

Lakshminarayana Krishnaiah
Poona
18.6.82
Elphinstone College.

SERVANTS OF INDIA SOCIETY'S LIBRARY,
POONA 4.

FOR INTERNAL CIRCULATION

To be returned on or before the last date stamped below

11 DEC 1968

--	--	--

THE
HISTORY OF ENGLAND

FROM THE ACCESSION

Dhananjayrao Gadgil Library

GIPE-PUNE-001795

OF
JAMES THE SECOND.

BY LORD MACAULAY.

VOLUME II.

THIRTEENTH EDITION.

LONDON:
LONGMAN, BROWN, GREEN, LONGMANS, & ROBERTS.
1857.

V3.L

A850.2

1795

LONDON:
Printed by SPOTTISWOODE & Co.
New-street Square.

CONTENTS

OF

THE SECOND VOLUME.

---

CHAPTER VI.

	Page
THE Power of James at the Height in the Autumn of 1685	1
His Foreign Policy	2
His Plans of Domestic Government; the Habeas Corpus Act	3
The Standing Army	4
Designs in favour of the Roman Catholic Religion	5
Violation of the Test Act; Disgrace of Halifax	11
General Discontent	12
Persecution of the French Huguenots	13
Effect of that Persecution in England	17
Meeting of Parliament; Speech of the King; an Opposition formed in the House of Commons	18
Sentiments of Foreign Governments	20
Committee of the Commons on the King's Speech	22
Defeat of the Government	26
Second Defeat of the Government; the King reprimands the Commons	28
Coke committed by the Commons for Disrespect to the King	29
Opposition to the Government in the Lords; the Earl of Devonshire	31
The Bishop of London	32
Viscount Mordaunt	33
Prorogation	35
Trials of Lord Gerard and of Hampden	36
Trial of Delamere	37
Effect of his Acquittal	40
Parties in the Court; Feeling of the Protestant Tories	41
Publication of Papers found in the Strong Box of Charles the Second	43

	Page
Feeling of the respectable Roman Catholics	45
Cabal of violent Roman Catholics	46
Castelmaine; Jermyn; White; Tyrconnel	47
Feeling of the Ministers of Foreign Governments	51
The Pope and the Order of Jesus opposed to each other	52
The Order of Jesus	53
Father Petre	60
The King's Temper and Opinions	61
The King encouraged in his Errors by Sunderland	63
Perfidy of Jeffreys	66
Godolphin; the Queen; Amours of the King	67
Catharine Sedley	68
Intrigues of Rochester in favour of Catharine Sedley	70
Decline of Rochester's Influence	73
Castelmaine sent to Rome; the Huguenots ill treated by James	76
The Dispensing Power	80
Dismission of refractory Judges	81
Case of Sir Edward Hales	83
Roman Catholics authorised to hold Ecclesiastical Benefices; Sclater; Walker	85
The Deanery of Christchurch given to a Roman Catholic	87
Disposal of Bishoprics	87
Resolution of James to use his Ecclesiastical Supremacy against the Church	88
His Difficulties	89
He creates a new Court of High Commission	92
Proceedings against the Bishop of London	96
Discontent excited by the public Display of Roman Catholic Rites and Vestments	97
Riots	99
A Camp formed at Hounslow	101
Samuel Johnson	103
Hugh Speke	104
Proceedings against Johnson	105
Zeal of the Anglican Clergy against Popery; Controversial Writings	107
The Roman Catholic Divines overmatched	109
State of Scotland	111
Queensberry; Perth; Melfort	112
Their Apostasy	113
Favour shown to the Roman Catholic Religion in Scotland; Riots at Edinburgh	114
Anger of the King	115
His Plans concerning Scotland	116
Deputation of Scotch Privy Councillors sent to London	117

CONTENTS.

v

	Page
Their Negotiations with the King; Meeting of the Scotch Estates - - - - -	118
They prove refractory - - - - -	119
They are adjourned; arbitrary System of Government in Scotland - - - - -	123
Ireland - - - - -	125
State of the Law on the Subject of Religion - - - - -	126
Hostility of Races; the aboriginal Peasantry - - - - -	127
The aboriginal Aristocracy - - - - -	128
State of the English Colony - - - - -	130
Course which James ought to have followed - - - - -	132
His Errors - - - - -	135
Clarendon arrives in Ireland as Lord Lieutenant - - - - -	137
His Mortifications; Panic among the Colonists - - - - -	138
Arrival of Tyrconnel at Dublin as General - - - - -	141
His Partiality and Violence - - - - -	142
He is bent on the Repeal of the Act of Settlement; he returns to England - - - - -	144
The King displeased with Clarendon - - - - -	145
Rochester attacked by the Jesuitical Cabal - - - - -	146
Attempts of James to convert Rochester - - - - -	148
Dismissal of Rochester - - - - -	153
Dismissal of Clarendon; Tyrconnel Lord Deputy - - - - -	155
Dismay of the English Colonists in Ireland - - - - -	157
Effect of the Fall of the Hydes - - - - -	158

CHAPTER VII

William, Prince of Orange; his Appearance - - - - -	160
His early Life and Education - - - - -	161
His Theological Opinions - - - - -	163
His Military Qualifications - - - - -	164
His Love of Danger; his bad Health; Coldness of his Manners and Strength of his Emotions - - - - -	167
His Friendship for Bentinck - - - - -	168
Mary, Princess of Orange - - - - -	171
Gilbert Burnet - - - - -	173
He brings about a good Understanding between the Prince and Princess - - - - -	178
Relations between William and English Parties - - - - -	179
His Feelings towards England; his Feelings towards Holland and France - - - - -	180
His Policy consistent throughout - - - - -	185
Treaty of Augsburg - - - - -	189

	Page
William becomes the Head of the English Opposition	190
Mordaunt proposes to William a Descent on England	191
William rejects the Advice	192
Discontents in England after the Fall of the Hydes	193
Conversions to Popery; Peterborough; Salisbury	194
Wycherley; Tindal; Haines	195
Dryden	196
The Hind and Panther	198
Change in the Policy of the Court towards the Puritans	201
Partial Toleration granted in Scotland	205
Closeting	207
It is unsuccessful; Admiral Herbert	208
Declaration of Indulgence	209
Feeling of the Protestant Dissenters	211
Feeling of the Church of England	212
The Court and the Church contend for the Favour of the Puritans	214
Letter to a Dissenter	217
Conduct of the Dissenters	218
Some of them side with the Court; Care	220
Alsop; Rosewell; Lobb	221
Penn	222
The Majority of the Puritans are against the Court; Baxter; Howe	223
Bunyan	224
Kiffin	227
The Prince and Princess of Orange hostile to the Declaration of Indulgence	231
Their Views respecting the English Roman Catholics vindicated	233
Enmity of James to Burnet	240
Mission of Dykvelt to England	242
Negotiations of Dykvelt with English Statesmen; Danby	243
Nottingham	244
Halifax; Devonshire	246
Edward Russell	250
Compton; Herbert; Churchill	251
Lady Churchill and the Princess Anne	253
Dykvelt returns to the Hague with Letters from many eminent Englishmen	256
Zulestein's Mission	257
Growing Enmity between James and William	258
Influence of the Dutch Press	260
Correspondence of Stewart and Fagel	261
Castelmaine's Embassy to Rome	262

CHAPTER VIII.

	Page
Consecration of the Nuncio at St. James's Palace; his public Reception - - - - -	268
The Duke of Somerset - - - - -	269
Dissolution of the Parliament; Military Offences illegally punished - - - - -	270
Proceedings of the High Commission - - - - -	273
The Universities - - - - -	274
Proceedings against the University of Cambridge - - - - -	276
The Earl of Mulgrave - - - - -	278
State of Oxford - - - - -	281
Magdalene College, Oxford - - - - -	283
Anthony Farmer recommended by the King for President - - - - -	287
Election of the President - - - - -	288
The Fellows of Magdalene cited before the High Commission - - - - -	289
Parker recommended as President; the Charterhouse - - - - -	290
The Royal Progress - - - - -	291
The King at Oxford; he reprimands the Fellows of Magdalene - - - - -	294
Penn attempts to mediate - - - - -	295
Special Ecclesiastical Commissioners sent to Oxford - - - - -	297
Protest of Hough; Installation of Parker - - - - -	298
Ejection of the Fellows - - - - -	300
Magdalene College turned into a Popish Seminary - - - - -	302
Resentment of the Clergy - - - - -	303
Schemes of the Jesuitical Cabal respecting the Succession - - - - -	305
Scheme of James and Tyrconnel for preventing the Princess of Orange from succeeding to the Kingdom of Ireland - - - - -	307
The Queen pregnant; general Incredulity - - - - -	308
Feeling of the Constituent Bodies, and of the Peers - - - - -	312
James determines to pack a Parliament - - - - -	313
The Board of Regulators - - - - -	315
Many Lords Lieutenants dismissed; the Earl of Oxford - - - - -	316
The Earl of Shrewsbury - - - - -	317
The Earl of Dorset - - - - -	319
Questions put to the Magistrates - - - - -	323
Their Answers; Failure of the King's Plans - - - - -	324
List of Sheriffs - - - - -	328
Character of the Roman Catholic Country Gentlemen - - - - -	329
Feeling of the Dissenters; Regulation of Corporations - - - - -	332
Inquisition in all the Public Departments - - - - -	337
Dismission of Sawyer - - - - -	338
Williams Solicitor General - - - - -	339

	Page
Second Declaration of Indulgence - - -	340
The Clergy ordered to read it - - -	341
They hesitate ; Patriotism of the Protestant Nonconformists of London - - -	343
Consultation of the London Clergy - - -	344
Consultation at Lambeth Palace - - -	346
Petition of the Seven Bishops presented to the King - -	347
The London Clergy disobey the Royal Order - - -	351
Hesitation of the Government - - -	352
It is determined to prosecute the Bishops for a Libel - -	354
They are examined by the Privy Council - - -	355
They are committed to the Tower - - -	357
Birth of the Pretender ; he is generally believed to be sup- posititious - - -	359
The Bishops brought before the King's Bench, and bailed -	364
Agitation of the Public Mind - - -	367
Uneasiness of Sunderland - - -	368
He professes himself a Roman Catholic - - -	369
Trial of the Bishops - - -	370
The Verdict ; Joy of the People - - -	381
Peculiar State of Public Feeling at this Time - - -	387

CHAPTER IX.

