INTRODUCTORY

1. History of India from the pre-Mahābhārata War down to 320—348 A.D. (the beginning of the Gupta Period) is chronicled in the Purāṇas. For the subsequent period we have been dependent on inscriptions; and it had been believed that there was no text or written history for it. The inscriptions left certain 'blanks', and gave us a fragmentary view. It is therefore a matter of no small satisfaction to recover a text which turns out to give a connected history where we needed it most. From 78 A.D. we have in our new text a connected history down to the close of the eighth century. And what is still more gratifying is the imperial feature of that history. Some of the matters of great importance that this written record discloses are:—

(1) a full and complete history of the Imperial Gupta epoch (348 A.D. to 500 A.D.), describing its break-up (500 A.D.),

(2) imperial history from (a) Viṣṇuvarḍhana (520—535 A.D.), then following the (b) imperial family of the Maukharis (555—600 A.D.) down to (c) his descendants' re-rise in the person of Prabhākaravarḍhana and Harshavarḍhana (606—647 A.D.), [with a full history of Śaśāṅka, who was a Brahmin by caste and a popular leader rising from Bengal],

(3) history of a Revived Gupta Empire, following the death of Harshavarḍhana, with its decline and fall,

(4) then a vivid description of two popular elections of kings in Bengal and the rise of Gopāla.

Numerous important details, e.g., that Mahāpadma Nanda had been the Prime Minister of Magadha before his kingship, that there was a short-lived republic in Bengal after Śaśāṅka—come in as additions to our knowledge. Further, Indian Imperial history for the first time receives personal touches when the author gives his estimate of character of individual emperors. All this welcome information is stored in a long section—which is a book by itself, being in 1000 ślokas—in the Mahāyāna work entitled Ārya-Maṅjuśrī-Mūlakaḷpa, published [Part III] in the year 1925 by the late MM. Gaṇapati Śāstrī of the State of Travancore in the Trivandrum Sanskrit Series (No. 84).

Possibly some of the Indian scholars, trained to suspect every written book in Sanskrit, would have darkly hinted (as a big historian did to my knowledge when the Arthasāstra was discovered) that 'the book was a 'Southern forgery'.' But fortunately the book was translated in Tibetan in the eleventh century A.D. and the present text agrees word for word with that translation.

My friend Bhadanta Rāhula Sāṅkṛityāyana has collected a unique library from Tibet, including an original Sanskrit manuscript which had been taken from India and translated there. He was fortunate enough to obtain a complete set of Buston's works from the Dalai Lama, which is not available even in the rich Russian collection. Thanks to the help and co-operation of Rev. Sāṅkṛityāyana, and his Tibetan Library (deposited at the Patna Museum), I have been able to get all important passages of the Mañjuśrī-Mūlakalpa compared with the Tibetan text, and to derive benefit from Buston (b. 1289 A.D.—d.1363 A.D.) for the purpose of following some passages and obtaining additional light on the history of S k a n d a G u p t a.

2. According to the Mañjuśrī-Mūlakalpa, Indian history is a succession of empires from the time preceding the Buddha to c. 750 A.D. where it stops. To take the period from 78 A.D., it consists of the following successions:

- (a) Saka dynasty (Śakavamśa, i.e., Kushāns),
- (b) Nāga-Senas, or, Nāgas and Prabha-Vishṇu, i.e., Vishṇuvṛidha Pravara-sena (Vākātaka),
- (c) Guptas (up to Budha Gupta),
- (d) Vishṇu (vardhana) and one descendant,
- (e) Maukharis,
- (f) Srikanṭha dynasty, [Āditya (vardhana), Rājya (vardhana) etc.],
- (g) Imperial Valabhī dynasty (two generations),
- (b) Imperial 'Gauḍa dynasty' i.e., Later Guptas: Ādityasena to Vishṇu-Gupta.

It will be at once noticed that (d), (e) and (g) go to fill up blanks in Indian History.

The Mūlakalpa, 'edited' in the Sanskrit original by the late M.M. Gaṇapati Śāstrī, is a poor production as an edition. The editor took no pain to correct even ordinary orthographical mistakes. He was unfamiliar with the Buddhist technical terms, and in preparing his letter-press he misread numerous words or preserved the misreadings, e.g. the well-known त्रिपि° ('saviour') as त्रिपि° ('ascetic'). Dr. Gaṇapati Śāstrī was under the disadvantage of possessing a single manuscript from which he edited the text. We are, however, thankful to get the text even in its present form. Practically the whole of the historical section, Chapter 53 in Part III, has been compared by Rev. Rāhula Sāṅkṛityāyana, with the result that we are better situated than we would have been if we had only the Sanskrit or only the Tibetan text before us. I am combining the results of the two versions, indicating their difference wherever important and necessary.

3. The (A)MMK (I adopt this abbreviation for the text; the Sanskrit version will be indicated by S., and Tibetan by T.) was written in Bengal. Geographically it is to Gauḍa and Magadha that the author pays his greatest attention. In fact his history from the Nāga (C. 140 A.D.) and Gupta times (350 A.D.) to the beginning of the Pāla period (750 A.D.) is a survey from Gauḍa—written from the point of view of Gauḍa, showing an intimate concern with Gauḍa and the provinces in the proximity of Gauḍa. To him Gauḍa means the whole of Bengal and includes generally Magadha.

4. The author brings his history down from two different points to the beginning of the Pāla Period. Once he starts with Śakas, pauses with the Guptas and comes down right to Gopālaka after finishing the Gupta line. Then, again, he starts with the Nāga dynasty (Bhāraśiva), deals with Samudra [Gupta] and his brother in Gauḍa, and with Śaśānka whose name for some reason he conceals but whose history he makes unmistakable, and then comes down to the Gopālas, 'the dāsajīvins (śūdras). He does not know the later and the great Pāla kings (whom he would not have left unnamed had he known them) and their patronage of Mahāyāna. I would therefore regard the work as one of circa 770 A.D. (the death of Gopāla), or roughly 800 A.D.

5. It was translated into Tibetan about 1060 A.D. by the Hindu Paṇḍita Kumāra-kalaśa in co-operation with the Tibetan interpreter Śākya-blo-gros. The translation forms part of the Skangyur (rgyud D). The date of Śākya-blo-gros is fixed by that of Subhuti-Śrī-Śānti, a companion of Dīpaṅkara Śrījñāna (Atiśa). Subhuti Śrī-Śānti, and Śākya-blo-gros together translated the Pramāṇa- vāritika which is in the Stanhgyur. Dīpaṅkara reached Tibet in 1042 and died in 1054 A.D.¹

6. The history is put in the prophetic style in the mouth of the Buddha, who undertakes to narrate the future vicissitudes of his Doctrine and Church, and in that connexion royal history is dealt with. It is not strictly speaking, history proper as in the Purāṇas, but a secondary reference, the primary note being the history of Buddhism. This prophetic form of history was adopted in several Mahāyāna sūtras which have been cited by B u s t o n. A commentary on one of them (Abhisamayā-lāṅkāra) says that a particular historical prophecy came to be true, that is, the author of that sūtra came to know of the event as a past event. In many places the writer of the MMK forgot to use the future tense and used the legitimate past tense in the narration. All such passages I have put in the past tense. The language and style has a striking resemblance with the Yuga-purāṇa in the Garga-Saṃhitā.

7. The historical narration is a lengthy one, the chapter covering 1005 verses in the printed S. MMK (pp. 579—656; Paṭala-visara 53) and about 25 less in T. MMK (rgyud D, Ch. XXXVI, pp. 425b—483b). The learned editor of the S. AMMK has left the verses unnumbered. For convenience of reference I have numbered them. I shall refer in my summary to the verses so marked. The Tibetan text ends at verse 989 with its first line (ataḥ avichi-paryantaṃ na rājā tatra vidyate). T. MMK is a word-for-word and termination-for-termination translation, hence the task of comparison becomes easy. T. MMK has 3 verses extra after verse 829.

8. Except for the opening 9 lines of prose [which is not to be found in T.] the whole text of the historical section is in anushtubh verses. Their language is Gāthā Sanskrit which makes their understanding at places a matter more of guessing than of Sanskrit construction.

8a. In some cases it is evident from the context that the MS from which the Tibetan translation was made, was defective.

9. The length of life of many kings is exaggerated. I have left them out in my summary except where it seems to be reasonable or otherwise important. I also omit the history of future births of the virtuous and sinful kings and their careers in paradise or hell, which is an important concern of the Buddhist religious historian but none of the present-day historian.

10. The name of the chapter, rather the section (parivarta), is Rājavyākaraṇa-parivarta, literally 'the Section on the Kingly Exposition' but technically 'the Section on the Prophecy about Kings'. Dynastic names as a rule are omitted. I have supplied them [in square brackets]. In many places the names of kings—at times very important ones—are denoted by their initials only—e.g., H. for Harshavardhana, R. for Rājyavardhana, S. for Skanda Gupta. This makes the task of identification at times impossible.

11. Our Buddhist historian often gives castes of the rulers. For instance, he notes that the king who defeated Śaśāṅka ("Soma") was a Vaiśya by caste, 'Soma' was a Brahmin, the Gopālas (Pālas) were of servile caste, etc. Our authority is very full on Śaśāṅka and supplies certain details which were badly wanted. A most important fact which we gather from the author is that after Harshavardhana and Śaśāṅka and before the rise of the Pālas there was an Imperial Dynasty in the East with its seat at Benares and in Magadha. This seems quite natural, as without it we would have found the Chālukyas come up to the North. Our new datum helps us to correct the erroneous view of V. Smith that after Harsha there was no imperial power in the North. Another fact of importance is that the Buddhist historian specially notes the imperial position of rulers.

12. The author, after the Śūṅga and Kadphises period, divides his history geographically:

- (1) of Northern India (Uttara-Dik, verses 549—585), (S., pp. 621—624; T., 452B—454B);
- (2) of Western India (Pāścāt Deśa, verses 586—609), (S., pp. 624—626; T., pp. 454B—455B);
- (3) of Mid-India, (Madhyadeśa; 'Madhyama Kings', verses 610—621), (S., p. 626; T. 455B—456A);
- (4) of Southern India (Dakṣiṇa Dik, verses 621—636), (S., pp. 626—628; T., pp. 456A—457A);
- (4a) of the Archipelago (636—640), ('Dvīpesbu', S., p. 628; T., 457A);
- (5) of Eastern India (Pūrva Dik, verses 640—683), (S., pp. 628—647; T., pp. 457A—469A);

- (6) Minor references of Hindu Central India (Madhyadeśa, verses 903—912), (S., p. 648; T., 470A), and of Miscellaneous Provinces (913—924), (S., p. 649; T., 470B).

At verse 924 royal history ends; then there is a summing up of the scheme (925—932); and from 933 up to the end of 955 a history of Buddhist clergy and their condition is detailed, and then from 956 to 980 political Brahmanas and a few Śūdras are described, and finally from 981 to 988 the four heavenly Mahārājas and Gods. The passage from 989 to the 1005 is not in the T. MMK. It deals with semi-divine beings etc. and is clearly a later addition.² Our interest ends with verse 980 where the history of leading monks, Brahmins and Śūdras closes.

In the beginning verses 1 to 344 detail the biography of the Buddha (supposed to be given by himself) up to his Nirvāṇa. From verse 335 royal history begins with an enumeration of the ruling contemporaries of the Buddha who had come in personal contact with the Prophet. Thus from verse 345 (S., p. 605; T., p. 442) to verse 932 (S., p. 650; T., p. 471B) about 600 verses (taking into account some extra verses to be found in T. MMK) are devoted to history. But that history is an enlargement of history proper by the explanatory verses as to the Mahāyāna Mantra and magical processes which particular kings are alleged to have practised to attain greatness, and by invisible history of those princes in paradise or hell. Although the real matter in the 600 verses is cut down by about fifty per centum, we are immensely lucky in getting about 300 ślokas as new data on Indian History. The account of the punishment of bad kings in after life will not interest the present-day materialist reader. Our Buddhist writer does not forgive, like the modern historian, the wickedness and arbitrariness in kings. He would have thrown into the waste-paper basket all modern histories as so many veiled and covert panegyrics on force and fraud and virtueless greatness. His outlook is different. He emphasizes the relentless law of morality, the avenging principle of KARMA and he follows the rascally kings to their tortures in hell. This, to follow the current of the time, I have omitted in my analysis. Yet the material so curtailed is unexpectedly large.

I have divided our data into parts and sections, giving descriptive captions to each. The importance of the sections has been pointed out in the comments attached to each section.

The MMK history seems to have been from one pen. It is not a book which has grown from generation to generation. Restricting ourselves to the historical section, it has drawn upon two classes of earlier literature. One of them was purely historical, drawing from which is evident in the section dealing with the Imperial History of Madhyadeśa from the Śaka-vaṃśa down to the break-up of the Imperial Guptas. Here, religious interest is wholly lacking (except for the reign of Bālāditya). The author has utilized at least three such temporal histories, one of which had been composed about 700 A.D. and which was very full on a century for the whole of India—North (Himālayan States), South, East, West, Central (Mid) India, and the Colonies. His other source-books, of temporal nature, were two independent books on the Gupta dynasty, from the beginning down to the end of the Later Guptas, which must have been available in the early Pāla period when the MMK was written and which was probably the record kept up from generation to generation in the royal archives of the Guptas. We should recall here that Yuan Chwang actually saw political records being maintained yearly, when he visited India in the middle of the 7th century. Two long extracts in the MMK from two different sources are given, one for the Magadha branch and the other for a Bengal (Gauḍa) branch of the Guptas. Then, the author is largely indebted to the sacerdotal history maintained by his own Church. This literature has been availed of not only by the MMK, but by various Mahāyāna texts which have been cited by Buxton in his critical historical survey Chos-hbyung, e.g., Chandragarbhā-paripṛiccbhā (which cites full details of the great war of Skanda Gupta¹), Laṅkāvatāra-sūtra, Kālachakra, etc.—and by Tārānātha amongst others.

Our author has two rest-points for his history—one is the end of Harshavardhana's reign, the disruption of the empire of Mid-India (Madhyadeśa) and the dissolution of the Nepal Kingdom under Aṃśuvarman's successor; and the other is the elections in Bengal, first of a popular leader as king, and then, of Gopāla the Śūdra. The author has utilized good and reliable material for the successive empires from 78 A.D. to 770 A.D.

The basis of such dynastic Manuals was the system noted by Yuan Chwang mentioned above, which goes back at least to the time of Khā-ravela (2nd century B.C.) as is evident from his inscription noting each year's important events.

PART I

MAGADHA AND MADHYA-DEŚA; IMPERIAL PERIOD

§ 1. Śāisunāka Dynasty

The Buddha begins his prophecy about his own Nirvāna (verses 13 ff). [Read in verse 10 sa eva instead of sa epa;—in verse 14 Mallānām upavartane instead of upaparvate; correct similarly Mallānām upadartate (verse 18) into upavartane]. He relates his biography from verse 24 (p. 381).

[Correct in verse 36 Burubilvām into Urubilvām (T.).]

Verse 118 gives the name Kuśāgrapurī of the Magadhas. The mountain Vārāha had the Paipala Cave.
Capital of Magadha.

In verse 137 the Tibetan text (p. 432) reads Brāhmaṇaḥ instead of Śramaṇaḥ before Kāśyapa.

In verse 140 the visit of Ajātaśatru, king of the Magadhas, who had been overtaken by grief for his father's death, is mentioned. The king describes his own miserable condition and appeals:
Ajātaśatru.

"I am abandoned by relatives as untrustworthy and so I stand before the nation. I am fallen, (destined to the terrible hell). Whose shelter shall I seek (read kaṃ śaraṇam instead of kaḥ śa, 145)? Save me, you Great Hero....."

Division of ashes of the Buddha is detailed, in verses 207 ff. The Magadha capital is called Rāja (elsewhere Rājagṛīva) and Kuśāgrapura in verse 232.

"After my passing away, in the end of the period (yugānte) kings will fight each other (maḥipālā bhaviṣyanti paraspara-vadbe (incorrect śiḍhe) ratā), and bhikṣhus will become industrialists (babu-karmāntā), and the people overtaken by greed; Buddhist laity will lose faith; will kill each other, will examine each other." There will be a general decline and demoralisation in Buddhism (236—246; read pariśesbava catur-śiḍhaḥ for pariśesbava caturśiḍhe, 246).
Revival of orthodox Hinduism.

"The country will be invaded by Devas and Tīrthikas [Tīrthika-krāntā-bhūyishṭhā Devā-(incorrect sarvā) krāntā cha medinī]. The people will be having faith in Brahmin caste (bhaviṣhyanti tadā kāle dvija-varṇa-ratā janā). At that time men will indulge in the killing of living creatures; they will have false conduct." This is the prophecy (or description—vyākṛita) of Kali age (248).

From verse 250 comes the description of relic-worship, of the corporal remains of the Buddha, and, once more, that of their partition by Mahā-Kāśyapa (minor corrections which are many here are omitted). Ajāta, 'of great army', applied for a portion of the relics (257). [In verse 266 a (common) mistake tāpin° for tāyin° occurs in the printed text.] The king is called the son of Bimbisāra (307) (misspelt in S. as Bimbāsāra throughout, but correct in T.).

In verse 321 he is styled as Māhārāja Ajāta (Ajāta-śatru in T.) 'the Magadhan king.' He will be king (rāja) of Aṅga (T.) (S., 'up to Aṅga'), Magadha, up to Vārāṇasī, in the N. up to Vaiśālī (322).

Extent of Ajātasatru's Kingdom.

His son will be king by name U. ('Ukārākhyā') (i.e., Udāyin) (324). He will be prone to the Buddha's teaching, and will have it reduced to writing. His reign will be for 20 years. He will be for 30 years with his father (326). He will die at midnight.

Udāyin, his son, got Buddha's teaching written.

Comments

The kings are:

Bimbisāra
|
Ajātasatru
Udāyin (20 years)

Udāyin is stated to be the king in whose reign the words of the Buddha were committed to writing (tadetat pravachanam Śāstū lekḥapayishyati vistaram). This is the first mention about the Teacher's words being reduced to writing.

After the Buddha's death there was a decline in Buddhism. It may be noted that the age of decline is dated in Kali Age. Of the earlier age (the Ādi Yuga) the kings mentioned (See § 2) are the well-known kings of Purāṇic history.

§ 2. Ancient Kings, before the Buddha

In the First Yuga the kings were:

Nahusha and others (332),

Pārthiva and others (332),

Budha, Śukra, Udaya (not in T., 333 up to 336),

Śāntanu, Chitra, Suchitra, the Pāṇḍavas, the Vāravatya Yātavas who came to an end (astamitā) cursed by the Ṛṣhi; Kārtika, Kārttavīrya, Daśaratha, Dāśarathi, Arjuna, the minister Aśvatthāman son of Dvi (ja) Droṇa (335). They were worshippers of the Buddha (!) (337).

§ 3. Kings of the time of the Buddha [Sixth century B.C.]

The kings between Dvāpara and Kali will be bad kings (343).

"In the present age the kings are" (344),

(1) Prasenajit of Kosala,

(2-3) King Bimbisāra and another,

(4) Udayana, the best of the Kshatriyas, son of Śatānika.

(5) (a) Subāhu,

(b) Sudhanu (T.) Sudhana (S.),

(c) Mahendra,

(d) Chamasa (T.), Chandrasama (S.),

(e) Simha, of the Lichchhavis at Vaiśālī ('from the Śākya family', T.)

(6) Udāvi (Udāyi), (Varshadhara, T.)

(7) Vidyota Pradyota (T.) 'Vidyota Mudyota' (S.), 'the Mahāsena', at Ujjayanī, also 'Chanda'.

(8) Rājā Śuddhodana at the capital Kapila, entitled 'the Virāḥ' (president of a vairājya republic), 'very powerful' (348).

These were contemporaries of Śākyasimha Buddha, all who had come in personal contact with the Buddha and respected his teachings" (349—352).

(9) Ajāta [is again mentioned after the group in verse 353 as if by a footnote.]

Comments

The group of No. 5 seems to consist of Lichchhavi rulers. They were not descendants of Ajātaśatru, as wrongly supposed by Tārānātha (J. B. O. R. S., I, 79). The description of No. 8 is noteworthy. Although he is the father of the Buddha he comes last. Probably they are given in order of political and constitutional importance.

Udayana, son of Śatānika (of Kauśāmbī) is described as being of the best Kshatriya family amongst his contemporaries (kshatriya-śreṣṭhabh), which confirms Bhāsa. The Lichchhavis are also stated as Kshatriyas, and connected with the Śākyas.

