

V34.L9.

C2.2

1962.

1962

Dhananjayrao Gadgil Library

GIPE-PUNE-001962

HISTORY OF IRELAND

IN THE

XVIIITH CENTURY

VOL. II.

WORKS BY WILLIAM EDWARD HARTPOLE LECKY.

HISTORY of ENGLAND in the EIGHTEENTH CENTURY. Library Edition. 8vo. Vols. I. and II. 1700-1760. 36s. Vols. III. and IV. 1760-1784. 36s. Vols. V. and VI. 1784-1793. 36s. Vols. VII. and VIII. 1793-1800. 36s. Cabinet Edition. ENGLAND. 7 vols. Crown 8vo. 6s. each. IRELAND. 5 vols. Crown 8vo. 6s. each.

The HISTORY of EUROPEAN MORALS from AUGUSTUS to CHARLEMAGNE. 2 vols. Crown 8vo. 16s.

HISTORY of the RISE and INFLUENCE of the SPIRIT of RATIONALISM in EUROPE. 2 vols. Crown 8vo. 16s.

POEMS. Fcp. 8vo. 5s.

London : LONGMANS, GREEN, & CO.

HISTORY OF IRELAND

IN THE

EIGHTEENTH CENTURY

BY

WILLIAM EDWARD HARTPOLE LECKY

NEW EDITION

VOLUME II.

LONDON
LONGMANS, GREEN, AND CO.

1892

All rights reserved

V34-29

C2.2

PRINTED BY
SPOTTISWOODE AND CO., NEW-STREET SQUARE
LONDON

1962

CONTENTS

OF

THE SECOND VOLUME.

CHAPTER III.

1760-1778.

	PAGE
The Whiteboys
Growth of pasture land	1
Partial prosperity	3
Origin of the Whiteboy movement	4
State of Munster	4
Agrarian system	5
The cottiers	8
The right of commonage. First proceedings of the White- boys	11
Tithe grievances	13
Some Protestants encourage resistance to tithes	18
Character of the Whiteboy outrages	21
Reports attributing them to religious or political motives	29
Falseness of these reports	30
Part taken by Catholics in suppressing the outrages	36
Their true causes	37
Laws against Whiteboys	39
Case of Nicholas Sheehy	41
The Oakboys	45
The Steelboys	50
The Irish Constitution	51
Growth of political discontent	53
The Undertakers	54
Expenditure on public works	58
Money Bill of 1760. Poyning's Law	60

	PAGE
General election	62
Character of Irish political life	63
The lawyers in Parliament	64
Loyalty of Ireland during the war	68
Lord Trimleston and the Catholic gentry	69
Proposed Catholic regiments for Portugal	69
Objects of the National party. Reduction of the Pension List	70
Limitation of the duration of Parliament	73
The first Viceroyalties under George III.	77
Townshend made Lord Lieutenant, Oct. 1767	79
 Viceroyalty of Townshend
His character	79
Great offers he was instructed to make	80
Dispute about the tenure of judges	81
Dispute about the appointment of Chancellor	82
Threats of a short Supply Bill	84
Scheme for the augmentation of the army	85
Inducements offered to Parliament to carry it	89
The Octennial Bill carried	90
Quarrel of Townshend with the Undertakers	93
Defeat of the Augmentation Scheme	94
New Parliament. Plans of the Government	95
Nature and composition of the Irish Parliament	97
Want of fixed party divisions	98
Negotiation for an augmentation of the army	100
Resolution of the House against English Money Bills	102
Supplies and augmentation carried	103
Parliament prorogued for fourteen months	104
Purchase of a majority	108
Address to Townshend carried. Resignation of Ponsonby	109
Division of the Revenue Boards	110
Last days of Townshend's Viceroyalty	112
Recalled, Sept. 1772, and replaced by Harcourt	115
Great unpopularity of Townshend	115
 Viceroyalty of Harcourt
Reunion of the Revenue Boards	117
Financial difficulties. Pension to Queen of Denmark	118
Proposed absentee tax	119
Conduct of the English Whigs	121
Defeat of the tax in Ireland	132
New taxes	133
Bounty on corn	134
Hely Hutchinson made Provost of Trinity College	135

