BOMBAY JAILS.

THEIR FUNCTION AND ADMINISTRATION.

To judge from occasional comments in newspapers and speeches on public platforms there is a certain amount of misunderstanding regarding the functions of jails and the methods of administration therein. While it may be agreed that the object of a prison is not so much merely to inflict punishment as to reform and correct and that there can be no justification for exposing any member of the community to the depraving influence of prison life if an alternative can be found, yet in no country in the world has such an alternative yet been found, and in order that the community may be protected both in its person and its pocket, it is necessary that evil doers should be punished and that there should exist properly organised and controlled Institutions where that punishment can be undergone.

No Government desires jails as a part of its administration. It would be only too glad if its prisons could be closed because the protection of the community by the punishment of criminals forms a heavy charge upon the revenue of the country. It has been calculated that the daily average population of convict prisons in India may be taken at about 100,000. If the net value of the labour of these prisoners when at liberty is estimated at the low figure of Rs. 100 per annum, the loss to the country through their detention in prisons amounts to a crore a year. The net cost of guarding, feeding and clothing them in jail cannot be placed at a lower figure than another crore per annum, the total loss to the community thus amounting to 2 crores a year. If, therefore, the daily average number of criminals could be reduced even by 20 per cent., it would represent a saving for the whole of India of nearly 40 lakhs a year. In the Bombay Presidency the net cost to the Presidency of the 13,000 people who form its average daily jail population is 19 lakhs, so that it is obvious that from purely financial motives the desire of Government is to empty its prisons and not to fill them.

Type of Jails.

The prisons in the Presidency belong to one of the following classes :—

- (1) Central.
- (2) District.
- (3) Special.
- (4) Extra Mural.

There are Central Prisons at Yeravda, Ahmedabad and Hyderabad (Sind.)

The District Prisons are again sub-divided into—

First Class District Prisons	accommodating	500 or more,
Second Class	do.	do. 300 to 500,
Third Class	do.	do. 150 to 300,
		and
Fourth Class	do.	do. 50 to 150.

The prisons at Thana, Shikarpur and Aden, the House of Correction at Bombay and the Common Prison at Bombay are classed as Special Prisons. The Deccan Convict Gang and the Sind Convict Gang are classed as Extra Mural Prisons.

The Central Prisons take prisoners sentenced to transportation, penal servitude or rigorous imprisonment for two years or more, European prisoners, etc.

To District Prisons are usually sent criminals sentenced to terms of imprisonment for less than two years, while Special Jails are so called because the Rules, with regard to length of term of prisoners undergoing imprisonment there, etc., have been modified owing to local or other conditions. There are also Subsidiary Jails classed as first, second and third class to which are sent prisoners sentenced locally to short terms of imprisonment, three months and under.

In general control and superintendence of all prisons and jails is the Inspector General of Prisons. Central Jails are in charge of Superintendents, usually an Officer of the Indian Medical Service. District Jails are in charge of the Civil Surgeon, but in practice most of the administration is carried on by the jailor, who controls the whole of the subordinate prison establishment under the orders of the Superintendent. In some cases the Superintendent is also the Medical Officer, while in other jails there is a separate Medical man who is subject to the orders of the Superintendent on matters not immediately and directly connected with the medical treatment of the sick.

From the point of view of administration Central Jails are desirable because it is cheaper and more convenient to have one establishment for a prison of 1,000 inmates rather than four establishments for four prisons of 250 each, but the wide variations in sentence and the large districts of the Presidency make it impracticable to have any other system than that which now obtains.

With regard to the term of imprisonment, it should be noted that this is a matter over which Government has no control. It has nothing to say as to the length of the sentences inflicted by the Courts; all it has to do is to take charge of these prisoners from the judicial authorities and confine them for the allotted period. The short term prisoner is somewhat of a burden to the Jail Department and in the Annual Report of the Inspector General of Prisons there are frequent references to these short sentences and the suggestion is made that they serve no useful purpose and are much to be deprecated. In 1922 out of a total jail population during the year of 16,347, 3,317 were sentenced to terms of less than one month; 3,850 received between one month and three months. Altogether 13,588 prisoners were sentenced to a year or less, while only 1,263 received sentences of over two years, the class of convicts for whom big Central Jails are intended.

