

*AMERICAN STATESMEN

Edited by

JOHN T. MORSE, JR.

V79 y7L82
C9
2940

Dhananjayrao Gadgil Library

GIPE-PUNE-002940

American Statesmen

EDITED BY

JOHN T. MORSE, JR.

American Statesmen

JOHN C. CALHOUN

BY

DR. H. VON HOLST

BOSTON AND NEW YORK
HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN AND COMPANY
The Riverside Press, Cambridge

Copyright, 1882 and 1899,
By HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO.

All rights reserved.

V73 y7L82

(9

2940

CONTENTS

CHAP.	PAGE
I. YOUTH	1
II. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.	12
III. SECRETARY OF WAR	38
IV. VICE-PRESIDENT	61
V. THE SENATE	103
VI. SLAVERY	123
VII. UNDER VAN BUREN	163
VIII. TEXAS	221
IX. OREGON AND THE MEXICAN WAR	260
INDEX	353

INDEX

- ABERNETHY, LORD, sends dispatch to Upshur, 230; desires to see slavery abolished in Texas, 231; his statements held by Calhoun to force annexation of Texas, 231-233; character of his dispatch, 233, 234; tries to dispel fears of South, 234, 235.
- Abolitionists, begin agitation, 121, 122; persecuted, 121; remarks of Calhoun on, 122; their agitation understood by Calhoun, 128, 129; inadequacy of his proposals to combat by law, 130, 131, 143, 165; their gains in North described by Calhoun, 166; impossibility of their suppression, 167, 168; their religious pretense condemned by Senate, 191, 193; hopelessness of expecting North to stop, admitted by Calhoun, 219; South wished by Calhoun to imitate, 297.
- Adams, John Quincy, denies any credit to Calhoun in reforms of War Department, 43; accuses him of extravagance, 44; calls him unpopular in Congress, 52; describes attacks on Calhoun to Clay's and Crawford's partisans, 53; praises Calhoun as independent and eloquent, 53, 54; later accuses him of seeking popularity, 54; and of personal ingratitude and malice, 55; not unreasonable in his complaints of Calhoun, 55; declarations of Calhoun in support of his candidacy, 55; describes struggle between Crawford and Calhoun, 56; speaks of Calhoun's courtship of New England Federalists, 60; elected President by House, 61; appoints Clay Secretary of State, bargain cry raised, 62; Calhoun joins opposition to, 63, 64; abused by Randolph, 63; describes Calhoun's view of course of South in case of disunion, 74; accuses Calhoun of fickleness, 74, 75; on Crawford's betrayal of Calhoun to Jackson, 87; describes his defence and Calhoun's censure of Jackson's Florida campaign, 88-92; thinks Calhoun ruined by quarrel with Jackson, 93; considers Calhoun embittered by dis-appointments, 163; his contempt for Webster's slave-trade negotiations, 210; thinks Calhoun aims to conciliate North, 211; offers Calhoun mission to France, 257.
- Alabama, demands annexation of Texas, 232.
- Allen, William, moves resolution calling for notice of termination of joint occupancy of the Oregon Territory, 265.
- Archer, William S., said to have promised Calhoun to delay consideration of Texas annexation treaty until after Democratic convention, 242.
- Arista, General, crosses Rio Grande, 277.
- Aristocracy in South, 67, 69; averse to middle-class ideals, 70.
- Army, attitude of politicians toward, in United States, 44, 45.

- BACON, EZEKIEL, letter of Story to, on Calhoun, 59.
- Bank of the United States, bill to incorporate, introduced by Calhoun, 30; his argument for, 31, 32; position of Calhoun regarding, 109, 110.
- Bedinger, Henry, says South is pledged to support Western claim to Oregon, 270.
- Benton, Thomas H., asserts demoskrates principle, 62; thinks Calhoun was driven by disappointment of presidential hopes into nullification, 95; on Calhoun's fear of Jackson's threats, 103; introduces sub-treasury scheme, 183; asserts Calhoun to be author of Texas intrigue, 222; on Gilmer's letter to Green, 223; votes to allow Tyler to violate Constitution or not, 253; accuses Calhoun of bringing on Mexican war, 285; calls commercial retaliation on part of South practical disunion, 302; lays stress on Calhoun's failure to bring resolutions to a vote, 305; says Calhoun instigated motion to strike out clause prohibiting slavery in Oregon, 306.
- Berrien, John M., appointed to Cabinet by Jackson as friend to Calhoun, 65.
- Bonaparte, Napoleon, reasons why his policy does not bring on war with United States, 14.
- Branch, John, appointed to office by Jackson as a friend of Calhoun, 65.
- Brown, Aaron V., sends Gilmer's Texas letter to Jackson, 223.
- Brown, General, his share in reforming military establishment, 43.
- Buchanan, James, suggests receiving and rejecting without discussion all abolition petitions, 132, 133; reply of Calhoun to, that abolition and Union were impossible, 218.
- CALDWELL, MARTHA, mother of Calhoun, 8.
- Calhoun, Florida, marries J. C. Calhoun, 11.
- Calhoun, James, emigrates from Ireland to America, 8.
- Calhoun, John Caldwell, his tragic career, 1; lacks a complete biography, 2; his fame compared with that of Clay and Webster, 3, 4; lack of personal knowledge about, 4-6; loss of his papers, 5; stands as representative of an idea, the slavery question, 7; from this gains his importance, 7; ancestry, 8; birth and childhood, 8; defective early education, 8; consequently lacks breadth, 8, 9; studies for college, his career at Yale, 9; studies law, 9; influence of New England on his early opinions, 9; practices law at Abbeville, 10; fails to attain eminence at bar, reasons, 10; more interested in politics than in law, 10; elected to Legislature, then to Congress, 11; marries his cousin, 11.
- In House of Representatives.* Appointed by Clay to Committee on Foreign Relations, 15; chosen chairman, 15; probably prepares report of committee, 15; declares for resistance to England, 16; defends report against Randolph, 16; self-confident without being arrogant, 17; a strict parliamentarian, 17; too strong for Randolph, 17, 18; his speech advocating war on ground of honor, 18, 19; approves of embargo as preparation for war, 21; presents report moving formal declaration of war, 21; disregards protests of minority, 22; advocates repeal of Non-importation Act, 23; his reasons, 23, 24; guilty of precipitation in causing war, 25; acts as, and avows himself, a national leader, 26; in 1816 advocates preparation for future wars with England, 26, 27; favors a navy, 27; his advice regarding claims of opposition not heeded by Republicans, 28; advocates road-building for defence, 28; supports protection to manufactures, 29; does not consider constitutional objections, 29; thinks of measures purely from standpoint of policy, taking Constitution for granted, 30; reports bill to incorporate bank, 30; considers constitutional objections not worth answering, 31; later says he was compelled by financial situation to waive constitutional question, 31; unable to disprove charge of inconsistency between earlier and later parts of career, 32; his sincerity in these utterances not to be questioned, 32, 33; in speech on tariff of 1816, advocates protection as vitally necessary, 33-35; wishes to make United States economically independent, 34; wishes to bind country together, 35; argument on constitutionality of internal improvements, 35-37; advocates broad interpretation of powers of Congress, 36, 37; deprecates strict construction, 37.

