ELECTION OF THE PRESIDENT.

The DEPUTY PRESIDENT : Honourable Sir Ibrahim and gentlemen, my proud privilege to-day to welcome you, Sir Ibrahim, and to invite you to take your seat as the first elected President of this Legislative Council. During your public life, as a non-official member both of the Governor's and the Viceroy's Council, you have been the veteran advocate of the people's rights and privileges : as an official, Member of the Executive Council, your efforts at the amelioration of the condition of the Indians in this Presidency and endeavours in the cause of education are now a matter of history. Your independence in the conduct of the proceedings of this Council as its President won you the confidence both of the Government and the elected members of this Council, of which your nomination for the President's seat both by the Leader of the House and by the non-officials, and your unanimous election is but a small index.

I now proceed to read the communication of His Excellency received by me through the Private Secretary and request you, Sir Ibrahim, in consonance with the unanimous verdict of this Council and approval of His Excellency, to ascend the dais and take your seat henceforth as the Honourable President of this Council. The communication of the Private Secretary is conveyed in these terms :

" With reference to your letter No. 762 dated the 19th February 1925, I am directed to inform you that His Excellency the Governor of Bombay has this day signified his approval of the election by the Bombay Legislative Council, at its meeting held on the 19th day of February 1925, of Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., as the President of the said Council."

Sir IBRAHIM RAHIMTOOLA then took his seat as the President amidst applause.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Mr. Deputy President and gentlemen, I have to tender to you my sincere and grateful thanks for the mark of confidence which you have shown in electing me unanimously as your President. To enable your President to discharge his responsible duties satisfactorily, it is essential that he should command the confidence of the whole House and it cannot but be most gratifying to me to find that you have in the selection of the first elected President extended to me such unanimous confidence. I cannot believe that such generous appreciation of my humble services as your nominated President is due to any special merits of my own. No one realizes more than myself the many shortcomings in the discharge of my onerous duties and I can only attribute your preference in my favour to your generous instinct in recognising that I have tried my humble best to deal with questions which come up for my decision in a spirit of judicial impartiality. I am deeply grateful to you for your kind appreciation of my humble efforts and I can assure you that I will continue to keep before me constantly the same principles which have won for me such unanimous approval.

Gentlemen, however much I may try to base the discharge of my duties on high principles, the success of my efforts must depend upon your cordial help and co-operation. I am most grateful to you for all the help and co-operation which you gave me in the past and I confidently rely upon you to continue to extend to me all the assistance necessary to the successful discharge of my duties. Occasions would arise with difference of opinion must prevail as regards the decisions which I may give on points of order arising during the debates, but I can assure you that the underlying motive will always be to reach such decisions in a spirit of fairness and impartiality, and I am confident you will accept them in the same spirit. The Bombay Legislative Council has succeeded in building up high traditions of procedure and respect for the Chair, irrespective of the person occupying it, and I am perfectly confident that it will continue to maintain such traditions always in the future, making it the model of constitutional assemblies. Gentlemen, I have to thank you again for the high honour you have done me in electing me to be your President.

I should now like to ask you what procedure you wish adopted for to-day. You are aware that His Excellency the Governor intends to arrive here at 3 o'clock and to address you at the opening of this session. We will have, therefore, to adjourn now and meet again at five minutes to three. In the meantime I should like to make a suggestion for your consideration. In order to save the time which is usually occupied when we proceed to elect members the Finance Committee and the Public Accounts Committee in making nominations and then dictating to honourable members the names of the candidates nominated, I would suggest that the fifteen minutes that are available now, should be utilized for sending in nominations for both these committees. It would be sufficient if on the top of each paper the name of the committee for which you wish to nominate a particular person is noted and it is handed over to the Secretary before His Excellency's arrival. I will arrange to have all these nominations typed, so that the Council can proceed to vote immediately the items are reached. Honourable members will have then simply to put crosses against those names for whom they wish to vote. In that way, considerable time of the Council can be saved. If honourable members are agreeable to this course, I hope they will occupy the time they have got in deciding upon the persons they wish to nominate for election, first to the Finance Committee, and then to the Public Accounts Committee. After His Excellency's departure, we will take up questions, and then proceed with the elections and the other business on the agenda.

The Council will now adjourn till 2-55 p.m.

The Council re-assembled at 2-55 p.m.

His Excellency the Governor was met by the President on his arrival. A procession of chobdars, His Excellency's staff, the President of the Council (the Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola, K.C.S.I., C.I.E.), and His Excellency the Governor passed slowly up the Hall to the dais at 3 p.m.

His Excellency's staff stood in a semi-circle at the back of the dais behind the two chairs, His Excellency the Governor being on the right and the Honourable the President on the left.

Honourable the PRESIDENT: Order, order. His Excellency address the House.

ing to address the Council, His Excellency said :—

Gentlemen, I am very glad to have this opportunity of welcoming all to Bombay for the Budget Session of the Council, a session which always be remarkable as being the first occasion on which your deliberations will be guided by a President of your own choice. I desire, of all, to offer to the Honourable the President my warmest congratulations on the unanimous choice of the Council which has selected as its most suitable member to fill this post of high dignity and responsibility. I have already expressed, in the manner provided in the Government of India Act, my formal approval of the election which you have made, but I should like to add that your choice has received not only my official approval, but my most hearty personal concurrence. In the course of your proceedings you may have occasion to criticise—often adversely, and perhaps at times severely—the past actions of my Government and its proposals for the future, but I am very glad that the first act of the Council this year has been to endorse, by a free vote of the Council, the appointment of President made nearly two years ago during the first Reformed Council.

The business that you have been called together to discuss at this session of the Council is perhaps one of the most important duties which devolve upon you during the whole year, for, in settling the Budget you practically decide what course of policy the Government is to pursue during the next 12 months in all the important departments. The Honourable the Finance Member will place before you proposals for an expenditure exceeding 15 crores, and representing an increase over last year's Budget figure of 67 lakhs of rupees. You will notice that a very large proportion of this increase is on account of the Transferred Departments, and that out of the demands for new items amounting to about 50 lakhs, no less than 33 lakhs are proposed for these departments. This allocation of revenues has been made in pursuance of the deliberate policy of Government, namely, the steady expansion of those departments for the administration of which the Executive is directly responsible to the Legislative Council. The conditions which followed the Great War, and particularly the immense rise in the cost of living, have, to the great regret of my Government, made it impossible, with the Meston Settlement in force, to pursue this policy to the extent which Government would have desired, and it will only be possible to proceed in the direction which I have indicated provided that the proposals for taxation which will shortly be placed before you are approved by the Council.

Since the last Budget was settled a year ago, I have visited many parts of the Bombay Presidency, from Jacobabad in the north to Dharwar in the south, and in every place I have visited I have been much struck with the strong demand for more expenditure on matters connected with the education, health and convenience of the people; and in reply to the addresses of the various local authorities I have pointed out that the necessary funds can be procured only through local tax in the form of rates, or from Provincial taxes collected under the authority of the Legislative Council. It will now be for you to consider far you think it necessary to raise additional funds by taxation. The manner in which proposals will shortly be placed before you, I feel sure that, in coming to a decision, you will give due consideration to the needs of the presidency as a whole, and to those of the districts which you represent on the Council.

I am fully aware that it is suggested in some quarters that more money should be made available for the necessities of the Transferred Departments by reducing the expenditure on the Reserved Departments, but the argument is put forward that the former departments are the departments which carry out what is known as the nation-building activities of Government. I would remind you that, for building of all kinds, sound foundations are required, and that many of our Reserved Departments are engaged in maintaining those secure foundations on which alone the national edifice can be safely erected. It would, for example, be useless to provide schools and teachers in rural areas, if, on account of gangs of robbers and dacoits, the roads were so unsafe that the children could not attend the schools. This simple illustration makes very clear the connection between the activities of the Home and the Educational Departments, and explains why it is necessary for Government to see that the expansion of education does not proceed at the expense of, and consequently with any risk to the maintenance of, law and order, without which education itself would be bound to suffer severely. In fact, it is only a truism to say that there can be no real progress in any country without stability, and stability can only be ensured by adequate protection, a due observance of law and order, and efficient administration.

You will all remember that in 1922 the Council insisted on a reduction of 60 lakhs in the expenditure of the year 1922-23, and since then every establishment throughout the Presidency has been carefully examined and revised. I am inclined to think that in some directions the reduction of expenditure has been pushed too far. It is to be feared, for example, that our economy on roads and communications has been carried to dangerous limits, and, as another illustration, I gathered from my recent tour in Sind that the reductions in the police force there were already beginning to have serious consequences. At the same time, I can assure the House that all the recommendations of the Retrenchment Committee have been very carefully considered, that none of their recommendations has been refused without the closest scrutiny, and that the position has now been reached that, without some small increase in taxation, it would be impossible to incur the expenditure which I have personally found to be demanded by the people throughout the Presidency, and which my Government considers to be absolutely essential in order to give that assistance which we desire to extend to the local authorities for their schemes for education, medicine, public health and similar activities. It is an undoubted however, that, as years go on, the expenditure on these services continue to show a legitimate demand for a gradual but yearly rise. I hesitate to repeat again words I used on the first occasion addressed honourable members after my arrival in Bombay, but my work in the Presidency has given me ample testimony of the social difficulties which lie ahead of us if there is not to be, at any date, a re-adjustment of the financial relations which, at present, exist between the Government of India and this Presidency. It is a needless proposition to expect any Government to meet the demands of naturally expanding services with little, or no expanding income. I feel sure that any efforts which Government or I have made, or are making, in order that the justice of our claim to a share of the expanding revenues of the presidency may be recognised, will receive the entire support of honourable members and of the public.

There seems to have been some misunderstanding as to the business of the Council. Honourable members will remember that, when opening the second session in July last, I mentioned that it had been proposed that, in future, the business of the February session should consist of the budget discussion and urgent Government business only, the two sessions in Poona being utilised for legislation and private business. I said then that I thought that this proposal would better suit the convenience of honourable members. I have received no suggestions that this would not be in accordance with the wishes of honourable members, and, consequently, decided to act in accordance with this expression of opinion. I realise, however, that it is advisable that there should not be so long a lapse of time during which honourable members are unable to bring forward private business as from October to July, and I have allotted two days this session for urgent private business. To my mind, the whole question of the business of the Council needs reconsideration. Government is anxious to meet the wishes of the Council on this question in every way it can. It recognises the importance of private business, and the opportunity which both private bills and resolutions offer to Government of realising the opinions held in the presidency on many matters of public interest which would not, perhaps, otherwise be discussed, and of moulding their policy to meet them. The difficulty is to find the necessary time with the increasing demand, which Government also welcomes, for more time to discuss Government legislation. I still believe that honourable members do not desire to lengthen the February session and to sit for more than a month at that time. The July and October sessions can be prolonged to afford the necessary time, or it has been suggested to me that an extra session could be held in Bombay in December. While welcoming every suggestion, I do not think that this latter course is practicable, for reasons which present grave, if not insurmountable, difficulties, and I will mention only two of these difficulties. In the first place, Government is, during December, much occupied in the preparation of the budget, and in the second place, the honourable members who come from Sind and distant parts of the presidency would be unwilling, so I am informed, to travel to Bombay so soon after they had come to Poona for the October session. In the Sind members find it now extremely difficult, owing to Oct being a very busy month in Sind, to attend the October session. A few were able to do so last year. The Leader of the House has always been in communication with several honourable members on this question; and if, during this session, all honourable members either collectively or individually, would inform him of their views, Government will then be in a far better position to take a decision which will meet, in the best way possible, the necessities of the situation both regards Government and private business, and the convenience of honourable members. I wish it to be clearly understood that neither I nor Government desire to avoid discussion on any subject, but in arranging the business, and in fixing the months, during which sessions should be held, and the length of such sessions, we are only anxious to meet the convenience of honourable members so long as it is possible, at the same time, to carry through necessary Government business.

In accordance with the proposals made at Poona to which I have alluded, Government will introduce this session only urgent business in addition to the finance bill. The Council will be asked to give their favourable consideration to the Stamp Bill and Court-fees Bill, and I earnestly ask honourable members to consent to the passage of these two bills into law, for, without the financial assistance which they afford, it will not, of course, be possible to do all that Government desires to do, and, I may add, that honourable members desire to do, in order to provide necessary revenue for education, public health, and other urgent needs. The only bill which will, this session, be put before the Council for first reading is the Rent Bill, which, as well as the other two bills I have mentioned, has already been published. With my experience of similar war time measures in England, I am fully aware of the difficulties of this question, and I would urge the Council to give this Bill a first reading in order that its details may receive a full discussion in select committee.

The consequence of asking the Council only to consider, this session, the measures I have mentioned, is that a considerable amount of important legislation will be left over for discussion at future sessions this year. Exclusive of several minor bills, there are in view several important bills for second reading, and new bills for first reading to come before the Council in July. Among the bills likely to be ready for first reading are the Major Municipalities Bill—a measure to give wider powers in the management of municipal affairs in certain cities; the Sind Courts Bill to establish a Chief Court in Sind; the Improvement Trust Amendment Bill; a bill to supplement the Bombay Children's Act, drafted in accordance with undertakings given by Government last session; and a bill to impose a tax on totalisator betting, reference to which will be made by the Honourable Finance Member in his opening statement on the budget. There are the second readings of the Co-operative Societies Bill; the Bombay City Municipal Bill; and the Prevention of Adulteration Bill.

In addition to this heavy programme which I have outlined, including, as it does, matters of major interest in the presidency, there are many measures of importance, including the Karachi City Municipal Corporation Bill, a further amending bill to the Bombay Port Trust Act; and other bills, all of which must be postponed, I fear, until the October session. I mention these measures in connection with the question of the session in order that honourable members may realise that, as time goes on, the work of the Council must increase, and it will be essential, in coming to any decision as to the future, to take into consideration the present state of affairs. If this important legislation is to receive that due consideration which Government and the Council naturally desire that it should receive, it certainly appears to me that the length of sessions, and even the number of sittings, will require, as I have said, the most careful reconsideration, particularly if adequate time is to be given, as in the opinion of Government it should be given, to the proper discussion of private bills and private resolutions.

Honourable members are aware that Government set up a Medical Relief Committee early last year to enquire into and report on the whole question of medical relief and teaching in the city of Bombay, as I found a general agreement in the view I had expressed that the ratio of hospital accommodation to population is so low as to give ground for anxiety. That view has been endorsed by the committee, to the members of which I desire to express my sincere thanks for the energy and ability with which they conducted their enquiries, and for the valuable recommendations they have made. I will not deal at length with this question, but I deeply regret it has not been possible to act with more expedition. In view, however, of the proposals to deal with this most important matter, which have already been made public in a Press Note, it is necessary, before further action can be taken, to secure the assent both of this Council and of the municipality of Bombay to those proposals. The municipality have, at a recent meeting, I am very glad to note, agreed to the proposals, and in order that honourable members may have an early opportunity of deciding if they support the views of representatives of Government and the municipality as to the suggested method of dealing with a situation which is, in my opinion, a very urgent matter, a vote of Rs. 5,000 has been put into the estimates. I trust that an opportunity will offer itself, under this arrangement, for the proposals to be put before the Council in detail by the Honourable Minister for Education.

As in other parts of India, we are very dependent, both as a Government and as representing the people of the country, on the agricultural situation, and I am glad to know that, on the whole, the kharif and the rabi seasons which have just passed have been satisfactory. It is true that the kharif rains were late, unevenly distributed, and deficient in the eastern part of the Deccan and the Karnatak; but the rainfall in August saved the situation, reviving a large portion of the kharif crops, and providing suitable conditions for rabi sowing. Deficient rains in November and December in some parts stunted the rabi crops, and the outturn is, I regret to hear, not likely to be so good as was expected. I am informed that a certain amount of damage has recently been done to the crops by the cold wave which passed over the west of India, though fortunately the damage has not proved, on local inspection, to be so serious as was at one time anticipated.

In Sind, the inundation has been generally satisfactory, and there has been good rain in the desert portions of the province. Except for the damage caused by floods, the season has been a good one, although there also a certain amount of damage has been caused by the recent frost. On the whole, I think we may congratulate ourselves on the fact that the season was, taking it all round, a favourable one, and I hope that in the coming year we shall be, at least, equally fortunate.

Coming finally to the subject of law and order, it is very gratifying to note that the financial year which is now coming to a close has been distinguished from the preceding year by a diminution in the number of serious organised crimes of violence. When addressing you last year, I referred to the capture of the notorious dacoit Babar Deva, and since then, the work of breaking up the gangs of armed dacoits which had terrorised Gujarat, part of Sind, and the neighbouring Indian States, has been carried steadily on throughout the year. Practically all the most notorious dacoits have now been captured and have paid the penalty of their outrages. Here in Bombay City also, there has been a steady diminution in the number of violent crimes which were usually attributed to what was called "The Pathan Menace". These satisfactory results are largely due to the vigilant supervision of the superior police officers, and to the loyal and gallant co-operation of the rank and file. When we see in the newspapers a report of the capture of a notorious outlaw, or the breaking up of a gang of dacoits, I am afraid we sometimes forget the gallantry and devotion to duty of the men who have carried out these very hazardous enterprises. The public owes a debt of gratitude to men like Constable Tawde of the Bombay City Police, or Constable Shahbux of Sukkur, who, at the call of duty, threw themselves unarmed upon desperate armed ruffians; or Head Constable Murid Wali Mahomed Khoso, who, for a whole night, followed the tracks of Mir Khan Baluch and his gang of fifty dacoits, and arriving at Islamkot ahead of them, fought them until he had fired his last cartridge, when they withdrew disappointed. Government can, and do, recognise services such as these by the award of the King's Police Medal, and in other ways; but I trust that a wider recognition will be given by the public of the presidency, whom you represent, to the fact that, among these humble servants of Government, there are men who are daily performing deeds which do honour to the presidency, and to the country to which they belong.

Gentlemen, I know that you are actuated in your work, representing as you do the people of the presidency, by the same motives which I hope you will admit urge on my Government and myself to every effort. We all of us have one aim in view, namely, the prosperity of the presidency of Bombay and the welfare of its inhabitants. When we realise that the ditions of this Council affect the well-being of nearly twenty millions of people, I feel certain that there can be no doubt but that, in your discussions and decisions, you will always bear in mind the great responsibility which rests on every individual honourable member, and that you will give to the citizens of this presidency all the help and assistance which lies in your power.

At the conclusion of His Excellency's address a procession was held, and His Excellency left the Hall in State.

Honourable the PRESIDENT: Order, order. I have now to announce the nomination of four chairmen for the current session, to nominate Mr. L. S. Hudson, Dr. K. E. Dadachanji, Khan Saheb Mansuri and Mr. V. A. Dabholkar to be chairmen for this session. The next business on the agenda paper is "Announcement regarding the Governor-General's assent to Acts of the local legislature". The following Acts have received the assent of the Governor-General since the close of the last session of the Legislative Council:—

- (i) An Act further to amend the Karachi Port Trust Act, 1886;
- (ii) An Act further to amend the Prince of Wales Museum Act, 1909;
- (iii) Sir Chinubhai Madhavlal Ranchhodlal Baronetcy Act;
- (iv) An Act further to amend the Cattle-trespass Act, 1871;
- (v) An Act further to amend the Bombay Smoke-nuisances Act, 1912;

The next business before the Council is Questions.

Mr. S. K. BOLE: Will Government be pleased to state how many pimps and procurers have been dealt with by the police since the passing of the Prostitution Act?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: Fifteen.

CONTRACTS TO EUROPEAN AND INDIAN FIRMS FOR MATERIALS.

*Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR (Poona City): Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the contracts given to European firms or merchants and Indian firms or merchants in the various departments since the 1st April 1923, together with the nature and amounts of such contracts?

* This question was asked at the meeting held in February 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : Statements* containing the required information are laid on the table.

POONA ENGINEERING COLLEGE.

† Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR (Poona City) : Will Government be pleased to give the following information : (a) What is the attendance time of the Poona Engineering College ?

(b) What was it in 1921 ?

(c) If there has been any change, what is the reason for the change ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to lay on the Council table a copy of the principal's order notifying the change in the attendance time ?

(e) Was the convenience of the students taken into consideration while making the change ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : (a) 9 a.m. to 12 noon and 1-30 to 4-30 p.m. with a recess for one hour and a half every day except Saturday. On Saturday the time is from 8 to 12.

(b) It was from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. except some change shown below. On Saturday the time was 7 to 11 a.m. The recess was from 1-45 to 2-15 p.m. each day except Friday.

F.E. Division I :—Monday 9 to 1 and 2 to 5 having a recess from 1 to 2. Tuesday 10 to 1 and 2 to 5 with a recess from 1 to 2.

F.E. Division II :—Monday 10 to 1 and 2 to 5 with a recess from 1 to 2. Tuesday 9 to 1 and 2 to 5 with a recess from 1 to 2.

 Wednesday } 10 to 1-45 and 2-15 to 3 with a Thursday } recess from 1-45 to 2-15.
 Friday } 10 to 12 and 1 to 5.

B.E. Mechanical :—Monday }
 Tuesday } 10 to 1 and 2 to 5 with a recess
 Thursday } from 1 to 2.

(c) The present periods are much more convenient for the work and introduce uniformity. The "exceptions" shown in (b) were necessary because the workshops were open during different hours, viz., 9 to 12 and 1 to 4 except on certain days of the week. This caused much confusion and great difficulty in arranging time-tables for the staff and students. Now the college and workshops are open daily during the same hours. Moreover, the present arrangement is more convenient for games and athletics, which are an important part of an engineer's training.

(d) A copy of the notice† is laid on the Council table.

(e) Yes. No complaints have been made regarding the change.

* Kept in Secretary's office.

† This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

‡ Vide Appendix 2.

(b) If so, have any steps been taken by them in this connexion; and if so, what steps have been taken?

(c) Will Government be pleased to furnish the following information for the last five years (1920—24):—

The advisability of requiring failed students to attend prescribed courses is being considered. The question of providing better facilities at Poona and Ahmedabad is also under consideration.

(c) A statement† showing the statistics required is appended.

INCREASED PAY TO BAILIFFS.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR (Poona City): (a) Will Government be pleased to state when the last increment in the pay of the clerks and bailiffs in the judicial department in the Poona district took place?

(b) If there is any difference in the dates from which such increments took effect, will Government be pleased to state the reasons therefor; and do they intend to take any action in that connexion?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: (a) The pay of the clerks has been revised with effect from 1st March 1920 and of the bailiffs from 1st March 1923.

(b) It was found impossible owing to lack of funds to give the same retrospective effect to the revision of the pay of bailiffs as to that of clerks. But Government are considering whether some further relief cannot be given to the former.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

† Vide Appendix 1.

CONSTRUCTION OF BUILDINGS NEAR GOVERNMENT HOUSE AT KIRKEE.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR (Poona City) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that under Military Secretary to His Excellency the Governor's letter No. 458 dated 7th July 1920 addressed to the Consulting Surveyor to Government of Bombay and under Government Resolution No. 3107 dated 25th October 1921, the construction of buildings within a mile of the Government House and its compound at Kirkee, without His Excellency the Governor's previous sanction, is prohibited ?

(b) If the reply to the above be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased (1) to specify the cases in which such permission or sanction was given or refused, the dates on which such sanction was given or refused, and the names of persons, villages and survey number affected in each case ;

(2) to state whether the above letter No. 458 of the Military Secretary to the Governor dated the 7th July 1920 and the Government Resolution No. 3107 of 25th October 1921 were published in the Government Gazette or in any newspapers for the information of the public ; and

(3) to state whether the above restrictions are in accordance with the Land Revenue Enactments and Rules made thereunder ? If not, under what law have those restrictions been imposed ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that permission was granted to one Mr. Peter Luis to erect a building in survey No. 21, plot No. 2 of Bopodi, on 22nd June 1921 but refused to one Mr. Mandevdas V. Sugandhi to erect a building on the same survey No. 21 in spite of the fact that his land was nearer to the public road than that of Mr. Peter Luis's land and that he had to arrange with no other occupant for access to his land ?

(d) If the reply to the above be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the reasons why permission was refused to Mr. Mandevdas V. Sugandhi ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : (a), (b) (1) and (3) The honourable member is referred to the reply given to Rao Saheb D. P. Desai's question on the same subject.

(b) (2) No.

(c) Yes.

(d) Information is being called for.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR : In reply to question (a) (b) (1) and (3) it is stated " The honourable member is referred to the reply given to Rao Saheb D. P. Desai's question on the same subject." Now my honourable friend Rao Saheb Desai's question is "(b) Will Government be pleased to state whether His Excellency the Governor is empowered under the Land Revenue Code to prohibit or permit construction of buildings in the above manner?" Then the second part of that question is "If the reply be in the affirmative, under what section or rule of the Land Revenue Code is he so empowered?"

Therefore will you please state the section or rule under which the Governor is so empowered?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: The Governor in Council is so empowered and not the Governor.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR: I want the section or rule under which Government has that power.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: That was not the question that was asked. If the honourable member gives notice, I shall give the exact section. The reply is "The Governor in Council is so empowered".

COOPER (Satara District): (a) Will Government be pleased to state the total number of plots prepared for sale or lease up to the end of the last official year on the undermentioned estates of the Bombay Improvement Trust, viz., (1) Dadar-Matunga, (2) Worli, (3) Chembur, (4) Ghat Kopar, (5) Kurla, (6) Khar.

| Number of plots prepared | 23 |
| Number of plots disposed of | 7 |
| Area disposed of—4·14 lakhs of yards. | |
| Average price realized—Rs. 12 per sq. yd. | |

(2) It is difficult to estimate the cost of these plots to the Board as all the works are not yet completed but it is estimated that when all the plots on the Dadar-Matunga Estate have been disposed of it will be found that the rate realized for the plots will be slightly less than the actual cost including provision of main roads and recreation grounds. In Worli the rate realized is very slightly over cost price.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

(3) As regards schemes 3 to 6 a reply has already been given.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: Information has been called for.

Dr. K. E. DADACHANJI: This is the last year's question and Government had full one year to obtain the information.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: The information is not yet received.

What I ask is whether His Excellency or the Military Secretary was empowered to order the Consulting Surveyor not to build within a mile of Government House.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : Surely His Excellency the Governor is entitled to ask to see the papers before any sanction is given.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR : I understand that the Governor in Council is empowered under the Land Revenue Code to prohibit or permit construction of buildings, if so I would like to know under what section of the Land Revenue Code he is empowered to do so.

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : The department knows it.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN : What could the department know about the efficiency of persons who had put in no service whatever ?

(No reply.)

Mr. S. S. DEV : Is it not a fact that one man was appointed the previous day and was sent to the training College the next-day ?

(b) No.

(c) if so, was any scheme launched accordingly? If so, how much has it cost? Before the scheme was launched was it ascertained whether the railway authorities would purchase the fuel?

(d) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table the report referred to above?

of survey no. 1036 of the village of Karki on or about the 21st April 1920 ?

(ii) If so, will they be pleased to state why the application was rejected by the Collector of Kanara ?

SANADS GRANTED BY THE CITY SURVEY DEPARTMENT, AHMEDABAD.

* Khan Saheb A. M. MANSURI (Ahmedabad and Surat Cities) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they are aware that the sanads granted to the people of Ahmedabad by the City Survey Department are wanting in necessary details as to measurements of peripheries, and that they are printed on paper which is not likely to last long, and is very inferior to the paper of the sanads issued in 1880 ?

(b) If so, will they be pleased to state why the measurements of peripheries have not been shown in the sanads of 1924 as they were shown in the sanads of 1880 ?

(c) Will they be pleased to state whether they have received any complaints about the sanads from the public ; if so, what action has been taken thereon ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : (a) Sanads are not lacking in those details which are essential. Only the form in which the details are now shown differs from the old form. In old sanads the dimensions of the boundaries of each property were written in figures. In the new sanads the dimensions are furnished in the form of lines drawn to scale and the scale on which they are drawn is printed on the sanad so that with the help of a scaled rule any dimension can be known. The paper upon which the new sanads are issued is inferior to that of the old sanads ; this is the result of retrenchment and the effort to use indigenous paper.

(b) The new style has been adopted because it costs the house-holders less. In the method of survey now employed measurements are not taken all along the sides of all buildings and open spaces, but corners are fixed with reference to accurate base lines.

(c) Complaints have been received but from a limited number of persons. It does not seem right to make all property holders pay more, because a few desire a more expensive process. It is however open to any sanad-holder to get his sanad supplemented by the written measurements of peripheries on payment of an extra fee of four annas. In this way those who really feel the need to be worth paying 4 annas to supply can satisfy their need without imposing any charge upon their neighbours.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in July 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

TIMBER IN DANGS FOREST.

(b) Will Government be pleased to state whether the timber cut from November 1923 to March 1924 from the Dangs Forest is kept in the balance stock or it is brought at Nawapur and sold there?

(c) If it is being sold, how many khandis of timber have been sold, within what dates have they been sold and how many khandis are still in stock?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: (a) The following table furnishes information regarding the timber cut in 1923:—

| Khandis C.ft. 1,478 11·83 | Khandis C.ft. 3,628 6·52 | Khandis C.ft. 5,107 6·35 | Khandis C.ft. 4,333 6·36 | Khandis C.ft. 773 11·99 |

(b) Timber cut from the Dangs Forest during the period from November 1923 to March 1924 was not kept in stock but was at once brought to sale depôts and sold there on 4th February and 17th March 1924. No timber is left unsold at such sale depôts.

(c) The following table gives information regarding the timber brought and sold at sale depôts and the balance remaining at the jungle depôts during the season ending 30th June 1924.

| New material sold during the period from January 1924 to June 1924. | | Balance of new material at jungle depôts on 30th June 1924. | |
|---|---------------|---|---------------|
| Khandis 2,121 | C.ft. 0·38 | Khandis 349 | C.ft. 4·38 |

Owing to the closing of the season and when carts are not available timber is usually collected and stacked in jungle depôts and this accounts for the unsold material of the year.

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: The attention of the Honourable Member for the Bombay City, South, is invited to the reply given to question put by the Honourable Member for Poona City (Mr. Bhopatkar.)

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I should like to know what the desire of honourable members is in regard to adjournment for tea. What I want to ask them is whether they would agree to wait for five minutes more, so that we can take the votes for the two committees, and then appoint the scrutineers, enabling them to do the work of scrutiny during the interval for tea. We can then adjourn for half an hour. I am in the hands of the House, they can do what they like.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

Honourable MEMBERS: Proceed with the business.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The only business we can do is to proceed to vote for the two committees. Whether they wish to vote now or after tea is in the hands of honourable members.

Honourable MEMBERS: Now.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: In connection with the voting for the Public Accounts Committee, I should like to inform honourable members that they are entitled to give not more than eight votes.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR: Sir, I find that my name is shown as a candidate for election to the Public Accounts Committee. I do not wish to stand for it.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Honourable members should note that they are voting for the Public Accounts Committee, and that the rules framed in connection with this election will apply. In order to refresh the memory of honourable members, I will read out what the rules are which apply to this election.

1. The voting will be by ballot.
2. Every voter is entitled to one effective vote only; when voting he should place the figure 1 against the name of the candidate who is his first choice. He is also recommended to put figures 2, 3, 4 up to 8 against the names of the other candidates in order of his preference.
3. A ballot paper is deemed invalid,
 - (1) if it bears any identifying mark;
 - (2) if no figure 1 or first preference is shown on it;
 - (3) if the figure 1 is shown against the names of more than one candidate; or
 - (4) if it is unmarked or void for uncertainty.

I have to intimate to honourable members that Mr. M. R. Jayakar who has been proposed as a candidate for election to the Public Accounts Committee desires me to inform the House that he does not wish to seek election to the committee. Therefore, honourable members will please abstain from voting for him.

Mr. D. R. PATIL: Sir, I also do not wish to stand as a candidate for the Public Accounts Committee.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Mr. D. R. Patil wishes to be excused.

Mr. C. M. SAPTARSHI: I wish to be excused.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Mr. Saptarshi also goes out. The Thakor of Amod does not want to serve on the Committee.

The scrutineers for this election will be the Deputy President, Khan Bahadur D. B. Cooper, Mr. Hooseinbhoj A. Lalljee and Mr. J. C. Swaminarayan. Mr. J. C. Swaminarayan is himself a candidate, but I hope honourable members will not mind it. This election is to be carried out on the principle of proportional representation which requires a great deal of calculation, and I understand the honourable member Mr. Swaminarayan has closely studied the question.

I do not know whether honourable members would desire to proceed with the election of the Finance Committee. (Honourable Members: Yes, yes.)

Before I ask honourable members to proceed with the election of the Finance Committee, I should like to invite their attention to a sad event which occurred yesterday, viz., the death of Sir Gokuldas Parekh. I wish to inform those members of this Council who have had no acquaintance with the working of the reformed councils after the first reform scheme of Lord Cross came into force, and the right of electing members to this Council was conceded for the first time, that that measure brought forward several patriotic Indians for service in this Council, and amongst them was Sir Gokuldas Parekh. I had the privilege of being associated with all such stalwarts as Sir Gokuldas Parekh during those years before the Morley-Minto Reforms came in 1910. During the whole period of his career which terminated with the advent of the Montagu-Chelmsford Reforms, Sir Gokuldas Parekh took an active interest in the cause of the agriculturists. It was a pleasure to hear him return to the charge now and again in the promotion of the best interests of the ryots. It is, I think, no exaggeration to say that his persevering efforts led to a better understanding between Government in the Revenue Department and a large mass of agriculturists and led to the policy of suspensions and remissions, which is now in operation.

In other walks of public life, Sir Gokuldas Parekh was a prominent figure both locally and in All-India affairs. I am sure you will agree with me when I say that the presidency and the country have suffered a great loss in the death of Sir Gokuldas Parekh. A tribute to the value of his services is all that we can extend to his memory.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR (Bombay University): Sir, on behalf of the Swaraj party I entirely associate myself with the sentiments you have so well expressed about the sad death of Sir Gokuldas Parekh.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: Mr. President, I desire on behalf of the official benches to associate myself with what you, Sir, have so well expressed. I do not desire to repeat what you have said. But I desire to add a humble tribute from my own personal knowledge. I remember him some thirty years ago as a member of the old Legislative Council, while my own duties were those of Secretary to the Council. I remember him again later as an advocate before the appellate bench of the High Court. I desire, Sir, to associate myself on behalf of the Government benches with all you have said regarding Sir Gokuldas Parekh and the great loss in his death suffered by the presidency.

Mr. A. N. SURVE (Bombay City, North): Mr. President, I wish to associate myself with the sentiments expressed by previous speakers. The services rendered by Sir Gokuldas Parekh to the agricultural and aboriginal classes have been very valuable. At this moment,

[Mr. A. N. Surve]

I remember all his services to the Bhils in Gujarat. I think the Mhowra Flowers Act, which is on the statute book, is the outcome of his championship of the aborigines. The difficulty was that owing to harsh rules the aborigines who used mhowra flowers as an article of food were prevented from storing it up. But when he championed their cause a provision was made whereby during the season they are allowed to store up flowers up to a certain quantity. In other ways also he has championed the cause of agriculturists and has done many good acts. It is a great loss to the agriculturists and the loss will be felt very keenly by those to whom he had been useful.

Mr. R. G. PRADHAN (Nasik District): Sir, as a representative of the political party to which Sir Gokuldas Parekh belonged, I wish to associate myself with the sentiments which you have so generously expressed.

Khan Saheb A. M. MANSURI (Ahmedabad and Surat Cities): Sir, as a young man I have studied the old man, and I feel greatly sorry for his death.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Gentlemen, we will now proceed with the election of the Finance Committee.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN: Sir, is there any order of preference in this case?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: There is no order of preference in regard to the election of the Finance Committee, which is not governed by the principles of proportional representation. I hope honourable members realise that they are entitled to give not more than twelve votes and that they have to exercise that right by putting a cross against the name of the candidate for whom they desire to vote. They should in no case vote for more than 12 candidates.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR (Bombay University): Sir, I find my name in the list. I do not wish to stand.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Mr. Jayakar does not wish to stand.

Mr. LALJI NARANJI: Sir, I do not wish to stand.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Mr. Lalji Naranji wishes to be excused.

The scrutineers in this case will be Moulvi Rafiuddin Ahmad, Mr. Joseph Baptista, Mr. D. B. Adwani, and Sardar G. N. Mujumdar.

After recess.

Mr. R. G. PRADHAN (Nasik District): Sir, I request your permission to move the resolution about Mr. Montagu of which I have already given notice.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I should like to inform the honourable member that the budget is to be presented to-day and therefore while fully appreciating the fact that a resolution of this character ought to be moved at the very commencement, I trust honourable members will be very brief in their observations, in order that the work of the budget presentation may not have to be put off till Monday.

[The President]

Mr. R. G. PRADHAN: Sir, I beg to move:

“That the Honourable the President of the Council be requested to communicate to the family of the late Right Honourable Mr. Edwin Samuel Montagu, its sense of profound sorrow at his sad and premature death and its sincere appreciation of the distinguished services he rendered to the cause of India's political progress as Under Secretary and Secretary of State for India.”

Mr. President, we are meeting here for the first time after the death of the Right Honourable Mr. Montagu, and I think it is in the fitness of things that we should express our profound sorrow at his sad and premature death, and also our appreciation of the services he has rendered to the cause of India's political progress, both as Under Secretary and Secretary of State for India. In obedience to the hint that you, Sir, have given me, I shall not make a long speech in support of this resolution.

The Parliamentary career of Mr. Montagu is well known to honourable members of this House. As Under Secretary of State for India under Lord Morley he received his early training in the difficult task of controlling and guiding the Government of this country, and when in 1917 the Mesopotamian muddle led to the resignation of Mr. Austen Chamberlain, Mr. Montagu was called upon to succeed him as Secretary of State for India. Soon after his elevation to that high office, he made on the part of the British Government, an announcement of its policy towards this country, which is embodied in the historic declaration of 20th August 1917. That declaration was followed by a series of measures culminating eventually in the enactment of the Government of India Act which has brought this reformed Council into existence. The tenure of office of Mr. Montagu as Secretary of State was marked by one event unparalleled in the annals of British Rule in India, namely, the elevation of an Indian to the peerage, and his appointment, first, as Under Secretary of State for India and later on as the first Indian Governor of a Province. Then later on came the important question of the treaty between Turkey and England and the allied Governments, and as honourable members are aware, the publication of a telegram in connection with that matter led to the resignation of Mr. Montagu. When Mr. Montagu resigned that high office, no one could have ever thought that such a promising, such a brilliant career, a career associated with such fruitful work in the cause of India and the British Empire, would be so soon and so suddenly cut short. We all felt that his career had suffered only a temporary eclipse from which in due course it would emerge with greater radiance and refulgence. But in the mysterious ways of providence, that was not to be, and when we received the sad news of his death, it came to us as a great shock and we all felt that in him India had lost a sincere friend who had done his best to promote the political progress of this country.

[Mr. R. G. Pradhan]

Sir, to my mind the one great merit of Mr. Montagu was that he felt a sincere and fervent interest in the evolution of this country as a self-governing member of the British Commonwealth of Nations and that he did not content himself with simply expressing that interest in words of sympathy, but that he did all that was possible for him to do under the difficult circumstances, with which he was confronted but by which he was never daunted, to shake that interest into a living, practical, national policy which England must pursue through thick or thin, through good report or evil report.

Sir, I had the privilege of having had a long interview with him in England in the year 1919 and of discussing with him some aspects of the reform proposals then under the consideration of the Government, and the tragic events that had strained the relations between the Government and the people. I also watched him working as a member of the Joint Parliamentary Committee and the one great trait of his character which impressed me was his quickness in understanding and appreciating the points of view presented by other people. Sir, he had the gift divine of statesmanship and he realised that until and unless India was elevated to the status of a self-governing member of the British Commonwealth of Nations the relations between England and India would never be as cordial as they ought to be. His great ambition, the one dominant aim of his life, was to do for India what Lord Durham did for Canada and what Sir Henry Cambell-Bannerman did for South Africa. Sir, his policy has been to some extent thwarted by events over which he had no control. But I feel confident, when India comes into her own when the voice of controversy is hushed, and when things are seen in the proper perspective, his name will be gratefully remembered in this country as of one who placed this country firmly and strongly on the road to self-government and by his own countrymen as a great statesman who strengthened the foundations of the British connection in India.

Sir, I do not wish to take more of the time of the honourable House. I feel confident that my sentiments will be shared by the members of this House and I have every hope that this resolution will commend itself to the unanimous acceptance of this honourable House.

Question proposed.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR (Bombay University): Sir, on behalf of the Swaraj Party I desire to associate myself with the sentiments of sorrow and appreciation which the honourable mover of this resolution has expressed in his speech.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: Mr. President, I desire to associate myself on behalf of the official benches with this resolution. I think, Sir, that this tribute could not come more fittingly from any other Presidency than Bombay which has been foremost in giving effect to Mr. Montagu's schemes of reforms for the political progress of India.

Mr. D. R. PATIL (East Khandesh District): Mr. President, as a member of the non-Brahmin party I fully associate myself with the views and sentiments expressed by the honourable member Mr. R. G. Pradhan. I think, Sir, that the existence of the present Council is due to Mr. Montagu and he deserves respect from every party in the Council, and therefore I think it to be my duty to associate myself with the views expressed by my honourable friend Mr. Pradhan.

Khan Sahab A. M. MANSURI (Ahmedabad and Surat Cities): Sir, I rise to associate myself with this resolution on behalf of the Mahomedan community.

Mr. R. S. NEKALJAY: Sir, I beg to associate myself with the resolution moved by my honourable friend Mr. Pradhan. It is due to the vast scheme of late Mr. Montagu that the so-called depressed classes in India have received representation on the Legislative Councils and such other bodies by Government nomination.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Before I put this resolution to the honourable House, I should like to say that I entirely associate myself with the sentiments to which expression has been given and particularly to that sentiment to which the honourable mover gave expression, namely, that Mr. Montagu's career was typical of effort for strengthening the bond between England and India to the mutual advantage of both. I will ask honourable members to rise in their places and to pass the resolution in solemn silence.

Question put and carried unanimously, all members rising in their places.

PRESENTATION OF THE BUDGET.

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE: Mr. President, I rise to ask leave to introduce the Budget for the coming year 1925-26 and to review briefly for the information of the House the financial progress of the current year.

2. In the speeches which I have had the honour of delivering in this House during the last three years, I have set forth in considerable detail the general principles of the policy of Government and these principles have received the approbation of a great majority of the members of this House: an approbation which long experience has taught Government to look for not in vocal compliments but in the more practical form of a silent vote.

Life would be monotonous if we were all in complete agreement on all points. I do not suppose that anybody could bear the tedium of sitting in this Assembly if we were not stimulated and enlivened by the acute criticisms of some of our friends on the opposite benches. By this criticism we are exhorted and encouraged to examine our failings and our deficiencies, our errors of commission and omission. And in so vast a field of work as falls to the responsibilities of a Government we are deeply conscious that there are failings and errors and we welcome the advice and guidance that may be offered to us and look hopefully to receive such advice and guidance in ample measure. Speaking more particularly for the Finance Department, I desire to express our gratitude for the encouragement and assistance that we have received in all measures for the enforcement of economy and the checking of expenditure.

3. I was not present at the Budget debate last year. But I have read the discussion and I presume that some of the criticisms will be repeated again in the course of the general debate. I do not think it proper to refer now to those contentious points in the light of a debate of a year ago. I propose to wait the restatement of such criticisms in general and shall attempt to meet them in reply at the close of the discussion.

4. I propose now to refer to the completed accounts of the last financial year 1923-24. That year closed for us with results far more satisfactory than we had ventured to hope.

The actual balance shown in the accounts for 1923-24 has improved by 109 lakhs over the estimate of 435 given in the budget of the current year. The details of this improvement are given in paragraph 4 of the Introductory Note of the Blue Book, which shows that, while there was a net increase in revenue of 34 lakhs, there was a reduction in expenditure chargeable to revenue of 65 lakhs. There was an improvement of 10 lakhs under the Capital section of the budget which benefited to the extent of 5 lakhs from the provision made for famine relief under head 43; and also by 5 lakhs which had been provided for advances to cultivators and local bodies and for other capital expenditure, which was not utilised. The figures given in the Introductory Note of the Blue Book are not really so complicated as they look. A number of items could be eliminated by cross entries. Thus the decrease in Irrigation receipts is due to the increased working expenses owing to the transfer of certain canals from the Revenue section to the Capital section. On the other hand we collected more Land Revenue than was anticipated when the revised estimate was framed. The revised estimate (made after the monsoon) was unduly pessimistic. Excise, in spite of a fall in receipts from still head duty, shows an increase of 18 lakhs on account of vend fees and license fees. And we receive an assignment on account of Income Tax of 12 lakhs which was not foreseen at the time of budgetting. The decrease of 9 lakhs under Taxes on Income and the increase of 8 lakhs under Miscellaneous are due chiefly to the transfer to the head Miscellaneous of the contributions which we receive from the Central Government towards the cost of Income Tax establishments.

5. In addition to this net increase of 34 lakhs revenue, there was a net decrease of expenditure of 65 lakhs. The decrease is spread over all the branches of the administration as you will observe from the details given in the Blue Book. In part the decrease is illusory. 6 lakhs are due to the transfer from the Reserve, which is shown under the head Miscellaneous, to expenditure under other heads. No less than 31 lakhs under the heads Irrigation and Civil Works must, I am afraid, be taken as postponed expenditure, owing to the inability of our Engineers to utilise in full the allotments made before the end of the year. Part of the decrease under Excise, Land Revenue and Police is due to bills for compensation and rents not having been preferred before the end of the year. Forests spent less for the same reason that their revenue was less, namely, the slump in the timber trade. These items together make up a considerable part of the decreased expenditure. The balance is a real saving, owing to the decreases of establishments and leave allowances in the Revenue, Excise and Police Departments. Finally it must be noted that the total balance was swelled by a sum of 13½ lakhs, which was credited to us by the Accounts Department as a loan from the Government of India in spite of the fact that the sum was not actually drawn.

If we regard the results as a whole I suggest that we have reason to be grateful to the administrative departments for their enforcement of stringent economy. While some members will no doubt point out that we have omitted to make sufficient provision for those subjects in which they are specially interested, it will perhaps be generally recognised that it is better to have an error on the side of caution, that it is better to have a budget which ends with a substantial balance on the right side than a budget with a substantial deficit. For at any rate that additional balance in reserve enables Government to make good its shortcomings in successive years as will be unfolded later on; and on this balance we hope eventually to receive interest from the Government of India. The negotiations to this end have been long drawn out, but we trust that that Government will meet the claim in due course.

One item in the Revenue Accounts deserves special mention.

The original estimate under Land Revenue was 575 Lakhs.

The amount realised is 509 Lakhs.

Out of this difference of 66 lakhs, 44 lakhs are due to larger remissions and suspensions while 22 lakhs have been transferred to the head XIII—Irrigation by a change in the classification of certain works.

6. I now come to the current year 1924-25.

This year, as may be seen from page 20 of the White Book, the opening balance began with 545 lakhs and closed with 467 lakhs. The reduction in our closing balance is due to the fact that 79 lakhs have been applied to the avoidance of debt. We had proposed to borrow this sum for Irrigation; but owing to the increase in our opening balance we have met this expenditure on Irrigation from our balances instead of from loan money and we save thereby some 4½ lakhs in interest.

From the agricultural standpoint the year has on the whole been favourable in the greater part of the presidency; and we have been fortunate in escaping the ravages of the great storms which swept over the south-western coast of India but stopped just within our Kanara borders; and also those storms which brought such havoc in Upper India. These latter storms however affected the water-sheds of the river Indus and caused the inundation to rise in places 3 or 4 feet above the highest recorded level. This unprecedented rise resulted in the breach of various protective embankments and also sent a flood over lands in the

[Mr. H. S. Lawrence]

Nawabshah district of Sind which had never previously been reached in any inundation. It is satisfactory to learn that many of the sufferers from this flood have secured compensation for their losses through the ability to cultivate lands which had previously remained fallow for want of water.

The rains came somewhat late in the year but were in time to secure a good outturn of the Kharif both in Gujarat and in the Southern Division and continued long enough to secure a very large area of rabi cultivation both in the Central and Southern Divisions. The abnormal spell of cold weather in January and this month has done considerable injury to this rabi cultivation, the result of which is not yet known with accuracy.

We had anticipated the collection of 576 lakhs under Land Revenue but owing to liberal grants of suspensions and remissions and to the transfer of an extra 6½ lakhs to the head XIII—Irrigation our revised estimates amount to 524 lakhs.

There has been some slight improvement in business and the Stamp revenue is now expected to bring in 171½ lakhs.

If the Bill for the continuance of enhanced Court Fees had not been rejected by this Council last budget session, we should have received, it is estimated, another 18 lakhs.

7. The Excise revenue is anticipated to bring in 436 lakhs; and it is satisfactory to record that the consumption of liquor continues to decrease.

Fears have been entertained in some quarters that the decrease in the consumption of country liquor has been accompanied by an increase in the consumption of foreign liquor. But the statistics of the Excise Department show conclusively that though variations in public taste and demand may occur in certain conditions, yet there has been no increase in the consumption of foreign liquor and there is no indication of its substitution for country liquor on any appreciable scale. The policy adopted by this Government in the past for the promotion of temperance by voluntary effort is therefore producing its desired effect and up to the present point public revenues have not suffered. It is, however, evident that a reduction in revenue must be anticipated very shortly and it is for this House to consider what new sources of revenue they are prepared to sanction in lieu of this Excise revenue.

Our other sources of revenue are as follows :—

- Forests,
- Irrigation,
- Justice,
- Rent on Buildings,
- Tolls on Roads,
- Receipts in aid of Superannuation,
- Registration.

[Mr. H. S. Lawrence]

These amount to about two crores and there remains one crore scattered about in small items.

8. The results of this year's working may be summarised as follows :

| | | | |
|-----------------|----|----|-------------|
| Opening balance | .. | .. | 5,45 Lakhs. |
| Revenue | .. | .. | 14,00 „ |
| Expenditure | .. | .. | 14,18 „ |
| Closing balance | .. | .. | 4,67 „ |

If we exclude the 79 lakhs allotted to the avoidance of debt the administration of this year shows a deficit of 18 lakhs under the revenue section. This figure of 18 lakhs, the House will recognise, is the same figure we have dropped by not having court fees enhanced during the current year.

9. I come now to the budget of 1925-1926.

The opening balance is 467 lakhs, and we propose to end with a balance of 369 lakhs.

We withdraw 98 lakhs from our balances. Of this sum it is proposed to expend 49 lakhs on Public Works under the capital head of expenditure 60, Civil Works. The details are given on page 121 of the blue book. The majority of these works are works under construction while those which it is proposed to begin next year are shown on pages 235—244 of the blue book. We might have borrowed money under the Loan Rules for most of these works, on the principle adopted in recent years, but we have decided this year to reduce our loans to the minimum.

A sum of 8 lakhs is required to make up our payment to the Government of India of 29 lakhs per annum towards the Loans and Advances Account.

Our Revenue account will then fall short of our expenditure by 41 lakhs : the revenue being 14,78 lakhs and the expenditure being 15,19 lakhs.

We have not entered on the revenue side any provision in respect of the taxation bills which will shortly be placed before this House ; and we hope the House will grant us these additional revenues which will then leave us with a surplus of one lakh. In that case our closing balance will improve from 369 lakhs to 411 lakhs. The bills to which I refer were published in the Bombay Government Gazette last month and are :—

A Bill for the renewal of the Court Fees Act which lapsed last year, and

A Bill for the taxation of the transfer of Land.

I will not anticipate the detailed discussion of these two bills which will be placed before this House in a few days. But I may point out that we have arrived at a stage when we cannot progress further in supplying the needs of the public unless we have more revenues.

10. Criticism has been heard in certain quarters that the expenditure of Government has been directed in greater measure to the

[Mr. H. S. Lawrence]

Departments concerned with the maintenance of law and order and not to the Departments which deal with what are called 'nation building' purposes. It is indeed suggested from the other point of view that it is impossible to build up a nation without the maintenance of law and order. But let us discuss the question without undue emphasis on words.

What are the nation building purposes? It appears to be assumed by some thinkers that this category is synonymous with the transferred departments; and some of our critics make it a complaint that we spend say 2/3 of our revenues on reserved departments and only 1/3 on transferred departments. But if it be remembered that this allocation charges the reserved departments with full responsibility of borrowing money: with payment of superannuation pensions: with the provincial contribution to the Government of India, it is clear that the allocation is not very helpful and the matter would seem to require some further analysis.

Take for example the expenditure on Irrigation. Can anything be described more truly as nation-building than the work of a department which protects the country against famine and adds to the welfare and prosperity of a large number of our fellow subjects? Is this department less beneficial to the nation because it is in charge of the Honourable Mr. COWASJI than if it were in charge of a Minister?

11. I submit that a more valuable analysis of the activities of Government will be secured by dividing up various departments on a more logical basis than their administration by the hands of a Member of Council or a Minister. And I have had a summary prepared of the expenditure of the last few years on departments which deal with the essential foundations of law and order and finance and those which deal with such beneficial activities as:

Roads and Buildings (Development Departments), Medicine,
 Public Health, Agriculture,
 Co-operation,
 Education,
 Irrigation,
 Forests, Industries,
 Famine Relief,

and I find that if we take 1919-20, an average year before the Reforms, the expenditure on essential necessities has increased by 28 per cent., and the expenditure on other activities has increased by 179 per cent. I append to this speech a brief table* detailing those figures.

Now amongst these essential necessities the House will observe from numerous entries in the white book that expenditure on the Lee Commission proposals is included. This expenditure is sometimes discussed in the public press in no very favourable terms; and our critics are apt to magnify or even multiply the sum at stake. This sum can be accurately compiled from the figures of this budget; they amount to Rs. 9·1 lakhs in the current year and to Rs. 10 lakhs next year. This is an increase of 11·3 per cent. to the cost of the All-India services, which rises from 87 lakhs to 97 lakhs. Let us put the matter in a more homely manner in round figures. If the population of the presidency be taken at 2 crores, and the expenditure at 16 crores, the State levies eight rupees per head. Of this sum the All-India services cost less than one anna in the rupee; and the increase due to this report raises the cost from a total of seven annas per annum to a total of less than eight annas per annum. This is the price that we have to pay for measures which an impartial tribunal decided were necessary to preserve the contentment and efficiency of a very important section of our public services.

* Vide Appendix A.

12. I come now to the question of the general financial position of Government in regard to its ordinary income and expenditure.

The House is aware that Land Revenue has ceased to expand for the time being.

Government has postponed the execution of revision settlements and it is estimated that in the current year has on that account suffered a loss of 4½ lakhs of rupees. The extension of the period of settlements in Sind to twenty years has also checked the increase of revenue.

13. I would remind the House very briefly of the essential factors of this problem of revision settlements. The history of these settlements goes back to days before the British rule began. On the basis of revenue that was paid by each tract of country the burden was distributed by an elaborate system of the valuation of the soil carried out some 70 years ago. Since that individual distribution each cultivator has been able to improve his land and to invest capital in wells and embankments and in other manifold methods of tillage without any fear of increased taxation. The exemption of his improvements from taxation which existed from the first was secured to him by law in the Bombay Land Revenue Code some 50 years ago. I lay some stress on this point because complaints which have been heard from other Provinces have been supposed by uninformed critics to be applicable to Bombay.

Now what is the purpose of the revision of assessments? Some honourable members no doubt hold that the only purpose is the increase of assessments. That is far from being a correct statement of the case. The purpose has been to remedy the old anomalies, the uneven pressure of payment which existed in former days and to apply a more regular standard throughout the country. And when it has been found upon enquiry that the cultivator has suffered in any tract Government have shown their sympathy in a very practical form; for there are many instances on record when assessments have been reduced and increases postponed.

14. It would no doubt be recognised that increase of assessments has been the normal result of the progress of the country, and it would be strange if it were otherwise. For no one can be found to deny that in the last 70 years there has been a vast improvement in communications.

[Mr. H. S. Lawrence]

Roads and bridges are the tangible form of improvement within the experience of every one of us. So also with the extension of railways. The present net-work of railways has all sprung up within these 70 years; and the cultivator has benefited by being able to bring his produce to the great markets of the world: whereas formerly he was dependent on small local markets where there was little demand for his crop and it would have cost him more than the value of the crop to carry it over the hills and through the valleys which formerly prohibited access to the larger markets.

The rise in assessments represents therefore a very small proportion of the high prices which the cultivator has been able to secure for his produce through the benefits conferred upon him by the State during the last three generations; and these prices have also shown a great tendency to increase. Money has become more plentiful in the country and prices have shown a continued tendency to rise both by the changes in currency and in the system of credit.

15. These changes in the value of money have increased the cost of the services of Government. As every one knows salaries have gone up twofold in humbler ranks and, in decreasing proportion upwards, to zero at the top. The cost of all activities of Government whether in the Agricultural, Medical, Public Works or other departments has increased so greatly that additional sources of income are necessary. And since any increase of resources in Land Revenue is withheld temporarily by the will of this House, it is necessary for Government to look elsewhere for the requirements of the people.

16. The burdens of the agriculturists have been further lightened in recent years by the operation of the system of suspensions and remissions. When the harvest is reported to be unfavourable in any locality the collection of revenue is suspended in that locality; and if that particular locality suffers from an unfavourable harvest for several years the suspensions of the earliest year are automatically remitted and written off. These suspensions have been worked on so generous a scale that we find that in the year 1922-23:

| Suspensions amounted to | 107 lakhs and |
| Remissions to | 21 lakhs. |
| In 1923-24 : | |
| Suspensions | 93 lakhs. |
| Remissions | 43 lakhs. |
| In the current year again : | |
| Remissions | 24 lakhs. |

Now these years are reported by our Agricultural Experts to have been on the whole fairly favourable. The grant of these large concessions is therefore another indication of the tender regard which Government display for the protection of the interests of the ryot. It will readily occur to the intelligence of this House that if the revenue from this one source falls off in this remarkable degree, it is necessary to secure the assistance of other sections of society in bearing the common burden. That is the point to which I seek to invite the careful consideration of this House.

17. Now let us turn to the question of Excise.

Government have steadily pursued the policy of restricting the consumption of alcohol and of all drugs such as opium and hemp drugs. The results of this policy continue to be very satisfactory. The consumption of country liquor has fallen steadily from 28·4 lakhs of gallons in 1920-21 to 18·4 lakhs in 1923-24 and to an estimated consumption of about 16 lakhs in the current year. Our expert adviser, the Commissioner of Excise, is alarmed at the growth of illicit distillation and Government realise that they are running a risk in this matter but are adhering to the policy on the advice of their Minister.

There is no room for doubt as to the reduction of licit consumption. Opinions differ as to the cause. There has been some progress in temperance movements in which some members of this House have taken a very keen interest. Their advocacy of voluntary self-control is warmly welcomed ; but in certain areas there is reason to fear that illicit distillation exceeds licit consumption. The high price at which liquor is now being sold offers great temptations to law-breaking. With the high price the revenue has been maintained at about the average figure of the last few years, viz., 4½ crores of rupees.

To some of our critics this seems a very large sum of money. In order to form a reasoned judgment on this contentious point, it is perhaps worth while to recall to memory the fact that in the United Kingdom with a population a little more than double the population of Bombay the duty paid on spirits and wines exceeds considerably 50 times the sum levied in Bombay.

The House has expressed its wish to proceed onward to a policy of prohibition and Government are advancing on that road. But it is my duty to bring to the serious attention of this House the expert advice of our Commissioner that the next stage must see a large reduction of revenue ; and this House is now definitely confronted with the problem of how to replace a revenue which represents one-third of our total income. The loss of a revenue of 4½ crores, if the countervailing revenue were not granted, would open up vistas of the curtailment of the beneficent activities of Government which no one could regard without dismay. This sum represents more than the total expenditure on the Education and Police Departments. It is clearly impossible to curtail expenditure on this vast scale. Is there any single member of this House who is prepared to face the consequences of such a loss of revenue ?

18. The third principal source of our revenue is Stamps.

Owing to the serious depression prevailing in business in the Bombay City and throughout the country, our Stamp revenue even with the increased rates which were sanctioned in March 1922 failed to rise appreciably above the revenue of 1920-21 (177 lakhs) ; and last year when this House was invited to continue the life of the enhanced Court Fees Act it refused to grant sanction. The financial position has now become still more serious for the reasons just described and Government has decided to ask this House to revise its decision of a year ago. I may be permitted to state very briefly the general results of the proposed legislation.

19. The Stamp revenue is divided into two parts:

(a) Non-Judicial which deals with transfers of property, sales of land, mortgages and so forth; and

(b) Judicial which relates to fees payable for the transactions which are dealt with in Law Courts, both Civil and Criminal.

During the year 1922-23 these fees were raised by legislation sanctioned by this House in March 1922 representing an average increase of some 25 per cent. No indications have come to the notice of this Government that the pressure of these enhanced fees was seriously felt in any quarter. It certainly did not lead to any decrease in litigation or other transactions which were taxed by means of these stamps. The people are not usually reluctant to draw attention to any financial burdens that may appear to be oppressive. But when we enquired of District officers the reports were to the effect that no complaints had been received.

20. Now it is worth while to enquire when are Court Fees payable. They are paid for the most part by persons who have recourse to law courts for the institution of suites. And I believe that it will be generally agreed that these gentlemen who receive the assistance and protection of the State for the recovery of their debts are people who do not ordinarily contribute to the support of the State either by payment of land revenue or perhaps still less by payment of excise revenue. These are some of our most worthy and esteemed citizens. They derive perhaps the largest share of benefit from the protection accorded by our police forces and our courts of justice. They take their full share of benefit of our roads and hospitals and other public activities but I think it is correct to state that they do not pay any large share to the support of these institutions.

It is urged, and quite correctly urged, that Justice should not be a source of revenue. But when we consider that our Administration of Justice costs us 76 lakhs and brings us in a corresponding revenue of only 16 lakhs; and when we remember that Courts by themselves without the assistance of Police and other departments of Government could not possibly perform their functions, I suggest for the consideration of this House that no tax could be more fair than an increase of Court Fees to be levied from this section of society. The bill which we hope the House will accept would bring us in a revenue which is computed at 18 lakhs. If this figure be compared with the remissions of land revenue it will be observed that it falls far short. If it be compared with the imminent decrease of excise revenue it can only be called a drop in the bucket. But I submit that it can quite legitimately be regarded as a first step in the attempt to re-adjust the burden of taxation, to make a section of society almost exempt from that burden to pay a small degree of contribution towards its share.

[Mr. H. S. Lawrence]

Calculations put before this House in 1924 showed that out of an estimated increase of 18½ lakhs 7 lakhs will be collected in the city of Bombay and 11½ lakhs in the four Divisions as shown below :—

| | Lakhs. |
|---------------------------|--------|
| Northern Division | 3½ |
| Central „ | 3 |
| Southern „ | 2 |
| Sind „ | 3 |

And as the House is aware no increase whatever was proposed in payments on applications relating to sums below Rs. 500 and therefore probably payable by the poorer classes of citizens.

21. I now come to the second bill : A Bill for increased taxation on the Transfer of Property. The history of this bill is interesting. Some years ago the Municipal Corporations of Madras and Calcutta were able to obtain permission to levy additional rates of tax on the transfer of property within municipal areas.

When the Reforms system was introduced the Government of Bombay was considering the various sources of revenue allotted to them under the Government of India Act and Rules. And since a tax of this character was definitely allotted to Provincial Governments under the new law, the Government of Bombay contemplated the adoption of this bill when the Municipal Corporation of Bombay addressed the Government and asked that a bill should be passed giving them this revenue. Government replied that this tax was a part of provincial revenues and was reserved for provincial Governments.

Meantime negotiations had been in progress between the Corporation and the Government regarding schemes of primary education for the introduction of compulsory primary education and for the improvement of hospitals. In the course of these negotiations heavy claims for assistance from provincial revenues have been made on behalf of the city of Bombay.

In regard to compulsory primary education there is some little difference of opinion specially relating to the interpretation of an undertaking given by Government to supplement the municipal resources. This House will no doubt remember that a decision was taken to grant a subsidy of one-half the additional expenditure on primary education over a certain datum figure in accordance with a programme of improvement put forward by the Corporation. This committed Government to a subsidy of Rs. 62,500 in the first year, rising by an equal amount every year to Rs. 6,25,000 in the 10th year and to 9 lakhs in the 11th year on the introduction of compulsory primary education. According to that programme Government contribution for the five years ending 1923-24 would have amounted to 9.4 lakhs. But Government have actually contributed 16.9 lakhs or 7½ lakhs more than was originally stipulated :

and this expenditure was undertaken by Government after it was put before the House and passed by them.

The Corporation, however, have increased their expenditure on primary education to a far greater extent than was originally contemplated and now claim half the share of new developments. They urge that Government should raise their subsidy in a few years to some 25 lakhs. And since the Corporation are dissatisfied with the Government decision they have given notice of their intention to sue Government in the High Court ; the first suit of the kind, I believe, filed in the records of the High Court.

22. Then in regard to medical relief. The House may be aware that important developments are pending. In 1907 an agreement was made with the Municipal Corporation that while Government would maintain the five hospitals then existing all other medical relief must be provided by the municipality. The total cost of these hospitals in that year was about 4 lakhs. They now cost about 14 lakhs. But the city of Bombay has outgrown the measure of medical relief otherwise provided by the municipality. Government have recently addressed the municipality and offered, subject to the approval of this House, that the further provision of medical relief, which is admittedly necessary, should be undertaken from a fund which should consist of three parts :

- one-half from the public,
- one-fourth contributed by the municipality, and
- one-fourth contributed by Government.

It is probable that a considerable liability may fall upon Government by reason of this undertaking.

The improvement of the J. J. Hospital is one object in view. This is the principal centre of medical teaching in the Presidency. The popularity of the medical profession has increased so greatly in recent years that the J. J. Hospital does not provide sufficient material in the form of patients for the medical teaching of the students. It is proposed to enlarge very greatly this hospital by increasing the number of beds from 300 to 600 and the cost of this measure will thus increase the financial liability of this Government.

23. In various other methods the city of Bombay is directly benefited by expenditure borne by the general tax-payer. I would only refer to the heavy cost of roads and bridges in the vicinity of Bombay and the financial liabilities which Government are undertaking for the development of the city. Government have therefore come to the conclusion that it is but right and proper to ask the citizens of Bombay to contribute to the provincial exchequer by means of a tax on the transfer of property which it is estimated would bring us in a sum of 12 lakhs.

Similarly with the other chief cities. I need not do more than illustrate the assistance recently given to these places. The House is aware of the very heavy expenditure that has been incurred on water-supply and drainage at Poona and grants have similarly been given to Ahmedabad and Karachi and at the present time a scheme for the improvement of hospitals in Ahmedabad has been prepared and is before this House.

[Mr. H. S. Lawrence]

The main-stay of our revenues is Land Revenue paid by agriculturists and in the judgment of Government it is only fair that our system of taxation should be gradually adjusted so as to impose a more equitable share on the towns where public revenues are expended in considerable measure. The proceeds of this tax in these towns is estimated to represent a sum of 6 lakhs of rupees.

24. There is a third source of revenue which Government also propose now to tax and that is the betting on the race-course. In bringing this proposal forward Government are fulfilling a pledge which was given some time ago to this House; and from the views previously expressed in this House it is clear that some opposition may be expected from two different points of view.

There are gentlemen with high ideals who consider all betting wrong and who are unwilling that Government should become participators in conduct which appears to them reprehensible or even immoral. They therefore oppose such a tax on the highest principles. I cannot hope to persuade such men that their consciences are too tender. I can only point out to this House that in this measure we are adopting the practice followed in a large number of countries. I believe that all Colonies of the Empire have adopted this system. It is followed on the continent I think by all countries; and we find that it has been lately adopted by the sister province of Bengal.

Then there is the second class of critic who does not object to taking this money provided there is enough of it and we shall no doubt be told that we propose to be unduly lenient.

25. Well, Sir, this question has caused us a great deal of thought and we found that there were many difficulties to be overcome. In the first instance we had hoped to levy a rate under the conditions of the license which we give to the Turf Club under the Bombay Race-Courses Licensing Act, 1912 (Bombay Act No. III of 1912). The Income-tax authorities interposed a formidable objection. We had maintained that the payment of license must take precedence over the claims of the Government of India to Income-tax. As the Government of India had taken as high a tax as 17 lakhs from the Turf Club, they did not view our proposal with any high favour. They communicated to us a legal opinion which we could not defeat or disregard, to the effect that this license fee could not be levied under the existing law. We were therefore compelled to prepare a separate Act for the purpose.

At this stage then we learnt that part of the race-course is being acquired for railway extensions in connection with the growing developments of the city. The Turf Club were therefore driven to undertake a very high scale of capital expenditure to reclaim a large area of swamp, to relay the whole of the race track and to build new grand stands.

26. It was reported to us that since the Club had only a brief terminable lease, it was necessary for them to pay this whole capital expenditure from revenue and that the operations would not be completed until next winter. We were satisfied after examination that there was serious danger that if we pressed for the receipt of a substantial revenue now, we might lose all prospects of any revenue at all and we came to the conclusion that we should wait and give time to the Club to complete its capital expenditure and then we should be able to obtain a stable source of revenue.

At the same time we found that owing to the great commercial depression the receipts of the Club were rapidly diminishing. In particular we ascertained that that part of the racing which was carried out at Poona had failed to be remunerative. After full and careful examination of the situation, we have come to the conclusion that we should introduce a Bill at the next sessions and make it applicable with effect from next winter to the Bombay races and the summer following to the Poona races. By this measure we hope to secure in the year 1925-26 a revenue of 6 lakhs of rupees and a higher revenue the following year, and we trust that we shall receive the support of this House, when the Bill is placed before it.

The revenue that we hope to derive from these three Bills, if they are accepted by the House, is therefore I repeat :

18 lakhs—Court Fee Stamps.

18 lakhs—Transfer of Property,

6 lakhs—from the Turf Club.

We have framed a Budget which will leave us with a small balance of one lakh with the help of these 42 lakhs of additional revenue.

27. The demands for advance in every direction are very insistent and we have had to reject and postpone numerous schemes which are admittedly of great public importance. Education, Medical, Agriculture, P.W.D. to name only a few, are crying out for further funds but we have only succeeded in providing for things that we regard as absolutely necessary. If however we are so unfortunate as not to persuade this House to give us their confidence in this matter, it would be necessary to cut down services now being rendered to the public even though Government consider them to be of essential benefit. And since the frame-work of Government must be maintained if we are not to allow the administration to lapse into chaos, it follows of necessity that this retrenchment must be made primarily in those departments which minister to the more advanced needs of the community.

The House is confronted with a very urgent issue and it is necessary that that issue should be placed before it in the most plain and distinct terms. It is not possible for Government to consent to a closure of Courts of Justice, to the dismissal of police forces necessary for the protection of the people or to withdraw any of the officers required for the collection of revenue. These primary services of a civilized Government must be maintained in efficient working. I assume that there can be no dispute on this point. For we all know by observation, if not by personal experience, that nothing but the strong arm of Government can protect its citizens from the desperate adventures of wild and lawless men. It follows therefore that retrenchment must fall with a heavy hand on those services which are not essential to life, however beneficial they may be to the advance of prosperity and the higher ideals of civilization.

This House will not have failed to observe recent events in other parts of India and the bitter complaints of citizens who have suffered from the closure of schools and hospitals, the bad repairs of roads and buildings and the cessation of work of the Agricultural and Co-operative Departments. That has been the baneful effect of the policy pursued in other provinces; but Government have full confidence that the members of this House will not permit themselves to be led astray in a similar course of action so patently injurious to the welfare of their constituencies.

The first two Bills will be introduced in the course of the next few days and we hope to receive the full support of this House in passing them into law.

28. I come now to a consideration of those activities of Government which are financed from loan funds. I presented to this House a general survey of these activities last year, and I will not repeat that account in any detail. It has been a grievance with certain members of this House that, owing to the form of the presentation of the budget in previous years under which the loan policies came at the close of the discussion the important problems connected with those policies received little attention. The time allotted for the discussion of the budget demands is limited by statute to a maximum of 12 days—a longer period, I believe, than the Government of India occupy for the discussion of a budget ten times our figure. Nevertheless our experience has been that so much time has been taken up in debating details in regard to the various departments that those members of the House who are interested in the wider survey of our financial projects for the future have been debarred from giving us their advice.

The responsibility for determining the form of the presentation of the budget rests by rule upon the Finance Member. I consulted the Finance Committee, and with their approval, I propose to alter the order for the discussion of the budget and place in the forefront the portions that relate to the development of Bombay city and the irrigation schemes in Sind and the Deccan.

29. Moreover we have presented in the blue book this year a careful synopsis of our loan commitments. I would remind the House of the figures which I have given in previous years, and on which there has been no increase. In 1923 I pointed out that the total commitments approximated 60 crores. In fact so far as Bombay development is concerned, during the current year strenuous efforts have been made to curtail expenditure and to reduce commitments. The Honourable Member in charge of the General Department will explain in detail the measures he has taken.

The reclamation of the Back Bay has been in progress, and members of this House will no doubt be interested in visiting and inspecting the area which has already been reclaimed. The great wall continues to stretch its arms out into the sea, and has successfully withstood the assaults of the monsoon. When I was in England in July I heard that the wall had been battered to pieces in a storm; but on my return in August I learnt that this was one of those flights of fancy with which prophets of evil seek to depress the spirits of the public. And in fact the wall had been subjected to a severe strain, and had triumphantly resisted.

30. A great impetus will be given to the success of our Development schemes in the suburbs of Bombay by the opening of the first system of electric trains from Kurla to Victoria Terminus. This electrification will be continued shortly on to Bandra and other stations on the B. B. and C. I., and to Thana and beyond on the G. I. P. This new line of electric railway will enable large numbers of clerks and business men to establish their homes in rural surroundings at a far cheaper cost than in the Bombay City. Bombay was the pioneer in railway construction 80 years ago, and is once again the pioneer in the application of electric power to railway traction. For this great event the gratitude of the community is due both to the authorities of the G. I. P. Railway for the persistent advocacy of their schemes and their engineering skill in overcoming the many obstacles arising from the congested condition of the Bombay City, and also to the Tata Company which have provided the electric power. This railway is a signal example of the happy union of Indian financial enterprise with Western mechanical science, and is only the first step in the new developments which hold great promise of immense benefits to the health and happiness of our citizens in this area. When Poona and Bombay are within a three hours journey and electric trains speed up the ghauts to Poona on one line and to Nasik on the other, the Deccan will be linked more closely with the City of Bombay, and both will advance in further prosperity.

31. In Sind the Sukkur Barrage project has made a satisfactory start. At the headworks the land has been laid out, embankments constructed and railway lines laid, and a great deal of plant has been imported and got ready. Several of the huge excavators, which are to dig out the canals, have been set up, and some have already started work. These excavators are enormous machines which are estimated to do the work of a thousand men in a day. The engineers are busy aligning and designing the canals. The land on the alignment selected is in process of being acquired and we have every reason to be gratified with the zeal and efficiency of the establishments that are employed on this vast enterprise.

32. In the Deccan the Bhandardara Lake is now complete, and the Bhatghar Lake and subsidiary canals have made good progress. The effect of these great irrigation projects in saving from the horrors of famine many thousands of cultivators whose lands are situated in tracts of the Deccan frequently liable to a total failure of rainfall, will be appreciated by this House.

As I have mentioned before, the total burden on the provincial exchequer of these irrigation works in the Deccan and Gujarat amounts to 14 crores of rupees on which we obtain a return of less than 3 per cent. In other words, close on 50 lakhs of rupees in the form of interest are every year presented to these fortunate landowners. Since these men now secure a very high rent for their lands, and their property has been immensely increased in value, it will only be fair to the tax payer in other parts if these irrigated lands be brought under contribution to pay some additional rate to the land revenue. This House will be invited to assist Government at a later session to devise the best and fairest method of bringing these lands under contribution.

33. There are few problems of administration of greater complexity and greater urgency than the adjustment of taxation to those shoulders that are best able to bear the burden. The Government of India are making an attempt to obtain a scientific basis for the readjustment of taxation through the inquiries which are now on foot by the Taxation Enquiry Committee. That committee is visiting Bombay very shortly, and I hope it will receive much valuable information from our economic experts in this city.

This House will no doubt be chiefly interested in the view that they may take of the proper distribution of the revenue obtained from income-tax. This year again we receive no benefit from the income-tax collected in this presidency. This Government have lost no opportunity of expressing their dissent from the system that was established under what is known as the Meston Settlement; and although we have failed to secure any redress during these last four years, we do not propose to acquiesce in the anomalies of the system without continuous protests. Our protests will be put before the Taxation Enquiry Committee, and we know that we have in this matter the unanimous support of this House.

In every federal system of taxation in the world provincial governments share with the federal government the proceeds of the income tax. The province of Bombay with its highly developed industrial life contributes large sums to the income-tax—far larger than any of the great agricultural provinces of the country. Its administrative needs are necessarily on a higher scale suited to the more advanced standard of industrial life. We can but point out the grievous anomaly that no part of the revenues derived from industry should be made available to the provincial governments for expenditure on the needs of industry. We therefore welcome the arrival of the Taxation Enquiry Committee in the confident hope that they will recommend the removal of this anomaly and the redress of our grievance.

With these words, Sir, I beg to introduce the budget.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The budget is duly presented.

The Honourable the President : Questions.

SIND ALLOWANCE TO ACTING ASSISTANT DEPUTY EDUCATIONAL INSPECTORS.

* Mr. D. B. ADWANI (Karachi City) : Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that some of the primary teachers in Sind who are acting as assistant deputy educational inspectors are not allowed to draw the Sind allowance on the ground that they are drawing salary in excess of the present scale of their pay ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : Yes : It was not intended that the Sind allowance or special pay of Rs. 5 should be added to pay according to the old scales, as the initial pay of these scales for Sind was already Rs. 5 higher than that of the old scales for the Presidency proper. It follows therefore that all primary school teachers who retain their old pay under the rules of the new scheme are debarred from the Sind allowance or special pay of Rs. 5 irrespective of whether they are acting as Assistant Deputy Educational Inspectors or not.

SLAUGHTER OF CATTLE.

† Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR (Poona City) : Will Government be pleased to furnish the number of (a) bullocks or bulls ; (b) cows, and (c) calves that were slaughtered in municipal areas in this presidency during the last year for which the figures are available ?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : 47,088 bullocks, 56,847 cows and 1,876 calves were slaughtered. Besides 8,099 cattle, details of which are not available, were also slaughtered.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR : May I know during which year so many animals were slaughtered ?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : The honourable member put the question regarding last year, and that is the information that I have given him.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' PRIMARY SCHOOLS.

Mr. S. K. BOLE : Will Government be pleased to state (a) the number of villages in each division, district by district.

(b) The number of panchayats in each district.

(c) The number of primary schools conducted by such panchayats, if any.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : (a) and (b) Attention is invited to the answer given to question No. 29 put by Mr. R. G. Pradhan (Nasik District) during March 1924 session of the Council.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

† This question was asked at the meeting held in July 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

(c) The question should be put to the Honourable Minister in charge of Education.

Mr. S. K. BOLE : Sir, am I to put the question now to the Honourable the Minister for Education ?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Yes, if the Honourable Minister is prepared to answer it now.

Mr. S. K. BOLE : I have been asked by the Honourable Khan Bahadur.....

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I do not know if the Honourable the Minister for Education is prepared to answer the question now. If he is not, you will have to give him notice.

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : I am sorry I am not prepared to answer it now. I want notice.

Mr. S. K. BOLE : Sir, the Honourable the Minister in charge of local self-government could have sent the question direct to the Honourable the Minister for Education.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I do not know on what grounds the honourable member bases his suggestion. If he will look to the Rules and Standing Orders he will find that honourable members are required to ask for information from each individual Member or Minister. Therefore in framing the questions honourable members should take care that they are asking information of a particular Member of Government. As a matter of convenience questions addressed generally in the name of Government are admitted. But that does not mean that the effect of the Rules and Standing Orders is in any way over-ridden. Honourable members should address each question in such a manner as to elicit information from only one Member of Government.

Mr. H. D. SAHEBA : We had asked the Government in this very House what were the portfolios held by each Member of Government, but it was stated that the information was confidential. How are we then to address our questions to the right Member ?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : The information will be laid on the Table.

Mr. HOOSEINBHOY A. LALLJEE : May I know what is the position of members until then ?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : In theory that information has not been put before the House, but in actual practice every honourable member knows that one Minister is in charge of local self-government, another is in charge of Education and the third is in charge of Excise and Forests. For all practical purposes that information has been available to the honourable House. Theoretically the list has not been placed before the House as was done four years ago. But I find that even that formality will be satisfied now. In view of the assurance given, I hope honourable members will have no difficulty in complying with the rules and Standing Orders.

Mr. S. K. BOLE : Sir, I will cite another instance. In the case of the Labour Department one does not know.....

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: But the assurance has now been given that the information will be placed on the table.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR: (a) Yes.

(b) Quarters have been built for officers whom it is considered desirable to house near their work and for married officers, whose families are resident with them. The cost of residential quarters for higher officers completed by 31st March 1924, is about Rs. 21 lakhs.

(d) Yes.

(e) If subordinate officers entitled to free quarters are not provided with Port Trust quarters, they are granted a house allowance of 10 per cent. on their pay.

(f) No chawls have been exclusively built for workmen of the Port Trust workshops, but workmen therein employed are eligible for being housed in the chawls erected by the Port Trust for their workmen in general, and some are so housed.

(g) Yes.

(h) The resolution is being considered along with other proposals affecting the accommodation of employees.

Mr. S. K. BOLE: May I know what officers are entitled to free quarters?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: It is in the answer: 'If subordinate officers are not provided with Port Trust quarters, they are granted a house allowance of 10 per cent. on their pay'.

Mr. S. K. BOLE: My question is, what subordinate officers are entitled to free quarters, and what subordinate officers are not?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: That is not a part of the honourable member's original question. If he will give notice I will get the information for him.

Mr. S. K. BOLE: As regards this question, I may say that the clerks have been omitted. The question (d) is "whether any quarters have been built for the subordinate officers and clerks".

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The answer is given "Yes".

Mr. S. K. BOLE: Is it a fact that clerks are provided with free quarters?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: Mr. President, you have answered the question for me.

Mr. HOOSEINBHOY A. LALLJEE: May I know whether Government have drawn attention of the Port Trustees to provide quarters for their workmen?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: Not, as far as I can remember.

Mr. HOOSEINBHOY A. LALLJEE: Is it a fact that Government has drawn the attention of mill-owners and the Municipal Corporation to the necessity of building chawls for their workmen? If so, why have they not drawn the attention of the Port Trustees for chawls for their workmen?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: I am not quite certain whether Government have drawn the attention of the Corporation and of the mill-owners regarding the desirability of building chawls for workmen. I will enquire.

Mr. S. K. BOLE: As regards my question, where are the quarters for clerks located?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : I do not know just now : I will require notice of that question.

Mr. S. K. BOLE : As a matter of fact they are not in existence, as far as I know.

(d) how many of them are private or grant-in-aid institutions and where they are situated ?

(e) how many classes are attached to each of the institutions mentioned in (a), (b) and (c), and

(f) how many students receive instruction in each of such institutions ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : The accompanying statement† gives the information required. With regard to parts (b) and (c), there is no essential difference between a training college and a training school, the former term being usually applied to institutions teaching the full course and the latter to those teaching a year's course only.

Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI : How is it that in the Ahmedabad Training College for Men there were three classes before and only two now ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : Because the third year training class is taken away.

Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI : Was the number of students less in that college ? Has the attendance of students fallen off ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : No.

Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI : Then, why was the number of classes reduced ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : Government did not think it necessary to increase the number of third-year trained teachers, and therefore the third year class was stopped.

Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI : What were the reasons for taking away the class ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : Experts in the department wanted it to be abolished.

MOULVI RAFI UDDIN AHMAD : May I know the names of the experts and also the reasons given by them ?

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

† Vide Appendix 12.

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: The resolution in the matter was passed before I took charge as a Minister and if the honourable member will give notice, I shall see whether the information can be supplied.

MOULVI RAFTUDDIN AHMAD: Has the policy been decided now and has the Minister given his own consent to it?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: I think it is.

(b) The building was sold by auction in 1912 and realised Rs. 700.

(c) (i) The amount shown under (a) earns interest, the total accumulated balance on 1st August 1924 being Rs. 1,202-8-7, which is invested as under:—

(ii) The work of constructing a school building at Pasta will be taken up as soon as funds permit. The District Local Board has been requested to take in hand first the construction of those buildings for which local contributions have been received.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in July 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

Mr. HOOSEINBHOY A. LALLJEE: May I know what is the routine adopted for these grants? Whether it is in order of precedence or whether any other method is adopted?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: These matters are generally entrusted to the district local board and they act in these matters according to their convenience.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: Government have no information about any damage done on account of the late rains.

Mr. G. M. KALBHOR: I am ready to give you some information on the point.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: I shall be very grateful to the honourable member.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR: The reply is "in view of the late good rains no relief measures are necessary". Is it the information of the Honourable Member in charge, or is the information based upon the reports received from district officers?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The honourable member cannot ask that question. Government give the answer on their own authority and it is Government's answer and they are responsible for it. The Council can hold them responsible for it.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR: Is it not a fact that eastern parts of the Poona district had not sufficiently good rains?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: That is not the advice given to us by the responsible officers of Government.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

(c) Will Government be pleased to state what amounts out of the land revenue in the Nargund Petha for the year 1923-24 were remitted or suspended ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : (a) There was some scarcity in the petha in the years 1922-23 and 1923-24.

LOPPING OF ROADSIDE TREES ON HUBLI-SIRSI MAIN ROAD.

† Mr. M. D. KARKI (Kanara District): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they are aware that the roadside trees on both sides of that portion of the Hubli-Sirsi Main road which lies within the boundaries of the Dharwar district have been indiscriminately lopped?

(b) Will they be pleased to state (i) whether the work of lopping such trees is entrusted to contractors or done departmentally, (ii) whether such lopping is done with the sanction or approval of the Executive Engineer of the district, and (iii) what price has been realised by selling or otherwise disposing of such loppings?

(c) Will they be pleased to state why these roadside trees have been treated in this manner?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN:

(a) The roadside trees on the portion of the road in question are not indiscriminately lopped.

(b) (i) The work of lopping such trees is done departmentally.

(ii) The lopping is done with the approval of the Executive Engineer.

(iii) No price is realised for such loppings as the wood is worthless as a marketable commodity.

(c) It has been the established practice to lop excessive growth from trees for the reason that the road surface under them becomes full of pot-holes on account of constant raindrops from above. This keeps the road always in a muddy condition and thereby it gets cut up by traffic as the rays of the Sun are unable to penetrate and dry up the moisture on the road. Lopping is also done when branches are generally loaded within 12 feet from road surface with a view to prevent obstruction to loaded carts and other traffic.

* Kept in Secretary's office.

† This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

Mr. M. D. KARKI : I want to know whether the loppings of these road-side trees were not collected and carted away by the Public Works Department ?

(b) The Government of Bombay have not entered into any agreement with Messrs. W. W. Howard Brothers and Company.

Mr. M. D. KARKI : Was any timber entrusted to Messrs. Howard Brothers by the Government of Bombay for sale ?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI : I want notice.

KUMTA TALUKA KACHERI.

* Mr. M. D. KARKI (Kanara District) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they are aware of the inconvenience caused to the public by the unsatisfactory condition in which the ground floor of the Kumta taluka office has been kept ?

(b) If so, what are the reasons for keeping it in that condition ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : (a) Yes.

(b) The present building was constructed in 1865-66 and is very old. Every item of the building from the ground floor to the roof requires special repairs. In view of the fact that it will soon be necessary to construct a new Kacheri for which a site has already been selected, it was thought undesirable to spend money in carrying out special repairs to the present building.

Mr. M. D. KARKI : Within how many years will the new Kacheri be built ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : When funds are available and it will be absolutely necessary to build.

(b) How many probationers have been appointed to these posts since then ?

(c) How many have been confirmed as such after being appointed as probationers ?

(e) Are the orders for the direct appointment to the posts of mukhtiar-kars and resident magistrates still in force ?

(f) When was the last appointment made under these orders and what is the name of the person so appointed ?

(g) Is it a fact that there are some probationers appointed in 1916 who have not yet been confirmed ? If so, what are the reasons therefor ?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : The following replies give the information required so far as resident magistrates are concerned—

(b) 43.

(c) 24.

(d) One has been on probation for six years. The services of three were dispensed with. Three resigned. One was re-transferred as Subordinate Judge. Two were provided for in the subordinate service. Nine dropped out altogether. These latter eleven had been taken up only in temporary vacancies.

(e) Yes.

(f) Mr. Mahomed Ishaq Badruddin. In October 1918.

(g) No.

PROTECTED MONUMENTS.

* Khan Saheb A. M. MANSURI (Ahmedabad and Surat Cities) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state when an ancient monument was first declared to be protected monument in this presidency under section 3 of the Ancient Monuments' Preservation Act, 1904 ?

(b) What is the number of such protected monuments in (i) Bombay presidency, (ii) Ahmedabad and (iii) Surat ?

(c) What is the total amount spent by Government during the last ten years on their preservation ?

(d) Are Government aware that there are several protected monuments in the city of Ahmedabad which require early repairs ?

(e) Is any financial assistance given by Government to public bodies desirous of preserving or repairing a protected monument ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : (a) In the year 1909.

(b) The total number of such protected monuments in the Bombay presidency including Sind is 735 out of which 40 are in Ahmedabad and 2 in Surat.

(c) Rs. 6,25,768.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

(d) The yearly inspection reports of the Executive Engineer, Ahmedabad district, do not show that early repairs are needed to any of the protected monuments in Ahmedabad city which are maintained by Government at their expense.

(e) No.

The question does not arise in the case of monuments in private possession unless there is an agreement with Government to the effect.

Khan Saheb A. M. MANSURI: With reference to the answer to (b), are Government aware that the Sidic Bather mosque in Ahmedabad, a protected monument, has been recently repaired by raising a subscription of Rs. 7,000 otherwise it was liable to great damage?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: Government is not aware of that fact, but if the honourable member gives notice I will make further inquiry.

REMOVAL OF BOMBAY MILCH CATTLE STABLES TO TROMBAY.

* Khan Saheb A. M. MANSURI (Ahmedabad and Surat Cities):

(a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the Bombay municipality intend to remove the stables for milch cattle from Bombay to Trombay?

(b) Are Government aware of the hardships that are likely to be caused both to the owners of the milch cattle and the public by such a measure?

(c) Have Government received any memorial from the owners of milch cattle or the public on the subject?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN: (a) In 1920-21 the corporation definitely decided that, in view of the nuisance resulting from milch cattle stables in Bombay, the policy should be to allow no new stables to be erected, and to get rid of the existing stables as occasion arose. They also decided to provide land in Trombay for those cattleowners who chose to move there, and to arrange, if necessary, the transport of milk supplies thence. Arrangements to this effect are practically complete.

(b) No hardship is likely to be caused either to the public or to the cattle-owners when the dairies are removed from the city. Milk should be purer and cheaper. The cattle-owners at present pay exorbitant rents amounting in some cases to Rs. 10 per month per head for milch cattle stabling in Bombay. They will pay much less under better conditions outside at Trombay or elsewhere. They are not compelled to go to Trombay, but can remove to any place they choose outside the city.

(c) This part of the question has already been answered at the last session of the Council.

and occasional nazaranas levied on inam villages and lands in this presidency during the year 1922-23 ;

(b) the judi levied in respect of dumala villages and lands in the Southern and Central Divisions for the year 1922-23 ;

(c) fines levied as under section 135F of the Land Revenue Code in Inam villages in the Central and Southern Divisions for the year 1922-23 ;

(d) Kadim cash allowances which have lapsed to Government in whole or part and thus ceased to be paid but which were collected from the inam villages in the Poona, Satara and Belgaum districts during the period 1900 to 1923 ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : The required information is given in the accompanying statement.*

EXPANSION OF REFORMS.

Sardar G. N. MUJUMDAR (Deccan Sardars and Inamdars): Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of their memorandum to the Government of India on the subject of the Reforms in connection with the preliminary inquiry that was held under the chairmanship of the Home Member to the Government of India ?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : The attention of the honourable member is invited to the answer given to the honourable member for Nasik district in October session, 1924.

SURVEY OF CERTAIN INAM VILLAGES IN BELGAUM DISTRICT.

† Sardar G. N. MUJUMDAR (Deccan Sardars and Inamdars): Will Government be pleased to state :—

(a) whether the inam village of Kallol, taluka Chikodi, district Belgaum, has been surveyed under the Survey Settlement Act I of 1865 ;

(b) whether the inamdar had applied to Government for the introduction of the survey settlement in the village ;

(c) whether the said village is treated at present as surveyed and settled in any respects ; if so, in what respects ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : (a) No. The village was surveyed before the Act in question came into force ; but the survey settlement was validated by section 3 of Bombay Act I of 1865 and subsequently in 1872 Government extended the provisions of section XXXI of the said Act to this village.

(b) No. The survey settlement was introduced into this village in 1860-61 under extraordinary circumstances under which the inamdar's application for the survey settlement was not necessary.

(c) The village is shown in the revenue accounts as surveyed and settled and is treated accordingly.

* Vide Appendix 15-A.

† This question was asked at the meeting held in July 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

TOUR OF DEPUTY EDUCATIONAL INSPECTORS IN GUJARAT.

* Mr. W. S. MUKADAM (Panch Mahals District): Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that some deputy educational inspectors in Gujarat go on tour without their own conveyance and bedding, etc., and that the village teachers have to make arrangements for such things ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: The answer is in the negative.

OFFICERS OF THE SUKKUR BARRAGE SCHEME.

* Mr. W. S. MUKADAM (Panch Mahals District): Will Government be pleased to give the following information regarding officers engaged in the Sukkur Barrage Scheme:—

- (1) Name of the officer whose pay is Rs. 1,000 or above per month.
- (2) Monthly pay.
- (3) Nationality.
- (4) Designation.
- (5) Qualification.
- (6) Date of appointment.
- (7) On what pay he was appointed.
- (8) By whom appointed.
- (9) What pay he used to draw in the service or department in which he was last engaged.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR: The requisite information is embodied in the statement† attached.

GRANTS AT SPECIAL RATES TO GIRLS' SCHOOLS.

* MUKHI JETHANAND PRITAMDAS (Eastern Sind): Will Government be pleased to state what aided girls' schools have been receiving annual grants at special rates, and if any of them received more last year than the grants it had received in the previous year, the amount of such excess in each case ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: Girls' schools in Sind receive grants at one-half of the expenditure instead of at one-third as in the rest of the Presidency.

The Indian Girls' High School, Karachi, receives an additional grant of Rs. 3,000 towards the pay of the Head Master.

The Poona Seva Sadan is paid grants at the rate of two-thirds of the expenditure.

Neither of the latter schools received more in 1923-24 than in 1922-23.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD: With regard to the Poona Seva Sadan, may I know why this special rate of two-thirds grant is given ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: If the honourable member will give me notice, I shall find out.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

† Vide Appendix 16.

GOVERNMENT HIGH SCHOOLS IN SIND.

* MUKHI JETHANAND PRITAMDAS (Eastern Sind): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that in Sind there are still two districts without a Government high school, and that in the whole of the Presidency there are only two districts without such institutions, namely, those just referred to?

(b) When was the need of a high school for the district of Larkana first recognised by Government and when was the school actually started?

(c) Which of such schools have been provided with a Government building, and when?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the building of the Government high school at Hyderabad was condemned by the Civil Surgeon, Hyderabad, as far back as 1909, as insanitary and quite unsuitable for the purpose?

(e) If so, why has not a better building been provided since?

(f) Are Government aware that the Hyderabad municipality have sanctioned the grant of a piece of land to the Educational Department for the purpose of an extension of the school?

(g) If so, when do Government propose to build a suitable building thereon?

(h) What has been the total expenditure on building for Government secondary schools during the last 15 years in the whole presidency including Sind, and how much of it has been incurred in Sind?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: (a) The answer to the first portion is in the affirmative and the answer to the latter portion is in the negative.

(b) January 1913 and August 1919 respectively.

(c) The accompanying statement† gives the information required.

(d) The answer is in the affirmative.

(e) Because the question of the additional land required for the high school was not settled until April 1924.

(f) Yes.

(g) When funds permit; the plans and estimates for the building are under consideration.

(h) Rs. 11,94,598 and Rs. 59,699 respectively. Plans and estimate the latter amounting to Rs. 2,87,474 for a new building for the Larkana high school have been sanctioned, and the work is in progress.

SPECIAL GRANT TO SIND.

‡ MUKHI JETHANAND PRITAMDAS (Eastern Sind): Will Government be pleased to state whether they are aware that girls' schools in Sind have to pay much higher salaries to graduate and undergraduate women teachers than those in the presidency?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: Yes.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in July 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

† Vide Appendix 17.

‡ This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

BRIDGE OVER KOLUMB CREEK.

* Mr. B. R. NANAL (Ratnagiri District): Will Government be pleased to state whether they made any inquiries as to whether it is necessary to build a bridge over the Kolumb creek on the northern side of Malwan? If so, do they intend to take any action?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN: The Kolumb creek is within the jurisdiction of the district local board, Ratnagiri. At the request of the board the Executive Engineer, Ratnagiri district, prepared plans and estimates for the bridge over the creek and forwarded them to the president of the board in 1918 but nothing further has been heard on the subject up to date. It is for the board to take the necessary action in the matter.

FEES FOR OPERATIONS.

* Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR on behalf of Mr. K. F. NARIMAN (Bombay City, South): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is true that in the memorandum of the Surgeon General No. D.—2734 dated 5th July 1921 it is stated that the amounts credited to Government for operations performed in all the civil hospitals of the presidency were Rs. 2,375 in 1918-19; Rs. 516 in 1919-20, and Rs. 430 in 1920-21?

(b) What were the number of operations performed during each of these three years in all the civil hospitals of the presidency?

(c) If the reply to (a) be in the affirmative, what were the reasons for such disproportion in the amounts collected during these three years as operation fees?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: (a) This has already been replied to.

(b) It is not possible to state separate figures for each hospital as these are not given in the combined annual reports of these institutions, and the individual reports are destroyed after one year.

(c) The figures asked for in (b) not being available, it is impossible to institute a comparison, but the amount collected is certainly small. There are many hospitals, however, where operation fees are hardly ever charged, nearly all the patients being poor, and probably some in which operation fees have not hitherto been charged at all.

I. T. F. DISTRICT BRANCH COMMITTEES.

* Mr. R. G. PRADHAN (Nasik District): Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement giving the names of the members of every District Branch Committee of the Indian Territorial Force and mentioning the steps taken by each branch to promote and popularise recruitment to the Force?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: The necessary statement† is laid on the table.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

† Vide Appendix 20.

REGISTERED VILLAGE LIBRARIES.

* Mr. R. G. PRADHAN (Nasik District): Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing—

- (a) the number of registered village libraries in every district ;
- (b) how many of them are aided ; and
- (c) the total amount of aid given to such libraries ;
- (d) Will they be further pleased to state whether they have taken or intend to take any steps to establish new libraries or extend such libraries, and if so, to specify such steps ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : (a) A list † showing the number of village libraries in each district is laid on the table.

(b) and (c) None of the libraries is aided.

(d) This part has already been answered.

DEVELOPMENT PLOTS IN BOMBAY.

* Mr. PUNJABHAI THAKERSI (Bombay City, North): Will Government be pleased to state—

- (1) How many plots are being advertised for sale in the Bombay city by the Development Department ?
- (2) For how long are they being so advertised ?
- (3) What are the highest offers obtained for each ?
- (4) At what prices do Government intend to sell them ?
- (5) What is the actual cost incurred on each ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : (1) Four.

(2) From six months to two years.

(3) and (4) Government are not prepared to furnish the information, as it would not be in the public interest to do so.

(5) The cost including interest, establishment, etc., charges incurred on each of the four schemes up to the 31st October 1924, is as shown below :—

Rs.

1,42,637 on Bombay Scheme No. 6—Clare Road.

10,12,839 on Bombay Scheme No. 7—Hornby Road.

2,22,131 on Bombay Scheme No. 8—Murzban Road.

7,89,156 on Bombay Scheme No. 9—Dadar Distillery.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI : Does the answer to (2) mean that the advertisement was continued for six months to two years ? What was the necessity to advertise for such a long time ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : The plots have been available for sale during the period mentioned in the answer.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI : Why has the advertisement been continued for such a long time ? That is the question.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

† Vide Appendix 21.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: They have not been advertised as a regular advertisement, but a board has been put up on the site stating that the plots are available for sale.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI: Has there been no one to take up all these plots all the time?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: That is so.

Mr. G. I. PATEL: In regard to (3) and (4), may I know whether Government have fixed any limits, the highest and lowest?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: A limit has been fixed.

Mr. G. I. PATEL: May we know what offers were received by Government in the neighbourhood of the fixed limit?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: I do not think it is in the interests of Government to divulge what offers were received by Government.

Mr. G. I. PATEL: What were the percentages to the limits fixed?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: I do not think that it is quite in the interests of the Development Department to divulge that. That is my personal opinion.

Mr. G. I. PATEL: Has the Honourable Member got the information about varying percentage here?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: At present I haven't the information before me; even if I did want to give it, I could not do so at present.

Mr. G. I. PATEL: What is the percentage ratio to the limits fixed?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: What is the use of pursuing the question in different forms?

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR: Were any offers made for any of these plots?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: One offer was received. One plot has already been sold. I think I can mention that plot. It is at Dadar, at Rs. 50 a square yard.

LOCAL FUND CESS ON WATER RATE.

Mr. H. D. SAHEBA (Ahmedabad District): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they have passed any orders regarding the levy of a local fund cess on the water rate levied under the provisions of the Bombay Irrigation Act of 1879?

(b) If so, whether any of the local boards had applied to them for orders regarding such a levy? If so, which?

(c) Whether they had consulted all the district local boards before ordering the levy on water rate?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN: (a) Yes. Please see Government Notification no. 4453-B, dated the 19th August 1924.

(b) and (c). No. The cess was levied under the powers vested in Government by section 95 of the Bombay Local Boards Act, 1923.

APPOINTMENT OF DEPUTY EDUCATIONAL INSPECTORS.

* Mr. H. D. SAHEBA (Ahmedabad District) : Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) Whether there is any rule to the effect that those who have previous experience of the inspecting branch gained by working as assistant deputies should alone be appointed as deputy educational inspectors ?

(b) If so, whether this rule has been departed from : and if so, in how many cases during the last three years ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state their reasons for such departure in each case ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : (a) No. The posts of Deputy Educational Inspectors are generally filled up by selection from senior and capable Assistant Deputy Educational Inspectors.

(b) and (c) In one case an officer from the collegiate branch was appointed as a Deputy Educational Inspector, mainly because he was a non-Brahmin. His work is satisfactory.

Mr. W. S. MUKADAM : May I know the name of this gentleman ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : Mr. Tavde.

Mr. W. S. MUKADAM : Was he appointed after seeing that his work was satisfactory or in anticipation that his work would be satisfactory ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : He had done good work in his college and it was expected that he would do good work as inspector, and the expectations were highly fulfilled.

Mr. W. S. MUKADAM : Are we to understand from this that a college career of a man is to be considered sufficient for raising him to the post of a deputy educational inspector ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : Yes, sometimes it is.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR : Are Government, in these matters, guided by a definite policy or principle, and if so, will the Honourable Minister place on the Council table any papers or statement relating to the same ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : The general policy of the Government is to see to the efficiency of the departments of Government, and beyond that I do not think it is necessary for me to say anything.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR : The Honourable Minister says in his reply that an officer was appointed as a deputy educational inspector "mainly because he was a non-Brahmin" and I am asking this question whether Government have been guided in this by any policy, whether they have laid down any policy, and if so, will the Honourable Minister do the needful?

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: I think Government's policy in this respect has been published in a press note lately.

Mr. H. D. SAHEBA: Is that for existing servants or new recruits? I think it is for new recruits. If not, it does not do any justice to existing people. And since when has the Director of Public Instruction acquired the power of gauging the efficiency of "dark horses"?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: He is supposed to know who might prove efficient.

Mr. W. S. MUKADAM: In this particular case, was the appointment made on the advice of the Director of Public Instruction or did he get the information or advice from headquarters?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: The advice was of the Director himself.

Mr. W. S. MUKADAM: Will Government be pleased to put on the Council table the correspondence regarding the matter?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: I do not think that Government would be prepared to place the correspondence on the table.

Mr. W. S. MUKADAM: Is it because it is confidential?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: All such correspondence is confidential.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR: Will the Honourable Minister state briefly the policy of Government in this behalf?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: I think the press note which was recently issued gives sufficient details about the policy.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR: May I know the date of the press note?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: I shall find it out.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN: Does not the press note referred to relate to clerks? Does it refer to the appointments of officers also?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The Honourable Minister has stated that he will give the date of the press note, and honourable members will then be able to see what the press note is.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN: I have seen the press note. It refers to clerks and other subordinates. Here the question relates to the appointment of an officer.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Then the question is relevant.

The Honourable Minister does not seem disposed to reply. Let us get to the next question.

TRAINING COLLEGES FOR MALES.

* Mr. H. D. SAHEBA (Ahmedabad District): Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) How many training colleges for males are there in the presidency? Which of these are in charge of B.E.S. men and which in charge of S.E.S. men?

(b) How many scholars are there in the first, second and third year classes in each of these colleges?

(c) Did Government consult the local boards and municipalities when they decided to close the third year class in the Premchand Roychand Training College?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: (a) Five. The training colleges at Poona, Dhulia and Hyderabad are in charge of B.E.S. officers, while those at Ahmedabad and Dharwar are in charge of S.E.S. officers.

(b) The accompanying statement† gives the required information.

(c) No.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR: What do the letters 'B.E.S.' and 'S.E.S.' mean?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: Bombay Educational Service and Subordinate Educational Service.

Mr. H. D. SAHEBA: Why are the training colleges at Ahmedabad and Dharwar put in charge of Subordinate Educational Service Officers and those at Poona, Dhulia and Hyderabad in charge of Bombay Educational Service Officers? Why is that distinction made?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: For the convenience of the department.

Mr. H. D. SAHEBA: Then, will Government see the desirability of having the Subordinate Educational Service Officers in the other colleges also, in view of the financial stringency?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: I am sorry I have not understood the question.

Mr. H. D. SAHEBA: In view of the cheapness of the Subordinate Educational Service Officers, will Government look to it that the other colleges also are in charge of these officers?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: That is a suggestion for action.

POLICE OUTPOST AT NIHADI.

* Mr. G. B. PRADHAN on behalf of Mr. SHANKARRAO JAYARAMRAO ZUNZARRAO (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the police outpost at Nihadi in the Murbad taluka of the Thana district was abolished about a year ago?

(b) If so, has the Government building used for this outpost been disposed of or demolished?

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

† Vide Appendix 22.

(c) Will Government be pleased to state the reasons that led to the abolition of this outpost ?

(d) Is it a fact that the Umbardara, Sadaldara, Gayadara and Bhandardara passes of the western ghats, and the frontiers of Ahmednagar and Poona districts are within three to eight miles from this village and that the Malsirghat is about 14 miles from this village ?

(e) Is it a fact that owing to the abolition of the outpost of Nihadi the nearest existing police outpost at either Shirosi or Vaishakhara is more than 15 miles distant from these passes and frontiers ?

(f) Is it a fact that the areas and hilly forest tracts round about Nihadi and on the frontiers to the north, south and east of this village are inhabited mostly by Kolis, Thakurs and similar people ?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : (a) It was abolished in October 1922.

(b) It has been handed over to the Revenue Department.

(c) It was abolished on account of retrenchment in the Police Department.

(d) It is a fact.

(e) It is not a fact. The nearest existing outposts are at Shirosi and Vaishakhara and are each about 8 miles from Nihadi. The distance of Shirosi to Umbardara is 10 miles, to Sadaldara 12 miles, to Gayadara 12 miles and to Bhandardara 15 miles. Vaishakhara is 6 miles from the boundary of the Poona district and 19 miles from that of the Ahmednagar district.

(f) It is a fact.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN : Do Government intend to restore the outpost at Nihadi, in view of the hardship caused to the inhabitants ?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : Is the honourable member suggesting that it should be restored. (Mr. G. B. PRADHAN intimated assent). Then I am afraid that question is a suggestion for action which I am not allowed to answer.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN : I ask the intentions of Government.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : I should like to have notice of that question.

RAILWAY ACCIDENTS TO WORKMEN EMPLOYED ON G. I. P. RAILWAY EXTENSION WORKS.

* Dr. K. E. DADACHANJI on behalf of Mr. A. N. SURVE (Bombay City, North) : Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) The number of workmen employed on the G. I. P. Railway extension work between Bombay and Kalyan, who have been killed or injured by passing trains during the last two years ?

(b) What precautions are taken to warn the workmen of approaching trains ?

(c) Are the chargemen (mukadams) held responsible for accidents to workmen under their charge ?

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

(d) In how many cases has compensation been awarded to sufferers or their relatives ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : (a) Killed 2. Injured 14.

(b) Flagmen are always posted to protect workmen.

(c) Mukadams are generally held responsible for accidents, but if a workman is injured due to want of caution on his part, the mukadam is not held responsible.

(d) Nil. Most of these were contractor's men.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR : Was any compensation awarded to the relatives of the persons killed ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : No.

Mr. G. I. PATEL : Does not the Workmen's Compensation Act apply to these cases ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : I do not think so.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Order, order. The following is the result of the scrutiny of the votes received for the election of the members of the Public Accounts Committee :

Mr. Lalji Naranji.

Mr. A. F. I. K. Pathan.

Moulvi Rafiuddin Ahmad.

Mr. J. C. Swaminarayan.

Mr. H. B. Shivdasani.

Mr. N. E. Navle.

Mr. Hoosenally M. Rahimtoola.

Mr. S. N. Angadi.

I declare these gentlemen duly elected members of the Public Accounts Committee.

I do not think it is necessary, but it would regularise the proceedings if I repeated the announcement which His Excellency made that, at the current session of the Council, two days have been allotted by His Excellency for non-official business. The actual days will be determined according to the arrangement which Government may make for their own business.

There is another matter which I should like to ask the Council about. An application has been received requesting that the Council may be photographed. I should like to know what the wishes of the House are in the matter.

Some Honourable MEMBERS : No.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I hope honourable members will think about it and let me know.

Now, we proceed with the general discussion of the budget. In regard to this I have the power to fix a time limit on speeches. On the last occasion, I fixed 20 minutes for each speech, and I propose to fix the same time limit now. In view, however, of the fact that this discussion is limited to only three days, I hope honourable members will be as brief as possible, and will not consider it a matter of honour to take the whole of the 20 minutes.

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE: Sir, may I take this opportunity of mentioning that when we come to the demands for grants, Government propose to take them in the reverse order to that in which they are printed in the Blue Book, pages 22 to 23. The intention is that we should begin by taking the loan account first. We will then take the whole of the demands in the reverse order. I mention that for the convenience of honourable members who may wish to prepare their motions. That is the arrangement arrived at after consultation with the Finance Committee.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI (Karachi City): We have not been able to follow what the Honourable the Finance Member stated.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The Honourable the Finance Member has the power of regulating the manner in which the demands for grants should be considered by the House, and he informs honourable members that, on the present occasion, instead of taking the departments in the order in which they appear on pages 22 and 23 of the Blue Book, he will take them in the reverse order; that is, the last item will be the first to be taken up, and the first item will be the last.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR (Bombay University): Sir, before the House proceeds to business I wish to make a suggestion to Government, which I am asked to make by a large number of honourable members of this House. According to the agenda of business which was circulated to honourable members on the 22nd January 1925, the order of business is as follows: General discussion will take place on Monday the 23rd, Tuesday the 24th and Wednesday the 25th of February; then the 26th and 27th of February will be taken up for Government Bills and supplementary estimates. Then for 12 days detailed demands will follow; and then again two days, the 16th and 17th of March, are set aside for Government bills and supplementary grants. It is suggested for the consideration of the Government that these two days, the 16th and 17th of March, which are allotted for the same kind of business as on the 26th and 27th of February, may be put together and that the detailed demands for grants may follow after all this business is over. This will suit the convenience of honourable members because it will give them longer time to consider budget items.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: Mr President, two days, the 26th and 27th of February, are reserved for Government bills, not business, and supplementary estimates, in order to give the Honourable the Finance Member an opportunity of introducing his Court-fees and Stamp Bills immediately after the general discussion. It is hoped that these bills will be read the first time on the 26th and 27th of February and then referred to the select committee. In order to give an interval to the select committee to look through those bills, the 16th and 17th of March are at present further set aside for second reading of Government bills and supplementary estimates. If it is desired to have these two further days set apart earlier, it would suit the Honourable the Finance Member to have these two days on the 9th and 10th of March instead of on the 16th and 17th of March. I wish to put forward that suggestion that the second reading of bills and supplementary estimates may be taken up on the 9th and 10th of March instead of on the 16th and 17th.

MOULVI RAFI UDDIN AHMAD: Under the circumstances, a large number of honourable members think that the present arrangement as printed on the agenda is suitable.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I should like to know what the leader of the Swaraj party has got to say, because he raised the question.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR: I appreciate the difficulty of the Government which the Honourable the Leader of the House has explained. In that case I think it is better to leave the agenda as it is, because we do not want the discussion on the demands for grants to be interrupted.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: I suggest there is another point as to that. Sunday the 8th is a holiday, which means an interruption, and Wednesday the 11th is a holiday which means another interruption. There would be less interruption if we allot the intermediate 9th and 10th for the bills, and then get straight along with the remaining financial discussion. Therefore, I suggest the 9th and the 10th for the bills.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR: I have listened carefully to the Honourable the Leader of the House. Notwithstanding what he has stated, I am of opinion that the arrangement should remain as it is.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I think it would be better if honourable members think over it and see what will suit them best. The suggestion amounts to this: the demands for grants should be taken for the first 6 days and there is an interval of 4 days, two of which will be holidays and the remaining two will be earmarked for the consideration of the second reading of bills; and then to have 6 more days for the discussion of grants. I should like honourable members to consult together and let me know to-morrow what will suit them best.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: If honourable members of the various parties in the House let me know what will suit their convenience we will consider what we can do in the matter to suit them.

Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI (Kaira District): Sir, I congratulate the Honourable the Finance Member on his recovery and welcome him back in our midst, but I cannot congratulate him on his budget. The budget is a sad reading from beginning to end; and compared with 1923-24, it presents very sad features, regarding the future prosperity of the Presidency. In 1923-24 our revenue was 14 crores and 52 lakhs, and we had a surplus of 29 lakhs. In the year 1925-26 our revenue is 16 crores and 16 lakhs, and still there is a deficit of 41 lakhs. Though the revenue has increased over a crore, the expenditure of Government has overgrown this revenue. Now it is the business of this House to see whether this one crore of rupees and over, allotted for expenditure in the coming year, is for the general benefit of the Presidency or not. The Honourable the Finance Member would have us believe that it is for the general benefit, that they are all nation-building departments; but I would differ from him and state that nation-building on plans suggested by him is rather too costly. What is the use of increasing the police strength at any cost? What is the use of keeping that police if it is to be kept at the expense of our well-being? When the people are starving and nothing to protect, what is the use of keeping law and order through the police? I would put it that such sort of progress is too costly. I would now point out that as compared with 1921-22, when I entered this Council, expenditure on the real nation-building departments was 48 lakhs more than what it is in this budget, even though we now get more revenue. I am talking of only ordinary revenue and not of borrowed funds. If the Honourable the Finance Member takes the year 1921-22 as a basis he will find that in fact under Education, Medical, Public Health, Agriculture, Industries and Public Works, expenditure from ordinary revenues was 48 lakhs more than what it is in the year for which the budget is presented. I drew his attention in the Finance Committee to this aspect of the case, but in framing the budget he does not appear to have accepted my suggestion and increased the expenditure on these departments in the same proportion as the revenues have increased.

Then, Sir, I again make the same complaint as I did last year, namely, that in framing the budget Government Members are too hopeful and cheerful. Land Revenue has been put down as 5,60 lakhs. May I draw their attention to the fact that within the last ten years it was only once that they realised under Land Revenue a sum as big as 5,58 lakhs? That was in the year 1922-23. Then, how is it in this year, when the cold wave has spoiled, according to the Honourable the Finance Member himself, a large part of our crops, when the deficient rains of last year have affected the outturn of rabi crops in Gujarat and other parts of the Presidency, and also when there is scarcity of rainfall in Gujarat, how is it, looking to all these considerations, the Honourable the Finance Member is going to realise 5,60 lakhs, unless it be at the spear point? I should therefore think that only 5,00 lakhs would be realised. And the same mistake is repeated more or less by all Members of Government, except, I believe, the Forest Minister. If we add all these over-estimates of revenue to the 41 lakhs of deficit, the actual deficit would be over a crore of rupees for the year. Now, when we are dealing with a year when the probable deficit would be over a crore of rupees, I should think it is not the time to consider the recommendations of the Lee Commission which puts up our expenditure, I think, by 10 lakhs. I think that 10 lakhs is not after all a large amount, but

[Rao Saheb D. P. Desai]

I should like to know whether the persons for whom the Lee Commission has made its recommendations really deserve it. Sir, if you look to the past budgets, you will find that all the superior establishments have received more than one revision; some one, some two, and some three. And if you will again examine the exchange situation at present you will find that a 25 per cent. increase of pay automatically goes to them. For every rupee they get 1s. 6d. at home. Therefore, if we take these percentages of increase since 1919 and the increase by the exchange condition, we will find that they have got more than 40 per cent. increase in their salaries. In these circumstances, Sir, I strongly feel that when our finances are not in a fair condition Government should not have included these increases recommended by the Lee Commission. At least they should have consideration for other matters.

After saying generally that the expenditure budgetted for actually far exceeds the probable income, I should like just to suggest one or two points for the consideration of my honourable friend opposite, I mean the Honourable Member for Irrigation. The Development Department that he so fortunately controls is, according to my humble view, after four years of expenditure, giving us nothing. You will see, Sir, that the total revenues have come to about 47.88. Out of this 47 lakhs, 20 lakhs are paid by the agriculturists in the form of the cotton cess. Therefore, the real revenue comes to about 27 lakhs in all, from the sale of land, rent of tenements, etc. It is therefore high time, Sir, to see whether the Development Department or at least that side of its activity which relates to the building should be carried out or not. I mean the suburban schemes and the building of chawls and tenements, the receipts from which are falling. Last year we got a certain amount: now we are getting less than that. That is why I say that we should consider now whether we should go on with the Development Department or not. In fact after strenuous advertisements in newspapers and even by enlisting the services of literary men to write booklets on the Development Department, and even by granting loans to people, people do not come forward either to buy plots or to erect buildings. Then, what is the use of going on with this sort of activity and burdening the Presidency?

In irrigation also, Sir, I am rather pessimistic about the present policy. Specially as regards the Sukkur Barrage, if the expenditure goes on at this rate, I think that the barrage instead of being a boon to the people of Sind will be a curse to them. Of course, if due economy is observed, and anticipations of Government prove true, then I think that the time might come after 30 or 40 years when we may get 8 per cent. of the capital expenditure as revenue. But it is hard on the ordinary agriculturists of those parts of Sind where there is already an assured supply of water to ask them to pay about 31 or 41 per cent. more of revenue simply for an assured supply of water which they already get by inundation, and I am making this proposal to reduce the expenditure on Sukkur Barrage as much as you can only in order that agriculturists may be saved from this sort of an increase of assessment. What I urge is that the total expenditure on barrage that is put down at 18.35 crores may be reduced to about 12 crores so that the agriculturists of Sind may not have to pay a very large amount to such an extent as they will be compelled to pay under the Barrage Scheme.

Again, Sir, the prices to be realised for lands is a matter for consideration. Unless the value that is put down in the estimates is realized, I do not think the Sukkur Barrage is going to pay you at all, and for that reason alone, if for nothing else, it is but fair to reduce our expenditure as much as we can.

One thing more, Sir, and that is of a general nature, and that is that a complaint is made by my honourable friends the Ministers and Members of Government opposite that this House is not supporting them; some of the honourable members opposite are making that complaint. I may here tell them, Sir, that this House would support them (hear, hear) but at the same time the House expects them to be independent of their subordinates; and the experience of this House is, and the controversy between Sir Maurice Hayward and Sir Chimanlal has conclusively brought to our notice, that their subordinates are their superiors. They have to act according to the wish of their subordinates, they have no independent wish of their own. Under these circumstances, how will they be guided by us? They are under the rules compelled to be guided by their subordinates and, therefore, it is useless for this side of the House to guide them in any matter because their advisers and their philosophers are some one else; and that has been the feeling on this side and, therefore, so long as those rules continue, the Legislative Council cannot give satisfactory support.

An Honourable MEMBER: What rules?

Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI: They have got some rules under which when there is a difference of opinion between Ministers or Members of Government and their Secretaries, His Excellency has to decide the matter. That is one of the rules. In that case, Sir, where is this House? If His Excellency is called upon to decide between a Minister and a Secretary then what is the use for this House here?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: Sir, I ask whether the honourable member is in order in bringing in the name of His Excellency.

Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI: Sir, I would not go any further. But I have said what I have said. One reason for such an arrangement is, and the experience of this House is, that the position of their own men, the Ministers, who take the whole House or the majority of the House with them is that they have to submit to a Secretary who is subordinate to them. Not only they are submitting themselves to him, but in asking us to support them, they ask us also to bow to their subordinates. We may be loyal to them.

Mr. S. K. BOLE: I rise to a point of order. The honourable member is directly addressing the Ministers.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Quite a technical point. The honourable member will please address the Chair.

Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI: We are in fact loyal to the members of Government and Ministers. But, in order to oblige us to be loyal to the views they express, we ought to know that they are their own views and not those of their subordinate officers, and that is where the rub comes in.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR: What is the remedy?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: I would like to ask, to what rules does the honourable member refer when he says that there is a rule saying that the Governor decides the matter when there is a difference of opinion between a Secretary and a Minister?

Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI: I think mention of that rule was made in the controversy between the Honourable Sir Maurice Hayward and Sir Chimanlal Setalvad.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: I suggest the honourable member should read the controversy with greater care.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI: Sir, is a personal reference to His Excellency prohibited?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: You cannot criticise His Excellency's action, but personally I do not think there is any objection to a reference to the name of His Excellency in the debate. But no criticism direct or indirect can be allowed so far as His Excellency is concerned as the representative of the Sovereign. As regards the other point of order I may disabuse the mind of Rao Saheb D. P. Desai and others by the mention of one simple fact that the Ministers are responsible to the House, and if their policy or attitude is unacceptable to honourable members, they have got the remedy in their own hands. What is the use of discussing matters in that spirit? The Ministers are taking full responsibility for their policy, and they are responsible to you and you can deal with them as you like.

Mr. LALJI NARANJI (Indian Merchants' Chamber): Sir, the first impression that was made on my mind on hearing the speech of the Honourable the Finance Member in presenting the budget is in short, "Give us the money that we want according to our own ideas and help us in taxing this Presidency as we like, and trust us and we will do everything for the nation building departments and for all the needs of the Presidency." It is a very serious question before the House and a very serious responsibility in considering the budget of the present year. I call it serious because it is not a deficit of 50 lakhs or 42 lakhs for this year, but if you will carefully read the speeches that are made in presenting the budget, it is an invitation for the future also that in future also money will be required, and you will have to go on taxing the Presidency, and you will have to accept the policy that is laid down by the Finance Member of this Government. I will refer to that portion of the speech where it is said that it is an undoubted fact, however, that as years go on notwithstanding every attempt towards the curtailment of expenditure the demands will go on increasing. Here the deficit is not owing to any want of curtailment of expenditure, but the deficit is, as pointed out by his predecessors, owing to the increased expenditure and also owing to very little less decrease in the revenues.

Another thing that I would like to point out is, Sir, that if you will look at page 17 of the White Book, you will see the figures which will show conclusively the point that was brought out by Rao Saheb Desai that out of a total expenditure of Rs. 16,67,10,000, for reserved departments alone Rs. 10,88,05,000 are provided, out of which though Rs. 6,18,09,000 are voted and Rs. 4,96,96,000 are non-voted; and for the transferred departments, the total expenditure is Rs. 5,79,05,000 out of which non-voted are Rs. 63,72,000. Thus the total voted will be Rs. 11,33,42,000; but from that, the reserved will be Rs. 10,88,05,000. It might be said that the reserved also is amenable to vote. But certainly these items can be certified and Government can go on spending that money for those departments (reserved). So really speaking, the only item that is left to this House in practice, though not in theory, Rs. 5,15,33,000 and Rs. 65,72,000 is not votable out of transferred. Now, Sir,.....

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE: I cannot follow the honourable member at all. Which figures is he quoting?

Mr. LALJI NARANJI: On page 17 of the White Book. The total expenditure shown there is Rs. 16,67,10,000 out of which, total of the reserved voted and non-voted comes to Rs. 5,31,85,000 and the total of transferred comes to Rs. 5,79,05,000. The voted items, as I said, come to Rs. 11,33,42,000 and non-voted come to Rs. 5,33,68,000 and I point out again that for reserved amount, that is, for Rs. 10,88,05,000 Government have got power to certify it. So really speaking, this House has no power over it. But they have power over only Rs. 5,15,33,000 out of the transferred, which is the only item that is really voted, and I do not think any member of the House can refuse to spend such money out of this total of Rs. 16,67,10,000.

Now, Sir, the question before the House is where to find the money and how to find it for the deficit shown by the Honourable the Finance Member. Usually, in every country when the budget is presented, people always consider about the increase or decrease of the wealth of that country, but as we are a subordinate portion of India which is another subordinate portion of the Government of Great Britain, certainly we are prohibited from going into that broad question here, namely, the question whether the wealth of this Presidency has increased or decreased. That is the most important question. Whether the agricultural wealth or industrial wealth is a different question, but the simple question will be whether the wealth of this Presidency has increased.

Now, Sir, I read only a few days ago in the last mail of 17th January, about the budget that was presented in Ireland after it became a Free State and the criticism there. The points there are similar to the points that are raised before us to-day. I will only refer to one paragraph that has appeared in "The Statist" which shows clearly what Ireland feels and what Ireland has found after they became a Free State, and their experience is applicable to us. It is no use our complaining to the world that we are overtaxed. But what are the reasons? In my opinion our experience is also similar to their experience. In the "Statist" of the 17th January, at page 85, I see that severe attacks were made on the financial position and the Free State critics emphasize the heaviness of the burden of taxation, the economic rehabilitation of the Continent, and so on. This is what appears in that journal:

"The past week was notable for severe attacks by Messrs. Dillon and O'Donnell on the financial position of the Free State. Both critics emphasised the heaviness of the burden of taxation, a point on which few will disagree with them. What they have failed to realise, however, is the inevitable costliness of taking over en bloc an organisation adapted to the spending capacity of Great Britain, and the difficulties experienced by a newly-created State in adapting its expenditure to its resources.

Mr. O'Donnell refers to a taxation figure of £ 10½ million in 1914 and one of £ 29 million in 1920, but the Free State did not come into existence until 1922 and the present Government cannot therefore be held wholly responsible for the allegation that the cause of the swollen Budgets and crushing taxation was the "multiplication of establishments and officials; the needless pensioning of men who were ready to serve the country if allowed; and the salaries wholly out of proportion to earnings in professional business careers in the Free State". Incidentally, it may be remarked that many officials took advantage of the Treaty to retire on pension."

I will explain to you, Sir, the main substance of this. What has been the experience of Ireland? That is the same experience as we have, though it might be said by some that we have got more freedom by the reforms. But have we got more freedom? It is no use mere saying that there has been advantage to one interest or another interest, to one community or another community. But, Sir, I attach the greatest importance to the point whether we do not find similar difficulties here to what are found in Ireland. Ireland is a similar country like ours. Two-thirds of the population there represent agriculture and one-third of the population of Ireland represents either labour or industries. So there is a great similarity between us and them, and we find, if we have got a critic's eye, that there are too many appointments, whether it be reserved or transferred, voted or non-voted. If there be any honest intention on the part of England to help us, I do not think there is any other solution but that of the economic problem. If the economic problem of this country is not improved or solved by their policy, certainly there is no hope of any prosperous budget, and these budgets will go on and proposals will come to you for taxation in one form or another. We find here that there is a deficit. We find also that there is a prosperous budget in the Central Government. We are not concerned with that. Why is there prosperity there and why is there deficit here? The deficit is caused because this country is not creating any wealth that the country ought to create. The country is mainly agricultural. The Honourable the Finance Member has pointed out in his speech that there are no resources, in the increase of land revenue and that there are prospects of decrease in the revenue of excise and so he only goes to a third item of stamps and is taxing that resource. But he does not point out here that this taxation is justified. I do not find anything in his speech to show that this taxation is justified by the prosperity of this presidency. You are not going to tax anyhow for simply whom that you want money. Again you bring the argument that you want money for the nation-building departments. Out of the increase in expenditure of 67 lakhs they say that about 35 lakhs will go for all these nation-building departments. As my predecessor has pointed out, for the nation-building departments I believe, Sir, that the issue now before this country and also before this presidency who expect to hear a report on March 9th (Reforms Enquiry Report) is a very simple one, whether dyarchy should end and whether the whole Government should be elected. The executive Government may be executive, you can give all the privileges to them, but these privileges can only be given when you can control them fully and not when, as at present, your control over them is very small, next to nothing. That is a very important point and this House will have to say in unmistakable terms, firmly, that this Presidency believes not in this dyarchy and that this dyarchy must end sooner or later, sooner in the interests of this presidency, and if Great Britain is honest, she must administer the country in such a way as to make economy in the administration all round and to solve the economic problems. She must see that India makes economic gains which are justifiable to India. What I propose is that legitimate wealth of this country must remain in this country. It is no use fighting about a few items here and a few items there, and so long as you cannot control the expenditure of money, all this is a farce. We are made only instruments in voting money to the Government over which we have no voice. That is the issue before the country, and we must make that point very clear to the Government and to those people who are going to guide our future.

Now, I wish to put forward another point, and that is in connection with the next budget that will be presented in England. Honourable members of this House must probably have read that they are thinking of reducing one shilling in the income tax. In order to convey a proper idea of what the reduction of a shilling in income tax means, I should like to give some figures. I think it was stated on the 17th of January, that the reduction of a penny would amount to a total reduction of 4·9 millions £, that is, 40 lakhs £; and a reduction of one shilling in income tax will bring the total reduction to 58·8 millions £, that is 5,80 lakhs £, which amounts to the total revenues of our country. Just imagine a small country like England, by her industry and by her domineering over other countries—whether to those countries' interests or not, I will not say—being in a position to forego a revenue of 58 millions £, only in one item of income tax! Leave aside the other items, but in regard to one item alone England proposes to reduce the taxation by such a huge sum. Compared to that, our finances are a mere trifle. In spite of our having such a big population as 30 crores, toiling in this country and owning land, their wealth is not theirs.

[Mr. Lalji Naranji]

Another point is that this buget has suggested new taxation. I think honourable members of this House are well aware that the decided opinion of the country, through the Legislative Assembly, was that the Taxation Committee should not be appointed first, but that there should be appointed an Economic Enquiry Committee first. Government have, however, evaded that issue. So long as an Economic Enquiry Committee is not appointed, what is the use of determining what tax should be paid by one or the other of the interests concerned? I must say that this is only an excuse by which Government are finding means to create dispute among the several interests—between Capital and Labour, and among other interests. I know that the time at my disposal is limited, but, if the Chair allows, I should like to place before the House some figures. The question is of fresh taxation, not for the ensuing year only, but for ever for the future, in order to find money for the nation-building departments. I maintain that the cause of all our trouble is not so much that we are not producing enough, but that our producers do not get the value that they ought to get by the currency policy, the exchange policy and by several other policies of not allowing this country to prosper, and the interest of this country being sacrificed for the interest of the country which administers this country.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: May I draw the attention of the honourable member to the fact that so far as the general discussion of the budget is concerned, I have had to impose a time limit of 20 minutes, so as to give everybody a chance to deal with the budget as a whole. It would conduce better to his own ideas if he would reserve the major part of his criticism in regard to increased taxation to the time when the first reading of the bills for imposing additional taxation is moved. At that time, there would be no time limit, and he can deal exhaustively with all the aspects of additional taxation which he may wish to bring forward. I would therefore ask him, having regard to the fact that he has got only three minutes more—I cannot extend it to more than five minutes, as more time given to one honourable member takes away the time of subsequent speakers—whether it would not be better if he reserved his remarks on legislation for imposing additional taxation to the occasion when we come to deal with it. He can then speak at as great a length as he likes.

Mr. LALJI NARANJI: I will take your advice, Sir, and deal with the budget proper.

This year, the White Book, and especially the Blue Book gives more information, no doubt. On page 39 of the Blue Book Government have given a statement of the debt charges, and that statement will show that our total debt to-day is Rs. 58,02,42,000, of which a sum of about Rs. 11 crores is not repayable to the Government of India. The rest of the debt charge, however, will have to be repaid, and the details of how the amount is to be spent over the various departments are also given. Now, we must not forget that our presidency has a revenue roughly of about Rs. 15 crores, and what is our liability for these debts?

[Mr. Lalji Naranji]

If you will refer to page 72 of the White Book, you will see that though the interest that we have to pay is Rs. 3,06,45,000, the total item is shown as Rs. 1,54,46,000, and the balance is shown as transferred to other departments, namely, Rs. 64,57,000 for interest transferred to commercial departments, Rs. 9,78,000 for interest transferred to construction of irrigation, etc., Rs. 50,000 for interest transferred to Forest Department and Rs. 77,14,000 for interest transferred to Development Department. Now, if we look to page 31 of the White Book, we find that the interest which we expect to receive on loans granted by the Bombay Development Department is Rs. 1,35,38,000, and if we include the interest that we expect to get from loans by the Provincial Government, the interest on arrears of revenue and the interest on general balances deposited with the Government of India, the total comes to Rs. 1,59,27,000. It would, therefore, appear to a layman that we are paying roughly Rs. 158 lakhs and getting in return Rs. 159 lakhs, and roughly the account squares. But really it is not so, because there is an expenditure of about Rs. 1½ crores over other departments, for which we shall have to pay the interest charges.

Then about the Development Department, the Honourable the General Member made remarks to which I had no occasion to reply. He was very particular in getting certain figures, and saying "What is wrong with my department?" I will show him and the House how the Development Department stands from the figures which I shall give for the years 1922-23, 1923-24 and 1924-25. I shall give the budget estimates, the revised estimates and the actual accounts for each year. In 1922-23 the expected revenue from the Development Department was Rs. 89,93,000, the revised estimate came down to Rs. 50,66,000, and the actual accounts showed a revenue of Rs. 27,58,000. In 1923-24, the estimated revenue was Rs. 1,06,75,000, the revised estimate was Rs. 38,10,000, and the actual accounts showed a figure of Rs. 28,44,000. In 1924-25 the estimated revenue was Rs. 63,89,000, the revised figure came to Rs. 36,42,000, and the actual accounts are not shown. In the next year's budget, it is estimated that there will be an income of Rs. 48,14,000.

It is left solely to the caprice of Government as to how money is to be saved. That could be seen from the figures that are given on pages 142 and 143 of the Blue Book. The total expenditure on the Back Bay Reclamation for the portion which honourable members have seen and may have occasion to see this year also, up to the end of 1923-24, is Rs. 3,38,88,682 and the probable cost during 1924-25 is Rs. 68,85,860 and the amount proposed to be spent this year is Rs. 57,15,382. All the three figures give a total cost of Rs. 4,64,89,894.

The other point I wanted to bring to the notice of the House is that they have shown a reduction in the establishment of 13 lakhs. That is not so. That is the cleverness of the accountant and the Honourable General Member himself. An increase of 6 lakhs is shown in another place. They have simply transferred from one head to another. On page 154, under Minor Head-A.—Works and Acquisitions, from the revised estimate of 6 lakhs and 33 thousands it has increased to 12 lakhs. I admit there has been a saving of 5 lakhs, but there is no reduction of the actual establishment to the extent that is required. In the note that they have attached they say that they are going to give up the suburban development scheme. On the Back Bay Reclamation they have spent very nearly 5 crores, and as a business proposition it is necessary that they should complete that scheme.

One other point is that the total expenditure proposed to be incurred on the development is $2\frac{1}{4}$ crores : and of this amount 77 lakhs is to be paid as interest. When they estimated a revenue of one crore 6 lacs in 1923-24 they actually realised Rs. 28,44,000. The excuses like 'there is no demand for land and there is a slump in the market' would not be of any use always. We have to pay the interest and the sinking fund, all of which lead us to the deficit.

In the Sukkur Barrage, the total proposed expenditure is Rs. 3,26,67,400. The actual expenditure on works is Rs. 2,83,80,000. The interest will be roughly 20 lakhs, and there is a transfer of 10 lakhs to capital account and another portion of 10 lakhs from the Famine Insurance Fund. How figures are juggled, it is difficult for a layman to find out.

Mr. R. G. PRADHAN (Nasik District) : Mr. President, the general discussion on the budget affords an opportunity to honourable members to take a bird's eye view of the general administration and to make practical suggestions for the better government of the province. But the field is so vast that it is impossible in a twenty minutes' speech to do full justice to the numerous questions that call for consideration. In the present transitional state of our constitution, it is impossible to isolate provincial from national finance, and both form fundamental questions of constitutional or administrative policy. Questions of constitution, finance, administration and so forth are mutually interdependent and therefore any practical suggestions which we honourable members can make can only be limited in their scope and can hardly go to the root of the more important of the questions which we are called upon to consider. It is in this spirit, then, that I wish to approach the budget. I intend to consider the budget in a very practical manner with an overwhelming sense of responsibility as if some one on the opposition bench were going to make room for me and I were to be called upon to carry out the politics I advocate.

The budget estimate for 1925-26 shows a deficit of 41 lakhs of rupees which the Honourable the Finance Member desires to convert into a surplus of one lakh of rupees, in case his taxation proposals are accepted by the Council. It is, however, necessary to realise the true nature of this deficit. The closing ordinary balance for the year is Rs. 3,68,90,000. Deducting from it 1,48,39,000 on account of famine insurance and 2 crores the minimum balance which Government are bound to keep, it still leaves a balance of Rs. 19,51,000. Then again, against item 47 Miscellaneous, we find from a foot-note that the amount under that head includes 15 lakhs for Reserve with the Finance Department for unforeseen expenditure. In other words, it would seem that there are four different kinds of reserve balances, namely :

(1) 2 crores, the minimum reserve balance, (2) Rs. 1,48,39,000 reserve on account of Famine Insurance, (3) 15 lakhs reserve with the Finance Department for unforeseen expenditure, and (4) Rs. 19,51,000. The Honourable the Finance Member has not told us for what purpose and on what account this reserve of Rs. 19,51,000 is kept. In the absence of any explanation I take it that this balance is the outcome of a desire very natural among all Finance Members to accumulate, miserlike, large balances. This deficit of 41 lakhs is in fact exclusive of these various kinds of balances. I know full well that Government are bound to accumulate a certain amount as famine insurance. I also recognise the wisdom of the arrangement which prescribes that two crores of rupees should be kept by Government as its normal minimum balance. But I do not understand why to this normal balance should be added a further balance of Rs. 19,51,000 besides 15 lakhs kept as reserve with the Finance Department. I wish the Honourable the Finance Member had given a statement showing how much amount had similarly been kept during each of the past five years and how much of it had to be expended as unforeseen, so that we may be in a position to know the provision if any that must be made in the next year's budget. If we then take into account these two sums, namely, 15 lakhs and Rs. 19,51,000 the total amount comes to Rs. 34,51,000. That is to say, the real deficit is not 41 lakhs, but only Rs. 6,49,000. In this connection it is impossible not to refer to another item. We are told that the expenditure on the Lee Commission's proposals for 1925-26 will be 10 lakhs of rupees. In other words, if this expenditure had not arisen, not only would there have been no deficit, but an actual surplus of Rs. 3,50,000 without any recourse to additional taxation. I shall no doubt be met with the argument that this line of reasoning is neither practical politics nor practical finance, and the Honourable the Finance Member himself has somewhat indulged in a special pleading in order to show that the additional cost on account of the Lee Commission's proposals is a mere bagatelle. But we, the representatives of the people, who are asked to bear this additional taxation, and whose political sense is likely to be impugned in case we do not, must be pardoned if we think and feel that the cost of the recommendations of the Lee Commission is at all events one factor in the situation that has led Government to approach this House with proposals of additional taxation. I shall not say much on this particular point. Brevity of criticism is the best way of expressing what we feel about it. The fact that while the finances of the country were still far from satisfactory and social services were being stunted for want of funds, the Civil Services felt no compunction in asking for further increases in their salaries and pensions, thereby adding to the cost of administration, cannot but make us feel that, after all, their own material gains are still dearer to them than the interests of the people. I do not wish to pursue this topic further. I shall only express the hope that now that they feel that their position and prospects are secure, they will realise more and more keenly that their true function in the governance of this country now lies in helping her to attain the goal of responsible government as quickly as possible. We shall not grudge them their increased salaries, pensions and allowances, if they will fulfil this higher and more glorious mission that is now theirs.

I do not accept in toto the position maintained by the Honourable the Finance Member that our sources of revenue have been tapped to their utmost and cannot yield increased revenue. If land revenue is practically at a standstill, it is due to the defective policy of the Government with regard to the agricultural economy of the province. The Government ought to have realised that land revenue is the sheet anchor of our finance, and therefore they ought to have directed their policy towards making it as much independent of the uncertainties of rainfall as is humanly possible. This would have been achieved if the claims of irrigation had received from the first that attention which I am glad to note they are receiving in an increasing measure at the present moment. The portion of land revenue due to irrigation is about 68 lakhs of rupees. This can be raised to a considerable amount by further expenditure on irrigation works. In the Deccan there is ample scope for small irrigation works, and if they are carried out, the frequent necessity that now arises for giving remissions and suspensions will disappear and land revenue will not be liable to fluctuations but will on the contrary show decided increase. I am told that small irrigation works do not pay. I cannot help thinking that this is not the proper spirit in which that matter should be approached. In the long run, such works will fructify in increased revenue, in the avoidance of frequent remissions and suspensions on any large scale, and in distinct improvement in the economic condition of the agriculturists. Then again, there are about ten lakhs of acres which can be, and therefore ought to be, brought under cultivation. Intensive agriculture must also be promoted. If all these measures are adopted, I feel no doubt whatever, that our normal land revenue will show a decided increase over what it is at present, without throwing the least additional burden upon poor agriculturists.

Then, again, take another head of revenue, Forests. That yields 75 lakhs at the present moment. Our forests constitute a vast amount of potential wealth, and I really do not at all see why our revenue from forests should be such a small sum as only 75 lakhs of rupees. There must be something radically wrong in the system of administering and exploiting our forests. And I earnestly appeal to Government to make a thorough enquiry into the possibility of increasing our forest revenue and to appoint a small but really competent committee for the purpose.

I now come to Excise. For the last five years I have heard the cry that with growing public opinion in favour of prohibition, the excise revenue will disappear and we shall be confronted with the problem of how to replace a revenue which represents one-third of our total income. The cry is raised every year, and yet prohibition seems to be as distant as ever: the Government are still, Hamlet-like, considering the question: Prohibition to be or not to be, and the excise revenue for the last five years has ranged from 3,42 lakhs to 4,49 lakhs. We are told on the authority of the Commissioner of Excise that the next stage must see a large reduction of excise revenue, and yet the amount budgetted for shows, not a decrease, but an increase of over 13 lakhs over the revised estimates for the current year. In these circumstances, I confess I find it difficult to take the Government seriously when they tell us that we are threatened with a large diminution and ultimate extinction of excise revenue, and I begin to wonder whether this spectre of the loss of 4½ crores of excise revenue is not called up to frighten us into either the abandonment of the goal of prohibition or submission to additional burdens of taxation. As things stand at present, we might well say: "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof", and think of facing the problem of replacing the excise revenue lost by prohibition, when prohibition is really and sincerely adopted by Government.

Mr. President, I have already referred to the reserve of 15 lakhs shown in the budget as kept with the Finance Department to meet unforeseen expenditure. In that connection, I wish to quote what the Auditor-General in India has said in his letter to this Government on the subject of the Appropriation Report for the year 1922-23.

Says the Auditor-General:

"To meet unforeseen charges, a suggestion was put by a provincial Government before its Public Accounts Committee that a reserve be placed at the disposal of the Finance Department under each head of account. The committee observed that if this were applied to all departments it would mean a reserve provision of 30 lakhs against which expenditure on schemes already foreseen would have to be reduced, and so it felt bound to assert the principle that unforeseen expenditure should be met from savings elsewhere..... I fully endorse the view taken by the Public Accounts Committee."

The Auditor General takes the view taken by the Public Accounts Committee. In face of this, the Honourable the Finance Member really owes an explanation to the House why this reserve of 15 lakhs of rupees has been budgetted for.

When we are told that our budget cannot be balanced except by additional taxation, we feel bound to remind Government of the loss to revenue caused by laxity of control over the financial administration of the province. That loss may not be comparatively heavy, but all the same care must be taken to prevent it. The Auditor General in India has thus referred to this laxity of control in his letter to the Government on the Audit Report on the accounts for 1922-23:

"The only inference to be drawn is that the efficiency of the provincial control both over Civil and Public Works Departments is diminishing. The position in the Public Works Departments is so serious that I have had to address the local Government officially on the subject."

We are told that the Government have appointed a special officer to undertake a thorough examination of the working of the Public Works Department, particularly on the financial side and I only hope that no further ground will be given for fresh complaints regarding lack of efficient financial control over the various departments of Government.

I am glad that out of the annual assignment of Rs. 63,60,000 to the famine insurance fund, the Government have budgetted for an expenditure of Rs. 53,60,000 on famine relief. This sum includes Rs. 42,39,000 under the item " Other Expenditure in the Civil Department on famine relief ". I presume, the Finance Department has examined the schemes on which it is proposed to spend such a large amount, as otherwise, under Devolution Rule 37 (G) (iii), it would have declined to provide in the estimate for the expenditure. In that case may I request the Honourable the Revenue Member to take the Council into confidence and tell us in some detail what are the various schemes, either for the prevention or relief of famine, on which such a huge amount is proposed to be expended.

Coming to the transferred departments, while thanking the Government for their frank though belated recognition of the universal public demand for increased expenditure on education, sanitation, medical relief, and so forth, I deem it my duty to say, quite frankly, that I am not at all satisfied with the administration of those departments. I, for one, am anxious to give every support I can to the honourable Ministers. Knowing as I do the defects of the peculiar constitution which they have to work, I fully recognise the difficulties of their task. But making every allowance for those difficulties I still cannot help thinking that they are not doing their best. When I think of the transferred departments I always have before my mind's eye the Royal Commission which will be appointed, if not earlier, at all events in 1930. Broadly speaking, that commission will enquire inter alia into the growth of education, the development of representative institutions, and other cognate matters which form the bedrock of a system of democratic self-government. If I may say so, the Ministers are custodians of, and trustees for, our further constitutional advance; it is they that will have to justify, and strengthen by their concrete policies and tangible achievements, our claims to the full measure of provincial responsibility which we are demanding. But when we look to the small progress made in the transferred departments, we are filled with anxiety about the future. Education ought to have made the greatest progress under the new constitution, but it has hardly gone beyond the enactment of the Compulsory Education Act which is still not in operation. The expansion of primary education even on a voluntary basis has been arrested in spite of the popular demand for the establishment of new schools. The question of re-organizing and improving secondary education still awaits consideration. The Government appointed a committee to enquire into technical and industrial education, but both the reports of that committee, the majority and minority reports, seem to have met the fate of being pigeon-holed. The budget provision for the introduction of the scheme formulated by the Compulsory Education Committee is the niggardly sum of 10 lakhs of rupees. Our total expenditure on education of all kinds is only 11.5 per cent. of the gross expenditure and that on primary education alone is of course much less.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR : On a point of information, Sir, I find that the honourable member is making valuable criticism upon the department of Education, but I find that the Honourable Minister of Education is absent. May I ask whether it is customary for Government Members to remain absent during these three days which are specially allotted for general remarks on the policy of Government in order that Government may benefit by the criticism? Is it not advisable sir, that Members of Government should remain present on such occasions?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : There is no law which enjoins the obligatory attendance of any one member of this House.

Mr. R. G. PRADHAN : We have arrived at a stage in our national development when the Minister of Education and the Education Department must be imbued with apostolic fervour in the cause of education; but fervour would seem to be the last virtue of our Education Department and of my honourable friend whose privilege it is to preside over it. We are often advised to educate our masters and the Liberals in particular have received this friendly attention almost ad nauseum. It is, however, forgotten that true education is a slow process of inner awakening and growth, the healthy and delicious fruits of which cannot be hastened into ripeness by the hot-house stimulation of propaganda, whether it is extreme or moderate. The need, therefore, of rapid and general diffusion of education is so insistent that no effort and no sacrifice should be spared both by the Government and the people to meet it. If the Honourable the Minister of Education would really show keenness about the cause of compulsory primary education.....

Mr. S. T. KAMBLI : Sir, on a point of order, the honourable member is reading his speech.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : It is a very difficult point to decide especially when we discuss the budget. Lots of figures have got to be used and I do not intend to strictly apply the practice of not reading speeches on such occasions. I do not think anybody could charge the honourable member, Mr. Pradhan, of not being able to speak. I hope honourable members will not resort to this practice of reading speeches but will as a rule address the House orally. It is not my intention to strictly enforce the practice of not reading speeches during the general discussion of the budget.

Mr. R. G. PRADHAN : If the honourable Minister would show keenness, he will, I feel confident, receive the support of the Council in the levy, if he so desires, of a special education tax on all non-agricultural incomes exceeding a minimum limit that may be fixed. Such a call on the spirit of patriotism and self-sacrifice of our people in the cause of compulsory education will not, I feel sure, go in vain.

The progress in the development of representative institutions, of local self-government, has also not been as much as it should be. Full effect has not yet been given to the first formula of the scheme of Montagu-Chelmsford reforms which lays down that there should be the fullest development of local self-government. The Local Boards Act has been to some extent liberalized, but on the other hand, it has introduced the vicious principle of communal representation even in local bodies and the measure of liberalization is still inadequate. The district municipalities are still subject to an old pre-reform constitution. The Village Panchayats Act was passed in 1920, but its defects have retarded the establishment and development of village panchayats and they have not yet been remedied. It is no use saying that the people do not want village panchayats. If the defects of the Act make them unwilling to ask for panchayats, the more straightforward course is to amend the Act and not take shelter behind the plea of supposed popular dislike for village panchayats. In the constitutional sphere, too, the Ministers have not utilised the Reforms Act to its fullest extent. They have not urged the administration of the transferred departments on the principle of joint responsibility, nor have they asked for the appointment of Council secretaries. In their opinion, the appointment of a joint financial secretary is unnecessary. Their attitude with regard to all these matters would show that, in their judgment, the Joint Parliamentary Committee was not wise in making these recommendations. In my speech on the budget last year I earnestly appealed to them to see to it that the Reforms Act was worked to its fullest possibilities. That appeal has made no effect on them. It would seem they have no policy of their own, except the policy of drift, if it can be called a policy at all.

In conclusion, I wish to support the Honourable the Finance Member's powerful plea for a revision of the Meston Settlement. In my evidence before the Reforms Enquiry Committee, I urged inter alia that the provincial contributions to the Government of India should be reduced and this Government should receive a share in the income tax. I was asked how in that case I would balance the Indian Budget. The Taxation Enquiry Committee will, I have no doubt, ask the same question to the Government and I trust they will be ready with a satisfactory answer.

Mr. J. C. SWAMINARAYAN (Ahmedabad District); Sir, the House has been faced with a situation similar to the one which faced the House three years ago. In 1922-23 the House was faced with a deficit budget to the extent of 60 lakhs of rupees. This is another year in which the House is faced with a deficit budget. In the books which have been supplied to us it has been pointed out that the deficit is only 41 lakhs. But if we go into the figures, we shall find that it is much greater than 41 lakhs. In fact in the last year, which was alleged to be a promising year, we have actually spent away 1 crore and 6 lakhs more than the expenditure budgetted. On page 20 of the White Book we find that we have dissipated our balances to the extent of 1 crore and 6 lakhs, because the ordinary balance at the beginning was Rs. 5,44 lakhs, Development balance was Rs. 37 lakhs, a total of say Rs. 5,82 lakhs, but at the end of the year the revised estimate shows that we shall have Rs. 4,67 lakhs in the ordinary balance and Rs. 9 lakhs in the Development balance, that is to say, Rs. 4,76 lakhs. Thus we have dissipated our balances to the extent of Rs. 1,06 lakhs during the current year which has been described as a favourable year. In a favourable year we are losing Rs. 1,06 lakhs; how much more should we be losing in a bad or unfavourable year ? Of course, I do not approve of the policy of having large balances which could not bear as good interest as the interest for the loans which we have been receiving from the Government of India or which we are receiving locally from the local people. But at least the actual state of affairs is that during the last year we have spent Rs. 1,06 lakhs more than what we could receive from the people. Of course, it has been pointed out that Rs. 79 lakhs have been spent for the reduction or avoidance of debt. That, of course, does not serve any good purpose because we had to use our balances for the reduction or avoidance of debt. And that proves that the ordinary revenue could not enable us to make provision for avoidance of debt. We had to utilise our existing balances to the extent of Rs. 79 lakhs in order that we might meet the sinking fund charges which are necessary. Now, what is the state of affairs during the current year ? During the current year we have been given to understand that we shall have a deficit of Rs. 41 lakhs. Now, really speaking, though this is shown as Rs. 41 lakhs, about 49 lakhs will be spent from the balances under the head of 60, Civil Works. That is to say, the real deficit is not 41 lakhs, but 41 plus 49, that is, 90 lakhs, and at the same time the Development Department which has promised crores and crores of rupees and was expected to bring in a return of a very large amount—nobody knows when and whether the expectations would ever be realised—goes on in the same unsatisfactory way. Now in the Development Department also on the loan that has been raised the sinking fund is not possible to be provided from the income that is derived from the operations of that department. We are spending away 20 lakhs which are being received from the cultivators. The cotton cess has been imposed and that is really a tax on the cultivators. Three-sevenths goes to the municipality of Bombay and 4/7ths goes to the Government of Bombay ; that is to say, about 37 or 38 lakhs are taken away from us the mofussil people, the poor cultivators, and they are being spent for the development purposes which cannot give any benefit to the cultivators.....

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR : For the housing purposes.

Mr. J. C. SWAMINARAYAN : But at least it is a deficit ; it will not be possible to meet the sinking fund charges for the development loan from the revenues that you expect to get. Though you will get 20 lakhs from the cotton cess, still you will not get 9 lakhs 39 thousand necessary for providing the necessary sinking fund. That is the actual state of affairs. Moreover, other expectations in regard to this department are also not being realised. You expected to get 27 lakhs by selling land. You could not get that amount. The amount that you could receive was only 17 lakhs. Now this year you expect to receive 9 lakhs from the sale of land. Nobody knows whether these expectations would be fulfilled or not, because there is a great slump in the market, and even in the answers that are being given to the queries put by the honourable members of the House to the Honourable the General Member it has been said that there were four plots developed but only one could be sold with difficulty. That is to say, the actual deficit is not 41 lakhs as has been pointed out, but is actually about one crore of rupees. Now I shall show that this is not the actual deficit, but the actual deficit is still greater. This time in land revenue they expected to get 5 crores 77 lakhs. They have not been able to get that amount, because unfortunately, when Government is very greedy, God also does not give good seasons and the result is that their expectations in regard to their budgets are not realised. For the last 3 years continuously Government have given remissions and suspensions. I think a separate head of remissions and suspensions must be provided for under land revenue, and to the extent of 50 lakhs of rupees this charge must be a permanent one because we are not getting good seasons generally, and if this 50 lakhs is not provided for the purpose of remissions and suspensions, the result will be that though there will be very bad conditions and the cultivators may be starving, though they may be forced to incur debts actually for the purpose of paying the revenue demand of the Revenue Department, no mercy will be shown to them. Therefore, there ought to be a separate head and this 5 crores and 60 lakhs that has been budgetted to be realised under the land revenue must not be budgetted by itself, but some minus amount must be put down under that head to make up another head of suspensions and remissions, so that the actual revenue that might be expected to be realised from this head would not be more than 5 crores of rupees, and that is what we have actually found. Unless you help these poor cultivators, who really form the pillars of the State, it is impossible to relieve their great distress and to realise their great needs. On page 41 of the Blue Book it has been said that the decrease of 45,88 lakhs in the revised as compared with the budget for 1924-25 for ordinary land revenue is due mainly to the unequal distribution of rain of the past season in the Central and Southern divisions, but that the districts in the Northern Division show on the other hand an improvement to the extent of 3,69 thousand. Now this offset has been pointed out, but this budget was, I think, prepared in the month of December. But after the month of December I can say that in the Northern Division the cold wave that has passed over it has destroyed the cotton crop to such a great extent that if the Revenue Department expects to realise their revenue without paying any attention to the actual state in which the cultivators have been placed, I think even the expectations of the current year cannot be realised if the Government have heart and sympathy for the people over whose destinies they have been placed. Unfortunately, Governments are machines. In modern times, Governments are composed of a set of individuals, and they do not have the sympathy which they ought to have for the poor people. Governments have no heart and they work like machines without any regard for the actual state of affairs, and, under the present system, it is very difficult for the man who is at the helm of affairs to know the actual state of affairs. He has to be guided always by the reports of the officers. The greatest defect in the present system of Government is that the poor cultivators cannot approach the highest authority in the presidency. They generally make their representations to the talati, the mamlatdar or the Collector. Of course, the Honourable the Revenue Member who might be above all the local subordinate officials could have sympathy for the poor cultivators. But when any applications are made to him by the cultivators, he would say "Let the applications come through the Collector". If the applications were to be forwarded through the various channels, they would perhaps never reach him, and he would say "No complaints have been received in the matter". In regard to any measure of administration which may be causing hardship to the cultivators, the reply from Government always is that no complaints have been received. They say the court-fees were increased but no complaints were received. It is because the complaints have to pass through so many channels that they do not reach the highest authorities. The result is that we might be discoursing over philosophical matters, attachments may be going on in so many villages, and the people are being threatened with an additional fine of 25 per cent. on the revenue. They are already in straitened circumstances. The poor cultivators have to go to the Marwadi or the Shylock-like money-lenders living in the villages, and be at their mercy for paying the revenue demands. Therefore, what I mean to say is that these expectations of Rs. 5,60,00,000 from land revenue are wrong. If we take the statistics of various years, we find every year that if the season is bad in the Southern Division, it might be good in the Northern Division. Every year, we have some calamity in some part of the Presidency. Unfortunately, we do not get uniformly good seasons. Nobody knows why even Providence is so much against us. When you make an estimate of your land revenue, you have to take into account bad seasons. Therefore, Rs. 5,60,00,000 under the head of Land Revenue is a very great amount. There should also be a different permanent head of expenditure for remissions and suspensions of land revenue. There is an over-estimate of Rs. 60 lakhs under the head Land Revenue. Under these circumstances, what is the real deficit? It would have been Rs. 1,60,00,000. We are told that it would be enough if we provide for Rs. 41 lakhs, and for this Rs. 41 lakhs we should sanction additional taxation under a few heads, and everything will be all right. But I want to point out what the incidence of this taxation will be. If you try to realise what the effect of this additional taxation will be, you will find that it is the cultivator, the producer of the Presidency on whose shoulders the tax will ultimately fall. The middleman will not feel the burden. For example, it has been said that court-fees should be increased. What would be the incidence of this taxation? Supposing a cultivator owes Rs. 1,000 to a money-lender and is not able to repay it, the money-lender goes to the court and pays enhanced court-fees; he gets a decree and the costs are added to the decree, and ultimately the poor cultivator is the man who really bears the additional taxation, though by quibbling it may be said that the tax falls on the propertied classes. Now, one thing which has astonished me is the statement made by the Honourable the Finance Member that the tax will be recovered from the middle classes, and their fault is that they do not pay land revenue and do not drink. The Honourable the Finance Member, in the course of his speech said :

[Mr. J. C. Swaminarayan]

“I believe that it will be generally agreed that these gentlemen who receive the assistance of the State for the recovery of their debts are people who do not ordinarily contribute to the support of the State either by payment of land revenue or perhaps still less by payment of excise revenue.”

