his business to his grandsons, Seth Mahtāb Rai and Maharaja Swarūp Chand, whom we shall find figuring largely in the history of the Revolution.³ In the English accounts no distinction is made between Fath Chand's grandsons, and they are generally referred to simply as 'Jagat Seth,' or the Seths. The importance of the firm at Murshidabad was very great.

¹ Better known amongst the natives as Jafar Khān or Jafar Khān Nāsiri.

² Second son of Bahādur Shāh, Emperor of Delhi — Batal.

³ Vol. III., p. 375.

'Juggutseat is in a manner the Government's banker ; about two-thirds of the revenues are paid into his house, and the Government give their draught on him in the same manner as a merchant on the Bank, and by what I can learn the Seats (Seths) make yearly by this business about 40 lacks.'⁴

Murshid Kuli Khān died in 1725, and was succeeded by his son-in-law, Shujā Khān, a noble of Turkoman origin, whose family came originally from Khorassan in Persia.

Amongst the favourites of Shujā Khān were two brothers, Hājī Ahmad and Alivirdī Khān, sons of Mirzā Muhammad, a Turkoman, and

'husband of a lady who, being herself of the Afshar tribe, was allied to Shuja Khan.'⁵

It is said they entered his service in an almost menial capacity, the elder as his pipe-bearer, the younger, a man of more martial character, in an inferior military position ; but the Hājī's⁶ ability

¹ In the town of Murshidabad.

² The Jains are a Hindu sect contemporary in origin with the Buddhists, and resembling them in many of their tenets.

³ Hunter, 'Statistical Account of Bengal,' vol. ix., pp. 252-256.

⁴ 'An account of the Seats in 1757 from Mr. Scrafton' (Orme MSS., India, vol. xviii., pp. 544¹-544³).

⁵ 'Seir Mutaqberin,' vol. i., p. 298, edition of 1902.

⁶ Hājī means properly one who has made the pilgrimage to Mecca, and thus it is often used as a title.

was so great that he speedily became the Nawab's confidential adviser, and so completely were the brothers trusted by that Prince that in 1729 Alivirdi was made Governor of the frontier province of Patna or Bahar. In the same year was born Mirzā Muhammad, better known as Sirāj-uddaula. He was the son of Alivirdi's youngest and favourite nephew, Zain-uddin, and the coincidence of his birth with the auspicious appointment to the government of Patna is said to have been the origin of the extraordinary fondness which his grandfather always showed towards him.

1739 1741.

Shujā Khān, whose reign was long looked back to as one of peace and good government, died in 1739, leaving to his son and successor, Sarfarāz Khān, a dangerous legacy in his two favourites, Hājī Ahmad and Alivirdi Khān. It cannot be said with any certainty when these two men first cast ambitious eyes upon the throne, but as early as 1736,¹ by the interest of the great bankers, the Seths, the Hājī had obtained from the Emperor at Delhi a farmān appointing Alivirdi Nawab of Patna in his own right. It is probable that Shujā Khān would have taken steps to check the growing ambition of the brothers, but his death intervened, and Sarfarāz Khān, who, it is said,

'indulged in excessive debauchery even to that degree as to disorder his faculties, soon rendered himself odious to his people, and lost the affections of those who might have supported him.'² took no steps to secure himself from the growing danger. He also gave great offence to the Seths, the nature of which is variously stated as an attack upon the honour of their women³ and as a quarrel about money.⁴ This quarrel resulted in a firm alliance between the brothers and the Seths. As long as Hājī Ahmad remained at Murshidabad Alivirdi was afraid to take action, and accordingly Sarfarāz Khān was cleverly duped into dismissing him, the Seths representing that the Hājī, being destitute of military skill and even of courage, could be of no assistance to his brother. Alivirdi now immediately marched upon Murshidabad, protesting that he was loyal to his Prince, and sought only for justice upon his brother's enemies. Deceived by these pretences, Sarfarāz Khān made no effort until too late to raise an army, and then his hasty levies were easily defeated by Alivirdī at Gheriah in January, 1741.¹ Sarfarāz Khān, who

¹ Scrafton's 'Reflections,' p. 33.² Ibid., p. 33.³ Ibid., pp. 33, 34.⁴ Hunter, 'Statistical Account of Bengal,' vol. ix., p. 256.

