The Hon'ble Mr. W. F. RICE, C.S.I., C.I.E., I.C.S.

Major-General Sir GEORGE BARROW, K.C.B.,
K.C.M.G.

The Hon'ble Pandit JAGAT NARAYAN.

The Hon'ble Mr. THOMAS SMITH.

Sir C. H. SETALVAD, Kt.

Sardar Sahibzada SULTAN AHMAD KHAN.

Rai Bahadur G. K. ROY, Superintendent (Acting for Secretary).

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON, D.S.O., Royal Sussex Regiment, late Commanding Lahore (Civil) Area.

By the President—

Q. You commanded for a time the Lahore Area?

A. Yes.

Q. It was from the 15th April to the 29th of May that you held the command?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What was the area under your control?

A. It was called the Lahore Civil Area. It consisted of country between the Ravi river and the Bari Doab Canal and was within a radius of three miles from the Central Telegraph Office. Subsequently it included the Moghalpura Works.

Q. Roughly speaking it consisted of about a million population?

A. About 240,000.

Q. What was the date of the outrage in Lahore?

A. Thursday, the 10th of April.

Q. What sort of forces were available on that day to maintain law and order?

A. Before the Martial Law?

Q. At the outbreak of the outrage, i.e., at the time when the command was handed over to you?

A. I had only 580 men available including the police. After Martial Law was proclaimed roughly speaking I had 1,500 rifles besides the police.

Q. You prepared a statement* which you communicated to the Adjutant-General in India during the occurrences narrating the steps you had taken to deal with the situation?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. On certain points arising out of that statement I want information. In the first place in Appendix I† to that report you have given a chronological summary of the signs of unrest, acts of violence and outrages here?

A. Yes, Sir, Appendix I.

Q. Was that compiled from information which was before you at the time?

A. I took a good deal of time in collecting information.

Q. Are there any corrections to be made in it?

A. In this report.

Q. In that Appendix?

A. I know of none.

Q. In Appendix II,* I think you have supplied a graphic diagram showing the rise of criminal acts under four heads?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. According to that diagram the four coincide to some extent with the declaration of Martial Law or a little before the declaration?

A. I think the outbreak begins after the shooting at Amritsar.

Q. As regards Lahore itself was the only bloodshed that occurred before Martial Law was proclaimed?

A. Yes; not a shot was fired nor any violence used after that.

Q. I think so far as the Lahore Area was concerned conditions had been more or less normal until the 6th of April?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. On that day there was a hartal in connection with the agitation against the Rowlett Acts?

A. That is so, Sir.

Q. Had additional troops been drafted into the Fort on that occasion?

A. On the evening of the 6th.

Q. I think some cavalry were also sent from Cantonments to assist the police?

A. That is so, yes.

Q. But no actual collisions occurred with the police?

A. None, Sir.

Q. You referred to what had occurred here and in Amritsar; I need not trouble you with the incidents there. When did the information reach Lahore as to what had occurred in Amritsar?

A. It reached me at 12 minutes past 5.

24 November 1919.]

LT.-COL. FRANK JOHNSON.

Q. At that time did you get any instructions as to what you were to do with the troops?

A. At 5.12 the Staff Captain gave me the information and orders.

Q. What did you do with the troops then?

A. The first 200 men I collected with Lewis guns and mules and put into a special train which was waiting and sent them as fast as possible to Amritsar, and as men began to come in I sent them off in parties to various vital points in Lahore by Air Force lorries.

Q. What were the vital points in your opinion that required protection?

A. The Telegraph Office, the Gymkhana Club, where there were a large number of European ladies, thirdly and practically simultaneously Government House, and subsequent to that the European hotels.

Q. I do not know whether you have the information—if you have not it does not much matter. What size was the force which you assigned to each of these points?

A. One officer and 40 men to the Telegraph Office. First of all one officer and 20 men; but he no sooner reached there than he sent an urgent telephone message that he could not hold the place with the number. I then telephoned him and sent on the detachment with us at the Punjab Club to reinforce him. So they had 40 men at the Telegraph Office. They had another 45 men at the Gymkhana Club, about 50 men at Government House and about 25 men at the Punjab Club and subsequently 25 or 30 at Faletti's Hotel. This of course did not all take place at once and it took about an hour and a half to get the men together. It was a Thursday and a Military holiday and the men were absent at sports.

Q. At what time did the unrest show itself in the city?

A. I was not there, but I am told it showed itself at about 6 o'clock. They came out of the city at about 10 minutes to 7; at any rate, they appeared at the Telegraph Office at that time.

Q. How did they come out of the Lohari Gate?

A. The Lohari Gate and down the Anarkali Bazar.

Q. Was it a large crowd?

A. I did not see it but my officer at the Telegraph Office reported that he thought it was about 6,000.

Q. What effect had the sight of British soldiers that were at the Telegraph Office upon the mob that came out?

A. The report of the officer in charge of the detachment there was that they turned half left, as it were, going up the Mall to the Telegraph Office and he got his bayonets fixed and came to the high port and advanced, whereupon they halted, and there was hesitation for a minute and then they went off down the Mall. They turned to their right rear and went down the Mall.

Q. Was there any force of military and police to bar their passage down the Mall?

A. There was a very small force a little lower down by the Cathedral, a force of police.

Q. Was that police force effective in barring the way of the crowd?

A. They did after they fired.

Q. I think they were under the control of the Deputy Commissioner, Mr. Fyson?

A. Yes; and Mr. Cocks.

Q. How far was the place at which the firing took place from the Gymkhana Club?

A. I should not think it is more than a dozen yards.

Q. At the Gymkhana Club, as you have indicated, were there a large number of ladies and children collected?

A. They are always there, every evening.

Q. Do you know what casualties were inflicted on the mob by the firing that took place on that occasion?

A. I do not know, of my own knowledge.

Q. Later on that night, at about 10 o'clock, there was firing by the police in the Anarkali Bazar?

A. Yes, Sir; near the Lohari Gate.

Q. Did any military fire on that occasion?

A. No, Sir; I may say that no shot was fired by a soldier in Lahore at all.

Q. At any time?

A. No, Sir.

Q. During the night was the city in a state of great excitement?

A. I take it, Sir, no white man could go into the city; the police had evacuated the city that night and it was given over to the mob until two days later.

Q. So far as you could judge, was the action in evacuating the city by the police a right and prudent action to take?

A. Absolutely.

Q. I think, meantime, certain detachments of Indian troops had been posted at certain places?

A. Yes.

Q. At what places were they?

A. I am speaking from memory. They were the Railway Station, the water works, the electric light works, and the Ravi Bridge.

Q. Were the headquarters of the 43rd Brigade moved into Lahore?

A. They came in on Thursday night the 10th and stayed there until 6 a.m. on the 15th.

Q. Did you think that appearance of military force had any effect in maintaining order?

A. I think it had every effect.

Q. And in fact, there was no outbreak in Lahore on the 11th?

A. There was nothing on the 11th; they were shut up in the city.

Q. Were meetings being held in the city on that day?

A. I am told so, Sir; of course I was not there.

Q. And you heard in particular about a large meeting at the Badshahi Mosque?

A. Yes.

Q. On the 12th April, was any resolution come to as to the necessity of obtaining control of the city again?

A. Yes, Sir. It was decided to do that at all costs.

Q. And what means were resorted to in order to do it?

A. I was given a column of about 800 mixed troops and police and told to go into the city and re-establish police and military control there.

Q. I think you took the road up the Delhi Gate into the Delhi Gate and came out at the Bhati Gate? On that occasion was there any firing?

A. Yes, Sir. At the Hira Mundi, we fired a few shots to extricate the rear-guard.

Q. Was that firing done by the military or the police?

A. No, Sir; it was done by the police supported by British troops.

Q. I think in entering the city in that way you were supported by certain aeroplanes?

A. Yes, Sir; by four aeroplanes co-operating.

Q. What was the intention with reference to these aeroplanes?

A. I made arrangements with the Officer Commanding the four aeroplanes, Col. Minchin, at midnight, before we went in, that two of them should fly as low as they possibly could and watch for a signal which I would give by firing a "Very" pistol. If two shots were fired he was to drop bombs 200 yards ahead of the troops; because I did not want my troops cut about by bombs or rifles from the roofs of houses.

Q. Did you indicate to the mob or the leaders of the mob what course you were going to pursue in the event of an attempt being made by bombs or gun-fire upon your troops?

A. Yes, Sir. On arrival at the Delhi Gate, I got Mr. Fyson, the Deputy Commissioner, who accompanied the column to call for the leaders and explain to them that that was my intention and they would have 15 minutes or 10 minutes in which to make that known to the people in the city so as to play the game with them.

Q. As a matter of fact, you never had occasion to make use of the aeroplanes?

A. No, Sir.

Q. In what condition was the crowd through which you passed?

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON.

A. Very sullen, very bad-tempered, not to say savage in places.

Q. Were any attacks made on any part of your force?

A. It would be wrong to say an attack until the incident you referred to on the rear guard at Hira Maudi, that was a distinct attack.

Q. You gave the order, I think, to the police to fire?

A. As a matter of fact, I did not. I thought we had cleared up the trouble in the vicinity of Hira Maudi, as we had been halted there for three quarters of an hour clearing that large open space on to which the crowd came from the Badshahi mosque, and I rejoined the head column which was in the street facing the Bhati Gate. I had only just given the order to advance, and that order did not reach one of the rear units round the corner, and they stood fast. It was only subsequently that I heard shots being fired. I left the head of the column and found the police had given orders to fire and I confirmed the order and carried on for a minute or two.

Q. What casualties were there?

A. One killed; there may have been five wounded.

Q. And in consequence of the firing did the crowd fall back?

A. Yes, Sir. And the moment I saw that they commenced to fall back I ceased firing and ordered some British troops to advance with the bayonet, and that was sufficient.

Q. How long were you in the city on that occasion on the 12th?

A. I entered at 9.30 and left at 1.30.

Q. And by the time you left, had the city quietened down?

A. The parts that I went through had, and where I had posted strong detachments of Indian troops and police.

Q. Was that action taken with a view to the maintenance of order?

A. Yes. Patrols were sent out. I considered the state of the city such that I left orders that no troops were to move in parties of less than 200.

Q. Did you consider a smaller number would be insufficient?

A. Yes, insufficient.

Q. I think all these troops were armed with rifles?

A. All of them.

Q. On the 13th and 14th, did any further actual disturbance take place in your area?

A. No.

Q. But I think the hartal continued?

A. The hartal continued and got even more strict and better organized.

Q. What effect had this hartal on the life of the city?

A. It paralysed it, Sir.

Q. The city was in that position, I think, when the Government of India authorised the introduction of Martial Law?

A. Yes, Sir. It was then very complete.

Q. Martial Law was in fact declared on the morning of the 15th?

A. Yes, Sir. I think the information was received here at 4 A.M. from Simla and it was actually proclaimed to the people at 11 o'clock.

Q. The Ordinance is dated the 14th, but the proclamation did not take place till the 15th?

A. Yes; morning of the 15th.

Q. What was your opinion then, and what is your opinion now, as to the necessity for Martial Law being declared at the time it was declared?

A. My opinion then, Sir, was, as it is now, that no act done by the Government of India was ever of greater value to India. It undoubtedly saved Lahore from much worse trouble than they had at Amritsar. Its effect was instantaneous.

Q. Coming to the period of Martial Law, I think the headquarters of 49th Brigade and Cavalry were withdrawn to Lahore Cantonment?

A. Yes; at 6 A.M. on the 15th.

Q. Then a separate military area was created and placed under your command?

A. That is so.

Q. That separate military area is what you refer to as Lahore Civil Area?

A. Yes; within 3 miles of the Telegraph Office.

Q. And you indicated that in addition to the troops under your disposal you had a number of police?

A. About 800.

Q. Altogether, you had a force of about 2,000.

A. Yes, Sir; about 2,300.

Q. You have in an Appendix† to your report indicated the bi-monthly strength of the garrison of the area?

A. Yes; it varied a little from time to time.

Q. Those are the actual figures?

A. Yes.

Q. On the declaration of Martial Law, did you receive offers of assistance from a number of officers who were on leave?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. At 11 o'clock on the 15th, did you issue your first notice to the public announcing, inter alia, the introduction of martial law?

A. That is so, Sir.

Q. And that, I think, is printed as an appendix to this report?

A. Yes, Sir; Appendix IV.*

Q. How was that notice proclaimed?

A. It was printed at the Government Printing Office in Vernacular and English and distributed throughout the city.

Q. Was that distributed by hand?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Was it posted in any parts of the city?

A. Oh yes; in dozens and dozens of places.

Q. I see that in that notice you indicate in a general and brief way what is the effect of Martial Law?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. It gives the military commander a full discretion in dealing with the situation, independent of the existing civil institutions?

A. That is so, Sir.

Q. Looking at the orders that you issued on that occasion, they are briefly these, I think. You prohibited all persons other than Europeans or persons in possession of a permit from being in the street between 10 at night and 5 in the morning?

A. Eight at night; it was 20 hours.

Q. And prohibiting gatherings of more than 10 people and warning them that drastic reprisals would be taken in the event of a bomb being thrown or shot fired at either troops or police; prohibiting the interference with any persons desirous of opening their shops, requisitioning of tongas, tumtums, motor vehicles?

A. Yes, Sir. That is all I did that morning.

Q. In an Appendix,† you have further indicated all the different Martial Law orders and notices issued by you during the period of your authority?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. That Appendix contains an accurate statement of all of them? Reading it through, I doubt if it is quite correct. In No. 12, I think, there must be a misprint. Order No. 12, last paragraph, 2nd line. After the word "persons" should be inserted "other than Europeans."

A. That was my intention at any rate.

Q. Now in connection with certain of these orders, I would just like to ask you a question or two. Generally speaking I may take it that in this report you set forth accurately the reasons you had for promulgating these different orders?

A. Yes, Sir. In some detail I put it there.

Q. Take first what is known as the Curfew order; you indicate briefly the objects of pronouncing that Curfew order?

A. May I quote from this?

Q. You can quote from that or give it in your own language.

A. My first object was to save the strain on the troops and police under my command. If people were wandering about all night, it would have meant a tremendous lot of extra patrolling. If you keep people in their houses you keep them out of mischief and save one's police and troops from doing a lot patrolling.

Q. I think such an order as that is an order very usually passed when Martial Law comes into operation?

A. I think always where there is a dense population. I have administered Martial Law under other conditions where one has not issued that order.

Q. So far as the effect of it was concerned, it had a good effect?

A. Excellent; with a population of a quarter of a million of people in the city, I think I am right in saying there were something under 20 people who were convicted for breaking it.

Q. Do you know whether there were any serious complaints made by citizens as to their suffering hardship from the operation of that order?

A. The only complaint that I heard, the only real complaint, was the alleged difficulty of women in child-birth being attended by doctors or nurses.

Q. And in consequence of that you relaxed the order?

A. Yes, Sir. I may say that from the very start, from the first day I realised that I had to give exceptions to that; and on the morning of the 15th, I had passes printed to give to people who had any reasonable excuses whatever to be allowed out.

Q. This order was altered, I think, as regards the time during which it was to operate very shortly after the 15th April?

A. I think the first alteration was 4 or 5 days afterwards, when I altered it to 9 o'clock; and subsequently, as the behaviour of the people warranted it and the situation came under control I further relaxed it till ultimately the streets were only close for 2 hours in the night.

Q. When was that?

A. Some date in May.

Q. It was before you ceased to command?

A. Yes.

Q. In connection with the order about gatherings, on the face of it, that seems rather a severe order, as it prohibits all processions or gatherings of more than 10 persons. Did you in connection with that make specific concessions?

A. Oh yes; whenever it was really necessary, such as in the case of funerals, and even for weddings.

Q. These relaxations that you made were they done by a written permit or a verbal permit?

A. They were always written. They always got permission from the staff officer.

Q. Did you attach considerable importance to the warnings which you gave in your notices in the event of bombs being thrown?

A. Yes, very great importance.

Q. In that connection did you take steps to explain the position to the leaders?

A. Yes, Sir. I had up a hundred of the leading men on the 1st day of Martial Law and explained to them what was going to happen.

Q. What action did you indicate to them would be taken in the event of a bomb being thrown?

A. Well, if I might say so, the only two courses that were open to me were to take hostages from every street threatened, shoot them or flog them if anything happened in that street, but knowing that was useless because it was only an empty threat I was looking for some other course. I therefore told them that if any bomb fell or that if any British soldier or anybody was wounded or injured as a result of that bomb that spot would be deemed the centre of a circle having a diameter of a 100 yards and that I would give them one hour in which to remove everything living from that circle and that at the end of that time the demolition of every building, other than mosques and temples, would take place inside that circle. And they understood it.

Q. Fortunately you did not have occasion to put that into force?

A. No, Sir. As a result of this order I received an enormous number of anonymous letters giving the names of badmashes concealed in various people's houses. They were very excellent detectives in the whole city after this.

Q. Did any good effect result from the prohibition you issued against interference with people desiring to open their shops?

A. No Sir, because I could not enforce it as they had private picquets inside and outside and there is no doubt that tremendous moral persuasion was brought to bear upon people not to work.

Q. And the effect of that picqueting considerably counteracted the effect of your order?

A. Yes Sir, undoubtedly.

Q. About the other orders that you issued as regards the commandeering of tongas and tum-tums, I see you have stated the object for which this was done and I do not suppose you desire to add anything more?

A. No, Sir, I hope I have stated it very clearly.

Q. I see in your report that you say "the order to report was obeyed with alacrity, over 800 tongas and tum-tums being registered, 800 subsequently reduced to 200 tongas were retained for military service." That refers to the 800, was this 800 retained?

A. They were reduced to 200 and this took place within a few days and all these were retained all the time that I was in command in Lahore. They were kept merely for the purpose of moving women and children in time of danger.

Q. With reference to this order you gave exemptions?

A. Yes Sir, on condition that they bona fide plied for hire and dropped their hartal. They had to report to the police twice daily.

Q. In fact did they do so?

A. Yes, there was not a single case of a tum-tum-wala being convicted.

Q. Then there was a similar order as regards motor-cars?

A. Yes, they were purely for military purposes.

Q. Then you had an order as regards railway tickets purchased; that is a matter on which you might give us something more?

A. My main object in preventing the people of Lahore, which I looked upon as the capital of the Punjab, and the centre of the trouble, was to limit their activities and to prevent gentlemen going into other districts and causing trouble there. And another reason was the railway people were unable to cope with the traffic.

Q. Were the duties of the management considerably eased in consequence of this order?

A. Undoubtedly.

Q. Was that order obeyed?

A. On the first day they did but they then got to stations just outside my area where there was no order against them taking tickets. The General Officer Commanding Lahore Area then decided this was not good enough, a similar order was issued, and that stopped it.

Q. You issued an order dealing with these langars?

A. Yes, Sir. These were places where food was provided free—alleged charitable institutions.

Q. Why did you consider it necessary to close these langars?

A. There were two reasons. They became very convenient centres at which sedition could be preached, where one could not get, and as long as there were people of this class who could keep out of work and get their food without working naturally they considered it a good state of things to support a hartal and from that class who went to get free food the extremist picquets were supplied.

Q. I see in the Appendix* a statement of the punishments that were inflicted upon students?

A. By the Principal with my concurrence.

Q. Were any complaints made about the orders issued as regards the students?

A. I really do not remember. They did not like it.

Q. Did you yourself under Martial Law deal with any students who were offenders or did you leave that entirely to the Principal?

A. I think there were two who absconded—that is, who failed to carry out the Martial Law order in reporting themselves and I made the Principal of each college responsible for advising me of an absentes. Two were reported only out of five thousand and one I succeeded in arresting at Lyallpur and he was brought before me, but as he produced proof that his mother was dying or was very ill, I promptly let him off.

Q. In connection with the hartal you had orders to break up the hartal?

A. I issued orders bearing on the military situation.

Q. You have already stated that the hartal was paralyzed?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. In your opinion did you expect the restoration of order as long as the general strike lasted?

A. As long as the general hartal continued one could not expect restoration of order. It was an essential precedent to the restoration of order.

Q. Did you in that connection as regards the breaking up of the hartal intimate to the people the procedure you intended to follow?

A. I caused it to be intimated to the shop-keepers in the Anarkali Bazar. I took that bazar first instead of the whole area under my command. I deemed it wise never to issue an order I could not carry out and I could not enforce the breaking of the hartal, so I took a small portion of it and told them frankly what would happen if they did not obey.

Q. What did you tell them?

A. If by a certain hour they did not open their shops, I would picquet the streets with a strong body of troops and police and proceed to burst open each shop. I would then place two soldiers in each shop to protect the owners and their goods and I should then expect business to be carried on as usual, and that if they were not there to sell goods or to receive money for them the British soldiers would supply bona fide customers with such goods, but that they would not be authorised to make book entries for them or to receive money.

Q. What effect did that have upon the situation?

A. All the shops were opened hours before the time specified.

Q. Following upon that result did you extend your order as regards the opening of shops to the whole city?

A. To the rest of the area—that was from the 17th.

Q. And the effect of this order was illustrated at the Moghulpura Railway Works?

A. Yes, Sir. The number of workers rose from something under four thousand on the 16th to a figure approximating ten and a half thousand upon the 19th.

Q. You had an order prohibiting the circulation of false reports?

A. They were getting very thick.

Q. What sort of reports were these?

A. The most ludicrous ones one could think of. The king was dead, the Afghans were at Peshawar. Anything was good enough for the people.

Q. I think you only prosecuted one person for a breach of this order? And he was the man who wrote an account in a vernacular paper of the presence of a large Turkish force with the Afghans at Landi Kotal?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. As regards the possession of guns and arms by the population what steps did you take?

A. If I had had my own way I would have taken every rifle and arm away at once not because I distrusted the loyalty of the particular people—the license holders—but in order to prevent them from being stolen, keeping them in safe custody from people who might use them unlawfully, but as the Lieutenant-Governor thought it would hurt the feelings of a number of these men of undoubted loyalty, I restricted it in fact to those people whom one had reason to think might not be able to look after their arms. There were about 400 of them.

Q. You issued certain orders as regards the regulation of prices on commodities?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Are these orders issued under Martial Law?

A. I have never seen it before. But I had to consider the military situation. If people are hungry and have not sufficient money to buy the necessaries of life they take action which they would never dream of doing if their stomachs were full.

Q. Did you find that prices were high?

A. There is no question of it. It was profiteering of a flagrant type.

Q. I suppose orders of that sort regulating the prices dissatisfied some and satisfied others?

A. It dissatisfied those engaged in selling them but the consumer was undoubtedly satisfied. There was a complete change in the atmosphere of the city at once.

Q. Did you find these orders regulating prices had an effect on withdrawing supplies?

A. No, Sir, I took care never to apply that to any article or store I could not control. For instance, pressure was brought to bear to control the price of ghi, but as ghi is not in this area at all or under any area under Martial Law it was impossible for me to control it and the result of attempting to lower the price of ghi would have meant a shortage in the city.

Q. In administering a regulation like that in Great Britain there would be great difficulty in maintaining the supply?

A. One has got to remember that there is one law above Martial Law and that is the law of supply and demand.

Q. Were you controlling the whole supply?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. I think you found that there was a certain amount of adulteration particularly with regard to milk and you took steps in connection with that?

A. Yes, Sir. It was apparently the custom here to adulterate the milk and consumers rather liked a certain amount of water, but it did not occur to them to adulterate it themselves.

Q. In your report you dealt with a certain amount of blackmail that was prevalent among certain people?

A. Yes, it undoubtedly did exist. Perhaps I should have used the prefix "sub" before the word "conscious" in sub-paragraph 53.

Q. What difference does that make?

A. If I am conscious of a thing I take it that I have some definite proof but I had an uncomfortable feeling that all was not quite well.

Q. Where you found that bribery existed did you punish the person taking bribes?

A. Appendix V* will show that heavy punishments were meted out under Martial Law.

Q. May I take it that everything was done to discourage and not to encourage such practice?

A. My great object was to try and keep it down.

Q. As regards your other orders dealing with the opening of the Badshahi Mosque did you close it for some time?

A. As a matter of fact it was closed by order of the Deputy Commissioner before Martial Law came into force. I agreed in the continuance of that order after I took over control and I thought it under the circumstances extremely necessary to continue it until I got guarantees from the religious communities concerned that it would not occur again.

Q. It was closed in consequence of a joint seditious meeting of Hindus and Muhammadans?

A. That was it, Sir.

Q. You did not make arrangements for the re-opening?

A. When I got the guarantees that I asked for.

Q. During the time of the closure of the mosque were you approached by a number of people to get the regulation modified?

A. Yes, I was submitted to great pressure. Ultimately they agreed with my conditions.

Q. What were those conditions?

A. I do not think I have got them but briefly they were these†—that there should be 15 leading Muhammadans in this city, not in the whole area, who should make themselves personally responsible that such a thing should never occur again—that no seditious or even political views should be preached from the pulpits there—that it should be kept purely for religious purposes and that no Hindu should ever again be permitted to enter that mosque. These I think were the leading points.

Q. In Appendices* V, VI and VII you set forth details of convictions and punishments that took place in the summary courts. Can you under Martial Law orders constitute these summary courts?

A. The officers were appointed by me in this particular case. I was their Senior Officer. The Lieutenant-Governor appointed a certain number of Civil Magistrates who acted.

Q. Either an officer or a Civil Magistrate dealt with these offences in a summary manner?

A. I took most of the cases myself—about more than half—Major Barnes and Major Hunter also assisted.

Q. All the offences were brought under the Martial Law orders that were issued?

A. We did not deal with any offences against the existing law.

Q. During this time were the ordinary law courts doing their judicial work?

A. I think so. I do not know what their functions would be but naturally they would be suspended under the operation of Martial Law. Most of the serious offences committed under that Martial Law were tried by the special commissions. They dealt with crimes that were committed before the introduction of Martial Law dating back some three days before.

Q. In connection with these lists I see that altogether they were 277 persons of whom 69 were acquitted and 208 convicted?

A. That is so, Sir.

Q. Of these 140 were dealt with by Major Barnes and yourself and 187 by Civil Magistrates specially appointed for the purpose?

A. To begin with most of them were dealt with by Civil Magistrates but in order to get a uniformity of sentences—I found it better to deal with them myself.

Q. What was the maximum sentence that was pronounced in the court?

A. Two years' hard labour, 80 lashes and a fine of Rs. 1,000.

Q. Could you give them the lot?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. In point of fact the total number of punishment inflicted amounted to 74 months' imprisonment, 832 stripes and Rs. 6,818 of fine?

A. That is so, Sir.

Q. That is the total punishments inflicted by Major Barnes and by the Civil Magistrates?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. I think 20 persons received 74 months' imprisonment or an average of 8·7 months?

A. That is so, Sir.

Q. And stripes were distributed among 66 persons on an average of 12½ each?

A. That is so, Sir.

Q. The sentences that you actually pronounced varied from 6 months to one?

A. Yes, Sir. The greater sentences were of six months for blackmail, and I think there was nothing under a month. It was not worth putting any one in for under a month.

Q. And the corporal punishment was from 20 to 50?

A. Yes, Sir. I never went to the full number.

Q. As regards corporal punishment on whom was this inflicted?

A. Upon able-bodied men only. I issued an instruction to all serving under me in the very early days of Martial Law. I think it is here, it is Appendix IX.* I was rather after that people might lose their heads a little by the administration of Martial Law and sentences under it, and so I sent that round first of all as a private memorandum to the officers concerned. I was asked afterwards to publish it.

Q. I take it that that order which you refer to is a general instruction as to the conduct that should be observed in the administration of Martial Law?

A. That is it, Sir.

Q. In addition to dealing with the matter of punishments by whipping, it also gives advice as to the observance of such conduct as to prevent anything like harsh treatment or abuse of Martial Law?

A. Quite so. I was so anxious to prevent or stop an abuse of Martial Law.

Q. As regards the whipping sentences, were these pronounced by the Civil Magistrates and the specially constituted courts?

A. I am not suggesting that it was wrong. As a matter of fact, most of the whipping was done by them.

Q. Where did the floggings take place?

A. More or less in the vicinity of the courts where the sentences were passed, i.e., the Reservoir Chowka, in the immediate vicinity of the courts, and some were sent down to the old Kotwali. The Civil Magistrate was sitting in the Telegraph Office, they were flogged in the compound there. There were 11 cases altogether of that kind. Then there came an expression of wish,—that was practically an order—from the Commander-in-Chief, that flogging should not take place even in semi-public. After that the other 55 were flogged in the Central Jail, Lahore.

Q. Do I understand that except in those 11 cases where flogging was inflicted quasi-public, all the other floggings were inflicted entirely in private?

A. Yes, in private, inside the Jail.

Q. The suggestion has been made that flogging in certain cases may have had serious effects on the health of the persons subjected to it?

A. I have not heard of any serious effect upon persons. No case was reported to me, Sir.

Q. Can you imagine the punishment having a serious effect?

A. I cannot imagine that type of punishment as administered has a very serious effect.

Q. Do you consider in administering law under Martial Law conditions that the right to inflict punishment by flogging is a valuable right for an officer to possess?

A. I think it is absolutely essential. I think it is the kindest method of punishment because it is the greatest deterrent that you can possibly get; for mere imprisonment and mere fines do not act, they do not deter the people.

Q. Can you explain to me the procedure that was adopted in the Summary Courts?

A. I had a printed notice. It is Martial Law No. 5. Unfortunately I have not got with me a copy of it. It is a long sheet based on the form used in the Civil Magistrates' Courts containing the date of his arrest, his name, the name of his father, the district from which he came, a note of the offence under which he was charged, a short statement of the case for the prosecution, a short statement of the defence, a little column showing whether convicted or dismissed and in the case of conviction the sentence that was applied.

(Mr. Herbert, Government Advocate, produced a form which was identified by witness.)

Q. Do you hear evidence for the prosecution in these courts?

A. Not necessarily.

Q. Were the accused represented in these courts?

A. The accused were representing themselves.

Q. There was the right of representation?

A. Oh, yes! And the fact, if I may say so, that some 25 persons escaped conviction rather shows that their cases must have been heard.

Q. There are many cases of people being arrested and not brought up for any charge for substantial period of time?

A. I never heard of it. There was a little confusion perhaps for 24 hours. I saw the trouble that was likely to arise and that people might get lost in the courts of Martial Law. (Here the witness went up to the President and produced Martial Law Forms Nos. 4 and 5.) I never heard of a case of a man having been lost and not brought up.

Q. There are a number of people arrested and afterwards released without any charge preferred against them?

A. They were released within 24 hours. Every man was dealt with within 24 hours. I cannot remember the exact number of cases.

Q. During the 24 hours what provision was made for them?

A. They were detained like an ordinary prisoner and fed.

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON.

Q. What was the practice as regards handcuffing them with other persons?

A. I don't know but I take it for granted that they were handcuffed till they were put inside the lock-up.

Q. Were they merely handcuffed, were they not taken to the lock-up and detained and hand-cuffed in the lock-up?

A. I do not know. The police can answer that. I never heard of it.

Q. Still less you have heard that they were detained in custody handcuffed, one person being handcuffed with another?

A. This is the first time I have heard it suggested.

Q. I think it has come to your notice before you sent this report to the Adjutant-General that there was a rumour about certain people having been shot at night?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What is the foundation for that?

A. It is merely somebody's imagination. There was no foundation at all.

Q. Had one or two shots been fired during the night on one occasion?

A. Yes, Sir. That was not in my Brigade. It was in the Lahore Brigade on the Ferozepore Road about 5 miles off when some missionaries had gone out to rescue some ladies who they thought ought to be brought in safety and a Native Infantry patrol there fired on the motor car. Those were the only shots fired.

Q. There were no casualties?

A. Only they hit one tyre.

Q. During the period of your administration of Martial Law did you carry out some defensive works in connection with the vital services at Lahore.

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. They were as regards light, power, water and telegraph?

A. That is so.

Q. And you give full details with your reasons for undertaking them in your report?

A. Yes, Sir. In Appendix VIII,* Sir.

Q. Under arrangements made before the introduction of Martial Law by the Divisional Commander, were a number of women and children evacuated to Hill Stations during April and May?

A. Yes, Sir. Some 600.

Q. Did that leave a considerable number in the city?

A. Not in the city, but in the Civil Lines there were left about 1,800.

Q. Was it practically impossible to evacuate them?

A. It was very difficult. First of all, there was no room in the hill stations for them. Secondly, very few of them had the necessary finances to get there.

Q. I see in your report you suggest that the matter of having provision beforehand for dealing with such a situation is worthy of consideration?

A. Yes, Sir, because I have been in rebellions before where the presence of women and children very seriously cramped the military, if I may say so.

Q. Do you think that something might be done to ensure that more rapid and greater evacuation of all women and children might take place in the case of a rebellion?

A. I think so, Sir.

Q. As regards the general question, in your opinion, what was the effect of Martial Law on the situation?

A. I think that it was a great factor for maintaining peace and preventing bloodshed in Lahore, Sir.

Q. Was it necessary to continue it for the length of time for which it was continued?

A. I think so, Sir. On account of the trouble on the frontier it was necessary to continue to have Martial Law on the Railways because the Railways were very vital points of communication with the frontier, and the Railways came through Lahore.

Q. You have already explained that gradually the intensity of the regulations under Martial Law was relaxed?

A. Yes, Sir. They were practically non-existent except for two hours at night, the people were required, unless for special reasons for being on the streets, to keep in their houses and as long as they obeyed for those two hours they carried on without any hindrance.

Q. I take it that in the latter period of the administration of Martial Law there were very few cases that had to be dealt with by the Summary Courts?

A. I have not got the dates here, but I feel I am right in saying that about 75 per cent. occurred in the first fortnight, and roughly there had been 5 per cent. of these in the last month.

Q. After you left on the 29th of May until the 6th of June Martial Law continued?

A. It continued I heard.

Q. Who administered it?

A. Colonel Brackenbury of the 42nd Division.

Q. In your second last Appendix* you published a notice signed by Danda Akhbar?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Where was this found?

A. That was obtained by the police at Lahore.

Q. It was not published in Lahore?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. It was circulated by hand?

A. I don't know. I got it through the Police.

Q. I see in that notice statements to this effect that "The Danda Fauj of Amritsar bravely killed a number of European monkeys and their Sikh regiments have revolted and deserted." There is also a passage to this effect "Oh, Hindu, Muhammadan and Sikh Brethren, raise the cry of Allah-u-Akbar and kill the Kafirs. Get ready soon for the war and God will grant victory to India very soon."

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Do you consider that the publication of such notices was a very serious matter?

A. I do, Sir. It showed me that there was not a mere political agitation, but we were face to face with the elements of an organised rising.

Q. Do you know whether the origin of that publication was ever discovered?

A. I was not aware of that. The C. I. D. can tell you, Sir.

(Mr. Herbert, Government Advocate:—This particular passage has been brought out in the Main Lahore Conspiracy Case, Sir.)

Q. So far as the people of Lahore were concerned did they seem to acquiesce in the administration of Martial Law?

A. I think I am not exaggerating, Sir, when I say that they all liked it, i.e., the masses of the people. I had almost daily representations coming to me from the different people in Lahore and all of them thanked me for the preservation of peace and nearly all of them, curiously enough, were making the remark that after all this was a state of affairs to which for some thousands of years their forefathers had been used, to be governed by hukm so to speak.

Q. During the period of Martial Law what have you to say as to the conduct of the military and the police?

A. I should say it could not possibly have been better. I have not a single regrettable instance reported to me or a complaint made to me about the conduct of the police or of British soldiers or of an Indian soldier.

Q. Did you have any cases of insubordination or breach of discipline?

A. None whatever. The discipline was perfect, under rather trying circumstances, at times.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. If I follow you, your view is that apart altogether from Martial Law being necessary to stop the spread of infection to outlying districts, it was necessary to prevent bloodshed and murders in Lahore?

A. Exactly, Sir.

Q. I want to come to the three occasions on which, if I have got the story correctly, there was actual firing in Lahore?

A. Only on three occasions.

Q. The first was on the 10th, when this mob of seven or eight thousand people were coming down the Mall?

24 November 1919.]

IA.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON.

A. That is so, Sir.

Q. Have you any idea how many police fired on that occasion, how many rifles fired?

A. I was not there myself. I believe there were only 20 police.

Q. I see the casualties were said to be one killed and five wounded?

A. Yes, I was told so.

Q. It hardly looks that there had been a great deal of firing?

A. If I may say so a great deal of the musketry of the police was not good. I saw it myself on one occasion and it was less than third class.

Q. Anyhow with the result that one was killed and five wounded it appears to be the case that that mob of 7 or 8 thousand was checked and afterwards pressed back?

A. That is so.

Q. You did not see the mob yourself?

A. I did not see it. I was at the headquarters.

Q. On the second occasion on which there was firing I think later on that night in the Anarkali Bazar I take it that you did not see it?

A. I did not see it.

Q. Apparently there was a report about the casualties there and they amounted to 2?

A. That is what came through the Intelligence. The report was circulated the next morning.

Q. On that night, as I understand, all the police and outposts in the city were withdrawn?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that done in consequence of the incident at night?

A. It was done in consequence of the general position in Amritsar and Lahore and information was coming in every minute of fresh troubles.

Q. But apart from that instance of being heavily stoned were there any instances in the bazar on the night of the 10th, of friction between the mob and the police?

A. I should say none. One must have heard of it if there had been any.

Q. The police having been taken away there were left small bodies unprotected?

A. There was nobody to fire inside the city.

Q. As regards the actual condition of the city when the police picquet were withdrawn during that night, had you any other sources of information?

A. No, none.

Q. Apart from the fact that one of the police picquets did get into collision with the mob that part of the story is left to inferences?

A. Exactly, there was nobody to give definite information.

Q. Anyhow on the 11th you thought it necessary to post strong picquets at important points?

A. I received on the night of the 11th an order to proceed the next morning and take certain troops allotted to me and take up a position in the city.

Q. The first thing you did was to establish the control of the city?

A. By marching through and dropping about 200 men at each point.

Q. You said that before you commenced the operations you called for the leaders and you told them what you were going to do if there was any rifle firing from houses or bombs dropped on your troops from houses?

A. I caused them to be told; I do not speak their language unfortunately, and so I got the Deputy Commissioner to tell them.

Q. Do you remember or did you know at the time who were the individual persons who were treated as the leaders of the crowd for this purpose?

A. I do not know their names. They hold very prominent positions.

Q. You picked them up from what they were doing at the time?

A. One assumed from the part they were playing in the proceedings. The Deputy Commissioner was representing the Civil authorities and he told them.

Q. Who would see that these people were the right leaders?

A. I think the Deputy Commissioner did. I was only there then with the aid of the Civil power. There was no Martial Law.

Q. Then from what date do you consider that you established control of the city in any practicable sense?

A. I do not consider that one had got what you call full control of the city excepting in a very military sense on the 12th, i.e., I thought it necessary to give an order that no troops should move unless in parties of 20. I was very glad that I had over 800 with me when I went.

Q. But when did you consider that the control of the city was restored for practical purposes?

A. That is to say, that the Europeans could march in safety. Do you mean to say that, Sir? I should say at the end of the first week it was reduced to 50, three or four days afterwards it was again reduced and finally it was reduced to 10. At that time I think that probably individual Europeans could go about in safety.

Q. As regards the orders that you issued—I do not want to ask you any questions, but there is one thing that I want to ask you on that Martial Law Instruction No. 2, the one you refer to in Appendix IX, paragraph 8. About the punishment of whipping you say "the punishment of whipping in particular, whilst probably the most efficacious and convenient method of summarily dealing with most minor breaches of Martial Law Regulations, requires tact and commonsense in its infliction. Under no circumstances should old and feeble men be flogged, and the social status of the offender also needs consideration." Now looking at the list of offences for which this punishment was inflicted, we see a large number of offences included in it, but there are a great many minor offences, breaches of Martial Law Regulations, for which whipping was not in fact administered at all?

A. Right, Sir.

Q. I only want to suggest, is it not a little strong to suggest that whipping should be regarded as the most efficacious and convenient method of summarily dealing with most of the minor breaches of Martial Law Regulations. Is it not ordinarily treated even under Martial Law as an exceptional punishment?

A. I can hardly agree with you, Sir. You have got this issue before you. You have a great population and only a limited jail accommodation. You are creating now offences in large numbers by the issue of these orders. If jail is the only punishment that you are going to inflict, it would not affect the population here at all because, viewed generally, I do not think the ordinary householder in the city very materially decreased his amenities of life by living on jail food. In fact I did not realize that the population was going to accept Martial Law Regulations as well as they did, and when I foresaw that the jails would be full with hundreds of cases, I considered it necessary to resort to the punishment of whipping. There is also another point, Sir. One sentence of whipping deters other people far more than dozens and dozens of sentences of imprisonment.

Q. I quite follow what you say about having the power to inflict sentences of whipping being a valuable asset and doing what a thousand rifles cannot do, but in point of fact, as things have turned out, it does not seem to be true, that whipping was the usual punishment for officers under the circumstances against Martial Law?

A. No, I think all officers who administered this form of punishment looked upon it as an unusual form of punishment to be resorted to, and they did it rather charily, and I think they carried it out very well considering the fact that only 66 men were whipped in the whole population of Lahore.

Q. You say that under no circumstances should old and feeble men be flogged. That goes without saying, but I gather from what you say in your Report, as a matter of fact, able-bodied men were flogged, and those, I understand, were people who had not much social status?

A. Exactly.

24 November 1919.]

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON.

Q. There again, does not that rather show if one had to do all this over again that whipping ought not to be regarded as a normal punishment for breaches of minor offences?

A. I do not think so. I think if I had to do it over again I would stick to it.

Q. I understand there were Martial Law proclamations almost every day, and persons might commit breaches of those regulations without being guilty of any great offence?

A. Quite, that is where tact and commonsense come in.

Q. If you mix these proclamations with tact, it becomes entirely a right?

A. I have always hoped that there would be a substantial amount of tact in dealing with such persons, and I think there was.

Q. Can you tell me as the ordinary punishment to be resorted to, in the absence of reasons to the contrary, is whipping a most convenient method?

A. Yes, in the two instances I have known, whipping is always a most convenient method.

Q. Most convenient to the person who inflicts it?

A. Or causes it to be inflicted.

Q. It is a punishment that used to be employed in the British Army and has gone out long ago, and I understand it has nearly gone out practically in the Army in India, and is it not rather in the nature of a survival when it is regarded as an ordinary punishment in cases of Martial Law Administration on civil population?

A. Well, I still think that the value of it is so great that when the civil population runs amok, if I may say so, as in this case, it is the only method by which you can deal with it, unless you have got vast numbers of troops.

Q. I understand you to say that in the case of Lahore these sentences of whipping were being administered as much by the civil magistrates acting as Martial Law officers as they were by the military officers?

A. As a matter of fact, it was more—a coincidence.

Q. And in the Lahore area under you, you thought it necessary to keep that work largely in your own personal hands with the assistance of Major Barnes?

A. I did; but then Major Barnes was sitting with me in the office all day long. He knew my views as to uniformity of punishment. Civil Magistrates were dotted all over the place who were acting for themselves in fact, and I saw great disparity in some of the sentences.

Q. I understand while the maximum number of lashes was restricted to 30, in your area 20 was the maximum number?

A. That was the greatest number, the average being 12.6.

Q. With regard to the orders about tongas, carriages, was there a good deal of enquiry as to whether a particular person owned a carriage or did not own a carriage or a tonga?

A. Yes. Having said that everybody who had or owned a tonga, should give it up, one naturally sent for information from the Corporation and Police and ascertained whether anybody had failed to comply with that order.

Q. What was the practice pursued in the case of persons who the Police thought owned a carriage and did not give it up?

A. They went and saw whether he had or had not.

Q. Was the man himself summoned to start with or did the Police investigate?

A. I presume the Police investigated on the spot.

Q. So far as you are aware, the men had not been summoned to attend office, but the question was gone into by the Police and investigated and they made their own enquiry?

A. Yes, I take it so. I know nothing to the contrary. I have never heard it suggested that men were summoned or arrested without facts, having been determined beforehand, but I know in the case of motor cars which I regarded as more serious, there was prolonged enquiry before the owners were brought up.

Q. What was the earliest date on which you can safely say that the chances of renewed outbreak in Lahore itself had practically gone?

A. It is a matter of opinion of course. I should say any time after the 15th of May after the Afghan trouble had broken out without again affecting Lahore. I do not think it was before that date.

Q. In your view up to somewhere about the middle of May, there was always the possibility of renewed disturbances in Lahore itself unless the situation had been grappled with firmly?

A. Undoubtedly. I do not think Lahore would have risen itself, left to itself. But as a result of risings elsewhere in India, they may have reacted on Lahore. Lahore was in a mood.

Q. We know that the commencement of the trouble in Lahore was apparently in consequence of the trouble in Amritsar?

A. Undoubtedly it reacted here at once.

Q. Until about the middle of May, did you keep up arrangements for example with the object that women and children should be got into a central spot if necessary?

A. I got them up to the last day I left.

Q. At the commencement of Martial Law, can you tell me whether a great many arrests were made straightaway in Lahore in connection with the disturbances of the 10th?

A. I supplied escorts and troops.

Q. When you came on the 12th, was there a certain collection of arrested persons who had not yet been dealt with, in the lock-ups?

A. I do not think they were in the lock-ups, i.e., Police thanas. A large number of persons were in the Lahore Central Jail.

Q. With regard to that I take it that investigations would be pursued before they could be sent up for trial?

A. They were not coming to me for trial. All those people were arrested for offences against the ordinary law, not against Martial Law regulations. Their cases were obviously being prepared by the Police and C. I. D., to bring them before the bigger tribunal.

Q. All that really you had to do with the collection of people would be to assist the Police and give them escorts to enable arrests to be made?

A. That is all.

Q. From information or otherwise can you give me the date on which the bulk of these arrests were made?

A. No; I could not. I think it can be got from the war diary, but it is all in 4 or 5 days.

Q. It was no part of your object in going into the city on the 12th to make arrests?

A. No; my orders were to establish control in the city.

By Sir C. H. Setalvad—

Q. Colonel Johnson, You told us that on the 10th there were two occasions on which firing took place?

A. Yes.

Q. Then there was firing on the 12th, I understand?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that at the Badshahi Mosque?

A. It was about three hundred yards on this side of the Badshahi Mosque, a place known as Hira Mandi.

Q. Was that in connection with a meeting that was being held at the Badshahi Mosque?

A. No; it was an attack on my vanguard.

Q. Were you present at that fire?

A. I was present; I got a brick myself.

Q. How did you happen to go there? What did you hear? What information did you get on which you went?

A. I was carrying out my orders to march through the city and to establish Military posts at various places. In pursuance of those orders after I passed the water works, I got to that open space beside the Badshahi Mosque and I had the people addressed by the civil authority who tried to get the crowd dispersed.

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON.

Q. When you went there, were there crowds in the street?

A. Not in the street but in the big open stretch between Hira Mandi and the Badshahi Mosque, and as they refused to disperse when ordered by the civil authority, I sent a squadron of cavalry to facilitate the dispersing.

Q. What were the casualties on that occasion?

A. One killed and 4 or 5 wounded with buckshot.

Q. Then there was fire again I see on the 13th?

A. I do not think so.

Q. On the 13th when a large meeting was held?

A. I think that was in Amritsar.

Q. There was no fire in Lahore on the 13th?

A. There were only two occasions, one on the 10th and one on the 12th.

Q. Colonel Johnson, were you in touch with what was happening in Lahore before the 10th?

A. From the 10th. From the 5th, I knew what was happening and I had to send a portion of my own battalion as a military preparation.

Q. You knew what was going on about the end of March about the Rowlatt Act and passive resistance?

A. I read in the papers.

Q. You had not personally anything to do with those things?

A. Nothing whatever.

Q. There was hartal on the 30th March?

A. As a matter of fact I do not know, but if you say so, I have no doubt it is true.

Q. The authorities tried to prevent the hartal?

A. The authorities were trying.

Q. On the 30th of March?

A. I really do not know.

Q. Have you any knowledge about what happened between the Deputy Commissioner and certain prominent men in Lahore with regard to the hartal and these events before the 10th?

A. None whatever.

Q. Who will be able to speak about that? The Deputy Commissioner?

A. I should think obviously he is the man.

Q. Mr. Fyson?

A. Yes.

Q. Is he in Lahore?

A. Not to my knowledge. I have not seen him here.

Q. Then who would be able to speak of those events?

A. I cannot very well suggest. I cannot help you. I would, if I could.

Q. Are you aware that after the fire on the 10th and also after the fire on the 12th, people were asking for the dead and the wounded and the authorities were making difficulties about giving them?

A. I am not aware of it on the 10th. On the 12th they took their dead; one man had duly buried them.

Q. And the killed on the 10th?

A. I do not know about the 10th. I was not present. On the 12th the dead were taken and buried and I did not interfere with them.

Q. That was on 12th?

A. Yes.

Q. You are not aware of the various meetings that took place between certain prominent men and the Deputy Commissioner and negotiations about getting the killed and the wounded?

A. No; as a matter of fact I heard that such meetings were held, but it was not a matter for us. I was not in Lahore at the time. I could not tell you what happened.

Q. You have told us now that the last firing was on 12th?

A. That is so.

Q. After that there was no occasion to resort to firing?

A. None whatever.

Q. And practically before the 15th the Civil Authority with the aid of the Military had recovered control of the city and the civil station?

A. Up to a point they had; as I said it was dangerous for a European to walk through the city on the 15th.

Q. Up to a point they had recovered control?

A. Up to the point that armed troops had to march through the city.

Q. That is with the aid of the Military?

A. That is exactly so.

Q. On the 14th, civil authorities had arrested certain prominent men in Lahore?

A. I believe they had. I do not know anything and I cannot say.

Q. Then when Martial Law was declared on the 15th, what I want to understand is what exactly was the effect on the civil administration?

A. The effect of it was the civil administration as such ceased to exist, with one exception that court martials which form ordinary part of Martial Law, were not to be held, but serious offences which were under the power of first class Magistrates were transferred to special tribunals. That would be the effect of it.

Q. That would be the effect. What I want to understand is what in fact was the effect in Lahore?

A. The effect in Lahore, taking the Police for example, the Inspector-General of Police asked me and I said "carry on." He continued to carry on, although nominally I was in charge.

Q. So the Police carried on?

A. Yes, their functions in the proper manner.

Q. Though nominally you were in charge?

A. Yes.

Q. So also the civil authorities carried on, though nominally under your control?

A. That is so.

Q. And the High Court and the Subordinate Courts carried on their work in the ordinary way?

A. I do not know if they did; I rather fancy they all stopped, but you may be right.

Q. They may have stopped in this sense that litigants did not come or people would not go to the courts but so far as the exercise of jurisdiction was concerned, they did not stop in fact?

A. No; I do not know it; in fact, they did not stop. But I do not think any cases were heard.

Q. That may be owing to this reason, vis., about new cases coming up.

A. It was stopped as regards new cases arising after the proclamation of Martial Law. Any man arrested for some offence after 6 o'clock in the morning of the 15th of April, in case of serious offence would be put up by me for the special tribunal or be dealt with by me. He would not be dealt with by the civil power as such.

Q. You have told us already that Police continued their work though nominally under you, and so they obeyed the civil authorities?

A. Yes.

Q. And in fact, the real control, the real work of the administration still remained with the Local Government and the civil officers though nominally under your control?

A. Not only nominally, actually I was responsible for anything that was done; I knew what was being done.

Q. The Local Government and their officers still carried on their administration?

A. They were not supplanted by Military authorities.

Q. Did the Police go on performing their duties in the ordinary way as before and arrest people?

A. Yes.

Q. And the Deputy Commissioner also carried on his duties as before?

A. Yes; I looked upon him as my chief civil representative.

Q. He also ordered arrests on his own initiative? Did he?

A. Not that I am aware of.

Q. Then after the 15th, I understood you to say that the Police carried on their work as before and made arrests?

A. They carried on their work. I did not interfere with the method of the Police distribution, whether they sent patrols, whether they had pickets or whether certain number of policemen went out together. I left these as purely a police question.

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON.

Q. Take the question of arresting people. With regard to that what I understood the position to be was that the Military took no initiative about that; the Police carried on their work and the Military supplied the escort?

A. That is as regards crimes or accusations before the introduction of Martial Law. There were offences. Men were arrested for offences in connection with the Lahore Mall case. The Police knew who the offenders were, and they made those arrests and they applied to me for warrants.

Q. Who issued the warrants?

A. I issued practically every warrant.

Q. And you sent the escort for them?

A. In some cases, i.e., in the case of big men, British escort was sent.

Q. When you were asked to issue warrants, did the civil authorities give you the reasons for the arrests?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it true that blank warrants were issued or were given in possession of the Police?

A. Not to my knowledge. None of the warrants issued by me were blank warrants, I never signed a warrant that was not filled in.

Q. You never signed a blank warrant?

A. No. There was the case of one man; it was not known where he was; he fled to Madras or somewhere. I am not sure that it was not left blank.

Q. After you assumed control, you issued various orders that you have appended to your statement?

A. That is so, Sir.

Q. In No. 1 of those orders, paragraph 5 you say "I forbid any person to offer violence or cause obstruction to any person desirous of opening his shop or conducting his business or proceeding to his work or business. Any person contravening this order will be arrested, tried by a Summary Court and be liable to be shot"?

A. Yes.

Q. You thought such a drastic order was necessary?

A. I think the business of this city depended on breaking the hartals and letting people follow their proper business. If you keep people from earning money and they cannot buy bread you will agree that an atmosphere would be created which is dangerous, and I proposed to stop it.

Q. Your view was that the great thing to be done was breaking up the hartal?

A. That is one of the great things.

Q. And that no measure was too severe for effecting that object?

A. None.

Q. Then in Order No. 5 you say "Whereas, from information received by me, it would appear that shops, generally known as Langars, for the sale of cooked food, are used for the purpose of illegal meetings and for the dissemination of seditious propaganda, and whereas I notice that all other shops have been closed as part of an organized demonstration..... I order that all such Langars or shops for the sale of cooked food in the Lahore Civil area, except such as may be granted an exemption in writing by me, shall close....." There you say that the Langars were used for the purpose of illegal meetings and for seditious propaganda. What evidence had you to come to that conclusion?

A. I had sufficient evidence to satisfy me that it was true, and I had to draw up the order.

Q. I would like to know what evidence you had?

A. Evidence was laid before me by the Police.

Q. What you had was a Police report?

A. It was Police evidence.

Q. What sort of evidence was it?

A. Statements of facts were laid down.

Q. Have you got those reports?

A. No. I have not. They made verbal reports to me.

Q. No written reports?

A. I have no written reports.

Q. There were verbal reports stating that illegal meetings were held in the Langar-khanas and seditious propaganda was disseminated?

A. That is so.

Q. It was reported to you. Who did that? What persons did that?

A. No, I do not know. If I had that information I would give it. Obviously I do not know; otherwise they would have been arrested at once.

Q. You were merely told that Langar-khanas were used for this purpose?

A. Yes.

Q. On that you proceeded?

A. Yes. On that I proceeded.

Q. Then in Order No. 6 you say "Whereas, I have reason to believe that certain munshis, agents, dealers, and chaprasis employed by legal practitioners in Lahore are engaged in disseminating seditious propaganda," and therefore you prohibited them from leaving Lahore Civil Command without permission? And you ordered every legal practitioner to submit through the Deputy Commissioner a complete list of every munshi, agent or chaprasi directly or indirectly employed by him?

A. That was so.

Q. What evidence had you before you to come to that conclusion that the munshis, agents and even chaprasis of legal practitioners were disseminating seditious propaganda?

A. I had sufficient evidence to enable me to come to that conclusion.

Q. Was that again verbal or in writing?

A. Verbal. When you are administering Martial Law, you cannot stop to have all things in writing.

Q. Why were these munshis, agents and chaprasis of legal practitioners engaged in disseminating seditious propaganda?

A. I cannot tell you why. My information was that they were.

Q. What sort of information did you get? Were the police making verbal reports to that effect?

A. I do not think there was police only in this case.

Q. Who else made the report?

A. I cannot tell you. I had ample information to go on. I do not remember it. If I did, I would tell you like a shot.

Q. Then by your Order No. 8, this is what you promulgated:—

"Whereas some evilly disposed persons have torn down or defaced Notices and Orders which I have caused to be exhibited for the information and good government of the people in the Lahore (Civil Command), I issue this warning: In future all orders that I have to issue under Martial Law will be handed to such owners of property as I may select, and it will be the duty of such owners of property to exhibit and keep exhibited and undamaged in the position on their property selected by me all such Orders. The duty of protecting such Orders will therefore devolve on the owners of property, and failure to ensure the proper protection and continued exhibition of my Orders will result in severe punishment."

By that order you selected certain properties on which your orders were to be exhibited and you cast the duty on the owners of these properties to see that the notices were kept exhibited undamaged in the position in which they were put. On what principle did you select those particular houses on which these notices were so stuck?

A. There was one principle probably on which I did not select them, and that was notorious loyalty. I did not select them on account of their notorious loyalty. We left it at that.

Q. I want to know the principle on which you selected those particular houses exactly?

A. There were two principles involved. One was the geographical situation of the house, so that in every ward in the city the inhabitants thereof might have ample opportunity of always being certain of finding the notice which I found necessary to publish for their guidance there and it naturally entailed a certain amount of work on the owner in question; and so I selected those whom I thought might just as well be doing a little work.

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON.

Q. Those you suspected to be evilly disposed people? Was that your idea?

A. If you like to put it that way, I shall not dispute it.

Q. What was in your mind in doing that?

A. I thought that people who were not known for their loyalty, whom I did not come across in rendering us help, should be employed on that work.

Q. People who were not notoriously loyal, i.e., who were not proclaiming their loyalty openly?

A. Yes; those who did not come and tender their assistance. A number of people did like that in Lahore.

Q. Those who had not tendered any assistance?

A. Yes.

Q. Or those whom you suspected to be not very loyal?

A. Exactly. I tell you frankly that is the reason.

Q. On what information did you come to the conclusion that these particular persons were not loyal?

A. You know that as well as I do. The C. I. D. and the Police information.

Q. You left the selection of these houses to the C. I. D.?

A. They submitted a list. I requested them to send a list of people who were not notoriously loyal. I selected the houses from the geographical position from the map.

Q. Didn't you think that it was rather putting a heavy burden on the residents of those particular houses to see at all times that any particular placard or notice stuck up on the outer walls of the house was preserved?

A. I agree with you that the burden was there.

Q. Hundreds and thousands of people passing in the streets may take it down and the owner of the house will still be liable to a heavy punishment under your notification?

A. It could be seen by a chowkidar that the poster or notice was not tampered with if he wanted to escape arrest and punishment.

Q. All those house-owners or residents had to be chowkidars all the 24 hours of the day to save punishment?

A. He can always be hired. Money will do most things even in Lahore.

Q. Do you think that this was really justifiable to put such a heavy burden on the residents of houses?

A. Undoubtedly. Let me explain my reason. It was absolutely necessary; even you, Sir, will admit, that a quarter million of people inside that city should know what these orders were so that they should not run the risk of disobeying them unintentionally and get into trouble.

Q. I do not object for a minute to your promulgating these orders and taking steps to put the notices in prominent places in the city. That is quite all right. But when you go further and cast a burden on the residents of the particular houses on the outer walls of which the notices are stuck to see at all time of the 24 hours of the day that nobody touches them and over whom they have no control, is not that putting a really unjustifiable burden?

A. It puts a burden, but not unjustifiable. I had got to see that the people of Lahore should know what these orders were. As fast as I caused the notices to be put up, the people of Lahore allowed them to be torn down. That was my trouble. I was willing to take suggestions of any other method of doing that without the aid of the force of Police and troops I had at my disposal. But that was the only method. Could you suggest another?

Q. That is not my job, Colonel.

A. That is the only method I could think of.

Q. I put it to you again that to make the owner of the property liable to severe punishment if any poster put up by you on the outer wall of his house was removed or interfered with or even damaged to any extent by any outsider was rather severe, you don't think so?

A. I do think the burden is there; I admit it, but I don't think it could be very serious because there was not a single case in all these houses of an owner getting into trouble for inability to retain undamaged these notices that were put up. They all managed to keep it easily.

Q. What else could they do, they would have had to go to jail otherwise, they had to devise some means?

A. I had to devise some means of getting my orders obeyed.

Q. Do you think that was a reasonable order to make?

A. Quite. I would do it again; it was I think one of the few brain waves I had.

Q. You will be able to tell me whether the Ranatan Dharam College was one of the buildings which was selected for putting up this notice on?

A. I believe it was. I do not think it is in the list.

Q. It was not in the list, I understand, but it was subsequently added to it?

A. Yes. It held a very prominent place on the road.

Q. It was not in the original list, this building prominent though it was, but it was added to it several days afterwards?

A. Quite. The list was recast several days afterwards.

Q. Then the notice was stuck on the outer wall or the compound wall, whatever it may have been, of this College and was torn by somebody?

A. That was the information laid before me.

Q. That was the information laid before you?

A. Yes, not by the Police.

Q. And on that is it true that all the students in the hostel of this College were arrested?

A. That is so.

Q. How many of them?

A. I really cannot remember, but I gave orders that every male person found in the precincts of that college should be arrested while I decided what to do with them.

Q. I should like to know how many students were so arrested?

A. May I just ask the officer who received them for internment?

(After referring to Col. North, the witness replied "about 500.")

Q. 500 students were arrested for this notice being torn?

A. Yes, and all the Professors too.

Q. All were so arrested and marched to the Fort, which is three miles away from the College?

A. Quite so.

Q. And during this march they were ordered to carry with them their bedding on their shoulders or their heads, whatever it may be?

A. It was not a heavy load; it was hot weather.

Q. Heavy or light they had to carry their bedding with them, these 500 students and their Professors, that is true?

A. If they wanted to take their bedding with them, obviously they carried it; there was no compulsion of course.

Q. Were they not made to carry it?

A. I gave no orders to make them carry it. If they wanted it they had to take it with them.

Q. It was a hot summer day?

A. It was a May day.

Q. It is very hot in Lahore?

A. Yes.

Q. And these 500 students and their Professors were marched a distance of 3 miles that day?

A. Quite.

Q. And they were kept under arrest in the Fort?

A. That is to say they had a corner given them in the Fort.

Q. How long?

A. I think one day, oh, two days.

Q. And they were then released after two days, after taking from the Principal certain undertakings as to their seeing that the notices were preserved?

A. That is so. I got the necessary guarantees that I wanted that it would not happen again.

Q. Do you think that the measure which you took with regard to this College, arresting the 500 students and their Professors like this was a reasonable action to take?

24 November 1919.]

A. Yes, I was looking for it. I looked for just such an opportunity.

Q. Your view then was, and your view still is, that it was a reasonable order to make?

A. I had got to stop notices being torn down and I wanted to make an example of somebody who had torn them down.

Q. You considered it then, and you still consider it, to be a reasonable order?

A. Undoubtedly.

Q. And your frame of mind then was, as you indicate in your report in paragraph 43, that you were waiting for an opportunity to bring home to all concerned the power of Martial Law?

A. That was so, Sir.

Q. You were longing for an opportunity?

A. Only in the interests of the people themselves.

Q. I did not suggest it was in any other interest; it may or may not have been, but you were longing for an opportunity to show them the power of Martial Law?

A. Quite.

Q. And you got this opportunity?

A. And I took it.

Q. And you marched these 500 students and their Professors in the sun 3 miles?

A. That is so.

Q. And you still maintain that was a proper exercise of your authority as Martial Law administrator?

A. Absolutely. I would do it again to-morrow in similar circumstances.

Q. Did it ever occur to you and does it occur to you even now, that to have treated 500 students and their Professors like this would create and must have created in the minds of these young men great bitterness and hatred towards the British Government for the rest of their lives?

A. No; it does not any more than when a boy at school is punished it necessarily creates hatred to his master.

Q. Now that I have dealt with these 500 students I may as well take here the action taken generally with regard to the students. The action that you took with regard to the students generally was, as you say in your report, designed to keep students out of mischief and not as a punishment?

A. That is so.

Q. Now what you ordered for that purpose, to keep the students out of mischief was this; you first issued an order with regard to the three colleges, if I understand aright, the D.-A.-V. College, Dyal Singh College, and the Medical College, that there was to be a roll-call of all the students four times a day, and the hours mentioned are 7 o'clock in the morning, 11 o'clock in the morning, 3 in the after-noon and 7-30 in the evening?

A. That is so, Sir.

Q. And the Medical College students, in order to attend this roll-call four times a day, had to walk in all about 17 miles a day?

A. I thought it was only 16, according to my measurements of the map. I measured it.

Q. And they had to walk like this 16 miles a day in the hot May sun of Lahore for 3 weeks?

A. That is so, unless with the exception of a medical certificate if anybody was not fit to walk he did not walk.

Q. You thought then and you still maintain that view, that this was a reasonable order to make in order to keep students out of mischief?

A. That was my opinion then. It kept them from the adjacent villages where they were before I issued that order.

Q. And still is your opinion?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Did it ever occur to you, and does it occur to you now, that it was inflicting upon these students immense hardships to make them walk 16 miles a day in Lahore like that for 3 weeks?

A. No hardship at all for able-bodied young men. It is only ordinary physical training of a mild form.

Q. You thought you were doing them a kindness?

A. Yes; in keeping them out of mischief and physically fit.

Q. I put it to you, as I did with regard to the other suggestion, did it ever occur to you that by treating, I do not know how many hundreds, possibly thousands of students in the manner you did for about 3 weeks with regard to the roll call, you were making these young men very bitter with hatred towards the British Government for the rest of their lives?

A. Yes; it did; but you cannot do what is already done, and I came to the conclusion that there was so much disloyalty in these colleges that nothing I could do would make it worse.

Q. Did it occur to you that it might have this result?

A. In the general appreciation of the situation, yes; that is one of the things that did occur to me.

Q. Did it occur to you?

A. I considered it.

Q. Your view was that all the students were such confirmed seditious, that it did not matter whether you made them any more bitter?

A. If you will look at the last clause of paragraph 39 you will see my view.

Q. I got from what you said just now that there was so much sedition that it could not be made worse. May I take this to be your view that although it did occur to you that this treatment of yours in this matter might result in turning them bitter against the British Government, your view was that they were all of them such confirmed seditious that you could not make them more bitter than they were?

A. I will not accept your description as confirmed seditious, but the seditious atmosphere of these particular colleges was such that you could not hurt them.

Q. And do you think that by the measures you took you were helping in the least to remove that seditious atmosphere?

A. I was certainly not making it worse.

Q. Were you improving it in any manner?

A. I was not out to teach them loyalty. I was out to keep them from mischief and from spreading disloyalty in the district.

Q. And do you think you succeeded?

A. I know I did; because I had no further cases of students being found in the outlying villages.

Q. You think this is the best way to keep students right?

A. The best way I could think of; there were two other ways; one was closing the colleges and sending them home to be dealt with and the other was prosecuting the individual students. I adopted the third way and I would do it again under similar circumstances.

Q. Do I take it to be your view that the best way of making young people in this country loyal and well disposed to Government is to adopt the measures you did to achieve that result?

A. I would put it the other way; that by teaching them there is a penalty for even suspected seditious you are stopping it; that is my view.

Q. Did it occur to you that among those thousands of students there must have been a large number of perfectly innocent ones?

A. Oh yes, and I have dealt with that in the Martial Law form which I handed to the President. Anyone whom I thought loyal was exempted.

Q. Was any exemption, as a matter of fact, made with regard to these four colleges that I have named?

A. To individual students in them? Yes.

Q. How many were so exempted?

A. Unless I get the counterfoil of the book I cannot tell you.

Q. I should like to know how many students were so marched for four days for roll call and how many were exempted from that order?

A. It is there. I found so many of them that I gave up writing the notices and had them printed.

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON.

Q. They were exempted on grounds of ill-health?

A. I do not remember any on grounds of ill-health; but their loyalty was demonstrated by their fathers or some one who came and said they were loyal, and there were so many that I had to print notices.

Q. If somebody came and interceded on behalf of any student and said he was loyal you exempted him?

A. If I thought the intercession was worthy of belief.

Q. There are a large number of students of these colleges from the mufussal with possibly no relatives in Lahore city at all?

A. They had got their Principals who acted for their parents, I take it.

Q. Now with regard to the students of all colleges in Lahore you wanted certain punishments to be inflicted on them?

A. I deemed it desirable that they should remember what had happened.

Q. That they should remember what had happened?

A. As far as they had been concerned.

Q. What had they done?

A. I had plenty of information given to me as to the conduct of these students, quite apart from some of them being caught at villages outside. They had been going outside to the villages stirring up sedition there. I had information given to me, dozens of times even as to their insulting white ladies, the cultured classes of these colleges; I had I suppose not less than 20 letters every day addressed to me personally by the students or declared students (of course they were not signed) with even pictorial representations of what they would like to do to me, in such obscene and indecent language that one had to destroy them. There were also in one of the college libraries British illustrated papers in which British officers and British women had disgusting and obscene remarks written against them. This was done by the cultured young men of these colleges. These are some of the things I had to go on.

Q. What was reported to you? In regard to how many individual cases was it reported?

A. I can't tell you, but ample for me to write paragraph 38, ample to justify that.

Q. Nobody denies that there may have been individual students who behaved very badly but from that it is a big jump to come to the conclusion that thousands of students in Lahore had all behaved so badly that they deserved this punishment.

A. Let me put this to you, admitting I thought that only half were tainted with sedition and half were not.

Q. We are not now dealing with sedition, we are dealing with specific suggestions you have made, that some of them went to villages to stir up sedition; some insulted ladies. Those cases could only be few, leaving aside the general seditious tendencies for the moment. Specific allegations could only be with regard to a few?

A. That was quite enough for me.

Q. Because you got reports of the character you mentioned with regard to 20 or 30 or 50 you thought that was enough to justify you in making orders of this character affecting thousands?

A. I thought I was justified in making the orders at the time. I still think so and I shall always think so.

Q. Now with regard to awarding punishments to these students, had you meetings with the Principals of the colleges?

A. One meeting.

Q. And what did you tell them in that meeting: that they were to punish students?

A. I just had a frank talk with them on the whole position of their colleges.

Q. What did you instruct them to do?

A. To submit to me their proposals for adequate punishment.

Q. Adequate punishment?

A. Of the ringleaders.

Q. Did you tell them what percentage of students were to be punished?

A. No: not at that meeting.

Q. Then you fixed a particular day by which the punishments, which they fixed upon, should be submitted to you for approval?

A. That is so.

Q. And they sent up lists to you of the punishments they suggested?

A. They did.

Q. And when you got these lists it was your view that these punishments were insufficient?

A. Some of them were. Some of them were adequate.

Q. And on that did you inform the Principals that unless the punishments were raised the colleges would be closed and the students would be stopped from attending University examinations?

A. That is so.

Q. Have you got that correspondence between yourself and the Principals on the subject?

A. No, I have not.

Q. What happened to it?

A. It was filed in the offices of the Martial Law Administrator. It was taken over with the rest of the office by the officer who succeeded him in command of Lahore.

Q. It must be available somewhere in the official records?

A. I take it it is.

(Note.—Complete file of correspondence as left by Martial Law Administrator was subsequently shown to the Committee.)

Q. Now in that correspondence did you suggest to the principals that a certain percentage of students should be punished?

A. I am not sure; possibly I did.

Q. Because you suggested just now that you did so at some stage.

A. I think I did so, in this correspondence.

Q. You fixed the percentage of each college which should be punished?

A. I took the same percentage as the other colleges whose punishments I thought were adequate.

Q. Because some colleges had suggested punishments for, say 40 per cent. of the students you took that percentage; you took the highest percentage?

A. I do not know; it may have been the mean.

Q. How did you fix the percentage, by some rough method I suppose? You came to the conclusion that 50 per cent. of the students should be punished?

A. Obviously not 50 per cent. because only a fifth of the students were punished. If I came to the conclusion that 50 per cent. of the students were to be punished it would have been a different return.

Q. I gave 50 per cent. only as an illustration.

A. It is a wrong illustration; the figures are there.

Q. And your orders to the principals were to the effect that they must give similar punishments?

A. They need not have done so; their colleges could have been closed.

Q. There was no alternative to that?

A. Except that one alternative of closing their colleges.

Q. And you gave them also a short time to send in their suggestions?

A. Yes; but they already had a week or ten days; when I told them to try again I naturally did shorten the period.

Q. You wanted them to try again and raise the punishments?

A. They were so ludicrously inadequate in my opinion.

Q. That depends on what view you take and what evidence you had of the offences of those students?

A. Quite.

Q. Now about a thousand and odd students were punished in this time?

A. I think 1,011 to be correct.

Q. The students were subjected to Police and Criminal Investigation Department espionage?

A. Not that I know of; only those who disappeared, then one put the Police on to them.

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON.

Q. To your knowledge, were individual students of these colleges punished because their relations or their fathers had been arrested in Lahore?

A. Not that I know of. This is the first I have heard of it; one does not as a rule visit the sins of their fathers upon the children so directly as that.

Q. You know the Dayal Singh College?

A. Oh yes.

Q. You know the Principal of the college?

A. I am afraid I have not the privilege of remembering his name, but I do know him.

Q. Was it reported to you that certain objectionable posters had been found up on the outer wall of his college premises?

A. It was so.

Q. And that the same had been removed by the police?

A. No; that was not reported to me.

Q. Did you serve the principal with an order in this matter?

A. I told him to hand over to me the name of the young men of the college who had written it.

Q. The order said that if the college authorities did not find out the writer and report to you by 12 noon of the same day drastic measures would be taken against all concerned with the college?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you got on record a copy of this order?

A. You are quoting from it there.

Q. Will you kindly produce that?

A. Those are my very words; you have got them there.

Q. I would still like the original order produced.

A. The original order is with the college authorities.

Q. Cannot you produce a copy of it?

A. Yes; you can get the original from the college authorities.*

Q. This is the correct interpretation of the order that unless he found the writer before 12 noon some drastic measures would be taken?

A. Yes.

Q. On this order being made, is it true that the trustees of this college came and waited upon you?

A. I believe they did; I am speaking from memory. Somebody came, they may have been the trustees or the principal.

Q. One of them was Raja Narendra Nath who was once a Commissioner of Lahore?

A. Yes. I do not know he was Commissioner of Lahore, but I will take your word for it.

Q. And they represented to you that they had made careful enquiries and that none of the students in the college were responsible for the poster?

A. They gave me the name of the student who wrote it.

Q. A student of their own college?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you produce that?

A. A man named Aziz. I remember his name. It took me a fortnight to catch him.

Q. I want to get at the real facts.

A. These are the real facts; they gave me the name; they complied with the order.

Q. Can you produce that?

A. When those people came they produced the name of the man who had done it. It was produced to me an hour before I suggested. I could not tell you who produced it.

Q. Is it not a fact that what was represented was that in fact no such poster has been affixed to the college Board outside and you yourself, Colonel, went to the spot to make inquiries?

A. I made inquiries myself to begin with.

Q. Was not the position this, that the college authorities came and represented to you that the information that you had that that poster was affixed on the College Board was not correct.

A. I think you are right. The trustee of the people came and told me that there was no such thing as a notice put up. I put this person into the motor car, took a Staff Officer and drove down to the college, and asked him "where is it now, come and show me the place where this poster was put." I should think it was about 9th or 10th, subsequently the college authorities discovered the name of the student who had written it.

Q. Is it true that you fined the Principal Rs. 250?

A. I did.

Q. Or in addition three months' imprisonment?

A. I have forgotten about this.

Q. So he was taken to the College in charge of two soldiers and was only released on payment of the fine of Rs. 250.

A. I think two soldiers would have certainly gone with him to collect the fine.

Q. What you did was you summoned the Principal and you did not release him and sent him in the custody of two soldiers till he paid Rs. 250?

A. That is the normal procedure.

Q. Is it not also true that about a week or 10 days after that, the people convinced you that the college authorities were not responsible for this poster and that you remitted the fine?

A. The last part of your premise is correct. This particular man who had given me information as to the poster having been found and sworn to by him was convicted of perjury at a place called Kasur. That caused a doubt on the evidence that he gave and I remitted that fine.

Q. Then you came to the conclusion that the evidence may not be reliable and you remitted the fine?

A. Yes.

Q. With regard to flogging in the public street?

A. I have already given my information that flogging was carried out in various quasi-public places.

Q. How was the flogging done? Were the people tied to a framework and then lashed?

A. I take it that is the normal procedure again.

Q. Were they stripped?

A. I do not know, I was not there.

Q. Was there any flogging done at the Central jail?

A. Most of the cases were done in the Central jail.

Q. And was that done in the sight of the undertrial political prisoners?

A. None that I know of.

Q. Flogging was also resorted to with regard to people tampering with notices that you had issued or any instances of that character?

A. I know of one case only, where a person got five stripes which was ludicrous. So I at once took away the powers from the Magistrate as he was so lenient.

Q. Was notice No. 12, dated 16th April 1919, "From and after the promulgation of this order it shall be unlawful for more than two persons who walk abreast, etc.,....." What was the object of issuing this order preventing any two persons walking abreast?

A. I think the preamble sets forth the object, if I may refer to it; to stop violence and intimidation.

Q. How could violence and intimidation be practised by two people?

A. More than two people walking abreast. Supposing there were three or four natives coming down the pavement; if they did not give way to an European there was likely to be a breach of the peace.

Q. Kindly use the expression "Indian" as the word "native" gives offence to people. You know that the Government of India have issued orders about this?

A. I did not know, but I shall be careful in future.

Q. Who would commit the breach of peace if they did not give way?

A. Undoubtedly there would be a breach of peace.

Q. You think that you were justified in doing that?

A. That pavement was meant to walk on and if three or four persons walked abreast and took up the whole pavement a European coming from the opposite side would naturally resent it, and there would be a breach of peace.

Q. Now with regard to the order about commandeering motor cars. You commandeered all motor cars owned by Indians?

A. I think that is so.

Q. With regard to motors belonging to Europeans that were commandeered what was done to those?

A. Some of them got a certificate of exemption and others were used for military purposes.

Q. Is it true that motor cars commandeered from Indians were given for use to private Europeans? Were the motor cars taken by the military for military purposes?

A. It may have been so in one or two cases. Carriages were taken from Indians and given to European gentlemen whose motor cars had been taken away for military purposes.

Q. Did you consider that a necessary step to take?

A. I think it was a very fair step to take.

Q. The motor cars and carriages of the Indians were taken away from them and not used for Government or military purposes but given for use to European gentlemen?

A. Ample compensation was paid—compensation for damage done. Take the case of Nedou's Hotel who kept a motor car which was probably earning Rs. 50 a day.

Q. When you took the cars and carriages from the Indians not for the purpose of using them for Government purposes but to give them for use to European gentlemen, was that not objected to?

A. Well, I supposed they would object.

Q. Do you think it is a right thing?

A. Yes. I wanted to bring home to them that they could not have risings in the city of Lahore.

Q. You wanted to teach a lesson?

A. It was a part of general lesson.

Q. You commandeered electric lights and fans from people?

A. Yes.

Q. These were taken from various colleges and from various temples?

A. None that I know of. I certainly never signed the order to take electric lights from temples.

Q. Were they taken from colleges?

A. Yes.

Q. Were they taken from the Arya Samaj Institution or Brahma Samaj Institution?

A. I don't know. Personally I did not select any particular house. I made it clear that they were not to take a fan from a room where a woman was.

Q. You are aware that various people were arrested after the 15th when Martial Law came into operation for offences committed under the Penal Code?

A. I believe that is so.

Q. Do you know that among them was one Manohar Lal, Bar.-at-Law, at Lahore?

A. I do not remember his name.

Q. Is it true that this gentleman Manohar Lal was arrested and was kept in jail for a very long time?

A. I have not the slightest idea whether your statement of fact is correct or not.

Q. He was arrested on the 18th April and kept in jail for a month?

A. That may or may not be so.

Q. Will you kindly have inquiries made and let us know?

A. I am afraid I have no powers now. I have no doubt that the representatives of the Government would do this.

Q. Is it also true that during this period from 18th April to 18th May he was kept for a week or 10 days in solitary confinement?

A. I have not the slightest idea.

Q. And ultimately this gentleman was released when he was brought to trial?

A. He was not released by my order.

Q. Are you aware that similarly various other people in Lahore were arrested and kept in prison?

A. I have seen it stated in the press.

Q. Is that true?

A. I do not know. I only commanded Lahore from a certain day. What was done about the prisoners arrested before that date was no business of mine.

Q. After the 15th you were administrator in Lahore? Surely your administration ought to know of this fact that a large number of people were arrested during that period and kept in jail when any charges were made against them?

A. I know there were some 2,000 people and their cases were all being prepared for the higher tribunals.

Q. You never cared to inquire?

A. No.

Q. Has it come to your knowledge that a marriage party in a certain part of Lahore were arrested because they were moving about as a marriage party usually does in that manner, and that people were flogged?

A. It is quite true. It is the one instance that I know of under Martial Law that is to be regretted. The moment I heard of it I had the Magistrate removed and his powers taken away.

Q. Does not that show how dangerous it is to resort to flogging?

A. I am afraid you can't generalize from this particular case.

Q. Is it also true that five persons were arrested and imprisoned because they were driving in a landau?

A. I have never heard of that.

Q. During the Martial Law Administration there was censorship established?

A. Yes, certainly. I took measures to hold up mails at intervals.

Q. And newspapers were not to publish what was happening?

A. I do not think there is any order issued by me to that effect.

Q. You are aware of the trials that took place under the Martial Law Commission?

A. I know they were sitting and trying people. Various people were tried.

Q. Are you aware that on the 14th May General Officers Commanding, Lahore and Rawalpindi, issued a proclamation that no lawyers ordinarily doing their business outside this place should be allowed to come into this area without the permission of the Martial Law administrators?

A. Yes; I heard of that.

Q. And the Martial Law administrator mentioned there, was yourself?

A. Yes, as regards Lahore.

Q. Are you aware that various lawyers applied to you as Martial Law administrator to be allowed to enter the Lahore area for the purpose of defending accused people?

A. As a matter of fact I think one did. They had to pass through other areas under Martial Law.

Q. You are aware of the fact that all the persons were refused permission?

A. I gathered there was a total prohibition.

Q. The notification stated that nobody was to enter the area without the special permission from the Martial Law administrator but in fact permission was always refused?

A. As a matter of fact I dare say it was. But I cannot remember any special application being given to me because they had to go through Amritsar before they got to me.

Q. "That this refusal was dictated by the desire to prevent disturbance . . ." Under that notification a discretion was invested in you so far as Lahore is concerned?

A. I did not issue that notification.

Q. You fixed the price of various commodities—did you think that was strictly within your purview?

A. Absolutely, as long as the people were contented there was not the least likelihood of having trouble. If a poor man had not been allowed to work through the hartal, or if he has not got much money through inability to work and he has to pay double and treble for necessaries of life and has his wife and children hungry he naturally gets desperate.

Q. And you may carry that much too far?

A. It is again a question of commonsense and tact.

Q. Did you think that you were right in issuing orders about the adulteration of milk?

A. I thought so.

Q. Adulteration of milk had gone on for many years?

A. Yes, they reverted to it the very day I left.

Q. You undertook this, as you say in your report, for improving the low standard of business morality. Do you think that step was within your purview?

A. I think you can raise the standard of business morality. I am afraid I was taking rather an unnecessary burden upon my shoulders, rather a hopeless one.

Q. You refer to the Badshahi mosque. I want to understand what the facts are about it. Was it ordered to be kept shut?

A. Yes.

Q. Who made that order?

A. The order was originally made by the Deputy Commissioner, I think, on the 11th or 12th. When I came here I confirmed the order and saw it carried out.

Q. May I have the terms of that order?

A. The Deputy Commissioner may have it. I have not got it. The fact was that it was closed. The order was clearly understood.

Q. Then you confirmed an order without seeing it?

A. I knew the effect of the order. Negotiations were going on for nearly six weeks until they agreed to the terms I suggested.

Q. The fact was that it remained shut for nearly six weeks. Don't you think that action must have wounded the religious feelings of certain people?

A. I don't think so when they allowed Hindus into the same mosque.

Q. You said that after some time Martial Law or rather Martial Law in its intensive form was really non-existent?

A. Yes, the effects of it were lightened.

Q. From what date were they very much lightened?

A. It took place gradually. There was no one specific date. You see the dates are given here. They were altered on five different occasions, it was a gradual development.

Q. By the end of April Martial Law in its intensive form practically ceased?

A. Oh, I do not think at the end of April. The only relaxations were the travelling of public on railways and the curfew, and larger processions were allowed in case of weddings and funerals.

Q. What else was done under Martial Law after the end of April?

A. You will find the orders issued after the 8th of April. I will give them to you if you like. We start with No. 33 on the 2nd May, and from 33 onwards up to the end, all were done during May.

Q. We see from 33 you go only up to 36? Only 3 orders?

A. I beg your pardon, we go up to 37, 38, 39, 40, 41 and so on. I think they go on up to 50.

Q. The principal thing after the end of April that was done under Martial Law was to carry on the trial of those persons who had been arrested by special tribunals in a summary manner?

A. I would not say that as the principal thing at all. There was the control of prices, that was another thing that was carried on. In fact none of these orders were cancelled at all during May excepting the alteration in the hours of the curfew. Otherwise the existence of Martial Law remained the same.

Q. I understood you to say that the continuance of Martial Law was not in fact so much necessary for Lahore itself as because of the risings in other places?

A. That was after the 10th May. I think I suggested in my report that after the 10th May that condition would arise.

Q. After the 10th May for Lahore itself it was not necessary?

A. Only as a preventive measure. If there had been a rising somewhere else it might have re-acted at once on Lahore.

Q. In fact there was no rising anywhere else after the 15th April?

A. I think that is right.

Q. In fact from the 15th April till the end of April and the beginning of May there was no rising anywhere at all?

A. That is an historical fact.

Q. So by the time you come to the 10th or 15th May, as you put it, one full month had elapsed with no disturbances, I think, in any other part of the country at all?

A. I think you are eliminating the frontier, but I don't think you can bar the frontier. There is also the trouble between the Afghans and India proper.

Q. True, you had the frontier troubles, we know that.

A. I do not think you can divorce the two things.

Q. But for the moment I am asking you to confine your attention to the country itself; and in the country itself up to the 15th April there was no disturbance and no rising anywhere?

A. You bar all frontier territory this side of the Durand line, do you call it 'in the country itself'?

Q. In that sense of the frontier there is always some trouble or another with the tribes. That is pretty continuous, that is more or less a normal issue, there was nothing new then?

A. I should rather differ from you, if I may with respect.

Q. I admit there was trouble with Afghanistan.

A. Which again re-acted on the frontier and which came south.

Q. You say that Martial Law was liked by the people?

A. So I gathered from the very kindly treatment that people of all kinds gave me.

Q. You think what you call Government by hukm is the best suited for them, that is your view?

A. I think they were very pleased. They certainly liked it very much, they told me so.

Q. You think in this country any other rule is a mistake, and Government by hukm is the right thing to adopt?

A. I have not said so. I only mentioned it as a matter of fact.

Q. You have had experience, I understand, in Africa?

A. I was there for 20 odd years.

Q. Had you occasion there to administer Martial Law?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Now you grant that the conditions in Africa are quite different from the conditions in this country and that the people there, compared to the people in this country, have altogether a different degree of civilization?

A. They are different. They were much easier to handle.

Q. Different conditions in this sense, there you had to deal with a more barbarous population?

A. I should not call them barbarous, not the particular brand I was dealing with.

Q. I do not know what class of population you were dealing with.

A. I was dealing with people in Bechuanaland.

Q. Is it not a fact that the civilization there among the masses is quite different from what you find in this country?

A. Yes, if it is not abusing the word "civilization," I should say it is very different.

Q. I mean you would not follow in India the same system of administration which you followed in Africa?

A. I did not adopt one single order that we used in Bechuanaland.

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON.

By Major-General Sir George Barrow—

Q. There is only one question that I want to ask you, Colonel Johnson. You say in your Report first regarding Amritsar, "A small party of Indian troops broke up this meeting by fire, inflicting severe casualties among the crowd. It is only fair to record my opinion that this incident had a far-reaching effect on the seditionists and agitators in Lahore and was probably no small factor in enabling me, as subsequently shown, to re-establish and maintain order in the area under my command without further bloodshed." Is that just an expression of your opinion, or is that based on any specific facts?

A. It was my considered opinion on account of the tremendous change of atmosphere that took place here after the 14th compared with what took place on the 12th and on account of the information which reached me through secret service of what was going on in the city. I think I put it very mildly. If I had to amend that report at all, I should say that our action on the 13th in Amritsar was a great factor for the maintenance of peace in Lahore.

Q. That action that happened in Amritsar?

A. Exactly, it is my considered opinion.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. How many miles is Gujranwala from Lahore?

A. I really do not know. If you consult a map you can know it. I have not got a map here. I do not know whether it is 38 or 41 or more.

Q. Approximately what is the distance?

A. I should say it is about 40 miles.

Q. Now if you will kindly look at your Appendix I,* you will see that nothing was done at Gujranwala up to the 14th, and the first time anything happened at Gujranwala was on the 14th?

A. It does not seem to be down there. It is No. 27.

Q. May I know how it is that the effect of what happened at Amritsar on the 15th was very salutary so far as Lahore was concerned but had a very contrary effect upon Gujranwala which is only 40 miles from Lahore?

A. I cannot tell you. I was not there.

Q. Is it not a fact according to your Appendix I that more than 60 per cent. of the offences or crimes that were committed or the disturbances that took place, all took place after the 13th? The total number given by you is 64, and Gujranwala has 27. Therefore about 60 per cent. of the disturbances took place in the province after what had happened at Amritsar?

A. Before the 14th and 15th before news had time to circulate in all districts. I suggest to you that is the answer.

Q. There are many shops in Lahore where arms are sold?

A. I know of one.

Q. And from your statement I find that there are a large number of persons who are license holders?

A. 1,700, I think.

Q. It is a fact that throughout these disturbances there is not a single instance where any fire-arm was used by any of the rioters?

A. As far as I know that is so.

Q. Not only they were not used in Lahore, but throughout the province?

A. I have not heard of their being used. I think there was an instance of a train being fired on, if I am right, I think it was circulated in the military intelligence.

Q. Now from the 30th March up to the time that the Martial Law rule was in force, there are no facts brought to your notice where it is alleged that any person anywhere tried to steal arms or to get possession of arms from any of the license holders?

A. No, I don't remember any such case.

Q. And am I right in supposing that if the people of these provinces had been bent on rebellion, that would have been the first thing they would have done?

A. I say that is my opinion. I think you are right.

Q. You are aware that even in the ordinary dacoities that are committed, fire-arms, off and on, are used by the dacoits and they are in possession of arms?

A. I have read about it in papers.

Q. Even you must have seen in papers that these revolutionary anarchists from time to time have been able to secure large quantities of arms from the Native States?

A. I have not heard that.

Q. Therefore in your opinion they were going to turn out the British Government without the use of any arms?

A. I cannot see how the conspiracy would have developed.

Q. So far as you are concerned, you took charge of everything on the 15th?

A. At 6 A.M. on the 15th.

Q. Therefore I take it that from the 10th up to the 15th no reports of the C. I. D. or the regular police were sent to you or were you consulted?

A. You will be inaccurate in taking that.

Q. You were consulted by the C. I. D.?

A. My headquarters were the Brigade headquarters, and there, I think, I had access to every paper that had come through.

Q. Do I understand that the C. I. D. reports and the police reports were before you before the 15th?

A. Of course they were not read out to me. My battalion headquarters were all in one room, and all information was circulated for military information.

Q. During the time that you were in command, I think for a greater part of the time the Lieutenant-Governor was here in Lahore?

A. As far as I know, he was here the whole time up to about the last week.

Q. And also all the high officials of the Government, Secretaries and all those people?

A. I don't know whether all of them were here. A number of them were here.

Q. Were you in daily communication with those officers during those days?

A. After I commanded I was in daily communication, not with all the officers, but with a certain number of them.

Q. At least they were aware of every order that was issued under Martial Law?

A. Yes, most of them, but not before they saw them in the press like you did.

Q. None of them advised you about the issuing of these orders?

A. There was only one advice given at all . . . . .

Q. Was any advice given to you by any of these officers?

A. I think I have got your case. I want to make quite clear, to save other questions, that every order that you have got here was written by me on my own initiative, and the only one which ever emanated elsewhere related to arms. But every word of these orders was written by me personally.

Q. My point is, after you issued those orders was any advice given to you that they were too severe, they should be modified or anything of that sort? None of these officers ever expressed to you their view or their opinion that some of the orders were harsh and should not be issued?

A. The only instance that I can remember is this. My attention was drawn to various religious festivals taking place and there were suggestions that I should so modify the orders so to suit the religious festivals.

Q. That was the only dissent ever expressed by the officials?

A. I should personally have taken possession of all arms and looked after them myself.

Q. Now nothing happened in Lahore on the 13th, 14th and 15th, so far as you know?

A. No outward sign of rebellion.

Q. Any tangible thing or anything of the kind took place on the 13th?

A. What do you mean by anything? All sorts of things happened.

Q. Any gathering fired on, any person assaulted or anything of that sort?

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON.

A. Firing only took place between the 10th and the 12th, so obviously nothing took place on the 13th.

Q. I want to know if anything definite took place on the 13th, 14th and 15th which could be called a sign of rebellion?

A. No.

Q. On the 11th, 12th, 13th and 14th, were not the civil courts and High Court open and were not cases decided by the High Court and civil courts and were they not doing their regular daily work?

A. I do not know. I cannot tell you.

Q. You do not know whether they were closed?

A. I should say they were closed, but I do not know.

Q. You said that you were present where all these things were discussed. Are you not aware that on every one of these dates some of the leaders used to be sent for from the High Court so they must have been going to the High Court? That must have come to your knowledge?

A. I do not remember it.

Q. Are you aware of any summonses issued by the civil courts not being served during those days from the 10th to the 14th?

A. I am not aware.

Q. Are you aware that any person who had to serve a writ or summons on any person inside the city from the 10th to the 14th was prevented by the crowd?

A. I have not heard of it.

Q. Are you aware of any witnesses who were required by the court during these days being unable to receive the summonses?

A. I think I have already said that the courts were closed. I am not aware of that.

Q. So far as the arrangements of the police on the night of the 10th were concerned, were you consulted about it?

A. No, I was not in command.

Q. Were any offences committed between the 10th and the 15th in the night time, offences not connected with these disturbances, because you have stated before that from the introduction of Martial Law there was a great security. I want to know whether you know whether any offences were committed by the crowd or by the outside public or by the regular badmashes during the nights between the 10th and the 15th?

A. I have not the slightest idea, but you can get that from the police; they have got a record.

Q. What was the total number of soldiers, British and Indian, required for the purpose of maintaining control of the city on the 11th and 12th and also for the picketting that was required?

A. I think I mentioned the number here. It was about 800.

Q. I want to know the total number?

A. I went in with a column of 800 strong, but I was very thankful it was not weaker.

Q. How many did you leave inside the city?

A. Five hundred.

Q. These soldiers were at your disposal on the night of the 10th?

A. They were at the disposal of the Officer Commanding, Lahore, not at mine.

Q. If he wanted to procure them for the help of the civil authority?

A. Certainly: they were his troops.

Q. However, at a distance of 4 miles from Lahore, in the cantonment, there is a very large number of British soldiers stationed?

A. I should not call it large.

Q. At least there was one division?

A. Nothing like it, Sir.

Q. How many were there?

A. I have not got the information.

Q. Roughly what do you think?

A. There might be 1,000 rifles; that is an outside figure. There is never a division in Lahore.

Q. How many police posts are there inside the city?

A. I cannot tell you really; I have not got the map now.

Q. Were any police posts assaulted from the 30th March up to 10th April inside the city?

A. I am not aware of it.

Q. Except one C. I. D. man was any policeman assaulted by the crowd from the 30th up to the 10th April?

A. Certainly several persons were badly injured.

Q. At the time when stones were thrown?

A. That is on the 10th.

Q. I am not talking of it. Apart from these men, military or police, who were inside the city trying to prevent crowd from throwing stones, I want to know whether between the 30th March and the 10th April, there were any individual assaults on the police by the crowd?

A. You will get the answer to this from the police; I cannot tell you.

Q. Therefore you are not in a position to say that the remaining of the police inside the city was dangerous?

A. Yes; I am, because I saw the temper of the city on the 12th.

Q. The whole of your statement is based upon what you saw of the temper of the crowd and is not based on anything done by them?

A. On the acts of the mob on the 10th and the temper that I saw on the 12th.

Q. Now, so far as the 10th is concerned, is it not a fact that a handful of these police officers and men were able to check the crowd and were able to drive them for two furlongs?

A. Yes; by fire. One was rather trying to avoid bloodshed at this time, Sir.

Q. If my memory is right, they fired only once and they had no occasion to fire afterwards when the crowd were pushed for two furlongs?

A. Your memory is probably right, but I was not there myself.

Q. So far as the 12th is concerned, you were present at that time?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. May I read out to you a report? I would like to know whether it is correct. It runs thus:—

"Up to this time (1 p.m.) everything was quiet, but when the crowd was coming out of the mosque in order to proceed to the city, their passage was barred by cavalry who had ranged themselves before the gate. They began to shout cries of La ilaha illallah and wanted to go towards the city. After some minutes shouting, they were allowed to proceed but when they came near Hira Mandi, shouting cries of La ilaha illallah some people amongst the crowds threw stones upon the police and cavalry, whereupon order for fire was given and the crowd was fired on. It is said 2 were killed and 8 or 9 wounded, of which 4 were seriously wounded." Is that a true account?

A. It is inaccurate, Sir.

Q. In what respect?

A. Certainly in many respects—about the crowd coming out of the mosque finding their way blocked by cavalry. When the crowd came out from the mosque, they were ordered to go and they would not go, and I brought the cavalry and pushed the crowd back into the city. The difficulty was to get them into the city. The cavalry did not prevent them from going into the city. It facilitated their progress to the city.

Q. The mob was prevented rightly or wrongly from proceeding further, on this occasion?

A. They were not prevented from going into the city. The crowd was about 7,000 people. I wanted to get them into the city to their proper homes. They refused to go. They had to be pushed by cavalry.

Q. On all the three occasions when there was occasion to fire, the situation was that there was a large crowd and they were prevented from going in a certain direction?

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON.

A. You are totally wrong, as regards the case that you are referring to, it is a travesty of what took place.

Q. On the occasion of the first firing on the 10th?

A. I was not there at the first firing. Would you mind leaving it?

Q. You have given evidence about the 10th. When I am asking you about those things, you cannot answer me.

A. I gave it to you from the official reports which are at my disposal.

Q. It is clear from your statement which has been placed before us that, as a matter of fact, this crowd was coming from the Badshahi Mosque after the meeting was dispersed?

A. The meeting was not dispersed in the Badshahi Mosque. They came out of the mosque voluntarily, either because the service was over or . . . . .

Q. May I understand from you that they deliberately came for the purpose of assaulting?

A. I do not know the purpose for which they came; that was the effect of their coming.

Q. Is there any record available to us from which we could find whether during the period from the 30th March to 15th April anybody received any wounds from a lathi inflicted by any member of the crowd?

A. I have somewhere definitely stated that the crowd used lathis.

Q. I want to know whether there is any record available to us from which we could find as to whether any member of the police force or any soldier was wounded by a lathi by any member of the crowd?

A. I cannot give you any record, but the crowd did certainly strike. There is a difference between striking and wounding. I was struck by a brickbat from a four-storied house.

Q. I am asking you about lathis.

A. They were hit by lathis; I saw that myself.

Q. Is there any record of that? In Delhi as soon as the soldiers went back after they were hit they made reports and there was a record. Is there any record here in existence from which we could find as to how many soldiers were as a matter of fact struck by lathis or were hit by stones?

A. I cannot tell you how many were hit. In this case, i.e., the Hira Mandi case on the 12th, the attack on the rear guard which was made by lathis brought about the subsequent events. How many were struck by stones and how many by lathis, I really do not know.

Q. They did not make any report about that?

A. I saw it with my own eyes.

Q. Is there no recorded report?

A. No; you do not report or record anything but serious injuries.

Q. Was anyone treated in hospital for any wounds caused by the crowd?

A. Not that I know of. Some police officers were treated in the hospital I think. I saw them.

Q. Did not the news of the arrest of Mr. Gandhi reach Lahore about 4 P.M. on the 10th?

A. I am not aware of that.

Q. Is it not a fact that even the Military authorities were not aware that any Europeans were killed at Amritsar till after 5-30 P.M.

A. I do not know, Sir.

Q. Even the Military authorities did not receive any news that Europeans were killed at Amritsar till about 6 P.M.?

A. I cannot tell you. I am not the Military authority who was commanding the battalion on the 10th.

Q. Therefore may I take it that when you make this statement before this committee that on the evening of that day you were aware of what happened at Amritsar it was only based on hearsay knowledge?

A. Exactly; we all knew by the evening; but you are tying me down to 5 o'clock just now.

Q. Are you aware that no private telegrams were allowed to be despatched from Amritsar to any other place from the evening of the 10th?

A. I was not aware of that; but they were not stopping telegrams coming to Military authorities.

Q. My question was with reference to private telegrams.

A. I am not aware of it at all.

Q. Are you aware at what time the train leaves in the evening for Amritsar?

A. No; unfortunately I have not got the time table.

Q. I believe you are not also aware that on the 10th, nobody was allowed to alight at Amritsar Station or to leave Amritsar Station for any other place?

A. No; I was not there. I was otherwise employed on the 10th.

Q. A crowd of about 6,000 persons which was stopped by a few Police Officers or which was prevented from doing damage to the telegraph office by only 40 soldiers, would you call it a dangerous or rebellious crowd?

A. Certainly I should. There was certainly the potential danger.

Q. In order to reach the telegraph office this crowd will have to pass the Alliance Bank and the Bengal Bank and the Post office?

A. That is so. It depends upon which way they come.

Q. If they came from Anarkali?

A. It depends upon the end of Anarkali which they take.

Q. It is said that they came from that end?

A. Yes.

Q. No attempt was made either to damage the Post Office or to loot the Bengal Bank?

A. I have not heard; as a matter of fact, I do not think there was any.

Q. And on their way from Anarkali to the Telegraph Office, they must have passed a number of European gentlemen and ladies?

A. I do not think that follows, Sir. Very few European ladies and gentlemen live in that part of Anarkali bazaar.

Q. You do not think it is reasonable to suppose that they must have passed some Europeans?

A. I do not think it follows.

Q. Probably they did?

A. Probably they did not I should say. No Europeans live in that part of the city.

Q. Still up to that time there was no news received by you that any one was either molested or assaulted or in any way interfered with?

A. No.

Q. According to you the ostensible object of the crowd was to go and see the Lieutenant-Governor? When they were checked and prevented from coming out, they wanted to go to Government House?

A. I believe they said so when they found that they could not go to the Telegraph Office.

Q. Was not their object to get the orders against Mahatma Gandhi repealed?

A. I cannot tell what the object of the crowd was.

Q. Was that the object given out by them? It may be wrong?

A. I do not think it was true. When you go and call on the Lieutenant-Governor, you take visiting cards, you do not take brickbats. That is why I do not think they were going to call on the Lieutenant-Governor.

Q. Here again your hearsay knowledge comes in?

A. They were throwing bricks.

Q. You have not seen them carrying bricks?

A. But I have evidence that they were making use of them.

Q. When the crowd according to you was in such a mood and when it was beyond control, you did not consider it to be the duty of Government to protect the city and to protect the loyal and law-abiding citizens of the city instead of withdrawing all the Police Force?

A. It is not for me to criticise the action of the superior officers.

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON.

Q. Still you are praising them, and I think I have a right to ask you this?

A. I have already said and I stand by it that the withdrawal of the police was absolutely necessary to prevent bloodshed.

Q. What are your reasons?

A. Because if you have a few isolated men with arms in their possession and they face the mob and talk to them, you are trailing your coat.

Q. That is your inference; it is not based upon facts?

A. It is based upon the attitude of the mob.

Q. By looking at their faces?

A. That is my appreciation of the situation.

Q. In paragraph 21 you say that the notice issued on the 18th April was under the Defence of India Regulation?

A. I presume it was, because Martial Law as far as I know was not proclaimed till the 14th.

Q. Did you not visit the city, i.e., the inside of the city, from the 13th to the 14th?

A. No; I went on the 15th.

Q. You had not been there on the 13th and 14th?

A. Not on the 13th and 14th.

Q. Were you present at the negotiations between the different persons who were coming to the Deputy Commissioner about the opening of the hartal?

A. No. Some came to me about it; I was not present at the Deputy Commissioner's.

Q. Therefore you have no personal knowledge as to what these people were doing inside the city on the 13th and 14th?

A. No; I have no personal knowledge.

Q. And therefore when you say that on the 13th and 14th these leaders were perfecting their arrangements for hartal, that is knowledge based on certain hearsay or inference?

A. It is based on the broad fact that the hartal was tightened up and further strengthened during those times. It was a fact.

Q. I want to know how you came to the conclusion that they were perfecting the arrangements?

A. Because we had information from the city; there were meetings being held in private houses and so on.

Q. Your information was that on the 13th and 14th at the meetings that were being held inside the city, efforts were not made for opening the shops, but arrangements were made for making the hartal more perfect?

A. That is my information; the result rather supported it.

Q. That information you received on the 15th?

A. I heard of that. It would not come to me direct; it would come to the Officer Commanding, Lahore, for the time being, General Clarke.

Q. Going through all your orders would it be right to infer that your object in issuing these various orders was to strike terror and kill the political life of the province?

A. I never thought about political life. My business was to keep peace and prevent bloodshed.

Q. Would it be right to infer from the various orders that have been passed by you that one of your main objects was to strike terror and to kill the political life of the province?

A. You would be entirely wrong if you infer anything else other than the one fact that my object was to keep peace and prevent bloodshed. Anything else is wrong inference.

Q. With regard to the posting of notices, one of the main reasons that has been given by you was that when these orders were promulgated, people might not come and say they were not aware of it. Therefore you wanted to put them at important places at different centres, so that they may not be able to come forward and make that excuse that they were not aware of the promulgation of these orders. That is one of the reasons given by you to Sir C. Setalvad.

A. The chief reason was the notices were torn down and therefore people could not see them.

Q. Because they were torn down? Will you kindly refer to order No. 9. Although these places were selected for the purpose of informing the citizens, only 20 places were selected inside the city and 37 places outside the city?

A. Quite so, because the population is more concentrated in the city than it is outside.

Q. Or because the majority of the educated classes and the majority of the politically minded class were living outside the city?

A. I believe that is so.

Q. And therefore the majority of the inhabitants of the city during those days would not come outside the city and go to the Civil Lines for the purpose of getting themselves informed what the orders issued were?

A. That is entirely a wrong inference.

Q. They would come?

A. I do not think they would take the trouble to go to the Civil Lines if they can find that in the city itself. I would not like to cause any inconvenience to them by asking them to go to Civil Lines for this purpose.

Q. Notwithstanding the fact that more men were inside the city, notwithstanding the fact that more than two persons were not allowed to walk abreast, still you think that for the purpose of getting information as to what were the notices issued, they would come to the Civil Lines and get themselves informed?

A. The question is rather a lengthy one, and I did not catch the drift of it.

Q. One of the main reasons given by you was that these places were selected in order that those who committed breach of your orders may not be able to come forward before you and say that they were not informed?

A. Exactly.

Q. If that was your object, I want to know why only 20 places were selected inside the city and 37 places outside the city during those days, having regard to other orders passed by you which made it difficult for them to come out of the city and make themselves acquainted with your orders?

A. If you work it out in square yards or square metres, it is the same inside and outside. The population is very much concentrated at one place and a fraction living outside the city. If you take 100 square yards or half a square mile, I think you will find the notices evenly distributed.

Q. You have given us a definition of Martial Law somewhere. I want to know whether the will of the Military commander is in any way limited or restricted under the law?

A. Yes; it is restricted under the law to all acts done in good faith.

Q. And to all acts done for the purpose of only maintaining peace and order and nothing else. Am I right?

A. Yes, certainly.

Q. And therefore if he does anything which is not for the purpose of maintaining law or order then he exceeds his authority?

A. I agree with you. I know what is coming, Sir.

Q. A large number of persons had been convicted for breach of your Order No. 1, clause 4. So far as this clause is concerned, you have not prescribed any penalty. You have not informed the people that if they commit a breach of this rule, they will be flogged or sentenced to jail or punished in any way. The only thing you say is that if more than 10 persons assemble at once place, the meeting will be dispersed by force?

A. Quite so.

Q. Therefore so far as this Order No. 1, clause 4, is concerned, you did not attach any penalty. You did not inform them that if 10 persons assembled, they would be fired on or sent to jail.

A. They were sent to jail or punished instead otherwise of being shot.

Q. Kindly look at page 60, 6 persons were flogged for breach of this rule?

A. Personally I only find 4, but I daresay your eyes are better.

Q. For taking part in processions or gatherings?

A. I am sorry; you are quite right.

Q. So there were 6 persons who were flogged under Order I. clause 4?

A. Yes.

24 November 1919.]

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON.

Q. How were they flogged?

A. In the usual manner, I suppose.

Q. My contention is that you have prescribed penalties for different clauses. So far as clause 4 is concerned, your order was that such meetings will be dispersed.

A. Perhaps you do not understand the administration of Martial Law. It is not essential to be a lawyer or anything like that. You carry it out on broad lines. Because a penalty is not prescribed, it does not surely excuse or exclude from trial a person who commits a breach of the order.

Q. Have you any recollection about these six men, as to whether there was any deliberate breach of this order by these men?

A. I have already told you in my previous evidence to another member of the committee, that the case of 5 of these persons forms one regrettable incident in the administration of Martial Law in Lahore.

Q. What is the reason for flogging?

A. As I told you that leaves only one out of the six. I will look up and see what his case was. As regards the 5, it was a regrettable incident.

Q. Take the case of your Curfew Order. You will find that in Appendix IV. I think there will be some record of these things somewhere?

A. There is a record of every case.

Q. May I know whether you think that those who have been flogged deliberately committed a breach of your order, or whether it was a breach of the order which was excusable because they had no watches or because they were obliged to do so? Was it a deliberate breach of your order? Was it done deliberately?

A. No person would have been convicted unless he committed a deliberate breach of the order. Numbers of people were excused, I think. You will find it mentioned in the report.

Q. May I know whether those persons who were sentenced to flogging were out of their houses for mischief?

A. They were out of their houses against my orders.

Q. That is the whole thing? Had they not been out, they would not have been punished?

A. Exactly.

Q. They were out of their houses for doing some mischief, which you wanted to prevent or practically they were out of their houses because they had no watches?

A. It is a matter of complete indifference to me why they come out of their houses. My main reason for insisting on the Curfew Order was to save troops and police from being constantly on patrol and to get streets cleared at night. Why people went out into the street, had nothing to do with me.

Q. Therefore it was a matter of indifference to you why they were out of their houses. So long as they were out of their houses they were flogged?

A. They all were not flogged, that does not follow.

Q. Those mentioned in column 3?*

A. Yes, well it was not a matter of indifference.

Q. There were 32?

A. I daresay.

Q. Are you aware that the punishment of flogging is much resented by the Indian public?

A. I think it is resented by everybody besides Indians.

Q. It appears according to you that the stigma of being sent to jail is much more serious than being flogged?

A. No, I do not think so; they do not mind being sent to jail a bit, but I think they do dislike being flogged. I think that is common to everybody, it is not confined to India.

Q. Such being the case, do you not agree with me that if in these 32 cases it was only a mistake on their part to be out of their houses

A. Then they were not flogged.

Q. If they were not out of their houses for mischief?

A. No men were flogged if they were outside of their houses by mistake. There were some cases of people who had just come in from outside Lahore and did not know of the order. They were not convicted. All the cases tried by me and all cases tried by Magistrates showed this, the latter probably better than I did.

Q. I believe that your orders accomplished a great deal?

A. It is not for me to say.

Q. I think that they could not prevent people falling ill?

A. I had no power to keep them in good health, except by a little physical exercise.

Q. Therefore you thought it was no hardship that between 8 and 10 everybody in the city was deprived of all sorts of medical help?

A. But they were not, Sir. If you will be good enough to look at that Martial Law Form that I think His Lordship the President has, you will see that from the very first day Martial Law was introduced I recognised the necessity of giving passes to people who had some reason for being in the street, and they were issued in their tens of thousands literally.

Q. Supposing all of a sudden at 8:30 a brother or a relation or somebody fell ill and medical aid was required, I do not know that these forms would help him in any way and he would not be able to come to you, and even if he could come to you he would have to spend three or four hours doing so?

A. I will quite agree with you, but I only add that you cannot wage war and not have some inconvenience following it.

Q. Therefore you thought, as a matter of fact, that you were occupying an enemy country and therefore you were introducing all these things, and that this precaution was absolutely necessary?

A. It was a precaution necessary to protect the lives of the people of the city, to keep them off the streets at night.

Q. After that, except on three occasions of rioting, no attempt was made to endanger the life of any British soldier?

A. I do not think I gave them a chance.

Q. Even Indian High Court Judges were not allowed to go out of their houses?

A. If they had applied for a pass they would have been.

Q. Still under the rules they were not?

A. That is so.

Q. You have not heard that during these disturbances any bombs were ever thrown by anybody anywhere?

A. No, Sir, I warned them about that the first day.

Q. And no bombs were discovered in possession of any of the villagers anywhere in the various large number of searches that were made?

A. You mean subsequent to this day? There were none. I had two men badly wounded by bombs here before.

Q. If my memory serves me right, excepting the outrage on the Viceroy on the 12th December at Delhi, there has been no bomb outrage in the whole of your Province since that day?

A. Oh, Sir, you are quite wrong. I had two of my men wounded by a bomb in Anarkali Bazaar about 6 months before this disturbance.

Q. How was that?

A. A bomb was thrown at two of my soldiers of the Royal Sussex Regiment in Anarkali Bazaar 6 months before. That is what made me so careful about bombs.

Q. What sort of bombs do you mean, firework bombs?

A. I mean a bomb that killed two Indians and wounded 6 more and injured two of my men; I do not know if you would call that a firework bomb.

Q. Was that man ever arrested and tried?

A. I don't think they ever caught him.

Q. Was it ascertained that he was a man belonging to your Province or district?

A. We did not get him but the outrage took place in this city within 200 yards of where we are sitting.

Q. Excepting that outrage, I do not think there were any other outrages in the Province?

A. That is one that came to my knowledge which I did not forget.

Q. No other outrage?

A. No, that was quite enough for me to remember the probability of bombs here.

Q. What difference did you make, when you passed that order that within a radius of 100 feet every house and every property would be raised to the ground.....

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON.

A. Not every house; I said no mosques or temples.

Q. Leaving aside mosques and temples. A mosque or temple is not a house.

A. I beg your pardon.

Q. What difference was there between British methods and Nawabi methods?

A. I did not catch the last word.

Q. The methods of the old, old Nawab rulers?

A. I never heard the name before, but it seems to me to be an excellent one if that was the rule in force.

Q. I asked you what is the difference?

A. There is no difference.

Q. What were the reasons for your commandeering tongas and other vehicles which were plying for hire? Was it not that they also took part in the hartal?

A. That was the main reason, they were taking part in the hartal and no one could move in Lahore if they wanted to. They refused to carry you.

Q. I will read out one passage from paragraph 34. "I refrained from granting exemptions in the case of Indians resident in Lahore as I thought it desirable to bring home to them all, loyal and disloyal alike, some of the inconveniences of Martial Law in the hope and belief that in the future the weight of their influence would be given whole-heartedly?"

A. That was my pious hope.

Q. If it was decided by the so-called conspirators or agitators to have communication with some other conspirators in other places I do not understand why your order about 3rd and intermediate class passengers could have prevented them from going to Lahore?

A. Oh don't you? Because it gave the railway police only the first and second class of passengers to deal with instead of the vast mass of third class and intermediate traffic.

Q. Am I to understand that if there was a 2nd class passenger he would not have been given a ticket unless C. I. D. man was there?

A. No doubt the C. I. D. were watching who were the people purchasing 2nd class tickets.

Q. Do I understand the C. I. D. were empowered to dog that man's footsteps and go after him to find out where he was going?

A. I do not think they would go after him; if they viewed him with suspicion, they would take him there and then.

Q. Supposing 20 2nd class passengers went to the Railway Station to purchase tickets to go to Bombay, would they be given tickets?

A. Certainly.

Q. And would 20 C. I. D. men have to follow them to find out what they were doing?

A. I think the C. I. D. are much too efficient to require 20 men to look after 20 2nd class passengers.

Q. It is your opinion that they are very efficient?

A. For that; they are efficient enough to look after 20 2nd class passengers without having 20 of them to do it.

Q. You have stated with reference to the orders that you passed about the fixing of prices that with an empty stomach a poor man is apt to be up to mischief?

A. Yes, broadly speaking.

Q. And that you wished to prevent him from doing that mischief and in that indirect way you have connected it with your authority and passed that order about langars in order to maintain peace and order?

A. All part of the general idea, Sir.

Q. Were not langars meant for poor people?

A. They may have been, but they were meant for other purposes too.

Q. Were not the poor people allowed to have their food there?

A. Or any one else.

Q. Therefore, as a matter of fact, in one way they were helping you, they were keeping the empty beggars from doing any mischief in the city?

A. That is hardly the case, because the food supplied at those langars was keeping the people from their legitimate work and preventing them from earning money with which to buy food.

Q. I think you were prepared to please the masses by making concessions and therefore in the end they came and informed you that they were quite happy with Martial Law and came and cried out "Martial Law ki jai"?

A. Yes, they did.

Q. Therefore where was the harm of these langars, one way was quite as good as another?

A. May I put it to you that this was a time of hartal, these people instead of getting about their lawful vocations and earning their money and buying food, were delighted with a state of affairs which produced their daily chapati without doing any work for it. It was a bad condition of things.

Q. And therefore you wanted them to earn their living instead of getting their food at langars?

A. I think so, it was a case of idle hands and mischief.

Q. And are you aware that a large number of respectable citizens of Lahore who had subscribed towards these langars, believing them to be charitable institutions, were arrested and kept in jail for some time?

A. No I am not. I had not the slightest idea of a single gentleman who contributed to the funds.

Q. It appears to me that according to you hartal is a great crime?

A. I regard hartals as an organised demonstration against the Government, and you may call that a crime or not.

Q. What difference do you make between a strike against the Government and a hartal?

A. None.

Q. Supposing a miners' strike in England, was that against the Government or not?

A. No that was a different thing; that was a strike for the improvement of economic and social conditions.

Q. The police strike, was it against the Government or against somebody else?

A. In England, it was for improved economic and social conditions, Sir.

Q. I am not asking about causes, was it against the Government?

A. Not a bit, it was against the public to improve their economic condition; it was totally different from the strike here which was not to improve economic conditions.

Q. How do you mean against the public?

A. Naturally any strike which hurts the public is against the public.

Q. And this strike was not hurting the public?

A. It did both.

Q. Therefore anybody who says "I will not do my work now because I am dissatisfied with a certain Act," becomes, I take it, a seditionist according to you?

A. Certainly not; it is only when the strike is organised. Take your individual case; if you decide to throw up your hand and do no legal work it will hurt nobody.

Q. In order that a strike should have some effect and attain its object it must be organised?

A. Not a general organisation like this, which was meant to paralyse the whole community; it was not one trade, one calling, which was organised.

Q. Supposing there was this strike and it was organised for the purpose of drawing the attention of the authorities to the fact that the masses of the people were against a certain act of the authorities, where does the question of sedition come in?

A. I say that anything organised to break a Government is an act of sedition; it is against constituted authority.

Q. That is your own definition?

A. That is my definition; it may be entirely wrong, I am not a lawyer.

Q. When you have used the word sedition and seditionist in the whole of your statement you are relying on that definition of yours?

A. When I use the word seditionists, I use it in the sense of a man up against constituted authority as constituted to-day.

Q. And you have not come upon any instance where constitutional authority is opposed by constitutional means?

A. I do not call these constitutional means.

Q. You have said in your statement that it was organised and pre-arranged conspiracy, may I know what you mean by organised and pre-arranged? It may mean one thing, that here were six or seven persons who thought the hartal should be introduced in the city of Lahore, and they held a meeting and passed a resolution and they tried to persuade people and succeeded in persuading them to close their shops. Is that the only meaning which you attach to pre-arranged and organised?

A. I should say that is organised and in this instance pre-arranged too.

Q. Do you say that what happened on the evening of the 10th was pre-arranged?

A. I say the whole rising in India and throughout the Punjab was pre-arranged.

Q. Now you are giving a different meaning to your "pre-arranged?"

A. I am only trying to help you.

Q. Therefore I must ask you what you mean by pre-arranged throughout India?

A. I will tell you. There was some power behind it all which organised this rising or hartal as you call it.

Q. Then was that power inside the Punjab or outside the Punjab?

A. I cannot tell you where it was; its effect was felt in the Punjab.

Q. Judging from the facts, have you any tangible evidence that there was some other power behind it?

A. Yes, I think I can appeal to your common-sense in the matter and can give you a clear case. With the one exception I think of Amritsar and possibly Ahmedabad, every act of violence and outrage which accompanied these disturbances or risings was directed against one thing, communications, either railways or telegraphs. You know perfectly well, I am sure, that no military organisation, however large or small, can remain in existence for long without lines of communication of some sort. Cut the lines of communication of any military force and you will kill it. You must see that it is an insult to my common sense, and I am sure it would have been to yours, to suggest that all these people from one end of the Punjab to the other when they rose all had the same brain wave, and all went and cut telegraph wires and railway lines.

Q. Therefore, according to you there was some brain or some controlling mind behind this and what happened at Ahmedabad at Bombay, at Calcutta and at Lahore was controlled by one organisation?

A. That is my firm, considered opinion.

Q. And that is based on the fact that in a stated time, that is during three or four days, so many wires were cut and so many railway communications destroyed?

A. That is one of them.

Q. Anything else?

A. Yes, I will give you another; there are plenty of pointers. It is a coincidence which again strains one's common-sense to believe that in these riots every attack on property was limited to property owned by Europeans and not by Indians. You come to Gujranwala, what do you find? You find the Church, the Railway Station, every building owned by Europeans burned, but you find the bungalows owned by citizens in the Gujranwala City all left intact. You come to Amritsar, and I think I am right in saying that in the attacks on the banks there—one bank certainly was not burned because there happened to be a guard there in time and another bank which was not burnt but looted was an Indian-owned bank. It is rather straining one's common-sense to believe that all these things were mere coincidence, and there was no power behind the throng.

Q. Therefore your second point was that the Europeans were attacked everywhere and not Indians, and that the property of Europeans was damaged and not that of Indians?

A. Yes, that is a fact.

Q. That is point No. 2, anything else?

A. I don't suppose the Amir of Afghanistan learnt from his daily paper in Kabul of unrest in India when he issued that proclamation and declared war against the British Empire. He must have got that from somewhere. There must have been somebody in India who communicated the news of the disturbances in India and the alleged disaffection of the people; he did not pick that up in the newspapers, somebody must have conveyed that to him. Then the last point in Appendix X,<sup>2</sup> where I have ventured to give the Danda Fauj proclamation, that all points to organisation.

Q. That Danda Fauj proclamation, that is your third point?

A. I put that fourth.

Q. You appeal to my common-sense; I must say I am not convinced. My common-sense says that these are the effusions of some mad brains, and should the mere fact that some madcap writes with his hand a certain notice and posts it on the clock tower or somewhere else and makes certain allegations, be taken into consideration by the highest military power at this time to base on it an argument that the whole community was seditious, or at least a large part of it, and there was an organisation behind it?

A. I make you a present of the madman and stand on the other three points.

Q. Is there any country which is free from such madcaps?

A. I cannot say, I think there are. I have not been in all countries so I cannot possibly answer the question.

Q. The countries in which you have been and about which you have read is there any country free of such madcaps?

A. There are maniacs everywhere I know.

Q. Is it not a fact that a large number of persons from the surrounding villages of Lahore had come back from the war previous to what had happened?

A. I think that is an undoubted fact.

Q. Has it come to your knowledge that in at least one or two cases the persons arrested were pensioners and soldiers returned from the war?

A. I suppose they did some crime then.

Q. In connection with these disturbances?

A. Service in the army does not make one immune from arrest.

Q. I will put my point before you, have you heard or not?

A. No, I have not heard of it.

Q. Have you not heard what happened at Tarn Taran? Who were the gang suppressed at Tarn Taran?

A. No, I never even heard of that.

Q. Don't you think that those people who have gone outside India and have gained some experience if they become rioters they would know much better how the wires should be cut and trains derailed, and goods trains looted than those villages who have never left India?

A. They made a very good try at it, if they had never done it before. They were very effective.

Q. Take your schedule of offences, Appendix No. 1, have you seen the file of these cases, or have you only been supplied with facts and put them down?

A. Every night at 6 o'clock there was sent to me a record of every case tried in my area. There I have seen every one.

Q. You have gone through the files of these cases?

A. Every case tried in the Lahore Area has been seen by me.

Q. It is very strange that you have not seen the Tarn Taran case?

A. They were not tried in Lahore.

Q. Except the cases tried in Lahore you have not seen the files of other cases?

A. Of course not.

Q. You do not know the facts of those cases?

A. Of course not.

Q. Take the very first item in your Appendix I— "80th March, Delhi Riot. Mob attacked Railway Station; beat the staff and Police. Mob was fired on." You also include that as proving the conspiracy. That is your information, "beat the staff and Police and the mob was fired on?"

A. Yes, I think that was the popular account of what took place as published in the papers.

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON.

Q. You have put down the Tarn Taran affair?

A. Yes, I believe it is here.

Q. Suppose it were admitted in the Tarn Taran case that as a matter of fact they had nothing to do with any rioting whatsoever, that they were not in any way connected with any Amritsar people, but that hearing the National Bank had been looted and that there was a chance of looting, they cut the wires. The wires, however, were cut simply for the purpose of looting and by people who had nothing to do with any organisation, because they themselves cut them and admitted what had been done. If that be the fact would you connect that Tarn Taran affair with any organisation around?

A. I do not see why you should not; it is a very bad thing to do to cut the wires.

Q. As a matter of fact your opinion is based upon the large number of cases? You have not read the file of these cases?

A. I got those from the papers—all those outside Lahore.

Q. Your opinion is that your administration was always merciful?

A. Yes.

Q. You do not put it down to the forbearance of the crowd; you do not put it down to the fact that the crowd were not a rebellious crowd, you say that it was the effect of Martial Law?

A. Yes, and I stand by it.

Q. With regard to students—in reply to Sir C. Setalvad you have stated about these mistaken facts—when was that information given to you? When did you see these mistakes?

A. I should think it was in the first week or ten days.

Q. I take it that you issued a large number of your orders of the 15th and 16th?

A. A certain number.

Q. This order about students was issued by you on the 16th of April?

A. Yes, on the 16th.

Q. May I take it that at the time that this order was issued by you—all these facts that had been mentioned by you in cross-examination were not known to you and were not before you?

A. You are quite wrong that all these facts were not known.

Q. At that time was there any evidence before you that any of these students had insulted any ladies?

A. Yes. I got one particular case, and the lady would not allow me to take action amongst that college. It was on the 16th when it was brought home to me.

Q. Excepting that one case what was the number of such cases?

A. One.

Q. Can you give me any information as to what was the percentage of students that were arrested throughout these disturbances?

A. I could not possibly tell you. One or two were shot in the riots.

Q. Apart from that, how many were arrested in connection with these disturbances?

A. I could not tell you.

Q. Will you accept it from me that there were hardly any convicted so far as these trials were concerned?

A. They were busy all day answering roll-calls.

Q. If it be a fact that hardly any—perhaps four or five—had been convicted for what happened between the 30th March and the 15th April, are you still prepared to maintain that there was evidence in your possession showing that they were seditionists?

A. Absolutely. One would not have taken action if one had no evidence.

Q. You took charge on the 15th. Therefore I think you had many important matters to deal with, and I suppose that practically no diary nor reports were put before you against the students? Were any diaries or papers placed before you when you passed that order?

A. No written reports were made. They were only verbal.

Q. I do not understand why you say that Martial Law was necessary. Supposing you began by hanging people for paltry thefts or for minor crimes—will not crimes be stopped at once? It would have been more effective than your Martial Law?

A. If you take me into the realms of supposition I would rather keep out of it.

Q. I repeat my question—supposing that instead of lashing you had passed an order that any person who has been guilty of minor offences will be hanged, would that be more effective than.....?

A. I should be found guilty of lacking in common-sense and be removed from my job. It would be a ludicrous thing to do to hang a man for thieving handkerchief.

Q. It depend upon common-sense?

A. That is the whole essence of Martial Law. If I thought you should be put out of the way and that it would help to maintain peace I should not hesitate to do it.

Q. In your Martial Order No. 7 you say that students were engaged in seditious propaganda—may I understand that you only refer to it being "expedient" and nothing else—that was one of the reasons that led you to promulgate this order. May I take it that they were present at the Ram-Naumi fair, and that they did not attend their schools on the hartal day?

A. I do not know about their attending. I will give you one instance. Students were sent up from villages on the 13th and 14th as they were found spreading seditious propaganda. They were brought up and convicted, but I quashed their sentences at once because it was done before the issue of Martial Law.

Q. They were preaching hartal?

A. Well that is organised.

Q. When you say seditious propaganda do you mean a hartal? They were persuading people to hold meetings?

A. Exactly.

Q. Was that information in your possession that they were asking people to take up arms?

A. They were not there for nothing.

Q. So far as your Order No. 9 is concerned is it not a coincidence that there is in it a very large number of pleaders and barristers?

A. I do not think it a coincidence. The selected people were not notorious for their loyalty.

Q. To you the majority were seditious?

A. There were a certain number of them whose views were not in accordance with mine.

Q. Or were they a class of persons who were holding meetings in this province against certain action of the Government or taking interest in public affairs?

A. They were not sufficient to form a meeting of themselves. They took a very prominent part.

Q. Supposing you had deported all these pleaders and barristers all would be calm and quiet? These pleaders were the cause of all the trouble—if you at once did away with them there would be nobody to oppose you?

A. Frankly I think they are cause of a great deal of trouble. They are looked up to by the masses. They are like sheep following.

Q. That is your experience, that the uneducated masses in these provinces look upon the educated classes as sheep and follow them?

A. No, they look upon them as leaders, the other people are the sheep.

Q. According to you they lead the masses?

A. I think they have great influence with the masses.

Q. More than any other people?

A. Oh yes, I think so, they are their own jat and people.

Q. Your No. 12 was issued on the 16th?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. About it you say something of students and turbulent persons walking abreast and monopolising the entire pavement. They were not in the habit of monopolising the whole side-walk?

A. Complaints were made to me and it was up to me to stop it.

Q. Now with regard to your No. 24 you say "Now therefore of the powers vested in me by Martial Law, I authorise any officer appointed by me for that purpose to enter any college, public buildings, hostel, hotel, private or other residence or building and remove such number of electric lights and fans required for the purpose aforesaid." This was for the purpose of greater comfort for the British troops. Were Europeans also deprived of these fans?

A. I cannot tell you. I should not think they were. Obviously I would not take them from Europeans.

Q. Why, were they not required for the troops in the month of May to make them more comfortable?

A. Some had got conveniences in the shape of electric fans and I proposed to take them from those people. I wanted the cap to fit where I thought it would fit best.

Q. Now we will turn to your No. 84 about the supply of wheat. I find that your order about this clearly showed that your information was wrong?

A. Yes, it was not as much as I thought it was.

Q. It was nothing?

A. I quite agree.

Q. Therefore I want to know why you included all the Indian gentry in this order? Why did you go out of your way to ask every native householder to furnish this list?

A. Not natives, Indians, Sir.

Q. I do not think this refers to Indians?

A. Every trader and every banker. A banker means a banker in grain. It means what I say, every trader.

Q. There are European firms who might have held wheat?

A. They would have dropped in for it if they did not send in returns.

Q. You will find that subsequently, when you asked for the list, you asked every Indian gentleman to furnish you with a list, but every Indian gentleman does not keep a stock of wheat; the order was for a person having more than five maunds?

A. No, of course I did not.

Q. This list which forms part of your statement clearly shows that about 70 per cent. of them have nothing to do with grain—where orders had been directed to the people not notorious for their loyalty. Except say, 70 per cent. of Indian gentlemen and are not dealers in grain why were they not exempted?

A. Indian gentlemen or British gentlemen, nobody was exempted from it. I wanted to know for economic reasons what wheat supply there was.

Q. Were any notices ever posted on the house of any European? On their houses were there not some nice places where the notices could be displayed conspicuously? Why is it that when you selected your sites you did not select the house of a single European for the purpose of posting these notices?

A. Because I saw no reason for taking this action. Some were exhibited by Europeans. They came and asked for copies of notices and put them up themselves voluntarily.

Q. May I know, excepting passing these Martial Law orders and trying cases summarily for breach of these Martial Law orders, what did the military authorities do? Supposing no Martial Law had been proclaimed and your assistance had been required by the civil authorities, where would have been the difference?

A. The civil authorities have not the power which Martial Law gives to the military authorities.

Q. May I take it that you think that without these orders which you issued it would have been impossible for you to maintain peace and order?

A. No doubt about it, the people would have got into trouble.

Q. What is the difference between military aid and Martial Law? Except that from the 15th April to the 10th of June certain cases were decided by the military authorities and the military authorities issued certain Martial Law orders there seems to be no difference.

A. If the military would have been asked to help the civil authorities I agree with you absolutely.

Q. What is the difference in these orders?

A. These orders are the whole case. They were issued for the purpose of preventing any further outbreak.

Q. Therefore I think your opinion is that these were the very things which practically maintained peace and order—these Martial Law orders?

A. I put four things forward as reasons why peace was maintained and bloodshed avoided. First of all about 60 per cent. I put to General Dyer's action at Amritsar; the next thing I put to the institution of Martial Law, the third thing, I had a sufficient number of troops placed at my disposal here, and the fourth—and a very minor consideration—was the use one made of that power and those troops—

15 per cent. for the number of troops,

20 per cent. for Martial Law,

60 per cent. for General Dyer,

5 per cent. for the use made of powers and men.

Now General Dyer had proclaimed his own Martial Law which he was prepared to do. Whether Martial Law was proclaimed or not is a common factor.

Q. You mean then that when the news of what had happened on the 13th at Amritsar arrived at Lahore the situation was eased and things were looking better?

A. Yes, there was a change in the atmosphere.

Q. Therefore that was due to the action of General Dyer? May I know whether there was any opportunity for such communication between Amritsar and Lahore?

A. I should think every means of communication barring the telegraph, motor-bicycles, etc., I cannot imagine there would have been difficulty in the way of communication.

Q. If you accept this proposition that what happened on the 13th would not reach Lahore—under the circumstances that were prevailing on the 14th—will you be prepared to modify your statement?

A. It did reach Lahore on the 13th. It was common property late that night.

Q. Now with regard to persons who were flogged. In Appendix V* you give a general abstract of the whole thing. It appears that being in prohibited areas some people were flogged and for being in streets during prohibited hours. We have dealt with taking part in processions.

A. Quite so.

Q. Besides the mosque incident which you mentioned there were five persons flogged for taking part in processions?

A. Quite so.

Q. Then there were 4 persons who were fined for failing to deliver up their motor cars?

A. That is right, Sir. They were all Europeans.

Q. And 4 persons were flogged for tearing down Martial Law orders?

A. That is all, Sir.

Q. There were two persons who were flogged for refusing to carry on their business?

A. That is right, Sir.

Q. And there were three persons who were flogged for adulterating milk?

A. Yes, there ought to have been a good many more. They were rather old.

Q. These people who were adulterating milk were fined to the extent of Rs. 2,682?

A. That is right, Sir.

Q. One person was flogged for raising dissatisfaction amongst His Majesty's subjects.

A. That is right, Sir. That was under the Divisional Commander's proclamation.

Q. One person was flogged for obstructing an officer on duty?

A. That is all, only one.

Q. One person was flogged for acts to the prejudice of good order. May I know what that means?

A. If I can look up case No. 156 I can tell you. I do not remember it. It is all in the file, it is case No. 156.

Q. And your opinion is, however far-reaching the reforms may be, they will not, as a matter of fact, in any way ease the situation and Indians will remain disloyal?

A. I think you will always have agitation as education goes on.

Q. I am not asking you any question about agitation. Your opinion is that there is no remedy so far as India is concerned, and any political reforms, no matter how far-reaching they may be, are useless?

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON.

A. That is my opinion. It is true, Sir. You will always have agitators, Sir.

Q. Now do you know the names of the leaders of educated India?

A. No, I gather that one is Mr. Gandhi. I see his name in papers.

Q. Have you wasted your time in reading the speeches of those leaders?

A. Oh, I read that paper, the Independent; I think it is of Allahabad.

Q. Do you know anybody else? Do you know Mr. Srinivasa Sastri?

A. I have not had the pleasure of knowing him.

Q. The name of any other leader in your opinion?

A. I rather gather that you are a leader of India. I rather gather that you come under the category of leaders of Indian opinion.

Q. Do you know my name?

A. Yes, I know your name, I cannot pronounce it quickly, but I can spell it.

Q. You had not known my name before I was appointed on this committee or you considered me as one of the smaller fry. I would like to know the names that were known to you before these disorders took place.

A. I really cannot give their names.

Q. According to you, the majority of the educated classes are the leaders of Indian opinion?

A. That is my opinion, most distinctly.

Q. I want to know on what it is based.

A. That has been so since I have been in India, four years.

Q. Can you tell me the name of any leader who has ever spread false rumours about the Rowlatt Act?

A. If I may say so, it is my opinion and I still stick to it. How I got that opinion does not affect the case.

Q. I want to know on what your opinion is based?

A. My opinion is based on what I believe is one's commonsense.

Q. That is your commonsense?

A. I may be mistaken, I am afraid, but that is my opinion.

Q. Beyond commonsense you cannot give me any tangible names?

A. There are so many names but they are unpronounceable to me.

Q. And you say "the colossal ignorance of the uneducated classes who are but the tools of the educated classes who are the more dangerous weapons behind these risings?"

A. That is so, Sir.

Q. That is your opinion?

A. It may be very nasty to read, but it is my opinion. I am perfectly frank about it. I have stated the case of Wagah.

Q. Your opinion is, no matter what reforms are given to India, there are going to be other outbreaks very soon in the future and they will be at shorter intervals and they will be better organised, and therefore the Government should be prepared for this eventuality? The other outbreaks are bound to take place and are certain to be better organised and they are going to be a more serious thing?

A. That is my frank opinion. That is my appreciation of the situation, Sir.

Q. And therefore the duty of the Government is to make in every principal city a fortress or a fort?

A. I do not say that at all. There is a vast difference between protection and building a fort or a fortress. Any elementary text-book on Engineering will show you that.

Q. You think in future the bulwark of the British Empire in India will not be the Indian public, but your brick and mortar walls?

A. Eventually you will be wrong in your supposition, Sir, when education has completed its task, but so long as you have got 95 per cent. of totally uneducated people being led by the nose by 5 per cent., the educated classes, you have got that danger.

Q. Who is responsible for it?

A. The Indian himself is responsible.

Q. Do you mean the uneducated?

A. You are getting very busy with their education. Are you not? I am all for it.

Q. Don't you think it is the duty of the Government to educate the Indian?

A. They are doing it.

Q. Who is responsible for only the 5 per cent. of the educated classes?

A. Very largely the Indian himself.

Q. That is, this poor man who cannot live from hand to mouth?

A. I do not think they are so very poor. I do not think they live from hand to mouth.

Q. Why did you prohibit entry into the Badshahi Mosque, and stipulate that no Hindu should be allowed to enter the Badshahi Mosque?

A. Because surely it is contrary to the good order and government of a mosque. I should think so. I am not an expert on the Muhammadan religion and law.

Q. Are you also versed in Muhammadan Law?

A. No, but I am credibly informed that Hindus do not usually go to Muhammadan mosques.

Q. Have you ever been to a mosque on a festive occasion?

A. No.

Q. Are you aware of the fact that there are mosques in other places where Hindus are allowed to go and everybody is allowed to go?

A. I am not aware of that, but they are not allowed for services at any rate.

Q. Are you aware that to every mosque on every Id day, the greatest festival of the Muhammadans, every Hindu and Muhammadan has free access?

A. No, I frankly confess I was not aware of that. Nor did I know they had free access to the pulpit as they had in these cases.

Q. Even supposing what you considered was true, would it not be your duty to bring about a reconciliation rather than to accentuate the differences even if the Hindus and Muhammadans were not prepared to do that?

A. I am all for it as long as its object is a right one. When its object is the overthrow of the British raj, I am against it.

Q. So far as this unity is concerned, you are not for it, you are only afraid of it?

A. I am not afraid of it. I think essentially there is no single nation in India at all.

Q. You agree with me that for the prosperity and progress of India it is absolutely necessary?

A. You can never be fit for self-government until you have become a nation.

Q. Any attempt that is made in that direction is a laudable one?

A. If it is done for obviously lawful purposes.

Q. It will be the only opportunity on those occasions when as a matter of fact both Hindus and Muhammadans are standing on a common platform.....?

A. You have got all about a common platform in the Badshahi Mosque. In this connection I should like to say that in 1856 the British Government had the right to close the Badshahi Mosque whenever it wanted and I was acting on that ground.

Q. Why do you confine your remarks to the Badshahi Mosque? You can take it from me that every mosque after 1857 which was confiscated was the property of Government. If you are going to base any arguments on that ground, then they would of course apply to the whole country. Government or rather the King-Emperor being the landlord, every inch of land that is held by anybody is either granted to him or the King-Emperor or he holds it from him. Therefore that argument does not appeal to me very much.

A. With a special condition in it, that the Government had the right to close that mosque whenever it liked: or rather "prohibit access to it" is the wording of the order.

Q. Don't you think that it was a convenient place for holding meetings?

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON.

A. Specially fine, but the open space outside is much nicer.

Q. Do you think that any mob would select that place just beneath the walls of the Fort and go there and preach rebellion?

A. You cannot hear from the Fort what is said in the mosque.

Q. A body of soldiers may come out at any time. Do you think that it would be a very safe place?

A. It would be ludicrous to think that a body of soldiers would march from the Fort into the mosque unless they had some good reasons for so doing. I gathered from the C. I. D. that they were trying to know what was happening there.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Thomas Smith—

Q. Do you say that, judging from your experience of what might have happened you consider the whole question of Martial Law in India calls for reconsideration? What exactly are we to understand?

A. I rather mean the relations between the civil power and the military. In India you have got three kinds of Martial Law. You have got what is known as Martial Law in all other countries, which is not a law at all and which means the will of the individual commander. Then you have got the Statutory Martial Law (a) and Statutory Martial Law (b). Statutory Martial Law (a), I gather, is rather an advance upon the ordinary business of giving troops temporarily to the assistance of the civil power. It is rather safer to get the best of both things, to get all the power without the civil Government handing over control, but it is a little involved, and I think I am right in saying that India is the only country where you have got these three different kinds of Martial Law. Martial Law (b) is applied specially to forts and fortresses. Statutory Martial Law (a) can be introduced wherever the Government wishes to have it, and ordinary Martial Law is introduced where the civil Government ceases to exist; this is of course common to all countries. You have therefore got three kinds here, and it makes the relations between the civil and the military liable to strain.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. You said that you believed there was a widespread conspiracy with the object of waging war against the King and for purpose of rebellion. May I take it that on such an important and serious question you will not form your opinion hastily?

A. No, Sir, I should not dream of it.

Q. And you will form your opinion after a great deal of consideration and after getting reliable evidence?

A. Quite so.

Q. Also you have told us that the C. I. D. is very efficient?

A. I think they are.

Q. And the Government have at their disposal an agency to inform them of what is going on in the country. Do you agree with that?

A. Yes.

Q. And they would place before you all materials to form your opinion? Now, may I know what is the evidence upon which you came to the conclusion that there was a widespread conspiracy in India to wage war against the King?

A. I gave four points just now. I made a present of one to the Pandit and stood on the three. One was the universal attack on communications. That must have been organized. It could not have been the inspiration of the moment to every villager in the Punjab and other places in India to suddenly strike at communications. I think you cannot get away from the facts. That showed the organization for the paralyzing of communications.

Q. My questions did not relate to these things, but apart from these occurrences, I want to know whether you had positive evidence as to the existence of any conspiracy?

A. My opinion is entirely based upon this, and nothing beyond that.

Q. And the Government also did not tell you anything about it?

A. No, Sir.

Q. If they had anything in their possession, probably they would have told you?

A. I cannot answer that. I should think they would.

Q. In special circumstances they would surely have told you. So may I take it that the inference is correct that neither the Punjab Government nor Government of India nor you had any positive evidence apart from these occurrences that there was a widespread conspiracy to wage war against the Government?

A. Of course I cannot answer for the Punjab Government or for the Government of India. I can only speak for myself. There is no good asking me whether they would or would not tell me.

Q. They did not tell you?

A. It is my own opinion, it has nothing to do with the Government of India or the Government of the Punjab. It is purely a personal opinion.

Q. I see here that you have taken a survey of the whole Indian situation?

A. That is what we call an appreciation of the situation.

Q. In order to appreciate the situation in Lahore you have taken a survey of the whole Indian situation, and from that you have drawn the inference that because certain occurrences took place in various parts of India, therefore in Lahore also there was a deep-seated conspiracy going on which require stamping out by very strong measures?

A. "Preventing the taking place" is perhaps a better wording to apply to Lahore.

Q. I am talking about conspiracy, may I take it that your idea was to prevent a conspiracy taking place?

A. To prevent the results of that conspiracy. I cannot stop a conspiracy. Two people can meet in some dark corner somewhere and hatch a conspiracy, but you can stop the results of it.

Q. And from the results can you not trace the conspiracy?

A. If you are lucky you may be able to trace it, but you may not be. For instance, the C. I. D. with all their efficiency had not known on the 10th April, they had no knowledge whatever of the outbreak like that which happened in Amritsar and they did not hear of it until a few hours after it happened.

Q. From these occurrences that took place, did you make an attempt to find out whether there was any conspiracy in Lahore?

A. No, the C. I. D. were doing their work.

Q. Did you attempt to find out from the C. I. D. the whereabouts of this conspiracy?

A. Of course, I did. Naturally I tried to find out.

Q. What was the result of that?

A. I could not find out what was at the back of it.

Q. You have said in answer to a question, Lahore being the capital of the Punjab, therefore it was also the headquarters, at any rate, if not of the Indian conspiracy at least of the conspiracy in the Punjab?

A. I should think so very naturally, because you have more lawyers here, you have got more of the usual agitating classes here.

Q. Because you have got more lawyers here and the usual agitating classes here?

A. Yes, that is it.

Q. Who are the usual agitating classes, may I know, besides the lawyers?

A. I cannot say which particular class, but you know perfectly well what are called the extremists in India, they are the educated classes and very highly educated people.

Q. Then every person who is highly educated in India is naturally an extremist?

A. Not naturally at all. But that is the class from which they come, I venture to say that is an historical fact. I don't say they all are.

Q. Those that are extremists are all highly educated, but are all extremists highly educated?

A. As far as I know they are very prominent.

24 November 1919.]

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON.

Q. So the class of people who are agitators are all extremists or seditious as you call them?

A. I prefer that word in plainer English.

Q. Are they lawyers practically or a great majority of them or some highly educated people who are called extremists?

A. I do not say lawyers particularly, I say the highly educated people.

Q. What I understood you to say was the lawyers and the usual agitating class, then I asked you who were the extremists?

A. They came from that class.

Q. So the lawyers and some of the highly educated people were called extremists. Then did you trace this conspiracy in Lahore to these people?

A. Unfortunately from the very fact that they were not arrested it is clear that I did not trace them.

Q. What made you think that the lawyers and some of the highly educated classes are seditious?

A. That is my own view.

Q. Certainly you must have based it upon facts?

A. I can form my opinion how I like.

Q. You must give me the grounds upon which you based that opinion?

A. I have got my own opinions. I tell you every normal thinking man has his opinions, and that is the opinion I come to.

Q. It is a very serious charge against an important class of people, and I am sure you will not make that charge lightly without some very strong grounds, and if I ask you to tell me the grounds, I think it is only right that you should tell me.

A. No, I have given you my opinion.

Q. You would rather not give me the grounds?

A. I give you the grounds. You have only to read the papers. Look at the meetings that are held all over India. They are all run by the educated classes, and very often by lawyers. I read my papers and I form my opinions from them.

Q. Are all those meetings necessarily seditious meetings? Because lawyers organize those meetings, that is why they are seditious?

A. When the meetings have a seditious object, undoubtedly; if the lawyers have organized them.

Q. But not all meetings are like that, are they?

A. I suppose they are not.

Q. The very fact of lawyers organizing meetings does not show that the meetings are seditious?

A. It depends on the object for which the meeting is held.

Q. The object you know from the speeches?

A. Yes, and the results.

Q. What do you mean by the results?

A. The results of the meeting. You organize a meeting and bricks and stones are freely used . . . . .

Q. A meeting may have been held to pacify a crowd and people started throwing stones?

A. That may have been the result. There may be extreme cases.

Q. So a mere knowledge of the speeches will not tell us who are seditious and who are not seditious?

A. Not necessarily, that is the trouble.

Q. In this survey of Indian situation you say that all over it was the property of Europeans that was burnt or destroyed?

A. Yes, Sir. I only said in the Punjab. I was speaking of places that I know, Gujranwala and Amritsar.

Q. I thought in this you had not restricted yourself to the survey of the situation in the Punjab alone but that you had taken the whole of India, because you have mentioned places like Calcutta, Ahmedabad and Bombay.

A. Did I say there that the property of Europeans only was destroyed?

Q. In your survey of the situation you have confined yourself not to the Punjab alone,—I am stating the fact—but you have taken the whole of India. Therefore I took it that when you said that these disturbances were directed against Europeans, that naturally must relate to the whole of India where all these disturbances took place. That is why I put you that question.

A. I specifically said Gujranwala and Amritsar in answer to the Pandit. I particularly pointed out the non-destruction of sahib-log-occupied, but Indian-owned houses, those are the two special cases that I gave.

Q. Very well. You believe that the disturbances in the Punjab and also the disturbances in the Bombay Presidency and Ahmedabad and Calcutta were connected disturbances?

A. I do so, Sir.

Q. Then are you aware that in Ahmedabad there was some property destroyed which was not the property of Europeans?

A. I am not aware of that.

Q. Also that an Indian gentleman was killed in Ahmedabad?

A. I am not even aware of that. I would have told you that if I knew it.

Q. Do you know that in the whole of the United Provinces, practically at all places hartal was held and there were no disorders?

A. I am not aware of the fact.

Q. May I take it that the places at which disturbances took place have been put down in that list of yours?

A. All those that I found out. I do not say that this is a perfect or complete list.

Q. If there were disturbance anywhere, you are sure to find that here?

A. I hope so; I do not guarantee that that is a complete list at all. I only put it forward for what it is worth. I should think it is the best list.

Q. Who gave you that information?

A. I got practically every newspaper in India and I put a staff of clerks to read through them and to report the places at which disturbances took place. There might have been others.

Q. It is not likely that any place would have been left out?

A. I quite agree, it is probably very nearly accurate. I should think so.

Q. None of those places belong to the United Provinces?

A. I am not very good at the Geography of India. I cannot tell to which provinces these places belong.

Q. You may have also learned from papers that there was a hartal in the United Provinces?

A. I do not know it as a matter of fact.

Q. You also thought that the disturbances in Delhi were also due to the same one common conspiracy that was going right through India?

A. That was my view.

Q. Will you be surprised to hear that when the authorities made investigation, they found that there was no conspiracy as regards the Delhi disturbances?

A. I saw that in the evidence that took place before your commission.

Q. Do you still hold that opinion?

A. That is my opinion; unless you can explain to me the cutting off of communications, I must stick to my opinion.

Q. Your opinion is based upon the extraordinary coincidence that everyone of these attacks was directed, with the exception of Amritsar and another place, at communications. You based your opinion on the one isolated fact that communications were disturbed, railways were destroyed, and concluded that there was sufficient truth in the allegation that this were done to wage war against the King?

A. I have already stated in my evidence, if you had followed me, that there were three other factors.

Q. I referred to it simply because you just referred to it. There was some talk about the connection between the Lahore disturbances and the frontier disturbances. How do you connect the two?

A. Because we have it as a fact that emissaries from India went across the border of India and were in Afghanistan. That is the connection. Proclamations came down from Afghanistan into India.

24 November 1919.]

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON.

[Concluded.]

Q. Because the Amir of Afghanistan chose to make a proclamation, that is the reason why you came to that conclusion?

A. If you have the view that the Amir invented it, I leave it to you. He said that his proclamation was based upon information which reached him from India and a lot of representations made from India; so he took action against the British Empire. If you think he invented that reason, I must leave it to you.

Q. Representations came to him from India?

A. He said so in his proclamation that came.

Q. Government were not aware who were the people who gave him information?

A. I do not know about Government. I am not here to answer for Government. I am here to answer for myself. So I cannot answer.

By Mr. Herbert, Government Advocate—

Q. It has been suggested that you acted very improperly in making over cars and carriages of Indian gentlemen to Europeans. Were the cars that were made over used by Europeans to perform official duties or for joy rides?

A. It was purely for official work.

By the President—

Q. Do you mean that there were cars used by Europeans other than officials?

A. I do not think any private Europeans here had cars. I think there were cars of officials in Government employ. I cannot think of a single car owned by other Europeans.

By Mr. Herbert, Government Advocate—

Q. Have you any reason to believe that your administration of Martial Law in Lahore was appreciated by the Indian community?

A. I am proud to say it was. I am able to give reasons. It is rather personal and I hardly like to mention it. Before I left Lahore, the Muhammadan community presided over by Mahomed Shafi, Member of the Indian Government, was kind enough to entertain me at a dinner in appreciation of my Martial Law administration.

Q. The Hindus also joined?

A. There were Hindus also, the Afghans also and the British public also. In fact I left Lahore with a feeling that I had been all things to all men.

SIR,

We, the undersigned members of the Committee of Supervision of the Badshahi Mosque, make the following statement and give the undertaking set forth below:—

At Lahore, Tuesday, the 25th November 1919.

PRESENT:

The Hon'ble LORD HUNTER.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice RANKIN.
 The Hon'ble Mr. W. F. RICE, C.S.I., C.I.E., I.C.S.
 Major-General Sir GEORGE BARROW, K.C.B.,
 K.C.M.G.

The Hon'ble Pandit JAGAT NARAYAN.
 The Hon'ble Mr. THOMAS SMITH.
 Sir C. H. SETALVAD, KT.
 Sardar Sahibzada SULTAN AHMAD KHAN.

Mr. H. WILLIAMSON, M.B.E., I.P., Secretary.

Mr. E. P. BROADWAY, Senior Superintendent of Police, Lahore.

By the President—

Q. Are you the Senior Superintendent of Police, Lahore?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. I think, as we know a general hartal had been arranged for Sunday, the 30th of March?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Which was afterwards postponed to the 6th of April?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Was there a meeting at the Bradlaugh Hall to protest against the Rowlatt Act on Sunday, the 30th March?

A. That was the one which was put off for the 6th.

Q. And in consequence of the trouble that had arisen in Delhi you had to make special arrangements to prevent similar trouble in Lahore?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did you on the 3rd of April issue notices under section 80 of the Police Act indicating that no meetings or processions should be held in the public streets without a proper license?

A. Yes, Sir, after consulting the Deputy Commissioner.

Q. Did you require intending promoters of any such meeting or procession to apply to you for licenses not later than 10 A.M. on the day previous to that for which the license was required?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Each of these notices were prepared and issued after consultation with the Deputy Inspector-General and Deputy Commissioner.

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Were they sent to all the newspapers?

A. They were published as widely as possible and sent to all the newspapers, English and Vernacular, to the organisers of the meeting and their known sympathisers by name, posted at the City Gates, in fact made as widely known as possible.

Q. Was there any application for a license made?

A. No application was received.

Q. On the morning of the 4th April did the Deputy Commissioner hold a meeting of all the Municipal Commissioners of Lahore in his office?

A. Yes, Sir, at 11.30.

Q. Were you present then?

A. No, that was about 10 o'clock.

Q. Were you at that meeting?

Q. On that occasion did the Deputy Commissioner remind the Municipal Commissioners of their responsibilities and duties?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And you asked them to look after their wards?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. In particular did you say anything as to the attitude they should adopt with reference to any attempts being made to compel people to suspend business and close shops?

A. They were asked to see that no coercion was used to compel people to suspend business or to close their shops.

Q. Were any efforts made by the Municipal Commissioners to carry out these instructions?

A. As far as their reports went they had done so.

Q. Were they successful?

A. No.

Q. Was there a general hartal throughout the city and Anarkali?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. On Friday previously, i.e., Friday, the 4th April, did you accompany the Deputy Commissioner to the cantonments?

A. The D. I. G. of the C. I. D. and the Deputy Commissioner went with me to the cantonments.

Q. Was a route march of troops through Lahore arranged for Saturday morning?

A. Yes, Sir, by the British Infantry.

Q. What was the display of force that was arranged for them on Saturday, the 5th?

A. A route march of troops through Lahore was arranged by the General for Saturday morning. It was further arranged that a hundred British Infantry should march through Lahore via Gol Bagh to the Fort on Saturday evening, and should remain in the Fort till Monday morning. They were provided with lorries to go out, if necessary, quickly, but the force in the Fort was not used at any time.

Q. I think eventually the arrangements actually ordered by the General were that a squadron of 114 Lancers were to be at the Gol Bagh at 6.30 A.M. on Sunday ready to assist if required with two armoured cars to be at the High Court and two at the Deputy Commissioner's Kutchery?

A. Yes, Sir, they were to remain all day there.

Q. So far as you know were they the only armed military forces?

A. Yes, they were, with the exception of signal and medical units. They were non-combatant units.

Q. As regards the Punjab Light Horse, what about them?

A. They kept about 20 troops on duty to look after their headquarters and the Punjab Rifles arranged for 50 men to look after their armoury at their headquarters, and the North-Western Railway Volunteer Force arranged to look after their own armoury at the Railway Station with a similar force of 50 men.

Q. How much of the Indian Defence Force?

A. These are the Indian Defence Force.

Q. But they were not moved, I think, from their posts throughout the day?

A. They did not move all the day.

Q. About 4 P.M. did the Deputy Commissioner hold a meeting at which some of the leaders of the people were summoned?

25 November 1919.

Mr. E. P. BROADWAY.

A. Yes, Sir, the leaders and the organisers of the hartal, as far as we knew them from the list of signatories to the notices, were summoned.

Q. Was that on Saturday?

A. That was on the same day, Friday, 4 P.M. Not Saturday, Sir.

Q. At that meeting did you point out to the gentlemen present the danger of exciting people?

A. Yes, Sir, we pointed out to the people the particular danger at that particular time. There was always danger in these hartals, and at that time with the economic distress we considered the danger particularly bad, and that was all pointed out, and we indicated to them that they could not be free of responsibility. Under these conditions if they stirred up forces they would not be able to control them.

Q. Did you say anything as to their refraining from bringing compulsion to bear upon them to get the hartal made general?

A. We asked that they should, if possible, abandon the hartal altogether as being dangerous. But if they could not or would not abandon it at least they would see that the closing of shops and suspension of business was voluntary, that no coercion would be used to make people, who were willing to open shops or to carry on work or business, shut up shops and close business.

Q. Did you make arrangements as to being kept in touch with the people?

A. Yes Sir. That was all based on some articles in the Tribune. I saw these, and one of the points made in the Tribune was that we should keep in touch with the leaders. I particularly pointed out that it caused incitement, but it was reversing the order of things. The leaders might be scattered all over the town. I particularly wished that we should keep in touch with the leaders, and that we should be found in the Deputy Commissioner's office at the Telegraph Office. It was impossible for us to find them, but we hoped that they would keep in touch with us.

Q. I see that you prepared a statement showing the order and dispositions in detail?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Is that the one which is found as Annexure C* to this statement of yours?

A. Yes, Sir, that is my order.

Q. You see it is signed by Mr. Clarke?

A. He was my Deputy Superintendent for the time.

Q. What was your idea in making the dispositions?

A. Roughly to protect the civil Station from any ebullition of mobs from the city into the Civil Station.

Q. Were the armed picquets and reserves commanded by the carefully selected officers?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did you explain their duties to them?

A. I think I had them called up before me and I carefully explained to each man and impressed upon them the importance of self-control and a careful study of the rules as regards dealing with the mob.

Q. Did you with your remaining officers take up your headquarters with the Deputy Commissioner at his office?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Was that the nearest point to Bradlaugh Hall?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Were all detachments, Police and Military, in their places by 6-30 A.M.

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You remained in the closest touch with the Deputy Commissioner throughout the day?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did you also make visits to the picquets and reserves?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And up to about 11 everything was reported quiet?

A. Yes.

Q. At that time had you heard of any gathering?

A. There had been a large gathering of students and people at the Kavi and we heard of this gathering breaking up and parties dispersing, going off towards the city.

Q. You refer to what route they had taken?

A. They entered the city by various routes and various gates, and apparently they collected into mobs again inside the city and these eventually came on to the circular road which passes along by the Mochi, Shahalmi, Lohari Gates, etc., and formed into one big mob.

Q. Did the City Inspector enter the city?

A. The City Inspector came patrolling round the circular road. He went into the Mochi Gate which was an important gate, and was immediately confronted by a huge mob. He was practically swallowed up in that mob.

Q. Then what happened to that mob?

A. That mob came out of the Mochi Gate and on to the circular road. The people were pouring in from all sides to join this mob all the time. The Inspector informed me that they turned up to the Railway Station direction; but he pointed out to them that it was not the direction of the Bradlaugh Hall and induced them to turn to the west again. They then turned to the west and came along the circular road being momentarily increased and down into the Anarkali Bazar just opposite the Lahori Gate. In the meantime the City Inspector extricated himself from the mob and came down to the side street to report to me at the Kutchery. Mr. Fyson, the Deputy Commissioner, and myself were there when he arrived. He told us about this.

Q. What report did he give you as to the attitude of the crowd so far?

A. He said that they were very excited, but that they were peaceful inasmuch as they had done no damage or assaulted anybody. They were not doing damage or anybody or to any property, but they were very excited. In fact they begged us not to go out to them.

Q. What did you do then?

A. I sent him back immediately to take up his original position in the mob and try to restrain them. At the same time I sent Mr. Clarke, Deputy Superintendent, on horseback to Nila Gumbaz to try and hold them there, and in support of them I sent two Inspectors and 50 men to follow up to Nila Gumbaz to help him.

Q. What did you yourself do?

A. Mr. Fyson and I then came out, and after we had been consulting together we ordered two armed motor cars to proceed to the Telegraph Office and we rode to the Gol Bagh where the Cavalry were stationed. We galloped on to the Mall at the Market Chowk where the Anarkali Bazar really debouches. We saw that the crowd had not come down a bit. They turned to Chowk Nila Gumbaz towards the King Edward Square. We went through the Gate in front of the mob until we came to Y. M. C. A. Chowk where we saw a crowd, a huge crowd coming down.

Q. In what direction were they coming?

A. Towards the Mall. We immediately went up to the head of the mob with a few mounted men I had, and came up with them to Mul Chand's shop.

Q. Where were Mr. Clarke and the Inspector?

A. They had been driven along by the mob. They were there at the time with the mob; we found them there.

Q. Were they endeavouring to get the mob go back?

A. They were there all the time; but the mob would not listen.

Q. Were you yourself parleying with the mob asking them to go back?

A. Yes; Mr. Fyson and myself parleyed with the mob.

Q. What did they say in reply to your request?

25 November 1919.]

Mr. E. P. BROADWAY.

A. They said they would not go back; they asked all sorts of conditions. They asked me to jump off the horse; our horses were impatient; some of the young fellows came in front and said: "if you send back the police, we will go back;" I said "Alright; I have no objection to send the police back;" and I ordered the police to go back; and when they went back, instead of going back, the mob became more excited, shouted and yelled, as if they had secured a victory and pushed forward a few paces; and that was the kind of parleying that one had for some time. They asked again that we should go back. I said, "No, we cannot go back." One sowar was left with me. I sent my orderly there. He went back to the end of the street. I said: "I cannot go back." I turned back myself. I turned my horse, and there was another shouting and yelling. Mr. Clarke, my Deputy Superintendent said. "That was what they had been doing with me all the way." This parleying went on for some time, and then Mr. Gokal Chand Naurang came up. He was one of the leaders, one of the signatories to the notice. He was one of the local leaders; he came up and tried to induce the mob to go back. He was on foot and only a few people could see him, and his efforts were of no avail, and he appealed to me to give him a horse so that the people could see him. I gave him a police sowar's horse, and meantime I may mention that the opening of the street into the Mall had been lined by cavalry and armoured motor cars with machine guns, so that the situation was practically that the mob could not move really. They were about 200 yards behind us. The cavalry were blocking the street. My sowars had come back, and behind the cavalry were two armoured motor cars which could be seen for a very long way. Then Dr. Gokal Chand Naurang came. I put him on to a horse and they saw him and raised shouts, and he urged them to go back, and by that time I think they were rather glad of some excuse to go back. They saw they could not come forward, and they turned back.

Q. Where did they go?

A. They went back the same way they had come past the Nila Gumbaz to Kutchery road, and on to Bradlaugh Hall.

Q. Was the street then clear?

A. At that part of the street the trouble was all over.

Q. And did the Deputy Commissioner and you return to the Hall?

A. We came back the same way and got to the Market Chowk and the mob had extended as far as we could see. The mob was filling the whole of the Anarkali Bazar, and when it was halted by us at Mool Chand's shop apparently the pressure from behind drove part of the mob that had not gone on into the bit of bazar between Nila Gumbaz and the Market Chowk. There they were met by other officers and some cavalry, and when Mr. Fyson and I came back there they were driving them back, and trying to get them to disperse. After a time we pushed them back there and then Dr. Gokal Chand Naurang again came back on the same horse and eventually succeeded in leading them away down Kutchery Road to the Gol Bagh and to the Bradlaugh Hall.

Q. How long had all this lasted?

A. About 2½ hours, perhaps a little more.

Q. Was there any further trouble that day?

A. There was no further trouble that day, Sir. From 2 o'clock they organised the meeting for Bradlaugh Hall, which, as far as I remember, was fixed for 5 p.m., but in view of the crowd and the excitement and the crowd having got into the Bradlaugh Hall and filled up the place, they had meetings there at about 2 o'clock, I believe or half-past 2. They put up people to speak to keep the crowd occupied.

Q. And meantime had you any meeting with the leaders of the people?

A. Two of them came to see me, Dr. Gokal Chand Naurang and Mr. Duni Chand. They are the only two I saw that day: they came to see me at the Kutchery.

Q. And what arrangement did you make with them?

A. We pointed out what serious results there might have been, what a dangerous situation had been created, and pointed out that we could not have any more processions down the Mall again, and they asked that in case impromptu processions were made they should be allowed down the Mall. We said we could not allow that, and eventually they undertook to try and prevent this. They were chiefly students. Apparently they were afraid of forming processions, and we also asked them to have their meeting over as quickly as possible before sunset, as it would be more dangerous if large crowds dispersed after dark, and eventually Dr. Gokal Chand Naurang undertook that the meeting would be over by 6 o'clock, and that the students would not process down the Mall.

Q. Did you make a fresh disposition of forces to deal with the situation, if necessary?

A. Yes, Sir, I had to make fresh dispositions in consultation with the Deputy Commissioner, both of police and of military in order to enforce our orders as to processions coming down the Mall.

Q. I understand there was no further clashing with the police that day?

A. No further; there was lots of excitement at the Hall, and speeches and so forth, but there was no trouble after that.

Q. Did you get any report as to the conduct of the crowd during that night in the city?

A. Yes, there were reports that the crowds of students and others paraded the streets shouting out their various cries of jai, and abusing Municipal Commissioners and others who had been endeavouring to prevent the hartal and assist local officers.

Q. And business was resumed on the 7th?

A. Yes.

A. And business was continued for the next two days?

A. Yes, for the 3 days, 7th, 8th and 9th. There was no particular excitement.

Q. We know that the Ram Naumi celebration was held on the 9th?

A. Yes, Sir, at night.

Q. Were you present there?

A. I was not, Sir, no British Officer was present there, it is always managed by the City Inspector.

Q. On the evening of the 10th of April did you hear about the trouble that had taken place at Amritsar?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. When was this?

A. I cannot remember the time. I was out in the morning. We had been hearing news that a hartal similar to that on Saturday, the 6th, would be held on the following Sunday. Therefore I went out to see the General on the morning of the 10th and arranged with him that certain military measures should be taken from Saturday evening. When I returned to my office I was telephoned to, I think, by the Personal Assistant to the Inspector-General to come down at once and take the Inspector-General out to the cantonments. I think it must have been about half-past two, or possibly later.

Q. You refer to Saturday, the 10th was not a Saturday?

A. No, Sir, I was telling you that I went out on the morning of the 10th to arrange for troops for the following Saturday evening because we expected a hartal on the following Sunday similar to the previous Sunday's hartal. I took the Inspector-General out to cantonments, and when I got to the Central Police Office I enquired what the sudden call meant and what was the matter. I was told there had been serious trouble in Amritsar and people had been murdered there.

Q. We have had the details of what occurred?

A. I then took the Inspector-General out to the cantonments, and we arranged for troops to come out at 6-30 that day instead of the following Saturday.

Q. Did you go to Government House and see the Lieutenant-Governor?

25 November 1919.]

Mr. E. P. BROADWAY.

A. When I came back I made police arrangements in case of trouble, and while I was making these arrangements at about 5-30, perhaps I heard that the news of Mr. Gandhi's arrest had come in and possibly of the Amritsar trouble, and that the shops were shutting again. I then wrote supplementary orders and telephoned these to my police stations and lines. Having done so I motored back to my bungalow. There I met the Deputy Commissioner who was waiting for me and informed him that His Honour wished to see me.

Q. I think you proceeded then to Government House?

A. I then drove Mr. Fyson, Deputy Commissioner, to Government House.

Q. Did you receive news as to a crowd collecting on the Mall?

A. While we were at Government House a message came through by telephone that crowds were collecting. I did not take the message. The impression conveyed was that the mob had formed and was moving towards Civil Lines.

Q. Then I think you proceeded down Montgomery Road to the Mall?

A. His Honour then dismissed us, and I went off to my police lines in the first instance to turn out my reserves, while Mr. Fyson and Mr. Cocks drove straight down the Mall.

Q. Then after you had turned out your reserves you proceeded to the Mall yourself?

A. Yes, Sir. I sent one party down McLeod Road and one party down Montgomery Road, armed parties under officers to a rendezvous at the Telegraph Office.

Q. How many men had you with you?

A. Actually 13 mounted men.

Q. As you were proceeding to the Mall did you hear firing?

A. I am not very clear about it. Just as we were leaving the Police Lines I think we heard shots.

Q. And at about Charing Cross you met the cavalry?

A. Yes, as we came on to the Mall at Charing Cross we met the cavalry coming out; they were late.

Q. Did you then proceed further?

A. We proceeded rapidly down. I asked the Officer Commanding to draw in his defence party and to let me and my men get in front of the cavalry because in all these matters the police, I told him, should take action first. He agreed to this and he put back his men and he was alongside of me, and followed by the police, 12 or 13 sowars, and the cavalry we proceeded rapidly to the Telegraph Office.

Q. At the Telegraph Office did you find Mr. Cocks?

A. I found Mr. Cocks at the Telegraph Office and asked what had happened. He informed me that a big mob had come down the Mall, that he had very few men and tried to disperse the mob and eventually had to fire to do so. I then asked where my men were and where my officers were. He told me that Mr. Clarke, my Deputy Superintendent, was at the time pushing the mob back towards Anarkali.

Q. Did you find what force Mr. Clarke had at his disposal?

A. I understand he had about a dozen men. I therefore thought it necessary to proceed to his assistance immediately.

Q. You joined him?

A. Yes, Sir. I asked the Officer Commanding the cavalry to give me some troopers. I picked up a picket of foot police of 25 muskets at the Telegraph Office and we proceeded along the Mall up through King Edward Square, past Mul Chand's into Nila Gumbaz. Before we got half way I thought it necessary to push on. I left my foot police and with the mounted men we galloped on. Just inside Nila Gumbaz, a few yards inside Anarkali Bazar, I found Mr. Clarke with only five or six men trying to drive a very large mob back up the bazar towards the city.

Q. Then you took action?

A. I joined him, Sir, with the mounted men and we pushed the crowd up Anarkali almost to the end of the bazar, to within 200 yards of the end of the bazar.

Q. Was the crowd getting smaller or larger?

A. The crowd was growing and packing closer and we pushed them back every moment until they got to within 200 yards of the Circular Road and they became very dense. I was mounted and it was getting dark, and one could only see a sea of heads closely packed from where we were, as far as the Lahori Gate, something like 15,000 or 20,000 people.

Q. What was the attitude of the crowd towards you?

A. Very excited and very angry.

Q. Did they throw anything at you?

A. Yes, Sir, when we stopped they began throwing bricks and mud. As soon as we were stopped I sent back one of my mounted men with a written note to the Deputy Commissioner at the Telegraph Office to come up with reinforcements at once. We were stoned there with bricks and mud for about three quarters of an hour.

Q. Were you yourself hit?

A. I was hit five or six times, only three times at all badly.

Q. On any occasion did you receive a severe blow?

A. Yes, I got half a brick, I think it must have been, from the top of one of the houses. They were stoning us from the tops of the houses and from the front as well. And this hit me on the point of my shoulder blade and raised a big bruise there. I could not lie on my back for three or four days but apart from that it was not serious.

Q. Did you receive any other wounds?

A. My hand was cut open and my thigh was cut open. It was not serious, only drew a little blood, and the others were lumps of mud. One lump of mud bigger than a cricket ball hit me just inside my lap but did not hurt me.

Q. Were any officers or men near you struck?

A. Yes, Sir, Lieutenant Wilson, the officer with me, was hit, I understand, on the shoulder with a brick and my Deputy Superintendent, Mr. Clarke, was hit on the hand. He had almost the same thing as I had. He got it on the back of his hand, but in his case it was rather worse than mine and it festered and he was a week or two with his hand in a sling. I also saw many of my men hit in various places, but nobody was seriously injured.

Q. Were some crackers thrown by the crowd?

A. Yes, Sir, at one time when it was getting very dark some crackers were thrown and Mr. Clarke remarked near me that they had got pistols or firearms. However they proved to be only crackers.

Q. Were the crowd fired on on that occasion?

A. Before Mr. Fyson came. To our left front were some low shops and also a shrine or grave. Just by that there was a building being put up or repaired, a chemist's shop. That is where most of the bricks and rubbish were obtained from as far as I could gather and some of the wilder and more excited people got on to the roof of these low sheds and they were very persistent and they were damaging us worse than any others, and eventually we fired three shots of buckshot up on to those roofs to clear them.

Q. Who gave the instructions to fire?

A. I did.

Q. That was after Mr. Fyson came?

A. Before Mr. Fyson came?

Q. At the time you gave the instructions to fire was it possible to get the mob to disperse without firing?

A. Absolutely impossible, Sir. We had been trying to get them to disperse. I had been warning them that I would have to fire and we could not move them. We were being swayed backwards and forwards. As they became a little more violent we fell back. After I had fired I think Mr. Ram Bhaj Dutt came up to me and said "that is a good thing you have done, firing in the air, now they will disperse." I told him "I am not firing in the air. I have no authority to fire in the air. Our rules do not allow it; I fired at those low houses, and if we have to fire we shall fire at the crowds and not over their heads."

Q. Did Ram Bhaj Dutt try to get the crowd back?

A. Yes, Sir, he waved his hands and tried to get them to listen to him and he asked eventually for a horse. I put him on a horse, but the crowd was very excited and making such a noise the horse would not face it. He was put on to a sowar's horse which would not go near the crowd and began backing and plunging and he got off. He could not manage it. He then, I think, got on to an electric standard close by.

Mr. E. P. BROADWAY.

Q. With a view to addressing the crowd?

A. He did try to address the crowd, and waved a cloth and tried to get them to go back, but the crowd were not listening to anybody.

Q. Had the first shots you fired made any casualties among the crowd?

A. I cannot say, there may have been casualties, but we did not hear of any.

Q. Before Mr. Fyson came on the scene?

A. Before Mr. Fyson arrived on the scene, and I told him we had been stoned for three quarters of an hour and that I had been warning them and could not get them to disperse. I was getting nervous at this time. I had been hung up there and had no knowledge of what was going on. I was responsible for the whole of the police arrangements throughout Lahore and did not know what was going on elsewhere and I told him and he said he would try and disperse the mob. He rode forward to disperse them and talked to them, but was met with stones and bricks, and he called out that he had been hit, and I said "you had better come back." He gesticulated and tried to get them to hear. As soon as anybody tried to speak to the crowd they became wilder than ever; they shouted and jumped and clapped their hands. And eventually he fell back and said "You will have to fire." Mr. Ram Bhaj Dutt came up to me and asked for time. Mr. Fyson gave them a few minutes, I do not remember how many minutes; I remember his taking out his watch. He was on a horse in front of me, and after a time he instructed me to fire. I asked him to fall back behind my firing party and then I opened fire.

Q. Had Mr. Dutt attempted to get the crowd to go back?

A. He had Sir, he tried to speak to them on the ground, he tried to get on a horse and confront them, and as I heard he got on to a standard to try to get them to listen, but nobody would listen at the time.

Q. After that Mr. Fyson gave you instructions to fire and you in turn I suppose ordered your men to fire?

A. He gave me instructions to fire and I ordered the men to fire with buckshot.

Q. And were five or six shots fired?

A. Five or six buckshots were fired.

Q. What effect did that have on the crowd?

A. The crowd began to break and I shouted out "cease fire."

Q. Did the crowd then disperse?

A. As soon as the crowd began to break we moved forward. Mr. Fyson had brought up cavalry as well.

Q. Did you yourself move on to the Circular Road?

A. We moved on to Circular Road where I established a picquet of my own police to stop the Circular Road westward and to stop the mouth of the Anarkali Bazar. A few troopers of the 17th Lancers were left with them in support. The Deputy Commissioner and I moved on and my Deputy Superintendent Mr. Clarke who was on foot all this time. We moved round Circular Road—the main body throwing out men into the gardens. We cleared the street and the garden right up to the Akbari Gate.

Q. Where is the Akbari Gate?

A. A good way on to the east and a little to the north.

Q. Does Circular Road go round Lahore?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. I think you sent Mr. Clarke with mounted police?

A. Yes, Sir. I told Mr. Clarke to take one of the sowar's horses and to take the remaining mounted constables up towards the Kotwali. I asked him to go through Landa Bazar and McLeod Road and to join me at the Telegraph Office and report affairs to me there.

Q. You went back with Mr. Fyson to the Telegraph Office?

A. Yes, Sir, the same way as we had come.

Q. When Mr. Clarke arrived I think he reported to you as having dispersed a mob in Landa Bazar?

A. Yes, Sir, it appears that Mr. de Gale who was at the lines at the time had received information that a big mob was in the Landa Bazar. He proceeded with some men to Landa Bazar but he outrode the men on foot and was attacked. He was attacked, I think, with sticks or stones. Anyhow his pony fell. He recovered himself and was joined by the men. When Mr. Clarke came to the Kotwali he heard this uproar going on and he immediately took 20 armed foot police from the Kotwali and proceeded down Landa Bazar. This was the report that I received afterwards.

When he came down Landa Bazar he found the mob armed with sticks and he dispersed the crowd and joined up with Mr. de Gale.

Q. I think you and the Deputy Commissioner took up your quarters at the Telegraph Office and remained there for some weeks?

A. We remained there for three weeks.

Q. On the 11th of April were you receiving the reports from your officers and others?

A. On the 11th of April we received very unsatisfactory reports on the state of affairs in the city. The city was in fact actually out of hand. We were hearing reports that a committee had been formed to control the affairs of the city, that they were going to maintain the hartal and that they were to stop Government servants from coming out. We heard of a Danda Fauj in the evening.

Q. What is that Danda Fauj?

A. "Danda Fauj" means a club army—an army armed with clubs. We heard reports of a Danda Fauj being formed that afternoon. I cannot be certain whether that afternoon or the next morning, but the reports were all to the effect that we were not controlling the city. And my ordinary body of our police posts outside the city were still being occupied, but all the internal police arrangements had been wiped out. They all had to be withdrawn.

Q. Did the police enter the city on the 11th?

A. No, Sir.

Q. Why was that?

A. There were many reasons. One was that the city was in a very disturbed state. It was virtually in rebellion. Any small party going into the city would undoubtedly have met with opposition. It would involve more loss of life and more firing. On the 11th there was parleying going on with the leaders. The Deputy Commissioner saw the leaders who were endeavouring to make terms and who were proposing to try and get the hartal stopped and to restore normal conditions. Anything short of a very big force that would really impress the city moving in the city would have been at that time fatal.

Q. Did you hear anything as to rumours circulating in the city with reference to the troops rising against the Government?