As if these persons would have been better persons in the estimation of Government if they were drunkards !

This is the state in which we are living. Therefore, when the deficit is so great, the real remedy is that there must be stringent economy ; and the House will be well advised to take up that attitude which was taken up three years ago by a moderate Council, which forced Government to cut down their expenditure to the extent of Rs. 60 lakhs. Here also, we are faced with the same difficulty. If we do not perform our duty, these expenses will go on piling up, new projects will be taken in hand, and our debts will increase. At the end of the current financial year our debts will amount to Rs. 48 crores, and when all the projects are finished at the end of three years our debt will be Rs. 70 crores ; and what will be the annual charge for interest ? As the Honourable Mr. Lawrence pointed out, it is Rs. 3 crores at present ; and it will be Rs. 5 crores in a few years. This will mean that one-third of our revenue will have to be spent in paying the interest charges on our loans. It has been said that a portion of the loan is advanced to local bodies like the Bombay Improvement Trust, Bombay Municipality and the Port Trust and other bodies and that they will pay some interest, and that may be taken as a set off against the interest that we have to pay on the loans. But that is not a real argument. The taxes for the municipal services in Bombay are paid by the people, the taxes imposed by the Improvement Trust are paid by the people, and these interest charges will be laid on the shoulders of the people of the Presidency. Money has to be got somehow or other to meet the expenditure. The Lee recommendations are sanctioned, and Rs. 10 lakhs additional are provided for the purpose. I think the men who are paying the taxes must have the final voice in determining what salary they can pay to the services that they employ. Under the constitution under which we are working, the tax-payers have no voice at all in the matter. Some external authority says that the all-India services should be given an increase in salary, and we are compelled to pay Rs. 10 lakhs annually to them. Where is the money to come from if expenditure is going to be piled up like this ? If this state of things continues, the result will be chaos. On the one hand, in the case of poor prisoners you save Rs. 1 lakh by providing them with inferior diets, and on the other hand you spare Rs. 10 lakhs for the all-India services. If work is to be done in this way, namely, taking away from the poorest who have not got much and giving it to those who have as much as they desire, the results for the Presidency will be very disastrous. Therefore, it is desirable that the expenditure should be cut down to the lowest minimum.

Mr. S. S. DEV (West Khandesh District): Sir, I am afraid, the few words that I wish to speak are going to be irrelevant. But if the speech the Honourable the Finance Member has made while introducing the budget be relevant, then I am sure my speech also will be considered relevant, for I wish to confine all my remarks to the speech that was made by the Honourable the Finance Member in introducing the budget. That speech appeared to me as a speech made in his defence and not a speech which a Finance Member should make while introducing a budget. It appears as if it is a reply to an unwritten notice served upon him by this side of the House, notice "To show cause why the two bills which he intends to introduce should not be thrown out immediately". In reply to that notice the speech has been made. He tries to make out a case for the introduction of those two bills.

I shall show presently how the premises which he urges for the introduction of those bills and which he takes for granted are not true. He hopes to introduce those two bills on six or seven grounds. The first ground is that land revenue is not going to expand for the time being and that revenue settlements are postponed. His second ground is that the policy of Government in the matter of remissions and suspensions is very liberal, is very generous. The third ground is that Government is on the road to prohibition. I believe it has started on that road only to-day, for the resolution to that effect issued by Government dated the 12th instant was placed on the table only to-day. The Finance Member says that Government are fast advancing on the road to prohibition and that a decrease in the excise revenue is imminent and within sight. The fourth ground is that the finances of the Presidency are in a bad predicament. The fifth ground is that the two bills that are sought to be introduced do not affect the poor but only the rich. The next ground probably is that Government do not intend to make justice a source of revenue. And the last ground is that these bills will alone save the situation and that there is no other escape out of the situation. These are the six or seven grounds on which the Honourable the Finance Member asks us to vote in favour of the introduction of these two bills. Then he concludes his speech by almost saying: If you do not vote, well, you will suffer the consequences. He utters a threat, which I believe he should not have uttered. This threat covers about 21 lines. I have counted them. These threats and criminal intimidation and undue influence and coercion should be outside the House. It appears to me, as if it were a duty of the Finance Member to frighten the House and that if any Finance Member is not capable of giving threats, he is not fit to be a Finance Member. Last year also he had given similar threats in his speech which he made by proxy. He must have known by this time how we had treated those threats.

However, apart from that part of his speech containing threats, I shall try to analyse the seven grounds which he has tried to make out in his speech in order to persuade us to give our vote in favour of those two bills.

The first ground is that the land revenue has ceased to expand and that revenue settlements are postponed. I am surprised to hear this. I would be very glad if it is really so ; but I am surprised to see that such a lie has been uttered in this House. The resolution of the honourable member for Nasik (Mr. Pradhan) out of respect for which the Government say that revenue settlements have been postponed consisted of two parts : First, that a committee be appointed to bring the process of revision settlement under closer regulation by statute and secondly that till that is done all revisions be postponed. Government in reply to a question by me replied in July 1924 that the resolution had been mainly accepted, meaning thereby that they accepted the first part and rejected the second. I have got a document here in my hand which is signed by the Collector of West Khandesh. It is a proclamation to the people of Sindkheda, dated 16th August 1924. The will of the House was not accepted till July, when the question was replied to. It was neither accepted till August, when this notice was issued by the Collector to the effect that the land assessment would be enhanced by 5 annas 3 pies per rupee, and that, if any objections were to be made, they should be made within two months. Later on, several applications were submitted to the Collector and the Government, but no replies had been received by the people of Sindkheda. Then they held meetings after meetings in several places passing resolutions to the effect that it would be cruel on the part of Government to increase the rates of assessment this year at least. You may be aware, Sir, that for two months July and August there was no rain and people looked up to Heavens for rain in prayerful mood. Instead of rains they got increased assessment that they should pay 5 annas 3 pies more for every rupee. It is occasions like these that tempt the Mahatmas to call this system of Government you all know as what ? Occasions like these, when Government ought to come to the help of the people when they are hard pressed for want of rains and when they are struggling for their lives and the lives of their cattle, occasions like these justify Mahatmas in calling this system of Government a Satanic one. Till August 1924 the revision settlement in Sindkheda taluka was not postponed, nor was it postponed till the 1st of February 1925. It was not postponed till the budget was framed and not even till the two bills were framed and circulated to honourable members of this House. I was told that the talatis in the taluka had been instructed to collect assessment according to the revised rates. I wish I am interrupted and contradicted. I would be very glad to be interrupted on this point. I would immediately wire to the people of Sindkheda to give notices to Government on the strength of any announcement that might be made here by the Honourable the Revenue Member—notices to get back the excess payments that the people might have made and to file suits against Government if they would not get the refund.

The second ground which the Honourable the Finance Member has tried to make out is that the policy of Government in the matter of suspensions and remissions has been generous. He has given the figures of remissions and suspensions for the last two years and the current year. These figures, if they prove anything, prove the oppressive nature of the land tax. It is all very well to say on paper that when the harvest is reported to be unfavourable, revenue is suspended and when it continues to be unfavourable year after year, suspensions of the earliest years are remitted. But we know what actually happens in our villages. The valuation of the crop is never correct and suspension is not given till a cultivator has utensils in his hut to be auctioned and assessment to be recovered. These suspensions and remissions are evidence of the oppressive character of the tax and the incapacity of the agriculturists to pay. The next proposition of the Finance Member which I controvert is that revenue from excise is bound to decrease. A lie to that statement has been given by the budget itself. In his speech introducing the budget he says that revenue from excise is going to decrease, whereas the budget anticipates an increase. Even if you go over the estimates and accounts for the last three or four years, you will find that the excise revenue has gone on increasing down to the budgetary year. The speech ought to have been consistent with the budget or this budget with the speech. The speech anticipates a decrease, the budget shows an increase of fourteen lakhs over the current year. It appears to me that Government themselves are not serious as regards this ground. In spite of the policy of prohibition adopted by Government on paper the Honourable the Finance Member puts a question: "Is there any single member of this House who is prepared to face the consequences of such a loss of revenue" meaning thereby that no one should be prepared to have this revenue abolished. The fourth reason urged by the Honourable Member is that financially we are in a very bad predicament. It is not generally given to me to quote figures, but on this point, Mr. President, you will allow me to refer to a few figures. In 1922-23 we expected to close the budgetary year with 3,48 lakhs, but we actually closed with 4,02 lakhs; in 1923-24 we expected to close with 4,35 lakhs, but we actually closed with 5,44 lakhs; and in 1924-25 we expected to close with 4,35 lakhs, but we hope to close with 4,66 lakhs. Similarly next year although the Honourable the Finance Member thinks that we are going to close with only 3,69 lakhs, I predict that we shall close the year very nearly with 5,00 lakhs, and I say this on the strength of the figures I have quoted for the current year and the last two years. So the gloomy picture painted before the House by the Honourable Member seems to be overdrawn. The Honourable the Finance Member has often told this House, during the last several years, that we should not allow the balance to go below 2 crores, that 2 crores would be a sufficient working balance. And if we are going to close next year with 3,69 lakhs, that is almost double the minimum balance that we must have, I maintain that no case has been made out by the Finance Member for having those two taxation bills introduced this session.

Then there is another ground brought forward, namely, that our court-fees will not affect the agriculturists but only the rich. I believe the Honourable the Finance Member—I had no time to enquire—but I believe that the Honourable the Finance Member has probably never served in the judicial line. If he had, he might have known that the court-fees ultimately fall on the poor defendant agriculturists and not on the plaintiff creditors. For, although in the first instance the creditors pay the court-fees, ultimately they recover them from the agriculturists. So, there is no substance in the argument that the bills would not affect the poor. Similarly there is no truth in saying that we are not going to make our courts a source of revenue. The Honourable the Finance Member takes only the two figures from the White Book under Administration of Justice and argues that our income from Judicial Administration is only 16 lakhs and our expenditure is 76 lakhs. But he forgets to add to the 16 lakhs of revenue, a revenue of 81 lakhs of court-fees for which he has budgetted under the Stamps. Court-fees is nothing else but revenue from judicial administration. So, if we add to the 16 lakhs of revenue shown under the Judicial Administration, the 81 lakhs from court-fees shown under Stamps, that will give us 21 lakhs more than what we spend on Judicial Administration. Therefore, it is also not true that we are not going to make judicial administration a source of revenue. It is further not true that we can realise 18 lakhs from court-fees and, 18 lakhs from Stamps if we increase the rates. From Government's own figures we find that in 1923-24, when the increased court-fees were in force, the amount collected was only 8 lakhs more than the revised estimates for the current year, 1924-25 in which the increased rates were abandoned. None of these grounds being sound, I believe there is no case made out and no cause shown why those two bills should not be thrown out. They will be thrown out in spite of the threats held out by the Honourable Member in his introductory speech. If my time is not up.....

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: You have got four minutes more.

Mr. S. S. DEV: If my time is not up, I shall refer to only one more point. When these books, the Blue Book and the White Book, were published, there were two sets of people who were very anxious to peruse them. One set was of the members of the heaven-born services, the other set was of the members of the hell-born services. The first wanted to see whether provision was made for carrying out the Lee Commission's recommendations; the second, the members of the hell-born services, called the primary teachers, poor fellows, they looked into the books to see whether anything was done for them under the resolution of the House. You know, Sir, that this time last year this House passed a resolution in the matter of the salaries of primary teachers and appointed a committee to inquire and report. The original resolution asked the committee to report within six months, but some rules and regulations came in the way, and no time-limit was mentioned in the resolution ultimately adopted. I am told, Sir, that the deliberations of the committee were over in October last and yet we have no report. The members of the heaven-born services got what they wanted and they were pleased with the budget, but the members of the other services were severely disappointed. As to this Lee Commission's report, I do not know whether it will be right or wrong for me to say in this House what

[Mr. S. S. Dev]

I wish to say, but if I may be allowed to say, I shall say in one word that the whole affair was and is a shameless affair. What was said sixty years ago is ten times more true to-day. It was then said that there was no service under the sun, other than the Civil Service in India, which was paid at so high a rate. The Civil Service receive a rate of payment which would be astounding and incredible if we did not know it to be true and knowing it to be true we must admit it to be monstrous. Therefore, it is this monster service that has to be fed at the cost of the poor people; This monster to be fed with ten lakhs of rupees in this budgetary year. After they are thus fed and not otherwise, the Honourable the Finance Member assures this House, that they are going to be contented and to work with efficiency otherwise they will be discontented and be inefficient. This may remind the Hindu section of the House of that Pauranic monster which would not be satisfied, but let alone that monster, my time is up.

Mr. V. R. KOTHARI (Sholapur District): Sir, there have been criticisms from the non-official benches that the nation-building departments are not properly provided for, and in order to meet that criticism the Honourable the Finance Member has supplied us with some figures to show that while in the nation-building departments there has been a large increase in expenditure, other departments have not benefited to the same extent. From the figures for the last five years he has tried to show that while the nation-building departments have benefited to the extent of 179 per cent. the increase in expenditure on law and order departments is only 28 per cent. But I wish to point out that this comparison has been vitiated because of the inclusion of big figures of amounts spent from loans such as on the development schemes. If we exclude the expenditure that has been incurred on the development schemes, and if we take some of the chief departments, reserved and transferred, we shall find that a very different story has got to be learnt. For example if we take Land Revenue, General Administration, Jails, Police and Administration of Justice and if we compare the figures on these departments from 1919-1920 to 1924-1925 with figures for Education, Medical, Public Health, Agriculture and Industries, we find that the expenditure on the law and order departments has gone up by 22 per cent. while the expenditure on the nation-building departments such as Education, etc., has gone up by 48 per cent. Of course there has been greater expenditure on these nation-building departments than on law and order. But what I want to point out is that the divergence is not so great as has been tried to be made out by the Honourable the Finance Member. The aim is quite clear. The reason why he has been at pains to show that the nation-building departments have got more, is to make out a case for the taxation proposals that are going to be introduced soon. We have been told that such a further expenditure on education, public health and medical relief is proposed to be made that Government are faced with a deficit of 41 lakhs and in order to cover that deficit Government wish to raise 42 lakhs extra by fresh taxation. Well, as pointed out by my honourable friend from

[Mr. V. F. Kothari]

Ahmedabad. Mr. Swaminarayan, about 3 years ago the Government was faced with a similar situation. But the method adopted by Government at that time was different from that adopted by them now. At that time the Honourable Ministers were made to say that unless the Council sanctioned extra taxation the transferred departments would starve. They roundly declared that under this era of beneficent reforms Government have a right to take what they like for the reserved departments and unless fresh taxation was sanctioned the transferred departments would be starved. I do not know how far the Council was impressed by the announcement of this undoubted privilege of the Government to starve the transferred departments, but it is true that this time they have adopted a different method. The present proposals are shaped in such a form as to make the Council swallow this fresh taxation. (But the fact is that this extra taxation is required not for the increased expenditure on the nation-building departments, but only to cover the deficit which is already there even if this increased expenditure is not undertaken.) For example it is admitted by the Government and the Chief Secretary has given us some figures to show that the revenue of this province does not expand and that it has been stationary for some years past. Now if it is stationary, how does it happen that in the ensuing year's budget we are to get 14 crores and 78 lakhs while for the last three years our revenue has been in the neighbourhood of 14 crores. From where are we to get these 75 lakhs more? Excluding the 13 or 14 lakhs due to change in the excise accounts, there remain 50 or 60 lakhs which must be accounted for. This excess is found under land revenue. It is said that the land revenue has been over-estimated; but I do not think so. It is likely that we may get 5,60 lakhs under land revenue in the coming year. What I say is that that is not the normal revenue in accordance with which we can frame our usual expenditure, 5,60 lakhs is not the normal income on which we can count every year from land revenue; and if we regulate our expenditure not by normal income but by abnormal receipts, our budget must be taken as a deficit budget. The Honourable the Finance Member has admitted in his speech presenting the budget of the year 1922-23 that our normal income from land revenue should be placed at 5 crores and from the figures of the last 6 or 7 years we arrive at the same average. So whether we receive during the next year 5,60 lakhs or 5,70 lakhs the normal revenue is 5 crores; and the deficit therefore, is not 40 lakhs but it is about 90 lakhs or a crore. Supposing the Council prefers to go without extra expenditure on education and other nation-building departments, are Government prepared to give up the taxation? Certainly not. (It is not a fact that they want it for the nation-building departments; they want it for the deficit. Education gets 15 or 20 lakhs more for the next year, and I might be inclined to congratulate the honourable the Minister, should he discover, on having secured 15 or 20 lakhs for expansion of education, 38 lakhs—I congratulate would be premature. For we all received from the type in his budget for 1923-24 made a provision of 16 provincial revenues for primary education, but as a matter of fact not a single farthing was spent from that amount. These figures are there on paper, but nothing would be spent out of them. For schemes of compulsory education will have to be prepared by local bodies and approved by Government. This will take unlimited time and the result will be that they will never be introduced and there will be very little expenditure on compulsory primary education. So though we are told that taxation is necessary for the increase of expenditure on the transferred departments we should bear this in mind that very little would be spent on those departments and that the money they would go to fill up the deficit or, worse still, to the reserved departments.) Last year it was pointed out in this House and I was one of those who did it that if we did not cut down some expenditure we should be faced with taxation next year, and that warning has come true. This year we are asked to sanction fresh taxation proposals and we do not know whether we may not be called upon to pass similar Acts in future. And supposing this money is spent on the nation-building departments as proposed what guarantee is there that next year a similar situation may not arise? The Act says that the reserved departments are to receive what they want first; so though these 41 lakhs may go to the transferred departments in the coming year, in the year following they may be eaten up by the reserved departments, and again we may be called upon to sanction extra expenditure if we did not want transferred departments to be starved. (The expenditure has swollen to a certain extent also in connection with recommendations of the Lee Commission. Of course we are told by the Honourable the Finance Member that this increase in the salary of the all-India Services was deemed necessary by an impartial tribunal in order to preserve their contentment, but he forgets that though their contentment might be preserved there would be very deep discontent amongst those who are the lowest paid among Government servants and who are not getting even a living wage. When therefore there are these two alternatives before Government whether to give a living wage to those that are included in the subordinate services or whether to increase the insufficient luxuries of the highly paid officers, I think they ought to choose the first alternative as it is the duty of every civilised Government to provide a living wage for its servants. But instead of that, what they are doing is this: they are increasing the luxuries of those who are drawing thousands every month, while they turn a deaf ear to those who do not even get a living wage. The Finance Member tells us that the increased provision for the superior services will only mean an increased percentage of 10 or 11, while the salaries of the subordinate services have been increased by 100 per cent. That is true, but these percentages are misleading. Now, for instance, we have increased the pay of primary teachers some little time back. That increase may come to 100 per cent. or even more, but that does not mean that the primary teacher is getting a living wage. On a further relief is proposed for a highly paid officer who was getting say 41 lakhs and now 81 lakhs extra by sanctioning an increase of only 10 or 20 per cent. for 41 lakhs extra by the Honourable friend from able to live from hand to mouth. (Now as a practical suggestion in the interest of retrenchment I propose that the Executive Councillorships and Ministerships should be abolished, and if this cannot be done under the Government of India Act, they should at least be reduced to a minimum. This is a serious suggestion I am making, and the reason for this is, why do we want so many Members or Ministers either to shape Government policy or to defend Government policy? So far as the shaping of policy is concerned, we know that there has been no shaping of policy for the last several years. For example, take the question of the separation of judicial and executive functions. A resolution to that effect was passed by this Council about three years ago, yet we know Government are not still able to shape any policy in this respect.) I was afraid that though the excise committee's report has been before the Excise Minister for the last twelve months or so the Minister might not announce any policy or goal and that he might take another two years to make up his mind. But this morning we were told by a resolution of Government that prohibition was to be the goal of the Government. Now, take the case of the Technical and Industrial Education Committee's report. The report was published two or three years ago, but the Education Minister could summon moral courage enough to say that the report was still under the consideration of Government. So also as regards the resolution which we passed in this Council regarding land revenue assessment. The second part of the resolution was given the go-by by the Government. So if there is to be no policy, and if Government practically do not shape any policy at all, why should we have so many Executive Councillors and Ministers? It may be contended that they are needed to defend Government policy. But we have instances of several resolutions carried by this House and subsequently shelved by Government. If resolutions are not to be carried out, why should Government try to defeat us? Whenever they defeat us, I see Government Members cheering. But I do not see why they should be so glad, when our success matters as little as our defeat! Because, there are resolutions, as I have already pointed out, which have been passed by the House but, which have not been given effect to by Government. It is unnecessary to defend Government policy, if it cannot in any way be affected by any resolutions of this House. The number of Government members may therefore safely be reduced to a minimum.)

[Mr. R. V. Kothari]

Now, with regard to Development Department, we always say that this department should be made a transferred one. There may be several reasons why Government do not accept the suggestion, but I think there is one special reason which has been overlooked. If this department is made a transferred department, may I ask what the second Indian Member is to do? We know the first Indian Member looks after the land revenue. The second Indian Member looks after the Development Department. Now take away the Development Department from the Executive Council and make it a transferred department, is not the Honourable Mr. Cowasji Jehangir will have no work left to the province, there are other departments such as Police, General

[Mr. V. R. Kothari]

Administration, Jails, Administration of Justice and so on. But those departments are not to be entrusted to the Indian Members of the Executive Council. From the very commencement of the reforms these departments have always been in charge of the European Members. The Honourable Sir Maurice Hayward has, for example, risen from the lowest position in the Executive Council to the highest, but he has always been in charge of the Police and the Judicial departments. He has to attend to several matters as the leader of this House and it is generally the practice not to burden the leader with too many departments; but Sir Maurice Hayward has been burdened with three departments. So also as regards the Finance Department. The duties of a Finance Member are very onerous, but he must be further burdened with the department of the General Administration. For these law and order departments are not to be given to Indian Members. Perhaps this is done to enable my honourable friend Mr. Cowasji Jehangir to protest with vehemence that there is absolute equality between Indians and Europeans under the reforms; or perhaps this is done because Government thinks that as this is the most advanced province in the country it should be treated in a worse manner than some of the backward provinces; because we know in other provinces the Indian Members have been entrusted with the administration of these departments. Or perhaps this may be a reflection on the capacity of the individual Indian Members concerned. I do not know whether it is so, but I hope some explanation will be forthcoming from the Government side as to why this is being done. When such is the state of things as between Indian and European members of the Executive Council there is no wonder that there should be no equality as between the Members and the Ministers. So far as the Members of the Executive Council are concerned, they sit in the order of official precedence, in the order of seniority. But as between the Members and the Ministers no importance is attached to seniority. For instance, take the case of my honourable friend Khan Bahadur Shiakh Ghulam Hussain. He is senior to two members of the Executive Council, but he has to occupy seat No. 5. If the Ministers are not able to fight for equality even in such small matters, I do not know how they can be relied upon to fight in big matters. I think this inequality ought to be removed and they ought to assert themselves in this small trifle if they want to convince us that they are treated as equals. With these remarks, Sir, I resume my seat.

Mr. G. WILES: Sir, as a member of one of those "monster" services to which my honourable friend opposite referred, I feel some nervousness in rising to address the House. I am encouraged to proceed by the belief that the honourable member will temporarily at any rate exempt the Finance Department from his strictures. Members of the House will have discovered, possibly not without some alarm, that we have given a considerable mass of further details in the Blue Book. We have added graphs and statements of expenditure and statement regarding our capital debts and capital expenditures.

[Mr. G. Wiles]

We have added a state from the cultivators' progress of irrigation in general and Sukkur Barrage out at about 500000. We do not pretend that the book is by any means perfect, and judging from the number of errors which have already been made by speakers I am convinced that the book is not by any means perfect. But I shall be very glad to receive any suggestions for the emendation or improvement of the book, and I certainly hope if any honourable members find any difficulty in understanding any point that they will come either to myself or the Deputy Secretary and we will give any information which is at our disposal.

Coming to details, Sir, there is one point I would like to make quite clear before I proceed, and that is the exclusion in this book from the development accounts of the loans which have been taken by local bodies in Bombay. We carried out this change, because it was felt that the inclusion of these figures in the development budget gave rise to considerable misunderstanding. They came to be included more or less by accident, in the first instance, in the development demands, because the Development Department being to a certain extent concerned with all matters affecting the development of Bombay, was entrusted with the scrutiny of the demands of the local bodies for loans. This was really no reason for including in the development budget the loans which are passed on to these bodies, and for that reason, they have been excluded from the development budget in the current year. The change, I am afraid, has already given rise to some misapprehension, as I will proceed to show.

My honourable friend the member from Bombay (Mr. Lalji Naranji) has, I regret to say, caused me profound disappointment by his remarks. We in the Finance Department look to business men to give us aid and help in the working out of our programme for the new year. We have met here as practical business men to try to make both ends meet, but I regret that we have not yet had a single constructive criticism. On the contrary, we have had given to the house a complete misunderstanding of our interest charges as affecting all branches of the administration. We are told, despite the full information I have given in the Blue Book, which has not apparently been read, that we are spending no less than 3 crores, are extracting from the poor cultivators no less than 3 crores, as interest. What are the facts? No consideration whatever has been given to the other side of the picture. We are spending 3 crores; we are receiving, how much? We owe to the Government of India for instance no less than over 2 crores in the provincial loan account; we are paying interest on it; that is included on one side. But we are receiving interest from the cultivators on the other side. No notice has been taken of that. We passed on to the local bodies in Bombay last year a very considerable sum. You will find it in the Blue Book: the interest is debited to Development Department. But nobody seems to have discovered, although it is written in black and white, that no less than 1,38 lakhs—I am speaking from memory—is the interest which is received from the local bodies in Bombay. That is not a burden on the provincial revenues whatever.

An Honourable MEMBER : ~~Minister of Justice~~ mentioned that.

Mr. G. WILES : It did not reach the Indian mind. The net demands, then, to which this Government is liable are a sum of Rs. 77 lakhs on account of Development Department and Rs. 70 lakhs for the other ordinary departments of Government. In dealing with this question, I think my honourable friend from Bombay also entirely missed the point of the interest charges both on account of the Development Department and the Sukkur Barrage. Both these works are, as I hope to show in greater detail presently, works for which interest charges have been, by the special permission of the Government of India and the Secretary of State, debited to capital. The reason for that is a perfectly good reason, namely, that we are expecting to meet all the direct charges on these works by receipts in the shape of capital receipts, which will not only meet the burden of capital that we borrow, but will pay the interest thereon.

I now come to the remarks of my honourable friend from Nasik (Mr Pradhan) who did some very extraordinary juggling, with our balances, a juggling which we should find invaluable in the Finance Department. He proceeded to show, by some extraordinary method that, although we had shown a deficit of Rs. 41 lakhs, we have really a balance in hand. There have been two lines of attack on our balances ; one is to say that we have not got one, and the other that it is much too big. Last year we were told that our balance was very largely made up of camouflaged figures ; that it was hopelessly swelled by the money which we took from the Government of India and put into our balances, in order to make them look big. I would like to deal with that first. I have somewhere among this mass of papers a complete statement showing the monthly balances, which have been worked out by the Auditor-General, of every province in India. As the House is aware, there are times of the year when there is little or no revenue coming in but a very large expenditure going out. These periods are a very considerable strain on the financial resources of the provincial Government. Bombay is one of the very few provinces in India which never at any time of the year has during the last few years had an adverse balance. Our balances have never fallen below a crore and two-thirds during 1922-23 or below 3 crores during last year. I might explain to the House that when we borrow money for capital expenditure, say Rs. 10 crores which we took last year, the whole of this sum is not immediately transferred to our balances. We take it in instalments as it is required. The sums which we pass on to the local bodies in Bombay do not appear in our balances at all ; they do not pass through our accounts. There are some times of the year, that is to say immediately after receiving some of these instalments, when our balances may be increased to some extent. But that is by no means the same thing as saying that our balances at any given time do not give a sure indication of our financial strength. At no time during these years has the monthly balance of loan money advances which we have taken from the Government of India (I exclude now the excess receipts over advances which we have received on account of takavi (from the cultivator) exceeded Rs. 50 lakhs and the average sum works out at about Rs. 25 lakhs. The balances which we show in our printed estimates contain a very small, if any percentage of loan funds, except on account of the Development Department, and that has always been shown separately in the accounts.

Now, the argument is advanced " Why should we maintain this very large balance ? Why should not we draw on that balance to meet some of the additional expenditure ? " One reason is that it would be a fatal policy to enter upon recurring expenditure without knowing where we are going to get the revenue from in the future to meet the expenditure. That would be a policy which would lead straight to bankruptcy. We cannot start an unproductive project, involving any recurring expenditure which should be met from revenue, without first seeing where the money is to come from. We are, I have explained in the Blue Book, drawing upon our balances to the extent of about Rs. 50 lakhs on account of capital expenditure. The balance of over Rs. 4 crores with which we hope to end the year is not by any means too large. It will contain about Rs. 150 lakhs on account of Famine Fund ; and it will contain about Rs. 20 lakhs on account of sinking fund and the assignment on account of Customs duties, which will have to be withdrawn from the balances at the end of the year, in order to be invested. We have not yet received the sanction of the Government of India to invest our sinking funds. That will leave us about 23 lakhs available for use in emergency. As has often been stated in this House, our sources of revenue are extremely precarious. The failure of the monsoon at any time may involve us in a vast deficit. Therefore it is essential that we should maintain a balance of at least 2 crores of rupees. This is not needed for famine relief ; we have the Famine Fund to meet that. But, as we should be losing our land revenue, it will be necessary to meet from the balances the ordinary current expenses of the administration. With regard to the additional saving in our balance, that is held in reserve to meet the instalment of payment of 29 lakhs to the Government of India on account of the loan account. We hope next year to earn interest on these big balances for the first time. The principle that interest shall be paid on the balances has already been accepted by the Government of India ; but as the Devolution Rules contain no provision for such payment, the question has been referred to the Secretary of State.

Mr. J. C. SWAMINARAYAN : What will be the rate of interest ?

Mr. G. WILES : The rate of interest will be 1 per cent. less than the rate at which the Government of India are able to raise loans in the market. The exact system under which we shall be able to obtain the interest has not been determined. Probably we shall have to place a definite sum in deposit.

There is one other point raised by the honourable member for Nasik, to which I should like to reply. He referred to the reserve of 15 lakhs with the Finance Department as an additional balance, and he also mentioned some strictures of the Auditor General. I should like to point out to the honourable member that those strictures of the Auditor

[Mr. G. Wiles]

General do not fully apply to our reserve, but to the retaining of a reserve under every major head for expenditure under that head. This would be a very uneconomical way of meeting expenditure which we cannot foresee at the time of the budget. This amount of 15 lakhs is a reserve with the Finance Department and not a balance. The reasons for such a reserve are given in the introductory note to the estimates for 1922-23 (Blue Book). I shall read out that portion :

“ The Finance Department will, in the first place, see that the expenditure is in accordance with the general wishes of Council and is only incurred without Council's prior consent in the event of a real emergency, and all grants will be immediately reported to the finance committee for their information. Where no such emergency arises, supplementary grants will be asked for in the usual way. It is absolutely essential, however, that some reserve should exist for the purposes of practical administration, and that in an emergency Government should be in a position to make provision without waiting for the next sessions.”

That promise which was made two years ago has been absolutely fulfilled. Whenever it has been found necessary to make any reappropriation we have come to you for a supplementary grant, or for a reappropriation from the reserve.....

Mr. R. G. PRADHAN : May I ask how much money had been kept as reserve during the past years ?

Mr. G. WILES : I shall try to give the figures as I remember them. I have had no time to obtain exact figures.

From the beginning it had been the practice to budget for 20 lakhs. I enquired into the expenditure that had been met in past years from this reserve and I found that expenditure to the extent of about 15 lakhs had annually been met from this reserve by way of reappropriation. Therefore we have reduced the provision from 20 lakhs to 15 lakhs. At that time a promise was made that 60 per cent. of this reserve would be for the transferred departments and 40 per cent. for the reserved departments. As a matter of fact the figures have never been less than 50 per cent. on account of the transferred departments. I am afraid I shall require some more time, Sir, to deal with our loan policy.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : The Honourable the Finance Member will include all these points in his final reply. There are 111 members and I cannot allow more than 20 minutes to any member. You have got three minutes more.

Mr. G. WILES : I should like to refer to one statement, which the honourable member for Bombay made with regard to the total debt. The figures are given on page 39 of the Blue Book. My honourable friend for Bombay included in his total the Bombay municipality, the Bombay Port Trust and the Bombay Improvement Trust. Excluding our pre-reform irrigation debt, of about 9 crores the interest on which is very low, about $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., the total Bombay Government debt at the end of next year will amount to about 24 crores, and not something over 50 crores, as declared by the honourable member. Twenty-four crores is the total debt which is a burden on this province. This includes expenditure up-to-date on the Sukkur Barrage and the Development Department. Our total debt on account of unproductive civil works amounted in March to 148 lakhs ; and about 90 lakhs will be added to this sum during the current year. We have, as I have explained in my introductory note, already established a sinking fund for these 24 crores, not only for that part of it which is productive—a very large part of it is productive—but also for the unproductive part of it.

Mr. H. D. SAHEBA (Ahmedabad District): Sir, in this budget the first department that one comes across is the Land Revenue department, and that is the department with which the masses that live in the villages are greatly concerned. The Honourable the Finance Member in his opening speech takes pride in the fact that Government have given so many lakhs of suspensions and remissions. Remissions are usually granted when for three years in succession the revenue is not collected : that means that during those three years, there was nothing from the cultivator to take. This Government is always treating persons with capital most leniently, and is looking with the most unkind eye towards the cultivators. Government holds that the assessment which the cultivator pays is the rent charged for cultivating the land. I think a great authority on the land revenue systems of British India—B. H. Baden-Powell—has stated that it is too late in the day to speak of land revenue as rent. It is simply revenue contributed by the cultivators towards the expenditure of the State. Therefore, there should never be suspension, but only remission. Under the existing system, when a certain year is bad the revenue for that year is suspended, but if it is followed by a normal year, then the suspended revenue is recovered from the cultivator in that year. This Government which prides itself as the ma-bap of the dumb and mute millions thinks it fair to recover double the ordinary revenue in a normal year that has followed a scarcity year and thus leaves no margin whatsoever to the cultivator. Now, look at the rich shop-keepers, who belong to the same profession as the race which governs them. These shop-keepers are treated most leniently. If they earn less than Rs. 2,000 a year they have got to pay nothing to the State ; and if they lose then nothing is recovered from them by way of income-tax. But what do we find in the case of the cultivator ? If the cultivator loses in a certain year, Government say to him : " This year's revenue is suspended ; pay it next year. If you lose for three years in succession, then you need not pay this year's revenue." But the second and third years' revenue will still be in arrears. In my district, the last two years were bad years ; and this year the only hope of the cultivator was the cotton crop. The kharif crop had already failed : it was only grass and nothing else. Then came the frost wave. But for the revenue-collecting authorities there is no frost. The land revenue demand still continues. The poor ryots had addressed petitions for relief to the Collector and to the Government. They had held up paying assessment in the hope that some relief would come to them. But what is the result ? They have been served with notices of demand, and a penalty of one rupee has been imposed for the issuing of notices. I have accidentally come to know that notices have been issued even for the payment of the second instalment which is falling due only in March. Because they waited to pay half the assessment in the hope that some relief would come to them as the result of petitions addressed to Government, they are to pay the two instalments together, and unless they meet the notices of demand, warrants would soon follow. I am an agriculturist and I know what are the difficulties of the agriculturists.

Khan Saheb A. M. MANSURI : You are a merchant.

Mr. H. D. SAHEBA : Now, it is only this year that Government have come to know that there are other classes of people inhabiting this country besides the poor agriculturists, namely, the middle class men who live in towns and cities, and who since the reforms have up to this time, contributed nothing to the State revenues. Prior to the reforms they might have contributed something ; but I do not know.

There is one other grievance of the agriculturists, namely, about the boundary marks. First notices have to be issued asking cultivators to repair their boundary marks ; and if the cultivators fail to repair them, the work is got done by contractors. The circle inspectors and talatis whose palms are greased by the contractors take care to see that the notice is not made public, and thus the cultivator does not know what he has to do. One day the contractor comes and begins to repair the boundary marks. He puts a basketful of earth here and a basketful there ; and nobody knows which boundary marks are repaired and which not. There ought to be a requisition on individual holders of land to repair particular boundary marks, and there ought to be a survey of the boundary marks, so that they might know which ought to be repaired and which not. There being no such arrangement at present, nobody knows which require repair and which not. Then, again, the contractors repair the boundary marks just before the monsoon. They throw a basketful of earth here and basketful there, and nobody knows which boundary marks are repaired and which not. Then the monsoon comes, and if the boundary marks are not of the proper size, the contractors say it is the rain that has washed away the marks, and they get from Government something like 6 to 12 annas. The Land Revenue Code says that a reasonable charge shall be levied for repair of boundary marks. That reasonable charge means 8 annas to the contractor and two rupees from the cultivator. Is that a reasonable charge ? So, at every turn the cultivator is fleeced. Whether it is a good year or a bad year he is fleeced. The contractor must be paid 8 annas and the cultivator must pay Rs. 2 to the Government.

So I think this great thing of boundary marks will be looked into by the sympathetic Honourable Member in charge of Land Revenue. If he will look into the matter, I am sure that he will be satisfied that there is a real grievance as regards these boundary marks.

Then, there is another item, namely, the special police under the special police establishment; for example the charge about the Kathiawar and the agency police has been eliminated from this year because the Government of India have taken up the Kathiawar Agency under their charge. But the tribute which the Bombay Government collected from the Kathiawar princes has been paid since the inauguration of the reforms to the Government of India and we have paid the police charges all these years and that, therefore, this would be a legitimate claim for recovery from the Central Government. (Government Benches : Hear, hear.) This charge will come to about 15 lakhs of rupees. We ought to have this police charge from the Government of India.

Then there is one thing more. There is one unproductive canal, namely, Khari-cut Canal. It is on the unproductive list. If the flood water of the Sabarmati which runs to waste were to be taken from the village of Kotarpur, a small canal dug up to Naroda and water is thrown in the Khari-cut canal, it would be a productive work and the strengthening of the Khari-cut canal and its banks and other charges would amount to about 3 lakhs of rupees and the whole work would be productive, and in that case cultivators will not have to wait for water because the policy adopted by the Irrigation Department in our district is to serve as many cultivators as possible and to take revenue from them but not to supply sufficient water to them.

Then, there is one other thing, namely, the cattle-breeding farms and the expenditure made on them. Of what use are these cattle-breeding farms if the revenue authorities do not allow sufficient gurcharan lands to villagers. They have confounded gurcharan lands with gaathan lands. Therefore, this policy of allowing cultivation to increase must be stopped if the cattle are to be improved. They must have sufficient grazing space.

Then, there is another thing, namely, the village of Vatwa. It is a village which has been, under some old arrangements, leased to a contractor. The cultivators and landlords have to pay 3 annas in a rupee more as assessment to the contractor in the Ahmedabad district. If the assessment is 1 rupee they have to pay 19 annas to those to whom it is leased. Now that lease has terminated and yet it is going to be continued. There are only 50 acres of waste land in that village including small ponds and such other things. These are Kharaba lands and the poor people living in the villages there are charged grazing fees.

Khan Saheb A. M. MANSURI : Is it contract land or inam land ?

Mr. H. D. SAHEBA : It is on lease and the lease has terminated now, that is my information. It is only 50 bighas of land and yet grazing fees are charged. Not only that but that even on the assessed land the fees are charged and the inamdar also realises revenue from these lands which are given on assessment by taking fees from roving shepherds. Now there is one thing ; my honourable friend, Mr. Swaminarayan, characterised Government as a machine that has got no heart. I think Government has got a heart, but that it is not for animate objects like the poor people living in the villages, but it is for inanimate objects like the Turf Club. See the solicitude of this Government. Because the finances of the Turf Club are in straitened circumstances and as it has to incur some capital expenditure, Government want to delay their taxation, but if the poor cultivators' finances are not in a proper condition, they do not think it proper to delay their revenue demand, but they say that they ought to have their pound of flesh and they want nothing more nor less.

Mr. S. T. KAMBLI (Dharwar District) : Sir, Government is indeed entitled to its full share of credit for projecting, and having undertaken, the vast schemes of irrigation and development for Sind, Gujarat, Deccan and Bombay ; and, I am quite sure, that, when these schemes are completed, they will contribute to the increased health, happiness and prosperity of the people that will derive benefit from them. But, Sir, when I come to think of that portion of the Presidency from which I come, when I consider the deplorable condition of the unfortunate Karnatak, I am overcome by a feeling of utter discontent and deep disappointment. There is not a single development project or any irrigation scheme, either planned or intended to be shortly undertaken for any portion of the Bombay Karnatak. The Karnatak is mainly an agricultural country. It possesses indeed rich and valuable soil, but it is too much or entirely dependent on the vagaries of the monsoon ; and not a single year elapses, without some portion or other of this valuable country being subjected to the horrors of famine. This unfortunate Karnatak has been incessantly crying for schemes of irrigation from a long time past. I am sorry to find that this Government is viewing the needs and grievances of the Karnatak with extreme indifference and surprising apathy. The people of Karnatak have come to regard themselves as mere hewers of wood and drawers of water, to supply the needs of the other people of the Presidency. They are led to believe that Government thinks that the Karnatak exists only for filling the coffers of Government. Sir, the Karnatak forms no inconsiderable portion of this Presidency. Karnatak comprises the four districts of Dharwar, Bijapur, Belgaum and Kanara, with its rich and valuable forests. It contains a population which is equal to nearly one-sixth of the whole population of the Presidency. It contributes to the State exchequer a revenue which is not less than one-sixth of the revenues of the whole of the Presidency. With all this, their grievances are not attended to. There is a great feeling of despair among the people and this feeling has grown to such an extent that the leaders of the Karnatak have formed themselves into an Association to agitate and to break away from this Bombay Presidency and to agitate to have a separate province for all the Kanarese speaking people of this Presidency as well as of the Madras Presidency. That shows the depth of discontent which prevails in the Karnatak. Sir, it is not that there are no means for removing the grievances of the Karnatak. There are several rivers intersecting the country. The Krishna, the Wardha, the Ghataprabha and the Malaprabha intersect the various parts of the Bombay Karnatak. Not only that, there is a big river, the Tungabhadra, which serves both Madras and Bombay. The sister Presidency of Madras has projected a plan for constructing or putting a gigantic dam across the river Tungabhadra to irrigate its own districts, while the Bombay Government is sitting with its arms folded ; and even when its attention was drawn to this fact by me by means of an interpellation last year, it seems that they have devoted, as yet, no attention to this important matter. Therefore, I appeal to the Government to take these grievances into consideration and to have irrigation schemes for irrigating the rich and valuable lands which, when irrigated, will not only remove the grievances of the people but will contribute to their prosperity and will finally end in making them capable of giving more revenue to the State exchequer.

There is another grievance of this Karnatak. Though there is a college at Bombay for teaching medicine to the youth of this Presidency town and though there are several schools for teaching medicine in different divisions of the Presidency, I think I am justified in saying that this Bombay Karnatak is the only one division in which there is not even a medical school for training the youth of that country in medicine. They have to go nearly 300 or 400 miles, either to Poona or Bombay for this purpose. This is an anomaly and a blot which I wish to bring to the notice of Government and I hope they will soon establish a medical school in one of the districts of the Karnatak.

Then, Sir, coming to the question of forests. I admit that the Kanara forests are indeed rich and valuable. The Forest Department is always lavish in its praise of the rich mine of forests of Kanara, but one thing is to be noticed. Though Kanara forests are situated in the Karnatak, still the people there cannot get fuel cheap. They cannot get timber cheap and even the Government of Bombay were obliged to import timber from foreign countries for their Development Department. What is the reason of all this? Looking to the budget figures, we find that out of an income from the Forests, of 74 lakhs 48 lakhs or nearly so are to be put in for expenditure in the Forest Department. That shows the Forest Department is not run on commercial lines as our Honourable Minister for Forests is always proud or fond of saying. I am obliged to repeat, Sir, that the Forest Department is not run on commercial lines or principles but on lavish principles and on an extravagant scale of expenditure. Otherwise people should have got timber at tolerably cheap rates and fuel also at tolerably cheap rates. Although our forests contain valuable and various kinds of timber, the poor and middle classes cannot afford to pay for timber for building their houses. The reason is that the forest administration is carried on with a very lavish expenditure and requires a thorough overhauling. If people near the forests cannot get timber cheap and fuel cheap, what is the use of having such a spendthrift and extravagant administration? The Government says that the forests are expected to bring in crores of rupees of income in years to come. This sort of statement is made from time to time, but at least it appears to me that such a millenium is not likely to arrive at all under such a costly and spendthrift administration. If one cares to go through the forest budgets, one will find in the statements presented that the Forest Department is very indifferent or extravagant in expending money and is giving only a certain small margin to the general revenues. Whatever the gross income from the forests may be, the Forest Department never has given more than thirty lakhs to the general revenues. Take any year within the last 10 or 15 years, take the year when the revenue went up to 90 lakhs, the Forest Department spent 60 lakhs; take the year when the revenue was 60 lakhs, they spent 30 to 40 lakhs, and so on. It seems to be one of the whims of the Forest Department not to give more than 30 lakhs to the general revenues of the Presidency and to expend every rupee over the 30 lakhs however high the gross revenues may be.

Sir, I now come to the Excise Department. The Excise Department maintains a vast army of inspectors and assistant inspectors. Looking to the number of shops, that are situated in various parts of the Presidency, looking to the number of visits that the inspectors and their assistants are expected to pay to the various shops, looking to the time they spent in those shops, I beg to submit that the present establishment is a little bit too large. Taking the figure of nearly 5,000 for the total number of toddy and liquor shops and taking into consideration the total number of inspectors and assistant inspectors and looking to the fact that they are expected to visit the various shops only once in a month and taking into consideration the fact that they spend only five or ten minutes in each shop, and looking to the fact that they are given an area more or less compact to control, I submit that this large army stands in sore need of reduction.

Sir, in conclusion I again appeal to the Government to remove the grievances of the Karnatak by undertaking irrigation schemes and by establishing ere long a medical school in one of the four districts of the Karnatak.

There is one thing which I beg to mention. That is the recent resolution of the Bombay Government with regard to the recruitment of non-Brahmins. I express my thanks to Government for having issued that long-delayed resolution. I hope that that resolution will be carried out not only in its spirit but in the letter by the various departments concerned and I hope that the same principle will be applied in the appointments to the higher posts.

Mr. F. G. PRATT: Mr. President, I want to refer to two or three statements that were made by my honourable friend the member for Ahmedabad District (Mr. Saheba) in the course of his speech. The first of these was a grievance of the agriculturists about boundary marks. He complained that it was a hardship to the agriculturists that these boundary marks are put in order and repaired by contractors. That is a hardship which is very easy for them to escape, by repairing their own boundary marks themselves. I understood my honourable friend to make the astonishing statement that the agriculturists do not know which boundary marks were out of repair. The agriculturists, I suppose, know the boundaries of their own fields. When the cultivating season approaches, they do not enquire of somebody else as to what are the limits of their fields. They know where the boundary marks ought to be, and so it is quite easy for them to repair the boundary marks for themselves. It is a matter of ten minutes' work. If, after notice has been given to them by the revenue subordinates that their boundary marks have fallen into disrepair and are disappearing, they do not take the trouble to repair them themselves, then of course we have to do it for them, because, as my honourable friend probably is not unaware, boundary marks are of very great value and use to the agriculturists, and the proper maintenance of boundary marks forms a very important part of our revenue system. It hardly needs wasting any words about it. It is a system which prevents anybody from encroaching upon his neighbour's land, and it is a very important system in the preservation of title. That is my answer to that complaint. There is no real grievance, and even if by accident an over-charge or a wrong charge is made, it is quite easy for the person aggrieved to represent his case, and then it would be attended to by the Collector of the district or the mamlatdar.

Another point which he spoke about was about a particular village which I understood him to say (I wish he was here to hear my explanation about it) was leased out, I was astonished to hear, to a contractor. Now, there is really no excuse for that statement. The village is within easy reach of Ahmedabad which I have known well for about 30 years. I know the young lad—a minor it is true—who is the existing inamdar of the village, and I have known his father ever since the famine of 1899. The proprietor of that village whom my honourable friend described as a contractor is a Mahomedan Sayed inamdar, with a pedigree which goes back 400 to 500 years up to the time of the Delhi Emperors. He has got *firman*s going back to that time. The village is to a great extent a proprietary village, as my honourable friend ought to know if he took the least trouble to verify the facts instead of listening to the gossip which he has retailed to this House. It is a proprietary village, and the cultivators pay rents which amount to 3 annas in the rupee more than the assessed land revenue. As anybody knows who is at all conversant with rural conditions, this is a trifling rent when compared with the rents which are levied by other talukdars and inamdars up and down Gujarat and in other parts of the Presidency. When a statement of this kind comes from a gentleman who lives in Ahmedabad, it makes me feel extremely sorry that the House was misled by ill-informed gossip and criticism of this kind.

As to the statement of the honourable member that all over the Ahmedabad district the kharif crops were a total failure and produced nothing but grass, that needs no comment except that it shows the extraordinary ignorance of the honourable member about facts which are very well known in Gujarat.

Mr. B. R. NANAL (Ratnagiri District): Sir, I find myself entirely unable to accept the budget which has been placed before the House by the Honourable the Finance Member. I do not say that it is a bad budget; at the same time, I am not prepared to say that it is a good budget either. The budget outlines certain proposals for additional taxation. Now, it is not because the budget contains proposals of that kind that I say it is not a good budget. I know that additional taxation may to a certain extent be necessary and may have to be levied, but that will come only when it is successfully established by Government that all other resources have failed. What we have to see in the present case is whether that has been demonstrated as a fact by the Honourable the Finance Member. Now, I look upon this budget from two standpoints. One is that of the general taxpayer of the Presidency ; the other, I may say, is a parochial standpoint, namely, of the taxpayer in the district which I represent in this Council, namely, Ratnagiri.

As regards the general standpoint, I may say at once that I am entirely dissatisfied with this budget, whether we take its revenue side or its expenditure side. When we take the revenue side, we find three items of which the revenue of this Presidency is mainly composed. These three items are land revenue, Excise revenue, and revenue from Stamps. As regards excise revenue, I am sorry to see that in this year's budget there is actually a rise in that revenue over last year's level. Whatever this rise may be due to, I say, and say it emphatically, that so long as a pie on account of excise revenue is found in the budget, our budget is disfigured to that extent. No excise revenue ought to find a place in the budget of this presidency, and Government must be prepared for the event when this excise revenue is entirely abolished.

Then, as regards land revenue, I may say that it is already very high. The view held, in this part of the House at any rate, is that the policy by which Government ought to be guided in the matter of land revenue should be that of permanent settlement. I know that the question of permanent settlement is a highly controversial one, and can be argued on both sides. But even apart from that question, however, I warn Government that the present level of land revenue is the highest that can be reached, and it is no use, whether there are Council resolutions or not to block the Government in the matter of revision settlements, looking on land revenue in the future as an expanding source of revenue.

Then there remains the revenue from stamps. That source of revenue admits of adjustment. That adjustment can only be carried to a certain extent and not further. This adjustment can take place only in relation to the taxable capacity of the people. Whether the highest level as regards the taxable capacity in the matter of stamps has not been reached is a question which again has to be considered. From the remarks I have made so far honourable members will see that the three main items of revenue upon which this presidency has been dependent up to this time have, now at least, become precarious. If the expansion of the normal activities of Government is to depend on the expansion of revenue on these three items then we had better not look for any expansion at all not merely in the immediate future but at any time in the future. Now, I may be asked if that is the view I take with regard to the revenue side of the budget, how is it that I expect the activities of Government, which I admit ought to expand, to be financed in the future. My answer is that the resources of the Presidency have been fully exploited and we cannot at this stage resort to additional taxation for finding money for the normal expansion of the beneficent activities of Government. Now what is it that justifies the view that I have placed before honourable members for their consideration? I say that we have reached a stage at which the establishments should be cut down by one-half. It may rather appear to be a revolutionary proposal to Government benches. I say there is nothing revolutionary about my proposal. It is a perfectly practical proposition, if the Government set about it in the right way. The proposition does contain an element of revolution; but it is only in the mode, not in the end. No revolution can be carried out in a day. Therefore, a beginning must be made in right earnest and, if that beginning is made, and if the Government demonstrate their sincerity in that way, then they can come before this House with proposals for additional taxation. Then the House will at any rate be prepared to consider the proposals. When I say that the establishments should be cut down, I mean from the top to the bottom. How that can be achieved cannot be explained in the space of a few minutes, but I would take up one or two departments for illustration.

In preference I will take the Judicial Department. I say, Sir, that our normal judicial activities can be carried on with half of the number of the staff, both superior and inferior, if Government repose trust in the people and entrust them with powers. Now the reform in this direction must begin with the village. We have got Village Panchayats Act. What is that Act? In the first place, it is voluntary, but it should be made compulsory for every village or group of villages. In order that Government may be able to introduce compulsion, it will be necessary that these panchayats should be invested with criminal as well as civil powers to a limited extent so as to make the institution popular. In that event a large volume of work which normally goes to the magistracy and subordinate judiciary will be taken away from them. Then we can safely cut down the number of courts both civil and criminal that we now maintain to half. Another avenue which can be safely explored is that of creating honorary sub-judges and district judges, and even, if I may say so, honorary High Court Judges. We have in the country abundant judicial talent going to rust. If proper efforts are made, a large number of gentlemen with judicial talents would be prepared to place a portion of their time at the service of the motherland. There is a large number of gentlemen, some of whom have put in judicial service under Government and still possess energy and inclination to devote a portion of their time to the service of their country, and others who have received full judicial training but have never entered Government service. If Government are prepared to trust them, they would be willing to serve as honorary subordinate and district judges.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : Honorary bar ?

Mr. B. R. NANAL : Honorary bar, too, Sir. Why not? From what I know of other countries, it is because honorary gentlemen like these are utilised in the administration of the country, the cost of administration happens to be comparatively cheap.

Next, I shall take up another department, the Police. I find from the budget that this department consumes something like one crore and 77 lakhs. The expenditure on this department has more than doubled during the last 10 years. We all want security of life and security of property. I do not want to abolish the police altogether. There are many gentlemen in the force who are good public servants and are discharging their duties at the risk of their lives. But the question for consideration is whether it is necessary at all to maintain such a big police establishment. Here again trust is necessary. Issue licenses for arms liberally and then you will find that you need not recruit and maintain such a big police force for the security of life and property. The question of the policy underlying the Arms Act or the rules framed thereunder cannot be discussed on the floor of this House; but Government can certainly issue instructions to their officers to issue licenses to the utmost extent permissible under the provisions of the Arms Act or its rules. In this connection, I may say that it was mentioned to me in my district that in issuing licenses the authorities impose a condition that the licensees should kill either three wild pigs or six other wild animals as a necessary condition. If that condition is not fulfilled, the license becomes liable to forfeiture. Why impose conditions of this kind? I do not know whether the rules justify or allow the imposition of a condition like this. But supposing they do, it is not necessary that conditions like these should be imposed on the licensees. If licenses are issued freely and if people are trusted freely, they certainly would do away with the necessity of keeping half the police force which we have to maintain at present.

I have mentioned one or two instances in which establishments admit of being cut down. I said they might be cut down to "one-half" that may or may not be justified as a result of investigation. But I say that this investigation should be held by Government, and Government must explore every source of this kind before they come before this House to ask for additional taxation. If after exploring all these lines, after carrying out all possible retrenchment, Government come before this House and ask for a vote of 20 crores, I suppose even that 20 crores for the expansion of the nation-building departments would be voted. Members of Government are not expected to contribute to the needs of the nation from their own private resources. As the activities are meant for the benefit of the nation, the nation must find the money. But Government must, first of all, convince the nation, or its representatives, that every farthing that has been voted has been properly applied. And I say that from this point of view the budget carries no conviction whatever to the nation that the resources already placed at the disposal of the Government have been properly administered. And I hold that until that conviction is brought to the minds of the honourable members on this side, they shall not vote a penny in addition to the resources which Government already possess. So far with regard to the general budget.

Now, I wish to say a word or two with regard to the parochial side, namely, that of my district. My district is the poorest of all. That is well known to every honourable member. It labours under the greatest disadvantages. There is only one highway running from north to south throughout the district, and even this highway is intersected in a thousand places by rivers, large and small. As soon as June comes on, these nallas and rivers get swollen and all communication is blocked. If we take Ratnagiri, the headquarters of my district, as soon as you go to the 14th mile on the Sangameshwar road, you are stopped : no vehicle of any kind after 10th June can pass across those rivers. I do find in this year's budget a provision made for a bridge over the first river that we meet, namely, the Bav, and so far I do congratulate the Honourable Minister on the inclusion of that item in the budget. But I may tell him at the same time that this inclusion is a mere flea-bite : it does not remove our grievances even a hundredth or a thousandth part. Take the other side, namely, the Ratnagiri-Rajapur road. At the 18th mile from Ratnagiri we meet a river ; then after a few miles we meet a second river. Both the rivers get swollen and are impassable after 10th June.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : The honourable member's time is up.

Mr. V. A. SURVE (Ratnagiri District) (addressed the House in Marathi) : Mr. President, the budget for the present year means the one for the year 1925-26. On comparing the figures of this budget with those for the year 1924-25, every one has come to realise, at the time of reading the budget, that while the budget for the year 1924-25 amounted to nearly fifteen crores, this year, the budget has exceeded that amount by one crore. It is claimed that the reason for this (excess) is that Government are paying more attention, this year, to the comforts and the conveniences of the people. I am not in the habit of making calculations on the tips of my fingers but I can easily show to the Council, from my experience in the Ratnagiri District what big amounts have been allotted towards works of public utility in the statement of accounts for the year 1924-25. There are over thirteen hundred villages in the Ratnagiri district and many of them experience scarcity of water from March to July. A question was sent in the matter for being asked in the Legislative Council. The Honourable Mr. Jadhav, Minister of Education, gave a reply to it on the 20th February 1925 as follows :—

“We are making inquiries in the matter of water (supply).”

The information regarding the removal of hardships of people due to scarcity of water in one district could not be secured in one year. From this it becomes evident that there is no reason to make any special mention of the solicitude felt by the Executive Council of the Government of Bombay for the public welfare. The next important matter that requires to be told is that the Executive Council has given, for the public welfare for the scarcity of water to the Ratnagiri district Rs. 1,316 for 1,300 villages in two years. This matter has been communicated by them to me (personally) in this way. On the 22nd October 1924 I wrote to the Honourable Khan Bahadur Shaikh Ghulam Hussain to sanction Rs. 33,000 only for the provision of water supply in the

[Mr. V. A. Surve]

Ratnagiri District. I received a reply No. 24291/11741-D with an accompaniment which gives a statement of the sums allotted in two years. On looking to that sum and the number of villages in the district, every village gets eight annas for water supply for one year. What solicitude for public welfare this is : That the Government which takes, at least, Rs. 9,50,000 per year from the Ratnagiri district by way of land revenue, should give through its Executive Council the liberal sum of eight annas, per village, for the supply of water that saves the lives of the people, is an indication of their solicitude and reflects credit upon them. Perhaps some will point the finger to the local boards. But the local boards do not realise land revenue and the officials should not lose sight of the fact that Government have existed long before the local boards came into being.

This is the fourth session of the Council. Some question or other about the removal of the grievances of agriculturists in every district of the Bombay Presidency is before the Council and when the Executive Council is so well disposed towards the agriculturists what good can come to them ?

Some persons from every village in my district seek the shelter of a city like Bombay owing to the scarcity of water. The money that is secured from my district does not seem to have been expended for the benefit of the people of that district but if it is expended at all, it may be for the use of those who draw fat salaries or for supplying electric lights in a city like Bombay. This is of no use to us. Our agriculturists work as peons on Rs. 10 but they have to work for 18 hours. The agriculturists do hard labour, on half rations, in the police department, the clerical staff and the military department and you have been imposing all sorts of taxes, at any time you like, on the agriculturists, in an indirect manner, for the sake of those who draw fat salaries, and all sorts of allowances and enjoy the cream (of life) to their hearts' content. Not a single river in the Ratnagiri district possesses a bridge. It is being bruited about throughout the district for the last twenty years that new plans and estimates are being prepared every month, and sent to the Executive Council of the Government of Bombay. If this be true then perhaps ten thousand rupees might have been spent on stationery. I have to make a suggestion to this Council that no single member of the Council should vote in favour of any of the bills that have been framed to enhance the tax by forty-two lakhs and that will be placed before them. It would not be proper for the members, who sympathise with the public and who feel that these bills affect the welfare of the agricultural and working classes, to vote in favour of these bills. But those members whose livelihood depends upon attending the Council or who cannot make a living without doing things detrimental to the public weal may vote in favour of these bills. I have to say this much only.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : The Council will now adjourn to 2 o'clock to-morrow, Tuesday, the 24th February 1925.

Tuesday, the 24th February 1925.

The Council re-assembled at the Town Hall, Bombay, at 2 p.m. on Tuesday, the 24th February 1925, the Honourable Sir IBRAHIM RAHIMTOOLA, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., presiding.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Order, order. Questions.

-TRAINING COLLEGE CERTIFICATE.

* Mr. S. N. ANGADI (Belgaum District) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether there is a departmental rule in the educational department applicable to primary schools' teachers, which says that teachers who have passed the vernacular final examination and have put in 10 years' service should be accorded first year's training college certificate ?

(b) If so, how many of such teachers in the Belgaum, Dharwar, Bijapur and Karwar districts have been given such certificates ?

(c) Amongst those who have been given such certificates, how many are Brahmins and how many are non-Brahmins ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : (a) This part has already been answered.

(b) and (c) The following table gives the number of holders of such certificates on 31st March 1923 in the districts specified, and the number of Brahmins and non-Brahmins (Hindus) included therein :—

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

BREEDING OF HORSES.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR (Poona City): Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) Whether it is a fact that they used to breed horses in this presidency formerly?

(b) If so, is it a fact that such breeding has been discontinued, and if so, what are the reasons therefor, and what is the total retrenchment effected thereby?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN:

(a) Yes.

(b) The operations were discontinued as they served no useful purpose. Owing to the advent of the motor car the demand for good horses and ponies has slackened and consequently horse breeders have lost all interest in the industry. The district local boards, which desired to carry on the operations unaided, were however given some of the Government stallions, free of charge. A copy of Government Resolution No. 9274 dated 22nd October 1923 sanctioning the discontinuance of the operations was placed on the Council table. The total amount retrenched was Rs. 16,000 per annum.

Mr. S. K. BOLE: May I know why, if the horse-breeding operations were discontinued as they served no useful purpose, the races are allowed to be continued?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN: I do not think the races have any connection with the present question.

Mr. S. K. BOLE: It is said that the races are allowed to be continued, because one of the objects of races is horse-breeding.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN: These operations were discontinued in pursuance of the recommendations of the Retrenchment Committee, and it was also found that they did not serve any useful purpose. Those were the reasons. There is absolutely no connection between the continuance of horse races and breeding of horses by Government.

TRAINING COLLEGES FOR WOMEN.

* Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR (Poona City): Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) how many Government and private training colleges for women are in existence in the Presidency? What are their names and where are they located?

(b) What is the number of students undergoing training in such Government Colleges? What is the annual expense incurred by Government on each of such colleges?

(c) Is it a fact that the students in all such colleges, both Government and private, are examined entirely by teachers in the Training College for Women at Poona?

* This question was asked at the meeting held in July 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

(d) If so, is it a fact that there are teachers in other colleges of higher qualifications ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : (a) and (b) The accompanying statement* gives the information required.

(c) and (d) The answer to (c) is in the negative.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR : Are teachers or professors in private institutions appointed as examiners at the annual examinations ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : I shall be glad to answer the question if notice is given.

FODDER FAMINE IN SATARA.

Khan Bahadur D. B. COOPER (Satara District) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they are aware that there is an acute fodder famine in the Satara district this year ?

(b) Do Government intend to take any step independently of other agencies to avert such a calamity in the future ; if so, what do they intend to do ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : (a) The recent rain has removed all anxiety about fodder and the supply is reported to be sufficient in the whole of the district.

(b) The question of storage of Kadbi against famine is engaging the attention of Government.

Mr. R. G. SOMAN : Is it not a fact that the eastern talukas of the district still suffer from fodder famine ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : That is not the report made to us by the local officers.

NEW TODDY SHOP AT AMARGOL.

Dr. K. E. DADACHANJI (Bombay City, South) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the Collector of Dharwar has permitted the opening of a new toddy shop in the village of Amargol ?

(b) Is it a fact that the license for the shop in question has been granted without any auction sale having been held for Rs. 1,000 to the country liquor licensee of Dharwar ?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI : Yes. As there was local demand for toddy in preference to country liquor the Collector of Dharwar sanctioned the opening of a toddy shop at Amargol in place of the liquor shop as an experimental measure for a period of one year. The shop was given out without auction on payment of a fee of Rs. 1,000 as it is only temporary.

Dr. K. E. DADACHANJI : What sort of experiment was the department going to conduct ?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI : Whether that shop was a real necessity and the other shop that was discontinued was not wanted there.

Dr. K. E. DADACHANJI: What was the experiment going to be tried there at Amargol by changing the liquor shop into a toddy shop?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: If the toddy shop would serve the purpose of the people much better than the liquor shop, which would then be done away with.

Dr. K. E. DADACHANJI: Why is it called a temporary measure?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: To find out whether it is wanted or not after a year.

Dr. K. E. DADACHANJI: Is Rs. 1,000 the usual fee for a toddy shop there?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: I must have notice of that question.

Dr. K. E. DADACHANJI: Why was an auction not held there for the shop?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: Because there was no special demand by another. This gentleman gave Rs. 1,000, and that was considered by the Collector to be a sufficient fee, and accordingly the shop was handed over to the man.

Dr. K. E. DADACHANJI: Is it not the practice there to give these shops by auctions only?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: Yes, auctions are also held.

Mr. P. G. JOSHI: Is this shop being discontinued next year?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: It will be discontinued, if it is proved that the shop is not wanted there.

Mr. V. N. JOG: Is it not a fact that the shop has already been closed?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: I am not aware of it.

MANUFACTURE OF FOREIGN LIQUORS.

Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI (Kaira District): Will Government be pleased to state whether they have received an application from the Alembic Chemical Works to the effect that the "foreign liquors" manufactured by them may be charged at the excise rates instead of at the tariff rates?

If so, will they be pleased to state what steps have been taken by them in this connection and in connection with other "foreign liquors" manufactured in this Presidency?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: Yes. The application is under consideration. As regards the concluding portion of the question the honourable member for Kaira district is referred to the reply to question No. 2 asked by him.

RATE OF DUTY CHARGED ON FOREIGN LIQUOR.

Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI (Kaira District): (1) Will Government be pleased to state the rate of duty charged per proof gallon on liquors imported from foreign countries outside India and the rate of duty charged per proof gallon on "foreign liquors" manufactured within this Presidency?

(2) If the rate in both the cases is the same, will Government be pleased to state the reason for making no differentiation between the two?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: (1) For the rates of duty charged on liquors imported from countries outside India the honourable member for Kaira District is referred to items 7 to 12 in the Notification of the Government of India, Commerce Department, No. 73 T. of 22nd December 1923 republished at pages 3027 to 3043 of Part I of the Bombay Government Gazette Extraordinary dated the 28th idem. Subject to the exceptions mentioned below excise duty at the same rates is levied on foreign liquors manufactured in this Presidency:—

- (a) The duty on spirit contained in medicinal and toilet preparations manufactured in the Bombay Presidency and Indian States within its geographical limits (including Baroda) has been reduced to Rs. 5 per proof gallon.
- (b) No duty is leviable in the Bombay Presidency on denatured spirit manufactured in British India or in any Indian State.
- (c) Indian-made rectified spirit used for industrial purposes and for teaching and research purposes in educational institutions is exempt from duty, subject to certain conditions.

(2) The attention of the honourable member is invited to paragraph 109 of the report of the Indian Excise Committee (1905-06). The price of country spirit properly so called is now very high owing to the increase in still-head duty and high vend fees and cost of manufacture and competition between this spirit and Indian-made liquors excised as foreign is undesirable.

The question of reducing the rates of duty on certain varieties of Indian-made foreign liquors is under the consideration of Government.

TECHNICAL SCHOLARSHIPS.

Mr. S. S. DEV (West Khandesh District): Will Government be pleased to state—

- (a) How many candidates applied this year through the Bombay Government for the Government of India state technical scholarship?
- (b) What were the qualifications of each of those candidates?
- (c) Were there any among them who had had practical knowledge of the subjects which they wanted to study and if so, which of them?
- (d) Which of them were recommended by the Bombay Government?
- (e) To whom has ultimately the scholarship been awarded?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: (a) All state scholarships are now granted by this Government in accordance with the Reformed Constitution.

(b) and (c) The requisite information will be found in the accompanying list* of applicants for the state technical scholarship.

(d) and (e) The state technical scholarship was awarded to Mr. R. G. Pradhan (No. 70 in the list) by this Government.

* Kept in the Secretary's office.

PROSECUTION OF THE PROPRIETORS OF THE "SAMACHAR" FOR RUNNING A PRIZE SCHEME.

* Dr. M. M. MEHTA on behalf of Dr. M. K. DIXIT (Surat District):
(a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they are aware that the Samachar, a newspaper published at Surat, published a scheme entitled "Extraordinary prize competition" (अपूर्व इनामी हरिपाई) on the 7th August 1923; and that the proprietors of the paper were prosecuted and punished under section 294-A, Indian Penal Code, for doing so?

(b) Are Government aware of the fact that the "Times of India" Prize Scheme was being published at the very time when the "Samachar" was being so prosecuted?

(c) Was any warning given to the proprietors of the "Samachar" before launching a prosecution against them?

(d) Will Government state the amount of the fees paid to the Government Pleader, Surat, for conducting the prosecution in the several lottery cases during the years 1923 and 1924 (up to August) at Surat, and how much fine has been realised in these cases?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: (a) and (b) Government learn that the proprietors were fined Rs. 75 each on the 12th February 1924.

(c) They were not previously warned.

(d) Fees Rs. 310. Fines Rs. 287.

POLITICAL PRISONERS.

Mr. HOOSEINBHOY A. LALLJEE on behalf of HAJI ABDULLAH HAROON (Karachi City): Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) How many political prisoners, i.e., prisoners convicted under sections 124-A, Indian Penal Code, or imprisoned under proceedings initiated under section 108 of the Criminal Procedure Code in connection with political activities, and belonging to Sind and Bombay Presidency respectively, were in different jails of the Presidency on 31st August 1924?

(b) What were their names, the name of the jail in which each was confined and the kind of imprisonment to which each of them was subjected?

(c) Which of the aforesaid prisoners were placed in a separate division in accordance with Government orders issued on 15th February 1923?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: (a) Fourteen.

(b) The required information will be found in the statement† laid on the table.

(c) No. 5 in the statement.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in July 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

† Vide Appendix 24.

ALLEGATIONS AGAINST SUB-ASSISTANT SURGEON, MR. MOOLCHAND.

* Mr. HOOSEINBHOY A. LALLJEE on behalf of HAJI ABDULLAH HAROON (Karachi City): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether the Surgeon-General with the Government of Bombay received any applications from the residents of Dadu, district Larkana, containing serious allegations against the sub-assistant surgeon, Mr. Moolchand?

(b) If so, have those charges been inquired into?

(c) If so, by whom and with what result?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: (a) Yes.

(b) Yes.

(c) The Civil Surgeon and the Collector of Larkana district. They both stated that the allegations were unfounded and on the other hand they highly appreciated the services rendered by Mr. Mulchand Dhunchand. The Superintending Engineer, Western Circle, Lloyd Barrage and Canals Construction, Karachi, and the President, District Local Board, Larkana, have also spoken highly of the services rendered by Mr. Moolchand in charge Dadu dispensary.

APPLICATION OF THE BOMBAY PREVENTION OF PROSTITUTION ACT.

Mr. HOOSEINBHOY A. LALLJEE on behalf of HAJI ABDULLAH HAROON (Karachi City): Will Government be pleased to state in how many cases has any action been taken in each area under that Act up to the 30th June 1924, mentioning the section of the Act and the nature and the result of such action in each case?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: A statement† furnishing the required information is laid on the table.

SIND MUSLIM EDUCATIONAL UNION.

* Mr. HOOSEINBHOY A. LALLJEE on behalf of HAJI ABDULLAH HAROON (Karachi City): Will Government be pleased to state:—

(a) Whether the Director of Public Instruction has considered the resolutions of the Sind Muslim Educational Union passed at its meeting on 23rd December 1923 at Sukkur and submitted his report on the same to Government?

(b) What action has been taken on each of those resolutions?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: (a) and (b) As the Sind Muslim Educational Union has not been recognised by Government, the resolutions have not been considered and no action has been taken thereon.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR: In considering or not considering such resolutions, is it the policy of Government to be guided by the intrinsic worth of the resolutions, or by the accident that the body which passed them is recognised or not recognised by Government?

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

† Vide Appendix 25.

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : By the work. If the work done by the association is laudable and good, then the resolutions are attended to.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR : Did the Honourable Minister apply his mind to the question whether these resolutions were important or were of intrinsic worth ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : The intrinsic worth of the resolutions is considered. At the same time, it is seen whether the association is recognised or not.

Mr. P. G. JOSHI : What bodies have been recognised by Government, so that they would consider their resolutions ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : If the honourable member gives notice, I shall find that out.

Mr. V. R. KOTHARI : What are the qualifications for recognition by Government ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : I could not answer it off-hand.

REPORTS OF PUBLIC SPEECHES.

Mr. HOOSEINBHOY A. LALLJEE on behalf of HAJI ABDULLAH HAROON (Karachi City) : Will Government be pleased to state :—

(a) Whether it is a fact that there is a Standing Order of the Commissioner in Sind that the Government reporters taking notes of political speeches delivered in public should get their notes attested by one or more responsible local non-officials ?

(b) If so, was that procedure adopted by those who reported to the authorities the speech for which Shaikh Abdul Majid Sahib, the then Secretary of Sind Provincial Khilafat Committee and Editor of Daily "Al-Wahid", Karachi, was sentenced by the City Magistrate of Hyderabad, Sind, on 17th January 1924 to suffer 12 months' imprisonment for refusal to furnish securities for good behaviour ?

(c) If so, what are the names of the non-officials who attested the notes made by the police in this case, and why were they not produced in court as prosecution witnesses ?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : (a) The Commissioner issued instructions to the District Magistrates that every effort should be made to have the police reports of speeches corroborated by independent witnesses. The District Magistrates were informed at the same time that in cases where independent witnesses were not procurable, there should be no legal objection to reliance being placed solely on the evidence of responsible police officers.

(b) and (c) There were no independent witnesses available. The evidence of the police officers was held sufficient.

GRAZING FEES IN SIND.

* Mr. HOOSEINBHOY A. LALLJEE on behalf of HAJI ABDULLAH HAROON (Karachi City) : Will Government be pleased to state what was the grazing fee per head of cattle when the fee was first introduced and what it is now in each of the districts of Sind, showing also the different rates of grazing fees imposed successively on a head of cattle since their first introduction down to the present day?

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: (1) In August 1852 the following scale of grazing fees was fixed by a committee composed of the Commissary of Ordinance, the Executive Engineer and the Forest Ranger. This scale of grazing fees was not sanctioned by Government, but was drawn up at the suggestion of the Commissioner:—

Scale of rates.

| | | | | Per month. | | | |

| | | | | Rs. a. p. | | | |

| Bullocks and Cows | .. | .. | .. | .. | 0 | 1 | 6 |
| Goats | .. | .. | .. | .. | 0 | 0 | 8 |

(2) In the year 1886 the following maximum and minimum scales were sanctioned:—

| Per month. | | | | | | | |

| Sheep | .. | 0 0 3 | .. | 0 | 0 | 1 | |
| Goats | .. | 0 0 3 | .. | 0 | 0 | 3 | |

(3) In the year 1903 the system of bi-monthly permits was introduced and the following scale of fees was prescribed for the period of 2 months.

The forests were divided into two classes:

| | | 1st Class. | | 2nd Class. | |
|-------------------|----|------------|--------|------------|-----|
| | | Rs. a. p. | | Rs. a. p. | |
| Camels | .. | .. | 0 12 0 | 0 | 8 0 |

| Sheep | .. | .. | 0 0 6 | 0 | 0 4 |

Half the above rates for sucklings.

(4) In the year 1915 the system of 12-monthly permits was introduced and the rates sanctioned for that period were as follows :—

| | 1st Class. | | 2nd Class. | |
|-----------|------------|-------|------------|-------|
| | Rs. | a. p. | Rs. | a. p. |
| Camels | 1 | 8 0 | 1 | 8 0 |

RELIEF MEASURES IN SIND.

* Mr. HOOSEINBHOY A. LALLJEE on behalf of HAJI ABDULLAH HAROON (Karachi City): (a) Will Government be pleased to furnish, in a tabular form, a statement of estimated loss and damage to the crops, cattle, other properties and the lives of the people in each of the talukas in Sind, on account of the recent floods and heavy rains in Sind ?

(b) What relief measures have been or are intended to be adopted by Government to help the distressed people ?

(c) If they have not begun any relief measures themselves, have they encouraged or assisted the efforts made by the Congress committee or any other private agencies for the purpose of mitigating the hardships of the distressed people ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: (a) The information is being obtained.

(b) and (c) The attention of the honourable member is invited to the reply‡ given to question of the honourable member for Hyderabad district.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

† Vide Appendix 27.

‡ The following question and answer were printed in the 1st list :—

Mr. NOOR MAHOMED (Hyderabad District): Will Government be pleased to state whether they are aware that there has been considerable loss of property in some of the talukas of Sind as a result of the river floods and rain and that a large number of people have been rendered homeless ? If so, what steps do they intend to take to help the Khatedars and the cultivators to rebuild their houses and to cultivate the next crop ?

RELINQUISHED HOLDINGS AND REVENUE WASTE.

* Mr. M. D. KARKI (Kanara District) : Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether all or any of the survey numbers mentioned in Government Notification No. S-35/9/12422 published in Government Gazette, dated 31st July 1924, Part I, at page 1710 are relinquished holdings or revenue waste numbers from the beginning, i.e., from the 1st settlement ;

(b) If the former, the classes, i.e., tari, bagayat, rullen, etc., under which they fall and the reasons for relinquishment in each case ;

(c) If the latter, whether they are used by the village cattle for grazing, and the reasons for the proposal to constitute them reserved forest ?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI : (a) 45 are waste numbers from the time of disafforestation ; 8 are relinquished ; 3 are forfeited.

(b) 1 Tari,

3 Partly Tari and partly Khuski,

1 Partly Bagayat and partly Khuski,

3 Partly Tari, partly Bagayat and Khuski.

No definite reasons can be assigned for their relinquishment ; the probable reason seems to be that they were isolated patches in the midst of forest.

(c) Some of them are used by village cattle for grazing ; their afforestation will not prevent the cattle from grazing in them. They are proposed for afforestation for the following reasons :—

(i) there is no demand for them for cultivation ;

(ii) they lie within the demarcation line ; and

(iii) they contain valuable tree-growth.

ARTIFICIAL TEAK PLANTATIONS IN KANARA.

* Mr. M. D. KARKI (Kanara District) : Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) what acreage of forest lands is under artificial teak plantations in Kanara ;

(b) how many such plantations exist in that district and what is the acreage, name and age of each of such plantations ;

(c) what is the estimated cost (maximum and minimum) of artificially regenerating one acre of teak plantation, the estimated period required before it becomes fit for being exploited and the estimated amount realizable per acre when exploited ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : Government is aware. The final report of the Commissioner regarding the amount of the damage and the various measures of relief which he considers necessary is yet awaited. In the meanwhile the following orders have been passed :—

(1) That remission be given on the block system.

(2) That free grants of timber be made for rebuilding houses.

(3) That reserved forests should be thrown open for grazing where necessary.

(4) That suspensions of arrears of revenue and takavi be freely given.

(5) That fresh takavi grants be freely made. An additional allotment of Rs. 2,00,000 has been made for this purpose.

Flood Relief Funds have been started at Karachi and other towns.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: A statement† furnishing the information is placed on the Council table.

UNTOUCHABILITY AMONGST UNTOUCHABLES IN KANARA.

Mr. M. D. KARKI (Kanara District): Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether in the schools for depressed classes in the Kanara district, any section of the pupils treat any other section as “untouchables” by refusing to come in contact with them;

(b) whether such treatment obtains between any pupils and their teachers, even when the latter themselves belong to depressed classes?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: (a) It is reported that certain sections such as Hulswars, Chamgars, Bhangis, Mukris and Agers treat one another as untouchable.

(b) No; it is reported, however, that in the depressed class schools attended purely by Mukri and Ager children, the Mukris and Agers refuse to send their children to school if the teacher belongs to a section different from their own, but that they have no objection if the teacher is either a Mahomedan, a Christian, or a Hindu belonging to a higher caste than the Depressed Classes.

Mr. S. K. BOLE: As regards (a), is it not true that it is due to the teaching of the priestly classes?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: Government have got no information on that point.

BETTA RULES IN KANARA.

* Mr. M. D. KARKI (Kanara District): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they are aware that the new betta rules are regarded as unsatisfactory by the gardeners of the above-ghat talukas of the Kanara district?

(b) Were the opinions of the gardeners consulted before the new betta rules were framed and were the draft rules published to enable them to put in their objections to them?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: (a) The rules have been regarded as unsatisfactory by some gardeners in the Sirsi and Siddapur talukas but have generally been welcomed by gardeners in the Yellapur taluka.

(b) Those gardeners who cared to discuss the subject with the Collector and the Special Forest Settlement Officer were consulted. Several attempts were made to convene meetings of gardeners with a view to discussion; but no meetings could be held as the gardeners refused to attend. Draft rules were not published since the gardeners who object to them have the option of continuing under the betta lease.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

† Vide Appendix 28.

REPRESENTATION TO THE COLLECTOR OF KANARA REGARDING BETTA RULES.

* MR. M. D. KARKI (Kanara District): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is true that some of the gardeners of Sirsi taluka represented to the Collector when he was touring through the taluka this year that the new betta rules are not satisfactorily workable?

(b) If so, what additions or alterations to the rules were suggested by them?

(c) Has any action been taken by him on all or any of the suggestions made to him? If so, on what points has action been taken, and if these do not cover all the suggestions, why has no action been taken on the remaining points?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: (a) Yes.

(b) The objections raised were:—

† RULE 1.—Clause (1).—The concession is of no use because rayats are charged 2 annas per head of cattle as grazing fees even if they graze them only in betta.

Clause (2).—The bettas being overgrown with Mimosa Pudica the concession is illusory.

Clause (3).—This does not cover digging a trench or building a bank all round bettas, which is necessary to protect them especially from fire spreading from Minor Forest while the loppings are drying on the ground. The clause requires the addition of "or for any other agricultural purpose".

Clause (4).—This does not allow burning the whole betta, but burning is confined to the purposes mentioned in clause (3).

Clause (5).—This does not permit the exchange of earth or stones between owners of adjoining bettas which may severally be suitable for different kinds of excavation.

Clause (6) (i).—The restriction against 'in any way injuring' trees of the four reserved kinds prevents burning bettas.

(ii) Trees lawfully cut with the Mamlatdar's permission may not be transported or sawn without permission from Forest Department which involves indefinite delay.

(iii) Of the trees mentioned in the Schedule Nos. 9 and 10 are in those parts almost always planted originally by the betta owners themselves and to levy Rupee 1 fee is unjust. It will be seen that except under clause (3) no additions or alterations to improve the rules were suggested. The objections were directed to explaining why the gardeners refused to accept them.

(c) With reference to the objection to clause (4) the rule has since been amended in the direction desired.

With regard to the 2nd objection to clause (6) a mamlatdar can now issue passes for sawing without consulting the Forest Department.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

† Government Notification No. 7198, dated 16th April 1923, publishing the rules and Government Notification No. 7198, dated 4th June 1924, amending clause 4 of rule 1 are appended.

‡ Vide Appendix 29.

No pass is required for transit of timber from bettas within the limits of the village in which it is produced.

No further action has been taken as regards the other objections because—

(1) those under clauses (1) and (2) do not relate to the betta rules themselves but to outside matters;

(2) the apprehensions expressed in the other objections were considered to be unfounded since the bettas are under control of the revenue authorities and the Collector was in a position to see that the rules were not interpreted illiberally;

(3) it appeared that the sole real demand was for bettas on malki tenure, and that no other conditions would be accepted; and

(4) the gardeners of Yellapur, whose apprehensions had not been aroused by outside influences, accepted the new rules with alacrity.

SHERKOTDA POLICE LINES.

*Khan Saheb A. M. MANSURI (Ahmedabad and Surat Cities):

(a) Will Government be pleased to state whether any proposals have been made to change the site of Sherkotda police lines from Railwayapura to outside Sarangpur Gate?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the estimated cost of the land acquisition involved and the estimated cost of constructing the quarters?

(c) What will be the estimated rent on each tenement, and what amount is now being paid as house-rent to every constable?

(d) Are Government aware that the original site for the Sherkotda police lines, near the Telia Mill, belongs to Government?

(e) Are Government aware that there are other sites available in the vicinity of the proposed site near Kadga Pith and opposite the Purshottam Mill, and that such sites belong to Government although they temporarily vest in the municipality?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: (a) There are no police lines for the men of the Sherkotda police station.

(b) and (c) The site for the police lines has not yet been finally selected.

(d) The site originally proposed for the police lines near the Telia Mill belongs to Government but has been rejected owing to its very cramped and unhealthy surroundings.

(e) The Purshottam Mill site is unsuitable owing to the proximity of the municipal sanitary tramway. The Kadga Pith Leper Asylum site will not be available till a decision on the removal of the asylum is arrived at. The whole question was recently gone into on the spot by the Home Member.

ONE-YEAR-ONE-STANDARD RULE.

† Dr. M. M. MEHTA (Surat City): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they are aware that one effect of the strict adherence to the one-year-one-standard rule by the Educational Department is that a good many promising and intelligent boys are debarred from going up for the I.C.S. examination ?

† This question was asked at the meeting held in July 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

(b) Will Government be pleased to state in how many cases in the high schools in this Presidency, Professor Sharp's recommendation to allow promising intelligent boys to skip over standards at the discretion of the head master has been acted upon during each of the last three years ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : (a) No ; the rule is not strictly enforced in the case of promising boys who deserve more rapid promotion.

(b) There were eight cases in 1921-22, twenty-two in 1922-23 and sixteen in 1923-24, in the Government high schools of this Presidency.

POSTAL ALLOWANCE TO SCHOOL MASTERS.

* Mr. D. R. PATIL (East Khandesh District) : Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether there is any rule in the Educational Department that postal allowance should be given to the first assistant teacher in preference to the head master in a primary school where the latter draws a monthly salary of upwards of Rs. 50 ?

(b) What are the monthly salaries of the head masters and the first assistant teachers in the primary schools at Changdev and Wadhoda in Edlabad peta, respectively ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : (a) There is no such rule in the Educational Department. The postal work is ordinarily done by head masters out of school hours except in cases where they are unfit or unwilling to do the work. In the latter case, the work is usually entrusted to the first assistant. In the Central Division, however, an order was issued by the Educational Inspector in 1920 to the effect that a head master drawing over Rs. 40 per mensem should not ordinarily be appointed as a post master but that in such a case the work should be entrusted to the first assistant.

(b) Head Master, Changdeo, pay Rs. 55 plus 13 + 12 personal allowance.

Head Master, Vadhoda, pay Rs. 55 plus 13 + 12 personal allowance.

First Assistant, Changdeo, pay Rs. 40.

First Assistant, Vadhoda, pay Rs. 44.

At Changdeo, the head master has been in charge of postal work since 5th May 1922, when his pay was less than Rs. 40. At Vadhoda, the present head master has been at the place for over four years. The two trained assistants were sent there over a year ago by way of punishment and hence they could not be rewarded with the postal allowance on their transfer there.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in July 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

INDEBTEDNESS OF AGRICULTURISTS.

Mr. D. N. PATEL (Kaira District) : Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) what is the extent of the present indebtedness of the agricultural population of the Presidency,

(b) whether it is on an increase or decrease,

(c) what steps have been or are intended to be taken by Government to ameliorate the indebtedness of the agriculturists ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : (a) and (b) The honourable member is referred to the replies *to questions put by the honourable member for Poona City (Mr. L. B. Bhopatkar) at the second session of 1924.

(c) Steps have been taken by the Agricultural, Co-operative and the Industries Departments to ameliorate the indebtedness of the agriculturists—the first by introducing improved methods and seed, by extending well irrigation by boring, in order to increase the outturn and returns of agriculture, the second by providing cheap credit and reducing the rate of interest and the last by encouraging subsidiary industries, such as weaving, etc.

Mr. H. H. NARIELVALA : What is the rate of interest ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : I believe it varies from 7 per cent. to 8 per cent. on loans given by the Central Co-operative Bank.

GAUGE OF ANDHERI-CHEMBUR RAILWAY.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN (Thana and Bombay Suburban District) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the gauge of the Andheri-Chembur Railway ?

(b) Are Government aware of any other railway in India of the gauge ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state why this standard was chosen ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR :

(a) 4' 8½".

(b) The construction railways used by the Bombay Port Trust and the City Improvement Trust are of the same gauge.

(c) This gauge was chosen because it is far cheaper than the 5' 6" gauge and the capacity is quite sufficient for construction purposes. It is the same gauge as the tramways, and in addition to using the line for construction work, it is intended to run a tramway service for the convenience of passengers. It may eventually be linked up with the Bombay tramways.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN : Is it not a fact that materials were purchased second-hand ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR : No.

* Vide Vol. XII, pp. 208 and 209.

REPORT ON LEE COMMISSION'S PROPOSALS.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN (Thana and Bombay Suburban District): Will Government be pleased to place on the Council table their report as regards the recommendations of the Lee Commission?

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE: The correspondence is confidential and Government are not prepared to lay any portion of it on the table.

Mr. P. G. JOSHI: May I know whether the Government supported the proposals or disapproved of them?

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE: I am afraid I cannot give the information.

GOVERNMENT ADVERTISEMENTS IN NEWSPAPERS.

3. Mr. G. B. PRADHAN (Thana and Bombay Suburban District): (a) Will Government be pleased to state in what newspapers Government publish their advertisements?

(b) On what principles are these newspapers selected?

(c) Will they be pleased to state the total amount spent by them on advertisements during each of the following years, viz., 1921, 1922 and 1923?

(d) If Government do not pay for their advertisements at the ordinary rates, what rates are they?

(e) What is the total circulation of each of these papers?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: (a), (b) and (e) Attention is invited to the reply* given last sessions to the honourable member for Hyderabad, Sind. No special list of selected newspapers is maintained for the Presidency proper.

(c) It is impossible to give the required information without the expenditure of more time and trouble than would seem to be justified by its public utility.

(d) No special rates have been fixed.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN: Is it not possible to find out the total cost of advertisements in the whole of the Presidency?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: It will mean an examination of the records of every office in the Presidency.

RAISING QUOTA OF INDIAN TERRITORIAL FORCE FOR NASIK DISTRICT.

† Mr. R. G. PRADHAN (Nasik District): With reference to my question asked in the last session regarding the branch committee of the Indian Territorial Force for the district of Nasik, and the reply given thereto, will Government be pleased to state what suitable measures the Administrative Commandant and Adjutant of the Territorial Battalion have decided to adopt to raise the quota for the district of Nasik?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: The Administrative Commandant held a conference with the branch committee

* Printed in the 5th list of the last session.

† This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

on the 29th July and explained matters not previously understood. The members of the committee expressed a hope that they would be able to obtain recruits. This hope has not been fulfilled, an invitation to join the committee has since been extended to the honourable member.

BUILDING GRANT FOR LOCAL BOARD SCHOOL AT DABHADI, TALUKA MALEGAON.

* Mr. R. G. PRADHAN (Nasik District): Will Government be pleased to state whether it is true that they have promised a building grant for the local board school at Dabhadi, taluka Malegaon, district Nasik? If so, has the grant been made? If not, why not?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: The answer is in the negative.

APPLICATION OF PUBLIC CONVEYANCES ACT TO CHANDAWAD.

* Mr. R. G. PRADHAN (Nasik District): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they are aware that considerable dissatisfaction has been caused among the people of Chandawad in the Nasik district by the application of the Public Conveyances Act to the Chandawad-Lasalgaon road?

(b) Have Government received from the people any petition urging that the application of the Act to the road should be withdrawn, and, if so, what action have they taken thereon?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: One petition of objection was received before but none after final publication of the Notification applying the Act.

HINDOO PRAJAPAR SARVE DISHAETHI BHAYANKAR AKRAMAN.

Mr. HOOSENALLY M. RAHIMTOOLA (Bombay City): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether their attention has been drawn to a leading article appearing at pages 5 and 6 of the Ismaili, dated the 7th September 1924, regarding a handbill styled "Hindoo Prajapar Sarve Dishaeethi Bhayankar Akraman" dated the 23rd August 1924, printed at the Bombay Vaibhav Press and published by Narayan Purshottam Sangani over the signature of the latter and eighty-one others?

(b) If so, are Government aware that this handbill has aroused feelings of resentment in the Mahomedan community?

(c) If so, do Government intend to take any action in the matter?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: (a) Yes.

(b) Except for the article which appeared in the Ismaili of the 7th September 1924, Government are not aware that the handbill in question aroused feelings of resentment of any widespread character among the Mahomedan community.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

(c) In view of the fact that Government had under consideration, at the time the handbill was brought to their notice, the issue of a general warning against the publication of articles designed deliberately to accentuate the differences prevalent between the Hindu and Mahomedan communities, they did not deem it necessary to take any special action in respect of this particular handbill. A copy † of the warning which was issued on the 11th October 1924 is placed on the table.

MOULVI RAFI UDDIN AHMAD : May I ask what is the standard of "resentment of a widespread character among the Mahomedan community" which Government lay down?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : I cannot lay down any standard for the honourable member.

(b), (c) and (d) The accompanying statement § furnishes the information asked for.

† Vide Appendix 31.

‡ Vide Vol. XIII, pp. 541, 542.

§ Vide Appendix 32.

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the expenditure incurred on the erection of the buildings required for the photo-copying work since the introduction of that system ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state the head or heads of the Civil Estimates under which the expenditure mentioned in (a) and (b) is shown ?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI : (a) From May 1921 to September 1924, Rs. 20,393.

(b) From May 1921 to September 1924, Rs. 9,605.

(c) The expenditure on chemicals from May 1921 to March 1923 in the initial stages of the experiment was borne on the grants of the Photo-zincographic Press. The following provision was made in the budget estimates for the years 1923-24 and 1924-25 :—

1923-24.

Rs. 10,000 for photo-
shed.
Rs. 2,600 for apparatus.
Rs. 9,000 for chemicals, etc.

Included in the provision for "Office expenses and Miscellaneous" under "9-B—Registration."

Mr. P. G. JOSHI : May I know whether the item for chemicals which was thrown out by the Council last session has been included in the amount of expenditure shown ?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: No.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN: May I know whether the Honourable Minister took into consideration in making a provision for chemicals in this year's budget the fact that the House shows a general disapproval of the photo-copying system during the last session?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: Does that question arise out of this question, Sir?

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN: There is a provision made, Sir, for chemicals etc., in this year's budget. Last year there was a discussion about the photo-copying system and a general disapproval of it was shown by this side of the House and I ask whether that fact was taken into consideration by the Honourable Minister when this year a provision was made for the chemicals.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: How does it arise out of this reply?

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN: Because the provision has been made in spite of the criticism passed by the Council.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: There is a definite question asked and the total expenditure is given. If the honourable member wants he can send in a separate question.

Mr. R. G. SOMAN: May I know whether photo-zinco is attached to any office or an independent establishment?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: There is practically an independent office and is attached to the building of the printing press.

Mr. R. G. SOMAN: Does the amount of Rs. 10,000 referred to in the reply for office and miscellaneous expenses refer to that particular establishment?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: It refers to the expenditure on photo-zinco.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR: May I know whether the figure of Rs. 7,000 for chemicals in 1924-25 represents the amount that was rejected by the Council last year?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: I shall have to find that out. I am inclined to think it is not.

CADASTRAL SURVEYORS.

Mr. R. G. SOMAN (Satara District): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the services of certain circle inspectors of the Revenue Departments were transferred to the Survey Department about the year 1918 as measurer circle inspectors which designation was later altered to the "cadastral surveyors"?

(b) Whether the scales of pay of revenue circle inspectors and the cadastral surveyors are different?

(c) If so, whether it is a fact that the revenue circle inspectors have better prospects than the cadastral surveyors? If so, what are the grounds for such inequality of prospects for persons whose prospects were originally the same ?

(d) Is the qualifying test for the posts of maintenance surveyors employed in the city surveys higher than that of the cadastral surveyors employed in the Survey Department ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: (a) Certain posts of circle inspectors in the Land Revenue Department were reduced and their incumbents transferred to the Land Records Department as special measurer circle inspectors which designation was later altered to cadastral surveyors. If this service had not been available to them, they would have been discharged.

(b) The scale of pay of each class of officers is—

Circle Inspectors—Rs. 30—5/2—80,

Cadastral Surveyors—Rs. 35—5/2—70.

(c) Yes. The circle inspectors are expected to be better educated with more all round ability than the cadastral surveyors who are a slightly less educated and qualified cadre.

(d) There is no such 'test' but the maintenance surveyors are selected and expected to be rather better men.

TYPING FUND IN CIVIL COURTS.

* Mr. R. G. SOMAN (Satara District): Will Government be pleased to state the total amount of typing fund lying with the several civil courts in the Satara district at the end of each year since the introduction of the system of supplying typed copies ?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: The balances were—

| | | | Rs. | a. | p. |
|--------------------|----|----|-------|----|----|
| on 31st March 1917 | .. | .. | 265 | 4 | 6 |
| on 31st March 1918 | .. | .. | 688 | 11 | 1 |
| on 31st March 1919 | .. | .. | 936 | 14 | 10 |
| on 31st March 1920 | .. | .. | 1,592 | 12 | 3 |
| on 31st March 1921 | .. | .. | 2,378 | 0 | 2 |
| on 31st March 1922 | .. | .. | 2,904 | 15 | 6 |
| on 31st March 1923 | .. | .. | 2,992 | 9 | 2 |
| on 31st March 1924 | .. | .. | 2,849 | 9 | 9 |

There is only one fund kept for the whole district.

POLICE OUTPOST AT AGAR BAZAAR, DADAR.

Mr. A. N. SURVE (Bombay City, North): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the police outpost at Agar Bazaar, Dadar, Bombay city, has been abolished ?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to state whether the abolition is temporary or intended to be permanent ?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: The police outpost in question has been abolished since the introduction of the patrol system in the year 1923. The reinstatement of the outpost is being considered along with the proposals regarding the "combined patrols and fixed posts system".

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

Mr. A. N. SURVE: May I know how long will it take to complete the consideration of this question?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: I cannot say.

Mr. A. N. SURVE: Are Government aware of the inconvenience caused to the public?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: The consideration of the matter indicates that.

LAC PRODUCTION IN FORESTS.

Mr. V. A. SURVE (Ratnagiri District): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they have made any experiments as regards introduction of methods of producing lac in the forests of this Presidency?

(b) If not, do they intend to take any action in this connection?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: (a) and (b) Attempts are being made to propagate lac in the Hyderabad and Karachi divisions but hitherto they have not met with any success. The results of the experiments are recorded in the annual Forest Administration Reports (please see page 28 of the Report for 1920-21 and also pages 17 and 20 of the Reports for 1921-22 and 1922-23, respectively).

SILTING UP OF NALLAS AND RIVULETS IN RATNAGIRI DISTRICT.

Mr. V. A. SURVE (Ratnagiri District): Will Government be pleased to state whether they are aware that nallas and rivulets in the Ratnagiri district have silted up and consequently the storm water flowing through them spreads and damages the fields on the sides of the nallas?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN: Government are not aware that nallas and rivulets in the Ratnagiri district have silted up. The country being very hilly, all the smaller streams and rivulets have a very steep fall with the result that flood water rushes down with great force and deposit of silt is generally out of the question. Where, of course, bunds or dharans are constructed across streams for irrigational purposes a certain amount of silt deposit must occur on the up-stream side of such bunds which are not provided with outlets for silt clearance.

FLAG STATIONS ON BROACH-JAMBUSAR RAILWAY.

* The THAKOR OF AMOD (Northern Division): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether any standard has been laid down by which the necessity or otherwise of providing regular stations on the Broach-Jambusar Railway is determined?

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

(b) If so, does the amount of traffic at the two flag stations on that railway at Dayadra and Tanchha satisfy that standard ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : (a) No standard has been laid down. Each case is considered on its merits.

(b) Booking offices for passenger traffic are being provided at Tanchha and Dayadra flag stations. It is, however, not proposed to open these stations for goods booking, as Dayadra flag-station is only $2\frac{1}{4}$ miles away from Tralsamadh station where facilities for goods booking already exist, and Tanchha flag-station is five miles from Amod and $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles from Samni, which are also goods booking stations.

Budget debate resumed.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Budget discussion.

Mr. R. D. SHINDE (Nasik District) : Sir, I wish to make a few observations on the budget proposals for the next year. I may say at the outset that the budget of the Government of Bombay makes a very sorry reading. I must compare this with the budget of a spendthrift who is lavish in his expenditure and whose income is not in proportion to his expenditure. Sir, the expenditure for the administration of the several departments of Government has been increasing steadily for the last ten years. If honourable members look into the budget on page 33 of the Blue Book they will find that even against the revised estimate of 1924-25, the expenditure in the budget for 1925-26 is in excess by one crore and 45 lakhs. The Council had on two or three occasions made it perfectly clear to Government that they should retrench their expenditure and as a result of that Government did make retrenchments to some extent about 60 lakhs of rupees at one time and about 22 lakhs on another occasion. The expenditure, especially on the General Administration, Land Revenue, Public Works and Irrigation, has mounted up considerably. In the General Administration, especially in the Secretariat, secretaries, assistant secretaries and deputy secretaries have been doubled within the last 3 or 4 years. In the Public Works Department the number of superior officers is much larger than is needed for the requirements of that department. Added to this there is in the next year an increase given to the superior service as a result of the recommendations of the Lee Commission. I think it is too late in the day to discuss the constitutional aspect of this question, namely, the action of Government in appointing the Lee Commission as well as giving effect to its recommendations, practically against the unanimous wish of the non-official members elsewhere and in this House. I wish to submit to the Council that the Government and the Lee Commission have ignored one important factor, namely, the capacity of the taxpayer to pay for these superior services. Under the limitations imposed by the Government of India Act, Sir, the non-official side has limited power in voting as well as in touching the pay and the numerous allowances of these superior officers. Expression of resentment has already been given by several honourable members that they cannot touch a single pie of the pay and allowances, such as house allowance, duty allowance, passage allowance, marriage allowance—and I do not know whether there is a honeymoon allowance for young officers—of these officers. What we have to do is simply to vote. I am afraid we cannot do that but what we can do is to pay them as taxpayers and sit still. My submission is that, unless Government retrench their expenditure on establishments to a considerable extent, this House will not be a party to put any more burden on the taxpayers.

On the revenue side of the budget the first item that attracts attention is the estimates for the land revenue. Honourable members will see that this figure of 5,60 lakhs that has been put is the highest on record. It has not been realised in any year in the past. My submission is that Government cannot expect to realise such a high estimate of land revenue. There is plenty of evidence for that statement. The Honourable the Finance Member has candidly admitted that in the past concessions in the way of suspensions and remissions have been given to a considerable extent and to my mind that is sufficient evidence that Government have, and they are doing it now, pitched the land revenue figure to a considerable extent, far beyond the capacity of the agriculturists to pay. There is also another side to that picture. And that is this, that when the Finance Department puts the estimate at that high figure, the district officers who obey the fiat the Finance Department set in motion the whole Government machinery to collect that amount. We in the mofussil know that when the district officers get to know that such an amount has got to be collected from their districts, they send orders to their subordinate officers. The omnipotent and omniscient talati as well as that creature known as the mamlatdar go round and in the secret dark of the night make reports about the probable crop, and as a result of that estimate the budget figures are made sometimes in December, that is long before the crop is ripe. My submission is that the whole procedure is erroneous and causes extreme hardship to the agriculturists. The estimates are based on the reports of crops when they are in the field, and very little allowance is made for subsequent damages caused by cold weather such as we had this year. The Honourable the Finance Member says in his speech that when the year is bad there are suspensions, and when there are continued suspensions there are remissions. But I submit, Sir, that is a very theoretical proposition, and does not represent what is being actually done in the districts. And if it were done I assure Government that there would have been very few complaints about it.

There are one or two other points as regards the collection of land revenue. The land revenue is collected at a time when prices of food-grains are the lowest in the year. The agriculturists have not to pay land revenue in kind : they have to pay it in cash. And what do they do? They bring all their produce to the market at the same time, and as a result the whole market is glutted with the produce and prices naturally fall down, and the agriculturists get very little return for their toil of eight months in the fields ; and what they do get they spend in paying land revenue. The mamlatdars and other officers, of course, use all sorts of means, from mild persuasions to harsh attachments, but the Honourable Member in charge sitting in the Secretariat may tell us that there are no difficulties in collecting land revenue and that the agriculturists voluntarily agreed to give up what they had earned by toil of eight months, by way of land revenue, and have agreed to starve peacefully. My submission is that this state of affairs must be looked into and the pitch of assessment must be settled as quickly as possible.

As regards the excise revenue, the Honourable the Finance Member has uttered a threat that in view of the policy of prohibition which the Government of Bombay have adopted, the receipts will be falling and the House should be prepared to vote additional money. I will remind the House that such a threat has been before them for the last three or four years, but the receipts under the head show a different tale. We find, on the contrary, that the receipts have been steadily increasing. I would tell the Honourable the Finance Member that when he does show to the House that there is an actual decrease or falling off in the excise revenue, then the House will agree to vote the additional necessary money and not till then. The Honourable the Finance Member has been, to my mind, brutally frank in placing before the House an alternative, that if the House does not vote the additional taxation, the money that will be necessary for the beneficent activities of Government, such as education and medical relief, will not be forthcoming. But I ask the Honourable the Finance Member in all humility whether he consulted the honourable House in piling up expenditure on the establishments. The real deficit to my mind is not due to expenditure of funds on the transferred departments, but is due to the heavy expenditure on the establishments. And I do not think this House will agree to new taxation on the score that the money is now going to be paid to the transferred departments for being spent for such beneficent activities such as aids to local boards and municipalities.

There is one more point I wish to urge, though that does not affect the budget which we are discussing, but affects the policy of Government. The non-Brahmin party in the Council have been urging upon Government that they should recruit non-Brahmins for all the services, and I am glad to see that on the eve of the opening of the Council they have circulated fresh orders on the subject. But those orders are inadequate, because they do not affect the higher services. No reference has been made in those orders to the higher services. My submission is that the same principle which they want to apply in the case of the lower services, such as the clerical and subordinate services, should be applied to the higher services also. Sir, the non-Brahmin party do not make this demand, I may tell you, in a mood of begging. They, the backward classes, form the bulk of the population of the presidency, and they pay the major part of the taxes of the provincial government. I am sure no one will deny that we, the non-Brahmins or the backward classes, are entitled to a substantial share of the public services. But, Sir, when we make that demand we have got to see the facts in their face. Since the British occupation in India all these appointments have been practically monopolised by a very small community, and that community has been raising howls against our just demands. And even when tardy recognition of our claims is made by Government, as we saw yesterday and the day before, there are howls raised. We saw it yesterday in connexion with the appointment of a non-Brahmin as a deputy educational inspector and the deputation of three or four teachers to the secondary training college. It is not disputed that they are not qualified. May I ask those who call themselves Nationalists and Swarajists one plain question, e.g., whether they do want or whether they do not want the backward classes to progress. Would they oppose the just rights of the non-Brahmins to a share in the public services? Up to this time they have monopolised all the services, and when once, through circumstances, a qualified non-Brahmin gets entrance in the public services, I do not understand why they should raise such a howl as they did yesterday when they tried to heckle the Honourable the Minister for Education. Nearly 90 per cent. of the posts in the educational department are held by Brahmins. The office of the Director of Public Instruction, I may say, is a holy ground. When one or two non-Brahmins tried to enter it, they were unceremoniously hustled out of it. That is also the case in the case of the secondary training colleges. Those persons who are deputed to undergo training there are generally senior men who entered service when there were few candidates from the backward communities. Under the rules of the department generally those who are trained in secondary training college get appointments in the higher posts. If Government find that they want a certain number of non-Brahmins to be available for appointment to the higher posts, and if they depute even a junior man who has entered the department recently, I do not think, in view of the fact that the Brahmins and the forward communities have monopolised all the higher appointments, it is doing any injustice to them.

Under these circumstances, Sir, the policy which Government have adopted is a very beneficial one and that they should extend it even to the higher appointments and that selfish cries of the vested interests should not deter them from pursuing that policy.

Mr. V. N. JOG (Dharwar District): Sir, last year the Honourable the Finance Member at the time of his speech invited us to contribute towards the prudent management of the province whether our contribution was small or great. This time that invitation has not been given to us, because the Honourable the Finance Member does not mind to, or cannot prudently manage, the province. I submit, Sir, Government being so very able and containing wise statesmen, I am not inclined to believe that it is unable to manage this province prudently, but it seems that it is not the mind of Government to manage the province prudently. No one can deny that if a province is to be managed prudently, it is axiomatically true that we must try to curtail expenditure so as to live within our means. But we actually find from the budget that this year the Honourable the Finance Member has shown a deficit of 41 lakhs and he is not going to curtail expenditure in any way, but he wants us to give these 41 lakhs of rupees by taxing us further. So in this connection I submit, Sir, that Government is not resorting to the ways of a prudent statesman, namely that the expenditure should be made suitable to our revenues. This can be illustrated very clearly from the various figures which have been quoted by the Honourable the Finance Member himself on pages 35, 36 and 37 of the Blue Book. Taking the figures from 1910-11, it appears that our revenue in the year 1915-16 and up to the year 1915-16 was within eight crores, and expenditure was also below that sum. Then there was a gradual rise in revenue up to 9 and 10 crores till 1918-19, and till then our expenditure was within our limits. We were saving up to the year 1918-19. Then you will find, Sir, in the year 1920-21 Government spent more. The revenue was 1,158 lakhs and it spent 1,293 lakhs and in the year 1921-22 again attempted to spend more than its revenue. In the year 1921-22 Government wanted to spend 1,554 lakhs whereas the revenue was 1,389 lakhs, but at that time this House was determined not to allow Government to spend more and the result was that it had to cut down the expenditure by 60 lakhs, and in the very next year the expenditure began to come down. The revenue for 1922-23 was 1,422 lakhs and expenditure 1,249 lakhs, i.e., they saved more than a crore and a half. This went on for two years more, that is up to 1924-25. But what we find again in 1925-26 is that the revenue is less than the Government wishes to spend for the year. It is only 15 crores and little more, whereas the expenditure is 16 crores or something like that. Now in this connection what I wish to suggest is that the best way would be, instead of spending more, we should try to curtail our expenditure and that would be done by reducing the expenditure in many ways. Because to my mind I find, Sir, that in many departments there is a waste in expenditure. Especially I can quote certain instances from the Forest Department in which I find that there is a great deal of waste.

I will only take certain instances from that department. From that part of the Presidency from which I come, namely, the Southern Division, you will find, Sir, that there are many schemes of the Forest Department which have been failures. For instance I may quote the Forest Engineering Department which is nothing but a wasteful department. The adventures of this department can be compared to those of Don Quixote. I can quote a number of instances so that the Honourable Minister for Forest and Excise, if he carefully goes into these matters, will ultimately concur with me. I am not going into details or quoting several instances as regards this expenditure, because I want to reserve my remarks on this head to the time of demands for grants. But I will quote only the heads of the adventures on which money was or is being uselessly spent.

The first is Dandeli-Potoli railway. In reply to my interpellation it was said that this railway was taken in hand because it was thought profitable, but when I asked why it was stopped, it was said that it was stopped because it was considered unprofitable. Honourable members will remember that this project was taken up in the year 1922 and finished in the year 1924. The administration report of the Forest Department for the year 1923 says that the railway is nearing completion. But in reply to my interpellation in the year 1924 it was stated that the railway is given up. The House will see, Sir, that nearly two lakhs of rupees have been spent upon surveying and excavation and in setting up the line, and now the whole railway is abandoned. I cannot understand, Sir, why this railway was undertaken at all. The railway was undertaken without at first having any guarantee from the Southern Maratha Railway Company that they would buy the fuel, and when the railway company did not buy the fuel the whole concern had to be given up and you will see, Sir, that if proper steps had been taken from the very beginning to ascertain the wishes of the railway company as to whether they would buy the fuel and a guarantee that they would buy for certain number of years this undertaking ought not to have been undertaken at all. Then there are other adventures which the Forest Department has undertaken and all of them are failures more or less. For instance the mono-railway and also the Kaneri river scheme which has cost Rs. 50,000 and there is not one pie worth of return from that scheme.

Then there is the Dandeli-Alnawar railway. I am told the capital expenditure for this railway is 9 lakhs and we have to lose every year to the extent of Rs. 50,000. A single full train cannot run daily on that side. When this railway was being commenced many experts on that side and also the public suggested that the railway should not be taken through that uninhabited tract, that it should run through certain populated villages and that it should not be confined only to the transport of fuel and timber but that there should also be passenger traffic. That advice was not taken advantage of, and now you will find, Sir, that there are not sufficient passengers for the railway and the railway is running at a loss. Similarly it can be said of Bommanhalli causeway. The cost of this project has gone up to nearly eighty thousand rupees. It was projected with the intention of exploiting certain territory. But it has now been found that there is nothing to be exploited and the causeway is not used by anybody. That shows, Sir, that this causeway was not required at all. But it seems that the highly paid officers who wanted shikar and good roads for their motor cars to have pleasant trips have anyhow managed to get this causeway prepared there and they have actually wasted nearly Rs. 80,000 for nothing. Then, similarly with regard to the various appliances by which the timber is taken out of the forests. There are motor tractors which have been ordered and which have been lying waste. Such a motor tractor we can find even now at Tavargatti station lying there. There is a Petter oil engine which is lying there and similar wasteful contracts have been undertaken by this department. I can quote, for instance, the sleeper contract with the G. I. P. Railway. Many of the sleepers, I am told, were condemned and the sleepers cost even more to the department than they actually fetched. Similar is the case in my part with regard to the saw mills—the saw mills at Dandeli and at Sambrani. The administration report will show that the saw mill at Dandeli is causing a loss of Rs. 15,000 every year and the one at Sambrani also is causing a loss of Rs. 18,000. These figures I am quoting from the Forest Department's administration report for 1922-23. These are the illustrations which I give from my part; the illustrations might be similar in other parts of the presidency. We find that if the Government would carefully consider the plans beforehand and see that the expenditure is brought within proper limits, then there would be no necessity to come forward and say "we want more revenue". The same can also be said with regard to other departments. Take, for instance, the Excise Department. No doubt this year's report says that preventive staff should be manned more numerically. But whatever that may be, I am inclined, Sir, to believe that there is no question of increasing the staff. On the contrary, it is necessary to cut down this staff. There are various superintendents and inspectors whose number can very well stand reduction.

Then, coming to the Judicial Department, I will quote only one instance, Sir, as to how money has been spent unnecessarily, and that instance is that of an ordinary case which was being conducted in the Dharwar district. It was a case of riot, a case from Madalgeri in which the accused being rich men wanted to have the luxury of calling in the services of a counsel. If the accused had that luxury, why should Government go in for such a luxury and engage a special counsel from Bombay paying about Rs. 500 per day? It was an ordinary case and it could ordinarily be conducted by the public prosecutor of the district. He is a B.A., LL.B. and a man of 25 years' standing. He has got five LL.B.'s under him to assist him. Any one of them could look after the work. But, in spite of that, Government spent at the rate of about Rs. 500 per day, the case went on for ten days and they had to spend Rs. 5,000 there, and just now I find that the case has been taken to the High Court for appeal. Not only the public prosecutor, but even the sub-inspector concerned have come here to instruct the counsel in Bombay. Why so much waste? In appeal I do not think that two persons are necessary to give instructions. There is the record and the Government Pleader here can very well go through the record and be able to conduct that case.

So, Sir, if Government would reduce their wasteful expenditure, then there would be no need for further taxation. We have been crying since long that the administration is top-heavy and that the posts of the supervisors in the various departments should be cut down. Before Government makes out a case for further taxation, I would ask them whether all the recommendations of the Retrenchment Committee have been followed. A Retrenchment Committee had been appointed and after much labour and thought it has made its report. Unless those recommendations have been considered and given effect to, I think Government have no right whatsoever to come forward and say "We want more money and that money should be provided".

[Mr. V. N. Jog]

I will close my observations with one remark as to whether the budget is just to all. As I read the budget, I have to make the same complaint which my honourable friend Mr. Kambli made yesterday, namely that that portion of the country which is called the Karnatak has from the beginning been ignored. Its wants have never been taken into consideration at all. For instance, Bijapur is so very peculiarly situated that either the eastern rains or the western rains do not reach it and once in every three years we have got a famine there. Yet no irrigation scheme or any other schemes which would relieve the distress in that part of the country has ever been thought of. It is not that that district has got no rivers. There are four rivers which pass through this district, the Ghataprabha, the Malaprabha, the Krishna and the Bhima, yet we have got no scheme to relieve these people from the hardships of famine. Is this justice to this part of the country. Similar is the case with certain talukas of the Dharwar district. I do not want to dwell longer upon it, but what is the feeling as to how that part is treated can only be seen from the fact that this year all the Kanarese districts met in December at Belgaum and appointed a committee to consider the steps and ways as to how they should achieve to have a different province altogether for themselves. That feeling is itself evidence as to how this matter is being felt in that part of the country. In short, I want to appeal to this House that whatever fears might have been raised by reading the speech of the Finance Member, let us with firm and resolute mind determine to curtail expenditure wherever it is unnecessary and not be frightened out of our wits by the threat of "No advance in nation-building departments without more money", and let us with one voice tell Government that no further taxation unless the expenditure is reduced and the retrenchment recommended is fully given effect to.

Mr. HOOSENALLY M. RAHIMTOOLA (Bombay City): Mr. President, last year during the budget discussion the budget was called a prosperity budget. Judging from that standard, the budget presented this year must be called an adversity budget, because there is a deficit of 41 lakhs and fresh taxation is proposed. In this connection, Sir, I would like to mention that I have tried to study the budget very carefully, but I must confess that I have found it almost an impossible task to understand the figures given and the groupings made. I found very great difficulty as a layman to understand the budget. I would suggest to the Government and specially to the two Indian Members of the Executive Council who are ex-presidents of the Bombay Municipal corporation, to consider the advisability of having our budget on the form of the Bombay municipal budget if possible, and to separate the capital and the ordinary budget. This, I hope, will help the members greatly.

Another suggestion which I want to make is that the speech of the Honourable the Finance Member, which is printed, should be circulated along with the budget so that we will have more time to study it.

[Mr. Hoozenally M. Rahimtoola]

Well, Sir, I have carefully read and read over and over again the speech of the Honourable the Finance Member, but I must say that I am entirely dissatisfied with it. If I were to refute the arguments and the fallacies underlying and the vicious circle in which the arguments move, I would require at least as much time as the Honourable the Finance Member took to deliver his speech. But the time at my disposal is very short and I would therefore confine myself to only a very few points.

Sir, one of the important principles of finance is that Government should not take from the people more than they can spend in a year. Last year, on the revised estimates, Government expected a surplus of Rs. 25 lakhs on the budget of 1923-24, but the actual surplus has been Rs. 109 lakhs. This year they expect a deficit of Rs. 18 lakhs, and it is a queer coincidence that in February last year this Council rejected additional taxation to the extent of Rs. 18 lakhs and we get a deficit of Rs. 18 lakhs in the budget. For the next year, there is an expected deficit of Rs. 41 lakhs. There is another sound principle of finance, and that is that if you have taken more from the people in one year, you should return to the people that surplus which you have taken from them, during the next year. Government are very conservative in framing their estimates. They generally under-estimate revenue and over-estimate expenditure. [The Honourable Mr. H. S. Lawrence : Land Revenue ?] This is borne out by the speech of the Honourable the Finance Member himself. I would refer him to page 2 of his printed speech where he says : " it will perhaps be generally recognised that it is better to have an error on the side of caution, that it is better to have a budget which ends with a substantial balance...." I therefore conclude that, instead of having a deficit this year, we will have a surplus, and also a surplus next year. In case there is a small deficit, it ought to be met from the surplus of the year 1923-24, and no fresh taxation should be imposed, because Government ought to return to the people what extra they have taken from them during previous years.

Now, I come to the remarks of the Honourable the Finance Member about law and order, and I would refer him to the appendix which he has appended to his printed speech. There we find that during the four years 1921-22 to 1924-25, they have spent about Rs. 44,40,00,000 on Development Departments and Rs. 28,61,00,000 on Law and Order Departments. Now, Sir, the Development Departments include the Bombay Development scheme. The Bombay Development scheme is an extraordinary and temporary expenditure ; it is not a permanent expenditure. This expenditure will be recouped in after years. Therefore, if we deduct the Rs. 13 crores for Bombay Development scheme from the Rs. 44 crores odd spent for all the Development Departments, we get a figure of Rs. 31 crores, which gives an average for each year of Rs. 7,84,00,000 for Development Departments and the average for the second department, namely, Law and Order is Rs. 7,15,00,000. That means that Government have been spending annually Rs. 69 lakhs more in the first department than in the second department. Therefore, the increase of 79 per cent. in the Development Departments is illusory. The real basis to arrive at the figure is to separate capital from ordinary expenditure, and work out the figures, and those figures will be the figures on which we can base our judgment. I hope the Honourable the Finance Member will work out those figures and give them to the House in his reply to-morrow.

Now, Sir, I come to Law and Order. It is said that for the proper government of the country and the advancement of the people, law and order must be maintained, and that they are necessary before advancement can be achieved. But do Government know why they have to incur such heavy expenditure in maintaining law and order? The real reason is that Government have entirely neglected the economic uplift of the people, and have done very little for the economic improvement of the people. The agriculturists are weighed down with taxation; our merchants and industrialists receive very little help; on the contrary, hindrances have been put in their way, and no encouragement has been given to them. Government have gone on increasing liquor shops and thus put temptation in the way of the people. Then, against the wishes and the protests of the house and the people they have allowed the Turf Club to increase its revenue by opening a third enclosure. Not only that, but the real needs of the people in the shape of railway carriages for attending jatras are not provided for, but for attending the races third class special trains are run. This leads to the ruination of the people. The result is starvation, and that leads to crime. People cannot remain starving for long. They do not like to steal, but there is no alternative before them but to do so; they know that they will have to go to jail, but they also know that there in the jail they will get something to eat.

Now, Sir, I will come to another point. I have worked out figures of the population, the revenue, and the expenditure of the various provinces of India, and what do we find from those figures? The population of the Punjab is about 2 crores, the revenue is Rs. 10 crores and the expenditure is Rs. 10 crores; the average comes to Rs. 5 per head of population. In Madras the population is over 4 crores, the revenue is Rs. 16 crores, and the expenditure is Rs. 16 crores; the average expenditure comes to less than Rs. 4 per head. In the Central Provinces the population is 1,39,00,000, the revenue is Rs. 6 crores 27 lakhs, the expenditure is Rs. 5 crores 29 lakhs; the average expenditure per head is less than Rs. 4. In the United Provinces the population is Rs. 4 crores 52 lakhs, the revenue is Rs. 12 crores and the expenditure is Rs. 12 crores; the average expenditure per head is less than Rs. 3. In Assam the population is 76 lakhs, the revenue Rs. 2 crores 25 lakhs, the expenditure is Rs. 2 crores 29 lakhs; the average expenditure per head is about Rs. 3. Lastly, in Bengal the population is 4 crores 66 lakhs, the revenue is Rs. 10 crores 29 lakhs, the expenditure is Rs. 10 crores 3 lakhs, the average expenditure per head is about Rs. 2. I want to know from Government why, when other provincial Governments have spent only about Rs. 2 to Rs. 5 per head of population, Bombay spends Rs. 8, and still they are not satisfied, but want more money. Is it because they are giving greater facilities and greater services than the other provinces of India? Are they unique in this respect? The people of the Bombay Presidency are paying from twice to four times as much as the people of the other provinces of India, and still the Government of Bombay are not satisfied. They want more and more money every year and want to impose new taxation every year. How long is this to continue? I want to know, Sir, from the Honourable Ministers who are representatives of the people how they can tolerate such a position. How can they come and insist that they want still more money from this House? With these words, Sir, I resume my seat.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts): Mr. President, I have read and also listened to the speech of the Honourable the Finance Member and I find that the dominant note that runs through the whole speech is that, unless fresh sources of taxation are sanctioned by this House, the whole presidency will be faced with bankruptcy. He draws a very lurid picture when the excise revenue will disappear, and tries to make out a case for the two taxation bills. Taking your advice I shall reserve my remarks with regard to those two bills till they are actually presented to the Council. For the present I shall confine my remarks to a general discussion of the budget, and also take the hint of the Finance Secretary and point out where we want improvements in the White Book and Blue Book.

There are certain graphs appended to the budget and these graphs afford interesting reading. We find that the revenue has been steadily growing up and though the expenditure was kept below the revenue for some years we find that during the last few years, the expenditure has gone beyond the revenue. I will first point out to the Honourable the Finance Secretary my grievances as regards the Blue Book and the White Book. I am speaking subject to correction. I find that several allowances, such as house allowance, travelling allowance, payable to the all-India services are made non-votable. I have carefully read section 72D, clauses 3 and 4. I do not know whether salary includes the different allowances payable to the all-India services. If that is the decision of His Excellency given according to the Act, that decision has not been communicated to us. The next sub-section says that the decision of His Excellency will be final on the point. If we are informed that it is the final decision of His Excellency, it will set at rest our minds once for all. The section says:

"salaries and pensions of persons appointed by or with the approval of His Majesty or by the Secretary of State;"

I understand that these travelling and house allowances are not part of the salary. Leave aside the Lee Commission allowances, but allowances like compensatory allowances, and house allowances have been made non-votable. Thus a limitation has been imposed on the powers of this Council and what has been given by one hand has been taken away by another. The next sub-section says:

"If any question arises whether any proposed appropriation of moneys does or does not relate to the above heads of expenditure, the decision of the Governor shall be final."

[Mr. G. B. Pradhan]

I raise this question in the event that it has not been previously decided, and if decided, for reconsideration.

The second grievance is this. The Honourable the Finance Member in the Finance Committee asked me to raise this question in this House. There are provisions made for temporary establishments in the Blue Book. These temporary establishments are parasites sapping the growth of the parent tree, and this portion of the establishment appears year after year. They are never shown as extraordinary or additional items of expenditure. Neither the consent of the House nor of the finance committee is taken for any particular temporary establishment. These temporary establishments become gradually permanent temporary establishments and the expenditure on these goes up year after year, for which no provision is made as an extra item of expenditure in the Blue Book. They must be shown as additional items of expenditure in the Blue Book.

Then I find, Sir, that travelling allowances, house allowances and contingencies swell up year after year and these items ought to be pointedly shown to the House as extra items. We find that in some cases the provision for contingency has jumped up from Rs. 500 to say Rs. 5,000 and yet they are not shown as extra items or additional items of expenditure in the Blue Book. These are my grievances and these can be remedied in the preparation of the White as well as the Blue Books.

The next thing to which I request attention of the Honourable the Finance Member is to his statement that revision settlements are necessary, and that they are doing it for various reasons. He says that the State has a right for a share of the unearned increments. I admit that it has that right, provided he makes out a case for such a demand. The Honourable the Finance Member says that they have provided roads and railways, we have got good markets and we get good prices for our produce from the fields. While he said that, he did not look to the other side of the picture. He has not said how much area of land remains fallow. There are several lands that remain fallow near cities. From my own experience I can say that while I used to pay an assessment of Rs. 105, I got a return of Rs. 85, and pay Rs. 25 out of my pocket, because no tenants were available and the lands remained fallow. The Honourable Member ought to take into consideration that requisite facilities have not been given to cultivators. The Forest Department sells every blessed thing in the forests. Gocharan has been reduced. The cultivator cannot step into the forests, and cannot even take country bidi leaves. Every small thing is sold by auction to contractors and there is not even enough material for rabi purposes. There are restrictions imposed everywhere. The grazing fee has been raised instead of being reduced. He is handicapped in a dozen other ways. Has the Honourable Member taken into consideration the growing costs of production and the high prices the cultivator has to pay for his bare necessities of life. The Honourable the Finance Member ought to take into consideration all these facts and justify the right of the State for a share in the unearned increment. The Honourable the Finance Member stated that the revision settlements have been stopped. It was rightly pointed out by the honourable member for West Khandesh (Mr. S. S. Dev) that the revision settlements have not been stopped. As a matter of fact revision settlement is going on in my own district, and in the Kolaba district. As a matter of fact revision assessment is being levied in the Panvel taluka of the Kolaba district. It is no good saying in the speech that revision settlements have been stopped in view of the resolution passed by this Council. On the other hand scant respect has been shown to that resolution and other resolutions of the Council. Therefore my submission to the Honourable the Finance Member is that when he states that the State has a right for additional assessment in the shape of revision settlement he should also take into consideration the fact that in the contentment of the agricultural classes is your strength and in their prosperity your security.

Then, I may also point out what has been told me by my honourable friend from Karachi, as regards the Madrassa that has been started at Larkana. Unfortunately we have got enough of differences among ourselves. I never knew for a moment that the State was accentuating those differences. What a sad thing it is! Let us be brought together: do not accentuate our differences. If there is a high school and that school happens to be a Government institution or a municipal institution it ought to be open for all classes without reference to caste or creed.

(At this stage Khan Saheb A. M. Mansuri stood up and made some remarks which were inaudible at the Reporters' table.)

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Interruptions cannot be allowed unless the honourable member in possession of the House allows them by resuming his seat.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN: Mr. President, what I am putting forward is this: that we are sons of the same soil; let us be brought up together. Please do not accentuate the differences further; we have got enough amongst ourselves.

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE: Will the honourable member make his statement clear?

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN: A high school is there and it is called a Madrassa, so that students of other communities are not allowed into it.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD: Is that gossip; or is it a true statement?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: Do you object to its being called a Madrassa?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN: Students of other communities are allowed.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD: Sir, I wish the honourable gentleman would apologise to the House for what he has said.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN: What have I said to apologise ?

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD: You said that students of other communities are not allowed.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN: On the contrary, I am pleading: let us be brought up together as we are sons of the same soil.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Is the honourable member (Moulvi Rafiuddin Ahmad) rising to a point of order ?

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD: Yes.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: What is the point of order ?

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD: The point of order is this: a wrong statement has been made by the honourable gentleman, for which he is bound to make an apology.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The honourable member has made a statement. If he is contradicted, he accepts the contradiction, and the contradiction prevails.

Khan Bahadur S. N. BHUTTO: Mr. President, if I am permitted, I may throw some light on the question. There is a school at Larkana which is called a Madrassa. But it was started for Mahomedan zamindars' boys and it was maintained at their cost. Not a pie was contributed towards it by any other community. Therefore, students of other communities are not allowed as the school is solely maintained by the Mahomedan zamindar class. Since two years the school has been transferred to the district local board, it was decided by an unanimous vote of the board, Hindus and Mahomedans, with one voice that the institution should continue as a communal school.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: So long as the policy in the presidency remains that there should be communal institutions, it is futile to discuss it on the budget. A special discussion on the policy should be raised if any honourable member wishes to do so.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN: What I was urging, Sir, was this: let us be taught in the same schools. We are sons of the same soil, let us be brought together. After all, let national ideas prevail amongst us. I do not understand why my honourable friends should take offence at that statement. Each and every one of us is pleading for the prevalence of such sentiments whenever an opportunity arises.

Then, Sir, it has been pointed out to us that the revenue is not able to meet the expenditure. It has been repeatedly said that this presidency is a model presidency and that it is setting an example to the other presidencies. If that is so, may I request the honourable members occupying the Government benches who belong to the all-India services, that they will set an example to other members of their service by saying: "Though we are entitled to these higher rates of pay under the new rules, we shall forego them, because the finances of the presidency do not permit the payment of such rates". Will not that be setting a good example to the other presidencies and to the other officers of this presidency? We are told that these increases are a mere flea-bite. We are told further that if we reduce the number of members in the all-India services, and if we practise economy that way, then there would be a danger of inefficiency in the services. No doubt we want efficiency. But supposing our purse does not permit our having efficiency at that cost, will we not be right in foregoing part of that efficiency?

Sir, it is painful to refer to the Bombay Development Department: it is painful to tell anybody that he is wrong. But I have read and re-read the speeches of the honourable the Director of the Development Department and of the Honourable the General Member last year. The speeches do not satisfy me that the Development Department has been a boon to the community and will continue to be so. I think the Honourable Member in his expectations is wrong. The Government for which he speaks is wrong. The verdict of history will be they are wrong. We shall see. I hope I am wrong; and I wish I am wrong. Though I am an optimist, I cannot entertain the faintest expectation that the Development Department will turn out a boon. I have taken out the figures for the last four or five years, and what I find is that the estimates made in the budget were never realised. I could not get the detailed figures for 1922-23. In that year it was anticipated that the total revenue would be Rs. 89,93,000, but the realisation was only Rs. 27,85,000. In the year 1923-24, the anticipations from sales of land and sales of water were 78 lakhs and 1 lakh respectively, and the realisations were only 10 lakhs and 60,000. In 1924-25, the anticipated income from land sales was 27 lakhs, but the realisation was only 7 lakhs. For the coming year the anticipation under sales of land is Rs. 9,33,000, and under sales of water Rs. 1,15,000. As regards rent, what I see is that with the increase in the number of buildings there is actually a decrease in the rent. And if you refer to the appendix in the Blue Book (page 138) you will find that the budget for the next year anticipates revenue from sales of land, sales of electricity, rent, etc., far more than the revised estimates for the current year. Perhaps because I am not placed on that high pedestal on which the honourable members of the Government benches are placed and from which they can get a better view of the horizon, my sight is limited: I cannot gaze into futurity with that clarity of vision with which they can. After all, I am a democrat, and I believe in public criticism and public instruction. I am here to represent the views of the people. I therefore say to Government: please pay us the compliment of believing that what we say, we say from the bottom of our heart. We bring these views to your notice with all the sincerity at our command. If we make mistakes, it is due to wrong calculations or insufficient data. You point out to us those mistakes. But my request is this: you need not stop those schemes with which you have proceeded headlong; they cannot be starved; you complete them. But do stop the other schemes, and do not undertake new ones. The acid test of success in these schemes is the proceeds from the sale of land and the sale of water. Government have spent 32 lakhs over the Ambernath works. That is the figure shown at page 151 of the Blue Book.

[Mr. G. B. Pradhan]

They have spent 8 lakhs on electric power in Ambernath. How many factories and companies are there which take their water or the land? My submission to Government is: if unfortunately your anticipations are wrong, then think of the sad legacy you are leaving to future generations in the way of having to pay interest and sinking fund charges. Sir, I find some provision made in the budget for schemes which are yet to be undertaken.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR: (Made some remarks which were inaudible at the Reporters' table).

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN: If I am mistaken, you can point out those mistakes.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Your time is up.

Khan Saheb A. M. MANSURI (Ahmedabad and Surat Cities): Sir, I cannot refrain from congratulating the Honourable the Finance Member upon presenting to us a budget in which he has made sufficient provision for the nation-building departments. He has made ample provision for those departments, namely, primary compulsory education and sufficient provision has also been made for providing better facilities for hospitals and medical relief. There has also been provision made for the engineering colleges, and there has been provision made for the Goraksha, for the Social Service League which is known to do very good work in this country especially in our Bombay presidency, and provision has also been made for the National Baby Week and as such we are proud that some amount of our revenue is given over for the care of our infants. But, Sir, after going cursorily through the budget I would like to refer to some of the main points. Our land revenue in India rests on crops and crops depend on rains and rains in India are nothing but a gamble, and so our crops are only nothing but visionary. Therefore so far as our land revenue estimates are concerned, I would like to bring to the notice of the Honourable the Finance Member that it would be far better if land revenue is calculated after making sufficient allowance for remission and suspension which are always bound to arise owing to the uncertainty of rainy season in India. Land revenue is our main and chief crop and I think Government should look at it not with one angle of vision, but that they should have also another angle of vision, that is to say, that they should not look to the collection of revenue alone but that they should give to the cultivators some facilities which they rightly claim. What is the state of cultivators and what is the system of recovering land revenue from them? Soon after the crops have grown up, an officer of Government known as talati comes on the spot and he asks for the assessment. Then a certain other officer known as the circle inspector and another known as mamlatdar come one after the other. And what is their chief demand? It is nothing but to ask for collection. Do any of these officers go to these cultivators when they are engaged in actually growing their seeds and see whether the soil that the cultivators select for their cultivation of cotton and other crops is suited for that particular cultivation? Do these officers give them the necessary instructions ? Sir, the business of these officers is only to go to the cultivator and ask for land revenue and to see that they collect it to a pie. Sir, on account of the uncertainty of rains there are frequent happenings of famine in India and if there is any safeguard for this it is irrigation. While Government is projecting irrigation works like the Sukkur Barrage in Sind which is expected to make Sind a garden and projecting similar irrigation works in Deccan they have neglected our Gujarat. Gujarat is proud of having big rivers like the Narbuda and Tapti and it pays a greater portion of revenue in the form of both land revenue and excise duty and income tax. But, Sir, although this has been brought to the notice of this House off and on, soon after the reforms, not a pie has been spent or designed to be spent for irrigation works in Gujarat.

Sir, in this budget, if you go through cursorily you will find that a good deal of money is designed to be spent after good many public works and also for the administration of justice and for the police. No doubt His Excellency remarked the other day that police is a necessary evil, and although I would certainly agree that it is a necessary evil, I must remark that we have more police than is necessary. Instead of having a large number of constables we are supplied with big officers like inspectors and deputy superintendents whom we have to pay fat house allowances and travelling allowances and what not. If you look to the number of inspectors and sub-inspectors and deputy superintendents of police you will find that their number is four times more than what it should really have been. When we wanted to cut down the police budget Government tried to do away with certain police stations in the mofussil where they were entirely necessary.

Now, Sir, coming to the question of education I am glad to note that in this budget after a great cry of some of my honourable friends, Government have been kind and gracious enough to sanction two central schools for Mahomedans but that is only a bit of a sugar loaf thrown at us. The real necessity of the Mahomedans are still not attended to as they should have been. There is a great necessity for parda schools in this Presidency for Mahomedans girls. Now, Sir, I have to thank Government for a press note which has been recently issued in which mention has been made that 50 per cent. of the services in the subordinate departments will be reserved for the backward classes, and the Mahomedans are to-day amongst them. But, Sir, there is a long history behind this. After the advent of the benign British Government in this country, Government have neglected the Mahomedans for more than 50 years. Soon after their advent they started in the Bombay presidency a college for the so-called Brahmans in Poona in the year 1821 (hear, hear). In the Deccan College for 50 years they took nobody but Brahmans and thus all the services were monopolised by the Brahmans. I have not got a special grievance against the Brahmans but against Government itself. For 50 years they did not take the least notice of the Mahomedans because they thought that this was a ruling race and they should not be entrusted with any power. (Some honourable members: No, no). A few years afterwards some notice was taken of the Mahomedans and since then some little progress has been made in education. Whenever Mahomedans applied for service, they were told that sufficient number of qualified Mahomedans were not coming forward. But, Sir, now there are hundreds of Mahomedans qualified to serve in every department, but, Sir, you will see if you cast your eyes around you that there are very few Mahomedans in the top services or subordinate service. Sir, you will thus see that the case of the Mahomedans has not been considered properly by Government as it should have been done.

Sir, another thing which I want to bring to the notice of this House is that this House has been passing resolutions after resolutions, but I doubt very much in what spirit these resolutions are taken by the Government. Last year the Waqf Act was passed and we passed a resolution in this Council that that Act should be applied to this Presidency. It is more than 11 months that the resolution was passed and though representations were submitted and rules submitted to the Minister in charge, still that Waqf Act has not been applied here and it stands a dead letter up to to-day. Personally, Sir, I do not mind if the Dawoodi Bohras are exempted from its operation.

Sir, now with regard to these taxation bills which are proposed to be brought by the Finance Member, I have to urge that if he takes steps to do away with the public works, the civil works, that are not entirely necessary this year and utilises that money for the nation-building departments, then this House might see its way to consider these bills for taxation. With these remarks I beg to resume my seat.

Mr. L. J. MOUNTFORD : Sir, we have heard some very interesting discussions on various matters including our assessments and perhaps some remarks will be useful to enable members of the House to understand the principles and the practice of our land revenue administration, because I have heard a good many remarks made which I do not think should be allowed to pass unchallenged. In the first place, I would like honourable members to understand that our land revenue assessment is based on the probabilities of the land and not on the possibilities. Therefore, when we are fixing the assessment in a taluka where rainfall is poor, we take into consideration the probabilities of the land and we charge assessment accordingly. We have just as good soils, for example, in many parts of Sholapur as in West Khandesh, but owing to the fitful and precarious rainfall the assessment in Sholapur is pitched far lower than in West Khandesh. Our assessment will be found to be perfectly moderate and it is proved by the fact that before our suspensions we collected over 90 per cent. of our demand and in some years 99 per cent. Then, again, the assessment is pitched low as an average assessment that can be paid over a run of three years, so that in a bad year this assessment could easily be paid and it was easily paid. In a poor year, 1896-97, 95.3 per cent. of the assessment was collected. In 1891-92, 99.2 per cent. was collected. In order, however, to make matters still easier for the agriculturist, Government introduced the remission and suspension rules some 20 years back, whereby a smaller proportion of the assessment is taken in a bad year and the balance is made up in a good year. As matters now stand, a very considerable amount of money is lost through these rules, money to which the State is entitled. For our generosity in making matters easier for the ryot, we are told that this is a proof that we cannot collect our land revenue because the land revenue is heavy. This is an entirely false deduction when the land revenue was paid easily enough before these remission and suspension rules were introduced. It is of no use to attempt to squeeze the ryot too rigidly and Government fully recognises this. In the Central Division the estimates of collections which were calculated on the situation in September last, when there was great hope that good harvests would supervene, were cut down many lakhs when it was found later by December that these hopes were not destined to be fulfilled. I merely mention this to disabuse the House of the idea, which is so often pushed forward, that Government is squeezing the ryot to the utmost. What is fair and reasonable is taken and I must again remind the House of what I said three years ago in this connection, that this money is your money : it is required for your needs, for your nationbuilding departments and is money to which you are fully entitled when collected under these safeguards.

There have been many criticisms levelled against the revision settlements which were criticised in a recent resolution. The principle of a revision settlement is to base the assessment upon the profits of the land when they have increased in the last 30 years. There is no reason why a settlement made 30 years ago under perfectly different conditions should be allowed to exist at present. It would be an absurdity to continue an assessment which was imposed under very different conditions, when during the period of the settlement communications have vastly improved, the price of grain has risen and rentals and sales show far higher figures. Any one who will wade as I have to do through the complex and numerous forms that are the basis of a revision settlement report will find that the revision is based upon clear and demonstrable reasons. When it is found, as is often the case, that the landlord leases land out at five to six times the assessment that he pays, surely there is absolute reason for increasing the assessment. Leases are going up rapidly and any one will show you what he who runs may read, and that we are fully justified in increasing our assessment.

I would like, Sir, to make a few remarks now on our forest policy. We were told, I think, by the honourable member for Thana that "The forest sells every blessed thing in the forest" and it gives the cultivator nothing. The statement is not correct. I do not think he can have studied the Forest Code very carefully, because the forest cannot give everything to the cultivator of a village in the vicinity of the forest, but I can enumerate off-hand a few of the advantages that it does give him: He gets soppu and dharku or dry and green leaf manure free; he gets freematerial for cattle stalls, farm buildings, for hedges; he gets bamboos for fencing free; he gets palm trunks for water channels free; he gets grazing at a fairly cheap or nominal rate; and he can purchase reserved trees for a few rupees, a nominal price. In Lettas he can buy a reserved tree for one rupee. Moreover, what would you gentlemen who live in Poona and Bombay think if you could get your fuel at four annas and under a maund as these cultivators can? Apart from this they have privileges also.

Now as regards the forests we have in this presidency, we have to consider their physical conditions. They are situated in hilly and inaccessible country with few roads and many impassable rivers. Unless we develop our communications and penetrate inside this country we shall never be able to get at our forest produce which is capable of providing us with vast resources of wealth. We are told that the Dandeli-Alnawar railway does not pay, but assuming it does not, assuming that the expenditure on the Bomanhalli crossing is heavy, which is very necessary to open up communications with the north-eastern side, you cannot expect communications to pay as soon as they are laid down, to yield you an immediate return of rupees the moment they are built. Now, some years ago the Bombay mills were not paying—they do not always pay—but I am not aware that the mills were shut down for ever on that account. In the matter of these communications you cannot expect to get a good return within a few years; it isn't business, it isn't commonsense. There will always be bad seasons and good seasons. Those good seasons are bound to come. These are all schemes of development. They may not be bringing in any revenue to-day or to-morrow; we must take a long view. There is another view to be taken, and that is that transport by buffaloes is so expensive now that we are fully justified in having constructed the Dandeli-Alnawar Railway. Every year the difficulty becomes more acute to get our buffalo transport, and every year we shall find ourselves less able to bring our timber out without further penetration into forests. You cannot possibly get out your timber unless you construct proper roads, bridges and causeways. Once you do that, we can bring along our logging machines as in Canada and the United States of America, and then we can bring the band saws into the forests themselves. At present, any one who goes into Kanara forests, covering an area of 3,300 square miles, will be struck by the fact that it is impossible to enter our forests except by a few selected roads, and if we are to get the large revenue that lies there, we must spend more money to penetrate into our vast resources. Forest matters are not to be discussed from year to year at the time of the budget discussion. You have got to make provision for all the years to come. When you lose your excise revenue, you will have to look to your forests for bringing in more revenue, and any money on forests which you do not spend now will entail a loss in the future. I have had a survey made of the forests in the Southern Division, and I have shown in one case that if Government could give me Rs. 20,000 to be laid out on those forests, I would give them a profit of Rs. 10,000 a year on it; but there is no money for it. That is the sort of loss that you are incurring. But I can go further and say that we must wait for more prosperous times. Just now there is a slump in the timber trade, but when timber rises again, you will not be able to meet the demand for timber, unless you sink money now in every way possible in your forests.

As regards the police, we have cut down the police very considerably in all divisions, and I was told that in one division there was more than one town where the Bunyas have had to employ their own private police to afford them security. We have been told by the honourable member who just sat down that while we are spending more money on the higher officers of the force we have cut down the expenditure on police constables, and that we have cut down too many police stations. But it should be remembered that you cannot have a police station without higher officers. You cannot put a constable in charge of a police station; you have to put your inspector in charge of it. I should also like to point out that the honourable member was wrong when he contends that we give everything for superintendence and nothing for the men. In the Blue Book the figure shown for superintendence is 305, while for the district executive force it is 1,18,86; it is less than 3 per cent. for superintendence. Probably, he has confused the head "Village Police". Possibly he does not quite understand what village police means. The village police are not really police at all, but are the inferior village servants under the patil of the village. What we really want is a very large increase in our police budget. Honourable members will have recollection of the recent Pathan menace in Bombay, and how the people were scared by the dacoities and raids of Mir Khan Baluch and the Miana gangs in Sind and in the north of the presidency. It is only right that we should have such a police force so that these dacoits would never come, rather than have to add to the force when they do come.

(After Recess.)

Mr. N. E. NAVLE (Ahmednagar District): Mr. President, as a member of the non-Brahmin party and as a representative of the Deccan agriculturists, I rise to offer a few remarks on this year's budget that is presented to us for discussion. Sir, it is but natural that members like myself, representing as we do the agriculturists of the Deccan, it is but natural, I say, that members like myself should seek to find in the budget some relieving feature from the point of view of the agriculturists; and I may be permitted to say at once that members representing the agriculturists are utterly disappointed to find no such relieving feature in the budget. Not only does the budget not contain any such feature, but, on the contrary, it is a disappointing budget. It may be called a Government servants' budget, but not the people's budget.

The Honourable the Finance Member says that there is a deficit and that we must vote for the new taxation bills. Let us, Sir, for a moment consider the deficiency point in the budget. Is there a real deficiency, I ask? Are there no ways and means to curtail the extravagant expenses provided for in the budget? Have Government tried their best to curtail various items of expenses? I think they have not, and as long as they have not done this duty, it is not proper for them to ask us to vote for these new taxation bills. And what class of people have they chosen for bearing the burden of this new taxation? The poorer people, the agriculturists. Take, for instance, the Court-fees Bill. Whom is it going to burden? The Honourable the Finance Member says that it is going to burden the man who goes to the law courts. I think he is reading the situation in a wrong way. It is not the man who goes to the court that is going to be burdened by this additional taxation of court-fees, but it will ultimately fall on the defendant agriculturist because the plaintiff will have all his costs awarded by the courts, and the cost of all suits will ultimately fall on the defendant agriculturist. So, ultimately the agriculturist will be burdened by this new taxation. We are therefore not going to vote for the Court-fees Act Amending Bill. The Honourable the Finance Member says that no complaint has been received against the enhanced court-fees. But I may tell him that though the agriculturists of the Deccan might not be knowing the civilised ways of holding meetings and sending in petitions to Government, yet there is that discontent raging in their minds, and if Government do not take note of that discontent, it might find some other way of ventilation, and that might prove more harmful to the agriculturists themselves as well as to the Government. So, it is better that Government should take early note of this latent discontent that is already in the minds of the agriculturists of the Deccan. Sir, I find that Deccan agriculturists have been completely harassed in more than one way. I do not know what would be the result if this oppression goes on still further. I am afraid that the results will be horrible. There is an agrarian discontent throughout the Deccan; and Government are fully aware of the reasons for this discontent. Take for instance the annewari of crops. There is a great discontent on this matter. When the crop is worth 4 as. the annewari is put at 8 as. or 12 as. It might be stated that remissions and suspensions are being given. But these remissions and suspensions ought to be given as a matter of right; but Government have not done that and are collecting the land revenue by their oppressive means. Sir, it is a fact which Government already knows that the crops in the Deccan, except in a few parts, are a thorough failure—I mean the rabi crops. Whatever crops there were, they have been subjected to the ravages of the extreme cold. Still Government are putting their annewari at 8 or 10 annas. If the circle inspector puts down the annewari at the proper figure there is the mamlatdar and higher officials above him. But what is the use of blaming either the talati, circle inspector or mamlatdar? These officers are threatened by the collectors and assistant collectors and they stand the risk of losing their services if they do not put the annewari at an inflated level. That is being done in my own district and all over the Deccan, and Government have been saying that they have been very kind to the agriculturists and give them liberal remissions and suspensions. Be just to the agriculturists before you pretend to show any mercy to them. The way in which remissions and suspensions are granted is not fair, because they are granted in such cases only where you cannot get a pie by oppressive methods. Wherever you have been able to get money from the agriculturists there is neither suspension nor remission.

Take the forests. There are one thousand and one grievances in this department. Grazing fee is a prominent feature of the agrarian discontent. The Government has been pleased to appoint a committee. But it seems to me from the ways in which the work is going on that this committee is going to be a farce. One does not know when it is going to commence work, and what parts of the country it is going to visit. In the Ahmednagar district people are crying for a reduction in the grazing fee, especially in the Akola taluka, and that cry is not heeded in spite of the fact that the district is famine-stricken and the people are poverty-stricken.

Sir, I cannot refrain from referring to the evidence of Sir Gangaram of the Punjab before the Taxation Enquiry Committee. In relation to the policy of revision settlements he put forward a view before the committee that the Government may take in a lump sum the assessment for 30 years and free the lands from assessment. This suggestion has set representatives of agriculturists like myself a-thinking. I would suggest for the consideration of this Government that 20 years' assessment may be taken in a lump sum, and free sanads may be granted to agriculturists that their lands are free from assessment for ever. If that is done Government will be relieved of this bother of remissions and suspensions, and it will also be a beneficial thing from the agriculturists' point of view.

One more thing. We come to this House with the hope to do something for the people. We are asking for the redress of various grievances. If we give notices of resolutions, we must be fortunate in coming up in the ballot, and then we will have an opportunity of moving our resolutions and bringing to the notice of Government our grievances. If any one is fortunate enough to obtain a high place in the ballot, and brings forward his resolution before the House, the resolution is at times accepted by Government. But Government do not take any steps to translate that resolution into action. I may quote the instance of my resolution regarding the Akola mamlatdar murder case. It is on the assurance given by the Honourable the Home Member that the resolution was withdrawn and still nothing has been done in the matter.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: I may explain, Sir. I am informed that that is not so. Something has been done.

Mr. N. E. NAVLE: I leave that point. In conclusion I wish to thank the Government for issuing new orders for recruitment of non-Brahmin members for the lower clerical service. I may say that the manner in which that order has been worded is not satisfactory. The order ought to have run thus: Wherever properly qualified candidates of backward communities are available they should be given preference over candidates of the advanced classes till 50 per cent. of all the posts are filled up by these communities. Government have not done that. I request Government therefore to henceforward consider this suggestion of mine, and also take care to see that their orders are strictly carried out by the lower officials. If any complaints are received in the matter, Government should take proper steps. One suggestion I wish to make. Why such orders should not be issued with regard to higher services also?

I wish to say a few words with regard to the excise resolution of Government. Government is going to make the country dry. They say that they will have to face financial difficulty and that we will have to vote for fresh taxation. We are ready to pass the new taxation, but the time has not yet come, because the excise income is on the increase. There is no such fear as the falling off of the excise revenue. When the excise revenue really falls, there will be a real difficulty and then we can consider the matter of voting for the new taxation.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI (Karachi City): Mr. President, the budget that has been placed before this House is undoubtedly a formidable document, but in spite of the addition of some explanations and graphs, it is in its conception and outline as disappointing and as out of date as its predecessors, and one fails to find any relieving feature in it. And all this huge mass of details is hurled at us only two or three days before we leave our places for Bombay. I got this budget on the 14th, and I had to leave Karachi on the 17th, and that gave me only two days to study this mass of detail and we are expected to be able, after such a short time of study, to review the annual financial operations of a big Government, of the most advanced presidency in India, in the course of twenty minutes. As this task is well nigh impossible, I propose, Sir, with your permission, to confine myself to two or three main characteristics of the budget.

The first point which I wish to raise is that the structure of Governmental finance in this presidency requires to be overhauled. Let us take for example the sources of revenue. We find that the most important sources are Land Revenue and Excise. Now, I do not agree that we are charging the cultivator in this country less than they are charging in other civilised countries of the world. I do not know if in the opinion of the Honourable the Finance Member, India is a civilised country, but at any rate I expect that this Government is civilised. Now, I wish to ask if this civilised Government is taking from the cultivators less than other civilised Governments? I say, No. On the contrary, I hold that every cultivator, rich and poor alike, has to pay in this country in the same proportion. Then, again, take Excise. This duty also falls on the rich and poor in the same proportion. We are told in the Honourable the Finance Member's speech that the United Kingdom—correctly speaking Great Britain—raises 50 times the sum levied in Bombay, although its population is only double that of Bombay. There is a fallacy in this statement which I wish to bring to the notice of this House. The consumption of alcohol in Great Britain is more than thirty times that of Bombay. I read in one of the returns that the total annual consumption in Great Britain in 1923 was nearly 51 gallons of absolute alcohol, and that is equivalent roughly speaking to 102 proof gallons, which means according to my computation more than thirty times the consumption in this presidency so far as it has been possible to find out from the annual administration report. Not only that, but the income of the average man in Great Britain is many times that of the average man in this presidency. If these two facts are taken into account, namely, that Great Britain consumes far more liquor than the Bombay presidency,—nearly thirty times more—and that the average income in Great Britain is far greater, we will see that the incidence of taxation which falls on this presidency is many times more than that in Great Britain. Now, Sir, these two sources of revenue, namely, Land revenue and Excise, are responsible for close upon two-thirds of the whole revenue of this presidency. Then comes, Stamps, Forests, Registration and other minor sources. What I wish to point out is that the basis of taxation is not equitable, and that in raising our revenue we have not fully kept in view the maxim that those who are well able to bear should bear a greater burden than the others who are less able to pay, or rather that the law of equality of sacrifice, so far as the different sections of the community are concerned, should be adopted as has been done in various other countries. And this brings me to the resolution which the Government of Bombay has recently issued regarding their excise policy. I must say in this connection that it is rather creditable for the Excise Minister that he should have been able to get a Government like the Bombay Government which has always fought shy of prohibition, to accept, on paper at any rate, the policy of prohibition. But what is most surprising is that the Government has not considered the most important part of the report, namely, the measures of taxation which will be necessary in order to give effect to prohibition. In that respect, Sir, they have simply evaded the question. The committee had proposed certain duties, like death duties, which will fall more equitably on the richer communities, upon those who are well able to bear taxation. I might be told that the Taxation Committee is now sitting and will soon give us the result of their labours. But I may be permitted to point out that the Taxation Committee will not be in a position to know the total income of the nation, the total value of the national assets and such other kindred matters, the capacity of the individual in India to bear taxation, and therefore such a committee cannot possibly conclude its labours satisfactorily. In any case, we have every reason to expect the Honourable the Finance Member to make practical proposals for overhauling our sources of revenue in consonance with the needs of this presidency and independently of the Taxation Committee.

The other point to which I would like to draw attention is the extravagant, and in many cases unnecessary provisions which have been made in the budget. I will give some examples. In the first instance, we are told by the Honourable the Finance Member that he proposes to withdraw many lakhs of rupees from the reserve fund. Now, I do not know exactly if this procedure would be in accordance with the loan account rules. That, however, is a matter between the Government of Bombay and the Government of India. But what I really cannot understand, and what I think to be most objectionable, is the inclusion of a new head in the budget, namely, reduction and avoidance of debt. I think this is objectionable from an accounts point of view. I cannot quite understand what it is, but so far as I have been able to gather it means that revenue is being charged to a very great extent for expenditure which really ought to be debited to capital account. I do not know if this can be called a jugglery or deftness in the manipulation of figures, but it is certainly objectionable. There are two such items charged to ordinary revenue. One is Rs. 8,47,000 in the current year 1924-25. I do not know if the approval of the Council has been obtained for that; and the other is 16 lakhs and odd in this year. Now, if as I believe this provision is unwarrantable and unjustified, then we get a saving of 24½ lakhs from these items alone.

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE: What is the page?

Mr. D. B. ADWANI: I will quote the page later.

Next, Sir, I come to Civil Works. I find that the provision for Civil Works is also extravagant. For example, in 1923-24, 1,16 lakhs were provided for Civil Works. But actually not more than 98 lakhs were spent. This shows extravagance in providing for the works. For the current year 1,02 lakhs were provided; but for the ensuing year we find a provision of 1,17 lakhs which is 15 lakhs more than the last year. This amount cannot be spent during the next year and a cut of 15 lakhs can easily be made. There are also many items which are unnecessary. Many buildings have been provided for and in many cases of proposed renewal these buildings are described as being in a dilapidated condition and it is stated that unless renewed they will come down. This would give one the impression that all Government buildings are probably in a dilapidated condition. But that is obviously an exaggeration. In any case I hope we can make a great saving under Civil Works. This would mean a saving of 15 lakhs. Together with the 24½ lakhs above referred to, it would make nearly 40 lakhs which would practically wipe out the deficit. Similar savings can be made in several other departments and these have been pointed out by some of my honourable friends and I do not wish to take the time of the House in going over them once again.

Then similar cuts can be made under the heads 60, Civil Works, and 55, Embankments and other construction. But I will not take the time of the House in going into them.

