

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY MORNING.

EMPIRE BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD, FORT.

Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

XXX BOMBAY—SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 7, 1919. No. 1.

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not
I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard."
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

Janmashtami Reflections.	Calcutta University Com- mission Report. III.
Roman Catholic Criticism.	The Exchange Problem in India III.
Revolution Army's Umbrella's Crisis.	The Imperial Indian Citizen- ship Association.
Bene Israel Year Book.	A Hostel for Indian Girls.
Leopard.	Janmashtami Reflections.
Lord Sydenham and his Ends.	Sri Krishna and the Brahma Samaj.
"Respectable Gentlemen."	A Roman Catholic Criticism.
Reform among the Peasants.	Mr. Gandhi's Religion.
Viceroy's Speech.
Democracy and Caste.

NOTES.

Janmashtami Reflections: The gist of the Janmashtami reflections to which Mr. Kingsley Williams refers in his letter, published to-day, was that the person whom tradition has clothed with affectionate reverence and to whom it assigns authorship of the immortal Gita, is a great national hero, and could not have been a libertine as has been sought to be made out by some Christian missionaries. The writer was, not discussing such questions as whether there was such a person, whether the Krishna of the Gita was the Krishna of the Purana, whether the Gita was composed by Krishna at all, whether Krishna is a Hinduised incarnation of Christ. All these are interesting questions, but the point of view of the writer was the same as that expressed by distinguished Christian writers. I wrote that even if all the historical facts about Krishna were proved to be unfounded, still, the Christ-will continue to evoke the reverence of mankind. The paragraph from the New Dispensation, printed there, on Keshab Chandra Sen's view of Krishna, bearing on the point raised by our correspondent. We have read the quotation from Plato's Republic in Mr. Williams's letter with interest, and Homer and Hesiod continued to be read to Plato, notwithstanding Plato's dictum. We are all sure that from the pedagogical point of view it is right to teach children that never up to the present time have there been any quarrels among nations. When, as a matter of fact, there have been innumerable such quarrels. Plato's Republic means no means a model for modern educationists and moralists. Much of the irreverence and other faults of character attributed to English education are not due to it at all, but to the ruthless manner in which many Christian Missionaries in the past—who, we are afraid, are not without their representatives at the present day—went about to discredit names and ideas held in deep reverence by the people. Milton and Burke are books of reverence, Mill was the saint, as he has been called, of rationalism, and Morley has told us that it is quite as possible reverently to disbelieve as to believe. English education, as such, is a conserving influence not a destructive one. We have never been wanting in appreciation of the noble philanthropic work of Christian Missionaries, many of them men and women of the loftiest character and ideals, but we feel that their educational methods in the past have not been all that they should be, and that the results consequent thereon are being wrongly imputed to English education.

A Roman Catholic Criticism. The Standard, a new weekly journal, published in Madras, is an organ of the Roman Catholic Indian community, and we should like to take this opportunity of welcoming it to the ranks of journalism. We have a high appreciation of the historic Roman Church, and there is absolutely no basis for our contemporary's remark, in the paragraph which we print to-day, that "the Indian Social Reformer has been brought up in the Protestant tradition" of underestimating the virtues of the Latin races which adhere to the Roman Church. We do not know what our contemporary means by speaking of us, who do not profess any form of Christianity though we hold, as every one should, Christ in the greatest reverence, as brought up in the Protestant tradition. We may tell the Standard that our surroundings offer many opportunities of realising the admirable organisation and discipline of the great Catholic Church, and the devoted and selfless labours of its priesthood. No one but a fanatic or a fool will speak lightly of the contribution which the Catholic Church has made and is making to the spiritual interests of humanity. We may say the same of the Latin races. We never drew any conclusion upon the womanhood of Italy", as our contemporary has quite erroneously understood our observations. Our object in quoting from Colonel Snow's report was merely to point out the untenability of inferences regarding the morality of a people drawn from the prevalence among them of a particular religious cult. The Standard has been moved by our comments to make reflections on the character of Protestants and Anglo-Saxons, though we belong to neither of these categories. We need hardly say that we do not accept our contemporary's estimates. Our contemporary is committing the same faults as those which it attributes to Protestants. Such sweeping generalisations, it is pretty safe to say, are hardly ever true or just. In the leading article in the same issue, the Standard lashes out against the Indian advocates of women suffrage, ourselves being placed first in the category of delinquents. The gravamen of the charge is, again, that they are imitating Anglo-Saxons and Protestants. Our contemporary discourses learnedly on the evils wrought by what it calls "the dissolution of the Christian family" of the Middle Ages, and "the atomic theory" of modern society but as we cannot recall the Middle Ages, is it not wise to suit our political outfit to the ideas of the age in which we live? Even orthodox Hindus have not opposed woman suffrage. The zeal of our Catholic contemporary in this case seems to us to be wholly misdirected.

A Salvation Army Officer's Heroism: Some students of the Wood National College, Madras, write to New India: "A few months ago we requested Capt. Green of the Salvation Army in charge of the Buminigedda Criminal Settlement to open our Industrial Section, when he merely replied that he was 'lying down'. Inquiry brought to light the fact that it was a noble act of sacrifice on his part that had disabled him. A criminal had a serious burn and the doctor declared that the patient could only be saved if some person would offer his own skin. Thereupon Capt. Green offered his own skin for the purpose. The doctor then took over a score of pieces from the noble Captain's legs, which laid him in bed for two months. Your reference in Thursday's NEW INDIA regarding brotherly love, shown under similar circumstances, recalled to our mind this act of noble self-sacrifice."

The Bene Israel Year Book. Miss Rebecca Reuben has been publishing since last year an year book giving particulars relating to her small but interesting community. In the first number, Dr. Joseph Benjamin Bamnolkar has written an interesting historical retrospect. In the year-book for the current year, Miss Reuben has given a short, brightly written sketch of the present position of the community and its problems. The little volume contains, besides a list of the principal fasts and festivals, the Jewish calendar, a review of the community's activities during the past year, Jewish and Bene-Israel statistics, a list of communal institutions in India, a communal directory, Bene-Israel authors and publications, and Bene-Israel periodicals. The total Jewish population of the Bombay Presidency at the Census of 1911 was about 16,000, of which about 15,000 is estimated to belong to the Bene-Israel community. Nearly 12,000 are found in British districts, more than half of that number in the City of Bombay. Kolaba, Thana and Poona, have the next largest numbers of Bene-Israel. The community, ever since its first arrival in India, has been settled in the Konkan, adopting Marathi as its vernacular. Agriculture and oil-pressing were the principal occupations followed by the community. Some of its members distinguished themselves in military service in the days of the East India Company. Education is rapidly spreading among the community and several of its members are successful professional men, especially in the medical line. Women's education is also spreading.

The Scapegoat: The Challenges (London) apologises to Sir Michael O'Dwyer for its comments regarding recruiting methods in the Punjab. It ends by saying: "Nevertheless we intended rather to emphasise the fact that, however good his intentions were, his earnestness was often liable to misinterpretation by his subordinates. It is precisely this danger which makes the government of India such a profoundly intricate problem." Either Sir Michael knew what was being done by his subordinates or he did not. If he did, what did he do to set them right? If he did not, how did he reconcile his conscience to occupying a post for which he was obviously unfitted? Mr. Nundy's article in the Hindustan Review, to which we referred last week, has some illuminating comments on this hackneyed defence of Anglo-Indian administrators, so far as it has any application to this particular case.

For Lord Sydenham and his Friends. Lord Morley loudly complained of the tendency of retired Anglo-Indian officials to indulge in criticism of Government measures when they ought to be enjoying their well-earned leisure. Mr. Montagu has even made cause for complaint in this respect than his distinguished predecessor at the India Office. To Lord Sydenham and others like him we would commend the example of the great Duke of Wellington. Guardian (London) recalls in its review of French's "1914", that the Duke of Wellington defended his own decision to say nothing about grievances against the Ministers of his time on ground that he was a "nimuk walla", that he had eaten the King's salt, and it was not for him to disparage the King's servants. The "nimuk walla" of our time, on the other hand, are not happy unless they disparage the country and the ministers of the King whose salt they had eaten. The incident also noteworthy as showing that Indian ways of looking at life's problems were not wholly without effect on the mind of the great Duke who first wore his spurs in India.

"Respectable Gentlemen": We have received a Press Note intimating that the Government of Bombay have decided to make a beginning by providing accommodation for visitors in a selected number of revenue offices and residences in which offices are allowed to be held. This is in pursuance of a resolution moved by the Hon. Mr. Naik in the Legislative Council, the principle of which Government had accepted. We thought that, at the suggestion of His Excellency the Governor, Mr. Naik agreed to substitute the sensible phrase "members of the public" in place of the snobbish "respectable gentlemen." But we see the resolution as it is printed in the Press Note retains the meaningless original. We are glad, however, that the Government order itself speaks only of visitors without any adjective. The traditional ideas of respectability are undergoing complete transformation. The other day a family of the bhangis caste, men, women and children, got into a second-class compartment in a local train near Bombay. Some of the passengers, thinking that there was a mistake, mentioned to them that that was not a third-class compartment, whereupon the leader of the party triumphantly exhibited his tickets (which were of the second class) to the crest-fallen remonstrators. The latter thereupon were glad to cover their confusion by making kindly enquiries regarding the education of the children of the party.

Social Reform among the Masses. United India and Native States affirms that practical social reform is rapidly making headway even among the masses. Says our contemporary: "There is a large class of educated men who sympathise with every rapid step taken in social reform and rejoice in the smallest triumph of reform. To recall a recent instance, we have only to refer to what is known as the Calicut Taluk Pollution case. The fault of the Tiyya Doctor was the first accused in this case was that he was too near the Tank and polluted it. The case resulted in an acquittal and Dr. Choyi was the recipient of congratulations from all and sundry. A Brahmin Vakil who defended him and the public outside who sympathised with him do not evidently consider the acquittal a blow from which Hinduism will never recover. There are scores of such instances in which even uneducated people seemed to realise the justice of making readjustments of the existing civil arrangements. They found themselves opposed or thwarted by the champions of the old order among the educated classes."

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, SEPTEMBER 7, 1919.

THE VICEROY'S SPEECH.

His Excellency the Viceroy made a lengthy speech at the opening of the Simla session of the Imperial Legislative Council on Wednesday, reviewing the chief events that have happened since the close of the last session of the Council. The interval of five months has been a period of much anxiety and serious trouble both within and without. Closely following the lamentable occurrences in the Punjab, came the war with Afghanistan. In the history of Anglo-India, discontent within has usually been the precursor of troubles on the frontier. But bureaucracy has no use for the lessons of history. Entrenched in its own omniscience it regards those who invoke history in politics as prigs and pedants. Thus it came to pass that the Afghan declaration of war caught the Government of India unprepared. His Excellency the Viceroy defended his own Government against the severe strictures passed upon it for the serious defects in the military organisation in the early stages of the Afghan war. But his arguments have failed to convince even our Anglo-Indian contemporaries who habitually support Government. They declare almost with one voice that the Viceroy evaded the real issues and that His Excellency's words and figures leave the matter very much where it stood. We do not profess to be military experts but there is a simple matter which even a layman can understand. His Excellency stated that the deaths per thousand admissions to hospitals (excluding the wounded) among the troops from the 5th May to the 9th August were: British 0.82 and Indians 27.74. He went on to say. "One word is needed with regard to the relatively high mortality among Indians. This was due to the high incidence of cholera, especially among Indian followers whose standard of water discipline was naturally lower than that of regular troops and who could not be restrained from quenching their thirst at pools and streams which though apparently pure were in reality full of cholera germs." We are afraid that this explanation of the enormous disparity between the British and the Indian rates of mortality, will convince no one who has an open mind. It either implies that British troops could endure thirst—the most maddening of animal ravines—better than Indians and that, at a shade of temperature of between 110 and 120 degrees; or that the provision for quenching thirst was far less liberal in the case of Indians than in the case of the British. We may be wrong but we see no other alternative. Further, cholera is the oldest of investigated epidemics in India, and there are simple means, easily possible in an army, of preventing it. The pools could have been disinfected, and water from the streams either boiled or otherwise treated to make it innocuous.

While, as we said, our Anglo-Indian contemporaries unhesitatingly criticise His Excellency's apology, so far as the Afghan campaign is concerned, as mere eyewash, they seem to be quite satisfied with Lord Chelmsford's defence of the Panjab measures. To our mind, however, the defence of the administration of the Panjab under martial law, is every whit as lame and unconvincing as the Viceroy's remarks on the Afghan muddle. The secret of the ineptitude in either case is to be found in a sentence in His Excellency's speech. "I promised", said His Excellency, "support to the head of each Local Government for such measures as he thought it might be necessary to take and that support was given unwaveringly throughout." His Excellency seems to be proud of his part but, in our humble opinion, it is very poor statesmanship after all. We do not want a Viceroy to let the Provincial governments do what they like and then to find more or less plausible reasons for justifying them. The Viceroy is the representative of His Majesty as well as the head of the Indian Administration and in both capacities he is charged with the duty of protecting His Majesty's subjects from being oppressed by subordinate administrations. It was Lord Curzon, we think, who laid down that it was the duty of the Government of India to see that Provincial Governments do not degenerate into petty despotisms. It may sound chivalrous to bureaucratic ears for the Viceroy to say that he promised support to Provincial Governments and carried out his promise unwaveringly, but what does it really come to? It simply comes to this that the Viceroy abdicated his functions, utterly ignored his responsibility to His Majesty's subjects, and allowed the Panjab satrap to do all that he did under cover of the Governor-General's supreme authority. In view of Lord Chelmsford's confession, the credit due to Sir George Lloyd's admirable statesmanship in Bombay is magnified a hundred-fold. His Excellency's theory of the origin of the Panjab situation, we are sorry to say, is more ingenious than ingenious. He said: "Last session certain hon. members during the passage of the Rowlatt Bill gave me warnings of an almost minatory character that if that Bill passed into law there would be agitation of a serious nature. I think the hon. members will realise that no Government could deviate from a policy which it regarded as essential on account of any threat of agitation. However, there were those who thought that it was necessary to make good this threat, and as a consequence the deplorable events occurred which are to be the subject of an enquiry." This means that the agitation was created in order to give effect to the threat, said to have been expressed in the Legislature Council. Mr. Srinivasa Sastri, Mr. Jinnah and others emphatically repudiated the charge in the Legislative Council and pointed out that they were only echoing the feeling in the country. This can be verified by reference to the files of newspapers. We ourselves wrote protesting strongly against the Bills as soon as they were published, before the last session of the Legislative Council met. Other Indian papers did the same. Mr.

Gandhi entered the lists at a much later stage and nobody can say that his object was to give effect to the alleged threats of the Indian non-official members of the Council. His Excellency's theory cannot stand a moment's scrutiny. We have only space left to-day to express the general dissatisfaction felt at the constitution of the Committee which is to inquire into the Panjab occurrences. In the first place, it is unsatisfactory that the Committee is to make its report not to the Secretary of State but to the Government of India. The Committee consists of Lord Hunter, formerly Solicitor-General for Scotland as Chairman, and Mr. Justice Rankin, the Honorable Mr. Rice, Major-General Sir George Barrow, Sir Chimanlal Setalvad, and Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad. The fact that the Viceroy felt it necessary to indicate the minor office in some previous Ministry held by the Chairman, shows that his is not, by any means, a name of great authority in British politics. Of the five members, three are officials, one is a Gwalior State official who, certainly, cannot be expected to appreciate the British Indian point of view, and only one namely, Sir Chimanlal Setalvad is qualified by his public life and professional career to take an independent and strictly judicial view of the matters under inquiry.

BUREAUCRACY AND CASTE.

Young India publishes the papers relating to the order of the Government of Bombay employing additional police in Nadiad for one year at a cost of about Rs. 16,000, the whole amount to be recovered by a rate assessed upon the Bania and Patidar residents of the town. This is a sequel to the derailment of the troop train at Nadiad in April last during the disturbances which followed the reported arrest of Mr. Gandhi on his way to Delhi. To begin with, this form of collective punishment is, in our opinion, a relic of barbarism. It may be the only method of bringing home offences against person and property to the tribes on the North Western frontier. It is absolutely unjust when applied to the inhabitants of Nadiad. The Collector of the District, it may be observed in passing, had soon after the derailment conveyed to the Nadiad Municipality his appreciation of the "very general respect for law and order which they (the citizens) maintained during the period of strain and excitement which is now (this was written on the 21st April) happily passed away; special thanks are due to those of the leaders who used their influence in the direction of moderation." It is true that he pointed out that one serious offence had been committed within the limits of the town and that the responsibility for this it must rest upon the Nadiad public unless they transferred it definitely elsewhere. But the solitary offence cannot wipe out the credit for the general orderliness of the people, which the Collector so liberally tendered to the Municipality. However that may be, we respectfully protest against fining the people of Nadiad for the offence of some, it may be several individuals.

The reasons given for singling out the Bania and Patidar castes for this special imposition, are reminiscent of Fluellen's logic in Shakespeare's Henry V. Mr. Gandhi is a Bania and so are Mr. Gokuldas Talati and Mr. Fulchand Shah, Secretary and President respectively of the Home Rule League. Assuming for argument's sake, that these three gentlemen had been really instrumental in creating the situation which culminated in the derailment, there is nothing to show that their conduct had anything to do with the fact of their being Banias or that the Bania community had commissioned them to conduct themselves in that manner. Suppose tomorrow the Bania community excommunicates these gentlemen, will that absolve it from having to pay for the punitive police? What is it that Government expect a caste to do to free itself from a similar responsibility in the case of offences by men who were born in it? The caste has no power of legislation. It can act only within customary limits. To talk of Mr. Gandhi's caste as an operative influence in his life is utterly meaningless. He went to England as a young man and after his education there, he lived in South Africa for nearly twenty years. We do not think that he is recognised as a member of his caste by being invited to caste dinners nor that he is expected to conform to any customs of his caste. His manner of life, his freedom of social intercourse with all classes and creeds, his close association with the depressed classes, are all against the rules of his caste. In fact, very few of his friends are interested in the question of his caste. The Bania caste, moreover, is not one caste. There are Hindu Banias and Jain Banias. The Census Report names twenty subdivisions of Banias (Vanis) among Hindus and eight among Jains, among several of which intermarriage is prohibited. The same argument apply to the Patidars more or less.

We submit these considerations and those that follow with some confidence that the Government of Bombay will not allow the argument of expediency to prevent the prompt rectification of a palpable injustice. The incident has a deeper significance. It shows, in our opinion, that the bureaucracy while it has virtually destroyed the ancient communal institutions of India and absorbed the power vested in these institutions in its own hands, is not above utilising the faded vestiges of those institutions for the purpose of imposing penalties on the people. It is apparently a question with it of "head I win, tails you lose." How can the castes be made responsible for the conduct of individuals over whom British Indian law and administration do not recognise its authority? As social reformers, we respectfully protest against this attempt to utilise caste as an accessory to the administration. Apart from the matter as it immediately concerns Nadiad, the question involves a large principle and should be threshed out. The action of Government betrays complete ignorance of the constitution and the powers of caste at the present day. It would, we think, be quite as just to collect the cost of the punitive police from all persons in Nadiad who happen to be of the same stature as Mr. Gandhi, or those who read Tolstoi and wear hand-woven clothing. A strong protest should if necessary be sent to the Secretary of State against this method of utilising caste. Mr. Gandhi can help being a Bania no more than Mr. Lloyd George can, being a Welshman or Mr. Carson being an Ulsterman. Neither of them chose their community nor did their community choose them. There is better reason to recover the cost of the additional police from the officials who allowed the situation to take them unawares than from the Banias and Patidars whose responsibility for it is extremely fanciful and far-fetched.

CALCUTTA UNIVERSITY COMMISSION REPORT. III

Before stating our views on the medium of instruction in the High Schools and the encouragement of the study of the vernaculars, it is desirable to elaborate our point that the recommendation of the Calcutta University Commission is against the weight of educational evidence which was placed before them and that in making it, they have been obsessed by the plausible generalities of Sir Harcourt Butler. There is some doubt even as to the precise import of the Commission's recommendation. In the opening paragraphs in the chapter containing the Commission's recommendations on this question, it is said that there is an overwhelming mass of opinion pointing to the use of English as the chief medium from the end of the intermediate stage upwards. "We concur," add the Commissioners "in the view of the majority." This means that English will be the chief medium of instruction only in the two University years above the Intermediate stage. At the end of the chapter, however, the Commission sum up their conclusions as including the reduction of the use of English as a medium of instruction up to the present matriculation stage, and its retention as a medium above that stage. We have looked in vain in the body of the chapter for a means of filling the gap between the opening and the concluding recommendations. There is a recommendation that at the Intermediate College examination, the medium should be English. Perhaps, it is left to be inferred that the teaching in the course leading to the examination should necessarily be in English. A definite statement to that effect would have been desirable. Turning to the evidence, rather more than half of the witnesses who gave evidence were in favour of retaining the present system. A certain number of the rest was in favouring of introducing English earlier than at present. Others were in favour of introducing it at other points, and those who were in favour of making it the medium of instruction only after the Intermediate were a small minority. By grouping along with this small minority, all those who wished English to be the medium of instruction at more or less earlier stages, the Commission have obtained "an overwhelming mass of evidence pointing to the use of English as the chief medium from the end of the intermediate stage upwards." In other words, this "overwhelming mass" includes the more than half of the number of witnesses who were for retaining the present system; and the minorities who were in favour of making English the medium of instruction at earlier stages. This is a very ingenious way of converting a small minority into an overwhelming majority. But such legerdemain cannot disguise the fact that a substantial majority of witnesses are opposed to the recommendation of the Commission. Another noteworthy fact is that, while the Commission repeatedly quote the resolution of the Government of India of 1913 (when Sir Harcourt Butler was member in charge) they completely give the go-by to the resolutions since he left. Sir Sankaran Nair, the only Indian who has had charge of the portfolio, has expressed a diametrically opposite view in some of the resolutions issued in his time. This the Commission ignore. Neither Sir Harcourt Butler nor Sir Sankaran Nair is an educationist, but the latter being an Indian knows where the shoe pinches, whereas the former can at best say as to where the shoe should pinch. Sir Harcourt, as Education Member, prevented more good than he did to the country. He was instrumental in throwing out Mr. Gokhale's very cautious Elementary Education Bill, and that does not mark him out as a great educational thinker.

We pointed out in the last issue that Sir Harcourt Butler's dictum which has so greatly impressed the Commission, has no foundation in fact and is a mere matter of prejudice. The dictum is that "the boys who are taught through the medium of the vernacular until the highest stages of the High School are reached, show markedly greater intelligence than those whose earlier education has been more largely conducted through the medium of the English language". There is no province where boys are taught through the vernacular until the highest stages of the High School. In the United provinces where His Honour spent the larger part of his career, English is the medium of instruction in the two highest classes. In Calcutta, where part of his year, as member of the Viceroy's Executive Council, was spent, the four highest classes are taught in English. In Simla and Delhi of which he has had experience as member of the Government of India, English is the medium in the two highest classes of the High School. In Burma where His Honour was Lieutenant Governor for about a year or two, English teaching begins in the first primary class, is part-medium from the 5th to the 7th, and full medium from the 8th to 10th classes. It is, therefore, difficult to see where His Honour found boys instructed through the vernacular until the highest stages of the High School, for instituting his interesting comparison. There may have been a few students privately educated who came under His Honour's notice, but surely even if, contrary to our experience of privately educated children, these did show some marked superiority of intelligence, they could not afford a fair basis of comparison. There is one test which the Commission could have easily applied to His Honour's dictum, if they had begun, as all contrary the Gold Reserve in other countries was increased during the War beyond their reasonable share. The recent Committee appointed to inquire into the cost of producing gold in the British Empire has found that the cost is rising; and that if the production is to be kept up at the pre-war level, the price would have to be raised, in order to prevent the less profitable mines from being shut down. But in this country the price of Rs. 33½ a tola of gold roughly equals Rs. 90 an oz. of gold, and so there is no danger to apprehend from that direction. With freedom to settle her trade balance, India can obtain enough gold as she usually has a favourable balance even after paying all the Home Charges and other claims against her. Gold in circulation in India would relieve much of the present pressure on silver in the world and avoid for ever the necessity of tampering with exchange.

The only objection against our recommendation, that is at once reasonable and formidable, is that gold once it gets into circulation will be difficult to mobilize in the event of an international financial crisis. India will, no doubt, absorb a certain quantity of gold for purposes other than currency, which may be described, with pardonable inaccuracy, as hoards. But it is possible to guard against such a tendency running to extremes. With a sufficient substitute currency, the cheaper the better, which however is guaranteed to be immediately convertible in gold, the danger to an excessive circulation of gold would be avoided. The abolition of silver will, we believe, make the notes, convertible in terms of the gold standard coin, in the absence of other credit documents far more popular than they are to-day. The gold thus saved by the use of paper may be economised and mobilised by being kept in reserve in a Central Bank. And if the issue of notes, placed in the hands of such a central dominating banking institution, is made dependant upon the provision of an equivalent reserve in specie or good commercial paper, somewhat on the lines followed by the Federal Reserve Notes in the United States, there would be the easiest transition between metallic currency and commercial credit, an easy automatic expansion and contraction of the volume of currency precisely in accordance with the requirements of trade.

The gravest defect indeed in the entire currency organisation is the absence of any dominating Bank, issuing paper currency and controlling by its position the entire Indian business world. The Government of India must part with their burdensome pre-occupations in managing a currency system through a department, conspicuously lacking in the requisite experience and expert knowledge. They must abandon the present system of keeping huge balances idle in their treasuries at a time when the business world most needs them. With a great public Bank, centralising the financial reserves of the community, and adopting all currency saving devices, as for example the Giro system of payments developed by the Reich Bank in Germany, we shall be free from a frequent meddling with the exchange at the cost of the country's trade prospects and industrial organisation, avoiding at the same time the unprofitable employment of an excessive amount of a costly circulating medium: Gold.

To carry out in full the reforms suggested here, the establishment of a gold standard with a gold currency, conversion of the currency notes in terms of gold standard, and the organisation of adequate, up-to-date banking facilities, would of course need time. But a beginning can be made now that our whole Currency organisation is under review. Sufficient gold is due to us in the Paper Currency and the Gold Standard Reserves to justify us in the hope that if decided upon the gold standard would not be rendered impracticable for the want of gold. If the condition of our debtors forbid any attempt to realise at once, we may issue bonds of a currency of from five to ten years, within which it may be reasonably hoped our sterling debtors would be able to redeem their obligations, to serve as guarantee of redemption to the holders of the temporary substitute money. If these measures or the like are adopted we shall have finally set at rest the ghost of the exchange problem. The Government would be freed from their present harassing anxieties and their balances made available to the public, from whom, in the ultimate analysis, they are derived. Exchange would become, as it ought to be, a proper concern of the Banks, and would fluctuate within the limits set by trade requirements and the cost of transport. These provide their own corrective. Finally, we shall have mobilised a sufficient Reserve for all international contingency, short, indeed, of such a universal scramble for gold as occurred for five years during the War.

Index to the last Volume: An index to the twenty-ninth volume of this journal, which ended with the last issue, is presented to our subscribers along with this issue.

THE IMPERIAL INDIAN CITIZENSHIP ASSOCIATION.

A meeting of the Managing Committee of the Association was held on the 28th of August 1919; the Hon. Mr. G. K. Parekh presiding. It was resolved to despatch the following telegrams to the Secretary of State and the Viceroy of India in Council in connection with the situation in South Africa and Fiji.

The Managing Committee of the Imperial Indian Citizenship Association views with alarm the reported decision of the Government of Fiji not to cancel immediately the existing indentures. The Committee is of opinion that a system under which besides other glaring evils prostitution is almost legalised cannot be allowed to continue under the British Constitution and therefore earnestly prays that the Government of India and the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for India will secure immediate cancellation of the existing indentures certainly before the 31st day of December 1919.

Regard being had to the fact that a Commission is to be appointed by the Government of the Union of South Africa to cover an inquiry into the position of British Indians throughout South Africa, the Managing Committee of the Imperial Indian Citizenship Association respectfully suggests to the Government of India and his Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for India, that the Commission should contain Indian representatives not less than the number representing the Europeans' interest in South Africa, it being understood that the position of the Indians in South Africa shall not in any way be adversely affected by the findings of the Commission and that the Commission shall have the power to advise withdrawal of the Asiatics Trading and Land Owning Act just passed by the Union Parliament and that the operation of the said Act shall remain in abeyance pending such inquiry.

A HOSTEL FOR INDIAN GIRLS.

The Young Women's Christian Association is contemplating opening a small Hostel for Parsee and Indian Girls who are earning their own living. The Hostel will probably be in the Girgaum district. It is intended primarily for qualified Nurses but also for Teachers and others. Girls of any religion will be admitted but all must give satisfactory proof of good character before admission.

It is proposed to make the Hostel self-supporting as soon as possible, but funds will be needed to start and equip the building. We are therefore asking Rs. 16,000 to cover the cost of furnishing and guarantee the rent and a Matron's salary for two years.

The consciousness for the need of the proposed Hostel grew out of a Club started two years ago for Indian Hospital Nurses. Contact with the Nurses revealed to the Committee in charge the crying need for some safe place for private nurses to live while carrying on their profession in Bombay.

There is also a considerable demand for accommodation from girls who are earning their living in other capacities. We wish to provide a safe and happy Home for all such girls and in order to secure it we appeal to the public to help us. Donations may either be sent in a lump sum at once or promises of a certain sum bi-annually for two years will be received.

Subscriptions may be sent to Lady Tata, Hon. Treasurer, or to Dilshad Begum, Nawab Mirza Mrs. Jehangir Petit Miss Wingate, Secretary Y. W. O. A.

JANMASHTAMI REFLECTIONS.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer,

Sir,

In his article 'Janmashtami Reflections' your contributor remarks "it must be obvious that the 'Eroticism' of Krishna's youth is merely the exuberance of the poetic chroniclers."

He seems to forget that Krishna has been accused of other things viz., lies, deceit, theft and murder. Are these peccadilloes "the exuberance of the poetic chronicler's" too?

There is no need to suggest, as your contributor does, that the denunciation of Krishna is the work of Christian (and presumably, therefore, prejudiced) missionaries. Three hundred years and more before Christ, Plato wrote the unanswerable truth. Can you find room for a rather long quotation?

Socrates and Adeimantus are discussing the education of the young for citizenship "The first thing will be to establish a censorship of the writers of fiction, and let the censors receive any tale of fiction which is good, and reject the bad; and we will desire mothers and nurses to tell their children the authorised ones only. Let them fashion the mind with such tales, even more fondly than they mould the body with their hands, but most of those which are now in use must be discarded." "Of what tales are you speaking?" he said. "You may find a model of the lesser in the greater," I said; "for they are necessarily of the same type, and there is the same spirit in both of them."

"Very likely," he replied; "but I do not as yet know what you would term the greater." "Those," I said, "which are narrated by Homer and Hesiod, and rest of the poets, who have ever been the great story-tellers of mankind." "But which stories do you mean," he said, "and what fault do you find with them?" "A fault which is most serious," I said; "the fault of telling a lie, and, what is more, a bad lie." "But when is this fault committed?" "Whenever an erroneous representation is made of the nature of gods and heroes,—as when a painter paints a portrait not having the shadow of a likeness to the original." "Why yes," said he, "those stories are extremely objectionable."

"Yes, Adeimantus, they are stories not to be repeated in our State; the young man should not be told that in committing the worst of crimes he is far from doing anything outrageous, and that even if he chastises his father when he does wrong, in whatever manner, he will only be following the example of the first and greatest among the gods." "I entirely agree with you," he said; "in my opinion those stories are quite unfit to be repeated." "Neither, if we mean our future guardians to regard the habit of quarrelling among themselves as of all things the basest, should any word be said to them of the wars in heaven, and of the plots and fightings of the gods against one another, for they are not true. No, we shall never mention the battles of the giants, or let them be embroidered on garments, and we shall be silent about the innumerable other quarrels of gods and heroes with their friends and relatives. If they would only believe us we would tell them that quarrelling is unholy, and that never up to this time has there been any quarrel between citizens; this is what old men and old women should begin by telling children, and when they grow up, the poets also should be told to compose for them in a similar spirit. But the narrative of Hephaestus binding Hera his mother, or how on another occasion Zeus sent him flying for taking her part when she was being beaten and all the battles of the gods in Homer—these tales must not be admitted into our State, whether they are supposed to have an allegorical meaning or not. For a young person cannot judge what is allegorical and what is literal; anything that he receives into his mind at that age is likely to become indelible and unalterable; and therefore it is most important that the tales which the young first hear should be models of virtuous thoughts." "There you are right" he replied "but if any one asks where are such models to be found and of what tales are you speaking—how shall we answer him?" I said to him, "You and I, Adeimantus at this moment are not poets, but founders of a State: now the founders of a State ought to know the general forms in which poets should cast their tales and the limits which must be observed by them, but to make the tales is not their business." (Plato Republic pp. 377 ff. to Trott.)

Yours sincerely,

KINGSLY WILLIAMS.

SRI KRISHNA AND THE BRAHMA SAMAJ.

The World and New Dispensation, the weekly English organ of the Keshub section of the Brahma Samaj, in the course of an article on the Bhadratsav, observes: "But the most significant thing has been the celebration in connection with Srikrishna,—the Janmastami festival. Devout souls, here and there, in the community have, now and then, spoken or written on the beauty and richness of this great spirit, but this is the first time that we met together in communal worship to meditate on the life and teachings of Srikrishna. Yet it cannot be said that the genius of the New Dispensation left out of account the life and character of one who have entered into the very bone and marrow of Indian life. For it was Upadhyaya Gour Govinda Roy who, in his masterly treatise in Bengali, Srikrishner Feevan O Dharma, has left for us all a new and living interpretation of the character and spirituality of this ancient Prophet of Harmony. We hope to be able, in a later issue, to translate for our readers the Foreword to this inspiring volume, giving an account of how Keshub by holding before the Upadhyaya the true Krishna overcame his prejudice and turned him into a devout lover of this singer of the Song Celestial Krishna as the singer celestial—the ravisher of hearts, Krishna as the yogacharya of Hindusthan comes in Keshub's yogi-life. Keshub felt the same difficulty and hesitation in speaking about his Srikrishna as he did about his revolutionary vision of the Nava-durgar Navasatanana. And the devout and critical student of Keshub must learn to understand Keshub's reserves and silences as well as his recorded utterances."

A ROMAN CATHOLIC CRITICISM.

The Indian Social Reformer of the 24th instant in the course of a quarrel with the Amrita Bazar Patrika on the position of Indian woman insinuates that woman in Italy is not very highly regarded. And for proof it goes to the report of a certain Col. Snow of the United States Medical service published in the Social Hygiene Bulletin of New York. "Italy" according to this gentleman "is the only one of the larger allies that allowed troops in the front areas to have access to prostitution." In the first place we are not sure of the facts. The Protestant societies that found opportunity for work during the war in Catholic countries have been on the alert to make a case for themselves. We remember at the beginning of the war being shown a confidential letter from a Protestant organisation which contained a foul aspersion on the girls of France who, it appears, were burning to be the mistresses of Indian troops and that this particular organization was the only sure barrier between the vampires of France and their innocent prey from India. If you can't get grit for your mill, you must make it. And even if what Col. Snow says is true, what a conclusion for the Indian Social Reformer to draw upon the womanhood of Italy! It only shows that Italy like most Latin nations wears its sins on its sleeves for every Protestant pharisee to peck it. It surely does not imply that the virtuous Protestant armies kept these camp followers at arm's length. The only difference is they did it cleverly and were not found out—which is the deadly sin of Anglo-Saxon morality. The Indian Social Reformer has been brought up in the Protestant Tradition and has succumbed to it on this as on other occasions.—The Standard, (Madras).

MR. GANDHI'S RELIGION.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

In reference to the interesting reading published some time back in your useful journal regarding Mr. Gandhi's views on Mr. Patel's Bill, may I beg leave to place before some of your readers Mr. Gandhi's religious views as gauged by a Christian friend of his.

"I question whether any system of religion can absolutely hold him. His views are too closely allied to Christianity to be entirely Hindu; and too deeply saturated with Hinduism to be called Christian, and his sympathies are so wide and catholic, that one would imagine 'he has reached a point whose formulae of sects are meaningless.'"

"To him, Jesus Christ is a bright revelation of God; but he cannot set him on a Solitary throne, because he believes God has been incarnate again and again. To him, religion is an intensely practical thing. It underlies all action: Politics, morals, Commerce, all that has to do with conscience must be religion."

"I question whether any religious creed would be large enough to express his views, or any Church system ample enough to shut him in. Jew and Christian, Hindu, Mahomedan, Parsi, Buddhist, and Confucian, all have their places in his heart, as children of the same Father. 'I am not a Theosophist. There is much in Theosophy that attracts me, but I have never been able to subscribe to the creed of Theosophists.'"

"That divine love which mocks at boundaries of creed, and limits of race or colour.....is Mr. Gandhi's ideal."

I think it is this truly Christian catholicity of his mind that explains his attitude towards the Depressed Classes, notwithstanding his firm belief in Varnashrama-Dharma. But you were quite right in saying that it was dangerous to use a time-beaten word like Varnashrama-Dharma, as did Mr. Gandhi, in a peculiar way. That Varnashrama-Dharma which touches the so-called "untouchables" with divine love, cannot reasonably be expected to oppose Mr. Patel's Bill. But one who does not believe in the untouchability of any human being will surely come round and help a measure intended to break the bonds of individual selfhood in society.

Godhra.

12-8-19,

Yours faithfully,

S. A. DAVE.

"M. K. Gandhi," by J. J. Dake, (Natesan & Co.), Chap. XXI.

ADVERTISEMENTS

DO YOU WISH TO KNOW YOUR "FUTURE" ?

Send your time and date of birth or your star and age or note the time when you write the letter, you will be given a full reading of your life or one year to come for ONE RUPEE ONLY.

Mr. Gharanfar Mahammad Khan, Deputy Collector, writes from Moradabad City. "The one year life reading you sent me proved to be QUITE TRUE."

THE KALINGA ASTROLOGICAL BUREAU,
Chodavaram, Vindagapatam District.

WANTED—An English educated bride between 16 and 24, belonging to a very rich Hindu or Parsee family, to marry a young Hindu of 24, with high educational qualifications and industrial and executive talents and of an affluent family. Correspondence confidential. Apply BASSI, The Indian Social Reformer, Bombay.

WANTED—A suitable match to marry a middle class gentlemen under Act XIV of 1856 or Act III of 1872. Age about 35. Holding a decent position with good future prospects. One knowing Tamil, Telugu, Gujarathi or English preferred—Apply T. 59 C/o Postmaster, Gangapur City (Jaipur District).

Wanted :—An accomplished and educated widow of any Caste to marry a Brahmin widower in decent position. For other particulars please apply to X C/o The Indian Social Reformer, Bombay.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postage

In advance. In arrears.

Per annum..... Rs. 5-0-0. Rs. 6-0-0.

Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, eight shillings (Rs. 6).

Single copies of the current year can be had at 4 annas each and any back copies at 6 annas each.

Timely advice to the Wealthy

Costly but certain remedies are in the long run cheaper than cheap and uncertain ones.

KANDARPA SANJIVINI PILLS AND OIL

are the safest and surest remedies for indigestion constipation, loss of appetite, memory, mental, physical and nervous debility and all sorts of urinary disorders, improve impoverished blood.

Price per tin of 40 Pills Rs. 5 & per tola of Oil Rs. 10

Both Purchased at a time Rs. 11/4—

Medical Advice and a Medical Book containing 128 pages sent Gratis and Post Free.

RAJ VAIDYA NARAYANJI KESHAVJI

Head Office :-Jamnagar, Kathiawar, (India.)

Branch :-No. 187, Kalbadevi Road,

24-8-1919.

BOMBAY.

Empire Hindu Hotel

Opposite Victoria Terminus
Bombay.

(Central Situation)

Strictly Vegetarian

Charges Moderate

Fitted with

Elevator Lift, Fans and Lights.

TELEGRAMS:

TELEPHONE :

"FOOD," BOMBAY.

2789.

22-6-19.

Saffron? Saffron?? Saffron???

If you wish to buy genuinely pure and best Saffron it is

SUN

BRAND

SAFFRON

ONLY

It has been largely used by Jain Temples, Maharajas Durbars, Hakims and Vaidyas all over the country for the last 75 year and is well known for its purity and genuineness.

S. NARAEN & Co.,

17-2-18

21, Hummam Street, Fort Bombay.

SHORTHAND.

Like Other Arts and Sciences, Shorthand is subject to the Law of Progress. Based on greatly improved scientific and analogical principles, the Sloan-Duployan system (contained in a compass of 12 lessons) saves a year's laborious study, ensuring highest efficiency and speediest results. Shorthand is the open-door to many well-paid positions, at any rate it will mean advancement for you. Expert Individual or Postal Instructions for a fixed fee, payable in easy monthly instalments. Speed Classes Conducted. Specialised Training Guaranteed. Enclose stamp for booklet, etc.

CENTRAL CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE,
G. P. O. Box No. 424, Bombay.

"EVERYTHING FOR EVERYBODY"

National Standard Portable Typewriter No. 3 (10 lbs.) Rs. 190
Oliver No. 6 (American Rebuilt) B.S. & Tab. Rs. 175; No. 7 " 200
" " 3 (Second-hand) in thorough working order. " 125
Empire No. 1 (Do.) in good working order. " 65
Multikopy Typewriter Carbons, per Box of 100 sheets. " 8
Webster Brand " Ribbons for all machines, Doz. " 21
Typewriter Oil (best 1 oz. bot.) or Eberhard Brassers, Doz. " 6
Safety Razor, Rivals Gillette, with 6 Gillette Blades (best) " 8
Do. (Made in U.S.A.) with 3 spare blades, Set " 1
Portable Electric Battery & lamp (burns 200 hours) compl. " 30
Envelope Making Machine (to make 30,000 per day), New " 35
Full Jewelled Lever Watch (Square or Octagon) Silver " 35
Cooklin's Self filling Fountain Pen (non-leakable) Gold nib " 9

UNIVERSAL BUSINESS SYNDICATE,
20-4-19. Post Box No. 424, Bombay.

HYPNOTISM

PERSONAL MAGNETISM,
WILL POWER,
NERVE FORCE—

Call what you will—

Is the intangible power that controls human destiny. It is the key to all business and social success. This power is no special gift of any one. It is latent in every one. We help you how to display it. By our system, you can learn in a few days at your own home and not only achieve success yourself, but you can influence the mind, health and actions of others to a remarkable.

Write immediately for our free booklet—The Pride of India.

THE LATENT LIGHT CULTURE,
TINNEVELLY, S. INDIA.

Batlivala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 1 each bottle of 100.

Batlivala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 2 each bottle of 100.

Batlivala's Mixture of Fever, Malaria, In-

Batlivala's Ague Pills for Malaria, Fever, In-

Batlivala's Tonic pills for pale people & nervous breaks down.

Batlivala's Tooth Powder of Preserving Teeth

Batlivala's Ringworm ointment for Ringworm

Dhobi Itch etc.

May be had from all dealers in medicines or from

Dr. H. L. Batlivala Sons & Co., Ltd.

No. 12, Worli, 18, Bombay.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESS :—" Doctor Batlivala Dadar

THE BOMBAY CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK.

HEAD OFFICE :—Apollo Street, St., Bombay.

DIRECTORS—The Hon. Sir Fazulbhoj Currimbhoj (Chairman), Sir Vithaldas D. Thackersey, the Hon. Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas, Sir Stanley Reed, the Hon. Mr. C. V. Mehta, the Chief of Lohalkaranji, G.K. Devadhar, Esq., the Hon. Sir P. D. Pattani, the Raja Sahab of Malegaon.

Share Capital (fully paid)Rs. 7,00,000

1 Deposits fixed for one year and shorter or longer periods are accepted. Rates and other particulars may be ascertained from the under signed.

2 The Bank finances only registered Co-operative Societies in the Bombay Presidency on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency.

3. Accounts are audited half-yearly by a special Government Auditor, and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the "Bombay Government Gazette."

20-5-17. VAIKUNTH L. MEHTA, Manager.

THE TATA INDUSTRIAL BANK, LD.

HEAD OFFICE, BOMBAY.
BRANCHES—CALCUTTA and HYDERABAD (Deccan)
CAWNPORE and LUCKNOW.

Sub-Branches.—

Bombay—Share Bazaar, Shroff Bazaar,
Calcutta—Barr Bazaar.

London Agents. LLOYDS BANK LIMITED.
NEW YORK AGENTS: THE GUARANTY
TRUST COY. OF NEW YORK.

AUTHORISED CAPITAL... Rs. 12,00,00,000.
SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL..... " 7,56,00,225.
PAID UP CAPITAL..... " 1,50,99,225.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Sir D. J. Tata, Kt., Chairman.
Sir Sassoon David, Bart.
Sir R. N. Mookerjee, K. C. I. E.
Sir Francis Stewart, Kt.
Sir Henry Proctor, Kt.
R. D. Tata, Esq.
F. E. Dinshaw, Esq.
F. O. Rington, Esq.
Narottam Morarjee, Esq.
Hajee Gulam Mahomed Ajam, Esq.
The Hon'ble Mr. Parshottamdas Thakordas. C. I. E.
A. J. Bilimoria, Esq.

Secretary, R. H. Parker.

Current Accounts opened and interest allowed on daily credit balances from Rs. 500/- to Rs. 1,00,000/- at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum. If the balance to the credit of any account does not fall below Rs. 25,000/- at any time between 1st January and 30th June, interest will be allowed during that period at 2½ % per annum. No interest is allowed unless the sum accrued amounts to Rs. 3/- Half-yearly.

Fixed Deposits. Interest allowed on Deposits fixed for one or two years and for shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank. Interest allowed on Savings Bank Accounts at 4 per cent per annum. Rules may be obtained on application.

Loans and Cash Credits are granted on approved securities.

Purchases and sales of Securities and shares effected.

Bills of Exchange purchased and collected and every description of Banking and exchange business undertaken.

14-4-18. J. PAGAN ~~UNDEVELOPED~~ Assistant Manager.

THE YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK, LIMITED.

(Registered in Japan.)
Established 1880.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 48,000,000.
Paid up Capital.....Yen. 42,000,000.
Reserve Fund.....Yen. 23,100,000.

Head Office:—Yokohama.

Branches and Agencies at Bombay, Buenos Aires, Calcutta, Changchun, Chi-Nan, Dairen, Fengtien, Hankow, Harbin, Hongkong, Honolulu, Kaiyuan, Kobe, London, Los Angeles, Lyons, Manila, Nagasaki, Newchwang, New York, Osaka, Peking, Rangoon, San Francisco, Seattle, Shanghai, Shimonoseki, Singapore, Soerabaya, Sydney, Tientsin, Tokio, Tsingtao.

Current Deposit Accounts are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at the rate of 2 per cent per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 100,000, provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of banking and exchange business transacted.

N. IGARASHI

Post Box No. 207, Hornby Road, Bombay.

I. N. SHIMAKI

Manager, Calcutta.

1-1-17.

Post Box No. 406, Clive Street, Calcutta

THE BANK OF BARODA, LD.

Under the Patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja Gaekwar.
Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897

HEAD OFFICE BARODA.

Branches—Ahmedabad, Navsari, Meshana, and Surat

Capital Subscribed... ..Rs. 60,00,000.
Capital Paid up " 20,00,000.
Reserve Fund " 12,50,000.

DIRECTORS :

The Hon'ble Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas, C. I. E., Chairman
Sir Vithaldas Damodar Thackersey, Kt.
Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti Nagar Sheth, Baroda.

Sheth Manilal Revadas, Vadnagar.
Rao Bahadur Gunajirao R. Nimbalkar, Sur Subha, Baroda State.

Bhaskerrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., Advocate, High Court, Bombay.

M. H. Kantavalla, Esq., Agent, Maharaja Mill Co., Ld. Baroda.

R. R. Shirgaokar, Naib Subba, Baroda State.

A. N. Datar, Accountant General, Baroda State.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest which does not come to Rs. 8 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application. C. E. RANDLE,—General Manager.
15-4-12.

THE CENTRAL BANK OF INDIA, LTD

Subscribed Capital... ..Rs. 50,00,000
Paid Up Capital 25,00,000
Reserved liability of Shareholders 25,00,000
Reserve Fund 6,00,000

Head Office:—Alice Building, Bombay.

Local Branches:—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar, (3) Share Bazar.

Branches:—Amritsar, Calcutta, Delhi, Jharra, Karachi.

London Agents:—London Joint City and Midland Bank, Ld.

Current Accounts—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June
2½ % allowed on Daily Balances from July to December.

12 months Deposits received at 5 % per annum.

Long and Short period Deposits received at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking Business transacted.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA

Manager.

25-2-17

THE BANK OF TAIWAN, LTD.

Incorporated by Special Charter of the Imperial Japanese Government, 1899.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 30,000,000
Paid-up CapitalYen. 22,500,000
Reserve FundYen. 5,680,000

Head Office:—Taipeh, Formosa.

BRANCHES:—

LONDON	SHANGHAI	TOKIO
NEW YORK	HONGKONG	OSAKA
AMOY	SINGAPORE	KOBE
CANTON	SOERABAJA	YOKOHAMA
FOOCHOW	SEMARANG	AKO
HANKOW	MAKUNG	GIRAN
KIUKIANG	BATAVIA	KAGI
SWATOW	PINAN	KARENKO
TAINAN	SHINCHIKU	KEELUNG
TAKOW	TAICHU	TAMSUI

The Bank has also a large number of Correspondents at Home and Abroad.

Current Deposit Accounts:—are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at 2 per cent. per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 1,00,000 provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of Banking and Exchange business transacted.

K. TAKEMURA
Manager

9-12-17. 56, Esplanade Road, Fort, BOMBAY

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

Established 7th September 1906.

Incorporated under the Indian Companies' Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE:

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.

Capital Subscribed Ra. 1,00,00,000

Capital Called up " 50,00,000

Reserve Fund " 10,00,000

CURRENT ACCOUNTS.

Interest on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½% p. a. throughout the year. On sums exceeding Rs. 1,00,000 interest is allowed by special arrangement. No interest will be allowed which does not amount to Rs. 3 per half year.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short periods @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

"Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application".

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, & CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stocks at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

H. P. STRINGFELLOW,

15-1-11. Manager.

A Lady's Best Ornament is a Glorious Head of Hair.

A profusion of rich, soft silky, lustrous, wavy hair—where's the woman who would not like that!

There's only one oil that makes such hair and it's the far-famed

KAMINIA OIL
(Regd.)

Invaluable for ladies, and just as much for Brain-Workers and Students.

Heated head cooled, aching disappears and dandruff becomes a thing of the past. Added to all these it possesses a beautiful fragrant smell.

For superiority, awarded a Gold Medal at the Mysore Exhibition, and in great demand all over the country.

If you have not yet used KAMINIA OIL, you

have missed a fine delight and a real boon; use it now, if only once; and like many people you will prefer to use also always

Price per bottle, Re. 1. V. P. Charges 6 annas extra

Price for 3 bottles Re. 2-10. V. P. charges 14 annas extra

Write now, Do not delay.

Sole Agents:—

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,
(5-3-16) No. 155, Jamma Masjid Market, BOMBAY.

Now-a-Days.

All things have advanced in price. Even the vegetable ingredients used in our Atank Nigrah pills have advanced in price.

Even the labourers' demand heavy wages being dearer. Even the users have increased yet the Atank Nigrah Pills for Toning up the system are sold at before war price i. e. at a Rupee.

Valdya Shastri

Manishanker Govindji,

Atank Nigrah Pharmacy,

Head Office:—Jamnagar—Kathiawar.

Branch:—Kalbadevi Road, Bombay.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours, Publish Fine Art Pictures, & c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.
1-12-10. HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS.

ROYAL PINK PILLS

A powerful Nutritive and Strength Restorer. Price Rs. 1-4 per bottle of 30 Pills.

PREPARED BY—G. J. VINDICE DAMODER & Co.,

Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Commission Agents.
1-12-10. No. 3 Salar Chawl Market, BOMBAY.

Clean
 Wholesome
 Intelligent
 Entertainment
 IS A GREAT STEP

IN

SOCIAL REFORM.

When deciding on a

PLACE OF AMUSEMENT TWO ESTABLISHMENTS

Should at once leap to the mind,

THE EXCELSIOR

BOMBAY'S PREMIER MODERN THEATRE

AND

THE EMPIRE

BOMBAY'S MOST PALATIAL
 PICTURE THEATRE

Where Film Plays of Distinction are shown
 Every Week.

A

Great Cinema Masterpiece

is shown,

Both theatres are near the Bori Bunder

and are run by the

EXCELSIOR SYNDICATE.

The Pioneer of Bombay's

AMUSEMENT WORLD.

FURUKAWA & CO.

TOKIO

The Largest Manufacturers
in the East

OF

ELECTRIC BARE COPPER CONDUCTORS,
ELECTRIC UNDERGROUND CABLES,
ELECTRIC INSULATED WIRES,
ELECTRIC ACCESSORIES,
INGOTS, RODS, WIRES,
SHEETS, TUBES,
Etc., Etc.,

SOLE AGENTS IN INDIA AND BURMA.

TATA, SONS & CO.,
BOMBAY & CALCUTTA.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS Ltd.

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.
Narsari Building, Fort, BOMBAY.

Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

11-8-17.

When YOUR EYES

need to be examined by QUALIFIED OCULISTS and by SCIENTIFIC REFRACTIONISTS of 26 year experience, FREE OF CHARGE, you cannot do better than GO TO

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR & CO.

The leading firm of Oculists, Eyesight Specialists, Manufacturing Opticians and suppliers of the patented

"KRYPTOK"

(Invisible one-piece bifocal lens.)

Toric, and all kinds of lenses,—Cylindrical, Spherical, Cylindrical, Prismatic, &c., from pebbles as well as from best quality crown glass.

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR

Eyesight Specialist,

With 26 Years' Practical Experience.

Holds Exceptional Testimonials from H. H. The Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, the Hon'ble Sir Lawrence Jenkins the Hon. Mr. Justice Batty, Mrs. Batty, the Hon. Sir N. S. Chandavarkar, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beaman, the Hon'ble Sir S. L. Batchelor, the Hon'ble Sir John Heaton Mr. H. G. Hall, M. V. O., Col. R. H. Forman, B. A. M. C., P. M. O. B. Brigade, Lieut. Col. G. H. Bull, M. D., I. M. S., Lieut. Colonel Peters M. B., I. M. S., and other high personages.

(7) 379, HORNBY ROW,

Opposite the Government Telegraph Office,
62-11-10. Fort, BOMBAY.

INTENDING ASSUREES ARE INVITED TO COMPARE THE RATES AND CONDITIONS OF

The Empire of India Life Assurance Company, Limited.

WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.

Head Office II Elphinstone Circle, BOMBAY.

SEE REPORT AND OPINIONS OF THE PRESS AS TO THE REMARKABLE PROGRESS MADE BY THE COMPANY.

ENDOWMENT NON-FORFEITABLE POLICY FOR RS. 3,000.

PAYABLE AT AGE 60 OR DEATH, IF PREVIOUS, WITH PROFIT.

If, at any time, the assured under this plan should desire to pay any more premiums, he can obtain a paid-up Policy for such a proportion of the original sum assured as the number of years paid bears to the number agreed upon. Thus a gentleman who had assured at age 30 for a Policy of Rs. 3,000 payable at age 60, and paid bears to the number agreed upon payments, would be entitled to a Free paid-up Policy for Rs. 500 free of future payments.

SOME OF THE DISTINCTIVE FEATURES.

MONTHLY PREMIUM.

AT AGE 20, Rs. 6-9-0.

AT AGE 25, Rs. 7-8-0.

AT AGE 30, Rs. 8-14-0.

AT AGE 35, Rs. 10-18-0.

AT AGE 40, Rs. 13-12-0.

AT AGE 45, Rs. 18-10-0

* Funds invested in Government Securities and in accordance with the Indian Trusts Act
Policy holders can appoint their own Directors.
90 per cent. of Profits to Participating Policy holders.
Lapsed policies revived without Medical Certificate.
Liberal Surrender Values 40 per cent. of the Tabular premium paid.
Immediate payment of Claims.
Medical fees and stamps on Policies are payable by the Company.
The sum assured is PAYABLE IN FULL should death occur even immediately after payment of the first premium.

GUARANTEED INSURANCE.—This Company issues Guaranteed Policies in situation of trust and responsibility, specially authorized to guarantee the employes of the Post Office

Personel Forms and full Particulars may be obtained from any local Agent in India or from ALLUM, BHARUCHA & CO. Managers.
22-9-10.

IN INDIA

EVERY ONE KNOWS, whom it does concern that we are foremost in supplying the best COSSI SILK SUIT PIECES

suitable for the season. These pieces are strong, fancy and durable, and have been specially manufactured for India's Market. Each piece guaranteed for One Suit Complete.

Price Rs. 10 per piece.

Write to—THE BHARGAVA COMMERCIAL SOCIETY,
2-18, Benares City.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER. Contract Rates for Advertisements.

Number of insertions.	1		2		3		4		5
	inch.	(inches.	Column.	Column.	Column.	Column.	Page.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.
13	11	0	16	0	20	0	30	0	50	0	87	0
26	16	0	25	0	30	0	50	0	87	0	155	0
52	25	0	38	0	50	0	87	0	155	0	300	0

Casual advertisements at Rs. 4 per line for the 1st insertion and Rs. 2 per line for succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

WONDERFUL TONIC AND MOUTH-REFRESHER
JINTAN.

This is a safe and efficient remedy in all kinds of diseases or disturbances of the digestive organs. It is composed entirely of VEGETABLE INGREDIENTS made from the prescription of the following eminent medical men viz:—
NORIHURO MIWA, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy,
ZENJIRO INOUE, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy
 and testified as to its efficacy by
Baron J. MATSUMOTO, M. D., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Army.
T. MITAMURA Esq., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Navy.

As a digestive it is unequalled and will not disturb the functions of the most delicate stomach. Its antiseptic properties render it very efficacious in warding off disease and at the same time it imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath of the user.

By virtue of its aroma, it effectually makes the odour of Tobacco and Alcoholic Spirits.

It acts beneficially on the vocal cords and has found much favour with public speakers, actors, singers and those whose vocation necessitates a severe strain on the throat.

GOOD FOR

Billiousness, Headache, Vertigo, Nausea, Indigestion, Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, etc., etc.

To maintain general health 2 to 3 pills may be taken occasionally, well masticated.

Price—20 Pills Packet Rs. 0-1-0. 90 Pills Packet, with Tin case., Rs. 0-4-0. 380 pills Packet with fancy case., Rs. 1-0-0

Prepared by Messrs. MORISHITA Co., OSAKA, JAPAN.

Sole Agents: Jintan Agency (G. R. Chaubal), Juma Masjid, BOMBAY.

At each opening 2 pills come here automatically!

FOR PAINS
 AND ACHES
 SPRAINS ETC.
 USE:—

AMRUTANJAN.

The magical pain balm extant, Cures all aches & pains Costs 8 As. Sold everywhere.

By Appointment to H. E. the Governor
 Sir George Sydenham Clarke of
 Bombay.

HARIDAS VALJI,
 (KING OF INDIAN CONFECTIONERS),
 Highest Confectioner, Caterer and Grand
 Military Contractor.

Proprietor—RATINATH,
 Chitra Bazar & Grant Road,
BOMBAY.

20-4-19.

DENTISTRY.

Extractions Painless;
 Terms Very Moderate;
 Gold Crown, Bar and
 Bridge Work a Speciality
 (teeth without plate);
 Latest Successful Treatment
 for Pyorrhoea (pus in gums).
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

Hours: 8-1-30 & 5-7-30: Daily.
 (Sundays—From 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.)

ADROOS BUILDING,
 NEW CHARNI ROAD,
 GINGAON, BOMBAY.

1-6-19.

K. R. AMAT,
 Surgeon-Dentist.

THE INDIAN * SOCIAL * REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY MORNING.

Office:—EMPIRE BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD, FORT.

Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

Vol. XXX BOMBAY—SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1919. No. 2.

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard."
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

An Insidious Allegation.	Neo-Hinduism.
Wednesday Wit and Fun.	Calcutta University Commission Report IV.
The Punjab Inquiry Committee.	The Indemnity Bill.
Brahmins and the Depressed Classes.	Dr. Bhandarkar's Religious Writings and Sermons.
A Misleading Reference.	The Late Dr. T. M. Nair.
Mr. N. M. Joshi.	A Bengali-Nair Marriage.
The Health of Bombay.	Indian Women and the Vote.
When was it.	The Bombay Presidency Social Reform Association.
The Kamgar Hitwardhak Sabha.

NOTES.

An Insidious Allegation: Speaking at a public meeting held under the auspices of the Bombay Representative Council of Missions, the Rev. Dr. Mackichan is reported to have said that "though peace has brought with it many difficult problems, one of them being an anti-Christian spirit in much of India's political life, yet this temporary phase will certainly give place to a deep and permanent consciousness of the fact that only Christ can meet India's need and give it the sense of being right with God." We are for the present concerned with the first and insidious part of this statement. Is it true that the declaration of peace has brought, among other things, an anti-Christian spirit in much of India's political life? We do not know what Dr. Mackichan's grounds are for his opinion, but we certainly see no evidence of it. Mrs. Besant who is rightly or wrongly regarded as an anti-Christian influence by many Christian missionaries, has practically ceased to be a force in Indian politics since the Delhi Congress last December. During the troubles consequent on the passing of the Rowlatt Act, the outstanding figure was Mr. Gandhi who seeks to carry out to the letter Christ's injunction of non-resistance. We may call attention to a significant sentence in the Civil and Military Gazette's account of the trouble at Gujranwala in April last, which shows that, while there unfortunately was a certain amount of race antagonism, there was none whatever as regards religion. The American missionaries at Gujranwala were warned by converts to leave hastily and were told "that Indians, whatever their religion, would not be in danger". Some leading figures in the public life of India at the present day are Sir Narayan Chandavarkar, whom the Hindu Missionary often chides for extolling the Bible, Mr. Andrews, a true follower of the Cross, if ever one was, Sir Rabindra Nath Tagore whose writings, notwithstanding his somewhat astounding denial in America, bear the impress of the Christ-touch.

Turning to the politicians, pure and simple, we fail to see any antagonism to Christianity. A difference there is, of course, between the teachings of Christ and Christianity. We confidently say that at no time was the influence of Christ's teachings more real and wide-spread in India than it is today. One of the most powerful Hindu religious reformers of recent years was the late Swami Vivekananda. He had a profound reverence for Christ, and so had his Master, Ramkrishna Paramahansa. Pandit Sivanath Sastry in his book, "Men I have seen", which we noticed not long ago, relates that a Christian preacher who was the Pandit's friend once accompanied him on a visit to Ramkrishna. When he introduced his friend to the Paramahansa, Ramkrishna bowed his head to the ground and said, "I bow again and again at the feet of Jesus." The Christian gentleman asked: "How is it, Sir, that you bow at the feet of Christ; What do you think of him?" Ramkrishna replied: "Why, I look upon him as an incarnation of God—an incarnation like our Rama or Krishna. Don't you know there is a passage in the Bhagwat where it is said that the incarnations of Vishnu or the Supreme Being are innumerable?" That represents the attitude of India to Christ. Indian politics is not anti-Christian if by Christian is meant Christ-like. Perhaps, Dr. Mackichan refers to Mr. Srinivasa Sastry's agitation about a conscience clause in the educational grant-in-aid codes. Surely, it does not imply any antagonism to Christianity. If anything, it is in the true spirit of Christ who would not have things that are of God mixed up with those that are Caesar's. Mr. Gladstone disestablished the Irish Church, yet the Church of England had no more faithful and devout son. Moreover, Mr. Sastry's pamphlet was published long before the conclusion of peace.

Wednesday Wit and Fun: The Wednesday Review, published at Trichinopoly, is strongly opposed to the scheme of constitutional reform now before the Joint Committee of Parliament. That is quite intelligible but, we cannot understand its embittered and even contemptuous references to Mr. Montagu personally. While there are Indians who differ on several aspects of the reform scheme, we rather think that the Wednesday Review, with Justice, are about the only Indian-edited journals which indulge in such references to Mr. Montagu. It is necessary to state this because we think it extremely unfair to the Indian public to allow the impression to go forth that its attitude to Mr. Montagu personally is anything but one of high respect for his intentions and character. However that may be, we must emphatically protest against the Wednesday's comments on Mrs. Sarojini Naidu's evidence before the Joint Committee. The Trichinopoly journal begins by saying that her evidence is a fair sample of the funny things said about India for the edification of the Committee. It continues:

We are told that she appeared as the representative of Indian women who desire enfranchisement. Indian women who may wish to go to the polls and who have confided their desire to Mrs. Sarojini Naidu, may amount to a dozen all told. The question is not whether Indian women should be given the vote or not. To tell the Committee solemnly that there are women here who desire the vote and they have sent a representative to lay their case before the Committee, is sheer camouflage. It is news to those who are here, whatever it may be to those living six thousand miles off. Mr. Montagu loomed on the Indian horizon and by July 1911, he launched out his scheme of reform and in 1919 Mrs. Sarojini Naidu tells a Parliamentary Committee that her sisters have so far advanced in education as to demand the vote. This is too quick even for the Montagu pace. Lord Selborne seems to have been gushingly chivalrous and spoke of Mrs. Naidu's memorandum of evidence as illuminating our prosaic literature with a poetic touch. The Committee might have had a brass band in attendance when she was giving evidence so that there could have been a musical touch as well. That would have made a fit setting to the evidence of the kind tendered by Mrs. Sarojini Naidu.

The Wednesday Review does not know what it is writing about when it says that Mrs. Naidu represents at most a dozen women. She represents a far larger number of India's men and women than our contemporary does when it indulges in such a farrago of bad sense and worse taste as the above. India is grateful to Lord Selborne and the Joint Committee for the great courtesy and consideration shown to her womanhood in the person of this gifted representative of theirs, who appeared before them. The impertinent remarks of the Wednesday about Lord Selborne's gushing chivalry and the brass band, gives point to Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru's remark about the lack of culture of some educated Indians.

The Punjab Inquiry Committee: Mr. Gandhi writing in Young India deprecates criticism of the constitution and personnel of the Punjab Enquiry Committee. He says:

In my humble opinion a Commission appointed from Delhi can be just as effective as a Royal Commission. And Royal Commissions have been known in our own times to have been perfectly abortive. In a case, however, like that of the Punjab an inquiry is the necessary sequel. We need not therefore complain of the inquiry not being a Royal Commission, but we have every right to examine its personnel and though Lord Hunter does not enjoy a world-wide reputation it need not be doubted that he has a reputation to lose. After all he must be pre-eminently Mr. Montagu's choice and I would hesitate to distrust his choice or his intentions, even though he has quite unjustly and unwarrantedly put in an energetic defence of some of the measures adopted or approved by the Government of India. Nor may one cavil at the appointment of the other members.

We quite agree with Mr. Gandhi that carping criticism of the machinery of an enquiry is undesirable. But sometimes, as in the case of the Solomon Commission before which Indians in South Africa under Mr. Gandhi's advice refused to appear and state their case, it becomes the duty of publicists to indicate beforehand the measure of public confidence which the conclusions of a particular Committee of Enquiry are likely to command. This is a duty as much to Government as to the public. We cannot sit quiet now and seem to accept the personnel as satisfactory, and then when the Report is out, cavil at it. This was the mistake made in the case of the Rowlatt Committee with disastrous consequences to the country. Mr. Justice Rowlatt, by the way, was also a nominee of Mr. Montagu. We have great confidence in Mr. Montagu, which we have expressed in another context to-day, but we must remember that as Secretary of State he cannot always give free play to his own individual judgment—his plea for the Rowlatt Act is, perhaps, in point—and that the British system of Government rests on the assumption that those who suffer or expect to suffer will represent in time their suffering or fears to those in authority. Royal Commissions have, no doubt, often proved abortive for the purpose for which they were constituted, but they have always been useful in the sense that they did their work of exploration thoroughly and impartially, and let in light in many places which had thereto remained hid from the public eye. This, after all, is the main purpose of most public enquiries—to avoid mistakes in the future rather than to remedy those which are past and are, as in this case, mostly irremediable. Much of the material which Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji so effectively utilised was gathered by digging into the reports of Royal Commissions. A Committee reporting to the Government of India has obvious limitations. And, it is especially unsuitable in this case, because as Mr. Gandhi himself suggests in another part of the article. His Excellency the Viceroy "stands in the same box as the Punjab Government to be judged by the Commission" inasmuch as he of his own showing gave the Punjab Government a blank card. The report of a Royal Commission is, as a rule, published unedited; there does not seem to be such a rule as regards Enquiry Committees.

Brahmans and the Depressed Classes. In May last, the Rev. John A. Sharrock read a paper before the East India Association, London, on "Caste as a factor in Indian Reform." Mr. Sharrock's views were of the crudest and most unqualified sort, and Sir J. D. Rees, who presided, pricked some of his elaborate bubbles both before and after the reading of his paper. We should add, however, that Sir J. D. Rees is quite as much an extremist on the one side as Mr. Sharrock, on the other. The truth about caste as a social institution and as a factor in reform, lies midway between the Rees and Sharrock points, Mr. N. M. Samarth was one of the speakers in the discussion which ensued on Mr. Sharrock's paper. In the course of his remarks, Mr. Samarth urged that, whatever amount of truth there might be in Mr. Sharrock's remarks as regards Madras, they did not hold in Bombay where Brahmans were working among the depressed classes. We highly appreciate his reference in particular to Mr. Sohoni's work in Parel. They are so just and well-deserved that we should quote them, "Had he (Mr. Sharrock) lived in Bombay" said Mr. Samarth, "he would have found an institution there connected with the depressed classes—a hostel and a school, where the boys and girls of the depressed classes had board, lodging, and primary education given to them—and he would have found there a young Mahratta Brahman with his wife and children living at that institution, mixing with the boys and girls of the depressed classes, treating them as children of the one common God of humanity and devoting his energies to the noble task of uplifting them from darkness unto light. He would have found, further, that the children of that Brahman gentleman were not sent to some other schools but were receiving their education along with the children of the depressed classes in the same institution. He would have found also several night-schools for the depressed classes conducted by Brahman teachers at Bombay. None of them was outcasted. They are enjoying the same privileges in the Brahman community as they would have enjoyed had they never touched what have been called the untouchable classes." This is as creditable to the Brahman community as to Mr. Sohoni and his co-workers, and we are glad that Mr. Samarth took the opportunity of mentioning it prominently in his speech.

A Misleading Reference: There was another passage in Mr. Samarth's speech, however, which, we think, was likely to have been misunderstood. We take the following from the report in the Journal of the Association. "The speaker (Mr. Samarth) was not a Brahman. He had for sometime the privilege and honour of being the elected representative of the Bombay University on the Bombay Legislative Council. At the election at which he headed the poll he was opposed by a rival candidate, who was a high caste Brahman, Mr. K. Natarajan. And yet the bulk of the Brahman vote of that constituency was cast in favour of the speaker." Mr. Samarth's triumph was thoroughly well-deserved. But his words quoted above might suggest that the defeated candidate had endeavoured to advance his candidature by pleading his caste. We are sure that Mr. Samarth did not in the least intend to suggest it. We need hardly say that neither in that election nor in the next in which Mr. Samarth was succeeded by Principal Paranjpye, was any attempt made to influence the judgment of the voters on the plea of caste.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: Government could not have made a better choice than Mr. Joshi to represent India at the International Labour Convention at Washington. Mr. Joshi is the life and soul of the Social Service League, and has an intimate knowledge of the needs and grievances of the labouring population. We are sure that his presence at Washington will materially help the cause of the Indian workman. We wish Mr. Joshi a happy voyage and early return. His experiences in Europe and America are sure to be of great use in his work in connection with the Social Service League.

The Health of Bombay: A valued medical friend sends this note of warning, which, we trust, will meet with a ready response. "In spite of the good rains we have had," he writes, "illness of an epidemic character seems to be on the increase. And there are whole families down. Some say it is influenza, others, malaria, still others that it is a mixture of both. Is it not time for the different volunteer institutions which did excellent work in the last epidemic to move without further delay?"

When was it? A contributor to the Hindu Message, published at Srirangam, says: "The Indian Social Reformer observed recently that it was a matter for congratulation that the Theosophical Society has ceased to coquet with orthodoxy or sit on the fence but has come over and joined the reform party. Can any one explain this volte face? But when did we make the remark imputed to us?"

The Kamgar Hitwardhak Sabha: We have received a copy of a brief sketch of the work of the Kamgar Hitwardhak Sabha which was established in 1909 to promote the wellbeing and to watch the interest of the working classes in this city. This account is full of interesting and useful information regarding the habits and hardships of the people in whose special interests the Society was founded. It makes appreciative reference to the interest exhibited in the institution by the late Mr. Bhivaji Ramji Nare, the first president of the Sabha, himself a retired weaving master. Mr. Nare conducted a free night school for over 31 years, and we are glad to learn that his son has continued to keep it up after the death of his father.

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1919.

NEO-HINDUISM.

The Hon. Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar, Advocate-General of Madras and President of the Hindu Social Reform Association, delivered an interesting lecture on Neo-Hinduism on the 2nd instant at the Young Men's Indian Association of that city. Mr. Iyengar prefaced his observations with the remark that Hinduism was a living and growing religion. It was not a thing which they could discover in a set of formulæ and, therefore, it was that there were intrinsic difficulties in stating exactly what Hinduism was. Divorce of practice from precept and the fact that authoritative books on the subject were written in Sanskrit, not a spoken language of the people, were additional difficulties in the way of defining Hinduism. Nevertheless, said Mr. Iyengar, he would place before his audience a set of propositions arrived at as a result of the faith that was in him merely for the purpose of provoking the faith which was in every Hindu and which made him feel proud that he was a Hindu. The central feature of Hinduism, its root idea, was that this world was merely a stage of preparation for the world beyond. Its whole scheme of life here was framed in view of the life hereafter. Hinduism in common with other great religions upheld the ideals of sacrifice and self-surrender. It laid more emphasis than other religions on the idea of God in man. It inculcated an idealistic attitude of mind and laid great store by the quality of reverence. The distinctive features of Hinduism, in the opinion of Mr. Iyengar, was the Vedantic interpretation of the Universe, and the doctrines of Karma and Samsara which, he said, were imperishable possessions with them. He supposed that it was due to these that "taking things as a whole, the average Hindu was happier than the average citizen of the world elsewhere and to the extent to which the Hindu fell below that average to that extent the difficulties of materialism would come in." The keystone of Neo-Hinduism was in that part of the Gita's teachings which were true and sound for all time. "There were different values attached to everyday virtues," Mr. Iyengar went on to say, "by people of different religions. Truth to the Hindu, Chastity to the Hindu, Society to the Hindu, meant a quite different thing to what it was to other people. The whole thing was bottomed in their own concept of other-worldliness."

There is a good deal of scope for difference of opinion in regard to each of the special features of Hinduism mentioned above. In fact, these differences constitute the different schools of Hindu philosophy or metaphysics such as the Sankara, Ramannja, Madhva and others. Mr. Justice T. V. Seshagiri Iyer, also a devoted Hindu, who presided at the lecture, while agreeing in the main with Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar's views, indicated certain points on which "he wished to reserve an expression of his views for another occasion." But both the lecturer and the Chairman were agreed that Hinduism was emphatically not the social arrangements with which it happened to be associated at present. Said Mr. Iyengar:

Those who looked upon caste as identical with Hinduism did injustice to the fundamental basis of Hinduism, and to the extent to which Hinduism was identified with caste, to that extent Hinduism would lose its hold on the community and perish. Caste was really a social structure and had absolutely nothing to do with the religious basis of Hinduism. Belief in the supremacy of Brahmana priesthood was not an essential of Hinduism, nor were sacrifices, ceremonialism and animistic practices consistent with the higher concepts of Hindu religious thought and life.

The social, religious and economic conditions to which Hinduism was adjusted, said Mr. Justice Seshagiri Iyer, were not permanent. They came in contact with new nations and new ideas. When a new wave of discontent swept all over the world, unless they were able to adjust their ideas of religion to those environments, they would never be able to uphold their religion. He proceeded to observe,

One of the greatest achievements of the past was that their seers were Dergadarases. They were framing their laws and regulations far in advance of the times they lived in. It was because those ideas had been conceived in that far-seeing spirit that they had been so long able to make that religion felt all over the world. If they were to conserve the privileges in their possession, religion would become a reproach in this land and would not give the great good intended by its authors. They must understand the circumstances which were now pressing upon them. If they did not give a proper turn to the flood which was coming upon them they would be swept away. Neo-Hinduism ought to embrace a large variety of subjects and he would express his ideas on another occasion. The question of caste and its relation to religion, the question of marriage and the question of laws, portions of which had become impracticable and inhuman, had to be moulded according to their new ideas. Temple worship was another important matter.

These observations of two Brahman gentlemen who are proud of their religion and devoted to its interests, are a conclusive answer to the Maharaja of Darbhanga's movement confusing Hinduism with the caste system. In fact, as Sir Narayan Chandavarkar pointed out eloquently in his remarkable address at the Benares National Social Conference twelve years ago, Hinduism has in the Sanatan Dharma an enduring system of spiritual culture, on which social systems are reared to suit the changing conditions of life. The Varnashram Dharma was one such system. It was not meant to supersede the Sanatan Dharma. The idea is that men and women brought up in the eternal graces of the Sanatan Dharma may be absolutely depended on to adjust their social and domestic institutions to changing environments without their being bound down by hard and fast rules. Rules are for those who cannot rule themselves. The object of the Sanatan Dharma is to implant in the individual the qualities and the values which tell in spiritual evolution. In other words, given the right type of individual, there is no need to fix once for a the right type of society. Hinduism, then, is not a set of doctrines, but an outlook and a method. Is it impossible to convene a great gathering of representative Hindus to discuss and settle the broad lines on which the religions and social systems should be readjusted to our present environment? Mr. Iyengar's suggestive lecture should pave the way for such a conference. We do not like the word Neo-Hinduism. Plain Hinduism without any prefix would cover all the ideas set forth in the speeches of Mr. Sriivasa Iyengar and Mr. Justice Seshagiri Iyer.

CALCUTTA UNIVERSITY COMMISSION REPORT IV.

There is no vernacular in India which has developed so richly as Bengalee during the last one hundred years. Bengalee authors have produced true literature in no inconsiderable quantity. The common plea urged in other parts of the country that the vernaculars are neglected and languishing, has no application to Bengal. Bengalees have said that the fact that they were the earliest and most enthusiastic to take to English education has had a direct bearing on the development of their vernacular and its literature. However that may be, it cannot be truthfully alleged that English education has come in the way of the Bengalee language. The worst that can be said is that Bengalee has grown in spite of English education. We admit that if, on other grounds, it is concluded that vernaculars should henceforth be the principal media of instruction in High Schools, Bengalee is the one vernacular the substitution of which for English would be least open to the objections generally urged against them. But we utterly deny the truth of the main ground on which the Commission rest the case for their recommendation. That ground stripped of its euphemism is that the English-educated Indian is intellectually, morally and politically a failure. It is a strange coincidence that this view rests mainly on the authority of those who have a vested interest in resisting the political reforms for which the English-educated Indian asks. It is true that it is reinforced by the support of Indians, some of them of high authority, who have been stung into the conclusion that English education has produced a mental subservience on the part of the Indian, which aids and, indeed, rivets his political subservience. It can be easily proved that all such generalizations are untenable; that the average English-educated Indian is a better man intellectually and morally for his education, and that his education makes neither for political subservience nor for political dreaminess, but for political self-reliance. The facts which prove these things are so easily available that only interested persons or fanatics can overlook them. We submit that a system which has done so much good should not be fundamentally changed except for very much more and sounder reasons than the Commission have been able to produce. We shall show in the course of these articles that the Commission began their enquiry at the wrong end, and that the effects of that initial error pervade and vitiate some of their central recommendations. They started with the large and (as it seemed to them) unwieldy number of undergraduates in the Calcutta University and, with the impression created by the contemplation of it imprinted on their sub-conscious minds, they started their investigation of the quality of the education in the University. That impression remains throughout as the background of the Commission's recommendations. We shall return to this important point in a subsequent article.

The question of the position of English in our educational system is conditioned by the position of India as an integral part of the British Empire. If at any time India ceases to be a part of that Empire, the subject will assume a different aspect, though we believe that the hold which the English language has already acquired on our affections will not even then be materially relaxed. India's international position, whether as part of the British Empire or otherwise, has been fixed once for all as one of evolution in close sympathy with the English-speaking nations of the British and American Commonwealths. We, for one, are unable to visualise the problem of English in our educational system except with reference to what we believe to be the future destiny of India among the nations of the world. The Ram Mohun Roy-Macaulay decision, as interpreted by the action of time, is to our mind the best index of the needs of the country both as regards her present and her future. It is a decision resting not on narrow pedagogical considerations but on those broad expediencies of national necessity which must always have precedence over provincial and particularist considerations. Then again, what is the future we contemplate for India with reference to her component parts? The two great States formed in the last century out of a multitude of small States were Germany and Italy, Bismarck in Germany had to follow the principle of federation, while Cavour in Italy resisted the idea of a federated Italy in favour of his great idea of a unified Italy. The idea of a federated India has, perhaps, a larger following among us at present. But the whole past history of India protests against it. The one great lesson written in letters of fire on the pages of our political annals is that a strong central Government is the only security of progress within and against aggression from without. Whenever India had a strong imperial Government she prospered. When the central Government weakened she fell to pieces. One of the difficulties of maintaining such a Government, is the absence of a common lingua franca in the country. This omission was being rapidly supplied by Urdu and would have been completely supplied by it, had not India been drawn, for her own ultimate good, into the vortex of European politics. It is not fashionable nowadays to speak of the finger of Providence in politics or history; we speak instead of sea-power and money-power. We do not wish to quarrel over phrases but it is impossible to read history, especially Indian history, without being forcibly impressed by the presence in it of a factor incalculable by material means. We may seem to be travelling wide of the subject but the gist of it all is that, perhaps, the great mission of British rule in India is to give a common language to the country in the shape of English.

The Calcutta University Commission cannot be blamed for not having in view these larger considerations in making their recommendations. That they recognised them but felt some delicacy in expressing them freely, seems to us to be clear. They observe:

But we do not wish to prejudge the future. It is not for us to predict whether the natural desire to use Bengali to the utmost will eventually outweigh the immense advantages of being able to use a medium common not only to the educated classes throughout India, but to more peoples than any other, and giving access in effect to the literature and the scientific records of the world. We are disposed to think that the educated classes in the various provinces of India, will, like those of some other countries, both in the British dominions and elsewhere, wish to be bilingual; to use their mother tongues for those dear and intimate things which form part of life from infancy upwards, and which are the very breath and substance of poetry and of national feeling; to use English as a means of inter-communication necessary for the maintenance of the unity of India, and of touch with other countries; for the mutual interchange and stimulation of ideas in the spheres of scholarship and science; and for the promotion of that inter-provincial and inter-national commerce and industry on which the economic future of India will largely depend.

We respect the feelings which dictated these suggestions thrown out with so much hesitancy but, writing as Indians, we are at liberty to speak more plainly. The place of English in Indian education cannot be determined without reference to the future. The Indian statesman should take a longer view and a larger view than the Indian schoolmaster or professor whose vision is rightly concentrated on his class-room and the academic circle. The expert view in this as in other matters should subserve, not dominate, the larger purposes of statesmanship. There is no analogy between an English boy learning French and an Indian learning English. The English boy lives in a country where the administration is carried on in English and not in French; the language of business and politics likewise is English not French. The English boy wants French only to carry on a conversation with a Frenchman or to be able to read French books and newspapers. The Indian boy's requirements in regard to English are more numerous and important. Without English he cannot belong to any of the liberal professions; he cannot aspire to any place beyond a primary school teacher or a village official. Industrial openings are only for men who have received a good English education, often in England. In business, even Marwaris nowadays want clerks with a good knowledge of English. Many of the men who have made their mark in vernacular journalism have also been either successful conductors of English newspapers or could easily have become so if they had wanted to. They are mostly graduates, some of them distinguished graduates, of our Universities.

THE INDEMNITY BILL.

(BY SIR NARAYAN CHANDAVARKAR.)

Surprise is expressed in some quarters that Indian politicians of all shades of opinion have opposed the decision of the Government of India to introduce an Indemnity Bill in the Imperial Legislative Council at the earliest convenient moment for the purpose of indemnifying all the officers in respect of their acts in connection with the recent disturbances. Moderate politicians are once again charged with joining and placating Extremists in this opposition. The authority of the constitutional lawyer, A. V. Dicey, is cited in support of the principle and policy of the measure.

But here is what Mr. Dicey says in his book called "A Leap in the Dark":—

"Of all the laws which a Legislature can pass, an Act of Indemnity is the most likely to produce injustice. It is on the face of it the legalisation of illegality, the hope of it encourages acts of vigour, but it also encourages violations of law and of humanity. The tale of Flogging Fitzgerald in Ireland, or the history of Governor Eyre in Jamaica, is sufficient to remind us of the deeds of lawlessness and cruelty which in a period of civil conflict may be inspired by recklessness or panic and may be pardoned by the retrospective sympathy or partisanship of a terror-stricken or vindictive Legislature".

Farther on he writes:—

"An ex post facto law is the instrument which a legislature is most apt to use for punishing the unpopular use of legal rights. There is not a landlord, there is not a magistrate, there is not a constable in Ireland, who may not tremble in fear of ex post facto legislation. There is no reason, as far as the Home Rule Bill goes, why the gaoler who kept Mr. William O'Brien in prison, or the warders who attempted to pull off his breeches, should not be rendered legally liable to punishment for their offences against the unwritten law of Irish sedition. No such monstrosity of legal inequity will, it may be said, be produced. I admit this. But the very object of prohibitions" (against the passing of an ex post facto law) "is the prevention of outrageous injustice. The wise founders of the United States prohibited to Congress and to every State legislature the passing of ex post facto legislation."

The principle of an Indemnity Act is generally understood to be this: Where Government are compelled to adopt extreme measures to cope with and put down disturbances of an extraordinary character amounting to rebellion and when the ordinary law is inadequate for the purpose and martial law becomes necessary, policy and practice require the passing of an Indemnity Act to protect themselves and their officers against liability for any mistakes or excesses committed in the bona-fide exercise of their extraordinary powers. The principle of such legislation underlies, for instance, the Judicial Officers' Act which provides that Judges are absolutely protected from all liability in respect of their decisions when those decisions relate to matters within the jurisdiction of the Judge concerned, and that a Judge is also so protected in respect of decisions relating to matters outside his jurisdiction, if the decisions in such matters were passed bona fide and not from any by-motive such as malice.

That principle is regarded as applying to the officers who carry out the orders of Government in coping with lawlessness by means of martial law on the ground usually assigned that they have a moral and also legal claim to be indemnified against acts committed bona fide and not from any by-motive in the exercise of their jurisdiction under martial law. They can claim no such right in respect of acts committed perversely or recklessly, perversity and recklessness being evidence presumptive of by-motives and malice.

So much for the constitutional aspect of the question.

Now as to its application to H. E. the Viceroy's two announcements (1) that an Indemnity Bill will be introduced "at the earliest convenient moment" into the Imperial Legislative Council, and (2) that a Commission has been appointed to enquire into the causes of and the measures adopted regarding the recent disturbances.

Mr. Dicey's opinion quoted above from his booklet "A Leap in the Dark," published in 1893, examined into "the leading principles" of the Irish Home Rule Bill, officially styled "The Irish Government Act, 1893" introduced in that year in Parliament.

In Mr. Dicey's opinion, one serious defect of that Bill was that its provisions relating to the restrictions on and safeguards against the legislative power of the contemplated Irish Parliament, "contain no prohibition against the passing of an Act of Indemnity" by that Parliament. Such a prohibition was, he thought, necessary, because:—

"Circumstances no doubt may arise in Ireland, as in other countries, under which the maintenance of order or the protection of life may excuse or require deviation from the strict rules of legality. But the question whether these circumstances have arisen will always be decided far more justly by the Parliament at Westminster than it can be decided by the Parliament at Dublin. Can any one really maintain that a Parliament in which Mr. Healy, or, for that matter, Col. Saunderson might be leader, would be as fair a tribunal as a Parliament under the guidance of Mr. Gladstone or Lord Salisbury for determining whether an officer, who acting under the direction of the Irish Government and with a view to maintain order at Belfast or Dublin, should have put an agitator or conspirator to death without due trial, had or had not done his duty?"

Apply that to India, substitute "India" for Ireland, and Simla for Dublin and so on in the passage above, and it ought to follow, on Mr. Dicey's high authority as a constitutional lawyer of acknowledged repute, that not the Indian Legislature but the British Parliament ought to pass an Indemnity Act, if after having considered whether circumstances necessitating it have arisen, it concludes that they have. Whether those circumstances have arisen can be settled by Parliament, only after a Commission appointed by the Crown on its behalf has enquired and reported the results of its enquiry to the Crown for consideration by Parliament.

That is the sound constitutional principle and policy supported by the high authority of Mr. Dicey. It justifies the substantially unanimous Indian protest against (1) the appointment of the Commission of enquiry by the Government of India instead of by the Crown and (2) the introduction of an Indemnity Bill into the Imperial Legislative Council in India.

That protest is against what one might well call, adopting Mr. Dicey's phrase, "a leap in the dark."

DR. BHANDARKAR'S RELIGIOUS WRITINGS AND SERMONS.

(BY PRINCIPAL G. C. BHATE.)

We hail with delight the third edition of Dr. Bhandarkar's religious writings and sermons in Marathi published on the eighty-third anniversary of the birth of the venerable sage. The book is a handsome volume of about 735 pages finely printed with fine photos in the Manoranjana Press. In recent years plenty of books have been published in Marathi on religio-philosophical subjects. But most of them are mainly translations or adaptations of Sanskrit works and the style of the writings is the dialectical one of the dryadnat type. But of books devoted to the exposition of earnest, devotional religious thought, and written in a simple serious style suited to such a subject, there is a lamentable lack. Mr. Vaidya, the editor of the present work, must therefore be congratulated upon supplying such a want by the publication of the present book. By way of introduction, Mr. Vaidya has written what he calls a short sketch of Dr. Bhandarkar's career. It consists of 121 closely printed pages and forms a very inspiring and interesting reading in itself. This brief biography brings out the salient features of the life of Dr. Bhandarkar and points out the manifold activities in which the revered Guru of Maharashtra took part. On whatever he undertook to do he brought to bear his zeal, earnestness and devotion. Consequently he was successful in every undertaking. Dr. Bhandarkar's life is a living example of what can be achieved by patience, perseverance and singleness of purpose. The biography graphically depicts Dr. Bhandarkar as a talented teacher, as an impartial antiquarian, as a Sanskrit savant, as a social reformer and, above all, as a religious revivalist. His life presents, in miniature, the manifold movements carried on in Maharashtra during the last half a century and shows how every sincere well-wisher of his country is bound to be an all-round reformer. We strongly recommend the young and the old of this generation to read this short but inspiring sketch of Dr. Bhandarkar's career and we request Mr. Vaidya to print it in a separate book form.

In the main body of the book, Mr. Vaidya has brought together all the religious writings and sermons of Dr. Bhandarkar. It consists of 614 pages and is divided into three parts. In the first part, essays and articles on religious subjects, from the pen of the venerable sage, are printed, while in the other two parts summaries of his sermons and prayers are printed. The first part is more religio-philosophical. In this Dr. Bhandarkar has brought out ideas of permanent value in the Upanishad literature. He has shown how the Upanishads have considered and stated the various arguments brought forward for proving God's existence, how the religion of the Upanishads is a universal religion capable of satisfying the craving for spirituality of all men. In this part, too, Dr. Bhandarkar has given an interesting exposition of the tenets of the Prarthana of Brahma Samaja and tried to answer objections against those tenets. This part of Dr. Bhandarkar's book is calculated to remove the impression that the Prarthana Samaja movement is a mere imitation of the Christian religion and to confirm the right view that this movement was an indigenous growth and is an attempt to purify the existing Hindu religion of its accumulated dross of superstitions and to impart to it its pristine purity.

The latter part of the book is still more valuable. Dr. Bhandarkar's sermons and prayers are the overflowings of his devotional heart. They indicate how deeply he had dived in the poetry of Maharashtra saints and especially Tukaram. They also show how Dr. Bhandarkar has caught the religious thought and the devotional spirit of the Maratha saints and has completely assimilated the teachings of the Bhakti school. This complete assimilation of the teachings of the Maratha saints is a characteristic feature in the life of the first batch of English-educated men in Maharashtra. Take Rao Saheb Ranade or Wamanrao Modak or Bal Mangesh Wagle or Mr. Parmanand; all of them were imbued with the devotional spirit of the saints and this is to be attributed to the systematic study of Marathi in their youth. In the early days of the spread of Western education on this side, Marathi was a compulsory subject throughout the whole course and this early acquaintance with Marathi saints left a permanent impress upon the young minds. Later on the place of Marathi was taken up by Sanskrit in the School and College curriculum. Now Sanskrit literature has a twofold character. It is either purely secular, being love literature of the sentimental romantic type and is thus calculated to appeal to the sentimental nature of the young; or it is purely dialectical and theological and is calculated to appeal to the pure intellect and create a love of theological controversy. In fact, Sanskrit literature is lacking in devotional literature which is the peculiar characteristics of old Marathi literature. Thus the exclusive study of secular Sanskrit literature has given a secular and orthodox bias to the minds of the later generation. This undesirable state of things in itself would be a strong argument for the restoration of Marathi in our University curriculum, and to give it its rightful place in a national system of education. I feel that the complaint of excessive secularity and intellectuality of our young men would disappear in time if the restoration of Marathi which is now asked for is carried out at an early date.

Thus it will appear that Dr. Bhandarkar's book is a unique book of its kind in Marathi. It is bound to be healthy reading calculated to lead to elevated thought and feeling. We think that the book ought to be in the household library of every educated man. Mr. Vaidya has incurred a heavy financial burden in printing such a big book and in offering it so cheap. We hope the educated public will give a liberal patronage to the valuable book and thus relieve Mr. Vaidya from his heavy liability.

THE LATE Dr. T. M. NAIR.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

At a meeting of the Non-Brahmins of Southern India held at the office of the South Indian Liberal Federation, Mount Road, Madras, on the 2nd August 1919, the following resolutions were carried unanimously:—

I. That this meeting of the Non-Brahmins of the Madras Presidency expresses the poignant grief and the keen sense of loss which it feels at the death in London on 17th July 1919 of Dr. T. M. Nair to whose leadership, characterised as it was by far-sighted persistency of purpose, firmness of will, fearlessness of expression and disinterested labour and to whose advocacy of their claims, distinguished as it was by rare intellectual gifts and a wide comprehensive culture, and by clear exposition, irresistible logic and readiness of resource the non-Brahmins including the depressed classes owe a debt which can never be adequately repaid.

II. That steps be taken to perpetuate Dr. Nair's memory in a fitting manner and that in the opinion of this meeting this object can be best attained by (1) the erection of buildings, to be named after him, for locating the offices of the South Indian Liberal Federation and of Justice; (2) the establishment of Justice on a firm and substantial basis; and (3) the erection of a statue of Dr. Nair.

We have now to carry out these objects for which a sum of not less than two lakhs of rupees will be required.

It is needless to dwell at length upon the great services rendered to the country during nearly a quarter of a century by the late Dr. Nair. He distinguished himself in several fields of activity and his public spirit, force of character, personality, independence and earnestness of purpose, and his brilliant abilities were a great public asset. To refer here specifically only to his activities during the last 2½ years, you will surely agree with me that during a critical juncture in India's History he came forward to champion the cause of the down-trodden and depressed classes in India in general and the non-Brahmin communities of this Presidency in particular and exposed in his own inimitable and characteristic way the pretensions of the educated few to speak and act for the voiceless millions in India.

If, to-day, we find the Government reckoning us as a political factor and have an Anti Dravida in the Local Legislative Council, they are due to the untiring and unsparing efforts of Dr. Nair. What we are and what we shall be, on close analysis, will be found to be due to that one man who worked and died for us. We have evidence, if any were needed, that, even in his last moments, his own thought was the non-Brahmin movement.

It is to perpetuate the memory of such a great and good man that I now appeal for funds. What other objects could satisfy his soul than strengthening Justice the organ of the non-Brahmin movement, and the cause he loved so much and for which no sacrifice, Dr. Nair thought was too great?

I, therefore, appeal with all the earnestness at my command to all friends and admirers of the late Dr. Nair and well-wishers of the non-Brahmin movement to subscribe liberally towards his Memorial Fund and make it a success.

Subscriptions may be sent direct to the Bank of Madras, Madras, in which an account has been opened under the name "Dr. Nair Memorial Fund" or to the undersigned. They will be duly acknowledged in the columns of Justice.

Yours truly,

P. THYAGARAJA CHETTY.

Chairman, Dr. Nair Memorial Committee.

A BENGALI-NAIR MARRIAGE.

To,

The Editor, Indian Social Reformer, Bombay.

Friday last witnessed the performance of a marriage—interesting in many ways; interesting in the uniqueness of its ceremonies; interesting in the persons contracting the marriage—a Bengalee and a Malayalee—interesting in its officiating priest—Dr. S. Subramania Ayyar—between Srimati Subasheni Devi, the youngest daughter of Aghornath Chattopadhyay and Sriman A. C. Narayanan Nambiar son of Vengail K. Ramani Nayanar. There were gathered the elite of this city and the cream of Madras youths and maidens, representing all classes, creeds and castes. There was a sprinkling of few Europeans—ladies and gentlemen. A spacious hall very beautifully decorated, with a Shamiana in the middle, simple, yet tastefully and artistically done, with a gathering of cultured men and gay ladies presented a charm all its own. The bride dressed in a golden hue saree was led to the altar by her sister, and was given away in marriage, after a simple ceremonial ride, by her brother Mr. Bhupendranath Chattopadhyay, Asst. Accountant General, Hyderabad State. A cosmopolitan dinner was served to all guests in two halls, irrespective of caste, creed or sex, who avidly enjoyed the catering and the company. A musical entertainment by two gifted musical artists from Hyderabad, including some selected pieces from Harindranath Chattopadhyay, closed this novel, nonetheless, inspiring ceremony. In these days of so much loud talk and little action, it is really a great relief to see a reform marriage of this type performed under the blessings of India's Grand Old Man and with the moral support and sympathy of the young India. Such a marriage will be a service of inspiration to many, no right thinking man will ever deny. All gratitude to those pioneers who, facing ridicule, calumny and ostracism, have the courage of their convictions and fight their lives' battle all alone and unaided. Srimati Subasheni Devi and Mr. Nambiar have heartiest support and the sincere sympathy of every patriotic Indian and well-wisher of Social Reform in this country, in the noble example they have set to the world; and one would really wish that more of our young men and women will try to emulate them, and set to reconstruct the social fabric of our country by more practical examples than by empty effusions from lofty platforms as they do to-day. Then and then alone will India's regeneration be assured.

G. VENKATACHALUW.

INDIAN WOMEN AND THE VOTE,

THE AGA KHAN ON OBSOLETE VIEWS.

Sir,—The summaries given in The Times of the proceedings of the Joint Select Committee on the India Bill go to show that the attitude of casual negation on the question of women suffrage adopted in the Southbrough Report, and endorsed by the Government of India, is without substantial foundation. Lord Southbrough himself admitted that he was very much astonished at the volume of evidence in favour of female enfranchisement; but he brushes it aside as so much political idealism. It seems he has forgotten that the world is governed by ideas, and that true progress is rooted in idealism.

One member of the Franchise Committee, Mr. Malcolm Hogg, was in favour of the removal of sex disqualification; but not of making special arrangement for recording women's votes. I entirely dissent from Lord Southbrough's opinion that the reservation "robbed the gift of all its merit." We are not setting up the public hustings and open voting of a past age in England, nor is the number of male electors—some five million for the whole of British India—large enough for the jostle of the ballot station to be so serious as Lord Southbrough and Sir James Meston suggested. The great majority of Indian women of the well-to-do classes, e. g., the better class of cultivators, are not in real seclusion. The official witnesses who hold that very few women will go to the polling booth forget that purdah ladies go into the law and registration courts all over the country, and give evidence in relation to the transfer of property &c. As owners of land and other property, purdah women play parts, in the affairs of the countryside day by day which makes ludicrous the suggestion that there would be anything revolutionary in recording a vote once in three years or less.

Sir James Meston's statement that female enfranchisement would present many difficulties, practical and social, is an instance of the regrettable fact that while many conscientious British officials spend their working lives in administrative duties in India, they never enter into a real understanding of the life or aspirations of the people—national, social, or religious. Only one man in a hundred, a Woodroffe in Calcutta, a Pollen or a Beaman in Bombay gains such real understanding, of the people he serves. It is painful to Indian readers that men who have attained high distinction in the Civil Service should have to be seriously asked if they would be shocked at the inclusion of women in the electorates. No Indian, not even the most conservative, will be shocked by the proposal that now that the sacred right of enfranchisement is to be given on a substantial scale to men, women should share it just as they share the sacred rights of property.

I do not believe that Sir James Meston, and Lord Southbrough are right in the opinion that very few women would exercise the franchise; but the point is not pertinent to the issue. The question is one of justice, and not of the degree to which the right would be used. The logical deduction of the assertions of Sir James Meston and Lord Southbrough about Indian womanhood would be to take away from them the rights of property and of equality before the civil law they have enjoyed for centuries. My general views on this question can be seen in some detail in my book, "India in Transition," published before the issue of the Montagu-Chelmsford Report. But I feel it my duty to hundreds of venerable and sensible purdah ladies of position I know in India to register this protest against the obsolete views of men who have attained to place and power in India, but who have never taken the trouble to know the people among whom they do office work.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
AGA KHAN.

THE BOMBAY PRESIDENCY SOCIAL REFORM ASSOCIATION.

ELOCUTION COMPETITION FOR HINDU LADIES.

To encourage public speaking by Hindu women, the Bombay Presidency Social Reform Association has resolved to hold an Elocution Competition for Hindu ladies in the middle of October 1919. The following subjects have been prescribed for the Competition:—

Marathi.

Subject I.—"For what occupations are women specially fitted?" 4 prizes Rs. 15, 10, 10 and 5.

Subject II.—(For girls under 14). (a). "Truth alone triumphs," or. (b). "Even oil may be extracted by squeezing dusts of sand." 4 prizes Rs. 10, 6, 5, 4.

Subject III.—(Will be announced 24 hours before the appointed time). 3 prizes Rs. 25, 20, 15. The first prize of Rs. 25 is common to the best speech either in Marathi or Gujarathi.

Gujarathi.

Subject I.—"Social Service of well-to-do ladies and gentlemen." 4 prizes Rs. 15, 10, 10, 5.

Subject II.—(For girls under 14). (a). "Truth alone triumphs," or. (b). "Patience and perseverance overcome mountains." 4 prizes Rs. 10, 6, 5, 4.

Subject III.—(Will be announced 24 hours before the appointed time). 3 prizes Rs. 25, 20, 15. The first prize of Rs. 25 is common to the best speech either in Marathi or Gujarathi.

Ladies and girls intending to take part in Competition should apply before the 30th September 1919 to the Secretaries, Bombay Presidency Social Reform Association, Servants of India Society's Home, Sandhurst Road, Girgaon, stating their full name, age, caste, occupation, address and the subject on which they intend to speak. Girls under 14 should also send a certificate of age signed by the parents or guardian and the Head Mistress of their school or any gentleman.

The annual General Meeting of the Bombay Presidency Social Reform Association was held on Saturday the 6th September 1919 at 6 p. M. (S. T.) at the Servants of India Society's Home. Mr. D. G. Padhye presided. Among those present were Messrs. D. G. Dalvi, N. M. Joshi, B. N. Motiwalle, T. A. Kulkarni, V. S. Ravat and others. After the minutes of the last Annual General Meeting were read and confirmed, the accompanying report of the Association for the years 1917 and 1918 was read and approved. The election of the office bearers, members of the Managing Council and the Auditors was made for the next two years. A vote of thanks to the Chair terminated the proceedings.

ADVERTISEMENTS

DO YOU WISH TO KNOW YOUR
"FUTURE"

Send your time and date of birth or your star and age or note the time when you write the letter, you will be given a full reading of your life or one year to come for ONE RUPEE ONLY.

Mr. Ghazanfar Muhammad Khan, Deputy Collector, writes from Moradabad City. "The one year life reading you sent me proved to be QUITE TRUE."

THE KALINGA ASTROLOGICAL BUREAU,
Chodavaram, Visagapatam District.

Wanted:—An accomplished and educated widow of any Caste to marry a Brahmin widower in decent position. For other particulars please apply to X C/o The Indian Social Reformer, Bombay.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postage

	In advance.	In arrears.
Per annum.....	Rs. 5—0—0.	Rs. 6—2—0.
Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, eight shillings (Rs. 6).

Single copies of the current year can be had at 4 annas each and any back copies at 6 annas each,

THE TATA INDUSTRIAL BANK, LD.

HEAD OFFICE, BOMBAY.

BRANCHES—CALCUTTA and HYDERABAD (Deccan)
CAWNPORE and LUCKNOW.

Sub-Branches.—

Bombay—Share Bazaar, Shroff Bazaar.

Calcutta—Bera Bazaar.

London Agents. LLOYDS BANK LIMITED.

NEW YORK AGENTS: THE GUARANTY
TRUST COY. OF NEW YORK.

AUTHORISED CAPITAL... Rs. 12,00,00,000.

SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL..... " 7,56,00,225.

PAID UP CAPITAL..... " 1,50,99,225.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Sir D. J. Tata, Kt., Chairman.

Sir Sassoon David, Bart.

Sir R. N. Mookerjee, K. C. L. E.

Sir Francis Stewart, Kt.

Sir Henry Proctor, Kt.

R. D. Tata, Esq.

F. E. Dinshaw, Esq.

F. C. Rimington, Esq.

Narottam Morarjee, Esq.

Hajee Gulam Mahomed Ajam, Esq.

The Hon'ble Mr. Purshottamdas Thakordas. C. I. E.

A. J. Bilimoria, Esq.

Secretary, R. H. Parker.

Current Accounts opened and interest allowed on daily credit balances from Rs. 500/- to Rs. 1,00,000/- at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum. If the balance to the credit of any account does not fall below Rs. 25,000/- at any time between 1st January and 30th June, interest will be allowed during that period at 2½ % per annum. No interest is allowed unless the sum accrued amounts to Rs 8/- Half-yearly.

Fixed Deposits. Interest allowed on Deposits fixed for one or two years and for shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank. Interest allowed on Savings Bank Accounts at 4 per cent per annum. Rules may be obtained on application.

Loans and Cash Credits are granted on approved securities.

Purchases and sales of Securities and shares effected.

Bills of Exchange purchased and collected and every description of Banking and exchange business undertaken.

14-4-18. J. PAGAN DALZELL Acting Manager.

THE YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK, LIMITED.

(Registered in Japan.)

Established 1880.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 48,000,000.

Paid up Capital.....Yen. 42,000,000.

Reserve Fund.....Yen. 28,100,000.

Head Office:—Yokohama.

Branches and Agencies at Bombay, Buenos Aires, Calcutta, Changchun, Chi-Nan, Dairen, Fengtien, Hankow, Harbin, Hongkong, Honolulu, Kaiyuan, Kobe, London, Los Angeles, Lyons, Manila, Nagasaki, Newchwang, New York, Osaka, Peking, Rangoon, San Francisco, Seattle, Shanghai, Shimonoseki, Singapore, Soerabaya, Sydney, Tientsin, Tokio, Tsingtao.

Current Deposit Accounts are opened for approved customers and Interest is allowed at the rate of 2 per cent per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 100,000, provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of banking and exchange business transacted.

N. IGARASHI

Post Box No. 207, Hornby Road, Bombay.

I. NISHIMAKI.

Manager, Calcutta.

1-12-17.

Post Box No. 406, Clive street, Calcutta

THE BANK OF BARODA, LD.

Under the Patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja Gaskwar.

Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897

HEAD OFFICE BARODA.

Branches—Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, and Surat

Capital Subscribed... .. Rs. 60,00,000.

Capital Paid up " 20,00,000.

Reserve Fund " 12,50,000.

DIRECTORS :

The Hon'ble Mr. Lalubhai Somaldas, C. I. E., Chairman

Sir Vithaldas Damodar Thackersey, Kt.

Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti Nagar, Sheth, Baroda.

Sheth Manilal Revadas, Vadnagar.

Rao Bahadur Gunajirao R. Nimbalker, Sur Subha, Baroda State.

Bhaskerrao Vishaldas Mehta, Esq., Advocate, High Court, Bombay.

M. H. Kantavalla, Esq., Agent, Maharaja Mill Co., Ld. Baroda.

R. B. Shirsogkar, Naib Subha, Baroda State.

A. N. Datar, Accountant General, Baroda State.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balance from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest which does not come to Rs. 8 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application. C. E. BANDLE.—General Manager. 15-4-18.

THE CENTRAL BANK OF INDIA, LTD

Subscribed Capital... .. Rs. 50,00,000

Paid Up Capital " 25,00,000

Reserved liability of

Shareholders " 25,00,000

Reserve Fund " 6,00,000

Head Office:—Alice Building, Bombay.

Local Branches:—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar, (3) Share Bazar.

Branches:—Amritsar, Calcutta, Delhi, Jharis, Karachi.

London Agents:—London Joint City and Midland Bank, Ld.

Current Accounts :—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June
2½ % allowed on Daily Balances from July to December.

12 months Deposits received at 5 % per annum.

Long and Short period Deposits received at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking Business transacted.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA.

Manager.

25-2-17

Timely advice to the Wealthy

Costly but certain remedies are in the long run cheaper than cheap and uncertain ones.

KANDARPA SANJIVINI PILLS AND OIL

are the safest and surest remedies for indigestion constipation, loss of appetite, memory, mental, physical and nervous debility and all sorts of urinary disorders, improve impoverished blood.

Price per tin of 40 Pills Rs. 5 & per tola of Oil Rs. 10

Both Purchased at a time Rs. 11/4—

Medical Advice and a Medical Book containing 128 pages sent Gratis and Post Free.

RAJ VAIDYA NARAYANJI KESHAYJI

Head Office :—Jamnagar, Kathiawar, (India.)

Branch :—No. 187, Kalbadevi Road, 24-8-1919. BOMBAY.

Empire Hindu Hotel

Opposite Victoria Terminus
Bombay.

(Central Situation)
Strictly Vegetarian
Charges Moderate

Fitted with
Electric Lift, Fans and Lights.

TELEGRAMS: } TELEPHONE
"FOOD," BOMBAY. } 2789.

22-8-19.

Saffron? Saffron?? Saffron???

If you wish to buy genuinely pure and best Saffron it is

SUN

BRAND

SAFFRON

ONLY

It has been largely used by Jain Temples, Maharajas Darbars, Hakim and Vaidyas all over the country for the last 75 year and is well known for its purity and genuineness.

S. NARAEN & Co.,

17-2-18

21, Hammer Street, Fort Bombay.

SHORTHAND.

Like Other Arts and Sciences, Shorthand is subject to the Law of Progress. Based on greatly improved scientific and analogical principles, the Sloan-Duployan system (contained in a compass of 12 lessons) saves a year's laborious study, ensuring highest efficiency and speediest results. Shorthand is the open-door to many well-paid positions; at any rate it will mean advancement for you. Expert Individual or Postal Instructions for a fixed fee, payable in easy monthly instalments. Speed Classes Conducted. Specialised Training Guaranteed. Enclose stamp for booklet, etc.
CENTRAL CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE,
G. P. O. Box No. 424, Bombay.

"EVERYTHING FOR EVERYBODY"

- National Standard Portable Typewriter No. 3 (10 lbs.) Rs. 190
 - Oliver No. 5 (American Rebuilt) B.S. & Tab. Rs. 175; No. 7 " 200
 - " " 3 (Second-hand) in thorough working order. " 125
 - Empire No. 1 (" Do.) in good working order. " 85
 - Multikopy Typewriter Carbons, per Box of 100 sheets. " 8
 - Webster Brand " Ribbons for all machines, Doz. " 21
 - Typewriter Oil (best 1 oz. bot.) or Eberhard Erasers, Doz. " 6
 - Safety Razor, Rivals Gillette, with 6 Gillette Blades (best) " 5
 - Do. (Made in U.S.A.) with 3 spare blades, Set " 1
 - Portable Electric Battery & lamp (burns 200 hours) compl. " 30
 - Envelope Making Machine (to make 30,000 per day), New " 35
 - Full Jewelled Lever Watch (Square or Octagon) Silver " 25
 - Conklio's Self filling Fountain Pen (non-leakable) Gold nib " 9
- UNIVERSAL BUSINESS SYNDICATE,
20-4-19. Post Box No. 424, Bombay.

HYPNOTISM

PERSONAL MAGNETISM,
WILL POWER,
NERVE FORCE—

Call what you will—

Is the intangible power that controls human destiny. It is the key to all business and social success. This power is no special gift of any one. It is latent in every one. We help you how to display it. By our system, you can learn in a few days at your own home and not only achieve success yourself, but you can influence the mind, health and actions of others to a remarkable.

Write immediately for our free booklet—The Pride of India.

THE LATENT LIGHT CULTURE,
TINNEVELLY, S. INDIA.

Batlivala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 1 each bottle of 100.

Batlivala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 2 each bottle of 100.

Batlivala's Ague Mixture of Fever, Malaria, Influenza etc.

Batlivala's Ague Pills for Malaria, Fever, Influenza etc.

Batlivala's Tonic pills for pale people & nervous breaks down.

Batlivala's Tooth Powder of Preserving Teeth

Batlivala's Ringworm ointment for Ringworm Dhobi Itch etc.

May be had from all dealers in medicines or from
Dr. H. L. Batlivala Sons & Co., Ltd.
No. 12, Worli, 18, Bombay.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESS :— " Doctor Batlivala Dadar "

THE BOMBAY CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK.

HEAD OFFICE :—Apollo Street, St., Bombay.

DIRECTORS:—The Hon. Sir Fazulbhoj Currimbhoy (Chairman), Sir Vithaldas D. Thackersey, the Hon. Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas, Sir Stanley Reed, the Hon. Mr. C. V. Mehta, the Chief of Ichalkaranji, G.K. Devadhar, Esq., the Hon. Sir P. D. Pattani, the Raja Sahab of Malegaon.

Share Capital (fully paid)Rs. 7,00,000

1 Deposits fixed for one year and shorter or longer periods are accepted, Rates and other particulars may be ascertained from the under signed.

2 The Bank finances only registered Co-operative Societies in the Bombay Presidency on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency.

3. Accounts are audited half-yearly by a special Government Auditor, and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the "Bombay Government Gazettee."

20-5-17.

VAIKUNTH L. MEHTA, Manager.

THE BANK OF TAIWAN, LTD.

Incorporated by Special Charter of the Imperial Japanese Government, 1899.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 50,000,000
Paid-up CapitalYen. 22,500,000
Reserve FundYen. 5,680,000

Head Office :—Taipeh, Formosa.

BRANCHES—

LONDON	SHANGHAI	TOKIO
NEW YORK	HONGKONG	OSAKA
AMOY	SINGAPORE	KOBE
CANTON	SOERABAIA	YOKOHAMA
FOOCHOW	SEMARANG	AKO
HANKOW	MAKUNG	GIRAN
KIUKIANG	BATAVIA	KAGI
SWATOW	PINAN	KARENKO
TAINAN	SHINCHIKU	KEELUNG
TAKOW	TAICHU	TAMSUI

The Bank has also a large number of Correspondents at Home and Abroad.

Current Deposit Accounts—are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at 2 per cent. per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 1,00,000 provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of Banking and Exchange business transacted.

K. TAKEMURA

Manager

8-12-17.

56, Esplanade Road, Fort, BOMBAY

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

Established 7th September 1906.

Incorporated under the Indian Companies' Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE:

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.

Capital Subscribed Rs. 1,00,00,000

Capital Called up ,, 50,00,000

Reserve Fund ,, 15,00,000

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 500 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½% p. a. throughout the year. On sums exceeding Rs. 1,00,000 interest is allowed by special arrangement. No interest will be allowed which does not amount to Rs. 5 per half year.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short periods @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

*Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application".

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, & CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stocks at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

H. P. STRINGFELLOW,

15-1-11.

Manager.

A Lady's Best Ornament is a Glorious Head of Hair.

A profusion of rich, so silky, lustrous, wavy hair, where's the woman who would not like that?

There's only one oil that makes such hair as it's the far-famed

KAMINIA OIL
(Regd.)

Invaluable for ladies, as just as much for Brain Workers and Students.

Heated head cooled, aching disappears and dandruff becomes a thing of the past. Added to all these possesses a beautiful fragrant smell.

For superiority, awarded a Gold Medal at the Mysore Exhibition, and Great demand over the country.

If you have not yet used KAMINIA OIL, you

have missed a fine delight and a real boon; use it now, if only once; and like many people you will prefer to use also always.

Price per bottle, Re. 1. V. P. Charges 6 annas extra

Price for 3 bottles Rs. 2-10. V. P. charges 14 annas extra

Write now, Do not delay.

Sole Agents—
The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,
(5-8-16) No. 155, Jumma Masjid Market, BOMBAY.

Now-a-Days.

All things have advanced in price. Even the vegetable ingredients used in our Atank Nigrah Pills have advanced in price.

Even the labourers demand heavy wages being dearer. Even the users have increased yet the Atank Nigrah Pills for Toning up the system are sold at before war price i. e. at a Rupee.

Valdya Shastri
Mahishanker Govindji,
Atank Nigrah Pharmacy,

Head Office:—Jamnagar—Kathiawar.

Branch:—Kalbadevi Road, Bombay.

H. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours. Publish Fine Art Pictures, & c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.
1-12-10. HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS-

ROYAL TONIC PILLS.

A powerful Nutritious and Strength Restorer. Price Re. 1-4 per bottle of 30 Pills.

PREPARED BY—GOVINDJEE DAMODER & Co.,

Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Commission Agents.

1-12-10.

No. 3 Sutar Chawl Market, BOMBAY.

Clean
 Wholesome
 Intelligent
 Entertainment
 IS A GREAT STEP

IN

SOCIAL REFORM.

