APPENDIX II.

THE

Madras Industrial Exhibition.

I.

THE HON'BLE MR. SANKARAN NAIR'S SPEECH.

YOUR HIGHNESS, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—As the President of the Industrial Exhibition Committee it is my great privilege on this interesting and important occasion to request your Highness the Maharaja of Mysore to graciously open the Exhibition. To all of us it is a source of great gratification and pride to associate your Highness's name with this great movement so full of encouraging possibilities for the future advancement of this country. Your Highness comes amidst us for the first time after your Installation as the Sovereign of Mysore and you come to manifest your kindly sympathy with the hopes and aspirations of the people of India in the direction of India's prosperity and well-being. We are grateful to you, Sir, for your ready condescension in doing this honour to us and in encouraging and helping us with your sympathy and your presence on this occasion. We will remember and succeeding generations will remember your name with gratitude and affection for your support in a matter so intimately connected with India's national prosperity.

Sir, the occasion is one of peculiar interest. We had in Madras, Exhibitions of raw products, arts and manufactures in 1855 and 1857 and other exhibitions mainly agricultural, all of them more or less under European supervision and management.

But, Sir, this is the first Industrial Exhibition which has been originated, organised and carried out by the people themselves (Cheers) without external guidance, and we trust that any shortcomings due to our inexperience may be overlooked.

The idea first originated with the Congress Committees, a purely non-official body. The movement similarly begun in Madras received the hearty support of the officials. His Excellency Lord Amphill when the matter was brought to his notice signified his warm approbation and his willingness to render every help he legitimately could. (Cheers) [And at this stage a voice called for three cheers for His Excellency Lord Amphill, which were most enthusiastically given.] He has not only subscribed to our funds and instructed the officers under his authority to afford us every assistance, but has also endeavoured during his tours to enhance interest in the movement among the people by exhortation, advice and appeals to their patriotism. We have received every encouragement and help at his hands. To him our grateful thanks are due.

Our invitations to the various leading men in the Presidency were cordially received. Committees were formed in all districts, grants were voted by local bodies for the collection and delivery of the exhibits in Madras. We have to thank them also for their valuable assistance.

We have to thank also the various persons, Europeans and Indians, who have rendered similar service.

The assistance rendered by the Native States can scarcely be over-estimated. We sincerely thank them.

The Committee have widely distributed leaflets explaining the advantages accruing from the Exhibition. Those who have organised this Exhibition are well aware of what is being done by our rulers for the benefit of Indian trade. The Government have availed themselves of important exhibitions to advertise Indian goods and these always attracted attention. At Melbourne, Paris, and London Exhibitions India occupied a prominent place. The Calcutta Exhibition of 1884 was mainly to advertise Indian goods. And from the time the Imperial Institute was established in London forward, there were sustained efforts to promote trade in India's commercial products. Sample collections of the specimens of products and manufactures are made and maintained both in London and Calcutta. Enquiries and investigations regarding the chemical properties, the economic uses and the commercial value of such products have been systematically carried on and all available information is obtained from scientific and commercial experts, and such information is published in this country. For all this, it is very doubtful whether this country has derived those benefits that may be reasonably expected. On the other hand, these exhibitions have enabled foreign merchants to ascertain the needs of the country.

They have disclosed the nature of the goods in demand and the quality of the supply and the result has been the partial or entire destruction of the indigenous industries by the inundation of the cheaper goods from the factories of Europe. The Indian commercial classes did not grasp the situation. They clung to their own old ways and they had no initiative. It is very doubtful whether they even tried to ascertain how they could keep pace with their foreign rivals. It may be that a certain class of producers and the Indian labourer have benefited. But this surely cannot compensate for the displacement of labour and the drain of wealth due to the importation of foreign goods. The result has been the decline of Indian arts and manufactures and there has certainly been no such industrial development as one is entitled to look for. We cannot hide from ourselves such result is due in great part to ourselves. Those who have received English education imbued with Western ideas, capable of following European guidance and example in commercial methods have not devoted sufficient attention to the subject. They alone have access to that scientific knowledge which has enabled the Western nations through the co-operation of labour and capital to check the growth of our industries. The annual session of the Congress brings together representatives of the educated classes from all parts of India, and one purpose of holding this Exhibition is to enlist their interest, and induce them to take such action as lay in their power to further industrial progress. They could see at this Exhibition instances of development of Indian industries by European skill and labour. They could realize the condition and progress of local industries under Indian management and suggest with the help of European experts lines of future progress. We thus hope by means of this and similar exhibitions to quicken the sympathy, ensure the support of the educated classes of the country and thus to secure the active co-operation of all classes, European and Indian alike interested in the industrial progress. The manufactures, in our midst European and Indian, may then be hoped to be able to hold their own in friendly rivalry with the outsider.