'scorned to give way to the rebels,'² was killed on the field of battle, and Alivirdī, entering Murshidabad as a conqueror,

'soon showed he wanted only a just title to make him worthy of this high station. Contrary to the general practice, he shed no blood after this action, contenting himself with putting Suffraz Caun's children under gentle confinement.'³

This reluctance to shed blood unnecessarily is characteristic of Alivirdī, and must be placed in the balance against his treachery to the family of his benefactor, Shujā Khān. It descended to his daughter, Amina Begam, whose advice to her son, Sirāj-uddaula, was always on the side of mercy.⁴

Though he had gained the throne with ease, Alivirdī was not ¹⁷⁴¹⁻¹⁷⁵⁶ destined to enjoy a peaceful reign. In the year following his accession the Marathas invaded the country to enforce their claim, sanctioned by the Emperors of Delhi, to the payment of the chauth, or fourth part of the revenues, and the unhappy Bengalis had now to suffer at the hands of their co-religionists all the innumerable miseries of a foreign invasion. Alivirdī, with dauntless courage, consummate military skill, and the most unscrupulous treachery, defended his provinces through ten long years of varying fortune, until the mutual exhaustion of both parties compelled him to grant, and the Marathas to accept, in 1751, the cession of Orissa, and an annual payment of 12 lakhs of rupees in lieu of all their claims. Alivirdī had already, in 1750, compounded with Mansūr Alī Khān, Wazir of the Emperor, for an annual payment of 52 lakhs of rupees in return for a farmān confirming him as Nawab of Bengal. Apparently he never paid this tribute.

From this time until his death Alivirdī reigned in peace, disturbed only by palace intrigues and the unruliness of his favourite, Sirāj-uddaula, who, impatient for the succession, had even gone so far ¹ Broome, Captain Arthur, 'History of the Rise and Progress of the Bengal Army,' p. 40. Beale gives the date as the 29th April, 1740.

² Scrafton's 'Reflections,' p. 35.

³ Ibid., p. 36.

⁴ Vol. I., pp. lxi., 20; Vol. II., p. 3.

as to rebel against his grandfather in the year 1750. Alivirdi was only too eager to forgive the young man. His fondness for him originated in superstition, and partook of dotage. The naturally evil effects of the education then given in Bengal to the children of Muhammadan nobles¹ was intensified in the case of Sirāj-uddaula by his grandfather's folly,² with the result that he indulged himself in every caprice,

'making no distinction between vice and virtue, and paying no regard to the nearest relations, he carried defilement wherever he went, and, like a man alienated in his mind, he made the houses of men and women of distinction the scenes of his profligacy, without minding either rank or station. In a little time he became as detested as Pharaoh, and people on meeting him by chance used to say, "God save us from him."³

These are the words of the native historian Ghulām Husain Khān, one of his own relatives,⁴ and the belief that he had disordered his intellect by his excesses was generally held by all observers,⁵ and is the best excuse for the crimes which he committed.

His grandfather was not blind to his favourite's character, and said,

'in full company, that as soon as himself should be dead, and Siraj-uddaula should succeed him, the Hatmen' (i.e., Europeans) 'would possess themselves of all the shores of India.'⁶

He therefore thought it wise to take precautions against that habit which of all is most dangerous to a tyrant—namely, intemperance, and during his last illness exacted from Sirāj-uddaula an oath on the Koran to abstain from drink. To this promise Sirāj-uddaula is said to have rigidly adhered, but it was too late—his mind was already affected.⁷

It is curious to remember that the oath on the Koran, which seems to have been the sole bond that Sirāj-uddaula respected,

¹ Scrafton's 'Reflections,' pp. 19, 20.

² 'Seir Mutaqherin,' vol. ii., pp. 66, 88.

³ Ibid., vol. ii., p. 122.

⁴ In the 'Seir Mutaqherin,' Ghulām Husain is said to have been son of a sister of Sirāj-uddaula's father, and, therefore, his cousin. In the Asiatic Annual Register, 1801, 'Characters,' p. 28, it is stated that his maternal grandfather was son to the aunt of Alivirdi Khān.

⁵ Scrafton's 'Reflections,' p. 50.

⁶ 'Seir Mutaqherin,' vol. ii., p. 163.

⁷ Scrafton's 'Reflections,' p. 50.

was to prove, in his hour of danger, only a broken reed when he exacted it from Mir Jafar, a man much more honourable than himself.