When deciding on a

PLACE OF AMUSEMENT TWO ESTABLISHMENTS

Should at once leap to the mind,

THE EXCELSIOR

BOMBAY'S PREMIER MODERN THEATRE

AND

THE EMPIRE

BOMBAY'S MOST PALATIAL

PICTURE THEATRE

Where Film Plays of Distinction are shown

Every Week.

A

Great Cinema Masterpiece

is shown,

Both theatres are near the Bori Bunder

and are run by the

EXCELSIOR SYNDICATE.

The Pioneer of Bombay's

AMUSEMENT WORLD.

FURUKAWA & CO.

TOKIO

The Largest Manufacturers
in the East

OF

ELECTRIC BARE COPPER CONDUCTORS,
ELECTRIC UNDERGROUND CABLES,
ELECTRIC INSULATED WIRES,
ELECTRIC ACCESSORIES,
INGOTS, RODS, WIRES,
SHEETS, TUBES,
Etc., Etc.,

SOLE AGENTS IN INDIA AND BURMA,

TATA, SONS & CO.,

BOMBAY & CALCUTTA.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS Ltd.

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.
Naysari Building, Fort, BOMBAY.

Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.
11-8-17.

When YOUR EYES

need to be examined by QUALIFIED OCULISTS and by SCIENTIFIC REFRACTIONISTS of 26 year experience, FREE OF CHARGE, you cannot do better than GO TO

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR & CO.

The leading firm of Oculists, Eyesight Specialists, Manufacturing Opticians and suppliers of the patented

"KRYPTOK"

(Invisible one-piece bifocal lens.)

Toric, and all kinds of lenses,—Cylindrical, Spherical, cylindrical, Prismatic, &c., from pebbles as well as from best quality crown glass.

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR

Eyesight Specialist,

With 26 Years' Practical Experience.,

Holds Exceptional Testimonials from H. H. The Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, the Hon'ble Sir Lawrence Jenkins the Hon. Mr. Justice Batty, Mrs. Batty, the Hon. Sir N. S. Chhandavarker, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beaman, the Hon'ble Sir S. L. Batchelor, the Hon'ble Sir John Heaton Mr. H. G. Gell, M. V. O., Col. R. H. Forman, R. A. M. C., P. M. O. Co. Brigade, Lieut. Col. G. H. Bull, M. D., I. M. S., Lieut-Colonel Peters M. B., I. M. S., and other high personages.

(7) 379, HORNBY ROW,
Opposite the Government Telegraph Office,
Fort, BOMBAY.
62-11-10.

INTERESTING ASSUREES ARE INVITED TO COMPARE THE RATES AND CONDITIONS OF

The Empire of India Life Assurance Company, Limited.

WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.

Head Office II Elphinstone Circle, BOMBAY.

SEE REPORT AND OPINIONS OF THE PRESS AS TO THE REMARKABLE PROGRESS MADE BY THE COMPANY.

ENDOWMENT NON-FORFEITABLE POLICY FOR RS. 3,000.

PAYABLE AT AGE 60 OR AT DEATH, IF PREVIOUS, WITH PROFIT.

If, at any time, the assured under this plan should desire to cease paying any more premiums, he can obtain a paid-up Policy for such a proportion of the original sum assured as the number of premiums paid bears to the number agreed upon. Thus a gentleman who had assured at age 30 for a Policy of Rs. 3,000 payable at age 60 or at Death, if previous, after 5 years' payments, would be entitled to a Free paid-up Policy for Rs. 500 free of future payments.

MONTHLY PREMIUM.

AT AGE 30, Rs. 6-9-0.

AT AGE 35, RS. 7-8-0.

AT AGE 40, RS. 8-14-0.

AT AGE 45, Rs. 10-18-0.

AT AGE 50, Rs. 13-12-0.

AT AGE 55, Rs. 18-10-0

SOME OF THE DISTINCTIVE FEATURES.

* Funds invested in Government Securities and in accordance with the Indian Trusts Act
Policy holders can appoint their own Directors.
90 per cent. of Profits to Participating Policy holders.
Lapsed policies revived without Medical Certificate.
Liberal Surrender Values 40 per cent. of the Tabular premium paid.
Immediate payment of Claims.
Medical fees and stamps on Policies are payable by the Company.

The sum assured is PAYABLE IN FULL should death occur even immediately after payment of the first premium.

GUARANTEE INSURANCE—This Company issues Guaranteed Policies in situation of trust and responsibility. As specially authorized to guarantee the employees of the Post Office

Proposals Forms and full Particulars may be obtained from any local Agent in India or from ALLUM, BHARUCHA & CO. Managers.
22-9-10.

IN INDIA

EVERY ONE KNOWS,

whom it does concern that we are foremost in supplying the best

COSSI SILK SUIT PIECES

suitable for the season. These pieces are strong, fancy and durable, and have been specially manufactured for Indian Market. Each piece guaranteed for One Suit Complete.

Price Rs. 10 per piece.

Write to—THE BHARGAVA COMMERCIAL SOCIETY,
2-18. Benares City.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER. Contract Rates for Advertisements.

Number of insertions.	1 Inch.		2 Inches.		3 Columns.		4 Columns.		5 Columns.		Page.
	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.
18	11	0	16	0	20	0	30	0	50	0	87	0
26	18	0	25	0	30	0	50	0	87	0	155	0
52	25	0	38	0	50	0	87	0	155	0	300	0

Casual advertisements at Rs. 4 per line for the 1st insertion and Rs. 2 per line for succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

WONDERFUL TONIC AND

MOUTH-REFRESHER

JINTAN.

This is a safe and efficient remedy in all kinds of diseases or disturbances of the digestive organs. It is composed entirely of VEGETABLE INGREDIENTS made from the prescription of the following eminent medical men viz—

NORUHIRO MIWA, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy,
ZENJIRO INOUE, M. D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy
and testified as to its efficacy by Baron J. MATSUMOTO, M. D., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Army.

T. MITAMURA Esq., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Navy.

As a digestive it is unequalled and will not disturb the functions of the most delicate stomach. Its antiseptic properties render it very efficacious in warding off disease and at the same time it imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath of the user.

By virtue of its aroma, it effectually makes the odour of Tobacco and Alcoholic Spirits.

It acts beneficially on the vocal cords and has found much favour with public speakers, actors, singers and those whose vocation necessitates a severe strain on the throat.

GOOD FOR

Billiousness, Headache, Vertigo, Nausea, Indigestion, Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, etc., etc.

To maintain general health 2 to 3 pills may be taken occasionally, well masticated.

Price—20 Pills Packet Rs. 0-1-0. 90 Pills Packet, with Tin case., Rs. 0-4-0; 380 pills Packet with fancy case., Rs. 1-0-0

Prepared by Messrs. MORISHITA Co., OSAKA, JAPAN.

Sole Agents: Jintan Agency (G. R. Chaubal), Juma Masjid. BOMBAY.

As case opening 2 pills come here automatically!

FOR PAINS
AND ACHES
SPRAINS ETC.
USE:—

AMRUTANJAN.

The magical pain balm extant. Cures
all aches & pains
Costs 8 As. Sold everywhere.

By Appointment to H. E. the Governor
Sir George Sydenham Clarke of
Bombay.

HARIDAS VALJI,

(KING OF INDIAN CONFECTIONERS)

Highest Confectioner, Caterer and Grand
Military Contractor.

Proprietor—RATINATH,
Chitra Bazar & Grant Road,
BOMBAY.

20-4-18.

DENTISTRY.

Extractions Painless;
Terms Very Moderate;
Gold Crown, Bar and
Bridge Work a Speciality
(teeth without plate);
Latest Successful Treatment
for Pyorrhoea (pus in gums).
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

(Hours: 8-1-30 & 3-7-30; Daily.
(Sundays—From 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.)

ADROOS BUILDING,
NEW CHAWRI ROAD,
CHENNAI, BOMBAY.

E. R. AHAT,
Surgeon Dentist.

1-6-18.

THE INDIAN * SOCIAL * REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY MORNING.

Office:—EMPIRE BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD, FORT.

Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

Vol. XXX BOMBAY—SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1919. No. 3.

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard."
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

Turkey and India.	The Indian Theatre.
The Punjab Indemnity Bill.	Constitutional Reform, in Travancore.
A Women's College for Bombay.	"The Future Government of India."
Communal Amenities.	The Depressed Classes, and How to Raise them."
An Uncalled for Outburst.	A Hindu Widow - Remarriage.
The Rev. Dr. William Skinner,	The Indian Boy Scouts Association.
Control of Religious Trusts.
Calcutta University Commission V.

NOTES.

Turkey and India. The question of the future of Turkey is causing a great deal of perturbation among our Mahomedan countrymen, which is producing in its turn a sympathetic effect on the minds of the whole population. The great demonstration held on Thursday in Bombay voiced the feelings of the community in studiously temperate but, on that account, all the more emphatic language, in regard to the Peace terms with Turkey so far as they appear from the occasional, fragmentary and unconnected items which are published from time to time. There seems to be some ground for the fear that the conclusion of Peace may find the once powerful Turkish Empire cut up and distributed into numerous "Mandatory" States, which is the modern euphemism for feudatory or dependant countries. It is true that, if this happens, Turkey will not be the only country to which it has happened. Austria, whose flagrant act of piracy in regard to Bosnia and Herzegovina the Powers took no steps to prevent, has ceased to exist as an Empire and is henceforth to be known as the Alpine districts of Germany. What differentiates the case of Turkey is that it is well-established that the Turkish people had been intrigued into the German side by a clique of politicians, and that, in recognition evidently of this fact, solemn assurance had been given by British and Allied statesmen that nothing would be done to impair the sovereignty of Turkey over her Musalman provinces. In view of this fact and, in view also of the conspicuous share which Indian Mahomedans, as soldiers and citizens, have taken in ensuring the success of the Allies, it is necessary for the sake of preserving the principles of justice and self-determination, for which the War was fought and has been won, to ensure that the Peace Terms are such as conform with the deep-felt sentiments of millions of His Majesty's subjects, Mahomedan and Hindu, in India.

The Punjab Indemnity Bill. The Punjab Indemnity Bill is being discussed in the Indian Legislative Council. The leader of the opposition is Pandit

Madan Mohan Malaviya, who has paid several visits to the Punjab and made personal enquiries during the last few months, and who represents substantially the feelings of Indians in respect of the doings in the Punjab and the inopportuneness and impolicy of bringing in the Indemnity Bill on the eve of an enquiry into the happenings some of which will no doubt be covered by the Indemnity Bill. We can understand such a Bill being passed if it had been decided not to have any enquiry. A general amnesty accompanied by an Indemnity Act would have meant that what is past is past, and that the Punjab may now start on a clean slate. But this one-sided measure, the very introduction of which cannot but affect the attitude of all concerned in the forthcoming enquiry, when a number of appeals are pending before the Privy Council, strikes us as being a reprehensible intrusion of the Legislature in the domain of Justice. As Sir Narayan Chandavarkar, citing Professor Dicey, pointed out in his widely quoted article, which we printed last week, ex post facto legislation of this kind, besides the injustice it may and does often involve, is highly impolitic as setting an evil example. If the excesses of officials can be indemnified, why should we blame those who indemnify (mentally since they cannot legislatively) the excesses of the mob? If it is true that a people gets the kind of Government it deserves, it is also true that a Government gets the kind of subjects it deserves. The Indemnity Bill will have probably become law before this is printed and added to the unprecedented extent of alienation between the Government of India and the public, which is such a melancholy feature of our time. A change of Viceroyalty seems to be imperatively demanded to re-knit the broken threads of good understanding between the Government and the people of India.

A Women's College for Bombay. The Committee appointed by Government to consider and report on the need for more colleges in this Presidency, recommended, with a single dissentient, the establishment of a Women's College in Bombay city. The dissenting member was Principal Paranjpe who holds "that it is better that women students who go in for higher education should study in a larger institution where there will also be men students, though care must be taken to give them wider oppontunities for a social collegiate life among themselves" by providing special hostels. He seems to think the establishment of a Women's College will encourage the growth of the purdah system in this Presidency, and that attending the same lectures as men students has an enlightening effect on women. A shrewd Indian lady graduate, not a Hindu, to whom we mentioned the matter aptly remarked that co-education has certainly its good points but what we have in Bombay and Poona could not be called co-education in any sense. The girl under-graduates attend the present Colleges by sufferance, they are practically excluded from the larger life of the College, they do not get sufficient facilities for recreation, they sit by themselves and walk out of the class rooms after the lectures. Principal Paranjpye's arguments are flatly contradicted by the experience of Madras which is as little a purdah province as Bombay. Prior to the establishment of the two Women's Colleges, one Government and the other a Christian Mission institution, the number of girls attending the Colleges in Madras could be counted on the fingers of the two hands. Since the establishment of the two institutions the number has jumped up to over two hundred, and those who have had experience of the teaching in the Women's Colleges assure us that it is no whit inferior to that in men's. The learned Principal's dogmatism really rests on an unwarranted presumption regarding the unapproachable efficiency of men Professors, and a vague feeling that co-education is an advanced idea, and that co-education is for women to attend the same lectures as men. The Government of Bombay, we are sorry to say, has shelved the idea of a Women's College on the ground that it is premature! Meanwhile our Christian Missionary friends have welcomed Mr. Paranjpye's interposition as "Providential" (see last week's Dnyanodaya) and have decided to start a Women's College and Hostel. We congratulate the Council of Missions on its wise and sane decision.

Communal Amenities: The Dnyanodaya corrects the report in the Times of India of Dr. Mackichan's speech to which we referred last week and gives the correct version to be that there was a "temporary opposition to any religion that has not sprung from the Indian Soil." Even this is not borne out by facts, as we pointed out last week. Mahomedanism is not sprung from the Indian soil, and Hindu-Mahomedan feelings were never more cordial. Mr. Gandhi has published the message which he received from an eminent Mahomedan divine at Ajmere stating that no cows were sacrificed in his jurisdiction during the Bakr Id festival. That this conciliatory sentiment is not confined to eminent personages and that it extends to persons in comparatively humble walks of life, is illustrated by a striking incident which happened at Naupada, a little village in Bandra, inhabited chiefly by Mahomedan and Hindu milkmen. One of the former wishing to sacrifice a cow during the Id, bought one and kept it tied up in front of his house. The Hindus of the locality tried to persuade him to give up the cow in return for the cost of several goats, but he was obdurate. They thereupon invoked the friendly mediation of Mr. Kazi, a Municipal Councillor, and resident of Naupada. Mr. Kazi is not what is called an English-educated man but his heart is in the right place. As member of the Bandra Schools Committee he has done excellent service to the cause of Mahomedan education and his colleagues have learnt to value his judgment. Mr. Kazi at once interceded with his co-religionists and persuaded them to exchange the cow for the price of some goats. He himself brought the cow out of the mosque and handed it over to the Hindus. When he was complimented on his noble act, he simply replied that it was his duty to promote brotherly feelings between Hindus and his co-religionists. It is about the happiest signs of the times that the spirit of brotherhood and good will among all classes of India's people is growing rapidly. May it continue to increase!

An Uncalled for Outburst: New-India of Madras is wroth because the Government of India have selected Mr. N. M. Joshi and not Mr. B. P. Wadia to represent Indian labour at the International Labour Conference at Washington. We have nothing to urge against our contemporary's nominee, but it is obvious that New India knows absolutely nothing of the great work which Mr. Joshi, as Secretary of the Social Service League, has been doing in a score of ways to raise the status and capacity of the large working class population in Bombay. We understand that each representative is entitled to take some advisers with him to help him with their advice on the several questions that may come up for discussion at the Conference, and we are sure that Mr. Joshi will be very pleased if, when he reaches England, he finds it possible to take Mr. Wadia, who is already there, with him in that capacity. We are sure that Mr. Wadia, whose disinterested concern for the working classes is well-known, will, on his part, be glad to cooperate with Mr. Joshi on his very important and responsible mission.

The Rev. Dr. William Skinner: The Rev. Dr. William Skinner has retired after 35 years' service from the Principalship of the Madras Christian College. He succeeded the Rev. Dr. Miller, the eminent educationist to whom South India owes so much. He was in many respects a contrast to Dr. Miller. Quiet, retiring, scholarly, Dr. Skinner never mixed himself up with matters outside his College, but his influence on his students was, on that account, scarcely less deep or beneficent than that of the forceful personality of his distinguished predecessor. Dr. Skinner concluded his reply to the farewell address presented to him by the students of the great College, with which he had been so long and so honourably associated, with a hope and a prayer which might stand as a watchword to Indian students all over the Country. "Is it too much to hope that out of a College like this there may spring a school of politicians, and that in the days to come, when India is growing into possession of herself and her freedom, the alumni of the College may be found upholding the ideal of a United India, India, great and impartial for the good of all her children, an India in which privilege shall mean service and service, privilege, an India in which nationality itself shall become merged in the kingdom of God."

Control of Religious Trusts. In the statement of objects and reasons attached to the Bill introduced in the Indian Legislative Council to provide more effectual control over the administration of charitable and religious trusts it is pointed out that the present measure has as its object the simplification and cheapening of the legal processes by which persons interested can obtain information regarding the working of both religious and charitable trusts, and the exercise of a more efficient control over the action of trustees. The Bill provides that any person interested in a trust may apply by petition to the District Judge for an order directing the trustee to furnish him with information as to the nature and objects of the trust and of the value and condition, management and application of the subject-matter of the trust, and of the income belonging thereto, or as to any of these matters, and also directing that the accounts of the trust shall be examined and audited. Failure to comply with such an order of the Court would be deemed a breach of trust. The draft Bill only embodies general principles. It is intended that such details as the institution of some public record of the facts regarding these trusts, the publication of audited accounts, and the relaxation of some of the conditions governing committees constituted under the Act of 1863, should be left to Provincial Legislatures.

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1919.

CALCUTTA UNIVERSITY COMMISSION V.

It was pointed out last week that the international and interprovincial evolution of India would be most facilitated by English being and becoming the lingua franca of India. A scarcely less important consideration is the question of intercommunal relations. The acid test of Indian statesmanship, that which distinguishes it from mere political opportunism, is the extent to which solicitude for the claims of minorities enters into the calculations of our leaders. The interests of Mahomedans, Christians, Parsees and even smaller communities should constantly be before the eyes of Indian statesmen. Representative and distinguished Mahomedan witnesses before the Calcutta University Commission expressed lively apprehensions regarding the consequences to their educational interests of any attempt to minimise the position of English in our system of public instruction. The Muslim deputation which waited on the Commission at Calcutta, urged that any change in the existing system would be detrimental to the advancement of English education, the importance of which has been so lately realised by the Musalmans. "The introduction of Bengali as the medium of instruction and examination in the top classes of high schools and the University," they urged, "will increase rather than lighten the burden of a Mahomedan boy, and will surely weaken his knowledge of English". The Muslim deputation from Assam also deprecated the introduction of the vernaculars as media of instruction in the top classes of high schools. The Principal of the Dacca Madrassah, Shams-ul-Ulama Abu Nar Waheed, said that, if Bengali is adopted as the medium of instruction, the Mahomedan students, especially of East Bengal, will be the greatest sufferers. "English", added the Shams-ul-Ulama, "is in the process of becoming the lingua franca of intellectual India and it would be a bad day for her, if this process is to receive a set-back." Khan Bahadur Maulvi Absanullah thought that the displacement of English as the medium of examinations would have a serious effect on the study of English; that English should not only be employed as the medium for colleges, but that it should be introduced as a medium in the 'middle stage' of secondary schools and used entirely in the high stage, and that 'any ill-advised attempt to uproot English from its present position will have a disastrous effect not only upon the study of English but also in the study of the vernacular.' Sir Abdur Rahim of Madras urged that, for the present, the test for admission to the Universities should be matriculation passed in schools where the medium of instruction has been English for at least 6 or 5 years previously. In such schools, he adds, the vernacular should be a compulsory second language until 3 or 4 years before matriculation. Sir Ali Imam thought that, whatever may be the claims of the vernaculars, English language and literature should be the most predominant subject in the Universities. There were some Mahomedan witnesses who favoured the substitution of the vernaculars for English, and some others who advocated two parallel systems, the present system and another with the vernaculars as the media of instruction. The last should really be classed with those whose views we have quoted above. In any case, the predominant weight of opinion among Mahomedan educationists and leaders is against any radical change in the present system. The Commission had no occasion to gather the opinion of other minorities. But there can be little doubt that opinion among Christians, Parsees, Jews and such others is of the same trend as among Mahomedans.

If follows from what has been said above and the previous articles that English is necessary not only for those Indians who go up to the university, but to all, of course, in varying degrees. The Commission observe that their general aim is to make the educated classes bi-lingual. The utility of a knowledge of English to the classes not generally known as educated has escaped their notice. The postman, the policeman, the artisan, the village officer, the Indian soldier, and the office peon have all better prospects of pay and promotion if they have a working knowledge of English. This is the case at present in and about large towns, but with the rapid growth of industries, to which we are all looking forward, it will become general throughout the country. Take the case of Jamsbedpur (Sakchi) where the great Tata Iron and Steel works are situated. A large town has grown up right out of what was only a few years ago a jungle. Men from all parts of India are to be found among the employees—Bengalees, Bombay men, and Madrasees. Great oil, soap, sugar, chemical, metal and leather industries are being projected, and they will be placed at centres where the raw materials for them can be most conveniently and economically assembled. A little knowledge of English adds greatly to the mobility of Indian labour. From this point of view, the spread of English education has a bearing on the industrial future of the country. Large industries involving huge capital outlays running to crores of rupees should necessarily draw their man-power as well as materials from several provinces. The Commission have not given due weight to the fact that India is fast changing, through a process of peaceful revolution, in all aspects of life, and that its educational equipment should be such as to enable her to cope with the demands of the new era. And our interests and responsibilities overseas are growing. The Commission conceive themselves to be precluded from going beyond the secondary stage, but their recommendations regarding the use of English at this stage, affect the middle stage (between primary and secondary) which is the stage at which a large majority of Indian students leave off schooling. Should this large proportion go without an opportunity of learning English? The fact is that the problem of the position of English in Indian education is a much bigger one than the Commission have conceived it to be: they had not the materials before them for a comprehensive view of the problem, and only a comprehensive view of it can furnish a right and just solution.

The considerations urged above lead to the conclusion that what is needed is a wide diffusion of a knowledge of English with a high standard of it in University. Indeed, we regard the one as the necessary basis of the other. Some years ago, the President of the British Association, Professor Dewar, we think, emphasised in his address the wide diffusion of scientific information among a people as the indispensable condition of research work of high quality at the top. That observation has a bearing in more ways than one on the position of English in Indian education. In the first place, the Commission's suggestions, several of them admirable ones, for the improvement of English-teaching in secondary schools and the standard of English in our Universities, will not yield their best results without a diffused familiarity with English sounds and words and modes of expression in the community. The next application of Professor Dewar's axiom is even more direct. The Commission recommend that only English and mathematics should be taught in English in the secondary schools up to the matriculation. As regards Science they accept Sir Gurudas Banerjee's opinion that English terms can be bodily adopted into the vernaculars. We are not sure that all vernacularists are agreed as to this device. In some other parts of the country, we have seen elaborate attempts made to invent Sanskrit terminology for scientific subjects. Even if Sir Gurudas' suggestion be generally accepted, the process can extend only to names and not to processes. The British sailor is, no doubt, able to understand what a telescope is although he knows no Greek, but we doubt if the Indian student will be equally able to understand what electrolysis or polarisation or syncope means unless he practically learns his science in English though nominally the vernacular be supposed to be the medium of instruction. Then, again, science now-a-days furnishes metaphors and parallelisms to literature as the Bible and the classics used to do in the past. The word "evolution" is the best-known instance. From biology it has extended practically to all fields of thought and is the favourite plea of Indian bureaucrats in politics and of orthodox Indians in social reform against effective action. The curious thing is that even some of the most ardent vernacularists in Bombay admitted that science subjects should be taught only in English because a boy who learned science in the vernacular at school will be handicapped in pursuing the study of it in the University. The reasons which led the Commission to recommend English as the medium of instruction for mathematics in secondary schools, are even more applicable to the physical sciences. Both Arabic and Sanskrit had made considerable advances in mathematics (especially in relation to geometry and astronomy) and a fairly full vocabulary of terms is already available in the subject. But the physical sciences are an altogether new field. The fact is that the very process of making Indian education less literary and more scientific, is bound to fix English as the indispensable medium of instruction. A diffused knowledge of science in India will thus necessarily involve a diffusion of the knowledge of English. Now, a diffused knowledge, whether of English or science, is only possible through the lower stages of education, principally the middle stage. Most pupils, more particularly of the Mahomedan and non-Brahminical communities, leave off at the end of the middle stage, and what they do not learn prior to that, they have few opportunities of learning thereafter. That is the underlying reason for the demand for English teaching, as an adjunct to the instruction in the higher form of primary schools, which the Government of Bombay have experimentally introduced in selected village schools.

THE INDIAN THEATRE.

We have received a copy of a lecture delivered by Mr. C. R. Reddy, Inspector-General of Education in Mysore, before the Amateur Dramatic Association of Bangalore on the "Drama in the East and the West". Mr. J. S. Chakravarti presided, and contributed some useful remarks. Mr. Reddy at the outset warned his hearers that his lecture would be rather in the nature of a desultory talk especially on the subject of the Telugu drama. To generalise from the Telugu drama even to the theatre in all provinces of India is, as Mr. Chakravarti pointed out with reference to Bengal, risky. Much more so is it to draw conclusions from the Telugu regarding the drama of the whole of the East. Even as regards the Telugu theatre, we are not sure that Mr. Reddy has given a true picture at the present day. His references to the Indian theatre are throughout conceived in the vein of caricature. Mr. Kolachallam Srinivasa Rao, who has written an excellent book entitled "the Dramatic History of the World," did much, we think, to improve the Telugu drama. A Dramatic Association has for many years past been engaged in developing the Tamil theatre, and some competent authorities have spoken highly of its work. In our own Presidency the Marathi stage has become a power for good, though the Gujarathi stage, observers tell us, yet shows a tendency to linger in the wilderness of eroticism. The Bengali theatre has reached a high stage of development, among Bengal's dramatists being Sir Rabindra Nath Tagore. If Mr. Reddy had travelled as much in India as out of it, his representations regarding the Indian stage would perhaps have been cast in a less depreciatory mould. Mr. Reddy's estimate of the present position of the Indian stage would have been more in perspective if he had looked at the accounts of the English theatre, for instance, at the time of Shakespere. Still more would this have been the case if he had before his mind the open air theatres in ancient Greece. High authorities have observed that the multiplication of mechanical accessories in the modern western theatre has not been all to the good. Art, it is a commonplace, consists in a strict economy of means in relation to the end intended. The most realistic ocean on the stage cannot compare in reality to the sea as you can see it any hour of the day or night from Cuffe Parade or Chowpati. Mr. Redde's imagination is fired by the thought that £ 50,000 was spent in staging a single play of the French poet, Rostan. We fancy that very little must have been left to the imagination of the audience, or, perhaps, the audience had little imagination to spare to appreciate the poet's poetry with. Byron has somewhere spoken of the "paltzy jargon of the marble mart where pedantry gulls folly."

The art of the drama, like every art, must harmonise with its environment. Mr. Reddi confessed that the first time his art consciousness was awakened was when a Parisian artist, M. Madrass, who was travelling through India, told him that he had not come across any people who had so little sense of harmony as the Hindus. He said: "Isolated patches of beauty you can find in any number in your dramatic pieces, and in your literature. But what is known as harmony, the co-ordination of these into one well-integrated whole, that was lacking." Mr. Reddi accepted this suggestion without question. As Mr. Chakravarti aptly pointed out: "To understand the harmony of art, culture is necessary. A man may stand in a garden planned and planted with superb art or harmony, but unless he has got the key or plan, he may think he is in a forest. So perhaps it was with Mr. Reddy's French critic in the garden of Sanskrit drama, without the key of spirituality." Spirituality may be regarded by some as a shibboleth of Indian apologetics but the point may well be illustrated in a more mundane sphere. An Indian banquet with its vast variety of dishes of every taste and savour, is bewildering to the European who enjoys eating one thing at a time with his whole gastric soul concentrated on it. Similarly, the European's multiplicity of sounds in music bewilders the Indian who likes to elaborate one particular melody to, what to the Western seems, tedious lengths. But the European as well as the Indian can by taking pains learn to appreciate the beauty in each other's art, whether it be culinary or dramatic. To appreciate the distance between the Indian who accepts a foreigner's impressionist verdict about his country's art and a foreigner who had studied that art and, as a consequence, has grown to appreciate it, the reader may be recommended to peruse Mr. Reddy's lecture and side by side with it, a little book, called "the Indian Theatre" by Mr. Horowitz. Mr. Horowitz shows that the dramatic art is a very ancient and well-developed one in India. He observes:

The earliest Sanskrit plays which are preserved suddenly flash upon our sight like lightning when it breaks through a dark thundercloud. They see a perfect and full-grown as Minerva when she leapt in complete armour from Jove's creative forehead. The countryman of Homer may well have doubted the miraculous conception of the goddess of wisdom, and questioned her fabled birth without ancestral lineage, but it is quite certain that Kalidasa, who generally opens the list of playwrights of Indian literature was but the heir and successor of a long line of distinguished Sanskrit dramatists—Saunillu, Bhāsa, and others whom the poet himself acknowledges. Those, two, were undoubtedly preceded by reputed writers of Prakrit's plays. This view is corroborated by the existence of an old Sanskrit treatise on dramatic art. The essay, which is ascribed to the sage, Bharata, abounds in technical Prakrit terms, most of them relating to scenic details.

The Indian drama has a great future. But it must be remembered that literature and art reflect life, and that life should flow full and free for great art and great literature to be produced.

CONSTITUTIONAL REFORM IN TRAVANCORE.

The new official year in Travancore opens with a generous gift from H. H. the Maharaja of a scheme of constitutional reforms, enlarging the legislative council on a representative basis and extending its functions on a deliberative plan. The scheme has been passed by His Highness direct instead of through the Council, which practice is in close keeping with the characteristic features of prominent Indian States e.g. "the personal rule of the Prince and his control over legislation and the administration of justice". It is a well-known rule of law that no subordinate legislature has the power to alter its constitution and H. H. the Maharaja as the sovereign legislative authority can alone do this in the State.

For a better appreciation of the democratic reforms now introduced, a brief survey of the genesis of the Legislative Assembly of Travancore will not be quite out of place here. Until so late as 1888, the work of legislation in Travancore was carried on like any other business of government in the Huzur office and thus the laws were promulgated in the shape of Regulations and Proclamations. On his accession to the throne, His Highness the present Maharaja inaugurated of his own accord for the purposes of open discussion and mature deliberation a duly appointed Legislative Council which was the first of its kind in all the Native States in India. But the first Council was very small and rudimentary, the maximum strength being only 8 out of which only two were to be non-officials all being nominated by the Maharaja.

From this Council strictly limited to the consideration of legislative business evolved the present and the larger one in 1898, in which the minimum number of members was raised to 15, the proportion of non-officials being not more than two-fifths. Until 1907, members to the Council were all nominated but in this year an elective element was introduced by empowering the Sri Mulam Popular Assembly to select a member for each of the four Revenue Divisions of the State.

The new Council as proposed by the present scheme is distinctly democratic although in its very elementary stages. The minimum strength of the Council is to be raised to twentyfive and although it is not a large one, it is at any rate a substantial advance on the existent minimum of fifteen, remembering also the fact as the Diwan observed that it is to be transitional. For the time being it is proposed to have 24 members in the Council of whom 13 will be officials and 11 non-officials. Of the later 11, the seats thrown out for election are 8 and the remaining 3 seats will be filled up by the Government out of unrepresented minorities.

This is the first time in the history of Travancore that the people will be allowed to have their voice heard in the legislative Council through their chosen and accredited representatives. And it is also the first time when the Government in any part of India, will to quote the words of the late Marquis of Salisbury "given representation not to accidentally constituted bodies, not to small sections of the people here and there, but to the living strength and vital forces of the whole population." The Jenmies and the European planting community, it is gratifying to note has each been granted one representative and one seat is given to the industrial and commercial interests. The fourth seat is to be represented by the non-official members of the Town Improvement Committees. The remaining four seats are to be filled by the four Revenue divisions of the State. In view of the controversy over the matter in British India, it is highly encouraging to note that a system of direct election has been adopted throughout in the scheme under consideration.

The two salient features of the Regulation are the rights of budget discussion and interpellation. Hitherto the people were associated only with the work of occasional legislation, hereafter it will be their privilege to participate in the work of actual every day administration.

"THE FUTURE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA."

The announcement of the 20th of August 1917 and the visit of the Secretary of State for India with the avowed object of discussing constitutional changes removed the ban on politics as an unlawful and somewhat suspicious if not shady pursuit and made it quite respectable. The impulse to our political literature already given by the memorandum of the Nineteen and the Congress-League-scheme was thus immensely strengthened. Everyone became a politician and constitution-making became for a time the fashion. Literature was flooded with schemes, specifics, panacea. In this new literature, the "Future Government of India" has its place. It is the biggest book that we have come across on the subject written by an Indian. The aim of the book is explained by the author as follows: "The problem now is to determine the lines of our advance. It is with this question of practical moment that this book deals in a critical and constructive way. The scheme of reform offered for consideration is intended to be given effect to immediately by suitable statutory provisions and is so designed as to give minimum room to contention and controversy on the ground of an abrupt and sudden break with the past". (Pref. pp. V.-VI). This practical and constructive aim is further emphasized when he says "while avoiding abstract constitution-making, the book is a systematic constructive exposition of reforms too long delayed" p. XII. It is re-iterated in the Introduction when the author says: "In the following chapters the problem of the ways and means of constitutional development in India, and the outstanding questions of Indian administration form subjects of constructive criticism." (p. II). This is a tall claim to make and not easy to substantiate. The mode of argument is emphatic and the author has no doubts. The irony of the matter is that the publication of the M. C. Report and the presentation of a Bill based on it to the House of Commons, makes the discussion of this claim of Mr. Vyasa Rao more or less academic. All non-official projects have now been thrown into the shade.

Without, therefore, making any attempt to test the claim of Mr. V. Rao so late in the day, it may be useful to indicate the nature of our disagreement with him. To begin with, his work shows in the constructive part, a nervous anxiety to acquire a reputation for sobriety and statesmanship from Anglo-Indians, official as well as non-official. This is indeed the fault of much of our political literature. The result is that in our anxiety for the approval of Anglo-Indians we conceal too much and then end by floundering in difficulties of our own making. There is too little writing with a refreshing disregard for praise or blame from interested parties—'Bureaucrats and Boxwallas'. We have been in the habit of accepting the conclusions of Western writers without critically examining them. Only in Philosophy and Religion have we shown any inclination for examining credentials, and challenging the conclusions of Western writers. This process of emancipation has not it is true gone very far even in Philosophy and Religion. But in Politics we are still content to accept almost any generalisation tending to slow down the pace of our development and thereby necessarily helping to prolong the supremacy of Europe. The use of the expressions "evolution" and "revolution" and the numberless changes rung on them are a typical example. Evolution we are told is the way of Nature, Revolution the way of ignorant, impatient man. Therefore follow the one and avoid the other. And yet is it not clear that this is a very misleading contrast? Is not Revolution very often another and a terrifying name for an obstructed Evolution? Again is not Revolution very often a name for any change which vested interests have reason to dislike and dread? And is it quite true that Nature's methods are always slow and peaceful? Landslides, earthquakes, volcanic eruptions, fires, floods and droughts, are they not processes of Nature as much as those held up for our admiration and acceptance? The travails and risks of child birth are known to every one. The pains and penalties of a new birth, new life no one can avoid. If this is so then, is not the contrast between Evolution and Revolution so frequently emphasized for our edification, a gross misrepresentation of Nature and its processes? Is not it safer and sounder to trust to an argument rather than an analogy which at the best is an uncertain guide and at the worst a snare?

Leaving this deceptive contrast aside and turning to the "lesson" of Evolution what do we find? Does Nature always show slow and steady progress as it is commonly understood? Does not the rate of growth depend on a variety of circumstances? On the Central Asian steppes grass shoots up six feet and more in a few weeks while it takes months in the plains of India. To ascertain and assess the rate of growth a study of the conditions is therefore essential. Moreover the processes of Nature are conditioned by locality. Left to themselves, there can be no borrowing from other localities. Borrowing and selection has to be done by Man. Limitations of locality are modified and transcended through human action alone. But even then only the rate of growth can be quickened. The number of stages remain the same. In mental and moral development alone, not only can the rate of growth be quickened, but what is more, the "stages" can be skipped. In fact, we soon discover, there are here no inexorable stages of growth, as we are led to believe. Man imitates, borrows, selects assimilates, in short, learns from experience which is not always his own or that of his community or even his race. It is this capacity of learning from the experience of his species in all climes and ages that helps Man to compress the experience and the development of centuries into as many years or even months. It is a common place to say that India has made great strides in the last five years. We have grown in stature though our height remains the same, scales have fallen from our eyes and we have begun to see how we have been the victims of phrases. Our mental and moral growth has been marvellous and it has necessarily quickened our political growth. It has confounded prophets—official as well as non-official. Mr. Morley, as he then was, in his first speech on the Indian Budget in August 1906 said among other things, that for as long a time as his poor imagination could pierce through, for so long a time the British Government in India must partake, and in no small degree, of the personal and absolute element. From this statement of the "dry Rationalist" the Imperial Government itself has advanced to the momentous announcement of the 20th of August 1917 in which Responsible Government is shown in perspective and accepted as the goal of its endeavour. In 1919 India has become an original member of the League of Nations. The transition from the position of a Dependency to that of the membership of the League of Nations has been made within a quinquennium. Shall we call this an instance of Revolution or obstructed Evolution? It is still the hope, it is true, of the Boxwallas, if not of the Bureaucracy, that Responsible Government may be so far off as to be practically negligible. It is their fear that the Bill in the House of Commons may bring it within near reach, if the Indians wake up and emancipate their judgment from the influence of their Anglo-Indian mentors.

Without this capacity of learning from other people the possibility of human freedom would be so narrowed down, that civilisation would be and remain a monopoly of particular races and countries. This would be the theological doctrine of Predestination applied all round. But we find that modern civilisation is an exclusive possession of no race or country. On the contrary it is rapidly becoming a common possession, a common inheritance of Man.

Mr. Vyasa Rao, however, is a rigorous "evolutionist". He is a firm believer in stages and is afraid of making "an abrupt and sudden break with the past". He ought to be shocked, on his own theory, that India did not pass through all the intermediate stages through which the Colonies passed before becoming Members of the League of Nations. It ought to be still more bewildering that India took only five years to attain a position in the International world, which it took Canada a century and more to attain. Time has thus no necessary connection with human development. The duration will be longer or shorter as the conditions require.

What Mr. Vyasa Rao calls his constructive proposals and by which he probably sets great store, are such as to satisfy the requirements of a second-rate Indian state, at the most. They are not only inadequate but, one is compelled to say, ludicrous in their application to British India. The Bill before the House of Commons is a sufficient condemnation of these constructive proposals.

To be quite fair to Mr. Vyasa Rao though his proposals of constitutional development have practically no value, his remarks on the "outstanding question of Indian administration" possess considerable merit. He is a facile writer with a gift for turning a phrase and his pages on the machinery of Criminal Justice (p. p. 161-179), to select one instance, are the most effective we have read. If instead of dealing with constitutional development, he had confined himself to the exposition of such outstanding problems, his work would have been a distinct addition to what little indigenous political literature we possess. Even as it is, considerably more than half of the book is devoted to the discussion of administrative problems. That is his forte.

POLITICUS.

THE DEPRESSED CLASSES, AND HOW TO RAISE THEM.*

(By Mr. K. SRINIVASA RAO B. A.)

These millions of Panchamas are of course equal in the eye of Law, with the other classes. The equality has been in the statute Book, but it is not in the life. Why? Because equality is unmeaning without the culture and character necessary for the exercise of equal rights of all. If we want the Panchamas to exercise equal rights with the other classes socially, we must develop the conditions under which the Panchamas will have the necessary culture and character to exercise their rights. The worst of it is that these 50 millions and more whom we have been treating as untouchables and whose shadow is pollution, are after all the backbone of society and without them the classes would be nowhere. Thus we have the tale of social tyranny of a kind unknown to the civilized world, in the protest raised by the Nandas and Kanakas of all ages and times. We have got a way of honouring our Nandas and Kanakas. We canonise them and we sing their songs. We derive all the spiritual benefit we can from their great and saintly lives. We even shed a drop of tear, when we hear the story of Nanda and when we hear anyone propound to us the great life of Nanda, we say: "Verily, Verily, here is a Pariah who taught a Brahmin. Here is a real man, the lowest of the low, as we have made him and his class to be, who has helped the highest of the high. He is really amongst the highest." Yet have we done by him and his class or community? We have taken all that they can give us but have given them nothing back, and left his community in the old state of seclusion and slavery. Nay, we treat the Kanakas and Nandas and all those men who have come up from the lowest strata of society as saints and philosophers, as only exceptions which prove the rule, as special Avatars and spiritual guides whose memory we may respect ever so much, but for all practical purposes and for social life, they and their community must still remain where they are. And this is due first and foremost to the theory that they are untouchables. That is the problem. How are we to deal with it? To get rid of it, we must get rid of the social idea that to any man this great stigma could be attached, merely because of his birth. We must knock that wrong idea on the head and the rest will follow. No man could be born untouchable or be such all his life, and propagate only untouchables to the end of time without any reference to his conditions or merits. It is this that has to be preached and practised. The class divisions and the caste divisions are no longer tenable. As was pointed out the other day at the Conversation (at Madras) presided over by Mrs. Whitehead, what we want is not merely the housing of the Panchamas or educating them or giving them money but what we want is that this idea of untouchability must first go out. Of what avail is it to build mansions for the Panchamas if you do not mean to remove the stigma from them socially? Let the higher classes go down to them and work for them as a part of social economy. The moment this attitude is adopted towards them, our work will be easy. What elevates them socially is the benefit of healthy contact, and exchange of thoughts. Just as you have the contagion of disease, you have got also the contagion of health, the contagion of joy and the contagion of good association. What the Panchamas claim is this healthy contact this healthy contagion at least from all the Social liberals, who would look upon them as their fellowmen.

* From a lecture delivered by Mr. Srinivasa Rao B. A. District Judge, Gunbar, at the Mysore Civic and Social Progress, Association, Bangalore.

There is going to be shortly an all-India Conference for propagating the anti-untouchability movement. The organisers propose to bring it about in Bangalore. It is, if I may say so, most appropriate that it should be held here. His Highness the Maharaja is full of sympathy for the Depressed classes. His Highness is a high-souled Hindu and a Patriot Prince. His Highness the Yuvaraja is a tower of strength to the Social Service movement. Sympathy with this great movement is not inconsistent with the most rigid devotion to Hinduism.

I must congratulate the Mysore State on the lead it has given to the cause. Mysore has led the way in declaring equality of all citizens in respect of educational rights and privileges. I find that the Mysore State and the Inspector-General of Education are doing their utmost to push on the backward and the depressed classes, in every possible direction. Special measures have been adopted by way of giving the Panchamas, scholarships so as to help their general education. Scholarships are also provided to help their technical education. Boarding arrangements are made in Panchama Schools. A free supply of books and slates and clothing has been provided for and their travelling fare from their villages to the schools to and fro is also given. Every inducement is offered to the parents of the Panchama boys to send their children to school. Inducements are also offered to teachers in these institutions by way of special allowances and grants.

The formation of a Depressed Class Advancement Trust, as proposed by Mr. Reddy will, I venture to think, complete the links in the chain and give the movement an organic and working machinery from top to bottom. In Madras the Hon. Mr. Paddison is in-charge of the Depressed Classes Mission and the latest order of Madras Government is that no public schools can be established in Chavadies, Agraharams and other places to which all classes have not equal access. Another rule of the Madras Government is that no Grant-in-aid can be given to any school which is not open to all classes equally. The Inspector-General of Education, Mr. Reddy is facing the situation with all strength and if he would only carry public opinion with him in fighting this great question, he would have taken a great step in the right direction. It is when the question assumes a practical form and shape that the strength and power of social liberals and the members of Social Service Associations must make itself felt. We must make up our minds and say whether we are going to vote for untouchability or anti-untouchability. That is a fair test of our practical sympathy with the cause. If we are going to deny admission in our Government Schools to the Panchamas we are once more practically condemning 50 millions of our fellowmen. We are reminding them of the stigma attached to them. We are perpetuating the untouchability without doing away with it. Are we right? In these days, when we are claiming the highest rights of self-determination, will it not be a sorry comment on our public spirit and patriotism alike, if we cannot face this problem like men and resolve that henceforward there shall be no untouchable in this great country, of Ramannajacharyas and the Alvars, of Veman, Nanda and Kanaka of Kabir, Nanak and a host of them too numerous to mention?

A HINDU WIDOW-REMARriage.

Under the auspices of the Hindu Widows' Home, Bombay, the remarriage of Bai Shantabai Bapalal belonging to Dasa Shriwasai Bani Community with Mr. Maganlal Katakchand Vaidya was celebrated on the premises of the Home on Thursday the 28th August 1919. Among those present to witness the marriage were Dr. V. B. Tendulkar, Messrs. V. T. Joshi, M. G. Mehta, T. P. Dasa, B. G. Mehta, N. M. Joshi and A. S. Wagh.

THE INDIAN BOY SCOUTS ASSOCIATION.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

The principle aim and methods of the Indian Boy Scouts Association are I presume too well known to need any recapitulation. Every movement in India has to be judged from the point of view of the future of the country. The India of tomorrow will need stalwarts who will win and guard the freedom of the Motherland. Politics apart from it must be recognised that India will hereafter have to take a greater share in the welding of human destiny and that she will be in the fuller enjoyment of civic freedom. "Nations by themselves are made and if India is to play her role nobly her children must be worthy of her and must therefore be reared in the true spirit of citizenship.

Scouting among free Nations has for its sole object the training of the youth for citizenship and the Indian Boy Scouts Association only hopes and aspires to do for the youth of India what the Boy Scout organisations of England, America, France, Japan and Switzerland hope and aspire to do for the youths of those countries. Among all self-respecting and free people Scouting is a National Movement managed and guided by private effort and though scouts have always been placed at the disposal of those governments by the various organisations they have always shown a firm determination to be free from all departmental official or State control. The I. B. S. A. holds the same creed.

In the interests of the motherland it is essential that the I. B. S. A. which is the National Scout Movement of the country should ramify and spread into every Province, District, Town and Village and that in the next few years every Indian boy and girl should be a scout. In India if she is nation the scout spirit of Brotherhood, Purity, Discipline Sacrifice, and Service must be dominating every action of her children-

In America this has been recognised and the world renowned President Wilson in a Proclamation (reprinted in the August issue of the Indian Scout) recommends to the American people that "the period beginning from Sunday 6th June to Sunday 14th June shall be the Scout Week when efforts shall be made for attending the Boy Scout Programme to a larger proportion of American Boyhood, and stated that "anything that is done to increase the effectiveness of the Boy Scouts of America will be a welfare of the Nation."

India too is having its Scout Week. Though it is perhaps too much to hope that His Excellency the Viceroy following the example of President Wilson should issue a proclamation asking the people to support the National Scout movement of their country, it is the duty of every patriotic Indian to share in the work of organising the scout week campaign in every Province, District, Town and Village. The week is from September 28th to October 5th and includes our great Scout Day Outlet. The purpose of the Week is fourfold: (1) to popularise the movement (2) to collect funds for the central head quarters (3) to organize Local support for the troops (4) to increase the circulation and advertisements in the "Indian Scout". It is essential that our friends should co-operate with our officers in their efforts to make the Scout Week a success. The head quarters 3/35 Mount Road, Madras is ever at your service and is willing to do what it can to help. In the next column that I shall have the privilege of writing in these esteemed pages, I shall give more information about the I. B. S. A. and more details about the Scout Week campaign. There is very little time to lose and as the chief Commissioner points out it is planning before hand that is needed if we should like Scouts "Be Prepared" to meet it when it comes and make the best of it. So Brother Scouts and friends, start at once if you have not already done so. All energy without organisation is futile. Organise, Organise now, and Organise well if you desire that the week should be a Grand Week.

Yours in the service of the Motherland,
V. K. KRISHNA MENON,
Commissioner, Indian Boy Scouts

The attention of our overseas subscribers is drawn to our advertisement printed below. We were obliged to increase the rates from 8 shillings to 12 shillings owing to the increase in exchange.

ADVERTISEMENTS

DO YOU WISH TO KNOW YOUR "FUTURE?"

Send your time and date of birth or your star and age or note the time when you write the letter, you will be given a full reading of your life or one year to come for ONE RUPEE ONLY.

Mr. Ghazanfar Muhammad Khac, Deputy Collector, writes from Moradabad City. "The one year life reading you sent me proved to be QUITE TRUE."

THE KALINGA ASTROLOGICAL BUREAU,
Chodavaram, Visagapatam District.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postages

	In advance.	In arrears.
Per annum.....	Rs. 5-0-0.	Rs. 6-0-0.

Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, twelve shillings (Rs. 6).

Single copies of the current year can be had at 4 annas each and any back copies at 6 annas each.

Wanted:—An accomplished and educated widow of any Caste to marry a Brahmin widower in decent position. For other particulars please apply to X C/o The Indian Social Reformer, Bombay.

Wanted:—Employment, as teacher or governess, by an educated Brahman widow with midwifery training and medical practice, well-versed in music and the Vina; proficient in English, Sanskrit, Telugu and Canarese, and speaking Tamil and Hindustani also. Please apply to K. R. C/o. The Indian Social Reformer, Bombay."

GALE'S MAGAZINE.

Linn A. E. Gale, Editor and Publisher.

Champion of Socialism, New Thought, Occultism,
Internationalism and Birth Control

Contains such articles as :

"The Birth Pangs of Revolution"
"The World That Is To Be"
"The Psychic Meaning of the War"
"Judas Iscariot and the Bolsheviki"
"Are We Hypnotized?"

The only Advanced Thought Magazine in English in Mexico. A Journal That is Indispensable to All Who Want to Understand the Signs of the Times.

$ 2 a year, American money. $ 1 for 6 months.
20c. a copy. No Free Samples. Remit by bank draft on New York or personal check.

GALE'S MAGAZINE,

P. O. Box 518

Mexico City, D. F., Mexico.

THE TATA INDUSTRIAL BANK, LD.

HEAD OFFICE, BOMBAY.

BRANCHES—CALCUTTA and HYDERABAD (Deccan)
CANNINGPORE and LUCKNOW.

Sub-Branches—

Bombay—Share Bazaar, Shroff Bazaar.

Calcutta—Barr Bazaar.

London Agents. LLOYDS BANK LIMITED.

NEW YORK AGENTS: THE GUARANTY
TRUST COY. OF NEW YORK.

AUTHORISED CAPITAL... Rs. 12,00,00,000.

SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL..... " 7,56,00,225.

PAID UP CAPITAL..... " 1,50,99,225.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS,

Sir D. J. Tata, Kt., Chairman.

Sir Sassoon David, Bart.

Sir R. N. Mookerjee, K. C. L. E.

Sir Francis Stewart, Kt.

Sir Henry Proctor, Kt.

R. D. Tata, Esq.

F. E. Dinshaw, Esq.

F. C. Rimington, Esq.

Narottam Morarjee, Esq.

Hajee Gulam Mahomed Ajaaz, Esq.

The Hon'ble Mr. Purshottamdas Thakordas. C. I. E.

A. J. Bilimoria, Esq.

Secretary, R. H. Parker.

Current Accounts opened and interest allowed on daily credit balances from Rs. 500/- to Rs. 1,00,000/- at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum. If the balance to the credit of any account does not fall below Rs. 25,000/- at any time between 1st January and 30th June, interest will be allowed during that period at 2½ % per annum. No interest is allowed unless the sum accrued amounts to Rs. 3/- Half-yearly.

Fixed Deposits. Interest allowed on Deposits fixed for one or two years and for shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank. Interest allowed on Savings Bank Accounts at 4 per cent per annum. Rules may be obtained on application.

Loans and Cash Credits are granted on approved securities.

Purchases and sales of Securities and shares effected.

Bills of Exchange purchased and collected and every description of Banking and exchange business undertaken.

14-4-18. J. PAGAN DALZELL Acting Manager.

THE YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK, LIMITED.

(Registered in Japan.)

Established 1880.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 48,000,000.

Paid up Capital.....Yen. 42,000,000.

Reserve Fund.....Yen. 23,100,000.

Head Office:—Yokohama.

Branches and Agencies at Bombay, Buenos Aires, Calcutta, Changchun, Chi-Nan, Dairen, Fengtien, Hankow, Harbin, Hongkong, Honolulu, Kaiyuan, Kobe, London, Los Angeles, Lyons, Manila, Nagasaki, Newchwang, New York, Osaka, Peking, Rangoon, San Francisco, Seattle, Shanghai, Shimonoseki, Singapore, Soerabaya, Sydney, Tientsin, Tokio, Tsingtao.

Current Deposit Accounts are opened for approved customers and Interest is allowed at the rate of 2 per cent per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 100,000, provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of banking and exchange business transacted.

N. IGARASHI

Post Box No. 207, Hornby Road, Bombay.

I. NISHIMAKI

Manager, Calcutta.

1-12-17.

Post Box No. 406, Clive street, Calcutta

THE BANK OF BARODA, LD.

Under the Patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja Gaekwar.

Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897

HEAD OFFICE BARODA.

Branches—Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, and Surat

Capital Subscribed... ..Rs. 60,00,000.

Capital Paid up' " 20,00,000.

Reserve Fund " 12,50,000.

DIRECTORS :

The Hon'ble Mr. Lallubhai Samaldas, C. I. E., Chairman
Sir Vithaldas Damodar Thackersey, Kt.

Raj Ratan Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhatti Nagar Sheth,
Baroda.

Sheth Manilal Revadas, Vadsagar.

Rao Bahadar Gunajirao R. Nimbalkar, Sur Sabha, Baroda
State.

Bhaaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., Advocate, High Court
Bombay.

M. H. Kantavalla, Esq., Agent, Maharaja Mill Co., Ld.
Baroda.

B. R. Shirsgaokar, Nasik Sabha, Baroda State.

A. N. Datar, Accountant General, Baroda State.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balance from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest which does not come to Rs. 3 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long of short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application. C. E. BANDLE.—General
15-4-18. Manager.

THE CENTRAL BANK OF INDIA, LTD

Subscribed Capital... ..Rs. 50,00,000

Paid Up Capital" 25,00,000

Reserved liability of

Shareholders" 25,00,000

Reserve Fund" 6,00,000

Head Office:—Alice Building, Bombay.

Local Branches:—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri,
Bazar, (3) Share Bazar.

Branches:—Amritsar, Calcutta, Delhi, Jharis,
Karachi.

London Agents:—London Joint City and
Midland Bank, Ld.

Current Accounts:—3 % allowed on Daily
Balances from January to June
2½ % allowed on Daily
Balances from
July to December.

12 months Deposits received at 5 % per annum.

Long and Short period Deposits received at rates
to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking Business transacted.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA.

Manager.

25-2-17

Timely advice to the Wealthy

Costly but certain remedies are in the long run cheaper than cheap and uncertain ones.

KANDARPA SANJIVINI PILLS AND OIL

are the safest and surest remedies for indigestion, constipation, loss of appetite, memory, mental, physical and nervous debility and all sorts of urinary disorders, improve impoverished blood.

Price per tin of 40 Pills Rs. 5 & per tola of Oil Rs. 10.

Both Purchased at a time Rs. 11/4—

Medical Advice and a Medical Book containing 128 pages sent Gratis and Post Free.

RAJ VAIDYA NARAYANJI KESHAVJI

Head Office :-Jamnagar, Kathiawar, (India.)

Branch :-No. 187, Kalbadevi Road, 24-8-1919. BOMBAY.

Empire Hindu Hotel

Opposite Victoria Terminus
Bombay.

(Central Situation)
Strictly Vegetarian
Charges Moderate

Fitted with
Electric Lift, Fans and Lights.

TELEGRAMS: } TELEPHONE
"FOOD," BOMBAY. } 2789.

22-6-19.

Saffron? Saffron?? Saffron???
If you wish to buy genuinely pure and best Saffron it is
SUN

BRAND

SAFFRON

ONLY

It has been largely used by Jain Temples, Maharajas, Durbars, Hakim and Vaidyas all over the country for the last 75 year and is well known for its purity and genuineness.

S. NARAEN & Co.,

17-2-18

21, Humnum Street, Fort Bombay.

SHORTHAND.

Like Other Arts and Sciences, Shorthand is subject to the Law of Progress. Based on greatly improved scientific and analogical principles, the Sloan-Duployan system (contained in a compass of 12 lessons) saves a year's laborious study, ensuring highest efficiency and speediest results. Shorthand is the open-door to many well-paid positions; at any rate it will mean advancement for you. Expert Individual or Postal Instructions for a fixed fee, payable in easy monthly instalments. Speed Classes Conducted. Specialised Training Guaranteed. Enclose stamp for booklet, etc.
CENTRAL CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE,
Q. P. O. Box No. 424, Bombay.

"EVERYTHING FOR EVERYBODY"

National Standard Portable Typewriter No. 3 (10 lbs.) Rs. 190
Oliver No. 5 (American Rebuilt) U.S. & Tab. Rs. 175; No. 7 " 200
" " 3 (Second-hand) in thorough working order. " 125
Empire No. 1 (Do.) in good working order. " 85
Multikopy Typewriter Carbons, per Box of 100 sheets. " 8
Webster Brand " Ribbons for all machines, Doz. " 21
Typewriter Oil (best 1 oz. bot.) or Eberhard Erasers, Doz. " 6
Safety Razor, Rivala Gillette, with 6 Gillette Blades (best) " 5
Do. (Made in U.S.A.) with 3 spare blades. Set " 1
Portable Electric Battery & lamp (burns 200 hours) compl. " 30
Envelope Making Machine (to make 30,000 per day), New " 35
Full Jewelled Lever Watch (Square or Octagon) Silver " 25
Cooklin's Self filling Fountain Pen (non-leakable) Gold nib " 9
UNIVERSAL BUSINESS SYNDICATE,
20-4-19. Post Box No. 424, Bombay.

HYPNOTISM

PERSONAL MAGNETISM,
WILL POWER,
NERVE FORCE—

Call what you will—

Is the intangible power that controls human destiny. It is the key to all business and social success. This power is no special gift of any one. It is latent in every one. We help you how to display it. By our system, you can learn in a few days at your own home and not only achieve success yourself, but you can influence the mind, health and actions of others to a remarkable.

Write immediately for our free booklet—The Pride of India.

THE LATENT LIGHT CULTURE,
TINNEVELLY, S. INDIA.

- Batlivala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 1 each bottle of 100.
- Batlivala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 2 each bottle of 100.
- Batlivala's Ague Mixture of Fever, Malaria, Influenza etc.
- Batlivala's Ague Pills for Malaria, Fever, Influenza etc.
- Batlivala's Tonic pills for pale people & nervous breaks down.
- Batlivala's Tooth Powder of Preserving Teeth
- Batlivala's Ringworm ointment for Ringworm Dhobi Itch etc.

May be had from all dealers in medicines or from
Dr. H. L. Batlivala Sons & Co., Ltd.
No. 12, Worli, 18, Bombay.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESS: —" Doctor K. tlivala Dader

THE BOMBAY CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK.

HEAD OFFICE :-Apollo Street, St., Bombay.

DIRECTORS—The Hon. Sir Fazulbhoj Currimbhoy (Chairman), Sir Vithal Das D. Thackersey, the Hon. Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas, Sir Stanley Reed, the Hon. Mr. C. V. Mehta, the Chief of Ichalkaranji, G. K. Davadhar, Esq., the Hon. Sir P. D. Pattani, the Raja Sahab of Malegaon.

Share Capital (fully paid) Rs. 7,00,000

1 Deposits fixed for one year and shorter or longer periods are accepted. Rates and other particulars may be ascertained from the under signed.

2 The Bank finances only registered Co-operative Societies in the Bombay Presidency on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency.

3. Accounts are audited half-yearly by a special Government Auditor, and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the "Bombay Government Gazette."
20-5-17. VAIKUNTH L. MEHTA, Manager.

THE BANK OF TAIWAN, LTD.

Incorporated by Special Charter of the Imperial Japanese Government, 1899.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 30,000,000
Paid-up CapitalYen. 22,500,000
Reserve Fund.....Yen. 5,580,000

Head Office:—Taipeh, Formosa

BRANCHES:—

LONDON	SHANGHAI	TOKIO
NEW YORK	HONGKONG	OSAKA
AMOI	SINGAPORE	KOBE
CANTON	SOERABAJA	YOKOHAMA
FOOCHOW	SEMARANG	AKO
HANKOW	MAKUNG	GIRAN
KIUKIANG	BATAVIA	KAGI
SWATOW	PINAN	KARENKO
TAINAN	SHINCHIKU	KEELUNG
TAKOW	TAICHU	TAMSUI

The Bank has also a large number of Correspondents at Home and Abroad.

Current Deposit Accounts:—are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at 2 per cent. per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 1,00,000 provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of Banking and Exchange business transacted.

K. TAKEMURA

Manager

9-12-17.

56, Esplanade Road, Fort, BOMBAY

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

Established 7th September 1906.

Incorporated under the Indian Companies' Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE:

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.

Capital Subscribed Rs. 1,00,00,000

Capital Called up " 50,00,000

Reserve Fund " 15,00,000

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½% p. a. throughout the year. On sums exceeding Rs. 1,00,000 interest is allowed by special arrangement. No interest will be allowed which does not amount to Rs. 8 per half year.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short periods @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

"Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application".

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, & CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stocks at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

H. P. STRINGFELLOW,

15-1-11.

Manager.

A Lady's Best Ornament is a Glorious Head of Hair.

A profusion of rich, soft silky, lustrous, wavy hair—where's the woman who would not like that?

There's only one oil that makes such hair and it's the far-famed

KAMINIA OIL
(Regd.)

Invaluable for ladies, and just as much for Brain-Workers and Students.

Heated head cooled, aching disappears and dandruff becomes a thing of the past. Added to all these it possesses a beautiful fragrant smell.

For superiority, awarded a Gold Medal at the Mysore Exhibition, and in great demand all over the country.

If you have not yet used KAMINIA OIL, you

have missed a fine delight and a real boon; use it now, if only once; and like many people you will prefer to use also always

Price per bottle, Rs. 1. V. P. Charges 6 annas extra
Price for 3 bottles Rs. 2-10. V. P. charges 14 annas extra
Write now, Do not delay.

Sole Agents:—

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,
(5-8-18) No. 155, Jumma Masjid Market, BOMBAY.

Now-a-Days.

All things have advanced in price. Even the vegetable ingredients used in our Atank Nigrah Pills have advanced in price.

Even the laborers demand heavy wages being dearer. Even the users have increased yet the Atank Nigrah Pills for Tonic up the system are sold at before war price i. e. at a Rupee.

Valdyia Shastri

Manishanker Govindji,

Atank Nigrah Pharmacy,

Head Office:—Jamnagar—Kathiawar.

Branch:—Kalbadevi Road, Bombay.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours. Publish Fine Art Pictures, & c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.
1-12-10. HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS.

ROYAL TONIC PILLS

powerful Nutritious and Strength Restorer. Price Rs. 14 per tin of 30 Pills.

PREPARED BY—G. VINODJEE DAMODER & Co.,

Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Commission Agents.
1-12-10. No. 3 Sutar Chawl Park, BOMBAY.

Clean
 Wholesome
 Intelligent
 Entertainment

IS A GREAT STEP

IN

SOCIAL REFORM.

When deciding on a

*PLACE OF AMUSEMENT TWO
ESTABLISHMENTS*

Should at once leap to the mind,

THE EXCELSIOR

BOMBAY'S PREMIER MODERN THEATRE

AND

THE EMPIRE

BOMBAY'S MOST PALATIAL
PICTURE THEATRE

Where Film Plays of Distinction are shown

Every Week.

A

Great Cinema Masterpiece

is shown,

Both theatres are near the Bori Bunder

and are run by the

EXCELSIOR SYNDICATE.

The Pioneer of Bombay's

AMUSEMENT WORLD.

FURUKAWA & CO.

TOKIO

The Largest Manufacturers
in the East

OF

ELECTRIC BARE COPPER CONDUCTORS,
ELECTRIC UNDERGROUND CABLES,
ELECTRIC INSULATED WIRES,
ELECTRIC ACCESSORIES,
INGOTS, RODS, WIRES,
SHEETS, TUBES,
Etc., Etc.,

SOLE AGENTS IN INDIA AND BURMA.

TATA, SONS & CO.,

BOMBAY & CALCUTTA.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS Ltd.

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.
Narsari Building, Fort, BOMBAY.

Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

11-8-17.

When YOUR EYES

need to be examined by QUALIFIED OCULISTS and by SCIENTIFIC REFRACTIONISTS of 26 year experience, FREE OF CHARGE, you cannot do better than GO TO

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR & CO.

The leading firm of Oculists, Eyesight Specialists, Manufacturing Opticians and suppliers of the patented

"KRYPTOK"

(Invisible one-piece bifocal lens.)

Toric, and all kinds of lenses,—Cylindrical, Spherical, Prismatic, &c., from pebbles as well as from best quality crown glass.

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR

Eyesight Specialist,

With 26 Years' Practical Experience.,

Holds Exceptional Testimonials from H. H. The Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, the Hon'ble Sir Lawrence Jenkins the Hon. Mr. Justice Batty, Mrs. Batty, the Hon. Sir N. S. Jhandavarkar, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beaman, the Hon'ble Sir S. L. Batchelor, the Hon'ble Sir John Heaton Mr. H. G. Bell, M. V. O., Col. R. H. Forman, B. A. M. C., P. M. O. B. Brigade, Lieut. Col. G. H. Bull, M. D., I. M. S., Lieut-Colonel Peters M. B., I. M. S., and other high personages.

(7) 379, HORNBY ROW,
Opposite the Government Telegraph Office,
62-11-10. Fort, BOMBAY.

INTENDING ASSUREES ARE INVITED TO COMPARE THE RATES AND CONDITIONS OF

The Empire of India Life Assurance Company, Limited.

WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.

Head Office II Elphinstone Circle, BOMBAY.

SEE REPORT AND OPINIONS OF THE PRESS AS TO THE REMARKABLE PROGRESS MADE BY THE COMPANY.

ENDOWMENT NON-FORFEITABLE POLICY FOR RS. 3,000.

PAYABLE AT AGE 60 OR AT DEATH, IF PREVIOUS, WITH PROFIT.

If, at any time, the assured under this plan should desire to cease paying any more premiums, he can obtain a paid-up Policy for such a proportion of the original sum assured as the number of premiums paid bears to the number agreed upon. Thus a gentleman who had assured at age 30 for a Policy of Rs. 3,000 payable at age 60 or at Death, if previous, after 5 year payments, would be entitled to a Free paid-up Policy for Rs. 500 free of future payments.

SOME OF THE DISTINCTIVE FEATURES.

- * Funds invested in Government Securities and in accordance with the Indian Trusts Act
- Policy holders can appoint their own Directors.
- 90 per cent. of Profits to Participating Policy holders.
- Lapsed policies revived without Medical Certificate.
- Liberal Surrender Values 40 per cent. of the Tabular premium paid.
- Immediate payment of Claims.
- Medical fees and stamps on Policies are payable by the Company.
- The sum assured is PAYABLE IN FULL should death occur even immediately after payment of the first premium.

GUARANTEE INSURANCE.—This Company issues Guaranteed Policies in situation of trust and responsibility. It is specially authorized to guarantee the employees of the Post Office

MONTHLY PREMIUM.

AT AGE 20, Rs. 6-9-0.

AT AGE 25, Rs. 7-8-0.

AT AGE 30, Rs. 8-14-0.

AT AGE 35, Rs. 10-13-0.

AT AGE 40, Rs. 12-12-0.

AT AGE 45, Rs. 15-10-0

22-9-10.

Proposal Forms and full Particulars may be obtained from any local Agent in India or from ALLUM, BHARUCHA & CO. Managers.

IN INDIA

EVERY ONE KNOWS.

whom it does concern that we are foremost in supplying the best COSSI SILK SUIT PIECES

suitable for the season. These pieces are strong, fancy and durable, and have been specially manufactured for India Market. Each piece guaranteed for One Suit Complete.

Price Rs. 10 per piece.

Write to—THE BHARGAVA COMMERCIAL SOCIETY,
2-19. Benares City.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER. Contract Rates for Advertisements.

Number of Insertions.	1 Inch.		2 Inches.		3 Columns.		4 Columns.		5 Columns.		Page.
	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.
13	11	0	18	0	24	0	30	0	60	0	87	0
26	18	0	26	0	30	0	60	0	87	0	155	0
52	25	0	38	0	60	0	87	0	155	0	300	0

Casual advertisements at Rs. 4 per line for the 1st insertion and Rs. 2 per line for succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

WONDERFUL TONIC AND

MOUTH-REFRESHER

JINTAN.

This is a safe and efficient remedy in all kinds of diseases or disturbances of the digestive organs. It is composed entirely of VEGETABLE INGREDIENTS made from the prescription of the following eminent medical men viz—

NORIHIRO MIWA, M. D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy,
ZENJIRO INOUE, M. D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy
and testified as to its efficacy by

Baron J. MATSUMOTO, M. D., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Army.

T. MITAMURA Esq., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Navy.

As a digestive it is unequalled and will not disturb the functions of the most delicate stomach. Its antiseptic properties render it very efficacious in warding off disease and at the same time it imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath of the user.

By virtue of its aroma, it effectually masks the odour of Tobacco and Alcoholic Spirits.

It acts beneficially on the vocal cords and has found much favour with public speakers, actors, singers and those whose vocation necessitates a severe strain on the throat.

GOOD FOR

Biliousness, Headache, Vertigo, Nausea; Indigestion, Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, etc., etc.

To maintain general health 2 to 3 pills may be taken occasionally, well masticated.

Price—20 Pills Packet Rs. 0-1-0. 90 Pills Packet, with Tin case., Rs. 0-4-0; 360 pills Packet with fancy case., Rs. 1-0-0

Prepared by Messrs. MORISHITA Co., OSAKA, JAPAN.

Sole Agents: Jintan Agency (G. R. Chaubal), Juma Masjid, BOMBAY.

At each opening 3 pills come here automatically!

FOR PAINS
AND ACHES
SPRAINS ETC.
USE:—

AMRUTANJAN.

The magical pain balm extant. Cures all aches & pains. Costs 8 As. Sold everywhere.

By Appointment to H. E. the Governor
Sir George Sydenham Clarke of
Bombay.

HARDAS VALJI,

(KING OF INDIAN CONFECTIONERS)
Highest Confectioner, Caterer and Grand
Military Contractor.

Proprietor—RATINATH,
Chitra Bazar & Grant Road,

BOMBAY.

20-4-19.

DENTISTRY.

Extractions Painless;
Terms Very Moderate;
Gold Crown, Bar and
Bridge Work a Speciality
(teeth without plate);
Latest Successful Treatment
for Pyorrhoea (pus in gums).

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

(Hours: 8-1-30 & 5-7-30; Daily.

(Sundays—From 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.)

ADROOS BUILDING,
NEW CHARNI ROAD,
GIRGAON, BOMBAY.

E. R. AMAT,
Surgeon Dentist.

1-5-19.

THE INDIAN * SOCIAL * REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY MORNING.

Office:—EMPIRE BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD, FORT.

Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

Vol. XXX BOMBAY—SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1919. No. 4.

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard."
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

—:—:—

The Depreciation of the Vernaculars.	Distress in Backergunge.
Pro-Hindu—Not Anti-Christian.	Professor Marshall's Great Book.
What Dr. Mackichan said.	Bombay Educational Conference Report.*
The Stage in England.	Humanitarianism in India.
Mr. N. M. Joshi's Deputation.	Disposal of the Dead.
Mr. Jadhav's Evidence before the Joint Committee.	Back to Hinduism.
One of the Things to be Indemnified.	Bolshevism and Socialism.
High Officials Quoting Popular Leaders.	A Panchama Guru.
Total Prohibition a Business Question.	Burma and Constitutional Reform.
	Disease and Marriages.
	A Panchama Conference.

NOTES.

—:—:—

The Depreciation of the Vernaculars : The neglect of the vernaculars in Bengal and else-where is not due to over-attention to English and will not be removed by less attention to it. It is due to the aristocratic structure of society and the bureaucratic structure of the administration, in both of which the common people—the masses who know only the vernaculars—had no part or lot except that of obeying the behests of those above them. The break-down of the social and administrative systems in recent years and the advent of the forms and the spirit of democracy, are making intercourse with the masses possible as well as necessary. The educated Indian was for a long while under the illusion that by making convincing speeches and drafting unanswerable memorials on the divergence between the principles and the practice of the administration, he could effect all necessary improvements. The illusion continued to be fostered till, driven to a corner, the educated Indian was told, not that his arguments were bad, but that he did not represent the masses. The immediate effect of this report was, perhaps, to stimulate demagoguism. English-educated men foreswore social and religious reform, defended caste and superstitions, and did their best to prove to the masses that they were in no way more enlightened than themselves. But it is an ill-wind that blows nobody any good. Vernacular journalism began to flourish, vernacular orators sprang up everywhere. This reaction is now steadying itself. The point of importance in the present context is that there is in operation a powerful national sentiment making for the growth of the vernaculars which did not exist even in Lord Curzon's time, and that, apart from all educational reforms, the vernaculars can never fall into such neglect as they fell into in the last century. The extension of the franchise, adding as it will to the political importance of the masses, will be a powerful stimulus to the cultivation of the vernaculars by the English-educated classes.

Pro-Hindu—Not Anti-Christian : Referring to our allusion to the incident of a Christian visiting Ramakrishna Paramahansa in the company of Pandit Sivanath Sastri, and the Paramahansa's declaration that he regarded Jesus Christ as an avatar of God, the Hindu Missionary observes that a person here and a person there may be taking Christ as a great Being, but a day is yet to come when Christ is generally accepted as an avatar of Vishnu. Surely, the views of an inspired saint like the Paramahansa on a question of this kind, are of more weight and value than the opinion of the man in the street, which most of us are in spiritual matters. In a remarkable address on Krishna delivered in Allahabad on Janmashtami day, the well known Hindu scholar and thinker, Babu Bhagavan Das, spoke of Christ as one of the avatars or incarnations. We repeat, therefore, that the Paramahansa's attitude is more truly the attitude of India than that of any number of us whose vision is bounded by the necessities of our position. The Hindu Missionary goes on to complain that Sir Narayan Chandavarkar is quoted in an American publication as having observed: "The ideals that lie at the heart of the Gospel of Christ are slowly but surely permeating every part of Hindu society and modifying every phase of Hindu thought." Assuming that Sir Narayan's words are rightly quoted, what is there wrong or reprehensible in them? The Hindu Missionary should know that it is the genius of Hinduism to welcome light, to assimilate truth, from all sources. Has not Hinduism been influenced by Mahomedanism, and has not Mahomedanism been influenced by Hinduism? Are not the ideals of Christ's Gospel comprised by those of Hinduism also. Some years ago, we read the Gita and the "Imitation of Christ" together, marking analogous passages. Some of the resemblances were very striking. In our opinion, no one has understood the wonderful underlying catholicism and infinite charity of Hinduism, who believes he is doing it a service by picking holes in other religions. Ramakrishna Paramahansa would have found nothing reprehensible in Sir Narayan's statement; indeed, he would have rejoiced that it was so. We think, however, that there is much in the following observations of the Hindu Missionary for Christian Missionaries to ponder: "The one thing that is surely anti in India is that the Christian missionary movement is anti-Hindu from one end of it to the other. They desire that India should soon become a Christian land. Hindu India desires to remain Hindu, and this pure and holy and legitimate desire is said to be anti-Christian! Hindu India refuses to be Christianised; Hindu India loves to remain Hindu, loves her Vedas, loves her Scriptures, loves her Saints and Sages, loves her divine incarnations, loves her deathless Rishis, loves her noble spiritual heritage, and hopes—poor India only hopes, helpless India only hopes, to remain Hindu! And all this is said to be anti-Christian. When one loves himself, it is not true to say that he hates his neighbour.

It is right to say that there is a spirit that is pro-Hindu; it is not right to say that spirit is anti-Christian."

What Dr. Mackichan said: A valued correspondent who was present at the Bombay representative Council of Missions when Dr. Mackichan spoke, writes that what he said was in effect as follows: "One of the difficulties we have to face in the immediate future is the prevailing antipathy to anything which is not indigenous to this country. This has led to an anti-Christian feeling in some quarters, for Christianity is looked upon as a foreign religion. This is only temporary and this temporary phase will give place to the consciousness that only Christ can meet the true needs of the people of India." We gladly publish this correct version. But we would again say that, in our experience, there is far less feeling against Christianity as a foreign religion today than some years ago. We admit that, unfortunately, there is somewhat acute racial feeling but it has nothing to do with religion. As regards Dr. Mackichan's belief that only Christ can meet the true needs of India, it is natural in a Christian Missionary gentleman. India's true needs are as hard to define as those of any other country, and since countries that have long been Christian have, apparently, not as yet had their true needs met by the Church, it is rather sanguine to preach it as a panacea for India's ills. But we respect the faith that is in Dr. Mackichan and shall say no more about it.

The Stage in England. On the opening day of the Conference of the Theatre, organised by the British Drama League, at the end of last month at Stratford-on-Avon, Mr. Archer pleaded for the removal of the obstacles which block the path of an already existing and vigorous movement for the betterment of British dramatic art. He concluded by saying that the commercial theatre of today was little more than a great gambling hell, where the speculator took great risks in the hope of still bigger profits. The comment of the Challenge on this observation is worth pondering over: "In short," writes our contemporary, "it comes back to the question of what is the public taste in these matters. In industry we find a new movement growing in every land for the destruction of competitive individualism, and the substitution of service to the community for a greedy search for profits at all costs. The same phenomenon is also true of drama. What is required is an educative programme which shall uplift the public taste to higher levels. At present the answer always is: "It will not pay." Without stopping for the moment to consider whether this is true, the time has come when we must bravely consider in Art, as we are already bidden to do in industry, whether that is always to remain the first consideration." Our contemporary goes on to plead for "a co-equal alliance" between the Church and the stage, as being calculated to bring untold benefit to each.

"It requires for its consummation" concludes the Challenge "an unflinching courage and a sound wisdom, but it is not impossible of attainment. The theatre must be robbed of its commercialism, its impurity and its frivolous brainlessness. The church must drop its scorn, its censoriousness, its didactic claims. Every individual can help on the achievement of these ends. The Actors' Church Union, the British Drama League, and the League of Arts for National and Civic Ceremony, are only a few of the agencies whose efforts should be energetically furthered. Life cannot be divided into exclusive departments—recreation, business, religion. Without beauty life is incomplete, and with incomplete life there can exist no Christianity. For the Master of all arts came that we might have life and that we might have it more abundantly."

Mr. N. M. Joshi's Deputation: In view of the ignorant or prejudiced comments in certain quarters on Mr. Joshi's deputation to the Labour Conference at Washington, we appreciate the very fair observations of the Deccan Ryot. Writes our contemporary: "We congratulate the Government of India on the election of Mr. Joshi than whom a better person could not have been found for the purpose. We know that Mr. Joshi has certain disqualifications for the character which he has been now invested with. As he admitted at the entertainment given to him, he has never been a labourer himself. Nor has he ever lived among the labourers and become one with the people whose representative he is to be. He goes to a Conference where distinguished labourers, men who have passed through the various stages of labour life, will meet to assert their rights and discuss their needs. Mr. Joshi's position in such an assembly will not be very comfortable. But that is not his fault. Nor was it possible to avoid the awkwardness of the position. The conditions of our labourers is so hopelessly unsatisfactory that they could not have been reasonably asked to organise themselves for electing a representative. So far as we know, the higher kinds of our Mill-labourers have got few among them who could properly voice the opinions of their brethren: Mr. Joshi, though not himself a labourer which we wish he had been, is a man of generous sympathies and no prejudices such as mar the character of our educated people will stand in the way of his fully and frankly voicing their grievances at the Conference. He knows the labour life in Bombay as well as any non-labourer could know it. Under the circumstances and in the absence of a more suitable representative, we must be satisfied with his nomination." It is not fair, by the way, to lay undue stress on Mr. Joshi's statement that he was not a labourer. In England, the Labour Party now consists of manual as well as brain workers, and that is the right classification.

Mr. Jadhav's Evidence before the Joint Committee: A special word of praise is due to Mr. B. V. Jadhav for the moderation and thoughtfulness which inspired his evidence before the Joint Committee of Parliament on constitutional reform. We have never admitted the validity of the argument that a majority under any circumstances should not need special protection. A minority is a numerically backward category. There are other forms and kinds of backwardness which equally require special provision. Mr. Jadhav's suggestions followed the lines of the amended resolution adopted, at the All-India Moderate Conference held last year on the motion of Sir Narayan Chandavarkar. Mr. Jadhav's evidence is reported as follows in India of the 5th instant: "Mr. Jadhav was heard on behalf of the Mahrattas, the backward classes, and the Deccan Ryots Association. Mr. Jadhav stated that the Bombay Presidency was not homogeneous, and that the Thana district ought to be taken into consideration along with the Central and Southern Divisional Districts. In this district Mahrattas and others were very backward and illiterate. The Mahrattas and Kunbis ought to be classed together, and on behalf of them and of the Deccan Ryots he asked for a certain protection in the electorates—not communal representation, but the reservation of certain seats in the general electorates, at any rate for a few years. He asked for 30 per cent of the seats to be reserved. The Mahrattas had done greater service to the Empire, but he did not ask for any distinction. By "backward" classes he meant all whose literacy was below 10 per cent."

One of the Things to be Indemnified: One of the more balanced speeches in the debate on the Indemnity Bill was that of General Hudson who put the case for the military employed in enforcing martial law. He pointed out that the Army did not enjoy being called upon to deal with the civil population: that, in fact, it was most distasteful to it having to do so. Moreover, the British troops were expecting to go home after a protracted absence, and it was a great disappointment to them to be stopped and ordered to the Punjab in the hot weather. But, as soldiers, they had no option but to carry out orders. The Military Code had only one reference to martial law, and it was that the civil power will take measures to indemnify the troops for carrying out orders under martial law. We cannot but admit that there is a good deal of force in General Hudson's contention that the position of the troops in the controversy between the Executive Government and the popular leaders, was vindictive. But the General himself referred to a flagrant case which shows that there is another side to the question. A missionary lady, Miss Sherwood, was dragged from her bicycle, cruelly beaten, and left for dead by the Amritsar mob. This was, perhaps, the most cowardly deed during the riots, and every sane man would demand that those concerned in it should be severely punished. The authority administering martial law in the area, however, was not satisfied with this. He ordered that all persons (Indians, of course) should crawl on their hands and knees if they happen to pass the place where the assault was committed. General Hudson's comments on this extraordinary measure are suggestive: "It is easy to criticise the orders issued by the officer in command at Amritsar, but the circumstances were altogether exceptional, and the punishment, though humiliating, was not such as to cause danger to life or physical hurt. Except on one occasion when a body of prisoners was brought down the street in which Miss Sherwood had been assaulted, no compulsion was brought to bear on any individual to submit to the order. It remained in force for a period of five days. There is good reason for the belief that except for the party of prisoners already mentioned those who were subject to the order came voluntarily to submit to it for the sake of the notoriety or martyrdom. One man, after going down the street on his hands and knees three times had to be stopped giving further exhibitions. The order was of course an unusual one and not such as might have been considered necessary by other officers in like circumstances. The officer in command at Amritsar will doubtless be prepared to justify his action should he be called upon to do so." There is not a hint here that the authorities disapproved of this extraordinary order which is more consonant with the mentality of a Prussian apostle of the mailed fist than with that of a British officer brought up in an atmosphere of freedom. The General himself admits that other officers in like circumstances might not have considered such an order necessary. And yet this high-handed order involving the humiliation of innocent citizens is to be covered by the Act of Indemnity! Even the flogging may in time be forgotten but this compulsory crawling will rankle.

High Officials Quoting Popular Leaders: His Excellency the Viceroy in his speech at the opening of the Simla session of the Imperial Legislative Council quoted Mr. Gandhi as having declared that educated men were behind the Punjab troubles. Mr. Gandhi promptly contradicted His Excellency and said that what he had stated referred to Ahmedabad only, and had no reference whatever to the conditions in the Punjab of which he knew nothing. Mr. Hailey in the course of the debate on the Indemnity Bill cited the Hon. Mr. Srinivasa Sastry as having admitted in a public speech that the Punjab Government was justified in proclaiming martial law in the province. The present writer happened to be present when Mr. Sastry made that speech. By the way, the Servant of India printed important parts of the speech which had not been reported. Mr. Sastry, we think, did say something to the effect that the Punjab Government might have had good reasons for taking strong measures, but he also denounced in scathing terms the use of aeroplanes, and the whipping in the streets news of which had come, if we remember, on the day that he spoke. Mr. Hailey thinks it fair to embroil a popular leader with his people by referring to a casual and tentative remark in a long speech which contained a good deal diametrically opposed to the views he expressed in the debate. Sir William Vincent quoted Mr. Gandhi in replying to the debate, as supporting the Indemnity Bill and, indeed, as wishing that it should go further. Nothing can exceed the grace and force of the manner in which the Hon. Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, after lowering his weapon for a moment to a mark of respect for Mr. Gandhi, thrust it home with the hope that the Home Member may soon rescind the order which prohibited Mr. Gandhi from entering the Punjab.

Total Prohibition, a Business Question: Speaking at a great meeting in London under the auspices of the Temperance Council of Christian Churches at which His Eminence Cardinal Bourne presided, Sir Donald Maclean the leader of the Liberal Party in Parliament, narrated the following incident. "Not so many weeks ago I was talking to an American gentleman of the highest official position. We were talking general politics. He was asking me about politics here, and incidentally we touched upon the question of the liquor trade. Said he, "I am not a teetotaler, and I do confess that since I have been in this country I have taken more light wine in three or four months than I have in the previous six years in the United States; but" he said, "if I went back to the United States, and voted on this question, I should vote 'dry.'" I said, "Just tell me a reason or two." "Well," he said, "I will. "Don't you be mistaken in the idea that the final moving cause for America taking this great decision was a moral, or even a religious one," he said. "I grant you that they started it, and they maintained it, but the dominating final cause was the business future." He told me that in his own State, which was "wet," industries were leaving it for an adjoining "dry" State—and his own State since then has gone "dry." I repeat again, that this question is most of all a business question, a national efficiency question; and I am not afraid to argue that out with anybody on those grounds." We are indebted for a report of Sir Donald Maclean's speech, to that excellent monthly, the Indian Temperance Record, published at Calcutta.

Distress in Backergunge. We have received an appeal for help to relieve the distress in Backergunge signed by Mr. Aswini Kumar Datta, President, Backergunge District Association, Barisal and Mr. P. L. Ray, President, of the Local Hitaisbini Sabha, Calcutta. It is stated that the distress in the district is getting more and more acute. The signatories observe: "The out-turn of Aus crop has not appreciably improved the situation. We had sufficient stocks of Amon rice for the winter crop was good, but export and profiteering have placed them beyond the reach of the middle and the lower classes of people. The Bhadraloks and the landless labourers are at present in a miserable plight. Thousands are on the very brink of starvation. The whole District is suffering very much from the abnormal rise in prices of food-stuffs, clothes and other necessities of life; but certain parts of it are grievously affected."

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1919.

PROFESSOR MARSHALL'S GREAT BOOK.

The first volume of Professor A. Marshall's Principles of Economics was published in 1890. Since then the public have been waiting expectantly for the second volume. This, however, is not to come. In his preface to his great book just published, entitled "Industry and Trade,"* the eminent economist takes the public into his confidence and tells it how the publication of the second volume came to be put off. He writes :

For many years after the publication in 1890 of the first volume of my proposed complete Principles of Economics, I continued to work at its second volume: part of the type for that was set up in 1904 and is now used at last—I am told that this long waiting of type for its ultimate appearance is unique. Shortly afterwards I decided to bring out separately a more or less independent volume, devoted to Industry and Trade. Later on two volumes appeared to be necessary for the purpose: and at last it seemed best to round off the present volume in such manner that it would be an independent unit.

Professor Marshall adds that his progress has been delayed not only by weak health and constitutional unfitness for rapid work; but also by heavy professional duties till 1903; by preparing evidence and memoranda for various Royal Commissions on currency and other matters; and by service on the Royal Commission on Labour 1891-5, during which, he says, he received from working men and other witnesses, and from members of the Commission, the most valuable education of his life.

Professor Marshall goes on to say how the first bent of his studies was towards Socialism. For more than a decade he remained under the conviction that the suggestions which are associated with the word "Socialism" were the most important subject of study for him. But the writings of socialists generally repelled him as much as they attracted him, because they seemed far out of touch with realities: and, partly for that reason, he decided to say little on the matter, till he had thought much longer. He goes on to sum up his mature conclusions in a passage in his preface, which deserves wide attention:

Now, when old age indicates that my time for thought and speech is nearly ended, I see on all sides marvellous developments of working-class faculty: and partly, in consequence, a broader and firmer foundation for socialistic schemes than existed when Mill wrote. But no socialistic scheme, yet advanced, seems to make adequate provision for the maintenance of high enterprise, and individual strength of character; nor to promise a sufficiently rapid increase in the business plant and other material implements of production, to enable the real incomes of the manual labour classes to continue to increase as fast as they have done in the recent past, even if the total income of the country be shared by all. The average level of human nature in the western world has risen fast during the last fifty years. But it has seemed to me that those have made most real progress towards the distant goal of ideally perfect social organization, who have concentrated their energies on some particular difficulties in the way, and not spent strength on endeavouring to rush past them.

Professor Marshall's emphatic testimony to the rise in the average level of human nature in the Western world during the last fifty years, is in pleasing contrast to the conclusions of Professor A. R. Wallace in his old age. Professor Marshall dates his preface in June last, with his eyes wide open to the war and its consequences. The acts of Germany and the other belligerents, not to speak of the Bolsheviki, have not induced him to qualify his opinion regarding the rise of the level of human nature. If, however, the average of human nature has risen, that fact must express itself in the improvement of social institutions, including industrial. Professor Marshall's last sentence in the passage quoted above has a special lesson for Indian public men.

The present volume is a study of industry and trade with special reference to the technical evolution of industry, and its influences on the conditions of man's life and work. We are glad to know that it is to be followed by a companion volume which is to be occupied with influences on those conditions exerted by the resources available for employment; by money and credit; by international trade; and by social endeavour. The work, though primarily dealing with economic questions, has a much wider purview. Its outlook is broad. Every class of reader will, we are sure, profit by a perusal of this book. Without letting go for a moment the special aims before him, Professor Marshall glances at many objects of great practical importance, and his observations always impress one as being wise and helpful. He has chosen as the motto for his great work a phrase which forcibly recalls a saying of the Upanishads: "The Many in the One, the One in the Many." He explains the appropriateness of his selection thus:

Economic conditions and tendencies show, even more than most others, the One in the Many, the Many in the One: for those, which prevail at any place and time, reflect the habits of action, thought, feeling, and aspiration of the whole people, or at least some large part of them. Each reacts on the character of the population: but the roots of all are deep set in the human characteristics of the place and time: thus the One is seen in the Many. And conversely each tendency embodies in some degree almost every influence, that is prominent then and there: inasmuch that a full study of it would present incidentally a nearly complete picture of the whole: thus the Many are seen in the One.

There are few references to India in this book. In one place (p. 653) Professor Marshall takes occasion to emphasise Britain's special responsibility in respect of the trade and industry of India. He observes that in all international trade policies,

* Messrs Macmillan & Co., price 18 shillings net.

Britain's self-governing Dominions are able to take full care of their own interests. "But," he adds, "her Crown Colonies and India are not in equally strong positions; and therefore Britain is morally bound to attach to each of their interests at least as great a weight as if it were her own." In particular, adds Professor Marshall, in a footnote, no plea should be entertained for Protective taxes on imports into Britain, competitive with some of her own industries, however strong the national need for developing them may be, "unless a similar principle is applied to selected Indian manufactures, whose youthful strength is insufficient for competition on nearly even terms with rival imports from Britain and other western countries."

BOMBAY EDUCATIONAL CONFERENCE REPORT*

THE PLACE OF ENGLISH IN INDIAN EDUCATION.

We have received a copy of the report of the Second Bombay Educational Conference held in Poona in June 1918 under the Presidentship of the Hon. Mr. Srinivasa Sastry. The report is opportune inasmuch as it contains some expressions of opinion on the question of English in our educational system, which are of special interest in view of the recommendations of the Calcutta University Commission. Professor V. B. Naik, President of the Shiksha Vichara Mandala, and Chairman of the Reception Committee of the Conference, contributes an introduction to the Report in the course of which he refers to the allegation that the wastage in secondary schools is due to "the desire to learn English, in spite of insufficient pecuniary means and slender intellectual capacity, growing unchecked, so that the mental development and acquisition of knowledge which would be possible for them in a place of vernacular instruction are checked and superseded by a short-lived attempt to master a difficult tongue". Professor Naik comments as follows on this allegation:

Another remedy proposed for preventing wastage in schools is to make the vernacular continuation schools more attractive, so that the temptation to waste time and energy on the acquisition of a difficult foreign language like English may not prove too strong in the case of poor and intellectually inferior students. This, however, is a dream. English may be a difficult tongue to learn, and its use as the medium of instruction, so far at least as secondary institution is concerned, may be a long-standing and keenly felt grievance, but the almost universal feeling, (nay, conviction) is that a knowledge of English must for a long time to come form an essential feature of any course of instruction, whether general or technical. The keenest advocate of the vernaculars would under existing conditions rather have English used as the medium of instruction than lose the advantages of a knowledge of English if his choice lay between the two. Every boy knows that ignorance of English means a future of poor prospects and crippled activities, and tries, if he can, to prevent his doom being sealed in this fashion. Vernacular continuation schools must continue to exist for the unfortunate ones, but it is useless to expect them to relieve to any great extent the strain on English Schools. While reiterating its demand for the recognition of vernaculars as media of instruction and examination, it is to be noted that the Conference advocated the introduction of English in full primary schools during the last three years of the course, as an optional subject of instruction.

* Published by Mr. Kumbhare, Secretary, Shiksha Vichara Mandala, Poona.—Price one rupee.

The Hon. Mr. Srinivasa Sastry also referred to the matter in his Presidential address. We are not able to correlate some of his remarks at the commencement with those that follow, but his concluding observations are sufficiently clear. He said:

I am one of those who think that it is intrinsically wrong to afford instructions to children in the lower grades through foreign languages. Vernacular must be the national medium of instructions in the primary stage, and I am strongly of opinion that we should expand this system of teaching all subjects through the vernaculars into all schools, even secondary schools. So far as higher education is concerned, English language enables us to become more refined and to enjoy a larger outlook and to have the capacity of leading a higher life when we receive the benefit of higher education. But I am one of those who think that the adoption of English as the necessary medium for higher education is by itself a denial of the benefit that I have here described, to a large number of our population who, however, are all intellectually fully qualified to enjoy those benefits. They are deprived by an artificial barrier. An apt comparison may be given by stating that you may suppose that it is the duty of the Railway Companies to build first class conveyances. But suppose that the Railway Companies instead of putting doors have very small openings. Then you would not consider that the Railway Companies would make a great profit. By insisting on having English as the medium of instruction in higher education, Government close the benefit of higher education to all who are unable to acquire a certain amount of liberal English scholarship. In their case Government are somewhat in the position of the Railway Company who does not know its own business and inflicts a wrong on the people who wish to serve its interest. The Railway Company thus cripples its own usefulness. The Government in that case do not fully realise the difficulties of that very large proportion of our people to whom the acquisition of a foreign language is a grievously added difficulty in order to receive the benefit of secondary education. A little forethought on our part and a little co-operation from the University would make it possible for us to convey this benefit to our people through the Vernacular, and I know no reason whatever why that reform in our educational system should be, at all, withheld or even postponed. But, as to the advantages of expanding the system of vernaculars for higher instruction I am still somewhat sceptic. I see no halting place between the use of the vernacular as the medium of instruction in secondary schools and their use for instruction in the college department. I think those who advocate the use of the vernacular for higher education are in a position which is logically sound; but logic does not cover all human affairs. By the mere process of abstract reasoning you cannot get far and far away from the field of practical politics, and it seems to me no practical politics to think of the vernacular as the medium of instruction for colleges. That problem we may well leave to those who come after us and, perhaps, to the succeeding generation.

The italics are ours. No doubt, Mr. Sastry was using the term "higher education" in two different senses when he complained first, that by insisting on having English as the medium of instruction in higher education, Government closed the benefit of higher education to all who are unable to acquire a certain amount of liberal English scholarship, and, next, when he declared himself somewhat sceptical as to the advantage of expanding the system of vernaculars for higher instruction.

HUMANITARIANISM IN INDIA.

Note:—While humanitarianism consists in many forms of social service, the object in view of this article is with reference to lower animals.

If there is any country which has a deep-seated interest in humanitarianism it is India. The principal reason is that it is an essential part of Hinduism. Cows and monkeys have a special religious significance; other animals have a semi-religious significance. The Vishnupurana says that before we are born as men, we are to pass through various births—first we are born as standing forms of life, such as plants; then as aquatic animals, such as fish; then as amphibians such as tortoise; then as birds and beasts; and, lastly as monkeys, and from monkeys we are borne as men. This theory of evolution shows that man has blood relationship even to lower animals; and, therefore, he is in duty bound to have some regard for them.

In spite of all this, we find that in India the principle of humanitarianism has not been carefully and sufficiently followed up. Leaving out of consideration the wild animals for whom God directly provides all necessaries of life, think of our domestic animals who have been deprived of all freedom which is the birthright of every living creature. The very fact that they are our slaves and our servants, inevitably requires that we should be concerned about their welfare. Think of the dirty and unsanitary sheds where our cattle live; think of the many diseases to which they so frequently fall a victim; think of the inadequate supply of food and water; think of the heavy and overtime labour to which they are so vigorously subjected and think of the bamboo sticks so mercilessly broken on their backs, just because they cannot drag an over-loaded cart or an ekka. These thoughts should appeal to the conscience of every man to whatever race or religion he belongs.

Animals are a part of God's great creation. He has made us all their trustees. According to Solomon 'a man hath no pre-eminence above a beast.' In a higher sense this is not at all contradictory to the statement in the first chapter of Genesis that God gave man 'dominion over the fish of the sea and over the fowl of the air and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth.' The reason given by Solomon for his statement is 'what befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them: as the one dieth so dieth the other; yea, they have all one breath..... and all is vanity'. On the other hand, God made man 'after His own image'. Man bears a stamp of God himself. Animals were made to serve man, and man was made to serve God. Therefore, man has a higher purpose to fulfil in life. God does not treat man unjustly or cruelly, nor should man treat animals unjustly or cruelly. A man is, therefore, morally bound to show mercy to these 'dumb creatures of God'. And isn't it strange that when we see a man being troubled by an animal, we run immediately for his assistance; but when we see an animal being troubled by a man, we simply overlook the matter. Remember, this deliberate neglect is not only a crime legally but also morally, and you are responsible to God for it. But one should not let loose one's cattle to eat up or destroy the vegetable gardens or crops of a neighbour, thinking that no one is going to hurt them, otherwise the Cattle Trespass Act I of 1871 will have its own course.

Should one eat meat? This is a question that every individual can answer for himself. Christians and Mahomedans eat flesh of certain animals, not all. There is a very large section of Hindus who freely eat meat. Therefore, generally speaking, Hinduism, like Mahomedanism and Christianity, does not definitely forbid meat eating. But the question is not of meat eating but of good treatment towards animals. We may kill certain animals for eating when the time comes for doing so; but before doing this, let us treat them and our domestic animals with kindness. But, as far as possible, none of our best and most useful animals, such as cows, should be slaughtered only to satisfy hunger.

Before man was made, animals were made. This was the Divine plan. Probably the world could not have lived without them. In India, at least, the people would have been starved to death if there were no such animals as cows and buffaloes. Love to domesticated animals is scarce in India. It should not be so. In the West, people love their animals regardless of the amount of service they render them. Animals are a great asset to a nation's resources. It is also very often that most of our domestic animals teach us the lessons of service, faithfulness, love and patience.

It is the time honoured custom among the luxurious sections of all the countries to indulge in hunting. This practice gives a little amusement and a sense of brava to the hunter; but it deprives the world of one of God's fair and free creatures. If it is not an act of inhumanity, it is not an act of humanity either. This sort of amusement which is so common in all countries and communities should be discouraged.

In conclusion, the question may be asked, 'Is vivisection in the interests of science reasonable? The answer is in the affirmative. This is necessary for the proper study of Biology—a science without which the surgical world would be the poorer and helpless. Experiments which have deprived thousands of frogs of their existence have saved thousands or rather millions of people from death and misery.

Allahabad.

M. C. BANSAL.

DISPOSAL OF THE DEAD.

(BY BAO BAHADUR HARGOVINDAS DWARKADAS KANTAWALA RAJ RATHA, BARODA.)

There are four general usages of disposing the human dead. Dafan the underground burial, Dahana the cremation, Jaldaha the under water burial, and Sooryadaha the scorching by the sun. The major portion of the world practises Dafan. The Dahana is a chief practice among the Hindus, though some bury their dead under ground or water, i. e. they push their dead into the waters with the idea that the turtle and fish etc. may feast on them. Some of the Hindus practise the double usage of cremation and Jaldaha i. e. they throw the half burnt dead into the waters. The usage of Sooryadaha is practised by the Parsis only. The western scholars consider cremation to be the best method of disposing of the dead, and several people of the west practise it against public opinion. Cremation being the easiest, cheapest shortest and the best of the methods for disposing a dead body, public crematoria are established in Europe and America. A modern crematorium is far more desirable than the awkward shameless, much-time-occupying and expensive present method practised here; but our people of the old school consider all better methods to be irreligious! We here lay the dead body on a bed of cowdung cakes and cover it with the fuel for cremation on open pyre, and when any portion of the dead body is accidentally uncovered, or a hand or a leg of the same is hanging or detached it is to be tonged with a bamboo into the fire. The poor people feel the cost beyond their might. The cost of cremation by a modern crematorium comes below rupees five, and in five minutes the dead body is turned into ashes, which can be thrown into the waters without the act being in any way irreligious.

The difficulties for conveying the dead to the funeral grounds are ever increasing. In former times when very few people used to go abroad and the number of the members in each caste was great, it was a common rule that one out of every family of the caste had to attend a funeral, and as the rate of mortality was not so high as at present, there was no difficulty whatsoever in conveying the dead to the funeral grounds. Nowadays people go abroad for service or business, where there may be some men of their castes or none, and a man born in one caste would not like his dead to be carried by people lower than him, while those of a higher caste would not touch his dead. The official class cannot think of carrying a dead on their shoulders, while several delicate folks would be ashamed of it. The scourges like cholera, plague and influenza are common in these days, and thousands and millions of people die. Some times two or three deaths occur in a single family during a day, and the caste people are so much afraid of plague that they abstain from helping in carrying the dead to the funeral grounds. A husband of a lady died while returning home. The caste people were informed of it, but none heeded her call for the help; so she herself alone had to carry it as far as the funeral grounds and she cremated it! What would have been the fate of the dead body if the lady were not strong?

When there was heavy plague in Surat, the dead had to be carried in carts, but when a cartman was attacked by the disease, the cartmen hesitated to give their services in the matter. In the current year when influenza began its havoc five to seven hundred deaths occurred daily in Bombay, where the dead were to be kept piled up for hours for want of space on the funeral grounds, and the difficulty was also increased on account of the want of fuel. Had some philanthropic people not raised the fund for it, the dead would have been neglected. At times only five to seven men are available for carrying the dead, and when as in Surat or Ahmedabad where the funeral grounds are at a very great distance, the commission of carrying the dead becomes nearly impossible. The Municipalities of Ahmedabad and Baroda had to arrange for carts to remove the dead of the helpless, and the philanthropic people of the places had raised funds for fuel.

There is one more matter for consideration. When any family is excommunicated or out-casted, the caste people totally abstain from any social connection whatsoever with the family, and even if the family may be outcasted out of sheer injustice and jealousy or for a trifling fault, in that case also the family must pay heavily on the spot to get the help of the caste for the funeral purpose, or to go to aliens for the same. At several places the people are also fined for not attending the caste funeral.

At some places where the head of the family desires to convey a dead as far as some distant big river, he has to treat the daghoo with sweetmeats (and therefore is a proverb that "It tastes cardamoms in the funeral sweet balls.") Also one has to give a caste-dinner even if the deceased be very young or his family very poor. The custom of weeping very loudly and of beating breasts by the female section of the castes is also overgrowing. All these practices place the survivors in a greater hell than the loss by death, yet the people have not the courage to abstain from the irreligious practices.

The Y. M. Hindu Association in Bombay have arranged to surmount the difficulties of carrying the dead. If we have Khandhia like those of the Parsis, one of the public needs would be overcome, but where is the difference between conveying the dead body on bamboo stretches and in a carriage? If a cart were used there would be no need for carriers, and the dead can be quietly conveyed to the funeral grounds in a mannerly way. If a modern crematorium were used instead of the open pyres it would be far more better for the public. Mr. Chotalal Tejpal artist has moved the matter in both the English as well as the vernacular press, and the press has supported him. He has also written to the Government, but he has received a reply that "the initiative in such a matter must come from the public." This is the important problem in connection with social reform, and it is hoped that our reformers and the leaders will take the matter in a favourable light.

BACK TO HINDUISM.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

In your issue of Aug. 3rd and on P. P. 687 there is a notice headed "Back to Hinduism" and which tells of the initiation of three converts from Christianity. Each convert was invested with the sacred thread. I shall be very grateful if you or your readers will answer the following questions in order that I may have additional light upon the significance of the ceremony of investing with the sacred thread.

1. Of what caste were these converts before they converted to Christianity?
2. Now that they have again become Hindus to which caste do they belong?
3. Is the sacred thread given to all converts irrespective of the caste to which they belonged before they became Christians?

This is not for the purpose of controversy that I ask the above questions but for light upon a subject that interests me very much. I recognize the fact that every one has a perfect right to choose his or her religion and to change it as often as he or she may become convinced that such a slip is necessary but I do not understand how a convert from Hinduism, if reconverted, can, irrespective of his former caste, be invested with the sacred thread.

Thanking you in anticipation

I Sir,
Yours sincerely
A. H. Gray

BOLSEEVISM AND SOCIALISM.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

No keen politician can fail to remark that the long sustained outcry raised against Bolshevism by the so-called "Capitalist" and "Imperialist" press of the world, has begun to produce its inevitable reaction. Surely the greatest service to the cause of Bolshevism has been rendered not by its professed adherents, but by those of its antagonists who are so purblind as to brand all socialists, all trade unionists, all workers in the cause of reform, all critics of the iniquities of the existing social structure, with the common misnomer of Bolsheviki. Of this blunder the true Bolshevik has been quick to take advantage. "Bolshevism," said a prominent English exponent of its tenets, "is only socialism with the courage of its convictions." This is arrant nonsense, and dangerous nonsense. Are evil deeds the invariable outcome of good intentions? Or, is murder necessarily the courageous expression of an innate ethical sense? To confuse Bolshevism with Socialism is to confound "fiat-right" with justice.

Let us look facts in the face. There is no need to quote the "Capitalist" press of this or any other country. Naturally, criticism from such a source is suspect in many quarters. Turn to the Bolshevik organs themselves, the "Izvestiya," or the "Pravda," and see what the Russian Bolsheviks say about their own work. Turn to the solid social-democratic press of Germany, of Sweden, of England. This evidence alone suffices to prove that under a Bolshevik regime, freedom of the press, freedom of speech, and freedom of public meeting are ruthlessly suppressed; that the cause of social reform is being hindered and the steady progress of centuries threatened, by the crackbrained conceptions and criminal savagery of a handful of denationalized fanatics, who have constituted themselves into a tyrannical bureaucracy. The following comes from the "Pravda" of October the 8th last: "The absence of the necessary restraint makes one feel appalled at the 'instruction' issued by the All-Russian Extraordinary Commission to 'All-Provincial Extraordinary Commissions which says: 'The All-Russian Extraordinary Commission is perfectly independent in its work, carrying out house searches, arrests, executions, of which it afterwards reports to the Council of the People's Commissaries and to the Central Executive Council.' Further, the Provincial and District Extraordinary Commissions 'are independent in their activities and when called upon by the Local Executive Council present a report of their work.' In so far as house searches and arrests are concerned, a report made afterwards may result in putting right irregularities committed owing to lack of restraint. The same cannot be said of executions.

It can also be seen from the 'Instructions' that personal safety is to a certain extent guaranteed only to members of the Government, of the Central Council and of the local Executive Committees. With the exception of these few persons, all members of the local Committees of the (Bolshevist) Party of the Central Committees and of the Executive Committee of the Party may be shot at any time by the decision of any Extraordinary Commission of a small district town if they happen to be on its territory, and a report of that made afterwards."

It may be of interest to know that the leading German socialist paper, "Vorwärts," quoting from the "Pravda" says that 13,764 persons have been executed within the last three months. As regards the internal economic situation in Russia under Bolshevik rule, a Russian workman makes the following statement in the "Socia'-Demokraten" of Stockholm: "The output of the factories has decreased by 80 per cent, notwithstanding that the Revolutionary committees stimulate production with the revolver. The condition of the railway is worse than ever. All the industrial workmen are against the Bolsheviks, and the same is the case with the peasants. The so-called 'Committees of the Poor' are drawn from the small number of peasants who sought employment in the factories during the war and have now returned to the country. The only supporters of the Bolsheviks, apart from the Letts and the Chinese, are those belonging to their own official caste. The European press has rather understated than exaggerated the 'Red Terror'."

The inner kernel of Bolshevism, the sinister factor which has brought about the condition of affairs noted above, is well summed up in the battle-cry of the Bolsheviks..... "Dictatorship of the Proletariat." Let us consider what this means. Dictatorship means despotism, and despotism remains despotism whether exercised by a Czar, a Kaiser, an oligarchy or a Bolshevik administration. At the bottom of this idea of the Dictatorship of the Proletariat lies impatience with the mass of the people. The people must be emancipated in spite of themselves. We are reminded irresistibly of the wildest and most transient phase of the French Revolution, when an orator declared that people must be "forced to be free." The Bolsheviks say that liberty and democracy can come afterwards, when the socialist dictators have transformed the present capitalistic society into the socialist state. But while the transformation is going on, the mass of the people must obey the minority which has seized power; must accept as right and just any tyranny which that minority decrees; must abandon liberty of speech, and liberty of the press, and must refuse those liberties particularly to all who do not see eye-to-eye with the minority in power. And if the mass does not like it, well, we know what happens. Bolshevik propagandists have scouted all stories of massacres. Their own press gives them the lie. True, these massacres are generally the work of the dregs of the Chinese population recruited abroad for labour gangs, and if the "removals"..... as wholesale mass murders are euphemistically termed..... "counter-revolutionaries"..... by which expression, is denoted all whom the Bolsheviks dislike for any reasons at all..... can be accomplished by Chinese battalions, the Bolsheviks then solemnly swear that they have had no hand in the matter!

The Bolsheviks are in fact pure nihilists of the most extreme type. Their one idea is to pull down existing society, no matter what the consequences, in the blind hope that a better order of things will arise of itself. Is there any need to point out how contrary is this idea to all socialist notions of the steady progress of society towards a better order of things? The social organism, like nature, does nothing at a bound. By ruthlessly scraping all the progress towards a more equitable state of society which thinkers and workers have hitherto achieved, the Bolsheviks are really delaying and not hastening the social revolution which they desire to bring about. Nothing for the benefit of the people at large can possibly emerge from what is now going on. All Bolshevism can do is to help reaction, and to make even the majority of the working classes throughout the world acquiesce cheerfully in mild dictatorship, as an evil more readily to be borne than Bolshevik tyranny and violence.

The attitude of the typical socialist towards bolshevism may be summed up in the words of Mr. H. W. Lee, the Secretary of the British Social Democratic Federation and the editor of "Justice," the greatest socialist newspaper in Great Britain. Mr. Lee says, "There is no royal road to social revolution. The steady and patient work of social propaganda and organisation, together with the pressing forward of thorough-going collectivist proposals for the ownership and control of industry for the common good, and the imagination to take advantage of everything will help forward the great change from capitalist production for profit to socialist production for use these are the lines we must follow. All the imaginary short-cuts of the impatient ones which lead to anarchical deserts or re-actionary morasses, serve only to retard real social-democratic progress."

And yet in the face of facts like this, a publicist of the reputation of Lala Lajpat Rai is found to say, I am neither a socialist nor a Bolshevik, but I am not afraid of becoming either." It would be interesting to know whether Mr. Lajpat Rai has enquired from any leading socialists what Bolshevism really implies.

L. F. RUSHBROOK WILLIAMS.

A PANCHAMA GURU.

The Hon'ble Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar, Advocate-General, presided on Sunday at the 63rd birthday anniversary of Sri Narayana Guru which was celebrated at Salla Gurusami Chetty's Hall. The Guru who lives at Alwaye in Cochin has done much for the depressed classes by way of imparting Hindu religious instruction and also by way of spreading education in their midst. With a view to steering clear of social difficulties, the Guru has been also instrumental in constructing numerous temples from Cape Comorin to Mangalore solely for the use of the Panchamas, and these temples have done a vast amount of good to thousands of Panchamas within the Hindu fold. The celebration yesterday bore a special feature about it, namely that it was entirely organized by members of the depressed classes themselves.

The proceedings commenced with a prayer, after which Pundit K. Munuswami Pillay delivered an address on the life and work of the Guru. Mr. P. Natarajan, a Thiya graduate next spoke on the need for a socio-religious institution in Madras for the backward classes. The speaker regretted that most of the institutions now in existence for the benefit of the Panchamas were worked by people belonging to the higher castes. This did not for one thing encourage self-reliance and he would like to see Panchamas themselves undertaking more of the work of social amelioration in their midst.

Swami Sabajananda pleaded for unity among Panchamas. The so-called depressed-classes were now divided into two hostile camps, and one of these was distinctly anti-Brahmin. The speaker failed to see why anybody should single out Brahmins for hostile treatment. It could not for a moment be denied that Brahmins were also at the present day doing much for bettering the lot of the Panchamas. Brahmins in every walk of life were being fired with a sense of responsibility for the well-being of India and considering their achievements in the past, it would not do to entertain towards them any but friendly feelings. It might be that there were some Brahmins who were intolerant and who were apt to be harsh in their dealings with the Panchamas, but for the matter of that there were black-sheep in every fold and this should not be made an excuse for deliberate anti-Brahmin propaganda. Lastly the speaker referred to the fact how his scheme for a Panchama Secondary School at Chidambaram was meeting with much encouragement from all quarters and a number of high-caste people, including Brahmins, were giving help.

The Hon'ble Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar who on rising was accorded a most warm welcome, said that it gave him the greatest pleasure to be present at the gathering. He was one of those who looked forward to the complete unification of castes in India. It was his firm belief that all Indians were Brahmins (applause) and there was no such thing as a separate Brahmin Caste. Those people who talked of preserving caste, or maintaining caste inviolate and inviolable in India, did not talk rightly. Caste was not at all a fundamental basis of the Hindu religion. There was no mention of caste in the Vedas although the Smritis made mention of caste. But there was no knowing what inaccuracies and interpolations might have crept into the Smritis, not necessarily fraudulently not necessarily dishonestly. And since it was not possible to vouch for the absolute literal accuracy of the Smritis, it would not do to base on them one's belief in the caste system. It had been laid down that women and Sudras should not be taught the Vedas; but centuries ago, they always broke through this injunction and admitted forbidden people to Vedic knowledge. It was the emphatic opinion of the speaker that Hindu religion had absolutely nothing to do with the caste system. It was really the political life of India that had been responsible for the caste system: and Hindu Kings such as those of the Chalukya and Pandian dynasties, to mention but two, as a matter of policy thought it wise to allow the perpetuation of caste. It was easy by means of the caste-system to preserve the balance of power in the State. Surely caste was nothing which God had revealed. If revelation, divine revelation, had anything to do with caste, the Panchamas would have been born as a distinct species and incapable of breeding with higher castes. (Laughter and cheers) Lastly the speaker said that there were great potentialities in the Panchamas, and if only they become educated they would also have an important part to play in bringing about the regeneration of India. The first requisite for India's regeneration was the reformation of Hinduism, in fact, the ushering in of Neo-Hinduism, would lead to India's greatness, both politically and socially. And the Panchamas with their undoubted intelligence and emotional enthusiasm could certainly contribute much that was valuable for establishing the Hinduism of the reformed and genuine type which the speaker had in view. (Prolonged applause.)

There was afterwards a dramatic performance, the play staged being Nandanar.—The Madras Mail.

BURMA AND CONSTITUTIONAL REFORM.

Mr. Maung Pu, B. A., and Mr. Bernard Houghton were called in before the Joint Committee on Indian Constitutional Reform. Mr. Maung Pu stated that he represented not only the Burma Reform League, but a very large section of the Burmese population. Burma was larger than France or the British Isles, and had had a very long history. They had a proper kingdom by the time of the Roman Conquest of England. His league had over 220 Associations and control of 30 schools. There were Hindus and Mahomedans settled in the country, but Buddhism had had no stain of intolerance, so there was no need to be apprehensive as to their liberties. The Announcement had aroused great expectations in Burma, and when the Secretary of State visited India they sent him their deputation to Calcutta. Witness read paragraph 198 of the Joint Report explaining the omission of Burma. Mr. Maung Pu controverted every one of the reasons given for that omission. The scheme approved by the Lieut-Governor was very inferior to the one in the Joint Report. Subsequent modifications had made it more retrogressive, with the result that in May, 1919, the Council of the Burma Reform League had condemned the Craddock scheme entirely. Witnesses described the Craddock scheme; its chief defect was that, instead of proper representation of the people, the village headmen (Government officials) would form about half of the Council. Sir Reginald Craddock had himself emphasised Burma's freedom from the caste difficulty, religious dissensions, and marked social cleavages. The emancipated condition of the Burmese woman markedly distinguished Burma from India, as well as the higher standard of living. Moreover, Burma possessed a ready-made electoral register. The elective system was practised and understood in Burma. The loyalty of Burma was wonderful, and she had rendered yeoman service during the war. They had great faith in British Statesmen, British Justice, and the British Parliament, and placed the fate of Burma in its hands. They wanted a Lieut-Governor sent out direct by the British Parliament, and an executive Council containing one European and two Burmese. In their Legislative Council they wanted four-fifths elected and one-fifth nominated members.