§ 4. "100 years after the Buddha"

Revival of Buddhism

Emperor Aśoka: His Stūpas and Stone Pillars

[Like Yuan Chwang, the author of our AMMK has fallen into a confusion between the Aśoka of the time of the Second Council who flourished a century after the Buddha and the Aśoka the Great (Maurya). He is called variously in Northern Buddhism: 'Nanda' (Rockhill, p. 186; Schiefner, p. 61), 'Kāla-Aśoka' (as distinguished from 'Dharma-Aśoka', i.e., the Maurya) and Kāma-Aśoka (Tārānātha). This Aśoka of 100 A.B. was Nanda I or Nandavardhana (J. B. O. R. S., I. 81, 84). The AMMK has transformed Aśoka the Maurya into the Aśoka of A. B. 100. The other Aśoka is mentioned again as Viśoka. Except the date the whole datum is to be taken as on Aśoka Maurya placed out of his place.]

100 years after the Buddha in a dark age there will arise at Kusuma-nagara an emperor ['Protector of the (whole) earth] famous as Aśoka (353, 355; S., p. 606; T., p. 442 B). At first he will be sharp in action, with anger, unkind; having come across a selfless Bhikshu he will become considerate as to what is right and what is wrong, very rich, scrupulous and kind (356—58). He had in his boyhood by mistake and in play done homage to Śākyaśiṃha Buddha, hence—

'Ye, king, rule over Jambudvīpa along with its Forests' (361). At the instance of his guide, he out of the old stūpa over the Buddha's relics at Veṅuvana in the 'Rāja' capital city [Rājagṛība], took out the jar of relics and divided in hundreds, he beautified the whole of this Jambudvīpa with stūpas at one moment through Yakshas. Thousands of Stone Pillars (Sila-yashti) were set up at Chaityas and as human [dehinām] memorials (369-70). These monuments were erected in one night by Yakshas in the service of Aśoka. Then the king Dharmāśoka on his chariot undertook a journey of inspection, and decorated and honoured those monuments with gold, silver, and copper (372—377). On his death he attains divinity. For 87 years he worshipped relics and lived altogether for 100 years. He died of disease (379). —

Comments

The technical name for Aśoka pillars and their two classes should be noted, viz., one set to mark old Chaityas and the other as human memorials (stūpas). Inscriptional monuments are not noted. They were mostly governmental. His tour is also noted.

§ 5. Early Emperors before the Buddha

He [Aśoka] knew the Mantra to be an Emperor (Chakravartin) which had been known to Nahusha, Sitāpatra, Sagara, Dilīpa, Mandhātā, (385—388). By virtue of mantras of Mahāyāna the following kings in the past age had attained success:

Dundhumāra,
Kandarpa, his son
Prajāpati, his son
Nībhi, his son
Ūrṇa (T.),

Rishabha, son of Lābhin,
Rishabhputra Bharata (388—395).

Comments

The Buddha employs past tense in respect of these kings. They are implied to be ancient kings of the pre-Buddhan age by the next verse 396 where the kings of Benares who 'lived' in the Middle Time are described. This Middle Time is to be distinguished from the Future Middle Time mentioned later wherein the Gupta emperors (§ 17) are placed. The kings of the Past Middle Age were past kings in the Buddha's time.

§ 6. Imperial Dynasty of Benares [before 600 B.C.]

These lived in the Middle Age (396). King Brahmadata was at the great capital Vārāṇasī (398). He was a successful king, known all over, very vigorous, very kind. His son was of pious deeds, wise, and of firm undertakings. The son of the latter was Harya (Hayagrīva, T.), his was Śveta. These were successful and famous, [and their success was due, of course, to Mahāyāna mantras] (401—3).

Comments

The Dynasty of Vārāṇasī is the centre of imperial history before the rise of Magadha and Kosala. Śīsunāka, the founder of the Magadha dynasty on the fall of the very ancient dynasty of the Bṛihadhrathas, was a cadet of this dynasty of Vārāṇasī or Kāśī. The dynasty of Kāśī annexed Magadha c. 727 B.C. (J.B.O.R.S., I, 114). Brahmadata was the greatest king of the line; he conquered Kosala and made it a part of his empire according to the Vinaya (II). This must have taken place at least three generations before Prasena-jit's father Mahā-Kosala, who owned Benares; and attacks by three earlier Kosala kings on Benares are known to the Buddhist Jātakas. The date 727 B.C. fits in with the great rise of Benares. It had an empire from Benares (from the frontiers of the kingdom of Kauśāmbī) to Kosala in the N., and to the frontiers of Aṅga in the E. A king of the line was Dhṛitarāshṭra who was defeated by Śatānika of Kauśāmbī* (Śatapatha, 13, 8, 4, 19). The rivalry for imperial position was carried on by the Magadha branch of the Benares House in the period of the Buddha and finally it suppressed Kosala. The bone of contention was made Benares which was rightfully claimed by the Śīsunākas, it being their ancestral possession. According to our history the house of Benares was imperial only for 3 generations.

* This must have happened just before the Buddha, as Udayana son of Śatānika was a contemporary of the Buddha.

§ 7. Magadha Kings and their Ministers, subsequent to Udāyin
[c. 450 B.C.—338 B.C.]

After various advices put in the mouth of the Buddha on magical practices for kings of the future, history is again taken up in verse 413 (S., p. 612; T., p. 445 B). After this Aśoka-Mukhya there will be Viśoka who will worship (Buddha) relics for 76 years (416). He was a good king. He died of fever. After him was Śūrasena [Vīrasena of Tārānātha]. He caused stūpas to be put up to the confines of the Sea. He reigned for 17 years. After him there will be king Nanda at Pushpa-City. He will have a large army and he will be a great power (422). He was called 'the leading vile man' (Nicchamukhya) (424). He had been a Prime Minister; by magical process he became king (424). 'In the capital of the Magadha-residents there will be Brahmin controversialists, lost in false (T.; S.—'success') pride; without doubt they will have false pride and claims; and the king will be surrounded by them' (425-26). The king, though a pious soul and just, will give them riches (427). Owing to his association with a good guide he built 24 monasteries (428). His minister was a Buddhist Brahmin Vararuchi who was of high soul, kind and good. The king, though true, caused alienation of feeling of the Council of Ministers at Pāṭala City. (434-35). The king became very ill, died at 67. His great friend was a Brahmin, Pāṇini by name. He will become a believer in me (Buddha); and had mantra of success from Lokeśa (T.) (439).

[New light on the History of Mahāpadma Nanda and Pāṇini]

This is one of the most important sections of the AMMK. The history of the dynasty called the Śāisunakas in the Pūrāṇas is found in the best form here as far as Northern Buddhist records go. (a) 'Viśoka' is undoubtedly the 'Kālāsoka' of Burmese Buddhism and the 'Nandin' of Vaiśālī of Tārānātha, in whose reign the Second Council was held (JBORS., I, 73) and whom I have proposed to identify with Nandavardhana of the Purāṇas (Ibid., 80 ff). His successor, (b) Śūrasena, the good king ('dharmāchārī') of the AMMK, is the 'Vīrasena' of Tārānātha, 'Bhadrāsena' of the Burmese tradition, Nanda of Rockhill and Mabānanda of the Purāṇas (JBORS., I, 73, 92). Then comes the infamous (c) Nanda, the usurper, who is Mahā Nanda's successor 'Mabā Padma Nanda' of the Purāṇas.

The account which we get of this king in the AMMK, is most important. He was the Prime Minister (Mantrin) of Śūrasena, who ruled in Magadha up to the Sea, that is, was an emperor. Nanda, the usurper, was called the 'Nichamukhya, the lowest man of his age.' This popular estimate was heard by Alexander's companions who reached India in the time of his son. He was not an incapable man and totally devoid of virtue according to the AMMK, whose greatest complaint is that though a man of judgment Nanda patronised the Brahmin opponents of Buddhism. The AMMK notes a great intellectual activity of the orthodox type under Nanda. Vararuchi was his minister who had a high reputation, and Pāṇini was his favourite. The greatness of these Brahmins the Buddhist chroniclers before the time of the AMMK, could not deny and consoled themselves by claiming them as Buddhists, for without being Buddhists how could men be great? A clever usurper has to pose as a great patron of intellect and letters. Mahāpadma Nanda was here perfect. Yet the AMMK notes an undercurrent. The king became unpopular with the Council of Ministers (virāgayāmāsa mantriṇām Nagare Pāṭalābhvaye, virakta-mantrivargis tu satyasandho mahābalaḥ), though the king was Satyasandha (constitutionally correct to the Hindu Ministry) (in spite of his) great power'. About causing alienation of the ministers the text is further explicit by its 'virāgayāmāsa mantriṇām Nagare Pāṭalābhvaye' (434). The king fortunately died of illness and old age, and nothing untoward happened on account of this alienation of feeling.

After this king, Chandragupta is dealt with (§ 8). The supplanting of Nanda Mahāpadma's successor is not mentioned, hence nor his immediate successor.

It seems that here we have a true history which in the main is supported by Greek notices. We are thankful to gain some details of the constitutional situation of the reign in an Indian account.

The chronology of the AMMK is free from that confusion which we find in other Buddhist accounts for the period. The AMMK data are independent, and they support the Purāṇas. We have here a positive record about Pāṇini's date. He flourished a generation before Alexander. His mention of Yavanānī must refer to the Yavanas living in Afghanistan before Alexander or the Yavanas in the Persian territories. That Pāṇini knew the Persians well is proved by his 'Parīsus';

* The Buddhist historian found an explanation of his power in the king's having brought under his control the piśācha Pīlu.

and Pāṇini's home was near enough, if not at the time within, the Persian empire. His time on our this datum will be c. 366—338 B.C. (Nanda Mahāpadma; JBORS., I. 116). The Kathāsaritsāgara story is to be modified in view of our AMMK material. The latter is historical, while the former after all is a story. The confusion of Tārānātha that Nanda, the friend of Pāṇini, was the father of Mahāpadma is removed by the AMMK.

§ 8. Maurya Dynasty

Later than him (Nanda), Chandragupta will become king (439). He will rule without a rival. He (will be) very prosperous (K. Chandragupta. Mahābbogī, T.; not Mahāyogī as in S.), true to his coronation oath (satyasandha), and of moral soul (dbarmātmā) (440). On bad advice he killed many, on account of which he fainted with boils at his death.

He placed on his throne his son Bindusāra (T.; S.—Binduvāra), a minor, at midnight, with tears. Bindusāra's prime minister was wicked. As Bimbisāra (T., Bindusāra) had made a chaitya⁶ he was rewarded by being born in the dynasty of Chandragupta. While a minor the king obtained great comfort; when of full manhood he turned out to be bold, eloquent and sweet-tongued. He ruled himself up to (the age of) 70 (448-49).

His prime minister was Chāṇakya, successful in wrath, who was Death (Yamāntaka) when angry. That bad brahmin lived a long time, he covered three reigns (455-6). He went to hell (458). "[Then follows a homily (up to 478)]."

Chandragupta and Chāṇakya

Character of Bindusāra

Only these two names are given under the dynasty of Chandragupta. Aśoka the Great is already misplaced above. The succession of Bindusāra as a minor is noteworthy, and also his character sketch which was wanting up to this time. He was not a Buddhist. An explanation was therefore due. How could a king be successful without having been a Buddhist? He had as a child raised a toy stūpa of dust. This every Indian child does even to-day. The common form of their play is to raise a mound of dust.

⁶S. and T. disagree here. The S. text reads that Bimbisāra made a chaitya through Simbadatta, hence was born in the dynasty or 'royal family' of Chandragupta; while T. reads that Bindusāra in his playfulness had raised a (toy) chaitya, hence he was so born,—it has in place of Simbadatta, 'in playful sports'.

Chandragupta was not a Buddhist. His military career was punished by his illness and poisonous boils [or carbuncle, (vishaspho-taib)].

Chāṇakya has come in for a lot of abuse and deliverance into hell. In his Arthśāstra he has penalised embracing monkish life without providing for one's family and without state permission. He was hard on Buddhists otherwise. The Buddhist history must have its revenge by assigning such a statesman at least to a long career in hell on paper. The historical detail about him, which is important, is that he lived in three reigns, trīṇi rājyāni. Chandragupta seems to have died comparatively young. He had a reign of 24 years, both according to the Purāṇas and the Buddhist records (JBORS., I, 93). He was a young man when he ascended the throne. Probably he died about 45, leaving a minor son. Bindusāra reigned for 25 years according to the Purāṇas, for 28 according to the Mahāvamsa and for 27 according to the Burmese books. The difference is probably to be explained by his minority rule, which would be adjusted in the next reign where there is a difference of about 4 years in the different data, the Purāṇas giving less than the Mahāvamsa. Chāṇakya must have come down to the opening years of Aśoka, to be the mantrin in three reigns. He would have thus maintained the unity of the Maurya policy for over 50 years in his person. Tārānātha attributes large conquests between the Eastern and Western Seas, etc., (of the Deccan) in the reign of Bindusāra to this great Minister's régime (JBORS., II, 79). Similarly Rādhagupta's ministry lasted beyond Aśoka. Rādhagupta might have been a descendant of Vishṇugupta Chāṇakya.

It should be marked that the system of noting historically in Buddhist records the Prime Ministers' names begins from the Nanda period, or even earlier from Bimbisāra. In the period from the Śaisunākas to the Mauryas, there is thus strong evidence of some real ruling power having been vested in the Prime Minister with his council. The council from the time of the master of Mahāpadma Nanda up to the last days of Aśoka is prominent in the Buddhist records.

Vishṇugupta Chāṇakya is taken up again in the list of political Brahmins at the end (966—70) [See § 57] where his administration is praised as being strong and just, but his anger is denounced.

§ 9. Buddhist Saints and Teachers

From verse 479 to verse 530, there follows a Church history.

"In that time my Bhikshus will be very learned" (479). Mātṛichīna (T.—Mātṛicheṭa or Mātṛichina. Mātṛicheṭa) will flourish in Nṛipa-nagara, in Khaṇḍa forest. A stotra (hymn of praise) will be composed by him (480—490). Nāgā[rjuna], after 400 years of 'my Nirvāna' (490-91) will be born, who will live for 106 years. He will possess Māyūri-vidyā, he will know the essence and truth of the Śāstras and of niḥsvabhāva. He will attain Buddhahood. There will be A s a ṅ g a (T.; S., Saṅga), a learned bhikshu. He will divide and arrange the sūtra-meaning. He will be known in the world as self-possessed, and will be a(?)—tuchccha-sīla, magnanimous. His Vidyā (T.) will be called Śāladūti. His intellect will be great in making collections and the explanation of the Commandment (doctrine). He will live for 100 years (494—97). Not much later will be N a n d a (T.—Arhan), a well-known Tāntrika (499-500) whose mantra is given in this book (AMMK) (up to 528). N a n d a k a will be in Chandanamāla (529).

Date of Nāgārjuna

For the saint Nāga, that is, Nāgārjuna a definite date is given—beginning of the 5th century A.B. This will place his rise in the first century B.C. This seems to be the most reliable date for him. Prof. Lévi's date for him is not acceptable. He does not figure in the activities of K a n i s h k a. He was the father of Mahāyāna. He must have therefore flourished before Kanishka. In the section last but one, Nāgārjuna is placed before A ś v a g h o s h a, and Aśvaghosha is placed in the reign of Buddha [y]aksha, the first king of the Y a k s h a D y n a s t y. The Yaksha dynasty represents the two Kadphises (§ 11). Hence Aśvaghosha's time is the beginning of the first century A.D.

§ 10. Low Period

[Kings after the Mauryas]

K. Gomin [Pushyamitra, 188 B.C.—152 B.C.]

Destruction of Buddhism

In the Low Age (yugābhāve) there will be king, the chief Gomin (Gomimukhya, S.; 'Gomin by name', T.) 'destroyer of my religion' (530). Having seized the East and the gate of Kashmir, he the fool, the wicked, will destroy monasteries with relics, and kill monks of good conduct. He will die in the North (532-33), being killed along with his officers (? sa-rāshṭrā) and his animal relations by the fall of a mountain rock (534). He was destined to a dreadful suffering in hell (535—537).

Comments

In verse 535 the king is abused by the expression Gomi-shaṇḍa, 'G o m i the bull'. The name is concealed; and the real import of Gomi or Gomin is not clear. But the description shows that the hellish, the animalish king is no other than the Brahmin emperor P u s h y a m i t r a. It is definitely stated that Northern India from the Prāchī up to the Kashmir valley was under this king.

'The gate of Kashmir' which is mentioned again and again in the AMMK is probably Dvārābbisāra. In our text a point at or near Jammu seems to be meant.

§ 11. The Yaksha Dynasty. [End of 1st Cent. B.C. to 1st Cent. A.D.]

Restoration of Buddhism

After (Gomi-shaṇḍa the Wicked) the king according to the pious tradition (śrute) will be Buddha-paksha (read Yaksha). He, a K. Buddha Yaksha, Mahā-Yaksha, very charitable, will be undoubtedly fond of Buddhism (Buddhānām iāsane rataḥ), in that low age (538-539). The king, extremely fond of Buddha's teaching will build in many places monasteries, gardens, chaityas, Buddha's images, stepped wells, wells, etc. He will die full of age (gatā-yusha, 541). T. 542 a.

His son will be king, possessed of a big army and great power—the famous Gambhīra Yaksha—over the whole land (544). He will be self-possessed. That king, the Mahādyuti, (bbupatiḥ sa mahādyutiḥ), will build in many places monasteries, rest-houses, chaityas, stepped wells (545-546). He practised mantra of Mañjughosha of 16 syllables and became very prosperous (546).

Comments

Who were the Yaksha dynasty of Buddhapaksha and Gambhīra yaksha, father and son, who restored Buddhism in India after the Śūnga period? The answer is given by the known chronology and history. After the Śūnga age it was under the Early Kushans—the Kadphises—that Buddhism was re-established. The AMMK itself gives us data for this identification. It describes Gambhīra as an emperor (prithvīmakḥiloditām, 544, p. 621). It describes him by a significant term mahādyuti (bbupatiḥ sa mahādyutiḥ). 'He the Mahādyuti king' and his father are called Yaksha and Mahāyaksha, by which the Mongolian type is intended. See AMMK, XXII (p. 233)—'Yakshānāmtu tathā vāchā uttarāṇḍisi ye narā. Tārānātha says that the first of these kings had enlisted the sympathy of the emperor of China on his side. This was true of Kadphises I. The name Gambhīra is either a translation of some title of Kadphises II or an attempt to Sanskritize an early edition of the Indian rendering of his name, for instance, Gabhī from Kapbi. Buddha-pakha (if the reading is not Buddha yakha) would mean 'the king who took up the cause of the Buddha.'

These two kings are supposed to be kings or rather emperors of Madhyadeśa, as they have been given in that imperial list as the last dynasty. Their time is again indicated by (§ 54) where Buddha-paksha is the patron of Aśvaghoshā. It is significant that Kanishka is denoted in the AMMK as Turushka (§ 14) and a ruler of the North, rather Central Asia and Kashmir. Aśvaghoshā is given as arising a generation or so before him.

The Madhyadeśa Imperial history is left here and Provincial Himalayan history is taken up; the Madhyadeśa Imperial history is resumed at § 17.

Provincial History of the Himalayas

§ 12. Nepal—The Licchhavi Dynasty, [and] the Western Nepal [Tibākuri] Dynasty [7th Century A.D.]

"In the North, in that time (tadā kāle), in the valley of the Himādrī in the famous Province of Nepal (Nepālā-Mandale) there will be king (1) Mānavendra [Mānavadeva, T.], in the dynasty of the Licchhavis (549-50)". He "died" having kept the kingdom thiefless for 80 years (551-52). These several kings of the Himalayas (T.; S.—'of the Mlechchhas') will be worshippers of the Buddha:

- (2) Vṛisha (T.; Vavisba, in S., a wrong reading) also (called) su-Vṛisha,
- (3) Bhāvasu also (called) Śubhasu (Bhūmā-subhūmā in T.)
- (4) Bhākrama (Parākrama, T.) also called (kīrtiyate) Paḍākrama and Kamala (555-56).

§ 12(a). Dynasty of the West

'(There will be the kings) of the West'.

- (1) Bhāgupta Vatsaka 'like the sun' (T., text lost in S.);
- (2-3) Udaya and Jishṇu (T.; S.—Jinhuna) will be in the end (556-557).

§ 12(b). Fall of Nepal Kingdom [c. 675 A.D.—700 A.D.]