Secretary of War. Appointed by Monroe, 38; called upon by Congress to plan military roads and canals, 38; reports in 1819, 38, 39; recommends internal communications as consolidating Union, 39; and benefiting industry and commerce, 39; in 1824 repeats recommendation, 40; later utterances in favor of internal improvements, 40; in 1825 prides himself on having aided both protection and internal improvements, 40; contrast of these with later utterances, 41; surprises friends by showing executive ability, 41; reorganizes War Department, 41; adjusts old accounts and takes pride in absence of defalcation, 42; testimonial of employees to his efficiency, 43; denied credit of reforms by Adams, 43; accused also of extravagance, 44; advocates considerable expenditures for army, 44; deserves credit for withstanding efforts to starve military establishment, 45; advocates reasonable policy toward Indians, 45; his high opinion of Indian capacity for progress, 45, 46; criticises anomalous political position of Indians, 47, 48; urges education and gradual civilization, 48; resemblance of his view to Schurz's, 48, 49; awards Rip-Rap contract to Mix, 49; unaware of Mix's reputation, 49; fails to forbid sub-letting of contract to his chief clerk, 49, 50; later charged by Mix with corruption, 50; demands investigation by House, 50; refuses to act as Vice-President until cleared by House, 50, 51; dissatisfied with report of House, although exonerated, 51; would have done better to ignore attack, 51; attacked by Crawford's and Clay's partisans in House as a rival for presidency, 52, 53; disliked by Adams as a rival, 53; at first praised by Adams for independence and fairness, 53, 54; later accused by Adams of demagogy, 54; and of ingratitude, 55; professes to favor Adams for presidency, 56; pushes his own candidacy, particularly against Crawford, 56; outdone by Crawford in securing support, 56; feels presidential ambition, 57; does nothing dishonorable, but acts with a view to securing popular support, 57, 58; allows ambition to influence personal relations, 58; relies on Pennsylvania's support and on younger men, 58; opposed by older Republicans as too young, 58, 59; lacks qualities to cause enthusiasm, 59; nominated for vice-presidency, 60; endeavors to secure support of New England for vice-presidency, 60; praised by Webster, 60; elected by Jackson and Adams men, 60; receives New England electoral vote, 60; obliged to choose between Adams and Jackson after election, 61, 62; led by ambition to join Jacksonian party, 63.

Vice-President. Denies his power as Vice-President to call a Senator to order, 63; thought by Adams to have held so in order to allow Randolph to attack administration, 63; a strong opponent of Adams's administration, 64; re-elected in 1828 with Jackson, 64; but does not really approach nearer to presidency, 64; fails to keep on good terms with Jackson, 64; dissatisfied with Jackson's Cabinet, 65; in 1825 disapproves of concerted action in South as sectional, 66; still maintains national tendencies, 66; does not clearly understand slavery question, 73; in Missouri Compromise struggle, admits power of Congress over slavery in Territories, 73; but holds to necessity of maintaining slavery, 73; thinks South may be forced into disunion and an English alliance, 74; led by economic, not political, side of slavery to change opinions, 74; accused by Adams of fickleness, 74, 75; his change due to conviction, 75; issues South Carolina Exposition, 75; its main interest not his economic but his political reasoning, 75; points out conflict of interest of slave States and others as to tariff, 76; adopts sectional attitude contradicting previous position, 76, 77; becomes champion of rights of minority, 77; views Federal policy solely as to its effect on South, 77; begins to abhor "consolidation," 78; asserts state sovereignty to be essential principle of union, 79; quotes Virginia and Kentucky resolutions, 79; claims right of State to "veto" an unconstitutional law, 79; tries to show naturalness of veto by pointing out that three fourths of States can override it, 80, 81; does not see destructive nature of argument, 81; urges delay in exercise of the veto, 81; not a disunionist in 1828, 82; hopes to avoid a crisis, 82; hopes relief to South from Jackson's administration, 82; led to distrust Jackson by conflicting claims made for him in campaign, 83; considers proposal to distribute surplus a bid for protectionist support, 84; takes the lead in opposing Jackson's attempt to force Mrs. Eaton on society, 85; alienates Jackson, 85; yet anxious to succeed Jackson, 86; thinks Van Buren plots to overthrow him, 86; said by Adams to have been exposed by Crawford, 87; his previous denunciation of Jackson's Florida career in Monroe's cabinet, 88, 89; said by Crawford to Jackson to have demanded his punishment, 90; asked by Jackson to explain, 90; replies justifying his conduct on point of duty, 91; denounced by Jackson as perfidious, 91; in spite of disclaimer, had previously questioned Jackson's motives, 92; his presidential chances ruined by this quarrel, 92, 93; slow to abandon candidacy, 93; loses support of New England, 93; hopes to throw election into House, 93; abandons hope, his disappointment, 93; this downfall not the cause of his later career, 93, 94; it merely hastens his conversion into a sectional leader, 94; henceforth a free lance in politics, 94; not a traitor or conspirator, 94, 95; his misfortune to see danger to slavery more clearly than others, 95; resumes attack on tariff with "Address to People of South Carolina," 95; repeats States' rights argument, 95, 96; admits rule of majority may endanger country, 96; considers Federal government merely agent of States, 96; uses term "nullification," 96; his policy to consolidate party, 96; after tariff of 1832, writes letter to Governor Hamilton, 97; this his final statement of position, 97; the basis for Southern action in 1861, 97; denies existence of "American People," 97; his historical argument, its flaws, 98; denies relation between citizen and Federal government, 98; holds it impossible for Federal government to coerce a State, 99; fallacy of his argument, 99, 100, 101; denies power of even three fourths of States to bind the minority, 100; in other words, holds every State to possess a veto on any act of Federal government, 101; realizes that in fact it is not a question of single States but of sections, 101, 102.

Member of Senate. Resigns vice-presidency to enter Senate, 103; takes oath to Constitution, 103; asserted by Benton to have been terrified out of resistance by Jackson's threats, 103; not afraid of Jackson's hanging threat, 104; realizes danger of South Carolina's game, 104; yields only because Congress yields, 104; forced by Clayton to accept compromise, 104; yet gains main demands by the tariff, 105; better able to claim victory than Jackson, 105; claims overthrow of tariff of 1832 proves success of nullification, 105, 106; at same time, admits defeat of States' rights by Force Bill, 106; introduces bill to repeal it, 106; wishes to expunge precedent, 106; considers bill a danger to liberty as such, 107; considers safety of South by no means secured, 107; declines personal testimonials in South Carolina, 107; conceives it his duty to continue fight against Force Bill, 108; proclaims his independence of party in order to save liberties of country, 108; bitterly opposes Jackson's administration, 109; at one with Clay and Webster only in opposition, not in policy, 109; doubtful as to bank, 109; distrusts bank on principle, 109; points out necessity of divorce of government from banking, 110; not a party mouthpiece, 111; his serious study of and devotion to legislative problems, 111; ability of his speeches, 111; excels as critic, 111, 112; denounces Jackson's removal of deposits and protest to Senate, 112; but refrains from personalities, 112; attitude on spoils system, 113-116; denounces office-seekers, 115; wishes to deprive President of power to remove, 116; dreads executive usurpation, 117; fails to realize exceptional presidency of Jackson, 118; yet upholds veto power, 119; considers Jackson's usurpations only part of a centralizing revolution, 119, 120; considers state sovereignty only cure for it, 120; harps on this point, 120; laughed at as a monomaniac, 120; the only person to realize significance of appearance of abolitionists, 121; opens debate on slavery by moving not to receive petitions for abolition in District of Columbia, 123; censured by South for raising question, as unnecessary, 123; not guilty of trying to cause sectional strife, 124; honest in asserting devotion to Union, 124; wishes to save it by attacking dangerous petitions, 124; considers petitions a slander on one half Union, 125; holds Congress bound not to receive them, 125; his theories, taking no account of liberal side of Constitution, are impossible of acceptance, 127; in advance of both North and South in foreseeing irrepressible conflict, 127; demands meeting attacks on slavery by maintaining absence of congressional jurisdiction, 128; points out danger of abolitionist attack, 128, 129; asserts impossibility of compromise, 129; inadequacy of his proposed defence, 130; accused of stirring up strife over imaginary dangers, 131; predicts that South will prefer slavery to Union, 131, 132; his resolution rejected, 132; introduces bill to exclude incendiary publications from mail, 134; rejects Jackson's recommendation as infringing liberty of press and of States, 134; holds it the duty of States, not Congress, to decide on character of publications, 136; advocates punishing postmasters for infringing state law, 136, 137; impossibility of his scheme, 137; does not expect passage of bill, 138; now advances beyond nullification position, 138; holds Federal government mere agent of States, 139; continues to base arguments on Constitution, 139; his real principle is incompatibility of white and black races, 140; fails to convince people, 141; charged with bringing on dissension when he tries to prevent it, 141, 142; denounces compromise as fatal to slavery, 142; demands extinction of agitation, 143; treats exclusion of question from Congress as vitally necessary, 143; demands that congressional laws yield to state laws, 143, 144; that is, the States may nullify not merely unconstitutional but valid Federal laws, 145; his arguments based on right of each State, but he means the South, 146; predicts that South will do anything to defend slavery, 146, 147; and that, whatever Congress decides on any point, the South will continue to defend it, 147, 148; not cast down by failure of threat to impress North, 148, 149; really gains influence, 149; considering surplus a danger, advocates distribution, 150; hopes South will use its share to build railroads, 150, 151; one of first to appreciate importance of railroads, 151; explores a route across mountains, 152; wishes by railroads to prevent superior growth of North, 152; asserts that Michigan is a State prior to admission, 157; discussion of his position, 158-160; holds that a State cannot be forced to enter Union, 160; recognizes necessity of an enabling act, 161; absurdity of his theory, 161, 162; considers public domain as belonging to "people of United States," 162; does not realize inability of South to build or utilize railroads, 152, 153; apprehends corruption from treasury surplus, 155; and danger to sovereignty of States, 155; proposes cession of public lands to new States, 156; on admission of Michigan, 156-161, 163; embittered appearance described by Adams, 163; not encouraged by slave power's successes, 163; still sees dangers of future, 163, 164; his energy and passion as advocate of slavery, 164; repeats that abolition petitions should not be received, 165; points out futile ty of trying to reason abolition down, 165; proves truth of his own statement, 165; predicts that abolition, if unchecked, will divide Union, 166; yet unable to suggest repressal, 167, 168; undertakes to confute anti-slavery arguments, 169; proclaims slavery a positive good, 171; points to white race in South to prove beneficent effect of slavery, 172; really has only ruling class in mind, 173; considers economic inferiority of South due to tariff, 173; asserts general principle that slavery is necessary to civilization, 174-176; and that it is superior politically to free labor, 175, 176; progressive growth of his opinions, 176, 177; now challenges attack, 177; impossibility of his appeasing North by such an argument, 178-180; his share in panic of 1837, 181; abused by Jackson, his severe reply, 181; censures Jackson's policy toward France, 182; abandons Whigs to support sub-treasury, 183; not guilty of treachery or inconsistency, 183; proposes bank as a better plan, 183; not a Whig, 184; free, after collapse of Jacksonian system under Van Buren, to act alone, 184; announces intention to act solely with view to States' rights, 185; hopes, by supporting administration against Whigs, to help States' rights, 186; futility of his resolutions against abolition, 187; introduces series in 1837, 189; secures support of Senate to his view of origin of Union, 189; deduces unconstitutionality of any meddling with internal affairs of a State, 189; vagueness of his resolution, 190; demands censure of interference on religious grounds, 191; secures support of Senate, 191; far-reaching plans, 191; demands that