How far our hopes and expectations will be realised it is impossible to say. It is, however, our earnest hope that this movement of which the Exhibition is only a small beginning may lead to great industrial progress, find employment for thousands of people, reduce the pressure on land, alleviate if not prevent, the horrors of famine. (Continued cheers.)

II.

HIS HIGHNESS THE MAHARAJAH OF MYSORE'S SPEECH ON THE OCCASION OF THE OPENING OF THE MADRAS INDUSTRIAL AND ARTS EXHIBITION :—

1. It was not without diffidence that I accepted the invitation, so courteously extended to me by the Committee, to open the Madras Industrial and Arts Exhibition. I could not but feel that there were many others more obviously qualified for the duty, whether as captains of industry, administrators of experience, or as spokesmen of public opinion. But, as it was evident that the Committee were not in search of instruction from an expert, I could not but conclude that they desired the sympathy of a representative of my class, or of the head of a State which may claim a substantial interest, not only in the indigenous arts and crafts, but also in the more progressive enterprises of Western origin. Of my official sympathy I had already been able to give expression, when sanctioning the proposal of my Dewan and Council, to send a representative collection of objects of Mysore Art and Industry to the Exhibition, and, in view of the considerations to which I have referred, I felt that I could not decline the opportunity of evincing my personal interest by taking part in to-day's ceremony.

2. In some quarters doubts have, I believe, been expressed of the utility of exhibitions such as this. In early days extravagant expectations were formed of their possibilities, and the great London Exhibition of 1851 was, at the time, supposed to have inaugurated the millennium. The fifty years or so that have elapsed since then have not witnessed the realisation of this pleasing vision, nor have the "World's Fairs" of Europe and the West always fulfilled the expectations of their promoters, in immediate and startling expansions of trade and industries, in general or particular. Our exhibition here, however, is on a more modest scale and our expectations of its results are modest in proportion.

3. In these days of keen competition much is heard in all parts of the Empire of what pessimists term, the decadence of British trade and industries which others prefer to regard as the legitimate and natural advance of foreign rivals in the markets of the world. Whatever the correct description of the trouble, the symptoms are beyond question and everywhere the need of increased commercial and industrial activity is proclaimed and acknowledged. Here, in India, the problem is peculiar. Our trade tends steadily to expand, and it is possible, as we know from the Parliamentary reports, to demonstrate by statistics, the increasing prosperity of the country generally. On the other hand, we in India, know that the ancient indigenous handicrafts are decaying, that the fabrics for which India was renowned in the past are supplanted by the products of Western looms and that our industries are not displaying that renewed vitality, which will enable them to compete successfully in the home or the foreign market. The cultivator on the margin of subsistence remains a starveling cultivator, the educated man seeks Government employment, or the readily available profession of a lawyer, whilst the belated artisan works on the lines marked out for him by his forefathers, for a return that barely keeps body and soul together.

4. It is said that India is dependent on agriculture and must always remain so. That may be so, but there can, I venture to think, be little doubt that the solution of the ever recurring famine problem, is to be found, not merely in the improvement of agriculture, the cheapening of loans, or the more equitable distribution of taxation, but still more, in the removal from the land to industrial pursuits of a great portion of those, who, at the best, gain but a miserable subsistence, and on the slightest failure of the season are thrown on public charity. It is time for us in India to be up and doing new markets must be found, new methods adopted and new handicrafts developed, whilst the educated unemployed, no less than the skilled and unskilled labourers, all those, in fact, whose precarious means of livelihood is a standing menace to the well-being of the State, must find employment in reorganised and progressive industries. That educated opinion is awakening to the situation, this Exhibition I take to be a proof. The cry for commercial and industrial education increases, and in this education such exhibitions are an important feature.