Change in the Opinion of the Tories concerning the Lawfulness of Resistance - - -	391
Russell proposes to the Prince of Orange a Descent on England - - -	400
Henry Sidney - - -	401
Devonshire ; Shrewsbury ; Halifax - - -	402
Danby - - -	403
Bishop Compton - - -	404
Nottingham ; Lumley - - -	405
Invitation to William despatched - - -	405
Conduct of Mary - - -	407
Difficulties of William's Enterprise - - -	409
Conduct of James after the Trial of the Bishops - - -	413
Dismissions and Promotions - - -	415
Proceedings of the High Commission ; Sprat resigns his Seat -	417
Discontent of the Clergy ; Transactions at Oxford - - -	418
Discontent of the Gentry - - -	419
Discontent of the Army - - -	420
Irish Troops brought over ; Public Indignation - - -	422
Lillibullero - - -	428
Politics of the United Provinces - - -	429

	Page
Errors of the French King - - - -	431
His Quarrel with the Pope concerning the Franchises - -	432
The Archbishopric of Cologne - - - -	433
Skilful Management of William - - - -	435
His Military and Naval Preparations - - - -	436
He receives numerous Assurances of Support from England -	438
Sunderland - - - -	439
Anxiety of William; Warnings conveyed to James - - -	444
Exertions of Lewis to save James - - - -	446
James frustrates them - - - -	447
The French Armies invade Germany - - - -	450
William obtains the Sanction of the States General to his Expedition - - - -	451
Schomberg; British Adventurers at the Hague - - - -	453
William's Declaration - - - -	455
James roused to a Sense of his Danger; his Naval Means -	458
His Military Means - - - -	459
He attempts to conciliate his Subjects - - - -	460
He gives Audience to the Bishops - - - -	461
His Concessions ill received - - - -	463
Proofs of the Birth of the Prince of Wales submitted to the Privy Council - - - -	467
Disgrace of Sunderland - - - -	468
William takes leave of the States of Holland - - - -	470
He embarks and sails; he is driven back by a Storm - -	471
His Declaration arrives in England; James questions the Lords	472
William sets sail the second time - - - -	475
He passes the Straits - - - -	476
He lands at Torbay - - - -	478
He enters Exeter - - - -	483
Conversation of the King with the Bishops - - - -	489
Disturbances in London - - - -	491
Men of Rank begin to repair to the Prince - - - -	492
Lovelace - - - -	493
Colchester; Abingdon - - - -	495
Desertion of Cornbury - - - -	496
Petition of the Lords for a Parliament - - - -	500
The King goes to Salisbury - - - -	503
Seymour; Court of William at Exeter - - - -	504
Northern Insurrection - - - -	506
Skirmish at Wincanton - - - -	509
Desertion of Churchill and Grafton - - - -	511
Retreat of the Royal Army from Salisbury - - - -	512
Desertion of Prince George and Ormond - - - -	513
Flight of the Princess Anne - - - -	514

	Page
Council of Lords held by James	517
He appoints Commissioners to treat with William	521
The Negotiation a Feint	522
Dartmouth refuses to send the Prince of Wales into France	525
Agitation of London	526
Forged Proclamation	527
Risings in various Parts of the Country	528
Clarendon joins the Prince at Salisbury; Dissension in the Prince's Camp	531
The Prince reaches Hungerford; Skirmish at Reading; the King's Commissioners arrive at Hungerford	535
Negotiation	536
The Queen and Prince of Wales sent to France; Lauzun	542
The King's Preparations for Flight	546
His Flight	547

CHAPTER X.

The Flight of James known; great Agitation	549
The Lords meet at Guildhall	550
Riots in London	553
The Spanish Ambassador's House sacked	555
Arrest of Jeffreys	556
The Irish Night	558
The King detained near Sheerness	563
The Lords order him to be set at Liberty	568
William's Embarrassment	570
Arrest of Feversham; Arrival of James in London	571
Consultation at Windsor	574
The Dutch Troops occupy Whitehall	577
Message from the Prince delivered to James	578
James sets out for Rochester	579
Arrival of William at Saint James's	580
He is advised to assume the Crown by Right of Conquest	582
He calls together the Lords and the Members of the Parliaments of Charles the Second	584
Flight of James from Rochester	587
Debates and Resolutions of the Lords	589
Debates and Resolutions of the Commoners summoned by the Prince	590
A Convention called; Exertions of the Prince to restore Order	591
His tolerant Policy	592
Satisfaction of Roman Catholic Powers; State of Feeling in France	594
Reception of the Queen of England in France	596

CONTENTS.

xi

	Page
Arrival of James at Saint Germain's - - -	598
State of Feeling in the United Provinces - - -	600
Election of Members to serve in the Convention - - -	601
Affairs of Scotland - - - - -	602
State of Parties in England - - - - -	606
Sherlock's Plan - - - - -	608
Sancroft's Plan - - - - -	610
Danby's Plan - - - - -	612
The Whig Plan - - - - -	614
Meeting of the Convention ; leading Members of the House of Commons - - - - -	616
Choice of a Speaker - - - - -	618
Debate on the State of the Nation - - - - -	621
Resolution declaring the Throne vacant - - - - -	623
It is sent up to the Lords ; Debate in the Lords on the Plan of Regency - - - - -	625
Schism between the Whigs and the Followers of Danby - - -	633
Meeting at the Earl of Devonshire's - - - - -	636
Debate in the Lords on the Question whether the Throne was vacant - - - - -	637
Majority for the Negative ; Agitation in London - - - - -	638
Letter of James to the Convention - - - - -	639
Debates ; Negotiations ; Letter of the Princess of Orange to Danby - - - - -	640
The Princess Anne acquiesces in the Whig Plan - - - - -	641
William explains his Views - - - - -	642
The Conference between the Houses - - - - -	645
The Lords yield - - - - -	646
New Laws proposed for the Security of Liberty - - - - -	647
Disputes and Compromise - - - - -	649
The Declaration of Right - - - - -	651
Arrival of Mary - - - - -	652
Tender and Acceptance of the Crown - - - - -	654
William and Mary proclaimed ; peculiar Character of the English Revolution - - - - -	655

INDEX

TO

THE SECOND VOLUME.

- Asmanson, James Bertie, Earl of; removed by James II. from the lord-licutenancy of Oxfordshire, 323. Joins the Prince of Orange, 495.
- Adda, Ferdinand, Count of; arrives in England as Nuncio, 20. 21. His impressions at Lord Delamere's trial, 40. His reasons for moderate courses, 53. note. James's avowal to him, 87. His consecration at St. James's Palace, 268. His public reception, 270. His escape, 558.
- Ailesbury, Earl of; his offer to James II., 283.
- Albeville, White, Marquess of; his character, and connection with the Catholic cabal, 47. Succeeds Skelton in Holland; demands Burnet's dismissal from the Hague, 240. His despatch to James, 458. His treatment at the Hague, 600.
- Allibone, Richard, a Roman Catholic; appointed a judge, 273. Declares the Bishops' petition a libel, 380.
- Alsop, Vincent, a Nonconformist; supports the Court party in the conflict between James and the Church, 221. His mortification at the Dissenters' opposition to the Indulgence, 344.
- Anne, Princess, daughter of James II.; educated by Bishop Compton, 32. Her intimacy with Lady Churchill, 254. Her reputed bounty to Churchill, 255. 256. Her attachment to Protestantism, 257. Reproves Clarendon, 499. Writes to William, 514. Her flight from Whitehall to the North, 515—517. Acquires in the Whig plan, 641. 642.
- Army, standing; designs of James II. for its augmentation, 4—11. Its discontent after the trial of the Bishops, 420. Its retreat from Salisbury, 512.
- Arnold, Michael, the brewer, 373. 381.
- Arran, Earl of, 605.
- Arundell of Wardour, Lord; joins the violent Catholics, 46. His nomination to the Privy Council, 85. His appointment to the Privy Seal, 158.
- Astry, Sir Samuel, 370. 381.
- Atterbury, Francis; his first appearance in public controversy, 108.
- Augsburg, treaty of; the work of William of Orange, 189.
- Austin, Thomas; subdues Arnold's obstinacy, 381.
- Austria; dissatisfaction of its court with James's dismissal of Halifax, 12. 13. Anxiety of its ministers for an understanding between James and his Parliament, 20. Lewis's fears lest James should ally himself with her, 21.
- Avaux, Count of; French minister at the Hague, 185. His audience with the States, 446. His advice to Lewis, 449.
- Bacon, Francis Lord; his testimony to the educational skill of the Jesuits, 98.
- Baptists. See Bunyan; Kiffin; Nonconformists.
- Barillon; his character, 51. His tactics, 52. 67. His endeavours to sound Rochester, 150. 151. His relations with James, 205. 206. Escapes an attack from the mob, 554. Ordered by William to leave England, 588. See Lewis XIV.
- Barnstaple, 335.
- Bates, 343.
- Bath, Earl of; attempts to carry out James's plans, 325. 326. Places himself and troops at William's disposal, 506.
- Baxter, Richard: is liberated from prison; refuses to thank James for the Declaration of Indulgence, and endeavours to promote