Burmese women occupied a very high position. They had a better status than English ladies because they had control of the purse of the family, which was not the case in England. The absence of the Purdah system helped to make Burmese literacy high—in every 1,000, 376 males and 61 females were able to read and write, which was higher than in Bengal or Madras. Women at present had the Municipal Franchise, and in the rural districts they had the vote for headmen. Most of the retail business was in their hands, and they moved about quite freely like ladies in the West. He trusted that Lord Selborne's Committee would report favourably on behalf of reforms in Burma.

Lord Selborne complimented Mr. Maung Pa on the clearness of his evidence, and thanked him.

DISEASE AND MARRIAGES.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer,

Dear Sir,

I thank you very much for publishing my letter, and I expect you to show me the same kindness in publishing the following few lines.

I have stated in my last letter and I beg to state again that the eight of the unfortunate innocent girls, in the midst of the higher society, who have been forced to ruin themselves or to lead a bad immoral life, on account of their being married to unfit, defective men, has made me look upon the institution of divorce not an ugly thing, but a means to remove ugly things and to purify the society.

When I advocate the institution of divorce, allow me to make myself clearer. I look upon marriage not as a social contract but a holy tie. Marriage therefore must be performed before God, in good faith and with clean hearts. Both the parties must understand what they do. It must not be a child's-play or a fraud.

When marriage is a child's play, when marriage is a fraud, divorce is a necessity. It is a medicine and is as essential as food and must be taken, when the system goes wrong. It is not the rigorous, unjust laws, that keep us pure and honest but it is the noble-teaching and full social liberty to stand to one's honour and to one's higher ideal. Virtuous, honest souls must not find their way blocked up. The line must be clear for their growth and their march onward.

Yours Sincerely,
KANKAR, K. G.

A Panchama Conference: Under the auspices of the Civic and Social Progress Association a Panchama Conference will be held at the Town Hall, Mysore on the 1st and 2nd October 1919 commencing at 2 P.M. each day. Delegates have been invited from all the Talukas in the State and arrangements made for their boarding and lodging at the Central Panchama Institute. The Hon. Mr. M. C. Raja, member of the Legislative Council, Madras, has kindly consented to preside. Swami Shahananda of Nandanar Mutt, Chidambaram has also been invited. All gentlemen interested in the uplift of Panchamas are requested to attend and co-operate in the movement.

The attention of our overseas subscribers is drawn to our advertisement printed below. We were obliged to increase the rates from 8 shillings to 12 shillings owing to the increase in exchange.

ADVERTISEMENTS

DO YOU WISH TO KNOW YOUR
"FUTURE"

Send your time and date of birth or your star and age or note the time when you write the letter, you will be given a full reading of your life or one year to come for ONE RUPEE ONLY.

Mr. Ghazanfar Muhammad Khan, Deputy Collector, writes from Moradabad City. "The one year life reading you sent me proved to be QUITE TRUE."

THE KALINGA ASTROLOGICAL BUREAU,
Chodavaram, Vizagapatam District.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postage
In advance. In arrears.

Per annum..... Rs. 6-0-0. Rs. 6-0-0.
Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, twelve shillings (Rs. 6).

Single copies of the current year can be had at 4 annas each and any back copies at 6 annas each.

Wanted:—An accomplished and educated widow of any Caste to marry a Brahmin widower in decent position. For other particulars please apply to X C/o The Indian Social Reformer, Bombay.

Wanted:—Employment, as teacher or governess, by an educated Brahman widow with midwifery training and medical practice, well-versed in music and the Vina; proficient in English, Sanskrit, Telugu and Canarese, and speaking Tamil and Hindustani also. Please apply to K. R. C/o. The Indian Social Reformer, Bombay."

GALE'S MAGAZINE.

Linn A. E. Gale, Editor and Publisher.

Champion of Socialism, New Thought, Occultism,
Internationalism and Birth Control

Contains such articles as:

"The Birth Pangs of Revolution"

"The World That Is To Be"

"The Psychic Meaning of the War"

"Judas Iscariot and the Bolsheviki"

"Are We Hypnotized?"

The only Advanced Thought Magazine in English in Mexico. A Journal That is Indispensable to All Who Want to Understand the Signs of the Times.

$ 2 a year, American money. $ 1 for 6 months.
20c. a copy. No Free Samples. Remit by bank draft on New York or personal check.

GALE'S MAGAZINE,

P. O. Box 518

Mexico City, D. F., Mexico.

THE TATA INDUSTRIAL BANK, LD.

HEAD OFFICE, BOMBAY.

BRANCHES—CALCUTTA and HYDERABAD (Deccan)
CAWNPORE and LUCKNOW.

Sub-Branches.—

Bombay—Share Bazaar, Shroff Bazaar.

Calcutta—Barr Bazaar.

London Agents. LLOYDS BANK LIMITED.

NEW YORK AGENTS: THE GUARANTY
TRUST COY. OF NEW YORK.

AUTHORISED CAPITAL... Rs. 12,00,00,000.

SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL..... „ 7,56,00,225.

PAID UP CAPITAL..... „ 1,50,99,225.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Sir D. J. Tata, Kt., Chairman.

Sir Sassoon David, Bart.

Sir R. N. Mookerjee, K. C. I. E.

Sir Francis Stewart, Kt.

Sir Henry Procter, Kt.

R. D. Tata, Esq.

F. E. Dinshaw, Esq.

F. C. Rimington, Esq.

Narottam Morarjee, Esq.

Hajee Gulam Mahmood Ajam, Esq.

The Hon'ble Mr. Parshottamdas Thakorias. C. I. E.

A. J. Bilimoria, Esq.

Secretary, R. H. Parker.

Current Accounts opened and interest allowed on daily credit balances from Rs. 500/- to Rs. 1,00,000/- at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum. If the balance to the credit of any account does not fall below Rs. 25,000/- at any time between 1st January and 30th June, interest will be allowed during that period at 2¼ % per annum. No interest is allowed unless the sum accrued amounts to Rs. 3/- Half-yearly.

Fixed Deposits. Interest allowed on Deposits fixed for one or two years and for shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank. Interest allowed on Savings Bank Accounts at 4 per cent per annum. Rules may be obtained on application.

Loans and Cash Credits are granted on approved securities.

Purchases and sales of Securities and shares effected.

Bills of Exchange purchased and collected and every description of Banking and exchange business undertaken.

14-4-18. J. PAGAN DALZELL Acting Manager.

THE YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK, LIMITED.

(Registered in Japan.)

Established 1880.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 48,000,000.

Paid up Capital.....Yen. 42,000,000.

Reserve Fund.....Yen. 23,100,000.

Head Office:—Yokohama.

Branches and Agencies at Bombay, Buenos Aires, Calcutta, Changchun, Chi-Nan, Dairou, Fengtien, Hankow, Harbin, Hongkong, Honolulu, Kaiyuan, Kobe, London, Los Angeles, Lyons, Manila, Nagasaki, Newchwang, New York, Osaka, Peking, Rangoon, San Francisco, Seattle, Shanghai, Shimonoseki, Singapore, Soerabaya, Sydney, Tientsin, Tokio, Taingtao.

Current Deposit Accounts are opened for approved customers and Interest is allowed at the rate of 2 per cent per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 100,000, provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of banking and exchange business transacted.

N. IGARASHI,

Post Box No. 207, Hornby Road, Bombay.

I. NISHIMAKI.

Manager, Calcutta.

1-12-17.

Post Box No. 406, Clive street, Calcutta

THE BANK OF BARODA, LD.

Under the Patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja Gaekwar.

Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897

HEAD OFFICE BARODA.

Branches—Ahmedabad, Navsari Meshana, and Surat

Capital Subscribed.....Rs. 60,00,000.

Capital Paid up „ 20,00,000.

Reserve Fund „ 12,50,000.

DIRECTORS :

The Hon'ble Mr. Lalubhai Smaldas, C. I. E., Chairman
Sir Vithaldas Damodar Thackersey, Kt.Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti Nagar Sheth, Baroda.

Sheth Manilal Revadas, Vadnagar.

Rao Bahadur Gunajirao R. Nimbalkar, Sur Subha, Baroda
State.Bhaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., Advocate, High Court, Bombay.M. H. Kantavalla, Esq., Agent, Maharaja Mill Co., Ld.
Baroda.

R. R. Shirgaokar, Naib Subha, Baroda State.

A. N. Datar, Accountant General, Baroda State.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balance from Rs. 800 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest which does not come to Rs. 3 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application. C. E. RANDLE,—General
15-4-12. Manager.

THE CENTRAL BANK OF INDIA, LTD

Subscribed Capital... .. Rs. 50,00,000

Paid Up Capital „ 25,00,000

Reserved liability of

Shareholders „ 25,00,000

Reserve Fund „ 6,00,000

Head Office:—Alice Building, Bombay.

Local Branches:—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri
Bazar, (3) Share Bazar.Branches:—Amritsar, Calcutta, Delhi, Jharis, Karachi.London Agents:—London Joint City and
Midland Bank, Ld.

Current Accounts:—3 % allowed on Daily
Balances from January to June
2½ % allowed on Daily
Balances from
July to December.

12 months Deposits received at 5 % per annum.

Long and Short period Deposits received at rates
to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking Business transacted.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA.

Manager.

25-2-17

Timely advice to the Wealthy

Costly but certain remedies are in the long run cheaper than cheap and uncertain ones.

KANDARPA SANJIVINI PILLS AND OIL

are the safest and surest remedies for indigestion, constipation, loss of appetite, memory, mental, physical and nervous debility and all sorts of urinary disorders, improve impoverished blood.

Price per tin of 40 Pills Rs. 5 & per tola of Oil Rs. 10.

Both Purchased at a time Rs. 11/4—

Medical Advice and a Medical Book containing 128 pages sent Gratis and Post Free.

RAJ VAIDYA NARAYANJI KESHAVJI

Head Office :—Jamnagar, Kathiawar, (India.)

Branch :—No. 187, Kalbadevi Road,
24-8-1919. BOMBAY.

Empire Hindu Hotel

Opposite Victoria Terminus
Bombay.

(Central Situation)
Strictly Vegetarian
Charges Moderate

Fitted with
Electric Lift, Fans and Lights.

TELEGRAMS: } TELEPHONE

"FOOD," BOMBAY. } 2789.

22-6-19.

Saffron? Saffron?? Saffron???

If you wish to buy genuinely pure and best Saffron it is
SUN

BRAND  SAFFRON

ONLY

It has been largely used by Jain Temples, Maharajas, Durbars, Hakims and Vaidyas all over the country for the last 75 years and is well known for its purity and genuineness.

S. NARAYEN & Co.,

17-2-18

21, Humam Street, Fort Bombay.

SHORTHAND.

Like Other Arts and Sciences, Shorthand is subject to the Law of Progress. Based on greatly improved scientific and analogical principles, the Sloan-Duployan system (contained in a compass of 12 lessons) saves a year's laborious study, ensuring highest efficiency and speediest results. Shorthand is the open-door to many well-paid positions; at any rate it will mean advancement for you. Expert Individual or Postal Instructions for a fixed fee, payable in easy monthly instalments. Speed Classes Conducted. Specialised Training Guaranteed. Enclose stamp for booklet, etc.

CENTRAL CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE,
G. P. O. Box No. 424, Bombay.

"EVERYTHING FOR EVERYBODY"

National Standard Portable Typewriter No. 3 (10 lbs.) Pa. 100
Oliver No. 5 (American Rebuilt) S.S. & Tab. Rs. 175; No. 7 .. 200
" " 3 (Second-hand) in thorough working order. .. 125
Empire No. 1 (Do.) in good working order. .. 85
Multikopy Typewriter Carbons, per Box of 100 sheets. .. 8
Webster Brand ,, Ribbons for all machines, Doz. .. 21
Typewriter Oil (best 1 oz. bot.) or Esberhard Krauser, Doz. .. 6
Safety Razor, Rivals Gillette, with 8 Gillette blades (best) .. 5
Do. (Made in U.S.A.) with 3 spare blades, Set .. 1
Portable Electric Battery & lamp (burns 200 hours) compl. .. 80
Envelope Making Machine (to make 30,000 per day). New .. 15
Full Jewelled Lever Watch (Square or Octagon) Silver .. 25
Cookin's Self Billing Fount Pen (non-leakable) Gold nib .. 9

UNIVERSAL BUSINESS SYNDICATE,

20-4-19.

Post Box No. 424, Bombay.

HYPNOTISM

PERSONAL MAGNETISM,
WILL POWER,
NERVE FORCE—

Call what you will—

Is the intangible power that controls human destiny. It is the key to all business and social success. This power is no special gift of any one. It is latent in every one. We help you how to display it. By our system, you can learn in a few days at your own home and not only achieve success yourself, but you can influence the mind, health and actions of others to a remarkable.

Write immediately for our free booklet—THE MIND OF THE FUTURE

THE LATENT LIGHT CULTURE,
TINNEVELLY, S. INDIA.

Batlivala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 1 each bottle of 100.

Batlivala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 2 each bottle of 100.

Batlivala's Ague Mixture of Fever, Malaria, Influenza etc.

Batlivala's Ague Pills for Malaria, Fever, Influenza etc.

Batlivala's Tonic pills for pale people & nervous breaks down.

Batlivala's Tooth Powder of Preserving Teeth

Batlivala's Ringworm ointment for Ringworm Dhobi Itch etc.

May be had from all dealers in medicines or from

Dr. H. L. Batlivala Sons & Co., Ltd.
No. 12, Worli, 18, Bombay.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESS:—"Doctor Batlivala Dacar"

THE BOMBAY CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK.

HEAD OFFICE:—Apollo Street, St., Bombay.

DIRECTORS:—The Hon. Sir Fazulbhai Currimjee (Chairman), Sir Vitthaladas De Theerjee, the Hon. Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas, Sir Stanley Road, the Hon. Mr. C. V. Mehta, the Chief of Ichalkaranji, G. K. Devadhar, Esq., the Hon. Sir P. D. Pattani, the Raja Saheb of Malegaon.

Share Capital (fully paid) Rs. 7,00,000

1 Deposits fixed for one year and shorter or longer periods are accepted, Rates and other particulars may be ascertained from the under signed.

2 The Bank finances only registered Co-operative Societies in the Bombay Presidency on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency.

3. Accounts are audited half-yearly by a special Government Auditor, and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the "Bombay Government Gazettee."
20-8-17. VAIKUNTH L. MENTA, Manager.

THE BANK OF TAIWAN, LTD.

Incorporated by Special Charter of the Imperial Japanese Government, 1899.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 50,000,000
Paid-up CapitalYen. 22,500,000
Reserve FundYen. 5,680,000

Head Office:—Taipeh, Formosa.

BRANCHES I—

LONDON	SHANGHAI	TOKIO
NEW YORK	HONGKONG	OSAKA
AMOI	SINGAPORE	KOBE
CANTON	SOERABAJA	YOKOHAMA
FOOHOOW	SEMARANG	AKO
HANKOW	MAKUNG	GIRAN
KIUKIANG	BATAVIA	KAGI
SWATOW	PINAN	KABENKO
TAINAN	SHINCHIKU	KEELUNG
TAKOW	TAICHU	TAMSUI

The Bank has also a large number of Correspondents at Home and Abroad.

Current Deposit Accounts—are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at 2 per cent. per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 1,00,000 provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of Banking and Exchange business transacted.

K. TAKEMURA

Manager

9-12-17.

56, Esplanade Road, Fort, BOMBAY

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

Established 7th September 1906.

Incorporated under the Indian Companies' Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE:

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.

Capital Subscribed Rs. 1,00,00,000
Capital Called up ,, 50,00,000
Reserve Fund ,, 15,00,000

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½% p. a. throughout the year. On sums exceeding Rs. 1,00,000 interest is allowed by special arrangement. No interest will be allowed which does not amount to Rs. 3 per half year.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short periods @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

"Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application".

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, & CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stocks at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

H. P. STRINGFELLOW,

15-1-11.

Manager.

A Lady's Best Ornament is a Glorious Head of Hair.

A profusion of rich, soft silky, lustrous, wavy hair—where's the woman who would not like that?

There's only one oil that makes such hair and it's the far-famed

KAMINIA OIL
(Regd.)

Invaluable for ladies, and just as much for Brain-Workers and Students.

Heated head cooled, aching disappears and dandruff becomes a thing of the past. Added to all these it possesses a beautiful fragrant smell.

For superiority, awarded a Gold Medal at the Mysore Exhibition, and in great demand all over the country.

If you have not yet used KAMINIA OIL, you

have missed a fine delight and a real boon; use it now, if only once; and like many people you will prefer to use also always

Price per bottle, Re. 1. V. P. Charges 6 annas extra

Price for 3 bottles Rs. 2-10. V. P. changes 14 annas extra

Write now, Do not delay.

Sole Agents:—

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,
(5-8-16) No. 155, Jumma Masjid Market, BOMBAY.

Now-a-Days.

All things have advanced in price Even the vegetable ingredients used in our Atank Nigrah Pills have advanced in price.

Even the labourers demand heavy wages being dearer. Even the users have increased yet the Atank Nigrah Pills for Toning up the system are sold at before war price i. e. at a Rupee.

Valdya Shastri

Manishanker Govindji,

Atank Nigrah Pharmacy,

Head Office:—Jamnagar—Kathiawar.

Branch:—Kalbadevi Road, Bombay.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours. Publish Fine Art Pictures, & c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.
1-12-10. HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS—

ROYAL TONIC PILLS.

powerful Nutritious and Strength Restorer. Price Re. 1-4 per tin of 30 Pills.

PREPARED BY—GOVINDJEE DAMODER & Co.,

Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Commission Agents.
1-12-10. No. 3 Sater Chawl Market, BOMBAY.

Clean
 Wholesome
 Intelligent
 Entertainment
 IS A GREAT STEP
 IN

SOCIAL REFORM.

When deciding on a
PLACE OF AMUSEMENT TWO
 ESTABLISHMENTS

Should at once leap to the mind,

THE EXCELSIOR
 BOMBAY'S PREMIER MODERN THEATRE
AND

THE EMPIRE
 BOMBAY'S MOST PALATIAL
PICTURE THEATRE

Where Film Plays of Distinction are shown
 Every Week.

A
 Great Cinema Masterpiece

is shown,

Both theatres are near the Bori Bunder
 and are run by the

EXCELSIOR SYNDICATE.

The Pioneer of Bombay's
AMUSEMENT WORLD.

FURUKAWA & CO.

TOKIO

The Largest Manufacturers
in the East

OF

ELECTRIC BARE COPPER CONDUCTORS,

ELECTRIC UNDERGROUND CABLES,

ELECTRIC INSULATED WIRES,

ELECTRIC ACCESSORIES,

INGOTS, RODS, WIRES,

SHEETS, TUBES,

Etc., Etc.,

SOLE AGENTS IN INDIA AND BURMA.

TATA, SONS & CO.,

BOMBAY & CALCUTTA.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS Ltd.

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.
Naysari Building, Fort, BOMBAY.

Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

11-8-17.

When YOUR EYES

need to be examined by QUALIFIED OCULISTS or by SCIENTIFIC REFRACTIONISTS of 26 year experience, FREE OF CHARGE, you cannot do better than GO TO

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR & CO.

The leading firm of Oculists, Eyesight Specialists, Manufacturing Opticians and suppliers of the patented

"KRYPTOK"

(Invisible one-piece bifocal lens.)

Toric, and all kinds of lenses,—Cylindrical, Spherical, cylindrical, Prismatic, &c., from pebbles as well as from best quality crown glass.

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR

Eyesight Specialist,

With 26 Years' Practical Experience.

Holds exceptional testimonials from H. H. The Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, the Hon'ble Sir Lawrence Jenkins the Hon. Mr. Justice Batty, Mrs. Batty, the Hon. Sir N. S. Chundavarkar, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beaman, the Hon'ble Sir S. L. Bachelor, the Hon'ble Sir John Heaton Mr. H. G. Jell, M. V. O., Col. R. H. Forman, R. A. M. C., P. M. O. Co. Brigade, Lieut. Col. G. H. Bull, M. D., I. M. S., Lieut. Colonel Peters M. B., I. M. S., and other high personages.

(7) 379, HORNEY ROW,

Opposite the Government Telegraph Office,
Fort, BOMBAY.

INTENDING ASSUREES ARE INVITED TO COMPARE THE RATES AND CONDITIONS OF

The Empire of India Life Assurance Company, Limited.

WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.

Head Office II Elphinstone Circle, BOMBAY.

SEE REPORT AND OPINIONS OF THE PRESS AS TO THE REMARKABLE PROGRESS MADE BY THE COMPANY.

ENDOWMENT NON-FORFEITABLE POLICY FOR RS. 3,000.

PAYABLE AT AGE 60 OR AT DEATH, IF PREVIOUS, WITH PROFIT.

If, at any time, the assured under this plan should desire to cease paying any more premiums, he can obtain a paid-up Policy for such a proportion of the original sum assured as the number of premiums paid bears to the number agreed upon. Thus a gentleman who had assured at age 30 for a Policy of Rs. 3,000 payable at age 60 or at Death, if previous, after 5 year payments, would be entitled to a Free paid-up Policy for Rs. 500 free of future payments.

MONTHLY PREMIUM.

AT AGE 20, Rs. 6-9-0.

AT AGE 25, Rs. 7-8-0.

AT AGE 30, Rs. 8-14-0.

AT AGE 35, Rs. 10-18-0.

AT AGE 40, Rs. 13-12-0.

AT AGE 45, Rs. 18-10-0

SOME OF THE DISTINCTIVE FEATURES.

- Funds invested in Government Securities and in accordance with the Indian Trusts Act
- Policy holders can appoint their own Directors.
- 90 per cent. of profits to Participating Policy holders.
- Lapsed policies revived without Medical Certificate.
- Liberal surrender Values 40 per cent. of the Tabular premium paid.
- Immediate payment of Claims.
- Medical fees and stamps on Policies are payable by the Company.
- The sum assured is PAYABLE IN FULL should death occur even immediately after payment of the first premium.

GUARANTEED INSURANCE.—This Company issues Guaranteed Policies in situation of trust and is specially authorized to guarantee the employes of the Post Office

Proposal Forms and full Particulars may be obtained from any local Agent in India or from ALLUM, BHARUCHA & CO. Managers.

IN INDIA

EVERY ONE KNOWS.

whom it does concern that we are foremost in supplying the best

COSSI SILK SUIT PIECES

suitable for the season. These pieces are strong, fancy and durable, and have been specially manufactured for India Market. Each piece guaranteed for One Suit Complete.

Price Rs. 10 per piece.

Write to—THE BHARGAVA COMMERCIAL SOCIETY,

2-18.

Bombay City.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER. Contract Rates for Advertisements.

Number of Insertions.	1 Inch.		2 Inches.		3 Columns.		4 Columns.		Page.
	Rs.	As.	Rs.	As.	Rs.	As.	Rs.	As.	Rs.	As.
13	11	0	18	0	20	0	30	0	40	0
26	16	0	25	0	30	0	50	0	87	0
52	25	0	38	0	50	0	87	0	156	0

Casual advertisements at Rs. 4 per line for the 1st insertion and Rs. 2 per line for succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

Increasing Preference

PEOPLE who judge typewriters by strict comparisons never fail to appreciate the Oliver's overwhelming superiorities.

Those who examine its workmanship admit that it is of the finest.

Those who are anxious for the most durable machine are never hesitant in conceding that Oliver design and Oliver materials make for longer life.

Those who desire simplicity find in the Oliver fewer parts, less opportunity for wear and repair.

We are always willing, even anxious, to have people judge the Oliver by making comparisons.

It combines, we believe, as no other machine, more of the wanted features. No single advantage dominates at the sacrifice of others.

The Oliver has won its thousands of friends mostly through comparisons. Over 700,000 Olivers have been sold.

We urge you to do as others are doing—don't buy without first investigating the Oliver and making careful comparisons.

THE OLIVER TYPEWRITER COMPANY

SOLE AGENTS FOR INDIA

W. H. THORNS & Co.

25-29, CHURCHGATE STREET, BOMBAY.

Always mention Indian Social Reformer, when you write for the Oliver.

WONDERFUL TONIC AND MOUTH-REFRESHER
JINTAN.

This is a safe and efficient remedy in all kinds of diseases or disturbances of the digestive organs. It is composed entirely of VEGETABLE INGREDIENTS made from the prescription of the following eminent medical men viz—
NORIHURO MIWA, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy,
ZENJIRO INOUE, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy
 and testified as to its efficacy by
Baron J. MATSUMOTO, M.D., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Army.
T. MITAMURA Esq., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial

Japanese Navy.
 As a digestive it is unequalled and will not disturb the functions of the most delicate stomach. Its antiseptic properties render it very efficacious in warding off disease and at the same time it imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath of the user.
 By virtue of its aroma, it effectually masks the odour of Tobacco and Alcoholic Spirits.

It acts beneficially on the vocal cords and has found much favour with public speakers, actors, singers and those whose vocation necessitates a severe strain on the throat.

GOOD FOR

Billionsness, Headache, Vertigo, Nausea, indigestion, Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, etc., etc.

To maintain general health 2 to 3 pills may be taken occasionally, well masticated.

Price—20 Pills Packet Rs. 0-1-0. 90 Pills Packet with Tin case, Rs. 0-4-0. 380 pills Packet with fancy case., Rs. 1-0-0

Prepared by Messrs. MORISHITA Co., OSAKA, JAPAN.

Sole Agents: Jintan Agency (G. R. Chaubal), Juma Masjid. BOMBAY.

At once opening 3 pills come here automatically!

FOR PAINS AND ACHES SPRAINS ETC.
USE:—

AMRUTANJAN.

The magical pain balm extant. Cures all aches & pains
 Costs 8 As. Sold everywhere.

By Appointment to H. E. the Governor Sir George Sydenham Clarke of Bombay.

HARDAS VALJI,

(KING OF INDIAN CONFECTIONERS)

Highest Confectioner, Caterer and Grand Military Contractor.

Proprietor—RATNATH,
 Chira Bazar & Grant Road,
BOMBAY.

20-4-19.

DENTISTRY.

Extractions Painless;
 Terms Very Moderate;
 Gold Crown, Bar and Bridge Work a Speciality (teeth without plate);
 Latest Successful Treatment for Pyorrhoea (pus in gums).
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

Hours: 8-1-30 & 5-7-30; Daily.
 (Sundays—From 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.)

Address BUNDIR,
NEW CHARNI ROAD,
GINACON, BOMBAY.

K. R. ANAT,
 Surgeon Dentist.

1-5-19.

THE INDIAN * SOCIAL * REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY MORNING.

Office—EMPIRE BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD, FORT.

Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

Vol. XXX BOMBAY—SUNDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1919. No. 5.

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard."
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

Tariff Reform in India.	The Amateur Dramatic Association, Bangalore.
The Dye Stuffs Ordinance.	The Casualties at the Jallian-walla Bag.
The Home Coming of the Deputations.	The Plague of Annotations. Devalaya Research Library, Calcutta.
Indian Women and the Suffrage.	A Punjab Lady Oxonian.
Sir Stanley Reed, Hand and Brain.	Intermarriages in Upper India.
Justice on Mr. Joshi's Deputation.	Increased Salaries.
The Late Pandit Sivanath Sastry.	The Religious and Charitable Endowments Bill.
Post Graduate Teaching in the University of Calcutta.	Reorganization of the Indian Medical Service.
The Problem of Caste in India I.

NOTES.

Tariff Reform in India. The Gazette of India prints the text of the Act levying an export duty on hides and skins of 15 per cent ad valorem with, subject to such conditions as the Government of India may prescribe, a rebate to the exporter of two-thirds of the duty levied on hides and skins exported to any part of the British Empire, Indian States, or of any territories under the protection of His Majesty or in respect of which a mandate of the League of Nations is exercised by the Government of any part of His Majesty's Dominions. In other words, the right of rebate will pertain to exports not only to the United Kingdom, the Self-Governing and the Crown Colonies, but also to Egypt and to the mandated countries not only of the United Kingdom but also of South Africa and Australia. The last occasion on which the Government of India expressed a considered opinion on the policy of Imperial Preference was in Lord Curzon's time, and their verdict then was distinctly against it. Since then the Indian public has not been called upon to declare its views on the question. The introduction of this measure at Simla in such circumstances is unjustifiable. The Government spokesman told the Council that this arrangement was not proposed as part of any general scheme of Imperial Preference. That only makes it worse. We respectfully urge that Government have no right to deprive the country of an opportunity of examining the general principle by bringing it in, in the guise of separate items. A general principle has no existence if its particular applications are dealt with independently of each other. We are surprised to see that so shrewd a publicist as Sir Dinsbaw Wacha acquiesced in the transparent subterfuge. We rather like this export duty because it is well-known that the temptation offered by the high prices of hides and skins in foreign countries, has been a cause of the crime of cattle-poisoning which is chronic in some parts of the country.

Government had the unanimous support of the Council so far as the policy of an export duty on hides went. But the proposal to tack on to it a rebate of two-thirds of the duty on exports to the vast number of countries enumerated above, has all the appearance of taking away with one hand what is given with the other. The argument that a differentiation against South Africa in the Bill would be a pin-prick detrimental to Sir Benjamin Robertson's mission, could have proceeded only from one who was strangely insensible to the numerous pricks, from more substantially pointed articles than pins, to which Indians have been subjected in that part of His Majesty's Empire. By the way, His Excellency the Viceroy was understood to imply that there was to be a deputation to South Africa to be conducted by Sir Benjamin. But we have not since heard of any one else being on the deputation. Sir Benjamin is apparently to be all of it. We are unable to accept this as a satisfactory arrangement. Men who were in South Africa on the last occasion were by no means agreed as to the precise role adopted by Sir Benjamin. We can only hope that the mission will be a success.

The Dye Stuffs Ordinance. There was some plain speaking at the annual meeting of the Indian Merchants' Chamber regarding the order prohibiting the import into India of dyes except from the United Kingdom. If dyes are made in the United Kingdom in sufficient quantities, and if they are as good as, and not more costly than dyes produced in other countries, the need for, such an order would not arise. The order presupposes that the English product is either not as good as, or that it is more highly priced than, dyes available in other countries. So far as this supposition is well-founded, the order is clearly tantamount to a compulsory levy of the difference in cash or quality from the Indian manufacturer of cloth to the English manufacturer of dyes. We have not seen any defence of this extraordinary measure from Government. There may be a defence, there must be some. But we are unable to think of any. If the United Kingdom were asked to take all its supply of cotton or wheat from India and no other country, there can be no doubt about the answer. A rebate of quite two-thirds of the export duty of 15 per cent now levied on hides and skins by the Government of India, on exports principally to the United Kingdom, was justified on the ground that without it the surplusage of India in respect of these gruesome but useful commodities would rot in this country. Perhaps, the United Kingdom has undertaken to sell dyes to India at specially favourable rates. We do not know. We trust that the injustice and impolicy of placing all the give on one pair of shoulders and all the take on another is obvious to our rulers.

The Home Coming of the Deputations. Mr. Surendranath Banerjee, Mr. K. C. Kay and Mr. C. P. Ramaswami Iyar, members of the Indian deputations to England, returned last week. They were interviewed by an Associated Press representative, and the Western India National Liberal Association welcomed Mr. Banerjee at a public meeting presided over by Sir Narayan Chandavarkar. Mr. Banerjee and Mr. Ramaswami Aiyar were hopeful that the Joint Committee will enlarge the scope of the Reform Bill to some extent in the directions desired by Indian opinion, especially in regard to the introduction of an element of responsibility to the Indian people in the Government of India. This has been inaccurately described as liberalising the Central Government. We prefer to call it a very necessary strengthening of the Central Government. We have repeatedly urged in these columns that a strong Central Government is the indispensable condition of security and prosperity in this country. The present Government of India is a hard Government but it is not a strong Government. No strong Government should need a Rowlatt Act or Martial Law to uphold its authority. Only a Government absolutely divorced from and out of touch with the currents of the people's life would need them. The Government of India in Delhi and Simla is completely isolated. There is all the greater need to introduce a substantial measure of effective popular influence in its Councils. The Government of India can be strengthened only if it is liberalised.

Indian Women and the Suffrage: Mr. Surendranath Banerjee referred in his speech to the question of woman suffrage in India in a manner which was rather apologetic. He was, he said, a member of the Franchise Committee, and he would say this question was not placed before them in anything like earnestness, except in Bombay. Hardly a witness, who appeared before the Joint Committee, was not asked about woman's franchise, and it appeared that there was an idea in the minds of some of the members of the Joint Committee that perhaps the solution of this problem lay in giving the Legislative Councils the power to determine whether in any particular province, women should be given representation. Mr. Banerjee's statement that the question was not placed before the Franchise Committee earnestly except in Bombay, is in conflict with Lord Southbrough's statement before the Joint Committee that he was astonished at the volume of evidence in favour of women suffrage all over the country. However that may be, we are glad that the Joint Committee has shown greater appreciation of the importance of the question. We can trust the Legislative Councils to deal justly with it, but we do not see why this alone should be left to them, involving, perhaps, the disfranchisement of women in the elections which will inaugurate the reforms. Let the new era see the men and women of India step on the threshold of responsible Government hand in hand.

Sir Stanley Reed: Mr. Banerjee spoke in glowing terms of the important evidence given before the Committee by Sir Stanley Reed, and its helpfulness to the cause of Indian progress. He said: Speaking from a platform in Bombay, he desired to pay a tribute of his appreciation and admiration to the evidence which Sir Stanley Reed gave before the Joint Committee. It was in every way worthy of the occasion and worthy of the great traditions of the journal which he edited with such consummate ability. He said in the course of his evidence that the Moderate Party was a great asset, and that unless the Montague-Chelmsford scheme was given effect to in its essential features, the proposed reforms would fail to satisfy the Indian people. Mr. Banerjee thought that Sir Stanley Reed's evidence made a great impression upon the Joint Committee. His evidence and that of Sir Michael Sadler, President of the University Commission were, he thought, "the most impressive among those of the European witnesses." Mr. C. P. Ramaswami Aiyar also spoke in similar strain of the service rendered to India by Sir Stanley Reed and Sir Michael Sadler. "We ought never to forget," he said, "the services of Englishmen like Lord Southbrough, Sir Stanley Reed and Sir Michael Sadler, who bravely championed the Indian cause with a statesmanlike perception of the essential needs of India and advocated their views before the Parliamentary Committee."

Hand and Brain: The current number of the Challenge, the sprightly and vigorous organ of democratised Christianity, contains the following admonition to the Labour Party in England which is not without application to this country: "Mr. Henderson more than a year ago pleaded for an alliance between the workers by brain and the workers by hand. It is a thorny question and upon its answer depends the fate of those whom, for want of a better term, we call the middle class. It is significant that our contemporary, The Daily Herald, has been investigating the conditions of life amongst clerks and teachers during the last few days. Education can only be very gradual in its effect, and a generation at least must elapse before Mr. Fisher's Act can show any tangible results upon the democracy of the country. The interregnum must be bridged, and it is difficult to see how Labour can progress without the active co-operation of the brain workers. But there is a more important side to this question. The bank clerk, the teacher and the shopkeeper are looking in vain for any avenue of escape. At present they are being crushed between the upper and nether millstones. Labour professes the welfare of the whole community. Oxford and Cambridge are being thrown open to an increasing degree to the poorer men and women who have shown promise of ability. An alliance will benefit both parties, and it is not only being sought from interested motives. Certainly an alliance will tip the scale."

"Justice" on Mr. Joshi's Deputation. Justice, the organ of the non-Brahman movement in Southern India, criticising Mr. Joshi's delegation to the Labour Conference at Washington, observes. "Mr. Joshi belongs to the Servants of India Society. So far as we are aware, the Servants of India Society is financed among others by some of the mill-owners in Bombay; and is it expected that Mr. Joshi would represent the labourers when their interests clash with those of the persons who are financing the Society? He would more rightly be the representative of the millowners themselves." But may we ask in reply to our contemporary. "Justice is owned by the South Indian People's Association. The Association is supported by several Zemindars. How can Justice represent the interests of the non-Brahmans, who are mostly cultivators, a certain proportion of them being tenants of these Zemindars? It would more rightly be the organ of the Zemindars." The answer to both the questions, is that there are mill-owners and Zemindars who are broad-minded enough to understand that their interests are identical with those of their workmen and tenants, and it is these who support public movements and not those who care only for their own pleasure and profit.

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, OCTOBER 5, 1919.

THE LATE PANDIT SIVANATH SASTRY.

The death of Pandit Sivanath Sastry at the age of 72 removes the last remaining link between the pioneers of social and religious reform in Bengal and the present generation. The Pandit was born fourteen years after the death of Raja Rammohan Roy. He was born—he tells us in his paper on his uncle, Dwarkanath Vidyabhushan, in his "Men I have seen," which we recently reviewed and from which the material is derived for this tribute to his honoured memory,—in his maternal uncle's house at Chandripota, ten miles from Calcutta, on the 31st of January 1847. He was the first male child born in the family for many years. His advent, therefore, was hailed by the ladies of the house with the loud blowing of conch-shells, and his uncle, at his first visit to the village home after the event, greeted his newly-arrived nephew with the present of a gold mohur. The child grew up in an atmosphere of learning, piety and sturdy public spirit. His maternal grandfather was the great Sanskrit scholar, Pandit Hara Chandra Nyayaratna, his maternal uncle was collaborator with Pandit Iswar Chandra Vidyasagar on the Bengali journal Soma Prakash, and his father was Head Pandit in the village school. The women of the family were typical Indian women, "honest," to use the Pandit's epithets about his maternal grandmother, "truthful, warm-hearted and loving, charitable and forbearing, devoted to religion and full of kindness for the poor and the suffering." The Pandit tells us that he got into the evil habit of smoking at the age of twelve, and was detected by his venerable grandfather who made him promise that he will never smoke again. He kept his promise to the end of his life. "Since then" he writes, "I have almost a horror of all cigars and cigarettes. It pains me to see boys smoking." In the same essay, the Pandit relates how, having been commissioned by his father, to hand over a letter to Mr. Woodrow, then a Government Inspector of Schools, he angered that official by refusing to take off his shoes in his presence. His uncle, when he heard of the incident blessed him for his high spirit, and published an account of the incident in the Soma Prakash with proper comments on Mr. Woodrow's bahadurism.

Young Sivanath Sastry was brought to Calcutta when he was only nine years old, and was soon admitted into the Calcutta Sanskrit College of which the illustrious Pandit Iswar Chandra Vidyasagar was Principal. Vidyasagar was as thorough-going an educational as he was a social reformer. He had just before Sivanath Sastry joined the College inroduced great reforms. He had thrown open the doors of the College to others than the twice-born castes—Brahmins and Vaidyas; he had altered the old mode of teaching, namely, commencing with Mugdabodha, the well-known Sanskrit grammar, and had introduced in its place the practice of commencing the education of beginners with his own Bengali primers, and his introductory Sanskrit grammar—a change disliked and criticised by the old Pandits. Vidyasagar had also introduced the system of payment of fees in place of free education. Further, he had commenced the practice of teaching English as a second language in the higher classes of the Sanskrit College. He was at the same time carrying on his vigorous propaganda in favour of the remarriage of Hindu widows. The College—teachers and students—took sides in the controversy which was dividing Hindu society into hostile camps. The first widow remarriage was celebrated in 1856. "When Vaidyasagar Mahashoy came with his friend, the bridegroom, at the head of a large procession," writes Pandit Sivanath Sastry, "the crowd of spectators was so great that there was not an inch of moving space in the whole street, and many fell into the big drains which were to be seen by the sides of the Calcutta streets of those days." Vidyasagar fell out with the Director of Public Instruction shortly after that, and resigned his post, and was thenceforth wholly absorbed by his social reform work. Sivanath Sastry threw himself heart and soul in the widow remarriage cause, which estranged him from his parents. But it was not in his nature to turn back after having once put his hands to the plough. At much personal sacrifice, he stood by remarried couples, sharing their hardships, bearing persecution. But his mind was taking a wider range. He passed his F. A. in 1869, but before that religious problems were beginning to trouble him. Sivanath Sastry states that it was about 1865 or 1866 that he began to feel earnestly about religion. We have omitted to mention that the Pandit Sastry was engaged when one or two years old to a baby girl of two or three months. In point of fact, he says, in his essay on his uncle, this custom of giving little babies in marriage prevails among Kulin Brahmins in Bengal even now, though, we are sure, to a considerably smaller extent.

In August 1869, while yet an undergraduate at College, Pandit Sastry was formally initiated into Brahmoism on the same day as the late Mr. Ananda Mohan Bose. Even his uncle who had stood by him when his father excluded him on account of his participation in the widow marriage movement, cast him away. His father himself left his village home in despair and went to spend his last years in Benares. Before doing so, he expelled his apostate son with his girl wife and infant daughter from his house, leaving young Sastry to maintain himself and his little family from the scholarships he had won. The fact that he had joined the Keshub party, which had split in 1866 from the Adi Brahma Samaj of Maharshi Devendra Nath Tagore on the question of Brahman Ministers of the Samaj continuing to wear the holy thread, no doubt, made more bitter the estrangement from his relatives. The Maharshi had yielded on many points to Keshub, including the abrogation of the rule that only Brahmans should be Ministers of the Samaj. But when Keshub demanded that no Brahman should be a minister unless he threw off his holy thread, the Maharshi refused. Whereupon Keshub formed a new Samaj. It was into this Samaj that Pandit Sivanath Sastri was initiated. "Up to 1868," he writes, "my sympathies were rather with the Adi Brahma Samaj than with the Brahma Samaj of India of Keshub Chander Sen. Born in a shakta family, accustomed to shakti worship from childhood, I had an inborn repugnance to the Vaishnava khond kartal, the musical instruments of sankirtan." But he gave up this prejudice under the influence of Keshub. The real cause of the schism was caste. Keshub who was a non-Brahmin wanted to break the tradition of Brahman leadership which the Brahma movement had inherited from Ram Mohan Roy, and which had been confined by the succession to its headship of Mahashri Devendra Nath Tagore, who were both Brahmans. That Sivanath Sastry, a Brahman, should have elected to throw in his lot with the Keshub party and not with the Adi Brahma Samaj, says a great deal for his strength of character and conviction. The same qualities were even more strongly exhibited when later Pandit Sastry with Ananda Mohan Bose fell off from Keshub when he gave his daughter—a tender girl—in marriage to the heir to the gadi of Cooch-Bihar. Pandit Sivanath Sastry has given a vivid description of the meeting convened to send a letter of protest to Keshub, on the night of 2nd February, 1878.

The proceedings commenced with earnest prayer and we sat deliberating till about 2 A. M. when the question of sending the letter was decided upon and its points settled. But a new difficulty arose at that point. Our friends Messrs D. M. Das, late Vakil of the High Court, and D. N. Ganguli, late Assistant Secretary of the Indian Association, raised the question as to the next step we wanted to take, in case Mr. Sen gave no heed to our letter. Were we prepared, they asked, to start a new Samaj? Every one was taken aback, for they had not thought over such a contingency till then. Myself and my friend (Bose) positively declared that such a thought was till then out of our mind, and that we were earnestly hoping that things would settle down, without leading to a rupture in the body.

The break came. It had to come. Keshub had broken the Brahmanic tradition in the Samaj. But there was a far deeper and more inveterate tradition of which, in fact, the Brahmanic tradition was but a symptom, which he could not break, and which broke him. It was the tradition of belief without practice, faith without works, speech without action. It is as deep-rooted in the non-Brahman as the Brahman. Caste may be abolished but unless this also goes, things will be no better. Keshub foiled in the field of action, betook himself to mysticism. The stern nature of Pandit Sastry revolted. The Sadaran Brahma Samaj was founded. For now nearly a generation, Pandit Sivanath Sastry has been its most venerated head. We rather think that of late years he was not quite satisfied with some developments in the Sadharan Samaj. That is, however, another story. Pandit Sastry was one of the founders of the City College. We have no space to recount the manifold missionary activities of the late great reformer. To him may be truthfully applied the resounding lines from the Epilogue to Asolando. He was

One who never turned his back, but marched breast forward,

Never doubted clouds could break,

Never dreamed, though right were worsted, wrong would triumph,

Held we fall to rise, are baffled to fight better,
Sleep to wake.

POST GRADUATE TEACHING IN THE UNIVERSITY OF CALCUTTA.

The report of the Council of the Post Graduate Teaching of the Calcutta University during the session 1918-19 just to hand is an interesting record of work. The late Vice-Chancellor, Sir Asutosh Mookerjee, reviews the working of these Councils, with genuine gratification which does one good to see. The originality of the experiment and the boldness of its aspirations are equalled only by the success of the scheme and the supreme confidence of Sir Asutosh. He claims with pardonable pride that "nothing like this has ever been achieved or even attempted in any Indian University." The difficulties have been enormous and they have suffered from lack of funds and sometimes from lack of sympathy.

There are two Councils, one for teaching in Arts and the other in Science, and the task before these two Councils is stupendous. We will try briefly to indicate their scope. During the year under review the work of instruction and investigation was carried on in seventeen different branches of study. In the Department of English there were 521 students in the fifth and sixth year classes. In this subject there are two divisions, one predominantly literary and the other chiefly linguistic. The Council has decided that lectures by themselves are not sufficient, and individual research work is practically enforced. There were 21 teachers for 521 students in English making an average of one teacher for 25 students.

The next department is Sanskrit with 3 students in the two classes with a teaching staff of 20 university professors. The organisation for Higher Sanskrit studies had not been undertaken a moment too soon in this University. Sanskrit is in the domain of learning an empire by itself. The qualifications of the teachers are of the highest and we can assert without hesitation that such a galaxy of Sanskritists of a variety of types have not been brought together for purposes of instruction in any university of the world.

The next is the department of Pali or Buddhistic studies. Here the number of students was 7 and there were 10 professors. In Pali as well as Sanskrit there were scholars trained in western methods as also those brought up under the indigenous system. The orthodox teachers in Pali belong to the sect of celibate monks for whom it is sacrilege to accept service. This combination of teachers is a unique feature and is likely to lead to fruitful results in the domain of Buddhistic learning.

Comparative Philology, for reasons quite obvious does not attract very many students and there were only 3 students in the two classes. The next in the syllabus are the Islamic Studies, Arabic and Persian, which attracted 9 students. But Mental and Moral Philosophy was more popular, the total number of students being 175. The staff consists of 17 teachers all of them of the highest academic distinction.

A most interesting item is the department of Experimental Psychology which has taken a full dozen years to start. Here there were 22 students. It is significant that this is the first Indian university where arrangements have been made for the systematic study of Experimental Psychology.

The course in History was very crowded, there being 189 students in the general course alone. The second division consisted of a special course in Ancient Indian History and Culture. Many wondered at the boldness of the idea of a separate degree for this branch of study alone but time has proved that the course in its entirety would be too vast for the comprehension of any student within the time at his disposal.

The subject of Economics opens up an attractive and illimitable field of work with a variety of avenues divided into two divisions, Political Economy and Political Philosophy. The studies had to be carried on with special reference to Indian conditions and in all there were no less than 18 different subjects in this group in which instruction had to be provided.

Mathematics lies on the borderland between Arts and Science. There were 192 students in Pure Mathematics and 45 students in Applied Mathematics. In the department of Physics there were 56 students in all which is a record number for the University. It is highly gratifying to note that the demand for instruction is very great, but it is a pity that many applicants had to be refused admission for want of accommodation and lack of laboratory appliances. The development of Physical Science in its modern ramifications has been astonishing in scope and variety, and as a consequence it has been decided to have, in addition to the general course of lectures, special courses on a number of topics which make a formidable list of 16 advanced series.

In Chemistry there were 46 students and a staff of 12 teachers of unexceptionable professional qualifications. The department of Botany has not attracted as much attention as one would have wished. The total number of students being only 12. In physiology there were 9 students, the staff consisting of two lecturers. The arrangements in Geology were by no means adequate and there were only 6 students on the whole:

Sir Asutosh maintains that "higher teaching is likely to be of little value unless it is imparted by men who are themselves engaged in extending the boundaries of knowledge." Where so many contributions of high value and abiding interest have been made in a variety of directions, it will seem invidious to select a few for special mention. Mr. Shama Sastry of Mysore, the greatest living authority on the Artha-Sastra of Kautilya, delivered a course of inspiring lectures on his wonderful work. Babu Surendra-nath Sen has entered the promising field of the Administrative system of Shivaji, and a volume on the Inscriptions of Asoka by Prof. Bhandarkar and Babu Surendra Nath Majumdar is ready for publication.

At the top of all these comes the arrangement for the study of Chinese, Japanese and Tibetan. These languages furnish abundant material for the exploration of Ancient Indian History and Culture. Dr. Vidyabhusan has also in hand the preparation of an elaborate index of the two great Tibetan Encyclopaedias which occupy 225 volumes and embody translations of more than five thousand Sanskrit books which have disappeared from India. Arrangements have also been made for the study of French, Dutch and German both by the students and the teachers. Professor Seal has during the last two years carried on an investigation on statistical principles and methods of the history of examinations in this University. No other country or University probably possesses a collection of statistical records like this affecting hundreds of thousands of students and the exploration of this untrodden field is likely to yield results of great significance for educational re-organisation in this country.

There have been also arrangements made for the scientific study of the Indian Vernaculars. Instruction is given in Bengali as a principal subject with a number of other vernaculars as subsidiary subjects, including Assamese, Oriya, Hindi, Maharatti, Gujarathi, Telugu, Tamil, Canarese Malayalam, Sinhalese and Maithili. The enthusiasm which has been roused by the scheme for the institution of special degrees in Indian Vernaculars is really inspiring.

The contributions of the professors figure prominently in journals of the highest standing in Europe and America. This is most emphatically true of the members of the Physics and Chemistry department. The researches of Prof. C. V. Raman and his colleagues have made their name familiar and have secured for their views respectful consideration in academic circles in Europe and America. In Chemistry the researches of Sir P. C. Ray, Dr. P. C. Mitter etc., have helped not merely to maintain but also to advance the reputation of the Calcutta School of Chemistry founded by Sir P. C. Ray. Indeed, contributions by members of the staff have become so prolific that the University has undertaken the publication of two journals, one for the department of Letters and one for that of Science.

The fact that many of the workers are in the prime of life is of immense significance. It indicates that a magnificent opportunity for academic work has been opened out to the present generation, such as never came within the reach or even the vision of the generation now about to pass away.

THE PROBLEM OF CASTES IN INDIA. I

The Hon. Mr. Patel's Hindu Marriage Validating Bill has created a great stir in the orthodox section of the Hindu community. The latter have gone so far as to apprehend that the passing of the Bill into a Law, will produce nothing but hybrid castes in India. Let the wise and the thoughtful see, how far those people who declare it as a mischievous plot against the Hindu Society, are justified on social or religious grounds. Let it first be considered thoroughly how far the present-day castes are quite identical with those of the ancient days.

The advent of the Europeans, and the introduction of railways, modern methods of trade, and machinery in India, have made it impossible for the Hindus to follow and act according to the ancient canons of Society. The old social organisation as legislated for by the ancients, is not practically suited for the people of to-day, who live in an age, quite different from theirs, and from the days of Manu. In all directions, people are deserting their traditional occupations which according to the ancient order are the chief characteristic features of their castes, and now a man's occupation is no longer the sure index of his particular caste. The Brahman and the Shudra travel in the same train, and the people of all castes are crowded up in the same streets of big towns. While on a journey it is impossible for a Brahman to do his daily duties properly, and he cannot observe strictly the rules of eating and drinking. The rigid barriers between the people of one caste and the other seem to be broken a little, though the process is exceedingly slow. The majority of the people are still very punctilious in matters of eating, drinking, and various other kinds of social functions.

There is not a single place on the face of this earth, where one may not come across the division of the people, in different social groups. In modern Europe the social intercourse is confined to the people belonging to the same social standing. But there is no hard and fast boundary between one class and the other. No class dominates over the other. A man of lower social group can raise himself to the position of a proud aristocrat, and thus has the freedom of moving in the highest circle of society. Every one is left alone to decide his own case. He can take a wife from any class, and have social intercourse with the people without any fear of interference or penalty. The Hindus, on the other hand, are divided into innumerable castes and sub-castes, and they are compelled to abstain from eating and drinking or having any social intercourse with the people not belonging to their castes. A Hindu must take a wife from his own fold, and he must observe the ceremonies customary to his caste fellows. There are countless restrictions forced upon each group, and they are so deeply rooted in them, that an average Hindu lacks the moral courage to act independently or to do any thing of which his caste disapproves.

The word "caste" being of Portuguese origin, meaning "breed" or "class," does not express fully the sense conveyed by the Sanskrit word "Varna" or "Jati". As the word "caste" has been in vogue conventionally, let us adopt it for our purpose. It was Manu who laid down the rules and regulations for each caste, so that the duties allotted to each may be fully and carefully explained, and the progress of the country may not be retarded. He stands as an authority, and there is no Hindu who dare question the truths expounded by him and the rules laid down by him. Though much of inconsistency is observed in the Manu-Smriti, yet this does not, in any way, weaken the faith of the Hindus in this sacred book. Fictitious laws have been introduced by unknown persons to serve their own interests, yet much of the matter remains unpolluted. Let us see what he has to say in regard to the duties of each caste.

Manu tells us that there were only four principal castes in his days. He, after laying down the duties for the four castes, the rules of discipline, ceremony, and rites, and telling us something about education, Shradh, and the Veda-study, classifies the legitimate and illegitimate issues of hybrid castes, and has given separate names for classes formed by half-breeds. The history of India has changed since the days of Manu. The colour of the skin of the people has changed, their forms and figures changed, and even their languages have become different. At the present time, it is extremely difficult to trace out the caste of a man from the colour of his skin, or the cut of his nose, even by physiognomy. Judging from Manu's point of view, we have not true Brahmanas, Kshatriyas Vaishyas and Shudras who inherit the qualities of their predecessors.

According to Manu, the Brahmanas alone could teach the Vedas, and nobody else. In our days we see the deplorable condition of the illiterate and uneducated Brahmanas. Should they, then, be allowed to call themselves the true successors of those intellectual giants and the spiritual leaders of the ancient Aryavarta? Many of the modern days, have taken to trade. The punishment inflicted on such Brahmanas, according to Manu, is that they should be judged as Shudra! He says that those Brahmanas who sell milk even for three days, become Shudras; then what to say of those Brahmanas, whose very source of income is from selling milk! We have scholars in Sanskrit, and of Vedic literature, who are not only non-Brahmanas, but foreigners. The number of educated Brahmanas sinks into minority when compared with the people of other castes, who are comparatively more highly educated. How many Brahmanas have we then, who represent the priestly class of the days of Manu? The other castes too, are not free from degeneration. The Kshatriyas have lost the proud privilege of being the protectors of the country. In the regular military forces, we have very few of the Kshatriyas. Many of them are engaged in trade, services, vocations not prescribed for them. No longer the Shudras are to remain in their degraded positions. Societies have been formed, for the improvement of the "untouchables." Some of them are receiving higher education in schools and colleges.

THE AMATEUR DRAMATIC ASSOCIATION, BANGALORE.

The stage has in all ages been recognised as a potent factor in popular education, combining as it happily does, instruction and amusement. What Poetry and Fiction do for the cultured few, Drama does for the uncultured and unlettered many in lightening their cares and helping them to a right appreciation of life.

It is a matter of common knowledge that the Indian Stage has not, however, been fulfilling its legitimate function, having, with but few honorable exceptions, been monopolised by persons with no pretensions to culture or character, and having been largely given over to frivolity in varying degrees, with neither the desire nor the capacity to aid in the advancement of genuine Art. This unfortunate change in what was once a useful social institution, bound up with some of the best instincts of human nature, has gone so far as to lead some persons seriously to maintain that there is something radically vicious in the whole theory and principle of the stage and therefore to advocate its being put down with an aggressive hand. But fortunately for the Art of which the Stage is a prominent exponent, there is a great and ever increasing number of persons that do not forget that some of the best representatives of Poetic genius in the East and the West wrote for the Stage; and that Kalidasa and Shakespeare wield even to day the Magic Wand of Prospero over the imagination of mankind not only by the infinite charms they have for the most refined taste of Scholars but also by the facility with which their sublime and thoughtful teaching may be brought delightfully home to simple minds through the medium of the Stage. They would therefore make no futile attempts to destroy this useful Public Institution, but would rather strive to remove its abuses and to elevate it stone.

Attempts at resuscitating the Indian Stage have been going on for some time past in Bengal, in the Maharashtra, in the Andhra and the Tamil Countries with great success. The association possesses in one capacity or another eminent persons such as H. H. The Yuvaraja of Mysore, Dr. Rabindranath Tagore, the late Messrs. D. Krishnamacharlu and Kolachalam Srinivasa Rao of Bellary and V. Krishna-swamiyer of Madras, the Hon'ble Mr. T. V. Seshagiri Iyer, Dewan Bahadur M. J. S. Chakravarti and Mr. T. Raghavachari with several amateurs and it is a gratifying sign of the willingness of educated public opinion to rescue the stage from the undesirable hands into which it has fallen. It was a desire to take up this work and extend it in the Kannada Country as well that led to the starting of the Bangalore Amateur Dramatic Association in 1909.

The objects of the Association have been laid down as:—
(a) The study and cultivation of the histrionic and other Fine arts, (b) the improvement of Indian Dramatic and other Art Literature, (c) the raising of the tone of the Indian stage, (d) the advancement of the Civic and Social progress of the people.

And the means among others are: (a) the representation of dramas on the Stage, the production of original dramatic and other art literature, lectures and exhibitions, (b) games, entertainments and socials.

During the first few years, the Association confined its attention to the stagic representation of Shakespearian Dramas. It was the uniformly sympathetic and generous reception accorded to these shows by the educated public of Bangalore and Mysore, that led to the opening of a Telugu section and nearly a Dozen different dramas some of the masterpieces of the late Messrs Dr. Krishnamacharlu and Kollachalam Srinivasa Rao and Mr. D. Gopala Charlu of Bellary have been staged before distinguished audiences in Bangalore and Mysore. Among the guests of the Association were H. H. the Yuvaraja of Mysore, and Dr. Rabindranath Tagore. The Association considers it a gratifying token of public approval of their efforts that on most of these occasions people have been seen in the theatre who otherwise rarely darken its doors. The Association staged twenty plays in each of the years 1917-18 and 1918-19, in Bangalore Mysore and Madras.

In 1917 the Association instituted a prize for a Histrionic competition and the Prize was given away by Sir Leslie C. Miller.

In 1916 the Association instituted a Prize for an Essay on the late Mr. Gokhale. In 1919 A Prize of Rs. 250/- was instituted for the best Kannada Drama on a Historical or a Social subject. 10 plays have already been received and are in the hands of the Judges. Another Prize of the value of Rs. 50 was instituted for the best short humorous sketch in Kannada on some Topical subject. 7 Sketches have been received and the Prize was awarded to "Tolu Gatti" by Mr. T. P. Kalianam B.A., Etc. By kind permission, the last two prizes have been associated with the name of the Patron of the Association H. H. the Yuvaraja of Mysore, who has graciously consented to give them away himself. Since 1917 periodical meetings of a Religious-Literary nature have been held at which Lectures of and Readings from eminent authors such as Tagore, Sir Edwin Arnold, Sister Niveditta, Gokhale and others were followed by Poja and Bhajana. The first of the series of Public Lectures contemplated by the Association was delivered in September 1918 by Mr. C. R. Reddy M.A. I.C. of Education in Mysore on Drama in the East and West. (The Lecture with the Presidential Remarks of Dewan Bahadur J. S. Chakravarti has since been printed and published by the Association.), The Association maintains a small Library and is furnished with 16 Periodicals.

In January 1919 the Association organised the Festival of Fine Arts. At the request of the Association Dr. Rabindranath Tagore came down to Bangalore to preside at the opening ceremony of the Festival, when the Association had the privilege of presenting the distinguished guest with an address enclosed in a suitable casket. The Programme of the Festival week included a Fine Arts Exhibition at which were put on view Exhibits of the Modern Bengal School of Painting, copies of Ajanta Frescoes, casts of Vijayanagar Sculpture, specimens of the Mogul and the Rajput and South Indian Schools of Painting, besides specimen art-crafts from Mysore and elsewhere.

The Association hopes to keep up and increase its activities in the fields of art and social service. When financial considerations permit, it hopes to give free entertainments and carry amusement with instruction to the very doors, as it were, of even the poorest; to organise an Art Gallery of which it possesses a small nucleus; to introduce greater opportunities of club life for its members by the provision of games and by putting up a building and theatre of its own.

THE CASUALTIES AT THE JALLIANWALLA BAG.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

In the course of the debate on the Indemnity Bill in the Imperial Legislative Council on the 19th instant, the Hon. Mr. Thompson is reported by the Associated Press to have made the following remarks regarding the casualties at the Jallianwalla Bag of Amritsar on the 13th April, 1919, "Coming to the Jallianwalla Bag incident, he (Mr. Thompson) said that the casualties there according to Pandit Malaviya amounted to 580. Now the Government of the Punjab had adopted every means in its power to ascertain the actual number of deaths there. A proclamation was made in Amritsar and the surrounding villages inviting all persons who had any information regarding the names of deaths. Instructions were issued to the local authorities there to encourage men to come forward and give information they possessed. Every possible step was taken in that direction. The result of the enquiry was that the total number of casualties amounted to 291, and any further number suggested by any body must be taken with great discretion."

As the question is one of more than passing interest, may I venture to intrude on your hospitality and, through the medium of your esteemed, journal to state the correct facts bearing on the point. Before proceeding further, I feel I should mention the fact that I have been working at Amritsar from the 18th July, 1919, in connection with the distribution under the auspices of the Allahabad Seva Samiti of relief to the sufferers from the recent disturbances. Owing to the nature of the work entrusted to me, I have had to make, from the very day I came here, strenuous efforts to ascertain the number of the killed and the wounded at the Jallianwalla Bag. The method pursued by our volunteers has been to go from house to house in the City of Amritsar, ascertaining the names not only of the killed, but also of the wounded. I further arranged to send out volunteers to visit every single village in the districts of Amritsar, Gurdaspur, Sialkot & Lahore so that we might give relief to their dependents in case of want. We are also advertising in the Urdu and Gurmukhi papers of the Punjab, asking people to communicate to the office the names and addresses of the killed and the wounded. We have so far finished the district of Amritsar only, and I am awaiting the reports of our volunteers who are touring in the remaining three districts.

I think that what has been said above will suffice to satisfy even the Hon. Mr. Thompson that the figure mentioned by our President, the Hon. Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya is not based on mere unattested hearsay, but has been arrived at as a result of several weeks' patient, and hard labour. The number of the killed, so far known to us, comes up to 530, including 60 who could not be traced and, unknown and unclaimed, were cremated by certain philanthropic gentlemen. We have also received the names of over 200 persons who were wounded but have now recovered. Thus the total casualties come up to 730, of which 530 were killed and 200 wounded. Our lists are however not yet complete and I expect that some more names will have yet to be added. The figure of 291 given by the Hon. Mr. Thompson is therefore a palpable understatement.

I know that the Officiating Deputy Commissioner of Amritsar issued on the 11th August, 1919, a proclamation, asking people to Communicate up to the 20th August the names of the killed to the Health Officer, Amritsar. He also asked the Patwaris to send in the lists from villages. But the Officiating Deputy Commissioner knows, and the Hon. Mr. Thompson does not know, how much the people here are terror-stricken and how reluctant they are to supply the information to the public authorities. Mr. Puckle therefore requested me to assure the people that those who communicated the information in their possession would in no way be harassed or prosecuted. I accordingly issued a notice in Urdu and Gurmukhi, asking the people to come forward and give information. Notwithstanding this, several persons could not muster courage enough to give the information to the Health Officer. As regards the reports from the Patwaris, the less said the better. I will content myself with saying only this much that their reports have in several cases, been found by us to be grossly inaccurate.

I should like to know if the Punjab Government has made any attempt to find out the names of the persons belonging to districts other than Amritsar, who were killed or wounded on the 13th April. So far as I know, no such attempt has been made. And yet it is known to all that a considerable number of persons present at the Jallianwalla Bag were drawn from the ranks of those outsiders who had come on account of the great Baisakhi day to Amritsar from such far-off places as Peshawar, Rawalpindi, Montgomery, Campbellpur and Srinagar (Kashmir). We have got the names of the killed belonging to these places in our list, but they are not to be found in the official list, copy of which has been supplied to us through the courtesy of the Officiating Deputy Commissioner. In the face of these facts, I venture to suggest with great respect to the Hon. Mr. Thompson that he is wrong in saying that "every possible step was taken in that direction." I assert that "every possible step" has not been taken to ascertain the names of the killed and the wounded. I further say that such action as has been taken was not taken until it was too late. And having regard to the facts narrated above I would in all humility request the Hon. Mr. Thompson to take his figure of 292 "with great discretion."

Yours truly,
V. N. TIVARY,

(Member, Servants of India Society.)

Honorary Secretary,
Seva Samiti, Allahabad.

Amritsar.
21st September 1919.

THE PLAGUE OF ANNOTATIONS.

To
The Editor of the Indian Social Reformer
Sir,

Sometime back a correspondent of the Chronicle under the pseudonym "A Recluse" while criticising in his article entitled 'Students and Loyalty' stated: "If students are told to accept the guidance of their teachers, they may understand definitely what to do. But in the first place all teachers are not of the same political persuasion. No teacher, unless his salary and prospects are assured by Government, will constantly risk his popularity by criticising newspapers and men of light and leading. You cannot expect students to be independent thinkers." Well as a matter of fact, students are encouraged by some external resources to be totally slavish to ideas and thoughts of others on any matter, and the reason of it is quite succinct. Just imagine the present day student, who is confronted, as it were, with so many text books prescribed by the University authorities, and, at the same time there are so many notes and catchisms on them—which generally are a sort of mania very commonly to be found in our educated persons and, I am sorry to state, some of the members of the I. E. S., who unnecessarily take the uncalled for trouble of annotating them and to which, it must be said in all fairness, the present day student cannot resist the temptation of being slavish.

I do not comprehend whether students are benefited by such notes, for as I have already stated they are encouraged by other resources to be slavish to thoughts of others on any fundamental subject, and there is no doubt that such notes do bring them success in their respective examinations after twice or four times administering to themselves that universally acknowledged bad habit of cramping, which has now been detested by every thoughtful person. Are not students I ask, in a position to prepare their own notes on any prescribed text book by the valued help of their professors and teachers? Can they not after independently thinking surmount their difficulties and thereby develop the power of independence in themselves? There are too many notes on different books edited by many educated persons, which naturally prevent even the careful student from taking the trouble of thinking over any problem independently. Thus the learned correspondent of the Chronicle is justified in stating that students are not independent thinkers. For how can they be independent in their thoughts under such circumstances?

If students do not comprehend their own interests that notes on their prescribed text books are a sort of great danger to their future career, then it is quite but natural that the same sort of bad habit will be developed in them, with the result that they will be completely non-plussed and wait for others' opinions, when they are called upon to express their own opinion on any fundamental subject. Let us therefore hope that students who are the future citizens of their country, will shake of this wretched habit of merely depending upon their notes and thereby develop the power of self investigation and self-help.

K. D. UMRIKAR.

DEVALAYA RESEARCH LIBRARY. CALCUTTA.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer,
Sir,

Need has always been felt of a library containing books on the lives and works of workers, religious and social, of all denominations and also books that they have left behind for the instruction and guidance of posterity. Apart from its great value to the general reader such a library is of great help to any one who wants to carry on researches in the social and religious history of his country and in the process of the development of religious and social ideas and institutions. With the spread of education and growth of new ideals the spirit of research in every field, especially in the real history of the country has been awakened in many of our countrymen, but the facilities afforded to them for such researches in our country are not too many. It is with the object of affording facilities to research studies that a Research Library and Free Reading Room has been established in the Devalaya. It is the desire of the authorities to make this library a complete collection of books on social and religious workers of all communities and also of their writing as practicable under the circumstances. The task is a great one in which success can't be attained without the co-operation of friends and sympathisers. It is not the work of a single person, or of one community or even of a generation. The present times are hard, the country is suffering from high prices of articles of food and other necessaries of life; it is not therefore, the time to appeal for funds, but we may begin the work and hope adequate pecuniary help will come when times are better. Depending on God this day we open the library to the public. Therefore our present appeal to the generous public is not for funds—but for books, for sympathy and co-operation, we hope this our humble appeal will not fail to draw sympathetic response from the country.

The books of this library will be available to all readers in the Devalaya reading room which will be open from 7 to 9 A. M. and 4 to 7 P. M. daily. Only in exceptional cases will books of this library be allowed to be taken home. Newspapers and periodicals also will be kept in the reading room. Special consideration will be shown to those readers who intend to carry on research studies in some branch of the religious or social history of the country.

SASIPADA BANERJEE.

Calcutta, September 1st 1919.

A PUNJABI LADY OXONIAN.

"Oxford Majlis" (which is the name of the Indian Society at Oxford University) had, for the first time in its history, a Lady President during the last Trinity term, which terminated about the end of June. This young lady (Miss Shukla Behari Lal) hails from the Punjab, and is the daughter of a practical social reformer—Dr. Behari Lal Dhingra, Chief Medical officer of Jind State. She went to England before the War, and joined the Somerville College about three years ago. She was very popular socially, and was in a great measure responsible for the successful organisation of the Indian Conference—a purely social congregation—in England, which held its first session last year and the second during June this year. The "Oxford Majlis" held a reception in honour of their Lady President last June, and presented her with a handsome souvenir. Miss Behari Lal left homewards soon after that, in order to spend the hot weather with her parents at Mussoorie.

INTERMARRIAGES IN UPPER INDIA.

We take these two items from a recent issue of the Leader Allahabad.

Pandit Kesava Dasa Shastri of Benares will arrive in India some time in October. He will be married to an American lady in Bombay according to the Vedic rites. This lady and her sister are coming to India with him and both will formally join the Arya Samaj here. Pandit Keshava Deva Shastri is now an M. D. and will, therefore, remain a physician as he was before he had left India. His activities will be exclusively social and religious to which he will devote his energies mainly. All enquiries about the date of his arrival, etc., should be made to the secretary, Arya Samaj, Benares city.

The marriage of Mr Senkar Saran, B.A. (Oxon), bar-at-law, son of Munshi Ishwar Saran, vakil, High Court, at Allahabad, has been settled with the daughter of Babu Lakshmi Sahai, B. A., state forest officer of Alwar. The bridegroom is a Srivastava (Dacre) and the bride an Asthana.

Increased Salaries: In reply to a question from the Hon. Mr. B. N. Sarma, it was stated on behalf of Government that the cost per annum of increased salaries sanctioned since January 1919, was:—(i) Army matrons in Hospital stations Rs. 4,50,000; revised rates of furlough to Indian Army and Medical Service Officers. Rs. 3,30,000; (ii) Indian Police Service Rs. 13,00,000, (iii) Indian Forest Service. Rs. 4,50,000, Indian Medical Service (civil and military) Rs. 25,00,000, (v) Educational Service Rs. 2,50,000. Total Rs. 52,80,000. These do not include the contemplated revisions in respect of pensions and other allowances of the Civil Services including Police, Forest and Educational, on the lines of the recommendations of the Public Services Commission. The Government do not know how far additional taxation may be ultimately necessary to meet the expenditure involved by these increases of pay coupled with the revisions of the pay of subordinate establishments which have been recently carried out or are under contemplation in the various provinces.

The Religious and Charitable Endowments Bill: The Hindu of Madras is not satisfied with the Religious and Christable Endowments Bill which the Government of India have introduced. It characterises it as halting and timid. Our contemporary holds that the solicitude expressed by the Home Member for orthodox opinion, may be more appropriately displayed in other directions. "If Sir William is so anxious to placate orthodox feeling, writes our contemporary, why then do the Government withhold from the people their right to withdraw their children from the religious classes in Protestant Mission institutions? There is a vital distinction, however, between the two cases which should be obvious. In regard to the conscience clauses the demand is based on the pledge of the non-interference with religious beliefs or worship of His Majesty's subjects which the Government have solemnly held out and which Sir William relied on. As regards charitable or religious endowments, it is the primary duty of the Government, in the interests of public morality, to see that the objects of such trusts are fulfilled, and that ordinary precautions are taken against abuses, malversation of funds and mismanagement. It is not interference with such trusts if efficient measures are taken to see that they are conducted properly; it is on the other hand, a means of promoting their objects. The anxiety about respecting orthodox opinion which the Government often express is of a questionable kind; and they would do well to remember that this orthodox opinion is not always opposed to efficient and honest management of trusts, and where this could be secured only by legislation, then it is the bounden duty of the legislature to provide safeguards against corruption, abuse of authority and misappropriation of trust funds and trust property, whatever orthodox opinion may think."

Reorganization of the Indian Medical Service: At the meeting of the Indian Legislative Council on the 15th September, the Hon. Sir Dinshaw Wacha put some searching questions regarding the reorganization of the Indian Medical Service. But His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief met them by pleading that as the report was being considered by the Government of India, it should be treated as confidential. A despatch to the Secretary of State, said His Excellency, has not yet been prepared on the subject as the opinions of Local Governments have not all been received. The report has evidently been sent to Local Governments, and we do not see how it would be disadvantageous to publish it and invite public opinion on it. This Committee sat in camera and examined a few selected witnesses. The Government of India will be in a better position to form an opinion on its report if they had before them the views of the interests affected by the principal recommendations. There is much uneasiness of a justifiable kind as to the effect of the Committee's recommendations on the position of Indians in relation to the Indian Medical Service; and it is certainly desirable to remove it.

The attention of our overseas subscribers is drawn to our advertisement printed below. We were obliged to increase the rates from 8 shillings to 12 shillings owing to the increase in exchange.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

DO YOU WISH TO KNOW YOUR
"FUTURE"

Send your time and date of birth or your star and age or note the time when you write this letter, you will be given a full reading of your life or one year to come for ONE RUPEE ONLY. Mr. Ghazanfar Muhammad Khan, Deputy Collector, writes from Moradabad City. "The one year life reading you sent me proved to be QUITE TRUE."

THE KALINGA ASTROLOGICAL BUREAU,
Chodavaram, Vizagapatam District.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postage
, In advance. In arrears.
Per annum..... Rs. 6-0-0. Rs. 6-0-0.
Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, twelve shillings (Rs. 6).
Single copies of the current year can be had at 4 annas each and any back copies at 6 annas each.

Wanted:—An accomplished and educated widow of any Caste to marry a Brahmin widower in decent position. For other particulars please apply to X C/o The Indian Social Reformer, Bombay.

Wanted:—Employment, as teacher or governess, by an educated Brahman widow with midwifery training and medical practice, well-versed in music and the Vina; proficient in English, Sanskrit, Telugu and Canarese, and speaking Tamil and Hindustani nols. Please apply to K. R. C/o. The Indian Social Reformer, Bombay."

GALE'S MAGAZINE.

Linn A. E. Gale, Editor and Publisher.
Champion of Socialism, New Thought, Occultism,
Internationalism and Birth Control

(Contains such articles as:

- "The Birth Pangs of Revolution"
- "The World That Is To Be"
- "The Psychic Meaning of the War"
- "Judas Iscariot and the Bolsheviki"
- "Are We Hypnotized?"

The only Advanced Thought Magazine in English in Mexico. A Journal That is Indispensable to All Who Want to Understand the Signs of the Times.

$ 2 a year, American money. $ 1 for 6 months.
20c a copy. No Free Samples. Remit by bank draft on New York or personal check.

GALE'S MAGAZINE,
P. O. Box 518
Mexico City, D. F., Mexico

THE TATA INDUSTRIAL BANK, LD.

HEAD OFFICE, BOMBAY.
BRANCHES—CALCUTTA and HYDERABAD (Deccan)
CANNANPORE and LUCKNOW.

Sub-Branches.—

Bombay—Share Bazaar, Shroff Bazaar.

Calcutta—Barr Bazaar.

London Agents. LLOYDS BANK LIMITED.

NEW YORK AGENTS: THE GUARANTY TRUST COY. OF NEW YORK.

AUTHORISED CAPITAL... Rs. 12,00,00,000.

SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL..... " 7,56,00,225.

PAID UP CAPITAL..... " 1,50,99,225.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Sir D. J. Tata, Kt., Chairman.

Sir Sassoon David, Bart.

Sir R. N. Mookerjee, K. C. I. E.

Sir Francis Stewart, Kt.

Sir Henry Proctor, Kt.

R. D. Tata, Esq.

F. E. Dinshaw, Esq.

F. O. Rimington, Esq.

Narottam Morarjee, Esq.

Hajee Gulam Mahomed Ajam, Esq.

The Hon'ble Mr. Purshottamdas Thakordas. C. I. E.

A. J. Bilimoria, Esq.

Secretary, R. H. Parker.

Current Accounts opened and interest allowed on daily credit balances from Rs. 500/- to Rs. 1,00,000/- at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum. If the balance to the credit of any account does not fall below Rs. 25,000/- at any time between 1st January and 30th June, interest will be allowed during that period at 2½ % per annum. No interest is allowed unless the sum accrued amounts to Rs. 8/- Half-yearly.

Fixed Deposits. Interest allowed on Deposits fixed for one or two years and for shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank. Interest allowed on Savings Bank Accounts at 4 per cent per annum. Rules may be obtained on application.

Loans and Cash Credits are granted on approved securities.

Purchases and sales of Securities and shares effected.

Bills of Exchange purchased and collected and every description of Banking and exchange business undertaken.

14-4-18. J. PAGAN DALZELL Acting Manager.

THE YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK, LIMITED.

(Registered in Japan.)

Established 1880.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 48,000,000.

Paid up Capital.....Yen. 42,000,000.

Reserve Fund.....Yen. 28,100,000.

Head Office:—Yokohama.

Branches and Agencies at Bombay, Buenos Aires, Calcutta, Changchun, Chi-Nan, Dairen, Fengtien, Hankow, Harbin, Hongkong, Honolulu, Kaiyuan, Kobe, London, Los Angeles, Lyons, Manila, Nagasaki, Newchwang, New York, Osaka, Peking, Rangoon, San Francisco, Seattle, Shanghai, Shimonoseki, Singapore, Soerabaya, Sydney, Tientsin, Tokio, Tsingtao.

Current Deposit Accounts are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at the rate of 2 per cent per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 100,000, provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of banking and exchange business transacted.

N. IGARASHI,

Post Box No. 207, Hornby Road, Bombay.

I. NISHIMAKI,

Manager, Calcutta.

1-12-17.

Post Box No. 406, Olive street, Calcutta

THE BANK OF BARODA, LD.

Under the Patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja Gaekwar. Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897

HEAD OFFICE BARODA.

Branches—Ahmedabad, Navsari Meshana, and Surat

Capital Subscribed... ..Rs. 60,00,000.

Capital Paid up " 20,00,000.

Reserve Fund " 12,50,000.

DIRECTORS :

The Hon'ble Mr. Lallubhai Somaldas, C. I. E., Chairman

Sir Vithaldas Damodar Thackersey, Kt.

Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti Nagar Sheth, Baroda.

Sheth Manilal Revadas, Vadnagar.

Rao Bahadur Gunajirao R. Nimbalker, Sar Subha, Baroda State.

Bhaskerrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., Advocate, High Court, Bombay.

M. H. Kantavalla, Esq., Agent, Maharaja Mill Co., Ltd. Baroda.

R. B. Shirgaokar, Naib Subha, Baroda State.

A. N. Datar, Accountant General, Baroda State.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balance from Rs. 800 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest which does not come to Rs. 3 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, AND CASH CREDITS:

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application. C. E. RANDLE,—General Manager. 15-4-12.

THE CENTRAL BANK OF INDIA, LTD.

Subscribed Capital... ..Rs. 50,00,000

Paid Up Capital" 25,00,000

Reserved liability of

Shareholders" 25,00,000

Reserve Fund" 6,00,000

Head Office:—Alice Building, Bombay.

Local Branches:—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar, (3) Share Bazar.

Branches:—Amritsar, Calcutta, Delhi, Jharla, Karachi.

London Agents:—London Joint City and Midland Bank, Ltd.

Current Accounts :—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June
2½ % allowed on Daily Balances from July to December.

12 months Deposits received at 5 % per annum. Long and Short period Deposits received at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking Business transacted. For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA,

Manager.

25-2-17

Timely advice to the Wealthy

Costly but certain remedies are in the long run cheaper than cheap and uncertain ones.

KANDARPA SANJIVINI PILLS AND OIL

are the safest and surest remedies for indigestion constipation, loss of appetite, memory, mental, physical and nervous debility and all sorts of urinary disorders, improve impoverished blood.

Price per tin of 40 Pills Rs. 5 & per tola of Oil Rs. 10.

Both Purchased at a time Rs. 11/4—

Medical Advice and a Medical Book containing 128 pages sent Gratis and Post Free.

RAJ VAIDYA NARAYANJI KESHAVJI

Head Office :—Jamnagar, Kathiawar, (India.)

Branch :—No. 187, Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY. 24-8-1919.

Empire Hindu Hotel

Opposite Victoria Terminus
Bombay.

(Central Situation)
Strictly Vegetarian
Charges Moderate

Fitted with
Electric Lift, Fans and Lights.

TELEGRAMS: TELEPHONE

"FOOD," BOMBAY. } 2789.

22-8-19.

Saffron? Saffron?? Saffron???

If you wish to buy genuinely pure and best Saffron it is SUN

BRAND SAFFRON

ONLY

It has been largely used by Jain Temples, Maharajas Darbars, Hakims and Vaidyas all over the country for the last 75 year and is well known for its purity and genuineness. S. NARAYEN & Co.,

17-1-18

21, Mummum Street, Fort Bombay.

SHORTHAND.

Like Other Arts and Sciences, Shorthand is subject to the Law of Progress. Based on greatly improved scientific and analogical principles, the Sloan-Duployan system (contained in a compass of 12 lessons) saves a year's laborious study, ensuring highest efficiency and speediest results. Shorthand is the open-door to many well-paid positions, at any rate it will mean advancement for you. Expert Individual or Postal Instructions for a fixed fee, payable in easy monthly instalments. Speed Classes Conducted. Specialised Training Guaranteed. Enclose stamp for booklet, etc. CENTRAL CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE, G. P. O. Box No. 424, Bombay.

"EVERYTHING FOR EVERYBODY"

National Standard Portable Typewriter No. 3 (10 lbs.) Rs. 190
Oliver No. 5 (American Rebuilt) B.S. & Tab. Rs. 175; No. 7 " 200
" 3 (Second-hand) in thorough working order. " 125
Empire No. 1 (Do.) in good working order. " 65
Multikopy Typewriter Carbons, per Box of 100 sheets. " 8
Webster Brand " Ribbons for all machines, Doz. " 21
Typewriter Oil (best 1 oz. bot.) or Eberhard Erasers, Doz. " 6
Safety Razor, Rivals Gillette, with 6 Gillette Blades (best) " 5
Do. (Made in U.S.A.) with 3 spare blades, Set " 1
Portable Electric Battery & lamp (burns 200 hours) compl. " 30
Envelope Making Machine (to make 20,000 per day), New " 36
Full Jewelled Lever Watch (Square or Octagon) Silver " 25
Cenkin's Self filling Fountain Pen (non-leakable) Gold nib " 9
UNIVERSAL BUSINESS SYNDICATE,
20-4-19. Post Box No. 424, Bombay.

HYPNOTISM

PERSONAL MAGNETISM,
WILL POWER,
NERVE FORCE—

Call what you will—

Is the intangible power that controls human destiny. It is the key to all business and social success. This power is no special gift of any one. It is latent in every one. We help you how to display it. By our system, you can learn in a few days at your own home and not only achieve success yourself, but you can influence the mind, health and actions of others to a remarkable.

Write immediately for our free booklet—The Pride of India.

THE LATENT LIGHT CULTURE,
TINNEVELLY, S. INDIA.

Batlivala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 1 each bottle of 100.

Batlivala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 2 each bottle of 100.

Batlivala's Ague Mixture of Fever, Malaria, influenza etc.

Batlivala's Ague Pills for Malaria, Fever, influenza etc.

Batlivala's Tonic pills for pale people & nervous breaks down.

Batlivala's Tooth Powder of Preserving Teeth

Batlivala's Ringworm ointment for Ringworm Dhobi Itch etc.

May be had from all dealers in medicines or from

Dr. H. L. Batlivala Sons & Co., Ltd.

No. 12, Worli, 18, Bombay.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESS :— Doctor Batlivala Dadar

THE BOMBAY CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK.

HEAD OFFICE :—Apollo Street, St., Bombay.

DIRECTORS—The Hon. Sir Fasalbhoy Currimbhoy (Chairman), Sir Vithaldas D. Thackersey, the Hon. Mr. Lajubhai Samaldas, Sir Stanley Reed, the Hon. Mr. C. V. Mehta, the Chief of Ichaikaranji, G. K. Devadhar, Esq., the Hon. Sir P. D. Pattani, the Raja Sahab of Malegaon.

Share Capital (fully paid) Rs. 7,00,000

1 Deposits fixed for one year and shorter or longer period are accepted. Rates and other particulars may be ascertained from the under signed.

2 The Bank finances only registered Co-operative Societies in the Bombay Presidency on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency.

3. Accounts are audited half-yearly by a special Government Auditor, and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the "Bombay Government Gazette."

20-5-17. VAIKUNTH L. MERTA, Manager,

THE BANK OF TAIWAN, LTD.

Incorporated by Special Charter of the Imperial Japanese Government, 1899.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 30,000,000
Paid-up CapitalYen. 22,500,000
Reserve FundYen. 5,680,000

Head Office:—Taipeh, Formosa.

BRANCHES:—

LONDON	SHANGHAI	TOKIO
NEW YORK	HONGKONG	OSAKA
AMOI	SINGAPORE	KOBE
CANTON	SOERABAJA	YOKOHAMA
FOOCHOW	SEMARANG	AKO
HANKOW	MAKUNG	GIRAN
KIUKIANG	BATAVIA	KAGI
SWATOW	PINAN	KARENKO
TAINAN	SHINCHIKU	KEELUNG
TAKOW	TAICHU	TAMSUI

The Bank has also a large number of Correspondents at Home and Abroad.

Current Deposit Accounts :—are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at 2 per cent. per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 1,00,000 provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of Banking and Exchange business transacted.

K. TAKEMURA

Manager

9-12-17.

56, Esplanade Road, Fort, BOMBAY

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

Established 7th September 1906.

Incorporated under the Indian Companies' Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE:

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.

Capital Subscribed Rs. 1,00,00,000
Capital Called up „ 50,00,000
Reserve Fund „ 15,00,000

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½% p. a. throughout the year. On sums exceeding Rs. 1,00,000 interest is allowed by special arrangement. No interest will be allowed which does not amount to Rs. 8 per half year.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short periods @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, & CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stocks at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

M. P. STRINGFELLOW,

15-1-11.

Manager.

A Lady's Best Ornament is a Glorious Head of Hair.

A profusion of rich, soft silky, lustrous, wavy hair—where's the woman who would not like that?

There's only one oil that makes such hair and it's the far-famed

KAMINIA OIL (Regd.)

Invaluable for ladies, and just as much for Brain-Workers and Students.

Heated head cooled, aching disappears and dandruff becomes a thing of the past. Added to all these it possesses a beautiful fragrant smell.

For superiority, awarded a Gold Medal at the Mysore Exhibition, and its great demand all over the country.

If you have not yet used KAMINIA OIL, you

have missed a fine delight and a real boon; use it now, if only once; and like many people you will prefer to use also always

Price per bottle, Rs. 1. V. P. Charges 6 annas extra

Price for 3 bottles Rs. 2-10. V. P. charges 14 annas extra

Write now, Do not delay.

Sole Agents:—

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co., (5-8-16) No. 156, Jumma Masjid Market, BOMBAY.

Now-a-Days.

All things have advanced in price Even the vegetable ingredients used in our Atank Nigrah Pills have advanced in price.

Even the labourers demand heavy wages being dearer. Even the users have increased yet the Atank Nigrah Pills for Toning up the system are sold at before war price i. e. at a Rupee.

Valdyia Shastri

Manishanker Govindji,

Atank Nigrah Pharmacy,

Head Office:—Jamnagar—Kathiawar.

Branch:—Kalbadevi Road, Bombay.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours. Publish Fine Art Pictures, & c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours. 1-12-10. HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS-

ROYAL TONIC PILLS.

powerful Nutritious and Strength Restorer. Price Rs. 1-4 per tin of 30 Pills.

PREPARED BY—GOVINDJEE DAMODER & Co..

Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Commission Agents. 1-12-10. No. 3 Sutar Chawl Market, BOMBAY.

Clean
 Wholesome
 Intelligent
 Entertainment
 IS A GREAT STEP
 IN

SOCIAL REFORM.

When deciding on a
*PLACE OF AMUSEMENT TWO
 ESTABLISHMENTS*

Should at once leap to the mind.

THE EXCELSIOR

BOMBAY'S PREMIER MODERN THEATRE
 AND

THE EMPIRE BOMBAY'S MOST PALATIAL PICTURE THEATRE

Where Film Plays of Distinction are shown
 Every Week.

A
 Great Cinema Masterpiece

is shown,

Both theatres are near the Bori Bunder
 and are run by the

EXCELSIOR SYNDICATE.

The Pioneer of Bombay's
 AMUSEMENT WORLD.

FURUKAWA & CO.

TOKIO

The Largest Manufacturers
in the East

OF

ELECTRIC BARE COPPER CONDUCTORS,

ELECTRIC UNDERGROUND CABLES,

ELECTRIC INSULATED WIRES,

ELECTRIC ACCESSORIES,

INGOTS, RODS, WIRES,

SHEETS, TUBES,

Etc., Etc.,

SOLE AGENTS IN INDIA AND BURMA.

TATA, SONS & CO.,

BOMBAY & CALCUTTA.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS Ltd.

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.
Navsari Building, Fort, BOMBAY.

Works at Porbander, Kathiawad.

11-8-17.

When YOUR EYES

need to be examined by QUALIFIED OCULISTS or by SCIENTIFIC REFRACTIONISTS of 26 year experience, FREE OF CHARGE, you cannot do better than GO TO

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR & CO.

The leading firm of Oculists, Eyesight Specialists, Manufacturing Opticians and suppliers of the patented

"KRYPTOK"

(Invisible one-piece bifocal lens.)

Toric, and all kinds of lenses,—Cylindrical, Spherical, Biconvex, Prismatic, &c., from pebbles as well as from best quality crown glass.

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR

Eyesight Specialist.

With 26 years' Practical Experience.

Has exceptional testimonials from H. H. The Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, the Hon'ble Sir Lawrence Jenkins the Hon. Mr. Justice Batty, Mrs. Batty, the Hon. Sir N. S. Chandavarkar, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beaman, the Hon'ble Sir S. L. Bachelor, the Hon'ble Sir John Heaton Mr. M. G. Jell, M. V. O., Col. R. H. Forman, B. A. M. C., P. M. O. Co. Brigade, Lieut. Col. G. H. Bull, M. D., I. M. S., Lieut.-Colonel Peters M. B., I. M. S., and other high personages.

(7) 379, HORNBY ROW,

Opposite the Government Telegraph Office,
Fort, BOMBAY.

62-11-10.

INTENDING ASSUREES ARE INVITED TO COMPARE THE RATES AND CONDITIONS OF

The Empire of India Life Assurance Company, Limited.

WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.

Head Office 11 Elphinstone Circle, BOMBAY.

SEE REPORT AND OPINIONS OF THE PRESS AS TO THE REMARKABLE PROGRESS MADE BY THE COMPANY.

ENDOWMENT NON-FORFEITABLE POLICY FOR RS. 3,000.

PAYABLE AT AGE 60 OR AT DEATH, IF PREVIOUS, WITH PROFIT.

If, at any time, the assured under this plan should desire to cease paying any more premiums, he can obtain a paid-up Policy for such a proportion of the original sum assured as the number of premiums paid bears to the number agreed upon. Thus a gentleman who had assured at age 30 for a Policy of Rs. 3,000 payable at age 60 or at Death, if previous, after 5 year payments, would be entitled to a Free paid-up Policy for Rs. 600 free of future payments.

MONTHLY PREMIUM.

AT AGE 20, Rs. 6-9-0.

AT AGE 25, Rs. 7-8-0.

AT AGE 30, Rs. 8-14-0.

AT AGE 35, Rs. 10-13-0.

AT AGE 40, Rs. 13-12-0.

AT AGE 45, Rs. 18-10-0

SOME OF THE DISTINCTIVE FEATURES.

* Funds invested in Government Securities and in accordance with the Indian Trusts Act

Policy holders can appoint their own Directors.

90 per cent. of Profits to Participating Policy holders.

Lapsed policies revived without Medical Certificate.

Liberal surrender Values 40 per cent. of the tabular premium paid.

Immediate payment of Claims.

Medical fees and stamps on Policies are payable by the Company.

The sum assured is PAYABLE IN FULL should death occur even immediately after payment of the first premium.

GUARANTEE INSURANCE.—This Company issues Guaranteed Policies in situation of trust and responsibility. 1. specially authorized to guarantee the employees of the Post Office

Proposal Forms and full Particulars may be obtained from any local Agent in India or from 22-9-10. ALLUM, BHARUCHA & CO. Managers.

IN INDIA

EVERY ONE KNOWS.

whom it does concern that we are foremost in supplying the best

COSSI SILK SUIT PIECES

suitable for the season. These pieces are strong, fancy and durable, and have been specially manufactured for India's Market. Each piece guaranteed for One Suit Complete.

Price Rs. 10 per piece.

Write to—THE BHARGAVA COMMERCIAL SOCIETY,

2-18.

Benares City.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER. Contract Rates for Advertisements.

Number of Insertions.	1		2		3		4		5
	Inch.	Column.	Inches.	Column.	Column.	Column.	Column.	Column.	Page.
13	11	0 16	0 20	0 30	0 50	0 60	0 87	0 87	0
25	16	0 25	0 30	0 50	0 87	0 155	0 155	0	0
52	25	0 38	0 50	0 87	0 155	0 300	0 300	0	0

Casual advertisements at Rs. 4 per line for the 1st insertion and Rs. 2 per line for succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

Increasing Preference

PEOPLE who judge typewriters by strict comparisons never fail to appreciate the Oliver's overwhelming superiorities.

Those who examine its workmanship admit that it is of the finest.

Those who are anxious for the most durable machine are never hesitant in conceding that Oliver design and Oliver materials make for longer life.

Those who desire simplicity find in the Oliver fewer parts, less opportunity for wear and repair.

We are always willing, even anxious, to have people judge the Oliver by making comparisons.

It combines, we believe, as no other machine, more of the wanted features. No single advantage dominates at the sacrifice of others.

The Oliver has won its thousands of friends mostly through comparisons. Over 700,000 Olivers have been sold.

We urge you to do as others are doing—don't buy without first investigating the Oliver and making careful comparisons.

THE OLIVER TYPEWRITER COMPANY

SOLE AGENTS FOR INDIA

W. H. THORNS & Co.

25-29, CHURCHGATE STREET, BOMBAY.

Always mention Indian Social Reformer, when you write for the Oliver.

WONDERFUL TONIC AND MOUTH-REFRESHER
JINTAN.

This is a safe and efficient remedy in all kinds of diseases or disturbances of the digestive organs. It is composed entirely of VEGETABLE INGREDIENTS made from the prescription of the following eminent medical men viz :—

NORIHITO MIWA, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy,
ZENJIRO INOUE, M. D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy
 and testified as to its efficacy by

Baron J. MATSUMOTO, M. D., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Army.

T. MITAMURA Esq., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Navy.

As a digestive it is unequalled and will not disturb the functions of the most delicate stomach. Its antiseptic properties render it very efficacious in warding off disease and at the same time it imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath of the user.

By virtue of its aroma, it effectually makes the odour of Tobacco and Alcoholic Spirits.

It acts beneficially on the vocal cords and has found much favour with public speakers, actors, singers and those whose vocation necessitates a severe strain on the throat.

GOOD FOR

Billionsness, Headache, Vertigo, Nausea, Indigestion, Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, etc., etc.

To maintain general health 2 to 3 pills may be taken occasionally, well masticated.

Price—20 Pills Packet Rs. 0-1-0. 90 Pills Packet, with Tin case., Rs. 0-4-0. 380 pills Packet with fancy case., Rs. 1-0-0.

Prepared by Messrs. MORISHITA Co., OSAKA, JAPAN.

Sole Agents: Jintan Agency (G. R. Chaudhari), Juma Masjid, BOMBAY.

FOR PAINS AND ACHES SPRAINS ETC.

AMRUTANJAN.

The magical pain balm extant. Cures all aches & pains. Costs 8 As. Sold everywhere.

By Appointment to H. E. the Governor Sir George Sydenham Clarke of Bombay.

HARDAS VALJI,

(KING OF INDIAN CONFECTIONERS),
 Highest Confectioner, Caterer and Grand Military Contractor.

Proprietor—RATINATH,
 Chitra Bazar & Grant Road,

20-4-19.

BOMBAY.

DENTISTRY.

Extractions Painless;
 Terms Very Moderate;
 Gold Crown, Bar and Bridge Work a Speciality (teeth without plate);
 Latest Successful Treatment for Pyorrhoea (pus in gums).

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

Hours: 8-1-30 & 5-7-30; Daily.
 (Sundays—From 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.)

ABROO BUILDING,
 NEW CHARNI ROAD,
 GINDEON, BOMBAY. 1-6-19.

K. R. AMAT,
 Surgeon Dentist.

THE INDIAN * SOCIAL * REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY MORNING.

Office:—EMPIRE BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD, FORT.

Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

Vol. XXX BOMBAY—SUNDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1919. No. 6.

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not crouch, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard."
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

President Wilson.	A Students' Benefit Fund.
The End of the Railway Strike in England.	The Punjab Enquiry Debate.
The Old Enemy in a New Garb.	Mysore and its Problems.
Professor Dhruva on the "Untouchables."	The Late Pandit. Shivnath Shastry.
Mrs. Besant's Evidence Before the Joint Committee.	The Problem of Castes in India II.
Leprosy in India.	The Co-operative Movement in Mysore.
Contagious but not Hereditary.	A New College in Dharwar.
	General Smuts on India.

NOTES.

President Wilson. Last week came the startling news that President Wilson was "very sick" and that his condition was grave; later telegrams report some improvement. We earnestly trust that this will be kept up and that the illustrious President will be completely restored to health and vigour. No man is indispensable, it is true, but some men are replaced with far more difficulty than others, and this is especially the case with men who espouse great ideals in advance of their generation. Humanly speaking at this moment more seems to be wrapped up with the life of the President than with that of any other man in any part of the world. One feels that a progressive stage in the evolution of humanity into one great brotherhood, may be interrupted if anything should happen to remove or incapacitate Mr. Wilson from participation in the history which is being made before our eyes. No doubt, many people profess that the President had given up his points, and that the political world of Europe has been too much for him. We do not share this view, and, indeed, we are inclined to think that those who profess were never very anxious to see the President's ideals realized. No one who understood and believed in these shining ideals in all their far-reaching implications, least of all the President himself expected that the Peace Conference at Paris would usher in the millennium before it dispersed. On the contrary, the most earnest believers in these ideals were also the most painfully convinced that a world seething with corruption cannot get better without getting worse, or seeming to do so, for a time. Thought moves, as has been truly said, in a spiral curve and not in a straight line. A great idea has been implanted in the fertile human heart, and it will, it must, grow to fruition. Every thing which seems to retard it, will in the end but subserve its inevitable triumph, as every storm blast that shakes the teak sapling but adds strength to its roots, though it will break down quicker growing but lighter woods.

The End of the Railway Strike in England: The news of the end of the great railway strike in Great Britain came quite suddenly. Prior telegrams had spoken of a deadlock. On the whole, the Railway men have scored rather more than Government as is indicated by the fact that they obtain an assured minimum wage of 51 shillings a week till September while the original Government offer was 40 shillings a week till March next year. They themselves had asked for a minimum of 60 shillings; what they get is 9 shillings less but it is 11 shillings more than what the Government had offered. More than the settlement itself is the fact that both sides have come out of a critical contest with their goodwill towards each other evidently unimpaired. Mr. Lloyd George has once again demonstrated his wonderful capacity for turning what seemed to overwhelm him into a means of augmenting his strength. The end of the strike, indeed, leaves the Prime Minister securely established in his great position from which he appeared to be in imminent peril of dislodgment. This happy result is no less due to the self-restraint and statesmanship of the responsible Labour leaders. The British democracy has been severely tried and it has emerged stronger than ever and purified out of the ordeal. A monster gathering of the strikers received the news of the settlement by singing the hymn "Abide with me." That shows the spirit of English Labour, and it is a spirit which must win and by its victories exalt the whole life of the nation.

The Old Enemy in a New Garb: The old feeling which prompted the institution of purdah, early marriage, enforced asceticism of widows, and the prohibition of Vedic learning to women, is expressing itself in the new garb of devising special courses of study in the vernacular for women. One of the latest exponents of this gospel is Mr. C. R. Reddy, the Inspector General of Education in Mysore. This gentleman has put forward a scheme of vernacular schools for women. The women of Mysore, however, seem to think that Mr. Reddy's scheme is not likely to help them much. The second Mysore Ladies' Conference was opened in the Maharani's College under the presidency of the wife of Deputy Commissioner of Bangalore. After the reading of an address of welcome by Mrs. K. D. Rukmaniamma, Superintendent of the Maharani's College, the President made a lengthy address in Kanarese in the course of which she said:—"The educational memorandum recently issued by Government proposes that women's education should be entirely in Kannada and that English should be relegated to the place of a secondary language. This proposal has a serious defect, inasmuch as it does not take stock of actual conditions. There are no suitable books in Kannada for the spread of knowledge, scientific or general, and the writing of books is not so easy as seems to be thought. There are many women who wish to undertake a higher course and whose conditions provide convenience for a longer course. No provision is made for such cases in the proposed course. The subject deserves serious thought, and I think it is desirable to form a committee to formulate our views on the question of female education." We trust that the Government of Mysore will give heed to this reasonable request.

Professor Dhruva on the "Untouchables": Young India which appears from last week as a weekly published in Ahmedabad under the editorship of Mr. Gandhi, translates a striking passage from a speech which Professor Dhruva made at the opening of six night schools for the depressed classes, through the efforts of Mrs. Anusuya Sarabhai. The Professor observed: "Untouchables none of us are, or all. Those whose hearts are polluted by the presence of the untouchable spirits, vanity, infatuation, hate, greed etc. are untouchables, even though they be Brahmins by birth. Those so called untouchables whom these deadly enemies dominate are not worthy of our adoration. There is no religion in the idea that we should abandon you (so called 'untouchables') or that we should not touch you. It is the duty of us Hindus to help you in every way. Most of my time has been spent as a teacher and I am delighted to be present on this occasion. I wish education may help you all to be good." Special importance attaches to these remarks as proceeding from one who is one of the best specimens of Hindu orthodoxy.

Mrs. Besant's Evidence Before the Joint Committee: New India has printed the written statement and oral examination of Mrs. Besant before the Joint Committee of the House of Commons on Constitutional Reform. We have been greatly impressed—and so, we are sure, have been many others—by the close study and complete mastery of her subject of which Mrs. Besant gave evidence in her prolonged examination. It is evident that the members of the Committee felt that they had before them a witness who could throw light on several aspects of the subject into which they were enquiring. Mrs. Besant's statements were crisp and clear, and she completely identified herself with India and the Indian point of view. She told the Committee that, having lived in India as an Indian and not as an European, she was able to understand many things information as to which was not easily accessible to the average Englishman in India. We think it due to her to say that she has rendered valuable service to the cause of constitutional reform by her evidence. Incidentally, she proved in a concrete way that women, as women, are quite as competent to form reasoned opinions on political matters as men, some of them more competent than many men.

Leprosy in India. Amongst the multifold diseases of the human body nothing is more loathsome, nothing more terrible in its lingering torture than leprosy which has persistently baffled the efforts of modern medicine to find out a remedy. Incurable in its ravages, it overwhelms sympathy and pity by an instinctive sense of repulsion and makes a tragedy of the victim's life. Leprosy had been so intimately connected with the miracles of Jesus Christ and Christian saints and missionaries have ever since made the cause of the leper their own. It is in this Biblical loathing of leprosy not unmixed with the most profound pity for the sufferer that we must trace the origin of that resolve and effort which have made the existence of the disease almost a thing of the past in Western countries.

In India the leper problem has been a sort of "no man's land." According to the Census report of 1911 the number of lepers in India was 100,094. It was 132,968 in 1881; 126,244, in 1891; and 97,340 in 1901. There is a general belief that the number of lepers has shown a tendency to decrease. But these figures are greatly to be discounted by the fact that omissions due to wilful concealment are common in regard to leprosy. According to the Census Commissioner therefore there are about 150,000 of these unfortunates in India, while the Rev. Oldrieve is inclined to put the total at 250,000. Assam suffers most from this disease and next come in order Burma, Behar and Orissa, the Central Provinces, Madras, Bengal etc. About one sixth of the lepers are to be found in Native States.

Contagious but not Hereditary: The National Leprosy Commission (1891) has declared that leprosy is contagious but not hereditary. The two important International Conferences one in 1897 and another in 1909 have arrived at definite conclusions: that leprosy is highly contagious but not hereditary; that the disease has hitherto resisted all efforts to cure it; that it is necessary that countries with leprosy should isolate lepers; that it is desirable that the children of lepers should be separated from their leper parents. So now the only solution to the leper problem in India is wise, humane, but complete segregation of the diseased leper from the healthy community.

A hopeful sign of the times is that the Auxillary Body to the Mission to Lepers was started under the patronage of Lady Chelmsford. But the real crux of the problem is finance. As to the exact amount that will be required, we have the experience of the Mission to guide us. The Mission spends about £28,500 on about 5,000 lepers. According to this estimate, to maintain 100,000 lepers would require about £570,000, almost the same as the jail figures on the pre-war basis. The burden of the Government might be relieved by an appeal to public philanthropy, and specially to the rich mutis, temples and mosques, since it is around these places that destitute lepers make begging their profession. The Native States might share a portion of the burden.

A Students' Benefit Fund: The Saraswat Vid-yarthe Sahayak Mandali was started in Bombay in May 1902 by a band of enthusiastic young men of the Goud Saraswat Brahmin community with the object of raising funds by co-operation and utilising them in helping poor and deserving students of both sexes of the community, prosecuting their studies in India, as well as in foreign countries, in obtaining primary, secondary, collegiate, post-graduate, professional, technical, industrial, religious, moral and physical education. From the Report it appears that the number of members, which was 84 at the beginning has now risen to 1111, including 5 Patrons and 103 Life-Members. During its 17 years' existence, the Mandali has spent nearly Rs. 42,600 in giving aid to 216 students of both sexes of whom 37 have taken University Degrees, 20 Technical Education 9 education in Midwifery and Nursing and others including women secondary and primary education. The Institution has been registered under Act XXI of 1861 and has recently created a Trust of its properties which mainly consist of bonds, debentures etc of the value of Rs. 32,000.

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, OCTOBER 12, 1919.

THE PUNJAB ENQUIRY DEBATE.

The Viceroy's diagnosis of the Punjab troubles, in His Excellency's opening speech at the Simla session of the Imperial Legislative Council, should have prepared the public for the extraordinarily virulent tone of some of the official contributions to the debate on Pandit Madan Mohun Malaviya's motion for the appointment by His Majesty's Government of a Commission, consisting of gentlemen unconnected with the Indian Administration, to enquire into the causes of the recent disturbances in the Punjab and the propriety of the measures adopted in dealing with them. The Pandit further proposed that the Commission should be vested with legal authority to annul or modify sentences passed by the Martial Law Commissions or by Magistrates specially empowered to deal summarily with cases alleged to have been connected with those disturbances. Lord Chelmsford in his opening speech had given a very simple explanation of the cause of the troubles. "Last session," said His Excellency "certain Hon'ble Members during the passage of the Rowlatt Bill gave me warnings of an almost minatory character that, if that Bill passed into law, there would be agitation of a serious nature. I think Hon'ble Members will realise that no Government could deviate from a policy which it regarded as essential on account of any threat of agitation. However, there were those who thought that it was necessary to make good this threat, and as a consequence the deplorable events occurred which are to be the subject of an enquiry." This makes it perfectly clear that so far as the Viceroy and presumably the Government of India are concerned, there is no doubt whatever as to the cause of the troubles. They were the work of those who wished to make good the threat of agitation if the Rowlatt Bill was passed. This being the case, we fail to see what purpose is served by requiring the Hunter Committee to "enquire into and to report regarding the causes of, and the measures taken to cope with, the recent disorders in Delhi, the Punjab and the Bombay Presidency" The Government of India's place, after such an expression of view by the Head of that Government, is in the witness's chair, not in the judgment seat. Add to this the emphatic declaration of His Excellency that he promised support to the head of each Local Government for such measures as he thought it might be necessary to take, and that support was unwaveringly given throughout. Whatever view we may take of this, whether we regard it as the right thing for the Government of India to do, or whether we regard it as depriving the Provincial Government of the superior guidance to which it is entitled by its very constitution, whether we regard it as a noble act of timely self-effacement, or a weak abdication of its functions at a great crisis, by the Government of India, it must be obvious to every impartial person interested in getting at the truth of things, that the Government of India is not the proper authority, either to appoint the Committee of enquiry, or to which such a Committee should submit its report. We pointed out in a recent issue that, while a Royal Commission's report is usually published, there is no such rule regarding the reports of Committees appointed by the Government of India. We may indeed say that reports of Committees of the latter kind are as often not published as they are published. The Indian Medical Services Committee's report is quite a fresh instance. Regarding the Hunter Committee, Sir William Vincent told the Council that it was the intention of Government, "unless there is some unforeseen reason to the contrary, to publish the final report." Apparently there is to be one or more ad interim reports before the final report, and the latter only will be published "unless there is some unforeseen reason to the contrary" which may be not unfairly interpreted to mean, after the emphatic declaration of the Viceroy, unless it upsets preconceived official theories. The report will be published if there is nothing to conceal in it.

Notice of his motion was given by the Hon. Pandit several days before the Council met. This has to be done according to the rules. The Viceroy might, if His Excellency had thought the Pandit worthy of such courtesy, have privately intimated to him that he (the Viceroy) would make an announcement on the opening day, and suggested that the Pandit might perhaps find it necessary either to withdraw or modify his motion. Of course, the Pandit is not entitled to complain that this was not done. If it had been done, it would have been a graceful act of courtesy to a non-official colleague in the Council. As it is, the Viceroy's announcement might be taken as a shrewd move to dish the unwary Pandit. The Pandit also could not be exculpated from blame. We believe that his brave and chivalrous stand in the Council on behalf of the sufferers in the Punjab, has raised him high in the estimation of his countrymen all over India. He stands today in a position of such unassailable supremacy in the hearts of his countrymen that a little kindly criticism on our part can do no harm. The Pandit procrastinated. Instead of giving notice of an amended motion as soon as the Viceroy sat down (as Sir Pheroze Shah Mehta would have done) the Pandit spent six days in consulting his friends, and only on the night previous to the adjourned meeting did he make up his mind to intimate to the Viceroy that he was obliged to alter the terms of his motion after the announcement made by His Excellency. He would have done better to have given the notice first and then consulted his friends. The Pandit in his simplicity believed that his prayer would be granted but he counted without his host. He naively began by declaring that the motion of which he had given notice had become "dead as queen Anne"—we confess we do not know why this lady has come to be regarded as the pattern and prototype of completely dead persons and things—and gently requested leave to amend it. Thereupon up sprung the Home Member and demanded three day's notice under the rules, and the Viceroy, as he was bound under the rules to do, upheld the objection. The Pandit responded by requesting that his resolution might be taken up three days later. Sir William Vincent rose again and asked that fifteen days' notice was necessary under another rule. The Viceroy agreed that that was clearly the rule. The Pandit offered to wait for fifteen days, but the Viceroy would not promise that it would be taken up then. The Pandit had, therefore, to go on with his dead resolution as best as he could. He placed his case at great length undeterred by the evident impatience of his official and some of his non-official colleagues. He bore with equanimity the taunts and discourtesies to which he was liberally treated. The official report in the Gazette of India merely says that the resolution was put and negatived. It gives no division list. We are afraid that the blame of not having backed up the Pandit in the Council can not be laid wholly at the doors of Indian non-official members who did not vote in the division. The Pandit has acquitted himself greatly as a soldier, but he has been lacking in leadership. Now, one of the attributes of leadership is that the public should never be in doubt as to the meaning or purpose of every move. Owing to circumstances to a certain extent beyond his control, as explained above, the Pandit's resolution left the country perplexed. We do not know if there is any precedent for a Commission such as that proposed by the Pandit, which would not only enquire into the causes of the troubles but also deal with the sentences passed by the military tribunals. In his concluding remarks, the Hon. Pandit indicated two alternative Committees: one to consist of Lord Haldane, Viscount Esher and Sir Lawrence Jenkins, and the other, of Mr. Austen Chamberlain, Lord Curzon and Lord Hardinge. Neither of these Committees could undertake the twofold task, certainly not the latter. It would have been well if he had simply asked for a Royal Commission leaving it to the Privy Council or Government to deal with the sentences. Unfortunately in public life much hardship and even wrong to individuals has to be given a secondary place by the side of large issues affecting policy and the future. The Pandit's resolution attempted too much. Sir Dinshaw Wacha requested the Viceroy to put the two parts of the Resolution separately but His Excellency thought that, as it was discussed as a whole, it should be put to the vote as a whole.

MYSORE AND ITS PROBLEMS.

The first address of the new Dewan of Mysore, Sardar M. Kantaraj Urs, to the Mysore Representative Assembly at the opening day of the Dasara Session, is well calculated to create a favourable impression on the public in Mysore and outside. As a near relative of His Highness the Maharaja and as the successor in somewhat dissonant circumstances of a Minister who had secured a great hold on the mind and imagination of the country, the position of the Sardar Sahib was a difficult one. The position of the finances added to his difficulties. The revenue in some of the most lucrative industrial concerns had been hitherto in sterling, and the raising of the exchange from 1s-6d when the estimates were framed, to 2 shillings, is likely to increase the budget deficit of Rs. 64,000 to nearly Rs. 16 lakhs. Fresh taxation under the circumstances cannot be avoided. The accumulated surpluses of the State have been greatly trenched upon to provide the capital expenditure on several large projects and further expenditure on these and other productive works can be met only by public borrowing. We may say, in passing, that the fiscal policy of most Indian States of budgetting for enormous surpluses every year, which, in some progressive States are later invested in productive works, in several others are simply hoarded and become the private property of the ruler, and in a few others, we are sorry to say, are wasted on worthless favourites and ruinous excesses, is fundamentally wrong. Capital expenditure on works whose benefits extend to many generations should be met by public loans the incidence of which does not fall exclusively on one generation. In the normal budget the revenue should balance the expenditure, with a reasonably liberal margin for contingencies. A certain amount of public sympathy will naturally be felt for an administrator who starts with so many difficulties. In spite of it, however, Sardar Kantaraj Urs' debut as Dewan before the Representative Assembly, might easily have been less satisfactory, but for a certain indefinable blending of sincerity, modesty and straightforwardness in his address, which disarm opposition and predispose one to put the best interpretation on the Dewan's observations. The monsoon has given good rain in Mysore and promises a plentiful harvest. The health conditions are also far better than last year. The signs are auspicious for a successful Dewan-ship for Sardar Kantaraj Urs.

We are pleased to notice the earnestness and enthusiasm which mark the Sardar's references to nation-building activities. First and foremost of them all is the question of temperance. We welcome the Dewan Sahib's frank confession that the policy hitherto pursued, in imitation of British India, of trying to diminish consumption by administrative regulation of shops and prices, has failed and that other means must be found of combating this growing evil. "It cannot be said," observed the Dewan, "that these measures have been attended with conspicuous success. It is time that leaders of society organised active measures of reform to deal with an evil for which the remedy largely lies more in an awakened public conscience." We agree; but we would add that the State ought to, and that the State in Mysore can, provide the public conscience with a foothold for effective action by adopting as its policy, Total Prohibition. The deep religious sentiment of His Highness' subjects—Hindu and Mahomedan—will hail with joy the promulgation of such a policy. We are convinced that the Government of India would view the lead of Mysore in this matter with sympathetic interest. The Dewan's reference to the problem of the elevation of the depressed classes leaves little to be desired. There is no class, he rightly observed, more deserving of assistance towards social amelioration and more in need of it than the Panchamas. He alluded to the throwing open of all public schools in the State to Panchama scholars. May we say that a good deal too much is made of the opposition of the orthodox classes to this measure of simple justice? The idea that these untouchables are the backbone of the Indian nation, and that the nation's rate of progress will in the last resort be determined by the pace of the most backward classes, has by now fairly permeated to all intelligent sections of the Indian communities. In a Municipal School in Bandra, where no untouchable pupil had been hitherto admitted, admission was secured not quite two months ago for four Chamar boys, not by any fiat, but by merely putting it to the patriotism of the Brahman headmaster and his colleagues that to deny admission to them was treason to the country's highest interests. The precedent thus created can never be revoked. Dewan Kantaraj Urs rightly said that something more than merely throwing open schools, was due to the Panchamas, and that it would be his endeavour to keep this in view.

The Dewan announced that His Highness the Maharaja had decided to enlarge the Legislative Council, to increase its powers especially in regard to finance, and to make education in middle schools absolutely free. We congratulate Mysore on being the first administration in India to make education free beyond the elementary stage. The Dewan also announced that it was His Highness' order that free scholarships should be granted on a liberal scale in High Schools and Colleges. Thus the educational highway is being made free to all in Mysore. Special regard is being paid to Mahomedan education. With reference to the education of women, we do not believe in special curricula for them. Mr. Reddy, the Inspector General of Education, is said to have prepared some special courses for women. We have not seen them. The placing of the Maharani's College under the control of the University is a good idea. In these days of women's advance, it cannot be difficult to get a competent staff of women for teaching and administrative work. Salaries, however, are not the sole consideration. A high moral atmosphere is even more important. Sir M. Visvesvaraya's presence at the head of the administration, apart from his administrative achievements, strongly re-inforced the very high standard set by His Highness the Maharaja, and we trust that this will be further developed under the new Dewan, Sardar Kantaraj Urs has been made to appear in some quarters as a protagonist of the anti-Brahmin party. The Sardar has clearly no desire to appropriate the doubtful distinction thus sought to be imposed on him. Speaking of the duty of doing everything to elevate the Panchamas, he managed to express his resolve to follow the wise policy enunciated by His Highness the Maharaja in his reply to a non-Brahman deputation. "My aim," said His Highness, "is to pursue a just and righteous policy as between various castes and communities in the State, neither unduly favouring nor suppressing any individual one but trying to uplift them all for the permanent good of the State." It is impossible to find a wiser motto for an Indian administrator.

