

POVERTY AND WASTE

POVERTY AND WASTE

BY HARTLEY WITHERS

AUTHOR OF

"THE MEANING OF MONEY," "STOCKS AND SHARES," "MONEY CHANGING," ETC.

"The greatest of all possible social reforms would be to raise the standard of wages throughout the country."—MR. BONAR LAW

NEW YORK
E. P. DUTTON AND COMPANY

1920

PREFACE

It is hard to believe that many, who see all the evils of poverty, would live wastefully if they understood how close is the connexion between poverty and waste. This is my excuse for trying to make this connexion clear.

HARTLEY WITHERS

April, 1914

CONTENTS

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTORY

	PAGE
The disappointments of civilization—Competition in comforts—The lot of the workers—A new ideal—The two points of view—A matter of business	I

CHAPTER II

THE WEALTH HEAP

Man's production of goods and services—Their amount limited—Demand for luxuries checks production of necessaries—If luxury were miraculously abolished—Increased production of necessaries and accumulation of capital, and, consequently, demand for labour—Objections and difficulties.	15
---	----

CHAPTER III

THE CLAIMS OF CAPITAL

Capital has to be saved—A store of goods held back from consumption to be devoted to production—Capital essential to industry and so has to be paid for—The hereditary wealth-owner—Hereditary earning-power—The rate of interest for money lent—The additional rate for money risked—How risk might be lessened—The scarcity and dearness of capital	41
---	----

CHAPTER IV

THE EMPLOYER'S DILEMMA

	PAGE
The capitalist employer—The joint-stock company manager—Conflicting claims of workers, shareholders, and consumers—The importance of management—An increase in wages good for all parties—If industry could be concentrated on the production of necessaries	69

CHAPTER V

THE WORKERS

Absurdity of low wages in the midst of abounding wealth—Bad economic results—Attractions of Socialism and its practical impossibility at present—Unity essential to the workers' victory—The evils of violence and intimidation—Middle-class resentment—The waste of intelligence due to lack of education	86
--	----

CHAPTER VI

MIDDLEMEN AND HANGERS-ON

Necessary intermediaries—The prosperity of the dealer and merchant—Their risks—Might be reduced if extravagance and luxury were diminished—The waste and absurdity of advertising—The horde of providers of necessary services, who are not directly productive—Water in the community's capital	115
--	-----

CHAPTER VII

COMMON SENSE AND THE CONSUMER

Why should not we spend our money as we please?—Dangers of the position—Our debt to the community—The appeal to natural laws—The unemployables	134
--	-----

CONTENTS

ix

CHAPTER VIII

THE CONSUMERS' RESPONSIBILITY

	PAGE
Convention in spending—National expenditure—What is luxury?—The cost of motoring—Luxury and industry—Speculation and finance—Responsibility in spending—Thriftlessness of the Workers—Women's influence—Conclusion	149
INDEX	179