A long series of deaths prepared the way for Sirāj-uddaula's accession to the throne. His father, Zain-uddīn,¹ was killed by Afghan mercenaries in 1747, and Alivirdī's elder brother, Hāji Ahmad, perished at the same time. In 1752 Alivirdī publicly² declared Sirāj-uddaula his heir,³ in spite of the claims of his two uncles, Nawāzish Muhammad, known as the Chota Nawab, and Sayyid Ahmad, Governor of Purneah. Nawāzish Muhammad had been wild in his youth, but had sobered down with age. He was immensely rich and charitable, and the darling of the people. He was, however, unambitious, and his whole interest in life centred in the person of Fazl Kulī Khān, Sirāj-uddaula's younger brother, whom he had adopted. The sudden death of this young Prince broke his uncle's heart, and he died in 1755,⁴ though not until he had weakly assented to the murder by Sirāj-uddaula of his Minister, Hasan Kulī Khān, a man of great influence and ability, who was the life and soul of the party opposed to Sirāj-uddaula ever since Alivirdī had declared him his successor. With Hasan Kulī Khān perished his brother, Husain-uddīn. Shocked and terrified by these murders, Sirāj-uddaula's other uncle thought it wise to retire to his government of Purneah. He did so, and died soon after his brother.⁵

Sirāj-uddaula was now free from all possible rivals, except Murād-uddaula, the infant son of Fazl Kulī Khān, who had been adopted by Ghasīta Begam, the wealthy widow of his uncle, Nawāzish Muhammad, and his cousin, Shaukat Jang, who had succeeded Sayyid Ahmad as Governor of Purneah, and who enjoyed, quite undeservedly, much popularity in the country. Neither of these was a very formidable rival, but their union might be dangerous, and Sirāj-uddaula's own reputation was so evil that the wish became father to the thought, and whilst some, like the British, went so far as to consider his accession an impossibility,⁵ the

¹ See family table, Vol. III., p. 378.

² Scrafton's 'Reflections,' p. 48.

³ 17th December, 1755. 'Seir Mutaqherin,' ii., 127. The French (Vol. I., pp. 174, 175) say he was poisoned, but Ghulām Husain Khān asserts that he died of dropsy.

⁴ 26th January, 1756. 'Seir Mutaqherin,' ii., 150.

⁵ Vol. I., p. 207.

other Europeans all expected at any rate a disputed accession.¹ Alivirdi set himself to prevent this from happening. The most dangerous of Sirāj-uddaula's enemies—Hasan Kuli Khān—had been removed, and to ensure his accession all that remained was to provide him with strong supporters. The most influential people at Court were the Court Bankers, the Seths, who were devoted to Alivirdi, and who might be relied upon to support Sirāj-uddaula, Mir Jafar Ali Khān, who had married Alivirdi's half-sister, and was Bakhshi—i.e., Paymaster and Commander-in-Chief of the Army—and the Diwan, Rāi Durlabh, a Hindu, who, though he had no reputation for courage, also held a command in the army. Rāi Durlabh was secured by presents, and Mir Jafar readily swore on the Koran to stand by Sirāj-uddaula. Mir Jafar was a man of great influence, and reputed to be honest and loyal. He had distinguished himself at an early date, even before the accession of Alivirdi, by capturing, in 1733-1734, the fort of Banki-bazar from the servants of the Ostend Company after a most gallant defence.² In the wars with the Marathas he is said in one battle to have killed no less than ten of the enemy with his own hands, and to have saved the army of Alivirdi from annihilation.

Having made sure of these important personages in favour of his grandson, Alivirdi felt that he had done everything necessary, even though all attempts to reconcile Sirāj-uddaula with his aunt Ghasita Begam were in vain. Whilst still labouring at this hopeless task Alivirdi Khān died of dropsy on April 10, 1756,³ at the age of eighty-two, and was buried in the garden of Khush Bāgh, near Murshidabad. Orme thus describes the great Nawab :

'His public character is sufficiently delineated by his actions ; his private life was very different from the usual manners of a Mahometan prince in Indostan ; for he was always extremely temperate, had no pleasures, kept no Seraglio, and always lived the husband of one wife.'⁴

We must here pause for a moment to refer to the relations which existed between Alivirdi and the Europeans in Bengal. On the whole, his conduct to them had been rather strict than 1756.

10th April,

¹ Vol. I., pp. 1, 75 ; Vol. II., p. 57 ; Vol. III., p. 163.

² Stewart, 'History of Bengal, p. 426.

³ Or 9th April. See Vol. I., pp. 118, 248. ⁴ Orme MSS., O. V., 66, p. 96.

unjust. During the wars with the Marathas he allowed the Europeans to strengthen their fortifications, and the British in particular to begin, in 1744, the great Ditch which protected the northern half of Calcutta. On the other hand, in 1744-1745, he exacted large sums of money—three lakhs and a half from the British alone¹—on the plea of the expense to which he was put in these wars. He strongly objected to any exhibition of independence on their part, and any reference to the rights they enjoyed under the royal Farmān.