The next point to which I wish to refer is that the loan commitments of this Presidency are being made recklessly, and something should be done to restrict these loan commitments, otherwise we shall be mortgaging all our credit on enterprises which are so bad and of so speculative a character that even the hardest speculator would shudder at them. We have had enough experience to be able to say that the development schemes are not going to become remunerative for years to come and really we ought to suspend these schemes in whatever manner it may be possible. As a matter of fact we should not have taken up the three schemes: the Reclamation, Industrial Housing and Suburban together. It has been the experience in England that the housing schemes have been a great loss to the exchequer and I think that that should have been a sufficient warning to Government; and in any case as soon as the economic crisis set in the work should have been stopped. But still we are proceeding apace; and I do not know where we shall end. As the honourable member the Finance Secretary said, the interest may not be 3 crores, it may be $1\frac{1}{2}$ or $1\frac{1}{4}$ crores of rupees, but even then that is serious enough. In this connection I would like to say a word with regard to the tables showing debt commitments which have been printed in the Blue Book. I think they are lacking in a great deal of information. For example it is not clear from them to what extent we are receiving interest and what net interest is chargeable to this Government on account of these loans. That is not clear from these statements.

Then, Sir, I come to the Lloyd Barrage Scheme. In the first place I would like to mention again to this House that eminent engineers are really not at one with regard to some important aspects of the project, and the remunerative or productive character of the scheme. If eminent experts, some of whom have got recent experience, like Mr. Wright and some others, are right, I do not assert that they are, but some of them are more competent to give their opinions regarding the schemes than of the engineers who are responsible for making this project. I have given some attention to this matter and I find that there is a very clear case for the appointment of a committee of enquiry, an independent committee of experts, by the Secretary of State to set this controversy at rest once for all.

Then coming to the execution of the project, it is impossible to believe from a study of the figures, that money is not being very lavishly spent on this project. For example as regards the establishment, it is very heavy compared to the work that it has to turn out. Not only that, but we find that the Chief Engineer and the Superintending Engineers have been given duty allowances: the Chief Engineer gets Rs. 600 and the Superintending Engineer Rs. 200. Apart from those allowances they get compensatory and other allowances and in addition they are also given barrage allowance of 10 per cent. I do not see any necessity for these allowances. These officers are working under the same conditions as the other officers of the Public Works Department and I do not think it is necessary to give them duty allowances, the compensatory allowances, the barrage allowance, and in addition the Lee Commission allowance whatever that may be. I think, Sir, there is a clear case for full consideration with regard to the expenditure. If we do not look closely into the matter, I am sure that the actual expenditure would far exceed the estimates. In this connection I may refer to the remarks of my honourable friend Rao Saheb Desai who wanted that the actual cost should be less than that provided in the estimate. But I would like to inform him that according to the expectation of engineers and looking to the present extravagance, it would far exceed the estimated cost of 18 crores odd.

Mr. A. N. SURVE (Bombay City North): Mr. President, this is the time when we are to consider how we are to exercise the power over the purse which we have acquired under the reforms. Sir, the consideration of this question involves what was the attitude of the Government benches to the opposition benches during the last year. On the whole I think that Government have tried to meet the wishes of this House, especially this part of the House in many respects. Sir, may I point out that this House had brought to the notice of Government that the land revenue question required close examination. We have passed that resolution and Government have come forward and have appointed a committee to examine that question. Then the next point that was referred to was the excise policy. Government knowing that the majority in this House wants the Bombay presidency to go dry have come forward and accepted the dry condition as the goal of their excise policy. Take the anna valuation question; take the forest grievances. In all these respects we will find that we cannot accuse Government of inattention to the points which we have placed before them. Government have also conceded in part the demand made by the non-Brahmin party as regards the public service and it was only last week that they have issued a press note on their future policy. I shall not comment on what is actually conceded. I know that the demand is not fully met, but I concede that Government have at least attempted to show that they are alive to the justice of the grievance under which we are suffering. Sir, take, for instance, the registration question. Here, I am sorry that Government is not quite so open-minded as the House wishes it to be. Take the photo-copying system. Government knows very well that the system, though it is tried to be foisted upon the presidency on grounds of economy, is really not economy if it is to continue in its present form. The photos that are given at 5 annas a page are not quite readable and Government have come forward and now say "Give us one rupee and we will give a better photo". Well, in that case I say that the economy will vanish. Sir, may I request Government to take into account the large number of hands that will be thrown out of employment? The question of unemployment is a very serious one and it requires close and sympathetic tackling. Sir, India, you know, is overpopulated and if you are going to employ the scientific methods of lessening labour, I think for this presidency in its present condition the improvement is not desirable. Sir, if we look to the resume of the past year, I think Government have met our wishes and it is on our part now to be as willing to meet their reasonable difficulties. The second point that deserves mention is the solicitude of Government to tax those people who escape taxation at present. In this respect I assure Government that every help that this House can give to them in their endeavour to tax those people will be very readily given.

[Mr. A. N. Surve]

Coming, Sir, to the budget speech itself,—I am sorry to say that I see the Honourable the Finance Member is not in his seat—but I request him to excuse me if I use these terms that his speech is fallacious and misleading. Sir, he has been drawing upon analogies which cannot be examined at all. Take, for instance, the analogy which he has given about the duty on spirits and wine which is given by the United Kingdom as compared with Bombay. He says that the population of the United Kingdom is only twice as large as that of Bombay and still it pays fifty times as much as this presidency does. Sir, is it necessary to expose the hollowness of that analogy? Are we on all fours with the people of Great Britain? Have we their wealth? What is our condition? But apart from that, if it is the intention of Government to respect the wishes of this House as regards prohibition, why should he (the Finance Member) be looking to that source of revenue? Does he want the population of Bombay presidency to become drunkards only to yield revenue to the treasury? Sir, that kind of analogy will not do. Take another point which he has mentioned. He has referred to the taxing of bets. Well, I for one shall not be sorry if the bets are taxed, but I must tell him that there is a large section of the Hindu community which looks upon betting as immoral and any money which is coming out of a tainted source will not be welcome to us. Sir, he has given us the example of other provinces where betting is taxed. But if a thing is venial, it does not become virtuous if it is accepted by many others; a thing is venial in itself. What have we done in this presidency? In England it is said that it leads to the improvement of the breed of horses. Does it do that in Bombay presidency? Sir, it has not done that. Secondly, what are the demoralising effects of the race-going upon the people of Bombay? It was only about two or three weeks ago that we were horror-stricken to read of a double murder in one of the streets of Bombay. A man having lost some money at the race-course and not finding the wherewithal to return the money which he had borrowed, in cold blood murdered his wife and child! Are you going to allow that kind of cold-blooded crime to be perpetrated in this city simply because some money is to be obtained from that source in the future? Sir, we Indians look upon betting as immoral, and even if an attempt ever is made, I for one at least will not consent to the perpetuation of the betting evil in this city.

Then, Sir, coming to the revision settlement, that is a burning question and there also I find the Honourable the Finance Member has led us into wrong directions. He has told us that the cultivator has improved his hoardings because there is no fear of extra taxation. Sir, is that true? What does the history of our revision settlements teach us? We know that in the presidency after every 30 years the settlement undergoes a revision. Why, Sir; was it not only last year that, on the complaint of honourable members from Sind, where the revision settlement came in for revision after ten years, we extended that period to twenty years? And still, we are told that there is no fear of extra taxation by revision settlements. Another reason given for introducing the revision settlements is that it makes the pressure of taxation even. Sir, I would humbly request the Honourable the Finance Member to show me the percentage of cases in which there has been an actual reduction of the existing taxation, and the percentage of the cases in which a revision settlement has resulted in increased taxation. If he can show me instances where in 95 cases out of a hundred there has been an increase and 5 cases in which there has been a decrease, I think I shall concede to what he says. But my study has shown me that there is hardly even 1 per cent. of cases where the taxation is actually reduced on a revision settlement. A revision settlement, when it comes, comes only to increase the taxation and not to decrease it.

Then, about the improvement of communications and roads and the construction of bridges: the Honourable the Finance Member expects us to consent to extra taxation, because bridges are being built and the farmers are getting the benefit out of it. Sir, let me, with all my earnestness, assure him that the benefit of these improved roads and communications is not received by the agriculturists. It is received by the exporters, the middlemen and the sowcars. The agriculturists remain as poor as they were before.

Then the Honourable the Finance Member has held out to us a very tempting bait, and we are told that remissions and suspensions have been introduced. But I am so very sorry that when he has given us the figures of remissions and suspensions he should not also have given us the figures of coercive measures which we find in the Land Revenue Report. Sir, those coercive processes which Government employ really are at times very heartless. Take for instance the Borsad affair. What has the Government been doing there? It has been employing its coercive measures there at a time when the people had not the power to give even a pie. Sir, at the same time, we are told that there are remissions and suspensions. I do not deny that remissions and suspensions are given but they are given very sparingly—let me assure the Government of that. This naturally brings me to the deficit.

We are told that there is going to be a deficit. May I just enquire how this deficit has come about? The Honourable the Finance Member has very candidly told us that this deficit is due not on account of the fact that any extra amenities are going to be given to the public, but because Government are going to meet certain Public Works Department undertakings out of capital revenue. What I mean to say is that, in the ordinary course, for certain of the works which are to be undertaken by the Public Works Department, we would have employed loan funds. But this year we find that Government will spend that money by drawing upon our surpluses. If Government are undertaking such gigantic schemes as the Sukkur Barrage or the Development Scheme, are they going to finance works of that character out of provincial revenues? I must shudder at the consequences. If you do that, you would make the people be without the amenities which they obtain at present. Was it not only three or four years ago when it was declared with a flourish of trumpets that if we are undertaking some great works for future generations, it is not our duty to pay for them? That was only about three years ago, but Government are going to change that policy to-day. Why? Simply because, at that time Government thought that those projects were projects which would bring in a large return, but to-day I think they have come to think better of those projects, and they are afraid that perhaps, in the long run, they will not pay as much as was expected of them, and therefore they are afraid of pledging the credit of this presidency, and are trying to finance those works out of provincial revenues. Sir, the loan rules empower Government, if the works are paying, to raise loans and to finance those works. Why should not Government do that? If Government are sure that those projects are going to be a blessing, it is but their duty that they should apply to the Government of India and raise loans and do that work. But here Government are trying to starve the poorer people.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The honourable member has got only two more minutes for concluding his remarks. I merely put my hand on the bell to give him warning that his time will be up.

Mr. A. N. SURVE: It is a pity that a time limit is introduced. I can only say that as regards additional taxation, my attitude at any rate is that at present there is no reason why fresh taxation should be introduced. I am saying this not because we are cursed fellows who would not like to meet the Government demands, but simply because the presidency is very poor, and it has not the power to pay. I shall read just one extract which will show the actual condition of the villagers. It is from "India," 1923-24, page 191, where it is said:

"In certain parts of the Bombay Presidency such as the Deccan the income falls very far below the general level, where rainfall is precarious and uncertain, and soil shallow and poor, the income from all sources per head in a typical village has been calculated at Rs. 33-12 per annum."

It is from such men that Government is expecting an additional revenue by extra taxation. I shall also read another short extract as regards the wage-earners. It is said:

"But it must also be remembered that the Bombay estimates indicate that the poorest classes of the population were in 1921 compelled to spend 68 per cent. of their income on food and 15 per cent. on clothing. Another 11 per cent. went on compulsory expenditure of various kinds, leaving only 6 per cent. [mark the words] voluntary expenditure, including amusements, luxuries, and even education."

This is the small margin which the poorer people have at their command and from them Government expect money by fresh taxation. For these reasons, I think that this is an inopportune time for bringing forward any measures of extra taxation. The time will come. (Bell rung.)

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: Mr. President, before I proceed to meet some of the criticism that has been hurled at my departments, I should like to make an announcement in connection with the resolution which Government have brought out regarding their excise policy; and because the resolution, which consists of 8 or 9 printed pages, is so full, and the details in the exposition of our policy are so largely dealt with in it, I do not think I need take much of the time of the House. But I feel that there are certain remarks which I wish to make in support of it by way of explanation. Before that I trust that the resolution, as has been declared by one or two members, has met with their approval. I regret the delay that has taken place, but I assure honourable members that it was not possible to make an announcement earlier than Government have been able to do, because of the many issues involved and the great importance of the decision that Government had to make. I do hope that the manner in which Government have dealt with the question and tried to meet every point of the Excise Committee will certainly meet with the approval of this honourable House.

There is one other important point which I wish to bring to the notice of this honourable House. The Excise Committee has made it perfectly clear in their report that drink has existed as long back as we could trace; and although the question has received prominence and become more complex with the growth of time—it is as old as the hills. We are now trying to grapple with the question and uproot the evil within the space of less than a generation. The difficulties are of course evident. Let us, however, hope that we shall surmount them with the support and confidence of the public and of their representatives in this honourable House. The declaration placed in the hands of honourable members contains almost all I can say on the subject; nevertheless the few points I wish to emphasise are these; and I invite the attention of honourable members to those points.

The first and foremost is that for the past three years, we have in practice actually been moving towards prohibition through our rationing policy. As compared with the consumption of 1921-22, our ration for the next year represents a drop of 20 per cent. in the mofussil, and 40 per cent. in the city of Bombay. Here is an answer to many an honourable member who has raised the question in the course of discussion that the revenue would fall is a mere threat. Sir, we have been able to achieve this rate of reduction so far, because the revenue has remained intact on account of certain extraneous reasons—for example the unduly high bids at auction sales, and the high duty that we have levied on liquor, which is again a step towards prohibition, and which has been taken only with that view by Government. But I fear this process cannot continue indefinitely. I fear we have reached a stage where the reduction of consumption cannot be continued further without a heavy fall in our revenue. I do not suppose that the House would wish Government to relax that duty, because that would have a wrong effect on the country so far as temperance is concerned. The rationing policy, if it is followed, as it has been followed hitherto, will take us to a point when it would at once be felt that our revenue will suffer. The revenue has already suffered to the extent of 12 lakhs in the matter of still-head duty; and had it not been for the high bids the loss would have been greater. It is also maintained that we ought to pursue our policy without any regard to revenue. As practical men we cannot shut our eyes to the many considerations which the question involves. The revenue of 4 crores which we will have to abandon must be made up somehow, and there is no way out of it; and to the extent we fail to supply the revenue, to that extent must the success of the movement we have launched upon suffer and be delayed. If we fail to keep that in mind, we shall be failing in carrying out our policy to its uttermost limit. The Excise Committee have realised the fact and pointed out very clearly and recommended that legislation for new taxation should be passed before we embark on the new policy. Now Government have gone much further in the interest of the country than the Excise Committee, that is, Government have not thought it necessary to do so, relying on the co-operation of this House and, particularly on the assurance given to me in July last, and repeated by the honourable member Mr. Navle, and other honourable members in this House to-day, that the country would not fail to supply the fund when the need arises for it. Government are confident that this assurance will be respected. And I should like to repeat it, and make it perfectly clear that the continuance of this policy would only be possible if this assurance is really respected, and necessary assistance is given to Government when Government stands in need of it.

There is another point which the House will have to bear in mind. From the figures I have given to the House, it will be seen that if we go on reducing our consumption at the present rate, the Bombay city will have no liquor.

Mr. C. M. SAPTARSHI: I rise to a point of order. The Honourable Minister is exclusively dealing with the Excise policy. I think he can do that when he comes to the House for the grant under that head. When discussing in a general manner the budget, he brings in the subject relating to a particular department.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: It is for the Honourable Minister to choose as to when he should enunciate to the House the Excise policy of Government. A suggestion has been thrown out and it is for the consideration of the Honourable Minister. While discussing the general budget, the practice has prevailed that they can deal with every aspect of the administration of the presidency. It is not a point of order at all, because on this occasion any point of order can hardly arise. It is for the Honourable Minister himself to consider which is the most suitable time to explain the policy which he has enunciated on behalf of Government.

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: Sir, as many of the questions raised during the discussion are really answered in a way by the announcement I am making, and also because the resolution has also been placed before the Council, I think the sooner I explain the important points underlying that resolution the better.

Well, Sir, to continue. As I have pointed out, the city of Bombay would have no liquor to sell at that rate after six years from to-day, and the mofussil a few years more after that. Now, if that is so, I am sure the most ardent prohibitionist in this honourable House and amongst us, does not expect that the lifelong consumers of liquor in this city of Bombay can be turned into total abstainers within six years, or that with the best of our efforts we would be able to raise a revenue to the extent of our loss from the city of Bombay, which is no less than 1,25 lakhs. It is, therefore, perfectly clear that we cannot continue our present rate of rationing for long. The Excise Committee, with all their zeal, were of opinion that in rural areas further rationing could not be safely continued. But we have gone further than that, and continued rationing in rural areas as elsewhere. That will, in the first place, show to the House the bona fides of Government, in the matter of this new policy. But, Sir, the danger pointed out by the committee is a real one, and we should be very careful to see that we do not proceed with our measures only on paper, as was pointed out by the honourable member for Karachi. Government do not want that the policy should be a paper policy, but they really intend to enforce that in practice also. While, therefore, we intend to continue rationing, we must not be tied down to our present, or any particular rate of rationing, or to continue it in areas where the Excise Committee thought it unsafe to continue.

That brings me to the next important point which I wish to urge before the House. We cannot introduce a vast change of that nature without bringing ourselves in conflict with established habits and interests. And I am sure that this House and the enlightened public opinion would not be content if Government were merely ready to close their distilleries and express a pious resolution in favour of prohibition. What the House and the country really want is that this scourge of drink and other intoxicants should be completely eradicated from amongst us. Now, we cannot do this without employing an adequate staff for the purpose. It has been stated that the staff that is there, is more than enough, but I am sure that when it comes to the turn of my honourable friend the Excise Commissioner, he will be able to show by facts and figures that the staff is really undermanned. The reports from the districts are unanimous, and that is an important point to bear in mind that excise crime, particularly illicit distillation, is increasing everywhere and that the existing staff is unable to cope with it. I earnestly hope that there would be no disposition to make light of these reports, and I am sure that the House, with its sense of responsibility, will not countenance any contradiction of this great circumstance in the history of restriction, so far as we have gone towards it. In fact, it is evident that we cannot increase our restrictive measures without having a proper number of men to see that the restrictions are being enforced and that the policy is not a mere paper policy. This question is now being carefully considered by Government, and I hope that when we place the case before the House we shall receive its fullest support and can rely on its confidence.

I would like to add a few words here about foreign liquor. It is quite clear that all our efforts to enforce prohibition in this presidency will come to nought if we confine our measures to country liquor and drugs only, and do not extend them to foreign liquor also. Honourable members are, however, aware that the control over foreign liquor is mainly under the jurisdiction not of this Government, but of the Government of India. We, therefore, propose to approach that Government with a view to obtain better control of consumption of this liquor in the presidency. In the meantime, Government do not propose to sit silent, but action is being taken in the direction the committee have proposed, namely, that immediate action should be taken against the cheaper brands which are being drunk in substitution of country liquor, and that the license fees for the sale of such liquor should be increased so as to increase its price. Sir, we have gone much further and honourable members will soon notice that orders will be issued greatly increasing the license fees payable for the sale of not only cheap liquors, but all foreign liquors, and our fees will perhaps be the highest in India. Government further propose to bring the consumption of these liquors in clubs under their control, and have actually under consideration the question as to how far the restrictions which are applied in the case of country liquor can be applied to foreign liquors also. I am, therefore, glad to be able to announce that no efforts will be spared to stop people who are prevented from drinking country liquor from turning to foreign liquor, particularly to the cheaper brands. So that that will make our policy quite efficacious in the case of both.

Sir, before I conclude I must tell the House that we are embarking on a momentous experiment which is fraught with immense possibilities, moral, physical and economic. Our pace must be determined by the extent to which we are able to find new revenue to replace the old, and, indeed no less, to the extent to which we can enforce compliance with our policy. Both these are matters exclusively within the discretion of the Council. The future of the policy, I significantly repeat, Sir, is therefore in the hands of the Council. Sir, if I have any more time left

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: You have got a couple of minutes more

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: I would leave it to my other honourable colleagues and to the Excise Commissioner to meet the other points. I think the announcement I have made has met many of the important points that were raised by the honourable members.

Mr. J. BAPTISTA (Bombay City, North): Mr. President, I observe that our Chancellor of the Exchequer has intimated to us with becoming modesty that he prefers silent votes to vocal compliments. Therefore, I will not congratulate him for the excellent exposition of the financial predicament of this presidency, nor will I complain that he has utilised the occasion to indulge in one of those flights of fancy in which the Civil Services love to indulge in order to console their own consciences.

But, Sir, the speech has certainly facilitated the study of this budget. But the study of the budget makes me feel that "it is folly to be wise where ignorance is bliss". I used to labour under the impression that the province of Bombay could compare favourably with any sovereign State in the world both in power and in attributes. But I find that it is not half the attributes of the Federal States of America nor half the powers of the Government of the Philippines. The Government of Bombay with all its imposing paraphernalia is no better than a glorified municipality with limited powers of taxation and administration. If comparisons be odorous I would say that the Corporation of Bombay without any remuneration whatever discharges functions quite as onerous as those devolving upon the Government of Bombay. And I go still further and I say that those who are acquainted with the civic affairs of Bombay and of the many opportunities for maladministration, realize and recognise that a large measure of honesty and prudence and real mastery of principles and details and a true sense of responsibility are required for the successful administration of the urbs prima in Indis. For this reason I deplore the mentality and attitude of those statesmen who profess to believe that they cannot repose that degree of confidence in the capacity of the people of this province or on their sense of responsibility as to do away with this new-fangled form of Government—known as the diarchy. Its only merit is that diarchy rhymes well with anarchy. But, Sir, although the form be diarchy, let the spirit underlying be that of constitutional monarchy. But this can never happen unless the ministers and executive members accept cordially, and act heartily upon, the principle of responsibility to the representatives of the people in this Council. Then they will inaugurate an era of mutual confidence and responsive co-operation conducive alike to the strength of Government and the contentment of the people. Then, Sir, we shall be spared the unedifying spectacle of ministers canvassing on the floor of this House. Then the Government would be relieved of the anxiety of searching for so-called safe men to fill the high offices. I would like this Government to stand on the merits of the questions. Government stand here and face the issue upon the merits without fearing the result and without stooping to conquer by canvassing. Things will come right ultimately. Let us not forget that the triumphs of tactics are evanescent. The triumphs of reason endure. And after all, "all's well that ends well".

Now, I turn from the constitution to the problems of the province. I am confronted with the peculiar position of this province. No principle of evolution nor enlightened self-interest could ever have brought Sind, Gujarat and Maharashtra in one province under one Government. The problems of ethnography are aggravated by the problems of geography. This presidency, and particularly Sind, seems to be situated within environs not far from the seat of Beelzebub. The temper of the people has become worse than the temperature of the province under the rule of diarchy. Diarchy cannot give us our daily bread. Our daily bread depends upon the Indus and the monsoons. But the Indus does not always rise with the temperature and inundate the corn fields and the monsoons do not always favour the ship of the State. We often see clouds roll by without discharging their contents on the sweet auburns below. The result is that this province is subjected to periodical famines. And yet in this province of periodical famines food and drink constitute the mainstay of the revenue of the province. Land and excise contribute to the exchequer not less than 80 per cent. of the revenue under the principal heads of revenue. What does it signify? It signifies this that the heaviest burden falls upon the weakest shoulder. This is a painful revelation and makes me lament "Where ignorance is bliss it is folly to be wise". The folly of wisdom does not end here. In an agricultural province where agricultural pursuits are so very precarious we should have expected a most energetic policy of industrial development. But development of industries is a central subject together with trade and commerce and the control of production and distribution. Forward Bombay must depend upon backward Delhi, the seat of the great Mogul, where might is right. In that seat of the mighty there is no Bombay man to fight for our right and to undo the mess of the Meston Settlement. (Laughter.) Bombay industrialists are more agitated about the countervailing excise duty, than their patriotic duty to this province, and to add injury to neglect, they contribute next to nothing to the coffers of Bombay. And yet there are seven seats reserved for trade, commerce and piece-goods in this House. It is a topsyturvey case of representation without taxation. One should have expected that these representatives of trade, commerce and piece-goods, would abstain from occupying reserved seats here till they had undone the iniquity of the Meston Settlement. Perhaps they are here to cheer the champions of Labour by promising liberal bonuses to their workmen. May the Lord have mercy on their purses! This representation without taxation brings me to the important question, what are the powers of taxation of this Council and what is its capacity to regulate revenue and control expenditure? I find that the powers of taxation are very circumscribed. It affords no scope for the talents of a financier. We may impose any tax we please by legislation, but once the bill becomes law and the rate is fixed we can do nothing. There is no margin between the maximum or minimum within which we may raise or reduce taxation as the corporation of Bombay does. The result is nobody cares for this Bombay budget, because nobody expects any boon and nobody fears any burden unless of course there is a money bill. The real truth is that the income side of the budget has no attraction for us and calls for no capacity from us. No vote is taken on the income side. The income is more or less automatic. All we can do is to estimate the income more or less approximately, sometimes 5 per cent., sometimes 10 per cent., but that is all we can do. What the income will be is beyond our control. There is absolutely nothing that we can do. We are really not the oracles of revenue. We are said to be the watch-dogs of expenditure. The Honourable the Finance Member is not quite sure whether we are watch-dogs or lap-dogs, and I am not sure whether we are not going to the dogs. But, Sir, are we really even watch-dogs? Can we really control the expenditure? Personally I am satisfied that it is all "Love's Labour Lost" to attempt to control the expenditure without the consent of the executive. The most powerful weapon of control is the power to regulate revenue. The efficacy of this method was demonstrated when the House threw out the Entertainments Bill three years ago. Without the power of regulating revenue it is not possible to effect any retrenchment. Therefore money bills should be carefully considered.

[Mr. J. Baptista]

The Government executive must cut their coat according to the cloth we give them. They cannot spend more money than we give them. But if we give them more money, fill the coffers and then ask them to be careful about expenditure, it is not wise. It seems to go against the grain of human nature, except perhaps in the case of the Scotsmen, specially Scotsmen of the clan of Montgomeries—present company always excepted. I am told that on the occasion of the funeral of Gladstone, an Irish Home ruler put 10 guineas in gold into the coffin in token of his gratitude. An Englishman and a Welshman followed suit. Then came the turn of the Scotsman. He put a cheque for 40 guineas into the coffin and took the 30 guineas in gold and quietly put them into his pocket. (Laughter.) These Scotsmen are wonderful financiers and beat all the wandering Jews in creation. I do not know whether we should call them geniuses or genii, but some of them have angelic faces with elastic soul like Mumtaz Begum. (Laughter.) But I am digressing.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: You are.

Mr. J. BAPTISTA: The point is, are we in truth able to control this expenditure with the powers we have? I find, Sir, that the subjects are divided into reserved and transferred. The treasury benches are being occupied by nation-builders and nation-breakers. The demands are votable and non-votable, like drinks that are potable and non-potable. And even in the transferred subjects some of the items are non-votable. It is a case of half and half with a dash of bitters. This is the Bombay budget! This is the budget that is brought before the Inquest of the nation in this House! I wish I could say, Sir, "blessed are the budget makers; well done ye good and faithful stewards." But perhaps I better leave these vocal compliments to the aristocratic zamindars of Sind, to the democratic kunbis of the Deccan and to the Boles and Godboles in the Province. (Laughter.)

Now, Sir, I shall examine a few of the financial features of this budget. In the first place, I find there is a deficit of 41 lakhs. That seems to be contrary to the cardinal canon of equilibrium beloved of financiers. This budget does not promise any sunshine of prosperity. On the contrary there is already the shadow of adversity. This is clearly evinced by the bitter pills of the money bills on the anvil of this Council. That the shadow of adversity is already upon us, is corroborated by the graphs that have been furnished us in this budget. These graphs tell us that the revenue has increased by one crore in six years ending 1916-17. Then it increased by Rs. 5 crores 72 lakhs in the five years ending 1921-22. Since 1921-22 the revenues have ceased to grow. They are practically stationary. On the other hand, the expenditure is increasing. These graphs tell us that the expenditure grew by 18 lakhs per annum in the seven years ending 1917-18 and then it went up by leaps and bounds and grew by nearly Rs. 200 lakhs per annum in the four years ending 1921-22. This period corresponds with the resolute agitation for Home rule. It appears that the bureaucracy cooked the goose of reforms while the movement for home rule was making headway. Of the growth 787 lakhs, the lion's share went to the services, the police, and general administration. About Rs. 195 lakhs went to industry, agriculture, education and sanitation. In this there is one particularly enviable and satisfactory feature, and that is that of this Rs. 195 lakhs about 92 lakhs were absorbed by education. And that, Sir, is entirely due to your own enthusiasm for education, when in office. Prior to your advent into office, the expenditure on education grew only by Rs. 4½ lakhs per annum. You sent it up by Rs. 23 lakhs. The gentleman here (pointing to the Honourable Minister for Education) may well copy your example. (Interruption—But he is here at present in his seat.) (Looking towards the seat) No. He has become deaf and dumb. I do not believe in drawing this distinction between "nation-building activities" and "non-nation-building activities". I believe even less in the phantastic classification of the Honourable the Finance Member. In order to make out a case at all, he has mixed up capital and revenue expenditure. As my honourable friend Mr. Hoosenally Rahimtoola pointed out, the Finance Member has included expenditure on Back Bay Reclamation, and that sort of thing in the other expenditure and mixed up capital and expenditure. Even in his Development Departments there are some departments which cannot be called development. For instance, the irrigation works for protecting the people from famine. Can that be regarded as development? Can it be said that to save a man from dying from starvation is to build up his physique? It is a comical conception of nation-building. I find even in the department that may be rightly included as the development departments there are items of expenditure of more or less destructive tendency. For example if you look at page 251, you will find, under the heading of Public Health, no less than 10 lakhs are devoted to building new arsenals in Karachi. Now, I venture to say that no wise man in the East would regard arsenals as nation builders. But they (Government) do. Now the position is that our revenues are not increasing and the expenditure is increasing. What is the remedy? The remedies proposed are the money bills. I do not wish to discuss these money bills now, but I have no hesitation in declaring that the money bills are no remedies at all. These money bills will break the back of the yeomanry. The yeomanry are the pride of the people, the bulwarks of the nation. No one wishes to break the back of the yeomanry. This is not the right remedy. On the contrary, I am fully convinced that this remedy is worse than the disease and any one that is prescribing that remedy is doing a great disservice to the cause of this country.

I cannot imagine any patriotic citizen supporting these bills, before the right remedy is applied.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Order, order. It is an extremely unpleasant duty for me to fix a time limit and to enforce it but I have to discharge this very unpleasant duty on account of the fact that, excluding the time allowed for questions, 720 minutes are available for this discussion. We have about 90 to 100 members present, and the average which each member would be entitled to would be something between 7 and

[The President]

8 minutes, if every member took part in the debate. It is due to the self-denial of a large number of honourable members that I am able to give 20 minutes, but I have got to be strict in pulling a member up when the 20 minutes are up, in order not to be charged with showing favouritism. If the House desires to allow the honourable member Mr. Baptista to continue for a few minutes longer, I have not the least objection. [Honourable Members: He may go on.] That will mean that one member will lose his right of speaking at the end. I take it that it is the wish of the House that Mr. Baptista should continue for about 5 to 10 minutes more; is that so? [Honourable Members: Yes.] Very well, he may continue.

Mr. J. BAPTISTA: I am much obliged to you, Sir, and to the House for the indulgence shown to me, but I will not take any advantage of it. I was at the point when I said that these money bills are no remedy. What is the right remedy? In my opinion, the right remedy is the restoration of our share in the income tax of this presidency. [Honourable Members: Hear, hear]. But restoration will be impeded by showing overflowing balances and professing that the people's capacity for taxation is not yet reached. The Government are doing the greatest harm to us. No Government will consent to give us that share so long as they see that we are overflowing with money. I therefore say that no patriotic citizen ought to support these money bills until we have obtained our full share of the income tax. Full provision ought to be made for our requirements even if they result in deficits. I do not wish to say anything more on the subject. I would like to conclude, but there are one or two remarks I should like to make so far as the heads of the administration are concerned. I must of course exclude His Excellency the Governor, his staff and the band. I should like to point out that Madras recommended Indian music as an aid to good government, but they drew the line at the nautch girl. Lead us not to temptation! I find so far as the heads of the administration are concerned, they are more than doubled. I do not know if it is based on the principle of proportionate efficiency. I do not see any signs of it. There is some kind of progress so far as Excise and Education are concerned. The Minister for Education has progressed in the direction of the tail and the Minister for Excise in the direction of the cocktail.

I will say no more, but before I conclude I feel it is my bounden duty to press the claims of the Indian Christian community upon the attention of Government. I do not base that claim upon any principle of proportionate representation in the executive offices. I do not believe in that. I believe with Burke that though every man has a right to franchise no man has a right to office. Our rights and liberties, our property and lives, the honour of men and even the chastity of women are placed in the hands of Government, and therefore it is absolutely imperative that the offices, and especially the higher offices, should be filled by merit and merit alone. I base my claim for my community upon merit and merit alone. A community that has passed through the sway of the Hindus, then of the Portuguese, then of the Peshwas, and which is now under British rule, without incurring the displeasure of those rulers, must have qualifications and qualities that can be well utilised in the service of the State. There is many a man in the community that will do justice to the highest offices, not only in this province but also in the Imperial services. I therefore ask and request and hope and trust that His Excellency the Governor in Council and His Excellency the Governor General in Council will pay due heed to this matter and give my community a fair field upon merits. Recognition of merit stimulates progress in the community, non-recognition of merit depresses them to the status of pariahs. It is for that reason that I hope and trust the merits of my community will be examined with the sympathy it deserves. And now nothing remains for me but to thank you, Sir, and the House for the attention with which they have listened to me.

Mr. G. I. PATEL (Ahmedabad Millowners' Association) : Sir, after the very entertaining speech which the honourable member Mr. Baptista has made, it falls to my shoulders to analyse some of the most serious issues which have been raised by the Honourable the Finance Member in his budget speech. From its outward appearance the whole of the budget speech of the Honourable the Finance Member is a simple one, but if we analyse it to its depths, we shall find that in some places he has given expression to opinions in which most dangerous issues on the non-official side are involved. In order to prove one or two points I will try to place before the House one or two sentences which he has put down with the object of ensnaring this House into a new kind of policy, not only for the next year, but for future years also. He says at first that from the agricultural standpoint, the year has, on the whole, been favourable in the greater part of the presidency. That is the first issue which he has placed before the House in order to induce honourable members to accept proposals which are most dangerous and which he gradually puts forward at a later stage. May I ask him, if the agricultural prospects were good and favourable, why was it necessary for him to rush to this House with proposals for new taxation, without analysing the situation for one more year? Then, at another place, he puts down another issue in the form of putting a link in a heap of grass. I may say that if these links are put together and made into a chain, they will reveal a story which would be most sad and dangerous to this side of the House. He says that the abnormal spell of cold in January and this month has done considerable injury to the crops. In one place he says that the agricultural prospects were better, and in another place he makes, as it were in the same breath, a contradictory statement, and says that there was something else on the other side. This is a clear contradiction of facts, and from this it appears that the camouflage which is placed before the non-official side of the House is most dangerous, so far as the acceptance of the principles which he lays down in this budget go. Then, ultimately, he comes to the conclusion that if the bill for enhanced court-fees had not been rejected by this Council last budget session, we should have received about Rs. 18 lakhs more as revenue. This is an instance of his tall talk. He wants to evolve the theory that because the House refused to pass the bill in the last budget session, the non-official side should now understand the position, and they are bound to vote for additional taxation. This is a sorry attempt, as it were to scold this side of the House for an action taken by the House last year in refusing the enhancement of the court-fees. The Honourable the Finance Member has harped on this very subject at several other places in his budget speech, in order to make out a case for additional taxation. He says that as a result of the refusal of the House to pass additional taxation less revenue has been received, and therefore the House is now compulsorily placed in a position to vote for additional taxation. This is the underground theory which is regularly being evolved out of the whole of his speech.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I do not wish to interrupt the honourable member. He is aware that every time an honourable member sits down after concluding his speech, there are half a dozen other members anxious to address the House. Now, in regard to the taxation bills, I said to the honourable member Mr. Lalji Naranji at the very commencement that the House would have more than ample opportunity of going into that aspect of the question when the bills are before the House. If honourable members will devote the time which is now available to the discussion of the taxation bills, and the policy underlying them, many honourable members will be left without an opportunity of addressing the House on the budget. I would therefore ask honourable members, that during the present discussion they should confine themselves to other parts of the budget about which a great deal can be said, as has been evidenced by the speeches of honourable members who have already spoken. I do not want to stop honourable members and prevent them from dealing with the taxation bills. I merely ask them to consider whether in the interest of those honourable members who are yet to follow them, it would not be desirable to save the time of the Council by not making any reference in detail to this subject.

Mr. G. I. PATEL: I do not want to go into any special or detailed points on the bills, but I want to bring to the notice of the Council certain broad points affecting taxation bills in future also. I will simply touch certain points and then pass on.

The third conclusion which was arrived at by Government was that they anticipate a great shortage. At another place, the Honourable the Finance Member says :

"But I may point out that we have arrived at a stage that we cannot progress further in supplying the needs of the public unless we have more revenues."

This idea is a most dangerous idea so far as this House is concerned. If we do not vote certain taxation bills, a threat is made that we will not get money for those departments for which we are anxious to get money. The Honourable Member has throughout his speech made an attempt to bring the non-officials to agree to his taxation proposals. He admits that already the reserved departments are getting a two-third share of the revenue and still maintains that the transferred departments will not get more money if his proposals are not accepted. He points out that the expenditure on Lee Commission proposals is included in the budget and makes a speech in defence practically of the whole service. He calculates the expenses on a basis which is only a jugglery of figures. All such kinds of arguments cannot at all be convincing. He calculates the total expenses and strikes out an average per head. But if you take a certain head of expenditure and divide it by the head of population, you will get an insignificant ratio, as the honourable member Mr. Lalji pointed out the other day. There is nothing here to prove the exactness of the calculation either in relation to total cost or in relation to population.

Now the chief point for consideration is that we stand to lose the excise revenue in a fixed period. Every year the excise revenue will be falling and every year honourable members will be asked to approve fresh proposals for taxation to meet that shortage. I believe the honourable the Finance Member knows that India is mainly an agricultural country. If more money is spent on the improvement of agriculture on a scientific basis, and in developing water power more land which has been lying fallow and idle will come under cultivation and Government will derive more revenue which will go to meet the deficit caused by the loss of excise revenue. If Honourable Ministers apply their mind to improve agriculture on a scientific basis and to spend money on developing water power from the Government exchequer, that will bring in additional money to meet the loss on account of excise revenue.

Mr. HOOSEINBHOY A. LALLJEE (Bombay City): Sir, I have carefully listened to the speech of the Honourable the Finance Member. I have also studied the figures given in the Blue Book. First of all I am very glad that the Honourable the Finance Member has declared:

“And in so vast a field of work as falls to the responsibilities of a Government we are deeply conscious that there are failings and errors and we welcome the advice and guidance that may be offered to us and look hopefully to receive such advice and guidance in ample measure.”

I hope officers of Government high and low will follow this fine example. We have found, and it has been clearly stated, that any improvement in the land revenue should not be depended upon in the present condition nor could we depend upon it as a source of steady revenue. We have been told by the Honourable the Finance Member that irrigation schemes have been introduced and I find that we received a revenue of 54 lakhs while the interest we paid on the outlay is 64 lakhs. That is probably the beginning, but I do think that the irrigation schemes before they are undertaken ought to be brought to the notice of this House as well as of the general public and specially of the people of the district concerned and this House should have an opportunity of expressing its opinion before Government undertakes them in the light of the public criticism thereon. It is also essential, and it is businesslike, that the estimates and plans of such schemes and also its return should be placed before this House, and the public before they are undertaken.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: That is done.

Mr. HOOSEINBHOY A. LALLJEE : Up to now irrigation schemes have not been shown in such a way as to elicit the opinion of this House and the public. In certain districts irrigation is badly needed and Government are not taking steps to launch irrigation schemes in those areas. For instance, the Karnatak wants irrigation very badly and frequent requests have been made to Government to undertake irrigation schemes there, but they have remained without heed from Government. Government took up the irrigation scheme in Sind, and are also going on spending money on roads and bridges. So far as I am aware these bridges and roads, many of them, are not roads made suitable only for the purpose of carrying agricultural produce, but they are made also for the military purposes. When the Government of India are taking away 8 crores of our revenues, it is but just and fair and it is the duty of the Honourable the Finance Member to ask the Government of India to provide the requisite funds, so far as or as much as are spent for military purpose thereon. It has been said, and I believe it, Sir, that during the regime of Lord Sydenham many roads were built for military purposes, and I want to be assured, and I hope the honourable members of this House will want to be assured by the Honourable the Finance Member, that the road-making and bridge strengthening are not done for military purposes. If they are done for military purposes we should ask for a due contribution from the Government of India for the same. It is also a fact that many of the roads are made wider and stronger for military purposes and their maintenance charges are therefore naturally exorbitant. I ask the Honourable the Minister in charge of Public Works Department whether he has made enquiries whether it is not the case that many such roads are really maintained mainly for military purposes. And if they are so maintained, why is it that so far he has not asked the Government of India to contribute their share ?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : Will the honourable member point out any such bridge or road ?

Mr. HOOSEINBHOY A. LALLJEE : I hope the Honourable the Minister will take down what I say carefully. I will give one instance, the Kasheli bridge. I say that that bridge ought not to have been made so strong : it was not necessary to spend 13 lakhs on that. May I ask the Honourable the Minister what traffic passes through it ? I have gone there and made enquiries, and that bridge is made extraordinarily strong in order that heavy lorries may pass over it. Why should it be so strong ?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : Is it a provincial bridge or a municipal bridge ?

Mr. HOOSEINBHOY A. LALLJEE : It is a municipal bridge as well as provincial and the provincial Government have asked us to make it a strong bridge for their purposes. Let the engineers and the honourable members of this House go and enquire whether it is not made so strong because of the military purposes. I hope the Honourable Minister will make due enquiries before he says "No" and tells the House that I am in the wrong or mistaken.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN :
Is it a provincial bridge?

Mr. HOOSEINBHOY A. LALLJEE : Yes. In a way it is.

Sir, with regard to the railways, the Honourable the Finance Member has said that they have done great good to the cultivators. That may be so. But may I ask whether, after all, the railways are not the shareholders' concern? The directors of these companies did not undertake the schemes without getting a guarantee from Government. I say, Sir, that before Government gave guarantees to railway companies for railway development, in the belief that that would help to bring the produce of the villages to the seaports, first of all they ought to have spent that money on irrigation works. If they had spent that money on irrigation works they would have received more revenue and they would not have given money away at low rate of interest to the railway companies. Government should at least have asked the companies when giving away the moneys to help the movement of goods from one part of India to another and thus promote indigenous industries and internal movement of produce. Many a time it has happened that the railways have helped the foreign rich people to take away our foodgrains at cheap rates to their countries by keeping low rates for ports. Only during the war Government laid down that as long as the produce of the country is not enough for the people, it ought not to be exported. I think it is high time that our Government adopted such a policy permanently. I fear that these railway facilities are provided for the rich nations to buy our produce at a cheaper rate. The result has been starvation for the people in India.

Then, Sir, coming to the excise policy. I have had the honour of being a member of the Excise Committee. From what Government have stated in their resolution it is quite clear to everybody that the whole policy of Government is based on revenue and revenue alone, and all this reference to the interests of the people is mere tall talk. They have stated in the resolution that their goal is total prohibition, but say :

"Government however realise that it would be impossible for them to pursue this policy to its goal unless the gap which it would create in the provincial finances is gradually filled by revenue from other sources."

And again, in the concluding paragraph of the resolution we find :

"The policy which they advocate and which they believe, reading the report of the Excise Committee, is one which commends itself to the great majority of the public of the Presidency, necessitates the finding of large sums to replace the excise revenue lost, and further sums on increased expenditure on preventive establishments."

Therefore, it is no use telling us that the excise policy is being conducted for the welfare of the people or to remove drunkenness. The whole policy is conducted for the sake of revenue, and until we can give new revenues, I believe, Sir, it is the policy of Government not to move at all in the matter of prohibition in the interests of the people. Sir, the members of the committee realised this position and in order to meet the requirements of Government they have suggested various sources of income. I am glad that the Honourable the Finance Member has given us credit for that. I think we must provide the revenue in some shape or other in order to get rid of this scourge of liquor and other intoxicants. I really feel somewhat satisfied with the assurance that the Honourable Minister has given us, that Government are going to write to the Government of India for the purpose of getting control over foreign liquor. But I may say, Sir, that although this report has been so long with the Government, and although they have been considering it for the last six months, still they say that they propose to write to the Government of India. I hope they will now write and not say in the next budget year also that they still propose to write.

Now, Sir, I am very sorry to say that the Honourable the Finance Member has introduced a policy of divide and rule. He has tried to show that the revenue this presidency is getting is all from the cultivator and that the people in the cities are not contributing to the expenses of law and order. Well, Sir, I ask the Honourable the Finance Member whether an income tax of eight crores of rupees, paid by twelve lakhs of people, which means Rs. 66 per head, is not a sufficient contribution towards law and order? Are we to be blamed if the Government of India do not give them this revenue? Then, Sir, what about the cotton excise revenue? About two crores are paid by the city of Bombay. And what return do we get? We cannot even stop the sale of this liquor, which is killing the millhands. If this Government insists on this cotton excise revenue not being taken away from us and would adopt a policy of prohibition, who can object to it? This Government is responsible for the excise administration of this province. Why does not our Government inform the Government of India to this effect?

Now, with regard to the transfer duties, I may point out to the Honourable the Finance Member that that is not the right time and not the right way of taxation. Almost 70 per cent. of the properties in Bombay are mortgaged. Is he not aware of the fact that nearly 50 per cent. of the house-owners are widows and persons who depend upon their properties? Is a duty of 12 per cent. on transfer going to contribute to the prosperity of the city? Has Government done anything to relieve the indebtedness of these owners by means of loans? Is it not a fact that these property owners in Bombay have contributed to Government large sums of money during the war? Is it not a fact that this Government have said all over the world that this presidency has stood the test and helped the Empire? I ask the Honourable the Finance Member, is there any justification in asking for a property tax when the condition of the house-owners and general trade are pitiable? We have got in view very shortly the Rent Act and we also know that these landlords are at present paying exorbitant interest, and they must be given some relief by giving them loans at a low interest, but here you ask for a special tax on the transfer of lands. Then I will also ask whether it is a right policy for Government towards the people in Bombay and also in the principal towns of the districts. The raw products of the districts are purchased by merchants in principal towns and therefore unless and until there is prosperity in the principal towns there can never be any prosperity in the mofussil. It is no use saying that the citizens of principal towns are not contributing towards the tax which the district people have to pay. We in Bombay are paying the land revenue tax and municipal tax which includes all the police and medical charges as well. We want compulsory education to be provided for in the city of Bombay but the Honourable Minister has not as yet given us the money that was promised. If compulsory education is introduced in this city children of 80 per cent. of the population of mill-hands would get advantage of that compulsory education. The population of Bombay is always coming from the districts and changing and especially the mill-hands who come from the various districts would get the full advantage of compulsory education which is being introduced in the city of Bombay. I hope Government will come forward and see that they contribute more towards that end. I am one of those who hold that the more you spend on education the more you save in expenses on law and order. If the people are educated they will know what are their rights and duties towards their neighbours and even if they are given arms they will make right use of those arms if they are educated in their self-defence.

I am sorry that so far as education is concerned there has been no improvement at all in that direction. Last year, some of my honourable friends from Sind complained that the needs of their province ought to be looked into, but I find that no attention has been paid to their complaint, and as far as I know many leaders of my community have felt that there ought to be greater spread of education among the backward classes and especially Mahomedans and that, although promises have always been made by officials that help would be given, nothing tangible has been done. May I ask Government and the Honourable Minister what has been done for the education of Mahomedans. Has the Honourable Minister done any improvement in that direction? Is it not a fact that during the period of about a year and a half when you Mr. President were in charge of Education about 800 schools were opened while there has not been the addition of a few more schools for Mahomedans during the regime of the Honourable Minister. I ask my Sind brothers to come forward and say whether it is not a fact that no improvement has been made in that direction so far as Sind is concerned. They have told me that their position has been very bad because they are in the hands of Indian Ministers. Is it a fair way of dealing with the people? Is it the way in which the Minister elected by the people should act? In conclusion, I will only say that I am thankful to Government for one thing and that is that an assurance was given by the Honourable the Leader of the House that he will bring in amendment bill with regard to children's protection on the lines suggested by us and I find that he has carried out the promise. With these remarks I resume my seat.

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: Mr. President, it is my very proud privilege to render an account of my stewardship to this House through whose good opinion I stand here. I have to offer my grateful thanks to all the parties in this House who have given me their unstinted support and have always sanctioned any proposed increase in expenditure for the expansion of what are popularly described as nation-building departments. In this connection I am very happy to express my thanks to all my colleagues on the official benches who were always ready to favour me with their advice and co-operation.

Ministers have a very delicate task to perform in these days of stringent finance. They have the advantage of knowing, or, perhaps the disadvantage of knowing, what are the urgent needs of other departments than their own as well as the needs of those that are under them. Much as they wish to improve the working of their own departments, they cannot be blind to the urgent necessities of other departments which are necessary for the stability and peace of the society. The needs of the departments of education and medical relief are such as can hardly be said to be satisfied even in the most opulent and civilized countries. Education is a subject which widens one's vision the further we go, discovers new wants and forces on our attention new avenues of progress. Research work is also very important and is ever claiming for larger expenditure. The same is true of medical science also. The aim of medicine is to banish disease and to increase intellectual and physical powers, and for this purpose research and more research is called for and practically there is no end to it.

The expenditure on education in 1919-20 was one crore 29 lakhs 51 thousands which had in 1923-24 risen to 1 crore 91 lakhs and 75 thousands, a rise of about 48 per cent. This amount of 1 crore 91 lakhs includes the windfall of five lakhs of rupees which the Finance Department was kind enough to place at my disposal last year and which was utilised in redeeming promises of building grants. This year the budget grant for education is 2 crores 15 lakhs 34 thousands. At pages 32 and 33 of the Blue Book you will see a comparative table showing the growth of expenditure on education. You will see also that while during the period of the last 15 years the total expenditure of the province increased by 216 per cent. the expenditure on education during the same period has increased by 453 per cent. The rise in the Medical Department is 331 per cent. during the same period. The rise in expenditure on public health has been almost equal to that on education.

Remarks have been made in this House about the administration of the Education Department, and now with your permission, Sir, I shall devote a few minutes to place before this House what the actual facts are. The Primary and Compulsory Education Act was passed in 1922, I think, and the rules were being framed under it. The rules were ready and the Act was to be put into operation by the beginning of 1924, when a representation was made to Government that until the elections under the new Local Boards Act took place the Compulsory Education Act should not be put into operation. This province, as the House is aware, is passing through a change. The vote has been lowered and the elections have been made direct. The passing of the Government of India Act and the passing of the Local Boards Act and the consequent elections have caused a ferment in the country and have awakened the masses which were dormant up to this time to the importance of the vote and to the importance of the seats on legislative bodies and on local bodies. It was represented to Government that in the constitution of the old local bodies popular element was not properly represented and if the Compulsory Education Act was brought into force earlier or before the elections of the district local boards took place, perhaps there would be a great harm done to the interests of the dumb millions. Government had to postpone the transference of these departments and now the elections are taking place, and I am quite sure that the department will be transferred before long. After this transference of the vernacular education to the control of the district local boards, it is expected that there will be a vast change. The boards will be elected by the people for the advancement of the people. There has been a great deal of awakening in the provinces and during the last five years the numbers of school going children have nearly doubled automatically without any compulsion at all. I have been touring in a number of districts and wherever I went I found that the cry of the people was the demand for opening more schools and more teachers in existing schools. The district local boards, therefore, Sir, will have to meet this demand in the first place. It will be, I think, two or three or four years more before the compulsion clauses can be brought into operation because the awakening is such that the resources of the local boards, although they have to bring forth only one-third of the additional expenditure, will be taxed to the utmost limit to make provision for the demand that is voluntarily made. The district local boards therefore have to expand education on the voluntary basis before compulsion will have to be taken in hand and, Sir, Government is prepared to assist the district local boards with the two-thirds of the additional expenditure that will be demanded, and a demand will be placed before this House for this additional sum and I am quite sure that with the usual kindness and sympathy of the House the grant will be allowed. A charge is laid at the doors of Government for not opening new schools at the present time. An offer was made to the district local boards to take in hand the opening of new schools and they were distinctly given to understand that Government was prepared to give a grant-in-aid to the extent of two-thirds of the expenditure on the expansion of education. I am very sorry to say, Sir, that very few of the district local boards came forward to volunteer to open schools and those few districts that came forward were encouraged and I think schools have been opened there. Government is also alive to the needs of secondary education and the grants hitherto given to private enterprise in this direction have been continued and will be continued. Government do recognise that the secondary education is as important as primary education and it will not be neglected. So also Government is not neglecting higher education and the grants to colleges, both arts and professional, have been continued. Especially with regard to professional colleges Government recognise their obligation to develop and you will perceive that the engineering college at Karachi has had liberal grants made to it, as well as provision has been made in the budget for the expansion of the engineering college at Poona. The Victoria Jubilee Technical Institute, too, is receiving due consideration and Government do recognise the necessity of an expansion in technical education. Government, however, think that first the institutions that have been started and working ought to be properly developed, so that they will be able to admit a larger number of students, and with that object in view the Engineering College at Poona is receiving substantial grants for buildings and recurring and non-recurring expenditure. In the same way Government have an art pottery works and Reay Workshops at the School of Art, Bombay, and there students are taught in arts and crafts, and Government desire to develop the activities of these schools. Before starting new schools it is thought desirable to develop the schools that are already existing. As a teaching centre I am very sorry to admit that the art pottery works have not been a distinct success. The private venture at Talegaon—I allude to the Paise Fund glass works there—has been, I am very glad to announce, more successful in turning out qualified men to start glass works outside and Government will have to take stock and to see that the institutions they are conducting are doing some good in turning out efficient apprentices. The Reay Art Workshops are doing a lot of good. The artisans turned out are soon absorbed by the industries in which they are trained, and there is ample room for more candidates. But I am sorry to say that the right sort of candidates generally come from the poorer ranks who are at the same time very poor in education, and these youngsters, too, do not join the classes unless scholarships are offered to them. [An Honourable Member: Why don't you give the scholarships?] Scholarships are, as a matter of fact, given. There is a cry all around about technical education and industrial schools. The various schools I visited during the course of the last twelve months, especially the one at Dhulia and the one at Ratnagiri, and those at other places are generally filled with boys who join those industrial schools simply because they are getting a stipend. If the stipends were taken away, there will be no boys to take advantage of the schools.

Mr. R. G. PRADHAN: May I know how the Honourable Minister knows it?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: I visited those places and made enquiries personally. I am speaking here from personal experience and I think the honourable members Mr. Dev and Mr. Nanal will bear me out.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Let the Honourable Minister be allowed to continue; his time is being taken up by these interruptions.

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: But, Sir, before industrial education on a wider scale is undertaken by Government, it must be seen that the students turned out by these institutions will readily get into business or industrial undertakings. The majority of the students are not in a position to start on their own account. They will have to be provided with employment, and unless big industries or small industries rise all around, the students turned out of these industrial schools will almost be failures, and will add to the ranks of the unemployed. It is, therefore, necessary to give encouragement to industries, and in this way, Sir, the Department of Industries is very useful. In these days of stringent finance, it is, I think, absolutely necessary to help monetarily small industries, and, with that end in view, I am now making enquiries. The Legislative Councils of Madras and Behar and Orissa have passed legislation for giving financial aid to industries. Something on those lines is going to be attempted, and I think, during one of the Poona sessions I hope to be able to place before the House for sanction a bill.

I am very sorry, Sir, to hear the charges brought against me by the Mahomedan members, who think that Mahomedan education has been neglected. On the question of education, one ought never to be satisfied. I for myself am never satisfied, and I am very glad to see that my Mahomedan brethren are not satisfied. There cannot be

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Order, order. The Honourable Minister has already had his 20 minutes. I should like to know whether he is likely to conclude within the next few minutes. I cannot allow him to make a long speech which will extend to considerably later than 7 o'clock, which is the time for adjournment, but I will give him a few minutes more if he will conclude his speech within that time.

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: I will just conclude. If you look to the number of scholarships allowed in the high schools, you will find that the Mahomedan students have been favourably treated. Provision has been made for two central schools, where Mahomedan boys will be fed and taught the vernacular fifth, sixth and seventh standards. This sort of help is denied to other communities, or is not offered to other communities, which are equally backward or even in a worse condition. Then, you will find that certain other provisions have been made in the next budget for Mahomedan education. I do not think the charge laid at the door of Government that they are neglecting Mahomedan education will be born out.

I have one more thing to add, Sir. An offer has been made by a millionaire in Bombay to give Rs. 16 lakhs for the erection of a maternity hospital. One hundred and twenty beds are to be provided, of which 60 will be reserved for the women of the millhands, and the hospital is to be built in the Parel area. The condition is that one-fourth of that amount should be advanced by Government, and Government will require Rs. 4 lakhs for that purpose. The municipality of Bombay is making demands—and legitimate demands—for grants-in-aid for primary education, and that will entail an expenditure of lakhs and lakhs of rupees.

So, more money is urgently needed which will benefit the agricultural classes who come to Bombay to swell the ranks of the labourers, and therefore I place before you how necessary it is to strengthen the finances of Government, in order to give relief to these poor people. It is said that the householders are poor, and that the Shetias of Bombay are poor, but I need not say anything on that point. Honourable members here are well able to judge for themselves. But one point which I want to place before the House is that the Stamp Act is likely not to press upon any of the poorer people. The additional taxation will be entirely borne and paid by the rich classes and the well-to-do classes, who have, up to this time, not been paying enough. My time is up, and I need not take much of the time of the House, but I place this question before the House, namely, the urgent necessity of extension of medical relief and education, and the absolute necessity of increasing the financial resources of Government. I place that before the House for their consideration, and I hope that the House will sanction some of the legislation and help Government in securing an advance in medical relief and in education.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Before I adjourn, I should like to inform honourable members that I have received a note signed by four honourable members, none of whom has yet taken any part in this discussion, suggesting that I should reduce the time limit from 20 to 10 minutes. I do not know whether it is within the recollection of those honourable members who have been re-elected to this House that during the first term of the Reforms Council such a procedure was once adopted. No time limit was fixed to start with, and then a ten minute time limit was fixed, and it was subsequently reduced to five minutes. That procedure proved to be so unsatisfactory that it was not repeated. On the present occasion, honourable members will have observed that there has been a general dissatisfaction at my enforcing the time limit of 20 minutes. [Honourable Members: No, no.] There has clearly been. I wish to draw the attention of honourable members to the fact that it is hardly possible to do justice on the present basis to the general discussion of a whole budget within the three days which are allotted for the purpose. I hold that even 20 minutes time for the general discussion of the whole budget by an honourable member to be wholly insufficient and that, when even that much time is not available to honourable members, they have a legitimate cause for grievance.

There are one or two ways by which this difficulty could be met. It may interest honourable members to know that this general discussion on the budget was the result of a representation made by the members of the Imperial Legislative Council. The procedure there was that the Finance Member read out his speech dealing with the whole aspect of the budget. The non-official members were then required to send in notices of reduction or omission in the budget grants; and they were restricted in their speeches to those items which they wanted to deal with, while they had no opportunity of discussing the budget as a whole and the policy underlying it. It was then considered but fair that the non-official members should be allowed an opportunity of a general discussion. The rules were then amended and this general discussion is the result of that amendment. The procedure followed was that the Finance Member, after making his first speech, took notes in regard to all criticisms directed against all departments and he was given ample time to reply in full, no other member from the official side taking part in the discussion. What they did was a much better procedure. The Honourable Members and Ministers, other than the Finance Member, took notes of the criticisms applied to their respective departments, and replied in full when they moved for budget grants for the following year. This is advantageous from their point of view also, because as it must have been observed that the Honourable Education Minister could not put his whole case before the House within the allotted time of 20 minutes. Instead of replying on the present occasion, he could have reserved his reply when he moved for budget grants and then he would have had ample opportunity of meeting all the points. If the present procedure is to be followed then the best remedy appears to be to represent to the Governor-General in Council to increase the number of days allotted for general discussion from 3 to 4. The alternative to it is to leave the reply at the end to the Finance Member alone, the other members of Government reserving their reply to criticisms against their departments till demands for grants for those departments are made. It is for honourable members both official and non-official to consider these alternative courses.

With regard to the representation sent to me, I feel I must adhere to the time-limit of 20 minutes. I would say this. Those honourable members who have written to me asking me to restrict the time limit to 10 minutes will, I hope, exercise self-denial and voluntarily restrict themselves to 10 minutes. That will go a great way to the solution of this question.

The House will now adjourn till 2 o'clock on Wednesday, the 25th February 1925.

Wednesday, the 25th February 1925.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Order, order.

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE : Mr. President, may I say one or two words with reference to Government business to-morrow ? We propose to take the taxation bills in front of the Rent Bill. Items Nos. (ii) and (iii) in the agenda will be taken before No. (i).

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I hope honourable members have followed the decision of Government. To-morrow they will take, out of the three Government bills, item No. (ii) (A Bill further to amend the Indian Stamp Act, 1899) first ; then item No. (iii) (A Bill further to amend the Court-fees Act, 1870) ; and after that they will take item No. (i), that is the Rent Acts Bill.

Now, further discussion of the budget.

Mr. D. R. PATIL (East Khandesh District) : Mr. President, I offer my heartiest congratulations to the Honourable the Finance Member on his recovery from illness. He is short of stature, but to my mind very broad of intellect. He can in his intellectual flights reach grandiose heights of finance with great tact and skill. He is really a great asset to Government. But, Mr. President, you will allow me to say that a budget is a leather bag and the bag of a conjurer or a juggler.

Sir, I am going to deal with some of the points that have been touched by the Honourable the Finance Member in his budget speech. His first point I will deal with first. He says :—

“ In the speeches which I have had the honour of delivering in this House during the last three years, I have set forth in considerable detail the general principles of the policy of Government and these principles have received the approbation of a great majority of the members of this House : an approbation which long experience has taught Government to look for not in vocal compliments but in the more practical form of a silent vote.”

The Honourable the Finance Member seems to be a votary or rather an admirer of a silent vote. Sir, votes differ as tastes differ. Tastes also differ on various considerations. My own view is, let the vote be sensible and in accordance with the real dictates of one's own conscience.

Now, Sir, I refer to his second point. The second point is : that he invites acute criticism from the non-official members and wants to examine the failings and deficiencies, the errors of commission and omission on the part of Government. I thank the Honourable the Finance Member for this invitation. I entirely agree with him when he says that life would be monotonous if we all were in complete agreement on all points. My own view is, that all of us are here for promoting the interests of the country, and therefore all our deliberations should be regulated on feelings of mutual goodwill and toleration, responsive co-operation and compromising tendency. Let us understand each other and do what is best for the welfare of the country.

Now, Sir, I take his third point. He says that we have reason to be grateful to the administrative departments for their enforcement of stringent economy. I am really glad of this, and I thank the various departments for the economy which they have effected. But I should like to suggest in this respect that the pruning knife of economy ought to be applied rather more liberally. Sir, when we come to the question of expenditure I have to state that huge amounts are spent over buildings. If we look at these buildings we find that they are palatial. Look at the court-houses ; look at the bungalows of officers : I do not mean to say that there should be no court-houses or bungalows for officers, but now that we are in this state of financial stringency, the only way is to spend as little as possible on these buildings. Let us build court-houses and bungalows for officers : but let us cut our coat according to our cloth ; let not our expenditure exceed our income. Again as regards salaries of officers, I should like to submit that the salaries of officers drawing more than Rs. 500 per mensem should be reduced in the interest of our administration.

Now, Sir, I come to another point. The Honourable the Finance Member says that money has become more plentiful in the country ; thereby, suggesting that the country is prospering. I must tell him frankly that the country is not prospering. And my reasons are these. What is the prosperity of a country ? The agriculturists form 80 per cent. of the whole population of our presidency ; they are the real backbone of the country ; and unless they are prosperous we can never say that the country is prosperous. What is the condition of the agriculturists ? They work like machines, and contribute a large revenue to Government ; but they find it very difficult even to make both ends meet. They are drowned in the ocean of indebtedness, and unless Government take some measures to remove their indebtedness, I am afraid that their lands will be acquired by capitalists, and they will be reduced to a state of beggary or slavery. In these circumstances the view of the Honourable the Finance Member about the prosperity of the country is erroneous. What is the best wealth of a Government ? The best wealth of a Government is to be found in the growing wealth of its people ; and a policy that leads all that wealth into the hands of the tax-collector is a short-sighted one.

Now, Sir, I come to our present land revenue policy, which is destructive to the people. I say it is destructive to the people, because the people are crushed down under heavy assessment, and famines have become frequent and constant. Famine is no doubt the work of Providence but the lack of staying power is the work of heavy assessment. There is no reason why a single failure of the crops should cause famine in India, whereas England can be and can remain wealthy and prosperous without producing any crop or foodgrain. I should like to contrast the policy of Lord Canning and the policy of Lord Curzon in connection with land revenue. The policy of Lord Canning was : give the cultivator as much as possible and take from him as little as possible. The policy of Lord Curzon was : allow the cultivator as little as possible and take from him as much as possible ; talk of his welfare as much as possible and do for him as little as possible. I would request the Honourable the Finance Member that in his reply he will kindly let us know which of these policies is approved by the Government of Bombay—the policy of Lord Curzon or the policy of Lord Canning.

Now, Sir, I will deal with the Forest Department. We all know that forests, jungles, and wilds constitute one of the necessities of life. From birth to death and even after that, we require all kinds of things that are derived from forests and wilds. During our lifetime, we want fuel, food, grass, stones, earth, leaves, bark, roots and everything else, which, once ours, have been made to belong to others, not by Divine agency but by the avaricious desire on the part of men like ourselves. Nature has, in India, provided us bountifully with all these, without any request on our part, and for hundreds of generations we have been enjoying it unchallenged, but sad to say, suddenly we have been deprived of it by man—by the forest administration—acting against Nature.

Sir, if we look back and see what forests were in the times of Hindu and Mahomedan rulers we will find that they were blessings. But now it is not so to all living in their neighbourhood. In those days they existed solely for the real good of the ryots as all necessary rights of user were freely enjoyed by these—the inhabitants of the neighbourhood—for whom nature had manifestly designed them. There are various grievances as regards the Forest Department and Government has appointed a committee to inquire into them. I feel sure that the committee will do its best to redress those grievances and reduce the complaints against the department.

Now, Sir, I am told by my friend Mr. Navle that in Satara taluka some agriculturists have made applications to Government in respect of land revenue revision and they complain very much about revised assessment but their applications have not yet received the attention of Government. I therefore make a request to Government that the grievances of the Satara people should be properly dealt with.

Then, Sir, the last request that I want to make is about Bodvad, a place in Bhusawal taluka. There is a great scarcity of drinking water at that place. I had asked a question on this matter last year and the reply was that the Collector of East Khandesh should be approached and the grievance would be redressed. In this case I have seen with my own eyes that the people of Bodvad have to go from place to place for drinking water, and thus they are put to great hardships and I therefore request Government to kindly inquire into this grievance and try to remedy the same very early as far as possible. With these remarks I conclude my speech.

Mr. A. MONTGOMERIE: Sir, I rise to draw attention to some of the adverse comments which have been made during the course of this debate. It has been tacitly assumed by a number of speakers on the other side that the question of financing the various departments can be solved in such a way as to avoid the necessity for future taxation, and it has been suggested that the remedy is a simple one. They say the Honourable the Finance Member has uttered a threat, and that they dealt with a similar threat some years ago; that they insisted on Government cutting down all its departments and that they can do the same again. Sir, I rise to suggest that in some of the most important spending departments of Government we have certainly reached the limit to which we can cut down our requirements. These are the departments which are under the charge of the Home Department. We had a cheerful suggestion from one honourable member that one of these departments at least, the department of the administration of justice, might well be worked on an honorary basis by magistrates and judges who having served their full time in the service of Government on full pay might be called on to spend their declining years in doing precisely the same work for nothing as they have been doing for pay all their life. The honourable member did not suggest that we should apply that system to the police.

In his opening remarks to this Council His Excellency described these departments of Government which deal with law and order as nation-building departments. I have no doubt in his researches into the theory of politics, the honourable member for Nasik has come across a remark of Aristotle to the effect that peoples come together as states in the first instance in order to enable themselves to live and secondly in order to live well. I suggest that without the ministrations of these departments of Government which are under the Home Department, the chances of the people living at all are very remote. We usually look on Bombay as one of the most orderly provinces in India and in many ways it is so. Bombay in the list of the Provinces of India stands seventh, as regards the incidence of serious crime in proportion to population.

Mr. R. G. PRADHAN : Sir, on a point of explanation, I should like to know from the honourable member the Home Secretary what the honourable member for Nasik has to do with the remarks that he has made ?

Mr. A. MONTGOMERIE : I was merely suggesting that the honourable member for Nasik who has studied politics thoroughly is more likely to be cognizant of this particular remark of Aristotle than most members of the House. I am not accusing him of anything.

When we have said that Bombay stands above six of the other provinces of India in the matter of crime, we have said there all that we can say. I suggest, Sir, that in a great part of the territories of this Presidency, life and property are unsafe, and that the economies which we have already been compelled to effect in the Home Department have made it even more unsafe. I would like to put before this House some facts for its serious consideration. In the year 1922 there were tried in England and Wales which have the population of something like over 40 millions, for murder 60 persons of whom 35 were convicted and condemned to death. In the Bombay Presidency in a similar period there were tried for murder 827 persons of whom 360 were found guilty of murder, and I need not say that probably it is the experience of this House that the number of murders actually coming into court is not necessarily an index of the number of murders which actually occur. There are many murders which are never brought to the notice of the police, many are hidden away in the villages. When there is a village faction and somebody is murdered, the first instinct of the villagers is to say that there is one good man killed and why should they trouble themselves and go to the police in order that somebody else should be killed. I have seen the thing happening over and over again down in the Dharwar district.

[Mr. A. Montgomerie]

With regard to robberies and dacoities there were in England 199, in the Bombay Presidency including the city of Bombay, 1,400. I suggest, Sir, that these facts indicate that we have by any means managed to establish law, the rule of law and order, in the Presidency, and any endeavour to cut down our police forces will meet with disaster.

In England there is one policeman to 1·5 square miles of the country. In Bombay we can only afford to have one policeman for 5·7 square miles of the country. In Bombay we have to administer our police on the most economical basis. Our average cost per policeman in the Bombay Presidency is 517 rupees per annum. In all other provinces except Madras and Behar and Orissa the cost is very much greater, which indicates that although we pay our policemen a higher rate than the other provinces, the standard of living in Bombay being very much higher, although we are paying our individual policemen in Bombay better than they do in other provinces in India, we are managing by the reduction of the overhead costs and the general costs and contingencies to run our police more economically than those provinces. The comparative figures that I have given, Sir, for England and India, of course, only give a very general idea of the relation between crime and the number of population. It must be remembered that Bombay includes comparatively non-criminal districts like Ratnagiri, Ahmednagar and Kanara—places where crime is very uncommon. There are large districts in the Presidency where crime is very much worse. The average number of murders per million of population in England is 3; in the United States it is, I believe, 6·5. In the last administration report on the administration of criminal and civil justice in this Presidency which is now available, the figure for Ratnagiri, the least criminal district of the presidency, is 6. But in Kaira it is 47. I do not know if the honourable member for Kaira wishes any reduction in the police; at least I did not hear him say anything in that direction. The general taxpayer is at present paying for a considerable number of extra police in the honourable member's district, for the extra police establishment in his district; but the highest figure of all is in the Upper Sind Frontier which runs to 128 murders per million of population. The result is obvious that we cannot afford to reduce anything on the police. A further result is that we cannot afford to reduce anything on jails. The number of admissions into the jails of this Presidency, according to the report for 1923, which is the latest available, was 86,868. The number of admissions in England and Wales for more than double the population is 47,000. So we cannot afford to reduce anything on jails, unless we are going to run the jails as mere internment camps where we can put the prisoners in and not spend any money in looking after them. The honourable member for Ahmedabad pointed out that by cutting the food of the prisoners we have reduced the dietary charges by a lakh. That is perfectly true, but it won't cut the food which goes into the stomachs of the prisoners. The people who will be badly hit are the contractors who for years have been charging us retail rates for wholesale supplies. They will be hit. And we cannot certainly cut down our expenditure on our courts so long as we are called on to try the very large number of criminal cases. So long as we are called on to try the very large number of civil cases, too, you cannot cut down the court establishment so long as people are going to law. In the city of Bombay, in the Small Causes Court, there are 33,000 cases—suits—filed. In a very similar city—Liverpool—with a very similar population, with the same characteristic shipping ports and manufactures, there are in the County Court, which corresponds to our Small Causes Court, 5,486 suits. It is obvious then, Sir, that if this Council is looking forward to make a cut in the present budget, the cut cannot be made in the security services. It has been suggested: Cut down the grant to Government, and then Government will have to find the money. It cannot be found, with due regard to the security of life and security of property, by cutting grants out of the three large spending departments, the police, jails and justice. Therefore, it will be for the House, if it is going to cut it at all, to cut it out of other departments.

Mr. MAHOMED AYUB SHAH MAHOMED KHUHRO (Larkana District): Sir, I want to say a few words in connection with the budget discussion, in connection with the Sukkur Barrage in particular and the whole irrigation in general. Everybody thinks that this is a very big scheme which will cost very great amount of money, but little has been said on it by the honourable members who have preceded me. There are two points to be noted: One is that the scheme is being managed by inefficient hands and the other is that the expense is extravagant. The reasons for inefficiency of the staff are that many assistant executive engineers or even assistant engineers who were in permanent service have been made executive engineers and have been taken up for barrage work, and the executive engineers have been made superintending engineers and chief engineers on the barrage. They have not the technical experience that is necessary for barrage work. These assistant engineers and others, in spite of the fact that they did get extraordinary promotion by this rise, claim duty allowance and other allowance in spite of the fact that they have not to work throughout the year. They draw duty allowances and they claim palatial houses to live in. They have to work only for the winter season say from November to March, only about five months a year, and yet they are constructing a good many bungalows at Sukkur headquarters and on each canal at the distance of four or five miles from each other, on the banks of canals.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: Where are these bungalows? Within four or five miles from the canals?

Mr. MAHOMED AYUB SHAH MAHOMED KHUHRO: Yes, they are not constructed so far but they are to be constructed according to the prepared scheme. Each bungalow costs from Rs. 15,000 to Rs. 50,000. May I ask the Honourable Member where is the necessity of wasting huge amounts of money on bungalows when he himself admits that they require these bungalows only for ten years? Why should they have any bungalows at all, when revenue and other officers have been touring about in tents? They admit that after ten years they will not require the bungalows and they will have to dispose of them. Are they sure that they will get a proper return on those bungalows? This shows that these inexperienced men who are appointed get the extra conveniences, extra allowances and all these comforts. May I ask the Honourable Member for General Department what efficiency do they show for running this scheme? When so much attention is shown to the Bombay development by engaging experts for advice, is this not an equally important scheme? In the 1925-26 budget, that is this budget, a provision of 35 lakhs is being made for the construction of more bungalows and I must say that it is all practically waste. For the barrage staff, 28 lakhs are provided and out of that two-thirds is a waste. I am going to prove how so much staff is unnecessary, on the right-bank there are three canals to be constructed, namely, the South-Eastern canal, the Central Rice canal and North-Western canal. These canals pass through a great part of the Larkana district and end a little further. They more or less benefit Larkana district and a portion of Sukkur district and Shahdadkot taluka. It is the opinion of almost all the agriculturists of that part that both South-Eastern canal and Central Rice canal these canals are of no use. The fact is that Larkana division and Mehar division are already under cultivation to the extent of 80 per cent. Therefore, I think it could very conveniently be arranged for these canals to be transferred to the Irrigation Department, and that department should be made to do the work with a little additional staff, and they can do it. I have discussed this matter personally with the executive engineers concerned, and they themselves say that they can easily take up this work with simply one assistant in addition and a few assistant engineers as and when required. I belong to the Larkana district. These canals run through Ghar and Western Nara and Shikarpur Canals Irrigation districts. One suggestion with regard to these canals is that, in the first place, it was not at all necessary to have these two canals. What they should have done was to end these canals in the Ghar, the Western Nara and Sukkur canals, and further they should only have improved, and widened the tails of the old canals and branches and excavated some new branches, which could have been done by the Irrigation Department, in order to irrigate the remaining 20 per cent. waste land. In that way, a lot of saving could have been effected. But if they insist on having these two canals anyhow, just to show that so much land has come under cultivation by this scheme, they could have got this work done easily by amalgamating it with irrigation districts of Ghar, Western Nara and Shikarpur canals. The other suggestion that I wish to offer is that separate Superintending Engineers for the Left and the Right Banks and the separate Chief Engineer for Barrage, these officers are not at all needed. There should be only one Superintending Engineer for the Barrage itself, and only a few engineers for the Right or the Left Banks, wherever they are needed; the rest of the work should be done by the Irrigation Department; that would be the most economical way of doing it.

[Mr. Mahomed Ayub Shah Mahomed Khuhro]

Similarly, there is the example of the Begari canal which Government propose to remodel. There again, is too much waste, and I think the same arrangements that I have suggested before should be adopted in the case of the Begari canals also. The officers of the Sukkur Barrage propose spending Rs. 18 lakhs on remodelling the Begari canal, while the Executive Engineer, Begari, could do it at half the amount, in half the time, and in as good a way, without having any extra staff. I again repeat that these bungalows are not at all necessary, and out of the Rs. 35 lakhs that have been provided for this purpose, not a pie is necessary. Also the amount of Rs. 55,000 for the survey of the remodelling of the Begari canal which has been provided in this year's budget is a waste.

I come from the district in which the barrage canals pass. I myself see that the four executive engineers appointed for the barrage go on touring along with their staff, supervising the survey work, while the same ground is covered by the executive engineers for Ghar and Western Nara Irrigation districts. The House can imagine how much money is wasted by this extra staff for the barrage.

I must say that the intention of Government appears to be to increase the work unnecessarily and to create posts for more men, and thus to bring about the ruin of Sind as soon as possible. The Sukkur Barrage was estimated to cost Rs. 18 crores, but looking to the way in which the work goes on every year, the ultimate expenses will not be less than Rs. 30 crores. In the current year over Rs. 2 crores were spent on the project, and rupees 3 crores are provided in next year's budget and at that rate, taking ten years as the period required for the completion of the scheme, Rs. 30 crores will be required for the purpose. Government have estimated that the assessment for rice cultivation will be Rs. 8 during the first ten years, Rs. 10 during the next twenty years and Rs. 12 to be the final pitch. According to the estimate of Rs. 18 crores expenditure, they estimate to sell the land at Rs. 150 to Rs. 200 per acre. In this connection it should be remembered that the expenses of the barrage scheme are to be borne by the agriculturists themselves. If, as I have shown, the cost of the scheme is increased to Rs. 30 crores, the assessment must also increase in the same proportion, and the cost of the land which is to be sold will also rise to Rs. 300 to Rs. 400 per acre and the assessment from Rs. 14 to Rs. 20 per acre. At present the gross income of a zamindar per acre is Rs. 15 and he pays to Government Rs. 5. After the barrage is completed I wonder how the zamindar will be able to pay more assessment, because his income per acre will remain the same, and Government will be compelled to charge Rs. 14 to Rs. 20 and according to the proportion of rise of expenditure—that means zamindars will have to pay minus something. Therefore, Sir, I think the scheme is only protective and not productive, and on a protective scheme it is no use spending so much money. It should be run on the most economical lines. I do not think it is a scheme on which so much money from loan funds should be spent, for, if Government's expectations do not prove to be correct, ultimately the whole burden will fall on the Presidency.

[Mr. Mahomed Ayub Shah Mahomed Khuhro]

I shall have more to say on the subject, when the question of the barrage grants comes to be discussed.

I find that for the ensuing year Rs. 31 lakhs have been provided for irrigation from ordinary revenues and Rs. 42 lakhs from capital accounts, and Rs. 84 lakhs for Civil Works. That means an additional debt of Rs. 128 lakhs.

Then, I find that Rs. 40,000 are provided in the budget for reduction of the sluices of zamindari karias. This is really a very important question. There has been a strong protest against it, but in spite of the protests, the Public Works Department insist on continuing this atrocious policy. They want to spend more money and to give less water to irrigate the land. Some of the canals that are 20 feet wide at the head are only 6 feet wide at the tail, and if they reduce the sluices, how is the water going to flow to the tail when there is no sufficient room to accommodate it. All the zamindars are strongly opposed to this policy of reduction of sluices. This also hinders the proper clearing of the sluices. This is a grievance in regard to which we must assert our rights.

We had made representations to the Honourable Mr. Cowasji Jehangir in this connection in October last. He promised to go into the question himself. He came to Sind in November last and held two conferences, one at Hyderabad and the other at Sukkur. About three hundred zamindars of different talukas and districts attended the conference. They all in a body condemned this policy of the irrigation officers. The highest officials of the Irrigation Department could persuade only two or three zamindars to support their policy. Some out of those zamindars were relatives of the subordinate officers of the Public Works Department. The result was that the Honourable Member said that it was a controversial point and no definite decision was arrived at. This is how things are going on in Sind. I also find that Rs. 2,80,000 have been provided for improvements of bunds in Sind. I think half of this amount is unnecessary.

There is also a provision of Rs. 90,000 for the buildings of the Irrigation Department, which is wholly unnecessary. Why should they build new buildings, while there are already so many buildings? May I ask the Honourable the General Member how the sub-divisional officers and executive engineers were managing without these buildings in the past? Why should they not do the same now, and wait still further? I hope that the Honourable the General Member will carefully look into the matter.

I shall have more to say on the various items when the motions for the reduction or omission of items are discussed one by one.

Mr. R. G. SOMAN (Satara District): Sir, my honourable friend from Thana has already dealt with the question as to how certain allowances have been turned into non-votable items. But there is another matter to which I wish to refer, that is, there are certain officers in certain departments, such as the medical research officer, for whom provision has been made in the budget without even adding a note as to the duties of such an officer. I submit that in the Blue Book at least some note should have been given as to why this post has been created, and why a new medical research officer has been thrust on this presidency and what his duties are, so that the House might have realised the necessity for the appointment of this officer.

With regard to the Lee Commission charges it has been stated by the Honourable the Finance Member that in the current year 9 lakhs and in the next year 10 lakhs this presidency will have to bear for enforcing Lee Commission recommendations, but what about the other recommendation made by the Lee Commission for the delegation of powers to the provincial governments for the provincialisation of the services ? This side of the House would very much like to be enlightened as to when that is likely to be done.

With regard to the budget it has been stated by so many honourable members that the budget is an adversity budget ; and therefore the only means to avoid deficit is to curtail expenditure on the several departments. But the Honourable the Finance Member has suggested two taxation bills, namely, the Stamp Bill and Court-fees Bill. They are being put forward for the purpose of obtaining 36 lakhs of rupees and a further 6 lakhs of rupees will be obtained by taxation on betting at the races. There is even another bill which is being brought forward as stated by the Honourable the Finance Member at page 17 of his speech, under which the irrigated lands are to be taxed to a certain extent. Thus, the epidemic of taxation is coming over us one after another and it lies with the members of this House to see whether these taxation proposals should be consented to.

One other subject to which I wish to refer is the Medical Department. Last year a provision was made for a scheme of medical relief to village areas, and a provision of Rs. 10,000 was made. This year provision of Rs. 3,000 more has been made for the same purpose. These are for the prathamaopacharakus. We have to spend Rs. 13,000 for this project and a press note was recently issued by Government stating that there is a bigger scheme under contemplation of Government, but we have yet to see as to when that scheme is going to be put into operation. The village population requires medical relief badly. The Madras Government have already started a school for teaching indigenous systems of medicine at a cost of Rs. 30,000, which example ought to be followed by the Bombay Government as soon as possible. I am told that the Bombay Government is in correspondence with the Madras Government in this matter. The sooner the teaching of indigenous system is introduced the better it will be for the village population, who will then be able to get medical relief at a much cheaper cost.

Now as to water supply ; the Honourable the Finance Member has put forward the excuse for taxing the municipal areas that the Bombay Government afford water supply to those municipal areas. But what about the village population ? This year, I am thankful to the Honourable Minister, a sum of 2 lakhs has been sanctioned for the water supply to the village population. But, Sir, that is too meagre a sum to satisfy the needs of the village population.

[Mr. R. G. Soman]

With regard to irrigation, I wish to submit that many members of this House might have read a leader in one of the Bombay dailies in which it was stated that larger projects were not as beneficial and paying as smaller projects. It has been considered necessary that smaller projects should be spread over the presidency and in order to avoid famine it is necessary that these smaller projects should be taken in hand at once instead of bigger ones like the Sukkur Barrage which eat up a large amount out of the finances of this presidency and loan funds from the Central Government. I have to thank the Honourable the Revenue Member for sanctioning at least a small amount in the matter of boring new wells, but that is a small crumb thrown at the village population which will not satisfy their hunger. The Honourable the Revenue Member paid a visit to my district and he might have seen the hopeless condition of the eastern talukas. Unless some relief is given to the eastern talukas by way of more irrigational facilities and famine is averted thereby, the condition will grow worse. The House will be surprised to hear that a village which yields a revenue of Rs. 11,000 has kept in arrears Rs. 2,000 every year on an average as the arrears during the last revision period amount to Rs. 60,000 in this one village. This will give an idea as to how the eastern talukas are situated in this respect. Unless small irrigation projects are taken in hand and executed, distress will be very greatly felt by the village population.

With regard to the Agricultural Department, it may be stated that if one looks through the budget, the White Book, one finds a phalanx of superior officers on page 202. This House ought to know why this phalanx of superior officers, excepting the Director of Agriculture and the officers of the Co-operative Department, should be saddled on us. The House ought to know the detailed work done by these officers. We find actually that this Agricultural Department is the most top heavy department. The Public Health Department stands in the same predicament. If we look into the wants of these departments, we will find that expenses in the other departments ought to be curtailed and the savings be transferred to these and other nation-building departments. Curtailment of expenditure can be effected in the Excise Department. I am sorry that the Honourable Minister in charge of Excise has stated that more preventive staff is necessary. It will be found that though the Salt and Excise Departments were separated, the superior staff remained practically the same, except a change here and there. Commissioners' charges are wholly saddled on this department. That will go to show that there is still room for curtailment in the superior services of that department.

So also whenever retrenchment has been thought of, that retrenchment is only effected by telling some subordinates to go out of service, by reducing a number of clerks, peons, menials and servants. That is what has happened in the Judicial Department, as also in the Police Department. If we look to the White Book we shall find that the number of armed police has been curtailed by 200. So also more than a hundred clerks have been told to walk out. On the other hand, we find that the number at the top, that is to say, the number of subordinate judges, first class sub-judges, sessions judges, assistant judges, etc., has been increasing from day to day. It is the poor people that have been asked to walk out, and the question of unemployment is sure one day to be the most serious problem to be considered by the Government of Bombay. This sort of retrenchment has also been resorted to in the Registration Department, by the introduction of the system of photo-copying from the year 1921. This House has expressed its disapproval in regard to that system by not allowing a supplementary grant last time, but still in this year's budget we find that there are provisions made for the import of stores for this photoinco office. In the district of Satara alone, 11 registration clerks had been discharged only last year, and I do not know how many more are to follow suit. I submit that if the poor clerks are in this way driven out from Government service, the question of unemployment is sure to become a serious problem.

Now, with regard to one want which has been felt by the Satara district, and that is a railway from Satara to Koregaon. We have read the discussions in the Legislative Assembly and the Council of State regarding feeder railways. A railway between Satara and Koregaon has been thought of for a long time, and the Bombay Government should try its best to have that line constructed, so that the fallen city of Satara, which was once the seat of the Mahratta Empire, may once again be restored to its former grandeur and importance at least in commercial matters, if not in the affairs of Government.

Now, with regard to the Honourable the Finance Member's speech, I have to submit that his reference to certain other provinces in the matter of the administration of those provinces having come to a standstill is utterly uncalled for, and in the same way his threat as regards this province, namely that the nation-building departments will be starved if these taxation bills are not consented to by the House, is most unwarranted and uncalled for. With these remarks, I beg to submit that the taxation bills should not at all be consented to by any member of this House.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN (Bombay City, South): Sir, the Honourable the Finance Member has in the beginning of his speech paid a doubtful compliment to the opposition. He has said, Sir :

"Life would be monotonous if we were all in complete agreement on all points. I do not suppose that anybody could bear the tedium of sitting in this assembly if we were not stimulated and enlivened by the acute criticisms of some of our friends on the opposite benches."

I say, Sir, that this is a doubtful compliment, because I find that a new function has been assigned to the opposition, namely to stimulate and enliven the honourable gentlemen on the opposite benches. In other words, it is the function of a jester. I am prepared to accept the position if the Honourable the Finance Member will also extend the privilege that is always extended to a jester, namely absolute freedom of speech and action. That is the sole privilege of a jester, and if he extends that privilege, I am prepared to accept the position, however humiliating it may seem.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : You are forgetting the President.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN : I am sorry. Now, Sir, taking my point from that, I do not propose to waste any more time or breath in offering any criticism, constructive or destructive. I tried in the last sessions to offer very constructive criticism and made a very constructive proposal in the course of my speech, reduced it in the form of a proposition and persuaded honourable members on this side of the House to accept it. Instead of appreciation from Government I found that that very constructive and very reasonable and very sensible proposal was consigned to the very large waste paper basket of Government. I mean the very reasonable proposal about the Development Directorate. After that, Sir, you cannot expect me, or any honourable gentleman with any self-respect, to come forward any more with constructive proposals or sensible propositions. I say it is mere waste of public time and private breath. But I stand here to prove and prove conclusively from the records which are placed before me by Government, that by producing this miserable product, what is called the financial budget, this most miserable product, the Government has proved and proved to the satisfaction of the country their unfitness to govern the country so far as its financial affairs are concerned. We are often charged, when we claim Home Rule, that for various reasons we are not yet fit for it, that we have got to learn many things, and that after a century or two when we have learned them, our claims for Home Rule will be considered. But that charge is levelled against us without giving us an opportunity to prove our fitness. The country has given an opportunity to Government to prove their fitness, an opportunity for 150 years, and I say if this is the result of the experience and the learning of the Civil Services, the expert knowledge within the ranks of Finance Secretaries and Deputy Secretaries in the various departments, if this is the miserable production of all their efforts and energy, then so far as the financial affairs of the country are concerned this Government is absolutely unfit to manage it. I challenge it and I make an open offer. I say to them "Transfer that department to us only for three years. Put the Finance portfolio in the charge of a man like Professor K. T. Shah, and allow him a staff and see the result after three years." There will be no more necessity for extra taxation ; there will be no more necessity for fresh bills. There will be more happiness to the people, and less taxation of the people with the same amount of monetary burden. I make this offer : I know it will not be accepted. I say to Government, if you do not accept my offer, for God's sake do not place that charge again that we are unfit. Give us the charge of that department for three years, and if we fail, certainly we will submit to the charge and will not claim Home Rule for a long time to come. If you do not accept the offer, you ought to be silent so far as our qualifications and fitness are concerned. It is not in a flight of imagination or exaggeration that I say that so far as the financial affairs are concerned, the present rulers have failed. After all, the real fitness of a Government is tested by the manner in which they manage the financial affairs of the country. I know of several other affairs in which I am prepared to state that they are very competent, particularly in law and order. I am prepared to concede that they are more competent than any member on this side of the House, to manage class divisions. I am prepared to concede their capacity in various other matters. But so far as the real qualification for government, namely, the management of the financial affairs of the country is concerned, I shall certainly maintain that we are more competent than the Government of the country, not only of this province but of the whole country.

Now, Sir, looking at this speech, from the very start I happen to come in when the Honourable the Finance Member was painting a very glowing picture about the financial affairs of this Presidency. He began with a speech which showed that there was going to be increase all round, prosperity all round, more land revenue from agricultural point of view, very favourable monsoon, wealth from the income of excise. Everywhere it appears, Sir, that it would appear a prosperity budget. I say so, particularly, so far as the Honourable the Finance Member is concerned, and I want the House to very seriously consider the financial position of this Presidency. It is maintained and proved by facts not disputed that this Presidency of all the provinces in the country is the most highly taxed Presidency in India. That is not disputed and it is proved by Professor K. T. Shah in the well known book in which he has given the incidence of taxation per head in our province and proved so far as the ordinary affairs are concerned and so far as the development department is concerned that it is the heaviest taxed Presidency in the whole of India. This is not only the most heavily taxed presidency, but that this is a Presidency which is most heavily indebted and that is a statement which we have got from the authentic source of no less a person than the Honourable the Finance Member in reply to a question put by Sir Purshottamdas Thakurdas. He has given a table which is astounding. Here, Sir, is a table of the relative indebtedness of the several provinces in India as estimated to be on the 31st March 1912 and as having grown since that date to the end of March 1924. In March 1914 the total indebtedness accepted in Madras was 11 crores 2 lakhs and to-day it is 11 crores 6 lakhs. In Bombay the total indebtedness in March 1914 was 10 crores 2 lakhs and to-day it is 42 crores 50 lakhs which is an astounding figure. Adding to this the loans for the Sukkar Barrage, it would come to the astounding figure again of 59 crores. This will show that the debt has risen from 10 crores to 59 crores at the end of the year. In Bengal the total indebtedness at the end of March 1914 was 3 crores 6 lakhs and at the end of March 1924 it has come down to 2 crores. United Provinces had the total indebtedness of 15 crores in 1914 and 19 crores in 1924; Punjab, 20 in 1914 and 25 in 1924; Burma 2 crores, Bihar and Orissa 6, Central Provinces 2 to 5. It will appear from these figures that Bombay is the most heavily taxed province and is also the most heavily indebted presidency. That is the position financially looking at it generally for the last 10 years. Considering that position we should have expected any man with reason and caution to proceed cautiously and safely so as not to launch the presidency to a point of further financial disaster. Instead of that what do we find? We find criminal extravagance, waste of public money, proceeding unabated. I cannot understand the Honourable the Finance Member's speech when he congratulates the administration by saying that if we regard the result as a whole there is reasonable stringent economy in the administrative departments. Stringent economy! I tried in the Blue Book and the White Book and the Yellow Book that are presented to us to look for the stringent economy. I have found everywhere instead of that, extravagance, criminal waste, and I am going to prove that not only by my speech but by referring to the records. The expenditure has risen from 1914 as was shown by the honourable member for Bombay City, North, my friend Mr. Baptista yesterday, a great deal risen in 10 years. Coming to the total expenditure it has risen to 16. How is that position justifiable? If you compare our presidency with another which is equally important or I should say more important considering the total population and area and other matters, namely, the Presidency of Bengal, comparing the Bengal Budget with the Bombay Budget with a population larger than Bombay, with an area larger than Bombay, with responsibility as great, with miseries and hardships as the people of this presidency, and in that presidency perhaps they can manage their affairs with an annual revenue of 10 to 11 crores without any extra charge, without any heavy indebtedness of 10 or 11 crores for development and special and extraordinary works. We require 16 crores for ordinary charges and we are not able to manage within that but want additional taxation.

The honourable member, the Finance Secretary, Mr. Wiles, stated that he has heard numerous criticisms but that no honourable member has offered any constructive suggestions. Sir, I also refute that charge. It was only 2 years ago that in this House a suggestion was made—I believe that there were no obstructive members in this House then, they were all reasonable and constructive gentlemen before the Swaraj party came in—it was a suggestion that was accepted by Government and a retrenchment committee was formed which was called the Bombay Retrenchment Committee. They laboured for months, they examined all the records of Government, they examined all the witnesses on the Government side and heard arguments on both sides and they formulated their recommendations in the form of a book which I dare say is before Government. What has become of those recommendations when the the honourable member the Finance Secretary says that there is no constructive criticism offered.

Mr. G. WILES: I was referring to the speech of one honourable member shortly before I got up and not to the general criticisms of all the honourable members.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN : Even that I can refute and say that it was not fair. When Government has not accepted the constructive criticism not made in an off-hand speech here and there, not in a resolution but by a committee of their own appointment consisting of such reasonable men as the late Rao Bahadur Sathe and my friend Mr. Cowasji Jehangir, not obstructive gentlemen but all honourable and reasonable gentlemen with moderate and temperate views, not obstructive gentlemen as we have some of them in this House now—those gentlemen laboured and laboured and came to a conclusion and made reasonable suggestions—I ask Government what has become of those recommendations? Has the report of that committee been consigned to the big waste-paper basket of Government? If that was so, why did you ask these gentlemen to waste their valuable time and why did you waste your money for witnesses if you are not going to accept the recommendations of that committee? If the recommendations had been otherwise, if that committee had recommended that the services are not well paid you would have accepted their recommendations at once. Like the Lee Commission's report if that committee had recommended increase of salary of the services you would have accepted them at once. I referred to page after page of the present administration report to find whether any of the recommendations of that retrenchment committee have been accepted and I found that it is stated there that there is no room for economy. Notwithstanding this we hear it stated here that there is no proper criticism offered and that therefore Government is at a loss to know what to do.

I will only refer to one particular instance. I wish to show what kind of jobbery is going on in this Government. I will show how appointments are created in order to accommodate certain officers regardless of financial stringency and financial relations of the presidency. I will quote only one instance from that retrenchment committee's report. There is an officer called "the Mechanical Engineer to Government," his appointment is created because they want to set their machinery right. They want a mechanical engineer to oil and repair their machinery. They want a mechanical engineer to set the machinery of the Public Works Department right. Now, Sir, this officer, according to the report we find in the Blue Book, was actually done away with for the last three or four years. They could run the Government machinery without that mechanical engineer for the last three or four years, but in order to create a post for himself, his post has been restored.....

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : The honourable member cannot get more than 20 minutes ; he has got 4 minutes more.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN : I was saying, Sir, that they could run the Government machinery for five years without that post, but that post has been revived in this year of plenty and prosperity ! Government have got plenty of money. I would refer to page 202 of the White Book, for a number of new posts created for this year. After that they say there is stringency in the money market and no machinery in the market for running Government machinery at the Dapuri Workshop. It was formerly a pure workshop ; they wanted to dispose of it. They could not find a purchaser for several years ; they wanted a ready purchaser. Refer to the Public Works budget and you will find that year by year that they are running these workshops at a loss which comes to about Rs. 50,000 a year. Only from workshops of the Public Works Department, there is a loss of Rs. 50,000 a year, and yet they have not thought it fit to close them ! I put it to the Honourable the Finance Member whether he would act similarly if it was his private money. If he had, say, purchased a hundred or two hundred shares in a private concern and was conducting that concern and he found that the concern was losing at the rate of Rs. 50,000 a year, would he not close it at once ? Therefore, as the trustees of the public funds, do we not expect the same action from him and other members of Government as they would adopt if it were their own private money ? Where is the Audit Report for 1923-24—a report full of ugly facts ? If it were a case of a private company and its accounts disclosed such ugly facts, then the directors would have been made liable to refund the money. Such irregularities as have been reported by the Accountant General himself in the Audit Report would have made the directors, if it were a private company, refund all that money to the shareholders. I only want to give some more instances, Sir. I won't take much longer time. I only want a few more minutes as the subject is important.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I know, but honourable members must realise that when one member concludes his speech, about ten members get up to catch the eye of the Chair and, in these circumstances, every minute is valuable. I cannot, therefore, allow the honourable member more than the prescribed time.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN : I will only finish by referring to some of the prominent figures which show retrenchment so far as the Government finances are concerned ! I find that a sum of Rs. 31 lakhs was wasted out of the public funds for " Government Houses " ; on three Government Houses during three years a sum of Rs. 31 lakhs has been wasted without any sanction of this House, without any estimates having been provided for. That matter was brought before the Finance Committee, but so far nothing has been done. Certain figures were promised, but nothing has been done so far. Is it not a scandalous state of affairs ? When we ask the Government to come to the rescue of the flood-stricken people in various parts of the presidency, when we ask for the lessening of the other burdens on the poor people, Government come forward to say they have got no money, no funds ; but they have got Rs. 31 lakhs to spend not for new Government Houses, but to renovate the palatial buildings which already exist ! I wonder what has become of these 31 lakhs of rupees spent without sanction. Before you ring the bell, Sir, I will resume my seat.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : Sir, I should first like to reply to the criticism that has been levelled against my department by the honourable member for Bombay city who has attacked the increased activities of the P. W. D. also. He says the last word of wisdom is to be found in the Retrenchment Committee's report, and after that the mechanical engineer's post was created. It was created, Sir, with the sanction of this House. I issued a leaflet showing the activities of the various specialist officers in the P. W. D. but I am sorry my honourable friend has not read that leaflet. I have very little time at my disposal but I will try briefly to explain the whole position with regard to the Mechanical Engineer. He overhauls the Government's machinery, which is worth one crore of rupees. No doubt, this post was abolished a few years ago, but the whole machinery was ruined as a result. We actually corresponded with private firms in regard to the inspection of our machinery as well as that of local bodies, and I can place the terms and conditions which they gave us before the House. They were exorbitant, and Government found it much cheaper to revive the post of Mechanical Engineer, and this House approved of the appointment. Not only does he overhaul the Government's valuable machinery, but he trains up Indian boys in mechanics. Further, he is in charge of the Dapuri workshops, where 40 young men are being trained on the mechanical side, and last year at Poona I had taken some honourable members to show them the work there. Some of the apprentices from the Engineering College at Poona are being trained on the technical side, and with the consent of the members of this House one apprentice engineer is taken up as temporary engineer. Then, with regard to the Dapuri workshops, I could produce accounts to show that they are not being run as a losing concern. (Mr. K. F. Nariman : You have not supplied us with any such accounts.)

Now, Sir, coming to other points, there was a complaint about village water-supply. But honourable members should realise that under Acts of the legislature which have been passed by the predecessors of this House, it is the primary duty of the local bodies to make reasonable provision for water-supply in a village. Government has always been very liberal in giving grants for village water-supply as well as for drainage schemes. Lakhs of rupees are given as grants-in-aid. For village water-supply we contribute a portion. Though this is an adversity budget, 2 lakhs of rupees have been provided for grants-in-aid in this connection. This year one lakh was provided, but there was not much demand. Has any honourable member quoted any instance where a grant was asked by a local board for this purpose and was refused by Government? I think it is the duty of honourable members to inform their constituencies that there are such provisions made in the budget and to ask the local boards to apply for such grants. But, if the honourable members desire that the local bodies should not themselves levy any local rates for their own purposes and that everything should be paid out of the provincial revenues, then I would request honourable members to help me to find the funds. They cannot have it both ways. They cannot expect that the provincial revenues should pay for the provincial works as well as meet the local needs of the cities and the rural areas.

[Khan Bahadur Shaikh Ghulam Hussain]

Then, there was a complaint about communications, roads and bridges from an honourable member from the Karnatak districts. If the honourable member will take the trouble to refer to the budget of the last four years and for the ensuing year, he will see that Government have spent on new communications alone over a crore of rupees, out of which nearly 16 lakhs have been spent in the Southern Division comprising most of the parts of the Karnatak districts. If the honourable member were to take the trouble to refer to the budget, he will see that even for next year over Rs. 8 lakhs have been budgetted for the Southern Division for the maintenance of roads, though usually only Rs. 4 lakhs are provided for that division, and the Karnatak districts are within the Southern Division.

The honourable member from Bombay says that we have been strengthening the Kasheli bridge, because it is to be used by the military. I can assure the honourable member that there has been no such requisition from the military authorities or from the Central Government. We have been strengthening all our bridges, so that they may be able to bear the heaviest possible traffic. It is not a provincial work, and yet we are contributing towards the expenditure, in the interests of the people of Thana and the surrounding places. The military have nothing to do with it. However, I welcome his suggestion, and I am going to examine all the roads that are used by the military, and we will try to get some money from them, if we can make out a case. But as regards the Kasheli bridge, I can assure the House that there was absolutely no requisition from the military, and we have strengthened it just like the Lloyd and other bridges.

Then the honourable member from Karachi complained of excessive expenditure under 41, Civil Works. The budget provision for the next year is Rs. 1,17,00,000, and a paltry sum of Rs. 4 lakhs is provided for new works.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI : The provision is Rs. 13,25,000.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : That is the provision for new works and works in progress. There is a difference between new works and works in progress. For new works, a provision of only Rs. 4 lakhs has been made. Works in progress are those which have already been started, and have to be completed. For new works, the provision is only Rs. 4 lakhs. Then the honourable member says that Government have been spending lakhs and lakhs on old Government buildings. If he were to look at the budget, he would find that under 41, Civil Works, only Rs. 1 lakh has been provided for that purpose.

Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI : What was the revenue from buildings in the year 1923-24 and 1924-25 ?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : I will let you know. Now, I would like to offer a few general remarks in regard to the budget.

[Khan Bahadur Shaikh Ghulam Hussain]

I have been observing that the tendency of this honourable House has been towards decreasing the revenue and increasing the expenditure. Now, I will first take communications. There is an incessant demand for more roads and bridges. The minimum demand that we have got from our officers for the mere maintenance of the existing communications is Rs. 30 lakhs. Then, in response to incessant demands, provision for new roads and works in progress in regard to communications has been made in the next year's budget to the extent of Rs. 25 lakhs. Honourable members of this House are not satisfied merely with expenditure on provincial roads. They want larger grants for local board roads, and honourable members will see that though the usual grant to the local boards in this respect is Rs. 11 lakhs, next year Rs. 19 lakhs have been provided for the purpose. If we total all these items, and add to them the establishment charges, our communications alone would cost us a crore of rupees in this presidency. And yet, the people are not satisfied with that; they want larger sums of money for the purpose. Now, we had a source of income from provincial roads in the shape of tolls. But in response to the wishes of this Council Government undertook to abolish the tolls gradually. But the House is even impatient of their gradual abolition. It wants Government immediately to abandon their income from this source, which is nearly Rs. 12 lakhs.

Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI : The Honourable Minister is misrepresenting facts, and prejudicing the House for nothing. He has been increasing the revenues from tolls and decreasing those from buildings. That is what his budget says.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : That is the amount actually realised, and which the House wishes Government to give up. That is my point. Now, I would like to point out to the House that if it is their desire that we should give up this revenue of Rs. 12 lakhs, some other provision ought to be made to replace it. They do not take into consideration the reductions that have already been made. We have reduced the tolls during the past two years. But as regards communications, the wish of the House as well as of the public is that we should spend larger sums of money on them, and give up the little revenue that we derive from that source.

Now, I come to land revenue. This honourable House has insisted that further revision of settlements should be postponed, and that the twenty years' settlement in Sind should be given retrospective effect to. That involves a loss of nearly Rs. 8 lakhs of revenue. But the House, I find, is not satisfied with this. In spite of the liberal remissions and suspensions, it wants more; it wants a provision of Rs. 50 lakhs to be made every year—whether it is a good year or a bad year does not matter—for remissions of land revenue. There were some honourable members who even went a step further and wanted a permanent settlement. But none of them suggested how the Rs. 8 lakhs or the Rs. 50 lakhs were to be provided.

[Khan Bahadur Shaikh Ghulam Hussain]

I next come to excise. There too, the wishes of the House are that this income—some of them call it tainted money, and some say that the budget is disfigured by this income—should altogether disappear. The Honourable Minister announced his policy of prohibition, and we will soon reach a point when our income will be reduced almost to nothing. But, as the presidency is situated, honourable members should realise, that by following the present policy of rationing, there will be only a limited quantity of liquor available for the consumption of the people. But those who are in the habit of drinking will continue to drink, and when they find that they cannot get it, they will try to resort to illicit distillation, which can very easily be done from mhowra flowers. Therefore, if the House wishes to carry out that policy, they will have to budget a larger provision for the preventive staff. That again means money.

I then come to education. There is an incessant demand for more funds for education. We are on the threshold of free and compulsory education, and when it is completely enforced, it will cost Rs. 1 crore more. But, at the same time, I find that the wishes of the House are that the salaries of the teachers should be revised and for that purpose a committee has been appointed.

Mr. C. M. SAPTARSHI : Is the Honourable Minister in order in replying to all the points relating to all the departments ?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I have already stated that there is no limitation in regard to general discussion on the budget. The Honourable Minister is replying to the criticisms against all the departments both reserved and transferred, which he is at full liberty to do.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD : His colleague is absent, Sir.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : That committee is sitting. The suggestion of the House is that the salaries of the teachers should be revised according to the Sathé-Paranjpye scheme, which will cost 18 lakhs of rupees. Has any provision been made for that, or has any suggestion been made by the House for meeting that expenditure ? Then again the local boards want more grants. I have had two conferences of the local boards. They want that the present system of grants-in-aid should be revised. Where is the money to come from ? Municipalities want larger grants for water works and drainage schemes. Where are the funds for this ?

These are the considerations I have placed before this honourable House. In regard to the budget as a whole, I know the reply will be that the establishments should be reduced. But the establishments have already been cut to the bone and if any further reduction is made it will impair the efficiency of the administration. Even by doing so, we will realise only a few lakhs. We will be losing a revenue of 12 lakhs on tolls, 8 lakhs under Land Revenue, and 18 lakhs in Education if the Paranjpye-Sathé scheme is accepted. I have placed all these considerations before the House and it is now for the House to decide what is proper.

Mr. C. M. SAPTARSHI (Ahmednagar District) : Mr. President, I do not intend to take up much of the time of the House, because most of the points have already been dealt with by previous speakers. I wish to place before the House one point with regard to the speech of the Honourable the Finance Member. To my mind he has presented a disappointing budget in a disappointing manner. My own idea of a Finance Member is that when he presents the budget, he ought to take the whole House into his confidence and explain to us the various sources of revenue and the way in which he proposes to dispose of that revenue. We expected the Honourable Mr. Lawrence to take us into confidence and to explain to us all his difficulties financial and otherwise in the matter of the budget. On the other hand I find that the whole speech is the speech of an advocate, delivered for the purpose of defending his case of enhancing taxation. It was a very bad case and in spite of his able advocacy the case has miserably failed. Now, what does the Honourable the Finance Member do? I may draw the attention of the House to the fact that the current year's budget does not show any real deficit. Seventy-nine lakhs out of the revenue have gone to the avoidance of debt. If we exclude this amount where is the deficit? It is very curious to find that deficits are made to order. Last year the deficit was shown as 18 lakhs and taxation proposals for 18 lakhs were placed before the Council. This year he proposes to tax to the extent of 42 lakhs and the deficit shown is 41 lakhs. I am prepared to show that there is no real deficit. If the Honourable the Finance Member had wanted to present a good budget he could have certainly done so by refusing to draw 98 lakhs out of his balances. He utilises his whole balance and shows a deficit. Instead of spending from the loans he spends from the balances. I know why that is being done. Unless the Honourable the Finance Member shows a deficit it is not possible for him to get this House to agree to his proposals for taxation. What I expected of the Honourable the Finance Member was that he would take this House into his confidence and with its help put up a strong fight with the Government of India to get back our income-tax revenue. That he has not done. I put it to the Honourable the Finance Member whether he would be able to succeed by this method in getting the Meston settlement reversed. The Government of India will say, after having pocketed 8 crores: "Your resources are still capable of yielding to you large amounts of money and it is not possible for us to relax our hold on the income-tax revenue." In fact the Honourable the Finance Member is making his case for the revision of Meston settlement much weaker by the presentation of taxation proposals.

He complains that the sources of revenue at the disposal of this province are not yielding to him. He first mentioned the land revenue. In this department he first takes to the Government the compliment for tenderness towards the agriculturists and refers to the rules of remissions and suspensions. I am glad that he has not complimented the Government for having introduced postage and telegraph. I think that these rules relating to remission and suspension were introduced 20 years ago. The present Government cannot take any credit for those rules. They were introduced during the time of Lord Curzon. What has the present reformed Government done to improve the land revenue policy?

[Mr. C. M. Saptarshi]

The policy of this Government with regard to land revenue is mainly responsible for the fall in the land revenue. What have they done to improve agriculture? Our total income is 16 crores, and we spend on agriculture 16 lakhs and even much of that amount is spent on services imperial and provincial and their allowances. If they want to increase the income from lands, they should introduce western scientific methods in agricultural operations and teach people to adopt those methods. The Agricultural Department has not been spending in proportion to the importance of land revenue. The main industry of this province is agriculture and unless you improve agriculture it is not possible to expect more income from land revenue. Then again what is the policy of Government with regard to irrigation. I know in my own district small irrigation works have been surveyed since 1905. Government still have not introduced any small protective irrigation schemes in my district. I know the present Revenue Member is very sympathetic or at least he wants to be sympathetic to the agriculturists in the matter of introducing small protective irrigation projects, but somehow, it has not been found possible for him to do anything by way of relieving the ryots in the matter of these small irrigation works. I hope that he will announce a very good policy in the matter of spending the Famine Insurance Fund. Under the Government of India Act we reserve 63 lakhs every year for the famine fund, and if we adopt a successful policy to prevent famine, and if we provide for the introduction of small irrigation works, I may say that our land revenue will be a better and permanent source of income, and will yield greater income. But up to this time Government have not done anything and no substantial steps have been taken to ameliorate the lot of the ryots, and the result is that land revenue has come to a standstill.

I do not propose to deal with other departments. What I mean to say is this. The Honourable the Finance Minister has told us that unless we submit to the proposals of taxation it is not possible for us to improve the position of this province. Well, Sir, next year and this year we have proposed to spend 10 lakhs to give effect to the recommendations of the Lee Commission. But so far as I know, this House was never consulted in the matter of the enhancement of salaries and allowances in accordance with their recommendations. Even if those recommendations were accepted by the Government of India it was only proper and in the fitness of things, that the Government of Bombay should have submitted those proposals for the consideration of this House. That has never been done: on the contrary, the Honourable the Finance Member proceeds to present the case of the increase of pay of the Imperial services in as presentable a form as possible and he says that for a population of two crores Government are only spending 97 lakhs on these all-India services, and the increase of ten lakhs represents only about an anna per head. Sir, it has been truly said that the art of manipulating figures is like the art of magic. I may say that when I heard the Honourable the Finance Minister presenting the case, I was tempted to say that the pay should be doubled. If that is doubled, what would be the result ? We would have to pay only two annas more per head, and surely that would be a negligible thing, and all these people would get good improvement in their salaries. But see, what a fallacy underlies that reasoning. Out of these two crores of people, how many persons are fit to bear this extra anna ? What is the incidence of taxation ? Are the people really able to pay that extra anna which goes into the pockets of the members of these costly services ? Government cannot deceive us by placing these false figures and false logic before us. It is impossible. We know we are paying for a very costly service, and as soon as we are enabled in the future to deal with it, I am quite sure that this House will see its way to have a cheaper service. At the present moment it is not possible for us. But we cannot be deceived by such false and deceptive presentation of figures.

My honourable friend Mr. Nariman has already dwelt upon the fact that the recommendations of the Retrenchment Committee have been absolutely ignored. From the figures presented in the Blue Book, we find that the expenditure as it stood at the end of the year 1921-22 has been restored, and all the labours of the Retrenchment Committee, on which experienced men like the Honourable the Deputy President were working, have been absolutely lost, and we are now restored to the position as it existed in the year 1921-22.

In concluding, I would say, Sir, that the budget presents one clear issue. Unless and until the Meston award is revised, unless and until the Bombay Government has better sources of revenue, this House will always refuse to increase taxation. I think it must once for all be made known to the Government benches that they should never repeat these proposals of fresh taxation. They did it last year, and they have done it this year. But I warn them on behalf of the non-official benches that we will refuse to increase taxation even by a pie. We believe that the limit of taxation has been reached in this presidency. In however tempting a manner Government may present their proposals, we shall not submit to them. It is known to us that it is absolutely harmful to tax the ryots higher than what we have done.

Mr. S. A. SARDESAI (Bijapur District): Mr. President, the budget so ably prepared by the Honourable Mr. H. S. Lawrence and presented to this House in such lucid terms would have called forth little criticism but for some radical differences in the points of view of the Government and the people. To touch merely one point out of many, the Government lay stress upon the departments of law and order and glorify them with encomiums very short of divine. The people on the other hand have their eye more upon the constructive and educative machinery of the administration than upon the machinery of the rod and the whip. I for one can never be unmindful of the importance of the latter, and, woe be the day when every court of justice is closed and every police officer called off his duty. But the fact remains that in the name of law and order certain departments of Government have been monopolising the lion's share of the public revenues, greatly to the detriment of education, health and well-being of the ryot. This is a condition of affairs which cannot be said to be creditable to any rulers, much less to the English bureaucracy which boasts of an unparalleled efficiency and for whose benefit the ministry in England thought fit to appoint the Lee Commission, much to the chagrin of the people and the publicists. Money for instance is lavishly spent on departments which can be called constructive only by courtesy, and expenditure is actually growing every year. This will be made evident if we take at a glance the figures for only three years as shown on page 32 of the Blue Book. I have taken figures for the last three years, in order to show how expenditure is lavishly increasing.

Expenditure on Different Departments.

| | 1923-24 | 1924-25 | 1925-26 |
|--------------------------------------|-------------|-------------|-------------|
| | Rs. | Rs. | Rs. |
| 1. Land Revenue | 1,64,07,000 | 1,67,56,000 | 1,72,72,000 |
| 2. Excise | 35,41,000 | 41,44,000 | 52,49,000 |
| 3. Stamps | 5,02,000 | 6,12,000 | 3,81,000 |
| 4. Forest | 44,01,000 | 47,82,000 | 48,16,000 |
| 5. Registration | 6,76,000 | 7,06,000 | 7,44,000 |
| 6. Irrigation | 49,22,000 | 58,22,000 | 64,57,000 |
| 7. General administration .. | 1,21,97,000 | 1,25,34,000 | 1,28,36,000 |
| 8. Administration of Justice .. | 69,93,000 | 74,32,000 | 78,42,000 |
| 9. Jails and Convicts settlements .. | 25,04,000 | 26,51,000 | 28,14,000 |
| 10. Police | 1,68,31,000 | 1,81,80,000 | 1,77,05,000 |
| 11. Civil works | 1,00,42,000 | 1,06,49,000 | 1,21,22,000 |
| 12. Stationery and Printing .. | 18,64,000 | 14,94,000 | 21,36,000 |
| 13. Miscellaneous | 22,92,000 | 33,73,000 | 42,53,000 |

By judicious management of all these departments at least 41 lakhs can be easily saved.

Now if all these departments are but judiciously managed the amount of the deficit, viz. Rs. 41,00,000 can be easily covered and if any difficulty is experienced as regards the retrenchment, a reversion to the figures for 1923-24 will solve the riddle. A complete Indianisation of all the services with a grant of complete provincial fiscal autonomy at an as early a date as possible is needed to set the administration on a footing of permanent economy. At least the necessity of a reform on the lines of a fundamental cure cannot be denied. A budget prepared on the time-worn scale is not sufficient to inspire confidence or hold forth promises of an improvement in the lot of the citizen and the peasant. Much of what the Finance Member has said is lost on ears accustomed to hear the same arguments repeated times without number. The main question is this:—Is the Government prepared to initiate a new era—the era of progress—the era of advancement? Now-a-days there is a good deal of talk about compulsory and free education and perhaps the Finance Member will succeed in pushing forth his taxation proposals in the delicious atmosphere of sweet promises on this score. But as Dr. Besant says, no education will be of benefit to the young generation unless it takes stock of national sentiment and national aspirations. The system of education either primary, secondary or higher is unsuited to the needs of the country. It is purely literary. It is divorced from the actual every day life and its needs. It requires a thorough overhauling. The curricula must be entirely changed. It should be made more attractive and more beneficial to the people.

Vocational and Industrial education must be given prominence in the curricula. It is sad to note that though the country is insistently crying for technical education, the Government does not see its way to satisfy the demand of the public of this presidency. The Technical Education Committee's report has been lying on the shelves of the Secretariat dusty and rusty without being given effect to.

Referring to pages 146 and 147 of the White Book we find 1,57,000 is reserved for technical education (1924-25, Rs. 1,29,742, 1925-26, Rs. 1,25,000) showing a reduction of nearly Rs. 5,000. This is most amazing. Instead of increasing the grant, Government have actually reduced it. I ask, is this fair and will it be conducive to the attainment of the high educational aims which Government is supposed to have before its mind's eye?

The Honourable the Finance Member has waxed very eloquent on the Sukkur Barrage. I do not pause to discuss its merits or demerits. I do not for a moment doubt that the Government has been actuated with the best of motives. But as long as irrigation for every district and every available tenement is not properly looked after, ambitious and dazzling schemes like the Sukkur Barrage will be like a dead weight. Like the Taj-Mahal they may strike the imagination of the American tourist but it will not bring to the peasant his daily bread with more ease. Talking about my own district, viz., the district of Bijapur it is well known to exist in a belt which is not reached either by western or eastern monsoons. It is invariably subjected to the horrors of famine every year. Emigration from Bijapur district is going on unchecked. The valuable arable land is being reduced to a fallow land. Rain and weather have proved to be no friendly elements to the district of Bijapur. The only remedy to redress the grievances of the people and to have the best output for the valuable lands of Bijapur district, is to project and carry out extensive schemes of irrigation in that district. Such schemes will not only remove the poverty of the people but will end in increasing the fertility of the soil, adding to the output of wealth and eventually adding to the coffers of the State. I have, therefore, to request the Government to come down once a while from the airy realms of the barrages and development to the matter-of-fact question of every day life. This requires courage. This requires determination. And I am quite sure that if a determined effort is made for reducing the expenditure, there is not the slightest necessity for new taxation.

[Mr. S. A. Sardesai]

The ryot in this presidency is already heavily burdened and any additional burden, however slight, is sure to lead to a final break-down. With these few words, Mr. President, I take the leave of this House.

After Recess.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR (Poona City) : Mr. President, I do not propose to cover the ground that has already been trodden upon by the previous speakers, nor do I propose to reply in detail to the various statements made by the Honourable the Finance Member in his speech. To my mind, the budget itself is far more important than the speech with which the Honourable the Finance Member presented it to the House. After reading the budget it struck me that it was characterised by five distinct features. The first feature is that it is framed in the spirit of irresponsibility on the part of both the members and ministers to the popular side of the House. To make my position very clear, I will take a very simple illustration. I will take for instance the delay that was committed by the officers of Government in supplying the members with copies of the budget. As you know, Sir, this was exactly the complaint that was made last year by this side of the house regarding the supply of copies of the budget ; and so far at least as I am concerned, I received the copy of the budget only on the eleventh of this month. The second feature is that the thing which should have really struck a responsible Finance Member before everything else has not been provided for in the budget, I mean that it is patent to all that the honourable members on the back benches can hardly hear the speeches that are delivered in the House. This hall has got acoustic defects ; and even though provision has been made to the extent of lakhs of rupees for certain buildings which in my opinion are not required and could have been well postponed by the Honourable the Finance Member, no provision has been made for the erection of a suitable Council Hall (hear, hear) for the deliberations of this House. But leaving aside these minor points, we find that the budget exhibits a lack of imagination on the part of its framers. The budget may have been the product of the labours of the Finance Member alone or may have been the product of the joint deliberations of the Members and the Ministers composing the Government. I do not propose to say anything regarding the irresponsibility of the Members of the Executive Council, because under the Government of India Act itself they are permitted to be irresponsible to the popular side of the House. But so far as the Ministers are concerned, one can clearly see that the budget has not been framed in conformity with the spirit of the Government of India Act. To illustrate my point, let us take the excise policy, about which the Honourable the Minister in charge of the Excise Department gave an explanation yesterday. If really he had carried with him a sense of responsibility to this part of the House, I am sure that instead of pitchforking his excise policy upon us all of a sudden by a Government resolution, he would have taken this part of the House into his confidence and by mutual deliberations he would have declared his policy regarding excise. Let us take another illustration, which concerns the Honourable the Minister for Education. I mean the provision that he has made regarding the nation-building departments. Sir, he has been in charge of very important departments of the Government, probably the departments upon which the whole future of the presidency hangs. Take for instance, the Education Department. It is true that he has made some provision for the expansion of the educational programme of the Government, but it is really deplorable that he should not have framed the policy in conference with the representatives or leaders of the various parties on this side of the House. I take also another case and it is about the match-factory which has been erected at Ambernath. I particularly refer to this factory because therein I clearly discern the beginning of a policy which is bound to be very dangerous to the industrial progress of this presidency. I am told that some foreign adventurers have built a match factory at Ambernath, and if really the Minister who has been in charge of the department of industries had realised his responsibility to the House and to the presidency at large, he would have seriously considered and laid down his policy in this behalf. I mean to say that if really he had had the industrial interests of the presidency at heart, he would have at once reported the matter to the House and would have taken immediate steps in order to see that no factory started by foreign industrialists on a small or large scale was erected or conducted at Ambernath, or at any other place in the presidency.

The second distinctive feature of the budget is the top-heaviness of the administration and the callous disregard of the subordinate services. I do not propose to say anything about the top-heaviness as that has been sufficiently dwelt upon by the previous speakers. I will give only one illustration, and it is about the allowances. I counted the number of the various kinds of allowances mentioned in the budget to the figure 30, and then I gave up the task in sheer hopelessness. Over thirty different kinds of allowances are given to the topmost officers. The grant of the allowances may be right or wrong, may be justifiable or otherwise; but I would like to ask the Government whether they do not owe a corresponding duty to the subordinate services by making provision for them either by way of an additional allowance or of a compensatory allowance. You will find, Sir, that the District Judges, for example, are given different kinds of allowances. Do not the Members of the Government owe a duty to the subordinate officers and clerks of these District Judges to give them an additional allowance or compensatory allowance? I presided over a meeting of the subordinate services at Poona some little time back, and I know the bitter tone in which some of the subordinate servants talked about the neglect that is shown towards them. They have sent petitions after petitions to the officers concerned, but unfortunately, no provision has been made for the grant of compensatory allowance to them.

The third distinctive feature of the budget is the disproportionate distribution of the revenues of the Government. I will illustrate my point by taking only one example and I particularly refer the honourable House to page 254 of the White Book in which the four and odd crores of rupees have been most unevenly and unfairly distributed among the city of Bombay on the one side and the mofussil parts of the presidency on the other. Upon calculation I find that out of the sum of 4 crores and odd, more than Rs. 3 crores and 50 lakhs are proposed to be given to the Bombay Improvement Trust, the Bombay Port Trust and the Bombay Municipality.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : They are loans.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR : It may be in the form of loans. As against that, what is the loan that is proposed to be granted to the mofussil parts of the presidency? I find that only 15 lakhs have been put down there as advances to be made to cultivators and co-operative societies; then 11 lakhs by way of loans to mofussil municipalities and 13 lakhs by way of miscellaneous loans and advances....

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : What about the crore for irrigation?

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR : The crore for irrigation is only for certain specified parts of the presidency. The point that I am making out is that the mofussil parts have not been fairly and evenly treated by the officers of the Government.

The fourth distinctive feature is that the whole budget is based upon a feeling of mistrust of the popular side. To illustrate, the budget exhibits a growing tendency on the part of the Government to make the voted items non-voted. Not only have the allowances been increased, but also the allowances which, up till now had been considered to be voted items, are now made non-voted items. Furthermore, there is a deliberate flouting of the opinion of the House on the part of Government, and in this connection I may refer to the provision for the purchase of stores for the Registration Department, that has been made on page

[Mr. L. B. Bhopatkar]

256 of the White Book. The House in the last session, after deliberate consideration, came to the conclusion that the photo-copying system was not agreeable to the instincts and the feelings of the agriculturist class. Yet, despite that deliberate opinion, provision has been made for the purchase of stores for that department.

Sir, in passing I may refer to one circumstance about the Mulshi petha lands. Last time, I referred to the Mulsha petha affair, and this time also I again refer to it. Government showed the utmost despatch in acquiring lands for the purposes of the Tata Company, in spite of the Satyagraha that was practised by the land owners. Now that the lands have been acquired and handed over to the Tata Company, it is no use entering into the question of the merits or otherwise of the said acquisition. But my point is that the Government has failed to show the same readiness and willingness to call upon the Tata Company to acquire the lands which are above the contour line, and to which there is not the least approach. I would ask the Honourable Member concerned to kindly once visit the Mulshi petha, and see for himself whether there is any approach to the lands lying above the contour line of the lake. Vast tracts of lands of the poor agriculturists are lying there, to which there is not the least access; and yet the Government are not asking the Tata Company to acquire and pay for them. Does it not show callous disregard on the part of the Government about the interests of the poor agriculturists?

The fifth and the last feature of the budget is that it is made as it were the sport of the gods at Simla and Whitehall. Even though the money-earning sections of the population contribute a comparatively large sum roughly about 10 crores towards the finances of the presidency, the whole sum is taken away by the Government of India. Moreover the presidency is heavily burdened by the Meston settlement. Then we come across one very interesting item, namely, the item of interest to the extent of Rs. 4,78,000. The House will find a note to the effect that this sum represents the interest by the Imperial Bank on the deposits made by the presidency therein. Up to the present year, not a pie was credited to the finances of the presidency by way of interest on these deposits. I do not know whether the interest used to be taken away by the Government of India, or whether the Bombay Government did not use to charge any interest to the Imperial Bank. Whatever it may be, we find, for the first time, this item of interest coming in the budget.

We also find that very large contracts for coal for the use of the Sukkur Barrage scheme have been placed with the foreign merchants in South Africa regardless of the fact that coal of every variety and quality is available here in India.

Plainly enough, this year's budget is a deficit budget and the question before the House is whether it is to sanction fresh taxation or to press for a re-adjustment of the finances between the Central Government and this Government? As regards this, I am definitely of opinion that till the time the whole of the governmental machinery is made responsible to the popular vote, it would be inadvisable, nay dangerous, to put a single additional penny into the hands of the Government.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR (Bombay University) : Sir, I was rather unwilling to interpose in this debate as I find that so many honourable members desire to speak. For the last three days, as we have been listening to the orations, one after another, I have been weighted down by the same feeling of depression which overtook me last year, when I realised that all that we say here can have effective operation only over Rs. 5,15,00,000 out of Rs. 16,67,00,000 our total expenditure. All that we say here, on this occasion,—and we prepare very long speeches, as the House has found from time to time—is sport before the Government benches. And, as I listened, I was reminded of a little experience of the great African traveller. I think it is Dr. Livingstone who refers to the practice of an old Negro chief in Africa, who allowed one day during the year, when his favoured and the unfavoured wives were trotted out before him, and were asked to disclose their grievances during the year. To accept or reject their prayers was entirely dependent on his sweet will. One wife after another went on disclosing her grievances. The pet wives of course said that the husband was honest and just. And, as I listened to the remarks which the Honourable Minister for Local Self-government made a few minutes ago in justifying the conduct of the several departments of Government, I was reminded of the pet wife of the Negro chief. I realise, and I want honourable members to realise, that all our talk is empty criticism, so far as two-thirds of the expenditure is concerned. I am sure that the Honourable the Finance Member will agree, from the figures which I have taken from page 17 of the White Book, that all our criticism is pertinent only with regard to about one-third of the total expenditure. Whether and when this system of irresponsible government is going to be remedied, lies on the knees of the gods. Coming nearer home, I must say that my expectations of the Honourable the Finance Member were considerably realised. When his locum tenens last year read out his speech, I was told that Mr. Lawrence was ill, that he would come next year, and give us his speech in an entirely different spirit. I was told that we missed his suave manners, his self possession, his ease of expression and his facility with figures. I was therefore expecting this year a display of all these features and I must say, if the Honourable the Finance Member will allow me to say so, that all my expectations about him have come true. I only wish that he had not spoiled a beautiful speech by making it too much a kind of special pleading for extra taxation. Perhaps he might have wisely avoided his cheap sneers at those “esteemed gentlemen” who do not pay taxes on land or Excise. He might likewise have avoided his threat that the unearned increment on non-agricultural holdings is to be increasingly taxed in the future. If he had avoided these petty blemishes, the speech would have been unexceptionable.

He has given us this year certain graphs, a courtesy which I am sure the House appreciates. I can however assure him that these graphs reveal a somewhat telltale affair. Look at graph No. 1. One finds there that from 1916 to 1922 the State demand has gone up from Rs. 7,50,00,000 to Rs. 14,25,00,000—nearly double in the course of six years. I may as well point out to him a little discrepancy in the graphs. I am sure there is some explanation for it, but we the uninitiated do not understand where it lies, or where to find it. For instance, on page 11 of the Blue Book, the total revenue is shown to be Rs. 15,68,00,000 ; in graph No. 2, the tracings indicate about Rs. 14 crores ; while on page 35 of the Blue Book, the revenue is shown as Rs. 14,77,00,000. I am sure there is an explanation, for I do not imagine that a person like the Honourable the Finance Member who has spent nearly three decades in preparing these figures can have made a mistake. Further, the admission that in the accounts of 1923-24 the actual balances improved by 109 lakhs, i.e., a variation of 109 lakhs in a total budget of 16 crores over the revised estimates based on the actuals of 8 months, does appear to me, I shall take the liberty of saying, as a piece of bad budgeting.

I wish to utter a word of caution which I hope he would not mind. During the last budget as well as this budget, Government have gone on over-estimating land revenue. Some of us cautioned government last year and I can recall to my mind my own remarks on that occasion. My honourable friend, the Member for Land Revenue, estimated a revenue of 5 crores and 75 lakhs. Of that only 5 crores and 9 lakhs were realised. My honourable friend at that time took exception to my comments when I pointed out that 5 crores and 75 lakhs was an over-estimate. The results have shown that my comments were not without foundation. This year too Government are repeating the same mistake. They have put the figure at 5 crores and 60 lakhs. I feel certain that even this year Government are bound to be disappointed.

Proceeding to further details, I do say with some confidence, though I do not pretend to be an economic expert, that such large balances as the Government hold every year in their hands are not justifiable. For the year 1924-25 we opened with a balance of 5 crores and 45 lakhs and closed with 4 crores and 67 lakhs, with which we open this year and propose to close with 3 crores and 69 lakhs. I do submit that these large balances are treacherous and give an appearance of an all round prosperity to the Government of India. I listened with great care to the lucid explanation of the honourable the Finance Secretary, who stated his case in a quite modest way. But I am not convinced that these balances are justified. In Bengal they have a budget of about 10 crores and they keep a balance of 1 crore and 60 lakhs. Such large balances in our presidency can be justified on one of two grounds : either because greater credit is necessary on account of our indebtedness or because there will be unexpected demands for money. As regards the first ground, I do not think that it is any justification, for after their wasteful experiment of direct borrowing in the market which the Government of Bombay indulged in, when it issued the 6½ per cent. Bombay Development loan. I do not think the Government of Bombay have ventured or will again venture to go into the market as a direct borrower. Government cannot place themselves on a level with a private individual who borrows face to face with the lender on easy terms, because he has large balances in the bank. As regards the second ground, I do not think the Finance Department will justly claim that there are likely to be so many unexpected demands as to justify a reserve of $4\frac{1}{2}$ crores. On both these grounds therefore I am positively of opinion these large balances are not justifiable. Therefore my submission to the House is that we must protest against the accumulation of large balances in the hands of Government. It creates false impression of prosperity and affluence and is a very bad temptation to Government to spend money wrongly. The House, e.g., will be interested to be told that Government during the last year and this year have assumed the role of a spendthrift chiefly owing to the existence of these large balances. In the year 1924-25, we began with a balance of 5 crores and 45 lakhs. Out of this 79 lakhs were withdrawn and applied to the avoidance of debt for irrigation. That is the explanation so pointedly given by the Honourable the Finance Member in his speech. We are consoled with the remark that four and a half lakhs have thus been saved by way of interest. All this is perfectly true. May I however utter a word of caution that to pay from current balances expenditure of a capital character is a dangerous experiment. I warn Government against this experiment, although it may lead to the saving of interest. This year too, I cannot help saying that Government have handled these balances in an unjustifiable manner. 98 lakhs are proposed to be withdrawn, out of which 49 lakhs are to be spent on capital head of expenditure on 60, Civil Works, P. W. D. Out of these 49 lakhs, the Honourable the Home Member gets for police quarters such a large sum as Rs. 5,90,000. The police have always been the special favourites of Government but this year the favouritism is unendurable. I was a professor of the Government Law School in Bombay which clamoured for a hostel for students year after year. The authorities pressed on the attention of Government that the law students should be better housed at least for the consideration that they pay to Government more than half a lakh.

But the Government have not considered the desirability of building a hostel and yet out of the balances the Honourable the Home Member gets Rs. 5,90,000 for police buildings. On page 10 of the White Book, it will be found that out of 26 lakhs estimated, 19 lakhs have already been wasted on the marble edifice "The Gateway of India." I do not know how many honourable members have gone there and seen the building. For 26 lakhs how many students' hostels could have been built. In order that it may strike the imagination of the American tourist, when he visits this wretched country and sees the work of Great Britain here, money has been criminally wasted on this project and all this wastefulness is in the face of the growing indebtedness of the country! As to the indebtedness of this presidency, my honourable friend for Bombay South has already given certain figures and I do not wish to repeat them except in one particular. From 1914 to 1925 our indebtedness has grown from 10 crores to 42 crores. I have got the figures for the other provinces like Bengal, and they show that our debt has piled up beyond endurance. Such has been our growing indebtedness. I am therefore surprised that in spite of it, the Honourable the Finance Member talks of stringency and retrenchment. On hearing him I was reminded of a little verse of Kipling—

“ Indeed, Indeed, Retrenchment oft before,
I swore, but did I mean it when I swore ?
And then and then we wandered to the Hills
And the Little Less became Much More.”

This is a pertinent comment upon the Government's attitude of stringency. What is this stringency? It is due more to windfalls than a deliberate attempt to cut down extravagance and wastefulness. I will just give the House a few figures. Take page 76 of the Blue Book. Police expenditure has been reduced only by 2 per cent., i.e., from 1·84 lacs to 1·81 lacs. On Miscellaneous 47, which is another department where economy could have been largely practised, expenditure has been reduced from 44 lakhs to 33 lakhs; i.e., only 25 per cent. On the other hand, look at the way the establishments have increased and how officers' salaries have gone up. At page 198 of the White Book, honourable members will find a most curious state of things. The post of the medical research officer, under the Public Health Department presided over by my honourable friend the Minister for Education, has been created, but the expenditure on him has not been shown to us at the end of the budget, as the rules require. I do not find any figures for the previous years against this officer in this department, so I gather that this post is new in this department. A new medical research officer drawing Rs. 3,150 per month has been introduced in this department for the first time, and immediately his salary is made non-votable. I congratulate my honourable friend the Minister for Education upon his independence, in his own department, in that he allows an officer to be created, drawing Rs. 3,150 a month and his salary to be turned into non-votable. Did he at all exercise his mind on this question or did he leave the matter to others? I have very great doubt whether most of these alterations can be justified under section 72B of the Government of India Act, and I wish it was possible to try in a court of law the question whether Government had the power of making these several emoluments and allowances non-votable. There are scattered throughout the budget many other emoluments that were at one time votable but have been made non-votable in the budget. For instance Rs. 80,000—“Governor's tour expenses” which were votable last year have been turned into non-votable this year. Under the heading of “Publicity Officer”, a new item of Rs. 2,400, for house-rent and allowances, appearing on page 82 of the White Book, is made non-votable this time. And, once more, coming to the department of my honourable friend, the Education Minister, the Consulting Surveyor to Government, drawing a salary of Rs. 25,700 a year—what a colossal figure—, his travelling allowance is Rs. 15,000 a year, and was all votable till last year; but in the budget Rs. 8,000 of that has been converted into non-votable. Is this due to the policy of trusting this honourable House? Government take more and more bits of expenditure and turn them gradually from votable to non-votable, and yet Government argue in all seriousness, that they are trusting the House. Then, take another extraordinary feature. My honourable friend Mr. Joshi has prepared a list of the various allowances, which are enjoyed by Government officials on various pretexts. When one goes to Nasik the priests cry out "pay so much for God's bed; so much for God's linen, so much for worship, so much for chandani". They draw out money in the name of God on various pleas. All this loot may be excusable in the domain of human superstition, but cannot be justified in the dull and prosaic departments of a modern Government. I will read to the honourable members these allowances. They are as many as 52 in number, and some of them are intensely amusing.

|--------------------------|--|
| 1. Dispensary allowance. | 27. Presidency House Rent allowance. |
| 2. District Local Board. | 28. Bad climate " |
| 3. Staff Allowance. | 29. Concessional Personal " |

| 25. Mewas allowance. | 51. Camel " |
| 26. Deputation. | 52. Horse " |

In this varied list of 52 allowances, the only allowance that one expects to find but does not find is idleness allowance. And yet in spite of this looting under various garbs we are told that the expenditure is being cut down. I need not say the pretext is hollow. I see my twenty minutes are over and I must stop putting before my honourable friends many other considerations I wanted to urge on the budget.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : Sir, I do not wish to take the time of the House. I only want to reply to two or three specific points that have been asked. I will not deal, Sir, with the general principles of assessments or of revision settlements or with their application so far as the annewari procedure is concerned. Committees on both these matters are sitting at the present moment, and I hope my honourable friend opposite (Mr. D. R. Patil), the member for East Khandesh, who is a prominent member of the assessment committee will take the middle course and not follow either the policy he attributed to Lord Curzon or to Lord Canning; not take the least or the most, but just that which is fair for the State.

Sir, an honourable member in a moving speech asked what was the position of the revision of settlements. I replied to the House four months ago that in two talukas revision settlement has been introduced. With regard to Sindkheda, I wish now to state that the new rates although introduced are not going to be collected this year. I would like here to explain what happened. In the complicated machinery of a democratic Government it takes considerable time before decisions are reached. I think an honourable member referred to Government as a very heartless piece of cumbrous machinery, and he also suggested that the only remedy for it was autocracy. I do not wish, Sir, to follow that remedy, but I want to point out how in any form of democratic Government delays are bound to occur when decisions of this character have to be taken. When the honourable member for West Khandesh was touring his constituency he found that the rains had held off and there was consequently a great deal of uneasiness in the minds of cultivators. Before the rains had come the collector had sent in a report more or less supporting what the honourable member has stated. After that the rains came on; the collector toured again, and he reported that under the changed circumstances the new rates could be recovered. After that again I received a representation from the honourable member for West Khandesh and as there had been a change of collectors in the meantime I asked for a fresh report on the circumstances, and the collector having reported that in several villages in the taluka conditions were not good, Government decided some little time ago—and the orders, I believe, were actually issued on the 8th of February—that the new rates would not be recovered this year. It takes, Mr. President, a considerable amount of time to get reports from the officers, who have to tour and see conditions for themselves and then advise Government.

Another point on which information was asked was with regard to boundary marks. Now, I cannot concede that cultivators do not know that boundary marks are required to be kept in repairs not in the interests of Government but in their own interests.

Mr. H. D. SAHEBA : Sir, I rise to a point of explanation. I never said that the cultivators did not know that boundary marks have to be kept in repairs. I only said that the cultivators did not know which boundary marks Government wanted them to repair and which not. I never said that the boundary marks are not necessary and useful. They are useful and necessary.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : I thank the honourable member. I quite accept his explanation. I would like to say that the practice so far used to be to charge penal rates where boundary marks had not been repaired. But the orders of Government issued some little time ago are that these penal rates should be discontinued and that only actual costs should be recovered in all cases where boundary marks had not been repaired.

It may be that the costs charged by the contractors are perhaps higher, necessarily must be higher than those incurred by the people themselves. The real remedy is for the people to repair the boundary marks themselves.

One matter I should like to refer to because it is an important matter and reference has been made to it by the honourable member opposite, the honourable member from Ahmednagar. Sir Gangaram in his evidence before the taxation committee made a valuable suggestion in regard to land revenue which has not escaped the attention of Government. We have already asked for copies of the evidence and the cross-examination, but we have not got it yet. If honourable members who are interested in the welfare of the agricultural community will apply their minds to this idea Government will be most grateful for their advice. At the first flush it appears that the scheme is unpractical because of the payment in lump and one lump of the present land assessment multiplied by 30 times. Now honourable members will understand that if the land revenue is in the neighbourhood of $5\frac{1}{2}$ crores 30 times that would come to about 160 or 170 crores of rupees. I cannot conceive how cultivators in this part of the presidency would be able to find this enormous sum leaving aside the tax on surplus produce which is also a part of the scheme. Another difficulty is that as a necessary consequence of the scheme you must take steps to bring in tenancy legislation or rent acts to prevent landlords from exploiting tenants. There are various other points regarding this, and I shall be grateful if honourable members will apply their minds to this matter and advise Government. The last point is as to the land revenue figure which has been entered into the budget this year. Now, I will confess at once that I do not look upon 5 crores and 60 lakhs as a normal figure for land revenue (hear, hear). We have never said that, and last year I was careful to point out in reply to the criticisms which had been made that the figure was expected to be collected only on account of large suspensions and arrears that were outstanding. That outstanding continues even in the present year and owing to several unfortunate circumstances suspensions are still at a high figure. No one can tell whether the season of 1925-26 will be favourable enough to enable the collection of the whole amount of these suspensions. What will be the season a year and a half ahead depends on the monsoon which we all hope will be favourable, but I do not think that 5 crores and 60 lakhs can be taken as a fair normal revenue to be collected by Government.

Mr. PUNJABHAI THAKERSI (Bombay City North): Sir, the debate on the budget must have now convinced the Honourable the Finance Member that the non-officials cannot be caught napping. His game of getting sanction for new taxations is well-exposed. All these years, Government have consolidated their position by securing fat pay, allowances and pensions to the Steel Frame of Mr. Lloyd George. They have doubled the police budget and have made no cuts in the reserved departments. They have not carried out loyally the recommendations of the Retrenchment Committee and have refused to publish evidences or even summaries of evidence before that committee for fear of damaging admissions by their own officials and now the Finance Secretary turns round and says "Oh, the Non-official's criticism is only destructive." What else is possible to us when the Executive is unresponsive to popular demands? We have no real power of the purse. Government admit that administration since the war has doubled. It has doubled its expenses from 8 to 15 crores and yet they go on merrily spending to keep up the show. They cannot raise loans for technical education but raise loans of 30 crores of rupees for the Development Department. Back to war-time limit ought to be our demand. Let Government curtail expenses or declare bankruptcy of ability. Let the Honourable the Finance and Revenue Members exchange portfolios and we shall have at least the satisfaction of having an Indian point of view in our financial arrangement. The Honourable the Finance Member wants to steal a march over our Excise Minister. He wants to bleed us white by so much that we shall be unable to respond to the prohibitive taxation when it comes before this Council. The Council therefore can give only one reply to the Honourable the Finance Member: Retrench or resign.

Mr. M. D. KARKI (Kanara District): Mr. President, the budget which has been presented to us by the Honourable the Finance Member will, in my opinion, please Government officials more than the people of the presidency. I therefore call it a budget of government officials, and not of the people. It is a well-known fact, Sir, that major portion of the population of this presidency lives in countryside. It is said, and rightly said, that the villages are the life blood of a country. It is the villages that supply money and men to Government to defend the country and to administer it. It is the villages that send material and labour to cities and towns for developing the country and for developing its commerce and trade. The welfare of the people living in the countryside is therefore the welfare of the country as a whole, and the welfare of the country should be the first care of a good Government. The budget that provides for the welfare of the people living in the villages, that is on the countryside, is a good budget, and the Government that frames such a budget is a good Government. It is now to be seen whether the budget that has been presented to us is one that has been framed with that object. The villagers, Sir, are suffering on many counts. They are suffering from want of proper and adequate road communications, they are suffering from want of easy medical aid and relief, they are suffering from want of sanitary improvements, they are suffering from want of educational facilities and industrial and technical training, they are suffering from want of religious and moral training, they are suffering from want of good water supply for drinking and irrigation purposes and so on. All these wants have made them unhappy, miserable, poor and in many cases immoral and dishonest. Soon after I got the budget my first care was to read the statements "D" and "E" to the Blue Book to see whether any provision substantially benefiting the people living in the countryside has been made. To my great horror and disappointment I found that no such provision was made. The further study of the budget has convinced me, Sir, that the Finance Member has cared more for the Government officers. Wherever we see we find in the budget that provision has been made for allowances of officers which have been stated to be of nearly 52 kinds by the last speaker, for the construction of buildings such as 2, 3, 4, and 5-roomed quarters for guards, foresters, police constables and inspectors, for construction of stables and motor car sheds for officers' use, for erection of new offices and bungalows for the officers, for purchase of furniture, tents, and books for their use. When the people living in the countryside are suffering from so many causes the Finance Member in his speech speaks of the electric railway being shortly opened in Bombay. The Finance Member merrily deals with the development of Bombay and the suburbs, which in the long run will put us in a state of repentance and financial embarrassment. He also dwells on the electric railway and states that that is a signal example of the happy union of Indian financial enterprise with Western mechanical science. When we are suffering from want of food and clothing, to speak of electric trains and the development of cities and suburbs is nothing but to care very little for the welfare of the people living in the countryside. His Excellency the Governor, when he came to India as Governor, said that the medical relief in Bombay was quite inadequate. We people from villages have known that Bombay city has more medical facilities than anywhere else in the Presidency. Then we had thought that during the regime of our kind-hearted Governor the villages would be provided with sufficient medical aid. While I see so many grants made for the medical relief in Bombay and other big cities, I am grieved to note that only Rs. 3,000, a meagre sum, has been allotted for a scheme for medical aid for the small villages of the whole presidency. When we are for our own Ayurvedic system of medicine, when patriotic and learned Indians pass resolutions in Ayurvedic Conferences for Government encouragement to that system of medicine; when other provincial Governments such as Madras, Mysore and others have already launched schemes for furtherance of such systems; when many of the Indians like their own system of medicine more than allopathy, it is to be regretted that nothing is being done by our Government in furtherance of the cause of Ayurvedic system of medicine. The village aid scheme which is intended to be started is on the allopathic line. This, in my humble opinion, will not be fully availed of by the people in the countryside, who are more conservative and after their own system. The Bombay Presidency is notorious for its forest tracts where malaria is rampant. Last year fortunately for the poor people living there a small financial provision for quinine treatments was made. It is not known if the amount provided for was fully spent or saved on account of stringency of finance. This year that does not find a place in the budget at all; at least I could not find it. I had suggested to the Honourable Minister of Education that bad climate allowance should be provided for primary school teachers living in the malarial tracts of Kanara and he had said that he would see to make some provision for them in this connection. But to my great disappointment I do not find any such provision.

Now, Sir, last year this time in reply to my criticisms on the forest policy of the Government and to my representation of some of the grievances of my district, Government had assured me on this floor of this House that that policy would be strictly in accordance with the spirit and intentions of the policy of the India Government and this Government as laid down in the past had given expressions of good wishes and sympathy for the Kanara agriculturists. They had further assured that the cause of agriculture in Kanara would on no account be hampered and allowed to suffer. The Honourable the Forest Minister, Sir, also had promised us to visit Kanara and to see that the forest grievances were redressed. One year has elapsed since then. What has been the state of things throughout. No doubt the Honourable the Forest Minister visited Kanara, but I regret to say that he did nothing beyond coming to and going from Kanara. After the discussion of the budget during the first session, the Government of Bombay issued privilege rules known as Kanara Forest Privilege Rules, under notification no. 779 dated 16th April 1924 in their Revenue Department without consulting the landed interests of the district and also without publishing and inviting criticisms on the draft rules. These rules, as a matter of fact, are affecting the landed interests of Kanara. They were very severely criticised by the local press and dissatisfaction about them was expressed in various quarters.

Thirdly, Sir, the Betta Rules which were published under notification 7198 dated 16th April 1923 and brought into force in that year were considered by the people of the district as most unsatisfactory, inadequate and unworkable. We had great hopes that they would soon be revised entirely to the satisfaction of the gardeners and new rules would come into existence. But nothing substantial has been done, Sir. The grazing problem which has been made difficult and complex by the Forest policy in Kanara and which is being made more and more so, is still there. No step has been taken to provide for improved grazing in the district.

Fifthly, the question of wild animals is kept intact. The elephants, the tigers, and the panthers are doing their daily duties without fear of any injury to themselves or to their posterity.

Sir, notwithstanding the resolution of this Council to the contrary, revision settlement has been forced upon the people of two talukas in my district, namely, Sirsi and Siddapur. They are forest talukas, there the difficulties of labour are immense and they are labouring under various sorts of other difficulties in effectively carrying out their agricultural operations. As regards the wild elephants I represented the matter to the Honourable the Minister and corresponded with him on the matter, but to my great surprise that was not heeded in time and the elephants had their own share in taking away the produce of the ryots of my district. Besides putting to Government various questions, the answers of which have been very much criticised in the local press and which have been said to be more disappointing and untrue, Sir, besides making speeches on all suitable occasions, and thereby ventilating the grievances of my constituency and besides moving resolutions on matters of general public interest before this honourable House, I have spared no pains in bringing the grievances of the individual constituents and the group of constituents to the notice of the Ministers as well as of the Members of the Government by means of special correspondence. They will one and all bear me out in this connection, Sir. What has been the result, Sir? The result is most unsatisfactory.

The granting of gun licenses has become a burning question in my district. Kanara is in itself a forest district haunted by various sorts of reptiles and other wild animals injurious to both life and property. The Crop Protection Committee had inter alia recommended that gun licenses should be freely issued to the people for the protection of their crops, their mainstay. I corresponded with the Honourable the Home Member and represented the grievances of two or more persons whose applications for gun licenses were either rejected or cancelled and while doing so, I spared no pains in pointing out to him the faulty procedure adopted by the district administration in granting the licenses and the tricks played by the lower officials in the matter. But, to my great disappointment, the reply that I got was that the persons whose applications had been either refused or cancelled ought to have made an appeal to the Commissioner. That was not my case. I pointed out the faulty procedure, but no notice was taken of it. My constituents sent me up to this Council to ventilate their grievances, and to get them redressed on the floor of this House. They thought that their cry from Kanara would be intercepted by its High Forests, and would not ultimately reach Government, and that the floor of this House would be more free and suitable for the purpose. Now, they have begun to mutter that the Hall of this House is higher and thicker than the High Forests of Kanara. Sir, they are not to be blamed at all but Government have given room for the people to do so.

Besides the commissions and omissions that I have above complained of, they have not given effect to my resolution regarding interest-free tagai—which was passed by this House—to those persons who were afflicted by the floods, for the purchase of seeds and cattle. Mr. Maxwell, the late Collector of Kanara, who was found by the Kanaraites as their real friend was transferred very unexpectedly. He had come in close touch with its people. He had studied its forest problems, and other difficult problems of grave importance. He was the proper person to deal with all these questions, as he had made himself fully acquainted with its facts and situations, by wisely and sympathetically serving there in the past. I wired to the Private Secretary to the Governor that he should be kept there for one or two years more, to have the forest and other problems of the district solved, which he would have done, to the satisfaction of both the Kanaraites and the Government, if he had continued there for another two years. Government were gracious enough not to even acknowledge the receipt of my telegram and not to give any reply to it up till now. These are the things that are going on in the Government. Sir, this has been the work of the one year that has passed since assurances and expressions of good wishes and sympathy were held out. The people have begun to realise that the sympathy which is given expression to by the honourable members on the opposite benches on the floor of this House or elsewhere is nothing but lip sympathy. They say that Government do not wish that the assurances should be translated into action. This, Sir, has been the impression left on the minds of the people of the mofussil. To this we are not responsible. We are doing our own duty to them. I hope the Government will mend all matters soon. The revision settlement, if it is for decreasing the assessment to which the ryots are, as a matter of fact, entitled, will be welcomed by us. I warn the Government, any increase would certainly add fuel to the fire and cause great discontent and irritation among the people.

Now, I want to draw the attention of the Honourable Minister for Local Self-government to one or two points. The road communication in Kanara is worse off than anywhere else. Kanara is a forest country, where rainfall is very heavy. Like Ratnagiri, the coast road is intercepted by many creeks and rivers, and the major portion of the road is very bad for traffic. No attempt was made by Government to have causeways or bridges on these creeks. It was only last year that provision was made for constructing a causeway over the Kumta river, but although that provision was budgetted and passed in this Council, nothing has come out of it, and no causeway is to be seen there. Many of the main roads across the above-ghat and below-ghat talukas pass through the ghats. These roads except Arbail-ghat road are in an extremely bad condition, and the motor services which have been opened are on the verge of bankruptcy on that account. I invite the Honourable Minister for Local Self-government to visit Kanara once in his own motor car, to see things personally. As my time is up, I would ask for two minutes' time more.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The honourable member cannot get even a single minute more.

Mr. M. D. KARKI: Sir, I fully sympathise with the view of the honourable members from Dharwar that there should be an independent province for the Karnatak, and that there should be a unification of all the Kanarese-speaking districts. I fully agree with them that Government is not giving much attention to the people of the Karnatak. Not only for the last two years they have absolutely neglected Karnatak, but they have done so in the past. They have rendered a great disservice to the Karnatak by abandoning the Karwar harbour scheme and the Kanara railway project mooted out in the 19th century.

Khan Saheb KARIMBAKSH JATOI (Larkana District) (Addressed the House in Sindhi): Sir, I do not know English, so I would have attempted to speak in Urdu as Urdu is known to a large majority of this House, but as I am unable to speak Urdu so fluently, I shall have to speak in Sindhi, which I do realise will not be followed by the majority of the honourable members of this House. It is a difficulty which cannot be solved or overcome by me.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The honourable member is entitled to speak in Sindhi.

Khan Saheb KARIMBAKSH JATOI: Sir, the main point which I wish to criticise in the budget is the barrage scheme in particular and irrigation in general. The fact cannot remain hidden, nor can it be denied that there is any amount of extravagance going on in carrying out this scheme.

In February last I had thanked Government for taking such precautions for the welfare of the agriculturists of Sind as by constructing such a big scheme as the barrage. The demand of funds for the year 1924-25 was granted and it was hoped that something substantial would be done in the current year, and that it would be run most economically. But this one year's experience by silent watch over the progress of the work clearly shows that only a little of survey has been done and some stones are pitched here and there and for every two or three stones a watchman on a pay of Rs. 20 or Rs.15 is engaged. This is also one proof of the way in which they are wasting public money.

What I have seen and what everybody has seen is that they have built good many bungalows at Sukkur and elsewhere, and all this staff has been engaged in having those bungalows nicely built and every one of them, from an overseer high up to the Superintending Engineer is simply supervising that work of the construction of buildings. I do not see what necessity there is to construct so many houses, and it is nothing but a sheer waste of money.

As regards irrigation, I would tell this honourable House that they are troubling the Sind agriculturists to a very great extent. They insist upon the policy of reduction of sluices of the zamindari karias. The Honourable Mr. Cowasji had visited Sind in November last and held two conferences, one at Hyderabad and the other at Sukkur, in connection with this question of reduction of sluices. All the important zamindars of Upper Sind and Lower Sind attended the conferences and all protested in a body against the reduction of the karia heads. Only two or three out of three hundred zamindars defended the fallacious policy of the irrigation officers. Those two or three men, though they were very ordinary zamindars, were so much respected by the officers that the chief engineers and the superintending engineers began to vacate their chairs to accommodate them. This is how things are happening in Sind.

It is said by the Irrigation Department officers that very little water goes to the tail of the canals, because karias at the head take away more water, and so it is necessary to have karia sluices reduction. But I would tell them that I have got a large holding at the tail, but I find that it won't benefit the tail people at all. What they should do is to widen and improve the tails of these canals, which are now so heavily silted up.

Profiles at the heads of canals are also very harmful to the zamindars. After the introduction of these profiles, the result has been that, where we used to get seven feet flow in a normal inundation season, we get only four feet now. From this, you can see how far they have harmed us.

Mr. W. S. MUKADAM (Panch Mahals District): Sir, I consider it my painful duty to offer some pungent but honest remarks on the deficit budget of this presidency, so tactfully submitted by the Honourable the Finance Member for the consideration of this honourable House. Sir, it is with a heavy heart that I have to declare that the Honourable the Finance Member does not deserve any congratulations so far as the budget itself is concerned. While speaking this I cannot forget that he was in bed last time and I remember to have prayed God to bring him back soon. Somehow or other God granted my request and he is among us here to-day. I cannot help congratulating him on his sound health and happy return with more vigour and more strength to frame more such budgets of this presidency in future.