Then there will be various kings amongst the Mlechchhas (557). They will be with fallen dignity (bbrashta-maryāda), serving aliens and eaters of the subjects (pra- jūpabhojinah, T.; S. corrupt). The adbipati kingship of Nepal will be destroyed by weapons; the vidyās will be lost; kings will be lost, they will become servants of the Mlechchha (foreign) usurper (mlechchha-taskara-sēvinah) (558).

Comments on the (A) MMK History of Nepal

We have to take 'in that time, bhavishyati tadā kāle (549) as meaning 'then in time' ('or in that time') i.e., in the yugādbhame, the lowest age of this chronicle. For the Nepal Lichchhavi dynasty has to be dated from the time of Samudra Gupta (c. 350 A.D.). (1) Mānavendra is unidentified. It is not Mānadeva for he flourished in 705 A.D. while the kings related here next are much earlier in the dynasty. (2) Vṛisha (T.; S., vavisha, a misreading) is the inscriptional Vṛisha deva of the Lichchhavi dynasty who lived about 630 A.D. (Fleet, GI., 189). In the Nepal inscriptions giving the genealogy, names before Vṛisha deva have been omitted. Mānavendra was probably one of them. (3) Bhāvasu Śubhasu corresponds with Śaṅkaradeva (about 655 A.D.) of the inscription, who was son of Vṛishadeva. (4) Bhākrama (or Parākrama, T.)—Padakrama should be the next king Dharmadeva of the inscription on account of the next kings being identified with the kings of the Ṭhākurī dynasty.

The Lichchhavi dynasty and the Ṭhākurī dynasty ruled together from the same place. The Ṭhākurīs ruled over the Western Province (GI., p. 180). The Western kings (Paśchima) as named in the AMMK are: (1) Bhāgupta, i.e., Aṃśuvarman the Vatsaka, who was the founder of the family. The next two, (2) Udaya and (3) Jishṇu, who are called 'the last' ones coming after Aṃśuvarman, are the inscriptional Udayadeva coming last (about 675 A.D.), while Jishṇugupta flourished just before him in 653 A.D. Hence we may construct a contemporary table thus:

Lichchhavi Dynasty		Western Ṭhākurī Dynasty
AMMK	Inscriptions	AMMK	Inscriptions
Mānavendra	12. (missing).	Bhāgupta	Aṃśuvarman (635—650 A.D.)
Vṛisha	13. Vṛishadeva (C. 630 A.D.)	Jishṇu	Jishṇugupta , 653 A.D.
Bhāvasu	14. Śaṅkaradeva (C. 650)	Udaya	Udayadeva , (C. 675 A.D.)
Bhākrama	15. Dharmadeva , son of 14.

The Buddhist faith of the Nepal Lichchhavis is attested by Yuan Chwang, and of the family of Amśuvarman by the conversion of the great Tibetan emperor Strong-tsa-n-Gampo through his chief queen who was Amśuvarman's daughter.

Fall of Nepal Kingdom

Our text affords new and correct information, which we do not get from the Nepal annals, when it says that Udaya and Jishnu were the last kings of the Nepal kingdom and that after them rulers in Nepal became dependent on Mlechchha usurpers, and kingship was lost. This refers to the absorption of Nepal into Tibet. Strong-tsa-n-Gampo married Amśuvarman's daughter before he compelled the Chinese emperor to give his daughter to him as the second consort in or about 641 A.D. Under this Tibetan emperor before his death (698 A.D.) Nepal evidently totally passed under Tibet's domination, until 703 A.D. when Nepal rose to shake off the foreign domination and killed the Tibetan king in war (Parkar). The AMMK is thus recording the political condition of Nepal before 703 A.D. and after 675 A.D.

§ 13. Tibet ["Chīna"]

[629 A.D.—698 A.D.]

The next Himālayan state dealt with is 'Chīna', i.e., Tibet as distinguished from Mabā-Chīna (=China). The text itself makes this distinction, e.g., in Chapter X (p. 88) it enumerates the kshetras of the uttarāpatha mountains in this order:

Daśabalaiḥ kathitāḥ kshetrāḥ uttarāpathaparvatāḥ.

Kāsmīre, Chinadeśe cha Nepāle, Kāvīse tathā.

Kāvīsa here is Kapīśā.

Mabā-Chīna it takes next (Mabā-Chīne tu vai siddhi (ḥ) siddhik-sbetrāṇy aśeshataḥ).

"There are related several kings and several of those who will be fond of Brahmins in China and around (§59). King Hiraṇyagarbha, however, will be one possessed of a large army and great power, an extensive political system, and a number of (political) relatives. The Mlechchhas will bow before him; he (will be) the conqueror; and a follower of the word of the Buddha" (§60-61).

He as a boy had mastered the Mahāvira formula. He, the great king, died at the age of 100 (566). He obtained Buddhahood. In that country Mañjughosha is a boy (568).

Comments

The only king to whom this description applies is the king S t r o n g - t s a n - G a m p o of Tibet. (See the last comments above). He came to the throne as a boy (629 A.D.) and became the most powerful monarch in Central Asia in the latter half of the seventh century. He introduced Buddhism into Tibet, and had the Tibetan script devised by Hindus. He was deified by the Buddhist Church. He had a long reign (d. 698 A.D.), a remarkable victorious career, and extended dominions.

§ 14. Balkh-to-Kashmir

Turushka king = [Kanishka]

“Then will rise in the North [uttarāpatha] the Turushka king, of great army and great vigour. Up to the gate of Kashmir, Bashkala, Udyāna (T.; S.—Udaya) with Kāviśa (570), for 700 yojanas he rules. 77,000 and 2,00,000 (revenue ?) will be his (571). 86,000 stupas he will make. ‘He established in the country the Prajñāpāramitā—the mother of the Buddhas and the foremost doctrine of Mahāyāna (Buddhism)’ (574-75).

After him Mahā-Turushka, the ‘Mabēiaksba’, the mahāyaksba, having a large army will be king, having been recognized by his relatives (sammato bandhuvargānām rājā so pi bhaviṣyati). He will make 8,000 monasteries (576—579).

Comments

The description of the Turushka king is undoubtedly the description of Kanishka. The centre of his kingdom according to our text was Bashkala which was connected with Udyāna-cum-Kapiśa and Kashmir. The tract thus indicated by the word Bashkala is Balkh with a transposition in the second syllable lkb. According to the text, Turushka (Kanishka) was primarily a king of Afghanistan (Kāviśa). Suwāt, and Kashmir on this side of the Himādri (in its wider significance), and up to Balkh which was considered as one of the northern provinces of Bhāratavarsha (I.A., 1933, p. 130).

Turushka is credited with having established in the North the Prajñāpāramitā. It should be noted that he is not credited with the holding of any Buddhist Council. Nor is Kanishka described under any other name in our history.

All Indian authorities—our text, Alberūnī’s sources, Kalhana, etc.—unanimously call Kanishka a Turushka, probably on account of his original country being Central Asia. The Text calls the next king a mahāyaksha (see below). His immediate successor is named Mahā-Turushka, whose succession was approved by his relatives. Does this denote a friction between Vāseshka and Huvishka? The extensive Buddhist foundations would identify the 'Mahā-Turushka' with Huvishka.

The unity of the family with the Yaksha family (§ 11) seems to be indicated by the Mahā-Turushka being called a mahāyaksha.

Western India

PROVINCIAL HISTORY

Lāḍa—Sea-coast—(Kacch-Sindh)

§ 15. The Valabhī Dynasty [595 A.D.—650 A.D.]

Beginning at Ujjayini, up to the West country up to the sea-coast, in the country of the Lāḍas, there will be king Śīla a Buddhist. At Sīla (āditya). Valabhī, he will be a dharmarāja. He will make attractive (artistic, 'citrān') monasteries with relics for public good, and beautiful Buddha images, and various worships (586—589). He will be in the dynasty of Dhara, and king of the Lāḍas. He rules for 30 years (597-98). He was followed by Chapala (601) who ruled for half a year and one fortnight and was killed by soldiers. His successor (anuja) was Dhruva, who becomes king of the Lāḍas. He was subordinate, miserable and foolish (603-604).

Comments

This Śīla the Dharmarāja, of the family of Dhara is Siladitya Dharmaditya I, the seventh in succession from Dharsena I, founder of the Maitraka dynasty of Valabhī. His inscriptions with dates equivalent to 605 A.D.—609 A.D. have been found. His successor Chapala will correspond with Kharagraha (his nephew) of the inscriptions. His nephew Dhruvasena II was the next king. Records of his, dated 629—639 A.D., have been found. Dhruva is described in the AMMK as anuja of Chapala, which is to be taken in its original sense 'born after', 'a younger cadet', and not 'younger brother'. Yuan-Chwang saw the artistic Buddhist temple built by Śīlāditya when he visited Valabhī in the reign of Dhruva, who was a vassal and son-in-law to Harsha.

* Kielhorn's Table, EI, VIII. 11.

The dynastic description and the extent of the territories of Śilāditya given here settles the controversy started by Hoernle (JRAS., 1909, 122). He was king of the territory from Ujjain in Eastern Malwā up to the West Country on the sea, i.e., Kachchha, which was the limit of the West Country according to the Purāṇic geography (L. A., 1933, 126); and he was king of the Lāḍas, i.e., what we call Gujarat, and of Valabhī i.e., Southern Kathiawār.

Dhruva, according to our Text, becomes subordinate, which was a fact in Harshavardhana's time.

The history of Valabhī is here accurately given by the AMMK.

§ 16. The Yādava Republics

[Before 500 A.D., i.e., before Śilāditya's family and after him.]

The other kings of the West or Lāḍa will be servants of the subjects [T.; S. 'will be crown-less' ("head-less", mūrdhānta)]. Their own earlier families will be rulers after Śīla. They will be mariners, sailing beyond the sea to Śūra (T., Sūra=Assyria; S.—'going to Persia,' Parsbagāh) (605). At Vāravatī there will be Indra, Suchandra, Dhanu, (and) Ketu, with the style Pushpa. Having occupied Valabhī, there will be the first king and his numerous successors with the names Prabha and Vishnu: the numerous kings will be Yadavas (606—8). The last (T.) amongst them will have the name Vishnu whose capital with its citizens and the king himself was washed away by the sea owing to the curse of the Rishi. The Vāravatyas (T.; S.—Dvāravatyas) then disappeared and sunk in the sea (609).

Comments

[CASTE OF THE MAITRAKAS]

The Vāravatyas were Yādavas as mentioned at p. 604 (verse 324) Yātavā Vārayatyās (cha). The Vāravatyas seem to be noted in the Paikuli Sassanian inscription in Asuristān in the form of Borāspācīn whose chief was Mitra al-Sen in 294 A.D. (JBORS., XIX). It is noted in the AMMK that from the sea the Valabhī (Kathiawār) people used to cross over to Śūra, which refers to their trade ventures to and regular commerce with Assyria. The port Śūrapāraka (Sopārā) acquired that name for being the port of embarkation for Assyria.

The rulers noted by name are post-Śilāditya, though their families had existed from before. The washing away of Vāravatī seems to have taken place towards the end of the seventh century. They according to the AMMK occupied Valabhī, probably in the 7th century. The Vāravatyas are expressly described as belonging to the family from which Śilāditya descended; the Vāravatyas represented the earlier stock—tesbām cba pūrvajā-Vaṃśāḥ Śilabhvōparate tadā. The Maitrakas thus were a branch of the Yādavas.

The Pushpa-nāma of our text probably means the Pushpamitras.

Madhyadesa: Imperial History

§ 17. Śaka Dynasty—Śaka Emperors [the Kusbans, 78 A.D.—350 A.D.]. Northern Madhyadeśa

Now the Buddhist historian leaves the West and takes up the Middle Country. These kings he calls Madhyamas i.e., the kings of the Madhya country. He begins with North Mid-Land:

"In the Northern Quarter on the mountains (T.; S.—'rambba' ?) and tableland, everywhere, many kings of different births (castes or nationalities—jāti) have been declared.

The Śaka dynasty (Śaka-vaṃśa) known to be of 30 rulers (T. with a wrong reading for 'Śakavaṃśa', '21+30'). 18 kings are known to be Emperors (Sārvabhūmika, T.; S.—wrongly, 'sārvabhūtika') of Madhyadeśa (Madhyamaḥ) (610—612).

§ 18. The dynasty of Nāga-Senas. [150 A.D.—348 A.D.]

At the close there (will be) the Nāga-Śenas, and then they ceased (viluptā) (612).

Comments on §§ 17-18

The important thing to note is that the Śaka dynasty is placed in North Madhyadeśa, and that they were Imperial, that is, the reference is not to the Western Satraps, but to the Kushāns.

The Nāgasenas are the Nāga dynasty of the Bhāraśivas where-in Vīrasena Nāga was the first king (of the Nava Nāgas of the Purānas) who defeated them and dislodged them from Mathurā, and earlier still some king who founded Kāntipurī below the Vindhya (Mirzapur) dispossessed them from Eastern Aryāvarta.⁸ It seems very probable that the compound "Nāga-Senas" is made up of the "Nāgas"

⁸ JBORS., XIX, I.

and Pravara-“Sena” (the Vākātaka emperor) and other kings of the ‘Sena’ line. The histories of the two families are knit together. The member of the Imperial Śakas—18 kings—would bring them down to the time of Samudra Gupta (78 A.D.+18×15=348 A.D.) and the closing period of the Nāga-Vākātakas.

It is not possible to say how the other figure (30) is made up. Evidently the number was made up with some class of subordinate rulers, as distinguished from ‘the emperors’ (śābhānushābis), probably it included the Śaka Satraps.

The Nāga dynasty, like all other Hindu dynasties of the Imperial Madhyadeśa, is repeated in the history of Bengal, (§ 30).

§§ 19-19(c). [Post-Guptan Imperial Rulers of Madhyadeśa]

[530 A.D.—647 A.D.]

§ 19. Vishṇu, [520—533 A.D.]. Hara, [533—550 ?]

§ 19(c). The Maukharis [550 A.D.—600 A.D.]

The Guptas are omitted here, as they are taken up separately under the section of the Imperial Eastern History (§ 24) and then also in the Provincial Eastern History (Pt. II).

Then (there will be) (1) Vishṇu, and (2) Hara. Another (3) Ājita [Hara (T.)] called Kunta (Kuntanāmā Harah); (4) Īśāna, (5) Sarva and (6) Pañkti, (7) Graha and after him Suvrata (T.) (613). Then they lose their kings and become fallen in prestige (bhrashta-maryāda) (614).

Comments

In this group whom I have numbered above, it is easy to recognise Maukhari kings in Nos. 4 to 7. ‘Pañkti’ is an easy misreading for ‘vanti’ and is to be restored as Avanti (reading Sarv=Āvanti, instead of Sarvapañkti of the text). The list will thus agree with the Maukhari list known to us from inscriptions and Bāna:

AMMK

Inscriptions etc.

Īśāna

Īśānavarman

Sarva

Śarvavarman

(Pañkti, i.e., Avanti)

Avantivarman

Graha

Grahavarman d. 606 A.D.

Ājita is the Prakrit form of Āditya. Ādityavarman was the first Maukhari ruler to come into importance. He married a Gupta princess Harshaguptā. The AMMK begins with only important names. It seems that in continuing the imperial history of Madhyadeśa, it should have begun the Maukhari line with Īśānavarman who is the first Maukhari to assume the imperial title Mabārājādhirāja and whose rise is dated about 554 A.D. But the Maukhari and the Thanesar lines include some earlier names.

Vishṇu is the emperor Vishṇuvarḍhana of the Mandasor inscription (GI., p. 50) of 589 ME (533 A.D.). The other name Hara appears to be of his descendant. The grouping in the text would indicate that. Further there is no other imperial line under which it can come. Situated as he is before the Maukharis (550 A.D.) [Īśāna (varman 554 A.D.)] and after Vishṇu (vardhana, 533 A.D.)—he very likely belonged to the line of Vishṇuvarḍhana.

The AMMK instead of mentioning the name Yaśodharman gives Vishṇu [dharman], and seems to support Hoernle's view that both names mean one personality (sa eva, as in the inscription).

The AMMK implies that the Maukharis occupied the imperial position in Northern India, i.e., from 550 A.D. to the rise of Prabhākara varḍhana, 600 A.D., who is noted next. Our text also supplies the much needed confirmation that Vishṇuvarḍhana-Yaśodharman became the real emperor in his time. The Maukharis seem to come into prominence under his house.

§ 19(b). The Vaiśya Dynasty of Śrikanṭha-Sthānviśvara

[560 A.D.—647 A.D.]

The origin and history of the family of Harshavarḍhana is given next. It is detailed that they were born of (king) Vishṇu (vardhana), they were of Vaiśya caste; they became first ministers and then they became kings. The style vardhana seems to have been borrowed from their imperial ancestors. They were ministers evidently to the Maukharis.

There were at the time two very prosperous rich men from Madhyadeśa, descended from (king) Vishṇu, Eb. by name and another. Both became chief ministers. The two noted rich men possessed of majesty, were devoted to this Religion. They practised Mahāyāna mantra of Kumāra after which they became rulers of men and (one) became king. (614—616).

Then, there (were) for 78 (T.; S., 115(?)) years three kings, residents of Śrikanṭha—(1) Āditya by name, the Vaiśya, inhabitant of Sthāna(v)

Iśvara; (2) there will be king everywhere at the end—H (arshavardhana) an imperial sovereign (sarvabhūminarādhipāḥ) (617-618) [mantra prescribed for that Low Age].

Comments

The form Sthāṇviśvara is incorrectly given as Sthanamiśvara. God Sthāṇu, the presiding deity of Thāneśvara, was the only god to whom their ancestor Vishṇuvardhana-Yaśodharmān bent his head (GI, 146). The family was thus connected with Thāneśvara from the time of the first founder. Vishṇuvardhana-Yaśodharmān had a governor in Mālava, he himself did not live there. The history of H(arsha) is again taken up in § 34 in connection with Soma (Śasāṅka) where he is called king of Madhyadeśa.

The dynasty here is taken to begin from Adityavardhana. Their caste is definitely stated to be Vaiśya which is confirmed by Yuan-Chwang. This was therefore the caste of Emperor Vishṇuvardhana also.

are noted to have covered 115 (S.) or 78 (T.) years. In the former case Aditya's initial time will be 532 A.D. and in the latter 569 A.D. The former alone can be right, for there were two generations of rulers before Adityavardhana. Harsha alone is called Emperor.

The Vaiśya dynasty and the Maukharis both arise under Emperor Vishṇuvardhana.

Comments

(1) Śveta-su Chandra is the Sātavāhana king who was practically the last emperor in that line—Chandra sāta. The name is found in our text as śveta (corruption from svāti) su Chandra.

The kings (2) to (10) make a group of contemporary kings amongst whom (2), (3) and (4) were the most 'celebrated'. To take up their identification:

(2) Mahendra who is particularised as the Pota king is the Mahendrapota of the inscriptions. Kielhorn (EI, Pallava Mahendravarman. VIII, Sup., p. 20) rightly anticipated and said that 'probably' this and also 'Mahendra' were names of Mahendravarman I. He is the great Pallava king of Kāñchī, 600—625 A.D., the builder of rock-cut temples, and the rival of Pulakeśin II.

(3) Śaṅkara and Gaṇa Śaṅkara of our text is the Śaṅka-gaṇa mentioned in the Nerūr copperplates of Maṅgaleśa, uncle of Pulakeśin II (IA, VII, 161; Kielhorn's List No. 6). Maṅgaleśa defeated Buddharaṅga, son of Śaṅkaragaṇa (c. 601 A.D.). According to our AMMK, 'Gaṇa Śaṅkara' was one of the famous Southern kings of the time. He was an ancestor of the Southern Kalachuris (Kielhorn, No. 5). The name was repeated amongst the Tripurī Kalachuris.

(4) Vallabha Sukeśi is a Chālukya Pulakeśin of Bādāmī. As he is one of 'the celebrated' kings of the South; he is to be taken as Pulakeśin II (608—642 A.D.). In some inscriptions he is called only Vallabha (Kielhorn, No. 14), while in some Polckeśi Vallabha (Kielhorn, No. 12).

(5) Maṅgala Vallabha is the famous Maṅgaleśa or Maṅgalarāja, the predecessor and uncle of Pulakeśin II. The order (Maṅgala coming after Pulakeśin II) is due to the fact that the three 'celebrated kings' are picked out and mentioned first as a group of celebrities. The statement about him that Maṅgala is also called 'Vallabha' is by way of a footnote.