'He knew well how to say at the proper moment that he was both King and Wasir.'²

Though he had allowed them to fortify their Settlements against the Marathas, he had no intention of allowing them to acquire sufficient strength for purposes of resistance to himself, and to all requests for permission to increase their fortifications he replied :

'You are merchants, what need have you of a fortress? Being under my protection, you have no enemies to fear.'³

The reason of his jealousy was that he was well informed of what was happening in Southern India, of the interference of the English and French in the politics of the country, which had reduced the native Princes to the position of puppets, and, lastly, of the capture of Angria's stronghold at Gheria. He was determined that there should be no such interference with the affairs of his own province, and yet he had no wish to drive out of the country a class of people who did so much for trade and commerce, though their presence filled his mind with a premonition of coming evil. This is shown by two speeches ascribed to him.

'He used to compare the Europeans to a hive of bees, of whose honey you might reap the benefit, but that if you disturbed their hive they would sting you to death.'⁴

On another occasion, when his General, Mustafā Khān, supported by his nephew, Sayyid Ahmad, represented the ease with which the Europeans might be deprived of their immense wealth, he exclaimed :

¹ Vol. III., p. 289.

² Ibid., p. 161.

³ Ibid., p. 160.

⁴ Scrafton's 'Reflections,' p. 52.

'My child, Mustapha Khan is a soldier, and wishes us to be constantly in need of his service, but how come you to join in his request? What have the English done against me that I should use them ill? It is now difficult to extinguish fire on land; but should the sea be in flames, who can put them out? Never listen to such advice as his, for the result would probably be fatal.'¹

These warnings were prophetic, and, in conformity with his secret dread, Alivirdi was extremely cautious in his treatment of the Europeans,

'always observing this policy not to demand it' (i.e., money) 'of them all at the same time, as he wisely judged their union only could make them formidable.'² 1749.

At the same time he was capable of very vigorous action, and when in 1749 Commodore Griffin seized the goods of an Armenian merchant, and the latter appealed to him for redress, he placed guards upon the British Factories, and stopped their trade for several months until they were forced to submit to his terms.³

In one way or another there was continual friction, the British asserting that there had never been a period of three years during which they had not been forced to submit to extortions of various kinds, and always complaining that they were not allowed the full enjoyment of the privileges granted by the Farmān of Farrukhsiyar in 1717, though Bengal

'by its investments has been hitherto, notwithstanding all the interruptions of the Nabobs, the most beneficial part of the Company's estate.'⁴

On the other hand, the Nawab maintained that the British not only enjoyed all privileges consistent with the welfare of the Province, but greatly abused these privileges, to the detriment of the Government and the native traders.

'The injustice to the Moors consists in that, being by their courtesy permitted to live here as merchants, to protect and judge what natives were their servants, and to trade custom free, we under that pretence protected all the Nabob's subjects that claimed our protection, though they were neither our servants nor our merchants, and gave our dastucks or passes to numbers of natives to trade custom free, to the great prejudice of the Nabob's revenue; nay, more, we

¹ Stewart, p. 491, and 'Seir Mutaqherin,' vol. ii. p. 163.

² Scrafton's 'Reflections,' p. 46.

³ Vol. III., p. 289.

⁴ Vol. I., p. 199.

levied large duties upon goods brought into our districts from the very people that permitted us to trade custom free, and by numbers of their impositions (framed to raise the Company's revenue), some of which were ruinous to ourselves, such as taxes on marriages, provisions, transferring land property, etc., caused eternal clamour and complaints against us at Court.¹

It is evident that all the materials for a quarrel were ready long before the accession of Sirāj-uddaula. It may even be said that the British, fretting at the petty restrictions to which they were subjected, were not unwilling to see it break out. Orme writes :

'The Nabob coming down with all His Excellency's cannon to Hughley, and with an intent to bully all the Settlements out of a large sum of money ; Clive, 'twould be a good deed to swing the old dog. I don't speak at random when I say that the Company must think seriously of it, or 'twill not be worth their while to trade in Bengal.'²

This, then, was the condition of affairs between Alivirdī and the British. The French and Dutch had not even the protection of the Farman, which gave, as it were, a legal standpoint for the pretensions of the British. Their trading privileges were much inferior, but they suffered equally from the extortions of the native rulers. The Dutch had made it their settled policy to limit themselves entirely to trade ; they were in no position to defend themselves, and their ultimate resort was a threat to leave the country. The French were not in a much better position, but the Chiefs of their Settlements were able men, and well liked by the natives, and their achievements in Southern India gave them a certain appearance, if not the reality, of strength.

Such was the critical moment in which Alivirdi Khān died, leaving the fortunes of his family in the hands of two young men, of whom their own relative writes :

'It having been decreed by Providence that the guilty race of Aly Verdy Khan should be deprived of an Empire that had cost so much toil in rearing, of course it was in its designs that the three provinces of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa should be found to have for masters two young men equally proud, equally incapable, and equally cruel, Seradj-ed-doulah and Shaocat-djung.'³

¹ Vol. III., p. 384.