Federal government use powers to strengthen slavery, 192; denounces attacks on slavery as violations of Constitution, 193; denounces attempts to abolish slavery in District or Territories as an attack on South, 193; and finally denounces any attempt to prevent spread of slavery on moral grounds as contrary to Constitution, 194; summary of his positions, 196; allows several years to pass without anything on slavery 196; his share in ordinary congressional politics, 196, 197; characteristics of his debating, 197; has personal controversies with Clay and Webster, 198; once confesses alteration of views, but usually tries to prove consistency, 198, 199; opposes bill to punish partisan officials as unconstitutional, 199; and useless, 199; points out evils of rotation in office, 200; advocates placing office-holders beyond reach of executive, 201; belief in his own infallibility concerning slavery, 202; at his wife's end, refuses to admit fact, 202; introduces resolutions censuring England for course in Enterprise case, 203; supported unanimously, 203, 204; denies right of England to discriminate between slaves and other property, 204; unable to prove fixity in law of nations, 205; his resolutions a real defeat, 208; yet considers them a success over North, 208; commends Webster's protest in Creole case, 209; favors ratification of treaty to aid in suppressing slave trade, 209; asserts unavoidable necessity, 210; said by Adams to be trying to conciliate North, 211; again a candidate for presidency, 211; resigns seat in Senate, 212; nominated by South Carolina, 212; hopelessness of his candidacy, 212, 213; supported by Irish vote, 213; unfitted by nullification principles to lead a national party, 214; not supported even by slaveholders, 214; struggle of his followers against Van Buren in 1843, 215; withdraws candidacy in 1844, 215; disapproves of denunciation of Polk in South Carolina, 216; asserts impossibility of dissolution of Union, 218; while pointing out danger to South of abolition, yet asserts secession unnecessary, 219, 220; in 1836, declares for admission of Texas to preserve slavery, 221; claims credit of securing annexation, 221, 222; said by Benton to be real author of intrigue under Tyler, 223; urged for secretaryship of state by Wise, 226; accepts office to secure annexation, 226.

Secretary of State. Describes reasons for accepting place in Tyler's Cabinet, 227; comments of Niles upon, 227; unanimously confirmed by Senate, 228; asserts unanimous demand of country, 228; damages character for honesty by his desire for annexation, 228, 229; tries at first to delude Texan envoy into believing Tyler will protect Texas, 229; forced to promise protection "by powers under Constitution," 230; delays submission of Texas treaty to Senate, 230; lays it before Senate with letter to Pakenham, 230; declares England's desire to see abolition in Texas makes annexation necessary, 231; tries to throw responsibility for annexation on England, 232; falsity of this assertion, 232, 233; overlooks Aberdeen's disclaimers of purpose to influence slave States, 235; honest in his fear of England, 235; fears that, even with Texas independent, slavery in it is doomed, 236; proclaims nationalization of slavery, 238; under direction of slave States, 238, 239; concludes letter by praising slavery as a good, 239; hopes to draw Pakenham into a correspondence, 240; prevented by rejection of treaty, 240; his letter bitterly criticised by Northern Democrats, 240, 241; makes Committee on Foreign Relations promise to delay Senate forty days, 242; his purpose to wait until utterance of Democratic national convention, 242; apprehends resistance in Senate to annexation, 243; damages annexation feeling in North by Pakenham letter, 244; dismayed at rejection of treaty, 245; probably approves Tyler's appeal to House to accomplish annexation in some other way, 246; volunteers to protect Texas while question is pending, 247, 248; authorizes troops to enter Texas on pretext of Indian troubles, 248; his theories at odds with Tyler's claim of a popular mandate to annex Texas, 251, 252; said by McDuffie not to have audacity to submit joint resolution to Texas, 253; sends dispatch to Texas on last night of term, 254; defends course as necessary, 254; probably does not expect to be continued by Polk, 255; incompatibility with Polk, 256; offered mission to England, 257; his reasons for declining diplomatic mission, 257, 258; prefers to remain in Senate, 259; does not probably expect to settle Oregon question, 260; futile negotiations with Pakenham, 260, 261; declines offer of arbitration, 261; had previously opposed bill to settle Oregon as likely to cause war with England, 262; advises waiting, 263.