The Bombay Jail Manual, which lays down the Rules and Regulations for the treatment of prisoners, is a bulky volume of some 200 pages containing over 1,100 rules, most of which are designed for the benefit of the prisoner, regulating strictly his treatment by jail officials, his diet, health, privileges, and so on. It is laid down that "It is the duty of all prison officers to treat prisoners with temper and strict impartiality, to listen patiently to their complaints and grievances, while at the same time to maintain strict discipline and observance of all rules and regulations. It is important that every complaint made by a prisoner shall be heard with attention in order that, if real, it may be redressed and that no legitimate cause for discontent may be allowed to remain."

The jail officials themselves live in a state of freedom that in some respects, is but little better than the loss of liberty of the convicts of whom they are in charge, and they are under a discipline as strict as that exercised over the convicts. The jail warder, immured for long hours within the jail, has nothing to break the monotony, except the short period during which he is off duty. Moreover he is under constant supervision.

Discipline.

In this Presidency, as in the rest of India, but in distinction to the system prevailing in England, the discipline of the jails is in the hands of both paid officials and prisoners. That is to say, there are warders and convict officers, the latter in Bombay numbering over 1,100 as compared with 886 non-convict warders. There has been much controversy over this system. On the one hand it is contended that the system of gradual promotion of the long term non-habitual prisoners, many of whom are not of a criminal type, enabling them to rise by their own exertions and good conduct from one grade to another until they reach the highest, is a valuable incentive to improvement and unequalled training of character. It is also contended that in many cases convict officers are mentally, morally and physically superior to the class of warder usually obtainable. (Classified by education, 19.3 per cent. of prisoners are able to read and write,) and that the responsible duties thus bestowed on prisoners give them a sense of self-respect and fit them for return to free life to a much greater extent than any industrial occupation could do, and that the existence of the system saves the Indian prison from exercising that deadening influence which is the general effect of prison life in other countries.

On the other hand, those who condemn the Indian convict officer system consider that it is unwise to place one prisoner in a position of authority over his fellow prisoners and that it is not likely that a criminal would have a sound influence on those around him. The Indian Jails Committee, after careful consideration of the question, did not feel itself able to give any finding on these opposing views; but recommended the reduction of the number of convict officers and various changes in the system of their appointment.

In Bombay there are two grades of convict officers:—

- (1) Convict Overseer.
- (2) Convict night watchman.

Only convicts on the remission register are eligible and habitual convicts are strictly prohibited from acting as convict overseer, as are those who have been sentenced for certain offences. The rules in this connection are strictly observed and the appointment of a convict as convict officer depends on whether or not he comes under a series of regulations specifying the length of his imprisonment, the amount of time he has served and the number of days' remission he has earned. For example, a convict sentenced to three years cannot become a night watchman until he has completed 8 months' imprisonment and earned 20 days' remission. A man sentenced to 5 years cannot become a convict night watchman, the lowest grade of convict officer until he has done 15 months' imprisonment and earned 40 days' remission.

The extent of the privileges of a convict officer depend on whether he is an overseer or a night watchman.

A convict night watchman is more or less responsible for the ward to which he is attached and his duties are practically confined to night work. A convict overseer supervises the labour of prisoners and maintains order and discipline among them, takes charge of certain parades, escorts prisoners and assists in patrolling. Convict officers wear a special dress and overseers carry batons.

That in the Bombay Presidency the discipline in jails is good and the convict officer system satisfactory is shown by the following figures taken from the Report of the Inspector General of Prisons for 1922.

There were only 7 escapes during the year as compared with 23 in 1921 and 3 were recaptured. Of the seven escapes only one was from inside the jail. Nine of the prisoners who escaped during 1921 were recaptured during the year. Only eighteen prisoners were sent to Magistrates for offences against the Prison Act or the Indian Penal Code, the disciplinary powers of the Superintendent being adequate to deal with other offences. The actual number of offences dealt with by the Superintendents was 19,650, of which 13,739 were awarded minor punishments, warnings forming nearly 14 per cent. of the punishments. Two thousand two hundred and forty-three habituals were responsible for 5,689 punishments and 4,222 casuals for 13,948.

Only 36 prisoners had to be punished by whipping mostly for assaults on warders or convict overseers, which worked out at .02 per cent. of the total number of prison offences and .01 per cent. of the total number of prisoners passing through the jails during the year.

In addition to the many prisoners who were released at the recommendation of the Prisons Enquiry Committee, the total number released under the remission system was 3,000 and the practice of mustering prisoners and reading and explaining to them the benefits of the remission rules was continued with success.

The Day's Work.