(6) Govinda is the king defeated by Pulakeśin II (Aihole insc.; Kielhorn, No. 10).

(7) Gopendra Indrasena, who was, according to our text, a contemporary of Mahendra and Pulakeśin II, is yet unknown (as far as I know) from other sources. He would have been one of the rulers of the Southern states of the Aihole inscription.

(8) Mādhava is evidently the Kadamba king Madhuvarman who became the ruler of Vanavāsī in the time of Pulakeśin and Mahendravarman (Moraes, Kadamba Kula, pp. 64, 66).

(9) Budha, who comes with Gaṇa Śaṅkara, is the ruler who came in conflict with Maṅgaleśa and was the son of Śaṅkara-gaṇa. The name in the Chālukya inscriptions is spelt as Buddha.

(10) Nikumbha, a śūdra king according to T., is traceable from inscriptions of his descendants or their servants found in Khāndeś. These are dated in the 11th and 12th centuries of the Śaka era (Kielhorn, Nos. 333, 337). Kielhorn regarded the name Nikumbha of the Nikumbha Dynasty as mythical. Now this new evidence takes us four centuries back when we find Nikumbha actually a ruler, a contemporary of Mahendra. Later princes of the Nikumbha Dynasty patronized the science of astronomy, for the teaching of which a college founded by the grandson of the great Bhāskarāchārya was endowed by them.

(11) Mathita sumati is not yet known from any other source.

It seems that the author had some good history to draw upon for the time of Harsha, Śaśaṅka, Pulakeśin II and Mahendra I. His information of the period is detailed and accurate for the whole of India—North, South, West and East.

The religious information that Kārtikeya was worshipped in the South at the time is borne out by inscriptions. At Śrī Parvata, Mahāsena's worship is found after the Sātavāhanas. It is attested by the Kadamba inscriptions for the succeeding centuries.

§ 22. The Dvīpas in the Southern Sea, (Indian Archipelago) and Further India

The Indian Archipelago with Further India has been included as a part of Southern India in the survey of the AMMK.

The text on the Dvīpas (verses 636—640) says:

Everywhere the Dvīpas too, in the Kaliṅga seas [? Kaliṅgodreshu], (Kārtikeya will be worshipped). The Traigunyas [will be] in the Mlechchha countries all around. In the bays of the sea, on their coasts, there will be numerous kings; the Kāma-rūpa-kalā [Kāma-rūpa-kulā? Kings of the family of Kāma-rūpa?] in the valleys of snowy mountains ('in Himādrī'). Many kings are stated to have been between the meetings of the Seas (udra-sandbisbu). Many gaṇa chiefs of the Mlechchhas, worshippers of the Buddha:—I n d r a and S u c h a n d r a - M a h e n d r a, inhabitants amongst the Mlechchhas will be kings. [These two kings will be Buddhists.]

Comments

The name of the seas 'Kaliṅga Seas' (Kaliṅgodreshu, cf. udrasandbisbu) is important. The Archipelago was intimately connected with Kaliṅga. In the seventh century (637—649) just about the period when the AMMK is full of contemporary details a Kaliṅga dynasty was ruling in Java. King K a l i ṅ g a sent an embassy to China from Central Java. There was a Khmar king M a h e n d r a (varman) whose ambassador Siṃhadeva was at the court of Śambhuvarman, king of Champā about 625 A.D. The Mahendra of the AMMK was a Mlechchha, that is, he did not belong to one of the Hindu dynasties of Further India who were all non-Buddhists at the time. I n d r a too of our text was a Mlechchha and Buddhist.

The Kāmarūpa branch was probably ruling in Upper Burma, where a Hindu king Samuda established his kingdom very early (Gait, History of Assam, p. 8).

It is significant that the Dvīpas or the Indian Archipelago and Further India (the countries on the bays of the Sea—ambbodheḥ kuksbitirāntūḥ) are treated here as part of the South and as being in the Lavaṇa Ocean (633). They were included in the Greater India of Samudra Gupta (JBORS. XIX. 154).

We seem to recover the Hindu name for the narrow seas of Java and Sumatra in the expression "Kaliṅga Waters".

East

Imperial [Magadha]—Gauḍa Dynasties

((a) Before 320 A.D.; and (b) 320—750 A.D.)

§ 23. L o k a (Gauḍa Dynasty) [before 320 A.D.]

In the East, many great (good) kings (nṛipavarāh)—past, future and present are related (641). First I shall state the kings of the dynasty of the Gauḍas (642) (1) L o k a, born at Vardhamāna, to Yaśasvin, becomes the cause of the prosperity of Gauḍa (Gauḍa-varḍhanah). He will be religious. Several kings passed (643).

§ 24. Imperial Guptas [348 A.D.—500 A.D.]

"Listen about the Medizval and Madhyadeśa kings (madhyakāle, madhyamā) who will be in a long period emperors (nṛipendṛā) and who will be confident and will be followers of via media," (in religious policy, madhyadharmiṇah), (645):—

- (1) Samudra, the king,
- (2) Vikrama, of good fame (kirttitāh), 'who is sung'.
- (3) Mahendra, an excellent king and a leader (nṛipavaro Mukhya).
- (4) S-initialled (Skānda) after Ma. (i.e., Mahendra).

His name (will be) Devarāja; he will have several names (vividbhākya, T., against nirdbhākya of S.); he will be the best, wise and religious king in that low age (646-647).

His younger successor (5) Bāla (Bālākya, T.; S.—Balābhakya) will be Buddhist; he will make the East up to the sea decorated with chaityas. He will build over the whole land monasteries, orchards, reservoirs, gardens and pavilions. His Majesty will then make passages (roads) and bridges, and will worship Buddha images. After reigning without any rival and peacefully he becomes a wanderer (Buddhist monk) and finally at the age of 36 years 1 month commits suicide by dhyāna, swooning away. He had become a monk owing to grief for his dead son (648-52).

(Verses 653 to 670 deal with his rebirths). In verse 671 he is called Bāla the Easterner (pūrvadeśakah).

(6) "Following him (next to him, tasyāpareṇa) the king declared is Kumāra by name, the great lord of the Gauḍas. He too (will be) exceedingly virtuous." (674).

(7) "Following him (or next to him) (is) the well-known, the prosperous (śrīmān) U." (675).

§ 25. Break-up and division of the Empire

(8) "After that there will be a mutual severance (vīśeṣa)" (675).

Comments on §§ 23—24(Gupta Imperial History)

The Imperial Period after the Nāgas and before Vishṇuvarḍhana which had been omitted from the Madhyadeśa Imperial history is taken up here under Eastern India, for the Guptas are treated as Eastern Emperors, evidently on account of their having ceremonial and official capital at Pāṭaliputra.

The Gauḍa Dynasty

The Eastern history is, however, introduced with king Loka of the Gauḍa dynasty (Gauḍānāṃ vaṃśajah). He was born at Vardhamāna (our modern Burdwān). He must have been a king before the Gupta epoch. In the summing-up, verse 876 (p. 646) we read

evam prakārah kathitā bhūpālāḥ Loka-varadhanā |
viditā sarvalokes' smim Prāchyā chā sthitadehinī (°naḥ) ||

Does lokavardhanā here refer to Loka the Gauḍavardhana of our present section? There was probably a vardhana family of kings in Bengal in or about the third century A.D.

But after this introduction, and leaving the other kings unnamed (644), the Imperial Guptas are taken up, meaning thereby that Bengal passed under the Guptas. It should be noted here that in the succeeding part dealing with the provincial history of Gauḍa and Magadha, the dynasty with which the history commences is of the Nāga-rāja, i.e., the Bhārasīvas or Navanāgas (§§ 30; 37).

The Gupta Emperors

The author or the authorities of the MMK had a true history of the Gupta times. The account, where verifiable, is very correct. It is sober and fuller. Along with this the personal history of Samudra Gupta in § 31 should be read where his northern conquests and correct reign-period are given. There are some most valuable details which illuminate the confused portions of the Gupta history and help us in coming to a decision on debated and doubtful points.

It is not a matter of small satisfaction to recover an actual Indian record in the form of a written history on the Great Gupta epoch. The character-estimate of the Gupta emperors by the Buddhist historian is very valuable and it is fortunately very sound even when the kings were not Buddhists. The account really constitutes true history. The names under which each king is described should be assumed to be the most common names amongst their perplexing series of virudas, which causes no small trouble to the modern historian. Even our Buddhist historian complains, after recording two names of Skand Gupta that he had too many names (vividhākhyā, T.). It should be marked that Chandra Gupta I is not in the list of emperors which begins with Samudra. The Gupta kings who are described as Emperors (nripendrāḥ) are from Samudra to Kumāra Gupta II's son, 'His Majesty U. (675) whom I take to be identical with Budha Gupta (see below). After his reign the Empire is definitely stated to have been subject to 'disruption' (vislesha). This datum is one of the greatest contributions of the MMK, as we shall presently see.

The Kings and their character

The kings in the Imperial list of the MMK are Samudra, 'the king', that is, Samudra Gupta. His character is reviewed in the Provincial History of Bengal (§ 31);—a lord, superman, severe, ever vigilant, mindful about himself, unmindful about the hereafter—sacrificing animals (horse-sacrifices). His reign in the Provincial History is most epigrammatically rendered:

(under his rule) men and manes had the various kinds of luxuries, and the king, various prosperity.

vividhākārabhogāṃś cha mānushā pitarās tathā
 vividhāṃ sampadāṃ so'pi
 prāptavān nripatiḥ tathā.

The rise of Brāhmanas under Samudra is duly noted (§ 31).

Vikrama, i.e., Vikramāditya Chandra Gupta II, is 'of good fame'. Here as in the Ayodhayā chronicles (noticed by Cunningham) 'Chandra Gupta' is not known, but Vikrama. This was the only popular name of this king.

(3) Mahendra is Mahendrāditya Kumāra Gupta I. He was an 'excellent' and 'leading' (mukhya) king. Here we should note that the estimate of the Indian historian regarding this king's character is different from that we read in V. Smith. By no means he seems to have been a weak king.

(4) 'After Ma.' (i.e., Mahendra) the succession of S. (i.e., Skanda) is specifically noted, and V. Smith is confirmed here. He bore the name of his grandfather (Devarāja) and had a variety of names (virudas).

The most important thing about this king is the highest praise reserved for him:

'the best (śreshṭha),
 a wise (buddhimān)

and justice-loving (dbharma-vatsala)
king in that low age (yugādhamē)?.

This estimate of his character is noteworthy. He was in the opinion of the Indian historian, the greatest of the great Gupta sovereigns. I may be permitted to add here that this has been my own humble opinion. He was the greatest of the Gupta kings. He was the only hero in Asia and Europe who could defeat the Huns at their rise. This he did at an early age which is evident from the Bhītarī pillar inscription. His wise administration is attested to by Chakrapālita's Junagarh inscription.

[Wars of Skanda Gupta, from the Cbandragarbha Sūtra.]

How grateful we are to our Buddhist historians, not only for this valuable information about the personality of Skanda Gupta, but for a description of his successful war. In the Cbandragarbha paripricchā,* cited by Buston in his history of Buddhist Doctrine, the war is thus described:

King Mahendrasena who was born in the country of Kausāmbī, had a son with arms of irresistible might. After he had passed the age of 12, Mahendra's kingdom was invaded upon by three foreign powers in concert—Yavanas, Palhikas and Sakunas—who first fought amongst themselves. They took possession of Gāndhāra and countries to the north of the Ganges. The young son¹⁰ of Mahendrasena, of weighty hands and other congenital military marks distinguishing his person, asked for permission to lead his father's army. The enemy army numbered three hundred thousand men under the commands of the foreign kings, the chief of whom was the Yavana [or Yauna]. The son of Mahendra put his army of two hundred thousand men divided under five hundred commanders, sons of ministers and other orthodox Hindus. With extraordinary quickness and a terrible drive he charged the enemy. In fury his veins on the forehead appeared like a visible mark (tilaka) and his body became steeled. The Prince broke the enemy army and won the battle. On his return his father crowned him king saying: 'henceforth rule the kingdom', and himself retired to religious life. For twelve years after this, the new king fought these foreign enemies and ultimately captured and executed the three kings. After that he ruled peacefully as the Emperor of Jambudvīpa.

The three foreign powers who fought amongst themselves first are to be recognized as the Pablavik (the official name of the Sansanians), the Śakas (that is, the Kushāns) and the Yavanas, who stand here for the Hūnas (Yaunas, Hyūnas). The Hūnas, we know, actually fought the other two powers before attacking India.

*I understand, the text itself is preserved in the Kangyur.

 Compare Akbar taking the field at 14, and Harsha at 14.

It seems that this account is based on fact. The foreign army composed of three elements had penetrated up to the Ganges. It was the indomitable will and skill of Skanda Gupta which won the battle.

He led the flower of Orthodox Hindu India, i.e., excluding Buddhists, younger sons of ministers and noblemen, and played like his grandfather Chandra Gupta II under Rāma Gupta, a game of sheer courage, in making an impetuous charge against the enemy, numerically stronger.

The battle was won, its fame spread in Hunnic Asia—in the Mlechchha countries' as Chakrapālita puts it. But, according to the Buddhist authority, although the battle was won, the war was not over. A twelve years' war had to be waged before the foreign king were captured and punished.

Skanda Gupta ruled certainly from 455 A.D. to 467 A.D. (coins), for at least 12 years.

The view of V. Smith that Skanda Gupta fought more than one battle against the Huns proves to be correct, but his view that the empire of Skanda Gupta succumbed to repeated Hun attacks and perished after his death, is not only without any evidence, but is contradicted by the Chandragarbha sūtra, and the MMK which says that the next king (5) Bāla i.e., Bālāditya had his reign (rājyam) nihsa-patnamakantakam—without any rival or obstacle. In other words, the wars had been finished by Skanda Gupta, and the foreigners had been beaten back. Dr. V. Smith did not realize the distinction between Bālāditya I and Bālāditya II; in fact, in his book (p. 329), he gives Bālāditya without any distinguishing "I" or "II" who are known to the Sārnath inscription of Prakaṭāditya, and to the MMK (§ 39ff). He makes the two Bālādityas—the successor of Skanda Gupta, and the victor of Mihirakula who comes in 60 years later—one personality, and naturally transfers the second Hun invasion to the period of Skanda Gupta. The MMK (§ 25) reveals that the second Hun invasion is to be dated fifty years later, and that the break-up of the Gupta empire came about, not under Skanda Gupta, but in the reign of the king following Budha Gupta (496 A.D., coins) after 500 A.D. The second defeat of the Huns was inflicted by Bālāditya II before 533 A.D. the date of the Mandasor inscription, before which date Mihirakula had been already driven to Kashmir. We may date it about 520 A.D. for we must give a decade for the rise and digvijaya of Viśh-ṇuwardhana or Yaśodharman. We have a positive proof of the existence of two Bālādityas in the same dynasty in the Sārnath inscription (GI., 281).

The omission of Pura Gupta is probably due either to a very short reign or to a loss of a portion of the text after anuja ('younger', 'younger brother'). But anuja is applied in this book elsewhere as meaning a successor, not necessarily a younger brother. It is not stated that Bāla followed S. immediately. Skanda died evidently at an age of about 30.

Bālā(ditya) is stated to be the first Buddhist king of the Gupta dynasty, which is true and correct and now proved by an inscription found at Nālandā.

Bāla died young, at the age of 36. This explains the short reign of Bālāditya gathered from the inscriptions.

In verse 668, in the glorification of religious merit, he is to be a cbakravartin for several births. It is thus implied that he was a full and real emperor, with no diminution of territories inherited from his ancestors.

Immediately after him (Bāla, tasyāpareṇa) comes (6) Kumāra i.e., Kumāra Gupta II. He was exceedingly virtuous (dharmavān). Under him Gauḍa prospered (Gauḍānāṃ prabhaviṣṇavaḥ). His reign was short (473—476 A.D.).

(7) Kumāra's immediate successor was U. The kings after Skanda—Pura, Bāla (473 A.D.) and Kumāra II—had all short reigns, from or after 467 A.D. to 476, Kumāra II having three years or less (473 A.D.—c. 476 A.D.). Kumāra II must have died young. Budha Gupta succeeded in or before 476 A.D. There is hardly any room for another king to be the Śrīmān U. of the MMK. He was an emperor, and the empire broke up according to the MMK just after his death. He ruled at least up to 496 A.D., and the empire was intact from Bengal up to Malwā according to his inscriptions. The view of Mr. Allan and Dr. Smith that he was a provincial ruler of Malwa is now contradicted by the copperplates found in Dinajpur and his inscription at Sārnath. Budha Gupta's āditya-title was Prakāśāditya. On Budha Gupta's Malwa coins (silver) we have his name Budha Gupta (Allan, G.C., p. 153), while we have the unidentified imperial gold coins with the name Prakāśāditya (Allan, p. 135). Now as we are certain about the imperial dominions of Budha Gupta which was not known when Mr. Allan wrote, as also about his long reign, we must have his imperial coins. Thanks to the MMK, we can now identify Prakāśāditya with Budha Gupta. The MMK gives him the popular and well-known (visruta) name U. Prakāśāditya's coins bear the initial U. below the king's picture (Allan, plate XXII). Thus the MMK's king 'His Majesty (Śrīmān) U.' is the Prakāśāditya of the coin. The succession fixed by inscriptional dates and the succession noted in the MMK, fix his identity with Budha Gupta.

§ 25. Disruption of the Empire

Budha Gupta's reign closes about 500 A.D. The disruption of the Gupta Empire follows his death. After 510 A.D. (see below) we find the Huns for the second time in India, and this time established as far as Gwalior. The Hun invasion, however, is not the cause but the effect of the disruption. The MMK describes a family feud, a severance and separation (vislesha). The Hun king Toramāṇa, therefore, took advantage of it. He must have been before that on the frontier, in Afghanistan or thereabout. The Huns had been so thoroughly beaten by Skanda Gupta that they dared not think of invading India as long as the Gupta empire lasted. A breach in the Gupta family which seems to have arisen on the death of Budha Gupta and the breaking-up of the empire into Gauḍa and Magadha, brought in Toramāṇa at once.

The kings at the time of the breach were—Bhānu Gupta in Malwa (according to Eran inscription) and Tathāgata Gupta in Magadha, predecessor of Bālāditya (that is, Bālāditya II, victor of Mihirakula) according to Yuan Chwang. They are both given as contemporaries by the MMK in the Provincial History. The empire was thus broken up. It led to three great results—one was the Hun occupation for about or over 16 years, and the rise of a new All-India Emperor in the person of Yaśodharman Vishṇuwardhana as the successor of the Gupta Emperor.¹¹ Between these two facts—the Hun occupation and the rise of Vishṇuwardhana—there was the display, once more, of that military genius and daring which was innate in the ¹¹It is wrong to suppose that this emperor was a Malwa ruler. In Malwa a viceroy is expressly mentioned with wide dominions in 533 A.D.

Guptas, in the defeat inflicted on Mihirakula by Bālāditya II, successor of Tathāgata Gupta. The ruse played by Bālāditya II before the invading army of Mihirakula, succeeded so well that the tyrant who had levied exactions all over the north, according to Cosmas Indicopleustes and Yuan Chwang, became a prisoner and India was liberated by that daring feat and strategy of the Gupta sovereign.

This event can be almost definitely dated. It is somewhat surprising that the dates about the Hun invasion and the defeat of Mihirakula should not have been more narrowly limited down in the text-books. The Eran pillar memorial to Goparāja and his sati wife shows the undisputable fact that up to 510 A.D. (191 GE) Toramāṇa had not conquered Malwa. In that year Goparājā under Bhānu Gupta fell on the battle-field and the memorial dated in the Gupta Era was raised; while in the very first year of Toramāṇa at Eran itself the Gupta Era was given up and regnal years of the Hun king was used. Toramāṇa, therefore, at Eran got established after 510 A.D., the date of Goparāja's death and memorial.

Now, the event of Mihirakula's invasion of Magadha must come after [510 A.D.+1 yr. (Toramāṇa)+15th year of Mihirakula (Toramāṇa's son) at Gwalior=] 526 A.D., and before 533 A.D., the date at Mandasor for the Emperor (samrāt) Yaśodharmān who had found Mihirakula in Kashmir, confirming Yuan Chwang's account of Mihirakula's expulsion to Kashmir by Bālāditya. Within these fateful 7 years (526 A.D.—533 A.D.) the final act of the Gupta Imperial drama had been played out on the stage of time. The dynasty which had liberated India from the Kushan-Sassanian shadow, the dynasty which broke the Hun—unbreakable throughout Asia and Europe—the dynasty which made the name Vikramāditya a tradition immortal in their country, had to quit its monopoly of political history between those fateful years: 526 A.D.—533 A.D.