In the Senate. Resumes seat, 259; describes effect of Polk's

Oregon policy, 264; introduces resolutions upholding offer of forty-ninth parallel, 266; statesmanship of his position, 267; denounced by extremists, 267; abandons policy of delay for compromise, 268; not anxious to extend territory of North, 269; willing to fight England for annexation of Texas, 269; difference of his foreign policy where slavery is or is not concerned, 269-271; open to charge of bad faith, 271; his influence in Senate described by Webster, 271, 272; really in harmony with Polk, 272, 273; wishes to settle Oregon question in order to have hands free for Mexico, 273; his liberal announcement to Mexico, 274; deprecates Polk's order to Taylor, 275; declines to oppose it in order to be able to influence Polk on Oregon matter, 275; his position unnecessary, 275, 276; asks delay in declaring war in order to examine documents, 276; makes vain objections to declaration on Polk's assertion, 277; abstains from voting on war bill, 277; foresees gloomy consequences, 278, 279; charged with being author of war, 284; his real responsibility, 285; repels charge of presidential aspirations, 286; advocates a merely defensive war, 287; absurdity of his plan, 288; admits inevitableness of acquisition of territory, 289; predicts that South will not consent to exclusion of territory, 290; opposes conquest on these terms, 291; presents resolutions in 1847 on slavery in Territories, 291; asserts necessity of balance between North and South, 291; considers Missouri Compromise a great error, 292; holds that Congress has no right to prevent entrance of slavery into Territories, or to insist on its exclusion in a state constitution, 292; discussion of his doctrines, 293; wishes to abandon compromise spirit of the Constitution, 294; impossibility of acceptance of his position by North, 295, 296; probably wishes to obtain a good deal by demanding all, 296; proclaims slavery in Territories as necessary policy of South, 297; and as only way to save Union, 297, 298; hopes assistance from North, 298; success of his policy of coercing North, 298, 299; yet only hastens consolidation of North, 299; his responsibility for war of 1861, 300, 301; not satisfied with mere defeat of Wilmot Proviso, 301; proposes convention of Southern States to put commercial pressure on North, 301; considers such action justified by failure of North to accede to all demands, 302; advocates dissolution of Union as last remedy, 303; really wishes to preserve Union, 303; urges that time has come to insist on submission of North, 303, 304; forgets that facts, not law, rule, 304; never calls up resolutions for action, Benton's comments, 305; opposes annexation of Mexico, 305, 306; his policy regarding Territories gains advocates, 306; moves to strike out clause prohibiting slavery in Oregon, 306; hopes to win concessions in South, 307; denies binding force of Missouri Compromise, 308; does not shrink from facing whole question, 308; on return of Northern Democrats to party on basis of non-interference, 308, 309; attacks doctrine of squatter sovereignty, 309; denies power of Territories to settle slavery question themselves, 310; does not assert that Constitution establishes slavery in Territories, 310; unable to compel country to ignore slavery, 311; acquiesces in Clayton's compromise, 312, 313; loses logical standing by so doing, 313; calls anti-slavery petition from New Mexico impudent, 315; calls caucus of Southern members, 316; submits draft of address to constituents, 316; believed by North to have planned secession, 317, 319; admits possibility of disunion, 317; wishes to prepare South for it, 317; main purpose to coerce North by union of South, 318; proposes nothing but union, 319; dislike of Southern Whigs to follow, 319; fails to form a Southern party, 320; gives no outward sign of disappointment, 321; continues struggle, 321; upholds, against Webster, the extension of Constitution over Territories, 321, 322; grows weary in session of 1849, 322; his share in Nashville Convention not generally known, 322, 323; instigates movement in Mississippi for Southern convention, 324; desires to remain concealed agent, 324; evidence of his influence in letter to Tarpley, 325, 326; wishes a thorough organization in South and a Southern convention, 325; wishes to save Union by threatening North, 326; knows that South is not ready to act, 326; lives long enough to foresee failure of convention, 327; never ventures to assert that slavery question can be settled, 327, 328; speech on economic and industrial progress, 328-330; wishes South to introduce factories, 332; his theory of slavery a dogma unrelated to facts, 332; writes disquisition on government and discourse on Constitution, 333; wishes to leave them as political testament, 333; their character, 334; physical breakdown in 1850, 336; held only by sense of duty, 337; unable to address Senate, his last speech on Compromise of 1850 read by Mason, 338; points out again danger to Union by disturbance of equilibrium, 339; asserts that growth of anti-slavery sentiment at North threatens South, 339; says disunion will be a difficult process, 340; absurdity of charge that he wished to be president of a Southern Confederacy, 341; declares Clay's compromise insufficient, 342; only North can prevent disunion by ceasing agitation and yielding Southern rights, 342; his conditions impossible in the statement, 343; wishes to restore power of South by abolishing all national laws, 344; and by giving South a veto on acts of North through a double executive, 344, 345; does not realize that his plan itself involves a dissolution of the Union, 346; with last words disclaims responsibility, 347; his exit from Senate, 347; sincere in asserting devotion to Union, 348; continues in Senate, 348; dies, last words, 348, 349; his solemn conviction of duty, 349; review of his task and his failure, 349-351.

Characteristics. General view, 1-7, 349-351; ambition, 1, 57, 93, 163, 258, 341; courage, 1, 7, 104, 105, 228, 286, 308; dignity, 1, 7, 91, 106; disingenuousness, 230, 282, 233; education, 8, 9; executive ability, 41-44; friends, 5, 41, 57; imprudence, 123, 124; inconsistency, 32, 58, 74, 75, 151, 198, 271; independence, 54, 94, 111, 181, 258; infallibility, sense of, 202; integrity, 1, 5, 50; intellectual strength, 1, 9, 54, 74, 94, 327; leadership, 10, 258; legal success small, 10; logical mind, 10, 41, 106, 109, 127, 149, 308, 322, 338, 350; moral force, 1, 113, 337; narrowness, 8, 9, 111, 333; parliamentary

- ability, 17, 197, 321; patriotism, 18, 54, 95, 124, 142, 348; partisanship, 63, 64, 229, 252; personal appearance, 336; presidential ambition, 54-59, 211-213, 286; sincerity, 32, 75, 92, 94, 107, 178, 337, 348; statesmanship, 4, 267; theories, love of, 106, 169, 188, 201; transformation in 1828, 76, 77; will power, 1, 164, 337.
- Political Principles and Opinions.* His creed, 185; abolition in District of Columbia, 124, 125; abolitionists, 122, 128, 129, 219, 297; army, 44, 45; balance between North and South, 291, 339, 342, 344-346; bank, 30-32, 109, 110, 185; compromises, 142, 294, 301, 313; compromise of 1833, 105, 106, 165; compromise of 1850, 338-347; conflict, irrepressible, between North and South, 75, 76, 96, 148, 237, 339; Constitution, earlier interpretation of, 29, 30, 36, 37, 63, 78; later interpretation of, 80, 81, 97, 108, 125, 134, 139, 160, 161, 183, 199, 238, 246, 256; direct tax, 26; diplomatic service, 257; distribution of surplus, 150; disunion, 74, 218, 303, 317, 318, 326, 338, 340, 341, 347; Force Bill, 166; France, policy toward, 182; Indians, 45-48; industrial civilization, 328-330; internal improvements, 28, 29, 39, 40; mails, abolition literature in, 134-137; Michigan, admission of, 156-162; minority, right of, 77; Missouri Compromise, 73, 292; Nashville Convention, 323, 325, 326; nationalist views, 26, 27, 28, 32, 35, 76, 78; navy, 27; non-importation, 23, 24; nullification, 79-82, 99; Oregon, 260-263, 266-268, 270, 271; petition, right of, 123, 128, 165; protection, 29, 33-35, 59; public lands, 155, 156; railroads, political importance of, 151, 152; resolutions, abstract, mania for, 188, 303; slavery, 73, 127, 129, 132, 140, 146, 164, 171-176, 177, 195, 239, 332, 349; slavery in international law, 203, 204, 205; slavery under Constitution, 190, 192; slave trade, suppression of, 209, 211; spoils system, 113-115, 199; squatter sovereignty, 309; States' rights, 78, 79, 96, 119, 120, 136, 139, 144, 157, 162, 185, 189, 238, 251, 334; sub-treasury, 183, 184; Territories, powers of Congress over, 73, 162, 194, 291-293, 311, 321; Texas, annexation of, 221, 227, 228, 231-235, 254; Union, attitude towards, 94, 124, 127, 131, 132, 142, 166, 219, 239, 303, 326, 349; union of South, 66, 96, 149, 188, 296, 297, 301, 302; veto power, 119; war of 1812, 16, 18, 19; war, Mexican, 273, 274, 277, 279, 284, 287.
- Calhoun, Patrick, father of Calhoun, a Revolutionary patriot, 8.
- California, desire for conquest of, 277; organization provided for in Clayton's compromise, 312; remains unorganized, 314; protests against slavery, 315; adopts state constitution prohibiting slavery, 334; resolution of South to keep out, 335.
- Canada, failure to conquer, in 1812, 25.
- Cass, Lewis, asserts nearness of war on Oregon question, 265; proclaims squatter sovereignty, 309; attacked by Calhoun, 309.
- Cherokees, adopt a system of laws, 48.
- Choctaws, appropriate money for schools, 46.
- Clay, Henry, recent diminution of fame, 3; better known personally than Calhoun, 6, 7; leader of war party in Congress, chosen Speaker, 15; appoints Calhoun to Committee on Foreign Relations, 15; gives casting vote for continuance of non-importation, 23; his