- unity between the Church and the Presbyterians, 223. His further efforts, 343. 352.
- Beaufort, Henry Somerset, Duke of; his banquet to James II., 292. His failure to carry out the King's plans, 324. Takes Lovelace prisoner, 494.
- Bedford, Earl of; his distress at his son's execution, 250.
- Bellayse, John Lord (a Catholic peer): his character; is dissatisfied with James's conduct, 46. Nominated to the Privy Council, 85. Appointed First Lord of the Treasury, 158.
- Bentinck (afterwards Earl of Portland); regard of William of Orange for him, 163. 169. 171. His mission to England to express William's detestation of the Whig plots, 187. His remonstrance with Burnet, 644.
- Berry, Henry; credence attached to his dying declarations, 8.
- Berwick, James Fitzjames, Duke of, illegitimate son of James II.; project of the Jesuits for setting him up as James's heir; refusal of the gentry to obey his summons, 326. 327.
- Birch, John; his early life, 617. Parliamentary eminence, 618.
- Bishoprics; disposal of, by James II., 87.
- Bishops; their dissatisfaction with James's proceedings, 13. 31. Their meeting on the subject of his Declaration of Indulgence, 345. Petition of the Seven presented to the King, 347. Their interview with him, 348. 349. Effect of their conduct on public feeling, 350. Determination of the King to prosecute them for libel, 354. Their examination before the Privy Council, 355. 356. Their committal to the Tower, 357. They are brought before the King's Bench, and bailed, 364. 365. Public rejoicings on the occasion, 366. 367. Their trial, 370—380. The verdict, 381. Public excitement on their acquittal, 382—387. Influence of their prosecution on public feeling, 387. 390.
- Blathwayt; his examination on the trial of the Bishops, 374. His equivocations, 375.
- Bonrepaux; his character and tactics at court, 51. 52. 67. His complicity in the schemes of the Jesuits, 305. 307. 308.
- Bridgewater, Earl of, 323.
- Bristol; riots at, 99. Declares for William, 529.
- Buckingham corporation, 335.
- Bunyan, John; his early career; success as a preacher and writer, 224. 225. His imprisonment; defiance of the penal laws; resistance to the Indulgence, 226. and note. His attack on Fowler, 345. note.
- Burnet, Bishop; his characteristics, 174. 175. Brings about a good understanding between the Prince and Princess of Orange, 173. 178. 190. His History of the Reformation, 175. 176. His reception at the Hague and confidential position there, 177—179. James demands his dismissal from the Hague, and despatches persons to kidnap him, 240. He defies James's malice, 241. 242. Lands in England with William, 480. Preaches before William at Exeter, 488. Disturbs the congregation at Salisbury, 534. Comparison between him and Halifax, 537. William forbids him to meet Halifax, 538. Comes to an understanding with Halifax, 541. His humanity to the Catholics, 593. He discloses Mary's determination to submit to William, 640. His zeal in her behalf, 644.
- Burnet, Thomas, 290.
- Cambridge University; its abhorrence of Monmouth's treason, 276. Its refusal to confer a degree upon Francis, a papist, and citation of its officers before the High Commission Court, 277. Proceedings of the Court against it, 279. 280.
- Campbell, Arohibald, 454.
- Care, Henry, 220.
- Carlisle, Earl of, 646.
- Carstairs; confidence reposed in him by William, 454. His recommendation, 482.
- Cartwright, Thomas; his nomination to the see of Chester, 88. His share in the Nuncio's procession at Windsor, 270. His discourse at Chester on James's visit, 293. His nomination on the special commission at Oxford, and oration on the occasion, 297. Refusal of Hough to comply with his demands, 298. His resentment at the opposition sermons, 299. His unwelcome presence at the meeting of church dignitaries, 345. His information to James, 348. Rejection of his blessing, 366.
- Caryl, John; James's representative at the Romish court; his exemplary conduct; dismissal, and replacement by Castelmaine, 76.
- Castelmaine, Roger Palmer, Earl of; his character, trial for participation in the Popish plots, and escape, 47. His embassy to Rome, 76. His unfitness for the mission, 262. 263. His public reception by the Pope, and Christina of Sweden, 264. 265. His audiences with Innocent, 266.

- Cavaliers; their opposition to the revival of the High Commission Court, 69.
- Charles II.; publication of papers found in his strong box, 43, 44.
- Charlton, puiane judge; dismissed by James, 82.
- Charnock, Robert; aids in James's attempts upon Magdalene College, 288, 289, 295, 298, 300. Refusal of the demies to submit to his authority, 301.
- Charterhouse: refusal of its trustees to admit Popham, a papist; justification of their conduct by Thomas Burnet, the master, 290. Protest of its trustees against the royal mandate, 291.
- Chesterfield, Earl of, 308.
- Cholmondeley, Lord, 308.
- Christchurch, Oxford: its deanery given to a Roman Catholic, 87.
- Christina of Sweden; her reception of Castelmaine, 265.
- Church of England; her devotion to James II., 1. Confirmation of apostate clergymen in her benefices, 85, 86. Resolution of James to use his ecclesiastical supremacy against her, 88—91. (See High Commission Court.) James attempts to enlist the Nonconformists in a league against her, 203, 204. Her amazement at the Declaration of Indulgence, 212. Her tactics on the occasion, 213, 214. Her altercations with James, 214. Her advances to the Dissenters, 216, 217. Continuance of her efforts against Romanism, 230. See Bishops; Clergy.
- Churchill, John Baron (afterwards Duke of Marlborough); his discontent at James's violations of the law, 13. His conferences with Dykvelt; his defection from James, 251. His view of James's policy, 252. Value of his adherence to William of Orange; his influence over the Princess Anne; his letter to William, 438. His protestations of loyalty to James, 500. His advice to James, 510. He deserts to William, 511.
- , Sarah Jennings, Lady, 253, 254, 256.
- Citters; specimen of his diplomatic composition, 121. note. Reaches William's head quarters, 531.
- Clarendon, Henry Hyde, Earl of, Viceroy of Ireland; his misgivings as to the King's proceedings, 42. Joy of the colonists on his departure for Ireland, 137. Arrives in Ireland as Lord Lieutenant, 137. His mortification, 138. Sunderland's despatch to him, 139. His assurances to the settlers, and expostulations with the King, 139, 140. His alarm at Tyrconnel's preparations, and obsequiousness under his indignities, 141, 144. Incurs the King's displeasure, 145, 146. His dismissal from the vicerealty, 155, 157. Reflections on his fall, 158, 159. Attends a meeting of the clergy, 345. His grief on his son's desertion, 499. Deserts James, and joins William's party, 530, 531. Attempts to influence the Princess Anne, 641.
- Clarges, Sir Thomas; opposes the court party in the Commons, 19.
- Claude, John; his book burnt by the hangman, 77, 78.
- Clayton, Sir Robert; his character, and services in the old parliament, 617.
- Clench, William; specimen of his attainments, 110. note.
- Clergy, the Anglican: their zeal against Popery, and their controversial writings; their exposure of papistical dogmas, 108—110. Their resentment at James's expulsion of the fellows of Magdalene College, 303. Their hopes in William of Orange, 304. Their embarrassments on receipt of the second Declaration of Indulgence, 342, 343. Removal of their hesitation by the conduct of the Dissenters, 343. Meeting of the London clergy, and resolution agreed to thereat, 345. Their disobedience to the King's orders, 351, 352. Their defiance to the High Commission Court, 418. See Bishops; Clergy.
- Clergy, Irish; their income and duties in the 17th century, 131.
- Closeting; meaning of the term, 207. It is unsuccessful, 208.
- Coke, John; committed to the Tower by the Commons for disrespect to the King, 29.
- Colechester, Richard Savage, Lord; joins William of Orange, 495.
- Colepepper; his quarrel with the Earl of Devonshire, and its consequences, 246—248.
- Cologne; nature of its archbishopric, 493. Quarrels between Lewis and the Pope concerning it, 494.
- Commons. See House of Commons.
- Compton, Henry, Bishop of London; protests on behalf of the Church against James's conduct, 32. His dismissal from royal favour, 35. Displeasure of the King at his hesitation to suspend Sharp, 92. Proceedings against him in consequence, and insolence of Jeffreys, 96. His suspension from spiritual functions, 97. His neglect of the political education of the Princess Mary, 173. He engages to influence the clergy on behalf of William of Orange, 351. Joins

- in the invitation to William, 404. He parries James's questions, 473. 474. He accompanies Anne in her flight, 516. His courtesy to the dissenting ministers, 581.
- Convention. See House of Commons.
- Cornbury, Edward Viscount; deserts James, 496. 497. His father's grief thereat, 499.
- Corporations; their dependence upon James II., 1. Failure of his regulations for securing their subserviency, 334—336. Scotch; abrogation of their rights, 124.
- Coshering; meaning of the term, 132.
- Country party; formed by the Opposition leaders, 19. See House of Commons.
- Covenry; popular excitement and interruption of the Roman Catholic worship there, 99.
- Craven, William Earl of; his character, 577. His devotion to James, 578.
- Crewe, Nathaniel, Bishop of Durham; his character; he accepts of a seat in James's High Commission Court, 94. 95. His appointment with Sprat to the charge of the diocese of London, 97. His share in the Nuncio's procession, 270. He joins in the conference with the Commons, 646.
- Cromwell, Oliver; effect of his confiscations on the character of the Irish aristocracy, 128.
- Customs duties; their falling off in the port of London in 1686, 101.
- Danby, Thomas Earl of; his discontent at James's proceedings, 13. His conferences with Dykvelt, and popularity at the Hague, 244. Contrast between him and Halifax, 246. His letter to William, 257. He joins in the invitation to William, 403. His reconciliation with Devonshire, 404. His proceedings at York, 506. He seizes the garrison, 507. His plan for settling the Crown, 612. 613. His ignorance of Mary's sentiments, 614. 636. She writes to him, 641. He alters his tactics, 646.
- Darcy, Colonel John; opposes the court party, 25.
- Dartmouth, Earl of; commander of the fleet, 459. Obstacles to his progress, 475. 481. He receives orders from James concerning the Prince of Wales, 523. Refuses to obey them, 525. His orders from the Lords, 551. Is removed from his command, 592. Is prevented from sailing, 475—481.
- Declaration of Right, 651.
- Delamere, Henry Booth, Lord; his trial on the charge of abetting Monmouth's rebellion, 39. His acquittal; its effect on public feeling, 40, 41. Joins William of Orange, 506. Is selected to carry a message to James, 575—579.
- Derby, Earl of, 322.
- Devonshire, William Cavendish, Earl of; leader of the Opposition in the Lords, 31. His quarrel with Colepepper, and its consequences, 246—250. Joins in inviting William to England, 402. His reconciliation with Danby, 404. Raises troops for William, 507. Offends the Lords, 620. Meeting of Peers at his house, 636.
- Digby, Everard; notice of, 7.
- Discontent, general, at the conduct of James, 13.
- in England, after the fall of the Hydes, 193. Of the clergy and the army at the proceedings of the High Commission, 422. 423.
- Dispensing power; determination of James to exercise it, 80. 81. Remonstrances of the law officers, 81, 82. Establishment of his right by a collusive suit on the subject, 83.
- Dissenters. See Nonconformists.
- Dolben, Gilbert, 621.
- Dorchester, Countess of. See Sedley, Catharine.
- Dorset, Charles Sackville, Earl of; his character and tastes, 319. 321. Is dismissed from office, and threatened with assassination, 322. Protects the Princess Anne, 516.
- Dover, Henry Jermyn, Lord, 47. His counsels to James, 50. His nomination to the Privy Council, 85. His advice to James, 144. His appointment to a seat at the Treasury Board, 158. His failure to carry out James's plans, 325.
- Drumlanrig, Earl of; deserts to William, 514.
- Drummond, James. See Perth, Earl of.
- , John. See Melfort, Lord.
- , General, Privy Councillor of Scotland; his attendance at Westminster on James's summons, 117. His opposition to James's encroachments, 120.
- Dryden, John; his compliment to Sir Charles Sedley, 68. His conversion to Romanism, 196. 197. His fable of the Hind and Panther, 198—201.
- Dumblane, Peregrine Osborne, Lord, 454.
- Dunkeld, Bishop of; expelled from his see, 124.
- Dykvelt, Everard Van; his character, diplomatic skill, and mission to England, 242. His negotiations with English