The general daily routine in a prison is as follows :—

At daybreak the wards and cells are opened and the convicts wash, take their early morning meal and go to work. At 9 a.m. there is bathing parade followed by the morning meal, the chief meal of the day, and labour goes on until 4 o'clock. After the evening meal at 6 p.m. prisoners are locked up. When the prisoners are awakened they have to take and fold up their blankets and sleeping mats which are taken outside and spread out in the open air. Every prisoner must wash his clothing at least once a week. One morning every week the Superintendent holds an inspection parade of all prisoners, usually with the medical officer present, when every prisoner has an opportunity of making a complaint or application to the Superintendent. He also visits the hospital. It is of course open to any prisoner to make a complaint or application to the Superintendent at other times than the weekly parade and it is the duty of every prison official to produce before the Superintendent, without unnecessary delay, any prisoner desiring to see him.

Every attention is given to religious and caste prejudices. Conservancy duties are not exacted from prisoners who are not in the habit of performing such work when in a free state. Brahmins or other Hindu cooks do the cooking and high caste Hindus are separated from Mohamedans during meal time. All Mahomedan prisoners are allowed to keep roza during the month of Ramzan and every prisoner is allowed to perform his devotions in a quiet and orderly manner during meal hours, the mid-day rest, and after being locked up for the night; but shouting out or praying in loud tones is not permitted either in the day time or at night when it would disturb the rest of the prisoners. Prisoners while keeping the fast are permitted to receive the whole of their daily rations at the evening meal and to retain the whole or any portion thereof in their wards or cells for consumption during the night or following morning. Mahomedan prisoners are also allowed an extra pot in their cells to hold water for washing before prayers and may have trousers instead of shorts and a piece of cloth measuring 4 feet by 2 feet instead of the usual towel.

Sikhs are allowed to retain their religious symbols.

Government have also appointed unofficial gentlemen in each district to visit the local jails and give lectures to the prisoners.

Visitors to Jails.

Government also appoints visitors for every jail who, in addition to meeting quarterly as a Board, individually visit the prisons from time to time. They are empowered to inspect the barracks, cells, wards, worksheds and other buildings of the prison generally and to ascertain whether considerations of health, cleanliness and security are attended to; whether proper management and discipline are maintained in every respect and whether any person is illegally detained or is detained for an undue length of time while awaiting trial.

They can also examine the register of convicted and under-trial prisoners; the punishment book, other prison registers, the accounts of the prison and hear and attend to all representations and petitions made by or on behalf of prisoners, and see that they are forwarded to Government.

Any visitor may see and question any prisoner, out of hearing of any jail officer and no prisoner can be punished for any statement or complaint made to a visitor except with the concurrence of such visitor.

Classification.

In all prisons wherever practicable the system of classification is adopted in order that the younger and the less experienced criminal shall not be contaminated and rendered worse by association with more hardened offenders.

Previously convicted prisoners in 1922 classified as habituals showed an increase of 2,402 against 2,318 in 1921, which is equivalent to 15 per cent. of the number of prisoners admitted during the year.

A separate division has now been formed for certain offenders sentenced to simple imprisonment and specially recommended to be put in this division in consideration of their character, education or status or the circumstances of their offence.

Prisoners in this separate division receive the ordinary prison food but may be allowed to have their own food sent in from outside the prison, provided it is of a simple character. No luxuries are allowed. They may wear their own clothing and use their own bedding and are allowed to provide writing materials, books and periodicals but not newspapers. They are allowed to receive and write one letter a month and to have one interview a month on private matters. They may use their own cooking and feeding utensils and are allowed a reasonable amount of private furniture. Prisoners sentenced to ordinary simple imprisonment are not required to labour unless they desire to do so and are allowed books and writing materials.

During 1922, the impression was carefully fostered by interested persons that a campaign of "repression" was in progress as the result of which the jails were filled to overflowing with individuals popularly, but somewhat vaguely known as "political" prisoners. How entirely untrue this is may be gathered from the following figures. Eighteen people were convicted of "offences against the State". Only one was sentenced to over two years for an offence connected with the Army and Navy and 73 committed to jail for failure to provide security under section 108 of the Criminal Procedure Code or ninety-two out of the 100,000 people who passed through the jails and prisons of the Presidency in 1922.

Prison Industries.