Need was once more felt, as it had been felt in the time of the Maurayas, as it had been felt in the time of the Vakātakas, that an All-India Empire be reconstituted and revived. Yaśodharmān, 'the leader of the people,' rose up during those seven years. He united the land under him. The parts which his "Gupta Masters" [Gupta-Nāthāḥ; not 'lords of the Guptas' (GI., p. 148) which will be meaningless], the parts which his Gupta lords could not reach (that is, the South), the parts which the Huns could not succeed in reaching, that is, the East (Magadha, Bengai and Assam) recently attempted by Mihirakula, he acquired. And the Gupta empire disappeared.

Before 533 A.D. Malwa and West had come under the governorship of Dharmadosha, brother of Daksha the author of the dated stone inscription at Mandasor (GI., 150), dated in the Mälava Era. Dharmadosha himself was the organizer of that state of Central India (lines 17-18). The new empire was thus a recent one; it has to be dated about 530 A.D. The forefathers of the governor must have served under the Guptas, for the present master Vishṇuvardhana was ātmaṃṣā, his own lineage, the very first ruler in his family.

It is evident that the very same events are recorded both in the inscription of Yaśodharman, at Mandasor, and in the inscription of 533 A.D. under the name of Vishṇuvardhana, bearing the title Rājādhirāja, Paramēśvara—‘the ‘supreme king of kings’, supreme lord’. This paramount sovereign, the Paramēśvara, acquired sovereignty over the Prācbī (the East) and North (i.e., Kashmir etc.) (line 6). How could two persons within the very few years acquire sovereignty over the very areas and both be emperors?—both mentioned not only in records of the same place, but also in one and the same place, and in one and the same record. The conclusion is irresistible, that both these pedigree-less names, ‘both’ these emperors were one and the same, which is definitely stated in the inscription of Daksha itself (sa eva). One was not a subordinate of the other; the Paramēśvara, and the supreme king of kings (of India) Vishṇuvardhana was identical with the Samrāt Yaśodharman. Rājādhirāja and Samrāt mean one and the same thing.

The MMK shows that he became known to chronicles under the name Vishṇuvardhana, a style carried on by his decendants Naravardhana to Harshavardhana.

The Gupta king who lost to Yaśodharman Vishṇuvardhana was either Bālāditya II himself or his son called Vajra by Yuan Chwang. Bālāditya II hardly recovered the imperial position. We have no imperial issues of his; in fact his coins have not been distinguished and seem to be concealed amongst the rougher, eastern variety which bear no obverse legend and are distinguishable from those bearing both Nara and Bālāditya legends of Bālāditya I.

From Bālāditya II down to Adityasena, who had all subordinate position from the Hun time to the last days of Harshavardhana, are omitted from the list by the MMK (see comments on the next section).

§ 26. *Later Imperial Guptas of Gauḍa [c. 685 A.D.—730 A.D.]

Formerly he will, in youth, be in the hands of women, miserable, foolish, having been subdued by enemies; but coming in contact with a good (religious) friend he will become very charitable. He (will) become the maker of vihāras, chaityas, gardens, reservoirs, beautiful free hotels, bridges, Deva temples, and caves (guhā, T.). He will be ready in matters praiseworthy. (684-86). The land will become surrounded by many heretics—orthodox Hindus up to the sea. The king will be kind, a materialist (bbogin) but lover of justice or religion, (dharma). (688). He having ruled for 27 years died on the Ganges at the age of 80. (690).

Comments on §§ 26-29

See Introduction to Part II. After the period of Harsha, there was a revival of the Empire under the Later Guptas. That history is touched upon by the MMK in the provincial history taken up next. Here the kings after Harshavardhana are taken up as introductory to the rise of Gopāla, the new dynast.

The MMK is here again helpful in fixing the order of certain Later Guptas appearing on coins.

(9) Deva is Deva Gupta, who should be called Deva Gupta II, the first Deva being Chandra Gupta II. This Deva Gupta II was attacked on all sides by enemies and killed in war. His identity is fixed by Deo-Barnārk inscription where he is the son of Adityasena and father of Vishṇu Gupta. Vishṇu Gupta according to his coins had the viruda, Chandrāditya (Allan, p. 145) who is given as (10) Chandra by the MMK, as the immediate successor of Deva, just as in Deo-Barnārk inscription.

(11) Dvādaśa of our text is the Dvādaśāditya (with another name) of the coins (Allan, p. 144) who, in the absence of all other evidence about him, was treated as coming before Chandrāditya (Allan, p. 144; pp. liii, lxi). Vishṇu Gupta had another son Jivita Gupta II according to the Deo-Barnārk inscription (GI., p. 213). Jivita Gupta II has left no coins, while Dvādaśāditya, though short-lived, has left coins. According to the MMK, Dvādaśa was the last king of the Magadha Guptas who had sway over Bengal. Jivita Gupta II seems to have been either identical with or successor to Dvādaśāditya, and to have been the last king of the dynasty which was swept away by Gopāla who succeeded to the kingship of Bengal and Bihar within a year or so of Dvādaśāditya. Jivita Gupta like Dvādaśa seems to have had a very short reign. The MMK notes that the election by Gauda of its own king was required by the civil strife amongst the Guptas after the death of the boy king Dvādaśa. If Jivita Gupta II was younger, he also must have been a minor, both being sons of the same father. It is, however, likely that Dvādaśa, the minor was the last king of the dynasty, and Jivita Gupta (if not identical) an elder brother, had preceded him.

These Later Guptas mentioned here were important kings. Deva Gupta II's father was Adityasena who performed three Aśvamedha-sacrifices (GI., 213, n.) and had succeeded in reaching the Chola capital. Deva Gupta II bore once more the imperial title of Paramabhaṭṭāraka, Mahārājādhirāja, Paramēśvara and so did his son Vishṇu Gupta (GI., 213). The MMK thus has taken up here the Imperial line of the Later Guptas.

[The Cause of the fall of the Later Imperial Guptas]

Deva (Gupta) is expressly stated to have been attacked by enemies and killed. Who were these enemies? We find in the inscriptions of the contemporary Chālukya kings, the most powerful monarchy in India at the time, that "the Lord of All Northern India" (sakala- Uttarāpatha-nātha; IA., VIII. 2)¹² was defeated by the Chālukya king Vinayāditya (679 A.D.—696 A.D.). Ādityasena had successfully invaded up to Chola country, evidently, in the reign of Vinayāditya's predecessor or Vinayāditya himself. He seems to have achieved that wherein Harsha had failed in the time of Pulakeśin. But the result was disastrous.

Gupta power, now revived once more after Bālāditya II, courted trouble which led to its final weakening and extinction. In 679-696 A.D. there was no power in Northern India other than that of Magadha under Ādityasena and his son which can be described as 'the emperor of ALL Uttarāpatha'. It seems from the date that Deva Gupta must have been reigning at the time. He was, according to the dates, the Gauḍa king killed by Yaśovarman of Kanauj, c. 700 A.D. Thus he was attacked on all sides by enemies (MMK).

The immediate cause of Chandrāditya Vishṇu Gupta's death was family feud. It was probably Jivita Gupta II, who was the Gauḍa king who was defeated twice and taken to Kashmir and killed by Lalitāditya (730 A.D.). It was fortunate for Gopāla that Kanauj broke down about c. 740 A.D. and that the Chālukya power broke down c. 757 A.D. The Gupta dynasty was really destroyed by the Karṇoṭas of Kashmir, who at 740 A.D. succeeded to the imperial throne of Northern India.

We may assign approximate dates to these Later Guptas as following:

Mādhava Gupta [contemporary of Harsha]

Ādityasena [650 A.D.—680 A.D.]

Deva Gupta [680—710 A.D.]

Vishṇu Gupta Chandrāditya [710 A.D.?]]

Dvādaśāditya Chandra Gupta III [710 A.D. (few months)].

Jivita Gupta II [710—730 A.D.].

[BENGAL ELECTIONS]

About the period 735—740 A.D. Bengal elected her own king—Bb., who was 'a leader of the people'. But unfortunately the choice fell upon a permanent invalid. He made a fairly good king nriṣa-puṅgava. After his death there was what is described in the Khalimpur copper-plate mātsya-nyāya, anarchy: D. and Bb. ruling for 10 days and 3 days. This was put an end to by the election of Gopālakā (c. 740—757 A.D.). This election was universal and unanimous, 'from all' (sarvatāh correct sarvadāh). We are glad to get a character-sketch of the dear king, who not only brought peace to Eastern India but succeeded in establishing a dynasty which lasted longest. Although Gopālakā was a Śūdra as stated in the next section of the MMK, he patronised both Buddhists and Brāhmins, the latter more, as the complaint of the MMK indicates. His descendants became Buddhists, while he himself had a national outlook. His reign period (27 years) found in the MMK is a good datum. He died at the age of 80; he had been therefore elected at the age of 53, which speaks well of the choice of a mature and known man. The Gauḍas were correct in their judgment. But something greater is conveyed by this election. It shows that the Bengalees had freed their mind, emancipated themselves from the Vedic theory of caste superiority, in that early time, the 8th century A.D. By that big political act they repealed, so to say, the Institutes of Manu. The election of a Śūdra to kingship was as big a thing as the doctrine of égalité in 1789 A.D. To say, make a Śūdra king, and to do it, was to break the slavery of mind perpetuated for ages. Even the great spiritual liberator, Lord Buddha, maintained the superiority of the Kshatriya. Even he probably would have said to the proposal moved in 740 A.D.—Render unto the Caesar what is due to the Caesar! Here the Gauḍas went beyond their country, law and old civilization. They were innovators, and emancipated; and Śūdra added a chapter of glory to the history of India.

PART II

GAUḌA AND MAGADHA; PROVINCIAL HISTORY

We have seen in § 25 that kings after Budha Gupta up to the end of the time of Harshavardhana have been omitted. In this section the MMK gives some of those omitted details as part of the local history of Gauḍa and Magadha. They assume the character of appendices to the Imperial History of Madhyadeśa and the East just surveyed. They seem to have been taken at least from two books, as one period (Nāga to Imperial Gupta) has been repeated and inserted as two independent pieces. The latter portion from c. 500 A.D. is full of interest, but its interpretation is a job like deciphering an unknown code.

It is possible that the whole of this part (IX ff.) (verses 691—824) is by a subsequent hand, who to conceal the recent character of his composition preferred to give mystic initials instead of names, so that people may realize the greatness of the ancient prophecy and its true fulfilment.

This provincial or additional notices are brought down from 140 A.D. to the dynasty of Gopāla, like the previous section. In a way it is a repetition but not inferior in worth. Owing to their furnishing matters to fill up gaps they are most useful. They show that the Gupta family was divided into two branches—Gauḍa and Magadha—and that there was no Mālava branch, which has been supposed and formulated by historians.

“Gauḍa” Lines Again

From verse 691, p. 632 (T. 459b) to 882, p. 646 (T. 469b)—the largest section of the book—is devoted to the political history of Bengal proper, closing it with the line:

tataḥ paraṇa bhūpālāḥ Gopālā dāsajīvināḥ

‘after him, there will be the Gopālas (that is, the Pālas) of the servile caste kings’. This line really closes the historical sketch of the MMK.

Two short subsequent passages—on Madhyadéśa, Aṅga, Kāmarūpa, Vaiśālī and Kapilavastu—are perfunctory and negligible.

In the former section the Imperial Gupta line is brought down through the Later Guptas to their end and the rise of Gopālaka. Here again the Local Gauḍa history of royal families is brought down to the Gopālas. We have therefore to give to the word tataḥ in the opening line (V. 691) the meaning as beginning a new section, and not 'after that' that is, after Gopālaka, for, the dynasty of Gopāla as is well-known, has not been touched upon herein. Royal history (1) begins with Nāgarāja, then it describes Prabha Vishṇu, then Samudra, then the subsequent kings, oppression on the Gauḍa people and the rise of Soma (that is, Śāsāṅka), fight between Harshavardhana and Śāsāṅka, Śāsāṅka's son and his end; (2) then once more (V. 741) it begins with the Nāgarāja, describes Prabha Vishṇu and Śīśu (the Vākātaka), and at once takes 'the (formerly Vaiśya) Kshatriya' (Gupta) dynasty with Bh(ānu Gupta), Pra(kaṭā-ditya) and later, ending with the latter's 'subject' descendants, finally ushering the advent of the Gopālas. Hence it is evident that the history of Bengal and Bihar in its local aspect is being dealt with here from the Nāgas i.e., the pre-Gupta Bhāraśivas.

§ 30. The Nāgas [under the Bhāraśivas]

[c. 140 A.D.—320 A.D.]

Revival of Orthodox Hinduism in Bengal

"The Nāga king, of majesty, a lover of religion (will) then rise, who caused to be made a beautiful Buddha image to a chaitya (691; p. 632, T. 459 B.). He made monasteries for the Saṅgha in the land" (692). "From that time onwards the capital of the Gauḍas became full of (covered up by) heretical Brahmins" (693).

Comments

Compare this and the subsequent section with section 37 below.

On the Nāga history see my History of India, 150 A.D. to 350 A.D. The Purāṇas say that the Eastern capital of the Nāgas (their Governors) was at Champāvati (Bhagalpur).

In the beginning, according to the MMK,¹ the Nāgas patronised Buddhism. But it is noted that orthodox revival dates from this reign in Bengal (that is, after the Śakavamśa noted above, who are said to have been superseded by the Nāga-senas (§§ 17-18).

§ 30-A. Emperor Prabhavishṇu and Gauḍa king

Then in this Eastern country in the capital, troubled by the Tirthikas, Bhagavat, lord of the Gauḍas, was crowned king by the sacrificer (ṛvatin, T.) Prabhavishṇu staying in the Southern country (694). He having ruled there came to the West; having entered the elegant capital Sāketā he had to return (696). The East up to sea was invested by robbers; the king was killed by weapon after a rule of 3 years (698).

Comments

In this vratin, the sacrificer, Prabhaviṣṇu, it seems, Pravarasena Viṣṇuvṛiddha—the Vākātaka emperor—is to be recognised. He installed the Gauḍa king, who invaded Sāketa. Sāketa was at that time the capital of the pre-imperial Guptas, and the invasion probably refers to the Gupta attempt, i.e., of Chandra Gupta I, to declare his own independence and his defeat at Pāṭaliputra. [Compare this section with § 37.]

Prabhaviṣṇu being called dakṣiṇātya may simply mean that he belonged to the country south of Madhyadeśa (Doab), the Vindhyan country. The Tibetan version has 'staying in Dakṣiṇa'.

§ 31. Emperor Samudra Gupta, the Prosperous; and his character

Latter than him Samudra, of good fame, will be nṛpatiḥ (sovereign) (700). His younger brother, Bhasmama [Bhasma, T.] by name, that man of low intelligence and wicked mind, will have the government (of Gauḍa ?) for 3 days. He (Samudra) was lordly, shedder of excessive blood, of great powers and dominion, heartless, ever vigilant, (mindful) about his own person, unmindful about the hereafter, sacrificing animals; with bad councillor he greatly committed sin (694).

His government [or kingdom] was inundated with carping logicians, (tārkikaibḥ), vile Brahmins.

Mén and manes had every luxury. The sovereign (nṛpati-Samudra) acquired prosperity of various sorts.

He marched systemetically and reached the West and in the North reached the gate of Kashmir. He was victorious on the battle-field even in the North.

He ruled after that (conquest) for 22 years and 5 months. On this earth on account of a fell disease he fainted several times (at his death), and in great pain he died, and went down (704—718).

Comments

Minus the theological venom, the character is well summed up—'Of great powers and dominion'—Mahāsāvadyakāriṇaḥ—probably implies a 'super man'. Nirgrhinin, according to Buddhist ideal, is heartless, i.e., severe.

This text furnishes a positive record that Samudra Gupta marched up to Kangra or Jammu, the very door of the Kushāns.

His reign-period as Emperor is exactly given here—dvādaśābdāni sarvatra māśā[n]pañcha daśas tathā—12+10 years and 5 months. This will bring his reign to end c. 372-73 A.D. He marched also to Western India. Here we have accurate history.

Did Bhasmama dispute the succession, or was he a governor of Gauḍa?

§ 32. Condition of Bengal

Later Gupta Period [c. 570 A.D.—590 A.D.] before the rise of Śaśāṅka

There was a civil war amongst them, greedy for the kingdom (708—709). It ended by the installation of S., the youngster who became a mere symbol. The Brahmin leaders who had done this became disunited amongst themselves. Reaching the province of Magadha in the city called Udumbara the leading Brahmin crowned two boys. Then he retired to the East, and arriving in the province of Gauḍa they (? one of them ?) become (s) rivalless (710—712). The two boy chiefs were killed by the wicked one in Kaliṅga, and owing to his bad guide he committed many murders; he killed all those Gaudas who had been honoured by the kings who had fostered the civil war (713-714).

Comments

This fills up the period of the 'Separatist Gaudas' of § 25 above.

The account is somewhat confused. It is not clear whether the chief Brahmin Minister went to Gauḍa and punished the Gaudas who had taken part in the family feud, or whether one of the two boys—called bālamukhyān (?)—evidently only one is meant from several adjectives—did this. This feud and oppression of Bengal led to the rise of Śaśāṅka (see next section).

The civil strife seems to have arisen between S. (Mahā-Sena Gupta?) and some other claimant. Mahā Sena Gupta's time is a generation before Harshavarhana (606 A.D.) and Śaśāṅka (c. 590 A.D.).

Udumbara, must have been a town in South Bihar, probably it is Dumraon in the Shahabad district.

§ 33. Soma = Śaśāṅka

Then, Soma, an unparalleled hero will become king up to the banks of the Ganges, up to Benares and beyond. He, of wicked intellect, will destroy the beautiful image of the Buddha. He, of wicked intellect, enamoured of the words of the Tirthikas, will burn that great bridge of religion (Dharma), (as) prophesied by the former Jinas (Buddhas). Then that angry and greedy evil-doer of false notions and bad opinion will fell down all the monasteries, gardens, and chaityas; and rest-houses of the Jainas [Nirgranthas] (715—718).

Comments

Later on, his caste—Brahmin—is given. He was a popular product of Bengal, brought to the front on account of oppression from the Gupta feud.

His identity is established by the next section.

§ 34. Rājyavardhana and Harshavardhana; and War with Soma (Śāsānka)

At that time will arise in Madhyadeśa the excellent king R. (Rājyavardhana), brilliant, self-possessed, of the Vaiśya caste, and steady. He (will be) of this religion, and (will be) as powerful as Soma (Śāsānka). He also ends at the hand of a king of the Nagna caste (710-711).

His younger brother H. (Harshavardhana) will be an unrivalled hero.

He will be with a great army; that brave man of overpowering prowess, decides against the famous Soma. The powerful Vaiśya king with a large army marched against the Eastern country, against the excellent capital called Puṇḍra of that characterless man. Adopting the duty of Kshatra, with the sense of personal injury and indignation he, though kind, prone to religion, and learned, kills many and becomes an oppressor of living creatures, for the reason of being engaged in the duty of chastisement (712—715).

He defeated Soma, the pursuer of wicked deeds; and Soma was forbidden

Condition imposed on Soma. to move out of his country (being ordered) to remain therein (thenceforth) (716).

H. returned, having been honoured in that kingdom of the barbarian (Mlechchha). He, an excellent king amongst followers of Artha (Śāstra) and Dharma (Śāstra), was successful in his undertaking (717). Having marched from his country with a desired course, they the entourage of Rājya and Harshin had achieved the business. Now he attained the pleasures of royalty (718-719).

[Soma had done in his former life some Buddhist pious acts which are detailed, hence] Soma the Brahmin (king) obtained high prosperity. He gave largess to Brahmins and ruled for 17 years, 1 month, 7 or 8 days. He died of a disease in his mouth, having been eaten by worms and went down (to hell). His capital was then destroyed by divine agency (724). His life was destroyed by magic (mantra) done by men; high fever brought about senselessness, and he died (735).

(Description of his life in hell follows : 726—729 ; and the prudence of being a Buddhist is emphasised, 730—736).

§§ 35-36. Condition of Bengal

Śāsānka's death. Revolutions

After the death of Soma, the Gauda political system (Gauda-tantra) was reduced to mutual distrust, raised weapons and mutual jealousy—one (king) for a week; another for a month; then a republican constitution—such will be the daily (condition) of the country on this bank of the Ganges where houses were built of the ruins of monasteries (745—48).