- statesmen, 243. He returns to the Hague with letters from many eminent Englishmen, 256. 257. Sent from Holland to congratulate William, 600.
- Edinburgh; riots at, in consequence of the performance of Romish rites at Perth's house, 114. See Scotland.
- Elections in 1685; demand for inquiry concerning them, 90.
- Elector Palatine; his envoy, at James's instigation, opens a Romish chapel, 100. He reproves James, 101.
- English colony in Ireland; its state, 130. Its panic on learning the views of James, 138. Its dismay at Tyrconnel's proceedings, 137.
- Eruley, Sir John, Chancellor of the Exchequer, 19.
- Etherege, Sir George, 158.
- Exeter; its reception of William of Orange, 483.
- Fagel, Grand Pensionary of Holland; effect of his reply on behalf of William to Stewart's letter, 261. 262. He draws up William's declaration, 455.
- Fairfax, Dr., 289. 290.
- Fane, Sir Vere, 619.
- Fanshaw, Richard Viscount, 622.
- Farmer, Anthony, recommended by James for President of Magdalene College, 287.
- Fauconberg, Viscount, 322.
- Ferguson, Robert, 176. 454. 455. 488.
- Feversham, Lewis Duras, Earl of, 188. note. His report on the state of the army, 510. 511. Is ordered by James to disband the army, 547. He obeys, 549. Effect of his conduct on William's movements, 562. Is ordered to liberate James, 568. Is charged with a letter to William, 570. Is put under arrest, 571. His release, 593.
- Finch, Daniel. See Nottingham, Earl of.
- , John; his subserviency to Charles I., and disgrace by the House of Commons, 244.
- , Sir Heneage, Solicitor General to James II.; appointed chairman of committee on the speech from the throne, 22. His dismissal from office, 82. His legal career, integrity, and oratorical fame, 244. His improvements in equity jurisprudence, 245. His conduct on the trial of the seven bishops, 377. 385.
- Fletcher, Andrew, of Saltoun; joins William of Orange, 454.
- Foreign governments; their feelings in regard to James's home policy, 20—22. Feeling of their ministers, 51.
- Fowler, Edward; effect of his determination not to read the Declaration of Indulgence, 344. 345.
- Fox, Sir Stephen, 25.
- , Charles, Paymaster of the Forces to James II.; votes against the court party, 25. Is dismissed from office, 35.
- Francis, Alban, 277. See Cambridge.
- Gainsborough, Earl of; his ejection from office by James II., 323.
- Gentry; their discontent, and refusal to obey the judges, 419. 420.
- George, Prince of Denmark: Charles II.'s opinion of him; deserts William's camp, 513.
- Gerard, Charles Lord: his conviction as a participator in the Rye House Plot; his liberation, 36.
- Germany; invaded by the French armies, 454.
- Giffard, Bonaventure; attempts to convert Rochester to Romanism, 149. 150. 153. His appointment as President of Magdalene College, 302.
- Godden, a Catholic ecclesiastic, 149. 150.
- Godolphin, Sidney, chamberlain to the Queen, 67. His nomination as commissioner of the Treasury, 158. His report of James's letter, 589.
- Goodenough, 39. 176.
- Gordon, Duke of, a Roman Catholic; appointed Governor of Edinburgh Castle, 116. 602.
- Grafton, Henry Fitzroy, Duke of; his protestations of loyalty, 500. His reply to James's reproof, 502. He deserts to William's quarters, 511.
- Grey, Ford Lord, 36. 37. 39.
- Grey de Ruthin, 508.
- Habeas Corpus Act; scheme of James for its repeal, 3. Refusal of Halifax to aid therein, 12.
- Haines, Joseph; a convert to Popery, 195.
- Hales, Sir Edward; his conversion to Popery; institution of a mock suit against him, 83. 85. Uselessness of the judgment, 211. His guards sympathise with the bishops, 358. The bishops refuse to pay his fees, 366. He is ejected from the lieutenancy of the Tower, 522. He assists in James's flight, 547.
- Halifax, George Savile, Marquess of; his share in the treaty between James II. and the States General, 2. He refuses to support the repeal of the Test and Habeas Corpus Acts, and is dismissed from office, 12. Public discontent at his dismissal; and delight of Lewis, and

- dissatisfaction of Austria and Holland, thereat, 12. 13. He demolishes the arguments of the court party, 32. 34. His sarcasm on Perth's apprehensions, 118. "Letter to a Dissenter" ascribed to him, 217. 218. His "Anatomy of an Equivalent," 238. His ascendancy over Nottingham, and conferences with Dykvelt, 246. His letter to William, 257. His letter on the Declaration of Indulgence, 350. His arrangements for bailing the seven bishops, 365. He declines joining in the invitation to William, 402. His reply to James's questions, 473. He refuses to join Rochester, 501. His conduct at the council of Peers, 519. He is appointed commissioner to treat with William, 521. His conditions, 522. His interview with William, 536. 537. Comes to an understanding with Burnet, 537—541. His sentiments on discovering that James had duped him, 566. 567. He presides at a meeting of the Lords, 575. 589. He carries William's message to James, 578. His deportment at James's departure, 579. He is chosen Speaker by the Lords, 619. He supports William's claim to the throne, 636. His arguments in the conference with the Commons, 646. He presents the crown to William and Mary, 654.
- Hall, Timothy; reads the Declaration of Indulgence, 351. His reception at Oxford as bishop, 419.
- Hamilton, the Duke of, Privy Councillor of Scotland; attends at Westminster on James's summons, 117. He returns to Scotland, and opposes the King's measures, 120. His faint protest against James's proceedings, 125. He attends William at Whitehall, 605.
- Hampden, John, grandson of the great Hampden; his trial for treason; his later career, 36. 37.
- Richard, 621. He carries the Commons' resolutions to the Lords, 625.
- Harley, Sir Edward, 529.
- Herbert, Arthur, Rear Admiral of England, and Master of the Robes to James II.; dismissed, 208. His association with Dykvelt, on behalf of William of Orange, 251.
- Herbert, Sir Edward, Lord Chief Justice; decides in favour of the King's right to exercise the dispensing power, 84. His nomination to a seat in James's High Commission Court, 96. He declares Bishop Compton entitled to the revenues of his see, 97. His removal from the Bench, 272.
- Herbert, Lord, of Cherbury, 529.
- Herbert, William; his vehemence in Mary's behalf, 644.
- High Commission Court; its creation by Queen Elizabeth, oppressions of the Nonconformists, and abolition by the Long Parliament, 89. Statutory declaration of its abrogation under Charles II., 90. A new, created by James; its jurisdiction and powers, 92—96. Citation of Bishop Compton and the Fellows of Magdalene College before it (see Compton, Magdalene College), 418. Its dissolution, 462.
- Hind and Panther, the; account of, 198.
- Holland; its treaty with James II., 2. Its dissatisfaction at James's dismissal of Halifax, 12. Its printing presses in the 17th century, 177. 260. Its hold upon William's feelings, 180. 181. 182. 184. Its politics; estrangement of Lewis's party, 429. Lewis's conduct to its settlers in France, 429. 430. Sanctions William's expedition to England, 451. 452. Sends congratulations to William, 600.
- Holt, Sir John; removed from the Recordship, 272.
- Holloway, Judge, 371—374. 380. His dismissal from the Bench, 415.
- Hough, John; his character; election as President of Magdalene College, and annulment thereof by the High Commission, 289. Refusal of the Fellows to elect Parker in his place, 290. Fruitless efforts of Penn to induce him to alter his course, 296. His defence before the Special Commission, 297. Refuses to deliver up his keys, and protests against the proceedings, 298. See Magdalene College.
- Hounslow Camp; its formation by James, 101. Its dissolution, 421.
- House of Commons; its reassemblage; ferment excited by James's speech, and formation of a country party to oppose his encroachments, 18. 19. Appoints a committee on the speech; defeats the government, 24—26. Defeats it a second time, 27. 28. Reprimanded by the King, 28. Commits John Coke for disrespectful words, 29. Convention called by William III., 691. Its election, 601. Its meeting, 616. Character of its principal members, 617. 618. Elect Powle Speaker, 619. Declares the throne vacant, 623. Letter of James to it, 640. Its conference with the Lords, 645.
- House of Lords; its reception of James's speech, 18. Opposes the government, 31—34. Its meeting after James's abdi-ation, 619. Its proceedings, 620. Receives the Commons' resolutions, 625. Debates Sancroft's plan of a regency, 625—631. Debates the question of the vacancy of the throne, 633. 637. Rejects it, 638. Its conference with the Commons, 645. And submission, 646.

Howe, John; returns from banishment, 223. James endeavours to secure his aid, 224. His efforts for a coalition with the clergy, 343.

Hughes, Margaret; story of the chain of pearls given to her by Frinee Rupert, 156.

Huguenots; policy of Richelieu towards the, 13. Their persecution by Lewis XIV., 14. Effects thereof in England, 17. Ill treated by James, 76, 77, 81.

Hume, Sir Patrick, 454. 605.

Hyde, Anna, Duchess of York; attempts of Tyrconnel to blast her reputation, 48. 49.

Indulgence, Declaration of; proclaimed by James II., 209. 210. Feeling of the Protestant Dissenters, and of the Church of England, in regard to it, 211. 214. Hostilities of the Prince and Princess of Orange, 232.