- views on protection compared with Calhoun's, 33; his supporters in Congress criticise Calhoun's administration of War Department, 53; his appointment by Adams to State Department causes bargain cry, 62; his compromise of 1850 opposed by Calhoun, 342.
- Clayton, John M., forces Calhoun to support whole compromise tariff, 104; introduces compromise bill, 312.
- Comet, slaves of, freed, 202, 203; compensation paid for, 203.
- Compromise of 1850, Calhoun's opinion of, 342.
- Confederation, Articles of, purpose of amending, 78, 98.
- Congress, carried by war party in 1811, 15; passes embargo, 21; declares war, 22; criticises Calhoun's management of War Department, 52, 53; yields in nullification controversy, 104; its participation in spoils system not foreseen by Calhoun, 117; its power over District of Columbia, 125-127; passes bill punishing postmasters for meddling with mail, 148; admits Michigan conditionally, 156; question of its authority over Michigan, 159, 160; Tyler's claim of popular mandate to, discussed, 251, 252; considers bill to occupy Oregon, 262; held by Calhoun to have no right to interfere with slavery in Territories, 292.
- Constitution, Calhoun's early interpretation of, 29, 30, 36, 37, 66, 78; his later attitude toward, 77, 78, 79, 97-99; in relation to Calhoun's refusal to act as Vice-President until exonerated, 50, 51; in connection with election of Adams, 61, 62; historical origin of, 98; protects Calhoun against Jackson's threats, 104, 105; proposition to amend by abolishing veto, 119; held by Calhoun to forbid reception of abolition petitions, 125; in relation to power of Congress over District of Columbia, 126; contradictions in, 126, 127; in relation to exclusion of incendiary publications from mail, 134-137; held to oblige Federal government to follow state law, 144-146; in relation to status of a State before formal admission, 157-162; not a law for sentiments of people, 177; held to forbid any meddling by States with other States, 189; in relation to annexation of Texas, 245, 248, 253; to Mexican war, 277; to right of slaveholders to enter Territories, 292, 293, 310; impossibility of his construction of it, 294, 295; question of its extension over Territories, 321, 322; Calhoun's proposal to amend by a double executive, 344-346.
- Crallé, editor of Calhoun's works, quoted, 15.
- Crawford, W. H., his partisans in House attack Calhoun's administration of War Department, 53, 56; opposed by Calhoun for presidency, low opinion of, held by Calhoun, 56; defeated Calhoun in gaining support of South, 56, 57; his unfair methods, 57; tells Jackson of Calhoun's proposals to "punish" him for Florida campaign, 87, 89, 90; denies his own hostility to Jackson, 90.
- Creeks, attitude toward education, 46.
- Creole, case of freed slaves on, 209; Webster's remonstrance against their liberation by England, 209.
- Curtis, G. T., calls Calhoun a man of deep convictions, 75.
- DEMOCRATIC PARTY, begins as Jacksonian opposition, 62; Calhoun a member of, 109; its national convention denounced by Cal-

- houn, 115, 117; nominates Van Buren, 118; supported by Calhoun, 183, 184; desire of Calhoun for nomination by, 213, 214; convention of, postponed, 214, 215; hope that its national convention may influence Senate, 242; defeats Van Buren, nominates Polk, and demands annexation of Texas, 243; drives reluctant members into support of Polk, 243, 250; elects Polk through Liberty vote, 250.
- Dickinson, Daniel S., proclaims doctrine of "squatter sovereignty," 309.
- Diplomatic history, Jackson's dealings with France, 182; Upshur's negotiations for annexation of Texas, 224, 225; Calhoun's diplomacy as Secretary of State, 229, 230; Aberdeen's dispatch and Calhoun's reply to Fakenham, 230-236; negotiations of Calhoun and Fakenham, about Oregon, 260, 261; further negotiations under Polk, 262-268.
- Distribution of surplus, Calhoun's view of, 150, 151.
- District of Columbia, petition for abolition of slavery in, 123; abolition in, denounced by Senate, 193; motions to abolish slavery and slave trade in, 315.
- Disunion, threatened, in 1820, 74; thought by Webster to be planned in 1823, 82; said by Calhoun to be imaginary danger, 218; threatened in case of failure of Texas annexation, 249; danger of, in 1849-1850, 335, 336.
- Donelson, —, Calhoun's dispatch to, 254.
- Eaton, Mrs. "Peggy," scandal concerning, 84; attempt of Jackson to break ban against, 85; opposed by Calhoun, 85; treated politely by Van Buren, 85.
- Embargo, recommended as a war measure by Madison, 20; passed by Congress, 21.
- Encomium, slaves of, freed on Bahamas, 202, 203; compensated for, 203.
- England, reasons why United States resented its commercial policy more than France's, 14, 15; war declared against, 20-22; alliance with, expected by South in case of disunion, 74; responsibility for slavery thrown upon, in 1788, 170; pays for slaves of Comet and Encomium, 203; refuses compensation for Enterprise slaves, 203; censured by Senate, 203, 204; refuses to recognize slavery in international law, 205, 206; its action a defeat for South, 206; remonstrated against in Creole case, 209; treaty with, for suppression of slave trade, 209, 210; mediates between Texas and Mexico, 225; its desire to secure abolition in Texas, 231; its attitude used by Calhoun as pretext to justify annexation, 231-236; disclaims any desire to interfere with South, 235; proposes to arbitrate Oregon question, 261; its superior military power in the Pacific, 262; rejects Polk's offer, 264; danger of war with, 264, 265; folly of conduct to, 267; compromise with, advocated by Calhoun, 268; dread of South to war with, 269, 270; desire of Polk for peace with, 272.
- Enterprise, its slaves freed on Bermudas, compensation refused, 203; Adams's opinion of vote on, in Senate, 204.
- FEDERAL GOVERNMENT, held by Calhoun to be mere agent of States, 98, 99; yields to South Carolina in 1833, 105; its relation to slavery according to Jackson, 135, 136; according to Calhoun, 136, 139; bound to suppress abolition-

- ism, 143; bound to follow state law, 144; bound to protect and strengthen slavery, 192, 194, 238.
- Federalists, oppose war of 1812, 28; efforts of Calhoun to placate, in 1824, 60.
- Florida, Jackson's campaign in, 87, 92.
- Foot, Henry S., unaware of Calhoun's instigation of Nashville Convention, 322; denies it in 1850, 323; retracts statement in 1851, 323, 324; admits Calhoun's influence, 324.
- Force Bill, not passed until after tariff, 105; denounced by Calhoun, 106, 107, 108; bill to repeal, advocated by Calhoun, 106.
- Forsyth, John, letter of Crawford to, 89.
- France, policy of Jackson toward, attacked by Calhoun, 182; meditates between Texas and Mexico, 225.
- French Revolution, enthusiasm of people for, 14.
- GALLATIN, ALBERT, asks to be recalled from France, 257.
- Garrison, William Lloyd, establishes "Liberator," 121.
- Giddings, Joshua R., demands Oregon as counterpoise to Texas, 269; predicts opposition on part of South to admission of free States, 280.
- Gilmer, John A., writes letter on Texas annexation, 223.
- Gordon, General, introduces sub-treasury scheme, 183.
- Greeley, Horace, his views on protection compared with Calhoun's, 33.
- Green, Duff, letter of Gilmer to, on Texas annexation, 223.
- Gregg, Andrew, secures recommitment of declaration of war against Great Britain, 22.
- Grundy, Felix, considers embargo a prelude to war, 20.
- HAGNER, —, aids Calhoun in reorganizing War Department, 42.
- Hamilton, James, letter of Calhoun to, on nullification, 97.
- Hannegan, E. A., introduces resolution denying power of government to compromise Oregon question, 266; charges South with bad faith, 271.
- Hayne, Robert Y., resigns seat in Senate to be governor of South Carolina, 103.
- Holmes, Isaac E., threatens disunion in 1844, 217.
- House of Representatives, election of Calhoun to, 11; elects Clay Speaker, 15; organized by war party, 15; passes Calhoun's resolutions to resist England, 19; passes declaration of war in haste, 21, 22; continues non-importation by casting vote of Speaker, 23; calls on Calhoun to plan military roads and canals, 38; prohibits payments on Rip-Rap contract, 49; examines contract and exonerates Calhoun, 51; elects Adams President, 61; its constitutional power, 61; asked by Tyler to annex Texas in some way, 245; passes annexation resolution, 253; motion in, to terminate joint occupancy of Oregon, 265; declares war with Mexico on Polk's word, 276; attaches Wilnot Proviso to two-million bill, 278; passes bill to organize Oregon without slavery, 306; lays Clayton's compromise on table, 313; motions in, to abolish slavery in District of Columbia, repelled, 315.
- Houston, Sam, asserts that South Carolina instigated Mississippi to call Nashville Convention, 323.
- Hunter, R. M. T., possessor of Calhoun's papers, 5.
- INDIANS, treaty with, 45; policy of