A. Yes, there were all sorts of rumours being reported by my men and by Indian gentlemen who came to see us. All day long they were reporting that there was a great show of unity going on and that they were expecting the troops and police to turn. At one of our gates a man was arrested for endeavouring to tamper with the police calling to them to join their brethren and there was an incident where a man,—Balwant Singh—who came into the mosque and declared that he was coming from cantonments where the troops had risen and a large number had been killed; he himself had killed six soldiers. This sort of thing was going on. The Muhafizadans and Hindus were meeting in the Badshahi mosque where they were being harangued by their leaders.

Q. That morning you decided to march a column of troops through the city the next morning?

A. Yes, Sir, it was decided to resume control of the city as quickly as possible.

Q. And arrangements were made between you and the military as to the places where picquets were to be left?

A. Yes, Sir, it was arranged that we must go into the city with a big force sufficient to prevent trouble and to picquet certain points with police and military.

25 November 1919.]

Mr. E. P. BROADWAY.

A. We went with such a force.

Q. And Colonel Johnson was at the head of it?

A. Colonel Johnson commanded it. He told us where he put his picquets and reserve.

Q. What was the attitude of the city?

A. They were very sullen and very hostile.

Q. Did you hear any remarks made by the crowd as you passed through?

A. Remarks were reported to me. I did not hear any particulars that I can recollect except where an old man said "You must let go Mr. Gandhi. We will not open until you let go Mr. Gandhi." The others reported remarks that they would not open their shops until the Rowlatt Act was repealed. And there was a man at the Waterworks coming apparently from Badshahi mosque direction in an excited condition. There was a British officer walking through the streets and the man tried to move him away from the place where he had halted. He raised his arm at this officer in a threatening manner.

Q. Did he raise his arm as though he was going to strike him?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What happened to the man?

A. He was arrested. I arrested him. I caught hold of him at the time but he broke away and rushed down the line but some of my men arrested him. He was afterwards convicted.

Q. What was he convicted of?

A. I think he got two months.

Q. Did you hear of an attack on the C. I. D. Inspector?

A. On our march through the city, just as we got near the waterworks we heard that a C. I. D. Inspector had been severely assaulted.

Q. At Hira Mandi was there a large crowd?

A. Yes, there was at Hira Mandi.

Q. Were these people attempting to come into the mosque?

A. They were moving to and from the mosque.

Q. Were they armed with anything?

A. They were the most threatening crowd that we had seen at the disturbances. They were armed with lathis and we understood that this was the Danda Fauj.

Q. Did you make any attempts to disperse the crowd?

A. Several.

Q. And did you give them warning?

A. Over and over again.

Q. What attention did they pay to the warning?

A. None at all. Eventually it was decided that the mosque should be cleared and a Muhammadan Magistrate was sent down to clear the mosque. Crowds came out of the mosque. Crowds filled the places between the mosque and Hira Mandi. The cavalry tried to disperse them but they would not disperse. They would go from one place to another. Eventually they collected in a mass. They tried to stampede the cavalry by waving and shouting at them and eventually they massed in large numbers actually in Hira Mandi.

Q. Was that a crowd that you could have allowed to remain between your force and the picquets that had been established at the mosque?

A. We could not have allowed such a crowd to remain. Personally I had no great anxiety about the military picquets, they could look after themselves all right but the situation was that we had established these five picquets on the way to Hira Mandi and we had already established police picquets of 25 men with muskets which had been located at the Kotwali, Bazaz Hatta and what is known as the Haveli Nawab Sahib. These picquets were everywhere in the air except at the Haveli Nawab Sahib where they were in an enclosure. They were absolutely in the open street. If a mob like that had been left behind us and the column had turned its back on it there would have been serious trouble at all the picquets. If these pickets had been attacked they would have been in a very bad position and they would have to fire and there would have been probably considerable loss of life.

Q. Had you at this time armed police with you?

A. Yes, Sir. I had 100 armed police with me—with the military column.

Q. Did you receive any instructions from Mr. Fyson as to how you would disperse the crowd?

A. Yes, Sir. When we formed up the military faced round and the stoning began. I sent for the police as a part of my force was behind and when the military turned round to disperse the crowd I asked the officer commanding to let my men get in front in order to avoid as long as possible any collision between the military and the crowd. To fire into the crowd with rifles would have been very much more serious than firing by my men with luckshot. My men were brought up by Mr. Clarke from the front of the column and they lined up in front of the cavalry. Mr. Fyson took a few troops and pushed forward into the crowd in order to disperse them and to give them warning that they would be fired upon. The only result was a great uproar and the people on the left tried to push in between and Mr. Fyson seemed to be in danger of being cut off and I shouted out to him to come back. He fell back and he told me that we shall have to fire. Eventually he gave me orders to fire and I gave orders to four files to load and fire.

Q. How many men in all fired?

A. Four or five. There were eight rounds fired at the time.

Q. Did you give any orders as to whether the men should fire high or low?

A. I gave the men orders to fire low. We always give orders to fire low at the feet of the crowd.

Q. What was the effect of the firing?

A. The crowd began to break. One man turned round and waved his stick and some of the crowd turned immediately with him and as the crowd broke we pushed forward.

Q. During the course of your march did the Deputy Commissioner make any announcement as to whether meetings or processions would be allowed in the city?

A. At every point—probably at about a dozen places—wherever there was a crossing or a chowk or any crowd at all. He announced that there should be no processions of any kind, etc., and that they should open their shops and resume business.

Q. After you went back yourself to the Telegraph Office did you make arrangements as to patrols of 40 or 50 armed men moving in and about the city day and night?

A. Yes, Sir. I do not mean by that that we had patrols continually moving. I had a flying picquet at Lohari Gate which was 50 strong and this patrol accompanied a gazetted officer through the city to visit the picquets that we had established.

Q. I think you know that on this day, the 12th, there was serious trouble at Kasur. Then on the 13th of April did the hartal continue?

A. On the 13th the hartal continued.

Q. Was Wagah station sacked and burnt?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Where is Wagah Station?

A. Down the line about two stations down the road to Amritsar.

Q. How far from here?

A. About 12 or 14 miles.

Q. On the 14th the hartal still continued?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. On that day were certain of the leaders deported?

A. Yes, Sir, Messrs. Ram Bhaj Datt, Harkishen Lal and Duni Chand.

Q. Were you acting in connection with the arrangements about the deportation?

A. I had to make police arrangements to get them off quietly.

Q. Were you getting reports as to the destruction of railway and telegraph plant about this time?

A. On the 14th and 15th there was this going on. There were disturbances in the Moghulpura workshops. A train was stoned at Kot Radha Kishen and wires were cut at Wagah, Jallo and Attari.

Q. On the 15th Martial Law was declared. What way was it proclaimed in Lahore?

Mr. E. P. BROADWAY.

A. I was told that the Officer Commanding the Civil Area had proclaimed it in notices.

Q. When Martial Law was proclaimed were the police or the civil authorities able to deal with the situation?

A. No, Sir, we were played out by that time. The strain was almost unbearable. My men had been on duty night and day. We had no reserves for this sort of thing. The police were barely sufficient for peace work.

Q. What was the effect of the mob on the declaration of Martial Law?

A. It was very effective. Things began to come down at once.

Q. I think on the 16th there were cases of violence reported by the mob?

A. That was out of the district. This was all in my district.

Q. I think it was on the 16th that an order was issued as to the ending of the hartal?

A. Yes, Sir. Martial Law notice No. 10 was issued ending the hartal in Anarkali. As soon as this notice got known the hartal ceased long before the time fixed in the notice. General notices for the city were issued on the 17th ending the hartal in the city and that took effect immediately; before the time laid down the shops were opened.

Q. On the 17th the hartal was practically ended?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did you see anything of seditious posters that were put up?

A. Many seditious posters were found and brought to me and these were passed on by me to various officers, the Deputy Commissioner and to the C. I. D.

Q. Have you got any of these posters?

A. I have none, Sir, they were all forwarded.*

Q. Whereabouts were these seditious posters being posted?

A. In various parts of the city. They were torn down and brought to me by my men.

Q. Were there many of them?

A. A good many.

Q. And from different parts of the city?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. As regards the casualties I see you have given a list of casualties for the three occasions when shooting took place?

A. As far as I know that is a correct and complete list.

Q. And there were altogether 45 wounded?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Were any attempts made to get the members of the Police force to rise against the Government?

A. I mentioned just now the one definite case at Lahori Gate where a man was arrested for trying to seduce the Police, and there was an European Inspector in charge of that picket. He had the man immediately arrested, who was subsequently convicted and sentenced to two years or so. That was the one definite case. There were no other cases, but we were receiving vague reports both verbally and by telephone at that time; there was no office going really at the time.

Q. During the continuance of Martial Law, were the Police pickets gradually modified or abolished as things settled down?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. When was Martial Law removed?

A. I think it was on the 12th June.

Q. Was Martial Law removed in Lahore at a later date than it was removed in some of the other districts?

A. I do not know when it was removed elsewhere but here I think it was on the 12th June.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. After Martial Law was proclaimed, did you, as Senior Superintendent of Police, have anything to do with the arresting of persons and sending them up for trial after investigation?

A. Yes, Sir. I have got reports about certain persons who had been prominent in the mobs. For instance,

I ordered the arrest of the Danda Fauj man, in fact I ordered the arrest of all men who were reported to me. The Inspector came up and mentioned to me the names of men who were supposed to have been leading the mobs and so forth, and I arrested all such men. I went into the matter roughly—I had a great deal to do at that time—and I asked what the evidence was. Where I thought that the evidence was satisfactory, that is to say, independent, in addition to any police reports, then I ordered the man's arrest. Altogether 25 or 30 men were arrested under my orders.

Q. And within what time after the proclamation of Martial Law?

A. I think the arrests were made from about the 16th. I don't remember the date exactly.

Q. Then you said that you ordered the arrest of the Danda Fauj man, which man is that, Chaman Din?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. As regards the people who had been deported, you had nothing to do with that except their actual deportation?

A. I had to assist in the carrying out of their deportation.

Q. As regards the people whom you ordered to be arrested did you say there were 20 people?

A. I do not remember. I must have ordered the arrests of 25 or 30 men during those days as the reports came to me. There may be a few more or a few less. I don't remember.

Q. They were arrested, and did you have anything to do with the examination of their cases before they were sent up for trial?

A. I deputed my Assistant Superintendent, Mr. deGale. I also saw the special officer Mr. Tomkins. I met him and went through with him such cases of persons who had been arrested at the city Kotwali, and Mr. deGale and another C. I. D. officer dealt with the rest of the cases. I deputed Mr. deGale to take up these cases. They made out a sort of memorandum showing the evidence on which the men had been arrested and they considered whether the man might or might not be sent up for trial.

Q. Of those 25 or 30 accused, do you know if any were never sent up for trial at all, although they were all sent up for trial?

A. A good many of the people whom I arrested were not sent up for trial.

Q. How long were they kept under arrest before being released? Was it the case of a day or two or a week or two before they were released?

A. More than a day or two.

Q. What was the practice followed in Lahore? There were no intermediate remands before Magistrates, but cases only went before Magistrates after investigation was completed, was that the system?

A. I think that is correct.

Q. And the idea was especially where the evidence was insufficient to make sure that there was a case which could be substantiated before sending it up before a Magistrate?

A. Yes.

Q. Well now, have you got a list showing the exact cases, the number of people who were arrested and the dates when they were released? Have you any papers?

A. I have none.

Q. At any rate, it will be quite easy to obtain those particulars. I take it there is a memorandum of the arrest of such persons?

A. There were lists handed in, and those were each taken up by the Assistant Superintendent of Police, and one of my officers and by a C. I. D. officer, and they made out separate memos. in each case. There were people against whom they were not satisfied that there was sufficient evidence to send up, and such persons were released.

Q. A record would be made in the office both of the date on which their arrest was ordered and of the date on which their release was ordered?

A. Yes, there should be.

Q. Those particulars must be available?

A. Yes, I think so, they were there at the time.

* A number were produced later: see pages 106 to 112.

Mr. E. P. BROADWAY.

Q. Now those persons whose arrests you ordered yourself did any of them figure afterwards in what I think is called the Main Conspiracy Case?

A. I cannot remember that. The men whom I ordered to be arrested were mainly mob leaders and those who were reported to be such.

Q. You told us about Dr. Gokal Chand helping you or trying to help you in connection with the incident of the 6th, and also of Lala Duni Chand. Was either of these people prosecuted afterwards?

A. They were both sent up for trial.

Q. What happened to them, do you remember?

A. Dr. Gokal Chand was acquitted, I think, and Lala Duni Chand was convicted.

Q. What was Dr. Gokal Chand charged with?

A. I have not got that case, I forget the charges against him. It was not one of the cases I had taken up.

Q. Was it before a tribunal?

A. Yes.

Q. Was one of the persons acquitted in what you call the Main Conspiracy Case?

A. Dr. Gokal Chand Naurang was acquitted.

Q. Lala Duni Chand was convicted?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember what his sentence was from the tribunal?

A. I think Lala Duni Chand got a heavy sentence. (Mr. Abdul Kadir.—He got transportation for life.)

Q. Another name was mentioned, Ram Bhuj Dutt Chaudhri, he was deported on the 14th?

A. He was deported on the 14th.

Q. Was he prosecuted afterwards?

A. He was prosecuted in the Main Conspiracy Case.

Q. What happened to him?

A. He was also convicted.

Q. On the 6th, I see at any rate that Dr. Gokal Chand seemed to be helping you to deal with that particular mob and was doing all he could?

A. Yes.

Q. And later on when the crowd surrounded the Bradlaugh Hall he and other people came and you fixed up arrangements with them to minimise the chances of a trouble?

A. He and Lala Duni Chand came.

Q. So that at that time you treated them as persons whom you thought were honestly endeavouring to help you, is that so?

A. I think Mr. Gokal Chand was doing his best. I do not think Lala Duni Chand was particularly helpful at the time because he was not prepared to agree to stopping the Bradlaugh Hall meeting at 6. He said that he did not think that they could stop the meeting at 6 and so on, while Dr. Gokal Chand said eventually that he would.

Q. But apart from the fact that Dr. Gokal Chand was more amenable to reason, I take it you would not have had any dealings at all with Mr. Duni Chand if at that time you thought he was not honest in his intentions in trying to keep down trouble?

A. I could not refuse to have dealings with him in any case. I did not know whether he was honest or dishonest. I did not know he was not out to be particularly helpful to us, but he raised a lot of objections. He said, "Oh, at 6 o'clock there will be a lot of people, there will be a lot of speeches to make, the chairman will have to say a good deal, and so on." Then Dr. Gokal Chand turned round and said "I will see we do stop." Mr. Duni Chand protested with him and he said "All right, Duni Chand, you leave it to me."

Q. The result is then that although he was one of the persons whom you had selected to make arrangements, you do not give him very much credit?

A. I do not give him much credit. I saw him only on that day as far as I remember.

Q. But apart from the fact that he was not as good from your point of view as Dr. Gokal Chand, you cannot say that at that time when you were trying to make arrangements with him you saw anything against him?

A. No, there was nothing particularly against him. He was not out to be helpful as the other man. I had seen the other man two or three times that day.

Q. What I want to ask you is, he and Dr. Gokal Chand came to see you at the Kutchery?

A. Yes, they came to see me at about 2.

Q. If they wanted to be irreconcilable, there was nothing to oblige them to come to you at all, and the fact that you much preferred the one to the other still leaves the fact that Duni Chand was at any rate according to his lights trying to see if he could help?

A. Oh, Yes, I think so. He and Dr. Gokal Chand were the only two people who came to us.

Q. The other gentleman, Ram Bhaj Dutt Choudhri, as I understand, he did his best to help you to manage that other mob on the 10th?

A. He tried to induce them to disperse.

Q. I mean he tried to get on a horse, I mean all that as far as you told us at the time, he was doing to help you?

A. Yes.

Q. I mean there was no question of any dishonest intention, he was honestly doing it?

A. I think he was very anxious. He saw that the position then was very serious and that the mob would have to be fired on if they did not disperse, and he remarked to me "now fire in the air, then the mob will disperse." He was distinctly anxious to get the mob dispersed.

Q. I see when you come a little later on, on the 11th, that is the day after Ram Bhaj Dutt helped you, it is among the reports that came to you on the next day that Ram Bhaj Datt and others addressed the crowd and advised them to stand firm. This was the mass meeting?

A. That was the meeting.

Q. Have you a C. I. D. report of what was said on that occasion? Or a verbal report?

A. There was practically no report that I can remember on the 11th that reached me, but there were masses of reports that I received that day verbally.

Q. But from that moment I want to know if you have seen since or at any time a written C. I. D. report of the meeting?

A. I saw that two or three days later.

Q. Perhaps we will have a look at it?

(Mr. Herbert, the Government Advocate.—The reports are here, Sir.)

Q. There is just one thing I should like to ask you about firing low, is that laid down by the Police Regulations?

A. Yes.

Q. Do these Regulations apply to the Punjab only?

A. I think it is in our Police Rules.

Q. When you say "our Police Rules," do you mean the Punjab Police Rules?

A. Yes.

Q. And therefore it may or may not be in Delhi or any other Province?

A. I can't say. (After a pause), I think it would be in Delhi too. They are working under the same rules.

Q. It was said that the rule did not obtain in Delhi, I wanted to make sure.

A. There may be a difference now, I don't know.

Q. Have you got there a copy, may I just know the terms of that rule about firing low?

A. I have not got a copy here.

Q. Do they give you discretion to fire according to the size of the mob and the urgency of the occasion, or do they lay down that when firing the police must always fire at the feet of the mob?

A. I think, as far as I remember, the wording runs more or less in this way, that they shall refrain from firing over the heads of the mob, they should fire low and at the most threatening parts of the mob.

Q. That is quite a different thing to fire at the feet of the mob, that means low, so that no shots may go away unintentionally and hit others who may be looking from a window at some distance?

A. Also the object is to make the wounds, if such wounds are inflicted, on the lower part of the body.

Q. Is it any part of the object of that rule to direct you to fire at the feet of the crowd or is it simply to tell you that the crowds should be hit and not anywhere else. That is the point?

Mr. E. P. BROADWAY.

A. Very likely. Also the object is, I think I have always understood it, if you fire at the feet of the crowd rather than at the body, you will inflict less serious injuries.

Q. Perhaps, I will go into that when I get the rules. As far as you are concerned, you are responsible, as the police executive officer, for the police of Lahore before Martial Law and you were working during the Martial Law. So far as the actual chances on, let us say the 14th April were concerned, do you consider that Martial Law was necessary to avoid a rebellion or to prevent that possibility in Lahore itself?

A. I think so, I think it was undoubtedly necessary. We could not hold on any longer on our own.

Q. And you think that matters would have gone from bad to worse as regards the city here if you had not Martial Law?

A. It looked like that to us. The reports that were coming in from outside showed that the position was getting from bad to worse.

Q. I rather want you to put out of sight the reports that came from outside. I want the benefit of your experience as to what had happened and what was happening in the city of Lahore alone. So far as the whole problem is concerned as regards the city itself, do you think that the introduction of Martial Law was necessary to enable the authorities here to keep peace?

A. I think it certainly was.

Q. Now apart from any question of the Afghan trouble, how long before the 12th June when Martial Law came to an end—How long do you think you could have done without Martial Law prior to the 12th June?

A. It is rather difficult to tell. It is a matter of opinion whether it could have been stopped 10 days or a fortnight before.

Q. I want your opinion whether it is a question of 10 days or whether you think, so far as Lahore is concerned, if you had it for a fortnight you could have dispensed with it thereafter?

A. I don't say a fortnight of Martial Law. It might have been stopped a fortnight possibly before. That would be only a matter of opinion. Cases would have been taken up and there would have been excitement.

Q. I want you just to consider with me for a minute. Of course there is always a debateable margin in matters of that sort as to how early you took off Martial Law. But looking only to the necessities of Lahore itself, what do you think is the shortest time after the 15th April that Martial Law could have been dispensed with?

A. It is a very difficult question to answer. I do not know that I am prepared to answer that.

Q. Some of us have got to try and answer that.

A. I am trying my best to answer it correctly, but I have never thought of it as to how long before Martial Law could have been dispensed with. I said it is all a question of opinion, it might have been taken off two or three weeks before, but I never thought of the matter really.

Q. Would you be prepared at any rate to say this, that it could not have been taken off more than a month before?

A. Yes that I am prepared to say.

Q. Do you think that it would have been necessary to keep it after the middle of May merely on account of the position in Lahore itself?

A. I think so. I can certainly say so.

Q. Then do you think, apart from any question of the Punjab position or the Afghanistan war position, that after the middle of May, so far as Lahore is concerned, it is doubtful whether Martial Law was really necessary?

A. Possibly I might be able to say as much as that. I never considered it. It was not a question I had to deal with in any way. I do not think it might be possible to have taken it away earlier than it was taken off.

Q. Now did you require the assistance of the Military after the middle of May?

A. I do not know what was going on exactly at certain times, but it is quite possible that if I had been asked to carry on say 10 or 15 days before the date on which Martial Law was removed, I might have said yes.

Q. Do you agree with the existence of the liability of Martial Law penalties in Lahore, you were able to administer the city with much less difficulty than in ordinary times?

A. It made things easier, certainly. I think so.

Q. I think we were told yesterday that the mere existence of Martial Law was as good as a thousand rifles, do you mean that after Martial Law was declared that people were much more amenable to orders?

A. Undoubtedly, the strain was very much relieved all round.

By Sir C. H. Setalvad—

Q. Mr. Broadway, there was firing on the 10th on two occasions?

A. Yes, there was.

Q. And once on the 12th?

A. Yes.

Q. There was no occasion after the 12th for any firing in Lahore at all?

A. No.

Q. And nothing unusual happened after that date?

A. No, in Lahore itself nothing unusual happened.

Q. I am dealing with Lahore itself for the moment. After the 12th nothing unusual happened in Lahore?

A. No, I don't think there was anything.

Q. And before the 15th, really the Civil authorities were in control of the city, no doubt with the aid of the Military?

A. Not ordinary control. As I said in my previous examination, pickets were established and to keep in touch with those pickets flying patrol, armed patrol, had to be kept.

Q. That is why I said with the aid of the Military?

A. I mean the ordinary conditions were not existing, the ordinary conditions where the constables could go out on beats and so on, those had not been restored.

Q. But before the 15th had not the Civil authorities with the aid of the Military regained control of the city?

A. You cannot say that they had absolutely regained control of the city. There was hartal still on, langars were still open.

Q. The hartal may have been there. There was hartal in other parts of the country where the Civil administration had been going on without any disturbance at all. The mere existence of hartal does not show that the control of the city was not regained. You had not been able to put an end to the hartal, that I quite admit.

A. But then the hartal by this time had developed into, whatever it may have been in other places, a distinctly anti-Government movement. On the 6th it was not looked upon as an anti-Government movement. So no objection was raised to the procession on the 10th when the hartal started on the news having reached of Mr. Gandhi's arrest and trouble at Amritsar. Later on when it was maintained after the firing on the 10th and the 12th, and after the troops had passed through, it was maintained, as I understand, as a direct anti-Government movement. Therefore it was against law and order. Therefore you cannot say that law and order was established.

Q. How do you say that the hartal after the 12th was an anti-Government movement?

A. It had become so, because it was obvious to everybody by this time that a continuation of the hartal was undesirable.

Q. After the 12th, there was no violence in the city at all?

A. None at all, because pickets had been posted.

Q. There was no coercion, was there, after the 12th, for continuing the hartal?

A. I am not prepared to say that. Reports were coming in all the time, whether they were correct or not I can't say but reports were coming in that people were going about and insisting or trying to make people hold firm.

Q. What I want to know is, what distinguished the hartal after the 12th from the previous hartal, which made you consider it anti-Government?

Mr. E. P. BROADWAY.

A. All that had gone before.

Q. You made a distinction that the hartal before the 12th was not anti-Government?

A. I did not say before the 12th. I am giving you my opinion for what it may be worth. My opinion is that simply I distinguished between the hartal that continued after the troubles on the 10th and the 12th from the hartal, pure and simple hartal, of the 6th.

Q. I want to know what the distinguishing feature is between the hartal after the 10th and the hartal prior to that. You seem to distinguish between the nature of the hartal after the 10th and the hartal before that?

A. Yes; in my mind there is a distinction. After the 10th, 11th and 12th, after what had occurred, after the shooting and after the Military and Police picketed the city, the hartal was continued in defiance of all measures taken to restore normal conditions.

Q. Don't you see, Mr. Broadway, that there may be complete law and order and still people may for certain reasons want to have a hartal? Why does the existence of the hartal itself connote any anti-Government movement?

A. I am only giving you the impression, the view that I held at the time. I may be right or wrong. That is the way it impressed me. The movement, after all that took place, in continuing the hartal impressed me as being distinctly anti-Government in that it was defying everything that was being done to restore normal conditions.

Q. You see after the happenings of the 10th and 12th, other events happened; for instance on the 14th, Government arrested and deported certain people in Lahore.

A. Quite so.

Q. May not the continuance of the hartal be a sort of protest against or a sort of manifestation of the disapproval of the people of that act? May it not be that?

A. I have only given you what I thought of it, my own personal opinion for what it is worth.

Q. If it was merely a manifestation of the disapproval of the action of Government in arresting and deporting certain people, will not the people be justified in doing that?

A. I do not think they were justified, because they should have seen what the consequences of the hartal had already been. No good was coming of it.

Q. Was there any reason to say, barring this hartal itself, that the civil authorities with the continued aid of the Military had not regained control of the city after the 13th or 14th?

A. The excitement still continued. We had not come back to normal conditions. I thought it was still dangerous.

Q. You see, Mr. Broadway, there might be excitement, there might be danger. But I am putting it to you that before the 15th, for all practical purposes the civil authorities had regained control?

A. I suppose they had regained control. I would not consider that we regained actual control, until you revert to something like normal conditions.

Q. You agree that with the aid of the Military they had for all practical purposes regained control?

A. We had begun to regain control anyhow. And after the declaration of the Martial Law on the 15th, the civil authorities virtually carried on the administration as before.

Q. The civil authorities virtually carried on the administration as before?

A. Yes, after Martial Law was introduced. We were told to carry on.

Q. You carried on as before?

A. Yes, practically as before.

Q. The Police for instance did their ordinary duties, arrested people, made investigations and all that?

A. Yes, to a certain extent they did not; they had to go with large parties.

Q. Except that the Military supplied the escort for that purpose?

A. Yes.

Q. The ordinary courts were going on as they were? The High Court and the Subordinate Courts were going on and doing their business?

A. I cannot say. I cannot remember if they were going on. My impression is they were not. At any rate for the first few days they were not carrying on.

Q. When did they begin their ordinary work again?

A. I cannot tell you.

Q. They did not work for a few days?

A. I said for the first few days. I was constantly seeing Honorary Magistrates and Stipendiary Magistrates also. They were coming in and seeing the Deputy Commissioner many times.

Q. After those few days, they did begin again? Didn't they?

A. I cannot say; in fact, I do not know that they were carrying on. After a certain number of days, they did begin to carry on. I do not know when they did start their ordinary work. We were at the Telegraph Office for two or three weeks, which is away from the Courts. So I do not know what was going on.

Q. What I want to know, Mr. Broadway is, what you consider to be the causes of this outbreak in Lahore?

A. I can offer my opinion. I would say that the causes were these. The war and the unsettling and worrying effects of the war. This was at the top of the causes. There was the stress of the economic condition on the people. People were very hard up indeed. I was always hearing of the difficulties of the poor, about cloth, etc. There was undoubted economic distress. There was also some objection by people to certain taxes.

Q. Objection to taxes?

A. There was increase in taxes. That was what one heard at the time—the revised income-tax. By talks with officers and Indians this is the impression I received as to the unsettling effect. There was some objection taken perhaps to grain being taken away. There was suspicion. There were all these conditions for which the people of India invariably hold the Government responsible. Government is supposed to be able to remove all troubles, and to reduce prices. These caused signs of discontent.

Q. Were these the unsettling causes that created the unrest? Was there anything connected with the Rowlatt Bills?

A. On the top of these, came this political agitation.

Q. Occasioned by the Rowlatt Act?

A. Well, the Rowlatt Act was the cause of it, at any rate, it was the excuse for it.

Q. Why do you say it was the excuse for it? Was it not the cause of the agitation that followed?

A. My own idea has been that the Rowlatt Act was the excuse for the trouble, rather than the actual cause. It appeared to me to be likely not to weary the people very much.

Q. You consider no objection should have been raised to that legislation?

A. I did not say that. It was not an Act that appeared to me to give the people much trouble or to interest the people very greatly.

Q. You know that the passage of the Rowlatt Act in the Legislative Council was very strenuously resisted almost unanimously?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you suggest that they merely used the Rowlatt Act as an excuse for that purpose, or caught hold of that occasion to go against Government?

A. I am not prepared to say that.

Q. They started opposition because they honestly believed that the legislation was bad?

A. Quite possible they believe it to be so.

Q. I want to understand what you mean when you say that the Rowlatt Act was an excuse for the agitation. Do you mean to suggest that those who opposed the Rowlatt Act really were not honest or genuine in their opposition and took hold of the opportunity for going against Government?

A. The Members of Council quite possibly opposed it honestly. They probably did. But I doubt very much whether everybody who took up the Rowlatt Act agitation understood it. It appeared to me that they opposed it because the Council Members opposed it. They did not try to satisfy themselves or to worry about it very much; many of them, I do not say all.

Q. It happens almost everywhere that if the leaders of the public oppose a measure, the ordinary people are content to follow them and take the same view as their leaders. Is there anything extraordinary in that?

A. Possibly not.

Q. Then on the top of all this came the arrest of Mr. Gandhi on the 9th?

A. I think probably it was; but it hardly got to that, because on the top was the Rowlatt agitation, and there was a great deal of misrepresentation.

Q. You mean misrepresentation with regard to the Rowlatt Act itself?

A. Yes. There was a great deal of misrepresentation. I think people were induced to oppose the Act not so much because the leaders opposed it in Council but because it was represented to them that it would very closely touch their private life.

Q. Now who do you think was responsible for these misrepresentations?

A. I wish I knew. There are all grades of leaders in every movement, just as there are senior men and junior men, leaders going right down to N. C. O's. in a regiment or force. In every movement of this kind, I take it there must be all grades of leaders and all shades of opinion, views, ideas and intentions. It seems to me that the views of those at the top may differ very widely from the opinions and views of those who are down below, and when you come to the lower leaders, what we might call, subalterns, captains and N. C. O's., they are generally the people who are most in touch with the masses.

Q. You do not suggest, Mr. Broadway, that the top leaders in Lahore (I am merely using your expression) were responsible for the misrepresentations?

A. I do not suggest that. I have no reason to believe that they misrepresented matters, but I never saw that they did very much or anything to refute these things and to really explain matters.

Q. When did these misrepresentations first start in Lahore?

A. I have no idea. It has been going on for some time, but possibly since January at any rate. I was away in Ambala till December 23rd. I returned from Ambala on 23rd. It was virtually Christmas week. I took over charge here again on the 23rd December. My cognizance of affairs in the district recommenced about the beginning of January.

Q. Was it soon after that that these misrepresentations came to your knowledge?

A. I do not think it was so early. My impression is that I became aware some weeks later.

Q. Somewhere in February?

A. Probably; I cannot say the date. It was somewhere about the middle of February.

Q. Did the Punjab Government take any steps to disabuse the public of these misrepresentations?

A. I presume they were aware of these misrepresentations.

Q. You told us that there was to be a meeting on the 8th March?

A. Yes.

Q. And that you called some of the leaders on the 29th? Did you?

A. I do not think I called any of the leaders on that occasion. I do not remember that. The Deputy Commissioner may have done so.

Q. The Deputy Commissioner did?

A. Yes; on the 29th March. I have no authority to call the leaders. I never called any leaders at any time. I had been to the Deputy Commissioner on the 4th of April. I am not aware of the meeting on the 29th. I cannot remember; and I do not think I was at any meeting on the 29th.

Q. Were you present at the informal meeting on the 4th April with the Deputy Commissioner?

A. I was at two meetings on that day.

Q. And what happened really on that day?

A. At which meeting? There were two meetings.

Q. The first meeting.

A. About 10 o'clock on the 4th, the Deputy Commissioner had only called up certain people,

Q. Were Duni Chand and Ram Bhaj Datt at the meeting?

A. I cannot remember who was present. I have an impression that Duni Chand was present. He was present at the meeting at 4 o'clock and I think he was present at the meeting at 10 o'clock.

Q. He was certainly present at the later meeting; in all probability he was also present at the first?

A. I think so, because he was a Municipal Commissioner.

Q. Was Ram Bhaj Datt there?

A. I did not know him at the time. So I do not know.

Q. Was Gokal Chand present?

A. I cannot remember.

Q. At the first meeting on the 4th?

A. I have no idea whether he was present. I remember Mr. Duni Chand's presence simply by an incident on the afternoon of the 4th. I do not know any of these gentlemen by sight.

Q. What did you do at this first meeting?

A. At the first meeting the Deputy Commissioner and I did our best to make the Municipal Commissioners, Honorary Magistrates and others who were present appreciate their responsibility and to try and prevent any coercion in the matter of hartal and to use their influence as far as they could to prevent it.

Q. Did those people who were present at the meeting appear to be willing to follow your suggestion?

A. I think so.

Q. At all the consultations and meetings that you had with these leading people, were they always ready and willing to help matters in such manner as they could? Was their attitude one of help?

A. There was not much discussion. The Municipal Commissioners and others who came there seemed to be willing to assist, but the opposition was at the evening meeting. They were organisers of the Bradlaugh Hall meeting and the hartal.

Q. At the evening meeting you had the organisers of the meeting at Bradlaugh Hall for the 6th?

A. Yes; we summoned them. I do not know how many were present. I cannot tell you. I did not summon them. The Deputy Commissioner called them up. I have got a list of the names here. The names of the signatories of the Urdu notice.

Q. Is the list referred to in your statement?

A. No, it is not.

Q. Kindly look at the list and see if Duni Chand and Ram Bhaj Datt are there.

A. Yes.

Q. Who else? Gokal Chand?

A. I will read you the names. It is only a translation of the Urdu notice.—Harkishan Lal, Ram Bhaj Datt, Duni Chand.

Q. Very few persons came to that meeting. Is the list one of all those who came?

A. No; I have no recollection. I was not responsible for the meeting. I was only there to assist. I turned up there at the last moment. The Deputy Commissioner summoned me.

Q. I think this list contains the names of persons who were present?

A. I have got the list of persons who were summoned.

Q. You remember having seen Duni Chand, Ram Bhaj Datt Chaudhri?

A. I cannot remember; I think they were there.

Q. Dr. Gokal Chand?

A. I do not remember he was there. I do not remember anybody except Duni Chand, because Duni Chand, I remember, asked me a question.

Q. I think the list you have is a list of persons who were invited to attend?

A. That is so.

Q. Let us have a copy of it.

A. These are the signatories to the Urdu notice of the Bradlaugh Hall meeting and we simply asked them to come.

Q. Did those people who were present at that meeting appear to you to be reasonably ready to assist?

A. They were not ready to assist. We pointed out to them that hartal was always a dangerous business. We wanted them particularly to realise the dangers and the possible trouble of hartal by people being out in the streets creating excitement and there was also the chance of riot and trouble in the atmosphere which was surcharged with electricity as it then was. We said that it was particularly dangerous and asked them not to have hartal or encourage hartal. They were not prepared to assist us in that way.

Q. What did they say? Did they say that they would have the hartal?

A. I do not know the exact words.

Q. Did they agree to do anything at that meeting?

A. We asked them to try and induce people not to hold hartal. That was hopeless. Then we said 'if you mean holding the hartal, you at least arrange that there is no coercion, that parties should not go about inducing people to close down who did not really wish to close down.'

Q. Did they agree to do that?

A. In a measure they did. They were inclined to bargain with us. I remember it now; I have not thought of it since. Somebody said if we say that we agree not to send pickets, they would agree not to send parties out to induce people to shut down, we must not send parties to open them. I said that the Deputy Commissioner and I never sent any parties out to induce people to open. They said Honorary Magistrates and some Extra Assistant Commissioners were going about trying to induce people not to hold hartal. I said that I did not know that it was particularly objectionable, and added "if Extra Assistant Commissioners go about inducing people not to hold hartal, they are only doing the correct thing. They are only asking people to continue to do their normal business to avoid trouble. You are inducing them to do something abnormal which is likely to create trouble. That is hardly a bargain for us."

Q. From what you say I gather their attitude was that people should be left entirely to themselves whether to continue the hartal or to open the shops. Their attitude was that neither side should coerce or compel people to do one thing or the other?

A. They did not say anything about coercion. The thing that we feared was, which I believe actually did happen, that parties of excited youngsters would go down coercing people to shut down. The Extra Assistant Commissioners were using their influence and I was told up to the last moment that they were going to open the shops. Those present at the meeting were not inclined to agree to any terms involving the stopping of going round in parties to get shops closed. Eventually that was the ultimatum, so to speak, to us 'Will you do that? You need not send pickets.'

Q. So no agreement was arrived at on that point?

A. No agreement was arrived at. But I remember in the Tribune it was published that there was an agreement. I pointed it out to the Deputy Commissioner. He said no agreement was arrived at. I was also under the impression that no agreement was arrived at.

Q. The hartal continued on the 6th?

A. It was complete on the 6th.

Q. From the 7th to 10th, business was resumed?

A. Yes.

Q. Then during that period there was the Ram Naumi festival on the 9th?

A. Yes, and the procession.

Q. During these days, from the 7th to 10th, when business was resumed, there were no disturbances or any untoward incidents at all?

A. Up to the time of procession there was no trouble at all.

Q. On the 10th also when the firing took place, shops had opened?

A. Yes.

Q. When did the news of Mr. Gandhi's arrest arrive in Lahore?

A. I do not know when the official information came.

Q. When did it become known to the public? It must be on the 10th?

A. I think somewhere between 4 and 5.

Q. Somewhere between 4 and 5 on the 10th?

A. Yes, in the afternoon. That is my impression. I do not remember, but I base it on the fact that I was told news had come and that the hartal was beginning about that time.

Q. On receipt of the news of the arrest of Mr. Gandhi, the hartal started again and the mob began to collect?

A. That is so.

Q. Now Mr. Broadway after the firing on the 10th was there any discussion about the wounded on that occasion?

A. Yes, there was, I believe with the Deputy Commissioner.

Q. Discussion between whom?

A. Some of the leaders came to see the Deputy Commissioner, I think.

Q. Who were they? Can you name them?

A. I cannot. I think Mr. Duni Chand was one of them.

Q. They came to see the Deputy Commissioner?

A. They came to the Deputy Commissioner.

Q. What was their suggestion about the wounded? What did they want the Deputy Commissioner to do in connection with that?

A. I do not remember the details of the proposal. I was not concerned with them. I was working in the same room and I gathered that they wished that the bodies should be given back to them.

Q. The wounded or the killed?

A. No, the killed. The wounded we had not got.

Q. On the 10th how many were killed?

A. There were three who were killed or had died of wounds.

Q. And those dead bodies were in the possession of the police?

A. They were in the hospital. I think they had been conveyed to the hospital.

Q. And the wounded were also in the hospital?

A. There must have been those that we had. There were only about 2.

Q. And they wanted the dead bodies to be handed over to them?

A. That is what I understood.

Q. Was that allowed or not allowed?

A. No, it was not allowed.

Q. And was it ever allowed afterwards or not allowed at all?

A. It was never allowed. The dead bodies were not allowed to be handed back in that way. I understood the Deputy Commissioner's contention was that it would only create a big crowd and procession and great excitement. But as far as I remember he proposed, and I believe the proposal was eventually agreed to and carried out that the relations and friends of the deceased should go and take over the dead bodies and arrange for the funerals.

Q. On what date was it decided upon?

A. I suppose it was on the 11th, but I do not remember the date at all.

Q. There was a meeting on the 11th at the Telegraph Office?

A. There was a meeting on the 11th.

Q. Of whom? Was the meeting between the Deputy Commissioner and these people?

A. Yes. As far as I remember there were two or three. No large number of gentlemen came.

Q. It may not have been a large meeting. How many came?

A. Two or three; might be four or five. I think they came more than once.

Q. And on those occasions there were conversations about the wounded and the killed?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the Deputy Commissioner say that he must consult the Lieutenant-Governor before he could do anything?

A. I do not know. I was in the same room but I did not take part in the discussions at all. I was busy with my own arrangements. He may have consulted the Lieutenant-Governor.

Q. Was this on that day or the next day?

A. On that day. I believe so.

Q. Was a meeting held at the Government House?

A. I think I was there at the Government House on the evening of the 11th. I am not sure of the date.

25 November 1919.]

Mr. E. P. BROADWAY.

A. Yes.

Q. And that they followed it rightly or wrongly?

A. Yes.

Q. As it appears to me that the matter is 6 months' old and you are not quite clear about the different meetings that were held I think I must trouble you and refresh your memory, and I will quote to you from the statements of Ram Bhaj Dutt, Harkishen Lal and Duni Chand and I will ask you whether that portion of the statement is right or wrong.

A. Yes.

Q. I am reading from the statement of Pandit Ram Bhaj Dutt.

A. I know the gentleman now, I did not know him then.

Q. Before reading it, are you aware that when it was first intended to hold a hartal on the 30th March the conveners of the meeting were called by the Deputy Commissioner and that they put the question point blank to the Deputy Commissioner, "If you pass an order that the meeting should not be held we will not hold the meeting, but that unless and until you pass the order we will hold the meeting." And the Deputy Commissioner said "I am not going to pass an order; if you hold a peaceable meeting I will not prevent it." Are you aware of that?

A. No, I do not think I was at that meeting.

Q. Here according to Ram Bhaj Dutt you were present, because he says "Mr. Broadway, the Superintendent of Police, was also present." He says: "On the evening of the 4th of April, I along with the other signatories of the notice were sent for by the Deputy Commissioner, and when I reached there the following persons were present:—

Messrs. S. S. Bhatia, Jai Gopal Sethi, Marghub Ahmad, Dina Nath, Said Hasan, Gokal Chand, Duni Chand and others.

Mr. Broadway, the Superintendent of Police, also was with the Deputy Commissioner. And when we assembled there he read out an article from the Tribune of the previous day and remarked that it was written in a very good spirit and there ought to be co-operation between the people and the Government as advocated therein. Then a discussion followed and the Deputy Commissioner said that he would deal severely with any person found causing compulsion for bringing about a hartal. When it was pointed out to him that a good deal of compulsion was being used the other way to prevent the hartal by some of the Municipal Commissioners and others, the Deputy Commissioner at the last proposed as follows:—

'That no compulsion was to be ever used but persuasion to keep the shops either closed or open could be used up to the night of the 5th April. But on the 6th no kind of persuasion or compulsion was at all to be resorted to and anyone found doing so would be severely dealt with.'

This accused suggested that he with others be made Special Constables under the Police Act and made responsible for the peace of the several parts of the town. But this suggestion was not entertained and had therefore to be dropped.

Some one among those present asked the Deputy Commissioner if the Police notice prevented the holding of the meeting at the Bradlaugh Hall, but was told that it applied only to processions and meetings on public roads."

That is, you and the Deputy Commissioner were present and they were told it applied only to processions and meetings on public roads and not to any meeting in the Bradlaugh Hall. And subsequently he says to give effect to this promise a notice was issued, Exhibit D 2 (1), which runs thus

A. May I answer that now before I forget the details? It is in part correct. One place where Mr. Ram Bhaj Dutt has gone astray is that we made a mutual agreement that no pressure should be applied after the night of Saturday. They asked that there should be a mutual agreement. We did not acquiesce in that arrangement. We distinctly pointed out that any efforts made to get shops to keep open were in the direction of law and order. We were not prepared to make a compromise. I have seen that notice before and have noted that particular thing in my mind. The point we made was that parties would go round practically insisting on shops being closed. We know in any movement there are more lukewarm people than people who are keen on it. When one man shuts his shop there is pressure put on nine others to shut their shops, and we were afraid this would go on. They said the Municipal Commissioners were putting pressure the other way and the point we made was that the Municipal Commissioners were not asking for anything improper or abnormal whereas they were, and we distinctly did not bind ourselves to tell the Municipal Commissioners anything of the kind. But I may mention that they did agree that there would be no picketing or parties going round, that persuasion should stop on the next night, the night before the occurrence. When they had gone I discussed the matter with the Deputy Commissioner and I said, "I think we had better issue these orders, though we have distinctly said we would not make any terms of this kind with them."

Q. And that order was in the following words: "All Municipal Commissioners will please note that on Sunday, April 6th, they should be present in their wards in order to assist in keeping peace. There must be no interference with any shop-keepers who wish to close or open their shops, and any person seen to be endeavouring to do so must be reported at once to the nearest chowki or thana and influence should be used so as to prevent any such interference. Shops that are open already should remain open and those which are closed are to remain closed." You think that is probably correct?

A. I think so, those are about the terms the Deputy Commissioner and I agreed upon. But I wish particularly to say we made no terms with the leaders when then they came on those grounds, but I suggested to the Deputy Commissioner that we should issue some such order.

Q. The rest of what I read out to you was correct? As to special constables?

A. No; no question of special constables was raised at that meeting.

Q. So practically it is false, this statement?

A. I have no recollection of it.

Q. Do you take any objection to any other portion of that statement?

A. No, I do not think so.

Q. You said there the order did not apply to the Bradlaugh Hall meeting?

A. Those were the words that it applied only to processions and meetings on public roads and not to meetings in the Bradlaugh Hall. Mr. Duni Chand raised this question and I said it did not apply to the Bradlaugh Hall. I had no power to issue such a notice in regard to meetings in a public hall.

Q. And do you remember that this arrangement of the 6th April was praised by the local press, both the Civil and Military Gazette and the Tribune, and that the authorities and the people were praised for the amicable arrangement made and for the happy ending it had.

A. Yes, I remember that.

Q. And I believe that you as the head of the police did not receive any complaint that anybody was forced to close his shop on the 6th?

A. I have a recollection of reports that parties did go through at night on the 6th urging the hartal till quite a late hour.

Q. That is a different matter, a party might have gone round. I want to know whether there was any actual complaint from any person who went to the police and said he was ready to open his shop and had to close it?

A. No, there was only one complaint that came to me and Mr. Fyson in the Kutcheri in regard to being turned out of a tum-tum.

Q. Only one?

A. That is all I remember.

25 November 1919.]

Mr. E. P. BROADWAY.

A. Then he must have been arrested by the order of Officer Commanding the Civil Area.

Q. And I am told that he was arrested by the police?

A. All arrests were made by the police at the request of the Officer Commanding the Civil Area or the C. I. D.

Q. You are not in a position to give information about the facts of his particular case?

A. I do not know the man nor can I give information as to his case personally in any way.

Q. Then was the arrest of a marriage party at Rajgarh made? Was that done by the police?

A. By the police on the Mozang side.

Q. The marriage party consisted of ten people?

A. All were arrested, I think by the police.

Q. Were the arrests made under your orders?

A. I don't think any orders were given for the arrest; they were arrested by the police for breach of Martial Law orders as far as I recollect.

Q. Because they were more than a particular number?

A. As far as I remember, it was late at night and there was a large concourse of people assembled against Martial Law orders. They were I think warned in the first place by the Sub-Inspector who came across this meeting. These details were reported to me afterwards.

Q. Did the Sub-Inspector realise that they were going to perform a marriage?

A. I expect he did.

Q. Still he thought it was the right thing to do to arrest those people?

A. It was his duty to arrest them if they were assembled for any purpose as long as they were contravening the order. Licenses were applied for and issued by the Officer Commanding the Civil Area wherever anybody desired to collect people for a marriage.

Q. You do not think any exercise of discretion or common sense was necessary in dealing with cases of this character?

A. How far are you going to give discretion to an officer? At this time the Officer Commanding, Civil Area, was my superior and the superior of all the police under me. He had issued certain orders under Martial Law. It was not, I think, the duty of the Sub-Inspector to exercise his discretion. As a matter of fact he does seem to have used his discretion in the first instance because as I remember the facts he found this marriage meeting going on and he told them it was contrary to orders, and if they had not permission to hold it they must go and get it first. And I think he was told that somebody had gone to get permission.

Q. I want to be clear about the facts. When the police officer came on the spot what was actually happening, marriage ceremonies were being performed?

A. There was a concourse of people collected, what the exact stage of the proceedings was I cannot say. The information I got afterwards was that he had found this concourse of people which was contravening a Martial Law order, that he had told them that they could not collect together like that without permission and they must disperse. I think he was then told that somebody had gone to get permission and he replied that they must disperse till they had got the permission. He then went on his rounds and when he was coming back he found this crowd again and they still had not permission.

Q. When he came next what was going on, the marriage was being performed?

A. I cannot tell you what stage they were at the first time or the second time. At that second visit they were still contravening orders and he thereupon arrested them.

Q. All these people were flogged, were they?

A. I believe one or two of them were flogged. They were taken before the Officer Commanding the Civil Area.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin.—Was it not before the Civil Magistrate?

Mr. Abdul Kadir, Assistant Government Advocate.—Yes, before the Civil Magistrate.

Witness.—I do not remember, I think he was taken first to the Officer Commanding, Civil Area, and then to the Magistrate, or he may have been taken direct to the Magistrate.

Q. Then about the Badshahi Mosque; that was ordered to be kept shut for several weeks?

A. I believe so, but I do not know for how long; I thought it was several days only. My recollection is based on the fact that it was closed on the 12th of April when we had to clear the mosque and the gates were guarded on the occasion of troops passing through when the trouble occurred at Hira Mandi, and on the 18th, that is only 6 days afterwards, it was again closed, that is to say again guarded. A special arrangement had to be made on the 18th because it was a Friday and it was feared that mobs might collect there again and there might be trouble.

Q. But after the 18th?

A. It was closed I think on the evening of the 18th and the 19th was a Friday and it was closed on the 19th. I do not know if it was kept closed after that.

Q. We were told that the mosque was not allowed to be opened till the Trustee or whoever it may be had sent a document agreeing to certain conditions?

A. They may have sent a document in that time, or possibly the mosque may have remained unoccupied though no guard was posted.

Q. Were you the officer concerned who negotiated the matter with the Trustees about this document?

A. No.

Q. That was entirely the military?

A. I suppose the Officer Commanding, I do not know.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. I believe you are aware that these hartals on the 30th of March and 6th April were due to a suggestion made by Mahatma Gandhi that that day should be observed as a universal day of mourning?

A. Yes.

Q. And it was because of such an order passed by Mahatma Gandhi that it was observed at several places as a day of mourning?

A. Yes, it was on account of Mr. Gandhi's passive resistance movement.

Q. I think you will agree with me that the observance of a hartal on the 6th of April was not due to a certain conspiracy between the inhabitants of Lahore; it was rather in the due observance of the orders of Mahatma Gandhi and it was universal?

A. It had to be organised and worked up.

Q. I mean the idea, the suggestion was Mahatma Gandhi's suggestion?

A. Yes it was Gandhi's suggestion.

Q. It was not the suggestion of any person living in Lahore?

A. I believe not.

Q. Up to the 10th April had the Lahore Police Department any information or any evidence that Ram Bhaj Dutt, Duni Chand, Harkishan Lal and Naurang and two or three others were members of a conspiracy and that in furtherance of the object of that conspiracy this hartal was being organised? As the head of the Police Department at Lahore, were you in possession of any information or any evidence to that effect?

A. No, I had no evidence. All I knew at the time of their connection with the whole movement was that they were the organisers of the hartal and the signatories of the notices calling the Bradlaugh Hall meeting.

Q. That is not my point.

A. No other conspiracy.

Q. You say you had no idea up to that time and no information that there was a conspiracy in existence at Lahore and that these persons were members of that conspiracy and that its object was to subvert British rule? You were not in possession of any such information up to the 10th of April?

A. No, certainly not of any conspiracy. I take it you mean conspiracy in the bad sense, that is a conspiring together to do an improper thing. It was improper in my opinion to organise a hartal and create a disturbance, but beyond that I had no evidence that there was a conspiracy.

Q. And that this hartal was a limb of that conspiracy, you were not aware of that?

A. No.

Q. And even if they organised the whole thing and were the conveners of the meeting, you will agree with me that the idea originated with Mahatma Gandhi?

A. How far are you going to give discretion to an officer? At this time the Officer Commanding, Civil Area, was my superior and the superior of all the police under me. He had issued certain orders under Martial Law. It was not, I think, the duty of the Sub-Inspector to exercise his discretion. As a matter of fact he does seem to have used his discretion in the first instance because as I remember the facts he found this marriage meeting going on and he told them it was contrary to orders, and if they had not permission to hold it they must go and get it first. And I think he was told that somebody had gone to get permission.

Q. I want to be clear about the facts. When the police officer came on the spot what was actually happening, marriage ceremonies were being performed?

A. There was a concourse of people collected, what the exact stage of the proceedings was I cannot say. The information I got afterwards was that he had found this concourse of people which was contravening a Martial Law order, that he had told them that they could not collect together like that without permission and they must disperse. I think he was then told that somebody had gone to get permission and he replied that they must disperse till they had got the permission. He then went on his rounds and when he was coming back he found this crowd again and they still had not permission.

Q. When he came next what was going on, the marriage was being performed?

A. I cannot tell you what stage they were at the first time or the second time. At that second visit they were still contravening orders and he thereupon arrested them.

Q. All these people were flogged, were they?

A. I believe one or two of them were flogged. They were taken before the Officer Commanding the Civil Area.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin.—Was it not before the Civil Magistrate?

Mr. Abdul Kadir, Assistant Government Advocate.—Yes, before the Civil Magistrate.

Witness.—I do not remember, I think he was taken first to the Officer Commanding, Civil Area, and then to the Magistrate, or he may have been taken direct to the Magistrate.

Q. Then about the Badshahi Mosque; that was ordered to be kept shut for several weeks?

A. I believe so, but I do not know for how long; I thought it was several days only. My recollection is based on the fact that it was closed on the 12th of April when we had to clear the mosque and the gates were guarded on the occasion of troops passing through when the trouble occurred at Hira Mandi, and on the 18th, that is only 6 days afterwards, it was again closed, that is to say again guarded. A special arrangement had to be made on the 18th because it was a Friday and it was feared that mobs might collect there again and there might be trouble.

Q. But after the 18th?

A. It was closed I think on the evening of the 18th and the 19th was a Friday and it was closed on the 19th. I do not know if it was kept closed after that.

Q. We were told that the mosque was not allowed to be opened till the Trustee or whoever it may be had sent a document agreeing to certain conditions?

A. They may have sent a document in that time, or possibly the mosque may have remained unoccupied though no guard was posted.

Q. Were you the officer concerned who negotiated the matter with the Trustees about this document?

A. No.

Q. That was entirely the military?

A. I suppose the Officer Commanding, I do not know.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. I believe you are aware that these hartals on the 30th of March and 6th April were due to a suggestion made by Mahatma Gandhi that that day should be observed as a universal day of mourning?

A. Yes.

Q. And it was because of such an order passed by Mahatma Gandhi that it was observed at several places as a day of mourning?

A. Yes, it was on account of Mr. Gandhi's passive resistance movement.

Q. I think you will agree with me that the observance of a hartal on the 6th of April was not due to a certain conspiracy between the inhabitants of Lahore; it was rather in the due observance of the orders of Mahatma Gandhi and it was universal?

A. It had to be organised and worked up.

Q. I mean the idea, the suggestion was Mahatma Gandhi's suggestion?

A. Yes it was Gandhi's suggestion.

Q. It was not the suggestion of any person living in Lahore?

A. I believe not.

Q. Up to the 10th April had the Lahore Police Department any information or any evidence that Ram Bhaj Dutt, Duni Chand, Harkishan Lal and Naurang and two or three others were members of a conspiracy and that in furtherance of the object of that conspiracy this hartal was being organised? As the head of the Police Department at Lahore, were you in possession of any information or any evidence to that effect?

A. No, I had no evidence. All I knew at the time of their connection with the whole movement was that they were the organisers of the hartal and the signatories of the notices calling the Bradlaugh Hall meeting.

Q. That is not my point.

A. No other conspiracy.

Q. You say you had no idea up to that time and no information that there was a conspiracy in existence at Lahore and that these persons were members of that conspiracy and that its object was to subvert British rule? You were not in possession of any such information up to the 10th of April?

A. No, certainly not of any conspiracy. I take it you mean conspiracy in the bad sense, that is a conspiring together to do an improper thing. It was improper in my opinion to organise a hartal and create a disturbance, but beyond that I had no evidence that there was a conspiracy.

Q. And that this hartal was a limb of that conspiracy, you were not aware of that?

A. No.

Q. And even if they organised the whole thing and were the conveners of the meeting, you will agree with me that the idea originated with Mahatma Gandhi?

Continued.

Q. Just as they do in Muharram?

A. Those who were beating their breasts said hai, hai; and those who were saying jai, jai were flinging their hands high. (The witness here made signs with his hands and showed the movements of the hands of the crowd when crying out hai hai and jai jai.)

Q. Therefore a portion of the crowd who were beating their breasts were saying hai hai?

A. Yes.

Q. You have expressed that in your opinion Martial Law was necessary?

A. Yes, I think it was necessary.

Q. I would just ask you a few questions to know the grounds upon which you base that opinion. Now practically no fire-arms were used during the whole of these disturbances at Lahore by the mob?

A. No.

Q. No person has been convicted up to this time of looting any shop or any goods in Lahore between the 10th and 15th?

A. No, I don't remember any case.

Q. No person has been convicted of assaulting any of the citizens of Lahore leaving aside those three occasions?

A. I think that is correct.

Q. That is, leaving aside the Lohari Gate and Hira Mandi firing and the firing at the Mall, there was no assault by this crowd?

A. No, I believe not.

Q. Then on the 10th when you threatened them with firing and when that order was not obeyed, you actually fired, and the people were aware of this fact, on the 12th also they were aware of this fact that on the 10th when you threatened to fire you actually did fire and that it was not an empty threat?

A. But they were very excited. I do not think they were going to take any risks.

Q. You have no information, and there is no complaint that any individual police officer or any officer of Government was assaulted during these days by the mobs?

A. No, not in Lahore itself, but in Moghalpura, which is a part of Lahore, I heard of some.

Q. It is four miles away, and you know nothing about Moghalpura?

A. I was not there. I was getting information from all my ilagas. I heard that there had been stone-throwing.

Q. Therefore the only information that you had was that at Moghalpura there had been stone-throwing?

A. Yes.

Q. And may I take it that, putting at the lowest computation, the whole mob was about 40 to 50 thousand in Lohari Gate? What will be the number of those who were rebels as you have typically described them?

A. I cannot tell you.

Q. Some rough idea?

A. I cannot even form a rough idea. The only mob that I saw up in Lohari Gate was about 15 to 20 thousand. But the whole city seemed to be disaffected.

Q. Because otherwise how will you say that the situation was hopeless? I mean the population of Lahore city is 2 lakhs and 30 thousand, and if I suggest that one thousand were disaffected, you cannot say that you lost the civil control, because the rest of the citizens who are law-abiding will be prepared to obey your orders, and therefore you cannot say that you lost civil control. Therefore what I want to know is when you say practically it was impossible to maintain order in the whole of Lahore, what do you mean? Out of a total population of 2 lakhs and 50 thousand, how many were rebels?

A. I cannot tell you, I never made any computation.

Q. Neither can you give me any rough idea?

A. I never formed any idea.

Q. You know there are a very large number of license-holders in Lahore?

A. Oh, yes, arms license-holders.

Q. As a Superintendent of Police, I think you know that it is very easy for these dacoits and anarchists to obtain illicit arms from Native States and other adjoining provinces, and that arms had been used in the majority of these dacoities and anarchical crimes?

A. I don't know that it is easy, but certainly arms have been used from time to time.

Q. Then at least you will admit that the High Court was not closed? Do you say that in the month of April the High Court of these provinces was closed and it was not deciding cases?

A. Do I say so? To tell you the truth, I do not know. I think it was open.

Q. The courts of the Munsifs and Subordinate Judges and the District Judge, were they closed or open?

A. I cannot tell you. I do not know.

Q. Supposing they were open and they were doing their regular work, then the mere fact that because some of your Honorary Magistrates and Stipendiary Magistrates did not do their regular work, will you be prepared to say that the ordinary civil work of this province was not going on during the 1st week of April?

A. Certainly not, not normally. I don't know how many courts were sitting. My impression at the time was there was nothing doing at the time.

Q. Were these courts attended by pleaders, cases argued and witnesses examined?

A. I don't know. I have told you that I don't know that. The Deputy Commissioner and I were at the Telegraph Office.

Q. At least you know this that, according to you, within 24 hours when you lost control of the Lahore city you were holding a farewell dinner in honour of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor on the 11th April?

A. I think it was on the 10th. But this was all organized before.

Q. But on the 11th April dinner was not given to His Honour?

A. May be, I do not remember the date at all. I was not there.

Q. Therefore having regard to these facts, why do you say that the city was in rebellion and beyond your control?

A. That was my opinion at the time. That was the impression I had of the situation from all the reports I was receiving that it was out of my control.

Q. How many thanas are there in the Lahore City?

A. One thana in the Lahore City.

Q. How many chowkies?

A. I can't tell you exactly. They are not inside. There are practically none inside, they are all outside.

Q. I don't know what the practice here is, but practically for every two or three mohallas there is always a police chowki?

A. There are no police chowkies inside the city.

Q. None?

A. None inside the city, except one, that is, at Tibighat which is practically outside the city, that is, the old tahsil on the road near Taksali Gate. All the others are outside the city.

Q. Are they within municipal limits or not?

A. They are all within municipal limits. We are now in municipal limits, but we are not in the city.

(Mr. Abdul Kadir, Assistant Government Advocate. —What used to be the four walls of the city.)

Q. You have got the city, you have got Anarkali, you never lost control over Anarkali. In my province for a city like Lahore there will be more than 3 dozen of these chowkies because for every ward there are about 6 or 7 chowkies, I do not know the practice here.

A. We have not got a very large number. I can tell you the exact number if you wish.

Q. So far as these police chowkies are concerned, the whole town is distributed amongst these police chowkies, that is, the different chowkies have to keep watch and ward in different portions of the city?

A. The men from those chowkies keep watch and ward in different places, but they are not in the city. You will take the Kotwali, it is outside Delhi Gate, it is about 200 yards outside.

Q. There are at least a dozen chowkies in Lahore?

A. All outside the city.

25 November 1919.]

Mr. E. P. BROADWAY.

A. Quite impossible.

Q. You said that five pickets were established at different places, and now you stated before this committee that the sole object, the sole necessity, of your firing on the crowd that assembled at Hira Mandi was that there was a danger of that crowd being in between your body of soldiers and the pickets that were established by you?

A. I did not say that was the sole object. That was one. The point was, we had a huge mob at Hira Mandi, a dangerous mob with lathis. This mob had assembled contrary to everything that had been said by the Officer Commanding all the way along. This dangerous mob would not disperse. The troops were in this position, that they must either leave that mob there in its position and in that condition and march away. This mob might follow us and there might be trouble or it might turn on the pickets.

Q. May I put that question again? First of all, are there or are there not any number of by-lanes and by-streets between the pickets that you had established that night?

A. There are.

Q. Then may I take it that you had passed no orders and you had made no arrangements for preventing people from coming from these by-lanes on to the main road. You had passed no such orders that no person from the by-lanes should enter the main road?

A. I do not catch your meaning. No orders were issued, and no arrangements could be made to stop people from coming from those by-lanes.

Q. One picket is here, another picket is here, the third picket is here, and there are any number of by-lanes?

A. They were not in that position. The pickets were posted at the old Kotwali and at Bazaz Hatta, down at what is known as Nawab Haveli and at Lohari Mandi, and the 5th picket was posted after this as we went there at what is known, I think, as Lakar Mandi. They were in a circle as it were.

Q. My point is, having regard to the geographical position of these pickets, it was impossible for you to prevent people from assembling at different points between these pickets?

A. Yes, it was impossible. We did not have any body else except pickets. We could not keep parties away from forming mobs. But the whole object of these pickets was by the moral effect to restore order and to prevent such assemblies, if possible.

Q. And no orders were passed that these pickets should prevent people from using the lanes or coming on to the main road?

A. No.

Q. Therefore I cannot understand the one important reason that has been suggested to us that the firing was necessary because the pickets were going to be cut off from the body of men that you had deputed?

A. The pickets were not going to be cut off in that sense. It is one of the reasons as I have said. It may be very difficult for you or even for anybody at such a distance of time sitting quietly to consider the matter now when all the trouble is over, to know what the situation was at the time. What appeared to us at that time is very different. You cannot possibly realize our situation at that time. Well the point was that we had taken control of the city. One of the objects of taking control of the city was to be able to prevent by moral effect, if possible, if not by any other force that might be necessary, the formation of dangerous mobs and processions. Having done this, we came through to Hira Mandi. There was a large mob there, a very hostile mob. At every place I may say there were crowds. They were told to get away, and in most places they got away in small crowds. Here they absolutely would not move at all, they would not disperse. They were far more dangerous than at other places. They were not armed. It was represented as the Danda Fauj. Large numbers of people were armed with lathis. This was the situation that had to be dealt with. It appeared to the Deputy Commissioner, and I agreed with him, that these big mobs should be told to disperse. They were told to disperse. Far from dispersing they grew in numbers. The whole of that place was massed with people, and the Deputy Commissioner attempted, as I said to-day in my statement, with a few squares to disperse the crowd eventually and failed. Stone-throwing began and then he gave me instructions to fire. One of the necessities for firing, as I mentioned to-day, in my mind was that an unruly mob had been left behind. We could not leave a mob behind under those circumstances. They were all together. Once they dispersed it is a different matter. If they were going down to any of those pickets, there would have been a tremendous loss of life.

Q. You had no intention of remaining there for ever?

A. We had not.

Q. You only intended to pass through the street and come back. What did it matter as to whether the crowd was there just after you established the pickets or the crowd collected after two hours. There is a body of men. As you proceed you go on leaving certain pickets. You find between a certain picket that was left by you and the main body, there was a large crowd. You had no mind to stop there for the whole time. Therefore what did it matter unless and until you found that that large crowd was going to assault you or your picket, what did it matter to you as to whether that picket was cut off from the main body when there was a large crowd in between the picket and the main body?

A. That I have only mentioned incidentally as one of the things that made it impossible to leave the crowd at all. But the main point remains, the assembly was illegal. It was told to disperse by the Deputy Commissioner over and over again. It collected in larger numbers. He endeavoured to disperse it. That is one of the things. I think you are misunderstanding me saying that because of those pickets there, the necessity arose for firing. But the actual situation at the time was this. This was an illegal assembly which had been ordered to disperse by the Deputy Commissioner and which refused to disperse and commenced stoning.

Q. Before it began to throw stones, how do you call it an illegal assembly? I can understand that when they were asked to disperse they did not do so, and instead of dispersing they threw stones. It may become an illegal assembly, but why was it an illegal assembly before it threw stones?

A. Because all the way along the Deputy Commissioner had been announcing that assemblies and processions would not be allowed. This large assembly had formed, it was with sticks and it was ordered to disperse. When it did not obey the order of the Deputy Commissioner to disperse, it became an illegal assembly.

Q. Is it not a fact that at least 50 per cent. of those people were those people who were turned out from the Badshahi Mosque by the cavalry that was sent to you?

A. I do not know what percentage.

Q. Certainly when they were asked to clear out of the mosque they would go somewhere?

A. Yes, but there are lots of places to go to, but they assembled there and stayed there. It did not all happen in two or three minutes. There is any amount of space there, streets and Galis through which the people could disperse if they wished, but they had no intention of dispersing.

Q. I think you have stated previously that this crowd that was facing you at Hira Mandi, and which was subsequently fired upon, a large number of them were with open breasts and beating their breasts crying out hai, hai?

A. I cannot say whether they were with open breasts, but certainly they were crying out hai, hai and jai, jai.

Q. And with their open breasts?

A. I do not remember seeing them with open breasts. I did not notice that in particular.

Q. Just as they do in Muharram?

A. Those who were beating their breasts said hai.

A. We had not.

Q. You only intended to pass through the street and come back. What did it matter as to whether the crowd was there just after you established the pickets or the crowd collected after two hours. There is a body of men. As you proceed you go on leaving certain pickets. You find between a certain picket that was left by you and the main body, there was a large crowd. You had no mind to stop there for the whole time. Therefore what did it matter unless and until you found that that large crowd was going to assault you or your pickets, what did it matter to you as to whether that picket was cut off from the main body when there was a large crowd in between the picket and the main body?

A. That I have only mentioned incidentally as one of the things that made it impossible to leave the crowd at all. But the main point remains, the assembly was illegal. It was told to disperse by the Deputy Commissioner over and over again. It collected in larger numbers. He endeavoured to disperse it. That is one of the things. I think you are misunderstanding me saying that because of those pickets there, the necessity arose for firing. But the actual situation at the time was this. This was an illegal assembly which had been ordered to disperse by the Deputy Commissioner and which refused to disperse and commenced stoning.

Q. Before it began to throw stones, how do you call it an illegal assembly? I can understand that when they were asked to disperse they did not do so, and instead of dispersing they threw stones. It may become an illegal assembly, but why was it an illegal assembly before it threw stones?

A. Because all the way along the Deputy Commissioner had been announcing that assemblies and processions would not be allowed. This large assembly had formed, it was with sticks and it was ordered to disperse. When it did not obey the order of the Deputy Commissioner to disperse, it became an illegal assembly.

Q. Is it not a fact that at least 50 per cent. of these people were those people who were turned out from the Badshahi Mosque by the cavalry that was sent to you?

A. I do not know what percentage.

Q. Certainly when they were asked to clear out of the mosque they would go somewhere?

A. Yes, but there are lots of places to go to, but they assembled there and stayed there. It did not all happen in two or three minutes. There is any amount of space there, streets and Galis through which the people could disperse if they wished, but they had no intention of dispersing.

Q. I think you have stated previously that this crowd that was facing you at Hira Mandi, and which was subsequently fired upon, a large number of them were with open breasts and beating their breasts crying out hai, hai?

A. I cannot say whether they were with open breasts, but certainly they were crying out hai, hai and jai, jai.

Q. And with their open breasts?

A. I do not remember seeing them with open breasts. I did not notice that in particular.

Q. Just as they do in Muharram?

A. Those who were beating their breasts said hai.

25 November 1919.]

Mr. E. P. BROADWAY.

Q. That is a different matter. I want to put it on another footing. There is no doubt on account of the firing, rightly or wrongly, there was resentment. People were saying that their fellow-citizens had been killed and so on. There was that feeling and resentment?

A. There must have been of course.

Q. And all this happened because they were not going to open their shops. That was the consequence of their persistence in their maintaining hartal?

A. Firing?

Q. After that crowd did not disperse, and you had to fire. Practically that was the natural consequence of the hartal movement. All that happened was the natural consequence of the hartal movement?

A. Yes, I suppose so.

Q. According to you, you foresaw it and wanted to prevent it?

A. There is always the danger of riots and trouble.

Q. There was that resentment in the minds of the people. Do you mean to say that these orders that were passed or promulgated by the Martial Law authorities would help in bringing about a normal state of affairs or increase the resentment of the people?

A. I think they may increase the resentment of the people; they would certainly restore a normal state of affairs. People may not like them. When you are subjected to control, you do not like it.

Q. Was the continuance of Martial Law necessary? May I understand that when these orders were passed they were necessary, and that they were very important factors in bringing Lahore city to its normal condition?

A. That is a question for the Military and would be as the military position suggested to the Military officers. They were passing these orders. I did not make out these orders. It is not for me to justify or defend their action.

Q. You have expressed the opinion that the continuance of Martial Law was necessary?

A. I consider that the continuance of Martial Law was necessary. It was the best and quickest way of restoring and maintaining law and order.

Q. Therefore I want to know as to whether the Martial Law orders that were passed by the Military authorities in your opinion were necessary? I do not mean this order or that notice in particular. I mean the general administration?

A. You mean the general control. People immediately understood that such things should not go on. Things immediately began to improve. As soon as the control came in, we were able to continue.

Q. Everybody would agree with you that if in ordinary times a summary procedure is adopted and this complicated machinery of the Criminal Procedure Code and the Indian Evidence Act is removed, certainly there will be better control of Police. There will be no crime. You can put it down. Is that your opinion?

A. You can take it at that. I did not mean that; I would not suggest that. Abnormal conditions require abnormal measures. Conditions were distinctly abnormal and Martial Law was an abnormal measure, but it was a necessity.

Q. In your opinion if a summary procedure is adopted in normal conditions doing away with all these complicated procedure of the Criminal Procedure Code and the Indian Evidence Act, will not that give you better control of the badmashas?

A. It probably would give me better control. It is neither desirable nor necessary in normal times.

Q. The only thing which I could gather from your answer is that you thought that there were so many persons arrested and there was a chance of a speedy trial under Martial Law?

A. I did not say that. The quick disposal of the whole thing and the restoration and the continued maintenance of order in my opinion required it; and it was a quick way of dealing with all these cases.

Q. There was no disorder after the 14th?

A. There was no disorder after the 12th, actual disorder.

Q. There was no disorder after the 15th, 16th and 17th, throughout the province?

A. I do not know.

Q. Yes; a list has been given to us. Practically there was no disorder throughout the province after the 17th. I will take from the 18th. There was no disorder after the 18th?

A. Quite likely. I do not remember the date. But I have given it in my statement so far as my district was concerned.

Q. Supposing there was no disorder throughout the province after the 18th, what are your grounds for saying that it was necessary that Martial Law should have been maintained?

A. Disorders might have been made. Therefore, in the same way as you are supposing, there was every possibility of an outbreak of disorder. You have got to restore normal conditions. There were no actual disturbances and things of that kind going on at the time.

Q. Is there any guarantee that after the restoration of normal conditions, there can be no disorder?

A. There is far greater guarantee than there was at that time.

Q. In order to avoid that possibility, I think you will be in favour of Martial Law. There is always the possibility of there being disorder?

A. No; abnormal conditions require special measures and they were taken. You will admit that the conditions were very abnormal. But I did not say that because there is the possibility of disorder, you could maintain better order under Martial Law; therefore in ordinary times Martial Law should be continued, I never said that.

Q. That is what I do not understand and I am troubling you and wasting the time of the Committee and your time. I do not understand what were the abnormal conditions after the 14th. You have admitted that hartal came into existence because Mr. Gandhi wanted a universal day of hartal. After that Mahatma Gandhi was arrested on the 10th. On account of his arrest there was that riot on the 10th. There was another hartal. Then after that the hartal continued up to the 15th. It ceased on the 16th?

A. I think it ceased on the 17th or 18th.

Q. Therefore there is no doubt you will not call it abnormal, if you realise in a city that different people had been shot, rightly or wrongly, and that the leaders of that city had been deported, that the crowd will be sulky; they will not be very happy and jubilant, praising everybody that all this was very good. But I do not see what were the abnormal conditions after the 17th. I do not see anything abnormal in the state of Lahore that according to you would have justified the prolongation of Martial Law.

A. Further resentment, you say, was created in the minds of the people.

Q. I am coming to resentment.

A. There must be resentment.

Q. Therefore don't you think you should conciliate them?

A. We might have an outbreak again at any time.

Q. The best way of putting down resentment is by conciliation and not by the promulgation of Martial Law orders that were promulgated and adding to the resentment?

A. Quite possible. It was not because they were putting down resentment. You ask what was the necessity for imposing and continuing Martial Law because things had settled down. You point to the resentment of the people at various acts that had taken place. I say the conditions were abnormal and there had been a great upheaval, and it was necessary to crush this very resentment and prevent any ebullitions of that resentment coming into violence. That was why the continuance of Martial Law was necessary.

Q. So long as there is resentment, there is a chance of those people doing something wrong. Isn't that so?

A. There is always the danger of those people doing some thing. The fresher the resentment, the nearer the danger.

25 November 1919.]

Mr. E. P. BROADWAY.

Q. I quite agree with you. Therefore which would have been the better thing, to allow that resentment by efflux of time to subside in 2 weeks or 3 weeks or to add to the resentment by passing these Martial Law orders which I have referred to and to add fire to that resentment and to make it smoulder for a long time?

A. I am quite sure so far as I am concerned and so far as every other officer is concerned, we tried to put down resentment in any way we could, but there was nothing to assure us that, by removing Martial Law or by doing away with Martial Law or any of the measures that were taken to protect and to restore and maintain order, we could succeed by withdrawing Martial Law and stopping all precautions.

Q. I leave that point. About this Danda Fauj. Was it not a show? They had small sticks and they were presenting them and making fun of the whole thing. There was nothing serious?

A. It was certainly not reported or represented to me as such.

Q. Was it reported as a serious thing? What was the Danda Fauj reported to be doing? May I take it that they marched through the city, as sometimes happens on the occasion of festivals. The man in front had a toy gun, and they were presenting sticks. If he asked them kneel, they would kneel. They would stand up and proceed further, and so on. Did they do anything else? Have I described this Danda Fauj correctly?

A. They were certainly supposed to be doing these things. Do you wish me to understand that you are suggesting that this Danda Fauj was merely a tamasha?

Q. I do not say it was a tamasha. I am prepared to say that it was a very mischievous thing. But as has appeared in the statement of witnesses it was not more than this idea. He had a toy gun and in front of a street he called out "come along." A number of boys went behind him. When he said 'fire,' all of them had the sticks in a particular way. Then when he said 'shoulder arms,' they did that.

A. It was not an amusement.

Q. Anything else which this Danda Fauj did?

A. We had persons going about the streets making more or less a tamasha. The idea was that this was a party to organise regular men.

Q. This was for organising a regular army?

A. Mob, not regular army.

Q. Then the head of this Danda Fauj was prosecuted and convicted?

A. Yes.

Q. This is the only thing which has been alleged against him, viz., what he was doing on the 12th. Whatever may be his intention, we will not quarrel about it. Is it not true that in the case against him, only these things had been alleged against him?

A. The formation and management of the Danda Fauj is what he was run in for.

Q. Is it not a fact that a number of people who had subscribed to these langar khanas were arrested?

A. Not that I am aware of. I did consider the question of dealing with persons who would be opening langar khanas.

Q. I do not want that. I want to know whether any persons who had subscribed to the langar khanas were arrested or not by the Police?

A. They may have been, but certainly not because they had subscribed to the langar khanas. Amongst persons who were arrested, there may have been persons who had subscribed to the langar khanas. They were not arrested because they had subscribed to the langar khanas.

Q. They were arrested because you thought that if these langar khanas were not suppressed, the hartal may continue?

A. You are quite mistaken. I considered whether the organisers of langar khanas and their subscribers were or were not to be dealt with. There were two sides to the question. Both sides were represented to me. One was that these people who were organising langar khanas were encouraging the holding and continuing the hartal. That was at the time when we considered it as anti-Government movement. The other was that these people may have those ideas. At the same time there were other reasons that could be urged for these langar khanas, which would be beneficial; they might be considered to be as a protection from riot and looting, because if the people were not able to get food somewhere and became hungry, they might loot. I considered both these possibilities and I decided absolutely to take no action, and I gave no orders to arrest any man for that purpose. Somebody connected with langar khanas might have been arrested on some other charge. No man I am aware of was arrested because he was opening or connected with or subscribed to langar khanas.

Q. One Karam Das was arrested?

A. I believe he was not arrested by my order.

Q. And you know that he was in the first place acquitted or discharged?

A. I do not know. He was not arrested by my order. He was not arrested even in Lahore.

Q. Even after the Martial Law had ceased to exist, is it not a fact that he was under custody for more than a week without any charge?

A. I have no idea how long he was in custody. I do not know anything about him, when he was released or dealt with.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. How long have you been in the Police, Mr. Broadway?

A. Over 26 years.

Q. In the Punjab Police I suppose?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you been in various districts of the Punjab from time to time?

A. Yes.

Q. I take it that you are pretty well acquainted with the conditions, political or otherwise, of the Punjab?

A. I may say that I am; yes, but only superficially. I do not go very deeply into the matter, but only as far as it affects crime and so on.

Q. The means which the Government have at their disposal of knowing about the conditions in the country are the Police. Is it not?

A. The Police and the C. I. D., and the Deputy Commissioner.

Q. The C. I. D. belong to the Police?

A. It is a separate branch.

Q. If there was any widespread political movement of the nature of subverting Government, it would come to your notice?

A. Yes; the local part of it would. I should know of the local movement more than of the general. I should not have any general idea of the movement. I would know something of what was going on locally.

Q. How long have you been in Lahore?

A. As Superintendent of Police, Lahore, I have been since May last year; 4 months of that I was away. I think I took over charge in May last year, as Superintendent of Police.

Q. Were you in Lahore before?

A. I have been actually in Lahore since 1915. I was on the Railway for 18 months.

Q. May I take it that you know the conditions in Lahore, at any rate, either from your own knowledge or from the records which you may have had confidentially in your office?

A. Yes.

Q. Were there any conspiracies in Lahore? Was there any conspiracy in Lahore with the object of subverting Government in Lahore? Any conspiracy for rebellion?

A. I should certainly say that there was no conspiracy to create rebellion in Lahore. I am not aware of any conspiracy to create rebellion. But there was this movement, you may call it conspiracy or not, to create agitation, widespread agitation, to paralyse Government and also to force their hands.

Q. Which movement?

A. Passive resistance, opposition to the Rowlatt Act.

Q. Did it not emanate from Mr. Gandhi at Bombay?

A. Yes, on account of the Rowlatt Act.

25 November 1919.]

Mr. E. P. BROADWAY.

Q. It was quite open, it was published?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you call it conspiracy?

A. Not in that sense. It is a very difficult thing to explain it. The object of Mr. Gandhi may not be the object of the lower leaders. They may be conspiring.

Q. You are referring only to this movement. Anything else? I particularly asked whether there was any conspiracy in Lahore and you said 'no.'

A. I know of no conspiracy to rebel against Government at all.

Q. Except this passive resistance movement?

A. Except the general agitation against the Rowlatt Act.

Q. That was started by Mr. Gandhi?

A. The passive resistance movement was. I do not think the agitation against the Rowlatt Act was started by Mr. Gandhi.

Q. What form did that agitation take against the Rowlatt Act?

A. It took the form of passive resistance, hartals and so on.

Q. That was started by Mr. Gandhi?

A. Yes.

Q. Then there was nothing beyond this. It was all?

A. I do not think there was anything beyond it in Mr. Gandhi's mind.

Q. I am not talking about Mr. Gandhi's mind. I am asking so far as your information about Lahore goes, whether there was anything going on except to organise this movement of passive resistance?

A. I have no information about it. Do you mean to say there was any organisation to create a rebellion or anything of that sort?

Q. There was nothing beyond this?

A. I do not know of any.

Q. The form it was taking was hartal and holding of meetings?

A. That is the form it took. The holding of hartal and meetings to force the Government's hands.

Q. Whatever may be the object, there were only these things?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know who were the leaders of this movement in Lahore?

A. Yes, I can tell you the signatories of the movement. I have got here an old note of mine. I do not know when I made it out. It is called a committee working to give effect to Mr. Gandhi's instructions for Sunday, 6th April 1919.

Q. And the Committee was composed of whom?

A. There are 7 or 8 names. I really forget how I got it. I will read it out.

Dr. Gokal Chand.
Mehta Babadur Chand.
Mr. Duni Chand.
Maulvi Fazul Din.
Malik Barkat Ali.
Chaudhri Ram Bhaj Datt.
Dharam Das Suri.
Sardar Habibulla Khan, Barrister.

Q. This was a local committee to organise the hartal and, I understand, to give effect to Mr. Gandhi's movement of having hartal all over India?

A. Yes, they were organised; and then there were others; it included the signatories of the notice about the Bradlaugh Hall meeting and hartal.

Q. And that was broadly advertised and not made in secret?

A. It was printed.

Q. There was no secret about it?

A. No.

Q. I understand that the hartal on the 6th of April, which was the day appointed for it, passed off perfectly quietly at Lahore and nothing happened? The only thing which happened as regards the passive resistance movement was the hartal and that went off all right?

A. Yes. I heard that another one was to be held the following Sunday.

Q. What was the reason for it?

A. I do not know the reason. That was the rumour heard here. That was stated. No notice was issued. It was put for the reason that I have already stated in my statement here. I went out on the morning of the 10th and arranged for Military arrangements, similar to those that we had before, on the following Saturday night.

Q. Is it not likely that if it had been contemplated, as was held on the 6th, there would have been some organisation to advertise it asking people to close shops?

A. Yes.

Q. Because there is nothing secret about it, they did not want the hartal?

A. There was nothing widespread that there was to be another hartal. It was stated that there would be a hartal. I cannot see how it was. The impression was so strong that arrangements were made to meet it.

Q. Did you enquire from any of these gentlemen whether they wanted to hold the hartal?

A. No, I did not.

Q. You have told us that this hartal was an anti-Government movement. What do you mean by its being anti-Government movement?

A. Hartal has always been looked upon by Policemen as a dangerous movement. In this case it became anti-Government, because it was organized to resist a Government measure.

Q. Would you also call a public meeting for the purpose of protesting against any legislation which people did not like as an anti-Government movement?

A. No, it depends on the meeting. A very big hartal on this wholesale scale where all sorts of people are brought in constitutes a danger to my mind and makes it undesirable in that sense. If you have a meeting which is properly controlled and where the views put forward are temperate, moderate, it need not necessarily be objectionable.

Q. I suppose you take objection to anything which might result in danger. I am just looking at the question how you call it anti-Government. It may be a dangerous movement because it is done on a wide scale. It may not be anti-Government at all?

A. Hartal is very often an anti-Government movement, because it is in opposition to Government measures.

Q. It was a protest against Government measures. Was it not? How could it be against Government?

A. It was to force the Government's hands, presumably to reconsider the Act which they objected to.

Q. That was protest. Was it not?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it anything else? Similarly a meeting could be a protest meeting. You will not call it an anti-Government meeting, though it may be dangerous?

A. I should of course say it is anti-Government. In the one case, I take it that the hartal is objectionable and the other need not be.

Q. Similarly any expression of opinion against Government measures by anybody would be anti-Government according to you?

A. Anti-Government, but not objectionable. We are all entitled to our opinions.

Q. It would be anti-Government according to you?

A. Must be anti-Government if it is against Government measures. That is how it appears to me.

Q. Disapproval of Government measures is anti-Government?

A. It may be anti-Government or it may not be.

Q. It is not anything very objectionable?

A. I had not put it as in a very objectionable sense; that is, seditious or rebellious, causing or intended to cause sedition or rebellion.

Q. I simply want to understand it.

A. It is against Government.

Q. These two things are very different, Mr. Broadway; to do anything against Government, and to disapprove of Government measures; these are two very different things. If there is any protest against a measure would you call it anti-Government?

25 November 1919.]

Mr. E. P. BROADWAY.

A. I would call the Bradlaugh Hall meeting anti-Government because it was encouraging the hartal and all that sort of things.

Q. I am just enquiring about its meaning. Is hartal anti-Government?

A. I do not know about the Bradlaugh Hall meeting; all hartals need not be anti-Government; that is my impression; but this was anti-Government because it excited the people against Government.

Q. I do not understand what you mean by it. If anything was done in disapproval of Government measures that is anti-Government? Were you of the opinion?

A. It is anti-Government, not in an objectionable sense.

Q. When did this Afghan trouble begin?

A. I cannot remember.

Q. In April or May?

A. Somewhere in May; I cannot remember.

Q. This question I am asking because it has been said that the continuance of Martial Law was necessary on account of the Afghan trouble. Otherwise it would be irrelevant.

A. I take it that it had something to do with the bearing on the military situation.

Q. In your own opinion the foreign trouble has nothing to do with the present situation?

A. I say it had a bearing on the situation.

Q. What bearing had it?

A. We had trouble at home; we had trouble abroad. When you have trouble here, trouble breaks out on the frontiers. It cannot be considered otherwise than having a bearing on the situation here.

Q. If the situation here had been restored to practically normal conditions and if there was no fear of anything happening why should Martial Law be continued?

A. It is no doubt true; but I am not competent to answer that question; in a general way, I think it is necessary.

Q. You cannot answer that question?

A. I am not competent to. It is a question of policy. To me it appears necessary.

Q. Martial Law was only established in a few districts in the Central Punjab, in Lahore, Amritsar?

A. I knew it was established in Lahore, Amritsar, and in Gujranwala.

Q. Was there hartal in other districts of the Punjab besides these districts?

A. I do not know.

Q. You have no information?

A. There was hartal in other districts; I cannot remember; there was hartal in Delhi.

Q. Delhi is not in the Punjab?

A. There was hartal in other places; I do not know.

Q. Outside this area, was Martial Law established in Rawalpindi or other places? You do not know?

A. I do not know.

Q. You are aware that as soon as the Afghan trouble arose, people in the Punjab held meetings in which they expressed their sentiments of loyalty to the Government and they desired to aid Government in every way they could? Is it not so?

A. I know of no particular meeting; I think I saw it in the papers.

Q. Was any meeting also held in Lahore?

A. I do not remember; probably so; I cannot remember.

Q. If I understand you rightly; in your reply to a question of mine, you said that Martial Law or the continuance of Martial Law was necessary in order to prevent hartal taking place; that was the sole object of Martial Law?

A. I did not suggest that it was the sole object. The object of Martial Law was to restore and maintain law and order; and order was disturbed, because people were continuing the hartal; continued hartal, I think, had developed abnormal conditions.

Q. Was there anything else beyond the hartal which did disturb the order?

A. The general situation, as occasioned by the hartal, required a firm control. People were all upset; there had been all this trouble; there had been resentment all round against Government and against officials.

Q. Why?

A. Because there had been all this trouble.

Q. On account of firing?

A. On account of firing.

Q. The firing caused the necessity for Martial Law?

A. Trouble arose, and firing naturally was a source of pressure put upon the people. The resentment that had caused all this trouble was not allayed naturally by the firing. The firing was a necessary measure.

Q. I agree. Was not this massing of crowds due directly to the arrest of Kitchlew and Satyapal at Amritsar?

A. I believe it was the ostensible reason. It was said at the time that it was Mr. Gandhi who had been arrested; as soon as the news came, they were starting a hartal.

Q. Did not you think your information quite reasonable?

A. Of course reasonable in the sense that the cause is not necessarily a true cause. Possibly there were other causes than his arrest. I am not clear as to when the information came in. As to the trouble in Amritsar, I think, that had also a great deal to do with it. I think the news came about the same time of the arrest of Gandhi and trouble in Amritsar.

Q. And the trouble in Amritsar was due to the arrest of these people, Drs. Kitchlew and Satyapal? Nothing had happened before their arrest?

A. I do not know what was the situation in Amritsar; I cannot speak for it.

Q. You have told various causes which had created a sort of unrest among the people, economic distress, objection to certain taxes, war weariness, high prices and so on and so on. Was it not necessary under those circumstances to deal with some patience and forbearance?

A. Undoubtedly; but I think all patience and forbearance was shown, very great patience and forbearance was shown.

Q. Do you think it was proper under those conditions to arrest these people?

A. Arrest whom?

Q. Gandhi, Satyapal and Kitchlew?

A. You ask me to give an opinion on the action of the Government of India. I am not in a position to do that.

Q. Referring to this meeting in the Badshahi Mosque, you said that the crowd were advised to stand firm. What do you mean by 'standing firm'?

A. I do not know; that was what I was told.

Q. These were the very words that came to you direct?

A. I did not understand anything more, anything less.

Q. That must have been in either Punjabi or Urdu. What was said in this meeting?

A. I never got any report of these meetings; but that was the general impression conveyed to me.

Q. What do you mean by 'stand firm'?

A. "To stand firm" I took at the time to mean, they were to remain firm, to keep on the hartal and to stand out against Government, against any proposal until they got what they asked. There were certain proposals at the time; between the people and the Deputy Commissioner; I did not know then.

Q. To keep on the hartal and stand out against Government until they got their conditions accepted and so forth?

A. Yes.

Q. I just want to know the meaning of "stand out"?

A. Keeping on the hartal.

Q. That was the only way to stand out, by keeping the hartal?

A. That is practically what it amounts to.

Q. They were simply told to stand out?

A. To stick to the condition of things that was then going on; the maintenance of hartal; that is all. I cannot recollect anything else.

Q. And beyond this you did not hear there were any seditious speeches or any seditious propaganda in the meeting?

25 November 1919.]

Mr. E. P. BROADWAY.

A. Yes; I heard about this man Balwant Singh coming to the mosque. I think I said that. He gave out there that the Indian troops had mutinied in Cantonments, that so many British people had been killed and other things. He was given a great reception and carried round. Apparently this is one of the reasons that I formed my opinion on; because he was received by a certain number of people apparently with warmth and they apparently approved of his action.

Q. That was all; you heard nothing more about this meeting?

A. No; not about this particular meeting. I do not think I heard anything more. But I heard all this talking about Balwant Singh; and of course I heard the report of the C. I. D. Inspector.

By the Hon'ble Mr. W. F. Rice—

Q. What would you say to the suggestion that the crowd which tried to come down the Circular Road was peaceful?

A. I shall certainly not admit it. I was not there. I did not see that mob; but I think I saw what was happening off the other end of the Anarkali Bazar. From what I heard it was not a peaceful demonstration. There were several thousand men.

Q. I think you said that from the 12th April, after the crowd had been dispersed, Gazetted Officers visited the police pickets by night and day.

A. Each was followed by armed escort and a police constable.

Q. That condition of affairs lasted until the 15th when Martial Law was declared?

A. Certainly.

Q. Then at the time when Martial Law was declared would you say that the situation was such that the civil authorities who were using the aid of the military had failed to regain possession of the city and restore law and order?

A. Hartal continued; normal conditions were not restored.

Q. You won't call the city as subject to law and order when the Police Officer has to take the aid of the military?

A. Certainly not.

Q. That failure to restore law and order with the aid of the military was in spite of the fact that the police had been working at great pressure?

A. Yes.

Q. These considerations led to the introduction of Martial Law?

A. Absolutely.

By Mr. Abdul Kadir, Assistant Government Advocate—

Q. Talking of this particular person, Mr. Balwant Singh, are you aware that this man was given a reception at the Badshahi Mosque, that he proclaimed to the people that the Indian troops had mutinied in the Lahore Cantonments and were on their way to the mosque, and he was taken on people's shoulders?

A. I was informed so.

Q. Was this man Balwant Singh eventually traced and brought to trial?

A. He was convicted.

Q. Did you get any report that any of the leaders, so-called leaders, of the Passive Resistance movement or agitation against the Rowlatt Act took steps (some of them were certainly among those who attended the Badshahi Mosque on the 11th) either to protest against this action of Balwant Singh, or disabuse the public mind of the feelings that he tried to create?

A. I have not heard anything of the kind.

Q. Coming to the Danda Fauj question, you were just now told that this might have been a sort of frivolous display by some youngsters and nothing serious; here I may tell you an additional fact: I took it from the judgment of the Danda Fauj case: it is stated there that this man Chanan Din, the leader of that Danda Fauj, went through the city at the head of his gang, made inflammatory speeches proclaiming that he and his bands were rebels and were looking not to His Majesty the King, but to Germany, Turkey and Kabul, as their suzerain, etc.

(To the Committee.—Here is that judgment of the Tribunal in the Danda Fauj case. Some facts about this Danda Fauj presumably taken by the Hon'ble Members of the Committee from the same record were given to the witness, but this part of the record was not put to the witness.)

Q. What would you say as to the seriousness of this Danda Fauj affair? Do you regard it as very serious if such speeches are made by the gang?

A. I never meant it anything but serious. It was a serious thing. I suppose I heard most of it, more or less at the time. That all left an impression on my mind.

Q. Now coming to these two processions of mobs, i.e., one on the 6th April and the other on the 10th April, I just want to put to you one or two things about the 6th April. It was suggested to you this afternoon that it was part of the programme for the day that people should first go to the river and bathe. This was part of their programme. I know that some students who had gone to the river might have had a bath; that is a different matter. I want to ask you if you ever heard it suggested before that bathing that day was part of the programme of the Passive Resistance?

A. I do not remember; I was told that they were going there; I do not know that it was ever said as part of the programme.

Q. Then the mob you say was met by the police near the turn towards the Upper Mall, near the Mochi Gate; that was noon time; that was long after the time when any people who went to the river simply for the purpose of bathing might have returned from the river side; that was long after that?

A. It must be a considerable time after.

Q. And this end of the Anarkali leading on to the Upper Mall was not a place where they would go in the ordinary pursuit of their business or when going towards their homes.

A. Certainly not. They were trying to come down the Mall to the Civil Lines; they had no business at all there.

Q. Well, that is what I wanted specifically to put to you. On the 6th, they had not even that ostensible reason which had been urged on the 10th; that on the 10th they were going as a deputation to wait on His Honour. On the 6th no such reason was given. They had no such ostensible object for going to the Civil Lines?

A. I do not recollect. I have heard nothing about it.

Q. Of course you have told us about the 10th in reply to one of the questions of the Hon'ble Members you heard that there was an ostensible object.

A. Yes. I heard that it was their ostensible object to go to His Honour as a deputation.

Q. From the crowd did you think that it was the case?

A. I have no knowledge of it. I have never heard it said to me. I did not meet the crowd nor hear what was said by it there.

Q. Are you aware that after this meeting of the 6th, there were again processions in the streets? Was that reported to you, loud processions in the streets which came after the Bradlaugh Hall meeting?

A. In the city; I was told that parties of small processions went through the city making noise and shouting cries and abusing the Municipal Commissioners and the people who had been assisting the authorities during the time, and I believe that some copies of the Act had been distributed and that these had been burnt in the city.

Q. Was there, in your opinion, from what you know of the city as the Senior Superintendent of Police, any connection between the hartal and the conveners of these meetings which persisted in the hartal?

A. Every connection.

Mr. Abdul Kadir.—I am just drawing Your Lordship's attention to one document. Mr. Justice Rankin wanted to know whether there was a report of the meeting of the Badshahi Mosque. If you like,

25 November 1919.]

Mr. E. P. BROADWAY.

Sir, it may be put in.* He (witness) was asked whether he had come across this report. Later on, if necessary, we would produce it.

Q. Addressing the witness.—There was a C. I. D. report which you saw subsequently, about the meeting of the Badshahi Mosque?

A. Yes, I saw the report a day or two after.

Mr. Abdul Kadir.—Then there is just one document which can be put either by this witness because it passed through him and also by another witness.

President.—What is that document?

Mr. Abdul Kadir.—A letter purporting to be written by Swami Shraddhanand to Duni Chand showing that there was some outside influence going on so far as this passive resistance movement was concerned and that we have it on record in the Lahore main case. It was sent on to the Superintendent of Police and the Superintendent of Police sent it on to the Deputy Superintendent of Police who was conducting the investigation in these particular cases.

President.—That letter exists as signed by Swami Shraddhanand to another gentleman?

Mr. Abdul Kadir.—Yes.

By Sir C. H. Setalvad to witness:—

Q. You said, Mr. Broadway, that at the Badshahi Mosque when this man Balwant Singh came and stated what he did about the troops, the leaders did not express their disapproval?

A. I was asked whether the leaders or anybody expressed disapproval, and I said I heard of no such expression of disapproval at the Mosque.

Q. Are you aware that so far as Harkishan Lall, Duni Chand, Ram Bhaj Datt and others are concerned, they were not present at the meeting at the time this man Balwant Singh came and made this declaration, are you aware of this fact?

A. I do not know.

Q. Are you aware that they did make that assertion that they were not present at that time?

A. I am not aware of it.

Q. And that it has never been established that that assertion was incorrect?

A. I did not hear anything of their being present or not present.

* It is printed on page 146.

Major-General Sir W. BEYNON.

At Lahore, Wednesday, the 26th November 1919.

PRESENT:

The Hon'ble LORD HUNTER.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice RANKIN.
The Hon'ble Mr. W. F. RICE, C.S.I., C.I.E., I.C.S.
Major-General Sir GEORGE BARROW, K.C.B.,
K.C.M.G.

The Hon'ble Pandit JAGAT NARAYAN.
Sardar Sahibzada SULTAN AHMAD KHAN.

Mr. H. WILLIAMSON, M.B.E., I.P., Secretary.

Major-General Sir W. BEYNON, K.C.I.E., C.B., D.S.O., Commanding 16th (Indian) Division.

By the President—

Q. Were you in command of the 16th (Indian) Division during the period of the riots and also during the period of Martial Law?

A. I was.

Q. Did your jurisdiction extend over the whole area affected?

A. The 16th Division extends practically through the Lahore, Amritsar, Ferozepore, Multan areas, not up to Gujranwala and Sialkot. Jullundur is also in my division.

Q. With the exception then of these places you have mentioned, your jurisdiction extended over the whole affected area?

A. Yes.

Q. And I think upon the 5th of September you sent a detailed report* to the Adjutant-General in India, Simla, dealing with the occurrences as you viewed them, and in appendices also forwarding certain reports that had been made to you?

A. I did.

Q. I don't propose to take you over the whole of your report, but there are one or two little points of the narrative which perhaps you might give us information about. You heard I think on the 30th March about what had occurred at Delhi?

A. Yes.

Q. Then had you and your staff interviews with the Local Government about the beginning of April?

A. Yes, we were always in touch with the civil authorities.

Q. You were informed that the occasion of the riot was a hartal at Delhi on the 30th of March and you knew that there was to be a hartal in Lahore on the 6th of April?

A. That is so.

Q. Were arrangements made by the Local Government with you as to the disposition of troops in Lahore so as to prevent anything like what had occurred in Delhi on the 30th of March?

A. That is so.

Q. And I think you instructed General Dyer who was commanding the Jullundur Brigade to take special precautions against incidents especially at Amritsar?

A. I did.

Q. We know what precautions he took on that date. As regards the 6th April, I think it passed off without disturbance although there was a complete hartal in the city?

A. It passed off without disturbance in Lahore because we were ready.

Q. You had, we had it from Mr. Broadway, to disperse processions by means of police and cavalry?

A. Yes, it was not exactly dispersing, they were prevented from proceeding further towards the civil station and gradually driven back, and afterwards they held a meeting at a place called the Bradlaugh Hall.

Q. But in fact there was no firing on that day?

A. No firing on that day.

Q. On the 10th of April you gave certain instructions to General Dyer as regards sending troops to Amritsar?

A. Yes.

Q. I think you were present and heard what General Dyer said?

A. I was.

Q. What he said was in accordance with the instructions you had given him?

A. It was.

Q. I think you heard about the occurrences in Amritsar on the 10th of April?

A. At half past three I was informed.

Q. Did the Inspector-General of Police of the Punjab, Mr. Stewart, inform you as to what had occurred in Amritsar and that he anticipated trouble might occur in Lahore in the evening?

A. Yes.

Q. After you had seen the Inspector-General of Police did you issue verbal orders to Brigadier-General Clarke to despatch troops to Lahore?

A. I did.

Q. I think most of these troops were attending the sports of the 43rd Brigade in the cantonments?

A. They were mostly belonging to the 43rd Brigade.

Q. Although that caused a little delay in collecting them and getting them ready, you were able to send a detachment at about half past six?

A. We got the first detachment of the Sussex into the Telegraph Office at about 6-30 I believe, and the others followed as quickly as we could get them ready.

Q. As we know that detachment of troops at the Telegraph Office was able to turn back the crowd?

A. So it was reported to me.

Q. And did the main body of your troops arrive in Lahore at about 7 o'clock?

A. Yes.

Q. And they were instrumental in preventing the mob getting into the civil station?

A. Hardly that, the cavalry practically supported the police. I do not think, as far as my memory serves me, that the infantry were much used.

Q. You know that certain firing had taken place; that firing, so we have been told, was entirely by the police and not by the military?

A. Entirely.

Q. Had you given orders to the General Officers Commanding at Ferozepore and Jullundur as regards their taking certain precautions?

A. Yes.

Q. What were your instructions to these officers?

A. My instructions were that such important places as Telegraph Offices, Railway Stations, and points where damage could easily be done which would affect our communications, were to be particularly guarded.

26 November 1919.]

Major-General Sir W. BRYDON.

Q. I think you learnt that the station at Chheharta near Amritsar was attacked among other points?

A. Yes, all these reports came in.

Q. In addition to the reports of the actual occurrences at Amritsar about which I will not trouble you?

A. Reports came in from time to time. We had our Intelligence Officers always collecting the reports.

Q. On the 11th reinforcements were sent to Amritsar from Jullundur and you were able to send two aeroplanes to Amritsar as well?

A. Yes.

Q. Was there a strong or a weak force of British troops in Lahore at the time on about the 11th?

A. I may call it a weak force, Sir.

Q. Were you afraid of trouble at Moghulpura?

A. Yes, that was one of the points where we had expected trouble.

Q. Where is Moghulpura?

A. It is really the Railway Workshops to the north of the railway line, lying roughly between Lahore junction station and Lahore Cantonment East. It is the other side of the canal.

Q. A very large number of men are employed there?

A. A very great number.

Q. Did you take any means to strengthen the military forces in Lahore in consequence?

A. Naturally, Sir.

Q. What were they?

A. We withdrew troops that had gone up to Dalhousie. We made certain dispositions of the troops between Ferozepore and Jullundur which enabled me to draw back troops from Amritsar into Lahore.

Q. Then I think you know that there was a display of military force in Lahore city upon the 11th of April?

A. On the 12th, the column marched through on the 12th.

Q. On the 11th I think the police did not enter the city of Lahore at all?

A. I believe not.

Q. On the 12th did you hear of occurrences at Kasur?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Had you an interview with the Lieutenant-Governor?

A. No, Sir, I informed him over the telephone.

Q. On hearing what had occurred at Kasur did you despatch an armoured train from Lahore?

A. We did.

Q. I think the armoured train you ordered arrived at Kasur late at night?

A. Yes, arrived late at night, left here at 1 o'clock.

Q. Did you learn by aeroplane that things had quietened down at Kasur?

A. I have that in my report.

Q. Did you receive any request from the Lieutenant-Governor as regards holding additional British troops in readiness?

A. Yes, I considered the matter and I did not think it was necessary at the time.

Q. Had you a difficulty about sending a large number of troops into Lahore?

A. You see it was the hot weather and the accommodation there is very limited and one does not want to put unnecessary hardships on British troops in the hot weather, therefore I did not want to have more troops than I could comfortably accommodate.

Q. I think you did make a request to the Northern Command?

A. I asked them for a couple of companies.

Q. In readiness?

A. In readiness, and these were sent afterwards.

Q. On the evening of the 12th were you present at a conference at Government House where the question of the security of the railways was discussed?

A. Yes.

Q. I need hardly ask you from a military point of view as well as from the point of view of maintaining peace and order in large commercial towns, whether it is essential that the railway communications should be preserved intact?

A. It is absolutely essential.

Q. Did you make arrangements at that conference for the protection of important stations and bridges?

A. Yes, we have a scheme already cut and dried, but it was not able to be entirely carried out owing to certain unforeseen events and we made arrangements to rectify the points that were not quite correct.

Q. That cut and dried scheme you refer to involves the police supplying guards for certain points?

A. It does.

Q. And on this occasion were the police not in a position to supply those guards?

A. No.

Q. And I think you made an arrangement under which the military and the police were jointly responsible?

A. Yes, we took over the stations, bridges or other points which they could not furnish guards for.

Q. I think you did not furnish guards in the Multan District?

A. No, not at that time.

Q. And two other districts?

A. There was no trouble at Pathankot and the Kasur-Amritsar line.

Q. At those places in the Multan District and on the Pathankot-Kasur-Amritsar Junction line where no guards were furnished did any outbreaks take place during the time there were no guards?

A. I think I am right in saying no; this was early in the proceedings.

Q. I think on the 13th of April all telephonic communication with Amritsar was stopped. Was that in consequence of the destruction of wires?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you receive reports as regards the destruction of certain stations on the Kasur-Patti line?

A. Yes.

Q. To what effect were those reports?

A. I cannot remember exactly how they came in, but they would be to the effect, probably through the railway, that these stations had been burned, destroyed, or looted as the case might be.

Q. In consequence of that destruction of plant did you ask for five sets of wireless to be sent to you?

A. I did.

Q. Did you get them?

A. They were sent down. We asked the Northern Command; I cannot say exactly where they were all collected from.

Q. Then did you give certain instructions as to the recalling of British Infantry and Royal Artillery from Dalhousie and Pathankot?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you send them?

A. Back to their winter stations, mostly Lahore. Of course details might have come from other stations.

Q. Was there a shortage of transport for the conveyance of these troops?

A. Very much so.

Q. How did you meet that difficulty?

A. Well we asked for motor lorries from the Northern Command.

Q. Were these motor lorries also necessary to move the troops rapidly to any point that might be threatened?

A. That was the idea.

Q. And did you organize mobile columns?

A. Yes, we have them, of course, always organized.

Q. Did you make use of them in connection with these disturbances?

A. Yes.

Q. What was your object in using mobile columns?

A. At ordinary times there is not much movement of troops about the district and the people do not altogether understand our strength and it is sometimes useful to make an exhibition that we are able and intend to keep the law; and it is also useful to counteract the lies spread by people who wish Government ill.

Q. You also had an armoured motor battery. Was that sent by Ferozepore?

A. We have them detailed at certain stations and move them when necessary.

Q. Did you give orders to the Air Force?

A. No, they are not under me. I tell them what I want and they help.

26 November 1919.]

Major-General Sir W. BRYNON.

Q. Who gives the orders to the Air Force?
 A. The Officer Commanding. I tell him that I want a certain action carried out and he then carries it out as he thinks best.

Q. Did you know that orders were given to the Air Force to fire upon any gangs that might be seen damaging the railway?
 A. That was so.

Q. I suppose you did not give orders to the force but you approved of them?
 A. In time of war the Air Force is attached to a command whatever it is and on those occasions my orders practically are orders. If I tell the Air Force Commander that I want a certain action taken—for instance give him general directions—these are considered as orders and carried out as such. He gives the detailed orders. For instance I say that I want certain information about certain points at a certain place. I leave it to the Air Commander whether he sends one, two or three aeroplanes to do the job or whether he gets it by some other method.

Q. So far as firing on gangs engaged in damaging railways was concerned, you approved of the course entirely?
 A. Entirely; my orders were to keep the railway intact.

Q. Did you receive information as to attempt being made to induce a strike at the Moghulpura Workshops?
 A. We heard reports of it.

Q. I think you issued instructions for military guards to travel on trains between Lahore, Amritsar and Ferozepore?
 A. That is so.

Q. I see your first appendix* contains a memorandum. Who prepared that memorandum?
 A. This is the report of the 43rd Infantry Brigade—that is General Clarke. It was prepared by his staff from the papers at their disposal.

Q. On the night of the 13th of April was Wagah station destroyed? And the next morning you got news of the destruction of Gujranwala. Did these occurrences necessitate your dispersing your forces?
 A. Yes.

Q. And I think you kept small guards at the stations in the disturbed areas?
 A. That was so.

Q. Then the local Government meantime asked the local authorities to arrange for the protection of the railways in their districts?
 A. Yes.

Q. Was that attended to?
 A. That was very effective, I believe.

Q. Did that relieve you of a considerable amount of responsibility?
 A. Yes, it relieved me not of responsibility but of dispersing the troops to protect the line.

Q. There were definite arrangements as to villages finding five men per mile for the protection of railways?
 A. That was done through the local Government.

Q. After these precautions had been taken, what was the result so far as the destruction of railway plant was concerned?
 A. It practically stopped it.

Q. And measures in connection with them seem to have been complete about the 18th of April?
 A. I should say about that date.

Q. As regards the moveable columns that you sent out, they operated some distance from the railways?
 A. Yes.

Q. What were the duties imposed upon the moveable columns?
 A. I can tell you roughly the duties they had. To show the districts through which they passed that there were troops ready and available, to find out if there was unrest in the district and, as I have said, to correct rumours and general seditious movements.

Q. Had they instructions as regards explaining the real nature of the Rowlatt legislation?
 A. Yes.

Q. Who was it that explained the Rowlatt legislation?
 A. I cannot tell you exactly the name of the officer. There was a Civil officer attached to each column. He would be able to explain. In one case we had two very efficient Indians with the column who held regular Durbars.

Q. I suppose your particular object was to uproot from the minds of people ideas with reference to the stoppage of marriage and certain other things as being effected by that legislation?
 A. These were part of the rumours that we counter-acted.

Q. On hearing of the trouble at Gujranwala was an armoured train immediately sent from Lahore?
 A. That is so.

Q. And later in the day an aeroplane was also sent?
 A. Yes.

Q. Who was it that suggested sending an aeroplane?
 A. It came from the Civil authorities.

Q. I think the commander of the aeroplane had instructions to disperse any gatherings engaged in the work of destruction?
 A. Yes.

Q. I think in fact the machine sent out bombed and machine-gunned crowds?
 A. That is a report—Appendix VI.

Q. Was that report sent to you?
 A. As soon as the plane comes back they send out their reports to the Commanding Officer.

Q. As regards the actual movement of the aeroplanes you know nothing about that?
 A. No, the technical details would be taken up by the Air Force.

Q. Looking at this matter from a military point of view had you sufficient soldiers to send to Gujranwala to deal with the situation without an aeroplane?
 A. No; we could not spare them.

Q. I think at this time a separate command was established in the Lahore Civil Area under Colonel Johnson?
 A. That is so.

Q. There were certain very important points in Lahore that required protection?
 A. The Electric Power House, the pump house, etc.

Q. Up to the time when Colonel Johnson received command Brigadier-General Clarke had acted?
 A. That is so.

Q. On the 15th of April did you receive news as to the communication of Bahawalnagar?
 A. That came through.

Q. Did the communication cause unrest in your mind as to the fate of Europeans who were stationed there?
 A. We knew there were Europeans there and we did not know what had happened to them. We were very anxious about all outlying Europeans at that time.

Q. Was the threat of a railway strike also a very disturbing element in the situation?
 A. It was. It would have paralysed us.

Q. In consequence of what you heard did you give instructions to General Southey to send troops from Ferozepore?
 A. I think a detachment under Captain Maud went to Bahawalnagar.

Q. And the disturbance was quickly dealt with?
 A. It was efficiently dealt with.

Q. And certain trains that had been held up were sent to their destination?
 A. Yes.

Q. After arranging for the security of that place and Europeans did the military party return to Ferozepore?
 A. They did.

Q. With certain prisoners and Europeans and children?
 A. That is so.

Q. On the 15th I think Brigadier-General Cartwright was put in command of armoured trains?
 A. That is a matter of administration to facilitate the working of the armoured trains.

Q. Did the situation call for the use of a number of trains?
 A. Very much so.

Q. I think very many armoured trains are somewhat unwieldy?

* This and the following references to appendices relate to the appendices printed on pages 325—338.

26 November 1919.]

Major-General Sir W. BRYNOR.

A. They were not intended for the actual situation. They were intended for larger operations.

Q. How did you get other trains?

A. We made up small trains which contained machine guns and a breakdown gang and an escort. They were not armoured plated.

Q. Appendix VIII gives a brief résumé of the operations of armoured trains from the 30th March to the 4th May 1919?

A. That would be of the reports that would be furnished from time to time.

Q. On the 18th I think you re-organized your system of armoured trains?

A. That is so.

Q. And you had six light trains instead of one or two heavy trains. Where were these six armoured trains stationed?

A. As far as I remember they were kept in Lahore. With steam up ready to go out in any direction.

Q. In paragraph 49, you say, as regards these trains, they were stationed at Ludhiana, Bhatinda, Multan, Lyallpur and Lahore, each with a definite area of operations, and one in reserve at Lahore.

A. Those details would be entirely arranged by General Cartwright. He had the working of the trains, and he of course naturally placed them where he liked.

Q. In your Appendix IX you give a report from Captain Flowerdew as to certain operations undertaken by him. What was the nature of these operations?

A. He was sent out by the Civil authorities. We can move troops quickly with an armoured train.

Q. I think you refer to the work done?

A. The work done was excellent.

Q. I notice in your report here you refer to Sergeant Davis. He was under Captain Flowerdew?

A. I think he was, Sir. To tell you the truth I do not quite know how he arrived. Possibly he came down with a hockey team in Rawalpindi and was mobilised, and his services made use of.

Q. I want to ask you about these armed men whom Sergeant Davis met. You say in your report "Sergeant Davis, while following up a party which had separated from the one Captain Flowerdew and his men were chasing, came up with armed party some of which were mounted. Two were armed with rifles and two with guns. Sergeant Davis single-handed, shot three of these men, but their servants got away with their arms." I want to ask you about these armed men. This is the first instance in the course of the enquiry where we have had a reference to armed men. Can you tell us anything more?

A. I am afraid I cannot. These reports were all that I had.

Q. When did you consider that active opposition in the Lahore District had been got under?

A. That would be about the 16th, I should think.

Q. You refer in your report to punitive columns being sent in different directions. What are punitive columns as contrasted with mobile columns?

A. It is practically the same thing. We might use the word "mobile" there instead of "punitive."

Q. There is no special significance attached to the word "punitive"?

A. Well, not in this case. Punitive columns in a sense go out to punish, but that was not the idea here. They were all small columns sent on to villages which had been concerned in breaking up the railway and burning Government grass stacks and things like that.

Q. The action of these columns is more particularly dealt with in your Appendices XI, XII, XIII and XVII?

A. Those are the actual diaries of the column commander.

Q. What opinion did you form as to whether these columns did or did not do useful work?

A. I think they did very useful work.

Q. I think you have already explained that you had the assistance of certain Indian officers?

A. Yes.

Q. When the reports of these columns were made to you did you form any opinion as to whether the rural population had been in sympathy with the outrages that had taken place?

A. From the reports of the officers I came to the conclusion that the villagers were not concerned in the outrages that had taken place beyond perhaps the individual burning of stations in the vicinity of their villages.

Q. From these reports did it appear that the damage, if not entirely, to a very large extent, had been done by local badmashes?

A. From the general reports received it appeared that the local inhabitants were led by people from elsewhere who incited them and led them to commit outrages.

Q. We know that Martial Law was proclaimed in Lahore on the 16th of April. Looking at the situation as you found it then what was your opinion as to whether, without proclaiming Martial Law, the military could not render efficient assistance to the Civil authorities in the way of restoring law and order?

A. I think Martial Law was absolutely necessary.

Q. Would the work of the military in assisting the Civil authorities have been impeded if Martial Law had not been established?

A. It would have been considerably impeded. In fact on several occasions it might have stopped.

Q. On the declaration of Martial Law I think you asked for and obtained the services of Colonel Money as Administrator of Martial Law. In what area did he administer Martial Law?

A. The whole of the 16th area over which Martial Law was proclaimed.

Q. I think Colonel Johnson administered Martial Law?

A. Colonel Johnson made a mistake. He was Officer Commanding the Civil Area. When Martial Law is proclaimed the officer proclaiming Martial Law appoints administrators of Martial Law who carry out his orders, draw up the rules, collate information as regards punishments, sentence and generally anything which has to do with Martial Law. Colonel Johnson is the Officer Commanding Civil Area, just as General Clarke was the Officer Commanding, 43rd Brigade Area. General Dyer was Commanding Jullundur and Amritsar.

Q. Was Colonel Money the Supreme Military Authority for the whole division where Martial Law was proclaimed?

A. Yes.

Q. In addition to his other duties did Colonel Money act as Liaison Officer between yourself and the Punjab Government?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did you find that assistance useful?

A. Yes, it is very useful. I am a busy man.

Q. In consequence of certain statements of Colonel Johnson I must ask you as regards the orders that were issued in Colonel Johnson's areas. Were these orders drafted by him and then approved by Colonel Money or was it Colonel Money who drafted them?

A. My orders on Martial Law are published for the whole area, then the officers in command of those areas issue any necessary subsidiary orders. They need not necessarily come up to me. If Colonel Money considered that an order was not quite correct or did not meet the case he would bring the case up to me. He would not issue orders himself. I should then take action to countermand the order of my subordinate or to confirm it.

Q. In connection with the orders that were put in operation in Lahore with reference to the students of colleges who were responsible for these orders?

A. Colonel Johnson. Of course I am responsible for everything that goes on in the whole area.

Q. Had those orders been sent to you for approval before?

A. No.

Q. Then Colonel Johnson had the right in his own area to issue such orders without the consultation of anyone in a higher position?

A. As long as they were consistent with Martial Law orders published by me.

Q. With reference to your Martial Law published in Appendix XIV?

A. There is a Proclamation signed by me at the end.

Q. In connection with that Proclamation on what date did it issue?

28 November 1919.]

Major-General Sir W. BEYNON.

A. It was published on the 19th of April.

Q. There you say that Martial Law has been declared subject to the maintenance of ordinary courts for ordinary offences. Were the ordinary courts sitting at this time? Were they dealing with ordinary offences that were committed in the area where Martial Law was in operation?

A. I should say so. The Deputy Commissioner would probably be holding his courts. I cannot actually speak with my own knowledge.

Q. As a matter of fact, is it not the case that at all events when Martial Law was proclaimed or when Martial Law in fact did exist, the Civil Courts were entirely closed.

(Mr. Herbert, Government Advocate.—We are going to produce evidence that the courts were not acting.

Witness.—I am afraid I am not very strong in law. This is all drawn up by gentlemen with large legal knowledge. I put my name to it.)

Q. I don't think any one is entitled to criticise legal inaccuracies. I take it therefore that in consequence of these qualifications the Martial Law that you actually proclaimed was a qualified form of Martial Law?

A. Very much qualified.

Q. I suppose it was entirely Government action that set up these special tribunals under the Bengal State Offences Act, 1804?

A. Yes, of course, if it had been Martial Law pure and simple, they would not have existed.

Q. Martial Law is the negation of all law, superseding all Civil Law by the will of the Military Commander?

A. In this case of course there were certain restrictions.

Q. During the administration of Martial Law you had nothing to do with the sending up of cases before these special tribunals?

A. Certain cases were tried by the special courts, but the more serious ones were sent up to the tribunals.

Q. The practical effect was that, so far as Martial Law administration under you was concerned, that was done, I understand, by special courts, and these special courts consisted of officers or Civil Magistrates who dealt with what we describe as minor offences such as breach of Martial Law regulations, and so on, whereas more serious cases were dealt with by these special tribunals?

A. That is so.

Q. I do not know if I have carefully gone over all these regulations of yours. Are these regulations what I may describe as general regulations relating to Martial Law or they have any special bearing on the situation in the Punjab?

A. I think you must say that they were general. We took them as a matter of fact from a small book we have to guide us on these occasions.

Q. After you had given these instructions to Colonel Money, he dealt with the particulars and he in turn delegated certain particulars to Colonel Johnson?

A. I think you are fairly correct, except that I delegated them. I am responsible.

Q. I quite appreciate that. Now it was within your knowledge, I suppose, that from time to time during the maintenance of Martial Law the restrictions upon civil liberty were gradually relaxed?

A. That was so.

Q. That I suppose was done with your approval?

A. Yes, in point of fact it was done after consideration by several Civil and Military authorities.

Q. Have you anything to say as regards the necessity for Martial Law having been continued for the length of time it was continued?

A. I had a good deal to say at the time. In fact I was in opposition to Sir Michael O'Dwyer when he wished to relax it. I considered it was not quite the time.

Q. Speaking generally, what were your grounds for taking that view?

A. The unrest on the railway, the unrest in the North-West Frontier and the military necessities that resulted from those circumstances. From a civil point of view it may be quite enough here, but from the military point of view the main principles, ideas and plans of service will be affected. These things would not affect the civil, but they affect me.

Q. Perhaps you will give us your views as to the practical limitation that ought to be imposed by the Military Commander upon his exercise of absolute power entrusted to him on those movements?

A. I do not think I can put it better than Colonel Johnson put it, tact and common sense.

Q. Would you agree with me in this, that as regards the measures taken under Martial Law, any measures that are likely to leave a bad feeling behind them are to be regretted. I suppose I must put it this way. You must administer Martial Law in such a way that it is not going to continue indefinitely?

A. That was a point which civil officers said to me once, they said 'we have got to live with these people afterwards.' But I am concerned with the military aspect, and I quite agree that one does not want to leave a bitter feeling behind. One wants the people to help you in keeping law and order.

Q. May I put it this way? That the military in putting into force orders under Martial Law may perhaps unintentionally have omitted to appreciate the effects that certain regulations may leave behind after Martial Law came to an end?

A. They may have. One would not naturally and willingly.

Q. Not willingly?

A. Oh, no.

Q. I suppose from the military point of view you want to deal with the situation as you find it and as rapidly as possible, to get definite results, but in such action, is there any liability or tendency to forget or to fail to appreciate fully the consequences with reference to the future of particular measures that may be taken?

A. You may fail to appreciate, we are all fallible, but one would naturally try not to. One would naturally consider from every point of view, and the whole idea of military law is the preservation of law and order, and as you say, not to acerbate the feelings of the people.

Q. But of course in a situation like the present, the subjects of the King are Indians and British both, and there are loyal Indians and loyal British. Is it not, as far as possible, advisable that the regulations should not be such as might indicate special treatment of one subject as against another?

A. It might be necessary. You will have to consider all points of view.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. When you say that the military force at your command was very weak, what was the number that you had?

A. I know it, but I don't think it is necessary to give you the exact numbers. If Lord Hunter desires the numbers I can give them to him.

(The President to the witness.—The only point about that is this. If you think that there are any military reasons against it, then I should not ask you to give the figures in public, but you might give a statement to the Pandit for his information.

The witness then showed the figures asked for.)

Q. Coming to paragraph 8.* I want to put only one question. On the 10th April it was Captain Massey who requested you from Amritsar to send an aeroplane there?

A. Yes.

Q. He requested you on the 10th April to send an aeroplane to Amritsar?

A. Yes.

Q. And in consequence of that request, you sent it on the 11th, paragraph 20?

A. Yes.

Q. Then I would ask you to refer to paragraph 37. You say that "I received information . . ." You mean the information which you received about Moghulpura was from some C. I. D. men?

A. That would be so.

Q. And you say that only one picket was seen on the morning of the 14th April and the crowds were dealt

* This and the following references to paragraphs relate to the report on pages 320—325.

26 November 1919.]

Major-General Sir W. BRYNOR.

with so summarily by a detachment of the 17th Cavalry that there has been no trouble in Moghulpura. I want to know what is meant by "they were dealt with so summarily?"

A. I am not quite certain as to exact details. I believe they ran after them, and the picket ran as far as they could. I am not quite certain whether anybody was crooked. I should have to look that matter up.

Q. I would refer you to clause 8 of paragraph 89. So far as the report came to you, it was that on the 13th as soon as General Dyer reached that place he ordered the opening of fire immediately and dispersed the crowd? That was the report sent to you?

A. Yes.

Q. I mean to say there was no report to you that there was any attempt on the part of the crowd to face General Dyer or to do something?

A. No.

Q. No opposition?

A. You have got his report. That is what he says.

Q. I would just refer you to clause 5. There seemed to be some dispute about the telegram that was sent, and it was suggested that perhaps that telegram was not an authorised telegram, and you say that the Lieutenant-Governor agreed with General Dyer—that is with reference to the firing that took place at the Jallianwala Bagh on the 13th?

A. I can tell you exactly about that. I am responsible for that telegram. That was my telegram. I sent it.

Q. This approval of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor is with reference to what happened on the 13th at Jallianwala Bagh?

A. That is so. But I sent the telegram and I approved, after having considered General Dyer's reports. I informed Sir Michael O'Dwyer that I considered General Dyer had acted correctly and that I intended to send a telegram saying so. His Honour said that he agreed to it, and that I might add his approval to my telegram.

Q. Paragraph 49. I refer to the last portion. You say "the object of the leaders was undoubtedly to damage Government property and murder Europeans, but the mob wanted their quid pro quo in the shape of loot. Their easiest way to get this was to smash up a small wayside station and hold up a train going through and loot it." That is what you said. Now you say that the object of the leaders was to murder Europeans?

A. That is undoubtedly so.

Q. Is that based only on the fact that Europeans were murdered in Amritsar, or have you drawn an inference or had you some information?

A. What about Kasur?

Q. You have based your information on what happened at Kasur and Amritsar?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You had no other information that the leaders had incited the mob to murder Europeans?

A. I can only judge by acts.

Q. This opinion was based upon the reports that you received from Kasur and Amritsar. Beyond that you had no other information?

A. We had information of the danger of outlying Europeans. We brought them in. Their lives were not safe.

Q. That would be again on the reports that were received by you?

A. Naturally.

Q. And which find a place in Nos. 10, 11, 13 and 14 of the Diaries, all the information that was received by you?

A. Yes.

Q. The diaries were at your command. All the reports were received during that period?

A. I got reports from all sorts of sources. My duties are to get intelligence in all sorts of ways, and from those reports my action was taken and my opinion was formed.

Q. Then will you kindly give the names of those leaders whom you suspected or about whom you had knowledge that they incited the mob to murder Europeans?

A. I regret I cannot.

Q. The names of the leaders in Kasur, you cannot?

A. No.

Q. The names of the leaders in Lahore, you cannot?

A. No. I don't think I know them, if I had known I would have checked them.

Q. Was that information given to you by some person or is it written information that the leaders at Kasur, Amritsar and Lahore were inciting people to murder?

A. Would you just repeat that again?

Q. The other information, apart from the reports upon which you based this opinion, that the leaders were inciting the people to murder Europeans, is that only a verbal report made to you or was it a written report?

A. You want me to give away my means of information. I decline to do it. As a military man I have all sorts of information, and I cannot tell you how I get my information.

The Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan.—Let the President decide.

The President.—It is a general question, General. As a general question is there any objection to your indicating the sources of your information?

A. I think so. You see we have secret information from various sources. I would not mind telling you. We have various means, our Intelligence Bureau gives us information. We get the C. I. D. reports, military intelligence, our spies and our reports from railways, our reports from Military Commanders are tabulated.

The President.—I quite understand that from a military point of view in connection with military operations, but as regards this particular point which has been asked you, is there any objection to indicate generally the sources from which in fact you get information and upon which you formed your conclusions?

The witness.—You want me to give exact names. Well, I cannot do that.

Q. I think probably the Pandit wants a general answer.

A. I have nothing to conceal, but of course from a military point of view if you want me to give names, I would not do it.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan.—

Q. My question was as to whether that information was verbal or written information?

A. Both.

Q. And in that written information the names of the leaders are given who incited the mob to murder?

A. Not necessarily, not always. If the names were given to me I should have been able to deal with them.

Q. Therefore may I take it that in the information in your possession, no names were given?

A. You will be correct.

Q. I would be correct in taking that no names were given?

A. You will be correct.

Q. I would like to know the names of the leaders that were given?

A. I am afraid I do not remember at the present moment. I should have to look up my diaries.

The Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan.—I would request the President to have them.

The President to witness.—Probably you will communicate with the Pandit.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan.—

Q. However, you are not prepared to give the details of this secret information in public?

A. Will you tell me exactly what information you want?

Q. I wanted to know the basis upon which you came to the conclusion that the leaders were inciting the public to murder Europeans and so on. No doubt, murders had been committed, and if you had drawn your inference from these murders that the leaders were implicated in it, I would have had no quarrel with you, because it is only a matter of inference. But if you go beyond that and say that the leaders were inciting the people to murder Europeans, I want to know if that opinion is based upon any definite information that any of the leaders at Lahore, Amritsar or Kasur ever instigated any person to murder Europeans?

Major-General Sir W. BEYNON.

A. No, I can say that my opinion was formed on the general facts of murders having been committed.

Q. Therefore I take it that no names of leaders at Lahore, Amritsar or Kasur find a place in any written information that has been supplied to you?

A. I think not, but I cannot remember all these reports.

Q. So far as you can remember now?

The President to Pandit Jagat Narayan.—As I understand, the word "leaders" there does not necessarily mean political leaders, but he means men who were actually at the head of the mob.

The President to the witness.—In using the word "leader" am I right in supposing that you are referring to the leaders of the mob and not to any political leaders?

Witness.—Oh, no, I know nothing about politics.

The Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan.—I was driving at that. As a matter of fact, from the way in which the sentence is worded, it was open to that construction.

Witness.—I am not concerned with politics at all.

Q. That is by leaders you mean those persons who were leading the mob on those dates?

A. Certainly.

Q. Paragraph 45. In answer to the question that was put to you by the President, you said that it was at the request of the Lieutenant-Governor that an aeroplane was sent to Gujranwala?

A. Yes.

Q. These are the words in your report: "At the request of the Lieutenant-Governor an aeroplane was sent out with verbal orders to disperse any gathering engaged in the work of destruction." That is, only those gatherings should be bombed which were actually engaged in the work of destruction. Am I right?

A. I should like to refer to my exact orders.

Q. For the time being I am dealing with paragraph 45.

A. I daresay you are, but my precise orders are contained elsewhere. This is only a report written afterwards.

Q. Therefore you have got those orders, and I take it they are practically correct?

A. I can give you the exact orders mentioned there.

Q. Further on you say that "this machine bombed and machine-gunned the crowds which were burning the civil lines?"

A. That is so.

Q. I am coming to Appendix VI, because I want to make it evidence. I will read it out to you. Here is the observation report: "Railway station on fire, bales of goods on platform burning. Passenger train in station, Up line, on fire. English church and four houses in the Civil Lines on the east of Railway burning. All these were still burning at 15-30 hours." Now this is what was done by these aeroplanes. "15-20.—Dropped three bombs on party of natives, 150 strong outside village about two miles north-west of Gujranwala. One bomb failed to explode. The others fell near party which scattered. Three casualties seen, 50 rounds machine gun fired into village. 15-30.—Party of 50 natives outside village about one mile south of above village; two bombs dropped, only one exploded within 10 yards of party. No casualties were seen, 25 rounds machine-gun fired into village. Party dispersed into village

15-36.—About 200 natives in the fields near a large red building on north-west outskirts of town. One bomb dropped which burst in courtyard of house; several people appeared to be wounded, 30 rounds machine-gun fired into party who took cover in house.

15-40.—Two bombs, which failed to burst, dropped on large crowd of natives in centre of town. 100 rounds machine-gun fired into parties of natives in the streets. At 15-40 when machine left for Lahore, no native could be seen in streets. At 15-40 station occupied by police."

That is what occurred and this is the report received on the 14th April?

A. That is so.

Q. And you consider even now that these officers practically carried out the orders that were given by you?

A. You cannot take these as my orders.

Q. They are your orders practically?

A. No; they are not my orders. I can give you my orders.

Q. Can you give this Committee your actual orders?

A. I can give you the exact orders. I can remember them fairly well. They were to proceed to Gujranwala and to break up any gathering that was found doing damage to the civil lines or station and disperse any crowds within, I think, two miles either proceeding or coming to Gujranwala. I think, so far as I remember, these were the verbal orders.

Q. Will you kindly give us a copy of that?

A. They were verbal orders, but they will be found embodied in a report from the Air Force. I will try and get that for you if you have not got it.

Q. It appears to me from these war diaries that have been supplied to us that for weeks and weeks during the time of Martial Law in Lahore there was always a conference at the Government House in the evening?

A. You must say generally. There were dates on which we did not meet.

Q. With regard to one question the President put to you about Martial Law Order about schools and students, you have informed the Committee that you were not consulted. The matter was never brought to your notice?

A. Was it one of Colonel Johnson's order?

Q. Yes.

A. I did not know about it.

Q. Are you or are you not aware, as a matter of fact, whether this order was sent to His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor for approval and he approved of it?

A. I am not aware.

Q. I will just now refer you to it. It was on the 24th of April. If this finds a place in your diary, it would be true?

A. I should take it so, we do not put in false information in our diaries.

Q. Here it is. It is War Diary No. 13 of the Lahore Civil Area from 15th to 30th April 1919; under date the 24th April, it said "Sent Martial Law Order No. 27" to His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor for approval.

A. Is this Colonel Johnson's diary?

Q. It is a Martial Law Order. Every diary was submitted to you?

A. Yes; long afterwards.

Q. Therefore if it is printed here, it is correct?

A. I think you may take it as correct.

Q. No. 27 is about students.

A. Very likely. If it is there, that is correct, that is all.

Q. I refer you to paragraph 69 of your report. You say that "the strong measures taken by General Dyer at Amritsar had a far-reaching effect and prevented any further trouble in the Lahore Divisional Area. His knowledge of the Indian and his popularity with the Sikhs did much to restore confidence and loyalty in the surrounding districts." That is your opinion?

A. Yes, that is my opinion.

Q. And the strongest measure that he took was what happened at Jallianwala Bagh?

A. Yes.

Q. In paragraph 70, there is your opinion about Martial Law administration. All this your own: "The measures taken by Lieutenant-Colonel Frank Johnson, D.S.O., in the security and administration of Martial Law was most effective; the justness of his orders and the personal touch which he established with Indians of all classes caused the administration of Martial Law to become a blessing which the poorer classes especially appreciated." Is that your opinion?

A. That is my opinion.

Q. Do you still adhere to it?

A. Yes, I still adhere to it.

26 November 1919.]

Major-General Sir W. BRYDON.

Q. I now refer to Appendix I, under the date May 8rd you find this: "On being asked for grievances, the following were forthcoming. Existence of wine shops which attracted badmashes, who, under influence of drink, spread rumours." That was reported to you?

A. Yes, that was reported to me.

Q. On the same day report was made to you that the "attitude of all villagers respectful and loyal"?

A. That was the report.

Q. The last paragraph of Appendix XIII contains this: "At 22'00, I, accompanied by a force, visited all my pickets and marched through the city in order to make sure that my orders as to inhabitants not being out of their houses after 20'00, had been obeyed. The city was absolutely quiet and not a soul to be seen. I returned to headquarters at midnight. The inhabitants have asked permission to bury the dead in accordance with my orders. This I am allowing." It is dated 14th April.

A. Yes.

Q. I come to Appendix VII. It was reported to you as to what happened in regard to the railway station?

A. Yes.

Q. The men that were suspected were (1) Abdul Hakim, Booking Clerk, (2) Ram Lal, Train Cleaner, (3) Ganga Ram, Guard. Is that correct?

A. It is correct; it is all printed here.

Q. From the reports that you received from various officers when they were going to different villages, it is clear that they were taking also hostages from different villages and were informing you?

A. Yes.

Q. In Appendix IX, you have: "Fire was opened and one of the party was killed in a wheat field. The main body was chased into a village named Padiawala about three miles further on and we entered this village from the south, posting four men to stop exit from the north. We took eight men from the village who were all concealed in houses locked from outside and were said by an informant to have been in the mob that burnt Chuharkhana station. Among the prisoners was Fauza Singh, Sepoy of 8rd Guides, on leave from Mardan.

Ram Singh had passed through Padiawala and fled, probably on horseback, before we arrived. He is an ex-sepoy.

On returning to the line I found Sergeant Davis, D.L.I., who had gone off after another party. He reported that in following up a party of the group from the well he had run into an armed party, some of whom were mounted. It seems that two men were armed with rifles and two with guns. Sergeant Davis killed three of this party but their arms were taken away by their servants. He also killed one other man in following them.

Sergeant Davis had taken four prisoners, two of whom were strongly suspected by the Police and the other two were released.

The number of others hit is not known but several were seen with wounds."

This is the report which you received and you think that Sergeant Davis and the other officers were authorized to take these drastic measures and that they had received such orders and that it was part of their duty to do all these things?

A. Undoubtedly.

Q. May I know whether these were verbal or written orders which were given to Sergeant Davis or to those officers?

A. I am afraid you will have to ask Mr. Flowerdew who was in command of that party.

Q. Were any written orders given to Captain Flowerdew or Sergeant Davis?

A. The order practically was for them to go in any village and if there were any suspected persons, they might take action.

Q. If anybody tried to run away, they could be shot?

A. I think you may take it that I am responsible for anything that happened. I cannot say exactly what the orders were to Captain Flowerdew. He was ordered to proceed by special train leaving Lahore and I suppose the officer who sent him gave him orders.

Q. Appendix XI in the paragraph headed "Padhana," at the bottom it is stated "evidence was given on the evening of the 18th, a drum was beaten in Padhana, orders given for the meeting of an unlawful assembly and the closing of shops on the 14th. Nine men were therefore arrested and sent in, including a lambaradar who was a ringleader and two others in whose patti these occurrences took place." That was reported to you?

A. Yes.

Q. In paragraph 10, "Narwar," there is this: "The zaildar and lambaradars were present as they were told the evidence was strong, and they denied all knowledge, they were given 10 minutes to produce evidence. Failing that I told them I would have them beaten. They refused to give evidence and 2 lambaradars and 4 others were beaten by a sowar by my order. I then gave them 10 minutes again and as they still refused, I arrested the zaildar, 2 lambaradars and 5 others and brought them in." That was reported to you?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you take any objection?

A. No; why should I?

Q. Further on, in the next paragraph there is: "As the magistrate was just coming, I told them I would not arrest any of them, but I said what I had done at Narwar, and that if they did not give the evidence to the magistrate I should probably return and deal more strictly." That was reported to you?

A. Yes.

Q. The last paragraph runs: "The whole district was absolutely quiet and there was no question of resistance, but I think the display of force had a very decided effect, except perhaps at Padhana, which would be all the better for another visit and some severity." Therefore you thought that the man who said that he could not give you the names of those persons who were present at the Wagah station and disturbances should be beaten and that this officer was perfectly justified in ordering that he should be beaten?

A. I have perfect confidence in Col. Bourne in carrying out orders. He was an officer of knowledge and judgment, and I considered him to be perfectly capable of doing what he thought right.

Q. With regard to Appendix XII, paragraph 9 is as follows: "Orders have been issued for the arrests of Bishan Das and the lambaradars of these villages. I interrogated the principal inhabitants of Patti, regarding the occurrences of the 12th April. It appears that Durga Das, proprietor of 'Waqt' (an Amritsar paper), lectured on the Rowlatt Bill on the 5th and 6th April at the invitation of the local Arya Samajists. On the 6th hartal was observed for one day." That is what happened at Patti and that was reported to you?

A. Yes: all these reports came down.

Q. The lambaradars were ordered to produce evidence by the evening of the 20th?

A. That is written down.

Q. Now about hostages, I find that "the following hostages were taken to Amritsar:—

1. Arura Ram.
2. Amir Chanj.
3. Munshi Ram.
4. Pandit Davaraj.
5. Nund Lal.
6. Bishin Das.
7. Bhagwan Singh.
8. Wadawar Singh.
9. Tara Singh.

1—5 were from Patti.

1, 3, 4 and 5 invited Durga Das.

2 was manager of the local Arya Samaj school.

6 spoke at one of the lectures and is suspected of participating in the damage done to railways at Thakur Khaura on 15th and 16th April.

7 was arrested on information received from Officer Commanding, Kasur.

8 was Bhagwan Singh's host at Kucha Pucca."

You considered there was good reason for taking them as hostages?

26 November 1919.]

Major-General Sir W. BEYNON.

A. The Officer Commanding the Column considered he had good reasons. He was the person to judge.

Q. In Appendix XII, item (c), it is stated that "Orders to Gharyala to clean and mend the road in the vicinity of that place."

A. Yes.

Q. Then in Clause II, paragraph (c), there is "Altogether 13 arrests as hostages were made and handed over with their papers to the Civil authorities. Twelve as leaders and seditionists." That was the report made to you?

A. Yes.

Q. About loyalty, it is stated "My impression as regards the loyalty of the district was that, outside the larger towns, the country folk seemed contented. They were at the time busy cutting their crops, and did not appear interested in anything else. Most outlying villages had not even heard of the Rowlatt Bill."

A. Yes.

Q. In the same clause, report (2) states:—"I never heard Lahore mentioned in the district I traversed, except that they had heard of riots there. I also think that rumours only filter out to the agricultural classes through people who have heard them when visiting towns on business." That is the report made to you?

A. Yes.

Q. In Appendix XIII, paragraph 3, it is stated: "A list of pleaders and barristers, who had taken an active part in the hartal, Gurdaspur, was obtained from the Superintendent of Police; this was forwarded to you under my No. P-2, dated the 22nd April 1919, with a request that the licenses be suspended." Further on he says "five arrests of men who caused shops to be shut on the evidence of Mr. Armstrong, I. D. F., were made."

"Also a Government servant who acted in an insolent manner was arrested."

That is the report that was made?

A. These reports all came in.

Q. I come to Appendix XIV. May I know as to whether the establishment of offences was made by you. It was a legal document. You would be responsible for its preparation?

A. Not entirely. I was selecting some of the offences out of the blue book that is given to us for our guidance, we had legal opinion on it and certain things were left out and certain things were put in.

Q. Am I right in supposing that that book applies when you go in an enemy country?

A. Not entirely. Martial Law orders do not necessarily obtain in an enemy country. I may say that this is not an enemy country.

Q. I understand you to say that under the Army Act you are authorised to create new offences?

A. That I am authorised to create new offences? I hardly know what would it mean. Every offence has been committed somewhere or other.

The President to the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan.
—Under Martial Law, the military commander can create anything.

Q. May I know as to what was your authority for creating a new court or conferring jurisdiction on different officers to decide cases; did you do it under an ordinance? "The districts in which Martial Law has been declared shall be divided up into areas and for each such area an officer or officers will be authorised to dispose of offences summarily under Martial Law. Such officers shall be known as Area Officers."

In addition to the Area Officers, every Officer Commanding a station or regiment, every Field Officer and every officer nominated by a General Officer Commanding a Brigade, by the Officer Commanding Lahore Civil Area or by the Local Government, is hereby authorised to dispose of offences summarily under Martial Law."

Then may I know whether under the Army Act, you are authorised to constitute courts or confer jurisdiction on certain officers?

A. Evidently; must be; otherwise I should not issue that order.

Q. You have given us in answer to questions put by the President the duties of the moveable column, the mobile force, and there you have mentioned 4 things; may I know as to whether there will be any written record of these orders or instructions given by you, or you gave these from memory?

A. I think I could probably get the exact orders by going through the records or asking for a copy of them. An order like that is sent down in writing to the officer.

Q. The four things mentioned by you are: (1) to show the villagers outside that troops were at all times ready; (2) to find out if there was any unrest; (3) to correct false rumours that has been circulated; (4) to explain the Rowlatt legislation.

A. That would be the general directions of the Officer Commanding.

Q. Do you think that what was done by the moveable, punitive columns would be covered by these instructions?

A. I do not quite see.

Q. The President asked you what duties these moveable columns would be required to discharge and you in answer gave 4 things and said that these were their duties. Do I understand any other duties were given to them or, in your opinion, would the duties cover what had been done by these punitive columns?

A. I do not quite see what you are driving at. You do not put plain questions.

Q. Very plain questions. You suggested "I rely on the discretion of my subordinates." I want to know whether these mobile and punitive columns are authorised to do anything they like. All these villages were not martial areas?

A. No; they cannot do anything they like which is against the law.

Q. You practically find that in the majority of the villages Martial Law was declared?

A. I do not think you are right.

Q. In a considerable number of these villages?

A. I believe so.

Q. I am told, so far as Lahore is concerned, that is one Civil Area.

A. No, no. You are quite wrong.

Q. Therefore you think in all these villages Martial Law was declared?

A. I think so; that is my impression; that was for the area, Amritsar and Lahore Area.

Q. You see here Martial Law has been proclaimed in the districts of Lahore, Amritsar and Gujranwala. The civil area of the districts, I take it, includes all these places.

A. That is my belief.

Q. Then how was this Martial Law proclaimed in the villages?

A. I do not recollect. I think the authorities would do it or the columns would do it.

Q. Now, coming to another point, news would be carried from Amritsar to Lahore and the outlying districts within a day or two?

A. You know better about that.

Q. How far is Ferozepore from Gujranwala?

A. I do not know; I have not the ghost of a notion.

Q. I am not referring to the troops that were available on the 15th—they had been given by Colonel Johnson—so a number of troops were available on the 15th. I want to know why was it not possible for you to despatch a large number of British soldiers, about 100 or 150 to Gujranwala on the 14th?

A. I do not mind answering that question. I am not concealing anything; I have no object. I may, however, tell you that Gujranwala is in the 2nd Divisional Area and the nearest troops are at Sialkot. I had not too many troops to send; so I told the 2nd Divisional Commander about it and of course he sent troops there.

Q. I want to know why you did not consider it advisable on the 14th, to wire to Ferozepore or Sialkot to send troops to Gujranwala, as you did on the 15th?

A. What are we talking about?

26 November 1919.]

Major-General Sir W. BRYNOR.

Q. I am talking of the 14th. You have said in answer to the President "I had not sent any military forces; I sent aeroplanes. Aeroplanes were necessary, because you could not send any force to Gujranwala." Therefore, as a matter of fact, on the 15th you wired to Ferozepore, and a certain number of troops were sent from Ferozepore to some other place, Bahawalnagar. So, I want to know why you did not on the 14th wire to Ferozepore or Sialkot for a certain number of troops to be sent to Gujranwala.

A. Ferozepore, I take it, would be a longer distance than Sialkot. As regards Ferozepore, it is not under my command.

Q. If you had sent a wire to Ferozepore, some soldiers, 50 or 60 men would be sent?

A. If I considered that I had troops at my disposal, I would have sent them.

Q. My point is, you have stated before this Committee that on the 15th you did wire to Ferozepore for troops?

A. Because it was the nearest place. You cannot send for troops from a far off place. It was impossible.

Q. Now, so far as that affair was concerned, there was no report that that party of rioters used any arms. The only report is, that 2 or 3 of the party had arms?

A. You refer to Captain Flowerdew's report.

Q. Yes, I think retired soldiers and retired pensioners are allowed to possess arms?

A. May be.

Q. Licensed soldiers are allowed to possess arms?

A. That is Civil; I do not know.

Q. The Indian Military Soldiers, who are going on leave or who retire, if I mistake not, are allowed to keep arms?

A. Not Government arms.

Q. They may not be Government arms?

A. They may be allowed private arms. I may answer that when they go on leave they are allowed to take their arms with them.

(Mr. Herbert, Government Advocate.—It is not quite correct, Sir, they may.)

Q. It appears to me that this war diary was written from the date of proclamation of the Martial Law in Lahore and does not go beyond the 30th April. May I understand that from the 30th of April it was not necessary to keep a war diary?

A. A war diary is always kept when anything is going on.

Q. Now is it or is it not a fact that in the last week of the month of April, so far as Lahore was concerned, the only report that was received was "all quiet; nothing to report"?

A. I think I must say that I do not know.

Q. Now, I do not think that it would be true that Colonel Johnson was issuing these Martial Law orders without first consulting Colonel Money, or would he issue if he thought best to issue them? What is your opinion? Is Colonel Johnson himself responsible, as he says, for issuing these orders or did he consult some superior authority and after consulting, issue them?

A. Colonel Johnson would issue his orders in the ordinary course on his own authority. If he had any doubt, he would no doubt consult me and the Civil authorities; he was always in touch with us.

Q. You have already said that the authority which Colonel Johnson had should be consistent with the instructions that you had already issued?

A. Yes.

Q. He was not authorised to promulgate any Martial Law orders which would be inconsistent with the power that you had delegated to different officers. You said that the subordinate officers were only authorised to issue orders consistent with your general orders?

A. Yes. And if any orders were not consistent with my instructions I should immediately stop them. He has no right to issue an order inconsistent with my instructions.

Q. About the continuance and maintenance of Martial Law after the end of April (I am not discussing this point with regard to the month of April, but after the 30th of April), what was there in the situation at Lahore which necessitated the maintenance of Martial Law?

A. There was the state of the Railways. It is rather hard to remember the exact dates.

Q. I can just help you. According to the Appendix which has been filed here,* no offence was committed after the 18th April. After the 18th, nothing was reported throughout the Province. The last thing that was done in the Province was on the 18th. I give you another twelve days. My question is why did you consider that the maintenance and continuance of the Martial Law was necessary in the month of May?

A. I considered it was necessary on account of the state of railways and unrest on the frontier.

Q. With regard to the railways, I may refresh your memory: What I have been able to gather is that this task was taken up by the rural population and by the different states. Therefore I again ask you, Sir, why you said that the maintenance and continuance of Martial Law was necessary in the month of May, as all this duty was being done by the villagers?

A. Of course they were assisting and they were responsible for the particular lines running through their village area.

Q. Now, I have been putting this question to some of the witnesses but I have not been able to get a satisfactory answer. I say that all the help that has been given by the Military would have been available to the Civil authorities without the proclamation of Martial Law?

A. Sometimes we have to act in a hurry and Martial Law gives you a free hand to act. Take any case you like. A mobile column has to go through the area. They may not have been arranged for. The Civil Officer has not done his duty and asks the Military to assist him. The Military cannot act without the request of the Civil authorities; Martial Law being there, the officer can act promptly on the spot.

Q. Therefore Martial Law was necessary in the month of May because there was need to arrest people without sufficient evidence and punish them quickly which could not have been done by the Civil authority?

A. I object to your statement "without sufficient evidence." Why should you consider that the Military would do anything without sufficient evidence?

Q. I change it as "the procedure prescribed for the Civil administration of justice." One of the witnesses here said: "The amount of evidence that was required in Civil trial is much more than what is required before a Military Tribunal."

A. I disagree.

Q. My point is, would I be right in suggesting that the maintenance of Martial Law was necessary for the purpose of arresting people, convicting some of them speedily, while if the matter had been left to the Civil authorities it would have been a more cumbersome procedure and more evidence might have been required and there might have been legal difficulty?

A. You are long-winded, Sir.

Q. I had to be.

A. I consider that Martial Law was necessary for the better preservation of law and order than it would have been if it did not exist. I cannot say more than that.

Q. Did they do anything else in the month of May, these Military authorities, in any way to help the Civil authorities except in arresting people, in going to different villages and in punishing people summarily?

A. No; I think that was their duty.

Q. Could you inform this Committee as to anything that was done by the Military authorities in the month of May which could not have been done by the Civil authorities in the discharge of their duties?

A. Anything that is done by the Military authorities in the month of May the Civil authorities would not have been able to do?

Q. My point is this. There are two ways of helping a Civil authority. One way is to help the Civil authority under Martial Law, the second way is, no Martial Law existing, the Civil authority asks you to help them. Therefore I want to know if you can tell me anything that was done by the Military authorities in the month of May which they could not have done if there had been no Martial Law?

A. I cannot answer; honestly I cannot.

Q. Nor can you refer to anything which was done on the spur of the moment in the month of May and which was absolutely necessary?

A. I cannot guess; as a matter of fact, I cannot remember it.

Q. In the month of April you had already received a communication from the higher Military authorities that you should do your best to act in close communication with and on advice of the Civil authorities. Had you or had you not received any order from the higher Military authorities that you must always in these days consult the Civil authorities?

A. I cannot remember it.

Q. You don't remember it?

A. No. That is a commonsense thing. I was in touch with the Civil authorities.

Q. In your answer with regard to the continuance of the Martial Law there was a technical phrase used by you about "Military necessity resulting from it." What does it mean, I want to know what it means? It is not down in your written statement.

A. Well, supposing the trouble on the Frontier was organised as you say, by the Amir and he sent his emissaries to Lahore which was at that time quite peaceful and they had raised trouble there, you had a military situation arising out of the trouble on the Frontier.

Q. Now I think it has happened that in such an eventuality or when there was war on the Frontier you take possession of all the railways and put them under the Military authorities without introducing Martial Law?

A. You cannot do anything you jolly well please.

Q. Was it not done at different places, that is, without declaring Martial Law in a city, you placed the Military in charge of the Railway Lines and Stations?

A. If the Government think it necessary they do anything. I do not criticise their action. I simply carry out their orders.

Q. Supposing the railway lines and railway stations had been placed under Military control owing to declaration of war by Afghanistan then why do you say there was any need of proclaiming and maintaining Martial Law for the purpose of trying different offenders?

A. The railway, as a matter of fact, is a method of communication. They meet at Lahore and they have to be guarded. Perhaps I am very dull and I don't know what you want me to answer.

Q. Why Martial Law should have been proclaimed here if on account of trouble on the frontier railways had to be protected. Could not this have been achieved if the whole line had been placed under the charge of the Military? They have their own Regulations and restrictions. But how would the maintenance of Martial Law inside the city, except for the purposes of trying the cases, help this?

A. Maintenance of Martial Law was not only considered necessary inside the city of Lahore but it was considered with regard to the whole area. I consider that Martial Law being in force could enable me to protect the Railways better than if Martial Law was not there. Is that all?

Q. That is your answer. I cannot press you further. I do not think as a Military Commander you ever thought that there was an extreme and extensive cause for the introduction of Martial Law?

A. As a Military Commander?

Q. Had Civil Law been superseded by the Military authority?

A. They were certainly superseded. I entirely agree with Sir Michael O'Dwyer.

Q. But as a matter of fact the Civil authority was not superseded by the Military authority?

A. I beg your pardon. When Martial Law was proclaimed it was superseded.

Q. Had you any hand in arresting a large number of persons who had committed offences?

A. Not immediately. I was in supreme command.

Q. Were you consulted or was your advice taken?

A. If efficient people who acted under me arrested those persons in whose case such arrests were necessary, they could not consult me in each and every case, for instance they cannot come and say they are going to arrest Tom, Dick or Harry.

Q. No Military officer was consulted about these arrests during those days. No Military authority was consulted?

A. Were they arrested for Military offences?

Q. I said offences under the Penal Code.

A. Yes.

Q. By your order you did maintain the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember any previous case in which this was done, i.e., during Martial Law Civil courts were carrying on their duties?

A. These orders were practically brought out by Government. I was myself to obey those orders.

Q. With regard to one other point we have not been able to get reasons. Everybody has referred us to you. That is, what were your reasons for excluding the Legal Practitioners from entering the Lahore Area?

A. I dare say I look at it from a purely military point of view and it was not necessary from a military point of view that those excellent gentlemen should enter the Area.

Q. That is having regard to their ability or political views?

A. Having regard to nothing except that it was unnecessary from a military point of view.

Q. Under the Army Act is not even the meanest soldier entitled to have his Counsel or Counsel of his choice?

A. He has not. It does not affect this case because they all had Counsel.

Q. Has ever, under the Military Law or under the Army Act, anybody wishing to have Counsel been refused one? Has this request been ever disallowed? Suppose it is not the Law, has ever any such request been refused by any Military Commander if that request was made by them?

A. I regret that I cannot answer. That is a question of law.

Q. You practically treated Lahore as an enemy country?

A. No.

Q. You treated Lahore as Germans treated Belgium?

A. Not at all. We treated Lahore Area as a friendly country which was unfortunately misguided. The mass of people were law-abiding citizens.

Q. That is what I cannot understand. Had it been a conquered country, supposing an army entered Belgium and there were no civil courts and they had to establish order and they had the levies of soldiers, that I can understand, but here I want to know, if Lahore was not an enemy country, why did you consider it necessary to prevent Legal Practitioners from entering the Lahore Area and from helping the accused who were tried for a conspiracy under the Penal Code?

A. If you look through these papers I think you will find that all travellers were restricted from coming to Lahore and it was not only those very excellent gentlemen who were so prevented; but all movements except with my permission were stopped.

Q. What was the ground for refusing these gentlemen permission?

26 November 1919.]

Major-General Sir W. BARROW.

A. Their presence was not necessary.

Q. What was the reason that you considered their presence unnecessary, i.e., why did you consider their presence unnecessary?

A. Because it was not considered necessary.

To Mr. Herbert.—Will you kindly give to the General a copy of the Military Reports regarding the Internal Disturbances in Lahore.

A copy* was then handed over.

Q. There is a report at page 16. It is dated the 18th April 1919, and you find it in Part III:—"The Lahore City remained quiet. Police experiencing no difficulty in arresting men they require. All shops in Anarkali and 90 per cent. in the City opened. Situation appears to be permanently in hand." That was the report on the 18th April?

A. Yes.

Q. There is a report at page 18. It is dated the 18th April. Refer to paragraph 4:—"Chief directs you to act in close communication with and on advice of Lieutenant-Governor." That is what I was referring you to. On the 18th of April you received this?

A. Yes.

Q. Now at page 27 it is reported "Motor Column which visited Muridke neighbourhood reports Lambardar, Kamoke, very turbulent and insolent, duly tried and punished. Remainder villages quiet, no connection could be traced between villagers and persons who cut line on the 15th." That was the report and this man was punished because he was insolent?

A. Yes.

Q. At page 28 it is reported "Lambardar of Kamoke was sentenced by Kamoke Flying Column to 15 lashes and Rs. 200 fine." That was the punishment inflicted?

A. Yes.

Q. Further on it says "At Kasur 95 per cent. arrested including Mohi-ud-din, son of a pleader, Abdul Kadir."

A. Yes.

Q. Then "at 9 hours Sardar Jiwan Singh was brought in, his attitude is servile."

A. Yes.

Q. And then this Column, it says, made 150 arrests at Amritsar.

A. Yes.

Q. Then at page 29 the report is that "Agitation of Gurdaspur reported to be the work of pleaders and members of the Arya Samaj, also Hindus and Hindu Government servants who worked in secret." This was the report?

A. Yes.

Q. At page 30 it is reported "8 Kasur pleaders' houses searched and important conspiracy documents collected."

A. Yes.

Q. And at Lahore by the Military Authorities 65 men arrested?

A. Yes.

Q. At page 34, "50 arrests made by this Column at Patti." Last line.

A. Yes.

Q. At page 35 it is reported that "the opinion of some of the Military Authorities was that Delhi is responsible for nine-tenths of unrest in this portion of the Punjab." That was the report? That was the result of the inquiry of the Military Authorities here?

A. Yes.

Q. Further on at page 35, first paragraph, it is reported "A case of incendiarism is reported by Multan in the office of the Bad Punjabis on the night of April 28th. The Commanding Officer considers this to be an act of regimental badmashi and is taking necessary action."

A. Yes.

Q. Then at page 36 the report is "8 arrests were made by this Column on 2 identifications and 20 on 1 identification in Kasur."

A. Yes.

Q. This is very important. At page 41 there is a military report from Amritsar which says that "the principal cause of discontent appears to be attitude of the police. It is reported that the police are extracting bribes under cover of Martial Law." That was the report made to you on the 8th of May?

A. Yes.

Q. On the 19th April military patrol of the Civil Lines was prohibited. It is No. 13 which begins from the 15th April?

A. This is all right.

Q. There it is said the Officer Commanding gave instructions about Civil Lines?

A. That is in Amritsar.

Q. It is dated the 19th April?

A. What Station?

Q. It is Lahore Civil Area.

A. Yes.

Q. This man Govardhan Das was arrested under your orders, i.e., under military orders. We have been hearing about his case in the newspapers from time to time. On the 28th April there was a warrant for the arrest of Govardhan Das, a prominent agitator, who had absconded to Madras?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know why he was arrested?

A. No.

Q. Now the procession which went inside the city on the night of the 11th April, went inside it as a result of a Conference at Government House. It is No. 14, Volume I, last clause but one "should march through the city."

A. I think I can remember the facts.

Q. Take page 8. The reports are "all quiet, all quiet, nothing to report." This is at the end of April.

A. Yes.

By Major-General Sir George Barrow—

Q. Did you consider that Martial Law as administered in Lahore had been administered with any undue severity or any severity which was greater than the circumstances warranted?

A. I did not consider so at all; I think it was administered with great leniency.

Q. There are degrees of Martial Law of course and Martial Law can be applied according to the circumstances of the case. Martial Law may be applied in foreign countries as well as in one's own country? For instance there would be absolutely no analogy or the faintest resemblance between Martial Law as administered by the Germans in Belgium and Martial Law as administered by us in Lahore?

A. I should not think there is any similarity at all.

Q. They both go by the name of Martial Law; beyond that there is nothing else?

A. No.

Q. Then we must come back to that old question about the continuation of Martial Law. You were strongly of opinion that it should be continued because of the military situation?

A. That is so.

Q. The military situation, I take it, is this that you have got a Province in which at various places in the Province risings have taken place, riots have occurred, public and private property is being destroyed, and a number of people killed; at the same time Martial Law has been introduced, and there is a war declared or about to be declared on the frontier, would you consider it reasonable on the part of Government or any military officer to take that opportunity to withdraw Martial Law, that is, considering the question that there are railways leading up to the frontier on which there are not only important railway junctions, but there are important railway bridges, the destruction of which would paralyse the concentration of troops and supplies for the frontier?

A. It is a very serious consideration whether you can weaken your powers at a time when the horizon is not altogether clear. I considered and I stated at the time that it would be advisable to continue Martial Law for a further period. We gradually reduced it, but we had to be very careful that we did not throw away a weapon that it might be necessary, I do not say would be necessary, to use.

Q. That is to say you had the weapon ready, the sword drawn from the scabbard, and it was not used but ready for use?

A. That is so.

Q. And it was not weighing heavily on the people at the time?

A. No, very light.

Q. Then in reply to a question put to you this morning by the President I understood from what you said,—perhaps you will correct me if I am wrong—that your meaning was that, though a military officer or an officer administering Martial Law would consider the effect that the introduction and the application of Martial Law would have on the feelings of the people, and its ultimate effect on their feelings, still you consider that the military reasons out-weighed all others?

A. I did. It is unfortunate that when you have to use force you cannot always consider the feelings of people. Whipping, for instance, is an unpleasant necessity. One does not want to use it, but one has to use it, the same as shooting. You do not want to shoot people but you have to do so. You cannot always consider people's feelings.

Q. And Martial Law in your opinion is a much stronger weapon than simply military force brought to assist the civil, I take it because Martial Law has powers which the civil has not got?

A. In my opinion Martial Law more than doubles the fighting strength of the Commanding Officer.

By the Hon'ble Mr. W. F. Rice—

Q. You said, did you not, that you formed the opinion that the rural population was not generally in sympathy with the disturbance?

A. That I stated on the strength of the reports furnished to me.

Q. On those reports you looked on the disturbances as mainly the work of townspeople?

A. Entirely so.

Q. From that would you draw any conclusion regarding the suggestion that has been made to us that the recruiting measures in the Punjab were one of the causes of the disturbances that had occurred?

A. I believe the recruiting had nothing to do with it.

Q. Recruiting I understand was almost entirely confined to the rural population?

A. Yes.

Q. You would not expect in those circumstances that recruiting measures would cause discontent and disturbances among the townspeople only?

A. Townspeople I believe only contributed a very small number of recruits to the army.

Q. And you think the recruiting measures were not one of the causes of these disturbances?

A. No, certainly not.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. Martial Law was proclaimed on the 15th April?

A. Yes.

Q. Who proclaimed it?

A. I cannot quite say.

Q. In the proclamation of the 19th April you say Martial Law had been proclaimed, by whom had it been proclaimed?

A. By the Government of India I understand.

Q. You are not sure?

A. I am pretty certain, in this way, that the question was referred to them of proclaiming Martial Law and I conclude they proclaimed it.

Q. I just wanted to know on what authority or basis you say at the opening paragraph of this proclamation of yours. 'Whereas Martial Law has been proclaimed and is in force in the districts of Lahore, Amritsar and Gujranwala.' What is the basis of that statement?

A. That is based on Government's orders.

Q. You received orders from the Government on which you based this?

A. Yes.

Q. Were those orders proclaimed in the Punjab?

A. As far as I remember the question was referred to the Government of India by the civil authorities advising Martial Law and the Government of India agreed.

Q. I am simply referring to the matter of the proclamation of Martial Law, not to the order of the Government of India sanctioning Martial Law.

A. The proclamation of Martial Law was this one issued by me.

Q. But you say in this proclamation, 'Whereas Martial Law has been proclaimed and is in force in the districts of Lahore, Amritsar and Gujranwala.' You are referring to an already existing fact, that is the proclamation of Martial Law by somebody.

A. I am afraid I cannot quite answer that question; perhaps the civil authorities would be able to answer it.

Q. You made that proclamation without knowing on what authority you were making it?

A. Oh no, that would be drawn up in collaboration with the civil authorities.

Q. But I take it you are responsible for everything stated here. This may have been drawn up on the advice of the civil authorities, but when you sign this document I take it you are entirely responsible for it?

A. Entirely so.

Q. And I say an officer of your position would not sign a document like this until he knew what it was and understood it properly, that is why I wanted to know on what authority it was based and whether Martial Law had actually been proclaimed before this in Lahore?

A. Rather a hard question to answer.

Q. I should have thought it was a simple question to answer?

A. It may appear so to you, but these matters were all discussed and brought out at conferences at which the civil and military authorities met.

Q. Therefore all the more reason that, if the statements made here were made after a good deal of deliberation and consultation, they must be founded upon fact; therefore I wish to know on what fact it was based?

A. The fact would be that the Civil would tell me that Martial Law has been proclaimed.

Q. Proclamation means, made public, published broadcast?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it published in the Punjab Government Gazette, or by means of papers, or how was it done?

A. I think the Lieutenant-Governor would issue the notice that Martial Law had been proclaimed.

Q. He would issue it, but do you know that he did issue it?

A. Of course I know he did.

Q. He did issue it?

A. Yes.

Q. He did issue that notice in the Punjab Gazette?

A. I am afraid I cannot say, I am not up in the civil methods.

Q. It is only a question of fact; it is not a question of law, civil or military; it is purely a question of fact?

A. It is a pure question of fact, but as to the means I am not quite certain.

Q. You say Martial Law was proclaimed on the night of the 15th, this Proclamation is dated the 19th, four days afterwards?

A. Yes.

Q. So Martial Law had actually been proclaimed and you issued this four days afterwards?

A. Yes.

Q. Then you were appointed as the supreme authority to administer Martial Law in these three Districts?

A. I being the senior Military officer in the district assumed command.

Q. You received orders to that effect I presume?

A. I would do that ipso facto.

Q. But you must be told by somebody?

A. Oh no, the senior Military officer, on the proclamation of Martial Law, assumes command.

26 November 1919.]

Major-General Sir W. BRYNOR.

Q. That is why I asked in the beginning how it was proclaimed and you have not been able to answer that question?

A. I am afraid not.

Q. Then I take it that you were not aware that such an important fact had been proclaimed; you must have had some order or intimation that you were the officer to take charge?

A. The Civil authorities proclaimed their inability to keep the law.

Q. They proclaimed it, where?

A. They informed me.

Q. That is what I wanted to get at, as to how you assumed authority?

A. The Civil authorities informed me that Civil Law had ceased to run and Martial Law takes its place.

Q. They said so?

A. Yes.

Q. Who told you?

A. His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor.

Q. The Lieutenant-Governor himself told you "Civil Law has ceased to exist and Martial Law takes its place"?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it verbal or written?

A. Verbal.

Q. And on that you, as in command of these districts, assumed command?

A. Yes.

Q. He simply gave you the instructions that Civil Law had ceased to run and now Martial Law must take its place; there were no further instructions beyond that and you did not require any, it was quite enough?

A. We discussed the sort of Martial Law that should be brought in. This is a modified Martial Law; certain restrictions were brought in at the time that it was proclaimed.

Q. You discussed when you were told verbally that Martial Law should take the place of Civil Law, as to the kind of Martial Law that should be brought in?

A. That is so.

Q. Are there many kinds of Martial Law?

A. Well, to the best of my belief there is only one Martial Law and that is the authority of the Military commander. But there are modifications of pure Martial Law, and these were brought in by the Government. When they introduced Martial Law, they made certain restrictions. In this case the restrictions were as to the tribunals.

Q. What were the restrictions? As given here in this Proclamation?

A. Yes.

Q. You say here Martial Law has been declared 'subject to the maintenance of ordinary courts for ordinary offences and the establishment under Martial Law Ordinance,' etc. So I take it that Martial Law pure and simple but subject to these restrictions was introduced?

A. That is it.

Q. As given here in your Appendix XIV, No. 1, those two conditions were:—

(a) the maintenance of ordinary courts for ordinary offences, and

(b) the establishment under the Martial Law Ordinance, 1919, of Special Tribunals for offences specified in section 2 of the Bengal State Offences Regulation, 1804.

Subject to these two restrictions, it was left entirely to your discretion to do as you thought best?

A. That is so.

Q. Who imposed those restrictions?

A. The Government of India.

Q. Did you receive these instructions from the Government of India?

A. Through the civil authorities, through the Punjab Government.

Q. Were those restrictions imposed at the time you were told that civil law had ceased to run and Martial Law would take its place? You were told these two things at the same time?

A. It was not at one moment, the matter was under discussion and those restrictions were imposed upon me.

Q. Later on?

A. While we were working out these orders, this Proclamation.

Q. That was between the 15th and the 19th?

A. Yes, between the 15th and the 19th.

Q. You were working it out between the 15th and 19th and these were thought out and these restrictions added?

A. Yes.

Q. As I understood you to say, you were in supreme command and you had Colonel Money under you?

A. Yes.

Q. Assisting you generally?

A. His title was Administrator of Martial Law.

Q. His title; and your title?

A. I was the Officer Commanding the 16th Division.

Q. But in respect to Martial Law as supreme authority what was your title?

A. It did not alter my title.

Q. And then for these various districts of Lahore, Amritsar and Gujranwala you had three distinct officers as area officers to administer Martial Law under your directions?

A. That is so.

Q. And as regards Lahore District it was Colonel Frank Johnson?

A. Yes.

Q. And Amritsar?

A. General Dyer.

Q. Gujranwala?

A. Gujranwala was not under me.

Q. Under you were two districts, Lahore and Amritsar?

A. Yes.

Q. So those two officers were to carry out your instructions in administering Martial Law?

A. That is so.

Q. Colonel Johnson in one of his proclamations has given the definition with which I believe you agree, that Martial Law is the will of the military commander, and here it is in your view subject to these two conditions?

A. That is so.

Q. So any one who was working under you as administrator in any particular area would have strictly to follow what your will was?

A. Yes.

Q. It may be generally expressed or particularly expressed, and if he exceeded those limits he would be doing something in excess and his conduct would be illegal?

A. Yes, I agree with you.

Q. It was not the will of each individual commander under you, irrespective of your orders, to do what he liked? He had to act consistently with the general or particular instructions which you had chosen to give him?

A. That is so.

Q. Now I take it that this is the first proclamation that you issued on the 19th?

A. Yes.

Q. And this proclamation deals with two important matters, first it defines the offences and their punishments under Martial Law, and secondly, it also names the officers who are to administer Martial Law. It specifies them, it says:—'The districts in which Martial Law has been declared shall be divided up into areas and for each such area an officer or officers will be authorised to dispose of offences summarily under Martial Law. Such officers shall be known as Area Officers.' They were going to be appointed subsequently under this authority?

A. Yes.

Q. 'In addition to the Area Officers, every Officer Commanding a station or regiment, every Field Officer and every officer nominated by a General Officer Commanding a Brigade, by the Officer Commanding, Lahore Civil Area, or by the Local Government, is hereby authorised to dispose of offences summarily under Martial Law.' Now, when did you appoint Colonel Johnson as regards Lahore and General Dyer with regard to Amritsar?

26 November 1919.]

Major-General Sir W. BEYRON.

A. General Dyer of course was appointed at once.
Q. On the 15th?

A. Yes. Colonel Johnson took over command on the 15th, I see here in the diary of the Lahore Civil Area.

Q. So by virtue of assuming that command, he became Martial Law Officer under you at once?

A. Yes.

Q. You gave no other instructions to Colonel Johnson excepting these general instructions?

A. Yes.

Q. No other instructions, verbal or written, excepting these?

A. Those were his orders.

Q. He had to comply with these generally?

A. Yes.

Q. And anything he did consistently with those instructions would be quite all right, and if he did anything outside those instructions it would be perfectly wrong, you agree with that?

A. Yes, I agree with that.

Q. Now he issued certain orders on the 15th of April. These orders could not be either consistent or inconsistent with these instructions.

Witness.—Will you let me know what those orders were?

Member.—Martial Law Orders Nos. 2, 3, 4, 5. All these were dated the 15th April. Orders Nos. 6, 7 and 8. These are dated the 16th of April. There are sixteen orders he issued up to the 18th of April. But before the issue of this proclamation by you on the 19th he had already issued 18 orders which could not be consistent with this proclamation because then the proclamation did not exist, so I take it, this was ultra vires. It was acting without authority?

A. I disagree entirely.

(A discussion here ensued between Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan and the President and the above question was dropped.)

Q. I take it that whenever any new offence is committed the people to whom it applies should be in a position to understand what the offence is in order that they may not commit it?

A. Yes.

Q. Here you say in Appendix XIV, No. 4: Every person who receives information of gatherings or intended gathering of rebels.....but you have nowhere defined here who in your opinion for that purpose these rebels were. How are the people to know whom you meant as rebels?

A. Well I know who I should mean. But you mean to say is it necessary that the people should know?

Q. They should know clearly as to what they are to do in order to obey. Nowhere do I see in this proclamation the word "rebel" defined for the purpose of Martial Law.

A. No, but in Martial Law we use commonsense. I cannot perhaps define it well but it is someone who is not obeying the orders of constituted authority and rebels against this order.

Q. A person who does not obey constituted authority. If he rebels against it he rebels. A rebel is one who rebels, that is very simple but that does not go any further. It does not explain anything at all. I want to know what a rebel is?

A. If a person was charged under section 4 of receiving information of gatherings and intended gatherings he would have to prove that he did not know they were rebels.

Q. But how is he to know that they were rebels. You have not said who a rebel is?

A. Well he could look it up in the dictionary.

Q. I take it that the people have to look up the dictionary for the meaning?

A. If a man is ignorant of the meaning he can also look it up in the dictionary.

Q. But there are many people who do not know the English language in Lahore?

A. I am not out to educate the people in the meaning of English.

Q. May I ask you what you meant by it?

A. I am afraid I am not very good at splitting hairs.

Q. Now 100 people are holding a meeting, how is a person to know that that meeting consists of rebels or not? A mere holding of a meeting does not go against constituted authority. The meeting itself is not unlawful but the persons taking part in the meeting are rebels. If it has been prohibited, then anybody who takes part in that is a rebel?

A. Exactly.

Q. And if the meeting is not prohibited then in that case it can take place. The meeting itself is not prohibited yet it consists of rebels?

A. Not at all. A rebellion is constituted in the fact that it is against constituted authority.

Q. If the meeting is not against constituted authority I take it that it can take place. This is not what you say in this proclamation. It is assumed that the meeting itself is not prohibited but it consists of people who are rebels there. It might be a gathering of men or an open rebellion. How are we to know that they are rebels. It shows you that in your own mind you had no clear notion as to what a rebel is?

A. I think you are wrong. I have a very clear notion.

Q. You say it was drawn up after consultation with lawyers?

A. All these were drawn up from a book. I wish I had the book to give you. I think that case can be noted and the next time it is necessary your suggestion can be discussed.

Q. Did you satisfy yourself that your instructions as contained in this proclamation were faithfully carried out and that there were no excesses committed or did you leave it entirely to your subordinates?

A. I can recall none. Reports were constantly sent in. I am quite satisfied with the way in which my officers carried out their duties.

Q. As regards not permitting counsel from outside to defend accused?

A. There was no necessity for them to come into the city.

Q. They were coming here to defend certain accused?

A. That was what was stated.

Q. Who was to decide the necessity—the accused concerned or the military authority?

A. The military authority would entirely settle the question.

Q. Was it for you to decide or the accused in the case?

A. For me to decide.

Q. Did you apprehend any danger or any trouble on that account?

A. No, I cannot say that there was any danger or any trouble.

Q. The question is who was to decide the necessity. We will take it that every person has a right to be defended by counsel whom he likes?

A. I do not see that at all.

Q. What were the grounds on which you refused permission? There must be some grounds why you refused.

A. There are. They were not necessary. There was no advantage in their coming in from a military point of view.

Q. What was the advantage from the military point of view for refusing them permission?

A. Because everything had to be considered from a military point of view.

Q. In the ordinary way they are given every opportunity of defending their cases; and refusing permission to the counsel whom they like to employ was done from a military point of view?

A. There were other lawyers in Lahore. There was no necessity for these people to come in. There are numbers of lawyers in Lahore who are perfectly capable of defending people.

Q. But that is a matter which the accused person would decide?

A. There was no necessity for them to come here.

Q. Did you consult the accused why they were selected?

26 November 1919.]

Major-General Sir W. BRYSON.

A. I have no idea why they were selected. I did not consider the case. Not from their point of view.

Q. I take it that you can judge of the ability of eminent lawyers very well?

A. God forbid: No.

(The President again intervened here and the question was dropped.)

Q. I heard you say that in Kasur when houses of certain pleaders were searched, certain documents were found?

A. I believe that was in the report by the officer at Kasur.

Q. Are those Kasur reports available anywhere? Can we have those documents?

A. I should think so.

Colonel Isemonger.—I think Colonel Macrae will be able to give evidence about that. He is coming here and he will be able to give evidence before the Committee.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. Please refer to your war diary* for March 30th—General Staff—16th Indian Division, page 23. It is a report from your Air Service, and you find it is dated the 15th of April. "Gathering of about 20 noticed in field under one mile west of town—scattered with Lewis gun." This is about Gujranwala, and the second item is "8.58.—Similar gathering outside held in village half mile west of town . . . . . one bomb dropped which hit adjoining house and blew side in." These reports made to you were on the 15th of April. All that was done by the aeroplane which left Lahore and came back again the same day?

A. Yes.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. That proclamation was signed by you on the 19th of April. You had been the highest military officer in this part of the world for some substantial time before that, and may I take it that you were advised upon the question whether Martial Law was necessary before the question was referred to the Government of India at all?

A. It was mentioned to me but I do not think you can really say my advice was taken. At all events I had nothing to do with the bringing in of Martial Law.

Q. It is not true that the introduction of Martial Law into this part of the world was due to you? Were you the primemover in that?

A. No.

Q. You say it was mentioned but hardly sufficiently to enable you to say that your advice was taken or that it was done upon your advice?

A. Of course the civil and military were daily meeting and discussing the situation and one would naturally in the course of conversation talk about Martial Law.