² Letter from Orme to Clive, 25 August, 1752, Orme MSS., O.V., 19, pp. 1, 2.

³ 'Seir Mutaqherin,' vol. ii., p. 189.

CHAPTER II.

THE EUROPEAN SETTLEMENTS IN BENGAL.

'Bengal is a kingdom in Asia, very rich, on the gulf of the same name, traversed by the Ganges. . . . The French, English, and Dutch have had Settlements in it for many years.'—Revolutions in Bengal.¹

IN 1756 the chief European Settlements in Bengal were those of the English, French, and Dutch, that of the Danes at Serampore being new and of little importance, whilst the Prussian Company had no Settlement, their business being transacted by an Agent, whose headquarters were at the Octagon to the south of the French territory. The Portuguese traded simply as natives at their ancient Settlement of Bandel, to the north of Hugli. At Hugli itself there was a Fort, and the Governor or Faujdar was the native official with whom the Europeans had the closest relations.

The three chief Settlements consisted each of a native or Black Town, and a European or White Town. In the centre of the latter was the Factory or Trading House, which was surrounded by a quadrangular enclosure, the walls of which were constructed to carry guns. At each corner was a bastion to flank the walls or curtains. These feeble buildings were dignified by the name of forts. The Towns outside the Factories had practically no fortifications, though at Chandernagore there were the remains of an old ditch, which had once marked the bounds of the Settlement, and the northern part of Calcutta was protected by what was called the Maratha Ditch, dug by the native inhabitants of the town in 1743-1744 as a protection against possible Maratha raids. The original intention was to carry this completely round the Town from Chitpur or Bagh Bazar on the north, where there was a small redoubt, to Surman's Gardens on the south, so as to form with the river Ganges a kind of island easily defensible against irregular forces. But the Maratha scare had speedily died away, and not only had the Ditch been only half completed, but no care had been taken to keep clear the portion that had been finished, so that it was partially choked with mud, and was fordable at almost any point in its course. Accordingly, not only were the Settlements around the Factories exposed to any assailant, but the forts themselves were so closely surrounded by European houses built to a greater height, and often with walls as strong, if not stronger, than those of the forts themselves, that the latter were also incapable of defence. The European houses were handsome buildings, large and lofty, with wide covered verandahs, and standing in large gardens or compounds, so that to the native eye they were suited rather for the palaces of nobles than for the dwellings of mere merchants. Besides these fine town houses, the leading inhabitants were accustomed to recreate themselves not only in the beautiful gardens belonging to the various East India Companies, but also in gardens of their own, which they established some little distance away in the country.¹ In fact, the Europeans lived with an ostentation of wealth and comfort which completely dazzled the eyes of the natives, who, accustomed under a despotic Government to conceal all signs of wealth, could not imagine that this show of riches was not evidence of the possession of further hoards. Like London to Blücher, so Calcutta, Chandernagore, and Chinsura appeared to the native soldiery only as magnificent towns to plunder.

1743-1744.

¹ Vol. III., p. 215.

Besides their three chief Settlements, the English, French, and Dutch had Factory houses at Cossimbazar, near the capital town of Murshidabad; at Dacca, the ancient capital of Bengal; at Balasore, the capital of Orissa; and at Jagdea or Luckipore,² at the mouth of the Ganges. At Patna also, the capital of Bahar, the three nations had had Factories, but the English had recently abandoned theirs. None of these were fortified except the English Factory at Cossimbazar;³ the rest were mere country houses

¹ e.g., Mr. Holwell and Mr. Pearkes had gardens on the banks of the Ganges in the part of Calcutta now known as Garden Reach (Vol. II., pp. 73, 76), and Mr. Kelsall to the north of Calcutta in Chitpur (Vol. III., p. 294).

² These towns are at some distance from each other, but apparently were managed in each case by a single staff.

³ Fortified in 1742-1743 (see Orme MSS., India, vol. iv., p. 4137) for a defence against the Marathas.

standing in walled enclosures, which are called in India "compounds." Thus the Council of Dacca writes :

'The Factory is little better than a common house, surrounded with a thin brick wall, one half of it not above nine foot high.'¹

The garrisons of the British up-country Factories in no case exceeded fifty Europeans; the French Factories had even smaller numbers,² and the Dutch seem to have employed chiefly native barkandazes or gunmen.³

It is evident, therefore, that the up-country Factories were entirely at the mercy of the local Government, and in all quarrels between the natives and Europeans it was the custom of Government to surround these Factories and stop their trade until the Europeans submitted to pay the fine, which was the inevitable result of any show of independence on their part.⁴

Before 1756 there had been no serious conflicts between the natives and Europeans, except the destruction of the Portuguese Settlement at Hugli in 1632,⁵ the expulsion of the British from Hugli in 1685, and the expulsion of the Emdeners from their little Fort at Bankibazar in 1733-1734.⁶ The three Forts which now guarded their Settlements had never been attacked, and were reputed absolutely safe against assault by a native army. We may therefore examine a little more closely into what is known about them, always bearing in mind that each of the three nations was under the delusion that the forts of the other two were in good repair, and strongly held by European garrisons of from three hundred to a thousand men.