Sir, I had practically no mind to speak at the time of general discussion of the budget, but after hearing the speech of the Honourable the Finance Member I made up my mind to speak a few words, as I thought the life of the official benches would be monotonous if I do not contribute my instalment to the debate.

Before coming to the actual figures of different departments, I would like to express the difficulties the non-official members experience as regards the budget. The other day we learnt that the officials of Government take no less than three months to frame this budget. When well experienced, tactful and competent Government officials, well equipped with every material and weapon at their command, take more than three months to prepare the budget, Sir, imagine what time should be allotted to non-official members to read and consider it. The printed copy of the budget should therefore be submitted to the members at least one fortnight before the commencement of the session. I hope the language-liberal officials will show their liberality of heart in action at least in such cases where they have practically nothing to lose.

Sir, poor uneducated agriculturists on our side have, by experience of the different departments of Government, given different names to different departments, according to their works and their merits. After reading the budget, I am convinced that those people are in the right. Though uneducated and dumb creatures they are, they have understood several departments by experience more than what we have understood by reading. The Land Revenue Department is called the son's department, that is, a department that serves the Government as a son. This department earns for the father and the family. The Public Works Department is called the son-in-law's department, that is, the son-in-law knows only how to spend and make maja at the father-in-law's house. He is always a guest there for enjoyment. The Educational Department is called the nephew's department. This department is the nephew of the Government. The maternal uncle always takes the credit for educating the nephew, when the nephew lives at his place for education. But the poor nephew alone knows how he is treated by the aunt. The aunt would serve milk to her own favourite son and curd to the nephew. With all partiality the maternal uncle takes the credit for the education of the nephew. The poor nephew knows it but he is gagged by obligation. This is exactly the state here. The Excise Department is the bad companion of Government. Government is in love with this bad companion and it is actually mad after her. Government has sacrificed respect, prestige, credit, and everything on her account. It is very difficult in life to leave the company of a bad companion even after knowing the wickedness. The Police Department is the spoilt child of Government. The father knows the defects, wickedness and mischief of the son and still he hides his faults and fights with his brothers. The Forest Department is the old mother department. As the old mother though not liked by the son and the daughter-in-law is useful to the house, in the same way this department is useful to the Government. The old mother has got large and extensive property and the son wishes the death of the mother, as he will be in possession of lakhs and crores.

Sir, I now touch the several departments in brief. The Government want to collect 36 lakhs of rupees more in the Land Revenue Department. Even the Mahomedan and non-Brahmin members of this House know that the agriculturists of this presidency are taxed to their utmost capacity. Sir, there is no blood left in the agriculturists. The flesh and blood of agriculturists have been taken away, and now only remain skin and bones in them. If the Government want to trade on skin and bones of the agriculturists they can do so, as they have powers in their hands. But remember, Sir, the impartial historians of the future age of independence will certainly call this action of the Government a sort of cannibalism. The Revenue Department has not properly looked to the increased inconvenience of the cultivators. Cultivators in Gujarat are in want of lands for cultivation. Government tendency is always to give big plots to influential monied men. Thus Government make poor cultivators actual slaves of capitalists. I understand that the Honourable the Revenue Member might be feeling for this. But what can he do? He is helpless. I pity his position. On paper he is the head but in reality he is a subordinate to the I.C.S. people and secretary. He has to please the I.C.S. people to please the whole Government.

The Development Department has desparately developed the difficulties of the people. The Government now understand that we have understood their polished plan of feeding the foreigners beyond limit in this department also. Government is perfectly right in saying that they will not be at a loss in the long run in this business. I understand that they are not at a loss even to-day. Government gain their points every day, every hour and every minute in taking India's wealth to England by any means fair or foul. It seems that the Bombay Government is playing speculation like a losing and defeated speculator in this concern, but inwardly it is not so. This is all outward show. Government is successful in thrusting fat salaries into the pockets of Europeans and European contractors.

[Mr. W. S. Mukadam]

Sir, are we not justified in cursing the Government when we actually see with our own eyes open that our wealth is wasted intentionally to enrich those who are our declared enemies in the constitutional battle of political freedom? Sir, I have studied the forest administration of my presidency and have noticed without any surprise that new posts are created in this department to make provision for Europeans. Lakhs and lakhs of rupees are being spent every year unnecessarily on such wealthy foreign favourites. I am prepared to prove the nondeclared policy of the Government of imposing upon us European officers of high salaries even when there is absolutely no necessity for them. I reserve my remarks regarding this department till demand for grants is made.

The less said about the Lee loot the better. Nearly 9 lakhs are distributed to higher officials as khairat on the mischievous suggestion of the Lee Commission and the Government want to give nearly 10 lakhs the next year. Government is liberal enough to cut down one lakh from the dietary charges of the prisoners of this presidency. Government think that prisoners are over-fed and the starving civilians are under-fed. Is this the civilization they are proud of? I speak this knowing full well that I am exciting the anger of the civilians and in India their anger is the anger of God. Civilians are capable of threatening the Government. If through mistake or through policy or for any purpose in view Government do anything by which Indian prestige and position may be increased and raised, the I.C.S. people and their other sympathisers will not lose a minute to serve the Government with a notice that they all will resign the Government service and would leave India with their friends. And if in anger—fortunately or unfortunately it is for the House to decide—they put their threat into action and go on strike and leave India for good, imagine, Sir, what will be the result? If they go away, who will live in beautiful buildings and bungalows; who will draw fat salaries; who will taunt Indian subordinates by ridiculing self-government and Swaraj; who will lessen the burden of the Indian treasury; and, Sir, last but not the least, who will shoot us in shikar and kick us to cause rupture of our spleen? Sir, this experiment is worth trying, and if the civilians of this presidency are going to try it—I think I should congratulate them in advance—if they make common cause and go on strike and leave India, I think all that we can do will be to go to the Docks to see them off, and some members will even go to Aden with tears in their eyes and cocoanuts in their hands. With these few words, I resume my seat.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: Mr. President, I desire to make a few remarks upon the budget. The capital and revenue accounts have got to be carefully distinguished if we are to get an accurate idea of our financial position and of the results of the budget. The capital account deals in crores of rupees for loans to various departments, some of which are received back again from the persons to whom they are advanced. This part of the budget is a matter which is properly for my honourable friend in the Finance Department. I only allude to very small parts of it, not crores of rupees, but a few lakhs, a sum of eight lakhs for police buildings. I gather that my honourable friend opposite (Mr. M. R. Jayakar) approves of expenditure on such items as police buildings from capital account, though it formerly used to be spent out of the revenue account. I am entirely at one with him there. I think that these large sums on expensive police lines are properly sums spent from the capital account. They are not altogether expenditure which produce no return, because they enable us to forego giving hutting money allowance to our police men, which we have to give if they have no houses to live in, and to get rid of one of those 52 allowances which were said to go on increasing every year. There was one allowance which I do not recollect he has mentioned—a most necessary one the allowance to us members coming here to this Legislative Council. (Mr. M. R. Jayakar: They are not Government officers.) I entirely appreciate the distinction. These allowances should indeed be continued as they are not paid to Government officials. I return to this eight lakhs for police buildings. I pointed out that this really is good expenditure, because it saves us the hutting money. I want to point out that we provide a sinking fund and interest charges to pay off the whole amount within a certain period, I think it is 30 years. So at the end of 30 years, we pay off the debt; we have got the buildings; and we save the corresponding hutting allowance.

I now turn to the revenue account, which is more properly my business. And it is, Sir, the revenue account which we have to look at if we are to judge whether our income is sufficient for our annual recurring expenditure. It is the revenue account upon which our eyes must be fixed when we have to decide whether we ought to sanction additional funds being raised by additional taxation. Now, Sir, it is a most significant fact that, looking to the revenue account of the past year, we are down by exactly that sum of 18 lakhs of rupees which we had hoped to raise from the continuation of the Court-fees Act. That, Sir, is, I think all members will allow, a very significant fact. Turning to the budget for the coming year, and in particular to that part for which I am responsible I would invite the attention of honourable members to the fact that there has been on the whole no increase in the Home Department. We effected considerable reductions in expenditure in these departments under the advice of the Retrenchment Committee. In Administration of Justice we effected very nearly all the retrenchments which were recommended to us. In the Jail Department no retrenchments were recommended, but we were able to effect certain economies, for instance the economy in dietary charges, which, as has already been explained, does not mean that the rations are any less or any worse, but that we pay less for the same article. We have effected a very material decrease in the police budget of some 12½ lakhs of rupees. All these items have been before honourable members in a statement which has been laid upon the table of this House. They can refer to that and test the accuracy of the remarks I have made. In the coming year's budget, it is true that

[Sir Maurice Hayward]

Administration of Justice shows a small increase, from 75 lakhs to 78 lakhs of rupees, but I am afraid, Sir, that is an increase which we must expect with the ever-growing population, the ever-increasing trade and industries, and the corresponding increase in litigation, and I am afraid that that increase will go on as the years go on and we increase in prosperity, until we reach that millennium when we should be blessed by both an honorary bench and an honorary bar. The jails budget shows equilibrium. It was 28 lakhs last year and it will be 28 lakhs in the year to come. The police budget shows a reduction. It was 184 lakhs in the current year ; it will be 177 lakhs in the coming year. That is a further very valuable saving of a sum of 7 lakhs of rupees, which has been foreshadowed sometime, by the discontinuation of our payments for the Agency police in Gujarat.

We have re-examined our budget very carefully this year when we were advised by the Finance Department that it would not be possible to pay our way, and I hope honourable members will believe me when I say that we have done our best by economies here and there to reduce expenditure in every direction possible and I do not believe that it will be practicable to make any further reductions in these important departments without seriously reducing the efficiency of both the courts and the police. With regard to the latter, there have been, as many honourable members here know, complaints that we have gone too far in the retrenchment of the police.

I would ask honourable members then to compare this Home Department budget which on the whole shows a decrease with the other important departments such as education, medical, public health and public works. Education, you will notice, was 190, and it is proposed to raise it from 190 to 215, an increase of 25 lakhs. There is a small rise in Medical and also a small rise of 6 lakhs in Public Health, and a proposed rise in the Public Works Department from 124 to 141, namely 17 lakhs. Taking alone Educational Department and the Public Works Department, 25 and 17 give you 42 lakhs which is just the sum which we hope to get from the additional taxation proposed. These, Sir, are facts which have to be recognised. They are not threats. They are facts which we have got to face however unpleasant they may be. We want progress and particularly we want progress in those departments under the control of our Ministers. We have on this account agreed that these increases should be put into their budgets and we are now making an appeal to honourable members to exercise responsible statesmanship in this most important matter and grant us these funds for the progress of this presidency. Sir, the funds required are to be found in a comparatively easy and simple manner. The Court-fees Bill is one that is well known to us. We had it for 2 years. There were no complaints. We enquired and were informed it did not really work harshly on any people. It was a moderate increase and it was an increase borne by persons involved in litigation which cost us so much in the administration of justice budget. It is, Sir, only fair that they should be called upon to pay a part of the increase in the cost of justice. It is a measure which is particular by its limitations to exclude from its increase the poorer suitors. Whether that limitation is sufficiently high or not is a matter which will be for the consideration of honourable members of this House. It excludes suits below Rs. 500. If that limit is thought to be too low that would be a good matter for consideration in the select committee. The other bill is the Stamp Bill, a tax on transfers of property in towns. A tax on large properties at the time when the money is received from the sale of those properties. It is a tax on persons who are able to pay at the time when they have the money in hand to pay. It is, Sir, I submit a very proper tax looking to the very vast sums received from the mofussil and elsewhere which are spent in these large cities in the presidency.

Sir, the Ministers have done their part. They have persuaded us to put into this budget these very valuable additional sums. The Honourable Minister of Education has got his 25 lakhs. The Honourable Minister of Public Works has got another 17 lakhs. They have got this money. They have done their part. Now, it is for honourable members to do their part and to give us full support in these moderate measures of extra taxation to pay them the necessary funds to carry out their proposed improvements. It is for honourable members particularly of the ministerial parties to support their ministers, to give them the money which they require for these important works in the presidency. The Honourable Minister for Forests I have not mentioned. But he also has done his part. You have heard his decision on the excise question. You have heard the conclusion he has come to, a conclusion entirely in accordance with the views of this House, and how any honourable member could say that he had done it without consultation it baffles me to understand. He did it after a full committee of enquiry after the matter was discussed on more than one occasion in this House. I think he is also entitled to full support of the ministerial parties of this House. One word of warning. He had to point out that the policy which has been adopted is likely to prove an expensive policy: that has to be faced. It may mean a great number of rupees running into crores. It means that we shall have to find that revenue from somewhere else, and I think in view of that honourable members must make the mistake of thinking that our immediate wants may be left to the chance of getting anything out of the income tax. It will in the first place take time. We need not however despair. We believe that in the end we will get it because we believe that we have a just cause. But in the next place I wish merely to give this warning that when we get our share a very large part of it, if not all, will be required to carry out the excise policy which has been approved and set in force by this honourable House.

Mr. H. B. SHIVDASANI (Surat District): Sir, before I make a few remarks about the budget I wish to repeat that to me it seems that the budget statements are very badly drawn up and that they are likely to mislead several honourable members on the non-official benches and that they have even misled some of the members on the official benches. For instance the Honourable the Finance Member said that income this year was 14 crores 78 lakhs, and that expenditure was 15 crores 19 lakhs. I looked at the White Book at statement "A" and there the income for this year was given as 16 crores 16 lakhs and in statement "B" the expenditure was given as 16 crores 67 lakhs, and in statement "C" of the White Book the same figures of 16 crores and odd for Receipts and Expenditure were confirmed. Then, I looked at the Blue Book, but statement "A" of the Blue Book gives no separate total of receipts and expenditure from revenue. In statement "B" I found that Receipts from ordinary Revenue were 15 crores 68 lakhs and 48 lakhs from Development Department. And in the same statement "B" of the Blue Book I found that ordinary expenditure was 16 crores 9 lakhs and the expenditure of the development department was 57 lakhs. It is only in statement III on page 35 of the Blue Book that I find that receipts are 14 crores and 78 lakhs and on page 37 of the Blue Book expenditure is shown as 15 crores 19 lakhs, but if we take statements III and IV in the Blue Book we find that the current year's figures of Revenue and Expenditure do not tally with the figures as given by Honourable the Finance Member in his speech. The Honourable the Finance Member told us that in the current year Revenue is 14 crores and the Expenditure 14 crores 18 lakhs but in these statements we find that the Receipts are shown as 14 crores but the expenditure is shown as 13 crores 72 lakhs. It is confusing to have different statements and statements which do not agree. For instance in the White Book the Revenue in the coming year is shown as 16 crores and 16 lakhs and it is not clear from that statement whether this Revenue includes income from the Development Department. It will be only when we look at the statement "B" of the Blue Book that we find that the figures 16 crores 16 lakhs include Receipts from the Development Department. Similarly expenditure in statement "B" of the White Book is shown as 16 crores 67 lakhs but at the top heading we find the words "Expenditure charged to revenue". Expenditure on the Development Department is not charged to revenue and I wonder how it is included in this statement "B" in the White Book. Another difficulty is that several items in the budget are shown under different headings. For instance, if I want to know what is the expenditure on the band establishment of His Excellency the Governor's household, I have to look to so many headings. There is one provision for band establishment of Rs. 52,332, on page 75 of the Civil Estimate. Then there is an item of allowance to bandsmen and musicians, Rs. 7,260. Then an item of band contingencies, Rs. 3,000. Then the item of rations, clothing and fuel for bands, Rs. 11,423. Then there is the item of railway charge to band establishment, Rs. 1,000. So there are five items relating to one subject under five different headings, and in addition there might be some provision under the heading household rates and taxes Rs. 30,000 in respect of band. So our difficulty is that if we desire to cut down expenditure on any particular service it is difficult to find out what cuts we should propose. For instance, on page 187 of C. E. the figures for assistant directors of public health are given. Now if I want to propose a cut in the expenditure of these officers, I am at a loss to know what cut to propose. Pay is given and the leave salary is given, but I do not know what is the cut which can be proposed for their establishments. It is not given separately. Travelling allowances are not given separately. Similarly as regards every other expenditure. Expenditure on one particular service is not shown separately, it is shown under so many headings and it is so mixed up that it is absolutely impossible for any member, official or non-official, to know how much the expenditure on a particular service or a particular branch of a department is. Now, I am not in a position to say what is the cost of the assistant directors of public health. I am unable to tell what is the cost of the assistant collectors and their establishments. It is all mixed up under travelling allowances under general administration, and so on. I think it would be clearer if statements were prepared separately showing what is the expenditure on each service, so that if honourable members wish to propose cuts, they could give notice of those particular cuts.

[Mr. H. B. Shivdasani]

The expenditure side of the budget has been commented upon by most members ; so I will look at the revenue side of the present budget. If we examine that side carefully, we will find that the budget presents a much more dismal picture than the figures given to us by the Finance Member would indicate. The figures seem to show that there is an increase of 78 lakhs in the next year's revenue. But on scrutiny we find that of this increase 28 lakhs is in respect of receipts from interest. Against this, we have got a corresponding increase of 30 lakhs in respect of interest on the expenditure side. So this increase is absolutely illusory. The Revenue Member told us that we should budget for the highest possible amount that we are capable of realising if the season is a favourable one. That is why he said we had budgetted for Rs. 560 lakhs. Even in the current year, which was not a bad year—it was a good average year—it was found that Government could not recover more than Rs. 5,24 lakhs. There is no reason to presume that the coming year will be a more favourable year. We can budget only as for an average year. So we should budget for only Rs. 5,24 or Rs. 5,25 lakhs. So this increase of Rs. 36 lakhs under land revenue is also illusory and exists only on paper.

Then, there is an increase of 21 lakhs under the item of adjustments between the Central and Provincial Governments (No. XXXIX 4). Out of this Rs. 10,48,000 is refund of customs duty on imported stores from the Government of India. Formerly we were exempted from this duty, but this year we have been assessed to duty. The Government of India has promised to make a refund of this duty to the local Governments, but this is to be utilised solely for the reduction or avoidance of debt. Then, there is an increase of 14 lakhs under assignment on account of unified stamps. But half of this is for the current year and half for the coming year. Out of these 14 lakhs only 7 lakhs are the receipts for the coming year and 7 lakhs are for the present year. So taking all these items together, they come to about 81 lakhs. So practically in the coming year's budget the receipts are the same as in the current year. As for expenditure, of course, if we do not consider the receipts against which there is a corresponding expenditure we should also not consider that portion of the expenditure which is a set-off against those receipts. If we do so we will find that the deficit is really 88 lakhs and not merely 41 lakhs. However taking the figures as they have been presented to us we find that expenditure has been increased by 111 lakhs, whereas the income has increased by 78 lakhs though a great portion of this increase of revenue is illusory and a part of it has been improperly budgeted for.

In conclusion, I will say a few things about the constituency I represent. I find, in the matter of communications, Gujarat and Sind are being treated very shabbily. The Central Division and the Southern Division get more than three-fourths of the amounts that are spent on roads, while in Gujarat and Sind very little money is spent on the roads. And moreover on account of metal and other materials required for the roads not being so easily available there, their cost is very high and so what is being spent in these two provinces does not go very far. To take a concrete example the cost of metal, say, in Surat is excessive as compared with the cost at Poona for instance. In Surat you cannot do with five lakhs what you can do at Poona with say one lakh or two lakhs. So the disparity is in reality very much more than what appears on paper.

Another great grievance of the poor cultivators of Gujarat is that Government does not pay sufficient attention to the upkeep of the tanks. In the last session of the Council I was able to show that Government were pocketing Rs. 30,000 every year from Himayat assessment. Now, when Government gives 10 lakhs for interest on the Sukkur Barrage loan by taking that money taken from Famine Relief Fund, why should Government not spend some money out of Famine Relief Fund for tanks in Gujarat? The cost of the Sukkur Barrage is excessive. To minimise it you pay 2 crores out of Famine Relief and you do that for a productive work, whereas for protective works in Gujarat you not only do not give a grant from the Famine Insurance grant, but on the contrary you pocket the money which the poor people pay.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Honourable members should not address the Government members but should address the Chair.

Mr. H. B. SHIVDASANI: Another thing that calls for some remarks is the policy of the Education Minister. In the last budget session the Council passed a resolution to appoint a committee to consider the question of the pay of primary teachers. The last meeting of the committee was held in October last and, as far as I know, even the report of the committee has not been sent to the members for their signature. If Government do not want to give anything to the primary teachers, they may not; but they should behave in a more courageous fashion; they should not play such dodges. If they do not want to give them an increase, let them come forward in a straightforward fashion and say so; it is no use causing delay in issuing a report in the first instance and then giving replies to questions in Council that "the matter is under consideration" or "the committee is still sitting, and considering the matter" and so forth. The committee finished its labours four or five months ago, and still the report has not been sent to the members, though some of the members have written to the Honourable Minister for Education to send them the report for their signature. They have also verbally asked him to do so, but still nothing is forthcoming. [An Honourable Member: Perhaps Government have not got the money.] If Government have not got the money, they should come forward in a straightforward fashion and say that they have no money. They should not put off the evil day. One day or the other, that report must come before the House.

In conclusion, I must congratulate Government on the bold step they have taken in agreeing to have accepted prohibition as the ultimate goal in excise matters. They had frightened honourable members on this side of the House by telling them that it would not be possible to replace the big slice of income from excise, Rs. 4½ crores, which represents one-third the entire revenues. It may be asked, where is the money to come from? The money will be there in the pockets of the people. If you do not take money from them for drink, they will be richer by that amount. At present the people have to maintain not only the Excise Department of Government, but also the excise contractors, the coolies, the tappers who take out toddy, and all those who are engaged in the liquor traffic. If Government gets Rs. 4½ crores, these people, who are more or less parasites, take away another 3 or 4 crores. Because of drink, people are not able to earn as much as they would otherwise, and they remain in poverty. I am confident that if people do not drink they would be able to earn very much more than they do now. I think the additional earnings, if people do not drink, would amount to some crores of rupees. If you do away with excise revenue, if you enforce prohibition, the money is not going to evaporate; the money will be in the pockets of the people, and if you forego 4½ crores, you would be putting 10 crores in the pockets of the people, and we have got so many clever and ingenious people on the Government benches that it should not be difficult for one or more of them to suggest ways and means of tapping the pockets of the people and getting, say, 4 or 5 crores out of it when there is 10 crores more inside the pockets of the people. The right and statesmanlike policy of Government should be to enrich the people, and then, if their capacity to pay taxes is increased, Government can always, in all sorts of ways, take part of that increased amount from the people's pockets, instead of taking it from excise traffic which is so degrading and demoralising. If this is done Government will be able to get the same revenue, but the people will be much richer than they are under the present system,

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE : Mr. President, the budget has received such a remarkably generous reception from all quarters of the House that I feel very seriously handicapped in making a reply ; I gather that the House as a whole is thoroughly satisfied with the information that has been put before it in the shape of the Blue Book and the new statements and graphs which have been attached to that book, and that there is a far wider recognition of the financial position and difficulties of Government and far greater sympathy with their efforts to suggest a right policy to this House than certainly I had any previous anticipation of ; and I feel also that I must express my personal obligations to those honourable members who have so kindly made personal references to myself on my return to my duties.

A very large number of the criticisms are obviously based upon an imperfect understanding and appreciation of the figures, and as the budget demands come up for discussion one by one, my honourable colleagues will, I have no doubt, be able to relieve the anxiety and disappointment of honourable members who have been led to misunderstand the position by reason of the complexity and intricacy of our accounts. Perhaps, one of the most important criticisms relates to the question of our loan commitments and the avoidance of debt. I should be very glad if that question be brought up in the Finance Committee, for it is a very difficult matter to explain at all clearly in public debate in a House of this size ; it can be far more readily elucidated by question and answer across the table. Our Finance Committee is, I believe, about to receive the assistance of several honourable members who are perhaps amongst our most vigorous critics, and I welcome their acceptance of this position. My only wish is that the leader of the Swaraj party would take his proper place on that committee, and assist us to grapple with our problems in personal discussion on the Finance Committee.

Now, Sir, amongst the detailed misunderstandings, one of the first that I have down for notice is the enquiry from one of the honourable members for Bombay city, which he put forward, as far as I can understand, with a touch of humour—from the context I gathered there was a touch of humour—as to how expenditure on an arsenal in Karachi was intended to improve the public health of that city. Put in that form, it does appear to call for some explanation, but a little study of the papers in the Blue Book would have made it clear to the honourable member, as it is well known to most people here, that the Bombay Government is relieving congestion in Karachi by acquiring from the military a considerable area of land. On those lands there is situated an arsenal, and the military authorities very naturally made it a condition of their surrender of the land that we should build them an arsenal somewhere else. That is why the building of an arsenal becomes an improvement of public health in Karachi city.

Then, Sir, the honourable member the leader of the Swaraj party was very indignant with the Honourable Minister for Public Health because he had admitted an officer entitled Medical Research Officer, with a salary of Rs. 3,150 and an expenditure of Rs. 37,800 in the next year's budget. But the honourable member had not carried his researches himself far enough, for the whole transaction is explained in the Blue Book, paragraphs 146 and 155. This Medical Research Officer was previously shown, and is shown in the White Book on page 180, under the Grant Medical College, and all that has happened is that he is transferred from the Grant Medical College to the Bacteriological Laboratory. There has been no such negligence or remissness on the part of the Honourable Minister for Public Health as some imagined had taken place. This officer has been in the employ of Government for some time, and I believe the circumstances are known to this House.

Now, Sir, there were various references made to the Lee Commission Report; and I do not think it is worth while to discuss that in any detail at this stage. Provision has now been made for carrying out those measures and we are acting under the instructions of the Government of India and the Secretary of State. The Lee Report is a necessary condition of the transitional stage of politics in India. That Commission was appointed not merely to recommend measures to render the public services contented and efficient but also to expedite the Indianisation of the services. That Committee consisted of nine members of whom only three were officials and four were Indians. They submitted a most careful and unanimous report. I do not think that this House, which has accepted the conditions of the Government of India Act and has never attempted to challenge the essential foundations of the system, as has been done with disastrous results in other parts of India, is really inclined to quarrel with the necessary results of the policy adopted.

One honourable member who spoke with some bitterness said that the view of excessive salaries of English officers was not his own but was derived from John Bright. Now, Sir, John Bright's view on India carried weight some 70 years ago. His speeches of 1854 can be read with interest and profit now, and it is obviously that light that has illuminated the honourable member in his present reflections. What appeared monstrous and incredible to John Bright in 1854 seems monstrous and incredible to the honourable member for Khandesh in 1924. The honourable member lives in the mists of the past: and while the House will always be glad to hear his views on philosophy, I am inclined to wonder if they will also accept his theories on modern life.

The same honourable member with bitterness referred to the land revenue situation in the Sindkheda taluka of the Khandesh district. The honourable member in charge of the Revenue Department has had no difficulty in demonstrating that the honourable member's violence of language is only equalled by the entire inaccuracy of his statements. The Government which he abused for its heartless treatment has already granted the relief which he asked for. Was it really impossible for the honourable member to ascertain such simple facts before he expended the time of the House in baseless diatribes?

[Mr. H. S. Lawrence]

Another speech which also was characterised by a little exaggeration was that of the honourable member for Bombay, who referred to the expenditure on Government House as amounting to 31 lakhs in 3 years and as demonstrating the total incompetency of the Government and the neglect of their duties to the people of this country. That was the subject of some discussion last October and I had then occasion to point out that out of this 31 lakhs of rupees, 13 lakhs were expended on building lines for the bodyguard. That money was derived not from the taxpayer but by the sale of the old lines which was in the possession of the bodyguard for many years. As a result of that transaction, not only are the bodyguard housed in better surroundings but Government made a profit of nearly a lakh of rupees. I am explaining this to the House for a second time. The expenditure on Government House has in fact amounted in these three years to something like 17 lakhs of rupees. That too, no doubt, is a considerable sum. Since the honourable member has stated in so many words that this is an extravagant expenditure on His Excellency the Governor, that is a point where full information is desirable. During the war all expenditure on Government House was curtailed. Before the war it had been reported after investigation by engineering experts that the Government Houses were in a very bad condition and required repairs. In fact some portions were on the point of tumbling down, and the roof of one of the principal rooms was blown off or fell down, immediately after some important guests had left. These repairs have now been carried out and they were necessary. This matter had been under discussion for some 10 years before the repairs were carried out. Further out of this 17 lakhs, some 5 lakhs were spent on building quarters for non-gazetted staff who were housed in very bad conditions and a couple of lakhs on office accommodation. A sum of 1½ lakhs was spent on drainage and sanitation under the express instructions of the municipality of Bombay, which refused to permit the Government House to remain any longer in an insanitary condition. That, Sir, is the true history of what is alleged to be an extravagant expenditure on the Government Houses of this presidency.

Among other detailed criticisms of our actions I note that some members have expressed their disapproval of the grant of compensatory local allowance in Bombay and its suburbs, Poona and Karachi. This decision was taken some 15 months ago after a careful examination of the problem over a period of 4 years.

As the name implies, this allowance is intended to compensate officers for the exceptionally high cost of living in those places and to place those officers on a more equal level of remuneration with those other officers of the same rank serving in other parts of the presidency. I think members of this House when they visit Bombay see personal demonstration of the fact that money does not go so far in Bombay as it does in other places. It is for this reason that the standard of salaries granted in Bombay is higher than elsewhere. That compensation was granted on a percentage basis. I believe the papers were placed on the table of this House last March.

But from a different point of view, another complaint is made, that though we have given these compensatory allowances to superior officers, we have not given such allowances to officers of the lower grade. One honourable member has criticised Government very unfavourably for their differential treatment. I do not suppose that it will mollify him at all to be reminded that we took some years to find out the facts before we gave allowances in the first case to higher officers, and that we are still making enquiry and investigation of those cases for which he himself pleads with such vehemence. Those humble officers have not, as he states, been entirely disregarded by Government. Three years before the compensatory allowances were granted to the higher officers, the pay of those inferior officers was raised by 100 per cent. in the lower ranks and by some 60 per cent. in the upper ranks, at the time when those officers from whom he withholds all sympathy received increases of from 20 to 40 per cent. So that, this terrible Government has in fact been responsible for giving differential treatment, but in favour of the poorer officers and not in favour of the richer.

Now, mention has been made of the very large number of allowances which are paid to various officers throughout the presidency, and the fact that these allowances are entered under some 52 different heads is apparently made the subject of complaint. Sir, I think the only people who have to complain about it are the officers of Government who have to read these Blue Books and White Books and to write them up. The only real complaint consists in the excessive and meticulous care and detail with which our accounts are maintained. The number of names given to these allowances is very great, but it is obvious that a great number of them might come under one heading, compensatory local allowance, and the vast number of these allowances are given to petty officers in the different departments serving in the jungles and hills throughout the country. The total sum at issue can be calculated from the White Book, but as none of our critics has mentioned the sum, I think it is a fair inference to say that the total must be something inconsiderable.

Sir, it would be ungrateful of me to pass without comment the contribution of my honourable friend from Kaira. He has put before us once again his panacea for the financial troubles of Government, and no argument will ever persuade him that it is better that the officers of Government should look after the rupees by hundreds and thousands, than after the annas and pies. The honourable member has such implicit faith in the natural good feeling, industry and intelligence of every officer who dons a Government uniform that he thinks it quite unnecessary that he should be watched, stimulated or guided by advice from any superiors. If the honourable member commanded an army he would obviously have no officers between the general and the simple sepoy; if he managed a bank he would have nobody between the general manager and the peon or the clerk. So also in running a district he would have no one between the district collector and the kulkarni or peon. Well, Sir, perhaps in some future age we may arrive at such a Utopian country where every one will do his duty in perfect good faith and perfect intelligence ; but while we admire his confidence in the essential goodness of human nature, Government with a bitter experience of human nature and the hard facts of human life cannot agree to re-arrange all their cadre of public services in accordance with this principle. I would remind the House once more that if we are to dismiss every officer of the superior grade, from the assistant engineer, deputy collector, deputy educational inspector upwards, we should not save more than 10 per cent. of our total expenditure.

Another honourable member complained that there was nothing in the budget for the benefit of the agriculturist. Sir, is primary education no benefit to the agriculturist ? Does the honourable member forget that Government supply some 90 per cent. of the funds for expenditure on primary education carried out by the district local boards, and that they have increased their expenditure on primary education two-fold or more within the last few years ? And are the roads maintained by Government and the local boards of no value to the agriculturist ? Is it nothing that in this budget for next year, we are increasing our grants to district local boards from the sum of 11 lakhs we paid in former years to 18½ lakhs ? In the budget again, he will find that the grant for dispensaries has been doubled—it is proposed to be doubled if we get the money. Then, I believe that that honourable member comes from some part of the Deccan, and I imagine he must be well acquainted with the advantages conferred on the ryot by the Pravara and the Godavari canals. That irrigation policy is devised primarily in the interests of the ryot. The operations of the Agricultural Department have also done much to improve his crops. And in this budget we have provided for a large development of the scheme for improving water-supply by boring wells not only for village water-supply, but also for cultivation. Then, if he turns to Civil Works, on page 94 of the Blue Book, he will find a long list of improvements of communications, bridges, causeways, new roads, and on page 121 of the Blue Book there is a further list of roads, causeways, bridges, all of which mean increased amenities to the ryot and his cattle and a better price to the cultivator for his crop.

I turn now to our loan policy. Some rather hard things have been said about the Sukkur Barrage, about the scale and working of our establishment there. The honourable member in charge of the department will give a complete and detailed reply in due course when he comes to asking for grants for that work. I should like to add a few words for the encouragement in particular of our friends from Sind. These words must of necessity be of a general character. When an enterprise on such an enormous scale representing an expenditure of over 18 crores spread over some 10 years is started it is necessary that the early stages should consist largely in the preparation of maps and plans of most elaborate descriptions: the survey of lands and the calculations to be made have nothing of a spectacular character about them, nothing by which on-lookers can gauge the value of the work done. But if the plans are not carefully and elaborately prepared and thoroughly checked and scrutinised at the outset, immense waste of time, immense expenditure of money may at any time be incurred if of necessity we are required to alter and modify all these plans. From other works that have been carried out by Government at different times Government have had ample experience of the absolute necessity for very careful preparation extending over a long period of time before the works are actually begun. We have seen just recently in a neighbouring province terrible results of a deviation from this policy, a matter which honourable members may hear of but it cannot be discussed here. Now it is necessary to select the officials very carefully and leave detailed supervision in their hands taking steps to ascertain from time to time that they are exercising their powers of superintendence in the right spirit. The staff employed on the Sukkur Barrage has been specially selected and the Bombay Government are fortunate in being able to command the devoted services of such able engineers. It is somewhat invidious to mention names, but in view of the criticisms offered in this House I think this House would be glad to be assured that Government had full experience of the work and value of the work of the men whom they have employed. Mr. Harrison has served them for over a quarter of a century and Mr. Mould has completed 20 years' service and has recently built one of the great engineering works of the world, the Bhandardara Dam near Nasik. Apart from that staff we have the advice in Sind of the Commissioner Mr. Rieu, and Mr. C. M. Baker as Land Officer, both of whom have intimate knowledge of Sind for over 30 years. During the month of November the Honourable Mr. Cowasji Jehangir spent several weeks in Sind and I myself who have had some previous experience of Sind visited the head works of the Sukkur Barrage on a brief visit. I fully recognise that the anxiety of our honourable colleagues in this Council is genuine. They see large sums of money being spent and think that some of it is being spent without sufficient cause. We shall be always glad to receive definite information on any points of extravagance and we shall investigate those points thoroughly. For in so large a project where so many men of different degrees of intelligence and industry have to combine their efforts to a common end, it is absolutely certain that some of the men so employed will fall below the standard of perfection. Any suggestion for economy will receive our most careful consideration. And those particular points which have been mentioned by the honourable member from Larkana will be fully investigated. I fear a recital of these complaints from some of the Sind members may have led the honourable member from Kaira to believe that he was right when he stood up in this House as a solitary dissident from the vote in favour of the barrage, but I feel confident that the progress of time will solve these doubts and hesitations and that the Sukkur Barrage will prove a magnificent success.

[Mr. H. S. Lawrence]

Sir, when all is said and done have we any real cause for despair and despondancy? Every country at all times has its defeatists. These are men who believe that the battle is lost before it is even begun. Nothing can cure those who are determined to be down-hearted. We know that outside this House this doctrine of despair has its origin frequently in political or financial motives. But there are others who plumb the depths of despair with perfectly honest intention by some form of logical process. To these men I venture to offer some calculations and general observations for their critical analysis.

We are told that the presidency will be overburdened if we undertake the debt of 60 crores. We are told that the Sukkur Barrage cannot pay its way. We are told that the Bombay city cannot pay for its land whether reclaimed from the sea or from the marshes in the north of the Bombay island or the land developed in the suburbs. Now let us take these three charges separately.

First as regards the Bombay city. Have our friends ever calculated the wealth of the Bombay city? The income-tax assessment in 1920-21 gave us a datum line for our negotiations with the Government of India at 45 crores per annum. Heavy commercial depression is prevailing at the present time. But is there anyone so determined to look at the black side of things as to assert that the income from the Bombay city alone will not soon again exceed 40 crores per annum? Is it conceivable that a community which possesses such reserves of strength as we see in the vast mill industry of Bombay the capital of which alone I believe is over 20 crores, or any other of those other vast enterprises which have brought Bombay to the forefront of all cities in India as the premier industrial city, is it possible that when it possesses such reserves of strength, it cannot cope successfully with enterprises which required to be financed to the extent of 40 to 50 crores? Let us inculcate a proper civic pride. There is a noble city rising under your very eyes and there can be no question that the people down to the lowest grades will derive immense benefit from the changes that are now in progress.

We are engaged in a war against poverty, disease and death. Is there anyone here who will stand aside and refuse to take part in that campaign?

Now in regard to that Sukkur Barrage. We are accused of undue optimism. Sir, we have estimated that we shall receive some 12 crores of rupees, or two-thirds the value of the whole project, by the sale of lands: an average say of about Rs. 150 per acre. Now, our neighbours in the Punjab have a similar project, the Sutlej Valley project, under construction at the present time. The conditions of the soil and the climate are very similar, and there they have estimated that they will recover 37 crores at an average rate of Rs. 400 per acre. I suggest, Sir, that our estimates are at any rate modest in comparison with those of our neighbours not so very far away.

We are told that land cannot be cultivated because there will not be enough people to cultivate it. We have ascertained that when water is available all the year round the people can cultivate three times as much land as they can if water is available for only four months in the year. That seems a simple mathematical problem. If a man works for 12 months in a year instead of 4 months, he will turn out three times as much work. It is not merely a mathematical problem; it is a proposition that is supported by actual facts on record. We have areas in this presidency and there are areas in the Punjab where people can cultivate and do cultivate three or four acres per head of population. At present in Sind the cultivation is only one acre per head. There are two million people residing in the area that will be covered by the canals from the barrage and they will be able to cultivate another 5 million acres, even without the immigration that is bound to be attracted.

The barrage project will indeed relieve and abolish that great evil which is so largely at the root of poverty in India: the evil of unemployment in rural areas. This evil, I believe, is not disputed by any school of thought in India. It is the basis of Mr. Gandhi's khaddar campaign. While we regard Mr. Gandhi's remedy as economically unsound from various aspects, here in Sind we shall provide employment all the year round: an employment free from monotony and drudgery, an employment that will draw out all the resources of body and mind of man and will bring prosperity and contentment to his home.

There is one further point, a detailed point, which I want to touch. The honourable member from Dharwar told us of the neglect by Government of the interests of the Southern Mahratta Country and threatened us with secession to Madras. His chief complaints were that we had carried out no great irrigation projects in the Karnatak and that we had not given them a medical college. If the honourable member, and his friends of the same way of thinking, will examine the conditions of life in similar tracts in Madras, I think he will find reasons to change his opinion. We can all understand the attraction of a non-Brahmin community towards a province where their allied communities hold supremacy of position. But there is no reason why if a proper organisation is achieved and party discipline is enforced, the party of the honourable member should not achieve a position of considerable influence here though not of supremacy. When we consider the material benefits which the honourable member rightly demands, I venture to suggest that the Karnatak has in fact not been so very badly treated. Where in this province will you find a better system of communications, better roads, more bridges or more causeways over the rivers? These are amongst the first benefits of importance required by agriculturists and these have been provided for the agriculturists in the Karnatak in a degree which need fear no comparison with their neighbours. Let my honourable friend only go across the border and look for himself.

Then, in regard to irrigation. The Gokak canal has long been in existence. It is in fact one of the pioneer efforts in irrigation projects in Western India. There is a scheme for enlarging the tank and extending the canals, and if we can only get the Irrigation Bill accepted by this House, which we have under contemplation, there is no reason that I can see why this vast scheme for the Karnatak irrigation should not be carried through even before the rival scheme across the border, which he mentions, has advanced any further.

I am glad, however, that the honourable member for Dharwar has put forward these demands. We shall do our best to fulfil them. It would indeed be strange if there were no unfulfilled demands from so large and important a country as the honourable member speaks for. That fact merely shows once more the need of greater revenues for the State. Give us the revenues necessary and we will apply them to the most urgent demands of the people.

Now, Sir, I fully appreciate the reluctance of this Assembly to approve of enhanced taxation. It is the common feature of every popular assembly in the world to accept fresh taxation with reluctance. But if we look round the world to-day, we may observe that as Governments become more and more identified with the people, popular assemblies become more readily reconciled to the unpleasant necessity of the payment of taxes. One of the chief lessons of the War was the power of combination of all classes in every country. The necessary effort put forth for the purposes of the War would have been considered incredible at any other time. Since the end of the War this recognition of the power of combined effort has continued and has been translated into the field of financial administration.

To many of us the scale of taxation in England is so vast as to be beyond comprehension, but we cannot dismiss it from our thoughts on the superficial ground that England is a rich country and no comparison is possible. We can draw valuable lessons from it. The chief lesson which I suggest for the consideration of the House is the sacrifice of individual interests for the good of the whole country. Just consider the income tax in England to which the honourable member for Bombay city drew attention. He expressed envy of a country which could remit some 60 millions by the reduction of 1 shilling in the pound. But I ask the House to consider another aspect of that same fact. The country submitted for several years to a tax of 6 shillings in the pound. What does this mean? It means that every person of moderate means gave the whole of his labour, the whole proceeds of his industry, to the country for $3\frac{1}{2}$ months in the year. He maintained himself and his family on the labour and income of $8\frac{1}{2}$ months, and he sacrificed the whole of his income for $3\frac{1}{2}$ months for his country. That scale was reduced to $2\frac{1}{2}$ months two years ago, and it is possible that it may be reduced to 2 months next year. That is the point on which the honourable member Mr. Lalji Naranji expressed such envy. But to ask members of this House and members of this city to labour absolutely and entirely for the good of the country for two months in the year without any remuneration is, I think, a new idea to some of us. I omit from this consideration the question of supertax, for that concerns only a limited number of men. But with the supertax added, the wealthy classes in England often paid six months' income to the State. The maximum rate of income tax reached in this country has been 10 per cent. and supertax 25 per cent. : and it is unfortunately only in rare cases where the State has been able to levy the full percentage.

Now, I feel confident that when this House appreciates the sacrifice of private interests for the good of the country, to which other popular assemblies have consented, it will enter into a generous competition with them. It will not fall short in its efforts for the public welfare. The power of the masses of the people welded together in a common endeavour has been demonstrated to be far greater than the mind of man could formerly conceive. Let us utilise this wonderful instrument which by the will of Providence has been put into the hands of this Council. Let us put aside our petty bickerings and personal jealousies, and let us join forces in the onward march.

As I have said before, we are engaged in a war against poverty, disease and death ; and we have full confidence that this House will give us their generous support in the policy that we have laid before this House. (Cheers.)

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Before I adjourn I should like to know what the wishes of the House are with regard to the meeting hour to-morrow. Honourable members are aware that His Excellency has issued invitations to a garden party at Government House at half past four and I take it that the House would like to adjourn at the latest at about 4 o'clock, to enable honourable members to attend that function. I therefore propose to adjourn to-morrow's meeting at 4 o'clock, but I should like to know at what time they wish to meet.

[Honourable Members: 'Twelve', 'one', 'two'.] My own idea was 12, but I should like to know whether the general feeling in the House is in favour of 12 or 1. Those in favour of 12 will rise up in their seats. [A count was taken.] Those in favour of 1 will rise up in their seats. [A count was taken.] I find that there are 29 members in favour of meeting at 12 o'clock, and 32 members in favour of meeting at 1 o'clock. The Council will therefore now adjourn till 1 p.m. to-morrow, Thursday, the 26th February 1925.

Thursday, the 26th February 1925.

The Council re-assembled at the Town Hall, Bombay, at 1 p.m. on Thursday, the 26th February 1925, the Honourable the President, Sir IBRAHIM RAHIMTOOLA, K.O.S.I., O.I.E., presiding.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Order, order. Questions.

MUBARAKWAH AND SUHRABWAH CANALS.

* Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR on behalf of Mr. D. B. ADWANI (Karachi City): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact (i) that at a conference held at Nawabshah in 1921 between the revenue and public works department officers it was decided that regulators would be provided at the heads of the Mubarakwah and the Suhrabwah in the Nasrat Canals division?

(ii) that a regulator was constructed at the head of the Mubarakwah in 1922, while that on the Suhrabwah though sanctioned in 1923 and provided for in the budget for 1923-24 has been held in abeyance because of the sanction of the Lloyd Barrage and Canals Construction scheme?

(iii) that the construction of the regulator at the Mubarakwah without a regulator being provided at the Suhrabwah has decreased the supply in the latter canal;

(b) Will Government be pleased to lay a copy of their resolution sanctioning the regulator over the Suhrabwah on the Council table?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR: (a) (i) At the conference the zamindars were informed that the two regulators which were considered necessary formed part of the Lower Dad Remodelling Project to be shortly submitted to Government.

(ii) Yes, a regulator was constructed just below the head of Mubarakwah. The regulator at mile 65 for Suhrabwah was included in the project for remodelling the Lower Dad Canal which has been finally abandoned as the area on this branch will be commanded by the Rohri Canal of the Lloyd Barrage and Canals Construction Project.

(iii) No.

(b) The construction of the regulator at the head of Suhrabwah was never sanctioned by Government.

COURT OF THE SUB-JUDGE, TANDO MAHAMADKHAN.

* Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR on behalf of Mr. D. B. ADWANI (Karachi City): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they are aware that though the subordinate judge at Tando Mahamadkhan is empowered to try criminal cases, yet on account of the congestion of civil work, both civil and criminal work in his court suffers a good deal?

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

(b) Is it a fact that Mr. Percival, a former district judge of Hyderabad (Sind), strongly recommended to his superior officers that the subordinate judge at Tando Mahamadkhan should be relieved of the criminal work on this ground ?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : (a) The civil and criminal work at Tando Mahomedkhan has not suffered at all from the joinder of functions. Since January 1st to October 31st 1924 the number of civil suits instituted has been 566 while 619 suits have been decided. The arrears of criminal work on 1st January 1924 were 34 cases. Up to 31st October 1924, 74 cases were received making a total of 108 cases. Out of these, 71 cases were disposed of, leaving a balance of 37.

(b) No. The recommendation was made by Mr. Percival on different grounds, viz., that the sub-judge, Tando Mahomedkhan, might be available for deputation, when required, to clear off arrears at Hyderabad or Mirpurkhas.

ALLEGATIONS OF ILLEGAL GRATIFICATION AGAINST SUB-ASSISTANT SURGEON MULCHAND.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR on behalf of Mr. D. B. ADWANI (Karachi City) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether their attention has been drawn to the articles in the "Hindu" of Hyderabad (Sind), dated 22nd and 24th May and 9th June 1924, in connection with certain allegations against the Sub-Assistant Surgeon Dr. Mulchand, by the people of Dadu ?

(b) Are Government aware that a petition signed by some 250 persons has been sent to the Surgeon General to the Government of Bombay ?

(c) If so, do Government intend to take any action ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : The attention of the honourable member is invited to the reply given to question put by Haji Abdullah Haroon (Karachi City) on 24th February 1925.

CLERKS IN THE DEVELOPMENT DEPARTMENT.

* Mr. S. K. BOLE : Will Government be pleased to state the total number of clerks in each section of the Bombay Development Department and the number of clerks belonging to the Hindu backward classes in each section ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : A statement† furnishing the desired information is appended.

TALATI IN TALEGAON MUNICIPALITY.

* Mr. S. K. BOLE : Will Government be pleased to state —

(a) Whether any of the elected members of the Talegaon municipality in the Poona district is a talati ?

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

† Vide Appendix 33.

(b) Whether any complaint as regards his eligibility to be such member was made to the Collector of Poona ?

(c) If so, what reply the Collector gave ?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN :

(a) Yes.

(b) Yes.

(c) The talati was ordered to reside at the village of his Saza. It is reported that he has already resigned his post.

PRIZE FOR KILLING A TIGER.

Mr. S. K. BOLE : Will Government be pleased to state whether any reward was given to the villager who fought with a tiger which was eventually killed in a village near Nagothna in the Kolaba district ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR : Payment of rewards for the destruction of wild animals has been discontinued since 1920. Government are not aware of any conspicuous act of bravery in the Kolaba district to justify an exception being made to the decision arrived at by Government in 1920.

Mr. S. K. BOLE : Does Government think that to fight with a tiger is not an act of bravery ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR : It depends upon how you fight.

COMPENSATORY ALLOWANCE TO NON-MINISTERIAL OFFICERS IN POONA.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR (Poona City) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether any compensatory allowance has been sanctioned for those non-ministerial officers whose offices are located in Poona, and also, if so, to state the circumstances which have necessitated such allowance ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state whether any representations were received from the ministerial establishments of the said offices asking for a similar concession and, if so, how they have been disposed of ?

(c) Do Government intend to take any action, or, if any action has been taken, any further action, in connection with the subject matter of such representations ?

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE : (a) Copies* of the Government Resolutions, Finance Department, No. 2837 dated 5th December 1923 and No. 2837 dated 15th March 1924 are laid on the table.

(b) and (c) Yes. The question is being investigated.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN : I find, on page 27 of the list under rule 1, that ministerial and menial Government servants have been excluded from drawing compensatory allowance. May I know the reason for it ?

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE : I want notice of the question.

* Vide Appendix 34.

REFUSAL TO PAY LAND REVENUE IN RAJURI, TALUKA HAVELI.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR (Poona City) : Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) Whether they are aware that the khatedars of Rajuri in taluka Haveli objected to having to pay last year any instalment of the land revenue for 1920-21 which had been suspended ?

(b) Whether any instalment of land revenue, over and above the year's instalments, was collected last year ; if so, to what year did this instalment pertain ?

(c) If such instalment pertained to 1920-21, is it a fact that some of the khatedars from whom it was realised had already paid the full assessment for that year ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes. One more instalment over and above the year's instalments was collected out of the suspended arrears. In the case of Rajuri proper this instalment pertained to the suspended arrears of the year 1920-21. At Unchkhadakwadi, a hamlet under Rajuri, this instalment pertained to the suspended arrears of the year 1922-23, as there were no suspended arrears in this wadi for the years 1920-21 and 1921-22.

(c) No.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR : May I know the limit of annawari beyond which Government is entitled to realise suspended revenues ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : I think that if the annawari is 6 annas then the current year's revenue is collected. If the annawari is between 8 annas and 12 annas the current year's revenue plus the previous year's suspension equal to half the revenue is collected. If the annawari is 12 annas and over, the current year's revenue plus an amount equal to the current year's revenue out of the suspended revenue is collected.

ADVISORY BOARDS TO ASSIST AND ADVISE MINISTERS AND MEMBERS.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : (a), (b) and (c) A reference is requested to the reply given in September 1922 to the then honourable member for Poona City reported at page 20 of Volume VII, Part I of Council Debates. No further steps have been taken nor have enquiries been made from other local Governments.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR : May I know why steps have not been taken by Government since 1922 in order to bring into existence standing committees to advice and assist the Members and Ministers of Government ?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: I did not quite hear the honourable member; but it was not considered necessary to make further enquiry.

*Khan Bahadur D. B. COOPER (Satara District): Will Government be pleased to state—

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: (a) Already replied to.

LOCAL BOARD PRIMARY SCHOOLS IN THE DISTRICTS OF NORTHERN DIVISION.

* Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI (Kaira District): (a) Will Government be pleased to state how many local board primary schools are there in each of the districts in the Northern Division, and how many of them are housed in local board buildings?

(b) What grant by Government has been given for current repairs to these buildings during each of the last three years and during the current year?

(c) How many new buildings have been constructed in these districts during the last three years for primary schools? and

(d) What amount has been allotted in each of these districts for library during the last three years and the current year and how much of this amount has been spent on books, magazines, periodicals and maps respectively?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: (a), (b), (c) and (d) The appended statement† gives the information required.

BOOKSTALLS AT B. B. & C. I. RAILWAY STATIONS.

* Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI (Kaira District): Will Government be pleased to state whether it is true that applications to vend vernacular and other papers at the stations of Nadiad and Broach

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

† Kept in the Secretary's office.

are refused by the B. B. & C. I. Railway? If the reply be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state what arrangements are made to supply papers at these stations?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: A contract for vending newspapers on the station platforms of the B. B. & C. I. Railway has been let out to Messrs. A. H. Wheeler and Company. The Railway Company is therefore unable to permit others to sell newspapers at the stations.

Messrs. A. H. Wheeler and Company have their agent at Nadiad who sells newspapers daily. They had a similar arrangement at Broach some years ago, but as it did not pay, they discontinued it. It may also be mentioned that bookstalls where newspapers are sold have been provided at Surat and Baroda, and there is hardly any necessity, so far as the travelling public are concerned, to provide for the sale of newspapers at Broach.

SALE OF ROSHA GRASS IN WEST KHANDESH.

* Mr. S. S. DEV (West Khandesh District): Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) Whether it is a fact that rosha (spice) grass in West Khandesh used to be sold every year by public auction?

(b) Whether it is a fact that it used to be purchased up till now by Mr. Abdul Hussain Mulla Badruddin of Sindkheda taluka, he being the highest bidder at every auction?

(c) Whether it is a fact that this year it was sold to a foreign company for a period of five years, without its being put up to sale by auction as usual?

(d) Whether it is a fact that Mr. Abdul Hussain had once applied that the grass be sold by auction for a longer period than one year, but that this application had been rejected?

(e) If the reply to (a) to (d) be in the affirmative, why the old practice of annually putting up the grass to sale by auction for the period of one year has been departed from this year?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: (a) Yes, in all the ranges except the Akrani where a three years contract was given out for the period ending 31st January 1926.

(b) No, his name cannot be traced in the North Khandesh Division. In the West Khandesh Division he did not purchase the grass during the last six years.

(c) A contract for five years for all the rosha grass areas of the presidency has been given out to the Essential Oils Syndicate of India which consists of five partners, four of whom are Indians.

(d) No such application was received.

(e) Past experience has shown that the sale of rosha grass farms for small periods and in small areas to different contractors whose methods of distilling and refining the oil were crude and faulty led eventually to loss of revenue to Government; and consequently there was a proposal that the Industries Department, since abolished, should undertake experiments in connection with the distillation of rosha oil. It was found that unless a supply of sufficiently large quantities of grass and a reasonably long period of contract were guaranteed to make it worth while for firms with resources to initiate modern methods of distillation, no improvement could be hoped for. A contract for five years for all the areas of the presidency was therefore given out, after enquiries with several firms, to the Essential Oils Syndicate, the price fixed being appreciably in advance of the average revenue from rosha grass for the last seven years.

IRRIGATION IN NANDURBAR AND SINDKHEDA TALUKA.

* Mr. S. S. DEV (West Khandesh District): Will Government be pleased to state—

(1) whether it is true that two or three years ago they entertained the idea of erecting a dam in the hills near Bhaler in the Nandurbar Taluka, for the purpose of irrigation?

(2) If so, what progress has been made in carrying out the scheme?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: (1) Yes.

(2) The scheme for the construction of a dam near the village Akrala which is near Bhaler in Nandurbar Taluka was not proceeded with since it was ascertained that—

(a) a considerable area of land would be submerged and cultivation on this area stopped.

(b) the project would be a very costly one and thus not satisfactory from a financial aspect.

Mr. S. S. DEV: Are Government aware that that part of the district forms a famine zone and that financial aspect should be no consideration in such a case?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: Will the honourable House supply the funds? Till then Government will certainly consider the financial aspect.

SALE OF ANNUAL ADMINISTRATION REPORTS.

* Mr. M. B. POWAR on behalf of Mr. N. R. GUNJAL (Poona District): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether the annual administration reports of all the departments of Government are offered for sale to the public?

(c) Will they be pleased to lay on the Council table the annual reports of the Director of Information for the last three years?

(b) what is the anna valuation of the crops at Rajuri and surrounding villages with respect to the payment of assessment regarding which such action was taken and how was such valuation arrived at?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: (a) The honourable member is referred to the answer to his question No. 4 at this session.

(b) A statement‡ of the anna valuation of crops for the year 1923-24 at Rajuri and other surrounding villages is appended. The valuation of crops was arrived at after crop-inspection.

most of such notices the amount to be recovered was incorrectly entered ?

(d) Were any panchnamas of the attached properties made in the presence of the owners on the said occasion ?

(e) Were any utensils belonging to any of the defaulters attached on the said occasion ? If so, in the case of how many defaulters was this done ?

(f) How many forfeiture notices were issued, in how many cases had distraints to be made to realise the arrears of 1920-21, how many khatadars paid their arrears willingly ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : (a) The honourable member is referred to the reply to question† put by the honourable member for Poona city at the October session. There is no civil jail.

(b) Anaji Tukaram was taken to the house of the mamlatdar, Junnar, at his own request to represent that he should be released on payment of the money by his friend Ganu. This interview lasted for about a quarter of an hour. Anaji had no meal at the mamlatdar's house.

(c) Yes. There were some cases in which the amount was wrongly entered owing to incorrect calculations. But at the time of recovery the correct amount due was recovered.

(d) Yes, with the exception of a few which were made in the presence of their families.

(e) Utensils not exempted from attachment were distrained in a hundred cases.

(f) 449 notices of forfeiture were issued to realise the arrears. In 134 cases distraints had to be made and 33 khatadars paid their arrears willingly.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR : Is it a fact that Mr. Anaji Tukaram told the mamlatdar that he never authorised his friend Ganu to pay for him ?

DAMAGE TO CROPS BY EXCESSIVE RAIN AND LOCUSTS IN DHARWAR DISTRICT.

* Mr. V. N. JOG (Dharwar District): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they are aware that in several talukas of the Dharwar district great damage has been done to the crops by excessive rain and locusts?

(b) Are they aware that the jowari crop in several villages having been damaged by rain and locusts, had to be ploughed up and cotton sown in those lands again?

(c) and (d) Attention of the honourable member is invited to the reply to his previous question.

* Mr. P. G. JOSHI (East Khandesh): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether any first, second and third year trained primary teachers were engaged by them in 1923 and 1924 on Rs. 25, Rs. 30 and Rs. 35 respectively as their starting pay, and, if so, what is their total number?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI : They are receipts.

Mr. M. D. KARKI : My question refers to the amount of money spent, because I wanted to know if the depôts are working at a loss or profit.

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI : I am sorry that has been omitted.

Mr. M. D. KARKI : Do the amounts of Rs. 38, Rs. 36 and Rs. 37 represent the whole cost including the pay of the cartsmen ?

HINDU TEACHERS IN URDU SCHOOLS.

(a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that Hindu teachers who are not trained in Urdu are employed in some Urdu schools in the presidency ?

(b) If so, how many such Hindu teachers are employed in Urdu schools in the presidency proper ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: (a) Yes, but they teach the vernacular and not Urdu.

(b) 71.

Khan Saheb A. M. MANSURI: Is it due to the dearth of Mahomedan teachers that Hindu teachers are employed in Urdu schools to teach the vernacular ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: In Urdu schools they have to teach the vernaculars also, and many a time Hindu vernacular teachers are engaged. Government find the dearth of qualified Urdu teachers, and they think that Urdu education will not suffer if non-Mussalman teachers are employed to teach subjects other than Urdu.

Khan Saheb A. M. MANSURI: Do the Government believe that if the training classes are done away with, it will help Mahomedan education ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: They are not done away with: they are retained.

Khan Saheb A. M. MANSURI: The second and third year classes have already been done away with.

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: They are not done away with.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD: Am I to understand that Mahomedan teachers are unable to teach the vernacular ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: They are not unable.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD: Why are they not employed then ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: Mahomedan teachers to teach Urdu are required and they are employed. As a matter of fact they are employed not only in Mahomedan Urdu schools, but also in other vernacular schools.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD: That is not an answer to my question. My question is, are they employed to teach the vernacular ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: They are not.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD: Then, why are they not employed ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: As many of them as are available are employed, not only in Urdu schools, but other schools also.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD: I am not asking about other schools.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

in bond from the Nasik Distillery to each of the spirit warehouses in the Kolaba District, viz., those at Panvel, Pen and Mahad, during the last 5 years ?

(b) What is the total loss in stillhead duty and cost price suffered by Government thereby ?

(e) What steps Government have taken to bring these losses under control, and whether Government intend to take any action in the matter ?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI : (a), (b) and (c). A statement* giving the requisite information is appended.

(d) The average of transit losses in the case of the above three warehouses was 3.31 per cent. against 0.68 per cent. for other warehouses.

(e) The transport of liquor by sea presents special difficulties. Several attempts to prevent pilfering in transit were unsuccessful ; but arrangements have been made since June last to send all consignments to the warehouses in the Kolaba district under armed escort and the losses are now reported to be very low.

ANONYMOUS PETITION AND THE TERMINATION OF THE SERVICES OF
MR. N. L. MEHTA, EXECUTIVE ENGINEER IN THE DEVELOPMENT DIRECTORATE.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN (Bombay City, South) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that an anonymous petition adversely criticising and making allegations against the Development Directorate and addressed to the last Governor of Bombay was received by them shortly before his departure ?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to place the said petition on the table ?

(c) Has any action been taken thereon ? If not, why has no action been taken ?

(d) Is it a fact that shortly after the presentation of the said petition, one Mr. N. L. Mehta, an Executive Engineer under the Directorate, was served with one month's notice to terminate his services ?

(e) If so, why were his services dispensed with ?

(f) Do Government intend to take any action

(1) on the petition and

(2) in the case of Mr. Mehta ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : (a), (b) and (c) An anonymous petition was received. Under the Petition Rules such petitions are to be disregarded and Government have not taken any action on that petition.

(d) Yes.

(e) His services were not dispensed with on account of the petition received, but on account of his unsatisfactory work.

(f) (1) and (2) Government do not intend to take any action.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN: May I draw the Honourable Member's attention to the fact that there is no reply to my question (b), namely "will Government be pleased to place the said petition on the table?" May I know if the Government are prepared to place the petition on the table?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: That petition was disregarded and Government cannot place it on the table.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN: Are Government in possession of the petition?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: Most probably it is in the big waste paper basket which the honourable member referred to yesterday.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN: Will the honourable member make an attempt to search the waste paper basket, because it is very important?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: It is an anonymous petition. All such petitions under the rules of Government are put into the waste paper basket.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN: Is it a fact that in the said anonymous petition specific allegations of fraud, mismanagement, misappropriation, favouritism in the purchase of stores, etc., against particular officials had been made?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: The honourable member seems to know the contents of that anonymous petition. He will inform the House.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN: Will the Honourable the General Member please reply to the question whether it is a fact or not. I want to make use of that denial when the time comes.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: I refuse to disclose the contents of that petition.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN: How long was Mr. Mehta in service before the petition was received?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: I must ask for notice of that question.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN: Is it not a fact that he was in service for a considerable time before that, and that he had given considerable satisfaction till the date of the receipt of this petition?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: That is not correct.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN: In what respect was his work unsatisfactory?
(No reply.)

Khan Saheb A. M. MANSURI: Are Government aware that such anonymous petitions are taken notice of in other cases?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: Government are not aware of that.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN: May I know if there were any adverse remarks or reports on Mr. Mehta, up to the time of the petition, by his superiors?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: There were and they were communicated to Mr. Mehta.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN: May I know how long after the petition the discovery was made that his work was unsatisfactory?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: The discovery was made long before the petition was received.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN: May I know why action was taken only when the petition was received?

(No reply.)

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Next question.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN: I want to ask further supplementary questions.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: We have passed on to the next question. The Honourable the General Member did not reply to your last supplementary question.

Mr. NOOR MAHOMED (Hyderabad District): Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) The quantity of quinine supplied to the different talukas of Sind and to the other divisions of the presidency for free distribution out of the funds allotted in the last budget:

(b) What amount of money has actually been spent on the purchase of quinine?

(c) Are Government aware that the quinine intended for free distribution hardly ever reaches the people through the present official agency? If so, do Government intend to take any action in order to improve the method of its distribution?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV:

(a) Sind Division.

| Bombay Suburban Division | 2 | 6,000 |

(b) Rs. 39,500. A further grant of Rs. 20,000 has also been sanctioned.
 (c) No. Government have no reason to believe that the work of distribution by the present official agencies is not properly carried out. Twenty pounds of quinine were also sent to the Sind branch of the Bombay Co-operative Institute for free distribution.

Mr. NOOR MAHOMED : May I know whether Government wants to make any enquiry in view of the fact that there was no proper distribution of quinine ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : The honourable member is suggesting a course of action.

Mr. NOOR MAHOMED : Have, Sir, any complaints been made to Government by the district local boards that the distribution was not being properly made through the Commissioner's or official agency ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : I am not aware of any such complaint, because district local boards have nothing to do with me.

NEW LIQUOR SHOP IN HYDERABAD.

* Mr. NOOR MAHOMED (Hyderabad District) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that a liquor shop has been permitted to be opened near the Jugnoor cinema and theatre at Hyderabad ? If so, was any demand made by any section of the public for the opening of this shop in its present locality ? If not, will Government be pleased to state the reasons for permitting the license in this case ?

(b) Was the advisory committee consulted in licensing this shop ?

(c) What are the hours during which this shop is kept open ?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI : (a) and (b) No liquor shop has been permitted to be opened near the Jugnoor cinema and theatre at Hyderabad. An application was made for a bar license by the proprietors of that cinema and was refused after the advisory committee had been consulted.

(c) The question does not arise.

BRIDGE ON THE INDUS AT GIDU IN SIND.

* Mr. NOOR MAHOMED (Hyderabad District) : (a) Are Government aware that the bridge on the Indus at Gidu very often remains closed to vehicular and animal traffic at times, for even four hours at a stretch, causing considerable inconvenience to the public ?

(b) Is it a fact that the gates are closed as soon as a line clear signal is given to the railway trains at Hyderabad ?

(c) Do Government intend to issue instructions to minimise such inconvenience ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes. The railway authorities consider it absolutely necessary.

*This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

(c) The Railway Administration endeavours to make the bridge available for road traffic as frequently for as long as practicable. It is not possible to modify the existing arrangements.

GHOTKI CANAL PROJECT.

Mr. MAHOMED AYUB SHAH MAHOMED KHUHRO on behalf of PIR RASUL BAKSH SHAH (Sukkur District): Will Government be pleased to state how far the execution of the Ghotki Canal project has progressed?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: The question of undertaking a detailed survey with a view to drawing up a project for the proposed large Ghotki canal is still under the consideration of Government.

Mr. MAHOMED AYUB SHAH MAHOMED KHUHRO: How long will Government take to consider this question?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: Government will consider the question as expeditiously as it is possible to do so, considering the size, extent and the cost of such a huge scheme. Government will consider the scheme most sympathetically and are doing so.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI: (Question inaudible).

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: I am afraid I could not tell you that. But I can give you this further information that the consideration of the scheme is coming up before Government very soon indeed and Government will decide after due consideration. Government cannot rush any scheme involving such a huge expenditure. They have got to be very careful, but they will give it their most serious consideration as one of those schemes which deserve such serious consideration.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI: Has no survey been made of this project?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: No; I don't think so. But I am not dead certain. I think the position is that you have got to provide a very large sum of money for detailed survey.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI: Are there any papers before Government?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: Yes.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI: Do these papers contain any detailed survey of the scheme?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: As far as I remember, a provision is being asked for for the detailed survey. Even the provision for a detailed survey runs into six figures.

BRIDGES IN THE KOLABA DISTRICT.

Mr. M. B. POWAR (Kolaba District): Will Government be pleased to state when they intend to commence the construction of the bridges across the river Pali near Nagothna and the river Savitri near Mahad in the Kolaba District, i.e., on the Dharamtar-Mahableshwar Road?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN: Bridge across the river Pali near Nagothna.—Presumably the honourable member refers to the proposed bridge across the river Amba near Nagothna on the Dharamtar-Mahableshwar Road. The preliminary plans and estimate for this bridge have been prepared and are under the consideration of Government. When the plans and estimate are sanctioned and funds become available, the work will be commenced.

Bridge over the Savitri river near Mahad.—The site originally proposed for this bridge has been rejected and another site has been selected. Instructions have been issued to survey the new site and to collect the necessary data after which the preparation of the project will be undertaken. When the plans and estimate are sanctioned and funds become available, the work will be started.

STRENGTH OF INDIAN TERRITORIAL FORCE IN THE BOMBAY PRESIDENCY.

Mr. R. G. PRADHAN (Nasik District): Will Government be pleased to state what is the maximum strength of the Indian Territorial Force allowed for our presidency and the strength actually attained?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: The authorised establishment of an Indian Territorial Force Unit is 738.

The present actual strength of each unit of all ranks in the Bombay presidency is as follows—

| | | | |
|--|----|----|-----|
| 11th/5th Mahratta Light Infantry | .. | .. | 326 |
| 1st Bombay Battalion, University Training Corps .. | .. | .. | 656 |
| 11th/2nd Bombay Pioneers | .. | .. | 755 |
| 12th/2nd Bombay Pioneers | .. | .. | 404 |

Mr. R. G. PRADHAN: May I know what is the maximum number of units sanctioned for this presidency? That question has not been answered.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: I do not see the question.

Mr. R. G. PRADHAN: I want to know the maximum number of units of the Indian Territorial Force allowed for our presidency. I have not been informed of the total strength or number of the units.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: I thought the honourable member knew that. They are four.

Mr. R. G. PRADHAN: Is that the number sanctioned for this presidency?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: There are none other sanctioned for this presidency than those mentioned in the reply.

ADEN PORT TRUST.

* Mr. K. F. NARIMAN on behalf of Mr. HOOSENALLY M. RAHIM-TOOLA (Bombay City): Will Government be pleased to furnish (a) the number of Indians, Arabs and Europeans and others respectively, in the employ of the Aden Port Trust drawing a monthly pay (i) up to Rs.100, (ii) between Rs. 100 and Rs. 200, (iii) between Rs. 200 and Rs. 300, (iv) between Rs. 300 and Rs. 500 and (v) above Rs. 500 ;

(b) the average number of meetings of the trustees of the Aden Port Trust held every month during the last year ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: The number of Indians, Arabs and Europeans and others in the employ of the Aden Port Trust and the grades of their pay are shown below :—

| | Pay up to Rs. 100. | Pay Rs. 100 to Rs. 200. | Pay Rs. 200 to Rs. 300. | Pay Rs. 300 to Rs. 500. | Pay Rs. 500 and over. |
|--------------|-----------------------|----------------------------|----------------------------|----------------------------|--------------------------|
| Indians .. | 43 | 14 | 2 | 4 | ... |
| Arabs .. | 104 | 5 | | | |
| Europeans .. | | | | 1 | 10 |
| Others .. | 45 | 3 | 1 | | ... |

Two meetings of the Trustees of the Aden Port Trust were held each month during the year ending 31st March 1924.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN: Does the honourable member mean to suggest that there is no Indian available for a post above Rs. 500 who can be considered suitable ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: I do not mean to suggest anything of the sort.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN: Why are they all Europeans, there, then ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: I am afraid I cannot explain that myself. Personally I have no direct control over the Aden Port Trust. But I will give another bit of information to my honourable friend, viz., a resolution was passed by the Council of State with regard to higher appointments in the Port Trusts, and that resolution has been communicated to the trustees of the Aden Port Trust.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN: Has any care been taken to see that it is acted on ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: All the care that this Government can take.

An Honourable Member: What care has been taken by Government in this connection ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: I have already told the honourable House that all the care that Government can take in these matters is taken.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN : Has the Honourable Member any reason to think that the resolution communicated to the Aden Port Trust will not be considered by that Trust ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : I have no reason to think that it will not be considered. We work under the Aden Port Trust Act ; I hope honourable members will realise that. Under that Act the trustees have got full power to act in certain ways under certain sections of the Act. For certain posts the trustees have to get the sanction of the Resident, for others the sanction of Government, and so on. We can only work under the Port Trust Act.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN : Do I understand that the Port Trust Act prohibits the employment of Indians on posts above Rs. 500 ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : Of course, it does not.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI : Have the Government of Bombay merely communicated the resolution passed by the Council of State to the Aden Port Trust or have they also given an expression of their own opinion along with it ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : It has been forwarded to the Aden Port Trustees at the express desire of the Government of India with an expression of opinion by the Government of Bombay that it should be acted upon.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR : How soon will Government know whether it has been acted upon ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : Government can only know when references are made by the Trustees under the Act to the Bombay Government.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR : How soon will that be ? When will that be ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : Whenever occasions arise under the Act.

VACANCIES IN THE INSPECTING BRANCH OF TEACHERS.

* Mr. H. D. SAHEBA (Ahmedabad District) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that all new vacancies in the inspecting branch of teachers are not permanently filled up ?

(b) How many places fell vacant during the last three years in each division and how many of them have been filled up by acting men ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : (a) This part has already been answered †.

(b) The accompanying statement ‡ gives the information required.

SECRETARY TO THE KURLA MUNICIPALITY.

* Mr. G. B. PRADHAN on behalf of Mr. SHANKARRAO JAYARAMRAO ZUNZARRAO (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts) :

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

† Printed in the First List of Questions and Answers at the last Session.

‡ Vide Appendix 44.

Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that at a meeting of the Kurla municipality held on the 20th June 1924 to consider the conduct of the present Secretary, Kurla municipality, the president of the local Khilafat Committee came with a number of men and that those men eventually took possession of the hall which the councillors left without being able to transact business ?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN: The meeting in question was held on 28th June 1924. A large number of local inhabitants assembled in the municipal office and outside. Some councillors asked the president to hold the meeting in private and on his declining to do so, all but three councillors (including the president) left the meeting which had therefore to be dissolved. The crowd was apparently orderly and well behaved.

PROPORTION OF SPECIAL SCHOLARSHIPS AWARDED.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN on behalf of Mr. SHANKARRAO JAYARAMRAO ZUNZARRAO (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts): Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that at present special scholarships in the Government secondary schools are given to boys belonging to non-Mahomedan backward classes at the rate of one for every six lakhs of the total population of such classes and to Mahomedan boys at the rate of one for every twenty thousand of the total population of that community ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: According to a scheme recently sanctioned by Government with effect from the current year special scholarships in secondary schools are given as follows:—

- | | | |
|------------------------------|----|---|
| (a) Intermediate Hindus | .. | One set for every 50,000 of population. |
| (b) Backward Hindus | .. | One set for every 40,000 of population. |
| (c) Mahomedans— | | |
| (i) in the Presidency proper | | One set for every 15,000 of population. |
| (ii) In Sind | .. | One set for every 25,000 of population. |

If both Intermediate and Backward Hindus are included in the term "Non-Mahomedan Backward Classes," the scheme provides one set for every 47,000 of population. These special scholarships are not restricted to pupils from Government secondary schools, as pupils from all recognised secondary schools are eligible for them.

DAM AT VAKESHWAR.

* Mr. R. G. SOMAN (Satara District): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that a dam was intended to be constructed at Vakeshwar in Khatav taluka in the Satara district and has been partially constructed ?

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

(b) Is it a fact that work was abandoned some years back, and, if so, what were the grounds therefor ?

(c) Has the Collector of Satara recently received any application in this respect from the inhabitants of Vaduj in Khatav taluka ?

(d) If so, do Government intend to take any action in this connection ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR : (a) The possibility of a suitable site for a dam at Vakeshwar was investigated between the years 1893—1896 but the work was never started.

(b) The proposal of constructing the dam was abandoned in 1896 as the local officers of both the Public Works and Revenue Departments were of opinion that the scheme was useless and unremunerative.

(c) Yes.

(d) No.

DAM OR TANK AT JASHI.

* Mr. R. G. SOMAN (Satara District) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is true that a scheme of constructing a dam or a tank at Jashi in Man taluka of the Satara district was under contemplation some years ago and that the estimates were prepared of the approximate cost of this scheme ?

(b) What was the total cost estimated ?

(c) What were the grounds for abandoning this scheme ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR : (a and b) The probability of the scheme of constructing a tank at Jashi in the Man taluka being a suitable one or otherwise was considered in the year 1900-1901 and a rough project for the dam waste weir only amounting to Rs. 98,418 was prepared, but it required certain modifications.

(c) No further action was taken in the matter of revising the estimate as the scheme was considered to be impracticable. This work which was also entered in the Famine Programme in 1901 was subsequently struck off as the catchment required for this tank would cut off a large portion of the catchment of the Mhaswad tank.

DISMISSAL OF CLERKS FROM SATARA REGISTRATION OFFICE.

* Mr. R. G. SOMAN (Satara District) : Will Government be pleased to state (a) Whether it is a fact that owing to the introduction of the photo-copying system in the registration offices of the Satara district, the services of eleven copying clerks from eleven registration offices of the district have been dispensed with ?

(b) If so, in how many out of these cases piece-workers have been appointed to act for these copying clerks ?

(c) What is the period of the service of each of those clerks whose services have been dispensed with ?

(d) Is it true that the services of seven out of these eleven clerks were dispensed with at the time of the abolition of the village registration offices ?

*This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI : (a) Five clerks were discharged on account of the introduction of the photo-copying system in three offices of Satara, Karad and Walva, five clerks were discharged in five offices on account of paucity of work, and one clerk, who had been transferred from the Poona district to the Satara district, was sent back to the Poona district.

(b) In the ten cases referred to above piece-workers and temporary hands have been engaged for a period of three to four months.

(c) A statement* is attached.

(d) Services of six, out of the ten karkuns discharged, had been once before dispensed with owing to the abolition of the Village Registration establishment.

FILLING UP VACANCIES IN THE EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT.

† Mr. R. G. SOMAN (Satara District) : Will Government be pleased to state whether any instructions have been issued by Government to the Director of Public Instruction to give preference to persons whose services have been dispensed with on account of retrenchment since the year 1922 at the time of filling up new vacancies in the Educational Department ?

(b) Whether such preference is given in any other departments of Government in favour of persons whose services have been so dispensed with at the time of filling up new vacancies ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : (a) The Director of Public Instruction has been instructed that employees under him whose services were dispensed with owing to retrenchment should be given the first refusal of any post which might fall vacant.

(b) All Heads of offices under the Local Government, including the Secretariat Departments, have been directed to consider the claims of retrenched Government servants for any vacancies which then existed or which occurred within three months after the date of the orders, and to make appointments from their ranks, whenever this could suitably be done. These orders were given effect to generally in all Government offices wherever suitable occasions arose.

Mr. R. G. SOMAN : Have those instructions been issued now, or were they issued at the time when retrenchments took place ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : I cannot give the honourable member the exact date, but if he will give notice, I shall find out.

Mr. P. G. JOSHI : Is the word "refusal" in part (a) of the reply properly printed, or was some other word necessary there ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : I think it is right.

Mr. P. G. JOSHI : Are there any instances in which these employees have been re-engaged ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : I think there must be some. If the honourable member will kindly give notice, I shall find out.

* Vide Appendix 45.

† This question was asked at the meeting held in July 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

SEPARATE SCHOOLS FOR DEPRESSED CLASSES.

* Mr. A. N. SURVE (Bombay City, North): (a) Will Government be pleased to state on what principles the depressed classes have been given separate schools in rural areas?

(b) Did the Mahar population of Mithabao, taluka Devgad, district Ratnagiri, apply for a separate school?

(c) If so, has their request been complied with? If not, why not?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: (a) Separate schools for the depressed classes are opened when it is found that a demand exists for them, provided suitable accommodation is available, an attendance of at least 20 children of school-going age is likely to be forthcoming, and funds permit.

(b) and (c) The answer to (b) is in the negative.

GOVERNMENT CONTRIBUTION TO URDU SCHOOLS.

* Mr. A. N. SURVE (Bombay City, North): Will Government be pleased to state—

(1) How many Urdu schools have been opened by them in the Bombay Division at their own expense?

(2) Is it a fact that in the districts of Ratnagiri and Kolaba all the Urdu schools have been built by private enterprise?

(3) Is it a fact that Government allowed the public in the district of Ratnagiri to conduct some Urdu schools only when they had constructed buildings for the purpose?

(4) Is it a fact that the late Minister of Education (Dr. Paranjpye) informed the Urdu school proprietors of Phurus, taluka Khed, Ratnagiri district, that they would not get permission to introduce Urdu standards VI and VII in the school unless they had a building worth Rs. 10,000?

(5) How many Urdu schools conducted by the local board in the Bombay Division have been granted rents by Government for the accommodation of buildings?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: (1) Government have opened two Central Urdu schools, one in Kolaba and the other in Ratnagiri.

(2) No.

(3) In opening new schools, preference is generally given to villages which provide suitable rent-free quarters for the school, and in accordance with this principle, Urdu schools were given to Mahomedan villages in the Ratnagiri district which provided suitable buildings.

(4) There is no information on the subject on the records of Government.

(5) Rents paid by District Local Boards for school buildings are included in the expenditure on which the Provincial grant is based.

*This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

RESTORATION OF TALUKDARS TO FORMER POSITION.

The THAKOR OF AMOD on behalf of the Thakor of Kerwada (Gujarat Sardars and Inamdars): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they are aware that the Honourable Mr. Reeves definitely stated at the time of the introduction of the Talukdars Act, 1862, to restore the talukdars to their former position, and gave an assurance that their jama would be reduced when they were free from debt?

(b) Do Government intend to fulfil the assurance thus given both as regards the restoration of the talukdars to their former position and the reduction of their jama, and, if so, when?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: In introducing the "Bill for the restoration of the Girassias in the Ahmedabad Collectorate and for their relief from debt", the Honourable Mr. Reeves explained that the British Government had refused to recognize the Girassias as holding any higher status than that of a hereditary leaseholder whose position was little better than that of a tenant-at-will dependent on the pleasure of Government and stated that it was the duty of the British Government to do its utmost to restore the Talukdars so far as possible to the position in which they were found at the cession of the Ahmedabad district by the Mahrattas, to declare them to be proprietors and to lower their taxes.

(b) The assurances then given were fulfilled in the following ways:—

(1) The old status of the talukdars was restored to them by the declaration made in section 20 of Act VI of 1862 that "the talukdar shall be the absolute proprietor of his said landed estates as regards succession to, and possession, management and transfer of, the same, subject to such land tax as the Governor in Council may be pleased to reserve."

(2) The reduction of the jama has been effected by the abandonment of the old practice of basing Government demand upon the actual collections or rentals of the talukdar and by the introduction of a new policy of basing the demand upon the valuations determined by regular survey and settlement operations.

CUSTOM LINE IN DHOLKA TALUKA.

* Mr. G. I. PATEL (Ahmedabad Millowners' Association): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether their attention has been drawn to the articles in the Navjivan of the 15th June and the Bombay Chronicle of the 30th June headed "Custom line in Dholka Taluka" complaining of the hardships in traffic caused to agriculturists and other people of the Dholka taluka and particularly to the inhabitants of Shiyal, Bagodra, Dingda and Kanakpura?

(b) Will Government be pleased to place on the table a list of roads with points of custom restrictions and distances between different gateways?

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

(c) Do Government intend to take any action with regard to the grievances described in the above article ?

(d) Is it a fact that the chowkidars recruited from the Bhil population of the Idar State are provided with rifles which they make use of in hunting hares and deer ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : (a), (c) and (d) Already answered.*

(b) The list† furnishing the requisite information is put up.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Government Bills.

(BILL No. II OF 1925.) A BILL FURTHER TO AMEND THE INDIAN STAMP ACT, 1899, IN ITS APPLICATION TO THE PRESIDENCY OF BOMBAY.

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE : Mr. President, I rise to ask for the first reading of Bill† No. II of 1925, a Bill further to amend the Indian Stamp Act, 1899, in its application to the Presidency of Bombay. Sir, this bill has behind it a history of some interest. It is a bill which concerns primarily the city of Bombay, and secondarily other important towns. So far as regards the city of Bombay, the House will be interested to learn that some three years ago, in 1922, the corporation considered the introduction of a similar bill, for the purpose of giving revenue to the city of Bombay. That was strongly urged upon the corporation by the Municipal Commissioner, it was considered by their committee, and finally, after the approval of the corporation, a bill on those lines was submitted to Government. Government, however, came to the conclusion that this source of revenue, which has been assigned to the provincial Government under the Government of India Act and the rules thereunder, could not be delegated to the corporation of Bombay, and they have now considered that the necessities of the financial condition of the Bombay presidency require them to bring forward this demand for additional revenue, and to ask that this House would give their approval to an Act which will enable us to obtain money on the transfers of land in the principal cities of this presidency. I might refer the House to the statement of objects and reasons, which is a brief document and which is before honourable members, and, with your permission, Sir, I will read it. It says :

First Reading.

“The Municipal Corporation of the City of Bombay and all municipalities receive considerable subventions from Government in respect of their expenditure on education, hospitals, sanitation and such other purposes. This expenditure is growing rapidly and with the movement in favour of compulsory education will grow still faster with a consequent increase in the demands for assistance from Provincial revenues.

“In order to enable Government to meet these demands, it is necessary to secure further revenue from those areas which will chiefly benefit from the expenditure.

“The tax now proposed is in the form of Stamp Duty; it involves no additional expense in collection; it will be paid by people at the most convenient time when the transaction taxed places them in funds, and the incidence is restricted to a small percentage of the price obtained by the transaction.”

Now, Sir, we have had, in the last three days, a very full discussion on the financial position of the Government, and I trust that the House

*Printed in the 4th list of Questions and Answers at the last session.

†Vide Appendix 43. ‡Vide Appendix B.

[Mr. H. S. Lawrence]

is now fully appraised of the major facts of their financial position. We have prepared a budget for the approval of this House which exceeds the revenue anticipated by Rs. 41 lakhs. We have shown in that Blue Book, which is before honourable members, that the increased expenditure of the coming year is almost entirely expended on transferred departments on measures for the promotion of the well-being of the people in public health, in hospitals, in roads, in water supply, and so forth. I would remind the House that we propose to increase the grant to the district local boards for roads from Rs. 11 lakhs to Rs. 18½ lakhs. We are providing boring plant to the extent of over Rs. 4 lakhs for giving greater facilities to the cultivators for improving wells. We are giving additional grants to local boards for water supply exceeding one lakh of rupees. We propose to give a grant to the Poona city municipality which is in addition to the grant previously given of over 2½ lakhs for the Poona drainage scheme. We propose to give a grant to the Kapadwanj municipality in the Kaira district of one lakh of rupees for the water supply. We are revising the grant to dispensaries by an addition of 90 thousand rupees. In education we have provided building grants of over five lakhs of rupees. I have only noted in this brief list the larger special grants which we hope to be in a position to provide in the coming year.

Then in particular in regard to larger towns we are faced with a very large demand from the Bombay municipality for further expenditure on primary education. We are asked to give a large grant for hospitals, important hospitals in Ahmedabad. I think the total is over 7½ lakhs of rupees for that scheme alone.

Now in the discussion yesterday, Sir, certain honourable members used an argument which suggests that this House would be foolish to give any additional taxation at all on the ground that it would induce the Government of India to consider that we had no real grievance under the Meston Settlement. I think the whole House is unanimous that the Meston Settlement is grossly unjust to this presidency. On that point there is no difference of opinion between the Bombay Government and this House. We do not agree with those honourable members who think that we can in any way advance our claim by refusing to do what we can to help ourselves under the existing financial arrangements. We do not think that the Government of India or the Secretary of State or any superior authority would look with any great favour on a presidency which sits down, folds its hands and says "We will not do anything whatever to assist our poorer classes; we will not provide any more funds until we have a revision of this settlement." I quite agree that that argument and that that kind of conduct would appeal to a certain class of mind. I do not in the least deny that it is a plausible argument, but I ask this House to consider seriously whether that is the most reasonable attitude to take, whether it is an attitude that would commend the cause of this presidency to other outside impartial critics. If on the other hand we can go before any arbitrator or before any tribunal of revision and point out that we have been making every effort to meet our needs and that we realize that we are starved in our necessary revenue, but that so far as is possible within the restricted resources available to us we have done our very best for the people committed to our charge, surely, Sir, that is a far more generous attitude to take. Not only is it more generous but it is an attitude that would command more sympathy in such a tribunal of revision and will satisfy that tribunal that they are dealing with earnest statesmen and not with people who sulk and refuse to play their part.

I have no doubt, Sir, that in this discussion the question of our balances, will again come forward. I wish it were an easier matter to explain, but as obviously in certain minds there is still some misapprehension I would ask your permission, Sir, to mention some of the essential factors. It is perfectly true, as one honourable member pointed out, that we have a larger balance than other presidencies. It is perhaps not known to this House that the Meston Committee when considering the conditions of every presidency put on record that there is no province so exposed to the ravages of famine as the Bombay Presidency. There is no province where it was necessary to reserve so large a sum in balance to meet the needs of famine administration. No doubt, Sir, to meet the needs of expenditure on famine administration we have now built up a fund of nearly a crore and a half. But, Sir, in two years of terrible distress in this presidency we had actually to pay out on famine administration a sum of $7\frac{1}{2}$ crores. We have every reason to believe that owing to the advance of the people in knowledge and experience so large an expenditure may not fall on us again, but still that expenditure in those two years was five times our present balance set apart for famine. We do not think it is safe to depend on the famine balance alone; we must continue to add to that famine balance for at the time when famine affects this presidency we not only have to spend money in vast quantities for the relief of the poor and afflicted but at the same time we have to abstain from collecting our land revenue, and we have had a decrease, in our land revenue of as much as two crores of rupees in a single year. Therefore over and above the sum which we have to provide for expenditure on famine, we must keep a sum in balance to meet the case when our revenues fall off or else we should not be able to meet the daily necessities of ordinary administration.

We are moving towards provincial autonomy and there is a general desire throughout India and in all provinces that the revenues and expenditure of each province should be cut off from the Imperial exchequer and in Bombay I believe that desire has found expression more than once. If we are to stand on our own legs we must have a regular balance at our credit to enable us to meet all the necessities that arise in the course of the year. The revenue comes in in certain months, but the expenditure goes on all the time. We cannot keep a small balance and be faced with a deficit in part of the year. We must have enough money with our bankers to meet our demands. Out of the 369 lakhs with which it is proposed that we should conclude next year, 148 lakhs is Famine Insurance Fund and in the balance we have a sum of 13 lakhs which is borrowed money. We have to pay annually 29 lakhs to the Government of India for the redemption of our loan account, and the remaining balance is below two crores of rupees which is the minimum sum that has for several years now been recognised in this House as the necessary balance which we must maintain against eventualities. Our inflated balance can thus be fairly explained. It is not possible from this balance to carry on when our annual expenditure exceeds the revenue. It is one of the first principles of financial management that we must have a budget in which the revenue is greater by a sufficiently large amount than the expenditure. Some honourable members have accused Government of a spendthrift policy, because they expend all the revenue whatever it may be. Whenever we have increased revenue from any source the demands that are pressed on us from every quarter of the presidency for improvements are so enormous that it is difficult to decide the rival claims, the superior claims of one area over another area. There is nothing spendthrift in deciding, that you have now a small sum of money, to improve the hospitals in Ahmedabad or build causeways in Kanara or Dharwar. I have given a couple of instances which are recent. The demands are so urgent and so impetuous that any money we have in hand is at once claimed. I do urge this House to realise that the Government are doing their best with the funds at their disposal and they are entirely expended for the benefit of the community.

Now, Sir, coming to the bill, it is a very brief one and requires very little detailed explanation. It is in the form of an amendment to the Stamp Act of 1899 and it raises the duty payable on instruments relating to immovable property only. It raises the duty by roughly 2 per cent. The revenue that will be realised therefrom amounts to a sum of 12 lakhs of rupees from the city of Bombay and a sum of 6 lakhs from the other principal cities in the presidency. We propose that the bill in the form in which it is put before you should apply to any other municipal area to which this Government may by notification extend the provisions of this Act. That is probably the most convenient form in which it can be placed. We propose to apply it in the first instance to bigger municipalities. Subsequently it would be possible to apply it elsewhere after taking this House into consultation. We do not state that it should apply indiscriminately to all places. The exact form in which this extension should apply may be settled after discussion by this House. Sir, with this explanation, I desire to ask for the first reading of Bill No. II of 1925.

Mr. P. G. JOSHI : I rise, Sir, to oppose the first reading of this bill. Before honourable members make up their mind as to how to vote

.....

Mr. R. G. PRADHAN : I rise to a point of information. There is an amendment of which I have given notice.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : The amendment is that after clause 2, add the following :

"3. The additional revenue that may be derived under clause 2 of the Act, shall be earmarked for expenditure on education, medical relief and sanitation."

[The President]

The difficulty in all these cases has been to determine what is an amendment of principle and what is an amendment of detail. At the first reading an amendment of principle alone is allowed. At the second reading only amendments of detail are allowed. The principle, as far as I understand, of the bill is that additional taxation should be imposed and that it should be in the nature of an increased levy on stamp duty. The question is whether you can impose by legislation the condition proposed. This question was fully discussed in this House on the occasion of the Entertainments Duty Act and I hold a ruling from Sir Narayan Chandavarkar who decided the issue as shown in the proceedings. The amendment proposed at the second reading was by Mr. Gandhi to the following effect :

“The whole of the balance of the money so received, after deducting the cost of collection thereof, shall be allotted every year for providing for the elementary primary education in the presidency.”

Honourable members will observe that that amendment is on the same lines as the amendment now proposed, and Sir Narayan ruled that you cannot move it. He said :

“I must declare it out of order, because it requires the recommendation of His Excellency the Governor as it is a motion for appropriation.”

I recognise that the question is not free from doubt. The difficulty really arises because the honourable member has given notice of his amendment on the occasion of the first reading, whereas it appears to me the proper time for his amendment is the second reading. However that may be the question whether an amendment is one of principle or detail has always caused much difficulty. The House has, however, decided in favour of this procedure, and I have no option but to rule the amendment out of order at this stage.

Mr. P. G. JOSHI (East Khandesh District) : Sir, before honourable members make up their minds how to vote upon these additional taxation proposals, they have to realise, Sir, the financial condition of this presidency. They have got also to correctly appreciate the deficit and they have to find out what is the excess of the budgetted expenditure over the current year's expenditure. Next, they have also to satisfy themselves about the bona fides of Government, and they must convince themselves that all sources of retrenchment have been exhausted. Thirdly, the House has got to decide the justification or otherwise of these taxation proposals. While considering all these points we come back to the subject of the budget and the subject of retrenchment. The primary purpose of a solvent budget is that we must reduce our expenditure to the natural resources of the province. This is a beautiful and sound dictum and has been laid down by the Honourable the Finance Member in the speech which he delivered in the year 1923. I find, Sir, that he has again repeated that statement to-day. But if we consider this year's budget, we will find that he is not at all consistent with the dictum which he has laid down. I feel, Sir, that instead of giving us a solvency budget, he has succeeded in giving us an insolvency budget. I am reminded in this connection, Sir, of a Sanskrit quotation which speaks of a man who began to paint the likeness of a beautiful goddess and ended by painting a monkey. Sir, if we want to find out and appreciate the correct financial position of the presidency, we have first of all got to know what the actual income of this presidency is. For the next year the budgetted income is 16,16 lakhs. If from this figure we deduct the development interest figures, then the actual figure of the income for the next year is 15,68 lakhs. We all know that finance ministers are often driven to different devices and several shifts in framing the budget. We know that overestimating the revenue is also one of their devices, as also the showing of a small deficit. We have been told by the honourable the Finance Secretary in his note that our finances are stationary. If he is correct, then we have got to take the current year's income to be the normal revenue on which to base our criticisms upon estimates. The current year's revenue is something like 14 crores, and that is really the revenue on which we ought to base our expenditure for the next year. Now, Sir, the expenditure figures that have been given in the Blue Book referring to the next year are 16,67 lakhs. If we deduct from this the development figures under Debt Services, then the budgetted expenditure for the next year we get as 16,09 lakhs. I am a country lawyer and I have not the extensive experience of financial matters which the Honourable the Finance Member possesses. But I find great difficulty in understanding the figures of expenditure which have been given to us as 15,19 lakhs on page 5 of his budget speech. I would like to know how the budgetted expenditure for the next year is given as 15,19 lakhs. If we take into consideration the normal revenue of the presidency to be 14 crores, then the actual deficit we have to face is 2,66 lakhs. We have been told that the actual deficit is only 41 lakhs. I refuse to accept that position, and I am afraid that the deficit is far more serious than what it has been represented to be. Then, if we compare the next year's expenditure with the figures for 1922-23, namely, 13,11 lakhs, then there is an excess of something like 3,66 lakhs. Now, Sir, when we have to face such a large deficit as I have shown, we have to find out whether all the sources of retrenchment at the disposal of Government have been exhausted and whether Government have proved to the satisfaction of the House their bona fides in matters of retrenchment. Till then, all talk about new taxation is absurd. You will see, Sir, that our difficulties are not due to the non-expansion of revenue but they are due to lavish expenditure. Our administration is extremely costly, notwithstanding the declaration of the Honourable the Finance Member that our administration is the cheapest in the world. In support of my contention I will quote an authority of the position of Lord Meston. Lord Meston has stated in the course of the enquiry which he held :

"The cost of administration in Bombay is considerably higher in most departments than in the neighbouring provinces, with the almost sole exception of Burma, where conditions are wholly unusual. We have been working throughout on a table which shows that taking all the ordinary business of administration, the land revenue, the courts, the police, the medical, and so on, Bombay spends Rs. 5·6 per head of its population whereas Madras next door spends only Rs. 2·5 and Bengal 1·7."

[Mr. P. G. Joshi]

At another place he has stated :

“The cost of Bombay police is *680 per head⁷ of population, that is about 11 annas per head, whereas in Madras it is *335 and in Bengal it is *312, in each case a little less than half of the Bombay figure.”

Since Lord Meston had made this declaration our expenditure has enormously increased. We have heard some interesting figures yesterday about the increase in crime in this presidency as compared with the figures of crime in England. I think, Sir, that if those figures provide anything, they provide more an inference that the supervising officers of our Police Department are more lax and negligent than an argument that more police is necessary or more expenditure on our Police Department is necessary. But, Sir, so far as regards retrenchment proposals we find that nothing practically is done. The Honourable the Finance Member some years back wanted a clear guidance from this House to threaten the spending departments, the Ministers as well as the Members of the Executive Council, with the displeasure of this House. He wanted a clear guidance from this House. I am glad he wants such a clear guidance from this House. We have shown, Sir, that there are so many sources in which retrenchment can be effected. Year after year it has been suggested that two posts of the Executive Councillors ought to go, but nothing has been done since the suggestion was first made. Then, Sir, the Ministers also will do well in forgoing some of their salaries and, if they do it, they would be earning the blessings of the ryots by whom they have been elected. The all-India Services also, Sir, are a drag on the financial resources of this province. We have been told, Sir, that the expenditure on the all-India Services is Rs. 97 lakhs. I find that there is some mistake in the figure given by the Honourable the Finance Member. We were told, Sir, by the Honourable Mr. Lawrence in his speech in 1921 that the cost of the all-India Services was Rs. 97 lakhs and this year he also repeats that the cost is Rs. 97 lakhs. I think, Sir, he must be wrongsomewhere ; he is wrong either in the 1921 speech or in this year's speech. According to me, the cost of the all-India Services will be something like Rs. 1,07 lakhs. While on this point, Sir, I would like to bring one point to the notice of this honourable House. This province is under a statutory obligation to engage the services of a certain number of all-India Service men. But at present we are employing a number of all-India Service men in excess of the statutory obligation. It is quite true we cannot touch the pay of these all-India Service men, but it is quite possible for us to make retrenchments if the Bombay Government are serious about it. If the Government of Bombay make up their minds to send back some of these men to the Government of India, I think we will be saving something like six lakhs of rupees per year. Then, we have been told, Sir, that the Meston Settlement is very unjust. In this connection, I should like to say one thing, that our contribution to the Central Government is something like Rs. 56 lakhs. I do not know whether any effort has been made by this Government to request the Government of India to waive this contribution from this Presidency. I think, Sir, that the Bengal Government has made such a request and their contribution has been waived. I think, if the Bombay Government make out a very strong case before the Government of India, this contribution will certainly be waived.

Then, Sir, if we take all these things into consideration, the large amount of the deficit, the failure of the Government to make retrenchment, then we see, Sir, that these taxation proposals are not at all necessary. All the elected members of this House have come here on the express understanding that the present taxation will be reduced. They have come here not to sanction any additional taxation, and if Government have not been able to manage within the Rs. 15 crores which the ryot is giving to them, I do not think, as my honourable friend Mr. Nariman has suggested, they have proved their capacity to rule us. I think the taxation proposals put forward by the Honourable the Finance Member ought not to be accepted and I therefore oppose the first reading of this bill.

Mr. A. N. SURVE (Bombay City, North): Mr. President, the bill which is before us strikes me as an attempt on the part of the benches opposite to follow the principle of "divide and rule". Sir, here a clear attempt has been made of setting the rural areas against the urban areas. The mofussil members must have noticed during the past three or four days that a strenuous effort is being made to impress upon their minds that the urban areas are swallowing up all the revenues which the rural areas contribute. Sir, a more untrue statement could not be made. May I just now point out that the presidency town alone contributes its share, more than its legitimate share, to the provincial exchequer? Why, Sir, take the stamp duty alone. According to the latest report, you will find that the proceeds of the judicial stamps amounted to about Rs. 80 lakhs, and out of that, Rs. 38 lakhs was given by Bombay city alone. Just think of a small area hardly exceeding 23 square miles contributing nearly 48 per cent. of the total revenue in one item alone! Take the excise. Even there you will find that this city has been contributing more than its share if you look at it from the basis of area or from the basis of population. And still an attempt is being made to show "Oh, lots of money is going to be spent for the welfare only of these urban areas". Sir, may I tell the benches opposite what is the native population of this city of Bombay? If they refer to the census report, they will find that out of the 12 lakhs hardly 2 lakhs are the people who are natives of this town and island of Bombay. All the rest of the population is drawn from the mofussil area, and if they swallow up any of the benefits which this beneficent Government showers upon them, they are showering them upon people who come to Bombay to earn their living from the rural areas. Therefore, to tell this House that the urban areas are receiving an undue share of the benefits is an incorrect statement.

Then, Sir, let us go to another point. The notions of jurisprudence are that the transfer of property must be unhampered, must be free, otherwise the commerce of a country is restricted. On account of this fact, jurisprudence has introduced various devices. There is the law of perpetuity and various other devices. What is at the bottom of all these things? It is in the interest of a country that the transfer of property shall be as free as it possibly could be made. What are Government trying to do? They are trying to curtail the transfer as much as it lies in their power to do. If you are going to tax it more and more, what will be the effect? The effect naturally would be that there will be less changes in the ownership of property. Sir, what is sauce for the goose must be sauce for the gander. If you restrict the people by such devices as the law of perpetuity and other measures restricting the ownership of property, must you not equally be bound by that very same rule, that by restricting property, you must not try to gain more revenue?

The next point is, what is the time that Government have selected for the imposition of this extra taxation? We have been passing through trade depression for the past four or five years. Year after year, Government reports are telling us that the trade depression is reflected very seriously upon the revenues of Government. In the latest Stamp Report you will come across a statement, where the Collector of Bombay says that even now the pre-war figure of 1914 is not reached. Every year the stamp revenue is declining, and still we are going headlong to perpetuate that mistake. We had introduced an additional burden by way of increasing the general stamps, and we are not yet out of the evil effects of that, and here Government want to try to perpetuate that mistake.

The next point is, there is a technical flaw also. So far as I understand the rules of Scheduled Taxes, I find that Government is not entitled to appropriate this source of revenue. I think the land tax is included in the second schedule. If you will refer to the land taxes rules which are in the Manual, you will find that in the second schedule land tax is included, and that source is given away to local bodies. Now, if you are going to deprive the local bodies of this source of taxation and you throw upon them the burden of additional educational expenses, wherefrom are they to meet it? Various local bodies in the Deccan had presented, especially municipal bodies, addresses to His Excellency the Governor when he was on tour, and they demanded larger grants for education. And what was the reply that they received? I think the reply is of the Government, and that reply is far from encouraging. Government expects the local bodies to finance it from their revenues, and, at the same time, it is crippling their sources of revenue by appropriating this tax which really and rightly belongs to the local bodies.

The next point is about the proportion of expenditure that is fixed by the Primary Education Act. So far as the extra expenditure is concerned, Government have definitely made a statutory provision that no local body shall expect anything in excess of the obligation undertaken by Government. If that is the case, if Government is not going to give help to the local bodies, then how are the local bodies to undertake their schemes of expansion of primary education?

[Mr. A. N. Surve]

Then I think some honourable member might perhaps think "Well, let us at least impose conditions upon Government and grant them this new taxation. Let us say that, provided the money is earmarked for education, there would be no objection to our sanctioning the taxation". So far as I think, this sort of argument will not do, because that argument was once raised in this House some years ago, and at that time we were told that, under the Fundamental Rules, no source of revenue can be earmarked for any particular object. The result will be that, even if we sanction this additional taxation, it would be a mistake on our part to suppose that we would get the benefit of the tax for educational purposes.

The next point is that this is a money bill ; we may accept it or reject at any stage. Some honourable members might say " Let us at least pass its first reading and let it go to the select committee ". That sort of argument, too, is not a good argument, because when we once entrust a bill to the select committee, it means that we believe ourselves that there is something in the bill which should go to the select committee. When a bill goes to a select committee, what does the committee do ? It does not consider the principle whether fresh taxation should be imposed or not, it would only concern itself with the provisions that are in the bill. Therefore, my suggestion is, let us not allow the passing of even the first reading of the bill. In these circumstances, I find it my duty to oppose the first reading of this bill.

Dr. M. B. VELKAR (Bombay City, South): Sir, I rise to oppose the first reading of the bill, and in doing so, I want to tell the opposite benches once for all that this House is in no mood to allow even a single pie of additional taxation to be thrown on the already over-burdened backs of the people of this presidency. If we just look to the speeches that were delivered by this side of the House during the course of the budget discussion for the last three days, we will see that there was one keynote struck, and that was that there ought to be greater retrenchment, but no taxation. I find, after the presentation of this bill by the Honourable the Finance Member, that all those speeches have really been wasted, and the Honourable the Finance Member has the temerity to come forward and ask for fresh taxation. He says that Government want more money and Government want to tax the people of this presidency. I wonder, after a deficit budget and after finding out that there was no money in hand, that Government should have the temerity to come forward with proposals to give effect to the Lee Commission's recommendations. With regard to the Lee Commission's recommendations, what was the argument that was brought forward by the Honourable the Finance Member ? He said that, in order to keep these special services contented, in order to keep them efficient, a price has to be paid. Certainly, a price has to be paid for duty done ; but when ? When we attach a certain value to that duty. But we find, after many years' experience that the value which the Services had attached to themselves is not any more there. We have passed the stage when these officers were necessary for the preservation of law and order in this country. Now, Indians are prepared to take up these high posts. Therefore, the Lee recommendations were not proper recommendations, and Government ought not to have come forward at this stage with proposals for fresh taxation when they have a deficit budget. Another point that was made out by the Honourable the Finance Member in support of his argument was that the framework of these special services ought to be preserved in order that the nation-building departments may advance on proper lines. When I was listening to that particular part of his speech which he delivered the other day, when he presented the budget, I was reminded of my old days when I was a student in school when, times out of number, it was being dinned into our young minds that law and order were necessary, that security and peace were necessary for the prosperity of this country. What do we find after so many years' experience? Peace, there is; security, there is; but it is the security of decay and the peace of death. Law, order, stability, is necessary, but it ought to be the stability of health and life, and not of death and disease. As has been pointed out, that state of things continues to go on. The wealth of the country is not increasing owing to lack of industries and lack of encouragement to agriculture. When we find this state of things I do not understand why so much expenditure should be incurred for law and order.

My honourable friend, Mr. Joshi, pointed out that there are so many other resources. Government can give effect to so many recommendations of the retrenchment committee. The other day the honourable member from Ratnagiri pointed out how they should retrench the expenses. He said to Government "Cut off half of your establishments in this country". He said "Trust the people more and more and give them Village Panchayats". In regard to this I will point out that though the Village Panchayats Act was passed four years ago, Government have not introduced as many panchayats as they ought to have done. The people do not feel any enthusiasm for these panchayats because they have not conferred any judicial powers on these panchayats. In Madras they have entrusted the panchayats with the power of trying judicial cases and village panchayats are being substituted for civil courts. I will not take the time of the House in going into details on that particular question, but I may tell this House that by introducing village panchayats in Madras half the cases of judicial courts are being tried by village panchayats, and thus the cost of those courts is saved. Therefore I submit that this House should not sanction any more taxation and that the House must show in a clear and emphatic manner that it will never encourage any such attempt on the part of Government.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR (Bombay University): Sir, I rise to oppose the first reading of this bill. In so doing, I shall leave aside, for the moment, general considerations based upon the budget, particularly as to the nature of the deficit and the large balances in the hands of the Honourable the Finance Member, as also other considerations making out a case for additional taxation. My present purpose is more humble, and that is to ask the attention of my honourable friends to the provisions of the bill with a view that they may be able to judge the bill on its merits.

[Mr. M. R. Jayakar]

This bill is intended—and I am very glad that the honourable non-Brahman member for Bombay city North (Mr. Surve) saw through the device of this bill—that it was intended to raise additional taxation on a vicious principle, which he aptly described as “divide and rule”—a very strong expression indeed but perfectly justified by the measure. This bill is intended to be applied to the presidency of Bombay in order to provide an additional levy of a duty on the transfer of land primarily in the city of Bombay. But, the House will note that the bill is not restricted to the city of Bombay, but is to apply also to all municipal areas throughout the presidency. Therefore if there are any honourable members present here who think that it is going to be applied to the opulent city of Bombay only, they are mistaken. The Government has power in this bill by notification to make any municipal area in the presidency liable to the additional levy. The bill is stated to extend to the whole of the presidency of Bombay and may be made applicable to other municipal areas than the city of Bombay. Therefore let not this feeling arise in the minds of mofussil members that this is a measure only for drawing more money out of the coffers of opulent Bombay landlords, and landowners. The sword of Damocles will hang over the head of all municipal areas. In taxing municipal areas for the benefit of the entire presidency, the bill sets up a conflict between municipal areas and mofussil places. Therefore I feel that the description of this bill which the honourable member Mr. Surve has given—he is generally very guarded and discreet in his language—characterising it as an attempt to divide and rule is justifiable. I want honourable members to bear another circumstance in mind. It is a sister bill to the Court-fees Act Amendment Bill which follows. It was once thrown out last year, mainly with the help of the mofussil members. It is re-proposed this year and it represents a double-barrelled arrangement justifying the argument that not only Bombay but even the mofussil areas are going to be taxed. If Bombay people prove recalcitrant they will be told that the mofussil likewise is going to be taxed, and vice versa. I ask honourable members to be cautious in accepting that argument of the Government benches.

On the plain provisions of this bill, it is a very objectionable measure and for this reason. If honourable members will permit a little excursion in this department, a little research, I may tell them that an Act was passed by the Indian Legislature in 1899 which fixed a certain ad valorem levy of fees on the total cost of the property conveyed. Honourable members will be surprised to hear the comparative figures in that and the present enactment. I just give them a few instances. If the value of a conveyance exceeds 200 but does not exceed 300 rupees, the 1899 Act provides that a stamp fee of 3 rupees should be levied. In 1922 our predecessors here under certain powers given by the Act authorised the Bombay Government to pass a measure which became Act in April 1922, that is about two years ago. Government had some difficulty, even then, in inducing that House constituted as it then was, to accept the levy raised which was in this particular instance increased to Rs. 4-8. That is the Rs. 3 of 1899 were raised to Rs. 4-8-0. The duty on 300 to 400 rupees worth of property was originally Rs. 4 and it was raised to Rs. 6. In this way it went on in proportional rise until it came to a general provision, under which every conveyance over 500 exceeding 1 thousand which originally was charged 5 rupees duty was raised to Rs. 7-8-0 in 1922. Even that measure caused considerable hesitation in the minds of the House as it was constituted then. Now, the Honourable the Finance Member comes before the House with a proposal which practically means, and I want the issue to be clearly understood by my honourable friends, that the original Rs. 3 duty which was raised to Rs. 4-8-0 in 1922 is now going to be raised to Rs. 8-8-0. Mark the original Rs. 3 and the now proposed Rs. 8-8-0. The original Rs. 4 duty was changed to 6 in 1922 and is now going to be raised to 12. The original duty in 1899 was 10. In 1922 it was raised to 15 and it is now proposed to be raised to Rs. 33 which works out at 230 per cent. on the basis of 1899.

The Honourable the Finance Member with his usual tact has said that the proposed measure provides for a rise of 2 per cent. only. Yes; on the value of property. But we are entitled to examine by how much it is a rise on the basis of 1899 or that of 1922. Taking that as the basis, I take the liberty of pointing out to the Honourable the Finance Member that on the basis of the duty of 1899, the valuation proposed by this bill has risen by more than 230 per cent. There is no doubt therefore that it is too big a jump which the legislature is asked to take. I may point out to my honourable friend opposite that simultaneously with Bombay, in the same year 1922—it is a strange coincidence—practically in the same month Bengal and Madras passed similar amendments of the Stamp Act; and yet Bengal and Madras have accepted the valuation basis of 1922 and have not thought of raising it for the general benefit of the presidency. We want to know from the Honourable the Finance Member the reasons why he is proposing such a large jump over the basis of 1922. Then we are told, in persuasive terms, that the revenue raised in this manner is going to be devoted to the demands of the nation-building departments. As has been pointed out by previous speakers, this is only a pious hope. In view of the ruling given by the Honourable the President, the revenue cannot be earmarked for any particular purpose, and the House therefore has no effective means by which Government can be compelled to apply the proceeds of this taxation to educational purposes.

Let us pursue the argument advanced by the Honourable the Finance Member. He says that he is taking all this trouble in the interest of municipal areas. The simple answer to that is: Why not then leave the matter into the hands of the municipal areas? If Government are taking all this trouble and odium for the benefit of the municipal areas in the mofussil, why should they not leave it to them? Why this circuitous way of first getting the money with one hand on behalf of the municipal areas and then with the other hand giving out doles to municipalities? As the honourable member Mr. A. N. Surve pointed out, if all this trouble is going to be taken for the benefit of municipal areas and they are going to be saddled with large obligations in the matter of compulsory primary education, then this additional revenue ought to be left in the hands of the municipal areas themselves.

Apart from general considerations, there is one important aspect which I wish to urge before the House and which several honourable members urged last year when the Court-fees Bill was thrown out. I remember my remarks caused a furor not only in this city and presidency but its reverberation was heard in distant Westminster. That apart, do honourable members think that we ought to allow more money to go into the hands of the Government by way of additional taxation? I put this question especially to the honourable members on my left. In view of the experience we have had during the last one or two years and previously to that also, does the House think that the ways of Government in managing the resources of the province have been so thrifty, so considerate, so careful that we can safely vote additional taxation, and make a present of 42 lakhs to them? I think, not. Apart from details, every honourable member will agree that, whatever else the budget may or may not show, it shows clearly the extreme indebtedness of the presidency, and the extreme extravagance and costliness of this Government. I am surprised that in the same year in which additional taxation is contemplated they have scored to the extent of 9 lakhs in their indecent scramble for salaries made possible by the Lee Commission. These 9 lakhs more have been appropriated towards services which are overpaid. To put the matter graphically, the Government put into the pockets of the services 9 lakhs with the left hand and with the right hand they attempt to lift out of our pockets 41 lakhs. If Government wanted this bill to be passed without objection, it would have been more seemly and decent to postpone this khairat of 9 lakhs till the next year. Then their move would have appeared to us more genuine, more straightforward. They would then have come before the Council with clean hands, if I may say so. 'He who seeks equity must come with clean hands' is an old maxim of British law and I say that Government have not come with clean hands. I may mention here an important matter. Honourable members are aware that the Swaraj party are generally averse to their leader moving any resolutions or asking any questions. But notwithstanding this general rule, I gave notice last time that the Government should not act on the recommendations of the Lee Commission relating to the increase of salaries without giving a chance to this House of having a debate on that question. That resolution was tabled, but it was not reached, which was a misfortune. But it cannot be denied that the Government had notice of that resolution, i.e., of the fact that a large section of the House was desirous of having an opportunity of discussing this question. Government were aware of that in the last term. Notwithstanding that, however, without giving an opportunity to this Council, Government have, may I say surreptitiously, pocketed 9 lakhs this year and propose to pocket 10 lakhs next year.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: Why did you not claim priority for it?

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR: That was not possible. My point is this. I want my honourable friends to understand that we made our position perfectly clear to Government on the question of the Lee Commission proposals that this House wanted an opportunity of having its say. Can anybody deny it? Does Government deny it? (The Honourable Sir Maurice Hayward: Yes; Government deny it.)

Government cannot deny this. There is the resolution to speak for itself. Notwithstanding that, Government have adopted the proposals, and as a matter of fact they have taken the money. This is because we have no control over the purse. And the same year that Government do this, they come with a Syren voice and say "Oh! we have got a deficit of 41 lakhs: we want more money for education, etc." I have very great doubts whether this deficit is not a faked one. But assuming it is not so, this deficit is a very small one, and with some economy it can be avoided. At any rate, the large balances which Government retain in their hand can certainly swallow up this deficit very easily. I therefore want the House to remember that coming as it does in the same year in which Government have taken 9 lakhs in respect of the Lee Commission, the proposal is a tainted one. I ask therefore my honourable friends to oppose the first reading of this bill.

Dr. K. E. DADACHANJI (Bombay City, South): Mr. President, the only test by which we can judge of the justification or otherwise of the imposition of this finance bill on us, is the nature of our closing balance. Unfortunately, Sir, we do not find in the Blue Book what our closing balance was. In the past years, they used to give a resumé of our closed accounts, but in the present book there is no mention of it. But looking at page 20 of the White Book we find that in 1923-24 our closing balance was 5,46 lakhs; in the revised account for the current year it is 4,67 lakhs, and in the budget under consideration it is shown as 3,69 lakhs. The question for consideration now is whether 3,69 lakhs will or will not be sufficient to carry on the administration of the province of Bombay. If it will be sufficient, then, Sir, I do not see any reason why these bills should be imposed on us. In fact, I should think that even if we knock off 69 lakhs out of our present balance, nothing wrong will be done, and no contingency will arise to necessitate the keeping of such a large balance in our hands. Of course, Mr. President, our closing balance is diminishing. But the question is whether 3,69 lakhs is or is not a sufficient balance. It is on this question that we ought to fight out the cause of imposing this additional taxation.

In his speech the Honourable the Finance Member has stated that the city of Bombay which enjoys so many amenities must pay this transfer of property tax. He says that in the vicinity of Bombay there are large roads and large bridges. These are the amenities. We in the Bombay city never wanted them for ourselves. Our own communications, as was pointed out by Mr. Baptista, is more than sufficient for us. We know our requirements: we never wanted additional requirements any more. All these plots of land in the vicinity are now lying idle on account of the depression in trade. We see in the City Improvement Trust people are relinquishing the plots they had already taken up

[Dr. K. E. Dadachanji]

(Maalvi Rafiuddin Ahmad : Parsi colonies being filled). Everywhere, even in Hindu colonies they have given up their plots. Therefore, Sir; there was no necessity of making or constructing a greater Bombay. And then, why should this transfer of property tax be levied on the city of Bombay alone ? Of course other municipal areas will be taken up hereafter.

Then, Sir, I find from the resumé of 15 years' revenue and expenditure given in the graphs that while our revenue has increased by 62 per cent., our expenditure had gone up by 116 per cent., giving a ratio of nearly 1 to 2. In spite of the various retrenchments made by us in the former Council our expenditure still remains so very high. Sir, I would ask for an explanation as to why we cannot manage at present with our closing balance of 3,69 lakhs. I think we can even cut out as I said before 69 lakhs out of this and manage our affairs. We will, then, see next year or the year after, or two years after, whether there is any necessity of bringing a new finance bill. But I do not think, Sir, that at the present moment any case is made out for the bill. I think 3,69 lakhs is sufficient to carry on the government. Sixty-nine lakhs more can be knocked off from that, and even if we have only 3 crores of closing balance, that will be quite sufficient. I will wait for an explanation as to why that sum will not be enough. If no explanation is forthcoming I won't vote for the bill.

Mr. G. WILES : Sir, the effect of the speeches delivered so far has been to continue the budget discussions of the last three days, and therefore I need not make any apology for attempting to answer some of what I may call the budget questions which have been raised.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Budget discussion as affecting the increase of taxation.

Mr. G. WILES : Certainly, Sir. It seems to me to be assumed that because our expenditure has increased steadily as is shown in the statements and graphs put before the House, that means that the Government is a spendthrift Government. I cannot concede, Sir, that the two are synonymous. If there is to be progress expenditure must rise year by year at a steady rate. No one in this House will admit that we can now sit down and say we have reached a stage when we do not want to spend anything more. We are all at one, I believe, as regards that. The question is what the money shall be spent on. It is an axiom that if there is to be progress there must be a steady growth of expenditure. That does not mean that we cannot from time to time take stock of our position, and consolidate, as it were, the position we have won up to date. Nor does it mean that in times of stress or in an emergency such as the sudden rise in the cost of living which has taken place in the course of the last ten years, we cannot reduce our standards. We have definitely reduced what I might call the standard of living in the administration, and the figures of expenditure since 1921, I hold definitely prove that. The point I want to make is that as a whole over a long period steady progress must inevitably mean steady rise in the curve of expenditure. Therefore, it is a mistaken argument to say that because our revenue shows a steady rate of progress therefore we are a spendthrift government.

It is asked what the Finance Department has done and is doing in order to enforce economy. I think it can do no harm if I give away a little State secret, which will illustrate what the Finance Department is doing. As the House is aware, not a single project can be put in the budget until it has been approved and sanctioned by the Finance Department. In the exercise of this function the Finance Department is every day effecting economy. In spite of that this year the sum total of the departmental budgets, after the departments had themselves pruned away items which they considered unwillingly could be postponed, left us in our preliminary budget this year with a deficit of no less than two crores. This does not mean two crores would provide for all the projects which the departments think necessary for their progress. I am referring now only to those items which the Honourable Members and Honourable Ministers were prepared next year to carry out. By strenuous efforts on the part of the Finance Department and Government generally, the deficit has been reduced to the more reasonable sum of Rs. 41 lakhs.

Now, Sir, we are asked—various suggestions have been made here—to answer the question: Where is the money to come from? I have seen it suggested, for instance, that it may be possible to go to the Government of India and ask for a reduction of our contribution. I wish to put before the honourable members the consideration of Devolution Rule 18. If they read that rule and make the calculations necessary, they will find the total contribution from the provinces, which at present stands at something like 980 lakhs, must come down to as small a sum as 380 lakhs before the Bombay presidency is going to get any benefit from any remissions which the Government of India may make in the matter of provincial contributions. Another suggestion which has been made Sir, is that our balances are so large that we can well afford to meet this deficit from these balances this year. I tried to answer that argument in the course of the remarks which I made during the budget discussion. I pointed out that it was contrary to all financial canons that we should attempt to meet excess of expenditure from balances, that, if we were not to go bankrupt, we must make the annual revenue meet the annual expenditure. The Honourable the Finance Member dwelt, in his opening remarks on this bill, on the large balances we have and explained the necessity for maintaining them. But still as there is some misunderstanding on the part of honourable members, I will repeat the figures showing what the balances are made up of. The balance of Rs. 368 lakhs which is shown in the budget as it stands at present is made up of Rs. 148 lakhs in the Famine Insurance Fund; it contains Rs. 20 lakhs, which I said the other day consists of sinking fund charges and the assignments which are made to us from the Government of India on account of Customs; it also includes Rs. 13 lakhs which is surplus of borrowings. The total of these sums is Rs. 181 lakhs. That leaves us with Rs. 187 lakhs, available for the emergency of famine which is exactly Rs. 13 lakhs below the minimum which this House itself has in the past demanded shall be kept as a reserve against the emergency of famine. If, on the other hand, we obtain the taxation which we have demanded in order to make the budget balance in the current year that will enable us to close with a balance of Rs. 29 lakhs in excess of the two crores which we consider to be the minimum. That is the sum which we are under obligation to pay annually to the Government of India as an instalment of the pre-reform debt on account of the provincial loan fund. While dealing with the sum of 20 lakhs, I should like to remove a misapprehension which has been given expression to by several members. The honourable member for Karachi, for instance, told us that it is contrary to all financial canons to show an expenditure of Rs. 25 lakhs as appropriation for reduction or avoidance of debt. On the other hand, an objection was raised by the honourable member for Surat to a similar sum on the revenue side. Neither of these honourable members have apparently discovered the fact that these two entries cancel one another. I will refer them to the note given at page 69 of the Blue Book and the further explanation at page 124 where the whole history of this transaction is given in detail. The honourable member took exception to our methods of accounting, but we are guided in these matters by the orders received from the Auditor General and these transactions have been shown as they have been shown, under the orders of the Auditor General. The fact that it is left in our balances is due to the fact that we have not yet invested the amount of sinking fund, and the amount which we have received on account of customs assignments which we have paid from capital are, under the orders of the Government of India, not to be treated as revenue but are to be treated as assignments towards reduction of debt. The honourable member for Karachi's suggestion would mean a raid on our sinking funds. That is the very last resource which any finance department would think of permitting to be disturbed.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI : May I just explain, Sir, that what I said was . . .

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I am afraid we are going back into the whole discussion of the budget and the criticism that was levelled against it during the last three days is being repeated. Everything is perfectly relevant if it bears on the point of taxation, but elaborate replies on the various points raised during the budget discussion would not be relevant.

Mr. G. WILES : Sir, I thought it necessary because we have been told that by doing so and so we can get Rs. 25 lakhs, and so forth.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I do not wish to be misunderstood. I do not rule the honourable member (Mr. Wiles) out of order on the ground that his remarks are irrelevant, but I am merely making a suggestion that it would be much better if he dealt with the direct issue which is now before the House, namely, the justification for the additional taxation.

Mr. G. WILES : Another argument which has been brought forward, Sir, is that in the past our estimates have sometimes proved pessimistic. Therefore let us trust to luck and assume that everything will come out again all right in the end. It has been told to the House, Sir, that two years ago the year closed with a far more satisfactory state of affairs than we had hoped and it is suggested that what has happened once may happen again. There never was a worse argument brought to bear on a financial discussion. I gave details in my introductory note of the way in which the increased balance was arrived at. The Honourable the Finance Member also in his budget speech referred to it. As he pointed out, a considerable part of the savings of the year was illusory. A great part of it was merely postponed expenditure, which we had to incur in the next year. But the greater part of the actual savings which the honourable member referred to must, in my opinion, be put down to the results of retrenchments which were carried out in the previous year, the full result of such retrenchments never appearing in the year in which they are carried out. Nor could we, as some of our critics would have us do, anticipate those windfalls of revenue which have occasionally come to our assistance in the past. We cannot anticipate any windfall so far as I know, next year. We could only do that if trade revives to such an extent that income tax goes above the figure of 1922-23, and we get a share of the income tax from the Government of India, or if we have such a wonderful agricultural year that we called not only the current year's demand, but every rupee of arrears. I would now like to refer to the remark made by the leader of the Swaraj party in referring to our excessive balances. He thought that clever financiers could budget within a few rupees and value unnecessary so large a reserve. If he will guarantee to give us three years of good rainfall, I will guarantee to give him for three years a good budget and perfect estimates.

Coming to this bill in detail, the bill proposes to put a tax on real property in municipal areas of 2 per cent. in the form of a stamp duty, which will be payable on transfers carried out by document of sale, mortgage with possession or exchange, or such other methods of transfer as are under the Stamp Act required to be stamped as conveyances. I regret, Sir, that the leader of the Swaraj party should have given countenance to the idea that, in this matter, Government are carrying out the satanic policy of divide and rule. There is an intrinsic difference between taxation which can be put upon rural areas and taxation which can be put on urban areas. There is no question of divide and rule. We cannot put a tax on the cabbages which the urban man grows in his backyard in order to make it a tax from the land. There is an essential difference in the form of taxation applicable.

The amount of the tax will be found in item 23 of the schedule of the new bill. The bill is intended to be extended, in the first instance, to the city of Bombay and a number of other mofussil towns. The object of the bill is frankly to enable Government to raise more revenue. It is a fact that we are already spending in grants in aid to municipalities more than this bill will bring in. With the introduction of compulsory education, with the demand for better sanitation, supplies of water, etc., the tendency of our grants in aid to municipalities is continually to increase. We are already spending over Rs. 20 lakhs annually in grants to municipalities, and the increased demands on account of compulsory education have not yet begun to come in. The Honourable the Finance Member in introducing the bill has referred to the immense liability which the Government may be incurring in the Bombay city for instance on compulsory education.

I would draw the attention of honourable members to the fact that, under the Scheduled Taxes Rules, the Stamp Act is one of the very few, practically the only, source left to the Bombay Government to increase taxation. We cannot look for any considerable expansion of our revenues except by such a tax. That is the reason why, when the Bombay municipality applied to Government a few years ago to impose this tax, Government were constrained to refuse it. In 1921, the Bombay municipality actually asked for the permission of Government to introduce this tax, but, as I have said, it was not possible for Government to agree to surrender any of their restricted powers of taxation. We are told that the recommendation was made by the corporation, after very careful consideration. We ought, therefore, to be able to assume that, regarding the merits of the bill as a bill, Government and the corporation are at one. Otherwise, we should be reduced to come to the conclusion that what would be a very good tax when levied by the Bombay municipality, is a very bad tax when levied by the Government, and that is a conclusion which we have no right to assume. A change in the authority which desires to impose the tax cannot make any difference to, what I may call, the moral character of the bill.

This brings me to the only remaining argument, namely that it is wrong in principle to levy a tax, which is essentially a local tax, for general purposes. Now, in Calcutta, a tax exactly similar to this has been introduced by the Bengal Government. The leader of the Swaraj party was not quite correct when he told the House that the Bengal Government had stopped at the rate which was levied in 1922, because there is a tax, exactly similar to this, which is 2 per cent. on the sum levied under the Act of 1922, levied in Calcutta, and the proceeds go to the Calcutta Improvement Trust. In Madras also similar power has been taken by an Act of 1922 to raise money by similar means. In both these cities, the proceeds of the tax go directly towards expenditure on the administration of those cities. In Bombay, for the reasons I have given, Government have thought it essential to retain control over these revenues in their own hands, but there is no doubt whatever that the whole of the proceeds will not suffice to meet the demands which will be made on the general revenues. This itself is, to my mind, sufficient answer to the argument that we are using a local tax for general purposes. If it is true, as we are told, that provincial taxation bears more heavily, as a whole, on the rural areas than on the urban areas, then we have here one method of restoring the balance, and we get it by taking a minute proportion of the unearned increment to which the public has every right.

It is very difficult to make any comparison with systems in other countries, because everything depends on the general system of taxation and the position of stamp revenue in that general system. In America, for instance, there is a property tax—there is no stamp duty at all. In France, on the other hand, there is a tax very similar to this, on transfers of property which is not 2 per cent., or 3 per cent., or whatever it may work out here to be in individual instances, but it rises to 12½ per cent. on every transfer of landed property. Compared with this, and considering the very important part played by the stamp duty in our general system of taxation our proposals are very moderate and I trust that the House will accept the general principle of the bill.

Mr. S. S. DEV : Sir, I move for a closure.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : It is in the hands of the House. If nobody gets up to address the House, I will call upon the Honourable the Finance Member to reply. I want to make the position clear. In the matter of taxation bills, closure can only be applied with the greatest care, unless it is found that either side of the House is taking up the time of the House simply to prolong the debate. Closure will not be applied unless I am satisfied that a fair and full discussion has taken place.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN :
(Rose.)

Mr. J. BAPTISTA : Sir, I rise to a point of order. I saw the Honourable the Home Member signalling to the Honourable Minister for Local Self-government to speak. Is it not prolonging the debate unnecessarily ?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I cannot assume that to be so, because so far, except the Honourable the Finance Member who has moved the first reading, there is only one Government member who has addressed the House. I must be perfectly fair between the two benches and if I am satisfied that such is the intention either on the right or the left I will immediately accept the closure.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN :
Sir, I am tempted to speak after hearing the honourable member the leader of the opposition. I expected something very constructive from him, but I am very much disappointed. (Mr. K. F. Nariman : There are many disappointments waiting for you.) We should not go into extraneous considerations in deciding the fate of this bill. Some of the arguments that have been raised are that, because Government have a large balance of over 3 crores of rupees, no additional tax should be levied. The honourable member the Finance Secretary has pointed out that out of the balance of over 3 crores a crore and a half are famine insurance and according to the Meston Award we are to keep a balance of 2 crores of rupees to meet emergencies. The main source of revenue in this presidency is land revenue, which depends on the vagaries of the Indus in Sind and the caprice of the rain here. Bad seasons have therefore to be provided against. Another honourable member made a point about the contribution of 56 lakhs that we make to the Government of India. But if honourable members have followed the debates in the Legislative Assembly, they will find that the representatives of Bombay pressed that point but did not succeed, and even this Government has not been able to succeed in the matter. Then, Sir, a point was raised that the Meston Award needs to be readjusted. Honourable members are aware that this Government have been doing its best for the last four years to get that done but they have not yet succeeded.

Now, I come to the argument against the bill advanced by the honourable member the leader of the opposition. Sir, the argument that he trotted out is that these two bills were brought in this House for the purpose of setting the rural areas against the urban areas. I submit, Sir, that this is far from the intention of Government and the leader of the opposition ought to have credited Government with common-sense. (Mr. B. G. Pahalajani: More than common-sense.) Had they that object in view, they could have brought one bill to set the rural against the urban areas and not two bills at the same time taxing both the rural and the urban areas. I submit, Sir, that the charge is groundless. If Government had the least intention of doing so, they would not have brought the two bills simultaneously.

The leader of the opposition tried to make another point in suggesting that Government should not have taken the odium of introducing this tax but should have left the matter to the local bodies. One of the reasons why Government did not agree to the municipal corporation of Bombay levying this tax has been explained by the honourable member the Finance Secretary. The leader of the opposition says that Government should have acceded to the request of the corporation and allowed them to levy this tax. Will the municipalities give up the grants which they are receiving for primary education, for free and compulsory education, for medical relief, for water supply and drainage system? If they do so, then Government will consider whether they should be allowed to levy this tax.

Again, Sir, the criticism that was levelled by the leader of the opposition against this bill was a mere criticism of details. When he said that the rate was very high, he was only complaining about a detail. In this connection, I may say the bill is going to be referred to a select committee, and the question of the rates will be considered there. Nothing has been said against the nature of this tax. Nothing has been said about the incidence of this piece of taxation. It will fall on the rich landlords of the city of Bombay and Government have shown the necessity for further taxation. All along I have heard only one constructive suggestion from the other side, and that is to reduce our establishments and that we could do it at least to the extent of 6 lakhs. If we reduce our establishments to the tune of 41 lakhs, establishments which have already been reduced, which have been cut to the very bone, I am afraid that there will be no . . .

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI: It has not been twice reduced. It has been reduced once though not effectively and restored.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : I say if we reduce our establishments to the tune of 41 lakhs of rupees what will be the result ? There will be absolutely no efficiency at all. (Mr. K. F. Nariman : Is there efficiency now ?) Suppose we reduce the police. Honourable members of this city will come to us and complain about the Pathan scare. Then, Sir, yesterday we heard complaints against Government for introducing the photo copying system in the interest of economy. We were told that by the introduction of that system so many people would be out of employment and that there would be discontent. Suppose we carry this retrenchment to the extent of 41 lakhs, how many thousands of higher and lower subordinates will be out of employment and what will be the discontent ?

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN : We want retrenchment from the top and not the bottom.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : I think honourable members who yesterday joined in a chorus against the adoption of the photo system on the ground that it could cause unemployment and create discontent at least ought to have the decency not to support retrenchment to the extent of 41 lakhs of rupees which will turn away thousands of the employees of Government without any fault of theirs. Another danger is that there are so many people who have been in the permanent employ of Government for so many years. What will be their fate ? I am sure the country will have to pay them their damages. I am aware I am doing an unpleasant duty, but what I am saying is the plain truth.

Now, Sir, the honourable member from Bombay city (North) said that when His Excellency went on tour the municipalities approached him for grants. But let me tell the honourable member from Bombay that His Excellency told them what was right. Either increase the provincial revenue or levy local rates. Municipalities cannot have it both ways. Local bodies cannot run their show without Government aid, and even the present grants they are receiving are said to be insufficient and they are pressing for the revision of those grants. Crores of rupees are paid as grants-in-aid, and still they are not satisfied.

Nearly two-thirds of the expenditure of the local boards is borne by Government, and they want more. The village panchayats, municipalities and local boards are all asking for more grants.

Now, Sir, the municipal areas have enjoyed all the amenities of life after the advent of British rule. Take for instance the city of Bombay : the people enjoy the benefit of education from primary to collegiate, they have medical relief and so many other services are provided for them. The honourable member for Bombay stated that they pay 38 lakhs for stamps. But it should be remembered that Government spend over 51 lakhs for the people of Bombay. There are insistent demands from the rural areas for communication, medical relief, water supply, education. It has always been said in this House that the people in the mofussil have been bled white, and cannot afford to bear any further taxation. There is now an awakening in the mofussil and the people there are asking for more facilities for education, for medical relief, and so on. It is now the duty of the residents of the cities to come to the help of the people of the mofussil. We have always been hearing in this House great solicitude expressed for the welfare of the masses. Now, here is an opportunity for the members residing in the cities to translate their solicitude into action. (One honourable member: You want to talk out, talk it out.) Now, I will take the House through certain figures regarding the expenditure on education. Mr. B. G. Pahalajani: We have got them already.) It is hardly fair, Sir, that I should be interrupted every now and then.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: You do not want to be interrupted?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN: I do not want, Sir. I have shown yesterday that we spend one crore of rupees on.....

Mr. C. M. SAPTARSHI: I rise to a point of order, Sir. The Honourable Minister wants to take us through all the figures of Public Works, Education and other departments of Government. I think you have ruled that it is only open to him to address the House so far as it affects the Stamp Bill. I do not think he is in order in repeating all those figures he quoted yesterday and wasting the time of the House unnecessarily. He is not replying to the budget as a whole.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: On a question such as a taxation bill, it is very difficult to lay down any hard and fast limits on discussion. Any argument which bears on the question of the justification for additional taxation would be relevant. I will follow the Honourable Minister's speech carefully, now that my attention has been specifically drawn to it, and if there is anything irrelevant in the argument he advances, I will call him to order.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI: I rise to a point of order. All these figures were quoted by him yesterday. Is he at liberty to re-quote those figures?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I am afraid that the restriction with regard to repetition cannot be enforced now. I will follow the general trend of his speech and I will see that it is relevant to the present discussion which is the first reading of a taxation bill.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN: Very large amounts have been spent in recent years on nation-building departments. If the Ministers are given larger grants and there is a deficit they will naturally ask for additional taxation. The House says 'no'. If the Ministers get small grants in proportion to the revenue, the House is not satisfied and says that the Ministers do not ask for more grants for the nation-building departments. The position of the Minister is not an enviable one. (An Honourable Member: Sorry.)

Mr. S. S. DEV: Has the Honourable Minister finished his speech? Is he speaking or standing?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Will the Honourable Minister please continue?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN: Is it fair, Sir, that there should be such interruptions from the opposite benches?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I call upon honourable members not to interrupt the Honourable Minister. Will the Honourable Minister please go on?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN: Is this fair, Sir?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I do not hear any interruption. Will the Honourable Minister please go on with his remarks?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN: I am sorry to say that my honourable friends do not want to allow me to proceed. I do not know whether that is a specimen of the Home Rule they will get.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR: Perfect order has been restored after you appealed to the House, Sir.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I think the Honourable Minister will be well-advised if he makes a speech on the subject of the motion before the House. Will the Honourable Minister please continue and address himself to the motion before the House?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN: One of the honourable members threw out a suggestion that we might do away with two of the Executive Councillors. Suppose that extreme step is taken, what will be the saving? It will bring in only a lakh of rupees or so. That is not going to meet the deficit. Another honourable member suggested that the village panchayats might be given civil and criminal powers so that a reduction could be made in the judicial establishments. This matter is under the consideration of Government; but there is an argument against it. Even village people say that there are factions in villages, and that if they are given criminal power they would exercise it against each other. Finally, we are spending large amounts on the nation-building departments, and I think that consideration should appeal to the House. I therefore trust that the House will at least agree to refer this bill to a select committee.

Mr. R. G. PRADHAN (Nasik District): Sir, I confess I felt a keen sense of disappointment when the amendment of which I had given notice was ruled out of order. I felt that the proper course for me would be to listen to the debate and then make up my mind as regards the question before the House after taking all things into consideration. But I now feel that I shall be failing in my duty, both to this House and to my constituency, and also to the larger interests of the country, if I do not state the attitude which I have, after much serious consideration and good deal of thought, decided to take with regard to this bill.

[Mr. R. G. Pradhan]

Personally, when both these bills were placed before the House, I was very much inclined to agree to the present bill which is under the consideration of the House, provided I was given the assurance in a statutory form that the amount that would be realised by means of the bill was earmarked definitely for the specific purposes for which this additional money was being demanded by the Government, and provided also that a definite, conscientious, honest, straightforward assurance was given to me and to the House that the amount earmarked under the provisions of the bill would be in addition to the sum that was at present spent on education, health and sanitation. Holding as I do this view, I really felt great and bitter disappointment that the Legislative Council Rules, as interpreted in the past, precluded such an amendment. My position is this, and I want to make it as clear as possible. I am an educational enthusiast—fanatic, if this House is pleased to call me so—and having regard to the importance of the educational question and the vast issues which are involved in the rapid promotion of compulsory primary education, my view is that no amount of self-sacrifice and no amount of additional taxation would be too great for compulsory education. I remember, Sir, when I presented my evidence before the Compulsory Primary Education Committee, I said that the rapid promotion of compulsory primary education was a war against illiteracy and darkness, and said also that just as, for the purpose of carrying on a war of national independence or carrying on a war in the interests of constitutional liberties, no sacrifice would be too great, so also no taxation would be too great in the cause of compulsory primary education, and that any taxation that would have to be imposed in the interest of compulsory primary education would and should be cheerfully borne by the people. That has all along been my view. And the honourable House will remember that in my speech on the budget, I specifically suggested to the Honourable Minister that if he decided to levy a special educational cess, the House would give him every support in that respect. But in view of the fact, that a statutory provision for the earmarking of the additional revenue cannot be made and the amount to be realised under the bill cannot be earmarked, I find myself on the horns of a dilemma, as I cannot be sure that this additional amount that will be realised under the provisions of the bill will really be spent on the objects for which it is demanded. Government will pardon me if I and other members like myself feel somewhat inclined to entertain doubts about their intentions. We have had during the last many years bitter experience of that kind, and, therefore mere assurances, unless embodied in a statute, made by honourable members on behalf of Government cannot carry conviction with us. Our experience in that direction has been very bitter; such assurances have proved illusory. Therefore, unless and until such a statutory provision is made that the additional amount that will be realised under the provisions of the bill shall be spent on education, sanitation and medical relief, I feel that I can support the bill only with great reluctance. I fully realise the importance of education. The other arguments that have been advanced by Government in support of the bill do not appeal to me. I do not attach much importance to the deficit of 41 lakhs. I do not want to go into those various reasons, and tire the patience of the House with repetition. None of those arguments appeals to me except this, that the money is required for education, for sanitation, and for medical relief, and that, money for these purposes cannot, in the present condition of our finances, be realised in other ways. It is this argument, and this alone that appeals to me. I want to make a distinction between this bill and the bill that is to follow. I will give my support to this bill, provided Government are prepared to get over the statutory difficulty which has rendered you, Sir, to rule my amendment out of order, and I have satisfactory assurance, that the amount that will be realised under this bill will be earmarked for the purposes for which it is required.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : Mr. President, I entirely sympathise with the remarks of the last speaker indicating his great anxiety that this additional revenue shall be devoted in large part to education and the other departments which are often called the nation-building departments. It is, of course, contrary to financial rules that any particular revenue should be earmarked for any particular purpose. It is the general rule that all revenues should go into the one common fund, out of which should be paid the expenses of the executive government. But I think that in this particular instance my honourable friend will recognise that whatever the rule, the practice will be that these monies will go of necessity, whether we like it or not, to those very departments which he is so anxious should be benefitted by these taxation bills now before this House. If any members have any doubt that that will be the result, let me counsel them to take time to go through this budget once more. If they are in any doubt that this money is really required for these particular departments let them scrutinise the budget once more ; let them see for themselves ; let them remember the figures which I gave them yesterday ; and let them come to the conclusion whether I was right or whether I was wrong in saying that this money is most urgently required for the particular departments in the charge of their Ministers. I submit, Sir, that a very grave responsibility rests on all honourable members of this House, very grave responsibility to see that our efforts to make progress in this presidency are not thwarted by a chance vote on the first reading of a taxation bill. Mr. President, I most earnestly beseech them to look at this bill very carefully, to look at the budget very carefully, and to make up their own minds whether they would be exercising the due responsibility of statesmen, if on the first reading they were to reject these bills. Let them take time ; let them have the days, which will intervene, for the scrutiny of the budget ; let them see what the actual figures are in the budget, what the items are upon which the expenditure is recommended ; and let them do that while this bill is under the consideration of the select committee. And then, I feel confident, Sir, that they will all vote this money for the good of the people. If the Swaraj party will not, they will not and nothing will help them. But I appeal to the ministerial parties, who have really the good of the people of this presidency at their heart, I appeal to them to pass the first reading of this bill, so that we may have the opportunity of providing those funds which are so urgently necessary for the good of the people of this presidency.

I referred in my remarks yesterday to the fact that we cannot reduce the provision for law and order. What does the House wish me to do? Do they wish me to cut down the provision for suburban police? Are we to cut down the provision for police for the city of Bombay? I could do it very easily if they refuse this taxation and want me to do it. Rs. 32 lakhs of money is spent on the city police and we are proposing to increase the suburban police in order to provide necessary protection for the suburbs. But, Sir, I submit that there isn't any possibility of reduction under law and order if I as the responsible Member in charge of these departments do my duty. I do not, Sir, as such propose to make any reduction in these charges. I merely mention the question by way of reply to honourable members who get up and say that we can easily find this money if we reduce the provision for police. Sir, the money cannot be so found. We are on the bed-rock as regards these departments of law and order. If we want to progress, as we all do want to progress, in those other departments of education, of public works, in roads, water-supply, medical relief and sanitation, then, Sir, I submit it is imperative to have this extra taxation. Sir, taxation is a subject which appeals to no one. But, Sir, we who are sitting here have to prove to the world that we are capable of administering the finances of this great province. We have to prove that we are responsible members responsible to our constituents in the districts, in the mofussil, responsible to see that the necessary taxation is provided in order to meet their just claims and requirements. Sir, I submit that to throw out these two most urgent money bills which have been brought before you after very mature consideration by the Ministers in consultation with the Executive Members of Government would be to show that we are not fit for the responsibilities which have been laid upon our shoulders. Sir, I submit that it is our duty at the very least to pass the first reading of both these bills so that we may be in a position after a complete scrutiny of our budget to provide the money which is so necessary for this presidency.

I am surprised, Sir, at the attitude taken up by my honourable friend opposite (Mr. M. R. Jayakar). My honourable friend says that we are trying to divide and rule. Has he omitted to notice that there are these two bills before the House which say: "Divide the burden equally over the whole?" Is he so nervous that the city of Bombay should be made to pay its share? Is it because he is anxious that this city shall escape its share, that he talks about the increase in taxation being 250 per cent. and 300 per cent.? Sir, it is ridiculous. When you have got a very low taxation upon a particular matter, if you have only one anna and you raise it by three annas, then you have truly a rise of 300 per cent. and you may cry out: "It is scandalous to charge three annas more, it is a 300 per cent. increase; we people in Bombay cannot afford to pay three annas more because it is an increase of 300 per cent. ; how possibly can we find the money ?" But, Sir, I submit that is an entirely erroneous way of dealing with the incidence of this taxation. The proper way is that which has been put forward by my honourable friend the Finance Member, namely, to gauge the rise as a moderate rise of 2 per cent. on the value of property. It is the value of property which you have to look to, to judge of the incidence of this taxation. I submit, Sir, that the proposed increase is only a reasonable increase to meet the great wants of the presidency and to meet the great requirements of this city of Bombay. There are numerous calls from this great city upon the revenues of the presidency. I submit, Sir, that members who represent this city in this House ought to support this measure for the good of their city in order to secure us this extra money to supplement the moneys we have already lavished upon this great town. I do hope, Sir, that both members for the city and members for the mofussil will join to give this money to Government and will not think of this "divide and rule" theory which my honourable friend opposite suggests. He suggests.....

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR (Bombay University) : My honourable friend seems to forget that that expression was raised for the first time by the honourable member for Bombay city. I did not use that expression.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : I am glad to hear from my honourable friend that he did not endorse that expression.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR : I did not use that expression ; I did endorse it.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : I understand that my honourable friend opposite was careful not to use that expression himself, but that he merely endorsed it. I appreciate the distinction, a distinction with which we are well acquainted in the courts of law. Well, Sir, I earnestly appeal to the members for this great city and to the members from the mofussil not to consider that we are attempting to "divide and rule" but to consider and realise that we are endeavouring to put the burden of the necessary taxation evenly over the whole presidency, including this city. This city cannot get on without the mofussil any more than the mofussil can get on without this city. I do appeal to both the honourable members for the city and the honourable members from the mofussil to pass the first reading not only of this bill but also of the other bill which is coming up, so that they may both go to select committee and there the details can be decided, and they can then decide whether the money is or is not required for the good of the people of this presidency or not.

The anxiety of my honourable friend opposite to get rid of this bill, about which he is so nervous, was so great that he even trotted out the Lee Commission proposals. He said 9 lakhs of rupees have been provided this year in connection with the Lee Commission proposals, and because these 9 lakhs have been provided, therefore these bills which are expected to bring in Rs. 42 lakhs ought not to be passed. What have these bills got to do with the very small provision of 9 lakhs made, for the Lee Commission proposals? It is only a small part of the Rs. 42 lakhs and a still smaller part of the 2 crores that we really require for the future progress of the presidency. Sir, let us make this beginning, at all events, to meet our immediate requirements and we will endeavour to see that the money is spent on those departments which are so urgently in need of it. We will try to economise in every way we can to find more money for those departments, so that we may eventually, by hook or by crook, attain to these 2 crores of rupees which the departments eventually want for the progress of this presidency. Sir, I was astonished at the argument of my honourable friend about the Lee Commission. He felt aggrieved that he had no chance of moving his resolution about the Lee Commission proposals at the last session. Sir, my honourable friend granted priority to several other resolutions. Why did he not ask for priority to move his own resolution? Because, Sir, he did not really want to move that resolution; because in fact he had great doubts whether his resolution, if moved, would have any chance of succeeding. That was why he did not ask for priority, and now when the time has passed he comes forward and says that he had no chance of moving that resolution at the last session.....

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR: My honourable friend seems to know a great deal more about this matter than I myself do.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: I do know a great deal about this particular matter. If I know more than my honourable friend opposite, I am very sorry that he was not fully informed by his party.

Mr. J. BAPTISTA: Is not the Official Secrets Act applicable to this Council, Sir?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: I am much obliged to my honourable friend for his suggestion, and I trust this particular matter will not be reported by any honourable member outside this House. I conclude with an appeal to all members on both sides of the House, particularly to the ministerial party, to pass the first reading of these bills for the good of the people of the presidency. I appeal even to the Swaraj party to combine with the ministerial party in passing the first reading of these bills for the good of the people of this presidency.

Mr. C. M. SAPTARSHI: I rise to a point of order. Who are the ministerial party about whom we have been hearing from yesterday?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: That is not a point of order.

The Council will now adjourn till 2 p.m. on Friday the 27th February 1925.

Friday, the 27th February 1925.

The Council re-assembled at the Town Hall, Bombay, on Friday, the 27th February, 1925, at 2 p.m., the Honourable the President, Sir IBRAHIM RAHIMTOOLA, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., presiding.

(Further discussion on Stamp Act Amendment Bill resumed.)

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Further discussion on the Stamp Act Amendment Bill.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN (Bombay City, South) : Mr. President, I must congratulate the honourable members on the opposite side in having been able to drag on the discussion up to to-day, so that a further opportunity may be given to honourable members to discuss the bill. It reminds me of a cricket match when, if the atmosphere and the circumstances are unfavourable, the players try to carry the game on to the next day by blocking, so that the atmosphere and circumstances may change. The plodding speech of the Honourable the Home Member yesterday, was like the effort of the blocking batsman gaining time, waiting for a change in the circumstances. I welcome this opportunity, otherwise many of the honourable members would have missed the chance of addressing the House on this important question. Further, Sir, I would even have forfeited my right of speaking on this bill, had not the Honourable the Home Member almost provoked not only myself but certain other members on this side to give a reply—and a fitting reply—to the most provoking speech that I have listened to in this session.

Now, Sir, to begin with, I must frankly admit that it comes with ill-grace from the honourable members on the opposite side, when they plead for mercy on behalf of the teeming millions of this presidency. It comes with ill-grace, because it is all lip-sympathy, which is not accompanied by any solid action on their part, which goes to show that they have nothing but lip-sympathy to offer for the sufferings of the people. I could have understood and appreciated their special pleading on behalf of the poor people, if at the termination of his speech the Honourable the Home Member had concluded by saying that considering the stringent financial circumstances of this presidency, considering the great sufferings from which the masses are suffering, considering that several nation-building departments are starved—there is no money for education, there is no money for medical relief—as an act of self-sacrifice, he was prepared to devote a part of his salary for the well-being of the people, and that he was going to advise his honourable colleagues sitting by his side to give a part of their salaries and a very large part of their superfluous allowances—particularly one honourable member sitting behind him who gets the fattest salary—for the relief of distress in the presidency. In that case, I would have understood his sympathy and joined in the applause. As it is well said, hot words do not injure anybody, so kind words do not cost anything and benefit nobody. What is the use of mere lip-sympathy to the House? It looks extraordinarily strange, and I am reminded of one occasion when, near a Hindu temple, I saw a butcher coming straight from the slaughter-house and pleading for cow protection. It created the greatest sensation and caused much amusement. I do not want to carry the analogy too far, but to come here from the most expensive Secretariat, which is the slaughter-house of national finance in this presidency, and to remind us of our responsibility towards the suffering masses, and plead mercy for their benefit, has no sense and has no meaning. I could understand it if it had been accompanied by some act of grace. I appeal to them once again, in the name of the suffering humanity of this presidency, to consider our proposals for retrenchment. We cannot believe when they say that there is no scope for retrenchment. As I said we are not supposed to be capable of pointing out avenues of retrenchment;—we can only discuss and debate,—but I can point out several instances here wherein there is not only extravagance but waste. I would point out to the House one instance. I know that the members on the opposite bench are great experts in giving plausible explanations about various items, and I should like to have some explanation about the item which I am going to point out, and I should like to see what the explanation is. In this book there is an item of Rs. 26 lakhs and odd for the building of the gateway of India. I would draw the attention of this House to that item, the expenditure on which is met entirely from the revenues of this presidency. On page 10 of the Public Works Department budget, there is put down an expenditure of Rs. 26,50,605 for the Gateway of India at Apollo Bunder. Now, I ask with all the earnestness that I can command, is this the occasion to waste public funds over such a structure as the Gateway of India? I would ask the Honourable the Home Member how many patients that are dying in the streets of this city for want of hospital accommodation are going to be accommodated in this structure, or how many children, rambling in the streets of the city without schools, are going to be put there? This structure, it is stated, is intended to commemorate the arrival and the visit of His Majesty the King Emperor to this land. Could they not have built a hospital, could they not have put up some schools, to commemorate that visit? If it is intended to hold official tamashas, could they not do it in a pandal or a shamiana as they have been doing for the last 150 years? Twenty-six lakhs is gone. Does he maintain that that was for the nation-building departments? The Gateway of India—the entrance leading to the largest prison-house in the world, leading to the land where 30 million slaves are misruled, and are struggling for liberty. I do not know of what use this structure is to the country, except as an achievement of the British Government and to perpetuate the humiliation and disgrace of the people. That may be the entrance to the country, but where is the way out of the country? We are prepared to spend 30 lakhs or even more for a Gateway for these gentlemen out of the country. Unfortunately, once they have found their way in, they do not seem to be in a hurry in finding a way out. Some of these visitors stay here too long to the detriment of the finances of this country. Sir, I do not want to indulge in any joke or humour, but this is a matter which I wish to urge on this side of the House. After indulging in such extravagant expenditure, I wonder how they have the courage to come forward and say to us "Be responsible men; we ask you to give money for nation-building departments; we have got enough money to waste after these useless structures."

I would now like to point out another instance where Government have wasted away Rs. 13 lakhs. If they had not done that, there would have been no necessity for them to ask us to sanction these money bills. The people must pay for the extravagance and folly of the rulers. Why should it be so? On the same page, there is an item of Rs. 13 lakhs as a contribution for the cost of constructing the Kasheli bridge. The honourable member (Mr. Hooseinbhoy Lalljee) has partially explained the circumstances, but I would explain them in greater detail, as on this occasion I have greater liberty, and I am not restricted by the time limit. I would therefore ask for the indulgence of the House when I explain the irresponsible manner in which the finances of this presidency are being conducted. This amount of Rs. 13 lakhs we have to pay to the Bombay municipality, as I have already said, as part of the expenditure on the Kasheli bridge. The original estimate of the work was about Rs. 10 lakhs, but on account of the bungling of a European Engineer of the Bombay municipality, the estimate has now gone up to Rs. 65 lakhs. On the original estimate Government agreed to contribute Rs. 4 lakhs to Rs. 5 lakhs. But when the estimate exceeded Rs. 60 lakhs, the question came whether the Government also should not be made to contribute a larger share of the expenditure, about Rs. 12 to 13 lakhs. The Municipal Commissioner was questioned about it, and in the course of the debate, to the surprise of all the members, he informed them that he had telephoned, and on the phone he was informed by a responsible Member of Government that the Government had agreed to contribute more, although they had originally agreed to contribute Rs. 5 lakhs. It was not the Minister in charge of the Transferred Departments, although this was a subject belonging to the Transferred Departments, and a member not in charge of any of the Transferred Departments, and a responsible Member of the Executive Government, agreed to pay on behalf of the Honourable Minister and the Government excess charges of Rs. 6 to 7 lakhs more than the original figure, all for the bungling of a European Engineer. Could irresponsibility go any further? I do not know whether the Honourable Minister was absent, or whether he was consulted before the offer was made, but from the manner in which this question was tackled by the Minister in charge of this department, it was clear that he knew nothing about it till the matter was struck in this House, and probably he knows by this time everything about it. That is not my business. I am simply pointing out that 26 lakhs for the Gateway and 13 lakhs for the bungling of a European officer have been wasted. I find another item in the Public Works Department for the arsenal at Karachi. This item is found on page 10 under the Civil

[Mr. K. F. Nariman]

Works budget. Probably that is an item for military expenditure. I do not understand why 10 lakhs should be devoted in the Civil Works budget for the erection of an arsenal at Karachi? Really speaking that item should be transferred to the military budget of the Central Government. These are the questions for the House to consider before it is asked to give its support to the money bill. The Honourable the Home Member was so excited, which is rather unusual with him, that it caused me some apprehension about the personal safety of the honourable leader of the Swaraj party. Where was the necessity for all this excitement? The Honourable the Home Member protests that we have been stating that the policy of Government is divide and rule. I do not know whether the honourable leader of the Swaraj party gave an explanation, but I maintain that it is the policy of the Government as disclosed in this money bill. What is the meaning of the Honourable the Home Member appealing to the ministerial party on this side of the House? I want to know which is the ministerial party. Is there any party set up by the Honourable the Home Member to fight the Swaraj party? If that is so, is it not the policy of divide and rule that the Government have been pursuing? There might have been disagreements on certain points. But on a question affecting the common good of the country, there is no party as either the Mahomedan party, ministerial party or non-Brahmin party, there is only one party, that is the people's party opposing the Government for the common good. I am very glad that my honourable friend, the leader of the non-Brahmin party, which perhaps the Honourable the Home Member described as the ministerial party, gave a fitting reply. There may be difference of opinion among members on this side of the House as regards questions of policy. For instance, the non-Brahmin party voted against the resolution regarding the return of Mr. Horniman. We do not find fault with them. But when it is a question of bleeding the country more white there are only two parties—the people's party and the Government party. If they think that there is a third party who will stand by the Government then they will be sorely disappointed. I appeal to honourable members of all parties to remember that so long as the present Government do not effect retrenchment and so long as the present Government are extravagant, it will be a crime against your constitution and country to vote for a single pie of additional taxation, until they reform themselves and respond to our wishes.