- Calhoun toward, 45-48; of Schurz toward, 49.
- Ligham, Samuel D., appointed to office by Jackson as supposed friend of Calhoun, 65.
- Internal improvements, advocated for military purposes, 28, 39; argument as to constitutionality of, 35-37.
- International law, in relation to slavery, 203-209.
- Irish, popularity of Calhoun with, 213.
- JACKSON, ANDREW, nominated for President, 59; his followers support Calhoun for Vice-President, 60; defeated for President in House of Representatives, 61; claims of his followers, 61, 62; evidently a popular favorite, 63; preferred by Calhoun to Adams, 63; elected President, 64; appoints supposed friends of Calhoun to Cabinet, 65; hoped by Calhoun to oppose protection, 82; his double-faced campaign, 83; takes no decided ground in message, 83; distrusts and is distrusted by Calhoun, 84; his social campaign in behalf of Mrs. Eaton, 85; dislikes Calhoun for opposing her, 85; his Florida campaign, 87; his good faith in matter, 88; censured in Cabinet by Calhoun, defended by Adams, 88, 89; told by Crawford of Calhoun's action, 89; demands explanation from Calhoun, 90; Calhoun's defiant reply to, 90, 91; retorts, abusing Calhoun for his duplicity, 91; story of his threat to hang Calhoun, 103, 104; really yields to South Carolina, 104; opposition of Calhoun to, in Senate, 109, 112; not attacked personally by Calhoun, 112; able to appoint a successor, not an heir, 118; proposes a law prohibiting circulation of incendiary matter through mails in South, 133, 134; his proposal criticised by Calhoun, 134; approves bill prohibiting postmasters from interfering with mails, 148; abuses Calhoun for supposed remarks on land bill, 181; censured by Calhoun, 181; his policy to France condemned by Calhoun, 182; writes letter in 1843 on Texas annexation, 224; his letter postdated and published, 229.
- Jefferson, Thomas, his policy defended by Calhoun, 23.
- KENTUCKY RESOLUTIONS, quoted by Calhoun, 79.
- LAMAR, MIRABEAU B., on probability of abolition of slavery in Texas, 236.
- Lands, public, speculation in, effect of, 155; their cession to new States advocated by Calhoun, 156.
- Legaré, Hugh S., in Tyler's cabinet, 224.
- Liberty party, causes defeat of Whigs, 250.
- Lincoln, Abraham, his emancipation proclamation the logical end of Calhoun's labors, 351.
- McDUFFIE, GEORGE, induced by Wise to persuade Calhoun to accept State Department, 226; declares Calhoun will not submit joint resolution to Texas, 253; deserts Calhoun on Mexican war question, 279.
- Madison, James, dragged into war with England by "young Republicans," 20; forced by them to assume responsibility, 20; sends embargo message as prelude to war, 20; sends message advocating war, 21; his policy defended by Calhoun, 23.
- Mails, exclusion of abolitionist publications from, recommended by

- Jackson, 134; by Calhoun, 134, 136; his reasons, 135-137; their impossibility, 137.
- Mandate, popular, Tyler's theory of, 250; incompatible with Constitution, 251; or with States' rights, 251, 252.
- Mangum, Willis P., supports Calhoun's bill to impede the circulation of anti-slavery papers, 138.
- Mann, Horace, thinks Calhoun plotting a dissolution of the Union, 319.
- Mason, James M., reads to Senate Calhoun's last speech, 338.
- Mexico, armistice with Texas, 225; said to be preparing a new invasion, 247; said to be instigating Indian troubles, 248; danger of war with, causes Polk to hasten settlement of Oregon trouble, 273; war with, not desired by Polk, 273; but made inevitable by Polk's claims, 274; war with, brought on by Taylor, 274, 277 (see War, Mexican); expectation of territorial cessions by, 278; proposal to annex, opposed by Calhoun, 305, 306.
- Michigan, debate on admission of, 62, 156; admitted conditionally, 156; Calhoun's opinion of, 156; held by Calhoun to be a State before admission, 157; discussion of his views, 158-162; lost by Whigs through Liberty vote, 250.
- Milnor, James, renews Randolph's motion to open doors of House, 22.
- Mississippi, demands annexation of Texas, 232; calls for Southern convention at Nashville, 323.
- Missouri Compromise, attitude of Calhoun on, 73, 74; its line continued in annexation of Texas, 253; rejected by House, 278; called a great error by Calhoun, 292; denied to be binding on South, 308.
- Mix, Elijah, awarded Rip-Rap contract by Calhoun, his character, 49; fails to fulfill obligations, 49; sublets contract to chief clerk of War Department, 49; applies for another contract, 50; accuses Calhoun of corruption, 50.
- Monroe, James, appoints Calhoun Secretary of War, 38; said by Adams to have difficulty in supporting Calhoun, 52; discussion as to his succession, 55, 56.
- Murphy, Henry C., letter of Upshur to, on slavery in Texas, 236.
- NASHVILLE CONVENTION, share of Calhoun in instigating, 323, 324; called by Mississippi, 323; not desired by Calhoun to present an ultimatum, 326; its failure, 327.
- Navy, favored by Calhoun, 27.
- Nelson, John, tries to satisfy Texan demand for protection by vague promises, 229.
- New England, influence of residence in, upon Calhoun, 9; demands a naval war, in 1812, 27; wishes an alliance with South Carolina against Virginia, 28; urged by Webster to support Calhoun for vice-presidency, 60; does so, 60; loses confidence in Calhoun, 93.
- New Mexico, desire for conquest of, 277; slavery forbidden in, 310; question as to how slavery was to enter, 310, 311; organization of, by Clayton's compromise, 312; remains unorganized, 314; people of, petition against slavery, 315.
- New York, supports Jackson as protectionist, 83; native American movement in, 213; its loss by Whigs defeats party, 250.
- Niles's "Register," on Calhoun's appointment as Secretary of State, 227.
- Non-importation, failure of attempt to repeal, 23; Calhoun's views on, 23, 24.
- North, persecutes abolitionists, 121; resents Calhoun's motion not to receive petitions, 124; not indis-