Of Fort Gustavus the Dutch Council writes on the 22nd January, 1757 :

'We have on the 16th instant sent in a written protest against the action of the Vice-Admiral, and must now patiently await what is further in store for us, as, not being able to offer any resistance worth mentioning, for our palisades, that have to serve as a kind of rampart, are as little proof against a cannonade as the canvass of a tent, and our entire military force consists of 78 men, about one-third of whom are in the hospital, all the seamen being below and the other military on the Patna expedition, whilst all our native servants have run away from fear of the English, so that if matters came to such a pass

¹ Vol. I, p. 35.

² Vol. III., p. 418.

³ Vol. I., p. 14.

⁴ Vol. III., p. 219.

⁵ Stewart, p. 241.

⁶ Ibid., p. 314.

we should have to man and aim the guns ourselves—in short, to perform and do all the work for which assistance is required.¹

And, again, on the 2nd April :

‘Our fort . . . would not be able to withstand the onslaught of the enemy for as many hours as the French have days.’²

In the whole of Bengal the Civil Establishment of the Dutch was only thirty-five officials. They had also four military officers and a surgeon.³

At the same time, the Dutch had very great trading interests in the country. They claimed the premier rank amongst the Europeans at the Darbar or Court of Murshidabad, and they had the expensive but honourable privilege of laying down the buoys in the River Hugli.⁴ These were the Dutch claims and their means of enforcing respect for them. Accordingly, one is not surprised to find that neither the Dutch nor any other European nation possessed the right of having a European representative at Court, and that when their native agent or Wakil pressed their claims too strongly, Sirāj-uddaula dared on occasion threaten not only him but his masters with a flogging for their insolence.⁵

Turning next to the French, the statement of the French Factories in Bengal on the 23rd January, 1756,⁶ shows that the European garrison of Chandernagore consisted, including officers, of 112 men. If we deduct the native clerks from the Establishment of 642, we find that the total force which can be assumed capable of bearing arms was 376 Europeans and Portuguese. With this garrison, if one may dignify the defenders by that name, the French had to defend a Fort which Mr. Renault, the Governor, describes as follows :

‘Fort d’Orléans, situated almost in the middle’ (of the Settlement), ‘and surrounded by houses which command it, was a square of 100 fathoms, built of bricks, flanked by four bastions of 16 guns, without outworks, ramparts, or glacis. The south curtain, which was about 4 feet thick, raised only to the cordons, was provided only with a platform for three guns ; but the rest of this curtain, as well as that of the north, was only a wall of earth and brick, a foot

¹ Vol. II., p. 82.

² Vol. III., p. 410.

³ Ibid., p. 315.

⁴ Ibid., p. 315.

⁵ Vol. II., pp. 257, 287.

⁶ Vol. III., p. 418.

and a half thick and eighteen feet high ; and warehouses lined the east curtain which faces the Ganges, and which we were still working at. All this side had no ditch, and that which surrounded the other sides was dry, about four feet deep, and, properly speaking, nothing but a ravine. The fortifications of the Fort up to the cordon were eighteen feet high, and the houses which commanded it from the edge of the counterscarp within musket range had a height of 30 feet.¹

This is Renault's description of Fort d'Orléans when he had spent several months in trying to make it as defensible as possible.

Whilst the natives of the country were under the impression that the French were the masters of inexhaustible wealth, Renault could not obtain money for the Company's annual trade investment, much less for unproductive expenditure, such as that for fortifications. The French East India Company was in debt to native merchants at Chandernagore to the extent of 26 or 27 lakhs, of which 7 lakhs were due to the Seths alone.² It was only the personal credit of Renault which enabled him to obtain cargoes for the French East India ships, and when the Saint Contest brought him 300,000 rupees, the whole sum was swallowed up by the fine which the Nawab imposed upon the French in 1756 as a punishment for not assisting him in his attack on Calcutta.³

