OLD AND NEW . . . . . Frantispiece

THE SULTAN'S FAVOURITES . . . . . 25

Taken from a rough broadsheet sold in the streets of Constantinople after the Revolution. The Lion of Liberty is facing a hydra-headed monster, the heads representing the various Palace favourites who really controlled the government in the old days—the famous "Palace Gang."

JUSTICE AND POLICE UNDER THE SULTAN'S GOVERNMENT . . . . . 28

The Police School. From the Kalem, or The Pen. This paper, from which I reproduce several cartoons, is one of the happiest literary products of the Turkish Revolution. The picture represents the incapacity and injustice of the old régime.

SALONICA . . . . . 35

The White Tower. On my visit in 1907, a Bulgarian had just been hanged here, and his body exposed to public view for three days.

IN THE STREETS OF MONASTIR . . . . . 38

Bulgarians at a street corner.

SALONICA . . . . . 41

A general view over bright red roofs. Mosques in the distance.

MONASTIR . . . . . 61

The place where General Shemshi Pasha was shot, on entering his carriage to drive to Resna to suppress the incipient Revolution.

SALONICA . . . . . 62

- (a) The quay, showing the White Tower in the distance.

SALONICA . . . . .	65
The Gardens of the White Tower. From this place the telegram was despatched on July 23rd, 1908, conveying to the Sultan the ultimatum of the Committee of Union and Progress. It was here that the Committee met that night and awaited the Sultan's decision.

THE 24TH OF JULY . . . . .	68

AN OFFICIAL OF THE OLD RÉGIME . . . . .	106
The Young Turks are presenting him with a bill for his peculations and misdeeds. (From a broadsheet sold in the streets of Constantinople after the Revolution.)
A DEMONSTRATION BEFORE THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL . . . . .	111
From the steps a speech is being delivered on liberty, equality, and fraternity. (Photo L'Aigle.)
ENVER BEY IN SALONICA . . . . .	116
He is crossing a square in front of a Greek restaurant. A snapshot taken a few days after the Revolution. Like the other members of the Committee of Union and Progress, Enver Bey has refused to allow his photograph to be taken for sale, so that the picture possesses exceptional interest. He wears the khaki uniform which the Young Turk officers had agreed to adopt for the expected civil war. The flags in the background, and the seller of newspapers, are typical of the new state of affairs.
AHMED RIZA BEY, first President of Chamber of Deputies . . . . .	118
For twenty-five years, as an exile in Paris, he laboured for the Young Turk cause. (By kind permission of the Editor of the Near East .)

MANIASSI ZADI REFIK BEY, Minister of Justice .	125
He is the only member of the Committee of Union and Progress who at present holds a Government portfolio. (By kind permission of the Editor of the Near East .)
FRATERNISATION OF CHRISTIAN PRIEST AND MOSLEM HOJA .	139
From the Kalem , where it was entitled "Panneau decoratif pour le Parlement."
A "MANIFESTATION" IN THE STREETS OF PERA .	143
The procession is shown on its way to the British embassy to do honour to Great Britain in recognition of the support given to Young Turkey. (Photo L'Aigle.)
THE SULTAN .	152
He is alighting from his carriage at the door of the mosque, on the occasion of the weekly "churchgoing" or Selamlık. The photograph is unique, as it was taken on the first Friday after the grant of the Constitution, and since that day the photographers have been excluded from the court of the mosque. It is the most life-like representation of the Sultan's features and attitude that I have seen. (Photo L'Aigle.)
THE MUTINY AMONG THE PALACE GUARDS .	155
After the Revolution one of the first necessities was to replace the Palace Guards of the Sultan by regiments loyal to the Constitution. Some of the Guards, who were being sent away to the provinces, resisted the order to leave. They were promptly surrounded and overpowered. The picture shows the ring-leaders, in the centre of a square formed by the loyal troops from the Macedonian garrison, being addressed by Mukhtar Pasha, the commander of the 1st Army Corps, which garrisons Constantinople. They were afterwards led out and shot. (By kind permission of the Editor of the Illustrated London News .)
THE SELAMLİK .	156
The Sultan is shown driving down the hill from the Palace to the mosque, followed by a group of Court and other officials. Opposite him sits the Grand Vizier, Kiamil Pasha. Behind are the windows of the Palace, at which the Sultan sometimes appears to show himself to the people. Troops, four deep, line the road, and behind them is a motley crowd of sightseers, who would not have been admitted before the Revolution. (Photo L'Aigle.)
THE BALKAN COMMITTEE'S DELEGATES RECEIVED BY THE SULTAN .	159
The Sultan is shown addressing the delegates. The scene typifies the changed attitude of those who have formerly attacked the Sultan's government on grounds of humanity. As a result of the Revolution, he has become, for the present at least, the mere figure-head of a constitutional state. (By kind permission of the Editor of the Illustrated London News .)