Thereafter Soma's son Mānava will last for 8 months 5 ($\frac{1}{2}$?) days.

Comments on §§ 34—36

We have had no detail and no result of the expedition of Harsha from Bāna, and we are glad to have them now.

A battle which should be named the Battle of Pundravardhana, was fought; Śāśāñka was reduced to an abject submission, and he was confined within his own kingdom.

He died subsequently, in spite of Buddhist wishes, a natural death.

Śāśāñka was an orthodox revivalist as against the weakening cult of Mahāyāna Buddhism, patronized and fostered by the Later Guptas. Now the caste of Śāśāñka becomes known—he was a Brahmin.

Śāśāñka's death brought about the end of the national monarchy of Bengal. Gaṇajyam is a misselection for Gaṇarājyam (T.), a republic. The same condition prevailed later before the election of Gopāla.

The first section of the Provincial Gauḍa history ends here.

Repetition of Nāga-Vākātaka History

The first section of the Provincial History ends with Soma's son. Now to introduce the Guptas in c. 500 A.D.—that is, the Later (non-imperial) Guptas, history is again taken up from the Nāgas and Vākātakas. The history of the Guptas from 500 A.D. up to the Maukhari empire, which has been omitted before, is filled up now. It is evidently extracted from another source. It is curious that the Nāgas are noted here to have been Vaiśyas.

The section is highly important. It supplies details which were most needed.

§ 37. The Nāga kings and Prabhaviṣṇu

[Then, (about) the Minor, (Śiśu) of the Vaiśya Caste] (not in T.). A king called *Nāgarāja*¹ will become king of Gauḍa. Near him will be Brahmins and other Vaiśyas by caste (T.), the Nāgas will be surrounded by Vaiśyas and will themselves be Vaiśyas. Their government becoming unfit (read asamprata for asamprāpta)

¹ The Tibetan text in place of the first line seems to read that the Nāgas were of the lowest Brahmin class, originally; and later on their status was that of the Vaiśyas:

दङ्-पो-ज-मडि-रिगस्- (इबडि) ब्रम्-से-कुन्-नस्-जेडु-रिगस्-ब्सकोर्-वडि । there will be distress from famine and invasion, and from great robbers. The government will have no bounds. The rule full of danger to life and loss of life will last for 6 years. The Vaiśyas owing to their former sins will become distrustful of one another (750). Then their king will be Prabha Vishṇu who will be one who has adopted Kshatrá status (755).

[See for 'the Minor' the next section].

Comments

Compare this with §§ 30-30-A, where the very dynasties are discussed. Here we have the further detail that Prabha Vishṇu (Vishṇu-ṽṛiddha Vākāṭaka) took possession of Bengal after 6 years of weak rule in the final days of the (Bhāraśiva) Nāgas. The name Jaya (750) is quite in line with the Bhāraśiva Nāga names we read on the coins e.g., Haya, Traya, etc. (JBORS, XIX. 1; History of India, (Nāga-Vākāṭaka Period) p. 35).

The Vishṇuṽṛiddha Vākāṭakas accepted Kshatriya status although they had been Brahmins. But it is difficult to imagine why the Nāgas are called here Vaiśyas.

§ 38. Confusion in the East, reign of Śīśu [Rudrasena] and the rise of the Gupta Dynasty

The section proceeds to give the condition in 'the Gauḍa system' that is, Magadha and Gauḍa, under the Emperor Prabhaviṣṇu. From section 30-A it is evident that he installed a king in the East whose name was Bhagavat. Probably it was Bhagavat Varman, a possible ancestor of Sundarā-varman at Pāṭaliputra mentioned in the Kaumudī-mahotsava, or some other king in Bengal. The confusion described below refers to the revolutions connected with the Kota family and Chandra Gupta I, and the victory of Samudra Gupta over Śīśu, who stands in the Purāṇas for Rudrasena I the Vākāṭaka Emperor, defeated by Samudra Gupta. The word Gupta seems to have been translated by vaṇīk (Vaiśya).

Without doubt, in the system of Gauḍa (then) there (will) be kings, some of whom will be killed (in war) by weapon and some will die of diseases (i.e., natural death) (755-56). They were all orthodox Hindus, [they were consigned to naraka].

Then, again, Śīśu will be king in whose court women will hold chief influence. He will rule for a fortnight. He was killed by weapon (757).

A great famine and invasion made the Eastern Provinces distracted, terrorised and demoralised.

In that country, undoubtedly, (then) there will be a king—a great king—of Mathurā Jāta (Jāt) family, born of a Vaiśāli lady (T.), originally Vaiśya. He became the king of the Magadhas (758—60).

Comments

Owing to the name Gupta the dynasty has been considered by the author as Vaiśya originally. But the author is careful to note the fact in the next verse that they were described before him (prokta) as leading Kshatriyas (kshatriyah agrani) (761).

The invasion mentioned above refers to the Kota vs. Gupta fights for two generations.

It is to be marked that although the king is not named, he is described as the son of the Vaiśāli Lady in the Tibetan text. He is said to have been a Mathurā-Jāta (Sanskrit-Jāta-vaṃśa). Jāta-vaṃśa, that is, Jāta Dynasty stands for Jarta, that is, Jāt. That the Guptas were Jāt, we already have good reasons to hold (JBORS, XIX. p. 115). His Vaiśāli mother is the Lichchhavī lady. Evidently the ancestors of Samudra Gupta, according to this datum, once belonged to Mathurā.

Bhānu Gupta and Prakaṭāditya

[The course of history after 510 A.D.]

In this section the chief personality is P. or Pra. (as in Tibetan). He is the son of Bb. and is a contemporary of king Gopa who does not belong to the dynasty. The only king of the dynasty who had the name Bb. was Bhānu-Gupta, and his subordinate ruler was Goparāja who fought for Bhānu-Gupta and died on the battle-field of Eran. Pra. was a bad boy of the family and had been imprisoned up to the age of 17. He was brought out of prison by an Invader who was very powerful and had reached the East, having come from the West. He enjoyed kingdoms acquired by others. He crowned the young Pra. as king of Magadha at Benares, and then died on his march. His name is given as H., i.e., Hūna. H. was succeeded by his son who was very wicked, a patron of Brahmins; he was so pressed by his enemies that he lost his kingdom. He was marked with the appellation of Planet [Mihira = sun].

I feel certain that this H. was Toramāna and the Planet is Mhirakula. They are called Śūdras. A writer writing about 700 A.D. when describing a small community as the Hūnas who had been settled for two centuries as Hindus, would naturally call them Śūdras.

The MMK adds to our existing knowledge of the Hun invasion, and removes the mist from the personality of Bālāditya of Yuan Chwang.

The Huns under Toramāṇa had reached Magadha and gone to some town called Bhagavatpura, where Pr. was caught hold of and set up as the king of Magadha at Benares, and Toramāṇa who was retiring westwards, died at Benares. When Mihirakula became king, Magadha was subject to him. This is confirmed by Yuan Chwang who says that Bālāditya rebelled and refused to pay tribute, and when Mihirakula was brought as a prisoner before Bālāditya, Mihirakula refused to show his face as the position between the master and the subject had been reversed.

Then, who was Bālāditya and who was this Pra., and what became of Bh. (Bhānu-Gupta)?

Although Pra. was installed at Benares, it is stated that he actually became king after the death of the Planet. It is also implied that the imprisonment and release of Pra. took place during the life-time of Bh. The king intervening between the death of H. (Hūṇa Toramāṇa) and the death of the Planet, his son, we may take it, was Bhānu Gupta who in 510 A.D. at Eran is described as ruling and as the bravest man on the earth. Evidently Bhānu Gupta's āditya-name was Bālāditya. The name of the son of a second Bālāditya whose one ancestor at least was another Bālāditya, was Prakaṭāditya (Gl., p. 285). Pra.'s successor, according to the MMK, were two short-lived brothers who were followed by Rājyavardhana. Yuan Chwang saw pious buildings at Nālandā raised by successive kings in the following order (Beal, ii, 168, 170; Watters, ii. 164-65).

[Kumāra Gupta II] Sakrāditya evidently a mistake for Śrī-kramā- ditya as in several other names—

e.g., Mabirakula for Mihirakula.

Budha Gupta [mis-spelt as Buddha Gupta.]

Tatbāgata Gupta

Bālāditya [Bālāditya II]

Vajra

Then a king from Mid-India

Silāditya (Harsha ?)

Against this we have in the MMK;	and in Inscriptions or Coins.
Kumāra Gupta [II]	Kumāra Gupta [II]
U. [Budha Gupta]	U. Budha Gupta
Bh[ānu Gupta]	Bhānu Gupta
Pra[kaṭāditya] and V[ajra] , his younger brother [I]	Prakaṭāditya
Rājyavardhana	Rājyavardhana.

It is thus clear that here we are dealing with a Bālāditya who flourished after, not before Kumāra Gupta II, i.e., Bālāditya II, and that this Bālāditya, father of Prakaṭāditya (Sarnath insc.) is to be identified with Bhānu Gupta, father of Pra. (MMK), and that Tathāgata Gupta came in between Budha Gupta and Bhānu Gupta (in the period c. 500 A.D. to 510 A.D.), that the Vajra of Yuan Chwang is identical with Prakaṭāditya's brother V. of the [T. MMK] or with Prakaṭāditya himself.

The line of Kṛishṇa Gupta and Adityasena (7 generations before Harshavardhana) must have arisen about c. 500 A.D. According to the Deo-Barnārk inscription a gift made by Paramēśvara Bālāditya was confirmed by "the presiding authorities for the time being" viz. by Paramēśvara Śarvavarman and Paramēśvara Avantivarman, and then finally by Jivita Gupta II (GI, 216). This shows that the Emperor Bālāditya whose gift was confirmed by another government, that is of Śarvavarman Maukhari and his successor, flourished just before the Maukhari Emperors, that is, he was Bālāditya VI, and further, that Jivita Gupta's and Adityasena's ancestors were not rulers of Magadha in the time of Bālāditya and even in the Maukhari times. Their family in the Maukhari times was outside Magadha; for, the Maukharis were in direct possession of Deo-Barnārk. The so-called Guptas of Magadha appear to have been local rulers in Bengal—"the separatist Gaudas", for Mādhava Gupta father of Adityasena defeated Susthita-varman, king of Kāmarūpa, and Ādityasena's early inscription is found in Bhagalpur (GI., 211) and Gauḍa officials are noticeable in his Secretariate (GI., 201).

To return to the Magadha line. Bālāditya has the imperial title in the Deo-Barnārk inscription (Paramēśvara). Events connected with his life seem to have taken a course like this. Bhānu Gupta Bālāditya retired to Bengal under pressure from the Huns, in or following 510 A.D. His imprisoned son is set up as a pretender by Toramāṇa, but really he does not become king, in that very year Toramāṇa dies at Benares. There is some sort of peace between Bhānu Gupta and Mihirakula. Bhānu Gupta consolidates his power within the next fifteen years and then defies Mihirakula, and lures him into the swampy country of lower Bengal—the marshes and island of Yuan Chwang—and subjugates him. By his victory he keeps the tradition of his ancestors as the Emperor of India and confines Mihirakula in Kashmir which is included in Bālāditya's overlordship.

Soon after 526 A.D. Bālāditya dies. Mihirakula was still living and tyrannizing over his own countrymen in Kabul. At that time, on the imperial throne of Magadha, there was probably the ignominious son of Bhānu Gupta Bālāditya, once a vassal of the Hun. This was a signal for the Hindus, to usher in a new state of affairs for their safety from foreign conquest. This leads to the advent of Yaśodharman Viṣṇuvarḍhana of Thānesar with his Maukhari subordinates, about 530 A.D., i.e., before Mihirakula had had time to move towards the plains of India once more.

Prakaṣāditya thus became a subordinate ruler under Yaśodharman-Viṣṇuvarḍhana. According to the Sanskrit and the Tibetan Texts the interval between 606 A.D.—the end of the reign of P. or Pra. and the end of Rājyavardhana's reign—was as follows:

[King V[ajra]—7 days]	}	omitted in T. ~
[Ph., 3 years]
V., his 'anuja', 3 years according to both S. and T. MMK.

Rājyavardhana, 1 year.

That is, the interval was of 4 or 7 years. This V. (Vajra) was the last ruler of the line which is also implied by Yuan Chwang who places the Mid-India king i.e., Harsha after him. A.D. 602 or 599 is thus the last date for Prakāṭāditya. This fully agrees with the long reign assigned to Pra. by the MMK and the script of the inscription of Prakāṭāditya. In script, it agrees with the script of the Apsaḍ inscription of Adityasena. The MMK gives the king a long age (94 years) and implies a long reign; he came to the throne about 533 A.D. on the end of the son of the H(un) king, at an early age. He was 17 in or about 510 A.D., and in 530 A.D. he must have been about 37, he died at the age of 94, i.e., about 587 A.D. A further test is to be found in the fact mentioned by the MMK that Soma or Śaśāṅka became Pra.'s rival. Pra. was a Buddhist and Soma a Brahmin. Śaśāṅka would be Pra.'s contemporary according to the above dates.

Prakāṭāditya saw many vicissitudes. First he came under the overlordship of Yaśodharman-Vishṇuvardhana (c. 530—540 A.D.) and his family (550 A.D.); then we see the Maukhari Emperor Śarvavarman confirming a pious grant at Deo-Barnārka (Shahabad) (about 570 A.D.), followed by his son Avantivarman, contemporary of Prabhākara-vardhana. From c. 550 A.D. to 600 A.D. the Empire of Northern India was presided over by the Maukharis. The Maukharis may be dated approximately as follows:

Īśānavarman, 530—554 A.D.

Śarvavarman, 554—570 A.D. (coin dated, GE., 234=554 A.D.).

Avantivarman, 570—600 A.D. (coin, 570 A.D.).

Grahavarman, 600—605 A.D.

[Suvrata, MMK, nominal].

The Maukharis who ruled from Kanauj on the unquestionable testimony of Bāṇa, seems to have superseded the family of Vishṇuvardhana about 550 A.D. in the time of Īśānavarman who was the first Maukhari to assume the dignity of the emperor of Aryavarta or Northern India, towards the end of his reign. Īśānavarman seems to have fought and defeated the Huns under Yaśodharman in Yaśodharman's northern campaigns. The reference in the Apsaḍ inscription (GI., 203) to the Maukhari army which had defeated the Hūṇas, which killed Dāmodara Gupta, son of Kumāra Gupta (III) of the Later Guptas, and which had been successfully opposed by Kumāra Gupta (III) when Īśānavarman led them against him, is to these very victorious crack troops of the Maukhari king who had fought against the Huns. These Later Guptas, as the MMK positively asserts, were Kings of the Gauḍas who later on, from the time of Deva Gupta, (son of Adityasena) (§ 26) became kings of Magadha, and were the gubernatorial family of Bengal and opposed the Maukhari invasion of the East on behalf of their overlord the main Gupta House in the person of Bālāditya. By the time of Śarvavarman, the fight was over, and the issue already decided. The Maukhari became the acknowledged Paramēśvara (Emperor), as the Deo-Barnārk inscription of the Jīvita Gupta II attests. The Sone seems to have become the boundary of the direct rule of the Maukharis in the reign of Śarvavarman, and Magadha from Patna eastwards and Bengal remained Gupta possessions under the suzerainty of the Maukharis. We find Mahāsenā Gupta, a contemporary of Śarvavarman or Avantivarman, victorious over Suthitavarman, king of Assam, where on the banks of the Lauhitya (Brahmaputra) songs were sung in later ages of Mahāsenā Gupta's victory. The MMK gives the Lauhitya as the boundary of the kingdom of Pra(kaṭāditya), and probably after the Gupta defeat at the hands of the Maukharis there was a conflict between the old Gupta overlord and the king of Assam.

Iśānavarman succeeded to the prestige and position of Viṣṇuvardhana-Yāśodharman, as being the next most successful military leader in crushing the Hun power and liberating India from its terrors. Iśānavarman definitely abolished the Imperial position of the Guptas in the reign of Prakaṭāditya (c. 550 A.D.) which had already been very effectively questioned a few years before by Viṣṇuvardhana-Yāśodharman (530—33 A.D.). It is from Prakaṭāditya that the Later Guptas are to be counted. Up to his reign and the time of Rājyavardhana there were two lines—one in Magadha and the other in Bengal, and the latter, after Harsha, from the reign of Adityasena, shifted to Magadha from Bengal and after the close of the House of Thānesar once more occupied the imperial position in northern India which is now made perfectly clear by our MMK. The recuperative power of the Guptas was phenomenal. Art of war and the secret of civil administration seem to have been hereditary monopolies of this race of Vikramādityas and this series of Hindu Napoleons. Adityasena again became the Sakaluttārāpātha-Nātha once more and repeated the feat of Samudra Gupta in reaching the South, up to the Chola country.

The centre of Empire had, however, territorially changed from Eastern India to Madhyadeśa in 530 A.D. The imperial seat in Magadha was too far removed from the north which was exposed to the new danger, the Huns. Yaśodharman-Vishṇuvardhana evidently belonged to Thanesar itself, the seat of Lord St h ā ṇ u, to whom alone that hero bent his head. In any case, he must have belonged to some place in the neighbourhood of Thanesar, if not to Thanesar itself. Then in descending line, at Kanauj (Pañchāla) was seated the Maukhari hero. At Thanesar, the subordinate family of R ā j y a v a r d h a n a I (c. 530 A.D.) just a generation before, was certainly situated. From the time of Īsānavarman and Śarvavarman, K a n a u j took the place of Pāṭaliputra and became the seat of the empire of Northern India and came to be so known to the whole of India when the Maukhari (Jaunpur inscription, GI, 228)—either Īsānavarman or Śarvavarman—established his position up to Kathiāwāḍ in the West and at least up to Andhra in the South. The successor of the *Maukhari*s, H a r s h a v a r d h a n a, fully established the position of Kānyakubja which lasted up to the time of Mahmūd of Ghazni. In the generation following Ādityasena, the revivor of the Gupta Imperialism, Kanauj in the person of Y a ś o v a r m a n contested the claim of the Gauḍa king of Magadha—i.e. the Later Guptas of Magadha then represented by D e v a G u p t a II; and it was re-questioned, with the final suppression of the Gupta dynasty, in the next generation by L a l i t ā d i t y a of Kashmir who claimed to be the lord of Kanauj, which meant at the time the Emperor of Northern India. That struggle and rivalry between Kanauj and Pāṭaliputra or Magadha went down to the Pāla period when D h a r m a P ā l a deposed and re-set up the king of Kanauj, and ended with the rise of the P r a t i h ā r a Empire of Kanauj a generation later.

The MMK proceeds to deal at great length with the kingdom of P r a (k a ṭ ā d i t y a) for whose reign the author seems to have had good material, like the details about the time of the dynasty of Harshavardhana.

It is a very important datum that after R ā j y a v a r d h a n a (that is, his House), the next emperor noted is D h a (r a s e n a IV, 646—649 A.D.). He is called a descendant of (the family of) R ā j y a v a r d h a n a, evidently for the reason that he was the grandson and heir of H a r s h a v a r d h a n a. His empire is described, and one more member of the latter's family, V. (?) is noted as the last emperor in this history. They are noted as All-India Emperors. The original caste of the dynasty was Kshatriya, according to the MMK (852).

Then in the Gauḍa system a branch of the family, to which Pra (kaṭāditya) belonged, i.e., the Guptas, is re-established. The first king of this revived line was with the name Śrī, probably Adityasena of the Later Guptas. He is said to have reached the age of 80 and was killed by a subordinate ruler. This subordinate Y(aśovarman) became the unrivalled ruler for 8 years. The next king of the Pra. i.e., Later Gupta family, made a war and killed numerous men of this ex-feudatory. He himself, however, was worthless and was killed by his enemy who invaded him. This was probably Deva Gupta's son whose name is not recorded, for the latter's youngest brother R. ruled for 48 days. Vishṇu Gupta Chandrāditya's coins have Ru. His reign like that of Dvādaśāditya who according to § 26 ruled for a few months, was very short. Then comes the end of the dynasty, and the rise of a Śūdra king who was a cripple and ruled strongly and impartially and suppressed both Buddhist monks and Brahmins. He lived for 17 years. This ends the period and begins the rise of the Gopālas. The former Śūdra king who is called here Svāda in the Sanskrit text and Rājābhādra in Tibetan, is evidently the same Śūdra king who had been elected before Gopāla and ruled well but was a cripple, according to §§ 27.—29, 47. His initial, however, here is Bb. which supports the Tibetan reading Bhadra.