Q. It is one thing to hear in the course of conversation and another thing altogether to make your recommendation.

A. The recommendation did not come from me.

Q. Therefore so far as you are concerned on the 14th of April 1919 the Viceroy made and published in the Gazette of India, Extraordinary, Ordinance No. 1 of 1919 which brought into effect Martial Law under the old Bengal Regulation. Have a look at it. (A copy of the Ordinance was handed to the witness). A special Gazette of India, Extraordinary, of the 14th of April was issued with that Ordinance and from that time the authorities and the Commanding Officer in this part of the world was the authority under which Martial Law existed?

A. Yes.

Q. And that by the time you had two or three days to turn round you put it into shape for the purpose of this area by the proclamation which you signed on the 19th of April, and you state at the beginning that Martial Law has been declared subject to the maintenance of ordinary courts for ordinary offences. That is merely a recital of that Ordinance which you now hold in your hand. The Ordinance which was published in the Gazette of the 14th is really referred to by name in the beginning of your proclamation and that is where you get the statement that Martial Law had been proclaimed? The orders or proclamation of Colonel Johnson in Lahore which began from the 15th of April was after the Ordinance by the Viceroy and he was acting direct under that authority before you had time to give him directions on the 19th.

A. Not before that time. I had issued verbal orders as you see in my report to the different commanders to take such action as was necessary.

Q. And your proclamation of the 19th, was that intended to be of general application throughout your command so far as Martial Law applied?

A. That is it.

Q. Did you leave the Officers Commanding the various areas to make special orders as required by particular conditions?

A. They had to make special orders. You cannot cover everything with one proclamation.

Q. I do not want to keep harping on it, General, but I just want to put one or two questions about the matter of legal practitioners. As I understand, this order about legal practitioners did not come into force until the 14th May, it was an order made by the General Officers Commanding, Lahore and Rawalpindi Divisions?

A. That was the 2nd Division.

Q. That is to say, that you and the other Major-General, your neighbouring General, issued an order in identical terms on the 14th May about this question of legal practitioners?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell me from the beginning of Martial Law on the 15th of April until this proclamation of the 14th May was issued what was the position with regard to counsel or legal practitioners in the Martial Law districts?

A. You will see at Appendix XVI, instructions in regard to trials of persons charged with offences in connection with the present disturbances committed before the 19th April 1919.

Q. Paragraph 6. "It has been arranged that counsel for the defence shall be provided by Government for any accused person who is unable to engage a counsel for himself." That is from Mr. Thompson, Chief Secretary. But what I want to know is, what was the position so far as the legal practitioners were concerned? Before the 14th May, was it possible for an outside practitioner to come into the Punjab for the purpose of a trial?

A. I believe it was not, but of course it was a matter for the High Court.

Q. May I put that question again. I am reading from a book which has been supplied to us as the official Government case, Report of the Punjab Disturbances. I am reading from page 277, and it gives a version as to this matter in these terms. "On the 14th May the General Officers Commanding Lahore and Rawalpindi Divisions, issued proclamations to the effect that legal practitioners whose ordinary place of business is outside the Punjab will not be allowed to enter the Martial Law area including the limits of the Lahore and Rawalpindi Divisions without the permission of the Administrator of Martial Law." The first thing I am asking you is—you notice the date is said to be the 14th May; at that time Martial Law has been roughly a month—during that month was there anything, and if so, what was there, to prevent a barrister from Calcutta who was wanted by a prisoner before any of the Martial Law courts from coming into the Punjab?

A. That order as far as I remember, was brought about for this reason. There was such a large number of applications from persons who said that they were not satisfied with the barristers they could procure in Lahore, for permission for barristers from outside to come and defend them, and, in order to save these constant applications, that order was published.

Q. Can you explain it to me? I don't follow it. Why before the 15th May was it necessary to get permission before one could employ an outside barrister to defend one in Lahore? What order or proclamation did you issue?

A. I do not think there was one, except the general order that no movement could take place or people could come into the Martial Law area. There was a general order. I think it is in the proclamations.

Q. There are general restrictions upon railway travelling. Did those restrictions upon travelling up to that time prohibit any class of persons? I don't think they did, did they?

A. I personally think that barristers may have come in, but the fact came to our notice through these applications. They may have come in before without our knowledge, but it was to save the constant applications of these men to come in that we published that order.

Q. Of course if travelling was restricted from places outside the Punjab, then everybody, whatever class of men wanted to come in, would have to get permission. I suppose you had a Bureau or Office busily engaged in dealing with these questions?

A. Everybody was not stopped from coming in. We had to restrict third class passengers altogether, but we tried to carry out Martial Law on common sense lines, and I do not think there was any restriction on people coming into Lahore who wanted to.

Q. Do I gather correctly that what you wanted was to stop having to keep an office dealing with the numerous applications?

A. That was why that order was published.

Q. The report of the Punjab Disturbances goes on thus. It does not bind you in any way. I want you to tell me whether it is right or wrong. "The intention of this order was not of course to prejudice the accused in their defence. It was dictated by the desire to prevent the disturbance of the political atmosphere, now rapidly clearing, by outsiders whose main purpose would not improbably be the revival of the agitation under the protection afforded by appearance before the courts." What do you say to that?

A. No, that is not in my office.

Q. So far as you are concerned, you say that was not your intention at all?

A. My intention was, it was not necessary to have all these people in. They were not an advantage to me. That is why I looked at it from a military point of view.

The President.—You had no right to exclude them? Witness.—I may have been wrong.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin.—It appears in the Government case they have imputed what appears to me a very well considered motive to you and to your brother Generals which you don't seem to have heard of before?

A. It was very kind of them to say so.

Q. On the ground that you did not want in those busy times to deal with those applications, you thought it advisable to restrict the right of legal practitioners. I see it goes on to say "without the permission of the administrator of Martial Law"?

Who did you mean by that? Did you mean yourself, Colonel Money or the Local Officer Commanding?

A. Colonel Money acted for me. The application would come to him and he would say yes or no.

Q. The only thing that occurs to me, General, if I may put it to you is this. An order in those terms would be more likely to produce a greater number of applications for permission addressed to the Administrator of Martial Law than to cut them down?

A. Why?

Q. Because if you say that you cannot come in without the permission of so and so, the first thing one would do is to apply for permission?

A. I do not think it did act that way. They did not worry. They came up to the Administrator of Martial Law. They might have increased them, there were so many of them.

Q. Of the barristers who did apply for permission, I notice that eminent English barristers and Indian barristers, barristers with no political colouring or instinct have been refused entry into the Punjab.

A. I did not consider it from a political point of view at all.

Q. The permission of the Administrator of Martial Law for this purpose was not obtained any the more readily by a European who served as a Captain in the Indian Defence Force; it did not make it the easier that a man was well recognised, that he was a supporter of Government, that he served as a soldier or anything else?

A. If it had been necessary for an officer to come in, I should have made an exception in his case.

By Mr. Herbert, Government Advocate.—

Q. With regard to the same question, General, are you aware of the fact that long before this order of yours was passed excluding the legal practitioners from other Provinces, and even before the disturbances arose, the High Court of this Province has itself passed an order to the same effect excluding legal practitioners from other Provinces from appearing in the High Court in their professional capacity. Do you know anything about that?

A. I know it now. I did not know it at the time.

Q. In regard to the bombing at Gujranwala and the aeroplanes sent there, was it a fact that when the aeroplane was sent from here the disturbances had already taken place or were then taking place?

A. Our information was that the Railway Station was on fire and mobs were wrecking the Civil Station and burning bridges.

Q. Was it not one of the reasons why an aeroplane was sent there that it could get there quickly and troops could not?

A. Of course aeroplanes were sent because they could go there quickly. It was not the reason that troops could not?

Q. They were pre-occupied at the time, and it was decided to send an aeroplane?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it not believed at the time here that the lives of the European community in Gujranwala were in danger?

A. I believe that the Civil authorities certainly feared that the lives of Europeans were in danger. I cannot answer for it myself because we simply got the suggestion that the aeroplanes should be sent out because of these riotings, and we at once sent them. There was always a danger of loss of European life at that time.

Q. You stated that two aeroplanes were placed at the disposal of the force at Amritsar. Is it not a fact that these aeroplanes did not remain there? They went during the day and came back for the night?

A. I think, as far as I remember, we used them chiefly as a means of carrying messages. Railway lines and telegraph lines had been broken. I cannot say whether they remained there any particular night or not, but as far as my recollection goes, they came back to their aerodrome every night.

Q. You saw full reports of General Dyer as to the incident at Jallianwala Bagh on the 13th? Did you then think and do you now think that sufficient warning had been given to the people at Amritsar?

(The President.—I don't think you can ask him that question.)

Q. Then in regard to the question put to you in the early part of the proceedings by the President in regard to the deferential treatment meted out to one section of the community or other under Martial Law, which particular community, the Indian or the European, was in rebellion?

(The President.—Surely it is the Indian. No one has suggested that the European community was in rebellion.)

Q. I put it this way. Of which particular community, the Indian or the European, was it necessary for the Administrator of Martial Law here to restrict activities?

A. I don't think we treated any differently. Martial Law applies for the whole population.

26 November 1919.]

Mr. ALAN MITCHELL.

Mr. ALAN MITCHELL, I.C.S., late Additional Deputy Commissioner, Lahore.

By the President —

Q. I think for a certain part of the time during which Martial Law was in operation you acted as Deputy Commissioner at Lahore?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. That was from the 17th April till some recent date when you started to fulfil the duties of Deputy Commissioner at Gujranwala?

A. I came here on the 17th as an Assistant to the Deputy Commissioner. I did not become Deputy Commissioner till the 19th May. I was Additional Deputy Commissioner from the 19th May and actual Deputy Commissioner for a fortnight only.

Q. During that time Mr. Fyson was Commissioner? A. He was Deputy Commissioner.

Q. He was actually present at certain of the incidents that took place.

A. Yes, Sir, he was the Deputy Commissioner when the disturbances took place.

Q. For some time he was away on leave, and I think latterly he was ordered to go on six months' leave on medical certificate?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. At present he is in England?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. A report* had to be prepared for the Government and that report was started by Mr. Fyson, I think. That was completed by you?

A. It went in in my time. Mr. Marsden, the Sub-Divisional Officer, collaborated part of the time. He really finished it off. Of course I had to go through it. I am actually responsible for it.

Q. You are responsible for it merely as a report. So far as the incidents and statements in it are concerned, you received the information from outside sources?

A. Yes, Sir, I was present during a certain time in a subordinate capacity.

Q. When Martial Law was in operation?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. But I may take it from you generally that that report in so far as it gives statistics, is correct, upon the information that was placed before you?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You refer in that report at the end to the trials before the summary courts?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. In connection with the information you lay before us as to the number of trials by the Commission and the number of trials before the summary courts, those figures you give are correct?

A. Yes, Sir, to the best of my belief.

Q. And in connection with the punishments that were administered, you have also given us figures in your report with reference to fines and whipping sentences. Were all those whipping sentences pronounced either by the Commission or by order of the summary courts?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Does it include whipping cases, where the whipping was carried out by the Bourne column?

A. There are more details in the big statement.

Q. I see there is a note by Mr. Marsden. The only other case besides those mentioned by you of whipping carried out as a disciplinary measure so far as you know was that of two lambardars and four villagers and carried out by the Bourne column after the 18th April?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. With reference to whipping, was there any truth in the suggestion that any one had died or was seriously injured?

A. I never heard of any such case.

Q. Did you make full enquiries?

A. I was here from the 17th April and during that time the sentences of whipping were carried out. I never heard of any such case.

Q. If you were preparing a statement for the Government for which you are responsible in the absence of Mr. Fyson, and you give the statement that no one had died or was seriously injured, you make that statement in consequence of full investigations you made into all the cases?

A. Yes, Sir.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. Had you anything to do with the arrests and charging of suspected persons and bringing them before the courts for trial?

A. No, Sir, that was all done in Lahore by the various police officers.

Q. You did not have to supervise them?

A. I tried a few petty cases of Martial Law.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. This statement of Mr. Fyson, I believe, is an abstract of the report that was submitted to the Government. It is not the whole of the report that was sent under your initials?

A. This is an abridged copy of the main report.

Q. When you arrived on the 17th,—will you kindly see your statement—you found everything quiet in Lahore?

A. Yes.

Q. Because the military authorities by that time had got complete control of the city?

A. Yes.

Q. And you found in fact that there was very little for you to do?

A. Yes, I think so.

Q. Then Mr. Fyson again after his illness became Deputy Commissioner in the month of May?

A. Yes, Sir, the day I became Joint Deputy Commissioner.

Q. When you joined the second time, was it the end of April or the beginning of May?

A. I joined as Assistant Commissioner on the 17th April. On the 19th May I became Joint Deputy Commissioner.

Q. From that time really you had some experience of how Martial Law was managed?

A. Before that I had very little to do with it.

Q. By this time according to your observation and opinion the civil administration had practically resumed its normal course although Martial Law was in force?

A. That is so.

Q. Kindly look at the report of Mr. Fyson, because he is not here, I will only ask you one or two questions about it. You see the portion dealing with April 8th. It is there said that Dr. Gokal Chand was prepared throughout the day to help the authorities?

A. Yes, that part of the report was written by Mr. Fyson himself.

Q. You see paragraph 2. It is there admitted that the news of Mr. Gandhi's arrest came to Lahore at 8-30.

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Just at the bottom of that paragraph, under the heading April 10th, he says: "They had no weapons and had done no damage beyond breaking young trees."

A. Yes, I saw trees broken.

Q. In paragraph 3 there is a dispute about what time was allowed by Mr. Fyson when Ram Bhaj Datt wanted him to give him certain time to disperse the crowd. There he says "He gave two minutes' time for the crowd to clear, intimating his intentions to Ram Bhaj Datt who seemed to be leading the mob."

A. That is so.

Q. Again he says: "The crowd at this place were carrying on a sort of Muharram and the nucleus sat down in the Chowk near Lahori Gate."

A. It is in the report.

Q. Under date April 12th, he says: "The demeanour of the crowd was hostile and they called out for the cancellation of the laws."

26 November 1919.]

MR. ALAN MITCHELL.

A. That is in the report.

Q. In this report it is stated that the Extra Assistant Commissioner was sent inside the Badshahi Mosque to disperse the crowd. It runs thus: "After consulting General Clarke (who had arrived by car) and Colonel Johnson, the Deputy Commissioner sent Sheikh Rahim Baksh, Extra Assistant Commissioner, to enter the Mosque and order to disperse."

A. Yes.

Q. Paragraph 4 of Section IV refers to the intentions of the crowd. "Their intention of course was to make a demonstration, but there is no shadow of doubt that had they reached there they would have lost their heads and run riot and acted as their brethren at Amritsar did."

That was your opinion?

A. That is my opinion.

Q. Paragraph 6, Section V, says, "There is no trace of an effort to form an army. The Danda Fauj or gang of clubmen formed at Lahore was the only thing of the sort, and it was insignificant."

A. Yes; that is in the report.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. The first paragraph of section IV refers to the nature of the movement and runs thus:—"The movement at Lahore was primarily anti-Government. The idea was to stop Government work, paralyse communications, and inconvenience Europeans to such an extent that the Government would be forced to capitulate over the Rowlatt Act. Any other motives were secondary, and due to the fact that an Indian crowd is too excitable to be passive merely. Thus the movement incidentally revealed the real feelings of the urban population towards Britain. It may be said that they have no real feelings of loyalty or gratitude for favours past or to come. In their excitement they were willing to burn photographs of the King and Queen, and so to show that it is not merely the bureaucracy in India that they hate but England." Does it apply to the whole urban population or only to a few? Do you think that everyone of them is disloyal or is only a portion of the population that took part in the disturbance referred to? Were they in the majority or minority?

A. I only base this opinion on the papers and reports and things in front of me. I personally was not here during the disturbances. I could not say exactly as to the actual outbreak on the 10th.

Q. Is it the majority of the people in Lahore or Amritsar or Gujranwala and all these places that were disaffected and disloyal, or only a small minority that caused disturbances?

A. I should say it was the minority.

By the President—

Q. Are you expressing your own opinion? Or Mr. Fyson's?

A. The sections of the report dealing with the general position were not written by Mr. Fyson. They were actually drafted by Mr. Marsden and they pass for my opinion. I am responsible for them. As I have explained, I can only form my opinions on what I heard after my arrival and on the reports and other papers in my possession.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. In your opinion was the majority or the minority disloyal?

A. From the opinion that I formed on those reports, I consider that it was the minority only of the city inhabitants of Lahore that was not loyal on this occasion.

Q. Was it a large minority, out of a population of about 2 lakhs? Would it be nearly half or a very small number.

A. I would not like to give any number.

Q. Did you also inquire into the causes or reasons why they were disaffected or disloyal? This is a statement of fact, that the majority of the people of Lahore and Amritsar were disloyal. Did you ascertain the reason for their disloyalty?

A. I could not form any opinion about Amritsar.

Q. I mean Lahore: I beg your pardon. The majority of the people of Lahore were disloyal. Did you enquire into the reasons for their disloyalty?

A. No; I made no particular enquiries myself. Up till a week before the date of submission of the report, Mr. Fyson was there, and so the enquiries were made by him. As I have signed the report, I am responsible, at the same time, I do not wish to disclaim responsibility. I was there for a short time before the report was made. It was entirely in the hands of Mr. Fyson. I simply read it through. If I found that I could not sign any portion of it and it was not my opinion, then I could cut it out. If Mr. Fyson had gone two months before the report was due, the report would be much more mine and I should have made much more detailed enquiries before I signed. There was only one week between Mr. Fyson's handing over and the presentation of the report. Feeling that I was responsible for it, I carefully read it through. At the same time I cannot see that there are any deep enquiries behind this opinion which I can give.

Q. Then I take it that you did not have any document before you or any reports before you which went into the causes of this disaffection or disloyalty. You did not have any. I presume if you had, you would have put them here.

A. There was a mass of papers. I cannot remember at this precise moment. I think this report was actually written from memoranda and notes and so on.

Q. There were memoranda?

A. Very likely; I would not like to say positively. There was a mass of papers.

Q. So far as your knowledge goes, nothing came before you which can show that some enquiry was made into the causes of this disloyalty. There may be papers, but you did not come across them.

A. I am sorry the enquiries are general. I was discussing the situation. I would ask opinions of various people and would form an opinion. So would Mr. Fyson. Similarly as Deputy Commissioner, we would receive reports from Subordinate Magistrates, police reports, and so on. We would get a mass of things that gradually go to form one's opinion. I cannot go into definite ones. At the same time I cannot say that I held any formal enquiry. When I am speaking to people, I would ask them their reasons.

Q. Did you ask anybody the reason why this disloyalty or disaffection existed?

A. I cannot remember any actual conversation with any individual. But I had conversations and formed various general conclusions as a result of those conversations.

Q. What were the conclusions?

A. One conclusion of course was the way the Rowlatt Bill had been misrepresented. I heard many people saying the same thing.

Q. So before the passing of the Rowlatt Act, I take it that this disloyalty did not exist?

A. No; I would not say that. Disloyalty of the nature that suddenly appeared on the surface cannot be a matter of a fortnight's growth. There must have been other causes. I do not know if anybody had made up his mind. I do not know what these other causes were. But undoubtedly there must have been a variety of causes. One of the items that got into the heads of people was the extraordinary stories that were told and spread broadcast about the provisions of the Rowlatt Act.

Q. It was the exciting cause. What the predisposing causes were you could not say?

A. No; I cannot say what the predisposing causes were.

Q. And it had been going on for a long time before this Rowlatt Act?

A. I can only judge from the result. I came here on April 17th. When I came here, I was very much out of the ordinary administration of the province in a rather special district where one did not see what was going on in the same way as one would have known had he been in the Punjab.

Q. These remarks only apply to the town of Lahore. They do not apply to the district?

A. The district is dealt with by Mr. Fyson, in the report on Kasur of Mr. Marsden.

Q. Kasur also comes under this?

A. In Mr. Fyson's abridged report it is not separately given. There is a separate report of Mr. Marsden.

Q. I take it that this applies to Kasur and to Lahore?

A. That paragraph which we are discussing about the movement at Lahore being primarily anti-Government refers to Lahore town only.

Q. And not to the district?

A. No.

Mr. W. G. CLARKE, Deputy Superintendent of Police, Lahore.

By the President—

Q. You are Deputy Superintendent of Police, Lahore, Mr. Clarke?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. On the morning of the 6th, did you get orders as regards patrolling and visiting the pickets?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did you do that?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you just explain briefly what you saw as regards the mobs on the street on the 6th of April?

A. From the time the procession came down the Anarkali bazar?

Q. Yes.

A. Towards noon on the 6th, we were at the District Court Headquarters. The Inspector of the City came along and gave us information that there was a large procession coming down the Circular Road towards Lohari gate. Mr. Broadway told me to get on to Anarkali bazar and try and hold up the mob if it was coming through Anarkali way leading to Civil Lines. I got to Nila Gumbaz Chouk, which was the end of Anarkali bazar. I met the head of the procession and put up my hands as a signal for the procession to stop. They pressed forward. I turned my horse round and faced them again with the back of my horse towards Mul Chand's shop and again put up my hands and showed them signs to stop. They took no notice. I was forced forward and my horse turned. They began to strike the horse and wanted to go forward. I told them in the vernacular as best as I could that they were not allowed to go forward. There were some of them answering in English saying that they wanted to go forward. I told them that the orders were that they were not to go to the Mall. Then they struck the horse and pulled the reins and my horse ran forward and drove me as far as Mul Chand's shop. Looking down towards the Y.M.C.A. Chowk, I saw Mr. Fyson and Mr. Broadway coming down towards the Post Office just past the Y.M.C.A. building. They looked down my direction and I signalled them; then they came up. They also told the mob that they could not go on to the Mall. The mob was ordering us to get out of the way and to step back making way for them. While we were arguing with them Dr. Gokal Chand Naurang came on and said he would try and get the crowd back. As he could not get to the mob on foot, he asked for a horse; that was given. He led the mob back through Nila Gumbaz Chouk on to the Kutcheri Road leading to Bradlaugh Hall. I then went on to the Nila Gumbaz and found another mob being pressed back by certain Police Officers, foot Police and Cavalry. While trying to get those back, Dr. Gokal Chand turned up and eventually led that mob down Kutcheri Road to Bradlaugh Hall.

Q. And both mobs were taken away?

By Mr. Herbert, Government Advocate—

Q. Mr. Mitchell, you came to Lahore on the 17th April?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you find the ordinary civil courts and Magistrates doing their ordinary duties or were they closed or what?

A. The day I arrived was the day before the Easter Holidays and as far as I understand the ordinary criminal work was suspended at the end of the holidays on Monday. As far as I remember most of the ordinary criminal work of the criminal courts was suspended in the kutcheri.

Q. Monday, the 22nd?

A. The day after the Easter Sunday.

The President.—Practically the courts were just suspended for the ordinary period of Easter.

Mr. Herbert.—There are other witnesses to show that the courts were suspended after the Easter Holidays.

A. Yes, Sir; to Bradlaugh Hall. I returned rid Gol Bagh again to the District Courts and shortly afterwards Dr. Gokal Chand came along with Mr. Duni Chand. We discussed.

Q. Some arrangement was made with them?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. After that you were sent out by Mr. Broadway to make Police arrangements to close the roads, Nila Gumbaz Chouk and Market Chouk leading down the Mall towards the civil station?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. I think the meeting about which the arrangement was made did disperse in good time?

A. Yes, Sir; we had no trouble again that evening.

Q. You formed Police picquets after the meeting was over and returned?

A. Yes.

Q. I think you were not in the city afterwards?

A. No.

Q. On the 7th, as we know, the shops were opened as also on the 8th and 9th. Ram Naumi procession was on the 10th of April. Towards the evening, did you hear about the occurrences at Amritsar?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Then between 6.30 and 6.45, did you receive information that a large crowd was marching down the Mall?

A. Yes.

Q. You then proceeded on your bicycle and reached the Mall?

A. Yes.

Q. Where was the crowd at that time?

A. It was just between O'Dwyer Soldiers' Club and the English Warehouse, just about the last gate of the English Warehouse.

Q. Were there any police?

A. Yes.

Q. How many?

A. A dozen policemen.

Q. What were they doing?

A. I just saw they retired. As I was going up the Mall, a distance of 150 yards, I saw the Police trying to push them back, and heard of course hato and shouts of that kind. I saw the police showed back and heard the order "fire" given.

Q. Before the fire order was given, were policemen driven back?

A. They were being driven back.

Q. Could you see whether stones were being thrown at the police?

A. No.

Q. You were not in a position to see?

A. No.

Q. Then after the firing took place, what did the crowd do?

A. They backed; some of them went into the English Warehouse compound, and some went down the

- big drain, and some through the O'Dwyer Soldiers' Club gate on the left side.
- Q. How many men were with you?
- A. From that line I took four men through the opposite gate cut-off the mob at the porch of the O'Dwyer Club, turned them back on to the Mall and joined the remainder at the Mall. Then we got orders to push and beat them back?
- Q. Into the city?
- A. Yes, down the Mall.
- Q. Who were with you?
- A. There was a Sub-Inspector, but at the time orders were given there were Mr. Fyson, the Deputy Commissioner and Mr. Cocks, Deputy Inspector-General of the C. I. D.
- Q. Had Mr. Cocks been with Mr. Fyson for some time?
- A. They were both there. Mr. Cocks was standing on the right and Mr. Fyson in the centre of the Mall.
- Q. Did you succeed in driving the mob back?
- A. Yes. I got them right up to Nila Gumbaz Chouk; a few broke off through different roads that go down leading into the city.
- Q. During this time did anyone assault you?
- A. Yes.
- Q. Who was that?
- A. I have been looking for him ever since.
- Q. And have not been able to find him?
- A. Yes.
- Q. Was he one of the crowd?
- A. One of the mob.
- Q. In what way did he assault you?
- A. There is a road coming down the Mall. There is one that branches off to Mul Chand's. A portion of the mob went to the left going towards the market. The larger portion of the crowd turned towards the right. Just as this division took place, a man who was seen to come across caught me by the coat and swung me on the road. He was down on me in a second. I was underneath him. Sub-Inspector Moratab Ali, who was with me at the time, rushed up and hit him on the back of his shoulder with a revolver. He got up and ran towards the gate. At the same time a constable came up and raised his gun to fire.
- Q. Did he fire?
- A. I told him not to fire and pulled his gun.
- Q. Was your horse pulled?
- A. I was on foot from the time I got off my bicycle.
- Q. After that incident what occurred?
- A. When I got to Nila Gumbaz Chouk, I met the head of the mob.
- Q. Tell me where exactly Nila Gumbaz Chouk is?
- A. As you get past the Bank of Bengal, you turn to your right at the Bank of Bengal. That is the place.
- Q. You halted your men there and closed the road leading out of Anarkali Bazar?
- A. I waited there for a few minutes, thinking of course the mob would disperse; I saw it was getting larger. So I decided to push them back; I gave an order to load and warned them that if they did not disperse, I would fire; at the same time I blew the alarm whistle; I had a very rough time of it then. Mr. Broadway came along with some armed sowars, some cavalry, and was later followed by some foot police; they were followed later again by the Inspector of the Headquarters, Mr. Grey. We were telling the mob that if they did not disperse, they would be fired upon. Chaudhri Ram Bhaj Datt came out of the crowd and asked for time to disperse the mob.
- Q. What did he say to you?
- A. He said he would disperse them; he said he could not get through on foot; we gave him a sowar's horse.
- Q. What happened?
- A. He could not control the horse; he was thrown off the horse. He went on foot. There was an electric switch box on the pavement. (If you get on to that you will be able to see the people all round). Eventually he got on to the box to address the crowd. He was waving a white cloth.
- Q. Was the crowd very noisy at the time?
- A. We could not hear what was said; he was waving a white chadr as he called. By this time we got stones and mud thrown at us. Mr. Broadway gave order to fire a few rounds. They did not stop stone-throwing, and we had to fire upon them; we had stones right and left of us.
- Q. You fired in the direction of the low shop roofs where there is a shrine just near the square?
- A. Stoning of course did not stop, but continued. Meantime, Mr. Broadway sent a sowar to bring the Deputy Commissioner. Mr. Fyson, the Deputy Commissioner, shortly after came and he also went forward into the mob and warned them that if they did not disperse they would be fired on again. Mr. Broadway was again obliged to fire; the stoning did not cease.
- Q. Mr. Fyson himself was stoned?
- A. Every one, the cavalry, the men.
- Q. How long did this parleying with the mob, the attempts to get the crowd dispersed last, before the firing took place?
- A. Anarkali Bazaar is a very long street before you get to Lahore Chowk; from the time I entered Anarkali with these men, telling them that if they did not disperse they would be fired on, it was three-quarters of an hour I should say.
- Q. During the whole course of that time, the crowd had been behaving in the way you described?
- A. Oh, yes; they rushed at us 2 or 3 times and tried to get round us.
- Q. When the firing took place, did the crowd disperse then?
- A. Not at the first firing; it was only at the second firing that the police and cavalry advanced.
- Q. So far as the first firing was concerned were any casualties imposed upon the mob—I mean the firing in the direction of the low shop roofs?
- A. We did not notice at the time that there were any casualties. As we advanced, we saw a man lying on the pavement, I believe shot by the first firing.
- Q. Was he dead or wounded?
- A. No, he was alive at the time.
- Q. You say that the firing on the shop roofs did not effect the dispersing of the crowds; then a further order was given to fire?
- A. Yes, Sir.
- Q. And on this occasion, what happened? The crowd dispersed then?
- A. Of course; firing was followed immediately by the advance of the cavalry and police.
- Q. Did the crowd then disperse?
- A. Yes, Sir, partly; some went across the Gardens between the Lahori Gate and the Anarkali Bazar.
- A. I think the cavalry and the police advanced through the Circular Road as far as the gate leading to the Akbari Gate?
- A. Yes, Sir.
- Q. Mr. Broadway instructed you to go to the City Kotwali to ascertain the state of affairs there?
- A. Yes, Sir.
- Q. Did you go with sowars?
- A. Yes, Sir; with 8 or 10 sowars. Mr. Broadway brought them. I went to the Kotwali.
- Q. On your way, did you come in contact with any crowd?
- A. No; not on my way to the Kotwali.
- Q. Did you hear, when you arrived at the Kotwali, any shouting of the mob?
- A. Yes.
- Q. In what direction?
- A. From the Delhi Gate; and from the Bazar which leads on to the Railway Station.
- Q. When you heard that shouting, what did you do?
- A. I took a guard of a Sub-Inspector and 25 armed men, and went in the direction where the shouts were heard; reaching in the centre, I saw this mob approaching. I cried out "halt!" The mob split up into two parties. I stood guard there. After waiting a second or two I saw them clear off from the Bazar. I then met Mr. de Gale, Assistant Superintendent of Police, coming from the opposite direction of the Railway Chowk. He told me he had been just attacked by these men in the bazar.

Q. Had he been injured?

A. No.

Q. He had been attacked?

A. Yes.

Q. Then what did you do after that?

A. I went as far as the Railway Chowk with the guard and found all clear there. I sent the guard back, and I went to the Telegraph Office and reported to Mr. Broadway about this crowd in the Anarkali bazar.

Q. Later on at night, did you patrol McLeod Road?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You stayed at the Telegraph Office?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. During the day of 11th you did not return to the city?

A. No.

Q. Why was that?

A. Mr. Broadway asked me to remain with him. There were no proper arrangements made.

Q. Was it a risky matter, entering the city without a large force?

A. From what I heard it was very dangerous.

Q. I think you made arrangements along with Mr. Broadway for entering the city on the 12th accompanied by the military?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. On the 12th you did accompany the military under Colonel Johnson?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Now, near Hira Mandi on the 12th, did something occur?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Just explain in your own words what occurred.

A. As we got to what is known as the Hira Mandi, I saw a large crowd just opposite to what is known as Theatre Royal owned by Mr. Puri. It is a very high ground, and it looks on the big plain between the Fort and the city. We saw crowds there assembled with sticks. I was told that it was part of the Danda Fauj. General Clarke came along from the opposite direction. The cavalry were then sent down on to those plains and they tried to drive the mob into the city, the Hira Mandi side. Some of them went in and some bolted into the plains. Shortly afterwards, another large crowd came out of the Badshahi Mosque lane; the cavalry were then drawn up. In the meantime, a large crowd had assembled at a small grave in the Hira Mandi lane. The cavalry was drawn up at 80 or 40 paces from the mob. There is a clear road coming up to the Hira Mandi. Mr. Fyson advanced with the cavalry telling this mob that assembled at the Hira Mandi to disperse. While he was doing that, a second crowd that came in from the Badshahi Mosque got round the back of the cavalry and started throwing stones and sticks.

Q. On the cavalry?

A. Yes, Sir. Mr. Broadway called out to bring up the police; I galloped back to Puri's theatre, and I sent up a line of police and went to the head of the column and asked Colonel Johnson to go back. I said there was going to be trouble that side. The police were lined up in a line, and Mr. Broadway and Fyson were calling up to the mob that if they did not disperse they would be fired on. They began stoning. Eventually Mr. Fyson gave orders to fire. After that we advanced and the mob dispersed.

Q. You say that the crowd dispersed after that?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You then went back to your headquarters at the Telegraph Office?

A. Eventually; yes, Sir.

Q. Honorary Magistrates and Municipal Commissioners were asked by the authorities to do their best to prevent hartal and disorders on the 6th April?

A. I was not present at any of the meetings.

Q. You do not know anything about that?

A. No.

Q. Kindly look at your statement, paragraph F. There you say "on the 4th April Mr. Broadway attended a meeting convened by the Deputy Commissioner to urge Honorary Magistrates, Municipal Commissioners and others to do their best to prevent hartal and disorders on the 6th April." Is that your statement?

A. That, of course, I only heard. Mr. Broadway had attended a meeting held by the Deputy Commissioner.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. Honorary Magistrates and Municipal Commissioners were then asked to prevent the hartal?

A. It is only Mr. Broadway that was present at the meeting convened by the Deputy Commissioner in connection with the hartal. That was suggested and proposed.

Q. We have been informed that on one occasion one or two crackers were thrown. I take it from your statement in the Lohari Gate case that 2 or 3 fireworks were thrown, and they did not explode at all?

A. There was a light thrown. It is an omission on my part, there was no noise.

Q. You know that Duni Chand is a Municipal Commissioner for very many years in Lahore?

A. Yes.

Q. And at all the Ram Naumi affairs Honorary Magistrates and Municipal Commissioners do attend?

A. Certain Honorary Magistrates and Municipal Commissioners.

Q. You were also examined in the Hira Mandi case?

A. Yes.

Q. It is true that, according to you, no one was hurt with lathis?

A. I said they were struck with lathis.

Q. On the 12th no one was hurt?

A. So far as I can remember no one was hurt.

Q. The crowd, which cut off the cavalry on that occasion was the crowd which came out of the Badshahi Mosque and collected in the Hira Mandi open space?

A. Yes, as far as I could see.

Q. It is clear from your statement that at the time you were trying to disperse this mob Colonel Johnson was not present, but had gone ahead and you had to send a man to call him back?

A. I went back myself.

Q. See your statement. You say "seeing this I galloped back towards Puri's Cinema and sent forward some police and brought Colonel Johnson who was at the head of the column." Practically Colonel Johnson was somewhere near the Police?

A. Yes. He had gone on.

Q. On that occasion you arrested a person called Feroz Din?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. You asked him to go inside a mosque and clear off the mob there?

A. Yes.

Q. And he came back, and said he had cleared the mosque. There were 5 or 6 men behind the screen inside the room, and he was arrested?

A. Yes.

Q. You sent a sowar to the Deputy Commissioner?

A. I did not.

Q. Somebody. Mr. Broadway?

A. Yes.

Q. May I take it that that sowar went? There was no crowd?

A. No.

Q. It was cleared?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it not a fact that these lanes in the cities are very narrow?

A. This is not in the city.

Q. Is it not a very thickly populated place, i.e., Hira Mandi, Landa Bazar and Anarkali, are they not thickly populated localities?

A. Not thickly populated. There are shops there.

Q. It is not within the old walls of the city?

A. It is not in the city jurisdiction even.

Q. Do you consider it to be very strange and very extraordinary that if anything extraordinary happens connected with these places, within three or four minutes, or near Hira Mandi, won't 400 or 500 men collect immediately?

A. Not in Hira Mandi. There are shops in the Nila Gumbaz.

Q. If anything unusual happens in the Anarkali, is it not a place where three or four hundred men would collect at once?

A. I should say not.

Q. Neither at Nila Gumbaz?

A. No.

Q. Nor at Hira Mandi?

A. Not at night time, I should say.

Q. And in day time?

A. Lohari Gate is a pretty busy centre of the city during the day. It leads to Anarkali. So is Nila Gumbaz.

Q. So is it not possible for 5 or 6 hundred men to collect at Nila Gumbaz or at Lohari Gate if anything unusual happens at either of the places?

A. Yes, if business is going on as usual.

By the Hon'ble Mr. W. F. Rice—

Q. Mr. Clarke, when you came up on the Mall on the 10th: before you saw the police fall back and fire on the crowd, did you get near enough to hear the police ordering the crowd to fall back?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Was the crowd shouting or silent?

A. The noise was something awful.

Q. Then you describe it as a violent mob?

A. Most decidedly.

Q. Was that before it was fired on?

A. Yes. I could hear it from the Roman Catholic Cathedral. It was just like an electric engine noise.

Q. You mean that no reasonable person could possibly describe it as an orderly deputation of peaceful citizens whom it would have been safe to allow to proceed to Government House?

A. Not a bit.

At Lahore, Thursday, the 27th November 1919.

PRESENT:

The Hon'ble LORD HUNTER.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice RANKIN.

The Hon'ble Mr. W. F. RICE, C.S.L., C.I.E., L.C.S.

Major-General Sir GEORGE BARROW, K.C.B., K.C.M.G.

The Hon'ble Pandit JAGAT NARAYAN.

Sarfaraz Sahibzada SULTAN AHMAD KHAN.

Mr. H. WILLIAMSON, M.B.E., I.P., Secretary.

Mr. J. E. KEOUGH, Extra Assistant Commissioner, Lahore.

By the President—

Q. Are you a 1st Class Magistrate in Lahore?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. On the 6th of April I think you were in charge of the Railway Station?

A. I was.

Q. On that day hartal was held?

A. Yes.

Q. From your own experience can you say whether in connection with the holding of the hartal means were taken to prevent those who wanted to do their work from doing so?

A. That was the case.

Q. What instances did you see of attempted interference with individuals who were not anxious to participate in the hartal?

A. On the 6th itself I did not see very much in that way, but I was informed that some of the 2nd guards of the Railway had been interfered with when going to work, but I did not myself see any cases on the 6th.

Q. On a later date did you see any instances?

A. I was there again from the 10th to the 13th and then I saw some of the 2nd guards of the railway coming to work in disguise, and when questioned they said they had come in that way as they were afraid of being molested on the roads and having their uniform torn off, that there were men about holding them up from going to work. And later as a matter of fact four men were caught actually doing it and brought up to me, one of whom turned out to be a clerk in the Office of the Chief Examiner of Accounts, North-Western Railway.

Q. They were brought up to you in your Magisterial capacity?

A. No, they were brought up to me at the Station for a remand; they wanted a remand to put the men into the lock-up.

Q. I think you made arrangements for the deportation of Messrs. Harkishen Lal, Duni Chand and Ram Bhaj Dutt?

A. I took part in that, yes.

Q. On what date were they deported?

A. I am not quite certain of the date, but I think it was the 14th.

Q. They were subsequently tried?

A. By one of the Tribunals, yes.

Q. What was the offence with which they were accused?

A. I could not tell you, I did not have that before me.

Q. You yourself tried a number of cases of minor offences?

A. I did, Sir.

Q. Was that sitting alone as a Judge in the special Summary Courts?

A. That was sitting alone.

Q. How many cases altogether did you try?

A. I have not got my records, I should say about 22.

Q. Did you pass many sentences of flogging?

A. Yes, I passed, I think it was about 12 sentences of flogging.

Q. And did you superintend the carrying out of the floggings?

A. I superintended the carrying out of 11 of them.

Q. What was the maximum number of stripes that you administered?

A. Eighteen in one case. The rest were between 6 and 8.

Q. What were the nature of the offences for which you passed sentences of flogging?

A. They were for breaches of Martial Law orders, the breach of the Curfew order, and I think one case was the tearing down of a notice.

Q. Did you pass sentences of flogging for breach of the order as regards selling at a fixed price?

A. No, Sir, I had none of those cases. The only other cases besides those of breaches of Martial Law orders that I had were, a case of an ex-constable of police who was arrested for holding up the Deputy Superintendent of Railway Police from travelling in a tonga and making him get out and walk, and immediately after that the gang breaking the large street lamp near the underpass across the railway lines on the Shahdara side of the Lahore Railway Station. I tried the case under Martial Law and I tried two other cases of clerks trying to bring about a strike in the Military Accounts Office.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. Apart from breaches of the Curfew order, did you try any cases of unlawful assemblage, more than so many people together?

A. No, Sir.

Q. After a certain date is it not a fact that the infliction of flogging in public was stopped?

A. It was.

Q. About what time was that prohibition brought into force?

A. I think it was about the 18th of April.

Q. So that it was only carried out for two or three days?

A. It was only one day. I flogged publicly on the 17th and the very next day I think it was that we received orders. It was the 18th I think that the orders came.

Q. The carrying out of these floggings in public, was that an order made by your superiors?

A. I received that order from my superiors.

Q. On those occasions was there a large assemblage of people looking on?

A. Not very many at the Market Square. There must have been a couple of hundred people who had passed and some of them had stood there watching it. But just outside the Delhi Gate near the Kotwali there was a larger crowd.

Q. Were they all flogged one after the other on the same triangle?

A. On the same triangle.

Q. And how long did these proceedings go on at the Delhi Gate?

27 November 1919.]

Mr. J. E. KROUGH.

A. I do not think they lasted more than half an hour all told.

Q. Was there a cordon of police round about the triangle keeping people back?

A. No, there were only about 4 constables and a European Inspector of Police with me. Of course the Kotwali where the police were was only about 25 yards away.

Q. I do not want to go into details, I take it the persons who were flogged, their hands were fastened to this triangle?

A. Yes.

Q. Were they fastened by the feet?

A. Yes.

Q. Were they stripped naked?

A. Yes, all but a cloth put round them.

Q. And was the flogging administered with a cane?

A. With a thin rattan cane, the usual one used in the jail. They came from the jail with the triangle.

Q. A triangle with a platform or on the ground?

A. On the ground.

Q. And the actual Curfew order was dated the 16th of April?

A. That was dated the 15th of April.

Q. Then it would come into force for the first time on the evening of the 16th?

A. On the evening of the 16th.

Q. And these persons were flogged on the 17th?

A. On the 17th morning.

Q. They were flogged for breach of the Curfew order on the first day on which it was brought into effect?

A. The first day was really the 15th night.

Q. Was the order proclaimed in the morning?

A. The order was given some time about 12 o'clock.

It was sent out into the city for the information of the general public and posted up on all posts in the civil station.

Q. And the people whom you tried for breaches of that offence on the 16th and 17th were there any who were acquitted?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you have any cases in which it was alleged that there was insufficient time to appreciate the order, or insufficient notice?

A. No complaint of that sort was made to me.

Q. Did any of the persons whom you convicted at that time make that sort of defence?

A. Well they did not say they did not know. One man told me, for instance, that he had been overtaken while he was going home. He was a man belonging to Mozang village and he was caught right out the other side of the Mall going in quite a different direction, so that he was not going home. Statements of that sort were made to me, but they never said they did not know or that they had not sufficient time.

Q. What other defences were made apart from this?

A. Simply that the men were belated and were overtaken, that the gun went off before they had time to get home, that is what they tried to make out.

Q. Did you regard that as a relevant defence?

A. If the man had anything to substantiate his statements.

Q. Did you consider when you were trying those cases whether a sentence of fine might meet the case?

A. I gave a sentence of fine in a couple of cases; men who were obviously not fitted for flogging I fined.

Q. But apart from cases where you could not very well flog them, did you ever treat the sentence of flogging as the normal sentence for that sort of thing?

A. I did; I thought it the most salutary punishment that could be awarded. Most of them could ill-afford to pay fines; it would have operated hardly against them.

Q. Do you think they would have preferred a sentence of fine to a sentence of flogging?

A. I was not out to see their preferences, I was carrying out my duty.

Q. It was in your discretion to see that at any rate to begin with, an offence of this sort was not visited by an unnecessarily severe or unnecessarily humiliating punishment; that obviously was your duty as a Magistrate.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you sentence people who were convicted to flogging in exceptional cases of obstinacy or contumacy, or was that a prima facie sentence that you always meted out for that offence?

A. It was not exactly the prima facie sentence meted out; there were sentences of fine I gave. But the cases I sentenced to whipping I certainly thought that was the most deserving punishment for them at the time.

Q. Were the cases with any special circumstances of aggravation?

A. They seemed to me to be cases of deliberate disobedience of the order.

Q. Had you any general instructions from your military superiors as to the sentences to be meted out for breaches of the Proclamation?

A. No, Sir, except that we were told what sentences could be passed by us.

Q. You were told the limit was 30 lashes and so on?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. But had you any memorandum to work on as regards the normal standard of sentences for particular types of crime?

A. No, we had not, but I understood from Colonel Johnson that whipping would be a proper sentence for breaches of Martial Law, but we were not actually told to give any particular sentences.

Q. When you say you understood from Col. Johnson, was this before you commenced acting as a military Magistrate at all, or was it later on?

A. No, it was after I had flogged them.

Q. To begin with, before you started acting as a special Martial Law Magistrate had you anything to guide you apart from the statement of your powers, as to your discretion in awarding punishments, a memorandum or instructions of any sort?

A. No, Sir, except that when I went to the place I saw the triangle there.

Q. That is not much of a guide?

A. No, but I understood it was there in case I wanted it.

Q. You do not mean to say you sentenced people to flogging in order to give the triangle some use?

A. Oh no, not that.

Q. Can you tell me the maximum amount by which any person was out of time whom you sentenced to flogging on the first two days that you sat as a Military Magistrate?

A. Yes, some were found out between 12 and 1 at night. The Curfew order in those days I believe was 8 o'clock.

Q. Can you tell me if you remember the minimum amount of time in the case of any person you sentenced to flogging?

A. I don't believe I had any under 2 hours, after 10.

Q. So that there is no question of anything except a very substantial breach?

A. Yes.

Q. I see the sentence was carried out under your orders. Was there any medical man in charge at that time?

A. There was no medical man in charge.

Q. Were the sentences carried out on the same day that they were pronounced?

A. Yes.

Q. Then I take it, after being carried out, the offenders were simply released?

A. They were released and went away. In one case I might mention we had no medical man, but those men who were obviously unfit were not whipped. I sentenced one man to whipping and when they stripped him I saw he was suffering from hydrocele and I altered his sentence to a one rupee fine and he came to me and said he would rather be whipped than pay the fine. But I said he could not be whipped.

Q. After that were steps taken to see that the men were examined?

A. I saw them myself. I could not examine them medically as I had no knowledge.

27 November 1919.]

Mr. J. E. KROGH.

Q. It may have been a bit of luck that the fact that this man was suffering from hydrocele was discovered by a layman. But you will agree with me that if that is a good reason why a man should not be flogged, that sort of thing should be looked for?

A. Yes.

Q. After this case were any steps taken to make sure that a competent person should examine every prisoner?

A. After that the whippings all took place in the jail and the men must have been examined there.

Q. If the whippings took place in public there was no provision for medical examination?

A. None.

Q. Where were they examined in the jail?

A. In the jail no man is whipped unless he is medically examined.

Q. Can you tell me as regards your own cases on those two days what was the age of the oldest person whom you sentenced to be flogged?

A. I should say about 35, Sir.

Q. And had you any cases of young persons?

A. Down to about 20 years of age.

Q. Did you, in sentencing them, have regard to their caste or to their social status?

A. The men I whipped were all men of the lower strata of life. They were all men of the servant class and menial class.

Q. In the cases that you tried like that were any of the accused represented by a pleader or anything of that sort?

A. No, Sir.

Q. How long a time elapsed between the actual arrest and the whipping?

A. I cannot tell you, some of them had been arrested the night before and were flogged the next morning. The flogging took place at about 10 o'clock and they were in the lock-up possibly for 12 hours before being flogged.

Q. They would be arrested, say in the case you mentioned, at 1-30 or some time on the night of the 16th-17th and they would be brought before you on the morning of the 17th and tried and the sentence carried out the same morning?

A. Yes.

Q. Were they told that if they wanted to call evidence they would get an adjournment for the purpose?

A. Yes, I asked them if they had any evidence to produce and they said they were alone and had none.

Q. Were they asked if they would like to consult anybody or take any advice?

A. No, that I did not say to them.

Q. You simply asked them if they had any witnesses?

A. That is all.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. I think the procedure was that only the constable or the person who arrested them, only he made a deposition before you that the man was arrested at such and such a time?

A. It was not only constables, they were also arrested by the Indian Defence Force.

Q. It was only the one man who arrested him?

A. No, in the case of the Indian Defence Force it may have been three or four of them at the same time.

Q. Did you examine one person or all four of them?

A. Sometimes three or four.

Q. Was there any evidence before you that the arrested people belong to the criminal classes?

A. No.

Q. Was any evidence produced before you that they intended to do any mischief?

A. No, they had already done the mischief, they had disobeyed the order.

Q. Except that?

A. Nothing else, no.

Q. And was there any evidence produced as to what was their caste and what was their status?

A. In taking a man's name, I took his caste and his status. The accused gave me that himself.

Q. That is as to what his status was?

A. His caste and status; I would ask him what his occupation was and he would tell me.

Q. From the record will it appear as to what time he was arrested?

A. Yes, it would be apparent where he was arrested and at what particular hour.

By the Hon'ble Mr. W. F. Rice—

Q. Did you notice any instances of students taking a prominent part in the proceedings you have described about molesting people in tongas and that sort of thing?

A. I did not myself see those cases; I was on duty at the Station, but I was informed that there were students amongst them.

Q. Did you see students at all?

A. Yes, the station was visited all day long by numbers of students, many of whom had badges on their arms, or other distinguishing badges showing that they were prominently identifying themselves with the movement.

Q. As regards the severity of the sentence of flogging, you presumably realized that you had to see that Martial Law orders were obeyed?

A. It was my duty to see that.

Q. Do you think that if you and the other Magistrates had begun by inflicting fines as the ordinary penalty for breaches of Martial Law orders, such sentences would have been sufficiently deterrent for the purpose?

A. I do not think it would have been.

Q. Do you think the practice would have led to more numerous breaches of Martial Law orders?

A. It would certainly have done so.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. You said that flogging was administered because there had been deliberate disobedience of orders?

A. Yes, in my opinion.

Q. Is a conviction not in all cases due to a deliberate disobedience of orders?

A. It would be I should say.

Q. So how do you differentiate when you say flogging was given because of a deliberate disobedience of orders? Every case is a deliberate disobedience of orders in which a conviction was held?

A. In which a conviction was held it must have been.

Q. What was the force of saying that flogging was administered because of a deliberate disobedience?

A. That was only in exercise of the discretion vested in me.

Q. But you said flogging was administered because of a deliberate disobedience?

A. Yes, that is so; I held it to be so.

Q. Every conviction implies that, so there is no special significance?

A. No special significance attached to these particular cases.

Q. You have said they were mostly cases in which they had been seen out two or three hours beyond the time they were allowed to be out?

A. Yes.

Q. Had you any cases in which people were brought before you for a less duration of time?

A. I could not tell you now what duration of time it was, but I don't think there were any cases which came to me of less than a man who was caught before 9 o'clock.

Q. One hour?

A. Yes.

Q. You convicted those also?

A. Yes.

Q. And would you have convicted also if any one had been seen out half an hour after the time?

A. It would all depend on the circumstances of the case. I cannot say whether I would have convicted, but if it was a case that required it I would have done so.

Q. My point really is this; it would certainly be a breach of the order if a man was caught only 5 minutes late?

A. I acquitted some, but I cannot say if I would if a man was a few minutes late.

27 November 1919.] Mr. J. E. KEOUGH—concluded—Lt.-Col. the Hon'ble W. F. NORTH.

Q. You acquitted some ?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Merely because they were out for a short time ?
 A. No, where a man was obviously overtaken by the Curfew signal, where he was possibly a servant of some gentleman going home, and if I found that he was caught anywhere near his home, that he actually was going home, I held he was going home and acquitted him.
 Q. I suppose the sentences when passed were immediately carried out ?
 A. They were immediately carried out.
 Q. About the presence of a medical man and medical examinations I suppose it is a rule in jails that no one is flogged unless he is medically examined ?
 A. As a Magistrate I have sentenced people to sentences of flogging and the man has been sent back to me pronounced unfit for flogging, and I have had to alter the sentence.
 Q. So I take it that is a regular rule that no one should be flogged unless he is medically examined ?
 A. Medically examined in the jail.
 Q. That did not apply to floggings outside ?
 A. It did not ; the day I administered floggings outside there was no medical man present outside.
 Q. Do you not think the rule applies to the people and not to the place ? The object is to see that weak persons are not flogged ; it does not matter whether they are flogged in jail or outside ?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Why was it not thought necessary to examine them outside ?
 A. I am not out to criticise the orders of my superiors. My superiors did not order it, and I carried out my orders.
 Q. And you said these people who were flogged before you were all of them men of the lower strata of society ?
 A. Yes.
 Q. And therefore I take it they were generally illiterate ?
 A. I do not say they were all illiterate, some might have been able to read and write.
 Q. Perhaps one in a hundred might have been ?
 A. I could not give you the proportion, there are so many who can read and write now.
 Q. At any rate not educated people ?
 A. They were not what you call educated but I do not think they were illiterate.
 Q. They might know reading and writing ?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Did you take any evidence that the men who were brought before you knew about the orders ?
 A. They all knew about the orders. They obviously knew from the statements they made.

By Mr. Herbert, Government Advocate—

Q. Do you know whether the civil and criminal courts were open or closed from the 11th to the 13th ?
 A. The criminal and civil courts were closed from the 11th to the 13th. I think it was on the 14th that the Treasury Officer alone was able to return to his duties. The courts did not open till the 22nd.

By the President—

Q. What is the ordinary vacation at that time ?
 A. From the 18th to the 21st were holidays, but from the 11th to the 17th the courts were not open.
 Q. What was the reason for their not opening ?
 A. The disturbances commenced here on the night of the 19th.
 Q. I take it it was not safe ?
 A. Personally I was not able to go as I was at the station from the 10th to the 13th afternoon ; and the other courts were certainly not open till the 14th.
 Q. Have you any personal knowledge as to whether the High Courts were sitting from the 11th to the 14th ?
 A. I have no personal knowledge.
 Q. Have you any knowledge that any cases were decided by the subordinate judges ?
 A. I have personal knowledge that no cases were decided by the subordinate judges. They were all on duty in different parts of the city.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. May I take it that from the 11th to the 14th the criminal magistrates were not doing their ordinary work because they were posted in different parts of the city ?
 A. It was considered that the courts should not be held.
 Q. Were any such orders passed ?
 A. Not that I have seen except the orders posting these magistrates.
 Q. Is it not a fact that on every occasion when a big fair takes place the criminal magistrates are assigned different duties and they do not hold their regular courts on those days ?
 A. I do not know.
 Q. Take for instance the Ram Naumi affair, are not magistrates assigned different duties on occasions like this ?
 A. Not except there are holidays. On such days the court is closed and a magistrate may be on a different duty.
 Q. How many subordinate magistrates are there ?
 A. About six.
 Q. And the treasury was open ?
 A. I believe it was.

Lt.-Col. the Hon'ble W. F. NORTH, Officer Commanding Fort, Lahore

By the President—

Q. You are Officer Commanding the Lahore Fort ?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. You commanded at the fort for some time prior to these disturbances ?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. Were you in the habit of going out daily about the city ?
 A. Not in the city.
 Q. For some time prior to the 10th of April last did you notice any thing about the demeanour of the people whom you met ?
 A. They had changed considerably from two years before.
 Q. Then coming to the period of the riots did you notice any of the incidents of the 10th of April ?
 A. No, not on the 10th, we were all down at the club at six o'clock.
 Q. On the morning of the 11th did you notice anything ?
 A. I was making arrangements round the fort and while I was just getting back to my orderly room a message came up from the sergeant of the guard to say that a very large and noisy crowd had collected outside the iron rails at the gates of the fort—the only entrance—so I hurried down at once to see and I found that there was a very large crowd outside the gate. The crowd was very dense, probably several thousands. I found that they were trying to pull the rails down and they were abusing all the men who were standing just inside the gate.

Q. In what sort of language were they abusing them ?
 A. There was one expression that I heard a good many times which I was told afterwards meant " let us kill the white pigs ". This expression was shouted at us.
 Q. Was anything else done ?
 A. They were trying effectively to pull the gates down.
 Q. Did they adopt any threatening attitude ?
 A. They were armed with lathis and bamboos with iron axes fixed on at the top.
 Q. Were any missiles thrown ?
 A. Not through the rails but when a young officer was going out of the fort—he was in charge of the clothing department—he had a great deal of trouble in getting out of the gate—he was going on his motor bicycle ; and as he went away they threw brickbats at him but he got away without apparently being touched, but they threw a great quantity of stuff after him.

27 November 1919.]

Q. Did they spit at you ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Was that done by one or two or were there many cases ?

A. They were doing it all along the circular road. I saw this personally at a period before the 10th. They were spitting through the rails and at the men.

Q. In what state was the crowd when you saw them ?

A. They were very hostile. They were trying to pull the rails down.

Q. Did the crowd seem to be in a state to respect law and order ?

A. No, in fact it looked at one time that we would have to fire.

Q. I think you reinforced your guard ?

A. Directly I got a message I rushed about twenty men down to reinforce the guard.

Q. Had you given any orders as to what was to be done ?

A. I gave them orders that the crowd should not be allowed to try and pull down the rails.

Q. Was it possible for the rails to have given way with the number of people pushing them ?

A. They were pretty stout rails but there were five or six thousand people. The weight of the people might have brought them down.

Q. How long did the crowd continue in front of the gate ?

A. I suppose it must have been from 8 o'clock up to noon.

Q. And during that time the crowd showed a defiant attitude ?

A. Yes, the crowd gradually grew from a crowd to a mob during that period.

Q. Were you on the fort walls overlooking the Badshahi Mosque when a large meeting was held ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did you notice whether an official was assaulted ?

A. As far as I could see the crowd was very hostile. With our glasses we could see that there was a party made up of a mixed crowd who were hustling some one. They were hustling him with the idea of pushing him down the steps.

Q. Were you on the wall along with other officers ?

A. Yes.

Q. What attitude did the crowd adopt ?

A. When we showed ourselves they began to shake their fists and put out their tongues.

Q. At about what time was that ?

A. It is hard to say. It would be about midday. It was very difficult to fix the time as I had to make arrangements inside the fort.

Q. Were you making arrangements in the fort to deal with any contingency that might arise ?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you consider the situation a serious one ?

A. It was serious for the fort because we were entirely isolated from the rest of the town.

Q. What forces had you in the fort ?

A. I had before Colonel Johnson sent me reinforcements about 120 men all told. He sent me reinforcements for the purpose of garrisoning the waterworks.

Q. Did you hear that the crowd were fired on some time later ?

A. Yes, they were fired on by the police at a point where the road comes out of the city very nearly due south of the fort.

Q. Was that subsequent in time to what you observed ?

A. Yes, Sir, that was during the afternoon.

Q. I see you say that you noticed two policemen fire in the air ?

A. We all did because we were looking to see what would happen. The police were trying to push them back into the city. And two policemen deliberately fired into the air. We could see the flash and the smoke go above the crowd. Their rifles were at an angle of 45 degrees. And at the time I mentioned it to another officer—why are the police firing in the air ?

Q. I think you got a message to be ready to handle a large hostile crowd moving through the city in the direction of the fort ?

A. Yes, a telephone message came to the effect that a very large crowd were coming out of the city. I had already had orders to assemble at the south gate of the Badshahi Mosque where there was cavalry. I rushed about 100 men on to the south wall at once with two Lewis guns.

Q. How far was that from the crowd ?

A. I should think inside 300 yards.

Q. On that occasion what was the demeanour of the crowd ?

A. Well as far we could make out they were taking with them some body for burial and the crowd when they came out tried to break up from the road down towards the south gate of the Badshahi Mosque. When they saw us they stopped and jeered and shook their fists. There was a good deal of shouting. Of course they were too far away to offer any violence but they were shaking their lathis and making a great deal of noise.

Q. On any of the subsequent days did you take any measures to deal with the crowd ?

A. No, Sir, we were not troubled.

Q. Were you kept in the fort ?

A. We were kept in the fort for seven days.

Q. During that time were you isolated ?

A. Yes.

Q. How did you communicate ?

A. We had our signal station at the top of the tower. We signalled to the cantonments.

Q. Did you think it safe to allow a single man to leave the fort ?

A. No man was allowed to leave the fort for seven days ; and after that in parties of ten with their rifles.

Q. Were these precautions in your opinion necessary in view of the situation ?

A. Yes, Sir. I communicated with the Officer Commanding, Civil Area, to get sanction that the men might be allowed to go out as they had been shut in. He agreed that they should not go out singly but that they should go out in parties of ten and that they should take their rifles. They had to be back in the fort by six o'clock.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin.—

Q. Did they use the fort during Martial Law for any special purpose ?

A. Yes, for prisoners.

Q. How many prisoners did you have at the beginning of this time to look after ?

A. I first had four sent up to me. They had chits on them to say that they were very bad and that they should be carefully looked after. Then there came a lot of students. They were about four or five hundred. I think these came from the various colleges. That would be the occasion when a party of them and their professors were marched to the fort. I think there must have been over 400 because I had two long double lines drawn up when they were marched in.

Q. Apart from that were any locked up during the period of Martial Law ?

A. I think only three men were locked up and confined. The guard room was very small. I had room for three.

Q. A party of students who came—were they with you for any length of time ?

A. They were with me for about thirty-six hours.

Q. Where were they kept during their stay ?

A. It was very hot in the day so we put them in the Darbar Hall, a very big place with pillars, and at night time we put them on the top of the roof after the sun had gone down. I had no men to guard them so I put them on the top where they would be safe. I put a sentry at the bottom. It was about 60 feet up.

Q. Speaking broadly were their conditions during their confinement quite reasonable ?

27 November 1919.]

Lt.-Col. the Hon'ble W. F. NORTH.

A. As much as we could do for them we did. They had cooks for Hindus and cooks for Muhammadans and they had their own bhistis and sweepers and I had a party of 18 Afghans who were sent in too and they were accommodated in the same way.

Q. Was the fort used for carrying out punishments at all?

A. No, Sir. I had some of them whipped for misbehaving themselves. They were given six light strokes by our Police Sergeant.

Q. These were people who misbehaved themselves in the fort?

A. Yes, Sir. I had no punishment given outside.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. On the day on which these rails were being pulled was any meeting going to be held at the Badshahi Mosque?

A. I could not tell you, Sir. I was up at the fort and this crowd was notified to me by the commander of my guard.

Q. I want to know whether you consider that the crowd was collecting there because a meeting was going to be held and a part of that crowd misbehaved or as a matter of fact the object of the crowd was to assault the fort?

A. I think the object of the crowd was to get into the fort.

Q. Had any of them any fire-arms or any other kind of arms?

A. They had lathis and some of them had iron rings on top of them.

Q. About this pointing of fingers and putting out their tongues which you saw, you saw it through your glasses?

A. No, Sir. The men that were down at the gate of the fort saw them. They were then 20 feet from them. But the men in a body at the Badshahi Mosque I distinctly saw with my glasses.

Q. When were you asked for the first time to give your statement to this committee?

A. About three weeks ago.

Q. Before this you were never asked to detail these facts either in connection with the Badshahi Mosque case or the other riot case?

A. I went down to Amritsar about the middle of May while Martial Law was going on. I did not get back here till the end of October.

Q. The fact that they were trying to pull down the railings, was it anywhere reported?

A. No, in fact we did not allow it.

Q. What I mean to say is that a sort of diary is kept, and I want to know whether this fact, that on the 11th a large crowd came and wanted to pull down the railings, is entered in that diary?

A. No, Sir.

Q. Had you given that information to General Beynon?

A. I think I told Colonel Johnson.

Q. There is no entry anywhere that there was an attempt made to pull down the railings, is there no written information anywhere to that effect?

A. If there had been any serious steps taken to repulse the crowd, it would appear in the official report.

Q. About this firing, on what date did you see this firing?

A. Well, Sir, it might have been the afternoon of the 11th, or it might have been the 12th. I could not say exactly. I would not commit myself to which date it was, but it is one of the dates.

Q. Is it not a fact that the firing on the 12th did take place when it was night?

A. Not at this particular spot. I could not say which date it was. I think it must have been on the occasion when Colonel Johnson had marched through the city and his rear-guard had been attacked. We saw two men fire in the air.

Q. Could you see Hira Mandi from where you were in the Fort?

A. I don't know whether it comes out of the city.

Q. There are two or three mosques near by, could you see them?

A. No, I could not see the mosques.

Q. If there were any low buildings near the mosque, would they be visible to you?

A. No, Sir, because the street comes right down like that and turns away towards the Taksali gate.

Q. So the firing which you saw was probably on the 10th?

A. No, Sir, certainly not.

Q. You are quite certain?

A. I am quite certain.

Q. It might be on the 10th, I suggest it?

A. No.

Q. Practically you say there was no firing on the 11th, it was probably on the 12th?

A. Yes.

Q. That is, it was the occasion when Colonel Johnson went inside the city?

A. I think it must be so.

Q. Did you report this to the police officers or to anybody else?

A. No, it is no business of ours.

Q. Now about the behaviour of the students, was any complaint made to anybody, was any attempt made to find out who they were? I am talking of what happened before the 10th. Some boys misbehaved themselves. Was any attempt made to find out who the boys were?

A. No.

By Major-General Sir George Barrow—

Q. You had 100 men in the Fort?

A. About that.

Q. Had you any machine guns?

A. I think there were 6 of the old Vickers maxim guns, and I had 4 Lewis guns of the old pattern.

Q. Any artillery in the Fort?

A. There are 63 old-fashioned ones and 4 field guns.

Q. The old 15-pounder?

A. Yes.

Q. Then it is a large fort besides the garrison?

A. It is a mile and half round.

Q. Does it contain a large amount of Government stores and ammunition?

A. It is full of Government stores and ammunition.

Q. If the mob had succeeded in breaking down that gate and getting in would you have kept them back?

A. Yes, Sir, because we had machine guns on the wall. They were all moveable and we could have moved them about.

Q. If they have broken down that gate, you would have considered it absolutely necessary to fire?

A. Quite so.

Q. Did those students who were in the Fort make any complaints to you regarding their treatment?

A. No, Sir. We provided them everything according to their religion. Everything they had was their own, they had their own cooks, their own rations, their own bhistis. Everything was supplied to them individually. They had plenty to eat and were not put to any discomfort.

Q. Was their behaviour all right?

A. Excellent. I had to warn them as to what would happen if they misbehaved. I had at one time nearly 600 prisoners.

Q. You say that you think the date when the police fired was the 12th?

A. I am quite certain, because I was in the Gymkhana Club at the time, and I did not get away from the Club until after 9 o'clock because of the crowds.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. Now this railing outside the Fort, is it a very strong railing?

A. Quite sufficiently strong. If there is anybody to maintain it from behind it is strong enough but a crowd could quite easily pull it down.

Q. And the crowd at the time was sufficiently strong to do it?

27 November 1919.] Lt.-Col. the Hon'ble W. F. NORTH—continued—SAYAD MUHAMMAD SHAH.

A. They were five or six thousand strong.
 Q. Did they damage any railing at all?
 A. No.
 Q. And you said that Lieut. Tapp went out of the Fort. Did he go through the crowd?
 A. Yes, he had to go through the crowd.
 Q. He went alone?
 A. He went on his motor bicycle.
 Q. He was not hurt in any way?
 A. Luckily he was not hurt, but they were throwing brickbats and stones.
 Q. When such a large crowd had been throwing stones, don't you think that some one from such a large crowd, through which he passed, would have hurt him?
 A. It all depends. He got on to his motor bicycle. It had a self-starter.
 Q. The crowd being very thick and he being aimed at by the crowd, don't you think that even one would strike him?
 A. It was curious. I never heard that he had been hurt. He did not complain.
 Q. Now about this, you say "I had a telephone message to be ready to handle a large hostile crowd moving through the city in direction of the Fort. This was found to be a big procession taking the bodies of some people killed by the firing to be buried. The demeanour of the crowd on emerging from the city was so threatening, great shouting and shaking of fists, that, owing to orders I had received to keep the space opposite to the south gate of the Badshahi Mosque clear, I rushed 100 men on to the south wall of Fort to support the cavalry picket down below us. I also had some Lewis guns on the wall. I was quite certain at the time that if we had not had the men quickly on to the wall, the crowd would have tried to rush the Badshahi Mosque gate. From the wall to the road on which the crowd were, is not more than 200 yards at the most." What was the objection to the crowd going into the Badshahi mosque?

A. I had received written orders or orders given by signal that nobody should be allowed inside the mosque.

Q. There are no Military stores there?

A. No, but those were my orders.

Q. In your opinion no harm would have resulted if they had gone into the mosque?

A. I had no opinion of my own, but I had orders that nobody should be allowed inside the mosque.

Q. Don't you know among the Muhammadans it is considered a very good thing to hold funeral prayers in an important mosque?

A. I don't know that.

Q. That crowd was, I notice from this paragraph quite orderly in the sense that it did not molest anybody?

A. I would not like to say orderly. I would say it was very hostile in its attitude and it was shouting at us. If the cavalry had not been there, they would have gone into the mosque. There is no doubt about that. There was a procession coming and it went off, but the crowds did not molest anybody.

SAYAD MUHAMMAD SHAH, Extra Assistant Commissioner, Lahore.

By the President—

Q. You are an Extra Assistant Commissioner at Lahore?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. On the 6th April, were you at the kutchery?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You were posted there by the Deputy Commissioner?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What instructions did you get?

A. I had to sit there in the Deputy Commissioner's place and receive all communications from different quarters. As the pickets were posted they had to send me the messages by telephone and these I had to communicate to the proper places.

Q. At about half-past 11 you got information as to a large crowd that was gathering?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. When you got that information did you accompany the City Inspector to the place where it had assembled?

A. Yes Sir, I did.

Q. Would you tell us what you saw on that day as regards the conduct of the crowd?

A. I met them in the bazar near the Lohari Gate. They were in thousands, bare headed, and they were shouting "Rowlatt Bill ki Jai" At the same time they were not allowing anybody to pass by that street. They even told me to take off my turban which I did, because I knew that if I did not do so there would be trouble which I wanted to avoid. They did not allow any person to pass by those two bazars and they gathered both in Anarkali and in the Changar Mohalla behind Anarkali because they did not want people to pass by that route.

Q. Was that at the time when the City Inspector was with you?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did he endeavour to get the mob to return?

A. He requested them because it was impossible to make any endeavour at the time.— He and I requested some of them that they should change the route because that was not the Bradlaugh Hall route. They were very much excited and they threatened to assault him. Practically they lifted their hands, but I came in between and said that we should stick to what we had decided and I took him aside to a street and asked him to go away, otherwise there was a great danger of his being assaulted.

Q. About this time the City Inspector went one way and you went another way?

A. He left, and then I was alone.

Q. Were you alone with the mob?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Where did you go to with the mob?

A. Of course I had also brought with me one of the orderlies of the Deputy Commissioner so that I might send news to the Deputy Commissioner where he should meet, because I found that it was not safe for European officers to walk on the streets as the mob was very much excited and their appearance would aggravate matters. So I asked him to come to a safe place near the Nila Gumbaz, and I sent for them there.

Q. Did you think that there was a prospect of the mob resorting to violence?

A. Of course, much toleration was shown by the authorities otherwise there was every chance of a great trouble.

Q. When you accompanied the mob as far as the Nila Gumbaz, did you find the Deputy Commissioner, the Superintendent of Police and some other police officers?

A. Yes, Sir, they had come there.

Q. On that point, as we have heard already, you managed to get the mob to go in the direction of Bradlaugh Hall?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. I think we have got the incidents of that day, and therefore I shall not trouble you. Now on the night of the 9th April, were you put in charge of the Ram Naumi procession along with Lala Ram Lal and the City Kotwal?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did that procession start at about 7 o'clock and reach Dabbi Bazar at about 1 o'clock in the morning?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. That was one o'clock on the morning of the 10th?

A. Yes, Sir, exactly.

Q. During the route what was the attitude of the people forming the procession? Did they make any references to Government or Government action?

A. Well, Sir, in the speeches of course some references were made but not by the general public. Only the speakers who made the speeches made certain references.

Q. Were speeches made at different points where the procession halted?

A. Yes, Sir.

27 November 1919.]

SAYAD MUHAMMAD SHAH.

Q. What sort of speeches did they make about the Government?

A. They were on Hindu-Muhammadan unity, that was the subject.

Q. Did they say anything defying Government or anything of that sort?

A. They said 'we should not care for this. We should only unite together. Then we need not fear anybody.' Naturally there are two parties, one is Government and the other is the public. So any reference in which the Government is not respected or its officials are not respected, it means that they avoided it.

Q. Was that the ordinary sort of Ram Naumi procession to which you have been accustomed in the past or was that anything different?

A. Quite different, Sir.

Q. What was the difference?

A. Ram Naumi procession is held on the birthday of Maharaja Ramchandarji. On that sacred occasion generally, processions are formed with the object of explaining certain historical events and certain poems are recited and ceremonies performed, but nothing of the kind was done in this procession. Instead of all this the attitude of the people was so rude that they did not allow any Honorary Magistrate or respectable gentleman of the town to join them, and secondly they had particularly requested the Deputy Commissioner to put me in charge of this procession and nobody else. When I went there, I saw that none of the City fathers were there. All the leaders who had signed the meeting to protest against the Rowlatt Bill were there in place of the old leaders, and those leaders were garlanded and they led the procession.

Q. Does it come to this, that this procession became rather a political demonstration than a religious procession?

A. Quite so, Sir.

Q. I think you reported what you say the next morning or on the morning of the 10th?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. After the stone-throwing incident on the 10th, were you put in charge of the Anarkali Civil Area?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did you continue in charge till the 25th April?

A. Yes, Sir, with the exception of one day when Martial Law was declared I was sent back to do my ordinary duties, but again I was recalled under the Martial Law orders.

Q. What sort of duties during that period did you discharge?

A. My duty was to see that nothing happened in those places, that there was no breach of the peace in the Anarkali Bazar, because it is a very important place in this town. It is a road which leads to the Upper Mall, and most of the respectable citizens of the town, Rases and gentlemen of all classes, Pleaders and others, generally pass by that bazar. From morning till evening, people pass by that side, and I had to see that no breach occurred.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. Were you here in the time of Mr. Tollinton?

A. Yes, Sir. I came here in September. For two or three months I worked under him.

Q. Do you know that his best endeavours were directed towards bringing about Hindu-Muhammadan unity?

A. It may be so, I was his subordinate.

Q. Do you know that at such big fairs he used to give Sanads to people who had endeavoured to bring about Hindu-Moslem unity?

A. Everywhere it is done.

Q. I am asking you about Lahore. At such big fairs if he knew that everything had passed off smoothly and that any person had done his best to bring about Hindu-Muhammadan unity, Sanads were issued by Mr. Tollinton. Do you know anything about it?

A. I don't remember. I have not seen anything.

Q. You said for one day you did your ordinary duty?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What was that date?

A. I don't exactly remember. It may be the 16th or 17th.

Q. Approximately it would be either the 16th or the 17th when you did your ordinary duties as an Extra Assistant Commissioner?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Do you remember hearing any speeches where any speaker gave expression to his views saying that they would turn out the British Government from India or did you hear any disrespectful references towards the King-Emperor?

A. I cannot exactly give you the names, because it was not my duty to record these things. This was the duty of other officers. I had to look to the arrangements.

Q. Practically you were not always present at the points where the speeches were delivered?

A. Yes, I was always present.

Q. If you were, you may have heard those speakers?

A. I did.

Q. Then I want to know whether in any one of those speeches any one had said anything disrespectful towards the King-Emperor?

A. I do not mean to say that they openly said anything. As an Indian Judge, you know that when we talk in the vernacular sometimes it has a double meaning, and so they were speaking in this way.

Q. Therefore you say that ironical speeches were made?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Against the King-Emperor?

A. I cannot say so, not against the King-Emperor.

Q. I want to know if any ironical speeches were made against the King-Emperor?

A. The King-Emperor was not mentioned.

Q. Were any speeches made to sever the connection of the British Empire?

A. No, not in that way.

Q. Therefore according to you anything that was said was against the officials, against the Local Government or against the Deputy Commissioner or the Commissioner, that is against the Government?

A. Deputy Commissioners and His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor were not in question. It was a question against the Government.

Q. And therefore the Government constituted by whom?

A. The Government is constituted by all the officials.

Q. Therefore I want to know whether there was any resentment against something done by the officials, against the King-Emperor or against the British Empire?

A. We people are generally sent by the Government to look after these things and we are in charge of these things. Generally we know people give due respect to us and the mob always obeys our orders, but on that day we were altogether absolutely ignored. We were there as their guests. You know, Sir, that processions are generally carried on under certain licenses, and in those licenses conditions are laid down which are explained to the conveners.

Q. Therefore I understand that because the mob did not show that respect which was due to you, you took them to be disrespectful?

A. Personally, I don't mind that. They were not respecting the conditions of the license which was issued to them by the authorities.

Q. When you say that there was a defiance of authority, do you mean that the procession was not caring for the conditions that were laid down in the license that was issued to them?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Now what was the condition that was laid down?

A. Generally, the condition is that the procession should go on smoothly because, you know, Sir, that it was just after the excitement of the 6th April. So Government very liberally,—of course it should not have been allowed,—allowed them to have this procession. They had not expressly told that on this occasion they will hold public meetings and will give political speeches,

27 November 1919.]

SAYAD MUHAMMAD SHAH.

but if they had done so that would have been quite a different thing.

Q. I have not yet understood. What was the condition in the license issued to the procession, there should be no violence used, is it not so?

A. Not only violence.

Q. What was the condition of which there was a breach?

A. It rests with the authorities.

Q. I want to know what was the condition of which there was a breach. Will you kindly give me the words of that condition? What was the breach of the order that was made? Was it that the procession should not stop, or that there should be no violence used? Is it not so? What was the condition of which there was a breach?

A. It rests with the authorities to see what sort of processions should be allowed.

Q. I want to know what was the conditions of which there was a breach. Will you kindly give me the conditions which were not observed?

A. Instructions were that they should not cause obstructions. They obstructed and people were not allowed to pass through that street, because they were holding meetings and making speeches. I had to manage to let people pass through that street. It was not in the conditions of the license. They halted at places and thousands of people would collect and they could not be let to have the place at their pleasure.

Q. Again I request you to give me the condition of the license of which there was a breach.

A. That was that they should not obstruct the streets.

Q. Was it in that license?

A. They should not obstruct the streets. They should pass on smoothly; they should not sit somewhere.

Q. Was it stated in the license that they should not stop at any place?

A. I have not seen the license exactly.

Q. You have not seen the license?

A. No.

Q. Therefore you cannot say as to what were the words of the license?

A. At least I knew my own duties.

Q. I am not concerned with your duties. You have not seen the license and therefore you are not aware of it. That is what I want to know.

A. I was only in charge to see that no breach occurred.

Q. I know that. I know what your duty was. I want to know this as a matter of fact. You had not seen the license and therefore you were not aware of the conditions of the license?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the number of the crowd? Was that about 15,000 or 20,000 or more than that?

A. It might be more than that.

Q. And according to you a procession in which there are more than 20,000 persons would not obstruct any road, street or bye-lane?

A. If they do not sit.

Q. You were not aware that they were prohibited from sitting or stopping any where by the Deputy Commissioner?

A. I had to use my own discretion.

Q. I am not concerned with your discretion just now. I will come to it in a minute. So far as the order of the Deputy Commissioner was concerned, were they prohibited from stopping or from sitting any where?

A. There were no express instructions to me.

Q. Have you seen any Muharram procession in your life?

A. Yes, many, Sir.

Q. Is it not a fact that every tazia that passes through a street passes 10, 20 or 30 yards, then stops for 5 minutes, 10 minutes or 15 minutes, and then again passes, then stops and again proceeds? Is that your experience or not?

Q. Yes.

Q. And you considered that also to be a breach of the license?

A. No.

Q. Are you or are you not in favour of Hindu-Muhammadan unity?

A. Yes, certainly.

Q. Do you or do you not know that this disagreement between the Hindus and Muhammadans has been made much of by the officials here so far as the granting of reforms is concerned?

A. Yes, I know.

Q. Then if any person tries to bring about Hindu-Muhammadan unity, is he to be condemned or to be praised?

A. Yes, he is to be praised, but... (not completed).

Q. What is your qualification?

A. If in reality there is Hindu-Muhammadan union, it is welcome. Merely making a show on certain occasions, which of course as an Indian you as well as myself know, is done generally. They were simply showing it one night just after the occurrences of the 6th. If it meant to make a show to anyone, it must be to Government, I think, and to nobody else.

Q. I think you are in touch with Muhammadan opinion or with Muhammadan feelings.

A. Yes, both.

Q. You must have been reading newspapers of the last three or four months?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Do you not agree that a great change has come about in the Hindu-Muhammadan relations, during the last six months?

A. I do not agree with you.

Q. Do you or do you not know that there have been no riots on the Bakr-Id occasion throughout the Province this time? That is the important occasion when the Hindus and Muhammadans quarrel?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you or are you not aware that throughout this country, there have been no quarrels between Hindus and Muhammadans during the last Bakr-Id festival?

A. Yes.

Q. There have been no quarrels and riots?

A. Not in this Province.

Q. Have you heard that there have been any riots anywhere else during the last Bakr-Id occasion and quarrels between the Hindus and Muhammadans, either in Calcutta, Madras, Bombay or the United Provinces?

A. There were riots in Katarpur.

Q. Was there a riot in Katarpur this year?

A. Of course I cannot say.

Q. Was there been any riot between Hindus and Muhammadans on the Bakr-Id occasion this year throughout the length and breadth of India?

A. No.

Q. Don't you think that this is a very great achievement?

A. Because the Katarpur trial was going on and they had already done a good deal.

Q. So you think that this was the result of the Katarpur trial. May I understand, according to you, that this Hindu-Muhammadan unity was the result of the Katarpur trial which was going on?

A. I do not mean that.

Q. No riots did take place?

A. Riots did not take place.

Q. It was the result of Katarpur affair?

A. It was not concluded yet. Only a few months ago it has been concluded. They might be watching the results.

Q. Who?

A. The Hindus and Muhammadans, both.

Q. That would prevent Muhammadans from killing cows in the way which was objectionable to the Hindus?

A. That I do not say. That might have.

Q. When you refer to the Katarpur case, do you mean to say that because the Hindus were being tried for what had happened the previous year, therefore Muhammadans did not resort to cow-killing this year?

A. Muhammadans generally do not kill cows.

Q. No question of generally killing. You quite understand my meaning. May I understand that you mean to say that because the Hindus were being prosecuted in the Katarpur case and the trial had not finished, therefore Muhammadans abstained from doing anything which might be resented by the Hindus and there were no riots. Is that your meaning?

27 November 1919.]

SAYAD MUHAMMAD SHAH.

A. I do not mean that.

Q. In many places, Muhammadans abstained from killing cows this time?

A. I do not say they abstained. My words are generally the Muhammadans do not kill cows in our Province. Only goats, etc., are killed.

Q. You are bent upon hair-splitting. Why did the Muhammadans who are generally in the habit of killing cows abstain from killing cows on the last Bakr-Id occasion?

A. They might have killed.

Q. Has it not been the endeavour of every Muhammadan and every Hindu who wanted to prevent these quarrels during the last three years to do their best to take part in each other's festivals? You are reading newspapers. On the Muharram occasion, on the Dussehra occasion, and on other big festivals, have you or have you not read that the Muhammadans took part in Hindu festivals and that the Hindus took part in Muhammadan festivals?

A. They did sometimes.

Q. Therefore this is not the only festival in which the Hindus and Muhammadans made a show of their unity, on the Ram Navami day?

A. That was an unparalleled affair. This was never done before.

Q. Is not Ram Navami a day previous to the tazia?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you not read in the newspaper that on the last Dussehra occasion all over the Province Muhammadans joined the Hindus and took part in the festival and they arranged for meals and refreshments at all these places? Have you not read that?

A. Yes. I was also in charge of Dussehra in Kasur and I saw these things. I remember every year Hindus and Muhammadans used to do things in this way.

Q. As a thoughtful Muhammadan, I think you will agree with me that this is such a big question that you cannot bring about genuine and real reconciliation all at once in a large country where 700 lakhs are Muhammadans and the remainder Hindus. Efforts are required and a beginning has to be made.

A. If pious and honest efforts are made.

Q. You judge the results from efforts or anything else?

A. I do not agree with the way in which efforts are made; they were hasty.

Q. Do you judge the effort by the results or by anything else?

A. Yes.

Q. As a Muhammadan are you not prepared to say that during the last six months, the relations between Hindus and Muhammadans have improved greatly?

A. Provided everything is done in confidence with the Government. Of course if you think that we should go on doing these things secretly, in which our Government cannot trust us, I do not agree with you.

Q. I never asked you as to whether that was good, bad or indifferent. I wanted to know in fact whether or not you agree with me that during the last six months the relations between Hindus and Muhammadans have improved. It may be a very objectionable thing; that is a different matter, and I will come to that subsequently. Do you or do you not agree that during the last six months, the relations between Hindus and Muhammadans throughout the whole of India have greatly improved?

A. Do you mean the educated classes of Hindus and Muhammadans or Muhammadans and Hindus in general?

Q. In general and educated classes in particular?

A. Then my reply would be that the relations between Hindus and Muhammadans in general before were most good, and better in the case of the masses with the old leaders than now.

Q. You are quite competent to hold your own views. Therefore you say that the relations between Hindus and Muhammadans now existing are not better, but are worse than what they were?

A. Only in cities, not in the rural areas, where they did not know what people were meaning.

Q. So far as cities are concerned, the relations between Hindus and Muhammadans are worse than they were before?

A. I think so, because they are not honestly doing things.

Q. So far as educated classes are concerned, are their relations better or worse?

A. Their relations of course are becoming better.

Q. You agree with me that one of the vexed questions of the Hindus and Muhammadans was about their representation in municipal questions. Was that not one of the most important and vexed questions upon which they differed?

A. I do not study these things.

Q. You know nothing about that?

A. No.

Q. I am satisfied with that. These men who were delivering speeches were educated men. Is it not so?

A. Yes. But they were not addressing, excuse me, learned judges like yourselves. They were addressing people.

Q. You are paying me an unnecessary compliment. You are more learned than myself.

A. They were addressing the shop-keepers and illiterate people.

Q. Therefore you think the educated classes should not address masses to bring about union?

A. They should, but in the right way.

Q. In your opinion everything is wrong whenever any action done by the Government is talked about?

A. Not wrong; they can criticise, but of course respectfully.

Q. Do you mean to say. Supposing I have to criticise the action of a certain Deputy Commissioner, I should say, he is very good, he is omniscient, omnipotent, omnipresent, but I am sorry to say that somehow he has been misled by somebody and unconsciously has done something. Therefore (with folded hands) I pray that this should be rectified. That is the way in which this should be done?

A. No. I do not mean so. This should be brought to his notice in a respectful way. If it is not granted there are other places where this grievance should be submitted.

Q. Supposing that is done respectfully and supposing no heed is paid to that then what should be done?

A. We must go to the Commissioner.

Q. If he does not hear?

A. There is the Lieutenant-Governor.

Q. Supposing one cannot get redress from the Lieutenant-Governor? Then the best thing is to keep quiet?

A. You should make representation to the proper places not by only beating breasts.

Q. What is the proper place after the Lieutenant-Governor has declined to listen?

A. There is the Viceroy.

Q. After the Viceroy?

A. To the King.

Q. If the thing is done by the Viceroy where should you go?

A. We are subjects and have to obey their orders.

Q. Therefore we should only send a memorial to the Viceroy. If there is a grievance against something that was done by the Viceroy take, for instance, the Rowlatt Act that was the action of the Viceroy (it may be right or wrong, that is a different matter), we cannot go to the Commissioner, we cannot go to the Lieutenant-Governor, we cannot go to the Deputy Commissioner, because it is a thing that was done by a superior authority. Therefore you think that if we are aggrieved of anything that was done by the Viceroy, the only legitimate way of doing anything is to send a petition to the King, and if we do anything else, we are wrong?

27 November 1919.]

SAYAD MUHAMMAD SHAH.

A. Petition may be sent to England and the matter brought to the notice of the public.

Q. The only proper way that is open to those who are aggrieved by what was done by the Viceroy and his Council is to petition the King. That is all. If he does anything else, he is wrong?

A. I do not think it is wrong, but it must be done in a decent way.

Q. What do you mean by saying it should be done in a 'decent' way in reference to political agitation?

A. Not to defy the authority in any way.

Q. Supposing we have a complaint against the authority?

A. You have no complaint. A passer-by who is a subject of the Crown and who has been passing in the street has been made to get down from his tonga, his turban taken off and Government officials are not required to interfere.

Q. I am talking of what happened on the Ram Naumi day about speech-making. I am only confining myself to one point. On the Ram Naumi day, they were delivering speeches that were defying authority. I want to get at what you mean by saying defying authority?

A. That was my personal view which I have given to you.

Q. What were the facts which came to your knowledge from which you draw the inference?

A. We heard speeches that were trembling and shivering and words were spoken, it seemed to me, as if there was an enemy whom we met. Such were the speeches that were made, and those who heard know the mode of expression, the manner and the demeanour.

Q. The mode, demeanour and the manner was not satisfactory. That is why you said these speeches were in defiance of authority. I think you must have some knowledge of political agitation at other different places, America, England, Scotland, Ireland and other places?

A. I have heard them. India is a country which has great a diversity of races. Different sorts of races are here. In America and other places, even the peasant is an educated man. Here, he is not.

Q. You are against all sorts of political agitation, unless and until it only takes the form of a petition to the higher authority. I will just leave this point. What do you mean by saying that political agitation should be made in a decent manner? If you mean that there should be no incitement to violence, I will quite agree with you. There will be no difference between your opinion and my opinion?

A. I quite agree with you here.

Q. If you mean that there should be no incitement to violence then there is no difference between you and me?

A. I quite agree with you here, Sir.

Q. No incitement to violence?

A. It covers everything.

Q. Well, I am quite satisfied. Why don't you use the words there should be no incitement to violence?

A. Yes.

Q. You know what happened on the 30th at Delhi was known all over the city on the 6th and the 10th?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And you are also aware that during the last three or four years there has been such an association as Seva Samiti and volunteers, etc. Have you heard of them?

A. Yes, Sir, I have heard of them.

Q. I believe you also know that on big occasions, fairs and melas, etc., during the last three years constant efforts have been made that the regulations of these melas and processions or the management of the whole thing should be handed over to the local management or Seva Samitis?

A. I am not aware of this, Sir.

Q. You have never heard of it up to this time?

A. No.

Q. You have not read in any newspaper that on big occasions, ceremonies or big fairs processions were managed by these people?

A. Sometimes when their services were required.

Q. Then you say that they do not offer their services, but their services are required?

A. I have read that.

Q. During the last three or four years various attempts have been made by various public bodies and volunteers and Seva Samiti to manage processions on such occasions, and these have done such good work that on and off they have been praised by Government?

A. It may be so.

Q. I am asking you that according to you the people asked that Honorary Magistrates and Municipal Commissioners should have nothing to do with this Ram Naumi procession. What was wrong there if they so asked the authorities?

A. But where were those on the 6th? The people assaulted Rai Ganga Ram, etc.

Q. This is a different thing. I am asking you a question as to whether or not the request that was made to the authorities that Honorary Magistrates and Municipal Commissioners should not be allowed to have anything to do with the procession, was it or was it not a part of the general movement?

A. The Deputy Commissioner might know about these things. I am not a proper person to know these things. He might have all the facts in his possession.

Q. Do you know why there was any objection to Honorary Magistrates and Municipal Commissioners?

A. I think to this I have already replied.

Q. There must be some reason?

A. You know better than myself?

Q. I am not an inhabitant of Lahore. What was the reason then?

A. You are one of us; you are an Indian.

Q. I want to know why there had been any objection?

A. Had you been here on that occasion you would have certainly known it.

Q. I don't know at all because I belong to a different province. Why was there any objection to the Honorary Magistrates and Municipal Commissioners?

A. I can only make out from the 6th incident.

Q. I don't want the 6th incident because that was before the 6th. Then why before the 6th a request was made to the Deputy Commissioner that Honorary Magistrates and Municipal Commissioners should have nothing to do with the affairs?

A. It was not for the purposes of management. Honorary Magistrates and raisers do simply assist. They are only required in an ornamental way to give the procession importance. In processions like the Ram Naumi such big people join to give it importance.

Q. These people are required to give dignity to these processions?

A. Yes.

Q. I want to know why this request was made to the Deputy Commissioner that these people should not be ornamental on that occasion?

A. The Deputy Commissioner might know these things.

Q. You don't know?

A. No.

By the Hon'ble Mr. W. F. Rice—

Q. Sayad Sahib, Can you tell us about the Danda Fauj of Lahore?

A. Yes.

Q. Tell us what it was.

A. The people had big lathis in their hands. They were joining in a sort of crowd uttering some unpleasant words which of course I am not prepared to explain here.

Q. Used all sorts of words?

A. Certain words were used in the procession against the King and they were in a threatening mood. I received several times telephone messages that I should be ready. Mr. Grey, Inspector was with me. This party was coming from the city and going to the Upper Mall.

Q. This was the Danda Fauj?

A. Yes, Sir, Danda Fauj.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. Sayad Muhammad Shah, you have said that in spite of several requests people behaved improperly?

27 November 1919.]

SAYAD MUHAMMAD SHAH.

[Continued.]

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What did they do?

A. They were obstinate. I requested them that as it was Ram Naumi they should go on observing the necessary ceremonies and that they should not make it a political procession. They were making speeches which excited people and I told them that such speeches should be stopped.

Q. It was in your opinion a political procession because certain speeches of a political nature were made?

A. Yes.

Q. And you asked them not make those speeches?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And they did not comply with your requests?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And I want to know if it was for this reason that you called them behaving improperly?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And here you say that the details of the speeches and the names of the speakers had already been reported to the authorities?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You mean to say that proper reports had been made of those speeches.

A. That was not my business. They were made to the proper authorities.

Q. And the names of the speakers were also given?

A. Not by me but by the proper persons. In fact my duties were different. There were other people to record the speeches.

Q. They made their reports and given the details of the speeches.

A. Yes.

Q. Can you give us any illustration of any violent language being used against Government or any expression that may have been used?

A. May I give it in vernacular or in English?

Q. I would have it in vernacular.

A. In vernacular the sense would be better understood.

They said Tainun aur sanun kisi da fikar nahin karna chahida. Kise kolon na daro. Apas wich ultiqar karke rahna chahida. Hor kisi da dar nahin karna chahida.

Translation.—You should unite amongst yourselves and should not be afraid of any one else.*

Q. Then I take it this is the illustration?

A. This is one of them. I do not exactly remember them now.

Q. This was the more violent language used?

A. There must be certain others. I gave you one of the illustrations.

Q. Others may be equally violent?

A. May be more than that.

Q. Can you give us an illustration of the more violent language?

A. Such a length of time has passed that I don't remember it.

Q. You cannot remember it?

A. Yes, I cannot.

Q. Are you aware to whom the license of this procession was issued?

A. From my memory I can say that it was Jai Gopal Tandon, one of the conveners of those processions of the Ram Naumi, in whose favour the license was issued. He is the man who was the Secretary of that Sabha. Something like that.

Q. This was issued not by you but by other authority?

A. It must have been issued by the Superintendent of Police.

Q. Did you have a copy of this license?

A. No, Sir.

* En. We should not care for anyone. Fear no one. We must live in harmony. We should fear no one else.

Q. You did not have it?

A. No.

Q. Have you ever seen any license of such a procession?

A. I have seen sometimes.

Q. There are generally conditions printed on it and the routes and times are mentioned in it?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What are generally the conditions?

A. It depends upon what sort of procession it is. Times and routes are allotted according to its importance.

Q. But what are generally the conditions?

A. I don't remember exactly.

Q. You have no idea of them?

A. No.

Q. Are there any prohibitions for the procession not to stop at any particular place for any short time?

A. There are general conditions under the Police Act. Routes are obstructed for an hour or two and there is no room for the people to pass.

Q. Is it not reasonable for the procession to stop for a short time?

A. If it is reasonable for a short time speeches can go on for an hour. It is unreasonable if these things are not brought to the notice of the officer who issues that license. This procession took more time.

Q. How many hours were allowed?

A. I think it may be up to 12 or 1, but it exceeded the time which was allowed.

Q. But do you know what was the time now?

A. It was allowed from 6 to 12. I don't remember exactly.

Q. Did you know it at the time when you went with the procession?

A. I remembered it. I inquired from the Secretary of the Sabha.

Q. But you as an officer were not informed of the time that was allowed?

A. No.

Q. You did not see the license with a view to see that the procession was exceeding the time limit given in it?

A. No. If I required I could have seen it.

Q. Did you ask any officer about it?

A. I heard from some officer that the time limit had been exceeded.

Q. From which officer?

A. I was in charge of all these people. There were some Police officers, and some Criminal Investigation Department Officers who were in charge of these things. I had to see to the people.

Q. You have no idea who told you?

A. No.

Q. From what time to what time was the procession to remain?

A. It ended at about 1. It started from 7 and ended at 1.

Q. But what was the time limit in the license which you were told by some officer?

A. I was told that it had been exceeded.

Q. Was it before 1 o'clock?

A. It may be. I am not certain on this point.

Q. How many people took part in the Danda Fauj?

A. Many.

Q. Were there many?

A. I did not count them, Sir.

Q. But how many?

A. They were from different parts of the town.

Q. Altogether how many? You have no idea?

A. No.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. On the 11th and 12th you were put in charge of the Anarkali Civil Area?

A. Yes.

Q. You did not leave that area on the 11th and 12th? See paragraph 3 of your statement? It is "I was immediately put in charge of the Anarkali Civil Area which duty I did till the 25th April." Therefore may I take it to mean that you were present in the Anarkali on the 11th and 12th ?

27 November 1919.]

SAYAD MUHAMMAD SHAH—concluded—SHEIKH RAHIM BAKHSH.

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And you did not go to any other part of the city but you remained inside the Anarkali Bazar ?

A. Sometimes I used to go inside the Lohari Gate where a picquet was posted. It was in my jurisdiction.

Q. From Lohari Mandi to Lohari gate.

A. Yes.

Q. Was Lohari Mandi in the Anarkali Area ?

A. Not in it but it is nearer to Anarkali than any other place.

Q. You were only put in charge of the Anarkali Civil Area ?

A. That, I have told you, is quite correct.

Q. Therefore on the 11th and 12th you, leaving Anarkali, went to other places also ?

A. Not generally.

Q. But when you were afterwards required you had left Anarkali Civil Area ?

A. I do not remember, Sir.

Q. So far as you remember you did not leave Anarkali Civil Area ?

A. That was the place where I had to come on my duty. I had to leave it when I had to go to take my meals.

Q. The point is that to a question put to you by Mr. Rice you have stated that such things were said and done by the Danda Fauj. Who informed you ?

A. Certain officers who were put on duty for this purpose.

Q. They came and informed you what was being done by this Danda Fauj ?

A. They told me to be careful.

Q. You had no personal knowledge ?

A. When they reached in my jurisdiction, i.e., Lohari Mandi, there were officers who told me this.

Q. So far as your knowledge extends the officers who told you were deputed to see what was being done by this Danda Fauj ?

A. Yes.

Q. You yourself did not count the number of these ?

A. No.

Q. What was the number of Danda Fauj in different lanes and mohallas ?

A. I have no knowledge.

Q. Your information about Danda Fauj is based upon the information you had received from different officers. You had not seen them with your own eyes ?

A. No.

By Mr. Abdul Kadir, Assistant Government Advocate—

Q. About this time when this Ram Naumi procession came off, shortly before it, you know, a general prohibition of processions had been notified and an exception had been made in favour of this procession because it was a religious function ?

A. Quite so.

Q. So that converting it into a sort of political demonstration, was it or was it not the chief breach of the terms of the license ?

A. Quite so.

Q. You have said that you objected at the time, when political speeches began on this occasion, to those speeches. Can you refer us to any persons specifically from among the leaders who spoke on that occasion ?

A. I have already stated before the Martial Law Commission. They were generally addressed by Pandit Ram Bhaj Datt.

Q. When you told them to stop, did it have any effect on them or did they go on speaking ?

A. Whenever I used to tell them they used to move further on from that place and used to go on again with their speeches.

Q. So that it had no effect ?

A. No, Sir.

Q. This fact you have mentioned before the Martial Law Commission ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You gave some names. It may have been done by somebody else. Still it is in your statement that you gave certain names of persons who spoke ?

A. I gave those names to the Deputy Commissioner.

Q. And you also gave those names before the Commission ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Can you mention those names again ?

A. These are several, Sir.

Q. Can you give any of those you remember now ?

A. Some of these were Lala Duni Chand, Ram Bhaj Datt and Dharam Dass. These were the people.

Q. There have been riots on cow-killing. Are you aware of that ? In the Punjab itself, in the district of Lyallpur, there have been a considerable number of riots in one of the villages and the cases of the rioters are the subject of trial in these days ?

A. No, I am not aware of it.

SHEIKH RAHIM BAKHSH, Senior Sub-Judge, Lahore.

By the President—

Q. Are you Senior Sub-Judge, Lahore.

A. Yes.

Q. On the 6th of April I think you went to the District Magistrate ?

A. Yes, on the 6th April I went to see the District Magistrate at the Kutcheri, hearing that there had been a hartal and that he might require my services. I just went to see him.

Q. On the 6th did you notice anything about the attitude of the crowds ?

A. I was passing by the Kutcheri Road through these very gardens. Some of the Military sowars were posted in the Municipal Gardens and any movements of their would lead people to shouting, hissing and hooting these sowars and clapping the hands and this and that, just to frighten the horses and to let them know that they did not approve of their being there.

Q. On the 10th you were deputed to have a notice published. What was that notice ?

A. I have been able to get hold of it from the Publicity Committee office. In it everybody is warned that every crowd or body of men, of whatever sort it may be, is prohibited to assemble and if there is any such crowd it would be dispersed. This notice had effect till the morning of the 12th April.

Q. When was that made out ?

A. It was on the evening of the 10th. The Deputy Commissioner signed it between 10 and 11 p.m. at night.

Q. On what night ?

A. On the night of the 10th.

Q. When did you publish it ?

A. I went to the Publicity Committee at about 11-30. We got it translated there by this gentleman (pointing to the interpreter) who is here. From there I took Sheikh Abdul Aziz to the Mufid-i-Am Press, i.e., Rai Sahib Gulab Singh's Press. We were there at about 2 and we were told that it could not be arranged then as the men were all away.

Q. How did you get the copies printed then ?

A. We then got the copies printed early on the morning of the 11th.

Q. In what way did you publish the notice ?

A. I collected all possible men from the Kutcheri. I took my orderlies; I took men from the Telegraph Office and sowars from the municipal office and other people I met. I then purchased some paste from Lala Mul Chand early in the morning and told them to paste the notices in every available public place. That was how the notices were published.

Q. Then on the 11th you heard that a large crowd had collected behind the High Court?

A. Yes.

Q. And you were sent to disperse it?

A. Yes.

Q. When you arrived what did you find?

A. There were only the clerks of the Accountant-General's office. They wouldn't attend to duty or leave the premises. Probably they wanted leave. They were forcing the hands of the authorities to grant them leave. That was probably their object.

Q. Did you reason with them?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did they go home when you asked them to go?

A. No.

Q. What explanation they gave?

A. I told them that my orders were that they should either resume work or leave the premises. Some of them said that it was their mourning day; and they were not going to work. At the same time they were anxious that they should not be dismissed and said they ought to get leave. I spoke to the Accountant-General. He said that he could not grant leave to the clerks of the Currency Office. Others were granted leave for one day and they were told distinctly that anybody absenting himself will be liable to dismissal.

Q. On the following day you rode with the District Magistrate and the Military through the city. What was the attitude of the crowd as you passed through the city?

A. Everyone said "Rowlatt na manzur," i.e., they did not accept the Rowlatt Act. The Deputy Commissioner and the City Inspector, at the orders of the District Magistrate, explained to them the meaning of the Rowlatt Act, saying that it was not the Defence of India Act. They would not listen.

Q. After your endeavours to disperse them you know some affray took place?

A. That was at Hira Mandi.

Q. Where were you at the time when the firing took place?

A. I had just gone to the gate which is the first gate facing the southern side of the road leading to the fort; it is called the Hazuri Bagh Gate.

Q. How long before the firing did you leave the crowd? How long was it before you heard the firing that you had been with the crowd?

A. I was in the crowd myself for some time asking them to move on. After most of the people had left that garden, I went into the mosque. Some 5 or 6 minutes later I heard firing.

Q. When you were endeavouring to disperse the crowd, did they pay any attention?

A. No, if you want incidents, I will give them. I was reasoning with them telling them that the patience of the authorities was being exhausted, and that I was told by one of the Military officers that if they did not move there will be firing. They said "No, we are here; we do not mind." Afterwards I said: "It is against the law; you should obey the law." One man in the crowd said, "No. Look at his turban"; another; "Keep your jai." The jai was so cheap in those days. Thus I was insulted.

Q. When you were there, were the mob throwing bricks and stones?

A. No, as soon as they came out with a loud cry, I heard people saying to the boys standing there: "Don't throw stones." I did not see stones.

Q. Were there any posters that you saw (at the Hazuri Bagh)?

A. Yes; I removed the poster and handed it to the Senior Superintendent of Police.

Q. What sort of a poster was it?

A. It is difficult to give it from memory. I saw it; many read it and the Military officers read it. It was in every sense seditious, but I do not remember what it actually contained.

Q. You do not remember?

A. I could not really say. The words gora and kala were specially mentioned; it was about the disobeying of the orders of Government, and there was also something which struck me; it was "not to carry out what the Government wants to do."

Q. Now what was the attitude of the mob? There was a large mob. Were they out of control?

A. Yes; there was nobody to control them.

Q. In their attitude they were defiant?

A. Certainly.

Q. When you saw them, were they resorting to violence?

A. No.

Q. Why not?

A. I had so many Military sowars with me.

Q. You do not think that the Military would restrain them?

A. It never struck me that they were going to assault me.

Q. You had to look after the publication and posting of Martial Law orders. How did you do it?

A. I had about 16 or 18 men, sometimes 20 to 22; according to urgency; and as soon as it was received from the press I sent the required number to the town proper. There was an officer in charge who had them posted inside the city; then there were others who posted them in the civil area and Anarkali Bazar and round about the town. I sent all my men at once to post them at the places mentioned in their order.

Q. You issued them and also posted them in conspicuous parts?

A. It was my duty and I went round to see if they were actually being posted.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. About the posting of the seditious poster, did it give you an idea at the time that it was deliberately done by the whole body of the Lahore citizens or by some fanatics in the crowd?

A. I do not know whether I formed any opinion at the time.

Q. Did you consider whether it was the act of some responsible body or of a man of extreme views or of some fanatic?

A. I told you, Sir, I did not form any opinion. It was meant for those people who were there and excited the feelings of the crowd.

Q. That was the object of it; I have no quarrel with that, but what was your impression? Whether it was the act of individual persons or of large bodies of the Lahore citizens?

A. I did not think of it at the time, whether it would be the action of a large number or of a fanatic.

Q. Now have you formed any opinion?

A. Yes, I can give you my opinion. I think I should say the action of some very zealous members.

Q. It is not the deliberate action of any society or any large body of persons?

A. I do not think so, Sir.

Q. How many sub-judges are there in Lahore?

A. At the time, there were 4; the 5th is the Small Cause Court Judge.

Q. On what dates were the Civil Courts closed? After the 10th, an order was passed to close the Civil Courts?

A. No order was passed. We informed the District Judge that our services were required by the Deputy Commissioner.

Q. You informed your superior officer that your services were required by the District authorities and as you were going to take up those duties, they closed the court?

A. Yes.

Q. On the 11th, you said you asked some of your court peons to do certain work of publication or printing or something like that?

A. Yes; morning of the 11th.

Q. What time was it?

A. I got them at 6. I called them at the Kutcheri.

Q. They were at the Kutcheri?

27 November 1919.]

SHEIKH RAHIM BAKHSH.

A. Some of the peons and some of the orderlies are living in the Kutcheri.

Q. From the 11th to the 30th April did any of the sub-judges work?

A. Yes; I was on my duty after some 8 days.

Q. You took up your regular duties after some 8 days?

A. Yes.

Q. And the other sub-judges?

A. All the four, excepting the judge of the Small Cause Court, took up their duties.

Q. Then after 8 days, after a week, you recorded evidence, passed orders, pronounced judgments, and did such other work?

A. Yes.

Q. Now about this assembly which you saw on that day just near the Hira Mandi?

A. Before firing or after firing?

Q. Before firing. I am not here to justify what they were doing, I want to make my point clear.

A. That is good.

Q. The point is whether or not at the time you had the least idea that this assembly was an assembly of rebels; it might be doing something very wrong, it might be insolent or having recourse to passive resistance or disobeying the authorities: did it strike you then that you could have described them as rebels?

A. Would you bring it under any sections of the Indian Penal Code?

Q. They might be examined. Take for instance the conditions of a thief; you call him a criminal but not a rebel. Therefore I want to know apart from the Criminal Procedure Code, as to what impression was created in you? Was it that they were rioters, that they were rebels and that they wanted to get hold of the civil area and to administer and rule over it?

A. I do not say that they wanted to turn out the Government.

Q. You may call it a turbulent crowd. Are you prepared to go further and say that it was a crowd of rebels?

A. I won't go so far.

Q. No doubt you will agree that if there is a crowd of five or six thousand persons, in that crowd there may be a lot of mischievous persons, as you yourself said that when boys were about to throw stones, people near by said "do not throw stones." I am not talking of that; if that crowd had any intention of assaulting, serious intention of assaulting the authority, was that crowd competent?

A. I think they were not competent to assault us, but I do not know their intentions until they carry them into effect.

Q. By competent men you mean that these 6,000 people would not be able to attack the authority.

A. No; there were machine-guns.

Q. What were the forces that would protect it?

A. The people posted on our side, the sowars and the infantry.

Q. You could not form any rough estimate?

A. I cannot give you any rough estimate.

Q. However, you thought that this army with you would be sufficient to quell the people.

A. If there were any disturbances, if they had assaulted anybody, I think they would have been soon brought to their senses. A little firing would have brought them to their senses.

Q. I again want to know your opinion about the mood of the crowd. If you say that a crowd of 6,000 could be brought to its senses by only a little firing, what is your idea; was that crowd there to disobey orders and demonstrate a sort of passive resistance or was that crowd there for the purpose of looting or for turning out the police or for establishing their own rule or was it only a demonstration that they were going to have a sort of passive resistance?

A. You have mixed up too many points. I do not think they were bound upon looting or turning out the police.

Q. That is, from passive resistance, they were just on the point of active resistance?

A. Yes.

Q. When they refused to disperse—you know only of the 11th, or you know of the 10th also?

A. I do not know anything of the 10th.

Q. You know what happened on the 11th and 12th?

A. I know.

Q. Now from your experience of the 12th, can you tell me was this crowd making a demonstration and showing their resentment against what has been done on the previous day, i.e., on the 10th and trying to show their resentment on account of the arrest of Mahatma Gandhi or was it anything else? What you saw, could it not be ascribed to the arrest of Mahatma Gandhi and to the fact that on the 10th some of the persons had been innocently killed?

A. They did not do any act which could be called lawlessness, I could not say anything about their intentions.

Q. I want the cause.

A. You want me to say what was the cause of it? I have put two things before you, the arrest of Mr. Gandhi and the fact that, wrongly or rightly, some persons were killed on the 10th. As far as I know the news of Mr. Gandhi's arrest was received in the afternoon of the 10th. There was some trouble of course by that time; they were issuing posters and so forth; there was a poster of that kind.

Q. What was that poster?

A. It was an ode to Mr. Gandhi. I found one of them in the Police lines.

Q. You removed them on the 12th?

A. Probably it was on the 12th; it may be a little later, might have been on that very day; I do not remember exactly. That was one of the odes to Mr. Gandhi. Then there was a talk. It may be news to you and even of amusement to some of the learned Commissioners. It was some such thing "If you have hartal for 3 days the Lieutenant-Governor will be dismissed; if for 5 days the Viceroy will be dismissed." I only say what I heard. They were so displeased. Afterwards, there was firing on the 12th and on the evening there was that procession which I referred to in that statement. I was told they took a vow not to open their shops for 4 days until the chauthas for the dead bodies were performed, i.e., until the dead bodies were burnt.

Q. Because certain persons were killed, they said "we should mourn for 4 days and not open shops"?

A. Yes, quite so.

Q. I do not want your abstract opinion. From what you heard on the 11th and 12th at different places, from the crowd itself, I would only ask you to give your reasons based upon that. Why did they want Sir Michael O'Dwyer to be dismissed?

A. Is it fair to discuss that? They are my superior officers; I seek protection.

Q. I do not want your own opinion. You informed us that public meetings about the hartal occurred. Therefore from what the crowd had been saying, did you hear anybody saying why he wanted Sir O'Dwyer to be dismissed?

A. No, he was Lieutenant-Governor at the time, and therefore they meant him.

Q. Did you hear them give any reasons?

A. I did not discuss with them the question of Sir O'Dwyer.

Q. I did not mean that you discussed them. They gave expression to their feelings. Did they express within your hearing?

A. I could not say of any particular talk. I do not know whether it would be right to say so. I would give you one instance if you care to have it:—

When that procession of 6,000 or 7,000 passed to the Ghat, one of the second-lieutenants there with the cavalry reported that a big crowd was coming out of the city.

27 November 1919] SHEIKH RAHIM BAKHSI—concluded—Rai Sahib SETH DWARKA NATH.

We got ready. I had sent away my horse, a sowar's horse, and we put the machine in order. It was everywhere reported that thousands were coming; there was a great noise and so we got ready. Later, I was informed that some police officer had given them permission to take away the dead body. I was talking to one of the persons that was in the crowd, the next day or the day after. He said to me:—"They had a mind to assault that one young man on a black horse." I said "what do you mean by that?" "Don't you know he is our Lieutenant-Governor's son?" He said "I do not know. Had they known people would have attacked him, not caring for any consequence." You may draw your own inference from that.

Q. You have not given me the cause of their reasoning against the Lieutenant-Governor.

A. Yes; I think I do not know. Am I bound to answer that?

Q. I put to you again. Was it not due to the arrest of Mahatma Gandhi? Some resentment was due to that? The hartal came only after that.

A. The hartal came after the arrest of Mr. Gandhi, soon after the arrest of Mr. Gandhi. That was the immediate cause.

Rai Sahib SETH DWARKA NATH, Deputy Superintendent of Police, Lahore.

By the President—

Q. You are Deputy Superintendent of Police, Lahore?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. We have had a good deal of evidence as to what occurred on the 6th and the 10th, but there are just one or two questions I would ask you. On the 6th do you remember a case where there was a threat of assault on you?

A. No Sir, I was simply jeered at and hissed at?

Q. That was on the 6th?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. I think at that time Dr. Gokal Chand Naurang was near you?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What position did he take up?

A. He was leading the mob back on a police horse and then he took them to the Gol Bagh and returned, and there was a mob in the Market Chowk and he called to them to come back. Then somebody in the mob hit him and abused him, and then some people cried "This is Doctor sahib, our own man." I thought he was hit because he was thought to be a policeman.

Q. Was the feeling of the crowd bitter on that occasion?

A. Yes Sir, they were very defiant.

Q. On the 10th evening you were going in your trap in the Lohari Chowk?

A. Yes Sir, in the evening at about 5.

Q. At that time were crowds about?

A. People were collecting. There were some students who were coming along and they shouted at me to take off my cap. I was wearing a cap. I did not do so. I saw there was something wrong and I found that Mahatma Gandhi had been arrested. This was the answer given to me by some people there; then I drove on.

Q. As you drove on did you find people collecting?

A. Yes Sir, they were collecting and shutting their shops and shouting "Mahatma Gandhi ki jai."

Q. I think you went out of the Taxali Gate and drove to the Police Office, and there you found the Senior Superintendent of Police. Who was that?

A. Mr. Broadway.

Q. And you made a report to him?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. He asked you to get men and post guards at certain posts?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And you got men and went to the Police Station at Anarkali?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. When you got there, did you find the mob had gone on the Mall and a small body of police were endeavouring to intercept them?

A. Yes, I heard the police had doubled up to intercept them.

Q. Did you proceed to the scene of this?

A. I galloped up in my trap and at the Telegraph Office I met the tail of the mob. After some distance the mob was very thick, so I drove on the tan ride.

Q. Were the mob carrying anything in their hands?

A. I did not notice anything. I noticed a black flag when I reached the place.

Q. Who was carrying the black flag?

A. Some young men, probably students.

Q. What was that meant to represent?

A. I think it was meant for mourning on account of the arrest of Mr. Gandhi.

Q. Where was the police guard at that time?

A. They were on the Mall facing the crowd, I think near Lord Lawrence's Statue, and the mob was getting along in small rushes and the police were falling back.

Q. Were the mob driving the police back?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What did you do?

A. I jumped from my trap and ran to the front of the mob and tried to persuade them and asked them not to go any further. I did not succeed and there was some time spent in doing that when I saw two of the young men run past me. I turned round and saw both of them snatching hold of muskets of the constables. Suddenly after that I heard shots. Some shots passed just near me so I ran behind the constables.

Q. I think Mr. Cocks, Deputy Inspector-General and Mr. Fyson were with the policemen?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. At the time the firing took place was the mob defiant?

A. Quite, Sir.

Q. As a consequence of the firing I think one man was killed and some wounded?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did the majority of the people flee away after the firing?

A. The majority of the people ran away; some stood.

Q. I think you remained near there for a considerable time?

A. Yes, Sir. The remnants were driven back and when we reached the Lawrence Statue again I was asked to stop there and guard the chowk there in case any mob returned from those sides.

Q. Then on the 12th you were in the city when the funeral procession took place?

A. Yes Sir, I saw that.

Q. On the 13th of April the Railway Station of Wagah was burnt?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did you receive information or did you know of that?

A. I was in charge of that ilaga and I received information and reports about that. I went to visit the spot also.

Q. Were telegraph wires cut as well?

A. Yes Sir, the station burnt, lines uprooted, telegraph wires cut.

Q. Did any offensive notices come under your observation?

A. Yes Sir, I was also patrolling with an escort and on some occasions I saw posters pasted on walls or on telegraph posts. Some I removed and sent to the office and some I destroyed there.

Q. What sort of notices were these?

A. They were abuses of the Government and of partisans of the Government. Raises and Honorary Magiatrates whom they thought to be on the side of Government they abused and called names.

Q. Where is Rakh Bhangali ?

A. It is at a distance of 4 miles from Lahore Cantonment.

Q. There were some stacks burnt there ?

A. Grass farm stacks there were burnt.

Q. Where are the villages of Ghawindi and Barki ?

A. On that side.

Q. At a distance from Lahore ?

A. At a distance of five to seven miles.

Q. What occurred there ?

A. The people of those villages forcibly grazed their cattle on the Grass Farm, and in one instance they used the canal water channel. When the guards of the Grass Farm told them not to do so, they were told: 'It was not the Government Raj now; people are independent and they would do as they liked; the property was their.' Those people were prosecuted and convicted by the Area Officer.

Q. What was the effect of the proclamation of Martial Law ?

A. I think things calmed down after that; it had a sobering effect.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. These statements by the villagers that it was not the Government Raj now, were they made in your presence ?

A. No, I simply came to hear of that in the course of my duties.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. There were one or two cases of people prosecuted in connection with the riot on the Upper Mall ?

A. There was a case.

Q. Were you a witness in that case ?

A. No.

Q. Were you asked to give evidence in that case ?

A. No.

Q. The party of police that was there and being pushed back was in charge of Moratab Ali ?

A. Yes.

Q. And he was a witness in that case ?

A. I do not know for certain, but perhaps he was.

Q. And you know Mr. Broadway and Mr. Fyson were witnesses in that case ?

A. I do not know, probably they were.

Q. When did you give your statement in this case for the first time ?

A. Do you mean before you ?

Q. Yes, this statement ?

A. I do not exactly remember the date; it was at the time other people were asked by the Deputy Commissioner to write up a statement. I gave a synopsis and was informed by the Government Advocate that the Committee wanted a full statement.

Q. Did you give your statement about what happened at the Upper Mall on any previous occasion ?

A. Yes.

Q. To whom ?

A. I did not give a written statement; I reported to Mr. Broadway who passed me at that time. Then I returned home and I spoke to Mr. Cocks, Deputy Inspector-General. He spoke to me and I told him about that.

Q. You were not present at the first firing that took place on the Upper Mall ?

A. I was there.

Q. And the Deputy Commissioner and Mr. Broadway were before you ?

A. Not Mr. Broadway.

Q. Mr. Fyson was before you ?

A. Probably he was, I did not notice. When I turned round to escape the shots myself, then I noticed both these gentlemen there.

Q. Were you in your uniform ?

A. No I was in mufti.

Q. Are you quite well known to Muratab Ali and the constables or not ?

A. I should think so.

Q. And although these constables were behind, you say they fired and took the risk of your being shot ?

A. Yes, but you are not taking into consideration the fact that there was a huge mob.

Q. You were in front of the party that had fired ?

A. Yes, my back was towards them.

Q. You take it from me that in that Upper Mall trial neither Mr. Fyson, or Muratab Ali nor any one else did mention this very fact that two members of the crowd seized hold of the muskets of the policemen. How do you account for that ?

A. Everybody cannot see everything when there is a huge mob rushing about. There is one thing which I would like to say here, that this was put down in the first information report, written immediately after the occurrence.

Q. But surely if Mr. Fyson was there before you, he must have seen it.

A. No, I could not see Mr. Fyson myself when I ran back; there was such a crowd and clamour and noise and all that sort of thing that it was impossible for everybody to see everything.

Q. I do not suppose you mean to convey that Mr. Fyson was mixed up with the crowd ?

A. No he was not, but he was mixed up with the policemen who were on that side.

Q. What distance was there between the crowd and the policemen ?

A. Between 5 to 10 paces.

Q. And therefore Mr. Fyson would be in a position to see if two men came from the crowd and snatched the muskets of the policemen ?

A. Not necessarily.

Q. The number of the policemen was not more than 8 or 10 ?

A. No more than a dozen in all.

Q. Here you say "I saw a group of young men coming from the opposite side." Now in your deposition here you say they were students ?

A. I think they may possibly have been students, because there are so many here.

Q. Were any of them known to you ?

A. You mean inside the city ?

Q. These young men on the Mall ?

A. No, I do not think so, neither did they know me, most probably.

Q. And these young men here near the Nila Gumbaz, were they known to you ?

A. I could not tell you, it is 6 months ago, and I did not note down any names, and I do not know many students and young people here. With the exception of Dr. Gokal Chand Naurang, and Lala Duni Chand, I cannot remember any one. They were not of sufficient importance for me to remember them.

Q. What I want to know is whether you had any definite knowledge that these young men were students or you simply thought so ?

A. I simply thought so from their demeanour.

Q. And the crowd you met at Nila Gumbaz, that crowd consisted of men the majority of whom were beating their breasts ?

A. Yes.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. In the first paragraph of your statement referring to the 6th of April, you say that at about 12 noon Mr. Broadway, Senior Superintendent of Police, received information that an unlawful procession had come from Anarkali. Why was it an unlawful procession ?

A. Because it was prohibited by the Senior Superintendent of Police under the Police Act.

Q. That there should be no procession ?

A. Yes.

Q. And because it was contrary to that you have called it unlawful ?

A. Yes.

Q. So no procession was allowed on the 6th ?

27 November 1919.]

Rai Sahib SETH DWARKA NATH—concluded—Mr. G. A. COCKS

A. I think so.
 Q. And the attitude of the crowd was very threatening and excited?
 A. I never said that, I said they were defiant.
 Q. What was the attitude of the crowd?
 A. They were very defiant; they would not obey orders; they were doing a thing which was illegal and when asked not to do it, they were very defiant.
 Q. And they were also excited?
 A. Yes, of course, they were.
 Q. And also threatening?
 A. What do you mean by threatening? Do you mean to say to assault us?
 Q. Threatening to attack you?
 A. I think we were too big a force for them to be threatening. I have given an instance that when I passed they jeered and abused and that sort of thing, but they did not actually assault.
 Q. What was the amount of your force?

A. My own guard was 50 rifles, plus four or five Indian Officers, myself and a European Sergeant.
 Q. And the number of people in the crowd?
 A. Well, the crowd was spread over a long way. The people who were actually near me may have been a thousand or so.
 Q. They were in different directions?
 A. No, there was a big mob tailing from the Young Men's Christian Association up to the place where I was then they were up to the Market Chowk and there were some in Anarkali also. It was not a very big space so the people actually near me might have been about a thousand.
 Q. It was not a continuous thing?
 A. It was a continuous thing.
 Q. And was there any other force besides that?
 A. Yes there was a troop of cavalry and a couple of machine guns; that is all I can remember.
 Q. On the 6th?
 A. On the 6th.

Mr. G. A. COCKS, Deputy Inspector-General, Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

By the President—

Q. You are Deputy Inspector-General in the Criminal Investigation Department?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. I think you were in your office on the 10th April at about 6 P.M. when the news of the outbreak and what had occurred at Amritsar reached you?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. Did you go from the office to your own home?
 A. Yes.
 Q. How far is that away?
 A. About two miles.
 Q. And when you were there did you receive a telephone message as to a crowd gathering in the city?
 A. Yes.
 Q. When was it you received the message?
 A. That must have been between 20 past and half past six.
 Q. Was it feared that the crowd might make for the civil station?
 A. That was the fear the whole time.
 Q. And if it got to the civil station was there danger of it doing damage?
 A. If you can cut a crowd off from the civil station it is easier to guard the civil station. Once it gets loose in the civil station there would be no holding it except with a large body of cavalry.
 Q. I think you rang up the Senior Superintendent of Police, Mr. Broadway?
 A. Yes, to warn him.
 Q. And you found he was in Government House. Did you motor there and find Mr. Fyson and Mr. Broadway with the Lieutenant-Governor?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. I suppose you discussed the situation?
 A. They were discussing the posting of reserves and pickets when I arrived.
 Q. Did some message come when you were there?
 A. Yes, Colonel Bayley said a message had come in the vernacular from the city which he was unable to make out and I went and received it.
 Q. Was that from one your Indian subordinates?
 A. Yes.
 Q. To what effect was it?
 A. It was to the effect that a crowd had collected in the city and was proceeding down Anarkali Bazar towards Nila Gumbaz, which is where the Anarkali Bazar hits the Mall near the Alliance Bank of Simla.
 Q. What was done when that communication reached you?
 A. The Lieutenant-Governor asked Mr. Broadway whether his reserves were out. Mr. Broadway said no, some pickets had been posted and he would go off to the lines to turn out the rest of his reserves, and I drove Mr. Fyson down the Mall in my car.

Q. By that time it was getting dark I suppose?
 A. Yes, it was more than dusk.
 Q. Where did you go on the Mall?
 A. The mob must have been about 50 yards west of the O'Dwyer's Soldiers' Club, the old Punjab Bank.
 Q. What occurred when you came up to the mob?
 A. Until we got very close to them we did not know that there were any police there. They were mixed up with the crowd; but when we actually got in contact with the mob there were about a dozen uniformed men with muskets who were doing their best to push the crowd away. They were quite unsuccessful. Then Mr. Fyson and I went and harangued them and we were hustled about a great deal. There was a good deal of abuse given. There were certain struggles going on between the constables and members of the mob and Mr. Fyson said you must fire. But the difficulty was to collect the men to get them back from the crowd and also to make one's orders heard. The noise was tremendous. It was impossible to pass orders. Eventually we pulled a few men from the crowd and got them to load and fire.
 Q. At the time this order was given, was there an imminent danger of the police being entirely overpowered?
 A. Quite, they were getting round us from the compound of the O'Dwyer Club.
 Q. Did you apprehend that serious consequences might result?
 A. Yes.
 Q. I think some of the soldiers had joined?
 A. Two.
 Q. And after the firing what happened?
 A. The mob broke. The front rank of the mob at once gave way. There was no question that we should hold them.
 Q. I think about twenty rounds were fired.
 A. I should think so.
 Q. What casualties were caused at the time?
 A. I actually saw about three, but I believe one man died from the effects of his injuries and about seven were wounded.
 Q. You gave instructions to Mr. Clarke to continue to drive back the crowd?
 A. Yes. My voice had gone when Mr. Clarke turned up and he took them on.
 Q. What means did he employ?
 A. They did not fix bayonets; they turned their rifles the other way round and pushed them.
 Q. Did the crowd yield willingly?
 A. Not willingly but they went on.
 Q. This was after the firing?
 A. Yes.
 Q. How far did these men drive back the mob?

27 November 1919.]

Mr. G. A. COCKS—concluded—Mr. I. W. BOWRING.

A. We drove them before we were actually reinforced from where the firing took place at the eastern gate of the O'Dwyer Club and beyond the Telegraph Office. Mr. Clarke took them on beyond the Telegraph Office. At that point Mr. Broadway turned up with mounted police.

Q. On his arrival you handed over control?

A. I told him what happened and then handed over control to him.

Q. You yourself did not follow the crowd?

A. No, Sir.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. As Deputy Inspector-General of the C. I. D. you have to deal with the province?

A. Yes.

Q. And it is your special duty to get yourself acquainted with what is going on in the province. Have you any information or any evidence in your possession leading to the inference that in Lahore or in any other district of the Punjab there is any organization, secret or otherwise, the object of which is to overthrow the British Government?

A. I think my answer is probably in the negative, that I have no such evidence.

Q. I want to know the number of people in the crowd on the 10th of which you have just been speaking—an approximate number.

A. I can tell you the way I tried to estimate it. I estimated it by the area it covered. I should think the front was about twenty yards and as far as I could see it certainly went back more than fifty yards. The crowd must have run to thousands.

Q. What was the force at your command?

A. Actually about a dozen men.

By Mr. Herbert, Government Advocate—

Q. From the place where this firing took place opposite the O'Dwyer Club how far is Walter Locke's shop?

A. Walter Locke's shop is only about 50 or 100 yards away.

Q. Is that a place where you get ammunition, gun and explosives of every kind?

A. Yes.

Mr. I. W. BOWRING, Superintendent of Police, Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

By the President—

Q. Are you the Superintendent of Police, C. I. D.?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. I think you were not in Lahore on the 10th of April?

A. No Sir.

Q. But you had been in Lahore on the 6th?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You attended a large meeting at the Bradlaugh Hall on that occasion?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Were you in uniform?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And were you accompanied by two other officers of the C. I. D.?

A. Yes.

Q. What attitude did the audience adopt towards you?

A. Before I attended this meeting I sent a letter to Mr. Duni Chand who was convening the meeting informing him that I proposed to attend the meeting with two other officers. I attended the meeting by the orders of His Honour. I received no answer to my letter. When I arrived at the Bradlaugh Hall I was conducted by Mr. Dharam Dass to the main door of the Hall. There was a large crowd and it was very difficult to go in. Mr. Duni Chand came out from behind and said that he would go and see and make arrangements for us and asked us to wait a few minutes outside. We waited outside for three minutes. Then he said "everything is all right, will you please come in." As soon as we entered the room the whole audience proceeded to howl and hoot and yell. It displayed every sign of animosity towards us. We advanced towards the dais in the middle of the hall where Mr. Gokal Chand Naurang was delivering a speech. The speech was interrupted and there was a most deafening uproar. There were no arrangements whatever for our accommodation in the middle of the Hall and Mr. Narain said that he did not know what to do and that we could see the attitude of the crowd towards us. He said that British officers had never previously attended their meeting, that we had come there in uniform and he did not know what to do. I then noticed that some of our officers were beckoning to me from the gallery and I saw there were some chairs up there. So we left the Hall, went upstairs and got our seats in the middle of the gallery where we remained during the remainder of the meeting.

Q. Did anything occur at that meeting that you think it necessary to bring to our notice?

A. In what way Sir.

Q. As regards anything indicative of turbulence or sedition or anything of that sort?

Mr. Herbert.—The speeches made have been produced before you.

The President.—I do not want to read through speeches as it is very tiresome work. I want to know what the witness heard. Was the meeting a violent meeting? Were references made to popular heroes, was there any announcement made about the victims at Delhi or to the All Brothers or to Mr. Gandhi? Was anything said in the way of exciting the populace to do acts of violence?

A. Not definitely, Sir.

Q. You said you were away from Lahore and I think you returned about the 15th. After that were you entrusted with the prosecution of cases before the commissions that were set up?

A. Yes. The Punjab Government had deputed Mr. Tomkins, Deputy Inspector-General, to investigate the causes and sources of the disturbances and to investigate cases which arose out of them and I was deputed to take up the cases which occurred in the Lahore area.

Q. Would you explain to me your method of procedure in investigating these cases?

A. When I took over charge there were a large number of people who had been already arrested during the disturbances, the majority of whom were in the jail I dealt with these. There were about thirty people who had been arrested for creating disturbances in the city, for inciting people against Government and forcibly closing their shops. These were petty cases. I sent for them and recorded the evidence against them. I gave my opinion as to whether they should be punished or let off and I sent these cases to my superior officers. As regards the other cases, which concerned chiefly those in which the mob had actually assaulted the authorities, we were asked to conduct our investigation with as much despatch as possible so we dealt practically with those who had been wounded.

Q. Were there thirty or forty cases of conspiracy?

A. There were eleven cases.

Q. Did you determine the nature of the offence with which they were to be charged?

A. No, Sir. I put up the information which we recorded and it went to the Legal Remembrancer. Then it was the Legal Remembrancer who tested the charges we referred against these accused.

Q. After the case went before the Legal Remembrancer did you have anything further to do with it?

A. No, Sir. I was not allowed to attend the Court once I gave evidence.

27 November 1919.]

Mr. I. W. BOWRING.

Q. When did that trial start?

A. I am afraid I do not remember.

Q. It started after the date when the Military authorities prevented the entrance into the Punjab of advocates or pleaders who were proposed to defend certain accused?

A. I am afraid I cannot answer that question.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. It has been said that when you commenced to investigate these cases a large number of persons were in jail?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. About how many?

A. About fifty I should say.

Q. Were you told that you should deal with thirty minor cases and then there was the main conspiracy case? You did not deal with very many others. Out of the thirty do you remember whether the bulk of them were prosecuted?

A. I prosecuted two.

Q. How many were prosecuted altogether out of thirty?

A. Only two.

Q. Only two, so that the other twenty-eight never were brought to trial in Court?

A. No, Sir.

Q. Can you give any idea as to the average time these persons were kept under arrest?

A. One week—that is the average.

Q. Do you remember what was the longest time in any individual case?

A. Three weeks.

Q. They were arrested on the 10th or 11th or when?

A. I think on different dates while disorder was going on in the city or just after the disorder.

Q. They had been arrested by somebody who noticed their conduct in the street?

A. There was considered to be an order given from above later, but they were arrested by the local police who had seen their conduct.

Q. One man was kept for three weeks. What was the necessity for keeping him for three weeks before his case was investigated?

A. The majority of people whom I dealt with in these cases were men who had shops or had avocations in the city and their livelihood depended a good deal upon their freedom. This particular man was a rich man and he could afford to wait. So I dealt with the poor people first so that they could go back to their shops.

Q. Was there a system of allowing anyone out on bail?

A. I released all those people on bail while I was enquiring into their cases.

Q. There was one man who was kept in arrest for three weeks?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did he offer bail?

A. No, Sir. I had various letters about him from gentlemen and other important people.

Q. Letters to what effect?

A. Making a recommendation on his behalf.

Q. If you let some people out on bail why was not this man allowed out on bail? If he is a rich man why did you not let him out on bail?

A. Because he was a more important person and his case required a great deal of looking into.

Q. Is that any reason why he should be kept in arrest?

A. He had no occasion to do any harm while he was under arrest.

Q. You could not attend to everybody and you were taking the other people first and he was a substantial man—does it not seem a little strange that a man should be kept in arrest for three weeks and then ultimately released?

A. The charges against him were of a serious nature.

Q. What was the nature of the charges against him?

A. That he held meetings to prevent Government clerks from attending their offices and that he headed a large mob of several thousand persons and demonstrated against Government.

Q. That was a greater crime than the other members of the thirty. What was his name?

A. Rai Bahadur Ram Pershad.

Q. Still instead of dealing with the minor cases first, was it not suggested to you by this gentleman or anybody else on his behalf that Mr. Ram Pershad's case ought to be dealt with first?

A. No, Sir.

Q. And did you receive those letters?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What was the object of sending those except to indicate that he might be released on bail?

A. I don't know why they sent them.

Q. Did he ever ask that his case should be tried before any other cases were tried?

A. No, Sir.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. Is it true that when you went to that meeting, Mr. Razak and Mr. Hassan, two barristers, were requested by the chairman to take you to the gallery and to provide you with a suitable seat?

A. I did not hear the chairman ask them. I myself asked them to come with me. They went with me.

Q. And you remained there for an hour and a half?

A. Till the meeting ended.

Q. Approximately how long had you to stay there?

A. About that, an hour and a half.

Q. During that period there was no second demonstration against you?

A. No, Sir.

Q. Do you remember this man, Gokal Chand Naurang, he appealed to the audience not to cause any disturbance, not to loiter in the streets, but to go straight to their homes?

A. At that time?

Q. When he made his speech and when the audience were about to go, did he make an appeal to them in these terms?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. Had you anything to do with the case of Goverdhandas?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. The man who was arrested and brought back from Madras?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Are you aware that in the first instance he was discharged and acquitted?

A. I don't think that is quite right. I think they found that the dates prevented his being tried by this particular tribunal.

Q. On the question of jurisdiction for the offences he was charged with, he was discharged?

A. He was never tried. The case never came into court at all. They would not take it.

Q. The case was before the court, and an objection was raised, and that objection was allowed?

A. The case was before the court, but they did not take it.

Q. On his objection?

A. The counsel objected.

Q. So his counsel objected to the jurisdiction of the court, and he was discharged from that case. The case was not taken up?

A. No, I should not say he was discharged from that case.

Q. In the meantime Martial Law was abrogated?

A. Yes, it ceased to exist.

Q. You know that without anything against him for the next 8 or 10 days he was kept in jail?

A. Yes, he was.

Q. Then do you know anything about Mr. Manohar Lal's case?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Except that he was a trustee of the Tribune, had you anything against him?

A. No.

27 November 1919.]

Mr. L. W. BOWRING.

Q. Do you know one very respectable gentleman by name Rattan Chand who subscribed a lakh of rupees to the war fund.

A. Do you mean the man in the electrical company?

Q. He is a well known man in Lahore, who had actually subscribed one lakh of rupees to the war fund.

A. So many people subscribed to the war fund.

Q. Therefore you do not remember his name?

A. There was a Rattan Chand who was arrested.

Q. What offence had he committed?

A. He wanted to bring about a strike in the electrical power house.

Q. Is there any reliable evidence before you that he did so?

A. Very reliable evidence.

Q. He was not prosecuted?

A. We decided not to prosecute him.

Q. Is it not a fact that this man Rattan Chand was going to be prosecuted because he attended the funeral ceremony of one of his tenants or something like that or that he had subscribed to the langarkhanas?

A. I never heard of that.

Q. Or that he subscribed to the local langar fund?

A. No.

Q. Those men who were arrested in Amritsar and brought to Lahore did you also enquire into their cases?

A. No, I had nothing to do with those.

Q. Had you anything to do with the Gurdaspur Pleaders' case?

A. I was responsible for only the Lahore area.

Q. It appears to me that he was arrested, because a table was provided for the C. I. D., but as there was no information that two European officers would be coming, there was no room on that table?

A. There was only one table on which the speaker stood.

Q. Do you think that was deliberately done from what they said?

A. When arrangements were made in the gallery, there was no necessity to take us into the main body of the hall. We were supposed to sit in the gallery, and I presume arrangements were made.

Q. Do you know that in the principal conspiracy case, as soon as the prosecution evidence in that conspiracy case was finished, Martial Law ceased to exist? Is it true that within a day of closing the prosecution case in the principal conspiracy case, Martial Law ceased to exist as soon as the prosecution evidence was finished?

A. It may be a coincidence. I do not know of any facts in that case.

By Mr. Herbert, Government Advocate—

Q. Is it not a fact that, after the prosecution witnesses had been concluded, Martial Law was abrogated?

A. That is not true. Many defence witnesses had also been examined.

Mr. Abdul Kadir, Assistant Government Advocate.—

It appears from this printed record that the 27th May was the last day on which they took the last of the prosecution witnesses.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. Is it true that although Martial Law ceased to exist in the civil area, it continued for many weeks after that so far as the stations and railways were concerned?

A. Certainly it did. It was required for military purposes. The Afghan war was on.

Q. It did work? It was considered that there is no difficulty would be experienced?

A. Yes.

Q. Now about this man Ram Pershad, was it proved that he, as a matter of fact, did persuade the goods clerks to strike?

A. I was not satisfied with the evidence.

Q. Then, may I take it there are many persons who were prosecuted and the only offence against them was that either on the 30th or on the 6th they had delivered speeches or attended the meetings that were convened for holding the harkat, or they had persuaded certain people not to open their shops, and the offence against them was waging war against the King?

A. If you mention a few people I may know exactly what you mean.

Q. I am only asking you of those who were afterwards released?

A. May I ask you if you are referring to the main case?

Q. I am referring to the people whose cases were enquired into by you as having waged war against the King-Emperor simply on the allegation that either they had attended certain meetings or they had proposed certain resolutions or they had asked somebody not to open their shops?

A. Their offence was not waging war against the King. They were charged with creating disturbances in the city.

Q. Under which section?

A. The section would be applied after we decided how the case stands. The section is applied by the Legal Remembrancer, not by the police.

Q. When the question of bail for these men was raised, you said that they never asked for bail. What I want to know is unless and until you tell me what was the offence with which they were charged how could the question of bail be decided by you?

A. That was an irregularity for which we require an indemnity.

Q. You said you were ready to admit certain people on bail, and you said they were not admitted on bail because nobody, neither they themselves asked for bail nor any one else offered bail for them.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. You have said in your statement a very great feeling and tension appeared to be prevalent throughout the country. What was the tension and apprehension due to? Can you account for it?

A. I do not quite follow you.

Q. You say in your statement, paragraph 2, a very great feeling and tension appears to be prevalent throughout the country. What was the apprehension due to?

A. I came up from Bombay. The railways were disorganized. One could not get any food. The people were very excited. I did not know what had happened in the Punjab. The rails were torn up and communications were cut, and naturally people were in a state of apprehension.

Q. What was the apprehension?

A. The fear that rebellion had broken out.

Q. Why?

A. These things always accompany rebellion.

Q. Simply from these things you formed your opinion?

A. Yes.

Q. You say "my personal experience of the mobs in Lahore was on the 6th April when I was myself a witness to the attitude of the crowd who attempted to come down the Mall on the morning of that day." Was it a very threatening or excited crowd on the 6th?

A. Like screaming maniacs. They did not know what it was about.

Q. What was the number of the crowd that you happened to see, a very large number?

A. I only came up at the end after they had been dispersed. I did not see them at the beginning.

Q. You cannot say what the number of the crowd was?

A. I cannot say that.

Q. Then in answer to a question about a meeting which you attended you were asked whether there was anything said in the speeches to incite the people to do anything and you said 'not definitely'?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you mean by 'not definitely'?

A. May I refer to the speeches?

Q. Yes, certainly.

27 November 1919.] Mr. I. W. BOWRING—concluded—Khan Sahib SHEIKH ABDUL AZIZ.

A. The President said, "There was no difference to an act of passive resistance when they took the two states of mind and speech into consideration. It was the easiest matter for them to lay down their lives in a just cause. Government's action was based on injustice." That is all, I think.

Khan Sahib SHEIKH ABDUL AZIZ, Deputy Superintendent of Police, Political Branch, Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

By the President—

Q. Are you a Deputy Superintendent of Police, Political Branch of the Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. In the prosecution of your duties have you to make yourself acquainted with public questions agitating the people?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Was there in the Punjab a considerable agitation against the Rowlatt Bills?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. When did that agitation start in the Punjab?

A. It started in February, Sir.

Q. And did you receive information that it was going to be on an extensive scale?

A. Yes, Sir, on a scale which was not imagined then.

Q. Were there many meetings held in Lahore?

A. Not many, there were three meetings; on the 4th February, 9th March and 6th April.

Q. At the meetings were speeches made in denunciation of these Bills?

A. Yes, strong speeches were made.

Q. Can you speak as to the effect upon the people of the speeches?

A. Well, the effect of the speeches was it created misunderstanding against the motive of Government in passing this Bill.

Q. Can you say whether there were current among the people entirely erroneous rumours as to the effect of the Rowlatt legislation?

A. I think, Sir, many of rumours were started by certain people with intentions?

Q. What intention?

A. Bad intentions against the Government.

Q. So far as the political leaders are concerned, I mean the leaders who made speeches at these different meetings that were held, do you suggest that they made deliberate misrepresentations of the Rowlatt Act?

A. Well, in this connection the important thing is that they did not explain the Rowlatt Act at all. They were saying that it curtailed the liberty of the Indians, it tightened their chains, but of course they never went into details and explained what was the Rowlatt Act.

Q. Is the gravamen of your complaint against these political leaders that they did not explain the Rowlatt Act?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. But so far as their actual statements are concerned, you suggest that they represented that the Rowlatt legislation would have certain effects which the people believed it would have?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Do you suggest that?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What misrepresentations were made by the political leaders as regards the Rowlatt legislation apart from these general expressions of denunciation which you referred to? We have been told that there were rumours current among the people that the Rowlatt legislation would prevent more than a few people meeting together, that it would prevent marriages and funerals being held and that a great portion of the property of the individual will be confiscated by Government under taxation. Was any such statement as I have indicated now, made to your knowledge by any of the political leaders at any meeting?

A. The misunderstandings were created as it was said that these Rowlatt Acts gave great powers to the police and they could do anything they liked, and this resulted into forming an opinion that the Rowlatt Act was a weapon which the police could use in any way they liked.

Q. I think subsequently Mr. Gandhi's Satyagraha propaganda came on?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. According to Mr. Gandhi, that was a movement of mere soul force. In your experience would you expect the great majority of the population, as you have in Lahore, to observe passive resistance without the passive resistance leading to measures of violence?

A. I do not think that it could have been carried on on the lines Mr. Gandhi suggested.

Q. In point of fact as regards the hartals that were held, did it come under your knowledge that people not merely voluntarily refrained from going about their own business as usual, but actually used means to prevent other people from doing as they wanted?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did you form any opinion as to the sense in which the populace understood this Satyagraha movement?

A. What people generally understood was to disobey the orders of Government.

Q. Did they appear to consider that there was merit in that form of disobedience?

A. Yes, they are not people like Mr. Gandhi.

Q. I suppose in that connection you are referring not to leaders of the movement like Mr. Gandhi, but to the common people who do not understand the nature of soul force?

A. Yes, to the people generally.

Q. Were there rumours in Lahore also as regards the attitude of the Government towards the Turkish Empire?

A. That was one of the causes which upset the minds of the people. They had grievances of their own.

Q. In that state of feeling the news came of what had happened at Delhi on the 13th March?

A. There were disturbances there. People were fired at, and we heard lot of news which came from irresponsible sources and spread in the city, to the effect that the leaders in Delhi had taken up the cause of the people who had been wounded and killed and who had created the disturbances, and that lakhs of rupees had been collected by several of the leaders there in support of those people who stood against the Government. Of course all sorts of news came here, and this last piece of news emboldened the people.

Q. I think the hartal had taken place both at Delhi and Amritsar on the 30th March?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. I see in your statement you referred to seditious posters appearing about the beginning of April in Lahore. What sort of posters are you referring to? Have you got a copy?

(The Government Advocate handed up a copy to the President.)

Q. I see you refer to a series* of posters, did they appear in one of the cases?

The Government Advocate:—In the Lahore Main case.

Q. I see the first of these posters is one on the 6th April 1919 and was removed from the Bradlaugh Hall?

A. Yes, Sir.

* Vide Annexure page 106.]

27 November 1919.]

Khan Sahib SHEIKH ABDUL AZIZ.

Q. In that poster it was said "to practise tyranny and to give it the name of love, what a fine trick is this of the civilization of the West." "Muhammadans and Hindus raised a thousand cries and lamentations, but could not cure Government of its obduracy." The next one is Exhibit P-19, that was upon the Lohari Gate on the 6th April?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. In it is the statement "This is unjust, and we are not going to submit to this."

"Be brave and observe Mahatma Gandhi's fast. Don't obey the black Bill."

"Alright, Sir, it will be done as you say."

Q. Then there is another poster Exhibit P-20, dated 15th April 1919; it was found at the Shahalmi Gate.

A. That is about the question of opening shops.

Q. The next one is dated 12th April?

A. There were some posters found on 3rd April, before 6th April.

Q. On the 3rd April? Yes, There is Exhibit P-28:—

"If the mountain of calamity be about to fall on your motherland, and you do not render a bit of assistance to your country—who would be such a wretch as would not join in the mournful state of the country by closing his shop and observing a fast this (next) Sunday?"

There are one or two others, to which I would refer you. One was exhibited on the 12th April, in which there is this statement: "We are the Indian nation whose bravery and honour have been acknowledged by all the Kings of the world. The English are the worst lot, and are like monkeys, whose deceit and cunning are obvious to all high and low. Have these monkeys forgotten their original conditions?" etc., etc. "Now these faithless people, having forgotten the loyalty of Indians, are bent upon exercising limitless tyranny. O Brethren! Gird up your loins and fight. Kill and be killed. Do not lose courage, and try your utmost to turn out these mean monkeys from your holy country."

There are a number of other similar posters, but this one is the worst of the lot. Were these posters inflaming the minds of the people?

A. Certainly; they were very commonly read.

Q. Then there is P-25?

A. The Danda Fauj also started a newspaper in those days.

The President:—I have seen it before—"Danda Akhbar."

Mr. Abdul Kadir, Assistant Government Advocate:—I wish to bring to your Lordship's notice that we have got the man who removed it, and he will come later on.

The President:—We have already had that. Those three are in the same strain as the one that I have just read, dated 12th April.

Q. Did you see from the attitude of the mobs that they were getting more and more out of hand from day to day from the 6th April?

A. Yes.

Q. Were these different posters inflaming them?

A. Yes; more and more.

Q. Did you yourself fear that there might be some very serious trouble in the way of a rising?

A. Yes; I feared it and brought this matter to the notice of my officers in the end of March, and said that something very serious would soon happen here if this agitation went on in the way it was going on.

Q. Then on the 6th April, there was a complete hartal. Did you notice anything particular on that day?

A. There were lots of processions going on in the city.

Q. On the 9th April, there was the Ram Naumi procession. We heard about it?

A. I did not go personally to the Ram Naumi procession. But it was reported to me.

Q. Were you personally at the Badshahi Mosque on the 11th April?

A. I was not there personally.

Q. I see that you refer in your statement that pictures of Their Majesties the King and Queen have been destroyed?

A. This fact was reported to me by the officers who were present there the same evening, and it was reported shortly after these things took place.

Q. Were there also reports as to the disfiguring of the portraits of Their Majesties and signboards?

A. This was also reported to me very soon after this occurred by our officers.

Q. On that day, i.e., the 11th April, did the mob appear at the Railway Booking Office?

A. Yes.

Q. Did they prevent the Government employees from doing their work?

A. Yes, and forced them to close.

Q. Did they do any destruction?

A. They damaged the notice boards there.

Q. Did you visit that spot yourself?

A. I visited, that spot personally.

Q. I think you removed the broken board?

A. Yes. I removed the broken board which was produced in the Main Lahore case.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. Were you present at the Badshahi Mosque on the 11th April?

A. No, Sir; I was not personally present.

Mr. Abdul Kadir, Assistant Government Advocate:—There is a witness coming who was present on the 11th. There was a report and Mr. Justice Rankin called for that report the other day. There is a printed copy. It is this witness who compiled that.

Q. If there is a witness coming who was actually present, then I would not do more than put this to you. You compiled the report* from information given to you by subordinates?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you do it at the time?

A. Yes; as soon as the men came from the spot.

Q. Is this a copy that was produced in the Main Conspiracy Case?

A. Yes.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. How long have you been in this Province?

A. I have been here since 1911.

Q. Where were you in the months of February, March and April?

A. I was at Lahore.

Q. Did you leave Lahore during these months?

A. I may have gone out for some enquiries.

Q. Except that you may have gone for a day or two, you were here permanently?

A. Yes.

Q. Are the other districts in your jurisdiction?

A. The C. I. D. has got the whole of the Punjab.

Q. Different officers are not appointed for different places?

A. No.

Q. Except what happened at Lahore, what occurred at any other place would be only second-hand knowledge?

A. Yes. Except in cases when we receive reports direct from our own officers.

Q. Whether it be any report direct from your officer or whether it be a report received from some other officer, it would be your hearsay knowledge, not your personal knowledge?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you aware that for the last 2 or 3 years the public are against the C. I. D. and that they are not satisfied with their work?

A. Yes, I know.

Q. Has it not been repeatedly asserted that the reports that they make are not correct reports? Has that been alleged? It may be wrong. Are you not aware of it?

A. It is alleged.

27 November 1919.]

Khan Sahib SHEKH ABDUL AZIZ.

Q. Not only that but complaints against the C. I. D. have been made even in the Imperial and Local Legislative Councils ?

A. I do not know of any case.

Q. Don't you know whether any complaint was made either in the Imperial Legislative Council and in the Local Legislative Councils against the C. I. D. ?

A. I do not know of any complaints having been made against any C. I. D. officers.

Q. I do not say against any particular person. I want to know whether or not you are aware that complaints were made against the C. I. D. both in the Imperial and the various Local Legislative Councils ?

A. On any particular charge ?

Q. Not on any particular charge, but against the way in which they are working ?

A. Yes, there were.

Q. Even in the Imperial Council in connection with the Rowlatt Act complaint was made against the C. I. D. in one or two speeches ?

A. I forget it now.

Q. What I want to know is whether in connection with these Rowlatt Bills any complaints were made against the C. I. D. in the Imperial Legislative Council (not against any particular person) ? I think the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri complained ?

A. So far as I remember, I did not read anything.

Q. I think you are constantly in touch with all the local and provincial papers and all the leading papers ?

A. Generally not constantly.

Q. Do you read the Statesman ?

A. No.

Q. Do you read the Pioneer ?

A. Sometimes.

Q. Do you read the Independent ?

A. I have been reading it now and then.

Q. The Leader ?

A. Yes, the Leader too.

Q. The Bombay Chronicle ?

A. Not except on one or two occasions.

Q. One of the reasons why there was unrest and discontent, you yourself say, was that it was believed not only by the masses, but even by the leaders and by every body that the Government of India, was going to whittle down the Montagu-Chelmsford reforms ?

A. There were rumours.

Q. You call them rumours ?

A. Rumours.

Q. As a matter of fact was it not everywhere that that feeling was given expression to in broad daylight ? There is no question of rumours.

A. Yes ; it is true.

Q. I think you must have refreshed your knowledge of the Rowlatt Bills. Your complaint against the leaders was that they did not go into details ?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it necessary for them to do so ?

A. I think it is necessary. Why should one side of the case alone be put ?

Q. Take Rowlatt Bill No. 1. Was it not sufficient for them to say that a new crime, viz., the possession of seditious matter, has been created. Was it not sufficient ? And that extensive or more powers had been given to the Police than they had before ? Do you think anything more was required so far as this Rowlatt Bill No. 1 was concerned ?

A. I should say that I have got no complaint about this.

Q. I am quite sure from the way in which that section is worded, it would be very difficult to understand and explain it ?

A. I have read it long ago.

Q. And most probably, I beg your pardon, I think even now it would be very difficult for you to explain it, if I gave you the text of that section ?

A. I cannot say.

Q. Therefore so far as Rowlatt Bill No. 1 is concerned, you have no complaint that the leaders only said that this Rowlatt Bill No. 1 creates another offence. I will give you an instance. Supposing a medical man is dispensing medicine, and he gets hold of a seditious leaflet, and sends the prescription in that paper, and if all of a sudden that paper, through the kindness of the C. I. D., is found in possession of a political leader, then the onus of proof is with that leader that that leader came honestly by it. Is it not so ?

A. It was said so.

Q. Therefore so far as that Bill No. 1 is concerned you have no complaint on this ground that the sections were not explained. That was the only thing that was said, and it was absolutely sufficient so far as the masses were concerned ?

A. I did not hear the speeches.

Q. Not about the speeches. I am confining myself to Rowlatt Bill No. 1. Are you aware that Rowlatt Bill No. 1 gives more power to the Police than they already possess ?

A. I do not know that.

Q. Have you ever read Section 196-B of the Criminal Procedure Code ?

A. Yes.

Q. Under that section, have you any right without the permission of the Deputy Commissioner or some constituted authority to enquire into seditious or anarchical crime and to make regular investigation into these matters ?

A. No.

Q. Are you aware that section 196-B is going to be modified by this Act ? Are you or are you not aware ?

A. I did not see it.

Q. I want to know whether or not you are aware that this section 196-B is going to be extended ?

A. Yes.

Q. And that if that section 196-B becomes law, this restriction is removed ?

A. Yes.

Q. You will agree with me that the powers of the C. I. D. have been increased ?

A. Yes, at least to some extent.

Q. So far as Rowlatt Bill No. 1 is concerned there are only two important points. Can you suggest to me any further important points ?

A. No.

Q. Take Rowlatt Bill No. 2, which has already become an Act ?

A. Yes.

Q. What explanation do you want ? Did they not say that in certain cases the right of appeal has been taken away ? Is that not pointed out in any number of speeches ?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that true or false ?

A. That is true.

Q. Was there any further explanation required so far as the masses of people are concerned ?

A. No.

Q. Did they not say that under certain conditions a man who is run in will not have the right to be represented by counsel ?

A. Yes.

Q. Does it require any further explanation ? Do you require the reading of section word by word ?

A. You will see the speeches.

Q. I am coming to that. If you tell me anything else I am quite prepared to accept it. Was there any general complaint that in certain cases of the prosecutions or actions being taken under the Rowlatt Bill the right of representation by counsel was taken away ?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it not explained that under certain circumstances, the executive can arrest a man and put him into jail for about one month or two months, and further that he cannot get a judicial trial by a legally constituted judicial court ? Was that not the complaint against the Bill ?

27 November 1919.]

Khan Sahib SHAIKH ABDUL AZIZ.

A. Yes.

Q. Does it require any further explanation?

A. But where was it explained? Excuse me, I am asking you.

Q. I am coming to it. Does it require any further explanation? If a speaker stands up and says the right of appeal has been taken away under certain conditions, right of representation by consul under certain conditions has been taken away, and that under certain sections, the executive will be so just as to keep a person in jail for one month or more, does it require any further explanation? Does it require it to be stated like this? Section... clause B, says....; and the interpretation of this clause is this... Is it really for a public speaker to go into these details?

A. That is a point for argument, excuse me.

Q. According to you it was necessary for every speaker who wanted to say anything against this Bill to see that all kept a copy of the Bill before them and to read it word for word, first in English in original, then to translate it. If he could not translate, he must have an authorised High Court translator, so that there may be no question raised by the C. I. D., then translate and translate it section by section and clause by clause to the public. You would have been satisfied with that. That is the Government case and you are putting it on behalf of Government. I have heard it. Your complaint is that the Bill was not explained. I cannot understand it. Therefore I want you to explain it to me, because you have come forward to put the case for the Government before this Committee. What do you mean by saying that the Bill was not explained?

A. In the speeches that were made at Amritsar, these things were not explained by the speakers.

Q. Which was not explained?

A. Nobody explained that this was intended for revolutionaries; it was intended for anarchists, and the Police have no power to use it unless the Governor-General in Council applies it to a certain portion.

Q. Do you know when this modification or amendment was made? When was it made? On what date?

A. I think it was in March.

Q. So far as the Bill was concerned, was it very clear when these speeches were being made, when these meetings were held? Was this not the main ground, and was it not upon the agitation that followed that this was modified by the Imperial Legislative Council?

A. Yes.

Q. Therefore where is your complaint in regard to speeches made before the passing of the Bill? What is your complaint?

A. My complaint is it was not referred to.

Q. That this would apply only to anarchical crime? Is it not an amendment that was accepted after the whole country agitated for 15 days or three weeks, and subsequently this amendment was accepted in the Imperial Legislative Council? It is only then they said that they would make it clear that it applies to anarchical crimes?

A. Yes.

Q. Therefore this has not been there from the very beginning?

A. I cannot remember.

Q. You do not know what was in the Act in the beginning and what form it took in the end?

A. There were some changes finally. It was for 3 years.

Q. You have said that your ground was that these speakers in public did not explain that it would apply only to anarchical crimes. I am coming to that. When meetings were being held against this Bill, is it or is it not a fact that up to that time it was not clear whether or not it would apply to anarchical crimes, and subsequently on the date of the passing of the Bill, a resolution was passed, speeches were made and then this amendment was accepted by the Government? Are you aware of that fact?

A. Yes.

Q. Very well, let that ground go. Then is there anything else?

A. You might ask me please definitely.

Q. What is your complaint against it? I can understand and I will not dispute. If violent speeches were made inciting people to have recourse to violence, then there is no difference between you and me. For the time being, you had not referred to any incitement to violence. Apart from that what is your complaint against these speakers?

A. Various speeches were made at Amritsar and Lahore, and I will leave that thing to you to judge and come to a finding.

Q. Therefore you cannot put your case?

A. My reply is based upon the tone of the various speeches that were made at Amritsar and Lahore.

Q. That may be; according to you they were violent or they were seditious. I am not asking that; I will concede that for a moment. Apart from being seditious, what is your ground of complaint against the speakers at these various meetings which were held before the passing of the Rowlatt Act?

A. They magnified matters and did not explain things impartially.

Q. It comes to the same thing again. They did not explain that this Act was intended for special circumstances. That is your complaint?

A. Yes. The speakers did not explain to the audience that the Act would apply only under special circumstances.

Q. And that it would apply only to anarchists? Is it not so?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you not aware that in hundreds of papers and in any number of speeches this point was taken up by speakers and writers, rightly or wrongly? Their argument was that it is just like the Press Act and as other Acts were at the time of the passing of the Act, viz., that it is intended that the Act should apply only to a particular set of circumstances, and that they were not satisfied that it would be confined to anarchical crimes? Was this not explained in speeches and papers?

A. They said so.

Q. I am quite satisfied with that. Then you said that seditious posters were being published in the month of April and there was great activity?

A. Yes.

Q. You have placed these before us?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you kindly let me know about the posters before the 10th April to which you object. I do understand and I will not discuss as to what happened after the 10th April; but before the 10th April, which is the poster to which you take the greatest objection? Is it P. 28, that was the one that was referred to by the Council?

A. First of all P. 18.

Q. Which was found posted at Bradlaugh Hall on 6th April?

A. Yes.

Q. It is this "That which we apprehended has happened. The fortune of India in falling has assumed the form of the Rowlatt Bill." It is poetry, everybody remembers it. It is not prose?

A. Yes.

Q. Then it goes on:—

"2. There is confusion in every town, province and throughout the Empire. Is this the Law or the tremour of an earthquake?"

"3. To practise tyranny and give it the name of love, what a fine trick is this of the civilization of the West!"

"4. This pitcher of the East was full of the honey of loyalty and now its sweetness has become bitter to the British."

"5. Muhammadans and Hindus raised a thousand cries and lamentations, but could not cure Government of its obduracy."

Khan Sahib SHEIKH ABDUL AZIZ.

"6. Their arguments had no effect on Vincent, though Jinnah much beat his face and Sapru struck his head a great deal.

"7. In vain have we rubbed our foreheads for years in the Council chamber. Now we are going to search for Gandhi's threshold."

Now may I take it that according to you this is the worst seditious poster that you have come across before the 10th April?

A. I am only referring to it as objectionable.

Q. That is the worst specimen of the poster you can give me before the 10th April which breathes sedition?

A. I have never said that this is the worst.

Q. That is why I wanted you to give me the worst, so that I may not waste time. Are you not aware, as a C. I. D. officer, that during the last 6 or 7 years hardly a year passes without seditious posters being pasted either at important places or at hostels or schools or other places both in prose and poetry?

A. Yes, occasionally.

Q. Therefore the mere fact of a certain seditious poster being posted in Lahore on the 10th would not necessarily be an indication of the fact that there was something abnormal in Lahore?

A. That it does not mean.

Q. Are you aware that seditious posters of worse type, one or two, were found every month, and you know that you have not been able to trace who was responsible for them?

A. Yes.

Q. You yourself admit that after the firing on the 10th took place there was on the 11th and 12th a very great deal of excitement. Is it so?

A. Yes.

Q. Will it not be natural for the party, or some anarchists, or fanatics at such time to publish these posters?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you prepared to state before this Committee that the publication of these posters or pasting of these was the work of any organized society, or had you any information that on any subsequent date it was the organised work of any seditious society? Have you any evidence?

A. Evidence?

Q. Yes, I want to know if you have any evidence?

A. I have no evidence.

Q. You say that people only understood that orders of the Government should be disobeyed?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you aware, as the head of the C. I. D., as to how many people there are throughout the province who had taken the Satyagraha vow before the 10th?

A. The movement had not yet started.

Q. You have not got my point.

A. No.

Q. You are aware as a C. I. D. officer that the vow was taken for the very reason that those persons who may take the vow, whatever laws he chose, he will have to disobey?

A. Yes.

Q. It affected only those who took it?

A. It will affect others too.

Q. I am now coming to the point. You say disobedience must be confined to those persons who had taken the vow?

A. It was meant.

Q. It was said so?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you aware that it was announced that Mahatma Gandhi or any of his committee fixed upon certain laws that those laws should be disobeyed?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it not a fact that, so far as Satyagraha movement is concerned, whatever may have been the laws chosen for disobedience, it was everywhere without exception given out that you must obey the orders of the Police and of the District authorities, and that you should not commit riot?

A. Yes, it was said.

Q. Was it not distinctly stated that disobedience of authorities and forming of unlawful assemblies should not be had recourse to?

A. Yes, it was stated that they should disobey civil law.

Q. For instance, you mean not paying Municipal taxes. Those orders were to disobey the executive orders of the authorities?

A. Yes, practically it would lead to it.

Q. Now there were only three meetings held on the 4th, 9th and the 6th?

A. Yes.

Q. Therefore if there was anything seditious in those speeches or if any instructions were given to the masses against the Rowlatt Bill of what Mr. Gandhi meant or in your opinion whatever was explained to the masses will be found in the speeches-reports of which have been submitted to this committee, and they formed part of the Conspiracy Case?

A. Yes.

Q. You have no other material beyond this?

A. About the speeches.

Q. What instructions were given to the masses and how was Satyagraha was explained to them?

A. I do not know.

Q. And when you say that the masses understood that they ought to disobey the orders of the Government you mean to say that they understood it from what was urged in those speeches?

A. Well, they would only understand it to mean disobedience of orders.

Q. Don't you think they will think twice or thrice before they accept what is said in the speeches?

A. When open speeches are made on the platforms?

Q. When you make that statement that the masses understood that Government should be disobeyed they understood it from what was said in those speeches? Is it not so?

A. Well, they certainly heard what was said. I do not know in what light they understood.

Q. Their attitude was the result of the speeches which you have placed before us?

A. Yes.

Q. With how many persons had you any discussions about the Rowlatt Bill in the month of March?

A. I had no discussions.

Q. Had you or had you not any discussions about the Rowlatt Bill? I am sure you had no discussions with any of the shop-keeper, etc.?

A. No. With none.

Q. And you never made it your point to go to the different people and ask their opinion about the Rowlatt Bill?

A. No.

Q. Therefore when you have made that statement, you have based it upon the reports and rumours which you had received from time to time from your officers?

A. Yes, and from what I heard at various meetings.

Q. Then you had conversations?

A. No conversation.

Q. Then you mean that some people came to you and said that that was the attitude of the mob?

A. Yes.

Q. That is also hearsay knowledge?

A. Yes.

Q. And that is from information that you received from some persons who informed you that this was the attitude of the public of Lahore?

A. Yes, I was told personally by some people about the rumours.

Q. I am coming to rumours now. So far as rumours are concerned, are you or are you not aware that rumours, about any restrictions upon marriages or of that sort were current after the Hon'ble Mr. Patel introduced his Bill in the Imperial Council?

A. There was no special mention of Mr. Patel.

27 November 1919.]

Khan Sahib SHUKH ABDUL AZIZ

Q. Did you or did you not receive reports from your subordinates as to the rumours about any restriction upon marriage freedom and these reports came into currency after the Bill of Mr. Patel was introduced?

A. No doubt this was a rumour. It was in March, April and February.

Q. Before February they were not in currency?

A. No.

Q. What I want to know is this. Whether those rumours of restrictions upon marriages, promptly or less promptly were in circulation before March or they were not in circulation?

A. I think they came in the month of March. I heard of these rumours in December or November.

Q. Do you know in what month this Bill was introduced in the Council?

A. I do not know. I could not tell you the exact date.

Q. Do you know it is a matter of more than a year? I know.

A. I had nothing to do with it.

Q. Further, this rumour about the rights of landlords and of what Government is going to take, is it not connected with the Land Alienation Bill? It may not be according to you very prominent; but was it or was it not in circulation?

A. It was in circulation.

Q. Then do you know that from the time the income-tax has been introduced and these new forms have come into use there were rumours about the intentions of the Government in regard to the rights of the people?

A. Yes.

Q. From these things I think you will agree that all sorts of wild rumours got currency and they were swallowed by the masses, and even the educated classes believed in them, during the last 3 years.

A. During the last three years, they were generally about the war.

Q. Many absurd things were said.

A. Yes; many absurd things about the war.

Q. About many things happening in India, is it not so; about aeroplanes and many other things. These are war incidents?

A. But not these rumours.

Q. Have you yourself personally heard anybody giving currency to these rumours?

A. No.

Q. We are told that so far as the surrounding villages are concerned, those villagers never even heard the name of the Rowlatt Act. Is it not so? We have been repeatedly told so, and these are reports of people who have gone through the villages that many of them do not even know the name of the Rowlatt Act?

A. In my opinion they knew it.

Q. According to you, the majority of the villagers knew about the Rowlatt Act?

A. Yes.

Q. And according to you the majority of the villagers were not loyal and were disaffected?

A. There were rumours prevailing, and they may grow disloyal.

Q. What I want to know is whether these rumours were or were not believed in by them? If they believed in them what was the frame of their mind?

A. The frame of mind of anybody who believes in these rumours would be undesirable.

Q. Were or were not the villagers believing in these rumours?

A. Probably.

Q. According to your opinion?

A. I have no opinion; they would certainly believe to a certain extent.

Q. According to your opinion, the majority of the surrounding villages in the districts of Amritsar, Lahore and Gujranwala were all disaffected?

A. I could not say that about each and every village.

Q. I say the majority of the villagers? I am talking of the villages in Lahore, Amritsar, Gujranwala and Lyallpur. They were disloyal?

A. I have not said that they were disloyal.

Q. This small minority, that is, the pleader class, Mukhtar class, and young boys?

A. I would not attribute disloyalty to anybody as a class.

Q. Then I want to know the proportion. Supposing there is a village of 1,500 inhabitants. There may be 5 disloyal persons. In the same way. Do you ascribe disloyalty to any appreciable fraction of the population on account of these rumours?

A. In my opinion, there is a lot of difference between disloyalty and discontent.

Q. Now that we are agreed that there is a great difference between disloyalty and discontent, therefore according to you the majority of the villagers were discontented. Only you won't say that because that would be prejudicial to the Government case?

A. I cannot say that.

Q. Can you give me any idea as to what was the proportion?

A. I cannot give you any proportion. What I know is that these rumours were prevailing and, especially, I have information about Sialkot. I know nothing about Gujranwala and other places. But I had information about some places in Lahore.

Q. That is, you have no information about Gujranwala. I am just taking the month of February. Can you place any information in your possession before this committee showing that on account of these rumours people were discontented in the Amritsar District or Gujranwala?

A. I only say there were rumours; but I could not say they were discontented.

Q. That is, there were no reports about the behaviour of these villagers?

A. No.

Q. As to what effect these rumours had upon them?

A. No.

Q. Practically before that poster, there was no such thing as Danda Fauj in Lahore. It was started for the first time when that poster appeared?

A. It came into existence on the 11th April.

Q. You say that you got this information from your officers?

A. Yes. If it were necessary I could give their names.

Q. I do not want their names. They are from your C. I. D. men, C. I. D. Inspectors.

A. Yes.

Passed! Rowlatt Bill passed.

Sir, What is this evil?

"Do you not know that an innocent gentleman will now go to jail without a warrant (lit., permit)."

"Why? What harm have we done?"

"Why? Sir, we rendered so much service in the War, sacrificed hundreds of thousands of heads, and offered crores of rupees. Should not the Government reward us in return for this?"

"Well, Sir, this is very nice, indeed."

"Well done; foolish people always get such reward."

"This is unjust, and we are not going to submit to this."

Are we to remain the life long slaves of tyrant Englishmen?

"No, never."

We are the Indian nation whose bravery and honour have been acknowledged by all the kings of the world. The English are the worst lot, and are like monkeys, whose deceit and cunning are obvious to all high and low. Have these monkeys forgotten their original conditions? In the time of Alamgir they could get the service of a Durban (gate-keeper) with difficulty. Now these faithless (namak haram) people, having forgotten the loyalty of Indians are bent upon exercising limitless tyranny. O brethren! Gird up your loins, and fight. Kill and be killed. Do not lose courage, and try your utmost to turn out these mean monkeys from your holy country. God will surely help you; trust Him and you will be victorious.

“ DANDA AKHBAR.”

First event.—When Mahatma Gandhi arrived at Palwal, the English Monkey informed him that his entry into the Punjab was forbidden, and that he should please go back. He replied that he would never go back; then that pig monkey arrested him. Reports of his arrest reached here at once.

Second event.—When the news reached Amritsar, the Danda Fauj of the brave Sikhs set fire to the Bank, the Railway Station and Electric Power House. They cut the telegraph wires and removed the railway line. The Danda Fauj of Amritsar bravely killed a number of European monkeys and their Sikh Regiments have revolted and deserted. O Hindu, Muhammadan and Sikh brethren, enlist at once in the Danda Army, and fight with bravery against the English monkeys. God will grant you Victory. Do not apprehend that God does not help us. Cast away such a notion out of your heart. God helps us at all times and hours. Conquer the English monkeys with bravery. God will grant Victory. Leave off dealings with the Englishmen, close offices and workshops. Fight on. This is the command of Mahatma Gandhi.

Third event.—O Hindu, Muhammadan and Sikh brethren, do you know of the incident that took place at the Mall Road on the night of the 10th April? The Hindus and Muhammadans who were martyred that day were your own and they sacrificed their lives. Does not this incident excite you? What is the reason? Were not those who were made martyrs in Hira Mandi on the 12th April your own bretheren, and died at the hands of the tyrants? Does the Prophet of God command you not to fight against the tyrant? No, never, the Prophet himself fought, and has commanded us too to destroy the tyrants as he did. Should we not be ashamed of ourselves that while the tyrant is up to all sorts of cruelty, we are sitting quiet? O Hindu, Muhammadan and Sikh brethren, raise the cry of Allah Akbar and kill the Kafirs. Get ready soon for the war and God will grant Victory to India very soon. I will make my heart a target for millions of spears and lances. I will make my body a sieve in the path of God. Every one, whether of the classes or masses, should wear mourning dress, viz., black clothes, and if one cannot afford to do so, he should wear a crape on the arm as we cannot fight we should mourn for (King) George ; otherwise, we ought to raise the cry of Allah Akbar (God is Great) ;

" You are on oath, namely, by spear, lance and the blood-thirsty dagger and by every gate and wall of the city."

O brethren ! It is a sad thing to relate that I intended to go to the Badshahi Mosque to-day, but I was prevented (from entering it) by Englishmen, the progeny of monkeys. Alas, they have deprived us of the house of God also. Mark ! how your brethren of Amritsar are fighting. That city is in their possession, and here all the doors of the Shahi Mosque have been closed.

O, Punjabis ! muster up your courage and suppress not the sentiment of Hindus and Muhammadans. If you are men, take possession of the Shahi Mosque to-day. Fight, kill or be killed.

" Do not lose your heart before the army of the enemy. Kill him, or be killed by him."

" When the cry of Maula Ali will be raised, and the crescent flag of Ali will be hoisted over the heads."

NOTE.—Any Muhammadan who removes this notice or tears it off, shall be called to account on the day of Resurrection.

And one who tears it off, his mother be ravished by an Englishman.

MEASURES AGAINST THE BABUS.

Lalaji.—Hartal is complete, victory is ours, but one defect still remains.

Servant.—What is that ?

Lalaji.—These bastard Babus do not give up attending their offices

Servant.—Well, you have the remedy in your own hands.

Lalaji.—Tell me soon, why are you silent ?

Servant.—Almost all the Babus live in hired houses give them 24 hours' notice at once to vacate your houses, so that they may have to take their wives also with them to the offices.

Lalaji.—Well, you have told this at the opportune time. Our Hartal will never cease now, and victory is ours.

TYRANNY.

TYRANNY.

Many innocent brave Indians (Hindus and Muhammadans) have been killed in India.

Time for India to wake up. Rise, wake up and show courage.

1. The tyrannical Faringee has deceitfully used his arrow and shaft against the red-headed water-fowl. He has laid waste our garden, desolated it and plucked the beautiful luminous rose.

2. He sets fire with the hands and then puts it out with the feet. From where has this great Godless sinner come? He is like the drop of acid.

Rise up, ye Indian heroes! Draw out the sword and look at the declaration of war made by the chivalrous Punjab.

3. The tyrannical Faringees have sucked blood like leeches and the complexion (of Indians) has become pale like the sugar-cane pressed underground. By robbing us the tyrants have made us penniless. Settle accounts with them now.

4. The earth will not open out to swallow us up, even though we see the blood of Indians gather like water in a pool. (Expl.—We are eager to be buried in the bowels of the earth out of shame). Rise, sons of lions! Draw out the sword and look at the declaration of war made by the chivalrous Punjab.

5. The Faringees have killed dear Indian brethren and roasted their flesh on spits like a morsel. They have left neither cloth to wear, nor grain to eat. They have robbed the treasure of our fair honour.

6. They have half slaughtered us like a butchered goat, and the hand of the tyrannical Faringees has worked like that of a butcher. Rise, O brave Indians! Draw out the sword and look at the declaration of war made by the chivalrous Punjab.

The battle-field is hot now. Rise up, brethren. Delay not (or) the hour of your sinking is close at hand. How long will you remain quiet in slavery, even though you see the blood of Indians gather like water in a pool?

8. The whole world is awake and has become happy by becoming free. Why has the water of our tank become dry?

Rise, O sons of lions! Draw out the sword and look at the declaration of war made by the chivalrous Punjab.

9. We fought for the sake of the tyrannical Faringees and lakhs of battle-fields were dyed with our blood. By robbing us the tyrants have made us penniless. They have (only) promised after our repeated demands.

10. They have to-day become black cobras and are hissing loudly. The tyrannical Faringees have been bit by our bite. Driven to desperation, Indians—Hindus, Muhammadans and Sikh youths—have at last gone to fight.

11. The police came and with it the cavalry. The faces of Indians have also become red with rage. We see not the white faces moving (to-day) for they have been confined to towers.

12. The dutiful sons of India who have died have fallen in a right cause. They have become martyrs and sacrificed life to honour.

13. What bravery can we show in this age without arms? Lose not courage, though we are overwhelmed with afflictions.

14. The battle has begun. Let the brave come to the field. The call has gone out for the heads of Indians. Dear Brethren,

It behoves you not to touch any Government work. No clerk should attend his office, etc., nor any railway servant should go to the railway business. You know it was only recently that the blood of several of our innocent brethren has been shed. You should therefore not pay any kind of tax to the Government. Nor should any one pay Government land revenue, nor do any kind of help to Government. If all brethren, Hindus and Muhammadans, unite and work together, then you will see how the tyrannical English will disappear in no time. These white-skinned Englishmen are tyrants, and there is no cruelty which they have not practised on us. Avenge yourselves now on them. The time is favourable; this opportunity will not come again Mahatma Gandhi ki jai (Victory to Mahatma Gandhi) who has caused a wave of union to surge through us. Shout, Hindu-Muslim ki jai (Victory to the Hindus and the Muhammadans!)

At Lahore, Friday, the 28th November 1919.

PRESENT:

The Hon'ble LORD HUNTER.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice RANKIN.

The Hon'ble Mr. W. F. RICE, C.S.L., O.I.E., I.C.S.

Major-General Sir GEORGE BARROW, K.C.B., K.C.M.G.

