FOREWORD

THIS little book does not purport to be a 'Life' of C. F. Andrews. It is doubtful indeed, whether an adequate account of his career will ever be possible, because his activities on behalf of suffering humanity were so extraordinarily varied, and the details of them have been forgotten even by himself.

All that has been intended in the writing of these pages has been the paying of an offering of friendship, to one who has caused many of us to believe, by the quality of his friendship, in the reality of the indwelling Spirit of Christ, as a personal force which may transform humanity into the mirror of Christ.

Acknowledgments are due to Messrs. Macmillan & Co., Ltd., for the quotations made from Tagore's Gitanjali.