After closing the Later Gupta dynasty the MMK records the fact that kings of this dynasty which was a branch distinct from that of Pra (kaṭāditya) that is, the main Gupta line, but which sprang from it, ceased to be independent with the end of K. i.e., Kumāra Gupta III. We know from the Apsaḍ and Deo-Barnārk inscriptions that Īśānavarman Maukhari took away the Imperial position from the Guptas. Prakaṭāditya was in Magadha at the time and Kumāra Gupta III was the king of Gauḍa under him. It seems that after Prakaṭāditya became subordinate to Īśānavarman, Kumāra Gupta III assumed full sovereignty in Bengal. He certainly defeated Īśānavarman and died a peaceful self-inflicted death at Prāyāga in token of his successful career. In his time therefore he proved to be the leading monarch in Northern India. Īśānavarman's imperial position is to be dated after Kumāra Gupta's death. Thus the MMK marks the end of the Gupta Empire with the death of Kumāra Gupta III.

In the history of Prakaṣāḍitya, the Francis Joseph of the Gupta Period, many changes happened in the history of the dynasty and the country, most of which we have already noticed. The remaining matter is the defection of the 'traitorous' prince of the Vindhya country—that is, Malwā. In Durga (which I am unable to identify) he, according to the Tibetan text, declared himself king. "The Gauda nation became split up". King Jaya, mahāvishā, set himself up in the South-East, then followed Kesarī (or Siṃha), then king Soma. 'Jaya the mahāvishā (great poison)' seems to be the Jayanāga of Karṇasuvārṇa (El., XVIII, 60) who issued a copper-plate with the imperial title mahārājādhirāja. It seems that the gubernatorial family of Malwā noted in the Mandasor inscription of 533 A.D. had been ousted and Malwā had been recovered by the Guptas in the time of Prakaṣāḍitya.

Thus to sum up the history of the break-up of the Gupta Empire as gathered from the two sections of the MMK may be tabulated as below.

Table showing the Disruption of the Gupta Imperial Dynasty, the rise and fall of the Gauda Dynasty of the Later Guptas, and the Succession of Empires.

- c. 500 A.D. Budha Gupta dies.
Succession of Tathāgata Gupta.
Foundation of the Gauda 'Separatist' dynasty.
- c. 500—510 A.D. Succession of Bhānu Gupta Bālāditya II.
- 510 A.D. Battle of Airakiṇa (Eran) between Bhānu Gupta (Bālāditya) and the Huns (predecessor of Toramāṇa or Toramāṇa himself).
- c. 511—512 A.D. Fall of Malwā. Toramāṇa in Magadha. Retirement of Bālāditya to Bengal. Toramāṇa crowns the boy Prakaṣāḍitya at Benares as king of Magadha, and dies at Benares.
- c. 512—526 A.D. Mihirakula emperor of Northern India.
- c. 527 A.D. Defeat and capture of Mihirakula in Bengal. Recovery of the Gupta Empire.
- c. 527—29 A.D. Bālāditya II builds a grand temple at Nālandā as a memorial to his victory (El., XX. 37; Nālandā inscription, verse 6).

c. 530 A.D. Bālāditya II retires as a Buddhist monk. Prakāṭāditya succeeds as Emperor.

PRAKAṬĀDITYA PERIOD

[c. 530—587 A.D.]

Succession of Empires

Imperial Dynasty of Vishṇuvarḍhana

c. 530—533 A.D. Digvijaya of Yaśodharman. Assumption of Imperial position by Vishṇuvarḍhana (Yaśodharman). Naravarḍhana of Thanesar. Īśānavarman takes a leading part in the battle with the Hun army (on the side of Yaśodharman).

c. 540—550 A.D. End of the Family of Vishṇuvarḍhana.

Gupta Imperial Revival

c. 535—550 Kumāra Gupta III defeats Īśānavarman and declares himself to be the Lord of the Three Oceans; burns himself about 550 A.D. at Allahabad.

The Maukhari Imperial Dynasty

550—554 A.D. Īśānavarman becomes Emperor.

554—570 A.D. Śarvavarman acknowledged emperor both in the North and the South. Rājyavarḍhana I at Thanesar.

570—600 A.D. Avantivarman. Gupta family of Malwā comes into existence. Prakāṭāditya dies. Ādityavarḍhana at Thanesar.

The Imperial Dynasty of Śrikanṭha [Thanesar]

c. 600—605 A.D. Prabhākaravarḍhana becomes Emperor.

605-606 A.D. Rājyavarḍhana II.

606—646 A.D. Harshavarḍhana.

The Imperial Dynasty of Valabhī

c. 646—649 A.D. Dharasena IV, grandson of Harshavarḍhana succeeds to the Imperial position in 645 A.D. He is called chakravartin [3 years according to MMK].

649 V. the youngest member of the family (MMK) succeeds [as Dhruvasena III] who was very old.

653 or 656 A.D. Dhruvasena III dies.

Revival and Fall of the Later Guptas of Gauḍa-Magadha

- c. 656—700 A.D. Ādityasena of the Gauḍa Guptas re-establishes an All-India Empire.
- c. 700—720 A.D. Deva Gupta; probably killed by Yaśovarman of Kanauj.
- c. 720—728 A.D. Yaśovarman for 8 years [Emperor from Kanauj].
- c. 728 A.D., c. 728—745 A.D. Chandrāditya Vishṇu Gupta in Magadha, 48 days. Dvādaśāditya in Magadha. Gupta Rule ends in Bengal where Bhadra, the elected Śūdra king, rules for 17 years. D. in Bengal, 10 days; Bb. in Bengal, 3 days.
- c. 728—733 A.D., 733 A.D. Jivita Gupta II in Magadha, probably taken prisoner by the king of Kashmir (Lalitāditya) claiming Paramountcy in India. End of the Gauḍa dynasty.
- c. 745 A.D. Election of Gopāla.
- 745—772 A.D. Gopāla's reign.
- 772 A.D. Paramountcy of the Pāla Emperor.

We have thus a continuous Northern Empire up to the opening of the Pāla Period.

Text (Continued)

§ 39. Later Imperial Guptas and the Later Gupta Dynasty of Magadha from Bhānu Gupta

c. 500 A.D. — 550 A.D.

Bh(ānu Gupta)

His (Samudra Gupta's) descendant Bb. (Bhānu Gupta) settled in the East (Prāchi) (760).

Pra(kaṭāditya)

His son P. [Pra., T.] was born in the Eastern countries. He has been described [proktab] as the leading Kshatriya. He was imprisoned as a boy and remained in prison upto the age of 17 years. He had been imprisoned by king Gopa and was released at Bhagavat[pura].

Comments

The king called Gopa here is evidently the Goparāja, who fought so loyally by the side of Bhānu Gupta in a successful battle at Eran in 510 A.D., most obviously against Toramāṇa. He was a subordinate ruler under Bhānu Gupta, and Pra. must have been put into prison by an order of Bhānu Gupta, his father.

The Battle of Eran was between the Huns and Bhānu Gupta. He evidently gave the enemy battle there having gone from Magadha with Gopa-rāja.

§ 40. Installation of Pra(kaṣṭāditya) by H. (Hūṇa)

H. [T.] (Hūṇa) [S.—A], having come from the West, was a great king (mahānripah). He occupied the banks of the Ganges upto the East. He was of Śūdra caste, a Mahārāja of large army and great power. From his base on the Ganges, from all sides he invaded the city of the Gauḍas called Tirtha and remained there as a powerful king (763—65).

There that Kshatriya boy with a merchant (T.) entered at night, and was acknowledged at the dawn by the Śūdra king, who then retired to Nandapura (Pāṭaliputra) on the Ganges, and in Magadha installed that boy as king (766-67).

The powerful Śūdra king entered the Kāśī country (T.) and at Benares fell ill (768-69).

Comments

'H.' is the reading in the Tibetan text in place of 'A' in S. MMK.

H., the Śūdra from the western country who invaded Magadha and Gauḍa, seems to have been the Hūṇa Toramāṇa. Later, in verse 777 he is described as having enjoyed kingdoms of others. By a writer of the time of Harshavardhana or rather of 700 A.D., the remnants of the Huns in India who had become part of the population and who have come down in several castes to our own times, would have been easily regarded as Śūdras. Mlechchhas resident in India have been classed amongst Śūdras.

Toramāṇa has a good hereafter according to MMK (772—776). He does not seem to have been obnoxious to the Buddhists.

According to verse 777 he enjoyed a kingdom which had been legally earned by others (parairuṣṭārjitaṃ rājyam anubhoktā bhaviṣhyati).

§ 40-A. The Planet (graha) (=Mibira), son and successor of the H. Śūdra

H. falling very ill crowned his son graha, a minor, and died. (769—771).

[The king's future career and effect of Buddhism described up to verse 767].

The king will be the enjoyer of a kingdom which had been acquisitions of others. His son was established at Benares. The latter's kingdom will be lost on account of an attack from his neighbour. The kingdom will be full of Brahmins and will be attacked by enemies. This king marked as 'graba' was an erring man and arbitrary; and without much delay he was struck by enemy and died (777—779).

Comments

All haters of Buddhism have their names translated or otherwise concealed in the MMK,—e.g., Sāsānka is Soma, Pushyamitra is Gomi; so Mihira is 'planet' (graba).

[See also Introduction to Part II above.]

§ 41. Pra(kaṭāditya) [c. 530—588 A.D.]

His Large Empire: Decline of the Gupta Empire

There will be mutual disunion in the Magadha monarchy in the East at the time of the rise of Soma. At that time on the Ganges up to Benares and beyond, there will be king P. (Pra, T.), the Kshatriya, who had been recognised by the Śūdra king [Hūṇa] at Nandanagara (Paṭaliputra) on the Ganges (780—82).

His past birth, good effects of Buddhist faith and charity, pious explanation of the kingship of Pr. etc. described, (783—813).

Both in his previous birth and in this one his contemporary was Soma.

(Theological explanation of initial imprisonment and release, 820-21).

He rules for 55 years or 77 (822).

He will rule up to the sea in the East. Those situated in the valleys of the Vindhya and the Mlecchha robbers on the frontiers will be under the control of P. All the provinces in the North and the valleys of the Himādri will be ruled by this Kshatriya king. (On account of his having raised unconsciously a toy-stūpa in childhood) he will be an unrivalled king of Magadha, in the East up to the sea and the Forest (Aṭavi), up to the Lauhitya (Brahmaputra river), and in the North up to the Himalayas.

Later, this Buddhist king will be at Benares and alternately at Śrīngapura (814—818).

Having conquered Pañcha Kesarī he established his own government (in Orissa).

Conquest of Orissa. He overthrew and uprooted the Siṃha dynasty (of Orissa). (819-20).

Then he, the Kshatriya king, rules all the countries in the Himalayan valleys in the East up to the banks of the Daśānūpa. (821).

The following passage (after verse, 829) omitted in the Sanskrit text is found in the Tibetan:

The traitorous ones of the interior of the Vindhya [Māwā?] set themselves up as independent rulers in the middle tract called Inaccessible Defection of Provinces. (durga) (829A).

Jaya the serpent (Jayanāga) conquered the people of the South-East.

Kessari (Lion) and another named Soma (Śasānka) became kings (829B). (This) led to the division of the Gauḍa nation. This is to happen in the time of that Kshatriya sovereign (829C).

Born in prosperity the king had luxuries up to his dotage. He will live for 94 years, and die of sheer old age (830-31). (Future career described, 832—840).

§ 42. Successors of Pra.

In that Low Age after P., there was confusion by his servants (omitted in T.); V. was king for one week, he was killed (843; omitted in T.). After P., Bh. became king for 3 years (844) (omitted in T.).

His (P's) younger brother (or, descendant) V. (Vajra) solemnly became king, he ruled for 3 years (845).

§ 43. Rājyavardhana II (of Thanesar) as ruler of Magadha

And Rājyavardhana will be king for 1 year (845).

Both these kings (V. and Rājyavardhana) had sudden and unnatural ending. (846).

§ 44. Heir and successors of Rājyavardhana as ruler of Magadha (-Gauḍa)

Emperors of Valabhi

His (Rājyavardhana's) descendant (śnuja, heir, born after him) will be Dh(arsena IV), a Kshatriya (by caste), fond of dharmā (Buddhism). He will be king for 3 years [847-48]. Then the youngest (in) his (family) will be king, the famous V. [T. MMK: J.]. He will be over the whole country an All-India Emperor (Sārva-bhūmika-bhūpatiḥ). He will possess (an army of), elephants, horses and chariots, and navy, everywhere.

He will conquer every enemy. He will decorate the whole empire with Buddha images, monasteries and relic-memorials. His original ancestry was Dvijāti Śākya (Ikshvāku) (449—52).

He was self-respecting, sharp, wise, humble, on account of Buddhist wisdom, with sense of honour, and in that low age attained happiness. He lives with care for 100 years and 5 (days) (853—55).

Comments on §§ 42—44

The Lauhitya country which was reconquered by Mahāsena Gupta had been annexed to Gauḍa under the reign of Prakaṭāditya.

The Gauḍa-tantra, rendered by me as Gauḍa-system seems to have been made up of Bihar-Bengal-Orissa-and-Assam.

On the decline see the Introduction above. The Vindhya country, Karnasuvarṇa and other parts of Bengal, Orissa, and Assam seem to have broken off in the latter days of Prakaṭāditya.

From the time of Kumāra Gupta III whose copper-plate of Damodarpur is dated GE, 224=544 A.D. (EI., 17. 193) was a 'Separatist Gauda' to break off from Prakaṭāditya and to have set up his own independence and assumed imperial titles. It should be recalled here that the MMK regards him the only independent king among the Later Guptas. The Maukharis did not succeed to the Imperial position up to 554 A.D.

On §§ 43-44. Rājyavardhana is regarded as the direct ruler after the death of Prakaṭāditya and his successors (6 or 7 years). Hence Prakaṭāditya may have come to the throne about 10 years later than I have supposed and Vajra may have come before him. Or, Rājyavardhana might have been governor of Benares in his father's life-time. According to the Sarnath inscription Prakaṭāditya was a son of Bālāditya and according to Yuan Chuang, Vajra was son and successor of Bālāditya. According to the MMK, Pra.'s younger brother V. succeeded him, and that Pra. became king after the death of Graha (Mihira, i.e., after 533 A.D.). It is difficult to decide whether Vajra preceded or succeeded Prakaṭāditya.

Rājyavardhana had his successor in Harsha; and Dh., that is, Dharaśena IV his grandson was really Harsha's anuja or descendant in which sense the MMK always uses the term. According to the Mitāksharā idea of Hindu Law, Dharaśena IV would be considered a successor and descendant of Rājyavardhana. It is difficult to give value to the initial V. or J. (Tibetan version) of the successor of Dh. but the description leaves little doubt that it was Dhruvasena III, 'the youngest' of his grand-uncles, all elder to Dharaśena's own grandfather. The long age (100 years) confirms the identification.

It is noteworthy that the Valabhī kings maintained a navy.

Dharaśena IV in the year 546 A.D. issued two copper-plates; in the earlier of the two in the same Kārtikādi year (326 GE.) he is not chakravartin (Emperor), while a few months after he assumed that title (Bhandarkar's List, No. 1348, No. 1349). We should therefore conclude that his grandfather Harshavardhana died between the month of Māgha (5th, Dark Fortnight) and Ashāḍha (S., 10). By that title he claimed to be the heir to the Empire of Harshavardhana and something more, that is, as the Emperor of the South.

Evidently Dharasena IV sent governors to the East, or Mādhava Gupta or Adityasena accepted the suzerainty of the Valabhī emperors. Adityasena evidently started his reign as a subordinate to the Valabhī Emperor. Adityasena who performed three Aśvamedhas and reached the shores of the seas must be taken to have broken the claim of the Valabhī Emperor to the title of chakravartin.

This record about the succession of the grandson of Harsha discounts the story of the usurpation of 'Arjuna', minister of Harsha of the Chinese account. The story is much exaggerated. 'Arjuna' seems to have set himself up as the local ruler of Tirhut and was easily defeated by a tiny army.

§ 45. Later Guptas

(a) King Śrī

After him, in the Gauḍa system there will be a king with the name Śrī, a mahārāja, and lover of dharma. His capital will be V., a populous first class capital. Having conquered his neighbouring rivals he will rule there. Seven and eight monasteries he 'built' there. His minister was Śākaja, a Brahmin, with his help he ruled all around. He lived for 81 years. (856—59). He had a good career in heaven, as he was of religious soul, and whatever condition be brought about was only due to the fault of his seryants. (860-61).

His feudatory (or servant) as sovereign Y. by name will have an unquestioned rule for 8 years. He was killed by women (853-54). Again (b) a Kshatriya dynast of the P.-dynasty will become king.

Comments

King Śrī with whom the family of 'Pa.-Vamśa' begins is Śrī Adityasena, son of Śrīmatī and Mādhava Gupta. This identity is established by his successors, who in § 26 are Deva Gupta, Vishṇu Gupta Chandrāditya and Dvādaśāditya, while here (§ 46) they are R.'s elder brother and R. who is identical with Vishṇu Gupta. In place of Deva Gupta here the rule of Y, a feudatory who became the master, is given. This seems to be Yaśovarman (see below). Yaśovarman's rule in Magadha is proved by the Nālandā stone inscription of his minister Mālāda (EI. XX. 43). Yaśovarman supplanted Deva Gupta who in § 26 is said to have been surrounded by his enemies and killed. The Nālandā inscription and the Gauḍavabo, composed in the reign of Yaśovarman, now read with the MMK, would indicate that the king who was killed in battle on the Sone and who is called here both the king of Gauḍa and the king of Magadha, was Deva Gupta of the Gauda dynasty of the Guptas.

The age of the king Śrī—, 81 years, shows that the king was the old king Adityasena who had performed three Aśvamedhas and had a long reign. The later kings of the dynasty were all short-lived. The last apology for the king refers to his Brahmanic rule and sacrifices. The Buddhists were greatly pleased with Adityasena. His capital bore the initial V.; was it Vārunikā (Deo-Barnārk) (GI. 216)?

The statement (§ 48) that Kumāra Gupta (III) was the last independent ruler of the dynasty would indicate that probably in his last days Adityasena was defeated by the Chālukyas about 694 A.D. Vinayāditya who ruled up to 656 A.D. and in that year was succeeded by his son Vijayāditya (Kielhorn, EI. VIII. App. II. 2), defeated through his Crown-Prince Vijayaditya between 680 A.D. (the date of his accession) and 694 A.D. (the date of his death) the Emperor of All-Northern India (cf. I.A., Vol. VIII. 26). About 680—694 A.D. Adityasena, the aśvamedhin, was undoubtedly the Emperor (Nātha) of sakala-Uttarāpatha. The description might as well refer to his son Deva Gupta as his imperial successor. That it refers to the king of Magadha is established by the fact that the imperial insignia of the Gaṅgā and Yamunā flags were captured from the Northern emperor. These emblems had belonged to the Vākātakas and are described as pāramēśvarya-cchīṅha, 'emblems of imperialism', in the Chālukya documents. They descended to the Guptas from the Vākātakas.

The chronology proposed above in the Introduction is confirmed by the account of Hwui Lun (IA., X. 110) who visited Magadha about 690 A.D. He found a temple under construction by Jih-kwan (sun-army = Adityasena). In this temple the people from the South were to reside. It is remarkable that the temple mentioned before this was the Chālukya temple, which was probably raised as a memorial by the Chālukya Vijayāditya in the heart of his enemy's kingdom. It was about 40 stages west of Nālandā. Adityasena was dead at the time and 'Devavarṃā,' that is, 'Deva-Gupta' was ruling as 'the king of Eastern India' (Prāchi). The approximate time of the visit of Hwui Lun may be gathered in this way. Itsing extracted this account. Itsing died in 713 A.D. Hwui Lun was sent out by the Chinese Emperor to follow the steps of and to attend on Yüan-chau, a Chinese pilgrim, who had left for India a second time in 665 A.D. Yüan-chau had tarried in Dardistan for 4 years and then came to Magadha and died in Central India. Hwui Lun did not meet him, and lived for 10 years in a convent in the North and then came to Magadha. Thus if Yüan-chau died about 670 A.D., Hwui Lun reached Magadha later than 680 A.D. or later still. Deva Gupta had come to the throne and was reigning about 685—690 A.D. and he certainly flourished before 713 A.D., the date of the death of Itsing. The temple begun by his father was being finished and there had been no interruption in the dynastic régime up to that time.