—, second Declaration; proclaimed, 340. The clergy ordered to read it, 341.

Innocent XI.; his dissatisfaction at James's proceedings, 11. Protests against the persecutions of the Huguenots; 16. 20. 21. Opposition of the Jesuits to his suggestions; his toleration of Jansenist opinions, 60. His indignation at Perth's pretended conversion, 113. His presumed approval of the policy of William of Orange, and dislike of James's proceedings, 262. His resentment at the choice of Castelmaine as English representative at his court, 263. He refuses to admit Petre to ecclesiastical preferment, and dismisses Castelmaine from Rome, 266.

Insurrection, northern, account of the, 507. Ireland; state of the law on the subject of religion in the 17th century, 126. Hostility of its races, 127. Its aboriginal peasantry and aristocracy, 128—131. State of the English colony in it, 130. Its grievances, 132. And the course which James ought to have pursued in removing them, 132. Dismay of its English colonists, 161.

Irish Night, account of the, 560—563.

James II.; his position after the suppression of the Scotch and English rebel-liens, 1. His foreign policy, 2. His designs against the Habeas Corpus Act, 3. His projected augmentation of the army, and designs in favour of the Romish faith, 4. 5. His violation of the Test Act, 6—10. Dismisses Halifax from his councils, 11. 12. His perplexities on the persecutions of the Huguenots by Lewis, 17. His speech from the throne and ferment occasioned by it, 18. His welcome to the Pope's emissaries, 20. 21. His anger at the opposition of the country party to his projects, 24. He reprimands the Commons, 28. 29. Failure of his attempt to restrain the Lords' discussions, 34. He prorogues Parliament, dismisses Charles Fox from office, and degrades Bishop Compton, 35. Symptoms of discontent in his court, 41. Publishes Charles's manuscripts in support of the Romish faith, 43. 44. Misgivings of the Tories and moderate Catholics at his proceedings, 45. 46. His obligations to Tyrconnel, 48—51. His maritime discussions with Bonrepaux, 52. Influence of Petre and the Jesuits in his councils, 60. His temper and opinions, 61. Is encouraged in his errors by Sunderland, 62. 63. His uneasiness at Jeffrey's illness, 66. His amours with Catharine Sedley, 67—72. His abandonment of his foreign allies, 75. His ill treatment of the Huguenots, 76. 77. His further prorogation of Parliament, and determination to exercise the dispensing power, 80. 81. His dismissal of refractory judges, 82. Authorises Roman Catholics to hold ecclesiastical benefices, 85. (See Selater; Walker.) Nominates a Papist to the deanery of Christchurch, Oxford; and disposes of vacant bishoprics, 87. Resolves to use his ecclesiastical supremacy against the Anglican Church, 88—90. Creates a new Court of High Commission, 92. 93. His treatment of Sancroft, 94. His perplexities on Compton's trial, and hint to Rochester, 97. Effects of his proceedings on trade, and formation of a camp at Hounslow, 101. His orders for torturing the Scotch rioters; and plans for legalising Romanism in Scotland, 116. Opposition of the Scottish Council to his views, and summons of three of them to London, 116. 117. His interview and unsatisfactory negotiations with them, 117. 118. He determines to proceed in defiance of law, 124. His order for a Roman Catholic chapel at Holywood; abrogation of laws against Papists in Scotland, 125. Course which he ought to have followed in Ireland, 132—134. His errors, 136. Nominates Tyrconnel General in Ireland, 137. His favouritism towards Tyrconnel, 138. His displeasure towards Clarendon, 145. His determination to displace Rochester, and hesitations on the subject, 146. 147. Renews his acquaintance with Catharine Sedley, 148. His attempts to convert Rochester to Romanism, 149. 150. His dismissal of Rochester, 152—154. His dismissal of Clarendon, and exaltation of Tyrconnel, 155. 157. His nomination of Papists to the highest offices in England, and course of policy indicated by his disgrace of the Hydes, 158. 159. Effect of his altered policy upon the proceedings of William, 189. He grants a pension to Dryden on his conversion to Romanism, 197. Change in his policy towards the Puritans, 201. He grants a partial toleration in Scotland, 206. His closetings with the Tories, 207. 208. He publishes the Declaration of Indulgence, 209. His altercations with the Church on the subject of Nonconformist persecutions, 214. His subjugation by the Jesuits, and dismissal of his confessor at their suggestions, 219. His attempts upon the honesty of John Howe, 224. His interview with William Kiffin, 227. 228. His disquiet at William's reply to his agents, and urgent letters to William and Mary, 231. 232. Proofs of the necessity of restraints upon his exercise of the prerogative, 235—239. His enmity to Burnet, 241. Growing enmity between him and William, 258. His conduct on the occasion of the consecration of the Nuncio, 268. He dismisses Somerset from office, 269. His dissolution of parliament, 270. 272. 273. His arbitrary proceedings against the universities (see Cambridge University; Magdalene College; Oxford University; Universities). Recommends Anthony Farmer for president of Magdalene College, 287. Sets out on a royal progress, 291. 292. His interview with the Fellows of Magdalene College, 294. His employment of Penn to negotiate with them, 295. Sends ecclesiastical commissioners to Oxford, 297. His scheme for preventing the Princess of Orange from succeeding to the Irish crown, 307. His determination to pack a parliament, 313. His plan for effecting that object, 314. 324—328. His dismissal of public officers, 337. His new Declaration of Indulgence, 340. His interview with the bishops, 348. Effect of the disobedience of the clergy upon his plans, 352. 353. He resolves to prosecute the seven bishops for libel, 354. He interrogates and endeavours to intimidate them, 355. 356. He commits them to the Tower, 357. 359. Birth of his son, the Pretender, and popular belief in the child's supposititiousness, ib. His conduct after the trial of the bishops, 413. His dismissals and promotions, 422. He receives warnings of William's project, 444. 445. Exertions of Lewis to save him, 446. He frustrates them, 447—449. He becomes aware of his danger, 458. 460. His naval and military means, ib. He attempts to conciliate his subjects, 461. Gives audience to the bishops, ib. His concessions ill received, 463. 464. He submits to the Privy Council proofs of his son's birth, 467. His conduct on receiving William's declaration, 472. 474. His conversation with the bishops, 489. 490. 491. He confers the archbishopric of York on Lamplugh, and receives tidings of Cornbury's desertion, 497. His interview with Clarendon, and with his military officers, 499. 500. The Peers petition him for a parliament, 500. 501. He refuses, and reproves the bishops, 502. He sets out for Salisbury, 503. 508. Traitors in his camp, 510. 511. He retreats from Salisbury, 512. He is deserted by Prince George and Ormond, 513. He returns to London, 514. He summons a council of Peers, 518. He appoints commissioners to treat with William, 521. His perfidy, 522. He prepares for flight, 523—525. He prepares to send the Queen and his son to France, and sends for Lauzun, 542. His renewed preparations for flight, 546. He departs, 547. Commotion created by his flight, 549. He is detained near Sheerness, 563—565. The Lords order him to be set at liberty, 568. He returns to Whitehall, 571. Calls a council, 572. Receives a message from William, 579. Sets out for Rochester, 579. His flight from Rochester, 587. 589. He arrives at St. Germain's, 598. 599. His letter to the Convention, 639. Jane: his toriyism; he is selected to defend the doctrines of the Church of England, 149. 150. Scandals occasioned thereby, 151. Jansenists; their rise, and triumph over the Jesuits, 59. 60.

- Jeffreys, George Lord; his failure as a speaker in the Lords, 34. and note: His appointment as High Steward on Lord Delamere's trial, 38. His grudge against Delamere, and failure of his artifices to procure a conviction, 39. His perfidy, 66. 67. His remonstrance on the burning of Claude's book, and rebuff from James, 77. 78. His nomination to the presidency of James's High Commission Court, and qualifications for the post, 93. 94. His insolence to Bishop Compton, and tacit reproval by his brother commissioners, 96. Penalty inflicted by him on the Duke of Devonshire, 248. His insults to the deputies from Cambridge, and perversion of Scripture, 280. 281. His behaviour to the Fellows of Magdalene College, and insult to Dr. Fairfax, 289. His conduct towards the Charterhouse trustees, 290. He advises James to prosecute the bishops for libel, 354. Discovered and arrested by the mob, and sent to the Tower, 557.
- Jenner, Sir Thomas; his visit to Oxford on the special commission, and conduct there, 297. 298.
- Jennings, Sir Edmund; opposes the court party in the Commons, 19.
- , Frances, Lady Tyrconnel; her youthful vagaries, 253.
- , Sarah. See Churchill, Lady.
- Jermyn. See Dover.
- Jesuits; opposed to the Pope, 53. Account of the Order of, 54—61. Severe laws against them in England, 97—99. Their comparative security in Ireland, 126. Their subjugation of James, 219. Their reception of Castelmaine in Rome, 265. Their schemes respecting the succession to the Crown, 305. 306.
- Johnson, Dr. Samuel, 197.
- , Samuel; his address circulated amongst the soldiers at Hounslow, 102. His character; controversy excited by his comparison of James to Julian the Apostate, 103. His conviction for a libel on James; and acquaintance with Hugh Speke, 104. Is sentenced to flogging and the pillory, 105. His degradation from the priesthood, 106. Apathy of the clergy towards him, 107.
- Johnstone; acts as agent between William and the English Opposition, 258.
- Jones, Chief Justice of the Common Pleas; dismissed from the Bench, 81. 82.
- Judges; their subservency to James II., 1. Dismissal of four of the refractory, 81. 82. See Charlton; Jeffreys; Jones; Milton-Montague; Neville.
- Keating, John, Chief Justice of the Irish Common Pleas; his protest against Tyrconnel's proceedings, 143.
- Kendall, Captain James; opposes the court party; his reply to Middleton, 25.
- Ken, Bishop, 172. 346—348.
- Kiffin, William; his influence among the Baptists; his interview with the King, 227.
- Kirke, Colonel Percy; his adherence to Protestantism, 13. He professes loyalty, 500. He prepares to desert, 510.
- Lainez, 58.
- Lamplugh, Bishop, 497.
- Langley, Sir Roger, 373. 381.
- Lauder, Sir John, of Fountainhall, 119.
- Lauderdale, 575.
- Lauzun, Antoine Count of; his vicissitudes, 542. 543. He undertakes to convey the Queen and her son to France, 544. 545. He is restored to Lewis's favour, 596.
- Lestrangle, Roger; visits Edinburgh to aid James's encroachments, 122. He answers the "Letter to a Dissenter," 217.
- Levinz, Sir Creswell; retained on behalf of the Bishops, 372. 374.
- Lewis XIV.; his chagrin at the treaty between James and the States General, 2. His delight at Halifax's dismissal, 12. His persecutions of the Huguenots, 14. 15. 16. His instructions to Barillon to foment disputes between James and the Parliament, 21. 22. (See Barillon and Bonrepaux.) His alliance with the Jesuits, 60. His pension to Sunderland, 64. His subjugation of Holland and conduct to William of Orange, 181. 182. Comparison between them, 184. 189. His offer to aid in kidnapping Burnet, 241. His negotiations with James concerning the recall of the British troops, 259. 260. His complicity in Tyrconnel's schemes, 308. Abandoned by his party in Holland 429. His persecutions of Dutch settlers in France, 429—431. His quarrel with the Pope concerning the franchises, 432. Proceedings of his ambassador in Rome, 433. His design on the archbishopric of Cologne, 434. 435. His alarm at James's conduct, 445. His exertions to save James, 446—449. He invades Germany, 450. Joy of his court at his victories, 451. His treatment of Lauzun, 542. 543. His emotions on James's flight, 595. His preparations for receiving the Queen, 596. He restores Lauzun to his favour, ib. 597. His liberality to the exiled pair, 598.
- Lexington, Lord, 646.
- Leyburn, John; emissary from the Pope,