So great was the poverty of the French, and so great their indebtedness to the rich merchants, Jagat Seth and Coja Wajid, that when they came to quarrel with the English their chief hope of assistance from the native Government lay in the belief that their native creditors would not willingly see them ruined. On the other hand, they had a great resource in the personal character of their Chiefs. M. Renault's credit with the native merchants has just been referred to. M. Courtin, the Chief of Dacca, seems to have been on exceedingly good terms with the Nawab's Deputy, Dasarath Khān, and M. Jean Law at Saidabad (Cossimbazar) was almost a favourite of Sirāj-uddaula, to whom he made a practice of paying court at a time when other Europeans treated him with neglect, if not with actual disrespect.⁴

Lastly, we come to the British at Calcutta, of which town Orme writes :

'The river Ganges forms a crescent between two points, the one called Perring's Garden, the other Surman's Garden. The distance between these, measuring along the bank of the river, is about three miles and a half. In the deepest part of this crescent, about the middle between the two points, is situated Fort William, a building which many an old house in this country exceeds in its defences. It is situated a few paces from the riverside, on the banks of which runs a Line of guns the whole length of the Fort from north to south, and this is the only formidable part, as it is capable of annoying ships in the river. The ends of this Line are joined to the two bastions of the Fort nearest the river by a garden wall and a gate in each, which would resist one shot of a six-pounder, but which would be forced by the second. Opposite to the two bastions mentioned are two others inland to the eastward, but within thirty yards to the north and forty yards to the south the bastions are commanded by large houses. To the eastward inland the top of the Church¹ commands the whole of both the northern and eastern ramparts. Northward and southward for the length of a mile, and to the eastward about a quarter of a mile, stand all the English houses, mostly separated from each other by large enclosures. Where the English habitations end to the northward commence those of the principal black merchants, which reach quite up to Perring's Garden. To the southward down to Surman's Garden the houses, belonging to a lower class of the natives, are less conspicuous. Twelve years ago a ditch had been dug, beginning at Perring's, and carried inland of the town in a crescent, with an intent to end at Surman's, but only four miles of it are finished.²

¹ Vol. III., p. 267. ² Vol. II., p. 438. ³ Vol. III., p. 253. ⁴ Ibid., p. 163.

Orme omits to mention that in the eastern curtain of the Fort several large openings had been broken for the purpose of obtaining light and air, and that between the two southern bastions a huge warehouse had been erected, preventing the flanking fire of these bastions, and with walls too weak to carry guns. In the southern curtain doors had been cut leading into the new warehouse, and thus the whole eastern and southern faces of the Fort were rendered practically defenceless against a determined attack.³

As regards the garrison of Fort William, this ought to have consisted of four companies of foot and a company of artillery, in all 500 men; but the latest return we have, which is dated 29th February, 1756,⁴ shows the number of European officers and soldiers to have been only 260. As the garrison was supposed to supply the up-country Factories, and to provide convoys for treasure sent up-country, there ought to have been over 200 more Europeans available ; but the mortality amongst the European soldiery was very great, and the constant fighting with the French in Madras had caused the authorities at Fort St. George¹ to detain all the European recruits sent for Bengal since 1752.² Consequently we find that when the military force at Calcutta came to be reviewed just before the siege it was found to number only 180 foot, of whom not above 45 were Europeans, and 35 European artillery. With the addition of militia and volunteers the fighting force in Fort William was 515 men,³ a smaller number than the garrison of Fort d'Orléans when it was besieged in March, 1757.

¹ Captain Fenwick, who was absent in England at the time of the siege, wrote to Mr. Orme that the roof of the Church not only commanded the whole of the Fort, but all the adjacent houses. He advised that it should be fortified (Orme MSS., India, vol. vi., pp. 1569-1589).

² Vol. III., p. 126.

³ Vol. II., p. 25, and Vol. III., p. 387. ⁴ Vol. III., p. 408.

Not only were the British exceedingly weak from a military point of view, but they had the misfortune of being commanded by the most incompetent of leaders. The chief military officer, Captain-Commandant George Minchin, may be most briefly dismissed in Holwell's scathing words :

'Touching the military capacity of our Commandant, I am a stranger. I can only say we are unhappy in his keeping it to himself, if he had any ; as neither I, nor I believe anyone else, was witness to any part of his conduct that spoke or bore the appearance of his being the commanding military officer in the garrison.'⁴

And Holwell justly remarks :

'Troops . . . are hardly ever known to do their duty, unless where they have an opinion of as well as love for their commanders.'⁵

In a garrison made up largely of civilians this would not have been of much importance if the Governor had been a man of character and ability, but unfortunately Mr. Roger Drake, who had held that position by seniority since 1752, though he had never been formally confirmed by the Court of Directors, was a man totally unfitted to meet a critical emergency. He was only thirty-four years of age. His uncertain official position weakened his authority with both natives and Europeans in Calcutta, and his unfortunate domestic arrangements exposed him to many indignities, and drove him for company to men of inferior position.⁶ Consequently much of the influence which should have belonged

¹ Madras.