The identity of Y. is established on the basis of the facts stated—to wit—that he was an outsider who interposed for 8 years, that Yaśovarman did rule in Magadha on the authority of the Nālandā inscription, and that he killed a king of Magadha-Gauḍa in the battle of the Sone, according to the Gauḍavaho. Under Ādityasena he must have been considered a subordinate to the Gauḍa (Later Gupta) Dynasty. According to Hwui Lun, Deva was reigning about 700 A.D. Yaśovarman's rise dates a little after 700 A.D. According to the other section (§ 26) Deva (Gupta) was surrounded by enemy forces and killed. We are therefore justified in placing Deva Gupta immediately after Ādityasena, and treating him as the king killed by Yaśovarman.

It is to be marked that Y. is not treated as an Emperor. His attempt to establish himself as emperor did fail. He was defeated by Lalitāditya, but not slain as supposed by V. Smith (EHI., 392) for Kalhaṇa says that Yaśovarman attended his court as a poet-courtier after his defeat. His sending an embassy to China in 731 A.D. seems to have followed his defeat at the hands of Lalitāditya, for Lalitāditya himself was under the acknowledged suzerainty of China and Yaśovarman would naturally seek the moral support of the Chinese Emperor after his defeat by his protégé.

It seems that Yaśovarman was ousted from Magadha before 731 A.D., probably at the time of his Kashmir defeat, which should be dated before 731 A.D.

§ 46. P.'s dynasty [restored]

He ['of the P.-dynasty'] killed the ministers (or, supporters of that feudatory) (163).

He was senseless on account of his prestige, taking steps in a hurry, unsteady, a drinker of wine, fond of rogues. He was lying on the ground drunk, and was killed by enemies (864—66).

(c) His only brother R. was king for 48 days (867). He gave money to Brahmins and passed time.

Comments

R.'s identity with Vishṇu Gupta Chandrāditya is already discussed in the Introduction above. The genealogy there is as following:—

This section is not giving the name of Dvādaśāditya. Vishṇu Gupta (R.) is treated as the last king in Bengal proper. Dvādaśāditya, in any case, ruled only for a few months. It is evident that it was either Dvādaśāditya or Jivita Gupta who was captured by Lalitāditya of Kashmir and taken there as a prisoner. It is more likely that it was Jivita Gupta II, for Dvādaśāditya died as a boy, and the Gauḍa king captured by Lalitāditya had twice taken up arms against Lalitāditya. Lalitāditya was invested with royalty by the Emperor of China in 733 A.D. Lalitāditya undertook a digvijaya according to the Rājataranginī, which was generally done on accession. This date agrees with the dates we approximately get from the MMK for the close of the Gauḍa Gupta Dynasty.

§ 47. A Śūdra king in Gauḍa

After him Sta, will be king (868). He will be a Śūdra by caste, a cripple, low, non-religious, ill-tempered, and quarrelsome. He destroys Brahmin feudal lords, recluses of good-conduct, and others. He will be always busy in maintaining law and order (nigraha). His administration will be sharp, he will be the killer of thieves, forbidded of all rascals practising religious hypocrisy. He will be a freedom-giver and will be a donor. He will rule for 17 years. He dies of leprosy (869—73). [Then follows his future career in the hereafter (847-75)].

This is the history of the past Eastern kings, the 'lokavardhanas', and known to every one. (875).

Comments

The Sta. is the same cripple as described in § 47 above, who had been a popular Bengali leader elected to kingship. He seems to have been a successful, impartial ruler, though peevish and inclined to be idealistic. With ill health, persistent executive capacity, and doctrinaire temperament this ancient Bengali politician served his country well for 17 years.

§ 48. The constitutional position of the Later Guptas, the Gauḍa Dynasty

A note on Emperor K(umāra Gupta III)

Under king P. (Pra.) there will be a king,—a descendent of another family branching off from the dynasty of P(ra).—a Kshatriya, very brave, an emperor of the three Seas. In this East Country he will be of large army and great power. He will beautify the earth with shining monasteries having relics of the Buddha, rest-houses and temples, with gardens, various stepped wells, wells, pavilions, roads, and free-kitchen hotels.

He was a devotee of the Buddhas, took to the good Yāna (Mahāyāna), and led the life of a Śākya monk, declining gifts, though making gifts. He was known by the name of K., a learned man and knowing tradition. He ruled for 21 years, and died of cholera. (876—82).

His descendants became subordinate rulers (874).

Comments

All what is said about K's position is verified from inscriptions about Kumāra Gupta III. The Gauḍa Guptas called themselves "the dynasty of Gauḍa". This is evident from contemporary records—the Gaṇḍavaho and inscriptions. Kumāra Gupta III and Ādityasena were the only truly paramount sovereigns in the line. Why Ādityasena is not counted in the line as a paramount king is probably due to his defeat by the Chālukyas. The Chālukya temple-hostel and his undertaking to build a temple-hostel for the Southerners imply the Chālukya domination in the last days of Ādityasena.

§ 49. The Pāla Dynasty

Then the Gopālas will be king who will be of the menial caste, and the people will be miserable with Brahmins. The Buddha's doctrine having been lost, the time will be irreligious (883-84). [Necessary mantras prescribed], [See next section].

§ 50. Religious Practice in the East, South, Insulindia and Further India

Then by mantra system (magical formulas) serve the people (884). [Directions about Tārā worship etc. follow for the East, the Dakṣiṇāpatba and the Islands in the Sea, for Harikela, Karmaraṅga, Kāmarūpa and Kalasa, up to verse 894].

Comments

Insulindia and Further India come here in the Southern system. "The Dvīpas in the middle of the Sea" were inhabited by Mlechchhas and pirates (taskara) (899).

§ 51. Madhyadeśa

In Madhyadeśa there will be various Kings and Ministers, weak and of little intelligence. 'A brief notice of the main kings is being given as follows'. (903—912).

M. (Ś., in T.), N., P. (Pra., in T.), D., I., S. (not in T.), A.,

Graha (not in T.), Kīrti (not in T.), H., then Ś. (B. in T.).

J., B., L., Soma; H. (Dh., in T.), then A. (905—907).

S. and L. and Strī. (will be) haters of the people;

S. (A. in T.) and M. will be lords of men (or causing prosperity to men):

they will be respectively Kṛimi, Brahmins and Vaiśyas, doers of irreligious deeds, hated, and fond of women (909). The kings will have large numbers of dependants (relations) in that low age, in Madhyadeśa (910).

The middlings, best ones, intermediary ones, and the lowest have been mentioned. They will be of short life (912).

§ 52. Miscellaneous Tracts

On the river Ganges, on the table-land of the Himalayas and in Kāmarūpa, there will be similar kings (913).

The kings of Aṅgadeśa for the periods first, middle and last are now related. In the beginning there (will be) Vṛita-sudhāna; he (will be called) Karmarāja. The last Aṅga king will be Subhūti-Bhūti, an Aṅga (914-15).

In Kāmarūpa the kings will be Sadaha and Bhavada, the casteless (915).

At Vaiśālī there will be Subhū, Mṛiga and Kumāra as the last ones and the two Vs' (916).

At Kapilapura where the Sage was born there (were) the pure-minded Śākyaajas, descending from Āditya-Iksha (that is Sūryavamsa Ikshvākus). The last (was) Śuddhodana the Śākya, amongst the Śākyavardhanas (917).

(The magical matras appropriate for Madhyadeśa are mentioned up to 924).

§ 53. The Scheme of Royal History summed up

Numerous kings have been related, belonging to Madhyadeśa, North.

West, East, South and minor directions (vidiksbu)—everywhere, and outside, the Islands—divided into four (825-26).

Numerous kings and mantra-processes have been related according to quarters (927).

(According to time, place and rulers, Mantras have been prescribed (928—31).

All the kings have been described according to the quarters (924).

Comments

This ends the dynastic history. Then follow the notices of political monks, Brahmins and other citizens, and religious and social leaders.

PART III

RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL LEADERS

§ 54. Monks (Yatis) connected with the State

The Buddhist recluses connected with the state (rājyavṛttinaḥ) will be these (935): Mātṛichīna (Mātṛicheṭa, T.); Kusumāra (Kusuma, T.); M.; Kukura (Kumāra, T.), an extreme lover of dharma;

Nāga (Nāgārjuna) whose name was Ratnasaṃbhava;

G.; Kumāra; V. the dharma-thinker; A. the high-souled, who was unapproachable in Buddhism; L. the qualified, the wise; R. (not in T.); and N. (not in T.); (937-38).

Under king Buddhapaksha was the light of Buddhism, A (Aśvaghoṣa) the Buddhist recluse Brahmin of Saketa, who lived for 80 years (938—940);

A, the loving Bhikṣu in the South, of 60 years, the wise, of Kāśī [T.] city;

South. Tb. [Db., T.] the recluse of the South, who prohibited criticism of others, and who had powers from mantra (940—42).

Apara, the excellent recluse of Ceylon; and the Ceylonese non-Hindu monks with Hindu names who condemn criticism of others and tolerant of the Tirthikas will arise at the end of the Yuga in that terrible time.

Ceylon.

V., L., R. [D., T.], and Vi. [V., T.], will be devoted to the Buddha's doctrine. (943—45).

Under king Bālāka (Kāla, T.), there will be the monk S. (M., in T.) and monasteries, gardens, chaityas, reservoirs, wells, Buddha images, symbols, bridges, paths—all different from orthodox Buddhism (946-47).

Heretical Buddhists.

There will be M. (S. in T.), K., N., [R., Gb.—in T.] Sudatta, Sushena, Senakīrti, Dattaka, and Dinaka who will carp at the theories of others (850-49).

There will be a monk, formerly a Vaṇik (merchant) and another, formerly a Vaidya (physician) who will think of the interest of the poor.

Philanthropists.

There will be Cb.; R.; Bb.; and Pratītha-Śrāddha who will explain the meaning of the Buddha images; M. the intelligent; and the monk Śrāddha (950-51). There will be these and many others who will be light unto Buddhism, and when Buddhism will decay, beautiful Buddha images will be made by them (953).

Image-philosophers.

Artist monks.

'Amongst the future monks, the first place will be held by the Southern monks (945). They will win fame by mantra and tantra practices (955).
 Leading class in the 8th century.

Comments

The time of Nāgārjuna is indicated by placing him above Aśvaghoṣa who is noted to have been a contemporary of Buddhapaṅkṣa, the Yaksha king—partial to Buddhism, that is, Kadphises (§ 11).

A more specific date of Nāgārjuna is given in § 9 above.

The notice shows that there was a regular school of philosophers who gave meaning to various images of the Buddha, and that there was a school who specialised in producing beautiful images.

§ 55. Brahmins and others connected with the State

Brahmins.

"Now I shall mention to you the religious Brahmins practising Mantra and Tantra, receiving maintenance from the State" [or, 'who took to politics, T.] (956).

V., the rich Brahmin, who went across the Vedas, in this whole country went round for controverting and went over all the three Oceans (to the Islands and Further India), and engaged himself in controversies. He practised the 16-syllable mantra (958, etc., 959).

(There will be) Jaya and Sujaya the famous Śubhamata of good family; Udyata the religious; Mādhava the good; Madhu Sumadhu; Siddha; and Nama (960-61).

§ 56. Sūdras and Śakas'

Rāghava the Sūdra, and others, (who will be) Śaka-born (T.-Kaśa), will be repeaters [of mystic syllables] according to the prescription of [Mañju-Śrī] Kumāra, miracle-workers, wise and learned (962). They will be supported by the State on account of their knowledge of mantras (903).

§ 57. Brahmins again

Vishnugupta

Then V., the Brahmin, at Pushpapura: He will be angry, a miracle-worker, and will cause chastisement amongst kings on account of his poverty and feeling of insult (964). He is called 'the king of anger' and 'Yamāntaka'. He was a pacifier of the wicked, and was for removing what was harmful and for augmenting what was good.

But that fool of a poverty-stricken Brahmin, misled by anger threw his anger at the king's life (967).

S. (Subandhu)

After him was S. (Subandhu?), the Brahmin, an expert in political counsel and Artha (śāstra), self-possessed, a lord, very famous. (He practised self-lessly mantras etc. 968-69).

Ś.

Ś. will be in Málava; he will control Brahmin goblins. He will be a Brahmin (970—72).

Southern Brahmins

V., an artist abroad

After this, V. will be a famous Brahmin in Dakṣiṇāpatha. He will be a Buddhist. Reaching the two Seas he will decorate monasteries, gardens, chaityas and the Buddha images (974-75).

Bh.

After him, that good and very wealthy Brahmin Bh. [N. in T.] will be famous in the South (976).

Madhyadeśa Brahmins

In Madhyadeśa, there will Sampūrṇa the Brahmin; Vinaya and Suvinaya; Pūrṇa of Mathurā; and Bh. the chancellor of royal exchequer, a worshipper by mantra (977-78).

These are the Brahmin worshippers of Buddhism (979).

(Then follows a description of the Mahāyāna pantheon, and the work closes with Mahāyāna moral. T. has only up to verse 988 (half of 988).

Comments

The South, on the above data, was closely connected with Insulinidia in the matter of Buddhist art.

It will be noticed that Viśṇugupta (Chāṇakya) who is also mentioned in the above section, is acknowledged here to be essentially a just man and as having great administrative capacity. Buddhist grievance is that he destroyed Nanda who was probably a Buddhist.

Subandhu, if my identification is correct, was essentially a politician.

HISTORY OF INDIA

(150 A. D. TO 350 A. D.)

By K. P. JAYASWAL, Esqr., M. A. (Oxon) Bar-at-Law, Patna

Closely and beautifully printed, a book of 300 pages on best Antique paper with 12 plates of new inscriptions, sculptures, etc., in English Binding

Price Rs. 10

It is primarily a history of the period called the Dark Period before the publication of the book. The history of—the Bharasivas and the Vakatakas—two imperial dynasties has been recovered. They cover the period from 150 A. D. and the end of the Kushan rule in Aryavarta down to 344 A. D., the year of the rise of Samudra Gupta. The Bharasivas or Nava Nagas and the Vakatakas re-established the Imperial Hindu throne to which was the Guptas succeeded. They were the real founders of Hindu revival and culture which had been attributed to their successors the Guptas. Full history of these dynasties has been reconstructed from inscriptions, coins, and the Puranas and also Sanskrit books discovered both from political, and cultural standpoints.

Samudra Gupta's campaigns, his routes, and his wars have been interpreted. The author undertook extensive tours by roads over the area of the wars in northern India and the home province of the Vakatakas to understand and interpret the rise of the Gupta Empire.

The history of Southern India, for the period and its connection with the North has been fully dealt with. The origin of the Pallavas as a Northern dynasty and as a branch of the Vakatakas has been forcefully revealed.

THE SO-CALLED DARK PERIOD IS DISCLOSED AS A BRIGHT PERIOD OF HINDU HISTORY

Some of the Opinions

'Mr. Jayaswal is to be most warmly congratulated upon one of the most important contributions yet made to the elucidation of what has hitherto remained a veritable 'dark period' of the early history of his country'.—C. E. A. W. Oldham, Esqr., Indian Antiquary.

'My heartiest congratulations'—Rev. Father Heras, Bombay

'... is a mine of valuable information and brilliant suggestions.'

Rai Bahadur Rama Prasad Chanda

'is a very substantial contribution to the Early History of India. It is full of very brilliant and original ideas. The learned author of this highly informative work is to be congratulated on his writing it.'—Dr. Hira Nand Sastri, M. A., Govt. Epigraphist for India.

'I must congratulate you on having thrown so much light on the dark age.'

ANCIENT INDIAN COLONIES IN THE FAR EAST

Vol. I

CHAMPA

by

DR. R. C. MAJUMDAR, M.A., PH.D.

Professor, Dacca University, Member of the Academic Council, Greater India Society, Author of Several Books, Premchand Roychand Scholar, Griffith Prizeman, Mouat Gold Medalist, etc., etc.

(525 pages, Royal 8vo with map and several plates. Cloth bound with Gold letters)

Price Rs. 15

'This volume deals with the history and civilization of Indian Colony in Annam. It is a most fascinating story of Indian activities outside India, in a far off land during the first fifteen hundred years of the Christian Era. It tells us in graphic language how the sons of India braved the perils of the sea more than two thousand years ago and created a New and Greater India in the Far East. It publishes more than 100 inscriptions, written in Sanskrit, which have been discovered in Annam and gives a detailed account of the development of Indian religion—particularly Saivism and Vaisnavism,—myths and legends, sculpture and architecture, social and political systems in a new land. It is a glorious but a forgotten chapter of Indian History and knowledge of Indian History would remain incomplete without it.'

OPINIONS

'The book is indeed a valuable contribution to historical studies and will be very useful, presenting a vast amount of important information in a clear manner.'—Prof. L. D. Barnett, M.A., University of London

'.....he has given a very readable account of the various aspects of the civilization which was introduced in that country by colonists from India in the 2nd century A.D., and which continued to flourish until the Annamite invasion in 1318 A.D.—Prof. E. J. Rapson, M.A., Cambridge University

'It is most satisfactory to have an adequate presentation of the results of French scholarship, and Dr. Majumdar has shown sound discrimination and judgment in the use which he had made of the publications of the Ecole Francaise d'Extreme Orient. The work is attractively written..... The author writes clearly and well on social and political conditions, on religion, and on art and has certainly produced a most useful book.—Dr. A. B. Keith, M.A., Edinburgh University

..... This volume relating to Champa is a highly satisfactory work. It is based upon a comprehensive examination of all the original researches, and it is throughout thoroughly sober and pragmatical. The history is given in full, but without amplification, and the same must be said of the chapters relating to religion and culture. I find the treatment of the religious features and the architecture especially satisfactory.—Dr. F. W. Thomas, M.A., Oxford University

'Dr. Majumdar's History of Champa is a work for which every one interested in the history of Hindu India will feel thankful to that learned author and the publishers. Your series projected to give a history of Hindu Colonization in the Far East is a service to the literature of the country.—K. P. Jayswal, Esq., M.A., Bar-at-Law, Patna

by

DR. BIMALA CHURN LAW, M.A., B.L., PH.D.

Sir Asutosh Mookerji Gold Medalist, Calcutta University; Fellow, Royal Historical Society; Corporate Member of the American Oriental Society, and Author of Several Books

(Cloth bound, with gold letters)

Price Rs. 3-8

'The present volume deals with the five tribes, the Kasis, the Kosalas, the Assakas, the Magadhas, the Bhojas who played an important part in the history of Ancient India. The author has collected materials from the original works, Sanskrit, Pali, and Prakrit. Some scholars have dealt with the history of these tribes but the present treatment is quite different. The learned author has succeeded in bringing together many new materials from Pali books and has presented the solid facts.'

OPINIONS

'It is most useful to have the widely scattered information thus gathered together in one volume.—Prof. E. J. Rapson, M.A., Cambridge

'Dr. B. C. Law's work on "Ancient Tribes of India" is marked by his well known qualities of thoroughness in the collection of material, and skill in its effective presentation. Historians of Indian politics, economics, and society will find in it many valuable in the collection and evaluations of evidence.—Prof. A. B. Keith, M.A., Edinburgh

'Students of Indian History are indebted to Dr. Law for his researches in these untrodden fields which he had made his own, the history of those small states and peoples which made such important contribution to the general life and civilization of India'—Dr. Radhakumud Mookerji, M.A., P.R.S., Ph.D.

'The book is published in the Punjab Sanskrit Series, which deserve to be patronized by the educated Indians. Dr. Law has done good work in collecting all the facts about these Ancient Indian Tribes.—Modern Review

THE INDIAN COLONY OF SIAM

by

PROF. PHANINDRA NATH BOSE, M.A.,

Prof. of History, Visvabharati, Santiniketan, together with a Foreword by Dr. P. C. Bagchi, M.A., with 6 plates

(Cloth bound with gold letters)

Price Rs. 3-8

'In the present volume Prof. Bose gives us an useful resume of the researches of European scholars into the history and literature of ancient Siam which was an important Hindu Colony and which is at present the only independent Buddhist Power of Asia. Prof. Bose has in the narrow compass of 170 pages succeeded in giving us a clear and interesting picture of the Hindu civilization in the Menam Valley. The religion and literature, the archæological monuments, and political institutions of ancient Siam have been described in a way that is sure to rouse the interest of the general public in the history of Greater India beyond the seas. We recommend the book to all lovers of Hindu culture history.'—Modern Review