- 20, 21. His participation in the attempted conversion of Rochester, 149, 150. He officiates at the consecration of the Nunolo, 263. His advice to James, 463. He is arrested, 558.
- Licenses; meditated withdrawal of, by James II., 397.
- Lillibullero, 428.
- Lincoln, Earl of, 646.
- Littleton, Sir Thomas, 617.
- Lloyd, Bishop of Norwich, 346.
- , Bishop of St. Asaph, 346—348.
- Lobb, Stephen; his early career, 221. His reconciliation with the Court, and servility to his new masters, 222.
- Locke, John; his reasons against tolerating Romanism, 9.
- Lockhart, Sir George, Privy Councillor of Scotland; his character, 117. Returns to Scotland and opposes the King, 120.
- London, Bishop of. See Compton.
- London; the Huguenots erect silk factories in its eastern suburbs, 16. Establishment of convents and Jesuitical institutions, 98. Excitement at the opening of a Romish chapel in Lime Street, 100. Effect of James's proceedings on its trade, 101. Alarm and subsequent gaieties of its citizens at the Hounslow camp, 102. Attack on Roman Catholic property in, 491, 492. Its agitation pending James's negotiations with William, 526. Circulation of forged proclamations in, 527. Its excitement on James's flight, 549—560. Its corporation welcomes William, 580. It lands money to him, 592.
- Lords. See House of Lords.
- Lords of Articles, Scotland; their conduct in reference to James's encroachments, 120—122. Their character, 123.
- Lords, council of, held by James, 517—521.
- Lovelace, John Lord; sets out to join William, 493, 494. Is captured by Beaufort's troops, 495. The people of Gloucester liberate him, 529. His triumphal entry into Oxford, 529, 530. His conduct in the Lords, 638. William expostulates with him, 639.
- Lowther, Sir John; protests against the corrupt elections, 30.
- Lucas, Lord; appointed lieutenant of the Tower, 551.
- Lumley, Lord; joins the party of William of Orange, 405. He seizes Newcastle, 528.
- Macclesfield, Charles Gerard, Earl of, 454, 484.
- Mackenzie, Sir George, Lord Advocate of Scotland, 121, 122.
- Madrid. See Spain.
- Magdalene College, Oxford; founded by William of Waynflete, 283. Anthony Farmer recommended by James for its president, 287. Election of its president, 289. Citation of its Fellows before the High Commission, ib. James recommends it to elect Parker, 290. Its Fellows cited before the King at Oxford and reprimanded, 294. Failure of Penn's efforts to procure their submission, 295, 297. Special commission to adjudicate upon their contumacy; installation of Parker as its president, 298, 299. Ejection of its Fellows, 300. Is turned into a Popish seminary, 302.
- Magistrates; questions put to them by James's orders, 323. Their politic answers, 324.
- Manchester, Earl of, 508.
- Mansuete, Father, confessor to James II.; his dismissal from office, 219.
- Mary of Modena, wife of James II., 70. Lady Rochester's appeal to her, 153. Her aversion for Tyrconnel, 155. Her reported acceptance of a bribe from him, 156. Her pregnancy; popular disbelief in the fact, 308—310. Her danger after Anne's flight, 517. She departs for France, 544. Her perils at Lambeth, and embarkation at Gravesend, 545. Her reception by Lewis, 597, 598. Homage paid to her at the French court, 599.
- Mary, Princess of Orange; her marriage to William determined by political considerations, 171. Her relations to the Prince, 172, 177, 178. Removes William's anxieties, 179. Acquiesces in William's project, 407, 408. Her letter to Danby, 641. Her arrival in England, 652. Accepts the crown jointly with William, 654. Is proclaimed, 655.
- Massey, John, a Papist; appointed Dean of Christchurch, 87.
- Massillon; his testimony to the character of William of Orange, 185. note.
- Maynard, Sir John; opposes the augmentation of the forces, 23, 24. Refuses to hold a brief against the Bishops, 371. His reply to William's courtesies, 581. His reply to Sawyer's objection, 591. Takes part in the proceedings of the Convention, 621, 624. Protests against mob rule, 639.
- Melfort, John Lord, Secretary of State for Scotland, 112, 113. Brings James's letter to the Convention, 639.
- Middleton; supports the Court party in the Commons, 19, 26. His expostulations with Darcy and Kendall, 25, 26. His misgivings as to James's conduct, 42.

- Military offences; illegally punished, 270-273.
- Militia; insinuations of James against its efficiency, 18, 23. Adoption of a resolution for increasing its efficiency, 23, 24.
- Milton, Christopher, brother of the poet; appointed a judge, 82.
- Montague, Chief Baron of the Exchequer; dismissed from office, 82.
- , Charles, and Matthew Prior; notice of, 200. Chosen to the Convention, 618.
- Mordaunt, Charles Viscount; his character, eccentric career, and opposition to the King's schemes, 83. His suggestions to William of Orange, 191, 192. He volunteers to accompany William's expedition, 454. He listens to Wildman's projects, 457. His duty at Exeter, 483.
- , Henry. See Peterborough.
- Mulgrave, John Sheffield, Earl of; his character, 278, 279.
- Murray, Alexander Stuart, Earl of; abjures Protestantism, 113. Appointed Lord High Commissioner, vice Queensberry, 119.
- Musgrave, Sir Christopher, 622, 632.
- Neville, Judge; dismissed from office, 82.
- Newcastle; its inhabitants declare for William, 528.
- Newton, Sir Isaac; appears before the High Commission Court as deputy from his University, 279. His election to William's Convention, 618.
- Newton Abbot; its memorial of William of Orange, 482.
- Nonconformists; early rigour of James towards them, 201, 202. His meditated league with them, 203, 204. Their feelings on the Declaration of Indulgence being proclaimed, 212. Determination of the Church to outbid James in his offers to them, 213, 214. Their appearance at court, 215. Their wavering between the two contending parties, 218, 219. Adherence of some of them to the King, 220. (See Alsop; Care; Lobb; Penn; Rosewell.) Opposition of the majority to the court, 223. (See Baxter; Bunyan; Howe; Kiffin.) Effect of the Declaration of Indulgence upon the character of their religious services, 229, 230. Their patriotism on the publication of the Declaration of Indulgence, 343.
- Norfolk, Duke of; attempts to enforce James's plans, 524. He declares for William, 529.
- Northampton, Spencer Compton, Earl of; his death in defence of Charles, 32.
- Northumberland, Duke of; he connives at James's flight, 547. He declares for William, 549.
- Norwich; declares for William, 529.
- Nottingham, Daniel Finch, Earl of, 244. Opposes James's policy, 245. His conferences with Dykvelt, 246. He secedes from William's party, 405. His conduct in the conference with the Commons, 646, 647.
- Oates, Titus; success of his frauds attributable to the zeal of the Roman Catholics, 6, 7. (See Powis.)
- Ormond, James Butler, Earl of; Tyrconnel's plot for assassinating him, 49. He encourages James's amour with Catharina Sedley, 70. (His recall from Ireland, 136.) He supports the Charterhouse trustees, 290. His death, 418.
- Ormond, Duke of, grandson of the above; he is elected Chancellor of Oxford University, 419. He deserts to the Prince's camp, 513.
- Oxford, University of; its loyalty to James II. during Monmouth's rebellion, 276. James's interference with its rights, 281. Arrival of the King at, 294. Elects Ormond as Chancellor, 419. Its welcome to Lovelace, 529, 530. See Magdalene College.
- , Bishops of. See Parker; Hall.
- , Corporation; its refusal to submit to James's dictation, 338.
- , Aubrey de Vere, Earl of; his ancestors and their exploits, 316. He refuses to aid in James's projects, and is dismissed from his offices, 317. He attends James's council, 518.
- Parker, Samuel; nominated to the see of Oxford, 87. Refusal of the Fellows of Magdalene College to elect him as their President on James's recommendation, 290. His installation as president, 298. His last publication, and death, 302.
- Papists. See Roman Catholics.
- Parliament; its devotion to King James, I. Its reassemblage; speech from the throne; ferment thereupon; complacency of the Lords, 18, 19. (See House of Commons and House of Lords.) Prorogations from time to time, 35, 76, 80, 146, 209. Its dissolution, 270.
- Parties; state of, on James II.'s abdication, 606. See Tories; Whigs.
- Pascal, Blaise; effects of his writings upon the influence of the Jesuits, 59.
- Patrick, Simon; selected to defend the doctrines of the Church of England, 149, 150.