The Hon'ble Pandit JAGAT NARAYAN.

Sardar Sahibzada SULTAN AHMAD KHAN.

Mr. H. WILLIAMSON, M.B.E., I.F., Secretary.

Mr. A. DALE-GREEN, District Traffic Superintendent, North-Western Railway, Lahore, District.

By the President—

Q. You are District Traffic Superintendent of the Lahore District?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. I do not propose to trouble you about the actual incidents on which we have had a good deal of other testimony, but I want to get some information from you about railway matters. Had you, some days prior to the 10th of April, information as to disaffection among the staff of the railway?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. How long before the 10th of April?

A. I first heard about it about the end of February.

Q. What was the disaffection?

A. I would not call that disaffection. I heard that they were getting up petitions and things like that for increases of pay.

Q. That was all you heard at the end of February?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. But within a few days of the 10th of April did you hear about prospects of a strike?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. How long before the 10th of April?

A. I think I first heard about that on about the 30th of March.

Q. On what ground was a strike threatened then?

A. The idea was that it was to get more pay.

Q. At the time did you consider it probable that the strike would come off?

A. No, Sir.

Q. In fact a strike was averted at the time?

A. That was after the trouble had begun.

Q. Did you connect the railway trouble in any way with anti-British or anti-Government agitation?

A. When the trouble occurred, I then connected it.

Q. But when you first heard of the prospects of a strike did it occur to you that it had its foundation in anything else than an agitation to get increased pay?

A. Not when I first heard of it; I thought it was the usual thing.

Q. Now what made you change your mind?

A. What I heard personally.

Q. Personally when and from whom?

A. One example was we had trouble on my control phones—a system of working railways.

Q. What sort of trouble?

A. We were trying to get the One-Up Mail through as far as Gujranwala and the staff on the phones by which one passes orders to let a train go on or another train come in would not allow us to do this.

Q. Who would not?

A. The Station Master on the phones between Shahdara and Gujranwala.

Q. What date was that?

A. 14th April.

Q. On what ground would the Station Masters not allow you to do that?

A. They kept calling out and interfering with any order that was passed and giving each other in a loud voice incorrect information as to what had happened, which I knew was incorrect, and suggesting that very soon Europeans would all be killed and places would be burned down, and things like that.

Q. Did you hear that conversation over the phone?

A. I heard that conversation personally.

Q. Who was the person communicating that?

A. There were four or five stations on the phone and it is impossible to say when they were all on the controlled phone which one did it, and they took care to change their voices so that the staff who deal with them every day could not tell who it was.

Q. Were any Station Masters on that branch of the line dealt with?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. How many of them?

A. Four of them I had to suspend and bring in as soon as I could relieve them.

Q. Did the staff in certain places strike or cease work during the period of the hartal?

A. Not in my district.

Q. Can you speak to the rationing of the staff?

A. The rationing of them, yes, Sir.

Q. Do you know that from your personal knowledge?

A. Yes, Sir, I gave the orders personally.

Q. What was the difficulty there?

A. First at Amritsar. While I was there the staff found they could not get food, people would not sell them food, so I arranged to supply them.

Q. On what ground would the people not supply them with food?

A. They said because they were Government servants and were working they could not get it.

Q. And in consequence of that special steps had to be taken to ration them?

A. Yes, Sir.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. I want to know a little more about this trouble on the control phone. Between Shahdara and Aminabad how many stations are there?

A. There is Kala Shah Kaku, Muridke, Sadhoke and Kamoke. The next is Aminabad, that was not affected.

Q. Four were affected?

A. Four were affected.

Q. At the time you heard what was going on, was that a question of interfering with the control of ordinary trains or was it a question of interfering with the control of trains that were carrying troops?

A. It was the 1-Up Calcutta Mail.

Q. That was simply ordinary passengers?

A. Yes.

Q. Were there any movements of troops at the time on that line?

A. Probably there were a few, I am not aware of that personally.

Q. But were there any substantial movements of troops on that portion of the line?

23 November 1919.]

Mr. A. DALE-GREEN—concluded—Major J. C. HUNTER.

A. Not on that section.

Q. I mean apart from that train altogether, were troops at that time being passed over that line?

A. You mean when this trouble on the phone went on?

Q. About that time.

A. I do not know.

Q. So as far as your information goes, this attempt was an attempt to interfere with the ordinary work of the railway, not an attempt to interfere with special precautions being taken to preserve the peace by the military or police?

A. Yes, Sir, that is right.

Q. You said these men were suspended and afterwards called in, were they dealt with otherwise than as a matter of discipline by the railway, were they prosecuted in any way for what they were doing?

A. The case was handed over to the police, and after the evidence had gone on, the police said as they were on the phones and it would be hard to deal with a particular man and bring evidence that he himself personally spoke, it would be better to deal with them departmentally.

Q. Was what you saw attributable simply to the strike, do you think?

A. No, Sir. Appeal had gone on for more pay or anything else for sometime and it was purely a question of what was going to be done in the matter.

Q. They had not gone on strike at the time?

A. They did not go on strike at all.

Q. By the 14th had the demands which seemed likely to bring about a strike been met or not?

A. Nearly every class of railway man, including myself, had put forward a request for better salaries, and we knew the matter was being considered. The staff particularly knew they were being considered, and small matters that could be dealt with locally had been dealt with. Larger matters which had to go to the Government of India were being worked out and the staff knew that.

Q. So that it was in process of being worked out, the concessions, if any, had not yet been granted?

A. A few small ones which could be done locally had been granted, but the bigger ones had not been; they were likely to come out shortly.

Q. And it was the talk about Europeans being killed that really made you think that it was something special and not a mere attempt to prevent ordinary traffic going on?

A. Yes, Sir. And they abused one of the men who was going to work. The man at Aminabad wanted the train to get on and the others turned round and abused him for allowing it to go on.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. You said the staff had difficulty in obtaining food?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. This staff included a majority of Indians, and therefore, so far as this staff was concerned, it was not in league with those who were promoting the hartal?

A. Not the staff who were working.

Q. The staff who had difficulty in getting food was not in collusion with those who were promoting the hartal?

A. I could not answer that.

Q. The very fact that they were not allowed to buy food is evidence that they were not?

A. You may think that; I would not like to guess anything like that.

Q. I would like your opinion whether that staff who had difficulty in buying food was in any way connected with those who were promoting the hartal?

A. These four Station Masters whom I had to suspend and bring in; they also had difficulty.

Q. About getting their food?

A. Yes, I had to send them food.

Q. Therefore, from that it is clear that this staff and these four Station Masters who were suspended by you were not in collusion with those who were promoting the hartal?

A. I entirely differ from you, Sir.

Q. Why then did they have difficulty in buying food?

A. They said so.

Q. And had you anything to the contrary?

A. No, I could not go out there.

Q. You know that a large majority of the Indian staff had difficulty in buying food. What do you say about them, were they in collusion with those who were promoting the hartal?

A. I would not like to guess, I think some were and some were not. I think the majority were loyal.

Q. And therefore about this staff for whom you made arrangements you are still of the opinion that they were also in collusion with the promoters of the hartal?

A. It is quite possible some may have been.

Q. What was your opinion then?

A. My opinion was that some may have, some may not have been.

Q. Notwithstanding that they had difficulty in buying food?

A. Yes, because I had rather a bad example with these four Station Masters before me.

Q. Except what you heard on the phone so far as these four Station Masters were concerned, can you give me any instance of the staff being anti-British or anti-Government?

A. Yes, at Jullundur.

Q. That was within your jurisdiction?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What happened there?

A. They attended meetings that were held by certain people there and came back to the station and suggested that work should be stopped.

Q. Therefore because they attended certain meetings and said there should be a strike so far as the railways were concerned, you thought they were anti-British and anti-Government?

A. Yes.

Q. Anything else?

A. No.

Q. No other instances? There is this one of the four Station Masters and this one at Jullundur?

A. No others.

Q. Therefore when you in your statement say the staff was anti-British and anti-Government, you base your opinion on what happened at Jullundur and at these four railway stations?

A. The staff that gave trouble, yes.

Major J. C. HUNTER, R. E. (Temp.), Carriage and Wagon Superintendent, North Western Railway.

By the President—

Q. Are you Carriage and Wagon Superintendent, North Western Railway?

A. I am.

Q. Were you Area Officer in Moghulpura?

A. I was.

Q. When did you assume command of that Area?

A. At about 9 P.M. on the night of the 10th.

Q. On assuming command what did you do?

A. I proceeded to the armoury in Moghulpura and made all arrangements for the safety of the women and children.

Q. By this time had members of the Indian Defence Force been called out?

A. They had been called out and they had formed in front of the armoury and had been told off for the armoured trains.

Q. Where were the armoured trains?

28 November 1919.]

Major J. C. HUNTER.

A. The armoured trains are stabled in the Carriage Shops at Moghulpura. They have two there.

Q. Were they ordered out in response to a telephonic message from the Adjutant, Indian Defence Force?

A. Yes, they had been ordered out shortly after 8 o'clock to be in readiness. It takes about three or four hours to get them ready.

Q. You told off crews for these trains?

A. That is so.

Q. After they were told off, what available strength had you for the defence of Moghulpura?

A. There were 75 Indian Defence Force, 50 armed police and about 50 of the 2-10th Jats.

Q. Are these figures in addition to the crews of the trains?

A. Those are in addition to the crews.

Q. How many constituted the crews of the trains?

A. Thirty ranks and two officers for each train, that is 64 altogether.

Q. Were patrols then detailed for duty in Moghulpura area workshops?

A. They were.

Q. And the reserve detained at Moghulpura armoury?

A. The 2-10th Jats were in reserve there and some Indian Defence Force. The armed police were distributed over the area at different points.

Q. In your statement you say they were retained at the Moghulpura armoury with three motor cars ready for any emergency?

A. Yes.

Q. What was your reserve after patrols had been fixed?

A. We had in addition to the 2-10th Jats about 20 men left. Of course those figures varied, they were not alike for two days. That was on the night of the 10th.

Q. A motor car I think patrolled the road?

A. I arranged that at once, for a motor car to patrol every 2½ hours. That went right through the whole area.

Q. Was there any disorder in any part of Moghulpura colony on the 10th or 11th?

A. There was no disorder there at all.

Q. The place is occupied almost entirely by Government employees?

A. It is entirely a Government colony.

Q. And are the Government quarters for Indian workmen situated about a quarter of a mile to the north of the European colony?

A. That is so, there is quite a large Indian colony there.

Q. What did you see as to the behaviour of the railway workmen there?

A. Generally the behaviour of the workmen was quite satisfactory. They made several complaints about outside influence, but they would not give any information.

Q. What do you mean by outside influence?

A. Well interference in getting to their work and difficulty in procuring commodities.

Q. Were you aware at the time what was causing them this difficulty in getting to their work?

A. As far back as November the workmen complained about difficulty in getting food owing to the high prices.

Q. That is not the point, I am referring to the incidents of the 10th when you were acting as Area Officer. I understood you were speaking with reference to the circumstances that there were complaints made as to some of them being prevented from going to work. What was preventing them going to work?

A. The roads were picketed by men at different points and men from the city had difficulty in getting out of the city. Those complaints were made in some cases direct to me and in some cases to the headmen.

Q. Did the cases increase?

A. They did from the 8th and 9th right on to the morning of the 16th or 17th.

Q. On the 16th, did you receive a phone message from Mr. Gantzer, the Superintendent of the Printing Press at Moghulpura, about men in his vicinity preventing workmen from attending to work?

A. I did, Sir.

Q. What did you do when you received that message?

A. I took four ranks of the Sussex in my motor car and went straight down to see what was the matter.

Q. Did you see any gangs or pickets on the road?

A. I saw one picket of between 40 and 50 men, at about 500 yards off.

Q. Did they do anything as you approached?

A. As the car reached to between four and five hundred yards of the place they were in, they dispersed across the maidan.

Q. Did you take any action or order anything to be done?

A. When I reached the point the men were between three and four yards away so I thought the only action to take was to fire two rounds over them.

Q. That was firing into the air?

A. Firing into the air. I knew it was against regulations, but I thought it was the action to take and I would take it again.

Q. And what was the effect of your taking that action?

A. One of the men got scared and hid there, so we brought him back and handed him over to the Special Tribunal, but he was released later.

Q. Were complaints made by workmen in Bhogiwal and Bhagwanpura about the hartal?

A. Yes, and I reported the matter to Colonel Johnson.

Q. Where are these two villages?

A. They lie about a mile and a half to the north of Moghulpura.

Q. And how far is Moghulpura from Lahore?

A. Is it about three miles—three miles from the post office.

Q. Did you get instructions to visit these villages in the afternoon of the 16th April?

A. I got orders to go and see that all the shops in the bazar were opened. Most of the shops had very few commodities on view because I believe that had been closed for two or three days.

Q. I think you were accompanied through the villages by the lambardar?

A. I did not know the villages so I sent for the lambardar.

Q. Who is a lambardar?

Mr. Herbert, Government Advocate.—He is the headman of the village.

Q. Then I think you paid further visits?

A. I paid periodical visits to both villages and found that commodities were being sold in a great many instances at prices at lower rates than those fixed by the Martial Law order.

Q. What, in your opinion, was the effect of Martial Law in the area you had to administer?

A. I think it was the means of putting an end to all the disturbances.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. Before the 10th of April in Moghulpura Works was a strike beating up? Were you apprehending a strike before the 10th of April owing to economic conditions?

A. Do you mean just immediately before?

Q. Just immediately before?

A. About the end of January the workmen complained bitterly about the high prices of food and we opened grain shops and gave them payment rations of grain and that caused a certain amount of discontent among the workmen.

Q. What I mean is this: you are Superintendent of the Carriage and Wagon Department of the works at Moghulpura. Then before the 10th when these political troubles started—just before that, were you apprehending a strike among your workmen in that department for any reason?

A. No, but there was just a possibility of a strike taking place.

Q. You mean you were preparing yourself as a strike might come along?

28 November 1919.]

Major J. C. HUNTER.

A. Well we are always prepared for that.
 Q. But still there was more discontent than usual?
 A. Yes, there was.
 Q. When the riots were going on your men were interfered with going to work. This happened between the 10th of April and the 16th when it was practically stopped. Now before the 10th had there been any workers trying to prevent people going to work?
 A. There may have been, but none were reported to me.

Q. Do you think that if there had been any that they were fairly sure to have come to your cars?
 A. Yes.

Q. These people who stopped men going to their work, did you ever find out at all what sort of people they were?
 A. I tried my best to find out but I was not able. Had I found out who they were I would have had them arrested.

Q. Did the people who made these complaints to you—were they employees of your works or were they outsiders.
 A. They never gave information. They said they would get into trouble if they gave any information.

Q. You could get no description of the people. You did not know whether they had anything to do with the railway?
 A. I tried my best but I could not get any information at all. Not the slightest.

Q. Take the case referred to by Mr. Gantzer, the Superintendent of the Printing Press, who had these men annoying him on the 16th. Had he any information that these men were people connected with the printing press or not?
 A. I tried my best. Mr. Gantzer could give a proper description of some of the men.

Q. One of these men was arrested. Did you ever find out what he was?
 A. I found out that he was employed in the Locomotive Department at Moghulpura and I handed him over to the Special Tribunal. I believe he was released later.

Q. This Printing Press—does it have anything to do with the railway?
 A. It belongs to the railway. It is the railway printing press. It is a part of the Moghulpura Workshop. At any rate as far as this man was concerned he was apparently trying to produce a railway strike. I take it that was the reason for him being there and that is why I handed him over to the Special Tribunal but he was released.

Q. Does your railway have a good many employees in Lahore city?
 A. I think about 7,000 to 8,000 live in the city. I think about 7,000 or 8,000 come by train daily.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat-Narayan—
 Q. Were you informed that about fifteen days before the 10th of April there were very strong rumours that railway signallers and the running staff intended to strike?
 A. No, I have nothing to do with that.

Q. And the time of the strike was fixed for 2 P.M. on the 30th of April?
 A. I do not know anything about that. I am afraid you misunderstand my position. I am in charge of the Workshop.

Q. Were you aware of the fact that about 300 workmen of the shops tried to stop the other workers from going to work on the 13th? This is from the statement of Mr. Ryan.
 A. Well that took place two miles off. That was not in my area.

Q. As regards the workmen with whom you were concerned you do not think that they were with those who were promoting the hartal or that they were in any way practically connected with it. Whenever any person was persuaded not to go to work he came to you and complained about it and I think you drew the inference that.....

A. It was the older employees that came to me and complained bitterly about it and I had no reason to think that there was any collusion with those who were promoting the hartal. After the 16th there was no falling off in the number of attendants. The action that had been taken raised the number by a percentage higher than ever it was before.

Q. Between the 10th and 15th how far had the attendance fallen?
 A. Roughly I should think between 60 and 70 per cent. of absentees.

Q. That would not give me any idea?
 A. Roughly about 6,500 absentees out of a total of 12,000. Practically all these complaints were made to the Works Superintendent. Some complaints were made direct to the Works Superintendent. Some were made through the Foreman to the Works Superintendent, but all complaints reached me.

By Major-General Sir George Barrow—
 Q. I see in your statement that you say you had a petition about two months ago from workmen residing in Bhogiwal requesting for Martial Law to be re-instated. Why did they do that?
 A. I had a conversation with some of the senior workmen and they liked Martial Law and they wish it would have been continued a little longer.

Q. They did not think it had been removed a moment too soon?
 A. No, I do not think so. I think it was administered very well.

Q. How long did it continue in the railway?
 A. It was continued up to the 1st of September in railway lands. Elsewhere outside railway areas it was repealed very much earlier.

Q. They honestly wanted it back?
 A. Yes.

Q. Did they give any reasons for wanting it back?
 A. They said they had no trouble in getting food. The food was controlled and they got food at reasonable prices and if the banias refused to sell he was dealt with immediately. If it had been ordinary law it would have taken months.

Q. In this place Bhogiwal—was Martial Law taken off in June or September?
 A. It was taken off when Martial Law was repealed outside the area.

Q. So these men lost through Martial Law in June?
 A. They were only under Martial Law when they were in the railway area.

Q. Was it the state of things prior to June or the state of things prior to September that they looked on with fond regret?
 A. Prior to June.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—
 Q. With regard to Martial Law, I suppose it would have been good if the prices were fixed permanently and everyone would like the prices permanently established?
 A. I suppose everyone would.

Q. You said you always apprehended a strike?
 A. No, I do not say that.

Q. There is always a danger of a strike?
 A. I am always prepared for it.

Q. Why are you always prepared if there is no apprehension?
 A. We are always prepared to cope with a strike.

Q. Which means that you have an idea that a strike might take place and therefore you are ready to cope with it?
 A. Yes.

Q. Why do you say there might be a strike?
 A. There had been a certain amount of discontent due to high prices. There is always a possibility of strike when they do not get what they want. And of course there is a tendency for them to strike for more money. If we give an increase to the workmen the banias just put up their prices, so practically they are not much better off than before. I recommended that rations should be given to the workmen. I recommended that as far back as November.

Major J. C. HUNTER—concluded—Mr. O. W. WATKINS.

Q. Don't you think that the prices are based on the ordinary law of supply and demand? It is not entirely in the hands of the bania?

A. Yes, entirely. Martial Law proved that.

Q. This strike of which you spoke of which might have taken place before the 10th—was it due to high prices?

A. I should think it was due to high prices.

Q. Of course under Martial Law when prices were proclaimed that was not a solution of the difficulty of the strike so far as Moghulpura was concerned.

A. We gave our payment rations of grain to the workmen.

Q. What is the total number of workmen under your charge?

A. Do you mean in my direct charge or in the workshops?

Q. Under your direct charge?

A. 6,200. In Moghulpura there are 12,100.

Q. Most of them live in the city?

A. I should say about 7,000 or 8,000 and the rest come in from the surrounding villages.

Q. They come every day from the city?

A. We run a special train for them.

Q. Do you know why this man who was arrested on the 16th was released?

A. I am afraid I could not say. The Special Tribunal will probably answer that question.

Q. Did you enquire?

A. No, my duty was to hand him over.

Mr. O. W. WATKINS, Works Manager, Loco., North-Western Railway, Moghulpura.

By the President—

Q. You are Works Manager, Loco., North-Western Railway, Moghulpura?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. I think you were doing Indian Defence Force duty throughout the night of April 10th?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. After being on duty you paid a hurried visit to the Loco. Works on the 11th?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. In what state did you find the works?

A. Absolutely quiet.

Q. You say the number of absentees compared to the ordinary number was rather below the average? There was a reason for a good attendance as it was pay day and absentees are not paid till a later day?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did a commotion take place outside the works during breakfast hours?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What was the cause of that?

A. It was apparently due to the fact that the audit clerks who are responsible for payment were not at work. The men therefore thought that they would not get their pay and made that one of the reasons for causing a commotion.

Q. Do you know what had prevented the audit clerks being at work?

A. I had actually been told but the clerks were away then and on the following days.

Q. I think you made special arrangements about disbursing pay?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. When you were relieved of Indian Defence duty on the 12th did you ask for a military guard to be put near the works during the meal hour?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Why did you ask for that action to be taken?

A. Because I considered it necessary to protect the works.

Q. On the 12th what percentage of the employees were absent?

A. Forty per cent. in the morning and in the afternoon only 250 out of 4,560 were present.

Q. In the morning did you get any explanation as to the difficulty they had in attending the works?

A. I did not see them; they were not present; and the men who were present said they had difficulty in coming to work.

Q. Did these workmen communicate to you the difficulty they had in attending their work? What was the difficulty?

A. They said that they had been prevented on the roads by bands of men with sticks in every direction.

Q. Did they say anything about the prospect of having their houses destroyed if they attend their work?

A. There was a rumour given out that if they attended work their houses would be looted and their families molested.

Q. I think they wanted the works to be closed instead of working the usual Saturday afternoon overtime?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. But that request was not acceded to?

A. A wrong construction would have been put on it if I granted that request.

Q. On the 14th what per cent. of the staff was absent?

A. 85 per cent. of the staff were absent in the forenoon and about a hundred more men attended work in the afternoon.

Q. Was any explanation given as to the small numbers attending by those in fact attending?

A. The same as on Saturday, that is they were prevented by bands of men.

Q. Did the numbers decrease on the 14th?

A. From the 14th they gradually decreased. The attendance gradually improved till it became normal on the 21st.

Q. Were many of the clerical staff late in attending duties?

A. Many of them were late and others were absent.

Q. What was the explanation—they gave?

A. The same reason as the workmen gave that some of them had to go many miles out of the way to get to their offices.

Q. Did any of them resort to disguises?

A. Some of them came dressed in students' clothes which they worked in.

Q. On what date did the attendance become normal?

A. On the 21st.

Q. To what did you attribute that improvement in the situation?

A. A gradual settling down of the situation generally.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. With regard to those men who absented themselves—what steps did you take to find out whether they put forward a false excuse or told the truth?

A. The men who told me that were the men who had difficulty in getting in.

Q. Not those who were present? You never made enquiries from those who were present? I want to know as to whether you satisfied yourself that it was not a false excuse?

A. I did not consider it false because they had been seen by the I. D. F. on duty.

Q. Were you aware of this fact that a threat was held out about robbing the people and molesting their families at night by 300 workmen?

A. I think it is a misstatement. The 13th was a Sunday.

Q. Leave the date, possibly there may be a mistake in the date. But I want to know whether or not it was brought to your notice that 300 workmen of the shops had tried to persuade other workers to secede from going to work and that they intimidated them in case they went to work?

28 November 1919.]

Mr. O. W. WATKINS—concluded—Mr. C. C. RYAN.

A. It was only brought to my notice on the morning of the 14th. There was a commotion at the railway station at the workmen's train. I was not informed either officially or unofficially that the 300 workmen were railway workmen.

Q. You were not informed that a large number of shop-men were trying to intimidate other worker?

A. I personally know that they tried to persuade others not to work.

Q. About the threat held out by them that their houses will be looted at night and their families would be molested, was it held out by the 300 shop-men?

A. I do not know that.

Q. Have you any reason to say that this statement of Mr. Ryan is not a true statement, either he was misinformed or something like that?

A. I have no information.

Mr. C. C. RYAN, Station and Assistant Traffic Superintendent, North-Western Railway, Lahore Junction.

By the President—

Q. Are you Station and Assistant Traffic Superintendent at Lahore Junction?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. At about 1 on the 10th April, did you hear of this trouble at Amritsar?

A. Yes, Sir, I did.

Q. I think at about 1-45 an Indian Police Officer came to you to arrange accommodation for a party of police to go by the Down Calcutta Mail to Amritsar?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Was that in consequence of the fear of rioting?

A. He told me that they had heard of something serious and they wanted assistance.

Q. Was that done?

A. Yes, it was done.

Q. In doing so did you try to get into touch with Amritsar?

A. I did, Sir, at about 2 P.M.

Q. What means did you adopt?

A. I tried to get the staff at Amritsar on the Railway phonophone.

Q. Were you successful?

A. I was not successful. I tried the Telegraph Office instrument.

Q. Now what exactly is the phonophone?

A. It is a sort of telephone. You press a button and you get a buzz. It is a long distance telephone.

Q. Is the sound communicated over the telegraph wire?

A. Yes.

Q. How could you do it when the telegraph wire was cut?

A. The Government telegraph wire between Amritsar and Lahore was cut, but the Railway telegraph wire was not affected. I presume that while the disturbance was on the workmen were all occupied at the time and could not attend to these little matters. But eventually Mr. Bennett, Station Superintendent at Amritsar, called me on the phonophone.

Q. That was after 3, I think?

A. At about 3.

Q. You were told that Guard Robinson had been murdered?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did the Deputy Commissioner also speak to you?

A. He did. He also gave me a message to the Lieutenant-Governor.

Q. Did you learn then that the telegraph communication was interrupted?

A. Yes, I learnt that the Government telegraph wires also cut.

Q. And you passed some messages on the phonophone?

A. Yes.

Q. Had you had any previous indication of a disturbance?

A. No, Sir, not till about the early part of April. There was some talk among the guards about a strike but there was no such thing among the other staff.

Q. Among the guards?

A. Yes, the Running staff.

Q. Did you connect that strike in any way with the political movement?

A. I was told a little before that there were some outsiders interfering with our Indian Guards, I mean the Running staff, and that they were trying to get up a strike among them, and later on, probably about the 11th April, I heard that the Signallers were similarly affected.

Q. I think you made arrangements to meet the situation in case of strikes?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you get confirmation of the intended strike by the Signallers?

A. On the day when the Kasur riots took place.

Q. Can you explain what occurred on the 12th?

A. I tried to get information as to how things were progressing at Kasur so as to telephone the matter up to the Lieutenant-Governor for his information. I got Mr. Harding, Deputy Superintendent, Railway Telegraphs, on to the wire and asked him to converse with the man at Kasur. He did so, and the man gave him a detailed account of all things because he was apparently under the impression that he was talking to an Indian Signaller, and Mr. Harding took that down, and he said that they were looking forward to Lahore to strike on the 13th at 2 o'clock.

Q. Prior to that, had you seen anything taking place among the Signallers to indicate that they had an intention to strike?

A. There were constant meetings among them.

Q. What action did you take when you got that communication from Kasur on the 12th?

A. I got into touch with the Deputy Superintendent and we fixed that we would speak to the staff about it. I spoke to them when they were going off duty and told them that if they had a genuine complaint they must wait until all this trouble was over.

Q. What attitude did they adopt?

A. They all agreed to come to work, and on that day they had no intention to strike.

Q. I think so far as Lahore was concerned, there was no strike?

A. No, Sir.

Q. Did you make arrangements, however, to have a Military guard placed over the Telegraph Office?

A. Yes.

Q. What was your object in having that guard?

A. To prevent any intimidation from outside.

Q. Were you apprehensive of any intimidation from outside?

A. The staff was prevented from going to work.

Q. You make some reference in your statement to the bogus telegrams that were received?

A. There was more than one telegram received.

Q. Who received them?

A. They were all received in the Telegraph Office. The one appertaining to Malakwal was received by Mr. Row, the Telegraph Inspector. He was actually at the instrument and received the message as having come from Gujranwala. I went up to the control instrument to find out if the man there had received and transmitted a wire of that kind, and he replied in the negative.

Q. To what effect was this communication?

28 November 1919.]

Mr. C. C. RYAN.

[Concluded.]

A. It was to say that the Malakwal station had been burnt down and that some Europeans had been killed and the staff had struck work.

Q. Was there any truth in it ?

A. None at all. I could not get confirmation.

Q. Are such communications likely to have a bad effect on the staff ?

A. Well, I take it that they would have some effect.

Q. Did you take means to prevent a repetition of such occurrences ?

A. The staff saw that I was making enquiries. They heard the enquiries on the telegraph and on the control telephones. That was all I could do.

Q. On the 13th, did you hear that the mob in the city were preventing the staff from coming to duty ?

A. I am not quite sure about the date, but they certainly were.

Q. Were a number of your men prevented from coming to work ?

A. They were.

Q. How did you discover that ?

A. A number of men were prevented from coming from Badami, others took off their uniform, hid it under their beds and came without it. Besides that, on one occasion from the overbridge I could see them prevented from coming to work.

Q. Who was preventing them ?

A. The crowds from the Lahore city.

Q. What means were being taken to prevent them from coming to work ?

A. The crowd that I particularly refer to were forcibly pulling the workmen and stopping them, and some few had sticks, but I did not see any of them using those sticks.

Q. You have made a reference in your statement to 300 workmen at the shops ?

A. Yes.

Q. Who were these 300 workmen ?

A. I could not say whether they were Loco. or Carriage Shop workmen but the train starts from my station. The workshops are situated about 2½ miles from my station. These men had all got into the train, and there was word sent to say that there was in the workmen's lines some trouble and some men were interfering with others and were preventing others from coming to work. I then went up to Captain Phillips, who was the officer in the station, and he sent down an armed guard. As soon as this armed guard arrived, these men got into the train, and as the train slowly moved along they began to jeer at the workmen on the Railway. They came over, some passed through the yard, the majority passed over the bridge, and then they began to threaten the staff.

Q. What sort of threat ?

A. They threatened the cabin men that they would assault them. They threatened to visit their homes, rob them, loot them and molest their families. I went up to Captain Phillips to send some men so as to assure the staff that they were all right.

Q. Did these 300 men actually assault or stone anybody ?

A. One cabin man reported that stones were thrown out.

Q. Were you able to get food stuffs from the city ?

A. No.

Q. How was that ?

A. The mob would not allow any food stuff to go out of the city.

Q. Did that cause any inconvenience to the staff and passengers ?

A. Yes, it did.

Q. Both the European and Indian ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Had you to make any special arrangements to deal with the question of rationing ?

A. Yes, Sir. We had to arrange for food for refreshment rooms and sweetmeat vendors.

Q. Owing to the railway tracks and stations being interfered with, were the night running trains stopped ?

A. Yes.

Q. For how long ?

A. I should think for about 10 days. It may have been more, but I don't think it was less than 10 days.

Q. Did that mean that you had to hold up trains at Lahore instead of running them through ?

A. Yes, Sir.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. Do you say that the strike was being engineered by the Indian guards who were financing the whole thing ?

A. Yes.

Q. You also found out that 2 P.M. on the 13th April was the time fixed for a general strike ?

A. Yes.

Q. With regard to buying food stuffs, is it not a fact that all the shops inside the city were closed from the 10th up to the 15th ?

A. I do know that, but I also know that stuff could be obtained and efforts were made to get stuff out but people were not allowed to get it out.

Q. Do you know that in order that poor men might get their food stuffs, lanjarkhanas were opened inside the city ?

A. I heard it. I do not know it.

Q. Their object was to ease the situation so that poor men might not feel any difficulty ?

A. It might have been so.

Q. Do you know that there are some Associations in Bombay and Madras which look after the interests of guards and other railway employees ?

A. I am sorry, I do not know that.

Q. Whenever drivers or guards get into trouble, these Associations take up their cause ?

A. There is a Railway Association called the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants, they have got their head-quarters in Bombay.

Q. These men will be defended by that association in case of trouble ?

A. This was not being helped by them.

Q. They have also got legal advisers, they have got a sort of Association ?

A. Quite so.

Q. Do you know that attempts were made to organize similar Associations so far as the O. and R. Railway was concerned ?

A. I do not know that.

Q. As a matter of fact an Association did come into existence ?

A. I do not know that either. This is the first I have heard of it.

Q. Certainly you will have no objection if the Railway employees, as in European countries, organise themselves for the purpose of protecting their rights ?

A. Absolutely no objection.

Q. When you say that some outside influence was being brought to bear on these railway guards, may I know what you mean by 'outside influence' ?

A. My information was that there were some men of the legal profession who were advising them.

Q. Some men of the legal profession were asking them to demand higher wages ?

A. I suppose it must have been so.

Q. They took up their cause ?

A. Oh, no.

Q. They promised them help ?

A. I do not know anything about the promise of help.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. What pay do these Indian guards get ?

A. They are all graded, A, B and C Class.

Q. What is the pay of the different grades ?

A. I think the A Class men get Rs. 25 to Rs. 50, the B class men get from Rs. 51 to Rs. 90 and the C Class men get from Rs. 100 to Rs. 165. That is the present rate.

Q. Was not this movement started by guards with the object of improving their pay ?

A. To improve their condition generally and their pay.

Mr. C. B. HARDING—Rev. E. D. LUCAS.

Mr. C. B. HARDING, Deputy Superintendent, Railway Telegraphs.By the President—*

Q. I only want to ask you one question. During the disturbed days, were your wires being cut ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. In many directions ?

A. Certainly, in many directions.

Q. You might indicate the different lines that were being cut during the period between the 10th and the 16th April ? What lines were cut ?

A. Karachi, Ambala, Sukkur and Rawalpindi.

Q. Had the cutting of the wires effect of interrupting the telegraph communication for some time ?

A. Very much.

Q. How long ?

A. Sometimes for a day, sometimes for a few hours.

Q. Was there any disastrous effect on through urgent traffic ?

A. Very heavy delay.

Q. I think you can speak on the same points upon which we heard Mr. Ryan's evidence with reference to the interference with workmen ?

A. Not beyond what my signallers told me that they were troubled by the populace.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. You came to know during the course of your enquiries that certain signallers tried to canvass for a strike ?

A. They did.

Q. But as the majority of them were not ready the strike failed ?

A. Yes.

Rev. E. D. LUCAS, Principal, Forman Christian College, Lahore.By the President—*

Q. I think you are the Principal of the Forman Christian College in Lahore ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. How many students are there ?

A. This year there are 835. Last year there were about 750.

Q. From what age to what age do they run ?

A. 16 to 23 or 24.

Q. What sort of instruction do they receive in your college, is it just the ordinary University course ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Do you give instructions for the different learned professions ?

A. No Sir, Arts and Science.

Q. Generally speaking, are your students taking much interest in political affairs ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did they display a larger amount of interest last year than they did before ?

A. Last year they took a particularly keen interest.

Q. In connection with the agitation against the Rowlatt Bill ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. In what way did they show their interest in that agitation ?

A. It is very difficult to say just in what way. One could know it, because they were constantly talking about it in their group meetings and in their conversation generally.

Q. Did you in the college see or did you make yourself acquainted with any indication of unrest among the students ?

A. No acts of unrest, but there was a great deal of excitement among the students.

Q. On the 10th April where were you ?

A. I was in Lahore.

Q. Did you see any of the rising that took place ?

A. Yes, Sir, I saw the mob.

Q. Where did you see the mob ?

A. In front of my house on the Mall opposite the Y.M.C.A.

Q. Were there many students in the mob ?

A. A good many.

Q. Did you see any incident yourself indicative of the attitude of the mob on that day ?

A. I will recount an instance of what happened. I had reason to believe that this crowd would be fired on, and I ordered one of the students of the college to return to his hostel. I had difficulty in sending word to him. Finally he came over. I ordered him to return to his hostel which order he disobeyed. I again asked him to return to his hostel and told him that he would be expelled from the college if he disobeyed, but the crowd thinking that I was trying to interfere with the procession began to shout "shame, shame" and used very abusive terms. That is why I considered it was a dangerous crowd.

Q. You thought that it was a crowd that would be fired upon. How did you know that ?

A. I had been over to the police station and seen the police had lined up there. I asked the Superintendent of Police why they were lined up with their muskets. He said there was trouble in Amritsar and they were expecting trouble in Lahore.

Q. From the appearance and demeanour of the crowd, did you consider it was an unruly or ruly crowd ?

A. Unruly crowd.

Q. Was it a crowd which was likely to commit acts of violence ?

A. It was very excited, and I suppose an excited crowd will commit acts of violence.

Q. Was that the reason for your anticipating that firing might take place ?

A. No, Sir. The Deputy Commissioner had called together the principals and head-masters of schools and colleges and had told us that there should be no crowds on the streets, and if there were so the Government would stop them I understood he meant that he would stop them if necessary by firing. I mentioned this fact before the students the next day when we assembled in the hall. The students were aware of this order.

Q. Although they were aware of this order, you saw a large number of students in the mob ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. In the evening did one of your students turn up with his clothes covered with blood ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did he say anything as to what actually occurred ?

A. He said that he had carried a man who had been shot and had helped to put him, as I understood, in some friend's house.

Q. Was there any other incident during the period of the disturbances which came specially under your notice ?

A. What kind of incident, Sir ?

Q. I mean indicative of the unrest in the crowd ?

A. There was a state of tension and high excitement. I felt that there might be an act of violence any time.

Q. Did that state of tension continue for a substantial period of time ?

A. It continued till the 13th.

Q. For 3 or 4 days beyond the 13th ?

A. It lasted up to the 14th. On the 14th things began to quiet down.

Q. During the period of Martial Law certain orders were issued by Colonel Johnson, did he consult you about issuing these orders with regard to the students ?

A. He called the Principals together and consulted us.

Q. As to maintaining order among the students ?

A. And the nature of punishment to be given.

Q. In connection with the orders that were actually issued by him did he get the approval of the Principals ?

A. No.

28 November 1919.]

Rev. E. D. LUCAS.

Q. Would you give me your own opinion? Do you or do you not approve of the orders that were in fact put in force by the Military authorities?

A. I do not approve of all the orders.

Q. Which of the orders do you not approve?

A. It is very difficult to say, Sir.

Q. There was an order that was referred to under which students had to report several times a day at roll call. As I understand, that necessitated their walking about 16 miles a day. What do you say as regards that order?

A. That is one that I would not give.

Q. It caused a lot of feeling and resentment among the students?

A. Yes.

Q. So far as you are able to see, did it serve any good object?

A. No, I do not think so.

Q. There was also some reference to a number of students that some Professors marched to the Fort for some offence connected with the destruction of notices or tearing down notices. Do you know anything about that?

A. No, Sir.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. Can you tell me, Mr. Lucas, something about the age of students in your college at which they begin to take an interest in politics? What is the average age at which students in your college begin to take an interest in politics in the sense of attaching themselves definitely to political propaganda of any sort?

A. The older students are more interested. I should say after the Intermediate examinations.

Q. Above what age do they finish their Intermediate examination?

A. Eighteen or nineteen.

Q. When you talk about students being used as propagandists and getting excited about political matters, that applies, broadly speaking, to people of about 18 or 19 years of age, not to the young men?

A. No; from 18 up to 24.

Q. For this purpose one may fairly consider one is dealing with youths or young men and not the boys?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Your college is called Forman Christian College. As I understand, your students belong to either the Hindu or Muhammadan religion as well as Christians?

A. There are a few Christians.

Q. There are a few Christians, but the bulk of them are Hindus and Muhammadans?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Apart from a particular interest in the Rowlatt legislation, was the influence of the Satyagraha movement noticed by you in February and March this year?

A. Not until March, I should say.

Q. That would be as soon as it was formulated?

A. Yes.

Q. They took an interest in that pretty well at once?

A. Yes.

Q. So far as you know were there any students in your college who were endeavouring to promote principles of resistance to law, not accompanied by violence, on the lines of Mr. Gandhi?

A. Not in my college, but there were students.

Q. As regards the excitement that was prevailing in your college, do you attribute it at all to the effect of the Satyagraha, hartal, resistance to law, or do you attribute it simply to the interest taken in the Rowlatt legislation?

A. I did not catch the first part.

Q. Do you think the influence of Mr. Gandhi's movement heightened the excitement about the Rowlatt legislation to any appreciable degree in your college?

A. Yes.

Q. You said that students were insulting European ladies in the street and racial feeling was very strong. How long did you notice any indication of racial feeling? How far back does it date?

A. Very short period.

Q. Do you think it arose out of the antagonism to the Rowlatt legislation or do you give it any other origin?

A. I think the Rowlatt legislation led to a very strong feeling and anti-Government feeling and then when the excitement became intense, it turned into racial feeling.

Q. The raj being a British raj, opposition to the Act of Government took a racial form?

A. Yes.

Q. But prior to the discussion about the Rowlatt legislation, have you seen anything among your students that leads you to the belief that students as a body had been particularly antagonistic to Europeans?

A. No; not amongst our students.

Q. I take it that students more than other classes of the community get chances to know something of European literature and work?

A. Yes.

Q. One would expect or one would like to think that they were less antagonistic for that reason?

A. It depends on how many they come to know personally.

Q. It depends more upon the Europeans they have actually to do with?

A. Yes.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. When you saw that crowd for the first time on the 10th, I believe that in your opinion they were far more excited than they were on the 6th April?

A. Yes.

Q. You will not be prepared to say that they were bent on violence at the time when you saw them?

A. No.

Q. Your opinion probably was that they wanted to have their way, i.e., it was a sort of determined crowd that wanted to get the release of Mahatma Gandhi by this demonstration. Were you not of the opinion that the demonstration was in order to get the release of Mahatma Gandhi?

A. That is what I understood.

Q. How many students were rusticated or punished by you on account of communications that you had with Colonel Frank Johnson?

A. None were rusticated or punished by me. It was done by the Martial Law authorities directly. I simply recommended. There were 5 cases in the Forman Christian College, one of expulsion, 2 of rustication and 2 of detention.

Q. Out of a total of about 750?

A. Yes, 750.

Q. So far as you were concerned, you thought that except these 5, nobody deserved any sort of punishment in connection with these disturbances?

A. Every student who stayed away from his work on Friday was fined, because he disobeyed the rules of the college; otherwise there were no offenders whom I could pick out for punishment.

Q. That is you had no information that anyone of your students except those 5 did take any active part in the disturbances?

A. Those 5 were the leaders.

Q. How many were suspected of having taken part in the actual rioting?

A. I have no way of telling.

Q. That is my point. You had no evidence before you as to what number of students actually did take part in the riot on the evening of the 10th?

A. No; I have no way of telling.

Q. I think your list was not considered satisfactory by Colonel Frank Johnson; it was sent back?

A. No.

Q. Only those 5 were punished and no more?

A. No.

Q. What was the number of those who were punished on Friday for absenting themselves?

A. All the students of the 3rd and 1st year classes living in the college hostels.

Q. Did not all the students want to keep that as a sort of funeral day?

28 November 1919.]

Rev. E. D. LUCAS.

A. That was the idea. The 2nd and 4th year classes were not attending their lectures, because of the coming University examinations; the 1st and 3rd year classes were still attending lectures and they absented themselves.

Q. They absented themselves, because they said that this was mourning day and they would keep mourning?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. On Friday did they absent themselves because Mr. Gandhi was arrested on the 10th?

A. No.

Q. They absented themselves because some of the students were shot?

A. Yes.

Q. They wanted to observe it as a mourning day because one or two students were shot and they said they would go and accompany the dead body to the burial ground?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it not a fact that those students who were punished on account of these Martial Law orders between the 10th and 15th, have been prohibited from getting any Government employment and that if any one of them applies for any employment, then his case should be referred to Government before he gets employment?

A. That was not due to the orders issued by Principals.

Q. I do not say it was issued by Principals. You know that such order has been passed by the Government?

A. I have heard it.

Q. You further know that an order was passed that the students who had any connection with these matters should not be allowed to appear any further at any other examination. Supposing a student passed the second year examination, he should not be allowed to take his degree if he was punished during these days?

A. It depends on the punishment. If he was simply detained he would appear a year or two years later. It depends upon the nature of the punishment entirely.

Q. Supposing the punishment was that he should be rusticated for one year, and supposing the punishment was not so, was any order passed that those students who had completed their course of examination would not be taken back afterwards either for the same examination if they failed; or for a higher one if they passed?

A. Because of expulsion simply.

Q. Did you consider it to be a reasonable punishment so far as the student community is concerned, that for the whole of their life, they should not be allowed to have any educational career, not pass the B.A. or M.A. examination or to appear at any other examination for the whole of their lives?

A. The order of expulsion, I take it, is only passed in very serious cases and then, after some time and perhaps after reform of the students, those punished can be permitted to appear.

Q. So far as your order was concerned, there was no exception or reservation under any circumstances or modification?

A. I see no necessity for making reservation. Expulsion is expulsion.

Q. How many students were expelled from your college?

A. One.

Q. What did he do?

A. He was extremely obnoxious in statements that he made in my hearing.

Q. You had no evidence as to what part he took in the riot itself; neither did he confess to have taken any part, nor had you any evidence?

A. I do not believe he took actual part in the riot. His statements were sufficient.

Q. You did not believe that he took part actually in the riot? You thought he was a boy of extreme views?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. That is why he was expelled?

A. Yes.

Q. In your opinion would that correct him for the rest of his life, or will he become more bitter?

A. I think if a student is opposed, bitterly opposed to organised society, he is a danger to society.

Q. I believe he was not rude or insolent to you? Was he?

A. His statement before me was very objectionable.

Q. The statement may be very objectionable, at the same time he was candid enough to express his views to you, you being the Principal, taking the place of his father?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You would prefer that student to a student who does not give candid expression to his views before you and is deceitful?

A. Pardon me, I think you misunderstand the situation. This was on Friday. The statement was made in the midst of excitement and difficulties and made in the presence of about 150 other students, so as to inflame and perhaps lead them to commit acts of violence. I considered it a dangerous statement to make in the then condition of affairs.

Q. That was the one that was expelled from your college?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the punishment given to the other 4?

A. Two were rusticated for one year and 2 detained.

Q. What was the fault of those two who were rusticated?

A. One of them was the most impertinent, a Mahomedan student who came in with his clothes covered with blood and boasted over it to the other students and said he was in the front ranks of the crowd.

Q. With regard to the boy who boasted, I just appeal to you, would not the same thing have been done by any European student throughout the world, that if any comrade of his was shot by the Police, he will just try to take him away and save him from being arrested?

A. I take it that was not the thing that was boasted of.

Q. These are the words "I took him away from under the nose of the Police." These were his words?

A. He was boasting in such a way as to excite and inflame the students at the time. There was a very dangerous situation; you have to recognise that.

Q. I think you have given your statement. Whatever he may be these were his words?

A. He said these words among others.

Q. You said 2 were detained. What was their offence?

A. They were leaders in organising the students who stayed away from the College.

Q. They were those who induced other students to absent themselves and prevent them from being present on the 11th?

A. Yes.

Q. Beyond that you could not discover anything so far as your students were concerned?

A. Nothing; no outward act.

Q. No expression of opinion just like the first student?

A. Many expressions of opinion.

Q. Not so violent as that?

A. No.

Q. I think you will allow students to have something to do with politics at some stage of their education?

A. Yes certainly.

Q. I would like to know because you want us to appreciate their situation. There are difficulties?

A. Yes.

Q. And what are those difficulties?

A. I think one of the difficulties is that older men who should have better judgment make inflammatory speeches and write articles of an inflammatory nature and that the students at a most impressionable age of their lives read these statements and have not got the balance and judgment to weigh them and to know that a large part of it is political agitation; they are carried away and swept off their feet and are led into trouble. I think those who are principally guilty are those who write such articles and make speeches, not the students.

Q. I do not know what has happened during the last six months. But I think you will agree with me as a matter of fact that the Principals and Professors were not allowed to have anything to do with politics or to guide boys so far as politics was concerned. That is, politics

Revd. E. D. LUCAS.

was altogether prohibited from Universities and Colleges. Neither students, nor Professors, nor Principals were allowed, under Government regulations, to have anything to do with politics so far as the students were concerned. Was it not so?

A. No. We were there to guide them.

Q. You think that was not against the spirit of Government rules?

A. No.

Q. Were there any such rules?

A. During the war, Principals were asked to keep students away from political meetings of a certain type. Those were the only rules I have seen.

Q. Quite possibly it may not be in the Punjab, but have you or have you not read or heard that the Government asked students to have nothing to do with politics so far as college life is concerned?

A. I think the Government generally has given advice that students should not take active part in politics and I agree with that entirely.

Q. Then, so far as your college was concerned, there was more fraternising between Hindu and Muhammadan students during these days than there was before?

A. Yes.

By Major-General Sir George Barrow—

Q. What was the age of the boy who was expelled?

A. He was a sixth year student, I should say he was about 25.

Q. He was not a boy?

A. No.

Q. He was at the end of his education?

A. He was at the end of his education and that made the offence much more serious.

Q. You say that "the students regathered on the 19th, a few weeks were occupied in victory celebrations. One felt that the students were very enthusiastic about the victory, in fact their whole attitude was one of extreme indifference." Where do the students come from?

A. They come from all over the Punjab.

Q. From villages, towns, cities and all parts of the Punjab?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. They are representatives of the whole of the Punjab?

A. The whole of the upper and middle classes of the Punjab.

Q. I take it that not many come from the class which has been fighting in the war?

A. They have relatives who are in the Army, specially amongst the Sikhs and the Muhammadans.

Q. Still they were indifferent whether they had to go on fighting or not?

A. My answer is that students were indifferent.

Q. You say that "students regarded the Rowlatt Bill as an attempt to destroy the political liberties of India" and you also say "in conversation with students, I found that none of them had read the Rowlatt Act, but they believed it to be a very practical threat to all forms of political agitation." Do you mean that the Rowlatt Bill was talked about to them and that it had not been very squarely put to them?

A. No, the speeches that were made in Delhi in January were published in full in the papers and the majority of the students read these speeches in full.

Q. They got from that an entirely false impression as to the meaning of the Act?

A. They got impressions largely from the speeches made in the Legislative Council.

Q. You said to the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan that you did not think that expulsion was a very harsh punishment in the circumstances when speeches of an inflammable character have been made. Would you say that such things are not tolerated in colleges all over the world? In England, for instance, would such political agitation and inflammable speeches of that kind be tolerated in an English college?

A. It is very difficult to compare, but I think, if the Government in force were attacked in such a way, they would certainly punish the students and punish them severely.

By the Hon'ble Mr. W. F. Rice—

Q. I want to put only one question, about the crowd that you saw pass your house on the 10th. You could not form any idea as to whether the crowd had been largely increased in numbers by the time it was stopped by the Police on the Mall near O'Dwyer Club?

A. I have no way of telling.

Q. From what you did see of the crowd on that occasion, would you regard it as reasonable to allow it to proceed, as it professed wish to go to Government House and see the Lieutenant-Governor; or would you support the view that the Police have expressed that it would not have been safe to allow them to proceed into the civil station?

A. I think the Police were justified in stopping it, Sir.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. Mr. Lucas, are you aware generally of the conditions prevailing in other educational institutions besides your own college in Lahore?

A. Not intimately.

Q. You have referred to the difficulties of the students, and when you were asked to explain what these difficulties were, you referred to the inflammable speeches of some of the political speakers which the students read and naturally were thereby influenced?

A. Yes.

Q. You have also referred to the order of the Government that students should not take part in political meetings. What I want to know is was there any attempt made by you in your college with regard to the senior students to influence them properly as regards political ideas?

A. Yes, Sir. We have tried to influence them.

Q. In what manner?

A. By making addresses on the current situation, and having addresses made by men who are quite familiar with the situation; for instance, the Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri addressed our students about a year ago.

Q. Did you have any debating society in which students also could express their views and the Principals and other Professors also could express their views and by mutual discussion come to some conclusions about political matters?

A. I think our Professors and students were discussing these things in group meetings. Group meetings are managed by students and students can discuss a great deal of what they please in these meetings.

Q. And in that way you are generally acquainted with the views which most of the students hold?

A. I think so.

Q. How is it that these students were affected by these undesirable speeches which were addressed to them and they were not kept in hand by the Professors and the University authorities?

A. It was impossible to control them after about the middle of February.

Q. It was just about the middle of February that they were out of hand?

A. Yes, they then got out of hand.

Q. You have no Debating Society as most of the Institutions in the West have, just as in Cambridge, in which most of these topics are discussed by the students?

A. There are Voluntary Societies. We have several of them.

Q. In which they discuss these topics?

A. Yes.

Q. And I presume that you and other Europeans or your Professors, who are with you, take part in the games of the students and look after them socially?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Then what the effect of this seems to be on the majority of the students, generally, is a salutary effect?

A. Yes.

Q. In your discussions of the political matters with them what effect has it generally on their ideas?

28 November 1919.]

Rev. E. D. LUCAS—concluded—Mr. A. S. HEMMY.

A. Generally friendly.

Q. Apart from your relations having been good, their views on politics were different?

A. We don't mind that. Possibly their views are different.

Q. That is a different thing. But to have notions which are not desirable and which lead to violence and incitement or any feeling of disloyalty is not good. Probably a majority have not those notions?

A. No, Sir.

Q. Don't you think it would be desirable that every college should have a Chair of Politics. It is a matter of opinion?

A. I should not think so. Specially in view of the Reforms.

By Mr. Herbert, Government Advocate—

Q. Mr. Lucas, were any posters found on your college gates or in your own compound, of any kind?

A. I don't think so, Sir.

Mr. A. S. HEMMY, Principal, Government College, Lahore.

By the President—

Q. Mr. Hemmy, you are Principal of the Government College of Lahore?

A. I have been since the 1st of September.

Q. 1st of September this year?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you at that College before?

A. Yes, I was one of the staff.

Q. You were one of the Staff Professors?

A. Yes.

Q. For how long have you been in the College?

A. For 21 years.

Q. Did you notice latterly that the students were more interested in politics?

A. There has been a gradual increase in interest but it was towards the end of February, I should say, that they began some excitement about it.

Q. What was the cause of the excitement?

A. Well, I should think it was a reflex of the general political excitement throughout India.

Q. Did it show itself mainly in antagonism to the Rowlatt legislation or did it show itself in other directions?

A. Mainly in talking political matters in connection with the Rowlatt Act; partly in connection with the question of reforms.

Q. But, I think, in your college as in the college of Mr. Lucas, did you find in consequence of the debates in the Legislative Council over the Rowlatt Act that any keener interest was taken by the students?

A. Speeches made in the Legislative Assemblies undoubtedly were a great cause of the excitement at that time. Much interest was taken in those speeches.

Q. I want to know when Mr. Gandhi proposed a general fast or hartal what attitude did the students take up?

A. They were in sympathy with it on the whole.

Q. As regards the students as a body you say that they showed no signs of hostility towards the college authorities nor did they show any bitterness towards Government?

A. As far as college authorities were concerned there was no hostility before the 10th April. They may be evasions of orders on the part of individuals.

Q. That is natural enough for students.

A. But there was no defiance of orders.

Q. Did you see any indication among the students generally of bitter antagonism towards Government?

A. They strongly disagreed with the view of the Government in many cases but without bitterness of feeling about it.

Q. You mean they disapproved of the measures of Government? It may not necessarily be antagonistic towards Government?

A. Yes, they were only criticising Government but not in a bitter spirit.

Q. In connection with the agitation that took place on the 10th. What part did the students of your college take in it?

A. Well, one student was wounded in the firing which took place on the Mall on the 10th.

Q. Had many of the students been in the mob that had been fired upon?

A. There must have been. It is likely there were some there. But I don't think it was a large body of the college students.

Q. Amongst the students the fact that one of their members had been wounded caused resentment?

A. Yes.

Q. Was there a general resentment throughout the college or was it a particular one?

A. It was the first year that showed itself in the most marked manner.

Q. Were lectures given daily at this time?

A. It so happened that on the 10th some examinations started. University examinations were shortly to be held. Second and Fourth Years had been dismissed a few days before and Terminal College examinations commenced. Third Year examinations started on the 10th and the First Year examinations started on the next day.

Q. On the 11th I think the Third Year students did appear for their examination?

A. They appeared.

Q. As regards the First Year, what did they do?

A. With the exception of about a dozen they did not come into the Examination Hall.

Q. Was any notice taken of their action?

A. Colonel Stephenson was Principal at that time. He called the students and gave them a long address pointing out the error of their ways and telling them that they should appear and he gave them next day as a chance to obey his orders.

Q. On the 12th did they appear?

A. A few more appeared but still a majority from the First Year class absented themselves.

Q. Was any action taken as regards those who failed to appear on the 12th after absenting on the 11th?

A. They were sent home.

Q. By having sent them home, what did you mean?

A. They were told that by the rules of the college they were liable to have their names struck off. They were sent home and informed that they would hear later on as to when they would be allowed to rejoin the college.

Q. On the 12th were the Third Year students mostly absent as well as the First Year students?

A. On the 12th most of the Third Year students did not appear. Colonel Stephenson called them together and spoke to them and the effect of his speaking to them was to make them repent of disobedience and promise to appear at the examination. They asked to appear on the spot.

Q. Was there anything hostile in the attitude of the Third Year students?

A. No. They did not want to disobey but there had been considerable pressure brought to bear upon them to make them disobey. After the talk from Colonel Stephenson they were sorry they listened to others and were prepared to obey.

Q. Did you see the same signs of repentance amongst a number of the First Year students?

A. There were a number of the First Year students who would like to tell the members of the staff that they were only compelled by the persuasion of stronger spirits not to appear and as far as their wishes were concerned they did not wish to disobey.

Q. On the 12th the Principal was at that time Colonel Stephenson. Did he take steps to close the college?

28 November 1919.]

Mr. A. S. HEMMY.

A. He then decided that the whole atmosphere of Lahore was at that time highly charged and that the best thing he could do was to close the college. It would have been the ordinary way to close for a week at the end of these examinations, so he closed at once and arranged for the students to go home.

Q. Then when did the students return to the college?

A. The First Year and Third Year students did not return until after the vacation, i.e., the 1st September. The Second and Fourth Year students returned at the time of the University examinations which were postponed, I do not remember the exact date, to the 14th of May. The college itself was occupied by a regiment so that it was not possible to have the First and Third Year students back again.

Q. When the students returned what was their attitude?

A. Their attitude was that they wished to show that they were loyal citizens and asked for an opportunity to prove their loyalty.

Q. Since the re-opening of the college has the attitude of the students been friendly?

A. Oh, thoroughly friendly. The tone of the college is quite normal.

Q. Were your students affected by the several orders that were issued by the Military authorities during the Martial Law régime?

A. They were sent home. None of them were affected.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. I see there was trouble with the First Year students?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the average age of the first year students?

A. I think about 17.

Q. I have been looking at the Martial Law Order No. 46, dated the 13th May by which certain punishments were meted out by Colonel Johnson. By this time all the students had gone home?

A. Yes.

Q. As regards the punishments I see that they were the First Year students upon whom they were inflicted?

A. They were after a warning from the Principal, at that time Colonel Stephenson, because they still disobeyed him and refused to appear.

Q. They refused to appear and get on with their work?

A. Yes.

Q. Rustication was applied for one year in the case of these First Year students?

A. For various offences; and other punishments were inflicted on the people either for organising a strike or having shown active political views, i.e., they had been trying to stir up political trouble amongst the students.

Q. Tell me, Mr. Hemmy, whether these punishments in the case of a Government College, which were inflicted under Martial Law Order 46, were forced upon you by the Military authorities or that you agreed to them?

A. The Principal at that time was asked to furnish a list of the students who, he considered, had been misbehaving themselves, with the punishments which he thought fit and proper. He made out a list on his own responsibility which was seen by the Director of the Public Instruction and was then forwarded.

Q. Then was that acted upon or was returned as insufficient?

A. It was acted upon and not returned as insufficient.

Q. One thing more I want to ask. Some stress has been laid on the fact that on the 10th a first year student was wounded. Was he severely wounded?

A. He was severely wounded.

Q. And you say that roused a great excitement and anger amongst the students. Was that in your opinion genuine or put on?

A. It was genuine for the time being.

Q. Students of the First Year had a notion that if one was in the front of the mob and if the police had to stop it, it was very hard that somebody should be hurt?

A. There wasn't much argument behind the matter. The fact was that one of their friends was wounded, rightly or wrongly.

Q. You think it was a genuine excitement in that particular case and to that extent it was genuine as to make it a special excuse for the first year students?

A. Yes.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. With regard to your students, generally speaking, only I think a very small proportion of them take extreme notions in politics. The majority had no strong feeling?

A. As you take it, you are right.

Q. It is the custom of your college to give a dinner when the college is about to close, that is a sort of annual function?

A. Annual feast.

Q. It is given by the students to each other?

A. Yes.

Q. And this year I think the date fixed for this function was the 6th April?

A. Yes.

Q. Objection was raised by students that 6th being a general hartal day the feast should not be given?

A. Yes they asked for the date to be changed.

Q. Then there is a sort of branch hostel where speeches are delivered and meetings held by the students?

A. Yes there is a branch hostel where certain speeches were delivered.

Q. And before the 10th there was meeting of that club or association?

A. There is no association exactly that held meetings in that hostel, but meetings might very easily be called on occasions.

Q. Were you or were you not informed that as a matter of fact before the 10th April a meeting was held in your college where students delivered speeches on Hindu and Muhammadan union?

A. I cannot remember the exact date.

Q. It was some time in the beginning of April, it may be before the 10th?

A. No affair took place after the 10th April. I do not think so. I did not inquire into this particular matter myself.

Q. But you were informed?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it not a fact that some of the students that were punished, were punished because they had spoken at this meeting on the question of Hindu-Muhammadan union?

A. I believe they were punished for making statements which were in the opinion of the Principal seditious.

Q. I don't think you keep any Criminal Investigation Department for the purposes jotting down the speeches of the students?

A. We do not.

Q. Therefore the opinion of the Principal was based upon the report that was made on those speeches?

A. I presume so.

Q. Perhaps you know nothing of what was the context of those speeches or what was said at those meetings. You cannot give us an account of the speeches?

A. Personally I did not conduct that inquiry.

Q. Is it true that on account of the speeches that were made at the meeting a certain number of students were punished?

A. This was one item including a number of others.

Q. There were some other students against whom there was no other charge?

A. They were not punished.

Q. Now take one student of your college. You know Ghazanfar Ali Khan?

A. Yes, I know him.

Q. He did very good work so far as war work was concerned?

A. He did during 1917.

Q. He was praised by His Honour?

A. He received a Sanad from Government

28 November 1919.]

Mr. A. S. HENRY.

Q. This man was expelled from the College ?
 A. He was expelled at the time.
 Q. Is it a fact that the only charge against him was that he was present at that meeting and delivered a very strong pro-Hindu-Muhammadian address ?
 A. It is not a fact.
 Q. What else he did ?
 A. He did a number of other things. I did not know one was supposed to go into a particular case of a particular student on this occasion.
 Q. You do not remember just now what he actually did ?
 A. I know that he did some things.
 Q. I want to know some of them ?
 A. He did a number of things. He attended every political meeting which was held about that time at which speeches were made which were not regarded suitable. It was contrary to rules to attend political meetings.
 Q. Therefore to attend political meetings was contrary to rules and college regulations ?
 A. Yes.
 Q. No student should attend political meetings. I take it that these meetings were held before the 10th April ?
 A. I am referring to outside political meetings. Some of these he attended before and some after. He was present at the meetings which, as far as I know, were prohibited by Government.
 Q. At any meetings prohibited by Government ?
 A. I do not know; he attended certain meetings at the Badshahi Mosque.
 Q. Before the 10th April, there were only 3 important meetings, 4th, 9th and 23rd. Do you recollect any of these meetings, that is, meetings held for the purpose of proclaiming the message of Mahatma Gandhi ?
 A. I do not remember the exact meetings.
 Q. May I know what was the object of these meetings ?
 A. I was not present at these meetings; I cannot tell you.
 Q. If there is nothing objectionable in these meetings, why should the students be punished ?
 A. You must ask the authorities as to the objectionableness or otherwise of the meetings.
 Q. I can ask you because you as Principal know it. I want to know what evidence there was in your possession that they attended these meetings. I want to know whether the meetings were objectionable or not.
 A. I have not come here with the particular evidence that could be adduced in the particular case.
 Q. You do not remember what the charge was ?
 A. I can tell you of the general nature.
 Q. You do not remember as to what these meetings were; the meetings which he attended and for which he was punished ?
 A. I cannot remember the precise meetings that he attended. There were certain meetings. I have a general recollection now that these were referred to in the Martial Law cases which were held in the month of May. I cannot remember at the present time.
 Q. That is, you refer to those meetings which were referred to in the conspiracy cases which were held in the months of April and May ?
 A. Yes.
 Q. May I understand that you referred to the attendance at these meetings which were publicly or secretly held ?
 A. I do not know whether these meetings were public or secret. My impression was they were public.
 Q. In that conspiracy case, there is reference to certain meetings about which notices were issued, and certain other meetings that were held at the houses of different persons. I do not think you mean to say that he attended those private meetings ?
 A. No.
 Q. In your opinion, if any student attends a political meeting where no violence is preached, where nothing is said against Government as such, and where the subjects of the Rowlett Bill and hartal are discussed, he should be punished so severely as to be expelled from college ?

A. My view is that if a student has been told not to attend a particular meeting and he does attend it, he is guilty of a flagrant disobedience of orders.
 Q. It is very good for a student to obey every order of the Principal. The question is there are several rules. It is not the disobeying of hundreds of these that I speak of.
 A. As regards this particular case, this is one count among several.
 Q. My point is: because he disobeyed an order of the Principal therefore you considered the punishment just, the penalty being that he should be expelled and that he should not enter the precincts of any college or any University. You consider that a just punishment ?
 A. In the first place, I may remark that I did not give this punishment.
 Q. I did not mean you, but your authority. You thought that in your opinion that is a just punishment inflicted ?
 A. The punishment was not inflicted simply upon that count. This was one of the several.
 Q. I think there will be a record of the several charges against the students ?
 A. May be.
 Q. I want to know whether there is or there is not. Is there a record of the different charges that were framed against the different students, and of the punishments awarded ?
 A. The punishments were not inflicted by a Court of Law and therefore it was not necessary to frame charges, the Principal inflicted the punishment upon these when he considered they should be punished.
 Q. I am very sorry, you have misunderstood me. I do not mean to say that formal charges should be made against these. There must be some form of paper in which the boy's name would be written, as information, he has attended such and such meeting which was prohibited; he expressed extremist views, or delivered inflammatory speeches or he was one of the members of the mob; and therefore he was rusticated for the whole of his life. I expect only some record of this kind.
 A. It would be necessary for you to ask Colonel Stephenson. There is no formal record with me. It is not kept on a file.
 Q. So we cannot get this information anywhere except by approaching Colonel Stephenson ?
 A. Yes.
 Q. I do not suggest that the Principal at that time did not exercise his powers justly. Supposing the question were raised that these sentences, these punishments that were awarded to different students were unjust and were inflicted through pressure, then there is no record from which we will be able to judge as to whether there is any truth in the allegation or not ?
 A. I have no complete papers on the subject, but Colonel Stephenson might have some papers.
 Q. You are not aware where they could be found ?
 A. They are not with me.
 Q. It is possible to get them from the office of the college ? It is a very serious and important matter; therefore there ought to be some record ?
 A. The punishment was given for reasons which the Principal considered sufficient, namely, that he was an undesirable member of the college.
 Q. This being an important matter, so far as the students are concerned, there ought to be some record of reasons or grounds for inflicting such punishments.
 A. The record is simply of the punishment which was inflicted. No reasons.
 Q. No charges—not in the sense of a regular charge sheet ?
 A. It is not usual in recording sentences of expulsion from the college to frame any formal indictment. The student is expelled because he is not regarded as a desirable member of the college.
 Q. Any minutes of evidence ?
 A. No record.

28 November 1919.]

Mr. A. S. HEMMY—concluded—Rai Bahadur AMAR NATH.

Q. Suppose the boy has attended several meetings, how will the Principal satisfy himself that the boy did attend several meetings, before he passes the order of expulsion?

A. That question you have to ask Colonel Stephenson.

Q. Now I will take the case of another man. Perhaps I may be wrong. His name is Krishna Dayal Kapoor of your college. He was the student of the 4th year class, and he has passed the B.A. examination. On the recommendation of the college authorities the degree was taken away from him.

A. No. That is not the case. He failed.

Q. Did he come to you and ask as to why he was punished?

A. He has not come.

Q. He never came to you?

A. No.

Q. Was he or was he not present at that period in Lahore? He left Lahore at the end of March.

A. His case I have not gone into personally myself, because he was one of the students who did not appeal. Therefore the punishment may be a minor one and I understand he had not any intention of coming to any college.

Q. You do not remember his appealing to you?

A. No.

Q. You know he was absent from Lahore?

A. I have not gone into his case because he did not appeal. If he had appealed I would have gone into his case.

Q. Therefore you are not in a position to give us any information as to the offences for which and the grounds on which students were punished.

A. My knowledge is of a general nature. I did not go into the evidence. That was the Principal's duty.

Q. You think that if the educational career of a boy is cut off as it has been cut off in the case of a number of students, it is a very mild punishment?

A. Yes.

Q. You consider that if an order is passed on the 1st year or the 2nd year students after passing the examination, that they would not be allowed to appear for any examination, it is a very mild punishment?

A. What case are you referring to?

Q. I am referring to the case of boys against whom an order was passed that, having completed their course, they will not be taken for the same examination if they fail and any other examination if they pass?

A. They are at perfect liberty to go to another college. That is what that means.

Q. Do you think that it would be possible for them? Under the rules they won't be taken?

A. We won't refuse them the necessary leaving certificates.

Q. Will there be any college throughout the province which would admit them if they were once expelled?

A. They were not expelled.

Q. I am using the word loosely. If a man, after finishing his course of studies, wants to re-enter the college, the college won't take him?

A. At the end of each session of 2 years there is a University examination; if a student wishes to continue in the college, he has to apply for re-admission. There were plenty of students that have not been re-admitted for various reasons.

Q. I am quite familiar with this procedure as a layman. You will agree with me that this rule applies in normal cases, as, when there is no accommodation. Suppose there are 60 applicants; you can under the rules, it may be, take only 40. But here the boy under Martial Law was punished. Do you think he would ever be taken in a college?

A. I may remark that other boys were taken by other colleges.

Q. Punishments remitted?

A. They were not taken into Government colleges.

Q. You know these men who were punished in your college were taken by other colleges?

A. Yes.

Q. Was there a sort of repentance for the order that was passed?

A. Not at all; nothing to do with repentance.

Q. Were not a number of students, as Nandi Lal, Balwant Rai, Hari Dutt and Prakash Chandur, were they not all punished because they delivered a lecture on Hindu-Mussalman unity (and that was a sore thing, and therefore punished)?

A. None of these students were punished on a single count.

Q. This was one count which was taken into consideration?

A. Presumably.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. I take it that the relations between the staff and your students are quite friendly?

A. Quite friendly.

Q. Do the professors take an interest in the welfare of the students?

A. A great deal.

Q. Join with them in their games?

A. They organize games and so forth.

Q. Do you also make an attempt to inculcate sound political views in the students?

A. Not directly, but indirectly, by inculcating the duties of a good citizen. We don't deal with political matters, current political matters.

Q. But apart from discussing these political matters, do you not take up questions like the Rowlatt legislation with the higher students? Apart from discussing with them general questions, do you not take up particular questions which are interesting people generally and call their attention to any important legislation or such other matters?

A. Only in a general sort of way. We do not deal with a particular measure and discuss a particular measure, but we deal with the general questions bearing on it.

Q. In that way you inculcate broad principles?

A. There is a great deal of freedom between the members of the staff and the students and these things are discussed informally no doubt and there is for instance the Round Table Society which deals with economic questions where many things are discussed incidentally.

Q. Have you any debating society in your college?

A. We have two debating societies and a large number of societies dealing with various subjects, run by the students, and a member of the staff makes it a point to be present at these meetings.

Rai Bahadur AMAR NATH, M. B. E., Joint Registrar, Lahore.

By the President—

Q. You are a Joint Registrar at Lahore?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Were you Honorary Joint Secretary of the Provincial War Loan Committee and Honorary Secretary of the Lahore District and Town Committee?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you in a position to state what was done in the way of inducing people to subscribe to War Loans?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What do you say as regards that?

A. I say, Sir, that no pressure was brought to bear on the people, but we used persuasion. A Central Committee composed mostly of non-officials was appointed and

Rai Bahadur AMAR NATH.

all sub-committees in the districts, and we distributed posters, appeals, etc., explaining the objects of the loans and their terms, and to my knowledge or to the committee's knowledge we never heard, except in one case, that any irregularity had occurred.

Q. Besides the Provincial Committee at Lahore, were district committees and sub-committees constituted in all the important cities and towns?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And did these committees and sub-committees consist of both officials and non-officials?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What was the method of procedure adopted by the committees with a view to getting people to subscribe?

A. For instance, in Lahore, I, from my own experience, and others knew who were the well-to-do people. We first subscribed ourselves and then we used to ask and persuade others to subscribe liberally, and I have compiled a statement for each district.

Q. A statement about what?

A. A statement showing the population of each district and certain towns as well, and the number of assesses; that is, those who paid income-tax, and the amount of income-tax, and also the number of subscribers to the war loan and how much each district subscribed.

Q. Do you know anything about a complaint which we have heard that people who did not subscribe to the war loan had their assessments raised against them?

A. No, Sir, that is wrong. Of course some over-zealous Tahsildar may have said this, but I never heard of it.

Q. And if it was done it was not a thing authorised by those responsible?

A. No, Sir, the committee and the authorities were against that.

Q. I think all classes of the community subscribed?

A. Yes, Sir. Mostly the people of the town subscribed, lawyers and merchants and traders and other well-to-do people, jagirdars.

Q. And I think you got subscriptions from Punjabi business men who were resident in Calcutta and other commercial people?

A. Yes, Sir, because there was keen competition between the three Provinces, Madras, United Provinces and the Punjab, so we tried our best to beat the other two Provinces, although they were the wealthiest and the biggest provinces. We knew certain people in Calcutta and Burma who originally belonged to the Punjab, and we wrote to them to help us and they did help us.

Q. And you got some large subscriptions from them?

A. Yes, Sir, one gentleman from Calcutta, when we told him of the keen competition and that the United Provinces was approaching us, sent us 10 lakhs at once on his own behalf and one lakh on his wife's behalf.

Q. Now, so far as the agricultural classes were concerned I do not think you obtained so much?

A. No, Sir. In one or two cases of course we did. Perhaps you know, Sir, that on account of these high prices the agricultural classes are now better off than the people in the towns and the big zamindars are making lots of money. I knew and others knew that they had lots of rupees in the banks. We approached them, and they did give us a good sum, but the small ones we did not touch.

Q. But in approaching them did you use any threats?

A. No, Sir, they gladly and willingly gave.

Q. I think there was an offer made by the zamindars in one of the districts that was not accepted?

A. The Lyallpur people wanted to make a present to the Government. The Government has made grants of lakhs of acres of land free, or at a nominal price, and they are making lots of rupees now-a-days, so when Government asked for subscriptions the people said "we will give one killa of wheat for every murabba free." But Government refused to accept that, and said they did not want it as a gift, and said it would be better, in the interests of the zamindars, if they invested this sum in the War Loan, and the interest of that sum could be utilised for the benefit of the agriculturists. And these people are doing that. A few days ago I heard that several dispensaries are in contemplation to be opened there from this very fund for the benefit of the zamindars.

Q. Have you compared the figures of population and income-tax of the different districts and towns with the amount subscribed by each?

A. This is a big statement which I have made, but take, for instance, Lahore. There are two kinds of War Loan, one which was subscribed through Treasuries or Banks and the other through the Post Office, and the Post Office also had two kinds, War Bonds and Cash Certificates. For instance, to the second war loan Lahore subscribed 48 lakhs, and War Bonds Rs. 5,41,000, Cash Certificates Rs. 5,29,300, total Rs. 58,72,000. Now the population of the district is 1,036,000 and of Lahore town itself 210,000. The number of assesses who pay income-tax is 3,243 and the amount of the income-tax is Rs. 4,31,910. We could not get figures from all the districts of the number of subscribers, but the Committee had issued a circular that a list should be sent of those who had subscribed a thousand rupees and above. I found that only 269 people subscribed to the war loan, and the people who subscribed big sums in Lahore were very few. Next as to Hissar. I specially want to say about Hissar that the war loan had nothing to do with the disturbances. The total amount subscribed by Hissar is Rs. 57,59,000 and the population is 8 lakhs, the number of assesses 1,893, and the amount of income-tax is Rs. 1,54,000. Hissar has not got large canals, but there are large traders there. There is an Indian Deputy Commissioner there, Mr. Latif, and he and his wife tried their best, and we secured a large sum. Leaving Lahore aside, I think Hissar stands first in the whole Province.

Q. Considering its size and population?

A. Yes.

Q. Then how did Amritsar subscribe?

A. Amritsar is more a trading class. We expected much more from Amritsar than even Hissar. We got a total of 26 lakhs from Amritsar; that is, Hissar 57 and Amritsar 26 lakhs. The assessment of income-tax is Rs. 3,58,000 and the Amritsar town population is 151,000 and the number of subscribers to the war loan is only 230.

Q. Then how did Kasur do?

A. For Kasur I have not got the figures. Rs. 4,60,000 was subscribed.

Q. As regards Gujranwala District?

A. The Gujranwala total is Rs. 10,19,500 and the population is 923,000 and Rs. 92,515 is the income-tax. That is, Gujranwala did not give a large amount.

Q. I should like to ask you a question or two about the application of Martial Law in Lahore. Did you take an active part in the movements for restoring peace and order?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you find the people were amenable to reason or not?

A. No, Sir, they were not.

Q. In your opinion was Martial Law essential to the restoration of order?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did the hartal, started on the 10th and continued till about the 15th, cause great inconvenience to the public?

A. It did, Sir.

Q. And during that period do you know that means were being taken to prevent those who wanted to open their shops and do business from doing as they wished?

A. Yes, Sir, I was myself one of those who tried to persuade the people to resume work, but they would not.

Q. And do you know whether shop-keepers desirous of opening their shops were prevented by others from doing so?

A. Some.

Q. Had the population got, in your opinion, out of hand? Had it got unruly?

A. Yes, Sir, unruly.

Q. Were people not allowed to go about in carriages and tongas and tum-tums for a while?

A. Tongas could not ply.

Q. Why was that?

28 November 1919.]

Rai Bahadur AMAR NATH.

A. They were afraid of the people.

Q. If they tried to ply what happened to them?

A. They were punished; some pressure was brought to bear on them.

Q. When the troops first came to the city did you accompany the Deputy Commissioner and the Officer Commanding?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What did you find was the attitude of the people?

A. They were very rude and defiant in their attitude towards us. Of course most of them could not understand. When we, the Deputy Commissioner and Honorary Magistrates, explained to them that they should resume work, they said they would not do so until Government passed the Rowlatt rule; they did not know what passed meant; they meant until the Rowlatt Act was repealed.

Q. Did you do any recruiting work in Lahore?

A. Yes, Sir, I did some.

Q. In connection with the getting of recruits was there anything in the nature of conscription or compulsion?

A. No, Sir.

Q. Were recruits got so much from the cities as from the villages?

A. To my knowledge there may be two or three from Lahore town, none was recruited from the city itself. Two tahsils of the district consist of Manjhas, but they did not enlist freely, and the Jats also did not enlist. Kamins, low class people, were enlisted.

Q. In your opinion had recruiting methods anything to do with the unrest that existed in Lahore?

A. In Lahore, no, Sir. It was left to the people.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. You said something about Hissar District which rather interests me. I understand you said the Hissar district, considering its population, did the best as regards the war loan?

A. Yes.

Q. Am I right in saying that in the Hissar District there was no firing upon anybody and no serious trouble?

A. No, Sir. Because as I just mentioned most of the money came from very few people. We knew the wealthy people there, and they subscribed most of the money. Bhiwani alone I think subscribed 25 lakhs.

Q. When you said Hissar District did the best considering its population, are you also taking account of its wealth, as shown by the assessment figures?

A. It is from my own knowledge; I know Hissar District myself. These two or three places Bhiwani and Sirsa gave good subscriptions.

Q. And I think you attribute a good deal of the success of the war loan there to the Indian Deputy Commissioner, Mr. Latifi?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Looking at the matter as a whole with all the figures you have got before you, do you think the subscriptions to the war loan were any part of the explanation of the troubles in the Punjab in April where they did arise?

A. Not at all, Sir, absolutely not.

Q. In looking for the explanation of trouble such as that, there are some direct causes and some remote causes to look to. Do I understand it to be your opinion that the war loan is not one of the causes?

A. There are other causes, but not war loan.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. What is the number of those people who subscribed to the war loan and cash certificates and Post Office war loan?

A. I have not got the figures for cash certificates, I have got....

Q. Therefore you cannot give us any information as to how many people took cash certificates for Rs. 10?

A. I cannot.

Q. Were not all those who were not bankers or who were not well off asked to take cash certificates for Rs. 10 each, Government servants, clerks and agriculturists and every body?

A. I did not see all, but clerks in some offices and zamindars also were asked.

Q. If there be any dissatisfaction it would be with regard to those persons who invested their money in cash certificates and in Post Office war bonds?

A. May be, but we did not hear of it.

Q. Now I want to know what inference you wish us to draw. May I take it that, so far as Hissar is concerned, big bankers and merchants subscribed to the war bonds?

A. Yes.

Q. They were business men; they thought it was a good investment and they subscribed largely?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, so far as the general public of Hissar was concerned, there are very few who subscribed?

A. I think so because most of the money is from big people.

Q. What inference do you wish to draw? You have given us the population of Gujranwala; you have given us those persons who pay income-tax in Gujranwala, and still its number was very low; therefore what inference do you wish us to draw?

A. That is according to the population and the assessment the Gujranwala people were not hard pressed.

Q. They were not hard pressed, that accounts for their not subscribing according to your estimation?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Though they were not hard pressed, notwithstanding the general persuasion applied to them as well as to all other places, they were not amenable to that persuasion?

A. I do not understand you, Sir.

Q. They were not amenable to reason to subscribe?

A. They willingly did, but the majority did not. It is only 185 persons who subscribed.

Q. Over Rs. 1,000.

A. Rs. 1,000 and above.

Q. Only 185, therefore I want to know as to whether the rest did not subscribe because nobody persuaded them, or they did not subscribe because they did not listen to your persuasion?

A. In several places people never told us what they were going to do and still they subscribed.

Q. That is not my point; you have given us the figures of Gujranwala, you want us to draw certain conclusion from those figures. What is that conclusion, that the amount of subscription that was realised from Gujranwala, the smallness of that subscription, was due to the fact that persuasion was not fully exercised or persuasion was exercised as in other districts, but the people did not come forward notwithstanding that?

A. What I meant by the comparison of these figures is that if you take all these things into consideration, the assessment and the population, and the amount placed in the war loan, you won't find that in Gujranwala there was any undue pressure or that we got the amount which we expected.

Q. Therefore you take it both ways. If there was a large sum subscribed you say the people have given willingly, they have subscribed this large amount, and there was no pressure. If the amount of subscription is small you say the amount of subscription is small because no persuasion was used?

A. You can draw whatever conclusion you like; I have given you my reasons.

Q. For this war work you have been made M. B. E.?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And you are also a jagirdar?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. A jagir given by Sir Michael O'Dwyer?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Before these occurrences, that is to say, before the 6th of April, were you a popular figure?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. That is the people were not against you—you were very popular?

A. I do not say I was very popular. It is not for me to say that.

28 November 1919.]

Rai Bahadur AMAR NATH—~~continued~~—Rai Sahib BADHAWA MAL.

Q. Were you one of those persons whom you describe in your statement as for the Government?

A. I was also one of them.

Q. Are you or are you not aware that a particular class of persons purchased recruits? Why did they do that?

A. Some of them spent money and got recruits. They considered it their duty to help Government.

Q. It was loyalty?

A. Yes.

Q. If a person has very few recruits in his village, he, therefore, purchases 20 or 30 recruits?

A. If a man has lakhs he can offer money to people to come forward and use his money for that purpose.

Q. Supposing they failed to supply the number of recruits?

A. It is optional for him.

Q. Was any number fixed or a quota assigned to villages?

A. I do not know.

Q. With regard to the city are you or are you not aware that before the war there were only certain areas from which recruitment used to take place, or among certain classes of persons only there was recruitment?

A. That I do not know; but I know that certain classes were not taken.

Q. Are you aware that no recruits were taken from the city?

A. Yes.

Q. There was no recruitment from the city in pre-war days?

A. Yes. They were not taken because none came forward.

Q. Therefore so far as the city were concerned they were not good recruiting grounds for the army?

A. Yes.

By Major-General Sir George Barrow—

Q. Do I understand you to say that no matter what the subscription was—whether it was large or small—whatever it was—in your opinion no undue pressure was brought to bear?

A. Yes, Sir. No undue pressure was brought to bear.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. You say in your statement "I can honestly and confidently say that if this unruly spirit had been allowed to continue longer, badmashes of the city would have been encouraged to commit loot and other outrages upon the weaker citizens." At what figure do you put down the number of badmashes in the Lahore City?

A. I cannot give the number.

Q. You do not suppose that all the people in the city were badmashes?

A. No.

Q. Are they in the majority?

A. No.

Q. How many do you think there are? About one thousand?

A. I should say a few hundreds.

Q. About one thousand?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you think that on account of the lawlessness of these people it was necessary to have Martial Law for the whole town of Lahore?

A. Not only for that reason.

Q. You give this as a reason for Martial Law, and what are the other reasons?

A. I have already given that the people did not resume their work. There was no order in the city. They were just like madmen. They used to walk in parties, and people could not get food and tongas could not ply.

Q. The second reason was to prevent hartial. The first reason refers to badmashes. Any other reason?

A. When I went to my village every week I found that the people were making rumours.

Q. I am referring purely and simply to Martial Law in the town. For these two reasons?

A. I have stated that.

Q. One to keep badmashes in order and the second to prevent hartial? Any other reason?

A. No.

Q. And in the villages?

A. In the villages there were all sorts of stories being spread. The people said that they heard that the Government are going to take three-fourths of our wheat, and after hearing these things they were going against Government.

Q. In what manner?

A. If they come to know that when the wheat crop is cut they will only get one-fourth there will be dissatisfaction.

Q. Are you cognizant of the facts?

A. This is in my own village.

Q. What did you say?

A. I said it was all lies.

Q. Did they believe you?

A. My men believed me.

Q. Have you any experience of any other villages?

A. In other villages I also heard similar stories, but this is hearsay—nothing beyond that.

By Mr. Abdul Kadir, Assistant Government Advocate—

Q. About these cash certificates will you please tell me whether the money for these cash certificates can be withdrawn at any time? And did it come to your notice that some of the people who had invested in cash certificates withdrew the money from time to time?

A. Yes; they withdrew.

Q. With regard to subscribing to the war loan you say you went about persuading other people, and it is possible that they agreed to pay one thousand or two thousand, but in reality they subscribed much greater sums than that?

A. When we persuaded them they increased the sums.

Q. Did it not happen in any instance where you said you are good enough for one thousand, give that amount?

A. I heard cases quietly where a man would tell me that he would give two thousand, but in the bank he placed fifty thousand.

Q. Later on when he knew it was a good investment he himself increased the amount?

A. Yes.

Rai Sahib BADHAWA MAL, Head Accountant, Moghulpura Workshops, North-Western Railway, Lahore.

By the President—

Q. You are the Head Accountant of the Moghulpura Workshops?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. The 11th of April was the fixed date of payments?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You started from your house at about 9 A.M. to be in time to make payments?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did you go from Lohari Gate via Amrithdara Road?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did you find difficulty in making your way?

A. Just near the Islamia College.

Q. How was that?

A. Some people were standing here and there. When they saw me going that way they came and asked me where I was going, and I said to my work. They then said this is a day of mourning, we will not let you go. They persuaded me not to go, so I had to take another road just a little this side and went my way and reached my office and did my work.

Q. The same thing occurred again on the 12th?

28 November 1919.]

Rai Sahib BADHAWA MAL

[Concluded.]

A. Yes on the 12th when I was going between the Kashmiri and Sheranwala Gates two people came to me saying that the road is not clear. They advised me to change my road so I went to the Badami Bagh Station by the new road made for the Goods Shed and reached my office without any further obstruction.

Q. On Sunday night did anything happen to your house ?

A. I was only told my house was set on fire.

Q. Who did that ? Was it the crowd ?

A. It is not known. On the 13th night between 11 and 12 P.M. some one perhaps clandestinely came and put something there, and it was ignited. My boy was reading. He was studying for the college examination and when he saw the flames he made a noise and the neighbouring people came running to subdue the fire.

Q. Did you report this matter ?

A. I reported the matter through the Loco. Superintendent to the Police who made enquiries but nothing came of it.

Mr. Herbert :—My Lord, we do not put forward witnesses unless there is a particular reason for their attending. We select our witnesses on two principles, one is that either the witness will depose as to particular facts, or secondly, where the matter is one on which information is sought, for instance, causes of the disturbance, the continuance of Martial Law, or the introduction of Martial Law, the principle being that a witness whose evidence is worth recording, because we know very much better than we did before the principal facts, and we should take measures to cut down our lists in the other cases as far as possible. It is inevitable that a certain amount of overlapping might take place, but we are bound to bring them forward. The reason of that is we think it possible the Committee may be able to accept the evidence of one witness when it would not accept the evidence of perhaps another. We have put up a list of a number of witnesses and many of these have not been examined. We want something on record to show that these witnesses were not being examined not because the Punjab Government does not desire to take their evidence, but because the Committee do not require it. All sorts of misrepresentations may afterwards be represented, viz., that the Punjab Government deliberately withdrew witnesses because they knew they were going to depose against the Government. We desire therefore that a note should be made that a particular witness was not examined because the Committee did not care to receive his evidence.

The President :—I think a number of witnesses whose names are given have already given their evidence, but we have to exercise discretion in not examining a certain number.

Mr. Herbert :—I do not dispute Your Lordship's discretion.

The President :—The Committee will accept the responsibility for not having examined them.

Nawab FATEH ALI KHAN.

At Lahore, Monday, the 1st December 1919.

PRESENT:

The Hon'ble LORD HUNTER.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice RANKIN.

The Hon'ble Mr. W. F. RICE, C.S.I., C.L.E., I.C.S.

Major-General Sir GEORGE BARROW, K.C.B., K.C.M.G.

The Hon'ble Pandit JAGAT NARAYAN.

Sardar Sahibzada SULTAN AHMAD KHAN.

Mr. H. WILLIAMSON, M.B.E., I.F., Secretary.

Nawab FATEH ALI KHAN Qasibash, C.L.E., Lahore.

By the President—

Q. There are one or two questions I would ask you generally. First about the 6th April. Were there large crowds marching through the city on the 6th April?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What sort of cries were the crowds shouting?

A. Hai, Hai King George Mar Gaya (King George is dead).

Q. Were there other similar cries?

A. Yes, Sir, numerous other cries.

Q. Did the crowd pass your house?

A. Yes, Sir, it passed my house in the city.

Q. Did they say anything as they passed your house?

A. They abused me also.

Q. Why did they abuse you?

A. Because I had published a letter on the 5th April against the passive resistance movement in the Civil and Military Gazette.

Q. Were there other people besides yourself abused by the mobs on that day?

A. Many others also were abused.

Q. What other people were abused?

A. Diwan Kishan Kishore and other people who were looked upon as friends of Government.

Q. There was another hartal on the 10th April. How do you account for that hartal?

A. People were very much excited on account of the procession of Ram Naumi which preceded the hartal of the 10th April, and they also received the news of the arrest of Mr. Gandhi, and therefore they made the hartal.

Q. You did not see what occurred between the people and the mob at Anarkali or at Lohari Gate?

A. No, I did not see anything personally.

Q. Did the hartal on the 10th continue on the 11th also?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did the disorderly element in the crowd appear to have control in the city?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Had the civil authority any power?

A. The civil authority had no power in the city.

Q. Did you notice groups of men at the city gates?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What were these groups of men doing?

A. They were obstructing people from going to the Government Offices.

Q. Were tongas allowed to ply?

A. They did not allow the tongas to ply.

Q. What did they do to prevent the tongas running?

A. They cut the gear of the tongas.

Q. Did you see that done in any case?

A. I did not see anything with my own eyes.

Q. Were the police able to protect tonga drivers?

A. They could not do that.

Q. In your opinion was this hartal anti-British?

A. Yes, Sir, it was.

Q. Was public property damaged by the crowds in these days?

A. The municipal lanterns were damaged.

Q. What effect had the meetings on the people in the Badshahi Mosque on the 10th and 11th April?

A. They kept up the excitement among the mob.

Q. Were law-abiding citizens in your opinion in danger during this time?

A. Yes, Sir, they were in danger.

Q. Did anything happen to your servants?

A. Two of my servants were caught hold of by the mob, because they were my servants and the tutor of my children was also threatened.

Q. Why was the tutor of your children threatened?

A. Because the tutor was coaching my children and I was considered as a friend of Government and so they threatened him.

Q. Was anything said about your house being burnt at all?

A. Yes, Sir, the rumour was that my house inside the city was going to be burnt.

Q. Did you do anything in consequence of hearing that rumour?

A. I removed the women and children from my house to my country-house about 12 miles away from here.

Q. Were many Europeans seen on the streets either in the city or in the neighbourhood?

A. None whatever.

Q. Were alarming news reaching you as to what was occurring in the outlying districts?

A. Alarming news from outside were reaching me to the effect that railway lines were being damaged and telegraph wires were cut and Europeans were being killed.

Q. How did the mob receive the news of these incidents?

A. The mob was welcoming all this news.

Q. Was anything said as to the attitude of the soldiers of the Indian Army?

A. Rumours were set afloat that the Gurkhas and Sikhs refused to fire at Amritsar.

Q. How were these rumours received by the crowd?

A. The people were welcoming this news also.

Q. Do you know whether any statements were made against the Government or against the King-Emperor?

A. Yes, they were abusing Government and the King-Emperor and they destroyed the pictures of King-Emperor wherever they found them in the city.

Q. Was a great effort made to bring the hartal to an end?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Was it necessary in your opinion for the restoration of peace and good Government that the hartal should be brought to an end?

A. Yes, Sir, I thought it necessary.

Q. How was it brought to an end?

A. Martial Law brought about the end of the hartal.

Q. In your opinion was Martial Law necessary?

A. It was necessary at that time.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. I think your house is on Empress Road, is it not?

1 December 1919.]

Nawab FATEH ALI KHAN.

A. I have one house in the city inside the Akbari Gate and another house on the Empress Road.

Q. At that time which house were you living in ?

A. In the house on the Empress Road.

Q. Were you in the city itself on the 11th or the 12th April ?

A. No, I was in my house on the Empress Road.

Q. So that you did not yourself go into the city on the 11th or the 12th and see what the state of affairs there was ?

A. I did not go.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. You have stated that the mob destroyed the pictures of the King-Emperor, that is what you heard, you did not see anything yourself ?

A. I only heard it.

Q. You have stated that the mob wanted to burn down your house, that was also a report made to you by your servants ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. About the fact that your servants were threatened, that also was a report made to you by your servants ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You have stated that all these things were done by the mob because you were supposed to be a pro-Government man ?

A. At that time I was looked upon as friend of Government.

Q. Is it not a fact that in the Lahore city there was a large body of men who, even before this occurrence, were prepared to defame you, to libel you and cause you injury ?

A. There was not a large body of people.

Q. There was a body of persons, a small number of people, among the Muhammadans ?

A. Yes, there were a few persons who on personal grounds were going to defame me and libel me.

Q. Was not this attempt carried out in the Urdu papers against you even before this occurrence ?

A. Yes, by way of blackmailing they had done it.

Q. These things had been going on for about a year, ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Were you ever informed as to who were the persons who threatened to burn down your house or who threatened your servants ? Can you give the names ?

A. The mob generally.

Q. Have you any reasons to believe that the mob and the people who were threatening your servants or who were threatening to burn down your house, were not instigated by your private enemies ?

A. No, they were not instigated by my private enemies.

Q. How do you know it ?

A. My private enemies were taking no part whatever in this movement.

Q. You were not present at the Badshahi Mosque when these meetings were held ?

A. No, I was not present.

Q. You have not yourself seen any municipal lanterns that had been broken ?

A. I have seen the broken lanterns.

Q. How many have you seen ?

A. One lantern at my own house.

Q. Have you seen any other lantern ?

A. Yes, one at my own house and the other near it.

Q. You saw only two lanterns ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Is it not a fact that after the 10th the mob was not allowed to come to the Civil Lines ?

A. The mob was not allowed to come to the Civil Lines after the 10th.

Q. And notwithstanding this fact, you went to the authorities and asked that a British Guard should be placed at your house on the Civil Lines ?

A. A guard of British troops was sent to protect my house after the 15th, when the mob was not allowed to frequent those roads.

Q. After the 15th ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Even when all the Civil Lines were picketed by the soldiers ?

A. Yes.

Q. Even when you knew that nobody was allowed to come there after 8 o'clock and that even more than two persons were not allowed to walk abreast ?

A. Yes, people could come there without the knowledge of the pickets.

Q. During those days when Martial Law was in force ?

A. Yes.

Q. You have made mention of a letter which you say you published in the Civil and Military Gazette about the passive resistance movement ?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it not a fact that in that letter you insinuated that the leaders of the people were as a matter of fact responsible for the circulation of false news, that they were keeping themselves behind the pardah, and that in order to get notoriety they were doing all these things at the expense of the public ? Did you or did you not publish that in your letter ?

A. Yes.

Q. And by the leaders of the people you meant Duni Chand, Ram Bhaj Datt Choudhry, Harkishan Lal and others ?

A. These kind of people.

Q. Why did you complain if Ram Bhaj Datt and others resented this ? You have said that you were taken to task by Harkishan Lal and Ram Bhaj Datt ?

A. I have made that statement.

Q. You were one of the deputation that went on behalf of the people to the Chief Secretary ?

A. I was one of the people who went to the Chief Secretary.

Q. It was either on the 12th or 13th April ?

A. Yes, on the 12th.

Q. You placed certain proposals before the Chief Secretary ?

A. Yes.

Q. The spokesmen of that deputation were Raja Narendra Nath and the Hon'ble Mr. Muhammad Shafi ?

A. Yes.

Q. And there were three things placed before the Chief Secretary ?

A. Yes.

Q. One was that the Military be removed from the city ?

A. Yes.

Q. The second that the arrested persons be released on bail ?

A. Yes.

Q. And the third was that the wounded be returned ?

A. Yes.

Q. These conditions were not accepted ?

A. They were not accepted.

Q. At the meeting where these proposals were agreed upon all had agreed to make this representation to the Government ?

A. All of them did not agree to these proposals, but there was no alternative, so they had to represent those conditions to the Chief Secretary.

Q. If Mr. Muhammad Shafi, Raja Narendra Nath, Bakshi Sohan Lal and those who were present said that all of them agreed to these proposals, will they not be making an incorrect statement ? If these people have made any statement that all of them agreed, would they be making an incorrect statement ? Did you raise any objection at that meeting ? Did you dissent ?

A. I took objection to the condition that the Military should be withdrawn from the city.

Q. You admit that although the people were ready to co-operate with the Hon'ble Mr. Muhammad Shafi, Raja Narendra Nath, Bakshi Sohan Lal and Ram Saran Das Bahadur, they refused to do anything with you ?

A. I never made that statement.

Q. I do not say you made this statement. Did people refuse to cooperate with you and have anything to do with you ?

1 December 1919.]

Nawab FATEH ALI KHAN.

A. I said that about the particular meeting which was held in the Town Hall

Q. Is it or is it not true that although Ram Bhaj Dutt, Harkishan Lal and all these people were ready to consult and co-operate with the Hon'ble Mr. Muhammad Shafi, Raja Narendra Nath, Rai Ram Saran Das Bahadur and Bakhshi Sohan Lal, they refused to consult with you and to have anything to do with you with regard to the opening of the hartal?

A. Yes. I do not know anything about other people; they were co-operating with Mr. Shafi and I was given that information.

Q. Mr. Shafi informed you that they refused to have anything to do with you?

A. Yes.

Q. About these rumours, you have no direct knowledge, that the so-called leaders according to you, as a matter of fact, ever gave currency to these rumours?

A. No.

Q. I think you are aware that at a later stage, between the 11th and 15th, even at the request, according to you, of the so-called leaders, shop-keepers refused to open their shops. They were not even amenable to reason so far as they were concerned?

A. They did not agree to open their shops.

Q. I want to know one more fact. You say that this was anti-British, i.e., that the action of hartal was anti-British. May I understand that by this you mean that they wanted to have nothing to do with the British Government and would have their own rights? Did they want to establish their own rights or was it against certain officers of Government?

A. It was against the British people. They were doing things from which I inferred that they were against British people. They tore the pictures and abused the King-Emperor and from this I inferred they were against the British.

Q. From this rumour, i.e., from the two things, viz., that they destroyed the pictures of the King-Emperor and they abused the King-Emperor you inferred that they were anti-British. Do you mean by anti-British they wanted to have nothing to do with the British rule and to establish their own rule? Is that what you mean?

A. At that time they were in that mood.

Q. You thought without any arms, without anything, that was seriously meant?

A. They may not be able to do that, but their moral temper was so.

Q. Do you make any difference between military aid and Martial Law?

A. Yes; there is difference.

Q. What is the difference?

A. Under Martial Law the administration is in the hands of Military people. Military aid means that the administration is in the hands of the civil people and it takes only aid from the Military soldiers.

Q. Then, am I right in deducing this inference, that even on the date when Martial Law was abrogated, according to you it should have been prolonged for the benefit of the masses of the people?

A. I never said that.

Q. Do you think that it was not maintained for a longer time than was absolutely necessary?

A. Peace and order had already been established within a week and the people's wrong ideas were corrected.

Q. I think you approve of every order that was passed by the Martial Law authorities?

A. I do not know all the orders, but when I came to know most of them at that time, they were not bad.

Q. Then do you approve of the Martial Law Order which ordered students to attend at a certain place 4 times a day?

A. Yes; students were asked to attend 4 times, because the authorities wanted to prevent them from taking part in the disturbances and save them from the danger of being killed.

Q. Was there any danger of any person being killed after the 15th?

A. There would have been again disorder and there would have been danger of their being killed again.

Q. There was a danger of their being killed after the 15th?

A. Yes; they wanted to keep students away from taking part in any movements so that these boys may not do any mischief or anything against the law and so that the Government may not be put to enforcing more drastic Martial Law.

Q. Do you think that it was necessary for the maintenance of peace and order to ask every householder who has got more than 5 maunds of grain to report to the Martial Law authorities?

A. The Martial Law authorities must have done it according to their own requirements.

Q. And you saw no objection to that?

A. For that particular occasion, there was no objection to be found.

Q. Therefore practically you have heard of all the important Martial Law orders that were passed and you have no objection to any of them?

A. I have already replied that whatever I have seen of the Martial Law orders, I have no objection to any one of them according to the occasion.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. You have stated that people were abusing His Majesty the King-Emperor? Is that within your own knowledge or did you simply hear people say so?

A. Other people informed me; I did not hear myself.

Q. Did people single out only His Majesty the King-Emperor or did they also by name abuse any official of the Government?

A. They included the Lieutenant-Governor.

Q. How is it that you do not mention it in your statement here?

A. It is possible that it might have been left out.

Q. It is not possible; it is not here.

A. Perhaps it is not there.

Q. When the hartal took place on the 6th of April, then also there was a great deal of excitement in the town?

A. Yes.

Q. Similar to what happened on the 10th or 11th?

A. No.

Q. What was the difference?

A. On the 10th and 11th the excitement was increased.

Q. Why?

A. The news about Mr. Gandhi's arrest had reached Lahore.

Q. That was the reason?

A. Yes.

Q. No disturbances took place on the 6th of April?

A. No.

Q. How do you account for that?

A. The excitement had not reached that degree yet.

Q. Which degree?

A. That was reached on the 10th or 11th.

Q. Did any looting or any disturbances take place on the 10th?

A. There was opposition between the Police and the mob.

Q. Apart from that, was there any looting or disturbance in the town or any trouble?

A. I have not heard anything of it.

Q. How do you account for that?

A. I think they were doing these things against the Government and not among themselves.

Q. What things?

A. They opposed the Police and the Government officials, and they were not to fight amongst themselves. That is how I account for it.

Q. You say they opposed the Police and Government officials. Who were the Government officials besides the Police whom they opposed?

A. The Police, Military, etc.

Q. Was there any Military on the 10th?

A. I heard that some of the Military was here.

1 December 1919.]

Nawah FATEH ALI KHAN.

Q. Because there was a collision between the police and the people therefore you thought they were doing something against the Government?

A. Their advance towards the Mall and the Lieutenant-Governor's residence was being checked by them.

Q. They wanted to go to the Lieutenant-Governor?

A. Yes.

Q. Why did they want to go to the Lieutenant-Governor?

A. I think it was not done out of good intentions. Had it been so, they would have approached him by other constitutional means.

Q. What do you mean by other constitutional means?

A. By request or peaceful means and not by this fight and quarrelling and through blood and killing.

Q. You said through blood and killing. What do you mean by that?

A. I mean by fighting and struggling hard towards it.

Q. Whom did they fight?

A. When they were checked, they still wanted to advance. That is not the way of requesting.

Q. Did they fight with anybody?

A. They did not fight, but whatever they could do, they did, by throwing brickbats and other things.

Q. Did you see that or did anybody tell you that?

A. I have heard so.

Q. Is it not a fact within your knowledge as you are well acquainted with the conditions, that whenever people are in trouble or distress, they go to the head of the administration in the body to lay their grievance before him? Do you not know that?

A. I have already stated that these are not the ways to approach the authorities.

Q. Then you said in your statement that the hartal became openly anti-British. What do you mean by that?

A. The whole thing was anti-British.

Q. You said the hartal was anti-British. I asked you about that.

A. The hartal was prompted by the interpretation put on the Rowlatt Act; therefore I considered it to be anti-British.

Q. Because it was a protest against the Rowlatt Act and the protest was made on these wrong interpretations by means of hartal, therefore you call anti-British. Is that the only reason?

A. That is the only reason.

Q. Now, you have referred in your statement to the excitement as follows: "The excitement was kept up by meetings in the Badshahi mosque organised by the political leaders on 11th and 12th April, resulting in another collision between the authorities and the people near Lohari Mundi." Why did this collision take place? Were people doing anything seriously wrong? (The witness pointed out that it was Hira Mundi and not Lohari Mundi and the correction was accepted.)

A. This collision was the result of that excitement which was nurtured and produced by the meetings at the mosque.

Q. How was it produced at the meetings?

A. Because there were speeches of that sort in the mosque, and an officer of the C. I. D. was beaten.

Q. In the mosque?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the crowd after that begin to loot or make any disturbance?

A. They did not do anything.

Q. Did they attack anybody?

(The Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan here observed that they wanted to go in a body, but the police wanted to divide them.)

Q. What is the harm in going in a body?

A. The officer apprehended some danger if they moved onwards in that compact body.

Q. It was his apprehension that caused this trouble?

A. Yes.

Q. You said that open sedition was being talked in the city. What was that open sedition?

A. What I meant was this: that people were saying all these things against Government and there was that Danda Fauj organised in the city.

Q. These things? What things?

A. Abusing the King and abusing the authorities and defaming the citizens who were working on behalf of the Government.

Q. If these people were working with the Government what help did they render in trying to stop these?

A. They tried, but of no avail.

Q. In what manner?

A. In this manner; that they went to the leaders of the people and talked with them and tried to put a stop to this hartal.

Q. So I understand from what you say that those who co-operated with the Government were not the leaders of the people? Is it so?

A. At that particular time, they were not.

Q. At other times, they were?

A. Yes, Sir; always.

Q. Did they have the influence of those people who constituted the crowd, these leaders?

A. Not at that time.

Q. Have they influenced those people now?

A. Certainly.

Q. And if any cause for excitement arises would they be able to influence them?

A. It will depend on the shape it takes.

Q. How do you know that they had influence?

A. This loss of influence with the people was only a matter of some days, existed only for some time; and this influence can be traced in the days of Muharram when Hindus and Muhammadans both ceremonised the Muharram.

Q. My question is if anything were to happen in the future, would they be able to influence them?

A. It will depend on the occasion, Sir, the state of things during those days.

Q. On what dates were the Military pickets put in the city?

A. Probably on the 15th.

Q. Not before?

A. The Martial Law was proclaimed on the 15th.

Q. And from that date, the Military pickets were put in the city, not before?

A. I heard that they had come, some of them.

Q. I want to know when for the first time?

A. Perhaps on the 12th.

Q. Was there any looting or any disturbance in the town between the 10th and the 12th, before they came?

A. No, Sir. I did not hear anything.

Q. Here you say that the leaders of the people, when you interviewed them, imposed certain impossible conditions and one of them was the removal of the military. Why did you consider that as an impossible condition?

A. Because had these Military pickets been removed from the city, then people would have been freer and a similar state of affairs would have taken place at Lahore as in Amritsar.

Q. So, nothing happened on the 6th, on the 10th, on the 11th up to the 12th, i.e., till the time when the Military pickets were put in the city? I can tell you there were military in the town up to that time; you can take it from me.

A. Probably they meant the police.

Q. When you put here the military, they meant the police?

A. When I went to these leaders of the people, they mentioned these things; probably they meant the police.

Mr. Abdul Kadir, Assistant Government Advocate.—

Q. That was on the 13th.

A. I know.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. So you think they might have meant the police?

A. Those were the words used by them; I do not know what they meant.

Q. Did you understand it as the military or the police?

[ 1 December 1919.] Nawab FAYEE ALI KHAN—concluded—The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur BAKHSHI SOHAN LAL,

A. The military; the words conveyed that idea.

Q. When there had been no military on the 6th, 10th and 11th, there had been no disturbance in the town. Why should it be necessary afterwards?

A. The excitement was increasing and had the military pickets not been stationed in the city, the state of affairs would have been the same as at Amritsar.

Q. It has been said that attempts were made to burn your house. Were attempts made to burn any other house as far as you heard?

A. I did not say attempts. What I meant was I heard a report about it.

Q. About what?

A. That my house would be burnt.

Q. How?

A. I heard this report.

Q. That is, those who informed you must have heard that somebody intended to burn it?

A. Those who informed me told me that they had heard it from people that they had intended to burn it.

Q. Did you hear anything about anybody else's house?

A. No.

Q. These excitements were going on from the 10th to the 15th; the military were being picketed in the town on the 12th and 13th, and you asked the authorities to put a guard at your house at the Empress Road some days later. Why did you not ask for the guard between the 11th and 15th?

A. I did not want to burden the Government at that particular time. Martial Law had established peace and order and the burden was removed to a certain extent; it was then that I requested the Government to locate a picket there.

Q. You wanted the picket when there was quiet, but when there was excitement you did not want it?

A. Yes.

Q. You said in answer to a question but by another member that you did not know all the orders issued by Martial Law. Is it so?

A. Just possible that some might have been left out.

Q. Probably you know them all?

A. Almost all.

By Mr. Abdul Kadir, Assistant Government Advocate—

Q. With regard to this matter of the hartal being anti-British, you say in your statement that "it was common talk that the institution of hartal would not be confined merely to shop-keepers, but that its further development would be the complete boycott of the European community by the Indian servants, Ahid-malgars and bearers." Would that be anti-British spirit?

A. Yes.

Q. You were asked that you should take certain terms to the Chief Secretary. You along with other gentlemen took certain terms to the Chief Secretary and you were asked whether or not you agreed with those terms. What I want to ask you is, who dictated those terms, who suggested those terms?

A. Mr. Duni Chand, Ram Bhaj Dutt and others.

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur BAKHSHI SOHAN LAL, Vakil, High Court, Lahore.

By the President—

Q. You are a Vakil in the High Court?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. The hartal of the 10th, did that cause serious disturbance?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. In what respects?

A. There was trouble between the police and the mob, and I heard there was also firing.

Q. Were attempts made to make shop-keepers open their shops?

A. They were made afterwards.

Q. Was it a difficult thing to get them to do so?

A. I think it was difficult. Private gentlemen as well as some officials tried to open the hartal after the 10th, 11th, 12th and 13th, but all their effects failed, and it was only on the 14th that some shops in the Anarkali Bazaar and Nila Gumbaz were opened before Martial Law was announced; but they were very few, these people being given an assurance of protection by the police, police guards having been stationed there patrolling in the Anarkali and Nila Gumbaz.

Q. What brought the situation of anxiety to an end?

A. Complete anxiety came to an end after Martial Law was proclaimed and the hartal was closed, when all the shops re-opened and people began to work. Then all anxiety was removed. Until then, there was anxiety.

Q. In your own opinion, was it necessary to have Martial Law to restore order?

A. From the facts which I saw it was necessary.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. Was not the hartal in your opinion due to the from message Mahatma Gandhi and the fact that all the Indian members of the Legislative Council were opposed to the Rowlatt Act?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it due to any organised conspiracy?

A. Not in my opinion.

Q. In your opinion, if there had been any firing, would the hartal have continued after the 10th?

A. That is my personal opinion.

Q. I am concerned here with your personal opinion only?

A. I believe it could not have continued.

Q. The hartal of the 10th, was it not due to the arrest of Mahatma Gandhi?

A. Yes, in my opinion due to the information which we received here that Mahatma Gandhi had been arrested.

Q. Now, there was a meeting at Government House on the 11th; you were present there; you were also a member of the Provincial Legislative Council. Was it not suggested in that meeting that Gokal Chand and Duni Chand were to be consulted?

A. Some mentioned their names and said they were consulted.

Q. Was it because they were considered to be the leaders of the mob or the organisers of the hartal?

A. They were at that time believed to have some influence with the people.

Q. In your own opinion they were not the leaders or organisers of the mob?

A. I do not think so.

Q. Then there was another meeting at Muhammad Naqi's house?

A. Yes. There had been 2 or 3 meetings.

Q. But there was one on the 11th?

A. Yes.

Q. And there you sent for about half a dozen shop-keepers?

A. Yes.

Q. The idea was that these shop-keepers being Municipal shop-keepers, if they opened their shops, others would follow suit?

A. Yes; by setting an example to others.

Q. And when you sent for the shop-keepers, did they suggest sending for anyone else?

A. I think it was about Duni Chand and Gokal Chand.

Q. And upon this you did send for these men?

A. Yes.

Q. You heard that Duni Chand was ill and could not come?

A. Neither of them were present.

Q. Did at that meeting any one suggest that these men were the leaders of the mob and organisers of the hartal?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Leaving aside what happened on the 10th, is it within your knowledge, that these two men, Duni Chand

1 December 1919.]

Rai Bahadur BAKSHI SOHAN LAL.

and Gokal Chand, practically had any influence with the shop-keepers?

A. I cannot say they had any influence. I cannot go to the extent of saying they were the leaders of the people.

Q. There was a contest in the municipal elections and one of them was a candidate?

A. Yes.

Q. And these shop-keepers were voters on the electoral roll?

A. There were shop-keepers as well as others, and he was defeated so far as I learnt, he had to withdraw because he had not sufficient support.

Q. And who was opposing him?

A. Badri Shah, a Sahukar of Mozang.

Q. Then there was a meeting at the house of the Hon'ble Mr. Muhammad Shafi on the 12th?

A. Yes.

Q. You were present there?

A. Yes, I was present.

Q. Rai Bahadur Ram Saran Das was also present?

A. Yes.

Q. Raja Narendra Nath?

A. Yes.

Q. And Rai Amar Nath was also present?

A. Yes.

Q. Nawab Fateh Ali Khan was also there?

A. He was there.

Q. They were there to find out the best way to end the hartal?

A. Yes.

Q. There were also there Pandit Ram Bhaj Datt, Mr. Duni Chand and Dr. Gokal Chand Naurang?

A. Messrs. Duni Chand and Naurang were there from the early stage, but Pandit Ram Bhaj Datt arrived a little later.

Q. These people you had sent for?

A. Yes.

Q. The points that were put forward at that meeting, is it not within your knowledge, that they were put forward on behalf of the shop-keepers who had closed the shops?

A. Many matters were discussed, but after some discussion three points were noted down.

Q. And was it not suggested at that meeting that nobody could say what the shop-keepers would do; but if these points were favourably considered by Government there was every possibility of the hartal ending?

A. At least most of the persons who had assembled there thought that this would very much help in opening the shops.

Q. You were one of those persons?

A. Yes.

Q. And practically the three or four points that were afterwards discussed and settled were agreed upon by everybody?

A. I cannot say they were agreed upon by every person. The sense of the meeting seemed to be that these were the points.

Q. Did Nawab Fateh Ali Khan raise any objection that he would not form part of the deputation or that he agreed to these points?

A. No.

Q. Now you have known Pandit Ram Bhaj Datt, Duni Chand and Dr. Gokal Chand Naurang for a long time?

A. Yes.

Q. You have known them practically for the last 20 or 15 years?

A. Yes.

Q. They were carrying on the same profession as you do?

A. Yes.

Q. You had the chance of meeting them every day?

A. Not every day, but very often in the month.

Q. Did you find any seditious or revolutionary tendencies in them to the best of your knowledge?

A. Well, I have not found any in my presence. So far as I have known them I never formed an opinion that they were revolutionary or seditious.

Q. My point is this that, even supposing for the sake of argument that this hartal was organised by them, that they held meetings knowing, as you do these men, would you come to the conclusion that there was any revolutionary or seditious movement behind their action; and supposing that these people in some way were the organisers of this hartal; knowing then as you do, would you in any way infer that whatever they did was seditious, so far as they were concerned?

A. I cannot say that I could form that opinion, but I think it was a very objectionable matter to do this hartal. If they had any hand in it, I would have certainly considered it objectionable.

Q. Supposing, I want to know, that you knew all the circumstances in Lahore, i.e., what meetings were held and what speeches were made, knowing all these things, would you come to the conclusion that there was some conspiracy behind this?

A. I don't think there was any conspiracy so far as my humble opinion or knowledge goes.

Q. I don't think that you know as a matter of fact that it was brought to your notice, when you people were trying to end the hartal, that these people asked the shop-keepers never to open their shops. You received no information that Dr. Naurang, etc., persuaded the people not to open the shops?

A. The shop-keepers said that they were afraid of the unruly groups of people in the mob who were passing in processions in front of their shops.

Q. It appears to me from the statement you have made previously that at least up to the 30th March you were yourself against the Rowlatt Act. You were not in favour of it?

A. Until it was passed. Until it received the sanction of the Legislature I was against it.

Q. Now, you people made an attempt on the 14th and 15th?

A. Yes, on the 14th and 15th.

Q. Do I understand correctly, according to what you have stated, that as a matter of fact you had succeeded in inducing people to open their shops to a very large extent?

A. Not to a very large extent, but a very few of the people did open their shops. It may be 20 or 30 in the whole of the Anarkali, Commercial Buildings and Nila Gumbaz.

Q. Anyhow, before the 14th you had succeeded in breaking up the hartal?

A. Not before the 14th so far as my recollections go, but it was on the 14th.

Q. I said on the 14th?

A. Yes.

Q. The improvement continued from the 14th?

A. It did continue.

Q. And on the 15th you had greater measures of success?

A. We expected greater measures, but only a little success.

Q. You expected only a little success but greater success attended?

A. Yes, it attended but at the same time I must say that there was a rumour that Martial Law was going to be proclaimed and our efforts were attended by greater success on account of that rumour.

Q. I now read out to you your letter. It has been the subject of great cross-examination. It was dated the 7th May. There it says that you succeeded in getting the shops opened in the Bazar, and outside the City the improvement continued, and greater success attended on the 15th, etc. That was your opinion on the 7th May?

A. Yes.

Q. That was correct?

A. Yes, but I may refer to the latter part of my writing. "The enforcement of Martial Law had a salutary effect in breaking up the hartal." This is to be read with that.

Q. I take it then that as you were expediting the bringing of the hartal to an end, you would have succeeded in breaking it up even without Martial Law because you were actually expediting it?

Rai Bahadur BAKSHI SOBAN LAL.

A. Yes.

Q. Even without Martial Law you would have been able to break up this hartal, though instead of 15th or 16th it would have ended on the 18th or 19th.

A. Yes, it had to break up sooner or later. If there had been no Martial Law, it would then have taken a longer time. Martial Law was a great means of correcting excited people.

Q. Whether the people knew Mahatma Gandhi personally or not they as a matter of fact had a great respect for him and treated him as an unusual man or a sort of saint?

A. They had great respect for him even before they had seen him.

By the President—

Q. When did he first appear in Lahore?

A. He did not come to the Punjab before the month of October. It was on account of his sacrifices in South Africa that the people became very much devoted to him.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. According to you the hartal was due to Mahatma Gandhi's message regarding passive resistance, writings in the Press, and speeches in Council. These were the three causes?

A. Yes.

Q. Now there is some evidence before us that at that meeting there was some excited talk between Mr. Ram Bhaj Datt and Nawab Fateh Ali Khan. He has made a mention of it that he was abused by certain leaders. Is it or is it not a fact that that abuse or excited talk was to this effect? He said "You are a Nawab" and referred to Nawab Fateh Ali Khan and "You are a Raja" and referred to Raja Narendra Nath and "You ask people to do this and that. Is it not your duty to represent to Government that so many innocent people are being killed?"

A. Yes, it was to that effect.

Q. After the 30th March you changed your opinion about that Rowlett Bill?

A. Not 30th March, but after I heard that the Act had been passed I withdrew my opposition. It might be even in March, about three or four weeks after that I heard that the Act had been passed, I withdrew my opposition.

Q. One thing more I want to ask. Was there a very great disturbance on a very extensive scale in 1915?

A. Where.

Q. In Jhang?

A. Yes, there was.

Q. A number of gentlemen were appointed to make investigation?

A. Yes, the Punjab Hindu Sabha deputed certain persons to make investigation after consulting and referring the matter to Government.

Q. Were Rai Bahadur Ram Saran Das and yourself members of that body?

A. The Punjab Hindu Sabha appointed me, but Rai Bahadur Ram Saran Das did not take part in it.

Q. You were one of those who referred this matter to the Lieutenant-Governor as also Rai Bahadur Ram Saran Das?

A. Yes.

Q. Was not that disturbance on a very large scale?

A. Yes, it was. It affected parts of three districts: Jhang and Muzaffargarh mainly and Multan to a small extent.

Q. Hundreds of shops were looted in the broad daylight?

A. Yes.

Q. And the police were paralysed. They were not able to help in any way?

A. Yes.

Q. At the same time the people who were looting were saying that they were going to be German subjects and there was no English Raj?

A. They said so or rather one of them pretended to be a German Emperor or a Sultan of Turkey.

Q. And this went on for four days?

A. Yes, I think so. This went on for rather more than four days.

Q. And all these matters were put down by you in the Memorial that was submitted to the Lieutenant-Governor?

A. We submitted it to the Punjab Hindu Sabha, and they sent some of its copies to the Punjab Government.

Q. And all these dacoities were committed in large numbers: 400 or 300 persons were going beating drums and looting?

A. Yes. In some dacoities we were told that the number of rioters amounted to thousands.

Q. No Martial Law was proclaimed at that time?

A. No.

Q. And you admit that the authority of Government was paralysed in the districts that were affected?

A. Yes, what we have written in our report is correct.

Q. I am just reading the very words of the report itself. And there were also wild rumours current that the country would be evacuated, etc.?

A. Yes, there is a full detail.

Q. And you submitted that as a matter of fact it was not only the economic causes, the realising of which must be of interest, but these were political disturbances?

A. Yes. That was our view though finally the Court's view differed from us.

Q. Well, do you remember, in replying to one of your deputation the Lieutenant-Governor admitted that this was a political agitation?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Herbert, Government Advocate—

Q. You told us that so far as you know the leaders of the people who dictated the terms of the representation to Government at Mr. Shafi's house were not also the promoters of the hartal?

A. Yes, so far as my knowledge goes.

Q. Are you aware that Duni Chand and Ram Bhaj Datt did dictate those terms, while they were members of the Indian Association?

A. I had heard that they were members of the Indian Association.

Q. Do you know that under the auspices of the Indian Association handbills were distributed in Lahore not to hold the hartal?

A. I may have heard, but I don't know personally.

Q. But did you hear of it?

A. No. I have some handbills that were distributed, but I don't know who distributed them or who were the organizers of those handbills.

(The Government Advocate then pointed out that he had intended to produce the witness who had distributed those handbills).

Q. Another thing which you have stated is that you asked Ram Bhaj Datt to distribute them and that Ram Bhaj Datt merely said to Nawab Fateh Ali Khan "You are a Nawab" and to Raja Narendra Nath he said "You are a Raja." Is it not a fact that they were extremely annoyed at that meeting?

A. He looked to be very much excited, and when he entered the room where this meeting was being held from his appearance he looked to be very much excited and addressed Raja Sahib and Nawab Sahib in a very excited and disrespectful manner.

Q. But you also suggested extreme terms to Government about the Jhang matter?

A. No. I don't remember.

Q. You were not deputed by Government?

A. No. We were appointed by the Punjab Hindu Sabha, but the matter was brought to the notice of the Government.

Q. Was it a matter between Hindus and Muhammadans?

A. Yes. The rioters were Muhammadans and the victims were Hindus.

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur LALA RAM SARAN DAS.

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur LALA RAM SARAN DAS, C.I.E., Lahore.

By the President—

Q. You have heard the evidence given by the last witness. You would agree with the views he put forward?

A. With most of them.

Q. Is there anything that came under your notice which you would like to bring to our notice during the periods of these riots? Is there any point that you wish specially to draw our attention to?

A. Any point which you would like to ask me. Most of the points I have already put forward in my statement.

The President.—I have seen your statement. Your evidence is practically the same as given by the last witness. I do not really think there is any matter on which I would like to question you.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan

Q. You are one of the office-holders of the Indian Association?

A. No.

Q. Raja Narendra Nath probably is?

A. I don't know.

Q. On the 6th April it was the mourning hartal on account of the Rowlatt Bill?

A. Yes.

Q. And the hartal on the 10th was due to the detention of Mahatma Gandhi?

A. Yes.

Q. Now were not, in your opinion, Messrs. Duni Chand and Gokal Chand Naurang, on the 12th and 13th anxious to put the hartal to an end?

A. They seemed to be anxious.

Q. The conditions were agreed upon by all those who were present?

A. All agreed to represent those conditions to Government.

Q. Actually the conditions or proposals that were written by Rai Amar Nath were dictated by Raja Narendra Nath?

A. Yes, they were taken down by Rai Amar Nath and Mr. Duni Chand and Raja Narendra Nath was only dictating what he was told to dictate.

Q. Suggestions were made by these people and the words of those suggestions were dictated by Raja Narendra Nath and taken down by Rai Amar Nath?

A. Yes.

Q. I am not talking of the fact that certain notices were issued and meetings held, but apart from it are you aware of any person who organized and preached hartal in Lahore?

A. There was a notice issued as a matter of fact by some signatories and I inferred from that that the signatories whose names appeared on the notice were the organizers of the hartal.

Q. And by preaching hartal I understand a notice was issued and in a public meeting it was decided—rather a resolution was carried. After that do you know if there was any organization?

A. Yes, certain canvassing was done by certain people.

Q. Persuading people to close their shops?

A. Yes.

Q. Those leaders, so far as they are concerned, was there any organisation?

A. I heard so.

Q. I will refresh your memory. You were a witness in the Conspiracy Case on behalf of Government?

A. Yes.

Q. To a question put by the Court you clearly stated that these were the people who organised and preached hartal in Lahore. Did you use those words or not? Did you make that statement?

A. Yes, I made that statement and meant there that they were at the bottom of these organizations.

Q. That is my point. No doubt certain persons were persuading people or threatening them; you don't know if there was any organization behind it or if the leaders took any part in it?

A. I don't know that there was any organization behind these leaders.

Q. And further on, you were not in a position to know the fact that the compulsion or threats that were used, because these leaders asked people to use these threats?

A. I do not quite pick your question.

Q. The question is that according to you, certain threats were used. I want to know if it came to your knowledge that for these threats or compulsion is any of the leaders responsible?

A. I cannot say that but I must say that certain threats were used against the shopkeepers.

Q. I admit that and I have no quarrel with that. As a leader of the Hindu community, has it ever come to your knowledge that the so-called leaders of the mob were responsible for the use of this compulsion and threats?

A. I cannot say.

Q. And you tried your best to find it out who was so responsible or to curb this matter?

A. Yes, I did but I failed.

Q. Now there is one thing more. Some langarkhanas were established on the 12th and 13th.

A. Yes.

Q. And you must have seen one or two with your own eyes?

A. I saw one and it was started on philanthropic lines.

Q. You are the foremost citizen of Lahore and a man who has got hundreds of persons employed in his mills. I want to know whether it ever reached your ears that these langarkhanas, apart from the fact that they were or they were not philanthropic institutions, were meant to prolong hartal?

A. Yes they were philanthropic institutions.

Q. On account of hartal the shops were closed and people were not able to get their food, and it was suggested that as the very poor could not get their provisions, langars should be opened?

A. Yes, the langar is an Indian institution, and when people think there is a necessity for it, they start it.

Q. You have nothing to do with the High Court?

A. No.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. You have stated that there was a meeting at the house of the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Muhammad Shafi where some of the leaders were present and some conditions were suggested and that the object of the meeting was to see how to end the existing state of things?

A. The idea was to co-operate with the leaders and bring about an end to the hartal.

Q. What were the conditions suggested at that meeting?

A. As far as I can recollect, one of them was that the military should be withdrawn from the city for at least 48 hours, the second was that all the wounded and dead be handed over to their relatives, and the third was that people under arrest should be released on bail.

Q. And you also agreed with these suggestions?

A. Yes, I agreed to these suggestions being put before the Government.

Q. And you thought if these were carried out it would help to remove the existing tension and excitement?

A. That was the reason why we decided to put them before the Government.

Q. Were these put before the Government?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you go in a body or did some single individual go?

A. A deputation went.

Q. Consisting of?

1 December 1919.]

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur LALA RAM SARAN DAS.

A. Raja Narendra Nath, the Hon'ble Mr. Muhammad Shafi, the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Bakhshi Sohan Lal, Khan Zulfiqar Ali Khan, myself and one or two others.

Q. You laid these matters before the Government

A. Yes.

Q. What reply did the Government make?

A. The Chief Secretary told us that he would lay the papers before His Honour.

Q. You waited upon the Chief Secretary?

A. Yes, and asked him to put this matter before His Honour.

Q. He promised to do so?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he communicate with you afterwards as to what was the result?

A. Yes, late in the evening Mr. Shafi got a letter from the Chief Secretary in which, as far as I remember, it was said that the military would be withdrawn simultaneously with the opening of the shops, and that the dead and wounded would be given over to their relatives on certain conditions, and about the third I cannot say.

Q. Were the conditions given in the letter?

A. That was what Mr. Shafi told me and the others.

Q. He did not tell you what the conditions were for the handing over of the dead and wounded?

A. No, I did not ask the conditions.

Q. And the third?

A. With regard to the third condition, Government could not agree to the release on bail of those who were arrested. This is as far as I can recollect it.

Q. Did this partial acceptance of these conditions have any effect? Did you carry it out or what did you think of it?

A. Mr. Shafi communicated it to the leaders of the moment.

Q. Who were they?

A. Dr. Gokal Chand Naurang, Duni Chand, Harkishan Lal and others.

Q. What did they say?

A. That I do not know, but another meeting was called at the Town Hall.

Q. And this happened on what date?

A. On the 12th, I think.

Q. After this there was another meeting?

A. There was another meeting at the Town Hall.

Q. Were you present at that meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. And who else?

A. There were about two or three hundred present.

Q. I do not want to know the people in the audience, but the principal people among them, whom you call leaders?

A. Chaudhri Ram Bhaj Datt, Lala Harkishan Lal, Dr. Gokal Chand Naurang, Raja Narendra Nath, Nawab Fateh Ali Khan, Mr. Shafi, Nawab Zulfiqar Ali Khan, myself, Rai Bahadur Amar Nath, Bakhshi Sohan Lal, and many others.

Q. Then the subject for consideration at that meeting was, I suppose, this correspondence between Government and these leaders?

A. It was co-operation with these leaders to end the hartal.

Q. Did you not at that meeting take into consideration what had gone before on the previous day at your private meeting in Mr. Shafi's house and the representation you had made to Government?

A. Yes, there was a meeting at Government House on the 11th.

Q. I am talking about this meeting in the Town Hall on the 13th.

A. I mention this meeting on the 11th because the meeting on the 13th was a result of it.

Q. It had nothing to do with the meeting of the 12th?

A. Yes it had, it was a continuation of our efforts to bring about an end to the hartal.

Q. Then there was a meeting at Government House on the 11th? Who were present at that?

A. Narendra Nath, Nawab Fateh Ali Khan, Hon'ble Bakhshi Sohan Lal, Hon'ble Mrdhi Shah, Hon'ble Malik Umar Hyat Khan, Hon'ble Gajjan Singh, Nawab Behram Khan, Raja Fateh Singh and a number of other people.

Q. Was any Government official present?

A. Yes, there were Government officials present as well. It was a sort of informal conference.

Q. Who were they?

A. Hon'ble Mr. Thompson, Hon'ble Mr. Fagan, His Honour, Col. Bayley, Hon'ble Mr. Maynard and certain other officers.

Q. At that meeting you discussed the measures which might be taken?

A. At that meeting certain people suggested that the situation was getting very serious and there was a need for repressive measures.

Q. That was discussed on the 11th, that the situation was becoming serious and there was a need for repressive measures?

A. Yes, and certain people suggested it was advisable to co-operate with the leaders of the moment.

Q. Who suggested that?

A. Raja Narendra Nath, Mr. Shafi and one or two others.

Q. They suggested that the better course would be to co-operate with the leaders of the moment?

A. Yes.

Q. Then what did you ultimately decide?

A. We ultimately did decide to co-operate with them and we had a meeting at Mr. Shafi's house and a meeting at the Town Hall as well.

Q. Then you had this meeting of the 13th at the Town Hall as well as a result of these two meetings?

A. Yes.

Q. What happened at that meeting on the 13th at the Town Hall?

A. The meeting had no President and it was a very peculiar sort of a meeting and some violent speeches were made at that meeting.

Q. Who made violent speeches?

A. Mr. Allah-ud-din made a very violent speech, and some other people also made violent speeches.

Q. What was the burden of those speeches, what did they say?

A. They said that there was a lot of Zulm in the Rowlatt Act and that people were massacred and a good many other things relative to this.

Q. What just were they, if you remember them?

A. They said that mobs were fired upon, people were murdered, they were not attended to medically, and that nobody heard the grievances of the people; the Rowlatt Act was to be repealed and it had not been repealed and no effort was being made to repeal it, and they said the Deputy Commissioner was a liar, and one thing and another.

Q. Those I understand were speeches made by those who were siding with the mob?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. But did anybody on your side make any speeches to pacify them and bring about a better state of things?

A. Raja Narendra Nath spoke and Mr. Muhammad Shafi spoke.

Q. What did they say?

A. They said the people ought not to be so nervous and that they ought not to be so unruly, and that the hartal should be ended, and that we must all unite in restoring peace, and order.

Q. What was the result of it, how did it end?

A. It ended in a fiasco, nothing came of it practically.

Q. You have said the people of substance and property were in great fear. Why was that, was there any looting or house-breaking going on in the town?

A. No, there was no house-breaking going on in the town, but there was fear that in case the hartal should be ended, the hooligans would come and loot the shops.

Q. People were not opening their shops because they were afraid?

A. They were afraid of being looted.

1 December 1919.] The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur LALA RAM SARAN DAS—Concluded—LALA JIWAN LAL.

Q. That is why they kept on the hartal ?
 A. Yes, that is why the hartal continued.
 Q. It was not the desire of the shopkeepers to keep their shops closed, but it was fear operating on their minds, that if they opened their shops they would be looted ?
 A. There was desire on the 6th and 10th, but after that it was fear of being looted.

By Mr. Herbert, Government Advocate—

Q. How many men do you employ yourself ?
 A. About 500.
 Q. These men, did they come to work during the period of the hartal or not ?
 A. No.
 Q. Did you ascertain why they did not come ?
 A. The majority of them were absent and those who turned up said the others were being stopped in the way.

Q. Stopped by whom ?
 A. By hooligans.
 Q. Did you, before the hartal on the 6th, make efforts to prevent the hartal taking place ?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Did you hear any news on the 5th, the day before the hartal, that emissaries had come from Delhi and Amritsar to encourage the hartal ?
 A. Yes and these emissaries practically spoilt the work which we did, I mean the work of the party who were organizing to prevent the hartal.
 Q. Did you, Raja Narendra Nath and Mr. Shafi on the 13th go through the city trying to induce people to open their shops ?
 A. I think it was on the 14th or 15th.
 Q. What treatment was meted out to you ?
 A. We were jeered at and hooted and hissed.

LALA JIWAN LAL, Inspector, Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

By the President—

Q. You are an Inspector of the Criminal Investigation Department ?
 A. Yes, my Lord.
 Q. Was there a meeting at Lahore on the 6th April in connection with the hartal ?
 A. Yes, a meeting was held in the Bradlaugh Hall on the 6th.
 Q. Were you ordered by the Deputy Superintendent to report the proceedings of the meeting ?
 A. Yes.
 Q. And also to report as to the behaviour of the people in connection with the observance of the hartal ?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. Did you see yourself any acts of the mob directed to preventing people doing work or engaging in their ordinary business affairs ?
 A. Some passers-by were forced to take off their caps and pugries, and I noticed a motor-car carrying some friends of Rai Bahadur Ram Saran Das was stopped on the Mall Road in the morning. After that at about 9 A.M. I saw about 2,000 people collected in front of the Islamia School and they forced the School authorities to close the school.
 Q. Did the mob continue till the school closed ?
 A. They did not disperse until the school was closed. Then at about 10-30 A.M. I saw certain disorderly crowds emerging from Mochi Gate and other gates and they wanted to go to the Mall Road. I reported this to my Deputy Superintendent verbally.
 Q. Then at about 2 P.M. did you go to the Bradlaugh Hall ?
 A. Yes; the proceedings started before time.
 Q. Did you take notes ?
 A. I took notes of the meeting which was held inside the Hall.
 Q. Then as regards this meeting at the Bradlaugh Hall, was it an orderly meeting or not ?
 A. There was a lot of excitement among the audience and Messrs. Bowring and Beaver, Superintendents, and Mr. Askwith, Assistant Superintendent, Criminal Investigation Department, were hissed when they came to the Hall and shouted at. They were taken into the Hall, but not given chairs to sit on, and cries of shame were also shouted by the audience.
 Q. Cries of shame, was that against them ?
 A. Against them.
 Q. When the meeting was over and these officers went out again, they were hissed and cries of shame were shouted ?
 A. After that a crowd marched through the city. They formed a procession and they burnt copies of the Rowlatt Bill outside the Mochi Gate and I heard they cursed the Municipal Commissioners in the town.
 Q. You went, as we know, to Amritsar ?
 A. On the 9th of April.

Q. When did you return from Amritsar ?
 A. I returned on the night of the 9th-10th April.
 Q. When you returned from Amritsar did you find that all the shops were closed ?
 A. I returned very late at night; it was at about 2.
 Q. The next morning ?
 A. Next morning when I was going to office, I saw that almost all the shops were closed. When I went to office I was ordered to attend the Badshahi Mosque meeting.
 Q. It was composed of Hindus and Muhammadans ?
 A. Yes, and I found some chhabils in the bazar where Hindus and Muhammadans were taking water together from the same glasses. Then I went to the Badshahi Mosque at 1 P.M. There were Hindus and Mussalmans inside the mosque and inside the door was a piece of draped cloth with a motto in Persian; that motto meant 'The King who practises tyranny cuts his own root underneath.' Ram Bhaj Datt, Mohsin Shah, Taj Din and other leaders were in the mosque.
 Q. Was a speech made from the pulpit of the mosque ?
 A. Yes at about 2 P.M. Khalifa Shuja-ud-Din made a speech from the pulpit of the mosque.
 Q. Was that a political speech ?
 A. He said the Deputy Commissioner had desired speeches to be made to dissuade people from the hartal, but that he told the Deputy Commissioner that neither the police nor the military should come into the city and there should be no military arrangements. Then as far as I remember he read out Gandhi's message from some vernacular newspaper.
 Q. Were the speakers trying to persuade the people to bring the Hartal to an end, or were they encouraging them to continue it ?
 A. He only said he was asked by the Deputy Commissioner to ask people to stop the hartal.
 Q. Then I think Ram Bhaj Datt also made a speech ?
 A. Yes, he also spoke from the pulpit. He said something about the occurrences of the 10th April and that the police had fired on the 10th of April at the mob after they had retreated and he said this action was a tyrannical action, and he said kings should not depend on arms but should depend on management.
 Q. Then did he again refer to what had occurred on the 10th and say that the people only retired when they were fired upon ?
 A. Yes; he said this was cowardly, they ought to have stood there and died. Then certain chits were written by different people in the audience and these were passed on to the speaker. Those chits were given to Khalifa Shuja-ud-Din and he read them out. They were questions from certain shopkeepers and clerks asking whether they should continue the hartal or not and whether they should follow the instructions of Mr. Gandhi and whether orders to the contrary should be disobeyed. On this Choudhri Ram Bhaj Datt said he was not in a position to give an answer to all these questions. He said a committee would be elected and it would decide about this and he said every one would have to abide by the decision of the committee even if it involved death for them.

Q. Did an aeroplane pass over the mosque?

A. Aeroplanes were passing over the mosque. When an aeroplane passed Chaudhri Ram Bhaj Datt pointed to it and said 'We cannot fight this; God shall have to decide.' Then he gave certain instructions to the school boys and college students. He said that they should not go to their schools and colleges and they should tell their parents that Chaudhri Ram Bhaj Datt had advised them not to do so. At the same time he instructed the audience that no one should go to the Mall Road for five days.

Q. Was there another speaker?

A. After that Maulvi Allah Din spoke from the pulpit. He said what was happening in the city was quite all right but the drawback was that they had not appointed any leader. And he advised that they should appoint a leader and he said that they should try their best to get the dead bodies back.

Q. What name did he give for a leader?

A. He did not suggest a name.

Q. But he advised the appointment of a dictator, he did not suggest a name?

A. No, my-Lord.

Q. Did you understand what he meant by the appointment of a dictator at the time?

A. He meant that one man should be appointed who should carry out all the plans and they should follow him.

Q. While he was speaking did any one shout out anything?

A. One Balwant Singh who was probably a khalasi of the Railway Volunteer Corps came in and shouted about the mutiny, and said he had killed some European soldiers. On this there was great excitement among the audience and people shouted 'we are very much delighted, now our armies are coming in.'

Q. Were these shouts of the people heard on the platform?

A. Quite distinctly; they were all near the pulpit.

Q. Did the people who were addressing the crowd take any action when they heard those shouts by the crowd?

A. They were jumping.

Q. How do you mean jumping?

A. They were jumping in delight, they said 'our armies are coming in now.'

Q. But I asked about the people on the platform, the speakers, did they reprove the crowd for that demonstration?

A. There was a great noise there and I could not see what they were doing.

Q. Did you telephone that to the Deputy Inspector-General?

A. Yes, at that time I left the mosque and went to the police post and telephoned to the Deputy Inspector-General that this was happening, and then I returned. It took me about a quarter of an hour.

Q. Who was speaking when you returned?

A. One Mota Singh was speaking from the pulpit and by this time Lala Harkishen Lal, Lala Duni Chand and others had arrived. He said that he did not believe in the Bible saying about turning the other cheek, and as far as I remember his last words were that to bear tyranny was to encourage it. He was followed by Lala Duni Chand who got on to the pulpit and wanted people to elect the committee which Ram Bhaj Datt had already proposed. Then different names were suggested by the audience and a committee was formed.

Q. Who composed the committee?

A. The names of Harkishen Lal, Ram Bhaj Datt, Duni Chand, Dharam Das Suri, Doctor Gopi Chand, Sardar Habibullah, Moshin Shah, Pleader, Doctor Nihal Chand and Khalifa Shuja-ud-Din were shouted out.

Q. Were these gentlemen elected members of the committee then?

A. All of them were not present there though most of them were.

Q. Was anything said about the establishment of langar?

A. Duni Chand said that the kartal made it necessary to arrange for food and drink for the poor people. After that Harkishen Lal announced a subscription of Rs. 1,000 towards the committee for the langarkhana. It was time for prayers so the meeting dispersed.

Q. Was an arrangement made that there should be another meeting?

A. It was announced that another meeting will be held in the same mosque at 8 A.M. the next day and it was also announced that the kartal should continue. There were the usual shouts "Delhi ke Shahidon ki jai," "Amritsar ke shahidon ki jai."

Q. What exactly is the meaning of that?

A. They shouted "ki jai" for the martyrs of Delhi and Amritsar.

The audience then formed up in a procession with lathis and dandas (Bamboo staves and bludgeons).

The people with the dandas led. The procession passed through the Hira Mandi to the Gumti Bazar. On the way pictures of Their Majesties the King and Queen on the house of Raghu Nath Sahai were destroyed by the mob.

Q. Did you see that done?

A. I saw that personally.

Q. In what way did the mob do it? Was it done by one member of the mob or was it done by several?

A. I saw about six men who had dandas in their hands tear the pictures.

Q. And after this was done what else did the mob do?

A. The mob then pulled down and defaced a sign board of one Fakir Chand, contractor, bearing pictures of their Majesties the King and Queen. They then shouted "King George is dead." I went to the Deputy Superintendent the same evening and reported this orally to him and he reduced it to writing.

Q. I think at the time you did not take written notes at the meeting?

A. No, it was not possible.

Q. Did you investigate the Danda Fauj case? What body is called Danda Fauj?

A. This is a body organized by one Chanan Din and he recruited certain people and armed them with lathis. He himself used to lead them. This was formed on the 11th and I think it all finished on the 12th. Chanan Din used to go about the bazar delivering seditious lectures saying that King George was not their King, that the Amir of Afghanistan and the King of Germany was their King?

Q. Did you hear that stated by them?

A. I did not hear it personally. I found this out through investigation.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. Is this the first time that you have made the statement that you made no written report and that your report was recorded by your superior officer. Did you ever make that statement in any of the cases in which you appeared as a witness?

A. I do not exactly remember.

Q. You make this statement before this Committee that you never took any notes and that subsequently you went and made an oral report and that your oral report was recorded by your superior officer. I want to know whether this is the first time you have made this statement or did you make it in the previous cases where you were examined?

A. I am sorry I do not recollect.

Q. Supposing this statement was not made by you on any previous occasion what would be the reason for it?

1 December 1919.]

LALA JIWAN LAL.

A. I was examined by the court and counsels and had they asked me the question I would have answered it. Probably the question was not asked.

Q. On page 18 you have made a statement. As you made a statement within two hours of what happened you will therefore remember things more correctly than you would now?

A. I am supposed to remember these things. I have to go and inform my officers what I have seen but I am not supposed to tell my officer what I was asked by the court.

Q. You explain that in the statement which you put before the Committee you were asked questions by nobody?

A. I was not asked questions.

Q. You were only asked to put in your statement?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it a fact that the report which you made was not shown to you when you were being examined?

A. It was not shown to me.

Q. May I know as to whether at the time that you were examined as a witness this report formed part of your report?

A. I am not in a position to know it.

Q. In this report there is no mention of destroying the effigies of the King-Emperor and in this report which is now before us there is no mention of Balwant Singh coming. How do you account for that?

A. I think this report is put in by the Defence Counsel and it is not a complete report. If you look up the original report you will find it there.

(A copy of the report* was handed to the member by Mr. Herbert.)

Q. It appears that compared with your statement in the Conspiracy Case, your statement before this Committee is a little more coloured and has put a different interpretation upon what you heard, because according to the translation that we have been given, it appears to me that what Badr-ul-Islam Ali Khan said was this:—"The next speaker was Maulvi Allah Din of Hoshiarpur who said that what had been done by the people was very good and he admired it but he pointed out one defect which he said was that the whole thing had been done without any organisation and proper guidance. He advised that the people should appoint a leader to guide them." Is that what you stated to your superior officer on that day?

A. Yes.

Q. You were not here on the 10th?

A. No.

Q. At what time did you arrive?

A. At about 2 A.M.

Q. No notice was issued for this Badshahi Mosque meeting?

A. At least I did not see it.

Q. Therefore the very opening words of your report are based on hearsay when you say huge crowds gathered at the Badshahi Mosque at about one on the 11th?

A. Yes, it is not my personal knowledge.

Q. And it is true that when Ram Bhaj Datt and Khalifa Shuja-ud-din came to the meeting they made a statement that had been deputed by the Deputy Commissioner to go to this meeting and use their influence in pacifying the people. Khalifa Shuja-ud-din said so? Did he or did he not?

A. I do not recollect.

Q. I will just read out "After the prayers were over Khalifa Shuja-ud-din spoke on Mahomedan unity" this is what is recorded by your superior officer. You gave that report and that report was reduced to writing. It is a translation of the original? May I understand whether it is correct or incorrect?

A. I think it is quite correct.

Q. He made the following statement "they told the Deputy Commissioner that as the Military and Police were made to fire on peaceful and unarmed people there was a danger of peoples getting excited at the sight of them again and therefore he added they advised the Deputy Commissioner that in case the military and police were kept away they would undertake to keep the people in order."

That is what you heard and you made that statement to your superior officer?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. "He then read Gandhi's message issued by him at the time of his arrest and advised the people to strictly observe Gandhi's instructions and not to create any sort of disturbance."

A. Yes.

Q. "He was followed by Ch. Ram Bhaj Dutt who referred to the shooting affair of the 10th instant which took place outside Lohari Gate. He said that he was personally present on the spot and delivered a speech persuading the people to disperse and retire to the city but he regretted to say that the military and the police opened fire on the unarmed mob at a time when they were actually retiring. He described the action of the authorities in firing on a peaceful and unarmed crowd as an act of folly and cruelty (actually words used being "nadani aur zulm"). He said that the Government cannot be maintained by armed force but by humanity, justice and moral force and if Germany had fallen, he added she had fallen on account of internal troubles. He further said that the few boys who have been killed were not losses only to their parents but were losses to the whole Indian nation. He did not consider it a time he opened for mourning but they should ponder over their future. He went on to refer again to the shooting incident of 10th instant coming outside Lohari gate and said that when he advised the crowd to retire they did not move and when the firing started they began to flee, which course if they were men they ought not to have taken and got killed there. This may be noted was not consistent with the version of the same affair which he had given in the beginning part of his lecture. He however made it clear that he never meant that the crowd should go creating disturbances and displaying obstinacy. He informed the audience present there saying that the Deputy Commissioner had issued orders against the people collecting together but he said it was the hand of God which has brought this enormous assembly of Hindus and Muhammadans together in a place where they could not be touched by any earthly power." He clearly said and gave out to the audience that they should not create any disturbance?

A. Yes.

Q. "It was really the hand of the Almighty at work in that a complete "Hartal" prevailed without any persuasion from any one. He informed the audience that in the morning when leaving his house on Deputy Commissioner's call he bid good bye to his wife and children as he thought he would not be allowed to return to his house but his wife who was in no way inferior to any political worker advised him to go leaving behind all feelings of anger and revenge and to go calmly in pursuance of Gandhi's advice. He said whatever has happened has happened and they had suffered by they have to see that their present Lieutenant-Governor was entirely a different man as compared to the Governor of Bombay. Pointing out to a military aeroplane which had been hovering round the mosque at the time he said, that they could not stand against the aeroplanes and the machine guns but said that God was just and would judge the right."

The next paragraph goes on to say "after he had finished lots of people asked him questions through written chits. Some clerks of the Government offices enquired if they should attend the offices tomorrow. Certain shop-keepers enquired as to the period of the "Hartal" to be observed and some people asked the course they should take in following passive resistance by disobeying laws of the Government which were against their conscience. Some people also asked what was to be done in future. These question chits were read out by Khalifa Shuja-ud-din and in reply Pandit Ram Bhaj Dutt informed the audience that he was not in a position to give them any advice in the matter but he wanted to establish a Committee which would decide the various matters connected with the movement."

"He exhorted the audience that they should conform to the instructions issued by the Satyagraha Sabha of Bombay. He then appealed to the audience to be calm and dissuaded them from any attempt from going to the Upper Mall and Anarkali for the next five days."

A. Yes, that is true.

Q. "He advised the students not to go to the colleges at all and to inform their parents that he had advised them as such. The next speaker was Maulvi Allah Din of Hoshiarpur who said that what had been done by the people was very good and he admired it but he pointed out one defect which he said was that the whole thing had been done without any organization."

Now I want to know why is it that the arrival of Balwant Singh was not mentioned by you in your report when you were giving a chronological statement of facts to your superior officer? That was the whole point in the conspiracy case.

A. Do you think it is possible for me to remember everything? I was giving the whole story and therefore I missed this fact.

Q. And you forgot to mention it?

A. Yes.

Q. And the audience were asked to suggest certain names?

A. Yes.

Q. And it was suggested that many of the names on this committee were largely the names of those who were present at the meeting and that those who were not present might be willing to be on it?

A. It was said that other gentlemen could also be appointed.

Q. According to you, Harkishen Lal at this stage said that the hartal would at least continue on the 12th and that at 8 A.M. on the 12th members would meet and decide?

A. Yes.

Q. You say these were the only speeches made inside the mosque?

A. Yes.

Q. The appearance of the Sikh is described in the following words in this statement. I will read it just now. "The appearance of Sikh, name unknown, created further excitement as he went about informing the people that he belonged to a regiment stationed at Lahore and that he had come there to inform the audience that this regiment had mutinied, that they had deserted .....After a certain while the Sikh disappeared and was not to be seen. When the meeting came to a close, the people looked out for him to enquire of his disappearance and as to the correctness of what he had said." Was that report made by you?

A. It was made by me.

Q. You say that you made this report the same evening to your Deputy Superintendent of the Political Branch?

A. Yes, I made that report to Khan Sahib Abdul Aziz.

Q. And that report was made from memory, you had no notes?

A. I had no notes.

Q. Did he take it down?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you make your statement in Urdu or in English?

A. I made it in Urdu.

Q. Did he ask you to sign it?

A. No.

Q. Was it taken down on a piece of paper or in a book?

A. It was taken down on a piece of paper.

Q. Will that piece of paper be in existence now?

A. Only Khan Sahib can say about it, I don't know.

Q. At what time did the meeting disperse?

A. I think it was about 5 P.M., just before the evening prayers.

Q. How far is the telegraph office from this mosque?

A. I think it will be about 2 miles or so.

Q. What will be the time taken by any person for going from the mosque to the telegraph office?

A. It all depends on whether he walks or bikes.

Q. Supposing he has got a carriage?

A. I think it will take about 10 minutes or so.

Q. At what time did Pandit Rambhaji Datt, Harkishen Lal and Pir Taj Din leave the mosque?

A. After the meeting dispersed. I did not see them myself going out of the mosque. They were there till the meeting was closed.

Q. You were there at 5 P.M.?

A. Just before the evening prayers, because it was said towards the close of the meeting that Muhammadans had to say their evening prayers and that they might disperse.

Q. You are quite sure that they were present there up to the time the meeting dispersed?

A. I saw them there when Duni Chand made those announcements about hartal.

Q. So far as these names are concerned you gave them from memory?

A. I have already said that there is no written memorandum.

Q. The 10 or 12 names which composed the committee?

A. Yes.

Q. The crowd was about 10 or 15 thousand?

A. It may be more.

Q. They dispersed in different directions?

A. I saw most of them going to Gumti Bazar. Only a few might have gone the other side, but most of the crowd went to the Gumti Bazar side.

Q. Therefore I take it that the crowd of 15 or 20,000 dispersed in different directions, and only 400 people went to the Gumti Bazar side?

A. That was the biggest crowd that went together.

Q. At what time did you make your report to the Senior Superintendent?

A. Just before sunset. After seeing these demonstrations I went straight to the Deputy Superintendent's house.

Q. Where is it?

A. At Gawal Mandi.

Q. How far is it from the mosque?

A. I think it is about one mile or a mile and a quarter.

Q. Did you go on foot?

A. Yes.

Q. And then how long did it take you to give him the details of all that took place?

A. About half an hour.

Q. After half an hour what did you do?

A. Then I came back to my house.

Q. You did not follow the crowd?

A. I followed the crowd from the mosque to the place where the pictures of King George were broken.

Q. Therefore according to you, the pictures were destroyed between 5 and 6?

A. I can't say it was done between 5 and 6.

Q. You reached the Deputy Superintendent of Police's house at 6 o'clock?

A. I said at sunset. The pictures were broken at 5.

Q. In the month of April sunset will be before 6-30? Therefore the destroying of the pictures took place between 5 and 6-30?

A. Something like that.

Q. However 6-30 P.M. would be after you had walked a mile?

A. Something like that.

Q. How far is the Gumti Bazar from the mosque?

A. It is about two furlongs.

Q. You don't know what became of the mob after the occurrence at Gumti Bazar?

A. I could not tell you. I left there. But I heard that it paraded through different streets. I did not see it personally.

1 December 1919.]

LALA JIWAN LAL.

Q. Therefore you have no personal knowledge as to what the mob did after leaving Gumti Bazar?

A. I did not see anything with my own eyes or where the mob went to.

Q. Just after crossing the Mochi Gate you heard the mob was coming?

A. Yes, but I did not see it personally. It came out of the Gumti Bazar without stopping at any place.

Q. Who was the man who destroyed the pictures?

A. I could not tell you his name. I don't know his name.

Q. I don't want his name, was he a Hindu or a Muhammadan?

A. I could not tell you that even.

Q. How did he destroy the pictures?

A. With a long bamboo sticks and dandas. It was not done by one man alone, but there were 6 or 7 men who were breaking the pictures.

Q. In what mohalla is the house of Fakir Chand?

A. In the Gumti Bazar, about 10 or 20 yards from the house of Raghunath Sahai.

Q. From Gumti Bazar where did the mob go to?

A. I left the mob there. It went to the Dabbi Bazar side.

Q. Did you meet the Danda Fauj between the mosque and Gumti Bazar?

A. No.

Q. That is on the night of the 11th you did not see with your own eyes the Danda Fauj?

A. No, I did not.

(At this stage at the instance of Pandit Jagat Narayan the President asked the Government Advocate if he had the original of the report that was made by the witness on the evening of the 11th. The witness replied that Khan Sahib Abdul Aziz took notes of what he (witness) had reported to him in Urdu. The Government Advocate suggested that it might be an English translation.)

The Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan :—Therefore may I take it that the translation of the report which the witness made on the evening of the 11th is not available?

The Government Advocate :—I don't know whether it is a translation. Possibly it was taken down in English.

Witness :—The report was made to Khan Sahib in Urdu.

The Government Advocate :—I understand that Khan Sahib made notes and translated them into English. The witness made the report to Khan Sahib in Urdu.

The Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan (To the President) :—This cannot have been done. The statement which I have contains a report of the whole situation from the 10th. It cannot be his statement. There are many other things in it. It is quite clear to my mind this is not what I am asking for. I may be wrong, but I am quite certain that this is not a translation of the notes recorded on the evening of the 11th, and therefore I want to know if that translation that was written down by Mr. Abdul Aziz is available, if so, I should be glad to have it.

The Government Advocate :—I do not propose to take any action on a request made by an individual member of the Committee unless it comes through the President.

The President :—If you have got the original, there is no reason why you should not produce it.

Witness :—This contains all the information which I gave to Khan Sahib.

The President :—If there is any translation, you can find out.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. Was there any secret organization behind these disorders?

A. Not to my knowledge.

By Mr. Abdul Kadir, Assistant Government Advocate—

Q. You have just proved, Pandit Jiwan Lal, the reports of the speeches that you reported. Among them there is a report of the speeches of a meeting held on the 9th March at Bradlaugh Hall. In connection with that meeting, I just want to put to you one speech in particular by a gentleman named Habib, the late editor of the Nakash. This is at page 5 of Ex. 9* in those printed exhibits. "At that time self-government was promised, but as soon as the danger decreased, the state of affairs got changed." And then at page 6, this is a recommendation by the speaker "they should however adopt such means that all Lahore should be converted into jail." Did you hear this yourself?

A. I heard it myself.

Q. Can you tell us what the usual procedure is about the compilation of these C. I. D. reports in cases in which they are not from a single individual officer but what is called a joint report compiled by the superior officer based on the reports of so many officers reporting. What is the usual procedure?

A. In the political branch all the subordinate officers go to the Deputy Superintendent of Police and report to him all the information in their possession. He then writes out a note himself.

Q. Is there a system of preserving those notes or not?

A. We do not preserve those notes. We have got short-hand writers and typists. The notes are typed and are destroyed then and there.

Q. You were asked a question about Ram Bhaj Datt having addressed a crowd outside the Lohari Gate asking the people to assemble at Shah Almi Gate on the following day. Did you see it at the time or did you read anything about this fact in any newspaper after that?

A. After that I read it in the Urdu paper called "Leader," a local paper of Lahore, and I think I also saw it in another paper. I don't remember if Ram Bhaj Datt made such a speech.

NEWS OF GANDHI'S ARREST AND A GENERAL "HARTAL" AGAIN.

The matter are taking rapid turn in Lahore and there does not appear to be any change in the general temper of the people. There prevails a general "hartal" in the city again since the evening of 10th instant when the people began to close their shops as soon as the news of Gandhi's arrest spread in the city. It was stated then that the "hartal" would last for Friday, Saturday and Sunday and in consequence there was a heavy rush on the shops all over the city when most of the people purchased provisions to last for the period and the shop-keepers raised the prices and made a good deal of money. The news of Gandhi's arrest went to raise the general excitement to a high level again with the result that two huge crowds consisting mostly of the college students and bazar people moved about for demonstrations, one of which was checked and fired at outside the Lahore Gate and the other at the Mall which was advancing towards the Government House for demonstrations there.

ANNEXURE—contd.

GATHERING OF HINDUS AND MUHAMMADANS AT THE SHAHI MOSQUE.

The remarkable feature of the day was the rapidly advancing feeling of unity between Hindus and Muhammadans and at the instance of Pt. Ram Bhaj Dat huge crowds of people both Hindus and Muhammadans gathered at the Shahi Mosque at Jumma prayer time at about 1 P.M. on 11th April 1919, the Hindus freely going inside the mosque and taking their seats. The audience is roughly estimated to thirty five thousand, about one third of which is reported to be Hindu shop-keepers, students of various colleges, clerks and other common folk. Sub-Inspector Pt. Jiwan Lal and Sher Muhammad with a selected staff of our men were present in mufti mixed up among the audience. There were a few Sikh women wearing black clothes and carrying Kirpans also present.

Pt. Ram Bhaj Dutt arrived at the mosque at about 1-30 P.M. in company with S. Mohsan Shah, Khalifa Shuja-ud-din and Pir Tajuddin, who, it is said, had been advised by the Deputy Commissioner to use their influence in pacifying the people there and the Jumma prayers were held at about 2 P.M. There was a piece of dark cloth put up on the wall inside the entrance gate bearing the following couplet in Persian by the famous Saadi poet.*

The real feature of the occasion was that the general arrangements of the mosque were in the hands of the Hindus and a party of dozen of the Hindus armed with lathies and officered by one Mani Ram betol leaves seller of Wachhowali, Lahore, were on duty at the entrance gate of the mosque who made every one entering the mosque to take off his shoes. There were several other Hindus who served water to both Hindus and Muhammadans for whom the same tumblers were used. When the Jumma prayers were thus in progress, Hindus remained seated in the mosque. After the prayers were over Khalifa Shujauddin stoop up. He spoke on Hindu Muhammadan unity and then informed the audience that he and others had been summoned by the Deputy Commissioner this morning and asked to assist him in restoring peace in the city. He added that they told the Deputy Commissioner that as the military and police were made to fire on peaceful and unarmed people there was a danger of peoples getting excited at the sight of them again and therefore he added they advised the Deputy Commissioner that in case the military and police were kept away they would undertake to keep the people in order. He then read Gandhi's message issued by him at the time of his arrest and advised the people to strictly observe Gandhi's instructions and not to create any sort of disturbance. He was followed by Ch. Ram Bhaj Dutt who referred to the shooting affair of the 10th instant which took place outside Lahori Gate. He said that he was personally present on the spot and delivered a speech persuading the people to disperse and retire to the city but he regretted to say that the military and the police opened fire on the unarmed mob at a time when they were actually retiring. He described the action of the authorities in firing on a peaceful and unarmed crowd as an act of folly and cruelty (actual words used being "nadani aur zulm"). He said that the Government cannot be maintained by armed force but by humanity, justice and moral force and if Germany had fallen, he added, she had fallen on account of internal troubles. He further said that the few boys who have been killed were not losses only to their parents but were losses to the whole Indian nation. He did not consider it a time he opined for mourning but they should ponder over their future. He went on to refer again to the shooting incident of 10th instant evening outside Lahore Gate and said that when he advised the crowd to retire they did not move and when the firing started they began to flee, which course if they were men they ought not to have taken and got killed there. This may be noted was not consistent with the version of the same affair which he had given in the beginning part of his lecture. He however made it clear that he never meant that the crowd should go creating disturbances and displaying obstinacy. He informed the audience present there saying that the Deputy Commissioner had issued orders against the people collecting together but he said it was the hand of God which has brought this enormous assembly of Hindus and Muhammadans together in a place where they could not be touched by any earthly power.

He said that it was really the hand of the Almighty at work in that a complete "hartal" prevailed without any persuasion from any one. He informed the audience that in the morning when leaving his house on Deputy Commissioner's call he bid good bye to his wife and children as he thought he would not be allowed to return to his house but his wife who has in no way inferior to any political worker advised him to go leaving behind all feelings of anger and revenge and to go calmly in pursuance of Gandhi's advice. He said whatever has happened has happened and they had suffered but they have to see that their present Lieutenant-Governor was entirely a different man as compared to the Governor of Bombay. Pointing out to a military aeroplane which had been hovering round the mosque at the time he said, that they could not stand against the aeroplanes and the machine guns but said that God was just and would judge the right.

After he had finished lot of people asked him questions through written ohits. Some clerks of the Government offices enquired if they should attend the offices tomorrow. Certain shop-keepers enquired as to the period of the "hartal" to be observed and some people asked the course they should take in following passive resistance by disobeying laws of the Government which were against their conscience. Some people also asked what was to be done in future. These question chits were read out by Khalifa Shuja-ud-din and in reply Pt. Ram Bhaj Dutt informed the audience that he was not in a position to give them any advice in the matter but he wanted to establish a Committee which would decide the various matters connected with the movement. He said that they should follow the instruction issued by the Committee when it came into existence and if it wanted them to die they should die. He exhorted the audience that they should conform to the instructions issued by the Satyagraha Sabha of Bombay. He then appealed to the audience to be calm and dissuaded them from any attempt from going to the Upper Mall and Anarkali for the next five days. But he advised the students not to go to the colleges at all and to inform their parents that he had advised them as such.

The next speaker was Maulvi Allah Din of Hoshiarpur who said that what had been done by the people was very good and he admired it but he pointed out one defect which he said was that the whole thing had been done without any organization and proper guidance. He advised that the people should appoint a leader to guide them.

At this stage Dharam Dass Suri, Lala Harkishan Lal, Duni Chand and Piyare Mohan also arrived. The next speaker was one Mota Singh Granthi of Patiala State. He exhorted the audience to be resolute in any line of action they decided to follow and said that he did not approve the action of the crowd of 10th instant having fled away when they were fired at but he added they ought to have got killed there. He referred to the Biblical saying of offering the other cheek when one is slapped and said that according to his views to submit to oppression was to encourage it.

A COMMITTEE IS FORMED.

Lala Duni Chand then stood up and proposed to form the Committee, suggested by Ch. Ram Bhaj Dutt, which he said should be formed at once and asked the audience to suggest such names as the members of the Committee who might be in a position to render pecuniary assistance also with a view to enable the Committee to supply food to the poor during the period of the 'hartal.' The audience suggested names and a Committee was accordingly formed with following members:—

Committee formed at Shahi mosque.

- |                                 |                         |
|---------------------------------|-------------------------|
| 1. Dharam Dass Suri.            | 6. Gokal Chand Naurang. |
| 2. Duni Chand.                  | 7. Lala Harkishan Lal.  |
| 3. Mohsan Shah.                 | 8. Dr. Nihal Chand.     |
| 4. Mota Singh Granthi, Patiala. | 9. Dr. Gopi Chand.      |
| 5. Khalifa Shuja-ud-Din.        | 10. Sardar Habib Ullah. |

It was announced that all the members were not present and therefore if any of them was not willing to accept membership, his name would be struck off. At this stage L. Harkishan Lal announced a donation of Rs. 1,000 and informed the audience that in any case the 'hartal' will continue on 12th instant, when at 8 A.M. the members of the Committee will meet and decide about 'hartal' and other matters. These were the only speeches made inside the mosque and all the speakers stood on Imam's pulpit when addressing the audience. During these proceedings shouts of "Gandhi ki Jai" were often uttered and the appearance of a Sikh, name unknown, dressed in Khaki, who was a young man of about 25, wheat complexion, medium height and build, created further excitement as he went about informing the people that he belonged to a regiment stationed at Lahore Cantonments and that he had come there to inform the audience that his regiment had mutinied that day and deserted after killing a lot of British soldiers. The Sikh disappeared shortly afterwards and was not to be seen when the meeting came to a close and the people looked out for him to enquire further details from him. His disappearance created doubts among the minds of peoples as to the correctness of what he had said.

A MOB PROCEEDS THROUGH CITY DOING DAMAGE.

The audience dispersed at about 5 P.M. to different directions but a crowd of about four hundred men armed with lathis formed into a procession shouting Gandhi ki Jai, Hindu Musalman ki Jai, Shahidan Delhi ki Jai, Shahidan Amritsar ki Jai and Shahidan Lahore ki Jai made their way to the city. They were Muhammadans and Hindus and mostly the bazar people and no responsible man accompanied them. On arrival at Gumti bazar the mob noticed pictures of His Majesty the King George and Queen on the balcony of one Raghunath Sahai, Pleader of Lahore opposite the water works reservoir. Some one out of the mob struck the pictures repeatedly with a long bamboo stick which he had with him with the result that the glasses got broken and the pictures completely destroyed. At this time the crowd shouted "Hai Hai George Mar Gaya" (Ah! Ah! George has died). A little further up there was a double storied House of Fakir Chand Contractor on which hung the owner signboard containing also the portraits of Their Majesties the King and Queen painted over it. One of the mob people climbed up and threw the board down when it was trampled down badly by the mob the crowd after passing through Dabbi and Kashmir bazars came to the Mochi Gate where a large number of Muhammadans also joined and thus the crowd grew up to about ten thousand men. The crowd had all sorts of sticks, bamboos and pieces of fuel, wood etc., in hands and were very much in an excited condition. Some of the saner heads in the crowd advised the crowd not to come out of the Mochi gate with result that it turned towards Rang Mahal shouting "Hai Hai George Mar gaya" (Ah! Ah! George is dead) and circulating exciting news on the route such as follows:—

1. At Amritsar the Indian Military forces had mutinied and killed the British soldiers and taken possession of the fort.
2. Similar rising had taken place in Lahore Cantonment killing a lot of British soldiers and going away in large numbers to join hands with the Amritsar rioters.
3. The Indian regiments of Peshawar, Jullundur and Ferozepore had similarly mutinied and that fighting was going on at Peshawar.

Thus this unruly crowd continued on its course through Shah Almi gate, Chauk Mati and finally arrived at water works reservoir where it dispersed at about 11 A.M. on 11th April 1919. The important point in this connection is that the mob did not come out of the city proper, but all sorts of false rumours are afloat and I am told that on 11th instant a Sikh was seen going about in the bazars telling people that the time for forbearance was over and they should rise and out on the telegraph and phone communications and so on.

It would not be out of place to mention here that to assist this lawless and mischievous combination and to continue on the 'hartal' propaganda subscription is being collected throughout the various bazars and quarters in the city on a universal scale and a shop was opened on 11th April 1919 in Machhi Hatta where flour is sold to the poor at the rate of eight seers a rupee strict instructions to the salesman being not to sell any provision to any Government servants and particularly to a policeman even if Rs. 50 were offered for one seer of flour. Besides this free kitchens have been opened one in Landa Bazar, one in Akhri Mandi, one in Sutar Mandi, one outside Shahalmi Gate and one in Anarket where food is being supplied free to the people. Opening of further free kitchens is being arranged in other quarters. To extend the hartal to the Government offices a movement is on foot at Lahore and the clerks are being told not to attend the offices and it is reported that at some places writings in Urdu with Chalks have been inscribed on doors and walls as follows:—

"Oh brother do not attend the offices and attend the Shahi Mosque at 8 A.M. on the following morning." This movement was actually at work on the morning of 12th instant and Government employees, clerks, etc., proceeding to their offices were met with other peoples at the city gates and prevailed upon them to return to their houses. A crowd of about 150 Railway Shop labourers passed through Railway Road to city shouting "Hai Hai" saying that the Railway Shops were closed and not one is to go there and another crowd was noticed carrying a bed covered with cloth representing the same as the cussen of His Honour.

The Bangalore Seva Nand of the Rama Krishna charitable Dispensary, Lahore, who figured prominently on the 6th instant is reported to have been noticed going about in the city on the afternoon of the 11th instant on a tonga accompanied with a companion in Bhagwa clothes exhorting the people collecting subscriptions and opening free Langars in bazars and lanes to feed the poor peoples and proclaimed that all poor people such as labourers, etc., should suspend their work and have free food at the "Langars," and the extent of this movement could be well judged by the fact that on the morning of 11th April 1919 when the employees of the branch post and telegraph office and booking office situated in old Kotwali Chauk Lahore came to work, a crowd of about 500 people of the locality assembled on the spot and stopped them from opening the said offices stopping at the same time a lot of railway people from attending their offices who generally pass that way.

ANNEXURE—concl'd.

In short, there are every indications of the things taking to serious turn on any movement.

I may add in conclusion that the Sikh referred to at A in this report is one Babant Singh, son of Natha Singh, caste Sikh, employed at present as a Khalasi in 1-24th Battalion, Railway Volunteers, Lahore, and in case he is to be arrested a Warrant under Rule 12 A of the Defence of India Rules would be required.

Dated the 12th April 1919.

ABDUL AZIZ

SARDAR AYYA SINGH, Head Booking Clerk, Golden Mosque Booking Office, Lahore.

By the President—

Q. Are you head booking clerk, Golden Mosque Booking Office, Lahore?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Were you there on the 11th April?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. In the evening at about 7 P.M. on the 11th April did some people come and hammer at the doors.

A. They came in the morning at 7 A.M. and hammered at the door.

Q. Who were these men?

A. They were both Hindus and Muhammadans and there were men of other castes also.

Q. Was there anything in their hands?

A. Yes, they had lathis in their hands.

Q. Did you make any request to them?

A. I requested them not to hammer at the door and trouble us.

Q. What did they say?

A. They took off all the fare rates and other boards which were fixed on the windows. I again requested them not to do so, and then they came inside the door and one gentleman said that if he does not close the office, "crush him up."

Q. They threatened to crush you up if you did not close the office?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you do then?

A. I thought it better to close as I was unguarded then.

Q. Had you any desire or intention to close the office if these threats had not been used?

A. No.

Q. Was your notice-board pulled down and the notices torn off?

A. Yes.

Mr. J. A. FERGUSON, Registrar, High Court, Lahore.

By the President—

Q. Mr. Ferguson, are you Registrar of the High Court, Lahore?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you there on the 11th April?

A. Yes.

Q. At about 11 o'clock did you find that anything had occurred?

A. There was a crowd outside my office and I went out to see them. They told me what difficulties they had in reaching the office.

Q. That was a number of the clerks of the High Court?

A. Yes, about 100.

Q. Were they in an excited state?

A. They were very frightened.

Q. What explanation did they give about the difficulty in reaching the office?

A. They started by telling me that the Accountant-General had permitted all the clerks to go home. I thought it was incredible at the time but they persisted in it. They said their houses would be looted and I tried to cheer them up and Mr. Justice leRossignol who sits next to my office came out. We asked them to give the names of anybody who stopped them when they tried to come to the court and they were frightened to do that.

Q. Did they do any work on that day?

A. We gradually got them into the office and got the work done.

Q. The next day, i.e., the 12th, did they work?

A. The next day I made a point of making a round of all offices first thing in the morning at 10. They had experienced the same difficulties and they said that special arrangement was going to be made for Monday the 14th to stop them. I said if they have not been able to stop them now, they were not likely to do anything more effective on Monday.

Q. Did they say whether they had been able to reach the court by direct route or had they to take a round-about route?

A. Some of them had to go round the back of the city. One man said that he had just been chained into his house.

Q. Was that done by the mob?

A. Of course he could not tell. He found he could not get out of his house in the morning.

Q. Did the High Court go on working as usual during this time?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Was there any period in which it did not work in consequence of the riots?

A. No; there is no original work in the High Court, therefore there was no delay in the work. There was no difficulty. Counsel were always there if the clients were not there.

Q. Do you know anything about the other courts besides the High Court?

A. I asked Mr. Prenter, the District Judge, about it and he said that one or two clerks were absent, but he had been able to carry on all right.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. I think you employ about 165 clerks in your office?

A. Yes.

Q. On the 11th and 12th, only one or two of these were absent?

A. Yes.

Q. And throughout this period there were never more than three or four absent?

A. Leaving out one or two men who were allowed to go to Amritsar and could not get out from Amritsar at all during these days, of the Lahore clerks, three or four were absent.

Q. When one of the Judges asked them, they said that they had great difficulty in reaching the court and that people in the city tried to stop them and some of them were to take a solemn affirmation that they were not going to office?

A. Yes.

Q. None of them said that they were beaten or assaulted?

A. I believe the treasurer actually was assaulted. He did not state that to the Tribunal, but I think the treasurer, Jairam Das, was assaulted.

Q. Except the treasurer, nobody made a statement in your presence or to the Judge?

L. December 1919.]

Mr. J. A. FERGUSON—concluded—Mr. GULSHAN RAI.

A. That is in my department. In other Departments there may be people who were beaten.

Q. They came to you and informed you?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that information given to you by the clerks or did you hear about that?

A. About other departments, I consulted the officers.

Q. That information was given to you by the heads of those departments?

A. Yes, the Punjab Veterinary College and the Buildings and Roads Branch.

Q. Did they really inform you on the 11th and 12th that anyone of those who were preventing them from attending the court said "if you go, we will loot your house" or something like that?

A. No.

Q. Not a single one of them gave any names?

A. No; I could not get the names at all.

By Mr. Herbert, Government Advocate—

Q. Mr. Ferguson, did your servant make any complaint during these days?

A. My bearer who is a lambardar of the Ludhiana district of the village of Gulwal said when he tried on the 13th to get food from a shop at the Shahalmi gate, the owner of the shop told him that only those with special manuscript parchis were given food from that shop. The owner of the shop asked him who he was. He said "I am a sahib's servant, servant of Mr. Ferguson, living near the jail."— He said that they would not supply food to the servants of sahibs.

I might explain that I gave that statement on solemn affirmation and I put it to the Tribunal, but I was not asked any questions on it. It had been in before the hearing.

Mr. GULSHAN RAI, Vice-Principal of the Sanatan Dharma College, Lahore.

By the President—

Q. Are you Professor in one of the Colleges?

A. I am the Vice-Principal of the Sanatan Dharma College.

Q. In recent years are your students taking more interest in politics than they used to do?

A. That is so.

Q. Is that a matter you encourage or discourage or give the students their own way?

A. I would encourage them if they took an intelligent interest in politics, but I would not encourage if they begin to lose faith in British people.

Q. Laterly have their views been rather extremist?

A. That has been the tendency.

Q. I suppose probably that such University students are people of mature age in India as in every place?

A. That is due to several causes. In the first place, I quite recognize that they live in an atmosphere of idealism and that tends to make them idealists, but on the other hand that is also due to the fact that there were extremist speeches and writings by officials and Europeans as well as Indians, both.

Q. In connection with the riots that occurred from the 10th April onwards what part did your students take so far as you know?

A. So far as my knowledge goes, students did not take any part in the actual violence that was used. It was perhaps the hooligans of the city that took part in these riots, not the students.

Q. There were very serious riots about that time. There is no doubt about that. The rioting was very serious on the 10th and 12th of April in Lahore.

A. Yes; In these riots students were not taking any part.

Q. I understand that. But some students had joined the processions?

A. Some of the students did take part in these processions and demonstrations.

Q. We have been told that some of the students were injured in connection with the firing that took place?

A. I have heard so.

Q. I understand that none of your students had been injured?

A. None of my students.

Q. Were you consulted by the Military authorities in connection with the measures that were adopted with a view to preventing students participating in rioting at the time of Martial Law?

A. Our Principal was consulted by the Martial Law authorities as regards the punishments that were to be given to the students. There was a conference of Principals in Lahore and in that Conference that Martial Law authorities, I understand, told them that they should be punished and punished adequately.

Q. Do you remember, what punishment, if any, was suggested from your school?

A. My principal suggested Rs. 10 security in the case of 53 students and Rs. 20 security from 18 students.

Q. Were these students those that had been active in connection with political agitation or in connection with disturbances?