FRATERNITY . . . . .	172
A Turkish walla (in the centre) is shown sitting at the voting table with a Greek priest on his right and an Armenian priest on his left. Behind are two little girls bearing the emblem of the Constitution decorated with flowers; in front is the ballot-box. The wall at the back is the façade of a Greek church. (Photo L'Aigle.)
THE ELECTIONS . . . . .	185
A polling-place in the court of a mosque in Constantinople. The place is surrounded by soldiers. Each voter receives a large blank sheet of paper, writes on it the name of the candidate of his choice, and drops it in the ballot-box. They are voting for an "elector of the second degree." These "electors" subsequently elect the deputies for the city. (Photo L'Aigle.)
THE ELECTIONS . . . . .	189
A procession escorting the ballot-box, after the primary election (see the last picture), to the municipal buildings. The ballot-box is on the carriage in the background. (Photo L'Aigle.)
THE OPENING OF PARLIAMENT . . . . .	195
A scarlet flag, about 2 ft. square, of which thousands were sold on the day of the opening, December 17, 1908. The English reader will note its place of manufacture. It bears the date of the grant of the Constitution.
PRINCE SABA-ED-DIN . . . . .	212
The brother-in-law of the Sultan, he has nevertheless lived in voluntary exile, in Paris, for the past ten years. He is the founder of the Union Libérale, which advocates a measure of local self-government, and claims to be more liberal than the Committee of Union and Progress. It may play an important part in Turkish politics. (By kind permission of the Editor of the Near East.)
THE LIFTING OF THE WAR-CLOUDS . . . . .	230
This cartoon appeared in the Kalem when the prospects of peace with Austria and Bulgaria were brightening. It was called "The Lamentation of the Carrion-Crow."
THE BOYCOTT OF AUSTRIAN GOODS . . . . .	235
During the controversy with Austria, arising out of the annexation of Bosnia, all Austrian goods were boycotted by the Turkish people. The picture shows the shop of Herr Stein, in Galata, where "pickets" were stationed to warn the public not to enter. (Photo L'Aigle.)
THE BOYCOTT . . . . .	236
The chief feature of the boycott was the refusal to buy red fezzes, most of which are made in Austria. The Kalem depicts the Emperor of Austria putting on a fez, in order to persuade his people to buy up the stock of fezzes which is lying unused in the Austrian factories.

From Carpathian to Pindus :

Pictures of Roumanian Country Life.

By TEREZA STRATILESCO.

With 2 Maps and many Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth, 15/- net.

"Singularly vivid and interesting."—Truth.

"It is primarily a description, and a very pleasant one, of the Carpathian forests and valleys, and of the kindly, genial, picturesque peasantry that inhabit them."—Manchester Guardian.

"Miss Stratilesco's fascinating work."—Scotsman.

"A comprehensive book written by one who knows the country and people intimately."—Daily Graphic.

"The book is very full and useful, amounting to a complete study from all points of the Roumanian peasant-nation. It is well illustrated from photographs, and will at once take rank among the works of reference necessary to the student of European affairs."—Outlook.

"A book as full of merit as it is of observation. From it we learn much of a subject that is not only of great interest in itself, but also one of which comparatively little is known."—Graphic.

PERU

Its Former and Present Civilization, Topography and Natural Resources, History and Political Conditions, Commerce and General Development.

By C. REGINALD ENOCK, F.R.G.S., Author of "The Andes and the Amazon."

With an Introduction by MARTIN HUME, a Map, and Numerous Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d. net.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"An important work. . . . The writer possesses a quick eye and a keen intelligence ; is many-sided in his interests, and on certain subjects speaks as an expert. The volume deals fully with the development of the country, and is written in the same facile and graphic style as before. Illustrated by a large number of excellent photographs."—The Times.

"Mr. C. Reginald Enock's elaborate and well-studied descriptive treatise would be sure of a welcome even were it less well done than it is. The work unites in the happiest way the best qualities of an official manual and a personal description. Plentifully illustrated, well informed, and written throughout in an agreeable style, the book will prove interesting reading."—Scotsman.

"Mr. Enock's book contains much material necessary for our enlightenment of Peru. In every part of his book one finds the evidences of independent personal observation directed by a mind trained for such work. The book may be commended to all students, not only of the West, but of the East."—Morning Post.

"The author treats of Peru as a political and commercial entity, and we find it even more interesting than his previous work."—The Economist.

"An able and exhaustive study of Peru ; its past, its present, and interesting matter upon which to estimate its future. As one reads through page after page of clear, concise, graphic description, one feels that one has actually travelled with Mr. Enock. All will find in this charming volume matter of interest."—New York Herald.

"The book is a valuable contribution to the literature of Peru, and a trustworthy summary of our knowledge of the country. The illustrations are excellent, and give an admirable idea of the scenery."—Manchester Guardian.

"Mr. Enock's admirable book will certainly direct attention to the country. No one can read this able and delightful volume without acquiring much information and great interest in a country of which so little is known."—Aberdeen Free Press.

"We have read the present book from cover to cover, and it seems to tell just what is wanted about one of the most interesting countries in the world. Mr. Enock's ways as a traveller commend him to us."—Country Gentleman.
