PREFACE

THIS study is a detailed account of the financial history of the state of Maine. It was undertaken in the hope that such a history of a typical New England state might aid in formulating plans for the future by making available the lessons of the past.

The author is especially indebted to Robert Murray Haig, McVickar Professor of Political Economy at Columbia University, whose careful reading and detailed criticism of the manuscript has been of inestimable value. Carl S. Shoup, assistant professor in the School of Business at Columbia University, has also read the manuscript and offered many helpful suggestions. Mr. Elbert D. Hayford, state auditor of Maine and William A. Runnells, state controller, have been helpful in supplying material not otherwise obtainable. Ethel Davis Jewett, the author's wife, has rendered assistance in collecting and analyzing data. Appreciation is also expressed for the courtesy shown by the staff of the Maine state library.