A. No, My Lord, we took the register, and those whom we found absent on the 11th and 12th were fined.

Q. It is a question of being absent then?

Q. Quite so.

Q. Certain regulations were made by the Military authorities with reference to the students.

A. Yes.

Q. What have you to say as regards these regulations?

A. I understand that on the 15th April two students of the Dayal Singh College wanted to leave the station for outside stations, for their homes probably. They could not get a Railway ticket from the Lahore and no ticket from the Lahore cantonment station. They wanted to go on foot. Perhaps the happenings in Amritsar, Kasur and other places had upset their minds and they wanted to be at their homes as early as possible. But they were arrested between Lahore cantonment and Kot Lakhpat and they were brought to Lahore Fort and interned there for six days. The Military authorities thought that they were probably D. A.-V. College students, in fact they were Dayal Singh College students. The next day Martial Law Order No. 7 was issued to the D. A.-V. College students. It required all the students of the D. A.-V. College to attend roll-call at Bradlaugh Hall four times a day. On the same day Martial Law Order No. 9 was issued. There were some 40 names in that list and one of the houses mentioned in that list was the D. A.-V. College hostel. No other hostel appeared in that list. Then on the 17th all the students of the Sanatan Dharma College were arrested. It was alleged that some notice that was put up at the College hostel premises was torn up, and for that all the male inmates of the hostel were arrested and taken to Fort; they had to carry their beddings on their heads and were taken three miles. I was told by the students whom I examined that they were subjected to very harsh treatment in the Fort. They were very grossly abused. They were taken to the uppermost storey of the Shish Mahal, the audience hall of Ranjit Singh, and they were made to sleep all of them there. Then there was a change of guards after every 4 hours, and they were awakened, and in fact, I understand, that they were not allowed to sleep. I also understand, that there was no arrangement for their meals. When they wanted food, the Military authorities told them that they had received no order, and that nothing could be arranged for them.

Q. I wanted to know with reference generally to the nature of the allegations rather than about particular complaints that were made to you through individual students.

1 December 1919.]

Mr GULSHAR RAI.

A. That was not the case of any individual student. My Lord, It was the whole lot of students, that were arrested at that moment. I understand that they were also made to remain there while it was raining; all their clothes were drenched, and it was after that they were taken down. Then the next Martial Law Order was No. 6. That was against the Dayal Singh College. There also was prescribed attendance 4 times a day. Then perhaps on the 19th, there was another Martial Law Order against students. That was Martial Law Order No. 17. All the students of D. A. V. College, Sanatan Dharma College and Dayal Singh College were ordered to hand over their bicycles. I might point out that this was very hard on the students. Those were examination days. The University examination was to begin on the 12th of May and all these students were preparing hard for their examinations. During those days they were made to walk about 20 miles for those 4 rolls, calls, and then if they wanted to save some time by using their bicycles, even that conveyance was taken away from them. Usually these Lahore students go into the gardens in the suburbs of Lahore and study there. As they had no bicycles, they could not go to the gardens, and it interfered very much with their studies.

Then on the 20th, I do not know why, the original Martial Law Order No. 9, which was issued on the 16th was revised and all the College hostels and all private hostels in Lahore, about 18 in number, were also put in the list where these posters were to be put up, and the Superintendents of the Boarding Houses were compelled to put these students on guard; and that also interfered with their studies. Then Martial Law Order No. 27 was issued against the Medical College students for their attendance. On the 27th April, of course it is already before the committee, the Principal of the Dayal Singh College was fined Rs. 250. Then there was another order which was very troublesome. That was Martial Law Order No. 30. It was put down that all those who defaced books or illustrations in books were to be held responsible for infringing Martial Laws. Now, this affected mainly little children who attend schools, and little children, of course, do not know how to deal with books and these illustrations. The result was that many parents were obliged to take away those books from students and replace them by new books.

Q. I understand that that has been passed in consequence of certain illustrated papers being marked in a very objectionable way?

A. Quite possible, My Lord, but still it inflicted a very great hardship on the little children. They did not understand very much these things, and the parents, of course, had to place new books in their hands.

Q. How old were the students?

A. The age is not stated, I know as a matter of fact that it was applied to all schools in Lahore. There is no age given in that. It is Martial Law Order No. 30. It was said that all students and all teachers were held responsible.

Q. What is the age of your students?

A. From about 16 to 20 or 21.

Q. Is there any objection to preventing boys and young men from defacing illustrated papers?

A. It all depends upon the intention. If it is done in good way, I would not object.

Q. Do you impute a bad intention to the Military authorities in connection with that?

A. It is very difficult to say whether the intention is bad or good.

Q. You were describing it as bad, and I want to know your reasons?

A. I was just saying that this Martial Law Order put the students to a great amount of difficulty. These were young people who did not understand whether it was objectionable or not. I would refer to one other case. That was that one of our students who was reading in the Second Year Class went to purchase medicine in the bazar, and perhaps he was giving the story of his internment in the Fort to some of his friends. He was arrested by some Police officer or some officer, and he was interned in jail up to the 10th of June. He was brought before the Court of Summary trial and then let off for want of evidence. He failed to appear for the examination, so he has lost a year. Then on the 13th May, all the Principals were ordered by the Martial Law authorities to furnish to them a list of all the students who had been punished by them together with their parentage, their caste, their villages, thanas, etc. I understand specially in Multan division all these students were subjected to espionage, and harassment and trouble. And then, lastly on the 7th of August a notification was issued in the "Maq bulletin" wherein it was stated that all those students who had been expelled from the different colleges should be debarred from Government employment. This is how it runs: (The witness read the notification which was in the vernacular.) It is stated there that a certain number of students were punished by the Principals after making necessary enquiries and they were expelled from colleges. Now the Punjab Government orders that if any one of the those students applies for Government employment, he should not be given any post without the special permission of the Government, and that their applications should be forwarded by the officers in charge with their remarks or recommendations to the Punjab Government. This was issued on the 7th August, and it affected some 47 students. My view, as I have stated in my statement, is that these different measures that were taken against these students have embittered their feelings very much, and that has made the situation still worse. In fact, I might just point out that the student population was excited over these questions, the doctrine of self-determination—they had been reading articles in the papers with great interest—then Mr. Montagu's announcement of progressive responsible Government in India, the League of Nations. When their minds were excited over these things they found they were upset by the Rowlatt Act and the speeches of Sir Michael O'Dwyer discouraging any political agitation in the country. Then I might also say that during the Martial Law days, it also confirmed practically what was said by Sir Michael O'Dwyer and the other Anglo-Indian papers, who opposed the grant of any reform scheme to India. For instance, I have noted down one or two passages from the notices that were put up in those days in Lahore. There was a passage in that, which (translated) practically means 'that people should take no interest in politics; it is the rulers who know the secrets of the art of Government; you, Hafiz, should live a life of seclusion and not dabble in politics.'

Q. Who issued that?

A. That was issued by the Publicity Board.

Q. What are the Publicity Board?

A. It is a body appointed by Government. It is intended to remove false impressions and ideas among the people. Then there was another notice which (translated) means:—'These who criticise the opinions of rulers wash their hands in their own blood.' Then, Sir Michael O'Dwyer quoted the verse of a well known English poet:

"For forms of Government let fools contest,
Whatever is best administered is best."

That was used in one of the budget speeches. And these speeches of Sir Michael O'Dwyer during his regime were read with great interest by the student community. I know, for instance, that in these days students read the Englishman a great deal. In some place, the Englishman is said to have stated, which was quoted in the Civil and Military Gazette, of the 8th April:—"As a leader of the people Mr. Gandhi exerts about as much influence as a weathercock does upon the piety of the congregation inside." The students wanted to show to the authorities that really Mr. Gandhi does not exert that sort of influence by taking part in the demonstration when he was arrested, and they tried to show that that was wrong.

1 December 1919.]

Mr. GULSHAN RAI.

Q. I think it comes to this; on the one hand you think that students should not take active interest in politics; they seem to have been too much discouraged, on the other hand, and they have begun to distrust the grant of the reforms scheme to Indians?

A. It is not my view that the students should be discouraged from taking interest in politics. On the other hand, in one of my letters to the Vice-Chancellor, I suggested that a course of civics should be introduced in the University. They should be able to follow the discussions properly, but at the same time, I do not think that they should have this feeling produced in their mind, the present feeling of distrust or lack of confidence in the British people. That feeling I wanted to discourage; but that can only be discouraged if they are given proper instruction in civics.

Q. Do you think that these measures have increased the distrust that have arisen in the minds of the people?

A. What I consider is this, that on the one hand, the Anglo-Indian papers, a very large number of officials, the Indian Civil Service Association and the different Chambers of Commerce showed by their attitude that Indians should not get any Reforms; on the other hand, the extremist papers wanted to get too much at once. They were between two fires; and naturally students could not have any moderation in their views.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. The question was repeatedly put by the President and you have not answered it; he asked you what were the ages of those children who destroyed their books and who were supplied with fresh books?

A. You mean the infant classes?

Q. That was the question put. What was the age of the children in the different classes?

A. The students leave at the age of 15 or 16 and they enter these schools at the age of 5 or 6.

Q. Do you call the students who are 16 years old children?

A. I do not call them children; what I meant was a portion of the student community.

Q. That is, when the President asked you as to what was the age of these children?

A. Which children?

Q. Those who destroyed their books and were supplied new books by their parents?

A. I think below 8 or 9.

Q. The President repeatedly asked you and you said always 16?

A. I never followed that question.

Q. You referred to regulation No. 30 of Martial Law Orders. It runs thus:—"Whereas it has been proved to me that certain students in Lahore colleges are in the habit of defacing, with obscene and filthy comments pictures appearing in illustrated papers of members of His Majesty's Naval and Military Forces, Civil or other services,

"And whereas such obscene and filthy comments are calculated to promote disaffection and bad feeling and to be prejudicial to good order,

"Now therefore I warn all concerned that it shall be deemed to be contravention of Martial Law for any person to deface or mark any picture or letter-press purporting to represent or refer to British subjects, by signs, drawing or words calculated to bring contempt, ridicule or dislike on such British subjects.

"And such prohibition is also extended to the use of words signs or gestures directed at, addressed or referring to any such British subjects.

"And I shall hold responsible for such outrages on illustrations all who are inmates, owners <sup>and</sup> <sub>or</sub> occupiers, students and teachers, of the premises in which such damaged or defaced picture or literature is discovered."

The question is how did you bring in the small children under this regulation?

A. I would invite your attention to the last paragraph 'I shall hold responsible, etc.'

Q. Here no age is put down for any student?

A. That includes everybody.

Q. Probably under this Martial Law, the onus of proof will be on the children and they would have to prove that they did not draw a line across the nose of this or that picture or did some other thing?

A. Quite so; in fact, in all Lahore schools, this Martial Law order was enforced.

Q. We have been told that 60 students were asked to take their bedding on their head and walk to the Fort; were they compelled to take the bedding or did they themselves take it at their own sweet pleasure when they were ordered to get themselves ready?

A. Only a few days before that one of my senior students had read in a newspaper a report that 500 students in Egypt had been deported. These students thought they were also going to be deported somewhere. They desired to make the necessary preparations, and they were also told that they were to be taken 3 miles off. They naturally thought they were being taken to the Railway Station.

Q. Now it is clear they were not ordered?

A. No.

Q. Have you read the proceedings anywhere of the last meeting of the Senate?

A. It has not reached me as yet.

Q. You know nothing about it?

A. I have heard something about it.

Q. Now, do you know whether, of any of the students that were expelled, one or two subsequently passed the examination and their degrees were withheld?

A. I understand there was one case Ghazan'ar Ali brought before the University 2 or 3 days back; I do not know what speech was made by him in the Robson Hall.

Q. I want to know whether as professor you know that the degree of one of the students that were expelled had been kept back and he was not awarded this degree?

A. I have no definite knowledge about it.

Q. We have been informed they were being kept on the upper storey of the Sish Mahal, where accommodation was limited; in the day time the students were kept inside and during night time made to sleep on the roof. I am not putting the question with reference to the confinement but with reference to the method of treatment of the pupils who were so confined in the Fort.

A. 64 boys were kept during the day and in the night time they slept on the roof. Sish Mahal is a very commodious place and the military authorities if they liked could have kept them in the great quadrangle downstairs, but that was not done; as it was the topmost part of the storey, it was naturally cooler and they were throughout the night shivering with cold.

Q. Did they make any complaint? They were shivering with cold in the month of April?

A. Yes, in the morning there were showers also. They of course did not make any complaint to the authorities; they could not find courage.

Q. I am not clear about your complaint. Leaving the question of their being arrested and kept in confinement, you cannot expect that for the 60 or 100 that were arrested, there would be so many cells and a lot of British Officers to guard them?

A. They could have been as well kept in the lower storey. They could be crowded as well there as upstairs.

Q. Your complaint is that they were sent to the top of the roof?

A. Deliberately.

Q. That is your contention?

A. Yes.

Q. About food and other arrangements, they were completely left in the hands of the students?

A. That is not correct. There were no cooks provided for them. I understood that they felt very hungry; they subscribed some money, and with that collection, about Rs. 10 or so, they asked at about 10:30 or 11 some soldiers to bring them some biscuits and cakes. These were brought out of that money.

Q. Then with regard to this order, that they should not get Government employment; suppose these students were lightly punished for taking part in these riots and in these seditious meetings; what is your complaint? Why should Government be obliged to give employment to these students who according to them were lightly punished?

A. I would say that these boys are yet in an impressionable age and we should not treat them as if they were hardened criminals; their actions should have been overlooked; instead of overlooking whatever conduct they may have been guilty of, by punishing them we are making them confirmed seditionists even if they were not already so. That was a most ill-advised order.

Q. Was your Sanatan Dharma College one of those buildings which were mentioned in the Martial Law order as subject to Martial Law rules, in the first instance?

A. It was not.

Q. Was this matter represented to the authorities, why they had taken steps against this school?

A. Yes, it was represented.

Q. What was the reply?

A. Perhaps it was on that representation that the boys were released.

Q. Were any books or magazines or papers found in your college in which there was marking or defacing of the members of the Royal family?

A. I was specially asked to go into the hostel and see the books and I did not find any magazine or book defaced in this manner.

Q. Surely you would not encourage boys to make identical remarks about the members of the Royal family?

A. Certainly not.

Q. If, as a matter of fact, any student did actually take part in defying the authorities on the 10th April, do not you think he is liable to punishment?

A. Yes, it would be desirable to punish him.

Q. Supposing there were students in that crowd which intended to go to the Deputy Commissioner's office and they were prevented by the police from proceeding further, would there be any justification for that crowd to throw stones?

A. No, I would not justify it.

Q. Now having regard to what you have said about Sir Michael O'Dwyer's speeches and the state in which the boys were and having regard to what happened during the last 9 or 10 months the reforms and the speeches that were made about these things why do you say that the police were wrong in stopping this crowd from proceeding further?

A. From what I know of the students, I do not think that they would do any mischief; what probably they wanted was this. They had seen for instance the demonstration of last year in honour of the armistice and they had seen people moving on the Mall, a very large number of European people and also soldiers, moving about in a drunken condition. They did not think that was wrong. They probably wanted to make a similar demonstration.

Q. Were you quite sure in your mind that they did not intend any mischief?

A. Certainly not.

By Major-General Sir George Barrow—

Q. Did you say that the students on the top were not allowed to sleep?

A. Yes. They were kept awake all night. In fact they were not allowed to sleep. There was a change of guards every 4 hours and there was a fresh awakening of students then.

Q. Is it a great hardship to wake up every 4 hours?

A. A guard while he was patrolling took a dog behind him. It was making all sorts of mischief on the roof. It was catching hold of rugs and sheets and doing such like mischief.

Q. Was that intentional?

A. I do not know. That may be intentional. My contention is they did not sleep and they could not sleep.

Q. Is it a fact that very often in the hot weather people do sleep on the roofs of houses?

A. Yes. The roofs in the fort are not very high.

Q. Do people in Lahore shiver in the hot weather?

A. No, if they have sufficient clothing.

Q. How much clothing do you want on a hot weather night?

A. It was just the beginning of the hot weather; the temperature was not so high.

Q. They were put to hardships because they could not pursue their studies in the garden?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it absolutely necessary to have a garden to work in?

A. So is the habit here in Lahore; the students all study in the open and not in the study rooms.

Q. Can you call it a hardship if they cannot study in a particular garden?

A. They do not get uninterrupted periods of study in their own rooms; they have no single rooms.

Q. It is a great hardship that a student cannot go and study in the garden?

A. It is a question of habit. A man who has a particular habit may find it inconvenient.

Q. Ah! Inconvenient that's the word! It is a very different thing from hardship?

A. I would still maintain that it was felt as a hardship by the students.

Q. It was stated that trouble was given to the students who went to the Multan District? Do you know that as fact or is it hearsay?

A. Certain students who were subjected to this espionage were treated in this way.

Q. In what sort of way did they suffer?

A. Enquiries were made about them; they were followed.

Q. That did not matter to them?

A. I won't like to be followed by a C. I. D. man; that would be very inconvenient to me.

Q. Do all the students who read those speeches take an interest in politics or only a portion of them?

A. Specially senior students take keen interest.

Q. These who go up for examinations?

A. Just a month or two before examination they won't read the papers.

Q. They will be too busy?

A. Yes.

Q. I suppose there are sufficient places in Government for all students who take a degree?

A. There is not.

Q. Some have to suffer the injustice of not being employed by Government?

A. I recognise that.

Q. Why should there be a complaint then if some fail to get employment under Government?

A. When you make a distinction between those who are expelled and others, that is a different matter.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. What was the time of the day when the students were marched to the Fort?

A. I should think about 5 P.M.

Q. And they got some food?

A. They purchased some.

Q. How long were they kept in the Fort?

A. They were released at 10.30 the next morning.

Q. Did they have any food in the morning?

A. No.

Q. They didn't have? They were let off in the morning?

A. The Principal got the release order from the Officer Commanding Civil Area, and they were released at 10.30.

Q. They were kept only one night not very long?

A. They had their meals on the 17th at about 8 o'clock in the morning.

Q. They were next day released at 10 o'clock?

A. They were told to march in couples with a difference of some yards between; it took them over 1½ hours to reach their destination; they didn't get their food till 1.30 or 2 next day.

Q. I say they were not confined for 24 hours?

A. No, they were not confined for 24 hours.

Mr. GULSHAN RAI.

By Mr Abdul Kadir, Assistant Government Advocate—

Q. I understand you gave your opinion that it is good for students to study civics in order to get sound notions and you have advocated that in your statement. You have also recommended the same to the Vice-Chancellor. Do I understand you to say that you are of opinion that they should not take active part in current politics at the time they are students? Do you advocate that opinion?

A. I do not advocate the opinion that they should take active part in politics.

Q. So far as your College is concerned, have you taken any steps against the students going to join either a big political demonstration or a big political meeting protesting against particular measures? That is the shape which active part in politics takes here.

A. Personally I would differ from that view. I would not consider that mere attendance at political meetings as spectators is taking active part.

Q. I have not yet asked you about that; if you like you may say later what your views are. What I ask is; in your College whether any steps have been taken to tell students that it was not proper for them to go and join big political demonstrations and attend big political meetings to swell their numbers?

A. We have taken steps.

Q. That is, in what form, by notices or orders?

A. I give you an example. Only the other day, there was a big meeting in the Bradlaugh Hall at which was present Mr. Andrews, and the Principal prohibited the students from attending the meeting.

Q. That is after the Martial Law. I want to know of things that were done before the last disturbances. Was that step ever taken by the Principal?

A. Even before that, notices were always put up on the notice boards and the students were warned not to attend these meetings. I very well remember that students were warned not to attend the meetings of 6th April.

Q. Well, then, I would like to know in this connection whether the College authorities, Principal or yourself did try to ascertain whether that warning was observed or not; whether the students withheld or whether they attended in spite of that warning?

A. I understand that some may have attended in spite of our warning.

Q. Some may have attended in spite of those orders?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you take any kind of disciplinary action against them to see that discipline is observed in the college and that orders are obeyed?

A. Well, Sir, perhaps I may not have understood the question. I would not consider the attendance of students at those meetings as a crime or undesirable, or I might give an example. The municipal laws of the country do not punish drunkenness, if it does not result in nuisance. You don't prohibit drinking. You would consider it undesirable. I would also in the same way not consider the attendance of students at such meetings as an offence to be punished.

Q. What I understand from your answer is that no action was taken against those students as you did not consider that offences had been committed by them?

A. That is my personal view.

Q. That is your personal view but not your Principal's?

A. Yes.

Q. If anybody did disobey there was no harm in it?

A. It was impossible to find out who was to blame for it.

Q. That was your first reason. Now I come to the second reason. The first reason you gave was that there was nothing wrong if they disobeyed?

A. That is my own opinion.

Q. Coming to another part of your written statement for a moment you say that "during recent years students have been led to believe that the professions of Government have very often been at variance with the actual acts of officials." What do you mean by that? By whom had they been led to believe that?

A. Mr. Montagu made an announcement, in the House of Commons, that Indians were to get responsible Government, but big officials of the Government and the head of the Provincial Government made speeches opposing all constitutional reforms.

Q. Then I understand you to say that being led to believe so you mean they were led by the utterances of certain officials or by the utterances of certain non-officials or certain writings in the Press. Do you comprehend all that in that word?

A. I simply mean official utterances.

Q. You are not of opinion that the non-official utterances led them to believe that?

A. I think they should not. That only makes them more idealistic.

Q. That is a different thing. I want to know whether any writings in the press have led them to believe that Government professions are different from the actual acts of officials?

A. They also support that theory.

Q. To what extent do you attribute that?

A. Not mainly; to a very small extent.

Q. You similarly go on to say "They are made to think that Europeans, at least in India, are opposed to all constitutional reforms in the country." Do I take it that you attribute it to official Europeans or utterances of non-officials?

A. Not to official Europeans but to all Europeans for the Europeans in the Chambers of Commerce are not officials.

Q. Including Anglo-Indian papers?

A. Yes.

Q. You have expressed yourself in this connection and also in the previous part of the statement you have criticised some writings of what you call Anglo-Indian papers. May I know whether the Indian papers are not to blame in any way in this respect?

A. Well, they are also to blame in this respect because they put forward certain claims which perhaps it is not practicable to get. So they put them on the one extreme and the Anglo-Indian papers put them on the other extreme.

Q. You say "the result is that they have lost faith in British justice, British ideas of impartiality, in the bona fides of officials, and in the intellectual and moral superiority of Europeans." So far as you are concerned, will you tell me whether you retain your faith?

A. I do.

Q. And so far as your students are concerned can you say whether they do retain it or whether they have gone with the majority?

A. It has considerably shaken their faith.

Q. Not only the students of your College alone?

A. It has shaken the faith of students in general.

Q. In your College have you done anything with regard to it?

A. I have always been doing so in my lectures.

Q. Does that have a good effect? Is it welcomed by the students?

A. Well those who are sensible students they of course believe while others sometimes call me a toady.

Q. Coming now to Order 30 to which you have made a reference. You refer to it expressing (last paragraph) that it was applicable to young men of all ages, say to children and boys of infant classes. Are you prepared to say that? You are not only a professor but you have been a practising lawyer?

A. I have been practising law for 8 or 9 years.

Q. Are you entitled to read it as divested from the context? Did the order refer to Colleges alone or to the inmates of the schools as well?

A. I would not suppose that all the heads of institutions are lawyers. This order was enforced in the case of infants as well.

Q. I want to know whether this order refers to Colleges alone or to Schools as well?

A. Colleges alone.

1 December 1919.]

Mr. GURJAN RAI—~~continued~~—Pandit K. N. AGNIHOTRI.

Q. What do you mean when you say that children in Schools were put to a great deal of trouble on account of this order?

A. In fact I have 5 or 6 little boys under my charge. I was made to buy new books for them.

Q. To buy new books for them?

A. Yes.

Q. May I know in this connection how long have you been in the Educational line?

A. For about 2½ years.

Q. Now coming to this affair of the Fort, has it come to your notice or have you read the evidence that was given by the Officer Commanding the Fort with regard to this question of supply of food, etc., inside the Fort?

A. I was present here in this Hall.

Q. And you mean to say that you would sooner believe what had been said to you by your students rather than what has been said by the Officer Commanding?

A. I know my students and I have faith in them. I would believe them more than him whom I do not know.

Q. Now with regard to this matter you say that on the roof they were shivering with cold. They were treated with great hardship. In part of your own statement you have said that when they went to the Fort they had heavy beddings with them?

A. I have never used the expression "heavy."

Q. I think somebody did?

A. I don't know.

Q. Some rugs and sheets they took?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you think they would shiver in spite of the rugs and sheets they had? Do you contest or support that?

A. I don't know whether you have followed me. I did not say that each and every one of them took his own bedding. A large majority of them did but even those rugs were not sufficient for them.

Pandit K. N. AGNIHOTRI, Proprietor, "The Capital Sports Works," Lahore.

By the President—

Q. You belong to the Capital Sports Works?

A. Yes.

Q. You are the Manager?

A. I am the Proprietor.

Q. Well you had a complaint to make in connection with a request to contribute to the War Relief Fund?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What was that complaint?

A. In those days the War Relief Fund was being raised. We raised a certain amount of money and remitted to the Government. When I reached my shop in the evening a deputation consisting of about six persons, whom I have named in my written statement, were waiting for me. One was Khan Sahib; one was qanungo in the Income-Tax Department; two or three merchants and one peon of the Tahsildar. They wanted me to subscribe. I told them that I had already done so. Thereupon they threatened me and told me that my name would be noted down and that I would be compelled to pay the subscription. They did not believe my word at all. This troubled me greatly because I had given them my word of honour but they would not listen to it. They threatened me by noting down my name and the next day or the day after a chit was sent to me by the Tahsildar to present myself before him but I did not go. There the matter ended. My income-tax was thereafter doubled.

Q. Many people might have suffered during those days. What I want to know is did you complain that you had been made to pay more income-tax than was due from you?

A. I did lodge my appeal but it was dismissed.

Q. Who heard it?

A. The Commissioner.

Q. I suppose it was dismissed on the grounds that you were in fact earning more than you did before?

A. Yes. I did not fill up the form promulgated by the Income-Tax Department and submit in detail my income on a paper. Simply because I did not do this on a proper form, my appeal was dismissed. I did give information of every item that I earned.

Q. What justification had you to say that the Income-Tax authorities were liable because you did not subscribe to the War Relief Fund?

A. I had an occasion to go to the Revenue Officer. The same Qanungo was there. He alluded to that matter just in my face, saying "You have come now to ask for this thing. Don't you remember about the subscription towards the War Relief Fund?" That of course made me to think that they still had that matter in their mind.

Q. Did you put that before the Commissioner?

A. No, because it was not relevant. I had not filled up the prescribed form.

Q. Who is this man kanungo? Who is he?

A. A kanungo is an officer above a Patwari.

Q. What is his name?

A. I think I should not tell his name.

Q. You are quite entitled not to tell us. We cannot press you, but we would like to know his name?

A. His name is Haveli Ram.

Q. Where does he reside?

A. He was in the Income-Tax Department previously and was transferred to the Revenue Department.

Q. Had he anything to do with the fixing of the Income-tax?

A. He was in the Income-Tax Department. Generally the Peshkars did the whole thing. We had to go to them and they would do anything they liked.

Q. Do you of your own knowledge know of any other case where there was an increase in the income-tax in respect of failure to subscribe to the War Fund?

A. I do not know of my own knowledge, but I heard my neighbours and others complaining that they were called by the Tahsildar very often and many times they had to go and come back. Thus they were worried.

Q. You mean they were worried. People were worried in Scotland on similar occasions. Do you think that as in a crisis of unrest they were asked to subscribe they were worried?

A. I think they ought not to have so worried us. I did contribute towards the Fund. If I had to do it I would do it of my own accord. However trivial the matter may be, if I am compelled to do it, I would look upon it as a great contempt.

Q. About the occurrences themselves in Lahore did you see any of them? Which of them did you see?

A. On the 10th I saw a mob coming from the Anarkali Bazar, I saw lots of people being flogged.

Q. About the first incident, you saw the mob coming. What time was it then?

A. It was evening.

Q. Where was that mob going?

A. I saw them coming from the Lohari Gate and through the Anarkali Bazar they were proceeding to the Mall. I saw this mob and then I went to my house.

Q. You did not see what the mob was doing?

A. They were only going and they had no lathis in their hands. I saw them going.

Q. They had no sticks in their hands?

A. At the time I saw them they had no sticks in their hands.

Q. Possibly it was a well regulated crowd. Perhaps they were going to make a representation to the Commissioner?

A. There were a number of people there.

Q. Were they excited?

A. They seemed to be slightly excited by the arrest of the leaders.

Q. Were they shouting?

A. No.

Q. What did you hear them say? Can't you recollect hearing them say anything?

1 December 1919.]

Pandit K. N. AGNIHOTRI.

A. No, I cannot recollect anything.

Q. What was the object of the mob?

A. I cannot say anything. I saw them and then I retired to my house.

Q. You did not see anything that occurred on the 12th?

A. No, Sir.

Q. I think you had a complaint to make in connection with the Martial Law Regulations as regards your making a return of wheat?

A. Regarding wheat, yes, Sir.

Q. That was an obligation imposed upon every one on account of the situation?

A. Yes, Sir. The notification was not very clear. I thought it dealt with grain-dealers who had withheld wheat. Further on it affected all individuals. We were not withholding wheat from selling it to the public but we had it for our own use. I thought that order was not intended for individual persons. I had also to report the amount of grain I held explaining the cause of my delay. I was called at the Punjab Club and was made to stand between two European soldiers with fixed bayonets. That was simply a very painful scene.

Q. You stood between the soldiers in the Court?

A. I stood outside.

Q. Did the trial take place?

A. I was in the verandah.

Q. You were not handcuffed?

A. No.

Q. Your objection is as regards the neighbourhood of these European soldiers?

A. Yes, my objection is as to the way in which I was placed between the two soldiers which looked as if I had committed a great crime.

Q. In the Martial Law days was it not customary to place people between two soldiers?

A. That was the very offensive way. I had European friends there but I was placed in a position as if I had committed a very serious offence. As soon as I was released people said to me "Have you done anything seditious or committed any offence?" My reputation was spoiled at that time and my European friends, I noticed, would not like to look upon me as if I had committed a great crime.

Q. Your reputation was restored as soon as you were released. You were only fined Rs. 50, I believe?

A. At that time my relatives had become most anxious and other people were looking upon me as if I had committed a very serious offence. Whatever has passed cannot be brought back.

Q. You saw some cases of flogging? Where did that flogging take place?

A. Just in the Market Square.

Q. On what date?

A. It was 16th or 17th. I saw firing twice.

Q. Did it occur twice?

A. Yes. Two men were killed.

Q. You were unfortunate in seeing two incidents?

A. Yes.

Q. Personally you are of opinion that flogging should not have taken place in public at all?

A. Particularly not in civilised nation.

Q. Therefore you think it was regrettable that during the administration of Martial Law these floggings should have taken place in public?

A. Yes. My point is also another. They were perfectly ignorant people. They did not understand the meaning of Martial Law. There were strangers as well who had never heard about Martial Law. They did not know what they were being flogged for.

Q. How did you know that?

A. Because I was present there near the triangle.

Q. Did you hear them tried?

A. There was no trial. They were brought and given 20 or 15 canes.

Q. Who was the Magistrate?

A. I think Mr. Keough was the Magistrate.

Q. Some evidence was taken?

A. No evidence.

Q. We have been told if evidence was given before the Magistrate that one had a reasonable excuse for the ignorance of this order he was not flogged?

A. I witnessed the whole affair. There was absolutely no evidence, no explanation; none whatsoever. They were brought there in my presence and had their chance with 15 or 20 canes and like orders were given and they were at once put up on the triangle.

Q. Where were they tried?

A. Just near the triangle.

Q. Were they not tried in the Court house?

A. I don't know.

Q. You are not aware that these men were tried in the Court house?

A. I am not aware of that.

Q. They might have been tried?

A. Yes. They might have been.

Q. Simply at the place where the triangle was put up and where the flogging took place you say what happened was that an indication was given to the person?

A. The order was announced then and there.

Q. They might have been tried by the Magistrate?

A. At the Square. Then the order was announced. I also saw another man who was very old. He went to offer his namaz in the mosque. From his statement I knew that he was telling the truth.

Q. Was he flogged?

A. No. He was fined. The order was announced in my presence. As he had gone to say his namaz, therefore he was fined. First of all he was going to be flogged. I think his old age was considered, therefore he was fined.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. Do you remember the date on which you were pressed by the kanungo to contribute towards the War Loan?

A. No, Sir.

Q. Do you remember it approximately?

A. No, Sir. I can refer to my records and then can say.

Q. You have not got them here?

A. No.

Q. In 1915, 1916 or 1917 or 1918. Have you any idea at all?

A. I cannot name the year. It was exactly just near the end of the War.

Q. That was probably at the time of the Armistice, i.e., November 1918?

A. It may be a matter of 1917 or 1916. I cannot say.

Q. At that time how much income-tax were you paying?

A. I used to pay Rs. 104.

Q. That was an assessment on what figure?

A. On no figure at all. They did not take into consideration my income. They assessed it automatically.

Q. You used to send in a return and they used to assess you on the figure contained therein? Was that they used to do?

A. Yes.

Q. From the time you had been pressed to subscribe to the War Loan, did you make out a return? What was the amount of your income?

A. Over Rs. 3,000.

Q. What was the amount you said you should be assessed upon?

A. Rs. 3,000.

Q. According to your own return what amount of income-tax was due from you?

A. I don't know.

Q. You put down your income as Rs. 3,000?

A. Between Rs. 3,000 and Rs. 4,000.

Q. That year what happened that they assessed you at a larger figure?

A. At about Rs. 9,000.

Q. Now do you remember how long it was before you got that assessment? How long before had this conversation about the War Loan taken place?

1 December 1919.]

Pandit K. N. AGNIHOTRI.

A. I don't remember.

Q. You remember in what year you were assessed upon this Rs. 9,000 ?

A. It was last year.

Q. That is to say in 1919 or in 1918 ?

A. You mean the last amount I paid.

Q. You must know what time the last amount was paid ?

A. I think it was 1918-19.

Q. Last assessment was in 1918 ?

A. Yes.

Q. 1919 would not be in this year ?

A. Last year's assessment has not yet taken place. They count two years like 1917-18.

Q. When you were put up in 1917 did you appeal on that occasion ?

A. Yes.

Q. You say that your appeal was dismissed because it was not on a proper form ?

A. Yes.

Q. About the following year did you raise the question again ?

A. This year ?

Q. Now it is for 1918. Did you raise the question again ?

A. This year it would be 1918-19.

Q. Did you appeal on that occasion ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And you say that appeal was dismissed because it was not in proper form ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. The following year did you raise the question again ?

A. This is the next year ; we are now at the end of 1919.

Q. Did you raise the question again ?

A. That is calculated for two years ; it will come afterwards.

Q. You have not been assessed because you say it is two years at a time.

A. I have not been assessed up to this time.

Q. When you put in your appeal and it was turned down on a question of form did you take any steps to bring to the notice of the authorities the fact that you thought your contributions to the war loan were being used as a reason improperly to raise your assessment ?

A. I did not know whom to put this petition to.

Q. You know who is above a kanungo ?

A. Yes.

Q. You know who is above a Tahsildar.

A. Yes.

Q. You know all about the Deputy Commissioner and the Commissioner ?

A. Yes, but I did not know whether my petition would be of any avail or not, and at the same time whether it would be legal or not.

Q. But can you not complain to the Deputy Commissioner or the Commissioner, if you think some underling of his has been using zulm towards you ?

A. Some things I will bear and some things I will appeal against.

Q. When you made this complaint referred to in your statement had you sent it in to any one else ?

A. My friends knew it.

Q. Had you, until you sent this in to us, made any complaint to any one ?

A. No, not to the officers.

Q. When you saw this mob on the 10th of April what was the mob like in Lahore ?

A. At that time the mob consisted of young men and middle aged people also.

Q. And what were they doing ?

A. They had a flag in their hands and they were going to the Mall.

Q. When you saw them was there anybody preventing them from going ?

A. No.

Q. And how many were they when you saw them ?

A. I think about 500.

Q. Were they singing anything or shouting anything ?

A. No.

Q. Were they marching all over the roadway or marching four abreast or how ?

A. I saw them in front of the Punjab National Bank ; a hundred yards from the turning which goes to Nila Gumbaz.

Q. You saw them only for a short distance ?

A. Yes.

Q. Were they making noises ?

A. There was some noise.

Q. Could you tell what the crowd was shouting about ?

A. They were shouting that Gandhi had been arrested.

Q. Did you gather from them or from anything they said where they were going, or why, because Mr. Gandhi had been arrested, they were going to the Mall ?

A. No I did not hear.

Q. Had they any sticks ?

A. No.

Q. How many flags had they ?

A. One.

Q. What sort of a flag ?

A. A black flag.

By Major-General Sir George Barrow—

Q. You say in your statement after the second hartal you had been in the city and to your utter surprise and astonishment you found that the people were perfectly peaceful ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Why should you be surprised to find the people in Lahore peaceful ?

A. I saw the people were going about their ordinary business ; nobody molested anybody.

Q. Why should they not be peaceful ; are they not ordinarily peaceful ?

A. Yes ; ordinarily peaceful ; I was quite surprised to see the scene.

Q. Why were you surprised ?

A. Because we heard the officials were so much perplexed, but the situation was peaceful and there was no disorder at all.

Q. Then you thought it was natural for a serious situation to arise ?

A. Whatever it was, only the whole bazar was closed, and there was no violence.

Q. And you were surprised that there was no violence ?

A. Yes.

Q. You expected that there should be ?

A. From the reports that we heard that the whole police and others were paralysed.

Q. You say for a few days you were utterly surprised and astonished that the people were perfectly peaceful, why ?

A. Surprise after the reports we heard. We thought the situation must be very serious, but when I went into the city I saw the situation was peaceful.

Q. You say the students of the college were being marched to the Fort with heavy beddings on their shoulders. We were told by the Officer Commanding that they took only light beddings.

A. When they are walking three miles.

Q. I did not ask about the distance, I was talking of the weight. You said they were heavy beddings ?

A. I thought they were heavy ; it all depends on the distance you go.

Q. The Officer Commanding said they were light beddings and you say they were heavy to us ?

A. You may call them light then.

By Mr. Abdul Kadir, Assistant Government Advocate—

Q. You speak about this flogging at the Market Square. Your shop is situated at some distance from the Market Square ?

A. Yes.

Q. What distance, may I know ?

A. About 200 yards from the Market Square.

Q. Well then did you go to this place on hearing that flogging was going to take place there ?

1 December 1919.

Pandit K. N. AGNIHOTRI—concluded—Mr. RAHMAT ILAHI.

A. On the first day of course I was informed. People were going there and they told me the flogging is going to take place and I went. The second day I was coming to my shop and I saw that.

Q. It did not occur to you that it would be shocking to see flogging?

A. I never saw it before in my life. I never thought it would be so shocking.

Q. So you went to that shocking scene yourself?

A. I wanted to see whether it was shocking or not because I never saw that punishment in my life before.

Mr. RAHMAT ILAHI B.A., LL.B., Pleader, Lahore.

By the President—

Q. You would like to make a statement?

A. My report about grain returns reached the Commanding Officer some 5 hours late and he ordered me to be present at 8 o'clock. I went there at the appointed time and I had to wait there till 5 o'clock in the evening and had to sit in my tonga for the whole day while it was raining. At 5 o'clock I was called by the Officer and two guards with arms were alongside and I was brought before the Officer, and without hearing anything he fined me Rs. 20.

Q. For what?

A. For speaking the truth, because I had sent up the return late because I was under the impression that that order was made for the dealers in wheat only and I was not meant to send any information to the Officer.

Q. What were you doing at the time; what was your business?

A. My business with respect to what?

Q. What is your profession?

A. I am a Pleader.

Q. Were you asked to make a statement in connection with your case?

A. Yes.

Q. And you made a statement?

A. I sent up a statement in writing.

Q. To the officer?

A. To the officer here.

Q. And your complaint is that you were fined?

A. I was made to sit and wait the whole day. In the first instance I thought the order did not apply to any other person than the dealers in wheat because it began with the dealers in wheat; but in the last portion of it it was stated 'or any other person.' When I came to know that it applied to each and every body then of course I sent up information but it reached late.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. The order under which you were troubled was I think Order No. 34?

A. Yes.

Q. It begins 'Whereas I have trustworthy information that certain dealers in wheat in the area under my command are avoiding Martial Law No. 32.'

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And it goes on to say 'Every trader, banker, bunnia, or other person in the said Area who owns or possesses wheat exceeding 5 maunds in weight'—that is the phrase you are referring to?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have a copy of this Order individually sent to you, or did you simply see it?

A. I simply saw this Order pasted on the walls.

Q. Now tell me, the return was to be sent in apparently by about 9 o'clock on the morning of the 7th May, according to this Proclamation. It was published on the 5th of May and the return was to be sent in on the morning of the 7th? And how late were you?

A. My information reached the Officer at 3 o'clock in the evening of the 7th.

Q. And when had you come to know that you were included, though you were not a dealer?

A. I came to know on the evening of the 6th. I wrote a letter and through the mistake of my Munshi it was posted. He did not take it personally to the office but posted it and on this account it reached late.

Q. Then you were summoned to go where, somewhere outside the Punjab Club?

A. I was summoned to the Punjab Club.

Q. What day was that when you went to the Punjab Club, how long after the 7th?

A. I was called, I think, two days after this.

Q. And you were summoned for what hour in the day?

A. I was summoned to be present there I think at 8 o'clock in the morning.

Q. And you say they did not reach your case till 5?

A. Till 5 in the evening.

Q. Was there an officer sitting there hearing cases all the time?

A. An officer was there; I do not know whether he was hearing cases.

Q. Did you see a lot of people there?

A. There were not so many people on that day because it was raining. On other days when there was no rain there were other people who applied for certain things, say for passports or railway tickets; there were not many people that day.

Q. Did you go up to the officer and ask to know what was wanted with you? What steps did you take to get your matter attended to?

A. I tried to send in information through a sentry who was standing outside there. Of course he did not take much heed of myself.

Q. But you were summoned to go and see somebody, whom were you summoned by?

A. By the officer in command there.

Q. Colonel Johnson himself?

A. Yes.

Q. And when you got there did you give somebody your name and say 'here I am ready'?

A. More than once I gave my name to the sentry there.

Q. And as far as you could see Colonel Johnson was there?

A. I could not see.

Q. Did you see anybody doing business there?

A. There were many officers coming and going from there.

Q. You are a pleader and would be able to know what was going on. As far as you saw what were the facts? It may perfectly well be that Colonel Johnson was there all the morning dealing with as many cases as he could?

A. I do not think he was doing many cases; he may have been doing certain other work. My case was also not tried by him.

Q. Who tried your case?

A. I think Major Barnes.

Q. Was Major Barnes there all that day?

A. I think he was there from early morning.

Q. Was he for anything you know busy trying cases all day long, doing work all day long?

A. I think I was made to sit there purposely.

Q. Did you see a lot of other people sitting there for a great many hours?

A. There were only two of us I and Mul Chand's son.

Q. You went in before Major Barnes and told him of your excuse and he did not accept it?

A. That I was under the bona fide belief that the Order did not refer to me.

Q. And he fined you Rs 20?

A. Yes.

Q. You did not have to go again? That was on one day?

A. I attended only for one full day.

Q. How many maunds of wheat in fact did you put in your return?

1 December 1919.]

Mr. RAHMAT ILAHI.

A. I was in possession of some 10 maunds; only 5 maunds more than the amount allowed.

Q. You had not a large stock of wheat?

A. No.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. Who was Mul Chand's son?

A. He was also fined Rs. 20. He is the son of the great merchant of Lahore. Mul Chand was called for and he was sick, therefore his son attended the court and he was also fined Rs. 20.

Q. Why was he fined?

A. He was fined for not sending in a return of wheat. His father was sick and he said he was busy with his treatment.

Q. And why were you troubled, because you are a pleader?

A. Yes, I was a pleader and therefore I was made to sit for the whole of the day.

Q. In what state were the people there?

A. The pleaders?

Q. No the citizens of Lahore?

A. They were very much frightened and in a bad plight.

Q. Would they dare to complain and to file appeals and do things which could be done in ordinary days?

A. They could not do anything at all. They could not even come near the camps.

Q. Would they dare to enforce their demands on any of these area officers or people trying these cases?

A. Not in the least.

Q. Could they complain during those days safely against any of the subordinate officers for anything done by them?

A. I think not.

Q. And in your opinion there was an absolute reign of terror?

A. I think so.

Q. So in the opinion of the citizens of Lahore their lives and liberties were not safe, however high they might be?

A. I think it was not safe.

Q. However that was a general feeling, whether it is true or not?

A. The general feeling.

Q. Now do you know how many people were arrested and not brought to trial amongst your friends or neighbours?

A. I cannot give you the exact number.

Q. I do not want the exact number; I want to know of those with whom you were acquainted, those who were arrested and not tried?

A. I remember from amongst my neighbours some three persons.

Q. How many days were they kept in custody?

A. For more than 10 days.

Q. Can you give me their names?

A. One of them was Niruddin, father of Ferozedin, who was convicted for 10 days.

Q. Was it because Ferozedin was arrested in the riot at Hiramandi?

A. In that Danda Fauj riot.

Q. Therefore his father was also arrested?

A. He was also arrested.

Q. And how many days was he kept in custody?

A. I think for more than 10 days.

Q. And no trial was held?

A. He was discharged, I think.

Q. Was any bail granted to him?

A. No.

Q. The other two, can you give me their names?

A. I cannot recollect at the present moment.

Q. What were their offences?

A. Their offences were not known to anybody.

Q. Has the offence of Niruddin been known to you?

A. No.

Q. Or any of the neighbours?

A. No. I think I remember now one more name, Seth Ram Pershad.

Q. He is your neighbour?

A. Yes. He is a man who subscribed a lakh of rupees to the Government for war bonds.

Q. And what was his offence?

A. His offence is as yet unknown exactly, but they say he was arrested for this langar business, that he had started some langar for charitable purposes.

Q. That he had subscribed to charitable langars, that was his offence?

A. That was his offence.

Q. How many days did he remain in jail?

A. I cannot give you the exact number, probably more than 10 days.

Q. And having regard to his status, to what extent could he offer bail?

A. I think he could offer two lakhs; as many lakhs as the Government wanted; he is up to anything.

Q. And the third man do you remember now?

A. I do not remember.

Q. And how many days was he kept in custody?

A. I think the same number of days, more than 10 days.

Q. And do you know for what offence?

A. I think an offence of a similar sort, subscribing towards langars.

By the President—

Q. How did you know the offence with which these gentlemen were charged was subscribing to langars?

A. Because people had been talking.

Q. It is only from talk? You have no personal knowledge, you did not hear the case tried against them?

A. No personal knowledge; the case was never tried.

Q. And you have not seen the gentlemen themselves personally about it?

A. I have seen them.

Minutes of Evidence, Kasur

At Lahore, Tuesday, the 2nd December 1919.

PRESENT:

The Hon'ble LORD HUNTER.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice RANKIN.

The Hon'ble Mr. W. F. RICE, C.S.I., C.I.E., L.C.S.

Major-General Sir GEORGE BARROW, K.C.B., K.C.M.G.

The Hon'ble Pandit JAGAT NARAYAN.

Sardar Sahibzada SULTAN AHMAD KHAN.

Mr. H. WILLIAMSON, M.B.E., L.P., Secretary.

Mr. P. MARSDEN, L.C.S., Sub-Divisional Officer, Kasur.

By the President—

Q. You are Sub-Divisional Officer at Kasur ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You took charge apparently on the 15th of April ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Martial Law was proclaimed on the 16th ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You do not know what had occurred prior to the 15th ?

A. I had not been in Kasur—I had been in the Punjab.

Q. I see you gave a report dealing with the predisposing causes in their chronological sequence. Is that simply based upon information that you received ?

A. As soon as I arrived I thoroughly investigated the causes after seeing the accused and the people concerned and I think this is the only real connected narrative that anybody had produced taken from the actual accused themselves.

Q. As a result of these investigations you formed an opinion as to the predisposing cause of the riot ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Putting it briefly what was your view as to predisposing causes ?

A. Well I found that Kasur was inclined to be a very disloyal place and ready for any riot of that sort. I thought that the legal profession had behaved very badly and took no trouble whatever to inform the people of what the Rowlatt Act was. In fact they excited them to be more troublesome. Then there was considerable outside pressure put on Kasur. First of all it did not have an hartal.

Q. They did not have a hartal on the 30th March or 6th April ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Do you think that Amritsar and Lahore had anything to do with bringing pressure to bear ?

A. There was actual proof of documents from Amritsar and it was rumoured that places like Delhi, Karachi and Bombay had been exercising pressure.

Q. The pressure exercised was to get Kasur to form into line with the passive resistance movement ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. It is only in that sense you refer to pressure ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You do not suggest that there was pressure from any of these towns instigating the populace in Kasur to rise against the King-Emperor ?

A. I think there was pressure of that sort at Patti. There was a regular system by which lectures used to be given to excite the people. One lecturer Durga Das who was an Arya Samajist and also another man called a Swami came and told the people that, although they should obey the King, they should have no compunction in disobeying his servants.

Q. How far is Patti from Kasur ?

A. 28 miles.

Q. On what day was the hartal in Kasur ?

A. There was one on the 11th and then on the 12th.

Q. I think you refer to a crowd being led by Nadir Ali Shah ? Who is he ?

A. I think he was a shopkeeper.

Q. I think he was tried and convicted and sentenced to death. He has since been executed ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. This crowd led by Nadir Ali Shah went round the city insisting on shops and places of business being closed ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. On the following day a general hartal was again observed and some crowds paraded the city closing places of business and schools. Did you find out what method was adopted by the crowd to ensure the closing of shops ?

A. They went round and just insisted on the shops being closed. If people refused they were forced to do so. There was an Honorary Magistrate who was stopped in the street and forced to take his pagri off and then he was afraid so he shut his own shop. There were other cases like that. There were two men who had a soda-water factory and the crowd swarmed in and forcibly closed the doors.

Q. On that day did the school boys take a conspicuous part in what was happening ?

A. I think most of the school boys from the two schools joined in and one school boy was first of all sentenced to be hanged and then it was commuted to 7 years.

Q. How old was he ?

A. Seventeen.

Q. Did these school boys who were taking part appreciate the serious nature of the movement ?

A. It was merely the atmosphere of excitement that their leaders created.

Q. On the 12th were there outside people among the agitators ?

A. Yes, Sir ; apparently there were about half a dozen outsiders helping to lead them. One informer who gave evidence mentioned three outsiders and he gave a detailed description, but we could not lay hands on them afterwards.

Q. On that day I think the mob had a black flag carried in front ?

A. They had a black flag laid over a charpoy. These were the emblems of mourning.

Q. And about 9-45 A.M. the crowd made its way to the railway station ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. It was headed by Nadir Shah to whom you have already referred ?

A. Yes. The crowd was in a state of excitement. Nadir Shah made a speech and said that this is our last chance—we must remove the knife which is at our throats. Then everybody wailed and moaned and beat their breasts which is the same as a mourning ceremony in India.

Q. The crowd by that time did considerable damage to the station ?

A. The shed was burnt out and all the telegraph wires out and all the goods inside the station buildings were destroyed, the tickets were stolen and the windows were broken.

2 December 1919.]

Mr. P. MARSDEN.

Q. Did they burn much?

A. The actual burning, I think, was only the oil shed.

Q. Were the leaders shouting out cries against the Rowlatt Act or in favour of Gandhi and others?

A. Yes. There were various cries of that sort. I was told that some people also said:—"The King's reign is now over."

Q. At about this time three trains came up to the distance signals from Lahore, Patti and Ferozepore?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. They apparently, drew up at the signals in consequence of the crowd that were at the station?

A. They saw smoke rising and they saw that something was happening at the station, and they were doubtful what to do.

Q. Did the crowd run towards the Ferozepore train, some 400 yards off?

A. That was the closest train.

Q. What attitude did the railway staff take up?

A. Apparently they were entirely disloyal and were assisting the rioters either actively or passively.

Q. Was there any movement for a strike among the employees?

A. It is believed that there was. And there is one actual proof. A signaller from Kasur signalled a message to Lahore saying that all the Europeans had been murdered here and the station looted and will all your people in Lahore strike to-morrow.

Q. In this Ferozepore train which the crowd proceeded to there were several Europeans? As regards what actually occurred to the Europeans Mr. Sherbourn is to be a witness?

A. I think he is here to-day.

Q. I think that on that day certain firing took place?

A. Yes.

Q. No firing took place until the mob had done a considerable amount of damage and destruction?

A. The first shots were fired by the two soldiers who were murdered, from revolvers. The later firing by the police took place right at the end of the day when various buildings had been burned out.

Q. Tell me about these two soldiers who were murdered.

A. They were in the Ferozepore train and there along with the others they were attacked and stoned and then when the other Europeans got out, the two soldiers who were murdered got into the train again and it slowly moved forward to the Kasur platform. When they emerged from the carriage they were stoned again and when the stones actually touched the two men who had revolvers they fired one or two shots towards the crowd. The crowd then thought that they were blank because only one man was hit on the foot. They then closed in on the soldiers and pursued them up and down the platform and apparently none of the staff assisted them or gave them any help. They were hemmed in against some railings and beaten to death.

Q. Did the crowd come armed with lathis?

A. They had lathis with them, but their chief weapon was stones which they took up from the railway track.

Q. Did the stoning have something to do with the killing of these two men?

A. All the people present were stoned including the soldiers but they were actually killed with lathis.

Q. What was the nationality of these two soldiers?

A. They were English.

Q. I think on the afternoon of the 12th a Military force arrived under Colonel McRae?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And the situation then quieted down?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. I think that from the 13th to the 15th no arrests of any one were made for what had occurred on the 12th?

A. No, I think not, Sir.

Q. Did you regard that as unfortunate?

A. Yes, I think more earnest steps should have been taken at once to investigate the case and arrest people.

Q. And when you arrived on the scene did you take steps to arrest those who had been responsible?

A. Yes, Sir. The Deputy Superintendent of Police had a considerable list ready of people suspected and at once arrested most of these. Then we took steps to call back the people in the train who might identify the accused and by that means we got most of our accused.

Q. When did you make your first arrest?

A. After I had arrived on the 16th. These were the first arrests that were made since the 12th.

Q. On the 16th was there a meeting in the Town Hall?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And Martial Law was proclaimed by Colonel McRae. Were you present at the proclamation?

A. Yes.

Q. I think at that meeting Lala Dhanpat Rai was arrested?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And altogether 21 arrests were made that day?

A. That is correct.

Q. On the 17th there were further arrests—three on the 17th, four on the 18th, and forty on the 19th?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. On what information did you effect these arrests?

A. It was largely from enquiries that were made by the police on the spot, from people who were arrested mentioning other people and chiefly from actual people who had been present and struck identifying people, and also gradually the people resident in Kasur began to give in the names of people that they knew. For instance the railway staff ultimately gave a considerable number of names of rioters. Officials in Kasur were then called upon and they were gradually more willing to give the names of people who had been seen rioting.

Q. What means did you take to find out that these men were really the rioters?

A. We had a very careful investigation made. We perused every set of evidence very carefully. We had a large number of the classes that were suspected brought to the station. For example some butchers and their assistants and sadhus who were resident in Kasur. Then each witness was made to look at them and occasionally they identified them by remembering them. Then on May 1st, in order to shorten the system of identification, we called all the possible witnesses from all over India. There were about 50 or 60 and then we made all the men of Kasur assemble and there again a certain number were identified.

Q. Before you actually effected arrests had the people arrested been identified as having participated in the riot by more than one witness?

A. I think some were arrested because the police suspected them.

Q. Were many so arrested on suspicion?

A. I cannot recollect. As far as I remember there was actual evidence against anybody who was actually arrested.

Q. Were any prominent local men arrested?

A. The most prominent were M. Ghulam Muhi-ud-din and Mr. Abdul Kadir, both pleaders at Kasur.

Q. I think you had evidence at the time of arrest that these gentlemen took part in the riots but it was afterwards found that the evidence was not correct?

A. I was quite convinced after some days after hearing further evidence that it could not have been correct. First of all it was obvious that the evidence against Mr. A. Kadir was not correct and afterwards that against M. Ghulam Muhi-ud-din.

Q. How long were these gentlemen kept in custody before they were released?

A. Ghulam Mohi-ud-din was arrested on the 19th of April and released on the 10th of May. Abdul Kadir was arrested on the 19th April and released on the 28th April.

Q. During the period of their detention where were they kept?

A. In the police station. There were also other places for prisoners because there was not enough room, so we had a wired enclosure made for them. The most respectable people were sent to the police station. They were allowed to have their beds and small comforts that they wanted.

Mr. P. MARSDEN.

Q. Were they provided by you with food or had the food to be supplied at their own expense?

A. In the ordinary course they would have been supplied with food by the prison authorities but their relations were allowed to bring them food.

Q. I see in your report you mention that on the 12th there were not only disturbances at Kasur but also trouble at Khem Karan Station and at Patti?

A. Yes.

Q. Khem Karan is about six miles from Kasur?

A. Yes.

Q. What damage was done there?

A. Station property was looted and wires cut.

Q. Who had that done?

A. That had nothing to do with the people who were at Khem Karan. The damage was done by about 20 men, mainly sweepers from Pattu village near by.

Q. Did you find out that that occurrence took place immediately after the trouble at Kasur?

A. Yes, as far as I remember about two or three hours.

Q. Had the sweeper from Kasur been an inhabitant of Pattu?

A. I do not think he was an inhabitant. I think he lived at this village.

Q. Where is Pattu then?

A. That is a village just near Khem Karan.

Q. Did you find out that he had instigated the people to burn the station at Khem Karan?

A. He did not instigate them to loot the station.

Q. Patti is 28 miles—what happened there?

A. There the crowd gathered together towards the evening and wandered through the city seeing what mischief they could do and ended up at the railway station.

Q. So far as that riot at Patti is concerned who had taken part in it?

A. Apparently it was the lower classes—the riff-raff—artisans and labourers and people of that type.

Q. They appeared to have been actuated by a desire to loot?

A. No, I think they were primarily excited by the leaders, I mean the people in general. Patti is closer to Amritsar than to Kasur.

Q. Did the chief inhabitants of Kasur and the police give assistance?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And the result was that the rioters were soon brought under restraint?

A. Yes.

Q. In Kasur itself was the mass of the crowd composed of the lowest classes just as in Khem Karan?

A. No, Sir. They were a representative crowd. There were well-to-do shop-keepers largely, it was really representative of every class.

Q. I see in your statement you say that the mass of the crowd is composed of the lowest classes, sweepers and artisans and leather workers, etc.?

A. They must have been the mass, because they form the mass of the population of Kasur; I mean in proportion to their numbers every class was represented.

Q. In connection with the measures that were taken at Kasur to deal with the situation after the riot, you say that on the 12th a military force of 300 men arrived under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel McRae. That includes 50 British troops I suppose?

A. Yes.

Q. How were the others composed?

A. There were the 2-15th Sikhs and the 2-17th (Indian) Infantry.

Q. Did that force of soldiers remain for a considerable time to protect Kasur?

A. No, it remained for a short time at 300, I forget the exact date. Afterwards it was reduced to 150.

Q. You say in your statement "On the 8th May a further reduction was made to 100 men of the 2-17th (Indian) Infantry.

A. Yes.

Q. Then you say that on the 11th May this force was further reduced to 50 men. I am not quite certain from your statement if you had the British troops that you refer to?

A. As far as I remember they had gone by that date.

Q. Perhaps you are right. I see you say that 300 men were reduced to 150 in a comparatively short time. Then on the 8th May there was a reduction to 100 men and on the 11th May there was a further reduction to 50, and on the 21st June you were left with 15 rifles?

A. Yes.

Q. In your opinion what was the effect of Martial Law in your District?

A. Well, it is always very hard to say what the effect was. But the only obvious effect was that the people were powerless to do anything that they might otherwise have done.

Q. On the 16th April in your opinion was Martial Law necessary to restore and maintain order?

A. It appeared to be necessary. The leading people were or pretended to be in a state of terror.

Q. Did a moveable column visit Kasur?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What functions did it fulfil?

A. It only halted for a little time at Kasur. Its functions were to move between Amritsar and Kasur and to take any steps that they deemed to be necessary and to arrest any bad characters or people who were likely to cause sedition or rebellion on the way.

Q. You say various persons were arrested. Does that mean some men at Kasur were arrested by this column?

A. No, Sir, they did not arrest any one at Kasur. They arrested men at Patti and other places.

Q. You have stated that the effect of this column was to keep the people quiet?

A. Yes. They had a very serious situation to deal with. It was known that all the badmashes, that is, the professional bad characters in all the villages, were endeavouring to bring about a small sort of rising: I do not think the zamindars were likely to rise, but all these badmashes were bent upon doing considerable mischief, and it was necessary to have a large overawing force.

Q. You say that a column of the sort cannot take the place of the police?

A. The police authorities did not know how far they should act if the mobile column was acting.

Q. You say that Thikri pahra was established in the villages? What do you mean by it?

A. Yes, it is a sort of keeping watch and ward in the villages.

Q. That was established in the villages along the railway line?

A. Yes.

Q. That means the villages became responsible for the watch and ward of the railway line?

A. Yes.

Q. After the establishment of that system, did the cutting of telegraph wires gradually cease?

A. As far as I remember, the cutting ceased about the 20th April. Thikri-pahra had not been properly organized till after that date.

Q. After it was organized was there any further serious damage to telegraph wires?

A. No, Sir.

Q. As regards the trials of the accused in your district, so far as the serious offences were concerned, they were tried by the Special Tribunals at Lahore?

A. Yes.

Q. But the minor offences were dealt with by summary courts?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you acting as a Judge in this summary court?

A. I had the power, but I never tried any case. The Martial Law administrators tried the cases. I think Captain Doveton heard all these cases.

Q. I see you give a detailed statement as to the personnel of the convicts, in what sense do you use the word "convicts"?

2 December 1919.]

Mr. P. MARSDEN.

A. People who were actually sentenced.

Q. You say that of the convicts, 12 were shop-keepers, 3 Government servants, two students. No pleaders were accused?

A. No.

Q. In a previous part of the report you seem to lay a considerable amount of blame upon the pleader class for what has occurred?

A. Yes. I have explained that in my opinion they were largely responsible for what actually occurred, but you could not actually say that they had committed a crime.

Q. The complaint you are making against them is rather a complaint of political agitation than of crime?

A. It is almost more than political agitation, I think. They made speeches on the 11th, and they were holding a meeting on the 12th while the riot was actually proceeding, and in those speeches they made awful hints to the people about the Rowlatt Act, but they never attempted to explain what the Rowlatt Act was. The people thereupon got excited, and immediately we had the murder of Europeans. So I think a grave responsibility lies on the pleaders.

Q. Only two sadhus were accused, and one of them was convicted?

A. Yes, there was one sadhu who got off because there was only one witness. My opinion is the man was certainly guilty, but I think the plan of the Martial Law Commissioners was to convict no one if there was not more than one witness.

Q. That is a very wholesome rule in administering Martial Law, is it not?

A. Yes.

Q. Were almost all the people convicted residents in Kasur, as you say that with the exception of 7 men all the convicts were of Kasur?

A. I think of those convicted in the Lahore cases, in the Kasur cases properly so-called, they were almost entirely residents of Kasur, but there were others implicated as regards the riots at Khem Karan and Patti, and there were separate cases against them, but the men implicated in the Khem Karan and Patti riots were not residents of Kasur.

Q. No particular caste or religion seems to have predominated among the accused?

A. No.

Q. In the summary court of the Martial Law Officer, altogether 79 persons were convicted?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And the chief case there seems to have been the riot at Patti?

A. Yes.

Q. Thirty one accused were convicted and 15 acquitted?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Were they all tried in a batch?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Were you present at their trials?

A. No, Sir.

Q. You don't know what procedure was adopted in trying them?

A. I know the procedure that was adopted. I enquired about it from Captain Doveton who is himself going to give evidence.

Q. Of the 31 convicted, 21 appear to have been sentenced to imprisonment and 4 to whipping?

A. Yes.

Q. Now in connection with whipping, how many sentences were there in Kasur District?

A. Thirty. Well, there were 40 cases in all of actual whipping taking place in Kasur.

Q. How is it that there were more cases of whipping than of sentences?

A. I have mentioned that there were 4 whipping sentences in the Patti case, and 6 school boys were whipped by order of the Officer Commanding.

Q. The total number of stripes appears to have been 710. That gives an average of 18 stripes to each individual?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. To what class of community did the people who were whipped belong?

A. I understood they were all of the lower classes. I never actually saw whipping, except in the case of one man who was a fairly respectable man; he was a Ticket Collector at the Kasur Station.

Q. Except the 8 school boys, were they all of mature age?

A. Yes. Of the 6 school boys, I think 3 were about 16 or 17 who were beaten with a bamboo stick, and they got 6 cuts each, and the three smaller boys who were about 13 or 14 were given 3 cuts each with a cane.

Q. What were the school boys whipped for?

A. The Head-Master wrote to us saying that the boys were still insubordinate, and he asked for Military help. The Officer Commanding called them to the station, and he thought that whipping was the best course to restore order and to give the school authorities Military help, and as a disciplinary measure the offending and insubordinate boys were whipped.

Q. Who carried out the sentences of whipping?

A. It was carried out by a Sikh.

Q. Why did not the school authorities do it?

A. Because the school authorities were not doing well at that time.

Q. Where were these boys whipped?

A. Just outside the station entrance.

Q. Were they whipped in public?

A. Yes, it was really in the presence of the school, the whole school was made to assemble in a ring round and the boys were whipped more as an example to others.

Q. What was the object of not whipping them in the school premises?

A. There was no particular object. I think the Officer Commanding wanted to see the school and hear what they were saying.

Q. Was the sentence of whipping given in any other than serious cases in Kasur District, and for what sort of offence was the punishment of whipping given?

A. For all sorts of cases, for rioting or brawling at the Station. I remember four or five men were whipped because they had trespassed into a women's apartment when they were drunk. Two or three men were whipped because they had assaulted a lambardar as he had given information to the authorities about the rioters; also for a large number of miscellaneous offences.

Q. Did these whippings take place in public or private?

A. I would say that they took place in private. I have explained in my report that they were whipped at the Military head-quarters on the station platform just outside where the Military had their head-quarters. The platform at that time was closed to the public. So it was a question of opinion whether it was public or private.

Q. Could the whipping not be seen by people outside the station?

A. No, it could not be seen.

Q. Did all the whippings take place at that point?

A. Yes, they all took place at the station platform. I believe there was one case which took place a little further away outside which might have been seen by the public if they were there.

Q. In connection with sentences under Civil Law, do you pass sentences of whipping at all?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Ordinarily where do you whip?

A. In the jail.

Q. Did you make investigation into certain rumours as to causes of unrest such as recruiting?

A. Yes, I was very careful to find out about that. I found that recruiting was never mentioned in the agitation or in the speeches. In fact Kasur had been a very backward place and certainly no pressure was exercised whatever, and the number of men recruited was extremely small in Kasur.

Q. Were the classes involved those drawn upon for the army?

A. I do not think so.

2 December 1919.]

Mr. P. MARSDEN.

Q. Recruiting seemed not to have been mentioned during the agitation and in the speeches?

A. That was mentioned in none of the speeches.

Q. Was the case of any accused or of any one suspected connected in any way with recruiting?

A. I don't think so.

Q. And the Military themselves, both active and retired, were they loyal throughout?

A. Yes, they were absolutely loyal.

Q. Were there also rumours, as regards emigrants' grievances?

A. No, there was nothing of that sort.

Q. About provocation by the authorities. I think it was suggested that a great deal of the disturbances was really due to the action of the authorities. Had it anything to do with the risings in Kasur?

A. None whatever. The authorities were only anxious not to annoy the crowds in any way. When I questioned the Deputy Superintendent of Police at that time he said that he had special instructions from headquarters to see that the crowds were not disturbed or annoyed in any way, and I think that made the police too kid-gloved in their measures.

Q. During the administration of Martial Law, were there two cases of firing by sentries?

A. Yes.

Q. How did they occur?

A. One case was at the station which I saw myself. There was a British sentry on duty at the station, and he had seen some one creeping towards him as he described afterwards. On account of the dust-storm then raging it was very difficult to see how many men were there. Well, the man who was creeping towards the sentry was challenged repeatedly both in English and in Urdu, and the man did not answer, but he made a sort of run towards the sentry. Then the sentry fired and killed the man. Sometime afterwards we were told that the man was dumb, which really explained the reason.

Q. So it was an unfortunate accident?

A. Yes.

Q. The other case was in a village?

A. I was not present there. I do not know how it happened.

Q. Were some complaints made to you as to the administration of Martial Law by the officers?

A. There were no complaints whatever at the time. In fact the officer administering Martial Law in Kasur proper was very friendly with the people. The people used to go to him when he went into the city and talk and chat with him. He was extremely popular. But right towards the end of his time after Martial Law was removed, one or two people told me that he was doing things which they did not like. I asked him about it. What happened was that he did not like to go through the formalities of passing sentences of imprisonment for petty offences, so he used to make them do manual labour, climb ladders, perform exercises, etc. I think he made one man skip, or something of that sort. But even that was not looked upon by the people with annoyance, in fact they used to be very amused by it. There was one thing which I thought more serious. I think it was the subject of a letter from some one outside Kasur saying that a Hindu sadhu had been white-washed by the Martial Law officer. I asked him about that, and he denied it.

Q. Was that Captain Doveton?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. I understand that in connection with the trials of some men who were charged with more serious offences, a scaffold was erected?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it contemplated to have an execution in public?

A. That was the idea, I presume.

Q. That idea was abandoned?

A. Yes. They had started putting up a scaffold at Kasur on the 3rd May, and on the 9th May the Government ordered it to be removed. It was not quite complete by the 9th May, so it was removed.

Q. I suppose the practice of having executions in public has long been discontinued in India?

A. The idea on this occasion was to have it on the actual scene of murder at Kasur.

Q. The murder of these two Warrant Officers?

A. Yes, because it was at the waiting shed station.

Q. In point of fact where did the execution take place?

A. I think it took place in the jail at Lahore because the trials were here.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. Martial Law was actually proclaimed in Kasur, I think, by Colonel McRae, on the 16th April?

A. Yes.

Q. Kasur is a part of the Lahore Division?

A. It is a part of the Lahore District.

Q. I take it, therefore, that on the 16th Colonel McRae's proclamation was simply carrying out Ordinance No. I of 1919 which was proclaimed on the 14th?

A. Yes.

Q. Apart from the question of whipping school boys as a military action, was any action of the nature of Martial Law taken before the 16th in Kasur, and anybody purport to exercise Martial Law powers in Kasur before the Proclamation of Martial Law before the 16th?

A. No.

Q. Now as regards the outbreak of the trouble in Kasur, I understand that there was no hartal till the 11th, and that the grave outrages occurred on the 12th?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you been able to collect any definite evidence as to what it was that caused the excitement to break out on the 12th?

A. Well, on the 11th there was the news of Mr. Gandhi, which increased the excitement. Then they had the meeting on the 11th. The people were more wildly excited on account of that meeting on the morning of the 12th. They started promenading throughout the town, and they were very much excited. Either by preconcerted action or by chance they arrived at the Station when the train came in and their excitement was such that they did what they did.

Q. Do you attribute to any extent the outbreak on the 12th as a consequence of the news being received in Kasur of the happenings on the 10th at Amritsar or at Lahore on the 10th?

A. I don't think very largely, because the chief people whom I questioned about the meeting on the 11th said that they had only vaguely heard of what had happened at Amritsar and Lahore, and that they were not thinking about that.

Q. I see you say in your statement that on the 11th or 12th, at any rate on the 12th, there were some strangers noticed among the leaders of the mobs? Have you been able to find out whether they came from Amritsar?

A. It was suspected that they had come from Amritsar, but we did not know it for certain.

Q. If the people did not really know what happened on the 10th at Amritsar, it is not probable that that agitation at Kasur was manufactured from Amritsar?

A. They must have known it by the 12th.

Q. After your investigations, you do not regard the events in Kasur on the 12th as really a consequence of what happened in Amritsar on the 10th?

A. No, I should not say that the events happened as a consequence of what happened in Amritsar.

Q. You do not say that the trouble at Kasur on the 12th was engineered from Amritsar?

A. Only the trade boycott was started.

Q. I understand there was pressure put upon business people to observe hartal on the 6th?

A. Not on the 6th, but later on. They had not observed hartal on the 6th. The rumour was that if Kasur did not fall into line with other places in the matter of hartal, traders would be boycotted.

Q. As a consequence of having known that Kasur had not joined with the hartal on the 6th?

A. Yes, that was the idea.

2 December 1919.]

Mr. P. MARSDEN.

Q. As regards the ultimate influence from places like Delhi, Bombay or Karachi, so far as you are concerned, you have not verified any particular cases?

A. We could not find any cases of that sort. That is merely what people were saying.

Q. Have you got any evidence of people dishonouring handis in order to bring pressure to bear upon Kasur?

A. Yes, there are three instances of that, which I think, the Deputy Superintendent of Police will produce in his evidence, if necessary.

Q. We will get that?

A. Yes.

Q. So far as it goes, was action taken from Amritsar or Lahore?

A. I think there were two documentary pieces of evidence from Amritsar and one from Lahore.

Q. It does not take tangible evidence of the influence further afield than that?

A. No.

Q. As regards the pleader element, I understand, in Kasur there is a large one?

A. Yes; it is large.

Q. How many pleaders are there for practical purposes?

A. I do not know for certain, but I should think there are about 30.

Q. I suppose in an important place of that sort, public meetings are always largely carried on by pleaders and speeches made by them?

A. Yes.

Q. Whenever there is any eloquence made, I take it that the pleaders would be the most helpful source of supply?

A. Yes.

Q. As regards political meetings, about the Rowlatt Act, have you seen any actual Criminal Investigation Department reports of the speeches on the 11th and 12th?

A. There was a man deputed by the Police to make an account of the speeches but unfortunately what he gave was quite useless; it had nothing. Apparently he did not want to say what the people had been saying. We had to take that indirectly afterwards.

Q. What is the source of information about the inflammatory nature of the speeches on the 11th?

A. The informer who gave evidence told us a certain amount of the actual expressions used; then sometime after this, at the beginning of May, I called together 8 or 9 people who had been present and made speeches, and they told me just a few sentences which had been mentioned. Piecing them together, I found the sort of speeches they made.

Q. Still the material is rather scanty for drawing a line between eloquence and sedition?

A. I could tell you what one of the speeches was; for instance, I found certain sentences had been used.

Q. Were these taken from the evidence of the approver?

A. These are from the sentences given by those speakers. I questioned 7 or 8 speakers, one after another.

Q. About what they had individually said or about what other people had said?

A. About what each individually said and what other people said. As far as I remember, one of the speakers, who was a Hindu pleader there had stated "We Indians are unarmed cows in the presence of the Government." When I questioned him, he did not use the word "cow," but said they were of the male gender of that species. Then he said that "the Rowlatt Act was a rope round our necks," and then he quoted a Persian couplet which said that the Government against the people was like an ox trying to destroy flies. He largely insisted on the fact that the Anarchical Crimes Act had been carried by Europeans over the heads of the unofficial Indians. That was more or less his speech.

Q. They are all common forms. Are they not, Mr. Marsden?

A. He was saying all this to the crowd in that state. I should also mention one more point. When I questioned him afterwards, he said at that time he had never read the Act through. He had only seen it commented on in the Tribune newspaper. To my mind that shows very great irresponsibility, and it shows how these pleaders simply relied on distorted accounts from the Press. Then they said what they read in the vernacular papers, the native press, to the crowds and made their speeches. Naturally the crowds got violently excited. He never attempted to tell them what the Act really was; he never attempted to take them through the Act and point out what safeguards were there, what the Act really meant, he simply said that it threatened their liberties and in a moment they might have thought it was horribly bad. That was the effect on the crowd.

Q. Were any of these pleaders arrested on charges of uttering sedition?

A. No, they were not arrested for that.

Q. I rather understand that none of them were arrested at all?

A. None, except those mentioned.

Q. Were those two whom you mentioned arrested largely because of their having attended these meetings?

A. These that I have mentioned.

Q. Not for that reason at all?

A. The two that I have mentioned were arrested for that reason, viz., Moulvi Abdul Kadir and Moulvi Ghulam Mohi-ud-din. Latterly Dhanpat Rai whom I mentioned was arrested on the Martial Law proclamation. He was really arrested because the higher authorities had come to the conclusion that he should be arrested as he was probably the cause of the trouble. He was removed for some time from Kasur.

Q. You say in your statement "Mr. Ghulam Mohi-ud-din and M. Abdul Kadir had been prominent at the Rowlatt Act meeting on the 11th and had been at a meeting held with the object of establishing langars for Hindus and Muhammadans on the 12th morning; and furthermore were said by certain witnesses to have joined in the riot." What I am asking is whether it is a fact that they were arrested for being at these meetings or was there any specific offence about joining the riot?

A. No; it was for specific acts; not on account of speeches. They were not the most violent; there were much longer and probably more violent speeches than they gave.

Q. Would you mind just telling me shortly for my own information the actual occasions of firing? I do not mean firing at the station by one of the soldiers, but the actual occasions when the Police or Military fired on the crowds at Kasur. How many such cases were there?

A. The Military never fired on the crowds. There was no other firing except the two occasions mentioned, by sentries on the crowds. No Military ever fired.

Q. On how many occasions did the Police fire at Kasur?

A. It was on one occasion at the end of the riot in Kasur when the crowd had just burnt down the Munsiff's court and were about to attack the Tahsil.

Q. That is the only occasion of firing?

A. Yes.

Q. You of course were not there at the time?

A. No.

Q. You had to enquire afterwards?

A. Yes.

Q. As regards the action that was taken under Martial Law, as you say, of the persons who were whipped, none of them belonged to respectable classes except probably in the case of one man, a ticket collector?

A. Yes.

Q. What was his offence?

A. There again I was not present at the trial of that man. I was told what happened and that was that there was a seditious or at least an illegal meeting the whole night of the Railway staff. I think there were 13 or 14 men present; and under Martial Law Orders that was illegal and they were all arrested. I understand that this man was considered to be the ring leader and so he was selected for punishment and the others were let go.

Q. How many lashes did he get?

A. I think he got 30.

Q. That is to say the maximum?

2 December 1919.]

Mr. P. MARSDEN.

A. Yes.

Q. Did he get any punishment in addition to that?

A. I do not think so.

Q. So far as you observed at the time, was there any distinction made in awarding punishments for breaches of Martial Law Orders according as the offender was a man of respectable class or not?

A. Yes. If he belonged to the respectable class, he was fined. If he was of a lower class, he was probably whipped. But I am only going by the list of the Martial Law Administrator's cases that were sent to me.

Q. In this case they made an exception to that rule?

A. I suppose this was an exception.

Q. You had nothing to do with the administration of Martial Law?

A. No.

Q. Although you had the powers, the Military took them in hand?

A. I agreed that Captain Doveton had more time to try all the cases.

Q. I understand the cases that he tried were all of them cases for breaches of Martial Law proclamations?

A. Yes, and the Patti case. He also tried the Patti case which occurred before the Martial Law.

Q. He tried this case before Martial Law was proclaimed?

A. Yes.

Q. Had you anything to do with having that case sent to him? Why did he try that?

A. It was sent to be tried by the Martial Law Commission, but they considered that the punishment that he could inflict would meet the case.

Q. The Legal Remembrancer urged that it should be sent in for trial by the Summary Court?

A. Yes.

Q. They were prosecuted before Captain Doveton?

A. Yes.

Q. Did any movable column work from Kasur to any district that was not covered by Martial Law proclamations?

A. No; I do not think so. It was only in Lahore and Amritsar districts so far as I remember.

Q. Is Patti covered by the Martial Law proclamation?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you any recollection of a movable column moving beyond the district after Martial Law had been proclaimed?

A. I never heard of any.

Q. As far as you are concerned, when the movable column arrested anybody, did they come and hand them over to you?

A. As far as I remember, they took them to Amritsar or Lahore and put them down there. There was only a small room in Kasur so they were put down in Amritsar or Lahore.

Q. About the fines that were inflicted by the movable column, were they inflicted by to the Officer-in-charge of the column?

A. I believe so.

Q. Were these columns attended by a civilian officer?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell me whether it was the idea that he should hold trials or was that left to the Military Officer-in-charge?

A. In some cases, I think, the civil officer was asked to hold the enquiry, but I do not think that that particular movable column that went in Kasur had any definite trials of any sort.

Q. As regards people who were taken as hostages, did the column that moved from Kasur bring back any people as hostages, or were they taken over to Amritsar or Lahore?

A. They did not bring any one to Kasur as hostages, as far as I remember.

Q. As regards the hostages that were taken from bad villages, did the Military apply to you or to any civilian under you for a statement as to which of the villages were bad or disaffected villages?

A. Yes; they were always asking us for information and whenever information or rumours were heard, we let them know.

Q. That is to say you passed on whatever information or rumour reached you?

A. Yes.

Q. You did not select the particular villages that were certainly so bad as to require this treatment?

A. No.

Q. That was left to the Military Officer?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever hear of any cases in which the conditions of the hostages bond had been broken and as to what happened to the hostages in those days?

A. I do not think there were any cases, I heard of no cases.

Q. Speaking about the school boys, you said that the school authorities themselves were not doing well?

A. Yes.

Q. I do not quite catch the meaning of that expression?

A. The Headmaster was an old and a feeble sort of man. He was never keeping any order and one of the masters had actually been found to be a leader during the processions in the city during the disturbances. We were all very doubtful as to what the position of the school masters was. They certainly did not seem to be in a hurry to take any steps to punish boys if they took part in riots, although it was obvious that perhaps a majority of the young boys had been engaged in throwing stones.

Q. That was when all was over, I understand, and then the Headmaster complained that he still could not bring them to order?

A. He sent a note and said that his boys were very insubordinate and added "kindly give me Military guard."

Q. Insubordinate to their school master?

A. I suppose they were insubordinate to their masters.

Q. Were these boys a bit above themselves and cheeky to the master or were these boys doing any thing in the way of disorder?

A. I took his meaning to be that they were still in a great state of excitement, that he could not keep order and it might be a source of further trouble.

Q. Had they done anything which you could lay to their charge in the way of disorder or breach of regulations?

A. No.

Q. What was the date? Can you give me approximately how long after the riot he sent this demand for Military assistance?

A. I cannot remember the actual date.

Q. Roughly, was it a week or a month after the riot?

A. I should think it was about 6 days.

Q. Did he nominate the boys that deserved to be flogged?

A. He and the master of the other school were asked to select the 6 boys that they considered to be the most naughty boys. The result was that 6 boys were produced who were obviously the poorest, the thinnest, the most badly clothed and of the lowest class. I think the Military Officer said "you must bring boys that are a bit fatter, select better boys."

Q. He rejected the selection of the Headmaster and took out the 6 at random?

A. The Headmaster would not select any one; then I think the boys themselves were told to select six of them. The result was they were obviously of the lowest caste, badly clothed and feeble specimens of boys.

Q. They were properly rejected. Then 6 were chosen at random on the spot by the officer?

A. Yes, as far as I remember.

Q. How many stripes did each of those 6 get?

A. Three big boys got 6 and the three smaller got 3 each.

Q. This was at the time before the pronouncement of Martial Law at all?

A. That was after Martial Law was proclaimed.

2 December 1919.]

Mr. P. MARSDEN.

Q. I see you said before the arrival of the Martial Law Officer?

A. I do not think the Martial Law Officer had arrived.

Q. Had Martial Law been proclaimed?

A. Martial Law had been proclaimed, but later on a special Martial Law Administrator was sent to try cases.

Q. Who was the officer who actually ordered and is responsible for the thrashing of the 6 school boys selected in that way?

A. The officer commanding, Colonel McRae.

Q. What Battalion?

A. He was Commanding the 2-15th Sikhs.

Q. He was Officer Commanding Kasur at this time?

A. Yes.

Q. I see that you say that some punishments were meted out to people who were proved to be guilty of various vulgar forms of cheating?

A. Yes.

Q. Was there anything dealing with the question of cheating in any Martial Law proclamation?

A. No; I do not think so.

Q. Cheating was one of those offences which is not in the list, either in the Bengal Offences Regulation or Martial Law Proclamation?

A. Yes. I am not particularly well versed in Martial Law. I take it that any offence that the Martial Law Administrator cares to take can be dealt with by him. These were offences committed in the precincts of the Railway so far as I remember.

Q. That proposition is not clear to me. Assuming that this was not an offence with regard to the Bengal State Offences Regulation of 1804 which stopped the Civil Courts Act, assuming that it was not an offence which was a breach of Martial Law proclamation, at any rate, the view practised in Kasur at this time was that still for any ordinary breach of the Indian Penal Code, the officer administering Martial Law was entitled not only to try but to sentence them to sentences for which they could not find sentences under the Indian Penal Code, viz., whipping in the case of cheating?

A. I do not think it was ever deliberately and clearly put in that way. I do not think for a moment he would have tried any cases under the Penal Code, but petty offences and offences committed on the railway in connection with Martial Law. Those he tried. I remember one case of cheating. It was done by a soldier from outside. He pretended to be an official at the station and cheated some women of their money.

Q. That is all right. It is Military Law and comes under Military discipline and has nothing to do with Martial Law.

A. Yes.

Q. Then you say "many of these punishment inflicted on cheats, on Government servants who misbehaved, and on dangerous badmashes, were very popular with the community at large. It was extremely effective, for example, when a lambardar from a distant village came before the Sub-Divisional Officer in the morning complaining of an assault by badmashes, and troops forthwith went out and secured the offenders, and produced them before the Martial Law Officer, and before the day was out the five badmashes, scoundrels of the worst type, had all received 30 lashes, and started on a course of 2 years' rigorous imprisonment. Such things made the people relish Martial Law." In the case of an assault by a badmash on a lambardar, it might or might not come under the Martial Law proclamation. It probably would. But as regards punishments inflicted on cheats, I want to know whether there were many people who committed an offence under the Penal Code which had nothing to do with the Regulation of 1804 and had nothing to do with Martial Law proclamations, dealt with by the Military Officer and sentenced to whipping?

A. It would be best to ask him. I can only recollect two instances that I may quote here of cheating committed at the station. He could answer your question.

Q. We know one was committed at the station; was the other also committed at the station?

A. There was some offence in the station precincts, as far as I recollect.

Q. And you do not remember any other case where the Military officer dealt with what one would call ordinary offences under the Civil Law?

A. I have already remarked that there were cases in which the punishments were inflicted by him. A large number of them could have been tried under the Penal Code.

Q. A good many cases might have been tried for rioting?

A. Yes.

Q. I quite agree; there is no objection. It might have been an offence under the Penal Code. Did it come under Martial Law Regulations? This Martial Law Officer, as I understand, was sitting as an area officer under the proclamation of General Beynon dated the 19th of April. That was his position?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it not the case that under that proclamation he was entitled to inflict only what were recognised forms of punishment, viz., two years' imprisonment, 30 lashes and fines up to a certain limit.

A. I think that is the case.

Q. Do I understand you to say that the Martial Law Officer in Kasur abandoning those three various forms of punishment made a regular practice of subjecting people before him to fancy punishments of his own invention?

A. That is what I said.

Q. What is the name of this gentleman?

A. That is the same one all the time.

Q. Captain Doveton?

A. Yes. Those later proceedings that I mentioned took place as I know after Martial Law had been withdrawn from Kasur. He was then only acting as Martial Law officer along the railway, and these offences were offences committed actually on the platform or in the station precincts.

Q. I see it did not apply to what you may call Martial Law, but that which continued later as regards the Railway.

A. Yes.

Q. So far as detention is concerned of the arrested persons, I do not know whether you have given the information in your statement. Can you give us the number of people who were arrested in Kasur and ultimately released without being brought to trial?

A. The total number of arrests was 172 and 97 of those were ultimately discharged without being sent up to trial, that is to say, that 75 were sent for trial and 51 of those were actually convicted.

Q. Ninety-seven were not sent for trial?

A. Ninety-seven were not sent for trial.

Q. Some of them were arrested at a later date than others, but I gather that the bulk of them were arrested by, shall I say, the 22nd April?

A. No. The first arrest was made on the 12th. By May 11th, everybody who was not sent up for trial had been released, so that the investigations and the detention of persons were all inside the month. Of course, if it were the ordinary criminal courts where a thousand people had committed murder, it would take about a year and the prisoners would have to be detained.

Q. Is it the case in Kasur as in other places (I am not quarrelling over it, I only want to know the fact) that the practice was to get all complete the investigation before the cases were sent before the magistrate at all, or before any sort of court? Was the investigation always complete before a case was sent before the magistrate or any court?

A. Yes.

Q. The practice was not adopted of bringing the offender before the magistrate within 24 or 48 hours and taking a remand?

A. We took remands.

Q. That is what I want to know. How long after the arrest of a person was he brought before the Magistrate?

2 December 1919.]

Mr. P. MARSDEN.

A. I was a magistrate and he always came before me almost at once.

Q. And you made an order remanding him until a certain date?

A. The police used to put up the case for remand, I think, before different magistrates. It is the duty of the Police to put the case up whenever any remand is required. I do not recollect who they used to put the order before, but I know that remands were always taken.

Q. I have never been a magistrate in India, therefore perhaps I am not familiar with it, when a person is brought before a magistrate soon after his being arrested he is brought so that the magistrate may put a limit to the time for which he can be kept in detention without coming before a magistrate again?

A. Yes.

Q. You never make a remand without specifying the actual number of days.

A. 15 days.

Q. You remand for 15 days at the time?

A. Yes.

Q. Do I understand that the practice in Kasur was that the ordinary procedure under the Criminal Procedure Code was complied with in spite of the fact that you had so many people to deal with?

Remands were properly taken and nobody was detained longer than his remand period without being put before a magistrate and an extension of time obtained?

A. That was so far as I recollect, in every case.

Q. As regards those 97 people that were ultimately not put up for trial at all, so far as the Police or the C. I. D. were concerned, I gather they went before a magistrate and satisfied the magistrate that they were proper cases in which he would make remands?

A. Yes.

Q. One gentleman was kept in the thana from the 19th April to 10th May; that would be a long period to be kept in the thana without being tried?

A. Yes.

Q. About the 97 men that were arrested?

A. Most of them were in the same case. We had to continue enquiries up to May 1st. We had a big identification parade, but even after that witnesses had to come, and we were anxious to show to people that no men were taken without sufficient justification.

Q. Can you tell me, with regard to these 97 men, whether on the occasion of the remands being taken, there were cases for appeal for bail pending investigation?

A. I think some applications were made, but they were refused.

Q. You knew, as a matter of fact, that you did not have any proper case for bail; or you refused the applications without inquiry?

A. They were non-bailable.

Q. Non-bailable?

A. Yes.

Q. The applications were all non-bailable cases, were they?

A. I thought all these cases were non-bailable.

Q. So, you never had any application where you would be entitled to exercise the power of granting bail?

A. I do not think so.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. You know that so far as these remand orders are concerned they are judicial orders under the Criminal Procedure Code, and generally the application has to be made before a magistrate, either by the Court Inspector or the Court Munsarim, that the remand is required?

A. Yes.

Q. And the remand is required on the ground that an investigation is going on and some evidence has to be procured?

A. Yes.

Q. But you knew that under the Criminal Procedure Code, no remand can be granted until the accused person is brought before the magistrate?

A. Yes.

Q. May I understand that all these persons were brought before you from time to time whenever a remand was obtained?

A. I cannot recollect whether they were brought before me.

Q. And you gave them an opportunity of making any complaints before you?

A. I cannot recollect if actual remands were confirmed or not. I can tell you the best authority to give evidence would be the Deputy Superintendent of Police. I cannot recollect now.

Q. These remand orders being judicial orders, I think they will be yours?

A. I expect so.

Q. These different orders being judicial, they would be available to us?

A. Yes.

Q. I believe that a number of these arrested persons were sent to Lahore, and practically you would not be able to produce them for the purpose of obtaining remand order before any magistrate at Kasur?

A. Not before him.

Q. Are you quite sure from your personal knowledge that no remand orders were obtained?

A. They were obtained.

Q. Under the C. P. C. 15 days is the limit, that is the police cannot obtain a remand for more than 15 days?

A. 15 days is the time.

Q. Generally it is given for 3 or 4 or 5 days. 15 days is the extreme length of time. They cannot ask for remand for a month?

A. They should not.

Q. You took over charge on the evening of the 15th April. Had you anything to do with Kasur?

A. I had everything to do in the sense that I was stationed in the district.

Q. And between the 11th and 15th did Mr. Mitter or the Deputy Superintendent of Police inform you that any disturbance was caused or created by the crowd after 3 p.m. on the 11th.

A. No. I do not think so.

Q. Whatever may be the reason, after that ebullition or after those murders were committed, after 3 p.m., up to the time you arrived, nothing was done at Kasur; so far, everything was quiet?

A. Not in the neighbourhood of Kasur. I am not in charge of Kasur city only.

Q. You were also informed that the police were able to make arrests on the 11th, that is the date of the murders?

A. On the 12th; yes.

Q. And further you were informed that the officials there and the police were never assaulted?

A. Have I said that?

Q. None of them were assaulted, the police constables were not assaulted?

A. What is your question?

Q. That on the 12th or the subsequent date the police constables or the police officials or the tahaldar or the Sub-Divisional Officer were not assaulted and no attempts were made either on the 11th or 12th, up to the 15th?

A. Yes; attempts certainly were made.

Q. To attack Mr. Mitter? I am talking of the police officials.

A. There were attempts made by the mob; on the 12th the mob endeavoured to burn the tahsil, containing the Sub-Inspector and the munsif, who was standing there.

Q. The munsif was standing on the roof of the house and the mob were going to burn that house and were going to attack the treasury. Now leaving that aside, had any one of the officials ever made a report that an attempt was made by the crowd to assail them?

A. No; I do not think so.

Q. You may draw the inference, because a munsif was standing there. Is it a fact that all these officials, all these witnesses who are coming before us, Sardar Ahmad Khan, Mr. Mitter and other police officers, were constantly passing through this crowd?

2 December 1919.]

Mr. P. MARSDEN.

A. No; there were not. The Tahsildar was the only one who came in contact with the crowd, the tahsildar and the Sub-Inspector.

Q. And they were never assailed; as soon as they saw the Police officer, the mob cleared away?

A. There was no attempt to assault any.

Q. Simply because the munsif was standing there they were burning the Tahsil?

A. They burnt his court room and the documents inside.

Q. Have you got any statement that the crowd was stoning the Munsif?

A. They were throwing stones at the tahsil.

Q. Did you examine the munsif and did he make any statement before you that stones were thrown at him?

A. He told me that he was watching the crowd from the tahsil and the stones were thrown at the tahsil.

Q. My point is this: Is it a fact that the military from Lahore arrived on the 12th or 13th?

A. There was one official, a Sub-Inspector of Police, who came from Patti on the 11th afternoon; the crowd met him and assaulted him and made him take off his pagri. Those incidents I forgot.

Q. Because they wanted him to observe the hartal?

A. Yes.

Q. That is an assault; but what I want to know was whether they disregarded the authorities and wanted to establish their own rule and establish anarchy. As a matter of fact you cannot say from what happened on the 11th and 12th up to the 15th that the Civil authorities were not able to exercise their own powers so far as the town of Kasur was concerned?

A. They were absolutely unable to exercise any authority, control or power.

Q. They were able to make seven or eight arrests?

A. At the time they fired, one or two people were arrested. They arrested the people who were wounded.

Q. Mr. Mitter and the Deputy Superintendent of Police made a complaint that they were not able to make arrests. Their explanation was that they were in doubts and therefore they did not make any arrests?

A. Yes.

Q. Similarly, there were Military authorities at Kasur on the 14th, 15th and 16th and they also did not arrest any person? They were also in doubt as to their authority?

A. Arrests? No, they left that to the police.

Q. Then this matter was referred to Mr. Kitchin, Commissioner of Lahore, and he said that arrests should be made?

A. Yes.

Q. Therefore what I wanted to establish was that the arrests were not made not because the Civil authorities were not able to make these arrests but because there were some doubts about the orders passed and on account of that doubt Mr. Mitter and the Deputy Superintendent of Police did not make any arrests?

A. Yes; that is correct.

Q. With regard to the occurrence at the Railway Station, of course you were not there and you have no personal knowledge. I only ask you with regard to one affair. The first firing which caused any death, was in front of the Tahsil or of the Treasury?

A. Yes.

Q. If I understand aright, according to the Government case, I think those two soldiers emptied the chambers of their revolvers, but as a matter of fact they did not do any damage to the crowd?

A. There was one man hit on the foot.

Q. No man was killed, one was wounded?

A. It was not known how many chambers were loaded. There are two pieces of evidence; one was that of the informer. He said that they fired one round, and then another crowd came and this crowd closed in on them. Another man who was present, I think he was contractor of the Queen's Regiment, he stated that they fired a considerable number of rounds. These were the eye-witnesses' statements.

Q. This report of yours before us is practically an abstract of the report which you submitted in obedience to the Circular issued by the authorities?

A. Yes.

Q. Instead of mentioning that these two officers were mobbed and stoned by different crowds you put it in this way. You describe it thus—"The crowd followed it and inside it, as I have mentioned, were the two warrant officers. They got out and stood at the door of their carriage. The crowd were by some railings about 60 yards off, and throwing stones at the two men; one fell on one of them. Then they lost their heads and fired off all their rounds towards the crowd, without doing any damage."

This statement which you made in your report to the Lieutenant-Governor was in June or July.

A. Yes; July. I am wrong then; this is the statement of the Contractor of the Queen's Regiment. I took that to be a correct account.

Q. Up to this time you considered it as correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Practically no one was killed at the railway station so far as your information goes?

A. No one of the mob.

Q. Were you informed, in the course of your investigation, that an allegation was made that previous to what happened to these two men or to anybody, the mob was saying that two of their number had been killed?

A. No; I never heard any such rumour.

Q. Not even from Mr. Sherbourn?

A. No.

Q. And you did not even read the letter that was sent you by Mr. Sherbourn or the Military authority?

A. I have subsequently read the report that he sent.

Q. It appears to me, from the papers on the record, that it was stated that when the crowd was in front of that hut where Mr. Sherbourn and his family had taken shelter, two persons had been killed?

A. No; I think you have got muddled.

Q. I am quoting chapter and verse. You will find it in the two statements of Mr. Sherbourn and also in the letter.

A. Can you read the passage?

Q. "A few minutes later some one came and informed the leader that two of his men had been killed."

A. Oh, now I understand. Yes.

Q. My point is that you were informed.

A. You have got it wrong.

Q. I understand it. Neither you nor I were present then. I want to know whether or not in the course of your inquiry you were informed, rightly or wrongly, that an allegation was made by some persons of the mob that two persons were killed.

A. You ask me! Was that allegation made by the crowd?

Q. At the time in front of the hut of that man?

A. It is after they had attacked the Europeans and after two corporals had been wounded and dragged on to the hut.

Q. That would be before the occurrence at the station?

A. No; after the two men had been ordered to fire, after they had fired the revolvers, these men hearing the noise said: "They were killing our men." It is not before the attack. It is after the attack had taken place.

Q. Therefore you were informed that such a statement was made?

A. I have seen it.

Q. In the course of the inquiry, you did not know that any such allegation was made?

A. No such allegation was made.

Q. You know that this was made at the hut where those persons had taken shelter?

A. I remember after your reading from it.

Q. What was the interpretation of that?

A. The crowd attacked the Europeans as soon as they arrived and pulled them out of the train. These men were obviously running back to the other part and attacked.

2 December 1919.]

MR. P. MARSDEN.

Q. I won't like to discuss that. There were two soldiers of the Queen's Regiment; they (the Sherbourn family) were taken to the hut by these soldiers; then the train steamed into the station; what was happening in front of the hut had nothing to do with that at the station. Therefore the soldiers that were attacked when they were defending the Sherbourn family were not the soldiers that were at the station.

A. They were also attacked; they were also stoned. Afterwards three soldiers got into the train and then the train moved into the platform.

Q. Now in the course of the inquiry, it was proved that except these two soldiers, none of the other soldiers had any arms with them; that was the Government case. None had either revolvers or guns or anything of that sort?

A. No.

Q. When proclaiming Martial Law by holding a Durbar in Kasur, you were also there, and therefore under your orders the arrest was made of Dhanpat Rai?

A. Not under my orders; I know he was arrested.

Q. Did you deliver any speech on the occasion?

A. No.

Q. You said nothing about the pleaders or anything of that sort?

A. No, I said nothing.

Q. Is Dhanpat Rai not the leader of the Bar there?

A. No.

Q. What is his age please? Between 60 and 70?

A. I should have thought he was bordering on 60; I do not know.

Q. To your knowledge, was any information given to Colonel McRae by Mr. Mitter or by the Deputy Superintendent of Police of Kasur about Dhanpat Rai as having taken part in the riot or being present at the murder?

A. I do not think so.

Q. I say at that time when Dhanpat Rai was arrested, there was no information against him of having committed any offence on the 12th?

A. No, not on the 12th; I think it was on the 11th.

Q. So far as your information goes, the arrest of Dhanpat Rai was not due to any action on his part on the 12th?

A. No.

Q. Now, who was responsible for his arrest, you or Colonel McRae or somebody else?

A. I should say the Commissioner was responsible; he had sent orders that he should be arrested and removed.

Q. He was arrested because he had taken part in the hartal on the 11th?

A. No; the Commissioner had knowledge of this man's past career, that he was leading an agitation there and causing trouble.

Q. Has he got a very bad political record?

A. Yes.

Q. As what? As being a criminal or in that he delivered speeches?

A. Not as being a criminal and not only as having delivered speeches.

Q. Only that he was an agitator?

A. Yes.

Q. That was the only accusation?

A. Not only that he was an agitator but the nature of the agitation was very serious. He was known to be a dangerous man. Some years ago his father-in-law was deported to Burma.

Q. Not because his father-in-law was deported?

A. But I am explaining to you that he has himself been in a dangerous position before now.

Q. You remember a Municipal Commissioner was deputed to take down what was said at the meeting of the 11th?

A. Yes.

Q. And the name of that Municipal Commissioner was Rahim Bux.

A. Yes.

Q. And he did submit a report to you?

A. Yes.

Q. Will that be available to us?

A. Yes.

Q. From that report you will find that as a matter of fact so far as the principal speakers were concerned they were trying to pacify the crowd saying that there should be an orderly meeting and saying that there should be a hartal and asking them to fall in line there, and that their speeches were moderate and restraining?

A. That is what he says.

Q. Did you report anything else to the Government or did you report the same thing?

A. I did not accept his report at all because it was given without motive. I questioned him. He said he could not remember a word of what he had heard.

Q. In this statement you say nothing about it. In your letter attached to the report to Government had you said anything else except that the speeches were moderate? I want to know whether in your original report submitted to the Government you said that the meeting was rowdy. I just want to know whether or not you had reported to the Government that the speeches of the majority of them were moderate or that the meeting was a rowdy one?

A. I never said it was a rowdy meeting.

Q. I want to know whether you complained against everyone or against one speaker?

A. I did not complain against anyone.

Q. By complaining I mean that a report was made against them that they were not sufficiently moderate?

A. Yes, that they were not sufficiently moderate. Had they committed any offence we would have proceeded against them and have them tried. I said their speeches were inflammatory.

Q. Is it not a fact that these were the principal men of the town, viz., Maulvi Ghulam Mohi-ud-din, Maulvi Abdul Kadir, Gokal Chand, Uma Dutt, Dhanpat Rai and Seth Mohan Lal. Are not these men the principal men who took part in this meeting?

A. They were the principal men but they were not the leaders of the city.

Q. Was not, according to your information, the speech made by Ghulam Mohi-ud-din very moderate and did he not practically preach that there should be no disorderly crowd and did he not try to pacify the crowd?

A. He told them not to be disorderly and that Mr. Gandhi had advised not to use force. But he did not pacify the crowd.

Q. Neither you were there nor I was there. It is not a matter within the knowledge of either of us.

Is it not a fact that after these men, who were responsible for this political meeting, had left, one Nadir Ali came and gave a speech and incited people?

A. Yes.

Q. Therefore this excitement was created by Nadir Ali and was not in the presence of these men?

A. Five or six of them were just going when he started making his speech.

Q. And at the time this crowd was committing all this mischief and damage at the Railway Station, these men were practically inside the city in the house in which this meeting was being held for having langarkhanas in case the hartal remained for some time?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it your opinion that all these men, when the crowd damaged the station and committed other mischief, were inside the city?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know the name of the man in whose house the meeting was held?

A. Yes, Maulvi Abdul Kadir.

Q. Therefore your opinion was that between 9 and 11 A.M. when this mob was damaging the station and murdering the Europeans, they were holding a meeting in that house, devising langarkhanas in case the hartal was prolonged?

A. Up till about 10 o'clock, when they were informed of the riot.

Q. What is that information? Was that in writing or oral information that Ghulam Mohi-ud-din and Abdul Kadir took part in the rioting and murders?

2 December 1919.]

Mr. P. MARSDEN.

A. You must ask the police about it. I have not got it.

Q. Have you seen it?

A. It was taken in my presence.

Q. Ghulam Mohi-ud-din was arrested. Therefore the information was in your possession that he was leading the mob and took part in all these things?

A. Yes.

Q. Who gave that information? What is that and where is that information?

A. It was available with the Deputy Superintendent of Police. One piece of information I remember given by a trolleyman who in the presence of Ghulam Mohi-ud-din stated that he was inciting the crowd near the Railway Station. Ghulam Mohi-ud-din was allowed to cross-examine him but he failed to shake him.

Q. Anything else?

A. Then I remember one man, an Indian Christian, who said that he had seen Maulvi Ghulam Mohi-ud-din and Maulvi Abdul Kadir at various points during the riots inciting the people.

Q. On what date were these statements recorded and how many days after the riots?

A. Shortly after I arrived.

Q. That is on the 17th or 18th?

A. I should think so. It was about then.

Q. At the same time you were in possession of the fact that Ghulam Mohi-ud-din did help the two Europeans, Mr. and Mrs. Sherbourn?

A. I had. Seeing the position, he did extremely good work. He turned round. Mr. Sherbourn in his statement said that he was under the impression that he had turned round to save his face.

Q. And at least your Deputy Superintendent of Police and your Sub-Divisional Officer, from whom you took over charge, Mr. Mitter, did they support your impression that Ghulam Mohi-ud-din was one of these persons who were inciting the mob?

A. No, they never saw the mob right through. They were at the very end of the tahsil.

Q. They did see the mob that was in front of the tahsil?

A. They did see that mob.

Q. So far as the District Officers were concerned, did they inform you that Ghulam Mohi-ud-din was a man of that type or that he was inciting the mob?

A. No, I don't think they could tell me that he was inciting the mob because they did not know that he was there before. After an hour it was very difficult to see.

Q. Is it not a fact that at least three or four other pleaders did help the authorities on that day in guarding the station and quenching the fire?

A. I do not think that anybody gave any real assistance. Two pleaders were seen helping in putting out the fire. Subsequently they were not seen again. I don't know whether they returned again or ran away. They did not give any real help.

Q. I am not talking of real help. Notwithstanding the fact that you admit that they were extinguishing the fire and that they were so seen, you say they were not seen again. Is it that they were helping the mob?

A. Or they ran away.

Q. Where is the reason for you to suppose that?

A. I said they must have done one of the two things.

Q. Therefore when they were seen extinguishing the fire, that was not a help to the authorities?

A. Not real help.

Q. In making reports or giving their tongas to the authorities?

A. Certainly they lent their tongas.

Q. Were any public meetings held in the month of March in Kasur?

A. None that I know of.

Q. In the month of February?

A. I know of none.

Q. In the month of January?

A. None.

Q. Not even in the month of December 1918?

A. I cannot tell you. You can ask the Deputy Superintendent of Police.

Q. In your statement you say that so far as your knowledge goes no public meeting was held at Kasur from December 1918 to March 1919. You are very emphatic about this and I want to test your knowledge. Were any public meetings held at Kasur from January to April 1919?

A. You can ask Mr. Mitter or the Deputy Superintendent of Police.

Q. Except the one which was held on the 11th?

A. I know of none. I never asked if there was any. There had been one public meeting on the occasion of the peace celebrations.

Q. But the meeting in connection with the peace celebration was not a political meeting?

A. I cannot recollect.

Q. You say that the pleaders are practically responsible for what happened at Kasur. To test that ground of opinion I want to know whether you are aware that any political meeting of the public was held at Kasur, except the one that was held on the 11th or 12th of which you were informed?

A. I do not know of any.

Q. Were you ever informed that any public political meeting was held at Kasur in the year 1918?

A. I don't know at all.

Q. Are you aware up to this time that any political speeches were made by any of these pleaders in the year 1919 or 1918?

A. I am sure that there were. I did not know but I conclude that they did make speeches because people fell into politics.

Q. You have no information?

A. I have no information.

Q. Have you sufficient grounds for coming to that conclusion?

A. I can tell you my grounds.

Q. Your own grounds?

A. I thought you wanted my own grounds.

Q. So far as their speaking was concerned did they make any inflammatory or seditious speech in 1918 or 1919?

A. None except on April the 11th. You mean in Kasur?

Q. Yes, at Kasur?

A. Yes.

Q. Therefore they are responsible?

A. Yes.

Q. The question was as to whether in the year 1918 or 1919 had you any information that these men had ever made any political speech?

A. I never attempted to find out.

Q. Another complaint of yours is against one of these pleaders that he admitted that he had not read the Rowlatt Act; or is it against the majority of them?

A. I believe none of them had.

Q. Have you read General Beynon's Order?

A. I have read some of his orders. Which order do you mean? On the Rowlatt Act?

Q. Not on the Rowlatt Act but about the Martial Law.

A. I have read the original order.

Q. Have you read the Defence of India Act?

A. Yes.

Q. You know its context?

A. I have forgotten it.

Q. What were the two important Acts that were passed between 1908 and 1915?

A. You mean the two Defence of India Acts.

Q. I mean the Amendments of the Penal Code.

A. I cannot tell you the details now.

Q. You know what they were about?

A. Which Acts?

Q. Changes in the recent Amendment of the Penal Code between 1908 and 1915?

A. I recollect no particular changes.

Q. Now I think you will agree with me that in the majority of places at least all over the world, I mean to say in every political agitation, the people take their cue from their leaders. Every one of the rank and file come to the same conclusions. Supposing that a certain view is taken by the political leaders that lead is taken by every body. You will agree with me?

A. I do.

Q. Therefore I think no crime was committed by these Mufassil pleaders living in Kasur where there is no political life?

A. There is political life distinctly at Kasur.

Q. You will not blame them if they adopted the view that was put forward before them by their own press or by their own leaders?

A. It is a foolish irresponsibility.

Q. And your experience of your own country is that every one of the rank and file forms an opinion upon these matters?

A. I do not call the members of the Local Bar Association and political speakers such as Ghulam Mohi-ud-din rank and file. They are leaders and they had been to other places. Two men were very keen on the Congress. One was the President of the Arya Samaj and the Secretary was present. They are by no means rank and file. They are leaders and should be responsible leaders.

Q. Therefore I want to know on what grounds you say that they were leaders of this movement?

A. Because they admitted it.

Q. You base your opinion upon their admission?

A. Yes.

Q. They said the people came to them?

A. They accused the crowd that they had asked them to become leaders of the mob.

Q. There was no kartal on the 6th?

A. Yes.

Q. Now pressure was brought to bear on certain merchants that they should also follow and some of the shop-keepers went to these men and said "let us have a speech." That does not show that they were leaders?

A. But they were, as a matter of fact, at the meetings.

Q. I am prepared to concede that. Therefore you call them leaders because the shop-keepers went to them and they delivered a speech. You call them leaders?

A. Not only the shop-keepers but all the population went to them.

Q. And they delivered some speeches?

A. They asked some of them. Others went of their own accord.

Q. They were not themselves willing to deliver speeches. No public notice was announced but some of them delivered speeches?

A. Yes.

Q. Therefore I would come back to the question that, according to you, in your own country men of this position as were in Kasur, do not rely upon what view is taken by the important papers like "Times" and other papers, that they do not rely upon what view was taken by Mr. Gladstone and other towering personages, but every one of them reads every Act and studies it for himself?

A. They certainly inform other people as in other countries.

Q. I think that the explanation is in the difference in education between India and England?

A. Yes.

Q. Because there there is responsible Government and here there is no responsible Government?

A. That is not so.

Q. Then is it not a fact that all these pleaders, who were arrested and who were never brought to trial, were arrested because the authorities wanted to kill the political life of the whole province and because they had taken a part in the meeting of the 11th, although that meeting was a moderate meeting, but still their sole object was to deliver a speech?

A. Maulvi Ghulam Mohi-ud-din, who was arrested, did not speak at all. The two pleaders were not arrested for that.

Q. I ask you because that is your allegation?

A. If it had been for that, of course, we should have arrested the other pleaders.

Q. Now in many places you have stated that all these things, that were done by the Martial Law authorities, were relished and approved of by the people. Are you still of opinion that all these things, that were done by the Martial Law authorities, were relished and approved of by the inhabitants of Kasur?

A. Obviously at the time.

Q. Now the authorities there, i.e., you, blame the pleaders at Kasur. To your knowledge from November 1918 to April 1919 did they take any steps to meet the false rumours which, according to you, were current there?

A. I think the publicity campaign had started.

Q. And what steps had the Sub-Divisional Officer in charge taken before your going there?

A. I did not go officially. I was on Military duty.

Q. You had nothing to do with the civil administration?

A. No.

Q. Therefore you blame them also for not doing their duty?

A. No. I do not blame them as I was not there.

Q. What did Mr. Mitter, the Deputy Superintendent of Police and the Tahsildar do?

A. They just carried on.

Q. You blame the pleaders as they did not stand up and say that these rumours were false. It was their duty?

A. Because they actually made speeches.

Q. And you have not got any record of their speeches?

A. No.

Q. In answer to a question you have made a statement to Mr. Justice Rankin in which you have specified their irresponsible way of speaking?

A. They all showed irresponsibility. Another speaker said they should invoke help from God and that they must do God's work. There is nothing specific.

Q. In a certain statement to Mr. Justice Rankin you stated that one of them said "Our trust is in God." Then I want to know whether you remember any other statement made by this speaker?

A. Maulvi Ghulam Mohi-ud-din said "Hindus and Mussalmans are all one. Both have one head, two feet, two eyes." As far as I remember he said, "We are all the same and one and should act together."

Q. And you take serious objection to that?

A. Well, at a recent meeting he was careful to say "Christians and Europeans." Whereas in those meetings he simply said "Hindus and Muhammadans" and they thought they were incited to do something.

Q. The crowd was so very intelligent that they understood this?

A. Obviously.

Q. According to you they were so intelligent as to draw inferences or were they splitting arguments?

A. Not splitting arguments. It was mostly speeches which stirred them up.

Q. Anything more serious than this? I think there must be some?

A. I have told you the stories of the two pleaders.

Q. That was the worst they said?

A. I should say that was the worst I heard repeated.

Q. It did not strike you what was the obvious meaning of that sentence?

A. Yes, that was the obvious meaning, that all Hindus and Musalmans were to act together.

Q. You have stated that the military authorities were left to select the villages where they were going to make raids?

A. They were to take whatever steps they thought necessary to stop the rebellion.

Q. Were you, as the civil authority, responsible for supplying them with information, or was it the police authorities headed by you?

A. No, they went there and formed their own conclusions, accompanied by a civil officer to advise them.

Q. I find from the information supplied to us that every one of those raids was based on some information. May I know what that information was?

2 December 1919.]

Mr. P. MARSDEN.

A. I thought you were referring to the mobile column. These villages were quite distinct. The parties to these villages actually went from the forces at Kasur. Whenever the police wished to arrest anybody they merely asked for military aid to accompany them, and as to the information, as usual in criminal cases, someone had given information.

Q. The information upon which more than a dozen raids were organised was given by the police?

A. The information was given to the police.

Q. And the police handed that over to the military?

A. They informed the military that such and such were affected in the village.

Q. Will that information be available to us?

A. The Deputy Superintendent of Police could give you that.

Q. Did that information contain names?

A. Yes, there were names given by accused in the trial.

Q. And the information was reliable information given to the police?

A. Yes.

Q. And that information was taken down in writing?

A. I expect so.

Q. And on the basis of that information a very large number of arrests were made?

A. The people were arrested whom the police wished to arrest.

Q. A large number of arrests were made on the basis of that information?

A. Yes.

Q. And all these arrests were made between 12 at night and 4 or 5 in the morning?

A. Yes.

Q. Fines were imposed on certain villages?

A. Not in my sub-division, I think.

Q. Were any hostages taken from any village?

A. I think some were taken from Patti, but they were not brought to Kasur.

Q. Some villages were raided because the information was that they were very bad and badmashi villages?

A. What do you mean by raided?

Q. I mean a party went there and arrested people because the village had a bad reputation?

A. The movable column moved through tracts where the people were supposed to be bad just to show them our power.

Q. And because the village had a bad reputation therefore people were arrested there?

A. I do not think so.

Q. There was a cage, a thing was made which was described as a cage outside the railway station?

A. Yes.

Q. And at certain times the number inside those cages was 108 or 107 persons arrested?

A. I heard so, but I do not think it was more than 70 or 80, but I am not certain of the figures.

Q. According to your memory there were sometimes at least 80 persons in one cage?

A. Yes.

Q. And that cage was open to the public, it is of bars?

A. Yes, you can see into it.

Q. Were these pleaders who were arrested handcuffed?

A. Yes.

Q. The allegation is that they were handcuffed and passed through the bazar?

A. They were handcuffed and taken from the police station to the railway station when required for the case.

Q. Why was Dhanpat handcuffed?

A. It was a state of rebellion and you had to take very great precautions.

Q. You thought that this man, who was 60 years old and a pleader, would run away?

A. No, but his rescue might have been effected.

Q. What were your reasons for supposing that, on the 16th when you arrested that man, when the military were present, there might be an attempt at rescue? You said he was not an important man?

A. I said he was not the leader of the local Bar; he was an important man.

Q. He was handcuffed because there was a risk of his rescue being attempted?

A. No special reason, the country was in a state of rebellion and prisoners were always handcuffed and taken to the station accompanied by soldiers with drawn bayonets. It would have been folly to do otherwise.

Q. I think as a Civil Magistrate and the civil head of the sub-division it was your duty to see what was the effect of Martial Law and General Beynon's Proclamation?

A. Certainly.

Q. And any duties that were not taken away from you it was your part to see that you did perform those duties?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you study the point as to where the authority was for these military officers to try ordinary cases under the Penal Code? How did you satisfy yourself and why did you allow the military authorities to try offences which came under the Indian Penal Code and which were not covered either by the Act of 1804 or by the Martial Law Proclamation of General Beynon?

A. It never entered my head that he was not empowered.

Q. I think that was a very responsible duty of yours to see how far you had been divested of your civil authority; is it so?

A. Yes.

Q. And you will agree with me that the only thing which could divest you of your civil authority was the Proclamation of General Beynon and the Regulation of 1804?

A. Yes.

Q. Was ever any husband punished when four or five persons were punished on the complaint of a woman?

A. Do you mean a husband punished on the complaint of his wife?

Q. A woman complained of assault and the husband was punished along with others?

A. The only case I heard in connection with a woman was that there were five persons who were drunk and trespassed in a woman's room.

Q. And are you aware that one of them was her own husband?

A. No, I was not aware of that.

Q. You have stated about these school boys, that one of the masters of these schools was a leader in the crowd on the 12th?

A. On the 11th, I said during the processions.

Q. Who gave you that information?

A. I cannot recollect, but there were several statements mentioning him; the Police could tell you. There was no doubt about it, he was dismissed afterwards from the Educational Department.

Q. But so far as I can gather from your statement, at this hartal he was promptly obeyed by everybody at Kasur, the hartal on the 11th? So far as your report goes, you do not say any steps were taken to enforce the hartal?

A. I have stated in my report that pressure was used.

Q. You say there was persuasion used and everybody promptly responded?

A. I think I used the word "mainly."

Q. And the only distinctive example you could give was of this man who was ordered to take off his pugri?

A. The Honorary Magistrate, that was one case.

Q. I think you said the hartal was promptly obeyed?

A. In the main, I think, I said it was promptly obeyed. There were many cases of people not obeying.

Q. Did not the news of Mahatma Gandhi's arrest arrive at Kasur on the 11th?

A. I should say so.

Q. And at about 3 or 4 p.m. on the 11th there was a complete hartal at Kasur?

A. The people mentioned in their speeches at the meeting that Gandhi had been arrested.

Q. At what time was this meeting held?

A. At 5-30 in the afternoon.

2 December 1919.]

Mr. P. MARSDEN.

Q. And what time did the hartal commence ?
 A. I think that night immediately
 Q. And it was practically a complete hartal ?
 A. I believe so.
 Q. Therefore my point was this, there was very little time for threats being used and people being compelled to keep the hartal. The news arrived, there was a meeting at 5-30 and as soon as the meeting was over there was a hartal ?
 A. The meeting was not organised because of the arrest of Mr. Gandhi. I said the news had arrived and it was mentioned in the speeches.
 Q. But there was a complete hartal that night ?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Therefore where was the time for threats being used ?
 A. Because the crowds went round enforcing the hartal that night and the next morning. There was a sweetmeat seller who had remained open, but was compelled to observe the hartal; and there was a big factory which had not closed its shops, but when they saw the crowds coming they complied. That happened in lots of cases.
 Q. Then about these boys. There are three schools at Kasur ?
 A. There are seven schools.
 Q. The boys who were flogged were boys of the Islamia School and which two other schools ?
 A. Of two schools, the Municipal Board High School and the Islamia School.
 Q. Only two schools ?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Did the Head Master of the Islamia School make any complaint ?
 A. No, he did not make any complaint.
 Q. It was only the Head Master of the Municipal Board School who made a complaint ?
 A. Yes.
 Q. And did the Head Master of the Islamia School send in any names to you or to any Military authority ?
 A. No.
 Q. And still the boys of the Islamia School were flogged ?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Therefore the reason given by you would not cover the Islamia School ?
 A. No, it would not cover it.
 Q. May I know why the boys of the Islamia School were flogged ?
 A. Because when we talked to them we came to the conclusion that all the boys of these two schools were still in a disturbed state. We did not call the other schools up.
 Q. You have already informed us that you were not in possession of any evidence as to whether anything was done by any of these boys. At the time that they were flogged you were not in possession of any tangible thing that was done by these boys ?
 A. No, merely what the Head Master of one of the schools said.
 Q. Is the allegation true that there was no complaint and no trouble, that it was supposed that school boys were taking part in politics, and that it was part of the common policy intended to strike terror and make an example that these six or seven boys were selected by the military authorities and flogged ?
 A. No such thing; Colonel McRae knew nothing about local politics of that sort. It was merely because he wished to keep order.
 Q. It may not be a part of local policy; it would be a part of the general policy of the administration of Martial Law ?
 A. No, there was no shadow of such an idea.
 Q. Is Dhanpat Rai President of the Hindu Sabha also ?
 A. I do not know that.
 Q. You have stated that all the male population of Kasur was summoned to you for the purpose of facilitating their identifications ?

A. Yes.
 Q. From what time to what time were they kept there, was it from 8 A.M. to 4 P.M. ?
 A. No, as far as I remember from 8 till about 1-30 or 2.
 Q. Did this happen on one day or on two days ?
 A. It only happened on one day. We had intended to do it on another day but the witnesses did not appear.
 Q. They were summoned for two days but the identification took place on one day ? They were summoned twice ?
 A. They were summoned for one day and the witnesses did not turn up and they were summoned the second day.
 Q. At the time that all the male population was summoned to the station were the houses of any persons searched in the city ?
 A. No, as far as I remember they were not. But parties went into the city to see that they had not remained behind.
 Q. And were the houses of some of the respectable pleaders of Kasur touched ?
 A. On that day ?
 Q. On any day ?
 A. Not on that day, on another day some houses were searched.
 Q. How many ?
 A. About eight.
 Q. Probably to find out the broken pieces of wire or the parts of a telegraph instrument ?
 A. No, they were not people likely to do that.
 Q. To find seditious writings ?
 A. Seditious writings.
 Q. Not with a view to find out any stolen property, any property which had been looted ?
 A. No.
 Q. And what was the evidence in your possession that these people were seditious people ?
 A. Some of them had for a long time back been political suspects and considered to be bad characters. And the others had been very prominent, as I have described, before the disturbances and for that reason these eight people were suspected.
 Q. Now this Booking Clerk, Lala Bhagat Ram, were you present when he was flogged ?
 A. No.
 Q. Do you remember the date of his flogging ?
 A. No, I cannot remember it.
 Q. Do you know that before he was flogged he was repeatedly asked to identify persons and he failed to identify them ?
 A. No.
 Q. Do you know whether up to the date when he was flogged he was ever asked by you or the Military authorities to identify arrested persons or people concerned in the riot ?
 A. Not that I know of. Some Railway officials were occasionally there and they several times told the Railway staff as a whole that they ought to give evidence of what they knew. He may have been one of the Railway staff who was told that. I do not know of him being individually told.
 Q. Railway employees there were reluctant to give any names in the first stages ?
 A. Yes, they did not give any names in the first stages.
 Q. And is it not a fact that this man was flogged during those very days and that any information that was given by Railway servants was given after the flogging of Bhagat Ram ?
 A. No, I believe evidence was given before the flogging.
 Q. Do you remember that he failed to name or identify any persons ?
 A. I do not remember any such thing.
 Q. You mean as soon as he was asked he was willing enough to give out names and information ?
 A. The Railway staff assembled at the identification and identified some people.
 Q. Was Bhagat Ram one of them ?
 A. He must have been.
 Q. And was it before or after the flogging ?

2 December 1919.]

Mr. P. MARSDEN.

A. I believe it was before the flogging; I am not certain on that point.

Q. Now you went to the village Khaira with the Military?

A. No, I don't think I did.

Q. Were you aware that any complaint was made by Bhagal Singh that his cash box was taken away by the party who came to his village?

A. Yes; if that is the village, I was present.

Q. That his property was damaged, his cash box taken away and subsequently returned through the Tahsildar with Rs. 250?

A. Yes.

Q. And this property was taken away by the soldiers?

A. Yes, one soldier was found to have stolen it.

Q. And this Bhagal Singh of Khaira was arrested and kept in the lock-up for 18 days?

A. I believe there was a man from there arrested. I cannot remember if he was kept for 18 days.

Q. Was he ever brought to trial and punished?

A. I do not know. The soldier who stole this was punished and dismissed from the Army as far as I remember.

Q. The saluting order was introduced in these villages?

A. There was no definite order.

Q. It was insisted on?

A. It was insisted on by officers.

Q. Although no such Martial Law order was issued?

A. No there was no Martial Law order.

Q. And the people were punished for not saluting, the villagers of Kasur?

A. I did not see any example of anybody being punished for not salaaming.

Q. Were people punished, I do not say prosecuted and convicted, who by mistake did not salute?

A. I know of no such cases.

Q. And was any proclamation made that now that Martial Law has been introduced the people should salute every officer?

A. I think the people very soon understood it; they naturally would know.

Q. Your village is very advanced; as soon as Martial Law is introduced the people would understand that it is necessary for them to salute every officer?

A. I should be very surprised if they did not salute a British officer.

Q. This man who was shot down and was found subsequently to be a deaf man, was that on account of a breach of the Curfew order?

A. The dumb man? No, he was shot down by the soldier because he challenged him and got no answer.

Q. It was a breach of the Curfew order?

A. No, the soldier did it as part of his duty. He was there on duty and this man, after being repeatedly challenged, attempted to make a dash for him as described and so he shot him.

Q. And it was not any breach of the Curfew order?

A. No, solely done by the sentry under suspicious circumstances.

Q. These Martial Law notices were also posted up in Kasur as in Lahore?

A. Yes.

Q. And the grounds of selection of the houses for the notices was that the majority of the pleaders were those who were taking part in the disorders and so their houses were selected?

A. Not only their houses; we put up the notices on public gateways, and so on.

Q. But so far as houses were concerned, were not the houses of pleaders and those politically-minded selected?

A. Not those politically-minded, those concerned in the riots and disturbances.

Q. Were not the majority of pleaders' houses selected?

A. Not a majority, I cannot recollect but all sorts of people were chosen. There were a number of people among them.

Q. Also were the people of Kasur prevented from leaving the village without a permit?

A. Yes.

Q. And did any complaint come to your notice that, although in some cases permits were given by you, they were not honoured by the Military authorities?

A. Yes, I remember one case.

Q. And that one man was punished?

A. I believe there was a man punished. I remember the Military authorities found he had been cheating. He pretended to them that he had not been to anybody else, and they found out afterwards he had been to me all right. There was one some such case.

Q. Before the 16th of April you had nothing to do with recruiting at Kasur?

A. No.

Q. And therefore you have no personal knowledge as to how the recruiting campaign was carried on?

A. No, the Tahsildar could really tell you that; he is giving evidence, I think.

Q. I think you know one Sundar Dass, Kapur, a shop-keeper of Kasur?

A. I do not know him.

Q. Was he punished by the Martial Law authorities for the offence of theft?

A. I do not know.

Q. Was any old man between 60 and 70 years, a shop-keeper of your village, punished by the Martial Law authorities, flogged and sentenced to imprisonment, and as soon as he left the jail he died? Do you remember this incident?

A. No, I never heard of it.

Q. About these fancy punishments were you informed that one person named Kashur Das was made to draw lines with his nose?

A. On paper?

Q. No, on the ground?

A. No, I have not heard of that.

Q. Was any person awarded these fancy punishments for purchasing rice for more than Rs. 4?

A. No, I do not know of that.

Q. Were you informed that some Arya Samajists were arrested because they were Arya Samajis's, at Kasur?

A. Yes, not at Kasur, but at Patti the Arya Samajists, as I have said, had invited Arya Samajist lecturers and there were I believe about five or six Arya Samajists who were arrested because the police said that they had been promoting the disturbances.

Q. Was any evidence produced before you by the police or was that only an allegation of the police?

A. I actually saw the Police Inspector's report.

Q. Was the statement of any witness or the record of their speeches prepared?

A. Yes. He in his unofficial report made a memorandum of the speeches that were delivered.

Q. What is the worst thing that you remember about these lectures?

A. I have mentioned it already. "You can obey the King but you must not obey the King's servants," meaning the Government of India.

Q. That is the worst?

A. That is the worst that I know of.

Q. Anything else?

A. That he had invited them to take the satyagraha vow.

Q. When you say the Civil authorities were not able to check what was being done on the 12th it is not a fact that the Civil authorities were informed very late and practically when they arrived everything was over. So far as the Civil authorities were concerned the first information was given to them when the riot at the station had already finished?

A. It was not all over. The Tahsildar arrived when the mob first of all made their attack on the station buildings. Then he went away and brought the Sub-Divisional Officer; meanwhile the crowd went on doing damage.

Q. The damage was not done when the authorities were present at the station?

A. No.

2 December 1919.]

Mr. P. MARSDEN,

Q. Similarly as to what happened at the Treasury, the Civil authorities arrived, and naturally seeing what was happening, the Sub-Divisional Officer ordered the police to fire on the mob.

A. When you say the Civil authorities were not present the whole of the police, I suppose, are included in the Civil—the whole of the police were present.

Q. But there was no Magistrate present. When he arrived he ordered the police to fire on the mob to disperse them?

A. When he arrived at the place he ordered the police to fire and the mob dispersed and after the dispersing of the mob seven or eight were present.

Q. There was also a Martial Law order promulgated saying that all those persons who were residents of Kasur must return within four days otherwise their property will be confiscated?

A. Yes.

Q. That was promulgated?

A. Yes.

Q. And you raised no objection to that?

A. No, I insisted on that. We wanted all the people who had run away to come back. We wanted them for the purpose of identification.

Q. You had not been able to ascertain the names of any of the outsiders who were present on the 12th?

A. Well, one man who, I think, was hanged. Duni Ram was present and he is really a man of Amritsar. Then there was another man who was identified by Mrs. Sherbourn. He was a Sadhu from Amritsar. These are the two names known to us.

Q. Except these two men there was nobody else?

A. No.

Q. Surely you do not consider this Sadhu to be a political leader of any place?

A. No, not a political leader.

Q. Is it not true that the mob which went to the Railway Station and did damage to the Telegraph Office—when they were going away somebody stood up and harangued them? Therefore from this I infer that the original intention of the mob was not to go and commit murder. They only went there for the purpose of doing damage to the Railway Station and when they were going back somebody harangued them and they came back again?

A. Yes.

Q. The object of the crowd in going to the station was that they thought some trains would be passing with passengers and they would then show the mourning ceremony, that was alleged?

A. Yes.

Q. That is, it might have been their intention to do certain damage to the Railway Station, but one of their objects would be to demonstrate to the passengers that they were against the Rowlatt Bill, so I take it that they wanted to meet the train?

A. They were going to show them this liberty funeral. They were brought back by that one man. He made a speech through the main entrance.

Q. Have you any record or is it your opinion that practically there were no villagers lying in wait who were concerned in what happened at Kasur?

A. I came to the conclusion that the zamindars as a whole were not affected but only the badmash element in the villages.

Q. Was it your opinion that there were traces of general rising in the villages or that gangs of men were lying in wait outside Kasur?

A. There were traces of it. I did not believe it personally. There was statement to that effect.

Q. Were not permits refused to pleaders, who wanted to go to appear in their cases outside Kasur?

A. Almost everybody was refused for a time. There were certainly some pleaders amongst them. I remember some cases of pleaders, and I remember some pleaders were allowed to go.

Q. On what ground was that restriction made? If a pleader was considered loyal he was allowed to go and if he was an agitator he was not allowed to go?

A. I do not think that was the general idea. Each case was considered on its merits—whether he was a pleader or not.

Q. To-day you have stated that the crowd were saying on the 12th "Angrezi Raj khatm hogaya" (Translation: British rule is finished.) May I know why this did not find a place in your report? You have described the other cries of the crowd, but this one which is rather important has been omitted. What is the reason for that? This expression is very seditious.

A. I have no doubt that they raised some cries there. I remember there were other cries.

Q. Was a villager shot down, when he began to run, by British soldiers?

A. I was informed about that. But he was threatening a soldier with a lathi when he was shot down.

Q. With regard to those persons who remained for a long time under arrest and were not brought to trial, were they too brought on the 1st of May for identification?

A. I think they were all brought. I cannot remember for certain.

Q. Were these people in Lahore or Kasur itself?

A. As far as I remember I asked the prisoners who had been sent to Lahore to be brought back again. We certainly had a large number brought back from Lahore.

Q. What evidence was there before you that those whom you described as riff-raff did this damage at the railway station? Have you got any names of the persons who were present?

A. We have got no such list.

Q. What was the reason why they committed these outrages at the station? You said, because they were excited by the speeches that were given by those pleaders. What evidence is there before you, that as a matter of fact those persons that committed these outrages were present at the lectures that were delivered?

A. There are two reasons. One is obviously a large number of the crowd must have been present and, secondly, the questioning of several accused. The crowd told the man who had made a speech "this is not what you told us yesterday."

Q. The crowd said that was the man who subsequently supplied milk and food to the Sherbourn family?

A. I do not think that was the man.

Q. That was the very man who was ordered to be hanged and on this very ground his sentence was commuted?

A. Yes.

Q. With regard to flogging you said the people outside the station could not see what was happening at the station. The flogging could only be seen from one side of the station. Supposing if any people were present on the other side they would be able to see what was happening?

A. They could have seen but there was nobody there.

Q. What was the last occasion so far as your Sub-Division was concerned on which any violence occurred? I think there was no violence after the 17th or 18th? Is it not so?

A. I think the 18th was the last.

Q. There was one other similar sort of occurrence in the Sub-Division some days later after the 18th.

A. The other occurrence was on the 23rd and after that there was no other occurrence.

Q. Now I want to know, except that a large number of persons were arrested on suspicion and a large number of them flogged and punished under Martial Law, what else did the Martial Law do in your Sub-Division in the matter of bringing about peace and order?

A. The presence of soldiers in the District outside Kasur helped to keep the badmashes in order. There were still a large number of badmashes about here still. There was obviously still danger to be feared.

Q. Now you all were searching villages some time afterwards. There were many rumours to the effect that there were large numbers of badmashes about to rise?

2 December 1919.]

MR. P. MARSDEN.

A. Yes, we found weapons on several occasions in our searches. We found a number of chassis, an instrument which is commonly used by villagers.

Q. I think you will agree with me that there are lots of dacoits, there are lots of badmashes and there are people who are in possession of arms with a license?

A. Yes, it is a criminal offence to have arms without a license.

Q. Further on, I think, you will agree with me that if instead of inflicting the punishments described, you had had recourse to summary procedure and for every offence that was committed you prescribed flogging or shooting, the number of crimes would come down to a large extent? Would there be any reason for the maintenance of Martial Law? And that because there was Martial Law therefore there was a decrease in crime?

A. I did not find that crime had come down. I looked up the statistics and found that it had not diminished. I should say the reason was obviously the people. After they ran riot and attacked every European in the city and burnt down Government buildings and hunted down British soldiers they were mad. The presence of the troops prevented them from showing what they would otherwise have shown. I think it was dangerous to remove Martial Law at a time like that.

Q. That would be a reason for continuing Martial Law even now?

A. I think it would be a reason.

Q. You think it would have been far better if Martial Law had been continued even to this day?

A. I don't think that the people to-day are really of the spirit they should be, i.e., I don't think even now they have respect for Government, for Government officials and for European soldiers.

Q. In your opinion in order to enforce that respect the maintenance of Martial Law is absolutely necessary?

A. I consider that at any moment the situation is dangerous. If anybody were to go to Kasur to-day and advise the people to have hartal, they may rise at any moment.

Q. Even now the situation is the same?

A. I don't say it is the same, but still it is dangerous.

Q. Am I to understand that according to you, you do not approve of any of these political movements?

A. I entirely approve of all political movements, but I do not approve of keeping the crowds unoccupied by hartals. If they are kept unoccupied they are bound to do considerable mischief.

Q. Therefore you are not against political movements, but you are against hartals?

A. Quite so.

Q. Have you heard of hartals ever being practised before on different occasions?

A. Certainly. When war was declared I believe the Raja of Chamba declared hartal in his State.

Q. Further on you find that the hartal is declared on the occasions of deaths of certain important persons?

A. I have not heard of that.

Q. I think you are aware that hartal has been declared in India on various occasions as a sort of protest against grievances that are felt by any class of people?

A. Certainly in this connection I believe it has happened.

Q. Having regard to these facts and the statement which is before us, practically this hartal at Kasur was the effect of pressure that was brought to bear on the merchants at Kasur by dishonouring their hundis by outside merchants?

A. There was practically no hartal on the 6th.

Q. And so far as you know, there were no public meetings from the 1st January up to the 6th April?

A. No.

Q. And all of a sudden these occurrences took place because Mr. Gandhi was arrested on the 11th?

A. I don't say because he was arrested.

Q. That news was spread?

A. Yes.

Q. Therefore what is your reason for supposing that this hartal would have continued for any length of time?

A. Anybody in the Punjab knew that it was to go on indefinitely. There was no reason why it should not go on indefinitely.

Q. Up to what time, do you mean for months and years?

A. Absolutely indefinitely so long as the Anarchical and Revolutionary Crimes Act was in force.

Q. Do you think it would have been to the interest of the shopkeepers to continue it?

A. I think it would have been foolish even from their own point of view.

Q. Notwithstanding that, it would have continued in Kasur?

A. In other places they went on doing it, day after day.

Q. Whatever was effected in Kasur, could not that have been effected only by the aid of the military without having recourse to Martial Law ordinances?

A. No. Martial Law notices enjoined certain things to keep the people quiet and prevent them from committing mischief.

Q. Perhaps I have not made my point clear. Supposing what you say is true, then the only difference would have been that instead of these people having been tried summarily they might have been tried under the Criminal Procedure Code and there would have been no Martial Law ordinances. May I understand that according to you the Martial Law orders which were promulgated in Kasur were effective in maintaining peace and order even with the help of the military?

A. No, I think with the help of the military we could have maintained order.

Q. Therefore if military aid was available, why was there any necessity for proclaiming Martial Law?

A. Martial Law was proclaimed over the whole district. The danger was outside Kasur as well as in Kasur and near to Kasur. As I said, the communications were absolutely cut and things for a time came to a standstill, every head-quarter was being isolated. It was an absolute state of rebellion against Government. Therefore nothing but the declaration of Martial Law could have brought about safety, and I may say that not only Europeans but Indians themselves were getting very much alarmed at the state of things prevailing then.

Q. Now rebellion consisted in the fact which you have stated before us. There may be two opinions whether there was a rebellion or not, but leaving aside the introduction of the word 'rebellion,' I want to know what did the introduction of Martial Law notices and the change of procedure bring about?

A. A stable population.

Q. And could you not have achieved that end with the aid of the military?

A. Certainly not. The trials would have dragged on. We would not have had enough force really to investigate cases properly, specially out in the villages.

Q. So practically the whole thing was being done by the police and the military was supplying an escort?

A. That was practically the thing.

Q. The whole investigation was carried on by the police?

A. Yes.

Q. Remands were applied for by the police?

A. Yes.

Q. The arrests were made by the police?

A. Yes, the arrests were made by the police assisted by the military.

Q. Therefore the only duty of the military was to supply an escort?

A. That was not the only duty.

Q. So far as arrests in the investigation of cases were concerned?

A. Yes.

Q. Therefore the only change brought about by the Martial Law was in regard to the procedure in the matter of trials?

A. As regards the trials that was the only change.

2 December 1919.]

Mr. P. MARSDEN.

Q. And instead of having experienced Magistrates, anybody and everybody was appointed to exercise the powers of a first class Magistrate. A large number of persons were authorised to exercise the powers of a first-class Magistrate?

A. What persons?

Q. All the Area Officers and others?

A. There was one officer, the Martial Law administrator in Lahore, who was given the power of a first class Magistrate in that way.

Q. Is it not a fact that the Martial Law order was promulgated only in the city of Kasur and that it was not proclaimed in any other place?

A. As far as I remember, it was proclaimed outside Kasur.

Q. Was it?

A. As far as I remember, but I am not certain. The Tahsildar who will give evidence may be able to tell you that. It was promulgated through him by the military authorities. I believe it was promulgated at all thanas and railway stations and at various other places, as far as I remember.

Q. So far as your sub-division is concerned, it was only at Khem Karan and at Pattu that anything happened?

A. What do you mean by "anything"?

Q. Any disturbance or any wire cutting, any burning of building, etc.?

A. Wire cutting was done at various places. At Kot Radha Kishen stones were thrown at a passing train and wires were cut at various different places.

Q. If I remember rightly, only one or two stones were thrown at a passing train?

A. That is all.

Q. Do you think this has never happened up to this time anywhere in India and does it not happen every month and at every place?

A. It often happens.

Q. Therefore, because during the Martial Law period a stone was thrown at a passing train at Kot Radha Kishen, according to you that was a proof of a state of rebellion?

A. That was one of the things which showed which way the wind was blowing.

Q. So far as Patti is concerned, it was one of the sweepers who went there and instigated certain riff-raffs to loot the station? What happened at Patti?

A. All the towns folk rose, several hundreds of people rose.

Q. What did they do?

A. At Patti they did very much the same thing as they did at Kasur station. They destroyed the telegraph wires and tried to damage the line and damaged the station property.

Q. This was done on what date?

A. That was on the evening of the 12th April.

Q. Therefore I want to know if anything happened after the 18th in your sub-division?

A. Something happened, wire continued to be cut after that date.

Q. You have already informed us that after the 18th there was no wire cutting?

A. You said after the 18th.

Q. After the 18th?

A. The only incident I can remember is that the road from Amritsar to Kasur was tunnelled one day.

Q. You may take it from me that throughout the whole of the Punjab after the 18th or 19th except on the 23rd, no disturbances took place, and there was no cutting wires?

A. That happened between the 10th and 18th.

Q. Therefore I would like to know your reasons why, even supposing Martial Law was necessary in the first stages of the disturbances, it was necessary to continue it after the 20th or 30th April?

A. Because the same causes that had caused these disturbances were still in existence: the Anarchical and Revolutionary Crimes Act were still in existence; Mr. Gandhi was still in existence.

Q. I think the Crimes Act is still in existence, but I have not yet heard that Mr. Gandhi is dead.

A. You have heard me say that the situation is still dangerous for that reason.

Q. In your opinion it would be more advisable to continue Martial Law?

A. I should feel it much safer at Kasur if it had continued there.

Q. I think you are one of those who are strongly of opinion that so far as India is concerned the maintenance of peace and order depends upon the enforcement of Martial Law and the Government should always be ready with strong measures?

A. It should be ready, certainly.

Q. And that the maintenance of peace and order so far as India is concerned would depend on the use of force?

A. Ultimately all authority depends on force.

Q. Of course that proposition I know, but I want to know whether, so far as India is concerned, you are of opinion that the maintenance of peace and order depends upon the use of force and on strong measures with which Government should always be ready?

A. That is the case with every country.

Q. That being the case in every country, have you ever found that Martial Law has been introduced in any other European country under similar circumstances?

A. I did not say that Martial Law is always necessary, but I said that ultimately all authority depends on force.

Q. Are you against or in favour of the Khilafat movement?

A. How do you mean that I am in favour of the Khilafat movement?

(This question was not pursued further.)

Q. Do you know anything about the Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1908?

A. No, nothing specially.

Q. Anything general about it, do you know with what it deals?

A. I really forget what it was.

Q. Being a Magistrate entrusted with the liberties and lives of the Indian public, you don't think that there is anything to blame, in your not knowing, and still you blame the pleaders for not knowing the actual sections of the Rowlatt Act?

A. I had not come to India at that time. When I came to India I accepted the Indian Criminal Law as I found it.

Q. When did you arrive in India?

A. In 1912.

Q. Surely from 1912 up to the time the occurrences took place at Kasur you were exercising the powers of a first class Magistrate?

A. I should accept the Criminal Procedure Code as I found it. I am not a student of Jurisprudence.

Q. Certainly you accepted it as you found it, but how is it that you do not know what were the important amendments that were made between 1908 and 1915 in the Indian Penal Code?

A. I do not quite see the point of your question.

Q. My point is, I want to know what grounds you have for blaming the pleaders and saying that they are not conversant with the provisions of the Rowlatt Act and whether or not, entrusted as you are with the lives and liberties of the Indian people and being a Magistrate of the 1st class, you know the provisions of the Act with which you have to deal every day?

A. Of course I do. As regards the first part of your question, that was obviously a Bill which was very much before the public and what was causing excitement and the pleaders were actually making speeches on it. If I was making a speech on the Criminal Law Amendment Act I should certainly have taken the trouble to acquaint myself with its contents.

Q. Do you think the making of a speech is a more responsible task than trying persons for criminal offences?

2 December 1919.]

Mr. P. MARSDEN.

A. I say that if pleaders are making a statement about law and if these pleaders are going to make out that it is a terrible thing for liberty, naturally people get excited.

Q. You have not any evidence before you that anything was said which was against the provisions of the Rowlatt Act and which was meant for the purpose of inciting the public; rather if I understand you in any way, you said that at least two of them were there and they were trying to pacify the crowd and they advised them that they should not adopt a disorderly attitude.

A. Quite so, I said so.

(The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin asked the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan what the Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1914 was. Pandit Jagat Narayan in reply explained that by the application of the Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1914 seditious meetings and unlawful assemblies could be prohibited.)

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin:—I have not the faintest notion of the Criminal Law Amendment Act.

The Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan:—It is Act XIV of 1908.)

Q. Therefore when you say that you are in favour of political movements, may I know what your idea is, what should the pleaders do if they want to agitate on any matter, because you have described them in your report as seditious and you have called them rebels? I would like to know how you would like them to agitate provided in your opinion they may not be seditious or rebels?

A. I should say that those who are interested should meet together in some place and discuss the law and consider it and discuss whatever they want to discuss, and if they want to send a petition to Government, send it.

Q. Is it not general practice that before arresting persons under normal conditions the police investigate the case, collect some evidence and after that the man is arrested, and if they think that in a day or week some more evidence will be available they apply for a remand?

A. Yes, that is the normal procedure.

Q. Rather I think that in 80 per cent. of cases there are no remands?

A. Well, in most important criminal law cases there are usually one or two remands.

Q. I am talking of 80 per cent. of cases?

A. I have never looked up the actual percentage.

Q. Do you think that the application for remands is a normal thing?

A. In big criminal cases it is a normal thing.

Q. When the investigation is to be carried on in different provinces?

A. Well, in any fair sized dacoity case, sometimes it takes the police several months. In the conspiracy case in the Punjab, the Komagata Maru case some years ago, there were numberless remands.

Q. Conspiracy cases?

A. Not only. In big cases the police cannot finish investigations in 15 days sometimes.

Q. Where was the need of keeping that old man who was arrested because he was an agitator for so many days? What further evidence was available?

A. I have already explained that in his case he left Kasur and was at Lahore, and it was really for the Punjab Government to pass orders. There was no actual evidence against him of having committed the riot.

Q. Even in the case of the other pleaders, what further evidence was available?

A. Well, as I said, the actual evidence against them was existing, and until they were released the idea was that they should be tried after 8 days in one case, and in the other case after 15 days. When I found that nobody identified them and when I put all the facts that were available together I thought the evidence was false and so they were released.

By Major General Sir George Barrow—

Q. Mr. Marsden, I see you are an advocate of Martial Law. I will only trouble you by asking you one or two questions about Martial Law. Do you consider that Martial Law, with the military called in to assist the civil power, would have any more than a local effect?

A. Certainly, more than a local effect in the actual place where the military was residing.

Q. If you have military brought in to assist the civil power in a certain place, does that have more than a local effect?

A. Yes, the people in the surrounding places would realise. It would have an effect of course all through the neighbouring districts.

Q. Do you think it would have the same effect as Martial Law?

A. No, not the same effect. Under Martial Law the procedure is much more speedy. In an average criminal case every criminal has got 100 per cent. chances of getting off. Under Martial Law they have to give reasons at once in their defence, so that it is very much harder.

Q. Therefore Martial Law has really a much greater effect than the introduction of the military to assist the civil power?

A. Because they know that the Military officers administer the law.

Q. It therefore has a very wide moral effect?

A. Yes.

Q. I believe it is recognised in all countries that where the Civil Law cannot control the situation Martial Law can be introduced?

A. I believe that is the idea.

Q. Martial Law has been applied not only in India but in other countries as well where a similar state of circumstances arose?

A. I believe it was applied in Ireland, France, and in England too.

Q. You said no disturbances practically occurred after the 19th. Might that be attributed to a certain extent to the fact that Martial Law had been introduced?

A. I think that was the entire reason.

Q. As regards the two Warrant Officers who had been murdered, you said that they lost their heads and fired off two or three rounds without doing any damage. Now that statement can be taken in two ways, either that the act of firing showed that they lost their heads or that having fired they did not hit anybody? Which interpretation do you put on it?

A. I think that when they were actually stoned and when the crowd was threatening them, they became alarmed and fired off either two or three or more rounds, but the crowd were not as a matter of fact at a range close enough, they were about 40 to 60 yards off, and that is why no damage was done.

Q. Why I ask you that question is everybody who has experience of such a situation would believe it a most natural thing for a man to let off two or three rounds at the time?

A. Yes. But I did not mean that they lost their heads for letting off two or three rounds, I meant to say that they were rather too far away.

Q. You say that the soldiers' behaviour was very good as a rule?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have any other instances of breach of discipline beyond that case you stated of a cash box having been stolen?

A. I don't think there were any other cases. I remember one case and that was the only case. I think once a shop-keeper accused a soldier of entering his shop and taking some goods away not at the shop-keeper's prices. An enquiry was held, but the shop-keeper could not identify any one, but I remember no other case at all of a breach of discipline.

Q. Was this soldier who stole the cash box punished?

2 December 1919.]

Mr. P. MAESDEN.

A. I think he was given a long term of imprisonment and dismissed from the army. Colonel McRae will give evidence on that.

Q. As regards these floggings, I would like your opinion whether they are not administered under Civil Law too under similar circumstances?

A. Yes.

Q. But was there any other form of punishment than floggings which could have been as effectively used to meet the situation in the cases to which it was applied?

A. No, that is the most effective.

Q. Was there any other way of punishing instead of flogging which could have been equally effective? If you had to revise Martial Law regulations or administer Martial Law and you wanted to do away with flogging, what form of punishment would you suggest?

A. Well, I think that is the best form of punishment, because it is speedy as well as effective under the circumstances. Of course extremely heavy fines might possibly meet the case.

Q. Of course the class of people to whom flogging was administered, could hardly meet such heavy fines.

A. I think that is the best punishment because it is speedy as well as effective. If you wanted to have a longer punishment, it would be effective, but this is more speedy and I think this is the best under the circumstances.

Q. Is there no other punishment which would be equal to this?

A. Extremely heavy punishments might possibly meet the case. The class of people to whom flogging was given could not pay the fines.

By the Hon'ble Mr. W. F. Rice—

Q. There is just one point which has to be cleared up, though you have been questioned already on it. As far as you know before the crowd murdered the two warrant officers at the railway station, had two men of that crowd in fact been killed?

A. No.

Q. Do you think it likely that the crowd believed that two of their men had been killed?

A. No.

Q. Do you think there is any possible excuse or explanation to be found for the murder in any such rumours?

A. There is absolutely no excuse.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. Do I understand that after the introduction of Martial Law, the Civil authorities continued to work in conjunction with the Military authorities in the various measures that were taken?

A. Yes.

Q. The Military Commander was in sufficient touch with you and he was advised by you in the measures that he took?

A. Yes.

Q. In this report of yours you say "Persons accused in connection with the Kasur and Khem Karan riots were tried by the Special Tribunals at Lahore; and also one man accused of abetting rebellion and of spreading false reports from Khalra in Kasur Sub-Division."

A. Yes.

Q. There was one man who was run in for abetting rebellion and for spreading false reports?

A. Yes.

Q. Was anybody else also run in for the specific offence of rebellion?

A. Yes, I think a large number of the people tried before the Martial Law commission were tried under the rebellion clause.

Q. The charge was rebellion against a good number? The section does not matter.

A. Yes.

Q. People were in a state of rebellion in Kasur?

A. Yes, certainly.

Q. In other words, there was an organized movement to overthrow constituted authority?

A. I conclude that because all the Government buildings were attacked and looted.

Q. You came to that conclusion because there was an organized attempt or movement against constituted authority?

A. Yes, and of course the hartal itself was made to paralyse Government and communications were destroyed.

Q. Outside these disturbances that took place, that is, the burning of the kutcheri and the post office and the cutting of wires, and so on, was there any other evidence before you to make you conclude that there was any conspiracy or organization for that purpose?

A. Not beyond what I mentioned.

Q. There were only these occurrences and from these you concluded that there was an organized movement with that object?

A. I remember near Kasur there was a man who had been suspected of political movement in connection with Afghanistan. Effort was made to arrest him some years ago, but he escaped.

Q. There might be men suspected like that. I am not considering that now. My question related to whether there was any organized movement.

A. None beyond what I mentioned.

Q. Also as regards these rumours, did they relate to a period which was antecedent to the introduction of Martial Law? Some people were run in for spreading false rumours and reports.

A. Where is it mentioned?

Q. It is mentioned in your report (not statement) under the heading 'judicial proceedings.'

A. Yes, one man was accused of that. He was in a village about 25 miles from Kasur.

Q. Was he run in for spreading false reports during the time before the introduction of Martial Law?

A. I think so.

Q. As regards flogging of certain boys, you did not give any reason why they were flogged. There was no complaint from the Head Master of the school about his boys. What was the reason for flogging these boys?

A. The reason was it was understood that all these boys of both schools behaved very badly at the riots. On the 12th all the boys were in the riot. It was understood that all the boys at the M. B. School were still in an uncontrollable state. We also wanted to see in what state the boys of the Islamia School were.

Q. In your report, the reason given for punishing the boys of the M. B. School is that the Head Master complained that the boys were still not obeying his orders?

A. Yes.

Q. There was no such complaint from the other school?

A. No.

Q. Why were they also called and why were they flogged?

A. We called up the two schools and came to the conclusion that they were likely to give trouble.

Q. To prevent them from giving trouble, they were punished?

A. Quite so.

Q. They did not do anything to deserve punishment. It was only to prevent them for the future that you punished them?

A. Yes.

Q. That was the reason why you selected three and flogged them?

A. Not quite that, because, as I say, one school was reporting that the boys were still being insubordinate.

Q. Necessarily it follows that the other school also is in the same position?

A. We knew that the boys of the other school had taken part in the riot, and we wanted to see how they were behaving also.

Q. I understood you to say that there was a general belief in the Punjab that the hartal was going to be made indefinitely. Did I hear you correctly?

A. That was my idea, I was giving that.

Q. Was that belief held by the general people in the Punjab, by officials only or by the public also?

2 December 1919.]

Mr. P. MARSDEN.

A. I think we all knew it and felt that it was going on indefinitely.

Q. Was it indefinite throughout the Punjab?

A. It was never throughout the Punjab. It was going on in these parts where it was going on, South Punjab chiefly.

Q. Are you aware as to the numbers of places where the hartal was observed in the Punjab on the 6th?

A. I cannot tell you the numbers. It was observed in a good number of places.

Q. Was there complaint in places outside the area of Martial Law?

A. Yes.

Q. Did it continue there indefinitely?

A. No; I think the effect of Martial Law in some of the places in the Punjab prevented the hartal continuing elsewhere, because they thought that Martial Law would also come there if they continued the hartal.

Q. Did the hartal of the 6th continue anywhere beyond the 6th?

A. The hartal of the 6th became the hartal of the 7th. There was a hartal again on the 12th.

Q. The hartal stopped after the 6th. Did it continue in other places and for how many days?

A. I have not got the facts, but I know it did continue some time.

Q. It did not exist on the 10th anywhere? So far as the evidence before this committee goes, there was no hartal beyond the 6th except the ones at Lahore and other places?

A. I believe it took place in unaffected areas outside.

Q. In Amritsar it did not go beyond the 6th. I was under that impression. For instance, take these worst places, Ambala for instance? Was there any hartal on the 10th?

A. I think it was there on the 8th, 9th and 10th, but I would not swear to that.

Q. It was from the 6th up to the 10th?

A. Yes, as far as I remember.

Q. When did it stop?

A. I cannot recollect; about the 14th.

Q. My reason is if it had not continued beyond the 15th, it could not have been stopped by Martial Law, because Martial Law had not come before the 15th.

A. I cannot remember actually.

Q. I think perhaps the serious consequences of the hartal at Amritsar had some effect in other places?

A. When the crowd was fired upon in Amritsar, I think it had widespread effect.

Q. You said there was no effect on the 6th?

A. Elsewhere people were very careful.

Q. There was the condition of Martial Law threatening the hartal beyond the 16th. In other places still there was hartal for a longer time?

A. That is what I believe, as far as I remember. I have not come to give evidence on that point.

Q. In answer to General Barrow you have stated that Martial Law was more effective because the procedure was more speedy?

A. Yes.

Q. Does it not mean in other words because Martial Law is striking terror by speedy procedure and by punishments?

A. Yes.

Q. That is the idea?

A. That is part of the idea.

Q. By terrifying people against committing offences?

A. Yes.

Q. You were also asked about Martial Law in other countries and in Ireland?

A. Yes. I should think it happened in all European countries.

Q. When was Martial Law introduced in Ireland? Have you read about it or have you any personal knowledge?

A. I have no personal knowledge.

Q. Were you in Ireland at all at any time?

A. I have never been in Ireland.

Q. And as you do not know the conditions under which Martial Law was introduced in Ireland?

A. I know nothing at all.

Q. You cannot therefore say whether the conditions were the same as those in Punjab?

A. No. I cannot say.

Q. Similarly you do not know anything about the conditions under which Martial Law was introduced in France?

A. No.

Q. The same applies to Germany?

A. Yes.

Q. As regards the railway station incidents, you said that the crowd was at a distance of 40 or 50 yards from the place and therefore they were not hit by revolver shots?

A. Yes.

Q. We have been told that stones reached that distance, i.e., the distance from the crowd to the train?

A. The soldiers were hit by stones possibly. I made a mistake in stating that the distance was 60 yards. It may have been only 35 or 40.

Q. You will agree with me that stone throwing by hand from a body of men will not go the same distance as a bullet from a revolver?

A. No.

Q. So if the stones could go as far as the train, the bullets would also strike the crowd?

A. One man was wounded and I mentioned that.

Q. Was there any gallows erected outside the station at Kasur?

A. Yes, just outside the station.

Q. With the object of hanging people there?

A. With the object of hanging people who committed murders.

Q. That was also to strike terror?

A. Yes. I cannot say what the object was. I only say that would be the effect.

Q. If that was not the object, I do not see why it should have been erected?

A. I think that should be the object, just as you think. I did not give the orders. That would be the effect.

By Mr. Herbert, Government Advocate—

Q. At the time when these happenings took place at Kasur, was there any European official in charge there?

A. There was no European.

Q. You said that you held enquiries into these matters. Did your enquiries satisfy you that the Europeans were attacked there without any provocation whatever?

A. There was no provocation whatever.

Q. Then you were telling us about the cries of the mob at the tahsil?

A. Yes.

Q. Were there cries other than that which you named about British Raj having gone? Will you tell us what other cries were heard?

A. I am not certain, but as far as I remember, I was told that they mentioned Satyapal, the man at Amritsar. I think that was one of the cries that I was told. I do not recollect more, but there were a whole lot of cries.

Q. About whipping, is it an exceptional kind of punishment in normal conditions in the Punjab?

A. Whipping, in itself, is not abnormal so far as Kasur is concerned. I never saw it. It was done with a rope in Military fashion. It was more severe than that with a rattan as is done in jails.

Q. So far as sentences in Kasur are concerned, are they not carried out in public in ordinary times outside the sub-jail?

A. I believe it is so, but I have never seen any whipping done in normal conditions.

Q. Surely it is done there still?

A. I had better not answer that question. The Police will tell you.

Q. Public flogging does not seem to be exceptional in the Punjab?

A. It was not done under Martial Law only.

2 December 1919.]

Mr. P. MARSDEN—concluded—Mr. TARA SINGH NARULA.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. Is there any authority for flogging in the ordinary course in the Punjab other than the Whipping Act which applies to the whole of India? There is no special legislation?

A. No.

Mr. Herbert, Government Advocate:—I might mention that 600 to 700 floggings are meted out in a year in the Punjab.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin:—Cases that come under the Whipping Act?

Mr. Herbert Government Advocate:—Yes.

Mr. TARA SINGH NARULA, Bar-at-Law, Kasur.

By the President—

Q. You are a Barrister, I think at Kasur?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. I think you were resident in Kasur about the time when the riots took place?

A. I was at Kasur on that day.

Q. Up to the 11th, was Kasur absolutely quiet?

A. Yes, up to the 11th, there was absolute quiet.

Q. On the 11th when was the hartal declared?

A. I came to know about it at about 3 P.M.

Q. Was there a meeting held in the evening?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you present at that meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. Who spoke at that meeting?

A. Speeches were made by Messrs. Uma Dutt, Ghulam Mohi-ud-din and Seth Mohan Lal, supported by several other gentlemen.

Q. Were those speeches of an inflammatory nature?

A. I do not think so.

Q. At the end of the meeting was any question put as to whether there should be hartal the next day?

A. Several people asked Ghulam Mohi-ud-din whether there should be hartal the next day. He replied that it was their own business. If anybody wanted to close his shop, he could close it. It was not his business.

Q. That was said by Ghulam Mohi-ud-din?

A. Yes. That was his reply.

Q. Then did he say also anyone was free to do just as he liked?

A. I heard one saying "now that the flatterers have left, let us decide the matter among ourselves."

Q. As you were leaving the meeting, did anyone get on the table?

A. One of them, Nadir Shah, got on the table and he said "now that the flatterers have left, let us decide the matter among ourselves."

Q. Whom did he refer to as flatterers?

A. Probably those who were delivering speeches first.

Q. Was any decision come to afterwards?

A. It was decided to send telegrams to His Excellency the Viceroy about the withdrawal of the Rowlatt Act and perhaps to the Secretary of State for India. Telegrams were arranged to be sent.

Q. Was anything else resolved?

A. Nothing else.

Q. You mention that after these gentlemen left the meeting Nadir Shah got on the table and made certain remarks to the effect that as the flatterers had gone, they should decide among themselves. Was anything resolved?

A. I only heard him say so.

Q. You did not hear the meeting being dissolved?

A. No.

Q. In point of fact, there was hartal on the next day, i.e., the 12th?

A. Yes.

Q. We know that there was a lot of damage done. Were you near the Railway station on that day?

A. No.

Q. Did you go at about 10-30?

A. Yes.

Q. You were not there when the disturbances took place?

A. I reached the station after the disturbances.

Q. About what time did you get there?

A. About say 10-30.

Q. Did a wounded man meet you on the way?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was that?

A. I cannot say.

Q. What was he?

A. He was on a charpoy and was carried away by people.

Q. When you reached the Railway Station, were you put in charge of a wounded English gentleman?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was that gentleman?

A. I do not know.

Q. When you were in charge of that gentleman, did anyone make any attempt to attack him?

A. Some 10 or 12 persons came armed with dangs. They wanted to kill him. But on my telling and threatening them that it was no use they went away.

Q. I think about this time the post office was put on fire?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you do when you saw that?

A. When I was there the Assistant Surgeon was coming and a constable came there also. At that time I left them and I went to see the Sub-Divisional Officer who had gone to Court. There I met the Sub-Divisional Officer and came back. We learnt that the Post Office was on fire. Then we were told that the mob was going toward the Mission House. The Sub-Divisional Officer asked me to get my tonga and I got my tonga.

Q. Did you learn then that the ladies and girls of the Mission House had come to the District Superintendent of Police's house?

A. After taking my tonga, I went there and the ladies had been removed from the Mission House.

Q. Were you then asked to go and disperse the mob?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you go towards the Munsif's Court?

A. Yes, with the Tahsildar and two constables.

Q. Did you try to persuade the people to go away?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the effect of your persuasion?

A. I saw some people whom I persuaded still going forward; and several people who were afraid of us concealed themselves in the fields, etc. No body would like to go back. When I saw it was of no use, the Naib-Tahsildar and I came back to the District Superintendent of Police and reported the matter.

Q. Did the mob do anything there?

A. At that time they were going from the city towards the Munsif's Court.

Q. They would not be advised by you to go back?

A. No.

Q. Did they set fire to the Munsif's Court?

A. Not in my presence.

Q. After you left, they set it on fire?

A. After we left, they set fire.

Q. Did they also attempt to put the tahsil gate on fire?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you hear orders being given to fire?

A. The Sub-Divisional Officer gave orders to fire.

Q. Did you hear the orders given?

A. Yes.

Q. At the time when orders were given to fire, were the crowd engaged in these acts?

A. The crowd tried to set fire to a chappar and put it before the tahsil gate. Their backs were on our side. We were near the petition-writer's place.

Q. Had the crowd refused to refrain from these acts of lawlessness and violence before the firing?

2 December 1919.]

Mr. TARA SINGH NARULA.

A. The second time that I went with the Sub-Divisional Officer, we did not try to persuade the people, and I do not think it was any use to do so.

Q. It was no use trying ?

A. They were determined.

Q. Were some arrests made on the spot in connection with that incident ?

A. Several arrests were made.

Q. I think you made one yourself ?

A. Yes.

Q. So far as the administration of Martial Law is concerned, have you yourself any cause of complaint ?

A. Martial Law was proclaimed in Kasur on the 16th April. Martial Law means practically the will of the commander. It is better not to meddle with that affair. So I was always at home or in the Court. So I do not know anything or much about Martial Law.

Q. You do not know ?

A. Except in one case when I was engaged for a prosecution. I went and asked Captain Doveton to allow me to appear for the prosecution. He allowed me to do so. He was of course kind. That is the whole thing.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. Was this prosecution before the Military court at Kasur or outside ?

A. At Kasur, at the railway station.

Q. It was a case which had to be defended before the Martial Law court. Did you appear for the prosecution ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Who was prosecuting in that case ? Was it a private prosecution ?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the complaint ?

A. The complaint related, if I mistake not, to an old woman ; her daughter was carried away by some man and of course the charge was "breach of peace."

Q. You actually were present at the railway station on the 12th. When you arrived there is it the case that all the worst incidents had happened ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You say that 10 or 12 persons armed with dangs attacked an English gentleman ?

A. Yes, Sir. He was an English gentleman, who was wounded and who died.

Q. A military man ?

A. Yes.

Q. A Volunteer Officer ?

A. I cannot say.

Q. He had stripes in his arms ?

A. Yes, Sir. I can tell you he died at 4 P.M.

Q. You say they were armed with dangs ? What are dangs ?

A. Long sticks.

Q. Same as lathi ?

A. Same thing.

Q. Later on the same day you were present at the actual firing from the Munsif's Court ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. I do not want to go into details. I gather from what you say as eyewitness that before the time the order was given to fire, the time the police fired the crowd were in a thoroughly rebellious mood and thoroughly deserved the firing ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. It was absolutely necessary to fire ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. They were still persistent in trying to set fire to buildings and in refusing to go away ?

A. After the firing they went away.

Q. Nothing short of firing on them would disperse them ?

A. I think so.

Q. Did they get a good dose of it ?

A. They began to run away.

Q. Was it a good firing or a straggling firing ?

A. Very few shots were fired. They began to run away, and the D. S. P. tried to arrest them, then he gave orders to cease firing.

Q. As far as you could see, did the D. S. P. wait as long as possible before giving orders to fire ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. He exercised all reasonable patience ?

A. Yes, Sir.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. You were appearing on behalf of the old woman ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Her complaint was that her daughter was kidnapped ? What was her complaint ?

A. If you like I will give it in detail.

Q. In full detail. What was her complaint ?

A. That her daughter has been carried away by some man.

Q. Did she give the name of this man ?

A. She did.

Q. How many persons were accused in that case ?

A. I think 11 or 12.

Q. How many were convicted ?

A. Nobody.

Q. And that woman was all alone with her daughter when she was carried away ?

A. I do not think so. There was I think her husband or some other relative was with her. The woman, her daughter and one other person.

Q. Husband ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. The husband did not complain ?

A. It was not her husband ; it was some relative, I think.

Q. I won't trouble with that.

A. Thank you.

Q. Was hurt caused to anybody ? To whom ?

A. I think there were some injuries upon the woman. It was said that her daughter also got injuries.

Q. Where did you file your complaint ?

A. I did not file the complaint.

Q. And you considered it a case of kidnapping or abduction ?

A. I thought so.

Q. Therefore it was not under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code ?

A. She had already filed the complaint.

Q. What was your opinion ?

A. It came under section 107.

Q. Who was appearing on the other side ?

A. Maulvi Ghulam Mohi-ud-din.

Q. At that time he was not arrested ?

A. He was afterwards discharged.

Q. This was all after he was discharged ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Now, you were present at that meeting ; it would be wrong to say that Seth Mohan Lal delivered any inflammatory or inciting speech ?

A. I have already given that opinion. I do not think his speech was inflammatory.

Q. Then, is it a fact that this Uma Dutt and Ghulam Mohi-ud-din in that meeting exhorted the crowd not to use violence or to be disorderly ?

A. Yes ; they did say so.

Q. I believe you were not present in your house during the Martial Law period ?

A. Only in court, or to obey Martial Law orders whenever I was called to the Railway Station.

Q. Therefore the courts were not closed ?

A. No.

Q. I forgot to ask you about something in the case in which you appeared. Where was this woman living when this abduction did take place ? Not at the Railway Station ?

A. No, Sir.

Q. It was inside the city or mohalla ?

A. Somewhere in Kasur Tahsil.

Q. Is it not at the Railway Station ?

2 December 1919.]

Mr. TARA SINGH NARULA.

A. No.

Q. It was in the city ?

A. In some village.

Q. Previous to this, was there any public meeting held in Kasur ? May I know as to whether there was a meeting which was advertised by Seth Mohan Lal whom the shopkeepers asked to deliver a speech—and he delivered it ?

A. I do not think it was advertised by 3 P.M. There was no sign of any hartal being declared. I remember that this meeting was held to keep the mob in order by the leaders.

Q. The hartal was declared in Kasur at 3 P.M. on the 11th ?

A. It may have been earlier.

Q. This meeting was held about 5-30 in the evening and the object of the meeting was to pacify the crowd, that they might not do any disorderly thing ?

A. That is what I think.

Q. There was no hartal previous to this ?

A. No.

Q. And before this, was any public meeting held in Kasur in 1919 ?

A. I do not think so.

Q. You do not think there was any meeting ?

A. No, not to my knowledge.

Q. So far as Seth Mohan Lal, Uma Dutt and Mohi-ud-din are concerned, you did not hear them deliver any speech in 1919 except on that date, the 11th, to the public ?

A. No, Sir.

Q. I think you know them very well ?

A. Certainly.

Q. Are they seditionists or extremists or anarchists ?

A. I cannot tell you of their political views.

Q. I am not talking of political views. Having known them for many years, they being your brother professionals. I want to know what you considered of them.

A. I think Ghulam Mohi-ud-din and Seth Mohan Lal are reasonable men. I know nothing about Uma Dutt, he being a shopkeeper.

Q. So far as Mohi-ud-din and Seth Mohan Lal are concerned, you know they are reasonable men ?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there a great deal of political life in Kasur ?

A. I do not think there is any political life in Kasur.

Q. How many years have you been practising in Kasur ?

A. Since December 1912.

Q. Therefore you have an experience of 7 years. ?

A. Six years.

Q. You belong to what place ?

A. Gujranwala District.

Q. So far as your experience is concerned you can say whether Kasur is a centre of political activity ?

A. No.

Q. And even this hartal is the result of following suit with other places, and so Kasur followed it ?

A. You cannot say that, because if it were universal, the hartal would have been declared on the 6th, but it was declared on the 12th; there are some other reasons.

Q. So, I see even Kasur was not prepared to follow suit, and some pressure was brought to bear upon it ?

A. This was the rumour.

Q. Leaving aside the pleaders, so far as the shopkeepers and other classes are concerned, has there been a great deal of political activity or agitation among these ?

A. No.

Q. Now, I think you know how Martial Law was administered. When you were coming from and going to court, you must have heard of persons known to you being arrested from day to day, from time to time ?

A. I heard a lot; but personal knowledge I have none.

Q. Do you know of the old shopkeeper named Sunder Das in Kasur ?

A. I do not know.

Q. Do you know of any man who was punished by being made to draw lines on the ground with his nose ?

A. No, Sir.

Q. You never heard of any fancy punishment that was awarded to any of the persons ?

A. No, Sir.

Q. You never heard of any persons being shot ?

A. I heard it; I heard there were 4, but afterwards I found out it was only one.

Q. Do you consider your clerk or munshi to be a man who dabbles in sedition ?

A. No.

Q. There are no munshis or clerks who are seditionists and who propagate sedition ?

A. I do not think so.

Q. Therefore, if Martial Law is promulgated on the ground that the munshis and clerks and pleaders and barristers are seditionists and they propagate sedition, that would not be correct so far as your knowledge goes ?

A. I do not remember the exact words of the order; but there is the order.

Q. So far as your knowledge goes that order was not based on correct information ?

A. I think Martial Law was necessary in Kasur.

Q. There you are wrong; the order was also promulgated in Kasur ?

A. Afterwards.

Q. So far as Kasur is concerned, that will not be correct to the best of your knowledge ?

A. No.

Q. Can you tell us what was the object of promulgating this Martial Law in Kasur ?

A. I do not know; nobody consulted me.

Q. There are many things about which men can form their opinion without being consulted. You being a barrister, you being an educated man, you must have formed some opinion as to what was the object of Martial Law being proclaimed ?

A. I thought it is best to keep quiet, because there was an order that if anybody gives a false rumour, he will be sent to gaol.

Q. You thought by opening your mouth you would be circulating false rumours ?

A. They might make it a pretence to send me to gaol.

Q. Because you thought that it would be made a pretence to send you to gaol you did not open your mouth ?

A. Yes; I thought it better to keep quiet.

Q. Therefore may I take it that although you are not prepared to give us any opinion about the methods of Martial Law, still it was a fact that it was terrorising all the inhabitants of Kasur ?

A. Yes; it did so.

Q. And practically they were not in their normal condition at the time when this Martial Law was in force ?

A. What do you mean by normal condition ?

Q. That means they were not making complaints or opening their mouths in their conversation with their friends about these things ?

A. There were no orders to restrict that.

Q. There were no orders to form an opinion. You were so cautious that you would not form any opinion; also because you had to close your mouth. You were an exception ?

A. I know nothing about others.

Q. There is nothing to prevent your giving the benefit of your opinion ?

A. I never made one. And I think it is very difficult to make one now.

Q. You never made any opinion ?

A. No.

Q. In your own opinion, there was no hardship under Martial Law in Kasur ?

A. There was hardship.

Q. Were the people quite happy and relishing these things ?

A. I cannot say; I never went to the town. My house is outside.

Q. I am satisfied with that answer. You are a barrister and you have to carry on your business. If you venture out or if you want to go to the Railway Station on behalf of a complainant you would not be afraid of facing Martial Law authority. Further on, you were going to the Court and you must be there from 10-30 to 4-30. You can get all sorts of information and you will be in a position to know what is going on in the city, especially connected with the methods of Martial Law, who were arrested, who were convicted, for what offences they were convicted and so on.

2 December 1919.]

Mr. TARA SINGH NABULA—concluded—Khan Sahib AHMAD KHAN.

A. For the very reason that I did not like to hear the remarks I kept aloof.

Q. You went to the Court? What is your attitude?

A. If anybody wanted to speak about the Martial Law I asked him not to talk anything about it.

Q. There are two ways of remaining in Court; there is a bar room where everybody sits or the open grounds under the shade of big trees where there might be placed half a dozen or 20 tables and the pleaders there form a circle and speak about things good and bad?

A. There was an order that not more than 5 persons should meet at a place.

Q. That is good. The pleaders who were attending the Civil Courts during those days, not more than 5 of them were allowed to sit in one place, in one compound: is that so?

A. I thought it proper not to sit there.

Q. Then did you relish it and were you very happy so far as this Martial Law was concerned?

A. Nobody can be happy under Martial Law.

Q. We are told by Mr. Marsden they were very happy, they relished it and they enjoyed the scenes. Were you also of that opinion?

A. I was not happy at least.

By Mr. Abdul Kadir, Assistant Government Advocate.

Q. Mr. Tara Singh, you have told us about the meeting of the 11th which you say you left when the man named Nadir Shah came to take possession of the platform. Did you or any of the pleaders who were leaving at that time, when he was coming to take possession of the platform and to advise against what the pleaders had been advising, make any effort to regain possession of the platform or ask the people not to listen to an incendiary like him?

A. No.

Q. He was the same man who was afterwards convicted and sentenced to death?

A. I think so.

Q. You have told something about the rumours of pressure from outsiders; was that pressure from Amritsar?

A. Amritsar and Delhi.

Q. Talking of your experience of Martial Law, you stated that the only experience was that you were once allowed to appear before a Martial Law Court on behalf of the prosecution. You mentioned one thing more, in your written statement, viz., you had easily obtained passes.

A. Whenever I required passes I posted a letter and I always got a reply by a messenger.

Khan Sahib AHMAD KHAN, Deputy Superintendent of Police, Kasur.

By the President—

Q. You are Deputy Superintendent of Police at Kasur?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. On the 11th of April, was a hartal held there?

A. Yes.

Q. What in your opinion was the cause of that hartal?

A. Pressure on the traders from outside; that was the chief reason of the hartal.

Q. What do you mean by outside?

A. Amritsar and Lahore and other places.

Q. What was the sort of pressure that was brought to bear upon them?

A. They boycotted them.

Q. I think you learnt about the hartal that was taking place when you were at Ganda Singhwala?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And you returned to Kasur at about 4-30 on the 11th?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Was there a large crowd in the town at that time?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What was the crowd doing?

A. They were moving about in the various Kots and asking the people to close their shops.

Q. Did they visit all the different places?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What sort of persuasion were they bringing to bear upon the people to close their shops?

A. Their appearance was quite enough for the shop-keepers to close their shops.

Q. Had they anything in their hands?

A. Nothing.

Q. Why do you say "their appearance"?

A. Because a big mob was coming and the shop-keepers thought that if they did not close their shops they might do mischief.

Q. They might destroy their shops?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. On that evening, was there a large collection of people at Hari Har Tank?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. After the meeting, there was a man, Nadir Ali Shah, who addressed the audience? Did you hear him?

A. I had deputed a man to watch the proceedings.

Q. Then you got a report?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. I think there was a hartal again on the 12th?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. In consequence of the state of the town, did you take precautions to guard certain points?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Which points were those?

A. The Mission compound, the honorary magistrate's court, the Thana, Judicial lock-up, Sadr thana and Treasury.

Q. How many constables had you in the city police at the time?

A. 49.

Q. Was that exclusive of certain men somewhere?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. How many were there in those places excluding them?

A. In the city thana, 2 Head constables and 10 constables; Treasury, 1 Head constable and 5 constables; Lock-up, 1 Head constable and 5 constables and S. D. O.'s Court, 4 constables.