5. The subject of industrial education has many prophets, there must be many in the present assembly who are eminently qualified to discuss it, of whom I cannot claim to be one, and I do not propose to inflict on you, at any length, such views as I may have been tempted to form. Some attention has, however, been paid to the subject in Mysore, and it has only brought into prominence the great difficulties which must be faced before positive results can be achieved. Possibly our experience is not without its parallels, even in Madras. But that, to my mind, is no reason for discouragement. The old saying that the man who never made a mistake, never made anything, holds good pre-eminently in matters industrial. The time and trouble devoted to experiment have not been wasted, and it is reasonable to hope that all over India the Governments are profiting by past failure and are gradually directing such instruction as they are able to afford, on the sounder and better lines. The prime essential is that the instructor should know more about the industry than those whom he undertakes to teach, a condition that has by no means invariably been fulfilled. Our object is, I take it, to find new callings for these whose hereditary employment, from various causes, no longer provides a livelihood, and increased efficiency for those whose wares are still in demand, but a price which does not remunerate the craftsman. At present, in too many cases, a boy, attracted by a scholarship, spends some years in an industrial school, and, on leaving, has no idea beyond returning to the ancestral calling, clerkly or menial, or to the hereditary tools and methods. So long as this state of things prevails, we have advanced but little on the road to success. It seems to me, that what we want is, more outside light and assistance from those interested in industries. Our schools should not be left entirely to officials, who are either fully occupied with their other duties or whose ideas are prone, in the nature of things, to run in official grooves. I should like to see all those who "think" and "know," giving us their active assistance and not merely their criticism of our results. It is not Government or forms of Government that have made the great industrial nations, but the spirit of the people and the energy of one and all working to a common end.

6. To return to the exhibition, the object of industrial exhibitions is, I conceive, to convey to the public, evidence of the condition and progress of local industries and to suggest to those interested latent possibilities of improvement. Madras may claim to be a peculiarly suitable locality for such an Exhibition. Not only is the Presidency noted for the excellence of its handwoven goods, for the skillfulness of its metal workers and for its pre-eminence in the leather tanning industry, but the city of Madras has also seen the birth of a completely new industry, which promises to be a source of no little profit in the future. When the trade of copper and brass workers was threatened by an import of cheap and suitable aluminium vessels, Madras set itself to work and, with the assistance of Government, developed, by the skill of its artisans, a local industry in aluminium goods, which has now advanced well beyond the experimental stage. The development of the Madras aluminium industry affords a lesson of unrivalled import and is a hopeful augury for the future of industrial India.

7. The systematic examination of the great Indian handicrafts for the purpose of introducing improvements, which may form the basis of industrial training, has yet to be undertaken. The necessity for it has attracted attention in many parts of India. In the Bombay Presidency an expert in weaving has made important improvements in the warping and weaving of cotton goods on the indigenous loom. In Bengal and elsewhere systematic attempts are being made to disseminate a knowledge of the use of the fly shuttle, which, as I am informed has been quietly at work here in Madras City, for many years, unknown to the rest of India. In Bangalore, a small factory equipped and maintained by my friend Mr. Tata, is steadily improving the process of silk-reeling. Numerous other examples might no doubt be cited, but much, very much, remains to be done in the matter, which is so vital a one for India. Now that the country forms one market with the great industrial countries of the world, her citizens must not sit idly by, awaiting the interference of the Governments in what is, equally, the business of the people. Combination and enterprise are needed. The handicrafts of India have been celebrated since time immemorial, the hereditary aptitude of her artisans survives, waiting but to be utilised in the light of modern knowledge. An exhibition such as this will have been of small purpose if it fails to suggest new methods for developing the skill of the workers, new fields for their employment, and new markets for their products. Let us hope that the successful experiment, which has secured for India the manufacture of aluminium goods may be the forerunner of more far-reaching developments in many other handicrafts. May this Exhibition serve as a stimulus to public spirited men to set on foot similar enterprises, so that by combination, investigation and experiment, the way may be cleared for a progress, of which the exhibitions of the future will illustrate the happy results.