- Pearson, John, Bishop of Chester, 88.
- Pechell, John, Vicechancellor of Cambridge University; summoned before the High Commission Court, 277. 279. His ejection from his office, 280.
- Pemberton; retained for the Bishops, 372. His altercations with the Crown counsel, 374. 375.
- Pembroke, Earl of, 322.
- Penn, William; his close connection with Stephen Lobb at court, 222. He endeavours to reconcile William Kiffin with James II., 227. His journey to the Hague, and exhortations to William, 231. His misgiving as to James's course, and proposal of various equivalents, 238. His discourse at Chester on James's visit, 293. Failure of his attempted mediation with the Fellows of Magdalene College, 295—297.
- Perth, James Drummond, Earl of, Chancellor of Scotland; his apostacy to Romanism, 112. 113. His position on William's accession, 602. He takes refuge at his country seat, 603. Attempts to leave Scotland, is detected and imprisoned, 604.
- Peterborough, Henry Earl of; converted to Romanism, 194. Failure of his plan to subvert Protestantism, 325. His action against Williams, 340.
- Petre, Edward, Viceprovincial of the Jesuits; his character, 61. Remonstrates with James on his attachment to Catharine Sedley, 71. His influence in the state, 146. His malevolence towards the Hydes, 153. Acquiesces in Tyrconnel's projects, 156. His suggestion of closeting to James, 207. His hatred of Father Mansuete, 219. Is sworn of the Privy Council, 315.
- Polluxfen, 372. 373.
- Pope. See Innocent.
- Popham. See Charterhouse.
- Portman, Sir William, 503.
- Powell, Sir John, 248. His conduct on the trial of the Bishops, 371. 380. His dismissal, 415.
- Powis, Thomas; his character, and appointment as Solicitor General, 83. 84. His report of the effect of the Bishops' acquittal, 383.
- Powis, William Herbert, Earl of (a Catholic peer); his high character, 46. His nomination to the Privy Council, 85. His patriotic advice to James, 144. His qualifications for the Viceroyalty of Ireland, 156. Assists in the Queen's flight, 545. Attack made on his house, 558.
- Powle, Henry; presides at a meeting of the Commoners, 590. He is chosen Speaker of the Convention, 619. He attends William on his acceptance of the crown, 654.
- Presbyterianism; attachment of the Scottish people to, and penalties against, 111. 112. See Nonconformists.
- Preston; his misgivings as to James's arbitrary proceedings, 42. His failure to carry out James's plans for subverting Protestantism, 325.
- Pretender, the. See Stuart, Charles Edward.
- Prideaux. See Clergy, 108.
- Prior, Matthew, 200. See Montague, Charles.
- Pulton, Andrew, a Jesuit; specimen of his composition, 110. note.
- Puritans. See Nonconformists.
- Quakers. See Nonconformists.
- Queensberry, William Douglas, Duke of; Lord Treasurer of Scotland, 112—114. Efforts to connect him with the Edinburgh riots, 115. Withdrawal of honours from him, 116—118. His expulsion from all his employments, 124.
- Regulators, Board of; its constitution and objects, 315.
- Resesby, Sir John, 506.
- Revolution, the English. Its character, 655. et seq.
- Richelieu, Cardinal; his statesmanlike policy towards the Huguenots, 13.
- Right, Declaration of, 651.
- Rochester, Bishop of. See Sprat.
- , Lady, 70. 153.
- , Rochester, Lawrence Hyde, Earl of, Lord Treasurer; his misgivings as to James's arbitrary proceedings, 42. Efforts of the Jesuits to subvert his influence with the King, 60. 63. 64. 66. His intrigues in favour of Catharine Sedley, 70. Decline of his influence with the King, 73. note. 74. 75. His reluctant acceptance of a seat in James's High Commission Court, 96. His condemnation of Bishop Compton, 97. Intrigues of the Jesuits for his overthrow, 146. Efforts of James to convert him to Romanism, 151. 152. His dismissal, 154. 155. He attempts to enforce James's illegal plans, 325. He prepares a petition for a parliament, 501. Defends the petition, 502. Declares for William, 549.
- , John Wilmot, Earl of; converted from atheism by Burnet, 176.
- Roman Catholics; designs of James II. in their favour, 5. Feelings expressed by their chiefs in regard to James's arbitrary conduct, 45. 46. Characters of the leaders of the violent section of, 46. (See Albeville; Castelmaine; Dover; Tyrconnel;

- Jesuits.) Determination of James to exercise the dispensing power in their favour, 80. Colourable establishment of his right by law, 83. 84. (See Hales.) Their admission to political and ecclesiastical offices, 85—87. Public discontent at the exhibition of their paraphernalia in the streets, 97. 98. Riots and interruptions to their ceremonies in the provinces, 98. 99. Their divines over-matched in controversy, 109. Favour shown to their religion in Scotland, and riots in consequence, 115. 116. Their freedom in Ireland, 126. Consequences of their temporary ascendancy, 136. Their admission to power and emolument in Ireland, 140. 142. 157. 158. Denial to the Dissenters of immunities granted to them, 201. Toleration allowed to them in Scotland, 206. Opinion of William and Mary on the impolicy of James's indulgences, and vindication of their opinions, 233—239. Their appointment as sheriffs, 328. Attack on their chapels and houses in London, 554.
- Roman Catholic country gentlemen; their character, tastes and habits, in the 17th century, 329. 330. 333.
- Ronquillo, Spanish ambassador; his property destroyed by the mob, 555. 556.
- Rosewell, Thomas, a Nonconformist; supports James in his conflict with the Church, 221.
- Rumsey, John, 36.
- Russell, Edward; his character; rupture with the Court, and position in Dykvelt's councils, 250. Proposes to the Prince of Orange a descent on England, 400. Joins him at Exeter, 495.
- , Lady Rachel, 40. 80.
- , William Lord, 176.
- Rutland, Earl of, 323. 508.
- Sacheverell, William, 617.
- Saint Victor; assists in the flight of the Queen and her son, 544. 545.
- Salisbury, James Cecil, Earl of; his conversion to Romanism, 194. True bill found against him, 526.
- Sancroft, William, Archbishop of Canterbury, 44. He declines acting on James's High Commission Court, 94. Meeting of the prelates at his palace, 345. Is summoned before the Privy Council, 355. His pastoral letter after his acquittal, 389. Has an audience with James, 461. His suggestions, 462. He disavows the invitation to William, 474. His conversation with James, 489. 490. Heads the Peers with a petition for a parliament, 501. Heads the Royalists, 586. His plan for a regency, 610. Specimen of his composition, 611. note.
- Sarsfield; his encounter with William's troops, 509.
- Savoy; a Jesuitical establishment erected in the, 98.
- Sawyer, Attorney General to James II.; refuses to pervert the law, 82. 83. His dismissal from office, 338. Defends the Bishops on their trial, 375. His question concerning William's power, 590. 591.
- Saxton; his perjuries on Delamere's trial, 40. Scarsdale, Earl of, 323.
- Schomberg, Frederic Count of; his character, services to Lewis XIV., and appointment as William's lieutenant, 453. Accompanies William, 485. Avoids fighting, 508. Enters London, 580.
- Selater, Edward; his apostasy, 85.
- Scotch privy councillors; a deputation of, sent to London, 119. Their negotiations with the King, 120.
- Scotland; state of religious feeling in, 111. 112. Royal encouragement of Romanism in, and its consequences, 114. 115. Meeting of its Parliament, and refusal of its members to sanction James's schemes, 118—122. Arbitrary system of government in, 123—125. Partial toleration granted in, 206. Its proceedings on James's abdication, 602. 603. 605.
- Seal, Sir Walter, 197.
- Seal, the Great; James's anxiety concerning it, 523.
- Sedley, Catharine; her amour with James II., 68. 69. Her opposition to the King's wishes, and departure from England, 72. She returns and renews her connection with him, 148.
- , Sir Charles, 68.
- Seymour, Sir Edward; his speech against James's project for augmenting the army, 23. Attempts to remedy Coke's indiscretion, 30. Joins William, 504. Organises William's party, 505.
- Sharp, John; disobeys James's edict, and is suspended, 91. Incurs the Commons' displeasure, 632.
- Sheriffs; list of, nominated by James II., 328. 329.
- Sherlock, William; refuses to comply with James's prohibition, and is deprived of his pension, 91. His plan of government after the flight of James, 608.
- Showers, Sir Bartholomew; appointed Recorder of London, 273. Assists in the prosecution of the Bishops, 371.
- Shrewsbury, Charles, Earl of; sketch of his ancestors, 317. His father's tragical end, 318. He abjures Romanism, refuses to enforce James's illegal projects, and is dis-