After this general remark I wish to refer to another matter. That is the policy of divide and rule. In this matter it is not a division of classes. As pointed out by the honourable member Mr. Baptista, it is not that we are complaining against the policy of divide and rule. If it is a policy of divide and good rule, we will not have much to complain; but it is a policy of divide and misrule. That is our complaint. In this particular case there is a further policy of division. Hitherto they were pursuing the policy of dividing classes and communities. Now, they want to divide territories. In this bill they want to set the city of Bombay against the mofussil. I warn honourable members from the moffussil that to-day they are set against the city members and are asked to vote for this bill and when in future taxation the question of land revenue comes in, it will be their turn and the city members will be asked to vote for it. We must stand together when we are asked to vote upon a money bill, without any reference to the party to which we belong.

Now, coming to the bill itself, there is a provision that this Act will be extended to any other municipal area to which the Government may, by notification in the Bombay Government Gazette, extend. Apart from the main objection that it is a money bill, I want to bring to the notice of honourable members one important point. This bill has a constitutional objection. We are all interested in the welfare of the local bodies of this province. This bill not only asks for more provision of money, but it encroaches on the rights and privileges of the municipalities. In this case it has affected the city of Bombay and in the near future it will affect all the moffussil local bodies. The point is whether it is a tax on land revenue, or whether it is a tax on stamps. They call it stamp duty in order to twist the words, and remove it from one schedule to another. It is a land tax; it is an encumbrance on the land; it is an imposition on the transfer of land. Under the schedule of the new Act it is within the purview of the municipality. The Bombay municipality first raised this point and asked the permission of the Bombay Government to levy a tax of this nature. Instead of giving permission to levy the tax, Government thought that there was a good opportunity to levy this tax and get money into their hands. There has been an interesting correspondence on this subject between the Bombay Government and the Bombay municipality. When this correspondence is proceeding, the Government steal a march over the municipality and levy this taxation.

This leads me on to another point. The Taxation Enquiry Committee is expected to arrive in Bombay in August. It is a committee that has been appointed to enquire into the taxable capacity of the people of this country, not alone with regard to this province. Is it fair now for the Government to snatch away from that committee whose legitimate province it is to enquire into the subject of this taxation? It consists of certain members who command greater respect and greater confidence of the people than the present members constituting this Government. This is an ideal matter in which there is a dispute between the local bodies and Government for the consideration of that committee. The question is whether it should be a duty on land or a duty on stamp. That is a point, Sir, on which we want a decision not from the Honourable Members of Government, because they are an interested party, but from an independent party like the Taxation Enquiry Committee. But before the committee comes here and before their enquiry begins, Government want to hurry on the bill because they think that their finances are in such a condition that unless they get this additional 16 or 18 lakhs probably there would be a financial disaster in the province.

Now, Sir, coming to the original point, the Legal Remembrancer, who is considered a legal authority on all these matters, has given his opinion on the subject, an opinion which is against the present position of the Government. He says that it should be considered a tax on land values and therefore within the province of the municipality. In the year 1921, the Legal Remembrancer was approached for an opinion on the subject, when a tax of this nature was sought to be imposed in Ahmedabad, and he said :

“If it is intended to levy the tax otherwise than by a stamp duty, as for instance, by ordering the sub-registrar to levy it in cash, this can legally be done by executive order without legislation, provided that the tax is imposed by the municipality in due form and with Government sanction.”

Here, Sir, is the express opinion of the legal authority of the Government on a similar circumstance, that the municipality can levy such a tax provided it observes all the legal technicalities. The Government can take the incidental charges of collection of that tax, the establishment charges they may desire for the collection, but it is the privilege of the municipality to utilise the tax for the local area. And, Sir, I was surprised at the honourable member the Finance Secretary maintaining the position of Government by quoting the instances of Madras and Bengal, because I was going to quote those instances for supporting my case. As far as the imposition of these taxes in Bengal and Madras is concerned, the legal aspect of it cannot be made to apply to this case because those taxes were levied before the Reforms Act came into force. The point of importance in connection with those taxes is this : that they were levied in Bengal and Madras and the collections were utilised exclusively for the local areas wherefrom they were levied and not for the provincial purposes. That is the point to be noted. Looking into all the circumstances, the imposition of the tax in Madras and Bengal and their utilisation, and also the opinion of the Legal Remembrancer of Government, the fight that the municipality has been putting up on this question is a fair and just one. Government is trying to steal a march over the municipality by putting a tax which the municipality is exerting itself to collect in another form, and Government is doing this at a time when the Taxation Enquiry Committee is expected here shortly. I am sure that the House will not countenance a measure of this nature and help the Government in what I consider to be a sort of tactics on their part to snatch a revenue from their local bodies, when that revenue is the legitimate due of the local bodies.

Now, Sir, my last appeal will be that so far as this taxation bill is concerned, whatever the appeals from the other side may be, however pathetic they may be, however earnest they may seem, if the members on the other side do not give us actual proof of their real sympathy, and not merely lip sympathy, by agreeing to retrench partly from their salaries and allowances, members on this side should turn a deaf ear to those appeals. There is no meaning in them. I was surprised to see the Honourable the Home Member ridiculing the Swaraj party and attempting to ridicule the honourable the leader of the Swaraj party. I say, Sir, I was surprised, because instead of emulating the example that the Swaraj party has put forward, instead of emulating the example of the leader of the Swaraj party, who after sacrificing all that he possessed—consider what was the position of the honourable leader of the Swaraj party in the bar; he was in a position to earn much more than any honourable member on the other side—after sacrificing all that he possessed, came to the rescue of the people—instead of emulating his example, the Honourable the Leader of the House was attempting to ridicule us. Unless they agree to retrench and agree to sacrifice a part of their own salaries and allowances, their appeal will fall, so far as this side of the House is concerned, on deaf ears. I hope the House will rise to the occasion and act as one man and one body and oppose this demand as illegitimate, unjust and unfair.

Mr. A. N. SURVE (Bombay City, North): Sir, will you allow me to rise to a point of personal explanation? Reference was made to the term "ministerial party" by the Honourable the Leader of the House yesterday and the honourable member for Bombay (south), has connected that term some how with the non-Brahmin party. Sir, I conceive it to be a very deplorable thing that the Leader of the House in an unlucky moment, probably unguardedly, used that term. I, for one, know that in this House the term "ministerial party" is an unreal and unmeaning term. Sir, it is not necessary for me to go into the constitutional history and implication of that term. Suffice it to say that that term is not in existence in any of the provincial councils. When the word was used yesterday, it did take me by surprise, and I wondered to whom that particular term was applied. But taking into account that there are only two—there may be more; I do not know that; but so far as I am aware there are only two—organised parties in this House, the Swaraj party and the non-Brahmin party, and that the term, ministerial party, is not applicable to the Swaraj party, by exclusion it must apply to the non-Brahmin party. If that is the case, let me give this explanation to this House. Sir, the country is divided into two sections, the section which holds politically advanced views and the section containing those whose political ideals are not advanced.

MOULVI RAFTUDDIN AHMAD: I rise, Sir, to a point of order. Is this a personal explanation or a theory of his own on Government?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I think the honourable member is going a little too far in offering his personal explanation. If he wishes to enlarge upon the whole aspect of that word it would take considerable time. A personal explanation would have been enough that the words used did not apply to the party which he represents. That would be quite an adequate correction and a personal explanation.

Mr. A. N. SURVE: Sir, so far as it refers to us, I can only assure the House that since we found by a providential situation that the non-Brahmin party had the deciding voice

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I do not think that is a personal explanation. You can say that you do not represent the ministerial party, that your party is independent of being classified as the ministerial party, if that is your object. You can simply say that and resume your seat.

Mr. A. N. SURVE : Sir, we do not represent any ministerial party in that sense.

Mr. D. R. PATIL (East Khandesh District) : Mr. President, when I made my budget speech I stated that all of us were here for the welfare of the country and therefore our deliberations ought to be based upon mutual good will, toleration, responsive co-operation and compromising tendency. Many of the non-official members have made their speeches about this taxation bill. I think they were very moderate in their considerations. They have placed their views before the official members. Now, I say this is the time for official members to adopt a compromising tendency. If they do not adopt that, I think they would not be acting properly.

Now, Sir, before Government propose any taxation Government have to fulfil certain conditions and according to me they are four in number. First, Government must effect strict economy in the various departments, whether transferred or reserved. The second condition is that more than the necessary money should not be spent over buildings; the third condition is that there must be urgency of taxation; and the fourth condition is that people must have the capacity to bear the burden of taxation. Now, Sir, when we come to the question of strict economy in the various departments, both the books, Blue as well as White, did not satisfy me that the strictest possible economy is being observed by Government. Now, as regards, the second point, we know very well, Sir, that huge amounts are spent on buildings. The buildings are not merely buildings but they are of a palatial type. We can say that very properly, if we look at the various buildings constructed by Government. Therefore, I have no hesitation in saying that more money than is necessary is spent by Government on buildings. Now, Sir, let us come to the urgency of taxation. It is true that unless Government have got sufficient money they cannot spend money for hospitals, medical relief, education and so on. I can understand that. But is there no solution with the Government? There is a solution, and what is that? They have got a balance of nearly 2,11 lakhs, leaving aside the amount of the famine insurance fund which amounts to about Rs. 48 lakhs. Now, Sir, if the non-official members say "For God's sake don't tax us further, as we are overburdened with taxation", I think they are perfectly right in saying so. I ask the Honourable the Finance member, why don't you draw upon that amount—I mean the large balances—which is in your hands? I think if the Government is pleased to do that, the whole thing will be solved in a proper way.

Now, Sir, there is, again, that mischievous Weston Settlement policy. Of course, Government have admitted—official members have admitted—that they are doing their level best to get the Government of India to change that policy. We thank them for that. But we say that unless the Government of Bombay compel the Government of India to give the just share of the income tax which they get from us for the use of the provincial purposes we have a right to refuse any proposal of taxation. We say that with the best of intentions, because I have already stated, Sir, that we want to act in a spirit of responsive co-operation. I say that the Honourable the Finance Member is not only a great asset to this Government, but he is a great asset to this House as well. Let us request him, Sir, earnestly that he should use his head to the best advantage towards employing the pruning knife to the expenditure in the various departments. If he does that, I think we shall be able to save a lot. When the people are willing to co-operate with Government, and fortunately I am so very glad to know that the Swaraj party is to co-operate with Government—they are not following the policy which is followed by the Swaraj party at Nagpur—as long as they are willing to co-operate with Government, let us see whether they are correct or not, and I entirely agree with the Swaraj party that there is no ground whatsoever at present for the Government to propose any sort of taxation.

Now, Sir, I would say a few words about the expression “ministerial party.” The Honourable the Leader of the House did not, I think, mean any bad thing when he used that expression. What he said was this to my mind: members of the non-Brahmin party have got the Education Minister who is a non-Brahmin, they want money for education; well if they supply him, i.e., the Education Minister with money, that will be used for purposes of education and such objects. I do not put any other interpretation on that except this.

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: Sir, the Honourable the Finance Member has moved a money bill and the honourable members from both the sides of the House have placed their reasons for the levy of this taxation and the opinions of those who are against that. But I think the tone of the House is summed up in the words of the honourable member for Nasik (Mr. Pradhan) that if it is absolutely necessary for the advancement of the province and for the advancement of the nation-building departments, this presidency is ready to allow additional taxation (Some Honourable Members: Certainly not; no, no). But he felt some doubt as to the utilisation of the money that was received from the levy of the entertainments tax, and if he is convinced that the Government have kept their promise—not only kept it in the spirit but also in the letter—and that Government have been trying their best to advance the interests of the transferred departments, then, he said that he would be prepared, for the good of the province, even to allow additional taxation. Sir, with your permission I would like to read what was said on the former occasion when the entertainments tax was sanctioned by this very House. The Honourable the Finance Member (Mr. Lawrence) then said:

“In regard to the suggestion that the money obtained from this tax should be earmarked for primary education, I can only say once more what I have said before on various occasions that to earmark a particular source for a particular subject is contrary to the financial system of this Government. We have previously stated that the amount realised from this source will be devoted for primary education. The House has its

[Mr. B. V. Jadhav]

Minister charged with the care of education ; and Dr. Paranjpye will see that the amount obtained from this source is not devoted to any other purpose, I think it would be wise for the House to leave the matter in the hands of the Honourable Minister for Education. It has already been stated that there is no objection to maintain a pro forma account so that at any time members of this House can see how much money has been obtained from this source. The House, I am sure, does not regard Government with so much suspicion as to insert a special provision in the Act which is contrary to the whole system of Government."

The Honourable the President then said :

"Do you give an undertaking that the money received from this source will be spent on primary education, although there is no statutory provision ?"

The Honourable Mr. Lawrence replied : "Yes, Sir."

The Honourable the President then said :

"I think I have already given a ruling that an undertaking given by Government through any of its members is binding on the Government in the sense that, if it is broken, the House may pass a vote of censure and oust the Minister."

The undertaking on that occasion was given that the proceeds of the entertainments tax would be utilised for the advancement of primary education and I am here prepared to show you by figures, Sir, that Government have kept their promise, more than their promise. In 1921-22 the basic expenditure on primary education was Rs. 1,01,79,000 and this bill was passed in 1922-23 in December 1922. Then, in 1922-23 the basic expenditure on primary education was.....

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR : On a point of order, I would like to know what is the relevance of all this reference to any undertaking that may have been given in connection with the Entertainments Tax Bill, except that the Honourable Minister wishes to suggest that Government are willing to give such an undertaking in connection with this bill now under consideration. I should like to know what is the relevance of all this unless it is coupled with the assurance with reference to this taxation that Government is prepared to give such an undertaking on this question.

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : Government have been charged with breaking their promise and inducing this House to grant taxation on false promises, and I want to show that Government have never meant any such thing, and further I want also to indicate my position and the position of my predecessor, because the Honourable the Finance Member said that the Minister of Education, Dr. Paranjpye, was there as a watch-dog of the Council to see that undertakings given by Government to the Council were carried out, and I am here to see that and to discharge the very function.

Then there was a cut of about 10 per cent., and the department had to accept that. As regards the receipts from the Entertainment Tax it was only 2 lakhs 70 thousand in the year 1922.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN : The Entertainments Duty Bill was brought into force on the first of February 1923 and the Honourable Minister is not correct when he says that it was passed in 1922.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I do not think that such a point of order need be raised. Honourable members may not be aware of the fact that no bill passed in this Council becomes law without the assent of the Governor-General and that assent must take some time. There is hardly much interval between December 1922 and February 1923.

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : It came into operation in that year and 2 lakhs and 70 thousand were collected. So the proceeds in that year were only 2 lakhs 70 thousand, and the total of columns 2 and 3 comes to 194 lakhs and odd, and expenditure on primary education that year was 199 lakhs, that is 5 lakhs 23 thousand more. In the following year, 1923-24 the receipts from the Entertainment Tax were 9 lakhs 40 thousand and total of the columns 1 to 3 was 1,05,70,000, but Government spent 1 crore 15 lakhs on primary education alone, that is 9 lakhs 49 thousand more than the proceeds of the entertainment tax.

So Government not only kept their promise of utilising the proceeds of the entertainment tax on primary education but they spent an additional amount equal to that of the tax, from their other revenues. In 1924-25 the same thing is carried on. The proceeds of the entertainment tax are not doubling or trebling every year. It is almost a fixed amount. Sir, you will see that Government have never gone back on their promise but that they have been loyally carrying out what was promised in this House and spending the proceeds of the entertainment tax for the advancement of primary education. Primary education and medical relief and public health and public works are such subjects, Sir, that they demand larger and larger expenditure and Government have to provide larger and larger amounts if these really nation—building departments are to expand. There has been a good deal of awakening among the people which is a matter for congratulation and they are demanding more schools, more dispensaries and they are demanding more amenities of life. This House, Sir, has passed a resolution that the tolls on all provincial roads should be abolished and a resolution is tabled that tolls on local fund roads should also be abolished and the local boards should be compensated for the loss of their revenue. Well if the levy of tolls is to be abolished then more money will be required, and I think Government will be justified in asking more taxes to produce more revenue. In the matter of education, Sir, Government have accepted and this House has accepted a statutory liability of helping the district local boards for advancing primary education. Government is bound to provide two-thirds of the additional revenue and in municipal areas revenue to the extent of 50 per cent. of the additional expenditure. The municipality of the city of Bombay, Sir, has recently passed and submitted a scheme for the introduction of primary education in F and G wards and the department of education has sanctioned that scheme. It will soon be put into operation and Government will be called upon to pay their half share.

Then at the same time it has been brought to the notice of the public and the public have recognised and cries have been heard even in this hall that the hospital accommodation of the Bombay city is not adequate, and the honourable member from Bombay city who just spoke said that diseased people were dying in the streets for want of accommodation in the hospitals. Sir, a committee has been appointed to advise Government how to provide this additional hospital accommodation and Government will require a large sum of money to spend on that account. The provision is in the interests of the poor people no doubt.

These and other expenses are to be incurred in addition to the expenditure of the last year, and it is reasonable to expect that these additional sums should come from economy or should come from additional revenue.

Some of the honourable members opposite suggested economy. But I beg to suggest that these suggestions if translated into action may perhaps effect a little saving but will not yield a large amount.

One honourable member suggested that half the posts of officers should be abolished. I do not think that this is a practical thing. You cannot reduce the number of Collectors by half and in that way reduce the number of districts by half. You cannot reduce the police force by half. You cannot reduce the number of judges by half. You cannot do anything of the sort. It is very easy to say that we should reduce our expenditure, that we should reduce our establishments, but I do not think that it is practical politics. I am not saying that there is no possibility of economy (Hear, hear). But I do assert that economies practised will not amount to much and they will not suffice even for the expenses of one-tenth of our present day engagements. To raise taxation is therefore absolutely necessary if the departments are to go on with efficiency and to have a normal expansion.

I may bring to the notice of this House the new demands that are made in the Blue Book and that if taxation is not granted many of those new demands for education and medical relief will have to be relinquished for want of funds. [Interruption.]

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Order, order.

An Honourable MEMBER : But all the items have been provided for in the Blue Book.

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : There is a deficit, and if the deficit is to a material extent, then these provisions in the budget even if sanctioned will not be of much avail. [Interruption.]

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Order, order. Honourable members are simply prolonging the debate by these interruptions.

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : Government has been charged here that they are carrying on a policy of divide and rule, or as the honourable Kaka said, divide and misrule.

An Honourable MEMBER : His name is Baptista.

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : I beg the honourable member's pardon ; Mr. Baptista is popularly known as Kaka. If Government misrules, I do not think this House will tolerate that, and inasmuch as this House has been very gracious and kindly listening to all that has been said, it goes without saying that this wing of the administrative Government is not going to misrule. I do not think the charge of divide and rule can be brought age off ^{the} measure. The tax is to be levied from the city of Bombay ^{in the} first place. As I told you the demands from the city of Bombay are very heavy, in the first place. We have to make provision for compulsory education for the city of Bombay, and it will require lakhs and lakhs of rupees to satisfy that demand. The ultimate grant to the city of Bombay will amount to Rs. 25 lakhs every year. Then, in the matter of medical relief, too, Government has to provide a large amount. Government is spending about Rs. 5 lakhs every year, over and above the grant received from the municipality, and as days go on, and more hospital accommodation is required, I think Rs. 3 to 4 lakhs more will have to be spent on medical relief in the city of Bombay alone. Then you will see that in the mill area there is a very great need for maternity hospitals. A generous and benevolent millowner has come forward, as I told you the other day, with an offer of Rs. 16 lakhs.....

Mr. R. G. PRADHAN : Sir, I rise to a point of order. The Honourable Minister is addressing us across the table by the use of the word 'you' and not addressing the Chair ?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I have occasionally drawn the attention of honourable members to it, but I take it that it is unconsciously done. There is no intention of not addressing the Chair.

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : I am very much obliged to my honourable friend from Nasik for calling my attention to the slip. Sir, a very generous Parsi gentleman has come forward with the promise of Rs. 16 lakhs to build a maternity hospital in the Parel locality and to endow 120 beds, 60 of which will be reserved for the labouring classes in the mills. But the acceptance of this offer will require Rs. 3 to 4 lakhs and that will be an additional sum to be spent on the city of Bombay. With all these heavy demands from the city of Bombay, if the Government proposes to levy a tax from that city and from other big cities, I do not think the House will consider it as an unjust policy, or a policy for the purpose of dividing and ruling.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD : I rise to a point of order. Is the Honourable Minister right in referring to the policy of divide and rule again and again ?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : There is no time limit in this discussion. I have myself felt that this discussion cannot go on interminably. We have got two days fixed by Government for three bills. The first bill, I recognise, is an important taxation bill, and therefore I said, and I hope the Council agreed with me, that any premature application of the closure was undesirable, and I did not accept it when it was moved. But to-day, we have had two very long speeches, on both sides of the House, and if honourable members will not be brief and express their views as shortly as possible, this debate will prolong unnecessarily, and I may have to accept the closure a little later on.

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : I am very sorry that I have taken much of the time of the House, but I.....

The Honourable the PRESIDENT, in making no comments, I merely stated a fact. It is done by both members of the House.

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: I think I shall be able to finish within two to three minutes. Something has been said about that Meston Settlement. The Meston Settlement is not a creature of this Government and this Government is not responsible for it. The Government of Bombay have more than once raised their voice against it. This Government has always been complaining and bringing to the notice of the Government of India the injustice of the Meston award, but I do not think the rejection of this bill will in any way convince the Government of India of the injustice. If the Government of India is going to be convinced, it is by sound arguments, and not by this policy of non-co-operation. If this House, in a fit of humour, say "Unless and until the Government of India revises the Meston Settlement, we are not going to sanction any new taxation, then I think it amounts to the spirit of non-co-operation, and that is not a thing which will appeal to any one. I therefore beseech that this sort of argument should not be brought forward in this House any further, because it does not help anybody.

I, therefore, lay before this House Sir, that, for the advancement of the Transferred Departments, it is absolutely necessary that more money should be provided, and unless this deficit of Rs. 41 lakhs is materially decreased, the Transferred Departments cannot hope to get any money for expansion. Even if the House will be good enough to sanction all the demands made on behalf of the departments in my charge and the departments in charge of my honourable colleagues the Ministers, still, if there be a deficit in the treasury, it goes without saying that the paper sanctions of this House will not help the Transferred Departments much further because many of the demands will have to be relinquished.

Mr. LALJI NARANJI (Indian Merchants Chamber): Sir, I heard the speech of the Honourable the Finance Member in introducing this Bill No. II of 1925, with great interest, and from his speech I could make out that he has dispassionately placed before the House the facts that he has got demands from certain departments to the extent of so many crores and that he has got so much revenue; and now it is for this House to consider whether they wish to sanction the extra amount of money that is required, either by taxation, or by the omission of certain grants that will hereafter come before the House, or in any other way. But, Sir, when I heard the speech of the Honourable the Home Member yesterday, I could never explain to myself the dictatorial attitude he assumed in demanding the money in the way in which he did so yesterday. Money has to be demanded for the administration; there may be differences of opinion as to whether the demand is justified or not; but the way in which this demand was made was rather unusual to my mind.

After having said so much, I would like to come to the subject of the bill, and put before the House certain figures and actually show whether these Rs. 42 lakhs are required or not required. I find from the note of the Finance Secretary, on page 69 of the Blue Book, there is the head of Reduction or Avoidance of Debt, and there are two entries there, one for Rs. 5,57 and the other for Rs. 10,48, which comes to Rs. 16,05. That amount of Rs. 16,05 is merely a paper deficit in my opinion. The Bombay presidency has to pay customs duty which is credited to the avoidance of debt which was not provided for in the previous budgets. Out of the 42 lakhs, I find there is a deficit of 16 lakhs which is purely a paper deficit. Then, Sir, there is another deficit of about 9 or 10 lakhs and this deficit is due to the Lee Commission proposals. Referring to this subject, the Honourable the Home Member was very vehement yesterday because he also belongs to that class for whose benefit the Lee Commission has made those proposals. The question of the Lee Commission recommendation, though not discussed in this Council, was fully discussed in the Legislative Assembly and the Honourable the Home Member must have been fully aware of it, irrespective of the fact whether a similar resolution was discussed in this Council or not. If that class to which he belongs is honest, I take the full responsibility for the expression—then I should have thought that the usual practice followed in every financial transaction would have been adopted by Government. There is little difference between a Government budget and public company's budget. What are the rules that guide such transactions in a company? When any money is voted for the man who is one of the directors, he keeps silent and he does not vote. I ask the Honourable the Home Member whether that practice had been followed here? If he had hopes of winning the resolution, he should have brought the matter before this Council for the consideration of the Lee Commission proposals. If those honourable members who have benefitted by the Lee Commission recommendation had followed the just, equitable and legal mercantile practice, then their action would have been justified. Instead of that they have, as they have been doing, deprived this presidency of about 9 or 10 lakhs on the strength of the Government of India Act. That Act was not passed by this country but it was passed by a country to which the Honourable the Home Member belongs, which lays the first claim to domineer over the affairs of this country either by force or by other means. We are quite prepared to complain against all these robberies because we do not like the methods. We have reached the highest level of taxation, and every man in this country whether he lives in rural or urban area is taxed to the highest capacity. It is now very unwise on the part of the Government to bring any proposal for taxation at a time when there are two serious propositions before the country.

The first is the economic wealth of the country. We should first of all know the economic wealth of the country—whether people possess wealth, whether they are taxed to the fullest extent, and whether they are capable of paying more. That will remove the cause for such proposals for taxation. So far as this country is concerned there is no real conflict existing between capital and labour. The object of both capital and labour is to increase the wealth of the country. I do not think that Government would deny that the legitimate claim of the people of this country is to increase the wealth of the country. I wish now briefly to refer to the factors that go to increase the wealth of a country and to those that tend to decrease the wealth of a country. The wealth of a country can only be increased if proper value is got for the raw materials produced by the people. I shall give some instances of raw materials: jute, cotton, etc. I do not know about the produce in the other provinces; I know that in Bombay we have cotton.....

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: If the honourable member deals with the whole question of economics it will occupy considerably greater time. I quite realise the importance and relevancy of the subject, but I should like to point out to the honourable member that it is hardly desirable to do so at this stage.

Mr. LALJI NARANJI: I will be very brief, Sir. When the House is asked to tax the people of this presidency they should know whether the people get the true value for their produce and whether the articles manufactured from the raw materials produced in the country are getting their worth. I submit, Sir, that we get neither the one nor the other. They do not get their value because incorrect value is given to our currency. So far as the manufactured articles of this country are concerned they are not allowed to prosper, because there is a clash of different interests.

The Honourable the Minister for Education pointed out that unless the House finds money the Government will not be able to spend money on education. I shall ask him one question: If the people are not able to pay, are you going to bleed the country white? Even by bleeding, will you be able to increase the prosperity of the country? It has been stated times out of number that there is a great depression in the presidency and the leader of the Swaraj party has already pointed out this fact clearly. I would ask Government even in their own interest whether it would not be desirable to abandon their share of the 10 lakhs this year and also utilise the balance of 16 lakhs. After a discussion with the honourable member the Finance Secretary, I am satisfied that, because we depend on land revenue, it is necessary that we should have a balance of 2 crores.

Another point I will mention is about the Bombay city. It was pointed out by the honourable member, Mr. Nariman, that the demands of the city are big. May I ask the Government to produce before this House a statement showing how much Bombay city pays in the shape of taxes, both to this Government and to the Imperial Government? In support of that I would ask the House to refer to page 35 of the Blue Book where the growth of revenue is given from 1910—1921. From that the House will see that the big item of income tax, one-half of which used to be shared by this Government, is now going to the Imperial Government. That item is contributed by Bombay city mainly. We know that the Government are fighting for it, but unless they have succeeded what is the use of voting for further taxation? We know that this is an asset which Government are getting from Bombay town. If Bombay city is to be taxed further, that tax will not be paid by the people of Bombay city from their own pockets, but the tax will be shifted on to others in the shape of higher prices on articles which Bombay city deals in. So, it will not be fair on any account to sanction any more tax. Therefore, I appeal to the House with all the force that I can command that this House should oppose this tax and vote against the first reading of this bill, and should not sanction any more taxation without first ascertaining the economic wealth of this presidency and before getting the Taxation Committee's report before it.

Mr. J. BAPTISTA (Bombay City, North): Mr. President, I am sorry that Government have introduced this bill. It seems to indicate that the Government is not in touch with the people. They do not realise, or, if they realise, they do not recognise that the times are hard and the burden is heavy. But, Sir, our pilot is an able man and he expects that he will be able to double the Cape of Good Hope and persuade the House to accept it. I hope, Sir, that those silent votes will not be forthcoming, and I trust, Sir, that the answer will be in the negative when he really proposes the question. But, Sir, whatever may be the fate of this bill, one thing is quite clear, that this debate has shown a remarkable contrast between the Finance Member and the Home Member. The Finance Member was cool as a cucumber; the Home Member was furious as a firebrand like a Tilak. His words of thundering sound roused the Tilakites to ranged around. Sir, all I wish to say is that they do not realise the financial position of the city.

This tax, though it is put in the form of a stamp duty, is really a tax on land values. That cannot be disputed. It has been virtually admitted by the Finance Secretary who characterised this tax as a minute share of the unearned increment. Therefore, Sir, this comes under Schedule II—taxation on land values—and Schedule II is intended not for provincial purses, but for municipal and local boards. Therefore, this ought to go into the purses of the local bodies and not into the provincial purse. If at all, this House should authorise the local authorities to levy this tax for the purpose of local use. The view I am suggesting is really confirmed by what has happened in the past. It is well known, Sir, that the Calcutta Improvement Trust Act imposed this stamp duty for the purpose of the improvement of the city. The Madras Municipal Act imposed the stamp duty for the purpose of improving the municipal purse. And both these Acts were passed before the Scheduled Taxes Rules under the Reforms Act came into force. So, when the Government of India prepared this Scheduled Taxes Rules they had these cases before their mind, and in framing the Rules as they did they clearly contemplate that these taxes which are levied in the form of stamp duty are assessed taxes on land values and are intended solely and exclusively for local and municipal purposes. This is quite clear, Sir, and therefore my first comment on this bill is that morally it is poaching on the preserves of the municipalities and the local boards. And this is a view which was recognised by the Government of Bombay itself not long ago. You know, Sir, very well that the resources of the Bombay municipality were insufficient for the purpose of meeting the requirements of the Improvement Trust Act, and the corporation of Bombay suggested various sources of revenue, but instead of accepting those suggestions the Government of Bombay proposed that there should be a tax on transfer of property in the same manner as a tax on land for the purpose of the improvement of the city. The corporation of Bombay rejected that view and would not accept it because it was really asking them to pay the land tax double and treble over again. Therefore they rejected it in the hope that trade would contribute something towards it. This was the origin of the cotton cess. But subsequently driven by necessity to explore other sources of revenue, the corporation of Bombay asked the Government to impose this very tax pointing out the analogy of the provisions of the Calcutta and Madras Acts. The Government of Bombay declined to give the benefit of the tax to Bombay arguing that it would be an encroachment on their rights, and that they wished to retain full control of those sources of revenue for provincial purposes. That was the position which they took, and this bill is apparently brought forward for effecting the purpose of retaining full control of this source of revenue. Well, Sir, as I say, this is really an encroachment on the rights of the municipality. But unfortunately, this is not the first time that the Government of Bombay has encroached in that way. You know very well, Sir, that under the Municipal Act a tax is imposed for the purpose of levying a cotton cess. The cess is meant to serve municipal purposes exclusively and yet four-sevenths of that goes to the coffers of Government for the purpose of suburban development and for the purpose of housing in Bombay. Apart from the encroachment this misapplication proves that there can be no difficulty for that cess is clearly earmarking it for educational purposes or any other purpose so far as legislation is concerned. And this House has made it quite clear that if they were to be earmarked for educational purposes, though the tax is bad, though the burden is heavy, still they are prepared to make that self-sacrifice for the purpose of promoting education, because education is the foundation of all our progress in every department of human activities. That is the object.

Now, Sir, the statement shows that the tax is intended to meet the demands of the municipalities and local boards for hospitals, education, etc. So far as hospitals are concerned, this Government contributes nothing to the municipal coffers of Bombay city. On the contrary the municipality contributes 4½ lakhs to them. Therefore the Bombay municipality will get nothing from it. So far as sanitation is concerned it is just the same. So far as the hospitals are concerned we have realised and recognised that Government are in straitened circumstances: they cannot extend their J. J. Hospital and find sufficient beds to give medical instruction, and they are constrained therefore to find more money for it, and His Excellency the Governor is making a very earnest appeal for the purpose of drawing something from the philanthropists of Bombay.

[Mr. J. Baptista]

I wish him all success. But we can get nothing from them so far as the Bombay municipality is concerned. Yet the claim of the Bombay municipality is the strongest. If it were not for the expenditure incurred by the Bombay municipalit, it is quite clear that the revenue from this source would not have been more than 2 lakhs. But now the assessment on land has considerably increased on account of the municipal expenditure on light, water, drainage, sanitation and roads. On roads alone we (the municipality) have spent a crore of rupees and therefore the revenue from this tax ought legitimately to go to them. If the intention is really that these receipts should go to the municipalities and local boards as assessed, then the best way of achieving the object is to authorise the local boards and municipalities to levy this taxation and not for Government to appropriate it and then give them out as doles. If that were done, then I could understand the bona fides of Government's intentions, but until they do that, they will pardon us if we think that they may use it for other purposes than those which we contemplate. If they mean to give it to us why not earmark it, as there is no difficulty in law to earmark any revenue for any particular purpose. They have done it in Madras ; they have done it in Calcutta ; why should they not do it in the city of Bombay ? Therefore, I say, Sir, that on all these grounds we ought not to allow this taxation.

The next point is the question of necessity. Is there really any necessity for this ? No doubt there is an apparent deficit of 41 lakhs and the Minister for Education says that if this new revenue is not obtained, many of the provisions made in the budget will have to be abandoned. Why ; why should they be abandoned ? He has evidently not understood the budget, and does not realise that full provision has been made from the balances. Every pie of the 41 lakhs has been fully met from the balances. I wish this was more clearly expressed in the speech of the Finance Member, for it has obscured the truth and misled some. There is absolutely no doubt that the deficit has been fully met from the balances, and that the money bill is superfluous for this purpose in the budget year. In fact the Minister of Education could have got 49 lakhs more if he wanted. But he did not want any more, and 49 lakhs from the balances have been dedicated to public works, contrary to the principle which was recently accepted by the Government of not using revenues for the purpose of building buildings which benefit posterity. Now, Sir, only last year Mr. Cadell said that it was a vicious principle to use the revenue for the purpose of building these buildings and he attributed it to a member of this House who originally suggested it. I find it was the Honourable Mr. Cowasji Jehangir who suggested it before he took office and he defended it after taking office. Therefore, Sir, the practice has been not to use capital funds for the purpose of those buildings which used to be met formerly from revenues. Why was it not done now ? Why can you not continue the old loan fund ? It could be easily done, and therefore 49 lakhs more would have been available for the purposes of education and sanitation. If they have not done so, it must be presumed that they did not want more money and were satisfied with the provisions made. It is therefore misleading and absurd to declare that provisions for education would have to be abandoned if this bill does not become law. Now, Sir, the last point that I wish to urge is, as I have said before, that it is a great mistake to move this bill and that those who are pressing it forward are doing a great disservice to this province, because they are thereby delaying the only remedy that can be effectively applied in the matter, and that remedy is the restoration of our share in the income tax. This has been translated or interpreted into a sort of attitude of non-co-operation that we shall not tax ourselves until we get our share in the income tax. Nothing of the kind. What I meant to suggest is that our taxes are heavy; we are overburdened with taxes; and it is a great mistake for Government to bring this money bill and thereby create the false impression that our taxing capacity is not exhausted. I want the Government to understand that if you give the impression to the world at large that our taxing capacity is not reached, that our balances are overflowing, and concealing the fact that our nation-building departments are starved, then neither the other provinces nor the Government of India would look with sympathy upon us. I have not suggested skulking. I would be ashamed of it. I would feel ashamed of the attitude that we should not tax ourselves although we can easily do so, until our share of the income tax is restored to us. I would not starve education or sanitation for the purpose of escaping taxation that could be borne without breaking down. I want the Government to realise that our burden is heavy, and that we cannot afford to pay further taxes, that our taxing capacity is reached and exhausted. Do not mislead the provinces, and do not mislead the Government of India that we are able to tax ourselves, even though we do not get our share in the income tax revenue. That is my attitude. I hope, Sir, no patriotic citizen will allow himself to be misled in this matter or will allow this taxation. I am not skulking. I have tried to show and impress on Government benches that they do not realise that the present taxation is heavy, that we are overburdened with taxes, that our taxing capacity is reached. I hope, therefore, that this House will reject this bill.

An Honourable MEMBER: I move the closure.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I accept it. The Honourable the Finance Member will reply.

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE: Mr. President, I think the corporation of Bombay has to be congratulated on having such an eloquent advocate of their interests as the honourable member who has just sat down. I do not think that his arguments are quite equal in value to the delightful manner in which he presents them. He has made certain somewhat serious errors, misunderstandings of course, when he tells us that the Government pay nothing for hospitals in Bombay.

Mr. J. BAPTISTA: Nothing to the corporation.

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE : Nothing to the corporation. Many years ago there was an agreement made between the Bombay Government and the Bombay corporation by which the Bombay Government took over certain payments which had formerly been made by the Bombay corporation and undertook to maintain the hospitals as they were then existing and received from the corporation a sum of $3\frac{1}{2}$ or 4 lakhs towards maintenance of those hospitals.

Mr. J. BAPTISTA : $4\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs.

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE : $4\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs ; thank you. Now, Sir, these hospitals used to cost Government 4 lakhs. Now they are costing 14 lakhs, that is, the special expenditure of Government on hospitals in Bombay has increased in these years, from 4 to 14 lakhs. The whole responsibility of medical relief apart from these hospitals was at that time and is now in charge of the municipality.

Then, Sir, the honourable member makes a great point of the rules regarding taxes which are allotted to Government and to municipalities. Now in these rules the very first tax allotted to the provincial Government is a tax on land put to uses other than agricultural. That he omitted to notice or to mention. The other items allotted to provincial Government include stamp duties, so that this particular duty is allotted to the Government whether you regard it as stamp duty, as it technically is; or as a land tax on land used for purposes other than agricultural as the honourable member suggested that it may be regarded. In either case it is a due apportionment to the provincial exchequer.

I turn now, Sir, to the remarks of the honourable member for Bombay city, Mr. Lalji Naranji. He makes a great point of an entry in our budget of 16 lakhs 5 thousand for avoidance of debt. Now the honourable member has failed to note that there is a corresponding entry on the receipt side, and that of these 16 lakhs, 12 lakhs are due to the payment of customs duty. This is a new item and has been the subject of discussion with the Government of India during the last few months. Under the law recently passed, the Government of Bombay have to pay customs duty on material that they import which was formerly free of duty. This measure has been taken for the promotion of trade and industries in India. But the Government of India have agreed to restore to the Government of Bombay a corresponding amount on condition that that is allotted to the avoidance of debt. It is a pro forma account. The money is received on the one hand and is paid out on the other; and it is not therefore a sum on which we can draw for ordinary expenditure.

Mr. LALJI NARANJI : I have noticed that. What I wanted to point out was that it is a profit entry, and I suggested that it is better as a surplus as we had not actually parted with the money.

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE : I have no quarrel with the honourable member. I only thought that probably other honourable members understood him as I understood him to say that this money was available from our balances and could be utilized and made available for additional expenditure. I wished to suggest to the House that that impression is wholly incorrect.

Then another speech which attacked this side of the House is the speech of the honourable member for Bombay City, South, advocating the claims of Bombay and running tilt at the Government generally. That honourable member used very extravagant language with remarkable inaccuracy. With regard to the Gateway of India on which he charged the Government with having squandered 26 lakhs of rupees, the honourable member did not mention (quite naturally, because it is no part of his case), that this work had begun in 1914, and what the present Government has done was to bring to completion a work that was handed down to us by successive Governments. Further he charges us with squandering 26 lakhs of public money on that work. It is true that the work has cost 26 lakhs, but the honourable member did not mention (it was no part of his case to do so) that of that sum more than 5 lakhs have been contributed by a private munificent donor, 2 lakhs contributed by the municipality and another sum by the Port Trust and 3 lakhs or more by the Government of India; so the balance which we had to pay was about two-thirds of 26 lakhs.

He further attacked us with reference to the Kasheli bridge and suggested that Government had been guilty of grave impropriety in undertaking an expenditure without the approval of this House. On that point, Sir, the honourable member is mis-informed. Amongst the supplementary estimates you will find a full statement of the cost regarding that bridge. So the honourable member is not, as he has claimed to be, revealing to this House secret negotiations which we were ashamed to mention to this House. The real facts are there and are open to any honourable member who studies the supplementary statements and when Government undertook to pay this sum to the Bombay municipality, they made it subject to the proviso that the sum should be approved by the Legislative Council. I suggest, Sir, that that statement completely disposes of any grievance that the honourable member has attempted to build upon the Kasheli bridge.

Now, Sir, I regret I am somewhat long in my reply but the matter is of some importance. There is still an undercurrent of belief that the Bombay Government spends money somewhat freely, and there is a reluctance to recognise that the people of Bombay get good value for the money that is spent. Sir, I have here a note which has been prepared which compares the expenditure of the Government of Bombay with the expenditure in other provinces, and I shall be very glad to place this note on the table of this House for honourable members to study at leisure, but I will just give the principal figures of this note.

If we take the average annual expenditure of the five years ending 1921-22 on education from provincial revenues, we find that Bombay spent 127 lakhs a year (and we are now a crore ahead of this figure), Madras which has twice the population of Bombay spends 121 lakhs, United Provinces 104, Bengal 99, and Punjab which has the same population as we have, spends just half that amount, 63 lakhs. If we take this expenditure per million of the population, we find that in Bombay we spend 6·5 lakhs per annum, while in Madras they spend less than half, 2·9, and Bengal 2·2, United Provinces 2·2, Punjab 3·1. If we examine the question as to how much of the total grant on education is spent on primary education, we find that in Bombay we spend 58 per cent., in Madras 35 per cent., in United Provinces 28 per cent., in the Punjab 22 per cent., in Bengal 14 per cent. Throughout this very elaborate statement we find that Bombay in the matter of education, primary education in particular, is doing more for the people than any other Government in India. Turning to medical relief we find that per million of the people Bombay spends 1 lakh 70 thousand, Madras 92, Bengal 78, United Provinces 41, Punjab 88. Expenditure in Bombay is twice that of Madras, Bengal, and Punjab and more than four times the expenditure in the United Provinces. If we take the number of hospitals and dispensaries in various provinces, we have a larger number than Madras, United Provinces, or the Punjab. We have a larger number of beds available than any other province except Madras which beats us by 60 out of 9,000. If we take public health, we find that Bombay spends 77 thousands per million of population, Madras 50, Bengal 27, United Provinces 47, Punjab 46. On agriculture, too, we spend more in proportion than any other Government, by a very great deal, Rs. 1,10,000 per million as compared with Rs. 46,000 in Madras, Rs. 35,000 in Bengal, Rs. 43,000 in the United Provinces, and the Punjab comes nearest to us with Rs. 1,06,000. If you turn to communications, which are of special value to the rural areas, we find that the provincial expenditure during the last five years in Bombay was 38 lakhs, Madras 7 lakhs, Bengal 21 lakhs the United Provinces 30 lakhs and the Punjab 37 lakhs; per million of the population we spent far more than any other province, except the Punjab. In the matter of roads, the Bombay Government maintains 7,000 miles of metalled roads, while Madras have 400 and odd, Bengal 700, and the Punjab 1,200. I mention these facts to indicate that, while it is true that the Bombay Government do take more money per head of the population than any other Government, we do infinitely more in return. It is an example of what I was mentioning a day or two ago of the combined social effort of the people of Bombay, which has reached a far higher standard than is possessed in any other province in India.

Now, Sir, there has been a point mentioned by several speakers, which has aroused the anxiety of certain members in regard to the wording of this bill, and that is the power taken in the bill to extend this Act to municipal areas other than Bombay. Now, Sir, if this bill goes into select committee, we shall be only too glad to discuss that point with the select committee, and to settle what is the best way of restricting that power. We recognise that the Legislative Council has a right to be consulted before any such extension takes place. We recognise, further, that they have a right not merely to be consulted, but to give their definite approval before any extension of the Act is made to any other municipality.

[Mr. H. S. Lawrence]

We are quite prepared to add in the select committee a proviso to this effect, so that no city may be included and brought within the scope of this bill without the definite approval of this Legislative Council. The honourable member from Nasik further expressed his wish that there should be a statutory provision to bind Government to spend the revenue derived from this bill on education, public health and sanitation. Sir, those are the purposes mentioned in the statement of objects and reasons of the bill. He then stated that bitter experience has led him to distrust Government, but he gave no instances by which we could ascertain what he had in mind. The only case within my knowledge and experience is the Primary Education Bill, and the Honourable Minister has put before the House the figures which show conclusively that Government have not only fulfilled their undertaking in regard to that bill, but have provided far more revenue for primary education than they ever undertook to do. The excess revenue there provided is Rs. 10 lakhs in these three years; and in the budget the provision for next year is greater than the normal increase that all the other departments have had, together with the receipts from the Entertainment Tax. Take all those sums together, and you will find that what we have spent on primary education is Rs. 10 lakhs more than we undertook to do. We intend to spend the money derivable from this bill in a similar manner on education, sanitation and public health, and we are quite prepared to give any such guarantee as we gave before in this House, or to support it in any other manner of guarantee which this House may think fit. Any proposal for making that undertaking good will be very thoroughly examined and thankfully received by the Government.

Now, Sir, the issue before this House is quite clearly put. That issue is whether the House will follow the dictation of the Swaraj party and refuse to Government those funds which are by common admission urgently necessary for the advance of the presidency in every branch of the administration. The House has the assurance of the Honourable Ministers, not merely that these funds are necessary for the working of their departments, but also that they have received from Government generous assistance from the funds hitherto available. Honourable members can, by a study of the budget and of the graphs and statements that have been specially provided in this year's Blue Book, ascertain for themselves the genuine character of the vast advance that has been made in the Transferred Departments in recent years. But if they are diffident of their own capacity to understand these figures, if they suspect that these financial statements have been prepared for the bewilderment and deception of honest men, still, they have the guarantee of their Ministers in the matter. Do they propose to reject these guarantees, their assurances, in favour of those spurious and plausible arguments of the honourable member who leads the Swarajist party? Sir, the honourable member who leads that party has a very high reputation for clever advocacy at the Bombay Bar, but never, I think, has he had a worse case to argue than the present one, and never, perhaps, did he rise so greatly to the occasion and make so specious a representation so utterly at variance with the real facts of the case. We, Sir, have no highly trained advocates to represent our point of view. We do not need any, for the strength of our case lies entirely in its patent justice. It is the function of a Government to hold the scales of justice even, in the matter of taxation, to see that the burdens of taxation do not press more heavily on one section of the population than on another. It is their duty to make all classes contribute to the State so far as is possible, in proportion to their capacity to bear the burden. Now, in this case, Government have come to the conclusion that in great cities, and particularly in the city of Bombay, there is a class of men who have benefited largely and grown rich by the labours of other men. This class has acquired possession of land which has increased in value manifold, not through their own efforts and exertions, but through the growth of the prosperity of the country and by the concentration, for the purposes of industry, of large masses of people in small areas of land. It is on behalf of such men, who reckon their wealth now by thousands, but in a former generation reckoned it by hundreds, who reckon their wealth now by lakhs but in a former generation reckoned it by thousands, it is on behalf of this fortunate but small class of land owners that the honourable member puts forward his plea that the levy of a 2 per cent. tax on the value of land transferred is a crushing and iniquitous burden. Sir, on behalf of his clients, he, like a well trained advocate as he is, has put forward the plea that the increase of tax to the extent of 200 per cent. is crushing and iniquitous. But what has he to say in regard to the growth of the wealth of his clients? Figures are fascinating things to play with, as the honourable member so rightly appreciates. To raise a tax from one rupee to three rupee would increase it by 200 per cent. and that is, so he tells us, an injustice and an iniquity. If the man had one lakh of rupees and made it into 10 lakhs, what percentage is that? In either case, it is a larger percentage, a thousand per cent. some people call it, 900 per cent. more correctly, than the increase on which the honourable member bases his plea. These are the honourable member's clients, on behalf of whom he employs the eloquence of his trained advocacy in this House. The honourable member is spurred to greater vehemence by his political ambition which coincides with these economic interests. A year ago the honourable member told this House that his party had entered this House for the purpose of putting an end to this system of Government. Now, Sir, in doing so the honourable member held views entirely different from those held by the majority of this House. But any plea which he can recommend to the other sections of this House as an obstacle to the policy of Government is good enough for him. With the narrow creed of the Swarajists, with the blinded vision of that party he thinks he can serve his country by every obstacle which he can oppose to the policy of Government. The fact that that policy means relief from sufferings for the poor or that policy.....

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR: Is this material, Sir? What has the policy of the Swaraj party got to do with the merits of this measure?

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE : It has a great deal to do with it. It overclouds the question entirely.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI : Do these remarks arise from the debate ?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I think the reply should be confined to the points raised in the debate. The honourable member the leader of the Swaraj party stated in the course of his speech that he and his party stand for certain principles and therefore this reply arises from that remark.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR : I stated that my party stood for strict retrenchment and economy in the administration. That is an answer to the Honourable the Finance Member. The policy of the Swaraj party has nothing to do with this.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD : It is most unfair not to allow every party to say what it has got to say.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : This is a very technical point as to whether in reply you should restrict yourself to the very point that has been raised in the debate. Technically it is perfectly true. If any reference has been made to the principles of that party in the course of the debate, the reply is perfectly relevant. If no reference to its principles has been made, then it will be irrelevant.

Mr. J. BAPTISTA : Sir, the Honourable the Finance Member stated that the other parties are acting under the dictates of the Swaraj party. That is a misrepresentation.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : To say that any member is acting under the dictates of another member would be to attribute motives. I did not catch those words.

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE : I did not state that honourable members were acting under dictation ; but on the contrary I begged of them not to follow the dictation of that party.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I do not think that it makes any difference. That is playing with words.

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE : I withdraw the remark, Sir, if it caused annoyance to any members.

I was saying that the policy which the Government desire to follow is the policy of giving relief to the poor and particularly the ryot. These considerations have not weighed with the honourable member who urges the rejection of this bill. He shuts his eyes and his ears, steels his heart and drugs his conscience. Those members of the ministerial party to whom the Leader of the House appealed yesterday are those who have not subscribed to the wrecking policy of the Swarajists. To them these considerations must appeal strongly.

I pointed out in my opening address yesterday some of the many works of benefit to the poor, and the ryot in particular, which are dependent on the passing of this bill. There was one scheme in particular which came too late for inclusion in the budget. But we hope at a later period, if funds are made available, to obtain the approval of the House to that scheme: and that is very typical of this general category. I refer to it again in particular. This is the maternity hospital for women in the Parel area of Bombay and chiefly for women of mill-hands. Sir, when we remember the terrible mortality of infant children and of women in child birth; when we remember the terrible condition in which these women suffer in slums in Bombay, one can wonder at, but not admire, the philosophic calm with which the advocates of wealth and prosperity can dismiss such a problem. Sir, the honourable member is a philosopher of repute and no doubt is free from all belief in the legends and traditions of the country-side. But to less enlightened men there is something which touches the deepest chords of sympathy in the village legend of the Churel or Dakin: the woman who dies in child birth and whose wraith appears at night to haunt the wakeful hours of the man who caused her sufferings. Sir, the honourable member and his followers can no doubt afford to jeer at such sentiments. But I have a robust faith in the genuine good feeling of the constituents who have sent members to this House. I have little doubt that a revulsion of feeling will shortly arise, of which we see signs daily throughout India, against men who have shown by their actions that they are incapable to distinguish between right and wrong, between good and evil, and that these men will have to meet the day of reckoning in the end.

I appeal therefore to those honourable members who hold the balance between the Swaraj party on the one side and Government on the other. I appeal to those honourable members not to be misled by the specious pleadings of the leader of the Swaraj party and the able advocates of the Bombay municipal corporation but to give us the first reading of the bill and to send it for further discussion in the select committee.

Question put: House divided: Ayes 43; Noes 44. Motion rejected.

Division No. 1.

Ayes.

BILL No. III OF 1925 (A BILL FURTHER TO AMEND THE COURT-FEES ACT, 1870).

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE: Mr. President, I rise to ask the first reading of Bill No. III of 1925, (a Bill * further to amend the Court fees Act, 1870). This bill, Sir, as stated in the statement of objects and reasons, is to enhance the court-fees in certain cases for the purpose of increasing the revenue of Government. Now, Sir, we have had so much debate in the last few days on the question both of the revenue and the expenditure of Government that I do not think it is necessary for me to labour that subject any further.

This bill is the same bill that was proposed to this House and rejected by them on the first reading on the 23rd February 1924, and I have no doubt that some members of this House will denounce this action of Government in bringing it forward again with righteous indignation and with contemptuous scorn. Nevertheless, we think it right to ask the House to reconsider their decision of a year ago in the light of their experience of this year's administration. We have every hope that members who were brought into touch with the working of Government during this year will appreciate the necessity of the provision of these revenues to enable Government to continue and expand their various activities.

Now, there is a distinction between this bill and the bill on which we had the voting half an hour ago. That bill was intended to produce revenue specially for expenditure in regard to the demands of the great cities. This bill is intended to produce revenue for expenditure particularly in regard to rural areas. It is not possible to earmark particular parts of revenue and to assert that the benefits from a particular parcel of revenue will be conferred in a particular area. But we can only proceed on the general principle of stating that we hope to expand the work of the Government in regard to public health, roads and such beneficent activities throughout the rural districts. As an illustration, I may mention the number of bridges and causeways which have been constructed throughout the presidency in recent years to the very great benefit of the humble wayfarer and for the protection of his cattle from damage and loss. In the list of works that are proposed for the next year members will no doubt have noted items of interest to their particular locality or neighbourhood. I remember in particular there is one causeway of importance over the river Tapti which is to cost a good deal of money. That causeway we will certainly not be able to construct if the House does not give us the money proposed in this bill. There are similar improvements to roads; certain provincial roads are proposed in remote parts of the Khandesh district. Those will have to be foregone if we do not get this money. I will not go through the whole list, for I have mentioned them in a former speech. I merely give these particular illustrations as they occur to my mind at the moment.

* Vide Appendix D.

Now, Sir, in regard to this particular bill, it is worth while to remember that these fees have not been enhanced since 1870, except for a period of two years when this House granted a temporary enhancement in 1922. We have reason to believe that that temporary enhancement was not felt as a hardship in any part of the country except in this manner: we had one complaint that the result of the enhancement was that the party engaged in litigation reduced the fees of their pleaders by an equivalent amount. Now, Sir, that is no doubt an unpleasant aspect of the case for the pleaders, but this Council as a whole is not concerned with the emolument of pleaders but with the benefit of the masses of the people. It may be of interest to the House, Sir, to be informed or reminded that after this House accepted that enhancement bill 3 years ago, other provinces in India followed our example, and adopted almost exactly the same rate of fees that we had adopted. Most of them, however, made it a permanent Act. So that at the present moment most of the other provinces of India are charging on their court-fees the sum that we are now asking in this present bill. The theory that finds so much favour with some honourable members in this House that Bombay is more heavily taxed than any other province does not hold good in this particular respect with regard to the taxation on litigants by means of court-fees. In Bombay our litigants pay considerably less than they do in any province in India, and they pay on a scale or schedule fixed over 50 years ago. Then, Sir, some honourable members have been distressed by the fear that this bill will press hardly on the poor cultivator. We have a minimum fixed in this bill of five hundred rupees. As a matter of fact when we produced our original bill we had a higher minimum and the select committee reduced this figure to five hundred. We have now retained it in the bill as it stands at the figure that was approved by the select committee two years ago, but we are quite prepared to raise that minimum. If honourable members will send this bill to the select committee to consider, we shall be glad to fix the minimum below which there shall be no enhancement of court-fees at such sum as may be agreed so as to exempt all ordinary cases of litigation by agriculturists.

Well, Sir, I think that those arguments are sufficient to commend this bill to all those who are interested in the progress of our rural areas in regard to education, sanitation, and public health, for it is expressly for these purposes that this revenue is required. We have been accused quite recently with bringing in a bill on the principle of divide and rule. Any less appropriate charge cannot be conceived, for we introduced one bill to touch the urban dwellers and the other bill the rural dwellers. One is a corollary to the other. This bill can, however, be considered entirely on its own merits, for while the resources available for the benefits of cities have been curtailed by the refusal of the first bill, resources for the benefits of the rural areas may yet be granted by the acceptance of this bill. Sir, I commend the bill for the acceptance of this House.

Question proposed.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Order, order, there are several amendments of which the honourable member, Mr. Bhopatkar, has given notice.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR: Sir, I do not wish to move any of them.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN: Sir, I rise to a point of order. I want to know whether this is a tax which can be imposed without the previous sanction of the Governor General, because I find in the preamble of all the other bills the words that the previous sanction of the Governor General has been obtained to those bills. It is not stated in the preamble of this bill that the sanction of the Government of India has been obtained to this bill. Under the rules under the Government of India Act there are certain taxations which can be levied without the sanction of the Governor General and I should like to know whether this is one of them.

Mr. P. E. PERCIVAL: The Government of India have been addressed on the subject and they say that sanction is not necessary.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The point is whether the sanction of the Governor General is necessary. The Governor General may have come to that decision but if the Remembrancer of Legal Affairs will be good enough to point out why sanction is not necessary, it will effectively meet the point of order. I should like him to explain why it is not necessary. If the House will allow a minute's delay, the law officer of Government will explain why no sanction is necessary to this bill.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMED: May I ask a question to the Honourable the Leader of the House whether the sanction of the Government of India was obtained to the last bill.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI : It was obtained.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : It does not necessarily follow that because sanction was taken last year, it is not necessary this year. What is required is that the law officer of Government should satisfy me to enable me to give my ruling and should also satisfy the House that no sanction is necessary.

Order, order. The clause that appears to me to apply to this case is clause (a) of sub-section (3) of section 80A of the Government of India Act, which reads as follows :

"Imposing or authorising the imposition of any new tax unless the tax is a tax scheduled as exempted from this provision by rules made under this Act."

If such rules have been made, and this tax has been exempted, then no sanction of the Government of India is necessary. If the honourable member Mr. Nariman does not mind, I should like to give the law officers of Government some time to look up the authorities and produce them. In the meantime, the discussion may proceed.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN : I have no objection.

Mr. P. E. PERCIVAL : In the bill, as originally drafted, such a provision was made, and the bill was sent to the Government of India for sanction ; but they wrote back and said that sanction was unnecessary.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I will give him time to look up the authorities. In the meantime, the discussion on the first reading will proceed.

Mr. C. M. SAPTARSHI (Ahmednagar District) : Sir, I rise to oppose the first reading of this bill. You are aware, Sir, of the history of this piece of legislation. In the year 1922, the present Government obtained the sanction of this House for additional taxation. Even at that time, when the House did not consist of unreasonable men with a policy of obstruction, but of sweet, reasonable men, even at that time the non-official members opposed the tax, and it was with very great difficulty that the Government succeeded in obtaining the consent of the House to impose the tax for two years, after a cut of Rs. 60 lakhs was agreed to by Government. We know, Sir, the subsequent history of this tax, because, as I have already stated in my budget speech the expenditure has again gone up to what it was before the year 1921-22. That being the position of affairs, we are again bound to oppose this taxation bill. I simply wonder at the temerity of Government in again trying to introduce this measure when, in this very House, last year, they were not successful in obtaining its consent to it. The Honourable Mr. Lawrence, who was unfortunately absent at that time and whose speech was delivered by the Honourable Mr. Cadell, had also raised certain arguments with regard to this bill at the time, and I find that those very arguments are again repeated in the present speech of the Honourable the Finance Member. Now, I wish first to refer to his argument regarding the Court-fees Bill in paragraph 19 of his speech. My honourable friend, the Finance Member complimented the leader of the Swaraj party on his able advocacy and dwelt on the weakness of his case. I may exchange that compliment, and I may again say that the Honourable the Finance Member, though he has not been an advocate all his life shows capacity of a very high order in that particular respect. I may also return the same compliment and say that he would never have had a weaker case than the one which he wants to present to this House with regard to his taxation proposal. What do we find him saying in paragraph 19 of his speech? He says :

“ During the year 1922-23 these fees were raised by legislation sanctioned by this House in March 1922 representing an average increase of some 25 per cent. No indications have come to the notice of this Government that the pressure of these enhanced fees was seriously felt in any quarter. It certainly did not lead to any decrease in litigation or other transactions which were taxed by means of these stamps. The people are not usually reluctant to draw attention to any financial burdens that may appear to be oppressive. But when we enquired of district officers the reports were to the effect that no complaints had been received.”

I say, Sir, that the ways of our bureaucratic Government are very curious. When a particular tax is oppressive, and when we organise an agitation or public meetings in protest of the tax, we are called political agitators, as persons who want to create an unpleasant atmosphere for the administration of our benign Government. If we do not protest, then we are supposed to give our tacit consent to these taxation proposals. The Honourable the Finance Member wants to put the poor ryot on the horns of a dilemma. They cannot keep silent, they cannot protest, because if they protest he condemns them as agitators, and if they do not protest then he presumes that they tacitly consent to the fresh taxation proposals. Now, Sir, what more effective form of protest does my honourable friend the Finance Member require than the protest made by the elected representatives of those ryots in this House? I think in all democratically constituted governments, the greatest protest that could be afforded to Government is the protest made by the people's legally constituted representatives, and I presume that the Honourable Mr. Lawrence has read the debates of last year and of the year 1922. He has not considered those protests incorporated in the statements made by those honourable members who represented the mofussil. Does he not think those protests sufficient? Does he presume that the capacity to understand the condition and the difficulties of the poor agriculturists is given to the I. C. S. only and not to the people who represent them here? I tell him that we understand the capacity and the grievances of the people far better than any other people of his cult can do.

I come now to the most inaccurate statement contained in the speech of the Honourable the Finance Member. The honourable member for West Khandesh made some inaccurate statement in his speech and the Honourable Mr. Lawrence while correcting that inaccuracy was rather very impatient. There is an inaccuracy in the statement of the Honourable the Finance Member which one would not have expected from a responsible officer of his type.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Has it any relevancy to the subject before the House ?

Mr. C. M. SAPTARSHI: It is absolutely relevant. I refer to paragraph 20 of his speech. He says:

"Now it is worth while to enquire when are Court-fees payable. They are paid for the most part by persons who have recourse to law courts for the institution of suits. And I believe that it will be generally agreed that these gentlemen who receive the assistance of the State for the recovery of their debts are people who do not ordinarily contribute to the support of the State either by payment of land revenue or perhaps still less by payment of excise revenue. These are some of our most worthy and esteemed citizens. They derive perhaps the largest share of benefit from the protection accorded by our police forces and our Courts of Justice. They take their full share of benefit of our roads and hospitals and other public activities but I think it is correct to state that they do not pay any large share to the support of these institutions."

There he refers to court-fees. I request the Honourable the Finance Member to consider that I claim to possess a greater knowledge of litigants than himself. I request him that he should place all the figures on the table to refute this most inaccurate and irresponsible statement he has made. I know that 90 per cent. of the litigants are paying either income tax or land revenue. They also pay municipal charges or district board charges. These gentlemen do contribute to the revenues of the presidency. I am surprised to find this argument contained in the speech of the Honourable the Finance Member.

After referring to this inaccuracy, I come now to the statement he made with regard to this bill. The honourable the Finance Member says that the money that will be derived from this taxation will be devoted for certain purposes. I need not dwell upon that, because I know that the Honourable the Finance Member has in his very eloquent and very brilliant concluding portion of his speech on the Stamp Bill shown very great solicitude and generosity for the poor people of this country. It is good to have in the Government such generous and liberal men. But I am sorry that the Honourable the Finance Member wishes to be liberal and generous at others' expense. His generosity would have been more justified, if he had dropped from the budget 9 lakhs this year and 10 lakhs next year as a result of the recommendation of the Lee Commission, and then come before this House and said: "We have paid that amount to the public exchequer: We want more money. Therefore give us." Then his generosity would have appealed to us far more. It is very easy to be liberal at the expense of others. You never submitted the Lee Commission proposals to the Legislative Council. It is true that we did not take advantage of asking for priority as has been pointed out by the Honourable the Home Member. Was it not your duty as well to take the consent of this House for the money which you propose to spend for the Lee Commission allowances? (A voice: No, no.) If they had obtained the consent of the House, which the honourable member says he had every hope to obtain, it would have been far more creditable. Instead of doing so, in years of financial stringency when every single pie is most important to the public exchequer, you take away this amount of 10 lakhs. It is not a joke to spend 10 lakhs in these days when it is very difficult to find money by means of taxation.

The Honourable the Finance Member while concluding his speech on the Stamp Bill advised people who do not belong to the Swaraj party not to act up to the advice of that party. I am quite sure that every member be he a non-Brahmin, or Mussalman, or Independent, or Liberal, who has come to this House has come here with the object of doing good to his constituents. Every one is doing his level best whatever be the differences with regard to voting. If that is so, it is absolutely useless to appeal to those members who do not belong to the Swaraj party not to follow the principles or the tactics of that party. Sir, the Honourable the Finance Member says that our policy is one of wrecking. Sir, I am proud to say that I am a wrecker. (Honourable Members : Hear, hear.) I want to wreck this system of diarchy. I have come here with the express purpose of wrecking diarchy (An Honourable Member : Now, we know.) You ought have known it long ago [Interruption].

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Order, order.

Mr. C. M. SAPTARSHI : We have never concealed the fact. We are not ashamed of it. On the other hand we are proud of it. We know what a mess you have made of the finances of this presidency. With the aid of diarchy you want to pocket to yourself the money and put forward the plea that there are no funds for the Honourable Ministers for administering the transferred departments because the Council did not give money and throw the blame on the Ministers. We want to wreck this diarchy—this double form of Government. We want a Government fully responsible to this House. That is our ideal, but it is not possible for us now, because we have not got a majority. We are trying to do our level best under the circumstances being in a minority. It is on account of this that we do not act up to our policy of obstruction. There is no use therefore appealing to other members not to act up to the dictates of the Swaraj party. It is no use having cheap gibes at us or at our leader. We know what you are ; and you know what we are. Every one of us is trying to do what he can in the interests of the country as a whole. So far as the Stamp Bill was concerned we opposed it not because we wanted to wreck Government, but because we knew that the ryot could not pay the tax ; and the non-Brahmin party opposed it because they felt that their constituency was so poor that they could not pay the tax. As I have already said, we are not afraid of being called wreckers. You have bled the country white.....

The DEPUTY PRESIDENT : The honourable member should not address the opposite side as " You ". The honourable member should address the chair.

: Mr. C. M. SAPTARSHI ; The Government benches, Sir, ought to know that we oppose this bill not because we want to wreck, but because we know that our constituency is so poor that they are not in a position to pay the money, and we also know that the Government at present in authority are so inefficient and have made such a mess of the financial affairs of the presidency that whatever money you may put into their pockets they will again ask for more like Oliver Twist. It is on these grounds, Sir, that I rise to oppose the present bill.

Mr. H. B. SHIVDASANI (Surat District) : Sir, I rise to oppose the first reading of this bill. The figures placed before us by Government in the White Book go to show completely that it is not necessary for Government to impose a tax of this kind. On page 3 of the Civil Estimates we find that the income from Judicial Stamps is Rs. 79,60,000 ; and on page 5 of the Civil Estimates we find that the income from Administration of Justice comes to Rs. 16,12,000. So in all, the income from Judicial Stamps and Administration of Justice comes to Rs. 95,72,000. Then, on page 9 of the Civil Estimates we find that the expenditure on Administration of Justice comes to Rs. 76,38,000. There is a net surplus of Rs. 19,34,000 under Justice. Now, therefore, I ask is it fair or is it proper for Government to make administration of justice dear to the people. The British people pride themselves on the law and order that they maintain and always say that they have introduced British justice in India. Now, on the one hand they want to establish the rule of law and order and justice, and on the other hand they go and try to make justice dear. Now, if you increase the court-fees you will deter people from having resort to the law courts. Is it the object of Government to deny justice to the people ? What is the meaning of imposing such a tax ? Whatever might have been said in favour of the tax that has been thrown out, there is no justification for imposing a tax of this sort. If Government want more money the right course is not to impose a tax of this kind. It is not proper to make the administration of justice dear. The Honourable the Finance Member in his speech has not tried to show that the cost of establishment for Administration of Justice is more than the receipts of Government from that source. It may be contended that under Judicial Stamps there is an income from such sources as Probate, Letters of Administration and Succession. But then we have no separate figures to show what are the receipts from these stamps. But so far as the figures given are concerned they go to show that Government is making a net profit of Rs. 19,34,000 from Administration of Justice and Judicial Stamps. It seems to me hardly right or proper to impose a tax of this sort and make the administration of justice dear. We want justice and we want it to be cheap. It is not a good move on the part of Government to suggest a tax of this sort. If their object is only to increase revenue they must have recourse to other forms of taxation which will be free from serious objections.

Mr. N. E. NAVLE (Ahmednagar District): Sir, as a member of the non-Brahmin party I rise to oppose this bill. Sir, the case of this bill is different from that of the bill which was defeated some time back. This bill directly affects the agriculturists, and as a member returned by the Deccan agriculturists I think it is my duty to stand by the side of the agriculturists and to oppose this bill. The argument that is advanced on behalf of Government is this : that this additional taxation will fall on those who will have recourse to law courts. But it has been amply shown and proved that it will not affect the men who have recourse to the law courts in the first instance, but will indirectly and ultimately affect the agriculturists who in 99 cases out of 100 are defendants in the courts. As it will fall on the agriculturists we are against it. It will be seen from the figures for Judicial administration that Government are actually carrying on a profiteering business out of this administration. Where are the profits coming from? At present they are coming from the pockets of the agriculturists. And still Government want to extend their profiteering and want more money from the agriculturists. We want Government not to do this, and therefore we are against the bill and we will oppose it.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts): Mr. President, I am standing to oppose this bill. In doing so I want to put forward certain considerations for both sides of the House. I have got some figures as regards the non-judicial stamps and judicial stamps, and I find that the law of diminishing returns is being proved to the hilt. The figures I have collected relate to the years commencing from 1919-20. What I find is that the revenue from judicial and non-judicial stamps was Rs. 1,58,12,000 in 1919-20; it went up to Rs. 1,77,29,000 in 1920-21, and in 1921-22 it was Rs. 1,64,36,000. Now, out of these years, the year 1921-22 was a lean year. Now, up to the year 1921-22 neither the Court-fees Amending Act nor the Stamp Act Amending Act were in operation. Both those amending Acts came into operation from 1st April 1922. Then I have got the figures for 1922-23, and I have also taken the average for the previous three years. What I find is that the average for non-judicial stamps for the previous three years was Rs. 93,56,000, and as a matter of fact in 1921-22 it was Rs. 94,85,000; but in 1922-23, though the Stamp Act was in operation, it went down to Rs. 91,20,000. Similarly, there was a slight rise in the court-fees by about 2 lakhs in 1922-23 and a further rise of about 7 lakhs in 1923-24. But owing to the non-passing of the Court-fees Act last year Government expected that the court-fees revenue would come down and in the budget which they made for 1924-25 they put down the judicial revenue as Rs. 73,00 thousand. But what is the result? The revised estimate shows the revenue to be Rs. 80,85 thousand. That means, in spite of our throwing out the Court-fees Bill there has been an improvement of nearly Rs. 7,55 thousand. So, though we rejected the Court-fees Bill, though there was depression of trade,—it is admitted on all hands that there was depression of trade and there is depression in trade, and the non-selling of the Development Department's plots, etc., conclusively proves that there is depression in trade—yet in spite of the throwing out of this Court-fees Bill, the revenue has improved by 17 lakhs. So that shows that is the normal rise. When you increased the court-fees stamp, the result was that your expectations were never realised and there was a retrograde motion, and when you did not increase the court-fees stamp, you found there was an increase in the revenue. That conclusively proves that as soon as you cross the border of normal rise, instead of getting more revenue there is a fall in the revenue. So I wish to point out to this House that though we threw out the bill last year, there was no loss of revenue and there was, on the other hand, an improvement of 16 lakhs and more. Now, if you will please turn to the Blue Book, you will find at page 73 the heading "Administration of Justice". Now, the budget estimate as regards the court-fees realised in cash shows that it was 90 lakhs; the revised estimate is Rs. 1,20 thousand. That means that as a matter of fact there was an increase. It was more than the actual receipts in the year 1923-24, which amounted to Rs. 1,15 thousand. The Court-fees Act was in existence in the year 1923-24. Yet it was not such a lean year or there was not that depression. The revenues that were realised, merely the court-fees realised in cash, showed an increase, and in spite of our throwing out the bill, the revised estimate is Rs. 1,20 thousand. So my submission to this House is that this conclusively proves that if you go on increasing the court-fees, then there is a diminishing return. Of course, a case is tried to be made out that the Court-fees Act has not been revised since the year 1780. No doubt it is not, but then the original court-fee that was levied upon the value of land was five times the assessment. Originally you fixed a certain assessment in 1865 or so; then you revised it in 1893 or so. You again want to revise it because you say that lands are going up in value. So as the assessment goes up, you are charging five times on the increased assessment for court-fee. So, as the lands increase in value you increase the assessment, and when the scale is the same, namely, five times the assessment of the land revenue it means an increase in the court-fee. And it is not merely the court-fee that the litigants have got to pay, but there is an increase in the process fees which is nearly fourfold. There is such a thing as poundage fee and other fees. All these things have to be taken into consideration—the poundage fee which the judgment-debtor has got to pay and so on. They have also to pay increased process fee on attachment warrants which is increased nearly fourfold. We have also got to look to the other fees you are charging the litigants, and I find that the fact that the litigants will not be able to pay the enhanced fees is conclusively proved by your own figures.

Then, a point that was tried to be made was that it is not the poor man who has got to pay this enhanced fee. But that point has been replied to by my honourable friend Mr. Navle. So my submission to this House is that this Court-fees Bill should not be accepted, because as a matter of fact litigation has become specially costly and we have been complaining to the High Court Judges who visit the courts about the increase in the process fees and the levying of the poundage fee and we have also complained as regards the enhancement of the court-fees. If the honourable members on the Government benches do not know of these complaints, we cannot help it. But it is not correct to say that there has been no cry as regards the increase in these fees. If they will consider these figures, they will find that the normal figures—the normal fees—give them the revenue according to their expectations, but if they wish to increase the court-fees, then there will be diminishing returns. Therefore, it is not good policy to increase the fees.

Mr. F. G. PRATT: Mr. President, I rise to support the first reading of this money bill. I will not waste much time in arguing and discussing the question whether this money is really wanted for the needs of the Presidency. I cannot imagine that anybody who has listened to the long discussions on the bill which engaged our attention this morning,

[Mr. F. G. Pratt]

anybody who listened with an open mind to those discussions and speeches on this side, could have any doubt as to the urgent and pressing requirements of the administration which still remain unattended to for want of a surplus in our budget after the current expenditure has been met out of the current income. But I may perhaps give the House from my own experience a few further illustrations of the needs which have to be supplied. The first instance that comes to my mind is a matter that was brought to my knowledge and complained about while this Council was sitting—a matter connected with revenue which is derived from tolls on provincial roads and which, as we could afford it, we would like to reduce or to abolish if we can get the income from other sources. Anybody who is familiar with rural conditions will know what a nuisance, what a burden, what an obstruction, such tolls on roads often are. We cannot do without them now, because there is no money. District local boards have to resort to the same source of income because there is no money, unless there is money provided by taxation which is now being recommended to this House. Need I point to the provision which has been made in this budget, a provision which I for one was exceedingly glad to see because it represented to my mind the first movement for supplying the needs which we all know in the northern division have been great and pressing needs,—needs in those villages in the northern division which are particularly liable to scanty rainfall, the need of such a necessity of life as drinking water. For supplying that need a beginning has been made by a provision on the expenditure side of this budget. That I hope is the step in the right direction of providing funds for a policy of the rural development, a policy of spending more money for the benefit of rural areas. Now, Sir, what are the arguments which we have listened to against this tax. I will leave the financial arguments to some other honourable member of these benches to tackle, but I will ask the House to consider what is the honourable member Mr. Navle's objection that this tax would fall heavily upon the litigating peasant about whom the honourable member, the leader of the Swaraj party spoke. Now, as to that a clear promise was given to the House by the Honourable the Finance Member half an hour ago that objection is one which would be carefully considered when this bill came to be discussed in select committee and that the bottom limit of Rs. 500 which now stands would as the result of such discussion be considered, and re-adjusted in such a way as to do away with any possibility of the poor agriculturist having to bear any part of the burden of this taxation. The honourable member Mr. Navle used a curious expression in talking of the revenue which might be derived from this source. He said that Government would profiteer. Now, profiteering is an operation which as I understand the word can only be conducted by a capitalist who is filling his pockets with private gains of which he grudges a single half penny towards anybody's satisfaction except his own, of which he grudges a single half penny for the very need of public interest. The Bombay capitalist who finds say a rate of 2 or 3 per cent. on probate too heavy a burden for his back to bear may perhaps the more justly be charged with that accusation than Government which seeks a revenue to be devoted towards development and improvement of the rural areas of the presidency in their charge.

Now, Sir, I will come to an examination of the sale as it stands now in the Court-fees Act and ask the House to realise exactly what the effect will be of the changes which are proposed. At present up to the value of one thousand rupees, the existing scale of taxation represents $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. And from 1 thousand up to 5 thousand it represents 5 per cent. and when you get values in excess of 5 thousand, the rate of taxation again drops steadily, the higher the value smaller becomes the rate until when you get up to values of half a lakh when the rate of taxation drops further from the top rate of $7\frac{1}{2}$ rupees per cent. to a bottom rate of something like 9 annas per cent. Now the effect of what we are proposing to do is this that while leaving the values at the lower end of the scale untouched we will increase the value in the upper end of the scale, so that they will more nearly approach the high rate which is put upon the bottom head. The present scale is, to put it plainly, at a heavier rate on the poor than on the rich, and we propose that the rich should pay a somewhat increased rate which will still be lower than the rate which we levy on the bottom values—in fact we are engaged in introducing the principles of 1925 into a scale of taxation which was originated 55 years ago, in 1870.

Now, Sir, there have been great changes in the world since 1870 in the direction of progress towards democratic ideals and principles foremost among which is the principle that the wealthy should contribute to public needs in a larger proportion out of their superfluity of wealth. Now, Sir, may I invite honourable members on the opposite side of the House to reflect on the great gulf which separates the England of 1870 from the England of 1925, and to consider whether it is not time that India and Bombay should make some advance towards reaching and realising those democratic ideals and principles in which at present we are so far behind the rest of the world. In 1870 in England there was no labour party and no labour members. A Trade Union in the England of 1870 was still a criminal conspiracy. Free and compulsory education were still in the womb of the future and such things as national insurance against sickness, accidents and unemployment had not even been thought of. How have all these benefits, all this progress been achieved except by taxation and additional taxation? And what does taxation mean? Taxation means sacrifice—sacrifice, willingly and cheerfully incurred by those who have that privilege of wealth, in order that they may contribute towards the necessities of their poorer neighbours, in order that they may contribute towards the advancement and progress of the country as a whole. I appeal to this House whether it is not time for the Bombay Presidency, which may fairly claim to lead India as an example of political democracy, of progress towards political democracy, to show that they have a feeling for another kind of democracy, a democracy which consists not merely of political forms and machinery and franchises, but a democracy which means an organisation of political power for applying the great principles of justice and freedom for the social and economic improvement of the community.

[Mr. F. G. Pratt]

Sir, I have shown that this tax will fall upon shoulders which are well able to bear it. I have shown that there is urgent need for the money which this taxation will produce. I hope that the Council, by its vote, will show that the wealthier classes of this presidency are capable of some little advance, some little self-sacrifice, in order to set an example to the rest of the other provinces in India.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR (Poona City): Sir, I do not wish to indulge in any compliments or recriminations, but I wish to consider the bill in a dispassionate spirit. The House knows that, last year, it rejected a similar bill, and the question, to my mind, in its plainest manner, is whether the Government has made out a case for again attempting to restore this bill on the statute book.

Now, considering this question somewhat more closely, we find that one of the fundamental principles of a civilised Government is the administration of cheap justice, and we have to see whether the effect of the bill will be to mete out justice to the parties cheaply. In this connection, I would only take two figures. We find that in 1923-24, the expenditure for the administration of justice was about Rs. 68 lakhs, and it was only after one year that it at once mounted up to the large figure of Rs. 76,38,000. If we take the figures for the last five years, we clearly discern a growing tendency for the expenditure on this department to increase to an abnormal extent. Surely, this tendency on the part of this department seriously conflicts with the elementary principle of any civilised government in this behalf; and if the Government, in the face of that principle, is coming before the House with a proposal which, instead of making the judicial machinery cheap makes it more costly, then it is something which certainly cannot be countenanced by any reasonable House. Now, taking the way in which justice is administered at present, entirely and exclusively from the point of view of its costliness, I can say, as a matter of personal experience, that in order to realise Rs. 100, the plaintiff, in the first instance, is required to spend from Rs. 30 to Rs. 35. Any one who has had to do with law courts will bear testimony to the fact that on account of the enhancement of the process fees and the thousand and one other fees, the total expenditure for the plaintiff comes roughly to from Rs. 30 to Rs. 35. In the first instance, it is the plaintiff that is required to pay; but in 99 cases out of 100 it is the defendant, who is generally an agriculturist, upon whose shoulders the burden ultimately falls; and, as a previous speaker has said, the question does not really reduce itself as to whether the wealthier classes are to pay the fees or not, but whether the agriculturist is to be further saddled with the increased costs of the suit or not. I do not know how far the previous speaker is experienced in the administration of justice. He may have had experience in the administration of criminal justice; but I do not know what experience he has had, so far as the administration of civil justice, wherein exactly the question of court-fees crops up, is concerned.

Secondly, if we look to the statement of objects and reasons of this bill and the bill that was thrown out by this House only an hour back, we notice in the former an omission, which may be deliberate or otherwise, of the beneficent objects and the various schemes for the promotion of the interests of the poorer classes in this presidency, which the Government profess to have in view. I do not know whether the want of any reference to these objects is deliberate or not, but certainly it is a circumstance which cannot fail to strike the eye of any one.

I do not propose to enter into the merits, necessity, or urgency of the nation-building departments, as this point has been debated threadbare during the last four days. The Honourable Minister for Local Self-government twitted the other day this side of the House with the failure on its part as regards the making of any constructive proposals. He said that during the whole of the discussion on the budget, and during the whole of the discussion on the last bill, excepting one single constructive proposal, namely, about the reduction by half of the whole establishment of the Government, no other constructive proposal had been made. In this connection, I wish to place before the House, and especially the opposite side of the House, some very constructive proposals; and I should really like to ask the official benches as to whether they are prepared to accept those proposals. I shall take first the head, General Administration. The official benches have waxed eloquent over their keen anxiety and solicitude about the promotion of the interests of the masses of the people. I do not desire to question the honesty of those statements. But in order to enable them to give an earnest, so to say, of their anxiety, I take some items from the general administration department. Looking over that department, I find certain figures, which certainly do not and cannot reflect any credit on the person who may be responsible therefor. Take, for instance, the band establishment at the Government House. I have totalled the items on this establishment, and I find that they come to the abnormally large figure of Rs. 63,592. Let us take another instance. There is a demand for grant of Rs. 57,470 for the purchase of new furniture, and for the repair and restoration of old furniture. Rs. 33,300 are budgetted to be spent for the upkeep and maintenance of the Government House garden. Then, we have got the bodyguards for whose sake the sum of Rs. 78,787 is proposed to be spent. If we total up these four items they come up to Rs. 2,31,228. Not even the Moghul Emperors, in their palmyest days, might have been spending such huge sums for these purposes. I would ask the Honourable the Home Member whether he would be prepared to cut down this demand by half....

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: That is not my grant.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR: Whoever the member concerned may be, I still ask of him whether he is prepared to reduce his demand by half, and thereby give the House a proof of the bona fides of the official professions regarding the promotion of the welfare of the masses of the presidency. The second item is about the hill journey allowances. I have calculated the total of these allowances only in the general administration department, and I find it comes up to Rs. 68,398. The hill journey allowances include the allowances in Poona which I understand is brought under the category of hill stations. A large part of this sum is generally spent on the exodus to Mahabaleshwar. Are Government officers prepared to abandon the practice of going to Mahabaleshwar and enjoying themselves at the cost of the poor agriculturist? I now come to the third item. I can understand buildings being constructed for housing the nurses. But I cannot understand constructing a recreation room for them at Karachi at a cost of Rs. 28,000. Honestly enough, I do not think it to be one of the functions of the Government to provide recreation rooms for their nurses. There is also a very large sum provided for the construction of a building at a cost of about fifteen lakhs for the Government press and stationery office, and this year it is proposed to spend 4 lakhs. I may at once say that this building can well be postponed for some time, if the Government find that their hands are strained so far as the finances are concerned. I wish to refer to one more item. If my recollection is correct, during the last budget discussion we asked for a retrenchment of about 2 crores of rupees from the expenditure on the Bombay Development Scheme, and the Honourable the General Member promised to effect a cut of Rs. 30 lakhs. When I refer to the figures in the budget I find that not only he has not effected any retrenchment but as a matter of fact he has spent over and above the budget estimate....

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : I wish to correct the honourable member that a retrenchment to the extent of nearly 60 lakhs has been effected in the current year and there is a reduction by over one crore in the coming year. The whole thing is explained in the Blue Book if the honourable member will only read it. I wanted to correct him in time, Sir, before he proceeds further.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR : Referring to the Bombay development budget I find that it is proposed to spend about 17 lakhs on works not commenced and Rs. 5,50,000 for acquisitions. It is an open secret that the suburban scheme has proved to be a total failure; and it is not shown that the works not commenced require to be taken up in hand at once. I want to ascertain from the Honourable the General Member whether he could not postpone all these items for some time to come, if the next year is expected to be a lean year?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I do not know whether the honourable member need go into such elaborate details.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR : I only want to show, Sir, that we on this side of the House are capable of making some very constructive proposals, if only we are allowed to do so, and if only we are given the assurance that our suggestions would be acted upon by Government. Our complaint is that our proposals either for reductions or omissions of items relating to different departments are not given effect to by the Government; and consequently the non-official benches are generally reluctant to make any constructive suggestions.

I do not propose to speak about the Meston settlement as it has already been sufficiently commented upon by the previous speakers. There is one thing which has not attracted the notice of the House, so far as the present bill is concerned ; and it is that on the Original Side of the High Court no court-fee is charged. Instead of placing an additional burden on the poor ryot by passing this bill, I suggest that it would be more desirable and advisable on the part of the Government to move the proper authorities concerned to enable them to impose fees on suits filed on the Original Side of the High Court. I am not myself practising at the High Court bar ; but a leading advocate practising on the Original Side of the High Court has told me that the Government would be able to get at least 10 lakhs from this single source.

Sir, the point that I have been making out all this while is that the eighteen lakhs of rupees which the Honourable the Finance Member needs are easily available, and can be secured partly by the reduction or omission of certain budgeted items and partly by tapping sources which could be justifiably tapped. I do not think that the proposals contained in this bill can commend themselves to the acceptance of this House. For reasons given above I oppose the first reading of this bill, and I request the non-official benches to unanimously reject it.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I should like to deal with the point of order now. I take it that the Legal Remembrancer is prepared to meet it now.

Mr. P. E. PERCIVAL : I regret, Mr. President, that the papers were not with me : they were at the Secretariat. The fact is that no reason was given by the Government of India. I have been able to find what was proposed by the Legal Remembrancer at that time. He wrote :—

“As the increase of the court-fees will probably be considered by the Government of India to be a new tax, and under the Scheduled Taxes Rules a stamp duty may only be imposed by the Local Government without the previous sanction of the Governor General if it is not a duty fixed by Indian legislation, the previous sanction of the Governor General should be obtained under section 80A (3) (a) of the Government of India Act by the Finance Department.”

A letter was sent to the Government of India accordingly ; and their reply was received in 1922 when the bill was first introduced. The reply was from the Legislative Department of the Government of India, in the shape of a telegram ; namely :—

“Court-fees and Presidency Small Causes Courts Bombay Amendment Bill does not require previous sanction of the Governor General under section 80A (3) of Government of India Act and may be proceeded with.”

On the strength of that telegram no action was subsequently taken in respect of sanction in connection with this bill. I may mention, Sir, that it is laid down in Rule 19 (3) of the Legislative Council Rules :—

“If any question arises whether a Bill is or is not a Bill which requires sanction under the Government of India Act, the question shall be referred to the authority which would have power to grant the sanction if it were necessary, and the decision of that authority on the question shall be final.”

For this reason no further action was taken in the matter.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI (Western Sind) : Sir, the rule referred to by the honourable the Legal Remembrancer relates to the introduction of private bills. The marginal note is "Notice of motion for leave to introduce bills". Government bills are never introduced: they are first published and then come in for first reading. In the case of private bills if the Governor General decides that the sanction is necessary, this Council has no power to proceed with them until that sanction is given. But so far as Government bills are concerned, they are sent by Government direct for sanction. The rule that applies to private bills should not be quoted in relation to Government bills. The whole rule and the marginal note may be read in this connexion.

Mr. P. E. PERCIVAL : Sir, it is difficult to appreciate the alleged distinction between Government and private bills. It is not stated in the rules that Government cannot possibly introduce bills. Sometimes they do introduce them while sometimes they publish the bill beforehand. The marginal note refers to "leave to introduce bills," meaning all bills.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN (Bombay City, South) : I submit, Sir, that according to what the Legal Remembrancer has stated, although I was not able to hear all that he stated, if there is a dispute as to whether a particular measure requires the sanction of the Governor General, the proper authority to settle that dispute is the authority that has the power to give sanction, that is the Governor General. I say, Sir, such a dispute has arisen in the present case, and the point is certainly not free from doubt. The instance given by the honourable the Legal Remembrancer does not apply to the present case, because that refers to the Small Causes Courts which have only local jurisdiction, and this is a measure which affects the whole province. There is a difference between that and this measure. There is a doubt upon this point, and, therefore, I submit, Sir, that under the rules there should be a reference in this matter to the Governor General, and pending an answer to that reference I do not think the discussion could be proceeded with.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR (Bombay University) : Sir, with regard to the rule which the honourable the Legal Remembrancer has just quoted, it is quite clear, apart from the marginal note, that that rule cannot apply to the present case. I will refer to the wording—not merely the marginal note—and the wording is :

"Any member, other than a member of the Government, desiring to move for leave to introduce a Bill....."

It is perfectly clear, therefore, that it cannot apply to any bill which is introduced by a member of Government.

Then clause (2) :

"If the Bill is a Bill which under the Government of India Act requires sanction, the member shall annex to the notice a copy of such sanction, and the notice shall not be valid until this requirement is complied with."

Then comes clause (3) :

"If any question arises whether a Bill is or is not a Bill which requires sanction under the Government of India Act, the question shall be referred to the authority which would have power to grant the sanction if it were necessary, and the decision of that authority on the question shall be final."

[Mr. M. R. Jayakar]

Having regard to the wording, Sir, I submit that the rule cannot refer to any bill which is in the charge of a member of Government. It refers to a bill which is in charge of a private member. Therefore, I submit that it does not govern the present case.

As regards the question whether the authority of the Governor General is necessary in a case of this kind, I ask your attention, Sir, to section 80A, (3). It is stated there :

"The local legislature of any province may not, without the previous sanction of the Governor General, make or take into consideration any law—

(a) imposing or authorising the imposition of any new tax unless the tax is a tax scheduled as exempted from this provision by rules made under this Act."

And the rules made under the Act are at page 131 of the Manual. Rule 3 says :

"The Legislative Council of a province may, without the previous sanction of the Governor-General, make and take into consideration any law imposing, or authorising any local authority to impose, for the purposes of such local authority, any tax included in Schedule II to these rules."

And schedule II is found in the same page, and the heading No. 8 covers the present case. The heading is "A stamp duty other than duties of which the amount is fixed by Indian legislation". Here, the duty in this case is a stamp duty, and its amount was fixed by Indian legislation, because the schedule under the original Court-fees Act, 1870, was passed by Indian legislation. Therefore the tax proposed in the bill does not fall under the Scheduled Taxes Rules, and it therefore requires the sanction of the Governor General. Accordingly, I find, Sir, that when the bill was introduced last year it was clearly stated in the draft,

"Whereas the previous sanction of the Governor General required under section 80A (3) of the Government of India Act has been obtained."

I submit, therefore, Sir, that the bill requires the sanction of the Governor General.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : I might explain, Sir. The question is perfectly plain. The authority which has to sanction the bill is the authority which has got to decide whether sanction is required or not for the bill. That is the principle laid down with regard to private bills, and that must be the same principle which has to be applied with regard to Government bills. Now, the question has been specifically referred as to whether this sanction is required or not, and the authority which has the right to say whether it should be sanctioned or not has stated that no sanction is required and that we can proceed with this bill without the sanction of the Governor General. That intimation has been received here in a letter signed by the Secretary to the Government of India. That is the ordinary method in which the views of the Governor General are intimated by the Government of India. I would point out further, Sir, that it is really a matter of no material importance, because the proviso to section 80A provides that "An Act or a provision of an Act made by a local legislature, and subsequently assented to by the Governor General in pursuance of this Act, shall not be deemed invalid by reason only of its requiring the previous sanction of the Governor General under this Act."

[Sir Maurice Hayward]

So it does not make any material difference whatever. If we choose to pass this Act and send it up to the Governor General and then the Governor General sanctions it, then it does not matter at all whether there has been previous sanction or there has not been previous sanction. Therefore, it seems to me, Sir, in these circumstances, it would be proper and justifiable if you were to accept the views of the Governor General as intimated by the Government of India. If you desire me to go any further in this matter and explain, I would point out that the view of the Government of India that sanction is not required is correct.....

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Will the Honourable the Leader of the House kindly explain—why sanction is not required?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: Now, if you read sub-section (3) (a) of section 80A, you will find it runs thus:

and so on.

Now, Sir, this tax has been in force since 1870. I do not see how anybody can call this a new tax; it is over 50 years old. It is modifying an old tax, I submit the word is important. It was not intended that this should apply to the modifications of an old tax which under sub-section (3) (e) might be within the jurisdiction of the Legislative Council. I would point out in this connection this question of judicial stamps is specifically placed under the Devolution Rules within the jurisdiction of the provincial Government. I would refer you, Sir, to page 120 of Volume I of the Bombay Legislative Council Manual, Devolution Rule No. 20 of Part II—Provincial Subjects, which runs thus:

“Judicial stamps (subject to legislation by the Indian Legislature as regards amount of court fees levied in relation to suits and proceedings in the High Courts).”

That means that judicial stamps not levied in suits and proceedings in the High Courts are subject to the jurisdiction of the provincial legislature and are not subject to the legislature of the Government of India. I think, Sir, that it is conclusive that this is a subject which is within the control of the provincial legislature as stated by the Government.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangir: I believe, Mr. President, there is a ruling by yourself in which you said that in such cases the previous sanction of the Governor General is not necessary.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The Honourable the General Member is dealing with an entirely different set of circumstances although it has some bearing on the present point. The question originally arose on the issue whether amendments to legislation which required previous sanction could be moved in this House, and the view of one side of the House was that no amendment which required the previous sanction of the Governor General could be moved in this Council. The view on the other side was that it could be done, and I remember distinctly Mr. Baptista quoting the same proviso to section 80A on that issue which the Honourable the Leader of the House has quoted to-day. I held that once legislation was submitted to the jurisdiction of the Legislative Council it was perfectly entitled to move amendments without obtaining the previous sanction of the Governor General. That was a distinct issue. On the present point the issue is whether a legislative enactment which is before the House can be considered by the House without obtaining the previous sanction of the Governor General. The issue is whether such sanction is necessary or is not necessary. It appears from the statement made on the Government benches that the Government of Bombay applied for sanction to the Governor General for the introduction of this bill. The power to sanction is vested by the Act in the Governor General, and the Government of India has intimated to the Government of Bombay that no sanction is necessary. I am merely stating the facts as they have been brought to my notice. Relying upon that, the bill is placed before the House. I see the force of the argument which has been urged by the honourable the Deputy President and the honourable member for Bombay University (Mr. Jayakar) that rule 19 does not apply. But it appears to me that a practical view has to be taken on this issue. The issue is purely a technical one. I do not think it is believed by any one here that the sanction of the Governor General would be withheld to any measure which is submitted to him by the Bombay Government. The Bombay Government had submitted this legislation to the Government of India for sanction and it was quite simple for them to sanction it instead of saying that their sanction was not necessary. They interpreted the Act in that way and the result is that this bill is now before the House, without any previous sanction.

[The President]

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI: May I bring to your notice, Sir, that this is a different bill ?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: It is the same identical bill. I mean no change of principle as regards the bill has arisen. Therefore, the Government of India stated that no sanction was necessary. The sanction asked for was to the bill for enhancement of court-fees; the bill was placed before the House last year and it was rejected.

Mr. J. BAPTISTA: May I say a few words, Sir, in regard to this point ? I understand the honourable member to say that the Government of India's sanction was not necessary. If the sanction was not necessary to this bill, it was not necessary in reference to the bill last year. Last year the bill was brought when the original bill (Act) was still in force. Therefore, it was a bill for the purpose of continuing an Act that was in force. That was not intended, therefore, to make any amendments so far as the court-fees were concerned. It was only intended to make a temporary measure. To that extent it was different, but no amendment was intended. If the matter was prior to 1922 when the bill was brought for the first time in this Council, then I think it would be relevant, but so far as I can see, then the Government benches stated that sanction was obtained, and Rao Bahadur Kale pointed out that the sanction which was obtained under clause (3) (a) of section 80A was not proper, and the Honourable

[Mr. J. Baptista]

Sir Chimanlal Setalvad then said he would consider that technical point and investigate the matter. Of course, we do not know what happened thereafter. If the matter was investigated, we do not know what happened to it. That seems wonderful.

Mr. P. E. PERCIVAL : It was in 1922.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : As regards what has been stated by the honourable member Mr. Baptista I will draw his attention to the report of the select committee on the bill further to amend the Court-fees Act, 1870. The first signature on it is that of the Honourable Sir Chimanlal Setalvad, and it is also signed by a large number of other members of this House. The part of the report to which I should like to draw the attention of honourable members reads as follows :

“As the Government of India consider that the bill requires no previous sanction we have made the necessary alteration in the preamble”

The preamble was altered by the select committee and those words to which reference is being made were deleted. I have got the report of the select committee in my hands and I am quoting from it and it bears the signatures of something like 15 or 17 members many of them belonging to the learned profession of law.

There are occasions when the result of the President's ruling leads to a state of affairs which deprives the House of expressing their definite decision in regard to important matters, and it is in the discretion of the Chair to leave the decision to the House itself. I am inclined on this occasion to leave the issue to be decided by the House on the strength of the proviso to section 80A. It is desirable to quote the proviso. It is obvious that the law empowers the Council to consider any law without the previous sanction of the Governor General in certain circumstances, and I am inclined to think on the consideration of all the facts of the case which have been brought to my notice that this is such a case in which the House should be left to decide for itself whether they will pass or reject the measure.

I want honourable members clearly to realise that this is merely a technical objection. Such objections do not as a general rule appeal to me. When such a technical objection was raised by members on Government benches against the House being allowed to discuss amendments on bills proposed by non-official members, I overruled the objection on the strength of the proviso to section 80A of the Government of India Act and allowed the amendments to be considered by the House. On the same grounds I disallow the technical objection now raised against the House considering this taxation Bill. It is open to the House to decide whether they will sanction the taxation proposed or whether they will reject it. I will not stand in the way of such decision by my ruling but will leave the House itself to decide the issue.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI (Karachi City) : Mr. President, I do not wish to follow the example of the Honourable the Finance Member in lowering the standard of debate in the manner he has done by making ungenerous and undignified reference to the honourable member the leader of the Swaraj party, but I wish to say, to use his own words, that language of exaggeration and vituperation is welcome to this side of the House for the reason that it only serves to weaken the cause which the honourable member seeks to advocate. He attacked the Swaraj party and wanted to remind it that the day of reckoning for it was approaching, but let me tell him in his own language that this is one of those flights of fancy with which prophets of evil seek to disturb the public mind. He must remember that the Swaraj party will come with flying colours and will be returned in still larger numbers at the next elections.

Mr. President, the honourable the Finance Member compared some of the services rendered by this Government in providing roads and other amenities of life with similar services rendered by the other, provincial Governments, but he very cleverly omitted to compare the cost of civil administration per million of population; and I can assure him that if he were to compare the cost of civil administration of this province with that of the other provinces per million of population, it will come to twice as much as in the other provinces.

Then, Sir, I am not a practising lawyer, but I have come across cases in which several people have been quite unable to pay the present court-fees in order to get their dues from some rich people who owe them some money. Even the present tax falls heavily on the poor and therefore from the practical point of view any additional tax will be totally objectionable and will act harshly on the ordinary litigant.

Coming to the question of retrenchment, it is wrong to say that further retrenchment is not possible. I am of the opinion that there is a great margin for retrenchment. The Retrenchment Committee's proposals have been shelved. I will only refer to some items. If honourable members would refer to 41, Civil Works, the separate White Book for this item, it will appear that, whereas under the discretionary grants the provision for the current year was 10 lakhs, for the ensuing year it is 11 lakhs and 25 thousand; whereas for the repairs under the revised estimates it was 47 lakhs 99 thousand in the current year, it is 50 lakhs for the ensuing year. It goes on increasing without rhyme or reason. Provision for total works for the current year under the revised estimate is 72 lakhs, and for the ensuing year it is 76 lakhs. 4 lakhs have been increased under total works. Then in order to carry out works to the extent of 76 lakhs of rupees we require an establishment costing 34 lakhs of rupees which is nearly 45 per cent. or so. It is too heavy. Under the head of establishment, the increases are very abnormal during the last few years. In the year 1923-24 the establishment under 41 Civil Works was only 15 lakhs of rupees while in 1924-25 the budget shows 21 lakhs but the revised estimate 25 lakhs, and this year from 25 lakhs we have got a jump of 9 lakhs making the total of 34 lakhs. That is to say from the year 1923-24 the cost of establishment has gone up from 15 lakhs and 84 thousand to 34 lakhs 40 thousand, which means an increase of much more than 100 per cent. Then, Sir, while considering the actual cost of establishment I would remind honourable members of this House that the Retrenchment Committee has stated that the post of Chief Engineer in Sind should be abolished. Now, I think, Sir, this is a very necessary change. There are two Superintending Engineers already for Sind and these Superintending Engineers can correspond directly with Government. I do not wish to dilate at length on this point, because it will come up for discussion later on, but I wish to point out that the Chief Engineer is absolutely unnecessary for Sind. It was created in order to provide for.....

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I do not know whether the honourable member is going into the justification of the appointment. His reference to the fact that the post is not required is quite enough. He need not go into the merits of that one appointment on this bill. He can refer to the amount of saving that could be effected, instead of going into the merits of the appointment. The honourable member can express his opinion that the appointment is not necessary. If each item of the budget is to be dilated upon to contend that there is no necessity for this bill, it would be an unending speech. I merely want to say that he can refer to them, but he need not dilate and elaborate them.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI: I was just ending, Sir. There are similar other examples of retrenchment which can be effected, for instance the amalgamation of the irrigation districts in the Jamrao. And even under 41, Civil Works a great deal of saving can be effected. I think we can make a saving of Rs. 15 lakhs if we make judicious arrangements. Similar remarks will apply to several other departments, but I will not refer to them.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I did not want the honourable member not to refer to them. He can refer to them in regard to the question of saving, but he need not take one appointment, and go on elaborating whether it is necessary or not.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI: I will follow your advice, Sir. Under 60, Civil Works also a great deal of saving can be effected, and though I shall probably be told in reply that 60, Civil Works are from capital account, we must remember that even the cost of 60, Civil Works comes ultimately to be provided from the ordinary revenue, because we have to meet the sinking fund and interest charges. I might remind honourable members that we are already paying a heavy amount of interest, that is to say Rs. 77 lakhs and odd for the bombay development alone, as will be seen from page 130 of the Blue Book. An amount of Rs. 48,14,000 has been shown under development as the revenue for next year. But this is misleading, because Rs. 48 lakhs is what we receive from the public bodies, to whom we have lent money which we have obtained from the Government of India. But we are paying an interest of Rs. 77 lakhs on account of the bombay development, which shows the manner in which the cost of these developments under 60, Civil Works, and under 55, Works charged to Capital falls heavily on the taxpayer. Therefore, Sir, there is every reason for us to throw out this bill.

Mr. A. MONTGOMERIE: Sir, I do not desire to follow the last speaker into his suggestions; I am afraid I could not follow his figures, and I do not know enough about Sind to criticise in any way his suggestions for retrenchment. But I should like to make a few remarks about the eminently practical suggestions made by the honourable member for Poona (Mr. Bhopatkar). He has assured us himself that they are practical suggestions, and I dare say he knows. But it is possible that other people might have some slight differences with him. He proposes, in the most genial fashion, having thrown out the bill for the taxation of landlords in Bombay, to impose additional taxation on Bombay of a sum which he modestly estimates at Rs. 10 lakhs. He is assured by some eminent practitioner in the High Court that it is perfectly simple to do it; nothing would be simpler than to take a further Rs. 10 lakhs out of the litigants in the Bombay High Court on the Original side. The justification for that appears to be that the Court-fees Bill does not apply to the High Court. As a matter of fact, litigation in the High Court is not, I believe, in any way less costly than litigation in the mofussil. There may be differences in the scale. At some points of the scale, litigation in the Bombay High Court is comparatively cheap; at other points of the scale it is dear, but the general effect on suits, taking all suits, works out at very much the same thing. The only thing is that the High Court has a different system of collecting their fees. This suggestion of his that the litigants in Bombay city should be imposed a double taxation will not, I am quite sure, commend itself to any of the honourable members from Bombay.

His other suggestion dealt with cutting down the allowances for hill journeys to Poona and Mahableshtar—these amounts by which the officers of Government swell their already fat emoluments. But, unfortunately for his purposes, these hill journey allowances are entirely for the clerks and peons who accompany Government to Poona, and I should like to see the honourable member appear before his constituents, or put forward a solid proposal before the majority of the mofussil members that Government should sit all the time in Bombay and not go to Poona. That particular proposal would, I am sure, receive very short shrift from the members for the Deccan or even for Gujarat.

An Honourable MEMBER: What about Mahableshtar?

Mr. A. MONTGOMERIE: We know about Mahableshtar. It was approved, I think, by the Council, who turned down with very great emphasis the proposal that Government should not go to Mahableshtar; for they realised that the proposal was merely the thin end of the wedge which was intended to prize Government out of Poona and reduce Poona from its position as the seat of Government and fix Government down firmly in Bombay, where the honourable members of this House would have to spend all their time at all the sessions of the Legislative Council. I do not think any of them would agree with that.

[Mr. A. Montgomerie]

His other constructive suggestion was that we may save money by cutting out Rs. 28,000 for a recreation room for nurses in a large hospital. I think any of us who have had the misfortune of having had anything to do with hospitals in our life and any of us who know anything about hospitals will repudiate any such suggestion. I gather that the money is for recreation room and quarters.

Then, Sir, his other suggestion was with regard to the Governor's band. I do not want to say anything about it. I doubt whether the honourable member's excursions into historical detail are perfectly correct. I do not know how much history he knows, or what details he has of the amount which the Moghul emperors spent on their bands and other amusements. I should imagine that a lakh of rupees would go very little way with Babar or even with the philosophic Akbar in supplying bands or other entertainments.

I turn now from those constructive suggestions to the merits of the bill. May I put it quite frankly to my honourable friends the members from the mofussil that what they are wanting to get in their opposition to this bill is something for nothing? They do not want to tax their constituents, or to have their constituents know that they voted for taxation. At the same time, they do want money for education, for roads and everything else. The only difficulty they meet with is about paying for these things. I dare say a good many of them will be cheerfully ready to pay for them. You must realise that if you want to do anything beneficial to the people you will have to pay for it. If you want to keep the presidency progressing there is no other way than to increase the revenues. Otherwise we have to be content to remain stationary. As has been pointed out by the Honourable the Finance Member we are in advance of the rest of India in the amenities we offer to the citizens of this presidency. Do we want to be in advance or are we prepared to remain stationary till Bombay will no longer be the first city, the first presidency, of India? I sincerely hope not.

As regards the merits of this form of taxation, I think there are a few subjects that will lend themselves so readily as a proper field for taxation as litigation. The honourable member for Surat told us about the drain on the country involved in the liquor traffic, and its demoralising effect on the people. I consider that the dram-drinking of litigation is almost as big a vice in this presidency. With the amount of money lavished on litigation in this presidency many students can be educated and all the roads can be repaired. Much of the money that is spent on litigation is absolutely uselessly wasted. Those of us who are acquainted with courts know full well the very great volume of litigation in this presidency which is utterly unnecessary. I am afraid a great deal of that would remain untouched by the concession which the Honourable the Finance Member has suggested with regard to the limit of taxation. Many of us know the nature of suits that come from Kanara and Ratnagiri. Suits come from Kanara and Ratnagiri up to the High Court that relate to the produce of two cocoanut trees. They are fought determinedly through all the stages, even to the second appeal. There are more second appeals lodged in the Bombay High Court than in all the courts put together in England.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI : There is the jury.

Mr. A. MONTGOMERIE : That has very little to do with it.

Even if the law of diminishing returns does come into operation, as the honourable member for Thana pointed out—I was not able to follow his figures—and the increase of taxation tended to stop litigation, I hope my honourable lawyer friends will agree with me that it would be a very good thing for the presidency. Litigation is indulged in as an amusement and it would be correct to classify it as an amusement tax. Take a district like Ratnagiri or Kanara. The inhabitants of these districts do not consider themselves men till they have a good-going suit in a court of law.

One minor point was referred to by the honourable member for Poona. He informed us that owing to the imposition of poundage fees, a suitor has to pay out a sum of Rs. 30 by the time he has filed the suit. I was under the impression, possibly mistaken, that these charges the High Court has imposed on the sale of the land when the suit reaches the final stage of execution, and I fail to see how the honourable member can say that they must be paid before a suit can be lodged.

Mr. S. N. ANGADI (Belgaum District) : Sir, after the defeat which the Government sustained a couple of hours ago in regard to the Stamp Bill, I should have thought that Government would not have introduced this bill in this House. I do not wish to go into the question whether there is any necessity existing for fresh taxation. It may, or may not exist. The question is whether people are willing to pay or even if willing whether they are able to bear the burden of taxation that is proposed. My answer is they are poor and they cannot pay a pie more by way of taxation. It was suggested by the honourable member Mr. Pratt that taxation is a sacrifice cheerfully and pleasantly incurred in the interests of the nation. I do not deny that. The question is, what sort of sacrifice are we expected to make, when it has become difficult for the people even to live a hand-to-mouth existence? Coming as I do from Karnatak, I do not know the other parts of the presidency, I can very well say that the whole of Karnatak is so poor that a multi-millionaire or two of Bombay can easily purchase it. Under these circumstances it would be extremely undesirable to ask for further taxation on the flimsy ground that money is wanted for this purpose or that purpose. It was suggested yesterday by the Honourable the Home Member that there is an increase in the present year's budget of 25 lakhs for expenditure on education and another 17 lakhs on Civil Works and that in order to meet this demand these taxation proposals have been introduced. We are told by the Government rather in boastful spirit that they have undertaken to bear two-thirds of the total expenditure that may be incurred in connection with compulsory primary education. My answer to that is that in every civilised country the primary education is considered to be the most paramount obligation of the Government which must be discharged at any cost. Further, Sir, it is considered the first charge on the state exchequer. Here what have the Government done? They have undertaken to bear two-thirds of the burden only and have sifted a part of the expenditure to the local bodies, whose resources are very slender. It is true that under the new Act, certain powers of taxation are given to local bodies. In my own district, the district local board under the new Act has doubled the local fund cess in order to provide funds for primary education. The result is that a big howl has been raised against the members and it is very doubtful that the present elected members will be returned at the next election. So even this increase of one anna in the local fund cess has been keenly felt by the people. Wherever I went—I had to go to several places—I was told that they would be very thankful to the board if that increase was modified so as not to put any further burden on the shoulders of the people.

And one more reason why I stand to oppose the first reading of the bill is that it is a bill primarily affecting the agriculturists who are extremely poor. It is sought to be proved that it does not affect the agriculturists, but that argument has been sufficiently disproved by the popular side of the House. Again, Sir, a comparison is sought to be drawn between the incidence of taxation here in India and the incidence of taxation in England. But unfortunately, those who drew that comparison have not given us any figures as to the average wealth of an Indian and his average income as compared with the average wealth of an Englishman and his average income. If those figures were given, certainly the honourable members who drew the comparison would have disillusioned themselves quite sufficiently. So, these misleading figures won't convince us in any way. The main question is whether the people are able to pay the tax. If it is not a fact that the people are able to bear this taxation, Government should not have brought this bill. My submission is, that the Government know that the people are too poor to bear even this small tax. It appears that if we do not give this additional money to Government the nation-building departments would be starved. Well, the condition of the poor people is such that they would rather starve education, medical relief, etc., rather than submit themselves to this taxation. When there is nothing to eat, what is the use of education to the poor? So, Sir, I strongly oppose the first reading of the bill.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I should like to know what the intentions of Government are with regard to the programme for the further discussion of this bill. According to the programme originally published Government Bills and Supplementary Grants were to be taken on the 26th and 27th of February; and Demands for Grants were put down for consideration from Saturday the 28th February to Saturday the 14th March; Monday and Tuesday, the 16th and 17th March were provided for Government Bills and Supplementary Grants. I should like to know from the Honourable the Leader of the House what the intentions of Government are in regard to this programme.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : Sir, we propose to proceed to-morrow according to programme with Demands for Grants. The Government Bills will be taken up again on the dates put down on the programme.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Further consideration of the first reading of the Court-fees Enhancement Bill will be taken up on the 16th March.

The Council is adjourned to 2 o'clock to-morrow Saturday, the 28th February 1925, when we will proceed with Demands for Grants.

DEMANDS FOR GRANTS

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Demands for grants.

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE : Mr. President, I rise to move the grant which is shown on page 23 of the Blue Book as item No. 44 "Loans and Advances bearing interest"—Rs. 3,90,10 thousand. This is shown also in the Civil Estimates on page 254 and in the Blue Book the details are given on pages 125 to 127. It is for the most part money that we borrow in accordance with a long-standing arrangement on behalf of the Port Trust, the Improvement Trust and the Bombay Municipality. That accounts for Rs. 3,45 lakhs out of Rs. 3,90 lakhs. Then on page 127 there are Rs. 5 lakhs for co-operative societies and Rs. 40,10 thousand for other purposes. Those "other purposes" are shown in the statement in paragraph 234 on page 125. Those other purposes include loans to local bodies and loans to cultivators and to co-operative housing societies.

Now, Sir, there is one correction that I wish to make, namely, that this figure of Rs. 3,90 lakhs shown in the Blue Book should be reduced to Rs. 3,40 lakhs on page 23, item 44. None of these bodies, I may mention, have sent in their definite applications to Government. They send us a preliminary statement of the sums which they expect that their respective committees will authorise them to ask for, and in regard to the Bombay Improvement Trust who sent us a preliminary statement that they would require Rs. 1,20 lakhs, we have just received a subsequent statement that they are reducing the rapidity of their operations and next year propose to spend Rs. 70 lakhs only, a reduction of Rs. 50 lakhs. So, Sir, with your permission, I ask that this item shown as Rs. 3,90,10 thousand may be reduced to Rs. 3,40,10 thousand.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : The honourable member wants to ask for a reduced demand ; he may put his demand in that form.

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE : Yes ; I ask for a demand of Rs. 3,40,10,000.

Question proposed.

Question put and carried.

Purchase of the Coast Guard Fleet Dockyard at Sewri in Bombay for purposes of a country spirit warehouse.

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI : Sir, I move for a demand of Rs. 37,136 under 60A, page 229 of the Blue Book, item 227. That is, Sir, the price of land of a portion of the Salt Department dockyard at Sewri which has been occupied as a temporary warehouse for our liquor. The building was valued at Rs. 60,000 and was provided for in the current year's budget, and this is the land on which the building stands, and that has been valued between the Government of India and the

[Mr. A. M. K. Dehlavi.]

Bombay Government for Rs. 37 thousand and odd. The demand is for Rs. 37,136.

Question proposed.

Dr. K. E. DADACHANJI (Bombay City, South) : Sir, I rise to move an amendment that this item be omitted. Mr. President, when we are going in for the goal of prohibition, why should we have a depôt established permanently there ? Besides the depôt at Sewri is so far off from the place of business that licensees are harassed, they find great hardship to go there and they have to pass their whole day there. Their servants also have to pass sometimes one day or two days there. And when our goal is prohibition, why should we go in for the purchase of land and buildings there ? All the buildings they have, whatever buildings they have, for instance the acetone factory, the Government of India try to foist upon us. In these days of hardship and in view of the goal of prohibition which we are going to have, we ought not to go in for these buildings.

Question proposed : that item 227, on page 229 of the Blue Book, be omitted.

Mr. A. N. SURVE (Bombay City, North) : Mr. President, I rise to support the motion. At present this warehouse is situated at Sewri and it is a great nuisance to the licensees. If we buy this land, we will be perpetuating that inconvenience to those licensees who pay us very heavy bids and who are in addition made to pay extra cartage charges and also other charges, e. g., commission to licensed agents through whom only they are compelled to obtain their supplies. Therefore, if we buy this land it would be only perpetuating a bad system and its evil consequences. I therefore support the motion that is before this House.

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI : Sir, the question is whether we need a warehouse or not. The honourable member who has moved this motion thinks that this warehouse is not necessary, because we have launched on a policy of prohibition. I need hardly answer that point, because it will takesome years before we come to a time when we would not need a warehouse. There is therefore absolutely no question that we certainly would need a warehouse for a long time to come, and where is it to be built? If we try to build a warehouse elsewhere, it would mean tremendous cost to the State. This particular warehouse is a very good bargain, because the Government of India, from whom we are going to get it, are going to charge us only to the extent that they are out of pocket for it. The land is 21,000 square yards, and it was valued in March 1916 by the Executive Engineer at Rs. 1,23,000, and in 1917 it was valued again by the Deputy Collector on special duty at Rs. 2,83,000, and the Government of India themselves put the value between Rs. 2 to 3 lakhs. But this Government insisted on their charging us only the price that it cost them for filling in, etc., and that has come to about Rs. 37,000 and odd. I do not think the Government could strike a better bargain, in view of the urgent necessity of a special warehouse for the city of Bombay. I therefore submit that the House would be well advised to accept the arrangement and allow the grant.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : The question is that the amount of Rs. 37,136 under the head " Other Provincial Expenditure not charged to Revenue " for the purchase of the Coast Guard Fleet Dockyard at Sewri in Bombay for purposes of a country spirit warehouse, be omitted.

In order to remove all possibility of misunderstanding, I should like to point out that Ayes should go to the right and Noes to the left. The motion is for the omission of the demand, and those for the omission will be Ayes, and those against it will be Noes. I want to make the point perfectly clear, so that honourable members may not get into the wrong lobby.

Question put : House divided. Ayes 26 ; Noes 43. Motion lost.

Tellers for the Noes : Mr. C. S. C. HARRISON and Mr. R. E. GIBSON.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN :
Sir, I move for a grant of Rs. 69,85,000 under 60, Civil Works not charged to Revenue, which will be found at page 121 of the Blue Book. I have omitted from this an item of Rs. 14,16,000 for establishment and 4 lakhs for tools and plants, which I will move along with grants under 41, Civil Works.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI : Sir, can one head be divided into two even by Government? On page 3 of the budget estimate for 60, Civil Works not charged to revenue (the small White Book) you will find a total demand for 85 lakhs. Now, the Honourable Minister wants to divide it into two as 69 lakhs under 60, Civil Works and 16 lakhs under 41, Civil Works.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : The honourable member's point of order is that the demand should be for 85 lakhs. Let me see what the Honourable Minister has got to say.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : Sir, we are doing it under the orders of the Accountant General in order to show the establishment charges in a convenient form under one head.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : The difficulty pointed out by the honourable member is that they have given notices of motions for reduction and omission on the original budget estimates as supplied to them. All these motions for reduction or omission will get confused if this policy is adopted by Government at the last moment. That is the point of order.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : Last year the grant for establishment was moved separately.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : That is not the point. I want to know whether there is any Standing Order or rule which authorises Government to make any alteration in the information they have originally supplied to the House. The Rules and Standing Orders lay down a certain procedure for the consideration of the budget estimates by the Council. The Council is following that procedure. I do not challenge the right of Government to make alterations, but I should like to ask under what authority they are doing so.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : We have been doing it in practice. We have always been doing it.....

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : There must be some authority under which Government can do this. If it was done on the last occasion, that is not sufficient reason why they should do it again without pointing out the authority empowering them to do so.

Mr. G. WILES : Sir, on pages 22 and 23 of the Blue Book we have explained the demand we intend to make. In the foot-note under demands 25 and 26 and 43, the procedure is exactly laid down which the Honourable Minister is following. In order to make the method of bringing establishments to account quite clear and in order that there might be no misunderstanding I have inserted paragraph 176 which explains in greater detail the method we follow. We have carried out the orders of the Auditor General. If honourable members have been misled with regard to their motions for omission or reduction, I suggest that their motions can be made applicable to demands under 41, Civil Works.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: This is a matter of procedure not only for to-day but for the future. I am considering how the matter can be reconciled with the constitution under which we are working.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI (Karachi City): Sir, so far as we understand the Blue Book is only explanatory, and we are concerned only with the White Book. If you turn to page 253 of the Civil Estimates you will find that under 60, Civil Works there is a clear provision made for 85 lakhs. That is a clear demand and no other demand can be made.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: There is a note.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI: The note says that out of this total demand of 85 lakhs, 15 lakhs or so on account of establishment, tools and plant is included in the demand.....

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: It is included under 41, Civil Works. If you take the demand at 85 lakhs now, you will vote the 15 lakhs twice over.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI: Sir, I have seen 41, Civil Works also, and I see there also there are heads about establishment, tools and plant. The charges have been divided and certain charges are debited to 60, Civil Works.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: May I say a word, Sir? The schedule of demands for grants is contained in pages 22 and 23 of the Blue Book, and it says that it is submitted for the vote of the Legislative Council. And, Sir, the demand in item 43, Public Works, is shown only as Rs. 69,85,000. The rest to which my honourable friend has just referred is included in 41, Civil Works. So that, Sir, the honourable House is quite apprised of the fact that the demand under item 43 would be for Rs. 69,85,000.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I do not think I can allow any further discussion on this question. The point appears to be perfectly clear. The one point which required to be elucidated was whether honourable members were being taken unawares when they were considering the budget. I sympathised fully with that aspect of the question. But it has now been pointed out that on page 23 of the Blue Book the demand is clearly indicated as Rs. 69,85,000, and though in the White Book the amount shown is Rs. 85,00,000, it is stated in the foot-note that Rs. 15,15,000 out of it is provided under another head. Now if a demand for 85 lakhs were made on the present occasion and also a demand for 1,68 lakhs is made under 41, Civil Works, it will mean a provision of 15 lakhs twice over. That surely is not what the House desires.

[The President]

In these circumstances, I think the demand made by the Minister is quite in order.

I will add one more remark, and that is that if any honourable member has remained under any misapprehension and has given notice of reduction or omission under the impression that the total demand will be for 85 lakhs, then I will allow him when we take 41, Civil Works (1,68 lakhs) to modify his motion without any fresh notice.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : Mr. President, may I point out that the same is the case with 45, Irrigation Works ?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : The point may be explained at the time that demand is taken up.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI : The point is that we have put in, say, a reduction of the total demand by 10 lakhs or 15 lakhs. We have done so under the impression that the demand is for 85 lakhs. If we move the same reductions on a demand for 69 lakhs, the proportion of reduction would be too large.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I am sorry that Mr. Adwani should have put that forward, because it is clearly evident that it is due to his own mistake. The Blue Book tells him that the amount which Government will demand will be Rs. 69,85,000 ; and the White Book says that Rs. 85,00,000 includes 15 lakhs which will have to be voted for under 41, Civil Works. Surely, that information has been before the House. The figures have not been put before the House in a form which is likely to mislead it. The footnote on the page referred to by the honourable member is perfectly clear, and the demand in the Blue Book is also perfectly clear. If the honourable member has made a mistake and if he wants to correct it, we will consider whether instead of a reduction of 10 lakhs or 15 lakhs, he should not be allowed to move for a corresponding reduction from the total demand. But surely, that cannot affect the demand which the Honourable Minister is making.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : Mr. President, out of this demand for Rs. 69,85,000, we propose to spend Rs. 47,16,600 on works in progress, that is works that were sanctioned by this honourable House. The honourable members of this House well know that, if any reductions are made under works in progress, it will be greatly detrimental to the works undertaken. It will be a policy of penny wise and pound foolish, because most of these works have been given to contractors, and if we stop these works the result will be that Government will have to pay heavy compensation to the contractors who have collected materials and employed labour for the purpose. Now, there remains only Rs. 22,68,000 for New Works. Out of this, 7 lakhs are for medical buildings, that is hospitals. Further, Rs. 3,28,000 are for communications. The honourable House will agree that these are absolutely necessary in the interests of the people. Now, out of this total of 69 lakhs, Rs. 17,47,000, or nearly 25 per cent. are being spent on communications ; about Rs. 9,67,000 on hospitals; 2 lakhs on educational buildings. These are all in the interests of the people.

Now, I come to the various items. The honourable members who are in charge of the various departments will satisfy the House about the various needs of their departments. I, as their agent, have to carry out their orders. Now, honourable members will find there is a provision for judicial buildings. There is a new district court to be opened at Jalgaon. Then there is a sum for a court house for the Sub-Judge, Hyderabad. I am myself particularly acquainted with the court house of this sub-judge. At present the first class subordinate judge holds his court in an old building, which is an old church and which is quite unfit for the purposes of a judicial court, and the accommodation is not sufficient. Then there is also a joint judge who holds his court in a temporary building. In fact, the joint judge and the first class subordinate judge cannot be accommodated properly. I think honourable members of this House will agree with me that it is necessary that we should have a decent court for a first class subordinate judge.

Then as regards jails, a separate jail is going to be built for female prisoners. I think it is not fair that female prisoners, whether Indian or European, should be mixed up with the males. They ought to be segregated and accommodated in a separate jail. That building will also be used partly for the purpose of accommodating juveniles, whom we are going to segregate from habitual and other criminals. I think it is in the interests of the people that females should be kept apart from males and that juveniles should be kept separate from old criminals.

Then there are some items as regards housing police officers which the Honourable the Home Member will justify to you. With these words, Sir, I move the demand for Rs. 69,85,400, partly reserved and partly transferred.

Question proposed that demand for Rs. 69,85,400 partly reserved and partly transferred, capital outlay for Civil Works (P.W.) be granted.

Mr. S. S. DEV (West Khandesh District): Sir, I move

Omit provision for judicial buildings at Jalgaon—Rs. 5,53,000 (Budget page 235).

Sir, it raises a very large question in which probably I shall have to place before the House a long list of grievances in connection with the division of Khandesh into East and West. This item of having judicial buildings at Jalgaon is connected with item No. 111 in statement D to which also I invite the attention of this Honourable House. That item seeks to make a provision for the creation of a new judicial district for East Khandesh and the establishment of the District Court at Jalgaon.

This question has been before Government since the year 1921. I believe it was in 1921 that the sanction of the Secretary of State was obtained for a judicial district court at Jalgaon, and as it was said in the budget of last year this question had to be postponed year after year, owing to financial stringency. However it is now being taken up in a year which is of all the years the most stringent. I therefore submit that this item be omitted.

[Mr. S. S. Dev]

Before I make this submission it is necessary to apprise this House of certain facts in connection with this. The House may know that before 1906 Khandesh was one entire united district. It was split up into two districts, East and West in 1906. That partition was made for revenue purposes. West Khandesh had been agitating since then that the division had been unequal and ought to be reopened. Till to-day for judicial purposes there is only one district court at Dhulia and judicial administration of both the districts is run by that court. And now it is proposed to divide Khandesh for judicial purposes also. When once this division takes place on the lines on which the revenue division has taken place, then I submit for the serious consideration of the House that West Khandesh will be permanently condemned. As I said, when Khandesh was split up for revenue purposes, into East and West, West Khandesh was in all respects made inferior to East Khandesh. For instance I may tell this House that West Khandesh has a population of 5 lakhs, whereas East Khandesh has that of 10 lakhs. West Khandesh has 8 talukas while East Khandesh has 15, and what will strike this House most is the fact that while West Khandesh has one representative in this House, East Khandesh has three. Even in the matter of partition for revenue purposes, West Khandesh has been treated very unfairly. It is not satisfied with the revenue division and it has been agitating in the public and in this Council ever since. I think it was in the last Council that a resolution was moved by the honourable member representing West Khandesh then urging that a committee might be appointed to readjust that division, to reopen it and to readjust it, and it was I believe, you, Sir, who from your seat in the Government benches said then that there was a prima facie case made out, that the division was unequal but that instead of having a committee the question would be inquired into departmentally. For over two years the question was under the consideration of Government. It was only two months back that Government came to a decision that the division for revenue purposes at least should be looked upon as a settled fact. On 1st February 1925 West Khandesh met in a district conference and unanimously passed a resolution that it refused to look upon the present division as a settled fact. West Khandesh has resolved not to allow Government any rest till the partition is reopened and made equal. Now, Sir, you are going to perpetuate that unequal division by having a judicial division on the same lines. The result of it will be that whereas West Khandesh will have three civil courts, East Khandesh will have 6. It is said by Government that East Khandesh will then be by itself a self-contained and a sufficient district for one district judge. In making this admission Government ignores the fact which it implies, namely, that West Khandesh would be a very small district for one district judge. If with a bigger number of courts you think East Khandesh to be a sufficiently strong district then it follows from it that West Khandesh will have a district court with light work and there will probably be posted at Dhulia a judge bordering on retirement who will have very little work to do. Therefore on behalf of the people of West Khandesh I appeal to the Honourable the Home Member that he may be pleased to assure the House that the division of Khandesh will be made equal at least for judicial purposes. I have no grievance against a separate district court being created at Jalgaon for East Khandesh. But if you create that court on the same lines on which revenue division is made, then you will be continuing the injustice done to West Khandesh. I therefore submit that the Honourable the Home Member should extend here the same assurance which he gave in the Finance Committee when the question was discussed there. There he said that Chalisgaon court would be given to West Khandesh. Chalisgaon is in East Khandesh and the Home Member was pleased to assure that it would be assigned to West Khandesh for judicial purposes. But West Khandesh claims that Chalisgaon and Amalner courts from East Khandesh should be transferred to West Khandesh in order to make the judicial division equal in all respects. When I say there are three courts in West Khandesh and six in East Khandesh, I mean also to say that this proportion obtains in the file of work in all the courts together in West and East Khandesh ; for instance, sessions cases, criminal appeals and civil appeals in West and East Khandesh would be in the proportion of one to two. The present division will not also be justified from the administrative point of view, as I have already shown. I therefore urge that Chalisgaon and Amalner courts be transferred for judicial purposes to West Khandesh.

If also self-determination be a factor to be considered in this matter, I may bring to the notice of this House that the people of Amalner and Parola—or let me make my statement more definite one and all the pleaders from Amalner and the majority of the income tax payers from Amalner and almost all the citizens from Parola taluka, which is under the jurisdiction of Amalner court, are all in favour of having their subordinate court at Amalner transferred to West Khandesh. So if you consider the will of the people and their self-determination then I maintain that Amalner and Parola and Chalisgaon should be transferred to West Khandesh. Look at the question from any standpoint, you will be persuaded to believe that I have a just claim to make on behalf of West Khandesh ; I do not oppose a separate court for East Khandesh. I only wish that an assurance may be extended that this matter will be most seriously considered by the Government and the judicial division will be made equal. I may place before this House one more important fact in this connection. It was only on the 12th February that Mr. Justice Kincaid visited Dhulia on the occasion of his inspection tour and an address was given to him by the Dhulia Bar. Mr. Kincaid in reply admitted the justice of the claim and assured the Bar of his full sympathies. He further informed the Bar that the Chief Justice was also in favour of the claim made by the Dhulia Bar. I place all these facts before the Honourable the Home Member so that he may be pleased to consider them and may not perpetuate the injustice done to West Khandesh in matters judicial. I therefore propose that the expenditure contemplated to be made over judicial buildings do stand postponed.

Mr. L. S. CHAUDHARI (East Khandesh District): Mr President, I oppose the claims forwarded by my honourable friend Mr. Dev who represents West Khandesh. I greatly doubt the sincerity of the claims advanced by the honourable member Mr. Dev in favour of an equal division of East and West Khandesh in judicial matters. I think he has spoken on behalf of the people in West Khandesh and he specially made reference to the citizens and income tax payers of West Khandesh and Amalner and Parola talukas. As a matter of fact I am a resident of Amalner taluka and I sincerely desire that my village should never be included under the jurisdiction of West Khandesh. It is very easy to get a bundle of applications signed by innumerable people by one man in one day if one man goes round in different talukas. But whether it is a real fact, whether those applications have been forwarded with clear consideration in the minds of the people is a matter to be decided by the actual demand from the people's side. This agitation is to a great extent on the part of the pleaders. When East Khandesh will be judicially separated, the class that is likely to suffer is not the income tax payers or the citizens of Parola, Amalner, but the pleader's class mostly. As regards the division of East and West Khandesh in revenue matters, I think that point has been finally settled by Government, by a resolution recently passed some months back. As a matter of fact there is great scope for expansion for West Khandesh because in Nandurbar taluka and Taloda taluka there are vast planes of very rich soil which can be brought under cultivation, and every year thousands of acres are given for cultivation there. That is not the case in East Khandesh, where every year nearly five per cent. of land is annually brought under cultivation anew.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I have allowed certain amount of latitude in the discussion that has gone on so far. The provision before the House is the provision for a judicial court at Jalgaon. Surely honourable members will themselves recognise that they have been traversing far beyond the limits of the real issue before the House.

Mr. L. S. CHAUDHARI: I will conclude, Sir, by saying that I want to support the demand brought forward by the Honourable the Home Member.

Mr. D. R. PATIL (East Khandesh District): Mr. President, the honourable member Mr. Dev has clouded the main issue with a side issue. The only issue before us is whether there is a necessity of a district court at Jalgaon. He has dwelt at great length on the injustice of the division so far as the revenue administration is concerned. That is not the question before us and therefore I do not want to deal with it at all. Now in the honourable member Mr. Dev's speech he has clearly admitted the necessity of a district court at Jalgaon; he does not dispute that. When he does not dispute that what remains? Nothing, except that he must accept the Government's proposal.

Mr. S. S. DEV (West Khandesh District): Sir, during the last three years which were years of stringency this item had been postponed. If the honourable House admits that the present year is the most stringent of all the past years then surely this item must stand over for some time. In the meanwhile the whole question of partition of Khandesh into East and West for both revenue and judicial purposes may be reopened and considered. Pending that inquiry this item may stand over. At any rate the judicial buildings at Jalgaon should not be undertaken in this year of deficit.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : Mr. President, I see there is not really much difference of opinion as to the necessity of this court for East Khandesh and I do not propose to discuss that point further here because that is more properly a subject for discussion on item 111 which makes provision for a District Judge and his establishment for East Khandesh. The point here is rather different. It is this ; whether during this year we should spend money in building a new court and bungalows at Jalgaon in East Khandesh. Now, the position as to that is that a temporary arrangement of a not very satisfactory character would be possible, and therefore it does not necessarily follow that if we did not undertake the buildings this year we should not introduce a judge in East Khandesh. But looking to the fact that we shall have to save every penny we can in view of the recent vote of the House, it is my duty seriously to consider whether it would be right to undertake these buildings which will cost eventually some 5½ lakhs of rupees and will involve us in considerable sinking fund and interest charges, whether it would be right to embark this year on this scheme or whether it would not be more proper with our reduced finances to rely on temporary accommodation for introducing this year the District Judge. This has been considered this morning and we have come to the conclusion that we ought to economise in every way we can, because, as I said to the House the other day, we have not got the money, and if they do not give us the money, we cannot find the funds necessary for many of the important matters which are required in the presidency. Therefore, in view of this fact, I propose to leave aside the question of introducing the District Judge or not this year to item No. 111 to which it more appropriately belongs. But I will certainly not proceed with the buildings this year. So far as this item for a sum of Rs. 66,500 from the loan account to proceed with the buildings is concerned, we have come to the conclusion that it is but right that this item should be withdrawn this year by Government.

Question put and carried.

Mr. D. R. PATIL (East Khandesh District) : Mr. President, I beg to move :

Omit item regarding the provision for demolition of the old stables along north-east boundary of the Head Police Office, Bombay, and construction of a chawl, etc.—Rs. 1 lakh.

We find that in the remarks column it is stated as follows :

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : Sir, I should like to shorten matters by making a statement.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Let the honourable member formally move his motion.

Mr. D. R. PATIL : I formally move for the omission of the item.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : Sir, I have been looking into these police buildings. In view of the fact that our resources will be limited in the coming year, we have decided to go into the question whether economy cannot be practised in these items, because if we undertake this expense, it means sinking fund and interest charges which it will be difficult to find in a retrenched budget. We have decided, therefore, not to proceed with this work this year.

Question put and carried.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN (Bombay City, South) : Sir, I beg to move :

“ Omit construction of quarters for 8 inspectors in the compound of Head Police Office Rs. 1,00,000.”

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : Sir, I should like to make a similar statement with regard to this item. We have decided to look into this matter further, and in view of the fact that it will be difficult to find the necessary funds for sinking fund charges this year, we do not intend to proceed with the work this year.

Question put and carried.

Mr. D. R. PATIL (East Khandesh District) : Sir, I beg to move the motion which stands in my name, namely :

“ Omit item regarding the provision for construction of quarters for sub-inspector, head constables and constables at Ahmednagar, Rs. 50,000.”

Sir, we find the following remarks made against this item in the Blue Book :

“ The present lines are old and dilapidated and have been declared unfit for human habitation by the Executive Engineer. It is difficult to have suitable houses on hire. The town is an important one and in the interest of control and discipline all the men should be located together. The rate of house-rent sanctioned is Rs. 3 for a head constable, Rs. 2-8-0 for a constable, and Rs. 15 for a sub-inspector.”

Now, if we look to the present state of our finances, we should be spending as little money as possible over any buildings whatsoever. Therefore, without dealing at any great length with the question, I move for the omission of the item.

Question proposed.

Mr. A. MONTGOMERIE : Sir, I oppose the motion on the grounds which the honourable member read out. The present lines are occupied by 81 head constables and constables, and they have been declared unfit for human habitation. It is absolutely essential in a large town like Ahmednagar which is the headquarters of the district that the police force should be housed together in one place. It is not desirable to have the whole of your police force in such a city quartered all over the place. I suggest that merely on the ground that the present lines in which the police are accommodated are unfit for human habitation, it is imperative that the new lines should be constructed.

Mr. D. R. PATIL : Sir, I have nothing further to add. I think the reasons which I have given are quite sufficient to justify the omission of this item.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : Sir, I must ask the House to allow this item to stand. We cannot allow the police staff to live in quarters which are unfit for human habitation, quite apart from the administrative necessity of having them all quartered together.

Question put and lost.

Mr. D. R. PATIL (East Khandesh District) : Sir, I beg to move :

"Omit item regarding the provision for improvements and additions to the Mounted Armed Police Lines at Hyderabad, Rs. 1,00,000."

If we read the remarks against this item, we find it stated :

"The existing police lines provide accommodation for 50 married men only. With the exception of 12 married men who are compelled to live in the city for lack of accommodation, the remaining men are herded together in rooms or barracks of varying size. There is considerable over-crowding. The present lines are old and in very poor repair and provision for adequate accommodation is a matter of the utmost urgency. Proposals to relieve the congestion have been discussed and rediscussed since 1912. It is impossible to find accommodation on hire in the city, nor is it feasible for armed police, who must be readily available in any emergency."

Now, Sir, from the remarks it is clear that the matter has been under consideration since 1912 and nothing was done till now. There is no sufficient reason given why we should spend such a big amount of one lakh on this building. The police can find accommodation in the city and I do not see any objection to it. Therefore I say that this amount should not be given.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI (Western Sind) : Sir, I rise to support the motion. I may bring to the notice of the Honourable the Home Member and the Honourable Member the Home Secretary that the police lines are not in such a dangerous condition as they have been conveyed to us to be in this note. The total estimate for the building is Rs. 4,06,940. Out of this amount one-fourth is proposed to be spent as a first instalment. The total number of men to be provided with house accommodation is 52.

Mr. A. MONTGOMERIE : 183.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI : So far as the present quarters are concerned, these are not likely to fall as it has been alleged to be in the note. They are in a sufficiently good condition and are built with pucca bricks. Therefore this provision is not necessary.

Mr. A. MONTGOMERIE : Sir, I should like to remove a misapprehension in the mind of the honourable the Deputy President which is due to the way in which the note has been written. The paragraph was intended to convey that there are only separate quarters for 50 married men and that there was no accommodation for the remaining 12 married men. Besides these there is no accommodation for 237 men who are herded together in barracks as has been pointed out by the Honourable the Home Member. There is no decent accommodation for single men at all. We have in the course of the retrenchment scheme cut down the number of constabulary in Hyderabad from 237 to 183. I hope it will be possible to complete the buildings with Rs. 3,25,000 instead of Rs. 4,07,000 which was estimated at the time when there were 237 men. In a place like Hyderabad, it is quite essential that these men should be together under the eyes of the police officers. It is quite impossible to have them outside. It has been reported that 100 of these men are herded together in barracks. This is not a matter which we can delay. As has been pointed out already by the Honourable the Home Member we have cut down various items which are not pressing. I request the House to pass this item so that these men may live in better surroundings.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : Mr. President, I can assure honourable members that every care has been taken to see that economy is practised in this matter. The Home Secretary has already stated that the buildings can be completed with a less amount than was originally estimated. I can also reassure my honourable friend that these lines are not really fit for habitation. I was recently on tour and took the opportunity of personally inspecting these lines. There are only 50 separate quarters which are given out to the married men and these too are not really sufficient for married men. Accommodation given to them is far below the accommodation which is required according to the standards of modern requirements. As for the single men, it is absolutely impossible to keep them there. I went into several of the rooms myself. The rooms are very small and dark and were entirely filled by the cots of as many as four men. There was no room left for them to keep their kit. In some of these barracks as many as 20 men are huddled together. It is quite an impossible state of affairs for the constables who are required to live continuously in these rooms. There are no proper verandhas either at the back or in the front. As a consequence they have no protection from the severe hot weather of Hyderabad. The reason for the delay has been that negotiations were going on for purchasing the military lines from the military authorities. Eventually these negotiations have fallen through and it is impossible to keep this matter back further with due regard to humanity. I trust therefore that this grant will be sanctioned by the House.

Question put and lost.

Mr. D. R. PATIL (East Khandesh District) : Mr. President, I beg to move :

Omit item regarding the provision for conversion of existing quarters and construction of new additional ones for head-constables, etc. at Ahmedabad—(Rs. 1,00,000) (Budget page 237)

From the remarks given against this item in the Blue Book, it will appear that for want of sufficient accommodation two or three men have to live in one room and "in the interests of health, discipline and security of the force it is essential that the men should be provided with proper quarters." Now, the reasons which are given in the various remarks are practically the same. Sometimes we find that the scheme is "very urgent"; sometimes we find that it is "absolutely necessary"; sometimes we find that the matter has been under consideration for many months and the construction cannot be further postponed. These are the excuses we find in these remarks. But, I think, we should get away from this idea of spending more money over these buildings. If we look to the amount provided, we see that it is a very huge amount. The building is proposed to provide for 300 men.

[Mr. D. R. Patil]

Sir, I moved this motion only with the object of telling the Government that they should stop their policy of spending more money over these buildings than is necessary. Let them observe economy. I shall be very glad to withdraw my motion if I get an assurance from the Honourable the Leader of the House that he will not spend more money than is necessary. I will ask the Government to look to the houses of the agriculturists in the mofussil. When they are constructing buildings for these constables, I would ask Government for God's sake not to make them palatial but to follow the example of agriculturists. If the necessary assurance comes from the Honourable the Leader of the House, I shall be very glad to withdraw my present motion.

Question proposed.

Mr. G. I. PATEL (Ahmedabad Millowners' Association) : Mr. President, the honourable member Mr. Patil has made some statements without seeing the place actually. I saw those lines personally last year and I was struck with the conditions in which these three hundred men live. The case deserves to be considered on its real merit instead of from the point of view of economy. The reasons given in the remarks are very clear. It is stated that this work is required for accommodating 48 head constables and 263 constables of the Ahmedabad headquarters. This is a matter, therefore, of 300 men living with their families. I claim to know the conditions of these lines in Ahmedabad more than any other member of the House on this side, and from my experience I may be permitted to say that the present conditions in which these people live are most abominable. The quarters in which they live at present were built some 50 years ago. The honourable member Mr. Patil will kindly consider the fact that people who have to live in an advanced industrial city like Ahmedabad require quarters built not half a century back but some 20 or 15 years back. Moreover, this accommodation is required not for high officers, but for the poor people of the police department. It is not a question of highly paid officers, but of the low paid people. It is stated very clearly in the note that the rooms are without any convenience, were built some 50 years ago, and are unfit for married men living with families. I hope that every honourable member of this House will recognise that married men should have some convenience to spend their lives in a social manner. As the big people want some convenience, so also the poor people should have some convenience. The note states : "Moreover for want of sufficient accommodation two or three men have to live in one room". Sir, for a man to live in a small room with two or three children and with a wife, in a room built some 50 years ago, it must be hell. Then, Sir, consider the cost of living in Ahmedabad, which is higher than in Poona or Karachi. Therefore, these men require some consideration from the non-official side of this House, and this amount should therefore be sanctioned by this House. It is stated lastly in the note : "House rent at Rs. 7 for head constables and Rs. 5 for constables is at present paid to the unhoused men". So, the expenditure of this amount is not to remain as dead capital : there will be some kind of saving on the other side. But even if it is going to be a dead loss, in the name of humanity and for the sake of the poor people, we are bound to help them with convenient houses. My honourable friend Mr. Patil stated that the amount is a huge one and in the interests of economy he pleaded that it should be cut down. But for reasons of humanity, for reasons of comfort for these poor people and in the interest of these three hundred families of poor police men, it is imperative, I think, that this amount should be sanctioned. I hope my honourable friend Mr. Patil will kindly now withdraw his motion.

Mr. D. R. PATIL (East Khandesh District): Mr. President, I am very much moved by the passionate pleadings of the honourable member Mr. Patel that these buildings are required for the children and families of the police men.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Are you going to withdraw the motion?

Mr. D. R. PATIL: I am going to withdraw, but I wish to make some remarks. My only object in giving this notice of motion was to tell the Government that they should observe the strictest possible economy over these buildings. Now, I am very glad to withdraw the motion at the suggestion of my honourable friend Mr. Patel. My honourable friend is a representative of the millowners of Ahmedabad, and when he goes to Ahmedabad I hope he will advise the millowners to provide suitable buildings for the poor labourers who work under millowners.

Mr. G. I. PATEL: Mr. President, may I rise to a point of explanation? I would like to draw my honourable friend's attention to the fact that within the last five years the millowners of Ahmedabad have built several chawls for their millhands. Not only have the labourers been housed, but a special fund has been collected which will be utilised for the benefit of their children's education.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: I should like to assure the honourable member who has withdrawn the motion that we are anxious to effect economy. As a matter of fact this item was not finally allowed in the budget until my personal inspection of the lines recently at Ahmedabad.

Motion by leave withdrawn.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: That, Sir, finishes the items in my budget: they will be reduced by a sum of Rs. 2,66,500.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The Minister will make a demand for the total sanctioned grant when all the items have been disposed of by the House.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR (Poona City): Sir, I beg to move:

"Delete the item of Rs. 50,000—quarters for nurses, Poona. (Budget Page 239)."

You will see, Sir, that so far as the sub-items (a), (b) and (c) on page 239 are concerned, that is to say, the projects for out-patients department at the

[Mr. L. B. Bhopatkar]

Sassoon Hospital, side-rooms and a new operation theatre are concerned, I have nothing to say. It is only the last item, sub-item (d), i.e., quarters for nurses that I seek to delete, and I do this on the ground that it is a matter of common knowledge at least in Poona that the nurses working at the Sassoon Hospital are far in excess of the needs of the hospital. It is said that additional accommodation is necessary in the nurses' quarters as the present quarters and kitchens, pantries, etc., are quite inadequate to meet the requirements of the nursing staff which has to be increased on account of the new maternity ward. The reason that is given in the remarks column is certainly one that I cannot accept, because the nursing staff of the Sassoon Hospital is far more than its requirements; and even conceding that the nursing staff will have to be increased on account of the increase in the establishment of the operation theatre, I should say, Sir, that in view of the very lean year that we shall have to pass it is advisable not to spend Rs. 50,000 on this item. For these reasons I propose the omission of this item.

Question proposed.

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: Sir, the Sassoon Hospitals in Poona are very important hospitals and medical teaching is also done there. Nurses are also taught there and although they appear to be numerous to the honourable member for the Poona city their number is not in excess of the actual requirements of the hospitals. I think the honourable member is generally carried away by seeing a large number of nurses. But they include a number of nurses under training and as such they are not expected to do much work. But the permanent staff there is maintained to meet the wants of that hospital. It is not in excess. It is desirable that these nurses ought to have good quarters there. As they have to work on emergencies it is absolutely necessary that they ought to be housed in the premises.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts):
 Mr. President, I beg to move :

"That the item of Rs. 4,00,000 on page 242 of the Blue Book provided for the construction of a building for the Government Central Press, Stationery Office, etc., be omitted."

My objection is that we are being committed by this sanction of 4 lakhs to the ultimate expenditure of Rs. 15,31,000. I have seen the place where the printing press is now located and I think it can remain there till we see better times. Then my objection is that we may be absolutely laymen, we may know nothing about engineering, but when you ask us to sanction such a huge sum for expenditure you ought at least to give us an idea why so much expenditure is required, how much accommodation is required and why so much accommodation is required, and so on. I raised this question in the Finance Committee and we were told that it was not the practice to show all the details of estimates, and accommodation, etc., to the Finance Committee as they are shown to the Housing Committee, that this building was absolutely necessary, the accommodation was absolutely necessary, and the Honourable the General Member said that he had satisfied himself, but no plans or estimates were produced before the Committee. If that is so, and if Government benches are satisfied that so much accommodation is necessary, that so much money is necessary, and therefore we are merely to nod our assent because we do not know a single particular as regards the accommodation that is really required or as to why such a huge sum is required, then why is our vote at all taken? My objection is that at least the Finance Committee members ought to be taken into the Government's confidence, they ought to be shown why particular accommodation is required for such a building, why such a huge expenditure is required, before sanction is asked for the construction of the building. My submission is that we are not in a position to undertake such a huge expenditure of Rs. 15,31,000, particularly when there is a deficit; and the moment we sanction the Rs. 4,00,000 this year we will be told next year, if we ask that no further expenditure should be incurred, that "this is a work which has already been started, the sanction was given by the House, and we are already committed to it" and so on, as the Honourable the General Member said in another connection. If that is so, I say: "Do not commit yourself; do not start the building at all".

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR: Mr. President, there seems to be some misunderstanding as to the proceedings in the Finance Committee. My honourable friend has informed the House that Government have refused to show him the plans in the Finance Committee. I must admit that I have not any very clear recollection of whether that statement is absolutely correct or not.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN: I can tell my honourable friend that he said that I should go to his room and he would show him all the plans there.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR: I would explain, Mr. President that what happened was this: the plans were not actually with us on the day of the Finance Committee, and I told the honourable member who has moved the rejection of this grant that, if he wanted to see the plans I should be very pleased indeed to show them to him at any time, and I gave him an invitation to come to my rooms to see the plans, and I also said that if he could not avail himself of my invitation, at the next Finance Committee meeting, I would have the plans ready to show them to him. As far as I recollect—and I think the Finance Member will bear me out—there was no meeting of the Finance Committee to consider this part of the budget. Therefore, I had not the opportunity of placing the plans before the Finance Committee. But if my honourable friend had come round to my rooms, I assure him I would have given him every detail that he desired to have.

But now allow me to explain the circumstances of this demand. An old godown next to the old Customs House accommodated the Central Press and that went on for years. But unfortunately, in 1914, the roof of that old godown gave way. The P.W.D. were of opinion that the lives of the workmen in the press were in danger. At any rate, Government managed to house the press in that godown by relieving some part of the building of the weight of heavy machinery, and in two months' time a temporary shed was constructed on the Kennedy Sea Face where the Central Press is accommodated till this day. We have been considering the question of the Central Press since that time. In the interval the war broke out, and nothing further could be done. Government first considered the idea of having a Central Press in Poona, in conjunction with their press at Yerayda, but the estimate turned out to be high and Government thought they were not justified in committing the taxpayers of the presidency to so heavy a cost. Then it was decided to consider the question of taking this press to the suburbs; the estimate came to Rs. 36 lakhs, and Government gave up the idea. Then they decided to consider the question of taking it to Dadar on the site of the old distillery, but the objection to that was that if the press were located even so near as Dadar it might as well be hundreds of miles away, as there would have to be a small press in addition to the big Central Press somewhere near the Secretariat ; the scheme turned out to be too expensive. When the Cotton Depot was moved to Sewri, a site became available at Colaba, and the final decision of Government was that the Central Press should be situated on this site. It happens to be near the Secretariat, and a small subsidiary press could then be retrenched. The estimate is Rs. 15 lakhs ; and the site at Colaba is not sufficient for the press, and Government find that they have to acquire some 5,000 square yards of land belonging to the military. Mr. President, Government have also gone very carefully into the question of giving out their printing work on contract to private presses, instead of having a big Central Press of their own, and after tenders had been invited for a certain amount of work, it was found that by doing this work by contract we would be putting the taxpayers of the presidency to a considerable disadvantage, and that it was entirely in the interests of the taxpayer that Government should continue the work of printing themselves. We are not alone in this experience. The Government of Bengal have their own press ; Madras has three presses ; Bihar and Orissa, the United Provinces, the Central Provinces, Assam and Burma, have presses of their own.

An Honourable MEMBER : Are they in their own buildings ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR : Yes. In England, I am informed that printing was done by contract. In London there are more facilities for getting printing work done than in Bombay. Nevertheless, the British Government have had to go in for a printing press of their own. The Government of India also tried the experiment of doing their printing work by contract, and they gave a contract for a large number of standard forms. I am afraid that experiment ended disastrously. I am not here to give the details of what happened, but I will content myself by saying that it was an utter failure, and the Government of India have gone back to the old practice of doing all their printing work themselves, and they have got three or four presses in different cities of India. I do not think there can be any doubt that it is a necessity for this presidency to have a big Central Press of their own, both for the sake of convenience and for the sake of economy. The present press is housed in a temporary building, which was intended to last for two years ; we have made it go till to-day. It is now worm-eaten and threatens to come down. The result is that considerable damage is being done to our machinery and the furniture is being worm-eaten. It was not till we got to a stage where we could not postpone this question any longer that I have had the honour to bring it before this honourable House. It is possible the site on which the press at present stands can be made available for another five or six years, but I am afraid the building will not stand that length of time. Already the annual expenditure on repairs and maintenance is getting rather heavy. It was only yesterday that I was informed that a fresh expenditure of Rs. 15,000 on the building was urgent. Another Rs. 10,000 is required for annual repairs. I have also been told that if we go on delaying this matter any longer, we might be in the same position in which we were when the press was situated on the site next to the Old Custom House, and when the roof gave in. I do not think this question brooks any further delay. As to the accommodation provided, I have got the details here, and I have got the plans and if any further information is required after I have finished speaking, the Secretary to Government, Public Works Department, will give further technical details that the honourable House may require. There is one block of two-storeyed buildings for the printing and stationery departments, costing Rs. 3,12,000; there is a block of single-storeyed building for the same departments Rs. 5,45,000; there is a block of a three-storeyed building for offices and quarters, Rs. 1,29,000; tiffin rooms and Sanitary tower Rs. 36,000; garage, Rs. 6,000; sanitary and water fittings, Rs. 12,000, and so on; land compensation Rs. 3,40,000; electric installation Rs. 58,000. The rest of the items are small ones under Rs. 20,000. At present our printing is done by the godowns being in one part of the city, the stationery in another part, and the printing press in a third part. One Manager is housed at Colaba.

I will just give the House an idea of what we save. We have had to hire in Poona a book depôt and an office at Rs. 350 a month. There is a godown that we are using under this very hall. The printing department has monopolised it. Government want it for other purposes; it cannot be relinquished. The question was at one time considered of putting up a building simply to house this stationery godown and the offices, and the estimate came to Rs. 2 lakhs; the idea had therefore to be given up. There is a paper stock godown in the Old Custom House, which has caused considerable inconvenience. It cannot be given up till other accommodation is provided. We are occupying a bungalow in Colaba for the Manager which, if replaced, would cost at least, I am told, Rs. 35,000; I consider it as an under-estimate. Then the site on which the old press was situated, after the building was pulled down, was rented to the Government of India during the war, and this Government received rent to the extent of Rs. 1,43,000 for it. Now, that site is available for sale, and is valued at Rs. 4,50,000. It is a very valuable site and it extends to about 2,144 square yards.

An Honourable MEMBER: Why don't you buy it?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR: My honourable friend knows why I cannot buy it personally. I do not know why I should be asked these personal questions.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I should like to know whether the Honourable the General Member is likely to take long. In that case I will allow him to continue after tea time.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR: I will continue after tea time.

After Recess.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : Mr. President, I have not very much more to say. I would only like to impress on honourable members the volume of printing work that has to be done and the number of reports of the several departments that are printed and the volumes of statistics, fairly big volumes, that are printed and circulated to honourable members. It is impossible to do without the Central Press.

One other important point I wish to bring to the notice of honourable members is that we propose to acquire land that belongs to the military and we have not yet fixed the price. People who own land always consider that their land is worth more than what the purchaser considers is the proper value. But honourable members may rest assured that we will do our best to get the land at the cheapest rate possible.