Q. Of the 49 constables, were 13 untrained?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Why was that?

A. They were enlisted on account of the formation of police battalions some months before, they had not been given regular training.

Q. Had 12 men to do fixed duties?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What sort of duties they were?

A. For instance, there was one sick prisoner in the hospital and there were 4 men to attend on him and of course there were other persons who were watching the prisoners.

Q. So at the time you had only 25 constables to guard the city police station, the Deputy Commissioner's Office and the police posts in the city?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. On the 12th, did the mob form and visit different places of business?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did that mob do anything?

A. No, Sir.

Q. Not at that time?

2 December 1919.]

Khan Sahib AHMAD KHAN.

- A. Not at that time.
- Q. Its object was to stop business ?
- A. Yes, Sir.
- Q. About what time was the Railway Station attacked ?
- A. About 10.
- Q. Did you see that attack being made upon the Railway Station ?
- A. No, Sir. When I reached the Railway Station, the attack had been finished. Persons were carrying bundles from the train. These people were dispersed.
- Q. The first report you got was as to the indication that the Railway Station had been attacked by the mob and that the lamp room was burnt ?
- A. Yes, Sir.
- Q. On receipt of this information did you go to Mr. Mitter ?
- A. Yes.
- Q. By the time you arrived I think there had been a very serious occurrence ?
- A. Yes.
- Q. Two of the officers were very seriously assaulted ?
- A. Yes.
- Q. Did you see them ?
- A. Yes.
- Q. Was one of them dead at the time ?
- A. One was dead and one was in a bad state. I put a Head constable and Mr. Narula there and sent for the doctor.
- Q. Where they were ?
- A. They were lying outside the Railway Station between the Subordinate's Rest Room and the Third Class Waiting Room.
- Q. In what conditions were they ? I think they were very badly assaulted ?
- A. Yes.
- Q. Were there many marks of injuries upon them ?
- A. Especially on the head.
- Q. What caused those marks, sticks or stones ?
- A. I think sticks.
- Q. Where was the mob at the time when you reached the Railway Station ?
- A. I was attending the Warrant Officers when I received the information that an European Lady and children were in danger. We rushed towards the station and we thought the mob might be there.
- Q. Did you find them in a hut on the Ferozepore Line ?
- A. They were removed to Kot Halim Khan.
- Q. They were removed to Kot Halim Khan. Where is that Kot ?
- A. Further on, on the Ferozepore Line.
- Q. Then you took the Sherbourns. Did you bring them to Kasur ?
- A. I brought them to my house.
- Q. When you arrived at your house, did you learn anything as to what the mob had done ?
- A. The first thing I learnt was that they had intended to assault Mission ladies ; so I got them into my house. There were also Christian girls about 50 in number. Then I learnt that the Post Office had been burnt. The Tahsildar was with us and I sent him with a Sub-Inspector. As smoke was coming out I thought it was the Post Office that had been burnt.
- Q. On learning of these occurrences did you consider the situation very grave ?
- A. Certainly, Sir.
- Q. Was there a risk of general destruction of property and massacre of human lives ?
- A. Yes.
- Q. What steps did you take to check them ?
- A. After guarding Mrs. Sherbourn and the Mission ladies and the Christian girls I took my men to disperse the mob.
- Q. Did you communicate this to the Officer Commanding, Ferozepore ?
- A. Yes, Sir. Mr. Sherbourn took the message.
- Q. To get the military ?
- A. Quite so.
- Q. Was the situation one where it was necessary to have military ?
- A. Yes, we had only a few police.
- Q. How did you arrange for Mr. Sherbourn to take the message ?
- A. He was given a horse, and Indian head dress and my revolver.
- Q. Did you consider it was dangerous for him to carry this communication unless he was disguised ?
- A. Yes. He was sent out of the way through the fields on to the road with a guide.
- Q. Meantime you were with four armed constables and other persons who were unarmed ?
- A. There were other gentlemen, for instance the Sub-Divisional Officer, Honorary Magistrates, Mr. Narula and others.
- Q. You met them at the Treasury ?
- A. Yes, Sir.
- Q. What did you find at the Treasury ?
- A. There we found that the Munsif's Court was on fire and some men were carrying a big chappar towards the Tahsil Gate to set fire to it to effect an entry.
- Q. Chappar. What is that ?
- A. It is made up of reeds ; a kind of thatching.
- Q. Had the mob any other inflammable material ?
- A. No, Sir.
- Q. Did you think that the mob intended to set fire to the Tahsil ?
- A. Certainly, Sir.
- Q. When you arrived you found that efforts had been made to drive the mob back ?
- A. Yes, Sir.
- Q. What was the attitude of the crowd ?
- A. They were bent upon mischief.
- Q. Were the crowd throwing anything ?
- A. Not at that time.
- Q. Did you learn that your Sub-Inspector had fired some shots ?
- A. I heard on my way.
- Q. Had these shots been fired at the crowd or over the heads of the crowd ? So far as you know no damage was done ?
- A. No.
- Q. When you reached this place did you warn the crowd ?
- A. Yes, Sir.
- Q. How many people were in this crowd who were doing this damage ?
- A. I would say 1,000 to 1,500.
- Q. Had your warning any effect upon them ?
- A. No, Sir.
- Q. After warning the crowd what action did you take ?
- A. I asked Mr. Mitter if he had any objection to firing. He had none, so I told my men to be ready and fire. I also told the Sub-Inspector who was on the roof to fire at the same time.
- Q. How many shots were fired ?
- A. 57.
- Q. What effect had firing ?
- A. It dispersed the mob.
- Q. The fire took place between one and two ?
- A. One and two, Sir.
- Q. How many casualties were caused ?
- A. One was found dead on the spot and three wounded. But subsequently we found that three others also died at home and in all 14 men were arrested. That is what we discovered.
- Q. About 3 P.M. Colonel McRae arrived with his men at Kasur ?
- A. Yes, Sir.
- Q. Your house is about a mile from the Station ?
- A. Yes, Sir.
- Q. And you had placed Mrs. Sherbourn and children in your house before you had gone ?
- A. Yes, Sir.
- Q. Did you investigate into who had committed these crimes on that day ?
- A. Yes, Sir.

Khan Sahib ARMAD KHAN.

Q. When did you start the investigation ?
 A. The very day.
 Q. And certain arrests were made on that day ?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. There were no arrests made on the 14th and 15th ?
 A. No, Sir, because we had wired for instructions and we had not received any reply and so we personally went to Lahore and got the instructions.
 Q. You personally went to Lahore ?
 A. Mr. Mitter also.
 Q. After you got the instructions Mr. Marsden appeared at Kasur ?
 A. After we had been to Lahore.
 Q. Then you started the investigation ?
 A. In these two days I had collected the material. I found out the persons who were wounded or were concerned. After return from Lahore I started the arrests on the 16th.
 Q. The investigation involved a certain amount of work ?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Taking down depositions of people before you could arrest them ?
 A. Yes.
 Q. In all 167 people were arrested by you ?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Of these, we have been told, only 75 were tried ?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. Of those tried 25 were discharged and the remaining people were given various punishments ?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. In your statement you say against 92 persons there was not sufficient evidence to warrant their conviction ?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Does this 92 include 75 referred to above ?
 A. No, Sir.
 Q. What does it refer to ?
 A. 92 were the persons who were not sent up for trial because there was not sufficient evidence against them.
 Q. Were you careful in making investigation before arresting any one ?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. You had also to make searches of the houses of the people ?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. How were they made ?
 A. They were made lawfully in the presence of the owner of the house or his representative.
 Q. The Military co-operated with you in maintaining order ?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. Was there any friction between the Military and the Police ?
 A. Not at all, Sir.
 Q. Did you find it easy to get information about people who had been guilty of the various outrages ?
 A. As a matter of fact no private person was willing to give any information.
 Q. How do you account for that ?
 A. Well, this is due to their sympathy with the accused.
 Q. Sympathy or fear ?
 A. I will say sympathy.
 Q. Sympathy ?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. Was that sympathy with the acts of outrages and the murders that were committed ?
 A. In the Manjha specially even if their own relations are killed they always sympathise with the accused. They are won over for certain reasons.
 Q. So far as the mob was concerned, before they started acts of lawlessness, had they received any provocation of any description ?
 A. No, Sir.
 Q. How do you account for the sudden outburst of fury in the Kasur mob ?
 A. From the evidence I found that there were strangers in the mob.

Q. What do you mean by saying that there were strangers in the mob ?
 A. I mean people who did not belong to Kasur. The belief is that they were from Amritsar and after they had formed that liberty funeral they wanted to take it to the Railway Station to show to the passengers. Of course this is what was said and when the mob reached the Railway Station there the mischief was started.
 Q. People, who were responsible for the rioting and the acts of lawlessness, were all villagers or townsmen ?
 A. Mostly townsmen.
 Q. I think you had 167 persons arrested and of all these there were only 40 villagers and 127 townsmen ?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. Out of the 40 villagers there were 30 zamindars who were examined at Kasur on the 14th April ?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. They seemed to have joined the rioters without knowing it to be a pre-concerted scheme ?
 A. Yes, quite so.
 Q. Of the townsmen the great majority was shopkeepers, i.e., 110 shopkeepers and workmen, leaving a balance of 17 persons, mostly belonging to the educated classes ?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. How are the educated classes described by you ?
 A. I have given this detail of the persons who were arrested. They were railway officials, pleaders, munshis and schoolmasters.
 Q. On the 13th April shops were opened and work was resumed ?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. You know about the Khem Karan case ?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. What occurred at Khem Karan ?
 A. After the mob was dispersed at the Kasur Tahsil some of the rioters went to Pattu village and collected about 25 men there and attacked the Khem Karan station.
 Q. Was the station fired or what happened ?
 A. They damaged the telegraph apparatus and carried off the articles of the station staff.
 Q. They stole what they could lay their hands on ?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Who saved the situation at Khem Karan ?
 A. Men in the neighbouring fields. They came up and dispersed the mob.
 Q. Who are these people ? Were they ordinary inhabitants ?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Were there no police in the village ?
 A. There were police in the town. Before the police arrived they had made off.
 Q. The rioters had made off ?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Do you know what occurred at Patti ?
 A. Yes.
 Q. What was that ?
 A. In the Patti town, as a matter of fact, on the 5th of April one Durga Das was called there and he held a meeting and asked the people to observe hartal on the following day, which was done. After that when the incidents of Amritsar and Kasur reached Patti about the evening of the 12th they formed a mob and attacked railway station, goods shed, goods trucks, cut telegraph wires and damaged the railway level crossing gate.
 Q. Who is this Durga Das ?
 A. He is the proprietor of the "Waqf" newspaper.
 Q. That paper was stopped ?
 A. I don't know. He was subsequently arrested and tried.
 (Mr. Herbert, Government Advocate :—It was in the Amritsar Case that he was arrested and tried.)
 Q. You were going to indicate what happened on the 10th at Patti ?
 A. I said, Sir, on the 12th.
 Q. Yes, what happened on the 12th ?
 A. When news of rioting at Kasur and the incidents of Amritsar reached Patti, a mob was formed of several hundred and they attacked the railway goods shed and goods trucks and damaged the railway line and out telegraph wires.

Q. Was serious damage prevented at Patti ?

A. Well, some respectable men and the police arrived soon, and of course no serious damage was done.

Q. What was exactly the damage that was done ?

A. They broke the goods shed and goods trucks and the gate, and I think they also broke the distance signal wire. These are not very serious things.

Q. Did you form any opinion of this serious damage to the railway line at this time ?

A. No.

Q. Did you form any opinion as to what was the cause of all that ?

A. That was an anti-Government movement.

Q. Did it appear to you that they had for the intention of making Government impossible ?

A. Yes, Sir.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. Khan Sahib, do you attribute these outrages of the 12th to the news that arrived from Amritsar or to the news of Mr. Gandhi's arrest ?

A. I would say that the news of Amritsar had the bad effect.

Q. You say that the news of what happened at Kasur started the trouble at Patti ?

A. Also the news of Amritsar occurrences.

Q. Well, as I understand, you had 13 untrained men and 25 trained constables to guard all the important places of the town before this object of going to the railway station of the mob was carried out on that morning. Had it been noticed by any of your pahrawalas ?

A. As a matter of fact pahrawalas were taken off with a view not to go inside the town and not to give the mob any provocation.

Q. Before they got to the railway station, the police noticed them moving to the railway station ?

A. As the mob issued from the Main Kot, a head constable was following them who reported to the sub-inspector that they had formed a liberty funeral, and that they were going to the railway station. Then he was instructed to follow up the mob. On the previous day the mob had visited the station and had done no damage.

Q. You simply directed him to follow up the mob or to take any measures ?

A. A handful of men could not do that.

Q. Were any of your 25 men armed ?

A. They had arms.

Q. In fact they were carrying arms ?

A. No, Sir.

Q. You did not think it necessary to tell him to take some armed men and follow up the mob ?

A. No.

Q. I understand the excuse for going to the railway station was that the mob wanted to show the liberty funeral to the passengers, especially to the Europeans, of these three trains ?

A. I understood they wanted to show to all the passengers and not to Europeans only that Indians had lost liberty.

Q. To Indians as well as to Europeans ?

A. Yes.

Q. Is not the arrival time of these three trains a big event at Kasur ?

A. Yes, they come at the same time.

Q. Assuming that that was the original intention of the mob I presume a good many people might have joined the mob who had no intention of committing all these outrages ?

A. Yes.

Q. If these people had no disloyal or vicious intention have you been able to account for the fact that no effective steps were taken to stop them ?

A. No, Sir.

Q. You tell us that neither from any of the railway officials nor from the public nor from the postal officials you could get help ?

A. No.

Q. Is it that you think that people of Kasur were in a rotten and disaffected condition ?

A. That is my idea.

Q. Apart from that and apart from what they did at the station, you actually saw yourself a mob of between a thousand and two thousand again in front of the Munsiff's Court ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And you saw the order to fire given and the firing take place ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. How long had you been on the spot before the order to fire was given ?

A. Only a few minutes.

Q. From the condition of the mob were they a determined and hostile mob at the time of the firing ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. I see what happened: you did rather better than I thought, one man killed and three wounded, you wounded 14 as well ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. How many policemen fired on that occasion ?

A. I should say about 10.

Q. And do you know for how long they fired ?

A. I think it took about 5 to 10 minutes.

Q. Firing at the mob that was trying to burn down the building ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And what excuse do you give for their killing only one man ?

A. Because these police muskets are not good ones.

Q. Were those rifles that had been bored out? Were they firing buckshot or ball ?

A. Buckshot.

Q. Don't you think it would be a good plan from your experience that the police should be given better rifles, so that when they do have to fire at a murderous mob, they could do so more effectively ?

A. Certainly they should have better arms.

Q. Have you any experience of Military firing on murderous mobs ?

A. No, Sir.

Q. Now then as regards people who were arrested and not brought to trial, there were 32 of those, as I understand ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Is it true that the longest time anybody would be kept was from the 19th of April till the 10th of May ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. That would be the longest time? Is it the case that practically everybody was released, unless he was sent up for trial, by about the 11th of May ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. I understand that a good many were kept for about that length of time, a fortnight to three weeks ?

A. Not a good many,

Q. How many ?

A. As a matter of fact, after hearing from the officers that, unless there was more than one witness, no body should be challaned, and after seeing that in the first batch, although Mrs. Sherbourn had identified one sadhu, her statement was not accepted, then if there was any person identified by one person I allowed him bail on the very day he was identified. I did not put him in the lock-up. So out of these 92 I should say there would be about 30 to 40 men who were in the lock-up for 20 days.

Q. Of the 92 a great many were bailed ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. How many do you suppose were bailed by the police ?

A. I should say between 30 or 40.

Q. Of course there are some offences for which the police cannot give bail ?

2 December 1919.]

Khan Sahib AHMAD KHAN.

A. For the reason that one witness was not considered sufficient to warrant trial, therefore we did not like to keep the men in custody.

Q. But in that case did you release the men altogether or put them on bail?

A. I put them on bail just to secure their attendance in case they were wanted.

Q. Murder is not a bailable offence by the police?

A. No, Sir, it is not.

Q. Supposing a man was suspected of murder and his case depended on one witness, you did not release him but you let him out on bail?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Of course at this time, although the police were acting, you were acting as officers of Martial Law?

A. I think under the ordinary law we are authorised to let a man out on bail even if the offence is non-bailable.

Q. During this time did you carry on under the ordinary law or did you regard yourself as under the officers of the Military Law?

A. No, Sir, I carried on under the ordinary laws.

Q. During the time the cases of those people who were not bailed were being investigated, did you take the usual remands before a magistrate?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. The only other thing I want to trouble you about is this. As I understand during this time there were two sets of Military expeditions from Kasur, one a moveable column to go round and show the power of the Raj and impress the people in that way, and other expeditions, as I understand, that went to places where there were a lot of badmashes or disaffected people for the purpose of visiting those places with a certain amount of punishment?

A. There was one moveable column. Another force went from Kasur. The military with the magistrate and police raided certain villages where we had information that the men were concerned in the riot.

Q. I want to distinguish those cases where, as you say, they raided the villages from the villages through which moveable columns passed merely to impress the people. I will deal with those cases where you say they raided the villages.

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. In those cases did the police have information upon which it was supposed that these villages were particularly bad?

A. We had information against certain persons; I mean before the village was raided.

Q. I want you to explain it. Information against certain persons, and what did you do on getting that information?

A. I consulted the Sub-Divisional Officer and the Officer Commanding, and then a party of Military was arranged with the Magistrate and a Police officer to guide them, and they were sent out to reach the spot early in the morning, to surround the village and to arrest the man.

Q. That is quite all right, that merely means that you arrested the man you wanted to arrest. What did you do in cases of levying fines and taking hostages for subsequent good behaviour? Had that anything to do with you?

A. In certain cases when the Magistrate or the Officer Commanding received information that other persons were concerned, they brought them with them. But the hostages were taken by the moveable column, not by the raiding parties.

Q. As regards the moveable column, did you as head of the police have anything to do with that?

A. Nothing, except that we received certain hostages.

Q. You looked after the hostages after they had been taken?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. How many of those hostages did you keep in Kasur yourself?

A. Three from Khem Karan and three from Sur Singh.

Q. Was anything done to these hostages?

A. They were let off after that.

Q. How long were they detained?

A. The hostages from Khem Karan I should say for two or three days.

Q. That was all?

A. And the Sur Singh people were dangerous badmashes of the shaka, so they were kept for some time.

Q. For how long?

A. I should say for three weeks, and even then when they were let off they had a quarrel with the Daffadar of the Military and they were warned not to molest him, but eventually they killed him.

Q. What happened upon that?

A. The case is going on in Court.

Q. What was the point of taking hostages and keeping them only two or three days?

A. Because after enquiry we found the information given to the moveable column was not correct.

Q. What was the condition of the hostages' liberty?

A. When the moveable column received information that certain persons were concerned in the disturbances they took them as hostages.

Q. Well.

A. From subsequent enquiry we found they were not concerned.

Q. But the hostages had nothing to do with that, they were not the people who were concerned?

A. They were considered then to have been concerned in the outrages.

Q. But you don't call people taken for that reason hostages, do you?

A. That was the idea; that was the order from the Military. Persons who were connected with the disturbances in any way, they should be taken as hostages.

Q. A hostage usually means some one taken from out of the village or other body. Then if that village or other body does not behave, something happens to the hostage or hostages although it may be no fault of theirs. These hostages seem to have been taken because they were suspected persons. Those are not hostages really, are they?

A. It was decided to take them then without any evidence.

Q. That is a very different thing, you were going to arrest them on 'spec'?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. About the officer, Captain Doyton, who acted as Area Officer and tried people in the Summary Court, who presented cases before him, was it the police?

A. The cases we sent of course we presented.

Q. Who else presented cases, the Provost Marshal or who?

A. Some cases he took.

Q. Cases apart from the police and apart from the cases he took, who else was prosecuting cases before him?

A. He himself was dealing with them.

Q. Some one was responsible for sending them up to him?

A. When he received any complaint he dealt with it.

Q. As far as you are concerned, were the ordinary courts, the Honorary Magistrates, or the Deputy Commissioner or any other Magistrate acting during this time for ordinary cases in addition to the Military court?

A. Yes, Sir, they were doing ordinary work.

Q. I do not mean were they assisting in the administration of Martial Law, but were they trying ordinary cases under the Penal Code?

A. Yes, Sir, the cases were being sent to them.

Q. In your case as head of the police how did you discriminate between cases to send to the Military court and cases to send to the ordinary court?

A. I sent those cases to the Military court which I was ordered to send by the Legal Remembrancer. Other cases on account of the seriousness of the offence I sent to the Deputy Inspector-General for orders and to the Legal Remembrancer.

Khan Sahib AHMAD KHAN.

---

Q. And the person who decided whether it should go before Captain Doveton or the ordinary court was the Deputy Inspector-General, except such cases as went up to the Legal Remembrancer?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Who was he?

A. Mr. Tomkins.

Q. You did not exercise your own discretion on that matter?

A. No, Sir.

Q. We have heard of some cases of cheating.

A. I never sent any cases of cheating before the Military court.

PRESENT:

The Hon'ble LORD HUNTER.

The Hon'ble Mr. W. F. RICE, C.S.I., C.I.E., L.C.S.

Major-General Sir GEORGE BARROW, K.C.B., K.C.M.G.

Mr. H. WILLIAMSON, M.B.E., L.F., Secretary.

The Hon'ble Pandit JAGAT NARAYAN.

Sir C. H. SUTALVAD, Kt.

Sardar Sahibzada SULTAN AHMAD KHAN.

Khan Sahib AHMAD KHAN—continued.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. You have given evidence about some outside pressure being brought?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. I would just like to have some more details. There was no evidence of any outside pressure up to the 6th of April?

A. No, Sir.

Q. It was after the 6th?

A. Yes.

Q. Therefore I take it that so far as Kasur is concerned no outside pressure was brought to bear for observing a hartal on the 30th of March or 6th of April?

A. No.

Q. Even after the 6th of April you had only two instances where outside pressure was being brought to bear and these were: one where Sheikh Ghulam Farid of Kasur despatched his articles from Kasur and sent the railway receipt to Abdul Rahim and Karam Ilahi of Lahore refused to accept it, and the other where certain goods were sent by somebody to Amritsar and these goods were not sold?

A. Yes.

Q. Except these two instances you had no tangible evidence about Karachi or Bombay?

A. No, Sir.

Q. There were no letters discovered by you showing whether these two men had been asked by the inhabitants of Kasur to observe a hartal at some future date?

A. No.

Q. So far as the happenings of the 11th are concerned it appears to me that a hartal was observed about 1 or 2 P.M., and bands of men were going about, and it was these men who approached the pleaders and asked them to give some lectures and in consequence a meeting was held at Hari Har tank. It is not true that the pleaders organised the meeting and sent out notices that the meeting should be held?

A. No.

Q. From the papers it appears to me that you had three sources of information as to what happened at this meeting. One was that one Rahim Bakhsh was sent there to report and attend the meeting and probably submitted some report. Another source of information was one Muhammad Din, a Head Constable, and the third source of information was subsequently a Gul Muhammad who was an approver in these cases. So far as this man Gul Muhammad was concerned, it appears to me that his report was that Seth Mohan Lal, Ghulam Muhi-ud-din, M. Abdul Kadir and Gokal Chand all spoke and advised the people to combine and to ask Government for mercy in the matter of the Rowlatt Bill. I am reading this from the statement which he made before?

A. But in his detailed statement before the Magistrate I think he has given more details.

Q. This is what he said about these men?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Further on he says that one Nadir Shah stood on a table and said that the leaders were doing nothing and "we should kill or be killed." Did he report that Nadir Shah said "we should kill or be killed"?

A. The words in his report are hamko apni जान par khelna chahie which means "we should take risks in getting the Rowlatt Bill abrogated."

Q. So far this was the second source of information. With regard to the approver he said that what Nadir Shah said was "that a blunt knife was being dragged against our throats and that we should do nothing which would bring us into bad books with the Government." That was the information?

A. Yes.

Q. Except this, what Nadir Shah said that we should observe a hartal and that the leaders have done their part, and that we should do something, so far as the other speakers were concerned I think they ordered the crowd to be orderly and not to get out of hand. That was the gist of their speeches so far as Muhi-ud-din was concerned?

A. There were some passages which were exciting in my opinion.

Q. The passages referred to us by Mr. Marsden?

A. Yes.

Q. Nothing more?

A. No.

Q. I think you were the head of the police before the 11th of April for more than a year. Before the 11th, I believe, you had no idea that any such thing would happen as did happen in Kasur itself?

A. No.

Q. There was no secret information ever given to you that there was any conspiracy or that any persons were being approached from outside for the purpose of creating any trouble or disturbance?

A. No.

Q. So far as Kasur itself is concerned during the previous six months were there any political public meetings held?

A. No.

Q. Were any public political speeches ever delivered by any of these pleaders?

A. No.

Q. So practically I think there was very little political life in Kasur?

A. Yes.

Q. At what time on the 11th—you as head of the police did you hear of the occurrences that had happened at Amritsar on the 10th—or did you come to know of it on the 12th?

A. At about 2-30 P.M., when I was at Ganda Singhwala.

Q. How far is Ganda Singhwala?

A. About seven miles from Kasur.

Q. And did you also hear of the arrest of Mahatma Gandhi?

A. I do not remember hearing about the arrest of Gandhi. I heard of the incidents in Amritsar.

3 December 1919.]

Khan Sahib AHMAD KHAN.

Q. You say in paragraph 3 of your statement "consequently on the 11th April, when trains from Amritsar and Lahore reached Kasur at 10 A.M. and brought news of incidents which took place there and of the arrest of Mahatma Gandhi the Kasur people started hartal . . ." Is this true?

A. So far as Kasur is concerned. I am talking of my knowledge at Ganda Singhwala. When I heard of the Amritsar incidents I might also have heard other things when I reached Kasur.

Q. Therefore what you state here is correct?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And you say "the acute cause of hartal was pressure of boycott by other cities, but the chronic causes were economic conditions and excitement over the Rowlatt Act"?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. As to outside agency on the 11th and 12th. You practically depend on the basis of the statement of the approver Ghulam Muhammed because he was in the thick of it and knew everything about it. It is said that two men were actually in the mob on the 12th—not only Ghulam Muhammad but Kamal Din and other persons. Do you know that so far as he was aware there were only two persons?

A. If I am not wrong I think there were more than two.

Q. There were only two strangers who were asking the people to keep their shops shut.

A. In his detailed statement he has given a description of several persons whom he calls outside persons.

Q. Therefore he is not correct when he says only two? He has probably made a mistake?

A. Yes.

Q. You have not been able to ascertain their names?

A. No.

Q. Neither have you been able to ascertain their profession?

A. I think they belonged to a theatrical company.

Q. Practically so far as your investigation goes there was no information before you that any political leaders of Amritsar had anything to do with it?

A. No; not political leaders.

Q. Some persons belonging to a theatrical company?

A. Yes.

Q. I will now finish with the part played by Muhi-ud-din on the 11th and 12th so far as you are concerned. You do not think that Ghulam Muhammad was in any way in collusion with Mr. Muhi-ud-din, pleader?

A. No.

Q. And he made a clean breast of everything that he knew?

A. That is my opinion.

Q. Now, this man who was with the mob on the 11th and 12th was practically a leader and was sometimes asking and instigating the people to do certain things?

A. Yes.

Q. But it is nowhere stated that Muhi-ud-din was with the mob when they were asking the people to close their shops?

A. No.

Q. It is nowhere stated that Muhi-ud-din was with the mob who were doing damage to the railway station and assaulting Europeans?

A. No.

Q. He has stated that at the time, "after doing the damage, when we were going away, Muhi-ud-din came to me, caught hold of my arm and said 'what are you doing, it is a very bad thing.' I never listened to him and I went forward." He also says that some advice was given to him by M. Abdul Kadir. How old is this Abdul Kadir?

A. He is a man of about 55 or 60.

Q. So far as the hartal was concerned it came to an end on the 12th and on the 13th April the bazars were opened and work was resumed as usual in Kasur. Therefore there was no hartal on the 13th, 14th and 15th or on any subsequent date?

A. No.

Q. I think there are some railway police at the railway station. There was a Sub-Inspector and constables?

A. Yes.

Q. They did nothing to prevent this crowd from damage?

A. No.

Q. You are also aware that two sons of a pleader were arrested?

A. They were arrested subsequently.

Q. Both of them were sent off and one of the sons who was probably a graduate of Cambridge was arrested?

A. Yes.

Q. He was never brought to trial?

A. No.

Q. The Post Office which was burnt is next door to the police station?

A. Not next door. There is a court room between it and the police station.

Q. About how many paces away?

A. From the police station it would be about a hundred yards.

Q. At least you saw a part of the crowd that was present before the 13th?

A. Yes.

Q. And that crowd was, I think, about one thousand or two thousand strong?

A. Yes. About one thousand or more.

Q. Did you see any of these pleaders or any of those respectable men who were arrested, in that crowd?

A. No.

Q. Even you yourself out of that crowd could not identify more than a dozen persons?

A. Well I identified those persons who were arrested.

Q. You cannot blame the railway clerks at the time when this mob was doing damage to the railway station for not being able to identify a large number of persons. I want to know whether you-as head of the police were able to identify more than a dozen or so persons.

A. My job was quite different to that of railway officials. I was loading and unloading my rifle while they were spectators.

Q. That was, according to your statement, five or six minutes after your arrival. First of all you remonstrated with the crowd, according to your evidence. You asked them to disperse and they refused. On your seeing that the crowd was taking up an obstinate attitude and would not disperse, you fired. Even you as head of the police there and being present—out of this mob of two thousand you were not in a position to identify more than half-a-dozen?

A. No.

Q. Now with regard to the question of identification you made a statement that the people were reluctant to come forward and identify persons.

A. When Martial Law was proclaimed for three days on account of some doubt about procedure nothing was done, so practically no arrests commenced until after the 16th.

Q. Don't you think that the natural explanation of that diffidence was that the people were unwilling to come forward and to say that they were in the crowd lest they should be arrested, because anybody who could give information should be in the crowd, and don't you think that one of the reasons why the people were unwilling to come forward was the proclamation of Martial Law and so they were not willing to come forward and say that they were in the crowd lest they should be arrested?

A. It was one of the reasons.

Q. What I mean to say is this that the sympathy of the public was not with the doings of the crowd, they were not in sympathy with the murders that were committed, but when you spoke of their sympathy you meant that they did not want to get their men hanged?

A. Yes, they did not want their men hanged.

Q. You will agree with me, I think, when I say, that is the feeling all over the province. You are an experienced officer and know that even in ordinary cases there is always reluctance on the part of people generally to come forward and give evidence against their neighbours despite their knowledge of the fact that they are criminals?

A. Yes.

Q. What I mean to say is that that sympathy was not a peculiar sympathy for that occasion, but is a general weakness of the inhabitants of these provinces?

A. It was combined with other reasons also.

Q. You do not attach any importance to their not coming forward to give evidence except that they were unwilling?

A. I attach importance to this fact that when so many outrages took place at various places, not a single man came forward to give evidence. That was the exceptional fact on these cases.

Q. Therefore may I take it that all those witnesses whom you produced before these Commissions were unwilling witnesses or forced witnesses?

A. They were not connected with these things, they were private persons, they were more or less officials.

Q. So may I take it that the conviction of these 60 or 70 persons was absolutely based on the evidence of officials?

A. Mostly.

Q. You did not arrest any persons who were concerned with this riot on the 13th, 14th and 15th because you had some doubt as to the policy of Government and not because you were unable to arrest them?

A. No, I had collected the information in the meantime against certain persons.

Q. There would have been no difficulty in your arresting these men if you were not in doubt?

A. No difficulty at all.

Q. On the 13th, 14th and 15th Mr. Mitter held his court?

A. That I can't say, Sir, because I don't remember whether he held his court or not.

Q. Now some Military officer came to Kasur on the evening or on the night of the 12th?

A. Yes, Sir, at about 3 P.M.

Q. Was any request on the 12th made to the civil authorities to arrest two or three persons and you refused?

A. No such request was made, there was no such talk.

Q. Now about the cage which was erected for the purpose of confining the arrested persons, I find from your papers that sometimes there were 107 persons kept in that cage?

A. Yes.

Q. There was no covering over that cage?

A. It was open on all sides. In the day time they used to take tarpulin from the railway station.

Q. These people remained in that cage for days and days, sometimes there were 60 or 70 persons and sometimes there were 107 or 108?

A. They remained for a few days.

Q. I never said for months, but for a few days they remained?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the arrangement for the ordinary conveniences for these men, was any special arrangement made?

A. I don't follow your question, Sir.

Q. I mean to say, were any sanitary arrangements made?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the arrangement?

A. Latrines were put up.

Q. How many?

A. I think three or four, if not more.

Q. There was one thalli?

A. There were several thallis.

(Lt.-Col. Isomonger:—This question is answered in paragraph 17 of Col. McRae's report.)

Q. I will now ask you about some cases. You were associated with the military authorities in the investigation of certain cases from the 16th April. I am only asking you about investigation of cases?

A. Yes.

Q. The cases which you investigated you used to send on to the Legal Remembrancer and it was he who determined which court should try those cases?

A. Yes.

Q. You had nothing to do with the investigation of those cases which were taken up directly by the military authorities at Kasur?

A. Some cases were investigated by my subordinate staff.

Q. Some, not all?

A. I don't think all.

Q. Those that were not investigated by you, were sent direct to the military authorities, and they decided those cases?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember one temple at Kasur called the Khatrianwalla mandir?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the name of its trustee?

A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know there was a case tried by the military authorities about this mandir?

A. I heard of it.

Q. Do you know that the treasurer and the trustee of this mandir were ordered to hand over Rs. 1,500 to one Jagannath by the Military authorities?

A. I don't remember.

Q. The tenants were asked to pay the rents at once to Jagannath, it is a well known case.

A. I heard about it.

Q. You have also heard about the fact that one Durga Das refused to pay the rent and was fined Rs. 10 and was shoe-beaten?

A. I heard it casually. I don't know it.

Q. Do you know one Bhagat Ram, Booking Clerk, who was sentenced to be flogged?

A. Yes.

Q. For what offence?

A. Unlawful assembly.

Q. May I take it that 7 or 8 of these clerks were consulting in a room on the platform? Do you call that an unlawful assembly?

A. Not on the platform, I think in some quarter, that is what I heard.

Q. Therefore, so far as you know, the unlawful assembly was that these 7 or 8 clerks were sitting either in a room, on the platform or in some railway quarter?

A. I mean outside their quarters.

Q. That was an unlawful assembly? Now, do you know one Mustanchand, Station Master, who was arrested?

A. Yes.

Q. For what offence?

A. They were arrested by the Sub-Divisional Officer in my absence when I was at Lahore.

Q. They were arrested on the 16th, 17th or 18th?

A. They were arrested about the 27th or 28th April.

Q. And Chunilal also, Officiating Station Master, was arrested?

A. Yes.

Q. Mustanchand and Chunilal were never brought to trial?

A. No.

Q. Do you know the case of Sham Din, the train clerk?

A. No.

Q. Was there any circus near the railway station during those days at Kasur?

A. There was none in April, May or June. A circus did come there, but it was some time afterwards.

Q. You don't know anything about Sham Din?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you know one Keshavdas of Kasur?

A. There are many people of that name, so I can't say if I know the particular individual to whom you refer.

Q. Just tax your memory a little please.

A. If you will kindly let me know the incidents, I might be able to say.

3 December 1919.]

Khan Sahib AHMAD KHAN.

Q. Did you hear that one or two persons were made to lie down on all fours and to draw lines with their nose on the floor?

A. I think it came to my hearing, I don't know who the persons were.

Q. You don't remember the names of the persons, but this incident did come to your hearing?

A. Yes.

Q. You were informed that such a thing did happen?

A. Yes.

Q. This was done under the orders of Capt. Doveton, who was the area officer then? And you don't remember the names of the persons who were made to do it?

A. I don't remember their names.

Q. Were you informed, and did it come to your notice as the D. S. P. of Kasur, that certain sadhua were white-washed with quick-lime?

A. Yes.

Q. And they were made to stand in the sun?

A. I don't know so many details, but they were white-washed.

Q. What was the thing with which they were white-washed?

A. Lime.

Q. What sort of lime?

A. That I can't say, but they said chune se kia gaya hai.

By Sir C. H. Setalvad—

Q. Do you know if it is used for white-washing the walls?

A. That I can't say, Sir.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. Were any special officers sent to make any enquiries at Kasur, I mean Mr. Malan and Khan Bahadur Jaffar Khan?

A. Mr. Malan was sent with the moveable column and Khan Bahadur Jaffar Khan was with Thikri Pahra.

Q. On what dates did they arrive?

A. Mr. Malan on the 13th or 14th April. Khan Bahadur Jaffar Khan, I think, came sometime after that.

Q. Did Mr. Malan make any enquiry?

A. No, he was only for the night at Kasur, he did not make any enquiry.

Q. Most probably you and Mr. Mitter made some report to him?

A. We saw him and asked him about our own enquiry.

Q. You did not make any report to him?

A. No.

Q. When Mr. Marsden arrived, did he take your opinion or Mr. Mitter's opinion about the introduction of Martial Law on the 15th?

A. No. It had already been proclaimed in Lahore.

Q. It appears to me that Martial Law in your Sub-Division at Kasur and at Khem Karan, was proclaimed when you say it was proclaimed at Lahore?

A. That I don't know.

Q. It was proclaimed at Khem Karan at 5 P.M. on the 16th April?

A. I know nothing about it.

Q. Therefore may I know, if it was proclaimed at Lahore, what was the need of proclaiming it at Khem Karan?

A. I would say it is the business of the military officers.

Q. You cannot give any reason?

A. I don't think there was any need.

Q. It appears to me that many parties of soldiers and policemen went to different-outlying villages, and that all those expeditions were sent on certain information that was supplied. May I know as to whether you were the person who supplied that information?

A. Yes.

Q. Can we get all the detailed information?

A. Yes.

Q. In that information were the names of persons always given?

A. We had already the names of persons who were suspected of having taken part in the riots, so each day we used to select a village in which that suspect could be found and then make a raid. It was done mostly on my information, and in one or two cases it was done on the statement recorded by the Sub-Divisional Officer.

Q. Therefore, so far as the mention of this information occurs in these orders, may I take it that that was the information that was supplied, and it was only in one or two instances where the statements of the informers were recorded by the Sub-Divisional Officer that raids were made?

A. Quite so.

Q. So far as your information is concerned, did you make a record of it?

A. Yes, it is recorded.

Q. In every case the names of the persons were mentioned?

A. Yes.

Q. May I take it that no one else was arrested who was not mentioned in your list?

A. Some persons who were not mentioned in the list were also arrested. They were arrested on the information given to the Military Officer and the Magistrate at the spot.

Q. Is it not a fact that there was one general information to the effect that there were 12 villages in your Sub-Division which were not loyally disposed and that all those villages were raided?

A. No.

Q. How many were raided?

A. We raided only the villages about which we had information.

Q. But it appears to me that information was supplied to you by informers, and I want to know whether any of these villages was raided or not?

A. Not on account of disaffection.

Q. You were informed on the 11th that the mob did go or intended to go to the railway station?

A. It did go to the railway station.

Q. You were further informed on the 11th that the mob was not a very passive mob. May I know why you did not take any steps to guard the railway station either on the 11th or on the 12th?

A. On the 11th there was no information that the mob was disorderly, and as it passed the railway station on the 11th, no troubles were anticipated. Besides, there were separate police for the railway station.

Q. But you had already heard of what had happened at Amritsar and at Delhi?

A. Yes.

Q. Notwithstanding this fact and having regard to your knowledge of the inhabitants of Kasur, you did not consider it necessary to guard the railway station?

A. I don't think the police were sufficient to guard every place.

Q. Did you send any information to the railway authorities or to the railway police to make any arrangements?—I think it was more important than guarding the house of Deputy Superintendent of Police or the Sub-Divisional Officer because they were not in danger? You did not consider it necessary?

A. No.

Q. Was any attempt made by your police force to defend a post office?

A. No.

Q. Why not?

A. They could not. There was no place for them to take shelter, and if a few men assaulted the mob there was a danger of the thana being looted and the prisoners rescued.

Q. What I don't understand is, according to you, it appears to me that they had no courage at all, they were all cowards, you had only a few constables, you ordered them to fire and the mob dispersed; not only this but different persons were able to make arrests from the mob. Under these circumstances why was not any attempt made to save the post office when it was being burnt, and why did not the constables go and make some show of force?

3 December 1919.]

Khan Sahib AHMAD KHAN.

A. I had only a few constables at the time.
 Q. What was the number?
 A. The number was about 10 to 15 muskets.
 Q. Did you take any explanation from the railway police or from any others as to why they did not do their duty?
 A. It is the duty of the railway police authorities, the railway police are not under the District police.
 Q. You are aware that only one or two men were able to save the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Sherbourn and their children?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Did you make any enquiries as to why no attempt was made?
 A. I think the railway police officials are making enquiries or have made enquiries into the conduct of the railway police. That is my idea.
 Q. It appears to me from these files that there were at the railway station at the time at least 30 persons including the police, the clerks and all the men in the goods shed?
 A. Not at the station, but at the railway quarters.
 Q. Then why was no attempt made by any of them to defend the railway station?
 A. I think they had no courage.
 Q. Or there might be another possible suggestion that they wanted some of the railway property to be destroyed?
 A. It is in evidence that some of the railway officials encouraged the rioters to destroy the property.
 Q. Now I think you know that practically throughout India all sub-divisions are under Indian Magistrates with very few exceptions?
 A. Yes, mostly.
 Q. May I know whether if there had been a European Magistrate in place of Mr. Mitter, he could have done better or whether everything that was possible was done by Mr. Mitter and it was unfortunate that these things happened?
 A. Quite so.
 Q. Had any European D. S. P. been in your place, could he have done anything better?
 A. Nothing I can think of. My idea is his life would have been in danger.
 Q. Do you know on what date judgment was passed in the second supplementary conspiracy case?
 A. 28th of May I believe.
 Q. And the first conspiracy case?
 A. 30th of April. I am talking of Kasur. The first batch was on the 30th April and the second batch on the 28th of May, I believe.
 Q. Mrs. Sherbourn's case?
 A. Mrs. Sherbourn appeared in both cases.
 Q. There was no separate case?
 A. No.
 Q. Therefore in all these cases the judges held that they would not convict on the evidence of one person only?
 A. It was in the first case.
 Q. That of the 30th April?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Were or were not a very large number of persons arrested after the 30th April on only the evidence of one person or statement of only one person?
 A. They were arrested but allowed bail mostly.
 Q. May I take it that between the 30th April and the end of May all those persons who were arrested were allowed on bail, all of them?
 A. Except those against whom there was tangible evidence and it was hoped that further evidence would be obtained.
 Q. Was one Ojagar Singh or Arjan Singh one of your informers?
 A. No.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. There was a procession on the 11th of April?
 A. Yes.
 Q. And it passed off quietly?
 A. Yes.

Q. Did it go to the railway station also?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Have you any information as to the number of people who formed the crowd that day? Was it several thousands?
 A. Several thousands.
 Q. Did any riot or looting take place on that day?
 A. No.
 Q. How do you account for that?
 A. Because there was no intention to cause any damage but only to observe hartal on that day.
 Q. My question is, how do you account for it? Why was there no riot or disturbance but only the observing of hartal or holding a procession?
 A. I think there was no disorderly material in it.
 Q. How do you differentiate that procession and the crowd from the crowd of the 12th? What was the disorderly material on the 12th?
 A. On the 12th I saw some strangers.
 Q. How many strangers were they according to your information? Were they a large body or a small body?
 A. Not a large body.
 Q. About how many?
 A. From what I have come to know from the statement of accused and other persons I think they were about a dozen.
 Q. Were they prominent people or ordinary people? What class of people were they?
 A. They were prominent in taking part and exciting the mob.
 Q. Where did they come from?
 A. Possibly from Amritsar.
 Q. But you have no definite information?
 A. No.
 Q. In all they were about a dozen?
 A. That is my idea.
 Q. Was any of them arrested or identified?
 A. One sadhu was arrested from Amritsar.
 Q. Was he convicted?
 A. No. There was only Mrs. Sherbourn's statement against him.
 Q. Were these strangers seen by anybody to be exciting the crowd by making speeches or other means?
 A. They were taking active part and leading the mob to the railway station.
 Q. What do you mean by active part?
 A. The men of the mob intended to move about only in the kots of the main city and attempts were made by these men to lead the mob to the railway station and at every place they were checked, but eventually after forming the funeral they succeeded.
 Q. The town of Kasur is divided into various divisions called kots?
 A. Yes.
 Q. The distinguishing feature was that these people wanted to remain inside the town in various kots and these people tried to take them to the railway station?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Is that all?
 A. Yes.
 Q. But the procession and the crowd did go to the railway station on the 11th as well and you said these people were not present?
 A. Yes; but they passed through to persuade other kots to observe hartal.
 Q. I quite see that. But you said these strangers took them to the railway station?
 A. Yes.
 Q. On the 11th also the mob did go to the railway station and yet these strangers were not present?
 A. Quite so.
 Q. Why?
 A. At this time on the 12th, they had intended some mischief. That was the reason. They urged the mob to go there, while on the 11th they passed as usual, I mean going this direction and that direction and passing through the city.
 Q. About how long after the arrival of the train at Kasur station did this mob go to the station?

3 December 1919.]

Khan Sahib AHMAD KHAN.

- A. I should say about 10 or 15 minutes.
- Q. And they remained outside the fencing of the station ?
- A. They went inside on the station.
- Q. They were on the platform ?
- A. Yes, on the platform.
- Q. Before the arrival of the train ?
- A. Yes.
- Q. When the train from Ferozepore arrived, were these people there ? From which direction did the train arrive on the platform on the 12th ? Was it from the Ferozepore side ?
- A. Yes.
- Q. And this train stopped far from the station.
- A. It stopped outside the station at the distance signal.
- Q. You say in your statement that they held up the train. What do you mean by saying that the train was held up ?
- A. Because the crowd went in that direction.
- Q. Which direction ?
- A. In the Ferozepore direction, and then they stopped the train.
- Q. Were they on the line ?
- A. Yes, on the line and all over the place.
- Q. Were they on the line in front of the train ?
- A. Yes.
- Q. And then the train started when they were on the line and came to the platform. It is not so ?
- A. Yes, after they had assaulted the Europeans and the Indian passengers had got out.
- Q. The train did not start from this distant signal until the assault on the Europeans had taken place ?
- A. Yes, after the assault on the Europeans had taken place.
- Q. Were Europeans assaulted while they were in the train ?
- A. Of course when the train stopped passengers as usual came out of the train to see what it was.
- Q. The train was still at the distant signal ?
- A. Yes.
- Q. And the crowd went as far as the train. They were very close to the train, I take it ?
- A. Yes.
- Q. They were a few feet away ?
- A. Yes, on all sides.
- Q. They were surrounding the train ?
- A. Yes.
- Q. Did they throw any stones while the train was still standing and passengers were in the train ?
- A. They did throw stones.
- Q. They did throw stones. Was it before anybody came out of the train ?
- A. Some passengers might have come out.
- Q. Then while the train was still standing away from the platform these European passengers came down ?
- A. Yes, except the two warrant officers.
- Q. Those who fired at the mob came out ?
- A. They did not.
- Q. They came out of the train, and then went back into the train ?
- A. No. They did not. European passengers who came out of the train, did not go into the train, but the two warrant officers remained in the train.
- Q. Then the train started ?
- A. Yes.
- Q. Leaving those Europeans who had come out of the train at the distant signal ?
- A. Yes. The Sherbourns went into a hut.
- Q. I am not talking about Mr. Sherbourn, because he got off before that.
- A. No ; after some time.
- Q. Then the train started off ?
- A. Yes.
- Q. And came to the platform ?
- A. Yes.
- Q. Then these two gentlemen who were inside came out ?
- A. Yes ; also Corp. Battson who had also joined them.
- Q. Where was the crowd when the train came to the platform ?
- A. Round the railings.
- Q. They were not on the platform then ?
- A. No.
- Q. They had left the platform ?
- A. Yes.
- Q. Then what was the distance between the train and the crowd ?
- A. At some places it was 30 yards and at some places it was 60 yards. The distance differed.
- Q. Then they came out of the train (these two gentlemen) and fired at the mob ?
- A. They received stones.
- Q. Stones were thrown at them and then they fired ?
- A. Yes.
- Q. And when you got to the kutcheri, you had 4 constables with you ?
- A. Yes, but we had already a Sub-Inspector, a head constable and constables there.
- Q. I want to know whether you had 4 constables with you and they had already about 12 ?
- A. Yes.
- Q. The fire of these 4 people was effective in dispersing the crowd of about 2,000 people ?
- A. Combined with that of the men in the tahsil.
- Q. There were 16 people ?
- A. Yes.
- Q. You have stated that there was practically no political life in Kasur, there had been no meetings and no agitation of any sort before these disturbances took place. Is that so ?
- A. Yes.
- Q. Was there any organisation for waging war against the King ?
- A. No.
- Q. None whatever ?
- A. No.
- Q. Either local or through any outside influence ?
- A. No.
- Q. Then were any people in Kasur run in for waging war against the King ?
- A. No.
- Q. Nobody was run in ?
- A. No.
- Q. Then I want to know a little about those cages near the station. How many were there ?
- A. There was only one cage.
- Q. What was the dimension of the cage ?
- A. About 30 yards by 40 yards.
- Q. Was there any covering on the top ?
- A. Yes ; there was a thatched roof.
- Q. Was it locked up ?
- A. Yes.
- Q. How did the people who were put inside that cage go to the latrine ?
- A. A latrine was also made for them inside.
- Q. At what distance ?
- A. In the same compound. From the seat it would be about 15 yards ?
- Q. Could they go very freely ?
- A. Yes, quite freely ; it was inside.
- Q. Inside that cage ?
- A. Yes, a separate place was set aside with thatti.
- Q. And also washing arrangements were made ?
- A. Yes ; it had good sanitary arrangements and an officer used to see it.
- Q. What is the condition of Kasur now ? Is it in a very unsatisfactory condition ?
- A. No ; I should not say that.
- By Mr. Abdul Kadir, Assistant Government Advocate—
- Q. Khan Sahib, you mentioned about this particular funeral that they started on the 12th at Kasur ?
- A. Yes.
- Q. Have you learnt since that the idea of a funeral of liberty was started by a paper called Waqf at Amritsar which published an illustration or cartoon and several people were taking the funeral of liberty on their shoulders?

A. Yes; this is the paper of the same man Durga Das, who visited Patti.

Q. There is just one thing about this funeral. You said at that time what they gave out was that they were going towards the railway station in order to show this funeral of liberty to the passengers coming by trains at the Kasur Railway Station?

A. Yes.

Q. From that time afterwards are you of opinion that this was their real object or was that simply a pretence to get to the station without molestation by the authorities?

A. It was ostensible show; it was not real.

Q. That is your opinion?

A. Yes.

Q. Just one word more. You mentioned that in the report you got about the speech of that man Nadir Ali, in a portion of it he said the translation of that would be that we should take some risks. I put it to you does it not include 'risks of our lives'?

A. Yes.

Q. You did not make that clear. I think the translation was not the exact translation of the words. You agree that it includes risks of their lives. Therefore what you heard would amount to this "they should be prepared for killing or being killed"?

[ See also p. 206 where further examination of this witness is recorded.]

Mr. R. F. MITTER, Extra Assistant Commissioner, Kasur.

By the President—

Q. You are an Extra Assistant Commissioner?

A. Yes.

Q. On the 12th, did you get information as to a mob that was doing violence?

A. Yes.

Q. About what time was that?

A. About 10 o'clock.

Q. And when you got that information, did you start for the Railway Station?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you accompanied by the Tahsildar and two or three gentlemen who had just come to your house?

A. Yes.

Q. As you were near the Railway Station, did you notice anything that had occurred?

A. Yes.

Q. What was it?

A. Wire cutting was going on.

Q. Who was cutting the wires?

A. Some of the rioters.

Q. That was about 10 o'clock in the morning?

A. Yes.

Q. What were they cutting with?

A. With nippers.

Q. What are these nippers?

A. I think the Telegraph people have them; scissors for cutting.

Q. Had they been taken from the station?

A. I cannot say that.

Q. Did you see any man taking packages?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did the packages come from?

A. They came from the goods shed and also from the passenger shed.

Q. Were these packages the packages obtained by the mob to which they helped themselves?

A. Yes.

Q. When you arrived at the Railway Station what did you do?

A. We tried to disperse them and dispersed them actually, and then attended to the wounded, the two soldiers.

Q. These were the two Warrant Officers?

A. Yes; one was dead and the other was living.

Q. Were there any wounded among the crowd?

A. No; not there.

A. Yes.

Q. That would be the idiomatic sense of that expression?

A. Yes.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. I think you have already stated that you believed Gul Muhammad, the approver?

A. Yes.

Q. He gave you a true story of what happened?

A. Yes.

Q. The story that he gave about the charpoy was he was one of the leaders. A black cloth was spread over the charpoy. The procession started through the bazara. There was a quibble as to whether it should go to the station or to the pleaders' quarters. Eventually the funeral procession went to the station so that the passengers might see and it went to the platform, weeping and wailing. Have you any reason to doubt the statement of this approver?

A. So far as his information went, it might be true. I see from the subsequent act that it was done.

Q. That is your inference?

A. Yes.

Q. I thought it was the accepted conclusion; you never said that it was your inference.

Q. No one was wounded there?

A. No.

Q. Did you get an account from the wounded man as to how he came by the wounds?

A. He was almost unconscious.

Q. The Non-commissioned Officer?

A. Yes; he was dying.

Q. Did you get an account at the time from the people as to how he received the wounds? Did you get it from anyone?

A. That is the account that the Khan Sahib has given.

Q. Then you sent for an Assistant Surgeon?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you go on then to the rescue of Mrs. Sherbourn and her children?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you learn that they were in a critical condition?

A. Yes.

Q. From the attitude of the crowd had you any doubt that their lives were in danger at the time?

A. No; I did not see any crowd when I got to them.

Q. You went to the place where they were and then you returned to your own house?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you then send a messenger to Lahore for Military aid?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you consider that step necessary?

A. Yes.

Q. Was the situation so serious that the Civil authorities were unable to deal with it?

A. Yes.

Q. Why did you send a messenger to Lahore?

A. The wires were cut and trains were not running. It is only 32 miles by road.

Q. The wires had been cut and trains were not running in consequence of the action of the mob?

A. Yes.

Q. After the despatch of the messenger to Lahore, did you go to the Deputy Superintendent of Police's house?

A. Yes.

Q. I think you got word from there that the mob were beginning to plunder or were intending to plunder the Treasury?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you proceed then with the Deputy Superintendent of Police in the direction of the Tahsil?

3 December 1919.]

Mr. R. F. MITTER.

A. Yes.
 Q. When you got there, what did you find as to the situation?
 A. They were burning chairs and setting fire to things.
 Q. Were there any constables on the spot?
 A. Yes.
 Q. How many?
 A. I cannot say. I think he has given you the number.
 Q. Did you endeavour to get the mob to desist from proceeding further?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Were your endeavours successful?
 A. No.
 Q. Were the mob completely out of hand?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Did you give orders to fire on them?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Did you delay as long as you thought it was possible to delay before you fired?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Had the order to fire not been given, what did you think would have happened?
 A. Further destruction of property and possibly murders also.
 Q. The attitude of the crowd was extremely dangerous?
 A. Yes.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. I think on the occasion of this firing one person was killed, and about 4 wounded altogether?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Were there any people who died subsequently?
 A. Two of them.
 Q. Was the firing continued for a length of time?
 A. About 5 minutes in all.
 Q. At all events, was it after the crowd was trying to disperse?
 A. No.
 Q. It was checked?
 A. It began to disperse and we tried to stop it.

By Sir C. H. Setalvad—

Q. How many years were you in Kasur in your official capacity?
 A. In all 8 months.
 Q. Where were you before?
 A. At Dharmasala.
 Q. How far is it from Kasur?
 A. Very far off; about 200 miles.
 Q. At Kasur, before these incidents of April, was there any anti-British or anti-Government feeling?
 A. Not at the time I know of.
 Q. And people were peaceful and law-abiding?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Had you anything to do with recruiting in Kasur?
 A. No, Sir.
 Q. There were certain Darbars held at Kasur by the Lieutenant-Governor about Recruiting and War Loan?
 A. Yes, I was there.
 Q. Kasur has done very well so far as recruiting is concerned?
 A. Yes; and the Lieutenant-Governor had on various occasions complimented Kasur on their recruiting efforts.
 Q. Can you account for the several outbursts in Kasur in April?
 A. I think it was due to the people from Amritsar; that is my opinion. They can very easily be engineered. You have simply to collect a crowd of 5 or 6-people, others will follow, unless there is firing. At the time it was not very difficult to manage.
 Q. You think the trouble arose because of emissaries from Amritsar?
 A. Yes; that is my opinion.
 Q. Have you any tangible evidence of that?
 A. No certain evidence.
 Q. What do you mean by 'no certain evidence'?
 A. That is, we heard they were there; I do not think the Kasur people were capable of doing anything like that.

Q. What I want to know is: What do you mean by 'no certain evidence.' That you have no tangible evidence, that you have only heard?

A. Yes.
 Q. Did you make any investigation to ascertain whether what you heard had any foundation?
 A. I did not make any investigation.
 Q. You grant that a few emissaries come from Amritsar would not be able to create all this outburst in Kasur unless things were there already to help it?
 A. Yes: I think discontent was universal. But they would not have gone in for that kind of thing without some external influence.
 Q. What was the cause of the discontent?
 A. Discontent was universal in India.
 Q. Owing to what reason?
 A. The reasons are a good many, chiefly economic, as I stated. I think the industrial needs of the country have been neglected for a long time.

Q. By whom?
 A. By the Government.
 Q. And people felt that greatly?
 A. Yes, they began to realise the effects of it at any rate.
 Q. And the people were beginning to realise the effects of neglect as regards the industrial development of the country?
 A. Yes.
 Q. The high prices I suppose were also a pre-disposing cause?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Then came the agitation about the Rowlatt Act?
 A. Yes.
 Q. All these causes caused the riot?
 A. The time was ripe for that.
 Q. Before the 10th April, was there any political activity in Kasur? Were there any political meetings at all?
 A. None.
 Q. Why do you say that the Rowlatt agitation was one of the causes, so far as Kasur was concerned if there was no political activity till before the 10th?

A. The Rowlatt Act in my opinion was passed at an inopportune time, as I have said in my statement; people were expecting praises and rewards for their efforts in the War. They thought that it should not be passed at that time; even the sensible and educated people thought that it was not the time for it.

Q. People expected that their War services would be recognised and they felt that this legislation was thrown at them instead.

A. Yes.
 Q. You told us there was no political activity at Kasur, no political meetings at all up to the 10th, and the Rowlatt Act did not visibly affect them. Did it begin on the 10th, this political unrest?

A. The riot does not require much of political life for agitation.

Q. Then what do you think the riot requires?
 A. Only 4 or 5 people collect together and begin doing something, others will follow.

Q. Then according to you, the crowds collected on the spur of the moment without any design beforehand?

A. Yes; and these crowds had no objective to start with.

Q. In your view, there was no design, no conspiracy behind what happened at Kasur?

A. No.

Q. Now, when you went to the station how many people did you find there?

A. About 50 altogether scattered in groups. No more than that.

Q. Was it this mob that has done all this mischief at the station?

A. No; the mob that moved on to the trains, which came to a standstill; and then they divided.

Q. How many rifles had you at the station?

A. Only two rifles

3 December 1919.]

Mr. R. F. MITTER.

Q. And you were with their aid able to disperse the crowd at the station ?

A. Yes.

Q. Now Martial Law was proclaimed on the 15th or 16th ?

A. 16th.

Q. And after that you had nothing to do with the administration of Kasur.

A. I was still there in my original capacity ; as Deputy Magistrate I remained there ; but I was not Sub-Divisional Officer.

Q. What were you doing during the Martial Law ?

A. I was doing my ordinary work, Section 30 work, as Additional District Magistrate.

Q. You were both Additional District Magistrate and Sub-Divisional Officer ?

A. No. I was not Sub-Divisional Officer after the 15th, then Mr. Marsden came, I was only 11 days Sub-Divisional Officer.

Q. It is not your permanent office, you were merely in charge of the office for a short time ?

A. Yes.

Q. Even after the declaration of Martial Law you continued your work as District Magistrate.

A. Yes, Section 30 Magistrate.

Q. And you continued in your office after Martial Law, there was no change in your work ?

A. No.

Q. Did the other courts in Kasur go on working as before ?

A. Yes.

Q. There was no change in their work either on the 11th, 12th or subsequent-dates ?

A. No.

Q. Were you present when the whole town was turned out for the purpose of identification ?

A. Yes.

Q. What date was that ?

A. Mr. Marsden gave the date yesterday.

Q. Somewhere about the 1st May ?

A. Yes.

Q. Who gave the order for the identification parade ?

A. Mr. Marsden and the Military authorities, I believe.

Q. How did you happen to go there ?

A. I was asked to help in the identification of witnesses. All the witnesses had been called to identify if they could.

Q. How many people were present ?

A. The whole town.

Q. How many thousands ?

A. About 15,000 or 20,000 ; women and children were not called.

Q. Children were not called ?

A. Some children were called.

Q. From 12 upwards ?

A. Yes.

Q. Where were they made to assemble ? On the roads leading to the station ?

A. Yes.

Q. Were there 15,000 located near the station ?

A. They were made to sit along the side of the roads leading to the Railway Station.

Q. Must be a very long line on both sides, it must have gone into the city, to accommodate the 20,000.

A. Yes, they were long lines.

Q. When did they first assemble, what time of the day ?

A. Early in the morning, say about 7.

Q. And how long were they kept there ?

A. I came away at 10. I think they dispersed at about 12 o'clock.

Q. You were there till 10 A.M. ?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was done during the period you were there ? You asked them to sit on the ground lining the roads ?

A. Yes, in two lines, sometime three deep.

Q. What process was gone through for identification ?

A. Some were made to pass the witnesses bare-headed.

Q. How many people were there to identify ? I mean who were all the people that were there to identify ?

A. The Sherbourns and some others.

Q. How many ; a dozen or half a dozen ?

A. About 15 altogether.

Q. What was done there ? Did these 15 people pass past the lines looking at those people or were the people made to march past the witnesses ? I want to understand precisely what took place. When the people came there, they were made to sit down in lines, 2 or 3 deep. Where were those who were going to be identified sitting ?

A. They were sitting just midway between the 2 roads. These 2 roads are at an angle to each other.

Q. How far from the station ?

A. They are near the station, 2 or 3 hundred yards from the station.

Q. The lines were towards the town, extending into the town ?

A. Yes.

Q. How were the people made to march through ? How was it done ?

A. One line of men was made to stand up and asked to go past them.

Q. Extending from where ?

A. From the Railway Station ; I took them by sections.

Q. They were made to walk past those people bare-headed ?

A. Yes.

Q. Where were they made to go ?

A. They were allowed to go by some road and sit down again.

Q. You are not sure what was done ?

A. No. I was asking some other witnesses if they could identify, some railway witnesses.

Q. Some witnesses were going between the lines ?

A. Some of the witnesses I took round.

Q. There must have been considerable confusion if some of the witnesses were to go through the lines, other people had to be marched through some other lines. I do not think that day's work led to any result ?

A. So far as I know all this trouble ended in almost nothing.

By the President—

Q. Were any arrests made ?

A. Not so far as I know.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. Were anybody identified ?

A. Yes : Some.

By Sir C. H. Selvad—

Q. Then they must have been arrested ?

A. No, I do not think they were arrested or they might have been arrested and let go a day or two after.

By the Hon'ble Panjit Jagat Narayan—

Q. One of the reasons given by you in your statement for the riot was excess of zeal on the part of some officials, the Tahsildar class and Zaildars in obtaining recruits for War ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. There was some discontent about recruiting for War ?

A. Yes.

Q. This experience of yours is based, not on what happened in Kasur, but in other places ?

A. On my tours in Kasur.

Q. Were not panchayats organised for the purposes of recruitment ?

A. Yes.

Q. These panchayats used to go with the Honorary Magistrates or Municipal Commissioners ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And they would go to different villages and would not come back unless and until they had done some prescribed work.

A. Of that I cannot say.

Q. Are you aware that so far as Kasur was concerned, there was a complaint before Mr. Thornton that 15 or

3 December 1919.]

Mr. R. F. MITTER.

20 men of the labouring classes were recruited and as a result they had come back?

A. Yes; they had come back.

Q. The Tahsildar or the Honorary Magistrate was responsible for these 15 persons?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You know nothing about 1918, so far as Kasur is concerned?

A. No.

Q. Do you know that at the identification parade the people were being marched bare-headed?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you hear of the vagaries of the sentences of the Martial Law authorities. You were there all along.

A. Yes.

Q. You heard what sorts of fancy punishments were being awarded?

A. Yes, I did hear.

Q. You also heard that in many cases, which could be tried under the Indian Penal Code, the Martial Law authorities awarded punishments?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you informed of this temple affair?

A. The temple affair? I did not hear of it.

Q. Did you hear of the nose-rubbing affair?

A. I did.

Q. And were you informed of the white-washing affair?

A. Yes; it was not my business.

Q. You were there as Sub-Divisional Officer and naturally people would come to you and say what had happened?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you informed that sometimes at the time of flogging, prostitutes of the town were called to witness the scene.

A. In one case only.

By the President—

Q. Called by whom?

A. By Captain Doveton.

Q. Do you profess to know it, to your own knowledge?

A. I heard about it.

The President: That was what I wanted to know.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. In your own opinion, was there any conspiracy to wage War against Government?

A. No, Sir..

Q. On the day when these men were collected for the purpose of identification, are you aware that parties were sent to search the houses of respectable people and important citizens to find out whether any persons were kept back inside the house?

A. Parties were sent to make sure that none were in hiding.

By the Hon'ble Mr. W. F. Rice—

Q. Mr. Mitter, were those recruits obtained in the towns or country districts?

A. In the villages.

Q. Was any recruiting done in Kasur town?

A. Some might have come from Kasur.

Q. There was large recruiting in Kasur?

A. No; there could not be.

Q. Did these excess of zeal measures take place in Kasur town, or in villages?

A. Not in the towns.

Q. How then did they cause discontent and rioting in Kasur town?

A. Rioting is a very easy thing to get up if there are some predisposing causes.

Q. This excess of zeal was resented by the inhabitants of the town?

A. Yes; there was some resentment. It was youthful mischief that caused most of the riots.

By the President—

Q. I want to ask you one question: You say there was agitation in the country about the Rowlatt Act. Do I understand that it existed prior to 10th April?

A. Yes.

Q. Were there rumours in circulation as to the effect of the Rowlatt Act?

A. Yes.

Q. Who circulated the rumours?

A. A lot of newspapers come to Kasur daily and people read them.

Q. The rumours or the statements in the papers as to the effect of Rowlatt Act were circulated in the town?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know by whom they were circulated?

A. The newspaper reports.

Q. What is the population in Kasur that are able to read and write?

A. If one reads, another hears and thus the news circulates.

Q. Do you know the nature of these rumours? Were any specific rumours in circulation as to the effect of the Rowlatt Act?

A. Yes. That liberty would be endangered, people would be arrested on mere hearsay information and so on.

Q. There was a statement that 2 or 3 gathering together would be arrested, that marriages would not be allowed to proceed?

A. That was what the Missionaries told me that they heard in villages.

Q. Did not there seem to be some influence behind the circulation of all these rumours?

A. No.

Q. How can you account for the similarity of false rumours as to the Rowlatt legislation in Kasur to those in a great number of other towns in the Punjab? All were arising at the same time. Necessarily some one intentionally circulated these rumours?

A. I do not think so.

Q. Could you account for it at all?

A. I am not sure of the fact that they were really in circulation in all the villages, but if they were there would be an agency behind, but I am not sure.

Q. The similarity of the rumours as to the effects of the Rowlatt Act existed at the same time in a great number of different towns? It will not therefore be unreasonable to suppose that it must be due to some agency behind them?

A. No, Sir.

By Mr. Abdul Kadir, Assistant Government Advocate—

Q. May I know what the total population of Kasur is?

A. About 24 thousand.

Q. Well, the estimate you gave of the male persons who actually were made to attend the identification parade must be considerably lower than what you just put it. About ten thousand?

A. Yes.

Q. Then you said you were not aware that any arrests were made on that day?

A. No.

Q. I now remind you of something that you said; "8 arrests were made on the evidence of two or more witnesses and 20 arrests on the evidence of one witness."

A. Then I am wrong.

Q. Does it occur to you now?

A. I had nothing to do with that, I am sure.

Q. With regard to this excess of zeal about which a question has just been put to you, do you remember whether you heard of any specific instance or did some Tahsildar or any Sub-Inspector tell you?

A. When I went to Pattoke in connection with leases of chals, there I heard that people had been told that they would be deprived of their leases unless they furnished recruits for each of whom they had to pay Rs. 400 to Rs. 600. Those who came voluntarily used to pay it to their relatives.

Q. That is what you were told by the tahsildar?

A. That is what people said.

Q. Did you take any steps to verify whether the tahsildar had actually said it or whether it was attributed to the tahsildar?

3 December 1919.]

Mr. R. F. MITTER—concluded—LALA KHAN CHAND.

A. No, I did not verify it.

Q. One thing more, about the matters relating to the Martial Law days in Kasur, you heard of this story of people having been made to rub their noses on the ground and about white-washing. May I enquire whether there was any truth in these rumours about Captain Doyton?

A. No.

Q. After you heard those rumours did you take any steps to justify this report?

A. No.

LALA KHAN CHAND, Tahsildar, Kasur.

By the President—

Q. You are a Tahsildar at Kasur?

A. Yes.

Q. On the morning of the 12th, did you go through the bazar and see that a hartal was going on?

A. Yes.

Q. And you gave information to Mr. Mitter?

A. Yes.

Q. On your way back to your house did you notice a small crowd? About what time was that?

A. Yes. It may be about 8-30; after 8 and before 9.

Q. I think after getting to your house you were informed by the chaprasi that the Railway Station had been set on fire?

A. Yes.

Q. When you heard that, you proceeded to the station?

A. Yes.

Q. On reaching the Ostroi Post did you see that the furniture of the Railway Department was on fire?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you go inside the Station?

A. I did.

Q. Did you see anything further on fire?

A. I saw the lamp room burning and everything was upset in the booking office.

Q. You mean that there was great disorder?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see any Railway officials about the Station?

A. About 3 or 4.

Q. Any constables?

A. Only one constable.

Q. What were these officials doing?

A. Porters were putting out the fire and the clerks were assisting.

Q. Were you told that the Station incident was over?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you told that something might be done to save the Railway Bridge?

A. Yes.

Q. Why was that?

A. Because the mob had gone to pull it down.

Q. When you heard that what did you do?

A. I asked the constable to go to the Deputy Superintendent of Police and report to him, but he expressed his inability to do so because he was alone at the Station and could not leave it. I intended to go to the Sub-Divisional Officer and thought of sending some one else to the Deputy Superintendent of Police. I did go myself to the Sub-Divisional Officer.

Q. The constable did not want to go alone?

A. He said that he was alone at the Station, and that it was improper for him to leave the Station without a constable.

Q. Did you then go to the Sub-Divisional Officer?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Some one went to the Deputy Superintendent of Police?

A. Some one was sent.

Q. I want to take you now to the point, where did you go then and what did you see on your way?

A. On my way just before starting I saw one Seth Mohan Lal and I asked him to go towards the Railway Bridge and also asked him to take the constable with him, and I told him that I was going to the Sub-Divisional Officer.

Q. As you were going along did Khan Sahib Ahmad Khan join you?

A. When I was coming back from the Sub-Divisional Officer's house to the Railway Station he joined me.

Q. Well, after you had been joined by Ahmad Khan, did you come across some people pulling down the Railway wire?

A. Yes.

Q. How many people were doing that?

A. About 50.

Q. Did you stop them?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Were you joined by some constables?

A. Yes, Sir, a few more joined.

Q. And the Deputy Superintendent of Police and some constables joined you?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did you see people carrying away goods?

A. Yes.

Q. Were those goods the same that had been looted from the Station?

A. They had taken them out from a wagon. Some were lying on the ground and some were taken by them.

Q. About this time did you get information that two Military Officers had been killed by the rioters?

A. Yes.

Q. Also that one soldier had been wounded?

A. Yes.

Q. I think you went then to the wagon?

A. We had passed the wagon and then we went where the third man was kept. Sardar Kishan Singh said that he had shut in the third man to protect him from the crowd.

Q. Had he been shut in for protection from the crowd?

A. Yes.

Q. But you understood that the crowd had intended to kill him?

A. Yes, I was informed so.

Q. Did you see the train standing at a distance from the Railway Station?

A. I could not see it.

Q. In your statement here you say we went towards the train?

A. Yes, where the train had been standing; the train had moved immediately.

Q. The train moved back to Lahore?

A. Yes.

Q. You went to where you saw the two officers that had been killed?

A. Yes.

Q. After you had been at the station this time, again, did you go back to your own quarters?

A. No, Sir.

Q. Where did you go then?

A. I went to Kot Halim Khan. Some one told us that a European gentleman and a lady had been assaulted near the gangmen's hut.

Q. Did you go to the Mission House?

A. After that. At first we went to Kot Halim Khan.

Q. You first went where Mr. and Mrs. Sherbourn were?

A. Yes.

Q. After that you went to the Mission House?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you take them with you to the Mission House?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Before you reached the Mission Compound did you notice a big smoke coming out of the town?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you informed that the Post Office was set on fire?

3 December 1919.]

LALA KHAN CHAND.

A. Some were saying that the Post Office was set on fire and some were not.

Q. And on reaching the Mission Compound you met the Mission lady ?

A. Yes.

Q. What did she say ?

A. She said that she was not safe there.

Q. Then did you go to the Post Office ?

A. Yes.

Q. When you reached the Post Office what did you find ?

A. I found that the Post Office was on fire, much of it had been burnt. Several persons were quenching the fire and other gentlemen were also putting down the fire.

Q. When you were there did you hear that the rioters were collecting to go to the Judicial lock-up ?

A. They had intended to collect.

Q. With what object ?

A. To rob the Treasury and set free the prisoners.

Q. Had you got some people with you ?

A. Yes.

Q. How many people were with you ?

A. One Kishan Singh, Exoise Sub-Inspector, Sayed Ahmad Shah, Municipal Commissioner, and three of my Munshis, and one Sub-Overseer and perhaps three Chaprasis. We all started in pursuit.

Q. Had you any arms with you ?

A. No.

Q. Where did you come upon the mob ?

A. Passing the Id-Gah Bridge near Ghulam Hassan Khan's house.

Q. When you came upon the mob what did they do ?

A. They were going along. When we stopped them they stopped.

Q. Did you stop them for any length of time ?

A. They stood for only a minute or so.

Q. After that they again turned to the Tahsil ?

A. Yes.

Q. How often did that occur ?

A. Perhaps three or four times ; at least three times.

Q. Then did you and the company that was with you keep the mob for a while in check ?

A. Yes.

Q. Did they remain in check for some time ?

A. They were quite in control.

Q. Then what did they do ?

A. I saw a petition-writer's hut burning, and one of them took a piece of chappar in front of the tahsil door on the approach road, and again Bawa Kharak Singh fired two blank rounds and then they became furious.

Q. Did they succeed in setting fire to the Tahsil gate ?

A. No.

Q. How were they prevented ?

A. They were prevented by us and by the police on the roof of the door.

Q. Then was one of the petition-writers' huts set on fire ?

A. Yes, behind the mob.

Q. Where is the Munsif's Court ? It is behind the Tahsil ?

A. About 40 or 50 karams on one side of the Tahsil. There is a small building intervening between the Chaukidar's hut and the chappars.

Q. Was it set on fire ?

A. It was subsequently seen ablaze.

Q. Was there some firing at this time which did not take effect ?

A. Two shots.

Q. Were they discharged in the air ?

A. Yes.

Q. Did they have any effect on the mob ?

A. The mob became more furious ; otherwise before that it was quite in control.

Q. Then about this time did the Deputy Superintendent of Police with his men come up ?

A. Yes.

Q. And I think the order to fire was given ?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you hear that order being given ?

A. No, Sir.

Q. Did you see the firing taking place ?

A. Only one shot on the mob. They were coming behind the mob and I was in front of the Tahsil door. The faces of the mob were towards us.

Q. Were you yourself in a critical position ?

A. I thought so at that moment.

Q. Was it on account of the attitude of the mob ?

A. Yes.

Q. Were the mob throwing anything ?

A. Yes.

Q. What ?

A. Stones.

Q. At whom were they throwing ?

A. At the police. When they were fired at, they became furious and the police became hidden behind a wall.

Q. After the actual firing had taken place was order restored ?

A. The mob began to disperse. They were running back. All was quiet and calm.

Q. Firing in the air had infuriated the mob ?

A. Yes.

Q. Did actual firing at the mob disperse the mob ?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you think it was essential to fire at the mob ?

A. I think it was quite essential.

Q. I think this all occurred before 2 o'clock ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Then about 4 o'clock military help arrived ?

A. A little before 4.

Q. Were a number of searches conducted in your presence in the evening ?

A. I was in charge of the investigation.

Q. What was the object of these searches ?

A. Property was stolen, and we conducted these searches with a hope that we might perhaps recover some of it. They were all of the menial class.

Q. Then on the 16th Martial Law was proclaimed and some arrests were then made ?

3 December 1919.]

LALA KHAN CHAND.

A. Yes.

Q. Were you one of the people who were asked to identify those who had been in the crowd?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the procedure adopted to carry out these identifications?

A. They were made very publicly, and the identifications were made in public.

Q. In connection with the administration of Martial Law, I think a case came to your notice in which a man was shot after being challenged. Is that the case about which we have been told by Mr. Marsden?

(This question was given up.)

Q. Did you conduct the search of the house of one of the leading pleaders?

A. Yes, Sir, Maulvi Abdul Kadir's.

Q. You mention in your statement a case of harshness of Military people at Patto Kohna?

A. Yes, at Patto Kohna.

Q. What was that?

A. The Military people broke some earthen vessels of the residents of that village and some things were broken with their bayonets.

Q. Was any investigation made about that?

A. I don't know.

Q. Then how did you come to know about that?

A. I was myself present. I went there with the Military officers.

Q. Then what occurred?

A. When we came back we arrested some persons from that village and brought them to Kasur. The harshness took place with regard to a suspect who was not present in Patto Kohna. He had absconded, and his house was shut.

Q. What actually occurred?

A. Some earthen vessels were broken to pieces with bayonets.

Q. But were they broken with bayonets, lathis or dangs?

A. With bayonets.

Q. Who did it?

A. It was done by the British soldiers.

Q. Under whose instructions?

A. Under the instructions of a junior officer.

Q. What was the object?

A. To frighten the people.

Q. How do you know this?

A. It was their purpose.

Q. You were present at the time?

A. Yes.

Q. It was done under the instructions of a junior officer. Who was he?

A. I don't remember his name. Perhaps he was a Lieutenant.

Q. On what date was that done?

A. It was done on the night of the 19th April.

Q. What other places did you visit besides that place?

A. I went to village Khara and village Lakhna.

Q. Where is that village? How far is that village from Kasur?

A. It may be 18 or 20 miles from Kasur.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. You say you do not remember the Lieutenant's name?

A. You mean the name of that officer?

Q. Yes.

A. I do not remember.

Q. You say he was a Lieutenant?

A. I remember he was a Lieutenant.

Q. Do you remember the regiment or the Corps to which he belonged?

A. Yes, he belonged to 30th Cavalry under Major Paske.

Q. I understand you heard him tell his men to break the earthen vessels. Did you hear him tell the men to do so?

A. As far as I remember he himself started it and the men followed him.]

Q. As far as you are concerned I want to know whether you distinctly remember you saw him do it?

A. Yes, as far as I remember.

Q. That is not a question of as far as you remember, but that is a question whether you have any recollection of seeing him do this?

A. The thing is this that there were two persons. Both of them were lieutenants. One was in charge of the whole military guard and the other was perhaps his junior or may be equal to him and that person started it. I don't remember whether he was a lieutenant or below lieutenant, but I imagine he was a lieutenant.

Q. You know he was a Lieutenant?

A. Perhaps.

Q. Whether he was a commissioned officer or non-Commissioned Officer?

A. I cannot say.

Q. He was not a Corporal?

A. He was above the rank of Corporal.

Q. He may be a Sergeant?

A. He was above a Sergeant.

Q. You think he was an officer?

A. Yes.

By Sir C. H. Setalvad—

Q. For how many years have you been a Tahsildar at Kasur?

A. Tahsildar of Mal?

Q. Yes.

A. Nearly three years.

Q. Before that you were settlement tahsildar at Kasur?

A. For one year I remained Settlement Tahsildar.

Q. How many years have you been at Kasur?

A. From the 1st of March 1913 to the end of December 1914 I was in Kasur as settlement tahsildar. Then I was transferred to Chunian.

Q. From 1913 you are connected with Kasur?

A. From 1913 my connection is with Kasur.

Q. You have known the people intimately all that time?

A. Most of them.

Q. During all that period did you observe any anti-Government or anti-British feelings amongst the people of Kasur?

A. I did not.

Q. Any seditious movement?

A. Not much of it.

Q. Not much; did you observe any?

A. No seditious movement.

Q. How do you, then, account for this sudden outburst on the 12th April?

A. Similar offences occurred everywhere and Kasur did not escape, on account of being the neighbour of Amritsar. Mostly it is due to Amritsar.

Q. Because things happened at Amritsar?

A. People were freely coming and going to Amritsar which is just near Kasur, and people were going and coming back to Kasur for their business.

Q. But you said that there was no seditious movement in Kasur and the people were very quiet so far as you knew. They would not suddenly burst into these outrages simply because people at Amritsar did?

A. Amritsar people made them ashamed at not keeping hartal on the 30th March and 6th April.Q. On the 30th March and 6th April there was no hartal at Kasur?A. No hartal at all at Kasur.

Q. And what do you mean by saying the Amritsar people put them to shame? What did they do?

A. There were rumours that some of their kundis had been dishonoured, and one man who purchased some ghee from Amritsar was asked, before payment, who he was.

Q. Have you any evidence of this?

A. No evidence at all.

Q. Did you take any pains to find out whether what you had heard in regard to that had any substratum of truth?

3 December 1919.]

LALA KHAN CHAND.

Q. On all these journeys from Kasur to Lahore and back from Lahore and from the hazas to the cage was he taken handcuffed?

A. I do not remember exactly. I saw him once at Lahore.

Q. Where did you see him at Lahore?

A. Near the Railway Station at the Naulakha Police Station.

Q. What was being done to him there?

A. He was on a tum-jum under guard.

Q. Was he handcuffed?

A. I do not remember whether he was handcuffed, I think he was; my idea is that he was, but I cannot remember exactly.

Q. Now this man Maulvi Abdul Kadir whose house was searched by you, he is also a pleader?

A. He is a leading pleader.

Q. You have known him many years?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Was he arrested?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. When?

A. On the same date as Maulvi Ghulam Mohi-ud-din.

Q. How many weeks was he kept in prison?

A. Much less than Maulvi Ghulam Mohi-ud-din.

Q. How long, two weeks?

A. Less than two weeks.

Q. Was he kept at Kasur or was he also sent to Lahore?

A. No, he was not sent to Lahore, he was kept at Kasur.

Q. Where?

A. In the thana lock-up.

Q. Was he also brought up for identification?

A. Yes.

Q. And was he handcuffed?

A. Yes.

Q. What was he arrested for?

A. I do not know.

Q. And he was released ultimately without any trial?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You speak in your statement of having taken part in all the raids on villages?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. How many villages did you raid in that manner?

A. Only two.

Q. You speak of several in your statement?

A. No, Sir.

Q. Some raids were made by military guards to arrest suspects?

A. Military guards made several searches, but I went with only two of them.

Q. How many villages in all were raided by them?

A. Six or seven I remember.

Q. Your statement then is inaccurate? You make this statement:—

'Identifications were made in public, and in many cases I was present.'

A. Yes, identifications at the Railway Station I mean.

Q. You are not there speaking of the identifications in the villages that were raided?

A. No, Sir.

Q. By identifications you mean the Kasur identifications?

A. Yes.

Q. You know there was one general identification when the whole town was turned out?

A. Yes, on 1st May.

Q. Was there any similar identification process gone through?

A. Yes.

Q. Was the whole town turned out?

A. Not the whole town, but several persons, most.

Q. Most of the inhabitants?

A. Yes.

Q. How often did that take place, you say in many cases you were present?

A. There were several small identifications.

Q. On how many occasions were these?

A. Identifications were made perhaps 7 or 8 times.

Q. In one you had the whole town turned out?

A. Yes.

Q. Then you said in some others almost the whole town?

A. Almost the whole town.

Q. On how many occasions was that the case?

A. In all the remaining cases. In one case only I remember almost the whole town was sent, but in others only several persons.

Q. On one occasion the whole town; on the second occasion most of the population?

A. And in other only a few.

By Major General Sir George Barron—

Q. Those things which you saw broken up, what do you put the value of them at?

A. Very little. That suspect was a sweeper by caste, and the whole property would amount to about 20 or 15 rupees, I think less than 15 rupees.

Q. What were they?

A. Earthen pots and some quilts.

Q. Was he a poor man?

A. A very poor man, he was a sweeper.

Q. So it meant a good lot to him?

A. Yes, Sir, though they were rubbish things.

Q. Of value to him?

A. Yes, Sir.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. In your opinion in the first place the cause of the disturbance was the news of Mr. Gandhi's alleged arrest?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And when you were in your Tahsil on the 11th the first news that you received was that on account of Mr. Gandhi's arrest the people were closing their shops and a hartal was arranged for afterwards?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. In your statement you do not make any mention of the news having arrived from Amritsar as to what was done there on the 10th?

A. No, Sir. I myself was not acquainted with any news, but afterwards came to know about that.

Q. With reference to clause four of your statement where you say "the alleged arrival of certain persons from Amritsar side, whose stories had a bad effect on the people." I take it therefore that you had no definite knowledge of any person having arrived?

A. When I came near the Rohi Bridge I was told that two or three persons had arrived from Amritsar on the morning of the 12th.

Q. My point is this—up to the time that you sent in this application you described the alleged arrival of certain persons from Amritsar, you had no definite knowledge—you do not know their names?

A. No, I do not know their names.

Q. We have been informed that no public political meeting was held at Kasur during the course of one year?

A. No, Sir.

Q. Now your clause 5 says "no responsible educated person took the trouble to satisfy the public discontent by holding meetings and contradicting false rumours"

—What do you mean by this?

A. I simply mean that it was the duty of every educated person to pacify the minds of the persons.

Q. Did the District Superintendent of Police or you yourself or Mr. Mitter hold any meetings in order to remove this discontent and to disillusion the mind of the public?

A. Not before the occurrences.

Q. Therefore you were as much to blame in the discharge of your duties as the other educated classes not of your service?

A. Yes.

Q. You say something about a hartal?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You have been in this tahsil for a number of years?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. I think when His Honour held a Darbar at Kasur you were there?

A. Yes.

Q. And the recruiting was not very encouraging?

A. Yes, Sir.

3 December 1919.]

LALA KHAN CHAND.

Q. And that you people were taken to task for not paying enough attention to this ?

A. Yes.

Q. So that remark then was applied that "if this goes on any longer it will be better if the seat of Government is removed from Lahore to Amritsar" ?

A. It was said, but it did not concern Kasur only.

Q. He said that it would be better to remove the seat from Lahore to Amritsar ?

A. Yes it was said.

Q. And it was in connection with recruitment ?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know one of your Sub-Divisional Officers, Khan Bahadur Sultan Ahmed—in the years 1917-18 when this recruitment was going on ?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know that any number of persons who were chalaned under sections 107 and 110 were given the alternative to go into the army ?

A. Yes ; several of them.

Q. Can you give me any idea as to what was the average number of persons chalaned previous to that under sections 107 and 110 and the number chalaned in the years 1917-18 ?

A. I am afraid I do not know.

Q. Are you aware that they had enormously increased ?

A. I cannot say.

Q. There were two panchayats formed in Kasur and you were president of one and another man was in charge of the other ?

A. Yes.

Q. And it was the duty of the panchayat to go to every village and to get the appointed quota of recruits, and so long as they were not forthcoming they were to remain in the village. As a matter of fact that was the procedure, that the panchayats should go to a village and insist by persuasion on getting the proper number of recruits and so long as..... ?

A. It was not that we should remain there. We were staying there for one, two or three days in order to get recruits by persuasion.

Q. Were not a number of tahsildars of your place sent to Ferozepore, for the purpose of learning the method of recruiting ?

A. They were sent to see how recruiting was going on in the Ferozepore district.

Q. Because in that district recruiting was very brisk ?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it not a fact that one of your panchayats had got hold of 15 or 19 recruits from the labouring classes and they were brought to Kasur. Then an application was put in by their relations before Mr. Tollinton saying that they were unwilling and that they were forced to go and Mr. Tollinton on that application released them all ?

A. That came to my knowledge when I returned from camp. It did not concern my party. When I got back I heard that Mr. Tollinton had sent them back to their homes.

By the President—

Q. Is that because they were unwilling ?

A. Yes, Sir.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. You were asked by Sir C. Setalvad about the co-operation of pleaders. I do not know whether it was taken down.

A. It was Mohan Lall, Pleader. He met me at the Railway Station and he took a constable with him in his tonga in order to protect the Railway Bridge.

Q. After hearing the news in the Tahsil you went to the bazar and found that everything was calm and quiet there ?

A. That is on the 11th.

Q. On the morning of the 12th again when you were going to the bazar the only thing that you saw was that there was a small crowd in the Lulliani Adda of dispersing when you passed ?

A. Yes.

Q. You saw nothing else ?

A. No, nothing else.

Q. When you reached the Railway Station were you alone or with anybody else ?

A. Two private gentlemen accompanied me.

Q. There were no constables or chaprassis ?

A. One chaprassi was with me and he informed me that such and such a building had been set on fire, and I asked the other chaprassi to bring my horse to the Station.

Q. You say a small crowd started towards the tahsil, on being threatened they turned towards the City Police Station. Your party was threatened at that time, how many people were in that party ? You were there. Who else ?

A. Sayed Ahmad Shah, Sardar Kishen Singh, Exoise Sub-Inspector, three munshis and I think three chaprassis.

Q. You had no arms with you ?

A. No we had no arms. I could get no opportunity to obtain arms.

Q. You took two tum-tums and you started in pursuit of the crowd ?

A. Yes.

Q. You again reached the mob near Idgah Bridge and you again stopped the mob ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And instead of listening to you they ran off again ?

A. Yes. After stopping for a minute or so.

Q. This mob according to you was gradually increasing ?

A. Yes.

Q. The mob did not listen to you and again proceeded further ?

A. Yes.

Q. Therefore during all this time no attempt was made by the mob to assault you or any of your party or to show any threatening attitude ?

A. No, Sir.

Q. It was after according to you, two shots had been fired that the mob became dangerous ?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you please refer to your statement where you say "I myself and my party in front of the mob at the tahsil gate were in a very dangerous position. Hukam Chand, one of the tahsil chaprassis was accidentally wounded there." Having regard to the context it is not clear whether you were in a dangerous position when the mob was being fired on by the police who were on the tahsil roof. I take it that you were standing below and near you the people were being shot, and you were in danger of being hit ?

A. Yes.

Q. That is your meaning ?

A. Yes.

Q. That same evening you carried out a number of searches for the purpose of finding stolen property ?

A. Yes.

Q. Also the next morning you carried out many searches to find looted property ? And you were not molested by anyone ?

A. These were not rioters. They were only private people.

Q. You followed this crowd for at least some time, and you were present before the tahsil and at other places, and you saw this mob ; now, did you in this mob find any pleaders or any respectable shopkeepers of Kasur ?

A. No.

Q. Apart from this incident which you have mentioned about the breaking of chattis and other vessels I think it is to your personal knowledge that you were asked by the military authorities to return a certain amount of money to some of the arrested persons ; and this money was taken away from them by the soldiers and deposited by you ?

A. Yes, the money had been kept for the arrested persons, and it was being returned.

By Mr. Abdul Kadir, Assistant Government Advocate—

Q. With reference to this village, where you saw certain articles belonging to suspects damaged by soldiers. This is the village to which the people who were suspected of having done mischief at Khem Karan Railway Station belonged. They were suspected of doing damage at Khem Karan, and on that night when you went with the raiding party about 14 persons of that village—suspects were arrested?

3 December 1919.]

LALA KHAN CHAND—continued—Khan Sahib AHMAD KHAN.

A. Yes.

Q. And this man in whose house this dacoity took place was one of those suspects?

A. Yes. The suspect had absconded.

Q. With regard to this incident at the Railway Station it was alleged that people who took part in that incident had taken away some property of the Railway staff and you therefore carried out searches in order to recover some of the stolen property?

A. Yes, it was found. Clothes and one hooka.

Q. With regard to that other point that you mention here about the end of your statement about a man being shot dead. I think he was shot dead on being challenged at night by a sentry. A military enquiry was made about this at Kasur and your evidence was taken? May I know what your evidence was with regard to this matter?

A. My evidence is the same as what I have stated.

Q. I will just remind you of it by reading your evidence out. This statement is being put before the committee. The following is your evidence:—

"On the morning of the 21st April 1919 about 3-30 or 3-45 A.M. a detachment of troops to whom I was attached as Civil Magistrate reached the village of Lakhna. The village was surrounded by troops for the purpose of preventing villagers leaving the village, while arrests were being made in the village. The party making arrests to whom I was attached started to enter the village when we heard the report of a rifle. Soon after when the arrests had been made, we came to the spot where the man was lying wounded. On enquiry he said his name was Karn Chand, shopkeeper. He stated that he was going outside to ease himself, when a soldier called to him and then fired at him. The officer in charge of the troops enquired from the soldier what had happened and he stated that he asked the man to halt but he snatched his bayonet. The police and Lambardar took the man to Kasur to have him treated, but later learned that the man had died on the way. When we first found the wounded man the Officer Commanding troops ordered a soldier to dress his wound, which was immediately done." That is your statement?

A. Yes.

Q. And this village is one of those villages where you had suspected people who had taken part in the Kasur affair at the Railway Station?

A. Some suspects were arrested from that village.

Q. Now with regard to that part of Sir Michael O'Dwyer's speech to which reference has been made about removing the seat of Government from Lahore to Amritsar as recruiting was not up to the mark, was this remark as you understood it at the time, made as a serious threat to the people or was it made in a humorous way?

A. It was not a serious threat. He meant by it that the Lahore people should be ashamed for remaining behind in recruiting.

Q. Was that remark, as you understood, it, made as a serious threat to the people or in a humorous way?

A. It was not a serious threat. It was only mentioned by the way, that the Lahore people should feel ashamed or not helping Government in the matter of recruiting.

Q. Was it mentioned in a humorous way?

A. Yes, it was mentioned in a humorous way.

[At this stage at the suggestion of the President, Khan Sahib Ahmed Khan, District Superintendent of Police, Kasur, was again called and examined on certain points.]

Khan Sahib AHMAD KHAN.

By Sir C. H. Setalvad—

Q. You know that certain pleaders in Kasur were arrested?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Now the tahsildar told us that some of those pleaders had rendered assistance?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. These pleaders were arrested on what information?

A. On the evidence of certain railway officials.

Q. In arresting them you acted on the statements that were made to you by certain witnesses?

A. They were made to Mr. Marsden or to Mr. Mitter, they were recorded by the magistrate.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. Were you present at the time the statements were made?

A. No.

Q. Therefore you don't know what statements were made by these witnesses?

A. I know, because they were sent on to me.

Q. From what you say that persons against whom only a single person made any statement were released, I take it that the evidence against these pleaders consisted of a single statement?

A. More than one.

Q. If more than one made statements, why were they not chalaned?

A. After considering the evidence, we came to the conclusion that the evidence was not reliable.

Q. How many days after the 16th were these pleaders arrested?

A. On the 19th.

Q. And before the 19th you were already in possession of the evidence that was given by the man who protected Mr. Sherbourn and his family?

A. Yes.

Q. And he had clearly stated that Mr. Mohi-ud-din was of great help to him and saved the lives of the Sherbourn family?

A. Quite so.

Q. Further you personally knew these pleaders from a long time?

A. Yes, since I have been in Kasur.

Q. Now take the case of the son of this pleader. Only a single pointsman with great difficulty identified him so he was arrested and kept for a long time in custody?

A. No.

Q. Take the case of Dhanpat Rai, so far as you are aware, there was no evidence against him?

A. No.

Q. What about the case of Mr. Abdul Kadir, the man whom you described as more than 60 years old, what was the evidence against him?

A. There was one railway official.

Q. Will you kindly give me his official designation, I can't follow if you merely say one railway official.

A. One Badir, shunting jamadar.

Q. What did he say?

A. He said that he saw the accused pursuing the murderers of Europeans.

Q. As a matter of fact Abdul Kadir was never identified by the Europeans?

A. No.

Q. As a matter of fact the approver in the case never mentioned that Abdul Kadir was one of the crowd?

A. No, the approver's statement was subsequent to this statement.

By Mr. Herbert, Government Advocate—

Q. What evidence had you against Ghulam Mohi-ud-din?

A. One hammer-man of Ferozepore said he heard him at the Railway station saying "kill, kill."

The President:—We really cannot go into all these cases. So far as I am personally concerned, all I want to know is whether the arrests were made on any information.

3 December 1919.]

Captain A. C. DOVETON.

Captain A. C. DOVETON, 1-30th Punjabis.

By the President—

Q. You administered Martial Law, I think, in the Kasur District ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. For how long ?

A. For over three months.

Q. Can you give me the date when you started ?

A. It was about the 22nd or 23rd of April. It commenced on the 23rd April.

Q. Till when ?

A. It continued until the end of August.

Q. I think you sent in a report in connection with your administration of Martial Law, which is to be found as Part IV of the report sent by Colonel Taylor to the Adjutant-General in India ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. I do not propose to ask you about everything that is in that report, but in connection with the punishments administered by you under Martial Law, it has been alleged, in the course of this enquiry, that you invented certain punishments of your own ?

A. I did invent some minor punishments.

Q. What were those ?

A. Mostly working on the railway premises.

Q. In the case of what people did you mete out that punishment ?

A. In the case of people who had in any way resisted authority or law and order.

Q. When did you start to administer that punishment ?

A. I should say about the end of May.

Q. For how long did you continue it ?

A. Until Martial Law was removed from the railway lines.

Q. Was that inflicted as a severer or as a less severe punishment ?

A. As a less severe punishment.

Q. There has been a suggestion that you ordered a sadhu to be whitewashed ?

A. No, that is entirely wrong.

Q. Is there any foundation for that statement ?

A. I can understand how the rumour arose. There was a particular piece of work to be done in the Goods Yard, I mean the clearing of a siding. There was an undelivered consignment of lime, I mean the owner had not taken delivery of the consignment and the whole siding was blocked. I ordered that this should be removed. I was told that that was the only work on hand that day. It was the rainy season, and I think these people were covered from head to foot. They had shovels with them, and they were covered with lime from head to foot.

Q. Is that the origin of that rumour, so far as you know ?

A. As far as I know, that must be the origin of it.

Q. You never administered white-washing as a punishment ?

A. Not as a punishment.

Q. Had a sadhu been punished and made to do some labour ?

A. Not this particular work; they were put on to work; but they were not the only people at whom it was directed.

Q. There is a further allegation that you ordered some man as a punishment to draw figures with his nose on the ground ?

A. That is incorrect.

Q. Is there any foundation for that ?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Can you account for such a rumour being in circulation ?

A. I cannot. The nearest possible thing to that was making a man put his forehead in the dust in the Indian fashion. The man who was brought up before me for punishment was asked before leaving my presence to put his forehead on the ground. I told him the words matka tek.

Q. What did it involve ?

A. It involved some humiliation.

Q. With what object did you ask that to be done ?

A. It was simply by way of making the people concerned acknowledge authority. That was the idea.

Q. It was rather as an acknowledgment of authority than as a punishment ?

A. It was not a punishment, Sir.

Q. Did you ever hear it made a ground of complaint against your administration of Martial Law ?

A. This is the first I have heard of it.

Q. This is also the first that you have heard about the white-washing affair ?

A. No, Sir, I heard of that before.

Q. Now as regards the general orders, was there any relaxation in the Martial Law orders made about the middle of May ?

A. They were relaxed by degrees.

Q. I suppose the public of Kasur suffered considerable inconvenience by some of the orders ?

A. Certainly, they did.

Q. It was particularly so in the case of travelling orders ?

A. But that was relaxed, I think, before any other order was relaxed.

Q. Did you yourself deliver some lectures to the public ?

A. I did.

Q. On what did you lecture ?

A. On the general situation. I talked to them pretty straight about the way they behaved, and I tried to make them see things in their proper perspective, in fact they were more in the nature of advice.

Q. May I ask in connection with these lectures if you had made yourself familiar with the provisions of the Rowlatt Act ?

A. I would not pose myself as an authority on the question, but the main object of my lectures was to show that there was really no great hardship in the passing of the Act, and that whatever hardship it involved did not justify the occurrences which took place.

Q. Did you explain to the audience that that Act did not, except in cases of anarchical or revolutionary movements, apply to the whole population at all ?

A. I pointed out that.

Q. So that generally you discussed the Rowlatt Act with a view to removing, as to its provisions, the suspicion that had arisen in the peoples' minds owing to rumours ?

A. That was the object of my lectures.

Q. I think in one of your lectures you had the assistance of one of the pleaders who had been detained ?

A. I had.

Q. Did he volunteer assistance or did you ask him to assist you ?

A. When I had finished my lecture, I asked him to make a few remarks.

Q. That was Ghulam Mohi-ud-din ?

A. Yes.

Q. I think he was released without any charge brought against him ?

A. So I understand.

Q. Did he deliver a speech ?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it quite satisfactory and according to your standard ?

A. In every way.

Q. Did you have in the course of your administration to try a number of prisoners ?

A. Quite a fair number. I do not know how it compared with the other places.

Q. I am asking you in particular about the Patti rioters ?

A. They were sent down for trial.

Q. Did you try them sitting alone ?

A. I was alone, but I had the assistance of the Court Inspector.

Q. I see you mention that that trial lasted for 12 days ?

A. Yes, Sir, there were a very large number of witnesses.

Q. Were the accused in that case represented ?

3 December 1919.]

Captain A. C. DOVETON.

A. Yes, there were three counsel.

Q. I think altogether there were 46 accused?

A. I think so.

Q. And I think there were a large number of witnesses examined both for the prosecution and for the defence?

A. More for the defence than for the prosecution.

Q. Of the so many accused you convicted 4 juveniles, I think, and 27 adults, according to your statement?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. The juveniles were whipped I think, and the others received terms of imprisonment?

A. That is so.

Q. I want you to explain as regards certain reprisals that are said to have been made against the suspects who disappeared from the neighbourhood. What was done in those things?

A. They were not suspects as far as I remember, but they were people who had left the area in contravention of the Martial Law orders or who being absent at the time failed to return within the period prescribed. These reprisals consisted of visiting the houses and removing things like chorpays for the accommodation of the troops and earthen pots and things of that description.

Q. But on any of these occasions was property destroyed belonging to the people of the houses which were raided?

A. Yes.

Q. Under what circumstances was that done?

A. I don't know what you want.

Q. I mean the property of these people was destroyed, what were the grounds for destroying the property of the people who were absent?

A. A Martial Law order had been issued warning people that they must return to their homes within a certain period failing which reprisals would be made, and the relatives of absentees were also warned to communicate with the absentees with a view to their returning within the prescribed period, the point being that the police were then engaged in their investigations and were trying to round up people who had been implicated in the riots.

Q. In cases where property was destroyed, was notice given to the people who were absent or to their relatives that unless the absentees returned by a certain time their property would be destroyed?

A. That was embodied in the Martial Law orders.

Q. To what extent did such reprisals take place? How many houses were visited?

A. Six houses were visited on three different occasions. I have mentioned it in the statement.

Q. I see you say that everything of any value in the houses visited was cleared?

A. If there ever was anything in those houses.

Q. In one case were certain metal pots taken away from the house?

A. Yes, some metal pots.

Q. Whose house was that?

A. It was the house of a man named Jhandu.

Q. What was he?

A. He had the reputation of being a badmash.

Q. On the occasion of these searches were you also accompanied by a Municipal Commissioner and some Indian and British Infantry?

A. I had British and Indian troops with me.

Q. Was there a British Officer in addition to yourself?

A. There was.

Q. About the whippings that took place, did you order many to be whipped?

A. A good number, Sir.

Q. In connection with these whippings, was there a medical examination by a doctor before these whipping took place?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Were you present when the whippings took place?

A. On nearly all the occasions.

Q. Allegations have been made that in certain cases where whippings were administered, people practically succumbed to the injuries that were inflicted? Is there any foundation for that allegation?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. You saw no sign of collapse in the case of any one?

A. No, Sir.

Q. You say that the high number of lashes that were administered is accountable to the fact that there was nobody who had the knack of handling the "cat"?

A. That is a fact.

Q. With the result that the high number of lashes would not represent so severe a punishment as would otherwise have been the case?

A. That is what I mean.

Q. What sort of "cat" was used?

A. It was the regulation "cat o' nine tails."

Q. Is it ordinarily used in connection with these punishments?

A. It is part of the field service equipment, I believe.

Q. As regards the place where they were whipped, according to your statement only some juveniles were whipped in a public place?

A. No one was whipped in a public place.

Q. I thought some juveniles were whipped in a public place?

A. There is no mention of it in my report. It was entirely private, but there were two boys, quite children, who were sent down by the tribunal in Lahore to be punished by me. They must have been about 11 or 12 each. They had taken part in the riot, and I thought it sound to have the whole school present to witness the punishment.

Q. In one case I believe you administered a considerable number of lashes to a man and also you administered two years' rigorous imprisonment. You refer in your report to the case of a man who was caught for posing as a C. I. D. officer. Was that the maximum sentence you could enforce?

A. The maximum punishment was 30 lashes, 2 years' rigorous and a thousand rupees fine.

Q. Could you impose those three cumulatively?

A. Those were my orders.

Q. In the case of that man you imposed the maximum number of lashes and the maximum period of imprisonment?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. I see you suggest that the people generally did not object to Martial Law, what is your foundation for that expression of opinion?

A. From the way in which people expressed themselves to me I gathered they did not object to it, in fact I was told that the women appreciated Martial Law more than any one else.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. I think you took over charge on the 23rd of April?

A. That is so.

Q. Did Martial Law come to an end on the 12th of June apart from the railway lines?

A. It would be about that date.

Q. And Martial Law went on on the railway lines up till when?

A. Till the end of August.

Q. When Martial Law was withdrawn in June, it went on on the railway lines, but was that Martial Law on the railway lines the same Martial Law, the same proclamations and orders that had been in existence for everybody prior to that date, or was it a new proclamation of Martial Law?

A. It was a continuation of the old, there were no new proclamations.

Q. Were there any proclamations or orders made under Martial Law on the railway lines?

A. None were necessary.

Q. The old orders were in force, but they were only restricted to the railway area?

A. Exactly.

Q. As I understand it, up till the 12th June when you were administering Martial Law over the district as a whole, am I right in saying that you did not inflict on anybody any unauthorised punishment, that is to say, any punishment other than imprisonment, flogging or

Captain A. C. DOWNTON.

fine up to the 12th June when Martial Law was withdrawn in areas other than the railway?

A. I cannot say that definitely, but I think it is quite possible that I may have administered unauthorised punishment before that date.

Q. Did you report the fact of your having inflicted these unauthorised punishments to your superiors?

A. No.

Q. What made you suppose that you were authorised to inflict those unauthorised punishments when certain definite punishments were laid down in your orders?

A. It was up to me to keep order, and in case of offences when one did want to make use of severer punishments, I thought that these would just meet the case.

Q. Didn't you consider from your study of the proclamation of General Beynon that he laid down certain punishments which he thought would meet the situation, and that those and no others were under your powers? Didn't you consider that?

A. I should not have thought that applied to minor punishments, i.e., punishments less than those.

Q. You thought you might inflict any form of punishment that was less than the prescribed punishment?

A. Yes.

Q. You will agree with me that in the ordinary way in the Army where you administer Military Law to persons subject to military discipline, there is one thing quite clear on the face of the King's Regulations, viz., that no unauthorised punishments are ever to be administered at all?

A. I did not take it in that light at all. I thought I did what was correct at the time.

Q. We have had some talk about your having ordered people not only to do manual labour, but to perform certain exercises, to do skipping, climbing ladders and that sort of thing. What are the facts? Did you ever order persons to do these things?

A. There was one as regards skipping. It was suggested to me by a man whom I proposed to punish myself.

Q. He asked for it?

A. He said he would do it if he was excused from working in the goods yard.

Q. How much skipping did he propose to do?

A. 20 without a break.

Q. He made that offer and you took him at his word?

A. He was not the only one who offered.

Q. After that, you inflicted it on people who had not asked for it?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the age of people who did skipping? Were they young people or middle-aged people or what sort of people?

A. There was nobody who was aged.

Q. People of middle age?

A. I should say so.

Q. How much skipping did they have to do?

A. 20.

Q. To how many people do you suppose, apart from the man who volunteered to do it, did you give this punishment?

A. I should think at least 20.

Q. You will agree with me—I do not want to be too critical—that that rather tended to bring the proceedings into contempt? Didn't it, Captain? If a man could do 20 skips without exerting himself, it was not much of a punishment; but in either case it looked very silly. Didn't it?

A. I do not know that it brought the proceedings into contempt. It acted as a deterrent.

Q. Apart from skipping, was there any special form climbing ladders under your jurisdiction?

A. That is new to me. I do not know where that has crept in from.

Q. You never ordered it?

A. I did not.

Q. All right; we will have to accept that. Putting people to do manual labour is a thing that happens in the Army in various conditions. There is nothing novel or new about making people do such things by way of punishment?

A. Yes.

Q. In the case of those people, civilians who had to do that while you were administering Martial Law, was it accompanied by any form of imprisonment, confinement in the barracks at the Railway station?

A. It had to be done on the railway premises.

Q. How long did you have to keep them on the railway premises in order that they might do manual labour?

A. A day; one or two remained for a couple of days.

Q. What happened in the night? Did they go back to their home or did you keep them imprisoned?

A. They were not imprisoned; they merely deposited some of their belongings by way of security so that they should return the next morning.

Q. You let them go so to speak on that?

A. Yes.

Q. In your statement that has been supplied to us, I want to take you to Appendix IV*.

That is the official tabular statement of the different offences and the different punishments that were meted out. Is it not?

A. Yes.

Q. Does that apply simply to your area of Kasur?

A. Yes.

Q. You notice there is nothing whatever there in the returns about any of those sorts of punishments. In this return there is nothing except imprisonment, lashes and fines?

A. Yes; those are the three forms of punishment.

Q. There is no return that has ever been sent to headquarters as regards the various other forms of punishment?

A. No.

Q. Supposing you thought you were entitled to inflict those other forms of punishments and they were under your powers, why didn't you report what you had done in the other cases to your superior officers?

A. I thought it was a slight thing and it was unnecessary.

Q. Apart from punishments in these cases, some of the cases which came up before you were, I take it, sent up by the Police. Were they?

A. Yes.

Q. Then there would be other cases perhaps where men had been arrested by the Military authorities?

A. Yes.

Q. Were there any other persons except those two classes of authorities who sent up cases to you for trial?

A. I think there must have been people who were brought before me by the Railway.

Q. As regards the offences for which they were tried, first of all a certain number of them would be tried for offences against one or other of the Martial Law proclamations?

A. Yes.

Q. Apart from people who were put up for offences against Martial Law proclamations, you say some were put up by the Railway. Was there any other offence under the Railway Act and under any other Act which you undertook to correct?

A. I think all the cases that were brought before me came under the paragraph in the proclamation which refers to acts prejudicial to good order and public safety if they did not come under any specific heading.

Q. A good deal could be brought under that. Were they charged before you under that section of the proclamation?

A. Cases were brought to me that such and such a thing had happened. I decided whether the men were to be charged, and if so, what they were to be charged for.

Q. So far it was quite right. You had to decide whether it came under the proclamation or not. Were there any cases which obviously could not be brought under the proclamation which you tried, say, cases of cheating or

* Will be found in Lt. Col. McRae's statement at page 381.

3 December 1919.]

Captain A. C. DOVETON.

other offences under the Penal Code that could not be brought under the proclamation?

A. As regards cheating, the only case I remember was the case of a man who cheated two old women of their money who were trying to obtain passes at the station. I took into consideration the fact that Martial Law existed. I did not consider it in the interests of law and order and public safety. And that case was tried by me in preference to others.

Q. It was a case of cheating in connection with obtaining a Military pass and therefore you thought that would fairly come under the Military Code?

A. I sent the man to Brigade Head-quarters at Ferozepore with a view to his being court-martialled and the man was returned to me to deal with.

Q. I want to know the view you took at the time. Did you try yourself according to the best decision you could make and try to confine your activities as a Military Court to persons who had committed offences against these proclamations and not to persons who committed ordinary crimes that had nothing to do with the special condition of Martial Law?

A. I did not touch anything which to my mind had nothing to do whatever with Martial Law. Anything which in any way I considered to affect the administration of Martial Law, I tried.

Q. You did not regard yourself as a person who was entitled to try cases in connection with all offences, but only those kinds of offences that came directly or indirectly under the proclamation?

A. Exactly so.

Q. Apart from that, you said that there were some cases put up before you for trial by the Railway. Is that so?

A. I said so. I know that the Railway brought people before me from time to time, but I cannot remember any specific cases.

Q. Can you tell me whether they put up people before you for offences that had nothing to do with Martial Law proclamation or were they put up for offences that had nothing to do with the special condition of Martial Law?

A. To the best of my recollection if it had nothing to do with Martial Law, I had nothing to do with it. But if it in any way affected the keeping of law and order at the station, I took it up.

Q. Would you be good enough to look at paragraph 15 of your statement? I want to ask you something about what some people have said. There is a case where you state "the District Traffic Superintendent, Ferozepore, under orders from the North-Western Railway Head-quarters, requested the Railway Police to bring before me for trial the Guard and Driver of the Ferozepore train, which was attacked at the distant signal on the 12th April." Then you go on "The accused were charged under section 128 of the Railway Act." "The Driver was found not guilty of 'wilful negligence' and was acquitted, with a recommendation that he should be dismissed from the Railway;" I gather from that that section 128 of the Railway Act makes it an offence for a Driver to be guilty of wilful negligence?

A. Yes.

Q. The act for which he was charged was supposed to have been done on the 12th April?

A. It was in connection with the riot.

Q. Do you think that wilful negligence in connection with the riot of the 12th April made it a Military Court's matter?

A. There was a special order passed empowering Martial Law Magistrates to try such cases which had occurred before the proclamation of Martial Law on the 19th. But I cannot give you the reference between the 31st March and the date on which Martial Law was proclaimed.

Q. It was a special order which did not apply to area officers, but applied to some magistrates. Were you under that?

A. To the best of my knowledge, I was.

Q. Were you authorized to try cases prior to the introduction of Martial Law?

A. Subsequent to the 31st or 31st March.

Q. Subsequent to the 31st March?

A. Yes.

Q. Under that special order?

A. I cannot give you the reference, but that is what I understood.

Q. You understood that you were a person who had that authority?

A. Yes.

Q. At any rate you found him not guilty of wilful negligence, but you recommended that he should be dismissed from the railway. Why?

A. The man was not mentally fit to hold his own in a crisis.

Q. Did you try in your capacity as Military Court any cases, which were not criminal matters at all, but which were claims to property?

A. No.

Q. Or claims to money?

A. No.

Q. We have been told of a case. I will leave it to some other member to ask you about it. But in one case, the temple case, Rs. 1,500 was ordered to be handed over to somebody and the tenant's property was ordered to be returned. Was that order given?

A. No.

Q. Did you try the case?

A. I did not try it; I would have nothing to do with it.

Q. Who had to do with it? Do you know?

A. Nobody; they did it themselves and put the blame on me afterwards.

Q. Then you were asked about the Martial Law order about property. The reference is to Martial Law Order No. 9. It is an order by Lieutenant-Colonel McRae, dated the 25th April 1919. It runs "I hereby order that no person who was a resident of Kasur on the 10th April 1919, shall leave Kasur without a special pass or permit duly signed by me or on my behalf. And further all such residents who have left Kasur on or after the 10th April 1919, will return to Kasur within four days from this date failing which measures will be taken against their property."

A. Yes.

Q. Were you the officer in charge of the party which was accompanied by the last witness, the Tahsildar?

A. That refers to another matter. The case you are asking me about refers to Kasur itself. I think the last case named by the previous witness was in a village somewhere.

Q. That case has got to be distinguished from cases under Order No. 9?

A. Yes.

Q. Under this order No. 9 I think you say that altogether six houses were visited?

A. I think that is correct.

Q. In case of people who had not returned, the earthen vessels were destroyed, clothes burnt and charpoyis removed, etc., for the accommodation of the troops?

A. That is so.

Q. Now as regards the other case where the Tahsildar went, were you a member of that party?

A. I never left Kasur.

Q. I want to refer you to the last paragraph of your statement. "Shortly after the raising of Martial Law from the city, there was a noticeable influx of a type of individual whose attitude towards authority was not a good example for the people of Kasur, many of these being, not merely truculent, but openly defiant. One heard such expressions." Then you give some expressions. "Unless there was some tangible offence, it was unfortunately impossible to deal with such persons, but in cases where the railway had anything to recover from them they were sent to do work in the goods yards equivalent to the amount to be recovered from them in the event of their being unwilling or unable to pay."

A. That is correct.

3 December 1919.]

Captain A. C. DOVETON.

Q. In the latter case of persons who committed no offence, but who owed the Railway some money, they were also made to work.

A. I can give you an example. If a ticket collector demands a ticket of a man, the man becomes openly abusive and threatening. He has got no ticket or anything and he is determined to push his way out of the station. The Railway officials are not able to deal with large crowds of people and they generally let such people go, unless they have some Military supporter at the back of them, because it is too complicated a business to recover money in such cases. And I thought it was up to me, in view of what had happened in April at Kasur station, to see that there was special order preserved at that station. And I made it my business to see to it.

Q. By reason of Martial Law being on the Railway, had you power to have the man before you for a debt due to the Railway and make him work it out by labour?

A. I did not deal with cases of debts to the Railway, but for behaviour at the station. As regards cases of debt, the business did not concern me at all. It was the man's general demeanour that concerned me.

Q. You had him before you for punishment for that conduct. You ordered him to do a certain amount of work and you measured the amount of work by the amount of the ticket or money or whatever it was that he owed?

A. Approximately so.

Q. I did not quite gather that from your statement. May I take this from you? This was not applied to people who had nothing to do with you, i.e., it was not applied to the ordinary civilian in the street. It was only applied to persons whose conduct to be insolent or not to be respectful?

A. It had nothing to do with people outside the Railway.

Q. It applied to people who were truculent and in connection with conduct of passengers while at the Railway station?

A. Yes.

Q. And you were letting them in for being visited by Martial Law because of their conduct in the Martial Law area, viz., on the Railway?

A. Exactly.

Q. In this case did you have them before you at once and try them as a Military court and sentence them to do this?

A. No; they were brought before me and I heard what had to be said all round and I decided whether it was a case for punishment or not. If not, I told them to let the man go. If I thought he deserved punishment, he went up to the goods shed to work it out.

Q. In some of these cases there have also been the ordinary punishments inflicted, viz., lashes?

A. I thought it was too much. My idea was to reduce punishments, because, on the whole, order had been restored and people were inclined to behave themselves as a whole better, and I was trying to cut down punishments.

Q. In Appendix IV* of your statement there are one or two groups of offences. (The last line but one.) I see 4 persons got 20 stripes; they were Railway menials. What sort of offence did they commit?

A. The offences were insubordination, slackness and interfering with the smooth working of the railway.

Q. What sort of slackness was it. It is a little bit hard to be sentenced to be flogged for slackness?

A. It was a repeated and aggravated offence.

Q. What sort of slackness was that? Four persons got 20 stripes. You may remember something about the nature of the case?

A. I can remember one case. A man did not turn up for duty. It is a thing which happened frequently. The mail train was delayed 10 minutes owing to this man not turning up for duty. I understand that this is a serious offence on the railway.

Q. How many stripes did you order him?

A. Five.

Q. Then you say for offences against railway officials, one person got 5 stripes. Was that for insolence or assault?

A. Assault and things of that nature.

Q. There is one offence in that appendix, viz.; being abroad at unauthorised hours. One person was imprisoned for 24 months, one person got 30 stripes and one person was fined Rs. 10. Was that the same person who got a cumulated sentence or was it two different sentences?

A. Appendix VI* makes it quite clear, I think. It is shown in Appendix VI, No. 22. But it is not clear from this appendix. I think I remember the case. The man was not merely abroad, but he was actually committing burglary at the time. He was removing grain, as far as I recollect, from somebody's godown.

Q. You gave him 2 years and 30 lashes?

A. Yea.

Q. Then five persons were sentenced to 120 months and 5 persons were sentenced to 150 stripes for assaulting a civil official. Was that one gang of 5 or were these 5 separate cases?

A. This is the case of a kumbardar who was assisting the Military in getting hold of some people who were implicated in the riot. The five accused got hold of this man and had it not been for the intervention of somebody, they would have beaten him to death. He was brought before me in a very bad state and the five men were tried by me.

Q. What did you sentence them to? Did they all get the maximum, 2 years and 30 lashes?

A. Yes.

Q. Just about this habit of genuflexions. Was that something that you did to people for special reasons or do you make everybody do that?

A. I inflicted that on people who were brought before me for any offences. There were no particular cases. It was not confined to special cases.

Q. When you sentenced them to this punishment was it at the close of the proceedings that you expected them to do this? Did you make everybody do that?

A. No, not in the cases of those who were acquitted.

Q. But in the case of people who were convicted, you ordered this before they left the Court?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you seen anything like that in your career as a Military Officer?

A. No.

Q. When did you invent this? Was it early in your career as a Military Officer or later?

A. I started it at Kasur.

Q. Did you start this practice about the 23rd of April?

A. I practised it subsequently.

Q. Did you go on with it for weeks or months, roughly?

A. I should say it went on for a month.

Q. Why did you drop it?

A. Because I thought people had come to a reasonable frame of mind.

Q. During the time, I take it that it was in force, when civilians met a Military Officer in the streets you expected them to salute the Military Officer?

A. In the Indian fashion.

Q. Did you have any cases arising out of failure to do that?

A. People failing to do so had instruction.

Q. Had you anything to do with persons who failed to salute?

A. They had to attend so many parades, and there was an officer who instructed them.

Q. You ordered them to attend a parade?

A. Yes.

Q. In some instances, cases of failure to salute were brought to your immediate notice. If it was reported what was the enquiry you held?

A. I never heard any cases unless they were brought by some reliable persons.

* Will be found in Lt.-Col. McEac's statement at page 362.

Captain A. C. DOVETON.

Q. Did any of these people say 'I did not see the officer' or anything of that sort?

A. I suppose he would have if he wanted to.

Q. You had a regular parade for the purpose?

A. Yes.

A. I understand that when Martial Law was in force in Kasur the custom was to make civilians salute the officers. There has never been such a custom of making civilians salute every soldier? Is that so?

A. No.

Q. Did you expect every Military officer to be saluted?

A. I did not. Because we were bringing to the notice of the civilian population that they had now got to deal with other officers, that they were to be under Military Officers, saluting might be a very useful practice just as in the army and make people recognise that they had got to look to different officers for the maintenance of order.

By Sir C. H. Setalvad—

Q. I want to know a little more about this punishment that you inflicted, of making people work in the railway goods? People that were sent to the goods shed were escorted?

A. Well, there was an escort.

Q. They were sent under guard?

A. I do not think any one was sent under guard.

Q. How were they to be taken to the goods sheds? Somebody took them in custody and took them to the goods sheds?

A. Somebody took them.

Q. They were not free to go away?

A. Certainly not.

Q. After you pronounced the sentence, virtually, they were in custody?

A. Yes.

Q. And while working in the goods shed, they were also virtually in custody?

A. There was nothing to prevent them going away.

Q. They would then be running away surreptitiously?

A. It would be.

Q. For all particular purposes, they were in custody?

A. The man is expected to stay there until he has finished his job.

Q. What sort of work was expected from him?

A. Loading and unloading bales.

Q. It was heavy work that they were expected to do?

A. It need not be. It depends on the individual, whether it is heavy or light.

Q. To load and unload bales is certainly heavy work for ordinary people?

A. The man can take his time about it; he can take the maximum amount of time. There is nobody to ask how much he did.

Q. Was there somebody to look to that work being done?

A. Nobody, except the Railway employees.

Q. And the man could not go there and be idle?

A. He had to load and unload and do a certain minimum amount of work, I presume, Sir.

Q. Then does it not come to this, when the man was made to do the work for a whole day, he was for all practical purposes suffering rigorous imprisonment for that day?

A. I cannot say.

Q. That day he was practically in custody. He had to load and unload bales. Don't you think that amounts to rigorous imprisonment for that day?

A. I do not know the definition of rigorous imprisonment.

Q. You know people sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for 5 days or a week; you know what work they are ordinarily made to do?

A. Yes. I do not know what work people are made to do in gaols; I have heard.

Q. You have not seen it yourself?

A. I believe they are made to work there.

Q. The work that these people were made to do was no easier than the work which prisoners in gaols under rigorous imprisonment have to do?

A. I did not intend it to be.

Q. You intended it to be a rigorous imprisonment for a day or two when they were put on that work? You meant it to be so?

A. When I meted it out I thought I met the case.

Q. You meant it to be hard work for them for that day or two?

A. I did not express anything as to the intensity of the work. I gave what work I thought suitable.

Q. You told me what the work was, that is, loading and unloading bales, a pretty heavy work; you have also told me that he was for all practical purposes in custody during that period. Does it not come to this: For that day or two days the man was for all practical purposes in imprisonment and doing hard labour?

A. I think you are the best judge of that. I ordered certain punishment; it is not for me to compare it with the punishment administered in jails. I intended the punishment to fit the crime.

Q. You intended the punishment in the case of the people whom you sent to work in the goods sheds to be of the character I have described. Is it so?

A. If I thought that a day's work in the goods sheds was a proper punishment for the offence I gave it.

Q. I quite see it; you considered it proper. In cases in which you did consider that punishment proper you meant that punishment to amount to what I have described?

A. I meant the punishment as a day's work. I saw what work was done in the goods sheds ordinarily and I meant it to be the same.

Q. Leave it there. Now turning to your report: "Shortly after the raising of Martial Law from the city, there was a noticeable influx of a type of individuals whose attitude towards the authorities was not a good example for the people of Kasur, many of these being not merely truculent, but openly defiant." "Unless there was some tangible offence it was unfortunately impossible to deal with such persons....."

People who were merely truculent or openly defiant you were unable to deal with as that by itself was not tangible offence?

A. What is implied is that was I felt myself unable to deal with them by means of ordinary punishments under Martial Law.

Q. In the cases in which people was truculent or openly defiant you found yourself unable to deal with them by the ordinary Martial Law punishment?

A. I felt I was not justified in applying the ordinary Martial Law punishments.

Q. In the cases of people that you have described here, as being truculent or openly defiant, you found yourself unable to deal with them by the ordinary Martial Law punishment. Is that so? Or you thought that the Martial Law punishments were not suited?

A. Yes.

Q. Then you go on to say "in cases where the railway had anything to recover from them they were sent to do work in the goods yard equivalent to the amount to be recovered from them in the event of their being unwilling or unable to pay." That means, if I understand it aright, that if any of these people who so behaved owed anything to the railway then you dealt with them by meting out this punishment in the railway goods shed.

A. These people were certainly made to work; not merely the people who owed money to the railway.

Q. I did not say that. Those people who were truculent or openly defiant and in addition to that owed money to the company; these you dealt with by meting out this punishment?

A. Yes; that is true.

Q. Then, does it not come to this that, if they had not owed anything to the railway then you would not have given them this punishment; or rather you could not have given them this punishment?

A. I think the last paragraph is clear.

Q. I am on this paragraph for the present.

3 December 1919.]

Captain A. C. DOVETON.

A. It is not meant to imply that if they did not owe anything to the railway, they would have escaped that punishment; but if they showed any sort of defiance of authority they also were put on to this work.

Q. Take the case of a person who was truculent or defiant, but did not owe anything to the railway at all; you still punished him with work in the goods shed?

A. It depended on the degree of the offence.

Q. What did you do? I am merely taking your statement in that paragraph. After stating the case of people who were truculent or openly defiant you say "unless there was some tangible offence it was unfortunately impossible to deal with such persons." Does not that imply that you found it impossible to punish people who were truculent or openly defiant because that of itself was not a tangible offence? Is it not so? If that paragraph means anything it means that?

A. Yes; the fact of their remonstrance, of their owing something to the railway.

Q. Do I understand you there to say that persons who were truculent or openly defiant you found yourself unable to deal with because being truculent or openly defiant by itself was not a tangible offence?

A. That was what I meant.

Q. Then it was the circumstance of their owing something to the company that enabled you to punish them in the manner you did?

A. I thought so.

Q. You thought it was an offence, the circumstance that they owed money?

A. It aggravated the offence.

Q. I am not concerned whether it aggravated or not.

A. These are the reasons.

Q. I am not asking reasons. You have already told me that being merely truculent or openly defiant was not a tangible offence by itself. I put it to you: Does it not follow then that it was because of the circumstance that they owed something to the railway you were able to give them this punishment. Is it not so?

A. It did not enable me to give the punishment. I felt that I was justified in giving the punishment.

Q. The proposition that I put is: for being merely truculent or openly defiant you found it impossible to deal with them because it was not by itself a tangible offence?

A. That is what it means.

Q. If that is correct, then you were able to deal with these people and give them the punishment because of the circumstance that in addition they owed something to the railway? Is not that so?

A. That was the view I took.

Q. I wanted to get at your frame of mind at that time. Therefore you really caught hold of the circumstance of something being due to the railway to punish the truculent and the defiant with this punishment. Is it not that the real position?

A. It was to deter people of this frame of mind; that was my object.

Q. In order to punish the truculent and defiant attitude of the people which you could not do otherwise, you caught hold of the circumstance that they owed something to the railway and gave them this punishment?

A. It assisted me.

Q. The circumstance of their owing anything to the company assisted you in awarding this punishment.

A. Yes.

Q. Now these sadhus, were they sent to the goods shed where there was a store of lime?

A. You mean to imply they were only sadhus?

Q. I did not imply anything at all. We were told that some sadhus were ordered to be whitewashed as a special punishment?

A. That is not punishment.

Q. You explained how this rumour arose. You said that some sadhus were present?

A. Some persons.

Q. Some persons including the sadhus?

A. There were sadhus among the people were sent to work in the goods shed and there was lime there, and that was how they got whitewashed. I do not know if these were the people referred to.

Q. Did you see them?

A. I saw some people covered from head to foot with lime.

Q. How did they cover themselves from head to foot?

A. Very simple experiment. If you go on a wet day to a pile of lime and shift one foot to the one side.....

Q. That was how it occurred?

A. I do not know of any specific case. I thought it might be the natural result.

Q. How many people did you see like that?

A. I do not know how many people I saw; as far as I can recollect there were 5 or 6 people there who were put on to this work.

Q. What were these people guilty of?

A. I cannot tell you for which offence they were punished. I am unable to tell you; I did not take notes.

Q. It must be what is mentioned in your statement being either truculent or defiant in addition to owing something to the railway?

A. Not necessarily owing something to the railway.

Q. Without owing anything to the railway?

A. Not necessarily owing to the railway.

Q. Merely being truculent was sufficient?

A. I did not say so.

Q. Have you awarded this punishment to others?

A. It is quite possible.

Q. You have awarded this punishment in the case of other offences not mentioned in paragraph 17?

A. It must have been something which is referred to in paragraph 17.

Q. All that is referred to in paragraph 17 is:—truculent in addition to owing something to the railway?

A. Will you look at the last five lines of my report?

Q. "In view of the fact that this particular station had been the scene of murder and unprecedented violence a short time previously, similar treatment was meted out to all persons who threatened railway officials or made a show of violence to them, by way of pointing out that the station was Government premises, and that they should be regarded as such."

So, people who were threatening railway officials were also awarded this punishment?

A. That is so. I have tried in this paragraph to include in general terms the type of offence that was so punished.

Q. What do you mean by "making a show of violence to"? A man was asked to show his railway ticket and he was evading that: is that what you mean?

A. If a man was brought before me by one of the railway officials or a Passenger Superintendent for threatening him or doing something of that sort; I enquired into the case and I decided what was to be done.

Q. All sorts of cases were dealt with under "made a show of violence"?

A. I have put it as clearly as I can.

Q. You cannot illustrate it further?

A. No.

Q. If a person used threatening language to a railway official you sent him to work for a day or two in the goods shed in the manner you have described.

A. Yes.

Q. Then, Captain, about your order making people rub their forehead on the ground. How many people were made to do this?

A. I did not make any notes of this.

Q. But have you told Mr. Justice Rankin that all those who were convicted were made to do this?

A. I cannot remember the number.

Q. There must be a large number?

A. Probably.

Q. The offences with which they were charged and for which they were convicted were all of varying degrees of gravity. They were not all offences of the same gravity?

A. No.

Q. A man may be convicted for a slight offence or for a very heinous offence, and they were all made to do this

3 December 1919.]

Captain A. C. DOVSTON.

irrespective of the nature of the offence for which they were convicted?

A. Yes, at the beginning.

Q. Everyone was made to do this before he could leave?

A. Yes.

Q. I understand you to say that this you insisted upon in order to induce in them a reasonable frame of mind?

A. My words did not imply that.

Q. What was it intended to accomplish, this order about their putting their forehead on the ground?

A. To people in that place, there was no such thing as authority and everybody was his own master. The main object was to impress on the people that was not the case, that everybody was not his own master and they had got to conform to law and order.

Q. Was not that sufficiently brought home to them by the convictions and sentences that you inflicted on them? Why this addition?

A. I thought it was suitable.

Q. You convicted the man and sentenced him to six months' rigorous imprisonment. Would it not bring home to him very vividly the strong arm of law and authority?

A. It probably would.

Q. Why on the top of that did you inflict this punishment of putting his forehead on the ground?

A. I don't think it an infliction.

Q. Don't you think, Captain, it must have been felt by them as an humiliation?

A. Not necessarily.

Q. Not necessarily?

A. No.

Q. Have you ever observed in ordinary life any person putting his forehead on the ground in the manner in which you were insisting upon these people to do?

A. I have.

Q. To whom?

A. To a wealthy Indian.

Q. To a wealthy Indian?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that a very unusual thing or an ordinary thing in ordinary life?

A. It is not for me to say. My activities are confined to the regiment.

Q. Well I understand a person doing that to a religious saint, or a religious leader. Have you ever seen people in ordinary life doing this?

A. I have just said I have.

Q. Captain, how often have you seen this?

A. I am unable to say.

Q. Then you spoke of the lectures you gave at Kasur?

A. Yes.

Q. You said you talked straight to the people. What sort of talk was that?

A. It was all reported by the police. I have not got a copy myself.

Q. Can we get a copy to see?

A. I think it should be possible.

Q. Then with regard to whipping you say you inflicted 40 sentences of whipping?

A. I think that is correct.

Q. That excludes the six students?

A. I know nothing about the boys.

Q. You are not responsible for the boys that had been whipped?

A. If I had come before I should have been.

Q. It had been done before you came?

A. Yes.

Q. Then with regard to reprisals against property, you visited six houses, and in some cases you burnt clothes and destroyed vessels. Do you think you were justified in doing this by the Martial Law orders?

A. I do.

Q. You do think so?

A. Yes.

Q. These houses were the houses of poor people or of rich people?

A. They were certainly not rich people.

Q. Vessels and clothes were their only property?

A. Only clothes. I saw they were mere rags. They had removed everything of value.

Q. How did they appear to be poor?

A. Because there was nothing to be found there.

Q. They were poor, because they did not possess anything?

A. I did not say the men were poor. I did not know or find out their social position.

Q. Then you know, Captain, the gallows were put up at the Kasur Railway Station?

A. They were putting up the gallows.

Q. Was that done by your order or by the orders of the higher authorities?

A. Not by my orders.

Q. It was done by the orders of the General Officer Commanding?

A. I cannot tell you.

Q. You don't know, Captain. You must have received those orders as Administrator of Martial Law in Kasur?

A. I did not receive them.

Q. Who received those orders?

A. I cannot tell you.

Q. Who put up the gallows. Being the Martial Law Administrator at Kasur you must have known?

A. I was not an engineer, but an engineer was sent down from Lahore who put up the gallows.

Q. So no gallows were put up in Kasur in your presence. But it must have been done under your orders or the orders must have been passed on to you?

A. I received no orders. A man came from Lahore who brought the component parts from there.

Q. And without telling you at all or without asking your permission he put up the gallows?

A. I was perfectly aware of what was going on, but it was not my business to interfere.

Mr. Cocks, Deputy Inspector-General of Police:—
The gallows were put up by the Commissioner's orders who was acting under the orders of the Government.

Q. The Commissioner may have passed those orders but Captain, you were the Martial Law Administrator at Kasur?

A. It was not my business to have anything to do with the erecting of the gallows.

Q. You had not been told about it?

A. Never. Nothing.

Q. A large number of people were arrested in Kasur?

A. A very large number.

Q. And where were they kept?

A. In the prisoners' cage.

Q. What is that?

A. An area that was wired in for the purpose.

Q. It was specially erected?

A. Yes; it was specially erected.

Q. Was it near the station?

A. Yes.

Q. How many prisoners were kept in that cage at a time?

A. I cannot tell you.

Q. Did you inspect the cage from time to time?

A. The figures had nothing to do with me.

Q. Then who erected this cage?

A. The Faridkot Sappers and Miners.

Q. They were the agency that did the erecting?

A. The cage was in existence when I arrived at Kasur. I arrived on the 23rd April.

Q. When you arrived it was already there?

A. Yes.

Q. You say that these arrested people were sent to Lahore?

A. I believe so.

Q. And they were so sent handcuffed and in ropes? What authority was doing that?

A. That was not my business. I cannot tell you.

Q. You were the Martial Law Administrator, Captain, at Kasur, you had authority for everything?

A. Colonel McRae.

Q. After you assumed charge on the 23rd April, the Courts at Kasur were doing their ordinary business?

3 December 1919.]

Captain A. C. DOVSTON.

- A. The Civil Courts, you mean ?
 Q. Yes, the Civil Courts ?
 A. No, I never visited them.
 Q. And the Criminal Courts ?
 A. I presume they were.
 Q. The police were doing their ordinary work ?
 A. They must have been.
 Q. And how soon after you assumed charge, Captain, did things come to a normal state in Kasur ?
 A. What do you mean by normal state ?
 Q. That there was no disturbance, that people were not defiant or anything of that sort. Normal means quiet state ?
 A. It is rather difficult to answer. People settled down by degrees.
 Q. When did they settle down to a very great extent ?
 A. I should say before the middle of May.
 Q. You say in your report, Captain, that Martial Law was liked by the people ?
 A. I was given to understand so.
 Q. So much so that you say that they would have liked Martial Law permanently, i.e., Martial Law would have been welcomed by the law-abiding people permanently in Kasur ?
 A. I gathered that it was a form of justice which was appreciated.
 Q. You gathered they preferred Martial Law to ordinary Civil Law and liked a permanent system of Martial Law Administration ?
 A. It was the impression which was given to me.
 Q. The people actually used to come and tell you that they would prefer Martial Law to ordinary civil administration ?
 A. Summary Courts for certain offences was the point.
 Q. They liked Summary Courts ?
 A. Yes.
 Q. They liked people being tried summarily without any appeal in preference to the ordinary law ?
 A. They preferred that to spending money on appeals.
 Q. People do not like appeals in this country. Is that your experience ?
 A. It is not my experience.
 Q. At Kasur people liked to give up their right to appeal and liked summary Martial Law Courts in preference to ordinary Civil Law, they were so much in love with these Military Courts ?
 A. I am merely telling you the opinion that was expressed to me. I don't know what was at the bottom of it.
 Q. Then you say that they were so pleased with the administration of Martial Law that they actually presented an address to you ?
 A. Yes, they presented it to me.
 Q. When was this ? On what date ?
 A. I cannot give you the date, but I think it was in the beginning of June.
 Q. Who had signed this address ? Was it signed by anyone ?
 A. I cannot tell you off-hand.
 Q. Was it signed by any leading man of Kasur ?
 A. The leading men were present when the address was given to me.
 Q. But they did not sign ?
 A. I cannot tell you. I have not got it here to refer to it.
 Q. What did the address say ? (It does not matter if you do not remember.)
 A. It has been duly reported.
 Q. What do you mean when you say "from this time onwards, there was a marked difference in the attitude of the people and sullen submissiveness was replaced by cheerful obedience, so much so that after the last detachment of troops had been removed, it was possible for an European to walk through the city and be treated with courtesy by the gentry, while the humbler people were willing slaves." Do you think, Captain, that people willingly wished to be slaves ?
 A. The term is not used literally.
 Q. What do you mean to convey by that ? How did they indicate that they were willing slaves ?
 A. They were willing to help you in anything in any way you required.
 Q. You think that indicated to you that they very much liked the Martial Law ?
 A. I am sure they did.
 Q. May it not be indicating the contrary, i.e., that they were so much afraid of the Martial Law ?
 A. It was done in cheerful way when I was going in the city.
 Q. They did it in a very cheerful manner ?
 A. Yes.

At Lahore, Thursday, the 4th December 1919.

PRESENT:

The Hon'ble LORD HUNTER.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice RANKIN.

The Hon'ble Mr. W. F. RICE, C.S.I., C.L.E., I.C.S.

Major-General Sir GEORGE BARROW, K.C.B., K.C.M.G.

The Hon'ble Pandit JAGAT NARAYAN.

Sir C. H. SETALVAD, Kt.

Sardar Sahibzada SULTAN AHMAD KHAN.

Mr. H. WILLIAMSON, M.B.E., I.P., Secretary.

Captain A. C. DOVETON—continued.

By Major-General Sir George Barrow—

Q. Was it your experience that in the administration of Martial Law there were a great number of minor breaches of discipline and minor offences which could not be foreseen when the general proclamation bringing in Martial Law was issued, and in regard to which it was left to the officer administering the law on the spot to devise minor punishments? Did you not find that you had to devise minor punishments to meet these minor breaches of regulations?

A. I did, Sir, that was my experience.

Q. That if you had only applied the punishments laid down in the proclamation it would have been very hard on the people?

A. That was the view I took. There were offences which probably at the beginning of Martial Law might have been punished with the punishments laid down in Martial Law proclamations, but afterwards it was not necessary.

Q. And your sole desire was really to make it weigh as lightly on the people as circumstances would permit?

A. That was what I intended.

Q. These minor punishments are really only in the nature of what in the army you might consider as minor punishments awarded by minor officers, or even by Company officers?

A. That is the best equivalent to them.

Q. And these minor punishments would not in the ordinary course of events be reported to superior authority? It is not the custom in the army to report them?

A. No, Sir, it would not be necessary.

Q. Did the people ever express or show that they resented these minor punishments specially, or more than they would have other punishments?

A. No, Sir, I think I had the moral support of the people.

Q. They preferred them to being fined or flogged for some minor breach?

A. Infinitely. In one case a man elected one of these minor punishments in place of a fine.

Q. That punishment of loading and unloading bales that you gave, I suppose, whether that is heavy or not would depend on the number of bales lifted in the day and the number of men who worked at each bale?

A. Yes.

Q. In your experience soldiers have often been put to the labour of loading and unloading?

A. It is almost an every-day occurrence.

Q. Do soldiers look upon it as a very terrible or severe labour?

A. No, certainly not.

Q. I suppose I need hardly ask you to explain the expression 'willing slaves'?

A. I think it is a colloquial idiom.

Q. Is it not a fact that the experience of people as regards the application of Martial Law is this, that before they have any acquaintance with or experience of Martial Law they look upon it as something very terrible, and when it is administered it is found to be terrible only to the people who are malefactors and evil-doers? I would put it this way. Is it not rather like people who have never been in an aeroplane, who think it is very dreadful and almost so dreadful as to be frightened off it, and when they go up in an aeroplane they find, if they only sit still, it is rather a pleasant experience than otherwise?

A. I should think so.

Q. I do not want an expression of your opinion, is that what you arrived at from the attitude of the people?

A. As soon as things were made clear to the people, they had no apprehensions at all about Martial Law. In the beginning it was something new to them and they naturally did not understand it.

Q. Of course Martial Law is not introduced as a pleasure?

A. Exactly.

Q. You did not find that the well-to-do people felt it very hard?

A. No, Sir. I went out of my way to remove any suspicion from the minds of the people as to whom it was directed against.

Q. I would like to know about this order of yours in regard to people who were truculent in their demeanour and who owed something to the railway. You mean that anybody in the city was asked if he owed anything to the railway and was immediately brought in, or was it for offences committed at the railway station?

A. It was for offences committed on the railway and at the railway station.

Q. Only in connection with the railway?

A. Only in connection with the railway.

Q. Did you ever see Ghulam Mohi-ud-din, after he was released?

A. The first time I saw him after his release was at one of my meetings and subsequently he came and called on me.

Q. What did he say to you when he called on you?

A. I cannot tell you what he said, Sir, but he came of his own free will and he conveyed to me that he did not resent the treatment that had been meted out to him; although he did not entirely agree with everything that had been done, he did not resent it. Under the circumstances he thought it was inevitable and he knew that as he was innocent he would come out top.

Q. What did he mean by that when he said he would come out top?

A. He meant to say that he would be cleared.

Q. Did you ever see that other man Dhanpat Rai after he was released?

A. He also came and called on me.

Q. Of his own free will?

A. Of his own free will.

Q. What did he say?

A. He thanked me as a local representative of the Government at Kasur for the treatment meted out to him. He also conveyed to me that he did not resent

4 December 1919.]

Captain A. C. DOVSTON.

the treatment which he had received, and he said that as he was an innocent man it was owing to British justice that he was released.

Q. Therefore he was not bearing any resentment or thinking that he was treated with extraordinary harshness?

A. That is what he conveyed to me.

Q. Were you yourself able to go about in the city freely?

A. I did so daily. I went out of my way to mix with the people and get into touch with them.

Q. Did they treat you sullenly or as if they did not like you?

A. I always got a very cheery greeting wherever I went. I could go into any part of the city and I was welcome. I was on very good terms with the people altogether.

Q. Now, I do not think we have got quite to the bottom of this question of these prostitutes at the station. I should like you to give us in your own words what the story was.

A. As it has been presented it is rather a misrepresentation, though not deliberate. I can clear the thing up. There was a case which I had to deal with in which some men of loose character were involved and they were sentenced to whipping. I ordered the Sub-Inspector who was in charge of the arrangements to get hold of the local bad characters to witness this, because I knew that they were associates of these people. The last thing any sane man would think of would be to send for other people of the description referred to in the evidence. However I did not anticipate such a thing. I was only dealing with men. The whipping was fixed for the evening; I cannot tell you what time, but in the cool of the evening. That afternoon I went into the city to one of my meetings to talk to the people and I got back three-quarters of an hour late, and I was horrified to see all these people martialled there, and I remonstrated at once with the Sub-Inspector and he said, "but those were your orders, you said to bring all the loose characters." I did not want these people brought. It was late and I could not afford any police to escort them away from the vicinity of the station. I did not want them hanging about in the vicinity and there was nothing to do but to get on with the whipping, and that is how they happened to be there. It was not my wish or my intention that they should be there.

Q. There is one other point that I wish to ask you about. You made some men who were leaving you, touch the ground with their foreheads. When did that idea originate in your mind? Have you ever heard of its being done in the East before?

A. Yes, Sir, until quite recently I believed it was quite a general thing for people to do to those in authority, and I have reason to believe that it still exists in the districts in Sind.

Q. It is quite common in Sind; I have often had it done to myself voluntarily.

A. And I have also seen it done to Indians of position.

Q. So, though it might look like it at first sight to a European who had not been in the East, it would not be considered by the people as such an extraordinary act of debasement?

A. No.

Q. Therefore you did not look on it like that or meant it to be that when you ordered it? It might not have been a judicious order but you did not consider you were ordering them to do something debasing, simply because it has been done and is done even to this day?

A. Yes, Sir.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. Have you ever had a ride in an aeroplane?

A. No, I have not.

Q. Therefore you cannot say as to what would be the feeling of a ride in one?

A. I merely know what other people have told me.

Q. About Mohi-ud-din and Dhanpat Rai, you considered that what they stated to you was genuine?

A. I had not any reason to believe to the contrary.

Q. According to you, a man who was innocent, who was arrested, who was handcuffed and roped, who was kept for more than three days in jail, against whom no charge was ever made, who was never informed of any charge against him, after he comes out of jail he comes to you and he praises you and British justice? Having regard to all these facts you thought what he stated to you was genuine and that he had no resentment?

A. I thought he had the good sense to see it was part of the general scheme.

Q. Was it not a fact that he came to kiss the hand of him who kicked him? It did not strike you like that? That the people were so much terrorised and they had lost so much of their self-respect that they went to you and made a profession of British justice and said they had no resentment? Was it not the case of a man who came to kiss the hand of the man who kicked him?

A. He certainly did not.

Q. Did any of these men who were very mercifully flogged by you in order that they might be saved other serious punishment, complain to you? Do you mean to say that they had such an appetite for another flogging that they should have complained to you and made matters worse?

A. I am afraid I do not understand you.

Q. You had recourse to the punishment of flogging, and certain persons were flogged. I want to know whether any of them showed any resentment or objected to it?

A. Nobody expressed any resentment at all.

Q. Do you think that they had appetite for another flogging? Would you expect any person to come up before the Martial Law authorities and say "we resent your sentence of flogging"?

A. They would probably tell their friends and acquaintances and it would eventually come to my ears.

Q. By way of a rumour?

A. I do not know whether you can call it a rumour. That is the general atmosphere.

Q. With regard to bringing prostitutes to witness the whipping was there any reason for assembling these bad characters?

A. Very much so.

Q. And if these prostitutes had gone without an escort there would have been some danger?

A. I could not say that definitely, but I understand that at the time they were responsible for a large amount of trouble at Kasur.

Q. Your paragraph 4 says "abuses on the part of well-to-do classes during this period were instantly checked, all foodstuffs bought in bulk from the retail dealers being immediately returned." Under which regulation did you exercise this power? There are about 12 to 19 regulations that were promulgated at Kasur; under which regulation was this exercised?

A. I exercised no power. They did it themselves. It had been brought to my notice that these people were gathering foodstuffs at the expense of the poor, and when they saw that order they returned it.

Q. As a matter of fact you never punished any persons for purchasing Rs. 4 or 5 worth of grain?

A. All the punishments are laid down in the appendix.

Q. I want to know whether any persons were punished for purchasing more than Rs. 4 or 5 worth of rice or wheat?

A. No one was punished by me. If they had been punished it would have been embodied in the appendix.

Q. Under which clause would it.....

A. I would have given the definition of the offence as I have done.

Q. Is it not a fact that when you asked Ghulam Mohi-ud-din to address the people on the Rowlatt Bill your idea was to put the man in a tight corner?

A. No, I wanted to clear him.

4 December 1919.]

Captain A. C. DOVSTON.

Q. That he may in your presence prove himself to be a turn-coat?

A. That was not my object. I wanted to give the man a chance of clearing himself.

Q. Look at paragraph 6 where you say "called upon Ghulam Mohi-ud-din for a speech and which, if he is guilty of the things of which he is suspected, must have proved him a turn-coat before his audience, most of whom heard him speak on the day of martial."

A. That is perfectly true.

Q. Have you had any occasion to administer Martial Law before the 23rd April?

A. No, never.

Q. Was Martial Law administered in any area where you were as an officer during your service?

A. No. I have no personal experience.

Q. Now with reference to paragraph 9 as regards reprisals against property; these were taken as the result of non-compliance with a Martial Law proclamation, under which persons who had left Kasur on or after the 10th April were ordered to return to their homes within a certain number of days. Altogether six houses were visited on three different occasions, earthen vessels being destroyed, clothes in some cases being burnt and *charpoy*s being removed for the accommodation of the troops? Is that true?

A. Yes.

Q. Was this proclamation published in English or Urdu in any of the newspapers?

A. There is no newspaper in Kasur.

Q. Well, in Lahore and Amritsar or in any other journal either in English or Urdu?

A. It was published in vernacular newspapers in and round Kasur.

Q. That is all?

A. Yes.

Q. Was any evidence recorded by you before you took these steps? Was there evidence for taking the steps you did?

A. I am sorry, I do not follow.

Q. Your regulations was promulgated after a week—about a dozen persons were not found in their houses and instead of punishing them for their absence their property was destroyed. Was there any proper occasion for the exercise of this power?

A. It was sufficient for me that the people were not present. As regards one or two dozen. I would like to correct that figure by saying that it ran into hundreds.

Q. It was sufficient for you that these people were not in their houses?

A. I made enquiries as to whether they had returned or not and I was informed that they had not returned.

Q. And then these steps were taken?

A. Yes.

Q. Had you any evidence that these persons had any knowledge of your regulation?

A. Relatives were warned to communicate immediately with the absentees.

Q. No evidence was taken by you as to whether these persons were able to communicate with their relatives? I take it that these steps were taken without satisfying yourself as to whether or not these persons were aware of the regulation?

A. There was no time for making enquiries. That was the time for action. We were trying to round up the people.

Q. You considered it justifiable that without knowing whether a man was aware of your regulation to destroy his property and.....?

Major-General Sir George Barrow.—This is a young officer who was doing his duty under trying conditions and he is not a criminal in the dock.

The Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan.—My Lord, May I ask what was the relevancy for that remark?

The President.—You may continue.

Witness.—I did exactly what I considered to be right at the time. There was no time for thinking, there was no time for meals. One was working at Martial Law from the time one got up in the morning till the time.....?

Q. Am I not allowed to probe the matter and to sift the evidence to justify his action? I do not think it is my duty to accept everything that has been stated in the statement. It is my duty to sift the evidence on which he justifies his action.

A. There is no time to consider things in a crisis.

Q. You say in paragraph 10 "Martial Law though not understood at first by the inhabitants, proved rather a blessing than otherwise, if one can judge by the repeated expressions of gratitude which were heard from the lips of people who had nothing to gain by thus expressing themselves." Can I get any names of the citizens of Kasur who said this?

A. If I had known that an enquiry was going to be held I would have gone about with a note-book. I do not remember any names. It was a general expression of opinion.

Q. You do not think that they were in abject terror and wanted to please you?

A. I did not see any signs of it.

Q. I think you will agree with me that so far as Indians are concerned they have a horror of being flogged?

A. I do not think it is confined to Indians.

Q. Notwithstanding the fact that the normal punishment was flogging you thought the people were feeling happy and they were expressing gratitude?

A. The law-abiding people had nothing to fear from flogging.

Q. Do you think that the Indians would be grateful to the British Government if flogging were substituted for fines and other punishments in the Indian Penal Code? Did they express their gratitude to you because a number of people were being flogged?

A. It was not the flogging that made them happy. It had the effect of establishing peace instantly and people were not led into wasting their money in lengthy litigation. The people were better on the whole. I am talking of the people as a whole, not individuals.

Q. You say "there is no doubt that the swift and stern punishment inflicted, especially whipping, had a very salutary effect, and persons contemplating any villiany would think more than twice before embarking on it." That is your opinion?

A. That is the impression I gained.

Q. You say again "that general relief was felt at the punishment and removal to Lahore Jail of certain persons with a bad record who had kept the police busy and the inhabitants on pins and needles for some time past." Who were these persons who were sent to Lahore and how many of them?

A. It is all on paper somewhere. I made a record of these cases. I do not think they were sent because there was a bad record against them but because they were rioters. It just happened that they were such people who could not keep out of mischief.

Q. And probably the people came and expressed their gratitude to you for sending these people away to Lahore?

A. That was the general belief?

Q. How did you come to know of that?

A. From expressions I heard on different occasions.

Q. When the people came in a body to thank you?

A. It was in general conversation that I heard these expressions.

Q. You consider that stern punishments were inflicted?

A. At the beginning they were stern.

Q. You refer to a case where you say thirty lashes were awarded to a badmash and two were sentenced to two years rigorous imprisonment. Is there any record of that trial?

A. If you refer to Appendix IV,* third line from the bottom, you will find it. Offences impersonating and assisting to impersonate a C. I. D. official with intent to obtain money.

* Will be found in Lt.-Col. McEag's statement at page 81.

4 December 1919.]

Captain A. C. DOVETON.

Q. Was there a separate trial or were they tried together?

A. Separate.

Q. What was the evidence against them?

A. I cannot tell you.

Q. There would be a record of it?

A. A statement of the case is put in. There is a form in which these cases are recorded and a statement of the offence against the accused. It is not taken down. The forms are supplied and in the different columns the particulars are filled in.

Q. May I know what was the offence with which this man was charged?

A. I cannot tell you without referring to the record.

Q. Is it not a fact that this man was punished simply because he was a friend of the other man? There was no evidence against him?

A. He was actively assisting this man.

Q. There would be evidence of active participation by this man?

A. Exactly.

Q. At least some persons came before you and deposed to the fact that he was impersonating a C. I. D. official and this man used to help him?

A. He used to be with him and possibly he would assist him.

Q. You have already stated that an address was presented to you in appreciation of the gratitude of the people? I would just like to know whether a copy of it was taken by the police and forwarded to headquarters.

A. The original was with me.

Q. The police were very anxious to get hold of this and to send it to headquarters?

A. I believe they had orders to report on all matters.

Q. The address was couched in the most penitent terms, combined with assurances that a repetition of the shameful events of the 11th and 12th April was impossible, and expressions of gratitude for the treatment they had received?

A. Exactly.

Q. Do you remember who read the address and by whom it was signed?

A. It was an elderly maulvi who read it as far as I remember.

Q. And there was a representative gathering of the gentry there?

A. Yes.

Q. On what date was this address presented to you?

A. It must have been about the end of May or the beginning of June.

A. It was a few days preceding the Ramzan.

Q. It appears to me that your fame as Martial Law administrator was not confined to Kasur alone, and you say that large numbers of people from outlying villages were in the habit of bringing their wrongs and grievances to be righted by the administrator of Martial Law?

A. It was in the Kasur area.

Q. You say "by the administrator of Martial Law, whether it was within his province or no. Though the majority went away disappointed, the fact did not deter others from coming, such was their faith in the justice of Martial Law." May I know whether they admired the man or the method?

A. I think you must ask somebody else that question.

Q. May I understand as to whether they were complainants who were enamoured of this or were they accused persons who also liked this?

A. I take it the accused people if they were innocent.

Q. If this is your impression about complainants and the persons accused the guilty man is not keen on receiving punishment. So far as the persons complained against are concerned they would not like it?

A. I did not say so.

Q. If I remember aright,—if I am wrong please correct me—in answer to a certain question that was put by

Mr. Justice Rankin in reference to the first paragraph of section 99 of your statement you have stated that you exercised this power thinking that such orders would be covered by the general power that rests in the administrator of Martial Law for maintaining order and avoiding a breach of the peace. If I am not wrong that is the correct version of your statement?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you kindly refer to sections 1 and 2 of paragraph 17. Is it not a fact that paragraph 17 has nothing to do with these cases which you dealt with for breaches of the peace, because you say in paragraph 2 "in view of the fact that this particular station had been the scene of murder and unprecedented violence a short time previously, similar treatment was meted out to all persons who threatened railway officials or made a show of violence to them, by way of pointing out that the station was Government premises and that they should be regarded as such," so similar treatment was awarded to those who were mentioned in paragraph 1.

A. I considered that there are different degrees of intensity in the same offence.

Q. So far as your paragraph 1 is concerned, having regard to the language used by you, were any persons threatened at the railway station?

A. I considered there were different degrees of intensity of the same offence.

Q. But you will agree with me that according to your expression of opinion the cases dealt with in paragraph 1 of section 17 were without your jurisdiction. You have admitted that?

A. I don't say so.

Q. Well now what is the meaning of these words "unless there was some tangible evidence it was unfortunately impossible to deal with such persons?" The natural meaning is that you could not deal with such cases under the Martial Law?

A. I considered that I was not justified in applying Martial Law punishments in those cases, I mean the regular punishments laid down.

Q. And you say that "shortly after the raising of Martial Law from the city there was a notable influx of a type of the individual whose attitude towards authority was not a good example for the people of Kasur, many of these being not merely truculent, but openly defiant. One heard such expressions as 'hukm kya chiz hai, ham ko hukm nahin jante.' Unless there was some tangible offence it was unfortunately impossible to deal with such persons, but in cases where the railway had anything to recover from them they were sent to do work in the goods yard equivalent to the amount to be recovered from them in the event of their being unwilling or unable to pay." That is how you put the case?

A. Yes, that is how I have expressed it.

Q. Do I understand you rightly that as soon as the Martial Law was abrogated from the city of Kasur, these people came to the railway station and in your presence and in your hearing used these words "hukm kya chiz hai" or were these words reported to you by some other persons?

A. I actually heard myself such expressions.

Q. Therefore you thought that the state of affairs was such that notwithstanding the fact that you had administered Martial Law at the railway station from the 23rd April up to the beginning of June, as soon as Martial Law was abrogated, these people came to the railway station and in your presence and in your hearing they used these expressions?

A. As a rule they did not come to the railway station. They arrived from outside. They were travellers to Kasur, and I have said that there was an influx of people.

Q. Then you mean to say that these people were travellers either by mail trains or passenger trains, is it not so?

A. A very large majority of these men were travellers.

4 December 1919.]

Captain A. C. DOWSON.

Q. And they had some squabbles either about purchasing something or about getting drinking water or having something to do with the railway officials and perhaps they said to the railway officials we don't understand this Aukh, and therefore you arrested these men; you detained them sometimes for two days, sometimes for one day and made them do this work at the railway station?

A. Would you repeat some of that question? I can't follow you.

Q. The persons who were using these expressions were passengers by mail or passenger trains?

A. Yes, a large majority of them.

Q. And, they were punished for expressing their feelings in these words?

A. Not necessarily for expressing these feelings, every one did not express himself in that way.

Q. So far as your statement in paragraph 1 goes, I don't find anything else, except that these words were spoken by passengers who have arrived by mail or passenger trains, and therefore, they were not allowed to proceed further and were detained and they were ordered to do work at the goods shed. Am I right?

A. Are you taking a particular case? If one were to record every single incident that occurred, it would run into a three-volume novel.

Q. I am asking a general question. You said that the majority of the persons, you refer to in paragraph 1 of your statement, were those persons who were travelling by mail or passenger trains, and that these persons were detained and made to work in the goods shed for a day and sometimes for two days?

A. If I considered that the man's conduct justified that, I ordered it.

Q. I want to make that clear. A large number of these persons who were ordered to work at the goods shed were passengers by mail or passenger trains.

A. They could not possibly be acquainted with the local conditions. The fact is that they did things which were so obviously wrong. It was not a question of their not being acquainted with the orders.

Q. My point is that a large number, or at least an appreciable number of these persons who were detained for two days and ordered to do work at the goods shed were passengers either by mail or passenger trains?

A. They were passengers by incoming trains. That is perfectly correct.

Q. Did you bring them under any regulation, or were any orders passed by you for breach of any regulation? I want to know under what regulation you were punishing them?

A. I used my prerogative.

Q. But still it should be under some regulation. You cannot use your prerogative like that.

A. It was up to me to preserve law and order, and I was exercising my will.

Q. Would they come under the regulation of maintaining law and order?

A. Exactly.

Q. Therefore, have you shown all those convictions under that heading "law and order"?

A. No, as I said yesterday, I did not show these. They were not convictions, they were minor punishments.

Q. Under the Martial law order that was issued by General Beynon, if these persons refused to obey your order, they would be liable to very serious penalties. After you passed an order if any persons disobeyed the order issued under Martial Law by General Beynon and proclaimed at Kasur on the 16th, they were liable to very serious consequences?

A. They would have probably been punished very severely at the beginning.

Q. You said that some of them were kept for two days and some for a day?

A. That is so.

Q. I would naturally expect that there would be some record somewhere putting down the name and saying that a particular man was ordered to do work at the goods shed for one day or for two days as the case may be?

A. I did not consider it necessary.

Q. How would you be able to find out if your order was obeyed or not? If there was no record of the name or the number of days he was ordered to do work at the goods shed, how would you be able to find out if the man had obeyed your orders or not?

A. I could find out from the station authorities where the man had been working. If a man attempted to go away before his job was finished, the matter was reported to me.

Q. Supposing in two days about 12 or 15 persons had been ordered by you to work at the goods station. Out of these 15 persons, 5 were ordered to work one day and 10 for two days. If there was no record as to which of them was to work for one day and which of them for two days, how would you be able to find out whether your orders were obeyed or not and whether they were liable to any punishment?

A. There were never more than three at a time.

Q. Supposing the man turned up the next day, how would you be able to punish him?

A. The men were not put in custody.

Q. I want to find out how you would be able to satisfy yourself. Supposing a complaint is brought against him that he was ordered to work at the goods shed and he had not turned up. On the 2nd day supposing he turned up and said that he was ordered to work only on one day. How would you be able to punish that man if there was no record?

A. It was very easy to ensure a man coming back again. He merely deposited some of his property.

Q. Now about the threatening of railway officials, how many cases were there of this description?

A. Are you referring to regular punishments?

Q. I am referring to your statement in paragraph 2 of section 17?

A. I cannot possibly tell you. I have said that I did not keep a record of those things.

Q. There is no record even of persons who threatened the railway officials?

A. There is no record.

Q. By record I don't mean anything bulky. I simply want to know if the name of the person and his offence have been recorded? Is there any such thing?

A. No.

Q. With reference to certain persons who were sent for trial before you for what had happened previous to the 16th, in answer to Mr. Justice Rankin you said that you took cognisance of those cases because by a subsequent order or ordinance retrospective effect was given to the regulations. May I know to which regulation you refer? So far as I understand, there was no such regulation.

A. I cannot give the reference.

Mr. Justice Rankin:—I think he has referred to the power given by the General Officer Commanding to certain of the officials to try cases that happened prior to the declaration of Martial Law.

Witness:—That is so.

Mr. Justice Rankin to the President:—It is not an ordinance, it was a proclamation by the General Officer Commanding.

Witness:—Perhaps I can clear the matter up. I cannot give you the reference, but the case was sent to Lahore for trial, and it was returned to me, I believe on the advice of the Legal Remembrancer.

Q. Now with regard to the question put to you about a certain temple case where it was alleged that you ordered the restitution of certain money and you ordered certain tenants to pay their rent to some other person, you said that it is absolutely incorrect. I want to know what was the basis of that false rumour.

A. I could not tell you what the basis of that rumour was, but I can tell you this that a complaint was made while I was there. Some time afterwards, possibly a month or six weeks afterwards, Dhanpat Rai with another man came to me and remonstrated with me about this.

4 December 1919.]

Captain A. C. DOVERON.

He was not too overawed and terrorised to come and remonstrate with me. I however pointed out to them that I had issued no such orders and they said "Well, so and so and so and so said that you did." I told them that it was absolutely incorrect. I told them at the time that I had nothing to do with this business and if they paid the money it was their own look out. They asked me if those people could be brought before me to confront me. I said, "Yes" They were brought, and I reiterated the orders that I had given at the time. There is however a point worth noting, and that is, when the case originally came up these people came armed with the money in notes ready to hand over. I refused to have anything to do with the case, and then outside my office they sat down and the money changed hands. I warned them twice while it was going on that it was their own look out.

Q. I think the regulation about circulating false rumours about the administration of Martial Law and about the Martial Law authority was in force from the very beginning at Kasur, especially about circulating false rumours about the method of administration of Martial Law and the Martial Law authorities?

A. Yes.

Q. It appears to me that a large number of these false allegations were in circulation in Kasur. May I know why none of these persons were hauled up and punished?

A. I had no evidence about these false rumours.

Q. At least Mr. Marsden informed you of some of those rumours?

A. Mr. Marsden spoke to me just before I left. He asked me about certain things that had happened.

Q. It is certainly a very serious matter. I want to know, if these false rumours were in circulation why no steps were taken against the people who were circulating them?

A. Martial Law had been removed from Kasur at the time. It was only in force on the railway line.

Q. You said 16 or 17 days before you left?

A. The people who circulated these rumours were residents of Kasur and not of Kasur Railway Station. Martial Law was only in force in the railway area. It was out of my jurisdiction.

Q. Therefore may I take it that these rumours were afloat after the 10th of June?

A. They were not brought to my notice till after then.

Q. Then did you try any kidnapping cases?

A. No. I know what you are referring to. At least I think I do.

Q. Was any kidnapping case tried by you?

A. No.

Q. There was a kidnapping case which was tried by you and in which the parties were represented by pleaders, and the trial was held at the Railway Station and some woman complained to you that her daughter had been kidnapped by three or four persons?

A. You are quite correct. I know the case.

Q. This thing did not happen at the Railway Station at all, it was in the interior?

A. This happened when Martial Law was in existence over the Kasur area.

Q. Therefore I want to know if you could try kidnapping cases under the Penal Code, under Martial Law Regulations?

A. I did not try them for kidnapping. I tried them for an offence prejudicial to good order and public safety, because in view of the fact that Martial Law was in operation, so long as these things happened, one wondered what else would not.

Q. Therefore according to you, you were authorized to try all offences punishable under the chapter "Offences against persons and property," that is practically the whole of the Indian Penal Code?

A. I answered that question yesterday. I said anything which in any way affected the administration of Martial Law, I tried. I had to use my discretion. I was the man on the spot.

Q. And was this complaint brought to you direct or did the case come to you through the police?

A. The case was brought to me. I handed it over to the police for investigation.

Q. It was investigated by the police?

A. Yes.

Q. There was another kidnapping case where the accused were discharged, but was there any other kidnapping case where the accused were punished?

A. No other case.

Q. Do you know that any station clerk was flogged under your orders?

A. At the beginning, yes.

Q. He was given 30 lashes?

A. Yes.

Q. May I know what his offence was?

A. As far as I recollect, he was the organizer of a meeting in contravention of a Martial Law order.

Q. Will there be any record of this case?

A. There is a record.

Q. You refer to that case where 9 persons were arrested in a room, and he was one of them?

A. Yes.

Q. And these 9 persons were arrested in the quarters of these clerks?

A. Yes.

Q. They were present at one place and in a compound?

A. Yes.

Q. There were 9 persons?

A. Yes.

Q. May I know under which regulation was the meeting together of 9 clerks in the railway compound prohibited?

A. It was an illegal gathering. I cannot give you the number of the regulation.

Q. In the Martial Law proclamation there is an order that not more than 10 persons can meet without a permit. That, I think, would not apply to 9 persons who lived in the same compound in small barracks, if all these persons met together, I don't think that order could apply to these people. The proclamation says that 'not more than 10 persons can meet without a permit,' but in this case there were only 9 persons whom you arrested and one of them was flogged?

A. There was a local order to the effect that not more than 5 persons could meet. I could not quote the order at the present moment. It was a local order at the beginning under which not more than 5 persons were allowed to meet.

Q. And you thought that that order would cover the case of clerks who were living in the same quarter?

A. They did not live in the same quarter. They were scattered over a wide area. There was a good interval between the quarters. The quarters are in pairs, and the information that was received was that a meeting was to be held in one of the quarters, and as the railway employees had been mixed up in the doings of the 11th or 12th, the case was brought under the Martial Law proclamation.

Q. And this very person was a prosecution witness in the Kasur Conspiracy and Riot case?

A. I don't know.

Q. This incident is described in this way: 'On the afternoon of the 28th April information having been received that the Kasur Railway Staff, practically all of whom were implicated in the riots and against whom there was but little useful evidence to hand, were about to hold a secret meeting that evening to decide their future policy. The house was surrounded and entered by the military, 9 persons were arrested. The police eventually obtained useful evidence from these persons.' Is that correct?

A. I know nothing about that.

Q. It was on the 28th under your administration?

A. I was administering on that date.

Q. Was Mustanohand, Assistant Station Master, at Kasur, arrested under your administration of Martial Law?

4 December 1919.]

Captain A. C. DOVETON.

A. Not under my orders. I don't remember the man by name, I know the name, but I don't remember who the man is.

Q. Was any bull sent by you to the veterinary hospital during your stay there?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember the name of Lala Ratha Kishan in connection with this bull?

A. I remember his name very well.

Q. Did you pass any order against him that the bull in front of his house was not sufficiently fed, that he should take care of it in future and that he should see that the bull was properly fed. Sometimes afterwards you again went back and saw that the bull was not properly fed and you sent it to the veterinary hospital and asked Lala Ratha Kishan to pay all the expenses?

A. I think I told him that the animal should either be destroyed or properly cared for.

Q. Subsequently the bull was sent to the veterinary hospital and he was made to bear all the expenses?

A. He volunteered to pay the expenses, I believe.

Q. He volunteered to pay?

A. He told me he was quite prepared.

Q. He told you that he would gladly pay all the expenses. Before that bull was sent to the veterinary hospital, did you not ask him to feed that bull properly?

A. He said that it was in his compound and I told him that it must be looked after properly.

Q. Do you remember an old man named Sundar Das, aged about 62, a shop-keeper, who was sentenced to one month's imprisonment, and some stripes and a fine of Rs. 50?

A. I do not remember the case.

Q. Because he purchased wheat from somebody else?

A. I remember that case.

Q. You remember that case. After serving his sentence, he came out of the jail and died?

A. I know nothing about that. I think that is a mistake. I do not think I ordered any stripes at all.

Q. That man had no stripes?

A. Not in that case.

Q. He was only fined? Do you remember what happened to him?

A. I think he got a month's imprisonment and possibly a fine.

Q. What was his offence?

A. I think it relates to being abroad at unauthorised hours. I was asked about it yesterday. He received the stuff from the man I was questioned about yesterday.

Q. He received this stuff from that man?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the offence? He received it. What is the harm? I cannot see what crime he committed.

A. He also made a false statement in my court.

Q. As a witness?

A. Yes.

Q. That is he purchased wheat from certain persons whom you punished?

A. He made a false statement.

Q. Was he punished for perjury?

A. That is what it amounts to. He made a false statement in my presence. He had been conniving at the offence of this man who was outside at unauthorised hours and was removing wheat or some such thing.

Q. I do not understand. What do you mean by saying that he was conniving with this man? Is that in not observing the Curfew order?

A. Perhaps I expressed myself wrongly. He received the wheat which he knew to be stolen from this person.

Q. Was he punished for receiving stolen property or was he punished for perjury or for both?

A. He was punished for both. He made a false statement in my presence in connection with this case.

Q. Apart from the address that was given to you, was any ode composed in your praise?

A. Yes.

Q. That was composed by a person who was brought under arrest, by a Mahomedan, who happened to be a poet. And the punishment you inflicted on him was to compose a poem.

A. The man in question disobeyed an order of mine, and when he was brought before me he expressed his appreciation of my justice. Then I asked him if he was a poet, and he said he knew very well how to compose a poem.

Q. You therefore asked him to compose a poem in appreciation of you?

A. Exactly. It was a very good piece of work and he read it in the market place.

Q. About making a line on the ground by the nose, you have stated that it was not done?

A. That was not done.

Q. So the punishment about rubbing one's forehead on the ground was exaggerated to this?

A. Yes.

Q. I am questioning you only with a view to give you an opportunity of denying it. I will give you the name. May I know whether one Lala Kesav Das was ordered by you to draw lines? Do you remember it?

A. As regards the name, I do not know.

Q. As regards the punishment, it was never inflicted?

A. No.

Q. Was Lala Kesav Das punished by you for purchasing Ra. 4 of rice, as you thought it was a large quantity and he should have purchased only for one rupee? Because he purchased for Ra. 4, you punished him?

A. I do not know the name. I do not know Lala Kesav Das.

Q. Do you remember you punished a certain person for that offence?

A. I do not remember. If it is on record, he will have been punished.

Q. It is not on record at all. This is an allegation and I give you an opportunity of denying it.

A. I cannot have punished the man.

Q. Not for one minute do I say that all these allegations that I am putting to you are true. That is not my case. But I give you an opportunity of denying. Mention has been made of these things in certain statements and other places. Therefore I give you an opportunity of either admitting or denying them.

A. I have already stated that it is not true.

Q. Nor about the purchase of Ra. 4 worth of rice?

A. No. The man approached me for assistance and I ordered the stuff to be returned to him. That is the only case I remember.

Q. The name of that tenant was Durga Das. He was alleged to have been ordered to pay rent to Jagan Nath; upon his refusal, he was fined and punished. I only want to give you the name.

A. That is entirely wrong.

Q. Did you ask any Muhammadan to dance with a fool's cap on his head?

A. No. But I could tell you what that originated in. A man was endangering public safety by coming in a train with the door open and sitting on the foot-board. I made him stand in a less precarious position for a certain length of time by way of punishment.

Q. And he was not made to dance?

A. No.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. When you took over charge on the 23rd April were you given any written or verbal instructions as regards your authority?

A. Some instructions came to me by post. Some, I think, came direct from the Lahore Division and some came through the Ferozepore Brigade. There was a paper defining my powers.

Q. On the same day that you arrived in Kasur?

A. I was handed some telegraphic instructions before I proceeded to Kasur.

4 December 1919.]

Captain A. C. DOVETON.

Q. Before you arrived at Kasur ?

A. Yes, simply stating the powers of an area officer.

Q. Have you any recollection what those powers were ?

A. The first thing that I got was the maximum punishments that could be inflicted. That was 30 lashes and Rs. 1,000 fine and 2 years' rigorous imprisonment.

Q. That is if anybody committed breaches of your orders. What I want to get at is what you were told as to what authority you had or what orders you could give ?

A. I am afraid I did not quite catch the question.

Q. I want to know whether you were given general authority to do what you thought best under the circumstances or whether a limitation was put only as regards punishments or whether you were also told as to what your authority was and what you could do and what you could not do ?

A. The orders that I received were very brief, and anything outside, the orders I did entirely on my own ; I used my discretion.

Q. You received certain orders ; and outside the orders, you used your discretion ?

Q. Were you told that you could use your discretion or did you do it of your own accord or were you told that you had authority to do what you thought was best ?

A. There was nothing in the order saying that I could use my discretion, but one is after all in the habit of using one's discretion in the Army, if a new situation arises.

Q. I see there is nothing in the orders, but because in the Army anyone has to use his discretion if a new situation arises, you thought you could use your discretion ?

A. That is so.

Q. When you were ordered to come to Kasur, you got a telegraphic order containing brief instructions ?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you, after your arrival at Kasur, get any detailed instructions by post or otherwise ?

A. Yes, there was a sheet of foolscap paper printed, which gave instructions.

Q. Did you get a proclamation which was issued by General Beynon on the 19th April ?

A. That was received. I had several copies of that.

Q. After receiving that, may I take it, you considered that to be your authority, the scope within which you could work ?

A. I took it that anything in that proclamation might be modified by orders issued locally to suit the local situation.

Q. Orders issued by whom ? Issued by you ?

A. By the Officer Commanding, Kasur.

Q. I simply want to understand the position. General Beynon's proclamation applied to the whole area and of course there were certain local orders issued, I take it. It is the same in Kasur as elsewhere ?

A. Yes.

Q. Issued by you or Colonel McRae ?

A. Colonel McRae was commanding at the time. Those were the only orders. Nothing varied in essential particular from the general order.

Q. I want to be clear about it. Your authority was contained in the general proclamation issued by General Beynon and the local orders issued by Colonel McRae as regards Kasur. Is that correct ?

A. Yes ; so long as he was there.

Q. And when he was not there ?

A. It devolved upon me.

Q. Entirely ?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you supposed to issue these local orders that you thought necessary for the preservation of law and order in Kasur ? Were they to be consistent with the general proclamation of General Beynon or could you go outside the scope of those general orders ?

A. I am trying to catch what you mean.

Q. My meaning is this. You said that General Beynon issued a proclamation which applied to the whole area under his command in Amritsar, Lahore and Kasur.

There were local conditions which required local orders. And therefore they were issued, first by Colonel McRae and afterwards it devolved upon you. Is that correct ?

A. Yes. None of the local orders, to my knowledge, went against the original proclamation of General Beynon.

Q. That is the question of going against the general order. My question is whether they were consistent with that order ?

A. I think so.

Q. That is what I want to know.

A. Yes.

Q. Therefore I take it that your authority was limited and confined by this general proclamation of General Beynon. Am I right in concluding that from what you said ?

A. Yes, generally speaking. But I want to know what you mean by limited.

Q. I mean that you could not go beyond this proclamation, your powers were confined or defined by the proclamation.

A. Are you referring to punishments out of the ordinary ?

Q. I am referring to the offences created and punishments provided for them. My question is whether your local orders, in your view, were to be consistent with these general instructions or could you give any orders which were not consistent with these general proclamations and orders of General Beynon ?

A. I would just like to know your conception of consistency.

Q. I want to know whether you thought you were bound by the orders of General Beynon or whether you thought that under certain local conditions you had authority, if necessary, to go outside his authority.