⁴ Vol. II., p. 26.

² Vol. I., p. 134.

⁵ Ibid.

³ Ibid., p. 137.

⁶ Vol. I., pp. 276, 277.

to the Governor of Calcutta was in the hands of subordinate members of Council. The chief of these were Messrs. Manningham and Frankland, whose sole object seems to have been their own enrichment without any regard to the interests of the Company or the rights of the native Government,¹ and Mr. John Zephaniah Holwell,² an ex-surgeon, who was now Zamindar or native Magistrate of Calcutta. Mr. Holwell appears to have been the only member of Council who had any real knowledge of the natives of the country, and his reforms in the administration of the law in Calcutta had endeared him to them, though they had rendered him unpopular with many of the Europeans whose gains were interfered with. To these, perhaps, should be added Mr. Watts, the Second in Council, who was Chief at Cossimbazar, and who should have been well acquainted with the attitude of the native Government, but at this time he seems to have had very little idea of the danger in which the Europeans stood, and his carelessness is in some degree responsible for the misfortunes which befell Calcutta.

These, then, were the position and the resources of the Europeans in Bengal at the accession of Sirāj-uddaula. It remains only to say a few words about two personages who were the intermediaries between them and the native Government—namely, Coja Wājid the Armenian, and Omichand the Jain merchant. The former, who was known amongst the natives by the title of Fakhr-uttujār, or the 'Chief of Merchants,' was a very rich trader, who lived at Hugli in a house close to the Muhammadan Fort.³ He had dealings with the French and Dutch, and was employed by the Nawab in his negotiations with the Chiefs of these nations. At first, at any rate, he was inclined to favour the French in their quarrels with the British; but he was an extremely timid man, and after his property at Hugli had been plundered by the British,⁴ he gradually changed sides, and it was by his means that the British were informed of the Nawab's intrigues with the French Chiefs Law and Bussy.⁵ At this time he was not unsuspected of inciting Sirāj-uddaula against the British.⁶

¹ Vol. I., p. 269.

² Ibid., pp. 50, 85, 93, 266.

³ Vol. III., p. 36.

⁴ Vol. II., p. 123.

⁵ Ibid., pp. 264, 313, 314, 355, 364, 365, 369, 370.

⁶ Vol. I., p. 140.

Omichand was an inhabitant of Calcutta. Babu Sārādā Charan Mitra¹ tells us his proper name was Amīr Chand, that he was a Panjabi by race and a Sikh by religion. He had a brother, Golāb Chand, and a nephew, Dayāl Chand, and a near relative—some say a brother-in-law²—Hazārī Mal, in Calcutta. Apparently he started business in Calcutta as an agent of Vaishnava Dās Seth and his brother, Mānik Chand Seth, of Barabazar. Omichand, though he lived in Calcutta, was a great favourite with Alivirdī Khān, whose protection he secured by judicious presents of rare or curious objects—e.g., on one occasion a Persian cat.³ Drake asserts that he was offered the Nawabship of Purneah in 1754, and shortly before the attack on Calcutta he received a parwana granting him the same privileges as Jagat Seth.⁴ On the other hand, he had for many years acted as the Agent of the English in regard to the annual investment or purchase of Indian goods in Bengal, and this office had been recently taken from him. Mr. Noble, in his letter to the Council of Fort St. George,⁵ says plainly that he had been very badly treated by some of the gentlemen in Bengal,

'who have generally sacrificed the Company's welfare and nation's honour and glory to their private piques and interest.'

However, whether he had been treated justly or unjustly, he was considered to be a man of very vindictive temper—

'You know Omychund can never forgive'⁶—and when he was injured in both pride and pocket by being no longer

'the acting person between the Company and the Government,'⁷

the suggestion that he instigated the Nawab⁸ to attack Calcutta, so that he might prove his importance to the British by stepping ¹ 'Sahityasamhita,' vol. i., No. 1, pp. 9-15.

² Vol. I., p. 142.

³ Vol. II., p. 63.

⁴ Vol. I., p. 141. This is important to notice, as it marks the beginning of the rivalry between Omichand and the Seths, which we shall have to notice later on.

⁵ Vol. III., p. 328.

⁶ Ibid., p. 146.

⁷ Vol. II., p. 148.

⁸ Ibid., p. 63.

in as their saviour at the last moment, met with ready credence. Whether he intended to ruin or save the British can never be known, as Drake put him in prison as soon as the Nawab approached Calcutta, and thereby so enraged him that he not only refused to write a letter to the Nawab in favour of the British, but even sent his servants to inform the Nawab of the easiest way to introduce his forces into the town.¹

¹ Vol. III, p. 363.