Mr. R. G. SOMAN (Satara District) : Sir, a motion for the omission of this item stands in my name and when I sent in notice of that motion, it had reached my ears from a reliable source that in Bombay there are so many things which the authorities ought to look into in the matter of improving certain buildings belonging to Government. But unfortunately, the Government choose the wrong department and go on constructing new buildings. So far as this stationery office and printing press is concerned, it may be that the building for the Government Central Press is necessary. It appears to me that just as Government pulled on somehow or other so long, they can do so for some time more under the present arrangement. I got the information from a reliable source—from an elected member of the University Senate who paid a visit to the medical college hostel—that the students' quarters were so bad that there was no proper ventilation and the rooms have got one door and that as soon as these doors were shut they were confined as if in a dungeon. No Government authority looks into these buildings and they go on constructing this new building at a cost of 15 lakhs out of which 4 lakhs are to be spent during the present year. In order to bring this fact to the notice of Government I have given notice of this motion. If the Government can effect any saving in this department they can pay attention to more urgent matters such as the case of the students of the medical college hostel who have been suffering from insanitary residences where there is no proper ventilation. With these remarks I support this motion before the House.

Mr. J. C. SWAMINARAYAN (Ahmedabad District) : Sir, I support the motion before the House. In the interest of the workmen of the Central Press we are asking the Government to allow those workmen to enjoy the fine sea breeze of the Kennedy Sea Face till the sea goes farther away on account of the reclamation that is going to take place. Let the poor workmen enjoy the cool breeze as they have enjoyed it for 11 years. I have myself visited the Central Press while I was an examiner of the Bombay University. The place is excellent and a very good place. In the new proposed site for the construction of the Central Press the workmen cannot enjoy such fine breezes. Till the reclamation drives the sea farther away let the workmen enjoy and let the construction of the new building be postponed and a saving effected in this year which is a deficit year.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI (Karachi City): Sir, a similar motion stands in my name. I desire to oppose this demand on two other grounds than those which have already been dealt with by the mover of the motion. As has been pointed out already, the matter for consideration is, how to cut short expenditure under this head. This sum of 15 lakhs which is proposed to be spent is a large sum of money and the interest on it will roughly amount to Rs. 90,000. I do not know if the Honourable the General Member has taken this factor into consideration in coming to the conclusion that it would be a good economic proposition for the Government to launch on this proposal at the present time. But apart from this consideration we can postpone this work for a year or two and continue in the present temporary building. I have seen that building while passing and it appears it will last some years more. I think it will be an advisable course to postpone this work for a year or two.

The other point to which I wish to refer is that I understand that it is also proposed to acquire land for the construction of quarters for the Manager or Superintendent as the case may be. This is a matter which in my opinion requires consideration. I was told that at present the Superintendent is housed in a fairly good bungalow in Poona. If so would it be advisable to spend more money on building quarters for him? These matters require consideration and it is desirable that we should have during the next budget a revised estimate showing less expenditure; and by that time we will also have found out means to improve our financial position.

Mr. G. I. PATEL (Ahmedabad Millowners' Association): Sir, the Honourable the General Member told us that out of the provision of 15 lakhs, 4 lakhs are proposed to be spent this year. He says that the present building is not spacious enough and that another building should be erected. I may draw his attention to the fact that the interest on this amount will be nearly a lakh. If this fact alone is taken into consideration, I would request him to consider my suggestion whether it would not be a more feasible and economic plan to hire two or three bungalows in some suburban area at a cost of Rs. 3,000 a month and locate the central press temporarily there, if the need for accommodation is so very urgent. I was told that in that event the press will get more distant from the Secretariat, which will be inconvenient. I would suggest to Government to get over this difficulty by appointing two or three motor cyclists for conveying work. Taking into consideration the capital outlay of 15 lakhs and the annual loss of the interest of one lakh, I think my suggestion will be considered by Government to be more practicable.

I beg the pardon of the Honourable the General Member when I say that we have been having bitter experience of the demands made by him. We paid a visit to the tenements built by the Development Department at Worli. We found to our great disappointment that out of the numerous tenements that have been built only 24 per cent. have been occupied and the rest are lying vacant. Now, it is evident that we have not been realising the value for the money we have invested on this work. Further he gave us the example of Madras and Bengal which have got a separate building for their press. These are some of the provinces which sometimes commit default in paying provincial contributions. It ought to be on this ground, namely that their expenditure is very lavish, that they are not able to pay to the Central Government their legitimate provincial contributions. I wish that this presidency should not be reduced to the same position. The Honourable the General Member stated that the old Customs House building which was previously occupied by the press came down. I would suggest to him that he should sell away that land if he could get an offer of about two lakhs. The experiment may be tried of renting a few bungalows in the suburbs at Rs. 30,000 to Rs. 40,000. Or as my honourable friend suggested let them stay at present where they are and spend some moneys on the repair of the present buildings, so that the expenditure proposed will be saved and at the same time the workmen will get cool breeze from the sea.

Mr. HOOSEINBHOY A. LALLJEE (Bombay City): I am sorry, Sir, I must oppose the motion. From the statement that has been made by the Honourable the General Member, I find, Sir, that we have got sufficient grounds to postpone this grant. Sir, the Honourable the General Member stated that the condition of the building is very dangerous. If that is correct, may I ask how long it will take for him to complete the new buildings? He has asked for 4 lakhs of rupees this year, and as the estimates are for 15 lakhs, we may take it that it will take nearly three or four years before the building will be completed. Therefore, the present building is considered to be in a fit condition to be occupied for about three years. If it were in a dangerous condition the Honourable the General Member ought to have come with an urgent demand for the removal of the Press to another building. If it is not in a dangerous condition, I ask the Honourable the General Member why is it that he is hurrying up. We are told, Sir, that we are going to get within the next three or four years, or five years, a large piece of land from the reclamation which will be very near the Secretariat, and that the cost of that land is about 30 to 40 rupees a square yard. We do not know exactly in what year the building is going to be completed, nor do we know whether the estimates prepared have been prepared very recently or some time back. We all know that within the last two years, the cost of materials has been going down and this year it has gone down further still. Therefore until the Honourable the General Member convinces us that the cost of land and the cost of materials has been calculated very recently and that it is really desirable that this work should be taken in hand immediately, and that the development plot which he proposes to sell to the public at a cost of Rs. 30 to Rs. 40 a square yard will not be useful for this building, I think this House should not be prepared to pass this grant of 15 lakhs.

Then, Sir, the cost of the construction is shown to be 15 lakhs, but we do not know whether the cost of land is included or not in that sum. Until we know what the value of that land is we cannot really pass this item.

[Mr. H. A. Lalljee]

As I have stated, it will take three or four years before this building could be raised, and the present building does not seem to be regarded as very dangerous. Therefore I hope the Honourable the General Member will agree to postpone the new construction. In the meanwhile, if a portion of that building is considered dangerous he can repair it and ask for some small grant of a few thousand rupees.

Mr. P. G. JOSHI (East Khandesh District): Sir, a similar motion stands in my name, and I willingly support this motion. In this connection I wish to bring one fact to the notice of the House. I find, Sir, that this item and many other items have been included in the budget without taking the advice of the Finance Committee in the matter. (Moulvi Rafiuddin Ahmad: How do you know?). I know it: I am going to show it. We have been told, Sir, in the proceedings of the meetings of the Finance Committee in December 1924 at page 14:

"Mr. Shivdasani demanded a ruling that the committee should know whether there was a deficit or balance before passing opinion about the items.

"The Chairman pointed out that the purpose of discussing the new items was to ascertain the opinion of the committee whether they were proper objects for public expenditure. Their inclusion or not in the budget was a matter for Government."

My point, therefore, is that the Finance Committee's advice was not taken by Government before they included this particular item in the budget. Now, Sir, the Honourable the Finance Member is reported to have stated (Vol. III, page 1047, of the Council Proceedings) that the duties and functions of the Finance Committee were to assist Government in framing their next budget. There is also, I find, a communication dated 6th July 1921 and addressed to all members of this Council which states that the duties of the Finance Committee were to examine and advise on such budget materials that the Finance Department of Government placed at their disposal and thus assist Government in framing the budget. I feel, Sir, that particularly during this year, the advice of the Finance Committee should have been taken as to the inclusion of these items in the budget and they should have been given information as regards the financial position of the presidency before taking their advice on these particular matters.

Then, Sir, I want to bring to the notice of this Council one thing more. It seems from the statement of the Honourable the General Member that the roofs of Government institutions are going to come down. I do not know whether that is a fact. My honourable friend here suggests that the upper stories are going to come down, and I do not know whether that is true or false. With these words I support the motion.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN (Bombay City, South): I am glad, Sir, that the previous speaker has touched the real point of the debate. I understand from my honourable friend that his grievance is that he called for particular details in the Finance Committee; those details were not given to him. Before he could ask the House to give sanction he wanted the details. Now, that is an important point in which an important principle is involved. Very often the House has got to decide the necessity or otherwise of items involving 4 lakhs and 5 lakhs. My experience in the Bombay Corporation is that before we sanction even Rs. 10,000 or Rs. 15,000, all the several materials and details are placed before us. The estimate concerning each and every item is placed before us. In this case the responsibility for the sanction is thrown upon us, but the particulars and details are not given to us. I say that is not treating the House fairly. When Government want our sanction we should be given all details and particulars. I particularly protest here against the procedure that is followed by the Honourable the General Member here. When any honourable member asks for any information either in the Honourable House or in a committee, he invites him to his private room and promises to give him all the information there. I say, Sir, that the procedure is objectionable. It is not that the honourable member wanted the information for his private purposes but that it was needed for the committee and for the debate in committee. If it is not supplied of what use is it to ask us to look at this and that statement. I hope that this procedure will be discontinued henceforth as it is objectionable.

Coming to the details given by the Honourable the General Member, he has read out certain figures and he expects us to compare them and consider whether they are fair. That is asking too much even from expert economists and financiers. We are not experts; no honourable member can say at once whether 4 lakhs or 16 lakhs or 20 lakhs are necessary. The first point to consider is whether this estimate is considered according to the present prices. It was made three or four years ago and the most material point is as to when these estimates were prepared, what were the rates at the time of estimates. We find in the municipal corporation that estimates prepared a year ago make a difference of 10 to 15 thousand. We do not know when this estimate was prepared. It must have been prepared some time ago. If they have to spend to-day less what becomes of the surplus money?

Another point which is made by one of my honourable friends is whether there is any necessity of having this press in the close vicinity of the Secretariat when there are so many means of transport available. Can we not go to the Development Department lands for which they cannot find purchasers notwithstanding their advertisements? When Government require this land for their own purpose why not make use of that land? I am sure, Sir, in that way there will be a saving of at least 4 or 5 lakhs if they transfer this institution to such places as Matunga or Chembur. The land manager has advertised that there are plots of land available there and so why not remove this institution to those distant places? It may be a little inconvenient, but considering the saving that would be made I think the inconvenience is nothing. It is not a question of having the Government Press or not. Probably the Honourable the General Member has made a good case for a separate press, but the question is whether the urgency is so great as to sanction 15 or 20 lakhs, and whether the estimates are correct and whether there is not a difference in the prices of materials. These are points principally to be considered.

Mr. K. S. FRAMJI : Sir, we have been considering this question of the site for the press building for the last 3 or 4 years, and after several schemes were investigated, the present one has been adopted. The temporary building is standing on the present site for the last 8 years ; it was intended to stand for only 2 or 3 years, and now the time has come when we must provide a permanent building for the press. The present temporary building is in a bad condition ; the wooden posts are worm-eaten, and some are out of plumb. It costs a considerable sum to keep the building going due to weakness caused by vibrations. There is also great want of space. Those honourable gentlemen who know the working of the press would realise how the working of a press suffers for want of adequate space. The Back Bay Reclamation site, referred to by some honourable members will not be available for another 3 or 4 years. It will take about 3 years to build the new building if we spend 4 lakhs a year. The present building will not stand for 6 or 7 years.

One honourable gentleman said that we may remove the press to some 2 or 3 bungalows close to Bombay. But I do not think he has considered the fact whether suitable bungalows would be available and what would be the cost of bungalows suitable to accommodate a press. We cannot get ready made bungalows suitable for a press where there should be ample means for lighting and ventilation, and which should be sufficiently commodious for a large press. A point was raised regarding the estimates. I can assure the Honourable House that the estimates are very low and have been carefully prepared and scrutinized. The estimated cube rates for the Press Building, the Stationery Building and the block of quarters are very fair and reasonable. I have the plans and estimates with me here and shall be glad to show them to any honourable members. I do not think that it would be justifiable or wise to omit this item.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI (Western Sind) : Sir, I rise to oppose the grant of this item and support the motion. The note that has been placed before the Council is such that this Council ought to pause before sanctioning this item at the present stage. The Honourable the Home Member on behalf of Government began well by telling the House that Government was moved to-day to economise and to save sinking charges. So far as this item is concerned it is an item of 4 lakhs of rupees, not only that but that it is an item which commits the House by their vote without due consideration to an expenditure of over 15 lakhs 8 thousand. There was a time in 1922 when at the Finance Committee's meeting for the budget the honourable chairman of the finance committee refused to give us details, refused to give us assistance as regards the details of the items in the budget, when the Council met there was an uproar and protest against his having refused us that aid, and the result was that on that ground and chiefly on that ground the Entertainments Duty Bill was thrown out because the finance committee was not taken in his confidence. The House asserted its self-respect then. This is another occasion when my honourable friend from Thana, Mr. Pradhan, wishes this Council to assert its dignity and self-respect and wishes the Council to state whether its elected representatives of the Finance Committee are entitled to respect or not. This is a motion apart from the committal in which we have to determine once for all, every honourable member of the non-official side has to determine once for all, whether they have a right to call upon Government across the table of the Finance Committee all the details they want. The passage read out by the honourable member Mr. Joshi from the proceedings distinctly shows the attitude of the Government and its representatives towards the members of the finance committee. I will put it therefore to every honourable member on the non-official side whether in rejecting this item honourable members should not assert their absolute right to claim all information from the Government, and whether not only the finance committee but whether other honourable members of this Council sitting on this side are not entitled to the information, specially the money information that they demand. Now, Sir, that is one thing. Another question of very serious import that appears to me is this, that we are now asked to commit ourselves to an expenditure of 15 lakhs and a quarter explained in a duration of 15 minutes which my honourable friend the General Member took to place complicated figures before this House in order to come to a determination. Does the Honourable the General Member wish this Council to come to a determination to commit itself to an expenditure of over 15 lakhs of rupees by quoting figures in 5 minutes? Does he expect the House to digest all these figures in 10 minutes and come to a definite decision that 15 lakhs shall be spent on a house which, according to him, has waited 11 years to be built? If that is the situation, we have to take into consideration the further words that we have got here :

“The Government Central Press is at present located in a temporary building” page 242 of the Blue Book.

It was located there in 1914 ; it is still located in that building in 1925—11 years after. “The accommodation available therein is found to be insufficient.” When? Was it found insufficient to-day, or on the 1st of January 1925, or was this accommodation found insufficient on the 1st of January 1915 or the end of 1914 when it just began to be located there? Reading on :

“The temporary structure also is in a very precarious condition. The necessity for providing a permanent building for the Press has been felt for a long time but nothing in this direction could be done up to now owing to financial stringency.”

I will put it to you, Sir, I will put it to this House, that there has been no financial stringency for the last two years. Look at the budget, look at the excesses of income over expenditure in the most lean year, 1922, when this House compelled a cut of Rs. 60 lakhs, and the very next year the Honourable the Finance Member (present Finance Member) announced in this Council that there was an excess of 56 lakhs of rupees. Was that a stringent year? Was 1923-24 a stringent year, or was 1924-25 a stringent year? I respectfully beg to lay before the House that these three years were not stringent years, and in fact there was also a saving. These were the years in which the building ought to have been built. We are now in 1925-26, when a deficit is found and the Honourable the Home Member assures us that Government will make every economy and the Honourable the Finance Member assures us that he will try his best to see that strict economy is observed. And yet this extravagant item of 4 lakhs, which is equivalent to a payment of Rs. 26,000 for interest alone at 6½ per cent. is proposed. Is this a year in which this item of 4 lakhs ought to be spent? The item of 15 lakhs, which is the total expenditure, involves Rs. 96,000 as the interest on the outlay after the building is built. That is to say, an outlay, a burden, of Rs. 96,000 on this Council, on this presidency, a permanent burden until it is discharged! What is the justification for incurring this expenditure at 10 minutes' notice, that being the time taken by the Honourable the General Member to explain the figures? Will this Council be justified in voting away a further 15 lakhs on the information that the Honourable the General Member has to place before us to-day only, and not before? The statement that Government had to wait on account of financial stringency still applies. If financial stringency is now greater, the greater is the need, therefore, for waiting; the only point that was laid before this Council was this that the roof was coming down and perhaps there are white ants. When did these white ants enter the building, was not mentioned to us either by the General Member or the P. W. D. Secretary. We have not read of them in any of the papers supplied to us. If the white ants entered there 8 years ago, I think they might as well continue to remain there hereafter. But I do not think, Sir, that white ants really exist there except in the imagination of those people who reported to the Government the erection of a new house for the purpose of erection. The honourable member the P. W. D. Secretary tells us that though the white ants appear and though the house will take 7 or 8 years to build, yet the house would not be fit to live after 8 years. That is a very serious admission, I think. If the house would be fit to live in for only 8 years and next year we have a plethora of money, if the Honourable the Finance Member with his usual keenness for economy as he has done for the last three years will be able to bring his next budget with a surplus, in spite of his complaint yesterday that he would not be able to do so, then it will be time enough for us to see whether 15 lakhs or half that amount cannot be sanctioned. But when this year there is a declared deficit, I respectfully lay before the House that the very note which is here tells against the Government. We are not given the date of the plans and estimates; we are not given the dates on which these reports have been made or on which these plans and estimates were prepared; we are not given the dates, Sir, on which the house first began to fail in order to determine the exact position in which that house stands. And if the house is in that condition even up to this time, with an expenditure of Rs. 26,000, in order to save the interest on capital of Rs. 26,000, I do not think we should commit ourselves to an expenditure of a lakh of rupees by way of interest on these buildings. I therefore submit that the Honourable the General Member, with the same intention towards economy (as the other Members of Government I have mentioned), will withdraw the item as the Honourable the Home Member did.

Mr. C. W. A. TURNER : I think, Sir, in asking that the Central Press should be allowed to be located where it is at present, honourable members on the other side of the House do not know the previous history of this building. When the roof of the old building which accommodated the Central Press gave way in 1914 and Government proposed to build this temporary structure for the press on the Kennedy Sea Face, there was a howl of protest, so far as I remember, from the municipality of Bombay, the public of Bombay, and other bodies, and a very strong complaint by the Education Department that we were robbing the Elphinstone College boys of their tennis court. It is rather surprising, therefore, that honourable members should now wish to have this temporary press still on the Kennedy Sea Face, on one of the finest sites in Bombay—I mean the Back Bay, which is one of the finest sites in Bombay. Further, it has been suggested by one honourable member that it is not necessary to have the press near the Secretariat. I would just ask the House to consider what a very large amount of printing is involved in the Blue Book, the White Book, the question lists, and things of that sort ; they have to be printed at very very short notice, and they have got to be ready by a certain time. That is the sort of work which the press is called upon to do at a moment's notice. No other private press in Bombay could do it. It would be extremely inconvenient, if the press were situated at Dadar or anywhere else in the suburbs, to get the copies down to Bombay by motor lorries.

One honourable member urged that this question is not really urgent, because though the present press was erected long ago, no attempt has been made to replace it so far. I must say that that is absolutely a fallacious argument. The present temporary press was erected against strong protest, and it was intended to stand there for two years only. It has been kept up with considerable difficulty by the Public Works Department. It was never intended to be kept any longer than two years, and had it not been for the war, it would certainly never have been allowed to be there. From that very date, new schemes have been considered right up to 1922-23. There was a scheme for removing the press to Poona ; that had to be abandoned in view of the inconvenience and expense. There was a scheme for putting up the press at Dadar ; that again had to be given up as it was found to be extremely inconvenient. There was a further scheme for putting up the press at Sewri ; that, again, proved to be inconvenient and expensive. There was also a proposal to put up a new press at Ghatkopar on the developed area. That, as the Honourable the General Member pointed out, was estimated to cost Rs. 30 lakhs. Government are now asking for Rs. 15 lakhs.

There was also the further argument advanced that it was not necessary to have a new press, as the present building will go on at least for a year, and therefore this expenditure should not be incurred. The present building may last a year, but it will not last very much longer, and the very fact that it will take two years to build the new press makes it most essential that we should start at once. The longer it is delayed, the greater will be the risk of the present building falling down, and the more difficult will it be to carry on the press. The Honourable the General Member has already pointed out that we are already being asked for Rs. 15,000 for extension, and the annual repairs amount to an exorbitant figure, in order to keep the press going. It is therefore an uneconomic proposition not to have a new building.

I may add one thing. I think the honourable member from Sukkur (Mr. Pahalajani) made a very unfair attack on the Government, when he said that the dangers of continuing the press in its present building owing to the attacks of white ants existed only in the imagination of Government.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI : Those who reported to you.

Mr. C. W. A. TURNER : I think that is also equally unfair.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD (Central Division) : Sir, I had no desire to take part in this discussion, but the observations that fell from the honourable member Mr. Pahalajani induced me to take part in it. The honourable member, Sir, imported more heat than light into the discussion. Now, Sir, he asks where the insects came from.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI : I did not say that.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD : I heard him say that—I am sorry if I am wrong. That reminds me of an article recently published which ridicules honourable members for putting such interpellations as to where the mosquitoes come from and why people die of malaria. I must deprecate the unfair remarks against the Honourable the Finance Member in regard to the Finance Committee. If this motion is to be rejected, it may be rejected on its merits, but the honourable member says that every member is bound to keep up the self-respect of this House, because some information was not supplied to the Finance Committee. Therefore, the motion should be rejected. Sir, this is a very unfair remark to make. I have been a member of the Finance Committee for some time and I owe it to the Finance Member to say that, with the greatest amount of courtesy he has placed every possible information at our disposal, and I think every member who has been a member of the Finance Committee will come forward to bear testimony to it. It may be that information about a particular item may not have been provided. Sir, the Finance Committee is not a statutory committee, and, as the honourable member Mr. Joshi has said, the Finance Member places at the disposal of the Finance Committee the information which he thinks it desirable for the members to know. But the House has the power to criticise, when the items come up before the House, in every respect possible, and I do not think there has been desire on the part of the Finance Member to burke any discussion or to be deficient in supplying information. I certainly give my testimony to the willingness of the Finance Member and the Finance Department to give the Finance Committee every information possible.

With regard to the necessity of having a Central Press

Mr. D. R. PATIL : I rise to a point of order. The honourable member is addressing the members of the House ; he ought to address the Chair.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD : I think the President would have reminded me if I had been addressing some one else than the Chair. At one time the Central Press was in the Secretariat building. But for various reasons it had to be shifted. I do not think it is wise to propose that the press should be taken far far away from the Secretariat. It is no business of ours where the press is located. It is not necessary for us to point where Government should have a building for the press. We have simply to give the order, and leave it to Government to decide the best way in which that order should be carried out. It must be admitted that the General Member is rather unfortunate in his secretaries, because their vocal organs are not very strong, but, at any rate, he has done his best. As far as the honourable member for the city of Bombay is concerned, he takes special pleasure in attacking the General Department, and is never so happy as when he is attacking the Honourable Member who is in charge of that department. If a cut is to be made, it must not be made because the Finance Committee was not supplied with some information. It must be made on its own merits.

Mr. A. N. SURVE (Bombay City, North) : Mr. President, the question that is raised wears a constitutional aspect. The honourable member who has spoken just before me has referred to that point. The Finance Committee is not a statutory committee, but is appointed to advise the Finance Department as a matter of courtesy. Therefore, the point is, if the members of the committee do not obtain the information which they want, then it is the duty of those members who are refused the information, to come and state it to this House, and then it will be a point of honour for this House to decide whether it should, in future, elect any of its members on that committee. For this year, at any rate, that opportunity is lost, because the Finance Committee is already elected. Let us take a note of this fact, and when the appointment of the Finance Committee is moved next year, we can tell the Government that on such and such an occasion they refused to give particular information to the committee, and unless they promise to give all the information necessary for the decision of the questions coming before the Finance Committee, we will refuse to elect any members to it. That would be the right course to adopt. In the present instance at any rate, I think the House having once accepted the invitation of Government and having elected members to the Committee, it will not be for us to go back on it and say that we are not going to sanction this particular demand, because no information was given to our members because, by its very constitution we know that it is only advisory in its functions. Therefore, I think, to raise a point of honour in this particular instance is not quite sound. The second point is this. I was also on the finance committee last year. I may give you my own experience and that is—I may say—in favour of Government. There is a circular on the file which any honourable member can see. On the notice of the meeting a note was made asking all the secretaries to come with their files to answer the questions that any honourable member might choose to ask. I can produce this notice, if any honourable member is curious to look at it. That was not all—in accordance with the notice the secretaries did produce huge files and were in attendance on the non-official members of the committee. If Government are willing to give us all the information that they can possibly give, then can we in justice say that information is not given to us and therefore we are not going to sanction the particular item?

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE: Mr. President, I am sorry that the discussion should be led astray into the paths of the proceedings of the Finance Committee. As some weight appears to have been attached to that matter, I should like to say a word or two to remove the misunderstanding. The Honourable the Deputy President has spoken with his usual fiery eloquence and has given an impression of bitterness. The honourable member must have derived that heat in this matter at second hand, for he did not happen to be present at any recent meeting of the Finance Committee. This matter came up for discussion in December and the honourable member Mr. Pradhan asked for certain plans. I think that he must have misunderstood the answer that was given to him. It was not that the plans would not be given but that the detailed plans, did not happen to be available for immediate production. He was told that the plans would be produced at a subsequent meeting of the Finance Committee if required. But when the next meeting of the finance committee took place there was such a tremendous rush of work that it did not occur to the honourable member who had asked for the production of it to repeat his request. There was not the slightest desire to keep back these plans and had they been asked for certainly they would have been produced. I suggest therefore that this matter may be discussed purely on its merits and not with reference to the proceedings of the Finance Committee, which I should like to mention have been characterised by the greatest cordiality and good feeling.

Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI (Kaira District): Sir, I adhere to the same view I held a year before about the Finance Committee. I was on the finance committee for the last year, and I still believe that it is a mysterious body. The finance committee here is not on the lines of the finance committee in England and other western countries. The finance committee is treated here with scant courtesy. That I can very well say...

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Should that point be pursued further? Let us decide the question on its merits.

Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI: As regards this item I see no reason why there should be a new building at a cost of 15 lakhs. For the present they can go on with the existing building which will last for two or three years more. Especially in such times as this additional expenditure on buildings should be avoided.

Mr. PUNJABHAI THAKERSI (Bombay City, North) : Sir, I never thought of taking part in the debate, but after hearing the speech of the honourable member for Poona I was wonder-struck when he said that he was in the Finance Committee and all details and every information were placed before the Finance Committee.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : That is not the point.

Mr. PUNJABHAI THAKERSI : Here is a provision made for the construction of a building for the Central Press. From the speech of the Honourable the General Member, it appears that land is also to be purchased. We do not know either the area of the land or the price which it is proposed to pay. If it is over Rs. 35 I would suggest to the Honourable the General Member to wait till the reclamation scheme is complete so that we can purchase for the same price land in the reclaimed area ; and we can also construct the building near the Secretariat. The reclamation will be complete in five or six years and till then we can go on in the present building which is not in any way so very dangerous. I have seen the Central Press building myself and it is not in such a bad condition. Further it is not desirable at such a time as this when there is financial stringency to spend 15 lakhs of rupees on such purposes. Without going into further details I request the honourable member to wait for some time.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts) : Mr. President, I must first clear some misunderstanding which has arisen. I did not for a moment mean to say that any information I asked for was refused. Information was supplied to us whenever we asked for it. My grievance as regards these estimates and plans is this. You are asking us to sanction huge sums. How can you expect us to give our assent or dissent without placing before us the plans ? I was told that it was not the practice to place the plans and estimates before the finance committee. If that is so, it means that you simply ask us to nod. I do say that the Honourable the General Member did make an offer to me that he would be prepared to show the plans if I went to his rooms. I said that it was not that the plans and estimates should be supplied to me but that it should be placed before the finance committee, whether it is statutory or not. Rightly or wrongly there is a committee. That committee advises you in framing the budget. If that is so, take at least that committee into your confidence and let them know the details. We do not pose to be experts but we have some knowledge and will be in a better position to give our assent or dissent.

Coming to the merits of this case, I find that the Honourable the General Member says that there is a site of about 6,000 square yards. We shall have to acquire a site of about 5,000 square yards from the Government of India. In the estimates Rs. 3,70,000 are put down as the probable cost of that land. It works out to about Rs. 70 a square yard. That portion of the site which you have already got, if put into the open market for sale, will fetch, according to the rate of value of the site which we are acquiring, at least 3 lakhs of rupees. So, the cost of the whole site is 6 or 7 lakhs, and this building is going to cost in all Rs. 18,31,000.

[Mr. G. B. Pradhan]

Now, Government are advertising and advertising for the sale of their suburban plots at the rate of Rs. 4 or Rs. 5. They can easily get the 11,000 or 12,000 square yards they require from these developed lands for Rs. 50,000.

Then, I am told that quarters are required for workmen and officers if the press is removed to the suburban sites, but even if money has to be spent on building quarters for the workmen and officers, that money will give a return. I submit, therefore, that in this lean year Government should not ask for a grant of such a big sum. Let them wait. As a matter of fact they are asking only for 4 lakhs this year, and according to their own calculations the new building will take four years for completion. The present building, therefore, is not going to tumble down within that time. If urgent repairs are required, let those repairs be made, and the building be made inhabitable for a couple of years more. So, whether Government build it in the reclamation area, because they want it near the Secretariat, or somewhere else, they can easily postpone it for a year or two. It is not such an urgent matter and that is why we are urging them to withdraw this demand.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : Mr. President, there have been two main arguments placed before this honourable House. One argument came from my friend the honourable member from Ahmedabad, and that was from the humanitarian point of view. He desired that the workmen should continue to have the benefits of the sea breeze they get now. But he forgot that it is far more important to protect their lives than to allow them to enjoy the sea breeze. Well, Sir, I have already stated that one of the reasons why this demand is made is that this structure cannot continue to last very long. We have postponed consideration of this matter long enough. This structure was intended to last for two years and two years only. We have made it go for eleven years. And now we come to the Council, when we are convinced that we can wait no longer. Several honourable members have urged upon Government the advisability of waiting a little longer. Some have stated that we should wait till the reclamation is finished. Well, the reclamation area, at the very earliest date, will not be available until the year 1932 : that is another seven years, and it will take about four years to construct the new building, that is eleven years. What are we going to do during the next eleven years ? We will have to put up another temporary structure, and that will cost a lakh and a half or two. It cannot be done under that sum. Now, the repairs alone of this temporary structure go up to Rs. 10,000 to Rs. 15,000 a year at present, and we run the continued risk of being told that we have to vacate in a month's time because it is unsafe. Such a thing actually did happen with the old Central Press, which came down and Government had to rush up the present building in two months' time. We do not wish to be placed in the same circumstances if we can possibly help it. And it is for this reason that we have come to the House and told them that the time has arrived when we must budget for this item.

[Mr. Cowasji Jehangir]

One honourable member raised the point of there being accommodation in this building for the Manager and the Superintendent. I have already stated that the Manager has quarters at present which are capitalised at the value of Rs. 56,000, and he will be housed, and this capitalised value will be saved. As to the Superintendent, he is at present in a hired building for which he pays rent himself and Government has nothing to do with it. We can easily provide that for him here and we have done so, and we propose to charge rent for it. It is most convenient that the Superintendent should live on the premises, because it is proposed to effect some economy. It is quite possible, I may tell honourable members, that if the Superintendent lives on the premises, we may be able to dispense with the services of the Manager. The accommodation has been provided at a very small cost, and we can get a full return of interest in the shape of rent.

My honourable friend from Ahmedabad made a suggestion, which could only come from the representative of the Millowners' Association of Ahmedabad. He suggested that we should house the Press in three or four bungalows in the suburbs. A Press which requires a building which is going to cost eleven lakhs should be housed in three or four bungalows in the suburbs! I repeat that the suggestion can only come from a representative of the Millowners' Association of Ahmedabad. I have no other argument to give. He also asked us not to emulate the example of Bengal and Madras who have got their own press buildings. During the last few days I have heard nothing but praise for the Governments of Bengal and Madras who run their administration most economically. We have been told that the expenditure in Bengal and Madras is much lower and that we should follow their example. Well, my honourable friend from Ahmedabad turns round and says: "Do not emulate their example; they are defaulters and have not paid their contributions to the Government of India. If you follow their example, you will also become defaulters." Whether we follow their example or not in the other case, we propose that we should follow their example in this case.

Now, Sir, as to my honourable friend the Deputy President and his white ants, I can only say that he should not judge other people by his own standards of veracity. If he does, he will only misjudge other people as he has done the officers of Government. Standards of veracity differ. But I can tell my honourable friend that I have seen this press myself, and the officers of Government who reported to me that white ants were prevalent have also seen the press for themselves, and what is more, the white ants have attacked the furniture so much so that Government have been asked to include in the budget steel furniture instead of wooden furniture, because if we substituted wooden furniture for the present wooden furniture, it might not last till the new buildings are completed.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI: The white ants must have been there so many years.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: It may be that the white ants have appeared only two or three years ago.

Well, Sir, my honourable friend the Deputy President also complained that the date of the plan was not given. It was given by the honourable the Secretary of the Public Works Department. The plans are dated October 1924. It cannot be very much later than that. We are now in February 1925, and therefore the plans are up to date.

Mr. President, I do trust the honourable House will reject this motion. The building is urgently needed and we have postponed it long enough.

But there is just one more fact that I would like to bring again to the attention of the House and that is, that we shall be making some saving against this expenditure and that that saving nearly comes to 9 lakhs of rupees. It consists of the capitalized value of the bungalow in which the Manager lives, the capitalized value of the rent Government are paying for hired premises in Poona, the capitalized value of the accommodation in this building and in the Custom House which is badly wanted by Government, and also the amount of money which Government might receive from the land that has been relinquished. The old press site will fetch perhaps 4½ lakhs of rupees. It is next to the Custom House, and is 2,144 square yards. My honourable friends can value it for themselves.

Now, we have been asked to go to Chembur. If we go to Chembur it will be necessary to have another small press near the Secretariat. That was proposed when Government considered the question of removing it to Poona or the suburbs, or even to Dadar. If you take it to Chembur it will cost just as much money, and then there will be the housing question. Consider what the total cost will be, including another press near the Secretariat.

We shall try and get this land at the cheapest rate possible and let me assure my honourable friends that I will do my best to see that we get it at market rate, if not under market rate.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI (Karachi City) : Sir, I move :

“That the item of Rs. 2,58,400—expenditure item No. 48—Public buildings on the Artillery Maidan at Karachi—be omitted.”

If honourable members will turn to page 10 of “60—Civil Works Budget Estimate”, they will notice item No. 48 “Public Buildings on the Artillery Maidan”. It is an extraordinary item, Sir. I find that the estimate is for Rs. 1,96 thousand, out of which Rs. 1,11 thousand was spent in 1923-24 and Rs. 77 thousand is proposed to be spent during the current year, which amounts to Rs. 1,88 thousand. This means to say that the total expenditure of nearly the whole of the estimated amount has already been incurred, but we are now being asked to sanction an expenditure of Rs. 2,58,000 over and above the estimate. Now, Sir, this is a year during which we must stop any further construction of buildings for officers especially new buildings. These must naturally be new buildings since the estimated amount of Rs. 1,98,000 has practically been spent. If the demand had only been for the balance of Rs. 8,000, this House would have been justified in passing it. But the amount is Rs. 2,58,000 which means that it is quite outside the estimated amount. I do not believe there is any special urgency for these buildings; I do not find any description of any of these buildings either in the Blue Book or White Book or anywhere at all. I move, in these circumstances, that this item be omitted altogether.

Question proposed.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : I might say a word, Sir, about this item. It is not the case, as my honourable friend from Karachi states, that this money is going to be spent on buildings. It is for development, that is, laying out of roads, parks, drainage, etc. The honourable member has seen the Artillery Maidan. We have acquired some portions of it from the military. Here we have actually started buildings, such as the Judicial Commissioner's Court, for which there is a separate amount provided in this budget. This item is for the laying out of roads, parks, etc. When people see that there are roads, parks, drainage, etc., and that the place is thus in a developed condition, we will be able to dispose of the remaining portion belonging to Government at higher rates. The honourable member himself knows how valuable that portion is. The Karachi municipality is fighting and spending thousands of rupees for a strip of land that is included in this area. By providing roads, parks and drainage, we are enhancing the value of land belonging to Government.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : Mr. President, the Honourable Minister in charge has explained the position with regard to the item entered in the Public Works Department budget. There is some reason for misunderstanding on the part of the honourable members opposite, because the heading says : " Public Buildings on the Artillery Maidan." That is rather a misnomer. It is not meant for public building, it is meant really for the development of the estate which we ultimately want to sell. Honourable members are aware that before 1921 the Bombay Government made an agreement with the Government of India by which a sum of 31 lakhs of rupees was to be paid to the Government of India for the Artillery Maidan that was taken up by the Bombay Government. The estimates prepared then and revised now show that this transaction is likely to be a profitable one for the Bombay Government. In parts the estimates were sanctioned by the Legislative Council in the two previous years and the Legislative Council had also sanctioned the erection of the judicial courts on the Artillery Maidan. The amount is necessary to develop the estate properly with roads and drainage and lighting, etc., in order to be able to place it on the market for the public to take. The details of the estimates, if they are required by the Council will be given to them when the items for Rs. 10 lakhs and Rs. 2,50,000 which are entered under head 56 come to be considered by the Council. Objections have been taken to these items by some members, and there will, therefore, be an opportunity of discussing them in detail then. For the moment, the amount of Rs. 2,58,000 is only meant for roads, drainage etc., in continuation of works that are already in progress, and I think that the Council will do well to pass this item, in order to enable the estate to be developed, so that it can be placed on the market as soon as possible.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD : Why was there a misprint ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : Like all human affairs, it is liable to error.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI (Karachi City) : Mr. President, the Honourable Minister has not replied to the point which I made, namely that the estimate provided for Rs. 1,90,000, and we have already spent up to the current year Rs. 1,78,000, which means that we require only Rs. 12,000 more. But suddenly the House is asked to sanction an additional expenditure of Rs. 2,58,000, without any further explanation being given. The Honourable Minister simply says that the money is wanted for roads, etc. It seems to me that this is really a very unsatisfactory way of putting matters before us. Here is a big project; it is said to be for the development of the city. Now, it is only fair and reasonable that this Council should be provided with details with regard to the whole of this project in its full bearings, in the same manner as the details of the Development Department in Bombay are being provided. What is going to be the whole cost of this project? What is the estimated amount of outturn, and at what rate is the land expected to be sold, or is the transaction of the nature of the Bombay Development scheme? I think the Council should pause before passing this provision.

The Honourable Minister made some point about the land which was asked for by the municipality. With regard to this, the facts are that the municipality had been asked to part with some of its land, nearly 1,40,000 square yards, some years ago for the Military. The municipality now want that this land should be given back to them, but the Government has so far refused to give them this land. Now, this demand of the municipality is, in my opinion, a very just one, and the point for consideration would be whether, if the municipality is able to get back this land—because I understand that the municipality is going to the law court in order to get back this land—if the municipality is able to get back this land, would the project be a paying one then? All these particulars must be forthcoming, before we are asked for a grant of Rs. 2,58,000. As a matter of fact there is not a single word of explanation about it from any Member of Government. I must say that I am not against the development of the city, but I am certainly against the provision of funds, without any knowledge on the part of the Council about what is being done, and how the money is being spent.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: Sir, I thought I mentioned that the detailed figures which my honourable friend wants would be more appropriately discussed when the scheme comes to be considered under the head 56. I do not think he is quite correct in charging Government with not having prepared or made available the full details of this agreement which, as I said, was entered into before 1921. Here is the report that was made by Mr. Mirams in 1923. It gives the plans and other details.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI: I have not seen the report.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: It was again revised in detail on the 1st of September 1924—and the report is another printed document—and the Council last year passed a grant of Rs. 95,000 in connection with this very scheme. It also passed, as the P.W.D. estimates mention in the printed papers; on preliminary development Rs. 1,96,000. I told the Council that it is a misnomer to say that this Rs. 1,96,000 is for public buildings, as one might be led to expect from the heading of the item. I have also stated that this Rs. 1,96,000 is by no means the full estimate. It is only a preliminary development estimate, as is clearly mentioned in the papers. The full estimate will come to a much larger sum, and is bound to come to a larger sum, considering the very large area that is proposed to be dealt with in these papers. One hundred and eighty acres, I think, were taken from the Government of India. All these items are put in these printed papers, and the scheme was, as I said, already passed, both in principle and in practice, by the Council passing the sum of Rs. 95,000, which was put deliberately in the budget last year, in order that it may be discussed by the Council. In fact, it is rather an academical discussion now, because the transaction has been entered into with the Government of India, Rs. 10 lakhs have already been paid to the Government of India as part of the Rs. 31 lakhs which we contracted to pay, and the more we delay the development of this property which is now ours, the greater will be the time when we shall get returns from it and the greater will be the interest charges that will mount up on these sums that we have expended. Further, it is to the interest of the Government and the public to see that we carry out our obligations as quickly as possible, and allow for the expansion of the city, to which, I understand, the honourable member does not take any exception, I, therefore, think that this grant should meet with the approval of the Council.

Question put and lost.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The Deputy President has two motions for lump sum reduction: in the first case, the assumed total grant is Rs. 85 lakhs, and he proposes a reduction of 25 lakhs; in the second case he rightly puts the figure at Rs. 69,85,000, and proposes to reduce it by Rs. 19 lakhs. I take it he moves the reduction by Rs. 19 lakhs.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI (Western Sind): Sir, I beg to move:

"That the total provision of Rs. 69,85,000 in P. W. D. estimates, page 3, be reduced by Rs. 19 lakhs.

If we refer to page 3 of the Civil Works Budget, under head 60, we find that the actual expenditure for 1923-24 is Rs. 57 lakhs; the budget estimate for 1924-25 is Rs. 82 lakhs, the revised estimate for 1924-25 is Rs. 81 lakhs, and the budget estimate for 1925-26 is Rs. 69,85,000. Now, it is clear that the actual expenditure on work done from borrowed funds in 1923-24, when the year was not a lean year, when there were plenty of funds with Government—it was two years after the system of buildings from loans was begun—was Rs. 57 lakhs.

The actual expenditure for 10 months and the possible expenditure for two months more is Rs. 81,22,000. At the same time, at the bottom you will find a lump sum of 4 lakhs for probable lapse in 1924-25. Under the new system of accounts this amount of 4 lakhs for probable lapse goes into the balance. That is to say, the actual expenditure will be 76 lakhs. If the actual expenditure in 1923-24 was 57 lakhs, there is no reason why in this year, when it is necessary to curtail expenditure, it should stand at 76 lakhs. Even after the cut that had been made the present figure stands at 57 lakhs. Therefore my submission is that adding these two lakhs and odd a total cut of 19 lakhs can be made in this item so that it will be reasonable, if at all it is necessary to spend this amount upon loan works. I may be asked by the Honourable Minister whence this money is to be cut. I would suggest to the Honourable the General Member that it is high time he should consider after the last division, which evidently showed that there are only 15 non-officials to support him and 40 non-officials against him, whether he should not stop the programme of building the Central Press. If you look into the small White Book you will find several items of works enumerated in connection with the Goculdas Tejpal hospital, the Ahmedabad hospital, B. J. Medical School, Poona. There are works under the Administration of Justice, under Jails and Convict Settlements. Above all you have got an increased expenditure of several lakhs on roads and communications. If we turn to pages 10 and 11 of that separate book, we find that these are works in progress. The works on roads and communications have been going on from time to time none of which are likely to be finished. Very few are likely to be finished. Under these circumstances, if a proportionate reduction is made on expenditure on roads and communications so as to bring the total to 50 lakhs there will be no difficulty in giving effect to the proposals I have made. Therefore I put it to the Honourable Minister in charge whether it would not be desirable to put the figure on roads and communications at what it stood during the last 4 or 5 years. According to the proposals I have made I think the cut of 19 lakhs will not be heavy.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : Sir, I was very much amused at the arguments advanced by the honourable the Deputy President. I have been hearing so much about the solicitude for the masses and the poorer classes, and listening to the insistent demands for better communication, and hospital accommodation. Now, my honourable friend tells me that it is better not to undertake such beneficent works. I was surprised to find that his practice differs from his professions. What does he ask for now? He wants to cut down expenditure on communications, which are so badly wanted in the interest of the masses. One member after another gets up and asks for more money for communications and more money for medical relief. With all his solicitude, the honourable member the Deputy President proposes a reduction in the demand.

I shall show how this amount of 69 lakhs is made up. We cannot cut down any expenditure on works in progress. If we stop any of the works, we will have to pay damages. The suggestion of the honourable member the Deputy President was to cut down expenditure on communications and medical relief. I was simply surprised to hear him. The only items for which there were no motions either for reduction or omission were communications, which honourable members fully realise are in the interest of the people. The honourable member the Deputy President, on the other hand, wants to cut down the expenditure on those items. I am indifferent and I leave the Council to decide as it likes in the matter.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI (Western Sind): Sir, I am very grateful to the Honourable Minister for the plea he has imported in his reply. I was explaining to the Honourable Minister that if any money lapses this year that will relate to the actual works. According to the new system, in the next year they are not allowed to lapse: they are kept apart for the purpose of building those works. It is a portion of the 81 lakhs shown as the revised budget estimate, that is to say, actual expenditure for ten months and probable expenditure for the next two months. It is in view of that that I still hold and place before the House that 4 lakhs is the amount that will have to be kept apart after 31st March for unfinished works.

Mr. G. WILES: Sir, may I explain? The Honourable the Deputy President is not quite correct, and it would be a pity that the House should remain under a misapprehension about this. On page 27 of the Blue Book I have explained the method of lapses. I have stated there that although provision is made for this lapse of 4 lakhs at the end of this year, we have got a corresponding deduction of a sum of 4 lakhs as probable lapses during the next year, so that the total demand remains the same.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI: Sir, I was referring to the total sum Government is asking for this year. I was not referring to the four lakhs. I have not been properly understood. I am perfectly certain that I said that the real expenditure up to 31st March is not 81 lakhs but four lakhs less. In that I am supported by the honourable the Finance Secretary. Four lakhs is the amount of unspent balance that will be left in the hands of the Government on the 31st March.

The only reply that I have been given is a ridicule of my proposal for saving a little money out of the provision for communications. It is certainly open to the Honourable the Minister in charge, as a part of parliamentary tactics, to ridicule his opponent, and I am quite prepared to take it and return it. But it is no fair argument to state that no reductions should be made even in a lean year. The list of roads and communications and the money that is spent from year to year may be looked into. You will find that the total amount spent during each of the last three or four years on repairs of roads is much less in those years than during this year. Sir, the Honourable Minister has attached so much importance to the completion of these roads that he is looking forward to it as towards a millennium. I must ask him, therefore, to look at his own figures, and tell the House how many years he has taken to complete those roads for which he is so very enthusiastic now. The whole question is whether in the present year it is necessary to devote towards partial repairs, not completion of the repairs, of these roads all the amount that is provided for, and whether it is not possible to spend less money upon them this year and finish them after the second or third year. That is the view that I place before the Council.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : Sir, may I make one point clear to the House ? The honourable member the Deputy President has often been harping on the provision for lapses. It is a new system. The lapse in one year is to be provided for the next year ; but from the figures for the next year, a corresponding deduction is made of the probable lapses during that year.

Then the honourable member the Deputy President has stated that these amounts are provided for repairs. Again, that is a misstatement. These are roads in progress or new roads that we are constructing. Repairs come under 41—Civil Works. I will come to repairs later on. These are new roads or roads in progress. What will be the effect.....

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI: Will the Honourable Minister look at item No. 52, page 10 (Budget Estimate of the Public Works Department)? There provision is made for "metalling and improving" the road.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN: Improvement is quite different from repairs. I think the honourable member the Deputy President should know the difference between improvement and ordinary repairs. This is money which the Ministers get with difficulty for the nation-building departments, and I am simply surprised at the attitude of the honourable member the Deputy President. I therefore hope this House will vote against the motion of the honourable member the Deputy President.

Question put and lost.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI (Karachi City): Sir, I beg to move:

Reduce by Rs. 10 lakhs, total demand of Rs. 69,85,000 (Civil Estimates, page 253).

Sir, my proposal ought to commend itself to the Honourable Minister, because it is quite a reasonable one. I do not propose to go at length into the details, but I wish to point out to him only a few items under which reductions can very easily be made. For example, if he looks at the details on page 4 (60—Civil Works, Budget Estimates, Public Works Department) he will find item No. 1, "Housing of Officers in Karachi". I would request honourable members to see that the estimates are for Rs. 2,53,000. During the current year we will have spent Rs. 1,50,000; and the Honourable Minister wants Rs. 1,50,000 more, making in all Rs. 3,00,000. The estimate is only for 2½ lakhs, and the Honourable Minister wants the House to vote a sum of 3 lakhs, without any explanation as to the necessity for this increase, and without any revised estimates of any kind. Now, I hold, Sir, that the housing of officers is not so urgent that we should spend fifty thousand rupees more than the estimated amount. It is quite probable that one more bungalow is being added, for one more officer in Karachi. There is plenty of accommodation in Karachi, in the Civil Lines, and it would therefore be a waste of money to spend money in that way.

I will proceed now to item No. 6, Judicial Commissioner's Court, Karachi. Honourable members will observe that there is an estimate of Rs. 10,61,000, and that is only for the "ground-floor". The stone has been imported from elsewhere, an extraordinarily expensive stone, and I think the estimate of Rs. 10,61,000 for only the ground-floor of the Judicial Commissioner's Court is an extraordinarily heavy one. And we are asked to pass Rs. 5,00,000 for this item. I am quite certain, that if stringent economy is observed a great deal of saving can be made under this head.

[Mr. D. B. Adwani]

Then, Sir, I pass to item No. 53 (page 10, 60—Civil Works, Budget Estimate of the Public Works Department). The Honourable the Finance Member told us yesterday that he had promised to pay the sum subject to the approval of the Council, and that it was originally a smaller sum. I cannot understand the amendment of figures. The estimate of 13 lakhs was never placed before the House so far as I am aware. A saving can be made in this head. An estimate of 13 lakhs is shown under this item. This House only passed an estimate of 4 lakhs originally. Therefore we can save an amount of 4 lakhs which has been provided for this item in the ensuing year. In addition we must not forget that a big margin usually exists in the Public Works Department estimates. I am sure that if officers of the department would make up their mind they would be able to reduce the expenditure, and I submit that a cut of 10 lakhs of rupees is not too high for works of this character.

Question proposed.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN: Sir, my honourable friend from Karachi first dealt with the housing of officers in Karachi. He said the original estimate was 253,271, that last year we proposed to spend about 1 lakh 50 thousand, and now we have brought again a demand for Rs. 1,50,000. Sir, so far we have been able to ascertain, the whole of the present year's provision is not likely to be spent; therefore we have asked for this amount for the next year. Suppose we now do not give further money to the contractor, what will he do with the materials? Will he not sue us for damages? Is the Council prepared to give him compensation?

Now the same arguments apply to the Judicial Commissioner's court. Plans and estimates have been sanctioned, the work is in progress and a large sum of money has been spent on it. All the materials have been collected by the contractors, and if the work is now stopped, that material will be of no use to them.

Now, coming to the Kasheli bridge, I must say a few words about the history of this bridge. We had representations from Thana and other places in this matter. We heard that the Bombay Corporation wanted to build a bridge there and in order that the people going to Thana and other places may use this bridge, we subscribed towards it. At first, the Bombay Corporation gave us to understand that our contribution would come to about 4 lakhs, but now they say that Government contribution will come to 13 lakhs. When the corporation complained that we did not co-operate with them, we said that we would go to the Council with the revised estimate and if the Council sanctioned the revised estimate we would give them the money. It is the scheme of the Bombay Corporation which Government helped for the benefit of the people passing over the bridge which Government wanted to make wide enough for the purpose of traffic.

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : Sir, I beg the indulgence of this House to put in a few words about this project. It is well-known, Sir, that the Bombay Agra Road is one of the main arteries of communication. It passes through Thana, to Bhiwandi and further on, and between Thana and Bhiwandi there is a ferry which is required to cross a creek. It is a very troublesome job to take carts across the creek and it took a deal of time and caused a great deal of inconvenience to the people. A small road was therefore constructed from the Bombay-Poona road to join at Kalyan, but this caused a detour of 14 miles. It was necessary to shorten this distance and therefore Government entered into the agreement to co-operate with the Bombay Municipality to share in the expenses of constructing this bridge. The Bombay Municipality has spent a good deal of money over it and the contribution that is asked as a share from Government is quite moderate, taking into consideration the great importance of this bridge as it shortens the distance between these two places by about 15 miles.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI (Karachi City) : Sir, I do not wish to take the time of the House, but I simply wish to say that the Honourable Minister has not been able to make out a case for himself. He has told us that in the bungalows for officers he can make a saving of 50 thousand rupees. It would not be spent, or at least there is a margin for saving in it. With regard to the Bassein Bridge, this House agreed to give 4 lakhs as its contribution and the Honourable Minister admitted that he would be prepared to come to this House again with the revised estimate. When the revised estimate is brought forward, it will be for the House to decide. It would not do till then to include that amount in the budget. In conclusion I will only read from the speech of the Honourable the Finance Member made on the 20th February 1922. He says :

" I now come to Civil Works. Any one who examines the budget will observe that the establishment charges have been reduced from 46 to 35 ; a reduction which is the fruit of the Honourable Minister's labour in the cause of retrenchment.

No new works have been undertaken ; the fact which though regrettable in itself, is another indication of economy practised."

This shows that if the year were actually lean and there was a deficit no new works would be undertaken at all.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : Sir, I am really surprised at the attitude the honourable member for Karachi has taken. He is talking all along of works in progress. I have already told him that, if these works are stopped, the contractors will sue for damages ; and, if the House is prepared to pay the contractors compensation for stopping the works in progress, I am ready to stop them.

Question put and lost.

Mr. J. C. SWAMINARAYAN (Ahmedabad District) : Sir, I move :

" Reduce by rupees 5 lakhs—total demand (Civil Estimate, page 253)."

Rs. 2,66,000 have been already cut from the total demand. These items, totalling that amount, have been rejected by the Council and it is only a question of 2 lakhs and 40 thousand more to make a total reduction of 5 lakhs, and there are many new projects that can be delayed for one year. As for example the new sub-judge's court building at Hyderabad. If that building is abandoned rupees 50 thousand can be saved.

The whole grant that is provided in a particular year is not always spent, as several honourable members have pointed out. Secondly, a further cut of 2 lakhs can be easily made in view of the fact that the materials of construction have diminished in price. So I propose that the Government can easily save Rs. 5 lakhs.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN: Sir, just now there was a motion for rejection of the provision for Hyderabad sub-judges' courts, and the motion was rejected by this honourable House. I really do not see how I can go against the wishes of this honourable House. In fact, in regard to almost every item of new works, there is a motion for reduction. The honourable House have made cuts in some of them, and have passed others. I think in again cutting down the grants both the honourable House and I would be stultifying ourselves. The honourable House have approved all the items except those which they have reduced.

Mr. J. C. SWAMINARAYAN: It is not necessary for me to reply, Mr. President. I have shown that economy can be effected and I have shown it can be done.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN: I assure the House that I will try to reduce the amount to their satisfaction.

Mr. G. I. PATEL: By what amount?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN: Make it four lakhs.

Mr. J. C. SWAMINARAYAN: Sir, in view of the assurance given by the Honourable Minister that economy will be effected, I would ask for permission to withdraw my motion.

Question put and leave granted.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN: Sir, I will now ask that the budget grant for this department be passed for Rs. 67,18,500.

Question put and carried.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: Mr. President, I rise to move for a demand of Rs. 1,47,75,000 for Bombay Development Scheme. I would just like to explain how I come to that figure. If honourable members will open their Blue Book, they will see on page 23, that the demand is put down at Rs. 1,57,91,000, item 42. Mr. President, I am going to ask for Rs. 10,16,572 less than that amount. Therefore, I am asking for Rs. 1,47,75,000. I will ask the permission of the House to explain a little later why I am reducing the amount by this Rs. 10,16,000. Mr. President, from one or two of the speeches made, I realise that honourable members have not quite understood the figures in the budget and I sympathise with them and realise that it is not easy to follow these figures, specially when we make changes in the form of the budget, not because we desire to make it more difficult for honourable members, but sometimes we are ordered to do so by the Accountant General and the Auditor General, and sometimes because it is more convenient. In previous budgets all loans taken from this Government by local bodies were included in the Development Department budget, which made the budget unnecessarily complicated and which led some honourable members to believe that we were borrowing on behalf of the Development Department much larger sums than we were. Therefore, this year all loans taken from this Government by local bodies such as the Improvement Trust, the Municipality and the Port Trust have been excluded from the Development Department budget. If honourable members will turn to page 129 of the Blue Book, they will find on the expenditure side No. 19, Interest on debt, budget estimate for 1924-25 Rs. 1,84,63,000. For the revised estimate of 1924-25 there is a big drop to Rs. 1,16,56,000. In the figure for 1924-25 all interest charges were included, while in the revised figure of Rs. 1,16,56,000 the Development Department interest charges have been excluded. That is why there is a big drop between the two figures. Now, turning to the head 59 on the same page, honourable members will see that the expenditure head for 1924-25 was Rs. 2,77,99,000 while it is, in the revised estimate for 1924-25, Rs. 2,82,03,000. And naturally, my honourable friend the member for Poona and the member for Ahmedabad yesterday concluded that the expenditure had gone up. The revised figure for 1924-25 includes the interest charges, while the estimated figure for 1924-25 does not include that charge. That is explained in the Blue Book, at the bottom of page 131. If you look at the bottom of page 131, you will find the interest charges are Rs. 63,27,000 for the current year. Now, in the next year, you will find the expenditure is put down for Rs. 2,36,99,000. That also includes the interest. That is explained at the bottom of page 132. There you will see that the actual expenditure is Rs. 1,59,00,000, while the interest is Rs. 77 lakhs. Now, if honourable members will just take down these three sets of figures they will get the exact comparative position. Last budget session, I had the honour of making a demand for a little less than Rs. 2,77,00,000, because non-voted items were deducted. The revised figure is Rs. 2,18,76,000. The expenditure for the coming year is Rs. 1,59,85,000. Now, honourable members will see that there is a difference of nearly Rs. 60 lakhs between the current year's demand and the revised figure. Honourable members will recollect that they took a considerable interest in the development budget last year, for which I am considerably indebted to them, and they asked me to make a reduction of Rs. 75 lakhs. I responded by making an offer of Rs. 35 lakhs. Government have kept that promise, and though I did not make a promise to reduce it by Rs. 75 lakhs, I told the House that Government would do their best to reduce as much as they could. These figures which I have just given show a reduction of Rs. 60 lakhs. But that is not all. These figures were worked out some time ago, and now I am in a position to say that it is quite possible that we shall reduce it by another Rs. 30 lakhs. Therefore, when honourable members were insistent upon reducing the expenditure by Rs. 75 lakhs, I am now in a position to say that Government have been able to effect, with the assistance of my honourable friend the Director of Development, a reduction of about a crore of rupees. At that time, I informed honourable members that certain expenditure was entered in the budget, and that was required, but that we would save every pie. We have done so. Now, the process of retrenchment and reduction of expenditure has been continuous throughout the year, and is still going on. It may be that when the actuals are out, the figure will be lower by something like Rs. 30 lakhs.

[Mr. Cowasji Jehangir]

[Mr. Cowasji Jehangir]

An Honourable MEMBER : How ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : By spending less all over the suburban area. That was the policy we announced last year. I may briefly repeat the policy I announced last year. It was that for the reclamation we should go ahead as fast as we could ; for industrial housing we should stop at 16,880 rooms : and we should not commit Government to any further expenditure either by acquisition of land or by placing further contracts for chawls, and that we should not go in for any new schemes in the suburbs and we should stop all further suburban development. We have faithfully followed that policy to the letter and in the spirit.

(Mr. K. F. Nariman made an observation which was inaudible.)

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : To get a compliment, even a left-handed compliment from a critic like the honourable member Mr. Nariman is some compliment. I do not value it ; it is something and I draw the attention of the House to it.

I think the sales of land have been criticised, and rightly criticised. All honourable members are aware of the stagnation in the real property market. All honourable members realise that, with all other commercial bodies, Government must delay turning their land into hard cash. (Interruption.) Sir, I shall be obliged for less interruptions. I cannot proceed, otherwise I shall answer all questions. Times are difficult for all parties, and we have not been able to sell as much land as we had hoped, but the figures are not as pessimistic as they appear on paper. Honourable members, some of them certainly, are aware of the fact that we have agreed to accept payment by instalments for land in the suburbs ; to encourage the middle class man to own his own property. We have sold some land on those terms, but although we have sold the land, the total price of those lands is not included in the receipts. Only some instalments have been received, and therefore the figure of receipts from the sale of land does not actually show the amount of land sold. To give a proper and accurate idea of what land has been disposed of let me give honourable members just two or three simple figures. We had 1,264,000 square yards of land developed, ready and available for sale for residential purposes. Of this amount we have disposed of about 5·9 lakhs of square yards, and we have a balance of 75·5 lakhs of square yards. We have, therefore, disposed of about 40 per cent. of the land available and ready for sale. Well, Sir, I think that shows that, after all, the figures are not as pessimistic as one would make out from these budget figures. We hope and trust that, with a little better times, we shall be able to show better results. But, with everybody else, we must be patient; and I only ask my honourable friends opposite to consider this problem as one of their own problems, and, as many business men in Bombay will tell you, patience has become a virtue with them all, and we have got to follow their example.

[Mr. Cowasji Jehangir]

Now, Sir, let me just come to the question of establishments.

Do you want to adjourn now, Sir?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Is the honourable member likely to take some considerable time?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR: Yes, Sir.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Then, he can continue on Monday. The House will now adjourn till 2 p.m. on Monday, the 2nd March 1925.

MUNJABH, the 2nd March 1925.

The Council re-assembled at the Town Hall, Bombay, on Monday, the 2nd March 1925, at 2 p.m., the Honourable the President, Sir IBRAHIM RAHIMTOOLA, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., presiding.

(a) The total number of applicants for appointments as probationers in the executive branch of the Bombay provincial civil service in the year 1923 ?

(b) The total number of applicants from each community ?

(c) The number of candidates from each community disqualified for appointment on the ground of their being above the prescribed age limit ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : (a) 120.

Total .. 120

(c) No candidate was disqualified for being above the prescribed age limit.

SUBORDINATE OFFICERS' PENSION AND GRATUITY RULES.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI (Karachi City) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether the question of the revision of the present rules regarding pension and gratuity to subordinate Government officers is engaging their attention ?

(b) Whether Government contemplate having a system of provident funds instead of pensions ?

(c) If the answer to (a) and (b) is in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state when they are likely to arrive at a decision ?

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE : (a) The answer is in the affirmative.

(b) Government do not contemplate introducing a system of provident funds to take the place of pensions in permanent departments. The question of introducing provident fund schemes in temporary departments is under consideration.

(c) No definite date can be given.

CAMP COURTS OF MUKHTIARKARS.

* Mr. D. B. ADWANI (Karachi City): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they are aware that owing to the fact that mukhtiarkars cannot try all their criminal cases at their headquarters and that owing to their multifarious duties it is not possible for them to fix their camps beforehand when they go out on tour, parties and witnesses in criminal cases are often unable to attend their courts and that consequently the hearing of such cases is often unnecessarily prolonged?

(b) Are they further aware that in addition to the inconvenience experienced by witnesses in such cases they do not get the daily and travelling expenses to which they are entitled when attending the camps of mukhtiarkars?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: (a) and (b) According to standing orders mukhtiarkars generally try their cases at taluka headquarters. When circumstances specially justify or require hearings in camp, due notice is given to parties and witnesses. It is however true that sudden changes of camp do sometimes take place and cause inconvenience. But it is not true that this often leads to unnecessary delay. Bhatta is paid to witnesses who are entitled to and claim it whether in camp or at taluka headquarters?

RESTORATION OF RESIDENT MAGISTRATE'S COURT AT MATLI.

* Mr. D. B. ADWANI (Karachi City): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the present District Magistrate of Hyderabad (Mr. Covernton) has twice recommended to the Commissioner in Sind the reopening of the court of the resident magistrate at Matli?

(b) What were the annual expenses of maintaining the court of the resident magistrate at Matli for each of the last three years of its existence and the annual expenses on the travelling and daily allowance of witnesses attending the mukhtiarkars' courts during the same period: and what have been the annual expenses on the latter since the abolition of the resident magistrates' court?

(c) Do Government intend to take any action in this connection?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: (a) The District Magistrate, Hyderabad, did not in either of the references specifically recommend the restoration of the appointment of resident magistrate at Matli.

(b) A statement† giving the required information is laid on the table.

(c) Government do not propose to revive the appointment of resident magistrate, Matli.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

† Vide Appendix 46.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS IN KOLABA DISTRICT.

* Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR (Poona City) : Will Government be pleased to give the following information regarding the village panchayats in the Kolaba district :—

| 1 | 2 | 3 | 4 | 5 |
|--|--|--|--|---|
| Name of the village panchayat, taluka, etc., with date of establishment. | Whether there was a sanitary committee before the establishment of village panchayats. | Yearly grants made to the Sanitary Committee by Government and district local board. | Grants made by the Government and local board in 1923-24 to the village panchayat. | Grants sanctioned by Government and district local board for 1924-25. |

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : The required information is contained in the attached statement†.

EDUCATION GRANTS.

Mr. S. K. BOLE : Will Government be pleased to state in a tabular form what amounts of grant they have given to each division in the Presidency, district by district, for primary, secondary and higher education, respectively, during the last ten years ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : The honourable member is referred to the supplements to the Reports on Public Instruction in the Bombay Presidency for the last ten years, which give the information required by him.

ELECTED PRESIDENT OF THANA DISTRICT LOCAL BOARD.

Mr. S. K. BOLE : (a) Will Government be pleased to state when the right of electing its president was given to the Thana district local board ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to furnish the names of all the elected presidents of the Thana district local board up to date together with the caste of each ?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : (a) The honourable member's attention is invited to sections 22 and 34 of the Bombay Local Boards Act, 1923. The right of electing their own presidents was given to the local boards by the passing of this Act which came into force from the 17th March 1923.

(b) Every attempt will be made to supply the information during this session.

CLERICAL ESTABLISHMENT OF THANA DISTRICT LOCAL BOARD.

Mr. S. K. BOLE : Will Government be pleased to give the following information with regard to the clerical and higher establishment of the district local board, Thana—

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

† Vide Appendix 47.

(a) The number of posts (excepting that of the Chief Officer) carrying a monthly salary of—

- (1) Rs. 30 to 50.
- (2) Rs. 51 to Rs. 100.
- (3) Rs. 101 to Rs. 300.

(b) The number of posts out of (1), (2) and (3) held by Brahmins and non-Brahmins including the backward classes respectively ?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : Every attempt will be made to supply the information during this session.

CLERICAL ESTABLISHMENT OF THE KALYAN MUNICIPALITY.

Mr. S. K. BOLE : Will Government be pleased to furnish the number of persons of Maratha and allied castes holding any clerical or higher appointments carrying a monthly salary of Rs. 30 or upwards in the office of the Kalyan municipality ?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : Every attempt will be made to supply the information during this session.

MITHRAO WAH.

* Mr. J. M. BHURGRI (Thar and Parkar District) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the amount that has been sanctioned during the last eight years for repairs and improvement on the left bank branch Mithrao Wah at mile No. 45 and how was it actually spent ?

(b) Is it a fact that in spite of the expenditure there was no increase in water at the tail of the branch ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR : (a) No separate allotment for repairs and improvements to 45th Left Bank Distributary Mithrao Canal is sanctioned, but they are carried out from the general grant for maintenance and repairs sanctioned for the Mithrao Canal. The accompanying statement A† shows approximate expenditure incurred on reduction and improvements carried out on this distributary since its construction.

(b) The accompanying statement B† shows that repairs and improvements carried out in 1923 resulted in a substantial improvement of the working of the distributary which worked right up to its tail.

TEXT BOOK BY MR. TOTARAM GANU ZOPE.

Mr. L. S. CHAUDHARI (East Khandesh District) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is the practice of the Educational Department to issue circulars to all vernacular schools communicating the names of the books sanctioned for use as text books ?

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

† Vide Appendix 48.

(b) If so, are they aware that a book titled as " अरोग्य शास्त्राचा ओनामा " written by Mr. Totaram Ganu Zope, the head master of the girls' school, Bhalod, East Khandesh, has been sanctioned for use as a text book for girls in primary schools ?

(c) If the reply to (a) and (b) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state whether any circular has been issued either by the Educational Department or by the deputy educational inspector, East Khandesh, in regard to (b) ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : Enquiries are being made.

Mr. D. R. PATIL : May I know the time when notice of this question was received by Government ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : I shall gladly find it out if notice is given.

RAW COTTON TAX IN AMALNER AND DHARANGAON.

Mr. L. S. CHAUDHARI (East Khandesh District) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they are aware that a tax of two annas per cart-load of raw cotton is collected at Amalner and Dharangaon in East Khandesh ?

(b) If so, who collects the tax, and is the collection sanctioned by Government ?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : The information is being obtained.

INCREASED LOCAL FUND CESS IN EAST KHANDESH.

Mr. L. S. CHAUDHARI (East Khandesh District) : Will Government be pleased to state the number of applications received from persons in East Khandesh protesting against the increased local fund cess ?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : Information is being obtained.

BORING MACHINES IN NASIK DIVISION.

Mr. L. S. CHAUDHARI (East Khandesh District) : Will Government be pleased to state the number of boring machines kept for use in the districts in charge of the Deputy Director of Agriculture, Nasik Division ?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI : Three.

Mr. S. K. BOLE : Do Government propose to meet all the demands for boring machines ?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI : The demands are being met gradually as circumstances permit.

Mr. L. S. CHAUDHARI : Are there many applications ?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI : There are many and Government are trying their best to meet them.

S. High School, the New English High School and the Bhagiratha School at Jalgaon ?

(b) What is the number of full free studentships and half-free studentships given to the students of the advanced communities and the number of those given to the backward communities respectively ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : Information has been called for.

Mr. D. R. PATIL : May I know when the information called for will be obtained ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : In as short a time as possible.

Mr. D. R. PATIL : Is there any limit to that short time ?

ANNEWARI OF CROPS IN SATARA DISTRICT.

* Khan Bahadur D. B. COOPER (Satara District) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the annewari of the crops in the Khatav, Man, Khanapur and Tasgaon talukas of the Satara district during the last ten years ending 31st July 1924 ?

(b) What measures have Government taken during the last ten years to prevent or mitigate famine conditions in these talukas ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : (a) The requisite information is contained in the appended statement.†

(b) Scarcity was declared in these talukas in 1918-19 and 1920-21. There was also a failure of crops in 1923-24 but not sufficient to warrant a formal declaration of scarcity. On all these occasions gratuitous relief was distributed to infirms and inferior village servants. Patels whose emoluments were insufficient were given extra remuneration. Land revenue and other Government dues were either suspended or remitted. Tagai was distributed, grass depôts were opened in three or four places and grass offered to the cultivators for cash or in the form of tagai. Grants were also made for drinking water supply. Test works were opened but were attended by very few men. In 1918-19 and 1920-21 food grains were imported in large quantities for supplying the needs of the affected parts. An unofficial charitable relief committee was opened at headquarters.

Khan Bahadur D. B. COOPER : In view of the fact that there have been three famines during the last 6 years, do Government propose to undertake any protective works in that area which is badly affected ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. METHA : Yes ; Government propose to go in for an intensive scheme of well-boring and well construction. They also propose to examine the small irrigation works wherever it is possible either by means of bunds or tanks.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

† Vide Appendix 49.

PRIMARY TEACHERS IN THE DISTRICTS OF GUJARAT.

* Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI (Kaira District): (a) Will Government be pleased to state how many primary teachers in each of the Gujarat districts are drawing Rs. 15 per month?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state why the minimum pay has been reduced to Rs. 15 per month in such cases, and in what direction the saving so effected is intended to be applied?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: (a) The number of primary teachers drawing Rs. 15 per mensem in each of the Gujarat districts is as follows:—

| | | | | | |
|--------------|----|----|----|----|---------|
| Ahmedabad | .. | .. | .. | .. | Nil. |
| Kaira | .. | .. | .. | .. | 20 |
| Panch Mahals | .. | .. | .. | .. | Nil. |
| Broach | .. | .. | .. | .. | 18, and |
| Surat | .. | .. | .. | .. | 55 |

(b) Many of the local board schools were undermanned and urgently required additional assistants. With Rs. 25 per mensem, the minimum pay in force for an untrained teacher, it was not possible for the local boards to employ a sufficient number of teachers, even with the help of Government grants. It was therefore decided, in November 1922, to grant permission to the employment in municipal and local board schools of untrained teachers as assistants on pay less than Rs. 25 per mensem but in no case less than Rs. 15 per mensem, subject to the following provisos—

(a) that the concession was used in the case of new entrants only;

(b) that it was not used for the purpose of replacing existing teachers by teachers on lower pay or of paying existing teachers less than their pay at the time;

(c) that the employment of such teachers should be regarded as temporary only, and subject to such conditions as Government might thereafter determine.

It is proposed to utilise the savings resulting from this lowering of the minimum of pay of untrained primary teachers in opening new schools and providing more teachers in existing schools.

to his questions at the last sessions of the Legislative Council. The District Local Board, Satara, has since applied for a grant-in-aid towards the maintenance of their Ayurvedic Dispensary. The grant will, in the first instance, be sanctioned for one year if funds permit.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD : May I ask who is the adviser of Government in regard to Ayurvedic and Unani systems of medicine ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : The Surgeon-General.

RECORD OF RIGHTS IN UNSURVEYED INAM VILLAGES.

(c) Has any scheme for the audit of their accounts been provided by Government ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : The number of such trusts is so great that the collection of the information asked for would involve labour of a magnitude quite incommensurate with any possible advantage that might accrue.

Mr. S. S. DEV : What is that number which Government consider so great as to make the collection of the information asked for almost impossible ? Is it 100, 200, 300 or 400 ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : I think it is more than that and it is hardly worth the time that would be spent in collecting the information.

(b) If so, under what law, by whose orders, and for what reasons is such action being taken and how long is it to continue?

(c) Are Government aware that the delay caused by such action entails great inconvenience to the said committee and the said press?

(d) Are Government aware that even the daily newspapers and other periodicals, subscribed for by the addressees, are so censored and reach them only when the news they bring becomes too stale?

(e) Are Government aware that the post, so censored and delayed, does not bear the post-mark of the date on which it is delivered to the addressees but that the post-mark on it always bears a previous date? If so, why is that done?

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

† Vide Appendix 51.

‡ Kept in the Secretary's office.

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: I want notice of that question.

(c) Have they received any representation from the Central Kilaphat Committee or the Kilaphat Daily regarding the delay caused in the Censor's Office? If so, do Government intend to take any action?

(d) Are Government aware that letters addressed to the Central Kilaphat Committee or the Kilaphat Daily are pasted in the Censor's Office so badly that the addressees cannot open them except by tearing the entire envelope and that the censor's paste gets stuck on the contents of the letters in such a way that they cannot be deciphered by the addressees? If so, do Government intend to take any action in this connexion?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: A reference is requested to the reply given to a similar question put at the July session by the honourable member.

(e) What was the amount of land revenue of the whole district in 1890 and in the year in which the last revisional settlement took place, respectively ?

(f) What are the reasons for the inclusion of " grass " or " fodder-crop " area under the heading " nett cropped " area from the year 1915-16 ?

(g) Did the Director of Agriculture approve of this method when it was introduced ?

(h) Has this practice been adopted in other districts also ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : (a) Information regarding the nett cropped area at the time of the original settlement, which was undertaken in 1863-64, is not available. The total land revenue due for realization in that year was Rs. 6,84,582-9-10.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: I am afraid I am unable to give you any approximate or accurate figures off-hand.

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: (b) The Committee estimated that on the basis of certain calculations made by the Deputy Director of Agriculture, Konkan, the loss caused by all wild animals in the Kanara District would amount to Rs. 7,05,000 (vide paragraph 9, page 6, of the Report).

Mr. M. D. KARKI: Do Government take the amount of loss as correct or do they doubt it?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: How does the question arise? I don't understand the honourable member.

Mr. M. D. KARKI: The reply says that the committee arrived at such an amount. I want to know if Government approve of it. I want to know whether the figures of the actual loss were supplied for the information of the committee?

(b) If so, what are the reasons therefor?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: (a) Yes.

(b) Besides the bettas, which have been assigned to individual garden holders, there is almost invariably some forest assigned to the villagers in general for the exercise of privileges including grazing and when such a privilege has been conceded it is impossible to ascertain whether cattle belonging to betta holders graze only in the bettas and not in other Government forests.

MUJUMDAR (Deccan Sardars and Inamdars): Will Government be pleased to supply a list of sardars and inamdars with the names of their inam villages who have been presidents or vice-presidents of the district and taluka local boards in the Bombay Presidency from 1884 to 1923?

SALE OF FOWLER TRAINS BY DIVISIONAL FOREST OFFICER, SURAT.

† Mr. H. H. NARIELVALA on behalf of Mr. W. S. MUKADAM (Panch Mahals District): (a) Will Government be pleased to state in what year, at what price, by what officer, and with how many engines and how many carriages the Fowler trains lying at present idle at the Fort Songadh station and in the Dangs were purchased?

† This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

‡ Vide Vol. XIII, pages 811 to 813.

§ Kept in the Secretary's office.

(b) Will Government be pleased to state for what work these Fowler trains were purchased and for what period they worked ?

(c) Are Government aware that these trains are now advertised for sale by the Divisional Forest Officer, Surat ?

(d) Is it a fact that two of those Fowler trains are now lying in a dilapidated condition at the Songadh station, and that they have been left unprotected from the sun and rain ever since they were brought to that station ?

(e) If so, will Government be pleased to state from what company these Fowler trains were purchased and on what date and year the payment for them was made ?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI : (a) The Divisional Forest Officer, Surat, acting under the orders of Government, purchased in 1913-14 at a cost of Rs. 31,014 a Fowler train consisting of one 70 I. H. P. Locomotive, two ten-ton timber pole wagons and two box wagons.

(b) The Fowler train was purchased for the better transport of timber. Owing to the unsuitability of the roads in the Dangs, however, its use for this purpose had to be discontinued after its first trip. The engine is now being used in a saw mill.

(c) No. Only the two pole wagons at Fort Songadh, which are too heavy for use, are to be sold.

(d) No. Only the two pole wagons are in a dilapidated condition at Fort Songadh having been eventually given up after trial as too heavy for use. There was no place to store them in. The white English wood has naturally rotted in the course of years.

(e) There was only one Fowler train ; it was purchased from Messrs. John Fowler and Company (Leeds) and payment was made in 1913.

Mr. H. H. NARIELVALA : Was it not necessary for Government to find out whether the pole wagons were heavy and not suitable ?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI : It was evidently not thought that the machine would be so heavy as not to work at Fort Songadh.

MECHANICAL ASSISTANT TO THE DEPUTY DIRECTOR OF AGRICULTURE, GUJARAT.

*Mr. D. N. PATEL (Kaira District) : Will Government be pleased to state :—

(a) How many applications for advice on the erection and repairs of pumping and other agricultural machinery were received by the mechanical assistant to the Deputy Director of Agriculture, Gujarat, in the year ending on 31st March 1924 ?

(b) What action was taken on those applications ?

(c) Whether the mechanical assistant has ever visited any villages in the Kaira district possessing pumping plants, in order to give benefit of his technical knowledge to the men working on those plants ; if so, what villages were visited by him for such purposes in the year 1923-24, and with what result ?

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: (a) Thirty.

(b) Out of the above 25 enquiries were attended to during that year.

(c) The villages of Hadgood, Anklav and Bhojkuva were visited at the request of the co-operative societies and the wells in the villages were inspected and plans and estimates of proposed pumping plants were prepared. A visit was paid to Anand and the pump in the veterinary hospital was repaired. There were no calls from other places in the district.

BADLAPUR WATER WORKS.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts):

(a) Will Government be pleased to state the total expenditure incurred upon the Badlapur water works including the laying of the pipe line to Ambernath?

(b) What is the recurring expenditure?

(c) What is the return which Government get on all this outlay?

(d) Will they be pleased to state at what minimum rate per thousand gallons they are selling the water?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: (a) The actual expenditure on works incurred on the Ambernath water-supply scheme up to 31st October 1924 is Rs. 28,23,627. The work is expected to be completed by 31st March 1925 when the total expenditure, including interest charges up to that date, will be Rs. 43,33,000.

(b) The estimated fixed recurring expenditure is as follows:—

| | Ra. |
|--|----------|
| Sinking fund to replace cost of plant and machinery in 30 years @ $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. | 28,701 |
| Sinking fund to replace cost of masonry and buildings in 60 years @ 4 per cent. | 6,270 |
| Interest @ $6\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on total cost | 2,81,645 |
| 1 per cent. on plant and machinery for repairs | 17,509 |
| $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on masonry and buildings for repairs | 7,462 |
| Establishment (watch and ward and meter reading only) | 972 |
| Total | 3,42,559 |

(c) The return which Government will receive will depend on the quantity of water sold. The net earnings of the plant (receipts less running expenses) cannot be expected for several years to cover the annual fixed charges referred to in (b). But it is estimated that when a demand of 3 million gallons a day is reached, the net earnings will exceed the fixed charges and that thereafter the accumulation of fixed charges will gradually be reduced, until the demand reaches 6 million gallons when the plant will run at a profit.

(d) The minimum rate is 0-4-0 per 0/00 gallons which is charged in the case of certain pioneer factories only. Re. 1 per 0/00 gallons is being charged in other cases, except for deliveries in bulk where special rates apply.

r. G. B. PRADHAN : In (c) my question was "What is the return to what Government get on all this outlay"? I never wanted a reply to what Government will get 100 years hence. I want to know what Government get to-day. That has not been replied to.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR : The work is just being brought into operation—the whole work of this water-supply. If the honourable member will ask the question in a month or so, we will be able to give him some figures.

RETIREMENT OWING TO RETRENCHMENT IN EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT.

*Mr. H. D. SAHEBA (Ahmedabad District) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the number of persons who had to retire from service in the Educational Department (i) owing to retrenchment, (ii) by the employment of persons from the Secondary Training College?

(b) How many of them have been re-employed in the Educational Department?

(c) How many new men have been taken into service by the Educational Department, since the compulsory retirement of persons mentioned in (a)? Were the claims of the latter taken into consideration when these appointments were made?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : (a) and (b) No person had to "retire" in the ordinary sense of that term, on account of either retrenchment or the employment of persons from the Secondary Training College.

The services of no permanent teachers were dispensed with. 21 probationary teachers and about 90 acting teachers had to be relieved.

As far as possible, the former were employed in acting vacancies, and 8 are still so employed.

The employment of persons from the Secondary Training College did not really affect the situation, as these all held posts as probationary assistant teachers. They were, however, retained in preference to those who had not been deputed to the college. Every year 25 to 30 teachers, who have been acting for the men sent to the Secondary Training College, have had to be relieved when these men returned.

(c) With reference to the first part, one new candidate, a Maratha, was made probationer, and 11 others who were acting were made probationers. The answer to the second part is in the affirmative.

WATER FOR MALAV TANK.

Mr. H. D. SAHEBA (Ahmedabad District) : Are Government aware of the inconvenience and hardship caused to the inhabitants of the town of Dholka in the Ahmedabad district, by the practice of the Irrigation Department in first diverting water to Khan and other irrigation tanks and not to the Malav tank, a tank declared to be an ancient monument?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR : The supply in the Malav tank and others in its neighbourhood depends entirely on the rainfall. When, however, water is available in the feeder or Malav tank is served first and this fact is fully borne out by an observation made in the month of November 1924 when the Malav had 6 ft. depth of water the Khan tank had only 2½ feet.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

NON-BRAHMIN TEACHERS.

*Mr. G. B. PRADHAN on behalf of Mr. SHANKARRAO JAYARAMRAO ZUNZARRAO (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts): Will Government be pleased to state what steps they have taken to increase the number of non-Brahmin teachers?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: Attention is invited to Press Note No. 2461-F., dated the 24th September 1923, regarding admissions to Vernacular Training Colleges. Last year, two-thirds of the places in primary training institutions were given to intermediate and backward Hindus. Preference has been given to non-Brahmin untrained candidates whenever it has been necessary to appoint untrained teachers in primary schools.

As regards secondary schools, less than one-third of the teachers deputed to the Secondary Training College in June were Brahmins, and teachers who have been trained at the Secondary Training College and obtained the B. T. degree alone are eligible for permanent appointments. As far as possible acting appointments are given to non-Brahmin teachers.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD: Is the term "non-Brahmin" applicable to Mahomedans, as used in this answer?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: Yes.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD: If so, does it apply also in the case of untrained Mahomedan teachers in the employ of Government?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: Yes.

SUPPLY OF MEDICINES TO LOCAL BOARDS.

Mr. R. G. SOMAN (Satara District): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether the medicines supplied by them to local board dispensaries and to Government hospitals are procured from the Bombay Medical Stores? If not, who supplies them?

(b) Is it a fact that local board dispensaries are charged higher rates than Government hospitals for such medicines?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: (a) The attention of the honourable member for the Satara District is invited to the reply † given to question put by Khan Saheb I. A. Saherwala (Northern Division) in July 1923.

(b) They are charged 10 per cent. more than their cost price for packing and departmental charges plus Customs and Excise duty.

Dr. M. B. VELKAR: Why are local board dispensaries charged more than Government dispensaries or hospitals when the medicines are supplied by Government themselves? Do Government make any profit?

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

† Vide Vol. X, page 108,

(b) Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: Government have no intention of making any profit. If the honourable member will give me notice, I find that out.

STATEMENT OF TEMPLES, MOSQUES, BURNING AND BURIAL GROUNDS FALLING WITHIN SUKKUR BARRAGE SCHEME.

* Mr. A. N. SURVE (Bombay City, North): (a) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement indicating the temples, mosques, burning and burial grounds and similar other places and objects held sacred on account of religious and other sentiments, which fall within the Sukkur Barrage Scheme, together with their location, the parties interested in them and the objections, if any, raised by them and the manner in which Government intend to meet those objections?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: (a) A statement † giving the required information is laid on the Council table.

PRODUCTION OF AGRICULTURAL FOODSTUFFS IN RATNAGIRI DISTRICT.

Mr. V. A. SURVE (Ratnagiri District): Will Government be pleased to state whether the produce of agricultural foodstuffs in the Ratnagiri District has increased during the last 12 years, and, if so, what is the extent of increase?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: Yes.

The area under cereals and pulses has risen from 562,000 acres in 1912-13 to 675,000 acres in 1923-24. The outturn, which depends upon the nature of the season, was estimated at 197,000 tons in 1912-13, 112,000 tons in 1918-19, 268,000 in 1919-20, 252,000 in 1921-22 and 207,000 in 1923-24. The area under sugarcane and the outturn rose from 967 acres and 1,300 tons in 1912-13 to 2,500 acres and 4,500 tons in 1923-24.

VILLAGE AYURVEDIC DISPENSARIES.

* Dr. M. B. VELKAR (Bombay City, South): (a) Will Government be pleased to furnish the names of the villages, with their talukas and districts, at which various district local boards and municipalities in the presidency have opened Ayurvedic dispensaries since October 1921, with the dates of opening in each case?

(b) Will they also be pleased to furnish the names of those villages at which such dispensaries are intended to be opened this year (1924-25)?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: (a) and (b) A statement † showing the information asked for by the honourable member for Bombay City (South) so far as the Central Division is concerned is put on the Council table. In no other part of the presidency have Ayurvedic dispensaries been opened since October 1921 or are proposed to be opened by district local boards or municipalities.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

† Kept in Secretary's office.

‡ Vide Appendix 55.

Dr. M. B. VELKAR : Will the honourable member tell us how many dispensaries are given grant by the Government ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : As far as I know, no dispensary has as yet been given a grant, but one is proposed to be given this year, if the Council sanctions it. The district local board, Satara, will get it.

Dr. M. B. VELKAR : Does the Honourable Minister intend to lay down any policy as regard the giving of encouragement to indigenous medicine through the agency of municipalities and local boards ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : If the district local boards apply.

MOTION FOR LEAVE TO MOVE FOR ADJOURNMENT OF BUSINESS.

Mr. LALJI NARANJI (Indian Merchants' Chamber) : Sir, under Standing Order VII, I wish to apply for leave to move for the adjournment of the business of this Council for the purpose of discussing a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, to call attention to the financial proposals of the Finance Member of the Government of India as they affect this presidency and to urge upon the Government the necessity of urgently communicating to the Government of India, by a proper representation of the honourable members of this House, the just claims of Bombay to further consideration, having regard to the financial position of this presidency.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Under the Rules and Standing Orders, the previous consent of the President is required before any honourable member can ask for leave of the House to move a motion for adjournment, to draw attention to a definite matter of urgent public importance. The honourable member Mr. Lalji Naranji has obtained my consent, and I therefore allow him to apply to the House for permission.

Mr. LALJI NARANJI : I ask for leave.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Does any one object ?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : Sir, I concur entirely on behalf of the official benches in the desirability of discussing this most important matter as of great urgency in this House.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I take it nobody objects. The honourable member has the leave of the House, and the motion will be taken up, as provided in the rules, at 4 o'clock. The House will adjourn for tea at 3-30 p.m.

(Discussion on Demands for Grants resumed)

Demand for a grant of Rs. 1,47,75,000, for 59, Bombay Development Scheme.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : Mr. President, when we adjourned on Saturday night, I was giving the House some figures as to the land disposed of by the Development Department in the suburban areas developed for residential purposes. I had then informed the House that we had developed 12·64 lakhs of square yards, that we had disposed of 5·39 lakhs of square yards and that we had a balance of 7·25 lakhs of square yards, the result being that we had disposed of 40 per cent. of the land developed for residential purposes in the suburbs. Perhaps, some honourable members would like to know the percentages for the different schemes. In Chapel Road, Bandra, we have disposed of 84 per cent., in the Danda estate 44 per cent., in Khar Model Suburb sector A, 7 per cent. ; sector B, 59 per cent. ; in Kiroi North, 11 per cent. ; Chembur Garden Suburb, 39 per cent ; making an average of 40 per cent.

[Mr. Cowasji Jehangir]

If honourable members will turn to page 139 of the Blue Book, they will see what reductions we have made in establishments, and if they will refer to the notes placed on the table of the House for the information of honourable members, they will find the percentages of reductions. It will be noticed that there are substantial reductions in the Suburban Division and in the Housing and Materials Division, while there has been an increase in the establishment in the Back Bay Reclamation Division. The increase is entirely due to our having now to employ the full dredging staff, as dredging will go on for 16 hours a day.

Mr. President, my honourable friend the representative for Bombay (South) complained that Government had thrown cold water over the one constructive proposal that he had made in this Council. Honourable members will remember that during the last session of the Council at Poona, my honourable friend moved a resolution for the appointment of a committee to investigate the administration of the whole department. I then informed the honourable House that a similar resolution had been tabled by the honourable member Mr. Lalji Naranji but unfortunately it was crowded out ; but Government had referred the resolution of Mr. Lalji Naranji to the Advisory Committee for report. Some honourable members on the opposite side suggested that, as that committee did not consist of members of the Legislative Council to the extent that this House desired, Government should add a few more honourable members of this House to the committee, and the names of five members were suggested to me who should be added on to this committee and I was informed that that was the unanimous wish of the opposite benches. Government did comply with that request, and my honourable friend the member for Bombay (South) was invited to join the committee, but I regret that he declined the invitation, and we have lost his valuable services. I am sure that Government is not responsible for his doing no constructive work ; but I have nothing to complain about ; it is for the honourable member to decide. That committee has thoroughly investigated the working of the department, and has submitted an ad interim report, which has been laid on the table of the House, as promised by Government. In short, the committee have come to the conclusion that with regard to the Back Bay reclamation, the work on the reclamation should continue. The report states :

"The Committee are aware that the financial results will depend not only on the price at which the land can be sold, but also on the rate of disposal. Whilst some members of the Committee are emphatically in favour of advising that the work should be completed in any case, others consider that further information is necessary before a definite recommendation can be made. The Committee propose therefore to appoint a sub-committee to examine the financial prospects of the scheme in detail. In the meantime, pending submission of their final report, the Committee recommend that the work should be proceeded with."

There are some dissenting minutes. One of them is by Mr. Jehangir B. Petit. In his minute of dissent, he states as follows :

"All the data available with regard to the reclamation scheme itself are and have always been at the disposal of the committee, and I for one am unable to make a recommendation other than that the scheme should be pushed on with the utmost possible speed and completed at the earliest possible moment."

The other dissenting minute comes from my honourable friend Mr. Joseph Baptista, and since he happens to be present in this House, I will not detain the House by reading out any parts of his dissenting minute. He will most probably have an opportunity of giving expression to his views. He will inform the House that he is just as definite in his opinion that the Back Bay reclamation scheme should continue. I think it will be advisable at this stage, Mr. President, if I were to read out the names of the gentlemen who have signed this recommendation that the work should continue. Dr. H. C. Sukhia, Messrs. Manu Subedar, F. G. Scowen, E. C. Reid, R. H. A. Delves, Jehangir Bomanji Petit (subject to a minute of dissent), I. G. D'Monte, D. D. Rodrigues, Phirozshaw Jamsetji Vakil, Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtoola, S. K. Bole, A. N. Surve, Joseph Baptista (subject to a minute of dissent) and Janmejy Chhabildas.

Now, Sir, the next point that the committee have reported on is the question of the East Colaba Reclamation. On that they have come to a unanimous conclusion :

"The committee believe that no great inconvenience would result if the construction of the sea-wall were carried out at a later date, whilst there would be a considerable saving in interest charges if this were done. They, therefore, recommend that work on the East Colaba Reclamation scheme should be closed down for the present, and that the advisability or otherwise of going on with it should be reconsidered when the filling of the Back Bay Reclamation is nearing completion."

Mr. President, Government have accepted this recommendation, and in pursuance of that acceptance they have reduced the demand by ten lakhs of rupees. I explained when I made the demand that Government desire to reduce the demand by 10 lakhs, and it was due to this recommendation which Government have accepted.

Then, coming to Industrial Housing, the committee have stated that they approve of the policy adopted by Government. They say :

"The Committee have inspected the chawls at Worli, where the largest number are situated, and they are of opinion that the present programme consisting of 211 chawls cannot be curtailed or postponed but should be completed. For the reasons indicated in this report, the committee agree with Government that any further instalment of chawl building should await the result of experience, after the 211 chawls in hand have been finished and are ready for occupation."

There are only three dissenting minutes to the majority report—only three. One comes from my honourable friend Mr. Bole who desires to add to the committee's report that the rent should be reduced. Another is from my honourable friend Mr. Surve who desires that the original policy of building 50,000 one-room tenements should be continued, and my honourable friend Mr. Baptista is also of the same view. I will take the liberty of reading three lines from my honourable friend Mr. Baptista's dissenting minute, for it contains the crux of the question. He states, "the programme should be completed, the rent should be lowered, the loss should be recovered by an adequate increase in the cotton cess". Now, it is for this House to consider whether the cotton cess should be increased or not. That cannot be done by Government by executive action. It is for this House to decide. As I say, the crux of the question is that if the original scheme is to be carried out this honourable House will have to legislate. Mr. Baptista is of opinion that there should be an increase of the cotton cess. I should like to draw my honourable friends' attention to this point for a few minutes longer. It will be interesting to know why Government came to the conclusion that for the present their activities should be confined to the 16,880 rooms, some of which are under construction. Some of them have been completed, and when all of them are constructed, that will be the number. Government had come to the decision in 1919 that 50,000 one-room tenements should be constructed. They came to that conclusion on certain figures. They felt then that Bombay was short of one-room tenements by 50,000. In 1919 their figures as to the population of Bombay were correct; their figures as to the number of one-room tenements in the city were correct. But the Census of 1921 showed that the percentage of the total population occupying one-room tenements was only 66 per cent., while Government's calculation in 1919 was that that percentage was 80. Under these circumstances, naturally the calculation of Government that there was a shortage of 50,000 one-room tenements was not quite accurate, and considering that the Census report is one to which every weight should be attached, Government cannot but come to the conclusion that Bombay does not require the 50,000 additional one-room tenements that they thought were urgently required in 1919. So, if we go on increasing these one-room tenements it is quite possible that the supply may overtake the demand. I express no opinion, but I say it is possible. Then, again, I would ask the honourable House to consider whether Government are right or wrong in pursuing this safe and cautious policy. Let us consider what responsibility Government incur and take upon their shoulders when they undertake to manage an estate with 50,000 one-room tenements. Private landlords in Bombay who own one-room tenements have long realised that to administer these estates is no easy matter. We have to deal with a class from whom it is not possible to collect rents regularly..... (An Honourable Member: Since when did you realise this?) After experience. That is why we have adopted this cautious policy.

Now, Sir, I want to point out that there are vacancies in the development chawls and there are arrears of rent. When one comes to consider the difficulty of administering an estate of this kind, and when one comes to consider the figures which I have just read out to the House, one cannot but come to the conclusion that this House will be right in pursuing a cautious policy. Government have agreed with the committee that for the present they should be satisfied with finishing the construction of the 16,000 and odd one-room tenements.

Now, Sir, that ends the report. I trust the House will consider the report satisfactory. It confirms the policy Government have adopted up to now with regard to the Development Department. Mr. President, I need only repeat that we have done our best to retrench and the figures in this budget are the best proof. We have reduced our expenditure, during the current year, by nearly 60 lakhs of rupees, and we hold out a hope that when the actuals come in that 60 lakhs will be increased by another 30 lakhs. Our budget figures for the next year show that our expenditure as compared with the current year's figures will be less by 1,18 lakhs. In these circumstances, Mr. President, I leave this budget in the hands of this House with the full confidence that they will find reasons for satisfaction in this year's administration of the Development Department.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts): Sir, I move:

"That item No. 5, a provision of Rs. 75,000 for Kandivli quarry acquisition (Detail of Budget estimate for original works and acquisition in the Development Department) be omitted."

My reason for moving for the omission of this item is this: On turning to page 143 of the Blue Book I find that the amount that was originally sanctioned for the acquisition of Kandivli quarry was Rs. 1,50,000. Owing to a mistake in the estimate, a revised estimate was made and by the Government Resolution issued on 12th July 1923, this amount was raised to Rs. 4,20,000. Up to the present we have already spent Rs. 5,81,611. We have even exceeded the revised estimate. By this additional amount of Rs. 75,000 we are increasing the estimate to Rs. 6,56,611. I do not know how Government will pay this amount for which there has been no Government Resolution till now. Unless some explanation is offered by the Honourable the General Member as regards these figures which have exceeded the original estimate by 400 per cent. this House will not sanction this amount.

Question proposed.

Sir LAWLESS HEPPER: Sir, I shall try to explain the position to the House. In 1920 Government notified for acquisition a large area near Kandivli for the purpose of quarrying. Of that area about 150,000 square yards was in the possession of a society known as the Bombay Gorakshak Mandal. The Collector estimated the value of that area at about Rs. 65,000. The trustees of the society, however, held very different views as to the value of their property and they instituted a suit in court for the recovery of a very large sum. The then Honourable Member in charge, Sir Chimanlal Setalvad, interviewed the trustees and in view of the fact that the association was more or less of a religious character he decided that it would be desirable to try and come to some amicable settlement. Instructions were issued accordingly and after Negotiations extending over 4½ years, it has now been decided to settle on ~~ed~~ ^{to be continued} briefly as follows :

Government will provide the society with an alternative area in Trombay of 125 acres, and will make a cash payment to the trustees to cover the cost of the transfer of their activities from Kandivli to Trombay. Government will also bear the cost of making a short length of road to connect the new area to be handed over to the society with the Sion-Trombay road. The cash payment has already been made and the acquisition of 125 acres in Trombay is proceeding. The Collector estimates the cost of acquiring the land at Rs. 95,000 of which about Rs. 20,000 will probably be paid this year. It is accordingly recommended that a provision should be made for Rs. 75,000 to cover the balance in the following year.

As regards the estimate it will of course be further revised as soon as the actual cost of acquisition is known and the formal sanction of the Government will be obtained.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN : I have nothing to add to what I have already said.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : Mr. President, the Director has already placed all the facts before the House. I think the honourable member Mr. Lalji Naranji is in a good position to explain the exact state of affairs, as he is one of the trustees who negotiated this question with Government. The complaint of the society all along has been that Government did not treat them with the liberality they deserved. I personally came to take up this matter at a later stage.

Mr. LALJI NARANJI : Let me correct the honourable member. The claim of the society was just and equitable.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : I have only stated that the society has all along been under the impression that Government are not treating them liberally. I am of opinion that the decision was equitable and just and that the charitable institution got what it ought to get. Several well known citizens of Bombay who are trustees are well aware of the facts.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN : I beg to withdraw the motion.

Question put and leave granted.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN : I take it that the Honourable the General Member sticks to the assurance he has given that he will not spend any money on East Kolaba reclamation.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : Yes.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN : I do not move that item. (Omit item no. 28.) (Consultants, fees—Rs. 10,065, Budget page 145.)

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts) : Mr. President : I move

Reduce by Rs. 2,11,000—Item No. 29—Housing (Worli) works (Budget pages 146-147);

[Mr. G. I. Patel
Lawless Man]

The ~~previous~~ ready chawls which have been built and wherein rooms are lying vacant. Government are not getting the rent in some places and in other places the rent is falling in arrears, even at the reduced rate. The Honourable the General Member says that Government are not getting the economic rent. I am surprised that when the Government have got tenements unoccupied and they know that they cannot get tenants for the chawls they have built by spending large amounts, they should still go in for the construction of new chawls. My submission is that unless the whole of the tenements that they have built so far are occupied they should not take in hand the construction of any new tenements.

Question proposed.

Sir LAWLESS HEPPEL: Sir I should like to explain that this amount is not required for any new construction. It is required for works which are included in the sanctioned estimates for the construction of 121 chawls at Worli. The 121 chawls which have already been sanctioned are approaching completion, and will be completed by next July or August. There is a certain amount of work which has not been commenced and which has been provided for in this item. It includes mainly the construction of roads in the area, levelling up of the open spaces and building compound walls. This work is incidental to the construction of 121 chawls practically completed and no new construction is involved.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI (Karachi City): Sir, I find on page 146 under item no. 29: "Constructing chawls of 80 tenements each with sanitary fittings....."

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR: That is the name of the project.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI: I would like to point out that on page 129 of the Blue Book whereas the estimated rent on these chawls for the current year was 13.16 lakhs, the revised estimate is put down as 7.20 lakhs of rupees. So, we see that there is a drop of about 6 lakhs, which shows how inaccurate the estimate of the department is. I do not believe that even these 7 lakhs and odd will be realised. Taking 7.20 lakhs as correct, it works out to 6,000 rooms at 10 per room per month. Thus out of the 14,000 or 15,000 rooms that have been built, only 6,000 rooms have been occupied, which is less than 50 per cent. And it will take quite a long time at this rate for the remaining chawls to be occupied. In such a state of things, Government are not at all justified in continuing this work to any extent whatsoever. That is the proposition which I would like to bring to your consideration, whatever the opinion of the committee that was appointed may be. In the interests of Government and of the presidency, we should stop this work altogether.

Mr. G. I. PATEL (Ahmedabad Millowners' Association): Sir, I may state here that during the course of last week I had been on this spot to see the condition and to examine how far the figures given in this item are correct. I found most of the chawls vacant then. ~~Out of~~ ^{One of} the roads passes through the chawls towards sea-side where also regular buildings have been erected. I understand 76 per cent. of these tenements are lying vacant and this shows the difference in the rents which are expected and the rents which are actually received. That also shows that the project is a complete failure and any more expenditure on the same lines will prove ruinous to the whole Worli affair.

In regard to other tenements the percentage of vacancies is 37 and 26, while in Worli it is 76 per cent. Out of 6,000 tenements erected at present the vacancies are 43 per cent. and the average on the Worli spot is 76 per cent. Hence this big amount of Rs. 2,11,000 is going to be wasted on the realization of 24 per cent. only. 76 per cent. being actually vacant, while 24 per cent. is remaining occupied, this sum of Rs. 2,11,000 is going to be spent for further losses than for realizing any gains.

Mr. J. BAPTISTA (Bombay City, North) : Sir, I do not suppose that I am justified in taking the time of the House in commenting on the general policy of this housing or development scheme at this stage.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : You can do that on a motion for a general reduction.

Mr. J. BAPTISTA : Sir, at the present moment I should like to point out that so far as this particular work is concerned if the drainage scheme is not carried out the health of the residents of this place would be naturally impaired. These housing schemes are for the working classes ; and therefore it is a great mistake at this stage to refuse sanction for the development of this place. For this reason, I shall support this grant.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts) : Sir, what I have been noticing is this, that this year as a matter of fact 34 lakhs are provided for the housing schemes of Worli and Sewri. On a reference to appendix "C" I find that the repairs and maintenance charges for the Bombay Development Scheme, are Rs. 12,64,000. The actual realization is Rs. 7,20,000. That is the maintenance and repairs including of course the maintenance of roads, exceeds the income, at any rate the income of the rents realized, by 5 or 6 lakhs. If that is the case, would it be advisable to spend about 34 or 35 lakhs more on this Sewri and Worli schemes ? So, what I say is any money that is required for the drainage scheme which is considered necessary by my honourable friend Mr. Baptista, may be spent. But this money is put down for new construction. So, I say no money should be spent upon new construction until we are in a position to know that the existing tenements are fully occupied.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangir : Sir, I quite agree with my honourable friend who has just sat down. As the honourable member the Director of Development explained, this Rs. 2,11,000 is to be spent for the small roads between chawls. The honourable member for Thana asks why is it " called new works not commenced and acquisitions." Let me tell him that when a chawl has been begun, any other addition, Lawless is not "work in progress." For instance, if you have to provision drainage it is "new works." When it is completing the chawl itself then it is 'work in progress.' If my honourable friend wants all these details put into the budget I do not know of what size the budget will be. We have got after all to compress a bit and when we say 'new works' it means all sorts of work. That has been the ordinary system of budgetting for years and years and whenever explanation is needed we give it.

Question put and lost.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts) :
 Mr. President, I move :

That item No. 31 Housing (Worli and Sewri)—Rs 3,00,000 be omitted.

I find that according to the information supplied by the Honourable the General Member, in the construction of chawls, roads are included, drainage is included, and everything is included ; and when 12 lakhs are provided for maintenance and repairs, and over and above that, 3 lakhs are provided as unforeseen items, I ask, Sir, why such a huge sum as Rs. 3,00,000, when provision is made for every bit of thing, should be kept in the hands of the Development Directorate without any information being given to this House.

Question proposed.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR : I will agree, Sir, to delete this item of Rs. 3,00,000—Housing (Worli and Sewri).

Question put and carried.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts) :
 Mr. President, I move :

That item No. 37—Khar Works—be reduced by Rs 1,00,000.

Now, Mr. President, I find that a sum of Rs. 1 lakh is put down for Suburban Scheme No. 7, Khar Model Suburb, and there is an asterisk to this sum that this sum is required for land acquisition. Now, if this is required for new land acquisition, certainly I object to it and I say it should be omitted. But if this sum is necessary for giving extra compensation to owners, if the courts have allowed it or may allow it, in which case we of course are bound to pay, I would not object to the retention of the amount. But unless there is an explanation coming forward whether it is to pay the awards of compensation which the court has made or may make to owners, or whether it is for new acquisition of land, I must object. If it is for excess amount of compensation payable, the item may be retained.

Question proposed.

Sir LAWLESS HEPPEL : Mr. President, the position is explained on page 2 of the note of the Development Budget circulated to honourable members. The amount has been entered at the request of the Collector to meet any possible enhancement in cases of references to the court. That is the only reason why it is put in. There is no question of new acquisition, but legal proceedings are still going on and the Collector advises that it would be advisable that this provision should allow any possible enhancements of awards.

[Sir Lawless Hepper]

[2 MAR. 1929]

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN : If that is so, I withdraw my motion.

Question put and leave granted.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts) : Mr. President, the next motion which I wish to move is :

Reduce item No. 40—Ambernath Works—by Rs. 10,000.

This sum forms part of Rs. 3,10,000 set apart for Ambernath, and if I understand the Honourable the General Member rightly, as there is no demand for land at Ambernath, he does not intend to spend anything out of the 3 lakhs and odd unless it is absolutely necessary to do so as a result of a sudden demand for land there. If that is so, I do not know why this Rs. 10,000 is necessary and why Rs. 3,10,000 has been put down for Ambernath. I move that this sum also be omitted if the 3 lakhs are not going to be spent.

Question proposed.

Sir LAWLESS HEPPER : Mr. President, this is a similar case to the last. It refers to land acquisition, not to new acquisition, but to cases in which land has been acquired but in which references have been made to the court. The land has been taken over by us and some of it has already been sold, but proceedings are going on and the Collector advises that Rs. 10,000 should be provided to meet any possible claims.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD : Will it not be covered by the previous grant ?

Sir LAWLESS HEPPER : This is land in another scheme.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts) : Mr. President, I submit the Honourable the General Member, if I remember rightly, said that 3 lakhs are not going to be spent by him for Ambernath unless there is a demand for land. As there was some company formed which was negotiating for land at Ambernath the sum may be required. Then, if those negotiations fall through, the 3 lakhs would not be required and would not be spent.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : May I explain, Sir ? For Ambernath we have got a provision of Rs. 3,10,000. Rs. 10,000 is under the head of land acquisition. Rs. 10,000 is provided in order to meet any extra demand that the court may award. The 3 lakhs is there as a provision for "works" if there is any demand for land. We are not going to use it unless there is demand for land. That assurance was given last year. Rs. 10,000 is for land acquisition and it is for the extra awards, extra amounts that might be added to the awards by the courts. We are not going to spend any more money on Ambernath. Three lakhs are provided for works in progress. We will use that money only if there is a demand for land. If there is no demand for land, we will not touch that 3 lakhs of rupees. Rs. 10,000 is for the extra awards. We won't use it for acquisition of new land.

R. 1925]
 Mr. G. B. PRADHAN :
 Rs. 10,00,000 (Lawless H)

N : I wish to withdraw this motion for deletion of Question No. 11 and leave granted.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN : Now, my next motion is :

"Omit item No. 41—Andheri—Rs. 1,00,000 (Budget pages 148-149)."

As regards Andheri they have put down 1 lakh of rupees for land acquisition again. At any rate, this one lakh is for fresh acquisition. So here at any rate, they are acquiring new land worth 1 lakh of rupees and this sum is being spent. So, if this sum is required for new land, then this lakh should be omitted.

Sir LAWLESS HEPPEL : Mr. President, the House are probably aware that Government have withdrawn the notification about 2,500 acres of land in Salsette through which this railway passes. But they have not denotified certain small areas in the neighbourhood of the proposed halts on the Salsette-Trombay Tramway, the idea being that it is advisable that Government should retain in their hands the power to control the development at places which may become railway stations in the future. The land is in the hands of the owners at present and is being cultivated by them, and, so far as we know, there is no demand that we should acquire it. But it is just possible that one or two of these owners may require that we should take their land over and pay for it, and this provision of 1 lakh has therefore been put in to meet such cases. There is no intention of acquiring any land unless we find ourselves forced to take it.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI (Karachi City) : Mr. President, I find the amounts provided in the budget for these items are formidable. The honourable member has just now said that 3 lakhs has been provided in case there is a demand for land. We must remember that we are losing on these transactions, that we have to pay more money by way of interest on these lands, than we are actually realising, if the money is with us. Therefore, it is advisable to reduce the amounts, if they are not absolutely necessary. Looking to past experience, I think we ought not to allow such large amounts to be provided in the budget and every attempt should be made to reduce them.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts) : Mr. President, the explanation that is given on page 2 of the note that has been supplied to us is that the money is required for fresh acquisitions near halts on Salsette-Trombay Railway. We do not know when this railway is going to be ready. Out of an amount of Rs. 68 lakhs and odd provided for this railway, nearly Rs. 52 lakhs have been spent, and I think the railway will not materialise for the next ten years. Nobody knows whether it is going to be a profitable concern. I do not know why a lakh of rupees should be spent for preparing halts for a railway which has yet to come into existence. So, this sum need not be provided in this year's budget. If Government have denotified the lands, why do they want to acquire other lands? I do not know why they should want a lakh of rupees now for some land which they may be compelled to pay for in the future, for future development. My submission, therefore, is that this sum should be omitted.

[2 MAR.] 1925

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR: Sir, there is some misapprehension as to this, and I will explain. The whole of Sahar was at one time notified. The railway runs through Sahar. The whole of Sahar has been denotified, with the exception of small plots of land which have been reserved for stations. Now, my honourable friend is under some misapprehension as to when this railway will be completed. The rails are down, everything is complete, and we hope to have a line running from Andheri to Kurla at the latest next cold weather. I had hoped that it would be running in the monsoon, but at the latest by next cold weather we shall have a line running there. Under these circumstances, it is necessary to have stations. We are not going to build any stations, but the little plots of land that we have not denotified will be the halting places. Even then, we contend that we will not spend this money unless the owners of the land compel us to acquire it. They are at present cultivated, and I should think we shall be able to get on without having any platforms or anything of that sort, and we will allow them to continue cultivation, until they force us to acquire. They may force us to acquire the land at any time, and therefore this amount of Rs. 1 lakh is necessary, and that is the reason why we have put it in the budget.

Question put and lost.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts): Sir, I beg to move:

"Omit provision for Personal Assistant to Land Manager, Rs. 10,800."

On page 156 of the Blue Book I find that a new post is created, which is that of the personal assistant to the Land Manager. Now, this gentleman was not in existence in 1923-24 and 1924-25. But provision is being made in the budget of 1925-26 to the extent of Rs. 10,800 for this post. I do not know whether, as the work decreases, the hands are to be increased. The land manager's work is going to be decreased, because the Honourable the General Member has informed the House that he is going to stop at any rate all the suburban activities for this year, and I do not know why these personal assistants and sub-assistants are required. There are one or two men who go to the Thana Court and spend their time, although there is the Government Pleader to do the work. These gentlemen go and occupy the court chairs. I do not know why they are required to waste their time in the court. This is apparently a new post, and I object to the creation of such a post when the work is decreasing.

Sir LAWLESS HEPPEL: Sir, I think I can give a satisfactory explanation of this. In the current year, there is provision for three assistant land managers. Next year we have provided in this budget for two. The designation of one assistant land manager has been altered to personal assistant, and the second remains as the assistant land manager, but as he is wholly employed in town planning schemes, his salary is recoverable, and we do not really pay it. Since this budget was framed, however, the third assistant has been transferred to the Revenue Department, so that the Rs. 11,400 shown against the post will not be required by the Development Department, and the only salary that we shall have to pay in addition to the salary of the Land Manager himself will be the item of Rs. 10,800 on account of his personal assistant.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts) : Sir, do I understand the Director of Development to say that instead of Rs. 10,800 being omitted, he is prepared to omit Rs. 11,400 ? Because Rs. 11,400 is the amount which is recoverable, that is, it is to be nominally under the Development Department budget, but it is going to be recovered from some other department, but the Rs. 10,800 under the development budget is not recoverable. I do not know whether this assistant land manager will be deleted from the Development Department altogether, or whether he will be under the Development Department, but his salary will be recoverable from the Revenue Department. If the latter is the case, then I would ask that the amount be omitted.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : Sir, my honourable friend started off by saying that this was a new appointment. Now, let my honourable friend just glance at the figure of Rs. 29,500 for 1924-25 for three assistant land managers. That has been reduced to Rs. 11,400 that is to say, two assistant land managers have been dispensed with. We budgeted last year for three assistant land managers, and we provided Rs. 29,500. This year we budget for only one, and the provision for that one is Rs. 11,400. What Government have done is that they have reduced those three to two ; one we have sent to the Revenue Department, and therefore, now that he is gone to the Revenue Department, that Rs. 11,400 will not be required. So, we have retrenched Rs. 29,500, and in the place of those three, we have got one man whom we call the personal assistant to the land manager. Therefore, instead of three we are budgeting for one and call him the personal assistant. Therefore, the whole of the Rs. 29,500 will be deleted from this year's budget, and instead of that we will have the one figure of Rs. 10,800.

Question put and lost.

After recess.

(Motion for adjournment of business)

Mr. LALJI NARANJI (Indian Merchants' Chamber) : Sir, I move :
 "That the House do now adjourn to call attention to the financial proposals of the Finance Member of the Government of India as they affect this presidency and to urge upon the Government the necessity of urgently communicating to the Government of India by a proper representation of the honourable members of this House the just claims of Bombay to further consideration having regard to the financial position of this presidency."

The reason for this motion is well-known to all the honourable members of this House who have read the speech of the Honourable the Finance Member of the Government of India which was published on Saturday evening. The object of this motion is to call attention to the financial proposals of the Finance Member of the Government of India as they affect this presidency. Now, Sir, the budget that was presented on Saturday evening at Delhi is not only a manipulated budget but also a diplomatic budget, and certain aspects of it require careful consideration which it is not within the province of this Council to bestow. I am therefore only going to examine that portion which refers to this presidency. The main question arises on the assumption that the statement of the Honourable the Finance Member that there is a surplus of 3,24 lakhs is correct. I will not go into the question whether that surplus is real and genuine or whether it is a manipulated one, but I will take it as an accepted fact that there is a surplus of 3,24 lakhs, because it is not the business of this House to examine whether that surplus is real and genuine or manipulated. Sir, it is the duty of this House to see how this Presidency is treated by the Government of India and why it is so treated. When we come to consider the treatment by the Government of India of this Presidency we have to go to the Report of the Financial Relations Committee, whose recommendations are known as the Meston award. I have got a copy of that report in my hand, and I will refer to the terms of reference given to them. There were only four terms given to them, and out of those four, the fourth was introduced at the representation of the Government of Bombay, and that is : "whether the Government of Bombay should retain any share of the revenue derived from income tax". There were three other terms of reference. The first was "contributions to be paid by the various provinces to the central Government for the financial year 1921-22". The second was : "modification to be made in the provincial contributions thereafter with a view to equitable distribution, until there ceases to be an all-India deficit". And the third was "the future financing of the Provincial Loans Account". We are only concerned here with the second and fourth. The first related to the year 1921-22, which is now past. The second is "modifications to be made in the provincial contributions thereafter with a view to equitable distribution, until there ceases to be an all-India deficit". You will see, Sir, that the Meston settlement was instituted on account of the deficit that the central Government had to meet in view of the allocation of certain heads of revenue to the provinces. In this connection we have to see what the Bombay Presidency was getting before, and what the Bombay Presidency lost by, the settlement. Of course I will not go in detail into the question how much the Bombay Presidency has contributed to the assets that the Government of India have claimed as their sources of revenue. According to the Government of India's own admission, the Bombay Presidency has contributed very largely to those assets on the capitalised value of which we are now asked to pay interest. The honourable members of this House are aware that we are asked to pay 43 lakhs of rupees interest on the capitalised value of the irrigation canals. That used to be met out of the central funds before the Reforms. There are several other assets that the central Government have been able to build for themselves out of the revenues of the provinces when certain heads of revenue were divided between central and provincial governments. The question of how much exactly we have contributed is one which cannot be determined to-day. But I think members of this House will agree that this presidency has contributed a very large amount in building the assets of the Central Government, including one of their biggest assets, the railways.

[Mr. Lalji Naranji]

There are two main sources of wealth in this country : one is agriculture and the other is trade and industry. So far as agriculture is concerned, it is common to all the provinces. As regards trade, the Meston committee has made mention of only two centres, Bombay and Calcutta. What trade pays is in the form of customs revenue and in the shape of income tax. Now, Sir, the statement that has been presented by the Honourable the Finance Member of the Government of India, against which this motion is directed, clearly shows that the main sources of revenue for the Government of India are customs receipts, railway profits and income tax. Customs receipts come to about 45 crores ; railway profits amount to 5 crores—that is the net contribution they get from the railways—and income tax comes to 17 or 18 crores. Now, these are the main items out of the 133 crores. To all these revenues this presidency contributes a good deal.

Sir, this presidency was treated with the grossest injustice when the Meston settlement was made. Both our Government and this House have protested against this settlement so far without success, because of the weakness, I believe, of our Government. The weakness of Government is that they did not protest enough ; they went on taxing this presidency without considering whether it was fair or not. This presidency has been called wise, but I do not think that they have been wise, because from the results we find we are the greatest sufferers. This presidency behaved well, and taxed themselves fully, on the expectation that if they did so the Meston award would be revised, and they would ultimately get good results. The result has falsified such expectations. The chief source of our income before the reforms was income-tax and that has now been taken away from us on the promise of early inquiry and revision. All our representations against the Meston award have resulted in nothing. You will see, Sir, from the budget statement, page 35, where the income of the presidency before the Reforms Scheme is given, that land revenue and income tax were divided between the central and the provincial governments on a half and half basis. It is admitted by the framers of the Meston settlement that income tax is an expanding source of revenue. Land revenue is not an expanding source for reasons well known to members of this House. Now, in the proposal that this presidency should be deprived of the half share in the income tax, we were deprived of roughly 4 crores, assuming that 8 crores was the total revenue under income tax from this presidency. Sir, we cannot forget that this presidency is flourishing mainly due to its activities in trade and industry. When the central Government was sharing the revenue by income tax with the provinces, it was certainly not to their interest to look to the industry of the whole of India, and they always looked upon Bombay as one of their big sources of industrial development in this country.

Now, Sir, if we look to the treatment that we get by the present proposals of the Finance Member of the Government of India, which is to remit the contribution of the other provinces out of the surplus of 3·24 crores, and if we look into the history of the settlement made by the

[Mr. Lalji Naranji]

Meston Committee, even in the words of Council Committee, their recommendations are arbitrary without any rhyme or reason. The committee themselves state on page 5 of the report :

" This limit, however, obvious as it is, makes it inevitable that the initial contributions should be in some measure arbitrary, dictated by the existing financial position of each province and not by any equitable standard such as its capacity to pay."

Another point I should like to bring to the notice of the House is that the Meston Committee assumed that the Bombay Presidency is a rich province in the whole of India. Whether Bombay is a rich province or not, it has been very careful about the discharge of its obligations by incurring further heavy debts and thereby incurring recurring liability of heavy charges of interest and sinking funds. All the capital commitments that the Government have incurred are not solely for the benefit of this presidency. As you will see, Sir, the income by the development of trade will not benefit this presidency, but it will go to swell the coffers of the Central Government in the form of income tax. That fact has been corroborated by the Finance Member in his speech while presenting the budget. He says in paragraph 60 :

For 1925-26 I put the total yield at 17.35 crores, which is 38 lakhs higher than the revised estimates for the current year.

I maintain that the revenue from income tax was a sort of guarantee against famine, because land revenue is not a steady source as it is dependent upon nature. If we had had half of land revenue and half of income tax revenue we could have depended upon both. Now, we are getting 5 crores from land revenue. If we get half of this, that is, 2½ crores, and if we get 4 crores, half of the income tax revenue, we will get 6½ crores. Now, it is plain that there is now a distinct loss of 1½ crores. Over and above that, we have to pay a contribution of 56 lakhs settled on an arbitrary and temporary basis. They say that according to the famine rules there is no other course but to remit this amount in the way that the Finance Member has proposed. But the question is whether the Meston settlement itself is proper and whether we are not entitled to a share in the surplus of 3.24 crores. I will only refer to Bengal. We see the way in which Bengal has been treated. Personally I do not like that there should be any jealousy between sister provinces; but the Central Government for political reasons may have chosen to create jealousy between the two presidencies. It may be that Bengal is fortunate in that they have the ears of the head of the Central Government. They may have got the favouritism of the Central Government as we see from the way in which Bengal has been treated. Bengal gets a remittance of its contribution for three years and to the surprise of the Honourable the Finance Member of Bengal. Last week when we read the speech of the Honourable the Finance Member of Bengal when he introduced the budget he mentioned that he would have to provide 63 lakhs in the coming year, because it was a surplus budget, for contribution to the Central Government. I congratulate the Bengal Government on their surplus budget because they have not incurred any debts by further borrowings in order to tax themselves to that extent as has been done by this presidency. By taxing ourselves and by heavy borrowing we have shown a surplus and our solvency. In this connexion I wish I to point out one observation of the Meston Committee that sometimes the surpluses are masked deficits. On page 7 of their report the committee say :

"While actual deficits appear, as has been said, in some provinces other complain that their apparent surplus, if rightly understood, masks a real deficit."

Our presidency is under that category. Why should we have big surpluses ? These surpluses are not real surpluses, as it has been observed by the Meston Committee. The Central Government have been misled by these surpluses of the Bombay presidency. They have remitted Rs. 63,00,000 for three years in the case of Bengal even to the surprise of the Finance Member of that Government. From the speech of the Finance Member of the Government of India it appears that it is a sort of reward that the Bengal Government is not to pay any contribution for the 4th year also. What is the policy of the Government of India in doing so ? I say with great emphasis that it is the result of the deliberate policy of the Government of India to kill the industry of Bombay, and to see that Bengal flourishes at the expense of the other provinces. Of all the provinces Bombay is the only province that depends upon its prosperity of industry and trade. I put it to the honourable members of this House who represent agriculture

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I should like to invite the attention of honourable members to the fact that under the Rules and Standing Orders, it has been laid down with regard to adjournment motions that "No speech during the debate shall exceed fifteen minute in duration." Having regard to the special circumstances of this motion, I propose to allow some more time to the mover of the motion, provided there is no objection by the House. He has already had his 15 minutes. I take it there is no objection.

Mr. LALJI NARANJI : Honourable members of this House who represent agricultural interests will thus see that if they are deprived of their legitimate sources of revenue they have no other course but to tax every source open to this presidency. By the proposal of the Finance Member of the Government of India we are compelled either to wind up the progress of all the nation-building departments or to reduce expenditure indiscriminately making the administration impossible. Unless it is desired by the Central Government to cause confusion in the administration of this presidency, it is unfair to put this presidency under the necessity of suffering under the yoke of heavy taxation and also to exact from us the Meston award.

Coming to the point that the Finance Member of the Government of India wants to kill the industry of this presidency, I shall refer to his speech on page 13 wherein he says in paragraph 40 :—

During the last year or so prices of goods imported into India have gone up considerably in terms of sterling, while remaining fairly steady in terms of rupee.

He argues that by exchange this country has not suffered and to support his theory he has quoted the prices of the produce of this country. I will refer to cotton. If you compare all the raw products you will see that the price of jute has increased by 100 per cent., £22-5-0 to £42-10-0, while cotton from 11·10 to 12·30. You will see the increase is merely a trifle in cotton, because though it is shown as 12·30, in his own speech further on in paragraph 60 he refers to cotton industry and admits that the cotton mill industry this year has continued somewhat stagnant.

Now, Sir, you will notice that neither the agricultural people of this Presidency are benefited by the Exchange policy in obtaining prices of raw materials nor indigenous industries by unfair competition of imported goods enjoying 12½ per cent. bounty in the form of favourable exchange. The cotton industry is the chief industry of this Presidency. And when he goes on to distribute the big surplus of 3·24 crores which he has brought about quite justly or unjustly at the cost of this Presidency, he proposes by the unjust and inequitable award known as the Meston award all the surplus to be distributed to those who have neither balanced nor tried to balance their budgets by new taxation. Now when he considers the probable deserving claimants he has not even the fairness to consider the claims of the cotton mill industry, which has given a very large income by way of the customs revenue on plants of machinery and parts, by way of income tax in past years, and by way of super-tax in war time and after war time. He has not even the justness and fairness of admitting the claims of the cotton industry by proposing to abolish excise duty, because it would have meant in another form a saving to this Presidency and a long delayed justice to industries which was due to them after a long time in surplus budget. This unjust tax has been admitted by Government to be such and a pledge was given by the Government of Lord Hardinge that that tax would be removed in the year 1916, and in spite of that no mention of this claim has been made by the Honourable the Finance Member as the first claimant and the prior claimant. The deliberate attempt of the Central Government is to kill the industry of the Government of Bombay and to make Bengal flourish at the cost of this Presidency.

Now what is the condition of the Bengal industry? Bengal has jute, coal and tea: they are making profits of over 200 to 300 per cent. now, and Bengal is lightly taxed as has been shown by the leader of the Swaraj party in his interview to "The Times of India"; he has given these figures and shown that Bengal is the most lightly taxed province and Bombay is the heaviest taxed province and also heavily burdened with capital debt not for the development of Bombay, but as I said before for the development of the general interests of the Central Government. Because, Sir, what is the Development Department for, what is the Sukkur Barrage for? if this House considers carefully it will find that they are meant to give land to industry and its labourers at the cost of the general taxpayer of this Presidency. Who is going to be benefited by customs and income tax. The Central Government is wholly benefited. The only gain to this Presidency will be the employment of our labour. They will sweat and earn their wages, but there will be no other gain to this presidency. Taking big risks with the Central Government, sanctioning and encouraging schemes in spite of the opposition of this side of the House, by giving big loans to the Government of Bombay, what does this Presidency get? Both Sukkur Barrage and the development scheme, as the Honourable the General Member of our Council always represents—and let us hope that his representations to this House will prove correct—may prove to the advantage of this Presidency in the form of more land revenue, from the former or in the form of profits by sale of land developed, but that will be after several years. But at present we have to pay large sums of interest. In fairness the Central Government ought to share at least half of all the preliminary and interest charges, because the only advantage that Bombay will get is some help to the agricultural progress of this Presidency. It may help the poor people when they work and toil on the land, but the real profit, the cream, will go to the Central Government.

This Meston Settlement is nothing but an instrument in the hands of the Central Government to play one provincial Government against another, and the Finance Member of the Government of India has not lost the opportunity of creating jealousy, but what we wish is that the Bengal Presidency will join with us in representing that this Meston Settlement is not only arbitrary but that it should be revised at the earliest moment.

Now, Sir, about the claims that are already mentioned. I will only speak about this budget which has been shown as a very prosperous budget. This has been a prosperous budget because of the manipulation of the Finance Member as regards exchange, and if honourable members of this House will consider who has got to pay for the rise in exchange, they will realise that it is the producer and no one else, though the Finance Member has taken great pains to show that neither the producer, the taxpayer, nor the general consumer pays any part of it—a theory he has tried to propound without any success. I will not take the time of this House on this subject. I shall only appeal to this House that on this point they will not be satisfied by expressing indignation at this distribution of this surplus but that they will take practical steps by making a strong representation to the Central Government by uniting all the parties in the strongest manner possible and even by refusing our Government any further money and taxation and also by making further big cuts which we are now doing to-day and we will have to do in the next five days, and making the administration of this Presidency impossible and by not accepting the dictum that our Government are taking for the taxation.

Another thing that I will say is that all the parties should unite in this representation to the Government of India and I hope that our Government will also join with us in making this representation and in removing this dark spot on the administration and good name of British justice. It is not justice, it is depriving you in the open day of the fruits of your labour: it is nothing short of looting this Presidency by the unjust settlement of the Meston award and doleing this surplus which we have been mainly instrumental in enabling the Central Government to obtain to those who are hardly justified in getting it. I will not take the time of this House any more. I hope that all the parties will support this motion in as strong terms as possible and condemn the action of the central Government.

Question proposed.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I should like to point out, in view of the several honourable members who got up on their legs with the intention of addressing the House, that, though 15 minutes are allowed, they should try to be very brief, because if each member addresses the House for 15 minutes, it will not be possible to go to vote without applying the closure.

Mr. A. N. SURVE (Bombay City, North) : Sir, whether to-day is a day of indignation or a day of humiliation, it is our plain duty to raise a united voice against the arbitrary and unjust action of the Government of India. Sir, we are not only badly treated, but there is an attempt to add insult to injury. In the budget speech the Finance Member refers to refunds of customs duty on Government stores. He himself admits that to give refunds on Government stores is not a very satisfactory arrangement; but all the same he perpetuates that and says that Bombay will get 10 lakhs out of the 18 lakhs of the duty on the stores and therefore it is not necessary to revise the settlement or to give any concession in the provincial contributions as far as Bombay is concerned. Sir, our case has suffered and it is now time to enquire as to why we have been left in the cold. My own view is that we have made the case go partly by default and partly by mismanagement. When I say by default, I refer to this thing. Our Government had two or three years ago sent notifications to members of this House that on behalf of this Government our representatives in the Legislative Assembly were going to move a resolution recommending that some arrangement should be made in respect of provincial contributions. Beyond receiving that notification or notice, I up to this date do not know what has taken place in the matter. When other provinces have represented, have moved resolutions, why has our Presidency sat quiet? So, I say that was a case of default. Then, as to mismanagement. In this connection in the year 1922 in the month of April there was a Finance Members' Conference held at Simla, and there also our Government made some blunders. First of all, they wanted that the contributions should be revised but pending that revision they should get one-third of the income tax revenue of the year 1920. Later on they changed their tactics and came to demand divided heads. They said "Give us half of income tax and take from us half of land revenue" Now, that demand is clearly a demand which could not have been sustained in view of the spirit of the reforms. Then, if the Government of India has declined to entertain that proposal, I think the mistake is ours and not of the Government of India.

Then, another point is that we had made a mistake of policy. There is no secret about it that ours is the province which wanted the largest loans from the Government of India. I may give you the figures. Bombay wanted in five years' time about 39 crores for its Sukkur Barrage and development schemes, whereas Madras wanted 15 crores, Bengal 7½ crores, United Provinces 10 and the Punjab 15. Therefore, the mistake we were committing was this, that we wanted the largest loan amount from the Government of India, and in order to show our solvency we were actually trying to show that we were more solvent than we really were and with that view we had introduced fresh taxation, we had made retrenchments and various other things. Now, as regards retrenchment, in one year we had retrenched by 124 lakhs. Thereby we had lost the efficiency of our own provincial administration. And with what view did we do it? Only to show to the Government of India that we are quite clever people, that we could wipe away our budget deficits and bring in surpluses. Now, Sir, if you refer to the other provinces, you will find—take, for instance, the revenue of Bengal and that of our own province—there is not much difference. The revenue of Bengal in 1922 was 9 crores and in that year our revenue was 14 crores. Their expenditure in the same year was 9 crores and ours was 13 crores. But what did we do? Bengal did not, though it had the greatest staying power, retrench to the same extent that we did. You can judge of the staying power of Bengal by the new taxation that was raised. The sources of taxation were just the same. But in Bengal from amusements, they could recover 25 lakhs in one year, whereas we in Bombay could not recover more than 2 lakhs. Take stamps, Bengal could obtain 28 lakhs, whereas we could hardly obtain 12 lakhs. Therefore, my point is that we were heavily taxed and in spite of that we underwent great self-denial only with the view that we should obtain credit from the Government of India. And we wanted that credit for what? To finance the Sukkur Barrage and the Bombay Development Department. As to the Development Department, we know in what plight it is at present; so I need not labour the point any further. We do not know whether our projects will be financially sound. I simply wish that they would be, but to-day at least the indication is that there are great doubts about their being very successful. And in order to finance such projects we were showing to the Government of India that we were solvent and for that we were taxing our own people to an extent which was not quite justifiable. In every way we were showing what we really were not. Therefore, my point is that, as far as the treatment which we are receiving to-day is concerned, it is the outcome of our own mistakes. But our duty to-day is, whether there be differences of opinion between the official and non-official benches or not in regard to other matters, it is our plain duty to raise our voice as one united body. As a Sanskrit poet says, where the Pandavas and the Kauravas had to fight one common enemy or another enemy they were 106, and when they had to fight amongst themselves, the Pandavas were only 5 and the Kauravas 101. Similarly to-day, when we are going to raise our voice in protest against the iniquitous arrangement of the Government of India, it is our plain duty to express our indignation at the treatment which we have received, especially when we have a greater claim to a fairer treatment because we always maintained our reputation for solvency and we kept ourselves within our means, with one voice. These were the qualities for which the Government of India should have given us a reward, but the reward which we have received is quite a different one. Therefore, I at least would request the Government to reconsider their own financial policy. I may just remind them that in 1922 I had mentioned this fact in my budget speech, and I will read out one sentence from that speech :

"I am reluctant to sanction this taxation. I do think that if this Council would also oppose this taxation, they would be helping the Government by strengthening their case before the Government of India. We have some grievance against the Central Government with regard to Income Tax, and if our Government represent to the Central Government that the Council is not inclined to sanction new taxation, perhaps it may re-examine its decision."

The view which I took at that time has come true, and I hope that in future at least the Government will not try to raise money by fresh taxation. With these words I heartily support the motion for adjournment which is before this House.

MR. J. BAPTISTA (Bombay City, North) : Sir, I must candidly confess that no news in this new year has given me greater pleasure than this decision of the Government of India to exclude Bombay from the benefit of this remission of our contribution. I base my pleasure upon the proverb that "It is an ill wind that blows nobody good". But I think, Sir, if we are wise, we shall derive great good from this ill wind that has blown this way. It gives us an opportunity, in the first place, to unite together ; all persons and all parties can combine together on this occasion to present a united front to the Government of India, not for the purpose of obtaining doles from the dispensers of charity, but for the purpose of protesting against the perversity of the judges in deciding upon the merits of our case. I think it is unnecessary for me to argue in order to expose the essential injustice of this decision of Government. We feel it instinctively and we feel it indignantly. I have not the slightest doubt that when Sir Basil Blackett hears of the indignation of Bombay,—Bombay which is noted for its sobriety—he will try to plead non possumus. He will say : "We cannot help it ; we have no option, we have no choice ; the Devolution Rules stand in our way as an insurmountable mountain." We can retaliate and say that the Devolution Rules themselves are a blunder of Himalayan magnitude and they should be altered as soon as possible. It is no use flinging those rules at us. The best thing for Government to do is to go into ashes and sackcloth and repent over these Devolution Rules. I think they might emulate the example of Mahatma Gandhi and pray and fast and look aghast at the way in which the rules are working to-day.

Let me examine these Devolution Rules. Upon an examination, I find that the remission of the contribution from Bengal is obligatory under the rules for the first three years ending 1924-25. After that period, all the provinces are placed upon the same footing of equality. There is no distinction between one province and another, and whatever be the rules, they apply to all the provinces equally, including Bengal. Therefore, I say that there is no power vested in the Government of India—I say deliberately—no power even to remit the contributions by Bengal, as the rules now stand. Consequently, the Government of India have acted ultra vires in extending the period of moratorium for another spell of three years in the case of Bengal. I do not grudge Bengal what it gets. Let it get all it wants, but I want to point out that it is ultra vires under the rules. This is not the only breach of the rules. There is another breach of the rules on the present occasion. The Government of India are bound to take the contribution of Bengal into consideration in arriving at the surplus of Rs. 2½ crores. There is no choice, they are bound to do so and the rules make it quite explicit. The rules say that the contribution of Bengal shall be deemed to be the remission of the previous year. The word "deemed" is of great significance and importance, and indicates that, though there have been no actual contributions from Bengal, still the remissions themselves shall be considered as actual contributions for the purpose of arriving at the surplus. But the Government of India have not done so, and that constitutes, Sir, a second breach of the rules. If the Government of India can go on like that breaking their own rules for the purpose of benefiting Bengal or any other province, they ought to have taken into consideration our claims for the purpose of giving us a remission of our contribution. I must confess that, as the rules stand, technically, we are not entitled to anything, and I am quite certain that any one who has studied these rules will realise that we shall not be entitled to anything even if the surplus be Rs. 5½ crores. As a matter of fact, I have calculated that we shall not get more than Rs. 20 lakhs when the surplus exceeds 7½ crores. Therefore, you will see, Sir, there is no prospect before us. So far as the rule is concerned, the prospect of remission is far away. It is not within reach—not even within sight. So far as I can see, we shall not get anything under the Devolution Rules till the very crack of doom. Under the circumstances it is very kind of Sir Basil Blackett to tell us that his motto is "We will work in hope." I can only say that our motto under the circumstances must be "We shall live in hope to die in despair."

I should now like to call attention to another point. Was it wise on the part of the Government of India to apply these Devolution Rules at the present moment? Of course there is a surplus, but once the Devolution Rules are applied and there is a reduction, there is no method of revoking it, and if by some chance the surplus disappears—it can disappear if the exchange falls to 1s. 4d.—there will be no method of revoking it. Once reduced, for ever reduced, and therefore they will have no reserve in emergency. It would have been wiser on their part not to have applied the Devolution Rules; it would have been better if they had regulated the contributions according to the requirements of the people. They could easily do that, because the Devolution Rules do not oblige the Government of India to apply them. There is liberty to them to apply the surplus for any purpose that they please, and the best method would have been to distribute the surplus independent of the Devolution Rules upon some basis of sweet reasonableness.

We find that the unkindest cut is that on merits we do not deserve, because we are told that they are going to give to those that deserve. We are not told why we do not deserve, nor is it explained to us how we should deserve and then desire. But there it is—we have been told that we do not deserve. According to all ordinary canons of merits, there is no province more deserving than the province of Bombay. Taxation here is Rs. 8 per head, while in Madras it is Rs. 4 per head, and, as I pointed out the other day, 80 per cent. of this taxation comes chiefly from land and excise. Therefore, the heaviest burden falls on the poorest population, and, so far as land revenue is concerned, whatever you call it, rent or tax, after all it is essentially a tax on the food of the people, the poorest people of this presidency. Therefore, I think we may claim that, if there is any case, we have the strongest case.

I am afraid all this scurvy treatment that has been given to us must be attributed to the essentially wrong policy of Government. They have pursued that wrong policy in season and out of season by presenting money bills to this House for the purpose of getting more money. That indicated that the margin of the taxable capacity of the province has not been exhausted. That wrong policy, with overflowing budgets, brings this result. As I said the other day, that policy has been entirely wrong. I do not know to what extent Government have been driven to this policy. They may have been driven to this policy because they came in conflict with Lord Meston. Lord Meston stated that the Bombay Government was extravagant and that there should be retrenchment. The Bombay Government naturally resented the allegation and explored every avenue to disprove it. But whatever possibility there was of disproving the charge, that was lost for ever when in one day they retrenched by 62 lakhs. That showed that retrenchment was possible. On the other hand we ourselves on this side say more retrenchment is possible. The money bills of Government and our lamentations about extravagance—all seem suicidal on our part. Therefore, Sir, I think the time has come when the Government should change their policy about money bills and not create the false impression that the taxable capacity of the people is not exhausted; they should not starve the nation-building departments and thereby create surpluses, making people believe that we are overflowing with money. Taking this stand, let Government learn a lesson to-day from what we are telling them. Unfortunately, the Government of Bombay is in the hands of the Civil Services. The Civil Service no doubt contains men of calibre, though some of them are over-estimated. But the fact is that the Civil Service is no school for statesmanship. It produces good administrators, but good administrators are not always good statesmen. They make a great mistake in pursuing the policy of divide and rule. Therefore, I appeal to them to take a lesson and unite, and unite in presenting a solid front because that is the only way of persuading Sir Basil Blackett, and that great Israelite, who presides over the destinies of India, that we have reached the point of stony-brokenness. If they do it they will flourish; they will get more money from the Government of India and the Devolution Rules will be abrogated. I hope, Sir, that our Government will take wisdom by the forelock and accept our policy—a policy based on intimate knowledge of the weal and woe of our people.

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: Sir, I have great pleasure in associating myself with the resolution that has been moved by the honourable member for the Bombay mercantile community. The Government of India have done a great injustice to this presidency. No doubt our greatest grievance is about the Meston settlement. That settlement has deprived us of an expanding source of revenue, and by the Devolution Rules, as the honourable member for Bombay has pointed out, we are debarred from sharing in any windfalls or any surplus in the finances of the Government of India. Sir, the Meston settlement, whatever the Government of India may say about it, stands condemned out of their own mouth. Under the Meston settlement, the Government of Bengal had to pay a contribution of 63 lakhs, and from the first year the Government of India had to remit that contribution for three years, and now, in this fourth year of the Reformed Councils, the Government of India have proposed to remit the contribution from Bengal for a further period of three years. A precedent is thus created and Bengal will be justified in saying that the Government of India have always considered them too poor to bear this contribution and this contribution should be remitted for ever. In this way, Sir, the Meston settlement has been condemned by the Government of India themselves. And now the Government of India have proposed a remission of part of the contribution from Madras also. I think the Government of India is committing a great injustice in favouring these spoilt children. I am going to present this Council with a few figures to show how the Government of Bengal have not been doing their duty towards their subjects. The population of Bengal is 46 millions; that is nearly $2\frac{1}{2}$ times the population of Bombay, which is a little over 19 millions. The Government of Bombay spent in 1924-25 a sum of Rs. 1,11,50,000 on primary education alone; while the Government of Bengal with a population $2\frac{1}{2}$ times the population of Bombay spent only 26 lakhs. Taking our expenditure as the basis, they could be expected to spend at least 2 crores: they have not only not spent 2 crores, but they have spent only 26 lakhs. That means that for every one thousand of the population Bombay spends Rs. 576 on primary education, while this favoured child of the Government of India, namely, Bengal, spends only Rs. 56 on primary education for every one thousand of the population. In the field of secondary education too Bombay has spent Rs. 148 per 1,000 of the population, while Bengal has spent only Rs. 55. Strange to say, that in Bengal the expenditure on primary education is just the same as the expenditure on secondary education, Rs. 26,46,000 and Rs. 26,22,000. So, the Government of Bengal is caring more for secondary education than for primary education. They do not recognise the necessity of giving education to the masses. The bhadralogs there care for themselves and lose sight of the toiling millions. For collegiate education, strange to say, they spend a still higher sum, Rs. 31,48,000. Well, this Government is not apathetic towards the spread of collegiate education: we have spent Rs. 81 for every 1,000 of the population for collegiate education, while Bengal spends only Rs. 66. In all branches of education, primary; secondary and collegiate the Bombay presidency has been spending more than Bengal. Bombay is especially very wide awake to spend money on primary education. I will read to you, Sir, a few figures which will throw more light on the doings of the Government of Bengal. The proportion of expenditure on primary education to the total expenditure on education is 61 per cent. in Bombay.....

[Mr. B. V. Jadhav]

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD : Sir, I rise to a point of order. Are we discussing education in Bengal and Bombay ?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I do not want to interrupt the Honourable the Minister in his speech. But I have appealed to the House that in order to deal with the subject satisfactorily they ought to deal with it directly and not go into such statistical aspects of the question as a comparison with the administration of Bengal, etc. I do not wish to say it is out of order, but having regard to the time limit of two hours of which one hour has been already taken up, a large number of other members who wish to join in this debate will be deprived of their opportunity, if every speaker takes up the full 15 minutes. I appeal to members that as the subject is one about which there does not appear to be any difference of opinion, each honourable member will exercise a little self-denial in the matter of the length of his speech.

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : Sir, I bow to your decision, and shall not take more than a couple of minutes more. I want to bring to the notice of this House that the Government of Bengal has not been doing its duty by the people of their province, and therefore it was the last Government which ought to have been helped by the Government of India. The Government of India has already made their decision and I cannot find sufficient words to condemn their choice. The policy of the Government of Bengal has been to sit quiet and almost do nothing, but always cry that their finances are not in a flourishing condition. As a matter of fact, Bengal with its permanent settlement ought to be looked upon as very wealthy and very strong, and ought to have given primary education to all the people and also come forward to give larger contributions to the Central Government. I therefore say, Sir, that we all join in the condemnation of the Government of India, and especially of the Meston settlement which ought to be revised as early as possible.

Khan Saheb A. M. MANSURI (Ahmedabad and Surat Cities) : Sir, I rise to join my honourable colleagues in protesting against the treatment meted out to this province by the Central Government. Sir, as it is, the Bombay presidency is heavily taxed both as regards income-tax and excise duty. The condition of the textile industry of the Bombay presidency is very bad and those engaged in textile industry find it very difficult to make both ends meet. Still the Central Government continues to tax the textile industry. The Central Government is levying a tax of one rupee per loom and yet the Bombay presidency is not getting its due share in the remittance by the Central Government. The Bombay presidency is treated not only in a step-motherly fashion but as an illegitimate child. The Central Government levies excise duty on sugar, matches and so on. In this connection I want to bring to the notice of Government for their immediate consideration one important fact. Match boxes are subject to a duty of 12 annas per gross. Match boxes are sold at a certain rate in Bombay. This duty is imposed on matches imported into Bombay. But as regards those smuggled into Indian States like Bhavnagar, they escape this duty. According to the terms of the treaty.....

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: What bearing has that on the present issue?

Khan Saheb A. M. MANSURI: I want to show that instead of the tax being realised by Bombay, which is spending 30 crores of rupees on development, it goes into the coffers of Indian States. If this state of things continues Bombay will suffer very severely. Several departments are being starved and the Government have taxed every source of revenue available. If the Central Government continues in its present method, the Council will be well advised in protesting against their action.

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE: Mr. President, I observe that this House is being swept on a stream of fiery indignation and eloquence; and I feel I should intervene at this moment to conduct that stream into a channel of careful and definite argument. We are all at one in the view that the interests of Bombay have been disregarded in the budget pronouncement of the Honourable the Finance Member of the Government of India; but we have very astute opponents whose interests clash with those of Bombay, and they will not fail to take advantage of any overstatement or inaccuracy in our language.

Further, we have in the Government of India an authority superior to provincial jealousies and rivalries: and it would be wise to recognise that, if they have disregarded our just claims, it is not through prejudice or hostility that they have erred, but through our own failure and remissness in not establishing the justice of our cause with sufficient clarity of proof and vigour of statement.

The issue is one of great gravity and the House will bear with me, I am sure, if I attempt to trace the history of our misfortune and explain the process by which the Government of India have been led into a position antagonistic to our interests.

Sir, the Meston Settlement is the economic counterpart of the Government of India Act with which some of our friends on the other side of the House are not fully satisfied. It is unfortunate that hitherto the Meston Settlement has not received the same share of attention as the political features of the reforms; or we should assuredly by joint effort before this have secured a modification of a system which is protected by no statute and which can be demonstrated to have been founded on erroneous premises of fact.

Sir, we must turn back to the declaration of August 1917. Immediately thereafter, inquiries began as to the best method of financial provision for the autonomous provincial governments then foreshadowed. There was a serious difference of opinion between high authorities whether a federal government should have separate resources or should share the same resources. Up to that date the Government of India and the provincial governments had shared the same resources. Eventually the fiat went forth for separate resources, in defiance, I may observe, of the experience of every federal government in the world, and in spite of the earnest protest of the Bombay Government that they must retain a share of the income tax. Then in the winter of 1919 the Meston Committee was appointed to decide the distribution of resources. They toured throughout India and consulted many witnesses and wrote this report. It is a public report (priced 4 annas a copy) which can be had at the Central Press. I am sorry to say that it has not received the close and careful study which it deserves, for it is the origin of our present trouble.

The Meston Committee allotted to the provinces $18\frac{1}{2}$ crores more than their revenues before the reforms. They re-arranged the heads of revenue, granting to the provinces, for example, the whole share of land revenue, stamps, excise and so forth and reserving to the Imperial Government income tax, customs, salt and various other heads. The result was an anomalous re-distribution of total funds, entirely at variance from the revenues which the provinces possessed before. Four provinces—Madras, United Provinces, the Punjab and Burma—secured 15 crores out of this $18\frac{1}{2}$ and the other five secured $3\frac{1}{2}$ crores only. Bombay and Bengal each secured one crore approximately; while Madras got $5\frac{3}{4}$ crores and the United Provinces nearly 4. These increases of revenue were to accrue not at once but gradually; and this withholding of a share of this increase results in the levy of what is now known as the provincial contributions of which some provinces make so much complaint. Let us take for example Madras and the United Provinces. Of the eventual promised windfall of $5\frac{3}{4}$ crores Madras got $2\frac{1}{4}$ crores immediately; out of 4 crores, the United Provinces got $1\frac{1}{2}$ crores at once, while Bombay got 44 lakhs out of 93 lakhs eventually promised. I call these increases of revenue windfalls and you may think, Sir, that a responsible committee dealing with crores of public revenue would proceed on some definite process of reasoning and calculation and would not merely allot windfalls. But that is the very language that the committee themselves used. I quote from paragraph 15 of their report:

“The increases in revenues come to the provinces as a windfall, or as a bye-product of a constitutional change. It is not due, as financial settlements have been in the past, to consideration of the financial needs of individual provinces.”

“Clearly it has come about from political and not primarily from financial motives. It originates in the desire to secure a greater measure of devolution in the provinces and in the endeavour to draw for this purpose a defensible line of financial partition between local Governments and the Government of India.”

That Sir, was the method by which these portions of the increased revenue were divided. Of this $18\frac{1}{2}$ crores, $8\frac{1}{2}$ crores were distributed at once and the lucky four provinces received $6\frac{3}{4}$ crores immediately and the remainder received $1\frac{3}{4}$ crores and the Bombay share was 37 lakhs. And the Meston Committee devised an arithmetical table by which future contributions should be allotted, and by this table the lucky four again came first for future windfalls. There has now occurred such a windfall in the surplus of $2\frac{1}{2}$ crores which the Government of India are distributing and the recipients are Madras 1,26, United Provinces 56, Punjab 61, and Burma 7. It is the Meston Award which is responsible for this new allotment which has aroused the notice and indignation of the public. Members of this House have indeed expressed their disapproval of the Award before, but never before I believe has it been so fully appreciated. In that Meston Award there are various statements detrimental to our interest which deserve careful analysis. In paragraph 7 of this report the committee reject the claim of Bombay to a share of the income tax and for what reason? They "do not apprehend that the richer provinces such as Bombay, will be seriously handicapped in the administration of their own finances."

[Mr. H. S. Lawrence]

and they append

"some figures which indicate that several of the provinces and Bombay in particular may look for reasonable elasticity in their revenues apart from income tax—an elasticity which will in most cases be encouraged by judicious outlay."

Now, Sir, in these finance figures the committee, in spite of our protest made two serious errors. They took a year of great distress, 1912-13 and compared it with a year of good revenue, 1920-21, and concluded that on the average throughout these years our land revenue had increased by 4 per cent. per annum, stamps 15 per cent. per annum and excise 12½ per cent. per annum.

Then they write in paragraph 20 :

"Bombay has attained a scale of expenditure far above the Indian average and the space of expansion of its revenue is distinctly higher than in any other province. We believe that it could without inconvenience forego the greater part of its new resources at the outset and help the less fortunate provinces from its own abundant resources."

Sir, it is the erroneous statement and calculations of the Meston Committee which have led to the inequitable treatment of this presidency; and I submit that we should concentrate our efforts on securing a revision of this Award. The Government of Bombay have asked for it year after year. In March last year our representative in the Legislative Assembly made a powerful statement of our case and asked that it be submitted for examination by the Taxation Enquiry Committee then about to be appointed.

When that committee was appointed the terms of reference included the following words :—

"To consider whether the whole scheme of taxation, Central, Provincial and Local, is equitable and in accordance with economic principles and in what respects it is defective."

Further it is explained that the committee will indicate the theoretically correct distribution of taxes between Imperial, Provincial and Local, and then follow the words :—

"It will thus be no part of the duty of the committee to consider the equity of the Meston Award."

Now, Sir, we need not split hairs upon these words. I submit that we may put on one side the equity or inequity of the Meston Award, provided we get a theoretically correct distribution of taxes. And what we want is the clear recognition that no distribution of taxes can be theoretically correct which denies to an industrial province a share in the proceeds of its industry ; in fact which denies to Bombay a share in its income tax.

This income tax at the time of the Meston Award was $2\frac{1}{2}$ crores of rupees, that is in 1919. In subsequent years we have paid 4 crores on the average. Then there has been a decrease to between 2 and 3 crores in 1923-25. These figures are exclusive of super tax and company tax. I submit that we are entitled to a substantial share of this revenue and that our claim is greatly strengthened by the demonstration of the grievous errors in the calculations on which the Meston Committee founded its recommendations.

Sir, the Government of India were informed by Mr. Bell, our representative in the Legislative Assembly, in the debate last year that our revenue under the selected heads in question in the five years has been 11 crores less than were anticipated by the Meston Committee. I fully admit that their anticipations in regard to other provinces have also been falsified. But in no province did the error in anticipating revenue come near this figure, 11 crores. But this much is clear and without dispute. Bombay raised a revenue of approximately Rs. 7 per head, while Bengal raised a revenue of Rs. 2 and Madras of Rs. $3\frac{1}{2}$. I will not on this occasion enter into the question whether the Bombay Government return to the taxpayers full value for the money levied, nor is it necessary to discuss the desire of Government to adjust the burdens of the state more equitably in accordance with the capacity to bear those burdens. Some sections of the House do not give us their full approval on these points and I will not elaborate them.

Sir, this is the first occasion on a matter dealing with politics or economics that this House finds itself entirely in accord with one mind. When one considers, Sir, that the representatives of the people sitting in this House are drawn from every class of society and comprise in their ranks the heads of important Mahomedan tribes in the north of Sindh, one thousand miles away, the sturdy Maratha villagers of the Deccan, the traders of Gujarat and the landed aristocracy of Karnatak, it requires no special gift of insight to recognise that a cause which combines in harmony and accord with the commercial magnates of the Bombay city is a cause of momentous importance. When, Sir, this great popular movement receives the countenance and support of the Government of Bombay the occasion can only be regarded as critical. It is indeed a crisis which demands careful judgment and high statesmanship.

Sir, this House has shown itself to be sharply divided on matters of grave policy. Sections of this House are severe critics of the Government of Bombay and no part of this House surrenders its powers of judgment lightly or gives an easy and careless acquiescence to the views of Government. And in like manner the Government of Bombay do not lightly bend to the popular will or seek the plaudits of the mob by following easy courses. I claim, Sir, that this House plays an essential part in the machinery of the Government of the Empire of India and that in recent critical years it has performed its duty with steadfastness and resolution and that in its actions it faithfully represents the good feeling and good judgment of this presidency. When other parts of India have succumbed to the blandishments of excited politicians, when the countryside has been convulsed with riotous agitations, when anarchy has reared its head and when the ardent youths of the country have been led astray by conspiracies and secret societies the Presidency of Bombay has maintained a calm and dignified restraint.

But what about the Bombay Government? It is a somewhat delicate matter for me to touch. We are accused by stalwart critics in public life of unworthy subservience to the Government of India. We are told that we have sacrificed the interests of this presidency. We are told that our policy has been wrongly conceived and that we have starved the administration and presented a false picture of a prosperous and contented province which has excited the envy of unfriendly critics but elicited no sympathy and no understanding. Sir, the Government of Bombay have had no easy part to play in the last four years, and I admit on their behalf that this interpretation, however harsh we may feel it to be, is open to our critics. We have set before ourselves a high and difficult ideal. We have trusted in the responsive co-operation and understanding statesmanship of the Government of India. We have been led to believe that the Government of India appreciated that policy and that when that Government was freed from the overwhelming embarrassments of its own financial difficulties that appreciation would assume a tangible form. We had, Sir, in March 1923 the assurance of the Finance Member himself. I may quote from his speech for one moment. The Finance Member then said:

"It has been suggested to me by more than one spokesman for the provinces that there is a feeling in the minds of the Provincial Governments and of their Legislatures that it would be unwise for them to show balanced budgets. They are, it is hinted, taking a leaf out of the book of some charitable and religious bodies which make a habit of showing an annual deficit in order to make a striking appeal to their supporters to come to their rescue. The Provincial Governments think, it is said, that they will get more sympathy from the Central Government and get rid of their provincial contributions quicker if they can show a handsome deficit and appeal to the charity of the Central Government. I should like to say for my part that the strongest appeal that the Provincial Governments can make to me in this matter of the Provincial contributions is to show themselves worthy of assistance from the Central Government by strenuous and successful endeavours to make both ends meet for themselves."

Sir, we took the Finance Member at his own words on that occasion more than two years ago and in this belief we have strained every nerve to restrict our expenditure within our income, to preserve balances which would enable us to meet the day of adversity that must sooner or later recur when the rains fail and famine invades the land, when land revenue dwindles away and all the resources of Government are curtailed.