THE LATE PANDIT SHIVNATH SHASTRY.

(By SIR NARAYAN CHANDAVARKAR.)

I first met the late Pandit Shivrath Shastri in the year 1878-79. It is a memorable year, because the political, social and commercial events which crowded it, formed a turning-point in the history of India, and their spirit is operating even now, in the events of the year 1918-19. It was in 1878-79 that the policy of repression and suspicion, initiated in 1877 by Lord Lytton's Government, was bringing politics to the front and thrusting behind religious and social reform which till 1877 had held the sphere of Indian activity and subordinated political movements to its ends. Sir Alexander Arbuthnot and Sir Whitley Stokes, two members of Lord Lytton's Government, who in 1878 had lent hearty support to the Vernacular Press Act, the Arms Act and other reactionary measures of the new "Imperial" policy, were confessing their mistake, and saying that if they had known that the policy of repression was intended to stifle Indian opinion and enable Government to deal with Indian interests for purposes of English party politics, they would have declined to be parties to the repressive measures. Mr. Gladstone was carrying on in Scotland his Midlothian campaign and fulminating against Lord Lytton's policy in India. The second Afghan War with its creed of a scientific frontier had proved a millstone round India's neck and Sir John Strachey's trusted financial genius had ended in a huge deficit which had swallowed the Famine Insurance Fund. Wasudeo Balwant Phadke was collecting Mavlas and committing political dacoities in the Deccan and Konkan. The new school of political thought, which divided religious and social reform was ridiculing Ranade and Telang and all of their school in Western India, and Kristo Das Pal in Bengal, and creating a new taste for the public by the new journalism that was coming into existence. In Bombay the failure of the Glasgow Bank had led to a commercial crisis. Altogether the atmosphere was one of political unrest and mistrust, the signs of which were more visible in Western India than in any other Province. But Western India was giving then the lead to the rest of the country.

It was in this state of things that Pandit Shivrath Shastri, who had democratised the Brahmo religious movement in Bengal, toured several parts of India and visited Bombay. At the time of his visit Swami Dayanand Saraswati had some time before finished his campaign of the Arya Samaj in Poona and Bombay; Madame Blavatsky and Col. Olcott had come and planted themselves in Bombay to propagate Theosophy. The Pandit's lectures and sermons delivered in the Prarthana Samaj drew large audiences; his Sanskrit scholarship, and the presentation by him of the Brahmo faith in the Upanishad garb aroused interest; but more than all that, were his visits to the homes of the people, great and small, to whom he could have access, that gave him the power to influence men and women he met and talked to, by the charm of his manner and the human touch of his heart. Tall and of fine physique at the time, he met you by a hearty shake of the hand as if he met a brother; and the hand-shake was followed by as hearty a laughter, loud and lively, which was characteristic of the man. His tour through several parts of India before he visited Bombay had given him abundant reasons for depression about the prospects of religious reform—wherever he went, he had found apathy, and yet he did not lose hope, rather discerned the soul of good in the depressions of the day. I remember, he and I met one morning at the house of the dear soul we loved and venerated for his saintly life—the late Mr. N. M. Parmanand—and the talk turned on the future of religious reform in general and the prospects of the Brahmo faith in particular. This is how he summed up the whole situation:—

“Wherever I have gone and toured, I find people complaining that the burden of life is becoming so intense that they have hardly time to give thought to religion.” “How do you account for that?” I asked. He replied:—“Our social customs, our political disabilities, our industrial weakness, make us ill prepared for the new struggles of life, to earn our bread and maintain our families. It is not in human nature to think of the reform of religion when life is becoming a struggle. Religion, it is true, is born in adversity; but India's position is neither of prosperity nor adversity yet—it is a situation of complex problems and we must handle it in the religious sphere, with sympathy.”

And that is how he lived his whole life of a Brahmo Missionary. He could enter into the hearts of poor clerks or sweated coolies, realise their struggles, and engender hope. While in Bombay he was the guest of several families; and in every home where he stayed he created an atmosphere of heartiness to make the best of the struggle of life. For instance, he stayed for a day or two with a gentleman in humble circumstances of life—who had to bring up his family on an income that barely sufficed. Rising one morning, he found his host's wife had risen earlier and going the round of domestic duties without worry. That became the text of a sunshine sermon at that day's family prayer in the house—and how it brightened all that heard it! At another house where he was a guest, the host, a firebrand of a reformer who hated the caste system, told the Pandit, while the evils of that system were being denounced, that he was determined to defy his caste, come what might. “Don't, my brother”—interposed the Pandit—“defiance is not the word. Do your part with devotion—leave defiance to caste, and you shall win.” At a third house his host was a busy man, who complained that he felt so oppressed by his work that he got frequently confused, hardly able to collect his thoughts. “Yes,” said the Pandit, “I have been watching your life since I have stayed with you—your trouble arises because you work in the midst of noise. Your case gave me a subject for an article for the Indian Messenger which is just to hand. Read it and see if you can change your ways of work.” At another house where he was the guest of a friend, the friend's wife happening to say that the day following was her child's birthday, the Pandit asked her how she was going to celebrate it. “Of course, by having some sweets at meals and decking the child nicely with a few ornaments.” The Pandit said: “Try a better way: after the child has fallen asleep to-night, put a few nice toys and pictures near his bed without telling him, and watch him the moment he rises.” That was done and the child's unexpected pleasure was the delight of the home the whole day.

It was this homeliness of the man and missionary that made the Pandit the beloved of all who came in contact with him and were drawn to him as a preacher both by precept and example. His prayers and sermons in Bengali drew crowded audiences and I have seen men and women moved to tears—the tears of spiritual joy—by his earnest, heart-stirring talks to Deity. Men and women, not Brahmos only, but even orthodox Hindus loved him and felt edified to fall at his feet and invoke his blessings.

It was said in the leader of the last number of the Reformer that “of late years he was not quite satisfied with some developments in the Sadharan Samaj.” I have had talks with him on the subject in 1916, 1917, and 1918 when I visited Calcutta and the impression left on my mind was not that he was not satisfied but rather that he thought the developments were natural and deserved to be handled with patience, courage and sympathy. As in all other movements, so in the Sadharan Samaj. There has been a sort of struggle between the elders and the younger portion of the Church—the former for spirituality, the latter for secularity, as some put it. The kernel of the situation is that the younger generation wants more action, more independence, more freedom of thought and movement. The elders think there ought to be more of spiritual cultivation. It cannot be difficult to harmonise the two by remembering and trying to realise that the spiritual life—which the Samaj is and ought to be for—is an inward state which should lead to outward conduct in all the secular concerns of life. The young in the Samaj do not believe much in long services, prayers and sermons, mere abstract and abstruse theories of theology and philosophy but they believe in plain sermons helping one's attitude to the work-a-day problems of life and environment and in active work. So far as I could gather, Pandit Shivrath Shastri discerned this sign of the time, did not regret, rather thought it was a necessary offshoot of the democratic Samaj he and Ananda Mohan Bose had helped to found. He never felt depressed and dispirited. He was always buoyed up with hope and faith. That, manifested by his life of cheery laughter that rang through you, whether he was well or ill, formed the sanctity of his character and he was a character to love and cherish.

THE PROBLEM OF CASTES IN INDIA. II.

We see only four castes existed in the beginning. To-day we have innumerable sectarian castes and sub-castes, divided into water-tight compartments. Numerous causes operated to create varied social groups. The intermixture of the blood of the invading races, from time to time, with the people of India, can be accounted as one of the reasons of the divisions of principal castes. There are again exogamous castes, which have their own rules and regulations. Are we willing to accept the distinguishing characteristic feature of each caste, as laid down by Manu, and thus class the Hindus into separate castes? Should individuals be placed in different castes according to their qualifications, accomplishments, and character? Manu says that every man is a Shudra by birth, he makes himself worthy of any caste by his actions, and he who has the knowledge of God, is a Brahmana. The Upanishads teach the same. In the Bhagvat Gita, Shree Krishna tells Arjuna, that He has created the castes according to qualifications and not according to birth. The Hindus of to-day are accustomed to consider the caste of a man according to his birth and not according to his deeds. A Hindu of the upper caste may be foul in his actions, and yet he is allowed to be considered as belonging to it, while a member of the lower castes, though educated and well-behaved, has no privilege to move freely in the higher circle of society, and have social intercourse, without any outside interference. Counterfeits are there in every nation. India is not an exception. Should they, who do not keep up to their standard, be honoured and respected, only because they are born in that particular caste? Manu says :-

"The seniority of Brahmans is from sacred knowledge, that of Kshatriya from valour, that of Vaishya from wealth in grain (and other goods), but that of Shudra alone from age." II. 155.

We have already seen that there are practically no Hindus who inherit the fundamental qualities of their own castes. Neither the commonsense nor our Shastras, allow us to call a man belonging to a particular caste, in which he is born, unless and until he lives a life according to the rules laid down for his caste, and discharges his duties properly.

The castes of India are in a fluid state. They have assumed the forms of mere ceremonials, rites, and restrictions. No lively interest is created in the members to be perfect and ideal. The evils of the present-day castes are many, and they have been explained from time to time. They have played a prominent part in the degeneration of the Hindu Society. The principles of the caste-system, and the motives of the makers may be good, suited for an age when there was one language, one king, and one religion. Swami Rama Tirtha once observed :- "The face of the earth has changed many times since Manu's days, the rivers have shifted their beds, the wild forests have been hewn and burned the flora and the fauna have varied; the Kshatriya or the warrior profession has been in a way, entirely swept out of India. The language of the country has been washed out of the land, and has become to the modern Hindu as strange and unknown as Latin and Greek, and yet India remains up to this day an abject slave to the caste conventionalities, rites, and rules, laid down by Manu for his contemporaries. Independent thinking is looked upon as heresy, nay, the worst crime. Whatever comes through the dead language is sacred. If your reasoning does not slavishly glorify the freaks fancies, and sayings of the dead, damned are you, everybody will turn right against you. You must fill the new wine into the old bottles."

The problem to-day is whether or not we are willing to acknowledge a man as belonging to a certain caste, if he really possesses the character and qualifications incidental to that caste. Are we ready to keep pace with the advancing times and adopt our "Karma Kandas to our environments," instead of "to continue peeping through the eyes of our most venerable seers and sages of the past." Should the system of hereditary caste be abolished? Those who have received modern education, entertain no rigid view about caste, very scarcely care to observe their customs—except on the occasion of marriage—and other rules of their caste or sub-caste. Can they be said to belong to a certain caste, whose laws they violate? One may conjecture that the same will happen by and bye, in the case of those who are highly educated, and will come in touch with those, who are disbelievers in the present-day caste-system, which is so fatal to the advancement of the Hindu Society. The advanced type of the educated Hindus is careless of innumerable rites and customs, observed by the orthodox class. Then one may pause to think, that if this is the case what fundamental difference is there between highly educated members of different castes, except their heredity?

These are the times of practicality, and let us see for ourselves, where we stand to-day in our social progress, and how reforms can be introduced for the uplift of the Hindu race. Tagore has rightly pointed out to us, "not to take the very immobility of our social structure as sign of their perfection—and because the healthy feeling of pain is dead in the limbs of our social organism, they (i. e., the nationalists) delude themselves into thinking that it needs no ministrations." When India is in the throes of a stupendous national awakening, let none mislead the masses and the orthodox people of India, by their sophistical arguments and loud clamour. Let us be cautious. We are living in a period, when the Western civilization is at its highest pinnacle. India, though moving in the old grooves, is slowly but surely coming under the influences of Western thoughts and Western ideas. It cannot be helped. Let us by no means be a mere copy of the West, but retaining our ancient ideas let us chalk out a path for us to follow. Let us neither go fast with a tremendous pace only to stumble, nor let us lie wallowing in the morbid drowsiness of the past.

M. K. P.

THE COOPERATIVE MOVEMENT IN MYSORE.

The extracts below are important parts of the address delivered by Mr. G. K. Devadhar, M. A., as President of the Ninth Mysore Provincial Co-operative Conference, 2nd October 1919.

Speaking personally, my experience of the past twelve years of work in various fields of co-operative activity has deepened my conviction in its great power and influence for good and I am one of those who have now come to believe in its supreme importance in our scheme for national reconstruction. There are to-day in India 26,465 Co-operative Societies with a total Membership of over 10,50,000, and the amount of the working capital brought into play by these means stands roughly at Rs. 14,50,00,000. Considering the varied needs of our vast population the progress so far made, though very encouraging, is not quite adequate. The directions in which we ought to endeavour to push on the work by introducing new life and vigour, in the light of rich and valuable experiences regarding the growth of this movement in western countries which I was privileged to gather during my recent trip to Europe, are as follows:—

(1) To develop agricultural co-operation on non-credit lines, so as to secure rapid advancement of our agricultural industry on the basis of extended and democratized credit which is its primary need in India.

(2) To organise on a larger scale, and on systematic and modern lines, the purchase of the needs of agricultural life, and the production, the collection, the distribution, and the sale of our agricultural output.

(3) To start distributive stores for the cheap supply of daily requirements of the various classes of the community for which the recent experiences of cruel profiteering have clearly established a need.

(4) To start co-operative societies on the basis of limited liability to help small traders and poor artisans.

(5) To promote distribution of the daily wants by means of co-operation among the struggling middle class.

(6) To restore to co-operation in supplying sanitary houses to the needy section of our community.

(7) To associate our women in a suitable way with the growth of this movement.

(8) To interest our younger generation of boys and girls at schools and colleges in the life-giving principles of co-operation.

(9) To introduce on a much larger scale the social and the educational activities which are some of the outstanding features of the western growth of the movement.

(10) And thus to elevate co-operation to the level of a powerful lever, as in the West, to lift up the masses; and lastly.

(11) To adopt popular methods of propaganda.

These, in my opinion, are some of the channels in which our co-operative enthusiasm will have to flow in the near future if we are to secure the ends for which the great principle of co-operation stands.

Now coming to your co-operative movement let me tell you at once that I have conceived the profoundest admiration for the progress that you have achieved here. Your growth clearly shows that you are conscious of the many purposes to which co-operation can be applied and of the varied services which it should be impressed to render to your fellow countrymen. It also seems that you are making attempts in several directions in which they have not been made so successfully elsewhere; and as in many other matters of public importance, we are accustomed to look up to Mysore, so even in this field of co-operation we, in British India, will gladly look up to you for new experiments and convincing results which you can strive to show on account of several facilities that you are so proud to possess and which your enlightened Government is so ready to give.

You have up-to-date 1,350 Societies which number has grown from 5 in the year 1905-06. Your membership to-day is about 90,000 and your working capital stands at Rs. 90,00,000. It is gratifying to note, in this connection, that your share capital amounts to Rs. 32,39,600 and that your loans and deposits aggregate to a total of Rs. 45,47,000; and these Societies have collected so far a reserve fund of Rs. 4,13,878. Your movement claims total transactions amounting to Rs. 2,40,00,000. On examining these figures very closely you have, as is quite natural, a very large proportion of Credit Societies (including 60 grain banks) their total being 1,200 out of 1,350 co-operative institutions at the present moment.

The non-credit Societies in Mysore whose number naturally is small, i. e., 150 to-day, show a fairly wide and interesting range of agricultural and industrial co-operation and the scope for its extension is unlimited. There are in all 25 Societies that are engaged in supplying agricultural implements, seed, and manure; there are besides 35 additional societies that have opened branches for the supply of these articles to their members. The needs of the weaving of handloom industry have rightly attracted your attention inasmuch as you have to-day 40 co-operative Societies to help this class of artisans at each stage of their work. Very encouraging results have been achieved and your Government have given them liberal help in money and men. Every well-wisher of these two basic industries of an advancing community would like to see more attention and greater care bestowed upon the development of these two great and useful branches of industrial advancement. Moreover, you have 45 co-operative stores. I read in your reports that these and about 200 other societies have rendered very excellent service to their members and the general public during the recent trouble of high prices. The number of house-building societies is 4. I remember very well how I saw, during my last visit to Bangalore, the houses of a few members that had materially profited by the work of one of these and had secured comfortable homes. The need for better housing is a crying want that is being keenly felt all over the country and I trust here, too. Going into further details I find that in many matters of Co-operative interest and importance you are more favourably situated than many other Native States or even the provinces in British India.

One of the very interesting directions in which your department is engaged is the institution of investigation into the economic condition of the members of the Co-operative Societies. This, in my opinion, is a step in the right direction to determine the process of liquidation of old debts. So far, this investigation has been complete with respect to the members of 268 Societies, and I am sure the valuable data thus collected will throw great light on the problem of redemption of old debts.

It is very refreshing to read of the larger usefulness of the co-operative organisation as a ready machinery or a willing agency for urgent social service during the period of the serious food situation and also during the time of the all-pervading out-break of Influenza. You cannot be too grateful to your Government for the very liberal measure of assistance they have given you in respect of men, money, and concessions in the initial stage of the movement, and if the people will rightly understand that State help is always to be utilised as a necessary incentive to voluntary effort, it will prove a source of great strength rather than weakness. But last, though not the least, I cannot forget to mention prominently the most valuable services rendered to the cause of co-operation in your State by your most distinguished and enlightened citizen, I mean His Highness the Yuvaraja Sahab of Mysore, whose parental interest in the growth of the movement has been the largest factor of its growth. His Highness seems to me, more or less, the Guardian Angel of Co-operation in your State and your deepest gratitude is due to him for all the initiative and interest and personal association and valuable sacrifices he has made to make it a great success.

I, in my humble opinion, would further suggest for your earnest consideration the need for the following types of institutions. First, bull-breeding or cattle-breeding societies; secondly the organisation of Co-operative dairies or societies for dairy produce; thirdly, land redemption societies on the lines of the Danish institutions; fourthly, a comprehensive co-operative housing scheme as attempted in Denmark and in England; and fifthly, a Mysore Wholesale Co-operative Society on the lines of the Irish Wholesale, or the Wholesales of England and Scotland. If you keep before your mind's eye the idea that there should be a Co-operative Society organised in each of your 20,000 villages, you will need a vast organisation to as to bring in its net-work every one whom Co-operation can help and assist. I have noticed in Denmark that in rural areas many farmers belong to more than half a dozen Co-operative Institutions in their neighbourhood, and your State, judging from its past achievements, can legitimately aspire to reach that goal and thus be in India a model tract for Co-operative knowledge and experience.

A NEW COLLEGE IN DHARWAR.

A crowded meeting was held on Tuesday 9th September at Dharwar under the distinguished presidency of Dr. Y. G. Nadgir L. M. S. of Bombay, to express the sympathies of the Karnatak public in favour of the New Arts College that is to be started under the auspices of the Karnatak Education Society from June 1920. Mr. B. N. Datar M. A. first explained the College scheme and announced that funds amounting to Rs. 54,000—have been already secured and that more were forthcoming from all quarters. The Hon'ble Mr. Pathan, then exhorted the audience to help this educational movement to the best of their abilities. Prof. Moulvi of the Karnatak College pointed out in his eloquent speech the necessity and the advantages of a College conducted by a private agency. Mr. Honnarpurnath, a leading Lingayat publicist of the place, dwelt on the sacred and unsectional character of the movement and assured that his community would magnificently help all such national endeavours. Rao Bahadur Joshi retired Educational Inspector S.D. and Messrs. Kadapa, and Mudvedkar also took part in the proceedings, the latter dwelling on the brilliant qualifications of the staff of the proposed College, the former drawing pointed attention to the fact that if the idea of a Karnatak University were to materialise more colleges were absolutely necessary. Dr. Nadgir in his concluding remarks pointed out in clear terms how the Government and the University would raise no objections in the matter of affiliation of this proposed College, in the light of the recommendations of the Calcutta University commission. He also showed how even now a large number of students had to seek admission in Poona and other Colleges through sheer necessity and appealed to the audience in most enthusiastic terms to help magnificently the promoters of this movement in their endeavours to open larger facilities for collegiate education in Karnatak. Everybody was most favourably impressed and the meeting was an unparalleled success.

GENERAL SMUTS ON INDIA.

IN REPLY TO DURBAN INDIANS' ADDRESS.

The following speech was delivered by General Smuts in reply to the address presented to him by the Durban Indian community on the 26th August:—

* Gentleman,—I thank you for the beautiful address with which you have presented me and for the sentiments expressed therein. I am glad to note that, in the address, you have made mention of the fact of your countrymen having served under my command in the Great War. As I have said on previous occasions, I have been proud of the privilege of having had under me in East Africa so large a number of your countrymen. Some of them came from the independent Native States of India, Imperial Service Contingents and others who did great and glorious work in this War. I had written from East Africa to the Princes of India of the splendid part played by their troops and that there were few better than they. Your countrymen fought not only in East Africa but took part in other theatres of war. The conquering of the Turkish Empire was in the main the work of the Indian Army. The burden of the work in Mesopotamia, Turkestan and the Indian Frontier fell almost entirely upon the Indian Army. If the war had continued until this year, the Indian Empire would have had over a million men in the Field. The stupendous part India played in this great struggle had considerable effect on the result of the war. Owing to her magnificent efforts, India has won for herself a place among the nations of the world. As a member of the War Cabinet I have had great opportunities of knowing more about the feelings of the Indians and their desire for a larger share in the appointment of commissions in the army and I am glad I was able to do something for them in the Cabinet. I have worked in public and a good deal in private for the recognition of India and her services to the Empire. I strongly supported the proposals of granting commissions to Indians, and when it was pointed out that this might create an anomalous position and that there might be the possibility of Europeans being placed under Indians, I replied, "Why not? I would be proud to serve under an Indian Officer if he were able." In the Peace Conference, India was represented by the Maharajah of Bikanir, Lord Sinha and Mr. Montagu. The Maharajah is a personal friend of mine, and Lord Sinha is a man of considerable ability and training. He is one of the cleverest men I have met, and I was able to learn much from him on Indian problems. As a result of the war, there was an emotional feeling throughout the world which did not leave India unaffected. She desires to govern herself. Other Asiatics have been ruling and misruling; and India, after having been under the British for over a hundred years, should be given a large measure of Self Government. I have been a party to the Honourable Mr. Montagu going to India to study the question there, which has resulted in some far reaching concrete proposals being submitted to the British Parliament. The British are a very highly imaginative people though they do not appear to be so. There was a great feeling in England in favour of India's aspirations. With the improvement of the status of India, the position of the Indians in other places will be better. Before my return, I found that the Asiatic Trading Act had been passed in the Union Parliament and that there had been a great deal of irritation among the Indians here and which had also caused a great deal of feeling in India. But the Government has decided to appoint a Commission to go into the whole matter. India will be represented by members on the Commission to watch over the interests of Indians so that no stigma may attach to them

Some of you think I look down upon Indians, but that is not so. I look up to them. They come from a very old civilisation—much older than ours. They are able to hold their own. We have our difficulties in South Africa, and we, as a small white community, cannot withstand a great influx of Indians. We would be crushed and overwhelmed if we had an open door. India, if she is in need of emigration for her surplus population, has the fertile fields of Mesopotamia, Euphrates, Tigris and Turkestan which can hold thirty millions of people. But now that the Indians are here, I hold they should have fair treatment in all parts of the Union. We have to live side by side in conciliation, and we must endeavour to understand each other's standpoint so that we may live and grow together. We are members of the one family and belong to the same Empire. I thank you again for the beautiful address and the silver casket in which to put the address. Mrs. Smuts will be glad to hear of the kindly reference made to her. I thank you all once more."—The Indian Opinion.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

DO YOU WISH TO KNOW YOUR "FUTURE"

Send your time and date of birth or your star and age or note the time when you write the letter, you will be given a full reading of your life or one year to come for ONE RUPEE ONLY.

Mr. Ghazanfar Muhammad Khan, Deputy Collector, writes from Moradabad City. "The one year life reading you sent me proved to be QUITE TRUE."

THE KALINGA ASTROLOGICAL BUREAU,
Chodavaram, Vizagapatam District.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postage
in advance. In arrears.

Per annum..... Rs. 5-0-0. Rs. 5-0-0.
Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, twelve shillings (Rs. 6).

Single copies of the current year can be had at 4
annas each and any back copies at 6 annas each.

"Wanted :—Employment, as teacher or governess, by an educated Brahman widow with midwifery training and medical practice, well-versed in music and the Vina; proficient in English, Sanskrit, Telugu and Canarese, and speaking Tamil and Hindustani nols. Please apply to K. R. C/o. The Indian Social Reformer, Bombay."

GALE'S MAGAZINE.

Linn A. E. Gale, Editor and Publisher.
Champion of Socialism, New Thought, Occultism,
Internationalism and Birth Control

Contains such articles as :

- "The Birth Pangs of Revolution"
- "The World That Is To Be"
- "The Psychic Meaning of the War"
- "Judas Iscariot and the Bolsheviki"
- "Are We Hypnotized?"

The only Advanced Thought Magazine in English in Mexico. A Journal That is Indispensable to All Who Want to Understand the Signs of the Times.

$ 2 a year, American money. $ 1 for 6 months.
20c. a copy. No Free Samples. Remit by bank
draft on New York or personal check.

GALE'S MAGAZINE,
P. O. Box 518
Mexico City, D. F., Mexico.

THE TATA INDUSTRIAL BANK. LIMITED.

Authorised Capital Rs. 12,00,00,000.
Subscribed Capital Rs. 7,54,99,275.
Paid up Capital Rs. 1,50,99,855.

TO SHAREHOLDER ONLY.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that a FURTHER issue OF SHARES is about to be made, at a premium of Rs. 42 per share.

The new Shares are to be offered to the Shareholders of the Company whose names appear on the Register on the 7th; November 1919, in the proportion of three new Shares to every ten Shares in the existing capital held by them on that date.

The Shares in the capital of the Company are of the nominal value of Rs. 75, Rs. 15 paid up, and the amount payable in respect of the new issue will be Rs. 57 per Share, made up of Rs. 15 in respect of the nominal value of the Share and Rs. 42 for premium.

Each Shareholder will receive notice by post informing him of the number of new Shares of which he is entitled to claim allotment, and if necessary fractional Coupons to make up his correct proportion.

Acceptances in respect of the new Shares with the amounts payable in respect thereof must be received in the Registered Office of the Company on or before the 15th December 1919, after which date no acceptance will be considered.

The whole of the new issue has been underwritten. All moneys received in respect of premium will be carried to Reserve.

The Transfer Books of the Company will be closed on and from the 3rd November to the 7th November 1919 both days inclusive.

Dated the 9th day of October 1919.

By Order of the Board
R. H. PARKER
SECRETARY.

Registered Office
Wallace Street,
Fort, Bombay.

"COMMERCE AND INDUSTRIES."

An Interesting Monthly Journal of Indian Material Progress.

Annual Subscription Rs. 10-0 and Single Copy
Rs. 1 Post Free.

A Specially valuable advertising Medium.

Wanted Agents throughout India.

Address :—P. Box. No. 353, and 5 Mount Road,
Madras S. C.

THE TATA INDUSTRIAL BANK, LD.

HEAD OFFICE, BOMBAY.

BRANCHES—CALCUTTA and HYDERABAD (Deccan)
CANNPORE and LUCKNOW.

Sub-Branchea.—

Bombay—Share Bazaar, Shroff Bazaar.

Calcutta—Bara Bazaar.

London Agents. LLOYDS BANK LIMITED.

NEW YORK AGENTS: THE GUARANTY
TRUST COY. OF NEW YORK.

AUTHORISED CAPITAL... Rs. 12,00,00,000.

SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL..... " 7,56,00,225.

PAID UP CAPITAL..... " 1,50,99,225.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Sir D. J. Tata, Kt., Chairman.

Sir Sassoon David, Bart.

Sir R. N. Mookerjee, K. O. L. E.

Sir Francis Stewart, Kt.

Sir Henry Proctor, Kt.

R. D. Tata, Esq.

F. E. Dinshaw, Esq.

F. O. Rimgton, Esq.

Narottam Morarjee, Esq.

Hajee Gulam Mahomed Ajam, Esq.

The Hon'ble Mr. Purshottamdas Thakordes. C. I. E.

A. J. Bilimoria, Esq.

Secretary, R. H. Parker.

Current Accounts opened and interest allowed on daily credit balances from Rs. 500/- to Rs. 1,00,000/- at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum. If the balance to the credit of any account does not fall below Rs. 25,000/- at any time between 1st January and 30th June, interest will be allowed during that period at 2½ % per annum. No interest is allowed unless the sum accrued amounts to Rs. 8/- Half-yearly.

Fixed Deposits. Interest allowed on Deposits fixed for one or two years and for shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank. Interest allowed on Savings Bank Accounts at 4 per cent per annum. Rules may be obtained on application.

Loans and Cash Credits are granted on approved securities.

Purchases and sales of Securities and shares effected.

Bills of Exchange purchased and collected and every description of Banking and exchange business undertaken.

14-4-18. J. PAGAN DALZELL Acting Manager.

THE YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK, LIMITED.

(Registered in Japan.)

Established 1880.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 48,000,000.

Paid up Capital.....Yen. 42,000,000.

Reserve Fund.....Yen. 28,100,000.

Head Office:—Yokohama.

Branches and Agencies at Bombay, Buence Aires, Calcutta, Changchun, Chi-Nan, Dairen, Fengtien, Hankow, Harbin, Hongkong, Honolulu, Kaiyuan, Kobe, London, Los Angeles, Lyons, Manila, Nagasaki, Newchwang, New York, Osaka, Peking, Rangoon, San Francisco, Seattle, Shanghai, Shimonoseki, Singapore, Soerabaya, Sydney, Tientsin, Tokio, Taingtao.

Current Deposit Accounts are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at the rate of 3 per cent per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 100,000, provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of banking and exchange business transacted.

N. IGARASHI

Post Box No. 207, Hornby Road, Bombay.

I. NISHIMAKI.

Manager, Calcutta.

1-12-17.

Post Box No. 406, Clive street, Calcutta

THE BANK OF BARODA, LD.

Under the Patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja Gaekwar. Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897

HEAD OFFICE BARODA.

Branches—Ahmedabad, Navsari Meshana, and Surat

Capital Subscribed... ..Rs. 60,00,000.

Capital Paid up " 20,00,000.

Reserve Fund " 12,50,000.

DIRECTORS :

The Hon'ble Mr. Lalubhai Somaldas, C. I. E., Chairman

Sir Vithaldas Damodar Thackersey, Kt.

Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti Nagar Sheth, Baroda.

Sheth Manilal Revadas, Vadnagar.

Rao Bahadur Gunajirao R. Nimbalker, Sur Sabha, Baroda State.

Bhaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., Advocate, High Court, Bombay.

M. H. Kantavalla, Esq., Agent, Maharaja Mill Co., Ld. Baroda..

R. R. Shirgaokar, Naib Subba, Baroda State.

A. N. Datar, Accountant General, Baroda State.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balance from Rs. 800 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest which does not come to Rs. 8 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application. C. E. RANDLE,—General Manager. 15-4-12.

THE CENTRAL BANK OF INDIA, LTD

Subscribed Capital... ..Rs. 50,00,000

Paid Up Capital" 25,00,000

Reserved liability of

Shareholders" 25,00,000

Reserve Fund" 6,00,000

Head Office:—Alice Building, Bombay.

Local Branches:—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Basar, (3) Share Basar.

Branches:—Amritsar, Calcutta, Delhi, Jharis, Karachi.

London Agents:—London Joint City and Midland Bank, Ld.

Current Accounts :—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June
2½ % allowed on Daily Balances from July to December.

12 months Deposits received at 5 % per annum.

Long and Short period Deposits received at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking Business transacted.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA.

Manager.

25-2-17

Timely advice to the Wealthy

Costly but certain remedies are in the long run cheaper than cheap and uncertain ones.

KANDARPA SANJIVINI PILLS AND OIL

are the safest and surest remedies for indigestion, constipation, loss of appetite, memory, mental, physical and nervous debility and all sorts of urinary disorders, improve impoverished blood.

Price per tin of 40 Pills Rs. 5 & per tola of Oil Rs. 10.

Both Purchased at a time Rs. 11/4—

Medical Advice and a Medical Book containing 128 pages sent Gratis and Post Free.

RAJ VAIDYA-NARAYANJI KESHAVJI

Head Office:—Jamnagar, Kathiawar, (India.)

Branch:—No. 187, Kalbadevi Road.

24-8-1919.

BOMBAY.

Empire Hindu Hotel

Opposite Victoria Terminus
Bombay.

(Central Situation)

Strictly Vegetarian.

Charges Moderate

Fitted with

Electric Lift, Fans and Lights.

TELEGRAMS:

TELEPHONE

"FOOD," BOMBAY.

2789.

22-8-19.

Saffron? Saffron?? Saffron???

If you wish to buy genuinely pure and best Saffron it is

SUN

BRAND

SAFFRON

ONLY

It has been largely used by Jain Temples, Maharajas, Durbars, Hakims and Vaidyas all over the country for the last 75 years and is well known for its purity and genuineness.

S. NARAYEN & Co.,

17-2-18

21, Humam Street, Fort Bombay.

SHORTHAND

Like Other Arts and Sciences, Shorthand is subject to the Law of Progress. Based on greatly improved scientific and analogical principles, the Sloan-Duployan system (contained in a compact of 12 lessons) saves a year's laborious study, ensuring highest efficiency and speediest results. Shorthand is the open-door to many well-paid positions, at any rate it will mean advancement for you. Expert Individual or Postal Instructions for a fixed fee, payable in easy monthly instalments. Speed Classes Conducted. Specialised Training Guaranteed. Enclose stamp for booklet, etc. CENTRAL CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE, G. P. O. Box No. 424, Bombay.

"EVERYTHING FOR EVERYBODY"

National Standard Portable Typewriter No. 8 (10 lbs.) Rs. 190
Oliver No. 5 (American Rebuilt) B.S. & Tab. Rs. 175; No. 7 " 200
" 3 (Second-hand) in thorough working order. " 125
Empire No. 1 (Do.) in good working order. " 85
Multicopy Typewriter Carbons, per Box of 100 sheets. " 5
Webster Brand " Ribbons for all machines, Doz. " 21
Typewriter Oil (best 1 oz. bot.) or Eberhard Erasers, Doz. " 6
Safety Razor, Rivals Gillette, with 6 Gillette Blades (best) " 5
Do. (Made in U.S.A.) with 3 spare blades, Set " 1
Portable Electric Battery & lamp (burns 200 hours) compl. " 30
Envelope Making Machine (to make 30,000 per day), New " 35
Full Jewelled Lever Watch (Square or Octagon) Silver " 25
Conklin's Self-filling Fountain Pen (non-leakable) Gold nib " 8
UNIVERSAL BUSINESS SYNDICATE,
20-4-19. Post Box No. 424, Bombay.

HYPNOTISM

PERSONAL MAGNETISM,
WILL POWER,
NERVE FORCE—

Call what you will—

Is the intangible power that controls human destiny. It is the key to all business and social success. This power is no special gift of any one. It is latent in every one. We help you how to display it. By our system, you can learn in a few days at your own home and not only achieve success yourself, but you can influence the mind, health and actions of others to a remarkable.

Write immediately for our free book—The Pride of India.

THE LATENT LIGHT CULTURE;
TINNEVELLY, S. INDIA.

Batlivala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 1 each bottle of 100.

Batlivala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 2 each bottle of 100.

Batlivala's Ague Mixture of Fever, Malaria, Influenza etc.

Batlivala's Ague Pills for Malaria, Fever, Influenza etc.

Batlivala's Tonic pills for pale people & nervous breaks down.

Batlivala's Tooth Powder of Preserving Teeth

Batlivala's Ringworm ointment for Ringworm Dhobi Itch etc.

May be had from all dealers in medicines or from

Dr. H. L. Batlivala Sons & Co., Ltd.

No. 12, Worli, 18, Bombay.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESS:—"Doctor Batlivala Dadar"

THE BOMBAY CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK.

HEAD OFFICE:—Apollo Street, Et., Bombay.

DIRECTORS:—The Hon. Sir Fazulbhai Currimbhoy (Chairman), Sir Vithaldas D. Thackersey, the Hon. Mr. Lalubhai Saravaldas, Sir Stanley Reed, the Hon. Mr. C. V. Mehta, the Chief of Lohakaranji, G. K. Devadhar, Esq., the Hon. Sir P. D. Pattani, the Raja Sahab of Malegaon.

Share Capital (fully paid) Rs. 7,00,000

1 Deposits fixed for one year and shorter or longer periods are accepted. Rates and other particulars may be ascertained from the order signed.

2 The Bank finances only registered Co-operative Societies in the Bombay Presidency on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency.

3. Accounts are audited half-yearly by a special Government Auditor, and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the "Bombay Government Gazettee."

20-5-17.

VAIKUNTH L. MEHTA, Manager.

THE BANK OF TAIWAN, LTD.

Incorporated by Special Charter of the Imperial Japanese Government, 1899.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 30,000,000
Paid-up Capital.....Yen. 22,500,000
Reserve Fund.....Yen. 5,680,000

Head Office:—Taipeh, Formosa.

BRANCHES:—

LONDON	SHANGHAI	TOKIO
NEW YORK	HONGKONG	OSAKA
AMOY	SINGAPORE	KOBE
CANTON	SOERABAJA	YOKOHAMA
FOOCHOW	SEMARANG	AKO
HANKOW	MAKUNG	GIRAN
KIUKIANG	BATAVIA	KAGI
SWATOW	PINAN	KARENKO
TAINAN	SHINCHIKU	KEELUNG
TAKOW	TAICHU	TAMSUI

The Bank has also a large number of Correspondents at Home and Abroad.

Current Deposit Accounts—are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at 2 per cent. per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 1,00,000 provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of Banking and Exchange business transacted.

K. TAKEMURA

Manager

9-12-17. 56, Esplanade Road, Fort, BOMBAY

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

Established 7th September 1906.

Incorporated under the Indian Companies' Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE:

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.

Capital Subscribed Rs. 1,00,00,000

Capital Called up " 50,00,000

Reserve Fund " 15,00,000

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 500 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½% p. a. throughout the year. On sums exceeding Rs. 1,00,000 interest is allowed by special arrangement. No interest will be allowed which does not amount to Rs. 8 per half year.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short periods @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

"Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application".

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, & CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stocks at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

H. P. STRINGFELLOW.

6-1-11.

Manager.

A Lady's Best Ornament is a Glorious Head of Hair.

A profusion of rich, soft silky, lustrous, wavy hair—where's the woman who would not like that?

There's only one oil that makes such hair and it's the far-famed

KAMINIA OIL
(Regd.)

Invaluable for ladies, and just as much for Brain-Workers and Students.

Heated head cooled, aching disappears and dandruff becomes a thing of the past. Added to all these it possesses a beautiful fragrant smell.

For superiority, awarded a Gold Medal at the Mysore Exhibition, and in great demand all over the country.

If you have not yet used KAMINIA OIL, you

have missed a fine delight and a real boon, use it now, if only once; and like many people you will prefer to use also always.

Price per bottle, Re. 1. V. P. Charges 6 annas extra. Price for 3 bottles, Rs. 2-10. V. P. charges 14 annas extra. Write now, Do not delay.

Sole Agents:—

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,
(5-8-16) No. 155, Jamma Masjid Market, BOMBAY.

Now-a-Days.

All things have advanced in price. Even the vegetable ingredients used in our Atank Nigrah Pills have advanced in price.

Even the labourers demand heavy wages being dearer. Even the users have increased yet the Atank Nigrah Pills for Toning up the system are sold at before war price i. e. at a Rupee.

Vaidya Shastri
Manishanker Govindji,
Atank Nigrah Pharmacy,

Head Office:—Jamnagar—Kathiawar.

Branch:—Kalbadevi Road, Bombay.

H. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours. Publish Fine Art Pictures, & c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.

1-12-10. HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS.

ROYAL TONIC PILLS.

Powerful Nutritious and Strength Restorer. Price Re. 1-4 per tin of 30 Pills.

PREPARED BY—GOVINDJEE DAMODER & Co.,

Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Commission Agents.

1-12-10. No. 3 Sutar Chawl Market, BOMBAY.

Clean
 Wholesome
 Intelligent
 Entertainment

IS A GREAT STEP

IN

SOCIAL REFORM.

When deciding on a

PLACE OF AMUSEMENT TWO
 ESTABLISHMENTS

Should at once leap to the mind,

THE EXCELSIOR

BOMBAY'S PREMIER MODERN THEATRE

AND

THE EMPIRE

BOMBAY'S MOST PALATIAL
 PICTURE THEATRE

Where Film Plays of Distinction are shown
 Every Week.

A

Great Cinema Masterpiece

is shown,

Both theatres are near the Bori Bunder
 and are run by the

EXCELSIOR SYNDICATE.

The Pioneer of Bombay's

AMUSEMENT WORLD.

FURUKAWA & CO.

TOKIO

The Largest Manufacturers

in the East

OF

ELECTRIC BARE COPPER CONDUCTORS,

ELECTRIC UNDERGROUND CABLES,

ELECTRIC INSULATED WIRES,

ELECTRIC ACCESSORIES,

INGOTS, RODS, WIRES,

SHEETS, TUBES,

Etc., Etc.,

SOLE AGENTS IN INDIA AND BURMA.

TATA, SONS & CO.,

BOMBAY & CALCUTTA.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS Ltd.

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.
Narsari Building, Fort, BOMBAY.

Works at Borbunder, Kathiawad.

When YOUR EYES

need to be examined by QUALIFIED OCULISTS or by SCIENTIFIC REFRACTIONISTS of 26 year experience, FREE OF CHARGE, you cannot do better than GO TO

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR & CO.

The leading firm of Oculists, Eyesight Specialists, Manufacturing Opticians and suppliers of the patented

"KRYPTOK"

(Invisible one-piece bifocal lens.)

Toric, and all kinds of lenses,—Cylindrical, Spherical, cylindrical, Prismatic, &c., from pebbles as well as from best quality crown glasses

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR

Eyesight Specialist,

With 26 Years' Practical Experience.

Holds Exceptional Testimonials from H. H. The Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, the Hon'ble Sir Lawrence Jenkins the Hon. Mr. Justice Batty, Mrs. Batty, the Hon. Sir N. S. Chundavarker, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beaman, the Hon'ble Sir S. L. Batchelor, the Hon'ble Sir John Heaton Mr. H. G. Bell, M. V. O., Col. R. H. Forman, B. A. M. C., P. M. O. B. Brigade, Lieut. Col. G. H. Bull, M. D., I. M. S., Lieut-Colonel Peters M. B., I. M. S., and other high personages.

(7) 879, HORNBY ROW,

Opposite the Government Telegraph Office,
62-11-10. Fort, BOMBAY.

INTENDING ASSUREES ARE INVITED TO COMPARE THE RATES AND CONDITIONS OF

The Empire of India Life Assurance Company, Limited.

WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.

Head Office 11 Elphinstone Circle, BOMBAY.

SEE REPORT AND OPINIONS OF THE PRESS AS TO THE REMARKABLE PROGRESS MADE BY THE COMPANY.

ENDOWMENT NON-FORFEITABLE POLICY FOR RS. 3,000.

PAYABLE AT AGE 60 OR AT DEATH, IF PREVIOUS, WITH PROFIT.

If, at any time, the assured under this plan should desire to cease paying any more premiums, he can obtain a paid-up Policy for such a proportion of the original sum assured as the number of premiums paid bears to the number agreed upon. Thus a gentleman who had assured at age 20 for a Policy of Rs. 3,000 payable at age 60 or at death, if previous, after 5 year payments, would be entitled to a Free paid-up Policy for Rs. 500 free of future payments.

SOME OF THE DISTINCTIVE FEATURES.

- * Funds invested in Government Securities and in accordance with the Indian Trusts Act
- Policy holders can appoint their own Directors.
- 90 per cent. of profits to Participating Policy holders.
- Lapsed policies revived without Medical Certificate.
- Liberal Surrender Values 40 per cent. of the Tabular premium paid.
- Immediate payment of Claims.
- Medical fees and stamps on Policies are payable by the Company.

The sum assured is PAYABLE IN FULL should death occur even immediately after payment of the first premium.

GUARANTEE INSURANCE.—This Company issues Guaranteed Policies in situation of trust and confidence. It is especially authorized to guarantee the employees of the Post Office

MONTHLY PREMIUM.

AT AGE 20, Rs. 6-9-0.

AT AGE 25, Rs. 7-8-0.

AT AGE 30, Rs. 8-14-0.

AT AGE 35, Rs. 10-18-0.

AT AGE 40, Rs. 13-12-0.

AT AGE 45, Rs. 18-10-0

Personal Forms and full Particulars may be obtained from any local Agent in India or from ALLUM, BHARUCHA & CO. Managers.

22-9-10.

IN INDIA

EVERY ONE KNOWS.

whom it does concern that we are foremost in supplying the best

COSSI SILK SUIT PIECES

suitable for the season. These pieces are strong, fancy and durable, and have been specially manufactured for India's Market. Each piece guaranteed for One Suit Complete.

Price Rs. 10 per piece.

Write to—THE BHARGAVA COMMERCIAL SOCIETY,

2-18.

Bombay City.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER. Contract Rates for Advertisements.

Number of Insertions.	1		2		3		4		5
	Inch.	Rs.	Inches.	Rs.	Column.	Rs.	Column.	Rs.	Column.	Page.
15	11	0	16	0	20	0	30	0	60	0	87	0
25	16	0	25	0	30	0	50	0	87	0	158	0
62	25	0	38	0	50	0	87	0	158	0	300	0

Casual advertisements at Rs. 4 per line for the 1st insertion and Rs. 2 per line for succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

Increasing Preference

PEOPLE who judge typewriters by strict comparisons never fail to appreciate the Oliver's overwhelming superiorities.

Those who examine its workmanship admit that it is of the finest.

Those who are anxious for the most durable machine are never hesitant in conceding that Oliver design and Oliver materials make for longer life.

Those who desire simplicity find in the Oliver fewer parts, less opportunity for wear and repair.

We are always willing, even anxious, to have people judge the Oliver by making comparisons. ~~THE OLIVER~~, we believe, as no other machine, more of the wanted features. No single advantage dominates at the sacrifice of others.

The Oliver has won its thousands of friends mostly through comparisons. Over 700,000 Olivers have been sold.

We urge you to do as others are doing—don't buy without first investigating the Oliver and making careful comparisons.

THE OLIVER TYPEWRITER COMPANY

SOLE AGENTS FOR INDIA

W. H. THORNS & Co.

25-29, CHURCHGATE STREET, BOMBAY.

Always mention Indian Social Reformer, when you write for the Oliver.

WONDERFUL TONIC AND

MOUTH-REFRESHER

JINTAN.

This is a safe and efficient remedy in all kinds of diseases or disturbances of the digestive organs. It is composed entirely of VEGETABLE INGREDIENTS made from the prescription of the following eminent medical men viz:—
NORIHITO MIWA, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy,
ZENJIRO INOUE, M. D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy
 and testified as to its efficacy by
Baron J. MATSUMOTO, M. D., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Army.
T. MITAMURA Maj., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial

Japanese Navy.
 As a digestive it is unequalled and will not disturb the functions of the most delicate stomach. Its antiseptic properties render it very efficacious in warding off disease and at the same time it imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath of the user.

By virtue of its aroma, it effectually makes the odour of Tobacco and Alcoholic Spirits.

It acts beneficially on the vocal cords and has found much favour with public speakers, actors, singers and those whose vocation necessitates a severe strain on the throat.

GOOD FOR

Biliousness, Headache, Vertigo, Nausea, Indigestion, Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, etc., etc.

To maintain general health 2 to 3 pills may be taken occasionally, well masticated.

Price—20 Pills Packet Rs. 0-1-0. 90 Pills Packet, with Tin case., Rs. 0-4-0, 380 pills Packet with fancy case., Rs. 1-0-0.

Prepared by Messrs. MORISHITA Co., OSAKA, JAPAN.

Sole Agents: Jintan Agency (G. R. Chaubai), Juma Masjid, BOMBAY.

FOR PAINS
 AND ACHES
 SPRAINS ETC.
 USE:—

AMRUTANJAN.

The magical pain balm extant. Cures all aches & pains. Costs 8 As. Sold everywhere.

By Appointment to H. E. the Governor
 Sir George Sydenham Clarke of
 Bombay.

HARIDAS VALJI,

(KING OF INDIAN CONFECTIONERS)

Highest Confectioner, Caterer and Grand Military Contractor.

Proprietor—RATINATH,
 Chitra Bazar & Grant Road,

20-4-19.

BOMBAY.

DENTISTRY.

Extractions Painless;
 Terms Very Moderate;
 Gold Crown, Bar and
 Bridge Work a Speciality
 (teeth without plate);
 Latest Successful Treatment
 for Pyorrhoea (pus in gums).

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

Hours: 8-1-30 & 3-7-30; Daily.
 (Sundays—From 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.)

ADDRESS BUILDING,
 NEW CHURCH ROAD,
 GUNPORE, BOMBAY:

K. R. AMAT,
 Surgeon Dentist.

14-19.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY MORNING.

Office—EMPIRE BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD, FORT.

Editor: K. NATARAJAN.

Vol. XXX BOMBAY—SUNDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1919. No. 7.

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard."
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

Indian Opinion on Mr. Montagu. The English Political Situation. Sir Abdur Rahim's Convocation Address. The Late Pandit Sivanath Sastry. The Punjab Enquiry Committee. The Epidemic of Increased Salaries. The Late Justice Ranade. Soldiers' Pay.	If Bolshevism Came to India. Thoughts on Political Franchise in India. Mr. Montagu's Failure. The Late Pandit Sivapath Bastri. Labour and Religion. Why Miss Pankhurst Favors Bolshevism. Egypt and India. Indian Emigration. A man who would not be knighted. Lord Acton's Library. Spoonerisms.
---	--

NOTES.

Indian Opinion on Mr. Montagu: We print today an article headed "Mr. Montagu's Failure" from the pen of a contributor who has considerable opportunities of feeling the pulse of public opinion. There can be no doubt that the introduction and administration of martial law in the Punjab, the belated appointment of a Committee, instead of a Royal Commission, to enquire into the causes of, and means employed in dealing with, the trouble in the Punjab, and the passing of the Indemnity Act before even this Committee pronounced its verdict, have led to a general belief such as that suggested by our contributor. Even some prominent Moderates are beginning to feel whether, after all, a declaration of rights such as that suggested by the National Congress, should not be embodied in the Reform Bill. So long as the Government of India can by merely pleading an emergency get the official majority in the Legislature to give them unlimited powers of restricting the liberty of the subject, so long, it is being generally felt, it is idle to expect them to choose the less facile methods of statesmanship. In many countries, constitutional reforms have been inaugurated by guarantees of the liberty of the subject, and it is useless to pretend, after what has happened, that they are not needed in this country. At the same time, we would strongly deprecate the conclusion that Mr. Montagu's stewardship has been a failure. That he does not enjoy in British public life the authority and prestige of Lord Morley is true; but, in this respect, Mr. Montagu is in the same case as most other English public men. Sir Bampfylde Fuller had to resign in consequence of the Government of India, with the support of the Secretary of State, refusing sanction to a very much less violent species of statesmanship than Sir Michael O'Dwyer, with the full support of Lord Chelmsford's Government, was able to exhibit. The late Lord Minto did not think he would be discharging his duty by supporting Provincial Governments in whatever they wanted to do. Lord Minto was not a genius but he knew his own mind, which is a great thing. The extent of Mr. Montagu's difficulties is, perhaps, greater than the public is aware of, and it is not always the most heroic or effective course for a person in a responsible position to resign office because things are not going in the way he would like them to. When Mr. Montagu comes to write his "Recollections," it may be found that he too had exerted his influence on those who in the name of "peace and order" are prepared to create as much dispeace and disorder as possible. We plead for a more sympathetic judgment of the Secretary of State's apparent failure to control the "Martial law and no d...d nonsense" section of the bureaucracy. It has shot its last bolt, as is evident from the astonishingly temperate tone of Sir Michael O'Dwyer's evidence before the Joint Committee.

The English Political Situation: The Challenge, the Church of England journal devoted to democracy in religion as in politics, writes of the Trades Union Congress as a great success. Our contemporary's observations are worth quoting as a detached and impartial estimate of the political situation in England:—"The Trades Union Congress is over--and signs are not lacking that the Revolution has begun. The Congress was the largest and in many ways the most successful ever held. It was also the most revolutionary, not in any "wild" sense, but thoroughgoing, ready for big changes, and conscious that Labour may itself any day, so to speak, have the responsibility of Government. It there be any who have thought of the Congress as riven by incurable divisions, or as a battle royal between the "moderates" and the "hotheads," they may as well be disillusioned. Never was Congress more united. To Churchillian adventures in Russia, to British futility in Ireland, Labour offers nothing but implacable opposition. The policy of "nationalisation"—first of the mines, then of other public services—it endorses by a vote that would have been unanimous but for Mr. Havelock Wilson and a few coadjutors, who have long ceased to have a scintilla of weight with intelligent working people. Only on what is called "direct action" was there serious difference of opinion. We can well understand Labour, surveying the feeblest and most nerveless Parliament since the Reform Act, crying out for the thunder and lightning of "direct action." That mood will pass, or will remain only as the spontaneous outburst of public opinion to which all Governments must give heed. For ourselves we place our faith in Parliamentary Government, not as an end but as a beginning, as in our country and time the way, not yet sufficiently used, to social amelioration. We look for the election of a really representative Government that will hold the general confidence, that will have the courage to do big things in a big way, that will recreate our local life, that will increase production of desirable commodities and will encourage responsibility among the producers, that will bend itself to the job that this Government took on and shirked—the reconstruction of a civilisation. The time is past for tinkers and pedlars. We want a few seers and statesmen. For, as we hinted above, the Revolution has begun.”

Sir Abdur Rahim's Convocation Address: The Mysore University has instituted the excellent practice of inviting distinguished men from all parts of India to deliver the annual address at its convocation. Last year, the choice fell on Sir Asutosh Mukerjee. This year the Hon. Sir Abdur Rahim of Madras delivered the address. It was characterised by much sound sense. He touched on the question of the medium of instruction in schools and said that he adhered to the opinion he had expressed to the Calcutta University Commission. He added: “The vernaculars of the country are unfortunately too numerous and it is my own belief that not one of them is yet fitted to be the medium of higher instruction. If there be any vernacular which possesses a sufficiently educative literature, my objection does not apply to it, but at the same time there must always be a school in every secondary educational division with English as the medium of instruction so as to allow of a choice. In deciding upon this question, every care should be taken not to sacrifice the interests of sound education for the sake merely of sentiment, however laudable. Besides I must confess to you that I am one of those dreamers who look forward to the time when there will be one common language for the whole of India and even if the language which has the best chance in this respect be not one of indigenous growth such as English, I would be prepared to accept it, and readily sacrifice some very dear predilection of my own in the best interests of the generations to come. I may also point out here that the languages of our religions and the classics are not in any spoken vernaculars but either is dead or foreign languages. For all boys to have to learn a number of languages when education can well be imparted and useful practical knowledge absorbed through the medium of one, is a wonderful waste of energy and time which must ultimately be obviated.”

The Late Pandit Sivanath Sastry: The biographical sketch of the late Pandit Sivanath Sastry which we reprint from the Bengales contains some interesting particulars of the life of the great Brahmo missionary. Among others is the fact that he was descended—as his name suggested—from a Vaidic Brahmin family of Southern India which had settled in Bengal in the time of the Emperor Jehangir. That this family from South India found no difficulty in entering into marriage relations with the Kulin Brahmins of Bengal and was soon merged in them, shows that three centuries ago orthodox Hindu society did not recognise provincial barriers. In contrast to this, is the fact that South Indian Vaidic families which settled in Maharashtra in the time of the Peishwas have to marry either among themselves or to go to their native districts to find wives or husbands. In our article on the late Pandit, we stated, on his own authority that he was betrothed when two or three years old, to a infant girl of about a year. The Bengali states that he was married at about thirteen years of age to a ten-year-old bride, and that five years later, his father forced a second wife upon him. When young Sivanath Sastry threw himself, first, into the social reform movement of Pandit Iswar Chandra Vidyasagar, and, then, into the Brahmo Samaj movement, his relatives cast him off. The Pandit himself states in his “Men I have seen.”

that he had to maintain himself, his young wife and child, while yet a student, from the proceeds of his scholarships. The Bengales' account would show that the young reformer had a more onerous responsibility.

The Punjab Enquiry Committee: The following Press communique has been issued:—“In his opening speech in the Indian Legislative Council on September 3 His Excellency the Viceroy announced the decision reached by the Government of India to appoint a committee under the presidency of Lord Hunter to enquire into the recent disorders and intimated that the Committee would consist of Justice Rankin, the Hon. Mr. Rice, Major-General Sir George Barrow, Sir Chimanlal Setalvad, Sardar Sahibzada Sultan Ahmad Khan. In view, however, of the wishes expressed in the Council, the Hon. Sir William Vincent undertook on behalf of the Government of India, to consider the question of adding to the Committee a non-official European and another non-official Indian member. It has now been decided, in consultation with the Secretary of State, to make both these additions. The two additional members selected are the Hon. Mr. Thomas Smith, of Cawnpore, and the Hon. Pandit Jagat Narayan, of Lucknow.” Both the additional nominations have been received with satisfaction.

The Epidemic of Increased Salaries: At the meeting of the Imperial Legislative Council on the 24th September, the Hon. Mr. S. Sinha asked Government to state the names of the various services, the scale of salaries of the members of which had been increased since the publication of the Report of the Public Services Commission, the amount of increase in each grade of the various services so affected for the better and the total additional cost to be incurred as the result of the re-organization schemes already sanctioned. In reply Mr. Sinha was referred to the reply given to Mr. Sarma's question at a previous meeting, which was noted in these columns. “In the case of most of the services mentioned in that reply,” it was added, “grades have now been abolished, and it is, therefore, impossible to work out the definite comparison of cost asked for.” This is a very curious statement. Surely, there must be some way of estimating the increased expenditure which is incurred in consequence of the re-organization schemes. If not, how will Government frame their budget of expenditure on the Services?

The Late Justice Ranade: We are informed by the honorary Secretary of the Dnyan Prasarak Mandal, Poona, that the unveiling ceremony of the portrait of the late Mr. Justice Ranade took place on the 4th inst., the Dussehra day, at the Shri Ram Library Hall, Sholapur, by the Hon. Mr. G. K. Sathé, C. I. E. Among those present were: The Hon. Keshavrao of Haidarabad, Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole, Mr. Ganpatrao Atré, Mrs. Saraswati Bai Kbare, Mrs. Kamabai Ranade and many others.

Soldiers' Pay: The Outlook, New York, gives the following figures of the salaries paid to the soldiers of different countries during the War. Australia gave her soldiers 43.50 dollars a month; New Zealand, 36.60 dollars; Canada, 33 dollars; the United States, 30 dollars; the United Kingdom, 11.40 dollars; France, 1.50 dollars; Austria, 98 cents; Japan, 78 cents; and Italy, 58 cents. German privates received 3 dollars a month.

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, OCTOBER 19, 1919.

IF BOLSHEVISM CAME TO INDIA.

Sometime back Sir Theodore Morison wrote an article in the Observer of London forecasting the probable outcome of the advent of Bolshevism into India through Afghanistan. He began by exhorting stay-at-home Englishmen to reject the facile and superficial view that it was grotesque to imagine that an Oriental monarch, like the Amir of Afghanistan, should deliberately ally himself with the Bolsheviks who stand for the supremacy of the proletariat. Arguing from his reading of the literature of the French Revolution, he suggested that Bolshevism must have been presented to Afghans in some garb which would make it attractive to them. "Although we cannot be sure in what guise Bolshevism has presented itself to the Afghans," he wrote, "we know that it has come to them with, at least, one strong recommendation. It has laid low that terrible Tsarist Government which terrified Asia, which had overthrown one Mahomedan Kingdom after another, and was reputed to be the inveterate foe of Islam. These are good credentials in Central Asia, and with them Bolshevism metamorphosed in its passage from the Neva to the Helmand, may have received a welcome from the Afghans." Moreover, he went on to observe, "Islam is fundamentally so democratic that Bolshevism may not prove very subversive in Afghanistan." But, he added, "Hinduism is a very different matter." If Bolshevism came to India, the Indian masses will not revolt against the British Government. "It has never been the way of the illiterate crowd to attack anything so remote, so abstract as is the Government of India." The revolt will be "to shake off the Yoke of the Brahmin, of the Landlord and of the money-lender." "Those are the traditional powers in the Indian Countryside, and it is against power and tradition that the new teaching incite them to rebel. In short, it is the upper castes, the twice-born, against whom the revolt will take place if ever Bolshevism manifests itself in India." He concludes: "Let the subversive doctrine of the Supremacy of the Proletariat once reach them and a Jacquerie may follow in which the Chamar and his fellows will feed fat the ancient grudge they bear the Brahmin and the Thakur. The carnival of bloodshed and lust that would follow needs no elaboration; the details would be substantially the same as in the French Revolution. I can never read Taine's "Origines" without thinking to myself "So might it be in India." A certain lady came to beg Andre Dumont for the liberty of her husband. "Il la prend sur ses genoux, lui fourre la main dans la poitrine et dit, ayant tate, 'Je n'aurais jamais cru que les tetons d'une cidevant Marquise. Se fondissent ainsi sous la main d'un representant du peuple.'" So might an exultant Chamar show a high caste lady how cheaply he held the sanctity of the Brahmin." Sir Theodore concludes:

These grim possibilities are no arguments against Mr. Montagu's Reforms. On the contrary, they are strong reasons for them, they show that no time should be lost in making a beginning of the political education of the Indian people. But the possibility of Bolshevism in India does support the plea advanced by Lord Curzon in the House of Lords that the power of the Government of India should be maintained. While the new ideas are being absorbed and immense social changes are taking place there should be somewhere in the country a sufficient power to maintain order. Society must hold an adequate force in reserve in case the front line should be rushed by an onslaught of British anarchy.

We do not think that Afghanistan is likely to entertain Bolshevism for the reasons suggested by Sir Theodore Morison. The Afghan Government doubtless knows that it was not Lenin but Kerensky that overthrew the Tsarist regime in Russia; and that Kerensky had behind him the enthusiastic support of the Allies. Sir Theodore says that Islam is fundamentally so democratic that Bolshevism may not prove very subversive in Afghanistan. France and England and the United States are democracies and yet they are afraid of the subversive influence of Bolshevism. The veiled suggestion that Islam has anything in common with Bolshevism is absolutely unfounded, as authoritatively declared by the Chief Ecclesiastical authority in Egypt, who, in an elaborate fatwa, has denounced it as the negation of every fundamental principle of Islam. As regards Hinduism, Sir Theodore Morison, for the purposes of his argument, identifies it not only with the Brahman caste, but also with the institutions of landlords and money-lenders. The Government of India, he thinks, is too impersonal and remote to be exposed to the resentment of the masses, but the Brahmans, landlords and money-lenders are the tyrants of the countryside and they will feel the brunt of Bolshevism if it comes to India. Landlords and moneylenders are no part of Hinduism. They exist in countries professing other religions. Nor can the Government of India disclaim responsibility for them, itself being the biggest landlord in the country. Sir Theodore's ingenious attempt to hold up Hinduism, the Brahman, the landlord, and the money-lender as the root cause of the hardships of the countryside, is about as absurd as the suggestion that the depressed classes are likely to be the most apt pupils of the Bolsheviks. Such outbreaks as we have recently had in this country do not bear out Sir Theodore's dictum that the Brahman and the landlord will attract the first fury of the mob. Moreover, in the south, where there is a movement against the Brahman, the landlord and the money-lender have not withheld their support from it for the reason that they, with the Brahman, are regarded as the common enemies by the Depressed Classes. In the South, at any rate, landlords and money-lenders are not synonymous with the twice-born, and a movement against them may get as many adherents among the twice-born as among the other classes of the population. The conclusion that the Government of India should not be liberalised, in order that its power to prevent the Chamar and his fellows from feeding fat their ancient grudge against the Brahman and the Thakur, may not be impaired, is too grotesque for comment. Sir Theodore's observations suggest that those Indians who ask for the introduction of an element of responsibility in the Government of India, are risking the probability of Brahman women being obliged to sit on the knees of Mahars and Chamars. This is an attempt to rouse the forces of fanaticism and obscurantism in this country against the movement of constitutional reform. But it will be understood in India at its true value. The most orthodox Hindu will refuse to believe that the Government of India as it is today is any protection against Bolshevism, and it can become a real protection only if it be strengthened by being liberalised largely in respect of its responsibility to the representatives of the people.

THOUGHTS ON POLITICAL FRANCHISE IN INDIA.

Two of the fundamental defects in the Southborough Franchise Committee's findings are the disqualification of women and educated men as such from vote. It is hard to understand especially in this twentieth century how sex can stand as a barrier against the enjoyment of one's rights as a citizen. The only argument brought forward for this exclusion of women from the vote is that the Indian woman is by temperament unwilling or not sufficiently advanced socially and educationally to make use or right use of the vote and if there be any who may be desirous of getting the franchise and using it, such women are too few and far between to justify legislation and the cost of establishment to collect their votes. Granting that the facts assumed in the argument are true, it is not only illogical but unjust to deny a person his natural rights because he may not or does not use them. It is the person's own lookout while it is the business of legislation, civic or otherwise, to be concerned solely with laying down rules and regulations and the necessary qualifications, for a right, and whosoever possesses these must be at liberty to exercise the right or not as he pleases. It would be as absurd and unjust to act upon such a piece of reasoning as it would be to debar a person from making use of a public institution because he is unable to do so for some reason or other, or to forbid university women to take up mathematics as their optional subject because, generally speaking, they have no liking for it. As for making 'right use' of the vote, if a man of certain qualifications is capable of doing so it is impossible to see why a woman should not be so capable. The woman wishing to exercise her franchise equally with men will not as a rule, the writer thinks, be reluctant to go to the common polling booth to register her vote and hence the question of a separate establishment does not come in. But if the number of such women is large enough and if they object to jostle with men, many of whom may probably be wanting in manners, some way will have to be found to register their votes and it would not be uneconomical or inconvenient to have a separate arrangement for the purpose. We hear, however, that it has been recommended to empower the various Provincial Legislatures to enfranchise Indian women according to the needs of each province and we hope, the recommendation would be carried into effect. From our experience of it in England, we do not want a suffragette movement to spring up here in India and it would be better for us to take a lesson from that country in this respect and be careful beforehand.

To come now to the second defect: It is indeed to be regretted that education has not been recognised as a qualification for vote. This would disable from voting many a worthy citizen who is a member of a joint family, a system commonly prevalent in India—while every illiterate person who may not know how to use his vote or even what it means has been enfranchised. The intelligentsia of a country are its greatest asset. It is these people who are leading India towards her political salvation and helping her in a rational, all-round progress notwithstanding Anglo-Indian perversion of facts. It is they who are not afraid of criticising the self-willed vagaries of an autocratic or bureaucratic Government. If England is now in the throes of Labour strikes and of a social, economic and political upheaval, it is partly because her Parliament has long been flooded with wealthy members who are either directly or indirectly connected with landed, commercial and other vested interests and partly because it is influenced overmuch by the so-called public opinion formed through newspapers, owned by a few capitalistic syndicates, the educated middle classes following independent professions who have or expected to have independent, liberal, selfless and patriotic views on questions affecting their country's welfare being meagrely represented on it. Let us not make the same mistake in India by giving over-representation to vested interests and minimising the importance of educated opinion. The candidate for election at any rate ought to be able to express himself well in English, for, it is only then that he would be of any use as a representative to protect the interests of a particular class or community. The writer would take independent professions and education in all its forms to be strongly represented in all the Legislative Councils of India, for, after all it is the educated and cultured elite everywhere and at all times that have made the world what it is and been instrumental in advancing the cause of civilization in the true sense of the word.

Another great drawback in the Committee's report is their advocacy of communal electorates. Let it be pointed out at the outset that communal electorates are not the same as communal representation as is so often supposed by the unthinking average man in the street. It is only one of the ways to secure the latter and they are, (1) nomination, (2) communal electorates, (3) reserved seats in general electorates and (4) proportional representation. Is communal representation necessary? The writer does not know of a single instance where a sectional measure affecting the rightful interests of a class or caste, minority or majority, has ever been introduced by a non-official member in any of the Legislative Councils in India, unless it were to abolish the unjust special privileges enjoyed by them. Moreover, India with her heterogeneous castes, customs, languages and religions is sadly in need of centripetal forces to get rid of her narrow interests and to bind her as one nation, without which the sense of nationality, and patriotism of the highest kind, are impossible and self-government would be a failure for want of mutual sympathy and unity. Communal representation would only tend to accentuate the differences already existing and is thus unsound in principle. However, in practical politics we have to face facts as they are and not be led away by pure theoretical considerations however far-sighted or altruistic. There is no knowing that the caste or class that will find itself in power in the Government of our country will not misuse it to tyrannize over others less fortunate. Therefore, in order to placate the diverse elements some of whom are waging a kind of political war among themselves, we must come to a compromise and adopt communal representation at least for the present. We have next to consider the question whether communal representation is as necessary for a majority as it is for a minority. By making the franchise sufficiently broad so as to reach the lowest strata of society as far as possible, no majority is likely to be unrepresented on the Councils and one is glad to note that the recommendations of the Franchise Committee in this respect leave little to be desired. The non-Brahmins are thus deprived of some of their cogent arguments for separate representation. Then there is also the difficulty of defining 'backward classes' which, however would be surmounted by making a certain percentage of literacy as a basis. The case is different with Mahommedans who are a minority. Their interests will have to be protected through separate representation so long as we have not outgrown our petty parochialism and acquired a sense of responsibility for the good of our country as a whole and a consequent desire to elect the best man available notwithstanding his caste or creed. And although the seats allotted to Mahommedans in the Councils are out of all proportion to their numbers and thus not in accordance with the strict principles of justice or fairplay, the writer does not think it a dear price to pay for their goodwill and Hindu-Moslem unity. He hopes a time will come when every section of Indian Society including the Mahommedans will willingly give up their special privileges and be ready to stand as candidates in cosmopolitan electorates. One does not grudge the Indian Christians their separate representation which it is proposed to give them by the Committee though one would like to object strongly to the same being given to Europeans or Anglo-Indians, for two reasons. Firstly, there are very few Europeans or Anglo-Indians in India, if any, apart from the official bureaucracy and vested interests which are already being abundantly represented on the Councils. Secondly, granting there are any such, their interests are bound to be almost identical with those of the latter and hence there is no need whatsoever to give them special representation.

Let us now see which is the best method of securing communal representation the necessity for which in the case of minorities being granted. Nomination takes away the liberty of independent judgment and vote from the councillor, who is on the average a man of the world, and thus makes him a mere mouthpiece of the Executive Government, a thing to be detested in a really popular assembly. Communal electorates tend very much to exaggerate communal differences and sense of caste or class exclusiveness, a thing greatly detrimental to the progress and welfare of a country. Moreover, such electorates will, as a rule, return to the Council, members who have got the most extreme or sectarian views on matters affecting their community and thus the Council is prone to turn into a veritable battle-field with words as weapons. The last two methods presuppose cosmopolitan multi-membered constituencies. Of these, that of Proportional Representation is the best on pure theoretical grounds inasmuch as the voice of the Council elected on the principle is as near being a perfect reflection of that of the majority as is possible, and on that account it is being adopted in politically advanced countries of Europe. However, under the system there is no certainty of a backward community being always able to send a representative and consequently for the present, at any rate, it is desirable to have for minorities reserved seats in general electorates as proposed by the Moderates' Conference held in Bombay. The most obvious advantage of these two methods is the existence of multi-membered constituencies which gives least room for corruption and other direct or indirect influence on the voters. A still greater advantage peculiar to Indian conditions, is the existence of cosmopolitan electorates which will serve to banish by and bye, the conflicting interests of diverse elements from India until she stands firm as a united nation, and a supreme exemplar to the less heterogeneous peoples of the West.

A. S. BHANDARKAR.

MR. MONTAGU'S FAILURE.

[From a Correspondent.]

1. "The British Government which has crushed foreign foes and quelled internal rebellion, could afford to despise these agitators."

2. "They have given these people a lesson which they will not forget for fifty years."

3. "As to India, by her remarkable contribution to our triumph, notably in the East, she has won a new claim to our consideration, a claim so irresistible that it ought to overpower, and must overpower, all prejudice and timidity which may stand in the way of her progress."

4. "These sacrifices of India will ever be remembered as having forged a fresh link in the bonds of the Empire, never stronger than they are today."

The first quotation is the utterance of Sir Michael O'Dwyer who, while praising the Punjab, rewarded the heroic efforts of her martial races with the gift of martial law. The second of the extracts is from the "Nation," said to be the boast of military officers, which is now going the round in all Indian papers. These two remarks are worthy of the worst days of General Von Bissing in Belgium. Only, still, there is the hope that just as the sting of the German's boast in Belgium about Belgium not forgetting the 'Hun' Rule there, is sought to be removed by lavish promises of guarantee, reparation and restitution, by help of all sorts and by the grant of a major portion of the fine levied on Germany, so noble-minded and God-fearing Englishmen will try to soothe and balm our much-lacerated feelings. To that end, we find some support in the latter two utterances, the one by Mr. Lloyd George, the other by Lord Jellicoe, two Empire-builders as against two Empire-destroyers. Let us take heart at these two remarks and we shall still hope that Mr. Lloyd George or any other Premier will make good these grateful words.

Now, in this predicament, what is our Secretary of State doing? He calls Sir Michael O'Dwyer, an eminent man, in the House of Commons. He appoints him a member of the Army Commission, thus inflicting an insult on a whole nation. And the Secretary of State spouts forth platitudes of sympathy, pours out liberal views but is not shocked at the throwing of bombs by aeroplanes on an unarmed mob and he has the lack of feeling and consideration or statesmanship to say that the recent administrative acts in the Punjab have no bearing on this enquiry by the Army Commission. Well it may have no bearing if much more than "this little thing" of Mr. Montagu had been granted, if we had secured full responsible Government or self-Government and if we could afford to despise any more incursions of supermen. The coming-in of Sir Michael O'Dwyer on some responsible work, is like appointing Lord Milner, Secretary of State for Colonies immediately after the Boer war. At least, tact and good sense, would dictate to the contrary.

It is not in these alone that Mr. Montagu has failed to rise to the occasion. Except the so called Reforms, he is giving away on every conceivable question to vested interests and he is jettisoning everything for saving the Reforms. Well, we shall thank him for his project of Reforms and for the clever way in which he is saving the Reforms from reactionaries. I am not one of those who would consider the Reforms scheme as a "little thing." Nor am I disposed to be over-exuberant in my gratitude to Mr. Montagu. I hold we would have got Reforms even if somebody else had been the Secretary of State; only we would not have the precious "dyarchy." Who knows, Mr. Lionel Curtis might not have persuaded any other Secretary of State? The question is, are the Reforms worth having at such a cost, at such a price? Let anybody point out one matter of importance which Mr. Montagu has decided in favour of Indian demands these two years. Even Mr. Austen Chamberlain undid the wrong done to India for years, in regard to the cotton duties. Mr. Montagu, lacking in that great command over men which Lord Morley possessed and the great respect which he inspired, has to truckle to their whims and fancies for the sake of saving the Reforms. What a waste of legislative time and energy over the Rowlatt Bills and Indemnity Bill in the immediate post-war period. In finances, as regards Press Act, and the liberty of the subject we are losing ground. I put two syllogisms: Mr. Montagu is a failure in spite of his Reforms; we would have got some Reforms under any other Secretary of State but in other respects we would not have lost so heavily.

It is on this very ground of yielding to the agitation of European extremists, he has administered a rebuke to Lord Chelmsford. Here, my sympathies are with Lord Chelmsford. It is not fair to get up an agitation because there was a paucity of ice, and soda water in the frontier war. It is not how Clive and Wellington won their wars. How clamorous for the slightest discomforts, while ready to teach unforgettable lessons! My idea is, they have magnified the discomforts in the Afghan war, and Lord Chelmsford does not deserve the snub which Mr. Montagu so dramatically administered to him. A mediocre Viceroy, in the hands of a Lord Morley, would have made his regime loveable and splendid like those of Minto and Hardinge. With Mr. Montagu there, the Viceroy is more amenable to Vincents, Craddock and Lowndeses.

As for some of our moderate friends who are out to save the Reforms at any cost, who would consequently keep mum about everything or make somersaults, I make bold to assert that with their mentality if they were in Belgium, when Germany asked whether she would save her body or her soul, our counsellors would not have taken as decided a step as the Belgians did, but would have hesitated body or soul, soul or body. We are witnessing the disgraceful spectacle of too many parties, too many leaders, each one blossoming immediately into a full fledged leader with a league or party behind. This is one of the disservices of the Scheme, the enthronement of intrigue or of obscurantism. The spirit of the late Nawab of Dacca is abroad.

Forty years ago, Babu Surendra Nath Banerji, the uncrowned king of Bengal and the fiery disciple of Mazzini cried, "India, poor India, she is bleeding in ten thousand wounds." Lord Hardinge said "India has been bled white to save the Empire." India is again bleeding—due to whom and to save whom? Let Mr. Banerji and Mr. Montagu answer.

THE LATE PANDIT SIVANATH SASTRI

Pandit Sivanath Sastri was born at the house of his maternal grandfather at Changaripota, a village about twelve miles to the south-east of Calcutta on the 31st January 1847. He came of a family of the Vaidic Brahmins of Southern India, which settled at Majelpore near the Sunderbunds during the reign of Emperor Jehangir. His father Harananda Vidyasagar was a man remarkable in many ways; in study, independence of spirit and strength of character he bears resemblance to Pandit Iswar Chandra Vidyasagar whose friend and associate he was through life. Sivanath's mother was a sister of Pandit Dwarakanath Vidyabhusan, the renowned editor of the Bengali weekly Soma-Prakas, the most successful journalistic venture in its day in the vernacular of the land. His mother was a deeply pious lady of the old type, and the harrowing penances which she performed to save her sickly child when his life was despaired of read like a romance in these days.

Sivanath learnt the rudiments of Bengali at a pathshala and a middle vernacular school, and was then entered at Sanskrit College at the age of nine. The great Vidyasagar was at that time at the head of the institution, and he always treated the child with great affection. He was succeeded to the principalship by Dr. E. B. Cowell whose regard Sivanath received by displaying unflinching love of truth on a very trying occasion. Like many distinguished sons of Bengal he passed his school-days through a state of extreme poverty and destitution; and yet his career at the university was uniformly brilliant. He won a second grade junior scholarship in 1866, a First Grade scholarship in languages, and one or two college scholarships in the P. A. Examination in 1868, the aggregate value of these reaching the respectable total of Rs. 50 a month; he passed the M. A. Examination in Sanskrit in 1872, being the only successful candidate of the year in that subject; his title of Sastri followed as a matter of course. Sivanath was married when he was about thirteen years of age and his wife was a little girl of ten summers. Five years later, his father forced a second wife upon him, so that burdened with the cares of a growing family and his two wives, young Sivanath had to be on the lookout for employment. Immediately on conclusion of his collegiate career after working as Head Master of Harinavi High School and of South Suburban School at Bhawanipore, he was appointed Head Pandit of Hare School in 1876. In due course he could, if he had chosen, have risen to the position of the Principal of Sanskrit College, but he was not made for making money. After a brief spell of Government service, he resigned his appointment to devote himself entirely to the service of God and his country. Amongst his ex-pupils we may mention the names of Sir Ashutosh Mukerji and Sir Deva Prasad Sarbadhikari.

From a child Sivanath was brought up in the midst of strictly orthodox surroundings, but while at college, his faith in the old form of worship was unchanged and he left slowly but steadily attracted towards the Brahmo Samaj. Those were the days when Keshab Chandra Sen was most vigorously carrying on his propaganda; his fame then reached the meridian; and his magnetic personality went a great way towards moulding the religious convictions of the young student. On the occasion of the opening of the "Mandir" of the Brahmo Samaj of India in 1869, he was initiated into Brahmoism with Mr. A. M. Bose, Mr. R. N. Ray, Bala Krishna Bihari Sen and others. The persecution that he suffered in consequence at the hands of his father was most trying to him. Harananda took the view not to see or speak to him and was true to it for about twenty long years.

Early in the seventies differences of ideas and ideals created a rift in the ranks of the progressive Brahmins which found expression in a newly started bilingual journal named Samadarshi or Liberal edited by Sivanath. After the foundation of the Sadharam Brahmo Samaj in 1878 in the organisation of which he took a prominent part, he was ordained as one of its four first missionaries; since then almost to the day of his death, he literally spent himself in the service of his church. He several times toured through India, and carried the message of the Brahmo Samaj to its remotest corner, and also to England, which he visited in 1888. He was the first editor of the two organs of the Samaj, the Tatvakaumudi in Bengali, and the Indian Messenger in English, and was connected with them either as editor or contributor for about a quarter of a century. In 1892 he founded the "Sadhanaasram" the object of which was to train a band of workers for the services of God and humanity. It has proved a most useful position. As a minister he attained pre-eminent success by his fervid piety and impressive eloquence. Many of his sermons and other productions have been translated into different vernaculars of India.

One noteworthy feature of his character was its many-sidedness. There has hardly been any important movement in Bengal during the last forty years with which he was not connected in some way or other. He was one of the founders of the City School, the Brahmo Girls' School, the Students Weekly Service, the Indian Association and the Calcutta Literary Society; he founded the 'Ram Mohun Roy Seminary' at Bankipore in 1897; he was in his youth and mature manhood, a vigorous temperance worker, a leading figure in the Metropolitan Temperance and Purity Association, he filled for some time the office of the Vice-President of the "Bangiya Sahitya Parishad" and was invited to preside over the Literary Conference held at Jessore in 1919, but on account of failing health he was compelled to decline the invitation. He presided over some of the Theistic and other conferences outside Bengal. He was in full sympathy with the political aspirations of his countrymen and gave practical proof of it in the troublous year 1907, by which he exposed himself to considerable harassment for a pretty long time.

Sivanath early made his mark in the domain of literature as a poet of no mean order, and throughout life he wielded a facile pen. His "Nurbasiter Bilap" (The Wailings of the Exile) came out when he was at school. His other poetical works most of them edifying and inspiring and all of them marked by nobility of tone and purity of sentiment, are too well-known to require mention here. His novels, the earliest of which "Meja Bau" (the second daughter-in-law) has been translated into English and other languages have found a permanent place in Bengali literature. His life of Ramtann Lahiri is a valuable contribution to the history of Bengal in the Victorian era, while as an essayist writing on varied topics he has been excelled by few in Bengal. He was perhaps the most impressive and powerful speaker in the Bengali language in his life-time, so that his published speeches deserve more than a passing notice. His writings in English have also a value of their own and will prove useful to the future historians of India.

It is impossible to do justice to a man like Sivanath Sastri in a brief obituary notice; for behind his many-sided activities, there was something in the man which defies analysis or adequate presentation. And yet the attempt must be

MR. MONTAGU'S FAILURE.

[From a Correspondent.]

1. "The British Government which has crushed foreign foes and quelled internal rebellion, could afford to despise these agitators."

2. "They have given these people a lesson which they will not forget for fifty years."

3. "As to India, by her remarkable contribution to our triumph, notably in the East, she has won a new claim to our consideration, a claim so irresistible that it ought to overpower, and must overpower, all prejudice and timidity which may stand in the way of her progress."

4. "These sacrifices of India will ever be remembered as having forged a fresh link in the bonds of the Empire, never stronger than they are today."

The first quotation is the utterance of Sir Michael O'Dwyer who, while praising the Punjab, rewarded the heroic efforts of her martial races with the gift of martial law. The second of the extracts is from the "Nation," said to be the boast of military officers, which is now going the round in all Indian papers. These two remarks are worthy of the worst days of General Von Bissing in Belgium. Only, still, there is the hope that just as the sting of the German's boast in Belgium about Belgium not forgetting the 'Hun' Rule there, is sought to be removed by lavish promises of guarantee, reparation and restitution, by help of all sorts and by the grant of a major portion of the fine levied on Germany, so noble-minded and God-fearing Englishmen will try to soothe and balm our much-lacerated feelings. To that end, we find some support in the latter two utterances, the one by Mr. Lloyd George, the other by Lord Jellicoe, two Empire-builders as against two Empire-destroyers. Let us take heart at these two remarks and we shall still hope that Mr. Lloyd George or any other Premier will make good these grateful words.

Now, in this predicament, what is our Secretary of State doing? He calls Sir Michael O'Dwyer, an eminent man, in the House of Commons. He appoints him a member of the Army Commission, thus inflicting an insult on a whole nation. And the Secretary of State spouts forth platitudes of sympathy, pours out liberal views but is not shocked at the throwing of bombs by aeroplanes on an unarmed mob and he has the lack of feeling and consideration or statesmanship to say that the recent administrative acts in the Punjab have no bearing on this enquiry by the Army Commission. Well, it may have no bearing if much more than "this little thing" of Mr. Montagu had been granted, if we had secured full responsible Government or self-Government and if we could afford to despise any more incursions of supermen. The coming-in of Sir Michael O'Dwyer on some responsible work, is like appointing Lord Milner, Secretary of State for Colonies immediately after the Boer war. At least, tact and good sense, would dictate to the contrary.

It is not in these alone that Mr. Montagu has failed to rise to the occasion. Except the so called Reforms, he is giving away on every conceivable question to vested interests and he is jettisoning everything saving the Reforms. Well, we shall thank him for his project of Reforms and for the clever way in which he is saving the Reforms from actionaries. I am not one of those who would consider the Reforms scheme as a "little thing." Nor am I disposed to be over-exuberant in my gratitude to Mr. Montagu. I hold we would have got Reforms even if somebody else had been the Secretary of State; only we would not have had this precious "dyarchy." Who knows, Mr. Lionel Curtis might not have persuaded any other Secretary of State? The question is, are the Reforms worth having at such a cost, at such a price? If anybody point out one matter of importance which Mr. Montagu has decided in favour of Indian demands these two years. Even Mr. Aust Chamberlain undid the wrong done to India in 1919 years, in regard to the cotton duties. Mr. Montagu lacking in that great command over men which Lord Morley possessed and the great respect which he inspired, has to truckle to their whims and fancies for the sake of saving the Reforms. What a waste of legislative time and energy over the Rowlatt Bills and Idemnity Bill in the immediate post-war period. In finances, as regards the Finance Act, and the liberty of the subject we are losing ground. I put two syllogisms: Mr. Montagu is a failure in spite of his Reforms; we would have got some Reforms under any other Secretary of State but in other respects we would not have lost so heavily.

It is on this very ground of yielding to the agitation of European extremists, he has administered rebuke to Lord Chelmsford. Here, my sympathies are with Lord Chelmsford. It is not fair to put up an agitation because there was a paucity of ice and soda water in the frontier war. It is not his Clive and Wellington won their wars. How enormous for the slightest discomforts, while ready to teach unforgettable lessons! My idea is, they have magnified the discomforts in the Afghan war, a Lord Chelmsford does not deserve the snub which Mr. Montagu so dramatically administered to him. A mediocre Viceroy, in the hands of a Lord Morley would have made his regime loveable and splendid like those of Minto and Hardinge. With Mr. Montagu there, the Viceroy is more amenable to Vincents, Craddockes and Lowndeses.

As for some of our moderate friends who are content to save the Reforms at any cost, who would consequently keep mum about everything or make somersaults, I make bold to assert that with the mentality if they were in Belgium, when Germany asked whether she would save her body or her soul, our counsellors would not have taken as decided a step as the Belgians did, but would have hesitated body or soul, soul or body. We are witnessing the disgraceful spectacle of too many parties, too many leaders, each one blossoming immediately into a full-fledged leader with a league or party behind him. This is one of the disservices of the Schenker, the enthronement of intrigue or of obscurantism. The spirit of the late Nawab of Dacca is abroad.

Forty years ago, Babu Surendra Nath Bannerji, the uncrowned king of Bengal and the fiery disciple of Mazzini cried, "India, poor India, she is bleeding in ten thousand wounds." Lord Hardinge said "India has been bled white to save the Empire." India is again bleeding—due to whom and to save whom? Let Mr. Bannerji and Mr. Montagu answer.

THE LATE PANDIT SIVANATH SASTRI

Pandit Sivanath Sastri was born at the house of his maternal grandfather at Changaripota, a village about twelve miles to the south-east of Calcutta on the 31st January 1847. He came of a family of the Vaidic Brahmins of Southern India, which settled at Majelpura near the Sundarbans during the reign of Emperor Jehangir. His father Harananda Vidyasagar was a man remarkable in many ways; in study, independence of spirit and strength of character he bears resemblance to Pandit Iswar Chandra Vidyasagar whose friend and associate he was through life. Sivanath's mother was a sister of Pandit Dwarakanath Vidyabhusan, the renowned editor of the Bengali weekly Soma-Prakas, the most successful journalistic venture in its day in the vernacular of the land. His mother was a deeply pious lady of the old type, and the harrowing penances which she performed to save her sickly child when his life was despaired of read like a romance in these days.

Sivanath learnt the rudiments of Bengali at a pathshala and a middle vernacular school, and was then entered at Sanskrit College at the age of nine. The great Vidyasagar was at that time at the head of the institution, and he always treated the child with great affection. He was succeeded to the principalship by Dr. E. B. Cowell whose regard Sivanath received by displaying unflinching love of truth on a very trying occasion. Like many distinguished sons of Bengal he passed his school-days through a state of extreme poverty and destitution; and yet his career at the university was uniformly brilliant. He won a second grade junior scholarship in 1866, a First Grade scholarship in languages, and one or two college scholarships in the B. A. Examination in 1868, the aggregate value of these reaching the respectable total of Rs. 59 a month; he passed the M. A. Examination in Sanskrit in 1872, being the only successful candidate of the year in that subject; his title of Sastri followed as a matter of course. Sivanath was married when he was about thirteen years of age and his wife was a little girl of ten summers. Five years later, his father forced a second wife upon him, so that burdened with the cares of a growing family and his two wives, young Sivanath had to be on the lookout for employment. Immediately on conclusion of his collegiate career after working as Head Master of Harinavi High School and of South Suburban School at Bhawanipore, he was appointed Head Pandit of Hero School in 1876. In due course he could, if he had chosen, have risen to the position of the Principal of Sanskrit College, but he was not made for making money. After a brief spell of Government service, he resigned his appointment to devote himself entirely to the service of God and his country. Amongst his ex-pupils we may mention the names of Sir Ashutosh Mukerji and Sir Deva Prasad Sarbadhikari.

From a child Sivanath was brought up in the midst of strictly orthodox surroundings, but while at college, his faith in the old form of worship was unchanged and he left slowly but steadily attracted towards the Brahmo Samaj. Those were the days when Keshab Chandra Sen was most vigorously carrying on his propaganda; his fame then reached the meridian; and his magnetic personality went a great way towards moulding the religious convictions of the young student. On the occasion of the opening of the "Mandir" of the Brahmo Samaj of India in 1869, he was initiated into Brahmoism with Mr. A. M. Bose, Mr. R. N. Ray, Babu Krishna Bihari Sen and others. The persecution that he suffered in consequence at the hands of his father was most trying to him. Harananda took the view not to see or speak to him and was true to it for about twenty long years.

Early in the seventies differences of ideas and ideals created a rift in the ranks of the progressive Brahmins which found expression in a newly started bilingual journal named Samadarshi or Liberal edited by Sivanath. After the foundation of the Sadharam Brahmo Samaj in 1878 in the organisation of which he took a prominent part, he was ordained as one of its four first missionaries; since then almost to the day of his death, he literally spent himself in the service of his church. He several times toured through India, and carried the message of the Brahmo Samaj to its remotest corner, and also to England, which he visited in 1888. He was the first editor of the two organs of the Samaj, the Tatvakaumudi in Bengali, and the Indian Messenger in English, and was connected with them either as editor or contributor for about a quarter of a century. In 1892 he founded the "Sadhanasram" the object of which was to train a band of workers for the services of God and humanity. It has proved a most useful position. As a minister he attained pre-eminent success by his fervid piety and impressive eloquence. Many of his sermons and other productions have been translated into different vernaculars of India.

One noteworthy feature of his character was its many-sidedness. There has hardly been any important movement in Bengal during the last forty years with which he was not connected in some way or other. He was one of the founders of the City School, the Brahmo Girls' School, the Students Weekly Service, the Indian Association and the Calcutta Literary Society; he founded the 'Ram Mohun Roy Seminary' at Bankipore in 1897; he was in his youth and mature manhood, a vigorous temperance worker, a leading figure in the Metropolitan Temperance and Purity Association, he filled for some time the office of the Vice-President of the 'Bangiya Sahitya Parishad' and was invited to preside over the Literary Conference held at Jessore in 1912, but on account of failing health he was compelled to decline the invitation. He presided over some of the Theistic and other conferences outside Bengal. He was in full sympathy with the political aspirations of his countrymen and gave practical proof of in the troublous year 1907, by which he exposed himself to considerable harassment for a pretty long time.

Sivanath early made his mark in the domain of literature as a poet of no mean order, and throughout life he wielded a falcon pen. His "Nurbasiter Bilap" (The Wailings of the Exile) came out when he was at school. His other poetical works most of them edifying and inspiring and all of them marked by nobility of tone and purity of sentiment, are too well-known to require mention here. His novels, the earliest of which "Meja Bai" (the second daughter-in-law) has been translated into English and other languages have found a permanent place in Bengali literature. His life of Ramtann Lahiri is a valuable contribution to the history of Bengal in the Victorian era, while as an essayist writing on varied topics he has been excelled by few in Bengal. He was perhaps the most impressive and powerful speaker in the Bengali language in his life-time, so that his published speeches deserve more than a passing notice. His writings in English have also a value of their own and will prove useful to the future historians of India.

It is impossible to do justice to a man like Sivanath Sastri in a brief obituary notice; for behind his many-sided activities, there was something in the man which defies analysis or adequate presentation. And yet the attempt must be made. His life was a harmonious combination of work and worship. He ever lived in his great Task-master's eye and counted no sacrifice as worth a moment's thought for the sake of his God, conscience and fatherland. In the midst of stress and storm his loyalty to truth never wavered, his courage of conviction never flagged. He was characterised by great openness of mind and soul; his love of knowledge was a source of inspiration to younger men; his home was always a refuge to helpless widows and orphans. His living faith in God, his unaffected piety, his self-sacrifice in the cause of religion, his self-effacement, his broad-minded sympathy with all noble aspirations irrespective of creed or colour, and last but not least the remarkable self-conquest that he achieved in pursuit of a lofty ideal will enshrine his sacred memory in the heart of those who had the privilege of coming into intimate contact with him.—The Bengalee.

LATE PANDIT SHIV NATH SHASTRI.

MEMORIAL MEETING AT SIMLA.

(From a Correspondent).

A public meeting of the residents of Simla was held on the evening of the 8th instant at the Arya Samaj Mandir to express sorrow at the death of Pandit Shiv Nath Sastri, M. A.

Among those present were Sir Asutosh Chaudhuri, Kt., Bar-at-law, Judge, Calcutta High Court, Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Das, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Gupta, Mrs. Mukherji, Rai Bahadur Jai Lal, Mr. J. G. Bhaudhari, Mr. B. B. Das, I. S. O., Rai Bahadur G. K. Roy, Messrs. Mohun Lal, Sundar Das Bhalla Mr. and Mrs. Besant Lal; N. C. Roy B. A., B. T., Dina Nath Bhalla B. A., Lalit Mohan Roy, B. A., Rai Sahab K. N. Mustafa Nihal Chand B. A., Mrs. Hem Raj, B. A., and Harish Chandra, B. A., LL. B.

On the motion of Rai Bahadur Jai Lal, B. A., LL. B., seconded by Mr. Mohun Lal, B. A., LL. B., Justice Sir Asutosh Chaudhuri was voted to the chair.

Rai Sahab S. C. Lahiri explained the object of the meeting and said that as Pandit Siva Nath Shastri was a representative man, his death was a loss to the whole country and should be mourned by all communities—Brahmos and non-Brahmos alike.

Mr. I. C. Mukerji then read out a short sketch of the late Pandit's life illustrating that the courage of conviction, regard for truth and hatred of all shams which characterised his life were present in his early boyhood.

Mr. Sunder Das Bhalla who had on more than one occasion had come in touch with the late Pandit, next spoke in Urdu expressing his appreciation for the great man who had just departed.

Mr. S. R. Das was the next speaker. He said that he was unable to make a long speech as his heart was very heavy with grief at the loss which he regarded as personal. He asked the audience to read, if not already done, Pandit Shiv Nath Sastri's autobiography and remarked that the reader would be struck with the manner in which the large sacrifices he had made to produce the impression on him that he had made no sacrifices at all.

The President said that occasions of this should be celebrated in silence and by speeches, and that in fact death anniversaries were being overdone in Bengal and he apprehended that very soon the calendar year would prove inefficient for them. He had however agreed to preside as Pandit Siva Nath Shastri was an exceptional man. He was one of the founders of Modern Bengal, a leader and a great scholar and teacher. The Indian Association and the City College were due to him. He was a Brahmin in the true sense of the word. At birth every one was a sudra and it was by sanskrit culture that one became a Brahmin. So far knew there was no prayer so great as the Gayatri, which was an invocation for the awakening of intelligence. The Gayatri, was the Pandit's birth right, being the son of a great Pandit. He was the member of a community whose daily prayer was "From darkness take up to light, from death to deathlessness." He has now attained "Deathlessness." And we have therefore congregated here, members of different creeds and communities to do honour to his memory. May his teachings prevail, both as a religious reformer and author.

The President then moved the following resolutions from the death chair. The audience then stood up and accepted it in silence.

"That this meeting expresses its deep sorrow at the death of Pandit Siva Nath Sastri by which India has become poorer to-day and that a copy of the resolution be sent to his son Babu Priya Nath Bhattacharjee and to the Secretary, Sadharan Brahmo Samaj."

A vote of thanks to the Chair proposed by Mr. B. B. Das, I. S. O., and seconded by Mr. A. C. Mukherjee brought the proceedings to a close.

LABOUR AND RELIGION.

SERMON BY BISHOP GORE.

At Browning Hall, York Street, Walworth, there have been held this week a series of conferences which are of deep significance for the future. Mr. G. W. Barnes, who was the chairman, gave a shrewd and vigorous address, in which he pointed out that organisation—from which Carlyle hoped so much—might be itself materialistic, and set itself not to serve but to exploit the public. He was followed by the Rev. H. T. Knight, Vicar of Shortlands, who said that science under the leadership of Huxley had tended to be materialistic, but now under Sir Oliver Lodge was becoming spiritualistic, if not spiritual. The naturalistic doctrine of human nature was contradicted by the moral judgments of mankind, which were unmeaning if all was pre-determined. A man not responsible for his actions was treated by society as insane, and that man was a moral agent and not an automaton was a fundamental belief of all civilisation.

But it was on the second day that the heart of the subject was reached. Mr. George Lensbury, with his accustomed fire, attacked the present order as founded on materialistic principles, and moral falsehoods. Civilisation was still worshipping money and success, our theory of values was all wrong, service to the community being the only test of greatness. An Indian labour leader followed with a speech of remarkable elicity and insight. The East felt, he said, that it had something to contribute to the religion of labour, the worker's ideal being not to "get on" and make money, but that he should be able to do his work with satisfaction and honour to himself, while his faith permeated for him the whole situation. The next speaker came from Belgium, and confessed himself an Agnostic, who had been forced by the revelation of German character in the war to demand a moral basis for all education. On the Continent the Church could not help, but labour must work out a moral creed for itself.

Then came a speech by Bishop Gore, which went to the heart of the matter. "Not charity, but justice," he said, was the cry of the labour movement. But why this antagonism between the two? Charity was nothing else than Justice, Justice with a heart in it. And the cry for Justice meant a demand for equal opportunity for all, as all were equal before God. This meant a revolution, peaceable or otherwise! Here we were all agreed. Personally he was prepared to cheer on the labour movement, inspired as it was by a noble and fruitful cry, whether it built on the Indian creed of Immanentism or on the Agnostic cult of moral valuation. But labour had had now to build up, which was harder than to denounce or throw down. Many who were heart and soul with the labour movement and its programme were at present anxious as they could not see clearly in what direction the movement intended to go.

With regard to the situation in England, he would venture to suggest three propositions which seemed to be implicit in the labour movement, and might now be made explicit. First, the fact of human brotherhood must be seen to rest on the Fatherhood of God. Labour's instinct for fraternity was no mere dream, but had the purpose of the universe behind it. Years ago Huxley had declared that duty meant a line of action entirely opposed to the cosmic; the universe to him was a ruthless and cruel mechanism with which we had to fight. Personally he would have little hope of a movement which tried to fight the universe. But in claiming recognition for human brotherhood, labour was ranging itself on the side of God, whom we knew as the Father of the spirits of all flesh. Secondly, almost everywhere in England the name of Jesus Christ was held in honour; and labour might step forward and claim His moral leadership. The common people once "heard Him gladly"; and though the crowd deserted Him, and even His disciples also, yet His followers came to believe in Him as alive again and in their midst, Himself holding the destinies of the race in His hand. Can labour reassert the moral sovereignty of Jesus Christ over every sphere of human action? Any movement that can claim the blessing of His name will win.

Lastly—though on this point he confessed that he was less hopeful—the Bishop asked, Can labour reach a belief in the Spirit of God at work in human nature? What the world needs to-day is the Spirit of Christ and the presence of His Spirit ought, therefore, to be recognised in that humanity which He has redeemed. Lots of Christian people are looking with sympathetic eyes upon the labour movement, but at present they are in doubt and darkness. What is labour really going to do? There seemed, therefore, to be room for some organisation which would draw together all sympathisers and workers who believe that without religion the movement will fail.

The Challenge, London.

WHY MISS PANKHURST FAVOURS BOLSHEVISM.

Miss Sylvia Pankhurst was invited by the "Daily Sketch" to explain why she wants the Soviet principle of Bolshevism adopted in this country. She replied:—

It is much more democratic than the Parliamentary system. The people have a real control over their delegates. We have no control over M.P.'S, or town councillors.

Parliamentary organization has grown up with the capitalist system. The Soviet system belongs to the Socialist and Communist order. Russian Soviets have socialized the lands, mines, railways and all forms of industry, banking and so on. They are aiming at complete equality in wages. They have not got quite there yet, but there has been a great level up. Lenin gets the same salary as an ordinary workman.

Houses are socialized. People only pay a tax sufficient to pay for repairs. All essentials, bread, milk, sugar, etc., are free to the children. Education is free up to the University, and next year no one under 20 will be working for a living. Under this system ignorance and poverty must rapidly disappear. Russia will possess the finest and healthiest population in the world, if left to develop without interference. Living as I do amid the miserable poverty of East London, I want opportunities such as these for our own people. No one can cope with the ever-rising flood of poverty. We must change the system which creates it.—The Independent,

Allahabad.

EGYPT AND INDIA.

Egypt awaits with anxiety the arrival of Lord Milner's Commission. It has been vested with extremely wide powers, and rightly so, for the surprise of the present situation in Egypt consists in the revolt of the fellahen alongside with the usual agitators and hotheads. In our opinion, the most vital problem, both in Egypt and in India, is that of popular education. Up to the present we have made laudable efforts to raise the apex of the pyramid of education, but have neglected to broaden its base. Further than this, after creating an intelligentsia we have closed the door of advancement in the governing bodies and consequently have created a dangerous element of highly educated unemployed. Since their exclusion has exasperated some of them many have argued that they are too dangerous to be trusted. That is to blame results for causes. Self-government must be given a freer growth; as it expands it will absorb the native intelligentsia, who will in turn become imbued with all that is best in British politics.—The Challenge (London).

INDIAN EMIGRATION.

Emigration from India, being directly controlled by the Indian Government, does not present the same features, or create the same difficulties, that have risen and will almost inevitably arise again in connection with the outflow from China and Japan. But the economic antagonism to the Aryan Hindus is as strong on the part of the Whites as their objection to the Mongol Asiatics. This has been manifested of late years by the legislation against them in Australia, already mentioned, and more recently in South Africa and British Columbia. They are hated not only as workers who compete with white labourers, but also as small traders who outbid and undersell European traffickers. Their claim to British citizenship has not protected them from most unjust and shameful treatment by their fellow-subjects of the British Empire. This cannot go on safely. As Asia begins to assert herself and to take her rightful place in the world, India, like other portions of that great continent, will demand that her people should cease to be treated as inferior beings, when brought into contact with those whose interests they have helped to defend on the battle fields of Europe.—Mr. Hyndman in Asia.

A MAN WHO WOULD NOT BE KNIGHTED.

There have been instances in India of persons who respectfully declined the honour of Knighthood when they were privately made aware of the intention to confer it. We have had two prominent cases recently where the Knighthoods have been relinquished. But we do not think that there has been or is likely to be an incident such as that recorded by the Manchester Guardian in its Literary Supplement of the late Mr. William M. Murphy of Dublin. Our contemporary writes: Another example of inflexibility was given in connection with the Dublin Exhibition of 1907, of which he was chairman. His critics said he was after a title. He denied it, and declared that he wanted and would take neither title nor profit. King Edward opened the exhibition, and after the ceremony was handed a sword by an A.D.C., and turned to give the accolade to the chairman. This, of course, was a blunder of the Dublin Castle people. Mr. Murphy's attention was called to the fact that the King was waiting for him, and those around urged and entreated him to go forward. Most men under such circumstances would have relented, but that was not Mr. Murphy's way. He had said that he would not be knighted, and all the king's horses and all the king's men and even the King himself, only a few feet away, and looking obnoxiously impatient at the hitch, could not move him.

LORD ACTON'S LIBRARY.

An interesting sidelight on the transaction relating to the late Lord Acton's famous library is now thrown by a letter to the London Times by the present Lord Acton, son of the famous historical scholar. It might be remembered that the late Mr. Carnegie purchased the library and presented it to Lord Morley. It appears that in the early nineties Lord Acton, under stress of financial pressure, resolved to part with his splendid collection of books and send it down to the auctioneer's. Lord Granville and Mr. Gladstone intervened and induced Mr. Carnegie to purchase the library. Mr. Carnegie paid the money, but the books were entrusted to Lord Acton himself as it was thought that he was the worthiest person to keep them. After Lord Acton's death the library was presented to Lord Morley who, moved by an equally generous impulse, presented it to the Cambridge University where Lord Acton was once Professor of History.

SPOONERISMS.

Dr. Spooner who until his recent retirement from the Wardenship of New College Oxford had made the remarkable record of fifty years' residence at the college without missing a single term celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday recently. His name has created a new word in the English language but in what measure he himself was responsible for the many 'Spoonerisms' fathered upon him is a very moot point. Some are obviously bona fides but the famous "kinkering kings" and the "half-warmed fish" are believed to be authentic dating from the author's early days at Oxford and forming the foundation upon which countless "Spoonerisms" have been based. One of the most ingenious topsy-turvydoms put into Dr. Spooner's mouth but afterwards confessed to by its contriver was "I have just had time to hatch a pasty snipe" for "I have just had time to snatch a hasty pipe".

Dr. E. Hopkinson in the course of his speech on the Indian Budget said with reference to Indian labour. "If the problem of labour is acute in this country, it is ten times more acute in India. I say that advisedly. The rate of wages in India is far too low for tolerable subsistence. Industrial conditions in India in many cases, and I have particularly in mind the cotton mills of Bombay, are so monstrously bad that I could hardly relate to any decent assembly what I myself saw in the course of my investigations."

ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postage
 In advance. In arrears.
 Per annum..... Rs. 5-0-0. Rs. 5-0-0.
 Foreign subscription inclusive of Postage, twelve shillings (Rs. 6).

Single copies of the current year can be had at 4 annas each and any back copies at 6 annas each.

DO YOU WISH TO KNOW YOUR

"FUTURE"

Send your time and date of birth or your star and age or note the time when you write the letter, you will be given a full reading of your life of one year to come for ONE RUPEE ONLY.

Mr. Gbazanfar Muhammad Khas, Deputy Collector, writes from Moradabad City. "The one year life reading you sent me proved to be QUITE TRUE."

24-8-19- THE KALINGA ASTROLOGICAL BUREAU,
 Chodaparam, Vizagapatam District.

"Wanted :—Employment, as teacher or governess, by an educated Brahman widow with midwifery training and medical practice, well-versed in music and the Veda; proficient in English, Sanskrit, Telugu and Canarese, and speaking Tamil and Hindustani also. Please apply to K. H. C/o. The Indian Social Reformer, Bombay." 21-9-19.

GALE'S MAGAZINE.

Linn A. E. Gale, Editor and Publisher.

Champion of Socialism, New Thought, Occultism,
 Internationalism and Birth Control
 Contains such articles as:

- "The Birth Pangs of Revolution"
- "The World That Is To Be"
- "The Psychic Meaning of the War"
- "Judas Iscariot and the Bolsheviki"
- "Are We Hypnotized?"

The only Advanced Thought Magazine in English in Mexico. A Journal That is Indispensable to All Who Want to Understand the Signs of the Times.

$2 a year, American money. $1 for 6 months.
 20c. a copy. No Free Samples. Remit by bank
 draft on New York or personal check.

GALE'S MAGAZINE,
 P. O. Box 518
 21-9-19. Mexico City, D. F., Mexico.

"COMMERCE AND INDUSTRIES."

An Interesting Monthly Journal of Indian
 Material Progress.

Annual Subscription Rs. 10-0 and Single Copy
 Rs. 1 Post Free.

A Specially valuable advertising Medium.

Wanted Agents throughout India.

Address:—P. Box. No. 353, and 5 Mount Road,
 Madras S. C. 12-19-19.

THE TATA INDUSTRIAL BANK, LD.

HEAD OFFICE, BOMBAY.

BRANCHES—CALCUTTA and HYDERABAD (Deccan)
CAWNPORE and LUCKNOW.

Sub-Branches.—

Bombay—Share Bazaar, Shroff Bazaar,
Calcutta—Baza Bazaar.

London Agents. LLOYDS BANK LIMITED.
NEW YORK AGENTS: THE GUARANTY
TRUST COY. OF NEW YORK.

AUTHORISED CAPITAL... Rs. 12,00,00,000.
SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL..... „ 7,56,00,225.
PAID UP CAPITAL..... „ 1,50,99,225.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Sir D. J. Tata, Kt., Chairman.
Sir Sassoon David, Bart.
Sir R. N. Mookerjee, K. C. I. E.
Sir Francis Stewart, Kt.
Sir Henry Proctor, Kt.
R. D. Tata, Esq.
F. E. Dinshaw, Esq.
F. O. Rimington, Esq.
Narottam Morarjee, Esq.
Hajee Gulam Mahomed Ajam, Esq.
The Hon'ble Mr. Purshottamdas Thakordas. C. I. E.
A. J. Bilimoria, Esq.

Secretary, R. H. Parker.

Current Accounts opened and interest allowed on daily credit balances from Rs. 500/- to Rs. 1,00,000/- at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum. If the balance to the credit of any account does not fall below Rs. 25,000/- at any time between 1st January and 30th June, interest will be allowed during that period at 2½ % per annum. No interest is allowed unless the sum accrued amounts to Rs. 8/- Half-yearly.

Fixed Deposits. Interest allowed on Deposits fixed for one or two years and for shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank. Interest allowed on Savings Bank Accounts at 4 per cent per annum. Rules may be obtained on application.

Loans and Cash Credits are granted on approved securities.

Purchases and sales of Securities and shares effected.

Bills of Exchange purchased and collected and every description of Banking and exchange business undertaken.

14-4-18. J. PAGAN DALZELL Acting Manager.

THE YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK, LIMITED.

(Registered in Japan.)

Established 1880.

Subscribed Capital..... Yen. 48,000,000.
Paid up Capital..... Yen. 42,000,000.
Reserve Fund..... Yen. 23,100,000.

Head Office:—Yokohama.

Branches and Agencies at Bombay, Buenos Aires, Calcutta, Changchun, Chi-Nan, Dairen, Fengtien, Hankow, Harbin, Hongkong, Honolulu, Kaiyuan, Kobe, London, Los Angeles, Lyons, Manila, Nagasaki, Newchwang, New York, Osaka, Peking, Rangoon, San Francisco, Seattle, Shanghai, Shimonoseki, Singapore, Soerabaya, Sydney, Tientsin, Tokio, Tsingtao.

Current Deposit Accounts are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at the rate of 2 per cent per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 100,000, provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of banking and exchange business transacted.

N. IGARASHI,
Post Box No. 207, Hornby Road, Bombay.
I. NISHIMAKI,
Manager, Calcutta.

1-12-17.

Post Box No. 406, Clive street, Calcutta

THE BANK OF BARODA, LD.

Under the Patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja Gaekwar.
Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897

HEAD OFFICE BARODA.

Branches—Ahmedabad. Navsari Meshana, and Surat
Capital Subscribed... .. Rs. 60,00,000.
Capital Paid up „ 20,00,000.
Reserve Fund „ 12,50,000.

DIRECTORS :

The Hon'ble Mr. Lalubhai Somaldas, C. I. E., Chairman
Sir Vishaldas Damodar Thackersey, Kt.
Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti Nagar Sheth, Baroda.
Sheth Manilal Revadas, Vadnagar.
Rao Bahadur Gunajirao R. Nimbalker, Sur Sabha, Baroda State.
Bhaskerrao Vishaldas Mehta, Esq., Advocate, High Court, Bombay.
M. H. Kantavalla, Esq., Agent, Maharaja Mill Co., Ld. Baroda.
R. R. Shirgaokar, Naib Sabha, Baroda State.
A. N. Datar, Accountant General, Baroda State.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balance from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest which does not come to Rs. 8 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application. C. E. RANDLE, General Manager.
15-4-12.

THE CENTRAL BANK OF INDIA, LTD

Subscribed Capital... .. Rs. 50,00,000
Paid Up Capital „ 25,00,000
Reserved liability of Shareholders „ 25,00,000
Reserve Fund „ 6,00,000

Head Office:—Alice Building, Bombay.

Local Branches:—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar, (3) Share Bazar.

Branches:—Amritsar, Calcutta, Delhi, Jharis, Karachi.

London Agents:—London Joint City and Midland Bank, Ld.

Current Accounts :—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June
2½ % allowed on Daily Balances from July to December.

12 months Deposits received at 5 % per annum.

Long and Short period Deposits received at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking Business transacted.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA
Manager.

25-2-17

THE BANK OF TAIWAN, LTD.

Incorporated by Special Charter of the Imperial Japanese Government, 1899.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 30,000,000
Paid-up CapitalYen. 22,500,000
Reserve FundYen. 5,880,000

Head Office:—Taipeh, Formosa.

BRANCHES:—

LONDON	SHANGHAI	TOKIO
NEW YORK	HONGKONG	OSAKA
AMOI	SINGAPORE	KOBE
CANTON	SOERABAJA	YOKOHAMA
FOOCHOW	SEMARANG	AKO
HANKOW	MAKUNG	GIRAN
KIUKIANG	BATAVIA	KAGI
SWATOW	PINAN	KARENKO
TAINAN	SHINOHUKU	KEELUNG
TAKOW	TAICHU	TAMSUI

The Bank has also a large number of Correspondents at Home and Abroad.

Current Deposit Accounts:—are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at 2 per cent, per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 1,00,000 provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of Banking and Exchange business transacted.

K. TAKEMURA
Manager

9-12-17. 56, Esplanade Road, Fort, BOMBAY

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

Established 7th September 1906.

Incorporated under the Indian Companies' Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE:

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.

Capital Subscribed Ra. 1,00,00,000
Capital Called up " 50,00,000
Reserve Fund ,, 15,00,000

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½% p. a. throughout the year. On sums exceeding Rs. 1,00,000 interest is allowed by special arrangement. No interest will be allowed which does not amount to Rs. 8 per half year.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short periods @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

"Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application".

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, & CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stocks at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

H. P. STRINGFELLOW,

15-1-11. Manager.

A Lady's Best Ornament is a Glorious Head of Hair.

A profusion of rich, soft silky, lustrous, wavy hair—where's the woman who would not like that?

There's only one oil that makes such hair and it's the far-famed

KAMINIA OIL
(Regd.)

Invaluable for ladies, and just as much for Brain-Workers and Students.

Heated head cooled, aching disappears and dandruff becomes a thing of the past. Added to all these it possesses a beautiful fragrant smell.

For superiority, awarded a Gold Medal at the Mysore Exhibition, and in great demand all over the country.

If you have not yet used KAMINIA OIL, you

have missed a fine delight and a real boon, use it now, if only once; and like many people you will prefer to use also every

Price per bottle, Re. 1. V. P. Charges 6 annas extra

Price for 3 bottles Rs. 2-10. V. P. charges 14 annas extra

Write now, Do not delay.

Sole Agents:—
The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,
(5 B-16) No. 155 Jamma Masjid Market, BOMBAY.

Now-a-Days.

All things have advanced in price. Even the vegetable ingredients used in our Atank Nigrah Pills have advanced in price.

Even the labourers demand heavy wages being dearer. Even the users have increased yet the Atank Nigrah Pills for Toning up the system are sold at before war price i. e. at a Rupee.

Valdya Shastri
Manishanker Govindji,
Atank Nigrah Pharmacy,
Head Office:—Jamnagar—Kathiawar.
Branch:—Kalbadevi Road, Bombay.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours. Publish Fine Art Pictures, & c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.
1-12-10. HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS.

ROYAL TONIC PILLS.

Powerful Nutritious and Strength Restorer. Price Rs. 1-4 per tin of 30 Pills.

PREPARED BY—GOVINDJEE DAMODER & Co.,

Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Commission Agents.
1-12-10. No. 3 Sutar Chawl Market, BOMBAY.

Timely advice to the Wealthy

Costly but certain remedies are in the long run cheaper than cheap and uncertain ones:

KANDARPA SANJIVINI PILLS AND OIL

are the safest and surest remedies for indigestion, constipation, loss of appetite, memory, mental, physical and nervous debility and all sorts of urinary disorders, improve impoverished blood.

Price per tin of 40 Pills Rs. 5 & per tola of Oil Rs. 10.