A. I believe that under certain local conditions, I could, to a certain degree, go outside this authority.

Q. What was that limitation ? You said ' to a certain degree.' To what degree ?

A. There again I had to use my discretion ; I had to do what I thought was right.

Q. Do I understand that whenever you thought it necessary in the interests of law and order of Kasur to give any orders which might be outside the authority given to you by the proclamation, you did so in the interests of law and order on your own discretion ?

A. Yes.

Q. Therefore I do not see the object of this general proclamation of General Beynon at all Officers who gave certain orders had absolute discretion to do what they thought best in the interests of the preservation of law and order. It came to that ?

A. I take it from a soldier's point of view. He would not say that the general operation orders are absolutely of no use simply because the local Commanding Officer has to use his discretion in emergency or under certain conditions.

Q. I understand that a soldier generally has a sort of general instruction given to him, that if circumstances arise, he may use his own discretion outside the orders of the commander.

A. Circumstances not defined there are left to his discretion.

Q. There must be some sort of general rule somewhere. It must be somewhere in your book of instructions, that circumstances may arise in the course of the soldier performing his duties, and it is necessary for him to use entirely his own discretion.

A. Are you talking about the proclamation ?

Q. You said that you took it from the soldier's point of view. It must be laid down somewhere ?

A. It is laid down.

Q. What I want to get at is this. There was the general proclamation of General Beynon. Is it laid down in this proclamation that local officers who are in charge of the command of local areas might in the interests of law and order use their own discretion if circumstances require, whether it be consistent with these orders or not ? It does not say so anywhere.

4 December 1919.]

Captain A. C. DOVETON.

A. I do not remember that this has been said anywhere in General Beynon's proclamation.

Q. In the Army somewhere it is generally laid down ?

A. I am afraid we are at cross purposes. I do not remember that this is mentioned in the proclamation. It is a rule in the Army that a man should use his discretion, but I think you are referring to General Beynon's proclamation. I do not see it is laid down in General Beynon's proclamation.

Q. It is not there. You, being a soldier, took it in that sense. What I do not quite understand is that in this proclamation it is nowhere laid down. This use of discretionary power is somewhere laid down in the Army Rules ?

A. Yes.

Q. Here it is not laid down, only in the Army Regulations it is laid down. Because it is laid down in the Army, you think you have been given this discretionary power. Here in General Beynon's proclamation, you have not been given any such discretion.

A. I look upon the proclamation as the orders of an Officer Commanding in the field. He does not say in his orders that the local commanders shall use their discretion, because it is taken for granted as it is one of the principles of a soldier.

Q. You take it in that sense ?

A. I look upon that proclamation as exactly the operation orders of a field commander.

Q. You thought it necessary in dealing with local conditions to use your discretion ?

A. Yes.

Q. As regards this order requiring people to rub their foreheads on the ground, according to your own discretion you thought it necessary ?

A. Yes.

Q. And you do not regard it as inconsistent with the instructions. You thought it was quite consistent ?

A. At that time I thought so.

Q. May I take it that you thought it necessary in the exercise of your own discretion ?

A. My view at the time was it was necessary to exact the last degree of respect, and it is a thing which I dropped as soon as I thought it was not required.

Q. It did not strike you as being very much like the order of General Dyer which made villagers crawl ?

A. I never associated the two.

Q. Supposing anybody had refused to obey that order, what punishment would you have inflicted ?

A. The occasion never arose.

Q. Supposing it had arisen, how would you enforce your order ?

A. I really do not know. I have no idea. Probably I would have acted on the spur of the moment.

Q. You would have ordered some punishment ?

A. I do not think I should have ordered a punishment. I think I should have got somebody to assist him to do it.

Q. To assist him to do it forcibly ?

A. Yes.

Q. You have spoken in your report, paragraph 6, about your delivering lectures and "straight speaking." What do you mean by "straight speaking?" Can you give us an example ?

A. In ordinary colloquial language I would call it "telling off." I explained to the people that false representations were made, that they had been misled and they had got themselves into trouble and those responsible had got off scotfree.

Q. Reading some of the paragraphs of your report one is led to believe that the administration of Martial Law in Kasur was such as to make Kasur a peaceful land flowing with milk and honey. The place had become a land of wail and sorrow, I think, when some of the restrictions were removed ? Do you think they would rather have it for all times ? I would not then call it Martial Law.

A. My opinion is that though it might not be welcome to individuals it was of great benefit to the community as a whole.

Q. They did not like probably law's delays, those long procedures and pleaders' heavy fees : they would get rid of these and have their cases decided immediately ?

A. They would not be induced to spend money on litigation and I think in a short time the benefits of summary courts would soon be apparent.

Q. Referring to your expression 'willingly done' of course you mean that people rendered willing obedience ?

A. I mean to say that the attitude of the people was friendly. They assisted you in anything to the best of their ability and cheerfully. For example, a bicycle breaks down ; half a dozen people rush forward and take it to the nearest military post. I mean to say, they are prepared to help you.

Q. Do you not see that if a person were placed entirely under another person and subordinated completely as regards his attitude, his postures and actions, to the will of another who can punish him as he liked, would he not be very obedient to the person who is the commander ?

A. If people realize that these punishments were not directed at individuals but were necessary for establishing law and order I do not think they will have anything to complain of.

Q. You do not think that sort of ready obedience and what is called cheerful helpfulness is rendered to every absolute despot in the world ?

A. No doubt. But I went out of my way to talk to the people. I became intimate with them. I went in among them and spoke to them.

Q. Despots also talk to them ; they do all sorts of things to them because they have fear of instant punishment. Is that not enough to make people render absolute obedience ?

A. I do not think they can do in the same spirit.

Q. Spirit is inside ; nobody knows, you can only see its outside action ?

A. I think one can make a good case by the general demeanour of the people.

Q. That is, you were a good despot personally.

A. When I went in amongst them I was received with cheerful greeting.

Q. But certainly you would not like to substitute despotism for the reign of law, apart from any benefit ?

A. I do not think I suggested that.

Q. Probably the people of Kasur liked it ; they were so fond of Martial Law ?

A. An Indian gentleman who was giving evidence expressed it this way :—

"Martial Law is right but it depends on who administers it."

Q. I can quite understand that. Men who administer it they may have personal influence with the people ; that is all right. Would you think it very ungrateful on the part of the Kasur people not to have petitioned the Government to restore to them the blessings of Martial Law ?

A. I do not think so.

Q. When you arrived at Kasur, was it in a condition of turmoil or was it perfectly quiet ?

A. It was hardly quiet. The attitude of the people was ugly.

Q. In what manner was it shown ?

A. One can feel but not describe its atmosphere.

Q. So there is nothing which you can tell us ?

A. I cannot give any specific instances.

By Mr. Herbert, Government Advocate—

Q. With regard to the question of milauing, you said that you knew of your own knowledge that this was done by Indians. Is it a fact when you say that when two Indians meet, one in order to show his respect will bend down and touch his feet ?

A. I believe so.

Q. All these cases that you tried or orders that you passed, offensive or otherwise, were they not in the honest bona fide belief that what you were doing was the right thing to do under the circumstances ?

A. That is so.

4 December 1919 ]

Lt-Col H. St. G. M. McRAE.

Lt-Col. H. St. G. M. McRAE, D.S.O., 2-15th Sikhs, Commanding Kasur Area.

By the President—

Q. Colonel McRae, when did you arrive at Kasur ?

A. At 2 o'clock on the afternoon of 12th.

Q. And from that time what was your position ?

A. I was commanding troops and administering Martial Law after the advent of Martial Law.

Q. I think you submitted to the Adjutant-General a report dealing with the situation in Kasur, and the action you took under Martial Law ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. I have to ask you about two points. The first is in connection with those warrant officers; you state in your report that apparently the warrant officers then lost their heads, fired off their revolvers over the heads of the crowd or at too long a range and then fled for protection to the station building. Was that the conclusion you drew at the time from the evidence of the witnesses ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You think that if they had fired straight at them and not in the air it would have been effective ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. In the last paragraph of your report you give the casualties that occurred at Kasur in consequence of the action of the mob. That list was made out from the information you had at the time ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. I see there one warrant officer killed, one warrant officer died of wounds, one British officer severely wounded, two British non-commissioned officers severely wounded, one Indian official severely wounded one British officer slightly wounded and four Indian officials slightly wounded, eleven casualties.

In the second part of your report you deal with information after your arrival. There is a reference in paragraph 29 to an aeroplane. What action was taken by an aeroplane in Kasur ?

A. On several occasions aeroplanes circulated in the city. On one occasion they dropped propaganda leaflets.

Q. Was any bomb dropped on Kasur or any machine-gun used ?

A. No, Sir.

Q. When you arrived at Kasur, what was the attitude of the crowd ?

A. The people had broken off and gone to their houses, the attitude of the people seen in the streets was sullen.

Q. I think you did no firing that day ?

A. No, Sir.

Q. On your arrival at Kasur I do not think you did anything for a day or two ?

A. My hands were tied by the civil authorities.

Q. When did you receive authority to act independently ?

A. On the proclamation of the Martial Law. On the 16th.

Q. In connection with the arrests that were made, did the military assist the police ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. When did you start assisting them ?

A. After the proclamation of Martial Law.

Q. Had they not assisted them previous to that ?

A. They assisted in picketing certain villages while the police searched—on the evening of the 12th.

Q. What village ?

A. One of the outlying villages, Khem Karan of Kasur.

Q. An armoured train arrived in the morning. You thought it was slow in coming into action ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did you receive information from Khem Karan, which is the next station on the Amritsar line, that considerable damage had been done there ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did you send any force there ?

A. I had no troops at my disposal at that time, Sir.

Q. Your first night was passed without incident at Kasur ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You suggested to Mr. Mitter to take advantage of the presence of the military and to search for stolen property, to make arrests ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Why did you make that suggestion ?

A. I thought it necessary to make some motion, otherwise there would be further outbreaks.

Q. What made you infer further outbreaks ?

A. From the nature of the people of Kasur.

Q. Did they seem to be of unsettled mood ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You made arrangements for certain bodies of troops to go from Kasur to neighbouring villages. When did you start that ?

A. After the proclamation of Martial Law.

Q. The Ferozepore column visited Kasur on the night of the 14th of April ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Then it went on to Khem Karan ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. On the 15th did Mr. Mitter come to see you at the railway station ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. That was your headquarters ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did he appear uneasy ?

A. Very much so.

Q. What was causing him uneasiness ?

A. He feared further troubles.

Q. Was anything said as to attempts being made to tamper with the loyalty of the troops ?

A. We inferred that attempts were being made to tamper with the loyalty of my regiment.

Q. Did you discuss the matter with him ?

A. I discussed with him and came to the conclusion that attempts had been made but there was no fear of the loyalty of the Sikhs.

Q. Was it disturbing ? Had you any doubt of the loyalty of the troops ?

A. Not for a moment.

Q. Were there rumours as to the destruction of the Golden Temple at Amritsar ?

A. No, Sir.

Q. Were you anxious that the rioters who had done mischief to life and property in Kasur should be arrested ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did you patrol the city day and night ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You sent detachments of Indian troops ?

A. Yes, Sir, with police.

Q. In what state was the city as regards business during this time.

A. A few shops only opened. Then shopkeepers came in conference and the shops were opened.

Q. On the 15th, the telegraph between Kasur and Amritsar was repaired ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And Mr. Marsden came and took over the duties from Mr. Mitter ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And you drafted the proclamation of Martial Law on the 16th ?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you on that day go to the town along with Mr. Marsden and there proclaim Martial Law ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. When you marched to the Town Hall was it very fully crowded ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. The surroundings were picketed ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You yourself read the proclamation in English and the Deputy Superintendent read the translation in the vernacular ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Were some questions asked by the audience ?

A. Yes, Sir.

4 December 1919.]

Lt.-Col. H. St. G. M. McRae.

Q. What sort of questions?

A. They were questions as to whether they would be right to hold religious meetings and about the curfew order.

Q. What did you say as regards the holding of religious meetings?

A. My orders were that no meetings should be held without permission.

Q. Did you indicate that they might apply for permission?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What was the attitude of the audience when they heard the proclamation?

A. Sullen and unrepentant.

Q. By unrepentant do you mean there was no open expression of regret?

A. I understood that they did not regret the occurrences.

Q. Before the end of the meeting, I think, the pleader, Mr. Dhanpat Rai, was arrested?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Was he sent to Lahore Jail?

A. Yes, Sir; under the orders of the Commissioner of Lahore.

Q. Immediately after the Darbar did you despatch five parties each of 10 rifles to assist the police in making further arrests?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And with it 24 arrests were made?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. In the following days a considerable number of further arrests were effected?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. How were the arrests in the outlying villages effected?

A. In the form of military operations. Villages were surrounded, the police then entered with military escorts and apprehended persons about whom they had reports.

Q. I think in Appendix I you give a detailed statement as to the different operations that took place?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Is that an accurate and full statement of those operations?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What effect had the execution of these raids on the outlying villages?

A. No offender felt safe.

Q. Had they in your opinion good or bad effect?

A. Excellent effect.

Q. On the 16th April, were the lady missionaries evacuated to Ferozepore?

A. Yes.

Q. Why was that step specially taken?

A. There was an embarrassing situation and I had to keep a British guard. I had not sufficient troops.

Q. Before the declaration of Martial Law were the lives of Europeans in danger?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What effect on the town had the declaration of Martial Law?

A. It had the immediate effect of quieting the town and restoring order.

Q. And I think you allowed the lady missionaries to return on the 22nd April?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. They left for the hills on the 6th May?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Was your military force in Kasur on the 18th April?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. We have been told about the cases of seven school-boys or students who were flogged, you may explain how that occurred.

A. The school-boys had taken a considerable part in the rebellion. They had been seen leading and inciting the mob. The action taken by me was to order certain school-boys to be flogged.

Six were whipped with three to six strokes each. I considered that this is the form of punishment that a boy received in an English public school for unruly conduct.

Q. I understand that you selected six more or less at random?

A. The schoolmasters were asked to select the boys, they picked out the smaller boys and boys of low caste.

Q. Did this whipping take place in public?

A. Outside the railway station.

Q. You suggested that similar whipping would be administered in an English public school. Was the whipping administered similar to that in an English public school?

A. We got it lower down. They had to have it on the back.

Q. Did any of the boys suffer any injury in consequence?

A. No, Sir.

Q. Was there a medical officer present when the whipping took place?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. The whipping was carried out with Cat o' nine tails?

A. Regulation sticks.

Q. I understand the other whippings did not take place in public?

A. At the station, Sir.

Q. Were such whippings imposed by you or by somebody else?

A. They were done by Captain Doveton.

Q. There were a considerable number?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. We have been told about the parading of the inhabitants of Kasur near the railway station for the purposes of identification. How many people paraded at one time? What was the largest number?

A. Under 1,000.

Q. Did you assist the police in assembling these people?

A. Yes. Also we assisted in closing the exits to the town to prevent robberies.

Q. How was the process of identification carried out?

A. The townspeople passed in single file before persons who had assembled for this purpose.

Q. Then did they pass before a number of different people who were identified or did they just pass before one or two on one occasion?

A. Both forms were adopted, Sir.

Q. How long were they kept out for the purposes of identification?

A. On one day they were probably kept out for six hours owing to the difficulty of collecting so many people and also of passing them in their presence.

Q. Were the military kept the whole day?

A. The military were kept the whole day and the public for a certain portion.

Q. On those occasions were the public addressed on the meaning of the Rowlett Act?

A. In one case in my presence. There were other cases.

Q. I think you took bicycles from people at Kasur and you paid for the repairs of those at certain local rates?

A. Yes.

Q. What were they used for?

A. They were used by the military for despatch riders and military patrols.

Q. Was it necessary?

A. Yes.

Q. Were they retained longer than it was necessary?

A. I cannot say. They were returned after I had left.

Q. Was there a large number of complaints about taking the bicycles?

A. No, Sir.

Q. Did an armoured motor battery from Kasur constantly patrol the road between Ferozepore and Kasur?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Had the armoured motor battery considerable moral effect on the people?

A. Great effect, Sir.

Lt.-Col. H. St. G. M. McRAE.

Q. Were the roads tampered with at all?
 A. On two or three occasions.
 Q. In what way?
 A. Water was let off on the road from the canal.
 Q. A good deal of water was let off which made a short delay in the passing of motors?
 A. Country roads are not metalled. They become bad by being watered.
 Q. You received information that a large number of Kasur people had migrated to Ferozepore and other places by road and rail?
 A. Yes.
 Q. What steps did you take in this connection?
 A. I had ferries guarded and watched them and also railway trains were stopped at the Kaiser-i-Hind bridge and searched by the police.
 Q. Was there any Martial Law Order against trains at Kasur?
 A. For a short time.
 Q. Now, we have had some evidence as regards accommodation for the prisoners. Where were they accommodated?
 A. Just outside the railway station.
 Q. Where a cage was constructed, as accommodation for prisoners at Tahsil and police stations was inadequate?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. It was constructed by some Sappers?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. The material was requisitioned from the town and paid for?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. You say here "The enclosure was surrounded by an eight foot barbed wire fence, to which were attached some 50 cow bells, an open shelter was erected in the centre and covered latrines at one end."
 A. Yes.
 Q. How was the food for the prisoners arranged?
 A. By the police or their relatives were allowed to bring food.
 Q. I think the police looked after the cage during the day time and the military at night?
 A. Yes.
 Q. How many had you, the largest number at one time?
 A. I kept no record. That is a matter with which police were concerned. Probably up to 150; they were over 100 at one time.
 Q. Was the cage inspected more than once?
 A. Continually.
 Q. By whom?
 A. By various officers. My senior officers inspected continually.
 Q. Was it found to be quite satisfactory as regards accommodation?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. Had you a medical officer in attendance?
 A. Always.
 Q. Did any cases of sickness occur?
 A. Not one, Sir.
 Q. I want to know whether during the time the cage was used health was fairly good?
 A. Yes.
 Q. So far as the better class of prisoners was concerned, if accommodation was available, they were lodged in cells at the Tahsil or police station?
 A. Yes.
 Q. The cage was finally closed on the 8th May?
 A. Yes.
 Q. How did you send prisoners to Lahore?
 A. The police actually took them and they were provided with military escorts. The men were handcuffed and roped together.
 Q. Why were they roped together?
 A. I know nothing about that.
 Q. Were the police concerned with that?
 A. Yes.
 Q. In an appendix you have given us information as to the number of arrests at Kasur?
 A. Yes.

Q. As regards that, the special tribunal at Lahore seem to have tried 67 and of these 67 there were 13 death sentences, 21 transportation for life, 9 imprisonment and 24 acquitted.
 A. Yes.
 Q. And as regards Khem Karan, seven were imprisoned and 16 were acquitted?
 A. Yes.
 Q. As regards arresting people, after the first trial had taken place at Lahore, did you make any arrest unless more than one witness identified?
 A. He may have been identified but was not arrested.
 Q. We have been told about reprisals that were taken against absentees. Can you give us any further information in the matter?
 A. It was the only way of inflicting punishment upon those persons.
 Q. Certain people had absented themselves against whom there was a good proof in the hands of the police of participation in the riots. Their furniture was destroyed. What was your policy? What sort of articles were destroyed?
 A. I don't know. I was never present on any of those occasions. That is hearsay.
 Q. Had you given any instructions as to what sort of property should be destroyed?
 A. My proclamation was that their property was liable to be destroyed.
 Q. Is your proclamation here?
 A. Yes.
 Q. The proclamation is "No person, who was a resident of Kasur on the 10th April 1919, shall leave Kasur without a special pass or permit duly signed by me or on my behalf. And further all such residents who have left Kasur on or after the 10th April 1919, will return to Kasur within four days from this date, failing which measures will be taken against their property." Is that the only proclamation you issued in connection with this matter?
 A. Yes.
 Q. But did you give any further instructions than that as to what property was to be destroyed or did you leave it in this general way?
 A. I left it to them, Sir.
 Q. On the 28th April a number of the railway staff, who were holding a meeting, were arrested?
 A. Yes.
 Q. What was the explanation for those arrests?
 A. I had information given to me that the railway staff were about to hold a secret meeting there. I ordered that the meeting should be arrested.
 Q. Was that meeting contrary to your Regulation or orders?
 A. Any meeting of ten persons was contrary to my orders.
 Q. At this meeting how many people were present whom you arrested?
 A. I understand nine. I arrested them because I could not count the meeting before I arrested them.
 Q. Were these people charged with any offence?
 A. That was dealt by the Administrator of Martial Law.
 Q. I think Captain Doveton?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. The military force was reduced on the 6th of May?
 A. Yes.
 Q. By that time was the town much quieter than it had been before?
 A. Yes.
 Q. On the 9th of May were you relieved by Captain Jameson?
 A. Yes.
 Q. In your general remarks at the conclusion of your report you refer to one or two unfortunate occurrences that took place during the administration of Martial Law?
 A. Yes.
 Q. The first of these is a case of a native, who approached the British sentry on duty at the railway station during a dust-storm and was shot dead?

4 December 1919.]

Lt.-Col. H. St. G. M. McRAE.

[Continued.]

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Was there an inquiry held at once?

A. There was.

Q. And you have given the record of the inquiry in one of your appendices?

A. Yes.

Q. That is the case of the man who has been referred to us as being brought to the advance Station Hospital?

A. Yes, Sir. I don't know that he was taken to the Station Hospital.

Q. Then on the 21st, was there any occurrence at the Lakhna village?

A. The village had been surrounded for the purposes of making certain arrests and apparently a certain man attempted to escape and was stopped by the sentry. Possibly he did not understand what the sentry meant and he seized his bayonet. On another British soldier coming this man struggled with him who unfortunately fired at him and he died.

Q. Was any inquiry held into this matter?

A. I held an inquiry on the very day.

Q. As a result of this inquiry the action of the sentry, although regrettable, was considered justified under the circumstances?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it a serious thing for a civilian or any one to seize a sword or an arm from a soldier?

A. Yes.

Q. Then on the 19th April there was a case where a sepoy plundered some bag and clothes in the Khara village?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did you make an inquiry into it?

A. Yes. He was subsequently arrested and tried by Summary Court Martial. He was given six months' imprisonment and dismissed from service.

Q. And stolen property was handed over to the civil?

A. Yes.

Q. Did any cases of intimidation come under your notice?

A. Two cases. One case was of three Sikhs of village Lohgarh who had been arrested for participation in the riots and against whom there was only one witness who had been released. They returned to their village and attacked and beat the Lambardar of their village who had given evidence against them.

Q. I think they got the assistance of two others?

A. Yes.

Q. Then five of them were tried under Martial Law and sentenced to receive 30 lashes and also to undergo two years' rigorous imprisonment?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that a serious case?

A. The worst that came before me.

Q. I think they received the lashes straight away or at once?

A. Yes.

Q. Had that punishment a salutary effect upon the neighbourhood?

A. Excellent effect.

Q. One of the things you had to provide for in the case of Martial Law was that if offences were committed you had to get information about them from the people who knew about them. Did you find whether there was any reluctance on the part of the inhabitants to give accurate information of what had occurred?

A. Really that did not come under my sphere.

Q. There was another case of attempted blackmail or intimidation against a loyal railway official who had identified a number of rioters?

A. A certain man who had given evidence against several rioters was threatened by some unknown persons at night.

Q. These people used to go outside his house and shout out threats?

A. Yes. We tried to capture them but failed. The result was that it did not occur again.

Q. I think you did not capture them because your soldiers did not recognize them?

A. Yes.

Q. Was the matter of communications a difficult one?

A. It was that.

Q. How it was that?

A. The telegraph is entirely in the hands of Indians. Roads were bad and there were practically no motor cars available and no telephones in Kasur.

Q. Did that make your work more difficult than before?

A. Yes.

Q. You took steps to guarantee the safety of the railways?

A. The village headmen were made responsible for the Railway Line and telegraph in their neighbourhood.

Q. But I don't think you adopted the system of taking hostages for good behaviour?

A. No, Sir, I did not think it sound because the hostage had he been present on the spot might have been able to stop it.

Q. Was the behaviour of your troops, both Indian and British, satisfactory?

A. Excellent, Sir.

Q. Were any cases of insubordination brought to your notice?

A. No, Sir.

Q. Did you have any differences with the police?

A. No, Sir, we got on excellently.

Q. Do you express any opinion as to whether the police should have been better armed or should have better weapons than they had?

A. It is my opinion.

Q. We were told the kind of arms they had. They were inferior to soldiers' arms?

A. I would not rather give my opinion on this.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. Colonel McRae, I think there is only one thing I want to ask you anything about. You arrived at Kasur on the 12th?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And General Beynon's proclamation which introduced settled principles of Martial Law, is, as we know, dated the 19th of April.

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And between the 12th and the time when that proclamation was distributed, the position and powers of different officers as regards Martial Law had not been properly defined?

A. No.

Q. I mean Martial Law was in its initial stages and you were close up against the riots and trouble that had just occurred and you did not in the least know what was going to take place at the next moment.

A. Not at all.

Q. If I have followed your report, when you got to Kasur things looked as if anything might happen in the way of a recurrence of trouble?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And you have put in paragraph 23 of your report the general instructions with which you were sent to Kasur?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. That in the absence of any magistrate you will take all measures to restore order at those places. A magistrate will probably proceed with your party if he arrives in time. You will carry out such measures as he recommends until he hands over direction of military operations to you. In the latter case you must do all in your power to protect life and property and at the same time deal strictly with the offenders.

A. Yes.

Q. Now the incident which we have heard about school-boys took place, I gather, on the 18th?

A. Yes.

Q. That is before there was an Area Officer administering Martial Law formally under General Beynon's proclamation?

A. That is so.

Q. And if I follow the position as it appeared to you at the time you got to Kasur you knew that there were a great number of rioters and disaffected people in Kasur, but you had not by that time been able to find out who came under that class and who did not ?

A. Quite so.

Q. And as I understand you discovered that the school-boys had been responsible to some extent for the trouble ?

A. Yes.

Q. I see you say in your report that at least two school-boys were identified as having taken leading parts in the riots ; were those two school-boys ever arrested ?

A. I cannot tell you who they were, I think they both were.

Q. I am told that two school-boys were arrested and afterwards sentenced. Did you satisfy yourself that the school-boys in Kasur as a whole had been taking part ?

A. I did.

Q. I rather gathered from evidence by other witnesses that you had representations made to you by at any rate one school master, that his boys had got out of hand ?

A. That is so.

Q. And I think the action you took did not have reference to one school only but to all the schools ?

A. To all the schools.

Q. I just want to follow what you did. Did you send round to all the headmasters and ask them to take disciplinary action, or what did you do first ?

A. Mr. Marsden actually arranged with the police I think for the presence of all the school boys. Beyond authorising that they should be collected, I actually took no personal part in it.

Q. So he sent for all the school masters ?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you present at that meeting ?

A. No.

Q. When you had to do with the matter first, what had resulted from this action of Mr. Marsden in calling a meeting of school masters ?

A. You will see it in paragraph 62 of my report. Mr. Marsden reported practically as in sub-paragraph 2 of that.

Q. He sent for the school masters ?

A. I do not know how he arranged with the school masters ; that had nothing to do with me.

Q. What was the first thing you did in the matter ?

A. Mr. Marsden suggested that the schools should be paraded and he should see the school masters. I gave my sanction to that. Then the next proposal was that Mr. Marsden reported that certainly one school master if not more, had reported that his boys were defiant. We had evidence to show that they were in the riots and he suggested that certain boys should be picked out to bear punishment for the whole, and I sanctioned it.

Q. The original intention was that the headmasters should choose those boys who had been taking a leading part in the mischief ?

A. Yes.

Q. And as I understand they picked out some boys and you were satisfied from the look of the boys that they had not been properly chosen ?

A. Mr. Marsden reported that to me.

Q. Did Mr. Marsden consult you as to what he should do because they had made this obviously wrong selection ?

A. Yes, and we agreed that we should make our selection ourselves.

Q. You paraded the boys and how was the selection in fact made, the selection you made yourself ?

A. I did not personally make it.

Q. You were not there ?

A. I came out from the railway station which was my headquarters, sanctioned that Mr. Marsden should take this action, and went back to my work.

Q. Mr. Marsden or somebody in your absence picked out the boys, and you had sanctioned that the boys he should pick out should be thrashed ?

A. Yes.

Q. I see you say in your report that it was decided to select the six biggest boys aged about 17 years ; are you satisfied, Colonel, that the selection was made of the big boys ?

A. I left that to Mr. Marsden ; it was my suggestion that we should take the biggest.

Q. As far as you know, the particular lot of boys who were selected may have been entirely innocent ?

A. That was their misfortune if that was so.

Q. The individual hardship of such a policy as that is obvious, is it not ?

A. I know personally how one has been punished at school at home. A whole form has been punished for the sake of one who would not give himself up.

Q. And one has known cases where a whole form has been guilty and only some of them have been punished ?

A. Quite so.

Q. But it might be a matter for a difference of opinion. Have you ever known cases either of a public school or elsewhere of people selected as an example and flogged when they might have been innocent ?

A. No.

Q. As I understand you, you felt you had to do something to reduce the school boys as a whole to some sort of order ?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the effect of this action ? Did you have any further trouble with these boys ?

A. None at all.

Q. Do you attribute that to the action you took ?

A. Entirely.

Q. Did you ever get to know anything more ? Did you not have the boys' parents coming to you saying anything about it ?

A. No, never.

Q. I suppose at this time the order from superior authority directing that public whipping should not take place had not yet been sent ? You gave us the date, it was later on ?

A. No, that was on a later date, the 24th of April.

Q. Did it occur to you that disciplinary action in the face of the school might be one thing, that perhaps it was a little unnecessary to do it in public ?

A. No.

Q. Do you suppose that many members of the public did attend that function ?

A. Not a big percentage, if you take the population of Kasur. Of course there are always people crowding round a railway station.

Q. At any rate so far as you are concerned the matter ended there. You did not have any further facts brought to your knowledge either by way of complaint or otherwise ?

A. No.

Q. I do not think there is anything about it in your report, but I understand that certain columns, I think they have also been described as raiding parties, went out from Kasur to the surrounding district. Did that come under you ?

A. Yes.

Q. I understand that there were movable columns sent out round the country districts for the purpose of shewing that the power of the Government was still in existence ?

A. That was absolutely distinct. Those were sent out by orders of the Division.

Q. Can you tell me in a few sentences the policy and the effect of the other kind of raiding parties ?

A. Raiding parties as sent out by me. No party was sent out to make arrests without information handed to me by the police. I did not investigate what the information was. They informed me that certain persons in certain villages were suspected of participating in the riots. Then I issued my orders to assist the police to take those certain persons.

Q. So those raiding parties were really for the purpose of assisting the police to effect arrests of persons who were wanted by the police ?

A. Yes.

4 December 1919.]

Lt.-Col. H. St. G. M. McRAE

Q. That being the object of them, who were in charge of these raiding parties, was it the same officer every time?

A. No, my Appendix I shows the officers in command. They were detailed by roster.

Q. Were there orders that they should confine themselves to searching for named persons and bringing them back under arrest or were they to do anything else?

A. You will find their orders in the Operation Orders I issued for every operation. They are in appendices to the War Diary.*

Q. Looking them over were they orders to effect arrests or what were their other orders?

A. As a rule their orders were—take for instance my Order No. 6 on page 20, paragraph 2:—'The force as per margin will surround Athilpur by 4 A.M., on the 22nd instant, and give any necessary assistance to the police in searching the village and making arrests.'

Q. That was simply what they had to do, to give assistance in making arrests? Did you give them powers to do anything else, that is to hold enquiries for other persons?

A. That was entirely police arrangement. The officers got these orders to assist the police.

Q. As regards those parties do I understand from your report that they were not authorised in any case to adopt the system of taking hostages?

A. I took no hostage; I did not approve of it.

Q. You did not send raiding parties to any village simply because the village was known to be disaffected?

A. I sent no parties out without obtaining actual names of people.

By Sir C. H. Setalvad—

Q. Before you came to Kasur where were you?

A. Commanding my regiment at Ferozepore.

Q. Were you acquainted with Kasur before?

A. I had been through it on manoeuvres only.

Q. You passed through Kasur?

A. I have passed through it.

Q. You have never known Kasur before?

A. No.

Q. And at no period of your career were you stationed at Kasur?

A. No.

Q. If you look at your report, paragraph 1, you say 'this city has for many years been noted for sedition'?

A. I refer you to paragraph 1 on my first page in which I say that all I have said there is hearsay.

Q. You have no personal knowledge about this at all?

A. No.

Q. Who told you this, that this city was for many years noted for sedition?

A. With Your Lordship's consent I won't answer that.

Q. From whom did you get that information?

A. I do not propose to answer that question; it is hearsay.

Q. You make this statement in a responsible document to the authorities, surely we would like to know what is the basis for this statement.

A. I leave it as I have put it there.

Q. Why I am asking this question is that we have had other witnesses, officials, who have stated that in Kasur before the 10th of April, there was no political activity at all, nothing was doing so far as politics were concerned; and that is why I was surprised to find this statement made so assertively, that this city has for many years been noted for sedition. Do you still adhere to that statement?

A. I refuse to answer the question.

Q. I have stated to you the fact that officials who were stationed at Kasur for some length of time have told us that there was never any political activity in Kasur before these incidents; do you still adhere to the statement you make here that this city has for many years been noted for sedition?

A. I refer you to paragraph 1.

Q. That is a simple question to answer, whether you adhere to this opinion after what I have stated to you of the evidence of other officials?

A. What I have stated is here, Sir.

Q. That is not answering my question?

A. That is the only answer I can give you.

Q. Then, Colonel, you also go on to state here that the city harbours a large number of the pleader class who are well known to have anti-Government feelings. That is also on hearsay?

A. Yes.

Q. And stands on the same footing as the other statement that the city has been noted for sedition?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you aware that it has been stated to us, and you must have known it as Martial Law Administrator, that several pleaders assisted the authorities on the 12th and subsequent dates to maintain law and order, and that one of the pleaders was actually instrumental in saving the Sherbourns, are you aware of that?

A. Yes.

Q. Knowing that several pleaders assisted the authorities in the manner I have described, one of them actually saving the Sherbourns, do you still adhere to the statement that the pleader class is well known to have anti-Government feelings? Do you still adhere to the statement?

A. I adhere to my statement as put in the report as hearsay.

Q. Do you adhere to it now after knowledge of the facts that I have mentioned?

A. I acknowledge your facts as correct.

Q. If they are correct, do you still adhere to this sweeping statement that the pleaders were well known to have anti-Government feelings, or are you prepared to modify it?

A. I will read to you my statement—"This city has for many years been noted for sedition and harbours a large number of pleader class who are well known to have anti-Government feeling." In return I put it to you, did the pleaders play up and try and stop this as a whole or did they not?

Q. I am not here to answer questions.

A. Well I do not answer yours, unless His Lordship orders it.

Q. Are you aware that Kasur did not join the other places in the Punjab as regards the hartal on the 30th March or the 6th of April?

A. No.

Q. You still make the sweeping statement that the city has been known many years for sedition?

(The witness did not reply.)

Q. You adhere to that I take it, Colonel?

A. I adhere to what I have said before as hearsay.

Q. Then you refer to the Amritsar merchants having dishonoured Hundis of Kasur merchants. That is also, I take it, on hearsay, you have no evidence at all in support of that?

A. No, it is hearsay.

Q. Then on the 16th of April you held a Durbar at Kasur?

A. Yes.

Q. At which Durbar the pleader Dhanpat Rai was arrested?

A. Yes.

Q. Were other people arrested at this Durbar?

A. No.

Q. Only one man was arrested?

A. That is all.

Q. Other pleaders were arrested subsequently at a later date?

A. Yes.

Q. You are aware of that?

A. I am aware.

Q. Were they kept in custody for a considerable time?

A. Yes.

Q. And they were released without being brought to trial?

4 December 1919.]

Lt.-Col. H. St. G. M. McRAE.

A. I know nothing of what happened to them.

Q. You ordered notices issued by you under Martial Law to be posted on certain houses. In paragraph 59 you refer to this. Who made a selection of the houses on which these notices were to be posted?

A. Either the S. D. O. or the police.

Q. The police made a selection?

A. I think so.

Q. You say here, Colonel, that these notices were to be posted on the houses of well known agitators? What do you mean by agitators?

A. What is put there. You will find the meaning of the word in the dictionary.

Q. Surely you can answer that question without referring me to a dictionary. You say in your report that the notices were to be posted on the houses of well-known agitators, and you have said that a selection was made by the police. I want to know when you used the word "agitator" whom you meant?

A. I left that to the police to select.

Q. That is not answering my question?

A. I cannot answer that question.

Q. When you frame a report you know what you mean by it?

A. I know: it is there before you.

Q. What do you mean by agitators—whom do you indicate by that?

A. I think it is good English.

Q. I never suggested it was bad English. I want to know what class of persons you meant to refer to thereby?

A. These were the orders I gave to the police and they carried them out.

Q. Surely you understand my question and I think you can answer me?

A. I do not want to answer it otherwise than by what I have said there.

Q. What class of people do you refer to when you use the word agitators? Surely you know who you meant to denote.

A. I think it is pretty clear there.

By the President—

Q. Have you any idea what you mean by agitators. People have different ideas when they use certain words. What did you have in your mind when you used that word?

A. A man who agitates against Government.

By Sir C. H. Selvad—

Q. I want to understand what you mean by agitating against Government?

A. Anyone who by expression or otherwise speaks against a Government measure.

Q. That is an agitator?

A. Yes.

Q. You gave direction to the police that all persons in Kasur who to their knowledge had expressed themselves against any Government measure should be the persons selected?

A. I do not say all. Some of them. I ordered that these notices wherever possible should be posted on the houses of well known agitators.

Q. Did you explain to them what you meant by agitators as you explained to us now—that people who had expressed themselves against any Government measure?

A. I gave orders then as I have told you now. I gave orders that they should post these notices on the houses where there were such persons.

Q. Did you describe the class of persons you meant?

A. I merely used the word agitators.

Q. To whom did you give these orders?

A. Either to Mr. Marsden or the Superintendent of Police.

Q. You also included what you call malcontents. What class do you mean to designate by malcontents? A man who is known to express dissatisfaction with the Government or any Government measure?

A. The same thing as far as I am concerned.

Q. Being against a government measure is the same thing as being against Government in your view?

A. Yes.

Q. Were the houses of all lawyers in Kasur selected for posting these notices?

A. I do not know. I did not post them. I gave the order; it was sufficient for me to see it was carried out.

Q. You say in the same paragraph "as a deterrent, orders were issued that reprisals would be taken against the property of the person on whose walls or gate posts any proclamation had been defaced." Was that order in writing?

A. I rather think it is one of the Martial Law orders.

Q. Will you refer me to it, please?

A. Quite likely not. Any way it is my order. What does it matter whether it was in writing or not?

Q. Surely you can answer my question without adopting this attitude? I want to know whether this order was in writing or oral? You can certainly answer that question?

A. It was certainly an order. I do not remember whether it was in writing.

Q. Why did not you then say you did not know or you did not remember?

A. You seem to forget that it is eight months ago.

Q. You could easily have said "I forget" or "I do not remember"; that would be a perfectly good answer instead of saying what does it matter whether it is in writing or oral. Surely that is not the attitude which you should adopt towards the committee or any member of the committee. You do not remember whether the order was in writing or orally?

(Mr. Justice Rankin:—See Martial Order No. 3.*)

Q. "Failure to ensure the proper protection and continued exhibition of my orders will result in severe punishment." Is that the order you mean?

A. That is right.

Q. That is a bit different from what you say in paragraph 59—"Will result in severe punishment" but the punishment is not stated in Order No. 3?

A. Yes; there is a slight difference but the meaning is the same.

Q. What was to be done with that man's property? What was your actual order? When you gave that order about reprisals being taken did you indicate what would be done to that man's property?

A. It would come up for orders under Martial Law.

Q. You did not indicate what the reprisals would be?

A. It would depend on the damage done.

Q. That punishment regarding his property was to follow even though the notice may have been defaced by somebody else?

A. Quite so.

Q. You thought that was a reasonable order to make?

A. I did.

Q. Do you still think so?

A. Yes.

Q. Then on the 18th some school boys were flogged and you gave directions that the biggest six boys were to be selected for that purpose?

A. I said generally speaking take the six biggest. The misfortune was that they happened to be big.

Q. It was irrespective of whether they were innocent or guilty; because they were big they had to suffer?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you think that is a reasonable thing to do?

A. Yes, I think so under certain conditions.

Q. It is a mere accident that a boy is big, should that invite punishment on him?

A. It was his misfortune.

Q. His misfortune was that he was big?

A. Yes.

Q. Now with regard to the parading of the inhabitants of Kasur for identification—that took place on several occasions?

A. Yes.

Q. On one occasion the whole town was drawn up?

A. Yes.

Q. I mean the whole male population?

4 December 1919.]

Lt.-Col. H. St. G. M. McRae

[Continued.]

- A. Yes.
- Q. For the purpose of identification they were kept out for six hours?
- A. A considerable time. It was unfortunate, it could not be helped.
- Q. Did the parading of the people result in anything?
- A. Yes. Several arrests were made.
- Q. There; on the spot?
- A. Yes.
- Q. Then in paragraph 71 you speak of prisoners having been despatched to Lahore handcuffed and roped together?
- A. Yes.
- Q. These were people who were under trial? They were not brought to trial?
- A. I really do not know. They were sent to Lahore by the police.
- Q. This was after you assumed charge as Martial Law Administrator and when you were really responsible for the whole administration. These people were sent handcuffed and roped together for their trial?
- A. I do not know whether they were going up for trial or not.
- Q. Do you think that was a right thing to do?
- A. They were dangerous prisoners. I considered everybody was a dangerous prisoner. They had been arrested for dangerous assaults.
- Q. A good number of them were ultimately released without any trial at all. Was it a reasonable thing to do to send people handcuffed and roped together when ultimately they were not brought to trial?
- A. I could not afford to take risks.
- Q. You thought that was a reasonable thing to do?
- A. Certainly.
- Q. Then on the 22nd April you searched the houses of eight pleaders? Why were these houses searched?
- A. At the request of the Deputy Superintendent of Police.
- Q. On his suggestion?
- A. Yes.
- Q. Was anything found at these searches?
- A. Certain documents were found.
- Q. Were they documents of an incriminating nature?
- A. I do not know at all. They were taken over by the police.
- Q. What happened to these eight pleaders?
- A. I do not know.
- Q. Surely you sanctioned the search of these houses and you must have acquainted yourself with the result of the search?
- A. No. I think the matter was still pending when I left. Some of the cases went on for some time.
- Q. You did not care to see what documents were found?
- A. I should not have known what was in them.
- Q. You know the circumstances under which gallows were erected at Kasur somewhere near the station. When were they erected?
- A. Look at my paragraph 80.
- Q. They were erected soon after....
- A. On the 3rd of May.
- Q. How long did they remain there?
- A. They were actually taken down on the 8th.
- Q. Under whose orders were these gallows erected?
- A. The Commissioner of Lahore.
- Q. He was the civil authority and you had the command after Martial Law was declared and as you were Martial Law Administrator, what authority had the Commissioner in Kasur?
- A. He was still Commissioner of Lahore.
- Q. And you thought that he could still give directions as to what was to be done in an area under your military charge?
- A. Certainly, provided I had no objection to it from a military point of view.
- Q. Did he consult you?
- A. Yes.
- Q. Was there any correspondence between you and the Commissioner?
- A. I had a written order to erect them.
- Q. You have told us that he consulted you. Were you consulted at all by the Commissioner whether these gallows should or should not be erected at Kasur?
- A. No.
- Q. He never consulted you about that?
- A. No. He consulted me as to the place.
- Q. And you selected the place?
- A. We did it together.
- Q. Did the Commissioner come down to Kasur?
- A. Yes.
- Q. When he came down to Kasur he must have had a talk to you about his intentions about the erection of the gallows?
- A. Yes.
- Q. Was that Mr. Kitchin?
- A. It was.
- Q. Did he indicate to you why he wanted the gallows to be so erected at Kasur?
- A. No.
- Q. Did you ask him why it was considered necessary?
- A. It had nothing to do with me. I had to give my orders.
- Q. You were not under the orders of Mr. Kitchin at all so far as....
- Witness. I think, Your Lordship, that this is outside the point.
- Q. Did you consider yourself to be under the Commissioner?
- A. No.
- Q. You were not bound to take orders from him?
- A. No; not bound to.
- Q. When the Commissioner came there did you ask him when he mentioned the proposal about erecting gallows why it was considered necessary to do it?
- A. No.
- Q. Did you gather what the idea underlying it was?
- A. Certainly.
- Q. Will you tell me?
- A. To hang the men convicted at Kasur.
- Q. Why erect gallows in a prominent place near the station and keep gallows there for some length of time? You say the people had not been convicted then?
- A. I do not know. That had nothing to do with me.
- Q. Surely you knew this fact that when the gallows were erected the people who had been charged with murder had not been convicted?
- A. Yes, they had been convicted.
- Q. What is the idea in having it in a public place and not in jail as ordinarily?
- A. It is usual under Martial Law for such things to happen.
- Q. It was really your suggestion that it should be done in a public place?
- A. As a matter of fact it was put to me by the Commissioner and I agreed.
- Q. Was the idea that the gallows should be kept for some days in order to strike terror in the public mind?
- A. No; it was not. The idea originally was to erect the gallows and as soon as they were ready to carry out the executions.
- Q. But orders for the execution were not received for some time?
- A. They were received.
- Q. These gallows were ultimately dismantled?
- A. Yes.
- Q. Under orders from Government?
- A. From Lahore.
- Q. Did the Punjab Government make the order?
- A. Yes.
- Q. Did they have any correspondence with you in the matter?
- A. No.
- Q. Did they give an expression of opinion as to the erection of the gallows?
- A. No. As a matter of fact the Punjab Government really did the whole thing themselves. I was only consulted as to the place. The Punjab Government sent down their own mechanic or artisan.

Lt.-Col. H. St. G. M. McRAE.

Q. So the initial orders to erect the gallows were passed by the Punjab Government ?

A. Yes.

Q. The Commissioner was merely the mouth-piece of the Punjab Government ?

A. Yes.

Q. Though you were Administrator of Martial Law yet the Punjab Government still exercised authority in the Kasur area ?

A. Yes.

Q. So did the Commissioner ?

A. Yes.

Q. And the police under your general control were carrying out their ordinary duties ?

A. Yes.

Q. So were the magistrates in Kasur ?

A. That I do not know.

Q. And the other courts ?

A. I have no personal knowledge.

Q. How long after you assumed charge did Kasur return to normal conditions ?

A. About the end of the month.

Q. By that time everything was quiet ?

A. Yes.

Q. And the behaviour of the people had altered ?

A. Yes.

Q. You had no fault to find after that ?

A. No.

Q. Kindly refer to your paragraph 102 on page 18 where you say "the inhabitants of Kasur were thoroughly cowed by Martial Law and overawed by the military." What does that imply ?

A. When I took over the administration of Kasur on the 12th the people were sullen. There was very little in the way of business going on in the town. There were large numbers of men about and they were certainly unemployed. They used to stand about in little groups of three and four. Their appearance was very sullen on all occasions. When I happened to go through the town after Martial Law had been exercised for about fourteen days the state of the town may be said to be more or less normal and I put that down to the effect of Martial Law.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. From the 12th up to the 15th, I gather from your report, the civil authorities at Kasur did not act up to your suggestions ?

A. That is so.

Q. I think any investigation that was carried on with regard to the happenings at this station was done on the evening of the 15th ?

A. That is so.

Q. Between the 12th and the 15th you did not examine any witnesses or was any statement of any witness placed before you ?

A. Not before me.

Q. Therefore whatever you have stated in your report as to what happened on the 12th is practically based upon what you subsequently learnt from Mr. Marsden and the civil authorities ?

A. That is so.

Q. You gathered that information from Mr. Marsden and the civil authorities after they had held their investigation ?

A. Yes.

Q. Between these dates Major Nicolas also arrived at Kasur ?

A. Yes.

Q. You also made certain suggestions to him ?

A. Yes.

Q. He also did not accept them ?

A. Yes.

Q. Kindly see paragraph 17. You were informed by the civil authorities that two warrant officers refused to get out of the train and refused the appeals of the two non-commissioned officers to assist them to save the Sherbournes. That was your information ?

A. Yes.

Q. Who is responsible for the War Diary* at Kasur from the 12th ? Who supplied the information ?

A. That was information collected from the files.

Q. You have got a War Diary where you mention what happened at Kasur ?

A. My Staff Officer wrote up a diary day by day.

Q. On the 13th April it is stated in the War Diary at page 2, "early in the morning Mr. Mitter, S.D.O., stated that no further trouble was expected here but possibly in Amritsar," that was his opinion ?

A. Yes.

Q. Paragraph 17 of your statement. When you say that "apparently the warrant officers lost their heads, fired off their revolvers over the heads of the crowds".... That is practically what you gathered from the information given to you by the civil authorities ?

A. Yes.

Q. And therefore should there be any difference between this version and the version given to this Committee by the civil authorities, perhaps their statement would be more correct ?

A. Quite likely.

Q. Now you will find that so far as any danger to the lives of Christian ladies or European ladies was concerned, in your opinion that was over by the 22nd April ?

A. Yes.

Q. Now about the cage, I want to know the dimensions of the cage, how many yards long was it ?

A. You went to Kasur and saw it, did you not ?

Q. No, I have never in my life seen Kasur.

A. The enclosure, I should say, was not as big as this room, but very near it.

Q. Were there any latrine arrangements inside ?

A. Yes, there were arrangements inside.

Q. According to you there may be at one time 150 prisoners ?

A. Very likely.

Q. With regard to the identification parade that was held, all the witnesses were at one place, and then they were allowed to pass 11 or 12 times according to the number ?

A. All the witnesses were together.

Q. Practically up to the 15th till the arrival of Mr. Marsden you did nothing except on one or two occasions to help the police in arresting and searching houses ?

A. That is all.

Q. I gather from your report that on the 12th with Major Nicolas at about 4 o'clock you went inside the city ?

A. Yes.

Q. And then you came back and stopped at the station ?

A. That is so.

Q. And you describe there that the people appeared to be sullen as if they were afraid of reprisals ?

A. Yes.

Q. On the 13th when you had a visit from Mr. Mitter you had not gone to the city ?

A. Yes.

Q. Therefore on the morning of the 13th, except what you had seen of the city on the 12th when you were driving in a motor car you had no knowledge of what was going on inside the city and what was the mood of the inhabitants there. On the 12th you went only for an hour and a half inside the city. Then you came back, and then up to the morning of the 13th you had no talk with Mr. Mitter and you knew nothing except what you saw on the evening of the 12th ?

A. The station is right on the top of the city. It looks up to the main street. You could see a good deal of the city. I did not go outside before Mr. Mitter came up.

Q. During the time of Martial Law a large number of municipal commissioners were ordered to attend daily at the railway station ?

A. Yes, I think so.

4 December 1919.]

Lt.-Col. H. St. G. M. McRAE.

Q. And it was they who were made responsible for informing the people of the different orders that were passed by you?

A. I cannot say whether they were all municipal commissioners or not. Certain of them were.

Q. Please see page 8, line 2, you say "practically all were municipal commissioners." They may not be municipal commissioners, there was at least one person from each ward?

A. That is right.

Q. About the arrest of certain railway officials, you describe it in paragraph 81: "On the afternoon of the 28th April information having been received that the Kasur railway staff, practically all of whom were implicated in the riots and against whom there was but useful evidence on hand, were about to hold a secret meeting that evening to decide their policy. The house was surrounded and entered by the military. Nine persons were arrested. The police eventually obtained some useful evidence from these persons"?

A. Yes.

Q. Up to that time I believe these people were not prepared to give any useful evidence?

A. I don't know anything about it. I did not have anything to do with it.

Q. You obtained useful evidence?

A. I was told that there was evidence afterwards.

Q. Did you agree to any order being passed that no persons should buy more than a certain quantity of grain?

A. The order I gave is in the proclamations.

Q. It does not find a place in the proclamations but it appears to me that Captain Doveton has made that statement?

A. My order is in the proclamations.

Q. At paragraph 88, I want to know whether you were consulted about it or whether any steps were taken to return the food-stuffs bought from the retail dealers. Was there any oral order passed to that effect?

A. That I don't remember.

Q. Were you at Kasur at the time when the reprisals were taken against those 6 persons who had not returned within the prescribed period?

A. Yes.

Q. I only want to know whether you acted entirely upon the information supplied to you by the police or you yourself made any investigation?

A. It is not for me to make investigations.

Q. Certain information was supplied to you by the police?

A. Yes, they brought these persons to Captain Doveton.

Q. How did you satisfy yourself that these persons were informed of your Martial Law proclamations that they should return within the prescribed time for the purpose of identification or that they received your communications?

A. That is really a point for the Administrator of Martial Law. I told Captain Doveton to give them another two or three days which he acted upon. They were always given two or three days.

Q. Now you have used the word "hostages." I want to make myself clear. What do you mean by "hostages." You mean some officers go to a village and bring about 8 or 10 respectable persons under arrest in order that the rest of the inhabitants may be of good behaviour and may be prepared to supply sufficient evidence for the arrest of the concerned persons?

A. Yes.

Q. The word "hostages" does not mean those persons who were actually concerned in the riot?

A. No.

Q. Appendix I. Actually the names of 74 persons were given by the police for the purpose of being arrested to different officers, but the actual number of persons arrested was 155?

A. Yes.

Q. That is the names of the remainder were not given by the party?

A. Not when the parties went out.

Q. Please see Appendix III-R. You find in the statement of Private Nathan:—"A man came down the road soon after the search party had gone into the village and was challenged by the sentry on my right. When challenged he hid behind a wall. The sentry shouted out 'Idhar so.' On this the man moved behind a bush or some rubbish near by and hid behind it. The sentry advanced towards him and made signs to him to go round the village to where the prisoners were being collected. He did not appear to understand and when threatened with the bayonet he grasped the sentry's rifle and tried to pull it out of his hand. Suddenly he let go and bolted away from the village towards a haystack. The sentry endeavoured to catch him when he had gone about 20 yards. The man reached the haystack and stopped by the side of it; I then placed a round in the breech and fired at him. The bullet hit him in the body and he dropped."

A. Yes.

Q. And further you will find in Appendix III-B., the man had a bayonet wound in the chest?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you please see page 6 of the diary? Now on the 21st April it appears that information was given to you that about 12 villages were in a seditious state round about?

A. Yes.

Q. Page 7. The result of the search of these pleaders was that important conspiracy documents were seized? Practically you did not care to go through them? Probably they were not ready but you were informed by the police?

A. I think that is probably a wild statement of the young officer who wrote that report. At the time he wrote it they were not even translated.

Q. It would clear the question that was put to you by Sir Chimanlal Setalvad. It appears to me by the word 'agitator' you mean 'suspected disloyal subject.' At page 7, you say that Lieut.-Col. Money made a tour of the town and saw the proclamation was fixed to the houses of suspected disloyal subjects?

A. Yes.

Q. Page 8 of the diary. It appears to me that one of the informers who were giving you information about suspected persons was ultimately found to be demented?

A. Yes.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmed Khan—

Q. Excepting those two officers who fired revolvers at the crowd, no one else was hurt by the crowd?

A. No one else was armed. I was not present. That is what I heard.

Q. Those officers who were hurt, they were not armed?

A. Only the warrant officers were armed.

Q. You mean the two warrant officers who were killed?

A. Yes.

Q. When you arrived at Kasur in what condition did you find the railway station? Was it all destroyed or only a portion of it, because you say "having destroyed the railway station." So far as our information goes, it was only a part of the lamp room which was burnt by fire?

A. Would you look at document 19? Would you look at my original telegram?

Q. You wrote this report; this cannot be hearsay.

A. It is in Appendix II,* it is in the Blue Book, Military Reports, Disturbances at Kasur. That is the answer to your question.

Q. You did come to Kasur on the afternoon of the 12th?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you inspect the railway station?

A. You get my answer there.

Q. Now in paragraph 8 of your statement, you say that "having destroyed the station. . . ." From this the impression produced is that the whole railway station was destroyed, but it was only a part of the lamp room which was burnt. I want you to make it clear whether the whole station was destroyed or only a part?

4 December 1919.]

Lt.-Col. H. St. G. M. McRAE—concluded—LALA MOHAN LAL SETH.

A. Yes, I detail it there.

Q. That is your meaning?

A. Yes.

Q. Don't you think it could also be taken to mean that the whole station was destroyed? I simply ask your opinion about it.

A. I would say it is very difficult to destroy a station in the sense in which you take it, unless you level the whole buildings to the ground and tear up the buildings. I give my report* in Appendix II.

Q. That is what I wanted to know. Well, now, you stated in answer to a question that certain people were arrested and kept in the lock-up because you could not take risks?

A. Yes.

Q. May I take it that you came to Kasur with the idea that the place was full of dangerous characters who required to be promptly dealt with?

A. Yes.

Q. How did you get that idea? What made you think so?

A. It was the orders that I received. I was told that the station of Kasur and Gandasinghwa had been wrecked by the mob and looted and the fate of the mail trains was uncertain. I was also told that two British warrant officers had been murdered.

Q. When you arrived at Kasur, did you enquire about the fate of those mail trains?

A. Certainly, that was the first thing I did. In fact that was one of the first things I was sent to do.

Q. You came to know that the trains were all right?

A. They were not. The Amritsar train had been looted, and the train from Ferozepore had been attacked by the mob and some people were murdered and maltreated in one of the trains.

* Vide Annexure.

Q. Except in that one train nothing occurred?

A. That is so.

Q. Only one train was affected, and not the other two?

A. Two trains were affected. The Amritsar train was looted. There are three trains coming in there. The Amritsar train which comes in there had been looted, the Ferozepore train was also looted, but the Lahore train had managed to get back.

Q. I understood there was only one train which was looted?

A. No, I think you will find that two trains were looted.

Q. Had you ever before any experience of the administration of Martial Law?

A. I am glad to say I have never had and I hope I will never use it again.

By Mr. Herbert, Government Advocate—

Q. It was stated by a witness yesterday before this Committee that a party of British soldiers with two British officers had gone to a village called Pat o Kohra and had willingly done destruction to property. I want to show that this is a mistake. It was said by him that there were two British officers and the younger of the two had instigated the other British soldiers to do what they did. Will you kindly see your War Diary. I see that no British troops went in that expedition?

A. That is so.

Q. Who actually did accompany it?

A. As laid down in it, Mr. Marsden was there; I do not know what British officers went with that detachment.

Q. So far as this village is concerned, there were no British soldiers who went there?

A. No.

Q. Appendix No. I of your present statement shows that there was only one Officer Commanding. At any rate it shows that there were no British soldiers?

A. No, all were Indian troops.

LALA MOHAN LAL SETH, Vakil, High Court, Punjab, and Municipal Commissioner, Kasur.

By the President—

Q. Are you a High Court Vakil and municipal commissioner at Kasur?

A. Yes; I am a municipal commissioner and High Court Pleader.

Q. I think you have expressed the desire to give evidence before us in connection with these disorders?

A. Yes; as a Government municipal commissioner for the last 12 years, Mr. Marsden talked to me about it and said "the committee is coming here; you might give some evidence." I told him that I had seen such and such things and could give my opinion about certain things that I have heard and believed. So he said I might put in my statement. I gave the statement to him, and perhaps he has sent that to you, and you have kindly asked me to give evidence.

LALA MORAN LAL SETHI.

Q. Just give me your view generally as to what were the causes of unrest in Kasur prior to the outbreak.

A. As I have said one was these high prices with no prospect of their going down. The war has been on for so long, 4 years, and so people were really tired, and they wished Government to take some action and control the situation. That is one thing which really upset the people.

Q. You think that is a very prominent factor in the situation?

A. Yes; when people become poor and have suffering, they make demands, just as we think that our King should look to all these things, and expect that the King should interfere and solve economic difficulties.

Q. Well, you suggest in your statement that the war loan had something to do with the unrest.

A. My Lord, there was collection of war loan in small sums of Rs. 10 through post office. People had to take scrips. Officers, tahsildars, and naib-tahsildars go to shops and beg people for Rs. 10.

Q. I cannot really quite understand you because that was very commonly done in England and Scotland. People paid small sums in the way of contributions to the war loan and they were entitled to get back the money subscribed after a time?

A. It is all right if people voluntarily give it and in the case of people who can afford it. Suppose a peon or a clerk with a family of 4 or 5 people who gets only Rs. 20 is asked to pay Rs. 10 or Rs. 20, he feels it.

Q. Everyone usually who is asked to subscribe wants to avoid it as far as he can. Do you know any cases in your own personal knowledge of undue pressure being brought to bear upon any individual to make him subscribe?

A. So far, I cannot give you any instance. Shopkeepers will probably tell you that, because the complaint is general. In war loan meetings, the officer will propose Rs. 200 and the man will begin with Rs. 10 or Rs. 20. It looks odd. Really that is the way in which pressure is put upon people.

Q. I really want to know what is within your own knowledge on a matter of this sort. Similarly you suggest that recruiting methods had something to do with it. So far as the town of Kasur was concerned, did people recruit there at all or to any extent?

A. Recruiting was done in Kasur. There were two or three agencies. There were other people who voluntarily helped Government. There were so many recruiting agencies.

Q. What is the population of Kasur?

A. According to the last census the population was about 24,000, and I think now-a-days it is about 27,000.

Q. How many recruits did Kasur provide for the army?

A. It must have provided something like 400 to 500.

Q. I mean the city proper.

A. I am talking of Kasur town. It supplied about 400 to 500 men.

Q. Are you sure about these figures?

A. One gentleman from Kasur, Guranditta Mall, I think, provided about 150 and another gentleman, Sher Nawab, who is an honorary magistrate, provided about 20 or more.

Q. Do you mean to say they were instrumental in getting these people? Did they belong to Kasur itself? They got 150 from Kasur, that is what you said. Where did they get them from?

A. Some from Kasur, and some from their village, which is about 4 miles from Kasur. So practically everybody came from Kasur.

Q. Were these gentlemen anxious to do their best in the way of assisting Government in the war crisis?

A. Yes, they were; they did actually help.

Q. Do you make any complaint about this getting men and the way they got them?

A. There was no trouble about that. I refer to certain cases. Lots of people from Raja Jang were brought by a magistrate in Kasur. About 30 or 40 families were following and weeping. Then they were taken almost in custody to Lahore and Mr. Tollinton, the Deputy Commissioner, let them go.

Q. What do you mean by saying that they were brought in custody?

A. They were not allowed to go.

Q. Did they desire to be soldiers first and afterwards did not like to be so?

A. No. The case of Raja Jang is not within my direct knowledge, but I have heard they were asked to come, and some said that they would come. Others joined with their brothers only to accompany them up to Kasur.

Q. There is no specific ground of complaint if the moment it was clear that these men desired not to be soldiers the Deputy Commissioner let them go. They were under no compulsion. Is that really a serious ground of complaint?

A. They just related the whole thing to the Deputy Commissioner. They said that they were not willing, and that they had been forced. That was the reason why they were let off.

Q. There can be no ground of complaint, because the men were let go as soon as it was found that they were not willing?

A. But the fact remains that there were people who thought that this thing was objectionable.

Q. It appears that some people in connection with recruiting were over-zealous. As soon as the matter came before the higher official, it was put right?

A. Therefore I say it was a case of overdoing it.

Q. Again so far as this is concerned, have you any cases within your own knowledge? I understand that you heard these from somebody?

A. I am a pleader for the last 25 years. In this war recruiting there were cases under section 107, what they call security to keep the peace. Some cases were brought. There were other cases under section 110 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Those people were brought in and then as they agreed to be recruited they were let off. That is of course within my own knowledge. There was another case. A receiver was appointed by the District Judge and some rioters assaulted that receiver. There were some seven or eight people who assaulted him seriously. He was a respectable man. Some two or three of them suggested that they should agree to be recruited and then all the offenders were let off.

Q. Do you make that a serious ground of complaint? I think that happened in many places as well as here.

A. Those who have been aggrieved feel that this ought not to have been done.

Q. Why should they have a grievance if they were not tried and let off upon the footing that they became soldiers?

A. Not only those that were recruited, but others also were let off.

Q. You do not suggest there are any cases within your knowledge where a man was forced into the army against his will?

A. Not within my knowledge.

Q. Do you suggest any other causes of unrest?

A. I have suggested that where there is a sympathetic officer, who takes people into his confidence, people are all right. When there is a good Deputy Commissioner and a good Sub-Divisional Officer, people are all right. If, on the other hand, there is an officer who is annoying people unnecessarily, people become upset. With due deference, I may state that the régime of our late Lieutenant-Governor here was rather annoying in various ways to the leaders and others. That too of course caused a sort of irritation.

Q. That is unsympathetic attitude towards political agitation. Is that correct according to your view?

A. Towards legitimate political agitation.

Q. I put it to you that it refers to all agitation. There are some people here just as in England and Scotland who do not like any sort of political agitation. I am merely asking your view on this point whether there was an unsympathetic attitude shown by the Government towards political agitation generally?

4 December 1919.]

LALA MOHAN LAL SETH.

A. Generally the policy of the Government is all right. But when it comes to practice by some officers, then the thing becomes worse.

Q. So far as this is concerned, that would cause antagonism among the leaders, but I do not know if the general public will mind it at all?

A. Now-a-days it is the time of newspapers and presses and talk. Things go round in that way. A thing is talked about in the Legislative Council, just as the Rowlatt Act was. All the non-officials joined together and we thought this was very fortunate as regards the Hindu-Muhammadan union; but yet there was no result.

Q. I suppose you will agree that although newspapers are very useful, they sometimes confound. You will admit that while newspapers may be very useful, they are often very misleading?

A. There are two sides to a good thing. In that way we might put it. A good law punishes perjury. Of course people who are in the habit of telling lies will feel that the law is a bad thing for them. So one of course may take another view.

Q. About the Rowlatt Act, I suppose you have an intimate knowledge of the Act itself?

A. The Act is not yet ripe for our usual practice. I have read it cursorily once or twice in these days, but we do not exactly know everything about it until we have to use it.

Q. You are not afraid of my subjecting you to cross-examination?

A. No, My Lord.

Q. Do you know that among the people there were numbers of rumours as to what was going to be the effect of this Act?

A. Yes; people said that there is no appeal under it, there is no reason for it and there is no pleader allowed under it. That is true in some cases. In part II, we have no pleader. Sometimes even the accused are not allowed to appear. There were such talks and sayings. All were talking about them. The masses do not really go into details and see things for themselves. They just take some big things (mota things) and then they form their opinion. They do not go into the minutest details.

Q. Is it not within your knowledge that they formed a very considerable number of very wrong opinions about the Act? You may be quite entitled to disapprove of the Act if you like, and your own view may be against the Act. They said that the Act was very bad and they mentioned many things which the Act in reality was not going to deal with?

A. I think those people who, it is said, entertained wrong ideas about that Rowlatt Act had no clear ideas. The only thing they learnt was that it was opposed by all the non-officials and therefore they should not agree to it.

Q. Once they learnt that it was opposed by the non-officials, they very soon imagined that there was very good cause for its being opposed.

A. They cannot give you any reasons. If you ask an illiterate man, he will not give you any reasons. They would say some such things about which I have given you an idea. They would say that this Act does not allow us to have pleaders. Therefore we should not have that.

Q. Were all these the disturbing causes? A further disturbing cause among the people was the arrest or turning back of Mr. Gandhi on his way to Delhi?

A. All things combined. This was the last straw on the camel's back, as they say.

Q. I think you expressed the view that until the 10th or 12th of April Kasur had not been a politically-minded community at all?

A. My home is in Lahore; I have been in Kasur for the last 25 years, and up to this time, I have never seen any political meeting and no leader has ever kindly gone there and given us the advantage of his views.

Q. You just let the Government carry on without criticism?

A. Criticism is always healthy if it is bonâ fide. We should not grudge criticism if it is well meant.

Q. I was merely putting it from your point of view. Kasur was not a political centre. You had no political meetings where the action of Government was criticised?

A. There is not much education in that town. The literacy of the people according to the last census was very small, and I should not wonder if graduates from that place are not more than 20 at the outside. As there is not much education, there could be no political education. There is no political society there and there is no platform there.

Q. Is there much crime in Kasur?

A. Yes, there is a good deal of murders, etc. We get cases of robbery. The low class people joined the riots there. That is a matter of daily occurrence. Some Jats joined in the riot. They thought they could take some loot, etc., in the ordinary way along with their brothers and others. There was no special reason.

Q. Having been asked generally as to your views about the situation, what do you say was the immediate causes of the outburst that took place at Kasur?

A. There was no inducement offered. As I said the ball was set rolling in a way. Boys from school went round, just having a demonstration against the Rowlatt Act, and they came to the railway station.

Q. Was that the liberty funeral demonstration?

A. I heard they had a charpoy with them and they said that was the Rowlatt Act being carried on their shoulders with a black cloth over it. They were coming to the station. Had there been one single police constable staying at the gate at that time, who had not allowed those boys to go to the platform, they would have returned to their homes. They were only schoolboys and they would have returned had they been checked. There was one police constable. I was the first man to point out to the Sub-Divisional Officer, Mr. Marsden, that there was a police constable and he noted his name.

Q. Surely, in addition to the boys, there were a lot of men who were in an excited state?

A. Wherever there is a tamasha, a good number of people join. Whenever there is a gathering of boys, everybody wants to see that tamasha, and so those people joined. And then those badmashes, butchers, sweepers and people from the village of Bamini, and from different villages of Manjha and people from villages of bad character also joined. Those places are not very far from Kasur. They could come in half an hour. They thought there was a good occasion for joining that they might get something in the looting.

Q. How did the badmashes know that there was a golden opportunity? The procession started only in the morning.

A. There was a hartal the previous evening.

Q. They must have thought it was worth while to join, and they might get something. Their intention must have been to loot the station?

A. Those people who joined may have had that idea. But the boys had no such idea.

Q. Have you any doubt that in that crowd, there must have been many who were bent upon destruction of property when they started from the city?

A. When they started from the city, my idea is that it was an ordinary demonstration. The boys only wanted to make a show of "Rowlatt Act Hai Hai" and nothing else.

Q. You know that they did a great deal of damage at the station?

A. Yes; I saw it afterwards. When I reached there, I saw that the lamp room was burnt. At that time some pleaders were helping to quench the fire. They damaged some flower pots and glass panes. Your Lordship has seen those places.

Q. You also know that they made a very murderous and determined attack upon all Europeans in the train coming from Ferozepore.

A. That I have heard.

4 December 1919.]

LALA MOHAN LAL SETH.

Q. How do you account for that ?

A. Of course I have no direct knowledge ; but I heard they were making a show. And wherever they saw Europeans they began to say ' hai hai ' in their presence ; those people were offended ; those people had pistols and they wanted to show them.

Q. Apart from the possibility of their showing pistols at all, the evidence we have got is to the effect that this crowd went deliberately up to this train and attempted to get hold of all the Europeans in it. How do you account for that ?

A. Not having direct knowledge, I cannot give you any opinion upon it.

Q. In fact, when some badmashes or some people at all events make attacks upon Europeans, were they not bent upon attacking Government and attacking the European population ? Is that not a reasonable inference to draw from the conduct of the mob in attacking the train in the way in which they did ?

A. The trains in Kasur reaching from any side all stop at the distant signals, on the three sides, from Lahore, Ferozapore and so on. There is no interlocking arrangement. Every train stops there. It seems to me that this crowd went there and seeing the Europeans, they showed that demonstration only to the Europeans. They did not show it to the Indians. They wanted to show that demonstration and shout hai hai. They perhaps got offended and therefore they insulted them.

Q. You are suggesting all that. It seems to me a difficult suggestion to accept. I want to see if there are any real grounds for making it.

A. I cannot give you any specific reason. This is my idea ; they must have been showing this to the Europeans only and therefore the thing commenced.

Q. How can you account for the mob making an attack not merely on the warrant officers who had got pistols, but also upon a woman and three young children ?

A. I think these were badmashes.

Q. The badmashes wanted to loot ?

A. There was one man who wanted to outrage the modesty of a woman. He was identified and was convicted. Such people seize such opportunities ; not that they have any idea. Just according to their evil propensities they go on.

Q. There is another point. The mob apparently were not satisfied with what they did at the station ; they made further destruction on other sides ?

A. Because by that time the badmashes joined them and seem to have said ' let us go to the treasury.'

Q. I think you yourself told us ' the mob.' You did not see the mob ?

A. I did not go there.

Q. In your statement you say that it was well that the police fired ?

A. After going and seeing the spot myself, the burning of the court, the shed of the petition-writers, the burning of the Tahsil, I formed that opinion. They had already done some mischief. I think they were justified in firing. If a robber comes to my house and does mischief, I shoot him if I can.

Q. Your view is that the educated people of Kasur had nothing to do with this ?

A. No.

Q. You say two pleaders Abdul Qadir and Mohi-ud-din did their best to quell the disturbances ?

A. Yes ; they got a reward.

Q. They were kept in imprisonment for certain time ?

A. I saw them being taken handcuffed, like ordinary criminals. I saw them in the Police havalat.

Q. On an occasion like that, mistakes can quite well be made ?

A. I learnt it from Abdul Qadir himself. He is an old man and cannot walk. They gave him a push with a bayonet and he was forced to walk quickly.

Q. In connection with a rising of that sort you admit, that if it occurred along with a number of other risings in the neighbourhood, it was natural enough that serious steps should be taken to prevent the recurrence of it ?

A. I think the authorities were really mistaken in thinking there was a general rising of the town ; after 2 o'clock it was just nothing. People were sitting in their houses, some in their shops. Nothing was heard after that ; and when the military also arrived, it was all quiet. No disturbance when Mr. Marsden came up. He was taking his escort ; I was called to the railway station at the time. I took him in my tonga and drove with him to my court room. I told him " you need not have that escort with you." He said, it was the order of the Commander. I said there was nothing here now-a-days ; it was only for a short time that these badmashes came in and there was nothing to fear.

Q. Don't you think that the authorities might reasonably be apprehensive that a similar rising would occur again ?

A. I say that true information did not reach them. If they saw the police all the people there would become quiet. There is no sentiment of disloyalty against Government. It is only when something happens that they make a cry.

Q. There was the consideration of protection of the railway property all round. We have been told that in many cases the railway lines were destroyed and railway buildings otherwise damaged ?

A. I heard something about it near Patti.

Q. If you have made yourself acquainted with these occurrences in addition to having a knowledge of the serious things that happened in Kasur, don't you think, with the information before us, it is reasonable to provide against a recurrence ?

A. If a small police were there, with the aid of the military, the situation would have been saved. Near the post office there is a police thana and there were many people there. Had they come near the people they would have saved the situation already ; but nobody came out at the time.

Q. I see you express opinions very adverse to the administration of Martial Law. I just want you to give your own views of these different occurrences so far as you have knowledge of them. I believe in connection with your own case, you had your house searched ?

A. Yes. That is right.

Q. Nothing was found ?

A. Of course nothing was found, and nothing was found in anybody else's house. I talked to Mr. Marsden. He said, " that Sanskrit document, was that some incriminating document or a seditious one ?" It was not a seditious document. Some student from Hardwar had come here and his friend had written a long essay like that, and they did not understand that and thought they were connecting Asia and Russia and all that. This was the incriminating document that was found ; nothing else.

Q. What are your principal grounds of complaint against the Martial Law administration ?

A. First it was not necessary. This goes to the root of the matter ; because there was no general rising, no revolution. In Kasur it lasted only for 2 or 3 hours. It does not indicate that you should have Martial Law in Kasur for so many months and administer it so severely. As regards acts done under Martial Law ; my house was very near the railway station. I had on several occasions been a Municipal Commissioner. There were elected Municipal Commissioners, and we all used to go to the railway station every day, sit there from early morning till evening. This is personal. There were 100 or 150 people there and afterwards they were released without trial. I think it caused a great deal of trouble to the people.

Q. Of course I suppose you can hardly have Martial Law without the people having to submit to considerable inconvenience ; that you would understand ?

A. Because the Martial Law was unnecessary the evils that came along with it were still more unnecessary.

Q. You are referring to your own case here ?

A. Not only pleaders' houses were searched, but every kind of people's house was searched. Brahmins were not allowed, even ladies were not allowed, and people not allowed to go for their marriages.

Q. You complained about the Curfew order?

A. Yes, Sir. It is a trouble to people; though the rule was 8 o'clock really after 7 people were not allowed to go out. The real order was not to go out on the circular roads. But even in those days, when they were out in those shops, those roads which were not prohibited, yet the soldiers, Indian and European, molested them.

Q. I think I have had a good deal of experience of the Curfew order not very long ago, in other countries; perhaps you are referring to the Martial Law Administrator interfering with the Hindu temple. Have you been present all the time here?

A. Not all the time.

Q. Did you hear Captain Doveton giving his explanation as to what occurred?

A. I was not here then. The report outside is that the tenants of the temple property were threatened and insulted.

Q. You make it as though it was a ground of complaint against Martial Law that people were threatened and insulted. Where did you get this information on which to make this charge?

A. There is the judicial case I referred to. I was in court on that day when they were making the statement to the Court and they stated that the Martial Law Administrator was threatening and they were ordered to pay rents to the new landlord, as it were.

Q. You were making an accusation against something the Martial Law Administrator did. What is it you complain of here, that they actually did as regards the Hindu temple property?

A. There is a temple there; certain property belongs to it. There are certain shops, and those shopkeepers pay rent to the person who is in charge of that temple. The person in charge at the time was the President of the Hindu Sabha who used to collect the landlord's rents from the shopkeepers. There was a dispute between the Brahmin who was in charge of the temple and the Hindu Sabha. He said that the Hindu Sabha had nothing to do with that and that he was entitled to realise the rents. That Brahmin brought a complaint before the Martial Law Administrator. The fact was the clerk of the Martial Law Administrator was a relative of that Brahmin. Now this matter was brought to the Martial Law Administrator. He ordered "No, you must pay to the man just living in that temple." So, these people had to pay to the man living in that temple about Rs. 1,500. Now the real owner brought a suit against the tenants. They applied to the Martial Law Administrator saying that they paid the wrong man. The court ordered:—"You get that money from him. We cannot; you must pay the landlord."

Q. I do not see that Captain Doveton ever pronounced any order. I do not see how you really had any information contrary to that.

A. They said that in Court.

Q. People may have said that.

A. These people have made a statement, and that statement is on judicial record. There they stated that they were threatened. I heard it before that. I was not a direct witness of their threatening. I heard that these people had to pay rent to the Brahmin in the temple and not to the Hindu Sabha.

Q. You also make a statement: 'A deaf beggar was shot to death at the railway station for not replying to the call of the soldier on duty.' You have heard the explanation given?

A. That beggar was deaf; he came near the gate; they thought he was a man who wanted to go in against their orders. He was shot, because the soldier on duty called him and he did not reply.

Q. It is a very unfortunate incident. We have heard that this sort of incident that must occur when soldiers are on sentry duty. Is it not? Do you suggest that there was anything reckless about the act of the soldier in firing on that occasion?

A. I do not suggest that. He was called and he did not reply to that call.

Q. I see you are complimenting the Criminal Investigation Department and Police on their actions during the time?

A. As regards permits. I asked for a permit from Mr. Marsden and he gave me one. Again from Captain Doveton. He did not give me one and I lost my case; in Lahore many people had to return their fees.

Q. How long did that rule as regards not getting permits continue in force?

A. I cannot tell you definitely; I think it must have been for a month.

Q. Did it inconvenience you only on one occasion or did you lose more than one case by not getting permits?

A. I did not take many cases.

Q. Because you were annoyed?

A. I thought it was useless to get a case at Lahore, and so I did not take any case and I refused one case.

Q. In your statement, you say that the police and the C. I. D. did their work honestly and boldly. It is rather new to us, the complimenting of the action of the C. I. D. and the Police?

A. I can testify to it:—Some innocent persons were brought in. The C. I. D. and the Police inquired into the matter. My house being situated near the railway station, I saw them passing my house. They were released, because the C. I. D. and the Police did their work honestly. There are other cases within my knowledge in which they have done their work honestly and boldly.

By Sir C. H. Setalvad—

Q. You told us that there was no political activity in Kasur at all?

A. No, Sir.

Q. No political organisations, or political meetings?

A. No, Sir.

Q. Is there any truth in the suggestion that Kasur city was noted for many years for sedition?

A. No.

Q. Is there any truth in the suggestion that the pleaders of Kasur were well-known to have anti-British feelings?

A. Never up to this time. Lala Dhanpat Rai's name was mentioned in connection with politics. He had an orphan girl and then there was a political seditionist, Ajit Singh. He married this orphan girl. That is all the matter.

Q. We do not want all that. Is there any truth in the suggestion that the pleaders of Kasur were well-known to have anti-British feelings?

A. No.

Q. Even the Rowlatt Act in the beginning did not rouse Kasur at all?

A. No.

Q. You had no hartal on the 30th March or 6th April as in other places?

A. None at all.

Q. I want to know how do you account for the sudden awakening in Kasur on the 12th with regard to the Rowlatt Bill?

A. There was no political activity, no political organisation regarding the Rowlatt Act.

Q. You have just told us that the Rowlatt Bill did not rouse them to make any hartal on the 30th or 6th. What was the cause of this sudden awakening of this sudden demonstration?

A. On the 11th there was a meeting. I was that day in Lahore.

Q. Who started that meeting?

A. I shall say; I was here on the 11th. I returned from Kasur at 5-30. Just as I reached there I learnt that there was the hartal after all in Kasur.

Q. How do you account for that? Who started the hartal on 11th?

A. I think the people from Amritsar, those traders who have dealings in hides or other things; they as a joke said, 'you Kasuris did not join us on the 6th; you are such and such people; we therefore boycott you.'

4 December 1919.]

LALA MOHAN LAL SETHI.

Q. You think the starting of the hartal on the 11th was in a certain measure due to the instigation of the Amritsar people ?

A. Due to the traders ; on the 11th, there was a rumour that the Kasur people were also going to observe the hartal, so that they might not be left behind Amritsar people.

Q. Do people from Amritsar come to Kasur ?

A. My idea is that Kasuris have to go to Amritsar for their business.

Q. There they got impregnated with their ideas about the hartal ?

A. Yes. They heard that Mr. Gandhi has been arrested and hartal was going to be declared, and they said they should also do the same.

Q. Have you come into contact with the Kasur merchants ?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Have you heard firsthand that many Kasur merchants, who had gone to Amritsar, were so spoken to ?

A. I have heard that some people had gone there and some hide merchants were there and heard it.

Q. Is there any truth in the suggestion that Amritsar merchants said they were not going to cash hundis of Kasuris if they did not join them ?

A. There was a rumour to that effect.

Q. When did you hear that first ? Some days before the 11th or after ?

A. Some 2 or 3 days before the 11th.

Q. Were you in Kasur on the 10th ?

A. I think I was on the 10th.

Q. When did you hear at Kasur of the events that happened at Amritsar ?

A. I did not hear them. On the 11th morning I came ; we had to get news from newspapers.

Q. On the 11th you were in Lahore ?

A. On the 11th I came by 7 o'clock train to Lahore.

Q. That day you remained in Lahore ?

A. I remained in Lahore.

Q. Did you know there was going to be hartal at Kasur ?

A. No, it was news to me at the railway station.

Q. When you returned to Kasur in the evening ?

A. Yes. There I learnt.

Q. Before that you did not learn ?

A. No.

Q. Can you say why anti-European feeling burst forth at Kasur ?

A. I have already said.

Q. Was there any anti-British or anti-European feeling in Kasur before that ?

A. No. None at all.

Q. It suddenly burst forth ?

A. Yes, it suddenly came up.

Q. Now in the causes of disturbances you put the high prices, then you spoke of the War Loan, then you spoke of some meetings at which War Loan was collected. Were you present when the officials were pressing the people for it ?

A. There were many meetings for the collection of War Loan.

Q. There were many meetings at Kasur ?

A. Yes.

Q. You were present at most of them ?

A. At almost all the meetings.

Q. What was done at those meetings ?

A. People would pay in the presence of Sub-Divisional Officer. For instance, he asked a man "what would you give ?" The man replied "I would pay Rs. 2,000." The Sub-Divisional Officer said "No, you must give Rs. 4,000."

Q. You mean to say that people of limited means were also asked to subscribe ?

A. In the town officials or the Tahsildar asked even the clerks who were getting Rs. 20 a month to subscribe.

Q. They went from house to house ?

A. Yes, from shop to shop.

Q. And asked people to subscribe ?

A. Yes.

Q. Did they subscribe on being so asked ?

A. They subscribed some small amounts and even that by force otherwise they would not have done so.

Q. They were so afraid of the officials pressing them that they could not refuse ?

A. Where an official goes, Tahsildar or the Naib-Tahsildar, he says "You must pay." The man says "I am poor, I cannot pay." When he presses again and again for payment, that man has to bow and he pays.

Q. Then you refer to the unsympathetic attitude of the Government and you specially mention the Lieutenant Governor. To what do you particularly refer ?

A. His speeches here and his speeches in the Council irritating the leaders of the Indians and thus annoying them.

Q. Unsympathetic attitude, was that against the educated classes ?

A. Yes.

Q. And as regards the political aspirations of the people ?

A. Because the other day he said the Punjab does not like the reforms and such like things.

Q. Then you refer to the fact of the whole non-official opinion in Council having been overruled by the official opinion. Was that considerably disappointing ?

A. That is really a farce in spite of our joining hands in such a way.

Q. Then you refer to the arrests of certain pleaders and you specially mention two of them, Maulvi Ghulam Mohi-ud-din and M. Abdul Kadir. Now these pleaders were assisting the authorities on the 12th in maintaining law and order ?

A. They went into the mob and were asking people to go away and were just helping the Government, but that it was construed otherwise.

Q. And one of them, Maulvi Ghulam Mohi-ud-din, was actually assisting in saving the Sherbourns, and these facts were well known to the Government and the police ?

A. Yes. Mr. Sherbourn mentioned this fact. The Sub-Divisional Officer went there and saw Ghulam Mohi-ud-din standing near Sherbourn, and he was standing like a constable and procting them.

Q. These two gentlemen are persons of great position and respectability ?

A. Maulvi Adul Kadir is a leader of the Kasur Bar and Maulvi Ghulam Mohi-ud-din is one of the best lawyers.

Q. Was it your feeling, or was it also the feeling generally in Kasur that their arrest, was very unjust ?

A. Yes.

Q. Now when you say that Martial Law was not necessary at Kasur, what do you mean by that ?

A. I mean, as I understand, Martial Law is only necessary where there is a general rebellion or general rising. There was none in Kasur and therefore there was no need of Martial Law in Kasur.

Q. What happened was of the same character as what had happened in various places in the Punjab in Amritsar, at Kasur, and in Lahore. The railway lines and the telegraphic communications were cut at various places ?

A. I think there was no connection between them if they were done at the same time at many places. Even if things happened at the same time no inference should be drawn that there was connection between them. There was no connection between things done at Delhi and at Amritsar.

Q. I understand you to say that there was no connection between what took place at various places in the Punjab at the same time ?

A. Yes, there was no connection.

Q. What I understand is, is it not somewhat strange that events of a similar character should happen at various places in the Province at the same time ?

A. The news of Mr. Gandhi reached at the same time.

Q. I understand you to say that there was a common cause at that time, and that cause had the same effect and resulted in cutting communications, etc. ?

A. By cutting of communications you mean telegraph and railway communications ?

A December 1919.]

LALA MOHAN LAL SETH.

Q. That is what I want to understand, the cutting of telegraph and railway communications, attack upon public buildings and a sort of demonstration against Europeans, these results were very similar in many places at the same time?

A. Many wise people think in the same way, while many bad people think in the same way. The action of the mischievous people went in the same direction.

Q. That is the only way in which you account for this?

A. The Delhi people did not come to Kasur to cut telegraph wires and do mischief of the same sort just as was done at Amritsar.

Q. Do you think that the way of doing mischief was one that suggested itself naturally to badmashes? That is your opinion?

A. When they come near the railway station what should they do?

Q. They must cut the railway line?

A. That is the mischief they can do.

Q. Do I understand you to mean that in Kasur the position was such that the civil authorities could have carried on with the aid of the military?

A. Even with the aid of the police.

Q. Even without the aid of the military?

A. They could have.

Q. If so, the civil authorities could have carried on with the aid of the military?

A. Yes.

Q. Then there was no necessity for the declaration of Martial Law?

A. No.

Q. If that had been done the inconvenience of Martial Law could have been avoided?

A. Yes.

Q. In any event do you think that it was necessary to continue Martial Law for the period for which it was in fact continued.

A. It should not have been introduced, not to mention continuing it.

Q. But still I want your answer to my question. I quite see your view that it should never have been introduced. In opposition to your view it was introduced. Then after the introduction how long do you think, should it have been continued?

A. There was nothing happening. I should not fix any time. There was nothing after 2 P.M. on the 12th. My idea is that even the authorities knew that there was nothing after the 15th or say 18th. After that it should have been stopped.

Q. You know that these things happened on the 12th at Kasur and any reasonable people in charge of maintaining law and order must take precautions to prevent recurrence of these things. Martial Law as you know had been introduced, and it must have continued. I want to know for how long it should have been continued?

A. Say eight days.

Q. A week should have been quite sufficient according to you?

A. Yes, in order to ensure that this quiet was real and not unreal eight days were quite sufficient for this.

Q. After eight days you don't think there was any apprehension?

A. No.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. You know all those eight pleaders whose houses were searched?

A. There were not in all eight pleaders, but there were two others.

Q. I am taking you to that point.

A. Of course I know all pleaders.

Q. They were all respectable men?

A. Very good men.

Q. Could any Police officer have imagined that any stolen property would be found in their houses?

A. Not in the least.

Q. Therefore when all those eight houses were searched at one and the same time, what was your inference?

Was the action of the authorities justifiable or unjustifiable, or was there any other motive?

A. Most unjustifiable.

Q. Then about travelling, you have given us your own experience. Do you suggest that the pleaders closed their professional business altogether? They were disallowed permits to travel?

A. Not only pleaders closed their work, but others too.

Q. When, as a matter of fact, the pleaders were not allowed to mention others?

A. They were giving the names at Lahore and others also were in the District Judge's Court and they were not allowed.

Q. Then there were sadhus of all religions and creeds who were put to various indignities. Have you any personal knowledge or do you only rely upon what you heard about them?

A. Every day they used to go passing my house and I used to see them.

Q. What did you see with your own eyes?

A. They used to come early in the morning and sit for hours and hours on the ground without any food and then in the evening they were allowed to go away.

Q. The second day the same thing was repeated?

A. Yes, again the same thing happened on the second day, on the third day, on the fourth day, and so on.

Q. The same persons repeated the same thing?

A. A list of all the religious institutions and temples were prepared and all the sadhus and their occupants were called.

Q. Even those who were not sadhus, but belonged to these religious temples and institutions were called every day?

A. Yes.

Q. That you have seen with your own eyes?

A. Yes. Both Hindu and Muhammadan sadhus and faqirs used to come and sit there.

Q. Could they go away or leave that place if they liked after 8 or 9 P.M.?

A. If the authorities did not allow them to go, how could they go away.

Q. They were asked to perform certain duties?

A. Their duty was to sit and to sit quietly for hours and hours and they were not asked any question.

Q. They were asked no question and no investigation was made?

A. No.

Q. You were saying something about your experience at Kasur, but you were saying something else that in Kasur the Curfew order was confined to some particular parts of the town?

A. To the Circular Road outside the town.

Q. These soldiers, both Indian and British, looted some shops and they did not allow those persons to pass who were not living on those roads?

A. They were overdoing things. If they passed they would take action.

Q. You suggest here that the military people looted some shops and were not checked?

A. They went to visit the town and there looted the shops of Ali Muhammad and Ghulam Farid.

Q. Can you give the names of those shop-keepers whose shops were looted?

A. I have given you two of the names. I made inquiries.

[The President:—That was an unofficial inquiry into a rumour.

The Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan:—I do not see any difference. If the enquiry were made by the police, they could speak of it.

The President:—How can a non-official speak about this inquiry? The witnesses would have to be produced.

The Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan:—He says he had heard from those who had been looted. However, I have to obey Your Lordship's ruling.

The President:—I do not believe there is any necessity for this question. He is a non-official agency.

The Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan:—That is Your Lordship's ruling.]

LALA MOHAM LAL SETHI.

Q. You say that liquor shops were closed on account of trouble from these soldiers?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see that with your own eyes?

A. The Inspector of the Excise Department was there. He was at that time putting up in my house and those shop-keepers came and complained that the soldiers wished to go in and would not pay. Therefore after that they reported to the Martial Law Administrator and by his orders the shops were closed for some time, so that there might not be trouble again.

Q. You say the Martial Law Administrator began to interfere in all sorts of affairs and you had to obey his rulings?

A. Yes.

Q. Apart from the Hindu temple are you aware personally of any cases or matters in which the Martial Law Administrator interfered?

A. There was a case of abduction, a civil case, which was being tried at the time.

Q. Any other case?

A. There was a case of a person who was writing petitions (he was not a petition-writer) without license to the Martial Law Administrator. He used to charge a slightly higher rate, i.e., Re. 0-8-0 or Re. 0-12-0 instead of Re. 0-1-0 or Re. 0-2-0. He was punished with Rs. 10 fine for doing this.

Q. About this temple case you have made a certain statement. May I know whether it was only an excuse for the defendants in that case that they had already paid the amount that was due from them to other persons or was there also a case by the plaintiff whether these people under the Martial Law order had paid to Jagan Nath?

A. The plaintiff had no need to sue. It was for the defendant to plead "I have already paid such and such an amount." The Court said "It was not my business."

Q. Apart from what you really heard in Court were you aware of these facts before the case was fought out?

A. Yes.

Q. So far as you were concerned you did not consider that those statements were perjured statements?

A. They were not wrong.

Q. Then you say that flogging was done in the presence of prostitutes. Have you any knowledge of the prostitutes coming there?

A. I had only heard it. I have no personal knowledge.

Q. Now you say an innocent railway babu (Bhagat Ram) was given thirty stripes with a rest after every five stripes and was admonished to identify people. No case was brought against him and no charge was laid against him before being flogged?

A. No.

Q. I ask you as a Municipal Commissioner and a Member of the Bar were you present at the railway station when Bhagat Ram was flogged or did you only hear of it?

A. Yes, I only heard of it.

Q. Did you hear of any other complaint that just came to your notice?

A. Yes, a biggish banker by name Radha Kishen used to feed those lame bulls there and they used to be lean. They were of course old and when the Captain passed by them he used to say "Why are you keeping them in this way?" Once or twice he said this and then he summoned that man at the railway station and insulted him there.

Q. But so far as the part of insult is concerned you were not there?

A. No.

Q. What happened then?

A. That man said that he would pay expenses and the bulls should be sent to the hospital; so they were sent there.

Q. He thus saved himself from botheration and from being summoned, I can say?

A. Yes.

Q. Now about the Bar Room chaprasi. That is a case which was within your knowledge because you are yourself a Member of the Bar?

A. The chaprasi was engaged only two or three days before. He did not know the language of the place properly. On that fateful day he went out of the Bar Room and was standing along with the Tahsil chaprasi outside. Both he and the Tahsil chaprasi got a shot. He was sentenced to transportation for life and the Tahsil chaprasi got a reward of Rs. 50.

Q. I have not heard of details about the arrest and identification of Mohi-ud-din, son of Maulvi Abdul Kadir. Do I understand correctly that as a matter of fact an attempt was being made to get him identified falsely and the D. S. P. interfered? That is what you mean by saying boldly?

A. Yes.

Q. So far as Kasur is concerned was there any hartal after the 12th?

A. No. There was none.

Q. All the shops were opened from the 13th?

A. Yes, from the 13th and 14th. We were asked to go round the town and we went and asked the people not to have any hartal. There was none at all.

Q. What was the attitude of the Kasur people after the 12th, 13th, 14th and 15th? Did they appear to be sullen or did they appear as usual?

A. Too terrified to stand on their legs.

Q. Was it possible for the general inhabitants of Kasur during those days, if there was any order passed against them of which they rightly or wrongly felt aggrieved, to go to the authorities? Do you think it was possible for them to go and complain to the Martial Law authorities and would they get redress?

A. No.

Q. I want to know whether in your opinion the Kasur people were happy with the Martial Law Orders that were passed?

A. How could it be?

Q. Do you think, you are a Pleader and a Municipal Commissioner, the Kasur people or people of the surrounding villages were very happy because they had no right of appeal, their cases were finished in one day, they had nothing to do with the long Penal Code or the Criminal Code, and there was no Evidence Act?

A. How could they be?

Q. Then were you present at any of the fancy punishments that were awarded to different persons at Kasur?

A. I saw that man with white lime over his body. I did not see him being whitewashed. I saw that sadhu whitewashed and mentioned him to Mr. Maraden.

Q. You actually saw the sadhu being whitewashed? He might be digging lime and therefore he might have got that lime on him?

A. So Mr. Maraden told me that while removing the bags from the railway goods shed his body might have become besmeared with it.

Q. What is your reason for not accepting this explanation and why do you call it fancy punishment?

A. If this was the punishment.

Q. Why do you say whitewashed? Was it done with a brush, or with a luchi or with anything else?

A. I was told that it was done in that way. I am not a witness to that, therefore I cannot say.

Q. There is one thing more. You are an Indian gentleman. I would like to have an answer to it from you. A boy is caned by his father or uncle. Would he mind it or would there be any disgrace to him in that?

A. No disgrace.

Q. If the boy is punished by his Schoolmaster?

A. No.

Q. Supposing a boy was brought to the railway station and if by the order of the Martial Law Administrator he was caned, would he not consider that to be very disgraceful?

A. Not simply caned but tied to something and caned.

Q. Tied to a triangle?

A. Yes. He would feel it for the whole of his life.

By Mr. Abdul Kadir, Assistant Govt. Advocate—

Q. I think there is just a passage at the end of your statement which has not been brought out so far. You say "So I think very few innocent persons were challaned before the Commission. The result of the trials too was not disappointing. Very few innocent persons were convicted." So far as you are concerned very few innocent persons were convicted?

[Concluded.]

A. Many innocent persons were challaned but very few were convicted?

Q. What I want to know is, is that your opinion and do you adhere to it?

A. Yes.

Q. Now I take you to one other point which is not in your statement, i.e., I understand you were one of the several pleaders who attended the meeting on the 12th before these disturbances at Kasur took place?

A. The meeting was on the 11th. I attended that meeting just after I reached Kasur. Some friends of mine came and said that there had been hartal and I, being a Member of the Municipal Committee and a Director of the Bank, should go and pacify the people. So I went and tried to pacify them.

Q. Did you go and try to pacify the people?

A. I told them not to be violent and asked them to observe the rule of Mr. Gandhi in not being violent and obeying the Government respectfully.

Q. Anyhow you were one of those who made efforts to pacify people. They quite welcomed you and said they would not have a hartal that day?

A. We did not talk about it. We only just asked people not to be violent.

Q. You said that they should obey the dictates of Gandhi but they should not use violence?

A. Hartal is not violence.

Q. Were you among those who said they might have a hartal?

A. We did not say anything about a hartal. There was a hartal on already there when I reached Kasur. The mob was there and we talked about the Rowlatt Act.

Q. You have already told the Committee that on the 11th you were aware of what happened at Amritsar on the 10th?

A. No, I did not say that.

Q. In answer to Sir C. H. Setalvad you said at Lahore you heard of the events at Amritsar.

A. No, I heard of Gandhi's arrest.

Q. You did not hear on the 11th at Lahore what had happened at Amritsar on the previous day?

A. No, I came to court and did my work.

Q. That is what I understood you to say, this was public property on the evening of the 10th at Lahore?

A. That morning I did not read the papers at Kasur, I went to court.

Q. Anyhow you knew what had had happened at Lahore on the evening of the 10th, that is firing had had to be resorted to to disperse the Anarkali mobs. Were you aware of that on the 11th?

A. While I was returning from the court on the way I heard there had been some altercation on the Upper Mall, but I did not get the details of it.

Q. But you knew something of that? The point I want to put to you is whether it occurred to you or not, when making a speech at that meeting on the 11th, in the light of what had taken place at Lahore, which you say you knew something of, to tell the people it was not good under these circumstances to continue these hartals?

A. Hartals we did not speak of.

Q. You knew the hartal was going on, you went to speak to them, and you did not tell them that, in the light of what had happened in Lahore, you did not think it should continue?

A. I did not know that they would continue the hartal after that.

Q. You did not advise them to break up the hartal because it had led to bad consequences?

A. It was already evening, 5-30, by the time I reached there.

Q. I did not ask you the reason why you did not do so?

A. I did not refer to the hartal at all.

Q. Nor did any of the other pleaders advise them against the hartal?

A. Neither against nor for.

Q. By the time you were leaving, one Narendra Ali, who has been subsequently sentenced, spoke and said, 'now the flatterers are going away we must do what we like'?

A. I am told that Narendra Ali after that made a speech after I and Maulvi Abdul Kadir went away.

Q. With regard to one little point. In the beginning of your statement about 500 people being recruited from Kasur, you made it clear that you included in that recruits from neighbouring villages?

A. They are Kasuris.

Q. The point which was really put to you by the President was as to the number of people from the town. Are you aware or are you not that the number from the town itself was very much less than 100 even?

A. I do not know.

PRESENT:

The Hon'ble LORD HUNTER.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice RANKIN.
 The Hon'ble Mr. W. F. RICE, C.S.I., C.I.E., I.C.S.
 Major-General Sir GEORGE BARROW, K.C.B.,
 K.C.M.G.

The Hon'ble Pandit JAGAT NARAYAN.
 Sir C. H. SETALVAD, KT.
 Sardar Sahibzada SULTAN AHMAD KHAN.

Mr. H. WILLIAMSON, M.B.E., I.P., Secretary.

Lieutenant H. MUNRO, 2-17th Infantry.

By the President—

Q. Were you a passenger by the train from Ferozepore to Lahore, leaving Ferozepore about 9 o'clock in the morning on the 12th of April last?

A. I was, Sir.

Q. Were you in a first class compartment along with Captain Limby of the Royal Engineers?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What other Europeans were in the train besides yourselves?

A. Mr. and Mrs. Sherbourn and their children, two N. C. O.'s of the 1/4th Queens, a Master Gunner of the Royal Garrison Artillery and a Conductor or Lieutenant in the Ordnance Depot.

Q. These people were in different compartments from the compartment in which you were?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did the train stop about 500 yards west of Kasur Station?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did it remain stopped for some time?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did you think that unusual?

A. I did not at the time. I had no reason to think so. I was reading a paper at the time, and there was nothing unusual about it until we afterwards saw a good number of Indians alongside the train on a bank which ran parallel to the train. Captain Limby drew my attention to the fact that they seemed excited. He looked out and saw Mr. Sherbourn going along the bank. He then drew my attention to the fact that there had been disturbances in other parts of the Punjab, and that probably the same sort of thing was happening in Kasur, and he said he was going to get out and see what was the matter, and I said I would go too, so we got out.

Q. Did you see a large crowd when you got out?

A. There was not a large crowd on the bank at the time, there were a few, fifty to a hundred. But from the top of the bank I could see that something at the station was burning, and what seemed to be an enormous crowd were coming from the station towards the bank.

Q. What was the crowd doing?

A. They were in the distance at that time, three or four hundred yards away.

Q. Did you make out that they were gesticulating?

A. They were carrying flags of different descriptions, pieces of cloth, and were very noisy. It was quite easy to see that they were thoroughly excited.

Q. I think numbers of them had lathis?

A. Everybody seemed to be carrying something, if it was not a lathi it was a piece of iron or something.

Q. Were shouts thrown at you?

A. Oh, yes, as soon as we were spotted. I had hardly been on the bank two minutes when I was greeted with shouts of Afsar Sahib hai, mar do, mar do, "Here is an officer, kill him, kill him."

Q. You were in uniform?

A. I was.

Q. Was that cry shouted frequently by the crowd?

A. Oh, yes, we were objects of very much attention directly we appeared on the bank.

Q. Except that you had made your appearance on the bank had you done anything to excite the people?

A. Absolutely nothing.

Q. And had no one in the train done anything to excite the hostility of the crowd?

A. Nothing; Mr. Sherbourn was the only one who got out of the train previous to myself and Captain Limby. I afterwards saw the two Conductors who were afterwards killed; they were in their carriage.

Q. From the attitude of the crowd and these cries did you think the crowd intended to do violence?

A. I was perfectly certain of it.

Q. You were not armed?

A. I had nothing at all.

Q. And neither was Captain Limby?

A. No, Sir.

Q. What was the first step you took?

A. I did not realise the seriousness of the position at first. They were all thoroughly excited, but I thought nothing of it; I had seen excited natives before and it did not worry me a great deal. Mrs. Sherbourn was naturally very excited; she had her children with her. I knew her personally and she said to me "For God's sake do something." So I looked round rather in a quandary as to what to do. So there was a Gate-keeper's hut there, and I advised her to get down with the two Corporals of the Queens and get into the hut, which she afterwards did. I then tried to get towards the engine with the idea of shifting the train one way or the other. The first railway official I met was the guard of the train. I said "you must move this train either backwards or forwards." His reply was "I cannot, I have no line clear." My impression was he was directly concerned in the whole business; he was absolutely callous. He took absolutely no measures whatsoever to do anything. After that, Sir, I went along with Captain Limby towards the engine, and by that time I had a pretty rough time; I had been hit with lathis, and bricks were flying all over the place. It was perfectly impossible to get to the engine so we had to turn back.

Q. I think you managed to get clear of the main crowd?

A. Yes, Sir, we did.

Q. In the course of getting clear of the main crowd had you to defend yourself?

A. Yes, Sir. From memory I should say four or five times we had to stop and fight for it back to back.

Q. I think you used your fists as the only thing you had?

A. I used everything that was available, fists and feet.

Q. And you and Captain Limby did manage, I suppose, to inflict some injury on some of your assailants?

5 December 1919.]

Lieutenant H. MUNRO.

A. I think so, Sir.

Q. Did it take you some time to get clear of this crowd?

A. Yes, Sir, it did.

Q. How long?

A. Well, Sir, I should think to the time that we were really safe it was a matter of at least an hour and a half to an hour and three quarters.

Q. Did you see what the crowd was doing during this time?

A. Part of the crowd, not all.

Q. What was the crowd, so far as you saw, doing?

A. There was a huge crowd round the Gate-keeper's hut in which the Sherbourn family were. It was perfectly impossible to get there. That was practically the safest place, one was more or less safe from stones at any rate, and I tried to get back to the hut, but it was absolutely impossible. So we got close to the train, working back down it so as to be safe on one side at any rate. The crowd round the hut were absolutely infuriated, madmen the whole of them. They were doing everything they possibly could to get in there.

Q. Did the crowd attack every European in the train or attempt to attack every European in the train?

A. Yes, Sir, every European in the train was either killed or wounded, except Mrs. Sherbourn, she and the children; I believe, she was not actually maltreated.

Q. Did you form any opinion at the time as to what the object of the crowd was in coming out towards the train in the way in which they did?

A. Well, Sir, I do not know of course. I should think they probably came out for loot, for what they could get; but directly they found there were Europeans on the train they did not seem to worry about loot very much. The train was hardly touched, but we were subjected to a good deal of attention from them.

Q. And did the circumstance that you were wearing the King-Emperor's uniform seem to goad the crowd on?

A. I think so, Sir. I have since spoken to Mr. Sherbourn very many times on the whole thing. Directly we appeared on that bank—I had only been out of the train a matter of half a minute—we heard them shout Afsar Sahib hai, kill him, kill him.

Q. I think when you reached a place of safety it was found that you had sustained considerable injuries?

A. Well, Sir, Captain Limby previously had a severe injury to his hip and I had some trouble in getting him away. He was not able to stand the strain. He had had a bad time of it as I had. I had my topi taken, it was late in April, and I was very wary of getting sun-stroke. My chief object was to get to a village and have a rest. At the time I was dubious about the villages, and so we went warily. We managed to find a Jat Sikh village and they treated us well, and we rested there for an hour or an hour and-a-half. Then I got a pony from the village, put Captain Limby on it and brought him to the Kaisar-i-Hind Bridge. It was a ten mile tramp and we had both had quite enough.

Q. You met Mr. Clarke, and he took Captain Limby to his bungalow and you were taken to hospital?

A. Yes, Sir, he had a guard there.

Q. I think from the certificate of the medical gentleman who attended you you were found to be suffering from a large scalp wound and multiple contusions and abrasions of body and upper extremities, and he adds the injuries were severe?

A. Yes, Sir.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. So far as you were concerned you saw and heard no firing?

A. I heard firing.

Q. Where from?

A. From the direction of the Station.

Q. But where you were you saw and heard none?

A. None at all, Sir.

By Sir C. H. Setalvad—

Q. Who was this guard that you have spoken about.

A. I have since recognised the guard.

Q. Was he an Indian?

A. He was an Indian guard.

Q. What caste was he, have you any idea whether he was a Sikh?

A. From memory I should think he was a Hindu.

Q. He refused to take any steps whatever?

A. He certainly gave me that impression. The train at the time I got out of it had been standing there three or four minutes.

Q. What was he doing all the time?

A. Nothing, he was walking up and down the train, and my opinion was that the driver or the guard or both could see the crowd coming long before I did.

Q. Who was the driver?

A. Also an Indian.

Q. A Hindu or a Muhammadan?

A. I could not say.

Q. The driver also did nothing?

A. The train was not moved until some time afterwards, 7 or 8 minutes afterwards.

Q. When all this was happening between you and the crowd both the driver and the guard were standing still doing nothing?

A. I believe the driver was on his engine, but the guard was off his train because I spoke to him on the bank.

Q. The driver never came out but stuck there?

A. Must have done.

Q. Now some days after this incident of the 12th were you asked to come to Kasur for identification?

A. As soon as I was well enough I went.

Q. When did you go?

A. I could not tell you the dates.

Q. Roughly how many days?

A. From memory 7 or 8 days, perhaps less.

Q. And was the whole town turned out on that occasion?

A. On one occasion, but that was some time afterwards.

Q. At what identification were you?

A. I went into Kasur daily. I think altogether I was in Kasur for at least 20 days.

Q. You went daily to Kasur?

A. Yes, we had a detachment there and for that reason I went there daily.

Q. You were at several identification parades?

A. Yes.

Q. And were you able to identify any one?

A. Yes.

Q. How many did you identify?

A. I think 7 or 8, may be more.

Q. Was any particular person pointed out to you by the police, and were you asked whether you could remember him?

A. I was very keen on identifying some of these people, and I was allowed always to go into the jail or wherever prisoners were collected to see if I could find any of my former friends. I did on several occasions.

Q. I have seen it alleged that with regard to one particular individual the police either brought him to you or he was shown to you, and you were pressed to identify him, and you said—no, you could not identify him at all?

A. No, not at all; I never had that experience. I certainly would not be pressed to identify anybody, even by the police.

Q. Did the police bring to you or show to you any particular person on more than one occasion and ask you whether you could identify him and you said you could not?

A. They may have done so. They may have shown me the same man three or four times in the crowd. A crowd of 50 or 60 men were sometimes brought to me. I cannot say whether any of these men had been previously brought before me.

Q. At the trial did you identify these people?

A. Yes. Originally if I identified a man the police put him into jail and he was brought up for trial at Lahore. After giving evidence at the trial I was asked to go round and pick the men out. On one occasion here in Lahore there were at least 40 prisoners, and of these I identified only two or three. I had to go round the whole 40 and identify my men again, and I have a good memory, and I hope I did not make any mistakes; I think I didn't.

By Major-General Sir George Barrow—

Q. These people who were identified by you were subsequently tried?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You attended their trial?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Were they convicted?

A. Some of them and some were acquitted.

Q. Of those you identified?

A. Yes.

Q. They were not all convicted?

A. No, it was impossible. As a matter of fact one whom I was absolutely certain of—I had fought with him personally on the railway embankment, but unfortunately no one else was there; Captain Limby was down and out; but I knew this man's face after fighting with him for three or four minutes on the bank, that man was acquitted.

Q. Why?

A. There was no second evidence, there was only one, myself.

Q. And those men convicted were men against whom there was more than one witness?

A. Yes, Sir, necessarily.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. You gave evidence at two trials; twice you appeared as a witness at trials?

A. I was certainly at Lahore more than twice; it may have been for two trials, it may have been for more or less.

Q. And Captain Limby was also a witness with you?

A. Yes.

Q. It appears from the statements made in those cases that neither you nor Captain Limby mentioned that the crowd on seeing you said Afsar Sahib hai, mar do, mar do. May I take it you made that statement and it was not recorded?

A. I made that statement three or four days after that occurrence in a written statement.

Q. In these trials in your recorded evidence, on both occasions neither in your statement nor in Captain Limby's does this statement find a place. Therefore it is quite possible either that you made that statement and it was not recorded, or you forgot to make it?

A. I do not think, as a matter of fact, I did make that statement at the trial. I was not called upon to make a statement at the trial.

Q. What I say is, your evidence and Captain Limby's evidence was recorded at both the trials, and I have got the record of these trials before me, and from both those statements this expression is absent.

A. But evidence is not a statement surely.

Q. In the evidence that was recorded at those trials this expression is absent. There are only two possible explanations for that, either that you made that statement and it was not recorded or you forgot to make that statement?

A. I did not forget to make that statement; I was not asked to make a statement.

Q. When you gave your evidence you did not state that the crowd were calling out Afsar Sahib hai, mar do, mar do, nor do I find that expression in Captain Limby's evidence, therefore the explanation is either that you forgot to mention this fact or you mentioned it and it was not recorded?

A. There is a third I may point out. At the trial a man was tried for maltreating me and attempting to murder me, that statement I had already recorded and that statement did not enter into the thing whatever at all, because the men who were charged with hurting me may have been a mile away, as it was done ten minutes afterwards. They may never have been near the Kasur Station.

Q. You will find that the whole thing is described, that on the 12th of April you were going by the train, the train stopped and both you and Captain Limby got out, and some one said Kasur Station was burning, and you saw the Sherbournes and the two soldiers carrying these children. All these facts are mentioned. The point is that in the natural sequence of events you did not mention that expression. Either you forgot to state the fact or you did make that statement and it was not recorded.

A. Yes.

Q. It comes to this that you said that you were not specifically asked to state what the crowd was saying?

A. That is what I mean.

Q. And you did not volunteer it?

A. No; I had no occasion to.

Q. Was it a usual thing to stop at that place every day?

A. I did not go with the train every day. My station is Ferozepore.

Q. The mere fact of the train stopping there at the distant signal did not indicate anything to you?

A. No, not at the time.

Q. Having regard to the usual practice I think it may be assumed that before the train starts from the distant signal and goes to the platform a line clear is required?

Mr. Herbert.—Evidence will be produced that it is not so.

Q. When did you hear the shots fired, after the Sherbournes had gone to the house?

A. A long time afterwards.

Q. Before that you heard no shots?

A. No.

Q. So far as the courage of the crowd is concerned I take it that when once you threw down one of the mob on the other side of the railing, it had a great moral effect?

A. The crowd had no moral courage ever. I held up 25 men with an ordinary smoking pipe.

By the Hon'ble Mr. W. F. Rice—

Q. From what you have just said I understand that your impression was that the crowd would have been only too pleased to murder you and Captain Limby if they had been able to?

A. First of all we had no arms. They made grimaces at us.

Q. Then if you had been unable to defend yourself as you did, do you think that they would probably have murdered you?

A. I am positively certain.

Q. You would not describe them as a lot of harmless school-boys whose intention was to make an innocent display of some kind to the passengers?

A. No.

Mr. A. J. SHERBOURN, Signal and Interlocking Inspector, North Western Railway.

By the President—

Q. Are you a Signal and Interlocking Inspector?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Were you in the train from Ferozepore to Kasur on the 12th?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You, your wife and three of your children were in a second class compartment?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. The train stopped I think about 500 yards west of the station?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Is it usual for a train from Ferozepore to stop there?

A. No.

Q. Did you look out in consequence of the stoppage of the train?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What did you see?

A. While I was in the compartment I saw Indian passengers all leaving the train and running up on to the bank at the side?

5 December 1919.]

Mr. A. J. SHEERBOURN.

Q. Do you know what forced the Indian passengers to leave the train?

A. From hearing of the Delhi and the Amritsar cases I concluded that there was going to be some trouble.

Q. Did you see anything in front of the train?

A. I saw a great mob.

Q. How many?

A. I estimated the number at about two thousand.

Q. How far were they from the front of the train?

A. About 300 or 400 yards.

Q. When you saw them were you alarmed?

A. I was.

Q. Particularly for the safety of your wife and children?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. From the distance could you see anything as to the attitude of the crowd as to whether they were a threatening crowd or a peaceful crowd?

A. I saw them running towards the train and shouting. They were making a terrible noise.

Q. Did you hear any definite shouts?

A. No, Sir.

Q. I think two soldiers Corporal Batsman and Lance-Corporal Grinham of the Queens helped you, your wife and your children to reach the gate-keeper's hut?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. At this point did you see Mr. Khair Din, Inspector of Coaching and Goods?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did he give you any advice as to what to do?

A. I saw the mob so I got out of the train on the left side and I entered the compartment adjoining ours where I knew there were two soldiers. I got in to ask them if they had any fire-arms. I saw Khair Din then and the soldiers and I took my wife and children down from the compartment.

Q. The soldiers were unfortunately unarmed?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Khair Din himself gave you a little assistance?

A. He did.

Q. When you reached the hut what did the crowd do?

A. They smashed the door and window in.

Q. What object had the crowd in going to the hut?

A. To attack us.

Q. Did they declare their intention? Was it manifest that they wanted to drag you out?

A. I think so after what happened.

Q. In the meantime did Corporal Batsman and Lance-Corporal Grinham defend the hut from the crowd?

A. As long as they could.

Q. What happened to them?

A. They were struck and knocked down. Corporal Batsman hardly got out of the hut when he was struck and dragged out.

Q. Did Corporal Grinham strike a man with an axe he had with him?

A. He struck at the man but I cannot say exactly whether he hit the man. He himself was immediately hit on the head.

Q. Had anyone of your party or anyone in the train done anything to instigate the crowd or to irritate the crowd so as to justify the action that was taken by them?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. What was the reason for the crowd making this attempt on you and your wife and children? What explanation did you give to yourself of this attack?

A. I thought they were up against all Europeans.

Q. Did you see the last two witnesses—Lieutenant Monro and Lieutenant Limby—did you notice that the crowd attacked them?

A. I got into the hut by the time the crowd came up. They were about three or four hundred yards in front of the train when we were advised to go into the hut, and we got into the hut before they came up to the train.

Q. How long did you remain in the hut?

A. A couple of hours.

Q. In the meantime did these two soldiers remain beside you in the hut?

A. No. I do not know what happened to them.

Q. Were they dragged away by the crowd?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And did they fight their way defending their lives against the crowd?

A. I could not say.

Q. Anyhow these men did all they could to help you?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did anyone of the crowd enter the hut and do anything to you?

A. Only two entered.

Q. Was anything done to you?

A. My hat was taken off and thrown out and he tried to drag me out.

Q. Did you form any opinion as to what was the object of dragging you out?

A. To hand me out to the crowd to murder me.

Q. From the attitude of the crowd had you any doubt in your mind that that was their intention—that they intended to murder you when they got you outside?

A. Not after seeing what they had done to those two soldiers.

Q. Was Khair Din with you at the time?

A. The whole time.

Q. Did he plead with the rioters not to molest you?

A. Yes.

Q. And a little later did one of the Kasur pleaders come up?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Who was that?

A. Ghulam Mohi-ud-din.

Q. He also pleaded with the crowd to save you?

A. I think after Khair Din spoke to him.

Q. Both Khair Din and this gentleman did what they could to allay the passions of the crowd?

A. Ghulam Mohi-ud-din went out and spoke to the mob and they quietened down immediately. The second time when he went and spoke to them they all went to the station.

Q. Then after the crowd went back to the station did you remain in the hut for a little while?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. When you were at the village the Deputy Superintendent of Police with about twenty others came to you?

A. We had been there an hour when they turned up.

Q. I think when you were there you got on a horse and took a telegram to Ferozepore?

A. No, Sir, it was after we were taken to the Deputy Superintendent of Police's bungalow that I got a horse. I asked the Deputy Superintendent of Police if any information had been sent to Ferozepore and he informed me that he had sent a man on horseback to Lahore, so I told him Ferozepore was nearer and that I would get on a horse and take any message to Ferozepore for help.

Q. Was that with a view to informing the Military?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Was the situation one that the police could deal with themselves?

A. I could not say.

Q. Anyhow you thought the safety of your family and others made it advisable that the Military should be present?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. I think when going with your telegram you got on to a light engine at one point?

A. On arriving at Gandasinghwala I found a light engine ready to go to Kasur; I got on to it and I ordered the station master to return it to the bridge.

Q. There you met Colonel Atkins of the Queens?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And then you got him and a force to return with you to Kasur?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. At the time when you returned to Kasur did you find that the mob had been dispersed by the police fire?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You were taken back to Ferozepore by Colonel Atkins?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. On your way to inform the Military as to what was occurring you met Lance-Corporal Grinham?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. He was one of the men who was protecting the hut when your wife and children were in it?

5 December 1919.]

Mr. A. J. SHERBOURN.

[Concluded.]

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. In what condition did you find him?

A. I found that his head had been cut in several places and he was bleeding very badly.

Q. Was he staggering along as fast as he could?

A. Just before I got up to him he fell against the bank.

Q. Was he in a very exhausted condition?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You do not think he would have been able to go further?

A. No; I do not think he would have been able to get a step further.

Q. You were able to render him assistance?

A. I got my arm round his waist and helped him to the bridge, where Colonel Atkins left a man in charge with him before leaving for Kasur again.

Q. But for that assistance that you rendered him would he have had a bad chance with his life?

A. First of all he was without a hat in the hottest part of the day and it is quite likely he would have got heat-stroke.

Q. Did you see what occurred to the warrant officers who were murdered?

A. No; I did not see them. They were brought into Ferozapore. That was after their death when I was asked to identify the bodies.

By Sir C. H. Setalvad—

Q. When your train stopped at the distant signal was the signal against the train?

A. Yes.

Q. If the signal was against the train the train could not in the ordinary course proceed?

A. No.

Q. When you were hiding in the hut and when the mob came there what was the number of the mob?

A. I could not say how many came up to the hut.

Q. Khair Din went out of the hut and persuaded them to go away and not to molest you?

A. Two men entered the hut and it was with them that Khair Din spoke.

Q. Did you hear the mob outside?

A. We heard a terrible noise.

Q. If the crowd had come to the hut determined to molest you how did Khair Din so easily succeed in sending them away?

A. He did not send them away.

Q. He certainly succeeded in persuading them not to molest you?

A. He spoke to their leaders.

Q. And they acceded to his suggestion?

A. Yes.

Q. How do you explain that they were so easily persuaded?

A. Khair Din told us that Kamal Din was his neighbour and knew him very well so perhaps Kamal Din thought Khair Din might give him away afterwards so he agreed to what Khair Din had to say.

Q. At what stage did the pleader come?

A. Sometime after.

Q. Had the crowd come back again when the pleader had come?

A. There were some men.

Q. What was the occasion for the pleader to come?

A. I could not tell you.

Q. How long was this pleader with you?

A. I do not think he remained for more than five minutes.

Q. He also succeeded in persuading the crowd to go away?

A. When he spoke to them they went away from the hut.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. How far was the hut from the train?

A. It was a few yards behind the brake-van of the train.

Q. Did you hear any shots when you were in the hut?

A. No.

Q. So long as you were in the hut the train was still there?

A. It had been taken into the station before we left the hut.

Q. How long after?

A. I could not tell you.

Q. Do you remember that one of the expressions used was: "Suar ka bachcha?" These were the words addressed to the crowd?

A. Yes.

Q. According to you they removed your hat and they were trying to molest you. Up to that time it was not given out that two men had been killed?

A. I cannot remember exactly in what order these things happened.

Q. I will read a passage to you from Mrs. Sherbourn's statement. "Some one said that two of their men had been killed; and the man who pulled off my husband's hat got enraged again, and caught me by the wrist."

A. That is true.

Q. How many minutes after you were taken to the hut did this man come and pull off your hat?

A. I could not say exactly. As soon as the door was broken open.

Q. Was this statement made when he was pulling off your hat or was it made by another man?

A. I do not know if it was exactly at that time.

Q. Before your wife's wrist was caught did not one of the men say that "you need not be afraid; you are my mother and your friends are my brothers."

A. I do not remember hearing that.

Q. Khair Din has made this statement before the court.

A. Possibly he may have, but I cannot say.

Mr. Herbert.—When Ghulam Mohi-ud-din addressed the crowd "Suar ka bachcha chale jao" did the crowd say anything?

A. Yes, they taunted him by saying "you yesterday told us something very different to what you are telling us to-day."

By the President—

Q. What I want to ask you is this. With reference to the first leader to whom Khair-ud-din spoke, who was he?

A. He was Chunilal, a contractor.

Q. He had influence over the crowd?

A. He seems to have had a great influence over the crowd.

Q. You have referred to him as a leader of the crowd. Was he leading the crowd towards that hut?

A. He was one of the first to enter the hut. I take it that he was leading the crowd.

Q. What I mean is, was he participating in the actions of the crowd?

A. I could not say that.

Q. Anyhow he had influence with the crowd, and after the conversation of Khair-ud-din, he persuaded the crowd not to continue the action they had started. Is that what you mean?

A. Not to harm us, that is what I mean.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. Is it not a fact that the conversation just now detailed by you in answer to the Government Advocate was made by Chunilal who was already inside the hut, and not by any member of the mob outside?

A. I have stated before that it was Chunilal.

Q. After that it was Kamal Din who supplied you with chapatis, milk, water, etc.?

A. I do not know who supplied the food but they were brought into the hut by Kamal Din.

Q. It was Kamal Din who took you to his own village and remained with you for about two-hours?

A. He came along with us. He did not remain for two hours, as we were only there for about an hour.

5 December 1919.]

M. KHAIR-UD-DIN.

M. KHAIR-UD-DIN, Travelling Inspector of Accounts, North Western Railway.

By the President—

Q. Were you in the train from Ferozepore to Kasur on the 12th when it was stopped about 500 yards away from the station?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You were in the 2nd class compartment along with the last witness with his family, and there were four other Indians besides yourself?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Of these four, one was Inspector of Works, North Western Railway, and the other was a Judge?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Besides these people, there were two soldiers in your compartment?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. As soon as Mr. Sherbourn got into the compartment after the train stopped, what happened?

A. I had secured a seat on the middle berth. I was busy reading my book. Mr. Sherbourn got into the compartment and whispered something to the two British soldiers and I could only hear the word "mob" from his conversation. Then I got up and asked Mr. Sherbourn what the matter was, and he said there were rioters outside and he was quite frightened. Then I asked the two soldiers if they had revolvers with them and to load them if they had, but unfortunately they had none with them at the time. So we got down from the compartment.

Q. Did you think there was a probability of your being attacked then?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Why did you think so?

A. Because the night before I was at Moga, and some people who had come to Moga by the night train were talking about the happenings at Amritsar. Then it struck me.

Q. Very well, you might continue the story.

A. Then I got down from the compartment with Mr. Sherbourn. I saw Mrs. Sherbourn and her three little children had already come out. I also saw two Military Officers who also must have come out of the very train. I asked them if they had any revolvers with them, but unfortunately they had none. They all asked me what they should do to protect themselves, and I suggested to them that they should get into the compartment and hide themselves in the bath room and I told them that I would do my very best to help them. There was no time to return to the compartment, because we had left the train and come a few paces away. As the rioters were overtaking us, we all ran to the rear side of the train. There was a gateman's hut there. I knew the gateman, he is considered to be a saint there, and he knew me. So I shouted out to him and told him to open the door of his hut. He very kindly complied with my request, and then I put all these people in the hut and I stood outside. The two military officers of course wanted to face the mob, but they could not.

Q. You said that the two officers wanted to fight the crowd but could not?

A. Yes, it was impossible, because they were stoned and I saw them running. I told the mob to keep back as they had revolvers so that the crowd might be afraid and go away. However, I do not know what happened to these officers. At that time some of the mob began to break open the window and door of the hut, and I was in the hut. I tried to pacify them and I appealed to them saying that I had my purdahwalla family inside and not to disturb us, but all my appeals were in vain. First the small window of the hut was broken, but of course they could not see their way to enter. Then one man came through the big door. He broke it open, but I managed to send him back. Then another man by name Chuni Lal came in. Then I told him 'look here, young boy, these are my friends, do not disturb them.' I patted him, and I did everything in my power to pacify him. In the meantime the two soldiers came out first, because they were in the hut, and they wanted to face the mob, but it was impossible for them to do so. I saw them running as they had received severe hurts because the mob was stoning them.

Q. Do you mean the Military Officers?

A. Yes, Sir, I saw also the two officers.

Q. They never were in the hut?

A. They were outside. I saw them running away and facing the mob, but they could not. Then the two soldiers came out. The first one received slight injuries, but the second soldier, a tall man, I well remember him, had a serious hurt and blood was spouting out of his wound like water from a fountain, and he fell senseless. I picked him up and again went inside. Then I did my level best to pacify Chuni Lal and told him 'look here, young boy, these are my friends, Mrs. Sherbourn is like my sister and Mr. Sherbourn is a great friend of mine, I am very anxious that they should be quite safe.' In fact I did everything to please him and pacify him because I looked upon the trouble as a rising against the British Government. I persuaded Chuni Lal not to hurt this family in any way as they were my great friends.

Q. Did you say that because you looked upon the rising as a rising against the British Government?

A. Naturally, one cannot deny that, because whatever the rioters were doing was simply to put the Europeans into trouble.

Q. It was an attack then upon all Europeans?

A. It was, of course. The two officers were stoned and they had to run for their lives, and although they tried to face the mob, it was impossible for them as they were not armed at the time and I saw with my own eyes the two soldiers who had come out were running as they have received serious injuries, and they were bleeding. I was sometimes inside the hut and sometime outside because I was watching the movements of the rioters, and the hut as well. Then I saw another boy, Kamal Din, whom I knew before, I mean the second boy. He came out of a village on the opposite side of the gateman's hut and then went straight to the mob because the first mob was very large, and later on they came in batches. He first went there, and after a while he returned and I thought I would get all the assistance from this boy. When he returned from the mob, I patted this boy and told him that the Sherbourns were my personal friends and they should not be disturbed or molested in any way. As I said before, I was sometimes going out to watch the hut, and every time I went outside, I was requested by Mrs. Sherbourn not to leave them alone, but I had to go out sometimes to watch the movements of the crowd. After some interval Mr. Ghulam Mohi-ud-din turned up, and as soon as I saw him I thought I would get help from him. So I shouted out and said that the Sherbourns were practically safe so far and we must see that they are not disturbed any more. Then he came up, I made him stand on the wall of the enclosure of the gateman's hut. He stood there and told the mob to go away and not to disturb us. After this the mob did not trouble us.

Then we tried to get some conveyance. I asked Mr. Ghulam Mohi-ud-Din to get a conveyance. In the meantime I had sent my own servant to bring my wife's veil so that I might take Mrs. Sherbourn in disguise. But we could not get any conveyance, so without waiting further we took this family to the village, because Kamal Din suggested to me that the Sherbourns would be quite safe there. The gatekeeper also told me that he had some influence in the village and that he would see that this family was not in any way disturbed there. So we started, but before doing so, I told Mr. and Mrs. Sherbourn 'don't you think that I will go alive to my own house leaving you in this state,' so that Mrs. Sherbourn, who was very much frightened at the time, might not lose all courage. Every time on the way I told her 'don't you think I will go away safely home leaving you in this state; you will see that my throat is out first, and then of course if anything happens I don't know' so that the lady might not lose heart. After reaching the village, I suggested to Kamal Din to bring some milk. I asked him to do this twice, first in the hut and again after reaching the village. He of course brought some milk, water and other things after reaching the village. Then Sheikh Din Muhammad, Judge, the 5th passenger, also arrived before we left the hut to go to the village, and he also rendered very valuable assistance to the lady, because she was feeling quite faint and he was pouring water on her head.

Then, of course, I was very much relieved of my anxieties and I felt myself that the family was quite safe.

Then after some time the Deputy Superintendent of Police, the Sub-Divisional Officer and the Sub-Inspector, City Police, came with other gentry and officers of the town.

Q. But for the assistance that you and the other gentlemen rendered, had you any doubt that Mr. Sberbourn and his family would be massacred on that occasion?

A. I believe so.

Q. After they had been for a while in the village, the Deputy Superintendent of Police arrived with a police force and took them to his bungalow where other Europeans and Christian ladies were brought for safety?

A. I accompanied them up to that bungalow myself.

Q. What had caused this outburst against the Government and against the Europeans to which you referred? Why had this large mob come out of Kasur and why did they want to destroy Government property and attack Europeans?

A. I have got a travelling life, and I get very little time to know all these things. I was travelling by the train. I cannot fully describe what this outburst was due to, however, my idea is it is a long thread.

Q. Could you give us your story?

A. Of course everybody knows it. It was only to trouble the Government. Something began some years ago, and I heard that European officers here in Lahore were stoned, it was all in the papers. Then some Muhammadans formed a meeting and passed a resolution condemning this assault by the Hindus. This happened some time ago but now of course some sort of influence has been at work and a few Muhammadans have joined Hindus, otherwise the majority, as far as I think, do not want to join such movements.

Q. Could you come nearer to the incident, itself. What would you say was the motive power behind the mob that did this violence? Did you form any opinion on that?

A. The only opinion I formed was that they wanted to put the Government into trouble.

Q. The destruction of the railway plant and trains and so on looks as though the mob wanted to get rid of the Government altogether?

A. It appears so.

Q. Did that appear to you to be their idea at the time?

A. Yes, Sir, because of the destruction of Government property, cutting of wires and so on.

By Sir C. H. Setalvad—

Q. What are you doing, Mr. Khair-ud-din? Where are you employed?

A. I am employed in the Railway Department.

Q. As what?

A. Travelling Inspector of Accounts.

Q. What is your salary?

A. Rs. 240.

Q. You were for many years in the railway service?

A. Yes.

Q. You yourself take no part in public or political affairs?

A. No.

Q. And you don't follow and study what is happening?

A. Of course here and there I hear something, but personally I don't study.

Q. You don't take part in any public affairs?

A. No.

Q. You have said that you look upon this rising as a rising against the British Government? Why do you say so?

A. Because the damage that was done was all to Government property, cutting of wires, damaging stations, burning post offices, burning courts and other things.

Q. Stations are not the property of Government; they are the property of the Railway?

A. You may take it in any sense, but I take it as Government property.

Q. Because crowds damaged the railways and cut telegraph wires, you call it a rising against the British Government?

A. So I take it.

Q. Who do you think organized that rising?

A. I may say those who have not got sense, and those who do not know how to treat their rulers.

Q. Who do you think they were? I want to know who organized this rising against the British Government.

A. I can only say those people who have not got sense.

Q. What class of people, Hindus or Muhammadans, or both together, did it?

A. Both, I think.

Q. Both Hindus and Muhammadans?

A. Yes.

Q. You said that in your view they had planned to rise against the British Government?

A. Yes, I think so.

Q. All these crowds in various places were not armed at all? What I mean is some bad characters may have been armed with lathis and things of that sort, but the crowds were not armed with weapons?

A. They had no arms.

Q. Do you conceive that those who organized what you call a rising against the British Government were so insane as to believe that they could turn out the British Government without arms at all?

A. That is why I said it was a foolish idea of foolish men.

Q. Do not you think that people who organize a rising against the British Government would think out the problem in some manner? They did not imagine that they could turn out the British Government by having a mob and going with lathis and destroying some property?

A. Only those whose heads are turned may think in that way.

Q. I don't understand you. Do you think that the heads of all Hindus and Muhammadans in the Punjab were turned on this occasion?

A. I never said all, but whosoever did it.

Q. Was there a very small number of insane people who thought this way?

A. I think so.

Q. It must be a very small number; because according to you anybody who organized a thing of that sort must be really insane, his head must have been turned; and you don't attribute that to any large section of the population in the Punjab?

A. Large or small, I can't say. But all that I can say is whosoever's head is turned may think like that.

Q. You gave your emphatic opinion that in your view this was a rising against the British Government. Surely you ought to be able to tell me to whom you attribute this; whether to any particular individuals or to a large section of the Punjab population or to whom?

A. I can only say that one who has become mad or insane, may imagine rising against the British Government.

Q. Are there many mad men in the Punjab or few?

A. I have replied to that, I think.

Q. You have not replied to that. Are there many or are there few?

A. A few.

Q. And the bulk of the population in the Punjab has approved of the action of the few mad men?

A. Yes.

Q. After you went to the hut you said the mob came up to the hut. What was the number of the mob that so came?

A. The first batch was a huge mass.

Q. Many hundreds, several hundreds?

A. Yes.

Q. And one or two came in?

A. Some were all round the hut, some were trying to break open the door and windows.

Q. You say that they came there with the intention of molesting the Europeans?

5 December 1919.]

M. KHAIR-UD-DIN.

A. That is what I saw.

Q. You also say that the intention of the crowd was to kill the Europeans?

A. Yes, I saw the injured.

Q. If they came with that determined intention, how do you account for your being able to persuade them to go away without carrying out their intention?

A. Nobody can kill a man if his life is not to be shortened.

Q. Because it was so ordained that the Sherbourns were to live therefore somehow the crowd suddenly changed its mind. Is that what you suggest?

A. They tried, but of course on the persuasion of Chuni Lal they did not do anything.

Q. I want to know if the crowd was an organised crowd who had come with the determined intention of killing the family, how did you succeed so easily in persuading them to go away with carrying out their intention?

A. I controlled first the boy who was leading the mob.

Q. But how was Chuni Lal, who was leading the mob for an attack on the Europeans, so easily persuaded by you?

A. I tried to make him understand that these people were my friends.

Q. Had you known him before?

A. Up to this moment I did not know who he was.

Q. You had never seen him?

A. Never.

Q. You had no personal influence over him before?

A. He might have seen me, but I had no personal influence over him.

Q. I want to know how were you able to persuade Chuni Lal who was leading the mob which had come with the determined intention of harming the Europeans to give up that intention and go away?

A. I had some talk with him. I told him that this was no good, I gave him a small lecture and advised him that he should not do so and so on, and he accepted it at once. After that he pleaded on my behalf and assisted me.

Q. Similarly with regard to Kamal Din, he was also a person who was leading the crowd?

A. No; he was not leading the crowd. Of course you may understand that Mr. Sherbourn told me that when I went out the boy did some thing. I will not say that he beat him or did any such thing, but abused him. In my presence he did not do that.

Q. Was Kamal Din also one of the leaders of the mob?

A. I did not take him as a leader. Immediately he came, whatever intention he had, I told him to assist me.

Q. As soon as Kamal Din came to the hut you were able to persuade him to assist you in saving the Sherbourns and he acceded to your request?

A. Yes.

Q. How do you account for the fact that Kamal Din so suddenly changed his intention?

A. I do not know Kamal Din's intention. I came to know of it when I went out and came inside and Mr. Sherbourn told me that I should not go out, because this boy disturbed them in my absence. Whenever I used to go out, he disturbed Mr. and Mrs. Sherbourn in my absence.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. Was Kamal Din in the mob or did he come from somewhere else?

A. He came from the village side, as I explained.

Q. He was not in the mob?

A. No, he was not. When he came from the village, he went towards the mob.

Q. All along he was not in the mob that was surrounding you when you came out of that hut?

A. No; he came from the village side.

Q. You were examined as a witness in this riot case, were you not?

A. Yes.

Q. I will read out to you one of the passages. "One Chuni Lal and another Kamal Din came into the hut at different times but from the mob." Is that statement correct?

A. Please read my full statement. I explained just now that he came from the village and went towards the mob and from there he returned to my hut.

Q. I am reading from your statement as a witness.

A. I must have answered the question in that way there.

Q. You say one Chuni Lal and other Kamal Din came to the hut from the mob. Is that statement correct?

A. Yes; whatever is given there is correct.

Q. These two things are not consistent. I want an explanation. Here you say that he came from a different direction; he was not in the mob. And there you explicitly said that he came from the mob.

A. I have explained that.

Q. I do not say that you are not giving the truth. This is contrary to what you have said there.

A. Please hear me. He came from the opposite village and he went towards the mob. That is what I have explained. Then from that mob he returned towards the hut.

Q. Is it not true that the boy Chuni Lal addressed these remarks to Mrs. Sherbourn? Although he abused Mr. Sherbourn, he did address these remarks to Mrs. Sherbourn; "You are my mother and your children are my brothers."

A. I have said further, and have given full account.

Q. I only want this. I do not want your full account.

A. So far he said that. I remember.

Q. Although he abused Mr. Sherbourn, to Mrs. Sherbourn he said "You are my mother and your children are my brothers."

A. Yes; he also said 'Damn Sherbourn and Damn the English Government.' He also said that.

Q. My point is this. Although he abused Mr. Sherbourn, to Mrs. Sherbourn he said "You are my mother and your children are my brothers."

A. Yes.

Q. After some time, Ghulam Mohi-ud-Din came?

A. Yes.

Q. And you heard him addressing the crowd as "Suar log hat jao?"

A. We both went out.

Q. Yourself and Ghulam Mohi-ud-din went out?

A. Yes, outside near the hut.

Q. You thought, according to you, that this was a rebellious mob intent upon turning out the British Government from India and you were so bold as to go out of this hut and address the mob as "Suar log hat jao."

A. Yes.

Q. Is that consistent with your idea that this mob was a rebellious mob which was bent upon turning out the British Government and you thought that that was the proper way to address them?

A. It is like this. The first mob was unmanageable. Then they came out in batches. The mob which we, Ghulam Mohi-ud-Din and I, had to deal with was a small mob. There were a few people. It did not consist of so many. Properly speaking, I would withstand a few of them myself.

Q. How many were there in that mob?

A. That was the last batch I should say.

Q. What was the number of the last batch?

A. Say about 10.

Q. And you could withstand this mob of 10?

A. Of course, if they did nothing.

Q. You had nobody with you and you had no firearms?

A. No.

Q. You thought you would be able to withstand these 10 men.

A. That was the last batch. They were about 10, I do not know the exact number.

Q. How far away were the others from these 10 persons?

A. The others had gone away. I explained it to you. Please remember. They came in batches. The first was a very big batch, it was a very huge mass. Of course with the help of Chuni Lal I could disperse them. Then another batch came. Then again there came another batch. We had about 3 or 4 batches. It was a small batch of a few men.

5 December 1919.]

M. KHAIR-UD-DIN.

Q. In your opinion there was an organised conspiracy behind all these risings?

A. I think so.

Q. And when did you come to know of this? When did this idea cross your mind that there was a sort of organised conspiracy behind all these risings? Was it on that very day or some days previously?

A. When this attack on the Rowlatt Bill began to come, of course each and every soul was talking. Then the passive resistance business started.

Q. That would be in the month of February or March. Is it not so?

A. I cannot give you the exact date.

Q. I do not want the exact date. I want only the month.

A. Sometime before these occurrences.

Q. How many days or how many months before?

A. I cannot give you the exact date.

Q. Give me an approximate time.

A. I say I cannot.

Q. You cannot say whether it was a few weeks or a few months or many months before the occurrences at Kasur? From what time did you begin to think that there was an organised conspiracy to turn out the British Government?

A. At different times we heard different things. Sometime back there was some talk about the Fort being blown up and so on. These things were uttered. Similarly when the Rowlatt Bill question came up, of course there was much talk.

Q. There may be much talk. I want to know when for the first time it struck you that there was an organised conspiracy behind all these movements?

Q. At what time did that idea cross your mind?

A. I cannot say. But I think the Government fully knows it; they can give you the exact time.

Q. Your reply is "I cannot," and the Government knows it and they can supply me with that information?

A. Yes.

Q. Up to what time did you think that your province was absolutely loyal? I am talking of the Punjab. When did you begin to suspect the loyalty of some of the inhabitants of the province?

A. During this war we have done nicely.

Q. I do not say that you have not done nicely. I want to know from what time you began to suspect the loyalty of some of the inhabitants of the province of the Punjab.

A. From what time I cannot say.

Q. May I take it that this idea that there was a conspiracy behind this movement came to your mind when you were preparing this statement? Give me some idea. I do not want the exact date, or anything of that sort. I want some idea of time when for the first time it struck you that there was something wrong with some of the inhabitants of the Punjab and they were becoming or were being persuaded to become disloyal?

A. I have never said disloyal anywhere.

Q. Don't you think that those who intended to turn out the British Government from the province of the Punjab were disloyal?

A. Wicked persons will do wicked things any time they like.

Q. Till the time you saw these acts, I think the idea never crossed your mind. That is, till the time you saw these things done by some of the persons or by some of the crowds, this idea never struck you that there was any disloyalty among the people?

A. Of course it was putting Government into trouble.

Q. Would not putting Government into trouble be disloyalty to the Crown?

A. I do not quite follow you.

Q. Do you make any distinction between putting Government to trouble and disloyalty?

A. That is my answer.

Q. I want to know whether you make any distinction between disloyalty and putting Government to trouble?

A. I say they were putting Government to trouble. That is all.

Q. That is disloyalty?

A. Yes.

Q. Therefore I want to know when for the first time you thought that some of the people of the province of the Punjab were becoming disloyal? When did the idea first cross your mind?

A. I can see it even now.

Q. Do you think that is the answer to my question, when for the first time this idea crossed your mind that the people of the Punjab were becoming disloyal or were being persuaded to become disloyal?

A. First as I remember it was sometime when Europeans were stoned in Lahore.

Q. Was it three years ago?

A. I cannot give you the exact time.

Q. Some years ago?

A. Yes.

Q. At that time you thought that some of the people of the Punjab were becoming disloyal?

A. Sometimes they were pacified and at other times they were not.

Q. The whole thing commenced some three years ago?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did this stoning of the Europeans happen?

A. It was in Lahore.

Q. What was the occurrence?

A. Some European officer was stoned and of course the Muhammadans did not like this action. I remember. At least I read about it some time ago.

Q. Some years ago a certain British officer was stoned in Lahore?

A. Yes.

Q. By whom?

A. By some Indian, I think.

Q. One or two or only one?

A. I do not remember the number, but I read about it some time ago.

Q. Was it a riot? Did a crowd or one individual assault that British officer?

A. I do not remember.

Q. And then the Muhammadans did not like it?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you mean by saying that the Muhammadans did not like it? I do not quite understand that. Will you kindly explain it?

A. You can refer to the records. I do not remember fully.

Q. It is not my business to refer to the records. You have come here to give evidence perfectly. You have made that statement voluntarily that several years ago a European Government official was assaulted. I want to know whether you know any facts about that affair or not. It appears to me that either you have forgotten it or you do not want to speak out.

A. I remember that; I cannot give you the exact date and time.

Q. I am not asking you the exact date and time. My simple question is what you mean by saying that the Muhammadans did not like it. Was it an attack by one or more persons and the Muhammadans did not like it? I want an explanation.

A. They did not like that the Europeans should be troubled.

Q. The Muhammadans did not like the Europeans being put to trouble. Were there any meetings or do you refer to any newspaper articles or any resolutions passed? What do you mean?

A. I read in the papers: of course, some resolutions were also passed.

Q. You read in the papers to the effect that some resolutions were passed by the Muhammadans saying that it was a bad thing and they did not like it?

A. Yes.

Q. Very well, what happened next?

A. I do not know.

Q. You mentioned in your reply to the President something about the Hindus. You said that the

5 December 1919.]

M. KHAIK-UD-DIN.

Muhammadans did not like it. This was the beginning of the threat?

A. The Muhammadans did not like it.

Q. That was the beginning of the threat of disloyalty and that is the reason for what you saw at Kasur. Do you know what happened within this period?

A. No.

Q. After that there was nothing else?

A. This is the end of the threat.

Q. After that, this is the end of the threat. I do not say what you state is not exactly what you believe. You have stated before this Committee that you thought this rising was a rebellious rising with the intention of turning out the British Government, and in reply to the President, you considered it a long threat. Therefore it is long threat upon which you have based your opinion?

A. It has come to this length.

Q. The beginning of the threat was that some European was assaulted by one or more persons at Lahore; then in the papers you saw certain resolutions passed by the Muhammadans that they did not like it; after that there was nothing else and this is the end of the threat?

A. There were some troubles from emigrants.

Q. You refer to a time three years ago?

A. I do not remember now.

Q. I take it that your opinion that there was a conspiracy to turn out the British Government from India is based first upon that long threat because one European was assaulted by one or more persons at Lahore, and you read in certain newspapers that the Muhammadans had passed a resolution saying that it was a very bad thing, then the second thing that you told this Committee was that there was some trouble by emigrants and the third is what you saw at Kasur?

A. Yes.

Q. And upon this fact you have based your opinion that there was a conspiracy to turn out the British Government. Is that not so?

A. Yes.

Q. There were two other officers in the train?

A. Yes.

Q. And they did not help you or Mr. Sherbourn?

A. They could hardly save themselves.

Q. There were two other warrant officers who had firearms. They did not come out of their compartment and help you?

A. I did not see any such officer. I saw the two officers, they had no revolver with them.

Q. There were two other officers who had firearms?

A. I did not see those officers with firearms.

Q. They never came out of the compartment?

A. I never saw any other officer with the exception of those I have described.

Q. You were not aware that any other Europeans were in that first class compartment? When you came out of your carriage, you did not see any other European officers except those whom you have mentioned in your statement?

A. I did not see anybody else.

Q. Neither did you see them before reaching Kasur?

A. No.

Q. How many minutes were you inside the hut before Kamal Din came?

A. I was there from the beginning to the end.

Q. How many minutes after you reached there did Kamal Din come there?

A. He came after some time.

Q. Was it a long time afterwards or was it after a few minutes? Some time may mean anything.

A. I cannot say the exact time.

Q. You cannot say whether it was 15 minutes or two hours?

A. I never noted down this.

Q. There is no question of noting down. I do not want the exact second and minute. Give me some idea.

A. It was after some time. That is what I can give you.

Q. Some time may mean one hour or 10 minutes or 5 minutes.

A. Say about an hour or so.

Q. According to your estimate of time Kamal Din came after one hour?

A. One hour or so.

Q. According to you as soon as you used to go out of the hut, these two boys used to molest the Sherbourns. Therefore you were requested not to leave hut, because, these boys, Chuni Lal and Kamal Din in your absence were molesting Mrs. Sherbourn and her children?

A. So Mr. Sherbourn told me.

Q. I do not understand this. Notwithstanding that you had a persuasive tongue and you persuaded these two leaders of that rabble mob not to molest the lady and not to molest children, how is it as soon as you went out of the hut, they again commenced molesting? I do not understand that.

A. I cannot answer why they were doing that in my absence.

Q. And you think that a crowd which had leaders like Chuni Lal and Kamal Din, who could be persuaded by you or dissuaded by you from having their own will without any firearms was bent upon turning out the British Government?

A. It was not this mob that I referred to.

Q. You do not mean that that particular mob of which Kamal Din and Chuni Lal were leaders had any idea of turning out the British Government. If you make that clear, I am satisfied.

A. Yes.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. Some questions were asked by one or two members. I want to make that clear. You said that there was an organized rebellion to turn out the British Government. Is that so?

A. I never said organized rebellion.

Q. There was some organization behind these disturbances, the object of which was to turn out the British Government. Is that what you said?

A. So it appeared to me.

Q. Was it confined only to the Punjab or was it in your opinion throughout India?

A. I cannot say much about this.

Q. You do not know much about the rest of India. You can say about the Punjab better? Your knowledge of the Punjab is better than the rest of India?

A. Yes. It was seen everywhere in India.

Q. It was seen everywhere. I take it that you are well acquainted as to what is taking place all over India?

A. No. I meant about passive resistance.

Q. I just want to get at the source of your knowledge. Why do you say that it was all over India? Are you personally acquainted with it, or is that your inference by reading newspapers?

A. That is what I saw on the day of the disturbance, and that is what we heard for some time about passive resistance and so on.

Q. Because you have heard about passive resistance, and you saw what happened at Kasur on the 12th April, you conclude that there was this rebellious movement all over India. Is that so?

A. Illiterate people take a wrong meaning of what the learned people have to say. Of course it is sufficient for them to think they should take these lines.

Q. You do not answer my point. My question is whether from reading about passive resistance in the newspapers and from what you saw on the 12th April at Kasur, you conclude that there was this kind of movement to turn out the British Government.

A. That is what I saw at Kasur and that was quite clear to me.

Q. Did you conclude that from what you saw at Kasur? From that it was clear to you that the movement was with the object of turning the British Government?

A. Of course I saw some injured and some being killed.

5 December 1919.]

M. KHAI-UD-DIN—concluded—Mr. V. O. RAYNOR.

Q. Is that what you saw in Kasur?
 A. And heard about Amritsar?
 Q. Upon what you saw at Kasur you have based the statement that the object was to turn out the British Government?
 A. To trouble the Europeans.
 Q. Not to turn out the British Government, but to trouble the Europeans?
 A. Yes.
 Q. From what you heard about the happenings at Amritsar and from what you saw at Kasur, you conclude that the object was to trouble the Europeans and not to turn out the British Government?
 A. I say that the object was to trouble the Europeans.
 Q. And not to turn out the British Government?
 A. I replied to both questions, that it was to trouble the Europeans.
 Q. You did say "they wanted to turn out the Government?"
 A. To trouble the Europeans; it means they wanted to turn the Europeans out.
 Q. By troubling the Europeans, you mean to say that they wanted to turn the Europeans out?
 A. Yes.
 Q. You said there were some mad men who organised this movement in the Punjab.
 A. Whose head had been turned.
 Q. Do you know any of these organisations, any one of them? Where were the headquarters of the organisations of these men whose object was to turn out the British Government?
 A. I don't know.
 Q. Are you acquainted with any branch of it anywhere?
 A. No.
 Q. Did you have any conversation with any of them?
 A. No; from what I saw, I say that these were mad men.
 Q. What you saw at Kasur?
 A. What I saw and what I heard.

Q. What you have given out to this Committee is what you saw at Kasur and heard at Amritsar?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Nothing beyond that?
 A. Nothing.
 Q. Can you tell us why these people wanted to trouble and turn out the Europeans, and what was the cause of it?
 A. Anybody who wishes to disobey his master can do anything he likes.
 Q. I do not quite understand you. My question is why these men wanted to turn the Europeans out: what was the cause of it? You may say you do not know. Can you assign any cause?
 A. Whatever they wanted to do should be done; their wishes should be carried out.
 Q. What were their wishes?
 A. They knew how to do these things.
 Q. You have no idea as to what their wishes were?
 A. They wanted the Rowlatt Bill to be cancelled.
 Q. And the Rowlatt Bill could not be cancelled until the Europeans were turned out? Is that what you mean?
 A. Not only that; there may be many other things. Evidently they thought so.
 Q. You know their thoughts? Have they spoken to you?
 A. Perhaps.
 Q. Did you have any conversation with any one of them?
 A. No.
 Q. So you have read their thoughts, they have been telling all these things.
 A. These were the things that were going on. So I understand from the disturbances that took place.
 Q. And what you say is based on this disturbance and from this you have built up all this story in your imagination?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Nothing more than that?
 A. Yes.

Mr. V. O. RAYNOR, District Traffic Superintendent, North Western Railway, Ferozepore.

Q. Mr. Raynor, you are the District Traffic Superintendent, North Western Railway, Ferozepore?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. Were you in the train on the 12th April?
 A. No, Sir.
 Q. You know that on the occasion of these occurrences, the Railway staff at Kasur seemed to have been indifferent?
 A. They were most inactive.
 Q. Would you explain how you account for that?
 A. My information is in my statement. The fact was they took no trouble to wire to Ferozepore and inform of the occurrence before 12 o'clock, before the instruments were destroyed and they had come on to the station platform. At the time the 1st train came, the telegraph instruments were not interfered with.
 Q. Had they time to send a message?
 A. Lots of time. It would only take a few seconds to get to the instrument and send the message.
 Q. Did you investigate as to how far the staff had been associated with the rising actively?
 A. Some of my staff were identified, arrested and, I believe, sent up to Lahore.
 Q. Had you seen some of your staff prior to the occurrence of the 12th?
 A. I got to Ferozepore on the 3rd April; I took over the district only on the 3rd. I did not have an opportunity to see my staff at all. I knew the Station Master on a previous occasion. On the 11th, as I have said at the beginning of my statement, with the Executive Engineer, I motor trolled to Amritsar. It was then that I saw certain of the staff and returned. On our return journey, there was active hartal and the people had come to the station. The staff did not even give me any information about them.
 Q. Did they give you wrong information?

A. They absolutely gave me no information what ever.
 Q. Who is the acting Station Master at Kasur?
 A. It was the permanent Assistant Station Master, Ghuni Lal.
 Q. Is he still acting?
 A. No, Sir. He was one of them that was given a month's pay and notice in terms of his agreement.
 Q. Because his conduct was unsatisfactory? Were you aware, on the 12th, that they were contemplating a strike on the railway?
 A. No, Sir.
 Q. Were you informed that on the 16th Martial Law was to be declared?
 A. I was not at Kasur at the time.
 Q. You got a wire from the Traffic Manager stating that Martial Law was about to be declared on the North Western Railway in the Punjab?
 A. Yes.
 Q. So far as the administration of railways is concerned, is Martial Law a benefit or the reverse?
 A. I had no experience of it except at Kasur, and it was not my job to go into those things—whether it was of benefit or not.
 Q. I suppose you thought it impossible to maintain a regular system of trains after the wires were cut and the rails were being lifted?
 A. Absolutely impossible. Telegraph wires were being cut and trains derailed all over the place.
 Q. Measures to prevent a recurrence of these things would be essential?
 A. I think it would be a very good thing.
 Q. Were you more than once at Kasur from the 12th April onwards?
 A. Yes, Sir.

5 December 1919.]

Mr. V. O. RAYNOR.

Q. And in connection with the riots and the murders that have taken place did you know that efforts were made to get the members of the Railway staff to identify them?

A. As I have said, Lieutenant-Colonel McRae asked the station staff to come and give evidence, but the station staff showed a very sullen attitude towards identifying people. Mr. Marsden approached them as well to volunteer and give evidence. I spoke to the permanent Station-master who had returned by then, and he endeavoured on more than one occasion to get the staff to come forward. He himself did. It was on that occasion that he informed me that the staff were absolutely unwilling. I could make no impression on the staff.

Q. After several efforts were made, you were successful in getting some of the staff to give evidence?

Q. A few of the staff.

A. What methods did you adopt?

A. I just spoke to them about it.

Q. You did use no threat or violence?

A. None whatever.

Q. In talking to them, did you form an opinion as to what was causing reluctance in their minds?

A. The opinion afterwards that I formed was, to start with, the people that did come forward and give evidence were some of the junior men. These had been coerced by their seniors or outside influence had been brought to bear on them.

Q. During the period of the disturbances, were you constantly getting reports as to cutting of wires?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. At what different points?

A. Frequently on the Amritsar-Kasur section and in the Hoshiarpur and Jullundur Districts.

Q. Did you endeavour to trace them?

A. The police made enquiries about these cases; they were in hands of the police.

Q. Did you make any attempts?

A. I was not able to get away from Ferozepore.

Q. As a result of the raids was the train service interfered with?

A. A great deal.

Q. How long was it before the train service resumed its normal course?

A. On the Amritsar-Kasur section I think the trains started running on the 1st May; there was only one train each way put on.

Q. Was it possible to run more trains?

A. No, Sir.

Q. Did the curtailment of traffic necessitate restrictions?

A. The main lines could not carry the traffic.

Q. During the period I see you say in your statement that certain rumours were circulated freely among the rural population. The rumours you refer to are:—(1) The Lieutenant-Governor had been murdered and Government House reduced to ashes; (2) the Fort had fallen and is in the hands of the mob, and (3) that the Golden Temple had been bombarded by our troops. How did you find out these rumours?

A. Everyone talked about them. One of my assistants, Sardar Teja Singh, was continually sending a man to repair telegraph wires, and he gave this information on more than one occasion, and I asked him to see if these rumours, especially about the Golden Temple, were true.

Q. As regards your staff, did these rumours have an unsettling effect on them?

A. At Ferozepore, I had a large staff of Sikhs, especially in the running staff.

Q. You found that they did unsettle them?

A. Very much.

Q. Did you try to trace these rumours to their sources?

A. No.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. Is it a fact that there was going to be a strike at Ambala during those very days?

A. I do not think there was a strike; there was no strike in Ferozepore District. The strikes that I heard of were at Jaisal and Bahawalpur.

Q. And you have not yet been informed as to whether or not a strike was there? How many clerks of the station staff are there at Kasur?

A. I cannot tell you off-hand.

Q. Half a dozen or more than a dozen?

A. The senior Indian staff there must be about 30.

Q. Whom did you include in the senior staff?

A. Station-masters, Assistant Station-masters, signallers, booking clerks and goods clerks.

Q. How many Station-masters?

A. One.

Q. How many assistants?

A. Three.

Q. Signallers.

A. 4 or 5.

Q. Was any one of them on leave on the 11th or 12th?

A. Yes; the Station-master was on leave.

Q. Was he not at the station?

A. No.

Q. Now, so far as the Station-master is concerned, he was a witness in the conspiracy case?

A. I do not know; I believe he was.

Q. Assistant Station-master Kehr Singh? He was a witness?

A. Yes.

Q. Then all the ticket collectors were witnesses against rioters in the case?

A. I cannot say.

Q. I will give you the names—

Hardeo Das, Amar Nath, Miran Bakhsh, Kohar Singh, Tulsi Das, Shiv Sewak Singh, Lachman Das, Nand Lal, Muhammad Shafi, Nathu Ram, Ghulam Muhammad, Nirotam Das and others. Therefore even after hearing the names of these witnesses you are prepared to say the Railway staff were not prepared to give evidence?

A. To start with, they were not prepared to give evidence. When I approached them, they were most reluctant, and it was only after my having spoken to them and advised them that there was no harm in coming forward and giving evidence, that they came forward.

Q. You advised them there was no harm in coming forward? Therefore the underlying idea of the reluctance was they believed that harm would come to them?

A. I know Indians fairly well, and I know what reluctance is based on. The reluctance was due to the fact that the other people, merchants and others, with whom they have to deal would look on them as scamps.

Q. They thought that if they appeared as witnesses, they would be inconvenienced by the merchants and others with whom they had dealings.

A. Yes; except that, nothing else.

Q. Now, that is your opinion?

A. It is my opinion.

Q. I want to know on what was that opinion based?

A. An opinion any one of us can form.

Q. Any more reasons for their being reluctant to give evidence?

A. This is another reason; they did not want to give themselves away.

Q. The reason why they did not in the first instance come forward to give information was they thought that they were in it. Therefore if they are in the wrong you would not expect them to come forward?

A. You cannot draw that inference.

Q. If I am in the wrong, I won't come before you and make a clean breast of it?

A. Certainly.

Q. From the very fact that in the first stages of investigation, they did not come forward, they were reluctant, and at another stage of the investigation, the whole lot of them have been examined as witnesses and have come forward, will it be unnatural to draw the inference that some sort of pressure was brought to bear upon them, either by the Railway authorities or by somebody else?

Mr. V. O. RATNOR.

A. No; I know my staff fairly well. I know the Station-master; I thought him a very good man. I thought that if any undue pressure was brought to bear on them he would have brought it to my notice.

Q. Is it not a fact that this reluctance disappeared after one of the clerks was lashed?

A. No; they came forward before that.

Q. At what time were you in Kasur Station?

A. I cannot tell you exactly; I can tell you from my diary. It was either before or after the train that was mobbed on the 2nd day. I think it was before.

Q. At what time?

A. 10 o'clock I think.

Q. At what time did you return on the 11th?

A. About 5-30 or 6.

Q. We have been informed as a matter of fact that this meeting of which you make mention in your statement was being held at 5-30?

A. I could not say exactly.

Q. I give you that information; you may take it from me. We have been informed that a meeting was actually held at 5-30.

A. There was a hartal.

Q. That meeting was held at 5-30. We have been also informed that there was no hartal at 10 o'clock. Therefore when you were going to Amritsar, did your staff inform you that there was no trouble, and they were perfectly quiet?

A. Yes.

Q. After 5-30 your staff remained in the railway premises?

A. Just next door; actually on the borders of the station.

Q. And from what time to what time have they to be present there?

A. Not the whole lot. They are changed.

Q. May I know the names of the persons?

A. In the afternoon, Chuni Lal and Nandi Lal, Signaller in charge and 2 others.

Q. From what time to what time was it their duty to stay in the station? Nand Lal?

A. Nand Lal's duty hours end at that time. Chuni Lal was at the station the whole day. He was the Station-master, but was not required to be there the whole day.

Q. When you formed your opinion, had you any information that this man, Chuni Lal, and Nand Lal, who were your informers, had any occasion to go to the city?

A. No, certainly not.

Q. And if I mistake not the crowd which was supposed to have come to the Railway Station, it was some time after the meeting was stopped?

A. That may be so.

Q. And therefore I do not think that is a very strong ground, it will be at the most suspicious, that your informers did not inform you that there was any trouble in the city?

A. Merchants were coming and going because it was a public place. The people were continually coming and going. It was only reasonable to imagine that they would surely have informed the staff and given information to the Station-master.

Q. Merchants were coming and going?

A. They were the whole day there.

Q. In case there was a hartal these merchants won't come?

A. There was hartal.

Q. Then they would not come for business?

A. That was before 2 o'clock. Up to that time the merchants were there. I am positive that hartal was declared to commence at 2 P.M.

Q. You mean that up to 2 o'clock they would come, and there they would give this information?

A. Yes.

Q. You have given evidence before us that up to 2 o'clock there was no hartal. It was all of a sudden at 2. What are your reasons? It was a sudden hartal on receipt of the news of Mr. Gandhi?

A. It is only reasonable to accept that. The staff was there. If they went into Kasur, they were right in the middle of it. I don't know that they were right in the middle of it, but they are not very far away. In fact the Station vendors are all residents of Kasur. They have no place provided for them at the station. They could let them know. They kept the hartal as well.

Q. The story is this that somewhere about 2 or 2-30 the idea of hartal was started and some of the shops were closed. A few bands of young men went round to ask the people to close their shops. In the meantime they wanted to have a speech and they approached certain pleaders, and these pleaders consented, and then a meeting was held at about 5-30. There was nothing wrong at that time. After the meeting was dispersed a violent speech was delivered by somebody who got the people to close their shops throughout the city. The hartal was spontaneous, news having reached of what had happened at Amritsar and of Mr. Gandhi's arrest; and it was not universal; a few shops were closed. Therefore I again ask you whether you are not prepared to modify your opinion that when you went to Amritsar and came back from there it was quite possible that these two men, Chuni Lal and Nand Lal, might not have heard about it?

A. I don't think that those two men must have heard about it, but the other staff was there, and they must have heard about it. Some of the staff live in the city.

Q. Is it your opinion that the police were concerned in it or connived at it?

A. That is not a question for me to answer.

Q. You went there and investigated the matter?

A. I did not investigate. That is purely a police case.

Q. It was Railway Police?

A. It does not come under my jurisdiction.

Q. Then in your investigations on the subsequent days you never troubled yourself with what these Railway Police were talking at the time?

A. It was not my job.

By Mr. Herbert, Government Advocate—

Q. Do you suggest that the trains were stopped at the distant signals?

A. That is incorrect. They stopped at the facing points. The station has not interlocking facing points. When the train was detained outside the signals the signals could not be pulled as they were damaged and cut. All the three trains remained hanging outside the signals.

By Sir C. H. Setalvad—

Q. The trains cannot come into the station unless the signals are lowered. The signals were against the train?

A. Yes.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. Somebody had deliberately cut the wire?

A. Yes.

By Major-General Sir George Barrow—

Q. The signals are close to the station?

A. They are quite near the station building.

Q. How did they cut them?

A. They were clipped. One or two cuts were given with a pick-axe or something like that.

Q. It might have been done by somebody who understood what they were meant for?

A. They were exposed wires.

Q. The cutting might have been done by somebody who knew about these wires?

A. These wires were just near the Gate-keeper's hut. The Gate was just near the Bridge, and the signals are pulled off from there on the Ferozepore side at the wheel signal.

Q. But were other wires also cut?

A. The telegraph wires were also cut.

Q. This is a ground wire?

A. Yes.

Q. They were only cut in that one place?

A. Yes.

B. KEHAR SINGH.

B. KEHAR SINGH, Assistant Station Master, Kasur.

By the President—

Q. Were you Assistant Station Master at Kasur?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Were you on duty on the 12th of April last?
 A. I was on duty from 1 o'clock in the night to 9 in the morning.
 Q. On your being relieved you had gone to your quarters?
 A. Yes.
 Q. After taking your bath you heard a great noise coming from the Railway Station?
 A. Yes.
 Q. You took a friend with you?
 A. Yes, B. Mastan Chand whose quarters are just near mine.
 Q. You reached the platform at about 10?
 A. Yes.
 Q. What did you find there?
 A. First of all I found a wagon which was standing on the island platform on fire.
 Q. How had that wagon been set on fire?
 A. The rioters had set that wagon on fire.
 Q. What had put the wagon on fire?
 A. It was a wooden wagon.
 Q. Wooden wagons would not easily take fire. Had there been oil in it?
 A. It was burning a little on one side.
 Q. It was not all in flames?
 A. At one corner.
 Q. Had there been anything else in the wagon?
 A. There were four tins of oil, hand lamps, signals and other lamps, baskets and other furniture. Signals were saved from that wagon.
 Q. All these things you found in the wagon?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Where had these things come from?
 A. These were the station stores for the station use.
 Q. They were inside the wagon?
 A. Yes.
 Q. And it was on fire?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Was there anything else on fire?
 A. I saw the lamp-room on fire.
 Q. Did you see any glasses of doors and windows broken?
 A. Yes. I saw the glasses broken outside the station and the lamp-room was altogether on fire.
 Q. Did you find out how this had occurred?
 A. The rioters had destroyed the lamp-room.
 Q. Were many people seen near the station?
 A. About 2,000.
 Q. What were they doing?
 A. They were breaking glass and running towards the Gandasinghwala side.
 Q. Did you see your staff there?
 A. Yes.
 Q. What were they doing?
 A. They were extinguishing the fire in the lamp-room.
 Q. And did your staff make any attempt to prevent the crowd from doing what they were doing?
 A. I came to know that they were shaking hands before the crowd not to do so.
 Q. What do you mean by shaking hands?
 A. Trying to disperse them.
 Q. Your staff was trying to disperse them?
 A. The staff was trying to disperse the mob. They were shaking hands "don't do so," "don't do so."
 Q. They were really pressing the crowd not to do so?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Then you went to the Assistant Station Master's office to get the key of the fire bucket stand?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Did you then go to the Telegraph Office?
 A. Yes.
 Q. What did you find there?
 A. I found that the instruments had been taken from their proper position and wires had been cut.
 Q. How was that done?

A. By some rioters.
 Q. Did you make any effort to wire?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Were you able to do so?
 A. The station wires had been cut. I then made up my mind to go to the Government Telegraph Office and I went out of the station. I was accompanied by B. Gurdas Ram, Pleader, and we went to the Government Telegraph Office and Mastan Chand, Assistant Station Master, and Chuni Lal and Jiwan Mall were returned again to the lamp-room and remained at the station. When I, with B. Gurdas Ram, arrived in the Government office, we found all the instruments out of order. I tested them but heard no beat.
 Q. Had the wire been cut?
 A. Not inside the office.
 Q. Some damage must have been done outside?
 A. Yes, on testing no beat was heard. Then we proceeded to find a tumtum but found none in the bazar. Then I requested a pleader to give us his tonga and we arrived at Ganda Singhwala.

By Sir G. H. Setalvad—

Q. How long were you at Kasur before these events?
 A. I arrived on the 13th November.
 Q. That was the first time you were posted at Kasur?
 A. Before I had been at Kasur for four years and then after a lapse of time I was again posted there.
 Q. But you have known Kasur before?
 A. Yes.
 Q. You knew the station staff well?
 A. Yes. Some were new hands and some were old hands in the staff.
 Q. It has been suggested that the station staff was in league with the rioters in these disturbances? Is there any truth in that suggestion?
 A. No.
 Q. You were the Station Master in charge?
 A. No, I was the Assistant Station Master.
 Q. The permanent Station Master had gone on leave?
 A. Babu Chuni Lal was in charge.
 Q. You were not in charge?
 A. No.
 Q. You were one of the Assistants?
 A. Yes.
 Q. And so far as you know is it true that the station staff was in league with the rioters?
 A. I don't know, Sir.
 Q. I want to know what you mean by saying that you don't know whether they were in it or not. You were on the station on that day; you were there for several months; you were in constant company with the other members of the staff and surely you must be in a position to tell me what you observed on that day. Was any member of the staff in league with the rioters?
 A. I don't know.
 Q. There was no member in league with them?
 A. No.
 Q. How many members of the staff were at the Station when the rioters came?
 A. About 12 or 15 clerks and about 12 or 15 menials.
 Q. And how many members of the police force were there?
 A. About two or three constables.
 Q. Had they arms or not.
 A. They daily remain without arms.
 Q. What did these station staff, i.e., 12 or 15 menials, do to prevent the rioters from destroying the property?
 A. When I reached the platform they were putting the gumlas (flower-pots) in their places and they were extinguishing fire.
 Q. What was the number of the crowd?
 A. About 2,000.
 Q. You think it was not possible for the Station staff to keep them back?
 A. I think it was impossible to turn out the crowd of so many men.

B. KEHAR SINGH.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

- Q. This Gurdas Ram, Pleader, who helped you, is the son of the Station-master?
 A. Yes.
 Q. And you know Chuni Lal?
 A. Assistant Station-master.
 Q. He was arrested?
 A. Yes.
 Q. He was kept under arrest for some days?
 A. For about 15 days.
 Q. There was one Bhagat Ram?
 A. Yes.
 Q. What was he?
 A. Chief Booking Clerk.
 Q. He remained under arrest for some days?
 A. No, Sir.
 Q. He was flogged?
 A. Yes.
 Q. There was another Assistant Station-master named Mastan Chand?
 A. Yes.
 Q. He was also arrested?
 A. Yes.
 Q. He was kept under custody for how many days?
 A. Four men were arrested from the Station.
 Q. This man Mastan Chand had 28 years' service?
 A. Yes.
 Q. He was not present at the Station?
 A. He was present at the Station. I have stated that he accompanied me to the Station. The Station-master, Kirpa Ram, was on leave.
 Q. You were personally aware that Mastan Chand was not among the rioters?
 A. Yes, he came from the quarters with me when I came.
 Q. When you went to the Telegraph office he went with you?
 A. He was again returned with Chuni Lal and Jewan Mal, Assistant Station-masters.
 Q. Can you give me an idea why all these Station Staff were arrested?
 A. Those four men? They were arrested on the evidence of some person called Darogha; he was at Ferozapore and he made an impression upon the authorities that these men were telling the mob "don't kill the Salibs inside the Station, but take them outside the Station and kill there," that is what I heard.
 Q. Were they arrested after this statement or before this statement?
 A. They were arrested on the 27th or the 28th.
 Q. That is what I mean. You refer to the contractor of the 1/4th Queens, an outsider, who came and made that statement; were all these persons arrested before his statement or after his statement?
 A. After his statement.
 Q. This man Bhagat Ram, why was he flogged?
 A. He was attending the meeting.
 Q. Where was he attending the meeting?
 A. At the Railway quarters at Hari Ram's house.
 Q. What was wrong with that?
 A. I was one of the members of that assembly. First of all I was called by Mr. Long, Station-master. After that, through Muhammad Shafi, some other clerks were called.
 Q. Mr. Long called you and some other clerks?
 A. Yes, through Muhammad Shafi.
 Q. They were collected in that room?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Who was Mr. Long?
 A. He was acting Station-master.
 Q. And then the Military were informed. They came and arrested you?
 A. They surrounded us.
 Q. There was no conspiracy meeting or anything of that sort?
 A. No, Sir.
 Q. Now you were all along in service there and after the 12th you were there?
 A. Yes.
 Q. And how many people were made to work at the Railway Station?
 A. At the Kasur Railway Station?
 Q. At the Kasur Railway Station those who were arrested and those who were ordered to be punished were 40 persons every day?
 A. Altogether there were 30 clerks.
 Q. How many members of the outside public were made to work at the Goods Shed during the Martial Law days?
 A. There were some Sadhus.
 Q. How many Sadhus did you see working there?
 A. I did not see any. I only heard that some Sadhus were working.
 Q. You only heard that some were working at the Station and you did not see?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Did you not see anybody?
 A. No. My duties were from 1 to 9 hours.
 Q. Were you present at any of the floggings or were you ordered to be present?
 A. I saw Bhagat Ram being flogged.
 Q. You saw him?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Who asked you to be present there?
 A. Captain Doveton.
 Q. Did the police help you in any way when the crowd came there on the 12th?
 A. I was not at the Station at that time, Sir.
 Q. I do not understand one thing. Is it not a fact that all the trials and all the enquiries by Captain Doveton were held at the Railway platform?
 A. Which enquiries, Sir?
 Q. Kasur Railway Station was the head-quarters of the Military Authorities in those days and persons were tried, convicted or let off, i.e., their cases were heard at the Railway Station. Is it not a fact?
 A. Yes, Sir. At the Railway Station.
 Q. You know some of the people who were ordered to work at the Goods Shed?
 A. No. My duties were at night.
 Q. Does not day duty come by turn?
 A. During that period I was ordered to work altogether at night.
 Q. Do you know one Sharn Das?
 A. There is a train Clerk, Shams-ud-din.
 Q. Do you know anything that occurred to him?
 A. Yes.
 Q. What was that?
 A. He was ordered to read an apology before the Military Authorities regarding a quarrel with the Manager of the Circus Company.
 Q. There was a quarrel between him and the Manager of the Circus Company?
 A. Yes.
 Q. What steps were taken against him?
 A. He was taken before the Captain, and there he apologized.
 Q. What was his crime?
 A. I heard there was a quarrel between Shams-ud-din and the Manager of the Circus Company about a chair. The Company had given free passes, and the holders were told if they liked to see the Circus they must bring their own chairs. Shams-ud-din did not bring his own chair. He returned the pass. I don't know whether the Manager made a complaint to Captain Doveton or somebody at the Station. Shams-ud-din was told to read an apology.
 Q. The apology was read because he was given a free pass by the Manager of this Company and the Manager had said that any one who wished to witness the Circus, should bring his own chair?
 A. Yes.
 Q. This man went there without a chair, but wanted to sit on a chair?
 A. Yes.
 Q. The chair was not given and he returned the pass?
 A. Yes.
 Q. For this reason he was made to read an apology?
 A. I heard that these were the circumstances.
 Q. Did he go a second night to the Circus?

5 December 1919.]

B. KEHAR SINGH—concluded—LALA ANANT RAM.

A. He might have.

Q. Was he allowed to sit? What happened to him?

A. I heard he was returned.

Q. You don't know what happened to him the second day?

A. No.

LALA ANANT RAM, Municipal Commissioner, Kasur.

By the President—

Q. You are a Municipal Commissioner at Kasur I think?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You were in Kasur on the 12th of April?

A. I was inside the tahsil at about 11 o'clock.

Q. Were you inside the tahsil at the time the mob came and made an attempt to burn down the gate of the tahsil?

A. I was there at about 12 or 1 when the mob came and attempted to break open the tahsil.

Q. What was the attitude of the mob?

A. They shouted out "Let us loot the treasury and release the prisoners."

Q. Were the mob under the control or were they a threatening and defiant mob?

A. They threatened to break the tahsil down and afterwards they put fire to the sheds outside and also to the Munsif's Court.

Q. Did the officials make attempts to get the mob to disperse?

A. The Sub-Inspector of Police with his staff and the Munsif with his staff were on the top of the tahsil and they asked the mob to disperse.

Q. Did the mob pay any attention to the request to disperse?

A. They did not pay any attention to it, and they threw brickbats.

Q. In your opinion was it necessary to fire upon the mob in order to disperse them?

A. Had they not been fired at they would have succeeded in looting the Kutcheri (Court-house) and putting fire to it and would have advanced to other parts of Kutcheri and burnt them.

Q. Was there any reason why the mob should have sought to destroy the Kutcheri and these places?

A. They were excited and they came to burn the Kutcheri and other parts.

Q. Was there any reason why they should select these places to burn them?

A. They said that there would be no English Raj.

Q. There would be no English Raj or there is no English Raj?

A. There would be no English Raj.

Q. And was it your view then that they were destroying all trace of English power or English influence?

A. Owing to the firing they were dispersed, and had they not been fired at they would have succeeded in burning this and other parts also.

Q. After they were dispersed and after the 12th, did a feeling of unrest continue in Kasur?

A. When at about 2-30 the troops arrived together with the motor cars, then the people sat quietly.

Q. I am referring to after the 12th, on the 13th and 14th was there a feeling of unrest and a dread lest an outbreak should occur again?

A. There was peace owing to the arrival of the troops.

Q. But for the arrival and presence of the troops would you have been afraid of a similar outburst occurring?

A. People were apprehensive and they could not imagine what might happen during the following night.

Q. What was the effect of the declaration of Martial Law on the 16th?

A. There was quiet and peace.

Q. In your view had the presence of the Military and the declaration of Martial Law any effect in keeping down disturbance?