- posed toward South in 1838, 133; unable, if willing, to suppress abolitionists, 133; yields to South, 149; growing hold of abolition in, described by Calhoun, 166; its early attitude toward slavery, 169, 170; its turbulence contrasted with peace of South by Calhoun, 175; impossibility of convincing, 179; roused to aggressive action by Calhoun, 180; impossibility of satisfying South, 207; hopes of Calhoun for presidential support in, 213; criticises Calhoun's Fakenham letter, 241, 244; driven into support of Polk, 249; supports Mexican war, 281; but grows increasingly anti-slavery, 282, 283; denounced by Calhoun for trying to keep slavery out of new Territories, 290, 291; impossibility of its yielding to Calhoun's theory on the Territories, 295, 296, 311; expected by Calhoun to yield to a solid South, 298, 301, 303; driven by Calhoun into sterner resistance, 304; only its submission to Southern demands can save Union, 342; impossibility of its ceasing agitation, 343.
- Nullification, borrowed by Calhoun from Virginia and Kentucky resolutions, 79-82; possibility of overriding, by three fourths of States, 80; held to be conservative principle of Union, 99; its impossibility, 100, 101; tried by South Carolina, 103; later held to include any Federal law, constitutional or not, 144, 145.
- Dawson, negotiations of Calhoun with Fakenham concerning, 260, 261; situation in, and claims to, 261; bill to occupy, opposed by Calhoun, 262; desire of Calhoun to gain by simply awaiting growth of United States population, 263; claims of Polk to, 264; termination of joint occupancy of, demanded, 265; "fifty-four forty or fight," 266; Calhoun's resolutions concerning, 266-268; demand of Giddings for, to counter-balance Texas, 269; compromise concerning, hastened by approach of Mexican war, 273; excludes slavery, 306; bill to organize laid on table, 306; in Clayton's compromise, 312; organized without slavery, 314.
- FAKENHAM, British minister, communicates Aberdeen's letter to Upshur, 230; Calhoun's reply to, 231-234; letter of Upshur to, 236; desire of Calhoun to draw into a correspondence, 240; negotiates Oregon question vainly with Calhoun, 260, 261.
- Parker, General D., accuses Calhoun of extravagance in War Department, 44.
- Pennsylvania, popularity of Calhoun in, 58, 59; supports Jackson as a protectionist, 83; supports Polk as a protectionist, 216.
- Petition, right of, in regard to abolition petitions, 123, 125, 126.
- Polk, James K., denounced in South Carolina for his double-faced canvass, 216; nominated for President by annexationists, 243; elected through Liberty vote, 250; doubtful if Calhoun expects him to continue him in office, 255; not desirous to have a man like Calhoun in Cabinet, 256; too ambitious to be a mere figure-head, 256; offers Calhoun mission to England, probably expecting him to decline the honor, 256, 257; his relations with Calhoun, 259; in his inaugural address declares American claim to all of Oregon, 263, 264; withdraws offer of compromise, and advises abrogation of commercial convention, 264; secretly anxious to prevent quarrel with England, 272; wishes to

- settle Oregon question in order to be free to deal with Texas, 273; does not wish a war with Mexico, 273; prefers diplomacy, 273; bound, however, to get territory, even at cost of war, 274; his demands, 274; orders Taylor to force a war, 274, 275; at same time determines to satisfy Edgeland in Oregon, 275; sends message announcing war, 276; asks two millions to negotiate a peace, 278; does not realize impossibility of making conquests for the Union, 281; merely carries on Calhoun's policy too far, 285; favors a defensive war at first, 288; recommends occupation of Yucatan, 306.
- Porter, Peter B., assigned chairmanship of Committee on Foreign Relations, moves choice of Calhoun, 15; presents report on foreign affairs, 15.
- Preston, William, moves to annex Texas in 1838, 232.
- Protection, Calhoun's early favor towards, 29, 33-35, 59; injustice of, toward South, 71.
- RAILROADS, their importance recognized by Calhoun, 151-153.
- Randolph, John, his attack on war policy met by Calhoun, 16; defeated by Calhoun in debate, 17, 18; his arguments answered, 18, 19; his motion to open doors of House rejected, 22; his abuse of Adams's administration not checked by Calhoun, 63.
- Republican party, failure of its commercial policy toward England and France, 12; old and new leaders of, 13; war party in, 14; forces Madison into war, 20; division in, on declaration of war, 22.
- Republicans, not the originators of civil war, 299, 300.
- Rhett, R. B., threatens disunion in 1844, 217.
- Rip-Rap contract, awarded by Calhoun to Mix, 49; failure of Mix to perform, 49; sublet by Mix, 49; Calhoun said to have profited from, 50; examined by House, 50, 51.
- Richardson, William M., moves repeal of commercial restrictions, 23.
- Russell, Lord John, calls Polk's claim to Oregon a "blustering announcement," 264.
- SARGENT, NATHAN, describes Calhoun's attitude on internal improvements, 40; on Calhoun's determination to break down Adams's administration, 64.
- Schurz, Carl, resemblance between his Indian policy and that of Calhoun, 48, 49.
- Scott, General Winfield, his share in reforming military establishment, 43.
- Sears, —, letter of Webster to, 271.
- Seminole war, Jackson's conduct in, 87.
- Senate, recommits war bill, 22; finally passes it with amendments, 22; Calhoun's presiding over, 63; election of Calhoun to, 103; debates anti-slavery petitions, 123, 132; receives and rejects petitions, 132; rejects Calhoun's bill to exclude incendiary publications from mail, 138; adopts Calhoun's theory of origin of Constitution, 189; and condemns religious anti-slavery agitation, 191, 193; adopts Calhoun's amendments censuring England in Enterprise case, 203; character of vote in, for, 204; significance of, 208; confirms Calhoun's appointment as Secretary of State, 228; disinclined to follow Calhoun, 244; rejects annexation treaty, 244; amends and passes annexation joint resolution, 253; motion in, to terminate joint occupancy of Oregon, 265; debate

- in, on Oregon question, 266, 267; debate on Mexican war, 276; refuses Calhoun's demand for time to consult documents, 276, 277; lays bill to organize Oregon without slavery on table, 306; passes Clayton's compromise, 313.
- Seward, W. H., indignant with alliance of Whigs with nullifiers, 272.
- Shannon, Wilson, assures Mexico that Folk desires to settle all questions on liberal terms, 274.
- Slave trade, treaty for suppression of, 209, 210; attitude of Calhoun, 210.
- Slavery, its economic effect upon South, 66-71; damages middle class, 67-69; prevents artisan class, 69; not understood by South or North to be real cause of Southern conditions, 72; any attack upon, a slander on South, 125; dangers to, foreseen by Calhoun, 127-129; not endangered from force but agitation, 128, 129; considered more vital to South than Union, 132, 147; impossibility of abolition of, 140, 146; endangered by railroads between South and North, 153, 154; praised by Calhoun, 164; admitted to be an evil by South, 171; held to be a positive good for both races, 171-176; necessary to full civilization, 174, 175; necessity of converting North to belief in, 177, 178; its real economic effect, 178; its right to protection by Federal government, 192, 194; its right to extension into Territories, 194, 196; its relation to international law, 203-209; danger to it from emancipation in Texas, 236, 237; endangered by a war with England, 270; first made dividing question in politics by South, 300; its hopelessness as foundation of society, 330.
- South, opposes tariff of 1824, 65; union of, against, proposed, 65; opposed by Calhoun, 66; economic effect of slavery upon, 66-70; classes in, 67-70; justified in hostility to protection, 71; does not understand real reason, 72; thought by Webster to plan secession in 1828, 82; supports Jackson as anti-protectionist, 83; effort of Calhoun to unite in defence of interests, 97; meant by Calhoun when he says "States," 101, 102, 146; denounces abolitionists, 121; any attack on slavery a slander on, 125; necessity of its meeting abolitionist attacks at once, 128; holds slavery more precious than Union, 131, 132; insists that North suppress abolitionists, 133; will never cease to assert paramount importance of slavery, 140, 147; continually forces North to yield, 149; desired by Calhoun to introduce railroads, 151, 152; unable to profit by them, 153; really endangered by them, 153, 154; admits slavery to be an evil, 169, 170; gradually alters sentiments, 170, 171; held by Calhoun to be benefited by slavery, 171, 172; inferior only in trade, 173; economic contrast with North, 178; dissatisfied with efforts of North to put down abolitionists, 187; its demand to be let alone involves denial of criticism even, 206, 207; does not favor Calhoun for President, 214; demands annexation of Texas, 232; threatens to repeal tariff of 1842 in default of Texas annexation, 249; reproached by Northwest for abandoning Oregon, 267; dreads a war with England as danger to slavery, 270; its unwillingness to accept free States predicted by Giddings, 280; driven to desperation by Wilmot Proviso, 281, 290; necessity of its consolidation to obtain rights in Territories, 296, 297; causes civil war by forcing North to form a sectional