Both Purchased at a time Rs. 11/4

Medical Advice and a Medical Book containing 128 pages sent Gratis and Post Free.

RAJ VAIDYA NARAYANJI KESHAVJI

Head Office :—Jamnagar, Kathiawar, (India)
Branch :—No. 187, Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.
24-8-1919.

Empire Hindu Hotel

Opposite Victoria Terminus
Bombay.

(Central Situation)
Strictly Vegetarian
Charges Moderate

Fitted with
Electric Lift, Fans and Lights.

TELEGRAMS: } TELEPHONE

"FOOD," BOMBAY. } 2789.

22-6-19.

Saffron? Saffron?? Saffron??
If you wish to buy genuinely pure and best Saffron it is
SUN

ONLY
It has been largely used by Jain Temples, Maharajas, Durbars, Hakims and Vaidyas all over the country for the last 75 year and is well known for its purity and genuineness.
S. NARAYEN & Co.,

21, Hanuman Street, Fort Bombay.

SHORTHAND.

Like Other Arts and Sciences, Shorthand is subject to the Law of Progress. Based on greatly improved scientific and analogical principles, the Sloan-Duployan system (contained in a compass of 12 lessons) saves a year's laborious study, ensuring highest efficiency and speediest results. Shorthand is the open-door to many well-paid positions; at any rate it will mean advancement for you. Expert Individual or Postal Instructions for a fixed fee, payable in easy monthly instalments. Speed Classes Conducted. Specialised Training Guaranteed. Enclose stamp for booklet, etc.
CENTRAL CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE,
G. P. O. Box No. 424, Bombay.

"EVERYTHING FOR EVERYBODY"

- National Standard Portable Typewriter No. 3 (10 lbs.) Rs. 190
 - Oliver No. 5 (American Rebuilt) B.S. & Tab. Rs. 175; No. 7 " 200
 - " " 3 (Second-hand) in thorough working order. " 125
 - Empire No. 1 (Do.) in good working order. " 85
 - Multikopy Typewriter Carbons, per Box of 100 sheets. " 8
 - Webster Brand " Ribbons for all machines, Doz. " 21
 - Typewriter Oil (best 1 oz. bot.) or Eberhard Erasers, Doz. " 6
 - Safety Razor, Rivals Gillette, with 6 Gillette Blades (best) " 5
 - Do. (Made in U.S.A.) with 3 spare blades, Set " 1
 - Portable Electric Battery & lamp (burns 200 hours) compl. " 30
 - Envelope Making Machine (to make 30,000 per day), New " 35
 - Full Jewelled Lever Watch (Square or Octagon) Silver " 25
 - Conklin's Self filling Fount Pen (non-leakable) Gold nib " 9
- UNIVERSAL BUSINESS SYNDICATE,
20-4-19. Post Box No. 424, Bombay.

HYPNOTISM

PERSONAL MAGNETISM,
WILL POWER,
NERVE FORCE—

Call what you will—

Is the intangible power that controls human destiny. It is the key to all business and social success. This power is no special gift of any one. It is latent in every one. We help you how to display it. By our system, you can learn in a few days at your own home and not only achieve success yourself, but you can influence the mind, health and actions of others to a remarkable.

Write immediately for our free booklet—The Pride of India.

THE LATENT LIGHT CULTURE,
TINNEVELLY, S. INDIA.

- Batlwala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 1 each bottle of 100.
 - Batlwala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 2 each bottle of 100.
 - Batlwala's Ague Mixture of Fever, Malaria, Influenza etc.
 - Batlwala's Ague Pills for Malaria, Fever, Influenza etc.
 - Batlwala's Tonic pills for pale people & nervous breaks down.
 - Batlwala's Tooth Powder of Preserving Teeth
 - Batlwala's Ringworm ointment for Ringworm Dhobi Itch etc.
- May be had from all dealers in medicines or from Dr. H. L. Batlwala Sons & Co., Ltd.
No. 12, Worli, 18, Bombay.
TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESS :— " Doctor Batlwala Dadar

THE BOMBAY CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK.

HEAD OFFICE :—Apollo Street, St., Bombay.
DIRECTORS:—The Hon. Sir Fazulbhoj Currimbhoy (Chairman), Sir Vithaldas D. Thackersey, the Hon. Mr. Lalubhai Sambaldas, Sir Stanley Reed, the Hon. Mr. C. V. Mehta, the Chief of Ichalkaranji, G. K. Devadhar, Esq., the Hon. Sir P. D. Pattani, the Raja Sahab of Malegaon.
Share Capital (fully paid) Rs. 7,00,000
1 Deposits fixed for one year and shorter or longer periods are accepted. Rates and other particulars may be ascertained from the tender signed.
2 The Bank finances only registered Co-operative Societies in the Bombay Presidency on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency.
3 Accounts are audited half-yearly by a special Government Auditor, and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the "Bombay Government Gazette."
20-5-17. VAIKUNTH L. MERTTA, Manager.

Clean
 Wholesome
 Intelligent
 Entertainment
 IS A GREAT STEP
 IN
SOCIAL REFORM.

When deciding on a
PLACE OF AMUSEMENT TWO
 ESTABLISHMENTS

Should at once leap to the mind,

THE EXCELSIOR
 BOMBAY'S PREMIER MODERN THEATRE
AND

THE EMPIRE
 BOMBAY'S MOST PALATIAL
PICTURE THEATRE

Where Film Plays of Distinction are shown
 Every Week.

A
 Great Cinema Masterpiece
 is shown,

Both theatres are near the Bori Bunder
 and are run by the

EXCELSIOR SYNDICATE.

The Pioneer of Bombay's

AMUSEMENT WORLD.

FURUKAWA & CO

TOKIO

The Largest Manufacturers
in the East

OF

ELECTRIC BARE COPPER CONDUCTORS,

ELECTRIC UNDERGROUND CABLES,

ELECTRIC INSULATED WIRES,

ELECTRIC ACCESSORIES,

INGOTS, RODS, WIRES,

SHEETS, TUBES,

Etc., Etc.,

SOLE AGENTS IN INDIA AND BURMA.

TATA, SONS & CO.,

BOMBAY & CALCUTTA.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS Ltd.

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.
Nasari Building, Fort, BOMBAY.

Works at Porbunder, (Kathiawar)

11-3-17.

When YOUR EYES

need to be examined by QUALIFIED OCULISTS or by SCIENTIFIC REFRACTIONISTS of 26 year experience, FREE OF CHARGE, you cannot do better than GO TO

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR & CO.

The leading firm of Oculists, Eyesight Specialists, Manufacturing Opticians and suppliers of the patented

"KRYPTOK"

(Invisible one-piece bifocal lens.)

Toric, and all kinds of lenses,—Cylindrical, Spherical, Prismatic, &c. from pebbles as well as from best quality crown glass.

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR

Eyesight Specialist,

With 26 Years' Practical Experience.

Holds Exceptional Testimonials from H. H. The Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, the Hon'ble Sir Lawrence Jenkins the Hon. Mr. Justice Batty, Mrs. Batty, the Hon. Sir N. S. Chendavarker, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beaman, the Hon'ble Sir S. L. Bachelor, the Hon'ble Sir John Heston Mr. M. G. Hall, M. V. O., Col. R. H. Forman, B. A. M. C., P. M. O. Co. Brigade, Lieut. Col. G. H. Bull, M. D., I. M. S., Lieut-Colonel Peters N. B., I. M. S., and other high personages.

(7) 379, HORNBY ROW,

Opposite the Government Telegraph Office,
Fort, BOMBAY.
62-11-10.

INTENDING ASSUREES ARE INVITED TO COMPARE THE RATES AND CONDITIONS OF

The Empire of India Life Assurance Company, Limited.

WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.

Head Office 11 Elphinstone Circle, BOMBAY.

SEE REPORT AND OPINIONS OF THE PRESS AS TO THE REMARKABLE PROGRESS MADE BY THE COMPANY.

ENDOWMENT NON-FORFEITABLE POLICY FOR RS. 3,000.

PAYABLE AT AGE 60 OR AT DEATH, IF PREVIOUS, WITH PROFIT.

If, at any time, the assured under this plan should desire to cease paying any more premiums, he can obtain a paid-up Policy for such a proportion of the original sum assured as the number of premiums paid bears to the number agreed upon. Thus a gentleman who had assured at age 30 for a Policy of Rs. 3,000 payable at age 60 or at Death, if previous, after 5 years payments, would be entitled to a Free paid-up Policy for Rs. 500 free of future payments.

MONTHLY PREMIUM.

AT AGE 20, Rs. 6-9-0.

AT AGE 25, Rs. 7-8-0.

AT AGE 30, Rs. 8-14-0.

AT AGE 35, Rs. 10-18-0.

AT AGE 40, Rs. 12-12-0.

AT AGE 45, Rs. 15-10-0

SOME OF THE DISTINCTIVE FEATURES.

- * Funds invested in Government Securities and in accordance with the Indian Trusts Act
- Policy holders can appoint their own Directors.
- 90 per cent. of Profits to Participating Policy holders.
- Lapsed policies revived without Medical Certificate.
- Liberal Surrender Values 40 per cent. of the Tabular premium paid.
- Immediate payment of Claims.
- Medical fees and stamps on Policies are payable by the Company.

The sum assured is PAYABLE IN FULL should death occur even immediately after payment of the first premium.

GUARANTEED INSURANCE.—This Company issues Guaranteed Policies in situations of trust and partnership. It is specially authorized to guarantee the employees of the Post Office

Proposals Forms and full Particulars may be obtained from any local Agent in India or from ALLUM, BHARUCHA & CO. Managers.

IN INDIA

EVERY ONE KNOWS.

whom it does concern that we are foremost in supplying the best COSSI SILK SUIT PIECES suitable for the season. These pieces are strong, fancy and durable, and have been specially manufactured for India's Market. Each piece guaranteed for One Suit Complete.

Price Rs. 10 per piece.

Write to—THE BHARGAVA COMMERCIAL SOCIETY.

2-18.

Bombay City.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER. Contract Rates for Advertisements.

Number of insertions.	1 Inch.		2 Inches.		3 Inches.		4 Inches.		Page.
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
18	11 0	16 0	20 0	30 0	40 0	50 0	67 0	87 0
25	16 0	25 0	30 0	40 0	50 0	67 0	87 0	155 0
52	25 0	48 0	50 0	87 0	100 0	155 0	200 0	300 0

Casual advertisements at Rs. 4 per line for the 1st insertion and Rs. 2 per line for succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

Increasing Preference

PEOPLE who judge typewriters by strict comparisons never fail to appreciate the Oliver's overwhelming superiorities.

Those who examine its workmanship admit that it is of the finest.

Those who are anxious for the most durable machine are never hesitant in conceding that Oliver design and Oliver materials make for longer life.

Those who desire simplicity find in the Oliver fewer parts, less opportunity for wear and repair.

We are always willing, even anxious, to have people judge the Oliver by making comparisons.

It combines, we believe, as no other machine, more of the wanted features. No single advantage dominates at the sacrifice of others.

The Oliver has won its thousands of friends mostly through comparisons. Over 700,000 Olivers have been sold.

We urge you to do as others are doing—don't buy without first investigating the Oliver and making careful comparisons.

THE OLIVER TYPEWRITER COMPANY

SOLE AGENTS FOR INDIA

W. H. THORNS & Co.

a8-9-19.

25-29, CHURCHGATE STREET, BOMBAY.

Always mention Indian Social Reformer, when you write for the Oliver.

WONDERFUL TONIC AND MOUTH-REFRESHER

JINTAN.

This is a safe and efficient remedy in all kinds of diseases or disturbances of the digestive organs. It is composed entirely of VEGETABLE INGREDIENTS made from the prescription of the following eminent medical men viz:—
 NORIHIBU MIWA, M. D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy,
 ZENJIRO INOUE, M. D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy,
 and testified as to its efficacy by
 Baron J. MATSUMOTO, M. D., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Army.
 T. MITANURA Esq., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Navy.

As a digestive it is unequalled and will not disturb the functions of the most delicate stomach. Its antiseptic properties render it very efficacious in warding off disease and at the same time it imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath of the user.

By virtue of its aroma, it effectually masks the odour of Tobacco and Alcoholic Spirits.

It acts beneficially on the vocal cords and has found much favour with public speakers, actors, singers and those whose vocation necessitates a severe strain on the throat.

GOOD FOR
 Biliousness, Headache, Vertigo, Nausea, Indigestion, Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, etc., etc.

To maintain general health 2 to 3 pills may be taken occasionally, well masticated.
 Price—20 Pills Packet Rs. 0-1-0. 90 Pills Packet, with Tin case., Rs. 0-4-0. 380 pills, Pl. 84 with easy case., (Rs. 1-0-0)

Prepared by Messrs. MORISHITA Co., OSAKA, JAPAN.
 Sole Agents: Jintan Agency (G. R. Chaubal), Juma Masjid, BOMBAY.

At once opening 8 pills come out automatically.

FOR PAINS
 OF HANDS
 SPRAINS ETC.
 HOUSE

AMRUTANJAN.
 The magical pain balm extant. Cures
 all aches & pains.
 Costs 8 As. Sold
 everywhere.

By Appointment to H. E. the Governor of Sir George Steddenham Clarke of Bombay.

HARIDAS VALJI,
 (KING OF INDIAN CONFECTIONERS)
 Highest Confectioner, Caterer and Grand
 Military Contractor.

() Proprietor—RATINATH,
 Chitra Bazar & Grant Road,
 BOMBAY.

20-4-19.

DENTISTRY.

Extractions Painless;
 Terms Very Moderate;
 Gold Crown, Bar and
 Bridge Work a Speciality
 (teeth without plate);
 Latest Successful Treatment
 for Pyorrhoea (pus in gums).

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

(Hours: 8-1-30 & 5-7-30; Daily.
 (Sundays—From 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.)

ADROOS BUILDING,
 NEW CHARTER ROAD,
 GINDAOK, BOMBAY.

K. R. AMAT,
 Surgeon Dentist.

THE INDIAN * SOCIAL * REFORMER

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY MORNING.

Office—EMPIRE BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD, FORT.

Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

Vol. XXX BOMBAY—SUNDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1919. No. 8.

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard."
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

The Khilafat Day.	Disease and Marriage.
Indians in the Self-Govern- ing Colonies.	Calcutta University Com- mission Report. VI *
Anti-Indian Bias in the Pub- lic Services.	St. Francis of Assisi I.
The Newington Tragedy.	Women's Franchise.
Indian Representation at the International Labour Con- ference.	The Depressed Classes Mission, Mangalore.
The Doyanodaya's Omission.	Women and English Educa- tion.
Indian Teachers of English.	Cyclone in Eastern Bengal.

NOTES.

The Khilafat Day: Friday the 17th instant was observed as the Khilafat Day all over the country. The Mahomedan community spent the day in fasting and prayer, and in a large number of places, Hindus also joined their Islamic countrymen in suspending business and in the public meetings which were held to voice Moslem sentiment against the disintegration of the Turkish Empire. The Mahomedan demand is that the undertaking given by the Prime Minister that the rich and renowned lands of Thrace and Asia Minor with Constantinople as their capital, having a predominant Moslem population, must remain under Turkish sovereignty; that the Holy Places of Islam should remain free from non-Mahomedan interference; and that Smyrna and its Hinterland should be evacuated by the Greeks whose treatment of the Moslem inhabitants has aroused indignation. The Mahomedan view is that the temporal power of the Khalif is inseparable from his spiritual authority, and that if he is deprived of the former he will necessarily lose the latter. A correspondent, evidently a Mahomedan, writing in the Times of India seeks to stir Government to energetic action in the direction of the Mahomedan demands by asserting that the Hindus in supporting the Moslem countrymen are deftly playing a clever political game and that "the change of Moslem attitude will leave the Government without a party and cannot be regarded with indifference or equanimity." It does not require much shrewdness to perceive whether it is the Hindus or this writer who is deftly playing a political or a personal game. The Hindus, as an Asiatic and non-Christian people, are deeply interested in ensuring, so far as it is possible for them to ensure, that international policy and ethics are the same for Asiatic and non-Christian as for European and Christian peoples. Further, Indian troops and resources have been and are being freely employed in military operations in the countries of the Turkish Empire; and this alone entitles the Indian people, irrespective of caste or creed, to have a voice in determining what the future of these lands is to be. Lastly, if Hindus feel that they have a duty to support their Mahomedan countrymen on a question in which the deepest sentiments of the latter are involved, surely it is contemptible for any Indian (Hindu or Mahomedan) to impute it to other than a National and patriotic motive. This writer tells his readers that "the elder and the less impetuous Mussalman's still believe in the old policy of Sir Syed and Mohsinulmulk, of union with Europeans;" that "although the Moslem youths have embraced the Congress faith, the community as a whole is still shy of the selfish Hindu politicians who regard the Mahomedans as bideshis although preaching unity and co-operation from public platforms." A person who makes such allegations ought to put his name to his writing, so that the public may judge what weight attaches to his opinion. That he does not do so, carries on its face its obvious inference. He is evidently one of those who find that their opportunities of fishing (for titles and soft jobs for themselves and for their progeny) in the troubled waters of Hindu-Mahomedan rivalry are fast disappearing with the growth of a solidarity of National feeling between the two great communities of India. The writer, we are surprised, does not see that he is libelling Government when he calls upon them to concede the Moslem demands in order not to be left "without a party" in this country.

Indians in the Self-Governing Colonies: It will be in the recollection of our readers that Lord Sinha's memorandum on the position of Indians in the British Colonies, was referred to the several Governments of the self-governing colonies, with the general approval of the Imperial Conference last year. The despatches of these Governments with a statement of the course of action which they are prepared immediately to adopt with a view to give effect to the suggestions of the memorandum have been published. The largest number of complaints in the memorandum related to the Government of the South African Union, but the Governor General Lord Buxton, has nothing more to say in his despatch dated 30th August 1918 than that the subject of reciprocity received the consideration of his Ministers and was placed in the hands of Mr. Burton for discussion at the recent Imperial War Conference. There is no word of what has happened since. We know that since the last Imperial War Conference a drastic measure depriving Indians of rights not denied to them even under the Kruger regime in Pretoria has been passed by the South African Legislature. General Smut's speech to the Natal Indian address, which we printed recently, gives some room for the hope that, as the result of the Commission of Enquiry on which India is to be represented, so we are told, by the Hon. Mr. Srinivasa Sastry, this reactionary measure may be radically modified, if not altogether withdrawn. We would respectfully suggest to the Government of India and the Secretary of State the extreme desirability—not to say the necessity—of nominating Mr. Gandhi also as a member of the Commission in place of one of the two officials of the Government of India who are to be on it. In regard to this question, there is no difference of opinion between the Government and the people of India, and that being so, Mr. Gandhi will be a much more effective (and by a long way a better informed) representative of the Government and the people than any official. Such an appointment, moreover, will go a long way to bridge the gulf between the Government and the people of India which certain recent events have unfortunately tended to deepen.

Of the other replies, New Zealand points out that provision already exists for the admission of merchants, tourists and students of all nationalities, and that Indians domiciled in New Zealand have equal rights and privileges in every respect with Europeans. Australia recalls that so long as 1904, the Commonwealth Government had agreed to permit the admission of Indian merchants, tourists or students with their wives on passports for a period of one year, the question of subsequent stay to be considered on application. In view of the resolution of the Imperial War Conference last year, and with the desire to give full effect to the spirit which animated the Conference, the Commonwealth Government is now prepared to extend the former arrangements so as to permit Indian merchants, students and tourists to be admitted on passports and to remain in Australia indefinitely without the need for further application so long as they preserve the capacity in respect of which the passport was issued. They further agree that Indians already domiciled in Australia may bring in a wife and minor children. The Commonwealth Government point out that the main points of internal Australian administration which create a differentiation between Indians and Australian born persons of white British subjects appear to be two: (1) Exclusion from the Parliamentary franchise and (2) Exclusion from the privileges of the old age and invalid pension law. After giving the matter full consideration, they regret that they cannot see their way at present to admit Indians to the Parliamentary franchise, but in regard to the old age and invalid pensions, legislative proposals will be submitted as soon as possible to place Indians on an equality with other British subjects. While appreciating the liberal spirit in which the Commonwealth Government have met the proposals of Lord Sinha's memorandum, we yet hope that the Parliamentary franchise too will at no distant date be conceded to Indians in Australia as in New Zealand. The use of the phrase "at present" encourages such a hope. The Dominion Government of Canada have expressed their approval of the recommendations of the Imperial War Conference.

Anti-Indian Bias in the Public Services: A recent announcement calls for applications urgently to fill 204 vacancies in the Indian Medical Service. Of these, it is stated, 136 will be Europeans and the remainder, that is 68 Indians. The Indian Medical Service, as at present constituted, is intended to meet the requirements of the army and the civil population of this country. That two-thirds of the vacancies in this branch of the public service which concerns itself with the health of the people should be filled up by Europeans and only one third by Indians, is a proof of the extent to which the interests of the Indian public are subordinated to those of Englishmen, of the professional middle classes. This instance does not stand by itself. The Bombay Chronicle of the 21st instant quotes the following: "Seventy-eight appointments are being made in England for the Imperial Service of the Indian Public Works Department. Of these three persons (that is one-twentysixth of the total) are to be Indians." We wonder what Sir Prabhaskar Pattani, Sahibzada Aftab Ali, and Mr. Bhupendranath Basu, are about in the Indian office. What is Lord Sinha there for? We hear much of Anti-British Bias, but such flagrant examples of Anti-Indian Bias in the Public Services of India in which Indian subjects of His Majesty ought, according to all canons of right and justice, to have a preferential and predominant place, are, in our opinion, the root cause of whatever of Anti English bias there is in India. We are sure that if Indians were appointed to public offices in Great Britain in the proportion as Englishmen are in this country, Indians will not exactly be loved by the Englishmen whom they would deprive of chances of serving in their own country.

The Newington Tragedy: Mr. De la Hey, Principal of Newington, a school for young seminarians conducted by the Court of Wards in Madras, was shot dead while asleep on the night of the 15th instant by one of his own students under shocking circumstances. The young man alleged to have committed the murder, and a fellow student, said to have been privy to it, are now undergoing trial, and it is not proper to comment on the extraordinary statements which have been published regarding their crime. The Madras Times, a local Anglo-Indian Newspaper, actually published what purported to be an interview with the accused under custody! The deepest sympathy is felt for the widow and the infant child of the late Principal. If it is found after proper trial that the murder has been committed or instigated by the students of the deceased, it will be a horrible thing, so repugnant to one of the deepest-rooted sentiments of Indian mentality—reverence and affection to teachers. Difference of race has not made much difference in this regard. Though Wordsworth and Selby in Bombay, and Powell and Porter in Madras, were instances of English teachers who won, in an exceptional measure, the love and gratitude of their Indian students, Englishmen in the Indian Educational Services have, as a rule, secured the respect and attachment of the students and educated classes generally to a much greater extent than Englishmen in any other of the public services. This is explained by the fact that Englishmen in the Educational Services and educated Indians meet on the intellectual plane where race prejudices are at their minimum. Until this Newington crime, it would certainly have been unthinkable that an Indian student would murder his own teacher whatever his race or creed. The whole affair is so strangely at variance with what we know of Indian student character, that we feel that there must be something radically wrong in the atmosphere of Newington to make even such a suggestion possible.

Indian Representation at the International Labour Conference: New India of Madras has received a cable from London stating that the Secretary of State has appointed Mr. B. P. Wadia as an adviser to the Indian delegates to the International Labour Conference to be held at Washington and that Mr. Wadia has already left England for America. This is precisely what we had suggested in commenting on our contemporary's nomination of Mr. Joshi as the Indian Labour delegate. We are sure that Mr. Joshi will find an entirely sympathetic and loyal colleague in Mr. Wadia.

The Dnyanodaya's Omission: Our Christian contemporary of the Dnyanodaya makes an appreciative reference to the observations of the speakers at the meeting recently convened in Bombay to give expression to the public feeling regarding the introduction and administration of martial law in the Punjab, strongly condemning the assault on Miss Sherwood and the murder of Englishmen by the mob. We are glad that it has done so, as it cannot be too widely known that responsible Indians look upon such outrages with abhorrence. But we notice with regret that our contemporary is strangely silent about the excesses of the martial law authorities, and especially the "crawling order," which the same speakers condemned with equal energy. We ask the Dhyanodaya, as a Christian journal, whether it approves of the order compelling innocent citizens, who had to pass the site of the assault on Miss Sherwood, to crawl on their hands and knees—one version says, on their bellies—as a penance for the sin of some of their fellow-citizens? Does it approve of General Hudson's justification of this order, which, to our minds, is on the same level as lynching? It refers to the General's speech but is silent on this matter! Does our contemporary think that the course of those who wish to see friendly relations between Indians and Englishmen is rendered smoother by outrages of this kind committed by responsible officials?

Indian Teachers of English: When this writer said at the Simla Educational Conference two years ago, that Indian teachers were the most suitable to teach English to Indian students, because they realised their (the students') difficulties better and could put their minds in contact with those of their pupils more readily, the statement created a mild sensation: We are glad that the Educational Review, takes the same view in a recent number. Our contemporary writes: "The Educational Supplement of the London Times rightly maintains, in a recent issue of the journal, that British needs must be interpreted by British scholars and that British birth should be a qualification and not a defect. Is it too much to argue on the same lines, that the Indian who is a good scholar of English can do better justice to his subject than the Englishman who is often selected on the mere strength of his nationality and sometimes does not possess any special equipment for the particular work? The educational superstition still lingers, however, all over the country, that the Englishman is always, and of necessity, a better teacher of English than the Indian whatever the intellectual accomplishments and the intrinsic capacity of the latter. Nothing could be more injurious to the interests of true education than such a belief, and the sooner it vanishes, the better will it be for the progress of English studies in India."

Disease and Marriage: We learn from the Social Hygiene Bulletin, New York, that thirteen of the United States of America now have laws relating to venereal disease in connection with marriage. The laws vary greatly in wording and in some cases are so vague or general as to be difficult of strict enforcement. The purport of all is the same, however,—to prevent the marriage of persons infected with syphilis or gonorrhoea in an acute form. These States are: Alabama, Indiana, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, Washington and Wisconsin. The Michigan Law is the most drastic. It enacts that marriage by a person with syphilis or gonorrhoea is deemed a felony and is punishable by a fine of from $500 to $1000, or imprisonment for not more than five years, or both, and it is provided that in such prosecution the husband or wife may be examined as witness against each other, whether they consent or not, and that any physician who attended the defendant shall be compelled to testify.

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, OCTOBER 26, 1919.

CALCUTTA UNIVERSITY COMMISSION REPORT. VI*

It being accepted that the medium of instruction in the University course should be English, the question, so far as it bears on University education reduces itself to what the position of English should be in the lower stages in order that students entering the University may without difficulty follow instruction through that language. There is a general complaint that they are not able to do so now. The Commission propose to remedy this defect by reducing the use of English as a medium of instruction up to the present Matriculation stage and adopting improved methods of teaching English and employing more highly trained teachers of English in secondary schools. For the moment, we may leave out of account the second of these devices. Highly trained teachers of English and improved methods of teaching are not introduced in a day. The practical educationist must proceed on the supposition that the average of teacher and teaching would remain very much the same for some years. Even if we can by a wave of the wand create highly trained teachers in English, capable of adopting the most effective method of teaching, it will, perhaps, be wiser to try that device first, and observe what effects it has on the English of students proceeding to the University, than to adopt radical changes in the present system. Government in their present mood will be only too glad to increase the salaries of English teachers on the plea that highly trained men cannot be had for the present salaries; but we shall continue to get the same set of people, perhaps, a somewhat inferior class, because the missionary spirit of the worker, after a certain point, declines in proportion to the enhancement of the mercenary attractions of his work. Assuming then that no appreciable increase (except as regards salaries) is likely immediately in the quality of teachers or teaching, would the reduction of the use of English as a medium up to the Matriculation, give to the Universities students better equipped with a knowledge of English at the end of that stage? The recommendation of the Committee, thus stated, is in the nature of a paradox. We believe that, with better teachers and better teaching, the present system will give more excellent results in this regard than the reduction in English teaching recommended by the Commission: and that, without them, the reduction can but only lead to a still greater deterioration of the knowledge of English of the students who go up to the University. The Commission in more than one place refer to the marked superiority of English teaching in secondary schools in Madras where the pupil is introduced to the language earlier than in any other province.

* Previous articles on the report appeared in the issue of 17th August, 31st August, 7th September, 14th September, and 21 September, 1919.

We are among those who believe in the argument for beginning the use of the foreign medium at the earliest age possible, because it is only in that way that the student can in course of time cease to regard it as a foreign medium and as his own natural mode of expression. The application of the epithet "foreign" to a language has no significance except as an illustration of how deeply influenced western thought is imbued with nationalist prejudices. We have been reading the Carmichael lectures for 1918 delivered by Professor Bhandarkar. The first lecture is on the Aryan colonisation of Southern India and Ceylon. One of the problems which he leaves unsolved in it may be thus stated in his own words: No reasonable doubt can be entertained as to the Dravidian speech once having been spoken in Northern as well as in Southern India. In Northern India it was superseded by the Aryan, when the Aryans penetrated and established themselves there. It is, therefore, extremely curious why in Southern India the Aryan speech was not able to supplant the Dravidian. We have an explanation of this problem and of some others in Professor Bhandarkar's lecture, but what is relevant to our present topic is that the larger part of India today speaks what at one time were foreign languages to it. Another point of interest is that Southern India which presented so impenetrable a front to the ancient Aryan speech, has shown itself more favourably disposed to the English language—a variety of Aryan speech—than other parts of India. When Raja Todar Mal ordered that all the records of the administration in the Moghul Empire should be in Persian, he gave a powerful impetus to the study of that language by the Hindus, so much so that it is said that in a century the Hindus became the masters of Mahomedans in the Persian tongue. Neither Hindus nor Mahomedans were oppressed by the idea of Persian being a foreign language. The application of the epithet "alien" or "foreign" to anything starts brain-waves that are entirely irrelevant to a consideration of that thing on its merits. Raja Ram Mohun Roy, the sagacious pioneer of modern India reform, religious, social and political, has placed on record his belief that India would one day be an English-speaking country. Sir Abdur Rahim spoke in the same spirit when he said in his Convocation Address to the Mysore University that he was one of those dreamers who looked forward to the time when there would be one common language for the whole of India, and that even if the language which had the best chance in that respect be not one of indigenous growth, such as English, he would be prepared to accept it and readily sacrifice some very dear predilection of his own in the best interests of the generations to come. We are not without hope that Mr. Gandhi, in his unflinching pursuit of truth, will come round to the same view.

Once we shake ourselves free of the sentiment of foreignness regarding the English language, the problem of English in our educational system becomes easy of solution by purely educational means. We are free to view the problem in the clear light of reason. We can see that a vernacular being the language spoken out of school hours—there is as much education out of school hours as in them—does not require the same concentration of teaching as English which, if reduced during school hours, can find no compensation out of them. With great deference to the Commission, and speaking from practical experience which we cannot set aside, we submit that the attempt to distinguish between a child in a foreign country and a child in a school where instruction is given through the medium of English, may be—and has been by the Commission—pressed too far. The distinction, to our mind, is entirely one of degree. If the Commission had visited some of the English-teaching schools in Bombay—St. Xavier's, for instance—they would have seen reason to be at least less emphatic in the expression of the opinion they have expressed. It is coming to be recognised by practical educationists that the use of English as the medium of instruction even in the Middle School has the effect of improving the standard of English in that school. We have had several instances of this lately. One of the biggest high schools in Bombay had engaged a graduate from Madras on its staff. We happened to mention to the Principal casually that, perhaps, the new man was put to teach the higher classes. The answer was surprising. No, we were told, he was made to take the lower classes, as, being ignorant of the vernaculars, he had perforce to use English entirely for his instruction, and it was found that led to a rapid increase in the competence in English of the class. The opinion of the Commission in this respect is against the weight of experience, at any rate on this side of India. Mr. Sharp, the Educational Commissioner with the Government of India, had suggested a scheme to the Commission for the gradual introduction of English from the primary school upwards. We think that the right solution of the problem of spacing Indian education justly between English and the vernaculars, should be sought on some such lines, and not in the drastic and revolutionary proposal of the Commission. We have devoted a large amount of attention to this question because, we believe, it lies at the root of Indian national progress.

It is, perhaps, the only important matter on which we differ strongly from the Commission's recommendations. Fortunately, it is not an organic part of their scheme—it cannot be said that if it falls, the whole structure of the scheme falls to the ground. We shall deal with the other parts of the scheme in subsequent articles. But we should not like to close this part of our comments without paying a tribute to the industry, the sympathy and the high conscientiousness which Sir Michael Sadler and his colleagues have brought to their important task.

ST. FRANCIS OF ASSISI I.

(BY MR. AGHORAM IYER, B. A. B. L.)

While we are taught by traditional history how Catholicism deteriorated in the Popes and their appointed legates, and led to the Reformation and Protestantism, the history of the saints and devotees of God that the undivided Church of Rome produced in Europe is so luminous that we may well pause to ask if Catholicism should not be judged by the highest and best results; and what bears conviction to us of the vitality of the faith is the continuity in the stream of saints that it has produced down to our own days. It would look as though the ideal that Catholicism placed before itself would not be dimmed in lustre, because the times change and men play a new role from century to century.

One need not fear that this is undue praise of a faith which has roused the bitterest animosity in the heart of a rival Church, and praise too, which would rob us of the true perspective we get through the eyes of the history. The persecutions of the earlier centuries in Europe were not due entirely to religion. They resulted from two causes:—(i) the failure of religion, and its representatives to keep to their limits. Here, one wonders, however, that, in Europe with a race development calculated to create the chronic disease of militancy in its social body, religion could do so much to 'one down the fierce spirit of man. But if it did so, it in its turn was overwhelmed by the social growth of Europe and the phenomenon arose of a spiritual potentate who could not hold together his adherents by love, but required the advantages of material power to compel them to continue their allegiance to the Church; (ii) the failure, worse still, of the State to give redress to the subject's grievances, under papal dominion. Protestantism more political than religious in its aim, freed men from the unscrupulous exactions of the Church. It substituted for the old faith new doctrines and dogmas which were as good or as bad as those of the Catholic Church, but in its best part it contained a core of truth which certainly was not new to Catholicism as well. The immediate remedy that came to Europe was worse than the disease. Its later remedy was tending to belie its name, when science fostered in its growth by the protestant spirit turned back on its foster father by dragging down God from the human heart and substituting the world instead. Surely not even Protestantism was ready for the surprises that science gave Europe; the power to explore the secrets of nature was increased, and while man had no idea as to why he was growing in mastery over nature, he was getting farther away from the peace that was in the depth of his heart. It is strange that in Europe the progress of truth should have gone on in a different manner from ours. Religion had usurped the province of science by dogmatising about the nature of creation. Science, in its turn, usurped the province of religion by dismissing human study from its scheme. The era of bitter conflict between the two has passed; there are signs that they will coalesce, since there are today friendly exponents of both.

But in that earlier world where lived one of the sweetest saints known to christianity, these oppositions would have been anomalous. The thing, called science, was not competing then on equal terms with religion. The message of religion went deep into the hearts of the flower of the human race. Considerations of rank and social position, and even of sex were ignored, and truth and holiness claimed all as their votaries. Nor did the complex questions which had been popularised by metaphysics or theology, ever enter into the minds of men who heard the irresistible call. These men were not all intellectually brilliant, in our sense of the term. The lore or the craft that was best learnt in those days was often a sealed book to them. There might have been an unconscious strife going on in their hearts for redemption from sin. Perhaps the turning-point in their career came by a mere accident. Some event in the outer world was the suggestion to them to remodel their lives. However they came by their awakening, there was a firm grasp of the essentials of life, and they waged real war with the world. The one whose life is under review possessed a living soul, and had such a continuous growth of spirit that we must say he stands at the top of the saints of christendom.

In accordance with the simple custom of those times Francis, in boyhood, made a pilgrimage to St. Peter's Church, but disgusted with the half-hearted allegiance of the pilgrims he met in and about the Church, he gave away all the money he had; then, as a practical test of the experience of poverty, he exchanged his rich clothes for the rags of a beggar and stood in the public place begging the livelong day. Such sudden transformation in human character is rarely witnessed in the world.

A Hindu religious reformer of modern times, born in affluence, declares in earnest tones that he belongs to the caste of poverty, and gives proof of his words by befriending the poor and exercising an inexhaustible benevolence over them. His words go deep into our hearts and his daily actions shame us by their innocence and purity. But higher still is Francis in the suddenness of his resolution and the firmness he had in acting on it.

The next vision of Francis is that of a Knight on horseback riding along the highways which start from Assisi. He encountered a leper and in the way of common people rode off with a feeling of contempt for the afflicted man; but hardly had he gone a mile, tenbbé thought came to him that he was violently departing from the teachings of his Master to shun the leper thus. Was it great of Dr. Johnson to have rendered his account clear to his conscience by doing duty as bookseller in old age, as expiation for the offence of disobeying his father who followed the same calling? Francis made a stronger response to his inner voice, when he rode back to where the leper was prostrate on the roadside, and with poignant self-reproach told him feelingly of the grave offence he had committed in avoiding him, implored his pardon, and warmly embracing him tendered to him the obeisance due to God. The young man, Francis, was broadening out into a universal lover. His love and regard were given most of all to those from whom the polite and the respectable in society turned in hatred; and much of the fortune that Pietro Bernardone, by his careful economy, had gathered for his son, was freely spent in the service of the poor.

It often looks darkness before light breaks forth. So, it happened, that the munificence of Francis roused the indignation of Bernardone, who wearying of the son's prodigality, sought the aid of the canonical law to disinherit the latter. But in the Bishop's Court, Francis surprised all by appearing naked, holding the remnant of his father's property in one arm, and forthwith addressed the court thus. "Till now I had called Pietro Bernardone my father; but now I have only one father, and that father which is in Heaven; here is the money, and here are the clothes for which Bernardone has given himself so much trouble." The scene roused such a sudden compassion in the heart of the Bishop that he gave him clothing, which Francis received gratefully, and then he went into the forest, singing merrily of God. There awaited the next great work of Francis, the repair of the ruined church in the neighbourhood of Assisi, and to that he devoted himself with a burning passion. The house of God shall not lie in neglect. Those who have consecrated themselves entirely to God should keep His house beautiful and good. Laying stone on stone, carrying the materials for repair on his own shoulders, Francis, under his own eyes, carried on the repair of the church, and drew crowds of devotees to worship and prayer.

Many rich and poor joined Francis—and renounced all the attractions of the world for his sake—for Christ's sake. The Franciscan order was organised for carrying the teaching of Christ over the whole of Europe. Francis stood at the head of the order, leading the brothers minor in every way. Poverty was strictly insisted on; even for their living, the monks were to toil, and make the simplest provision.

The practice of meditation and prayer was to be constant. Their lives should be spent freely in the services of the poor and the neglected. The devotion of these monks invaded distant shores like England. What concerns us, however, is the personal life of Francis; every new experience was for him a great victory of the soul, a proof of the truth of the Christian teaching.

WOMEN'S FRANCHISE

(BY MR. MADAN MOHAN VARMA)

One may well feel ashamed that, at this stage of human civilisation, it should still be necessary for one to argue and plead for woman's proper place in a nation's life! However, facts have to be faced, and we can only hope to dwell in a Future which the memory of the Past cannot mar.

The problem of women's franchise is especially agitating the minds of many enlightened and educated women to-day. They are anxious that the Reform Bill should recognize their place in India's political life. Among the men of India opinion is divided. A vast majority of them (especially young men) heartily second the aspirations of their sisters; some men, however, of a rather orthodox type, shrug their shoulders and laugh. If we analyse their attitude, it is like all other such attitudes, based on the "heresy of separateness," or in the "force of habit." Ages of a degenerated life have dimmed their vision, power has intoxicated them!

My purpose in this brief article is to present to my readers the necessity of women's franchise, and the way to meet obstacles. I am convinced that, whatever India may get from outside, she cannot be a really great nation with the better half of her population in the background. Not only that; we are mocking our religious heritage by ignoring the Divine in woman, we are perverted by the delusion of separateness!

No one will doubt that the care and training of children to a very large extent depends on mothers. Mothers know more of child-nature than men do and they have to do much more with children than the latter. They alone are best fitted to propose and make laws affecting the growth and welfare of children. Comparing the rate of infant mortality in India (where women have no share in legislation) with that in New Zealand (where women have political power) we find that the figures of the former are seven times those of the latter. Here in India women cannot see that legislation is introduced regarding "midwifery, pure food for children, healthy education for the mother and the child."

Not only the welfare of children. As Mrs. Considine writes, "Men are always thinking of things—fields, figures, buildings, materials; women are always thinking of people, the children, the old people, the sick, the husband." So, because of their circumstances, women will be more keen than men in getting laws passed which will prevent sickness, which will prevent the adulteration of food, which will make it impossible for small numbers of people to get very rich by the great profits they make through forcing large numbers of people to pay far too high prices for necessary articles.

The same writer proceeds: "Then also women's way of looking at the problems of good government will help men and help their country, because women are such great upholders of purity and religion. In elections they will vote for the person who has the best moral character. Women's qualities of endurance and self-sacrifice will also strengthen men in the struggle of the whole people for full self-government within the Empire." And again, "women's influence will also be directed towards maintaining peace and unity between castes, peoples and nations, for women hate bloodshed and quarrellings, and it has been amply proved by the great war that none suffer so much in war-times as do women."

History bears illustrious testimony to this powerful influence of women. Confining our remarks to India: think of Kunti, think of Damayanti, think of Gandhari, think of Savitri; come nearer our times, think of Padmavati, think of Ahilyabai, think of Nar Jahan, think of Tara Bai. Come to our own times: think of Mrs. Gandhi, think of Sarojini Devi, think of Sarala Devi, and last but not the least, think of that great world-figure, Mrs. Annie Besant, — Vasant Mata many young Indians call her!

Oh, my fellow-countrymen, where is the hesitation, then, in giving our sisters an opportunity to grow likewise, serve likewise? Is it because most of them are as yet uneducated? Yes, they are; but why deprive such of them as have won distinctions in school and in University, in clubs and in conferences? They do not ask for universal electorate. They only ask you to make no sex bar for the qualified among them. If women become our co-legislators, we can be sure that the ban of ignorance will disappear much sooner than otherwise. Give a chance, then, to those that are fit.

Does "Purdah" frighten our friends? Yes, it is an obstacle, but until it is got rid of (as it must) let women officers—as our good sister Mrs. Jinarajadasa suggests—call at the houses of women voters to get their voting papers. Purdah women must not be ignored altogether. Among them are hidden persons of great accomplishment and learning.

In conclusion, I appeal to my fellow-countrymen in the name of the future generations, in the name of our Motherland, in the name of God Himself, whose Plan we are called upon to fulfil. To my sisters I would say: Remember, yours is a great heritage. Plan your Future so that it may outshine the Past. Let nothing shake you in your task. Yours is a holy mission. Be gentle and steady, be firm and dauntless — Ishwara will bless you and bless us all!

The Depressed Classes Mission, Mangalore: The annual report of this Mission for 1918, shows continued and steady progress. The number of schools conducted by the Mission rose from 9 to 18, and that of scholars from 300 to 400. A Cooperative Credit Society was started for the Panchamas of Mangalore and suburbs. It is managed by 9 directors, 7 of whom are Panchamas. The work of the Mission was greatly hampered by the conditions set up by the war. Nevertheless, owing to the zeal and devotion of the Joint Secretaries, Messrs. K. Ranga Row and K. Sadashiva Rao, the Mission was able to do a good deal of consolidation work.

WOMEN AND ENGLISH EDUCATION.

The following representation, largely signed by women and friends of women's education, has been sent to every member of the Senate of the University of Mysore:—
Sir,

On the 11th proximo, the Senate will consider the question of imparting all instruction to women in Kanada. Mr. Reddy on pages 68—65 of his Proposals quotes a number of eminent men who support his views. But not one of them has taken a step forward in the direction in which Mr. Reddy proposes to go. Prof. Karve's Indian University for women may be a good thing for a class of people. There are reasons to think that the institute has not found great favour with the womanhood of the Bombay Presidency. The girls' schools which teach all subjects in English in Poona and Bombay are flourishing and not deserted. One third of the students in men's Colleges of Arts are ladies. Even in Madras the Science Branch of the Junior Intermediate has 22 girls and 19 boys. Women are very keen for acquiring as much English as possible.

Otherwise where would there be Mrs. Sarojini to plead for Indian women in England or Mrs. Rukmini Anjmal to oppose Mr. Reddy? The six hours of English teaching in the new proposals will hardly produce sufficient proficiency to command respect. When Kanada is adopted in Mysore, lady graduates from Madras and Bombay will certainly be preferred to those of Mysore in every walk of life. Even now, people who are eager for their daughters' education send them to Madras. Some girls from schools in this State are now in Queen Mary's and the Women's Christian Colleges at Madras and in Medical Colleges at Madras and Delhi. Even in Bangalore and Mysore several parents, not satisfied with the amount of English they get in Mysore State school, send their daughters to Convents. Girls from Bellary and Coorg and other neighbouring Districts come to us for instruction. Hereafter all this will cease to be. What has been built up in half a century will be undone in a few days.

When Madras and Bombay are not enamoured of Mr. Karve's scheme why should we be? When the women of the sister Presidencies learn more and more English and proceed to Western countries to complete their Education, should our women be proficient only in Kanada? Of course rich parents will send their daughters to Madras. "When Kanada and English courses exist side by side the former will go to the wall." (Memorandum Page 8.)

The education policy should emanate from Simla, and India as a whole should embark on a new policy. If Mysore adopts Kanada, while sister Presidencies do not, it spells ruin for us. Teachers and Inspectresses will have to be imported from outside. Suppose we adopt Kanada for boys also, then all our higher officials, will have to be imported. Why should we bring in such a catastrophe? Knowledge alone is not respected; if it were, the Mahamahopadhyayas of Sanskrit Academy should in all justice be paid as liberally as Dr. Bourns.

Oosmania college (Memorandum page 65) is not an instance to support Mr. Reddy. In Hyderabad the court language is Persian and we do not know how far the University is intended to benefit women. Nowhere in the world's history is there a retrograde experiment made at the cost of women's privileges.

The marriageable-age of girls is steadily increasing and girls do not leave their parental roofs before they are sixteen. Even according to Prof. Karve's scheme the secondary education of an intelligent girl can be completed when she is fifteen. How is this a great improvement? The minimum age for S. S. L. C. candidates is 15 years according to the rules at present. Many boys and girls do pass at that age. Two girls have even had to apply for exemption because below 15. Of course dull students take longer. We are not charmed with Prof. Karve's institute. Even girls who go to Poona for education prefer the Hindu Girl's High school to Prof. Karve's institute.

The hobbies of men like Prof. Karve and Mr. Gandhi need not be blindly followed. Surely every woman need not sit spinning yarn.

The list of text books available in Kannda for upper secondary classes (Memorandum Appendix A) is very deceptive. Mere pamphlets on Physiology, Zoology, Mineralogy, Entomology, Cholera, Plague, Small-pox, Malaria, Astrology, Vijayanagar, old Geometry books I and II, the ordinary text books used in the Lower Secondary classes and several old fashioned books are all included to make a long list to impress the readers of the Proposals. If the Senate gets a set of these books and examines the dates of their publications and sees which of them are up-to-date, we have no doubt of the decision it will arrive at. It has taken nearly fifty years to produce this poor set of books and none of them are as good as English text books now in use in the high school classes.

The question of language is made much of. Girls in the IV Form feel some difficulty in the beginning. But by the time they come to the V Form they use English more or less freely.

In chalking out plans for women's education we should not always be thinking of girls who stay at home from their 15th year. For such girls any education or home education will be enough. There are others who have greater ambition which should not be thwarted by the new rules about to be made. If Kannda is considered enough for those who marry early, there should continue as at present, facilities for advance studies in English for boys and girls alike as in Bombay or Madras. Girls who may wish to study medicine in Delhi or Madras or England should not be injured by the new rules. If English cannot be freely used, much of the pleasure of life is missed. Mr. Reddy's proposals and the Government memorandum would be a sealed letter to ladies with a slight knowledge of English. They will not appreciate a newspaper or a novel. So we request that you will kindly speak to all your friends in the Senate about Mr. M. C. Rangaiengar's proposition, and oppose him completely. Mrs. Rakmini Ammal's hands should be strengthened. If reforms in women's Education be merely concerned with such modification in the curriculum as will open yet wider paths of usefulness to women much service will be done to Mother India. The plea for English forcibly put forward by Mr. Mir Hamza Husain in the beginning of an extract quoted on page 65. His remarks apply with equal force to the education of girls. He is satisfied with women talking a few English words. But women themselves are far more ambitious. Mr. Thompson too is not a champion for the higher education of women. But many Indian Christian women are far more ambitious and are not satisfied with the standard he sets up.

The views of educated Mysore ladies on the subject have been well expressed by one of their number, who is a graduate, and who, since Kannada is her mother tongue, most certainly cannot be accused of wishing the vernacular to be neglected.

"If you ask my opinion about Mr. Reddy's new scheme I should only say that he is adding to the disabilities under which our women have already been suffering and Mr. Reddy receives no thanks from us for his benevolent proposal.

"My opinion has been from the beginning the same as Mrs. Rakminiamma's. Every one of us is well aware of the fact that under present conditions a good knowledge of English is indispensable to every man or woman to become a true citizen.

"The very fact that our girls leave school at a very early age makes it clear that they should be taught as much as possible during that brief period, of all that is necessary to them, and English being of vital importance in these days should have a large place in the girls' curriculum. I don't believe what others say, that a girl has to spend her precious school life only in mastering a foreign language to the neglect of other and more useful subjects. But if she gets used to the English language from the beginning she finds it no strain to learn it and within the short period at her disposal, she can learn enough of English to save her purpose. The advantages of having English as the medium of instruction outweigh the disadvantages.

"If a girl spends a few years over English, the benefits she derives are of no little value. The whole world is before her. She need not be at the mercy of our tardy translators for every book and paper that is published in other countries for if any good book of general usefulness is written in any language, an English translation of it is sure to be speedily found. It is to be doubted whether our printers, publishers and translators can even keep pace with their western brethren in this matter. The English language places before us whatever is valuable in the literature of the world thus enabling us to have a wide outlook of men and things. In my opinion this is one of the greatest of benefits that we derive from the study of the English language and if we close this very door to knowledge against our girls, we are doing nothing but a gross injustice to them.

"The vernaculars of India can never have the same place as those of Europe. India is very different from other countries. It is not a land of one people and one language, but of many peoples and many languages. The need of a common language is strongly felt and that need is supplied by English. Again the India of the present day is not the same isolated India of the past. Times have greatly changed. We are brought into touch with the world and our ideas and thoughts too have greatly changed. Women's sphere is enlarged. Along with her household duties the times demand from her other duties as well. Not only has she to educate those at home, but has also to acquaint the people abroad, whose knowledge of India is very limited, with the true state of things here and plead for the cause of women as our sister Mrs. Sarojini has been doing. India is badly in need of such women and to do this is impossible without that proficiency in English which is only acquired by having it as the medium of instruction.

"This problem of women's education gave no little trouble to Plato thousands of years ago and it presents us the same difficulty now and a thousand years hence it will be the same. The great philosopher's words "In the administration of a State neither women as a woman, or a man as a man has any special function, but the gifts of nature are diffused equally in both; all pursuits of men are pursuits of women also" hold good to this day."

All that is asked for is, to allow women's education to progress, along with boy's education, according to the same rules and conditions. In conclusion we request you will be kind enough to interpret our views, to the Senate and try your best not to set back, women's education in the Province.

CYCLONE IN EASTERN BENGAL.

AN APPEAL.

The cyclone of the 24th September has caused terrible havoc in certain districts in Eastern Bengal. Rai Sahib Rajmohan Das, that indefatigable worker of the Brahma Samaj, writing from personal knowledge says, that fifty per cent, if not more, of the houses in certain localities have been destroyed by the cyclone and that the suffering of the poor knows no bounds. Half-fed and half-clad they had long been in the grip of very great misery. The cyclone has now rendered them homeless and destitute and completely helpless. Slender though the means of the Brahma Samaj are, it has at the call of humanity undertaken the work of affording relief to the distressed. Rai Sahib Rajmohan Das has been working in the Naraingunj side, Babu Saibhushan Mitra in Bhanga Sub-Division in Faridpore, and Babu Manomohan Chakravarti, missionary, in Bagerhat in Khulna and Kotallipara in Faridpore. Babu Baradakanta Bose, B.A., and Babu Abinash Chandra Lahiri, B.A., have started relief work in Vikrampore and Babus Harananda Gupta and Prafullakumar Ray, Bsc., in Netrokona and Kishoregunj sub-divisions in Mymensing. The Executive Committee of the Sadharan Brahma Samaj have placed in the hands of their Secretary the sum of Rs. 5000 and have entrusted him with the work of organising relief in the affected areas. Half of the above sum has already been exhausted. The Committee now stand in need of further funds. They address this appeal to public-spirited citizens all over the country with the hope that they would enable the Committee to carry on their work of succouring their helpless brethren in the affected areas by a prompt and generous response to it.

Any amount, however small, will be gratefully received and acknowledged by the undersigned on behalf of the Committee.

FRANKISHWA ACHARJI,
Secretary, Sadharan Brahma Samaj,
(211, Cornwallis Street, Calcutta.)

Mr. K. N. Dewal writes from Bangalore under date 17th October. During their visit to Bangalore Mr. G. K. Devdhar and the Hon'ble Professor R. P. Paranjpye delivered lectures on "the Widows' Problem" and "Students and Social Reform" respectively in the Government High School. Large audiences assembled and listened to the learned lectures with rapt attention.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postages
in advance. In arrears.

Per annum..... Rs. 5-0-0. Rs. 6-0-0.

Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, twelve
hillings (Rs. 6).

Single copies of the current year can be had at 4
annas each and any back copies at 6 annas each.

DO YOU WISH TO KNOW YOUR

"FUTURE"

Send your time and date of birth or your star and age or note the time when you write the letter, you will be given a full reading of your life or one year to come for ONE RUPEE ONLY.

Mr. Ghasanfar Muhammad Khan, Deputy Collector, writes from Moradabad City. "The one year life reading you sent me proved to be QUITE TRUE."

THE KALINGA ASTROLOGICAL BUREAU,
24-8-19. Chodavaram, Visakhapatnam District.

THE TATA INDUSTRIAL BANK.
LIMITED.

TO SHAREHOLDERS ONLY.

With reference to the NOTICE dated the 9th day of October 1919 regarding a FURTHER ISSUE OF SHARES, share-holders are hereby informed that the Directors have decided not to issue the said shares and that the under-writing agreement in respect thereof has been cancelled. The Transfer Books of the company will therefore NOT be closed from the 3rd November to 7th November 1919 as notified in the NOTICE dated 9th day of October 1919 referred to above.

By Order of the Board
R. H. PARKER
SECRETARY.

Registered Office,
Wallace Street,
Fort, Bombay.

"Wanted :—Employment, as teacher or governess, by an educated Brahman widow with midwifery training and medical practice, well-versed in music and the Vina; proficient in English, Sanskrit, Telugu and Canarese, and speaking Tamil and Hindustani nols. Please apply to K. R. C/o. The Indian Social Reformer, Bombay." 21-9-19.

GALE'S MAGAZINE.

Linn A. E. Gale, Editor and Publisher.

Champion of Socialism, New Thought, Occultism,
Internationalism and Birth Control

Contains such articles as :

"The Birth Pangs of Revolution"

"The World; That Is To Be"

"The Psychic Meaning of the War"

"Judas Iscariot and the Bolsheviki"

"Are We Hypnotized?"

The only Advanced Thought Magazine in English in Mexico. A Journal That is Indispensable to All Who Want to Understand the Signs of the Times.

$ 2 a year, American money. $ 1 for 6 months.
20c. a copy. No Free Samples. Remit by bank raft on New York or personal check.

GALE'S MAGAZINE,
P. O. Box 518
21-9-19, Mexico City, D. F., Mexico.

"COMMERCE AND INDUSTRIES."

An Interesting Monthly Journal of Indian
Material Progress.

Annual Subscription Rs. 10-0 and Single Copy
Rs. 1 Post Free.

A Specially valuable advertising Medium.

Wanted Agents throughout India.

Address :—P. Box. No. 353, and 5 Mount Road
Madras S. C. 12-10-19.

THE TATA INDUSTRIAL BANK, LD.

HEAD OFFICE, BOMBAY.

BRANCHES—CALCUTTA and HYDERABAD (Deccan)
CANNING and LUCKNOW.

Sub-Branches—

Bombay—Share Bazaar, Shroff Bazaar,
Calcutta—Barr Bazaar.

London Agents. LLOYDS BANK LIMITED.

NEW YORK AGENTS: THE GUARANTY
TRUST COY. OF NEW YORK.

AUTHORISED CAPITAL... Rs. 12,00,00,000.

SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL... 7,66,00,225.

PAID UP CAPITAL... 1,50,99,225.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Sir D. J. Tata, Kt., Chairman.

Sir Sassoon David, Bart.

Sir R. N. Mookerjee, K. C. I. E.

Sir Francis Stewart, Kt.

Sir Henry Proctor, Kt.

R. D. Tata, Esq.

F. E. Dinshaw, Esq.

F. C. Rimington, Esq.

Narottam Morarjee, Esq.

Hajee Gulam Mahomed Ajam, Esq.

The Hon'ble Mr. Parshottamdas Thakordas. C. I. E.

A. J. Bilimoria, Esq.

Secretary, R. H. Parker.

Current Accounts opened and interest allowed on daily credit balances from Rs. 500/- to Rs. 1,00,000/- at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum. If the balance to the credit of any account does not fall below Rs. 25,000/- at any time between 1st January and 30th June, interest will be allowed during that period at 2½ % per annum. No interest is allowed unless the sum accrued amounts to Rs. 8/- Half-yearly.

Fixed Deposits. Interest allowed on Deposits fixed for one or two years and for shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank. Interest allowed on Savings Bank Accounts at 4 per cent per annum. Rules may be obtained on application.

Loans and Cash Credits are granted on approved securities.

Purchases and sales of Securities and shares effected.

Bills of Exchange purchased and collected and every description of Banking and exchange business undertaken.

14-4-18. J. PAGAN DALZELL Acting Manager.

THE YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK, LIMITED.

(Registered in Japan.)

Established 1880.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 48,000,000.

Paid up Capital.....Yen. 42,000,000.

Reserve Fund.....Yen. 23,100,000.

Head Office:—Yokohama.

Branches and Agencies at Bombay, Buenos Aires, Calcutta, Changchun, Chi-Nan, Dairen, Fengtien, Hankow, Harbin, Hongkong, Honolulu, Kaiyuan, Kobe, London, Los Angeles, Lyons, Manila, Nagasaki, Newchwang, New York, Osaka, Peking, Rangoon, San Francisco, Seattle, Shanghai, Shimonoseki, Singapore, Soerabaya, Sydney, Tientsin, Tokio, Tsingtao.

Current Deposit Accounts are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at the rate of 2 per cent per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 100,000, provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of banking and exchange business transacted.

N. IGARASHI

Post Box No. 207, Hornby Road, Bombay.

I. NISHIMAKI

Manager, Calcutta.

1-12-17.

Post Box No. 406, Clive street, Calcutta

THE BANK OF BARODA, LD.

Under the Patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja Gaskwar.

Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897

HEAD OFFICE BARODA.

Branches—Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, and Surat

Capital Subscribed... Rs. 60,00,000.

Capital Paid up... 20,00,000.

Reserve Fund... 12,50,000.

DIRECTORS :

The Hon'ble Mr. Laliubhai Samaldas, C. I. E., Chairman

Sir Vitthaldas Damodar Thackersey, Kt.

Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti Nagar Sheth, Baroda.

Sheth Manilal Revadas, Vadnagar.

Rao Bahadur Gunajirao R. Nimalkar, Sur Subha, Baroda State.

Bhaskarrao Vitthaldas Mehta, Esq., Advocate, High Court Bombay.

M. H. Kantavalla, Esq., Agent, Maharaja Mill Co., Ld. Baroda.

R. R. Shirgaokar, Naib Subha, Baroda State.

A. N. Datar, Accountant General, Baroda State.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balances from Rs. 500 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest which does not come to Rs. 8 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application. C. E. RANI/LK.—General Manager. 15-4-18.

THE CENTRAL BANK OF INDIA, LTD

Subscribed Capital... Rs. 60,00,000

Paid Up Capital... 25,00,000

Reserved liability of

Shareholders... 26,00,000

Reserve Fund... 6,00,000

Head Office:—Alicoe Building, Bombay.

Local Branches:—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar, (3) Share Bazar.

Branches:—Amritsar, Calcutta, Delhi, Jharla, Karachi.

London Agents:—London Joint City and Midland Bank, Ld.

Current Accounts :—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June
2½ % allowed on Daily Balances from July to December.

12 months Deposits received at 5 % per annum.

Long and Short period Deposits received at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking Business transacted.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA,
Manager.

25-2-17

THE BANK OF TAIWAN, LTD.

Incorporated by Special Charter of the Imperial Japanese Government, 1899.

Subscribed Capital, Yen: 30,000,000
Paid-up Capital Yen: 22,500,000
Reserve Fund Yen: 5,880,000

Head Office:—Taipei, Formosa.

BRANCHES:—

LONDON	SHANGHAI	TOKIO
NEW YORK	HONGKONG	OSAKA
AMOI	SINGAPORE	KOBE
CANTON	SOERABAJA	YOKOHAMA
FOOCHOW	SEMARANG	AKO
HANKOW	MAKUNG	GIRAN
KIUKIANG	BATAVIA	KAGI
SWATOW	PINAN	KARENKO
TAINAN	SHINCHIKU	KEELUNG
TAKOW	TAIOHU	TAMSUI

The Bank has also a large number of Correspondents at Home and Abroad.

Current Deposit Accounts—are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at 2 per cent. per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 1,00,000 provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of Banking and Exchange business transacted.

K. TAKEMURA

Manager

9-12-17.

56, Esplanade Road, Fort, BOMBAY

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

Established September 1906.

Incorporated under the Indian Companies' Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE:—

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.

Capital Subscribed Rs. 1,00,00,000

Capital Called up 56,00,000

Reserve Fund 15,00,000

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS:

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 500 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½% p. a. throughout the year. On sums exceeding Rs. 1,00,000 interest is allowed by special arrangement. No interest will be allowed which does not amount to Rs. 5 per half year.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short periods @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

"Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application."

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, & CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stocks at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

H. P. STRINGFELLOW,

13-1-11.

Manager.

A Lady's Best Ornament is a Glorious Head of Hair.

A profusion of rich, soft silky, lustrous, wavy hair—where's the woman who would not like that?

There's only one oil that makes such hair and it's the far-famed

KAMINIA OIL (Regd.)

Invaluable for ladies, and just as much for Brain-Workers and Students.

Heated, head cooled, aching disappears and dandruff becomes a thing of the past. Added to all these it possesses a beautiful fragrant smell.

For superiority, awarded a Gold Medal at the Mysore Exhibition, and in great demand all over the country.

If you have not yet used KAMINIA OIL, you

have missed a fine delight and a real boon, use it now, if only once; and like many people you will prefer to use also always.

Price per bottle, Re. 1. V. P. Charges 6 annas extra. Price for 3 bottles Rs. 2-10. V. P. changes 14 annas extra.

Write now. Do not delay.

Sole Agents:

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co. (5-8-16) No. 155, Jamma Masjid Market, BOMBAY.

Now-a-Days.

All things have advanced in price. Even the vegetable ingredients used in our Atank Nigrah Pills have advanced in price.

Even the labourers demand heavy wages being dearer. Even the users have increased yet the Atank Nigrah Pills for Toning up the system are sold at before war price i. e. at 1 Rupee!

Valdya Shastri,

Manishanker Govindji,

Atank Nigrah Pharmacy,

Head Office:—Jamnagar—Kathiawar.

Branch:—Kalbadevi Road, Bombay.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours. Publish Fine Art Pictures, & c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours. 1-12-10. HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS.

ROYAL TONIC PILLS

powerful Nutritious and Strength Restorer, Price Re. 1-4 per tin of 30 Pills.

Prepared by—GOVINDJEE DAMODER & Co.

Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Commission Agents. 1-12-10. No. 3 Sutar Chawl Market, BOMBAY.

Timely advice to the Wealthy

Costly but certain remedies are in the long run cheaper than cheap and uncertain ones.

KANDARPA SANJIVINI PILLS AND OIL

are the safest and surest remedies for indigestion, constipation, loss of appetite, memory, mental, physical and nervous debility and all sorts of urinary disorders, improve impoverished blood.

Price per tin of 40 Pills Rs. 5 & per tola of Oil Rs. 10.

Both Purchased at a time Rs. 11/4—

Medical Advice and a Medical Book containing 128 pages sent Gratis and Post Free.

RAJ VAIDYA NARAYANJI KESHAVJI

Head Office:—Jamnagar, Kathiawar, (India.)

Branch:—No. 187, Kalbadevi Road,

24-8-1919.

BOMBAY.

Empire Hindu Hotel

Opposite Victoria Terminus
Bombay.

(Central Situation)
Strictly Vegetarian
Charges Moderate

Fitted with

Electric Lift, Fans and Lights.

TELEGRAMS: "FOOD," BOMBAY. TELEPHONE

22-8-19.

2789.

Saffron? Saffron?? Saffron???

If you wish to buy genuinely pure and best Saffron it is

SUN

BRAND

SAFFRON

ONLY

It has been largely used by Jain Temples, Maharajas, Durbars, Hakims and Vaidyas all over the country for the last 75 year and is well known for its purity and genuineness.

S. NABAEN & Co.,

17-2-18

21, Humam Street, Fort Bombay.

SHORTHAND

Like Other Art and Science, Shorthand is subject to the Law of Progress. Based on greatly improved scientific and analogical principles, the Sloan-Duployan system (contained in a compass of 12 lessons) saves a year's laborious study, ensuring highest efficiency and speediest results. Shorthand is the open-door to many well-paid positions, at any rate it will mean advancement for you. Expert Individual or Postal Instructions for a fixed fee, payable in easy monthly instalments. Speed Classes Conducted. Specialized Training Guaranteed. Enclose stamp for booklet, etc.
CENTRAL CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE,
G. P. O. Box No. 424, Bombay.

“EVERYTHING FOR EVERYBODY”

National Standard Portable Typewriter No. 3 (10 lbs.) Rs. 190
Oliver No. 5 (American Rebuilt) B.S. & Tab. Rs. 175; No. 7 „ 200
„ 9 (Second-hand) in thorough working order „ 128
Empire No. 1 (Do.) in good working order „ 85
Multikopy Typewriter Carbons, per Box of 100 sheets „ 8
Webster Brand „ Ribbons for all machines, Do. „ 21
Typewriter Oil (best 1 oz. bot.) or Eberhard Brasers, Do. „ 6
Safety Razor, Rivals Gillette, with 6 Gillette Blades (best) „ 5
Do. (Made in U.S.A.) with 2 spare blades, Set „ 1
Portable Electric Battery & lamp (burns 200 hours) compl. „ 20
Envelope Making Machine (to make 20,000 per day), New „ 34
Full Jewelled Lever Watch (Square or Octagon) Silver „ 25
Conklin's Self Filling Fountain Pen (non-leakable) Gold nib „ 9
UNIVERSAL BUSINESS SYNDICATE,
20-4-19. Post Box No. 424, Bombay.

HYPNOTISM

PERSONAL MAGNETISM,
WILL POWER,
NERVE FORCE—

Call what you will—

Is the intangible power that controls human destiny. It is the key to all business and social success. This power is no special gift of any one. It is latent in every one. We help you how to display it. By our system, you can learn in a few days at your own home and not only achieve success yourself, but you can influence the mind, health and actions of others to a remarkable.

Write immediately for our free booklet—The Pride of India.

THE LATENT LIGHT CULTURE,
TINNEVELLY, S. INDIA.

Battiwala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 1 each bottle of 100.

Battiwala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 2 each bottle of 100.

Battiwala's Ague Mixture of Fever, Malaria, Influenza etc.

Battiwala's Ague Pills for Malaria, Fever, Influenza etc.

Battiwala's Tonic pills for pale people & nervous breaks down.

Battiwala's Tooth Powder of Preserving Teeth

Battiwala's Ringworm ointment for Ringworm, Dandruff etc.

May be had from all dealers in medicines or from

Dr. H. L. Battiwala Sons & Co., Ltd.
No. 13, Worli, 18, Bombay.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESS:—“Doctor Battiwala Dadar”

THE BOMBAY CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK.

HEAD OFFICE:—Apollo Street, St., Bombay.

DIRECTORS:—The Hon. Sir Ferozshah Currimbhoy (Chairman), Sir Vithaldas D. Thackeray the Hon. Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas, Sir Stanley Bord, the Hon. Mr. G. V. Mehta, the Chief of Ichaikaranji, G. N. Devadhar, Esq., the Hon. Sir P. D. Patani, the Raja Babab of Malegaon.

Share Capital (fully paid) Rs. 7,00,000

1 Deposits fixed for one year and shorter or longer periods are accepted. Rates and other particulars may be ascertained from the under signed.

2 The Bank finances only registered Co-operative Societies in the Bombay Presidency on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency.

3. Accounts are audited half-yearly by a special Government Auditor, and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the “Bombay Government Gazette.”

20-8-17.

VAIKUNTH L. MEHTA, Manager.

Clean
Wholesome
Intelligent
Entertainment

IS A GREAT STEP

IN

SOCIAL REFORM.

When deciding on a

PLACE OF AMUSEMENT TWO
ESTABLISHMENTS

Should at once leap to the mind.

THE EXCELSIOR
BOMBAY'S PREMIER MODERN THEATRE

AND

THE EMPIRE
BOMBAY'S MOST PALATIAL
PICTURE THEATRE

Where Film Plays of Distinction are shown
Every Week.

A

Great Cinema Masterpiece

is shown,

Both theatres are near the Bori Bunder

and are run by the

EXCELSIOR SYNDICATE.

The Pioneer of Bombay's

AMUSEMENT WORLD.

FURUKAWA & CO.

TOKIO

The Largest Manufacturers

in the East

OF

ELECTRIC BARE COPPER CONDUCTORS,

ELECTRIC UNDERGROUND CABLES,

ELECTRIC INSULATED WIRES,

ELECTRIC ACCESSORIES,

INGOTS, RODS, WIRES,

SHEETS, TUBES,

Etc., Etc.,

SOLE AGENTS IN INDIA AND BURMA.

TATA, SONS & CO.,

BOMBAY & CALCUTTA.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS Ltd.

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.

Navsari Building, Fort, BOMBAY.

Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

11-3-17.

When YOUR EYES

need to be examined by QUALIFIED OCULISTS or by SCIENTIFIC REFRACTIONISTS of 26 years experience, FREE OF CHARGE, you cannot do better than GO TO

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR & CO.

The leading firm of Oculists, Eyesight Specialists, Manufacturing Opticians and suppliers of the patented

"KRYPTOK"

(Invisible one-piece bifocal lens.)

Toric, and all kinds of lenses.—Cylindrical, Spherical, Prismatic, &c., from pebbles as well as from best quality crown glass.

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR

Eyesight Specialist,

With 26 Years' Practical Experience.

Holds Exceptional Testimonials from H. H. The Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, the Hon'ble Sir Lawrence Jenkins the Hon. Mr. Justice Batty, Mrs. Batty, the Hon. Sir N. S. Jhandavarkar, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beaman, the Hon'ble Sir S. L. Bachelor, the Hon'ble Sir John Heston Mr. H. G. Bell, M. V. O., Col. R. H. Forman, H. A. M. O., P. M. O. B. Brigade, Lieut. Col. G. H. Bull, M. D., J. M. S. Lieut. Colonel Keston M. B., L. M. S., and other high personages.

(7) 379, HORNBY ROW,

Opposite the Government Telegraph Office, Fort, BOMBAY.

ATTENDING ASSUREES ARE INVITED TO COMPARE THE RATES AND CONDITIONS OF

The Empire of India Life Assurance Company Limited.

WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.

Head Office II Elphinstone Circle, BOMBAY.

SEE REPORT AND OPINIONS OF THE PRESS AS TO THE REMARKABLE PROGRESS MADE BY THE COMPANY.

ENDOWMENT NON-FORFEITABLE POLICY FOR RS. 3,000.

PAYABLE AT AGE 60 OR AT DEATH, IF PREVIOUS, WITH PROFITS.

If, at any time, the assured under this plan should desire to cease paying any more premiums, he can obtain a paid-up policy for such a proportion of the original sum assured as the number of premiums paid bears to the number agreed upon. As a gentleman who had assured at age 30 for a Policy of Rs. 3,000 payable at age 60 or at Death, if previous, after 5 years' payments, would be entitled to a Free paid-up Policy for Rs. 500 free of future payments.

SOME OF THE DISTINCTIVE FEATURES.

- Funds invested in Government Securities and in accordance with the Indian Trusts Act.
- Policy holders can appoint their own Directors.
- 90 per cent. of Profits to Participating Policy holders.
- Lapsed policies revived without Medical Certificate.
- Liberal Surrender Values 40 per cent. of the Tabular premium paid.
- Immediate payment of Claims.
- Medical fees and stamps on Policies are payable by the Company.
- The sum assured is PAYABLE IN FULL should death occur even immediately after payment of the first premium.

GUARANTEE INSURANCE.—This Company issues Guaranteed Policies in situation of special authority to guarantee the employes of the Post Office.

Proposal Forms and full Particulars may be obtained from any local Agent in India or from ALLUM, BHARUCHA & CO. Managers.

INDIA

EVERY ONE KNOWS.

whom it does concern that we are foremost in supplying the best COSSY SILK SUIT PIECES available for the season. These pieces are strong, fancy and durable, and have been specially manufactured for India.

Each piece guaranteed for One Suit Complete.

Price Rs. 10 per piece.

Apply to—THE BHARGAVA COMMERCIAL SOCIETY,

Banaras City.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER. Contract Rates for Advertisements.

Number of Insertions.	1 inch.		2 inches.		3 Columns.		4 Columns.		5 Columns.		Page.
	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.
13	11	0	16	0	20	0	30	0	37	0	87	0
26	16	0	24	0	30	0	45	0	57	0	155	0
52	25	0	38	0	50	0	87	0	155	0	300	0

Equal advertisements at Rs. 4 per line for the 1st insertion and Rs. 2 per line for succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

WONDERFUL TONIC AND MOUTH-REFRESHER
JINTAN.

This is a safe and efficient remedy in all kinds of diseases or disturbances of the digestive organs. It is composed entirely of VEGETABLE INGREDIENTS made from the prescription of the following eminent medical men viz:—
NORIHIRO MIWA, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy,
ZENJIRO INOUE, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy
 and testified as to its efficacy by
Baron J. MATSUMOTO, M. D., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Army.
T. MITAMURA, Esq., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial

At each opening 2 pills come here automatically!

Japanese Navy.

As a digestive it is unequalled and will not disturb the functions of the most delicate stomach. Its antiseptic properties render it very efficacious in warding off disease and at the same time it imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath of the user.

By virtue of its aroma, it effectually masks the odour of Tobacco and Alcoholic Spirits.

It acts beneficially on the vocal cords and has found much favour with public speakers, actors, singers and those whose vocation necessitates a severe strain on the throat.

GOOD FOR

Biliousness, Headache, Vertigo, Nausea, Indigestion, Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, etc., etc.

To maintain general health 2 to 3 pills may be taken occasionally, well masticated.

Price—20 Pills Packet Rs. 0-1-0. 90 Pills Packet, with Tin, case., Rs. 0-4-0. 380 pills Packet with fancy case., Rs. 1-0-0

Prepared by Messrs. MORISHITA Co., OSAKA, JAPAN.

Sole Agents: Jintan Agency (G. R. Chaubal), Juma Masjid, BOMBAY.

FOR PAINS AND ACHES, SPRAINS ETC.
USE:—

AMRUTANJAN.

The magical pain balm extant. Cures all aches & pains. Costs 5 As. Sold everywhere.

By Appointment to H. E. the Governor
Sir George Sydenham Clarke of
Bombay.

HARIDAS VALJI,
 (KING OF INDIAN CONFECTIONERS)
 Highest Confectioner, Caterer and Grand
 Military Contractor.

Proprietor—RATINATH,
 Chitra Bazar & Grant Road,
BOMBAY.

20-4-19.

DENTISTRY.

Extractions Painless;
 Terms Very Moderate;
 Gold Crown, Bar and
 Bridge Work a Speciality
 (teeth without plate);

Latest Successful Treatment
 for Pyorrhoea (pus in gums).

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

Hours: 8-1-30 & 5-7-30, Daily.
 (Sundays—From 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.)

ADROOS BUILDING,
 NEW CHARRI ROAD,
 GIBRALTAR, BOMBAY.

E. R. AMAT,
 Surgeon Dentist.

1-4-19.

THE INDIAN * SOCIAL * REFORMER

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY MORNING.

Office:—EMPIRE BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD, FORT.

Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

Vol. XXX BOMBAY—SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1919. No. 9.

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard."
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

An Ominous Defeat.	Sir George Barnes in South Africa.
The British Labour Party's Imperial Policy.	Silver Currency in France.
Iranians in India.	The Reform of the Central Government.
The Administrator of Bhavnagar.	The Maharaja of Bikaner on Constitutional Reform.
The South African Commission.	St. Francis of Assisi. II.
Postponement of the South African Commission.	Total Prohibition.
	An Appeal.
	"The Light of India."

NOTES.

An Ominous Defeat: Following on the repeated failure of Government candidates to hold the seats, won at the last General Elections by large majorities, at by-elections, the defeat of Government on the third reading of the Aliens' Restriction Bill, at such an early stage of the new session in the House of Commons, by a majority of 72 votes is not a favourable portent for the present Coalition Ministry. The voting was 185 to 113, and at least one hundred Ministerialists are said to have opposed the Government. In the face of this fact, the statement that the defeat of the Government was due to a combination of Labourites, Independent Liberals and anti-Aliens Group, is unintelligible. On the result of the division, Mr. Bonar Law moved the adjournment of the House until October 27 to enable the Government to consider the situation, and the motion was warmly received on all sides. It is understood that the Cabinet does not regard the defeat as sufficiently important to justify an appeal to the country. That is to say, it will carry on for the present, as did Mr. Balfour's Cabinet after the South African War after similar defeats in the House of Commons. But the spell which bound the majority to the Government is broken, and no one can say that there will not be a repetition of the defeat on more important questions which Government will not find it easy to ignore. Apart from its general importance, the incident has a special interest to us in India as affecting the fate of the Government of India Bill. A dissolution before the Bill becomes law, will, of course, mean the erasure of all that has been done so far. A section of Indian opinion regards such a possibility as not altogether a calamity. There will be considerable accessions to this section if it be found that the Joint Committees' recommendations leave the Government of India where it was in the original Bill.

The British Labour Party's Imperial Policy: A Reuter's telegram says: "Mr. Arthur Henderson, discussing Labour's Imperial policy in the periodical Overseas, writes that Labour is certainly not a Little Englander in the sense of being indifferent to the potential utility of this great alliance of Free States which the Empire in its best aspect implies. Labour stands in all its traditions for the principle which has made the real strength of the Empire, namely, conciliation through self-government." This is significant as coming from Mr. Henderson who is spoken of as the first Premier in a Labour Ministry in Great Britain. Apart from that, he is a high-principled man. The Challenge which is primarily a religious paper and not a Labour organ, thus wrote of him on the morrow of his triumphant return at the by-election at Widnes: "On national grounds the whole result is heartedly to be welcomed, for Arthur Henderson belongs to the band of men who put principle before personal gain, who because they are men of character are not corrupted by politics, but through politics are able to make their highest contribution to the service of their fellows. If Labour can put forward more candidates of the character and calibre of Mr. Henderson, then Parliamentary government is safe for our lifetime; and by its agency the general level of the common life may be raised enormously."

Iranians in India. That the Parsi immigration into Western India some twelve centuries ago was not, like the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers in New England, the emigration of an alien people to a new and unknown world, is well-known to students of ancient Indian history. There was continuous intercourse between Persia and India from very early times, and the only special feature about the Parsi emigration was that it was by way of the sea, and not through the passes on our North-Western frontier. Political and diplomatic intercourse between the two countries existed in historical times. Before that, probably, Iranian missionaries came to India, and the late Sir Herbert Risley was of opinion that the Sakadwipa Brahmins were descendants of them. In pre-historic times, the ancestors of the Indo-Aryans and the Iranians dwelt together as one community in the Panjab. The Karnataka of Bangalore gives a summary of a lecture delivered by the distinguished scholar, Mr. R. Shama Sastry, in the Mysore University Extension series, on Iranians in India. Mr. Shama Sastry's conclusions mainly accord with those of Dr. Rajendralal Mitra whose lectures on the Indo-Aryans, published many years ago, are the most authoritative exposition of this interesting subject at present. On one point Mr. Sastry seems to differ from Dr. Mitra and other scholars. The latter held that the Indo-Aryans and Iranians were settled in the Punjab as one community. Mr. Sastry, on the other hand, is reported as holding that the Iranians had settled in India before the advent of the Vedic Aryans. After the coming of the latter, they both lived in peace and friendship for a time; and then they quarrelled, and became divided for ever. According to this theory, the Vedic Aryans and the Iranians were originally two different peoples, whereas according to the first theory they

WONDERFUL TONIC AND

MOUTH-REFRESHER

JINTAN.

This is a safe and efficient remedy in all kinds of diseases or disturbances of the digestive organs. It is composed entirely of VEGETABLE INGREDIENTS made from the prescription of the following eminent medical men viz—
NORIHURO MIWA, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy, ZENJIRO INOUK, M. D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy
 and testified as to its efficacy by
Baron J. MATSUMOTO, M. D., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Army.
T. MITAMURA Esq., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Navy.

As a digestive it is unequalled and will not disturb the functions of the most delicate stomach. Its antiseptic properties render it very efficacious in warding off disease and at the same time it imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath of the user.

By virtue of its aroma, it effectually masks the odour of Tobacco and Alcoholic Spirits.

It acts beneficially on the vocal cords and has found much favour with public speakers, actors, singers and those whose vocation necessitates a severe strain on the throat.

GOOD FOR

Biliousness, Headache, Vertigo, Nausea, Indigestion, Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, etc., etc.

To maintain general health 2 to 3 pills may be taken occasionally, well masticated.

Price—20 Pills Packet Rs. 0-1-0. 90 Pills Packet, with Tin, case., Rs. 0-4-0. 380 pills Packet with fancy case., Rs. 1-0-0

Prepared by Messrs. MORISHITA Co., OSAKA, JAPAN.

Sole Agents: Jintan Agency (G. R. Chaubal), Juma Masjid. BOMBAY.

At each opening 2 pills come here automatically!

FOR PAINS
 AND ACHES
 SPRAINS ETC.
 USE:—

AMRUTANJAN.

The magical pain balm extant. Cures all aches & pains. Costs 3 As. Sold everywhere.

By Appointment to H. E. the Governor
 Sir George Sydenham Clarke of
 Bombay.

HARIDAS VALJI,
 (KING OF INDIAN CONFECTIONERS)
 Highest Confectioner, Caterer and Grand
 Military Contractor.

Proprietor—RATINATH,
 Chitra Bazar & Grant Road,
BOMBAY.

20-4-19.

DENTISTRY.

Extractions Painless;
 Terms Very Moderate;
 Gold Crown, Bar and
 Bridge Work a Speciality
 (teeth without plates);
 Latest Successful Treatment
 for Pyorrhoea (pus in gums).
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.
 Hours: 8-1-30 & 5-7-30; Daily.
 (Sundays—From 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.)

ADROOS BUILDING,
 NEW CHARTER ROAD,
 GINGAORA, BOMBAY.

E. R. AMAT,
 Surgeon Dentist.

1-4-19.

THE INDIAN * SOCIAL * REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY MORNING.

Office:—EMPIRE BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD, FORT.

Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

Vol. XXX BOMBAY—SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1919. No. 9.

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard."
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

An Ominous Defeat.
The British Labour Party's
Imperial Policy.
Iranians in India.
The Administrator of Bhanagar.
The South African Commission.
Postponement of the South African Commission.

Sir George Barnes in South Africa.
Silver Currency in France.
The Reform of the Central Government.
The Maharaja of Bikaner on Constitutional Reform.
St. Francis of Assisi. II.
Total Prohibition.
An Appeal.
"The Light of India."

NOTES.

An Ominous Defeat: Following on the repeated failure of Government candidates to hold the seats, won at the last General Elections by large majorities, at by-elections, the defeat of Government on the third reading of the Aliens' Restriction Bill, at such an early stage of the new session in the House of Commons, by a majority of 72 votes is not a favourable portent for the present Coalition Ministry. The voting was 185 to 113, and at least one hundred Ministerialists are said to have opposed the Government. In the face of this fact, the statement that the defeat of the Government was due to a combination of Labourites, Independent Liberals and anti-Aliens Group, is unintelligible. On the result of the division, Mr. Bonar Law moved the adjournment of the House until October 27, to enable the Government to consider the situation, and the motion was warmly received on all sides. It is understood that the Cabinet does not regard the defeat as sufficiently important to justify an appeal to the country. That is to say, it will carry on for the present, as did Mr. Balfour's Cabinet after the South African War after similar defeats in the House of Commons. But the spell which bound the majority to the Government is broken, and no one can say that there will not be a repetition of the defeat on more important questions which Government will not find it easy to ignore. Apart from its general importance, the incident has a special interest to us in India as affecting the fate of the Government of India Bill. A dissolution before the Bill becomes law, will, of course, mean the erasure of all that has been done so far. A section of Indian opinion regards such a possibility as not altogether a calamity. There will be considerable accessions to this section if it be found that the Joint Committees' recommendations leave the Government of India where it was in the original Bill.

The British Labour Party's Imperial Policy: A Reuter's telegram says: "Mr. Arthur Henderson, discussing Labour's Imperial policy in the periodical Overseas, writes that Labour is certainly not a Little Englander in the sense of being indifferent to the potential utility of this great alliance of Free States which the Empire in its best aspect implies. Labour stands in all its traditions for the principle which has made the real strength of the Empire, namely, conciliation through self-government." This is significant as coming from Mr. Henderson who is spoken of as the first Premier in a Labour Ministry in Great Britain. Apart from that, he is a high-principled man. The Challenge which is primarily a religious paper and not a Labour organ, thus wrote of him on the morrow of his triumphant return at the by-election at Widnes: "On national grounds the whole result is heartedly to be welcomed, for Arthur Henderson belongs to the band of men who put principle before personal gain, who because they are men of character are not corrupted by politics, but through politics are able to make their highest contribution to the service of their fellows. If Labour can put forward more candidates of the character and calibre of Mr. Henderson, then Parliamentary government is safe for our lifetime; and by its agency the general level of the common life may be raised enormously."

Iranians in India. That the Parsi immigration into Western India some twelve centuries ago was not, like the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers in New England, the emigration of an alien people to a new and unknown world, is well-known to students of ancient Indian history. There was continuous intercourse between Persia and India from very early times, and the only special feature about the Parsi emigration was that it was by way of the sea, and not through the passes on our North-Western frontier. Political and diplomatic intercourse between the two countries existed in historical times. Before that, probably, Iranian missionaries came to India, and the late Sir Herbert Risley was of opinion that the Sakadwipa Brahmins were descendants of them. In pre-historic times, the ancestors of the Indo-Aryans and the Iranians dwelt together as one community in the Panjab. The Karnataka of Bangalore gives a summary of a lecture delivered by the distinguished scholar, Mr. R. Shama Sastry, in the Mysore University Extension series, on Iranians in India. Mr. Shama Sastry's conclusions mainly accord with those of Dr. Rajendralal Mitra whose lectures on the Indo-Aryans, published many years ago, are the most authoritative exposition of this interesting subject at present. On one point Mr. Sastry seems to differ from Dr. Mitra and other scholars. The latter held that the Indo-Aryans and Iranians were settled in the Punjab as one community. Mr. Sastry, on the other hand, is reported as holding that the Iranians had settled in India before the advent of the Vedic Aryans. After the coming of the latter, they both lived in peace and friendship for a time; and then they quarrelled, and became divided for ever. According to this theory, the Vedic Aryans and the Iranians were originally two different peoples, whereas according to the first theory they were one people who subsequently split it into two on some differences of doctrine and practice. Mr. Sastry will, we are told, deal with the causes of the secession in his next lecture. Dr. Rajendralal Mitra was of opinion that the most important cause of the split was the question of cow-killing. The Indo-Aryans had settled as agriculturists and in view of the vital importance of the cow to an agricultural community, had foresworn beef, but the Iranians clung to their pastoral habits, and went back to their homelands. We look forward with interest to what Mr. Shama Sastry has to say on the question.

The Administrator of Bhavnagar. The appointment of Sir Prabhaskar Pattani as Administrator of Bhavnagar during the minority of His Highness the Maharaja is obviously the only suitable appointment that could have been made. It is in consonance with the widely-expressed wishes of the people of the State, and has been received everywhere with considerable satisfaction. His long experience as Dewan of the State, amplified by his tenure of the membership of the Executive Council of the Governor of Bombay and of the Council of the Secretary of State in London, marks him out as the one man most fitted to be at the helm of the State. It is not stated whether Sir Prabhaskar is to be the sole Administrator or whether he is to be yoked to a Political. We trust it will be the former. The appointment comes at a psychological moment in Indian politics, and far more than the interests of Bhavnagar is involved in its success or failure. The capacity of Indians for administration has been established beyond question by men like Sir T. Madhav Rao, Dewan Ranga Chariu, Sir Seshadri Iyer, Sir Dinkar Rao, Sir Salar Jung. But these men did their work under less exacting conditions than those in which Sir Prabhaskar's administration will have to prove itself. Standards have risen all round, and autocratic methods are out of the question. The people will have to be admitted to the confidence of the administration, and it is in them that the Administrator will find his surest support and security for his work when the time comes for him to make over the State to the young Maharaja. The good wishes of a very large circle of friends will attend Sir Prabhaskar's assumption of the most responsible task entrusted to an Indian statesman in our time and we trust he will be given health and strength in ample measure to carry it on to the great benefit of the people of Bhavnagar and to the advantage of Indian reputation for administrative qualities.

The South African Commission. Indian Opinion of the 26th September quotes General Smuts as having said in reply to a question in the Union Assembly that the Government had no intention to appoint a Commission to enquire into the whole Asiatic question. The Commission to be appointed will inquire into the question of the issue of trading licenses to Indians. As our contemporary points out, this is inconsistent with the statement of the acting Prime Minister, Mr. Malan, who in June last stated that the Commission would inquire into the whole Asiatic question in the Transvaal. Apart from that, the question of trading licenses is only one of the grievances mentioned in Lord Sinha's memorandum presented to the Imperial War Conference last year, which Mr. Burton, on behalf of the South African Union Government had undertaken to consider favourably. A more important question is the right of ownership of land the law relating to which Lord Sinha urged was demoralising to all parties and the abrogation of which he strongly advocated. There were other points in the memorandum. It is a question whether if the scope of the Commission's enquiry is to be restricted to trading licenses, it is worth while appointing it, and sending representatives from India to participate in it. Then, we understand that the Commission will be an Imperial one, but it appears from General Smuts's remark that it is to be appointed by the Union Government. Under the circumstances, it behoves the Government of India to make strong representations to the Imperial Government as well as to the Union Government with a view to widen the scope of the enquiry so as to cover all outstanding Indian grievances not only in the Transvaal, but elsewhere in South Africa, and to strengthen its character by making it an Imperial enquiry.

Postponement of the South African Commission. Since the above was in type the Government of India have published the following statement of the Secretary of State's "from himself": "The Union Government have decided to postpone the appointment of the Commission for the present. It has been mistakenly inferred from a passage in the Secretary of State's recent speech that a request has been made that the representatives of India should sit as members of the Commission. No such request has been made to the Union Government, but that Government has been asked to agree to the presence of representatives (probably one official and one non-official) to be deputed by the Government of India to assist the Commission in its enquiry, to give information, and to represent the feelings and the views of the Government of India and the Indian public and to press for a sympathetic consideration of the Indian case. The question of the status to be proposed for such representatives and of the composition of the Commission may depend to some extent on the scope of the enquiry, as to which information has not yet been received. It is hoped that the Union Government will in any event agree to the inclusion of an Indian non-official in the deputation from India as the Government of India and the Secretary of State are agreed as to the great importance of associating an Indian with Sir B. Robertson." This is entirely at variance with what Mr. Montagu was understood to have said to the deputation which waited on him, and will cause intense disappointment in this country.

Sir George Barnes in South Africa. Indian Opinion has the following very relevant criticism of Sir George Barnes, the member for Commerce in the Government of India, regarding his enquiries on Indian problems in South Africa:—"In his letter to Mr. Gandhi, dated the 15th July last, Sir George Barnes refers to the fact that he was recently in South Africa and had several times discussed Indian affairs with Lord Buxton. So far as we are aware, he never took the trouble to interview members of the Indian community and get their views on questions vitally affecting their welfare. This, we suppose, is typical of the European official in India. And that is why the people of India so greatly desire a change in the form of government. What a fine opportunity Sir George Barnes had of making himself fully acquainted with matters concerning which he would have to deal with later! But he missed it. He was content to confine his enquiries to Government officials and so learnt only part of the truth. His letter to Mr. Gandhi on the Asiatics (Land and Trading) Act proves that."

Silver Currency in France. India, after all, is not the sole sinner in the matter of absorbing rupees. A Reuters telegram says that owing to the hoarding, melting down and export of coinage despite prohibition, silver coinage has practically gone out of circulation in France, although over one thousand million francs should be in circulation.

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1919.

THE REFORM OF THE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT.

The Joint Committee on Indian constitutional reform has finished taking evidence and the Bill as amended by it is expected to be presented to Parliament in the middle of November and to be finally passed about the middle of December. The present seems to be an opportune moment to indicate what feature of reform will be most looked for in the revised Bill. The Indian public will look in it for a substantial measure of reform in the constitution and functions of the Government of India. The introduction of a measure of responsibility in that Government was from the first advocated by Indian reformers as a desirable extension of the Montagu-Chelmsford scheme, calculated to heighten its symmetry and popularity. For our own part, we have from the first regarded the reform of the Government of India as far more urgently important than that of provincial Governments. Provincial autonomy, without simultaneously strengthening the Central Government by liberalising its constitution and its functions, is, to our mind, positively detrimental to the highest interests of the country. Indian history is a record of repeated chaos supervening on provinces outgrowing the controlling authority of the Central Government. Sir Harry Stephen in his evidence before the Joint Committee professed his anxiety to see a scheme of reform formulated by Indians according to Indian ideas. This is a seemingly reasonable request, but in reality it is an impracticable one. The conditions set up by British rule so complicate the Indian political problem that no scheme of reform based wholly on Indian ideas will be effective as a means of ensuring a stable and progressive administration. At the same time, no scheme of reform which ignores the lessons of Indian history has the slightest chance of success. Now, the first lesson of Indian history is that a strong Central Government is the indispensable condition of progress and prosperity within and security against dangers from without. Lord Sydenham interprets "strong Government" to mean a Government which desires and is able to work its will in absolute disregard of public opinion. In this sense, there never was a stronger Government than the present Government of India. But in truth there never was a weaker, more discredited Government. The Simla correspondent of the Times of India cannot be accused of prejudice in this matter. This is what he says in his last letter:

Simla is now at the nadir of its reputation at home, and its suggestions are likely to carry less weight than would otherwise be the case. The bitter comments of papers like Trust on the conduct of the Afghan Campaign, the stir caused by the Punjab sentences and the Indemnity Act, the general discontent of the English mercantile world at the exchange position—all these ought to give Government furiously to think. Its loss of reputation has now reached a point at which its administrative efficiency is bound to suffer.

The Afghan campaign and the Punjab sentences and the Indemnity Act, and even the exchange position, are but the culmination of a steady process of deterioration which had been at work in the Government of India. The great personalities of Viceroys like Lord Curzon and Lord Hardinge, and of a great Secretary of State like Lord Morley in the period between them, retarded to some extent, and masked to a much greater extent, the process of decay. The removal of the Imperial capital to Delhi accelerated the process, and even Lord Hardinge's sagacious and high-souled statesmanship could not withstand it. The Cawnpore Mosque trouble, which led to the personal intervention of the Viceroy, was the first symptom of Provincial administrations getting out of hand. When the magnetic personality of that illustrious Viceroy was withdrawn, the process became unmistakably obvious. The Madras Government, first, and the Punjab afterwards, showed that the Central Government was losing prestige in the provinces. Lord Chelmsford has, no doubt, proved inadequate for his high office, but it is not altogether due to his deficiencies of capacity and experience. Only a statesman of enormous personal prestige, in England and India could have steered the State with appreciable success in the difficult circumstances of the last five years, with a Government of India constituted as at present. The Afghan war and the excitement among the frontier tribes, are due to the same cause, namely, the weakness, owing to want of touch with the living currents of Indian life, of the Central Government of India. A Government of India, even under the present constitution or absence of it, which forfeits the confidence of India, is certain to lose weight with the Government in England. Lord Curzon, with all his amplitude of power and prestige, had to acknowledge his defeat at the hands of Lord Middleton, because the Government in England had tired of his lordship's unpopularity with His Majesty's Indian subjects. If, as the Simla correspondent of the Times of India bluntly says, the loss of reputation of the Government of India has now reached a point at which its administrative efficiency is bound to suffer—in our opinion, this untoward result has already happened—His Majesty's Government and Lord Chelmsford himself cannot but contemplate an early change of Vicerealty as an alternative to be preferred. The point we wish to urge is that a mere change of Viceroys will not permanently improve the political position. It will no doubt have the immediate effect of relieving the tension in the public mind. This by itself is a most desirable thing. But reforms in the constitution of the Government of India, which place that Government in close and constant touch at every point with the surging force of public opinion and make it the focus of life and thought in this country, can alone give it the strength and vitality needed to govern India for her own good as well as for the good of the British Empire.

The liberalising of the Government of India will, of itself, have the effect of communicating a liberalising impulse to all the grades of administration below it. Without the Government of India being liberalised, no amount of reform in the provincial Government and local administration will be of much avail. The weakness of the Central Government will, as the Simla correspondent of the Times of India shrewdly apprehends, infect all the ranges of administration below it. Provincial autonomy was suggested in the Government of India's famous despatch of 1911, relating to the annulment of the Partition of Bengal and the transfer of the Imperial capital to Delhi, avowedly as a means of keeping Indian influence confined to provincial matters and of preventing it from extending to imperial concerns. Mr. Montagu devised his scheme on this basis. Indian opinion, however, has never accepted provincial autonomy as a sufficient sphere of its political aspiration. The Congress-Moslem League scheme proposed the same sort of changes in the Imperial as in the Provincial Governments. The present plight of the Government of India, as depicted by the Simla correspondent of the Times of India, has come as a concrete refutation of the proposal to leave the Government of India out of the responsible part of the scheme of constitutional reform. The dangers of the excessive stress laid on provincial autonomy (with its implication of provincial isolation) has been brought home to Indian public opinion in an unmistakable manner during the last few months. Why should Bombay, Madras, the United Provinces and the Punjab agitate against the Rowlatt legislation which was evoked by the occurrence of revolutionary crime in Bengal and was most unlikely to be applied to any other province? Why should the United Provinces, Bombay, Bengal and Madras concern themselves with the application and administration of Martial law in the Punjab at the instance of the Punjab Government which is in the best position to know all the circumstances of the case? These questions have been asked in all seriousness by responsible organs of English opinion in India not all of them ill-disposed to Indian aspirations or opposed to the Montagu-Chelmsford scheme. The underlying idea, it is clear, is that Indian political evolution should proceed on lines which reduce each province to an isolated unit without interest in and sympathy with other units. That the effect of the adoption of the scheme with the Government of India left out of it, will be this, there cannot be the least doubt. There is a third reason why the reform should begin with and not stop short at the Government of India. Events have occurred since the Delhi despatch was penned and even since the Montagu-Chelmsford report was drafted, to belie the doctrine of progression from the bottom to the top. India has not only a seat at the Imperial Conference, but is to-day an original member of the League of Nations. The anomaly of her being governed without reference to the views and opinions of the people by half a dozen gentlemen, is obvious. It has been pointed out by critics not very kindly disposed to Great Britain. The Indian people, on their part, do not like to be represented or misrepresented on the League of Nations by persons in whose selection they have had no voice. The international status and the position in the British Commonwealth, of India have advanced to such an extent that an irresponsible Government of India is absolutely out of the question.

THE MAHARAJA OF BIKANER ON CONSTITUTIONAL REFORM.

In bringing the Session of the Bikaner Legislative Assembly to a close, His Highness the Maharaja made an important pronouncement on the attitude of Indian States and their rulers towards constitutional reform in British India and in their own territories. It is entirely due to His Highness that we no longer hear of the opposition of Indian princes to the political progress of British India. When all other resources had been exhausted, it was the time-honoured trick of Anglo-Indian reactionaries to seek to frighten British statesmen by representing that the Mahomedans of India, the Indian troops and the Indian princes would regard reforms calculated to give effect to the promises of equality of Indians and Englishmen in the public services and the Executive Government with dismay. The Mahomedan myth has been rudely dispelled, and it is no longer possible for the most brazen reactionary to represent Indian Mahomedans as being likely to resent political progress. As it is, the Indian Mahomedan, if anything, is more strident to-day in asking for the fulfilment of pledges than the other communities have ever been. The Lucknow compact has been subjected to a fiery ordeal and has emerged unscathed. It was not, perhaps, surprising that numerous Hindu witnesses who appeared before the Southborough Committee, while expressing their dissatisfaction with some of the terms of the compact, declared that they accepted it nevertheless and deprecated any attempt to reopen the question. But it could not but have impressed even Lord Sydenham that the representatives of the Moslem community who appeared before the Joint Committee, absolutely refused to consider the Government of India's tempting offer to add some more seats to the proportion allotted in the Lucknow compact to Mahomedans in the Bengal Council on the ground that that would upset the underlying principle of that compact. The Indian Army and the Indian princes were still trump cards left for the reactionaries. His Highness the Maharaja, however, rudely plucked it out of their hands in his memorable speech at the Savoy Hotel. Speaking as a Maharaja and a Major-General who had taken part with his troops in the war, His Highness ruthlessly exposed the trickery, incurring thereby the undying wrath of this parblind fraternity. He is not dismayed, however, and his speech at Bikaner shows that if it has to be done, His Highness would cheerfully do it again. As we pointed out in commenting on the Savoy Hotel speech at the time, the Indian princes had been dragged into the controversy by the opponents of reform, and His Highness had no alternative but to state the truth as he knew it from his intimate personal knowledge of them. But His Highness does not stop there. He maintains that the Indian States have a direct interest in ensuring progress and contentment in British India. He observed :

Whilst the Princes of India can always be counted upon to throw the whole weight of their influence and resources on the side of law and order and constituted authority, as they have invariably and unflinchingly done in the past, they are, apart from all these weighty considerations which appeal to them most, prompted not unnaturally by reasons of self-interest also, to see such a course followed as will ensure tranquillity on the other side of their borders and thus avert serious trouble from crossing into their territories. For conditions existing in British India, and the attitude of the people there, find their inevitable reflex in our own States. It is quite clear that any grievance and discontent in British India, still more anarchy and sedition, are bound sooner or later to spread to our States and to affect the Indian rulers and their Governments. Many of us are surrounded by British territory. With the increased railway, telegraph and postal facilities, and the spread of education and Western thoughts and ideals, and with a large number of our State subjects carrying on business in British India, there are, much more than formerly, frequent and intimate interchanges of ideas and opinions and greater contact between our own subjects and those of British India.

His Highness recalled the fact that the late Lord Minto had asked for the co-operation of the Princes and their advice in dealing with the unrest in parts of Bengal and elsewhere. We are sure that had they been consulted with reference to the passing of the Rowlatt Act and the introduction of martial law in the Punjab, they would have given equally moderating advice. Extremism in any form is uncongenial to the Indian temperament—whether Hindu or Mahomedan, prince or peasant.

His Highness next turned on his Indian critics. These were of two classes. The extremists, or as we prefer to call them, "the impatient idealists" of Lord Morley, who rather resented His Highness' plea for patience and moderation. This class has since seen reason to change its opinion. It now realises that His Highness' advice was inspired by sincere patriotism and an inner knowledge of the forces at work in favour of Indian progress, and we have not seen of late any repetition of the old style of its criticism with reference to the Maharaja's counsels of trust and moderation. The other class was represented, so far as we have seen, by a solitary journal, the Justice of Madras, which called upon His Highness to prove his sincerity in the advocacy of political reforms in British India by pointing out the practical reforms he had introduced in Bikaner. His Highness declined to degrade himself by replying to a charge of insincerity but with a view to prevent the public from being misled by such criticisms, he recounted the reforms which he had introduced. The Legislative Assembly of Bikaner was first instituted in 1913. It has a non-official majority, enjoys nearly all the rights which were conceded to the Indian Legislative Council after it had been in existence for thirty years. Only one question and one resolution were disallowed during the six years of the Bikaner Council, and only one out of fifteen resolutions passed which was not accepted by His Highness' Government. Further reforms in the direction of widening the scope of the Assembly are in contemplation. The Maharaj Kumar has been nominated a member of the Assembly, and he, said the Maharaja, "is in full accord with my views regarding the benefits of the representative system of Government." His Highness next gave a long list of the reforms introduced in Bikaner since he assumed charge of the administration twenty-one years ago. These include advance in local self-government; the system of administration introduced 17 years ago; the famine administration of the State; the judicial reforms, including the institution of a Chief Court; the re-organisation of the Revenue Department, including remissions and concessions made to the people; the remarkable increase, considering nature's handicap in the rabi cultivation in the fertile districts of the State; the re-organisation of the Customs Department; the more than trebling of the State revenues; the development in the railway system of the State, excluding the far-reaching projects of railway extensions, as also the irrigation projects in regard to which questions were put; the installation of a big electric plant to supply to the general public electric light and power and last, but not least, the specially liberal policy which His Highness' Government have for the last two years, in particular, inaugurated in regard to education and medical relief in the State. His Highness added for the information of the public that since his coming of age the most scrupulous attention had been paid to keeping his privy purse entirely separate from the State. This is, indeed, a striking record, and if all or most other States could emulate it or the glimpse which His Highness gave of the strenuous life of the conscientious ruler, there would be far less sweeping criticism, much of it necessarily but not unavoidably ill-informed, of Indian States, of which His Highness justly complained. The Maharaja said :

In common with many of my brother Princes, I have devoted the best years of my life to the service of the State and to the interests of the people. That necessitates much hard work and even the sacrifice of one's health and comfort to the extent that for months one has had to sit in one's study from early morning till late in the evening with only a brief interval for a hurried meal and without even the consolation, some times for months on end, of seeing the faces of one's children or others dear and near to him from the time one rises till long after sunset. If the critics of the Indian Princes really realised this, they would not attribute to them in such sweeping terms the unworthy motives of lack of sympathy and insincerity of purpose.

It is well-known that His Highness does not spare himself, and there are some other rulers of whom also this picture is true. But as the Maharaja himself observed, to contend that everything is perfect in all the States would be as absurd as the sweeping allegations often heard that everything is corrupt and rotten in the Indian States. Then, again, later in his speech, after referring to the strict injunctions as to the duties of a ruler required by the Hindu dharma, His Highness candidly remarked:

"With the peace and security that has followed the advent of the British in India and after the continued strife and strain of so many centuries, a reaction was inevitable. Princes in some cases came to adopt ease-loving habits. With competent Ministers, things went on more satisfactorily, but in the case of unscrupulous Ministers, desiring to gain undue power or wealth, the energies of the Ruler were diverted in other directions. It is things like these which are responsible for the views that are held about the Indian States. But they have happily changed or are changing once again."

We are glad to be assured by so high an authority that these things have happily changed or are changing once again.

But what is there to ensure that the change shall take place in all cases, that it shall be permanent and continuous, and that it shall not be subject to relapses according to the idiosyncrasy of individual princes? The objection to autocracy is not that it may not be benevolent, but that there is nothing to ensure that it shall be only benevolent and never malevolent. It is essential to the well-being of the State that beneficence of aim should be the constant attribute of its Government and not a casual concomitant dependent on the accident of the ruler's personal character and pre-disposition. Representative Government ensures this, we do not say absolutely, but in a much greater measure than one-man rule.

ST. FRANCIS OF ASSISI II.

(By MR. AGHORAM IYER, B. A., B. L.)

There was one day among others, when Francis, returning to the monastery with brother Leo, put to him the question, what was the greatest thing in life? It was raining and the brothers were shivering with cold. Francis, himself taking up the question, went over the whole field of human achievement, speaking about the excellence of arts, crafts and sciences alike, but passed over them with the remark that the greatest was not in them. Then, to the impatient and astonished disciple, the leader spoke with deep pathos in his soul, pointing out to him by way of example, that, when on their return to the monastery gates at night, the keeper turned them out with harsh words, they should recognise in him a messenger from God. Then, said Francis, man attains to the highest state in life. "What difference can there be, where praiser, praised and blamer, blamed are one." The heart of this man could not react in the form of hatred or anger.

His humility was beyond words. He was the greatest moral force of his age. The mediæval world looked to him as to a master. To him was brought the allegiance of all classes; yet to this man, who, without brilliant gifts of mind or charm of person, became the ruler of human hearts, there remained no consciousness of his greatness. God had chosen him for His task, because in him He had found the weakest and the most sinful of mortals.

What would have been pretended self-effacement in others was with Francis, a spontaneous feeling. Then, the love of his heart drew even the wicked. Robbers were overwhelmed by his compassion and became disciples. In the loving ministry of saints on earth, that which has the most powerful appeal to human hearts is the conversion of the wicked. Here, the Saints of the East and of the West are akin. We see in Mirabai, the queen-devotee of Krishna, and Sri Gauranga, the Prophet of Nuddea, a similar overpowering love of sinners. Within recent times was living a man on the banks of the Ganges to whom even a thief was God, and because he adored him as God, the thief himself became a holy man.

A memorable chapter in the life of Francis is his relationship with Santa Clara. She played a prominent part in his mission. The pure soul that she was, she abandoned the prospect of fine living, and overcame the instincts of her sex to become a servant of God. Such self-effacement was hers, such radiant purity shone about her that Francis, in a moment, knew her greatness and accepted her as a fellow-worker. For years this lady went on with the loving office of a servant of God, meekly bearing the trials of life, living for the ideals of the spirit, and faithfully carrying out the instructions of this good and holy man. Ramakrishna and his holy wife, Francis of Assisi and Santa Clara, Buddha and Yasodhara, and Vivekananda and Nivedita, are some of the conspicuous instances in the world's history of men and women who have stood to each other in the relation of mother and son or brother and sister, with a record of deeds which are the ideals of the whole human race. The burning love of God and its fruition in the service of fellow-creatures are the cherished possessions of saints and where the flood rises in the soul, the limiting consciousness of the body is left behind, and purity alone shines forth in the relation of man and woman.

This man who passed a whole life in the rapture of contemplation, his face mirroring the deep peace of his soul, was also a parivrajaka (wanderer) like one of our own sannyasins. Now alone, now in the company of his brethren, he started on many a campaign of religious preaching, and with sweet and simple words, alike of deeds, he drew numerous men to the feet of God. Toil might exhaust him; like frail mortals he might seem to clutch at material things for protection. But without any effort, the mask is torn and the spirit in him stands revealed. What a mingling of compassion and strength in such occurrences! Francis, after months of wandering and hard preaching, accepts with the complacency of childhood a mule for riding. Behind him is one of his disciples, who, prior to his conversion, occupied a higher rank than his leader. The thought crossed his mind that had they stood in the relations of older days their positions in the journey should have been reversed. In a flash the rider on the mule has discovered the lurking thought in the mind of his follower. There is no alternative, but that he must implore his pardon for the offence. Qualms of remorse wrang the heart of the tramping monk and to his dying day he carried the memory of the unsaintly feeling he entertained towards his leader. The Lord Jesus washes the feet of his disciples. Vivekananda carries his first disciple on his shoulders for several miles, during the latter's fatigue. "Verily, my compassion overcometh my wrath."

Tragic was the night, Francis passed in the tower of Cardinal Ugolino at Rome. It seemed to his sensitive mind, that this was a luxury he was stealing, for which he was accountable to his disciples. He would not stain his character with such selfishness, and be a bad model to them. So he left the tower and spent the night under the skies, taking leave in the morning of the Cardinal and his prison-tower.

Once in a while heavy storms blow over the soul of great ones and threaten to wreck their vessels. But they prove brave sailors, nevertheless. In middle age, after years of austerity and self-discipline, and the grace of God was like a constant blessing on his soul, a night of temptation was passed by him, in Central Italy. The temptation was alluring to him, as it was borne in upon his mind by specious reasoning. The man had before him the picture of wife and children, property and servants, and what folly was it, thought he, that he threw away the innocent joys of home, and the opportunities of service among his own kindred, in the hope of a far-away redemption. All the tightening of his hempen girdle could not check the flow of this new feeling. In despair and in mad fury he came out into the dark, and gathering up heaps of snow, fashioned them into images and addressing them, as wife and children, said in depth of soul, that having escaped their tyranny he was not to allow their dominion over his mind.

There was a very plain facing of the issue with this man, that one might accuse him almost of carrying a point of discipline too literally. Men like him have natures where no ingenious mind is necessary to excuse a lapse in practice. What their minds have apprehended as right and good, their hearts throb with, and their whole will is exercised to testify in conduct. Francis was literally beyond all ideas of possession. In one of the lofty moods of his soul he could not hear from a brother in reply to an enquiry, that the latter was returning from his cell. The very idea of a cell for himself sounded as a discretion in his ears; and he forthwith educated himself into the consciousness of having nothing to own, standing only in sovereign mastery of soul. Or, we may stand speechless and in awe, pausing to study the last act of his life when the man in literal conformity to the teaching of the Bible stripped himself naked and held himself ready to die, to go into the tomb naked, as he came into the world naked.

Truly has it been said that a man grows into the likeness of the ideal he is contemplating upon. To this God-intoxicated man, it was a harrowing thought that he had not deserved well of his Master, for he had flinched from suffering. But there, in the rapture and bliss of spiritual communion, he received the stigmata of the Crucified. He was no conscious artist or poet, but music came to his heart and he sang. Its pure crystal waters rose in his soul and flowed into the heart of the world. Living every moment in intimate communion with the Lord, as also his myriad manifestations on earth the thought of the web of interrelations in the world must have been to him as the air he breathed, and he sang the "cantic of the sun" in the full blaze of realisation. The whole universe was one vast brotherhood and sisterhood to him. But the sweetest of all sisters to this soul was death and his welcome to her was the most cordial of all. There comes to us across the centuries the thundering ascription of his words uttered in a passionate fervour of longing "welcome sister death! welcome! welcome" and mingles itself with the yet more dominant note of the saint of the great Indian mutiny who broke the silence of fifteen years, to say with his last gasp to his murderer: "Thou too art He! Thou too art He!"

The story of this life would appear valueless, like many others, if the impossible question is asked, why in spite of these great men, the world is as bad as ever? Yes, the world is bad to those who see bad in it. We make our world. To those who live in a world of pure thoughts, and whose strength and solace in life is in noble deeds, the past, with the numerous saints who lived in it, is at one's very door. It is nearer to one than one would imagine. Their deeds and their experiences find a record not merely in our brains, but they evoke a living response in the hearts of the self-consecrated, and in the unfathomed depths of the soul, in unbroken stillness and calm, the past and the present are firmly knit, nay, time and space are transcended, and the Eternal and Infinite alone remain.

Total Prohibition. The Secretary, South India United Church, Calicut, (Malabar District) writes to us:—"At its meeting on the 29th ult., the South India United Church unanimously passed the following resolution which has been communicated to the Government of India through the Government of Madras. I shall be very glad if you will give publicity to the fact in the columns of your valuable paper. "In view of the fact of the great movements against the use of intoxicants in various countries of the world, the General Assembly of the South India United Church, in meeting assembled, requests the Government of India to place such restrictions upon the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicants as will lead to the total prohibition of the traffic." The South India United Church is a body of Indian Christian and European Missionaries numbering nearly 200,000 souls. Representatives came to this meeting of the Assembly from all parts of the Madras Presidency, Mysore, Travancore and Ceylon."

AN APPEAL.

THE LATE RAO BABADUR

K. Veeresalingam Pantulu's Memorial.

Born on the 16th of April 1848 and after having led a strenuous life for the uplift and regeneration of the country in various fields of activity, social, moral, religious, literary and educational, Rao Bahadur K. Veeresalingam Pantulu passed away at Madras on the 27th of May 1919 in the 78th year of his age.

There can be no doubt that his was a soul that would have adorned and enlightened any country or nationality. Born at a time when Hindu Society was undergoing radical and organic changes, owing to the spirit of western enlightenment and civilisation his heart throbbed with anxiety for the future of his country and set himself to work for its regeneration.

He was the pioneer of Social Reform and of Widow Remarriage Movements in Southern India, which he started in the year 1881 and for which he worked with single-minded devotion, earnestness of purpose and sincerity of conviction. Armed with conscience and courage, he manfully combated with obnoxious institutions and customs, tried to put down corruption in official life and elevated the tone of morality of the people both by his writings and preachings. Among the former may be mentioned the paper called "The Vivekavardhani" started by him wherein he relentlessly exposed the foibles and weaknesses of the Hindu Society. By his efforts, child marriages and nautch parties were discouraged, female education was popularised and depressed classes were raised from the thralldom of ignorance.

He was the master of a good, easy, simple and clear style in Telugu and was rightly known as the father of modern Telugu Prose. He wrote simple treatises in Telugu on a variety of subjects, such as Astronomy, Zoology, Physiology and other scientific subjects, with the object of diffusing knowledge among the masses. He was well-versed in the art of satire which he largely used for putting down vice, corruption and social evils. His literary works were compiled and published in ten volumes.

He started a Widows' Home and gave the inmates free boarding, lodging and education. The Town Hall built by him and dedicated to the Public of Rajahmundry, the Veeresalingam Theistic Library, the Prayer Hall at Rajahmundry, and the Veeresalingam High School at Rajahmundry, the Social Reform Association Buildings at Madras, the Bangalore City Brahma Samaj Buildings in addition to the gift of all his properties worth about Rs. 45,000 in trust to the Hithakarini Samaj for charitable purposes, speak volumes of his philanthropy and large-heartedness.