	PAGE
Henry Flood. His eloquence. Irish style in the eighteenth century	136
Life and character of Flood	139
He accepts the office of Vice-Treasurer	149
Commercial relaxations	152
Relation of the American question to Irish politics	153
Franklin visits Ireland	159
Loyalty of the Parliament	160
It expresses its abhorrence of the rebellion in America	162
The American party in Ireland	162
Parliament authorises the despatch of 4,000 men to America	164
Discontent in Parliament. Dissolution, March 1776	165
Measures for securing a majority	166
Recall of Harcourt, Nov. 1776. Review of his administration	168
Viceroyalty of Buckinghamshire
Extreme financial distress	169
Necessity for free trade	171
Its advocates	172
Lord Nugent proposes a relaxation of the Commercial Code	177
Outcry among the English manufacturers	178
Intimidates North	180
Slight commercial relaxations of 1778	190
The Catholic Question
Position of the Irish Catholics	181
Efforts of the Catholic Association	183
Discussion on the rebellion of 1641	184
Gradual admission of Catholics into the army	186
Bills to enable Catholics to lend money on land	191
Act enabling them to hold land for reclamation	192
Attitude of the Government towards them	193
The oath and declaration of 1774	195
Catholic statement of grievances	197
Effects of French education	200
Long period of Catholic loyalty	202
Character of Continental Catholicism	203
Special difficulties of the religious problem in Ireland	205
Opinion of leading Irishmen	205
Nature of the influences favouring the Catholics	208
Policy of the Government	209
Gardiner's Relief Bill of 1778	213
Clause abolishing the Sacramental Test annexed to it	214
But rejected in England	215
Relief Bill carried	215
General acquiescence of the Irish Protestants	217

CHAPTER IV.

1778-1782.

	PAGE
Unprotected condition of the country	218
Military habits of the Irish Protestants	221
Rise of the Volunteers	222
Demand for free trade	226
And for legislative independence	228
Loyalty of the Volunteers	229
Vergennes' views of Irish affairs	231
Buckingham's estimate of the situation	232
Militia arms distributed among the Volunteers	235
Catholics subscribe to the movement	235
Its increasing popularity	236
Embarrassments of Buckingham	237
Conduct of Burgh and Flood	238
Parliament demands free trade	239
Great speech of Burgh	241
Bill for abolishing the Sacramental test	241
England grants free trade	242
Sanctions the abolition of the test	243
Buckingham's defence of his policy	244
Great development of the Volunteers	245
The parliamentary majority	248
The demand for independence	249
Francis Dobbs	251
Grattan moves a declaration of independence	252
Question indefinitely adjourned	253
Yelverton's Bill. Bushe's Mutiny Bill	255
Great liberality of the Parliament	256
Irish Mutiny Act	257
Made perpetual	259
Recall of Buckingham	260
Sale of peerages	261

Viceroyalty of Carlisle.

First impressions of Carlisle and Eden	264
Demand for Secret Service money	266
Dispute with Portugal about Irish wool	267
Volunteer proceedings in 1781. Fears of invasion	268
Proceedings in Parliament	272
Flood dismissed from office	273
Yelverton proposes an Irish fleet	274
Habeas Corpus Bill carried. Judges' salaries raised	274
How the disaster of Yorktown was received in Ireland	275

	PAGE
Flood and Teiverton on Poyning's Law	276
Revival of the Catholic question	278
Catholic education	280
Volunteer meeting at Dungannon	282
Grattan again introduces a declaration of independence	285
Decision again postponed	286
Correspondence of Carlisle and Hillsborough	287
Character of Carlisle's administration	294
Character of the popular movement	295
Recall of Carlisle. Whigs rise to power	297
Debate in England on Irish affairs, April 8, 1793	297

Viceroyalty of Portland.

Grattan moves declaration of independence (April 16)	299
Carried unanimously	301
The secret correspondence of Portland	302
Grattan refuses a treaty	305
England fully grants the Irish demands	307
Gratitude of the Irish Parliament	309
New laws for the relief of Catholics	311
Validity of Dissenters' marriages established	314
Constitutional legislation	315
Gift of 50,000 l. to Grattan	316
Happy prospects of Ireland	317
Opinion of Burke	317

CHAPTER V.

1783-1789.

Dangers of reaction in 1782. Discontent of Flood	319
Mistakes of subordinate officials	320
The 'Simple Repeal' question	321
Circumstances that strengthened the popular distrust	324
English statesmen disliked the Constitution of 1783	325
Statement of Fox	327
Portland's unsuccessful attempt to secure a superintending power for Great Britain	328

Viceroyalty of Temple. Sept. 1782.

Temple's dark picture of the state of Ireland	330
Convinces himself of the necessity for an Act of Renunciation	333
Act of Renunciation carried	323
Character, merits, and dangers of the Constitution of 1793	334
Necessity for a supplemental commercial treaty	340
Position of Ireland in time of war. Dangers to be feared	341