A. There was peace owing to that.

Q. Do you attribute that peace and quiet to the presence of military and the declaration of Martial Law?

A. Yes, owing to the proclamation of Martial Law and the arrival of the military.

By Sir C. H. Setalvad—

Q. You are a permanent resident of Kasur?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And you have been Municipal Commissioner for many years?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And you are well acquainted with people in Kasur and their activities?

A. I am familiar with them.

Q. Before April 1919 was there any political activity in Kasur?

A. Not to my knowledge; I never heard of it.

Q. As far as you know was there, before that time, any anti-British or anti-Government feeling in Kasur?

A. There was none before this.

Q. As far as you know was there any conspiracy in Kasur against Government before this?

A. There was none previous to that.

Q. Can you tell me why there was this sudden manifestation of feeling against the British Raj?

A. After the 11th April, when they had begun the hartal, then something happened to their brains.

Q. Before the 11th Kasur was, according to you, perfectly loyal?

A. Yes.

Q. There was no political activity of any sort at all?

A. I did not hear of it.

Q. In a day what suddenly turned their heads and made them enemies of the British Raj?

A. God only knows.

Q. You cannot account for it?

A. On the 11th when they heard of the hartal of the 6th at other places and also when they heard that at Amritsar and Bombay their hundis were not honoured then they had the hartal on the 11th.Q. Because they heard of the hartal at other places and as you say their hundis were not honoured at Amritsar and Bombay, they decided on having the hartal on the 11th?

A. Yes.

Q. That is all right; they decided upon having a hartal. What I want to know is why did Kasur, which was according to you, perfectly loyal, suddenly in a day turn disloyal? People may have a hartal, it does not necessarily follow that they are disloyal?

A. On the evening of the 11th there was a meeting outside on the maidan of Ram Lila plain and there were certain speeches made by people in which they said they should run risks.

Q. Were you present at that meeting?

A. No, Sir.

Q. Do you attribute the events of the 12th solely to what happened at the meeting of the 11th?

A. It was heard that there was a meeting the previous evening.

Q. You think that brought about what happened on the 12th?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. This crowd that was shouting that there would be no English Raj, who were these people?

A. The people who constituted the mob outside. I was in the tahsil.

Q. You did not see any of them?

A. I had some trouble with my foot so I could not go upstairs. Had I gone there I would have been able to see them. I saw the people who constituted the mob through the holes of the door.

Q. When you saw them what class of people were they who were shouting this?

A. There were some Chamars, some Jats, some Hindus and some Muhammadans, all mixed up.

Q. Were they the riff-raff and badmashes of the city?

A. All sorts of people were there and I could not make out any of them.

5 December 1919.]

LALA ANANT RAM.

Q. Did they look like respectable people?
 A. There were no respectable men there.
 Q. Were there people from adjoining villages also in the crowd?
 A. Yes.
 Q. And are those villages around Kasur known for crime?
 A. Several people of those villages had committed crimes.
 Q. They are notorious for thefts and dacoities?
 A. For instance the people of Mana.
 Q. Notorious for offences of the nature I have mentioned?
 A. They might have been doing that, I do not know particularly.
 Q. You have lived in Kasur all these years, surely you know what reputation Kasur and its adjoining villages have with regard to these offences? Are they not more numerous in that locality than in other parts of the Province?
 A. I know the village of Mana and its people and I have told you what they have been doing, that they do commit thefts and burglaries.
 Q. So also other villages?
 A. And Khara.
 Q. So there are several villages noted for offences of that character?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. And people from those villages had come to Kasur to take advantage of this occasion for loot?
 A. Several had come.
 Q. You say that the presence of the military restored order?
 A. Certainly.
 Q. That shows that the turbulent element were overawed by the presence of the military?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. Could not the same result have been effected if the military were quartered in the city or near the city and civil authority carried on the administration with the aid of the military if necessary?
 A. Had the military not arrived at that particular hour it was probable that the night would have brought many more troubles.
 Q. So it was the presence of the military that restored peace and order?
 A. Undoubtedly.
 Q. If the military had been kept there for some time in aid of civil power the result would have been the same without the actual declaration of Martial Law?
 A. What authority could possibly be given to them?
 Q. They would not have any direct authority but they would be always available there in aid of civil power to quell any disturbance if it did occur?
 A. Martial Law was at that time essential; it is a different matter whether it should have lasted for more time or for a shorter time.
 Q. Did Martial Law do more in the way of restoring order than the arrangement which I have suggested?
 A. The people who were eye-witnesses can very well say that Martial Law was a necessity.
 Q. What particular action under Martial Law was necessary for maintaining order?
 A. Had the military not arrived they would not have been checked. But for Martial Law the military who had been picquetted there would have had no authority whatsoever.
 Q. In your opinion how long was Martial Law necessary after the 12th?
 A. The secrets of statesmanship are only known to Kings.
 Q. As a leading man in Kasur and conversant with the circumstances of Kasur in your view how long was Martial Law necessary?
 A. Ten or fifteen days would have been sufficient after the 12th of April.
 Q. By that time every thing was perfectly quiet?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. There was no disorder or anything feared after that time?
 A. There was nothing after that.

By the Hon'ble Pundit Jagat Narayan—

Q. At what time did you leave the tahsil?
 A. About two o'clock.
 Q. Where did you go?
 A. I went to the Post Office and asked the Sanitary Inspector to quench the fire.
 Q. At what time did you reach your house?
 A. About 6 o'clock in the evening.
 Q. Had you any occasion to converse with any members of the mob at any time?
 A. I went to the station.
 Q. From about 8 o'clock up to 6 o'clock you remained at the station?
 A. I accompanied the troops to the Government houses.
 Q. From the time that the military arrived at the station you went with the military and remained with the military till 6 o'clock and at 6 o'clock you went to your place?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. Did you send for any respectable shopkeepers of your city or did they come of their own accord to your place?
 A. After that I went to the bazar.
 Q. To different shopkeepers?
 A. In the new bazar there are many shops.
 Q. And you went there?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. The military arrived on the 12th?
 A. Yes; at half-past two.
 Q. There was no proclamation of Martial Law till the morning of the 16th?
 A. No.
 Q. Could the military who arrived on the evening of the 12th maintain peace and order till the morning of the 16th? The question is, if the military were able to maintain peace and order from the evening of the 12th to the morning of the 16th why was Martial Law necessary on the morning of the 16th?
 A. Because Martial Law had been proclaimed in the Lahore District, therefore it was necessary in Kasur.
 Q. My point is this; from the 12th up to the morning of the 16th the military with the help of the civil authorities were able to maintain peace and order, would it not have been able to maintain peace and order after the 16th?
 A. I have already replied. Such secrets are known to Kings.
 Q. In your opinion are there any pleaders in Kasur who are seditious?
 A. I have never heard about that.
 Q. Or any munshis?
 A. No.
 Q. Were the shopkeepers of Kasur seditious people?
 A. There is not a single person in Kasur having those ideas.
 Q. Were any respectable residents of Kasur assaulted during that day?
 A. I have not heard.
 Q. Were any respectable people or honorary magistrates or municipal commissioners abused by the mob?
 A. We were told that one Gopi Das, Honorary Magistrate, was pulled down from his cart.
 Q. Anything else?
 A. And his turban was taken of.
 Q. That was in order that he may observe hartal?
 A. It was on the day of the hartal.
 Q. He was made to come down from his cart so that he may also observe hartal?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. Except that you know nothing else?
 A. No.
 Q. At the time the mob were doing all this damage did the police or other officers who were going and coming out of the crowd persuade them not to commit this damage?
 A. I was inside the tahsil so I am unable to tell you.
 Q. Except what happened in the tahsil were you informed of any assault by the mob on police or civil officers?

5 December 1919.]

LALA ANANT RAM.

- A. Sheikh Rahim Bukhsh, a member of the committee, was in the city thana and he prevented the people from attacking the thana.
- Q. Were any police or civil officers assaulted?
- A. I do not know.
- Q. Except those public buildings was any private property looted?
- A. No, Sir.
- Q. At 2-30 P.M. when you went in the city with the Military was not everything quiet and every person at his own place?
- A. We did not go towards the city. We went to the public buildings, i.e., the Mission House Hospital in the evening and the house of the Superintendent of Police and the Treasury.
- Q. Would you have to pass through the city?
- A. We passed outside the city.
- Q. Did the military on the 12th go inside the city?
- A. I accompanied them outside the city.
- Q. From 2-30 to 6 you were with the military and up to that time . . . ?
- A. We left them outside the city.
- Q. What are your grounds for saying that the city would have been looted in the night time?
- A. There was general talk in the city on the 12th that had the military not arrived there would have been trouble. They apprehended danger.
- Q. Therefore I take it that almost all the persons of Kasur who had any property had no sympathy with what occurred at the station or at the Tahsil?
- A. The Mahajans and others were nervous.
- Q. Therefore they had no sympathy with this mob?
- A. It could not be possible.
- Q. Did the pleaders or the respectable educated classes have any sympathy with this mob?
- A. They did not mix with it.
- Q. Had they any sympathy?
- A. They had no sympathy with those people.
- Q. Do you know anything of the Martial Law Administration? You used to be present at the Railway Station during the course of Martial Law?
- A. I used to be present there.
- Q. Did you know what was happening at the station?
- A. We used to go there at 6 and were allowed to come back at 5 P.M. We had to go to the city to distribute those proclamations.
- Q. Were you in favour of respectable persons being handcuffed and sent away? Did you approve of this procedure without any sufficient proof against these men?
- A. I considered it to be bad.
- Q. Did you know that a large number of persons who did not go to the goods shed were ordered to work at the goods shed?
- A. I was at the Octroi Office.
- Q. Were a number of persons ordered in your presence to do work at the goods shed?
- A. All the members of the committee used to sit in the octroi office from morning till evening waiting for orders.
- Q. Were any orders issued to you? Were you doing any work at all from 6 to 5?
- A. We had to be there all the day and we were given orders if they came in.
- Q. Do you know what sort of cases were tried at the station? You are a member of the committee of that temple and that temple was in possession of certain money—what was the amount of that money?
- A. About Rs. 1,500.
- Q. And on your behalf a suit was filed in respect of this money? You went to Captain Doveton and you considered that this matter was one of litigation and that he should not pass any orders in this matter?
- A. Yes.
- Q. Sharf-ud-din and Saiyid Rahim Bakhsh also made the same representation to Captain Doveton and Captain Doveton passed orders?
- A. He passed orders and he gave over the money.
- Q. Were you present at the station when this happened?
- A. I was present there and I went to him.
- Q. When you were present at the station and when you saw that this matter was going to be decided by him you went to Captain Doveton?
- A. Yes, Sir.
- Q. Were any tenants of your committee ordered to pay rent to Jagan Nath?
- A. They were asked to give the money over to Jagan Nath and accordingly they did.
- Q. Who passed this order?
- A. Captain Doveton.
- Q. What do you mean by an order?
- A. He said that he ordered this.
- Q. When he passed the order were you with him?
- A. I was in the octroi office and the tenants came and said they had paid their rent to Jagan Nath.
- Q. And on hearing this you went to Captain Doveton?
- A. Yes, Sir.
- Q. What did you say to Captain Doveton after hearing from the tenants?
- A. That we have made them pay this man.
- Q. Why did you go to Captain Doveton and inform him of this fact?
- A. Because I was a member of the temple committee.
- Q. You had gone there to inform him that his order has been obeyed?
- A. I went there to say that he ought to be allowed to pay the money.
- Q. The conversation you had with Captain Doveton previous to this, will you repeat it again?
- A. I submitted that Jagan Nath had filed a case in the Court of the District Judge and this would be better decided there, "so kindly don't take this matter in hand."
- Q. What reply did you get from Captain Doveton?
- A. He replied that he would send the matter to the Tahsildar.
- Q. What happened next?
- A. I was satisfied because Saiyid Rahim Bakhsh had also told me to that effect.
- Q. Did it go to the Tahsildar Sahib?
- A. No, Sir.
- Q. Do you know of any other case that was tried in your presence?
- A. Lala Keshav Ram had bought some rice, and he told Captain Doveton that he returned it.
- Q. He was sent for before Captain Doveton for purchasing rice?
- A. Yes, Sir.
- Q. What happened then after he said that he had returned that rice? Nothing happened?
- A. Nothing.
- Q. I am only asking you to tell me what you actually saw and what happened in your presence in every case.
- A. Durga Das Saighal who was a grain dealer in the city was fined Rs. 5 or Rs. 10.
- Q. Why?
- A. He was a tenant of the temple property. He had to pay the rent.
- Q. Pay the rent to whom?
- A. To the man to whom Captain Doveton wanted the money to be paid.
- Q. What is his name?
- A. Pandit Jagat Nath, Pujari.
- Q. Why was this Durga fined?
- A. Pandit Amar Nath Munshi, Reader to Captain Doveton, informed the Captain that he demanded rent from him and that this man hesitated.
- Q. And for this reason he was fined Rs. 10?
- A. Rs. 5 or Rs. 10.
- Q. And he was your tenant?
- A. I was there and also Saiyid Ahmad Shah.
- Q. Was there any other case?
- A. There was no other case. There was an allegation against Mukhan Singh and Nanak Singh that they had impersonated C. I. D. officers and wanted to exact money from the relations of those people who had been arrested.

LALA ANANT RAM.

Q. Are these all rumours, or do you state those from your knowledge?

A. I was present there.

Q. Anything else? I want you to give me only those cases which you know personally and when you were present at the station?

A. I have stated them.

Q. Therefore all the cases that you have stated happened in your presence when you were at the station.

A. When I was present.

Q. And you have spoken from your own personal knowledge?

A. I was present, there.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. What position do you hold in Kasur besides being a Municipal Commissioner?

A. I am a banker, I have got some property and some land. I am also an assessor.

Q. What is the present state of Kasur, is it in a disturbed condition or is it perfectly quiet?

A. It is quiet there now.

Q. How many police would be enough to keep order there, should there be any disturbances?

A. The police is insufficient now, and it should be increased.

Q. It should be increased to how many?

A. I don't know what force there is there now.

Q. Then how can you say that the force is insufficient?

A. Now we have appointed chowkidars and also we have Thikri Pahra in the city. If the number of the police force is increased then we would not be required to appoint these chowkidars.

Q. Would these chowkidars and the police that you now have, in your opinion, be quite sufficient to keep order in Kasur?

A. It is quiet there now.

Q. But should there be any disturbance, how much more police force do you think would be necessary to keep order?

A. I think that after Martial Law there will be no more disturbance. It is all quiet there now.

Q. You mean that after the Martial Law that was proclaimed last April, there is no likelihood of any disturbance taking place? Is that what you mean?

A. I hope there will be none.

Q. It is not a question of hope, but it is a question of what you think.

A. In my opinion there will be none.

Q. So that because you do not think there is any likelihood of any disturbance, there is no necessity for saying anything about the increased police force?

A. None.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. I don't understand about this temple case. I want you to tell me what you saw and heard yourself, but nothing else. Did you usually sit in the octroi office in the railway station?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Where did Captain Doveton usually sit and hear cases or pass orders?

A. In a room of the station.

Q. Not the same room as the octroi office?

A. No, Sir.

Q. Now when you first heard of this temple case, was that from some body coming into the octroi office and telling you that Captain Doveton had passed an order or were you present in the other room with Captain Doveton when that case was brought before him for hearing?

A. This affair took two or three days, and during that time I went to Captain Doveton and told him all about this matter which was then being talked about. Then Lala Radhakishen and both Radha Kishen, Maghi Shankar, Durga Das and another man were called by Captain Doveton.

Q. Were you present with Captain Doveton and did you hear him pass any orders about the payment of Rs. 1,500?

A. I was not there at that time.

Q. Were you present with Captain Doveton and did you hear him pass any orders about the temple matter or temple rents, apart from the Rs. 1,500?

A. I was not present at the time when the orders were passed.

Q. If you are told now that Captain Doveton himself has told us that it is a mistake and that he never in fact passed any such order, are you prepared to say that that is untrue?

A. They were made to pay.

Q. If you are told that Captain Doveton has told this committee that he never in fact passed any such order in the temple matter, are you, who were not present, prepared to say that that is untrue?

A. I can say only about myself that what I say is true. I state the true facts known to me, that those four men came to me and informed me that by the order of Captain Doveton they had paid the money to the gentleman.

Q. (To the Interpreter.) Ask him if he understands the difference between four men coming to him and telling him something and his seeing and hearing something that happened.

A. Those people used to go to Captain Doveton for three days, and they only informed me.

Q. So that your information depends upon what those people told you?

A. After the money was paid to Jagannath he together with four other gentlemen Gokal Chand, Saiyid Aminuddin Sahib, Shaikh Rahim Bakhsh and I went to Captain Doveton and informed him that the money had been paid to that Jagannath by Amarnath, because Amarnath and Jagannath were relations, therefore the money was paid to Amarnath.

Q. When you went to Captain Doveton to tell this story, what did he say about it?

A. He sent for Jagannath.

Q. Did Jagannath come and speak to him in your presence?

A. He came in the presence of 5 men.

Q. What did he say?

A. He was asked if the money was with him and he confessed that the money was with him.

Q. What else took place?

A. Then he went away.

Q. Nothing else took place?

A. As far as I remember, there was nothing.

Q. Now just tell me, did you or did you not hear Captain Doveton say to any of these people that they should pay this money to Jagannath if they liked, but it was entirely their own choice?

A. It was not in my presence that he said those words.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. When you went twice to Captain Doveton, once on a previous occasion and again at another time with regard to Durga Das' affair, you informed him that he shall not decide this matter or he should not pass any orders on this matter? Did he tell you that he had nothing to do with this matter and that he had not passed any such orders?

A. He said that he would send this matter to the Tahsildar.

By the Hon'ble Mr. W. F. Rice—

Q. When he said that he would send the matter to the Tahsildar, did he mean that this was not a Martial Law case but this was a case which should go before the ordinary courts?

A. Exactly.

By Mr. Herbert, Government Advocate—

Q. You have stated that you have been a considerable time in Kasur; can you say whether punitive police force was ever imposed on the town for misbehaviour?

A. It was stationed.

By the President—

Q. When was that?

A. About 15 years ago. In the time of Nizam, the great dacoit, there were punitive police stationed there.

5 December 1919.]

BAWA KHARAK SINGH.

BAWA KHARAK SINGH, Sub-Inspector of Police, Kasur.

By the President—

Q. Bawa Kharak Singh, you are Sub-Inspector at Kasur?

A. Yes, in Sadar, in the suburbs, not in the city.

Q. Were you in Kasur on the 11th April last?

A. I reached Kasur in the evening from Lahore.

Q. On the 12th April where were you at about 11 or 12 o'clock?

A. I was in the police station of the head quarters.

Q. Did you hear then that the rioters had attacked some Europeans at the Kasur Railway Station?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Were you inside the tahsil?

A. I had gone inside the tahsil after closing the gate.

Q. Is the gate a large one?

A. It is a huge gate. I closed it and went upstairs.

Q. And had you got any arms?

A. Yes, Sir, I had rifles.

Q. I see you say in your statement "we piled bricks in four places in order to throw them at the rioters in the event of their attempting to damage the gate." What do you mean by that?

A. If the people had not returned peacefully and the police had any occasion to fire, then I wanted to use these bricks rather than fire arms.

Q. When did the rioters come in front of the tahsil?

A. Between 1 and 2.

Q. Were they shouting anything, and, if so, what?

A. They were shouting saying that the English Raj had come to an end and "Gandhi ki jai, Kitchlew ki jai" and "Satyapal ki jai."

Q. Were there several of you in the tahsil at this time? The Tahsildar was there?

A. He was outside the tahsil.

Q. Did you hear the Tahsildar or any one else trying to persuade the mob to disperse?

A. Sayad Ahmad Shah and the Tahsildar persuaded those people to disperse.

Q. Did the people disperse when they tried to persuade them?

A. No, Sir, they did not go.

Q. What did they do or say?

A. They tried to damage the tahsil gate, and I told them that it would entail serious consequences and they should go back.

Q. What did they say to that, did they say anything?

A. These people replied 'you also come down and join us.'

Q. Why did they want you to join them?

A. They said that they would break open the Treasury and release the prisoners.

Q. Why did they want you, a police officer, to join them?

A. Perhaps they thought that I would also join them being an Indian.

Q. Did they say anything about the British Raj being at an end?

A. They did.

Q. And was that one of the reasons why they asked you to join them?

A. Yes, that was one of the reasons.

Q. You said the crowd would not disperse, what did they do there?

A. They tried to damage the tahsil gate in order to break it open, and one of them had an implement in his hands. They advanced towards the tahsil gate.

Q. Did you do anything to stop it?

A. I threw those brickbats down in order to threaten them.

Q. Did they pay any attention to that?

A. They did not pay any heed to it, rather they also threw some brickbats at me.

Q. Did you fire at all?

A. In order to frighten them and also to inform the other officers, I fired my rifle in the air.

Q. In your opinion was it necessary to use force to prevent them from doing further destruction?

A. Yes.

Q. Why did you not fire at them instead of in the air?

A. So that none of them might lose his life, I fired in the air.

Q. Do you think that firing in the air has the effect of preventing the mob doing damage?

A. It is possible.

Q. Is it not very improbable that you can stop a mob that is bent on damage by firing in the air?

A. Sometimes this is the effect of that.

Q. On this occasion it had not that effect, I think?

A. Yes.

Q. The Deputy Superintendent of Police gave orders to fire on the crowd?

A. Yes.

Q. When they were fired on and some casualties occurred, did they disperse then?

A. They all dispersed.

Q. In this crowd of people, were there people from the outside villages?

A. The mob was composed of those people who deal in dyeing skins and also Jats, Muhammadans and Hindus and sweepers of the villages.

Q. How do you account for these people from the villages adjoining, joining in this riot and bloodshed that took place?

A. The incidents about Amritsar were known to them, about the looting of the banks, and therefore these villagers also joined the mob in order to have their own share of loot and also to be able to release the prisoners.

Q. What had excited them about Amritsar? Was it that the mob there had been successful in getting loot? Is that what you mean?

A. Yes.

Q. I think at about 3 o'clock, European soldiers arrived and guarded the treasury?

A. Yes, they took the treasury into their protection.

Q. I see that you say in your statement that the rioters left their axes, sticks and lathis at the scene of occurrence. Had some of the rioters' axes in their hands?

A. There were lathis, clubs and sticks in their hands, and also one or two crowbars, implements used in felling bricks.

Q. Did you see these crowbars used by the crowd at all on that day?

A. I had seen them working with these implements at the sheds provided for appeal writers.

Q. Did you search some houses that night?

A. No.

Q. Was a house-search made during the day, i.e., the next day?

A. No.

Q. Did you make any arrests that day?

A. We arrested three men that day.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. On the 12th in front of the crowd, the first time you fired in the air, was it with a rifle or with a pistol?

A. At first I fired with my rifle and then the crowd shouted that it was empty and then I fired with my pistol.

Q. The first time you fired with a rifle. When you fired with the rifle, had the mob already set fire to the Munsif's office at that time?

A. They set fire afterwards.

Q. Had they set fire to the petition-writer's shed by that time?

A. After the rifle was fired, they set fire to the petition-writer's shed.

Q. In your statement, you put it the other way round. "They set on fire the Munsif's office by burning thatch grass taken from the petition-writer's shed. Thereupon I loaded my Government rifle with shot cartridges and fired in the air."

A. That is about the second time.

Q. The first time that you fired was with your rifle. Which is correct, did you fire in the air? Was that first time after or before they started burning the petition-writer's shed and the Munsif's office?

5 December 1919.]

BABA KHARAK SINGH—continued—MIRZA SHUJA BEG.

A. First I shot in the air when they were advancing towards the tahsil and then afterwards after they had set fire to the Munsif's court.

Q. After you fired with your rifle, then you thought that would not do, and fired in the air with your pistol?

A. Yes.

Q. And then you say "we also went on firing from the roof." Was that firing with rifles or showering brick-bats?

A. After the arrival of the Deputy Superintendent of Police, we began to fire at them.

Q. And before his arrival?

A. We shot in the air in order to give an alarm to the officers and also to frighten the mob.

Q. And then there was firing in the air twice. Then you say "we were again obliged to fire in the air but this had no effect." That was the third time you fired?

A. It was the third time. They then went to the western side of the thana in order to enter the tahsil.

Q. Then you say, after firing in the air for the third time, "thereupon I fired my pistol in the air." That was the 4th time?

A. Three times I fired with my rifle and three times with my pistol. When they had brought the thatch to the gate of the tahsil, then I fired for the third time.

Q. At any rate, you fired 4 times if not oftener into the air. Was that with the rifle or with pistol?

A. I fired 6 times.

Q. You seem to believe in fireworks, rather? Do you believe in fireworks? Have you not received instructions as a Sub-Inspector at Kasur that the one thing you should never do is to fire in the air or to fire blank cartridges?

A. I shot into the air because there was no senior officer there and I wanted that nobody should lose his life.

Q. Why did you want that nobody should lose his life? Why should not they lose their lives by dozens in those circumstances?

A. There was no responsible officer to give me orders.

Q. Do you distinctly remember hearing "Gandhi, Kitchlew, Satyapal ki Jai" being shouted that morning?

A. When they were advancing towards the tahsil; they were shouting these words.

Q. Do you know who Kitchlew and Satyapal, that they were referring to, were?

A. I knew that Kitchlew and Satyapal were leaders at Amritsar, and Gandhi was the leader of India.

Q. What had the Kasur mob to do with Kitchlew or with Satyapal? Had they ever heard of them before?

A. I am not in charge of the city and therefore I cannot say anything about the city people.

Q. Had you ever heard a Kasur mob before that day shouting about either Kitchlew or Satyapal?

A. I never received such information, because I have no connection with the city.

Q. When you did fire, can you tell me how many rifles fired?

A. More than 50.

Q. More than 50 rifles?

A. About 12 or 13 rifles, 50 rounds.

Q. Did you see other members of the police when they fired?

A. Yes, I saw them.

Q. In your opinion were they really and properly firing at the mob or were they firing over the head of the people?

A. They were aiming and firing at them, because they had been ordered.

By Sir C. H. Setalvad—

Q. This mob that you saw shouting that the British Raj was at an end what people did it consist of? What sort of people were in that mob?

A. I have already said that this mob consisted of sweepers, skin dyers, low-class people, Jats and Hindus.

Q. Were these people of Kasur town or of the villages surrounding Kasur?

A. People belonging to Kasur city and also to the villages.

Q. Were the majority of them Kasur people?

A. Both Kasur and village people.

Q. Where was the larger portion from? From Kasur or which place?

A. Kasur people and village people were about equal in number.

Q. In that mob did you see any respectable person?

A. There was no respectable person there.

Q. Have the villages round Kasur been known for crimes?

A. Yes.

Q. They are always ready to seize an opportunity for looting?

A. They usually do these things; commit thefts and crimes.

By Mr. Herbert, Government Advocate—

Q. In the cases that were sent up from Kasur to the tribunals were those convicted mostly townspeople or villagers?

A. The majority of them were townsmen of Kasur.

MIRZA SHUJA BEG, Honorary Magistrate, Patti.

By the President—

Q. Are you a Magistrate at Patti?

A. Yes.

Q. We have been told that Patti is 28 miles from Kasur?

A. Yes.

Q. What size of place is Patti?

A. The population of Patti is about 8,000.

Q. Were you accustomed in Patti to have any political addresses? Were you taking any interest in politics?

A. Not before the 5th or 6th April.

Q. On the 5th or 6th April what occurred?

A. Durga Das who had arrived from Amritsar and Bal Sarup, a resident of Chimba delivered speeches.

Q. On what sort of subjects?

A. About the hartal and against the Rowlatt legislation.

Q. What effect had these speeches upon the population.

A. The speech of the 5th resulted in the hartal of the 6th.

Q. Was the hartal on the 6th a general one?

A. Yes, Sir. It was a general one.

Q. Did any disturbance take place that day?

A. Apart from people saying something against the Rowlatt Bill, there was no disorder there on the 6th.

Q. Is Patti in close touch with Amritsar?

A. It is situated at a distance of 28 miles and the railway train runs three times a day between these two towns.

Q. Did people hear of what occurred at Amritsar on the 10th April?

A. They came to know of these incidents on the 10th.

Q. What effect had the knowledge of the incidents on the population?

A. Their feelings were disturbed and they thought of having a loot.

Q. Was it the circumstance that crowds had looted property in Amritsar that interested the mob in Patti?

A. This thing had interested them very much.

Q. Did they start any loot of their own in Patti?

A. During the night between the 11th and 12th, they cut the telegraph wires and the night between the 12th and 13th, there was a crowd ready for loot.

Q. What did the crowd do?

A. This crowd came to the Post Office first to set fire to the Post Office.

5 December 1919.]

Mr. MIRZA SHUJA BEG.

Q. Did they set fire to the Post Office?
 A. They were made to flee.
 Q. Did they set fire to any other buildings?
 A. They did not set fire to any other building; they cut wires and broke gateways and smashed the other parts of the building.
 Q. Did you hear anything said by the crowd when they were engaged in this work of destruction?
 A. I heard various people crying that they have turned the Englishmen out of this place and burnt places and buildings.
 Q. Did they make attempts at Government buildings?
 A. There was an attempt; they came to set fire to them.
 Q. How long did the disturbance in Patti last?
 A. Up to the 14th.
 Q. How did it show itself on the 13th?
 A. On the 13th, they gathered together and said that the Lahore Fort had been taken and the Lieutenant-Governor had been killed.
 Q. What effect had it on the party?
 A. An armoured car arrived on the 14th and several badmashes went to loot it; but when they knew that it contained arms and troops, they fled away.
 Q. Did the patrolling army reach Patti on the 16th?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. Did that do good work in restoring peace and order?
 A. People were frightened by their arrival and peace was restored.
 Q. Were a number of people arrested on the 28th April?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. I see you say that you are in possession of facts as regards the treatment by the authorities of the accused. What do you know of the treatment by the authorities?
 A. From the 12th up to 28th, there were no arrests. On the 28th I went to Kasur and informed my Sub-Divisional Officer that there were no arrangements made for Patti as yet. Then he came to Patti himself. The accused people were recognised.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—
 Q. What were you in Kasur?
 A. I am only an Honorary Magistrate.
 Q. You said in Patti there are 8,000 people. Are there any Europeans among them?
 A. There are European firms there.
 Q. But there are no European people?
 A. No, Sir.
 Q. When the attempts were made upon Government buildings on the night of the 12th or 13th, which buildings were they that were attacked?
 A. The post office, railway godown, and the railway lines.
 Q. Were any of them in fact damaged?
 A. The railway godown, the railway lines and the railway ways were smashed.
 Q. The post office was not?
 A. It was rescued.
 Q. Not even the windows?
 A. No.
 Q. At the post office, how big was the crowd?
 A. At first it was about 35; afterwards there were 150 men.
 Q. On the 13th did people go about the road for their work?
 A. No, Sir.
 Q. Were any shops opened?
 A. On the 13th some shops were opened, some were still closed.
 Q. On the 14th, before the arrival of the armoured car, were people going about the roads?
 A. The same state of affairs existed as on the 13th.
 Q. How many policemen are there in Patti?
 A. Some 20 men.
 Q. What did they do on the night of the 12th?
 A. The police did not help except by sending some men who came to disperse the mob on the 12th.
 Q. Was the guard at the railway station in the godown when the lines were cut?

A. Nobody was there before this, but afterwards, 4 or 5 constables with Sub-Inspector arrived.

By Sir C. H. Setalvad—

Q. Were the telegraph wires cut on the 12th or the 11th?
 A. On the night between the 11th and 12th.
 Q. Telegraph wires were cut with the idea that they may loot without any disturbance?
 A. Afterwards when I read the statement made by the accused I came to know that they cut wires so that the troops from Ferozepore may not be able to reach Amritsar.
 Q. Who were the people who cut these wires?
 A. They were apprentices of those shopkeepers.
 Q. Did they compose the crowd that attacked the buildings?
 A. These people and some zamindars.
 Q. What do you mean by zamindars?
 A. Farmers.
 Q. You mean the cultivators?
 A. Farmers.
 Q. Did the riff-raff population of the town join this mob?
 A. All these people were there.
 Q. Did you see this crowd yourself?
 A. I saw this mob with my own eyes, when it was advancing towards the post office to burn it and when I dispersed it with my own rifle.
 Q. You stated that you with your brothers and 25 men dispersed the mob. Were they all armed?
 A. We had seven rifles and others were equipped with lathis.
 Q. What were the police doing at the time when you were dispersing the crowd on the 12th?
 A. The police had not yet arrived.
 Q. Was there not a police station in the town?
 A. They did not reach the place.
 Q. Did you inform the police?
 A. I and the Sub-Inspector of Police were sitting, when a postman of the post office came and informed us that he had been threatened since 12 o'clock in the noon.
 Q. At what time?
 A. 6-30 in the evening.
 Q. How soon afterwards did the crowd come to the post office?
 A. About 8 o'clock.
 Q. About 2 hours after?
 A. About 1½ hours.
 Q. Was the Police Inspector with you when you got this information?
 A. We were together and I asked him to send some policemen for the protection of these people.
 Q. Did he send any police people?
 A. No.
 Q. What did he do?
 A. Afterwards he informed me that he had not got a sufficient number of policemen and therefore he had not despatched any.
 Q. How many people had he?
 A. The total number of policemen is 20, and I do not know how many he had at his disposal at that time.
 Q. Were these 20 people armed or unarmed?
 A. 12 of them have police revolvers and the rest have spears and swords.
 Q. There are 12 rifles?
 A. Yes.
 Q. On the 12th, the police did not turn up at all at any time?
 A. The police did not arrive when the post office and the railway station were attacked, but when the mob reached the godown, then the Inspector with Sub-Inspector and some policemen arrived.
 Q. What time of night was it?
 A. 9 o'clock.
 Q. What did they do, the police?
 A. I was not present at that place.
 Q. You left after dispersing the crowd? You went to the post office?
 A. I met the crowd fleeing from the post office and from the railway station and then I stationed my men at this place in order to protect these places against a recurrence of disturbance.

Q. How far was the police station from the post office or the railway station?

A. About 200 yards.

Q. The police must have seen what was happening?

A. Certainly.

Q. And the police still never turned up at all?

A. After they were dispersed from those places, they gathered in an open space before the police station and even then nobody came to disperse them.

Q. They remained in front of the police station and even then the police did not turn up?

A. No.

Q. What did the crowd do in front of the police station?

A. They were consulting each other, and seeing that one man with his companions was obstructing their way and checking their progress they wanted to divide themselves into parties.

Q. Who was obstructing them?

A. I and my companions were checking their progress.

Q. When all this was happening were the police inside the police station?

A. Some of them were undoubtedly there.

Q. The Police Inspector who was with you when the information was brought at 6 o'clock: was he also at the police station?

A. He was at his house.

Q. How far away?

A. About 100 or 125 yards from the police station.

Q. Now on the night of the 12th nothing further happened?

A. Nothing.

Q. The crowd were not able to do anything with the godown or the police station?

A. Nothing.

Q. Nothing of this kind happened on the 18th. And thereafter what took place?

A. Nothing.

Q. You say there were no Europeans at all in this town?

A. None.

Q. You say that there were business premises of European firms?

A. Yes; there are European firms.

Q. European firms have branch firms there?

A. Under Indian assistants.

Q. Are there several of them?

A. Five.

Q. This mob never attacked any of those European firms?

A. They could have reached those firms after they had reached the post office but they were dispersed.

Q. From the post office, they could have gone there had they not been dispersed at the post office.

A. Yes.

Q. They could not have gone to those firms before they reached the post office?

A. That is the only way, by the post office. The post office is situated outside the market; these firms are situated inside the market.

Q. After they were dispersed at the post office, they went to the railway station and godown?

A. When they were dispersed, some of them proceeded towards the station and some took the other way which led them to the railway godown.

Q. That is, they went to the railway station, then to the godown, and could have gone and attacked the European firms if they were so minded?

A. They were frightened and I was pursuing them. They were flying before me and they could not do that.

Q. You say they were shouting they had turned Europeans out.

A. They were shouting. "We have turned the Europeans out and burnt their buildings."

Q. Who said this?

A. All the hooligans that were there.

Q. What did they mean by saying that they turned the Europeans out?

A. Just as I have stated in my statement, they meant that the Lahore Fort had been taken and the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab had been killed.

Q. Did they say that at the time?

A. This rumour was current. Because of this rumour they were saying these things.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. Did you make any preparations to guard the post office before 8 o'clock?

A. Yes.

Q. That is after you received the information, you made arrangements to guard the post office?

A. Yes.

Q. And when the mob arrived before the post office, you and your men were already there?

A. No, Sir. I was at my place.

Q. How far is your place from the post office?

A. About 50 yards.

Q. Where are these firms situated?

A. These firms are situated inside the enclosure called Dany's market.

Q. Now these persons who composed this crowd, were some of them residents of the city or were they all outsiders?

A. All belonged to the town, with one or two exceptions.

Q. Therefore they could have gone to any other place and could have avoided the post office if they had chosen to do so?

A. They threatened the post office and the station.

Q. Therefore you know from the information available to you that their real intention was to loot the post office and then go to the station and loot it?

A. Yes.

Q. You were not informed that their intention was to go and loot shops inside the city?

A. It was afterwards that I came to know that they had that idea.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. What do you do at Patti? Are you a landlord?

A. I am a land-owner, and I have also some property there.

Q. You have stated that Durga Das, a lecturer of Amritsar, and Swami Bal Sarup of Chimba, District Lahore, came to Patti on the 4th and 5th April and delivered lectures which had a pernicious effect on the minds of the people. Were you present when they came and delivered lectures?

A. I was not present at those lectures.

Q. Then how did you know it had a pernicious effect on the minds of the people?

A. I had consulted the police about the measures to be taken in order to stop these lectures, but the police told me that there was no harm in these lectures. So they allowed them to have these lectures.

Q. Was any of the police present at those lectures?

A. The Sub-Inspector and the Inspector, both of them, were present and they told me.

Q. Did they report to you as to what was the subject matter of the lectures?

A. They told me that the trend of the lectures was against the Rowlatt Act and in sympathy with the hartal.

Q. And those lectures, you think, had the effect of causing hartal on the 6th of April?

A. Yes, Sir. It was due to them.

Q. There was nothing said or there was no talk about anything else in Patti before that?

A. There was never a talk before these lectures in Patti.

Q. Were the people of Patti seditious or in any way inclined to anything disloyal or were they loyal to Government?

A. The main population of Patti belonged to the Mughals. They are very loyal and they are mostly employed in His Majesty's forces.

Q. Have they also remained loyal in these disturbances?

A. Yes.

Q. There were no respectable persons who caused these disturbances?

5 December 1919.]

Mr. MIRZA SHUJA BEG.

[Concluded.]

A. Amongst the people who were arrested there were no respectable persons.

Q. But you saw those people who caused these disturbances; you went after them and dispersed them. Did you see any respectable person amongst them?

A. I saw the people who had been threatening the Post Office people since 12 o'clock. I had heard they were respectable. I saw three about whom I had heard that they were respectable. Three of them were present but when I saw them they were not respectable persons in my opinion.

Q. Who were those persons?

A. They were Mulakhrāj, Kidar Nath and Lal Chand.

Q. What are these people?

A. They are shopkeepers and commission agents.

Q. Were they arrested?

A. No.

Q. Were they saying anything seditious or disloyal?

A. I asked them to go away because I had received a report against them but they replied that they had been stationed there by the Inspector of Police for the protection of those places.

Q. What kind of report had you received about them?

A. The Sub-Inspector had reported to me that these three men had threatened and asked the Post Office official to remove himself and his family people because they had an intention to set fire to the Post Office.

Q. At what time you had got this information?

A. At about 6-30.

Q. It was on the 12th?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Herbert, Government Advocate—

Q. You stated that one Durga Das from Amritsar came and lectured at Patti. Is this the same Durga Das who was the Editor of the "Waqt" newspaper and who was subsequently tried and convicted by the martial law commission at Lahore in the main conspiracy case?

A. Yes, he is the same man.

Q. You have stated that two European firms had business transactions at Patti and had their offices there. Did the buildings, in which they had their offices, belong to them or to some Indian people at Patti?

A. They are my own.

Q. In the shops had they much furniture?

A. There was furniture and money.

Mr. Abdul Kadir, Assistant Government Advocate.—I have one request to make before Your Lordship's Committee adjourn for to-morrow. There was this case of a Hindu temple discussed yesterday. I sent for information from Kasur about the civil records of the case in the Munsiff's Court about which Mr. Mohan Lal, Pleader, spoke yesterday. He said that he had heard some people making a statement on the 3rd of September. I wired for those records and I have got them to-day from the Record office of the District Court here. I want to tender these original records before Your Lordship. We propose to put in copies of these records. I also want to tender the translation of these records, for an allegation was made about a sum of Rs. 1,500 which seems to be unfounded, and also another allegation, which was made in connection with Captain Doveton trying some persons, seems to be unfounded. These were made in the Court of the Munsiff. It would shew the Committee everything.

The President.—Show these records to Pandit Jagat Narayan. He might see them.

Mr. Abdul Kadir.—Mr. Justice Rankin also wanted to know about something.

Mr. Justice Rankin.—Yes, I asked some question but I was not dissatisfied.

6 December 1919.]

SARDAR AMAR SINGH.

At Lahore, Saturday, the 6th December 1919.

PRESENT:

The Hon'ble LORD HUNTER.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice RANKIN.
 The Hon'ble Mr. W. F. RICE, C.S.I., C.I.E., I.C.S.
 Major-General Sir GEORGE BARROW, K.C.B.,
 K.C.M.G.

The Hon'ble Pandit JAGAT NARAYAN.
 Sir C. H. STALVAD, Kt.
 Sardar Sahibzada SULTAN AHMAD KHAN.

H. WILLIAMSON, Esq., M.B.E., I.P., Secretary.

SARDAR AMAR SINGH, Pleader, Kasur.

By the President—

Q. Mr. Amar Singh, you are a pleader in Kasur?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Were you in Kasur on the date of the disturbances?

A. On the 12th.

Q. You have expressed a desire to make a statement to us?

A. Yes, Sir, I was asked by Mr. Marsden, so I did.

Q. Will you tell us what you saw?

A. On the 12th at about 10 most of the pleaders were assembled in the house of Maulvi Abdul Kadir. There was a hartal continuing from the previous evening and that morning also there was a hartal. Maulvi Ghulam Mohi-ud-Din came running to the house of Maulvi Abdul Kadir and wanted us to take some steps to stop the hartal.Q. Did you think a hartal might lead to riot?

A. We contemplated no riot.

Q. But did you think it was a dangerous thing to have a hartal?A. No, I had never experienced a hartal before and I was not there on the 11th, so I did not know the attitude of the mob there that evening. Of course Maulvi Ghulam Mohi-ud-Din might have seen the attitude of the mob on the evening of the 11th. He came there and said we should take some steps to stop the hartal. Maulvi Abdul Kadir said we should do all we can and it was about 10 o'clock when about 80 or 40 persons had collected at the house of Maulvi Abdul Kadir.

Q. When you were in deliberation did news reach you that something had occurred at the Station?

A. Yes, Sardar Ganda Singh came there and informed us that boys were committing mischief at the railway station.

Q. Was it not more than boys?

A. He used those words 'boys are committing mischief at the railway station, and you must hurry up.' That was the information he gave us.

Q. What did you do?

A. There were three tongas standing there because we were going to court as it was court time, and it was by chance that we had assembled there. In one tonga Maulvi Ghulam Mohi-ud-Din and Maulvi Abdul Kadir went straight to the railway station. On the second tonga I think Mr. Mohan Lal, Mr. Mathra Das, both pleaders, and another gentleman Lala Devi Dial went and on the third tonga was Sardar Ganda Singh himself with his family, and we could not get another tonga so I and Mr. Gokal Chand walked to the railway station. On the way we found an empty tonga and took that. When we reached the railway station the mob had almost left the place, but I saw the godown burning and some of the furniture of the waiting room also being burned outside the railway station. First of all I met Sardar Kebar Singh, Assistant Station Master, there. He was in great stress of mind, his turban was off and he told me he had been undone and I should help him in any way I could. Two trains were standing there, one on the Ferozepore side and the other on the Lahore side. He said "my instruments have been taken away, help me in finding those instruments so that I can get those trains in." For a few minutes I tried to find the instruments, but we could not find them.

Q. They had been taken away?

A. They had been taken away, but we did not know who took them. I said to him 'do not mind the trains now, your station is being burnt.' There was a tin there and I took hold of that and began to fill it with water to try and extinguish the fire.

Q. Had the mob gone out towards one of the trains?

A. Towards the Ferozepore train side.

Q. Did you see what the mob did?

A. No, I saw the mob running towards that side; I saw their backs of course.

Q. You did not see what that mob did to that train?

A. No, Sir, I do not know what the mob did at the train.

Q. Did you see anything of the two warrant officers who were murdered?

A. No, My Lord, I had returned by that time, I had gone to Mr. Mitter's Court.

Q. So you know nothing about the murders?

A. No, Sir. Subsequently when the mob looted the city post office and were going towards the big post-office and towards Mr. Mitter's Court, then I came across that mob.

Q. I want to ask you what justification you have for this statement that you made to us that 'it (the mob) was further excited on account of the firing by some of the British soldiers travelling by the Ferozepore train, and then it committed the unfortunate excesses both at the railway station, in the town and tahsil.' What justification have you for that statement?

A. I base that statement upon the statement of the Deputy Superintendent of Police of Kasur, and on the statements of Maulvi Abdul Kadir and Maulvi Ghulam Mohi-ud-Din.

Q. I do not know if you know the information that has been put before us in connection with the Kasur incidents. I won't trouble you further than by asking you this simple question, do you adhere to this statement as to what occurred at the station in view of the evidence which has been put before us? Do you still adhere to that statement that the mob was further excited on account of the firing by some of the British soldiers travelling by the Ferozepore train, and then it committed the unfortunate excesses both at the railway station, in the town and tahsil?

A. Yes, Sir, I stick to it; it is quite true.

Q. You think that is a correct representation of the facts?

A. Absolutely correct.

Q. If it be the case that the crowd went out to that train and attempted to murder several Europeans and attempted to murder, among others, these two warrant officers, do you still adhere to that statement?

6 December 1919.

SARDAR AMAR SINGH.

Continued.

A. I have not followed Your Lordship.

Q. If it be the case that the crowd went out to that train, and without any provocation, attempted to murder several Europeans and attempted, among others, to murder those two European officers, would you still adhere to that statement?

A. My Lord, I stick to that portion of the statement that before the murders took place and before the post office and tahsils were attacked the mob was fired at by these Warrant Officers and to this Sardar Kishan Singh was an eye-witness. Of course the mob had done mischief before; they had burned the godown and gone to the bridge side, but as to these murders I submit only those European gentlemen were murdered who had used their revolvers.

Q. Were you not informed that they had attempted to murder other Europeans in the train before the train came up to the station?

A. I did not know any other European was murdered.

Q. Are you in entire ignorance of this circumstance that the mob had gone out to the train and attempted to murder first two officers in uniform and afterwards attempted to get Mr. and Mrs. Sherbourne and their children?

A. I was told by Sardar Kehar Singh that the mob had gone to burn the railway bridge and not to murder any Europeans there, and I was not present at that place myself.

Q. If you were not present don't you think it would be much safer, much more prudent and much fairer if you did not volunteer to give any explanation of the occurrence? I ask you that as a gentleman who is in the habit of appearing before courts and who knows the elements of justice and fairness. Don't you think it would be fairer on your part if you did not express an opinion?

A. Mr. Marsden had asked me for my evidence.

Q. About this particular part of your evidence I am asking you.

A. This part of my evidence I had verified; it was quite true and I thought it my duty to put it down. I verified it from the Excise Sub-Inspector and from both the Maulvis and then I put down all these things.

Q. There is one other question I wish to ask you. In connection with the administration of Martial Law you say that you saw a sadhu white-washed, when was that?

A. I think most probably it was the month of June.

Q. Where was it?

A. I came from the Patti train at about 4 and when I passed by the 2nd class exit, just by the side of the exit was sitting a sadhu white-washed and shivering. When I handed over my ticket to the ticket collector I asked him about it and he told me he had fallen a victim to Captain Doveton. I asked what was his fault and he said "Captain Doveton knows it." In the next room was Captain Doveton and I could not ask him. I saw him white-washed, sitting and shivering there.

Q. In your statement when you say 'I saw a sadhu white-washed,' the meaning of that statement I would take to be that you saw a sadhu being white-washed?

A. No. I purposely avoided the use of the words being white-washed. He was not white-washed in my presence.

Q. Do you know how he came to be white-washed?

A. I myself saw him, a white coating from head to foot sufficiently thick on his whole person.

Q. What was his name?

A. I did not enquire. I had no business to enquire.

By the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Rankin—

Q. Do I understand you to say that when the mob attacked these Warrant Officers and they fired a revolver, that in your opinion is some justification for the mob thereupon to beat them to death?

A. There is absolutely no justification for beating anybody to death but when a mob is already excited and irresponsible and low class people are fired at, including samindars and Jats, they do not realise their responsibility, and only those Warrant Officers were killed who used revolvers. I do not say this was any justification to do any mischief or do any crime.

Q. Do you think they realised their responsibility before the Warrant Officers discharged their revolvers?

A. Did the mob realise it? The mob was already doing mischief. What responsibility did they realise?

Q. If you were attacked by a mob and had a revolver in your hand what would you do?

A. They were in the train, they were not attacked.

Q. You say they discharged their revolvers when nobody was molesting them at all?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You were not there.

A. No. Sardar Kishan Singh, Excise Sub-Inspector, was there and he told me. And I may point out here one thing that one of the rioters was also injured by the revolver shots of these Warrant Officers, and I am told by the Deputy Superintendent of Police that he was convicted.

Q. He was only hit in the foot, wasn't he?

A. Yes, Sir, he was hit in the foot.

Q. Do you think he would have had any ground to complain if he had been shot through the heart?

A. I do not think so when he was already one of the rioters.

By Sir C. H. Setalvad—

Q. You are a pleader?

A. Yes.

Q. For how many years?

A. I am completing my 8th year.

Q. And you have been practising all this time at Kasur?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You know the other pleaders intimately I suppose?

A. At Kasur? I know every one of them.

Q. Now before April was there any seditious movement in Kasur?

A. I do not think there was any seditious movement anywhere.

Q. We are now concerned with Kasur for the moment.

A. I do not think there was any seditious movement going on, at least not to my knowledge, in the Punjab. At Kasur we never held any political meetings even. One of us used to take an interest in political matters, Maulvi Ghulam Mohi-ud-Din. He used to come here and to Delhi and deliver lectures on political platforms. The other pleaders I do not think even talked of politics there.

Q. There was no political activity in Kasur?

A. Absolutely not.

Q. Was there any anti-Government or anti-British feeling in Kasur before April?

A. You see, when this Rowlatt Act was passed in the face of all opposition and when His Honour the late Lieutenant-Governor had delivered a speech on the 7th of April that there should be no hartal and that if any one did such things he would be punished severely; the people resented the policy of His Honour. Otherwise as against Government itself or as against the British there was no feeling. There was resentment no doubt but anti-feeling against Government itself or against the British there was absolutely none.

Q. About the Rowlatt Act were there any meetings at Kasur before the 11th of April?

A. No, Sir, absolutely not.

Q. Kasur did not take part in the Rowlatt Act agitation?

A. We used to read everything in the papers.

Q. You did not hold a protest meeting?

A. Nothing, Sir.

Q. How do you account for this sudden outburst on the 12th?

A. You see, the people of Kasur wanted to observe the hartal on the 6th in common with the whole country in obedience to the message of Mahatma Gandhi. This was first brought before the members of the Bar and we refused and said we could not take any lead in the matter.

Q. When was that?

A. It was, I think, on the 1st or 2nd of April.

6 December 1919.

SARDAR AMAR SINGH.

Q. There was a meeting?

A. No, no meeting.

Q. There was a meeting of the members of the Bar?

A. No, in the Bar room there was a talk about it.

Q. There was no regular meeting? There was a talk about the hartal?

A. About the hartal, that Gandhi's message had been received and were we to do anything or not. Most of us refused to take any part.

Q. Some of the pleaders were in favour of the hartal?

A. To my knowledge in the Bar room no one was in favour of it.

Q. Who started the thing if there was no one in favour of it?

A. It was started in this way. Maulvi Ghulam Mohi-ud-Din and Mr. Devi Dial proposed that we should pass a protest resolution on the 6th and wire that to the Secretary of State and Mr. Lloyd George. As to a hartal it was clearly decided against.

Q. Was everybody agreed that there was to be no hartal?

A. This was agreed among the members of the Bar.

Q. And in fact there was no hartal on the 6th?

A. No. These two gentlemen wished that we should hold a meeting if possible and send telegrams to England that this Rowlatt Act should be repealed. Nearly all the members of the Bar showed their inactivity about this; and then they consulted some of the principal traders of the town and all refused and said "we won't take part in the hartal."

Q. There was no meeting on the 6th?

A. A meeting was talked of.

Q. Then what happened?

A. They came to Lahore on the 6th to attend the meeting at the Bradlaugh Hall and I went to a relative of mine at Ferozepore; so no meeting or no hartal took place at Kasur on the 6th.

Q. My question was, if there was no political activity against the Rowlatt Act, how do you account for these events on the 12th taking place?

A. There was no hartal on the 6th and we people were put to great shame by other men from Amritsar, from Lahore and Amritsar, who told us that we had not joined in the protest of the country.

Q. When you had no hartal and no meeting, you were taunted by people from other places?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. When you say you were taunted, were the members of the Bar taunted?

A. I was also taunted and most of us were taunted.

Q. By whom?

A. At Ferozepore also some people asked me whether there was hartal at Kasur and I said no.

Q. Did people from other places come to Kasur and speak to you about this?

A. So much I do not know, but I know that some tradesmen received their hundis back and their bills of exchange were returned to them. In the case of one shop-keeper Sundar, his hundi or his railway receipt was returned from Amritsar.

Q. Have you any personal knowledge about that or is it what you have heard?

A. That transpired during the investigation.

Q. You did not know about it yourself?

A. Personally I did not know.

Q. You have heard about it in the same manner as you have heard about the sadhu being white-washed?

A. I only know so much that when the investigations were going on.

Q. That is what you heard during the investigations?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. When you say you were taunted, were you personally taunted, and where, at Ferozepore?

A. At Ferozepore people asked me if there was a hartal at Kasur and I said no, and they said 'why have you people of Kasur not done so,' I said we had not and they said we had done a very bad thing.

Q. Were you convinced that you had done a wrong thing?

A. It was neither wrong nor right; we did not join the voice of the country.

Q. I want to know what the effect on you was of that rebuke you got from your friends at Ferozepore?

A. Personally at the moment of course I can say that which I heard the whole country had held a hartal and nothing had taken place, I thought it would have been better if Kasur had joined with the voice of the country.

Q. So you felt you had done wrong in lagging behind?

A. I felt so at the moment, but I never contemplated that this mischief would take place.

Q. You felt like that when you returned to Kasur?

A. I had nothing to do with Kasur. I am not a resident of Kasur. I am only a practitioner.

Q. You have been there eight years?

A. I only do my practice there.

Q. Who were the other people who were similarly taunted?

A. There is one Honorary Magistrate Sheikh Nawab Khan. He told me that some people taunted him.

Q. This gentleman returned from Lahore and said they taunted him because he had not taken part in the common protest of the country and did you say that you also felt the same?

A. When it was the cause of the country every one must have felt that he was doing wrong in abstaining from the hartal.

Q. When you were rebuked by people from other parts what did you resolve to do? Did you try to make up lost ground?

A. I have already submitted that there was absolutely no talk of a hartal after the 1st or 2nd of April. I forgot the thing. It was a momentary feeling which I felt when I was going through the bazar.

Q. And you shook off that feeling?

A. It was only momentary.

Q. You came back to your original frame of mind that you were quite right in abstaining?

A. I came back to that idea.

Q. When you were rebuked at Ferozepore did the feeling that you had done wrong in abstaining remain with you?

A. The real fact of the matter was we were afraid of the officials and so we decided not to take part.

Q. You wanted to have a hartal and to have a meeting but you were afraid of the officials?

A. We wanted to join in the common protest of the country but we were afraid of the officials.

Q. Throughout you wanted to join the other people in the country in agitating against the Rowlatt Act?

A. Not throughout. There was a talk about it on the 1st and 2nd of April; before that there was no talk. It was only mentioned in the papers.

Q. You wanted to join the public?

A. About the 6th we wanted to join but because we were afraid.

Q. Then was it on the 6th that you and other members were willing to join the other people in the country in protesting against the Rowlatt Act? At what stage did you desire to demonstrate about the Rowlatt Act?

A. I have already submitted that there was a talk about it on the 1st and 2nd of April in the Bar room when Maulvi Ghulam Mohi-ud-din and Devi Dial said "what are we to do first on the 6th" and it was then decided that we were not going to join.

Q. Do I understand that your determination on the 1st and 2nd not to have a hartal on the 6th was taken because of your fear of the officials?

A. I think so.

Q. But for that fear of the officials you would have decided to have a hartal?

A. Because we considered it to be an innocent thing.

Q. In your heart of hearts you wanted to have a hartal because the whole country was having it?

A. Yes, Sir, we wanted to join with the country.

Q. But you did not have the courage to do so?

A. No, Sir.

Q. You were afraid of the officials?

A. Very much afraid; even now.

Q. What particular official were you afraid of in Kasur?

6 December 1919.]

SARDAR AMAR SINGH.

A. I think all the officials were against it. There was no official who was in favour of having a hartal.

Q. Nobody would suggest that the officials would be in favour of a hartal. The officials everywhere were naturally against it. What was there in Kasur that you were afraid of?

A. Because there was absolutely no political life in the place.

Q. There was no force of public opinion in Kasur?

A. No.

Q. That is what made you very much afraid of the officials?

A. Yes, Sir. From a conversation I had with Mr. Fyson I gathered at Lahore on the 30th March that a hartal would not be popular. I had gone to see Mr. Fyson on some private business and in course of conversation he mentioned that there was going to be a hartal on the 30th March. And from his frame of mind I gathered that he was going to take some steps against those who were organising this. As a result of this conversation I knew that he was against it and as he had been recently transferred to Lahore from Kasur I decided to keep quiet.

Q. I take it from this that your inclination was to have a hartal on the 30th?

A. As a matter of fact I never knew that they were going to have a hartal on the 30th. This I gathered from my conversation with Mr. Fyson.

Q. Have you anything more to say about accounting for this outburst on the 12th?

A. For various reasons there was a feeling of discontent amongst the people.

Q. What reasons?

A. Economic, political, recruitment, war loan—several people had a number of grievances against the Government.

Q. What was the reason connected with recruitment?

A. Recruiting people against their wishes.

Q. Were any people in Kasur recruited against their wishes?

A. Attempts were made . . . . .

Q. I want to know whether you have any personal knowledge of people in Kasur being recruited against their own wishes?

A. I know nothing of Kasur proper. I know something about the neighbouring villages. In Kasur no one came forward although we did our best to persuade them.

Q. So you took part in the recruiting campaign and you were persuading people to join?

A. I was helping Mr. Fyson.

Q. You were co-operating with the authorities in getting recruits in Kasur?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Were you compelling people against their wishes to join?

A. I personally did not compel anybody.

Q. Did you see any of your co-operators doing so, either officials or non-officials? I want to know whether any of your co-workers resorted to compulsion?

A. I can answer this question but I would ask to be excused.

Q. But did you not volunteer to give evidence?

A. Perhaps your Honour is under a misapprehension. This statement was called for from me by Mr. Marsden.

Q. Did you offer to give evidence?

A. I am giving evidence at the request of Mr. Marsden.

Q. You were asked by Mr. Marsden to give evidence? When did he ask you?

A. I can show you his letter if you like. (Witness hands letter to Sir C. H. Setalvad.)

Sir C. H. Setalvad.—This letter says: "Dear Sir, I should be glad if you could see me to-day sometime between 12 and 2." This letter does not say anything about your making a statement. What date was this?

Witness.—Kindly do not confuse me. This is the first time that I have come into the witness box.

Sir C. H. Setalvad.—You realise now that it is one thing to be in a witness-box to be examined and another thing to cross-examine one in the witness-box.

Witness.—If you see the letter you will find the date. I think it was in October.

Q. When you went and saw him what did he tell you?

A. He told me that he wanted my evidence about the disturbances at Kasur and Martial Law administration.

Q. Did you tell him that you were willing to give evidence?

A. I told him that I had refused the Congress Committee to give evidence but as he was my officer and as he had asked me to give evidence I could not venture to refuse. I told him that I would think over the matter and then send him my evidence.

Q. Did you express to him your unwillingness?

A. At that moment it was neither refusal nor acceptance.

Q. You said you would think over it?

A. Yes. I had a talk with him and then he told me that I could write down my evidence.

Q. The result was that you decided to give evidence?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you inform him of your decision?

A. I never met him for some days. Then on the 1st or 2nd November in court he told me that there will be no cross-examination or anything. I was not very anxious to give evidence. He told me that there would be no cross-examination. After some time I heard that His Lordship had arrived and that there would be cross-examination and that counsel would be permitted and therefore I was unwilling to come forward and give evidence. I asked to be excused.

Q. You put it on the ground of cross-examination?

A. I put it on the ground that I might say something which might be unpalatable to any side. I knew I might have to speak the truth and say something which might not be palatable to one or the other side.

Q. What sides do you suggest?

A. There are two sides—the official and the congress. Q. And therefore you wanted to be excused. Did Mr. Marsden press you to send in your evidence?

A. He persuaded me. He is my Sub-Divisional Officer and I could not very well refuse him.

Q. You assented much against your wish?

A. I have submitted that I was not very anxious to come into the witness-box but because I was asked by my officer I have come.

Q. You suggested—that you were compelled to give evidence.

A. No; I was not very anxious to give evidence. I was requested to give evidence; no one compelled me.

Q. But have you not come to give evidence voluntarily?

A. Whatever I will submit it will be voluntary and it will not be at the instigation of any party. But I would rather not say things which would go against me.

Q. What are the matters that you do not wish to disclose?

A. You asked me about recruitment and whether any one was compelled to join and who was it that compelled them, and whether they were officials or non-officials.

Q. Do you know whether some were compelled?

A. Some were compelled. I do not say they were not. I would like to speak out.

Q. Certainly, speak out. Tell us the whole thing, whatever you want to say. You made a remark that compulsory recruitment was one of the causes of discontent at Kasur. I want to test this statement. I want to know who did the compulsion.

A. May I ask one thing from you; can you assure me that if I disclose anything no harm or trouble will come to me.

Q. What trouble do you mean?

A. The trouble is Your Lordships will be going away in a few days and then I have to remain here as a subject of His Majesty's Government and I do not wish to say anything against officials. I will speak the truth and my statement can be verified from records.

Q. If your statement is to be the truth why need you be afraid?

6 December 1919.]

SARDAR AMAR SINGH

A. I would request you, Sir, to clear this point on recruitment from some other witness.

Q. You made a statement that recruitment against the wishes of the people was one of the causes of discontent and you say that you know the things that happened—you know a good deal, surely then don't you think it is your duty to tell us?

A. It is my duty. I submit that I will be displeasing somebody.

Q. You cannot please everybody?

A. Sir, I do not want to create trouble for myself. I have to live. If you can give me an assurance that my statement about recruitment will not bring me into trouble then I am prepared to make everything clear to you. I have got personal knowledge on this subject—I have seen it with my own eyes. I have got certain papers and I have been working with Mr. Fyson in connection with recruitment.

Q. Why not tell us the whole truth about it? It is best to be frank. Some undesirable methods were employed by whom?

A. By all the recruiting parties.

Q. What was the method adopted?

A. The method adopted was to ask the Sub-Inspector to send up young Jats under sections 107 and 110.

Q. The Police Sub-Inspector was asked to send up Jats in the villages under sections 107 and 110 asking them to give security for good behaviour. Who asked the Sub-Inspector?

A. That is the whole thing I want to avoid.

Q. Surely you ought to tell us who gave those instructions?

A. It was after the visit of His Honour to Kasur.

Q. You say the instructions were given to the Police Inspector. Did you see who gave those instructions?

A. I saw them assembling together in a private room and then action was taken.

Q. Who assembled?

A. Officials.

Q. What officials?

A. The Police and Kasur civil authorities. And after they came out of the room we saw a number of chalans coming up and those people who were never chalaned before were brought up.

Q. Sometime after the meeting you saw a number of young Jats brought up before the Magistrate under sections 107 and 110. You say all these people were brought up. Did you see the chalan forms? How many were they roughly?

A. There were about 100 chalans.

Q. What Magistrate's court was this?

A. In those days the Sub-Divisional Officer was Khan Bahadur Sultan Ahmed Khan.

Q. He was Sub-Divisional Officer in those days at Kasur?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. These 100 were brought up from villages?

A. They were from various thanas.

Q. What happened to those people who were brought up under those chalans?

A. Sometimes they were persuaded and sometimes influence was brought to bear upon them. Every method was used that they should volunteer.

Q. You saw the chalans?

A. Yes, Sir, I appeared for some of these people.

Q. What happened to these people who were brought up under these chalans?

A. They were sometimes persuaded, sometimes some sort of influence was brought to bear upon them, in fact every method was used to make them volunteer. In some cases when these Jats used to hear that the sole purpose was recruitment, they used to decamp and they did not care to appear even under these chalans, and then they were brought in handcuffs.

Q. They were hand-cuffed under these chalans?

A. Some of them were. The police used to present the chalans, but some one used to tell them that the people to whom these chalans were issued were away from the village, and so on.

Q. But what was done to those people who were brought up under section 107 or 110?

A. In our Manjha you can have any number of witnesses for the prosecution, some sarkars and others.

Q. What was done to those people?

A. People would come forward and say that a certain man is a thief, he is a dacoit and so forth. Then that person was advised that it was better for him to join the service of Government, he would bring a good name to his country and to his parents; he would get some squares, and such like inducements were given to him. Well, since this canal irrigation was introduced, the people of Manjha stags are rich enough. They did not like to go on Rs. 11. That was the thing. Those who were poor said 'All right, we will join the army, or I will send my son or I will send my brother.'

Q. Then they were let off?

A. Then, Sir, he had to fulfil his promise by joining the army if he had undertaken to join himself or give his brother or son if he had agreed to do so, and then he was generally let off.

Q. Then the proceedings under section 107 or 110 were withdrawn?

A. If he was obstinate he was put in the lock-up for some days, or if he was a man worth Rs. 5,000 he was asked to deposit security to the extent of Rs. 4,000 or Rs. 5,000, and even after some security was given, some technical objection was raised and the security was refused, and then he was sent to jail for some time.

Q. They were harassed in that manner till they agreed to serve as recruits?

A. Till they agreed to serve or underwent their imprisonment.

Q. They had the choice of going as recruits or going to prison?

A. Before they were convicted or sent to jail they were generally given two or three chances so that they may consider over the matter and consult their people.

Q. Now you spoke of 100 chalans, did this happen also with regard to the other villages and other people?

A. I am not talking of one village only. These 100 chalans were almost for the whole of the sub-division in the beginning. Then also suppose there was a case under section 326 or 325, the magistrates used to keep a record in their court showing the war services the people were rendering to the Government. They used to ask the people whether they were willing, and they used to advise the people that it was better for them to join the army, or if they themselves could not they should give somebody.

Q. Was this done after His Honour came to the Kasur District?

A. Yes, before his visit there were no recruits.

Q. What was the date of his visit that you are referring to?

A. It was the month of August 1917.

Q. After that, this was done?

A. We were brisk in recruiting after that.

Q. What I want to know is, was recruitment carried on by these methods?

A. By persuasion, by these methods, and in every possible way. Some people were given squares for kachcha cultivation if they supplied some recruits. I have also supplied some.

Q. Nothing wrong in giving inducements to people to join the army?

A. Supposing there is a second class Magistrate who has the power of sending a man to jail for only six months. Then he would threaten the man that he would send him to jail for 7 years unless he joined the army.

Q. You mean the magistrates, with regard to the people put before them, were openly threatening these persons with higher punishments than they were authorised to inflict unless they joined the army?

A. Yes, they were.

Q. Did you hear that yourself?

A. Yes.

Q. This happened in your presence?

A. At that time he also told the accused that it was better for him to join the army.

Q. On any occasion did it happen in your presence?

A. On several occasions. He was told that he would be severely punished.

6 December 1919.]

SARDAR AMAR SINGH.

Q. But that happened in your presence?

A. Yes, in my presence as a counsel, sometime as a chance visitor.

Q. In whose court did these things happen, let us have one or two instances?

A. In the court of almost every magistrate.

Q. On how many occasions did you yourself hear a magistrate telling the accused that unless he joined the army he would be severely punished, on how many occasions did you yourself hear this either as a counsel appearing for somebody or being in court for some other purpose?

A. It must be on about 20 or 30 occasions in different courts.

Q. In Kasur itself or in the district?

A. I have my practice at Kasur, sometimes we were in camp.

Q. On 20 or 30 occasions you yourself heard the magistrates telling the accused that unless they joined the army they would be severely punished?

A. Well, there is a judicial file existing, and in that you will find the statements of the accused. I submit there is a file existing, the statements of the accused are there. The accused was asked if he was willing to join the army. Well, he said "I will give you my brother or my son or my servants or I myself will go."

Q. Is that recorded in the file of any case?

A. Certainly, in cases in which he was chalaned.

Q. Can you give us the names of one or two cases where you say this was recorded in the records of the cases? Can we get the file?

A. I think, Sir, if you will kindly go through all the files of first class Magistrates, at least in 80 per cent. of the cases you will be able to get these things.

Q. We cannot go through the files of all first class Magistrates, but you say you appeared in some of the cases, and so if you give us the names of the accused who were so told by the Magistrate in your presence, we can send for the files of the particular cases and look at them to see whether what you say is recorded in the files or not?

A. I don't remember the names now, but if you will ask the pleaders of Kasur they might be able to give them to you.

Q. You are a pleader of Kasur?

A. I have not brought my diary with me.

Q. But you must have some record from where you can find these things hereafter? You can go home and send us a list of the cases in which the Magistrates told the accused that they would be severely punished if they did not join the army?

A. So much I have not got in my record. I can only show that such and such accused joined the army.

Q. What you say is that in the records of some of the cases you will find it recorded that the person concerned was asked if he was willing to go, and he said yes or that he would give his brother or son, is that so?

A. That file was sent to the S. D. O. for approval.

Q. You find it recorded in the file?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. If you can give us the names of the accused in whose cases the record was made to that effect, we can send for those files?

A. I will have to find out.

Q. You can find out hereafter and send us a list?

A. I will try my best, but I am not the senior counsel of that place, Moulvi Ghulam Mohi-ud-din and others are the senior pleaders.

Q. You have put materials before us, and you are making a statement?

A. Any threat is not on the file. Only the statement of the accused, his willingness and the approval or disapproval of the S. D. O.

Q. If you can give us the names of these cases, we can send for the files?

A. I will find them out.

Q. Now about the war loan, you said that was also one of the causes?

A. I can give you one instance that I myself saw. I remember it.

Q. Will you kindly tell us?

A. This chalan business and sending for people under sections 107 and 110, this was in the beginning in the time of Khan Sahib. Mr. Fyson did not follow this procedure. He used to go to the villages and preach to the people.

Q. Mr. Fyson did not use any compulsion or any of the methods that you have described?

A. He did not use any of these methods. Of course if a file was sent to him by some subordinate magistrate or even if in his court anybody was willing to join, he was quite ready to have him, he did not call for any of these chalans.

Q. Chalans were not made in this manner in his time?

A. But of course he was also recruiting.

Q. So were all?

A. But he adopted different methods.

Q. Not of compulsion?

A. You may take it as compulsion, but I am going to submit that method.

Q. What was that method?

A. Subsequent to the War Conference or Durbar which was held in Delhi some two years ago, there was a public meeting held here by His Honour, and the Punjab was asked to supply about 2 lakhs of recruits. They were distributed in every district. Our sub-division had also to supply about 800 or 900 of them. The thing is I do not wish to say all this nor have I got the courage to refuse you.

Q. You are going to describe the methods of Mr. Fyson. Let us have them.

A. Yes, Sir. He had got a census prepared from every village, and he ordered that such and such a village should supply so many recruits, and they were distributed. Suppose the Kasur Tahsil had to supply 400, they were distributed. But when after preaching for 6, 7 or 8 months he found this method was not successful, then he decided to follow the method that was in force in the Ferozepore District.

Q. He decided to follow the old methods?

A. He decided to follow the method which was followed in the Ferozepore District.

Q. What was that?

A. He sent his Naib-Tahsildar. That was rather an inducement to the people also. Suppose a man was a debtor to some sowcar. The sowcar was asked to forego his interest or some portion of his principal.

Q. Do you consider that illegitimate, a wrong method, to offer such monetary inducement to persons to join the army? Is there anything wrong in it?

A. Have I said that? You asked me to describe the method. I don't say whether it is right or wrong.

Q. The creditor was asked to forego interest or to show some concession to the debtor?

A. Yes, he was told that he would get some sanad and the man would go, and so on. Suppose he is to be betrothed to somebody and he cannot get himself married to that girl. Then influence was brought to bear upon the parents of the girl that they should give their daughter to this man and then the man would join the army. Or if some land was mortgaged, half the land would be redeemed.

Q. Those are what you call the Ferozepore methods?

A. We learnt it from Ferozepore.

Q. These are the methods?

A. Some of them.

Q. Did Mr. Fyson do anything else?

A. He appointed two panchayats. The head of one panchayat was our Tahsildar Sahib, and of another was our Honorary Magistrate, a Khan Bahadur. Their function was this—Suppose from a certain village a certain number of recruits were required, and that village had supplied only half or one-fourth the number instead of the number which was allotted to them, then the panchayat would go there and hold their sitting until the necessary number of recruits were secured. I have got experience of these things in the village of Rajajang.

Q. Would you give us your personal knowledge of that village? What happened?

6 December 1919.]

SARDAR AMAR SINGH.

A. Khan Bahadur Sherbaz Khan was our Honorary Magistrate. He took a panchayat of about 100 persons to Rajajang. They had to supply about 25 or 30 recruits, I don't know the exact number, but the balance against them was about 19. Then they held a meeting in that village. The zaidar of that village was also present at that meeting.

Q. You were present at this meeting?

A. I was present in the meeting of Mr. Fyson when these two panchayats were formed, it was of zaidars, lambardars, honorary magistrates and such like persons.

Q. Were you present at this meeting in the Rajajang village?

A. I was not present, but I was present when these men were brought under custody.

Q. Well, tell us exactly what happened.

A. That panchayat went to the Rajajang village and picked up some people. One of them was a Jat and the others were Kurmis or some such people, about 19 in number.

Q. Nineteen people that were still due from that village were picked up from that village?

A. They picked up 19 people. Some tahsil chaprassis, some zaidars and lambardars with bayonets on brought these 19 people to Mr. Fyson at Kasur.

Q. They were about 19 people, and they were brought to Kasur by soldiers?

A. Not soldiers; but by chaprassis and saidars.

Q. You said with bayonets on?

A. Some had rifles, because they were in charge of these recruits, and it was their duty to see that they were safely brought.

Q. They were brought there in custody?

A. It was just like custody.

Q. Were you present when they were brought there?

A. I sent them to Lahore. When they were sent, I was present.

Q. Where were you when they were brought?

A. First they were brought to Mr. Fyson. At that time I was not present. In the evening I was present at the railway station. The Naib-Tahsildar was also present. All those 19 persons were brought to the station. Some of them were weeping, and the parents of some of them who were also at the railway station were crying. I told them there was no harm in their going as they would be serving their King and country.

Q. They were crying, were they unwilling to go?

A. Most of them.

Q. Did they say so?

A. When they were weeping one could understand it.

Q. It may not be going to the war, but it may be owing to their people going to a distant place?

A. They were crying saying that their men were being taken away by force.

Q. They themselves were saying so?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. You were at the railway station?

A. Yes.

Q. Was Mr. Fyson there?

A. No, they were first presented before him.

Q. When they told you that they were brought by force, what did they tell you?

A. Those people told me that they were quite unwilling. Then they were made to sit in a third class compartment, which was made empty, and then some saidars and chaprassis sat along with them with bayonets in hand. They were sent to Lahore. The next morning their relatives came crying to Mr. Tollinton, the Deputy Commissioner in Lahore.

Q. They were released?

A. When Mr. Tollinton came to know that these people were taken by force and against their wishes, I was told by the zaidar of that village that those people were released and sent back to their homes.

Q. That shows that when the matter was brought to the notice of the higher authorities and when they came to know that these people were unwilling to go, they were let off?

A. I submit the method adopted.

Q. You say that though superior officers disliked these things, still the subordinate officers in fact resorted to these methods?

A. Then Mr. Tollinton also issued instructions that there should be no compulsion.

Q. After this incident, were instructions issued to the subordinate officers not to resort to these methods hereafter?

A. Mr. Tollinton wrote to Mr. Fyson and then he issued further instructions.

Q. Now let us leave it there. You were suggesting that the war loan operation had something to do with this trouble. What happened there?

A. Officers used to ask people to contribute to the war loan. Suppose a man was willing to give only Rs. 500, he was asked to pay Rs. 2,000 or Rs. 1,500.

Q. They were persuading people to give more than they were willing to give?

A. Well, some used to give, some refused.

Q. Is it not the case all the world over that if you want subscriptions people are not always willing to give their money, and they have to be persuaded?

A. I did not say that any force was used.

Q. Do you suggest that there was anything improperly done or compulsion used or undue pressure brought to bear upon people with regard to the war loan?

A. Well, undue pressure, I won't say anything about it. In our country even to win the good opinion of an officer, is a sufficient incentive. When an officer wants us to do anything, people generally do it. Suppose you are the head of my district, and you want me to do a certain thing, I would do that to please you.

Q. And still you harbour a grievance against him. You express your willingness to do something before him in order to please him, and still you harbour a grievance over giving the money?

A. If I voluntarily give you something and if you accept it, well and good; but if you want to double or treble it, then of course people think that it is a sort of pressure.

Q. Some people refused to enhance their quota?

A. Some people refused.

Q. Was anything done to them or were they left alone when they refused?

A. What was to be done?

Q. Were they maltreated in any manner or was there any undue interference with them if they refused or were they let alone?

A. One cannot say. Sometimes an officer increased the income-tax.

Q. Was anything of that sort done to your knowledge? What is the use of making these suggestions unless you are prepared to support them by facts which you know?

A. I remember one instance, Sir. There was a meeting held in Kasur at which an officer told the people that they had not done anything for the war loan, and they should do more.

Q. It was merely exhorting the people to give more?

A. Exhorting in a threatening tone.

Q. What did the officer threaten them with? What did he say would happen to them?

A. I think the frown of an officer is quite sufficient.

Q. He did not say anything as to what he would visit them with if they did not subscribe?

A. He said that if Germans had been our rulers, we would have been very badly treated; but now under British rule we were being well treated; we had made so much out of the war and such like things.

Q. That is all? Anything else improper that you saw with regard to the war loan?

A. I don't say whether it is proper or improper. In certain cases some people were made to subscribe some amount. Suppose he was a poor man and had not got the money, but simply to please the officer, he had to get money somehow from somewhere and pay it.

Q. Do you say that the people who were made to subscribe to the war loan were discontented? Were they?

A. They felt, of course; because there was a register kept showing the amounts subscribed by the various people and the recruits given by the different people. So, as is the habit of our people, to win the good will of the officers, they used to do something specially. I don't mean to say that any one was actually beaten or sent to jail for not subscribing to the war loan.

Q. You said something about the enhancement of income-tax in connection with the war loan?

A. Regarding income-tax, I can only give you bare facts. It is for your Lordships to judge. I cannot give you more.

Q. You can give us facts of which you have knowledge?

A. You say what is proper and improper?

Q. What is the connection between income-tax and war loan? What facts have you got as to what was done in connection with the income-tax?

A. An Extra Assistant Commissioner at Kasur was in charge of this war loan work. He raised the war loan subscriptions as much as he could by persuasion and by influence. Some obeyed him, some displeased him. Soon after he became the Income-tax Collector, the income-tax of some of those traders who had not obeyed him fully when he was Extra Assistant Commissioner was very much enhanced, and they attribute this to their not having subscribed to his satisfaction.

Q. Do you know of any cases personally?

A. Some people have complained that their income-tax has been put too high. Suppose one man was liable to pay only Rs. 200, and was made to pay Rs. 800.

Q. They attributed that to their not having subscribed to the war loan to the satisfaction of that officer?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Now on the 11th you had a meeting at Kasur, had you?

A. Kindly give me two minutes; I am confused. If my statement is displeasing to Your Lordship, excuse me.

Q. There is no question of displeasing. We are trying to gather facts; that is all. There was a meeting on the 11th?

A. I was not there.

Q. You were not in Kasur on the 11th?

A. No; I was there on the 12th. Subsequently I was there on the 16th. I was at Kasur up to the 23rd.

Q. Several pleaders in Kasur were arrested?

A. Yes; not several, three pleaders were arrested.

Q. And the houses of 8 or 9 were searched?

A. The houses of 5 pleaders were searched.

Q. Were these pleaders who were arrested handcuffed and taken through the streets?

A. They said they had been handcuffed.

Q. You did not see them?

A. No.

By Major-General Sir George Barrow—

Q. About the white-washing of the Sadhu, you did not see him being whitewashed?

A. I did not see.

Q. Did you speak to anybody who had seen him being whitewashed?

A. The station staff might have seen him.

Q. You did not see anybody who said to you that he saw him being whitewashed?

A. My submission in answer to Your Lordship was that the station staff might have seen him being white-washed.

Q. You did not see it and you did not speak to anybody who saw that?

A. I did not.

Q. Was he coated with white dust or lime?

A. He was coated with lime; it was of a different colour, it was a white coating, just as there is on the wall.

Q. Was it pasted all over or coated with a brush?

A. Not with a brush. It was from top to feet. It was all over the body.

Q. Was it a thick paste?

A. It was sufficiently thick.

Q. How thick? Was it like sowah?

A. It was like sowah, i.e., dust.

By the Hon'ble Pandit Jagat Narayan—

Q. You said that the Sadhu was shivering?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it dry dust? Or when you saw the Sadhu, was he wet?

A. It was half dry at that time.

Q. The whitewashing that you saw was not ashes, it was not dust?

A. I think it was of lime.

Q. Was it mixed with water or was it dusty?

A. It was wet; so it must have been mixed with water; or he might have perspired; I do not know. It was a regular coating, a mixture of water and lime.

Q. It was a regular coating?

A. Yes.

Q. Then I will ask only one more question. You state "On the arrival of the Patti and Ferozepore trains, the mob grew in number." Then you say "it was further excited on account of the firing by some of the British soldiers travelling by the Ferozepore train."

A. Yes.

Q. You have no personal knowledge of these facts? I mean that you learnt it from somebody else?

A. I understand it. My submission is after extinguishing the fire at the railway station, I and some of the gentlemen went towards the Patti side. The Tahsildar told me that the fire had been extinguished and asked me to run up towards that side. Then we three or four went there. There we saw that the Patti train had emptied out away from the station and the Sub-Inspector of the Railway Police and some of his constables were coming from that train. The whole train was passed by us and we saw that some of the zamindars also like spectators wanted to know what was the matter. They also were running towards that side where the mob was going, i.e., towards the bridge. That I saw myself. So I said they grew in number.

Q. What I want to make clear is that you have no personal knowledge that there was firing?

A. I did not see it myself.

Q. Therefore that leaves a wrong impression. It is not clear from your statement, as to whether this firing did take place according to your information at the station or whether it took place where the train was. As regards the firing to which you refer, you have no personal knowledge. Still you persisted in answer to the question put by the President that you were right. I want to know as to whether you mean to convey by this that your information was that this firing did take place when the train was near the distant signal or whether it did take place at the station.

A. I think it refers to the railway station.

Q. Therefore you do not mean to insinuate that any firing did take place at the time when the train was stationary near the distant signal?

A. I am not certain about that.

By Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan—

Q. I have a few questions to ask. I am sorry to trouble you. You said that you were afraid of giving evidence, because you might be compelled to tell the truth under cross-examination. Do you mean to imply by this that if you are not cross-examined, you will not be telling the truth?

A. No, what you refer to is the ordinary thing. I talked to Mr. Marsden about it.

Q. You said you were afraid of giving evidence, because you might have to speak the truth when being cross-examined?

A. That I did not say. Of course I shall have to speak the truth. Such questions as Your Lordship just wanted to know about might be unpalatable to somebody.

Q. You mean to say that in cross-examination you might be asked about certain facts which you do not wish to disclose, because they may not be liked by somebody?

A. Yes. But I do not mean that in my examination in chief I will tell a lie. I will have to speak the truth always.

Q. Why should you be afraid of telling the truth in any case when you are asked about facts? Why should you not state them?

A. I have stated them. I have not done any harm to Your Lordship by giving out my mind to you. You have not got any experience of this province. I do not know what is the matter with your province, but here we cannot displease our officers, excuse me.

Q. You cannot, because you are afraid some harm might come to you and that is why you do not wish to displease your officers?

A. If the things are unpalatable to them.

Q. So may I take it that this is because there is some sort of fear at the back of your mind that the officials will use their power in an irresponsible manner towards you? Is that the idea?

A. Yes, Sir; because I had experience of that also with Mr. Fyson.

Q. I want to know what this is.

A. What I am submitting is based on my personal knowledge. Once a meeting was held here on the 9th March to request the Government of India to postpone the passing of the Rowlatt Bill. That was presided over by the Hon'ble Fazl-i-Hussain. I was a chance visitor there. Mr. Duni Chand and Mr. Ghulam Mohi-ud-din asked me to second the resolution. The resolution was that we should request His Excellency to postpone the passing of that Act for some months, because we had been rendering war services and when the people do not like a bill, it should not be thrust upon them. That was my maiden attendance at a political meeting and my maiden speech. I made the speech; I do not deny that. I saw Mr. Fyson on the 29th March here. When he came to know of that, he expressed his displeasure about that meeting and about my speech at that meeting.

Q. Very well, perhaps he did not like it, perhaps he thought you were not very wise in doing it? Why should that be a reason for not stating the truth?

A. I have submitted that I am speaking the truth. I simply suggest, just as I told Mr. Marsden, that I should be excused. He wanted my statement and in obedience to his wishes, I have sent my statement. Your Lordship wanted to ask some questions about recruiting. I did not want to say anything as some gentleman might not like that. That was the only thing.

Q. What I do not understand is, because a certain thing is unpleasant to the officials, why should that be a reason for you to desist from speaking the truth? Are you afraid of their using their power against you?

A. They might; I cannot say.

Q. They might use it improperly. Is that your idea?

A. The thing is very plain. I think it is a common psychology of mind. Suppose Your Lordship is displeased with me for anything which you do not like and you are a man in authority and I am a subordinate, you can, if you like, make use of your authority in that way.

Q. I shall be influenced by my displeasure in the use of my authority?

A. You might be influenced. I do not say they would certainly use the powers in that way. Now I have not displeased Your Lordships. I have obeyed you and I have given you the true facts that I know and believe.

Q. According to you officers are dreaded because they might use their powers improperly?

A. It is human nature. I do not mean that all officers are like that.

By the Hon'ble Mr. W. F. Rice—

Q. You have told us that you people of Kasur at first abstained from the hartal and the general movement, because you knew that the officials disapprove of the hartal?

A. Yes.

Q. When you look back now on the riot, murder and incendiarism which the Kasur mob committed on the 12th April, do you now think that perhaps the officials were right in deprecating the hartal?

A. That is accidental: it was not contemplated by anybody. These murders and all these things were accidental: by chance they were unfortunate things. They were not deliberate things. Of course if the officials thought that such things might happen, then of course they were justified.

Q. You have told us at that time that the people had many grievances, economic and political, against the Government. Is that not right?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you think that when the people were in that discontented condition it was prudent of you, the educated classes of Kasur, to indulge in political agitation and excitement further?

A. We did not indulge in fact. We stopped from indulging; realising this thing, we did not indulge.

By Mr. Abdul Kadir, Assistant Government Advocate—

Q. I understood you to say in connection with that matter of people being sent up under sections 107 and 110 of the Criminal Procedure Code, that all you had to go upon was that some officials—the local civil officials and the police officials—held a consultation and after that you saw a large number of persons being sent up under those sections?

A. That is my experience.

Q. That is all that you had to go upon when you made this statement this morning to the Committee that some Sub-Inspectors were asked to send Jats up under section 107. What I ask you is that that was all you had to go upon, that a consultation had been held after which you began to see a large number of Jats being sent up. There was nothing more direct than that?

A. Not only that; when the *chalan*s were placed . . .

Q. Please answer my question whether there was anything more direct than that so far as your information is concerned. For instance, have you ever seen any written order to that effect to any Sub-Inspector?

A. I did not see any written order. I have heard about that.

Q. There was no written order that you ever saw to that effect. Did you ever hear of any verbal order by any officer superior to a Sub-Inspector to the effect that he may send up young Jats under section 107, simply because they are young Jats fit for recruiting and not badmashes?

A. My submission is that when the chalan was . . .

Q. I will come to *chalan*s. I have got something to ask about your personal experience of the *chalan*s. My question is a very simple and straight one. . . .

A. I have seen that. I was present at the time. But I have not seen any order. It is not my business. I have told you my experience.

Q. You stated this morning that Sub-Inspectors were asked to send Jats. If you can modify that statement, then some of these questions will disappear and there will be no necessity to bother you. Do you say that they were actually asked?

A. They were not asked in my presence. That I have never said.

Q. Then that is what you infer?

A. From their practice.

Q. Now you also said by way of illustration that second class Magistrates whose powers are only to sentence up to six months' imprisonment, when any cases were brought before them, said that they would punish them heavily up to seven years or so. Can you name any Magistrate of the second class who did so or did any such thing in your presence—That is what you said by way of illustration. Please note "by a Magistrate of the second class" and not by a first class Magistrate. Did any Magistrate of the second class say within your hearing that he would inflict any such punishment?

A. Not exactly seven years.

Q. Anything more than his powers?

A. Yes: nearly all our Bench of Honorary Magistrates also sometimes said so and also our Tahsildar.

Q. In your hearing?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you name the Tahsildar? After all we know who the Tahsildar is. Will you name him?

A. Tala Khan Chand is the Tahsildar.

Q. Did any second class Magistrate say within your hearing that he would punish more severely than he was empowered?

A. They said that it was better for them to join the army; otherwise they would be severely punished. What was the good for them in going to jail for two years. It was better to go to the army. Honorary Magistrates also said that.

6 December 1919.]

SARDAR AMAR SINGH.

[Concluded.]

Q. You said something further which I do not think was made note of and that is that sometimes pleaders also said to the accused persons "better accept this; it is better to join the army." Did you do that at any time to any accused you were dealing with?

A. I asked a number of my clients to join the army.

Q. You advised them that it was better to elect to go to the army rather than suffer imprisonment or be bound down for some term of security?

A. I told them there was no harm and they would be serving our King and country.

Q. You persuaded them?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you think you were helping them and doing your duty towards your client when you were saying so or was it simply to please any particular official that you did that?

A. The Magistrates asked them to go to the army and I told them it was better.

Q. Were you doing your duty?

A. I had my duty towards the Government, not only to my client. So I used to do that.

Q. I am just confining myself to what you considered to be the best for your client under those circumstances. I want to know whether you gave him that advice as you thought it was best for him under the circumstances, or simply were you mindful of your duty to Government?

A. I think if all of us volunteered our services willingly, there was no harm.

Q. That is a different matter. You are a lawyer and you know what my question is?

A. But I do not understand the force of your question.

Q. It does not matter about the force. You understand the question; give me the answer.

A. I have given you the answer already that we pleaders used to tell our clients that it was better for them to join the army and serve the Government.

Q. Now, when you did that, you did not think you were doing anything wrong?

A. When it was wished by Government, I was right.

By the President—

Q. Apart from the wish of the Government, did you, as a pleader, consider that there was anything wrong in advising the client to offer his services to the country by recruiting himself rather than undergo the sentence?

A. My Lord, there was nothing wrong in my asking them.

By Mr. Abdul Kadir, Assistant Government Advocate—

Q. You think there was nothing wrong.

A. Yes; I never took the lead.

PART II

Written Statements of Witnesses, Lahore

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON, D.S.O., Royal Sussex Regiment, late Commanding, Lahore (Civil) Area.

Letter from Lieutenant-Colonel Frank Johnson, D.S.O., Royal Sussex Regiment, late Commanding Lahore (Civil) Area, to the Adjutant-General in India, dated Simla, 30th July 1919.

In accordance with your verbal orders of 15th instant, I have the honour to submit a report on the recent disturbances in Lahore and more particularly on the administration of Martial Law in the area under my command from the 15th April 1919, when Martial Law was proclaimed, until 29th May when I was relieved on being ordered on service. Martial Law was withdrawn on 12th June, and between that date and 29th May nothing occurred and no action was taken calling for comment.

2. I have divided the report into three sections, viz. :—

1st Section.—The events that led up to the introduction of Martial Law.

2nd Section.—The period under Martial Law.

3rd Section.—General.

3. The area covered by this report is known as the "Lahore (Civil) Area" and may be described as that lying between the Ravi River and the Bari Doab Canal, within a radius of 3 miles from the Central Telegraph Office and includes the City, the Fort, the Civil Station, Moghulpura Railway Works, or in a word, the whole of Lahore less only the Military Cantonments east of the canal.

4. The population of this area is estimated at 230,000 divided approximately as under :—

Europeans, exclusive of Troops	5,800
Muhammadans	129,500
Hindus	78,000
Sikhs	13,000
Indian Christians, etc.	9,500
TOTAL INDIANS	230,000

5. At the outbreak of the disturbances the forces available for the maintenance of order were approximately as follows, viz. :—

Punjab Police (armed)	230
Railway Police (armed)	160
		440
British Infantry in Fort	120
Royal Garrison Artillery	25
		145
		585

There were in addition about 800 unarmed police and possibly 300 Indian Defence Force, while 4 miles away at Lahore Cantonment were stationed most of the 43rd Infantry Brigade and some Divisional troops.

Section I.—Events leading up to the Introduction of Martial Law.

6. Although the state of affairs in the Lahore (Civil) Area at any time between 6th and 15th April was such as to justify the introduction of Martial Law, the overwhelming necessity for its proclamation is only apparent when the disturbed condition of India in general and the Punjab in particular is considered.

7. In Appendix I* will be found a brief chronological summary of the signs of unrest, acts of violence and outrages, ever growing in number and gravity, which lead me to feel confident we were up against not a mere local agitation or ever general political unrest based on an unpopular measure, such as the "Rowlatt Acts," but that we had to face a widespread, carefully organized National and therefore anti-British rising.

8. This summary, although possibly not complete, discloses the striking fact that these outbreaks and outrages increased with intensity throughout the first half of April, till they assumed the form of an undisguised rebellion and the waging of war and then, on the introduction of Martial Law, rapidly died away. This fact will be more clearly realized by a study of the "graph" given in Appendix II†

9. It may be noted here that in the Lahore (Civil) Area the only bloodshed that took place occurred before Martial Law was proclaimed and that thereafter not a shot was fired nor any violence used. I believe that this is typical of the experience of other districts placed under Martial Law.

10. In the Lahore (Civil) Area conditions had been more or less normal until Sunday, 6th April, a day that had been set apart for demonstration throughout India against the "Rowlatt Acts." On this occasion additional troops had been drafted into the Fort and some cavalry sent in from the Cantonments to assist the Police. No actual collisions took place between the mobs and the Police—at any rate no shots were fired.

11. At 10-00 hours on 10th April, Drs. Kitchlew and Satyapal, leaders of the seditionist movement at Amritsar, were arrested and deported, an event that at once led to a crowd, five or six thousand strong, emerging from the City of Amritsar, armed with lathis and stones, to attack the Civil Station. In anticipation of trouble, the few troops available had been placed as picquets to protect the Civil Station and Railway. Although denied entrance into the Civil Station and Railway Station the crowd reached the goods sheds, which they burnt to the ground, killing a European guard.

The principal European Banks were pillaged and their Managers brutally murdered. In all five Europeans were murdered, two injured (including one lady who was nearly beaten to death), the Telegraph office was destroyed and damage by fire and looting estimated to exceed 36 lakhs carried out. Detachments of the Royal Sussex and an Indian Regiment arrived at Amritsar from Lahore during the evening and order was temporarily restored.

12. Information as to these events in Amritsar was received in Lahore at about 15-00 hours and orders reached troops in Cantonment at 17-15 hours.

The first 150 men available of the 2-6th Battalion, Royal Sussex, at Lahore Cantonment having been despatched to Amritsar, other detachments, as fast as they could be collected, were sent into Lahore (Civil) Station by Royal Air Force lorries. The Central Telegraph office was occupied by a strong detachment at 18-35 hours, another detachment reaching the Montgomery Hall (Gymkhana Club) at 18-55. European hotels and Government House were all under protection of British troops by 19-30 hours and a detachment of 17th Cavalry reached the Mall about 19-15 hours.

13. At about 16-00 apparently the news of the Amritsar proceedings reached Lahore City. Crowds immediately gathered and concentrated near Lahori Gate, whence a mob of about 6,000 or 7,000 emerged at about

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON.

18-40 hours and passing down the Anarkali Bazar, gathering strength as they proceeded, made for the Central Telegraph office.

14. The sight of 40 British soldiers with fixed bayonets in possession of the Telegraph office appears to have caused the crowd to change its plan, as, after a little hesitation, it passed on down the Mall with the declared intention of getting to Government House. I have recently learned on the authority of one of the leaders of this mob, who escaped conviction at a Special Tribunal, that the object of that crowd was "only to insult, not murder Europeans." For such a mob of Indians to insult a Briton is but the equivalent for his murder, as such action must obviously lead to forcible resentment, which in turn would mean the beating to death of the European. The small detachment of Police collected to bar their way was pressed back and it was at this critical point that the Deputy Commissioner, Mr. Fyson, and the Deputy Inspector-General, Criminal Investigation Department, Mr. G. A. Cocks, came on the scene and, realizing that less than half-a-mile further on over 100 ladies and children would be at the Gymkhana Club, ordered the Police to open fire.

This action inflicted casualties amounting to one killed and five wounded, checked the mob and enabled the Police, now reinforced, to drive it back towards the City.

15. I think there can be no two opinions that the action of Messrs. Fyson and Cocks saved Lahore that night from scenes of outrage and murder, compared to which those at Amritsar would almost have paled into insignificance.

16. Later on that night at about 22-00 hours the Police in the Anarkali Bazar, after being heavily stoned, were compelled to fire on the crowd whose casualties on that occasion amounted to one killed and five wounded. During this night owing to the seething excitement and hostile attitude of the population in the city it was thought desirable to withdraw all police from their numerous stations within the city—which was thus left in the hands of uncontrolled mobs. Personally I consider this action entirely justified by the situation.

17. In the meantime, during the night of 10th-11th April, strong detachments of Indian troops had been posted at the Pumping Station, Reservoir, Power Station, Central Jail, Ravi Railway Bridge and the Headquarters of 43rd Brigade moved into Lahore.

18. It was doubtless owing to these precautions that no outbreaks occurred in Lahore on the next day, 11th, although in the City, still uncontrolled by the Police, many meetings were held besides those in the great Badshahi Masjid, at which Muhammadans and Hindus fraternized. These meetings of the two races in the mosque, at which sedition and rebellion were openly preached, were, I think rightly, regarded as one of the most serious factors in the situation and as adding largely to the gravity of the military situation.

19. On 12th April it was decided at all costs to re-establish control of the City. Accordingly at 09-30 hours I arrived at Delhi Gate in command of a column of Cavalry, British and Indian Troops and Police—about 800 all ranks.

That we succeeded in forcing a passage through angry and excited crowds with such little bloodshed I believe to be due to the excellent co-operation of the Royal Air Force with four aeroplanes, which, as arranged, were to bomb the route in advance of the column on a given signal being made. I informed the leaders of the crowd at the entrance of the city that should a bomb be thrown or a shot fired at the troops, the aeroplanes would clear the route for the column by bombs. I then halted for some minutes to enable this fact to be made known to the crowd.

20. During the march through the city and excited crowd emerging from the Badshahi Masjid managed to surround the rear guard which was attacked by sticks and stones, whilst bricks were thrown from the roofs of houses. To reduce the pressure and clear the mob I had to order the Police to fire a few rounds, less than 20, which resulted in the death of 1 and the wounding of 3 or 4 men among the crowd, which at once fell back. Posts were established at 3 points in the city, garrisoned by detachments of British and Indian Troops and armed Police.

21. On 13th April a very large meeting was held in Amritsar in defiance of orders, issued, I believe, under the Defence of India Regulations. A small party of Indian troops broke up this meeting by fire, inflicting severe casualties among the crowd. It is only fair to record my opinion that this incident had a far-reaching effect on the seditionists and agitators in Lahore and was probably no small factor in enabling me, as subsequently shown, to re-establish and maintain order in the area under my command without further bloodshed.

22. On the 13th and 14th April no further actual disturbances took place, but the leaders of the people apparently devoted their attention to perfecting the hartal or strike, which was paralyzing life and industry in Lahore, holding up all means of locomotion and threatening to close down the all important railway workshops at Moghulpura.

23. This was the position in Lahore on the night of 14th-15th April, when the Government of India authorized the introduction of Martial Law, but the military situation in Lahore itself can only be properly appreciated by a study of the events that were taking place in other parts of the Punjab, a resumé of which, as previously stated, is given in Appendix No. I.

Section 2.—The Period under Martial Law.

24. At 06-00 hours on Tuesday, 15th April, the Headquarters of 43rd Brigade and all Cavalry were withdrawn to Lahore Cantonment, and the separate military area referred to in paragraph 3 was created and placed under my command.

25. The troops and the police at my disposal at that time consisted of the following:—

	All ranks.
Armoured Cars . . . . .	3
Royal Garrison Artillery (in the Fort) . . . . .	19

26. On the declaration of Martial Law becoming known about 10 A.M. on 15th April, the following officers, then in Lahore on leave or duty, at once reported themselves for duty, viz.:—

Major (now Lieutenant-Colonel) Lindsay Smith	Supply and Transport Corps.
Major Barnes, XIX-Punjabis	Divisional Recruiting Officer.
Major D. Vanrenen	Army Remount Department.
Captain Rigby	3rd Punjab Light Horse.
Captain DeBrath	Indian Cavalry.

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON.

Lieutenant Steward . . . 22nd Punjabis.
 Lieutenant E. Dunn . . . Ditto.
 2nd-Lieutenant Burroughs . . . 2-35th Sikhs.
 2nd-Lieutenant Stanley . . . late 76th Punjabis.

These officers, with Captain C. F. Johnson, Adjutant, 2-6th Battalion, Royal Sussex Regiment, and several civilians who volunteered most valuable assistance, formed my staff during the administration of Martial Law. Subsequently Lieutenants W. Groom and D. Bacon, 42nd Deolis, were also attached to the staff of the Area.

It is impossible to over-estimate my indebtedness to these officers for the tact, energy and initiative which they displayed under circumstances that were as difficult as they were novel.

27. At 11-00 hours, I issued the first notice to the public announcing, inter alia, the introduction of Martial Law, the boundaries of the new military area, and my appointment to command troops and administer Martial Law in that area. This notice—which was issued hurriedly and might have been better drawn up—contained Martial Law Orders—

- (a) prohibiting all persons, other than Europeans or persons in possession of a permit, from being in the streets between 20-00 and 05-00 hours;
- (b) prohibiting processions or gatherings of more than 10 persons;
- (c) a warning that drastic reprisals would be taken in the event of a bomb being thrown or a shot fired at either troops or police;
- (d) prohibiting any interference with persons desirous of opening shops or proceeding to work;
- (e) requisitioning all tongas and tum-tums;
- (f) requisitioning all motor vehicles.

28. All Martial Law Orders and Notices issued by me are shown in Appendix IV,* and it will probably be convenient if I now refer to them in the order issued giving reasons for their imposition and a brief statement as to their effect.

29. The order referred to in paragraph 27 (a) was, I think, one of the most important ones made. I had two objects in issuing it, viz. :—

- (a) By keeping the Indian population indoors during the night to reduce the strain in the matter of patrols and picquets on troops and police and to better insure the protection of the European population in the Civil Station.
- (b) To give the Indian population a lesson in discipline, and to bring home to them the meaning and power of Martial Law—action that I thought only fair in view of my determination to put a stop to the strike at an early date.

The effect of this order was excellent and so well was it obeyed that during the 7 weeks it remained in force out of a population of nearly a quarter of a million, only 95 persons were charged with disobeying it. Of these, 29 were acquitted, either because the offence had been committed within say 20 minutes of the prohibited hour or because the accused had arrived from a distant place and was clearly ignorant of the order.

Not only did this order effect its intended purposes but it had a result I had not foreseen, and one which gave no little satisfaction to the people, viz., it automatically put a stop to all house-breaking and thefts, formerly of frequent occurrence.

During these prohibited hours the streets were constantly patrolled by troops and police stationed in the city and I was thus assured of receiving ample notice should any illegal gathering be attempted during the nights.

Some 2 weeks later, a certain excitement was caused by agitators spreading the report that, as a consequence of this order, women unable to procure doctor or nurse, were dying in child birth. Although I had invariably issued "night passes" for those purposes when they were applied for, I immediately took steps to make public the fact that any person in whose house a birth was anticipated in the immediate future, could, on application, obtain the 3 necessary passes for himself, doctor and nurse. Subsequently I found it necessary to let it be known that I should require explanations from any person who, obtaining passes on this ground, failed to register a birth within 14 days—a hint which effectually reduced the rush for these passes.

30. The order referred to in paragraph 27 (b) was obviously necessary and was well obeyed by the people, only 31 persons being charged with its contravention. Permits allowing funeral processions, but limited in numbers, were granted from the first, and, as soon as the situation showed itself to be within hand, permits both for these and wedding processions were freely issued. To prevent an authorized funeral procession of say 100 persons, being swollen to perhaps 1,000 I declined to allow hands to accompany any such processions in the streets, although towards the end of the period they were permitted to play in compounds.

31. I venture to lay considerable stress on the importance of the warning referred to in paragraph 27 (c). Later on during that day—15th April—at a meeting I had with some 80 of the leading inhabitants of the City, I explained with great care and earnestness the nature of the reprisal I had decided on in the event of bombs being thrown or troops fired on in the narrow streets of the City. I told them that the spot, where a bomb exploded or a soldier or policeman fell as a result of a shot, would become the centre of a circle having a diameter of 100 yards; that one hour would be allowed in which to remove all living things—but no goods, jewellery, clothing, etc., from the buildings involved within such circle, and that, at the end of the hour, I should proceed with, and continue until I had completed, the total demolition of every building—other than mosques or temples within the circle. I added that I hoped the Government would have the open spaces thus created preserved for ever as a warning against offering violence to His Majesty's troops or police. I may add that I had made all arrangements for, and had every intention of, carrying out such a reprisal. I instructed those present at the meeting in question to announce my intention immediately to all house-holders in their respective wards of the City.

I have referred to this matter in some detail because I have every reason to believe that its deterrent effect cannot be over-estimated and that it was at least one of the principal factors in preventing bloodshed and maintaining peace in the area. A house-holder may contemplate, unmoved, the presence of a bomb-throwing fanatic on the roof of his own or an adjacent house, knowing full well that the authorities have first to catch the criminal before the latter can be hanged or shot. The situation, however, becomes entirely changed when he realizes that his house and all he possesses in it will inevitably become a heap of rubbish and dust if any outrage takes place within 50 yards of it. From being a mere disinterested spectator, rather hoping for the excitement of a tamasha in his vicinity, he is converted into an active policeman as regards his own house and a keen detective in respect of the doings of his neighbours within a radius of 50 yards.

I commend to officers, who may be called on to administer Martial Law, this cold-blooded determination to destroy all property within a given distance from the scene of an outrage as being as effective as it is humane—much more so indeed than the threat to bombard a town by artillery or aeroplane, when the house-holder thinks that, after all, the chances are that his house will be missed.

32. The prohibition of interference with persons desirous of opening their shops, or proceeding to their work—vide paragraph 27 (d)—was not, at the time, very effective. The people had not then grasped the protection afforded them under Martial Law nor had it been made an offence under Martial Law to refuse to trade or work. "Picquets" from the class of men referred to in paragraph 36 threatened immediate violence to those anxious to back out of the hartal and that was generally sufficient to gain their end.

33. Under Martial Law Order No. 2 I commandeered all tongas and tum-tums, the owners and drivers of which were taking part in the hartal or strike, rendering transport a matter of great difficulty. My objects in taking this action were as follows:—

- (a) It was a first step towards carrying out my intention of breaking up the hartal as soon as possible.
- (b) It provided me with sufficient vehicles with which to organize the collection and removal to rallying posts of women and children in the Civil station in case they were again in danger. At that time there were about 2,000 European women and children in the area.
- (c) It provided the necessary military transport besides ensuring transit facilities for residents and travellers in Lahore.

For the purposes of a "park" for these vehicles I took possession of the Punjab Light Horse drill ground.

The order to report was obeyed with alacrity—over 800 tongas and tum-tums being registered. 300, subsequently reduced to 200, tongas were retained for military service; horses and drivers receiving free rations and the latter being paid eight annas per diem.

All tum-tums and the balance of the tongas were then given a certificate of "exemption from military service" and released on condition that they plied for hire as before the hartal, reporting to the Police twice daily.

The combination of fear of the consequences of disobeying any order under Martial Law together with a desire to break away from the strike leaders and earn money, were so strong that no single instance occurred of a driver or owner taking his vehicle off the road during the continuance of Martial Law.

34. Under Martial Law Order No. 3 all motor cars had to be surrendered for military service, but in cases in which I was satisfied that cars were essential to the business or profession of a European they were at once released and an "exemption certificate" issued. I refrained from granting exemption in the case of Indians resident in Lahore as I thought it desirable to bring home to them all—loyal and disloyal alike—some of the inconveniences of Martial Law, in the hope and belief that in the future, the weight of their influence will be whole-heartedly thrown against seditious movements likely to lead to the introduction of Martial Law.

My object in taking possession of all available motor cars were as follows:—

- (a) To prevent agitators either escaping from Lahore or getting into the country to spread sedition or from communicating with leaders in other districts.
- (b) To provide means of rapid conveyance for military and police officers, civilians in charge of women and children in different wards, telephone and telegraph employees engaged in repairing out wires, etc. For these purposes 23 cars were retained in the Civil Area for varying periods.
- (c) To provide the Divisional Commander with a means of rapidly moving small bodies of troops to scenes of disorder in outlying parts of the Divisional Area. For this purpose 87 cars were sent to Lahore Cantonment.

All motor vehicles were finally returned to their owners, subsequent to my relief, but I regret to learn that no little dissatisfaction is expressed by some owners as to the insufficiency of the compensation received.

I would suggest that the principles involved in the "commandeering" of "returnable" as distinct from "expendable" goods should receive early consideration and that those decided on be clearly laid down for the guidance of officers in the future.

35. On the afternoon of 15th April, after consultation with the Civil Railway and Government authorities, I issued Martial Law Order No. 4 prohibiting, with certain exceptions, the issue of 3rd class tickets from railway stations within the Civil Area. The objects of this order were as follows:—

- (a) To place every difficulty in the way of agitators leaving Lahore for outside districts. With the practical cessation of 3rd class traffic, the Railway Police and the Criminal Investigation Department, were able to maintain an effective surveillance over Indians travelling by superior classes.
- (b) To relieve the difficulty of working the Railways which was becoming serious owing to the numerous outrages—destruction of bridges, stations, telegraph lines, etc.—necessitating a reduction of the train service and the stoppage for some time of all night running.

A certain number of suspicious characters succeeded in evading this order and defeating (a) by walking to stations outside the area. This, however, was speedily remedied by the General Officer Commanding the surrounding districts applying the same order to his area.

36. Martial Law Order No. 5 was also issued on the 15th April. The hartal or strike had led to the complete closing of shops, causing a serious rise in prices particularly of foodstuffs, whilst the cessation of work naturally affected the earning power of the poorer classes. The wealthy sympathisers of the strike—and therefore with the seditious agitation—had hit on a rather ingenious way of turning this situation to account. Under the guise of charity, they provided funds for the opening of special shops known as langars for the free distribution of cooked food to the poor. The results were obvious: the recipients of this bounty naturally considered that a state of things in which they received free food was preferable to the old order under which they had to work for it, and so became whole-hearted supporters of the strike, forming a body of men always at the disposal of the "political leaders" for the purpose of threatening or committing violence against those who desired to end the strike and resume their work or business.

On satisfying myself of this state of things I at once took steps to close these langars with the result that, though in certain quarters capital was attempted to be made out of my action as interfering with "charitable" efforts to relieve the suffering poor, it produced a state of mind—and possibly stomach—among the masses of the poorer and most easily misled people, that greatly facilitated the complete breaking up of the hartal, which I had determined to effect a few days later at all costs.

37. Martial Order No. 6 issued on 16th April, prohibited the underlings of legal practitioners from leaving Lahore. Information was laid before me that this class of person—the jackal of the vakil or pleader—was particularly active in assisting the spread of sedition and I thought it desirable to prevent his travel by rail as a second or intermediate class passenger. The names of about 300 of these people were submitted to me by their employers in accordance with the order. To make sure none had been omitted I threw the onus on a committee of leading legal practitioners to check the list, work which was most conscientiously carried out by the gentlemen whom I selected.

As to results, it is obviously not possible to produce direct evidence in the case of this and several orders, which will be referred to later, but I submit that it is justifiable to conclude that the preservation of peace and order in Lahore itself and the rapidly improving condition of other districts in the Punjab may be directly connected with these orders, which undoubtedly limited the activities of the persons against whom they were directed.

38. Martial Law Order No. 7 promulgated on 16th April, was the first of several which I deemed it necessary to issue with a view to restricting the seditious activities of the students of some of the colleges of which there were no less than 11 in Lahore with a personnel, including teaching staff, of about 5,030.

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON.

I may here state frankly that although the military situation that might, at any moment have been created by these Colleges, caused me but little worry, I viewed with grave anxiety the ultimate effect on Northern India if its educated youth, the future leaders of the people, are to be allowed to spend the most receptive period of their lives in such a seditious and anti-European atmosphere as undoubtedly existed in most of these Colleges. I came across some particularly sad instances in which were involved sons, whose fathers had fought for the Empire, were pensioners of the State and whose loyalty was beyond question; but for the evil influence found in these Colleges these boys would doubtless have grown up retaining untarnished the loyalty they had inherited from their fathers.

If I had any reason to doubt the volume of evidence laid before me by all sorts of people as to the state of affairs in some of these Colleges, it was removed by the number of threatening letters addressed to me daily by declared, but anonymous students, most of them couched in terms of disgusting obscenity.

The constant attendance at roll calls involved in the Martial Law Orders referred to, whilst restricting the seditious activities of the personnel of the Colleges concerned, was adversely affecting the work of the students for approaching University examinations. At the request of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, therefore, I convened a meeting of all Principals of Colleges—at which were also present the Hon'ble Mr. H. J. Maynard, C.S.I., Vice-Chancellor of the University and the Hon'ble Mr. J. A. Richey, Director of Public Instruction. I informed the Principals that I regarded the system of roll calls as a temporary measure designed to keep the students out of mischief and not as a punishment for their past conduct, which latter I considered should be undertaken by them. I added that failing the infliction of suitable punishments within seven days I should close the Colleges and order each student to proceed to his home and remain there. Schedules of proposed penalties were duly submitted to me, but some were so totally inadequate and displayed such a complete lack of appreciation by Principals of the seriousness of the conduct of their students that I had to send them back for revision.

Martial Law Order No. 36 of 5th May, No. 44 of 12th May, and No. 46 of 13th May, show in detail the penalties agreed to by me as, being while very merciful, sufficiently serious to restrain future generations of students from being misled into disloyal actions.

The punishments inflicted on 1,011 students by the Principals of the various Colleges are shown in detail in Appendix No. III.

On the publication of the orders setting forth these penalties I cancelled all restrictions imposed on the Colleges under previous Martial Law Orders.

It is difficult to suggest a remedy for a state of affairs that seemed to me to outweigh in gravity anything else I noticed during the period under review, but I submit the following points for consideration—

- (1) The formation of smaller classes.
- (2) An increase in the European teaching staff.
- (3) A notification that any College in which seditious or anti-European propaganda is allowed or is found to exist, shall be debarred from entering its students for University examinations for a term of years.

As regards the disciplinary action taken against the students of the D. A.-V College and referred to Martial Law Order No. 7 and to some similar measures subsequently taken in connection with other Colleges, I adopted the method of compulsory attendances at roll calls in preference to either (a) closing the College, or

(b) prosecuting individual students. In the case of (a) the students would either have hung about Lahore, with the risk usually associated with idleness, or have scattered to their homes, posing as martyrs and spreading sedition, besides which they would have been deprived of the benefit of a few weeks' experience of such discipline as I hoped to be able to give them under Martial Law. My difficulty as to adopting (b) was that the limited amount of corporal punishment I could inflict would be totally inadequate for conviction on a charge of spreading sedition, whilst I naturally hesitated to attach the life-long stigma of gaol to misguided youths. The plan of frequent attendance at roll-calls put an effectual stop to any attempt by students to create trouble in adjacent villages or to leave Lahore without permission.

39. Martial Law Orders Nos. 8 and 9 issued on 16th April, were intended to deal with a trouble that became apparent during the night of 15th-16th April, viz., the impossibility, with the limited force at my command, of protecting Martial Law Notices posted in public places in the City. They had been torn down or defaced in numbers. A reference to second part of paragraph 1 of Martial Law Notice No. 1 will show that my first intention was to make known to the people verbally through their representatives (whom the Police had selected from each ward) what orders had to be obeyed by them. In twenty-four hours I found this scheme would not work, as, whilst the representatives swore they had told every person in their ward of an order, persons, when charged with a breach of such order, denied all knowledge of it and could not be convicted. By throwing the onus of displaying and maintaining Martial Law Orders on the owners of houses, the troops and police were saved much work, while the publication in Martial Law Order No. 9 of a selected list of persons residing in various parts of the area who would display these orders, denied a person charged with a breach of orders the excuse that he was unable to ascertain their nature. The persons whose names appear in Martial Law Order No. 9 were not necessarily selected on account of their known loyalty.

The effect of these arrangements was entirely satisfactory, so much so, in fact, that, with the exception of the Sanatan Dharam College, referred to in Martial Law Order No. 13, only 5 persons were subsequently charged with tearing down orders, whilst no accused person pleaded ignorance of the order under which he was charged.

40. On evening of 16th April I felt sufficiently sure of the situation to take the next step in breaking up the hartal, the continuance of which was obviously a constant menace to peace and order. Martial Law Order No. 10 was therefore issued designed to crush the strike in the limited area of the Anarkali Bazar, for which purpose I considered I had sufficient troops available to ensure the order being obeyed. It will be noticed that the order in question goes much further than the mere opening of shops, and by insisting on every individual carrying on his normal work, struck at the root of passive resistance, with which I had been openly threatened.

In order to be perfectly fair and to prevent any possibility of misunderstanding I took steps to let the people living in Anarkali Bazar know precisely how I proposed to deal with the situation should they fail to obey the order, viz., that I should occupy every street in the area mentioned with a strong force of troops and police and proceed to burst open each shop, placing British soldiers in them to protect the owners and to prevent looting or theft. If, however, the owner was not present, or being present, refused to sell goods required by legitimate customers, the soldiers would be empowered to supply the articles required but not to accept money on behalf of the disobedient owner.

The effect of this order was seen early on the morning of the 17th April when all shops reopened work and business was resumed in the Anarkali Bazar and in addition a good many shops in the City itself reopened.

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON.

In view of the successful application of this order in the Anarkali district I felt justified in the afternoon of 17th April in issuing Martial Law Order No. 14 requiring by 10-00 hours on the following day the complete cessation of the kartal and the resumption of business and work throughout the entire area under my command. This order was universally carried out soon after daylight without waiting for the appointed hour.

The effect of this action was strikingly illustrated at the Moghulpura Railway Works, as the following figures will show:—

Approximate total number of workmen on rolls	11,892
Approximate average total number of work men employed under normal conditions	10,089
Approximate number to which workers were reduced on 16th April	3,920
Approximate number of workers on duty on 19th April	10,484

41. On 16th April I issued Martial Law Order No. 11 prohibiting the carrying of lathis.

I was aware that large numbers of these weapons were possessed by men in the City, and, whilst I did not feel justified in ordering a house-to-house search for them, I considered the refusal to allow them to be carried in the streets not only removed the temptation to use them, but added to the chance of preserving peace and preventing any regrettable incident.

The effect of the order was excellent and there was but one case of a man being charged with its contravention.

Representations were, however, made to me by several influential Indians who commented respectfully on the fact that, while in Lahore no one was allowed to carry a stick, in Delhi apparently, mobs numbering thousands were permitted to demonstrate with lathis before or in the vicinity of the Chief Commissioner.

42. Martial Law Order No. 12, was also issued on 17th April. Many students and truculent persons had a habit, I found, of so walking abreast as to monopolize the entire side walk or pavement, a course of action, that, when persisted in on meeting a European, was certain to lead to a breach of the peace, hence the issue of the order, which was readily obeyed.

43. The partial destruction of a Martial Law Order exhibited on the walls of the Sanatan Dharam College, during the night of 16th-17th April, gave me an opportunity of bringing home to all concerned the power of Martial Law. Instead of conducting an enquiry and endeavouring to trace the individual offender, I adopted the course of sending troops and police to arrest all male persons found in the premises belonging to the College and interning them in the Fort. On the following day having received a personal undertaking from the Principal of the College that no further breach of Martial Law Orders should occur at the Sanatan Dharam College, I released the interned personnel of the College, after payment of the cost of the rations they had consumed. Martial Law Order No. 13, was issued in this connection and I feel confident that the action taken had a beneficial effect on the situation.

44. Martial Law order No. 15 was issued on 18th April, and was necessary owing to the mass of false, inaccurate and exaggerated reports or rumours that I found in circulation, all doubtless started by the seditious leaders with a view of stirring up the people against Martial Law instead of welcoming it—as they were already showing signs of doing. Owing to the respect which Martial Law had by this time acquired, I think this order was effective in checking the spread of these dangerous rumours. Only one person was charged with breach of this order—viz., the writer of an account in a vernacular paper of the presence of a large Turkish force with the Afghans at Landi Kotal.

45. Martial Law Order No. 17 was issued on 19th April commandeering motor cycles and also the pedal driven cycles of students in certain colleges. The motor-cycles were urgently required for despatch riding work and, owing to the increasing heat, I thought it desirable to supply all British Infantry with bicycles in order to increase their mobility and to lessen the fatigue in carrying out the necessary reliefs of posts in the area.

Under Martial Law Order Nos. 21, 22, 23 and 25—vide Appendix IV, I subsequently took possession of more bicycles—in all 1,291—with a view to their being required by other British troops in the Divisional Area.

46. In addition to the firearms owned by Europeans—who are exempted from gun licences, I found that some 1,700 guns, rifles and revolvers were in the possession of Indians in the area. At first I intended to secure the surrender of all these firearms in order to prevent them being stolen and used against the troops. However, to avoid hurting the feelings of many of these licence-holders, who were men of untarnished loyalty, I decided only to call in the arms of men of whom there might be doubt as to their ability to take proper care of such weapons. The necessity for care in the control of arms in possession of licence-holders (Indians) is illustrated by the following extracts from the evidence given on 9th June last in the trial of the Amritsar Conspiracy Case:—

“The people present said, if only they had arms they would teach the British a lesson”—and again:—“Ghulam Nabi said, we should get arms from the licence-holders.”

In issuing Martial Law Order No. 18,—I was also mindful of the undesirability of denying prominent Indian Loyalists the means of self-protection against the violence openly threatened them by seditious agitators.

Subsequently, acting on the advice of the Police and the Civil authorities, I took into safe-keeping some 400 firearms, all of which have been subsequently returned to their owners.

47. A number of the motor-cars commandeered were without drivers, and, as a sufficient number of these did not come forward and offer their services voluntarily I obtained the number required without difficulty by issuing Martial Law Order No. 19 on 20th April.

48. So completely had the introduction of Martial Law not only put a stop to disturbances, but created an obvious atmosphere of contentment among the masses of the population, that on 21st April I made the first of a series of relaxations regarding hours during which Indians were confined to their houses. Martial Law Order No. 20, extended the use of the streets from 20-00 to 21-00 hours.

On 12th May by Martial Law Order No. 45, the hour was altered from 21-00 to 22-00, and on 24th May in view of the religious observances due to the approaching Ramzan, Martial Law Order No. 57, reduced the hours during which the streets were closed to 2, viz., from midnight to 02-00 hours.

49. The quarters in which both British and Indian troops were quartered in the Area, particularly in the city, were naturally of a make-shift and therefore unsatisfactory character. I was specially concerned as to the health of British troops living under these trying conditions in increasing heat, and as no supply of electric fans was obtainable from the Military authorities, on 23rd April I issued Martial Law Order No. 24, empowering the commandeering of such number of electric fans as were required for the use of troops.

I think the provision of this ample supply of electric fans was largely responsible for the satisfactory health of the troops in the Area.

50. Partly in order that I might procure a more complete register of public vehicles and their drivers and partly to bring home to owners and drivers the undesirability in future of indulging in strikes at the instigation of political or seditious agitators, I issued Martial Law Order No. 26 on 24th April, Under this order no vehicle was allowed to ply for hire and no driver to drive such vehicle unless in possession of a Military permit, for which the Municipal annual charges for such licences were adopted.

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON.

I think that in future Lahore tonga drivers are not likely to be easily induced to become the tools of the "political" agitator.

51. By the issue of Martial Law Order No. 29 on 25th April, I took the first steps in reducing the prices of the necessaries of life.

The order in question referred to "Atta" and the following orders subsequently dealt with various other articles, viz.:-

No. 31 on 27th April	.	Milk, see page 297.
" 32 " 29th "	.	Salt and wheat, see page 298.
" 35 " 5th May	.	Vegetables, see page 298.
" 37 " 7th "	.	Mutton, see page 299.
" 41 " 9th "	.	Vegetables, see page 301.
" 52 " 17th "	.	Do. see page 305.
" 58 " 28th "	.	Atta, see page 306.

Encouraged by the spirit of lawlessness engendered by the strike and assisted by increased difficulties in obtaining supplies—due partly to the hesitation of country producers to venture with their carts into disturbed areas and partly to the reduced railway facilities, prices had been raised by the bunias beyond all warrant.

It has been suggested that in thus taking action to control economic matters I was going beyond the necessities of Martial Law. I venture, however, to differ from this view.

The first essential of Martial Law I take to be the preservation of peace and order, and the supply or otherwise of the necessaries of life at reasonable rates have a most direct bearing on the contentment of the people (particularly when living in a crowded city) and therefore on the military situation.

As soon as my action was realised by the people, I think it is not too much to say, that their attitude towards Martial Law changed from passive acquiescence into that of active approval—which found expression in the frequently heard cry of "Martial Law is jai!"

The fixing of maximum rates for any article, particularly when its source of production is not under the same control, is a matter requiring the most careful consideration, or the restriction of price may easily result in the total disappearance of the article from the market, in which case the remedy is liable to be worse than the cure.

I received large numbers of applications from Indians praying that I would reduce the prices of many articles, but, with the exceptions already mentioned and for reasons given, I had to decline.

The control of prices, so far as I established it, worked very satisfactorily and caused no falling off of supplies; in the case of mutton and goat flesh, indeed, the reduction of 25 per cent. in its price increased its average daily consumption by nearly 40 per cent.

When dealing with the price of milk I discovered that practically the entire supply was seriously "watered." The mean of a large number of samples that I caused to be analysed showed the added water to be between 10—15 per cent., and this, based on a conservative calculation of the daily consumption of milk in the area, means that the people of Lahore are content to pay over six lakhs a year for water, with which their milk is adulterated.

I at once took drastic steps to put a stop of this typical example of the prevailing low standard of business morality, and by means of heavy fines (up to Rs. 250) backed by the ever present dread of the possibility of the addition of corporal punishment, succeeded getting the public supplied with more or less pure milk.

I am, however, conscious that of all the measures taken by me to protect the people from robbery—possibly "profiteering" is a more modern and less offensive word—this was the least popular. Apparently it is taken for granted that both the owner of the cow and the actual vendor of the milk will naturally add, each his own quota of water, and this course of conduct having by time, become hallowed into "dustoor," I am afraid that my action was appreciated neither by buyer nor seller, the latter, I think over doubting the justice under which I heavily punished such conduct. However, I understand that from the last day of Martial Law, the milk vendors reverted to custom and by increasing the added water, quickly recovered the amounts they had been fined.

For the collection of all necessary information to enable me to decide as to the possibility or otherwise of controlling the prices of various articles, I am greatly indebted to Mr. C. H. Townsend, Controller, Civil Supplies, Lieutenant-Colonel Farmer, Chief Civil Veterinary Surgeon and to Diwan Karam Chand, Extra Assistant Commissioner, Assistant to the Controller of Civil Supplies.

52. On 25th April I received from the Library of one of the principal Colleges in Lahore, a number of illustrated papers, in which pictures of well known British Officers had been defaced or made the subject of insulting remarks and obscene suggestions, the latter in some instances being extended to the portraits of European ladies. A search in the library of another College disclosed a similar state of things. I thereupon issued Martial Law Order No. 30 which would seem to have had the desired effect, as subsequent inspection of College libraries, disclosed no further instances of this anti-British propaganda.

53. I need not dwell on the unsatisfactory standard of honour and morality among the majority of Indian officials especially in the lower grades. The acceptance of "bakhshish" and bribes is a custom so hallowed by time and "dustoor," that I do not believe that 99 per cent. of those indulging in the practice realize that there is any harm in it. A consideration of the pay received by the Police and minor officials would almost lead one to assume that they were expected to increase their official salary to that of a living wage by the methods to which I am referring.

I was uncomfortably conscious that the Martial Law Orders which I was issuing from day to day was opening up a largely extended and fruitful field of operations for those minor officials who are apparently constitutionally incapable of understanding the British view of honour and official morality. On 2nd May, therefore, I issued Martial Law Order No. 33 as an attempt to check practices that must naturally conduce to resentment amongst the people against Martial Law.

A reference to the summary of convictions and punishments given in Appendix V will show that eight persons were subsequently convicted with contravention of this order and heavily punished.

54. On 5th May, I issued Martial Law No. 34 calling for a return of stocks of wheat.

The reasons for this action are set forth in the order itself. On 8th May, by Martial Law No. 39, I took similar action in the case of gram.

At this time a falling off in the arrivals of gram and wheat was noticeable and it became necessary to ascertain whether these lesser deliveries were due to a genuine shortage of supply or to the refusal of the local merchants to purchase on account of secret stocks of wheat with which they intended to make large profits after the abolition of Martial Law. The returns published in Orders No. 38 of 7th May Nos. 47 and 48 of 14th May give the results obtained by these orders.

55. Besides food, the only other "expendable" necessary of life to the poorer people is that of cloth. Owing to the—to them—prohibitive price at which bunias were selling cloth, I decided to take advantage of the "Cotton Cloth Act of 1918," and obtained from the Mills a supply of standard cloth at cost price, making the cloth merchants retail it at a rate fixed by me to allow them a reasonable profit.

LT.-COL. FRANK JOHNSON.

I was again indebted to Mr. C. H. Townsend, the Director of Industries and Controller of Civil Supplies, for making all necessary arrangements to give effect to Martial Law Order No. 40.

It will be noticed that in providing the people with cheap cloth and food I did not adopt the usual method of opening special Government shops for this purpose but insisted on those traders who normally dealt in such articles, stocking and selling them at prices fixed by me. I commend this method of using all the ordinary channels of distribution in preference to that of opening one or two special shops. It saves much worry and offers greater facilities to the masses of the people to take advantage of the controlled prices. The system worked in Lahore without the slightest trouble.

56. On 10th May, on account of the hostile action of the Amir of Afghanistan, I deemed it wise to take steps to ascertain what Afghan subjects might be in Lahore and to prevent others arriving to cause unrest among the people. I therefore issued Martial Law Order No. 42, and arranged for the registration of all Afghans in the area and the internment of such of them as might be potential enemy soldiers.

Great assistance was rendered to my staff in carrying out this work by Mir Muhammad Ali, Assistant Political Afghan Agent to the Punjab Government.

57. Owing to the crop of alarmist rumours spreading in connection with Afghan outbreak, on 10th May I issued Martial Law No. 43, repeating the warning given on 18th April against the spreading of false reports and also stating that the facts would be published from time to time in the vernacular paper the Haq.

58. Owing to the excellent behaviour of the people on 15th May, I issued Martial Law Order No. 49, making further relaxations of Martial Law restrictions—Orders Nos. 6 and 12 were cancelled and 1 (4) so modified as to require no permits for processions or gatherings in connection with bona fide religious services.

59. The 15th May, being the anniversary of the Muhammadan festival known as Shabrat, I issued Martial Law Order No. 50, cancelling for that night, as far as Muhammadans were concerned, all restrictions on being out of their houses at night.

60. Martial Law No. 51, was issued on 17th May at the request of the Civil authority who wished to take advantage of the power under Martial Law to ensure the compilation of a complete list of the owners and occupiers of all buildings in the area.

61. By the publication on 20th May of Martial Law Order No. 53, an end was made of the protracted negotiations which had been in progress for nearly 6 weeks for the reopening of the Badshahi Masjid, which was closed on 12th April in consequence of its misuse, for a joint seditious meeting of 25,000 Muhammadans and Hindus.

Three weeks earlier I had handed to the leading Muhammadans a written statement of the guarantees I required before allowing the reopening of the Mosque. No little outside pressure was brought to bear on me to modify the terms laid down, but as these were the minimum, I deemed it necessary to exact in the interests of future peace, I stood firm and ultimately secured their complete acceptance, including the acknowledgment of the rights conferred on 10th June 1856 on the Officer Commanding, Lahore Fort, to deny access to the Mosque under certain conditions.

Martial Law Order No. 54 of 23rd May, was at once effective in checking a waste of water which was seriously increasing.

63. Several cases having been reported of the drivers of tongas in Military employ, being compelled to accept public "fares" I issued Martial Law No. 55, on 23rd May to put a stop to the practice.

64. The only other Martial Law Order to which reference is necessary is No. 56, issued on 24th May. Under this order, owing to the Hindu festival known as Bhadrakali taking place on the following day the 'Curfew' gun was deferred from 22-00 to 23-00 hours.

65. In appendices V, VI and VII* will be found full details of all convictions and punishments that took place in Summary Minor Courts for contravention of Martial Law Orders.

Charges were laid against 277 persons of whom 89 were acquitted and 208 convicted. Of these cases 140 were dealt with by Major Barnes and myself, and 137 by Civil Magistrates specially appointed for that purpose.

The total punishments awarded amounted to 74 months' imprisonment, 832 stripes and Rs. 6,813 fines.

Twenty persons received 74 months' imprisonment—or an average of 3.7 months each. The 832 stripes were distributed among 66 persons, an average of 12.6 each and 136 persons were fined an average of Rs. 50-1 each.

The sentences of imprisonment varied from 6 months to 1 month, corporal punishment from 20 to 5 stripes whilst the fines ranged from a maximum of Rs. 500 to a minimum of Rs. 1.

As regards corporal punishment, this was never inflicted on any but able bodied young men, and I do not hesitate to attribute the remarkably small number of contraventions of Martial Law Orders to the knowledge that the power to use it existed. That so little difficulty was experienced in keeping the peace and avoiding riotous scenes that lead to bloodshed was, I am convinced, due mainly to knowledge that corporal punishment would take the place of the usual civil punishment of say 30 days' imprisonment, which possesses little, if any, terror to the average Indian. Of the total number of stripes given, 55 persons received 716 stripes in the confines of the Central Jail, Lahore and only 11 persons received their punishments of 116 stripes in quasi-public—that is the floggings were administered in the compounds of either the Telegraph Office, the old Kotwali or the Reservoir chaokas. Although not entirely enclosed none of these places can be deemed "public" within the ordinary meaning.

The punishment was invariably inflicted on the buttocks with an ordinary cane and it is as ridiculous as it is untrue to suggest that persons died as a result of this punishment.

On the other hand, responsible for the maintenance of peace and order amongst a crowded Indian population of nearly a quarter of a million, I would sooner have been deprived of the services of 1,000 rifles than the power of inflicting corporal punishment.

I have recently heard it said that some political leaders (who are apparently very hurt at the stamping out, or the methods of stamping out, of this rebellious outbreak), claim to have discovered that 5 or 6 men were shot at night, besides a number of Kashmiris shot at the Ravi Bridge during the period of Martial Law. The actual truth is that the only shots fired after the introduction of Martial Law were from a rifle accidentally discharged whilst being cleaned in camp in the Lawrence Gardens, and 3 at a motor car driven by Europeans who failed to stop when challenged by a picket of Indian troops. As the total result of these 4 shots one tyre was slightly damaged.

The story referred to above could only have been invented, repeated and believed by Indians who, like those referred to in paragraph 53 are woefully ignorant of the ordinary standard of honour and morality and who merely regard a deliberate lie as a perfectly legitimate and natural weapon.

Before leaving this question of punishments inflicted under Martial Law, I would direct particular attention to Appendix IX on page 313 which contain an "instruction" to all Military and Police officers and Magistrates administering Martial Law under me. This document contains, I think, very clear orders as to the principles to be adopted in (a) enforcing obedience to Martial Law Regulations and (b) inflicting punishments.

The spirit of this order was, I know, invariably acted up to most loyally.

66. During the period covered by this report I carried out at a cost of a little over Rs. 40,000 certain permanent defensive works in connection with the vital services of Lahore, viz., light, power, and water and telegraphs. Full details of these works together with my reasons for undertaking them will be found in Appendix VIII* in the form of an extract from a report addressed by me to the General Officer Commanding, 16th (Indian) Division, on 19th June 1919.

67. Under arrangements made before the introduction of Martial Law, by the Divisional Commander, Major-General Sir William Beynon, K.C.I.E., C.B., D.S.O., 311 women and 307 children were evacuated to Hill Stations during April and May, the majority going between 16th and 19th April.

Even after this exodus I found nearly 1,300 women and children in the area mostly without the financial power to get away; widely scattered throughout the area, their presence was a constant source of anxiety and must have seriously hampered military operations had any further outbreaks taken place.

In the cold weather women and children can be evacuated to the Defensive Post in Lahore Cantonment but the question of their prompt disposal in the event of outbreaks in the hot weather calls, I think, for early consideration.

Section 3.—General.

68. The preceding sections of this report have dealt with the position in general immediately prior to the introduction of Martial Law, and also, in some detail, with the application and administration of that "Law" in Lahore. It only now remains to consider briefly the results of its introduction.

69. In Lahore itself, the facts would seem to be non-contentious, viz., that the cessation of grave disturbances and of a strike which its leaders boasted would be continued indefinitely, followed immediately after the introduction of Martial Law.

It is in the deductions from these facts that there are two schools of thought.

The great majority, representing, I think it is not too much to say, all honest and impartial men of both races, see in these facts but a simple illustration of cause and effect.

The other school of thought, representing a minority, and the apologists of those "political leaders" who were clearly engaged in organizing war against the Government, dispute the fact, alleging that no serious disturbances or acts of rebellion ever took place—or were even contemplated and that the strike was but the simple, peaceful and spontaneous method of individual protest against an unpopular Act.

A study of Appendix I with its list of outrages, ever growing in number and gravity, until they culminate in deliberate murder and looting in at least two cases, besides attempts in others, and showing clearly how this state of affairs suddenly ceases on the introduction of Martial Law, will enable any impartial person to judge between these schools of thought.

As instancing the organization proceeding at this time to create a state of war and rebellion as distinct from mere political excitement, attention is invited to the proclamation given in Appendix X,† calling on Hindus, Muhammadans and Sikhs to "get ready for the war" and enlist in the "Landa Army."

70. With a full knowledge of all the facts and the advantage of having been in close touch with all classes of people in the Punjab during April and May, it is my considered opinion that when the Government of India decided to allow Martial Law to be introduced into some districts, they saved the Punjab and possibly a large part of India from the horrors of another mutiny.

71. Some people point to the fact that after the 15th April peace was maintained in Delhi and many other large cities without Martial Law and argue therefrom that its introduction was unnecessary in Lahore, Amritsar, etc. Such people would appear to forget, or shut their eyes to another fact, viz., that just as a bomb dropped into a lake sends its ripples over a wide area, so the promulgation of Martial Law in portions of the Punjab must have made its influence felt far beyond, say Delhi.

72. To me, the two-outstanding lessons derived from the Martial Law period were these:—

(a) The merciful character of Martial Law in its power of, and effectiveness in, maintaining order, and so preventing bloodshed and loss of life. So far, therefore, from its application to a District threatened by disturbances, being cruel, it is in reality the most merciful course of action to take, the degree of kindness increasing with the promptitude with which it is applied, and

(b) The adaptability of the majority of the masses of the people to the form of Government involved under Martial Law, i.e., a one-man, autocratic Government or "Government by Hukm."

I was very struck with the fact in Lahore that the people not only acquiesced in the situation produced by the introduction of Martial Law, but that they settled down to it with unmistakable signs of relief and contentment.

73. That there was no loss of life amongst the Troops and Police engaged, and so little amongst the rioters themselves, is, in my opinion, due in no small measure to the strictness with which the Arms Act regulations have been enforced.

I should view with grave concern any weakening of the provisions of this measure, for, although the possession of, say, 20 firearms in a crowd attacking troops would make no difference to the tactical situation or the result of the attack, it would inevitably involve an amount of bloodshed out of all proportion to the number of firearms in the hands of the mob, or to the increased power derived by the mob from their possession.

74. It is impossible to close this report without referring to the co-operation extended to me by all ranks of the Civil Government.

Under the present ill-defined relations which exist between the Civil and Military Powers, when what is known in India as "Statutory Martial Law," comes into force, no small amount of tact on both sides may be required to prevent friction. In Lahore, however, thanks to this spirit of co-operation displayed by the Civil Government, individually or collectively, not the slightest sign of friction occurred and I was never called upon to exercise tact.

But for this support, particularly from His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor Sir Michael O'Dwyer, G.C.I.E., K.C.S.I., the Hon'ble The Chief Justice and Judges of the High Court, from the Chief Secretary of the Punjab, the Commissioner and the Deputy Commissioner, and the Officers of the Punjab Police and Criminal Investigation Department, my anxiety and work would have been greatly increased.

Judging from my experience of what might have happened, I consider the whole question of the incidence of Martial Law in India calls for re-consideration.

75. The conduct of all ranks of British and Indian troops and Police in the Area stands out as a bright feature in the dismal record of this period of disturbance and outrage. The patience and discipline exhibited, under great provocation, particularly during the stone throwing on 12th April, was not, I am sure, without its good effect on the general situation. No single case of a breach of discipline or a "regrettable incident" took place.

The people in the city were particularly surprised at the bearing of the British troops quartered in their midst, drawn from 2nd Battalion Duke of Wellingtons' Regiment, 2-6th Battalion The Royal Sussex Regiment, 1st Garrison (F. S.) Battalion Somerset Light Infantry. They had an idea, I understand, that under Martial Law troops were licenced to loot or take what they required without paying for it, and I am sure that the impression made by the conduct of the British troops concerned will not be a negligible factor in permanently improving the relations between the two races in Lahore.

Martial Law Notices, Lahore Civil Area.

No. 1.

WHEREAS the Government of India has for good reasons proclaimed Martial Law in the districts of Lahore and Amritsar; and

WHEREAS superior military authority has appointed me to command troops and administer Martial Law in a portion of the Lahore District, now known as the "Lahore Civil" command whose boundaries may be described as follows:—

The Civil Lines;
The Municipality and City of Lahore;
The Fort;
The Mogulpura Works;
and any other area not included in the above between the Ravi River and Lahore Branch of the Bari Doab Canal inclusive within three miles of the Central Telegraph Office, Lahore, and WHEREAS Martial Law may be briefly described as the will of the Military Commander in enforcing law, order and public safety:

I make known to all concerned that until further orders by me the following will be strictly carried out:—

1. At 20-00 hours each evening a gun will be fired from the Fort, and from that signal till 05-00 hours on the following morning no person other than a European or a person in possession of a military permit signed by me or on my behalf will be permitted to leave his or her house or compound or the building in which he or she may be at 20 hours. During these prohibited hours no person other than those excepted above will be permitted to use the streets or roads, and any person found disobeying this order will be arrested, and if any attempt is made to evade or resist arrest that person will be liable to be shot.

This and all other orders which from time to time I may deem necessary to make will be issued on my behalf from the Water-works station in the City, whither every Ward will keep at least four representatives from 6 A.M. till 17-00 hours daily to learn what orders, if any, are issued and to convey such orders to the inhabitants of their respective Wards. The onus of ascertaining the orders issued by me will rest on the people through their representatives.

2. Loyal and law-abiding persons have nothing to fear from the exercise of Martial Law.

3. In order to protect the lives of His Majesty's Soldiers and Police under my command, I make known that if any firearm is discharged or bombs thrown at them the most drastic reprisals will instantly be made against property surrounding the scene of the outrage. Therefore it behoves all loyal inhabitants to see to it that no evil-disposed agitator is allowed on his premises.

4. During the period of Martial Law I prohibit all processions, meetings or other gatherings of more than 10 persons without my written authority, and any such meetings, gatherings or processions held in disobedience of this order will be broken up by force without warning.

5. I forbid any person to offer violence or cause obstruction to any person desirous of opening his shop or conducting his business or proceeding to his work or business. Any person contravening this order will be arrested, tried by a Summary Court and be liable to be shot.

6. At present the City of Lahore enjoys the advantage of electric lights and a water-supply; but the continuance of these supplies will depend on the good behaviour of the inhabitants and their prompt obedience to my orders.

IN ANNOUNCING these first relaxations of Martial Law Orders I WARN ALL CONCERNED that this concession must not be misinterpreted as a sign of the weakening of Martial Law, which will still be applied with all swiftness and severity against those engaged in seditious propoganda or in attempting to aid the King's enemies.

AND IN PARTICULAR I WARN TRADERS AND BUNMIAS that I am determined with all the power vested in me under Martial Law, to protect the people in the Area under my Command in the matter of adulteration of foods, or refusing to sell the necessaries of life at the reasonable prices I have fixed or may hereafter fix.

APPENDIX VIII.

Extract from Report on certain permanent defensive works in Lahore (Civil) Area.

Confidential, dated Nowshera, 19th June 1919, from Lieutenant-Colonel Frank Johnson, D.S.O., Royal Sussex Regiment, late Commanding, Lahore Civil Area, to Head-Quarters, 16th (Indian) Division, Nowshera.

18. I continued to command this area and administer Martial Law within it from 15th April until relieved on 29th May on being ordered on service. A report on this period, however, is not specifically called for, so it need not be referred to beyond saying that as a result of being in very close touch with all classes of the community and having a detailed knowledge of all the events during and immediately preceding this period, I was forced to certain conclusions, an appreciation which decided me to immediately undertake certain defensive measures, to reduce in future the dangers run by the European community between say, 6th and 13th April.

19. The conclusions at which I arrived were briefly these:—

- (1) That the root trouble of the rising was not political but frankly national and anti-British, a condition not likely to be permanently remedied by any political "reforms" no matter of how wide reaching a nature they may be.
- (2) That these anti-British outbreaks are fanned into flame and made possible by (a) reckless and unblushing lies, misrepresentations and false suggestions spread broadcast by what, I fear, must be admitted to be the majority of the educated classes of leaders of Indian opinion, and (b) the colossal ignorance and unbelievable credulity of the uneducated masses of the people, who are but the tools of the educated seditious agitator and the still more dangerous, influential but unseen men behind these risings.
- (3) That but for the accident of the Telegraph Office being occupied by troops in the nick of time, and for the firmness and initiative of the Deputy Commissioner, Mr. Fyson, at a very critical moment, in ordering the police to fire, Lahore on the 10th of April would have witnessed scenes much more reminiscent of the worst of those of 1857 than of those which took place earlier in the day in Amritsar.
- (4) That other outbreaks are bound to take place in the future, are likely to be at shorter intervals and are certain to be better organized, to represent an improved bandobast and so are sure of being of an even more serious nature.
- (5) That, as secrecy may be looked upon as the factor most likely to be relied on for success of such anti-British risings, the time at the disposal of the authorities in which to make defensive arrangements is likely to be even less in future than it was on the recent occasion.

20. In the face of these conclusions and in view of the Afghan menace and the possibility of more trouble in connection with the peace terms with Turkey, I deemed it only wise to take in hand preparations of a more permanent nature for the defence of the vital public services in the area then under my command, viz., the water-supply, lighting and power, and communications.

21. The water-supply consists of two parts:—

- (a) The source of origin—a number of tube-wells with a pumping station at Badami Bagh to the north-east of the city; with

- (b) high-level reservoir tanks, almost in the heart of the City. It must be remembered that whereas the Civil Station is entirely dependent on this source of supply, the mass of the Indian population in the City is much less on account of the number of old wells still in use.

In common with all the buildings at these vital points the pumping station has been erected without any regard to its defensive qualities, the delicate machinery being sited so close to the public thoroughfare that a passerby could easily throw a bomb amongst it and put it out of action indefinitely.

By the reconstruction and loopholing of some existing walls, the erection of others, and the provision of wire entanglements, the pumping station could now be held by say, 40 men against a very large and determined mob, even if it included a percentage of modern rifles, a contingency which, I think, must be faced, sooner or later.

The reservoir or "tanks" in the city is important, not only in connection with the water-supply but as a tactical point very nearly in the heart of the city. Its occupation in times of trouble by British troops prevents the city from passing completely into the hands of the mob and is the one suitable pied à terre in the city where troops can be stationed in comparative comfort and whence patrols can be despatched.

The building forms a square of about 80 yards with thick brick walls surrounding four large steel tanks, surmounted by a flat roof about 30 feet above the ground level.

The roof is commanded by higher buildings on three sides and would be untenable against rioters possessing even a few rifles.

I have had permanent stages fitted at all four corners seven feet below the roof and loopholes,—sited as alternately to cover both the roofs of houses opposite and the streets below. Permanent flank defences, and steel doors and windows, where necessary, have rendered this reservoir building impregnable if held by a minimum of 30 men with 1 M. and L. gun and a good stock of hand grenades, against any enemy without artillery.

22. The Electric Power Station in Macleod Road was another "vital" point that, commanded from all directions, was extremely difficult to defend, if attacked by a determined mob, even without rifles, and untenable immediately an attack was supported by rifle fire from adjacent roofs.

In order to protect fire positions from reverse and enfilade fire a good deal of brick work was necessary in the form of parados and traverses.

Flank defences have been arranged for and the station is now practically surrounded by unscalable walls.

I would rather undertake its defence now with 30 men and 1 M. and L. gun than with 200 troops before these works were carried out.

23. The Telegraph Office buildings are arranged roughly on the outsides of three sides of the large parallelogram which forms its compound. It would seem to be almost impossible to have devised a "lay out" more difficult to defend under any circumstances. Three sides, including the "danger" or city side, are now surrounded by a 12 foot wall suitably loopholed, to ensure a maximum fire power at the points most likely to be attacked with the necessary cajoniers fitted with M. and L. gun positions for enfilade fire.

The fourth side, that facing the Civil Station, has no continuous wall, but with steel doors on the battery and power house, a protected fire position on the roof of its verandah, provision for heavy flanking fire, and an entanglement to keep any attackers outside bombing distance, is, I think, rendered quite secure without the necessity of shutting out the prevailing breeze from the compound.

Owing to the height of the Bank of Bengal and other commanding buildings, very high parados have been necessitated on the southern side.

Lt.-Col. FRANK JOHNSON.

To deny cover to an attacking force the walls around the Convent Chapel at the north-east corner of the Telegraph compound, and at the west side of Patiala House old compound, should be replaced by a post and wire fence; a short piece of wall around a private bungalow between these two properties should be similarly treated.

24. The above completes the report on the actual defensive measures undertaken by me. But for my sudden departure I should have submitted detailed plans and drawings of all these works with the suggestions that they should be reproduced in order that in an emergency an officer being sent to the defence of one of these vital points—perhaps in the dark—might have some idea of how best to distribute his force for the defence of the position. Plans of the Telegraph Office work could be furnished by Mr. Cargill of the Public Works Department; of the Electric Power Station by its General Manager; and of the pumping station and reservoir by Mr. Henderson, the Municipal Engineer. To all these officers I should like to place on record my acknowledgments for the zeal, skill and initiative they displayed in carrying out my designs, and for some improvements suggested by them.

25. At the request of Major General Sir William Beynon, K.C.I.E., C.B., D.S.O., and of His Honour Sir Michael O'Dwyer, G.C.I.E., K.C.S.I., etc., I gave careful consideration to the defence of Government House, which it is now clear is automatically looked upon by civil population as their rallying post on the outbreak of danger. I have already submitted to the Hon'ble the Chief Secretary of the Punjab my reports and detailed plans, involving an expenditure of some Rs. 40,000.

In my opinion, until this work is carried out at Government House, the lives of the European inhabitants of the Civil Station cannot be considered as adequately protected.

26. I think that a study of the ground shows the following to be the natural "line of resistance" that would be held by any Commander responsible for the defence of Lahore against trouble from the city, viz., from Railway Junction Station on the right, along McLeod Road to Telegraph Office, thence via Bank of Bengal, the Market, Town Hall, Roberts Club (all inclusive) to the Secretariat.

By a limited amount of work much could be done to permanently strengthen such a line by improving the cover and field of fire to the defenders and at the same time denying these things as far as possible to forces approaching the Civil Station from the city.

Had time permitted I proposed to have undertaken this work; assuming its completion I would suggest that, just as there is a "Fort Area" on which no buildings can be erected without the approval of the military authorities, so this line should be regarded as of military importance and the erection of buildings, etc., forbidden which might either weaken its defence or lend assistance to an attacking force.

APPENDIX IX.

Lahore (Civil) Command—Martial Law Instruction No. 2.

Memorandum to Officers Commanding Units and Detachments, Police Officers and Magistrates.

(1) In order to prevent the occurrence of regrettable incidents, it must be clearly understood that the existence of Martial Law neither necessitates nor justifies the committal of excesses either in—

- (a) the maintenance of order;
- (b) in enforcing obedience to Martial Law Regulations, nor
- (c) in the infliction of punishment.

(2) The guiding principle to be borne in mind is that the force required in (a) and (b) and the ensuing punishment should never exceed the necessities of the case.

(3) The punishment of whipping in particular, whilst probably the most efficacious and convenient method of summarily dealing with most minor breaches of Martial Law Regulations, requires tact and commonsense in its infliction. Under no circumstances should old or feeble men be flogged, and the social status of the offender also needs consideration.

(4) It cannot be too clearly impressed on all ranks that the temporary supersession of the ordinary process of Civil Law by the introduction of Martial Law, does not mean that justice ceases to be administered; on the contrary, the suspension of the usual safeguards makes it doubly imperative that all concerned should bear in mind that it is "up to them" to see that Justice, and not irresponsible violence, is administered.

(5) When in any case Officers or Magistrates acting on my behalf are doubtful as to the suitable punishment to be inflicted, the case can always be remanded and the question referred to me. In nearly all cases this can be done by telephone, obviating any delay.

(6) Nothing in the above is to be read as weakening the hands of those responsible for strictly maintaining good order and enforcing Martial Law Regulations.

First event.—When Mahatma Gandhi arrived at Palwal, the English monkey informed him that his entry into the Punjab was forbidden, and that he should please go back. He replied that he would never go back; then that pig monkey arrested him. Reports of his arrest reached here at once.

Second event.—When the news reached Amritsar, the Danda Fauj (army) of the brave Sikhs set fire to the Bank, the Railway Station and Electric Power House. They cut the telegraph wires and removed the railway line. The Danda Fauj (army) of Amritsar bravely killed a number of European monkeys and their Sikh Regiments have revolted and deserted. O Hindu, Muhammadan and Sikh brethren, enlist at once in the Danda Army, and fight with bravery against the English monkeys. God will grant you Victory. Do not apprehend that God does not help us. Cast away such a notion out of your heart. God helps us at all times and hours. Conquer the English monkeys with bravery. God will grant Victory. Leave off dealings with the Englishmen, close offices and workshops. Fight on! This is the command of Mahatma Gandhi.

Third event.—O Hindu, Muhammadan and Sikh brethren, do you know of the incident that took place at the Mall Road on the night of the 10th April? The Hindus and Muhammadans who were martyred that day were your own and they sacrificed their lives. Does not this incident excite you? What is the reason? Were not those who were made martyrs in Hira Mandi on the 12th April your own brethren, and died at the hands of the tyrants? Does the Prophet of God command you not to fight against the tyrant? No, never,

Mr. E. P. BROADWAY, Senior Superintendent of Police, Lahore.

Towards the close of March last in connection with the agitation concerning the "Rowlatt" Act a general "hartal" was organized here for Sunday, 30th March, but was postponed at the last moment to Sunday the 6th April.

The idea was that the people should fast from Saturday night till Sunday night, close all shops and suspend all business of every kind. On Sunday evening there was to be a mass meeting in the Bradlaugh Hall to protest against the Act. Trouble having occurred at Delhi on the 30th March, it was necessary to make special arrangements to prevent similar trouble here.

On the 3rd April, I issued notices (copy attached)* under section 30 of the Police Act indicating that no meetings or processions should be held in the Public streets without a proper license, and requiring intending promoters of any such meeting or procession to apply to me for licenses not later than 10 A.M. on the day previous to that for which the license was required. These notices were prepared and issued in consultation with the Deputy Commissioner and Deputy Inspector-General. They were sent to all the newspapers, English and Vernacular, to the organizers of the meeting and their known sympathizers by name posted at the City gates, in fact made as widely known as possible.

No applications for licenses were however received at all. At 10 A.M. on Friday morning, the 4th April 1919, the Deputy Commissioner held a meeting of all the Municipal Commissioners of Lahore in his office. I was present at the meeting and the Municipal Commissioners were reminded of their responsibilities and duties and asked to look after their wards, and see that no coercion was used to compel people to suspend business and close shops. I may as well dispose of them here by mentioning that their efforts were unsuccessful and the "hartal" was complete and general throughout the City and Anarkali.

To return to Friday, at 11-30 A.M. I accompanied the Deputy Commissioner, Deputy Inspector-General, Lahore, Deputy Inspector-General, Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab, Lahore, to Cantonments where a meeting had been arranged and was held in the Divisional Office with the General and Brigadier-General and their Staff Officers. A route march of troops through Lahore was arranged by the General for Saturday morning. It was further arranged that a hundred British Infantry should march through Lahore via Gol Bagh to the Fort on Saturday evening, and should remain in the Fort till Monday morning. Lorries were provided for this detachment in order to convey them quickly from the Fort to any threatened point, should they be required. I may mention here, that this force was never called out. We asked for a squadron of cavalry to be posted at the Gol Bagh and two armoured cars at the Kacheri for use in case of need. It was also suggested that the Indian Defence Force units be warned to look after their armouries.

Eventually the arrangements actually ordered by the General were as follows, excluding the arrangements at the Fort above-mentioned which of course took effect from Saturday night—

One squadron, 114 strong, of lancers to be at the Gol Bagh at 6-30 A.M. on Sunday and bivouac there all day ready to assist if required.

Two armoured cars to be at the High Court and two at the Deputy Commissioner's Kacheri at 6-30 A.M. on Sunday and to remain all day to assist if required.

These were the only armed military forces that I am aware of, but signal and medical units were also sent in the ordinary course.

In addition the P. L. Horse were asked to have 20 troopers on duty to look after their Headquarters and Punjab Rifles were asked to have 50 men to look after their armoury at their Headquarters, and the North-Western Railway were similarly ordered to mount a guard of 50 men at the Railway Station to guard their armoury, etc. I may note here that these Indian Defence Force Units were not moved from their posts throughout the day.

About 4 P.M. the Deputy Commissioner held a meeting to which the leading agitators and organizers of the proposed "hartal" had been summoned. I attended the meeting and both Deputy Commissioner and I pointed out to the gentlemen present the danger of exciting the people, throwing them out on the streets by "hartal" and collecting them at the Bradlaugh Hall to hear fiery speeches. We repeatedly pointed out that they were stirring up forces they might not be able to control and that their responsibility was very great. We asked them not to provoke a "hartal" but if they must do so, at least to see that it was purely voluntary and that no sort of pressure was put on any one who did not wish to observe "hartal." We also asked them to keep in touch with us, explaining that we should be found all day at Deputy Commissioner's office. That the situation on Sunday would be one of great danger to the public peace was obvious, and most careful police arrangements were made to meet it.

A statement showing my orders and dispositions in detail is attached.* The idea was to hold a line roughly dividing the town from the civil station, i.e., from the railway station, down McLeod road to the Telegraph Office, along the Mall, to the District Courts.

Armed pickets and reserves were all commanded by carefully selected officers to whom I personally explained their duties and responsibilities.

With my remaining officers, I made my headquarters with the Deputy Commissioner at his office. This was the nearest point to the Bradlaugh Hall and here I had my largest armed reserve.

All detachments, Police and Military, were in their places by 6-30 A.M. I remained in the closest touch with the Deputy Commissioner throughout the day and maintained touch with my pickets and reserves by means of the telephone, mounted and foot messengers, and personal visits by motor car. Up to about 11 A.M. all was reported quiet. I heard that there had been a gathering of students by the river but that it was breaking up and parties dispersing and returning to town peacefully and quietly. It appears that these parties entered the City and environs by different gates and roads, and swelled to large mobs as they proceeded towards the Circular road which passes along by the Mochi, Shalmi, Lohari, etc., gates. The City Inspector patrolling along the Circular road entered the Mochi gate to find a large mob coming down and was indeed at once engulfed in it as people were pouring in to join the mob from all side streets, houses, etc. He came along with the mob out of Mochi gate on to the Circular road exhorting them to disperse. Here they made as though to turn to the east towards the railway station, but the City Inspector begged them to turn back, pointing out that the Bradlaugh Hall was in the other direction. Whether they seriously intended going eastward or not it is impossible to say, but they then turned westwards. Crowds were pouring out of all the city gates to join this procession, and from Anarkali and all other directions so that it was growing every moment. The Inspector was involved in the crowd and had difficulty in getting clear of it.

Eventually he got clear and turning down a side street galloped to the Kacheri where he reported the state of affairs about 11-30 A.M., stating that the crowd had hitherto been quite orderly as far as abstaining from any form of mischief was concerned, but was greatly excited and would be difficult to stop. He was sent back and Deputy Commissioner and I at once prepared to meet them. As we rode through Market Chouk we saw the road clear to Nila Gumbaz Chouk where the crowd was pouring eastward toward King Edward's Square. We therefore rode hurriedly on to the Y. M. C. A. Chouk where we saw the huge procession coming down towards the Mall. The crowd was then nearly opposite Mool Chand's shop. Mr. Clarke, Deputy Superintendent of Police and Inspector Khan Sahib Abdul Ghani Khan had been swept along with them and were endeavouring to induce them to go back. Deputy Commissioner and I immediately came up the road to the head of the mob with our few police sowars. There we parleyed with them for some time urging them to go back. Meanwhile, the Cavalry and armoured cars had moved up and blocked the mouth of the road into the Mall behind us. This excellent and timely move was I am sure of great value to Deputy Commissioner and myself, and enabled us to keep the mob at least stationary until Dr. Gokal Chand Naurang arrived. He was on foot however and could not be seen by more than a few in the front ranks. He then appealed to me for a horse and I put him on a Police sowar's animal. Thus mounted, he was able eventually to turn the whole crowd back and head them for the Gol Bagh and Bradlaugh Hall. The street was soon clear and what had looked an ugly situation was saved. The Deputy Commissioner and I then returned to the Mall and proceeded to Market Chouk where we found another mob being held and turned back in the bit of Anarkali Bazaar between the Market Chouk and Nila Gumbaz by Mr. Donald, Mr. Cocks, Mr. Stead and other officers and some constables. Deputy Commissioner and I at once joined them. A few of the Cavalry were lined up behind the police by the way of support. Dr. Gokal Chand Naurang again appeared and led this mob off also to Bradlaugh Hall. This affair had lasted about 2 hours.

After these incidents there was no more trouble. A huge crowd collected in and around Bradlaugh Hall from 2 P.M. and lecturers were put up to speak to keep them quiet there. Dr. Gokal Chand and Lala Duni Chand came to see me at the Kacheri after 2 P.M. and I arranged with them to see that the crowd were not further excited by heated speeches at the meeting, fixed certain limits beyond which any impromptuous procession of students returning from the meeting must not go, arranged for the reception, accommodation and proper treatment of the C. I. D. Officers who were to attend the meeting, and last but by no means least obtained an undertaking from them that the meeting would close by 6 P.M. to allow of the crowds dispersing and returning to their homes well before dark.

Fresh dispositions were made to meet eventualities after the Bradlaugh Hall meeting but no processions were attempted and no trouble occurred. The people dispersed to the City but I heard next day that mobs had paraded the streets till a late hour uttering their cries of "hai, hai," etc., abusing Municipal Commissioners and Honorary Magistrates who had stood out on the Government side and burning copies of the Rowlatt Act. On the 7th instant shops opened as usual and normal conditions appeared to have been re-established for the next three days though I heard of ill-feeling continuing against those of the local gentry who had acted with us.

On the 9th the usual license was given for the Ram Naumi celebration and police arrangements were made.

During the day I was informed that as there was much ill-feeling against some Honorary Magistrates it would be better if they did not attend and I asked Deputy Commissioner to put on certain Extra Assistant Commissioners which he did.

I was informed next day that the celebration took on more of the character of a political demonstration than the purely religious procession it had always been.

A great show of Hindu-Muslim unity was made and shouts of Jai for leaders and for unity were frequent.

On the 10th afternoon I went out with the Inspector-General to Cantonments as news of trouble at Amritsar had come in, to arrange for military assistance, which was promised by 6-30 P.M.

On my return I made certain Police arrangements.

At about 5-30 P.M. I received information that the news of Mr. Gandhi's arrest and of the trouble at Amritsar having got known a "hartal" was commencing. I issued supplementary orders telephoning them to my lines and Police Stations. I then proceeded to my house where I found Mr. Fyson, Deputy Commissioner, who informed me that His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor desired to see me. We proceeded to Government House where His Honour enquired what Police and Military arrangements had been made to guard against trouble. Mr. Cocks, Deputy Inspector-General, C. I. D., Punjab, was also present. A telephone message came in that a big crowd had formed. Mr. Fyson and Mr. Cocks proceeded by car down the Mall. I motored to my lines to turn out my reserve, which I had ordered to be kept in readiness there. I found them ready, fallen in, and despatched armed parties down the McLeod road and Montgomery road to the Mall to rendezvous at the Telegraph Office.

I mounted one of my sowar's horses and with the remaining dozen mounted men proceeded quickly down Montgomery road on to the Mall. We heard firing on the Mall on leaving the lines. At Charing Cross we ran into the Cavalry who were just arriving from Cantonments. I joined the officer in command and we hastened on. Opposite the Telegraph Office, I found Mr. Cocks who informed me that they had had to fire to drive back the mob and that Mr. Clarke, Deputy Superintendent of Police, had gone on, pushing them back to the City. I was told that he had very few men and fearing he might get into difficulties immediately proceeded with my sowars, a few cavalry troopers under a British Officer (Lieutenant Wilson, I believe) and an armed party of foot-police to his assistance.

Before we got about half-way, however, hearing an uproar, I left the foot police and pushed forward rapidly with the mounted force. We found Mr. Clarke in Anarkali Bazar just beyond Nila Gumbaz Chauk, with a handful of Police Constables trying to push back the mob.

Eventually we succeeded in pushing them back nearly to the end of Anarkali Bazar, but there we were stopped the crowd having swelled to huge proportions and formed into a compact mass. They would not give way or disperse and began stoning us. I sent a mounted man back with a note to Mr. Fyson to come up at once with reinforcements. For about three-quarters of an hour we remained there being stoned from in front and from the roofs to our left and right front, being occasionally pushed back a few yards and again pushing forward. We were all hit with brick bats, etc., including the Cavalry Officer. I was hit five or six times—once rather severely on my right shoulder blade, apparently by a brick from one of the house tops. My left hand and thigh were also out—people on some low roofs to our left front in particular were so troublesome that two or three rounds of buck-shot were fired in their direction which eased the situation. Some crackers were thrown by the crowd and for a moment we thought they had secured firearms. A torch on a long pole was put up to the electric supply wires apparently with the object of cutting off the electric light.

A few persons in the crowd seemed to be endeavouring to get them to disperse. Among them was Chaudhri Ram Bhaj Dutt, who asked for a horse which I gave him but which he found unmanageable owing to the uproar. I repeatedly warned the crowd that they must disperse or they would be fired on but they kept up a deafening clamour, shouting and jumping and would listen neither to us nor to Chaudhri Ram Bhaj Dutt. A few more armed foot constables had come up.

Eventually Mr. Fyson arrived with reinforcements. He went forward and ordered the mob to disperse, warning them that we should have to fire. He was stoned. Chaudhri Ram Bhaj Dutt asked for time and Mr. Fyson gave him a few minutes, but the crowd would listen to no one and defied all orders. Mr. Fyson then gave me instructions to fire. I ordered my men to fire with buck-shot. Five or six shots were fired and the crowd broke. I immediately ordered cease fire.

We then moved up on to Circular road. I posted a picket of foot police there and proceeded with the mounted force along the Circular road eastwards. There was some desultory stone throwing as we started eastward. We cleared the street and adjoining gardens, the crowd dispersing rapidly into the City. We went almost up to the Akbari Gate. From there I sent Mr. Clarke on with the mounted police to patrol up to Delhi Gate, down the Landa Bazar and McLeod road and report to me at the Telegraph Office. Mr. Fyson and I turned back the way we had come with the Cavalry, and arrived at the Telegraph Office without incident.

Mr. Clarke on his arrival there reported having assisted to disperse a mob in Landa Bazar which had attacked Mr. de Gale, Assistant Superintendent of Police. This mob did some slight damage to municipal property—broke a lamp or two. The Deputy Commissioner and I took our quarters in the Telegraph Office (where we remained some weeks).

The next day, the 11th April, I was receiving reports all day from my officers and others indicating that the City was in a state of rebellion. The "hartal" continued. It was stated that a committee had been appointed to manage the City, to decide as to "hartal" and whether Government servants should attend their offices, and so forth.

A "Danda Fauj" had been formed by one Channan Din, which went about the City creating great enthusiasm. A mass meeting was held in the Badshahi Mosque in which Hindus joined and there was much excitement and display of the unity. Ram Bhaj Dutt and others addressed the crowd and advised them to stand firm. One Balwant Singh came there and gave out that the Indian troops had mutinied in Cantonments and killed two hundred of the British—that they were coming to their help—that he had himself killed six soldiers. He was carried round in triumph.

In the evening it was decided to march a column of troops and police through the City next morning, and establish pickets to regain control and restore law and order. General Clarke visited me late at night and marked on the map the places where I advised police pickets should be posted. There were to be five police pickets of 28 rank and file each, viz., at Old Kotwali at Bazaz Hatta, at Lakar Mandi, at Lohari Mandi and at Haveli Nawab Sahib. Military pickets were also to be established and a few police men posted with each. The column was formed at the Railway Chauk next morning 12th April at 9-30 A.M. and marched via the Landa Bazar, Delhi Gate, Water Works, Hira Mandi Lakar Mandi and out at Bhati Gate.

The people were sullen and hostile. Remarks were heard that they would not open shops till the Act was cancelled. I saw a man at the Water Works raise his hand threateningly against a British Officer. I heard of the attack on a Criminal Investigation Department Inspector in the Badshahi Mosque that morning. At Hira Mandi, there were large crowds—many armed with sticks—people armed with sticks were coming to or from the mosque. It was said that the mosque was full of people, and it was apparent that it was the centre of disaffection. The Criminal Investigation Department Inspector had been assaulted there. There were crowds between the Hira Mandi and the mosque—attempts were made to disperse the crowds and many warnings were given. They would not disperse but formed elsewhere as soon as they were moved on from one place. It was decided to clear the Badshahi Mosque. This was done by a Muhammadan Magistrate and the gates picketed to prevent re-entry. Crowds came out and joined those already outside. Hira Mandi was packed with people, hostile and angry, many armed with sticks. Such a crowd could not be left between the troops and the pickets just established. It was decided to disperse them. They tried to stampede the horses of the Cavalry. The troops turned and formed up. Mr. Fyson, Deputy Commissioner, ordered the crowd to disperse, warning them they would be dispersed by musketry if they remained. They began stoning—I ordered up armed police. Mr. Fyson with some troopers went forward to the mob and tried to disperse them, but this effort was useless—stoning continued and the mob tried to cut him off. He returned. The foot police came up. I particularly requested the Officer Commanding Troops to let the police do any firing that was necessary, as my men had buck-shot, and I was anxious to avoid rifle fire by the military. I lined up the police in front of the troops and Deputy Commissioner warned the crowd the police were going to fire. I ordered four files on the right to load with buckshot. The Deputy Commissioner instructed me to fire and I ordered the men to fire low. In all 8 shots were fired. The crowd then broke and I ordered "cease-fire." Immediately we moved forward and the crowd dispersed in all directions. I saw only one man fall to the firing. He was carried off by his friends. When we saw all was clear we reformed and moved on. From the first all along our march the Deputy Commissioner had continually announced that no meetings or processions would be allowed in the City. I got back to the Telegraph Office about 12-30 or 1 P.M. The "hartal" continued. I organized patrols of 40 or 50 armed men under Gazetted Officers to move in and about the City by night and day to visit posts and pickets and maintain order.

The funeral of one Kushi Ram, killed at Hira Mandi, was taken out in a huge procession through the City in defiance of the orders prohibiting procession.

This day a "hartal" was observed in Kasur and serious trouble occurred, two Europeans being killed, the station burnt, the train looted, and public buildings attacked. The police there had to fire. Troops from Ferozapore arrived later. At Jallo Telegraph wires were cut; at Patti wires were cut, and goods shed damaged; at Khem Karan the station was damaged.

On the 13th April the "hartal" continued. Wagah Station was sacked and burnt wires were cut and line damaged. An armoured train was derailed. I was informed that the attack on Wagah was the result of seditious meetings at Maniala and Narwar that day.

On the 14th the "hartal" continued. I assisted in the arrangements for the deportation of Messrs. Ram Bhaj Dutt, Harkishen Lal and Duni Chand. There was some disturbance at the Mogulpura workshops and stones were thrown. On this day a train was stoned at Kot Radha Kishen and wires were cut at Wagah, Jallo and Attari. A seditious assembly was reported in Padhana and other villages were said to be restive and preparing to loot.

On the 15th April Martial Law was proclaimed and the great strain of the last four or five days was relieved. It was a very great relief to the Police. The "hartal" continued, but the situation seemed to be improving. Stones were again thrown at a train at Kot Radha Kishen. The stocks on the Government Grass Farm land near Cantonments were set on fire and the villagers of Bangali, Padri, Barki, etc., were suspected.

On the 16th April stones were again thrown at a train at Kot Radha Kishen and a lady and four sepoy were hurt. Martial Law was proclaimed at Kasur. Wires were cut in the Changa Manga jurisdiction. On this day Martial Law Notice No. 10, was issued ordering the ending of the "hartal" in Anarkali from the next afternoon, but shops opened long before the time specified.

Similarly, Martial Law Notice No. 14, ordered the opening of shops in the City on the 18th, but all shops began opening on the 17th. Thus by the 17th evening the "hartal" was over.

Before Martial Law was declared seditious posters were constantly being put up all over the City. I also received reports of picketing and preventing people going to work and conveyances from plying for hire. Reports were frequent also that the people were saying that the police and military were only waiting to turn to their side, that little firing had been done by the police and none by the military, owing to reluctance of both to obey orders. The actual casualties were as follows:—

	Killed or died of wounds.	Wounded.
At Upper Mall . . . . .	1	7
Lohari Gate . . . . .	3	12
Hira Mandi . . . . .	3	26

One man was arrested and convicted for inciting the police to rebel. After Martial Law was declared notices put up were defaced and measures had to be taken to protect them.

On the 18th April (Friday) the Badshahi Mosque was kept closed to avoid chances of trouble should a crowd collect there.

Cases against persons concerned in these disturbances were sent up and tried by Summary Courts and Special Tribunals.

Police pickets and posts were modified or abolished as things settled down and normal conditions gradually returned, until by the 12th June, Martial Law was removed and special arrangements were considered no longer necessary.

ANNEXURE A.

Notice.

Being satisfied that it is intended shortly to convene or collect an assembly or form in public streets, roads or thoroughfares near the Bradlaugh Hall or elsewhere a procession which would in the judgment of the District Magistrate of Lahore, if uncontrolled be likely to cause a breach of the peace, I hereby, under section 30 of the Police Act (V of 1861), require the persons convening or collecting such assembly or directing or promoting such procession to apply for a license not later than 10 A.M. on the day previous to that for which the license is required.

This order will remain in force one month from this date.

ANNEXURE B.

Note and Disposition Statement by Mr. E. P. Broadway.

I have held a meeting of all Inspectors and Officers who are commanding armed pickets to-morrow, have carefully explained to them their duties and responsibilities, the orders regarding use of firearms by police, etc., and places where they can look for support and to which they can report.

They have been ordered to carefully inform and control their men. They have been instructed to see that no compulsion or coercion is used by demonstrators to force shopkeepers or others to close their shops or stop their business in any way.

They will see that all ordinary beat constables are on duty as usual. No beats are to be abandoned or reduced anywhere. On the contrary, where necessary, extra men may be placed on duty at discretion of Inspectors. No posts or chaukis are to be left empty.

All standing and personal guards are to remain at their posts. No one is to be allowed to go away to get food or any other such pretexts.

Officers to carry revolvers in holsters. Arrangements for arming have been carefully explained.

Most particularly I have warned officers present and asked them to instruct their men that there must be no interference by any policeman with shopkeepers and others. They must remain strictly neutral and in no way try to persuade or induce anyone who wishes to close his shop or suspend business to do otherwise. The great importance of self-control, forbearance, patience and good humour has been impressed on all.

Mr. Clarke, Deputy Superintendent of Police and Inspector Mr. Gray, will arm and despatch to their respective posts all the men who will assemble in Lines at 5 A.M.

LAHORE :

The 10th April 1919.

Major-General Sir W. BEYNON.

Major-General Sir W. G. L. BEYNON, K.C.I.E., C.B., D.A.O., Commanding, 16th (Indian) Division.

Letter from Major-General Sir W. Bynon, Commanding, 16th (Indian) Division, to the Adjutant General in India, Army Headquarters, Simla, No. A-2051, dated the 5th September 1919.

In accordance with your No. 026375-1 (A. G.-10), dated 19th July 1919, I have the honour to forward a comprehensive narrative of the recent disturbances in the Lahore Divisional Area under my Command during the period 1st April to my departure on field service on the 29th May 1919.

(2) Events leading to the introduction of Martial Law, 30th March 1919.—At 21-30 hours on the 30th March a telephone message was received from the Inspector-General of Police, Punjab, informing me of the riots which had occurred at Delhi on that day, and further that the Hartal which had been arranged for Lahore on the 30th had been postponed until the 6th April 1919.

(3) 1st April.—As the opening of the High Court was to take place on the 1st April, I deemed it advisable to provide a Guard of Honour of British troops for His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, and a Squadron of Cavalry as escort. I further ordered up No. 10 Armoured Motor Battery from Ferozepore. The function passed off quietly and No. 10 Armoured Motor Battery was returned to Ferozepore.

(4) 4th April, Appendix I.—I, and my Staff, had frequent interviews with the Local Government, and arrangements were made to dispose troops in Lahore on the 6th so as to prevent the possibility of occurrences such as happened at Delhi on the 30th. On the 4th April I warned Brigadier-General R. E. Dyer, C. B., Commanding, Jullundur Brigade, to take special precautions against untoward incidents especially at Amritsar, in consultation with the civil authorities and that he was to despatch 20 Indian ranks under an Indian officer, for the protection of the railway station there. These arrived that evening.

(5) 6th April.—The 6th passed off without disturbances, Hartal was observed in all the cities. In Lahore a procession had to be dispersed by police and cavalry, a few arrests being made by the former. There was no firing.

All troops except guards on Telegraph offices and railway station, returned to cantonments that evening and things appeared normal except for some shops remaining closed.

(6) 9th April.—On the 9th, there was a ball at Government House, Lahore, and I was there informed that Mr. Gandhi had been arrested and that it was quite possible that disturbances would occur at Amritsar on the following Sunday, the 13th.

(7) 10th April.—I accordingly instructed General Dyer on the 10th to send 100 Muhammadan troops to arrive in Amritsar on Saturday morning, 12th April.

(8) Soon after despatching this, a mutilated message was received from the Officer Commanding at Amritsar (Captain Massey), saying that trouble was expected there, and asking for half company of British Infantry, an aeroplane and some gunners. As the Local Government here did not appear to anticipate immediate trouble, this telegram was considered somewhat alarmist. However, this information was immediately repeated to General Dyer at Jullundur, for any action he considered necessary. He was told that the Gunners would be sent from Lahore, but that I had no aeroplanes available at the moment.