The key-note of Veeresalingam Pantulu's greatness is his passionate and strong abiding religious and moral sense. He started the Theistic Movement by founding the Prayer Samaj in 1878 and preaching the religion of the one True and Supreme God.

Veeresalingam Pantulu is the greatest man born in the Telugu country during the last century. His strong iron will, his undaunted courage, his complete self-sacrifice, his sincerity of conviction and earnestness of purpose, his ambition to give out the best in him for the service of the country, his fearless and disinterested patriotism, regulated and sustained by a keen sense of duty, his bold and intrepid stand against social persecution, his feeling for the weak and the depressed, make him stand out in bold relief to the rest of his countrymen. Such is the man whom we should honor and revere and whose memory we are to keep green by raising a suitable memorial.

At a meeting of the citizens of Rajahmundry, after his demise, it was resolved to raise a memorial to perpetuate his memory, and a strong executive committee was formed to carry it out. At a meeting of the Memorial Executive Committee held on 26-6-19 it was resolved to collect funds for the purpose of raising a statue of Rao Bahadur K. Veeresalingam Pantulu and maintaining the institutions started by him.

It is, therefore, proposed to collect a sum of Rs. 50,000 for carrying out the aforesaid objects, and the Committee is sending forth this appeal in the full confidence that it will meet with an adequate response from not only the friends and admirers of Pantulu's Guru, but also from the generous public to whom the memory of the late Rao Bahadur K. Veeresalingam Pantulu is equally dear.

23-7-19.
Rajahmundry,

R. PAPAYYA,
P. GURUMURTI,
Secretaries.

The Veeresalingam Memorial Committee.

N. B:- All donations to be remitted to the Treasurer,
M. R. Ry. P. Sundarasiva Rao Pantulu
Garu, B. A., B. L. High Court Vakil, Rajahmundry.

"THE LIGHT OF INDIA."

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer,
Sir,

The heading of this paper forms the title of a book by Mr. Harold Begbie in which he has vehemently attacked Hinduism in very offensive terms. The book teeming, as it does, with the most offensive expressions the writer could invent, and seething with the most carping criticisms of Hinduism, marks the climax of Christian hostility towards the great religion of India. The contents of the book do not justify the title chosen by the writer; it is a misnomer to call a book like that, "The Light of India" which places before the Indian youth the darkest picture of Hinduism with a bright setting of Christianity with a view to stigmatise the one and heighten the other. The book would have been better entitled, "The Light of Christianity" or "The Light of the West." However ironically the writer may have chosen the title for his insidious purpose, the Indian youth can not fail to detect behind it a thought for self-complacency that the darkness of India appears light to Mr. Begbie, which enhances the value of India's religion whose truer light if the writer had seen would have surely blinded his vision.

Before turning to the main discussion of the subject I wish to make a few quotations from his book which go to prove the validity of the above remarks. To begin with, "Hinduism is a weltering chaos of terror, darkness and uncertainty, a religion without the apprehension of a moral evolution, without a moral code, without definite commandments and without a God. The spiritualization of India is the most material and childish superstitions animalism that ever masqueraded as idealism. The Hindu Gods are wicked and abominable; prostitution is a means of financing many of the temples. The stories related of Krishna's life, says one authority, are more than any one else to destroy the morals and corrupt the Hindu youth." On the other hand he regards, "Christianity's cleansing morality in a country ensconced by appalling vices a supreme need." He flatters himself with the vain belief that "Hinduism is now a child destroying the idols which were once its toys" but laments the absence of "the sign of the Cross on its forehead." "Christianity," he says, "has begun to marginalise Hinduism but it has not spiritualized it. The victory of Christ in India is the victory of freedom, of virtue, of elevation, as well as of moral grandeur. Christ stands in the history of mankind absolutely alone and unchallengeably supreme as the Light of the World." These quotations amply evidence the entire superiority of the writer's religion to which he assigns an unchallengeably high moral value, an exclusively high spirituality and which he regards as free from idolatry and superstition.

Mr. Begbie has disproportionately devoted more than a half of his book to the various stories of Bhils and Doms becoming converts to Christianity with too much of petty detail repetition which are apt to become cloying and repulsive, vainly believing to be asserting thereby the strength of Christianity as a religion of great spiritual force—a fact which I am inclined to think rather detracts from his argument than adds any strength to it. These stories purely serve to disclose the weakness of Christianity clearly to an Indian youth.

Turning to the subject of idolatry the blame cannot be entirely laid at the door of Hinduism. No religion of the world is entirely free from some form or semblance of it. What do the Cross and various pictures in the churches stand for? Do they not symbolise the idea of God? then what other purpose do they serve? In this connection I would point out an inaccuracy of facts which Mr. Begbie betrays when he says that Brahma is not worshipped by the Hindus and that no temple has been raised to this God. It might be known that the Brahma is the great Guru of the Hindus whose name is the first word that passes the lips of the Hindus in all the devotional prayers they do and that temple at Pushkar in Rajputana is raised to this God. It is not clear why Mr. Begbie pretends ignorance of this fact or it may be that he does not know it at all.

In conclusion I cannot but remark that it is inhuman to call this religion good, that religion bad, these morals decent, those abominable, for every country has its own religion and morals peculiar to its people. What is good in the eyes of one is bad in the eyes of another. Every country must learn the modern method of "sympathetic treatment of other's religion and respect its own." No religion of the world can claim an exclusive superiority and freedom from flaws. But the key to the enigma, why India of all the countries of the world has been most subject to such cultural attacks, is to be found in the words of that able Sir John Woodroffe who in his book, "Is India Civilized"—which forms an answer to all the books of the kind under review and which Mr. Begbie would do well to study for himself—has rightly remarked that the institutions of a coloured people particularly of a politically subservient one are very likely to appear inferior to those without understanding and freedom from prejudice."

Morar, Gwalior.

C. H. ZUTSHI.

[We have omitted long passages from the above in which Mr. Zutshi dealt with Christianity after the manner of Mr. Begbie with Hinduism. Mr. Begbie does not deserve this sincerest form of flattery.—Ed. I.S.R.]

As it has been brought to the notice of Government that the Kartiki Ekadashi Fair will be held at Pandharpur in November next, it is hereby notified for general information that owing to the need of military traffic, the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company cannot arrange for additional passenger or special trains for pilgrims proceeding to and from the said Fair. Intending pilgrims are therefore warned not to undertake the journey on this occasion.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postages
In advance. In arrears.

Per annum..... Rs. 5—0—0. Rs. 6—0—0.

Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, twelve
hillings (Rs. 6).

Single copies of the current year can be had at 4
annas each and any back copies at 6 annas each.

DO YOU WISH TO KNOW YOUR

"FUTURE"

Send your time and date of birth or your star and age or note the time when you write the letter, you will be given a full reading of your life or one year to come for ONE RUPEE ONLY.

Mr. Ghazanfar Muhammad Khan, Deputy Collector, writes from Moradabad City. "The one year life reading you sent me proved to be QUITE TRUE."

THE KALINGA ASTROLOGICAL BUREAU,
24-8-19. Chodavaram, Vizagapatam District.

MATRIMONIAL

Wanted—for a highly accomplished and educated (English and Hindi) Kayastha girl of 16 from upper India, a suitable Kayastha match of any sub-section. Apply A. C. C/O The Indian Social Reformer, Bombay.

"Wanted :—Employment, as teacher or governess, by an educated Brahman widow with midwifery training and medical practice, well-versed in music and the Vina; proficient in English, Sanskrit, Telugu and Canarese, and speaking Tamil and Hindustani nols. Please apply to K. R. C/o. The Indian Social Reformer, Bombay." 21.9.19.

GALE'S MAGAZINE.

Linn A. E. Gale, Editor and Publisher.

Champion of Socialism, New Thought, Occultism,
Internationalism and Birth Control

Contains such articles as :

"The Birth Pangs of Revolution"

"The World That Is To Be"

"The Psychic Meaning of the War"

"Judas Iscariot and the Bolsheviki"

"Are We Hypnotized?"

The only Advanced Thought Magazine in English in Mexico. A Journal That is Indispensable to All Who Want to Understand the Signs of the Times.

$ 2 a year, American money. $ 1 for 6 months.
20c. a copy. No Free Samples. Remit by bank
raft on New York or personal check.

GALE'S MAGAZINE,

P. O. Box 518

21.9.19.

Mexico City, D. F., Mexico.

"COMMERCE AND INDUSTRIES."

An Interesting Monthly Journal of Indian
Material Progress.

Annual Subscription Rs. 10.0 and Single Copy
Re. 1 Post Free.

A Specially valuable advertising Medium.

Wanted Agents throughout India.

Address :—P. Box. No. 353, and 5 Mount Road
Madras S. C. 12-10-19.

THE TATA INDUSTRIAL BANK, LD.

HEAD OFFICE, BOMBAY.

BRANCHES—CALCUTTA and HYDERABAD (Deccan)
CANNORE and LUCKNOW.

Sub-Branches.—

Bombay—Share Bazaar, Shroff Bazaar,

Calcutta—Bara Bazaar.

London Agents. LLOYDS BANK LIMITED.

NEW YORK AGENTS: THE GUARANTY
TRUST COY. OF NEW YORK.

AUTHORIZED CAPITAL... Rs. 12,00,00,000.

SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL..... " 7,56,00,225.

PAID UP CAPITAL..... " 1,50,99,225.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Sir D. J. Tata, Kt., Chairman.

Sir Sassoon David, Bart.

Sir R. N. Mookerjee, K. C. L. E.

Sir Francis Stewart, Kt.

Sir Henry Proctor, Kt.

R. D. Tata, Esq.

F. E. Dinshaw, Esq.

F. C. Rimington, Esq.

Narottam Morarjee, Esq.

Hajee Gulam Mahomed Ajam, Esq.

The Hon'ble Mr. Parshottamdas Thakordas, C. I. E.

A. J. Billimoria, Esq.

Secretary, R. H. Parker.

Current Accounts opened and interest allowed on daily credit balances from Rs. 500/- to Rs. 1,00,000/- at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum. If the balance to the credit of any account does not fall below Rs. 25,000/- at any time between 1st January and 30th June, interest will be allowed during that period at 2½ per cent. per annum. No interest is allowed unless the sum accrued amounts to Rs. 8/- Half-yearly.

Fixed Deposits. Interest allowed on Deposits fixed for one or two years and for shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank. Interest allowed on Savings Bank Accounts at 4 per cent per annum. Rules may be obtained on application.

Loans and Cash Credits are granted on approved securities.

Purchases and sales of Securities and shares effected.

Bills of Exchange purchased and collected and every description of Banking and exchange business undertaken.

14-4-18. J. PAGAN DALZELL Acting Manager.

THE YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK, LIMITED.

(Registered in Japan.)

Established 1880.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 48,000,000.

Paid up Capital.....Yen. 42,000,000.

Reserve Fund.....Yen. 23,100,000.

Head Office:—Yokohama.

Branches and Agencies at Bombay, Buenos Aires, Calcutta, Changchun, Chi-Nan, Dairen, Fengtien, Hankow, Harbin, Hongkong, Honolulu, Kaiyuan, Kobe, London, Los Angeles, Lyons, Manila, Nagasaki, Newchwang, New York, Osaka, Peking, Rangoon, San Francisco, Seattle, Shanghai, Shimonoseki, Singapore, Soerabaya, Sydney, Tientsin, Tokio, Tsingtao.

Current Deposit Accounts are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at the rate of 2 per cent per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 100,000, provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of banking and exchange business transacted.

N. IGARASHI,

Post Box No. 207, Hornby Road, Bombay.

I. NISHIMAKI,

Manager, Calcutta.

1-12-17.

Post Box No. 406, Clive street, Calcutta

THE BANK OF BARODA, LD.

Under the Patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja Gaekwar.

Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897

HEAD OFFICE BARODA.

Branches—Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, and Surat

Capital Subscribed... ..Rs. 60,00,000.

Capital Paid up " 20,00,000.

Reserve Fund " 12,50,000.

DIRECTORS :

The Hon'ble Mr. Lalubhai Somaldas, C. I. E., Chairman
Sir Vithaldas Damodar Thackersey, Kt.

Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhatti Nagar Sheth,
Baroda.

Sheth Manilal Revadas, Vadnagar.

Rao Bahadur Gunajirao R. Nimbalkar, Sar Sabha, Baroda
State.

Bhaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., Advocate, High Court
Bombay.

M. H. Kantavalla, Esq., Agent, Maharaja Mill Co., Ltd.
Baroda.

R. R. Shirgaokar, Naib Sabha, Baroda State.

A. N. Datar, Accountant General, Baroda State.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balance from Rs. 500 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest which does not come to Rs. 8 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application. C. E. BANDLE,—General
15-4-12. Manager.

THE CENTRAL BANK OF INDIA, LTD

Subscribed Capital... ..Rs. 50,00,000

Paid Up Capital" 25,00,000

Reserved liability of

Shareholders" 25,00,000

Reserve Fund" 6,00,000

Head Office:—Alice Building, Bombay.

Local Branches:—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri,
Bazar, (3) Share Bazar.

Branches:—Amritsar, Calcutta, Delhi, Jharin,
Karachi.

London Agents:—London Joint City and Midland Bank, Ltd.

Current Accounts:—3 % allowed on Daily
Balances from Jan-
nary to June
2½ % allowed on Daily
Balances from
July to December.

12 months Deposits received at 5 % per annum.

Long and Short period Deposits received at rates
to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking Business transacted.

For further particulars please apply to the
Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA,

Manager,

25-2-17

THE BANK OF TAIWAN, LTD.

Incorporated by Special Charter of the Imperial Japanese Government, 1899.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 30,000,000
Paid-up CapitalYen. 22,500,000
Reserve FundYen. 5,680,000

Head Office:—Taipeh, Formosa.

BRANCHES:—

LONDON	SHANGHAI	TOKIO
NEW YORK	HONGKONG	OSAKA
AMOY	SINGAPORE	KOBE
CANTON	SOERABAJA	YOKOHAMA
FOOCHOW	SEMARANG	AKO
HANKOW	MAKUNG	GIBAN
KIUKIANG	BATAVIA	KAGI
SWATOW	PINAN	KARENKO
TAINAN	SHINCHIKU	KEELUNG
TAKOW	TAICHU	TAMSUI

The Bank has also a large number of Correspondents at Home and Abroad.

Current Deposit Accounts—are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at 2 per cent. per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 1,00,000 provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of Banking and Exchange business transacted.

K. TAKEMURA

Manager

9-12-17.

66, Esplanade Road, Fort, BOMBAY

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

Established 7th September 1906.

Incorporated under the Indian Companies' Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE:

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.

Capital Subscribed Rs. 1,00,00,000

Capital Called up " 50,00,000

Reserve Fund " 15,00,000

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½% p. a. throughout the year. On sums exceeding Rs. 1,00,000 interest is allowed by special arrangement. No interest will be allowed which does not amount to Rs. 8 per half year.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short periods @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

"Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application".

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, & CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stocks at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

H. P. STRINGFELLOW,

15-1-11.

Manager.

A Lady's Best Ornament is a Glorious Head of Hair.

A profusion of rich, soft silky, lustrous, wavy hair—where's the woman who would not like that?

There's only one oil that makes such hair and it's the far-famed

KAMINIA OIL (Regd.)

Invaluable for ladies, and just as much for Brain-Workers and Students.

Heated head cooled, aching disappears and dandruff becomes a thing of the past. Added to all these it possesses a beautiful fragrant smell.

For superiority, awarded a Gold Medal at the Mysore Exhibition, and in great demand all over the country.

If you have not yet used KAMINIA OIL, you

have missed a fine delight and a real boon; use it now, if only once; and like many people you will prefer to use also always

Price per bottle, Re. 1. V. P. Charges 6 annas extra

Price for 3 bottles Rs. 2-10. V. P. charges 14 annas extra

Write now, Do not delay.

Sole Agents:—

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,
(5-8-16) No. 155, Jamma Masjid Market, BOMBAY.

Now-a-Days.

All things have advanced in price. Even the vegetable ingredients used in our Atank Nigrah Pills have advanced in price.

Even the labourers demand heavy wages being dearer. Even the users have increased yet the Atank Nigrah Pills for Toning up the system are sold at before war price i. e. at a Rupee.

Valdy Shastri

Manishanker Govindji,

Atank Nigrah Pharmacy,

Head Office:—Jamnagar—Kathiawar.

Branch:—Kalbadevi Road, Bombay.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours. Publish Fine Art Pictures, & c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.
1-12-10. HIGH CLASS FRAME MARKS-

ROYAL TONIC PILLS.

Powerful Nutritious and Strength Restorer. Price Re. 1-4 per tin of 30 Pills.

PREPARED BY—GOVINDJEE DAMODER & Co.,

Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Commission Agents.
1-12-10. No. 3 Sutar Chawl Market, BOMBAY.

Timely advice to the Wealthy

Costly but certain remedies are in the long run cheaper than cheap and uncertain ones.

KANDARPA SANJIVINI PILLS AND OIL

are the safest and surest remedies for indigestion, constipation, loss of appetite, memory, mental, physical and nervous debility and all sorts of urinary disorders, improve impoverished blood.

Price per tin of 40 Pills Rs. 5 & per tola of Oil Rs. 10.

Both Purchased at a time Rs. 11/4—

Medical Advice and a Medical Book containing 128 pages sent Gratis and Post Free.

RAJ VAIDYA NARAYANJI KESHAVJI

Head Office :—Jamnagar, Kathiawar, (India.)

Branch :—No. 187, Kalbadevi Road,
24-8-1919. BOMBAY.

Empire Hindu Hotel

Opposite Victoria Terminus
Bombay.

(Central Situation)
Strictly Vegetarian
Charges Moderate

Fitted with
Electric Lift, Fans and Lights.

TELEGRAMS: } TELEPHONE

"FOOD," BOMBAY. } 2789.

22-8-19.

Saffron ? Saffron ?? Saffron ???
If you wish to buy genuinely pure and best Saffron it is

SUN

BRAND  SAFFRON

ONLY

It has been largely used by Jain Temples, Maharajas Durbars, Hakims and Vaidyas all over the country for the last 75 year and is well known for its purity and genuineness.

S. NARAEN & Co.,

17-2-18

21, Humnum Street, Fort Bombay.

SHORTHAND

Like Other Arts and Sciences, Shorthand is subject to the Law of Progress. Based on greatly improved scientific analogical principles, the Sloan-Duployan system (contained in a compass of 12 lessons) saves a year's laborious study, ensuring highest efficiency and speediest results. Shorthand is the open-door to many well-paid positions, at any rate it will mean advancement for you. Expert Instructors or Postal Instructions for a fixed fee, payable in easy monthly instalments. Speed Classes Conducted. Specialised Training Guaranteed. Enclose stamp for booklet, etc.
CENTRAL CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE,
G. P. O. Box No. 424, Bombay.

"EVERYTHING FOR EVERYBODY"

National Standard Portable Typewriter No. 3 (10 lbs.) Rs. 19
Oliver No. 6 (American Rebuilt) B.S. & Tab. Re. 175; No. 7 " 20
" " 3 (Second-hand) in thorough working order. " 12
Empire No. 1 (Do.) in good working order. " 8
Multikopy Typewriter Carbons, per Box of 100 sheets. " 3
Webster Brand " Ribbons for all machines, Doz. " 2
Typewriter Oil (best 1 oz. bot.) or Eberhard Erasers, Doz. " 1
Safety Razor, Rivals Gillette, with 6 Gillette Blades (best) " 1
Do. (Made in U.S.A.) with 3 spare blades, Set " 1
Portable Electric Battery & lamp (burns 200 hours) compl. " 3
Envelope Making Machine (to make 30,000 per day), New " 3
Full Jewelled Lever Watch (Square or Octagon) Silver " 3
Conklin's Self filling Fount Pen (non-leakable) Gold nib " 1
UNIVERSAL BUSINESS SYNDICATE,
20-4-19. Post Box No. 424, Bombay.

HYPNOTISM

PERSONAL MAGNETISM,
WILL POWER,
NERVE FORCE—

Call what you will—

Is the intangible power that controls human destiny. It is the key to all business and social success. This power is no special gift of any one. It is latent in every one. We help you how to display it. By our system, you can learn in a few days at your own home and not only achieve success yourself, but you can influence the mind, health and actions of others to a remarkable.

Write immediately for our free booklet—The Pride of India.

THE LATENT LIGHT CULTURE,
TINNEVELLY, S. INDIA.

Batilwala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 1 each bottle of 100.

Batilwala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 2 each bottle of 100.

Batilwala's Ague Mixture of Fever, Malaria, influenza etc.

Batilwala's Ague Pills for Malaria, Fever, influenza etc.

Batilwala's Tonic pills for pale people & nervous breaks down.

Batilwala's Tooth Powder of Preserving Teeth

Batilwala's Ringworm ointment for Ringworm Dhobi Itch etc.

May be had from all dealers in medicines or from

Dr. H. L. Batilwala Sons & Co., Ltd.

No. 12, World, 19, Bombay.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESS :— " Doctor Batilwala Dadar

THE BOMBAY CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK.

HEAD OFFICE :—Apollo Street, St., Bombay.

DIRECTORS :—The Hon. Sir Fasalbhoy Currimbhoy (Chairman), Sir Vithaldas D. Thackersey, the Hon. Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas, Sir Stanley Reed, the Hon. Mr. C. V. Mehta, the Chief of Ichalkaranji, G.K. Devadbar, Esq., the Hon. Sir P. D. Pattani, the Raja Sahab of Malegaon.

Share Capital (fully paid)Rs. 7,00,000

1 Deposits fixed for one year and shorter or longer periods are accepted. Rates and other particulars may be ascertained from the under signed.

2 The Bank finances only registered Co-operative Societies in the Bombay Presidency on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency.

3. Accounts are audited half-yearly by a special Government Auditor, and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the "Bombay Government Gazette."

20-5-17. VAIKUNTH L. MEHTA, Manager.

Clean
Wholesome
Intelligent
Entertainment

IS A GREAT STEP

IN

SOCIAL REFORM.

When deciding on a

PLACE OF AMUSEMENT TWO
ESTABLISHMENTS

Should at once leap to the mind.

THE EXCELSIOR
BOMBAY'S PREMIER MODERN THEATRE

AND

THE EMPIRE
BOMBAY'S MOST PALATIAL
PICTURE THEATRE

Where Film Plays of Distinction are shown
Every Week.

A

Great Cinema Masterpiece

is shown,

Both theatres are near the Bori Bunder

and are run by the

EXCELSIOR SYNDICATE.

The Pioneer of Bombay's

AMUSEMENT WORLD.

FURUKAWA & CO.

TOKIO

The Largest Manufacturers
in the East

OF

ELECTRIC BARE COPPER CONDUCTORS,

ELECTRIC UNDERGROUND CABLES,

ELECTRIC INSULATED WIRES,

ELECTRIC ACCESSORIES,

INGOTS, RODS, WIRES,

COILS, SHEETS, TUBES, FOLDS,

Etc., Etc.,

SOLE AGENTS IN INDIA AND BURMA.

TATA, SONS & CO.,

BOMBAY & CALCUTTA.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS Ltd.

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.

Navsari Building, Fort, BOMBAY.

Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

11-8-17.

When YOUR EYES

need to be examined by QUALIFIED OCULISTS or by SCIENTIFIC REFRACTIONISTS of 26 year experience, FREE OF CHARGE, you cannot do better than GO TO

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR & CO.

The leading firm of Oculists, Eyesight Specialists, Manufacturing Opticians and suppliers of the patented

"KRYPTOK"

(Invisible one-piece bifocal lens.)

Toric, and all kinds of lenses.—Cylindrical, Spherical, cylindrical, Prismatic, &c., from pebbles as well as from best quality crown glass.

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR

Eyesight Specialist,

With 26 Years' Practical Experience.,

Holds Exceptional Testimonials from H. H. The Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, the Hon'ble Sir Lawrence Jenkins the Hon. Mr. Justice Batty, Mrs. Batty, the Hon. Sir N. S. Chaudavarkar, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beaman, the Hon'ble Sir S. L. Bachelor, the Hon'ble Sir John Heaton Mr. H. G. Bell, M. V. O., Col. R. H. Forman, B. A. M. C., P. M. O. Bo. Brigade, Lieut. Col. G. H. Bull, M. D., I. M. S., Lieut. Colonel Peters M. B., I. M. S. and other high personages.

(7) 379, HORNBY ROW,

Opposite the Government Telegraph Office,

42-11-10.

Fort, BOMBAY.

INTENDING ASSUREES ARE INVITED TO COMPARE THE RATES AND CONDITIONS OF

The Empire of India Life Assurance Company, Limited.

WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.

Head Office 11 Elphinstone Circle, BOMBAY.

SEE REPORT AND OPINIONS OF THE PRESS AS TO THE REMARKABLE PROGRESS MADE BY THE COMPANY.

ENDOWMENT NON-FORFEITABLE POLICY FOR RS. 3,000.

PAYABLE AT AGE 60 OR AT DEATH, IF PREVIOUS, WITH PROFIT.

If, at any time, the assured under this plan should desire to cease paying any more premiums, he can obtain a paid-up Policy for such a proportion of the original sum assured as the number of premiums paid bears to the number agreed upon (thus a gentleman who had assured at age 20 for a Policy of Rs. 3,000 payable at age 60 or at Death, if previous, after 5 year payments, would be entitled to a Free paid-up Policy for Rs. 500 free of future payments.

MONTHLY PREMIUM.

AT AGE 20, Rs. 5-9-0.

AT AGE 25, Rs. 7-8-0.

AT AGE 30, Rs. 9-14-0.

AT AGE 35, Rs. 10-13-0.

AT AGE 40, Rs. 12-12-0.

AT AGE 45, Rs. 13-10-0.

SOME OF THE DISTINCTIVE FEATURES.

- Funds invested in Government Securities and in accordance with the Indian Trusts Act
- Policy holders can appoint their own Directors.
- 90 per cent. of Profits to Participating Policy holders.
- Lapsed policies revived without Medical Certificate.
- Liberal Surrender Values 40 per cent. of the Tabular premium paid.
- Immediate payment of Claims.
- Medical fees and stamps on Policies are payable by the Company.
- The sum assured is PAYABLE IN FULL should death occur even immediately after payment of the first premium.

GUARANTEED INSURANCE—This Company issues Guaranteed Policies in situation of trust and responsibility, specially authorized to guarantee the employes of the Post Office

Proposal Forms and full Particulars may be obtained from any local Agent in India or from ALLUM, BHARUCHA & CO. Managers.

IN INDIA.

EVERY ONE KNOWS, whom it does concern that we are foremost in supplying the best COSSI SILK SUIT PIECES available for the season. These pieces are strong, fancy and durable, and have been specially manufactured for India markets. Each piece guaranteed for One Suit Complete.

Price Rs. 10 per piece.

Write to—THE BHARGAVA COMMERCIAL SOCIETY, 2-16, Bazaar City.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER. Contract Rates for Advertisements.

Number of insertions.	1 Inch.		2 Columns.		3 Columns.		Page.
	Rs.	As.	Rs.	As.	Rs.	As.
13	11	0	16	0	20	0	87	0
26	16	0	25	0	30	0	87	0
52	25	0	38	0	50	0	155	0

Casual advertisements at As. 4 per line for the 1st insertion and As. 2 per line for succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

WONDERFUL TONIC AND

MOUTH-REFRESHER

JINTAN.

This is a safe and efficient remedy in all kinds of diseases or disturbances of the digestive organs. It is composed entirely of VEGETABLE INGREDIENTS made from the prescription of the following eminent medical men viz:—
NORHIRO MIWA, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy,
ZENJIRO INOUE, M. D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy
 and testified as to its efficacy by
Baron J. MATSUMOTO, M. D., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Army.

T. MITAMURA Esq., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Navy.

As a digestive it is unequalled and will not disturb the functions of the most delicate stomach. Its antiseptic properties render it very efficacious in warding off disease and at the same time it imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath of the user.

By virtue of its aroma, it effectually masks the odour of Tobacco and Alcoholic Spirits.

It acts beneficially on the vocal cords and has found much favour with public speakers, actors, singers and those whose vocation necessitates a severe strain on the throat.

GOOD FOR

Biliousness, Headache, Vertigo, Nausea, Indigestion, Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, etc., etc.

To maintain general health 2 to 3 pills may be taken occasionally, well masticated.

Price—20 Pills Packet Rs. 0-1-0. 90 Pills Packet, with Tin case, Rs. 0-4-0. 880 pills Packet with fancy case, Rs. 1-0-0

Prepared by Messrs. MORISHITA Co., OSAKA, JAPAN.

Sole Agents: Jintan Agency (G. R. Chaubal), Juma Masjid. BOMBAY.

At each opening 2 pills come here automatically.

FOR PAINS AND ACHE
SPRAINS ETC.
USE:—

AMRUTANJAN.

The magical pain balm extant. Cures all aches & pains. Costs 8 As. Sold everywhere.

By Appointment to H. E. the Governor
 Sir George Sydenham Clarke of
 Bombay.

HARIDAS VALJI,

(KING OF INDIAN CONFECTIONERS)

Highest Confectioner, Caterer and Grand
 Military Contractor.

Proprietor—RATINATH,

Chitra Bazar & Grant Road,

BOMBAY.

20-4-19.

DENTISTRY.

Extractions Painless;
 Terms Very Moderate;
 Gold Crown, Bar and
 Bridge Work a Speciality
 (teeth without plate);
 Latest Successful Treatment
 for Pyorrhoea (pus in gums).

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

Hours: 8-1-30 & 5-7-30; Daily.

(Sundays—From 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.)

ADDRESS BUILDING,
 NEW CHANDI ROAD,
 GROUND, BOMBAY, 1-4-19.

H. R. AMAT,
 Surgeon Dentist.

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY MORNING.

Office—EMPIRE BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD, FORT.

Editor—K. NATARAJAN.

Vol. XXX. BOMBAY—SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1919. No. 10.

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard."
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

The Russian Kaleidoscope.
Total Prohibition in the United States.
Sir Michael O'Dwyer's Evidence before the Joint Committee.
Religion and Social Reform. Who is a Sikh.
Lord Sinha's Speeches.
The State and the People.
The Bombay High Court and Satyagrahi Lawyers.
The Chiefs' Conference.
Veracity, Eastern and Western.

The Aborigines of Chhota Udepur.
University Settlements in England.
Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee and Muzzoni.
Literature in the Nizam's Dominions.
Sir Abdur Rahim on the Calcutta University Commission Report.
Literature on Industrial Welfare.
A Charity Performance.

NOTES.

The Russian Kaleidoscope: For several weeks past, Reuter's telegrams continued to announce that the Bolsheviks were beaten on all sides and that their utter annihilation was only a question of a few days. A message of the 28th October stated that the fall of Petrograd was regarded as inevitable. General Yudenitch had informed the Times correspondent at Helsingfors that he would be in Petrograd in a fortnight. The British monitor, Arbus, was bombarding the Krasnaja Gorka with two 15 inch guns, outranging the guns of the fortress which, it was hoped, would soon fall. On October 30th we were informed that a telegram to the Morning Post from Helsingfors says Yudenitch's entire operations have failed, and it is feared that the retreating army may be driven into the swamps west and south of Gatchina, which is apparently the Bolshevik plan. It is now certain that Finland will not assist Yudenitch, fearing that the triumph of Koltchak, Denikin, and Yudenitch would threaten Finland's national existence. Another message of the same date states that it is now undoubted that Yudenitch has suffered a setback which is specially serious in view of the rapid approach of the winter. It is reported in Helsingfors that he has abandoned Gatchina and withdrawn the whole line, which is now four miles from Gatchina six from Tsarskoesele, and five from Krasnoesele, and he has little chance of securing a favourable base for renewing his attacks. The Bolshevik wireless claims successes against Denikin and says risings have broken out throughout the Ukraine and are spreading to Poltava and Ekaterinoslav. Denikin's troops are fiercely fighting Makno's brigands, who have reached Kherson from the Crimea. The scene again shifts with startling rapidity. A message of the 1st November reports that, on the 31st October, at noon General Yudenitch had regained ground west of Petrograd and re-captured Ropsche, ten miles south of Peterhof. The gap between the right of the Estonians and the left, of Yudenitch's army south-west of Ropsche is now closed. The Bolsheviks continue to concentrate, especially south-west and south of Petrograd. Numerous Communist reinforcements are coming up from the South. A Helsingfors telegram dated the 1st says: General Yudenitch has appointed General Vladimirov Governor-General of Petrograd.

Total Prohibition in the United States: The amendment to the constitution of the United States adopting total prohibition of the manufacture and sale of liquor as an organic part of it, has been approved by the requisite majority of States, but it does not come into force till January next. Meanwhile the special war legislation establishing prohibition will expire as soon as the treaties of Peace are signed. A Bill to bridge over the intervening period was brought in and passed by Congress, but President Wilson vetoed it on the ground that the prolongation of war time prohibition should not be extended when the war has ended. With great respect to the President, we think this is nothing but a quibble in the face of the fact that the country had definitely accepted the principle as part of its constitution and that this will come into force in a few months' time. The President's veto could only operate as an advantage to those who are agitating to get the acceptance of total prohibition revoked. But Congress has boldly grappled with the situation, and has repassed the Bill over the President's veto by majorities in excess of the two thirds required to veto the veto. We confess that the President's action in this matter seems to have been inspired more with a view to spite Congress than to help the nation. After this decisive action of the representatives of the people, the allegation that the adoption of the policy of total prohibition is due to the action of wine-pullers and busybodies is no longer possible.

Sir Michael O'Dwyer's Evidence before the Joint Committee: India, the London organ of the Indian National Congress, rightly complains that, while the rule laid down by the Chairman, Lord Selborne, that all references to the actual administration of India, unrest, and so on, would be inadmissible, was strictly observed in the case of all other witnesses before the Joint Committee of Parliament on the Reform Bill, Sir Michael O'Dwyer was allowed to make allegations regarding the Punjab troubles. The aptness of our contemporary's complaint is accentuated by a comparison of some of Sir Michael O'Dwyer's statements with those made before the Hunter Committee at its two first sittings at Delhi by official witnesses. Sir Michael told the Joint Committee in reply to Lord Sydenham regarding the existence of an organised conspiracy behind the Punjab disturbances: "In fact, they found that the disturbances in the Punjab were very largely fomented by men who came from down country. Some of them, calling themselves Mr. Gandhi's men, came from Delhi, and Mr. Gandhi himself said that they were fomented by some very crafty educated men or men. It was their general impression in the Punjab that the Afghan invasion and those preparations were meant to synchronise and that emissaries were sent from Afghanistan to people who fomented the disturbances in the Punjab." In contrast to this, Mr. Orde, Superintendent of Police, who had been instructed by Government to make enquiries regarding the Delhi disturbances, told the Hunter Committee, in the course of his evidence, that he had originally thought that Delhi was responsible for the agitation in the adjoining (Punjab) districts of Magesh Gurgaon, Karnal, Ambala, Meerut &c. As a result of his special investigation, Mr. Orde found "no connection established between the local and outside agitators. If there was any connection, it was extremely vague." Again, "There was no indication that there was any connection between the Punjab and Delhi disturbances. Witness found no trace of Bolshevik influence behind the disturbances. The result of his investigations went to show that the causes were purely accidental." The next witness was Mr. C. A. Barron, Chief Commissioner of Delhi. Replying to Sir Chimanlal Setalvad, Mr. Barron said that he "generally agreed with the conclusions arrived at by Mr. Orde in his report that there was no evidence of any organised conspiracy. He did not suggest that anybody from Delhi stirred up the disturbances in the Punjab or vice versa. There was no evidence of tampering with the troops and alienating the police." Sir Michael O'Dwyer's asseverations are thus proved to be imaginary. It is by means of such loose statements that he endeavoured to prejudice the Joint Committee, and he was allowed to do so.

Religion and Social Reform: Sir Narayan Chandavarkar denounced in strong terms, at the service at the Prarthana Samaj last Sunday in memory of the late venerable Pandit Sivanath Sastry, the attitude of those who held that religion is an affair of the heart and had no concern with social reform and politics. He illustrated his argument from the life of Pandit Sastry. The Challenge, to which we often refer with pleasure, in the issue received last week, urges that religion alone can solve the great problems of the day in a wholly satisfactory manner and calls upon the Church to give up its isolation and to apply itself to the task of reconstruction. It concludes a striking article headed "The Strike and Alter," thus: "If the Church of Christ is faithful in bringing the Mind of its Master, in the power of His spirit, to bear upon the questions of the day, it will create in society a passion for justice, a hunger and thirst after righteousness, which will check the making of unreasonable demands and cause reasonable demands to be granted before they are even expressed. But it must then do more than commend reason and patience in general terms. It must read the signs of the times. It must become clear whether or not democracy is the will of God for our people and generation. It must resolutely think out what is involved in its answer to such a question and fearlessly proclaim the conclusions to which it is led. And to say that the Church must do this is first and foremost to say that each individual Christian is called to attempt this. It is not too much to say that next to the maintenance of personal communion with God the most urgent duty for the Christian to-day is to think, and think again what is implied for our civilisation by the teaching of Christ."

Who is a Sikh? That the concession of communal electorates will have a narrowing influence on social and religious matters, as Sir Sankaran Nair told the Joint Committee of Parliament, and crystallise class divisions, is evidenced by steps which the Chief Khalsa Diwan is taking to lay down a hard and fast definition of a Sikh. The following definition has been tentatively suggested in the columns of the Khalsa Advocate:—"A Sikh is he who believes in the Unity of God and Brotherhood of man and regards the ten Gurus and their very embodiment, Sri Guru Granth Sahib, as the only means of salvation and for religious conduct admits that for every Sikh it is essential to wear Keshas and that for an Amritdhari it is compulsory to observe complete Rohit—(injunctions)." It will be obviously out of the question for the officer preparing the roll of electors to examine each applicant in his beliefs and conduct in religious matters. The only part of the suggested definition which he can verify is the wearing of the Kesh. There is nothing, so far as we know, to prevent any person from wearing Kesh, if he desires to do so. Any attempt to use the communal electorates as an instrument of religious inquisition, will be rightly resented. Every one who claims to be a Sikh, Mahomedan, Indian Christian or Non-Brahmin, should be accepted as such in the absence of evidence to show that he is an impostor. The burden of proof should rest on those who question his bona fides. Any other course will be not only impracticable, but intolerable.

Lord Sinha's Speeches: Messrs. G. A. Natesan and Co., of Madras have brought out a volume of Lord Sinha's speeches and writings. A biographical sketch of forty pages is prefixed to the collection. The distinguished subject of the sketch made his first public speech in 1896 at the twelfth session of the Indian National Congress at Calcutta, proposing a resolution declaring that it was desirable that no Indian Prince or Chief should be deposed on the ground of maladministration or misconduct until the fact had been established to the satisfaction of a public tribunal so constituted as to command the confidence alike of Government and the Indian Princes and Chiefs. The next public speech is after an interval of fourteen long years, on the Press Act in the Indian Legislative Council as member of Lord Minto's Government. Lord Sinha evidently does not love to hear his own voice, for his next important public pronouncement was his presidential address to the National Congress in 1915. The volume prints in full Lord Sinha's memorandum on the treatment of Indians in the self-governing colonies, presented to the Imperial Conference in 1918. It also includes his maiden speech in the House of Lords in reply to one putting a question regarding the Katarpur riots by Lord Sydenham. For some reason, it was Lord Curzon and not Lord Sinha that moved for the Joint Committee in that House, though we remember to have read somewhere that Lord Sinha had come prepared to speak. This volume is priced Rs. three.

The State and the People. We have referred once before to Sir Abdur Rahim's convocation address at the Convocation of the Mysore University. There is a passage in it referring to the encouragement of the backward classes, which deserves notice. "When the State," said Sir Abdur Rahim, "is asked to play the role of a guardian of the people and not that of a mere watchful policeman, it has to take as much care of the slow and the backward of its wards as of the more vigorous and pushing ones, if not more. At the same time, the State would itself be a heavy loser if it failed to encourage intrinsic worth or talent simply because it happens to be more common in one community rather than in another." The last sentence enshrines a truth which is ignored in controversies regarding the claims of this or that community. We do not remember to have seen it enunciated with as much force and point by any other Indian publicist. We reprint in this issue, Sir Abdur Rahim's comments on the report of the Calcutta University Commission.

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1919.

THE BOMBAY HIGH COURT AND SATYAGRAHI LAWYERS.

Commenting on the judgments of the Full Bench of the High Court of Bombay in the case of the Satyagrahi lawyers of Ahmedabad, who had taken the vow of passive resistance on the passing of the Rowlatt Act and pledged themselves to civil disobedience of any law that a Committee appointed in that behalf by the passive resisters might name, the Madras Mail thinks that the Court has taken a "narrow" view of the question as affecting the members of the legal profession. The Mail instances the case of Mr. Lloyd George, with whom the High Court in England never thought of dealing for professional misconduct or breach of duty although some years ago he, though on the rolls of the Court as a Solicitor, publicly declared passive resistance to the Education Act then passed by Parliament. That is, perhaps, not by itself a conclusive ground to show that the view taken by the High Court of Bombay is necessarily wrong. In England, the utterances of politicians are not taken notice of in the way they are in India and dealt with by the authorities. The political atmosphere there is different from here. Those, however, who are familiar with the facts of English history and the ancient traditions of the British Bench and Bar, cannot dismiss the Madras Mail's instance as of no weight. The High Court's view that the lawyers concerned were guilty of a breach of their professional obligation, because as they lived by the law, they were bound to help and obey the law, does seem "narrow." The British tradition of the Bar is that its members do not, in the eye of the Court, live by the law. They are supposed to practise in the Courts for no remuneration. They cannot legally sue for professional services rendered. The question of their relation to the Courts and the nature and extent of the professional duty which that relation imposes upon them must be judged by the light of a higher fixed standard, if any, than that of mere livelihood provided by the profession de facto, but not de jure.

That higher standard must be familiar to all careful students of the history of the British Bench and Bar, and their traditions, the written and unwritten laws which have hallowed them as among the most important institutions of the British Commonwealth and Constitution. The High Courts of British India, to which our other Courts are subordinate, have been deliberately modelled on the principles and practice of His Majesty's High Courts in England, especially with reference to the familiar maxim as to the independence of the Bench and the Bar. That maxim is one of the offshoots of English history. That history tells us that up to the Revolution of 1688 in England, when the Bill of Rights became law, Parliament as the legislative power of the land, was regarded and as a fact acted not as the law-making but only as the law-declaring power, that is to say, it had jurisdiction only to declare laws which already existed in Nature as God's laws of justice and reason. And it was the Common Law Courts alone which had the supreme power of determining whether a law declared by Parliament and the King, was binding on His Majesty's subjects and must be obeyed by them as being a just statute according to God's laws, or whether it was void and could be disobeyed by a subject with impunity as being contrary to those laws. Thus Lord Coke, bigoted Tory as he was, did not shrink from telling the King to his face that the Common Law administered by the Court owned allegiance to a higher King, that is, God, and in Dr. Bonham's case he held that "the Common Law will control Acts of Parliament and adjudge them to be utterly void" where they are "against common right and reason." After the Revolution of 1688 and the Bill of Rights, Parliament changed from a law-declaring to a law-making power. From that period dates the maxim of the British Constitution that Parliament is the sovereign power for making laws and is omnipotent in that respect. Nevertheless, the other maxim that His Majesty's Courts have jurisdiction to declare a law void, still remains in force with this limitation, that those Courts, in exercising that jurisdiction, cannot proceed on the test which obtained previously as to whether a law passed by Parliament was in the opinion of the Court, contrary to God's laws of reason and justice and, therefore, liable to be declared by the Courts as void and not compelling obedience from the subjects. Short of that test, the Courts are the only power of the Commonwealth to decide what laws are valid and must be obeyed and what laws are void and may be with impunity disobeyed. That being the power of the Courts, it would seem to follow as a necessary corollary that the members of the Bar who are allowed to plead in those Courts, become members of the Courts bound by that power and therefore bound to recognise those Courts as the only authority in the Commonwealth to determine what laws shall be obeyed and what laws shall not be obeyed by the subject. A member of the Bar, therefore, undertakes in virtue of his profession, to respect and obey and abide by the power of the Courts as the only authority to whom he owes allegiance for the purpose of obeying and disobeying laws.

That, however, does not exhaust the case. There are some important considerations which arise necessarily from the corollary above stated. Is passive resistance, disobedience of law of such a kind as to conflict with the professional duty of a lawyer? For one thing, it cannot be said that there is any moral taint or culpability in it—nothing unprofessional in the sense of criminality or dishonesty or dishonour. All the taint that is said to be involved in passive resistance is that it is disobedience of the law, and that as such it creates a conflict with the professional duty of the lawyer. As to that, the element of disobedience is in substance no disobedience of law as such. A passive resister in effect obeys the law, because he voluntarily allows the law he objects to to take its course and willingly suffers its consequences. He commits no violence; resists by force no authority, but of his own will and accord submits to any treatment the law subjects him to. There is the example of Socrates and of Christ Jesus to prove that. And Indian Viceroy's have approved passive resistance as a lawful remedy against unjust laws. Further, the Bar under the British Constitution, has traditionally occupied a unique position. The independence of the Bar has become a familiar maxim of that Constitution. While, on the one hand, it owes professional allegiance to the Court; on the other, it is bound to the public in virtue of that allegiance to espouse its cause when it thinks a law unjust.

Laws are apt to prove, with the progress of society, hindrances to social progress and exigencies, which are always more or less in advance of law; and the public have, as has been said, a right to decide the issue between the higher, real law of social exigency and a timeworn shell of formal law. In so deciding, the Bar has been in England regarded as the proper guide, the bulwark of the people's rights and liberties. This tradition finds expression in Lord Morley's "Politics and History" where he speaks of "the shaken attitude towards law as law—even powerful lawyers speak of a statute as a cobweb." The political theory of Justice, that it is "a category created by the fiat of the State," has been slowly giving way to the view that "Justice is not made by statute but that it exists as a standard outside of legal rules." And this is confirmed by the present tendency of the Courts to revert to the old way of the British Courts which acted upon the principle of Lord Coke above cited. There was a time not long since when Judges used to speak of their function as one only to administer the law, not justice. But the present Lord Chief Justice of England said a short time ago that British Courts exist not to expound law but to administer justice, and that law is only a convention. This observation of Lord Reading's is not a casual remark—it is expressive of the modern tendency to regard Courts as empowered to administer God's justice and where they cannot, to say that the law is unjust and must be modified. The lawyer is now coming to be regarded not as a mere interpreter of law but as one whose duty is to help public opinion against unjust laws.—It is that which distinguished the independence of the Bar from that of the Bench. The former has more latitude than the latter in the interests of the growth of the idea of just laws. That is one of the traditional privileges of the Bar—hence the rule which supposes that a Barrister is not paid for his professional services and cannot sue for remuneration for services professionally rendered. The British law, recognised in India, regards a Barrister as one who does not live by the law.

If that is the standard of his duty, how can he be held guilty of professional misconduct because he resolved for civil disobedience to a law or advises his client in favour of such disobedience. So long as he does not commit violence or an act of dishonesty, so long civil disobedience cannot be regarded as disobedience of the law, because he does not resist the law; he voluntarily takes its consequences and thereby voluntarily and in effect obeys it. This view seems more in accordance with the traditional, historic status of the legal profession than the view taken by the Bombay High Court. And it accounts for the fact emphasised by the Madras Mail in its adverse comments on that Court's Judgment that Mr. Lloyd George's declaration some years ago that he was resolved to resist passively the Education Act passed by Parliament, was not taken notice of by the British High Court, although he belonged to the legal profession as a Solicitor and at one time practised in the Courts as such. The point is certainly one which calls for an authoritative decision of the Privy Council.

THE CHIEFS' CONFERENCE.

Except the opening address of the Viceroy, the speeches of His Highness the Maharaja of Bikaner on the Victory resolution, of His Highness the Jam of Navanagar proposing a resolution in high appreciation of the selection and the labours of the Maharaja of Bikaner as the representative of the Ruling Princes of India at the Peace Conference, and the latter's acknowledgment of it, nothing has been made public relating to the proceedings of the Chiefs' Conference held at Delhi last week. It is inevitable that His Excellency's formal address on an occasion of this kind should consist to some extent of general propositions. Apart from the jealousy with which the Princes regard any expression in public by the Head of the Government of India, which may be capable of being construed into a reflection on the internal affairs of their States, it is impossible for the most ingenious Viceroy to invent propositions which may be of equal interest to all the members of the Conference, differing from one another, as they do, in history, status and other conditions. Lord Chelmsford's address was not wanting in the commonplaces which are the current coin of ceremonial utterances. After a reference to the excellent rains, to the ruling Princes who died during the year, and to the successful end of the War to which Their Highnesses had contributed generously, His Excellency reminded the Princes of a new danger which threatened them and the Government of India alike. Said His Excellency :

There is a new spirit abroad in the world, impatient of restraint, prone to look upon order as tyranny, prosperity as profiteering, and expensiveness of living as the result of maladministration. This spirit, embittered by high prices, due partly to the failure of the last monsoon and partly to the diversion of the world's energies from production to destruction, excited by the downfall of the great Powers and encouraged by secret and subtle propaganda to think that anarchy means happiness and prosperity for all. This spirit is the most subtle and the greatest danger that has ever come upon mankind. The Indian States, perhaps, also India as a whole, are less likely than Europe to be primarily assailed, but sooner or later we may all be forced to repel the attack, whether it comes from without or within the body politic. The strongest weapon in the armoury of our defence is good government which, while inspired with sympathy for the legitimate aspirations of the people, is resolute at all times in the maintenance of public order. By this means only, can peace after war, safety after danger be secured. I must earnestly enjoin upon Your Highnesses to see to it that your armoury is well furnished in so far as concerns the peril of the Empire, for which you are responsible.

That is how it strikes Lord Chelmsford, Viceroy of India. The new spirit is capable of a more cheerful presentation, and the old spirit which sees in it a menace and a danger, may itself be described, by a mere substitution of terms, as impatient of freedom, prone to look upon manifestations of liberty as attacks on order, inflation of currency as the accession of fabulous wealth, enhancement of salaries as the criterion of good government. Our readers must make their choice between the two. In we respectfully suggest, to all persons in authority that the problem of good government demands vision.

Well roars the storm to those who hear
A deeper voice across the storm, and it is the statesman who listens and has an ear attuned to this deeper voice across the storm; who may hope to cope successfully with it. Otherwise, he may be sunk under the weight of his armour. We trust that Their Highnesses have not understood His Excellency to invite them to pass Rowlatt Acts when he enjoined them to see that their armoury was well furnished. As for His Excellency's elaboration of the metaphor about building on old foundations, Their Highnesses will do well to bear in mind the other half of the truth: "No man putteth a piece of a new garment upon an old: if otherwise, then both the new maketh a rent, and the piece that was taken out of the new agreeth not with the old." Their Highnesses will be wise to eschew such and similar metaphors altogether in visualising their problems of State which is neither a building nor yet a garment, but an organic and living entity and should be dealt with as such. Statesmanship cannot be learnt from the builder or the tailor.

His Excellency intimated to the Conference that it was the intention of the Government of India and His Majesty's Government to establish a permanent Chamber of Princes. The formal inauguration and recognition of the Chamber, said the Viceroy, must be reserved for a later date when the details of its constitution and functions have been worked out. But His Excellency indicated the trend of opinion in regard to some important points connected with the constitution of the Chamber. The first point is, which of the rulers are to be included and which, not, in the Chamber. The Indian States, as our readers are aware, widely differ in regard to almost every thing which makes a State. The extent of their territories varies from the Nizam's Dominions to Dhar and Sawantwadi. The populations under them also differ enormously. Their historical position and status among their fellow Chiefs is a very varying quantity. The suggestion had been made that the line of demarcation should be based on the salute list—Chiefs having a certain number of guns being allowed the privilege, and those with less, being kept out. In his speech at the Conference last year, Lord Chelmsford said that it appeared to him and Mr. Montagu that it would be unwise to adopt this suggestion and that the line of demarcation should be based upon constitutional considerations, that is to say, upon the nature of the link between an individual State and the Crown. They had, therefore, recommended in their report that the line should be so drawn as to separate rulers who enjoy full powers of internal administration from the others. It would appear from the Viceroy's remarks that the Chiefs were not agreed as to this principle and that, therefore, Lord Chelmsford and the Secretary of State were convinced that, after all, it would be really wisest to base the distinction primarily on the salute list. We do not know whether this will commend itself to the Chiefs, but to us it seems in no wise distinguishable from the Government of India nominating by name Chiefs to the Council. We dare say that there is some customary practice governing the grant of salutes, but the point is that salutes are more easily granted or withdrawn than full powers, and under the salute principle the seat of a Prince in the Chamber will be entirely a matter of the personal favour of the Government of India. We think that the principle suggested by the Viceroy last year is more intelligible. As in International Law all States, great and small, are treated as equals, so in the proposed Council or Chamber, all States which enjoy internal autonomy should be entitled as of right, irrespective of the number of guns fired in honour of their rulers, to a place in the Chamber. After all, these salutes are obsolete institutions dating back to the time when the arrival and departure of high personages were regarded as auspicious occurrences worthy of being notified to the public with astronomical accuracy.

Nowadays, the movements even of very minor personages such as Rao Bahadurs and Justices of the Peace are published beforehand in the newspapers, and the burning of gunpowder for such a purpose is waste of money and a source of needless trouble to the person entrusted with the firing and of irritation to the public within earshot of the explosion. Many Indian Chiefs come and go without the honour of a salute, though they are entitled to one. At the risk of being classed with Bolsheviks, we must say that the argument as to the respective merits of men with eleven and those with nine guns appears to be puerile. We earnestly trust that the more enlightened Chiefs will reject this fictitious basis for their Chamber.

As regards the name of the Chamber, it had been suggested in the Montagu-Chelmsford report that it should be one with an Oriental flavour but without distinctive Hindu or Mahomedan associations. The Chiefs recommended at the last Conference the designation of "Narendra Mandal." The Viceroy seemed to think that this might not be to the liking of Mahomedan Princes, but if they raised no objection, the Government of India, he said, would readily agree to it. Apart from the view which Mahomedan Princes may take of it, we think that the choice is not a happy one. Sanskrit is a language in which the facilities for coining names is practically unlimited, and it is no unusual thing for a thing to have forty or fifty names. But amidst this wealth of synonyms the scholar recognises and usage prescribes different shades of meaning. "Narendra" is no doubt commonly applied to princes in Sanskrit, but we think that primarily it has reference to personal pre-eminence. It means rather "Prince of Men," or "Chief of Men," the epithet Milton applies to Cromwell. Now, every Prince, Indian or other, is not necessarily what we should call "a prince of men." To avoid such difficulties, and to meet Hindu and Mahomedan susceptibilities alike, it is desirable to have a plain English name; and we suggest for the purpose, "the Indian States Council." A grandiose Sanskrit or Persian name to what, after all, is formally and essentially a modern British-Indian institution, is a ludicrous affectation. The name we have suggested is direct, simple, and has no inconvenient associations with the past. Also, it emphasises the importance of the States rather than that of the rulers. This, we consider, is a matter of first-rate importance in the constitutional development of Indian States. Individual States may prefer to be represented in the Chamber by responsible Ministers instead of by the Chiefs themselves. This will present no difficulty in a States Council, whereas it is doubtful whether it would be appropriate or allowed in a Chamber of Princes. Then, again, when the time comes, as it must, for representatives of British India to take the place of the permanent officials in discussing Imperial subjects and subjects of common interest, the States Council will be a ready forum. These questions will be best discussed and settled not so much by the rulers and officials of British India as by the representatives of the people in both territories.

VERACITY, EASTERN AND WESTERN.

Lord Curzon, when Viceroy of India, made a famous speech in which he contrasted the veracity of the West with that of the East, to the disadvantage of the latter. His lordship, we hope, has read the evidence of the American journalist, Mr. Bullitt, before the Foreign Relations Committee of the American Senate on what passed between him and Mr. Lloyd George regarding his mission to the Bolshevik Government of Russia. It is impossible on the face of it that both should be speaking the truth, and neither is an Oriental. Mr. Bullitt produced documents before the Committee relating to his mission to Russia of which Mr. Lloyd George led Parliament to believe that he knew nothing—"the most egregious case of misleading the public," said Mr. Bullitt, that he had ever known. Mr. Lloyd George himself offered a British cruiser to send Mr. Bullitt to Russia. The visit originated in a request from Colonel House and Mr. Lansing, but the same evening Mr. Bullitt dined with Mr. Lloyd George's secretary, in Mr. Lloyd George's apartment, to discuss Russia. Before his departure he saw Mr. Philip Kerr, the Prime Minister's secretary and received from him a letter which he produced in Russia, Mr. Bullitt reported by telegram asking Colonel House to send copies of two messages to Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Ballour, which Colonel House said he did at once. Mr. Bullitt reported on his return in writing, the substance being that the Soviet desired peace. Then comes Mr. Bullitt's account of his report to the Prime Minister, which may be set alongside of the entirely inconsistent story which Mr. Lloyd George told to the House of Commons on April 16.

Mr. Bullitt's comment on this contradiction is as follows:—"On the occasion of that statement of Mr. Lloyd George, I wrote the President. 'I clipped his statement from a newspaper and sent to the President and I asked the President to inform me whether the statement of Mr. Lloyd George was true or untrue. He was unable to answer, inasmuch as he would have had to reply on paper' that Mr. Lloyd George had made an untrue statement. So flagrant was this that various members of the British Mission called on me at the Hotel Carlton, a day or so later and apologized for the Prime Minister's action in the case.' After reading Hansard Mr. Bullitt went on:—"It was explained to me by the members of the British Delegation who called on me that the reason for this deception was that, although, when Mr. Lloyd George got back to London, he intended to make a statement very favourable to peace with Russia, he found that Lord Northcliffe, acting through Mr. Wickham Steed, the editor of the Times and Mr. Winston Churchill, the British Secretary for War, had rigged the Conservative majority of the House of Commons against him; and that they were ready to slay him then and there if he attempted to speak what was his opinion at the moment on Russian politics.' If this had been alleged of an Indian leader, how our contemporaries would have delighted to moralise on the lack of veracity and moral courage among Indians, and Christian Missionary Journals would have joined the chorus and enlarged on the utter need of Christianity to teach India these virtues! If our friends only paid some little heed to the beam in their eyes, their exhortations regarding the mote in others' eyes, will be more effective.

THE ABORIGINES OF CHHOTA UDEPUR.*

There is no subject of wider ethnological interest than the folk-lore and customs prevailing among the aboriginal tribes. Man is to be studied as an organic whole, and not as a conglomeration of individuals. The aboriginal tribes of India are remnants of the race known in the Rigveda as Dasas, and although these tribes have been brought under the civilizing influence of Indo-European races of the Aryan type for many centuries past, they preserve a unique characteristic of primitive humanity in a living form. Mr. H. J. Antia, during the active period of his service as Diwan of Chhota Udepur State, in the Ravakantha Agency, took special interest in the study of the manners and customs of the various aboriginal tribes called Kolis, Bhils, Dhaukas or Tadvis, Dhaukas, Naikas, etc. The range of Mr. Antia's studies is very wide and encompasses the occupation, diet, habitation, religions and superstitious beliefs, modes of worship, black magic, marriage and funeral ceremonies. The most interesting portion of Mr. Antia's notes is that relating to the marriage institution of the various tribes. The marriage ceremony in vogue among these tribes represents the various stages of the evolution of the institution of marriage, commencing from mere seizure of a female and natural union to a somewhat refined Brahminic form of marriage obtaining among the Jabungu aborigines. Among some tribes, like Dod Sural, a bride is a chattel for sale, and every relation and even the village community enjoys perquisites or monetary consideration in the sale of a girl. The Patel or headman sometimes officiates as a priest in the nuptial ceremony, and liquor and toddy are freely distributed.

The Asura or Paisacha forms of marriage, referred to in the old Hindoo Law books, in which a girl is sold or kidnapped, by force with ultimate reconciliation with her parents by petty gifts in cash or kind, appear to be in actual vogue among the tribes. The pseudo-crying exhibition of the bride at the time of her departure from her parent's house to that of her husband, prevailing among Dod Sural aborigines, seems to be a relic of the barbaric mode of seizure of a girl who is willing to elope but who pretends to be injured with a view to prepare the parents for ultimate reconciliation. Genuine tears are, no doubt, shed by the girl and her parents in the civilized community of high caste Hindus and among other races, but crocodile tears are also encouraged even among modern Christiansdom for we find that in Lithuania if a bride "is unable to bite her jealousy and cannot squeeze out a tear" she is considered guilty of a serious breach of etiquette and the ceremony is rendered more interesting by a rigorous scolding administered by the two mothers. Just as marriage is a simple affair so divorce is equally simple among these aborigines. Among Bhils the marriage tie is dissolved by the husband tearing a piece out of his turban and handing it over to his wife whereby the latter is free to select a second husband. The aborigines have no metaphysical theory about the condition of the deceased soul after death, but the deceased is given a morsel of sweet food lest he may suffer from hunger in his onward journey after death like a careless traveller. We have Mr. Antia will publish his notes in the form of a booklet for the use of all genuine students of ethnology.

University Settlements in England: The Challenge remarks on the lack of residents and workers in University Settlements in England at the present time. "Letters to the Press and meetings in the colleges," writes our contemporary, "have not, so far, sufficed to fill the gap. Is it true, perhaps, that the old battles are a little mishapen now? We have advanced far in social fact and theory, in the balance of power and the grip of problems since the days of Toynbee and Barnett. Is the idea or the form of a settlement no longer in keeping with the spirit and the need of the times? Should they be remodelled or utterly abolished? These are questions that may well agitate the minds and pens of our correspondents. In any case, we shall return to the matter. For the issue is of moment. On the one hand are the colleges, where scores are genuinely anxious to learn and serve; and on the other hand there are surely fields to till."

Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee and Mazzini: In the Reformer of the 19th October, a contributor referred to Mr. Surendranath Banerjee as the fiery disciple (forty years ago) of Mazzini. The Bengali protests that this is a gross misconception of the attitude of Mr. Banerjee in regard to the great Italian patriot. "In 1870" writes our contemporary, "Mr. Banerjee delivered an address on Mazzini, before the Uttarparah Hitakari Sabha, which is printed in the volume of his published speeches. Mr. Banerjee there expressed his great admiration for the splendid intellectual and moral gifts and the lofty patriotism of Mazzini. His self-sacrificing devotion to his country he presented as an object lesson and emulation. But linked with this appreciation there was a note of warning. Mazzini was a revolutionary; he followed revolutionary method for the attainment of his end. In his speech Mr. Banerjee warned his countrymen not to follow him in that respect, but resolutely to adhere to constitutional means for the attainment of their country's salvation. That represents his attitude in regard to the great Italian patriot."

Literature in the Nizam's Dominions: In their last annual review of books published in the State, His-Exalted-Highness the Nizam's Government observe: "There are hardly any books, which deserve to be singled out for commendation. We are however indebted to the Anjuman-i-Ishaat ul-Ulum for giving us slender volumes of Persian and Urdu poems written by the late Nawab Fazilat Jung Bahadur (Moulvie Anwarullah Khan Bahadur). The deceased was known for his scholarship and piety, but it is a revelation to find that he was also a poet of no mean order. The poems breathe a deep spirit of devotion. Moulvie Abdul-Haq Sahib, Curator of the Translation Bureau, Osmania University has laid the Urdu-reading public under a debt of gratitude by bringing out a selection from the poetical works of the foremost of Urdu poets, Mir Taqi Mir, to which he has added a valuable introduction."

* A paper read by Mr. Hormusji Antia—retired Superintendent, Managed Estates, Kathiawar—before the Anthropological Society of Bombay on 29th October 1919.

SIR ABDUR RAHIM ON THE CALCUTTA UNIVERSITY COMMISSION REPORT.*

A very notable event of the education calendar has been the publication of the report of the Calcutta University Commission. So far as I have been able to go through it, I have found it most interesting and instructive and I have not the least doubt, that the authorities of his University and the Mysore Education Department will find in this five volume considerable matter for very careful consideration and many illuminating suggestions. As I am not an educationist, I will not attempt any criticism of the various proposals, but, generally speaking, I am in agreement with the main outlines of their scheme. I wish only to make some general observations which I hope will not be quite out of place. To start with, the Commission have rendered a great service to the country by printing out in such a clear and convincing manner supported by a string array of authorities that the whole system of Indian education has to be recast so as to keep it abreast of the ideas and requirements of the times. Its different divisions such as elementary, secondary and University education must be interrelated with each other as far as possible, but at the same time each must have a distinct purpose in view. In the present circumstances elementary education in India would fail of its object unless the training of the pupil, in the industry pursued by his parents or some other suitable art or craft formed its integral part. And I most strongly urge that there should be a well-thought out and comprehensive method, supported by a generous system of scholarships and stipends, for selecting distinctly promising boys from the elementary grade for the secondary schools. A proper and adequate system of scholarships in my opinion, should indeed be in the forefront of the educational programme throughout. This I am glad to find is fully recognised by the Mysore Government.

As for secondary education, that must be regarded as the backbone of every educational system. Its aim should be to make of those who have been through its full course cultured, resourceful and patriotic citizens of the State, useful to themselves and to society. A student who has completed his education in a secondary school should be fit to receive training for the different professions such as law, medicine, engineering and for mercantile and industrial business and the management of concerns like zamindari. This course should be so framed as to occupy the average student till his eighteenth year. Here I may incidentally draw attention to one important question, whether there should be any minimum age at all for the grant of a certificate of completion of the secondary course or if there is to be one, whether power of exemption should not be reserved for the benefit of boys of more than average ability. It seems to me that a hard and fast rule by which the most talented youths are kept back—may be for one or two crucial years—is unnecessary and wholly indefensible. One point I wish particularly to emphasise before you—the supreme importance of which is so repeatedly recognised by the Commission, namely, the necessity for an adequate supply of a sufficient number of well-trained teachers. It is a most deplorable fact that the value of men into whose hands are entrusted the training of the future generation should so often be assessed at starvation wages, in the lower grades even inferior to the siph factory and mill hands and in no case sufficient to attract men of the best intellect and character in the country.

* Extracts from his Convocation address to the Mysore University.

in the country. The educational service should be at least as well paid as any other service and it should be accorded an honoured status. There is too much care cannot be bestowed on the selection of both the teaching and the administrative staff. They must be men not only well educated and proficient in the subjects entrusted to them but men of sympathetic imagination who can at the same time enforce discipline, men who regard teaching as a noble profession or rather as a mission and who understand and are in full sympathy with the needs and requirements of the country and with the ambitions of the students.

Another most important question in connection with secondary education is whether English or the Vernacular should be the medium of teaching. My opinion on the point is set out in full in the Commission's Report and all that I would say now is that I adhere to it as a statement of principle. The vernaculars of the country are unfortunately too numerous and it is my own belief that not one of them is yet fitted to be the medium of higher instruction. If there be any vernacular which possesses a sufficiently extensive literature, my objection does not apply to it, but at the same time there must always be a school in every secondary educational division with English as the medium of instruction, so as to allow of a choice. In deciding upon this question, every care should be taken not to sacrifice the interests of rural education for the sake of merely of sentiment, however laudable. Besides I confess to you that I am one of those firm believers who look forward to the time when there will be one common language for the whole of India and even if the language which has the best chance in this respect be not one of indigenous growth, such as English, I would be prepared to accept it, and readily sacrifice some very dear prejudices of my own, in the best interests of the generations to come. I may also point out here that the languages of our religions and the sciences are not any spoken vernaculars but either dead or foreign languages. For all boys to have to learn a number of languages, when education can well be imparted and useful practical knowledge absorbed through the medium of one, is a wasteful waste of energy and time, which must ultimately be obtained. It is often asserted that English can never form a proper medium of highest expression for an Indian. This is not only contrary to past facts. For instance, will not many distinguished poets and orators have used it as a medium of expression more charmingly and at the same time more effectively than they have done by Rabindra Nath Tagore in the English language, though some of his writings are called translations? To millions of educated Indians all over India use English as the chief channel of communication and is it not also a fact that English, especially in the South is rapidly gaining ground among students at least of the labouring classes such as skilled workmen and domestic servants, with advantage to themselves and their employers? In educated families everywhere most children are in fact bilingual. These are facts which have to be taken into account in dealing with the question.

The University, on I understand it, should have two objects in view, imparting a high order of general education and culture and also professional training founded on the work already done in the school, and for students of more than average calibre and scholarly proclivities, the University should provide facilities for the acquisition of highest learning in every branch of knowledge and for training the student for scientific or literary research. If any University is to be a centre of learning and research in this sense, two things are essential: it must at any cost secure the services of at least a few savants and scholars of high attainments and recognised status, and it must be generally equipped with ample and well-organised libraries and laboratories. The value of good library is, I am afraid, not sufficiently realised in this country. It must be borne in mind that it is the thoughts of the great men of genius as enshrined in the books that are the real instruments of education and the ordinary living teachers can only help and guide the student in assimilating their ideas and in absorbing those sublime and beautiful sentiments and emotions which the best spirits of different ages and countries have expressed in immortal words. A further ideal which should be directly kept in view is that the graduates of the University should be fitted to be leaders of men, which their intellect, will and body efficiently trained for the task. With this end in view, emphasis is rightly laid on the importance of promoting a corporate University life, the tutors being in personal touch with the undergraduates as sympathetic but not too obtrusive guides.

I am also in complete agreement with the opinion of the Commission that education of the girls should receive at least as much attention as that of the boys, and I believe it to be strictly accurate to say that educated women would help to spread education and culture in the future generations and in the general community more rapidly and effectively than twice the number of educated men. In fact I believe that once education has captured the recluse of the Indian ladies no further propaganda work will be needed and the capacity of succeeding generations for all good work will be immensely improved. I do not know of another more potent cause of the degeneration of the country than the customs prevalent in India especially among the M.omedans, by reason of which women have all chances of development in free and natural ways.

LITERATURE ON INDUSTRIAL WELFARE.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

More and more of your readers are becoming interested in work for Industrial workers. With this in mind I wish you would publish the following in your paper:—

The following bulletins have been issued by the United States Training Service and are available for distribution to all who are interested. Requests for copies should be addressed to United States Training Service, Charles T. Clayton, Director, 618 Seventeenth Street N. W. Washington, D. C.

1. How to start a Training Department in a Factory.
2. A Successful Apprentice Toolmakers' School.
3. British Methods of Training Workers in War Industries.
4. Training Employees of Better Production.
5. Training Labor for Peace Time.
6. Labor Turnover and Industrial Training.
7. Industrial Training and Foreign Trade.
8. Some Advantage of Industrial Training.
9. Seven Million Candidates for Training.
10. A Business Man's Experience with Industrial Training.
11. Efficient Training in a Large Plant.
12. How Training Departments Have Bettered Production—A Symposium.

Feel perfectly free at any time to call on me for any help that I may be able to give.

Sincerely,

Cooper, Allen & Co., Ltd.

W. H. Wisen,

In Charge.

Welfare Dept.

Cawnpore,

Oct. 18, 1919.

A CHARITY PERFORMANCE

Under the auspices of the Young Men's Association of Thana, there will be a Musical and Dramatical Performance in aid of the Christian Charitable Dispensary of Thana, on Friday the 14th November 1919 at 9 p. m. (S. T.) at the Victoria Theatre, Corner Grant Road, Bombay.

Ticket: Rs. 5, 3, 2, 1, A. 12 and 8, from E. Chatterji, C/o Messrs Rali Brothers' Office, Fort; and also at the gate.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postage
In advance. In arrears.

Per annum..... Rs. 5—0—0. Rs. 6—0—0.
Foreign subscription inclusive of Postage, twelve
hillings (Rs. 6).

Single copies of the current year can be had at 4
annas each and any back copies at 6 annas each.

DO YOU WISH TO KNOW YOUR

"FUTURE"

Send your time and date of birth or your star and age on note the time when you write the letter, you will be given a full reading of your life or one year to come for ONE RUPEE ONLY.

Mr. Ghazanfar Muhammad Khan, Deputy Collector, writes from Moradabad City. "The one year life reading you sent me proved to be QUITE TRUE."

THE KALINGA ASTROLOGICAL BUREAU,
24-8-19. Chodavaram, Vizagapatam District.

MARRIMONIAL

Wanted—for a highly accomplished and educated (English and Hindi) Kayastha girl of 16 from upper India, a suitable Kayastha match of any sub-section. Apply A. C. C/O The Indian Social Reformer, Bombay.

Wanted :—Employment, as teacher or governess, by an educated Brahman widow with midwifery training and medical practice, well-versed in music and the Vina; proficient in English, Sanskrit, Telugu and Canarese, and speaking Tamil and Hindustani. Please apply to K. R. C/o. The Indian Social Reformer, Bombay. 21 9-19.

GALE'S MAGAZINE.

Linn A. E. Gale, Editor and Publisher.

Champion of Socialism, New Thought, Occultism

Internationalism and Birth Control

Contains such articles as :

"The Birth Pangs of Revolution"

"The World That Is To Be"

"The Psychic Meaning of the War"

"Judas Iscariot and the Bolsheviki"

"Are We Hypnotized?"

The only Advanced Thought Magazine in English in Mexico. A Journal That is Indispensable to All Who Want to Understand the Signs of the Times.

$ 2 a year, American money. $ 1 for 6 months.
20c. a copy. No Free Samples. Remit by bank draft on New York or personal check.

GALE'S MAGAZINE,

P. O. Box 518

Mexico City, D. F., Mexico.

21.9-19.

THE TATA INDUSTRIAL BANK, LD.

HEAD OFFICE, BOMBAY.

BRANCHES—CALCUTTA and HYDERABAD (Deccan)
CANNINGPORE and LUCKNOW.

Sub-Branches.—

Bombay—Share Bazaar, Shroff Bazaar.

Calcutta—Barr Bazaar.

London Agents, LLOYDS BANK LIMITED.

NEW YORK AGENTS: THE GUARANTY
TRUST COY. OF NEW YORK.

AUTHORISED CAPITAL, Rs. 12,00,00,000.

SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL, Rs. 7,56,00,225.

PAID UP CAPITAL, Rs. 1,50,99,225.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:

Sr D. J. Tata, Kt., Chairman.

Sir Sassoon David, Bart.

Sir R. N. Mookerjee, K. C. I. E.

Sir Francis Stewart, Kt.

Sir Henry Proctor, Kt.

R. D. Tata, Esq.

F. E. Dinshaw, Esq.

F. O. Rimington, Esq.

Narottam Morarjee, Esq.

Hajee Gulam Mahomed Ajam, Esq.

The Hon'ble Mr. Purshottamdas Thakordas, C. I. E.

A. J. Bilimoria, Esq.

Secretary, R. H. Parker.

Current Accounts opened and interest allowed on daily credit balances from Rs. 500/- to Rs. 1,00,000/- at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum. If the balance to the credit of any account does not fall below Rs. 25,000/- at any time between 1st January and 30th June, interest will be allowed during that period at 2½ % per annum. No interest is allowed unless the sum accrued amounts to Rs. 5/- Half-yearly.

Fixed Deposits. Interest allowed on Deposits fixed for one or two years and for shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank. Interest allowed on Savings Bank Accounts at 4 per cent per annum. Rules may be obtained on application.

Loans and Cash Credits are granted on approved securities.

Purchases and sales of Securities and shares effected.

Bills of Exchange purchased and collected and every description of Banking and exchange business undertaken.

14-4-18. J. PAGAN DALZELL Acting Manager.

THE YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK, LIMITED.

(Registered in Japan.)

Established 1880.

Subscribed Capital, Yen. 48,000,000.

Paid up Capital, Yen. 42,000,000.

Reserve Fund, Yen. 23,100,000.

Head Office—Yokohama.

Branches and Agencies at Bombay, Buenos Aires, Calcutta, Chongchun, Chi-Ngo, Dairen, Fengtien, Hankow, Harbin, Hongkong, Honolulu, Kainan, Kobe, London, Los Angeles, Lyons, Manila, Nagasaki, Newchwang, New York, Osaka, Peking, Rangoon, San Francisco, Seattle, Shanghai, Shimonoseki, Singapore, Serabays, Sydney, Tientsin, Tokio, Tsingtao.

Current Deposit Accounts are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at the rate of 2 per cent per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 100,000, provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of banking and exchange business transacted.

N. IGARASHI,

Post Box No. 207, Hornby Road, Bombay.

I. NISHIMAKI,

Manager, Calcutta.

1-12-17,

Post Box No. 406, Clive street, Calcutta.

THE BANK OF BARODA, LD.

Under the Patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja Gaekwar.

Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897

HEAD OFFICE BARODA.

Branches—Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, and Surat

Capital Subscribed, Rs. 60,00,000.

Capital Paid up " 50,00,000.

Reserve Fund " 12,50,000.

DIRECTORS:

The Hon'ble Mr. Lallubhai Samaldas, C. I. E., Chairman

Sir Vithaldas Damodar Thackersey, Kt.

Raj Bahadur Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhatti Nagar Sheth, Baroda.

Sheth Manilal Revades, Vadnagar.

Rao Bahadur Ganshirao S. Nimbalker, Bar Sabha, Baroda State.

Bhaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., Advocate, High Court, Bombay.

M. H. Kantavalla, Esq., Agent, Maharaja Mill Co., Ltd. Baroda.

R. R. Shirgaoker, Nais Sabha, Baroda State.

A. N. Datar, Accountant General, Baroda State.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balance from Rs. 500 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest which does not come to Rs. 8 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application. O. K. BANDEKAR, General Manager.

THE CENTRAL BANK OF INDIA, LTD

Subscribed Capital, Rs. 50,00,000

Paid Up Capital, " 25,00,000

Reserved liability of Shareholders, " 25,00,000

Reserve Fund, " 5,00,000

Head Office—Alice Building, Bombay.

Local Branches:—(1) Mandvi (2) Zaveri Bazar, (3) Share Bazar.

Branches:—Amritsar, Calcutta, Delhi, Jharla, Karachi.

London Agents:—London Joint City and Midland Bank, Ltd.

Current Accounts—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June.

2½ % allowed on Daily Balances from July to December.

12 months Deposits received at 5 % per annum.

Long and Short period Deposits received at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking Business transacted.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA, Manager.

25-2-17

THE BANK OF TAIWAN, LTD.

Incorporated by Special Charter of the Imperial Japanese Government, 1899.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 30,000,000
Paid-up Capital.....Yen. 22,500,000
Reserve Fund.....Yen. 5,680,000

Head Office:—Taipei, Formosa.

BRANCHES—

LONDON	SHANGHAI	TOKIO
NEW YORK	HONGKONG	OSAKA
AMOY	SINGAPORE	KOBE
CANTON	SOERABAJA	YOKOHAMA
FOOCHOW	SEMARANG	AKO
HANKOW	MAKONG	GIRAN
KIUKIANG	BATAVIA	KAGI
SWATOW	PINAN	KARENKO
TAINAN	SHINCHIKU	KEELUNG
TAKOW	TAIOBU	TAMSUI

The Bank has also a large number of Correspondents at Home and Abroad.

Current Deposit Accounts—are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at 2 per cent. per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000, up to Rs. 1,00,000 provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of Banking and Exchange business transacted.

K. TAKEMURA
Manager

9-12-17. 56, Esplanade Road, Fort, BOMBAY

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

Established 1st September 1906.

Incorporated under the Indian Companies' Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE:

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.

Capital Subscribed Rs. 1,00,00,000

Capital Called up ,, 50,00,000

Reserve Fund ,, 15,00,000

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½% p. a. throughout the year. On sums exceeding Rs. 1,00,000 interest is allowed by special arrangement. No interest will be allowed which does not amount to Rs. 3 per half year.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short periods @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

"Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application".

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, & CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, & also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stocks at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

H. P. STRINGFELLOW,

5-1-11.

Manager.

A Lady's Best Ornament is a Glorious Head of Hair.

A profusion of rich, soft silky, lustrous, wavy hair—where's the woman who would not like that?

There's only one oil that makes such hair and it's the far-famed

KAMINIA OIL (Regd.)

Invaluable for ladies, and just as much for Brain-Workers and Students.

Heated head cooled, aching disappears and dandruff becomes a thing of the past. Added to all these it possesses a beautiful fragrant smell.

For superiority, awarded a Gold Medal at the Mysore Exhibition, and in great demand all over the country.

If you have not yet used KAMINIA OIL, you

have missed a fine delight and a real boon; use it now, if only once; and like many people you will prefer to use also always

Price per bottle, Re. 1. V. P. Charges 6 annas extra

Price for 3 bottles Re. 2-10. V. P. charges 14 annas extra

Write now, Do not delay.

Sole Agents—

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,
(5-8-16) No. 155, Jamma Masjid Market, BOMBAY.

Now-a-Days.

All things have advanced in price. Even the vegetable ingredients used in our Atank Nigrah Pills have advanced in price.

Even the labourers demand heavy wages being dearer. Even the users have increased yet the Atank Nigrah Pills for Toning up the system are sold at before war price i. e. at a Rupee.

Valdyia Shastri

Manishanker Govindji,

Atank Nigrah Pharmacy,

Head Office:—Jamnagar—Kathiawar.

Branch:—Kalbadevi Road, Bombay.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours. Publish Fine Art Pictures, &c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.

1-12-10. HIGH CLASS FRAME MARKS.

ROYAL TONIC PILLS

Powerful Nutritious and Strength Restorer. Price Re. 1-4 per tin of 30 Pills.

Prepared by—GOVINDIEE DAMODER & Co.,

Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Commission Agents.
1-12-10. No. 3 Sater Chawl Market, BOMBAY.

Timely advice to the Wealthy

Costly but certain remedies are in the long run cheaper than cheap and uncertain ones.

KANDARPA SANJIVINI PILLS AND OIL

are the safest and surest remedies for indigestion constipation, loss of appetite, memory, mental, physical and nervous debility and all sorts of urinary disorders; improve impoverished blood.

Price per tin of 40 Pills Rs. 5 & per tin of Oil Rs. 10.

Both Purchased at a time Rs. 11/4

Medical Advice and a Medical Book containing 128 pages sent Gratis and Post Free.

RAJ VAIDYA NARAYANJI KESHAYJI

Head Office :- Jamnagar, Kathiawar, (India.)

Branch :- No. 187, Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY. 24-8-1919.

Empire Hindu Hotel

Opposite, Victoria Terminus
Bombay.

(Central Situation)
Strictly Vegetarian
Charges Moderate

Fitted with
Electric Lift, Fans and Lights.

TELEGRAMS: "FOOD," BOMBAY. TELEPHONE 2789.

22-6-19.

Saffron? Saffron?? Saffron???

If you wish to buy genuinely pure and best Saffron it is SUN

BRAND

SAFFRON

ONLY

It has been largely used by Jain Temples, Maharajas Darbars, Hakims and Vaidyas all over the country for the last 75 year and is well known for its purity and genuineness.

S. NARAYEN & Co.,

17-2-18

21, Hummus Street, Fort Bombay.

Like Other Arts and Science, Shorthand is subject to the Law of Progress. Based on greatly improved scientific and analogical principles, the Sloan-Duployan system (contained in a course of 12 lessons) saves a year's labor on study, ensuring highest efficiency and speediest results. Shorthand is the open-door to many well-paid positions at any rate it will mean advancement for you. Expert Individual or Postal Instructions for a fixed fee, pays in easy monthly instalments. Speed Classes Unadvised. Specialized Training Guaranteed. Encluse stamp for booklet, etc. CENTRAL CORRESPONDENCE G. P. O. box No. 424, Bombay.

"EVERYTHING FOR EVERYBODY"

National Standard Portable Typewriter No. 3 (10 lbs.) Rs. 190
Oliver No. 6 (American Rebuilt) 5 & Tab. Rs. 175; No. 7 " 200
" " 8 (Second-hand) in thorough working order, " 125
Empire No. 1 (Do.) in good working order, " 55
Multikopy Typewriter Carbons, per box of 100 sheets, " 5
Webster Brand " Ribbons for all machines, Los. " 25
Typewriter Oil (best 1oz. bot.) or Eberhard Erasers, D.S. " 5
Safety Razor, Rivals Gillette, with 3 Gillette blades (best) " 5
Do. (Made in U.S.A.) with 3 spare blades, ditto " 1
Portable Electric Battery & lamp (burns 300 hours) compl. " 30
Envelope Making Machine (to make 30,000 per day), New " 35
Full Jewelled Lever Watch (Square or Outagon, Silver " 25
Cucklin's Self Filling Fountain Pen (non-leakable) Gold Nib " 5

UNIVERSAL BUSINESS SYNDICATE,

20-4-19. Post box No. 424, Bombay.

HYPNOTISM

PERSONAL MAGNETISM,
WILL POWER,
NERVE FORCE-

Call what you will-

Is the intangible power that controls human destiny. It is the key to all business and social success. This power is no special gift of any one. It is latent in every one. We help you how to display it. By our system, you can learn in a few days at your own home and not only achieve success yourself, but you can influence the mind, health and actions of others to a remarkable degree.

Write immediately for our free booklet-The Fringe of India.

THE LATENT LIGHT CULTURE,
TIANVELLY, S. INDIA.

Battilwala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 1 each bottle of 100.

Battilwala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 2 each bottle of 100.

Battilwala's Ague Mixture of Fever, Malaria, Influenza etc.

Battilwala's Ague Pills for Malaria, Fever, Influenza etc.

Battilwala's Tonic pills for pale people & nervous breaks down.

Battilwala's Tooth Powder of Preserving Teeth

Battilwala's Ringworm ointment for Ringworm Dhobi Itch etc.

May be had from all dealers in medicines or from

Dr. H. L. Battilwala Sons & Co., Ltd.

No. 12, Worth, 18, Bombay.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESS :- " Doctor Battilwala Under

THE BOMBAY CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK.

HEAD OFFICE :- Apollo Street, St., Bombay.

DIRECTORS:- The Hon. Sir Fozzibhoy Gurrimbhoy (Chairman), Sir Vithaldas D. Thackeray the Hon. Mr. Lalmibai Somaldas, Sir Stanley Reed, the Hon. Mr. C. V. Mehta, the Chief of Chhatkaranji, G. N. Devadhar, Esq., the Hon. Sir P. D. Pattani, the Raja Sahab of Malagan.

Share Capital (fully paid) Rs. 7,00,000

1 Deposits fixed for one year and shorter or longer periods are accepted, Rates and other particulars may be ascertained from the under signed.

2 The Bank finances only registered Co-operative Societies in the Bombay Presidency on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency.

3. Accounts are audited half-yearly by a special Government Auditor, and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the 'Bombay Government Gazette'.

20-5-17. VAIKUNTH L. MEHTA, Manager,

Clean
Wholesome
Intelligent
Entertainment

IS A GREAT STEP

IN

SOCIAL REFORM.

When deciding on a

PLACE OF AMUSEMENT TWO ESTABLISHMENTS

Should at once leap to the mind.

THE EXCELSIOR
BOMBAY'S PREMIER MODERN THEATRE

THE EMPIRE

BOMBAY'S MOST PALATIAL
PICTURE THEATRE

Where Film Plays of Distinction are shown
Every Week.

A

Great Cinema Masterpiece

is shown,

Both theatres are near the Bori Bunder

and are run by the

EXCELSIOR SYNDICATE.

The Pioneer of Bombay's

AMUSEMENT WORLD.

FURUKAWA & CO.

TOKIO

The Largest Manufacturers

in the East

OF

ELECTRIC BARE COPPER CONDUCTORS,

ELECTRIC UNDERGROUND CABLES,

ELECTRIC INSULATED WIRES,

ELECTRIC ACCESSORIES,

INGOTS, RODS, WIRES,

SHEETS, TUBES,

Etc., Etc.,

SOLE AGENTS IN INDIA AND BURMA.

TATA, SONS & CO.,

BOMBAY & CALCUTTA.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS Ltd.

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.

Naysari Building, Fort, BOMBAY.

Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

11-3-17.

When YOUR EYES

need to be examined by QUALIFIED OCULISTS and by SCIENTIFIC REFRACTIONISTS of 26 year experience, FREE OF CHARGE, you cannot do better than GO TO

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR & CO.

The leading firm of Oculists, Eyesight Specialists, Manufacturing Opticians and suppliers of the patented

"KRYPTOK"

(Invisible one-piece bifocal lens.)

Toric, and all kinds of lenses,—Cylindrical, Spherical, cylindrical, Prismatic, &c., from pebbles as well as from best quality crown glass.

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR

Eyesight Specialist,

With 26 Years' Practical Experience.

Holds Exceptional Testimonials from H. H. The Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, the Hon'ble Sir Lawrence Jenkins the Hon. Mr. Justice Batty, Mrs. Batty, the Hon. Sir N. S. Jhandavkar, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beaman, the Hon'ble Sir S. L. Batchelor, the Hon'ble Sir John Heaton Mr. H. G. Jell, M. V. O., Col. R. H. Forman, B. A. M. C., P. M. O. B. Brigade, Lieut. Col. G. H. Bull, M. D., I. M. S., Lieut-Colonel Peters M. B., I. M. S., and other high personages.

(7) 379, HORNBY ROW,

Opposite the Government Telegraph Office, Fort, BOMBAY.

62-11-10.

ATTENDING ASSUREES ARE INVITED TO COMPARE THE RATES AND CONDITIONS OF

The Empire of India Life Assurance Company, Limited.

WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.

Head Office II Elphinstone Circle, BOMBAY.

SEE REPORT AND OPINIONS OF THE PRESS AS TO THE REMARKABLE PROGRESS MADE BY THE COMPANY.

ENDOWMENT NON-FORFEITABLE POLICY FOR RS. 3,000.

PAYABLE AT AGE 60 OR AT DEATH, IF PREVIOUS, WITH PROFIT.

If, at any time, the assured under this plan should desire to cease paying any more premiums, he can obtain a paid-up Policy for such a proportion of the original sum assured as the number of premiums paid bears to the number agreed upon as a gentleman who had assured at age 30 for a Policy of Rs. 3,000 payable at age 60 or at Death, if previous, after 5 year payments, would be entitled to a Free paid-up Policy for Rs. 500 free of future payments.

SOME OF THE DISTINCTIVE FEATURES.

- Funds invested in Government Securities and in accordance with the Indian Trusts Act
- Policy holders can appoint their own Directors.
- 90 per cent. of Profits to Participating Policy holders.
- Lapsed policies revived without Medical Certificate.
- Liberal Surrender Values 40 per cent. of the Tabular premium paid.
- Immediate payment of Claims.
- Medical fees and stamps on Policies are payable by the Company.

The sum assured is PAYABLE IN FULL should death occur soon immediately after payment of the first premium.

GUARANTEE INSURANCE.—This Company issues Guaranteed Policies in situation of special authority to guarantee the employees of the Post Office

Proposal Forms and full Particulars may be obtained from any local Agent in India or from 9-10.

ALLUM, BHARUCHA & CO. Managers.

N INDIA

EVERY ONE KNOWS.

whom it does concern that we are foremost in supplying the best

COSSY SILK SUIT PIECES

available for the season. These pieces are strong, fancy and durable, and have been specially manufactured for India's market. Each piece guaranteed for One Suit Complete.

Price Rs. 10 per piece.

Write to—THE BHARGAVA COMMERCIAL SOCIETY,

1-19.

Banaras City.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER. Contract Rates for Advertisements.

Number of Insertions.	1 Inch.		2 Inches.		3 Columns.		4 Columns.		5 Columns.		Page.
	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.
13	11	0	16	0	20	0	30	0	50	0	87	0
26	16	0	25	0	30	0	50	0	87	0	155	0
52	25	0	38	0	50	0	87	0	155	0	300	0

Casual advertisements at Rs. 4 per line for the 1st insertion and Rs. 2 per line for succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

WONDERFUL TONIC AND MOUTH-REFRESHER

JINTAN.

This is a safe and efficient remedy in all kinds of diseases or disturbances of the digestive organs. It is composed entirely of VEGETABLE INGREDIENTS made from the prescription of the following eminent medical men viz —
NORIHURO MIWA, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy.
ZENJIRO INOUE, M. D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy
 and testified as to its efficacy by
Baron J. MATSUMOTO, M. D., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Army.
T. MITAMURA Esq., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Navy.

As a digestive it is unequalled and will not disturb the functions of the most delicate stomach. Its antiseptic properties render it very efficacious in warding off disease and at the same time it imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath of the user.

By virtue of its aroma, it effectually masks the odour of Tobacco and Alcoholic Spirits.

It acts beneficially on the vocal cords and has found much favour with public speakers, actors, singers and those whose vocation necessitates a severe strain on the throat.

GOOD FOR

Billiousness, Headache, Vertigo, Nausea, Indigestion, Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, etc., etc.

To maintain general health 2 to 3 pills may be taken occasionally, well masticated.

Price—20 Pills Packet Rs. 0-1-0. 90 Pills Packet, with Tin case., Rs. 0-4-0. 380 pills Packet with fancy case., Rs. 1-0-0

Prepared by Messrs. MORISHITA Co., OSAKA, JAPAN.

Sole Agents: Jintan Agency (G. R. Chaubal), Juma Masjid, BOMBAY.

At each opening 3 pills come here automatically

FOR PAINS
 AND ACHES
 SPRAINS ETC.
 USE:—

AMRUTANJAN.

The magical pain balm extant. Cures all aches & pains. Costs 3 As. Sold everywhere.

By Appointment to H. E. the Governor
 Sir George Sydenham Clarke of
 Bombay.

HARIDAS VALJI,
 (KING OF INDIAN CONFECTIONERS),
 Highest Confectioner, Caterer and Grand
 Military Contractor.

Proprietor—RATINATH,
 Chitra Bazar & Grant Road,
BOMBAY.

20-4-19.

DENTISTRY.

Extractions Painless;
 Terms Very Moderate;
 Gold Crown, Bar and
 Bridge Work a Speciality
 (teeth without plate);
 Latest Successful Treatment
 for Pyorrhoea (pus in gums).

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

Hours: 8-1-30 & 5-7-30: Daily.
 (Sundays—From 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.)

ADBOOS BUILDING,
 NEW CHARBI ROAD,
 GERRAON, BOMBAY.

E. R. AHAT,
 Surgeon Dentist.

1-4-19.

THE INDIAN * SOCIAL * REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY MORNING.

Office—EMPIRE BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD, FORT.

Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

Vol. XXX. BOMBAY—SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1919. No. 11.

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not squash, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard."
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

The Russian Situation.	The Problem of Christianity in India I.
Japan and the Philippines.	Free Milk Supply to the Poor.
The Joint Committee's Recommendations.	Sir Dinshaw Wacha.
Lord Meston.	Indian Education Society, Dadar, Bombay.
The Arms Act.	The Bombay High Court and Satyagrahi Lawyers.
Nursing Homes.	The Arya Mahila Samaj—Bombay.
The Amritsar Congress.	Japan and the Philippines.
Cotton Cloth Control.
The First Asian Conference.
A Crusade Against Caste.
A Cruel Dilemma.

NOTES.

The Russian Situation. The latest messages to which we were able to refer last week in regard to the Russian situation, seemed to show that Yudenitch, Koltchak, and Denikin were gaining ground, or at least that they were in a more favourable position than the Bolsheviki. This week's messages, however, tell a different tale. Yudenitch has been badly beaten at the very gates of Petrograd, Koltchak's forces are retiring on the whole front in Siberia which the Bolsheviki are attempting to invade, and Denikin's predicament is hardly more propitious. More conclusive than all these messages, are Mr. Lloyd George's statements in his Guildhall speech on the 9th instant that, while there was prospect of an early issue a few weeks ago, the outlook now was not pleasant, that he rejoiced that British troops had quitted Russia because Russia was a quicksand, that he predicted in the early days that Bolshevism could not be suppressed by the sword and that, though he wished to see his prediction falsified, it has not been, and that they could not continue a costly intervention in an interminable civil war. All doubts as to the significance of the Prime Minister's speech, has been made impossible by the comments of the Times and the rest of the English Jingo press, on the one hand, and Liberal papers like the Daily News and the Manchester Guardian, on the other. The Times denounces the speech as the revival of the Prinkipo policy. The Daily Mail, its stable companion, heads its article "Shaking Hands with Murder." The Daily News hopes that Mr. Lloyd George, having now seen the right way, will take it. The Manchester Guardian thinks the proposal is wise if tardy, and says much will be forgiven the Prime Minister, if he has the courage to carry it out. The French Press, which hoped to get back its vast loans to Russia by British military intervention, is naturally disappointed, and contends that the Premier's policy is tantamount to a capitulation to Bolshevism. We are sure that India will be heartily glad of the policy of non-intervention in Russia. Bolshevism may or may not be the incarnate devil it is said to be, but if the Russians find it more tolerable than Tsarism or Koltchakism, they must know best and, in any case, it is their business, not ours. Mr.

Lloyd George said that the Russian peasantry in their heart of hearts detested Bolshevism. Appearances are altogether against this belief, but they may be deceptive. If it is as Mr. Lloyd George said it was, the less reason for any outsider to interfere. Foreign intervention only unites the Russians together to repel it and Russian movements which depend on it for success. We wish the Prime Minister had acted on his early belief, for then the Empire would have been saved much loss of life and resources, and a good deal of odium in neutral countries. Also, perhaps, the Russians would have established some stable Government by this time. Anarchy is a state of unstable equilibrium, and no body of men are likely to remain long in it, unless kept there by some outside force. The British Empire has done much for France, but France cannot expect it always to be pulling its chestnuts out of the fire.

Japan and the Philippines. We reprint from the pages of the current number of the Philippine Review, an interview between Baron Shibusawa, who is one of the industrial magnates of Japan, and Mr. Gregorio Nieva, the editor of our contemporary. Mr. Nieva was on his way back from the United States where he had gone to plead for the independence of his country. In view of that fact, the conversation between the two distinguished men regarding Japan's intentions in the Orient is interesting. Mr. Nieva told the Baron point blank that Japanese ambition was regarded in some American circles as the main objection to the independence of the Philippine Islands. "Allow me, therefore, to ask you," he added, "if Japan would only be a mere copy of Europe in her policies regarding the weaker countries of the Far East; i.e. if Japan is merely going to be the new oppressor of the Orient." The Baron would not be drawn into any general statement regarding European nations. He said, "Japan has no business whatever in the Philippines. We respect the growth and progress of your people, and, if we can, we should only be very happy to render you any assistance for the sake of our brothers of the South. It is, perhaps, necessary for Japan to govern and pacify Korea, Japan has insisted in this. But as to the Philippines, it is a different thing altogether."

The Joint Committee's Recommendations. Reuter has sent a summary of a sketch in the Times of the main conclusions of Lord Selborne's draft report on the India Bill. There is nothing said about the introduction of responsibility in the Government of India, which is a main principle, from the Indian point of view, indispensable to make the scheme acceptable in this country. We refer in another context to the statement that the revised Bill makes clearer some of the broad outlines, notably the principle of diarchy in the provinces. The most noteworthy recommendation foreshadowed by the Times is that there would be established a Standing Parliamentary Committee of both Houses which the Secretary of State would be bound to consult in many matters, including the rules and regulations under the Reform Bill. We interpret the rest of the message to mean that the Grand Committee idea has been given up, that it is proposed to give wider range to the Governor-General's ordinance making powers in an emergency, and that if a permanent law is needed and the provincial Legislature rejects a Bill a second time, the matter should be referred to the Secretary of State who would consult the Parliamentary Select Committee. We are inclined to think that this is rather an improvement on the Grand Committee procedure. But it is necessary to defer forming any definite opinion until we have the full scheme of the Joint Committee before us.

Lord Meston. That Sir James Meston was not to resume charge of the Finance portfolio of the Government of India and that Mr. W. M. Hailey was to succeed him in that office, has been known for some time past. What was not known was that Sir James' eyesight required his resignation, and that the honour of a peerage would be conferred on him. As the colleague of Lord Sinha at two Imperial Conferences, he has evidently been selected for the same honour. His presence in the House of Lords will provide diarchy and the separate purse proposal with a convinced supporter and champion. There is a sentence in Reuter's summary of the Times' forecast of the Joint Committee's recommendations, which seems to suggest that the separate purse proposal has found a place among them. The revised Bill, it is said, makes clearer some of the broad outlines, notably the principle of diarchy in the provinces. If this means that the separate purse proposal has been adopted, Lord Meston's accession to the House of Lords is probably not unconnected with the need for finding a capable exponent of it in Parliament. As for Mr. Hailey, he is a very capable man and but for his brusque manner he would have been better appreciated by the Indian public. People have forgotten that the "strong" Chief Commissioner of Delhi was Deputy Secretary in the Finance Department for about five years before he was chosen to rule Delhi. From Commissioner of Delhi to Secretary in the Educational Department, and from that to Member in charge of Finance, is a very zig-zag line of promotion for anybody. But the Indian Civil Service is a very versatile body.

The Arms Act. It was announced some time back that all racial discrimination in the administration of the Arms Act will be dispensed with, and that the rules for the issue of arms licences would be the same for all. A certain specified list of personages was to be exempted altogether from the necessity of taking out licenses, certain other classes to be granted licences without previous enquiry, and the rest to be granted licences as at present. This was a much less liberal measure than what had been foreshadowed by the Viceroy, and it has been still further attenuated to a considerable extent by the Bombay Government whose selection of persons entitled to get licenses without previous enquiry has just been published. Among such persons are included all those who were registered under the Ordinance of 1917, which, as the Bombay Chronicle points out, means every European and Anglo-Indian in the country. How does this fulfil the promise that the Act will be administered without race discrimination? We cannot help thinking that quibbling of this kind does not add to the prestige, not to speak of the popularity, of Government. The Hindu of Madras states that an Indian non-official member of the Provincial Legislative Council has given notice of a motion at the next meeting for the appointment of a Committee of officials and non-officials to report on the qualifications to be fixed for persons who may be allowed to apply for licenses to possess fire-arms without preliminary enquiry. If some such step had been taken before issuing the orders in this Presidency, the anomaly which we have pointed out would have been obviated.

Nursing Homes. The Government of Bombay have taken a useful step which will be much appreciated, in sanctioning the establishment of Nursing Homes at the Civil Hospitals at Poona and Karachi for the treatment of well-to-do patients by their own medical attendants. The last privilege seems to be curtailed to some extent by the provision that the medical attendants will have to be selected from among a list of physicians and surgeons to be appointed by Government as Honorary Physicians and Surgeons to the Nursing Homes. Patients of the class for which the Homes are intended do not choose a medical attendant when obliged to enter a Nursing Home. Several of them have their family doctors who may or may not be included in the Government list. If they are not free to utilise the services of their usual medical attendants in the Homes, they may feel themselves greatly handicapped in resorting to them. We trust that this condition which is calculated to detract from the utility of this beneficial measure, will be modified so as to allow of any doctor with recognised qualifications to attend on the patients. The charge per day has been fixed at Rs 9 for an European and Rs. 6 for an Indian patient. This fee will cover the rent, the supply of furniture, bedding, food and the services of the ordinary nursing and the menial staff of the Home. In addition to this, a charge will be made of the actual cost of apparatus and drugs, of stimulants and surgical dressings. Fees will be also charged for extra nursing on a fixed scale. The remuneration to medical men is entirely left to private arrangement.

The Amritsar Congress. We publish today the two first bulletins of the Amritsar National Congress Reception Committee. It is very plucky and patriotic of the Punjab, and particularly, of Amritsar, after all that they have gone through, to hold fast to their invitation to the Congress to meet at Amritsar. We see that invitations are being sent to leading men of all parties to attend the Congress this year. We think that it is the duty of every one so invited to respond to the invitation. So far as we can judge, there is absolutely no difference of opinion in the country regarding the occurrences in the Punjab, which will naturally bulk largely in the proceedings of the next Congress, and such differences as there are in other matters, are not of capital importance. The main trouble here is entirely personal, but surely Indian leaders should and could rise superior to personal differences in view of the tremendous national issues involved. In our deliberate view, except the small group of revolutionaries who believe in violence, there is absolutely no important difference to justify the rivalries and recriminations so painfully evident in some places.

Cotton Cloth Control: The Government of India have decided that Cotton Cloth Control should be placed in abeyance for the present. The Cotton Cloth Act will, however, remain in force and its provisions will again be put into operation, should speculation in cloth or any other cause force prices up to such a point as to render this desirable.

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1919.

THE FIRST ASIAN CONFERENCE.

We have taken the liberty of changing at the head of this article the name of the first miscalled Oriental Conference held at Poona last week into one which is etymologically more appropriate and, as regards aims, is not less comprehensive. Indians and, indeed, all Asiatics are Orientals to the European but not to themselves. For their own convenience, Europeans have divided Asia into the East and the Far East. To us, their Far East is the East and Persia, Afghanistan and Asia Minor is the West. A Conference having for its object the study of the culture of these countries, is not, therefore, an Oriental Conference. It is high time that we ceased to adopt in a spirit of superstition names which Europeans have invented from their own point of view and for their own convenience. So far as we can judge, the Conference held last week at Poona takes for its province the antiquities and literature of Asiatic countries which have influenced, or have been influenced by, India. It does not deal with Greek and Roman classics, though Greece and Rome had both close cultural and trade relations with India. It does not deal even with Hebrew and Christian antiquities though there are Jewish and Christian communities in India dating almost from the beginning of the Christian era. This, in our opinion, is a serious omission, because the organisation of the early Christian Churches and monastic orders bears a striking resemblance to Buddhist practices. Christian antiquities from the European and Christian point of view have been thoroughly explored and there is no need for us to go over the same ground. But their relations to Asiatic, and especially, Indian culture, have not been seriously studied, and this the Conference can undertake and encourage. Apart from the Christian and Hebrew sphere which, for historical reasons, has become merged in European rather than Asian antiquities, Asia falls into two great spheres of culture. All civilizations have started from peninsulas. Greece and Rome and Asia Minor, were the starting points of the streams which have gone to make European civilization. India and Arabia are the fountain-heads of Asiatic civilization. India through Buddhism and Arabia through Mahomedanism have influenced Asiatic thought, belief and culture. Today, and in India, and nowhere else, have all these currents of civilization met and mingled. The European, Arabian and Indian are all focussed in this ancient land. It is permissible to infer that our country has been providentially selected to be the birthplace of the common culture which shall unite mankind in one great brotherhood.

The Conference at Poona was a striking success. The proceedings began with a modest introduction by the Chairman of the Reception Committee, Mr. V. P. Vaidya. In the course of his remarks, Mr.

Vaidya called attention to and appealed for support of the monumental endeavour of the Bhandarkar Oriental Institute to bring out a variorum edition of the great Indian epic, the Mahabharata. His Excellency the Governor of Bombay addressed the Conference and conveyed the welcome of the Presidency to the delegates. Sir Ramkrishna Bhandarkar was then elected President and, owing to his absence through illness, his address was read by one of the Vice-Presidents who took the chair in his place. A happier or more auspicious selection to the Presidency could not have been made. Sir Ramkrishna is, by common consent, India's most illustrious Sanskrit scholar at present. His influence and his example have done much to resuscitate Sanskrit studies among us. Some sixty years ago, speaking of the state of Sanskrit scholarship in his time, Sir Henry Maine said that in about half a century it would either disappear altogether or, if it survived, it would be kept alive by the labours of European scholars. This prediction overlooked the deep religious and cultural significance of Sanskrit in India, and it did not foresee that the great effect of English education on the Indian mind will be to rouse it to a realisation of the imperative need of a nation to find itself, if it is to attain salvation. We can never underrate the work of European scholars who helped to keep alive the smouldering embers of Sanskrit scholarship in the dark age which preceded the establishment of the Indo-British Empire. But they of themselves could not have done more than just keep the sparks from extinction, if Indian minds and hearts had not caught the spirit from them. There were several such Indians—names always to be held in reverent remembrance. Raja Ram Mohan Roy, Isvarachandra Vidyasagar, Rajendralal Mitra in Bengal, and Bhagwandas Indrajai, Bhanu Daji and Bhandarkar in Bombay, are the leading figures of this illustrious galaxy. Sir Ramkrishna alone in still happily with us, and his address shows that age has not dimmed the vigour, the clearness and the accuracy of his great intellect and massive scholarship. Sir Ramkrishna concluded his inspiring address on a valedictory note. "I close the active years of my life," he said, "with an assured belief that sound critical scholarship has grown up among us, and that it will maintain its own against aspersions and attacks." No man has done more, no man has done as much, to promote the growth of this scholarship as the illustrious scholar and reformer.

A CRUSADE AGAINST CASTE.

The course of modern influence in the Madras Presidency, especially, the Southern and Tamil half of it, has been peculiar to itself. English education began early and was received with avidity by the literary classes. But its progress did not seem for long to make any difference either internally or externally in those that received it. It was not infrequently the case that men who loved and spent much of their time in the study of English literature, carried their caste-marks on their foreheads and the caste-spirit in their hearts unaffectedly as if they had never allowed their studies to range beyond Manu. Converts to Christianity from the lower classes, especially, were numerous, but the literate castes studied the Bible and Shakespeare and continued to follow the rules of caste as rigidly as their forefathers. The Brahmo Samaj movement made little impression, nor the Arya Samaj, on the Indian mind in the South. Social Reform, whether of the Shastraic or the rationalistic brand, equally fell flat, though the latter had a little more success than the former. It seemed that nothing could awaken the South from its self-complacency which seemed to have been accentuated by English education. But appearances are deceptive. Though there has been no sign on the surface, all these efforts have been silently leavening the leading minds of the South. And it seems that, at last, we are on the eve of a revolution. The accumulated impact of modern forces seems to be beginning to tell. The shell shows signs of strain, and it may burst at any moment.

The slowness of the South to react to modern ideas, is due to many causes. It has been the leader in the post-Buddhistic Hindu revival. Sankara and Ramanuja were the apostles of modern Hinduism and they were both men of the South. The ascetic ideal of life had been implanted in the South by the example of these illustrious thinkers. It has also to be said that their reforms had done much to purify Hinduism of the corruptions which had crept into it. They had virtually banished Tantric worship from the South. The high-caste Hindu of the South might worship idols, but he was always in closer contact with the philosophic side of his faith, upon which Sankara and Ramanuja had built their cults. Then, again, the literate castes, owing to the conditions of their existence, had perfected a system by which they could safeguard themselves from the influences of their environment. They were thus able, while deriving what material advantage they could from the modern factor in their environment, to prevent its making any permanent dents in their armour of caste and custom. But this can not last for ever. The pressure of modern forces, especially in the form of the non-Brahmin movement, is increasing, and there are signs of distress in the citadel. Men like Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar and Mr. C. Rajagopalacharya have sounded the note of alarm. And Mr. Justice Seshagiri Iyer in his recent address has proclaimed that the time for apathy and self-complacency is past, and the alternative now is to frankly embrace modern ideas or to be swept into destruction.

What we most appreciate in Mr. Seshagiri Iyer's address is his frank admission that he has himself been slow in assuring and acting upon the truths which he enunciates. He told his hearers that the revelations which, as President of the Social Service League, have come home to him especially of the lot of the Panchamas, have been the immediate inspiring cause of his conversion. His words are worth quoting :

One word of personal explanation before I sit down. Very few people can excuse me of heterodoxy. I conform more to orthodox observances than any man in a similar station of life. I believe in very many of them, but I do not shut my eyes to what is in and around me. I have been moving slowly, more slowly than I ought to have done. The presidentship of the Madras Social Service League has been a revelation to me. It has opened my eyes to many things; not the least of them is the undug quarry of Panchama life. It is a crime to neglect the bringing out and clearing of the excellent material that lies there. We have thrown heaps of dirt and dust over it. We have kept it from the light of the sun and the sweep of healthy breeze. This material is at least as essential for building the national edifice as the bright metal that is on the surface. No one with a spark of patriotism can afford to neglect to press that substance into service. It would be a folly and a sin to the Motherland to do so.

It is, however, not only the position of the Panchamas that has to be improved. Caste must go. Mr. Seshagiri's remarks on this question took the form of an exhortation and a remonstrance to the apostles of Varnashrama Dharma.

I know they are very sincere about the inviolability of caste rules. I am sure they are honestly of opinion that it is possible to move smoothly and to work out the salvation of the masses by adherence to Varnashrama Dharma. Their high character, purity of life and intellectual attainments demand respectful consideration for their propaganda. May I ask some questions? Do you seriously think that you are not adding to the misery of your children by proclaiming yourself as belonging to a higher order of beings? Do you think that it is possible to stem the tide of democracy and to set up in India alone the rule of the priest against the wishes of the vast majority of the people? What has been your achievement in the past? Have you taken note of the enormous number of converts to other faiths? Take Malabar where caste has been ruling in exaltation and has been supreme. Have you looked into the census figures as to religion? Go back decade after decade and you will find that every ten years has depleted you and added adherents to other religions. How do you account for this? Your intolerance and your oppressive assumptions of superiority have thrown the oppressed into the arms of others. Take Tinnevely, Tanjore and Trichy. The same thing has happened. The converted Christian or Mohammedan will shake hands with you, whereas the patient non-converted parish has to stand yards off. It is this that you want to perpetuate. You have done injury enough. You are mainly responsible for the bitterness with which political controversy is being carried on in this part of India. In the name of all that you severally desist from further attempts at re-establishing an order of things which is doomed. Let your energies be devoted to atoning for your past exclusiveness, for your unthinking rigidity. We must move on. It may be that we should not run headlong. If that is your counsel I am with you; but if you think you can go back, you are wholly mistaken, and you will be put down by generations unborn as men who used all the great gifts which education bestowed on them to clog the wheel of progress and to bring about disunion and disharmony and to make their lot in life miserable and unhappy.

Mr. Justice Sadasiva Iyer who presided has been a consistent Shastraic reformer all his life. He presided on the occasion of his brother Judge's lecture and his concluding remarks were :

All human beings must be given the opportunity to disclose their true casta. All were born sudras, i. e., born for service, those who remained sudras in the lower sense being fit only for bodily service guided by others. This is true Democracy, not the Democracy which thinks that the vote of a foolish or wicked man is equal to that of a wise man. If they would not abolish the present rotten caste system it would abolish them as a nation. He was seriously thinking of giving up the name 'Hindu' if within 5 years from this date, the rigidity of caste and this rigidity of so-called Hindu religion which did not take other nations into its fold should continue.

A CRUEL DILEMMA.

The comments in the Subodh Patrika on the use of the Hindu marriage ritual at the marriage of a daughter of the distinguished social and religious reformer of Ahmedabad, Rao Bahadur Ramanbhai Mahipatram Nilkanth, illustrate once again the cruel dilemma in which the present law places Indians who profess the pure and simple Theistic creed. Mr. Ramanbhai, like his late eminent father before him, is a devoted member and leader of the Prarthana Samaj, and in participating in the orthodox marriage ritual, he was participating in a ceremony parts of which conflict with the formless worship of the Deity which the Samaj enjoins. The hom (the oblations in the sacred fire) and the saptapadi (seven steps), are the essential core of the Hindu marriage. The Arya Samaj does not regard the hom as idolatrous worship, but the Prarthana Samaj does. Thus, of the two leading Theistic movements of modern India, one, the Arya Samaj, does not feel any difficulty in adopting the Vedic parts of the Hindu ritual. The Prarthana Samaj (and the Brahmo Samaj), on the other hand, have not been able to do so, consistently with their view of hom which is the central part of all Vedic rites. This places the Prarthana Samajist in a difficult position in regard to the marriage rite. The law provides a civil marriage, but this is coupled with the condition that the parties should declare that they do not profess any of the old-established faiths. Many persons, including Prarthana Samajists, have conscientious scruples against making the declaration. Mr. G. C. Bhatte endeavoured by adding a clause qualifying the declaration to save his scruples, but this has since been declared inadmissible. The Prarthana Samajist in this position has no alternative but to submit to the orthodox rite, if he wishes to contract a marriage which is unquestionably valid according to the law. This has evidently been Mr. Ramanbhai's difficulty. It is absurd to think that he has suddenly given up his life-long convictions in religious matters. Under the circumstances, the hom and the saptapadi can only be regarded as a formality, entirely without a religious significance, imposed by the Civil Law on all persons who do not care to declare that they do not profess Hinduism, whether Prarthana Samajists or not. So far as we can see, there are only two other courses open to Mr. Ramanbhai and to others in his position. They may adopt the expurgated version of the Vedic rite prepared by Sir Ramakrishna Bhandarkar, and take the chance of the Courts declining to declare it invalid when the question is raised at some indefinite future date. This has been done by some. Or they may temporarily migrate to Baroda, where there is a simple civil law of marriage, the validity of which beyond the borders of that State is not quite certain. Both these alternatives, however, are involved in uncertainty, and one cannot be blamed for not making a choice of them. What the Prarthana and Brahmo Samajists should do, is either to get a Marriage Act of their own like the Parsis and Christians, or press for a simple Civil Marriage Act on the lines of Mr. Basu's Bill. Mr. Patel's Bill will be of no use to them.

THE PROBLEM OF CHRISTIANITY IN INDIA.

I.

(BY MR. MANILAL PAREKH.)

Both in the past and in the present a great deal has been or is being written as to what is wrong with Christianity in India, by Christians as well as non-Christians. Ever since the day that saw the beginning of the work of the great missionary William Carey, the methods adopted by the Protestant missionaries have been criticised by such men as Raja Ram Mohan Roy, Keshub Chunder Sen and many others who nevertheless wanted the spirit of Christ to spread all over India. Even Christian missionaries themselves have often felt that a great deal is wrong with their work and methods, and though most of them either lack the courage or do not care to speak out their minds on a subject of such supreme importance a man here and there raises his voice and even attempts to give some solution of the problem. But of all, it is the high-caste Hindu convert, particularly when he has come with real convictions, who can understand the problem in its entirety, though he may not always be able to say what he feels. Many of these, both in the South and in the North of India, have gone even so far to give a practical solution of the problem by establishing what they called national churches, the last of them being the Kingdom of God, Devache Darbar, by the late Mr. Tilak of the Maharashtra, but all in vain. There is something wrong with the Indian Christianity to-day that hampers every free and forward movement, and the missionaries and the principal Indian workers are aware of a deadlock in any real and genuine advance of their work all over India. No more does a Nilkanth Shastri (Father Nehemiah Goreh, the prince of Indian converts), or a Krishna Mohan Banerji, Kalicharan Banerji, Narayan Sheshadri, Pundita Ramabai or a Tilak, come forward to join the Christian fold, as was the case in the past. It is not that the Hindu character has deteriorated during these days, nor is it true that there are not.

among the Hindus a great many disciples of Christ. The fact is that although the caste system has been much more lax than ever before, these people who have great strength of character and many of whom have no caste either for themselves or for their families, prefer to stay outside rather than come into the Christian fold. And why is this?