We have embarked on large policies of development for the protection of the agricultural population by irrigational canals. These schemes represent millions of money. We have embarked on other projects of development for the welfare of the city population of Bombay. These schemes also represent expenditure of money by the million sterling. We have maintained our credit by proving our ability to balance our budgets and to maintain reserve balances. The House and the Government have acted together in cordial co-operation, the Government in pruning superfluous expenditure and the House by providing in time of need two years ago additional taxation. There is no province in India that has supported the financial position of the Government of India so amply as this Presidency. When the Government of India applied to the public for loans, there is no province which has subscribed such large sums to those loans as this Presidency. Without subscriptions from the city of Bombay, the Government of India could not have successfully floated these loans.

Now, Sir, when in this Presidency the people and Government alike have made every effort to support and sustain the stability of the Government of India, whether in matters financial, economic or political, have we received any recognition from the statesmen of the Central Government or even an assurance that our claims will receive attention at a later date? The Honourable the Finance Member of the Government of India makes two references only in his budget statement to Bombay. He tells us that the currency proposals which emanate from Bombay would benefit individuals in Bombay and the Bombay cotton mills—not a very sympathetic reference—and further that he wishes to reconsider the refund of some 14 lakhs of customs duty to Bombay. The Government of India had promised to refund us that duty, and the Honourable the Finance Member in his present budget statement talks of reconsidering that offer. His solicitude and his favours are reserved for the province of Bengal. That province is not entitled to any remission under the Meston award. What, then, is the reason for this peculiar solicitude? I will not make an invidious comparison of the conditions, political and financial, between Bengal and Bombay. There is one argument applicable to both. Bengal contributes heavily to the income tax—they contributed a sum of about 6 crores in two years 1921-22 and 1922-23. It is true that sum is only two-thirds of what Bombay has contributed, namely 10 crores, in the same two years. But the principle is the same. Why, then, should not Bombay receive the same treatment as Bengal? The Finance Member has reserved a sum of 74 lakhs as a balance undistributed. It is quite possible for him to hand back 56 lakhs of provincial contributions as a small refund of our crores of income tax. Then, at any rate, he will have given equal treatment for the present to Bombay and Bengal on an intelligible principle and within the small resources still available to him.

Sir, it would not be appropriate for me to discuss the cotton excise duty to which one honourable member has referred. The considerations which determine that case lie outside the scope of the jurisdiction of the provincial Governments. We are concerned with that in so far as it affects the prosperity of this city and the Presidency. The success of our measures for the development of the city of Bombay depends upon the prosperity of the mill industry. Any measure which promotes that industry affects the financial prospects of the schemes of development and, therefore, the financial interests of the province of Bombay.

[Mr. H. S. Lawrence]

Sir, as another honourable member has observed, this budget statement of the Government of India has achieved one beneficent purpose. It calls on us to consolidate our ranks and to take joint action together in the common cause. As a first step I am to announce that Government have decided to postpone the further consideration of the Bill to enhance the Court-fees. (Hear. hear). We trust the significance of this step will not be lost upon the Government of India. We have waited patiently and have given time to the statesmen of the Government of India to choose their opportunity and state that they realise our position and sympathise with our difficulties. But now opportunity after opportunity has come and gone, and not a word of hope or encouragement has reached us from that quarter. It is necessary, therefore, that the people and the Government of Bombay should hold consultation together and decide what measure should be adopted for the protection of the interests of the people committed to their charge. (Applause.)

MOULVI RAFI UDDIN AHMAD (Central Division): Mr. President, we are extremely indebted to our non-official expert adviser, Mr. Lalji Naranji, for bringing this motion in order to give expression to the deep feelings of indignation which obtain in the minds of the people of the Bombay Presidency. Sir, there has been seldom an occasion on which a motion for the adjournment of the House has been so cordially supported by the official benches. Sir, it has been pointed out that the Meston Settlement is a final settlement, though iniquitous. But nothing is ever settled which is settled wrong, and the people of this Presidency are suffering from a wrong and iniquitous settlement. Sir, there is not only an injury, it is also an insult added to injury. The Finance Member of the Government of India has not only proposed an unjust measure; he has also made an impolitic speech and taken an impolitic action. What will this result in? Here, our Honourable Finance Minister has said that this presidency has been most loyal, this presidency has been doing its duty in every respect both in times of adversity as well as of prosperity, and he is greatly surprised at the reward the Government of India has given to this presidency. What will be the result of this? The result of this will be that the people who have been most friendly to the Government will be inclined to think that the action of the obstructionists is more paying, more effectual and more decisive in the long run. That will be, really speaking, the consequence of this. Sir, the Government of India is killing the hen which lays the golden eggs. As a matter of fact, we are the most law-abiding as well as the most paying section of the country and they are trying to kill us. This is another bad effect. Sir, I do not want to say anything with regard to the other aspects of the question, because they have been very ably argued. But I will conclude with the observation that the people do not feel political grievances so much as fiscal wrongs, and this is one of the occasions on which the truth of this is beautifully illustrated. I hope the Government of India will take a lesson from this.

I may be permitted to remark that it is no use dwelling here on this occasion upon the faults of the Government or of the merits of the people's party, but we should take the sound advice of the Honourable the Finance Member, and all join in a conference for the redress of this grievance.

Mr. V. A. GRANTHAM (Bombay Chamber of Commerce): Sir, in regard to this matter, I entirely agree with every word which the Honourable the Finance Member said. You have asked us, Sir, to be brief. I will therefore not take much of the time of the House by delivering what can at best be but a repetition of his remarks. I will content myself therefore by supporting the motion.

Mr. F. CLAYTON (Karachi Chamber of Commerce): Sir, after all that has been said it is not my intention to make a detailed speech on this question but feel that I must not permit the opportunity to pass of expressing, what I feel positive will be the views held in the Sind province part of the Presidency on this question, that is in complete and whole-hearted agreement with the views expressed in this Council to-day, views upon which this House will undoubtedly come to a unanimous decision. And I recommend, Sir, an early opportunity being taken, through the medium of a deputation, to urge upon the Government of India, the reconsideration of our case.

Approaching three years ago in a session of this Council at Poona, I described the Meston Settlement as "wicked", but under the request of the Chair, your predecessor, Sir, I withdrew that expression. I am glad to find that to-day the honourable members of this House are in entire agreement with what I said at that time. I heartily support the motion.

Mr. G. I. PATEL (Ahmedabad Millowners' Association): Sir, I want to bring to the notice of this House one main fact only, viz., that if there was a surplus in the Central Government, the first claim over, or charge on, that surplus was that of the cotton excise duties. The fact is that a resolution was adopted by the Legislative Assembly without division during the last September session to the effect that the cotton excise duty, which had already been promised to be abolished long ago by Lord Hardinge's Government in 1916 and at a later stage by the Fiscal Commission also, should be forthwith abolished, and that it had a first claim on the surplus. After the resolution adopted during the last September session, the expectation of the people engaged in trade and industry in this presidency was that the cotton excise would be repealed, but we have been hopelessly disappointed. Secondly, if there was any surplus, it ought to have been utilised in the interest of the people in general and the agriculturists in particular.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR (Bombay University): Sir, on behalf of the Swaraj party, I rise to support this motion. I have listened very carefully to the impassioned speech of the Honourable the Finance Member pleading for unity on an occasion like this, and I will not strike a discordant note. But his appeal to the Swaraj party for unity does seem somewhat strange. I cannot help observing that necessity does make strange bedfellows. Only three days ago, in a speech delivered in a petulant tone—I will not imitate the language of the Honourable the Finance Member and call it an uncommonly audacious speech, because I recognise that I am an Indian by birth and culture and therefore under an obligation to be courteous to an opponent, and I will not in this connexion imitate the manners of northern climes—only three days ago he described my party as a party of “blind vision”, “narrow creed”, “incapable of distinguishing between right and wrong”. It must be a great humiliation to him to-day—and I will not add to that humiliation by one word—that he has to plead for the unity of such a party. He described the leader of that party as a philosopher. I will accept the description, and I will make a free present of my philosophy to my honourable friend. My philosophy is this, that in politics there are no permanent friends and no permanent enemies. If my honourable friend will borrow from my philosophy, I am sure occasions of this kind will be more numerous and our life here will be pleasant. With these words, I support the motion on behalf of the Swaraj party.

An Honourable MEMBER : I move for a closure.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I do not see why I should accept the closure. At five minutes to 6 closure may be moved, and I will accept it.

Mr. R. G. PRADHAN (Nasik District) : Sir, I feel great pleasure in supporting the motion for adjournment. I confess, Sir, that I view this motion with somewhat mixed feelings, and I also listened with mixed feelings to the several speeches on this motion that proceeded from several members of the House. I congratulate the Government upon the co-operation that they have been able to secure from the Swaraj party in this particular matter, and I am also glad that my honourable friend the leader of the Swaraj party realises that in politics there are no permanent friends and no permanent enemies. I feel impelled to make this observation, because I noticed that my attitude on the Stamp Act Amendment Bill exasperated the Swaraj party to such an extent that they probably felt that they might consider me as their permanent enemy. I am glad to have this assurance from the leader of the Swaraj party, and I reciprocate that sentiment fully. It is really a matter for sincere satisfaction that we are all united in this matter of raising our protest against the action of the Government of India in giving us absolutely no relief under the Meston settlement. I sincerely hope that the unanimity of sentiment which inspires this protest will have some effect upon the Finance Member of the Government of India, and probably, even before the session of the Legislative Assembly is over, the Government of India may reconsider their decision, and come to our relief. With these words, I heartily support the motion for adjournment.

Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI (Kaira District) : Sir, I support the motion. The Honourable the Finance Member has just requested the House for some constructive proposals, as to what we should do, or what attitude this House should adopt. That being the case, I may be pardoned if

[Rao Saheb D. P. Desai]

I make one or two constructive proposals. We all know that we spend a lot of money from loan funds. I suggest that for that loan we should not go to the Government of India, but should raise our own loan in the Bombay market in competition with the Government of India. That is one of my suggestions, and this House should pass no expenditure from loans which have been borrowed from the Government of India. Another suggestion is that, so long as this settlement is not properly arrived at by the Government of India, our income tax payers should be asked by a resolution of this House that, after a certain date, all their income tax may be paid to this Government and not to the Government of India. This is the only way in which this unity may be of some use. Otherwise this unity is not going to result in any good, because a Government which is incorrigible, which has not come to reason even after a strenuous fight of four years, will not come to reason by an adjournment of this Council. With these words I heartily support the motion.

Mr. D. R. PATIL (East Khandesh District): Mr. President, the Government of India have repeatedly stated that their financial policy has been, is being and will be directed towards the reduction and eventual extinction of the provincial contributions at the earliest possible date. Let us hope, that they will be extinguished in the nearest future. Now, Sir, I would say that when the Finance Member of the Government of India discussed the deserving claimants' cases, he has talked about justice but acted with injustice.

Sir, he has stated at the end of his speech "We will work in hope". In that respect, I would simply like to state what the "Times of India" has stated in to-day's issue:

"In the hope of what? In the hope of the injustice that Sir Basil proposes for Bombay? We dislike this motto in its present application. We do not want it."

With these words I condemn the conduct of the Government of India and resume my seat.

Mr. A. C. OWEN (European, Presidency): Sir, on behalf of the constituency which I have the honour to represent I strongly support the motion before the Council. The Honourable the Finance Member has put before the Council very cogent reasons why the Meston settlement should be revised, and the just claims of the Bombay Presidency for an equitable share of the surplus which the Government of India have at their disposal should be recognised, and it is not necessary for me to say much. In this connection I am reminded of those words which tell us that "thrice armed is he who hath his quarrel just". I consider our claims are just and I trust a very strong representation will be made at an early date and will receive due consideration at the hands of the Government of India.

Mr. C. N. WADIA (Bombay Millowners' Association): Sir, may I rise to support the speech of the Honourable the Finance Member? I only have to offer one instance to show the favourable position of Bengal. I received yesterday from the Kelvin Jute Mills a dividend at the rate of 120 per cent. per annum, while we in Bombay, Sir, have to pay dividends out of our reserves. That province which is overflowing with money is to receive a remission of over half a crore of rupees from the central Government while we receive nothing. With these words, Sir, I support the motion.

[Mr. C. N. Wadia]

Mr. LALJI NARANJI : Sir, as this House has unanimously supported the motion, I have nothing to reply.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Do Government wish to reply ?

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE : No, Sir.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : Sir, I should like to say one word by way of explanation. I should like to acknowledge the great courtesy of my honourable friend opposite, the leader of the Swaraj party, who has avoided the temptation of a stinging speech on our general financial policy in the interests of unity of all sides of this House in presenting our very strong case to the consideration of the Government of India.

Motion put and carried unanimously.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : The House will now adjourn to 2 o'clock to-morrow, Tuesday, the 3rd March 1925.

Tuesday, the 3rd March 1925.

The Council re-assembled at the Town Hall, Bombay, on Tuesday, the 3rd March 1925, at 2 p.m., the Honourable the President, Sir IBRAHIM RAHIMTOOLA, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., presiding.

(Discussion on demands for grants resumed.)

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts):

Sir, I move:

"That the item of Rs. 25,200, provision for three assistant development officers, be omitted."

As regards these development officers we are told by Government that no new lands are going to be acquired, but that these officers are required for preparing the awards. As for the lands that have been acquired, they had been acquired some years ago and the awards for them are either in court or have been settled. I do not see the necessity for these officers. The Honourable the General Member has already informed us that they have suspended all activities in the suburban area and the work of these officers is only to prepare the excess awards given by courts. I do not see the necessity for three officers.

Sir LAWLESS HEPPER: Sir, the position as regards this demand is as follows: We made provision in the next year's budget for three Assistant Development Officers. One of these officers acts as Deputy Collector of Salsette and as mamlatdar of Ambernath. He is also chairman of the notified area committees. His work in connection with those committees is very heavy and will continue to be so until the committees are replaced by municipalities. This particular officer is practically of little use for acquisition purposes because his time is otherwise fully occupied. The second Assistant Development Officer is employed whole time in acquiring lands for outside bodies, mainly for the Bombay Municipality in connection with the Tansa completion works, and for the hydro-electric concerns for their transmission lines. The salary of this officer is shown on the establishment of the Development Department but is recovered from those bodies for whom acquisition is made. The remaining Assistant Development Officer is employed in connection with acquisition proceedings in Salsette in respect of land already taken over for schemes to which we are committed. He is also engaged in selling of pieces of land which we do not require, and in effecting settlements in a number of cases with owners, besides which he attends to cases which have been referred to the district court. The Deputy Director of Development, who is also Commissioner of the Suburban Division, has discussed the matter with the Collector and is of opinion that provision should be made for three officers. If during the course of the year there is any possibility of effecting retrenchment of one or more officers, it will certainly be done.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts): Sir, according to the explanation that has been given, two of the officers are not doing development work. If that is so, why are their salaries shown under the Bombay Development scheme? Those other bodies for whom lands are being acquired are not working for the Bombay Development Directorate. If that is so, why have these officers been mentioned as officers of the Development Directorate? According to the explanation that has been given, there is only one officer who is necessary and that he also ultimately may not be required at all. If that is so, why should these three gentlemen be shown as officers under the Development Directorate ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : I have not very much to add, Sir, to what has already been stated by the Director. As has already been explained, we get back the salary of one officer. The other officer is a revenue officer. I may inform honourable members that the Development Department is in communication with the Revenue Department in regard to this officer and has objected to including the salary of this officer in the development budget. I trust that some amicable settlement will be arrived at shortly. The issue is only whether the Revenue Department should pay or the Development Department. One other officer may be retrenched during the year.

*The Division lists were subsequently corrected and the motion was declared lost, vide page 26.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts) : Sir, the motion which I wish to move is :

“Reduce by Rs. 50,000 the provision for travelling and fixed conveyance allowance, etc. (Budget page 157).”

This item has been put down on page 157 of the budget as follows :

“Travelling and fixed conveyance allowance including tentage.”

This allowance is being provided for officers whose salaries come to Rs. 9 lakhs. I cannot understand why these officers, who have merely to travel in the Bombay Suburban district require tentage and fixed conveyance allowances and also travelling allowance. Then part of this allowance has been made non-votable this year. The whole of it was votable last year, but a part of it has been made non-votable this year. Over and above these allowances, there are four other allowances put down on the same page. One of these allowances is Rs. 20,000 and odd, which is probably due to the Lee Commission's recommendations, but even if we deduct that, we get a total of Rs. 1,24,445 as the total amount which has been put down for travelling and fixed conveyance allowance including tentage. Even as regards duty allowance, part of the amount is made non-votable. The whole amount was votable last year, but this year a part of it, namely, Rs. 3,000 has been converted into a non-votable item. As a matter of fact, most of these officers are working at the Back Bay Reclamation works ; only a few officers are doing some work in the Bombay Suburban District, and I understand the activities of the Bombay Suburban district are to be curtailed. If that is so, why should such a huge sum as Rs. 1,24,445 be put down as allowance in some shape or other, as local allowance, duty allowance, house allowance or travelling allowance ? Therefore, my submission is that the amount of Rs. 1,02,314 which has been put down for travelling and fixed conveyance allowance including tentage should be reduced by Rs. 50,000 at least.

Question proposed.

Sir LAWLESS HEPPEL : Mr. President, this item refers not only to the officers whose salaries are put down at Rs. 9 lakhs and odd in the budget but it also refers to a large number of employees who come under the heading of establishments. The figure which we have put in for next year, Rs. 1,02,314, includes Rs. 45,814 for travelling allowance. That is for travelling allowance under the ordinary Government rules for journeys by rail or by road. The balance of Rs. 26,500 is provided for fixed conveyance allowances. These allowances are paid to certain officers and subordinates whose work entails a large amount of moving about in a restricted area. They are given an allowance in respect of the maintenance of certain means of conveyance which does not at all cover the cost of providing and maintaining that conveyance, but is an encouragement to the officer to keep that conveyance himself. It is only paid when the officer certifies every month that he has maintained that conveyance and used it in his official work. The conveyance allowances are Rs. 150 a month for a four-seater car, Rs. 100 a month for a two-seater car, Rs. 50 a month for a motor bicycle, Rs. 75 a month for a tonga and Rs. 15 a month for a bicycle. Last year, we provided for 113 of these allowances, and in next year we have cut it down to 70. I would add, Sir, that in the case of officers with a fixed conveyance allowance they are not entitled to any travelling allowance for journeys made by road, but they are entitled to allowances for journeys made by rail, provided those journeys are made over certain fixed distances which are laid down. I think that it will be recognised that an officer who has a means of getting about is much more valuable in the class of work we are doing in the housing and suburban sections than an officer who has not. In the case of local bodies in Bombay, the Municipality, the Port Trust and the Improvement Trust, it has been the practice up till recently to provide officers with a means of conveyance, generally motor cars, at public expense. Government have always set their face against this as being an extravagant arrangement, and they have adopted the system of giving conveyance allowance, which provides the officer with a part of the cost of providing and maintaining a conveyance himself and naturally, being his own conveyance, the officer probably looks after it better than if it was a conveyance provided for him at the public expense. I submit that it is very important that the officers should have the means of moving freely about, especially in the sort of work that our officers are doing. I may add that this list of fixed conveyance allowance has been very carefully scrutinised during the last few months, and a certain number of reductions have been made, apart from reductions which are due to reductions of staff. During the coming year we shall continue to scrutinise these allowances and no officer or subordinate will be allowed to draw a fixed conveyance allowance unless it can be clearly shown to be in the interests of Government.

As regards travelling allowances, I do not think there is very much to be said. If an officer is required to travel by rail, or by road in the case of an officer who has not fixed conveyance allowance, it would be unreasonable, I think, to deny to the officers of the Development Department travelling allowances which are considered just and reasonable in the case of officers of all other departments. I trust, therefore, that this Council will agree that it is desirable that this provision should remain.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts): Mr. President, according to the explanation which has been given by the honourable member the Development Director it seems that for some time there was a waste. During the last few months he says he has been carefully going over these allowances and he found that some reduction was necessary, and that that reduction is not in proportion to the reduction in the staff. That shows that there was some waste in the payment of these allowances and if there was some wastage and if they are still anxious that the officers should travel—I find that they move in a limited area, there are two railways running within the district—there is absolutely no reason why such large allowances should be given to them. I am not going to cut the allowances altogether. I say that out of these four items which are put down at page 157 and the total of which comes to more than a lakh, I want to reduce it by Rs. 50,000 only. One lakh 24 thousand is the total of the first item. Then there are local allowance, duty allowance, house rent allowance. I have not touched them. Then there is the compensatory allowance which also I have not touched. I have only taken the total of the first three items. They are not the only allowances which have been put down. There are three other items of allowances and the total of these four items comes to one lakh 24 thousand 445. So I am asking a reduction of Rs. 50,000 from the first item. Then there still remain 52 thousand 214 in the first item and there remain the other three items and fifth item which I have not touched.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: Mr. President, the amendment moved by the honourable member for Thana is to reduce the demand of Rs. 1,02,314 by Rs. 50,000, and while discussing that reduction he has also discussed local allowances, duty allowances and house rent allowances, and his argument is that he reduces Rs. 1,02,314 by Rs. 50,000, but he does not touch the other allowances. I do not think that is a very sound argument to place before this Council. He ought to have given us the reasons why travelling and conveyance allowances should be reduced by Rs. 50,000. The honourable member the Development Director has explained on what basis these allowances are given. If you have an officer who has got to get round the suburb, and although the distances may not be as big as in a mofussil district, he cannot do it in a tonga or by railway. He will not be able to get through his work quickly and in that case we shall have to increase our staff. The honourable member has stated that the explanation of the Director of Development has shown that there was extravagance. As far as I can understand the Director of Development, he has stated the actual facts, and they are that there is already a reduction from the last year's grant. The grant last year was one lakh 85 thousand and it has already been reduced to one lakh 2 thousand. Therefore, there has already been a reduction of nearly 82 thousand rupees. That reduction was caused because of a certain number of officers having been retrenched and along with their salary, their travelling allowances have disappeared out of this budget. That is the reason why there has been this big drop. In certain other very few cases where officers have now to perform different duties we have cut down their allowances to a certain extent, but the main reduction is due to retrenchment of officers. I do not think that there is any reason to say that there was any extravagance in the past.

Mr. President, I must ask this House to give us this money because it is essential that our officers should visit all these different schemes. If they are unable to visit them, they are not much use to us. We want personal supervision and we want good supervision, and we want to have it efficiently done. We have made a cut already in this item and I hope honourable members will give us the money asked for.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts):
Mr. President, I move :

Omit provision for Law charges, Rs. 77,000 (Development Department) (Budget page 158).

Now, I find that this item has been unnecessarily put down. This item is put down in order to benefit some counsel. We have got three or four Government pleaders at Thana. Either they are competent or they are not. If they are not competent, let them be removed by all means. Why do Government want special counsel to be taken from Bombay to Thana for land acquisition cases and paid whatever fees they choose to pay them? I find this is a thing which has gone on for a year or two and public funds are wasted. This sort of favouritism or this sort of payment ought not to be encouraged or sanctioned by the House.

[Mr. G. B. Pradhan]

Question proposed.

Sir LAWLESS HEPPER : Mr. President, these are charges incurred in land acquisition cases, and include, I understand, fees paid to special counsel as well as to Government pleaders. We have no desire to incur this expenditure if it can possibly be avoided. But when we find that in former years charges were incurred on this account, I think it is only reasonable, as there are good many land acquisition cases still unsettled, that we should make some provision next year.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR (Bombay University) : Sir, I hope the Honourable the General Member will be in a position to state how much of this Rs. 77,000 is likely to be utilised by way of payment of fees to the ordinary Government pleaders and how much for the special counsel taken from Bombay. I submit, Sir, that the amount ought at least to be reduced by the sum that is to be paid to special counsel. I hope, Sir, the Honourable the General Member will consider this suggestion. I think, having regard to the amount of fees, that these cases are not such that senior counsel from Bombay are necessary. Already Government pay and have at their disposal very experienced senior members of the bar whom they engage as Government pleaders. I cannot understand the wisdom of the policy of taking junior counsel of the High Court over the heads of such Government pleaders. I think, Sir, this involves an important principle and I hope honourable members will consider the question as such; viz., as to how far Government should be encouraged in this policy of engaging junior counsel over the heads of their permanent Government pleaders, who ex hypothesi, are the best men available at the Bar. I hope the Honourable the General Member will consent to reduce the demand by the amount of the fees which are to be paid to special counsel.

Mr. P. E. PERCIVAL : Sir, I am afraid I do not know what exactly is the sum paid to special counsel. I may say however in most cases the Government pleader is engaged; and it is only in certain special cases, where a large amount of money is involved, that special counsel are engaged. The payment that is made to them is not at all as large as the amount that is paid on the other side. I may mention that the Government pleader of Thana is retained in most cases; it is only in important cases involving large amounts that special counsel are engaged.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR : Sir, may I move an amendment?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I do not think amendments can be allowed.

MOULVI RAFI UDDIN AHMAD (Central Division) : Sir, may I ask the Honourable the General Member to let us know what the rate of fees for special counsel is? If it is an ordinary rate, perhaps the House will be justified in voting for the demand. But if the rate is excessive and if the same is given to junior men, —I understand that first-class men are not taken by the Development Department as they cannot afford the luxury—and if it is given to third class men, then the House will be justified in refusing the demand. If the Honourable the General Member is able to satisfy the House that only reasonable fees are given to special counsel, I do not think the House will be justified in voting for the motion.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : Sir, I would just like to say a few words. I quite appreciate my honourable friend Mr. Jayakar's point. This amount includes all fees, for Government pleaders and special counsel. If you cut out the whole amount, as my honourable friend from Thana proposes to do, we shall have no pleaders at all, and this House will find that if we do not defend all these cases that are before the Thana court, Government will only have to pay much larger sums for these acquisitions than they are paying now. The point raised is how much of this Rs. 77,000 is for special counsel and how much for Government Pleaders. I am afraid I am not able to say just now exactly how much is for the one and how much is for the other, but I will inform this honourable House that when I took charge of the department, I went into this question—this was nearly two years ago—and it struck me that the fees we were paying to special counsel were rather high and Government cut them down by 50 per cent. We did not get the same barristers that we used to get

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN : Is this correct ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : I think I am perfectly correct in saying that the present

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR : I think you have got the same man, but on reduced fees.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR (After consulting the Legal Remembrancer) : The present gentleman is Mr. Bhandarkar. My own impression was—I may be wrong—that we did not get the same barrister. At least, the fees were cut down by 50 per cent. Now, I am not going into the question of whether the fees that are paid now are reasonable or not from the point of view of professional qualification ; as a matter of fact, I wanted to cut them down a little more, but I found on consultation that we could not do so and that, if we cut them down further, we could not expect to get reasonably competent men for the work. Then, at that time, I remember the Legal Remembrancer put it to me that the cases involved very large sums indeed and that it would not be in the interests of the department or in the interests of Government—the interests of Government means the interests of the taxpayer—if these cases were not properly attended to or properly defended, and therefore, a certain part of this money is certainly going for special counsel. It would be impossible for me to say just now as to how much of the money for next year is going to special counsel,—that will depend upon the class of cases that come up. If they are important cases which the Legal Remembrancer considers ought to be defended by special counsel, then special counsel will be briefed. I regret I have not got the figures for the past year ; but for the coming year it is impossible to say what the figure of fees for special counsel would be. It depends upon the kind of litigation we shall have. But to cut down this Rs.77,000 would not be a wise policy just now. But, if this honourable House desires, I will certainly look into this question again and, if it is possible again to reduce these fees for special counsel, my honourable friend may rest assured, I will do so. I have done so before and I will try to do so once again; but I am not able to guarantee whether I will be able to do so immediately. I must see what sort of counsel we can get, what sort of fees must be paid, what sort of cases we have got to deal with, and so on. But I can assure my honourable friend that I will go into the question again.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR : On a point of explanation, I did not suggest that the fees of the counsel should be reduced. I suggested that the counsel should not be engaged in those cases which are within the competence of your local legal men on the spot to deal with. But if you do want in any particular cases to engage counsel, for very strong reasons, I did not suggest that counsel should not be briefed at all.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR : I am very much obliged to my honourable friend for the explanation. He may rest assured also that we shall not brief special counsel unless we are convinced that it is in the interests of the department to do so.

An Honourable MEMBER : Did you have any unsatisfactory experience in these matters for want of special counsel ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR : I believe that is so and it was due to that that the principle of engaging special counsel was adopted. We always depended upon the Government Pleader to fight our case, but we had to change that principle some years ago and we found it necessary to brief special counsel because the amounts involved, Mr. President, are so very big and we have to fight very rich people who bring the very best of legal talent. I would, therefore, suggest, Mr. President, that this amount be left in as it is just now and I shall see that special counsel are not taken on unless it is absolutely necessary in the interests of the Development Department.

An Honourable MEMBER : Who were the legal men of whom you had bad experience in this matter ? May we know who were those persons and what were their qualifications ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR : I do not think it is proper to go into legal personalities and I should not care to go into personalities. It would not be right either for me or other honourable members to discuss legal personalities. I have had to go into the question of personalities personally, but it is not a point which I care to discuss in the Council, nor is it dignified to discuss such personalities; nor do I think that my honourable friend the leader of the Swaraj party would care to discuss the qualifications of different counsel.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR : Can I move an amendment, Sir ?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: No amendments can be moved on this motion. I would draw the attention of honourable members to sub-rule (2) of rule 30 which says :

“Motions may be moved at this stage to omit or reduce any grant or any item in a grant, but not to increase or alter the destination of a grant.”

That is quite comprehensive in regard to any motion for omission or reduction and would probably include amendments. But this is governed by Standing Order 3 of “Chapter XI—Financial Business” which says :

“Notice of a motion under rule 30 shall be given three clear days before the first day of the voting of demands for grants under Rule 27.”

It is obvious, therefore, that every motion for omission or reduction of budget grants must be given three days before the motion for demands for grants comes up for discussion, and if that was not so, and if amendments were allowed on every motion for omission or reduction, it would be an interminable business to get through the budget. It is perfectly clear, therefore, that no motion—an amendment is also a form of a motion—for omission or reduction can be put before the House unless three clear days’ notice has been given. I therefore rule that no amendment of the kind which the honourable member for Poona city wishes to move can be allowed to be moved during this discussion.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: I should like, Mr. President, to say a word in this matter, because it affects the arrangements in my charge in the Legal Department. The Government Pleaders—local officers—were at first entrusted with these land acquisition cases when it was not realised that the work would be so heavy and the sums involved would be of such serious importance to the working of the Development Department. It was found in practice that the amount of the work and the sums involved were more than could be adequately dealt with by our local establishment at Thana. The matter was, therefore, taken up and fully discussed not only in the Secretariat but also with the help of the Advocate General and the Solicitor to Government, and we endeavoured to come to some more suitable arrangement under which we could practically secure standing counsel who would become familiar with the nature of suits, which are all connected with one another more or less, and would be in a position to go out and to see the lands for himself on the spot and be able to deal with the whole litigation involved in a much more business-like and satisfactory manner. In order that the Development Department might be properly represented we also made some alterations in our Secretariat establishment. The matter is of great consequence because the value of the land which is being taken by the Development Department was very much exaggerated in the opinion of the owners. This invariably happens where development is going on and it is necessary to scrutinise very strictly the very large valuations which are put upon their property by owners. If that is not done and the case for the Development Department is not adequately put before courts, the result is that awards are given far in excess of the real value of the properties and the total sum involved rises to, I believe, crores of rupees which would very seriously affect the commercial working of the Development Department.

I think, therefore, that this sum in the budget is very necessary and it is a security to see that there is no waste in assessing the value of the lands. The amount has been revised since last year. I see it is now reduced to Rs. 77,000 as against one lakh of rupees before, and that was because when we first realised the necessity of engaging special counsel we had to engage counsel here and there and consequently had to pay higher fees than we now pay for standing counsel who is able to do all the work on more reasonable figures owing to the fact that he is constantly engaged on this particular class of work and the labour involved in getting up each case consequently to some extent is reduced. I recommend, therefore, that the present existing arrangement which has been come to after consultation with our law officers, the Advocate General and the Solicitor to the Government of Bombay be allowed to stand by the House.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN: Sir, I do not know whether I am to accept the assurance of the Honourable the General Member that no counsel would be engaged unless it is absolutely necessary or the explanation of the Honourable the Home Member that the present arrangement will continue. If the present arrangement is to continue, I will certainly press my amendment.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD: Sir, I would like to explain that every case where a counsel is engaged is examined both in the Legal Department and the Development Department. It is only in those cases where it is considered necessary that a special counsel should be engaged, that engagement is sanctioned by the Legal Department.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN: I beg leave of the House to withdraw my motion.

Question put and leave granted.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN (Bombay City, South): Sir, I move:

"That a total reduction of Rs. 61,99,000 be made in total demand for the Development Department of Rs. 1,57,00,000. (Blue Book, page 139)."

In this matter I get now the first opportunity of entering my emphatic protest against the scant courtesy with which the Development Directorate has treated the popular opinion and the scant courtesy with which they have treated the resolution passed by this House last year. The Honourable the General Member while explaining every item stated that they had in fact carried out the resolution not by accepting the resolution passed by the majority of this House but by partially accepting another resolution of which notice was given by my honourable friend Mr. Lalji Naranji. I stated on that occasion, and I state it again, that the two resolutions were essentially different. The partial acceptance of Mr. Lalji's resolution need not cover the ground that was included in the resolution that was passed by this honourable House. I shall now point out that they are essentially different from my point of view. My resolution was as follows :

[Mr. K. F. Nariman]

" This Council recommends to Government :

(a) that a committee consisting of 12 non-official and elected members be appointed to enquire into the whole administration and working of the Development Directorate to suggest ways and means of effecting retrenchments and to report on the advisability or otherwise of continuing the schemes taken in hand ;

(b) that the Development Directorate be requested to co-operate with the said committee and afford all facilities and help in conducting the said inquiry and in making the said report ;

(c) that an independent officer or expert be appointed to help the said committee."

The resolution which was partially accepted by my honourable friend the General Member and of which notice was given by the honourable member Mr. Lalji Naranji simply wanted to consider the advisability of proceeding with works in the Development Directorate. The difference will be evident if I read the resolution of my honourable friend Mr. Lalji Naranji. That resolution runs as follows :

" In view of the conclusions arrived at during the period of war boom that the land available in Bombay was inadequate having proved erroneous, this Council recommends to Government that a committee, with a non-official majority, be forthwith appointed to inquire into the activities of the Development Department as to how far and in what directions such activities should be continued and as to whether that department should not be amalgamated with the Public Works Department."

Therefore, I submit that the two resolutions were essentially different. The most important point of difference between the two was that whereas one wanted an enquiry into the working, constitution and administration of the Development Directorate, the other wanted an enquiry only as to how far the activities of the department should be directed. Therefore, Sir, to say that the two resolutions are same is trying to cloud the real issue. I want to draw the attention of the House to the fact that even at the time when my resolution was discussed and even during the last two or three days when demands for the Development Directorate are being discussed, the real demand from the popular side has been evaded. The popular demand is not whether the Development Directorate is a profitable concern, whether it will end in a loss or profit, but the popular demand is to know the inner working of the Development Directorate. Without any reserve and with all the responsibility that I can command, I openly make a charge that there has been serious mal-administration of public funds, and there has been a serious wasting of public funds. There have been instances which I could go to the length of calling frauds, and I make this charge on behalf of the public and on behalf of the investors of Bombay who have invested Rs. 30 crores in this work. On the occasion when I moved my resolution, the Director of Development stated that he did not wish to burke a public enquiry and that he did not wish to shirk the enquiry. I say that if Government now shirk that enquiry, the suspicion in the minds of the public will be confirmed. I say that Government have shirked the enquiry, and the suspicions of the public have been confirmed, and I am quite justified in laying openly this charge against the Development Department before this House. The Honourable the General Member stated that, under the rules, they did not take any notice of anonymous applications. Perhaps, on principle, it is right, but this is not any anonymous petition. But it is an open charge laid in this House by a responsible member of the House on behalf of the investors, who have invested Rs. 30 crores of their money in this development scheme. I would ask the House not to cloud the issue. I do not want to mix up the two issues. I do not want an enquiry as to whether the development scheme is going to be a profitable concern or not. That is the way in which the issue which I have placed before the House is sought to be clouded. I want to know what is being done with the public funds; I want to know whether those funds are honestly and legitimately applied, or whether they are misapplied. As the time at my disposal is limited, I want to point out only a few instances. Thirty minutes is not sufficient to deal with the charges against a department which spends several crores of rupees. I will mention a few specific instances, which quite justify me in bringing this charge against the department.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I should like to make the position perfectly clear, so that the debate may be regulated according to constitutional procedure laid down in this House. All big reductions, such as the one which is being moved, namely a reduction of Rs. 61,99,000 are all motions for actual reductions; that is to say, the mover has to point out how these large reductions should be made in the various parts of the department's expenditure, and the general policy of the department is not allowed to be discussed on motions for large reductions. The honourable member Mr. Kambli has a motion for the reduction of Rs. 1 lakh, and though that is not a small amount, having regard to the large sums which the Development Department deals with, I will hold that that reduction of 1 lakh is a small reduction, and the whole policy of the Development Department could be discussed and criticised on that motion. This is the procedure that has been laid down all throughout the time that this Council has been at work, and I trust the honourable mover will put forward his reasons why he desires a lump reduction of Rs. 62 lakhs in the expenditure of the department.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR: May I intervene for one moment, Sir? I do not desire personally to prevent my honourable friend from having an opportunity of bringing accusations against the department in open Council; but may I point out, Sir, that the reduction of Rs. 1 lakh is out of order, because I have reduced the demand by Rs. 10 lakhs. I do not wish to prevent my honourable friend from bringing these accusations in open Council, but I draw attention to that fact.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: If Government have no objection I am quite prepared to allow this motion of a reduction of Rs. 61,99,000 as a small reduction, justifying the consideration of the policy of the department. The honourable member is perfectly at liberty to deal with all the aspects of the Development Department.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN: I am thankful, Sir, for this opportunity. Certainly, from the Government point of view, the reduction which I have proposed will be a small one. When they are dealing in crores of public money, a few lakhs is certainly nothing. I will now give some specific instances. As I said, if I had sufficient time at my disposal, I would have given instances after instances which would have convinced this House that not only is there a misapplication of funds but misapplication of a nature which, under ordinary circumstances, in the course of a public enquiry, would have resulted in proceedings in a court of law. When I moved my last resolution I stated the particular instance of the indent which was sent by an Executive Engineer for steel bars of particular dimensions. I stated that that indent was altered by another engineer who changed the dimensions of the bars. The indent went to the manufacturers and steel bars of the value of Rs. 2,50,000 or Rs. 3 lakhs were sent up, but they were quite useless for the purposes of the Development Department. The result was that a second indent for bars of the required dimensions had to be sent, and those bars were eventually obtained. I still say that those bars of the value of Rs. 2,50,000 are lying with the Department undisposed of. On the last occasion the Director of Development stated that it was not a loss to the Government, but they are still lying rusting in the Matunga depôt, and I think they could not be disposed of. I should like to ask the Director of Development whether he can challenge this statement; I am quite prepared to go to the depôt and prove my case. I know that up to a recent date advertisements had been appearing in the press for the disposal of those bars, but they could not be disposed of. This is a mistake which has been admitted by the Director of Development in his own reply in the course of the debate. He admitted that there was a mistake, but that it was a "trifling mistake" of which a great deal has been made. But really, can this be called a trifling mistake—a deliberate alteration of the dimensions of the bars by a responsible officer which has resulted in a loss of Rs. 2,50,000 to the department, as the bars are lying rusting in the Matunga depôt? And yet, the Director of Development, with all his responsibility, has told this House that this is a "trifling mistake" of which a great deal has been made. I should like to have some further explanation as to how such a "trifling mistake" could have occurred; not a mistake in the original indent, but the original indent containing certain figures altered by another officer, for bars of dimensions which were not required for the Development Department. How did that trifling mistake occur? Why was this deliberate alteration made in the dimensions of the bars when the indent was already prepared by another officer? The indent, with the initials of the officer who made the alteration is lying in the records of the Development Department. That is why I challenge an enquiry. The only reply that we have received is that it is a trifling mistake—a trifling mistake costing Rs. 3 lakhs. I may tell the Government quite frankly and openly that there are ugly rumours in the city and in the whole of the presidency that the higher staff of officers have been receiving secret commissions from the manufacturers, and that is the reason why in this instance the department has incurred a loss of Rs. 3 lakhs.

[Mr. K. F. Nariman]

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR: Commission from whom?

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN: From the manufacturers. That is the reason why stores are ordered out in larger quantities than are necessary, and stores which are not required are also ordered out. If you go to the surplus depot, you will find stores worth Rs. 6 lakhs lying undisposed of, and the Director of Development has to come out with advertisements in the press, and ultimately these surplus stores will be sold at a considerable loss. I could prove this by facts and figures if an investigation of the kind that I call for is granted.

Another instance is in regard to the acceptance of the tenders. I have got definite instances wherein particular contractors of foreign firms, that have come into existence almost simultaneously with the Development Department, have been favoured by the department by accepting their tenders, although their tenders were not the lowest. There are several contractors who offered tenders for Rs. 88,000 and Rs. 90,000 for building chawls but their tenders were not accepted, but a tender for Rs. 1,10,000 and over has been accepted from other foreign contracting firms which have started almost simultaneously along with the coming into existence of the Development Directorate. Why is that? If the honourable member the Director of Development wants an instance, I will give it.

Sir LAWLESS HEPPEL: Sir, I rise to inquire whether the honourable member will be prepared to give the House the names of the contractors.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN: The tender for the Naigam road 13 chawls was given to J. C. Gammon. The tender for 88 thousand rupees was also offered, but the tender for one lakh ten thousand from J. C. Gammon was accepted. I should like to have an explanation for that. Why was this tender for 88 thousand from another contractor not accepted? There are several cases with regard to which I could give further details. I understand that there is an Italian firm which has been started almost simultaneously with the Development Directorate, which has been similarly favoured by the acceptance of its tenders; and there are instances where, after the acceptance of the tenders, higher amounts have been paid to the contractors even than the tendered amount. There are numerous instances, and I do not wish to weary the House with them. I only wish to say that in asking for an inquiry, I had particular information at my disposal. I tried to get at the Development Department in various ways. I first started a campaign in the public press, calling for an enquiry in regard to the scandals, but I failed to get the necessary information. My next step was to try to get information by means of questions in this House, but the replies given by Government were unsatisfactory, evasive and non-committal. My next step was to move a resolution calling for an enquiry of this nature. The resolution was moved, was passed by this House, but not accepted by the Government. Of course, I am not going to give it up, and my next step is the resolution which I am going to move, asking for the transfer of the whole department to the

[Mr. K. F. Nariman]

Public Works Department, so as to bring it more under the control and supervision of this honourable House. I say, Sir, that in the beginning, a department which originally had been under the control and direct control of this House, directly under the Public Works Department, was by means of a manœuvring in legislation taken directly out of our hands and made a reserved subject. Of course, the Honourable the General Member will remember—and I reminded him of it on the last occasion—that he himself was of the same opinion in the year 1921, that the Development Department should properly have been a transferred subject. I hope, Sir, that when my resolution comes up for discussion the Honourable the General Member will change sides for the time being, read the opinion which he had given in 1921 and support the resolution that the Development Department should be made a transferred subject.

Now, coming to the administration of the department, I shall first take up the establishments. I would request the honourable members to look at pages 155 and 156 of the Blue Book, where they will get the figures of the establishment. After providing for so much establishment, do the Development Directorate seriously maintain that they have retrenched according to the demands of this House? The very first appointment under establishments is that of the Director of Development. In this connection, I do not wish, Sir, to refer to personalities. The Director of Development may be a very amiable gentleman, and he may be a very desirable gentleman. We are only considering his official capacity and his salary. I must say that I have nothing to say against him personally. There are some other officers on the opposite benches who might emulate his genial example. We are considering only his salary, which is Rs. 6,000 a month, or Rs. 72,000 a year. We have been crying against it from the very day that the Development Directorate started. I ask again, is that salary justifiable? The Honourable the General Member states that we have been gradually reducing our work considerably. I dare say that the work of the Director of Development has been curtailed in proportion, but there appears to be no curtailing of his salary. I am sure, even up to the last day when there may be only a few feet of the wall left to be finished, he will continue to draw this salary of Rs. 6,000 a month till then. I ask honourable members on both sides of the House, whether it is fair to the other honourable gentlemen on the opposite benches, and to the other officers in the service. Is it fair to them? Compare the salaries paid to the executive engineers and the superintending engineers and the assistant engineers in the Public Works Department, with those which are paid in this department, and you will find that it is almost cent. per cent. more than what we pay to the Public Works officers. After the Director of Development come the Deputy Director, the Deputy Secretary, the Assistant Secretary, the Chief Engineer, the Deputy Chief Engineer, the Executive Engineer, and the Assistant Engineer. I must say, Sir, ^{the secret commission} that I am thankful to the Director of Development, ^{for} why in this instance ^{the} the Commissioner in Sind, he does not ask for a ^{stea} ^{the} inspection of his work. We ought to be thankful for that generosity on his part. But we would have been more thankful if considering our financial position, he had himself come forward and told this House "I really do not think I deserve this salary of Rs. 6,000 a month, and to set an example to my own subordinates, and in order that I may compete with them for retrenchment, I shall be prepared to accept a lesser salary". As it is, with what face can he go before his subordinate officers and tell them "I think your salaries are too high and they ought to be reduced; all the same I shall continue to draw my Rs. 6,000 a month"? Unless he makes a substantial reduction in his own salary, he cannot ask his subordinates to accept less. Therefore, we have to continue paying high salaries to these officers of the department.

Now, I come to the question of Indianisation. When the whole country is crying for Indianisation, look at the percentage of Indians employed in the higher offices. In this connection, if you consider the answers that have been given to the various questions that have been put to Government, what is the result? There are about 20 posts carrying a salary of Rs. 2,000 and upwards, and out of these 20, 19 are Europeans, and there is only one Indian. And you will find there one or two gentlemen who are given a salary of Rs. 2,000, who are Europeans without any qualifications, whereas numerous Indians of higher qualifications do not get more than Rs. 600 to Rs. 700 a month. We are also told in the reply of Government that out of 19 appointments carrying a salary of between Rs. 700 and Rs. 2,000, there were 13 Europeans and 6 Indians. That is the way in which the Honourable the General Member, an Indian member of eminence, is giving effect to the policy of Indianisation.

But, Sir, apart from these facts and figures, and apart from the protest against the Government not carrying into effect the resolution of the Council passed in the last session, I am prepared to point out, if there is time at my disposal, that there is still ample scope left, in this demand of Rs. 1,47,00,000, for effecting a reduction of at least Rs. 50 lakhs to Rs. 60 lakhs. On the last occasion, during the budget discussion, I moved a motion for the reduction of the total demand for the Development Department by Rs. 75 lakhs, but the Honourable the General Member would not be persuaded to accept that motion. He fought hard against it. It was carried to a division and it was lost. Now, look at the result. He himself declares at the end of the year that he was able to effect retrenchment to the extent of 90 lakhs. Instead of accepting with good grace the motion which was proposed by me asking for a cut of 75 lakhs, he vigorously opposed it stating that if the motion was accepted, the Development Department would be impossible to be worked. As a matter of fact he did work with that reduction and with the same efficiency or inefficiency of the past years. To-day, Sir, I know that the Honourable the General Member will again stand up before this House, but I would not go to give it up, and say that it will be impossible for him to incorporate with a cut of 61 lakhs. I would not go to move for the attitude of Government last year. Even with this cut of 61 lakhs, the Development Directorate will continue as efficiently or inefficiently as in the past years, and this cut will only mean a saving for the poor ratepayers of this city and of this presidency.

The Development Directorate admitted that regarding the cement contracts it was a bad bargain, but that they could not get out of it. The Director stated :

“Under these circumstances, Sir, there is no doubt that if we were free at the present moment we could, taking advantage of the temporary difficulties of a struggling Indian industry, obtain cement at a substantially lower price than we are actually paying.”

Since then, Sir, one of the contracting parties applied to the Development Directorate to be freed from this obligation. The Development Directorate was given the opportunity to be free from this obligation so far as one of the contracting parties was concerned. They could have, if they liked, freed themselves from the obligation and obtained cement from outside at a cheaper rate. But what did they do? I find that the obligation of that contracting party was transferred to another company. One company which wanted to be free from the contract, transferred the benefits of the contract to another company and the Development Directorate accepted the transfer. They were not bound to do so legally. An opportunity was presented to effect a saving by getting out of a legal obligation, but they deliberately continued the obligation with another contracting party. I hope the Development Director will explain the circumstances. We may be making mistakes, because we are not allowed to pry into the facts and figures. It is possible that relying upon what we get from outside we may be making mistakes, but my information is that one of the contracting parties, who wanted to be free from their obligation, wanted to give the benefit of the contract to another party, and the Development Directorate accepted it.

Now, Sir, only yesterday the honourable member Mr. Pradhan made a motion for a reduction of 3 lakhs provided for unforeseen contingency, and the Honourable the Development Member at once accepted it. Supposing the honorable member did not move that motion, those three lakhs might have been spent or might have disappeared. Similarly, there are many other items which escape the scrutiny of the House and which could be cut out. Considering all these circumstances, Sir, a cut of 61 lakhs is certainly one which can be accepted by this House.

Question proposed.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI (Karachi City) : Sir, the Honourable the General Member gave us some facts and figures in regard to the Development Department. He pointed out that a large percentage of the lands which have been made available for sale have been sold. But if we take the whole commitment of the department, namely, all the lands which have been notified for acquisition, that is, the lands for which we have committed ourselves and which yet remain undeveloped, the amount of land that has been made available for sale will, according to my calculation, be only about 5 per cent. of the total. The whole amount of land, Sir, is 14,000 to 16,000 acres, an area which will, I think, last us for nearly half a century. Now, I ask, Sir, is it a reasonable proposition, is it an economically sound proposition, to commit ourselves for developing lands which will last us for nearly half a century? In my opinion it is not. That is the first point which I wish to make.

[Mr. D. B. Adwani]

The other point is that the present financial position of the Development Department is highly unsatisfactory. If we look to the annual income (I will exclude the proceeds from the sales of land which will be credited to the capital account) the annual receipts are first, sales of water, Rs. 1,15,000; supply of electricity, Rs. 21,000; and rent, Rs. 13,16,000, we get a total of 14½ or say 15 lakhs, according to the budget estimate for 1924-25. But really speaking 15 lakhs and odd cannot be realised as rent, because the revised estimates for the same year is only Rs. 7,20,000. If we take this into consideration, namely that there is an overestimate of 6 lakhs of rupees in rent, the average realisation from the Development Department comes to 8½ lakhs or say 9 lakhs. On the other hand, the interest that we pay on the capital already invested is Rs. 77,14,000. Against a realisation of 9 lakhs per year, we have to pay Rs. 77,14,000, which means a loss of nearly 68 lakhs. Now we are getting 20 lakhs from the cotton cess, and if we set off this against the loss, we still get a net loss of 48 lakhs. The actual loss is, however, 68 lakhs annually.

The other point which I wish to make is that this interest is added to the capital: it is not being paid out of the ordinary revenues. This House will remember that in the case of the Lloyd Barrage the Secretary of State has given us special permission to pay interest to the extent of 10 lakhs from the Famine Fund and 9 and odd lakhs out of capital. But in the case of the Development Department we charge such a huge sum as 77 lakhs interest per annum on the capital, which I think is a very ruinous policy from the financial point of view. This is just like declaring dividend out of capital. If we had a vigilant shareholder like Mr. Shamdasani, I think he would have taken us to a law-court, and would have said that the Bombay Government were declaring dividend out of capital. If we go on taking loans like this, we will be pursuing a very ruinous policy. The result will be that when we have stopped taking loans on account of these works, which will happen in the course of a few years, we will be confronted with the necessity of having to provide annually a sum of close upon a crore of rupees from our ordinary revenue minus some 20 lakhs or so which will be the annual income. I think, Sir, honourable members will agree that this is a very unsound proposition from the financial point of view, and I wish to enquire if any special permission has been obtained for charging interest to capital in this manner.

Then, Sir, if we take the realisations from rents into account, it will at once appear to us that the position is very disquieting. For example, the budget estimate for 1924-25 shows Rs. 13·16 lakhs as the expected realisations from the rents of our chawls, but the revised estimate for the current year shows Rs. 7·20. That is to say, whereas we expected to realise Rs. 13 lakhs, we are only getting Rs. 7 lakhs under the revised estimate—a difference of Rs. 6 lakhs. I wish to know which specialists calculated the amount of interest that was expected to be realised from the chawls. Similarly for 1925 a figure of 15 lakhs and odd is shown as the expected realisations, as if there would be a sudden demand for the development chawls, which does not seem to be justified in the absence of an explanation. My opinion is, judging from the position as it appears, and as I have put before the House in my brief remarks, that a revised forecast is absolutely necessary for this project, a definite forecast for the Bombay Development Scheme as a whole, including reclamation scheme, suburban schemes, and the industrial scheme. A revised forecast is absolutely necessary showing the amounts of the revised estimates, what income was expected and how far the expectations have been realised, and what will be the position in the near future. What, for example, will be the accumulated arrears of interest? Because we must remember that interest is at the present moment simply going on accumulating. Compound interest is being added and we are face to face with a very serious problem: In my opinion, Sir, looking to the position of rents, looking to the fact that only about 50 per cent. of the chawls that we have actually built are at present being occupied, the building programme should be stopped. No more buildings should be constructed until the present chawls are occupied.

Then, Sir, my honourable friend from Bombay has pointed out that the work of the department has decreased and that the Development Director should set an example by offering to have his salary reduced. My opinion however is that the Directorate should be altogether abolished....

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD: You mean personally?

Mr. D. B. ADWANI: Yes, I mean the Directorate and not the department. The Directorate is not required. We have got superintending engineers who can correspond direct with the Government. Looking to the reduction of expenditure which has been effected, and looking to the decrease in the programme, we do not require the Directorate at all. We do not require the Director, we do not require the Deputy Director as well, we do not require the Deputy Secretary to Government for the Development Department. We may have only one Assistant or Under Secretary on say Rs. 800 or so; and if we make this change, we will save nearly a lakh and a quarter. It is my emphatic opinion that the Directorate is no longer required. The building operations should be totally stopped, and only such building operations should be continued as are required to complete the present buildings which are actually under construction, and for that purpose the engineering staff required will not be so great as shown in the note which has been supplied to us. We find—I am not referring to the Back Bay reclamation scheme because I do not feel competent to say anything about the staff required for that—for the housing scheme we have one superintending engineer, four executive engineers and three or more assistant engineers; and for the suburban scheme, one superintending engineer, three executive engineers and five assistant engineers. So much staff is unnecessary. The Honourable the General Member told us in his speech that he was going to stop the suburban schemes. If that is so, why is this establishment shown for the suburban scheme, costing over 2 lakhs, a great part of which is for work which the honourable member does not wish to carry out. Sir, a great deal of reduction can indeed be made in the engineering establishment—nearly 50 per cent.—which means that we can effect a saving of a lakh of rupees or even more. Under these circumstances, a cut of Rs. 61,90,000 is very reasonable and this House should support it.

Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI (Kaira District): Sir, I support the motion moved by my honourable friend from Bombay. The total debt to the end of 1925-26 for the development, including debt owing by public bodies would be in the neighbourhood of 38 crores of rupees, and out of this 38 crores, about 14 crores would be the provincial responsibility, that is, this Council's responsibility. We are concerned with this Council's responsibility for the 14 crores of the total debt. Now the revenue side, as has been often pointed out, even after four years of the working of the Development Department, is practically meagre. If we exclude the 20 lakhs, which is the cotton cess that is paid by the agriculturists the total revenue comes to about 16 lakhs and out of this 16 lakhs, there are over-estimates. Last year they over-estimated the revenue and got nothing, and this year also the same over-estimate continues. May I ask the Honourable the General Member how is he expecting to have all the chawls filled up in these times of depression when the mills are not working with double shift—that is, night and day—when most of the labourers employed in Bombay city are employed by himself (the General Member) and when his activities are reduced, I do not think there will be any tenants for the development chawls. I think the present activity of the labourers in Bombay is simply due to the temporary activity of the railways, Improvement Trust, the Port Trust, municipality and the Development Department, and if that activity goes away, then there will not be any activity for the labourers and perhaps I should think that even the buildings as they are at present will be more than enough. And considering this point, I should request the Honourable the General Member to reduce the amount on chawls at least by 15 lakhs. He has put down about 24 lakhs for building these chawls and except for the completion of the chawls that are already taken in hand he may save the expenditure of at least 15 lakhs on these chawls.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR: We cannot.

Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI: You cannot!

In all he has overestimated the revenue by 11 lakhs. I am really surprised on what basis he comes to the item of Rs. 15,44,000. That is, the rents from these chawls. To my mind the rents from these chawls are falling from year to year. How can you expect to realise the amount of 15 lakhs. I think a cut has to be made from the revenue side of the budget. I have noticed that the sinking fund in the Development Department is invested in the department itself. That is a very bad policy. The sinking fund money should be invested in Government loans. The sinking fund is intended for the extinguishment of the debt and, if it is spent in the concern itself the success of which is very doubtful, this amount also will go. I understand that the Honourable the General Member has remarked that the Colaba reclamation scheme will not be proceeded with.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : That has been cut out of the budget.

Rao Sahab D. P. DESAI : As regards the suburban schemes, I understand that there are already bungalows lying idle without occupants. I understand that in Bombay itself there are many places fitted with electric lights lying idle without people to come and occupy them. I am talking of Matunga....

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : That is Improvement Trust.

Rao Sahab D. P. DESAI : It is your child after all.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : Are we right in discussing the Improvement Trust scheme here, Sir ?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Certainly not. So far as I know, the Development Department has nothing to do with the Improvement Trust schemes. If the Government borrow money on behalf of the Improvement Trust and lend it to that body, it does not make it a part of Government or the Development Directorate.

Rao Sahab D. P. DESAI : Out of the 2 crores and 5 lakhs, the demand of the General Member, he has provided 5 lakhs for co-operative housing. If he were more sincere and if there was any need for encouraging building trade, he would not have set apart only 5 lakhs for co-operative housing but 50 lakhs or so for the housing of the labour and middle classes and stop the other activities. But it is clear they do not want it and from what I can see this is only an enticement for people who would not come forward. He wants to give encouragement by providing 5 lakhs only. I would suggest to him to either provide more if there is need or take away even this amount. There should be no enticement. With these remarks I support the motion for reduction which is not a heavy one.

Mr. G. I. PATEL (Ahmedabad Millowners' Association) : Sir, my honourable friend Mr. Nariman raised two important points in the course of his speech which I hope the Honourable the General Member, being a member of the commercial community and a business man himself, will take into consideration and in the course of his reply give the House the information it desires on those two points. I would like to say a few words firstly about the manner in which these commissions are obtained. First of all, commissions are obtainable from the manufacturers by the persons who directly import articles such as machinery, etc. Secondly, commission is obtainable from somebody in England who canvasses the order; thirdly from some broker in this country through whom the order is placed. Lastly the commission is debited to the general expenses by Home firms and paid to some person in England in cash or in kind. So, it is very difficult to find out how this commission was obtained on certain particular orders. The honourable member Mr. Nariman has made out a case for at least some suspicion. I believe it cannot be proved legally how these commissions have been obtained.

In regard to tenders, favouritism can be shown in their acceptance. First of all a tender can be rejected on the ground that it was received late. After the tenders are opened there are ways and means to call upon the tenderer who has demanded high rates to revise his rates. Information may leak out, from the office or from the staff who are responsible for passing the tenders and that party will send in a further tender revising the rates under the plea that they misunderstood certain calculations and so on. If that party is a favoured party, the tender is accepted. If it is put to the executive to explain why the tender of the other man was not accepted, they would say that the tender came late or that the tender of the new party was accepted because the rates were revised. Lastly if tenders at higher rates are accepted deliberately, the plea would be that a particular contractor was not reliable and he could not be entrusted with such heavy contracts. These are the several ways in which favouritism can be shown and by which commissions can be obtained. But at the same time I may point out that it is very difficult to prove in a court of law that some commission has been given or that favouritism has been shown in particular cases. I request the Honourable the General Member to explain these points in his reply so that it may satisfy the House. If that is done, the House will be satisfied; otherwise, the suspicion will remain as it is, and my honourable friend Mr. Nariman will probably establish a case that there have been reasonable grounds for suspicion, though it is not possible to establish the guilt in a legal manner.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The Secretary of the Council has drawn my attention to the fact that the division on Mr. G. B. Pradhan's motion for a reduction of Rs. 25,200 contains a mistake. The report of the tellers was that there were 35 in favour of the motion and 34 against it. The Secretary counted them up, and finds that there are 35 votes on each side. Since the fact was brought to my notice, I have carefully scrutinised the division lists, and noted on the same paper both those who voted for and those who voted against, and the result is that there are 35 votes each way. The mistake presumably made by the tellers is due to the fact that Mr. Gibson's vote—he was one of the tellers—has been marked in such a way that it was overlooked in counting the total. Now, these incidents are rather unpleasant to deal with, and I hope honourable members will remember the remarks which I made on a similar occasion which occurred at the previous session of this Council in Poona. Two responsible officers of Government were in this case the tellers and this mistake has been made. The result, therefore, is that there is a tie. It is perfectly true that the President's announcement once made cannot be challenged by any one, but here is a question of keeping correct records of the Legislative Council, and it will never do to have in the division list 35 names each way and the total shown as 35 and 34. The records have got to be corrected, and in both cases 35 votes have got to be shown.

Then it comes to the question whether the motion was carried or lost. With reference to that, the principles which I have followed, namely, to vote in favour of the status quo will apply. You will observe that on page 156 of the Blue Book the sum of Rs. 25,200 which has been provided for assistant development officers this year is a reduction from Rs. 30,300 provided last year. Therefore the status quo is this reduced provision which, if it is to be disallowed, could only be disallowed by a majority of the House itself. In these circumstances, I have to vote for the Noes, for the retention of grant reduced from the figure which this House passed last year, and therefore I must declare the motion as lost.

(After recess.)

Debate on Mr. Nariman's motion resumed.)

Mr. A. N. SURVE (Bombay City, North): Mr. President, the motion that is before the House now gives me an opportunity of bringing forward the grievances which I have against this department. Sir, this honourable House has before it the interim report that has been prepared by the advisory committee and in that report honourable members will find some mention is made of some of the schemes from which you will notice, Sir, that the Government is going to curtail the programme which they had chalked out some years ago. The full programme was to provide six thousand single room tenements, but now the Government say that they have built 21 thousand single room tenements, and they are going to suspend their work because they now find that certain figures given several years ago are wrong. I humbly beg to bring to their notice that the figures to which they refer have nothing whatsoever to do with the industrial housing scheme. Sir, this scheme was undertaken not because there were so many rooms short of actual want, but because the method in which the industrial people were housed was very deplorable.

Sir, let me mention to this House what His Excellency has said in this connection when the question of development directorate was mooted for the first time. At that time on the 3rd of August 1920 he has stated:

"It is a sufficient proof of the horror of the conditions that two-thirds of the people of this city live in insanitary and airless one room tenements and that more than fifty per cent. of the children born in this city die before they reach the age of 18 months. For all that makes home-life pleasant—light, air, space and cleanliness—it is indeed a city of dearth—for the children it is a city of death.”

To remove this difficulty a programme for industrial housing was undertaken.

The responsibility of Government at that time was also in view of His Excellency. He has stated :

“I venture to say that I have been into many of them (that is in the single room tenements inhabited by the working classes of Bombay). I have been into many of them and been in as close quarters to them as any member of this Council and any one who realizes the inevitable results of any delay in a measure of this kind now already too long delayed must recognize clearly the responsibilities of breeding up an unhealthy and unfit and aqualid race of people. Unless we give them better air, better light, better cleanliness, and better conditions, we shall not breed a race worthy of this great city. It is open to us to-day to do it.”

You will notice from these facts that at that time Government had before them the obligation which they owed to the working classes of Bombay. They wanted to make provision for them. The question of housing was not a new one. It was under the consideration of Government for the past 50 years. The history is a very interesting one. But I shall not engage the attention of this House with its details. Several experiments were made and they were given up one after another. While the City Improvement Trust was brought into existence to solve this question of sanitary dwellings for the working classes and when Government found that no satisfactory solution was brought about, they undertook that work themselves. Therefore I maintain that the decision which the Government have now taken, namely, to suspend the work to a future date is not justified by the circumstances. They should not tell this House that there was inaccuracy of figures because by the extracts which I have placed before you you will see at once that the average of rooms was not the question. The question was to make provision for better housing of these classes. Sir, the millhand lives in very bad sanitary surroundings. His life is very much shortened by his being employed in the mill for several hours in the day and then returning for rest to his insanitary room at night. Therefore if you have any care or sympathy for the suffering of the industrial classes on whose labour the city depends and to whose labour the city owes its prosperity, then it is plainly your duty to make full and adequate provision for their housing.

Sir, you will see that the expectation with which these single room tenements were undertaken by the development directorate is fully realized. I have stated in my dissenting minute that according to the analysis prepared you find that actually 90 per cent. of the rooms are occupied by the working classes. It is not only that, but the rooms that are provided for them afford them sanitary dwellings because the death rate itself is strikingly low.

In last year's report you have stated that the death rate in the development chawls was only six per cent. whereas in the same locality in other houses the death rate was about 35. So, if these figures have any meaning, it is evident that if the labourers live in development chawls they live in more sanitary conditions. The death rate in those chawls is very low. Therefore, Sir, it is very necessary that Government should not suspend their operations but carry out their programme to the full. The Honourable the General Member in his opening remarks the other day said that the crux of the question was that the tenements were a dead loss to the Development Directorate. Now, Sir, in this connection let me mention that this loss is already made up by the cotton cess. This honourable House knows that all the cotton that is imported into this town is subjected to a cess and the amount realised thereby is about 20 lakhs. Now, Sir, you will notice that this 20 lakhs is being realised from the industrial classes of this city. They must be utilised for giving sanitary houses to the industrial classes themselves, because Government have come to the conclusion that they cannot use compulsion for making the millowners to provide sanitary houses to the working classes, and in that view they have imposed this cotton cess. Its proceeds are 20 lakhs and Government are not spending the full amount which they realise from this source on the provision of houses for workmen. I have not the correct figures with me, but I take it that even if they charge Rs. 5 as the rent for their one-room tenements, on the rooms they have actually built Government will not suffer a loss. Government are not suffering a greater loss than 10 lakhs, and the other 10 lakhs Government are utilising for other purposes. As a member of this House I feel it my duty to restrain Government from diverting the money which is earmarked for a particular purpose to some other purpose. Having regard to these facts I hope Government will come forward and alter their decision and carry out to the full the programme they have undertaken.

Then, another grievance which I have to place before this House is about the putting to auction of the shops which are built in the Development Directorate chawls. I had addressed a letter to the officers of the development directorate bringing to their notice that they were introducing a very pernicious system of putting the shops to auction. That system is a very pernicious system. The chawls are meant for the labouring classes; they are to be inhabited by labourers who expect that every necessary of life will be given to them at as cheap a rate as possible. And if the development directorate put the shops to auction, what will be the consequence? The shopkeeper will charge the excessive rent he pays to the development directorate on the articles he will sell, and those men who will be living in the development directorate chawls will have to buy their provisions at a high price. About this letter, I may further mention, Sir, that the Land Manager wrote to me to say that he would place the letter before the advisory committee. Several months have passed by, and as far as my knowledge goes, that letter has not been placed before the advisory committee, and their decision has not been asked for. Now, I humbly suggest that Government should not put the shops to auction.

[Mr. A. N. Surve]

The third point, Sir, is about the admixture of castes into public services. The honourable nominated member representing labour had asked only the other day what was the percentage of Hindu clerks belonging to the backward classes who were in the service of the Development Directorate. Let the Development Directorate to-day explain to this House why out of 200 clerks only 5 clerks belong to the Hindu backward class. Government have told us that they are introducing admixture of castes into the services, and that the claims of the backward classes for appointment to the public services are not being ignored. If that is a fact, I ask the Government benches opposite how is it that in the Development Department out of 200 there are only 5 who belong to the Hindu backward classes.

There are many other grievances which I have to make, but I do not think I will be justified in detaining the House any longer.

Mr. HOOSEINBHOY A. LALLJEE (Bombay City) : Mr. President, I rise to support the rejection motion of my honourable friend Mr. Nariman. At the outset, Sir, I wish to thank the Honourable the General Member for giving us an opportunity of discussing this amount. I do not agree with the remarks of my honourable friend Mr. Nariman that he has given us this opportunity because he considers the amount to be trifling. Sir, I know the Honourable the General member for some time, and I can assure this House that he is the last to shirk any public or private enquiry. But when I say this, I must also say, Sir, that I was really surprised to find that the Honourable the General Member could not find his way to accept the resolution in this House for appointing a committee composed of members of this House. Last time when I spoke on the subject, I made it quite clear that although the members who formed the advisory committee were no doubt good and reliable men, we wanted a committee composed of members of this House which is the body responsible for the administration of this province and responsible to the taxpayers. I also made it clear, Sir, that we must have a committee composed of honourable members of this House and that this House could not put faith in any committee containing persons who are not responsible to this House. Sir, I have been a member of two committees within the last few years : one was the Rent Act Committee and the other was the Excise Committee. As a member of those two committees, Sir, I did realise the difficulty of the members in the committee who were not members of this honourable House. In such a committee, Sir, it is not possible to come to decisions which can command acceptance in this House. Further, if there are members in the committee who are not members of this House then these members have to rely upon the information that is placed before them and they try to do their best with that information only. Sir, I find from this report that has been placed before us that the first estimate of this reclamation work was made by the Tata Company to the extent of about 5 crores. Then we find that we have got Sir George Buchanan, who makes an estimate of about 3½ crores ; and now we find that the Development Department has put the amount at 7 crores and 12 lakhs. Sir, I am not sure still whether this estimate is correct, and I would also like to draw attention to some other statements in the report in support of my arguments. I find on page 3 that it is stated that the Development Directorate is going to dispose of 265 acres of reclaimed land at Colaba to the Military Department at the price of Rs. 20 a square yard which will on the whole correspond to about Rs. 45 a square yard when developed, and I find on page 4 the statement that

“According to the forecast, on the basis of the present estimates, and assuming the sale of 265 acres to the Military Department in 1927, the actual cost (including interest) per square yard of net developed building area will be in the neighbourhood of Rs. 30, at the time when it is expected that land will begin to be available for sale to the public.”

Now, Sir, I want the Honourable the General Member to explain whether the land, when ready, would be costing Rs. 45 or Rs. 30 per square yard. This means, Sir, a difference of nearly 50 per cent. in the valuation. If that is so, I have got my doubts as to whether, when the scheme is developed, it will not cost much more than even Rs. 45 a square yard. If you look at this scheme, you will notice that no less than about one-third area is being given for military purposes. If that is so, I would ask the Honourable the General Member whether it is not right that he should ask the military people to contribute towards the open spaces, etc., which will give advantage also to their site, and whether that consideration has been taken into account, or whether the whole expenditure will all come out of the taxpayers' money. I need not, Sir, say much about the contribution that we are making to the Government of India and how we are being treated, because we have said it so often and we have said so yesterday also.

Now, coming to the Bombay city, I ask the Honourable the General Member, why he has not given the area with regard to the scheme No. 7, which is Hornby Road scheme. Nor has he given us the details about the 4 schemes that he is going to take up. I find that the Bombay scheme at Dadar is not going to give any profit to the Development Directorate. Then why is the Directorate taking up these schemes? Is it because you want that the municipality or the Improvement Trust should not take up their legitimate work and that you should keep on this Directorate?

Then, Sir, I am one of those who believe that this reclamation scheme ought never to have been taken, and even if it is now taken already, it should be finished soon. But the way in which it ought to be finished must be that we ought not to go in for a larger area than absolutely necessary, and I think the suburban schemes should not have been given up if those were intended for the benefit of the masses and for the purpose of removing congestion from the city. I must say as a member of the Bombay municipal corporation and as a member of the Standing Committee we were surprised when we learnt that the Director of Development had given his sanction to a variation in the cement contract from which we wanted to get out. We were thinking and we are still thinking that that contract was not a good contract, and when we enquired about this variation in the contract it was pointed out to us that it was the province of the Directorate, and therefore without consulting us he has given his sanction and now a great question has arisen. I ask the Honourable the General Member whether it is the right course to adopt, when at the suggestion of the Government, in order to meet the requirements of the Development Department, the municipality and other public bodies joined them and put confidence in them that they should allow variation in the contract without consulting them. Then what faith can we have in this department, if that is the way in which the department is working?

Then, I join my honourable friend Mr. Nariman in his complaint and protest that very little care is taken to utilise the services of Indian engineers. This work of the department is going on for the last four years now; if the honourable member the Director of Development were to try a few of our Indian engineers to take up the work, I am sure they could do that, and since we have now given a lot of encouragement to outsiders for the last three years, I hope and trust that at least some consideration would be shown to the people of the soil who are being taxed and whose people—the taxpayers—are being taxed. I hope, Sir, the Honourable the General Member will give a satisfactory answer with regard to this point and give due consideration to this suggestion. It is a fact well known to everybody that the people of this city look with suspicion at these schemes of the Development Directorate, and it is no use hiding it when it is being talked about everywhere in the city. I hope, Sir, that the Honourable the General Member will even now arrange to have a committee of this House to investigate into all these matters. There is not only the question which my honourable friend from Ahmedabad has referred to, but I do think that there are many questions which should be enquired into and investigated and I do really hope that the Honourable the General Member will not for any reason shirk any enquiry but will agree to it. Until he does so, I am sorry that this House cannot give its full support to his schemes.

Mr. J. C. SWAMINARAYAN (Ahmedabad District) : Mr. President, I wish to expose the fallacies underlying the argument brought forward by the honourable member Mr. A. N. Surve. He said that the cotton cess was paid by the industrialists of Bombay. This would happen if the cultivator who is selling cotton had the power of dictating his terms. But if, on the other hand, the Bombay firms were dictating terms to the cultivator, then in that case the amount of tax by way of the cotton cess could be taken into account and the price could be determined accordingly and practically, therefore, the cess or tax comes from the pockets of the mofussil cultivator. Really speaking, the poor cultivator is not in a position to determine the prices of cotton. The prices of cotton are determined by the world conditions and at the same time Bombay being a great emporium of the cotton trade possessing so many big firms dealing in cotton, they would naturally be able to dictate the terms of the prices of cotton to the cultivators. Really speaking, this cotton cess, it must not be forgotten, is a tax on the cultivators who produce cotton. It is a tax on the producers of cotton and it is not a tax on the industrialists of Bombay. In fact, for providing cheap housing in Bombay city the poor cultivators are being taxed ! It is a case of robbing Peter to pay Paul. Well, Sir, I should point out that this is a department in which there is practically no credit side at all, but throughout there is a debit side. If you look to the receipts, you find that the credit side is empty. The cotton cess is an item which is put forward as a decent income obtained by the Development Department. As I pointed out, this amount comes from the pockets of the cultivators.

Last year they anticipated that they would get 27 lakhs from the sales of land, but they only realised 7 lakhs and that, too, by giving loans to purchasers. This year they expect to get over 9 lakhs from the sale of land. To realise this 9 lakhs from the sale of lands, they have provided 5 lakhs for loans to purchasers in order to entice them to do so. Out of this 5 lakhs, they propose to allot three lakhs for loans to purchasers of land in the Bombay suburban area and 2 lakhs to co-operative housing societies. That is to say, in order to realise 9 lakhs from the sale of land, they have to advance 5 lakhs by way of loans to purchasers from their own pocket. If their expectations are realised according to them, the net receipts will be 4 lakhs after deducting 5 lakhs by way of loan, for which the interest will have to be paid by Government until the loans are recovered from the purchasers. For the realisation of this 4 lakhs, they maintain an establishment costing one lakh. There is a land manager on a salary of Rs. 2,500 and there is an assistant land manager and a personal assistant to the land manager, and so on. All this establishment they maintain in order to realise 4 lakhs of rupees from the sale of land. Last year they expected to realise 13 lakhs from rents ; but they actually realised 7 lakhs and this year they expected to realise 15 lakhs. I do not know what miracle is going to happen and how they are going to realise this 9 lakhs which they have estimated. I myself paid a visit to the Worli chawls. I saw the nice roads the like of which we cannot find anywhere else in Bombay. I thought to myself that the labourers, after their day's hard work, would stroll on the fine roads and enjoy the cool sea breeze. But I found some big people coming in motor cars.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR : The promenade was constructed by the Improvement Trust and not by the Development Department.

Mr. J. C. SWAMINARAYAN : Really speaking I did not find any labourer there. What now happens is that the Government is spending money in Bombay at the cost of the poor cultivators. The fact that this is a famine stricken Presidency was taken into account even by the Meston Committee. They say that this Presidency must provide 63 lakhs every year for famine insurance, because this Presidency is more liable to famine than any other province. Take, for instance, Bengal. They provide there only 2 lakhs towards the famine insurance fund.

[Mr. J. C. Swaminarayan]

Instead of spending the money on schemes like the Bombay Development, the Government would be well-advised in spending that amount on works which will ward off the constant recurrence of famine. Crores after crores are being estimated and spent on the Bombay Development to the great detriment of the cultivators, who are the backbone of the finances of this Presidency. Of course, there is a divided opinion in the report of the committee as to whether the Bombay Reclamation work should be proceeded with or not. They say:

"The committee are aware that the financial results will depend not only on the price at which the land can be sold, but also on the rate of disposal. Whilst some members of the committee are emphatically in favour of advising that the work should be completed in any case, others consider that further information is necessary before a definite recommendation can be made."

That is the advice of even that committee which is not the sort of committee that was expected by the House to be appointed. Really speaking Government have to pay interest to the extent of 77 lakhs on the debts they have incurred. Practically, if you deduct the cotton cess, the income they get from the Development Department will not be more than 15 or 16 lakhs. The result is that the Government pay 60 lakhs of rupees as interest on account of the Bombay Development. If we calculate the interest up to 1932, when it is expected to become a paying concern, the progression of interest will be like 60 lakhs, 63 lakhs, 66 lakhs, 69 lakhs and 72 lakhs, and so on and if we take the mean figure and multiply it by 7, we will find that 5 crores of rupees will be required to cover the interest charges. A further capital of 94 lakhs has been sanctioned this year for the Bombay Reclamation. Nobody knows what will be the end. They say that because they have already spent 4 crores they must go on with the work. But I consider that if they want to spare us, let this 4 crores be written off and the whole department be scraped at this very moment. Then the Presidency will be saved. The amendment of the honourable member Mr. Nariman is very modest and I would request the House to pass the motion for the reduction.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I hope honourable members will remember clearly that within 12 days they have got to go through the whole of the budget.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR (Poona City): Sir, I feel it to be my duty to state to the House the opinion held by a moffusalite like myself regarding the Bombay Development scheme. So far as the demand for this department is concerned, I may frankly say at the outset that I was considerably surprised at the reduction which the Honourable the General Member has made therein of his own accord. During the course of the debate on the budget, we were repeatedly told by Member after Member and Minister after Minister that the whole budget was so framed as not to admit of the reduction of a single pie; but contrary to all those professions, I was surprised to find the other day the Honourable the Minister in charge of Local Self-government consenting to a cut of Rs. 4 lakhs, and the Honourable Member for the General Department now consenting to a cut of Rs. 10,66,000.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : We gave the reasons.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR : Whatever the reasons may be, it clearly shows that the budget is not inelastic and that it must have had a margin for reductions and omissions. And the question now is whether the cut that is proposed by the honourable member Mr. Nariman is one that can be effected in the sum demanded, and with that object in view I propose for the consideration of the honourable the General Member certain figures. It cannot be gainsaid that unlike the last year the Government this year have not demanded an unprecedentedly large sum for the Bombay Development scheme ; and if they desire to have any definite suggestions for reductions and omissions from the non-official members, I would put forward certain suggestions which, I submit, do not and will not conflict with any of the schemes regarding the Bombay development. For instance, if the Honourable the General Member will kindly refer to page 139, he will see that there are three items proposed to be spent for works not yet commenced. The first item is of Rs. 9,99,000, the second item is of Rs. 2,80,000, and the third item is of Rs. 5 lakhs. These items are demanded for works not commenced. They come up to the total figure of Rs. 17,17,000. I do not see why these works should not be postponed till the next year. There is also another item of Rs. 5,55,000, for acquisition of land in the suburban tracts. We all know the history of the suburban schemes and the fate which they have met with ; and in view of the experience that we have got regarding them, it is extremely undesirable to acquire further lands and spend such a huge sum as Rs. 5,55,000 for the development of the suburbs. There is also another item of Rs. 9,11,560, demanded for repairs and maintenance of the schemes completed uptill now. We know, Sir, of the nature of the so-called repairs and maintenance of the works already done. I am sure that if the Honourable the General Member really applies himself to the task of cutting down this item, he could very well bring it down to Rs. 5,11,000, that is to say, he could easily effect a cut of Rs. 5 lakhs. Then the sum of Rs. 94 lakhs is demanded for works in progress ; and if he is seriously for cutting down the expenditure he can cut it by Rs. 14 lakhs without the least injury to the works taken in hand. From all these items, we can have a total cut of Rs. 41 lakhs. This is one point of view from which we can look at the sum demanded for the Bombay Development Department. But there is also another point of view, and it is as to whether or no this department will ultimately conduce to the welfare of the citizens of this presidency. Sir, I am constitutionally not so made as to bring about an artificial demarcation of interests between the villagers on one side and the residents of towns and cities on the other ; and so I do not propose to follow the line of argument that has been adopted by the previous speakers. I do say and hold that the city of Bombay has got a claim upon the finances of this presidency. But the real question which was only indirectly mooted by the mover of this motion, is to my mind not so much the expenditure itself, but something else. It is as to whether the interests of the people of this presidency are and will be subserved by this scheme. Looked at from that viewpoint, one cannot but say that they are not and would not be so subserved. Let us take, for instance, the various officers that have been employed in this department. I have made a rough calculation in this behalf, and I find that the Bombay Development scheme supports in all 79 officers, getting more than Rs. 600 each, and out of them a very small number of posts has fallen to the share of the Indians. Personally I am not against large sums of money being spent on this department, provided they are usefully spent, and provided they contribute to the development of the indigenous talent in the presidency. But, as a matter of fact we find, Sir, that out of the 79 officers, there are hardly 10 per cent. to 20 per cent. of the officers who are in charge of the responsible work; and there is nothing in the whole budget to indicate that the low paid Indian officers are in the process of taking their proper place in the economy of the Bombay Development schemes. There is also one more consideration, which, I hope, the honourable House will not fail to take into account.

It cannot be denied that the administration of the Bombay Development Department is looked upon with great suspicion and distrust by the public at large. The public may be right or may not be right in doing so. It never demanded an advisory committee or its report; but it has demanded and is still demanding a committee of enquiry. And I really fail to see why the Government should fight shy of such a committee, and thus debar in a sense the public from getting into the inner working of the Development Department and from ascertaining the truth or otherwise of the various scandals regarding it. I would therefore request the non-official benches to insist upon the appointment of a committee of enquiry, in order to enable them to have a clear idea as to the working of the Development Department and as to the manner in which the money has been spent in the past and is proposed to be spent in future. With these remarks, Sir, I support the motion.

Mr. J. BAPTISTA (Bombay City, North): Sir, I understand that we are at liberty to discuss the general policy of this department on the present occasion. I do not know whether, in discussing the general policy of the department, I could say something about the Public Works Department. It seems to me that originally there was only one Public Works Department. It was like the spendthrift member of the executive family. Now, the Public Works Department appears to me to be divided into two or more departments. The Development Directorate is one of them. But it is not directly under the Public Works Department and so it does not come under the Minister who is in charge of the Public Works Department. It is separate. Now, that separation may not be justifiable under the Reforms Act. But my first complaint is that this separation is not necessary. It is doubly expensive to have two persons dealing with public works. Whoever represents it in the Council, being a layman, he is rather bound to act upon the advice of engineers in technical matters for lack of engineering knowledge. This often happens here. I find my honourable friend Mr. Cowaji, when he is put a question, is not able to answer it unless he turns to Sir Lawless Hepper, as a sort of a whispering gallery. Therefore it seems to me unnecessary waste of time, unnecessary waste of money in this division. Public Works ought to be under one responsible officer who ought to be the head of the Public Works Department as originally started. I do not know again whether the Barrage Director or whatever you may call him is another Public Works Department separate from this. I cannot make out whether the Irrigation Works so far as the Sukkur Barrage is concerned do or do not come under the Development Director or whether the Sukkur Barrage comes under the Public Works Department. However I know this much that it is not under the control of our Minister ; whether it is directly under some separate head or under someone else I do not know.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: It is in charge of the General Member.

Mr. J. BAPTISTA : So the Irrigation Department is under the General Member. I know that originally the Public Works portfolio used to be held by His Excellency the Governor. But now, the old lady—the Public Works Department—is in charge of the Honourable Minister and the young lady—the Development Department —is flung into the arms of my honourable friend Mr. COWASJI.

Now I shall deal with the Development Department so far as it is concerned with the backbay reclamation scheme. In my opinion there ought not to have been any Development Department and the development of Bombay ought to have been entrusted to the Bombay Municipal Corporation. But coming to the schemes, they are divided into two parts : one is the Backbay Reclamation and the other is Housing. I shall leave the Suburban scheme for the present out of question. I will deal with the Backbay Reclamation and Housing. So far as the Backbay Reclamation is concerned it has been severely criticised both inside this House and outside. It is partly due to the prejudice and partly to the natural anxiety of the people of Bombay. The prejudice is inherited. The people have not forgotten the old Backbay Reclamation and the misfortune that overtook them during the share mania of old Bombay. We all know that when the small enterprise of the Colaba Reclamation was undertaken by the Improvement Trust, Sir Dinsha Wacha thundered against it, yet though the scheme was small it turned out to be the best of all. At present this question is not whether the scheme should have been undertaken or not. It is useless to discuss that. It has been undertaken. It is a bold scheme. It required the spirit of adventure to embark upon it. If it succeeds, well and good ; if it fails it will be most unfortunate. But to-day the question is not whether we shall embark upon it, but whether we shall proceed further with it. We must remember that four crores and a half are spent already. If we stop it now, these 4½ crores will be thrown into the sea just as millions were thrown into sea for war. There is nothing to show for them except the wall stretching into the sea. Therefore the question reduces itself to this : Shall we have any part of the 4½ crores by proceeding with the work, or shall we throw away more good money after the bad ? We will be perfectly justified in stopping it if by proceeding the loss exceeds 4½ crores already spent.

[Mr. J. Baptista]

The committee was asked to express an opinion upon this point and my honourable friend has referred to the committee's report and particularly to my dissenting minute. I must confess I was thoroughly surprised and disappointed that the majority could not say without further consideration that 4½ crores will not be lost by going on with the scheme, what makes it worse is that the majority was composed of the officials themselves including the Development Director. I myself am one of those who can express positively and without the slightest hesitation the opinion that not only would we recoup these four crores and half by proceeding, but that there will be a profit, large or small. But if the officials themselves hesitate and are unable to express a definite opinion that the spent 4½ crores will not be lost, then the General Member would be justified in proceeding with the scheme until he has received their final opinion.

That is the position in which we are placed to-day by Report of the Committee and the Honourable the General Member so far as the Development Directorate is concerned. I do not think that it is a very satisfactory position. I do not think that one can take pride in that position, that the honourable member cannot say to-day that 4 crores will never be lost and give us a guarantee against such a loss. That is the undesirable position and must excite anxiety in the minds of the people of Bombay.

The next point is, shall we sanction the grant? So far as the figures are concerned it is useless for us to go into these matters. You may cut the budget but if you cut it this year you will have to provide it next year. You will save nothing by cutting, not even the interest. I have not the slightest doubt that although the budget shows large expenditure, it is impossible to spend half the grants demanded. It is useless to make cuts. What we ought to scrutinise carefully is whether the estimates are going to be exceeded. So far as the estimate itself is concerned and the expenditure, I must confess that the committee that is appointed has not investigated this matter. They are not in a position to estimate whether expenditure is rightly incurred, or whether there is any extravagance in any department. The committee is not appointed for that purpose. Personally I feel that these departments are very extravagantly paid. We know that the Director of Development is paid 6 thousand rupees. It is the highest salary after Governor's. It is higher than what is paid to the executive members of this Council. I do not grudge him that salary, but I should like to know whether it is the price of ability, or the price of honesty; of course it is absolutely necessary that the Director should be above suspicion and that the salary should be such as to ensure that he is above suspicion. But is such an extravagant salary necessary for ensuring honesty? Similarly the salaries paid to the engineers are very high. Besides, there are too many of them. I do not think that it is the function of the committee to investigate this aspect of expenditure, namely, whether the establishment can be curtailed. But that is one of the ways by which the expenditure can be reduced. I am one of those who think that it is not right for this Council or any committee of this Council to examine the detail working of this scheme. Nevertheless the public distrust is so great that it is necessary to investigate the expenditure and administration generally by a thoroughly well representative committee into full powers to go into the whole aspect of the question. It may be that the scheme will be profitable, but that does not justify extravagance. Our duty is to reduce extravagance and increase gain if practicable. Now, Sir, I have done with the Development Department. Of course, so far as the Sukkur Barrage is concerned, that does not come under the Development scheme : it will come under some other. I will not say anything about it now : I will say what I have to say when it comes on.

I am particularly concerned, Sir, with the housing scheme. Sir, you know that this Development Directorate really originated from the housing problem. Years ago the Governor was attracted by the conditions of the poor people of the city, and you know, Sir, how he proposed to solve it by the creation of the Improvement Trust ; how the Improvement Trust was designed to bring light and air and some sunshine into the houses of the poor people but when the Improvement Trust neglected it, we amended the Improvement Trust Act in order to find money for employers of labour in order that they might do their duty by their labourers. I think myself that the millowners and the other employers of the city were at one time, when the boom was on, quite prepared to undertake the housing of their employees provided they got money from Government at 4, 5 or 5½ per cent. interest. His Excellency Sir George Lloyd actually endeavoured to ascertain how far the millowners would be prepared to undertake this liability and I think, Sir, the Honourable Mr. Cowasji played a very prominent part in this matter of investigating how far they were prepared to do so, and he realised that they were quite prepared to do so. I do not know what advice he gave to Government. He has told me something in private which I am not entitled to disclose because it was confidential. The millowners were then in a flourishing condition. There was an industrial boom and they were selling shares of the face value of Rs. 500 for Rs. 2,500 or even Rs. 5,000. They were therefore quite prepared to build houses for their workmen if Government would lend them at 6 per cent. It was at that time that His Excellency the Governor,—perhaps upon the advice of my honourable friend (Mr. Cowasji Jehangir)—instead of getting the millowners to undertake the scheme decided to get it done departmentally. His Excellency the Governor lost the opportunity : he should have imposed the obligation upon the millowners, by letting them have the money at 6 per cent. If he had done so, we would have been perfectly safe and they would have done the work. A great mistake, a great blunder was committed by Government when they undertook the scheme themselves. Well, Government undertook the scheme, and they asked for money to build 50,000 tenements. We were all very happy ; we supported them ; we held public meetings ; and we asked people to subscribe to the loan liberally and Government undertook to construct 50,000 tenements for workmen. Well, what has happened to-day to this housing scheme ? The Honourable the General Member says "Oh! the census shows a reduction of occupants of one-room tenements from 70 per cent. of 1911 to 66 per cent. of 1921 census." He adds "many tenements in Directorate chawls are vacant". Therefore he concludes that 50,000 one-room tenements are not required. The programme is accordingly suspended and only 16,000 tenements are to be built now. I have studied the census; we have got to study the census. And we know that one-room tenements, by putting up a little washing place or a kitchen is easily converted into two-room tenements. This has happened in Bombay. The number of occupants in the so-called two-room tenements has increased from 10 to 14 per cent. in the exact equivalent of the reduction in one-room tenements. But the distressing fact is that the number of people living in rooms occupied by 6 persons and over has increased from 104,000 to 423,000 thus resulting in increased overcrowding. It seems to me any flimsy excuse is good enough for Government to get rid of the undertaking to build 50,000 one-room tenements. I do not like this pretence that rooms are not required. I should prefer an honest statement "no money". It is quite clear, Sir, that the original estimates have gone wrong; we are told the estimates did not originally include the value of land; it only included the construction of chawls. It may be so. I do not know. But the engineer who failed to take into account the value of the land in the cost of construction was not worthy of his hire. At all events nobody ever expected that the tenements would fetch the economic rent. That the economic rent would not be realised was recognised by Government from the very beginning. The cotton cess was imposed deliberately for the purpose of meeting the deficiency. I do not know whether the cotton cess that is available for this purpose is utilised to the full. (Mr. A. N. Surve: It is not utilised.) If they have not, then of course they are not doing their proper duty. They should have utilised it to the fullest extent possible, reduced the rent to that extent so that the workmen could come and live there. Instead of doing this the Directorate is repeating the mistake of the Improvement Trust. Originally the Trust undertook to build a large number of chawls; but they did not build them. They built only a few. They suspended chawl-building, but the most distressful aspect is that when the cost of construction rose high the Trust speeded its programme of building. The result was we had fewer tenements at a most higher cost. You know, Sir, what happened in the Trust—and now history repeats itself and we hear the Honourable Mr. Cowasji Jehangir say there is no necessity for 50,000 tenements. Now, Sir, any one with the commonsense even of a beetle would know, that the people do not go there because they cannot afford to pay the rent. Some people have quoted the statistics of the Labour Office. I have gone through the statistics of the Labour Office. They say they earn Rs. 50 each. They do not earn even Rs. 30. They say the whole family earns. But what is the whole family? Surely, the father, the mother and two children do not all earn. Whoever heard such nonsense? Well, Sir, the truth is that they cannot afford to pay the rent. What I advise the Development Director to do is this : reduce the rent to the extent that the deficit can be met from the total now available from the cess, and see whether the chawls are full or not. If they are full, they will not suffer the loss from vacancies: It is absurd to keep 40 per cent. of the tenements vacant. It is better to rent them at Rs. 5 and let them be full. Let the poor people live there. If you build more chawls and need more money, then increase the tax. But as the times are hard, use the total money now available for the purpose of reducing the rent for these poor people. Now, Sir, I do not know whether what my honourable friend said is a fact, but I am anxious that the rural areas should not be taxed. I do not know whether the incidence of this cess is going to them. We thought that it would come from the trade and we thought that the trade was able to bear it. Whatever that is, Sir, this tax is not being utilised for the purpose for which it was intended. I say to Government : use it ; do not keep it waiting in your strong boxes at the present moment. That is not the right way to use that money. By and by if you see that you cannot meet the deficit caused by the building of chawls and the lowering of rents, increase the cess. I realise that it will not be possible to do so now. I realise, Sir, that the mill industry is passing through a time when we ought to give them further time. I wish that the excise duty could be removed. Whatever that is, I do not see any immediate necessity to tax them to-day. Let the honourable member give an undertaking that he will use the money for the purpose of reducing the rent so that the vacant rooms may all be filled. That is the right thing to do, and I hope they will do it.

That, Sir, brings me to one serious matter. We all know how far it is an effort for the workmen to make both ends meet. The Abkari department gives them no food ; the Abkari department gives them drink. I will deal with the Abkari department later. At present it is well known that the mortality in one-room tenements is very heavy. It is well known that the infant mortality in the city is the largest, 660 out of 1,000. To-day we are told it is 440. I do not really understand how it could drop from 660 to 440 in a couple of years, because the condition of the city has not improved. Therefore, Sir, I appeal to the Honourable Member and I appeal to the honourable members on this side that for the sake of humanity, in order to save the lives of these men—because the more lives are saved the more produce will be forthcoming, and in that way contribute to the wealth of the city—from a humanitarian point of view I appeal to them to put these chawls in proper order and to give the men an opportunity of dwelling in these tenements. I say the present policy of the directorate is absolutely unjustifiable, prejudicial to the interests of the city, and not in accordance with their own undertaking. Every one knows that the chawls are built for men who are not utilising them. Other people are utilising them.

After all, Sir, trade cannot complain, because when the workmen are employed here and housed in this way, it saves the wages ; otherwise the employers might have to pay the wages. They act and react in so many ways that it is not possible to come to any definite conclusion. But I ask, Sir, my honourable friend not to keep this money away, utilise it, advertise that you will give these rooms at the lowest possible rent so that the difference can be made up from this amount which can be available. If he does that, the people concerned will be content and will bless him, and I myself would be ready to bless him for that. I am quite sure that this side of the House is quite willing to allow the Honourable the General Member to spend this money in the way I have suggested. Now let not my words be "a cry in the wilderness." Let them fructify in the heart of the General Member and he will deserve the blessing and gratitude of the industrial workers of Bombay.

Sir LAWLESS HEPPER : Mr. President, as an Executive Officer of Government it is not my business to discuss questions of Government policy. But I will try and deal with certain points affecting the work of the Development Directorate which have been raised in the course of this debate. The honourable mover has allowed himself to make vague charges, which he is quite unable to substantiate, against a number of responsible Government officials. I think, Sir, that this House will agree that it is very much to be regretted that such charges should be made. It is perfectly well known that, all over the world, cases of corruption and so on occur, and it may be within my honourable friend's experience that he has met them more often than I have. But at the same time it seems to me to be absolutely wrong that mud should be thrown in this sort of way, merely in the hope that some of it will stick. In my opinion, Sir,—and I speak with the experience of 31 years of service in this country—there is only one person more despicable than the anonymous letter-writer, and that is the man who is prepared to make vague charges and insinuations against the integrity of public servants, charges which he has no real reasons to believe are justified, and which he is not in a position to prove.

Having said so much, Sir, I will try and deal with the very few and unimportant specific cases to which the honourable mover of this motion has referred. The first case is the old one of the steel reinforcement for the foundations of the Worli chawls. This has already been discussed in detail on a former occasion and I should have thought that my honourable friend was fully aware of the position. He says that, owing to a mistake of one of the Directorate officers, instead of ordering from England a large quantity of steel bars of $\frac{5}{8}$ th of an inch diameter the bars were ordered of $\frac{3}{8}$ th of an inch diameter, and that, as a result of that mistake, a further lot of $\frac{5}{8}$ th of an inch diameter steel bars had to be ordered and the $\frac{3}{8}$ th of an inch diameter material is now lying surplus and rusting. I say, Sir, that that statement is absolutely incorrect, and, knowing that the honourable member must be aware of the facts, I submit that in saying that it is incorrect I am using language of considerable moderation. The actual position is that when the mistake was discovered, the design of the piles was altered so as to make use of the $\frac{3}{8}$ th of an inch diameter material, and, owing to the increased section of the steel, it was possible to decrease the amount of cement. The result was that the piles cost exactly the same as they would have done if the ½th material had been used, and they are equally as strong. It is true that there is a certain quantity of surplus material lying at Matunga. But that surplus is due to the curtailment of the programme, and is in no way due to the mistake to which the honourable member has referred. I might add, Sir, that as the steel was imported from England free of duty, and having regard to the duty which is now imposed, Government do not expect to make any loss on that surplus. Then, Sir, the honourable member referred to the question of the cement contracts. Last year one of the cement companies was unable to supply in accordance with its contract with Government. The agreement with Government specifically provides what is to be done in cases of that kind, and the share of this particular firm was transferred to another firm in strict accordance with the terms of the agreement. Government were not free, under the agreement, to buy the share of this defaulting company in the open market.

Then, Sir, I think the honourable member referred to tenders, and complained that contracts were not always awarded to the lowest tenderer. That is perfectly true. No authority which calls for tenders ever undertakes to give the contract to the lowest or to any tenderer. There must be some discrimination in cases of that kind. But there are very few instances within my knowledge, in the Directorate, where contracts have not been given to the lowest tenderer. Contracts have been awarded to tenderers other than the lowest only when it was definitely in the interests of Government to do so.

Then, Sir, the honourable member has referred to a personal matter. It is in connection with establishment charges, and since he, and some other honourable members also have done so, I may be pardoned if I refer to this matter myself. Astonishment has been expressed that my salary is Rs. 6,000 a month. Members may be aware that before I was invited to take up my present appointment I had been for twelve or fourteen years the Agent of the G. I. P. Railway. In that appointment my pay was Rs. 4,000 a month. I was also in receipt of a military pension. I was also receiving the benefits of the railway provident fund as well as various allowances. My emoluments totalled approximately Rs. 5,000 a month. I was most reluctant to leave that appointment, having been engaged in railway service all my life, and I did not feel that I was called upon to do so unless I was offered a substantial increase. The increase I was offered was a salary of Rs. 6,000 a month, inclusive of all allowances, and entailing the suspension of my pension. The agreement was for a term of 5 years, which expires next November. In the absence of further sanction to the present scale of salary the permanent pay of the appointment then becomes Rs. 4,000 per mensem. I have recently been informed by Government that in view of the present conditions they would not be prepared to go to the Secretary of State for an extension of the agreement under which the Director receives Rs. 6,000 a month. I have been asked whether I would be willing to continue in the appointment for another two years on the sanctioned permanent pay of Rs. 4,000 with a reduction of 10 per cent., on the salary on account of house-rent, or a net salary of Rs. 3,600. I have informed Government that I am prepared to accept that rate of salary. I think that is sufficient answer to the honourable member who asked what retrenchment is proposed in my own case.

The honourable member representing Karachi city has referred to the fact that our receipts are much less than we expected. I do not think Government can be blamed for the depressed conditions which exist at the present time. This condition applies to all business concerns. If we have not realised our expectations, there are many industrialists in Bombay who are in the same position. But whilst it is true that our receipts have been less than our anticipations it should also be noted as has been pointed out by the Honourable Member in charge of the Department, that we have made great reductions, and are still trying to make reductions, in our expenditure.

Then, Sir, the honourable member representing Bombay city has referred to the remarks in the report of the advisory committee in connection with the proposed sale of 265 acres of reclaimed land at Colaba to the military department. He pointed out that the proposal is to sell land at Rs. 20 per square yard whereas it is mentioned in another part of the report that when the reclamation is completed and we are in a position to begin to sell land to the public the land will have cost about Rs. 30 per square yard. This arises out of the difference between gross area and net developed area. We propose to sell about 265 acres of land at a price of Rs. 20 per square yard overall. But that corresponds as stated in the report to Rs. 45 per square yard in terms of net developed area. Suppose the land is not sold to the military but to the public. First of all you will have to deduct say one-third of the area for roads and open spaces. Then, you will have to spend a considerable amount of money in constructing roads, drains, etc., and time will be taken for these roads to be made during which period you will be paying interest. For the reasons indicated it will be found that a rate of Rs. 45 per square yard of net building area corresponds with Rs. 20 per square yard of gross area.

Now, Sir, the honourable member representing the Ahmedabad district has stated that the roads at Worli are too wide and costly. As a matter of fact we have not made any roads there. Those roads belong to the Improvement Trust. We have entered into an agreement with that body that they should construct two main roads throughout the area, one of a breadth of 60 feet and the other of a breadth of 40 feet. They are the only roads that have been made, and I think the honourable member must have been referring to one of those roads, or to the Improvement Trust seaface road. We have to construct small roads to serve separate groups of chawls at Worli but we have not yet started their construction.

The honourable member for Kaira was very lugubrious about the possibility of getting any one to reside in the chawls we have built. He asked how we are going to get the 15 lakhs we have estimated as receipts next year. We cannot say what we will get. Our estimate must be made on an intelligent appreciation of what is likely to happen. We know that during the coming year the whole of these chawls will be completed. There is no doubt that the locality is not popular at present, because construction is still going on. As I have already stated the smaller roads have not yet been completed, and the open spaces have not yet been laid out. The area is very extensive. It has not yet been levelled and building materials are still lying about. There is no communication either by tram or by rail. I do not think it is possible to form an estimate of what the future prospects of the scheme will be until it is more advanced. This time next year we shall be in a better position to say whether we are likely to get the rents we expect.

The honourable member for Bombay City, North, complained of the auctioning of shops in chawls and also that his letter on this subject had not been placed before the advisory committee. The letter was placed before the advisory committee and, it was decided that the system of auctioning shops, followed by the Improvement Trust, was a correct one. The honourable member's argument was that the excessive rate of rent that the shopkeeper would be compelled to pay in auction would be reflected in the high prices he would charge for commodities. There is a fallacy in this, for if the shopkeeper tries to sell his commodities above the rates that other shopkeepers charge, he will not be able to sell his commodities at all. It is an economic question. If the shopkeeper charges a higher rate people will not buy from him.

I may refer to certain remarks made by my honourable friend Mr. Baptista. He says that we shall never get the chawls filled until the rent is reduced. I think it is necessary to consider the question as to what are the classes for whom these chawls were built. The object of Government was to complete 50,000 tenements for the working classes and if the working classes are the millhands, and artisans of many kinds then I think they can, in most cases, pay the rent we ask. But I quite agree with the honourable member that, besides what can strictly be termed working classes, there is a large floating population of casual labourers in Bombay which is at present very largely unemployed. Most of these people are earning 12 annas to 14 annas a day and I do not see how it is possible, when the cost of building is so high, to provide sanitary housing accommodation in Bombay at a rent which they can afford to pay. I think, Sir, so far as the actual and real working classes are concerned, they can afford to pay these rents, and I believe that when the schemes are completed it will be found that they will do so. I have nothing more to say on the various points that have been raised. I trust this House will not accept the motion.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD : Has the Director of Development got anything to say about the question of Indianisation ?

Sir LAWLESS HEPPEL : The reason why the number of Indians in the higher posts appears to be very low is that the majority of our high-paid appointments are in the reclamation branch, and they are connected with the working of the dredging plant. Now, it is not possible for us to get, at present anyhow, Indians who are experts, or who understand the working of this class of plant. In fact it is with the greatest difficulty that we have been able to get employés who are trained to this work in England, and some of the men that we got out recently have not had much experience, and are only now becoming used to the working of this machinery. In the case of the housing and suburban divisions, we have now two Superintending Engineers, and we shall shortly, in about six months, have only one. We have six executive engineers, of whom four are Indians, and of the assistant engineers all are Indians. I am hoping that we may find increased opportunities for Indian engineers in the Reclamation Branch. We have two assistant engineers in that branch, one of whom has been very favourably reported on, and I hope that an opportunity will occur before long for promoting him. As I have already pointed out in the executive grades, and in the grades below, except in the reclamation branch, the Directorate is almost entirely staffed by Indian officers.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The honourable member the Director of Development in the course of his speech read out some remarks from a piece of paper. I was unable to follow those remarks, but there is an impression produced upon my mind that it was personally offensive to the honourable mover of the motion. I hope no such remarks were made intentionally as regards the honourable member.

Sir LAWLESS HEPPER: I was expressing my feelings in the matter. I had certainly no intention of.....

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I have to draw the honourable member's attention to Chapter V, Standing Order 7 (2) (ii) and (iii) of the Standing Orders, under which no honourable member is allowed to make a personal charge against a member or use offensive expressions. I did not quite follow those remarks; otherwise, I would have called attention to them. I cannot allow any offensive remarks to be made against any honourable member.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI: I wanted to raise this point when the honourable member.....

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: As those words are in writing, will the honourable member read them out again?

Sir LAWLESS HEPPER: Yes, Sir. What I said was: "In my opinion, and I speak with the experience of 31 years of service in this country, there is only one person more despicable than the anonymous letter-writer, and that is the man who is prepared to make vague charges and insinuations against the integrity of public servants, charges which he has no real reason to believe are justified and which he is not in a position to prove." I had no intention of making any offensive remarks against anybody, but I submit that in view of the statements which were made by the honourable member (Mr. Nariman) and by the honourable member representing the Ahmedabad Millowners' Association, I was quite justified in using those words.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Those words are clearly offensive. I must hold that they come within the Standing Order which I have mentioned. If the honourable member intended to apply those words to these two honourable members, as he has admitted he did, I will ask him to withdraw them.

Sir LAWLESS HEPPEL : In view of your ruling, Sir, I am quite prepared to withdraw the words.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN (Bombay City, South) : Mr. President, I may frankly state that in the course of my speech, while referring to the salary of the Director of Development, I had paid him a personal compliment. I stated that he was a gentleman of very amiable character and amiable disposition, and I also stated that I should desire that his example might be emulated by some other gentlemen on the opposite benches. I find, Sir, very shortly after those remarks, that those remarks were not deserved. So far as this debate is concerned, as the leader of the Swaraj party said yesterday, I am not going to follow the example of the Director of Development. I would remember the words which the leader of the Swaraj party spoke yesterday that we must remember that we are Indians and that courtesy, personal particularly, so far as personal allegations are concerned, is inborn amongst Indians. If it is wanting in other nations, we cannot help it. But I must refute, and very emphatically refute, the charge which the Director of Development has sought to make against me without indulging in any strong language, since he has already withdrawn his remarks. I might have used much stronger language.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : That incident is closed.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN : I have treated it as closed, but it is open to me to refute the charge which I consider to be unfounded. He says that I made vague allegations without having any reasons to believe them and without being prepared to prove them. I refute those charges, and I will ask the honourable House, particularly this side of the House, to judge whether I am in the right or they (the Government) are right. I never expressed my inability or reluctance to prove them. I demanded a public enquiry, which I have been calling for for the last 12 months. And I have had a resolution passed, asking, requesting, appealing to give me an opportunity to prove those charges. They refused it. Does it lie in their mouth now to say that I am not prepared to prove the charges? I am prepared to prove them at any moment, but give me an opportunity to do so. They can indulge in any number of abuses they like, but not having given me an opportunity to prove my charges, it does not lie in their mouth to say that I cannot prove my charges. I have got information and materials, but if Government are not prepared to give me an opportunity to prove them, they must take the verdict of the public which is certainly against them and which they deserve. (Interruption). I am not going to take any notice of the mutterings from the other side.

Coming to the merits of the question and the charges that I have made, I find, Sir, that they have been admitted. All the charges have been admitted, although they were "indefinite and vague". What is the explanation ? Has the honourable member the Director of Development, in the heat and excitement of the language that he has used.....

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Please do not refer to it now.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN : In the heat and excitement forgotten to make any defence ? What is the explanation that he has given of the charges that I have made, not vague but specific, not anonymous but made in person by me standing before you, call it despicable or what you like. I am here to discharge my duty. The charges are specific, made in my own person, openly, and without any anonymity about them. How have the charges been met ? They have not explained how that little, trifling error occurred. What is the explanation that we want—how the figure in an indent which was already prepared by another officer happened to be changed and altered by another officer. The facts are admitted that the figure was altered, perhaps by some method or other, but the loss which would undoubtedly occur may have been averted. On account of the cleverness of some other gentleman, it is plausible that the loss is averted, but the fact remains that an indent figure was deliberately altered, but still the bars did arrive and they were of the size which was not required. On account of this serious mistake they did alter their plan. These are facts. No matter the loss. The mistake occurred and the question is, was it a real mistake or was it anything else ?

Then the honourable member the Development Director has stated that there have been instances in the very few cases and that is my complaint that the heads of the departments, have not kept themselves in direct touch with the inner working of the department so as to be able to correct the mistakes which they might have been able to detect. He accepted that there has been a loss ; ordinarily, in other commercial firms we would have expected greater care than these trustees of public funds. He has admitted that it is a transaction which resulted in not accepting the tender of the lowest standard ; I ask whether in the ordinary course of business such a transaction would not require some explanation. The facts have been admitted that they have accepted higher tenders for good reasons. But are they good reasons ? I do say that the tenders were accepted at much higher rate than Rs. 30,000 per chawl, while lower tenders were not accepted. From our point of view we state that there were very good reasons. You did not give us these reasons, you did not give us an opportunity to examine your records or those gentlemen as to why they did not accept the lower tenders, and you turn round and say that we are not prepared to prove the charge. I refute that charge. I cannot state to-day what I have stated before, but I am prepared under all the circumstances standing alone as I do, with all the record and the staff in their possession, I am still prepared to prove if they give us an opportunity that the assertions that I have made are true.

Now, Sir, as regards the other points that have been raised I was surprised that so many arguments have been raised, the honourable member from Poona pointed out figure by figure how retrenchment can be effected. I am glad to hear the announcement that the salary of the Director is to be reduced. I would have been more glad if I had heard that he had made that proposal voluntarily. But as it is this reduction has been imposed upon him and that loses all its grace, but all the same we are glad that a little saving is effected. But I regret that there is no other saving which is expected by similar reduction made from the salaries of other officers.

[Mr. K. F. Nariman]

Then, Sir, we are waiting for that announcement even if it could be made after a few months about the claims of Indians so far as the services are concerned. Apart from the reduction in the salary of the staff I am more anxious to hear an announcement of the claims of Indians. My honourable friend from Poona has put a pertinent question on the point. He must be aware of the feelings in the country. It is Indian money spent on Indian soil. It is not such a special department as they could not find Indians to manage. It might have been so in the beginning, but I can name a number of Indians in this city and that several of these gentlemen are ready to be employed in this department. I do not wish to make out a racial question. I put it on the question of claim. They claim it in their own country. Other nations claim it in their own country. Why should not Indians claim it in their own country? So far as services are concerned first preference should be given to Indians, and failing Indians it matters not whether they come from Timbuctoo or any other country.

As regards the final vote, I am not going to appeal to any honourable member. I will not canvas for a single vote. Honourable members know their responsibility. They have heard both the sides and I leave it to their good judgment to judge which side they vote for. I am addressing both the sides. I hope they will give a vote that will only enhance their self-respect in the sense that your resolution has been flouted and no reason has been given, and secondly on the merits I claim that this motion should be accepted.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: Mr. President, my honourable friend Mr. Nariman has made or tried to make a great point of Government not having appointed a committee in response to his resolution. But, Mr. President, that is old history, and I did not wish to rake up that old subject again, and although I merely alluded to it in my opening remarks, my honourable friend compels me to again remind the House of the circumstances under which that resolution was carried and what undertaking I gave on that occasion. The resolution which has been submitted to the Advisory Committee is a very wide one, and gives every member of the committee an opportunity of going into the working of the department in detail. Such a resolution.....

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR: Sir, on a point of information, will the Honourable the General Member state what were the terms of reference to the Advisory Committee?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: I will read them:

"That in view of the conclusions arrived at during the period of war boom that the land available in Bombay was inadequate having proved erroneous, this Council recommends to Government that a committee with a non-official majority, be forthwith appointed to enquire into the activities of the Development Department as to how far and in what directions such activities should be continued or eliminated."

[Mr. Cowasji Jehangir]

I contend that this reference gives a member of the Advisory Committee every right to go into every detail as to the expenditure on suburban schemes or any other schemes. Well, Sir, when the honourable member Mr. Nariman moved his resolution, some honourable member from the opposite side desired that honourable members of this Council should be associated with the Advisory Committee, and on account of the unanimous expression of opinion from all honourable members on the opposite benches, Government invited four honourable members from the opposite side to join this committee to dispose of this particular reference. One of these honourable members was my honourable friend Mr. Nariman. Another was my honourable friend Mr. Hooseinbhooy A. Lalljee. These honourable members refused to serve on the Committee, and now the honourable member Mr. Nariman comes forward and asks and demands to know why they were not given an opportunity of going into all his allegations. He has had the opportunity and he has not availed himself of it, and I contend he has deliberately not availed himself of it. There may be reasons best known to himself ; but I feel now after his speech to-day that he only desires to make allegations in this House, vague allegations, and does not wish to place himself in the position of being called upon to prove them down to the hilt. And that is the reason why he refused.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR : Sir, on a point of information, was the Advisory Committee to which the honourable member referred appointed in terms of that resolution of this House or prior to that resolution ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangir : My honourable friend Mr. Jayakar knows the circumstances of the case completely, and he has heard the debate which took place. It was my honourable friend who suggested that these four names should be added to the committee ; that committee was appointed long ago ; the reference that I have spoken about was made before the resolution was moved. But the four gentlemen were invited after the resolution was passed.

Mr. HOOSEINBHOY A. LALLJEE : Sir, the Honourable the General Member has said that I have refused to join the Advisory Committee. I say I was never invited to join. I wanted to join a committee that was suggested by this House ; and if the Honourable the General Member will read my letter, the Council will be convinced.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN : If you will permit me, Sir, I want to give an explanation. When this invitation was issued to me, I made a reference to Government whether they were prepared to have my resolution referred to the committee. I made it quite clear in the correspondence that if Government gave me an opportunity of investigating into the working of the department I was prepared to join it, but that I was not prepared to join a merely advisory committee to consider whether the works should proceed or not. My suggestion to have my resolution referred to the committee was not accepted, and the investigation was not accepted. That was the reason why I could not accept the invitation.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : Mr. President, it is quite true that my honourable friend Mr. Nariman did ask one question before he refused to serve. But the fact remains that he refused to come on to this committee and investigate all these allegations which he has now made. He could have gone into the question whether there was bribery and corruption amongst the staff, whether our officers received commissions from manufacturers. He did not desire to do that, and several honourable members on the opposite side and some honourable members on this side have a very shrewd idea as to why he refused, and, now, Sir, to come forward and make allegations of the character he has made, to say that our officers take commissions

Mr. G. I. PATEL : I did not refer to it.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : I do not include my honourable friend Mr. Patel.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : So far as Mr. Patel is concerned, the question is disposed of. He never made the allegation.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : I must state that the honourable member representing the Ahmedabad Millowners' Association never made any allegations. I say, Sir, if those allegations are to be made in the House, I want my honourable friend to mention the name of only one officer. The law protects him : he cannot be sued for libel if he mentions names in this House. Let him mention the name of only one officer who has taken commissions and one manufacturer who has given them. I am not asking for a dozen names. I am asking only for one instance. Let him mention it, and if he can conclusively prove it, I undertake to see that that officer is dismissed and the manufacturer is openly exposed. Let him give the name of one officer and one manufacturer and prove his case, and see if Government do not take exemplary steps which will be an example to the rest of the officers of Government. But, Sir, I have grown old hearing allegations of this kind, not only in Government service, but as a commercial man. I have grown old hearing allegations made against my own private servants, my managers and others. How often have I been told that they were corrupt ; how often did I try to catch them and failed ? I have found that most of those allegations were made by interested people, because an officer had refused to do something, and most allegations came from dismissed servants. Most probably if we go a little further into these allegations, we will find that they have their source and foundation in dismissed servants of Government, servants most probably who have been dismissed because their honesty has been doubted, and who in their turn try to fling mud at those who remain in Government service. I ask my honourable friend, in the interests of Government, in the interests of the opposite benches, to give one name to me privately, if not publicly, and I promise him that I will give him every assistance, and I feel sure my honourable friend sitting behind me (Sir Lawless Hepper) will also give him every assistance to try and prove any allegations, not only in public, not only before this House, but even privately. I am prepared to say that I will take such action as will give him satisfaction, provided he proves his allegations. But I will ask him not to make such allegations till he is prepared to mention the names either openly or privately.

Now, I will just come to the question of cement contracts, which have been criticised both in the standing committee of the Corporation and in this House. My honourable friend the Director of Development was on leave when this occurred, and, therefore, he was not in any way responsible for this transaction. I think honourable members are fully aware of the terms of the contract that Government have made with the four cement companies. At least the Standing Committee of the Municipality were aware of those terms. One of these cement companies was not working to the satisfaction of either the agents of the company or to the satisfaction of the Development Department, and we saw there was every possibility that they would not be able to turn out cement of the quality we required and which they had guaranteed to supply. And although we have got a chemist to examine all the cement that comes from these factories, it is always unsatisfactory to know that we get cement from a factory which may at any moment be unable to turn out the required quality. In the contract there is also a term that if any one company out of the four fails to fulfil the terms of the contract, the full amount required by the Development Director is to be distributed amongst the other three. Therefore, we were prevented from getting rid of this company altogether and from going into the open market for one-fourth of the quantity we required. But there was another cement company which was prepared to take the place of this company which was really tottering, and they came forward with very good terms. They offered to supply cement as cheaply as any of the other companies and of the same quality, and we had actually to go to the other three companies and obtain their sanction before we could substitute the new company instead of the old one. If they had refused the sanction, the three cement companies could have divided our demand of cement among themselves and we could never have been able to go into the open market for one-fourth of the quantity, according to our agreement. Therefore, Mr. President, I contend that the Government did the best they could under the circumstances in substituting a sound company producing good quality (An Honourable Member: What is the rate?). It is a sliding scale. The honourable member can find that from the proceedings of the last session when the honourable member the Director gave details about it.

Now, Sir, the Director of Development has already dealt with a good many of the points that have been raised. I will now deal with a few points raised by my honourable friend Mr. Baptista. He has blamed Government for having constructed these chawls themselves. He said that they should have left it to the owners of factories, when they were prepared to take the responsibility. There is some truth in what my honourable friend has said. There was a time when it might have been possible to persuade the millowners of Bombay to take up some chawls on long lease, paying a part of the loss that we will have to face on these one-room tenements. But I regret to say that that scheme fell through as the Government of India did not approve of it. Therefore, it was no fault of this Government that that scheme did not go through. The Government of India felt that one of the results of that scheme would have been that industrialists would have been owners of very large properties in Bombay; of land which would have been acquired under the Land Acquisition Act or from the Improvement Trust, and they thought according to the views held by many politicians, both in England and in India, that industrialists should not be given facilities to own large properties. That, Mr. President, was the reason which prompted the Government of India to refuse this scheme. The next best thing had to be done, and a tax was levied and it was always intended and always thought, that a part of the tax, if not the whole of it, would come out of the pockets of the millowners of Bombay and that the millowners of Bombay were being made to pay their contribution towards these chawls through this tax. There is always a difference of opinion as to the incidence of taxation and I have already explained this question only a few months ago. But, Mr. President, we cannot go on discussing the incidence of taxation. It is a subject which we can discuss for hours and hours, and years and years and yet we may not be able to agree. It was discussed, believe me, ad nauseum, when this tax was introduced. The owners of factories contended it would come out of their pockets; the agriculturists contended that it would come out of theirs. I refuse to enter into that discussion. The incidence of taxation cannot be discussed in a few minutes. But it was always the intention of Government that the millowners should make a contribution towards these chawls. My honourable friend Mr. Baptista has charged us with not keeping faith in the matter of spending money out of this cotton cess. Every rupee of that part of the cess which was intended to be used for the housing of workmen, will be and is being used for that purpose, but owing to the rise in the cost of building material, labour and other things, the estimates have risen and the chawls are costing Government more now than we thought they would in 1918 and 1919. Therefore, the same amount of cotton cess does not go as far as we thought it would in 1918. If my honourable friend opposite is prepared to persuade this House to increase the cotton cess, as he says we ought to in his minute of dissent, Government will certainly consider the question. Government are committed to no definite policy as regards the increase of the cotton cess. They are committed to only one definite policy; that policy is that they will not construct any more tenements until the tenements under construction have all been finished and occupied and there is a further demand for them. Once the tenements under construction are finished, once we know the actual cost, once we know what actual rent we can get for them, then it will be time to consider both for this honourable House and for Government whether we should construct any more chawls. That is the policy of Government. But if my honourable friend is under any misapprehension that Government propose to use that part of this cotton cess which is earmarked for industrial Housing, for any other purpose than meeting the loss on these one-room tenements, he is entirely mistaken. But we cannot lower the rent unless we have some surplus from the cotton cess which will enable us to do so. If we go on building one-room tenements which will swallow up the whole of the cotton cess, then how are we going to lower the rent? Without other sources of revenue, how can we build other rooms?

Mr. J. BAPTISTA: By way of explanation, Sir, I would just state that my point was that you were getting so much from this cess: Are you using that amount to no other purpose but to reduce the rents? Are you using the full amount that you receive from this cess or not?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: We are using the full amount. There may be a lakh or more left over. There may be only a couple or two or three lakhs left over. It is nothing, it is a flea-bite. We are using every bit of this cotton cess, and if honourable members will just realise that we are bearing a loss of about Rs. 5 per room, they will appreciate the position. We are letting the rooms at Rs. 10-8 and the economic rent per room is really Rs. 15-8 or Rs. 16. We are losing that difference of Rs. 5 or Rs. 6 per room every month, and all that loss has to be met by Government from the cotton cess. I can guarantee not to use a pie out of that part of the cess earmarked for tenements, for any other purpose than meeting the loss on these tenements.....

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR: On a point of explanation, my honourable friend Mr. Baptista's point was, if I understood him right, that this amount of 2 or 3 lakhs, or whatever it is, which the honourable the General Member says is left over, should go towards a further continued reduction of the rents for these tenements. What is the honourable member's answer to that?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: My answer to that is this. Till all these chawls are completed and we have seen what they actually cost us, we cannot go into this question of lowering the rents. But in the interval if Government come to the conclusion that more rooms ought to be built, then they cannot reduce the rent. Until the present tenements are all completed and until we know what they actually cost, we cannot immediately go and lower the rents. But I do promise to consider the question and I may state that personally I am inclined to favour the proposal to lower rents if it is possible to do so; but unless I have all the figures worked out and placed before me, I cannot and Government as a whole cannot come to any conclusion on this important question.

Now, Sir, there is just one more point that I should like to refer to, as my honourable friend has referred to it in his reply. He talked about accepting the lowest tender and the reply to that was that invariably the lowest tender has always been accepted in the Development Department but there may be an exception here and there, and there are always very good reasons for it. We will be ready always to place before this House the reasons if honourable members will only ask why an exception was made in any particular case. But my honourable friend said in his reply that we had refused to accept the lowest tender for some one room tenements. I do not know what case he refers to; he stated that the lowest tender was Rs. 30,000 lower per chawl than the tender we had accepted. Now, Sir, in reply to that allegation—I do not know what he is referring to—may I just inform the House that a chawl costs about Rs. 90,000 and if the Development Department accepted a tender which was higher than the lowest by Rs. 30,000, then there must be something wrong in my honourable friend's information.

Now, Sir, since the last budget discussion in this honourable House, I think at least a large number of my honourable friends who view our actions impartially will be pleased to admit that we have done our best to retrench, and if we had not done so, we could not have placed the budget which we have placed before you to-day. We could not have shown a reduction in this current year of about Rs. 60 lakhs and made a demand for 1 crore and 18 lakhs less than we did last year. Under these circumstances, I do hope that this honourable House will pass the demand. We have undertaken to do our best, and I think, we have given some proof of our bona fides—all I say is that we will continue our retrenchment policy throughout the next year, but we can give no guarantee as to the exact amount of retrenchment that we can make. As we go on examining one item after another, we will go on retrenching wherever possible and the House may rest assured that the retrenchment policy of Government will continue.

Mr. J. BAPTISTA: By way of explanation, does this reduction of Rs. 60 lakhs mean that the expenditure is to be reduced by 60 lakhs, or is it going to be postponed till another year?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: No; it is the abandoning of schemes, with a consequent retrenchment in establishment.

Question put: That the total demand for Development be reduced by Rs. 61,99,000. House divided. Ayes, 33. Noes, 48. Motion lost.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR: Sir, I made a demand for Rs. 1,47,75,000. With the reduction of Rs. 3 lakhs, I now ask for a demand of Rs. 1,44,75,000.

Question put and demand granted.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN: Mr. President, I ask for a demand of Rs. 2,91,000 under the head 56A, Capital outlay on improvement on public health. Out of this money Rs. 1,10,000 will be spent on the Poona drainage works, and Rs. 1,81,000 on the improvement of the Poona water-supply. The Poona water improvement scheme is a self-supporting scheme. There is a great demand for more water, and in order to meet that demand we are going to have this improvement. But, at the same time, in order to make the scheme self-supporting, we are raising the rates from 6 annas to 8 annas per thousand gallons. I hope, therefore, the House will grant the demand.

Question proposed.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI (Western Sind): Sir, I rise to a point of order. Unless the Government gives a definite statement, I do not know how we can deal with these grants. If you refer to page 251 of the White Book, you will find that the total under 56A, Capital Outlay on improvements on public health, is Rs. 25,63,000. It consists of 10 items, the first two and last four of which as given there are transferred and the remaining four are reserved.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: From the papers that are placed on my table I find that the amounts constituting the demand are Rs. 1,000, Rs. 70,000, Rs. 40,000 and Rs. 1,80,000, which are all transferred. There is no amendment to any one of the items.

If there is no amendment to the demand, it would be much better to put it separately, as there are two different members of Government dealing with the two departments, one transferred and the other reserved. There are amendments to the reserved part of it.

[The President]

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI : There is an amendment with regard to the transferred part also. It is one of the new items shown in the Blue Book with regard to which there is a motion.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : I think, Sir, the demands of the transferred departments are separate from the demands of the reserved departments in the Blue Book though shown together on page 251 of the White Book.

An Honourable MEMBER : Sir, the Council clock has stopped. It is now three minutes to seven o'clock.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : As it is 7 o'clock, I will now adjourn the House till to-morrow, and we will deal with the subject then.

The Council is now adjourned to 2 p.m. to-morrow, Wednesday, the 4th March 1925.

If so, how often was the advice of the Principal obtained by the Consulting Architect to Government ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : Information has been called for.

EXECUTION OF THE WORK THROUGH THE AGENCY OF THE

Rao Saheb D. P. If the answer is in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state whether the Principal, School of Art, has approved such a use of a public building within his compound?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: Inquiries are being made.

GOVERNMENT LAND BROUGHT UNDER CULTIVATION IN WEST KHANDESH.

* Mr. S. S. DEV (West Khandesh District): Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) how many acres of Government land have been newly brought under cultivation in West Khandesh in 1922-23 and 1923-24;

(b) the number of persons to whom the said land has been given for cultivation;

(c) how many of these persons are Hindus and how many are Mahomedans?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: (a) Land given out for cultivation:—

PRIVATE TUTORS.

* Mr. S. S. DEV (West Khandesh District): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether any circular has recently been issued restricting the right of guardians of boys attending Government high schools to engage private tutors?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to lay a copy of the circular on the table?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: (a) and (b) No such circular as is referred to in part (a) of the question has recently been issued. One was issued in 1910 in connection with the following Rule No. 1 of the General Rules of Discipline for Government schools published in Government notification, Educational Department, No. 1570-A, dated the 4th August 1909:—

“Parents or guardians who send their boys to Government schools must understand that by so doing they agree to delegate to the Head Master and the Educational authorities the control which they are entitled to exercise over such boys in all matters connected with such schools, and that in all questions of school discipline both inside and outside the schools the decision of those authorities is final.”

SHAHADA GOMAI CANAL IN WEST KHANDESH.

* Mr. S. S. DEV (West Khandesh District): Will Government be pleased to state—

(1) Whether they are aware that the Shahada Gomai Canal irrigates eight villages?

(2) Whether it is true that in 1923-24 the people of six out of these eight villages applied for the canal water and that their applications were granted?

(3) Whether it is true that shortly after it rained and the people of those six villages did not require the canal water and did not actually use it?

(4) If so, whether it is true that nevertheless water charges were recovered from the people?

(5) If so, what amount was thus recovered?

(6) Whether it is true that the Irrigators' Association, Shahada, recommended that the amount should be refunded?

(7) If so, has any action been taken on such recommendation?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: (1) There are eight branch channels of the Shahada Channel which irrigate lands in eight villages.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

(2) Applications for temporary irrigation for rabi season of 1923-24 were received from eight villages and not from six only and they were all granted.

(3) There was rainfall during the rabi season and the lands under some of the villages were not in need of canal water and in some cases canal water was not actually used.

(4) Demands for water rates were made as per Rule 26 (2) of the Bombay Canal Rules, 1922, published in the Government Gazette of the 8th February 1923, and also advertised locally by the local Public Works Department and Revenue officers.

(5) The aggregate sum demanded under the Rule 26 (2) referred to above from various irrigators under the Channel amounts to Rs. 916-15-0 as per assessment papers.

(6) and (7) The President, Gomai Pat Committee (Irrigators' Association), Shahada, had submitted certain cases for remission but as they came under the Rule 26 (2) referred to above, he was informed that no remission could be recommended.

Mr. S. S. DEV : Do Government then admit that the rules are so oppressive that although the agriculturists do not use the water, still they are required to pay the charges ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : They are not so oppressive as the honourable member tries to make out. The canals are there ; they use the canal water when they want it ; they do not use the water when they have good rainfall. The taxpayer pays for the canals all the same. If they once apply for water, then, even if the Almighty gives them rain, still they have to pay for the canal water.

Mr. L. S. CHAUDHARI : Is not revenue being collected from these people though the water is not given to them ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : I do not think the revenue covers the water rates.

PROMOTION IN PROVINCIAL POLICE SERVICE.

Mr. S. S. DEV (West Khandesh District) : Will Government be pleased to state (a) whether any, and if so, what, decisions have been arrived at on the recommendations contained in paragraph 7, chapter III, annexure 16, of the Public Service Commission, relating to the promotion of persons directly recruited to the Provincial service ?

(b) Whether any senior officers of the Provincial Police Service have been passed over by their juniors on the ground that they were too senior to be appointed Assistant Superintendents of Police, and, if so, whether Government intend to take any action to redress the grievances of such officers ?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : (a) The decision is that 11 per cent. of the total number of superior appointments in the Indian (Imperial) Police Service should be recruited by promotion from members of the Provincial Police Service but no part of this percentage has been specifically reserved either for Deputy Superintendents of Police directly recruited or for those recruited from the rank of Inspectors. Selection for superior appointments is determined by seniority and merit irrespective of the method of recruitment.

(b) This question does not arise as it has been decided that Deputy Superintendents of Police should normally be promoted to superior posts in the Indian Police and not as Assistant Superintendents of Police. In exceptional cases when Deputy Superintendents of Police are promoted as Assistant Superintendents of Police, their promotion is reckoned against the 22 per cent. of posts reserved for direct Indian recruits and not against the 11 per cent. reserved for Deputy Superintendents of Police.

REPORT BY THE COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO ENQUIRE INTO THE GRIEVANCES OF PRIMARY SCHOOL TEACHERS.

Mr. S. S. DEV (West Khandesh District): Will Government be pleased to state (1) whether the committee appointed on 17th March 1924 to report on three issues regarding the case of primary teachers has submitted its report?

(2) If not, when is it likely to report?

(3) How many local bodies were consulted whether they would be able to bear the financial burden consequent upon the adoption of the Sathé-Paranjpye scale of pay?

(4) How many of them have replied in the affirmative and how many in the negative?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: (1) No.

(2), (3) and (4) Information has been called for.

Mr. S. S. DEV: From whom has the information been called for?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: From the secretary of the committee.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN: May I know the reasons why the report is not ready?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: The report was ready. It was signed by the chairman, and it must be under circulation to the members.

Mr. S. S. DEV: Who is the chairman of the Committee?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: Myself.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN: Is it not a fact that the report has not even been sent to the members of that committee?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: I am not aware of that. I will ask the secretary.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN: Who is the secretary?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: Mr. Hesketh.

Mr. S. S. DEV: Do not the chairman and secretary meet often?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV: Yes.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN : May I know how many months it is since the report was signed by the chairman ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : I cannot give the exact date.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN : Approximately ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : It is more than two weeks.

Mr. S. S. DEV (West Khandesh District) : Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) how many veterinary dispensaries there are in West Khandesh and where they are located ;

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN :
(a) Five. They are located at Dhulia, Shirpur, Nandurbar, Sakti and Shahada.

(b) Yes.

(c) No. Under the rules for the working of the Civil Veterinary Department veterinary dispensaries are maintained by District Local Boards or Municipalities and Government gives grants-in-aid towards the maintenance.

The people of the area in question should therefore approach the District Local Board, West Khandesh, if they desire to have a dispensary at Nardana.

KITCHENS FOR TRAVELLERS' BUNGALOWS.

Mr. S. S. DEV (West Khandesh District) : Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether they are aware that travellers' bungalows are very often used by people who are strictly vegetarians ?

(b) whether they are aware that there are no kitchen rooms attached to these bungalows which can be used for cooking vegetarian food and for dining purposes ?

(c) whether they are aware that the want of such kitchen rooms causes great inconvenience to those government officers and others who are vegetarians and are entitled to occupy the bungalows ?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN :
The information has been called for.

STRICTURES AGAINST THE POLICE.

Mr. S. S. DEV (West Khandesh District) : Will Government be pleased to state whether any circulars or instructions have been issued to Magistrates and Judges directing them not to pass any strictures against the police in open court ?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : The attention of the honourable member for the West Khandesh District is requested to High Court Circular No. 2800, dated the 19th September 1922.

(e) the number of students attending each school?

(f) the total annual expenditure over each school during the last three years? and

(g) how much of that expenditure was met by Government and how much by local bodies?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: (a) Six.

WATER ALLOWANCE AT NANDURBAR AND PAROLA.

Mr. S. S. DEV (West Khandesh District): Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether they are aware that generally from January to July every year drinking water at Nandurbar in West Khandesh and Parola in East Khandesh is not available within a mile from those places ?

(b) whether they give water allowance to their servants of the lower grade at these two places ?

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE: (a) Generally from February to July every year drinking water at Nandurbar is not available within a mile to the people who live in the Eastern and Northern parts of the town. As regards Parola the answer is in the negative.

(b) No.

Mr. D. R. PATIL: As regards (b), what is the reason for not giving water allowances to these poor servants ? Is the reason for it financial stringency ?

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE: I shall ask for notice of that question.

Mr. S. S. DEV: Is not the case of the Nandurbar servants very hard ? (No reply.)

PROVINCIAL POLICE SERVICE.

Mr. S. S. DEV (West Khandesh District): Will Government be pleased to state (a) in what year the Secretary of State and the Government of India accorded sanction to a percentage of appointments in the superior cadre of the police service being reserved for members of the provincial police service ?

(b) What that percentage was and in what year effect was first given to those orders by the substantive promotion of provincial service officers ?

(c) If there was any delay in giving effect to those orders the reasons for the same ?

(d) Whether it is a fact that the original percentage of reserved posts in the superior scale was in 1921 raised to 11 per cent. or 8 appointments ?

(e) How many of these reserved appointments are to-day filled by officers promoted from the provincial service (i) substantively, (ii) officiating ?

(f) If any remain to be filled substantively, why they are not being filled immediately ?

(g) Whether since 1921, any of those 8 reserved appointments have been filled by the substantive promotion of officers of the grade of assistant superintendents of Police ?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : (a) and (b) The Government of India issued orders in 1907 that the number of Deputy Superintendents permanently promoted to district charges should not exceed 5 per cent. of the number of Superintendents. It worked out to 1.6 or two appointments out of the cadre in the Bombay Presidency. Effect was first given to the orders in 1918. No percentage of superior appointments was definitely reserved till 1921 to Provincial Police Officers.

(c) It was not possible to give practical effect earlier because the Assistant Superintendents of Police recruited before the issue of the orders of 1907 had a prior right to be provided with District Superintendentship.

(d) The number of reserved appointments was raised to five when the percentage was raised to 11 per cent. in 1921.

(e) and (f) All of them are held substantively by members of the Provincial Service. Acting appointments are in addition made as required by the exigencies of the Public Service.

(g) None of those substantively appointed has yet retired.

MUSIC IN THE GANPATI PROCESSION AT NANDURBAR.

Mr. S. S. DEV (West Khandesh District): Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) Whether it is a fact that on 30th August 1924, a public notice was issued at Nandurbar stating that owing to the tension of feeling between the Hindus and Mahomedans the playing of any kind of music before mosques was undesirable and prohibiting every kind of music including the playing of even Tipris while the Ganpati immersion procession was to pass in front of mosques at Nandurbar on 7th September 1924 ?

(b) Whether it is a fact that only four days later on 3rd September 1924, another public notice was issued cancelling the previous notice in so far as it related to the prohibition of the playing of Tipris ?

(c) If the reply to (a) and (b) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the grounds for thus altering the original notice.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes.

(c) The District Magistrate did not hold " Tipris " to be musical instruments.

Mr. S. S. DEV : May I know who then had issued the first notice ?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : I cannot give you the name of the officer without notice.

AYURVEDIC DISPENSARIES AND SCHOOLS.

(c) and (d) Information is being obtained.

GRANTS TO VILLAGE PANCHAYATS IN THE POONA AND KOLABA DISTRICTS.

* Mr. N. R. GUNJAL (Poona District) : Will Government be pleased to state what grants were made to each village panchayat in the Poona and Kolaba districts by Government and by the district local boards concerned for the years 1922-23 and 1923-24 ?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : No grants have been made by Government. As regards District Local Boards' grants the information is contained in the attached statement.†

KHED VILLAGE PANCHAYAT ELECTION.

* Mr. N. R. GUNJAL (Poona District) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether their attention has been drawn to an article published in the Kesari dated 2nd September 1924, on the election of the members of the Khed Village Panchayat ?

(b) Did the Collector of Poona receive any memorials from any inhabitants of Khed, taluka Khed, district Poona, complaining against irregularities in the said election and praying for a fresh election ?

(c) If so, what action has been taken or is intended to be taken thereon ?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : (a) No.

(b) A memorial was received by the Collector through the President, District Local Board, Poona. The facts of the case are briefly as under :

On a resolution passed by the Village Panchayat of Khed for the exclusion of Wadis from the village, the President, District Local Board, Poona, proposed that the number of Members of the Panchayat should be reduced from 11 to 9 in proportion to the population as decided in the Board's previous resolution passed in accordance with section 4 of the Village Panchayat Act, and that owing to the change in the boundaries of the Village Panchayat, a fresh voters' list should be prepared for the curtailed area and fresh elections held. Out of the 11 Members only one was a resident of a Wadi and he could not continue as member under section 6 (c) and the Collector held that under section 10 of the Village Panchayats Act, the term of office of the Members already elected was ordinarily 3 years and that a Panchayat could only be superseded for the reasons given in section 36 of the Act, which did not exist in the case.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

† Vide Appendix 50.

Although under section 4 of the Act the power of determining the number of persons of whom the panchayat is to consist vests in the District Local Board that body has no power to vary the number so fixed during the pendency of the triennium for which a panchayat has been elected. The Collector has therefore now been asked to fill up the vacancy of the 11th member who was disqualified under section 6 (c) of the Act.

SURVEY SETTLEMENT IN INAM VILLAGES.

* Mr. N. R. GUNJAL (Poona District): (a) Will Government be pleased to furnish the names of those inam villages of the Khed Taluka of the Poona District in which no original survey settlement has yet been introduced ?

(b) Have Government taken any steps to persuade the inamdars of such inam villages to get the survey settlement introduced into their villages ?

(c) If so, what are the difficulties put forth by such inamdars regarding the introduction of survey settlement into their villages and what steps have Government taken to remove their difficulties ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: (a) (1) Askhed budruk, (2) Goregaon khurd, (3) Chikhalgaon, (4) Torne budruk, (5) Pangri, (6) Palu, (7) Bhavdi, (8) Surkundi, (9) Kanhewad budruk, (10) Kanhewadi khurd, (11) Ghotavdi, (12) Dehane and (13) Viram.

(b) All possible steps have been taken from time to time to persuade the inamdars to get survey introduced in their inam villages but without effect.

(c) Some inamdars put forward imaginary difficulties with a view to avoiding survey operations. A few others refuse to accept a survey in order to evade the payment of remuneration to village officers at an increased scale which is inevitable after the settlement is made. The main difficulty in the case of many inam villages is the present rule under which no survey can be introduced without the consent of all recognised sub-sharers. It is almost impossible to get all sub-sharers to agree to settlement owing to differences and quarrels among them.

Sardar G. N. MUJUMDAR: Are Government considering any measure for compulsorily introducing survey settlement into the unsurveyed Inam villages in spite of the opposition of some of the sub-sharers in those villages ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: I should like to have notice of that question.

* Mr. V. N. JOG (Dharwar District): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that about 68 acres of pasture land situate at Kerimattihalli in the Karajgi taluka, Dharwar District, set apart

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

for cattle has been granted to the retired Police Inspector, Haveri Circle, very recently ?

(ii) If so, will Government be pleased to state whether the rayats of the said village of Kerimattihalli were consulted before the grant was made as to whether there was land sufficient for grazing cattle ; and if so, whether they were in favour of the grant being made ?

(iii) Will Government be pleased to state (a) what is the total quantity of pasture land in Kerimattihalli after this grant, (b) what is the number of cattle in the village, and (c) what are the total acreages of cultivated and cultivable land in the village ?

(iv) Will Government be pleased to state what useful service the said Inspector of Police rendered to Government or to the public to deserve the said grant of land ?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : (i) No land has been granted to the retired Police Inspector, Haveri Circle, but an area measuring 54 acres and 14 gunthas of pasture land situated at Kerimattihalli has been sold to him.

(ii) The villagers were consulted and they had no objection to the sale. There is sufficient grazing area for the needs of the village.

(iii) (a) the total pasture area now left to the village is 258 acres and 32 gunthas,

(b) the total number of cattle in the village is 449,

(c) the total cultivable area is 1,493 acres and 21 gunthas out of which 1,226 acres and 25 gunthas were cultivated last year.

| Meherun .. | Do. .. | 160 |
| Jalgaon .. | Do. .. | 160 |
| Pimprala .. | Do. .. | 160 |

Mr. P. G. JOSHI : May I know whether any objections were called for before these rates were sanctioned ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : I should like to have notice.

Mr. D. R. PATIL : May I know whether there are any special reasons for fixing the rate of altered assessment for Satara and Bhusawal at Rs. 25 ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : I should like to have notice. This was fixed in 1911.

Mr. P. G. JOSHI : May I know whether this Government Resolution was issued under the Land Revenue Code ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : Yes ; I believe so.

Mr. D. R. PATIL : Is it a rule of Government to invite objections before revised assessment is sanctioned ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : I have already stated that I should have notice of the question.

INTEREST ON TAGAI LOANS THROUGH CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES.

Mr. P. G. JOSHI (East Khandesh District): Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether it is a fact the tagai loans advanced through the co-operative banks to members of the co-operative societies are in practice charged an interest at more than nine and three-eighth per cent. per annum?

(b) If so, whether these loans are advanced for the purpose of land improvement?

(c) whether it is a fact that the tagai loans advanced to ryots by Government directly through the revenue authorities are charged interest at $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. per annum?

(d) If the replies to (a), (b) and (c) be in the affirmative, do Government intend to take any action as regards (a)?

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE: (a) The rate charged by co-operative societies on tagavi loans out of the amounts advanced to them through co-operative banks is the same as their ordinary lending rate.

(b) The answer is in the affirmative.

(c) The rate of interest on loans advanced by Government directly through revenue authorities has recently been reduced from $8\frac{1}{2}$ to 7.29 per cent.

(d) The Registrar has already advised societies to modify their bye-laws so as to allow them to advance tagavi loans at the same rate at which Government advances such loans to ryots directly. Societies have been modifying their bye-laws accordingly and are thus enabled to advance these loans at 7.29 per cent.

KARKE (Kanara District): Will Government be pleased to state (a) whether they are aware that in a public meeting held at Kumta in the district of Kanara on the 10th February 1924, when the Horticulturist to the Government of Bombay, delivered a lecture on the development of fruit industry, a resolution was unanimously passed by the people assembled requesting the Government to consider the question of the introduction of the science of food preservation in all grades of the schools in that district?

KARKI (Kanara District): Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that in 1922-23, 28 cases of forfeiture occurred in connection with the realisation of the land revenue in Kanara ; If so, how many of these cases occurred in each of the talukas or pethas and what was the area forfeited in each case ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: Ninety-two cases of forfeiture occurred in that year. Information regarding the number of cases in each taluka or petha and the area forfeited in each case is furnished in the appended statement†.

GRAZING GROUND BROUGHT UNDER CASUARINA PLANTATION.

Mr. M. D. KARKI (Kanara District): With reference to the reply paragraph (2) of my question No. 16 regarding casuarina plantation on the 21st July 1924 (Council Debates, Volume XII, page 70), will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the area that has been brought under casuarina plantation at Maskeri and Gangavali in the Kumta Taluka was previously set apart for grazing ?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: The area under casuarina plantation at Maskeri and Gangavali (Village Nadumaskeri) was included in the area set apart for grazing. As, however, it was merely a sheet of sand, of no use for grazing, it was taken under a Working Plan and converted into a casuarina plantation, due provision having been made at Honnebail for grazing.

Mr. M. D. KARKI: How is it then that Government said in reply to my question on 21st July 1924 that no grazing land was included in the casuarina plantations ? How far is Honnebail from Maskeri and Gangavali ?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: I do not know.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

† Vide Appendix 56.

Mr. M. D. KARKI : May I know the area of the sheet of land referred to in the reply ?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI : A few acres.

NEWSPAPERS IN KARNATAK.

Mr. M. D. KARKI (Kanara District) : Will Government be pleased to state the number, the names and periods of existence of the Kanarese as well as English daily and weekly newspapers and periodical journals and magazines respectively, now in existence in the Bombay Karnatak ?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : A statement* containing the information asked for is placed on the Council Table.

(a) whether the literary institution known as Karnatak Vidya Vardhaka Sangha, Dharwar, is a registered institution ?

(b) If so, whether they aid it by any grants and if so, what are the amounts that have been annually contributed by them during the last ten years :—

(i) towards the construction of the building,

(ii) for the purchase of books, and

(iii) for other purposes ?

(c) whether it is a fact that the building of the institution remains incomplete for want of sufficient funds ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c) The information has been called for.

AFFORESTATION OF LAND SUITED FOR COCOANUT PLANTATION IN KANARA DISTRICT.

Mr. M. D. KARKI (Kanara District) : Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) Whether it is a fact that in 1881, the Collector in charge of the Honavar Taluka suggested that the area under casuarina plantation at Kasarkod in that taluka should be offered to private enterprise for raising cocoanut gardens (vide papers relating to the first revision settlement of the Honavar Taluka, page 77) ?

(b) Whether it is a fact that the plantation is being rendered free from casuarina ?

(c) If so, do Government intend to dispose of the open area in any manner ; if so, how and on what conditions ?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI : (a) No. In 1881 there was no casuarina plantation in Kasarkod. The nursery of casuarina was started at Kasarkod in 1882. What the Collector stated in 1881 was that 468 acres of the land called Pulan were then lying waste in Kasarkod and that he hoped that much of that waste land would be taken up as it was quite suited for cocoanut gardens. Presumably the Collector's hope was not realised for several years because it was not till 1897 that the area was declared as Reserved Forest.

* Kept in the Secretary's Office.

(b) It is proposed not to carry out any fresh planting from the current year, but the matter is not definitely settled. If no planting is done the area annually exploited—about 12 acres—will be available for disafforestation.

(c) If disafforested, the area will be disposed of in such manner as may seem most suitable at the time.

Mr. M. D. KARKI : Why did not Government raise cocoanut plantation instead of casuarina ?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI : Government consider that cocoanut plantation would not do there because people themselves did not come forward for years to take it up.

Mr. M. D. KARKI : Did they think that the casuarina plantation would yield more than the cocoanut plantation ?

(No reply.)

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : Land was acquired for the extensions to the P. R. Training College when the Urdu Classes were

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

first attached to it in 1914. Part of the land has already been utilised for the extensions and the part which is not required for this purpose is proposed to be transferred to the Mahalaxmi Training College for Women, Ahmedabad, for use as a site for a building for the Girls' High School which is under contemplation.

(b) If so, did they recover the proportionate increase in the license fee from the licensees?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: (a) No.

(b) The question does not arise.

LEGAL REPRESENTATION IN WATAN MATTERS.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts): (a) Will Government be pleased to state if they are aware that the Commissioner, Northern Division, did not recently allow a pleader to appear before him to argue a case regarding watan matters?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: (a) and (b) In the absence of details Government are unable to give any reply.

(b) Will they please state whether any steps have been taken to destroy wild pigs in the Salsette Mahal, and, if so what steps have been taken?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: (a) No cases of the nature mentioned have arisen in Salsette.

(b) Gun licenses are being issued freely to the cultivators for the destruction of wild animals doing injury to crops.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN: Has not a single case of the nature mentioned arisen in Salsette? On the strength of whose report is the reply based?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: Inquiry was made from the authorities concerned and the reply is based on their report.

Mr. D. R. PATIL: Are there any rules for allowing remission of assessment if these pieces of land are not cultivated owing to the wild pigs?

The Honourable Mr. A. M. K. DEHLAVI: That is the question which relates to the revenue department.

LAND FOR SEWAGE FARM AT BHAGUR.

*Mr. R. G. PRADHAN (Nasik District) : Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether it is true that survey Nos. 25, 26, and 29 situate within the limits of Bhagur and belonging, the first to Mhalu Krishna Godse and the other two to Narayan Nana Patil Godse, both inhabitants of Sausali, taluka Nasik, were acquired by Government in 1917 for the purpose of a sewage farm then proposed to be established at Deolali Cantonment ;

(b) whether it is true that the project of the sewage farm was subsequently abandoned ;

(c) whether it is true that on the petitions of the abovementioned owners, the Collector of Nasik promised to restore the lands in case they were not required for the sewage farm ;

(d) whether it is true that the abovementioned owners refunded the amounts of compensation at the instance of the Collector, on an understanding that their lands would be restored to them afterwards ;

(e) whether it is true that subsequently they were informed that the lands could not be restored and the amounts refunded should be taken back ;

(f) whether it is true that they took back the amounts under protest and have appealed to the Commissioner, Central Division, in the matter ;

(g) whether Government are aware that only a very small portion of these lands is at present used for depositing kachra and that the rest has been given out on lease for cultivation ;

(h) whether Government are aware that there are other lands belonging to the cantonment adjoining to these lands which could be used for depositing kachra if necessary ;

(i) what action has been taken on the petitions made to the Commissioner, Central Division, by the abovementioned owners ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. METHA : (a) The lands referred to were acquired in 1917 for "Cantonment purposes".

(b) The General Officer Commanding, Bombay District, intimated in August 1922 that the sewage farm scheme was in abeyance, but would shortly be reconsidered.

(c) They were informed that if it were finally decided not to carry out the scheme and to relinquish the land, they would be given an opportunity of re-purchasing it.

(d) Through a misunderstanding of the communication received from the Military Authorities, the amount of compensation paid to the persons referred to, was received back from them and the Military officers were asked to hand over possession of the lands to their respective owners.

(e) The Military Authorities pointed out that there was some misunderstanding and that there was no intention of relinquishing the lands. The owners were therefore informed that the lands were required by the Military Department and could not be relinquished by them and that the amounts paid by them would be refunded to them.

* This question was asked at the meeting held in July 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

(f) Yes.

(g) All the land is required for trenching for the deposit of kachra. Only a portion of the land is actually used for the purpose at a time but the site under trenching is to be changed periodically to prevent the earth from becoming surcharged with manurial substance and thus more land is required. The land not actually under trenching is cultivated by a rapid succession of crops for the same reason.

(h) There are no suitable lands belonging to the Cantonment adjoining the lands which can be conveniently used for depositing kachra.

(i) The petitioners have been informed that their lands are still required by the Military Authorities and that they cannot therefore be restored to them.

TRANSFER OF SUBORDINATE SERVANTS OF GOVERNMENT.

* MR. R. G. PRADHAN (Nasik District): Will Government be pleased to state, whether there are rules, orders, or conventions, which require that talatis, primary school teachers and other subordinate servants of the Government should be transferred after a certain period ?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : There are no such rules, orders or conventions in respect of any subordinates except those of the Judicial Department. As regards the latter there is an order of 1900 that except for special reasons they should not be left in the same station for more than five years.

TAKING OF OATH BY MINISTERS.

MR. R. G. PRADHAN (Nasik District): Will Government be pleased to state whether the Ministers are required, on assuming their offices, to take any oath ? If so, is it the same as, or different from, the oath which Members of the Executive Council have to take ?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : Yes ; the form is the same as for Members of the Executive Council.

MUNICIPALITY AT BHAGUR.

MR. R. G. PRADHAN (Nasik District): Will the Honourable the Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state whether a municipality has been established at Bhagur and, if not, when it will be established ?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : Yes.

CONFISCATION OF PERSONAL INAMS ON ACCOUNT OF NON-CO-OPERATION.

* MR. R. G. SOMAN (Satara District) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state in how many cases has the Government been pleased to resume or confiscate the personal inams or taluks of certain inamdars or talukdars since the year 1920 on the ground that those inamdars have taken part in the non-co-operation movement in the Presidency of Bombay ?

* This question was asked at the meeting held in July 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the names of such inamdars or talukdars and the extent of the inams or taluks thus resumed or confiscated?

(c) Is it a fact that taking part in the non-co-operation movement has been declared to be a breach of the conditions in the sanads relating to such inams or taluks?

(d) Were any inquiries made and opportunities allowed to the inamdars or talukdars before such action was taken?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: (a), (b) and (c) Four cases. The requisite information is contained in the statement* placed on the Council Table. No such declaration has been made. Each case is considered on its own merits.

(d) Yes.

Mr. R. G. SOMAN: With regard to the answer to (a) it is stated in the remarks column of the appendix 57 that the share of the inamdar in the vatan land held by his father was resumed by the levy of full assessment. Are we to understand that the estate has been resumed although the vatan is now in the name of the father? Is it a fact that the father has been punished for the sins of the son?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: I should like to have notice of that question. I cannot tell you off-hand.

Mr. H. D. SAHEBA: Is it owing to the change of system that Government have introduced or is it for taking part in the non-co-operation movement of the son of the inamdar that the father's inam lands are resumed by the levy of full assessment?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: The honourable member's question is not quite clear to me.

Mr. H. D. SAHEBA: I want to know whether it is because the Honourable the Revenue Member considers the non-co-operation movement disloyal that the inam is resumed or whether it is because of the change in the system?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: I must refer the honourable member to the Honourable the Home Member for answer to that question.

Mr. W. S. MUKADAM: Is it not a fact that the inam villages of Durbar Gopaldas of Dhasa are confiscated by Government for taking part in the non-co-operation movement?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: That does not arise on this question.

Sardar G. N. MUJUMDAR: Is it the constitutional procedure to confiscate an inam without making any such declaration especially when, as is stated by Government, taking part in the non-co-operation movement has not been declared to be a condition in the sanad?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: No such declaration is made.

Sardar G. N. MUJUMDAR: That answer is there and what I ask is, is it a constitutional procedure to confiscate an inam when taking part in the non-co-operation movement is not declared to be disloyal?

* Vide Appendix 57.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : Surely all that must depend on the merits of each case.

Mr. W. S. MUKADAM : Do I understand that the Honourable the Home Member is responsible for these orders ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : No, not for these orders.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR : Does the Honourable Member in Charge consider that taking part in the non-co-operation movement is a crime to be punished indirectly in the manner ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : I do not see that that follows. It has been stated that Government has made no such declaration.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR : Is it the policy of Government to rank the non-co-operation movement as disloyal to Government ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : The question entirely depends upon what form the non-co-operation takes. Government have laid down no general rules and they must consider each case on its own merits.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR : Then I understand there is no general policy ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : There is such policy as I have mentioned.

The THAKOR of KERWADA : Will the honourable member inform the House what are the specific charges against this son of the inamdar ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : I must have notice of the question.

Mr. P. G. JOSHI : May I ask whether Darbar Gopaldas is a talukdar or not ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : I am afraid that is a political question. I must ask the honourable member to give notice to another Department of Government.

Mr. P. G. JOSHI : The question refers to talukdars and inamdars. I want to know whether Durbar Gopaldas is considered to be a talukdar or not.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : I should like to ask for notice of the question.

Mr. P. G. JOSHI : Notice is already given.

Mr. L. B. BHOPATKAR : By the resumption of the lands as mentioned in the statement, is the House to understand that Government have non-co-operated with these non-co-operators ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : I am afraid I cannot advise the House as to what they should understand.

Mr. W. S. MUKADAM : May I know why the name of Durbar Gopaldas is not added in this list, though his lands have been confiscated for his taking part in the non-co-operation movement ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : I understand that Durbar Gopaldas is not a talukdar in British India.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI : Has the Government the right to take action beyond the terms of the original sanads ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : I should think not.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN : Who is responsible for taking action against Durbar Gopaldas ?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Government have stated that he is not a talukdar within British India. That being so, no further questions about that particular talukdar can be asked.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN : Has the Government of Bombay authority to take action in respect of Durbars who are not within British India ?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : I submit, Sir, that the question is out of order, on the ground that it refers to something outside British India.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI : Do I understand that action taken in this respect has been taken in terms of the sanads, in accordance with the terms of the original sanads ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : Yes.

Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI : May I know who has passed those orders, the Revenue Department or the Judicial Department ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : They were passed by the Government of Bombay.

Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI : But which Department ? The Revenue Department or the Judicial Department ? We want to know who is responsible.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : Surely, the Government of Bombay is a corporate body.

Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI : But may I know whether these orders were issued in the Revenue Department or in the Judicial Department of the Bombay Government ? Of course, I know that the Bombay Government is responsible for these orders, but they issue orders in the Public Works Department, the Revenue Department, the Judicial Department, and so forth. I want to know whether these orders were issued in the Revenue Department, the Excise Department, in the Department of Agriculture, or the Judicial Department.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : In reply to the very long speech of the honourable member, I would say that the orders were issued in the Revenue Department, but they were passed by the Government of Bombay.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR : Did my honourable friend have any chance of applying his mind to the merits of these cases ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : I do not remember in what year the orders were passed, but if they were passed during the time I have held office, then certainly I have applied my mind to the merits of the cases.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN : Were the orders issued on the sanction of the Honourable Member in charge of the department ?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : That has already been answered.

FINE ON LATE PAYMENT OF REVENUE.

Mr. R. G. SOMAN (Satara District) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they are aware that the one-fourth fine has been levied by revenue officers in the several talukas of the district of Satara on default by the khatedars in the payment of land revenue due for the first instalment even though the amount was paid before the expiry of the period fixed for the payment of the second instalment and if so under what provision of law has such fine been imposed ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the total amount of this one-fourth fine recovered by revenue officers in the Satara District during the years 1921-22, 1922-23 and 1923-24, respectively in each taluka of this district ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : (a) Yes. Fine was levied under section 148 of the Land Revenue Code.

GRANT OF GOVERNMENT LAND FOR MAHOMEDAN COMMUNITY IN RATNAGIRI DISTRICT.

* MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD on behalf of Mr. A. N. SURVE (Bombay City, North) : Will Government be pleased to state—

(1) Whether it is a fact that they have not granted any plot of land for the benefit of the Mahomedan community in the Ratnagiri district ?

(2) (a) Whether it is a fact that Government have refused to grant a piece of land out of the camping ground in the village of Rajapur, district Ratnagiri, for the purpose of a hostel for the Mahomedan students in the Ratnagiri district ?

(b) Whether it is a fact that the same plot of ground was granted to the High School Committee of that village ?

(c) Whether it is a fact that the temples belonging to the communities of Bhandaries, Parits and the Marathas situated on the above plot of ground have been demolished by Mr. Kulkarni, Head Master of the High School, with the help of Mahomedan coolies ?

* This question was asked at the meeting held in October 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : (1) No.

(2) (a) and (b). In February 1923, the High School Committee at Rajapur applied for the open plot of the old camping ground adjoining the premises of the High School for use as a play-ground, the want of which had been keenly felt. The Mahomedans of Rajapur applied for the same plot for a hostel for Mahomedan students. No reply was received to the inquiry of the Collector whether funds were available. The Police wanted the ground for parades and did not want it built upon. The Collector granted the ground to the School on the conditions required by the Police, as he desired also to retain the amenities of the town by keeping the ground as an open space. The High School is not denominational, there being ten Mahomedan gentlemen on its committee and several students in the school.

(c) There were no temples on the plot. There were two ruined stone structures without any significance. In order to make the ground suitable as a play-ground, they were demolished under the orders of the Head Master of the school with the help of Hindu coolies.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD : Will the honourable gentleman tell us whether the land was actually granted to the High School when the request was made by the Mahomedan community ? It is stated in the reply that three parties applied for the land. Who applied first ? Is the Honourable Member in a position to state that ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : I could not answer that question off-hand, without notice.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD : May I ask the Honourable Minister for Education whether he visited Rajapur and consulted the Mahomedans there on the question ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : No.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD : Were you approached to lay a foundation stone on that land ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : Yes.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : The honourable member cannot ask the question in that form, by addressing the Honourable Minister as "you".

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please say whether he was approached for laying a foundation stone on this land ?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : I rise to a point of order, Sir. The question was put to the Revenue Department, and the supplementary question must be addressed to the Honourable Member in charge of that department.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : The supplementary question is put to the same Member, but any other Member of Government is entitled to reply if he wishes to do so.

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : I merely raised that point because the question, I understood, was addressed to the honourable Minister for Education and not to my honourable friend the Member in charge of the Revenue Department.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD : The Honourable Minister for Education has answered the question. As the Honourable Minister for Education has answered the question, may I ask the Honourable the Revenue Member on what considerations this was done. When Government did not give the land to the Mahomedans, was the Honourable Minister for Education consulted in the matter? The Honourable the Revenue Member has just told us that no piece of land was given to the Mahomedans, and we have just learnt that the Honourable Minister for Education was approached by the Mahomedans to lay a foundation stone over that piece of land. Can the Honourable the Revenue Member give any explanation as to this ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : I cannot give any explanation. I do not know what happened between the Minister for Education and the representative of the Mahomedans of Rajapur.

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : Sir, I should like to make a statement, to clear away any misunderstanding. Some of the Mussalmans approached me to lay a foundation stone, not on the camping ground alluded to in this question, but in some vacant space in the bazaar. As the Government Order handing over the plot to the Mahomedans was not produced, I requested the leaders to excuse me from laying the foundation stone. I know nothing about the camping ground ; I have not seen it, and I do not think any Mahomedan gentleman approached me about laying a foundation stone on this camping ground.

TURF CLUB LICENSE.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD on behalf of Mr. A. N. SURVE (Bombay City, North) : Will Government be pleased to state whether they receive any premium or other consideration for annually renewing the license to the Turf Club ?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : There is no license fee, but the Club is subject to the Entertainments Tax.

THE SATHE-PARANJPYE SCHEME.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD on behalf of Mr. A. N. SURVE (Bombay City, North) : Will Government be pleased to lay on the table the replies received up-to-date by them from the municipalities and the local boards in respect of the Sathe-Paranjpye Scheme in answer to their inquiry in this connexion ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : Government have made no such enquiry as is referred to in the question.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN : May I ask if that is a correct answer ? Is it not a fact that several replies that were received from municipalities and local boards were put before the committee by the Chairman, who is the Honourable the Minister ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : Government made no enquiry. The secretary of the committee made the enquiry.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN : Is the secretary of the committee not a Government official ? Has he not made enquiries in his official capacity ? The committee was appointed by this House ; the secretary of that committee is a Government official, and he did make enquiries of municipalities and district local boards.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : The honourable member should realise that the secretary of a committee appointed by Government is not Government.

Mr. G. B. PRADHAN : The chairman of the committee is the Honourable Minister ; the secretary of the committee is the Director of Public Instruction, and that gentleman, under the orders of the chairman or the members of the committee makes enquiries, and the replies that are received from the municipalities and local boards are placed before the committee. But the reply here states that no such enquiry has been made.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR : Did the Secretary make the enquiries on his own account, or with, or without the approval of Government ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : The enquiry was made at the suggestion of the committee.

Mr. S. S. DEV : Did not the resolution under which that committee was appointed make a reference to the committee to make such enquiry ?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Surely, honourable members realise the distinction between a committee making enquiries and the Government making enquiries.

BUILDING GRANTS FOR URDU SCHOOLS.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD on behalf of Mr. A. N. SURVE (Bombay City, North) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state to how many primary schools in the Ratnagiri district building grants have been given during the past fifteen years, together with the amounts given to each ?

(b) How many of such schools were Urdu schools ?

(c) Is it a fact that so far not a single Urdu school has received a building grant from Government in the Kolaba district ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : Enquiries are being made.

PROHIBITION OF GANAPATI PROCESSION IN SHOLAPUR.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD on behalf of Mr. A. N. SURVE (Bombay City, North) : Will Government be pleased to state the reasons that led them to prohibit the last Ganapati procession in the Sholapur City ?

The Honourable Sir MAURICE HAYWARD : Government did not prohibit the Ganapati processions and Ganapati processions were taken out by the mill hands. Some members of the public however did not do so as a protest against rules relating to processions issued under the District Police Act.

IMPORTATION OF FOODSTUFFS IN RATNAGIRI DISTRICT.

Mr. V. A. SURVE (Ratnagiri District) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state what quantities of foodstuffs have been imported by sea into the Ratnagiri District through each port during each of the last 12 years ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : A statement* showing the quantity of foodstuffs imported by sea at ports in the Ratnagiri district during the years 1917-18 to 1923-24 is appended. Similar figures for previous years are not available.

PRINCIPAL'S BUNGALOW, GUJARAT COLLEGE.

Mr. J. C. SWAMINARAYAN (Ahmedabad District) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the old principal's bungalow attached to the Gujarat College, Ahmedabad is reserved for the senior science professor of M. R. Science Institute ?

(b) If so, will they be pleased to state who is the occupant of the said bungalow at present ?

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : (a) No.

(b) This part of the question does not arise.

BEHAVIOUR OF THE RETURNING OFFICER OF THE NORTH DASKROI TALUKA.

Mr. J. C. SWAMINARAYAN (Ahmedabad District) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether protests were made to the Collector against the behaviour of the returning officer of North Daskroi taluka of Ahmedabad district at the time of the counting of votes at the election for the district local board on the 3rd December 1924 ?

(b) Will they be pleased to state whether the Collector had to interfere and entrust the counting of votes at the Daskroi taluka local board elections on the 4th December 1924 to the members of his own office ?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN : Information is being obtained.

NEW SCHOOLS FOR DEPRESSED CLASSES.

* Kept in the Secretary's office.

† This question was asked at the meeting held in July 1924, when an ad interim reply was given.

The Honourable Mr. B. V. JADHAV : The following statement gives the information required :—

| Name of the district. | Number of schools for Depressed Classes proposed to be started. |
|-----------------------|---|
| Ratnagiri | 1 |
| Nasik | 4 |
| Satara | 10 |
| Sholapur | 5 |

| East Khandesh | 10 |
| West Khandesh | 5* |

* Present classes will be converted into independent schools.

(Further discussion on demands for grants resumed.)

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI (Western Sind) : Mr. President, I rise to move :

Reduce by half—Item No. 226 (Budget page 228).

This relates, Sir, to an item of grant of Rs. 1,81,000 for the distribution system of the Poona Cantonment water supply. This is an item which requires considerable explanation, and, therefore, I formally move its reduction by half.

Question proposed.

Mr. K. S. FRAMJI : Sir, I do not understand what the object of the honourable member is in proposing this cut, but if he merely wants the history of this water supply system, I shall be very glad to give it. The Poona water works were constructed some 40 years ago and it cannot be expected that the same size of pipes and the same service reservoirs will supply a very much larger quantity of water which is required on account of the increase in population and increased rate of consumption. It has been estimated that since 1914 there has been an increase in consumption of water of 55 per cent. nearly, due to increase in population and increased rate of consumption. The time has now come when, owing to the considerably increased demand of water, the necessary improvements and additions to the distribution service must be made. The same size of pipes cannot be expected to carry the same amount of water as they did 40 years ago.

The working expenses have also increased by nearly 75 per cent. since the last 8 years due mainly to the increased liability of some Rs. 20,000 per annum for chemical treatment of water since the installation of the rapid filtration plant at a capital cost of nearly Rs. 2 lakhs, and also to the general rise in the cost of labour and all materials. The Sanitary Engineer has submitted certain proposals for additions and improvements which are estimated to cost about Rs. 10 lakhs. They consist mainly in providing new main pipes in various parts of the Cantonment to increase pressures and flow of water, new settling tanks to store water for a 4-day canal closure need high service reservoirs and so forth. As honourable members know, the water works derive their water from the Mutha canal and that has to be closed periodically and therefore there has to be sufficient storage of water during such closures. All these items go to increase the cost of these improvements, and in order to meet them and save Government from loss, it was proposed by the Sanitary Engineer to increase the water rate which was fixed about 40 years ago at 6 annas per 1,000 gallons to 9 annas. Government therefore appointed a committee of seven members, 4 officials and 3 non-officials, to thoroughly investigate the matter. They submitted a unanimous report that the rate should be increased from 6 annas to 8 annas for the metered supply to the bungalows, but that the existing rates should be retained for tap supply in the bazar area. These rates are being introduced immediately.

Now, Sir, as I have stated the expenditure proposed is ten lakhs, and that expenditure is proposed to be distributed over five years. The full increased estimated consumption will not come about for another 6 to 7 years. Taking the figures of expenditure on running the water-works and maintenance, including the capital cost, the proposed new capital cost as well as the depreciation charges, the total running expenditure would be Rs. 29,50,000 for a period of eight years. And the increased rates which will be applicable during that period will bring in a revenue of Rs. 29,50,000, practically the same amount. Whereas the revenue at present is only Rs. 2,40,000, it will eventually increase to Rs. 4,12,000 in the year 1932-33, so that for the next eight years, the two items, that is running expenses including depreciation charges and interest on capital, and the revenue, will be the same. And thereafter there will be a large surplus of revenue.

There is only one other point I wish to refer to. I presume the intention of the honourable member in moving this cut, is to effect retrenchment in expenditure. But, Sir, in a work of this nature, it will be false economy if any retrenchment is effected. Practically the whole of the estimated amount will go towards the purchase of pipes and lead, and a very small percentage utilised in labour charges for laying them. If we restrict our expenditure we can either buy just sufficient pipes for the amount available and keep them over till the rest of the money is forthcoming in the following year, or we could purchase a smaller number of pipes and lay them in position. In either case the work will not be useful, and as water cannot be let down till the whole system is complete the increased revenue expected from increased consumption will not be realised. A work of this nature must be carried through after it is once undertaken and I trust the full amount will be passed as demanded.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD (Central Division): Sir, from the audible portion of the honourable gentleman's speech I gathered sufficient information to be able to say that the expenditure that has been proposed by the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government was really a necessary one. I think the object of the honourable member who proposed this cut was not to effect a cut, but only to get more information on the subject. Now, that the information has been supplied, I hope the honourable member will withdraw the motion.

Mr. G. I. PATEL (Ahmedabad Millowners' Association): Some of the points are not quite clear to us. It is stated here that Rs. 1,81,000 is technically to be sanctioned, and it is further stated in the previous line: "A comprehensive scheme for these improvements estimated to cost Rs. 10,26,704 is under the consideration of Government". Are we to understand that by sanctioning this amount of Rs. 1,81,000 we are committing ourselves to the total amount of ten lakhs ultimately? Secondly, it is stated: "It is expected that this increase will ensure a suitable return on the new capital expenditure". What is the amount of this suitable return? Is it 5 per cent. or 7 per cent. or 10 per cent. This method of getting a suitable return so far as I know, is vague. If they are going to introduce it in Poona, I would like to know what suitable return it would bring.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI: Sir, in view of the explanation given, I will withdraw the motion.

Question put and leave granted.

Question put:

That a sum of Rs. 2,91,000 be granted under Expenditure charged to Revenue, Public Health (Transferred), capital outlay on Improvements on Public Health.

and agreed to.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: Sir, I beg to ask for a grant of Rs. 12,72,000 under Public Health (Reserved), Capital outlay on improvements on Public Health, under B. Expenditure charged to Capital.

Question proposed.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI (Karachi City): Sir, I beg to propose:

Omit provision for acquisition of land for re-siting of the Arsenal and Magazine at Karachi—Rs. 2,50,000 (Civil Estimates 251).

I find, Sir, that this item is brought under Public Health. As a matter of fact this is a development project on the same lines, though of course on a smaller scale, as the Bombay Development scheme. A certain area of land has got to be developed, and some public buildings are to be put up there. Moreover, there is no description whatever, either in the Blue Book or in the White Book. Now, the land we are going to develop belonged to the Military department, and they have been paid or are to be paid, according to the honourable member, a sum of 30 lakhs. Because the Honourable Member referred me to Mr. Mirams' report, I find that he has estimated the cost of construction of roads, drainage, electric lighting, etc., at Rs. 20,00,000. This will be found on page 17 of the report on the Development of Karachi by Mr. Mirams. Then the building of the Arsenal will cost 10 lakhs. Besides this it is proposed to spend 2½ lakhs on the acquisition of the site. Therefore the total cost will come to 62½ lakhs. We have not got any other details except this one page of the report of Mr. Mirams. Now Sir, this is not a project estimate. This is only a report of Mr. Mirams, one of the Government officers, on the development of Karachi. The Government must give to the House some explanation as to the expenditure of no less than 62½ lakhs of rupees. I ask whether it is fair or reasonable to expect any legislature with a sense of duty and responsibility, to pass this item. Last year we were asked to pass an item for the Lloyd Avenue: but unfortunately I was not here and so could not oppose that item. This is not only a road in the development area but it extends beyond to the inhabited area of Karachi involving the taking up of a portion of the garden against which the public have expressed their opinion. It involves also the demolition of the compound of Sind College and the bungalow of the Principal. In the absence of any details we cannot be expected to have a knowledge of the inner workings of the Public Works Department, or of the Health department or any other department under which this project is proposed to be executed.

Then, Sir, it appears to me that projects of this description ought to be entrusted to the local bodies. In former years Government handed over to the municipality all lands available in Karachi; and it is only right and fair that all lands within the precincts of a large town over amenities of which the municipality is incurring a great deal of expenditure should be handed over to that body for development. Apart from this question, the Karachi municipality has put in a claim for 1,40,000 sq. yds. of the land which they had in previous years handed over to Government for the purposes of the Military Department. Now that the Military Department has handed over the whole of the land to the civil authorities it is only fair and just that the Karachi municipality should get back its own land. This is a considerable area of 1,40,000 square yards, or more than 30 acres of land. If this land is handed over as it ought to be what would Government realise from this scheme? Looking at the rate at which Government are spending money and looking to the fact that the land has been divided into large plots of 3,000 square yards each, it is not going to be a paying project and we are probably going to have a Bombay Development scheme on a small scale.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: Sir, I think that I should give a little bit of the history of this case in order to enable honourable members to see that the project is not being rushed through in the manner in which it has been tried to be made out by the honourable member opposite. In the first place I should like to mention that I do not believe that he as a member of the Karachi municipality takes any exception to the project as such. On the contrary every local authority and every public body of importance in Karachi has been apprised of this project, has asked for this extension, has asked for this land in order to do away with the congestion that at present exists in Karachi.

The project is as old as 1911. It has been under discussion since that time. Before the reforms came into existence an agreement was made between the Government of India and the Government of Bombay by which this land, known as the Artillery Maidan was taken over by the local Government. The sanction was actually given to it by the Secretary of State in 1920, therefore, before the reforms came into existence. The scheme was that the plot of ground covering about 180 acres should be taken over by the local Government and also the cost of rebuilding an arsenal should be borne by the local Government. Thirty-one lakhs was estimated as the cost of construction and cost of the land as well as the re-siting of the new arsenal. This Government was not to be responsible for more than 31 lakhs to the Government of India. As a matter of fact Rs. 10,67,000 have already been paid : 2 lakhs in 1920-21 ; Rs. 2,50,000 in 1921-22 ; and Rs. 5,76,000 in 1922-23. Now, the military authorities expect to spend on the rebuilding of the arsenal 10 lakhs in 1925-26, and 2½ lakhs for the acquisition of the site on which this arsenal is to be constructed. I do not think it is quite correct to say that we have only one report of Mr. Mirams with regard to this scheme. As a matter of fact the honourable member is probably aware that since the first report there has been a further reduction in the estimated cost of development. The honourable member referred to the first report of Mr. Mirams wherein the figure is stated as 20 lakhs. That figure has been considerably reduced. We have been watching the development and the expenditure on it and we are trying to reduce it as much as possible. The reduced figure which Mr. Mirams has subsequently supplied stands at Rs. 14,00,000 odd on drainage and roads and lighting, etc., and also on laying out of gardens. I do not think the honourable member is correct in saying that the public of Karachi will be deprived of the open spaces that are at present included in the garden. As a matter of fact considerable amount of this land will be kept as open space for people to use in the artillery maidan. But the width of the avenue has been considerably reduced and the length of that avenue is at present under consideration, and we hope to see that the estimates at present put down by Mr. Mirams are not exceeded, but if anything they might be reduced.

That this scheme has been within the knowledge of all public bodies in Karachi is evidenced from the fact that a conference was held with the municipality and other public bodies to consider what should be charged for water charges by the municipality. I believe that other conferences were held where the whole scheme was fully gone into, but I am afraid I am unable to give the details of them. At this conference the Commissioner in Sind was there as chairman, and there were also present, the Collector of Karachi, the President of the Karachi municipality, Mr. Jamshed Mehta, the Executive Engineer, Major Johnston and the Chief Officer, Mr. Lewis of the Karachi municipality.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMED : What was the date of the conference ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : It was so late as August 1924. So that the municipality were fully represented in their President as well as the chief officer. Formerly this project had also been sent for consideration to the various commercial bodies in Karachi and they also had an opportunity of expressing their opinion on it. Mr. Mirams has also stated in his estimate the money that we are likely to receive after the development of this maidan takes place ; the estimated area of land that will be available for sale is 106 acres. Here I may mention that the dispute which the Karachi municipality has raised about the land that they ought to have is not 140 thousand square yards but 120 thousand square yards: it comes to about 25 acres which is less than one-fourth of the area that will be for sale. I do not think it is desirable at this moment to go into the merits of the dispute which exists between the Karachi municipality and Government. It is a matter that can only be decided in another tribunal, because we feel that the Karachi municipality have not got much of a claim to this land under the special circumstances of development. It is perfectly true that development projects should be as far as possible undertaken by the local body. We should have been very pleased if the Karachi municipality had undertaken this development, but it means a very large sum of money to be put down and it is very doubtful. Indeed the Karachi municipality felt that they were in a position to put down this sum in addition to the heavy expenditure on development. Otherwise they would have asked for carrying it out. The period for sale of the land has been taken at a conservative estimate by Government. Mr. Mirams has for the purpose of his calculation taken so long a period as 20 years. He values the total receipts when the whole area is sold at the end of 20 years, at one crore and 48 lakhs, and he arrives at the present value of this amount on a 5 per cent. basis only at 80 lakhs and 10 thousand rupees. The value of land occupied by the court of the judicial commissioner is 17 lakhs 81 thousand. The project therefore will show a profit of 34 lakhs and 45 thousand, and if we exclude the value of the land occupied by the judicial commissioner's court, there ought to be according to these figures a net profit of 16 lakhs 62 thousand rupees.

There is one more point to which, Sir, I should like to refer and that is the fact that the Council has all along been apprised of this project. It is not that this has been placed before them for the first time.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD : Is that so ? What portion did you get last year ?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. METHA : Last year we got 95 thousand rupees from the budget for payment to the North Western Railway for certain building of theirs which stood in the artillery maidan, and as I said 10 lakhs and 70 thousand have already been paid in the various years that I have mentioned to the Government of India. There is also this fact to remember that in a long debate that took place about 2 years ago if my memory serves me right, the question of judicial commissioner's court was fully debated in this Council and these courts were to be located in the artillery maidan which was to be developed in keeping with the imposing buildings that would be put up for the judicial courts. So that, Sir, it will be evident to the honourable members opposite that whenever an opportunity has occurred the Council has been taken into confidence and all the items have been placed in the budget. If there is any further information that is wanted I will be pleased to supply it, but I do want the Council to remember this fact that there was an agreement with the Government of India which agreement we must carry out and the payment asked for must be made to the military authorities in the terms of the agreement sanctioned by the Secretary of State in 1920.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI (Karachi City) : Sir, I do not wish to press this matter any further, but I want to say that the Karachi municipality would have been pleased to take this in hand, but Government has had an eye to business, and with their usual greed for land, they desire always to carry on development projects which ought properly to be handed over to local bodies. I also desire to bring to the notice of this House the fact that it is not fair that projects of this character should be put before this House in this manner. I wish to repeat that we have had no particulars with regard to this project with the exception of a report of Mr. Mirams which has not been supplied to the honourable members of this House, but which the members are at liberty to buy for themselves. I asked the Superintendent of the Government Central Press to supply me with a copy of this report, and he referred me to the Karachi municipality and the Chief Officer of that municipality charged me Rs. 3 for it. This is the manner in which projects of this character, involving the cost of lakhs of rupees are being placed before the House. I ask, is it fair? And we are told that there is a revised report—not a project estimate of any sort, but only a revised report—by Mr. Mirams, which we have never seen before and about which I hear for the first time in this House.

Then, Sir, there is one point about which I should like the Honourable Member to give me some further information, and that is whether this Arsenal is not to be re-sited at the Drigh Road, and whether Government have not land of their own available at Drigh Road. If Government land is available there, I cannot understand why Rs. 2½ lakhs should be charged to the public exchequer.

A reference was made to the Gardens. I have seen myself that a portion of the Burns Garden, which has been existing for a very long time and which is quite outside the Artillery Maidan area, has been taken over, because this road has been extended to the area which is an inhabited part of Karachi. There have been protests against this action of Government; but the road has been taken beyond the limits of the Artillery Maidan and has struck off a good bit of the Burns Gardens and a corner of the Sind College compound; and we understand that the bungalow of the Principal of the College is also to be knocked down. Public opinion is against this; and I would in any case like to have information about it.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA : Mr. President, I understand that the specific information which my honourable friend wants is why it is necessary to spend Rs. 2½ lakhs over the site. As I explained, the actual place where the arsenal should be rebuilt is not a matter for the option of this Government. It is entirely determined by the military authorities, and if they say that they want to have it at a particular place only, we must acquire that place. It is not a matter which we can determine. If the site which they want does not belong to the Local Government, it would have to be acquired, and it is for that purpose that this amount has been put in.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI: Government, I believe, has a vast amount of land at Drigh Road?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: Government does know that the land does not belong to the Local Government; that the military authorities have asked that the arsenal should be built on a particular site which they approve of and which does not belong to Government, and therefore has to be acquired. We have no option in it. That was the point that I wished to explain.

Then, another point which the honourable member made, rather supports the view that Government take. Apparently, he agrees that this is going to be a profitable business.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI: I do not.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: Then I do not see how he could claim on behalf of the municipality that they would be very willing to take this up.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI: The municipality would be able to do it cheaper than Government.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: It means that if the scheme is properly watched, it is going to be a profitable business, and I can assure my honourable friend that every endeavour will be made to watch this project as much as possible.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI: Sir, I beg leave to withdraw my motion.

Question put and leave granted.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI (Karachi City): Mr. President, I beg to move:

"Omit provision for construction of the New Arsenal at Drigh Road, Karachi, Rs. 10,00,000."

Question proposed.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI: Sir, I would like to have information from the Government, whether we have to pay this amount to the Government of India in the Military Department. If we have got to build for the Military Department, have detailed estimates been prepared for these buildings estimated to cost Rs. 10 lakhs?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: Sir, the arrangement is that we have to make payment to the military authorities for (1) the value of the land that they have made over to the Local Government, (2) the building of the arsenal, and (3) the siting of the arsenal, which is limited to Rs. 31 lakhs. We do not care how they build, or what expenditure they incur, but we have to pay not more than Rs. 31 lakhs.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI: I ask for leave of the House, Sir, to withdraw the motion.

Question put and leave granted.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. MEHTA: Sir, I ask for a grant of Rs. 12,72,000 on Public Health, Reserved.

Question put and carried.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR: Mr. President, I rise to make a demand for Rs. 3,21,42,000. I do not know whether any honourable member in this House desires to know how we come to this figure of Rs. 3,21,42,000. (Honourable members: We want to know.) Honourable members will notice that on page 110 of the Blue Book and page 4 of the White Book, under 55, Irrigation, the whole expenditure is put down at Rs. 3,74,55,000. From this has to be deducted the non-votable items which come to Rs. 14,32,000. Again, we have to deduct the charges for establishments, Rs. 30,64,000, which will be discussed under head 41, and Tools and Plant Rs. 8,12,000, which will also be discussed and considered by this House when my honourable friend the Minister moves his demand under head 41. If you deduct all these amounts that I have just mentioned, we come to the figure of Rs. 3,21,42,000. Sir, on page 110 of the Blue Book, there is a very concise and clear explanation of this demand. Honourable members, if they have read the Blue Book, will have noticed on what schemes we want this capital expenditure. I may here again remind honourable members that under head 55 we are making a demand for money to be used from loans and not from revenue. Under heads XIII and 15, it is from revenue. The Blue Book clearly states on what schemes we propose to use this amount, and I shall not weary the House by going into those details again.

Mr. President, during the general discussion, there was some criticism of the large works which Government are now undertaking, but I do not propose to reply to those criticisms in detail just now, as I shall have several opportunities of speaking when honourable members move their reductions. But I would like just to mention one or two points that have been raised. My honourable and young friend the member for Larkana stated that the officers we were employing on the Lloyd Barrage were inefficient. He also stated that several if not all of our officers only did five months' work in the year. Mr. President, I may be allowed to express the opinion that I do not think my honourable friend is in a very good position to judge of the efficiency of these irrigation officers. But if he had complained that we had denuded the other parts of the Presidency of the best irrigation officers and put them on to the Lloyd Barrage, his criticisms might have required some answer. We have taken the best officers we could find in this Presidency and put them on the Lloyd Barrage. But we have also seen that none of the other big works will in any way be neglected, as they are now practically being just finished off. Government, I need hardly say, are most anxious that the work on the Barrage should progress satisfactorily and quickly, and to assure ourselves, that is, the Government, that the work was progressing satisfactorily, we have asked the best authority on irrigation in India to pay a visit to the works and to report on them.....

An Honourable MEMBER: Who was that authority?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangir : That authority was Sir Frederick Gebbie, who is the Inspector General of Irrigation, an officer of the Government of India.

Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI : Did he visit the works ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangir : Well, Sir, Sir Frederick Gebbie, who is now the best authority on irrigation in India, did pay a visit to these works. He was there in the middle of last month—about a fortnight ago—and he has submitted a comprehensive report and I propose to read out some parts of this report, but they will be very short extracts.

Mr. P. G. JOSHI : Why not supply a copy of it to the House.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I think that will be the best thing to do.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangir : Yes ; I shall be very pleased to do that. I shall only content myself for the present by reading out very short extracts which go to meet all the criticisms that were made. Sir Frederick Gebbie says :

“The staff has been mainly employed on the preparation of detailed plans and estimates and there appears to be some misapprehension regarding the necessity for these plans and estimates and their nature. They are absolutely essential and are in no sense revised estimates as some seem to think. No project estimate for a system of canals covering thousands of square miles can possibly be prepared in sufficient detail to be used as a construction estimate. An attempt to use a project estimate for construction purposes was recently made in another province with most unfortunate results and, as I will show later, the same results would have ensued if work on some of the Barrage Canals had been begun without detailed plans and estimates.”

“To show the absolute necessity for detailed plans and estimates, I give the two following instances :

Dr. Summers—(whom most honourable members who come from Sind know)—claimed, and it is admitted, that the plans, and estimates for the Rohri Canal were prepared with the greatest care ; but when this line was laid out on the ground it was found that several deviations had to be made in Khairpur State to avoid graveyards, mosques and large villages. Elsewhere by making certain changes, a better and cheaper alignment has been found. Owing to these floods on the left bank of the Indus last year, the Indus River Commission is about to construct certain flood embankments and the area commanded in the Nawabsha district will be appreciably reduced by the construction of these bunds. If the construction of this canal had been commenced before the preparation of proper detailed plans and estimates money would merely have been wasted.”

“I have enquired very carefully into the progress made in the preparation of these detailed plans and estimates and have examined all available plans, etc. Taking the project as a whole, 75 to 90 per cent. of the field work has been completed. If the necessary additional establishment is provided all the plans and estimates should be completed and sanctioned during the next hot weather and construction should be in full progress by the beginning of October.”

I will again just take the liberty of drawing my honourable friends' attention to these few words : “If the necessary additional establishment is provided”. Now, Sir, he goes on to say :

“The Rohri Canal is in the most advanced stage and the completion of estimates is now being delayed for want of establishment. There appears to be a common belief that the establishment employed is excessive ; but this is quite wrong. This belief is probably due to the fact that people do not see earth being shifted, bridges being built, etc., but as I have tried to explain a vast amount of preliminary work is necessary before construction can be begun, if money is not to be wasted. This preliminary work does not catch the eye of the public and it is therefore assumed that nothing much is being done. The time has arrived when additional establishment is urgently required and I strongly recommend that it should be provided at once to make certain that construction can be begun next October.”

[Mr. Cowasji Jehangir]

I believe the last few lines are for my special benefit ; they are :

"It will be false economy to crimp establishment at this stage and, as soon as construction is commenced, all this establishment, and more, will be required to supervise work in the field."

In conclusion he says :

"Finally, in my opinion excellent progress has been made and all work in hand is being economically and efficiently carried out."

Well, Mr. President this is the report that this Government called for. They specially asked Sir Frederick Gebbie to go to Sukkur and investigate the progress of work.

An Honourable MEMBER : How long ago was that ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : A fortnight or three weeks ago.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR : On a point of explanation, Sir. I remember reading some little time ago a report of a lecture or a report by a gentleman called Mr. Wright who happened to be an engineer himself, in which he made some very stringent criticisms, to which my honourable friend the Finance Member made what he considered to be a satisfactory reply. Can the Honourable the General Member tell us something about that criticism ? I think the House would be interested to know something about it.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : Yes ; it was a lecture before the Royal Society of Arts. Well, with regard to that criticism, my honourable friend (Mr. H. S. Lawrence) who had replied to that criticism could inform you more accurately than I can. But all that criticism which Mr. Wright compressed in the lecture at the Society of Arts was given expression to in this country and outside this country on a former occasion and it was on account of that criticism that several other authorities were called in to answer Mr. Wright and to dispose of Mr. Wright's objections and criticisms. Therefore, what Mr. Wright said at the Society of Arts was nothing new. It was repeating what he has said on more occasions than one before. Well, Sir, we will be able to give you a complete answer quoting from authorities as good as, if not better than, Mr. Wright. All those objections of Mr. Wright and of Dr. Summers were considered by the Secretary of State before he sanctioned the scheme. They were raised before the scheme was sanctioned ; they were considered by the Secretary of State, and I may inform my honourable friend opposite that the Secretary of State took considerable time before he gave his decision. I presume—I do not know for certain—he consulted his own experts. But I do know that he refused to sanction this scheme till further information and further facts and figures were supplied to him by the Government of Bombay. The further information and the further facts and figures were supplied to him by the Government of Bombay, and it was only after considering the reply submitted by the Government of Bombay, and the objections raised by Mr. Wright and men of the same class, that the Secretary of State sanctioned the Sukkur Barrage.

[Mr. Cowasji Jehangir]

Well, I do not desire to detain my honourable friends very much longer. But I would remind honourable members that the question whether the Lloyd Barrage is a necessity or not is rather old history. This Council considered the Barrage project and passed the scheme. If we re-open the question of necessity on every possible occasion in regard to these big schemes that Government undertake, I may inform my honourable friends opposite with due respect that it creates in the minds of many feelings of apprehension and distrust. After the Council has sanctioned a big scheme Government raise the loan and undertake it. If the same questions that were once discussed and disposed of are discussed over and over again, and amendments are moved for the reduction of huge amounts, it creates apprehensions in the minds of many that at any moment the Council may throw out the budget demands and stop these huge schemes putting this presidency and its people to a considerable loss. Well, I for one am confident that honourable members have no such intentions. I feel confident that they do not desire that any one of these big schemes which Government have undertaken with their approval for the benefit of the agricultural classes of the presidency, should be stopped, hampered or delayed. The Council do not desire that. But I would remind my honourable friends opposite that that is not the impression that some of these big cuts on these demands give to people outside this honourable House. We who know our honourable friends opposite are confident that they have no such intention, but others outside who do not know my honourable friends as well as we do, carry away a wrong impression. That is an impression which we should not give either to this presidency or to countries outside it.

Mr. President, I will not now detain the House very long.....

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: You have already taken half an hour.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: Sir, you will remember I was not allowed to speak during the general discussion and so, I will.....

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: You are quite welcome.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: Now, Sir, some of my honourable friends opposite take a very long time to marshal their criticism and they put their criticism very forcibly, and I must be allowed, Mr. President, and I hope the honourable members will give me the indulgence of hearing my case fully. If I cannot put it briefly, it is my own fault. But I do hope that they will bear with me.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The Honourable the General Member has the right of reply on every motion that is put before the House.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: Sir, if I speak now, I will save the time of the honourable House by not replying to them at length at the time the motions are put.

[Mr. Cowasji Jehangir]

Now, Sir, I will not detain the House any longer. (An honourable member: Coal contracts.) If the honourable member asks a question, I will reply.

Now, Sir, I will now come to a question that has been touched upon by some honourable members opposite, and which has created considerable apprehension in the minds of some of my friends in Sind. I hear echoes of this apprehension in this House. I mean the policy that Government is going to adopt with regard to karia reductions. This is a burning topic especially for the zamindars of Sind. But I feel sure that honourable members opposite will also be interested in the past history of this controversy. Mr. President, karias are outlets on main canals or distributaries through which zamindars get their water on to their fields. On the size of these karias depends the quantity of water that a zamindar can draw off from the main supply. Naturally the more water the zamindar on the head of the canal draws off.....

Mr. H. D. SAHEBA: Sir, is this relevant?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Is the amount for karias included in the demand?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR: Yes, Sir.

Well, Sir, I was just saying that the more water that is drawn off by zamindars at the heads of canals the less flows to the tails. There has been for a considerable number of years a considerable amount of agitation.

Mr. MAHOMED AYUB SHAH MAHOMED KHUHRO: This is quite a separate question, Mr. President.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR: The point is this, Sir. Many of the grants for karia heads are included in this demand, and a large number of amendments have been moved to cut them out. The major portion of the amendments are directed against these provisions for karia heads. Therefore, it will be saving the time of the Council if I address the House now. I hope honourable members who belong to the presidency proper will bear with me a little time longer, because this is really a question which does affect the interests of my honourable friends the zamindars of Sind. It is time that my honourable friends opposite took a little interest in this question which affects the prosperity and happiness of my honourable friends the zamindars of Sind.

Now, Sir, I was just saying that the more water that is drawn off from the head, the less goes to the tail. The zamindars at the tails have been agitating for some time and strongly represented that they must get more water at the tails. We are all agreed—both the zamindars and the Government officers—that more water should be given to the tails of the canals. There is no difference of opinion about that. But the difference of opinion comes in in connection with the question as to how that is to be effected. Government have had this matter under consideration for some years. Conferences have been held consisting of Government officers, both Revenue and Public Works Department which have sat for days and reported to Government. The last conference took place in 1923, and they reported in favour of karia reduction. But Mr. President, the zamindars of Sind who are at the heads of the canals do not agree with the conclusions arrived at by this conference. The zamindars at the heads of the canals are of the opinion that the remedy suggested by the conference, namely, the reduction of the karia heads, will not bring about the results anticipated by our officers. The zamindars are of opinion that it is silt clearance and silt clearance alone that is necessary. They feel strongly on the point, and they feel that by silt clearance alone we shall get more water to the tails of the canals. Our officers are of opinion that it is throwing money into the canals : it is waste of money. There is this clear difference of opinion between our officers and the zamindars, especially the zamindars at the heads of the canals. Government have now come to the conclusion that the time has arrived when the interests of the zamindars at the tails of canals should no longer be neglected but unfortunately they form the poorer class among the zamindars. I am sure my honourable friends opposite representing the Sind zamindars are in agreement with Government that the grievances of the tail zamindars should be redressed. But Government have not yet come to any definite conclusion as to what policy should be adopted. Although a layman, I have tried to study this question to the best of my ability and we now think that whatever steps we take for the benefit of those zamindars those steps should be such that while benefitting those at the tail, should in no way injure the interests of those zamindars who are represented here by my honourable friends opposite. Government have come to the conclusion that before they decide the policy of karia reduction they should try the experiment of having karias reduced on two canals this year : one on the left and one on the right bank. Government came to the conclusion in November last and announced their policy. They propose also to make an experiment as regards the clearance of silt on two canals : one on the right and one on the left bank. No further steps will be taken till the results of the experiment are known. I will mention the names of the canals : karia reduction will be in the case of only one small canal—Mubarak ex Dad ; the experiment of silt clearance will be carried out in the case of three canals and they are : Murad ex Naul Kali and Mubarak ex Fuleli on the left bank, and Kakolwal in the Western Nara District on the Right Bank. When we have seen the result of these experiments, Government will consider the question and will decide the policy. But we do desire to carry with us in whatever policy we adopt the zamindars of Sind because the measures we may take are for their benefit. If the steps we take do not meet with their approval Government will be considerably handicapped. We want to carry the zamindars with us and it is for that purpose that these experiments are to be made. The orders for these experiments were issued in November last. But I may state that there are certain demands included in the budget for karia reduction. I assure honourable members that it was never the intention of Government to utilise one rupee of these provisions for Karia reductions. It was their intention to use the money for the experiments I have mentioned.

[Mr. Cowasji Jehangir]

[Mr. Cowasji Jehangir]

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I should like to know whether the honourable member will take some more time. If he will take more time, I think we should now adjourn for tea.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: I will not take more than two or three minutes, Sir.

If more money is now required for that purpose Government will come to the honourable House for a supplementary grant. In the meantime Government are prepared to withdraw all these demands for the present.

Because you were very anxious, Mr. President, I have now finished.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I am not suggesting anything. It is for the Council to decide whether a speech is too long or too short and they have got the constitutional remedy in their own hands. I have nothing to do with it.

(After recess.)

Mr. MAHOMED AYUB SHAH MAHOMED KHUHRO (Larkana District): Sir, I beg to move:

"That item No. 214 (Blue Book), Rs. 5,000 for constructing sluices over Zamindari Karias be omitted."

The remark made on this item is as follows:—

"As there is deficiency of water at the tails of canals it is very necessary to construct pucka sluices there to take the place of katcha sluices in the upper reaches which are drawing water much in excess at present. The work is thus essential for the proper distribution of water."

I submit Sir, that this remark itself is a fictitious one. I quite disagree with the P. W. D. and so does every zamindar of Sind in their policy of reduction of kaira heads, a policy which is being initiated by the P. W. D. officers this year, and will be encouraged more and more every year.

The honourable member, at the representations of the Sind members, came down to Sind and held two conferences one at Hyderabad and the other at Sukkur. In these conferences, about three hundred or over zamindars of head, tail and mid attended. They all in a body with the exception of only three or four protested against this policy of reduction of sluices. Those few exceptions which came forward to corroborate the statements of P.W.D. officers, were either related to the subordinate officers of the P.W.D. or were set up at their instigation, having direct or indirect connection with them.

It is said by the honourable member that only head zamindars protest but not those of the tail. I in reply to that, would submit, Sir, that I myself possess fairly good area of the extreme end of Rawala, which is a distributary from western Nara. I get less water, not enough to cultivate my land, and I have never come forward to say that the sluices of zamindari karias above mine be reduced. What I have said and am going to repeat even now is that the tail of Raymah be widened and improved to the entire satisfaction of the tail people.

[Mr. Mahomed Ayub Shah Mahomed Khuhro]

Here is my friend Khan Sahib Karimbuksh Jatoi, who is a representative from the same district, who possesses a good deal of area at the tail of canal. He says the same thing. So are some other members as well.

The Honourable Member says that he has issued orders that for the sake of experiment these canals may be done silt clearance to the satisfaction of the zamindars concerned and sluices be reduced on one canal. What I hear from my friends is that they, in order to prove that the experiment proved an absolute failure and that they are fully justified in initiating this policy of reduction of sluices, have selected such hopeless karias for silt clearance that they can never improve them. I know at least one distributary out of the three selected for experiment, and which is in my district, it is Kakal-mahs, I am positive that this distributary can under no circumstances be improved. It has numerous zigzags. So as soon as the water waters it is silted up. It can only improve if they change its whole construction and design it as a straight canal, taking off all its zigzags. Those who possessed lands over it have either arranged some other source of water supply or have preferred leaving lands uncultivated than to bother over it.

Similarly, the branch selected for the reduction of sluices is, I am told, such that the lands at its tail are low-lying and they require only a little more supply of water than what they get now.

I submit that the object of this sort of selection is simply to show at the end of the year that the experiment proved a failure. So it is obvious from this underhand policy of playing with the just rights and the claims of the agriculturists, that this their new policy is already proved a faulty and oppressive one, before they can put it to taste.

It is said that the Sind members of this Council seem to have either their lands at the head of canals or have sympathy with those of head alone.

In reply to that, Sir, I would submit that this is the grievance which was felt by my predecessors, the members of the last term of Council, and it is the grievance felt by me and my colleagues in the present lot. Many of them have not been returned this time. So, how is it possible that only those who possess lands at the head are returned to the Council and not those who possess at the tail. Besides we are representatives of the head people as well as the tail people. We owe a great responsibility to our constituency and are here to echo their voice here.

So, Sir, I in all earnestness urge the House to support me in this motion and the rest half a dozen motions for omission of the same nature.

Khan Bahadur S. N. BHUTTO (Larkana District): Sir, I rise to support the motion moved by my honourable friend from Larkana district. Before going into the details, I will request my honourable non-official friends to consider this question very carefully. Sir; irrigation in Sind is on quite different lines from what it is in the Presidency. When Government officials are drafting smaller demands in the budget perhaps our non-official members on occasions never consider what serious effects these budget items will have on the public of Sindh. The reason is that they have no personal knowledge to realize the difficulties and hardships of the landed class in Sind. Sir, this policy of Government was started first in the year 1907. There was an Executive Engineer in charge of Begari Canals. He took fancy to reduce the sluices of private karias. May I ask the honourable member in charge whether when this policy was started there was any complaint made by any of the agriculturists at tails of canals about insufficient supply of water. Absolutely none. This policy was started simply to save money for the comfort of officials, to have more money available for bungalows and gardens and at the same time to provide people, that is to say the zamindars, at the tail with water, as then their demand was not much without spending anything over clearance. Sir, if the Public Works Department officials had any foresight to see what would be the result of this policy they would have considered twice before taking this policy into hand as they did not apprehend perhaps silt at the tail to that effect as it really got accumulated and made tail of canals hopeless to draw water. But from their point of view they being technical experts they thought this system will prove effective at the cost of upper zamindars, they will have no way to get clearance done and at the same time save the huge amount of funds to be spent at their own sweet-will as they chose to do. We agitated but the reply was that we are lay people and do not understand. The fact is that we are practical people on the spot. We are not technical, but that makes no difference. So far as our experience and knowledge goes we are quite competent to know what is bad and good for people. Let me inform this House of my personal knowledge that sometimes the Public Works Department officials proposed certain new cuts and when we, the zamindars, advised them that they would be of no use and will do no good they are sure to prove failure. These officials do not listen to us, they say that we have no technical knowledge; they spend Government money in spite of the warning they get and in the end the result is that though they excavated these new cuts at great cost for our benefit the result is that water from those cuts goes back into the Indus instead of falling down into the canal. The karia reduction policy in spite of its failure is being pursued in the teeth of great opposition. What does it show but lack of interest in the welfare of the zamindars and the people of Sind, simply to justify the action of the officials, knowing it fully well that nobody wants it and that it is beneficial to no one. On the contrary, it has proved detrimental to most of the zamindars of the province. These are our own personal experiences. At that time, when they introduced this policy they did not imagine the result would be so adverse. They thought that for the zamindars at the tail there would be enough of water. If the people at the tail did not have enough of water, they perhaps believed that they could continue reducing supply of upper people without anybody to question their action. But the results have been contrary to their expectations. The position of the head has become like that of the tail and the position of the tail like that of the head. They have failed to bring prosperity to tail people and have done great harm to upper people. In short, this action and policy while doing no good to anybody, has brought ruin to many. As soon as people were hit by reduction of their sluices, they thought over the question very seriously. They tried to improve their karias by putting pucca embankments to protect their karias from heavy silt, had their own clearance and effected other improvements at a great cost. Two or three years later, the Public Works Department people found the zamindars not so seriously handicapped as they had expected. They therefore reduced their karias further with an excuse that their karias were drawing more water than they were entitled to do. So, in some cases these karias have been repeatedly reduced from time to time. Sir, if there is no monsoon or there is less water in the river, it is beyond human hands to remedy it; it is the will of God. But when water is plenty, within one's reach, one is not allowed to have it, it is simply the fault of high Public Work Department officials, who consider themselves empowered to dictate terms to people to cultivate only enough land to get through and let the rest of it go to waste. Since this policy was introduced, there have been complaints, protests and agitation from time to time. There are no two opinions in Sind on this question; Hindus and Mahomedans alike have been complaining about it. I ask, if reduction in private karia sluices is profitable to tail people, why they do not ask for it. Is there any reliable representation from tail people on record through their representatives in the Council, through the press or their associations? I dare say no. Have not the people got voices? Do they not know their interests? Of course they have got voices, they know their interests, but the fact is that they know very well that it is clearance and clearance alone which will help them and not cutting the bread of upper people by reducing their supply of water.

[Khan Bahadur S. N. Bhutto]

[Khan Bahadur S. N. Bhutto]

I should like to bring to the notice of the honourable House that there are certain parts in Sind on the tails of canals which are cultivated by monsoon water; these floods are called Kir which overflows, and people cultivate their Rabi crops on it. Really speaking, these people have no right to any regular supply of water from canals in Sind. Finding abundant water in the past in canals, these people approached the officials if they could be allowed to utilise the spare water; the canals were extended downwards which are called tails now, and the people were allowed to water their Rabi crops on payment of some assessment. Gradually, the people took more and more advantage of this facility; they installed lifts for getting the water out to the fields for their Kharif dry crops. Then they started regular cultivation of Kharif dry crops by means of this water; now they want to have rice cultivation, and the result of it is that the upper people are deprived of their legitimate share of this water to provide for those people who have got absolutely no claim over the water on that canal. I would submit that these upper and middle people have been cultivating their lands and drawing water from the canals since the commencement of the British Raj. They pay comparatively high assessment, Rs 5 to Rs. 6 per acre. Are they therefore not entitled to have their land cultivated when water is within their reach? From what authority do these officials draw their superior power to ask people to give up two-thirds of their land and rights of pitch? Is it not a fact that when the pitch of the upper and middle zamindars was fixed on canals, they were granted their sluices according to their holdings? Were those engineers who sanctioned and granted these sluices fools? Unfortunately, our complaints to the irrigation officers have been unheeded. If matters were brought before the courts, I am doubtful whether the engineers would have any good case to justify their unusual order. These circumstances compelled us to approach Government to lay our grievances before it. We have found Government always very kind and considerate, but there is no consideration or fairness to be expected from their subordinates.

Then, Sir, as regards our lands to be cultivated, I have to bring to the notice of this honourable House that we are not allowed to cultivate the whole of the area of the land in our possession. That means that we are not allowed water for our whole area. In the olden days, there was no restriction of water for cultivation. If I had 5,000 acres, I could cultivate all that land, if I had water in my canal. Now, we are told that we are not entitled to cultivate all our area. We are entitled to cultivate only one-third of the area; the rest of the land has to be kept open for cultivation in subsequent years. That means we must cultivate land by rotation; whether it pays us or not does not matter, with the result that within a few years it will be all waste. It has actually happened that thousands and thousands of acres of zamindari lands have been forfeited to Government under the fallow rules for the want of water. In this way, I think lakhs of rupees are lost every year. The smaller zamindars are able to cultivate 75 per cent. of their land, but the big zamindars are allowed to cultivate only 33 per cent. of their land, and the argument that is advanced is that if the big zamindars are allowed to cultivate most or all of their land, the smaller zamindars would have to go without any water. May I ask the Honourable the General Member whether he would be prepared to part with a portion of his salary for the benefit of any of his clerks. Are his wants the same as those of his clerk or a petty landlord? How are the big zamindars to make both ends meet? Is that the sort of argument to be advanced on a question like this? Is it right to say, Sir, that the smaller zamindars must cultivate a greater portion of their lands because they are smaller zamindars? In this connection, Sir, in 1921, a deputation of the zamindars waited on His Excellency Sir George Lloyd, the then Governor; he was very sympathetic and he suspended this system all at once and ordered clearance in tails of canals. He assured us that if clearance would remedy the defects, there would be no reduction in sluices. When such clearance was done in these years, there was no complaint of insufficient supply of water at the tails. This created heartburning in the minds of these officials, who were bent upon pushing the policy of reduction of sluices. A conference of Sind officials met at Karachi, where it was decided to continue the reduction policy. Owing to financial difficulties, it was pointed out to Government that huge amounts of money would be required every year for effective clearance, and therefore the easiest solution was to resume the reduction of sluices. Sir, was it not proper and right to have called representatives of people in that conference to represent their side? People were not taken into confidence as the decision was arrived at according as the officials desired for their own satisfaction. Last year we approached the Honourable the General Member in charge of the department to redress our grievances. He gave us high hopes. We know he is very sympathetic. He promised to us that he would go to Sind and would remedy this old grievance of the people. We warned him that we needed his full support and help; otherwise he will not be able to do much; his P. W. D. officials will frighten him that it is a technical question; he may order on his own responsibility. He being a layman will shrink from handling the question himself. We told him that he would be quieted by his subordinates, from whom we expect no good, but we look up to him alone, local officials under no circumstances are prepared to see eye to eye with us. The Honourable Member assured us that he will try to see eye to eye with us and will come to our rescue.

Then, Sir, the Honourable the General Member went to Hyderabad. What happened there? With one voice all protested against this policy. But then I would not like to mention the name of the official. He was a subordinate official; he was asked to produce some people who should support official side. He had to produce some people because he was a subordinate and had to please his superiors. He produced his relatives and friends, in all about three persons to side with them. He came and told me: "What can I do? I have to respond to the orders". When the Honourable Member came to Sukkur he held another conference there. Before the honourable member arrived there, there were about 300 zamindars present and they asked me to represent their case. I told them they must decide for themselves. If they were all of one and the same opinion, I would put up their case, I told them. They all were against reduction and in favour of clearance and asked me with one voice to represent their case. I put a straight question to the Honourable the General Member whether he was going to discuss with us on the merits of the case or repeat and sing the same tune that he had done at Hyderabad, as in that case the conference was all farce, and why should he have troubled all these hundreds of gentlemen from all parts of the province to have gathered at their great inconvenience and cost, when the honourable member had already made up his mind in consultation with his subordinates as to the course of his action? From our point of view we have got 18 years' experience of this system, which has proved absolute failure. The long and short of the honourable member's reply amounted to this: "Well, if you do not like to discuss with me, you may go away; if you are prepared to lay your case before me, I am prepared to listen to it. I can't say more than that". Well, under the circumstances, Sir, we should have left the conference in face of the most unsympathetic reply we got from the Honourable the General Member. His attitude was quite different from what we knew him before he reached Sind, but simply out of the personal respect we have had for him, we remained to our most disadvantageous state of affairs. He had responsible high officials of the P. W. D. sitting by his side. I explained to him what were the kinds of people of Sind and those present in the conference. My speech was translated into vernacular by one of his responsible P. W. D. officials. The Honourable the General Member must have known the sense of the conference, but unfortunately the sympathy we expected was missing. There was nobody who was in favour of reduction of salaries. Every one of them told him what they thought about it. A little later some zamindars out of the 300 present there were brought forward, two Hindus and two Mahomedans, who asked whether you reduce sluices or make clearance. Give us water at tails at canals. We have got full sympathy with tail people. Some of us have got lands in tails. There were present all classes : head, tail and middle. What we ask is adopt a course which should really help tail people instead of affecting upper people which brings no good in any way even to tail people. These zamindars were put up by some unknown missionary to create differences among them.

Sir, it is very wrong policy that is being followed at present and I am only sorry that responsible officers of Government should make misrepresentation and wrong statements to the House and to the public. This is what hurt me most, Sir. There are thousands of people who are suffering and have suffered on account of this policy. When people's representatives do not want it, when it does no good to anybody, why do you force your policy on us? You are not satisfied with your experience. What is your experience? Who wants these things? Who asked you for these things? Point out a single honest man who would come forward and say that these things are wanted.

Then, Sir, my honourable friend says that we are going to have the barrage in seven years. This experiment has done no good since the last 18 years. Where is the necessity to create this disturbance for 7 years and this unpleasantness for 7 years? Has the country benefited owing to this policy? People do not want it. Why not postpone it for 7 years? Let them postpone it, let them stop it, let them do what people want and ask them to do it. Then, is this policy right, is this argument right, that the land which is already fertile should go waste? Is it right that these lands which are waste lands should be improved or tried to be improved at the expense of best lands? Government are going to undertake three canals as an experiment to have therein charmer. I have got no experience of two canals, but, as far as Larkana district canal is concerned, Khan Saheb Jatoi from Larkana says he has never known this canal to be ever in good condition. It is not possible to improve the canal. We spent so much money and it is bound to prove a failure. Why then proceed with such experiments? When you want to try an experiment, let Government take people into confidence and do everything in consultation with them. As the honourable member mentioned in his speech, the officials had a conference to consider this question. Our grievances are that they do not take people into confidence and hear what they say on the subject. Truly this officialdom is not desirable and the result is total failure. I have known wonderful things which the Council will be surprised to hear but unfortunately I cannot go further. I think the honourable member is trying to justify what his officials have done to save their prestige and merely for the sake of policy. Otherwise he knows very well that nobody was satisfied with his attitude during his tour in Sind. There are so many different public bodies, associations, representatives of people in this Council and outside, Hindus, Moslems; surely all are disappointed with his policy. None wants him to have further experiments at the cost of the public. The public had enough of the experiments during the last 18 years. His officials want them and he is doing all this in the face of united protest of the public of Sind. Sir, with these remarks I take my seat.

Mr. D. R. PATIL (East Khandesh District): Mr. President, I should like to make a short speech on the motion before the Council. We know very well, Sir, that our Sindhi gentlemen are not obstructionists; they are good co-operators. We know their loyalty. Now, Sir, we have to see in what way their demands are considered by the Government. That we have to see. We want to tell our Sindhi gentlemen, our Sindhi honourable friends, to learn the value of the proverb "United we stand, and divided we fall". We know very well, Sir, that Government want to do certain things for the Sindhi people. What is their reply? "You want to do some good to us by doing particular things, but they will not do any good to us; therefore, for God's sake do not spend money in doing those things." Sir, if that is the case, why should Government be so very keen on spending money for the people of Sind against their will. People's will is the point to be considered. I think that if that point is considered, then I do not see any objection for the Government to grant the request of the mover of the motion. Now, Sir, from all these considerations we should learn at least two things. The first thing is that at the time of considering the grievances of others let us put ourselves into their position and give our votes accordingly. The second thing is that if you want justice from others, you must do justice to them. If our Sindhi gentlemen will learn in future these things we shall duly oblige them. With these remarks I resume my seat.

Mr. M. R. JAYAKAR (Bombay University): Sir, on behalf of the Swaraj party, I rise to support this motion. Our party, Sir, is a party which aims at retrenchment all round, and I am glad I am having this opportunity of stating to my Sindhi friends that we shall be always with them on every occasion when they want to cut down the expenses of administration in Sind. I am very glad I have this opportunity of co-operating with them in cutting down expenses, although the motion is only for a very small amount. There is a French proverb which says

[Mr. M. R. Jayakar]

"long live trifles". I was told when I came to this hall that these amounts were only small amounts like Rs. 5,000 and Rs. 1,500 and so on. A party, Sir, which is bent on retrenchment is not guided by considerations of amounts being small or big. I am very glad, Sir, to have this opportunity of co-operating with our Sindhi friends in bringing about economy of administration.

Khan Saheb. KARIMBAKSH JATOI (Larkana District) addressed the House in Sindhi supporting the motion.

Mr. NOOR MAHOMED (Hyderabad District): Sir, in ordinary circumstances I would not have spoken. But I am very sorry to say, Sir, that as the Honourable the General Member, after a long tour in Sind, has made certain statements which are absolutely opposed to facts I am compelled to say a few words. I am very sorry to say, Sir, that he has made statements which have been rightly characterized as misrepresentations by the honourable member representing Larkana. He has misrepresented public opinion in Sind; he has misrepresented the interests of the agriculturists. Well, I am a representative of those agriculturists, and I have my responsibility to my constituency, and I can speak with more authority and responsibility than my honourable friend as regards those agriculturists. I will draw the attention of my honourable friend the Minister for Local Self-Government to what has been stated by the Honourable the General Member, and I will ask him to speak out to-day whether what I am saying is correct or not. The Honourable the Minister comes from the same constituency that I come from. I request him to speak out to-day, because for the first time to-day a certain policy is being laid down by the Honourable the General Member so far as this irrigation problem in Sind is concerned. The Honourable the General Member seems to state that we represent the people at the head, as if he represents the people at the tail. He represents none. We represent everybody: we represent the considered opinions of the people there. I am very sorry that when he came to Sind a certain atmosphere was being created, very dishonestly, by certain people, to show that there was some difference between the agriculturists at the head and at the tail of the water courses. As a matter of fact no such difference exists. They have tried to create this difference of opinion and they have failed so far; and they will fail in the future.

Sir, I want the House to bear in mind that the Honourable the General Member wants to enunciate to-day a certain policy regarding irrigation in Sind. He says that the people at the tails of the water courses are not getting sufficient water, and therefore there should be reduction of the heads of karias—the water-courses. For the purpose of what he calls ocular demonstration he wants to select one canal—the old Mubarak-Wah canal ex-Dad-Wah. That canal, Sir, is absolutely hopeless. Any experiment made on that canal will never be an honest experiment. I request the Honourable the General Member to say whether what I have stated is or is not a fact. Khan Saheb Karimbaksh Khan has given his testimony to the fact that it would be an absolute waste of money to do any clearance on the Kakolwah. Now, Sir, I shall speak of my constituency and about the canal in my district, the Mubarak-Wah canal ex-Phuleli Canal. I will ask the Honourable the Minister in charge of Local Self-Government whether it is not a fact that the old Mubarak-Wah canal on which were the lands of Anbab Jumo Khan had to be given up by him and a new canal excavated by him at a cost of Rs. 70,000, for bringing water for irrigating his lands. That had to be done, because the old Mubarak-Wah is now, on account of clearance work having been neglected on it, a hopeless canal. No money spent on it for an experiment is sound expenditure, and that expenditure will be a waste and no experiment at all. Therefore, if the Honourable the General Member really wants to do any good to the people of Sind, we will be very glad to render him any help he needs from us. He should not depend so much on the department of which he is the head and of which I believe he is an ornament. Sir, to me it is very clear that this experiment that the honourable member has been led to believe to be a sound one, is an absolute fraud, it is absolutely dishonest and no one considers it as a legitimate experiment. I fear, Sir, that the Honourable Member in charge of the Irrigation Department has been hoodwinked.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI (Western Sind): Sir, before I give a long history of this matter.....

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Are you going to give a long history? Have we not had enough?

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI: I will only put to the House and to the Members of Government the seriousness of the matter. This is a policy which affects the whole province of Sind, and therefore I must bring it to the notice of the non-official members of this House that they took a wrong step when they did not want to give a patient hearing to the Honourable the General Member. This is the day when this Council will have to express its opinion on the policy adopted by Government as regards these karia heads. This sluice system was started in 1907 when Mr. Robertson took charge in Jacobabad district. Under it powers were given to the executive engineers to give more water to the zamindars at the tail. Mr. Robertson came there from the Punjab, where he had seen the sluice system working on the Chenab. He adopted this system in the Begari canal and the Desert canal in 1908, without taking into consideration the special conditions of silt and other circumstances that were not present in the Punjab. Now, Sir, in order to determine the size of the sluice, it was necessary to take calculations of what is called the full supply level of water in the canal. Now, Sir, the experiments were not conducted by Mr. Robertson personally; he conducted only one or two. The experiments were conducted by his subordinates. I am speaking from regular figures that formed the subject matter of a civil suit in Sind which was finally decided by the Court of the Judicial Commissioner. I am speaking from facts and figures that in certain instances the experiments made were so absolutely wrong that the area cultivated by one cusec of water was estimated by the subordinate officers to yield 80 while Government do not take it for more than 36 or 42. These are matters in which calculations were absolutely hopelessly wrong. It was on these calculations that the reductions were based. It was absolutely unnecessary for responsible officers to intervene. The reduction of karias has been going on from time to time since 1908 on the same canal and on the same sluices with disastrous results in many cases. This reduction policy was initiated by Mr. Robertson. Our last secretary of the P.W.D., Mr. Griffiths, was a great opponent of that policy and up to now he stands an opponent of that policy of reduction of karias and also many of the other engineers, because Mr. Griffiths was for some time Chief Engineer with us. There were other engineers who held the opinion that the reduction of sluices would redress the grievances of zamindars.

[Mr. B. G. Pahalajani]

The Indus and its canals are not the same as here. Our Indus has got a large quantity of silt and flows with a great velocity, and when water is carried with force into the canals the tail of the canals becomes silted up. The tails are narrow. A canal that is 50 feet broad at the head is 12 feet in breadth at the end. It becomes narrower and narrower as the canal moves to the tail and naturally a low gradient becomes higher owing to the silt. Under these circumstances excavation should be carried on.

Now, I wish to draw the attention of the House to one important point, whether the zamindars in Sind demand this kind of treatment—the reduction of the karias. I had to bring this to the notice of Mr. Griffiths at the request of some of the zamindars at the tail, one of whom came specially to me for this in Poona—one at the tail of the Begari. Begari canal is one of the biggest canals, running 76 miles long. The zamindars belonged to the Shahdaskot taluka and they insisted upon excavation being carried out. I am speaking the opinion of these zamindars and this statement they made will be found in the letter that I handed over to them for Mr. Vacha. The whole trouble is due to a conflict of opinion. On one side certain engineers hold the view that the karia reduction is beneficial to the interests of zamindars at the tail end of canals, on which Government rely. On the other side they say that because at the tail end it becomes silted up and the gradient is destroyed, whether you have sluices or not, the water will not flow. That is the situation. I wish to bring to the notice of the Council and the Honourable Member in charge that this is a serious matter in which it is good to determine once for all the policy which the Government should adopt. My honourable friend for Larkana has already pointed out that whatever money is provided by Government for excavation purposes is not properly spent. I myself asked a question as to whence the expenditure on the upkeep and maintenance of bungalows and gardens of officers of this department is met; and whether any separate accounts are kept. Government did not give any reply as to whether a separate account is kept or not. In fact the amount of money set apart for excavation is devoted to the upkeep of bungalows and gardens.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : No.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI : It is so : he will be satisfied that expenditure on Gardens and Bungalows is debited to no head : it is debited to clearance. In support of the clearance theory, I had letters addressed to me from the zamindars at the tail : I may tell the Honourable the General Member that I have received so many requests to get more money for excavation that I have approached the Superintending Engineers and I have succeeded in making the Superintending Engineers to apply for and get more money.

Without being long I think in this matter I must strongly support my honourable friend from Larkana. If the Honourable the General Member wants to do something beneficial to the people, he must take into confidence not only the people but also experts in that department who have now retired and who can give independent opinion and not fear to express their opinion as experts in service will do. Otherwise, a small mistake in the reading of the velocity or a small difference in the area on which depends the whole question will vitiate the experiment. I strongly support the motion for reduction.

MOULVI RAFI UDDIN AHMAD (Central Division) : Sir, one thing is quite clear that the Honourable the General Member does not understand either the head or the tail of the question. Sir, as was rightly pointed out by my honourable friend Mr. Jayakar, in politics there are neither permanent enemies nor permanent friends. The Honourable the General Member is initiating a new policy. He is there as a link between the officials and the non-officials, the people and the Government. But I am afraid he is only a missing link. He does not himself know anything about engineering. Hence are two courses left open to him, either to listen to his officials, who are interested parties, or to the people. One thing is quite certain, Sir, that the officials whether they are of the Public Works Department or of anywhere else, they are to-day in India and to-morrow in the northern climes, but the people are always here. If the officials commit mistakes the people have to suffer (hear, hear).

Therefore the right policy is to follow the will of the people and not to follow the will of the officials. Far be it from me to say that the officials are not doing their best. We are not here as experts. There is one index however which we should follow and that index is the mind of the people, and the mind of the people here is the voice of the representatives of the people of Sind. I do not always follow the will of the people (laughter) as according to the honourable member for Bombay but as I understand it. I had never seen greater righteous indignation in this House than what has come from the people that have always been patient themselves. The last stroke has broken the camel's back. I therefore, Sir, strongly recommend to the honourable member in charge to follow the feeling of the people and not to be merely guided by so-called scientific advice. As has been pointed out by one engineer, the right course to take was as had been pointed out by the Finance Member the other day while he said that he preferred silent votes of members to their vocal approbation. But vocal approbation by a silent vote was not the most moral course. When there was a clear will and indication of the people with regard to a policy, I hope the Honourable Member will value that indication and will be guided by the feeling of the people and not by official whims or interests.

Mr. J. M. BHURGRI (Thar and Parkar District) addressed the House in Urdu supporting the motion.

Mr. C. S. C. HARRISON: Sir, I have come as have the members from Sind, a long distance and I had hoped to hear some few words of praise for the irrigation engineers from at least some of the Sind members. But, Sir, if everything is true which has been said by honourable members from Sind I am afraid we must be a very bad lot. It has been said by almost all these members that our policy has been to reduce expenditure and in order to reduce expenditure we have abolished silt clearance and are taking up 'Karia' reduction as being the cheaper of the two methods for attaining a better distribution of water at the tails of canals.

Well, Sir, I think the honourable members of this House might give us credit for attempting economy, for we have been told that all cases of economy will be supported.

Mr. MAHOMED AYUB SHAH MAHOMED KHUHRO: We have said that the money that is being spent on this policy is more or less wasted and we urged that this money should be spent not for comforts but that it should be spent on the proper lines of silt clearance.

Mr. C. S. C. HARRISON: Sir, I am very sorry if I have misunderstood the honourable member. He addressed the House in English and I have taken the following words from his speech "this policy is meant to trouble the zamindars only and to save money and it does not benefit those at the tail". That is part of the notes I have taken down. I daresay the official reporter will subsequently corroborate me.

Mr. P. G. JOSHI: Sir, when an honourable member has given an explanation it has got to be accepted.

Mr. C. S. C. HARRISON: Very good. I accept that and I am very glad to hear that we are not considered as harmful to the zamindars as a whole.

Sir, we have heard from the honourable member Khan Bahadur Bhutto, something about the details of the meetings at Hyderabad and Sukkur. I happened to be present at those meetings. It was not a matter that directly concerned me, as most of the silt clearance will eventually pertain to canals outside the barrage canals zone, but, Sir, I was present as I had toured Sind thoroughly and heard many many complaints from the tail zamindars and I was able to sit there and listen and I heard a small voice speak. The 'big' voice came from the heads of the canals and the small voice from the tails.

The Honourable Member, General Department, will deal further with this subject and as he said in his opening speech he will inform the

[Mr. C. S. C. Harrison]

House what he proposes to do with regard to the items under consideration and as regards other items. But, Sir, I would like the House to understand that so far as the engineers were concerned the meetings were not in any way packed as alleged. If they had been packed then I think the honourable member from Larkana would have to admit that in a packed meeting the packers would see that the tail irrigators did raise their voice in favour of the karia reduction. But we are told by one honourable member that only three or four people, two Hindus and two Mahomedans, raised their voices in favour of karia reduction. We have been told that the delinquencies of our engineers are very great but I do not think they are so stupid as to pack a meeting with people and then find that only two Hindus and two Mahomedans are in favour of reduction of karias. I can assure members of this House that so far as all the senior officers were concerned, we took special precautions that it should not be a packed meeting. We made every possible attempt for everybody to come and give his views, and I for one heard far more than four voices raised in favour of karia reduction. (An honourable member here made an observation which was inaudible.) I will now leave that question. It has become rather heated, and the Honourable Member for the General Department will deal with it when winding up the debate.

The honourable the Deputy President has given us a very fine dissertation on the design of canals, but I am afraid, Sir, he is not very correct either in his theory or in his views on practice. Were the matter so easy as he makes it out to be, we should never have all the trouble we do have in trying to design our canals to be non-silting and non-scouring. There are certain old inundation canals which the engineers admit must have silt clearance, and that money spent on such canals under certain circumstances is money well spent. In the past, Sir, money was spent indiscriminately on silt clearance, whether the canal was suitable for it or not. The engineers' point is that we should go very carefully into these matters and see if silt clearance is necessary, and if it is necessary then it should be done, and if the money is likely to be provided, then by all means get the money from Government and spend it. But in most cases silt clearance alone will not cure the evil of lack of water at the tails of the canals, and we have tried our utmost to point out to Government that in certain cases karia reduction alone is required, in other cases karia reduction with silt clearance is necessary, and in a very few cases silt clearance alone. That is what we have been pressing for. The engineer certainly has no idea of creating injustice to the zamindar either at the head or at the tail, and I trust that the honourable member from Larkana will realise that the engineer has endeavoured in the past, as he will endeavour in the future, to be the zamindars' best friend. The honourable the Deputy President mentions Mr. Barclay Robertson's name. That officer, who was one of our ablest officers, had discovered that whatever was done for silt clearance on the Begari canal did not benefit the zamindars at the tail. I would ask any honourable member of this Council who goes to Sind to go to the tail of the Ewan Wah and see the village of Bago Dhero. That was once a prosperous village. It is now inhabited by a few goats and herdsmen ; there is no one else living there. The Deputy President has no doubt seen it himself. The decay of that village began before Mr. Barclay Robertson's policy of karia reductions was introduced ; it started in 1890 or thereabouts, and it went on though Government had done their utmost in the way of silt clearance. Silt clearance at the tail was tried for over twenty years, but that policy failed. Mr. Barclay Robertson then considered the question how we could overcome the difficulty, and he hit upon what I consider, the right method of dealing with the problem. From that year onwards, both silt clearance and karia reduction have been done. I admit to this House that the karia reduction was not systematically done. That, in a way, may be the fault of the officers themselves, but there was one thing in the way and that was the difficulty of obtaining funds. The officers, as money came their way, were unfortunately only able to take up two or three karias at a time and they reduced those. The Deputy President has pointed out that some of those karias were reduced two or three times. I have toured down that canal, and I can assure members of this House that one karia that I looked at had an opening nearly as big as the opening behind the dais of this Council Hall about 8 ft. by 7 ft. That karia is now about 5 ft. by 4 ft. after the three reductions and the zamindars on that karia are to-day as prosperous as they were at the time that Mr. Barclay Robertson carried out those reductions. The zamindars at the tail, those zamindars on the Ewan Wah that the Deputy President spoke about from Shahdadkot taluka, are to-day as poor as, nay poorer than, they were in those days. The reason was, as I have admitted, that the work was not carried out systematically. We have pointed out the difficulty to the Honourable the General Member, and he has decided that the policy to be adopted must be systematical, and for that reason he had come to Sind. The zamindars have stated that the P. W. D. policy has been entirely wrong. In other words, they have mildly put it that we do not know our job. Very good, Sir. We engineers say it is a fairly simple problem to tackle. The Honourable the General Member is prepared on behalf of the Public Works Department, in one or two small cases, to prove that our contention is correct. We have also started carrying out silt clearance to show whether the zamindars' contention that silt clearance alone is the remedy is correct or not.

Mr. NOOR MAHOMED : Those were abandoned canals.

Mr. C. S. C. HARRISON : On that point, I think the Honourable the General Member will speak.

I am very sorry that the honourable member from the Jamrao Canal spoke from a far distant corner. There were some witty remarks made by him, I am told, but I did not hear them. One remark was passed on to me, and it was that he said that there were many Rao Bahadurs and Khan Bahadurs amongst the engineering establishment, because those gentlemen provided the supplies for the officers. I am afraid the officers must have fared very badly, because if we look up the lists, we shall find that there are very few Khan Bahadurs and Rao Bahadurs either in the Provincial Engineering Service or in the upper subordinates. [Interruption.]

[Mr. C. S. C. Harrison]

I would conclude by thanking the honourable member from Poona for prefacing his remarks by saying that he considered that the engineers were doing their best. That is the most grateful word that I have heard during the whole of this discussion. I can assure honourable members of this House that whatever may be said, I would like them to accept it from me, on behalf of the irrigation engineers, that they are trying their best,—and they hope to continue to try their best—to distribute the water to those at the tail as well as to those at the head of these canals.

SAYED GHULAM NABI SHAH MAUJALI SHAH (Thar and Parkar District): (Addressed the House in Sindhi): Sir, the Honourable Mr. Cowasji Jehangir says that the Punjabi zamindars of Jamrao Canal are satisfied with this new system of modules in the karia heads. The Honourable Member further says that they have gone even so far that they have requested the Public Works Department for putting modules in their karias at their own expenses. I don't think it could be so. On the occasion when the Honourable the General Member had come down to Sind to settle these matters, he had called a conference at Hyderabad. I had then suggested to him to judge the sense of the house by taking votes, as that is the parliamentary way, and he could have been able to find what side the majority was. But he did not do that.

In the Thar and Parkar district there is a zamindari association and if the Punjabi zamindars had desired to have the modules they would have approached the authorities through their association by passing a resolution unanimously or even by a majority, but on the contrary the association has passed a resolution that they are opposed to these modules. In my opinion it would be better if a meeting of the Punjabi and other zamindars who have holdings on the Jamrao canal is called by the Collector in consultation with the Superintending Engineer by issuing notices to all the zamindars, and the feelings of the majority of the zamindars are judged by taking votes; the whole matter will be settled in no time, as there will be no objection if the wishes of the majority are respected. We two members from the Thar and Parkar district had submitted all the facts about reduction of karia sluices and such other troubles of the Public Works Department in the open conference called by the Honourable Member at Hyderabad. It appears very strange that modules are being put on these two branches of Mithraowah, on which we two members possess lands. Are we to understand that it is mere repression of Public Works Department officers? It cannot be fair to trouble us loyal subjects of Government. Out of these two branches one is in the 30th mile Branch Left Bank Mithrao and the other is in 45th mile Left Bank Mithrao.

I desire to bring it to the notice of this honourable House that these our karias are in the middle of Mithrao canal and they cannot be said to be at the head of the canal. I am at a loss to conceive as to whence the money came for putting these modules, while no demand was made by the Honourable the General Member in the last year's budget for this expenditure. The expenditure for reduction of the sluices of zamindari karias or for putting modules ought to be provided in the budget separately for sanction, so that we the representatives of the agricultural classes of Sind may get an opportunity to express the views of our constituencies properly and then to vote according to what they think right. I wish to make the Honourable Members of the Executive Council and the Ministers realise that they are responsible to the public as well, and they ought to endeavour to see that proper justice is done by the officers of the departments which are in their charge, and that they get no opportunity to repress the people.

I would urge on the Honourable the General Member to go through these facts himself and redress the above stated grievances of the zamindars of my district.

I beg to submit, Sir, just as the honourable member Mr. Jan Mahomed Bhurgri from Thar and Parkar district has said, that if we had also done the Rasai of the Public Works Department officers the modules would never have been put in the heads of our karias.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN (Bombay City, South) : Sir, I really consider this as a unique day in the history of the Bombay Legislative Council. I consider it a red letter day for the non-official benches. I say so, Sir, because after a long, long weary waiting, there is, after all, the awakening of the Sind members. I am very glad that an awakening has come and I do hope and wish that this awakening will continue. It is a lesson, Sir, which I do hope that the honourable members from Sind will remember and, remembering, will guide their behaviour in future. The lesson they have got to learn is this, that, after all, in the difficulties and the stress that they have to undergo, it is not their so-called friends on the Government benches that will stand by their side, but, after all, it is their brethren on this side of the House that will stand by their side, although you may have deserted them in the hour of their need. And this is the difference which you have to distinguish between your true friends and your—I will not call them enemies, but I leave it to you to describe. But I am surprised and I would ask my honourable friends.....

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I do not want to interrupt the honourable member, but I hope he does not wish to insinuate that the Sind members were voting against their convictions. I have pointed out before that I will permit no such insinuations against any individual member or a group of members of this honourable House.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN : Far from it, Sir. I have not the slightest intention to find fault with our new friends, for our policy shall be to harbour and humour them and to convince them that between the two, the more sincere friends of theirs are on this side of the House and not on the other side. Now, Sir, I ask the attention of the House and rather earnestly and seriously to consider the advice of men from distant Sind. What is the story that we have heard from these men from distant Sind ? These are allegations, and not vague charges as they were stated yesterday, coming from quarters where they are not accustomed to make any charges whatsoever. We can appreciate the extent of the difficulties, Sir, when these gentlemen come forward and speak out their minds so openly and so courageously in the presence of the high officials of the Government and speak in sentences and phrases which I must say has created absolute surprise even on this side of the House. What is the administration of Sind ? We have heard, although the honourable the Chief Engineer (Mr. C. S. C. Harrison) could not hear, that the honourable member from Sind said something about "baida". That is the very complaint the non-official members make. Supplying baida and supplying murgi ! It is something horrible ! " You don't supply us with baida and murgi, and we will cut off your water supply ". That is, in fact, the complaint, the story, that has been told by our friends from the distant Sind which I ask my honourable friends on this side seriously to consider. We hear so seldom such stories and such complaints from that distant land ; therefore, I say that this is a unique occasion, when the whole House should seriously consider the difficulties pointed out by our new friends, who are after all our friends, though they had gone astray.....

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : What does the honourable member mean by " going astray ". Does he mean the honourable members from Sind had gone astray ?

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN : I do not speak of the honourable members in the House, but I say those countrymen of ours in Sind who have been entertaining these officers, instead of protesting when they ought to have protested, I mean they had gone astray and they are responsible for this position. They had not given out their minds as openly as they ought to have done. I say, when these officers come to you, tell them " No more murgi and no more baida ". Tell them what you want, standing on your legs and not bending on your knees. It is, after all, your land and water is supplied by God. What barbarous form of punishment, Mr. President ! Water supplied by God to be cut off, because you don't supply murgi and baida ! Though there is the humorous side of it, I am more concerned with the tragic aspect of it. What must be the feelings of these men who have got to deal with these officers and who have got to please these officers and who dare not incur their displeasure and suspicion ? This is the story that has been told by our friends from Sind who find they cannot stand by the Government benches any longer. My appeal is specially to the Honourable Minister who comes from that land. He is placed, I must say, in not a very enviable position. To-day is the day when the interests of his constituency clash with the interests of his Government. There has been an appeal to him from the honourable members on this side to stand up and speak, and speak in the language of his constituency, and not in the language of his Government. I am sorry that he has kept silent so far. He cannot keep silent. There are serious charges against the Government officers ; there have been charges that an atmosphere has been created ; there have been serious charges that public opinion has been misrepresented. He was there on the spot. Let him speak, Sir, the language of truth and tell this House whether these allegations and charges are true, because these allegations and charges are not confined only to the province of Sind, but they are common to this presidency and to this country.

Then, Sir, there is the same old policy of divide and rule. Now, it is not a question of capital and labour; it is a question of the head and the tail. The honourable member from Poona rightly said that the Honourable the General Member was the missing link. He does not know either the head or the tail. The serious charge is there that the Honourable the General Member went there, and although public opinion was unanimously on one side—the respectable and responsible members of this side know that public opinion—still some other opinion was engineered and created to show to him that public opinion was otherwise. There is also another serious charge made against the House that this House has misrepresented public opinion. In these circumstances, it is the patriotic duty of the Honourable the Minister to come out. I appeal to him to state what the position is. Let him speak frankly and truly what the position of his constituency is. Are these wailings, are these various complaints and charges true? Or are they exaggerated? I appeal to him to state the position to the House.

Then, I may say only one word, and that is an appeal to the honourable members on our side to remember the words of Cardinal Wolsey: "Had I but served my God with half the zeal I served my king".

Mr. NOOR MAHOMED: Sir, I object to that strongly.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I have already called the honourable member to order. The insinuation is obvious and I hope no honourable member will repeat the performance, namely, of attributing motives to any individual member or group of members in the discharge of his or their duties in this House.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN: Sir, if I had been only allowed to complete, my point would have been made clear. I was referring to the interests of the constituency as they have neglected to serve.....

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The implication is obvious that they have served Government better than their constituencies in the past. The honourable member clearly realises that.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN: Sir, the only object of my appeal was.....

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Order, order.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN: I certainly say, Sir, that I never meant any insinuation against honourable members opposite. If I was misunderstood I certainly withdraw. I never meant any insinuation against them. If I have been misunderstood I want them not to do so. I am very glad that that constituency has been looked after. I hope all the members who come from all the constituencies will be solicitous to look after their interests.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSAIN: Sir, in response to the invitation that has been made to me, I would like to make a few observations. If I do not speak on this occasion, I shall be failing in my duty not only to my constituency but to the honourable members who come from the Sind constituencies and from other parts of the country. I have always been doing my best to represent their views in the inner councils of Government, and on this occasion also I have represented to Government whatever I have been able to gather their views to be, and it is in pursuance of that, that Government have not come to any decision. I have represented all the facts to the Honourable Member in charge, and he has not arrived at any decision regarding this matter. In fact, he has suspended the orders and he has even given an assurance, when he placed these items about irrigation before this House, that he will not utilise the money for that purpose.

The Honourable Mr. H. S. LAWRENCE: Mr. President, I should like to say one word on this occasion, because it is a question which I had a great deal to do with at various times for over thirty years. The question of distribution of water in Sind is a question of the life of the people, and in consequence there is nothing that the people of Sind take with greater seriousness. There has been recently a certain amount of levity in the remarks that have been made, levity which I greatly deprecate because I regard this question as one of the most important that can affect Sind. Sir, there is always a very great conflict of interest between the zamindars in the different parts of the canals. The officers of Government have two duties to perform in regard to these canals. The first is to attempt to get the water in the canals to go as far as possible, that is to irrigate the maximum area possible: that is the technical duty of the engineering officers. The second is the duty to see that the zamindars throughout the whole length of every canal have fairplay: that has always been particularly the duty of the revenue officers of Sind. Now, Sir, the two sets of officers working together have in the past worked in conjunction with the zamindars in great amity and concord, with most satisfactory results to the province of Sind. If you saw the canals now, and if you had seen them over thirty years ago as I have seen them, you would have found what a wonderful improvement has been made by the conjoint efforts of the zamindars of Sind improving their agriculture, of the engineers improving the technical management of the canal, and of the revenue officers assisting in the equal and fair distribution of water. It has been due to that concord that the province of Sind has prospered in the last thirty years, and the zamindars of Sind have many of them grown from comparative poverty to very considerable wealth. Now, Sir, this question of karia reduction at the present time is not a question which should be decided solely on the ground, as was suggested by one honourable member, that we should save Rs. 5,000 or Rs. 1,500 by abstaining from certain expenditure. If the expenditure of a small sum of money made the water go further and gave fairer distribution to all zamindars alike, then that expenditure will be amply justified in the interests of the zamindars and in the interests of the State. And when some honourable member wants to draw a distinction between the interests of Government and the interests of the people, I would ask this House to remember that there is and there can be no such distinction. The expenditure on the canals in Sind is a very heavy expenditure. Whether it is in embankments to keep away the floods of the Indus, whether it is in silt clearance to enable the water to flow more freely, in whatever manner the expenditure may take place, it is a big draw off from the resources of the taxpayers of this presidency. And if honourable members will consult those figures that have been supplied to this House and are on record in the debates of this House—the Questions and Answers—they will discover somewhat to their surprise what a heavy expenditure there has been over a long period of years on the improvement of the canals of Sind. Therefore, Sir, my only purpose in intervening at this stage is to represent to the House that there are very intricate and delicate problems to be considered in this matter and that this question should be decided without prejudice and bitterness of feeling, for the efforts of the engineers and officers in Sind are exactly in the same direction as the efforts of the zamindars in Sind in the improvement of the canals and the improvement of the agriculture and the growth of prosperity of that province.

Mr. MAHOMED AYUB SHAH MAHOMED KHUHRO (Larkana District) : Sir, I have not to say much, as most of the points have already been dealt with fairly clearly. I want to confine my remarks to one or two points raised by the honourable member, Mr. Harrison and the Honourable the Finance Member.

With reference to the remark of the honourable member Mr. Harrison that when he toured in Sind many zamindars at the tail complained to him that the zamindars at the head draw all the water and consequently they get less water for cultivation, I must say it is a lie.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: You must withdraw that expression. It is unparliamentary.

Mr. MAHOMED AYUB SHAH MAHOMED KHUHRO : Sir, I beg to withdraw that word, but I would submit in all politeness and without the least disrespectful intention towards Mr. Harrison that I cannot believe that those zamindars would ever have differed from the representation we have made in this House, and could have complained in the manner stated by the honourable member, Mr. Harrison. May I ask in proof whether Government has received any representation or memorandum from those zamindars whom he referred to? Zamindars of Sind have got a number of their associations and they have every means to make their opinions made known to Government and can make their voice reach the Government. Even at the conferences held, I am positive that two or three people from the Upper Sind and two or three from the Lower Sind complained that they get less water and even they never said that because the zamindars at the head draw all water therefore they get very little water. On the whole what they wanted was more water.

[Mr. Mahomed Ayub Shah Mahomed Khuhro]

The Honourable the Finance Member stated that many zamindars have prospered during the last 30 years. It is a fact that they have prospered; but it is not because they are getting sufficient water now. When the Public Works Department was under the control of the Revenue Department and before it was made a separate department, the zamindars were getting sufficient water for their cultivation and they prospered. They spent their income on the improvement of the lands. But the condition of the zamindars after the entire independence of this department has been not a satisfactory one and it will be much worse if this new policy is inflicted upon them. The very fact that the zamindars are being compelled to cultivate only one-third of their holding every year shows that they are to suffer. This clearly indicates that they want them to leave lands fallow. How can they be said to be prosperous under the present conditions? I would urge on Government the view of the Sind public that they want to revert to the old system which existed while the Public Works Department was under the control of the Revenue Department. The zamindars were getting proper justice in many cases while the Collectors had control over the Engineers. The Collectors knew the actual accuracy of the case; being local officers and coming in touch with the zamindars, they often consulted them and did what was beneficial for them even by scoffing at the opinion of the engineers. All this trouble has arisen after the Public Works Department has been made a separate department. It is now high time that we should revert to the old system.

The Honourable the Finance Member then stated that a large amount of money was being spent on the clearance of silt and a less amount on the reduction of karias. It is not that we want more money to be spent on silt clearance than what is being given to us at present. What we want is that the money allotted for that purpose should be properly spent. Our complaint is that that amount has not been properly utilised for the clearance of silt, which I have already stated.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: Mr. President, I think honourable members opposite and yourself have realised that this question is one of considerable importance to our friends in Sind. It has been a great pleasure to hear them all speaking. There have been several points raised by my honourable friends opposite and I will deal with only one or two important points. It was I think the honourable member Mr. Khuhro or Mr. Bhutto who stated that karia reductions have been a failure up to now. They stated that this policy was first adopted in 1907, that it had continued since then and at the end it had proved a failure. Naturally the House will want to know why there should be further experiments. It is perfectly correct to say that the idea of karia reduction originated with Mr. Robertson, I believe, in 1910. But, Mr. President, that policy was never carried out systematically or continuously in any one of the canals or in any part of Sind. It was spasmodic and it was unsatisfactory. It was carried out in a manner that neither the zamindars nor the Government could see any practical results. Government themselves are to blame for this, even more than their officers. Because

[Mr. Cowasji Jehangir]

Government changed their policy on several occasions. I think it is wrong both in the interests of the zamindars and the Government to go on changing this policy. If you only take two or three karia heads or half a dozen heads in a canal, you can never see good results and on the contrary it will entail hardship on those zamindars whose karia heads have been reduced. One honourable member stated that I do not know either the head or the tail of this question. I must admit that I am not an engineer. Whatever I know of this question has been learnt during the past year. But I have taken the trouble to read all the previous papers on this question with some care. When my honourable friends placed before me their case last November I told them that I would keep an open mind on this question and that I would personally examine it during my visit to Sind. During my visit to Sind, I thoroughly went into the question with them and I do not propose referring to the conferences that took place. But I must say that I cannot corroborate some of the statements made by the honourable member, Mr. Bhutto. There were a good many zamindars who represented the tails and there were a good number of zamindars who said that they have been suffering for years and years. They also said "Give us water at the tail: never mind how you do it." And at that conference my honourable friends agreed that the zamindars at the tails of canals did not get the water that they should, and that there was not a fair distribution, but they suggested the old method of silt clearance. I am not complaining about the expense but our officers definitely told us that they have tried this method and that they have failed to get water to the tails. Under these circumstances, Sir, I realized that when my honourable friends contended that the policy of karia reductions would never be successful they were genuine, they sincerely and really believed in it, and therefore I came to the conclusion that Government should reopen the question and on my return to Bombay orders were issued that no further karia heads should be reduced and that Government would consider the whole question again. But first both to convince ourselves and to convince my honourable friends the zamindars, I suggested that there should be silt clearance on two canals and karia reductions on two other canals to enable us to see the result next year for ourselves before Government decide on the policy. I made that announcement to my honourable friends in Sind, and to-day we are informed that the canals suggested are such that the experiment for silt clearance can never be successful: that the Public Works Department officers have suggested such canals as they know are doomed to failure. I do not think that that charge is justified. I do not think that the Public Works Department officers would suggest canals on which karia reduction would prove a failure. At any rate if there is any suspicion in the minds of my honourable friends I can tell them that the Chief Engineer in Sind to-day is an experienced officer of Government who has served most successfully in the Deccan; he is an Indian, and I do not think it is proper to accuse him, to accuse him deliberately (An honourable member: What is his name?)—his name is

[Mr. Cowasji Jehangir]

Mr. Vartak—of having placed before me the names of canals on which he knows the experiment is bound to be a failure.

Mr. NOOR MAHOMED : I am very sorry the honourable member is bringing in the name of an Indian gentleman in this connection. No one lays the responsibility of this selection on him. Therefore the honourable member should not create an impression that there is any attempt to cast aspersions on Mr. Vartak.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : The result of all that they said was that exactly. I have made Mr. Vartak personally responsible for selecting the canals, the canals are chosen by him, and I made that suggestion to him in the presence of my honourable friends and I hold him personally responsible. I am very pleased to hear that Mr. Vartak still retains the confidence of my honourable friends. At any rate the canals he has suggested are not in the opinion of some satisfactory and I am prepared to take other canals. Let the honourable members come to me and mention any one canal for karia reduction and also any other canal for silt clearance and I will accept those canals. But I do not think it is right to accuse our officers in this way. Can there be any doubt in the minds of any of the honourable members here that my honourable friend, Mr. Noor Mahomed did say that these canals were suggested with a view to prove the experiment a failure? I have suggested this experiment because I feel that we shall be able to solve this question one way or another. Considering the difficulties of the question, considering the opposition of my honourable friends who put their case so strongly, Government stopped karia reduction for the present. But one word more about this conference. Somebody just now said what about packing this conference? Well, Sir, I will give you the impression I got. I went to Sukkur where my honourable friends Khan Bahadur Bhutto and Mr. Khuhro were present and my friend Khan Bahadur Bhutto addressed the conference in Sindhi before I had a chance of saying a word and when I asked him what it was he was saying he informed me that he wanted to ascertain whether they agree to his representing their case. I thought it an excellent opportunity.

Khan Bahadur S. N. BHUTTO : Certainly it is not correct.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : I am repeating what my honourable friend said, namely that he asked them whether he should represent them all.

Khan Bahadur S. N. BHUTTO : They asked me to present their grievances.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : At any rate Sir, it gave me an impression that there were a certain number of tail zamindars who were anxious that their case should also be attended to. I do not wish to detain this House at this late hour. But, Mr. President, I must say a word about my honourable friend the Deputy President. He has taken a considerable interest in this question and he represents the zamindars at tails and heads of canals just as my honourable friend Mr. Noor Mahomed.

Mr. NOOR MAHOMED : Do you doubt it ?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : I never doubted it. At any rate, Sir, my honourable friend the Deputy President has complained in the past that zamindars at tails of canals do not get water. And they happened to be his constituents and he has rightly taken up their case and fought hard for them and I had an impression that one of the officers in Sind had told me that the Deputy President was one of those members of Council who is strongly in favour of karia reduction and that he would help Government to get karia reduction.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI : My statement is in writing. I have written to Mr. Vacha and also a letter to Mr. Francis, the Executive Engineer, Upper Sind, which is absolutely clear that I did not believe in the chary of Government about karia reduction.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : I have got the honourable member's statement. It is rather important to show that there is considerable opinion in Sind which is in favour of karia reduction. I recollected the statement made to me that my honourable friend was in favour of it. Therefore, I asked for information as to how it was that my honourable friend was in favour of it, and got this reply from the Superintending Engineer :

"Letter was received by me from Bhojsing Pahalajani complaining deplorable condition of Shahdaddock zamindars at tails of canals. Stop. In reply informed him that everything possible by way of clearance was done, but no effective relief could be given tail zamindars without karia reductions. Stop. He sent word through Shahdaddock zamindars that he will fight their cause in Council for karia reductions and told me personally also that he will arrange funds for more clearance till karia reductions carried out. Stop. I communicated this fact personally to Honourable Cowasji that Bhojsing has shown willingness to support Karia reductions when question came before Council. Stop. At Sukkur conference in October last some zamindars strongly advocated karia reductions in opposition Khan Bahadur Bhutto."

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI (Western Sind) : Sir, I wish to make a statement. I deny the statement of the Honourable the General Member. My letter to the Superintending Engineer is in writing. When the Honourable the General Member was in Sind, he could have asked me about it, and I would have been in a position to show him whether I had made that statement. My statement is in writing, and in that I have clearly stated that excavation is the only remedy. I asked for excavation and nothing more.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR : Anyhow, Sir, there are two points of view, and I only desire to bring them out. I only want to show that there are zamindars who are suffering, and all my honourable friends will agree that just as they suffer, others also suffer. All that we want to do is to hold the scales level, and I have asked for their assistance in holding the scales level. In the meantime, as I have already informed the House, the karia reduction policy is stopped for the present and I will ask for the assistance of my honourable friends when we come to reconsider the question. All these budget items Government intended to use for experiments on two canals. But if there is any suspicion in the minds of my honourable friends, I agree, on behalf of Government, to withdraw this and all the other items that follow.

Question put and carried.

Mr. MAHOMED AYUB SHAH MAHOMED KHUHRO (Larkana District): Sir, I beg to move:

"Omit item No. 215, constructing karia sluices on Great Marak Canal, Rs. 1,500."

Question put and carried.

Mr. MAHOMED AYUB SHAH MAHOMED KHUHRO: Sir, I beg to move:

"Omit item No. 216, constructing karia sluices on Sarfraz Canal, Rs. 1,500."

Question put and carried.

Mr. MAHOMED AYUB SHAH MAHOMED KHUHRO: Sir, I beg to move:

"Omit item No. 217, constructing masonry sluices over kacha karia heads, Rs. 5,000, on Pinyari Canal."

Question put and carried.

Mr. MAHOMED AYUB SHAH MAHOMED KHUHRO: Sir, I beg to move:

"Omit item No. 218, constructing masonry sluices over kacha karia heads along Kalri Canal and branches, Rs. 5,000."

Question put and carried.

Mr. MAHOMED AYUB SHAH MAHOMED KHUHRO: Sir, I beg to move:

"Omit item No. 219, constructing masonry sluices over kacha karia heads, on Indus Canals, Left Bank, Rs. 2,000."

Question put and carried.

Mr. MAHOMED AYUB SHAH MAHOMED KHUHRO: Sir, I beg to move:

"Omit item No. 220, constructing masonry sluices over kacha karia heads on Indus Canals, Right Bank, Rs. 4,000."

Question put and carried.

Mr. MAHOMED AYUB SHAH MAHOMED KHUHRO: Sir, I beg to move:

"Omit item No. 221, installing screw gates over karia heads ex-Gujra on Nasrat Canal, Rs. 5,000."

Question put and carried.

Mr. MAHOMED AYUB SHAH MAHOMED KHUHRO: Sir, I beg to move:

"Omit item No. 222, constructing masonry sluices over kacha karia heads, along Masuwah, Rs. 2,700."

Question put and carried.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The next motion is by the honourable member Mr. Pahalajani for a reduction of Rs. 10,38,200.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI: Sir, though it belongs to the Lloyd Barrage, it would come under 41, Civil Works.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: So, all these items, the motions with regard to which are numbered 698, 699, 700 and 701 will come under 41, Civil Works.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI : The establishments and tools come under head No. 41, and works under head 55. The amount for the works is Rs. 2 crores 83 lakhs. Therefore, all these motions 679, 680, 698, 699, 700 and 701 all relate to works.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI : I have given notice of a motion for a lump sum cut on the Barrage.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : The first motion (No. 679) will be taken up now ; it is the one which calls for a reduction of Rs. 2 crores.

In connection with these motions for lump sum reductions, my attention has been drawn to the procedure that was adopted previously, which appears to me to be the best procedure to follow on this occasion. The procedure was laid down by Sir Narayan Chandavarkar, and this is what he stated :

“ With reference to these motions for reduction, I wish to prescribe this procedure : The honourable member from Satara's (Mr. Adhav's) notice of motion is for the highest reduction, viz., Rs. 5,16,000, and will have priority. The other motions are for lesser reductions. On the former motion there shall be a general discussion covering the whole ground and principle of reduction and also a debate on the subsidiary question as to the sum by which the demand should be reduced. The honourable members who have on paper notices of motions for lesser reductions can speak on this first motion of the honourable member for Satara and state why they think those lesser reductions should be made. If the motion of the honourable member for Satara be agreed to, the other motions fall. If it be negatived, the other motions will be taken up in their order but they should be simply moved and there shall be no fresh debate.”

The debate that will take place will only be on the largest reduction. Once that is disposed of, the procedure laid down will be followed.

Mr. C. M. SAPTARSHI : Shall we confine ourselves to the Sukkur Barrage only or shall we be entitled to criticise the whole policy of the Irrigation Department ? I ask this question because my honourable friend Mr. Adwani's motion refers only to the Lloyd Barrage.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR : The present provision is only for Lloyd Barrage.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Therefore, honourable members can only deal with one part of the Irrigation Department, namely, Lloyd Barrage.

Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI (Kaira District) : Sir, I move :

“ That a provision to the extent of 2 crores be reduced from the vote for the Lloyd Barrage (Budget page 110).”

Sir, my point in bringing this motion is that it was represented by us almost two years back that the financial forecasts and the revenue forecasts of Sukkur Barrage and the estimates under the scheme were not properly framed, and that, Sir, the revenue forecasted would not be realised, nor would the expenditure be kept within estimate. For that reason perhaps, Sir, the Secretary of State has thrown the whole responsibility on this House. The Honourable the General Member has referred to the sanction of the Secretary of State, but my honourable friend will find that the Secretary of State, instead of taking the responsibility on himself, had thrown the whole burden on this House and had requested the then Government to place this matter for final sanction before the Legislative Council. Here are his words :

“ I note that Government of Bombay adhere to view that construction estimates are adequate and that land sales may be confidently expected to yield 12 crores 60 lakhs rupees spreading over 25 years allowing for certain concessionary grants to local Zamindars. In view of renewed assurances regarding estimates and of explanations tendered by Gebbie, I do not feel justified in withholding any longer financial sanction which I hereby accord. I presume that project will now be laid before local legislature."

Sir, it will appear from this that the Secretary of State has sanctioned this scheme on the understanding that the Rs. 12,60 lakhs referred to will be realised. I am afraid, however, and some of my colleagues in the old Council were afraid that this price will not be realised and we held that the whole financial forecast should be placed before a committee of this House and the whole forecast should be gone through by that body before expenditure is voted by this House. To that view I still adhere. Unless the Honourable the General Member or, for that matter, the Government are prepared to place the whole scheme of Sukkur Barrage and especially the financial portion of it before a committee of this House and get their approval, no further progress need be made under that scheme, except what is absolutely necessary, and for that reason I have proposed to reduce only 2 crores allowing Rs. 1 crore and 31 lakhs to continue. My reasons are these, that in the forecasts about 15 lakhs acres are represented as culturable waste area. That is, so much waste is to be given over for cultivation. In the estimate of the project it is shown that out of these 15 lakhs, 3 lakhs and 50 thousand are to be given to the present landholders, that is, adjoining landholders, at Rs. 15 per acre and about 6 lakhs are to be disposed of at prices ranging from Rs. 100 to Rs. 250 per acre. I talk of first class land to be disposed of at a higher valuation and others that are to be disposed of at smaller figures, and the total amount to be realised is estimated to be approximately Rs. 12 crores and 60 lakhs. I very much doubt, Sir, whether this price will actually be realised from these waste areas. Let me show this by an illustration, Sir. Suppose a particular price of land is disposed of at Rs. 250 per acre. Now Rs. 250 per acre means about Rs. 20 will have to be paid as interest charges at 8 per cent. If he has to pay Rs. 20 in interest charges and at the same time has to pay Rs. 8 as Government assessment on his land, then on an average say about Rs. 28....

Mr. C. S. C. HARRISON: May I inform the honourable member that it is quite different in Sind from what it is in Bombay?

Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI: I am talking of irrigational assessment; after all, he has to pay Rs. 8 as assessment on this first class rice land. So Rs. 20 plus Rs. 8 makes Rs. 28. Now the total income of the agriculturist in Sind is from Rs. 30 to 45 according to the quality of the irrigated land. The figures are given in the same project. I have found the figure to stand at Rs. 30 to Rs. 45; so more than half the amount in my view goes to pay to the money lender and to the Government, and from the other half the man has to provide for himself, he has to find the working expenditure and all other expenditure incidental to cultivation. That is the mess; and I ask my honourable friends here, those who come from Sind, whether any one could be found to pay Rs. 250 an acre as is laid down in the project report. In fact, even in the best of years, 1920-21, for instance,—which was of course a year of war boom and the price of land was highest—the sales effected by Government averaged about Rs. 24 an acre in Sind. Again, another point that I have to bring to the notice of Government is that most of the good lands are already in the occupation of the present landholders and only the inferior portion is not occupied. The occupied land out of the 65 lakhs acres that are proposed to be under the Barrage zone, about 51 lakhs are in the possession of the landholders of Sind, and only 15 lakhs of acres are Government waste land. How are Government going to realise such a heavy amount as 12,16 lakhs from those lands? I should think, Sir, not more than Rs. 15 per acre would be realised per acre. If he paid more the cultivator would be a loser. If the original forecast fails as in the Bombay Development, then this presidency will be burdened with a large expenditure in interest and other charges. So much as regards the price of waste land.

Then, I come to the assessments. The assessments are sought to be raised by almost 50 per cent. in the 7th year from the commencement of the Barrage. Take for example, the area under Ghar canal in Larkana, an area under rice cultivation. There, the average land assessment at present is about Rs. 5 per acre. For that district, the assessment is sought to be raised up to Rs. 8 and then to Rs. 10. That is, six years after the Barrage is started, the areas under the Ghar canal will be assessed 50 per cent. more. If we consider 1923-24 as the starting point, then in the year 1930-31, the assessment for the areas under the Ghar canal will be 50 per cent. more, and in the 13th year after the commencement, the assessment raised will be cent. per cent. I wonder whether my honourable friends from Sind will be able to pay that assessment. If they cannot pay, then I want a committee to go and arrange matters as to how the expenditure should be adjusted in order to enable a lesser assessment to be levied from them. (Moulvi Rafiuddin Ahmad: A committee of this House?) Yes.

Another point that occurs to me is this. Out of the 65 lakhs of acres that are commanded by the Barrage, there are some lands which are allowed 80 per cent. fallows, so that the zamindars are charged assessment on only one-fifth of the lands in their possession. Now, in the 7th year, when the revised rates of assessment will be introduced, their fallows will disappear and they will be made to pay assessment for all their lands. I ask Government whether these zamindars are prepared to pay that assessment. Has any agreement been reached on that point? I do not know whether they are prepared to pay that assessment or not. But my impression is they are not prepared to pay the assessments on their entire holdings.

Now, another factor that has been left out of account is this: that the provincial Government will have to undergo additional expenditure on the P. W. D. in the Agricultural Department, Judicial, Police and other Departments in Sind. In fact there is a proposal before the Finance Committee to increase the expenditure in the Agricultural Department to the extent of about a lakh and a half every year, and unless that expenditure is incurred, as stated in the circular the whole Barrage zone will come to grief some day. That is what was stated in the committee, and I am inclined to agree to that opinion. Now, in all perennial irrigation lands have suffered. In the Jamrao tract, in the Fuleli tract, and in the Deccan tracts, is it not the experience that the land soon deteriorates and Government do not get enough revenue, let alone interest charges. Perhaps for the first fifteen years, I am prepared to say, they may succeed in realizing the estimated revenues. But after the first fifteen years, when the soil is exhausted, I wonder whether so many lakhs of acres that are put down for perennial irrigation will not come to grief some day. Our experience of the past has clearly proved that perennial irrigation; without proper and adequate arrangements as regards distribution of water and without sufficient manure, does do a lot of harm. While in regard to certain crops, for example rice, more water will be of use and better crops will be raised if the soil is watered constantly and plentifully. With regard to other crops, if you use more water and irrigate the soil constantly without heavy manuring, inferior crops will be the result. All these considerations to my mind require to be thoroughly investigated before some arrangement is made regarding this scheme.

As regards the establishments also, I have much complaint to make. The Honourable the General Member while spending 38 crores on the Development Department, has an establishment costing about 20 lakhs for that; whereas for an expenditure of 18 crores for the Barrage, he has an establishment costing 28 lakhs. There are so many divisions, the power supply division under an executive engineer, and such other divisions that it appears such outlay is uncalled for and I wonder how many divisions they will have if they go on at this rate. In fact, that expenditure must be brought down to 15 lakhs of rupees. A reference was made to Sir John Gebbie. I say that his opinion should not be taken into account, because he is a prejudiced man in this connexion. In fact he is responsible for the scheme and the policy as regards this Barrage. I think the independent opinion of gentlemen like Sir Vishweshrayya should be taken on this question.

As regards the Punjab withdrawals, I am afraid, Sir, that this barrage will lead to another barrage. If the Punjab barrage, that is the Sutlej Valley Project, which is too far away, would affect the irrigation in Sind, I am afraid the Sukkur Barrage will affect the irrigation in Hyderabad and other southern districts. The same argument that was applied to the Punjab irrigation withdrawals will apply with double force to the Sukkur barrage because southern Sind will be affected. The question will have therefore to be inquired into as to how far the other parts of Sind will be affected and I do not know whether anything has been made to get this point considered by any committee of this House. If this leads to another barrage at Kotri then it is a question for consideration whether this House is prepared to undergo another equally large amount on another barrage and for this purpose also a committee is necessary. Personally, I am of opinion that the Punjab scheme has no effect on the irrigation in Sind. Ever since the Punjab works were constructed the level of the Indus in Sind has risen ; that is, in spite of the Punjab withdrawals we have had few bad years and even there were floods. Only last year we had a heavy flood. In the report it is stated that the levels at Kotri had risen by over a foot during the last many years. On these grounds I move that 2 crores of rupees be reduced from the demand on the Sukkur Barrage.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI : Sir, I should like to know whether, in view of the ruling you have given, the other honourable members who have given notice of motions for reduction or omission on this head should make their speeches now, and that so far as the other notices go, only votes will be taken on them if this one is not carried.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : There is a little complication in this motion, to which my attention has been drawn. It is not stated to be a lump sum cut. The total demand which the Honourable the General Member has asked for is for three crores and twenty-one lakhs and odd both for the Sukkur Barrage and the Deccan irrigation works. The honourable member (Rao Saheb Desai) wishes to reduce 2 crores out of the provision for the Sukkur Barrage only, and it is therefore not a lump reduction of the total grant. It will be discussed on its merits. It is a reduction of one of the items forming the total grant.

Mr. C. M. SAPTARSHI : In that case, Sir, can honourable members address the House on both the questions ?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I was under the impression that this was a lump reduction of the total demand. I have since seen that it is an ordinary reduction of the total grant of one of the items forming the total demand. Therefore that ruling will not apply to this case.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI : Sir, this is a very important project. While submitting to your ruling, I wish to know whether we can discuss the policy, and the whole of this project.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : The House has been doing nothing else. Honourable members do not seem still to be satisfied. They forget that out of the 12 days that are allotted for the discussion of the whole budget, four days have already gone. They have not as yet dealt with capital expenditure and the whole administrative expenditure has not yet even been touched. If they want to go on concentrating their attention on what is placed before them first for discussion and prefer that the administrative expenditure should be put to the vote and carried at the end of the 12 days they are welcome to do so. It is entirely in the hands of the Council. According to the procedure followed, I will allow discussion without any reference to the time occupied unless closure is moved.

There is another point which I wish to bring to the notice of honourable members. It is as regards the time at which the Council should meet. This is now becoming so common that I have to deal with such representations at every session. Twenty-eight members have written to me suggesting that the hours of meeting should be changed from 2 to 7 p.m. to 6 p.m. I have already informed the House that it would require a consensus of opinion amongst the whole House to justify any change. If there is such a consensus of opinion I would be pleased to respond to it. But the fixing of hours is entirely in my discretion, and unless there is a very large number of members wishing a change, I do not consider it justifiable to alter the existing arrangements.

[The President]

The Council will now adjourn till 2 p.m. to-morrow, Thursday, the 5th March 1925.

Thursday, the 5th March 1925.

The Council re-assembled at the Town Hall, Bombay, at 2 p.m. on Thursday, the 5th March 1925, the Honourable the President, Sir IBRAHIM RAHIMTOOLA, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., presiding.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Any honourable member desiring to take the oath of allegiance may do so.

Mr. S. N. Athavle made the prescribed oath of allegiance to His Majesty the King Emperor, and took his seat in the Council.

(Discussion on demands for grants resumed.)

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Demands for grants.

Question again proposed :

Reduce by Rs. 2,00,00,000 provision under Lloyd Barrage and Canals, Rs. 3,31,61,000.

Rao Saheb D. P. DESAI (Kaira District) : Sir, in view of your ruling, and in view of the fact that there are other motions coming up on the same subject, I ask for leave of the House to withdraw my motion.

Question put and leave granted.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : The P. W. D. and Irrigation grants have been mixed up in such a way that it is difficult to get at the order in which the motions are to be moved. Mr. Pahalajani's motion to reduce by Rs. 10,38,000 and Mr. Adwani's motion to reduce by Rs. 33,80,000 do not come now.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI : The order will be for Mr. Khuhro's motion to be taken up first, then the motion by me (No. 701) and then the motion by Mr. Adwani.

Mr. MAHOMED AYUB SHAH MAHOMED KHUHRO (Larkana District) : Sir, I beg to move my motion, which is as follows :

"Deduct Rs. 47 lakhs out of Rs. 2,83,00,000 provided for Barrage Works."

Sir, the figures show that Rs. 3,24,55,000 are provided for the Barrage expenditure in next year's budget. Out of this, Rs. 2,86,00,000 are to be spent over works and the rest over establishment.

Sir, on behalf of the agriculturists, I am very much in favour of the Barrage itself. When I make my remarks against the expenditure, I hope I will not be misunderstood that I am against the scheme. But my point is that the extravagance over the bungalows and staff should be curtailed. The original estimate that was prepared, when the project was brought before the Council in 1922 as sanctioned by the Secretary of State, showed that Rs. 15,48,000 were to be spent over bungalows. I do not know how much is spent over bungalows, but I can make a fair guess and say that not less than Rs. 4 to 5 lakhs have been spent over the item to now. In this year's budget, under the sub-head 'Buildings'

[Mr. Mahomed Ayub Shah Mahomed, I understand, is intended for bungalows Rs. 34,98,000 are provided, which, I the General Member says that the one Now, Sir, the Honourable Member said, that the expenses will be within the estimate. Estimates will not be increased, 000. But, as matters stand, about Rs. 5 lakhs have been already spent over bungalows and Rs. 34 lakhs are provided in next year's budget on buildings. It is more than double of what this House sanctioned in June 1922. According to the estimate, they are not entitled to have more than Rs. 10 lakhs at the most for buildings.

As regards the staff, Rs. 28,38,000 are going to be provided. Now, I said something about the staff and the establishment in my speech on the budget discussion. I pointed out that many irrigation districts in Sind and many executive engineers and their staff, separately provided for barrage, could be done away with easily.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR: Sir, may I point out that the establishment is provided from another part of the budget which will come under head 41. If establishments are to be discussed now, I am afraid I shall have to reply to that criticism now, although it comes under head 41.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: This part of the budget has been framed in such a way that it creates confusion. Establishment comes under head 41. Any criticisms that honourable member may have to pass on the establishments might be reserved when that part of the budget comes before us.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR: Bungalows come under this head, but establishments, tools and plant come under head 41. I have no objection to reply to the points about establishments on this debate, but I thought I should point out the position.

Mr. MAHOMED AYUB SHAH MAHOMED KHUHRO: Money provided for establishment is, as I understand, in this demand and I think many other honourable members here have also understood it in that way. I am going to suggest only how the cut should be made.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR: He cannot suggest. I do not want to hamper my honourable friend in any way in making his criticism, but, as I stated before, the demand for establishment is under 41, Civil Works.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: How much is for bungalows?

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR: "Buildings" are shown as 34 lakhs; but it does not include only bungalows.

Mr. MAHOMED AYUB SHAH MAHOMED KHUHRO: My point is this that under buildings about 24 lakhs are over-estimated. About 8 or 9 lakhs at least could easily be curtailed from staff expenditure. I have said already that much of the work can be entrusted to the irrigation districts; just as in Larkana there are two irrigation districts, the Ghar Canal and the Western Nara, there is also the Shikarpur Canals district in Sukkur. The same is the case on the left bank. There is already more than sufficient staff on irrigation.

[Mr. Mahomed Ayub Shah Mahomed Khuhro]

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: If the honourable member (Mr. Khuhro) wishes in view of the point made by the Honourable the General Member, to amend his motion by reducing the amount of 47 lakhs to a lower figure, I will allow him to do so as a special case. But if he wishes to adhere to his motion, he may do so.

Mr. MAHOMED AYUB SHAH MAHOMED KHUHRO: Yes, Sir. I would adhere to the motion of reduction of 47 lakhs. Now, Sir, our object is simply that this work should be run strictly economically. For that so much staff ought not to be allowed to be engaged. Expenditure should not be allowed to go on increasing so much. This money is ultimately to be paid by the zaminders or the landholders of Sind and if Government spend more than the original estimate, they will be compelled to pay still higher rates of assessment than those estimated in the project. The Honourable the Finance Member said the other day, the waste land could be sold and about 12 crores will be realized out of it; the assessment will be fixed at the rate of Rs. 8 per acre first, and after ten years at 10 rupees an acre, and it will go ultimately up to Rs. 12 an acre. But that is a very high rate of assessment. I do not think people would at all like to accept such a high pitch of assessment. As I understand, if the expenses increase, the value of land to be sold and the pitch of assessment on land will increase in proportion. I find that another honourable member, my honourable friend Mr. Adwani, has a motion for reduction of Rs. 33,80,000. If that motion is accepted by the Honourable the General Member, then I will most gladly withdraw my motion. Unless he is ready to do this, I will press my motion.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I understand the honourable member to say that, if the Honourable the General Member reduces the grant by Rs. 33,80,000 he would withdraw his own motion.

MOULVI RAFIUDDIN AHMAD: He withdraws his motion, Sir.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Do I understand the honourable member to withdraw his motion? The honourable member has not formally moved his motion. He has made a speech and at the conclusion of that speech he says he withdraws it. I will take it, then, that he does not move his motion.

Mr. MAHOMED AYUB SHAH MAHOMED KHUHRO: No, Sir; I move the motion.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Very well; the motion is now before the House.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHANGIR: Mr. President, as you have just remarked, the procedure is getting rather complicated. What I understood my honourable friend to mean is that he would rather have a smaller cut than this 47 lakhs and, as he sees that there is another cut of 33 lakhs proposed by the honourable member Mr. Adwani, he wants to reserve his remarks until Mr. Adwani moves his motion. That is what he intended to say, I presume. He actually said that, I think. If that is the intention of my honourable friend, I will not waste the time of this Council but wait for Mr. Adwani's motion and then reply to all the arguments raised in this connection. We are all anxious to save time and hence my desire to speak only once after Mr. Adwani moves his motion.

Mr. MAHOMED AYUB SHAH MAHOMED KHUHRO: Sir, I have already expressly stated that I move my motion only formally and I withdraw in favour of Mr. Adwani's motion for a cut of Rs. 33,80,000. In view of the consideration that the time of the House should not be unnecessarily wasted and as the Honourable the General Member will reply in the end to Mr. Adwani's motion, I do not find it necessary to wait further, and I withdraw my motion.

Question put and leave granted.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI (Karachi City): Sir, I beg to move my motion:

Reduce by Rs. 33,80,000—Part I—Construction of Works—Item No. 31, Works (Lloyd Barrage and Canals Construction)—Rs. 2,83,80,000.

I wish to say at the outset that it will perhaps be more convenient for reference by members of this House if this project is placed under a separate head, say, 55-A or some other head, in future, because it is very inconvenient if such a project is lumped up with another head and it becomes very difficult for us to propose cuts. This point should be given consideration.

The other point which I wish to make is that the information given as regards Works on page 117 is inadequate. We have works to the extent of Rs. 2,83,80,000 on page 117, but no details are given. You will find, Sir, that in the case of other works details are given—bungalows at such and such a place, and so on. But here what we find is "K-Buildings Rs. 34,98,500", Lloyd Barrage so much, and so and so, and so and so. What are these Buildings? Are these bungalows or other buildings or for some other purpose? We do not know. "Earthwork"; similarly, what length of canal, which canal, and where, all this is not at all shown. In the same way, Miscellaneous. What items come under this heading Miscellaneous, we do not understand. Only a lump sum is provided. This is very unfair when we have to deal with a big scheme like this.

I asked the honourable the Chief Engineer for the Lloyd Barrage to kindly give me the loan of a printed copy of the project so that I might be able to study the scheme for myself at Karachi, but he replied to me that it was not available. It seems to me very hard, Sir, if members are refused the loan of a copy of the project when they desire to study it.....

Mr. C. S. C. HARRISON: With reference to that, I may point out, Sir, that the honourable member first of all wrote to me and asked me whether I could let him have certain printed volumes. As we were short of printed volumes, I asked him to come and see me at my office. He came and we discussed a lot of things, and I told him that I would be pleased to let him have copies for reference at my office, but could not let him take them away. He could have come and seen these at any time.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI : I was just going to say all that, but the honourable member has himself done so. It would be hard if we have to go to the office of the Chief Engineer to get information and study the project there in his office.

Then, Sir, the honourable the leader of the Swaraj party referred to the technical aspect of this question the other day, and the honourable the General Member made some sort of reply to say that the Consulting Engineer to the Government of India had been on the site and made a report. The real issue is not whether the project should be continued or not, because we are all in favour of this project ; it is of a beneficent character. The real issue is whether or not there are defects in this project of such a vital character as to require examination by experts in order to put the public mind at rest once for all. In this connection there is a very important point to which I wish to draw the attention of this honourable House. Dr. Summers had at first raised some objections, and he was supported by Mr. F. W. Woods, lately Chief Engineer of Irrigation in the Punjab. Mr. Woods has gone out from India very recently and therefore the objection that the expert's knowledge is out-of-date does not apply to him. He is an engineer who has got very large irrigational experience of perennial canals of the type of the Lloyd Barrage. Then came Sir John Benton, who was formerly Inspector General of Irrigation in India. In August 1922, after the project was approved by the Secretary of State for India he wrote a letter to the Secretary of State, and I have a printed copy of that letter here. I need not weary the House by going through the whole of that letter. But what he says is—and this is a very important point—

“I have read both addresses (the addresses of Dr. Summers and Mr. F. W. Woods before the East India Association) very carefully, and as far as the supplied data go, I am of opinion that the above conclusions are substantially correct.”

And what are those conclusions ? The conclusions are that the Barrage scheme is unsound and dangerous ; and not that the scheme should not be put into execution, but that the scheme as it has been framed is unsound and dangerous and therefore requires to be rectified ; that the cost is under-estimated by £4,700,000, which means about 7 crores of rupees ; and that if the project is carried out in its present shape there will be an annual loss to the tax payer of £250,000 to £500,000, which means 37 lakhs to 75 lakhs of rupees ; that there is a danger of river avulsion and loss of the great railway bridge which at present exists at Sukkur ; and lastly that the canals will silt up and cease to operate. It is not necessary to go into the details of this letter.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : May I ask the honourable member what relevance it has to this question of a cut of 33 lakhs ?

Mr. D. B. ADWANI : The honourable member referred to this matter....

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : He referred to it on a different occasion.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI: It was on this demand, Sir.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: If we go on harping on the scheme in connection with every motion for a cut, it will be an unending discussion. I asked the honourable member himself to point out what relevance there is to the present motion in going exhaustively into the scheme.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI: I should like to say, Sir, that this is a matter of very great importance.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I know that, but I have to regulate the proceedings with reference to the subject under discussion. It is my duty.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI: On this very demand the Honourable the General Member made a reference to it.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The honourable member (Mr. Adwani) ought to know that the Honourable the General Member made a comprehensive speech on the whole demand.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI: On this very demand, Sir.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: No. On the whole demand; when he asked the House to sanction 3,21 lakhs. Now, the honourable member desires to make a cut of 33 lakhs in one part of the 3,21 lakhs. It is not a total cut or a lump reduction of the total demand. I want the honourable member to state the relevance that the point he raised has to this cut.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI; I do not desire, Sir, to proceed with this point further. But the Honourable the General Member made a misleading statement before the House, and I wanted to remove any misapprehensions which might have arisen in the minds of honourable members. Looking to the nature of the difference of opinion between the two sets of engineers, it seems to me absolutely necessary, that the feeling of doubt which now exists in Sind, should be removed by the appointment of an independent committee of experts to examine this project and set this point at rest once for all. Sir, on this point I wish only to add that hitherto it has been left to the civilian officials to refute the arguments of engineers in the East India Association.

Mr. C. S. C. HARRISON: I rise to a point of order, Sir.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Surely, I have ruled the honourable member out of order on that point. When I allow a little latitude honourable members do not take advantage of it by summing up their remarks; they continue the same subject. I cannot allow it.

Mr. P. G. JOSHI: I should like to ask you, Sir, whether we cannot discuss the policy of the Government so far as the Sukkur Barrage works are concerned. The reduction is of the amount provided for Sukkur Barrage. I think, Sir, there is a ruling that when a cut of the total amount provided for a scheme is under discussion, the policy underlying the whole scheme could be discussed.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: But the discussion of the policy must have some relevance to the subject matter of the cut.

Mr. P. G. JOSHI: I understood the honourable member to say that the Barrage scheme was defective and that he was going to attack the whole policy of the Sukkur Barrage.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Then he should refuse to give them anything at all.

Mr. P. G. JOSHI: Some leniency may be shown.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: It is not a question of leniency, but it is a question of logic.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: The cut is not from the whole of the demand for the Sukkur Barrage but it is a cut from a part.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI: I am not against the whole scheme, but I am for reduction of expenditure. It is unfair that we should be barred from a general discussion.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The honourable member had three days of general discussion when he could have dealt with the general policy of the question in detail within the twenty minutes allotted to him. The procedure laid down in the Rules and Standing Orders has to be carried out by me, however unpleasant it may be.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI: I do not wish to pursue the subject any further, but I would confine myself to the subject of the provision made for the work. In 1924-25 a provision of Rs. 3,28,00,000 was made but we were able to spend only Rs. 1,41,00,000. In my opinion, even this revised estimate of Rs. 1,41,00,000 is excessive and that amount even cannot actually be spent. There is a difference of nearly 2 crores between the budget estimate and the revised estimate. An explanation will probably be given that certain machinery which had been ordered did not arrive in time. But we have not been informed of the reason for the delay and to what extent the difference has arisen owing to the non-arrival of this machinery. We are undergoing a loss in not being able to spend the amount, because there is the difference of interest on account of the short term deposits and the interest on the amount we have borrowed.

The Honourable Mr. COWASJI JEHangIR: We do not borrow.

Mr. D. B. ADWANI: I would put it to the House whether it is advisable to budget for 3,28 lakhs and to spend only 1,40 lakhs of rupees.

Coming to the provision made for the ensuing year, I consider it to be extravagant. Out of the Rs. 3,31,61,400 that has been provided for this year, Rs. 2,83,80,000 is to be spent on works, Rs. 28,00,000 on establishment, Rs. 7,65,200 on tools and plant. This amount of Rs. 2,83,00,000 includes again special tools and plant although we have already got under the general head, provision for tools and plant. We find from the note on page 117 of the Blue Book that plant and machinery to the extent of 96 lakhs have to be obtained from abroad. We do not know whether tenders have been invited for this plant and machinery or whether this is to be spent in England only. Then there is an expenditure of 34 lakhs on buildings which I consider very excessive; and this in addition to what has been spent this year. Further there is a heading Miscellaneous and a sum of Rs. 95,200 is provided under it. Each officer has been allotted a round sum ranging from Rs. 10,000 to Rs. 1,000. I do not know whether these are in the nature of discretionary grants.

[Mr. D. B. Adwani]

This item amounts to Rs. 95,000. Under the head maintenance there is a provision of Rs. 63,000. This is a mysterious item. Why should there be maintenance charges in connection with works which have not even been started. Further, customs duty has been charged under tools and plant to the capital account. This amount has also been shown under the ordinary expenditure account, but credit has been given only once, under the capital account. I do not wish to take the time of the House any more. I have briefly shown that the provision that has been made is excessive and that the cut that I propose is reasonable.

Khan Bahadur S. N. BHUTTO (Larkana District): Sir, I support the motion for the cut which has been proposed by my honourable friend from Karachi city. Sir, you have already given a ruling that on this motion we should not discuss the general policy of the scheme. Therefore, I will confine my remarks to the motion before the House. I wish to bring to the notice of the House the extravagant expenditure that is being incurred on this scheme. I feel positive that, both in the interests of the State and the people of Sind, this scheme ought to be run on economic lines only. Though it may appear to some that it may not prove productive, at any rate it appears to me that it is a productive one. Therefore it is necessary that the whole scheme should be worked with this main consideration.

We have had a survey of the project a second time as the first survey was found incorrect. We learn that even the recent survey is incorrect and contains terrible mistakes. But we do not know how far our information is correct. We do not know who is responsible for this vast amount of waste of public funds on surveying and re-surveying. Had there been from the beginning a careful supervision of this expenditure, this waste could have been easily avoided.

As regards bungalows, very large sums of money have already been spent over buildings for officials in charge of the Barrage, particularly at Sukkur. The working season is during the cold weather. There are already bungalows of the P. W. D. scattered all over the country, which can be utilized by these officers. Where there are no bungalows, they can live in tents as officials of other departments do. Besides this, they get barrage allowances. Where is the necessity for these special allowances when almost every barrage officer is receiving huge allowances in the shape of great jumps by promotion? Every youth who has come out of school has been appointed assistant engineer. Almost every assistant engineer and sub-divisional officer has been promoted to the post of executive engineers and executive engineers to the grades of superintending engineers.

When the Barrage officers go on inspection work they could utilise the P. W. D. bungalows which are only at short distances from their own works. I will give an instance, there are district head-quarters at Sukkur and Larkana where there are P. W. D. inspection bungalows and circuit houses. The distance between Sukkur and Larkana is about 46 miles. Besides the P. W. D. bungalows at Sukkur and Larkana we find beautiful P. W. D. bungalows at Bagenji, Ruk, Madaiji, Nasirat, Naudero. The honourable House will see that there is no necessity for bungalows for barrage inspecting officials when there are enough bungalows of P. W. D. all over these places.

Then as regards the bungalows that are being built for sub-divisional officers, I submit we have got two sub-divisional officers whose jurisdiction runs as follows: one sub-divisional officer has got his sub-division from Larkana down to Naudero, the other from Larkana to Daksi. Now, where is the necessity to build bungalows for these officials at Naudero and Daksi? Why not keep them at Larkana where decent houses could be had on reasonable rent. In this way all this money that is being thrown into the sea by building these new bungalows could be saved as after some time these houses would be of no use nor will they fetch much value. Besides that already enough bungalows have been built at Sukkur and Larkana and at many other places. I think they are quite enough to serve the purpose. What we see from the construction of these bungalows is that they clearly show that they do not provide the necessary requirements but are full of luxurious comforts. I do not know how far my information is correct, but I am told that these estimates have been overestimated by about 15 per cent. Therefore it would be better if the works could be constructed within the estimated amount. If that is so, why not effect that saving instead of wasting that amount at their sweet will, and they should therefore earn a good name by economising public funds to the best of their ability. They should bring the works down so as to be able to complete them with 15 per cent. less than the estimated amount. If the estimates have been really overestimated, I do not see why 15 per cent. should not be saved. I am not allowed to go into details, otherwise I would have established that there is absolutely no necessity for most of these works.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I want to remove the misapprehension under which the honourable member seems to be labouring. Honourable members can certainly go into details of works that are covered by the grant of 2,83 lakhs. The honourable member's remarks in regard to every work comprised in the total expenditure of 2,83 lakhs are perfectly relevant on this vote.

Khan Bahadur S. N. BHUTTO: Thank you, Sir. Then I will submit that so far as the right bank canals are concerned we all feel there is absolutely no necessity for excavating them. We all are in favour of the Sukkur Barrage. There is no question about it. When the Sukkur Barrage was sanctioned all these details were fully discussed and I will not take the time of the House in going over them once again, but so far as the right bank canals are concerned, I submit that 80 per cent. of land in Sukkur district is going to be affected by the barrage. Larkana and

[Khan Bahadur S. N. Bhutto]

Mehan and upper Sind Frontier districts, except Shadadkote Taluka, are already under cultivation. Only Sehwan division in Larkana district and Shadadkote Taluka in Upper Sind Frontier district require improved system of irrigation. The present canals could have easily and safely been improved, their tails could have been widened and extended by spending a very limited amount over these improvements and we could have saved so many crores of rupees. We are positive that we will get much less water when the barrage is completed than what we get now. Is it fair that when there are more restrictions, less water is allowed to agriculturists than we get now, the agriculturists should be expected to pay twice as much assessment as is paid now. So far as we can understand, the object of Barrage people is to cultivate more and more land and to bring all effective cultivation within the Barrage area to justify the huge cost. So I can go on like this pointing out so much waste. This work if amalgamated with district irrigation could have been carried within a short time and with less cost. With these remarks I resume my seat.

Mr. L. J. MOUNTFORD : Sir, the first charge of extravagance against the Public Works Department is a matter which I think might very well have been settled by the honourable members in Sind who live in Sind and the Chief Engineer who can refute that charge also lives in Sind. It seems to me that these criticisms are so general, so vague, that in many cases honourable members are not sure of what they say by way of criticism. They are criticising in a general sort of way and I would ask them that in future they should see the honourable member the Chief Engineer and thresh out all information from him instead of taking up the time of the House over vague criticism.

One honourable member speaks of the controversy of Dr. Summers, but all the arguments that have been raised on both sides on that controversy have been sifted and examined and carefully considered by this House at a special session in July 1923, and it seems to me pure waste of time to begin over again the discussion over a matter which is now said to be finished. He told us that he was not against the barrage at all but that a committee should be appointed to go into the question all over again.

Then we heard some remarks from the honourable member for Larkana dealing with lands in his vicinity and he told us that all the land in his district is cultivated, and he leaves the House therefore under an impression that there is nothing necessary in the way of improving irrigation supply of the lands in his district although he has already told us that he is quite in favour of the barrage. Now I will ask the honourable member whether he is quite satisfied or any other honourable members who hold that view that they are quite satisfied with the present position of the lands on the tail of the Ghar canal where they have been leaving those lands because they get no water there at all; whether he is quite satisfied with the lands on the tails of the canals of the Western Nara: whether over fifteen years complaints have not been repeated, hundreds of complaints, that they cannot get water. Let us take this best canal with regard to Ghar. Is he not aware of the complaints at the tail of Ghar from those who hold lands on the Chilowah, that they are impoverished and cannot get the water necessary for their wives and children and for growing fodder for their cattle? What they pointed out would leave an impression, erroneous no doubt, that the barrage may do a great deal of harm in the future. The argument used by the honourable member for Larkana makes it necessary for me to take up the time of the House to some short extent in explaining to them why our present canals cannot reach the upper lands. We have thousands of acres of land with magnificent soils for example in the Dadu and Johi talukas and to the West of the Larkana district which we cannot possibly touch by our present canals system. The Right Bank Canal is going to feed those lands, and take off much higher than our present canals take off. Any one who knows Sind cannot but admit that it is of the utmost importance that the Sind Barrage should be carried out as expeditiously as possible, whatever the arguments may be that may have been raised against it in the past. The honourable member has also told us that these extravagances will lead to higher assessments being imposed upon the cultivator. The assessment we fix is according to the amount of charge which Government may lay upon the water. Assessment is not to be considered as a ratio of the actual expenditure. It is what the ryot is able to pay and what is the actual right of the State to take. What the ryot can pay and what the State can take within the most moderate limits will be the guiding factor in fixing the assessment. What will make the scheme pay will be the sales of land. We have an enormous project, of which I am sure honourable members of this House are proud which is going to bring under cultivation $7\frac{1}{2}$ million acres.

Mr. C. M. SAPTARSHI : I rise to a point of order, Sir. The honourable member is beginning from the history of the Sukkur Barrage like the honourable member Mr. Adwani. Is it relevant?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : The only relevant part of the discussion is the works comprised in the demand for Rs. 2,83,00,000. Nothing else is relevant on this issue.

Mr. L. J. MOUNTFORD : The relevancy of my remarks was that it has been stated that these extravagances will have a terrible effect upon the actual assessment taken. It is with that argument that I was dealing—the extravagances on this item. Have I the permission of the Chair to continue?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : If the honourable member wishes to argue that these works have been attacked on the ground that they are estimated on an extravagant basis, and as a result of that extravagance the scheme will cost more than it ought to, and therefore there will be larger assessments, the point would be in order.

Mr. L. J. MOUNTFORD : That is my point. Further the argument has been raised that these extravagances will increase the burden on the people, and therefore the honourable member's objection. The burden of the cost of this scheme will be met by the enormously improved conditions of the land. This has been the case in the big schemes of the Punjab. For instance, lands on the Bari Doab scheme worth Rs. 12½ per acre have been sold at Rs. 400 per acre on an average of 60,000 acres. Therefore, I do not think that an item like this would have any effect whatsoever in increasing the burden on the cultivator. If we can get those sums, we shall pay for our Barrage. Those large increases in value are but to be expected as time goes on and as land comes under cultivation. I would therefore appeal to the honourable members; if they consider that there have been extravagances, they should deal with them direct with the Chief Engineer in Sind. Government has appointed a most experienced officer; he lives among them, he moves among them, and he is anxious as they are to cut down any extravagance, and to meet any defects that may be pointed out to him. It would cut short the time of this House if honourable members agree to adopt this procedure. It will be more satisfactory to them and to Government.

Khan Bahadur S. N. BHUTTO: Sir, the honourable member has put me a question. May I answer that, Sir?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Yes; as a matter of personal explanation.

Khan Bahadur S. N. BHUTTO: The honourable member said that water was required in Sehwan Division. I have never denied that. I say it does require any amount of improvement. What I explained was that in Larkana district except the Sehwan Division and Shahdadkote taluka in Upper Sind district, the rest of the land expected to be commanded by the Barrage is already 80 per cent. under cultivation and any improvement can be effected by extending and improving further the existing canals. That is what I said. As for assessments, if the lands are not able to pay the enhanced rate of Rs. 8, Rs. 10 and Rs. 12 per acre, Government cannot enforce it.

Mr. L. J. MOUNTFORD: Is not the Sehwan Division in the Larkana district?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Order, order. This sort of cross-questioning cannot be allowed.

Mr. R. D. SHINDE (Nasik District): Sir, I should like to make a suggestion to the Honourable the General Member with reference to this matter. I find that, whenever any criticism is offered from this side of the House on the Sukkur Barrage, we are told that our criticism is not based upon a proper consideration of the conditions in Sind, that it is ill-conceived, and that it is ill-informed. This is bound to be so. We live very far from the seat of the operations of this vast enterprise, and even the mass of figures and charts and photographs which are made available to us by the courtesy of the Chief Engineer do not give us a correct idea of what the actual state of this great enterprise is. Therefore, I would make a suggestion for the serious consideration of the Honourable the General Member, whether it is not possible for him to take some members of this House to the scene of this enterprise, so that honourable members who live very far away from that scene of operations would have a correct idea of this project, and much of that criticism which the benches opposite say is ill-informed and mis-conceived will give place to constructive criticism.

Mr. B. G. PAHALAJANI (Western Sind) : Sir, it is rather hard lines on the non-official side that the official members should not give us any light on the matter. It is extremely hard, I must repeat again, on the non-official side that the figures, as they are given in the Blue Book are incomplete, the details of the expenditure of Rs. 1,41,00,000 last year are not given in the Blue Book, and we are asked now to vote for Rs. 3,31,00,000, without being furnished any details in the same way as they have been given for the Bombay Development scheme. The hardship is greater, because we do not know up to the present day, how, in what way, and on what parts of the scheme this amount of Rs. 1,41,00,000 has been spent up to this time. It is harder still that the honourable member the Chief Engineer should not rise to give the benefit of those figures to this House, as he is the officer in charge of this work, and therefore, in full possession of them. Sir, I enter my humble protest against the procedure which the Honourable the General Member chose to adopt in this case. Further, I also object to the system of accounts in this matter. I think non-official members will ask the Government to take note of this extremely great difficulty so far as the presentation of the Barrage accounts is concerned. The Honourable the Finance Member may say that he is compelled by the Auditor General or by the Examiner of Accounts or by the Accountant General's office to classify the demands in this fashion, but I think the united opinion of even the official side in this matter will be a sufficient answer to the Accountant General to change his mode of keeping the accounts, so far as the Barrage is concerned.

We wish and I think the Honourable the Finance Member and the Honourable the General Member will next time present before us exactly in the same way under a separate head just as for Bombay Development, a separate head, say 55A or some other head in which every possible detail is given this House in order to come to a definite decision.

Now, Sir, coming to the merits of this expenditure, we are asked to sanction an expenditure of Rs. 2,83 lakhs the details of which are given on page 113 of the Blue Book. Pages 110, 111, 112 and 113 show the details. Page 112 contains the expenditure, actuals 1923-24, the first year, the preliminary year, Rs. 37,80,000; budget estimate Rs. 3,28,02,000 the amount that last year this Council sanctioned without a demur because it came under the guillotine measure. Then, the revised estimate Rs. 1,41,84,000 and the budget demand for the present year Rs. 3,31,61,000. Now for this 3,31,61,000 some lump details are given at the bottom of page 112. They are : 2,83,80,000 relating to works; establishment 28,38,000; tools and plant 7,65,000. These establishment and tools and plant are not brought here under the demand that we are now considering.

[Mr. B. G. Pahalajani]

They are taken away from this, unlike the Bombay Development Department, and placed under 41, Civil Works, a department that belongs to the Honourable Minister and we will be called upon again to consider the question of the Barrage under 41, dealing only with the establishments and tools and plant. I am compelled, Sir, to confine myself to expenditure other than that of establishments and tools and plant. The details of expenditure on "Works" are: Preliminary expenses Rs. 1,05,000; land Rs. 37,37,000; works—what they are we do not know—Rs. 15,72,000; regulators 4,18,000; falls Rs. 13,000; bridges Rs. 8,50,000; buildings Rs. 34,98,000; earthwork Rs. 47,12,000; plantation Rs. 23,000; miscellaneous Rs. 95,000; maintenance Rs. 64,000; distributaries Rs. 2,58,000; special tools and plant Rs. 1,30,35,000. Now, Sir, in supporting the proposed cut, I place reliance upon the figures that were placed before this House in June 1923 when this House sanctioned the whole scheme. I am not one of those who demur to the carrying on of the scheme. The scheme has come to stay, and it shall stay in spite of any small objection that might be against it. But the scheme that stays must be guarded against extravagant expenditure both by the Honourable the Finance Member, who, I believe, has not applied his usual financial mind to this barrage, which seems to be outside his sphere, and also by the Honourable the Chief Engineer, who is here to represent the side of Government on behalf of the barrage. In 1923 this House sat to consider the figures on which the sanction of the House was given, and on page 72 in Vol. V of the Sukkur Barrage Canals Project was given the financial statement of the whole scheme, including the Sukkur Barrage, of all the different branches of the Sukkur Barrage works. These were the figures which the then Chief Secretary, the late Mr. Mead, placed before this House. Now, if honourable members will turn to page 73 of Vol. V, they will find that the grand total of what the Government laid before the Council would be the expenditure for the preliminary year was Rs. 85,78,294; the first year it was Rs. 1,68,14,558; the second year it was Rs. 1,48,61,000; the third year Rs. 1,75,01,750. That is to say, each year's figures were given by the Government in a publication; on which we certainly relied, on which the Government still relies, on the strength of the details of which this House gave its unanimous sanction to the scheme in June 1923. If we take this to be the second year, then the expenditure of the preliminary year has passed,—July 1922 to April 1923—in the preliminary year Rs. 85,78,000 was provided, 37 lakhs was spent; in the first year 1,68 lakhs was provided, 1,41 lakhs has been spent; in the second year, on which we have just entered and for which the sanction is going to be obtained, the expenditure provided on all works—I am putting in works, works establishment, tools and plant divided into Sukkur Barrage, Eastern Nara Canal, and so on, for all the different years that it relates to, and the total is, Sir, Rs. 1,48,66,124. I will put it to the House and to the Honourable the Finance Member—I am not putting it to the Honourable the General Member whose duty it is not to go through these multitude of figures that are put before him—whether the total that the Government is entitled to have is not Rs. 331 lakhs. Out of the first sanction they spent 37 lakhs; 1,68 lakhs was the next sanction, they have spent 141 lakhs out of that; and the third year Rs. 1,48 lakhs are proposed to be spent. Therefore, the difference between this year's estimate and the amount that is allowed according to their own scheme in the third year is Rs. 1,35 lakhs. This is a simple deduction. Rs. 2,83 minus Rs. 1,48 is the amount that the Government should not be allowed. But if you add to that the difference between 85 and 37 lakhs which they have spent less, if you add the difference between 1,78 and 1,41, then you find a difference of about 85 lakhs of rupees which in two years the Government is entitled to have from us as a set-off for having spent less. That is, the Lloyd Barrage is still demanding 50 lakhs beyond its own estimates. The cut demanded is only Rs. 33,80,000. I wish the figures had been given by the Honourable the General Member. I was waiting and expecting that the Chief Engineer would give us the figures. Now, turning to the various portions in which 283 lakhs is divided, you find that 31 lakhs is to be provided for buildings—all buildings not only the bungalows; I can see they include not only the bungalows, they include markets and every other arrangement that has to be made for the permanent establishment of the barrage town. But again Government stands tied to its own estimates, and Government cannot and should not be permitted to go beyond the expenditure that is actually provided for, and it is the duty of the Honourable the Finance Member to see that the Lloyd Barrage authorities are not permitted to do so. The estimates for all the buildings relating to the different canals on either side of the Indus, the perennial canals on the right, the canals on the left and the Central Rice Canal, are all before the Council in the five volumes relating to this scheme. The total amount for buildings under all these schemes up to the end is a little over 51 lakhs, an amount easily ascertainable from the various volumes containing the estimates. Now, Sir, it would be very useful for the House to know what amount has been so far spent on buildings, and whether the total amount to be spent on bungalows, on bazars, etc., on the different places, and even the small sheds will be within the 51 lakhs. It would interest the House to hear how far the 34 or 35 lakhs provided for and the 6 or 7 lakhs already spent have carried the building programme. I take the liberty of informing the House that no buildings beyond Sukkur and Rohri have been built. And we have still to cover the whole of the two hundred miles over which the Barrage extends. If we go on at the rate at which we are going, at the end, when all buildings are erected, we will have spent at least 75 lakhs. I have reason to say from the Government record that 51 lakhs is the highest estimate of our late colleague Mr. Musto, as shown in the volumes before the Council. The question is, are Government going to spend more than these 51 lakhs upon buildings. I know the responsibility that rests upon me and I make a statement with that responsibility, and I wish the Honourable Member in charge will investigate this matter before he gives a final reply. I refer to the question of the bungalows that have been built on the right bank at Sukkur. Volume No. I of the Sukkur Scheme gives all the details of the cost and we find there, Sir, that the bungalow for the superintending engineer is estimated to cost Rs. 35,000. The total cost of all buildings, bungalows, markets, etc., in the Sukkur side is estimated at Rs. 15,48,000, but the bungalow is estimated to cost Rs. 35,000. I make a definite statement that this bungalow has cost between Rs. 61,000 and Rs. 71,000; it is more than Rs. 61,000 and less than Rs. 71,000. I may be challenged and I may be told that Government have got the contractor's bills and that not more than Rs. 43,000 has been spent. But in spite of that I make a statement and I want the Honourable Member in charge and the honourable the Chief Engineer to investigate whether that superintending engineer's bungalow, which was expected to be a temporary bungalow and which has been raised to two storeys, had not had its time of construction extended for 75 days, on account of frequent dismantlings and changes suggested by the superintending engineer of the project. I am making a definite statement, and I am responsible for it. I ask whether Government did not extend the time for 2½ months for carrying out the dismantlings from time to time suggested by the superintending engineer. What these dismantlings are, whether they were not luxurious and costly and in excess of the forty-three thousand rupees, and whether those dismantlings did not raise its cost to sixty-one thousand, is for the honourable the Chief Engineer and the Honourable the Member in charge to state in their reply. So far as these bungalows are concerned I assert, Sir, that this Council should not give any sanction beyond the estimates, and it is for this Council to assert itself, much less for this Council than for the Honourable the Finance Member, who should assert himself and go into this matter and see for himself. The Honourable the Finance Member is not only a Sindhi, but a Sukkurite, and he knows Sukkur as intimately as I do, and I place it before him whether these matters do not require investigation.

[Mr. B. G. Pahalajani]

The bungalows apart, we have got earth works costing Rs. 47,12,000; distributaries, Rs. 2,58,000; special tools and plant, Rs. 1,30,35,000. When the estimates were prepared it was understood that the work could be carried on within those estimates. It was not Mr. Musto alone who prepared it; but it was prepared by a series of engineers from the highest Inspector General of Irrigation with the Government of India down to the lowest executive engineer in charge of the Sukkur Barrage. We would have liked to know, Sir, the details about this item of special tools and plant, which is estimated to cost such a huge sum as Rs. 1,30,00,000.

There is another important point for the investigation of the Honourable Member in charge, about which I had put a question, but which has not received the attention of the honourable member, because probably the answer has not come from Karachi. The question was, what was the amount of demurrage paid to the railway at Sukkur for landing and removing the goods. I am not prepared to give the exact figure; but it is a very big figure; I believe it is a little more than Rs. 75,000, and it is a little less than a lakh. The exact figure the Honourable the Member in charge or the Chief Engineer will be pleased to tell us.

[Mr. B. G. Pahalajani]

Then, Sir, apart from the sum of Rs. 1,30,00,000 for special tools and plant, we are given another huge figure of 47 lakhs for earth works, and the whole total for works comes to Rs. 2,83,00,000, and the House is asked to sanction such a huge sum without any details before it. The only details are, so many lakhs for this, so many lakhs for that. Is the House to sanction this Rs. 2,83,00,000 out of the total of Rs. 3,31,00,000 on this scanty information? Is not the House determined to insist on getting the detailed figures and to insist that every figure should be justified before them, and to sit tight over the money bag and tell the Honourable Member in charge and the Chief Engineer that no money shall be granted that is in excess of their own figures if it is not sufficiently accounted for?

Therefore I place these facts before the House in order that they might judge whether it is not time that we should not repeat the experiences of the Bombay Development in the Sukkur Barrage, which is a far more gigantic scheme than Bombay development. The Bombay development is at least visible every bit of it, but the Sukkur barrage is not visible and therefore the greater reason for our being more careful in seeing that every pie is properly spent.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN (Bombay City, South) : Sir, I quite agree with the last remarks of the Honourable the Deputy President that, whether it be the Bombay Development or whether it be the question of the Sukkur Barrage, every money, particularly every Indian pie, should be very carefully guarded.

That brings me to another very important matter which I hope you will allow me to ventilate on this question, because the whole of this honourable House, as well as the whole presidency and country is awaiting an explanation with regard to a certain deed—I refer to the coal contract scandal in connection with the Sukkur Barrage. I believe this is a proper opportunity to ask for an explanation from the honourable members on the other side of the House. An explanation has been called for in the Assembly and an explanation has been called for in this House by means of questions which have not yet been answered. This item is the proper subject wherein we should call for an explanation on that point.

We know that there is a clamouring for the Indianisation of the services. There is also another clamouring, Sir, in the country that preference should be given to indigenous industry and indigenous articles, so far as investment of Indian money is concerned. The whole country is agitating and there is no other important question in the country which is more burning in the Indian heart than the question of the treatment of our countrymen in the distant lands, more particularly South Africa. On this question I do not think there can be any difference of opinion and I am glad to say that even several Europeans have joined the Indian agitation and put forward a united protest. Several ways of protests have been adopted, the most important of them being the boycotting of every article.....

MOULVI RAFI UDDIN AHMAD : Your ruling, Sir, is that no other matter except that relating to the construction of buildings and this particular item should be discussed. The honourable member is discussing about the general question of coal for the Sukkur Barrage.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : In the latter part of his speech he was going a bit astray. I understand the works of 2 crores and odd includes the cost of coal and therefore the honourable member is perfectly in order in dealing with the issue as to whether coal should have been purchased in India or in foreign countries. But I do not think the honourable member was justified in referring to the political aspect of the case. I hope the honourable member will deal with the purchase of coal as forming part of the work for which this demand is asked for.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN : I thank you for your ruling, Sir. You will quite appreciate our feeling in the matter is so strong that it is quite probable I had been carried away.....

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I hope the honourable member will bear that in mind.

Mr. K. F. NARIMAN : I tried but I found it impossible to restrain myself.

Coming to the issue, the fact is that tenders were invited for 60,000 tons of coal for the Sukkur Barrage. I understand that no less than 78 tenders were offered. Out of these 78 tenders there were several Indian firms ; but in spite of that fact, the contract was finally given to the Natal coal. No less an authority than the chairman of the Port Trust giving evidence before the Coal Committee gave the opinion that Bengal coal is as good as any coal in quality. Leaving aside the 7 or 8 Indian firms that tendered to supply Indian coal, preference was given to Natal coal for a sum of Rs. 1,50,000. That is a transaction for which an explanation is due to this honourable House.

We desire to know whether the Honourable the General Member in charge was consulted on this matter. Instead of our consulting engineers and experts who are paid extra fees for consultation, why was the Controller of Central Stores consulted on this matter ? Who entered into this contract ? According to our information it is the chief engineer. We desire to know whether the Honourable the General Member as the head of the department was consulted ; and, if he gave his consent, whether he gave it without knowing the facts of the case ; or was he not consulted being only an Indian head of the department ? Why was the Controller of Central Stores consulted even though he has nothing to do with the Sukkur Barrage ? I hope a satisfactory explanation will be given to this House on these questions, because this is a question affecting the whole country. Indian members in the Assembly tried to raise the question there, but they were betrayed and told that the local legislative council would be the proper place to do so. This is the proper place and proper occasion and there is the proper person the honourable member to whom I should put this question. I hope he will give a satisfactory reply to this House.

Mr. C. S. C. HARRISON : Sir, the honourable the Deputy President seemed to think that he was at a disadvantage, because I did not get up to speak before he did. I purposely waited for him to get up and speak, so that the field of criticism may be widened and I should be able to cover all the points that have been raised in the discussion.

The remarks of the honourable the Deputy President were very valuable. He criticises us that we have not given the details up-to-date. Well, Sir, the House knows that a sum of some Rs. 31 lakhs was spent, in a general survey of the project and the 8 months preliminaries of 1923-1924. We could have given the details of the contour work which I mentioned last year amounted to over 40,000 miles of levelling, about twice the circumference of the world.

As the current year has not yet expired, I am afraid it is absolutely impossible to give any details for this 141 lakhs. We hope to give a review of the main heads in the next year's budget. The Honourable the General Member has asked me to do all I can to place full information before this House, and I think it will be agreed that the information now given is a great deal more than that given last year and I hope next year it will be still more. But I should like the House to consider the magnitude of this project and the number of estimates involved. We have been asked to let honourable members have every detail. It will mean a pretty big volume for the Sukkur Barrage Scheme every year if we want to have every single detail. It is for this reason that we have given only the main heads under the project. We have summed up all the items under these heads for the convenience of the honourable members of this House; the whole House has to realise that we have got to consider these works from head to tail; and I do not know whether it will be of special interest to the House to have minute details of the excavation done in any particular length of canal, but if such information is really required by the House (which will mean a very bulky document), I am prepared to give it in the next year's budget and I am sure the Honourable the General Member will give instructions if this is necessary.

The Deputy President along with many other honourable members confused the question of the sanctioned estimate, a project estimate, with the detailed working estimate. Now, Sir, I would like the House to understand this : The simple definition of a project estimate is an estimate that is prepared to the best of the framers' ability on information then available to enable Government to have a fairly good idea of their liabilities before undertaking the work. All the main heads of the project are taken up at the time of the preparation of the project and the officers prepare the details to the best of their ability. They cannot go into minutest details. In this connection the honourable member for Larkana said there have been great mistakes committed in levelling and that enormous sums would be required to rectify those mistakes. Such a statement is not accurate. Years ago Government undertook the contour survey of Sind. Levels were taken on rectangles five miles by $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles and in some cases of $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles. That gave us sufficient information to prepare a project estimate, but not sufficient information for detailed estimates. For detailed working estimates the minutest information has to be available.

[Mr. C. S. C. Harrison]

I have been able to show to some honourable members what these details are. I have got them here and if other honourable members care to see them I will be only too pleased to show them. It can be seen to what great extent we have gone to try and get our working estimates as accurate as possible. These, Sir, will be the detailed estimates that will be considered finally by Government and it will not be in my power to shew all of them in future budgets.

The Deputy President pointed out that from a statement in the sanctioned project (the project prepared in 1919-20 and submitted in 1920) it will be apparent that if this grant is sanctioned we shall be 56 lakhs ahead of the proposed projected annual expenditure. Well, Sir, engineering questions crop up as we go along and we have to study these as we proceed. During the past 5 years we have studied methods of labour-saving machinery and we have accepted some of those methods. The Deputy President takes exception to this "excess" of 56 lakhs, and I would like to inform the House that in the project drag line excavators were provided under general head works. We have, Sir, investigated the possibilities of these machines very carefully and we have purchased 8 large machines, 3 medium size and 2 small. As the Honourable the Finance Member pointed out when introducing the budget before this House these machines are enormous creations of the Mechanical Engineer, and they will each replace—the Honourable the Finance Member I think was rather low in his estimate—something over two thousand men if we work 21 hours a day. We have purchased these big machines and roughly, each of them after re-erection, duty and everything else, will cost on the work just under 5 lakhs of rupees. We have, I say, purchased 8 of these large machines for 40 lakhs and the medium machines (3 lakhs each) and smaller machines (Rs. 70,000 each). So the total amounts to over Rs. 50 lakhs against the 56 lakhs which the Deputy President complains about. Having purchased these machines we naturally will have a reduction in labour. Instead of collecting labour, some this year, some next year, and so on we have got these machines on the spot. They represent labour and they have been purchased after taking into consideration sinking fund, depreciation, etc. I maintain, and I think all our engineers agree with me, that this is a step towards great economy. I hope eventually to prove to this House that they will effect a saving of lakhs of rupees.

I would like to mention, Sir, that these excavators with the exception of two small ones which have cost about seventy thousand rupees each were purchased by open tender by the Director General of Stores, London. The lowest tender was from an English firm and there were 3 higher tenders from American firms. We have purchased six machines from an English firm because they are cheaper and the rest from an American firm because they are based on greater experience.

The Deputy President and other honourable members have referred to the question of bungalows, and pointed out that there is great extravagance being pursued under these heads. The honourable the Deputy President makes a point that certain provision has been made in the sanctioned project estimate and that that provision should not be exceeded—that we should not spend beyond that estimate. But, Sir, I have already explained to this House what detailed estimates mean and what a project estimate means. It is the officers who are responsible for the construction prepare their detailed estimates and when they prepare these estimates they have to take many things into consideration ; when there are excess and savings they have to be set off one against the other, so that Government can be convinced when the final estimate comes before them whether the project estimate is likely to be exceeded or not. We cannot construct the works to the project estimates by all the detailed sub-heads. This is not an uncommon thing ; it is a well-known fact. I do know as an engineer that that has to be done and I trust the Deputy President will see that we have got to prepare our details and to balance excess expenditure of one item against a saving on another. Some of them may be more ; some of them may be less.