- party, 300, 301; proposal by Calhoun that it boycott the North, 301, 302; in opposing exclusion of slavery from Oregon, admits contending for a principle, 307; refuses to yield in 1849, 314; attempt of Calhoun to unite in a party, 316-320; wish of Calhoun to prepare it for the worst, 317; its members of Congress confer and adopt address but fail to unite, 320; plan of Calhoun to unite by Nashville Convention, 325; continues to lose ground relatively to North, 330; dissatisfaction in, with slavery, 331; determines to keep out California until North makes concessions, 335; Calhoun's anxiety for, on death-bed, 349.
- South Carolina, proposed coalition of New England with, against Virginia, 28; approval of internal improvements, 40; "Exposition" written for, by Calhoun, 76; high morality of family life in, 85; its reception of tariff of 1832, 97; passes nullification ordinance, 103; elects Hayne governor, 103; tariff of 1833 a yielding to, 105; urges claims of Calhoun for presidency, 211; nominates him, 212; dismayed at his failure, 215; denounces Polk for supposed protectionist leanings, 216; complains of loss by emigration to Mississippi and Northwestern States, 331.
- Spolia system, denounced by Calhoun, 113-115; proposal of Calhoun to remedy, 116, 117, 201; bill to punish partisan officials opposed by Calhoun, 199, 200.
- States' rights, held by Calhoun to be corner-stone of Union, 78, 79, 96, 98, 99; means, in Calhoun's mind, Southern rights, 101, 146; held by Calhoun to be infringed by Force Bill, 106, 119, 120; in relation to Federal law, 136, 139, 144; opinion of Calhoun that a State cannot be forced into Union, 160, 161; the origin of Union, 189.
- Stephens, Alexander H., moves to lay Clayton's compromise on table, 313.
- Story, Joseph, admires Calhoun, but thinks him too young for presidency, 55.
- Stow, Silas, moves to postpone war action, 22.
- Sub-treasury, attitude of Calhoun toward, 183, 184; its adoption strengthens central government, 186.
- Supreme Court, left by Clayton's compromise to settle question of slavery in new Territories, 313.
- TANEY, ROGER B., denounced by Calhoun, 114.
- Tariff, of 1816, argument of Calhoun for, 33-35, 59; of 1824, causes excitement in South, 65; of 1828, calls for Calhoun's South Carolina Exposition, 75; of 1832, fails to satisfy South, 97; causes nullification movement, 97; of 1833, a yielding to South, 104; Calhoun forced to support, 104; threat of abrogation of, frightens North into supporting Texas annexation, 249.
- Tarpley, Collin S., letter of Calhoun to, suggesting Nashville Convention, 325, 326.
- Taylor, General Zachary, ordered to occupy up to Rio Grande, 274; as President, sanctions action of California, 334.
- Tennessee, demands annexation of Texas, 232.
- Territories, right of slaveholders to enter, 194, 195; question of slavery in, brought on by Mexican war, 280-283, 290; Calhoun's resolutions on, 291-293; their impossibility of acceptance, 294-296, 311; squatter sovereignty in, 309; question as to extension of Constitution over, 321, 322.
- Texas, annexation of, favored by

- Calhoun, 221, 223; intrigues for annexation of, under Tyler, 223-254; part played by, question in defeating Van Buren's nomination, 224, 242, 243; negotiations of Upahur with, 225; demands protection during negotiations, 225; receives promise from Calhoun, 229; agrees to treaty, 230; attitude of England toward, 231, 234; necessity of annexing, to prevent emancipation, 231, 232, 235-238; popular agitation for, in South, 232; annexation demanded by Democratic party, 243; treaty with, rejected, 244; notifies Calhoun of threatened invasion from Mexico, 247; gains promise of continued protection, 247; Tyler's theory of popular mandate to annex, 250-252; resolution to annex, passed and signed, 253.
- Thompson, Waddy, moves to annex Texas, 232.
- Turney, Hopkins L., charges Calhoun with obstructing war for presidential motives, 286; provoked by Calhoun's advocacy of a defensive war, 287.
- Tyler, John, appoints Upahur Secretary of State, 224; persuaded by Wise to appoint Calhoun, 226; said by Nelson to favor protecting Texas, 229; known to favor annexation in 1841, 232; said by Upahur to fear abolition in Texas under English influence, 236; criticised by Northern Democrats for Calhoun's Pakenham letter, 241; dismayed by rejection of treaty, 245; sends message urging Congress to secure annexation in some other way, 245; waives constitutional question, 246; as ready as Jackson to "assume responsibility," 248; asserts election of 1844 to be a mandate, by a controlling majority of people and States, to annex Texas, 250; approves joint resolution of annexation, 253.
- Union, historical growth of, 78, 98; Calhoun's theory of, 78, 79, 97-99, 189; impossibility of his theory, 100, 101; Calhoun's devotion to, 124, 131, 142, 289; endangered by attack on slavery, 132, 166; its actual division causes sectional parties, 300; impossibility of saving, on Calhoun's own statement, 343.
- Upahur, Abel P., succeeds Webster as Secretary of State, 224; proposes annexation to Texas, 234; dares not either grant or deny Texas' request for protection, 225; killed, 225; Aberdeen's dispatch to, 230 ff.; avows English designs on slavery in Texas as cause for annexation, 236; thinks Texas cannot maintain slavery unless annexed, 236.
- VAN BUREN, MARTIN, gains Jackson's favor by attentions to Mrs. Eaton, 85; Calhoun's rival for succession to Jackson, 86; wishes Jackson's reelection, 86; suspected by Calhoun of having betrayed him to Jackson, 86; too cunning to show his hand, 86; promises to follow in Jackson's footsteps, 118; does not imitate Jackson's methods, 118; his sub-treasury scheme supported by Calhoun, 183; considered powerless for evil by Calhoun, 184; his nomination opposed in 1843-1844 by Calhoun's followers, 214, 215; his followers succeed in postponing date of convention, 215; defeated for nomination at Baltimore convention by Texas annexationists, 243.
- Van Zandt, Isaac, Texan envoy, asks United States to protect Texas during negotiations, 225.
- Virginia, its anti-commercial policy opposed by New England, 23.
- Virginia resolutions, quoted by Calhoun, 79.

- WADDELL, DR. MOSES, prepares Calhoun for college, 9.
- War Department, Calhoun's management of, 41, 53.
- War of 1812, declaration urged by Calhoun, 18, 19; war message sent by Madison, 21; declaration, 21, 22; not a national but a party war, 25; yet worth fighting, 25; mistake in conduct of, 27, 28.
- War with Mexico, causes of, 273, 274; Taylor's advance to Rio Grande, 274; deprecated by Calhoun, 275; not opposed by him in order to help administration settle Oregon question, 275; Polk's war message, 276; accepted by Congress, 276, 277; Calhoun's opinion of, 277, 279, 284; Calhoun's responsibility for, 285; defensive character for, advocated by Calhoun and Polk, 287, 288.
- Webster, Daniel, modern diminution of his fame, 3; compared with Calhoun, 4, 6; asked by Calhoun to help country out of financial difficulties, 25; hopes New England will support Calhoun for vice-presidency, 60; on plan for a Southern Confederacy in 1823, 82; his remonstrances in Creole case approved by Calhoun, 209; his treaty for suppression of slave trade approved by Calhoun, 209, 210; leaves Tyler's Cabinet, 224; on Calhoun's influence with Whigs in 1846, 272; debates with Calhoun the status of Constitution in Territories, 321, 322; his eulogy of Calhoun, 343.
- Webster, Ezekiel, letter of Webster to, 60.
- Westcott, James D., calls anti-slavery petition from Santa Fé an abuse of right, 315.
- Whig party, its protection principles foreshadowed by Calhoun, 33; Calhoun not a member of, 109; mistaken in opposing executive, 117, 118; accuses Calhoun of treachery in supporting Van Buren, 183, 184; incompatibility with Calhoun's principles, 186; defeated by Liberty vote, 250; Southern members reluctant to follow Calhoun, 319, 320; later, leads Southern attacks, 335.
- Wick, William W., moves extension of Missouri Compromise line in place of Wilmot Proviso, 278.
- Williams, John, carries reforms in War Department through Congress, 43.
- Wilmot, David, moves anti-slavery proviso to two-million bill, 278.
- Wilmot Proviso, adopted, 278; its defeat by South a barren victory, 305.
- Wirt, William, on Crawford's betrayal of Calhoun, 87; thinks Calhoun ruined by quarrel with Jackson, 93.
- Wise, Henry A., enthusiastic over Texas, 226; succeeds in inducing Tyler to appoint Calhoun Secretary of State, 226; predicts Western progress of slavery, 283, 284.
- YALE COLLEGE, studies of Calhoun at, 9, 10.

The Riverside Press

CAMBRIDGE, MASSACHUSETTS, U. S. A.

ELECTROTYPED AND PRINTED BY

H. O. HOUGHTON AND CO.