In reply to this it has been often said that it is because the Church or the Christian people are denationalized that so many people find it difficult to come in. This is indeed true; but it is only half the truth or even much less. The denationalization so often complained of is only the effect. The cause of it is that the Indian Church is to-day almost completely proletarianized, and it is this which is at the bottom of all that is wrong with the Indian Christianity. Whether the missionary is "out for numbers" as has been said again and again by his foes or critics among whom last may be found even Christians, or whether it is because he has come with heaps of money as more than one missionary has had the candour to confess, or whether he builds by "external means" as a well-known missionary once put it, or whether as is most likely all these things have combined to produce the effect, there is not the least doubt that the missionary now-a-days rarely comes across the right type of man, and he gets most of his material almost exclusively from those classes who want to be civilized before they become Christians. In this connection the following words of Ritcher in his great book called "A History of Missions in India" will not be out of place.

"The main body of the Indian Christians converted in more recent times is either from the lower strata of the lowest Sudra castes or from among the outcastes. It is one of the most attractive tasks of the missionary historian to investigate how, now here, now there, one of these groups is laid hold of and gripped by Christian Missions, how to a greater or lesser degree mass movements follow, and how these movements come to a standstill almost as suddenly as they begin.....These masses of people have been mainly attracted to the missionaries for social or mundane reasons.....Should such aid ameliorate their social position, they soon become impertinent and supercilious towards the castes that were formerly above them....It is a fruitful subject for discussion in missionary circles, whether it is wise to proletarianize Indian Christendom too greatly by too large an influx of Pariah congregations, and thereby to render Christianity wholly despicable and unacceptable to the higher classes as the religion of the Pariah."

Whereas the Kingdom of Heaven grows from within without, (I am speaking altogether of the Protestant missionaries in all that I say here, for I have very little personal knowledge of Roman Catholic mission-work) have gone in for this work of civilizing of the submerged portion of the Hindus, confounding it with the Kingdom of Heaven itself. Thus while the doors of the Christian Church are opened wider and wider, they are closed in a corresponding manner for the higher classes or castes of the Hindus. Things have gone so far in this direction that for a high caste Hindu to be a Christian is tantamount to his submerging among the lower and the lowest classes. It is like asking an American or a European to be submerged among the negroes. Is it then any wonder if the high-caste Hindu has shrunk from such a step when no sane European, whether missionary or not, has ever taken it whether in America or in India which latter has certainly a higher civilization than that of the negroes and contains the people of the same race as the Europeans themselves? There may be individual cases where both men and women have gone in for such submerging through marital union, but these are very rare exceptions, and such cases are to be found among both Europeans and the Hindus. But the broad fact remains that even the missionary, not to speak of the ordinary European, is as much a Varnashrami as the ancient Aryan ever was, or the modern Hindu now is. I shall never forget a sharp reply that I once received from a young American missionary, fresh from America and full of enthusiasm for the preaching of the Kingdom of Heaven. He had just started work and was asking for suggestions as to how he should proceed and what new lives he could work on, when I told him that one of the things that might help the cause of Christ in a real way was intermarriage between the European and the Indian, he had the courage to tell me in reply that I did not know all the facts of the matter, and that it was positively wrong to go in for such inter-racial marriages. When I told him that most of our own caste distinctions were originally based on these very colour distinctions, he said "Oh! the race-distinctions might remain even among the Hindus though the caste might go." This young American is not alone in thinking thus: almost all the missionaries have thought so, with regard to themselves, for the last century. So far there has been but one man among them who has had the courage to say that intermarriage is one of the very best means to further the cause of Christianity in India, and has gone in for one such for the sole purpose of advancing the Kingdom of Heaven. Personally I do not blame the missionary or the ordinary European for hesitating to take such a step; but I would certainly blame any one who would have some law for himself and another for others, or who refusing to rise above race-distinctions himself would ignore the same distinction in the case of others, and when these latter find it hard to do so would accuse them of cowardice and weakness as the missionaries have been doing with regard to the high-caste Hindus. Although I am far from being an apologist or upholder of the caste system as it is, I do believe that caste-abolition should not be tantamount to submerging of the higher among the lower castes which unfortunately it comes to in the present Christian fold in India. Therefore, to ask a high-caste man to enter the Christian fold today is to ask him to take up a cross which neither the missionary himself is prepared to take, nor do the majority of his converts take up. It is like asking him to take up in a real vicarious manner the cross of all these besides that of his own. Is it any wonder if he shrinks from doing so? In this connection the following words of Meredith Townsend, a very shrewd observer, will be worth noticing. He says:—

"There is in India no Christian caste, and there never will be. Not to mention that the idea is in itself opposed to Christianity, there can be no such organization unless the Europeans will admit equality between themselves and the natives, and they will not. Something stronger than themselves forbids it. They may be wrong or right, but their wills are powerless to conquer a feeling they often sorrow for, and the very missionary who dies a martyr to his efforts to convert the Indians, would die unhappy if his daughter married the best convert among them. In presence of that feeling a Christian caste is impossible, for the Hindoo, a true Asiatic, will not admit that with equality in caste inequality in race can co-exist."

In spite of all this, many high-caste Hindus have made most heroic sacrifices to begin with, but they soon get tired of such business and often let the weight of this tremendous cross fall on their Hindu wives which the poor in-spirit Hindu women that they are they bear silently and meekly. Sometimes the poor Hindu woman is forsaken altogether by her husband who, after divorcing her, proceeds to marry an educated and cultured wife, and when that one dies marries another even though the first wife who was left to rot all this while in terrible moral and mental misery, might like to join her husband who will not now receive or simply because she with her uncultured habits does not now suit the refined tastes of such a Christian gentleman who may now be holding a high position among Christians. While the convert is thus preaching and practising his Christianity the poor woman is living a blameless life, and that she does mainly because the spirit of Hinduism prevents her from following any other course which would certainly be wrong. Again if she joins him from the very first which also several do owing to the same Hindoo spirit, she leads a life of inner anguish which is altogether hidden even from her own husband, and much more from others.

This kind of proselytising, besides being unfair to the high caste converts, is most unfair to the whole of the Hindu civilization. It aims at nothing but its complete subversion whether it was its deliberate aim or not, the procedure that has been so far followed if it became successful according to the wishes of the missionary would mean building up of a new India entirely from the bottom upwards, and all this in the name of Christ! The missionary has all these hundred years most systematically depreciated everything that is good and noble in the religious and institutions of the land, and now after proletarianising his own fold as much as possible would like to build a new society, new civilization on this foundation. The missionary cannot believe in any civilization but his own, and instead of being after the manner of St. Paul an Indian to the Indians, a Hindoo to the Hindoos, he wants his flock to be English and Americans. As he is particular about his colour, so is he about his civilization, he has come to give us a universal religion, but this has been so identified with national forms that he cannot rest satisfied unless we take his national forms, whether of church-life or social-life. There is no wonder if he has succeeded in this too, i. e. in de-nationalizing his flock, because he has his material mostly from the lowest and lower classes. To quote again Meredith Townsend:

"The Missionary never becomes an Indian, or anything which an Indian could mistake for himself; the influence of civilization is too strong for him. He cannot help desiring that his flock should become civilized as well as Christian. He understands no civilization but his own and by unwearied admonition, by governing, by teaching, by setting up all manner of useful industries, he tries to bring them up to his narrow ideal. That is he becomes a pastor on the best English model part preacher, part schoolmaster, part ruler: always doing his best, always more or less successful, but always with an eye to a false end—the Europeanization of the Asiatic.... The result is that the missionary becomes an excellent pastor or an efficient schoolmaster instead of a proselytizer, and that his converts or their children or the thousands of pagan lads he teaches become in exact proportion to his success a hybrid caste, not quite European, not quite Indian."

Free Milk Supply to the Poor:—We print in another column the prospectus issued by the Arya Mahila Samaj of a project for supplying milk free of cost to expectant and nursing mothers and little children. We understand that the first centre will be opened at the Depressed Classes Mission Society's Home at Parel, on Sunday the 16th instant, and that it will be under the control of Mr. and Mrs. Soloni, the Superintendents. We cordially commend the appeal to our readers, and wish all success to this humanitarian endeavour on the part of the Arya Mahila Samaj.

Sir Dinshaw Wacha:—A special cablegram to the Leader of Allahabad states that the Hon. Sir Dinshaw Wacha has been appointed a member of the Army Commission.

INDIAN EDUCATION SOCIETY, DADAR, BOMBAY.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

I shall be highly obliged if you will kindly give publicity to the following donations handed over to the Indian Education Society at Dadar: Shrimant Sirdar Babasaheb Ghorpade, Chief of Ichalkaranji 1,000; Shrimant Rajesahab Vikramshah of Jawhar 1,000. You have been doing this sort of favour every now and then and I am hopeful at this time and in future too. Along with the donations you will kindly insert a few remarks in connection with the Society's work.

Last week the Improvement Trust granted our application for a plot of land measuring 14,000 sq. yards. We are going to spend nearly two lacs of Rupees over the High School Buildings. Funds are being collected by the Secretaries. The work of collection is facilitated by the active and enthusiastic efforts of some of the members of the Society, among whom are:—The Hon. Mr. Lallubhai Samaldas, Mr. Mathuradas Vasani Khimji, Hanraj Praggi Thackersey, Velsaji Lakhamay Nappoo, Mr. D. R. Patwardhan and Mr. S. K. Bole.

Yours truly,
M. S. KHOSLA,
Secretary.

THE BOMBAY HIGH COURT AND SATYAGRAHI LAWYERS.

Sir,

May I add a few words to your fine article on the Bombay High Court decision in the case of the Satyagrahi lawyers that so Satyagrahi will feel worried over the decision. With great deference to your opinion, I may say that an appeal to the Privy Council is inadvisable.

On a political issue it is unwise to seek the decision of courts unassisted by juries, when still political feeling is strong. Again the cost of such an appeal would be a needless waste of money over solicitors and counsel in a foreign land for no adequate return. Lastly, the decision directly helps the end the Satyagrahi has in view, far from being a decision against him.

Satyagrahis undertook to disobey the law and the penalty. If the very undertaking brings about the suffering he sought for, it is the most easy, most dignified and most effective form of Satyagraha which the High Court has discovered for him. The one difficulty before Mr. Gandhi was the choice of a law for disobedience that would be most suitable for the conquest of an exclusive enemy that would not give battle, viz., a statute passed with a reservation as to present abeyance. That difficulty would be solved at once if the High Court or the Government decided that the very pledge was a disobedience of the law. If there had been an express section in the Legal Practitioners Act or the charter Act that vakils and pleaders should not undertake civil disobedience, I have no doubt that Mr. Gandhi would have selected this law as eminently suited for disobedience by such members of the bar as decided to enter the struggle. The decision, if brought into effect would be a triumph for Satyagraha and bring out the true beauty and unconquerable strength of the principle.

C. RAJAGOPALACHAR.

THE ARYA MAHILA SAMAJ-BOMBAY.

FREE MILK DISTRIBUTION FUND.

In a city like Bombay, so beautiful and so wealthy, one shudders to see the high mortality amongst women and children and when one tries to enter into the causes, one is moved to the core to find that starvation—want of proper nourishing food of the Indian is milk and how little of this the poor unfortunate little mites or their mothers get? Our city is full of rich merchants, philanthropic and generous. Does not the lot of the poor unfortunate creatures move their hearts?

The Arya Mahila Samaj has started a free milk distribution fund with a view to meet at least to a certain extent, this hard pressing want of poor expectant and nursing mothers and little children and has appointed a Sub-committee to look after the management of the fund and the distribution of milk.

The Arya Mahila Samaj appeals to the generous minded public rich and poor who are touched by the hardships or sufferings of the poor to help the Samaj as much as lies in their power. Need it be mentioned that these lives, if taken proper care of, will form an invaluable treasure of our Motherland and thus will repay the kindness shown to them?

Members of the sub-Committee: Lady Laxmibai Chandavakar, Mrs. Laxmibai Parulkar, Mrs. Sundrabai Sirur, Mrs. Durgabai Madgaonkar, Mrs. Sushilabai Jayakar, Mrs. Manjulabai Lad, Mrs. Awantikabai Gokhale, Mrs. Manjulabai Bhandara, Miss Krishnabai Javara, Miss Kashibai Nowrange. Details as regards the Centres to be opened for free distribution of milk will be published later on. All subscriptions and donations should be kindly forwarded to:—Dr. Miss Kashibai Nowrange, B.A., L.M. & S., Atmaram Mansions, }

Girgaum, Bombay. } Secretary,
Free Milk Supply Fund.

JAPAN AND THE PHILIPPINES.

The Philippine Review published the following interview between Baron Shibusawa and its Editor, Mr. Nieva

Editor Nieva.—I came to Tokyo, in the first place, to have the pleasure of meeting you, and then obtain your views on certain sides of present day oriental politics. To begin with, I would like to know what you think about matters in the Orient now that the war is over.

Baron Shibusawa.—I should say, first of all, that we all must work jointly for civilization and universal welfare. I mean by this that if nations would continue, as in the past, to make of their respective programs an exclusive, selfish issue, and should nations in the future fail to improve their methods of policies, and just go ahead as in the past, then conflicts may arise again. We must view things with a broader mind, and hope that nations are all progressing alike. This, of course, requires co-operation, as well as material and spiritual advancement, and a spirit of justice and humanity, as our common slogan and object.

Such is my sincere belief.

I fear, however, that, if each country should seek to develop the resources of the world for its own sake, a second Germany may arise as a result.

Of course, according to old theories, each country must supply its own interests. To my mind, however, this is a mistake today, for I hold that each country should be mindful of others' interests. Otherwise there may be room for disagreements. There are still quite a few who believe that they must develop this or that nation of the Orient, and are actually looking forward for a chance for it. I cannot but fail to agree with this. What I think is that we all should co-operate with each other, and make our region and the people of the Orient prosperous. We all must enjoy prosperity and happiness. We all should make the world our home, and the terms of the old diplomacy should no longer prevail. This is why I said I hope each nation and people should look not only after their own interests alone, but also after those of others'. For if one country is prosperous, its neighbouring countries will also be prosperous. I hope, therefore, that Oriental countries should co-operate with each other, with Europe also co-operating and changing her old policies about the East.

Ed. N.—Do you mean that we should follow the "open door policy" for all and everybody?

B. S.—Yes, Sir I should say so. I would endorse the open door policy as necessary for the development of the Orient, to thus give opportunity to all and everybody.

For instance, China has mines and other resources, but she cannot develop them, because of her lack of means and transportation facilities. And she needs foreign capital to develop them. This is a clear instance of the need of the open door policy. But if capital should ever go to China or elsewhere in utter disregard of the interests of the people or the country concerned, only to take care of the profit it should make, then I am afraid capitalistic domination may ensue. The advance and progress of the Orient require that we should abandon the theory of selfishness, without allowing, however, any disrespect to the privileges and prerogatives of the nation in interest. It is in this, I think, that co-operation is needed most. To quote an instance, there has been recently a misunderstanding between China and Japan, in that the Chinese people believe that Japan is in China for selfish ends. This is a mistake. In my opinion, Japan must assist China jointly with the U. S., and I hope a thorough understanding will finally follow as to our purposes in China, and that America will eventually realize what Japan's real policy in China is.

My idea of Japan's Chinese policy is not my own alone. Business men and others believe in it. China's door must be open and in this we should co-operate with the U. S. The Chinese people are slandering us. We may have made mistakes, but we would only be very happy to correct them. But China is not entirely correct, and it would seem that the Chinese people are becoming nervous. I believe Japan must do justice to China and other Oriental countries, as well as your own country, and we sincerely pay our respects to our brothers of the South.

Ed. N.—While in the States, I noticed that Japan is the only hindrance or the stumbling block to the successful solution of the Philippine Case, and, in this respect, allow me to express my ideas and propound some questions about Japan. It is everywhere believed that the greatest menace to the existence of a Philippine Republic is Japan, and that your country is only waiting for a chance "to grab mine", using their own words. Allow me, therefore, in this connection, to ask you if Japan would only be a mere copy of Europe in her policies regarding the weaker countries of the Far East; i. e., if Japan is merely going to be the new oppressor of the Orient.

B. S.—I should say that if such suspicions are really the feelings of some Americans, I should not believe that they are liberty-loving Americans. They must be irresponsible Americans who see nothing but aggression in us. Japan has no business whatsoever in the Philippines. We respect the growth and progress of your people, and, if we can, we should only be very happy to render you any assistance for the sake of our brothers of the South.

If Americans say that Japan would grab the Philippines because of Korea, that has no foundation. It is perhaps necessary for Japan to govern and pacify Korea. Japan has insisted in this. But as to the Philippines, it is a different thing altogether. Whether independent or not from America, we will respect the integrity of your people. And so, if America has some iota of respect for the cause of the Japanese people, she should understand what we mean when we say that we pay our respects to your people. And if your independence is recognized by the U. S., I am sure that the civilized Japanese and the leaders of Japan would only be happy to recognize the status of the Philippines. I am not a politician but I think, from the spirit of the Japanese nation, that we should only be happy to respect your integrity, should the U. S. guarantee you independence, as well as to pay our respect and regards to our sister nations, be they the Philippines, China or others.

Ed. N.—And what have you to say about Shantung?

B. S.—As I said, I am not in politics, but whatever Japan has promised she has always fulfilled. And I feel quite sure that whatever promise has been made as to Shantung, we will fulfill it, and restore Shantung to China. But should Americans continue to distrust Japan, there would be no end to it.

I am positive we will honour our pledge, without any necessity for Americans to slander us, as they always do.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postages
 In advance. In arrears.
 Per annum..... Rs. 5—0—0. Rs. 5—0—0.
 Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, twelve
 hillings (Rs. 6).

Single copies of the current year can be had at annas each and any back copies at 6 annas each.

DO YOU WISH TO KNOW YOUR "FUTURE"

Send your time and date of birth or your star and age or note the time when you write the letter, you will be given a full reading of your life or one year to come for ONE RUPEE ONLY.
 Mr. Ghazanfar Muhammad Khan, Deputy Collector, writes from Moradabad City. "The one year life reading you sent me proved to be QUITE TRUE."

THE KALINGA ASTROLOGICAL BUREAU,
 24-8-19- Chodavaram, Vizagapatam District.

"COMMERCE AND INDUSTRIES."

An Interesting Monthly Journal of Indian
 Material Progress.

Annual Subscription Rs. 10-0 and Single Copy
 Re. 1 Post Free.

A Specially valuable advertising Medium.

Wanted Agents throughout India.

Address:—P. Box. No. 353, and 5 Mount Road
 Madras S. C. 12-10-19

"Wanted:—Employment, as teacher or governess, by an educated Brahman widow with midwifery training and medical practice, well-versed in music and the Vina; proficient in English, Sanskrit, Telugu and Canarese, and speaking Tamil and Hindustani nols. Please apply to K. R. C/o, The Indian Social Reformer, Bombay." 21-9-19.

GALE'S MAGAZINE.

Linn A. E. Gale, Editor and Publisher.

Champion of Socialism, New Thought, Occultism
 Internationalism and Birth Control

Contains such articles as:

"The Birth Pangs of Revolution"

"The World That Is To Be"

"The Psychic Meaning of the War"

"Judas Icarot and the Bolsheviki"

"Are We Hypnotized?"

The only Advanced Thought Magazine in English in Mexico. A Journal That is Indispensable to All Who Want to Understand the Signs of the Times.

$ 2 year, American money. $ 1 for 6 months.
 20c. a copy. No Free Samples. Remit by bank draft on New York or personal check.

GALE'S MAGAZINE,

P. O. Box 518

219-19.

Mexico City, D. F., Mexico.

THE TATA INDUSTRIAL BANK, LD.

HEAD OFFICE, BOMBAY.

BRANCHES—CALCUTTA and HYDERABAD (Deena)
CAWNPORE and LUCKNOW.

Sub-Branches—

Bombay—Share Bazaar, Shroff Bazaar.

Calcutta—Barr Bazaar.

London Agents. LLOYDS BANK LIMITED.

NEW YORK AGENTS: THE GUARANTY
TRUST COY. OF NEW YORK.

AUTHORISED CAPITAL... Rs. 12,00,00,000.

SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL..... " 7,56,00,225.

PAID UP CAPITAL..... " 1,50,99,225.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Sir D. J. Tata, Kt., Chairman.

Sir Sassoon David, Bart.

Sir R. N. Mookerjee, Kt., C.I.E.

Sir Francis Stewart, Kt.

Sir Henry Proctor, Kt.

R. D. Tata, Esq.

F. E. Dinshaw, Esq.

F. C. Rimington, Esq.

Narottam Morarjee, Esq.

Hajee Gulam Mahomed Ajam, Esq.

The Hon'ble Mr. Parshottamdas Thakordas, C. I. E.

A. J. Bilimoria, Esq.

Secretary, R. H. Parker.

Current Accounts opened and interest allowed on daily credit balances from Rs. 500/- to Rs. 1,00,000/- at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum. If the balance to the credit of any account does not fall below Rs. 25,000/- at any time between 1st January and 30th June, interest will be allowed during that period at 2½ per cent. per annum. No interest is allowed unless the sum accrued amounts to Rs. 5/- Half-yearly.

Fixed Deposits. Interest allowed on Deposits fixed for one or two years and for shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank. Interest allowed on Savings Bank Accounts at 4 per cent per annum. Rules may be obtained on application.

Loans and Cash Credits are granted on approved securities.

Purchases and sales of Securities and shares effected.

Bills of Exchange purchased and collected and every description of Banking and exchange business undertaken.

14-4-18. J. PAGAN DALZELL Acting Manager.

THE YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK, LIMITED.

(Registered in Japan.)

Established 1880.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 18,000,000.

Paid up Capital.....Yen. 42,000,000.

Reserve Fund.....Yen. 23,100,000.

Head Office:—Yokohama.

Branches and Agencies at Bombay, Buenos Aires, Calcutta, Chongchun, Chi-Nan, Dairen, Fengtien, Hankow, Harbin, Hongkong, Honolulu, Kaiyuan, Kobe, London, Los Angeles, Lyons, Manila, Nagasaki, Newchwang, New York, Osaka, Peking, Rangoon, San Francisco, Seattle, Shanghai, Shimonoseki, Singapore, Soerabaya, Sydney, Tientsin, Tokio, Tsingtao.

Current Deposit Accounts are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 100,000, provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of banking and exchange business transacted.

N. IGARASHI

Post Box No. 207, Hornby Road, Bombay.

I. NISHIMAKI

Manager, Calcutta.

1-13-17.

Post Box No. 408, Clive street, Calcutta

THE BANK OF BARODA, LD.

Under the Patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja Gaekwar. Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897

HEAD OFFICE BARODA.

Branches—Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mestana, and Surat

Capital Subscribed... Rs. 60,00,000.

Capital Paid up " 20,00,000.

Reserve Fund " 12,50,000.

DIRECTORS :

The Hon'ble Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas, C. I. E., Chairman

Sir Vishaldas Dandekar Theokerey, Kt.

Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti Nagesh Sheth

Baroda.

Sheth Manilal Revadas, Vednagar.

Rao Bahadur Ganeshras R. Nimbalkar, Sar Sabha, Baroda

State.

Bhaskerrao Vishaldas Mehta, Esq., Advocate, High Court

Bombay.

M. H. Kantavalla, Esq., Agent, Maharaja Mill Co.

Baroda.

R. R. Shirgaokar, Naib Sabha, Baroda State.

A. N. Datar, Accountant General, Baroda State.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balance from Rs. 500 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest which does not come to Rs. 5 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application. C. E. BANDLE.—General Manager. 15-4-12.

THE CENTRAL BANK OF INDIA, LTD

Subscribed Capital... Rs. 50,00,000

Paid Up Capital... " 25,00,000

Reserved liability of

Shareholders... " 25,00,000

Reserve Fund... " 6,00,000

Head Office:—Alicia Building, Bombay.

Local Branches:—(1) Mandvi (2) Zaveri

Bazar, (3) Share Bazar,

Branches:—Amritsar, Calcutta, Delhi, Jharra,

Karachi.

London Agents:—London, Joint City and

Midland Bank, Ltd.

Current Accounts:—3 ½ % allowed on Daily

Balances from January to June

2 ½ % allowed on Daily

Balances from July to December.

12 months Deposits received at 5 ½ % per annum.

Long and Short period Deposits received at rates

to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking Business transacted.

For further particulars please apply to the

Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA,

Manager.

25-2-17

THE BANK OF TAIWAN, LTD.

Incorporated by Special Charter of the Imperial Japanese Government, 1899.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 30,000,000
Paid-up CapitalYen. 22,500,000
Reserve FundYen. 5,680,000

Head Office:—Taipei, Formosa.

BRANCHES:—

LONDON	SHANGHAI	TOKIO
NEW YORK	HONGKONG	OSAKA
AMOI	SINGAPORE	KOBE
CANTON	SOERABAJA	YOKOHAMA
FOOCHOW	SEMARANG	AKO
HANKOW	MAKUNG	GIRAN
KIUKIANG	BATAVIA	KAGI
SWATOW	PINAN	KARENKO
TAINAN	SHINCHIKU	KEELUNG
TAKOW	TAICHU	TAMSUI

The Bank has also a large number of Correspondents at Home and Abroad.

Current Deposit Accounts—are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at 2 per cent. per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 1,00,000 provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of Banking and Exchange business transacted.

K. TAKEMURA

Manager

9-12-17.

56, Esplanade Road, Fort, BOMBAY

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

Established 7th September 1906.

Incorporated under the Indian Companies' Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE:

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.

Capital Subscribed Ra. 1,00,00,000

Capital Called up " 50,00,000

Reserve Fund " 15,00,000

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 500 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½% p. a. throughout the year. On sums exceeding Rs. 1,00,000 interest is allowed by special arrangement. No interest will be allowed which does not amount to Rs. 5 per half year.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for shorter periods @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, & CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stocks at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

H. P. STRINGFELLOW,

15-1-11.

Manager.

A Lady's Best Ornament is a Glorious Head of Hair.

A profusion of rich, soft silky, lustrous, wavy hair—where's the woman who would not like that?

There's only one oil that makes such hair and it's the far-famed

KAMINIA OIL
(Regd.)

Invaluable for ladies, and just as much for Brain-Workers and Students.

Heated head cooled, aching disappears and dandruff becomes a thing of the past. Added to all these it possesses a beautiful fragrant smell.

For superiority, awarded a Gold Medal at the Mysore Exhibition, and in great demand all over the country.

If you have not yet used KAMINIA OIL, you

have missed a fine delight and a real boon; use it now, if only once; and like many people you will prefer to use also always

Price per bottle, Re. 1. V. P. Charges 6 annas extra

Price for 3 bottles Rs. 2-10. V. P. charges 14 annas extra

Write now, Do not delay.

Sole Agents:—

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,
(5-8-16) No. 155, Jumma Masjid Market, BOMBAY.

Now-a-Days.

All things have advanced in price. Even the vegetable ingredients used in our Atank Nigrah Pills have advanced in price.

Even the labourers demand heavy wages being dearer. Even the users have increased yet the Atank Nigrah Pills for Toning up the system are sold at before war price i. e. at a Rupee.

Vaidya Shastri

Manishanker Govindji,

Atank Nigrah Pharmacy,

Head Office:—Jamnagar—Kathiawar.

Branch:—Kalbadevi Road, Bombay.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours. Publish Fine Art Pictures, & c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.
1-12-10. HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS-

ROYAL TONIC PILLS

Powerful Nutritious and Strength Restorer. Price Rs. 1-4 per box of 30 Pills.

PREPARED BY—GOVINDJEE DAMODER & Co.,

Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Commission Agents.

1-12-10,

No. 3 Sutar Chawl Market, BOMBAY.

Timely advice to the Wealthy

Costly but certain remedies are in the long run cheaper than cheap and uncertain ones.

KANDARPA SANJIVINI PILLS AND OIL

are the safest and surest remedies for indigestion, constipation, loss of appetite, memory, mental, physical and nervous debility and all sorts of urinary disorders, improve impoverished blood.

Price per tin of 40 Pills Rs. 5 & per tola of Oil Rs. 10.

Both Purchased at a time Rs. 11/4

Medical Advice and a Medical Book containing 128 pages sent Gratis and Post Free.

RAJ VAIDYA NARAYANJI KESHAYJI

Head Office:—Jamnagar, Kathiawar, (India.)

Branch:—No. 187, Kalbadevi Road,
24-8-1919. BOMBAY.

Empire Hindu Hotel

Opposite Victoria Terminus
Bombay.

(Central Situation)
Strictly Vegetarian
Charges Moderate

Fitted with
Electric Lift, Fans and Lights.

TELEGRAMS: } TELEPHONE

"FOOD," BOMBAY. } 2789.

22-8-18.

Saffron ? Saffron ?? Saffron ???
If you wish to buy genuinely pure and best Saffron it is
SUN

BRAND

SAFFRON.

ONLY

It has been largely used by Jain Temples, Maharajas, Durbars, Hakims and Vaidyas all over the country for the last 75 years and is well known for its purity and genuineness.

B. NARAYEN & Co.,

17-5-18

21, Hammam Street, Fort Bombay.

REVOLUTION IN SHORTHAND.

There are systems and systems, but that one is the most "practical" which can be written with a pen or pencil, straight away on unruled paper, without thickening, positions, grammalogues, multitudes of rules and exceptions, arbitrary word-signs and contractions, long lists of phrases, and various other impediments to speed. The New "ROYAL-SPEED" Course of 12 Lessons, incorporated by Expert who introduced the Original Duployan Joined-Vowel Scheme in the East, has all the advantages of a modern, down-to-date system, and is acquired by Boys and Girls of 12, in a fraction of time. Quickest Results and Highest Efficiency are Guaranteed. Personal or Postal Tuition. Prospective pupils must investigate, as interested parties seem to recommend the only system known to them.

NATIONAL BUSINESS COLLEGE,

1st Floor, Luxmi Bldg., Lamington Road, Bombay.

"EVERYTHING FOR EVERYBODY"

National Standard Portable Typewriter No. 3 (10 lbs.) Rs. 180
Oliver No. 8 (American Rebuilt) S.S. & Tab. Rs. 175; No. 7 " 200
Empire No. 1 (Do.) in good working order " 85
Multikopy Typewriter Carbons, per Box of 100 sheets. " 8
Webster Brand " Ribbons for all machines, Doz. " 21
Typewriter Oil (best 1 oz. bot.) or Eberhard Brasers, Doz. " 6
Safety Razor, Rivalis Gillette, with 6 Gillette Blades (best) " 6
Envelope Making Machine (to make 30,000 per day), New " 36
Conklin's Self Filling Fountain Pen (non-leakable) Gold Nib " 6

UNIVERSAL BUSINESS SYNDICATE,

20-4-19. Post Box No. 424, Bombay.

HYPNOTISM

PERSONAL MAGNETISM,
WILL POWER,
NERVE FORCE—

Call what you will—

Is the intangible power that controls human destiny. It is the key to all business and social success. This power is no special gift of any one. It is latent in every one. We help you how to display it. By our system, you can learn in a few days at your own home and not only achieve success yourself, but you can influence the mind, health and actions of others to a remarkable degree.

Write immediately for our free booklet—The Pride of India.

THE LATENT LIGHT CULTURE,
TINNEVELLY, S. INDIA.

Bhatiwala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 1 each bottle of 100.

Bhatiwala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 2 each bottle of 100.

Bhatiwala's Ague Mixture of Fever, Malaria, Influenza etc.

Bhatiwala's Ague Pills for Malaria, Fever, Influenza etc.

Bhatiwala's Tonic pills for pale people & nervous breaks down.

Bhatiwala's Tooth Powder of Preserving Teeth

Bhatiwala's Ringworm ointment for Ringworm Dhobi Itch etc.

May be had from all dealers in medicines or from

Dr. H. L. Bhatiwala Sons & Co., Ltd.

No. 12, Worli, 18, Bombay.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESS:—"Doctor Bhatiwala Dadar"

THE BOMBAY CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK.

HEAD OFFICE:—Apollo Street, St., Bombay.

DIRECTORS—The Hon. Sir Fasilbhoy Currimbhoy (Chairman), Sir Yithaldas D. Thackeray, the Hon. Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas, Sir Stanley Reed, the Hon. Mr. C. V. Mehta, the Chief of Ichalkaranji, G. K. Devadhar, Esq., the Hon. Sir P. D. Pattani, the Raja Sahab of Malegaon.

Share Capital (fully paid) Rs. 7,00,000

1 Deposits fixed for one year and shorter or longer period are accepted. Rates and other particulars may be ascertained from the under signed.

2 The Bank finances only registered Co-operative Societies in the Bombay Presidency on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency.

3 Accounts are audited half-yearly by a special Government Auditor, and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the "Bombay Government Gazette."

20-5-17. VAIKUNTH L. MEHTA, Manager.

Clean
Wholesome
Intelligent
Entertainment

IS A GREAT STEP

IN

SOCIAL REFORM.

When deciding on a

*PLACE OF AMUSEMENT TWO
ESTABLISHMENTS*

Should at once leap to the mind.

THE EXCELSIOR
BOMBAY'S PREMIER MODERN THEATRE

AND

THE EMPIRE
BOMBAY'S MOST PALATIAL
PICTURE THEATRE

Where Film Plays of Distinction are shown
Every Week.

A

Great Cinema Masterpiece
is shown,

Both theatres are near the Bori Bunder
and are run by the

EXCELSIOR SYNDICATE.

The Pioneer of Bombay's

AMUSEMENT WORLD.

FURUKAWA & CO.

TOKIO

The Largest Manufacturers
in the East

OF

ELECTRIC BARE COPPER CONDUCTORS,
ELECTRIC UNDERGROUND CABLES,
ELECTRIC INSULATED WIRES,
ELECTRIC ACCESSORIES,
INGOTS, RODS, WIRES,
SHEETS, TUBES,
Etc., Etc.,

SOLE AGENTS IN INDIA AND BURMA.

TATA, SONS & CO.,
BOMBAY & CALCUTTA.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS Ltd.

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.

Narsari Building, Fort, BOMBAY.

Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

11-8-17.

When YOUR EYES

need to be examined by QUALIFIED OCULISTS and by SCIENTIFIC REFRACTIONISTS of 26 year experience, FREE OF CHARGE, you cannot do better than GO TO

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR & CO.

The leading firm of Oculists, Eyesight Specialists, Manufacturing Opticians and suppliers of the patented

"KRYPTOK"

(Invisible one-piece bifocal lens.)

Toric, and all kinds of lenses,—Cylindrical, Spherocylindrical, Prismatic, &c., from pebbles as well as from best quality crown glass.

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR

Eyesight Specialist,

With 26 Years' Practical Experience.

Holds Exceptional Testimonials from H. H. The Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, the Hon'ble Sir Lawrence Jenkins the Hon. Mr. Justice Batty, Mrs. Batty, the Hon. Sir N. S. Chandavarkar, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Basman, the Hon'ble Sir S. L. Bachelor, the Hon'ble Sir John Heaton Mr. H. G. Gell, M. V. O., Col. R. H. Forman, B. A. M. C., P. M. O. Bo. Brigade, Lieut. Col. G. H. Bull, M. D., I. M. S., Lieut-Colonel Peters M. B., I. M. S., and other high personages.

(7) 879, HORNEY ROW,

Opposite the Government Telegraph Office, Fort, BOMBAY.

INTENDING ASSUREES ARE INVITED TO COMPARE THE RATES AND CONDITIONS OF

The Empire of India Life Assurance Company, Limited.

WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.

Head Office in Elphinstone Circle, BOMBAY.

SEE REPORT AND OPINIONS OF THE PRESS AS TO THE REMARKABLE PROGRESS MADE BY THE COMPANY.

ENDOWMENT NON-FORFEITABLE POLICY FOR RS. 3,000.

PAYABLE AT AGE 60 OR AT DEATH, IF PREVIOUS, WITH PROFIT.

If, at any time, the assured under this plan should desire to cease paying any more premiums, he can obtain a paid-up Policy for such a proportion of the original sum assured as the number of premiums paid bears to the number agreed upon. Thus a gentleman who had assured at age 30 for a Policy of Rs. 3,000 payable at age 60 or at Death, if previous, after 5 year payments, would be entitled to a Free paid-up Policy for Rs. 500 free of future payments.

MONTHLY PREMIUM.

AT AGE 20, Rs. 8-9-0.

AT AGE 25, Rs. 7-8-0.

AT AGE 30, Rs. 8-14-0.

AT AGE 35, Rs. 10-18-0.

AT AGE 40, Rs. 13-12-0.

AT AGE 45, Rs. 18-10-0

22-9-10.

SOME OF THE DISTINCTIVE FEATURES.

- Funds invested in Government Securities and in accordance with the Indian Trusts Act
- Policy holders can appoint their own Directors.
- 90 per cent. of Profits to Participating Policy holders.
- Lapsed policies revived without Medical Certificate.
- Liberal Surrender Values 40 per cent. of the Tabular premium paid.
- Immediate payment of Claims.
- Medical fees and stamps on Policies are payable by the Company.
- The sum assured is PAYABLE IN FULL should death occur soon immediately after payment of the first premium.

GUARANTEE INSURANCE.—This Company issues Guaranteed Policies in situation of trust and responsibility, it is specially authorized to guarantee the employes of the Post Office

Proposed Forms and full Particulars may be obtained from any local Agent in India or from ALLUM, BHARUCHA & CO. Managers.

IN INDIA

EVERY ONE KNOWS.

whom it does concern that we are foremost in supplying the best

COSSI SILK SUIT PIECES

suitable for the season. These pieces are strong, fancy and durable, and have been specially manufactured for Indian Market. Each piece guaranteed for One Suit Complete.

Price Rs. 10 per piece.

Write to—THE BHARGAVA COMMERCIAL SOCIETY,

2-18.

Benares City.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER. Contract Rates for Advertisements.

Number of insertions.	1		2		3		4		5
	Inch.	Rs. s.	Inches.	Rs. s.	Column.	Rs. s.	Column.	Rs. s.	Column.	Page.
18.	11	0	16	0	20	0	30	0	50	0	87	0
26	16	0	25	0	30	0	50	0	87	0	155	0
52	25	0	38	0	50	0	87	0	155	0	300	0

Usual advertisements at Rs. 4 per line for the 1st insertion and Rs. 2 per line of succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

WONDERFUL TONIC AND MOUTH-REFRESHER
JINTAN.

This is a safe and efficient remedy in all kinds of diseases or disturbances of the digestive organs. It is composed entirely of VEGETABLE INGREDIENTS made from the prescription of the following eminent medical men viz—
NORIHURO MIWA, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy,
ZENJIRO INOUE, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy
 and testified as to its efficacy by
Baron J. MATSUMOTO, M.D., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Army.
T. MITAMURA Esq., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Navy.

As a digestive it is unequalled and will not disturb the functions of the most delicate stomach. Its antiseptic properties render it very efficacious in warding off disease and at the same time it imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath of the user.

At each opening 3 pills can be taken occasionally.

By virtue of its aroma, it effectually masks the odour of Tobacco and Alcoholic Spirits.

It acts beneficially on the vocal cords and has found much favour with public speakers, actors, singers and those whose vocation necessitates a severe strain on the throat.

GOOD FOR

Billiousness, Headache, Vertigo, Nausea, Indigestion, Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, etc., etc.

To maintain general health 2 to 3 pills may be taken occasionally, well masticated.

Price—Small Packet Rs. 0-1-0. Middle Packet, with Tin case., Rs. 0-4-0. Large Packet with fancy case., Rs. 1-0-0

Prepared by Messrs. MORISHITA Co., OSAKA, JAPAN.

Sole Agents: Jintan Agency (G. R. Chaubal), Juma Masjid, BOMBAY.

FOR PAINS AND ACHES SPRAINS ETC.
USE:—

AMRUTANJAN.

The magical pain balm extant. Cures all aches & pains. Costs 8 As. Sold everywhere.

By Appointment to H. E. the Governor Sir George Sydenham Clarke of Bombay.

HARIDAS VALJI,
 (KING OF INDIAN CONFECTIONERS),
 Highest Confectioner, Caterer and Grand Military Contractor.

Proprietor—RATINATH,
 Chira Bazar & Grant Road,
BOMBAY.

20-4-19.

DENTISTRY.

Extractions Painless;
 Terms Very Moderate;
 Gold Crown, Bar and Bridge Work a Speciality (teeth without plate);
 Latest Successful Treatment for Pyorrhoea (pus in gums).

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

Hours: 8-1-20 & 5-7-20; Daily.
 (Sundays—From 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.)

ABROOS BUILDING,
 NEW CHARNI ROAD,
 GINSAON, BOMBAY.

K. R. AMAT,
 Surgeon-Dentist.

1549.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY MORNING
Office—EMPIRE BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD, FORT. Editor—K. NATARAJAN.

Vol. XXX. BOMBAY—SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1919. No. 12.

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard."
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

The International Outlook.	The Problem of Christianity in India II.
The Indian Reform Bill, Social Reform and Government.	The English Public School, The Wail of Distressed Punjab.
Special Franchise for the Depressed Classes.	Indian National Congress.
A Disability Removed.	The Bombay Presidency Social Reform Association.
The Government of India as Girls' Education.	Wilson on Russia.

NOTES.

The International Outlook. The centre of international interest has shifted last week from Russia to the United States. Friday's papers published the message that Yudenitch has resigned his command as he desired to avoid entering his army. The action of the Senate of the United States in regard to the Peace Treaty has been the cause of considerable anxiety. The Republican majority, having closed the debate on the Treaty, have introduced important reservations some of which had been previously declared by President Wilson to be such as would cut the heart out of the Covenant and mean rejection of the Treaty. These reservations include the declining of obligations regarding the territorial integrity or political independence of any other country; withholding the assent of the United States to the Shantung arrangement, also a reservation giving Congress authority to regulate the appointment of the American delegates to the League of Nations and international commissions and a reservation declaring that the United States alone shall interpret the Monroe Doctrine, which is wholly outside the jurisdiction of the League of Nations. It is lucky that President Wilson is reported to have made striking progress towards recovery from his illness. The President, says the latest message, has informed Mr. Hitchcock that he will "pocket" the Peace Treaty if Senator Lodge's reservations which amount in his opinion to nullification of the Treaty are inserted. Meanwhile, it is hoped to defeat the ratification resolution embodying Senator Lodge's reservations upon which the resolution favouring ratification without reservations would be offered. In the event of a deadlock ensuing a compromise would be sought.

The Indian Reform Bill: The Indian Reform Bill as revised by the Joint Parliamentary Committee, was expected to be published last week. It is understood that it will not be published here till Tuesday. Meanwhile Keuter has sent us some further forecasts by the London Times. We give them below. The Report of the Joint Committee will recommend to Parliament that the question of women's enfranchisement be relegated to the re-constituted legislatures in each province. The Joint Committee has not accepted the recommendation of the Crew Committee in favour of the abolition of the India Council, which will be retained under various modifications, among the most important of which is the attachment of each Member of the Council to one or other of the India Office departments. It is understood that the Committee recommends the reference of the question concerning the protection of the interests of the non-Brahmins in Madras to the Madras Government and in the case of the Deccan to the Bombay Government. As regards subjects to be transferred, the Committee generally follow the recommendations in the Feltham Report. While the Governor's heavy responsibility is increased it will be shared more largely than originally contemplated with the members of the executive half of the Government. In promulgating ordinances to replace Bills refused by the legislature, as in some other important matters, the Governor will act with the advice of his official Council. The enlarged Bill amply fulfils the hope expressed by Mr. Montagu on the second reading that it will emerge a more liberal endowment of British India with the beginnings of responsible government. It is understood that the Labour Party, urged by the more extreme elements in the Indian deputations, will move amendments to carry it still further, but it is not expected that either House will disregard the considered judgment of the Committee with regard to the necessary safeguards and reservations.

Social Reform and Government: A very hopeful and cheering feature of the time, is the deep interest which some heads of Governments are evincing in social reform. His Excellency the Governor of Bombay is doing his best to deal with the housing problem, and we trust his endeavour will be crowned with success. A complete scheme has yet to be published. Before it is made final, we should like one point to be cleared. Is it desirable to tolerate any more one-room tenements? Except, perhaps, among the very lowest classes, there is always in the poorest Indian house a partitioned space for the kitchen at least. To build any more one-room tenements would be to add to the difficulties of the next generation. The introduction of legislation to put down betting and gambling is most welcome. It has been undertaken not a day too soon. We are also glad that the Government of Bombay are introducing a Bill dealing with the problem of prostitution in Bombay. The evil has attained dangerous dimensions and we are grateful to Government for their resolve to put it down. Detaining a woman whether minor or not, against her will, with intent that she may have intercourse even with one particular man, is made an offence punishable with fine, imprisonment and whipping.

Lord Sydenham when he attempted to deal with the problem, was told by some "respectable" Indian gentlemen, that concubinage was part of the Indian social system and that any attack upon it would be resented. His Lordship accepted this shameful falsehood and proclaimed it to the world. We are glad that Sir George Lloyd's Government are not to be put off in that way. Even if it were true that in some castes there is a custom of concubinage, it is the duty of a civilized Government to break down that custom. The other important provision of the Bill deals with brothel-keepers. It gives to the Police authorities power to deport brothel-keepers to places outside the city, whereas the present law only allows their removal from one place to another within the city. Brothel-keepers will be everywhere undesirable, and unless they are sent to places where they cannot carry on their profession, this provision may only mean the shifting of the evil from Bombay to some other locality. The suburbs of Bombay which are, at present, not noticeably infected with this social disease, may be injuriously affected. The case of beggars is quite different. We welcome these measures heartily and our suggestions are only meant to indicate the need of carefully framing their provisions so as to make them most effective for the purposes intended.

Special Franchise for the Depressed Classes. We have urged on several occasions the need for making provision for the representation of the backward and depressed classes in the enlarged Legislative Councils. But we cannot agree to the suggestion, made, among others, by the Hon. Mr. B. S. Kamat in his note on the subject submitted to the Joint Parliamentary Committee, that a lower property qualification should be fixed for the Depressed classes so as to bring on the electoral roll in roughly the same proportion as the electors of the other communities bear to their adult male population. Apart from the probability that this proportion may vary for each community, which has a special electorate, it is doubtful if anything short of manhood suffrage will suffice to bring 5 per cent of the adult males of the depressed classes on the electoral rolls. The property qualification has either some significance or it has not: if the former, it will be difficult to prove that a depressed classes man with a lower qualification is as good a voter as others with the ordinary qualification. If the latter, it should be done away with in all cases. The really important question relating to the representation not only the depressed and the backward but also the middle classes is, how are we going to have a sufficient number of men who can devote themselves to politics without payment of members? The days of the amateur legislator are past. Unless a member pays close and constant attention to his work, he will be no good in the new Councils.

A Disability Removed. We are glad to learn that as the result of representation of the Committee of Bangalore Cantonment Brahma Samaj, the Government of India has directed the introduction of the Hindu Widows' Remarriage Act of 1856, the Indian Divorce Act of 1869, and the Special Marriage Act of 1872, into the Civil and Military Station of Bangalore. As these Acts were not in force in the station till now, the parties who wished to marry under these acts had to go either to Bombay or Madras. It is understood that widow remarriage will shortly take place in Bangalore, and also other marriages under these Acts are likely to come off soon.

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1919.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA AS GIRLS' EDUCATION.

The Resolution of the Government of India on the education of girls issued last month, does well in deprecating the general application of the views and conclusions of the Calcutta University Commission on the conditions of the education of women in Bengal, to all parts of the country. Not all the difficulties set forth in the Commission's report as obstructing the education of girls in Bengal, the Government of India rightly observe, are found or at least found in an equal degree in all parts of India in some of which, for instance, the institution of purdah is unknown. Again, as the Commission have themselves pointed out, the paucity of private effort in the matter of post-elementary education of girls, which characterises Bengal, is not discoverable in all parts of the country. "In this respect," to quote the words of the Commission, "Bengal which prides itself upon being educationally the most advanced of the Indian provinces, falls far behind Bombay: in the city of Bombay alone there are ten private High Schools for girls." The Government of India observe that in some parts of the Bombay Presidency private effort has manifested itself in a remarkable manner. It is but just to acknowledge that Bombay owes a debt of gratitude to Parsis for their pioneering the cause of women's education. Their example has roused other communities to a spirit of emulation, and this has been followed and sustained by a genuine appreciation of its value and importance. The signal success which has attended the two women's colleges in Madras, since they were started a few years ago, is another hopeful sign. The old opposition to the education of women has died down in many parts of the country. This is largely the direct result of the spread of education among men, and partly of the efforts of religious and social reformers. The Arya Samaj and the Brahma Samaj have given a great impetus to women's education, and so also has the Social Reform movement. Some of the main obstacles to the spread of women's education, being faulty social customs, the reform movements which seek to change these customs necessarily favour its rapid expansion. These social difficulties are less in the provinces and among communities where the purdah does not prevail. In those provinces and communities where it does prevail, the growth of an effective sentiment against its continuance will powerfully promote the advancement of women's education.

The greatest obstacle to social reform, however, is the prevailing illiteracy, especially among women. The Calcutta University Commission have done this writer the great honour of placing at the head of their chapter on the subject, some observation which he made at the Bijapur Social Conference last year. It was to the effect that education was essentially a question of social reform, and in education, the first place should be given to women's education. The education of a single girl meant the uplift of a whole family in a larger sense than the education of a single man. If education is a question of social reform, social reform too is a question of education, especially of women's education. A way has to be found out of this vicious circle. The social and educational obstacles to the spread of women's education, can be ultimately overcome only by the wide dissemination of education among women. From this point of view, we are inclined to regard the Government of India's elaboration of the difficulties in the way of women's education as rather academic and irrelevant. If Government will but provide sufficient funds, most of the difficulties will in course of time disappear. Moralising on the backwardness of the people does not help. If Government will say, "Here is the money; find a solution of the problem," there will be more chances of a solution being found. If we cannot have competent teachers, we must make shift with less competent ones. If the present curriculum is unsuitable, we can devise a better one as we go along. If the examination system is found to dominate unduly our system of education, we can easily readjust the relation of examination to teaching without bringing matters to a deadlock. What we want Government to do is to help forward the cause in the one practical way they can, namely, by providing a generous grant for the special purpose of women's education. The most disappointing part of this resolution is its failure to grapple boldly with this all-important matter of finance. "Since the impending changes in the relations between Imperial and Provincial finance will in all probability involve the complete dissociation of the former from educational expenditure in the provinces," the resolution runs, "the provincial and local agencies will become not merely primarily but exclusively responsible for the future development of the education of girls. It will rest with them to decide how far they will be able to devote public money to furthering this form of education, and it is hoped that the suggestions which have been put forward in the preceding paragraphs will be of assistance in indicating the objects on which such money can most usefully be spent and the directions in which the education of girls can most profitably be guided."

Now let us see what these suggestions are. Local bodies should continue to be the agencies for the diffusion of elementary education among girls as among boys. Advisory committees may be appointed to advise local bodies on educational topics, and ladies may be co-opted on schools committees of such bodies. The latter provision already obtains in this Presidency. We hope some progressive local bodies will bring this into practice at an early date. The Government of India resolution has a good word to say for the scope of the Primary Education Act in this Presidency, which authorises the application of the compulsory principle to girls, as well as to boys. One Municipality, that of Bandra, has notified its intention to introduce compulsory education for both girls and boys under the Act early next year. We do not understand what the Government of India mean by "safeguarding the interest of lower classes" in education. When compulsory education is introduced, all classes of children have to attend school and a sufficient number of "schools" have to be provided beforehand to accommodate them all. Except compulsory education, we cannot think of any other safeguard of the interests of the lower classes. We do not see any difficulty in boys and girls studying together in primary schools. It is more convenient for young lads to accompany their sisters to school or young lasses to attend the same schools as their elder brothers. It saves the cost of an escort and tiffin arrangements have not to be made in two different schools. We think that elementary girls schools, whether of boys or girls, should be free to admit the younger sisters and brothers of the elder pupils. We agree with the Government that there is not much scope for differentiating between the curricula of elementary boys and girls schools. We are absolutely opposed to the manufacture of special text-books for girls schools. These manufactured text-books, written with a purpose, are one of the principal banes of the present day. As for religious education, tales from the epics and the unintelligent reading and recitation of the Koran, are not religious education in a sound sense, and nominal religious education does more harm than good. We reserve our comments on the rest of the Government resolution to another article.

THE PROBLEM OF CHRISTIANITY IN INDIA.

II.

(BY MR. MANILAL PAREKH.)

This is how Christianity is denationalized here in India. Mr. G. T. Paul of the Y. M. C. A. in his latest protest against denationalization in England says the very same thing. Neither the missionary, nor his convert, looking to the quality which he has, can help it. Christianity cannot but be denationalized and consequently parasitic and at best Anglo-Indian. This would again explain how Christians have generally a more material outlook than the other people of this country. I shall never forget what a young man, an Indian, belonging to the Salvation Army once told me. He said the moment a man becomes a Christian he materializes. The remark is perfectly true. People become Christians for material ends, and hence the moment they are baptised they forget the duties and the responsibilities as Hindus or as Christians, and become suddenly conscious of their rights and privileges. It is no wonder if the missionary has begun to find fault with the third generation of those whom he baptised two or three generations ago. This materialization is inevitable. The Christian church is filled with men who have sold their birth-right for a mass of pottage, and now that they have come into the Egyptian bondage of Western civilization, they love the flesh-pots thereof too much to think of having them for the Heavenly Bread which Christ Jesus is.

While such a process of denationalisation is very easy in the case of most of these so-called converts, it becomes a little more difficult in the case of the few high caste converts who stick to the end. The process that is followed in their case is thus wise. The first thing that a missionary began to do with such converts is to Hinduize them as much as possible. The first thing is to make them eat beef and meat, and even drink wine. The next thing that is done is to give such a convert a wife if he has none for it is a law of most missions that a convert in case he has not married cannot remain so for a long time while working in the mission. If he is already married and has children, the thing that is done is to get his wife and children baptised through pressure direct and indirect. In this way, all the bridges are burnt behind him and the poor convert is left helpless in the hands of missionaries. And in addition to these, if the poor man makes a mistake and falls into some sin or other, as in most cases he cannot but do there, being so many temptations in his way from both kanstam and lamini, woe be to him for ever! However high he be in his caste, and whatever the sacrifices that he may have made, he has to take his place lower than the lowest, not because there are his moral superiors, but because they are more clever and outwardly correct in their behaviour. It requires a man of tremendous conviction and courage of it to withstand all this pressure and process and temptations.

It is in this way that the Christian Church, if it at all can be called so, is altogether proletarianized, denationalized and anglicised and consequently materialized. I do not think that there ever was such a church raised in the whole history of Christendom, whether Eastern or Western. What wonder is there if the Hindus have stood aloof from such Christianity which is no Christianity but which is a most miserable caricature of it? I believe that perhaps this shows more than many things the soundness of the Hindu heart, that while accepting Christ as their very own, they would have nothing to do with the Western Christianity that comes to them in this shape. It would seem that the missionaries are subverting not only the Hindu civilization but the kingdom of heaven as well. Why is this?

A part of the cause of this state of thing is already given when it is said that the missionary is partial to his own labour and civilization. The missionary does not understand India nor its civilization. But what is worse is that he is not socially as politically dead. No man who is not dead in this way has any right to carry universal religion from one land to another. The missionary has as much flesh and blood as his convert or as the so-called heathen has whom he has come to convert, perhaps he has more. A man who is not dead to these, to all social and national ties, is not a Christian, much less a missionary. The Protestant Christianity comes to us wedded to the worst form of aggressive nationalism and imperialism of the West, and the missionary consciously as unconsciously is confounding and trying to promote both together. It has been just now found that the missionaries were not altogether above promoting his national interests along with those of the Kingdom of Heaven, and they are sent away from India not to return soon. Are the English and the American missionaries so far above the German missionaries in this respect that they have no other interests but those of the Kingdom of Heaven? And if the English people and missionaries cannot trust the German missionaries, can the heathen Hindus trust the English missionaries? Again supposing that they are so far above the German missionaries in this particular respect, i. e., promoting their own national interests at the cost of those of this country, can it be said that they have not taken full advantage of the protection of the British Government in order to proselytise as many as possible in the easiest possible manner? It is this that is the weakest point in the work of the Christian missionary. Proselytising without persecution has no meaning whatsoever. Proselytising with purse and political power is as bad as and even worse than that by force, and in India we have example of only such proselytising. Can there be a Christian church without true martyrdom as suffering? Can it be founded on such most unworthy and mixed motives, and purely secondary considerations as have been moving the majority of the Christian converts? Thus the missionary has failed to understand most grievously the spirit of Indian civilization as well as that of his own religion which can be established only on the Cross.

It would be too much to say that the missionary does not understand his own religion, but nevertheless I would dare to say that he does not. That he has violated the spirit as well as the letter of the religion he has come to give us in more things than one can be proved to demonstration. Here is one example of it in a matter that is most vital and important. Paul wrote to Timothy the following which are of universal application and which have been as completely ignored by the missionaries in India as possible. The words are I Timothy 6-1-5.

"Let as many servants as are under the yoke count their own masters worthy of all honour, that the name of God and His doctrine be not blasphemed.

2. And they that have believing masters, let them not despise them, because they are brethren but rather do them service, because they are faithful and beloved, partaken of the benefit. These things teach and exhort.

3. If any man teach otherwise, and consent not to wholesome words, even the words of our Lord from Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to godliness.

4. He is proud, knowing nothing, but doting about questions and strifes of words, whereof cometh away, strife, railings, evil surmisings.

5. Perverse disputings of men of corrupt minds and destitute of the truth, supposing that gain is godliness. From such withdrew thyself.

The missionaries have, expressly and as if it were of set purpose, set aside the command contained in the first two verses, a command, not merely of St. Paul, but of Christ himself as he says in the third verse, and have tried to do away with all centuries of old distinctions between the Brahmins and the Pariahs, high and low, under the false idea of equality and fraternity from which he would exclude himself and his own people. The result of this has been exactly what St. Paul said it must be Christianity has been blasphemed outside the Church on account of this very thing as the religions of the Pariah. Within the church there have been realized all those conditions that St. Paul speaks of at the end of the 4th and the beginning of the 5th verses. The majority of the missionary's converts have confounded gain with godliness, and demand equality of every sort with the high-caste converts in all things.

In all that I have said here I have spoken of the missionary as the representative, often a victim, of the system of work laid down by Protestant Missions in general. Again there are missions and missions, and no two missions have the same policy. There are some of them which are exceptions, such as e. g. the Oxford Mission in Calcutta. Again no two missionaries are altogether alike or think in the same way. Many of these, both men and women, are excellent people in many ways and make great sacrifices for what they think would promote the cause of Christ in India. Many of them have no ulterior motives of any kind. Many of them know the defects I have pointed out, they know the disease and are earnestly seeking a remedy. If I would blame them for anything, it would be for remaining any longer as instruments for that system, which has now blocked up the way for the further spread of Christ's kingdom in India. They must enter within themselves deeper, and take up their Cross afresh. The demands of the Cross of Christ never become greater, and all those who want to call themselves Christians and do missionary work must be ready to make greater sacrifices always. I would say the same thing to many of the converts too who, I know, are feeling many of these things that I have spoken of here. They have taken it upon themselves to follow Christ at whatever cost. Let them not beheld mid-way as most of them are doing but go forward.

'Withdraw thyself from such' was said by St. Paul to Timothy. The same cry comes to-day in similar conditions to all those missionaries, both men and women, and to true converts who want to find out a proper path. Perhaps it was in obedience to the same cry that Mr. C. F. Andrews withdrew from the Church mission to serve the people in the way he has been doing. All need not follow the same path of service, but withdraw they must, if they want to be true to Christ. May be, a greater path of serving India and Christ will be found soon.

THE ENGLISH PUBLIC SCHOOL.

[The English Public School has been commended by many administrators and others, themselves products of it, as an ideal educational institution, and some Indians have, as usual, echoed the sentiment. We give below a criticism of the system from Sir Oliver Lodge's recent book "Christopher."]

So much has been written in description and glorification of Public School influence, in moulding character and determining destiny, that no more words are needed; nor need the multitude of such books be added to, even by a sentence, in order to emphasise the merits which can be taken for granted. Had they not many virtues so many youths would not be sent there.

But in the midst of the praise, a critical voice is heard, and criticism is growing in intensity. Parents are anxious; questions are asked; replies are discordant or are difficult to obtain. Is everything really of the best, is it even as good as it might be? Is the discipline wisely conceived and properly carried out in these originally monastic institutions, or are boys of various ages left too much to their own devices? Do the weakest go to the wall? Are there not excesses, is not the boy-managed discipline too suddenly severe, the contrast with home and preparatory school too complete? Are the bodily exercises or "sports" overdone, giving rise to subsequent heart-strain and other troubles?*

Is the feeding wholesome and adequate, or must it be supplemented from home?

Many such questions are asked, and I do not presume to answer them. They have to be answered differently, it must be supposed, at different schools, and even at different periods in the same school.

All I have to say or suggest, concerning school life is absolutely general; it has no reference to any one school in particular. Special and intimate knowledge would be required for that. But there are certain general characteristics which without controversy can be admitted—characteristics some of which are upheld by high authority as sound and wholesome and beneficent. Let us consider one well-worn argument in their favour.

The discipline and hardship of school are said to prepare a boy for the discipline and hardship of later life. The note struck is preparation. So far, good. Preparation for life is eminently desirable; and the particular preparation afforded by school life appears to be considered a kind of inoculation. For in like manner it may be said that inoculation prepares one to resist the ravages of specific disease when that is encountered in the future.

Inoculation is admittedly never a pleasant process though authority says it is necessary. Let us accept that. But we do not select the most virulent form of microbe for inoculation purposes, we do not apply the disease in its severest form to prepare against milder attacks in the future. Yet, according to the testimony of many, the hardship and discipline of school during say, the first year, and even during subsequent years for many boys, are harsher and more grievous than anything they can reasonably expect to encounter in later life. In later life if we make mistakes we are punished, it may be by a fine, it may be by seclusion, but we are not flogged, except for brutal crimes; nor are we beaten by a jury of our fellows, or by some individual stronger than ourselves, unless we have injured him in a quite exceptional way, in some way so serious that he is moved to take the law into his own hands. We are not placed helpless in the midst of a community, whose members are of very varying degrees of size and strength, with traditional powers over body and sometimes soul, where tale-bearing is forbidden, and where we are removed from the curbing or protective agency of the police. No one expects to encounter troubles of this kind; and no inoculate against the risk of it seems carrying precaution rather far.

I only speak feelings of long school runs, in which smaller boys are swished to over-exertion and fainting by bigger ones who are actuated by sheer ignorance and stupidity. At a school in Yorkshire this system of preposterously long competitive runs was in vogue, perhaps still is; and I have had occasion, not in my own person but in my own family, to curse it and its sequel.

In later life when we run into danger we take other precautions. If we go among savages we carry weapons of precision; if we encounter civilized ruffians we appeal to the arm of the law; we protect ourselves against bodily ill-treatment in various ways, and our souls are our own.

But it will be said that at an earlier stage of life we are retracing an evolutionary period, that we all have to go through the savage phase, and that in this phase the rough discipline of school is salutary and not alien to our disposition. To some, I suppose, it does not seem natural and right; but to those whose savage period is curtailed or galloped through, and who already at an early age have reached a higher stage of civilization; the alien character of the mixed elements of school life becomes painfully apparent.

But it is not alone, it is not even mainly, the mere physical roughness and irresponsibility of seniors that I propose to criticise. These are painful, but some people can conscientiously maintain that they are salutary, that they are good for a small boy, and do not injure the big boy or develop any view of cruelty in his disposition. At any rate they do not seem to frustrate the main purpose for which schools exist. This I conceive to be the development of intellect and of character. Some call it the "formation" of character, and put it first. If formation of character is possible by outside influences, then indeed those influences become supremely important; but character must be to a great extent inborn. It may be unfolded, or it may be withered, its development may be helped or hindered, but surely a school should develop character mainly through the intelligence. Awakening of the mind would seem to be a main necessity in any scholastic scheme. A system of training which depresses the mind and yet sleeps it at mental tasks for several hours a day, until a feeling of nausea or study-nostalgia is created which lasts more or less through life, few would have the hardihood to support; they can only deny that any such state of things exists; and can take refuge in maintaining that assertion of this kind is an accusation and misrepresentation made by some enemy.

THE WAIL OF DISTRESSED PUNJAB.

THE NATION AS A WHOLE SHOULD COME TO THE RESCUE.

The Editor, "The Indian Social Reformer," Bombay.

Sir,

We have made political Punjab lifeless for the next fifty years, we have paralyzed the whole of India by taking stern repressive measures in the Punjab. So they said. For a time Punjab was in a deep swoon but the fit did not last long. A band of true Brahmans came from holy Prayag (Allahabad, The colony of god) from Shantiniketon (the abode of peace) and from the Satyagrah Ashram situated on the banks of purifying Sabarmati and roused it to life again. And then the cry went sound. "We must hold this Session of the Congress at Amritsar. For the sake of those whose indomitable spirit is roaming in the scene of their late activities, we must dare all and invite the whole Nation in this city of the immortal spring of life."

The invitation extended to Amritsar at Delhi was confirmed in the beginning of October last, sometimes was spent in setting at rest the doubts of the authorities and then a Sanyasi who had taken the threefold vows of poverty, humility and world-wide charity, was called upon to lead the band of devoted hosts of the nation.

The work here has begun in right earnest. The Secretaries of the different Sub-committees of the Reception Committee of the 34th Session of the Indian National Congress are being exhorted to do their best, the general secretaries and the Vice-chairmen are asked to put forth their best energies for the task they have undertaken, and as has been published by the Propaganda Secretary, contract for building the Pandit has been given to the Bond Bros. of Allahabad. Applications for Volunteer work are pouring in from far and near and public associations from all parts of the country are ready to co-operate and help. A large number of delegates are expected from outside Punjab. (Certainly not less than thirty hundreds) and Punjab is expected to pour forth its thousands to take part in sympathising with the suffering sons and daughters of their Motherland.

How are we to meet all these expenses? That is the supreme question of the moment. Amritsar has been bled to the last coin during the Martial Law period. It is a pity that these moneyed men who paid thousands in bribe to escape the indignity and dishonour of being insulted and abused by the myrmidons of officialdom do not come forward to speak the truth and thus to save the country (rulers and ruled both) from the further sins. But there is not the least doubt that they have suffered much pecuniarily. Then there are fines to be paid for the follies of the thoughtless and the horrible crimes committed by degraded devilish men. But in spite of all this when an appeal was made on behalf of the Punjab Relief Fund, Amritsar came out with its mite and contributed about sixteen to twenty thousand rupees for that work. And now that an appeal was locally made on behalf of the Reception Committee, Amritsar, has again begun a splendid response. Some 15 thousand has been collected in the city and by putting forth its whole strength another 15 thousands might be collected. But that is all what Amritsar can do at this moment. The rest of the Punjab is hoped to lend a helping hand, but there too some districts have suffered terribly and will be impossible for them to make up the whole deficiency. The wish is there but the power to do their best is wanting.

Daughters and sons of the Motherland: Not less than one lakh of rupees ought to be forthcoming within the next three years, if you wish to make this Anniversary meeting of the National Council worthy of the occasion. The begging bowl of the Sanyasi is at your door. The body of this devoted servant of humanity cannot react you all, but the spirit will roam all over the country; and it is my firm belief that the National Cause will not suffer for want of sufficient funds.

Shraddhananda,
Chairman of the Congress,
Reception Committee.

INDIAN NATIONAL CONGRESS.

BULLETIN NO. 1.

1. As already announced, the thirty-fourth session of the Indian National Congress will be held at Amritsar in the Punjab during Christmas next. The actual dates will be announced as soon as fixed.

2. A suitable site for the Pandal known as the Aitchinson Park has been obtained from the local Municipality, and is not only the best available but also the most convenient being close to the Railway Station, Amritsar (North Western Railway) and the city. Arrangements are in progress to secure adequate house accommodation and camping ground for the delegates from the various Provinces.

3. A Reception Committee has been formed consisting of several hundred members, and Swami Saraddhanand has been elected its Chairman. Every person resident in the Punjab who pays a minimum subscription of Rs. 25/- or Rs. 10/- only in the case of a lady, is eligible for membership and every Punjabee interested in the national cause, is invited to join the Committee. All remittances on account of membership subscription and donations should be sent to the Central Bank of India, Ltd., Amritsar, on account of the Congress Reception Committee, without loss of time, intimation of the same being sent to the Secretary, Finance Board, Congress Reception Committee Office, Amritsar.

4. The Executive Committee of the Reception Committee has decided that invitations be issued through the Chairman to all Indian leaders, irrespective of party, to join the Amritsar Congress, and the President and General Secretaries of the All-India Congress Committee have also been requested to move in the matter. The Reception Committee earnestly appeals to all patriotic and public-spirited Indians to respond to the invitation of the Committee, and make it a point to attend the Amritsar session.

BULLETIN NO. 2.

1. The fee for membership of the Reception Committee is Rs. 25 and Rs. 10 in the case of ladies.

2. The fee for a delegate, as fixed in the Constitution, is Rs. 10.

3. The rates for visitors' tickets have been fixed as follows:—Distinguished visitors; Rs. 50, special visitors Rs. 25 and 1st class visitors Rs. 10., 2nd. class Rs. 5. Lady visitors will be charged Rs. 5 each.

4. Donors of large sums will be provided with special seats on dais according to the amount of their donation.

BULLETIN NO. 3.

DATE OF THE SESSION.

The Thirty-fourth session of the Indian National Congress will be held in a specially erected pandal in the Aitchinson Park, Amritsar (N. W. Railway), Punjab, on 27th, 29th and 30th December, 1919.

The session will open on the 27th at 2 p. m., some hours after arrival of the Bombay Punjab and Calcutta Punjab Mail trains. The 28th will be devoted exclusively to the Subjects Committee which will meet at 10 a. m. On the 29th the Congress will resume its sitting some what late at 12 noon, owing to celebrations in connection with the birth anniversary of Sri Gurq Govind Singhji which falls on that day. On the 30th the Congress sitting commences at 11 a. m.

MESS TICKETS.

The following rates have been fixed by the Reception Committee for the mess tickets for the delegates:—

I. European Style	Rs. 6 per diem.
II. Indian Style
Vegetarian	Rs. 1/8
Non-Vegetarian	Rs. 2/8
Morning Tea	As. 4

No afternoon tea or lunch will be provided for those messing in Indian style.

Charges per meal in Indian style will be at half the above rates.

S. S. BHATIA,

Secretary,

Press Sub-Committee.

THE BOMBAY PRESIDENCY SOCIAL REFORM ASSOCIATION.

THE HINDU WIDOWS' HOME, BOMBAY.

The Hindu Widows' Home working under the auspices of the Bombay Presidency Social Reform Association, since 1st August 1916 completed its third year on 31st July 1919 and the Committee of its management beg. to submit report of the working during the third year.

There were seven widows on the roll at the close of the second year. During the year under report, 8 new widows were admitted, 8 were married and one left the Home of her own accord, thus leaving 6 widows on the roll at the end of the third year. Out of the 8 widows married, one belonged to the high caste Maratha community, one to the Konkansath Brahmin, one to the Gujarati Banis, one to the Sarasvat Brahmin, two Daivadnya, one Pathare Prabhu and one Madras Mudliar.

The number 8 of married widows during the year compares favourably with six of the second year, and two of the first year. The usefulness of the institution must not, however, be judged only by the number of widows admitted, or marriages performed under the auspices of the Home. Some parents and guardians of widows from private families seek the assistance and advice of the Superintendent; and in fact, the Home is slowly and steadily growing in publicity and popularity. It will, before long, become the centre of widow re-marriage activities in the Presidency that it is intended to be. Compared to the number of unfortunate widows amongst the different high-caste communities on this side of India, the number of marriages arranged is but a drop in the ocean, but looking to the prejudices and difficulties the institution has to contend with, the steady progress it has been making is distinctly encouraging. It is needless to add that greater efforts are necessary if the evil of enforced widowhood is to disappear from amongst us. Encouraged by this steady progress during the last three years of trial the Council of the Association has decided to continue the Home and it is hoped that the public will help to make it a success by every assistance, pecuniary or otherwise.

Of the six widows at present staying in the Home, one is in English 4th standard, two in English first, one is attending Normal Class, one is in Marathi 4th, and one is learning elementary Marathi. In addition to the literary education, they learn in the Home cooking and other household duties, as well as tailoring in the class conducted by the Social Service League on the premises of the Home.

It is a noteworthy fact that proposals for marriage coming from gentlemen are always for educated widows, and in several cases for widows with some English education. This is but natural. The marriageable age of girls is slowly rising, and among communities where grown up girls are available, even an educated young man or widower is unwilling to face the prevailing prejudices against widow marriage and the displeasure of his relatives, unless he gets an educated widow for his wife.

Dr. M. D. Malvankar continued the generous help to the Institution during the present year by treating the patients from the Home, and giving such advice as was needed, free of any charge. The Committee takes this opportunity to give its best thanks to Dr. Malvankar for his kindness and sympathy with the Home. Dr. S. R. Shirgavkar, M. D., (London) was kind enough to inoculate free of charge the inmates of the Home against Cholera during the terrible Cholera epidemic. Mr. Mangesh Atmaram Sagoon, the manager and proprietor of Mrs. Radhabhai Atmaram Sagoon, Book-seller, was kind enough to present books of about Rs. 15 to the inmate, who was promoted to English 4th Standard in March last. The Committee begs to thank all the persons who were good enough to show their sympathy with the Institution by assisting it in one way or another.

It is a matter of regret that Mr. A. S. Wagh, the Superintendent, as well as Mrs. Wagh, the Lady Superintendent, were in indifferent health during the year under report and had to leave Bombay for about six months for change of climate. During their absence Mr. P. B. Gothoskar with family lived on the premises and looked to the work of supervision. The Committee is much indebted to Mr. Gothoskar for the trouble he had to take in timely taking over the charge of the Institution when that was urgently needed, and in discharging his duties very satisfactorily in the absence of Mr. Wagh. It is unfortunate that Mr. and Mrs. Wagh on account of ill health find it impossible to continue as Superintendents of the Home and have expressed their desire to be relieved of the responsibilities as early as possible. The desire has been communicated to the Council which will make the necessary arrangements in the matter.

Since the above report was written Mrs. Wagh succumbed to the illness she had been suffering from for some time, and the Committee has passed the following resolution in appreciation of her services to the Home.

"The Committee begs to place upon record its deep sense of loss in the death of Mrs. Krishnabai Wagh who had worked at considerable self-sacrifice in promoting the welfare of the Institution and in supervising the management of the Home. The Committee expresses and records its deep sense of sympathy with Mr. Wagh."

The Committee regrets to record the death of Mr. C. M. Seth, who regularly paid a handsome contribution towards the expenses of the Home almost from the commencement, and evinced sincere interest in the cause of Widow Remarriage.

Total expenditure for the maintenance of the Home during the year was:—2464-10-6; (food charges Rs. 1224-6-6 clothes for inmates Rs. 88-11-6, rent Rs. 660-0-0, establishment Rs. 260-8-0, books, fees &c. Rs. 48-5-2, printing, postage and stationery Rs. 62-3-8, miscellaneous Rs. 49-7-6.)

List of Subscriptions and Donations (1918-19).

The Hon'ble Mr. Lallubhai Samaldas	400
Mr. Bhugwandas Medhaldas	270
Sir N. G. Chaudavarkar	180
The Hon'ble Mr. Justice L. A. Shah	180
The Hon'ble Mr. G. K. Parekh	180
Mr. L. R. Talwar	90
Mrs. Sitam Hazare	51
Mr. U. M. Seth	45
" Waichand Banker	25
The Indian staff of Messrs. John Dickinson & Co.	15
Dr. S. G. Ranadav	12
" T. G. Khandwala	10
Mr. L. N. Kamat	10
" Gopalji Welji	5
" S. W. Kelker	5
" Maganchoand Raoji	1
				Rs. 1,479

WILSON ON RUSSIA.

(From the New Republic, September 17th.)

Woodrow Wilson was once an historian. He was not, perhaps, distinguished for assiduous devotion to his muse, but he acknowledged obedience to the rules she had laid down since old times. If it was ever necessary for him to employ a fact, instead of rhetoric, he was at some pains to assure himself that the fact existed. If it was necessary for him to institute a comparison between two historical phenomena, he acknowledged the obligation of illuminating his criticism with the light of attendant circumstance. He recognized himself as an imposing figure in the assemblies of his craft, but he knew that this fact did not make it safe for him to occupy positions out of which the veriest tyro could rout him, to the laughter of the whole confraternity of scholars. But all that has changed now. Woodrow Wilson is no longer the servant of history, but has become her master.

And so he stands up bravely before her and asserts that the Soviet regime in Russia is more cruel than was that of the Tsar. Does any one imagine that Woodrow Wilson ever made the least effort to ascertain the facts of either term of his comparison? Does he know how general was the use of "Stolyin's neckties" in the suppression of the liberal revolution of 1906? Has he any acquaintance with the statistics of Siberian exile, or any knowledge of the conditions under which transportation to Siberia was carried on? Has he examined the relation between Tsaristic officialdom and such affairs as the massacre of Kishinev? No, of course not; he has been too busy. But of course he knows all about the spirit and the practice of the Soviet regime? No; he has been too busy to inform himself. He was too busy to listen to Raymond Robins, Colonel Thompson, Mr. Thacher. He has been too busy to listen to anything but carefully selected words justifying the policy he had already adopted under British and French pressure. He dared not trust his virginal innocence of Russian conditions alone with that bold fellow the truth.

But say that Woodrow Wilson could demonstrate, by historical, not propagandistic methods, that the Soviet regime, conducting a revolution, had caused more suffering in a given time than the Tsaristic regime, conducting the civil affairs of a peaceful nation--what is the moral? Did the corrupt government of King George the Third occasion a life of the suffering in America that attended the Revolution? Did the government of Louis XVI revel in excesses to be compared with those of the French Revolution? Did Oliver Cromwell and his Ironsides effect a painless improvement in British affairs? Was it quite without pain and slaughter that Mexico ejected "the tyrant Huerta?" Whose phrase was that we wonder?

Revolution is a hideous, bloody business, and we can understand though we cannot sympathize with the feelings of those gentlemen who believe there ought never to be revolutions, however increased the tyrannies against which they are directed. Every revolution we have ever heard of has gone too far. It has yielded at times to sheer blood lust. But is that a reason for backing the counter revolution? Suppose that the combined European potentates of 1790--whom Woodrow Wilson would no doubt call tyrants, being safely buried--had succeeded in over-throwing the French Revolution, would the roll of executions have been brief and pleasant reading? If our friends Kolchak and Denikin get into the heart of Russia, does any one doubt that heart will spout blood generously? Revolutions have always been terrible; counter-revolutions more terrible. That is history, but what is history to Woodrow Wilson?

The Soviet rule, says Woodrow Wilson, is the rule of a minority. So it is. There are, he says, only 84 men who share among them the control of the political destinies of Russia. Well, it is not so long since four men were assembled at Paris, hearing and determining on the policies of the world. How many men in America have participated in the formation of the policy of war on Russia, and a blockade more terrible than war? One, unless you count rubber stamps. But by the constitution one man is empowered to act for the whole people in this matter? No, that is just where our constitution is too democratic for Woodrow Wilson. Find, if you can, any clause in it by which American forces can carry on war in Siberia without congressional action.

Still, has not the Soviet government been challenged to convene a constitutional convention based on universal suffrage, to determine whether a majority wishes the Soviet form of government or another form? To be sure. It is a pity that Woodrow Wilson did not live in the seventeenth century, to challenge Oliver Cromwell to convene a constituent assembly. That would have called the doughty Oliver's bluff; for there is not a shadow of doubt that the majority of the British people would slavishly have voted for the restoration of the Stuarts and the execution of Cromwell. Perhaps the British revolutionists would not have bowed their necks obediently to the will of the majority and to the ax, but in that case men like Woodrow Wilson could not have had to idealize such uncouth disturbers. It is a pity that Wilson could not have sent the challenge of a constituent assembly to Washington at Valley Forge. The way Washington would have received it would be interesting to the historian, if any one had lived to report it. Mirabeau and Danton, Marat and Robespierre could have lost nothing by a universally elected assembly but their necks, and those were forfeit any way. But the real work of the revolution, which the historians unite in pronouncing good--how would that have fared?

And while Woodrow Wilson is so bent on denying even provisional legitimacy to any Russian regime that is not based on a constituent assembly except the regime of Kolchak, Denikin and Co.-- why does he not look about him, like an historian, and discover the basis of other existing government? What is the basis of the government of Japan, Italy, England even? At what point, in the history of those Governments do we find a plebiscite or a constituent assembly? And if we are to challenge the Soviet regime in Russia, on the ground that it is a minority rule, why not also the Japanese regime in Korea, the British regime in India? Or does it sanctify minority rule that it is altogether alien?

Revolutions, so history calmly asserts, are always affairs of the minority. In every society there are always in a minority who are ready to die for their opinions. All, or almost all may feel oppressed, but only a few will take the risk of striking for liberty. And those few who are willing to die, but would rather live, will not immediately surrender to the indifferent and nerveless majority the power of determining whether themselves and the fruits of their labours shall live or perish. If they can, they will hold power until the new state which they have wrought has attained to the character of a normally stable state. So history asserts, but Woodrow Wilson is history's master. We envy him the sense of power he must enjoy as he yanks his former mistress around by the hair. But it occurs to us that he is overlooking one rather important consideration. She will have the last word.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postage as follows:
 In advance. In arrears.
 Per annum..... Rs. 5-0-0. Rs. 6-0-0.
 Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, twelve billings (Rs. 6).
 Single copies of the current year can be had at 6 annas each and any back copies at 6 annas each.

DO YOU WISH TO KNOW YOUR "FUTURE"

Send your time and date of birth or your star and age or note the time when you write the letter, you will be given a full reading of your life or one year to come for ONE RUPEE ONLY.

Mr. Ghazanfar Muhammad Khan, Deputy Collector, writes from Moradabad City. "The one year life reading you sent me proved to be QUITE TRUE."

THE KALINGA ASTROLOGICAL BUREAU,
24-8-19- Chodavaram, Visagapatam District.

"COMMERCE AND INDUSTRIES."

An Interesting Monthly Journal of Indian Material Progress.

Annual Subscription Rs. 10-0 and Single Copy Re. 1 Post Free.

A Specially valuable advertising Medium.

Wanted Agents throughout India.

Address:--P. Box. No. 353, and 5 Mount Road Madras S. C. 12-10 19

"Wanted:--Employment, as teacher or governess, by an educated Brahman widow with midwifery training and medical practice, well-versed in music and the Vina; proficient in English, Sanskrit, Telugu and Canarese, and speaking Tamil and Hindustani nola. Please apply to K. R. C/o. The Indian Social Reformer, Bombay." 21-9-19.

THE TATA INDUSTRIAL BANK, LD.

HEAD OFFICE, BOMBAY.

BRANCHES—CALCUTTA and HYDERABAD (Deccan)
CANNPORE and LUCKNOW.

Sub-Branchee—

Bombay—Share Bazaar, Shroff Bazaar,
Calcutta—Barr Bazaar.

London Agents: LLOYDS BANK LIMITED.

NEW YORK AGENTS: THE GUARANTY
TRUST COY. OF NEW YORK.

AUTHORISED CAPITAL... Rs. 12,00,00,000.

SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL..... " 7,56,00,225.

PAID UP CAPITAL..... " 1,50,99,225.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Sir D. J. Tata, Kt., Chairman.

Sir Sassoon David, Bart.

Sir R. N. Mookerjee, K. C. I. E.

Sir Francis Stewart, Kt.

Sir Henry Proctor, Kt.

R. D. Tata, Esq.

F. E. Dinshaw, Esq.

F. C. Rivington, Esq.

Narottam Morarjee, Esq.

Hajee Gulam Mahomed Ajam, Esq.

The Hon'ble Mr. Purshottamdas Thakordas, C. I. E.

A. J. Bilimoria, Esq.

Secretary, R. H. Parker.

Current Accounts opened and interest allowed on daily credit balances from Rs. 500/- to Rs. 1,00,000/- at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum. If the balance to the credit of any account does not fall below Rs. 25,000/- at any time between 1st January and 30th June, interest will be allowed during that period at 2½ % per annum. No interest is allowed unless the sum accrued amounts to Rs. 8/- Half-yearly.

Fixed Deposits. Interest allowed on Deposits fixed for one or two years and for shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank. Interest allowed on Savings Bank Accounts at 4 per cent per annum. Rules may be obtained on application.

Loans and Cash Credits are granted on approved securities.

Purchases and sales of Securities and shares effected.

Bills of Exchange purchased and collected and every description of Banking and exchange business undertaken.

14-4-18. L. D. L. BUCKLEY, General Manager.

THE YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK, LIMITED.

(Registered in Japan.)

Established 1880.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 48,000,000.

Paid up Capital.....Yen. 42,000,000.

Reserve Fund.....Yen. 28,100,000.

Head Office:—Yokohama.

Branches and Agencies at Bombay, Buenos Aires, Calcutta, Changchun, Chi-Nan, Dairen, Fengtien, Hankow, Harbin, Hongkong, Hoooolulu, Kaiyoan, Kobe, London, Los Angeles, Lyons, Manila, Nagasaki, Newchwang, New York, Osaka, Peking, Rangoon, San Francisco, Seattle, Shanghai, Shimozooki, Singapore, Soerabaya, Sydney, Tientsin, Tokio, Tsingtao.

Current Deposit Accounts are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at the rate of 2 per cent per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 100,000, provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of banking and exchange business transacted.

N. IGARASHI.

Post Box No. 207, Hornby Road, Bombay.

I. NISHIMAKI.

Manager, Calcutta.

1-13-17.

Post Box No. 406, Clive street, Calcutta

THE BANK OF BARODA, LD.

Under the Patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja Gookwar. Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897

HEAD OFFICE BARODA.

Branches—Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehabana, and Surat

Capital Subscribed.....Rs. 60,00,000.

Capital Paid up " 30,00,000.

Reserve Fund " 12,50,000.

DIRECTORS :

The Hon'ble Mr. Lallubhai Samaldas, C. I. E., Chairman

Sir Vitthaldas Damodar Thackersey, Kt.

Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti Nagar Sheth, Baroda.

Sheth Manilal Revadas, Vadnagar.

Rao Bahadur Gunesji Rao B. Nimbalkar, Sur Subba, Baroda State.

Bhaskarrao Vitthaldas Mehta, Esq., Advocate, High Court Bombay.

M. H. Kantavalla, Esq., Agent, Maharaja Mill Co., Ld. Baroda.

B. R. Shirgoekar, Naib Subba, Baroda State.

A. N. Datar, Accountant General, Baroda State.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balance from Rs. 500 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest which does not come to Rs. 8 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application. C. E. BANDLE.—General Manager. 15-4-18.

THE CENTRAL BANK OF INDIA, LTD

Subscribed Capital... Rs. 50,00,000

Paid Up Capital ... " 49,59,900

Reserved liability of

Shareholders ... " 25,00,000

Reserve Fund ... " 6,00,000

Head Office:—Alice Building, Bombay.

Local Branches:—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar, (3) Share Bazar.

Branches:—Amritsar, Calcutta, Delhi, Jharis, Karachi.

London Agents:—London Joint City and Midland Bank, Ld.

Current Accounts—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June
2½ % allowed on Daily Balances from July to December.

12 months Deposits received at 5 % per annum.

Long and Short period Deposits received at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking Business transacted.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA.

Manager.

25-2-17

THE BANK OF TAIWAN, LTD.

Incorporated by Special Charter of the Imperial Japanese Government, 1899.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 30,000,000
Paid-up CapitalYen. 22,500,000
Reserve FundYen. 5,680,000

Head Office:—Taipeh, Formosa.

BRANCHES:—

LONDON	SHANGHAI	TOKIO
NEW YORK	HONGKONG	OSAKA
AMOY	SINGAPORE	KOBE
CANTON	SOERABAJA	YOKOHAMA
FOOCHOW	SEMARANG	AKO
HANKOW	MAKUNG	GIRAN
KIUKIANG	BATAVIA	KAGI
SWATOW	PINAN	KARENKO
TAINAN	SHINCHIKU	KEELUNG
TAKOW	TAICHU	TAMSUI

The Bank has also a large number of Correspondents at Home and Abroad.

Current Deposit Accounts—are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at 2 per cent. per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 1,00,000 provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of Banking and Exchange business transacted.

K. TAKEMURA

Manager

9-12-17.

56, Esplanade Road, Fort, BOMBAY

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

Established 1st September 1906.

Incorporated under the Indian Companies' Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE:

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.

Capital Subscribed Rs. 1,00,00,000
Capital Called up " 50,00,000
Reserve Fund " 15,00,000

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½% p. a. throughout the year. On sums exceeding Rs. 1,00,000 interest is allowed by special arrangement. No interest will be allowed which does not amount to Rs. 8 per half year.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short periods @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

"Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application".

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, & CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stocks at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

H. P. STRINGFELLOW,

15-1-11.

Manager.

A Lady's Best Ornament is a Glorious Head of Hair.

A profusion of rich, soft silky, lustrous, wavy hair—where's the woman who would not like that?

There's only one oil that makes such hair and it's the far-famed

KAMINIA OIL
(Regd.)

Invaluable for ladies, and just as much for Brain-Workers and Students.

Heated head cooled, aching disappears and dandruff becomes a thing of the past. Added to all these it possesses a beautiful fragrant smell.

For superiority, awarded a Gold Medal at the Mysore Exhibition, and in great demand all over the country.

If you have not yet used KAMINIA OIL, you

have missed a fine delight and a real boon; use it now, if only once; and like many people you will prefer to use also always.

Price per bottle, Ret 1. V. P. Charges- 6 annas extra

Price for 3 bottles Rs. 2-10. V. P. charges 14 annas extra

Write now, Do not delay.

Sole Agents:—

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,
(5-2-16) No. 155, Jumma Masjid Market, BOMBAY.

Now-a-Days.

All things have advanced in price. Even the vegetable ingredients used in our Atank Nigrah Pills have advanced in price.

Even the labourers demand heavy wages being dearer. Even the users have increased yet the Atank Nigrah Pills for Toning up the system are sold at before war price i. e. at a Rupee.

Valdya Shastri

Manishanker Govindji,

Atank Nigrah Pharmacy,

Head Office:—Jamnagar—Kathiawar.

Branch:—Kalbadevi Road, Bombay.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours. Publish Fine Art Pictures, & c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.
1-12-10. HIGH CLASS FRAME MARKS-

ROYAL TONIC PILLS

Powerful Nutritious and Strength Restorer. Price Rs. 1-4 per tin of 30 Pills.

PREPARED BY—GOVINDJEE DAMODER & Co.,

Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Commission Agents.
1-12-10. No. 3 Sutar Chawl Market, BOMBAY.

Timely advice to the Wealthy

Costly but certain remedies are in the long run cheaper than cheap and uncertain ones.

KANDARPA SANJIVINI PILLS AND OIL

are the safest and surest remedies for indigestion, constipation, loss of appetite, memory, mental, physical and nervous debility and all sorts of urinary disorders, improve impoverished blood.

Price per tin of 40 Pills Rs. 5 & per tola of Oil Rs. 10.

Both Purchased at a time Rs. 11/4

Medical Advice and a Medical Book containing 128 pages sent Gratis and Post Free.

RAJ VAIDYA NARAYANJI KESHAVJI

Head Office:—Jamnagar, Kathiawar, (India.)

Branch:—No. 187, Kalbadevi Road,

24-8-1919.

BOMBAY.

Empire Hindu Hotel

Opposite Victoria Terminus
Bombay

(Central Situation)
Strictly Vegetarian
Charges Moderate

Fitted with
Electric Lift, Fans and Lights.

TELEGRAMS: } TELEPHONE

"FOOD," BOMBAY.

2789.

22-6-19.

Saffron? Saffron?? Saffron???

If you wish to buy genuinely pure and best Saffron it is
SUN

BRAND

SAFFRON

ONLY

It has been largely used by Jain Temples, Maharajas, Durbars, Hakims and Vaidyas all over the country for the last 75 years and is well known for its purity and genuineness.

S. NARAYEN & Co.,

17-2-18

21, Humnum Street, Fort Bombay.

REVOLUTION IN SHORTHAND.

There are systems and systems, but that one is the most "practical" which can be written with a pen or pencil, straight away on unruled paper, without thickening, positions, grammalogues, multitudes of rules and exceptions, arbitrary word-signs and contractions, long lists of phrases, and various other impediments to speed. The New "ROYAL-SPEED" Course of 12 Lessons, incorporated by Expert who introduced the Original Duployan Joined-Vowel Scheme in the East, has all the advantages of a modern, down-to-date system, and is acquired by Boys and Girls of 12, in a fraction of time. Quickest Results and Highest Efficiency are Guaranteed. Personal or Postal Tuition. Prospective pupils must investigate, as interested parties seem to recommend the only system known to them.

NATIONAL BUSINESS COLLEGE,

1st Floor, Luxmi Bldg., Lamington Road, Bombay.

"EVERYTHING FOR EVERYBODY"

National Standard Portable Typewriter No. 3 (10 lbs.) Rs. 190
Oliver No. 5 (American Rebuilt) S. & Tab. Rs. 175; No. 7 " 200
Empire No. 1 (Do.) in good working order " 85
Multikopy Typewriter Carbons, per Box of 100 sheets " 8
Webster Brand " Ribbons for all machines, Doz. " 21
Typewriter Oil (best 1 oz. bot.) or Eberhard Erasers, Doz. " 6
Safety Razor, Rivala Gillette, with 6 Gillette Blades (best) " 5
Envelope Making Machine (to make 30,000 per day), New " 35
Conklin's Self Filling Fountain Pen (non-leakable) Gold Nib " 9

UNIVERSAL BUSINESS SYNDICATE,

20-4-19.

Post Box No. 424, Bombay.

HYPNOTISM

PERSONAL MAGNETISM,
WILL POWER,
NERVE FORCE—

Call what you will—

Is the intangible power that controls human destiny. It is the key to all business and social success. This power is no special gift of any one. It is latent in every one. We help you how to display it. By our system, you can learn in a few days at your own home and not only achieve success yourself, but you can influence the mind, health and actions of others to a remarkable degree.

Write immediately for our free booklet—The Pride of India.

THE LATENT LIGHT CULTURE,
TINNEVELLY, S. INDIA.

Batlivala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 1 each bottle of 100.
Batlivala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 3 each bottle of 100.
Batlivala's Ague Mixture of Fever, Malaria, Influenza etc.
Batlivala's Ague Pills for Malaria, Fever, Influenza etc.
Batlivala's Tonic pills for pale people & nervous breaks down.
Batlivala's Tooth Powder of Preserving Teeth
Batlivala's Ringworm ointment for Ringworm Dhobi Itch etc.

May be had from all dealers in medicines or from
Dr. H. L. Batlivala Sons & Co., Ltd.
No. 11, Worli, 16, Bombay.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESS:—"Doctor Batlivala Dadar"

THE BOMBAY CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK.

HEAD OFFICE:—Apollo Street, St., Bombay.

DIRECTORS—The Hon. Sir Fasaalbhoy Currimbhoy (Chairman), Sir Vishaldas D. Thackersey, the Hon. Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas, Sir Stanley Reed, the Hon. Mr. C. V. Mehta, the Chief of Ichalkaranji, G. K. Devadhar, Esq., the Hon. Sir P. D. Pattani, the Raja Sahab of Malogaon.

Share Capital (fully paid) Rs. 7,00,000

1 Deposits fixed for one year and shorter or longer periods are accepted. Rates and other particulars may be ascertained from the under signed.

2 The Bank finances only registered Co-operative Societies in the Bombay Presidency on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency.

3. Accounts are audited half-yearly by a special Government Auditor, and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the "Bombay Government Gazette."

20-5-17.

VAIKUNTH L. MEHTA, Manager.

Clean
Wholesome
Intelligent
Entertainment

IS A GREAT STEP

IN

SOCIAL REFORM.

When deciding on a

PLACE OF AMUSEMENT TWO ESTABLISHMENTS

Should at once leap to the mind,

THE EXCELSIOR

BOMBAY'S PREMIER MODERN THEATRE

AND

THE EMPIRE

BOMBAY'S MOST PALATIAL

PICTURE THEATRE

Where Film Plays of Distinction are shown

Every Week.

A

Great Cinema Masterpiece

is shown

Both theatres are near the Bori Bunder

and are run by the

EXCELSIOR SYNDICATE.

The Pioneer of Bombay's

AMUSEMENT WORLD.

FURUKAWA & CO.

TOKIO

The Largest Manufacturers

in the East

OWN MANUFACTURE OF ALL
STRENGTHS OF
OF

ELECTRIC BARE COPPER CONDUCTORS,

ELECTRIC UNDERGROUND CABLES,

ELECTRIC INSULATED WIRES,

ELECTRIC ACCESSORIES,

INGOTS, RODS, WIRES,

PLATE SHEETS, TUBES, ETC.

Etc., Etc.,

SOLE AGENTS IN INDIA AND BURMA.

TATA SONS & CO.,

BOMBAY & CALCUTTA.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS Ltd.

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.

Narsani Building, Fort, BOMBAY.

Works at Porbander, Kathiawad.

11-2-17.

When YOUR EYES

need to be examined by QUALIFIED OCULISTS or by SCIENTIFIC REFRACTIONISTS of 25 year experience, FREE OF CHARGE, you cannot do better than GO TO

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR & CO.

The leading firm of Oculists, Eyesight Specialists, Manufacturing Opticians and suppliers of the patented

"KRYPTOK"

(Invisible one-piece bifocal lens.)

Toric, and all kinds of lenses.—Cylindrical, Spheroidal, Prismatic, &c., from pebbles as well as from best quality crown glass.

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR

Eyesight Specialist,

With 26 Years' Practical Experience.

Holds Exceptional Testimonials from H. H. The Maharaja Sahib of Gwalior, the Hon'ble Sir Lawrence Jenkins the Hon. Mr. Justice Batty, Mrs. Batty, the Hon. Sir N. S. Chandavarkar, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Benman, the Hon'ble Sir S. L. Bhatnagar, the Hon'ble Sir John Heaton Mr. H. G. Gall, M. V. O., Col. R. H. Forman, B. A., M. C., P. M. O., Bo. Brigade, Lieut. Col. G. H. Bull, M. D., I. M. S., Lieut. Colonel Peters M. B., I. M. S., and other high personages.

(7) 379, HORNBY ROW,

Opposite the Government Telegraph Office,

62-11-10.

Fort, BOMBAY.

The Empire of India Life Assurance Company, Limited.

WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.

Head Office 11 Elphinstone Circle, BOMBAY.

SEE REPORT AND OPINIONS OF THE PRESS AS TO THE REMARKABLE PROGRESS MADE BY THE COMPANY.

ENDOWMENT NON-FORFEITABLE POLICY FOR RS. 3,000.

PAYABLE AT AGE 60 OR AT DEATH, IF PREVIOUS, WITH PROFIT.

If, at any time, the assured under this plan should desire to cease paying any more premiums, he can obtain a paid-up Policy for such a proportion of the original sum assured as the number of premiums paid bears to the number agreed upon. Thus a gentleman who had assured at age 30 for a Policy of Rs. 3,000 payable at age 60 or at Death, if previous, after 5 year payments, would be entitled to a Free paid-up Policy for Rs. 500 free of future payments.

SOME OF THE DISTINCTIVE FEATURES.

MONTHLY PREMIUM.

AT AGE 20, Rs. 6-9-0.

AT AGE 25, Rs. 7-8-0.

AT AGE 30, Rs. 8-14-0.

AT AGE 35, Rs. 10-12-0.

AT AGE 40, Rs. 12-12-0.

AT AGE 45, Rs. 15-10-0.

- Funds invested in Government Securities and in accordance with the Indian Trusts Act.
- Policy holders can appoint their own Directors.
- 50 per cent. of profits to Participating Policy holders.
- Lapsed policies revived without Medical Certificate.
- Liberal Surrender Values—40 per cent. of the Tabular premium paid.
- Immediate payment of Claims.
- Medical fees and stamps on Policies are payable by the Company.
- The sum assured is PAYABLE IN FULL should death occur even immediately after payment of the first premium.

GUARANTEED INSURANCE.—This Company issues Guaranteed Policies in situation of trust and responsibility, is specially authorized to guarantee the employes of the Post Office.

Proposal Forms and full Particulars may be obtained from any local Agent in India or from 12-9-10.

ALLUM, BHARUCHA & CO. Managers.

IN INDIA

EVERY ONE KNOWS.

whom it does concern that we are foremost in supplying the best.

COSSI SILK SUIT PIECES

suitable for the season. These pieces are strong, fancy and durable, and have been specially manufactured for India Market. Each piece guaranteed for One Suit Complete.

Price Rs. 10 per piece.

Write to—THE BHARGAVA-COMMERCIAL SOCIETY,

1-15,

Bombay City.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER. Contract Rates for Advertisements.

Number of insertions.	1 Inch.		2 Inches.		3 Columns.		4 Columns.		5 Columns.		Page.
	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.
12	14	0	16	0	30	0	39	0	50	0	87	0
24	16	0	25	0	30	0	50	0	67	0	155	0
52	25	0	38	0	50	0	67	0	155	0	300	0

Casual advertisements at Rs. 4 per line for the 1st insertion and Rs. 2 per line of succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

WONDERFUL TONIC AND

MOUTH-REFRESHER

JINTAN.

This is a safe and efficient remedy in all kinds of diseases or disturbances of the digestive organs. It is composed entirely of VEGETABLE INGREDIENTS made from the prescription of the following eminent medical men viz—
 NORIHIRO MIWA, M.B., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy,
 ZENJIRO INOUE, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy
 and testified as to its efficacy by
 Baron J. MATSUMOTO, M.D., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Army.
 T. MITAMURA Esq., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Navy.

As a digestive it is unequalled and will not disturb the functions of the most delicate stomach. Its antiseptic properties render it very efficacious in warding off disease and at the same time it imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath of the user.

By virtue of its aroma, it effectually makes the odour of Tobacco and Alcoholic Spirits.

It acts beneficially on the vocal cords and has found much favour with public speakers, actors, singers and those whose vocation necessitates a severe strain on the throat.

GOOD FOR

Biliousness, Headache, Vertigo, Nausea, Indigestion, Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, etc., etc.

To maintain general health 2 to 3 pills may be taken occasionally, well masticated.

Price—Small Packet Rs. 0-1-0. Middle Packet, with Tin Case, Rs. 0-4-0. Large Packet with fancy case, Rs. 1-0-0.

Prepared by Messrs. MORISHITA Co., OSAKA, JAPAN.
 Sole Agents: Jintan Agency (G. R. Chaubai), Juma Masjid, BOMBAY.

At each opening 3 pills come out automatically.

FOR PAINS
 AND ACHES
 SPRAINS ETC.
 USE:—

AMRUTANJAN.

The magical pain balm extant. Cures all aches & pains. Costs 3 As. Sold everywhere.

By Appointment to H. E. the Governor
 Sir George Sydenham Clarke of
 Bombay.

HARIDAS VALJI,
 (KING OF INDIAN CONFECTIONERS),
 Highest Confectioner, Caterer and Grand
 Military Contractor.

Proprietor—RATINATH,
 Chitra Bazar, & Grant Road,
 BOMBAY.

10-4-19.

DENTISTRY.

Extractions Painless;
 Terms Very Moderate;
 Gold Crown, Bar and
 Bridge Work a Speciality
 (teeth without plate);
 Latest Successful Treatment
 for Pyorrhoea (pus in gums).
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.
 Hours: 8-1-30 & 5-7-30; Daily.
 (Sundays—From 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.)
 ADDRESS BUILDING,
 NEW CHARNI ROAD,
 GURGAON, BOMBAY. 1-4-19.
E. R. AMAT,
 Surgeon-Dentist.

THE INDIAN * SOCIAL * REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY MORNING.

Office:—EMPIRE BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD, FORT.

Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

Vol. XXX. BOMBAY—SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1919. No. 13.

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard."
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

The Khilafat Question and the Peace Celebrations. The Viceroy in Madras. Lord Chelmsford on the Reform Scheme. Legislation Against the Social Evil. Presidentship of the All-India Sanskrit Conference. A Historian as Political Pamphleteer. A Welcome Movement.	The Revised Reform Bill. Dr. Vincent Smith on Indian Constitutional Reform, I. A Knight of Chivalry. The English Public School. The new International League for Relief. Indian Politics. The Hyderabad Deccan Brahma Samaj. The Proper Aim of Education.
--	--

NOTES.

The Khilafat Question and the Peace Celebrations: Many persons who have a sincere respect for Mr. Gandhi will, we think, be at a loss to follow his line of argument leading to the conclusion that because the question of the Khalifate has not been satisfactorily settled, therefore, it is the duty of Indians, Hindus and Mahomedans, to abstain from taking part in the Peace celebrations next month. If this principle were to be carried to its logical length, public life would become impossible. With characteristic contempt for tactical considerations which play such a great part in politics, Mr. Gandhi rather went out of his way at the Khilafat Conference to declare that the Punjab grievances, sorely trying as they are, are not legitimate grounds for abstention from the Peace celebrations. If we venture to think that the same principle applies to the Khilafat question, and with greater force, we are sure Mr. Gandhi will appreciate our point of view. The only reason which would justify abstention from the Peace celebrations is that the continuance of War is preferable to the conclusion of Peace. We have more than once expressed our sympathy with our Mahomedan countrymen in their concern about the Khalifate, and there is no responsible official in this country from the Viceroy downwards who is not genuinely anxious that the question should be settled early and in a manner which will satisfy the reasonable expectations of the leaders of Islam in this country. Men like His Highness the Aga Khan, the Right Honourable Ameer Ali, Mr. Jinnah, Syed Hassan Imam, Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy and others are fully conscious of the position of the British Empire, and do not expect it to achieve the impossible. We say once more that it is a matter of vital importance to meet the reasoned and responsible desire of the Mahomedan leaders. The chances of a satisfactory settlement of this question will be enhanced, and not certainly decreased, by our cheerfully cooperating with the rest of the Empire in the celebration in a fitting manner of the victory which has been vouchsafed to the British Empire, of which we form an integral part, and our Allies, over a Power which had erected brute force into the supreme divinity. We would earnestly impress upon our countrymen, Mahomedans as well as Hindus, that they should not allow themselves to be led away by mere sentiment, and that they would, while strongly pressing on Government their views regarding the Khalifate, whole-heartedly rejoice with the rest of the Empire that the War is at an end and that the reign of Peace has resumed its sway.

The Viceroy in Madras. His Excellency the Viceroy reached Madras on Monday morning and on the same day received several addresses from representative public bodies. His Excellency replied to them all together in a vein of genial sympathy. The cheerful spirit of the speech in contrast to the embarrassed phantom haunting some of His Excellency's previous utterances, has been noticed by others. We attribute it to a feeling of relief that the Reform Bill has been taken out of the hands of his Government and is well on its way to port. On one part of the reply, we feel we ought to make a few observations. Referring to the fact that certain passages bearing on what His Excellency called 'questions of a controversial nature' were asked to be deleted from some of the addresses before the Viceroy would receive them, Lord Chelmsford declared that it was not his wish to burke such matters, but "it is really only a question of what is appropriate when a Viceroy comes as a guest, anxious to hear in the time at his disposal such representations as relate particularly or mainly to the community or province to which his hosts belong." We respectfully deprecate this view of the people of India as communities and provinces who should either not concern themselves with the grievances of other communities and provinces, or at any rate should keep their feelings to themselves when the King Emperor's supreme representative in this country is in their midst. Nor do we admit that the Viceroy is in the position of a guest, and not in one of authority, in any part of British India. The subjects of His Majesty are entitled to speak to the King's representative in India of whatever subjects, affecting the liberty or prosperity of any portion of them in any part of the country, may happen to be exercising their minds. The proclamation of martial law in the Punjab and the way in which it was administered, the passing of the Rowlatt Act and such other matters, are questions which are at present agitating the Indian mind in every part of the country. It is very little that a Viceroy can usefully contribute to the elucidation of local matters in any part of India. No previous Viceroy, so far as we recollect, has ever pleaded this excuse, not certainly Lord Ripon or Lord Dufferin, Lord Curzon, or Lord Hardinge. His Excellency himself spoke of Fiji and South Africa which are not nearer to Madras than the Punjab. The Viceroy's remark, to our mind, illustrates the danger which we have pointed out more than once of the principle of provincial autonomy being carried to the point of provincial isolation.

Lord Chelmsford on the Reform Scheme. Nothing could have been in better spirit than the brief reference which His Excellency made in his reply to the Madras addresses, to the changes introduced by the Joint Committee of Parliament in the Indian Reform Bill, overruling, be it remembered, on several points the strong recommendations of the Government of India. We heartily endorse His Excellency's exhortation to Indian leaders and, we doubt not, to the English Services as well, to accept and work the reform in a spirit of mutual goodwill and co-operation. Said Lord Chelmsford: "The Reform Bill will now go to Parliament. I feel confident that it will be passed in the near future, and I am therefore already taking all measures possible, so that we may have in India a machinery ready to construct our new constitution. So far as the recommendations of the Joint Committee are concerned each one of us no doubt thinks that he could have put together a better scheme, but here at last, after much controversy and much labour, we see the prospect of a decision. I trust that we shall all in our respective spheres accept that decision and do our best to build up India's future upon it. The foundation will be there, spacious and ample. Let us bring mutual goodwill and co-operation to the task confronting us."

Legislation Against the Social Evil: The action of the Government of Bombay in undertaking legislation to put down brothels in Bombay city, is receiving recognition in other provinces. The West Coast Spectator, published at Calicut, in suggesting that other provinces should introduce similar legislation, urges that the scope of the measure should be extended to the districts. It thinks that at least municipal towns should be empowered to control traffic in women and girls. Our contemporary draws a lurid picture of the state of things in Calicut. "In our own town", it writes, "houses of ill-fame can be found in plenty, and if the secret history of some of them ever comes to be made public there would be startling disclosures. Agents roam about rural areas enticing girls, even kidnapping them, and once a girl falls into the hands of these monsters she is damned for ever and condemned to lifelong misery. When a girl has run her course and is of no use for the "fashionable" house of ill-fame, she is quietly turned out, and then her fall is rapid. She gravitates to one of the lowest class brothels and pulls on a miserable existence till death releases her. It was only the other day some kind-hearted men released a small girl from one of the agents who had brought her from the Cochin State under false pretences, and sent her back home." That last remark reminds us that when girls are rescued from the brothel with the help of the law, only half, and that the easier half, of the work has been done. What is to become of them subsequently? In the case mentioned by our contemporary, the parents or guardians of the rescued girl had the good sense and humanity to take her back, but there have been cases where both these qualities were lacking. A Government of India Bill to provide for this contingency came to grief because some orthodox members were afraid that the rescued girls would be converted to Christianity in the Rescue Homes to which they might be committed. We trust that the philanthropic Bombay public will complete the good work begun by Government by establishing non-denominational Rescue Homes for girls redeemed from the degrading bondage of the brothel. Underlying the problem, are important issues bearing on social and economic conditions, which ought seriously to engage the attention of our thinkers and leaders. Prevention here as in other matters is better than cure. India has need of men like the late Mr. Coote of whose great work Mrs. Hallows of Lucknow writes in another column under the apt heading "A Knight of Chivalry."

Presidentship of the All-India Sanskrit Conference Thus the Indian Mirror: "We find it difficult to believe that Mr. Hornell, Director of Public Instruction, is to be the President of the All-India Sanskrit Conference which will meet in Calcutta in the middle of December. Instead of attending the Conference Mr. Hornell may as well send his jackboot to occupy the Presidential chair. Is there no Sanskrit scholar among the Bengalees, who is fit to fill that position? Mr. Hornell ought to decline the proffered honour and tell those who want to thrust it upon him that he is so overwhelmed with a sense of his utter unfitness to take the chair at such a Conference, that he must have nothing to do with it. The fittest man for the Presidential chair is the Senior Mahamahopadhyaya of Bengal and failing him, we would suggest the name of Mahamahopadhyaya Pandit Hara Prasad Sastri, C. I. E., a ~~scholar~~ of European reputation. As Sir Ashutosh Mukherjee is the Chairman of the Reception Committee, we look to him to prevent what is nothing short of a scandal. If our Pandits want to retain the respect of the Hindu community, they must first of all show that they are not lacking in self-respect. Shade of Vidyasagar! Upon what degenerate shoulders your mantle has fallen!" In the next issue our contemporary, which is always preaching at its compatriots, prints without a hint of apology, a flat contradiction of the statement that Mr. Hornell is to preside over the Sanskrit Conference. Mr. Hornell is an independent-minded Englishman, and we fancy that the Indian Mirror has reason to suspect that he does not sufficiently appreciate its policy nowadays of being more royalist than the King. Hence, perhaps, the invention to serve as an excuse for the invective. We do not think the shade of Vidyasagar would appreciate the present-day Mirror's sermon on self-respect. An ounce of practice is worth a ton of precept.

A Historian as Political Pamphleteer. Dr. Vincent Smith, as historian, has deserved and earned the respect of a large circle of Indians as of others. His descent into the political arena with a pamphlet in which history is sought to be utilised as the handmaid of certain vested interests in opposition to Indian reform, has, therefore, pained and grieved many of them. We are obliged to Mr. Nanjundayya, the much-respected Vice-Chancellor of the Mysore University, whose sober judgment, high character, and large administrative experience in the great and progressive State of Mysore, invest his observations with special weight and authority, for his able analysis of the several parts of Dr. Vincent Smith's book, the first part of which we print to-day.

A Welcome Movement. Many Indians have long held the opinion that a non-proselytising, purely philanthropic Mission, working among the Indian people, will be of immense service, not the least of which will be the awakening of a truer appreciation in the Indian mind of the humanitarian side of Western civilisation. The International Red Cross League of which Lieutenant A. A. Hunter writes in this issue, is such a movement. It is non-political and non-sectarian, and has solely for its object the promotion of sanitation and health among the nations of the world. We trust the project will meet with warm support from the Government and the people of India.

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1919.

THE REVISED REFORM BILL.

The result of the work of the Joint Committee of Parliament on the Indian Reform Bill may be summed up in one sentence. It has gone as far as it could in the direction of Indian demands without destroying the ground plan of the Bill and without imperilling its passage into law in the present Parliament. The recommendations of the Committee in regard to the Government of India illustrate our meaning. The Montagu-Chelmsford report, the Government of India and his Excellency the Viceroy, and Lord Curzon in his speech in the House of Lords, moving the appointment of a Joint Committee, had all of them been emphatic as to the inadvisability at present of introducing the principle of responsibility in the Central Government. To have provided for transferred subjects and ministers in the Government of India in the face of this consensus of opinion, would have been to ensure the rejection of the Bill. The Joint Committee have not done it, but they have done one or two things which indirectly go to increase the influences calculated to make the Government of India more responsive than at present to Indian opinion. The number of Indian members in the Executive Council of the Government of India has been increased by the Committee to three; the right of voting the budget (excluding the political and defence departments) has been conceded to the Legislative Assembly subject to the veto of the Viceroy; the Council of State has been made a reality by providing for it as well as the Legislative Assembly a system of direct election. These are far-reaching improvements. And though we adhere to our oft-expressed opinion that without radical reforms in the Central Government, reforms in provincial governments, will be not only useless but dangerous, we are bound to say that the changes mentioned above as well as the reforms recommended in the India Council and in respect of a Standing Committee of Parliament on Indian Affairs, are sure to supply to an appreciable extent the element of responsibility which is not directly provided for in the constitution of the Government of India. The Committee has recommended that the Statutory Committee to be appointed at the end of ten years, should include the Government of India in the scope of its enquiry. Having regard to the conditions and limitations of the Joint Committee's operations, this is about as far as it could go if it expected the Bill to pass this session. We cannot blame it for not so shaping the measure as to ensure its rejection by Parliament even if the Cabinet was prepared to father a Bill so drastically recast.

In the scheme of reform as it affects Provincial Governments, the Committee has likewise made noteworthy improvements. To begin with, the grand subterfuge called the Grand Committee to give a popular colour to acts really of Executive mandate, has been discarded: the Governor whenever he feels that he ought not to accept the verdict of the Legislature on a transferred subject, would overrule it on his own personal responsibility. This is honest and straightforward and these are qualities as much to be appreciated in constitutional as in other matters. The Government and the public know exactly where they stand. No doubt from the theoretical point of view, this is naked autocracy, but that, in our opinion, is not wholly a disadvantage. Very few men would care, like General Dyer and Colonel Johnson, to proclaim, however much they may secretly wish, that they are above all law, human and divine. An administrator who trusts more to this bludgeon than to his powers of persuasion and accommodation, will very soon find that he can be more useful elsewhere. Even otherwise, the new Governors are likely to be men with a future, and are most unlikely to covet the position in public life attained by Lord Sydenham. To adjudge the Joint Committee's work fairly, we should take the revised Bill as a whole and interpret its provisions with reference to the whole and to the traditions of English public life with which Indian administration will henceforth be in close contact through the Standing Parliamentary Committee. The Joint Committee has revived India's trust in the British Parliament as the arbiter of her destinies. The uncompromising repudiation of the Grand Committee is typical of the frame of mind which the Joint Committee brought to bear upon its responsible task. The same directness is discernible in the manner in which it has handled the electorates' and functions' parts of the reform scheme. The Committee has accepted the Southborough recommendations in regard to the former with the suggestion that they might be enlarged and expanded wherever possible. The Committee has set its seal upon the Lucknow compact and declined to disturb it in the direction suggested by the Government of India. On the other hand, it has recommended that the differences between Brahmans and non-Brahmans in Madras and the Deccan might also be settled by the same process of mutual agreement. We do not quite like the relegation of the question of women's franchise to the provincial Legislatures, as if the women of India were not as much citizens of the State as the men. But we recognise that in the face of the attitude of men like Mr. Surendranath Banerjee and Mr. Srinivasa Sastry, and the opposition of the Governments in India, the Selborne Committee had some excuse for adopting this timid course. We are not sure that it is only the new Legislative Councils and not also the present ones that are invested with the discretion to extend the franchise to women. If the present Councils can intervene in the matter, we are sure that the Bombay Legislative Council will be glad to pass a resolution to that effect at the forthcoming December session. As regards the functions to be transferred to popular control, the Times of India, we think, is in error in concluding that only education and industries are to be transferred. The wording of the official summary, taken by itself, does admit of such a construction; but taken, as it should be, in the light of the previous discussions, it is clear to our mind that all the subjects recommended by the Feetham Committee are to be transferred, including education in all its stages, and industries. The specific mention of these two departments is due to there having been strong opposition in official quarters to their transfer to ministers. (Since the above was in type, this has been made clear by a Renter's telegram.) The Joint Committee has rejected the proposal of a divided parse, though the Government of India fought hard for it up to the last moment. It has adopted the Indian contention that Ministers should have the same status and salary as members of the Executive Council.