- missed, 319. Is threatened with assassination, 322. Joins in inviting William to England, 402. Is selected to carry William's message, 575. 579.
- Skelton, Bevil; appointed Lieutenant of the Tower, 522. Dismissed, 551.
- Sidney, Henry; his character, and connection with William of Orange, 401. 405. 406. His connection with Lady Sunderland, 442. 443.
- Smith, Dr. Thomas; aspires to the presidency of Magdalene College, 286. 287. His conduct at the election, 288. His indecision before the Special Commissioners, 298. Escapes the apologies attempted to be forced from other Fellows, 300. Nicknamed Doctor Roguery in consequence of his conduct in the disputes, 301. His expulsion from his fellowship, 302.
- Somers, John (afterwards Lord Somers); his arguments on the trial of the Seven Bishops, 378. 379. His election to the Convention, 618. His arguments in the conference with the Lords, 645. Is appointed chairman of the committee on the Declaration of Right, 651.
- Somerset, Charles Seymour, Duke of; refuses to join in the Nuncio's procession; his dismissal from office, 269. His expulsion from his Lord Lieutenancy, 322.
- Spain; its negotiations with James II., 2. Alarm of Lewis XIV. in reference thereto, 21. See Ronquillo.
- Speke, Hugh; his character, and imprisonment, 104. 105. He avows a forged proclamation, 528. His share in the Irish Night, 561.
- Sprat, Thomas, Bishop of Rochester; accepts a seat in James's High Commission Court, 95. Takes charge of Compton's diocese, 97. Reads the Declaration of Indulgence, 551. Resigns his seat in the High Commission Court, 417.
- Stafford, Lord, 176.
- Stamford, Thomas Grey, Earl of; his committal to the Tower, 35. His liberation, 56. Joins William of Orange, 508.
- Stewart, James; correspondence with Fagel, 261.
- States General. See Holland.
- Stillinfleet; his controversial eminence, 149. 198. Declares against the Indulgence, 345.
- Street, Baron of the Exchequer, 84.
- Stuart, Charles Edward; his birth, 359. Popular belief in his suppositiousness, and grounds of excuse for the belief, 359—362. Proofs of his birth submitted to the Privy Council, 467. He is sent to Portsmouth, 503. Returns to Whitehall, 542. Is confined to Lauzun, 544. And embarks for France, 545.
- Sunderland, Robert Spencer, Earl of; encourages James's errors, and foments his dislike for Rochester, 63. 64. His pretended conversion to Romanism by the King, 65. Suggests a secret committee of Roman Catholics, 66. His growing influence, 79. 80. His nomination to serve on James's High Commission Court, 96. Transference of the direction of affairs to his cabal, 146—148. His dread of Tyrconnel's projects regarding Ireland, 155. Mutual efforts of the two to circumvent each other, 156. His lord lieutenancy of Warwickshire, 327. His recommendation of concessions to the King, and uneasiness at the state of public feeling, 368. His public espousal of Romanism, 369. His overtures to William, 439. His income, 440. His prospects, 441. 442. His wife communicates with Holland for him, 442. 443. His disgrace, and ejection from office, 468. 470.
- Supremacy, Act of; determination of James to avail himself of it against the Anglican Church, 88. Difficulties in his way; 89. 90. See High Commission Court.
- Temple, Sir Richard; his opposition to James's encroachments, 29.
- , Sir William; his eulogy on Bentinck, 171.
- Test Act; violation of, by James II., 11. 12. Objections of the Opposition to the King's infractions of it, 22.
- Tewkesbury; failure of James's plan for subverting the independence of its corporation, 335.
- Thanet, Earl of, 323.
- Tillotson; his reasons against tolerating the Romish faith, 8. His attempted conversion to Romanism, 149.
- Tindal, Matthew; his conversion to Romanism, and subsequent attacks on Christianity, 195.
- Titus, Silas; his defection from the Non-conformists, 417. Attempts to obtain an audience with William, 574.
- Torbay; its appearance at the landing of William, 478. Its present state, 479. Its memorial of William, 480.
- Tories; their discontent at James's conduct, 13. Feeling of the Protestants, 42. 43. Their position with reference to William Prince of Orange, 179. They acknowledge him as their head, 190. Attempts of James to cajole them, 207. Change in their opinions concerning the lawfulness of resistance, 391. Their - position on James's abdication, 606—612. Their strength in the Upper House, 631. They negative the Whig motion, 638. Are beaten in the Commons, 640. Trade; effect of James's proceedings upon, 101.

- Treby, Sir George; advocates the cause of the Bishops, 372. His address to William, 580. His arguments in the conference with the Lords, 645.
- Trelawney, Bishop, 346. 347. His remonstrance to James, 348. Agitation in Cornwall pending his trial, 367. He welcomes William's troops in Bristol, 629.
- , Colonel, 500. 510.
- Trinder, Serjeant, 371.
- Turner, Bishop of Ely, 345. 346.
- Twisden, Sir William; supports the country party, 23.
- Tyroonnel, Richard Talbot, Earl of; his junction with the violent section of Catholics, 47. His character a passport to the favour of Charles and James, 48. 49. His alliance with Castelmaine, Dover, and Alberville, and counsel to James, 50. His nomination to the military rule of Ireland, 137. His summons to Whitehall, and influence at Court on Irish affairs, 138. His preparations for arming the Celts, and return to Ireland, 141. His partiality to the Papists, and treatment of Clarendon, 142. His conduct in the Privy Council, 143. His journey to London, 144. His calumnies against Rochester, 147. Is appointed to succeed Clarendon, 155. 156. His arrival in Ireland, and dismay of the colonists thereupon, 157. 158. His unfitness for his high office, 193. His hatred of Father Mansuete, 219. His return to England, and reception by James, 293. His project for excluding the Princess Mary from the Irish crown, 387.
- Universities: their power at its height in the 17th century; eager competition of the aristocracy for the distinctions conferred by them; regal splendour of their academical celebrations, 274. Their peculiar hold upon the feelings of their scholars, 275. Their exertions and sacrifices on behalf of the Stuarts, 276. See Cambridge; Oxford.
- United Provinces. See Holland.
- Valence, Bishop of, his speech to Lewis XIV., 17.
- Versailles. See Louis XIV.
- Vienna. See Austria.
- Wade, 39.
- Wake, 108. 109. note.
- Walker, Obadiah, Master of University College, Oxford: his pretended Protestantism; he espouses the Romish faith on James's accession, and abjures it on his downfall, 85. 86. His printing press, 109. Popular dislike to him exhibited, 281. 282. His sneers at the conduct of the Fellows of Magdalene College, 299.
- Waller, Edmund, 24. note.
- Warner, the apostate; becomes confessor to James II., 219.
- Wesley, Samuel; preaches the Declaration of Indulgence, 351.
- Wharton, Henry, 108.
- , Thomas; proposes the consideration of James's reply to the Commons, 29. Joins William of Orange, 495. Supports the Whigs in the Convention, 621.
- , Philip Lord; notice of, 589.
- Whigs; their powerlessness after the suppression of Monmouth's rebellion, 1. Symptoms of reaction in their favour, 13. Their anger at John Hampden junior, 37. Effect of their proceedings upon the views of William, 179—187. They acknowledge him as their chief, 190. Their plan for settling the crown on James's abdication, 614. 615. Their schism with Danby's followers, 633. Their argument, 635. They are defeated in the Lords, 638. The Princess Anne acquiesces in their plans, 641. They achieve a victory, 646.
- Whitby, 108.
- White. See Alberville.
- Wildman; joins the Prince of Orange, 454. Proposes to amend William's Declaration, 457.
- William Henry, Prince of Orange Nassau, afterwards William III., 106. His personal appearance, 160. His early life and education, 161. 162. His theological opinions, 163. His military qualifications, 164. 165. His love of danger; his bad health, 166. 167. Coldness of his manners, and strength of his emotions; his friendship for Bentinck, 167—171. His relations with his wife, the Princess Mary, 171. His anxieties as to his future position in England removed by Burnet, 172. 173. His intercourse with Burnet, 177. Relations between him and English parties, 179. 180. His feelings towards England, 180. His feelings towards Holland and France, 181—183. His policy consistent throughout, 186. 188. His share in the treaty of Augsburg, 189. Becomes the head of the English Opposition, 190. Mordaunt proposes to him a descent upon England, 191. He rejects the advice, 192. 193. His hostility to the Declaration of Indulgence, 231. 232. His views respecting the English Roman Catholics vindicated, 233—239. His protection of Burnet against James's animosity, 240. Growing enmity between him and James, 258—260. Russell proposes to him a descent on England, 400. Invitation to him despatched, 406. His wife acquiesces in his views, 407. 408. Difficulties of his enterprise, 409—413. His skilful management, 435. His military and naval preparations, 436. 437. He receives numerous assurances of support from England, 438. 439. His anxieties at the juncture, 444. He obtains the sanction of the States General to his expedition, 451. 452. He chooses Schomberg for his lieutenant, 453. 454. His Declaration, 455—458. He takes leave of the States General, 470. He embarks, and is driven back by a storm, 471. Arrival of his Declaration in England, 472. He again sets sail, 475. His voyage, 476. 477. He lands at Torbay, 478. 480. 481. He enters Exeter, 483—488. He is joined by men of rank, 493. 495. 503. Cornbury deserts to him, 496. 497. His court at Exeter, 504. 505. Northern insurrection in his favour under Danby and Devonshire, 506. 507. Skirmish of his troops at Wincanton, 509. Commissioners appointed by James to treat with him, 531. Dissensions in his camp, 531. 532. His conduct on the occasion, 533. His interview at Hungerford with the commissioners, 536. He retires to Littlecote Hall, 537. He prevents Burnet and Halifax from meeting, 538. His proposition for an armistice, 539. 540. Impediments to his progress to London, 562. 563. His embarrassment, and scheme for its removal, 570. 571. He despatches Zulestein to James, 571. 573. His court at Windsor, 574. His troops occupy Whitehall, ib. His message to James, 575. He consents to James going to Rochester, 579. His arrival at St. James's, 580. 581. He is advised to assume the crown by right of conquest, 582. 583. He calls together the Lords and members of the parliaments of Charles II., 584. 588. He orders Barillon to leave

England, 588. The Lords vote addresses to him, 589. 590. He calls a Convention; his exertions to restore order, 591. 592. His tolerant policy, 592. 593. Effect of his policy on Roman Catholic powers, 594. He receives congratulations from Holland, 600. His reply, 601. His care in reference to the elections; 601. 602. Scotland declares for him, 602. 603. Scotch lords and gentlemen attend him at Whitehall; he agrees to their requests, 605. He expostulates with Lovelace, 639. He avoids an audience with Clarendon, 641. He explains his views to the Peers, 642. He declares against a regency, and against Mary's supremacy, 643. He and Mary are declared King and Queen, 647. He makes the Declaration of Right, 651. 652. His letter to Mary, 653. He accepts the crown, 654. He is proclaimed, 655. Williams, Sir William; Solicitor General, 339. 340. His conduct on the trial of the Bishops, 377. 379. 382. His baronetcy, 415. He attempts to obtain an audience with William, 574. He supports the Whigs in the Convention, 621. Wiltshire, Charles Paulet, Earl of, 454. 619. Wincanton; skirmish at, 509. Winchester; opposition of its inhabitants to James's arbitrary plans, 336. Windham, John; his speech in opposition to the standing army, 27. 28. Witsen, Nicholas, 600. Worcester; interruption of Roman Catholic worship at, 99. Wright, Sir Robert; appointed Chief Justice of the King's Bench, 272. 273. His conduct on the special commission to Magdalene College, 297. 298. Wycherley, William; converted to Romanism, 195. and note. Yarmouth, Earl of; his returns to James's questions to the magistrates, 325. York, Duchess of. See Hyde, Anne.

Zulestein; his embassy to England as envoy between William and the English Protestants, 257. 258. He is sent to congratulate James on the birth of his son, 563. He carries William's message to James, 571. His conversation with James, 573.

END OF THE SECOND VOLUME.

LONDON:
Printed by SPURRISSWOODE & Co.
New-street Square.