	PAGE
The Duke of Richmond in 1783 argued that they could only be averted by an Union	344
Evil effects of the Simple Repeal controversy	344
Growth of the agitation for parliamentary reform	345
The Volunteer resolutions. State of Irish representation	346
Financial reforms of Temple. The Knights of St. Patrick. The Geneva refugees	349
Resignation of Temple. Several weeks of interregnum	349
Viceroyalty of Northington.
Parliament dissolved. Great distress	350
Vote of thanks to the Volunteers. Grattan and Charlemont separated	351
Establishment of a Court of Admiralty and separate post office. Annual Sessions	352
Grattan's policy. Dangerous symptoms in the country	352
Flood moves a reduction of the army. Opposed by Grattan	354
Altercation between Flood and Grattan. Political attitude of the Volunteers	355
Charlemont	356
The Bishop of Derry places himself at the head of the democratic movement	359
His life and character	359
Volunteer reform meetings at Lisburn and Dungannon	362
A Volunteer convention summoned at Dublin. The Bishop and the Presbyterians	363
He proposes the extension of the franchise to Catholics	364
Fox's alarm at the proposed convention	365
Charlemont secures the return of moderate delegates	366
Attitude of the Bishop. George Robert Fitzgerald	367
The Bishop's entry into Dublin	369
The Convention elects Charlemont its chairman. Its Reform Bill	370
Introduced into the House of Commons	372
Rejected at its first stage	374
Dissolution of the Convention. Its address to the King	375
Failure of later attempts to carry reform	377
Different opinions on the policy of the Convention	377
Opposition of Charlemont and Flood to the Catholic franchise	379
Short interval of quiet before the French Revolution	380
Lord Northington retires with the Coalition Government	382
Viceroyalty of the Duke of Rutland
Distress in 1784. Agitation for protecting duties	382
House of Commons asks for a commercial arrangement	386

	PAGE
Foster's corn law of 1784. Its history and effects	386
Dublin riots. Houghing soldiers	392
Foster's press law	394
'The Liberty Corps' of Volunteers enlist Catholics	394
Degeneration of the Volunteers. Speech of Grattan, &c.	395
Proposed Catholic suffrage. Rise of the democratic reformers	399
Their congress, Oct. 1784	402
Attitude of the Catholics. Lord Kenmare	403
Seditious writing attributed to priests	404
Government informers. O'Leary	405
Relations of the French to Irish sedition	406
Political agitation subsidised. Spirit of the Parliament	408
Increase of national expenditure	409
Offices held by absentees. The Chancellorship of the Exchequer	411
Pitt desires free trade, and parliamentary reform on a Protestant basis	413
The Irish Administration opposes reform. Fitzgibbon	415
Necessity of a Crown influence in the Commons maintained by Hume and Paley	420
Rutland opposes Irish parliamentary reform	422
Grattan's policy and reform proposals	424
Commercial position of Ireland	430
Pitt desires a commercial treaty, free trade, and a partition of the expense of the navy	432
Discussion of the terms of the treaty, between the English and Irish Governments	434
Plans laid before the Irish Parliament, Feb. 7, 1785	440
Clause providing against deficits introduced at the request of Grattan	441
Rutland approves of Grattan's amendment. Commercial propositions carried in Ireland	442
Additional taxes voted. General acquiescence in the country	443
Opposition in England. The propositions transformed	444
Attitude of the English Opposition. Resolutions carried in England	447
Grattan opposes the altered resolutions. They are defeated in Ireland	449
Embarrassing position of the Government	450
Frequent suggestions of a legislative Union	451
Character of the later commercial legislation of the Irish Parliament	453
The Dublin police, 1786	453
Whiteboy Act	456
Grattan's motions relating to tithes	458

	PAGE
Great prosperity and general peace at the close of Rutland's vicereignty	461
Death of Rutland, October 24, 1787	463
Viceroyalty of the Marquis of Buckingham
Character of Buckingham	463
Financial reforms. Orde's pension. Grenville's reversion	464
'Ireland never so quiet'	466
The Regency —Rival theories	466
Causes that made the Irish adopt the Whig theory	469
Grattan moves an address to the Prince of Wales	472
The debate in the Commons	472
General estimate of the controversy	479
Alleged danger to the connection	480
Buckingham refuses to transmit the address to England. Censured by both Houses	482
Commissioners appointed to transmit the address. King's recovery	483
Great increase of corruption. Fitzgibbon made Chancellor	484
Resignation of Buckingham, April 1790	486
Letter of Luzerne. Secret French mission to Ireland	486
Condition of the Country
Steady improvement of Irish finance	489
Reductions of the interest on the debt	491
Reduction of the legal rate of interest. Proofs of the prosperity of the country	492
Its alleged causes. Free trade—abolition of the penal laws—corn bounties—bounties and parliamentary grants	496
Irish industries	498
The Irish Parliament essentially government by the upper classes	500
Its vices not of a nature to affect seriously material well-being	503
Comparison of the legal position of the poor in Ireland and in other countries	504
Remaining obstacles to prosperity chiefly moral	504
Increase of intellectual activity	505
Diminution of sectarian bigotry. O'Leary and Kirwan	506
Other signs that politics dominated over theology in the upper and middle classes	510
But not among the peasants. Peep of Day Boys and Defenders	511
State of education. Orde's educational scheme	512
Dangers sprang, not from Parliament, but from the movements beyond its walls	514
Problems to be solved by the Irish Parliament	515