One of the most important, and in some ways the most difficult task of the prison authorities, is to keep the prisoners usefully employed. So far as possible labour in prisons is designed not merely as part of the punishment, but as a definite reformatory influence. In prison industries the mere extraction of profits is not the true object kept in view. Rather, the object is the prevention of further crime by the reformation of the criminal who has often become a criminal in default of a useful occupation. The question then arises as to which are the forms of labour likely to be most beneficial to the prisoner. Seeing that something over 70 per cent. of the population of India is engaged in agriculture and that 57 per cent. of the convicts admitted to jails are returned as agriculturists, it is obvious that agriculture would be the most suitable industry, but for various reasons this is not practicable. Moreover most of the employment of long term prisoners must be inside the walls of a jail.

In determining the labour that must be undertaken by prisoners careful attention is paid to the individual, and all prisoners and the tasks they are called upon to do are carefully graded and selected, the three types of labour being hard, medium and light.

Examples of hard labour are : working a pump or crank, road making, grinding corn, making blankets, rough carpentry, digging earth, and cooking, etc.

Medium labour includes carpet weaving, basket work, book-binding, gardening, laundry work, etc.

Light labour includes twisting thread of fibre, making envelopes, dressing vegetables, sifting grain, clerical work, etc.

The hours of labour are nine a day and no work, except menial and necessary work is done on Sundays.

Remission of portions of a convict's sentence is regarded as one of the best methods of reform and he earns remission not only by good conduct but by good work. Nor is this remission necessarily dependent upon the amount of work done by a convict. In many cases the task to which a prisoner is allotted is strange to him, but he is allowed ample time to learn the task and he receives remission marks while he is learning, provided that he works satisfactorily, however small his outturn. And even when he is trained to the work care is taken in estimating the work done to make every allowance for differences in intelligence and physical strength. Moreover, no convict is called upon to do conservancy tasks or other menial work which is religiously offensive to him.

It has been laid down that the objects to which prison industries shall be devoted are :—

(1) Prison requirements.

(2) the wants of other consuming departments of Government who are expected to obtain articles which they require from prisons, provided that the articles can be supplied of the same quality and at the same price as in the open market.

It is only when these sources of employment are exhausted that prison industries can be devoted to producing articles for general sale and if any prison industry is proved seriously to injure any local trade it must be discontinued in favour of some other kind of employment. Prison-made articles are not sold below market rate.

In every large Prison a variety of trades are carried on. At Yeravda the large Government Press is run almost entirely by convict labour.

The nature of the work done at some of the prisons is shown below :—

H. M. Common Prison ...	Oakum picking and prison clothing.
H. M. House of Correction ...	Coir matting.
Yeravda Central Prison ...	Printing works, woollen and cotton carpets, canework, leather chappals, etc.
Dhulia Prison ...	Woollen blankets for jails, carpets and a variety of cotton articles.
(At the Patna Exhibition Turkish towels made at this prison were awarded a silver medal and carpets a bronze medal.)
Deccan Gang ...	Work on Visapur Dam and prison buildings.
Bijapur Prison ...	'Prayer' carpets.
Dharwar Prison ...	Furniture.
Karwar Prison ...	Cocoon oil, coir mats, cane and textile articles.

Health and Diet.

The feeding of convicts is a point to which particular attention is given and the rations have been fixed on an ample scale. All prisoners doing hard labour receive each day $1\frac{1}{2}$ pounds of jowari, bajri or nagri flour (except on Sundays and Wednesdays when 12 oz. of wheat flour or rice are given in lieu of 12 oz. of jowari, etc.) A daily ration of 5 oz. of dhal is given except on Sundays when 4 oz. of mutton without bone are substituted. Half a pound of vegetables is also supplied to each convict every day together with salt, onions, oil and condiments. Convicts on medium and light labour have the same food except that the flour ration is reduced by 2 oz. a day and the dhal ration by 1 oz. a day. Extra rations are given to convicts employed with the Deccan Gang and the Sind Gang who are employed on especially hard work. When vegetables are not procurable, two pounds of whey may be issued during the months from March to October and 8 oz. of milk from November to February.

In detention, it is taken to see that the food supplied is of good quality and it is the duty of the medical officer each day to inspect the food godown and kitchens. He also examines all food before it is distributed and sees that it is properly cooked and the proper quantity of oil, salt, etc., has been added to each ration. The cleaning of grain, the grinding of corn, the preparation of vegetables, etc., are all done by prisoners who, as they have to eat the food themselves are the persons most likely to see that the work is properly done. Special attention is paid to the cleaning of grain and after it is ground the flour is carefully sifted through a sieve having not less than 900 meshes to the square inch and residue must be passed through the mill a second time and again sifted; on an average out of 20 pounds of clean grain one pound is rejected as not suitable for consumption. No dhal is allowed to be cooked unless it has been thoroughly husked and in the case of some varieties an excess of 10 per cent. is allowed to compensate for loss in husking. With regard to vegetables, all hard stalks and fibres are excluded and only good succulent vegetables issued. The allowance to be given to the prisoners is calculated after uneatable matter has been removed.

Several pages of the Jail Manual are devoted to this important question of diet and from figures given there it is of interest to note that the following quantities of flour should produce the weights of bread shown :-

Wheat—10 oz. of flour	= 14½ oz. of bread;
Jowar—10 oz. „ „	= 16 oz. „ „
Bajri—10 oz. „ „	= 14 oz. „ „

4 oz. of dry dhal when boiled weigh 11 oz. and 10 oz. of dry rice become 26½ oz. when boiled.

Medical Attention.

One of the most important officers in prison administration is the medical officer. He attends not only to the physical ailments of convicts and their treatment when sick but has many duties relating to the sanitation of the jail and the prevention of illness within its walls. He is instructed especially to be on the alert for

- (a) Overcrowding of wards, workshops or other space;
- (b) Incorrect weighing or distribution of food;
- (c) Unseasonable, worn out or dirty clothing;
- (d) Neglect of personal cleanliness;

- (e) Undue exposure of prisoners to cold, wet or sun;
- (f) Unpunctuality or curtailment of meals;
- (g) Neglect to air, dry, or clean bedding;
- (h) Unsuitable tasks especially in the case of weakly men, etc.

Water supply and conservancy arrangements of prisons are his particular care.

The death-rate per 1,000 in all prisons of the Presidency last year was 14.5; the only other province whose death-rate is below Bombay is the Punjab, where the average is 11.17. The death-rate for the Bombay Presidency is 23.61. In the Yeravda Central Prison the death-rate was 8.9 per 1,000 as against 27.89 in the district, a very low death-rate when it is remembered that this prison receives unfits from other prisons. In the Dhulia Prison the death-rate was 37.9 owing to an outbreak of cerebral spinal meningitis. The Deccan Convict Gang had a death-rate of 25.4, the death-rate in the district being 29. Pneumonia accounted for 15 deaths. Bijapur prison death-rate was 5.3 per 1,000, district death-rate 25.1. Although cholera was prevalent in the district, no case occurred in this or any other jail during 1922. In the Ratnagiri Prison, although small-pox was prevalent in the town and the district, there was no case in the prison.

An illustration of the care which is taken of the prisoners and the attention which is paid to their health and physical well-being is shown by the fact that over 54 per cent. of the prisoners discharged at the end of their term show an increase in weight.

The Jails in 1922.

The following figures summarise briefly the working of the Jail Department during 1922.

The gross expenditure was over 21½ lakhs, a decrease of 3¼ lakhs over the previous year.

The cost per head, Rs. 165, showed a drop of nearly ten rupees over 1921. Prisoners cost 94 rupees per head to feed and clothe.

Net cash earnings of prisoners amounted to Rs. 2,18,000.

Condiments, vegetables, etc., to the value of ¾ of a lakh were supplied by jail gardens.

Including convicts, people awaiting trial and civil prisoners, the jails dealt with over a lakh of prisoners during the year. Of this total 4,666 were females. The daily average population was just over 13,000.

The total number received into jails to undergo imprisonment was 16,347. Of this number 9,082 were Hindus or Sikhs and 6,922 Mahomedans.

From time to time comparisons are made between Indian and English prisons and the suggestion is made that the latter are in every way more desirable. But the prisons in India and especially in the Bombay Presidency have features which are infinitely preferable to European prisons. The whole environment is more cheerful and open and natural. The convict does not spend years of imprisonment surrounded by cheerless bricks and mortar, his sole glimpse of the outside world the sky that roofs, the exercise courtyard. Once inside the gates, the Indian prison is more like a hospital or a cantonment. In some of them the grounds are full of trees and shrubs and the prison kitchen garden is a feature of every jail. There is spaciousness, light and air. The prisoners work in company and sleep in wards, not solitary cells. Moreover prison food and the conditions of prison life are cleaner, healthier and more comfortable than those to which the great majority of the convicts are accustomed in their ordinary lives.