The changes proposed by the Joint Committee in regard to the India Council and Office, are no less, and in some ways they are more, important. The whole cost of the India Office, including the salaries of the Secretary of State and members of his Council, would be borne by the British exchequer. It is recommended that there should be more Indian members than at present and that they should get in addition to the enhanced pay of £ 1200 allowed to members of Council, a special maintenance allowance of half that amount per annum. A High Commissioner will be appointed to make contracts on behalf of the Government of India, thus relieving the Secretary of State of his present commercial activities. The other important change which will be welcomed in India is the appointment of a Joint Committee of Parliament to look after the affairs of India, and more particularly the working of the new reforms. It will watch over the exercise by the Governor of the veto powers vested in him. The Joint Committee felt itself precluded from recommending that fiscal autonomy should be guaranteed by statute, but it suggests, that it should be assured by the acknowledgement of a convention that the Secretary of State should so far as possible abstain from intervention in fiscal matters when the Government of India and the Indian Legislature agree and should only intervene to safeguard the international obligations of the Empire or any fiscal arrangements within the Empire to which His Majesty's Government is a party. This is vague and not satisfactory. It might have been more definitely put. The matter cannot stand there. But it is something that the Committee has said so much on a question of so much importance and delicacy. Since this was written, the Member for Commerce of the Government of India, who is on a visit to Bombay, said in the course of his speech at the Indian Merchants' Chamber, in reply to a pointed observation by the Chairman, Mr. J. B. Petit, urging that the Government of India should not commit themselves to any fiscal policy till the whole question is carefully sifted by the people and the many public bodies throughout the country :

As I read these words, (of the official summary relating to fiscal autonomy) when the Government of India and the Indian legislature agree, they are practically to have a free hand so far as fiscal matters are concerned. If I am right in my interpretation, this is a very great step forward, and India will have a great measure of freedom which she has so long desired. I know, sir, from what has been published in the "Bombay Chronicle" that your views are less sanguine but we may join in hoping that my view is right. Before the arrival of this telegram both the Secretary of State and the Government of India had come to the conclusion that by some means or other the views of the public must be obtained on the general principles involved in the subject of Imperial Preference, before any decision was arrived at. Commercial interests will, of course, be consulted and we propose further to ventilate the question. By the appointment of a Committee of this kind on which of course the unofficial members will be fully represented, we should hope to be able to thresh out the question and examine how far India's interests would be likely to be affected beneficially or otherwise and ultimately to arrive at a decision on the question of general policy.

DR. VINCENT SMITH ON INDIAN CONSTITUTIONAL REFORM. I.

[By MR. H. V. NANJUNDAYYA, M. A. M. L., C. I. E.]

If an extensive knowledge of the History of India is a qualification (as no doubt it is to a large extent), there is hardly any one who has a better right to pronounce an authoritative opinion than Dr. Vincent Smith on the subject of Indian constitutional reform. But the other claim that he makes in the preface on account of his official experience of twenty nine years may not be of equal weight, as we believe that he retired long before the recent series of events began to make a most remarkable transformation in the country. The 'historical background' is no doubt a very important factor, but one can, by selecting the particular background required, support or condemn equally well any proposal for reform.

Dr. Vincent Smith concedes that recent events have rendered a change in the method of governing India imperative, and that self-government is an object not only desirable but attainable within certain limits. But it is difficult to understand why he should consider it a mistake to seek the goal of responsible Government at present, when self-government, if it means anything in the sphere of politics, must necessarily lead to responsible government, however distant it may be. How far he has made out a claim to his freedom from hostility to reasonable practical reforms, can be better judged when we come to a consideration of his "constructive suggestions" in the last chapter of his brochure.

The pronouncement of August 1917 means, according to this writer, no more than that the existing Cabinet, if it remains in power, is bound to introduce an India Bill drawn in accordance with the 'general terms' of the answer given on August 20, 1917. The occasion was no doubt an unimpressive one—of an answer to a seemingly casual question by a member of the House. But the exposition of its origin, adopted from Lord Curzon's speech in the House of Lords, shows clearly that it was not an offhand answer of an impulsive Secretary of State given on the spur of the moment, but a statement of deliberate policy made by the responsible Government of His Majesty. It is true that the statement is not a legislative act. But it was a solemn declaration by His Majesty's Government; and though, of course, free debate on the measure when submitted to Parliament cannot in any way be fettered, it can hardly be imagined that the British Government can now go back upon the promise held out in respect of the affairs of an unrepresented dependency, or seriously reduce the concessions indicated by a generous interpretation of the 'pronouncement'.

Chapter II of Dr. Smith's book styled the Historical Indian Ideal of Government, begins with Vedic folk-motes and ends with 'the golden link of the crown' and details a number of facts which are mainly true. But it is difficult to see why or in what context the Joint Report fails to mention the name of the King-Emperor, or how it is made out that the loyal homage of India to his person has not been duly appreciated. Dr. Vincent Smith is too good a historian to deny that despotic power in Government was not always the ideal of India or that kings were bound by laws. But he qualifies his admissions by saying that a masterful king was always able to free himself from the trammels of the law, and that ordinary men and women of India 'crave for Government by a person to whom they can render loyal homage which easily passes into worship'. Human nature in India is not very different from what it is elsewhere and if such craving existed in India in his time, it is not, we are afraid, quite so apparent in the India of the present day. Traditional ideas are of course important in their place, but where there have been so many and so important changes in traditional modes of life, it is futile to expect that in this sphere alone, 'it is neither safe nor easy to meddle with traditional ideas in India'. We know that the seed of all life, has come down to us from a long and unknown past, but we chiefly sustain life on the fruits of the past two or three years alone. Whatever the ideal of Government may have been in the old times and in small states, it is not possible to set up a personal autocracy in India at the present time. It cannot be imagined that King George can now exercise the despotic powers wielded by Akbar or Shivaji. England will not tolerate it, even if India will submit.

Conflicts of races, castes and religions in the country are relied upon to support the tacit inference that a democratic advance is not possible in India. It is something that the author has conceded that Indians justly pride themselves in the assertion that religious opinion in their land is free and that most indigenous rulers have shown statesmanlike tolerance for all creeds. A profound historian like him could not deny the fact of a certain unity persisting in India in the midst of so much diversity, but he makes a more halting concession of this truth in this polemical pamphlet than he does in his purely historical works. The long course of Mahomedan domination in India and the inroads of so many diverse elements in each other's territories, have taught the people to differentiate between social and religious concerns on the one hand and the political sphere on the other, and to keep them apart. Religious toleration under some of the Mahomedan rulers in former times was indeed not so much a reasoned policy as a necessity; and even the most bigoted of them could not hope to alter the beliefs and habits of more than an insignificant fraction of his subjects. But even before the advent of the British Government, the different religions and castes of India had learnt to get on together, without allowing these social distinctions to intrude unduly into the sphere of Government functions. It is also well known that in Indian States, there is, if anything, more harmony than in British India between the different elements of the population. It would be strange that over such a vast area and in such a large population, there are not occasionally disturbances due to religious or caste differences. An enumeration of them in a single chapter may look formidable, but the list becomes quite insignificant when the dates and places are taken into account. India is not the only country where such occasional breaches of the peace occur. Much more serious conflicts take place between different classes in European countries in greater number, but they are not considered enough to render the people unfit for constitutional Government. It is the fashion to dub facts intended to be used to support foregone conclusions as mysteries. If the institution of caste is the greatest Indian mystery to foreigners, it is not such a mystery to the Indians themselves as to justify all sorts of alarming consequences to be attributed to it. It is true that it is a very ancient institution, that it has thousands of sub-divisions, and that it cannot be abolished at any rate for centuries more. It is therefore all the more the duty of practical statesmen to devise such methods of political and social reform as are consistent with the existence of caste for an indefinite length of time, if not for ever, rather than to fold their hands in despair, and to assert that the country is for ever destined to be in a state of pupillage under unmitigated alien domination. It is a gross exaggeration to say that there are many caste feuds, and that they are as virulent to-day as they were a thousand years ago. It is a well-known fact that the Indians have all along been noted as a peace loving people and singularly free from fanaticism; and it cannot be true to say that caste has been, even in the past, as much a cause of disruption as is sought now to be made out. But for exploitation by interested persons quite recently, the misunderstanding between Brahmans and non-brahmans would not have attained so much prominence as it has in some parts of the country. The doctrine of equality of all men before the law was not in vogue till quite recently even in more modern countries, and India with its caste was not a greater sinner than others. It would however be a poor commentary on British administration, if it has not learnt the lesson along with other nations after more than a century of the reign of law.

The criticisms contained in the chapter headed "Vain Visions" need not detain us long. The Joint Report does not profess to give a final scheme and provides for a transitory period when the changes proposed will be more or less in an experimental stage. The visions may be more or less the exercise of the imagination of the illustrious authors, but their elimination does not recessarily discredit the proposals themselves. Dr. Vincent Smith from his study of history may not consider them worth anything; but he can hardly deny that there has been a very remarkable change in the country within the past decade or two; and it is inevitable that the position of the Government cannot remain the same in relation to the people of the country that it has been before the present war.

It may be true that some petitions and other demonstrations have been got up, giving expression to fears "that reforms carried out on the lines of the report may result in placing the majority of the people under the heel of a tyrannous Brahmin Oligarchy." This kind of abuse of the Brahmans as a class has become the favorite device of all persons who are opposed equally to the Brahmans and to constitutional reforms. It ought to be a sufficient answer to say that the large majority of electors in any scheme likely to be devised will be others than Brahmans, and with the campaign of vilification carried on in so many directions, and as shown by the results of many recent elections, the fear that they will be the majority is quite groundless; and if any injustice is likely, it will probably be directed against the Brahman. The Brahman has never formed a close oligarchy in India and has not been tyrannous even when he had the chance.

A KNIGHT OF CHIVALRY. (By Mrs. F. S. HALLOWES.)

William Alexander Coote, a philanthropist of European fame, has passed away leaving the world much the poorer. He was a man who recalls the memories of the old days of romance when paladins rode out from King Arthur's court to succour distressed damsels. The annals of chivalry record no such exploits as his; either in ancient, medieval or modern history; for the sum total of his rescues from worse than death, have been many thousands of girls not from one country alone, but from all parts of Europe. This modern Knight devoted himself to a Divine humanity which meant most difficult and repulsive tasks; Nothing less than the attack of a system of organised crime, which has been the despair of governments and the horror and reproach of civilization.

For over thirty years William Alexander Coote was Secretary and then Director of the National Vigilance Association of Great Britain. This is an Association of men and women for the repression of criminal vice and public immorality. From it came the international work for the suppression of the White Slave Traffic. In 1898 the horrors of this traffic in women, as Mr. Coote encountered it in London, and by correspondence with workers on the Continent of Europe, almost overwhelmed him. The utter hopelessness of existing methods to accomplish the overthrow of the traffickers, for they found it quite easy to avoid legal responsibility by the fact that the crime was not wholly committed in one country, but in most cases was commenced in one country, continued in another and consummated in a third or fourth, drove him in bitterness of soul to cry to God for light and leading.

He was answered by a Vision, which told him to visit every capital of Europe and form an International Convention, which could deal effectively with the traffickers. Without money and introductions, knowing no foreign languages he seemed the last person to undertake such a technical Mission—yet so solemnly and vividly impressed was he, that he asked God to give him a sign, by sending £200 for travelling expenses. He told one friend and his secretary. These three alone knew. His friend refused the money; but a fortnight later a letter reached him from a comparative stranger with the exact sum—£200! The sign was given. He went forward upon his remarkable journey, and visited Germany, France, Holland, Austria, Hungary, Italy, Russia, Spain, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland, Denmark, Belgium, Argentine Republic and United States, America. In all these countries National Committees for the suppression of the White Slave Traffic were formed.

The first International Congress was held in London in 1899, one hundred and twenty accredited delegates from these nations attended. An International Bureau was established in London, which kept all the Governments in touch. The second Congress was held in Frankfort in 1902; the third in Paris 1906. Space fails to give the names of the distinguished men and women of Europe, who have supported this work. The organisation of International effort, resulted in a very real progress of the suppression of this terrible traffic. But eternal vigilance is the price of immunity.

Since the great War this work has been sadly disorganised, and Mr. Coote and his Bureau have realized the magnitude of reconstruction. He wrote an epoch-making pamphlet in 1916 called "Commercialized vice. What is it? Can it be abolished?" Out of his wide experience—the widest that any man has ever had, he urged the nations to legislate against Commercialized Vice.

"So long as Governments allow this trade in their cities, so long will the lives of tens of thousands be blighted by a terrible contagion; so long as prostitution is assumed to be for men a physical necessity, and for women a financial need—so long will religious and educational work have no chance in the competition of vice with virtue.

Civilization must come to see that prostitution is a social crime of the worst type, most dangerous to the physical and moral welfare of any nation. Let there be equal penalties enacted upon the man who buys for immoral purpose and upon the woman who sells for that purpose, and prostitution as a trade would cease; and the rising generation be taught the crime of handing on a disease to posterity which is nothing less than race suicide".

Thus has this Knight of Chivalry urged upon Governments their duty to deal with Commercialized Vice; thus he threw upon those who legislate their responsibility of stating for what purpose this trade is to be allowed in the future. He took the deepest interest in India and wrote several times recently encouraging the movement here.

THE ENGLISH PUBLIC SCHOOL.

II.

[The English Public School has been commended by many administrators and others, themselves products of it, as an ideal educational institution, and some Indians have as usual, echoed the sentiment. We give below a criticism of the system from Sir Oliver Lodge's recent book "Christopher."]

Well, such assertions are made and must be faced. I wish to write tentatively, but I ask those who know the real facts, whatever they are, to consider why such accusations have ever been made. So far as I am able to judge of the matter, basing my view on information available to all, and seeking earnestly to avoid exaggeration, I feel bound to say something on the subject of school as it is not invariably but too often is, and with this apology as preface I begin.

To a sensitive boy the period of school is a strange admixture of good and evil, of pleasure and pain. With some the pain predominates over the pleasure, and it is difficult to deny the assertion that with a few the evil predominates over the good. A friend of boarding-school education can hardly contest the statement that it is, or has been characterised by some features which may be called defects. Such are:—

Discouragement of intellectual keenness.

Suppression of natural emotional expression.

Reduction of exuberant individuality to a common type.

Submission to a dull tradition of stupid uniformity, where every action has to be guarded by deference to public opinion, on pain of punishment.

That these are characteristics of public schools, where boys of different ages are left to the tender mercies of each other, to the discipline of prefects, and subject to unwritten laws which are Draconian in their severity, can hardly be denied. That they are merits, few will have the hardihood to assert. And if they are not merits they are faults, out of which it is to be hoped that the wave of reality which has submerged as in the great war will have sufficient residual power to emancipate us before it has subsided.

Joy in rational study, eagerness to receive information—though perhaps not from books—desire to understand something of the nature of our surroundings and of the main interests of life, these are possessions surely natural to most children, though apparently not to all. But this kind of joy and eagerness is often killed in the growing youth: and for this catastrophe I feel bound to accuse, first the unwisdom, indeed the ignorance, of teachers, and next the more or less suffocating room of the school. Desire for knowledge may in exceptional cases return but with little abatement during a college period or in later life, but during the priceless years of boyhood it must be hidden, it must be indulged secretly if at all; an atmosphere of apathy and magisterial cynicism too often succeeds in killing it.

Few teachers seem to cultivate desire for knowledge when it needs cultivation, though of course they are exceptions*; schools may have many merits—doubtless they have—but as a rule intellectual encouragement is not one of them. If that is in any degree true it would be difficult to frame a more serious indictment.

The lumbering crudeness of the average professional school boy hides, and in normal life effectively conceals, a multitude of virtues. His professionally guarded attitude, undemonstrative, reserved, incapable of intelligent expression, and yet with sensitive tentacles shrinking at a touch from his fellows, is like the shell of a crustacean, a protective covering which inevitably hinders free development and which, in more favourable surroundings, ought not to be necessary. This protective crust can hardly be the result of any reasonable discipline, and in so far as it tends to cramp the wholesome exercise of faculties it is noxious. Nor is its cramping influence over the higher faculties limited to the school period. It lasts into Sandhurst and other establishments where men of good physique learn self-government under strict but intermittent discipline, and where warped high spirits are responsible for occasional outbursts of rowdiness or even ill-treatment. The tendency too often is to regard a new-comer as an easy prey. At Winchester, and doubtless in other schools an elder boy is, I believe, told of to help and befriend a new comer for a time, and in many ways authority tries to stem the influence of meaningless tradition; but at some schools a new boy seldom experiences the smallest chivalry or kindly help in his initial difficulties and can easily be rendered miserable, while in the worst cases, the thoughtless power of the stronger develops into an obscene brutality.

Not with such aid would one expect a Commonwealth to be saved. And yet here are our defenders and underneath the crust they are fine fellows all the time. Hence all these troubles are unnecessary. They thwart and spoil the incubation period. They dissipate energy. Many are the evils which come to fruition in times of peace, when the output of energy is greater than the demand for its exertion. Only a call is needed—a summons to danger and responsibility for true manhood to assert itself. Expression then bursts its hard crust, human nature is once more free as in childhood, a hero at the front is once more at liberty, emancipated from the painful protective casing in which his personality was masked and even his family affection partially obscured.

*Much has been said and much needs to be said, about the lack of scientific training in the past, and about methods adopted for teaching Science, in the present. I feel strongly that no person can be considered educated who grows up without some unspecialised information and clear outlook on the universe of matter, both animate and inanimate, of which he is a part. I also consider that it is easy to be too specific and technical in imparting this information to the average unscientific boy with no special aptitude for the subject; and that a course of unprofessional or humanistic science might with advantage be devised. But it is inappropriate to enter upon topics like this in the present book. I wrote an article in the Fortnightly Review for August, 1918, on the subject—

THE NEW INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE FOR RELIEF.

(BY LIEUT. ALLAN A. HUNTER.)

We are through with the war. But not with its afflictions. Those afflictions to-day constitute a challenge, for all those who consider themselves servants of the world or servants of India, to draw and work together on an international basis to fight and we trust to conquer "hunger, destitution and disease."

A new organization with such a definite humanitarian object in view is now being developed. It is called the League of Red Cross Societies. Its head is an American, Mr. Henry P. Davison, formerly head of the Red Cross War Council. This is his platform:—

"In former times the Red Cross was an organization for war, to mitigate the horrors of war and to relieve victims of disasters. We now propose to make it the greatest of all peace organizations through an international bond which I hope will eventually take in all of the nations of the globe.

"With no political or governmental or sectarian connections whatever, the League proposes, in this international compact, to work for the betterment of humanity by distributing the knowledge contributed to it and by striving local agencies to keen activity. Knowing, let us say, that a pestilence is about to afflict any part of the world, just as it was known that the Spanish influenza was advancing, the League will warn the threatened territories, offer the best preventive and curative methods, advise the local Red Cross organizations what to do and generally inspire the proper agencies to a correct and efficient handling of the problem."

Being an American and only freshly arrived in India, I cannot judge whether this country would be ready for a project of such dimensions and demands. But I am convinced that those of India who have the cause at heart of making this land "clean, healthy and sound", will do well to study this scheme and try to connect up with it.

The League has nothing to do with politics,—and perhaps that will detract from its popularity, for we human beings revel in politics—but it has much to do with the relief and succour of the nations. The League is in line with the best of India's idealism, an idealism that we westerners are coming to appreciate and admire.

INDIAN POLITICS.

A SUGGESTION FOR FUTURE WORKING.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

The Indian Reform Bill which is now on the threshold of the statute-book of the British Parliament is designed, assuming that it undergoes no severe changes during its final passage through the Houses of Commons and Lords, to give Indians a fair measure of responsible Government and a moiety of Self-Government. When the provisions of the Bill take practical effect in our midst, which we hope ere long will come to pass, not only will our present ideas of administration be perturbed but also we are likely to meet with accidents along the path of our duty, unaccustomed as we are to the modes of self-government. Bringing the Bill into effect will be opening up a new chapter in the political history of India. Thereafter, politics will no longer be the fashion of capitalists and businessmen nor will it continue to be the pleasurable leisure-passing ambition of the lawyer class as it has been up to now. In other words, the days of amateur politics will have gone for ever. Politics will assume such a characteristic that none but an earnest, industrious and persevering student who pursues it day and night will find it worth his while to indulge in it.

Going through the political history of India of the period intervening between now and the time when for the first time India came into contact with the western political ideas and institutions, we do not find the names of at least half a dozen Indians whose sole vocation in life was politics. We have to confess to a point of shame and regret that excepting that illustrious founder of the Servants of India Society and the first Indian Member of Parliament we cannot choose a third to be included in the category of persons whose be-all and end-all was politics. By this we do not mean even an iota of disparagement to many worthy sons and daughters of India who have in a remarkable degree contributed towards the political regeneration of India. Far from it. Our object is only to bring in to prominence the regrettable fact that in the course of nearly two hundred years of her western connection, India produced only one Gokhale and one Dadabhai Nowroji. Now, to meet the altered condition of administration consequent on the passing of the Bill into a law India requires many Gokhales and Nowrojis. In other words, to successfully stem the tide of future Indian politics, a class of professional politicians is required, and if steps are not taken now, we will not be in a position to justify our claims to further instalments of Self-Government when the Statutory Commission visits India. Therefore, in every province, a class of professional politicians just like the class of Doctors or Engineers or Vakils must come into existence.

At present the whole country is interspersed with a number of political organizations. There is not a village which has not got its own Society to hold a meeting to protest against the Rowlett Act and to pass resolutions and send them on to the Secretary of State. All the materials for the formation of a class of professional politicians are there. What is wanted is only a happy combination of the materials. If each of these numberless political institutions take up the question now, and each of these train up at least one candidate, we have no fear that, before the Statutory Commission referred to in the Bill (Indian Reform) visits India, a class of persons who will be an authority in political matters and on whom the country can depend will have been brought into being. Not till then the country will be in a position to deal with serious politics and to undertake the heavy responsibilities of Self-Government or Home Rule.

N. V. SANWA.

Girgaon, Bombay.

THE HYDERABAD DECCAN BRAHMA SAMAJ.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer,

Sir,

By the Grace of God a Brahma Samaj was established here in Hyderabad Deccan, or rather re-established, about six years ago. Since then Divine Worship has been regularly held from week to week and religious and social work steadily carried on by the Samaj. We have now a congregation of about 30 full (Anushtanic) Members and about 50 Sympathisers. The Samaj has been enabled to do some work of religious and social help and uplift—small work but, we trust, real work—among a large community composed of backward and neglected classes to whom such work has been a God-send.

There is now a general and ardent desire among our congregation to give permanence to our Samaj, by providing it with a building of its own. During the past six years our weekly services, lectures and other meetings have been held either in private houses or in buildings lent to us by the courtesy of other Associations. This state of things cannot, however, be permanent and we have felt led to make a great effort to collect funds for the erection of a Brahma Mandir in the City. It is estimated that the building, including site, will cost Rs. 20,000. Our small congregation, consisting mostly of people with very slender means, has pledged itself at a Conference recently held under the Presidentship of our esteemed brother Mr. G. B. Trivedi, B.A., Secretary of the Bombay Prarthana Samaj, to raise among themselves Rs. 4,000 (four thousand) each member being pledged to contribute a month's income. We may expect another Rs. 2,000 to be contributed by the public of this city. This may seem a small contribution for the First Native State in India to make; but our cause is little understood and still less appreciated here and the amount named above is the utmost that in the present state of public feeling can be expected locally, over and above the contribution of the congregation. Thus we must look for the remaining Rs. 14,000 to friends of the Brahma Faith in other parts of the country, particularly in the great centres of Brahma Congregations. We trust that the cause will appeal to the heart of every true Indian Theist and we trust and pray that our Brahma brothers and the friends of Brahmoism everywhere in India may be led to liberally help this effort that a small and struggling Samaj is making. Contributions will be gratefully received and acknowledged by the undersigned.

N. G. WELINKAR.

President,

15th Oct. 1919.

Hyderabad (Deccan) Brahma Samaj.

The Proper Aim of Education The St. Xavier's College, Bombay, celebrated the fiftieth year of its foundation last week, beginning with a foregathering of past and present students under the distinguished presidentship of His Excellency the Governor. The College has had a very successful career and the list of speakers showed that among its old students are men who have distinguished themselves in various walks of life. In proposing a vote of thanks to their Excellencies, the Principal Father Blatter, said that the success of Joint education was due to the fact that the Fathers had a definite purpose in life. "And what was this definite purpose in life? It was not money, it was not honour and glory, it was not politics, it was not the desire to shine before the world. The only motive that determined their actions was their love for human souls. To instruct human souls, to make them fit for this life and happy for the life to come—this was their only purpose in life." To have "a definite purpose in life" is the secret of happiness, though it may not be of success, as success is reckoned by most men. To teach students to have a definite purpose in life, and to have this purpose associated not with dominance over but with service to one's fellows, is, to use the words of Father Blatter, "to make them fit, for this life and happy for the life to come."

ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postages
In advance. In arrears.

Per annum..... Rs. 5-0-0. Rs. 6-0-0

Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, twelve
hillings (Rs. 6).

Single copies of the current year can be had at 4
annas each and any back copies at 6 annas each.

"PEEPS INTO THE FUTURE"

Is everybody's everyday book. The codified experience of generations of Astrologers and Indian Yogis—an astrologer in moments of anxiety & suspense—answers short and succinctly clear on the thousand and one points of doubt and uncertainty. Everybody may consult the book—no date of birth or horoscope necessary. Must be in every pocket for it suits all. Price one rupee only. Foreign two shillings. Apply to the Proprietor

TATA MYSTIC ASTRAL STUDIO

24-8-19. Chodavaram, Vizagapatam District.

"COMMERCE AND INDUSTRIES."

An Interesting Monthly Journal of Indian
Material Progress.

Annual Subscription Rs. 10-0 and Single Copy
Rs. 1 Post Free.

A Specially valuable advertising Medium.

Wanted Agents throughout India.

Address:—P. Box. No. 353, and 5 Mount Road
Madras S. C.

12-10-19.

"MESMERISM AND HYPNOTISM."

Complete Course Rs. 1-8 only. Contents. 1. Instructions. 2. Breathing Exercise or Yoga Practice. 3. Exercises to develop this will and memory. 4. Various Hypnotic processes. 5. To wake up a subject. 6. Clairvoyance. 7. Telepathy. 8. Levitation. 9. Wonderful methods of Hindu Healing. 10. Various diseases. 11. Hindu Catalepsy or Burial alive. 12. The secret method of telling future events most wonderfully by the Indian Yogees without horoscope or birth time. Mr. Ratikantha Bhowmik, Head Master writes from Senhatix on 22-10-19:—I have become successful hypnotist with the help of your course. The methods are far easier and simpler than in any other courses. Mr. B. Sitaramurty, B.A., B.L., Government pleader writes: Your book really reveals the wonderful hidden powers of man. The methods are of the easiest kind and the book in short is the best of its kind in the field.

THE EASTERN HYPNOTIC HOME,
P. O. Chodavaram, (Vizagapatam, Dt.)

"Wanted:—Employment, as teacher or governess, by an educated Brahman widow with midwifery training and medical practice, well-versed in music and the Vina; proficient in English, Sanskrit, Telugu and Canarese, and speaking Tamil and Hindustani nols. Please apply to K. R. C/o. The Indian Social Reformer, Bombay."

21-9-19.

THE TATA INDUSTRIAL BANK, LD.

HEAD OFFICE, BOMBAY.

BRANCHES—CALCUTTA and HYDERABAD (Deccan)
CAWNPORE and LUCKNOW.

Sub-Branches.—

Bombay—Share Bazaar, Shroff Bazaar.

Calcutta—Bara Bazaar.

London Agents. LLOYDS BANK LIMITED.

NEW YORK AGENTS: THE GUARANTY
TRUST COY. OF NEW YORK.

AUTHORISED CAPITAL... Rs. 12,00,00,000.

SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL... " 7,56,00,225.

PAID UP CAPITAL... " 1,50,99,225.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Sir D. J. Tata, Kt., Chairman.

Sir Sassoon David, Bart.

Sir R. N. Mookerjee, K. C. L. E.

Sir Francis Stewart, Kt.

Sir Henry Proctor, Kt.

R. D. Tata, Esq.

F. E. Dinshaw, Esq.

F. O. Rimington, Esq.

Narottam Morarjee, Esq.

Hajee Gulam Mahomed Ajam, Esq.

The Hon'ble Mr. Parashottamdas Thakordas. C. I. E.

A. J. Biliatoria, Esq.

Secretary, R. H. Parker.

Current Accounts opened and interest allowed on daily credit balances from Rs. 500/- to Rs. 1,00,000/- at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum. If the balance to the credit of any account does not fall below Rs. 25,000/- at any time between 1st January and 30th June, interest will be allowed during that period at 2½ % per annum. No interest is allowed unless the sum accrued amounts to Rs. 3/- Half-yearly.

Fixed Deposits. Interest allowed on Deposits fixed for one or two years and for shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank. Interest allowed on Savings Bank Accounts at 4 per cent per annum. Rules may be obtained on application.

Loans and Cash Credits are granted on approved securities.

Purchases and sales of Securities and shares effected.

Bills of Exchange purchased and collected and every description of Banking and exchange business undertaken.

14-4-18. L. D. L. BUCKLEY, General Manager.

THE YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK, LIMITED.

(Registered in Japan.)
Established 1880.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 48,000,000.

Paid up Capital.....Yen. 42,000,000.

Reserve Fund.....Yen. 23,100,000.

Head Office:—Yokohama.

Branches and Agencies at Bombay, Buenos Aires, Calcutta, Changchun, Chi-Nau, Dairen, Fengtien, Hankow, Harbin, Hongkong, Honolulu, Kaiyuan, Kobe, London, Los Angeles, Lyons, Manila, Nagasaki, Newchwang, New York, Osaka, Peking, Rangoon, San Francisco, Seattle, Shanghai, Shimonoseki, Singapore, Soerabaya, Sydney, Tientsin, Tokio, Taingtao.

Current Deposit Accounts are opened for approved customers and Interest is allowed at the rate of 2 per cent per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 100,000, provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of banking and exchange business transacted.

N. IGARASHI

Post Box No. 207, Hornby Road, Bombay.

I. NISHIMAKI

Manager, Calcutta.

1-12-17,

Post Box No. 406, Clive street, Calcutta

THE BANK OF BARODA, LD.

Under the Patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja Gaekwar.

Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897

HEAD OFFICE BARODA.

Branches—Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, and Surat

Capital Subscribed... ..Rs. 60,00,000.

Capital Paid up " 20,00,000.

Reserve Fund " 12,50,000.

DIRECTORS :

The Hon'ble Mr. Lallubhai Somaldas, C. I. E., Chairman
Sir Vithaldas Damodar Thackersey, Kt.

Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti Nagar Sheth,
Baroda.

Sheth Manilal Revadas, Vadnager.

Rao Bahadar Gnanjirao R. Nimbalkar, Sur Sabha, Baroda State.

Bhaskerrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., Advocate, High Court Bombay.

M. H. Kantavalla, Esq., Agent, Maharaja Mill Co., Ld. Baroda.

R. R. Shirgaokar, Naib Sabha, Baroda State.

A. N. Datar, Accountant General, Baroda State.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balance from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest which does not come to Rs. 8 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application. C. E. RANDLE, General Manager.
15-4-12.

THE CENTRAL BANK OF INDIA, LTD

Subscribed Capital... ..Rs. 50,00,000

Paid Up Capital" 49,59,900

Reserved liability of

Shareholders" 25,00,000

Reserve Fund" 6,00,000

Head Office:—Alice Building, Bombay.

Local Branches:—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar, (3) Shree Bazar.

Branches:—Amritsar, Calcutta, Delhi, Jharia, Karachi.

London Agents:—London Joint City and Midland Bank, Ld.

Current Accounts:—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June
2½ % allowed on Daily Balances from July to December.

12 months Deposits received at 5 % per annum.
Long and Short period Deposits received at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking Business transacted.
For farther particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA.

Manager.

25-2-17

THE BANK OF TAIWAN, LTD.

Incorporated by Special Charter of the Imperial Japanese Government, 1899.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 30,000,000
Paid-up CapitalYen. 22,500,000
Reserve FundYen. 5,680,000

Head Office :—Taipeh, Formosa.

BRANCHES :—

LONDON	SHANGHAI	TOKIO
NEW YORK	HONGKONG	OSAKA
AMOY	SINGAPORE	KOBE
CANTON	SOERABAJA	YOKOHAMA
FOOCHOW	SEMARANG	AKO
HANKOW	MAKUNG	GIRAN
KIUKIANG	BATAVIA	KAGI
SWATOW	PINAN	KARENKO
TAINAN	SHINCHIKU	KEELUNG
TAKOW	TAIOHU	TAMSUI

The Bank has also a large number of Correspondents at Home and Abroad.

Current Deposit Accounts :—are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at 2 per cent. per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 1,00,000 provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of Banking and Exchange business transacted.

K. TAKEMURA,

Manager

9-12-17.

56, Esplanade Road, Fort, BOMBAY

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

Established 7th September 1906.

Incorporated under the Indian
Companies' Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE :

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.

Capital Subscribed Rs. 1,00,00,000

Capital Called up ,, 50,00,000

Reserve Fund ,, 15,00,000

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½% p. a. throughout the year. On sums exceeding Rs. 1,00,000 interest is allowed by special arrangement. No interest will be allowed which does not amount to Rs. 8 per half year.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short periods @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

"Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application".

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, & CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stocks at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

H. P. STRINGFELLOW,

15-1-11.

Manager.

A Lady's Best Ornament is a Glorious Head of Hair.

A profusion of rich, soft silky, lustrous, wavy hair—where's the woman who would not like that?

There's only one oil that makes such hair and it's the far-famed

KAMINIA OIL
(Regd.)

Invaluable for ladies, and just as much for Brain-Workers and Students.

Heated head cooled, aching disappears and dandruff becomes a thing of the past. Added to all these it possesses a beautiful fragrant smell.

For superiority, awarded a Gold Medal at the Mysore Exhibition, and in great demand all over the country.

If you have not yet used KAMINIA OIL, you

have missed a fine delight and a real boon; use it now, if only once; and like many people you will prefer to use also always

Price per bottle, Rs. 1. V. P. Charges 6 annas extra

Price for 3 bottles Rs. 2-10. V. P. charges 14 annas extra

Write now, Do not delay.

Sole Agents :—

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,
(5-8-16) No. 155, Jumma Masjid Market, BOMBAY.

Now-a-Days.

All things have advanced in price. Even the vegetable ingredients used in our Atank Nigrah Pills have advanced in price.

Even the labourers demand heavy wages being dearer. Even the users have increased yet the Atank Nigrah Pills for Toning up the system are sold at before war price i. e. at a Rupee.

Valdya Shastri

Manishanker Govindji,

Atank Nigrah Pharmacy,

Head Office:—Jamnagar—Kathiawar,

Branch:—Kalbadevi Road, Bombay.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours. Publish Fine Art Pictures, & c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.
1-12-10. HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS-

ROYAL TONIC PILLS

Powerful Nutritious and Strength Restorer. Price Rs. 1-4 per tin of 30 Pills.

PREPARED BY—GOVINDJEE DAMODER & Co.,

Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Commission Agents.

-12-10.

No. 3 Sutar Chawl Market, BOMBAY.

Timely advice to the Wealthy

Costly but certain remedies are in the long run cheaper than cheap and uncertain ones.

KANDARPA SANJIVINI PILLS AND OIL

are the safest and surest remedies for indigestion, constipation, loss of appetite, memory, mental, physical and nervous debility and all sorts of urinary disorders, improve impoverished blood.

Price per tin of 40 Pills Rs. 5 & per tola of Oil Rs. 10.

Both Purchased at a time Rs. 11/4

Medical Advice and a Medical Book containing 128 pages sent Gratis and Post Free.

RAJ VAIDYA NARAYANJI KESHAVJI

Head Office :- Jamnagar, Kathiawar, (India.)

Branch :- No. 187, Kalbadevi Road,
24-8-1919. BOMBAY.

Empire Hindu Hotel

Opposite Victoria Terminus
Bombay.

(Central Situation)
Strictly Vegetarian
Charges Moderate

Fitted with
Electric Lift, Fans and Lights.

TELEGRAMS: TELEPHONE

"FOOD," BOMBAY. } 2789.

22-8-19.

Saffron? Saffron?? Saffron???

If you wish to buy genuinely pure and best Saffron it is
SUN

BRAND

SAFFRON

ONLY

It has been largely used by Jain Temples, Maharajas, Durbars, Hakims and Vaidyas all over the country for the last 75 years and is well known for its purity and genuineness.

S. NARAYAN & Co.,

17-2-18

21, Humam Street, Fort Bombay.

REVOLUTION IN SHORTHAND.

There are systems and systems, but that one is the most "practical" which can be written with a pen or pencil straight away on unruled paper, without thickening, positions, grammalogues, multitudes of rules and exceptions, arbitrary word-signs and contractions, long lists of phrases and various other impediments to speed. The New "ROYAL-SPEED" Course of 12 Lessons, incorporated by Expert who introduced the Original Daployan Joined-Vow Scheme in the East, has all the advantages of a modern down-to-date system, and is acquired by Boys and Girls at 12, in a fraction of time. Quickest Results and Highest Efficiency are Guaranteed. Personal or Postal Tutor Prospective pupils must investigate, as interested parties seem to recommend the only system known to them.

NATIONAL BUSINESS COLLEGE,

1st Floor, Luxmi Bldg., Lamington Road, Bombay.

"EVERYTHING FOR EVERYBODY"

National Standard Portable Typewriter No. 3 (10 lbs.) Rs. 19
Oliver No. 5 (American Rebuilt) S.S. & Tab. Rs. 175; No. 7 " 20
Empire No. 1 (Do.) in good working order " 5
Multikopy Typewriter Carbons, per Box of 100 sheets. " 2
Webster Brand " Ribbons for all machines, Do. " 2
Typewriter Oil (best 1 oz. bot.) or Eberhard Erasers, Do. " 2
Safety Razor, Rivals Gillette, with 6 Gillette Blades (best) " 3
Envelope Making Machine (to make 30,000 per day), New " 3
Cooklin's Self filling Fount Pen (non-leakable) Gold Nib " 3

UNIVERSAL BUSINESS SYNDICATE,

20-4-19. Post Box No. 424, Bombay.

HYPNOTISM

PERSONAL MAGNETISM,
WILL POWER,
NERVE FORCE—

Call what you will—

Is the intangible power that controls human destiny. It is the key to all business and social success. This power is no special gift of any one. It is latent in every one. We help you how to display it. By our system, you can learn in a few days at your own home and not only achieve success yourself, but you can influence the mind, health and actions of others to a remarkable degree.

Write immediately for our free booklet—The Pride of India.

THE LATENT LIGHT CULTURE,
TINNEVELLY, S. INDIA.

Batilwala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 1 each bottle of 100.

Batilwala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 2 each bottle of 100.

Batilwala's Ague Mixture of Fever, Malaria, Influenza etc.

Batilwala's Ague Pills for Malaria, Fever, Influenza etc.

Batilwala's Tonic pills for pale people & nervous breaks down.

Batilwala's Tooth Powder of Preserving Teeth

Batilwala's Ringworm ointment for Ringworm Dhobi Itch etc.

May be had from all dealers in medicines or from
Dr. H. L. Batilwala Sons & Co., Ltd.
No. 12, Worli, 18, Bombay.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESS:—"Doctor Batilwala Dadar"

THE BOMBAY CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK.

HEAD OFFICE:—Apollo Street, St., Bombay.

DIRECTORS:—The Hon. Sir Fazulbhoj Currimbhoy (Chairman), Sir Vithaldas D. Thackersey, the Hon. Mr. Laxmibhai Samaldas, Sir Stanley Reed, the Hon. Mr. C. V. Mehta, the Chief of Ichalkaranji, G. K. Devadhar, Esq., the Hon. Sir P. D. Pattani, the Raja Sahab of Malegaon.

Share Capital (fully paid)Rs. 7,00,000

1 Deposits fixed for one year and shorter or longer periods are accepted. Rates and other particulars may be ascertained from the under signed.

2 The Bank finances only registered Co-operative Societies in the Bombay Presidency on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency.

3. Accounts are audited half-yearly by a special Government Auditor, and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the "Bombay Government Gazettee."

20-6-17. VAIKUNTH L. MERTA, Manager,

Clean
 Wholesome
 Intelligent
 Entertainment
 IS A GREAT STEP
 IN
SOCIAL REFORM.

When deciding on a
PLACE OF AMUSEMENT TWO
 ESTABLISHMENTS

Should at once leap to the mind,

THE EXCELSIOR
 BOMBAY'S PREMIER MODERN THEATRE

AND

THE EMPIRE
 BOMBAY'S MOST PALATIAL
 PICTURE THEATRE

Where Film Plays of Distinction are shown
 Every Week.

A
 Great Cinema Masterpiece
 is shown,

Both theatres are near the Bori Bunder
 and are run by the

EXCELSIOR SYNDICATE.

The Pioneer of Bombay's

AMUSEMENT WORLD.

FURUKAWA & CO.

TOKIO

The Largest Manufacturers
in the East

OF

ELECTRIC BARE COPPER CONDUCTORS,

ELECTRIC UNDERGROUND CABLES,

ELECTRIC INSULATED WIRES,

ELECTRIC ACCESSORIES,

INGOTS, RODS, WIRES,

SHEETS, TUBES,

Etc., Etc.,

All our wires are made in accordance with the standard of the British Cable Makers' Association and are tested and approved by leading firms in India.

SOLE AGENTS IN INDIA AND BURMA.

TATA, SONS & CO.,

BOMBAY & CALCUTTA.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS Ltd.

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.
Narsari Building, Fort, BOMBAY.

Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

11-8-17.

When YOUR EYES

need to be examined by QUALIFIED OCULISTS or by SCIENTIFIC REFRACTIONISTS of 26 year experience, FREE OF CHARGE, you cannot do better than GO TO

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR & CO.

The leading firm of Oculists, Eyesight Specialists, Manufacturing Opticians and suppliers of the patented

"KRYPTOK"

(Invisible one-piece bifocal lens.)

Toric, and all kinds of lenses,—Cylindrical, Spherocylindrical, Prismatic, &c., from pebbles as well as from best quality crown glass.

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR

Eyesight Specialist,

With 26 Years' Practical Experience.

Holds Exceptional Testimonials from H. H. The Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, the Hon'ble Sir Lawrence Jenkins the Hon. Mr. Justice Batty, Mrs. Batty, the Hon. Sir N. S. Chandavarkar, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beaman, the Hon'ble Sir S. L. Bachelor, the Hon'ble Sir John Heaton Mr. H. G. Jell, M. V. O., Col. R. H. Forman, B. A. M. C., P. M. O. Bo. Brigade, Lieut. Col. G. H. Bull, M. D., I. M. S., Lieut-Colonel Peters M. B., I. M. S. and other high personages.

(7) 879, HORNEY ROW,

Opposite the Government Telegraph Office,
Fort, BOMBAY.

62-11-10.

ATTENDING AGENTS ARE INVITED TO OBTAIN THE RATES AND CONDITIONS OF

The Empire of India Life Assurance Company, Limited.

WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.

Head Office || Elphinstone Circle, BOMBAY.

SEE REPORT AND OPINIONS OF THE PRESS AS TO THE REMARKABLE PROGRESS MADE BY THE COMPANY.

ENDOWMENT NON-FORFEITABLE POLICY FOR RS. 3,000.

PAYABLE AT AGE 60 OR AT DEATH, IF PREVIOUS, WITH PROFIT.

If, at any time, the assured under this plan should desire to cease paying any more premiums, he can obtain a paid-up Policy for such a proportion of the original sum assured as the number of premiums paid bears to the number agreed upon. Thus a gentleman who had assured at age 30 for a Policy of Rs. 3,000 payable at age 60 or at Death, if previous, after 5 year payments, would be entitled to a Free paid-up Policy for Rs. 500 free of future payments.

MONTHLY PREMIUM

AT AGE 20, Rs. 6-9-0.

AT AGE 25, RS. 7-8-0.

AT AGE 30, RS. 8-14-0.

AT AGE 35, Rs. 10-18-0.

AT AGE 40, Rs. 12-12-0.

AT AGE 45, Rs. 15-10-0.

32-9-10.

SOME OF THE DISTINCTIVE FEATURES.

- Funds invested in Government Securities and in accordance with the Indian Trusts Act
- Policy holders can appoint their own Directors.
- 90 per cent. of Profits to Participating Policy holders.
- Lapsed policies revived without Medical Certificate.
- Liberal Surrender Values 40 per cent. of the Tabular premium paid.
- Immediate payment of Claims.
- Medical fees and stamps on Policies are payable by the Company.
- The sum assured is PAYABLE IN FULL should death occur even immediately after payment of the first premium.

GUARANTEE INSURANCE.—This Company issues Guaranteed Policies in situation of trust and responsibility. It is specially authorized to guarantee the employes of the Post Office

Proposal Forms and full Particulars may be obtained from any local Agent in India or from

ALLUM, BHARUCHA & CO. Managers.

IN INDIA

EVERY ONE KNOWS.

whom it does concern that we are foremost in supplying the best COSSI SILK SUIT PIECES

suitable for the season. These pieces are strong, fancy and durable, and have been specially manufactured for India's Market. Each piece guaranteed for One Suit Complete.

Price Rs. 10 per piece.

Write to—THE BHARGAVA COMMERCIAL SOCIETY,

2-18.

Benares City.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER. Contract Rates for Advertisements.

Number of Insertions.	1 Inch.		2 Inches.		3 Columns.		4 Columns.		5 Columns.		Page.
	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.
18	11	0	16	0	20	0	30	0	50	0	87	0
28	16	0	25	0	30	0	50	0	87	0	155	0
52	25	0	38	0	50	0	87	0	155	0	300	0

Casual advertisements at Rs. 4 per line for the 1st insertion and Rs. 2 per line of succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

WONDERFUL TONIC AND MOUTH-REFRESHER
JINTAN.

This is a safe and efficient remedy in all kinds of diseases or disturbances of the digestive organs. It is composed entirely of VEGETABLE INGREDIENTS made from the prescription of the following eminent medical men viz—
NORIHIRO MIWA, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy,
ZENJIRO INOUE, M. D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy
 and testified as to its efficacy by
Baron J. MATSUMOTO, M. D., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Army.
T. MITAMURA Esq., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Navy.

As a digestive it is unequalled and will not disturb the functions of the most delicate stomach. Its antiseptic properties render it very efficacious in warding off disease and at the same time it imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath of the user.

By virtue of its aroma, it effectually masks the odour of Tobacco and Alcoholic Spirits.

It acts beneficially on the vocal cords and has found much favour with public speakers, actors, singers and those whose vocation necessitates a severe strain on the throat.

GOOD FOR

Billiousness, Headache, Vertigo, Nausea, Indigestion, Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, etc., etc.

To maintain general health 2 to 3 pills may be taken occasionally, well masticated.

Price—Small Packet Rs. 0-1-0. Middle Packet, with Tin case., Rs. 0-4-0. Large Packet with fancy case., Rs. 1-0-0

Prepared by Messrs. MORISHITA Co., OSAKA, JAPAN.

Sole Agents: Jintan Agency (G. R. Chaubal), Juma Masjid, BOMBAY.

FOR PAINS AND ACHES SPRAINS ETC.
USE:—

AMRUTANJAN.

The magical pain balm extant. Cures all aches & pains
 Costs 8 As. Sold everywhere.

By Appointment to H. E. the Governor Sir George Sydenham Clarke of Bombay.

HARIDAS VALJI,
 (KING OF INDIAN CONFECTIONERS)
 Highest Confectioner, Caterer and Grand Military Contractor.

Proprietor—RATINATH,
 Chitra Bazar & Grant Road,
BOMBAY.

20-4-18.

DENTISTRY.

Extractions Painless;
 Terms Very Moderate;
 Gold Crown, Bar and Bridge Work a Speciality (teeth without plate);
 Latest Successful Treatment for Pyorrhoea (pus in gums).
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

Hours: 8-1-30 & 5-7-30; Daily.
 (Sundays—From 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.)

ADDRESS BULLDOZING, NEW CHANNI ROAD, GINGAON, BOMBAY. } 1-6-19.

K. R. AMAT,
 Surgeon Dentist.

THE INDIAN * SOCIAL * REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY MORNING.

Office—EMPIRE BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD, FORT.

Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

Vol. XXX. BOMBAY—SUNDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1919. No. 14.

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard." WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

The Khilafat Question and the Peace Celebrations. Indian Christians and Constitutional Reform. The Bullit-Lloyd George Controversy. The Bengal Eton, Who is a Sikh. Social Reform in British India.	Legislation Against Commercialized Vice. The Referendum. The National Congress and the Moderates. Dr. Vincent Smith on Indian Constitutional Reform II. Indian Christian View of Constitutional Reform. The Khalifat Question and the Peace Celebration.
--	--

NOTES.

The Khilafat Question and the Peace Celebrations. At some inconvenience, we have managed to find space for a lengthy letter from a valued correspondent criticising the views expressed in an editorial note last week on the proposed abstention of Hindus and Mahomedans from the Peace celebrations next week. Our correspondent has misunderstood our reference to Mr. Gandhi's contempt for tactical advantages. It was meant in appreciation and not certainly in depreciation. Then, as regards our reference to certain Mahomedan leaders as being fully conscious of the position of the British Empire, and as unlikely, therefore, to expect to achieve the impossible, what was meant, it is clear, is that the pleadings of such men are entitled to the greatest consideration at the hands of the Imperial Government. We have supported, and certainly support, the case which they have made out in all earnestness. His Highness the Aga Khan has publicly stated that His Highness the Maharaja of Bikanir, Lord Sinha and Mr. Montagu have pressed the views of Indian Mahomedans as strongly as any Mahomedan representative could have done at the Peace Conference. Mr. Gandhi has also stated that His Excellency the Viceroy is doing his best in the matter. It is the fact that Mr. Lloyd George's most recent reference to the topic was not calculated to conciliate Mahomedan sentiment and called for the protest which it evoked in this country. But statesmen engaged in delicate negotiations have to disarm opposition outside by emphasising partial aspects of their proceedings. Mr. Lloyd George has a Christian public in England to reconcile as well as a Moslem public in India to consider. A statesman in that position has a difficult role, and his words should not be interpreted too literally. In this connection, a significant telegram appeared in the press last week. It is that the King of the Hedjaz, that is, the late Sheriff of Mecca, is participating in a Conference of Moslem Powers to deprecate the dismemberment of the Ottoman Empire. Now, the son and heir of the King of the Hedjaz was quite recently in England, and it is inconceivable that His Majesty's action in this direction has not been the subject of discussion with the British Government. With all respect to Syed Hassan Imam and Mr. Jinnah, and without ignoring the fact that they have recently returned from England, we venture to deprecate their view that the British Government itself is seeking to bring about the breach rather than the fulfilment of the Prince Minister's pledge. However that may be, we still are of opinion that abstention from the Peace Celebrations is hardly the right way of expressing our disappointment. Our correspondent thinks that War is preferable to Peace, because he expects that the present Peace may not last. In our opinion, that is all the more reason why we should join in celebrating this pacific interlude before the world is plunged into the horrors of war again.

Indian Christians and Constitutional Reform. We are glad to print today an exposition of the Indian Christian view of constitutional reform by Mr. K. T. Paul, the eminent Indian Christian who has made a name for his community and his country by his splendid work as the first Indian General Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association in India. We have heard English and American colleagues of Mr. Paul's speak in terms of unstinted admiration of his organizing capacity, of his untiring industry, and of his unerring judgment. The present paper is in the form of a letter addressed to the Indian Christian Association at Nagpur. It deals with the bearing of the several issues involved on the Indian Christian Community, but the broad principles which underlie Mr. Paul's conclusions are quite as applicable to the outlook and position of all Indians towards national problems.

The Bullit-Lloyd George Controversy. The Manchester Guardian furnishes what it calls the key to an understanding of the Bullit disclosures and their repudiation by and on behalf of Mr. Lloyd George. It writes: "In a venerable civilization, well saturated with statecraft, an unofficial negotiator goes forth like a spy in war. Officially, and for purposes of publication, nothing that he does or says, or that is said to him or done through him, is done or said at all. That is just why he is used. The aim, in employing him, is to initiate overtures which, if they fail, can then be as if they never had been, like a solicitor's letter that has 'without prejudice' written on top of it. So the unofficial negotiator may be invaluable in a company of elderly nations all of whom know exactly what they mean by their little diplomatic fictions and verbal devices. But into this accomplished company there may suddenly plunge a boisterous new-born Soviet Government which impolitely puts the text of some unofficial, non-committal document upon its wireless and sends it out like heaven's cherubim in 'Macbeth'."

Horned on the sightless couriers of the air

To blow the horrid deed in every eye.

or "some young American" of Henry James' undertakes an official Mission without suspecting that he must prepare to be denied thrice daily before cock-crow. Then there is indignation and recrimination and shouts of "liar". But really we do not think there is any liar in the business—we mean.

any complete liar; merely a want of precise adjustment between various theories of the demands of veracity in public life." Even so, Lord Curzon who is Foreign Secretary today because, no doubt, he well knows the various theories of the demands of veracity in European diplomacy, professes to be shocked by the prevalence of similar theories in the much older civilization of Asia, playing the Bullit to Li Hung Chang's Lloyd George. In his "Problems of the Far East," he writes: "the dominant note of Asian individuality is, in character, a general indifference to truth and respect for successful wile." Just what Mr. Bullit says of European diplomacy.

The Bengal Eton: About a year or two ago, some wealthy persons in Bengal started an institution in Calcutta on the lines of the English Public School. This institution known as the Hastings High School or the Eton of Bengal, does not seem to be doing well. The school is languishing owing to financial stringency. According to the Associated Press, the British Indian Association has made certain suggestions with a view to induce more boarders to join the school. It has suggested that so far as possible special facilities should be provided for orthodox Hindu and Mahomedan boys so that they may be given the same kind of food as they are accustomed to at home. It is expected that this will attract a larger number of boarders. At present the messing arrangements practically debar a considerable number of Hindu boys whose parents and guardians want them to adhere to their orthodox style of living. Evidently, the organisers of the Bengal Eton thought that sound education cannot be imparted or imbibed on Bengalee food, and that English table manners are a sine qua non of the sound mind in a sound body! This is of a piece with the whole scheme which is inspired purely by a spirit of imitation and not by a discriminating appreciation of the English system. We printed in the last two issues Sir Oliver Lodge's criticism of the English public school. Why can we not think out our Indian problems from their root premises, instead of starting with ready-made solutions from foreign countries? No doubt the latter course is much the easier, but the broad and easy way often leads to perdition. Why should educationists ape politicians in their mania for the line of least resistance?

Who is a Sikh. Mr. Jodh Singh M. A., writes as follows to the Khalsa Advocate, Amritsar, on the proposal to define Sikhs as Keshadharis: "I have read with interest the definition of a Sikh proposed by the Chief Khalsa Dewan. Leaving the part that concerns itself with mere profession, it amounts to this—the man who wears Keshas will be deemed a Sikh. At least this will be the practical application of that definition. Not long ago, at the time of the Anand Marriage Act, the Dewan divided the Sikhs into Sahjdharis and Keshadharis. The word Sahjdharis being used in opposition to Keshadharis, it meant those who did not wear Keshas. On this understanding many Sahjdharis took to Gurmuryada. It will be for the Dewan to imagine in what enviable position they will find themselves by this new definition of Dewan. Can the Dewan give any proof from Sikh history that all the Sikhs before the time of Guru Gobind Singh wore Keshas? I believe that the Guru had Keshas but I want a proof whether the community at large took to this."

Social Reform in British India. The Deccan Ryot concludes a well-informed and closely-reasoned article on Hindu social organisation and the need of reforms in it, with the following true observations: "The net result therefore is that though we are now living in the twentieth century and in a changeful world, the Anglo-Indian courts have thrown us back on an obsolete jurisprudence of pre-historic times. Custom is the only agency whereby that time-worn system can be modified. But custom as defined by our Courts is impossible of formation now. Then the only alternative for reform, reconstruction or reorganisation of society is the Legislature. But here too the prospects are dark. The very fact that the Government is responsible for the governance of the country, makes reform impossible. The main look out of the rulers in India is to leave the people to themselves. That is no doubt a wise policy in a limited sense. But where the question is to facilitate social progress by removing social anomalies, this idea of government is the greatest obstacle in the path of progress. This is where we stand to-day." This is recognised in the Montagu-Chelmsford Report, and we believe that it is intended that the new Legislatures should have a free hand in social legislation. We want a party which, recognising that politics is not a mere game played for the personal aggrandisement or notoriety of individuals, will take full advantage of the new conditions to ameliorate the social and economic features of Indian life.

Legislation Against Commercialized Vice: The following resolution was unanimously adopted by the National Convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of India, meeting in Lucknow, November 6-12, 1919. "That the Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru, Member for the United Provinces upon the Imperial Legislative Council, be requested to prepare a bill, and introduce it to the Imperial Council, praying for additional legislation, which shall be deterrent to Commercialised Vice, wherever practical among all races in India; this being the source of a very wide-spread and devastating disease, which saps the public health and wastes child life. And that the following provisions be incorporated in this bill. First, that the trade of Prostitution be made illegal, equally to the man who buys a woman, either for money or kind, for immoral purpose, and to the woman who sells herself for that purpose. Second, that the man or woman who trades in women or keeps a disorderly house or has vested interests in such brothels shall be penalised." We are glad to learn that Dr. Sapru has consented to draft a Bill and to submit it to the Imperial Legislative Council.

The Referendum. His Highness the Aga Khan broke new ground in his memorandum on Indian constitutional reform submitted to the Joint Parliamentary Committee when he insisted on the referendum as especially suited to Indian conditions. As much is not known about this form of legislation outside some of the States forming the United States, we give here a description of it. The referendum vests the final power to pass or reject a legislative measure on the people. According to the usual form of it, the people of a State, by procuring the signature of a certain percentage of the qualified voters, may compel the submission to a vote of the people of any recently passed Bill. In a few States it is possible for the people themselves to take the initiative and, by securing the signatures of a certain number of voters, petition and compel the legislature to pass a proposed Bill, and then submit it to a vote of the people. In the formulative, initiative, referendum, the people themselves have a Bill formulated which when signed by the requisite member of voters, is filed with the Secretary of State, who has the Bill published and gives notice of an election. If the requisite number of voters endorse the Bill, it becomes the law of the State without the aid of the Legislature. By this means the State of Oregon secured in 1904 a law compelling direct primary nominations and a local option liquor law.

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, DECEMBER 7, 1919.

THE NATIONAL CONGRESS AND THE MODERATES.

It was announced in the first bulletin issued by the Reception Committee of the Indian National Congress to be held in Christmas week at Amritsar, that invitations would be issued to political workers irrespective of party to attend and participate in the proceedings of the forthcoming Congress session. We availed ourselves of the opportunity offered by the announcement to express our earnest wish and hope that the invitation would be cordially responded to in view of the recent events in the Punjab, which have saddened the country from one end to the other. Since then Swami Shraddhananda, the chairman of the Reception Committee, has issued a feeling appeal to all Indians to cooperate to make the Amritsar session of the Congress an unprecedented success. The Hon. Pandit Motilal Nehru, the President-elect, has followed up Swami Shraddhananda's appeal by a personal letter from himself emphasising the Swamiji's exhortation. "It is needless to say," he writes, "that your temporary absence from the Congress has been as great a source of pain and distress to those who have continued to work in the Congress without you as it must have been to you. The Punjab has now built up a common platform of its own dire distress and invites us to meet on it. I venture to think that much can be achieved by mutual and earnest endeavour in the way of coming to a common understanding as regard most of our difference. But should we continue to differ, the Congress will give all a patient and respectful hearing." This appeal is addressed to members of the Liberal or Moderate party. The Pandit enforces his assurance of a patient and respectful hearing by reference to the reception given last year to the Hon. Mr. Srinivasa Sastry's speech by the Congress. In view of this reference, it is interesting to read the announcement in the last issue of the Servant of India that Mr. Sastri sailed for India on the 28th November and that "it is unnecessary to add, in view of the fact he joined the Congress last year, that he and the Servants of India Society generally are strongly in favour of attendance" at the Amritsar Congress. Mr. Sastry is at least as deeply committed to the Reform scheme as any other member of the Liberal or Moderate party and his resolve and that of his Society to attend the next session of that body, will be welcomed by our Punjab friends.

The publication since our last writing on the subject of the main features of the Reform Bill as revised by the Joint Committee, has introduced a new factor in the situation. The Liberals have welcomed it as a striking and acceptable improvement in several respects on the original draft, while the Radicals who control the Congress have varied in their views in regard to it from acquiescence under protest to repudiation without reserve. Our own view coincides with that of the Liberals, and if joining the Congress means repudiation of the Bill, it is obvious that those who welcome the Bill can have no place in it. The Hon. Mr. Chintamani is reported to have said that his answer to the question whether or not he should attend the Congress, would depend on the attitude of the Congress to the Reform Bill. The attitude of the Congress to the Reform Bill cannot be known till that body meets and considers the Bill. Mr. Bonar Law told the House of Commons that His Majesty's Government was anxious to have the Reform Bill placed on the statute-book before Christmas and before the big meeting (evidently, the Congress) to be held in India. If this happens, as it may, the attitude of the Congress will not matter one way or the other so far as the contents of the present measure are concerned. There will be no question, Mr. Tilak has said, of accepting or rejecting the law. The difference then between the Liberals and Radicals will, we suppose, be that while the former will concentrate on working the new constitutional arrangements and making them a success with a view to justify the grant of further responsibilities ten years hence, the Radicals will continue the agitation in India and in England to have the Act expanded so as to admit of the grant of fuller autonomy at once in the Government of the provinces and of the country. The Radical course, we fancy, will be to win as many seats as possible at the first elections, to refuse to take office as Ministers, and to reduce Liberal or Moderate Ministers who may take office to impotence by opposition and obstructive strategy. If the Amritsar session of the National Congress is to be called upon to endorse such a course in view or in anticipation of the passing of Reform Bill, the Liberals can not be a party to it. It is all well to say that they will have a patient and courteous hearing, but unless a minority can, consistently with its convictions, abide by the decision of the majority, it puts itself in a false position by professing to take counsel with the majority. So far as we can judge, the more moderate and, if we may say so, responsible members of the Radical party do not intend to boycott the new constitutional arrangements. But it is not certain how far they control the conduct of their followers, and it is perfectly intelligible that those who hold that the reforms constitute a decisive advance on the existing state of things, should be anxious not to place themselves in a position which may greatly embarrass their future course under the reforms. An authoritative declaration on the part of the recognised Radical leaders as to what their course of action will be when the Bill becomes law, will, perhaps, facilitate an early decision on the part of such Liberals as have not already made up their minds that they shall, under no circumstances, join the National Congress.

For ourselves, politics as politics has few attractions. As we have repeatedly said, we should much like a party with a constructive programme of social reform, including education, public health, and temperance and social purity. Neither the Liberals nor the Radicals are ready with such a programme. Neither of the parties has as yet even seriously thought of it. Judging from their past records, there are more members in the Liberal party who are likely to favour such a programme than among the Radicals. We say this notwithstanding the attitude of Mr. Surendra Nath Banerji and Mr. Srinivasa Sastry towards Women's suffrage, which can only be characterised as reactionary. The Liberal party has no leader who, like Mr. Tilak, rose to prominence by attacking social reform and reformers. On the other hand, it numbers among its leaders, Sir Narayan Chandavarkar, who has been as stout a champion of the removal of social wrong and injustice as Mr. Tilak has been of the orthodoxy which would perpetuate them. Speaking with special reference to Bombay, we may safely say that the Liberal party stands for the education and elevation of women, the abolition of caste, the co-operation between all sects and communities, elimination of race prejudice, and the promotion of cordial relations between East and West by means of increased intellectual, commercial and social intercourse. Although it has no definite social programme at present, it is the natural agency through which social reformers can best hope to frame and give effect to such a programme. No one who knows anything of the history of social reform in this presidency during the last quarter of a century, can be surprised at the social reform party not placing implicit trust in a political organization inspired by Mr. Tilak. Holding as we do that the country has grievously suffered during the last thirty or forty years owing to the imperialistic pre-occupations of our rulers absorbing them to the almost total exclusion of a constructive policy of raising the Indian people in the scale of nations, we are most anxious that the greater freedom and facilities of legislation promised by the reforms should be immediately and fully utilised to make up for lost time. If, as is quite possible, it is found that these reforms do not furnish us all the power and initiative needed to carry forward such a programme, that will be the most impressive ground for demanding that more power and initiative should be opened for Indian Ministers. The establishment of the German Empire was an encouragement and incentive to the propagation of the imperialistic venom in other European countries. The destruction of that Empire, we doubt not, will eventually lead to the final and hopeless discrediting of imperialistic ideas. That is why we hail the end of the war in the victory of the Allies as a good cause for rejoicing in spite of the fact that some of the Allies are themselves deeply infected by the poison which has wrought the ruin of Kaiserdom.

DR. VINCENT SMITH ON INDIAN CONSTITUTIONAL REFORM. II.

(By MR. H. V. NANJUNDAYYA, M. A. M. L., C. I. E.)

Various suggestions from other sources are noticed briefly with running comments. It is urged that a statutory obligation that any particular office should be held by an Indian is equivalent to a discrimination against Europeans, and is opposed to the Charter Act of 1833. This is no doubt a plausible view, and the proposed limitation has, on that account, been avoided in the Bill now before Parliament. But it is curious that such an argument should be employed in this connection, when it is notorious that a provision to have a minimum of Indian members in the Executive Councils has been suggested mainly as a safeguard against their continued exclusion from such responsible positions on the score (real though not avowed) of their birth.

Dr. Vincent Smith enters into a more minute criticism of the principles underlying the proposals, but as apparently there is no chance of the fundamental principles being altered, as the Bill is mainly based on them, there is not much use in examining these views. His caution that there should be no sudden and abrupt breach with the past, must be admitted to be quite sound; but notwithstanding the manner in which the new departures are emphasised in the Report (owing to its having from the beginning assumed mainly a political aspect) it may be questioned whether there is any such abrupt breach, except in two or three instances in which new and untried methods are experimentally introduced. The distinction drawn by him between self-government and responsible government is ingenious, but it may be questioned whether the kind of self-government which is absolutely independent of the internal form of the Government of India, and could be granted if every member of that Government was an Englishman and if the power of the Government were autocratic in the strictest sense, would be worth anything as a gift in the eyes of anybody in India. He is quite right in assuming that the self-government which would be valued in this country implies the Government of India by Indians, so far as may be, and we may add government primarily in the interest of India, and also as the author elsewhere observes, for the good of both countries.

There is a good deal of truth in the remarks about the difficulty of carrying on Government in this country on the Parliamentary system of two parties. But the scheme indicated in the Joint Report and since embodied in the Bill is a tentative one, and at any rate at present, does not require all that Parliamentary Government involves. It may, in course of time, lead to something more suited to the condition of India as a self-governing unit included in the British Commonwealth. Surely there must be some other ways of making a Government responsible to the people than the mode in vogue in England. That some such system should be evolved in the near future is inevitable, as it is too much to expect that the demands can now be silenced for long with the sort of responsible government which in the author's opinion India really needs and deserves, 'as connoting a government sensitive to public opinion expressed through elective assemblies and other channels.' The assertion that the Government of India is likely to feel its responsibility to Indian public opinion too much rather than too little at the present time, has not been exemplified in certain recent instances in which that opinion was strongly expressed.

The appointment of periodical Commissions is disapproved, as they will tend to weaken and harass the executive and encourage factious agitation and intrigue. But it is difficult to see how the parliamentary supervision which admittedly is not well carried out, at present, can be better secured, especially when more autonomy is granted to the Indian Governments. The author says that increase of autonomy is held to be necessary by all parties, but he forgets that Indian opinion is decidedly opposed to reducing the parliamentary control over the Indian and Provincial Governments, except in proportion to the increase of the responsibility of the latter to popular Indian control. He is opposed to the creation of a Council of State, which he considers to be a cumbrous Indian device. In this he seems to be in agreement with the prevailing Indian opinion. His somewhat too sure conclusion that Home Rule in the sense of Government by a pure majority, which in India would mean a pure Hindu rule, cannot be, is deduced from what he fancies the conduct of such a majority would be in two selected instances. On the question of economy versus progress, he thinks that the prevailing policy will be for the former to the detriment of the latter; and on the question of cow-killing, that the Hindus would all combine to prohibit it and would provoke the fierce and violent resistance of the powerful Mussalman minority. Yet he might have seen from the way these matters are managed in the more advanced of the Indian States, that they will not be afraid of spending money where efficiency and progress are considered necessary, and that difficulties about such questions as cow-killing rarely occur there. The same persons who are very loud in their cry for economy when they are out of office and void of responsibility often become advocates of 'efficiency' and expenditure when in office themselves, and will invariably require to be kept in check by hostile critics.

The author, not satisfied with the 'futile' task of mere analytical or destructive criticism has supplemented it with his own 'constructive suggestions of a practicable character.' Of the suggestions by other people that he has noticed, he has warmly expounded the proposal of a Royal Viceroy at the head of the Government, and suggests in an indefinite way that the positions of the Viceroy and the Governor-General, which involve distinct duties should receive formal and public recognition and be regarded as forming an essential element in the revised construction. It is difficult to see that either of these proposals will be attended with any important consequences either good or bad in the efficiency of Government or constitutional progress. A Royal Viceroy may perhaps be able to exert more personal influence than an official one on the rulers of Indian States and important persons in British India who are aspiring to titles and honours, but that doubtful advantage is also likely to disappear in course of time.

Every one will agree that the heart of India is passionately set on self-expression as a nation but it is very much like bathos to suggest that this legitimate sentiment will be satisfied by designing a separate flag or exhibiting an empty throne. The time is long past when Indians could be satisfied by being given such ornamental adjuncts without a more substantial share of real power.

One of the least satisfactory features of the Joint Report is the manner in which the interests of the people of Indian States is ignored almost completely. In one of the subsequent despatches, the Government of India has laid down that the subjects of Indian States are practically foreigners in British India. Though the author does not devote much attention to the subject, he makes some sound and sensible remarks. Although no scheme of constitutional reform for British India can be directly applied to the States, nevertheless, as he says, it concerns them in its operation; and in his opinion, the time has come when the affairs of the Protected States should no longer be considered as those of foreign territory. Though the idea of a great South Asiatic Federation, as put forward by His Highness the Aga Khan, may be visionary, (and we do not see much gain to India by its realisation), a closer federation of British Indian Provinces and the Indian States is very desirable and indeed inevitable.

The questions concerning the Civil Service of India are given a far more prominent share of attention than matters touching the interests of the Indian people more directly, showing that the author has not cast off the (perhaps natural) bias contracted during his active service in this country. We have already noticed the curious way in which he invokes the aid of the Charter of 1833, as if the Parliament were incapable of altering a statutory provision made with the intention of removing undue discrimination against born Indians, when long experience has proved that a mere negative provision like that is quite insufficient to achieve the object. The question of the separation of judicial from executive functions is discussed in an inconclusive manner, mainly in relation to its effect on this much belauded body of public servants, and the author can see no solution of what he takes to be an impasse except in a thorough investigation by yet another authoritative Committee in England. He suggests, following Mr.

Archer, that a special College, something like the Old Haileybury, should be established for training the Civil servants, but as he anticipates, the idea is not one that would find any enthusiastic support in the present day.

Certain suggestions for the creation of new offices, such as an additional Secretary for the affairs of Indian States, may perhaps improve despatch of business. The only suggestions that are likely to serve the purpose of giving a larger share of power and responsibility to the people of the country and are therefore likely to interest Indian public opinion are that the Legislative Council should be enlarged and should consist mainly of elected members, that the official majority should be abandoned, and that official members should not vote at all. The author goes further and advocates that the differences between the Executive Council and the Assembly should be referred to the Secretary of State or to a Board of Arbitration in England, and that a Council of State or Senate is not wanted. These are important concessions and go much farther than one would expect from the general trend of the author's opinion; but they are apparently meant to be modified by his reservation that the Government of India must retain extensive autocratic powers.

INDIAN CHRISTIAN VIEW OF CONSTITUTIONAL REFORM.

(By Mr. K. T. PAUL, B. A.)

The Indian Christian Association of Madras cabled me and Lord Selborne asking that I give evidence on their behalf before the Parliamentary Committee. The All-India Christian Association cabled me and Mr. Montagu about the same time for the same purpose. Instructions were sent by mail and arrived after my evidence was called for, but brief indications had been included in the cables and were very helpful. In the main, however, I was thrown on my own resources; which meant considerable responsibility, seeing that there are so many schools of thought in our community differing with the Provinces, and sometimes in the same Province.

A further complication had happened. Mr. Chowryappa had already given evidence in the name of our community and had traversed the whole ground of the Bill and the Joint Scheme. Dr. Bhabha, the President of the Indian Christian Association of Britain, had offered to give evidence, and, as he had not been in India for forty years and for other reasons, it was impossible to join up with him. It was important to avoid, as far as possible, the false impression that there are any rival camps among us, and yet one could not do otherwise than state his convictions. I therefore selected just a few live issues bearing specially on our community and stating my views on them to the Parliamentary Committee and re-inforcing the views by further elucidation privately to three of the members of that Committee.

In the first place, I dealt with the general question of Communal Representation. My line was determined fortunately by the preamble to the Memorandum presented by our All-India Council on the Montagu-Chelmsford Report. As Christians and as children of India, drawn from all classes and communities, from all languages and provinces, we stand for Unity; our working aim is one United India, our privilege and opportunity are to stand between clashing communities, to act as mutual interpreters, to serve them all alike, alike, and we trust to take our share in leading them all to the common goal of us all—the advancement of our common country. While this is true, it is undeniable, and, in fact, well-known to the whole world even as clearly as noontide Sun, that India is sharply divided into clashing communities and that those of them who are in possession of power and influence are not above exploiting their vantage to the profit of their own group. The point before the Parliamentary Committee, however, was whether this communal rivalry amounted to such a serious evil as to make it unsafe to confer a substantial measure of Responsible Government on India. There were those on the Committee and in influence outside who were watching for any and every evidence to reinforce their opposition to the Declaration of August 20th and to whittle down the Bill. This was very clear to my mind. My own personal experience in the District Board and the Municipality of Salem, and generally in South India, thoroughly warranted my stating that communal rivalry, while real and acute during a stage of social evolution, does not amount to a democratic disability. I cited facts from my own experience with names and narratives such as are known to the public and can be verified by enquiry.

I certainly appealed for Communal Representation as an interim measure, for there is no practical alternative. But in the method of arranging for it, our high principle of eventual unity rules out compartmental voting, and therefore I asked without hesitation for the method of reserving seats for our community in all 'plural constituencies.'

The actual numbers indicated in the cables I urged for, and followed up the request in conference and correspondence.

Female suffrage was another live issue among our circles in London. A deputation had waited on the Secretary of State. Several witnesses had stated their views strongly on the subject. The Committee was clearly undecided either way, and I understood was seeking further light. The attitude of our community could be only one way. Our ladies stand first in literacy, are doing a real National service in Education, and are rapidly coming to hold a social position equal to men. I pointed out that in India the family is the unit, and that when the legal head of the family is a lady she could not be denied the vote; and that wherever income or education is the qualification it will be unjust to refuse the franchise to woman, for then it will be merely on the score of sex.

The question of the transfer of Education was another subject dealt with. The Madras Association evidently wants to reserve Elementary Education. Madras Missionaries want to reserve Higher Education. Neither the All-India Council nor the National Missionary Council had spoken. On this all-important subject I conferred with Dr. Miller, Mr. Oldham, and certain other Missionary leaders. The conviction with which I went from India were strongly confirmed by all that I heard for and against the subject. My only course was to present my personal views, making it explicitly clear that I was not committing our community either way.

Education is the most centrally formative factor in National progress. Our progress, as I conceive it, should be normal, that is, relating to the past and reaching on to the future, freely assimilating the best that the West can contribute. This line cannot be taken in an effective way until the guidance of Education is under Indians who are subjected to the public opinion of their countrymen. Moreover, the problem of Education in British India is what pertains to some 300 million people. The very numbers imply that it cannot begin to be really accomplished until the responsibility is directly related to the conscience of the people themselves. All that I had studied and observed among the Negroes of the United States of America emphasised this point to my mind. I was, and am, most clear in the conviction that the responsibility for Education should be saddled on us from the very day that any responsibility is transferred and any constructive policy drafted by our leaders involving finances and man-power. Educational responsibility will, I am sure, prove to be the most educative of our responsibilities.

The fear of the Madras Association is communal injustice. I admit its existence and possibility of continuance. But it arises not from those who guide the general policy of Education but from and because of some of its administrators. Whoever comes to hold the helm, the administrative personnel will be unaffected. I do not then see that the reserving of Education will improve the present situation or its transfer make it worse. The real remedy lies in publicity. Whenever an injustice is done, whether in detail or in a general measure, the facts should be immediately and fully brought before the authorities and what is much more effective, before the public. It will be quickly realised in the future that the crushing enemy of darkness is light.

The fear of the Madras Missionaries evidently is that Higher Education may suffer in standard. I am not convinced that Higher Education has had the best standard always under the present arrangement. I admit the existence of the particular factor which may call for a lowering of standards. The remedy however, is not in reserving the subject under the present regime. It is 'departmentalism' that persists in rendering Education wooden every time something happens to put life into it. No matter who holds the helm, the same thing is bound to happen.

I have therefore advocated that Education be transferred in its entirety so far as administration goes, but that the shaping of its content and colour be left under the effective control of a Board on which there should be both experts competent to speak with actual experience, and representatives of the general public opinion in the country. I don't mind indicating that such a procedure, if adopted, would really be the beginning of the transfer of an Imperial Portfolio, that on Education.

That terminates my evidence and its 'apologia'. I may be permitted to make one or two suggestions of possible use to our community. The time has fully come for us to dismiss from our minds the idea of a special protection from the Government. Whatever justification there was for such a feeling in the past, it is no longer tenable in practical politics. The whole country is entering on a career of democracy. Our place is right in the midst of it. Our destinies are within, and not in any sense, without.

We have always gone on the assumption that true democracy is of the Spirit of our Lord. In the judgement of posterity it will stand as a perplexing question why then the only Indian community which was open to the direct dominance of the Spirit of Christ made practically no contribution to the arrival in India of a form of democratic polity. The hour of retrieval is, however, not yet past. The form of democratic polity is not democracy. In fact, it is doubtful if Christian democracy has yet found full development in any part of the world. Our responsibility then is to take a direct share in the growth of true democracy and on as extensive a scale as we possibly can.

Our greatest contribution will probably be at the District and the Municipal end rather than at the Provincial. It is simply imperative that our men all over the country enter the arena and face its temptations and trials. For a long while Leadership may in most cases be in other hands. But no leadership is worthy which has not been disciplined in loyalty. In fact, our rightful place is ever service and not rule. Let us take our places just what they might be and it is as certain as a physical law that welcome and recognition awaits us in the ratio of the quality of our service.

High purpose is, however, not enough for recognition or for successful work. Hard study is the first necessity. Political work was hitherto on the plane, so to say, of the platform. It could not have been much more when there was not real responsibility to shoulder. The situation is now changed. The sphere is changed from the ideal to the actual. The date of every local situation should be studied with care, actual results of schemes in other areas in India and elsewhere scrutinised, resources of finance and man-power cast up in a business-like fashion, before conclusions can be drawn such as will be acceptable to the public to whom we are responsible.

High principle is not enough, but without it there is nothing enough for Christian democracy. In fact, the distinctive challenge to us is just there. All can study, and plan, and carry constituencies and councils. All cannot stand uncompromisingly to high principle. All cannot keep it to the end. All do not, even in the so called Christian countries. Here in our land we shall, to that extent, have contributed really toward the construction of true democracy as we shall have stood without compromise in the stress of failure and in the strain of success.

Further particulars and details this is not the occasion to suggest. The point I wish to urge is that henceforth no educated Indian Christian should avoid the responsibility of citizenship except for really adequate reasons satisfactory to conscience. There cannot have been a more interesting or more important ten years in the history of India than what is before us in the second decade of this Century. Our opportunity therein is a glorious responsibility. I am confident that there is that quality of faith and patriotism in our men and women which will yet bring us out to a worthy response.

THE KHALIFAT QUESTION AND THE PEACE CELEBRATION.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

In your editorial note on the above subject, in your issue of November 30th, you suggest that the anti-Peace Celebrationists led by Mr. Gandhi have allowed themselves "to be led away by mere sentiments" and arrive at the conclusion that "our countrymen" should participate in the forthcoming Peace Celebrations, while strongly pressing their views regarding the Khalifat on the Government. If only the premises, on which you have based your conclusion, correctly represent the factors of the Khalifat problem, I think everyone would agree that there can be no fairer and reasonable course than that which you indicate. But unfortunately, the situation is not as easy as you would have it. And in attempting to set before you the situation as I understand it and as those do, who consider it a duty to abstain from the Peace Celebrations, in connection with the Khalifat question, I shall not burke facing the facts. For, I believe, that our politics owe their present degenerate features, into the details of which I need not here enter, to our having enshrined "tactics" so-called at the cost of Truth. The less our "leaders" allow themselves to be awayed by "tactical considerations" the sooner India will be able to have a clean, healthy and national political life, wherein personalities do not loom large, as they now do and the public weal is the only motive of action. I need hardly, therefore, say that I do not think there is much room for regret that Mr. Gandhi has said that the Panjab grievances are not legitimate grounds for abstention from the Peace Celebrations, as it is after all a domestic and not an Imperial question, and if Indians are not able to get justice done to the suffering Panjab, it will be their own fault and within their own hands to set matters right.

But such is not the case with the Khalifat question. It is an Imperial question, directly arising out of the peace operations and from the standpoint, of Indian Moslems, they would much rather prefer "the continuance of the war" to a dishonourable settlement of the Turkish question. If it were a sacred duty to have shed human blood like water to assert the sanctity of the "scrap of paper" containing the treaty of Germany with Belgium, why should it not be equally incumbent on Great Britain to redeem her pledged word to the Indian Mussalmans, through the Premier and the Viceroy of India. If you would therefore force the issue to its logical conclusion I would say, that unless you prove that the Khalifat question as propounded by the Moslems in India is fundamentally wrong and contrary to dictaten of Right and Justice, war is preferable to an ignoble peace. And let them say what they would, certainly another world war is bound to be the culmination of the policy of mutual exploitation which is still swaying the counsels of the "mighty" Empires that have come out successful in the war. Is there any peace in any of the allied countries and would "the man in the street" in any of the allied nations acknowledge that Peace has really come? Leaving these generalisations, I put it to you, Sir, as to what is the duty of British statesmen from the Premier downwards towards the Indian Moslems, to whom they held out hopes of the maintenance of the integrity of the Ottoman Empire. Is it not their duty to honestly strive to fulfil their pledge to the Indian Moslems, their compatriots in theory at least, and who took no little part in the conquest of the German territory?

Great Britain is one of the big four at the Peace Conference and when Italy was prepared to go to the extent of refusing to sign the Peace Treaty with Germany because her demands as regards Fiume have not been met, does not Great Britain owe as much to the Indian Moslems? Even granting that owing to need of expediency in international politics, Great Britain does not want to go to such an extent herself, as India is an original member of the League of Nations, will the Government of India and the Secretary of State whom you describe as being "genuinely" anxious to bring about a satisfactory solution of the Turkish question, hold out a promise to the citizens of India with whom they are in agreement over the Khalifat question, that in the event of a non-satisfactory solution of the Turkish question being forced at the Peace conference, they will instruct the Indian delegates at the Peace Conference not to sign the Peace Treaty with Turkey, as a protest? I wait for an answer and I suppose, it will be in vain.

In more or less unambiguous language, I put it that the necessity for Indians to abstain from the Peace Celebrations as a protest against the proposed dismemberment of Turkey arises from the fact that the time has passed when it would have been sufficient only to press our views on the Government. I also put it that the British statesmen are themselves planning to break their solemn pledge about the maintenance of the integrity of the Ottoman Empire. I fervently wish I am mistaken and shall feel highly relieved to be flatly contradicted. And such a contradiction has become absolutely necessary. I am out and out an optimist and therefore pessimism is not the cause of my painting the dark side of the situation confronting the Indian Moslems in regard to the Khalifat question. I tremble to think of what would be the unprecedented nature of the Khalifat agitation when the ever-dreaded dismemberment of Turkey does take place. Statesmanship seems to be bankrupt not only in Great Britain but in Europe also and as I remember the intensely passionate religious side of the average Mussalman, I cannot without misgivings comprehend fully the far-reaching effects a mishandling of the Turkish question is bound to have.

The cat was let out of the bag when a speaker at the Khalifat Conference at Delhi said that men who recently returned from England said the English people told them that the Indian Moslem should show by action, his intense regard for the Khalifat than by mere speeches. Action is the crucial test the British people apply and action has become necessary.

And even taking the narrowest view of the matter, no one can say, as some interested Anglo-Indian critics are saying, that the anti-Peace Celebration movement is either anti-Governmental or disloyal. Friendship and sincerity are tested in times of adversity and at a time when the circumstances were adverse in the war-fronts and the clarion call for India's help in the war came, as Englishmen with whom I have talked over the matter would put it, "India played the game" and she neither talked of charter or guarantees of Britain's good faith. And certainly if at the time of plenty and prosperity which Peace may be bringing England, India feels unable to participate and rejoice it cannot certainly be called either ungrateful or stultifying herself. Nor can it be said that India is not grateful that the war, rather the killing part of it, is at an end, for all-India joined splendidly in the celebration of the Armistice day.

Before concluding I would draw attention to the following statement in your editorial note which I have ventured to dispute in so many words. It runs: "Men like His Highness the Aga Khan, the Right Hon'ble Ameer Ali, Mr. Jinnah, Syed Hassan Imam, Sir Fazulbhoj Currimbhoy and others are fully conscious of the position of the British Empire and do not expect it to achieve the impossible." By this, you would have us infer that these leaders of Islamic thought recognise and acknowledge the sincere efforts of Great Britain to redeem her pledged word to the Moslems. Of the leaders you mention, only Mr. Jinnah, Mr. Syed Hassan Imam and Sir Fazul Currimbhoy are in India, who can be conveniently got into touch with and asked for an expression of their opinion and the confirmation or contradiction of your statement. Of the above three gentlemen, Mr. Jinnah and Mr. Syed Hassan Imam have expressed their views on the question publicly. This is what Mr. Jinnah said to a press representative so late as the 16th November: "Speaking of the Khalifat question, Mr. Jinnah said he was afraid the fate of Turkey was almost sealed. In spite of the solemn pledge given by the Premier in January 1918 about the maintenance of the integrity of the Turkish Empire, the British policy was persistently directed towards the breach of that pledge rather than its fulfilment. Indian Mussalmans had shed their blood no less readily than any other community and this policy towards the Mussalman races was bound to end in very great disaster unless changed. He did not believe," said Mr. Jinnah, "in the anxiety of England and her allies to apply the principle of self-determination and independence to the Arabs." Mr. Jinnah is a typical politician in that he is not averse to being a "tactician" which, in modern political phraseology is termed as "diplomacy" and if a diplomatic politician as Mr. Jinnah says as much and follows it with a support of the anti-Peace Celebration movement, I think it is a sign to the authorities, how much they are estranging Indian opinion. Mr. Syed Hassan Imam in a statement to a press representative as late as 27th November said:—

"The value of these reforms (Indian Reforms) may be underestimated at the present moment by reason of the existing unsympathetic rule as evidenced by the Punjab incident and the unjust policy of exploitation of non-Christian people as evidenced by the attitude of Great Britain towards the Islamic countries. There is no doubt that our faith in the honesty of the British Cabinet has been greatly shaken by the first Minister of the Crown having belied by his present conduct and attitude all his previous professions of goodwill towards Turkey and the question of the Khalifat. The feeling of mistrust that is growing in India is due to many circumstances and not the least among the contributory causes is the attitude of Mr. Lloyd George towards the Ottoman Empire, and the expulsion of the Turks from Europe may afford to the fanatics of Europe the satisfaction that the Moslem is no more on the European soil. But I have no doubt if such an event takes place the Moslem population living within the British Empire will retain in bitter memory this British act of injustice."

Both these gentlemen on whom you relied and whose latest utterances I have taken the liberty of quoting are, I believe, the latest arrivals of Moslem leaders from England and their statements are therefore more firsthand than those of others. Even now it is not too late for the authorities to win back the confidence of the Indian people who are by nature a trusting people by renewing their solemn pledges on the subject and by consenting to postpone the Peace Celebrations to a later date till the Turkish question is satisfactorily solved. What I object to and what I warn the Government against is following a dubious policy of saying one thing and doing another under cover of diplomacy. It is secret diplomacy that has been greatly responsible for the world devastating war and it is that which still prevents any prospects of a real peace. If the Imperial Government do want to assist at the dismemberment of Turkey there is nothing like facing the fact and telling the Indian Moslems so, directly, without any manoeuvre. It will then be more possible than ever to allay the surely inevitable discontent consequent upon such a policy. But an honest and open policy is ever better especially in dealing with Indians and all I urge for is a candid and honest policy on the part of the Government. If the Government really wish to redeem their plighted word let them show it by some tangible action of any kind. As you remark elsewhere "an ounce of practice is worth a ton of precept" and this certainly applies to Government as it does to the people.

I have allowed many an ill-informed and venomous criticisms on this subject go unchallenged. My motive in replying to your certainly well-intentioned criticism at this length is that I hold you in sincere respect as one of the few independent and sturdy journalists India has the honour to possess, with whom conscience and principles are the chief guiding factor. So I am anxious that you should reconsider your attitude of the question in light of the facts adduced and once again formulate your views on the subject.

ADVERTISEMENTS

"PEEPS INTO THE FUTURE"

Is everybody's everyday book. The codified experience of generations of Astrologers and Indian Yogis—an astrologer in moments of anxiety & suspense—answers short and succinctly clear on the thousand and one points of doubt and uncertainty. Everybody may consult the book—no date of birth or horoscope necessary. Must be in every pocket for it suits all. Price one rupee only. Foreign two shillings. Apply to the Proprietor

TATA MYSTIC ASTRAL STUDIO
24.8-19- Chodavaram, Vizagapatam District.

"MESMERISM AND HYPNOTISM."

Complete Course Rs. 1-8 only. Contents. 1. Instructions. 2. Breathing Exercise or Yoga Practice. 3. Exercises to develop this will and memory. 4. Various Hypnotic processes. 5. To wake up a subject. 6. Clairvoyance. 7. Telepathy. 8. Levitation. 9. Wonderful methods of Hindu Healing. 10. Various diseases. 11. Hindu Catalepsy or Burial alive. 12. The secret method of telling future events most wonderfully by the Indian Yogees without horoscope or birth time. Mr. Ratikantha Bhowmik, Head Master writes from Senhatix on 22-10-19:—I have become successful hypnotist with the help of your course. The methods are far easier and simpler than in any other courses. Mr. B. Sitaramurty, B.A., B.L., Government pleader writes: Your book really reveals the wonderful hidden powers of man. The methods are of the easiest kind and the book in short is the best of its kind in the field.

THE EASTERN HYPNOTIC HOME,
P. O. Chodavaram, (Vizagapatam, Dt.)

"Wanted:—Employment, as teacher or governess, by an educated Brahman widow with midwifery training and medical practice, well-versed in music and the Vina; proficient in English, Sanskrit, Telugu and Canarese, and speaking Tamil and Hindustani. Please apply to K. R. C/o. The Indian Social Reformer, Bombay." 21-9-19.

THE TATA INDUSTRIAL BANK, LD.

HEAD OFFICE, BOMBAY.

BRANCHES—CALCUTTA and HYDERABAD (Deccan)
CANNING and LUCKNOW.

Sub-Branches.—

Bombay—Share Bazaar, Shroff Bazaar.

Calcutta—Barr Bazaar.

London Agents. LLOYDS BANK LIMITED.

NEW YORK AGENTS: THE GUARANTY
TRUST COY. OF NEW YORK.

AUTHORISED CAPITAL... Rs. 12,00,00,000.

SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL... „ 7,56,00,225.

PAID UP CAPITAL... „ 1,50,99,225.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS,

Sir D. J. Tata, Kt., Chairman.

Sir Sassoon David, Bart.

Sir R. N. Mookerjee, K. G. I. E.

Sir Francis Stewart, Kt.

Sir Henry Procter, Kt.

R. D. Tata, Esq.

F. E. Dinshaw, Esq.

F. O. Rimington, Esq.

Narottam Morarjee, Esq.

Hajee Gulam Mahomed Ajam, Esq.

The Hon'ble Mr. Parshottamdas Thakordas. C. I. E.

A. J. Bilimoria, Esq.

Secretary, R. H. Parker.

Current Accounts opened and interest allowed on daily credit balances from Rs. 500/- to Rs. 1,00,000/- at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum. If the balance to the credit of any account does not fall below Rs. 25,000/- at any time between 1st January and 30th June, interest will be allowed during that period at 2½ % per annum. No interest is allowed unless the sum accrued amounts to Rs. 8/- Half-yearly.

Fixed Deposits. Interest allowed on Deposits fixed for one or two years and for shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank. Interest allowed on Savings Bank Accounts at 4 per cent per annum. Rules may be obtained on application.

Loans and Cash Credits are granted on approved securities.

Purchases and sales of Securities and shares effected.

Bills of Exchange purchased and collected and every description of Banking and exchange business undertaken.

14-4-18. L. D. L. BUCKLEY, General Manager.

THE YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK, LIMITED.(Registered in Japan.)
Established 1880.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 48,000,000.

Paid up Capital.....Yen. 48,000,000.

Reserve Fund.....Yen. 28,100,000.

Head Office:—Yokohama.

Branches and Agencies at Bombay, Buenos Aires, Calcutta, Changchun, Chi-Nan, Dairen, Fengtien, Hankow, Harbin, Hongkong, Honolulu, Kaiyuan, Kobe, London, Los Angeles, Lyons, Manila, Nagasaki, Newchwang, New York, Osaka, Peking, Rangoon, San Francisco, Seattle, Shanghai, Shimonoseki, Singapore, Soerabaya, Sydney, Tientsin, Tokio, Tsingtao.

Current Deposit Accounts are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at the rate of 2 per cent per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 100,000, provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of banking and exchange business transacted.

N. IGABASHI

Post Box No. 207, Hornby Road, Bombay.

I. NISHIMAKI.

Manager, Calcutta.

1-12-17.

Post Box No. 406, Clive street, Calcutta

THE BANK OF BARODA, LD.

Under the Patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja Guakwar.

Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1887

HEAD OFFICE BARODA.

Branches—Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, and Surat

Capital Subscribed... ..Rs. 60,00,000.

Capital Paid up „ 20,00,000.

Reserve Fund „ 12,50,000.

DIRECTORS :

The Hon'ble Mr. Lallubhai Somaldas, C. I. E., Chairman
Sir Vithaldas Damodar Thackersey, Kt.Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti Nagar Sheth,
Baroda.

Sheth Manilal Revadas, Vednagar.

Rao Bahadur Gunajirao R. Nimbalkar, Sur Subba, Baroda
State.Bhaaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., Advocate, High Court,
Bombay.M. H. Kantavalla, Esq., Agent, Maharaja Mill Co., Ld.
Baroda..

R. R. Shirgaokar, Naib Subba, Baroda State.

A. N. Datar, Accountant General, Baroda State.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balances from Rs. 500 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest which does not come to Rs. 8 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the sale custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application. C. E. HANDLE,—General
15-4-18. Manager.

THE CENTRAL BANK OF INDIA, LTD

Subscribed Capital... ..Rs. 50,00,000

Paid Up Capital „ 49,59,900

Reserved liability of

Shareholders „ 25,00,000

Reserve Fund „ 6,00,000

Head Office:—Alice Building, Bombay.

Local Branches:—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri
Bazar, (3) Share Bazar.Branches:—Amritsar, Calcutta, Delhi, Jharia, Karachi.London Agents:—London Joint City and
Midland Bank, Ld.

Current Accounts—3 % allowed on Daily
Balances from January to June
2½ % allowed on Daily
Balances from
July to December.

12 months Deposits received at 5 % per annum.

Long and Short period Deposits received at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking Business transacted.

For farther particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCKHANAWALA,

Manager.

25-2-17

THE BANK OF TAIWAN, LTD.

Incorporated by Special Charter of the Imperial Japanese Government, 1899.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 60,000,000
Paid-up CapitalYen. 37,500,000
Reserve FundYen. 7,030,000

Head Office:—Taipeh, Formosa.

BRANCHES:—

ONDON	SHANGHAI	TOKIO
NEW YORK	HONGKONG	OSAKA
COY	SINGAPORE	KOBE
ANTON	SOERABAIA	YOKOHAMA
MOOHOW	SEMARANG	AKO
ANKOW	MAKUNG	GIBAN
UKIANG	BATAVIA	KAGI
WATOW	PINAN	KARENKO
MINAN	SHINOHIKU	KEELUNG
AKOW	TAICHU	TAMSUI

The Bank has also a large number of Correspondents at home and Abroad.

Current Deposit Accounts—are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at 2 per cent. per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 1,00,000 provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of Banking and Exchange business transacted.

K. TAKEMURA,

Manager

12-17.

56, Esplanade Road, Fort, BOMBAY

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

Established 7th September 1906.

Incorporated under the Indian Companies' Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE:

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.

Capital Subscribed Rs. 1,00,00,000

Capital Called up „ 50,00,000

Reserve Fund „ 15,00,000

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 500 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½% p. a. throughout the year. On balances exceeding Rs. 1,00,000 interest is allowed by special arrangement. No interest will be allowed which does not amount to Rs. 5 per half year.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for shorter periods @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, & CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged on approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stocks at moderate prices, particulars of which may be had on application.

H. P. STRINGFELLOW,

11-11.

Manager.

A Lady's Best Ornament is a Glorious Head of Hair.

A profusion of rich, soft silky, lustrous, wavy hair—where's the woman who would not like that?

There's only one oil that makes such hair and it's the far-famed

KAMINIA OIL
(Regd.)

Invaluable for ladies, and just as much for Brain-Workers and Students.

Heated head cooled, aching disappears and dandruff becomes a thing of the past. Added to all these it possesses a beautiful fragrant smell.

For superiority, awarded a Gold Medal at the Mysore Exhibition, and in great demand all over the country.

If you have not yet used KAMINIA OIL, you

have missed a fine delight and a real boon; use it now, if only once; and like many people you will prefer to use also always.

Price per bottle, Re. 1. V. P. Charges 6 annas extra

Price for 3 bottles Rs. 2-10. V. P. charges 14 annas extra

Write now, Do not delay.

Sole Agents:—

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,
(5-8-16) No. 155, Jumma Masjid Market, BOMBAY.

Now-a-Days.

All things have advanced in price. Even the vegetable ingredients used in our Atank Nigrah Pills have advanced in price.

Even the labourers demand heavy wages being dearer. Even the users have increased yet the Atank Nigrah Pills for Toning up the system are sold at before war price i. e. at a Rupee.

Valdya Shastri

Manishanker Govindji,

Atank Nigrah Pharmacy,

Head Office:—Jamnagar—Kathiawar.

Branch:—Kalbadevi Road, Bombay.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours. Publish Fine Art Pictures, & c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.

1-12-10. HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS-

ROYAL TONIC PILLS

Powerful Nutritious and Strength Restorer. Price Re. 1-4 per tin of 30 Pills.

PREPARED BY—GOVINDJEE DAMODER & Co.,

Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Commission Agents.

1-12-10.

No. 3 Sutar Chawl Market, BOMBAY.

Timely advice to the Wealthy

Costly but certain remedies are in the long run cheaper than cheap and uncertain ones.

KANDARPA SANJIVINI PILLS AND OIL

are the safest and surest remedies for indigestion, constipation, loss of appetite, memory, mental, physical and nervous debility and all sorts of urinary disorders, improve impoverished blood.

Price per tin of 40 Pills Rs. 5 & per tola of Oil Rs. 10.

Both Purchased at a time Rs. 11/4—

Medical Advice and a Medical Book containing 128 pages sent Gratis and Post-Free.

RAJ VAIDYA NARAYANJI KESHAVJI

Head Office:—Jamnagar, Kathiawar, (India.)

Branch:—No. 187, Kalbadevi Road,
24-8-1919. BOMBAY.

Empire Hindu Hotel

Opposite Victoria Terminus
Bombay.

(Central Situation)
Strictly Vegetarian
Charges Moderate

Fitted with
Electric Lift, Fans and Lights.

TELEGRAMS: } TELEPHONE

"FOOD," BOMBAY. } 2789.

22-8-19.

Saffron? Saffron?? Saffron???

If you wish to buy genuinely pure and best Saffron it is
SUN

BRAND  SAFFRON

ONLY

It has been largely used by Jain Temples, Maharajas, Durbars, Hakims and Vaidyas all over the country for the last 75 years and is well known for its purity and genuineness.

S. NABHEN & Co.,

17-2-18

21, Humnum Street, Fort Bombay.

REVOLUTION IN SHORTHAND.

There are systems and systems, but that one is the most "practical" which can be written with a pen or pencil, straight away on unruled paper, without thickening, positions, grammalogues, multitudes of rules and exceptions, arbitrary word-signs and contractions, long lists of phrases, and various other impediments to speed. The New "ROYAL-SPEED" Course of 12 Lessons, incorporated by Expert who introduced the Original Dnyoyan Joined-Vowel Scheme in the East, has all the advantages of a modern, down-to-date system, and is acquired by Boys and Girls of 12, in a fraction of time. Quickest Results and Highest Efficiency are Guaranteed. Personal or Postal Tuition. Prospective pupils must investigate, as interested parties seem to recommend the only system known to them.

NATIONAL BUSINESS COLLEGE,
1st Floor, Luxmi Bldg., Lamington Road, Bombay.

"EVERYTHING FOR EVERYBODY"

National Standard Portable Typewriter No. 3 (10 lbs.) Rs. 190
Oliver No. 5 (American Rebuilt) S. & Tab. Rs. 175; No. 7 " 200
Empire No. 1 (Do.) in good working order " 65
Multikopy Typewriter Carbons, per Box of 100 sheets " 5
Webster Brand " Ribbons for all machines, Doz. " 21
Typewriter Oil (best 1 oz. bot.) or Eberhard Brasses, Doz. " 6
Safety Razor, Rivals Gillette, with 6 Gillette Blades (best) " 5
Envelope Making Machine (to make 30,000 per day), New " 25
Centin's Self filling Fount Pen (non-leakable) Gold Nib " 9

UNIVERSAL BUSINESS SYNDICATE,
20-4-19. Post Box No. 424, Bombay.

HYPNOTISM

PERSONAL MAGNETISM,
WILL POWER,
NERVE FORCE—

Call what you will—

Is the intangible power that controls human destiny. It is the key to all business and social success. This power is no special gift of any one. It is latent in every one. We help you how to display it. By our system, you can learn in a few days at your own home and not only achieve success yourself, but you can influence the mind, health and actions of others to a remarkable degree.

Write immediately for our free booklet—The Pride of India.

THE LATENT LIGHT CULTURE,
TINNEVELLY, S. INDIA.

Batlivala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 1 each bottle of 100.

Batlivala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 2 each
bottle of 100.

Batlivala's Ague Mixture of Fever, Malaria, Influenza etc.

Batlivala's Ague Pills for Malaria, Fever, Influenza etc.

Batlivala's Tonic pills for pale people & nervous breaks down.

Batlivala's Tooth Powder of Preserving Teeth

Batlivala's Ringworm ointment for Ringworm
Dhobi Itch etc.

May be had from all dealers in medicines or from
Dr. H. L. Batlivala Sons & Co., Ltd.
No. 12, Worli, 15, Bombay.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESS:—"Doctor Batlivala Dadar"

THE BOMBAY CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK.

HEAD OFFICE:—Apollo Street, St., Bombay.

DIRECTORS:—The Hon. Sir Fazulbhai Currimbhoy (Chairman), Sir Vithaldas D. Thackersey, the Hon. Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas, Sir Stanley Reed, the Hon. Mr. C. V. Mehta, the Chief of Iobalkaranji, G.K. Devadhar, Esq., the Hon. Sir P. D. Pattani, the Raja Saheb of Malgaon.

Share Capital (fully paid) ... Rs. 7,00,000
1 Deposit fixed for one year and shorter or longer periods are accepted. Rates and other particulars may be ascertained from the under signed.

2 The Bank finances only registered Co-operative Societies in the Bombay Presidency on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency.

3. Accounts are audited half-yearly by a special Government Auditor, and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the "Bombay Government Gazette."

20-5-17. VAIKUNTH L. MEHTA, Manager,

Clean
 Wholesome
 Intelligent
 Entertainment
 IS A GREAT STEP

IN

SOCIAL REFORM.

When deciding on a

PLACE OF AMUSEMENT TWO ESTABLISHMENTS

Should at once leap to the mind.

THE EXCELSIOR

BOMBAY'S PREMIER MODERN THEATRE

AND

THE EMPIRE

BOMBAY'S MOST PALATIAL

PICTURE THEATRE

Where Film Plays of Distinction are shown

Every Week.

A

Great Cinema Masterpiece

is shown,

Both theatres are near the Bori Bunder

and are run by the

EXCELSIOR SYNDICATE.

The Pioneer of Bombay's

AMUSEMENT WORLD.

FURUKAWA & CO.

TOKIO

The Largest Manufacturers

• in the East

OF

ELECTRIC BARE COPPER CONDUCTORS,

ELECTRIC UNDERGROUND CABLES,

ELECTRIC INSULATED WIRES,

ELECTRIC ACCESSORIES,

INGOTS, RODS, WIRES,

SHEETS, TUBES,

Etc., Etc.,

All our wires are made in accordance with the standard of the British Cable Makers' Association and are tested and approved by leading firms in India.

SOLE AGENTS IN INDIA AND BURMA.

TATA, SONS & CO.,

BOMBAY & CALCUTTA.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS Ltd.,

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.
Narsari Building, Fort, BOMBAY.

Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

-8-17.

When YOUR EYES

are to be examined by QUALIFIED OCULISTS and by SCIENTIFIC REFRACTIONISTS of 26 year experience, FREE OF CHARGE, you cannot do better than GO TO

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR & CO.

The leading firm of Oculists, Eyesight Specialists, Manufacturing Opticians and suppliers of the patented

"KRYPTOK"

(Invisible one-piece bifocal lens.)

Toric, and all kinds of lenses,—Cylindrical, Spherical, Prismatic, &c., from pebbles as well as from best quality crown glass.

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR

Eyesight Specialist,

With 26 Years' Practical Experience.,

Holds Exceptional Testimonials from H. H. The Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, the Hon'ble Sir Lawrence Jenkins the Hon. Mr. Justice Batty, Mrs. Batty, the Hon. Sir N. S. Chandavarkar, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beaman, the Hon'ble Sir S. L. Batchelor, the Hon'ble Sir John Heaton Mr. H. G. Bell, M. V. O., Col. R. H. Forman, B. A. M. C., P. M. O. Bo. Brigade, Lieut. Col. G. H. Bull, M. D., I. M. S., Lieut-Colonel Peters M. B., I. M. S., and other high personages.

(7) 379, HORNBY ROW,

Opposite the Government Telegraph Office,
Fort, BOMBAY.

INTENDING ASSUREES ARE INVITED TO COMPARE THE RATES AND CONDITIONS OF

The Empire of India Life Assurance Company, Limited.

WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.

Head Office 11 Elphinstone Circle, BOMBAY.

SEE REPORT AND OPINIONS OF THE PRESS AS TO THE REMARKABLE PROGRESS MADE BY THE COMPANY.

ENDOWMENT NON-FORFEITABLE POLICY FOR RS. 3,000.

PAYABLE AT AGE 60 OR AT DEATH, IF PREVIOUS, WITH PROFIT.

If, at any time, the assured under this plan should desire to cease paying any more premiums, he can obtain a paid-up policy for such a proportion of the original sum assured as the number of premiums paid bears to the number agreed upon. A gentleman who had assured at age 30 for a Policy of Rs. 3,000 payable at age 60 or at Death, if previous, after 5 years, would be entitled to a Free paid-up Policy for Rs. 500 free of future payments.

SOME OF THE DISTINCTIVE FEATURES.

- * Funds invested in Government Securities and in accordance with the Indian Trusts Act
- Policy holders can appoint their own Directors.
- 90 per cent. of Profits to Participating Policy holders.
- Lapsed policies revived without Medical Certificate.
- Liberal Surrender Values 40 per cent. of the Tabular premium paid.
- Immediate payment of Claims.
- Medical fees and stamps on Policies are payable by the Company.

The sum assured is PAYABLE IN FULL should death occur even immediately after payment of the first premium.

GUARANTEE INSURANCE.—This Company issues Guaranteed Policies in situation of trust and is specially authorized to guarantee the employes of the Post Office.

Proposal Forms and full Particulars may be obtained from any local Agent in India or from ALLUM, BHARUCHA & CO. Managers.

INDIA

EVERY ONE KNOWS.

whom it does concern that we are foremost in supplying the best COSSI SILK SUIT PIECES made for the season. These pieces are strong, fancy and durable, and have been specially manufactured for India.

Each piece guaranteed for One Suit Complete.

Price Rs. 10 per piece.

Apply to—THE BHARGAVA COMMERCIAL SOCIETY,
Benares City.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER. Contract Rates for Advertisements.

Number of Insertions.	1 Inch.		2 Inches.		3 Columns.		4 Columns.		5 Columns.
	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.
18	11	0	16	0	20	0	30	0	50	0
26	16	0	25	0	30	0	50	0	87	0
52	25	0	38	0	60	0	87	0	155	0

Casual advertisements at Rs. 4 per line for the 1st insertion and Rs. 2 per line of succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

WONDERFUL TONIC AND

MOUTH-REFRESHER

JINTAN.

This is a safe and efficient remedy in all kinds of diseases or disturbances of the digestive organs. It is composed entirely of VEGETABLE INGREDIENTS made from the prescription of the following eminent medical men viz—
NORIHURO MIWA, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy,
ZENJIRO INOUE, M. D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy
 and testified as to its efficacy by
Baron J. MATSUMOTO, M. D., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Army.
T. MITAMURA Esq., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial

Japanese Navy.

As a digestive it is unequalled and will not disturb the functions of the most delicate stomach. Its antiseptic properties render it very efficacious in warding off disease and at the same time it imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath of the user.

By virtue of its aroma, it effectually masks the odour of Tobacco and Alcoholic Spirits.

It acts beneficially on the vocal cords and has found much favour with public speakers, actors, singers and those whose vocation necessitates a severe strain on the throat.

GOOD FOR

Billiousness, Headache, Vertigo, Nausea, Indigestion, Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, etc., etc.

To maintain general health 2 to 3 pills may be taken occasionally, well masticated.

Price—Small Packet Rs. 0-1-0. Middle Packet, with Tin case., Rs. 0-4-0. Large Packet with fancy case., Rs. 1-0-0

Prepared by Messrs. MORISHITA Co., OSAKA, JAPAN.

Sole Agents: Jintan Agency (G. R. Chaubal), Juma Masjid, BOMBAY.

FOR PAINS
 AND ACHES
 SPRAINS ETC.
 USE:—

AMRUTANJAN.

The magical pain balm extant. Cures all aches & pains. Costs 8 As. Sold everywhere.

By Appointment to H. E. the Governor
 Sir George Sydenham Clarke of
 Bombay.

HARIDAS VILKJ,

(KING OF INDIAN CONFECTIONERS)

Highest Confectioner, Caterer and Grand
 Military Contractor.

Proprietor—RATINATH,

Chitra Bazar & Grant Road,

BOMBAY.

20-4-19.

DENTISTRY.

Extractions Painless;
 Terms Very Moderate;
 Gold Crown, Bar and
 Bridge Work a Speciality
 (teeth without plate);
 Latest Successful Treatment
 for Pyorrhoea (pus in gums).

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

Hours: 8-1-30 & 5-7-30; Daily.
 (Sundays—From 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.)

ABDOOS BUILDING,
 NEW CHANNI ROAD,
 GINJASON, BOMBAY.

K. R. AHAT,
 Surgeon Dentist.

1-6-19.

THE INDIAN * SOCIAL * REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY MORNING.

Office:—EMPIRE BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD, FORT.

Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

Vol. XXX. BOMBAY—SUNDAY, DECEMBER 14, 1919. No. 15.

"I will be as bareh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard."
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

The Reforms and the Radicals.	Divorce Among Sikhs.
Indian Liberals and the National Congress.	The Reform Bill in Parliament.
Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee's Manifesto.	The Taraka Lipi.
A Poona Concordat.	The Labour Problem in America.
The Khilafat Question.	The Problem of Christianity in India.
The Church of England and Parliament.	All-India Hindu Widow Remarriage Conference.
Sir Ratan Tata.	Guru Gobind Singh's Birthday Anniversary.
The Viceroy's Madras Speeches.	The Title "Hon'ble."
The Anglo-Arabi an Entente.	The Bank of Taiwan, Limited.

NOTES.

The Reforms and the Radicals. In the leading article last week, while stating that no definite announcement has been made of what the Radicals would do with the Reforms, we suggested the possibility of their working to bring about a deadlock. In an address at Madras on Sunday last, Mr. Satyamurti who recently returned from England and who represents the extreme left wing of the Radicals, used language which seems to confirm that suggestion. He said: "Our chairman has rightly said that there is no question of boycotting the reforms. That time may come when we shall boycott the offices of Government and the Councils. Time has not come. When it does come, it will not find Nationalists wanting. In the meantime we may assure our Moderate friends we are not going to make a present of the seats in the Council to them; we mean contesting every seat and we mean—so please God—to keep out every Moderate from these Legislative Councils (Hear, Hear.)" We take the extract from the report in the Hindu. On the other hand, it is only fair to note that the Bombay Presidency Association and the Bombay Branch of the National Home Rule League, both Radical organisations, the one by capture, the other by original constitution, have welcomed the Reform Bill as revised by the Joint Committee. The probability seems to be that the Amritsar Congress will take a more moderate view of the Reforms than that represented by Mr. Satyamurti's observations. The significance of the unanimous vote of the House of Commons on the third reading of the Bill, will not be lost upon such shrewd men as the Radical leaders. Moreover, the Punjab is evidently disgusted with Radical-Moderate bickerings, and is determined to do what she can to end them. And at Amritsar, and in sight of Jallianwalla Bagh, even Mr. Satyamurti will not have the heart to resist the exhortation of the martyr province of India.

Indian Liberals and the National Congress. The Council of the Western India National Liberal Association has issued the following statement:—

It having been brought to the notice of the Council of the Western India National Liberal Association, Bombay, that some members of this Association have received letters from Swami Shradhdhanandaji, Chairman of the Reception Committee, and from the Hon. Pandit Motilal Nehru, President-elect of the forthcoming session of the Indian National Congress at Amritsar, appealing to the said members to attend the session, the Council feel it right to publish the following statement of what, in their view, is the right attitude for the Liberals to adopt on the subject of the said appeal:—As regards the Punjab troubles (on which stress is laid in both the letters of the appeal) the Council have from the outset represented to the authorities, both here and in England, in unmistakable terms, their view of the policy pursued by Government in reference to martial law administration and other main aspects of the Punjab situation from time to time. The Moderates' Conference, which is to meet this month, will give further expression to the views of the Moderates on those questions and such expression will be more effective than if the Moderates joined the Congress under the present circumstances of the political situation, with special reference to the Reform Bill. This Council, therefore, while strongly sympathising with the people of the Punjab, are of opinion that the Moderates, as a party, should not attend the Amritsar Congress.

The Moderates' Conference will be held at Calcutta probably on the 22nd instant, and Sir Sivaswami Iyer is expected to preside. We referred last week to the Servant of India's announcement that the Hon. Mr. Sastri and the other members of the Servants of India Society are in favour of attending the Amritsar Congress. Some Bengalee Moderates are reported to be of the same opinion. The fact that the Reform Bill has passed the third reading in the House of Commons by a unanimous vote, practically ensuring its passage through the Lords, is likely to have a disintegrating effect on the Moderate party, if it has no programme beyond the supporting of the Reform Scheme.

Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee's Manifesto: Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee, President of the All-India Moderate Conference, 1918, in the course of a manifesto regarding the forthcoming Conference of the Moderate Party, says:—The Reform Bill and the Punjab disturbances will form the chief topics of consideration. It is of the first importance that all professing moderate views should muster strong at the conference and participate in its deliberations. It is necessary to give a lead to the country in order to determine the programme of action to be pursued on the passing of the Reform Bill with a view to ensure its successful working, nor is it of less importance that the representatives of moderate opinion should meet in a conference and devise means to prevent a repetition of the deplorable events in the Punjab which have filled the public mind with horror and indignation.

A Poona Concordat: The Non-Brahmins and Moderates of Poona recently found a common platform in opposition to the attempt of the friends and admirers of Mr. Tilak to present him with an address in the name of the citizens of Poona, and, incidentally, a programme was outlined for adoption by the Progressive Party under which name the two groups seem likely to coalesce. The Deccan Ryot of Poona writes:

The Moderates and the Non-Brahmins publicly protested against this disgraceful attempt of the Tilakites to impose on the public. The Honourable Mr. Paranjpe presided at the meeting which passed three important resolutions. The first recounted the anti-national activities of Mr. Tilak, his opposition to social reform, his antagonism to the elevation of the Non-Brahmins and the untouchables, his attempt to wreck the Montagu-Chelmsford reforms, his capture of the Congress organ in England which is sure to lead to its speedy extinction and several others—and protested against the attempt of his followers to give him an address in the name of all the citizens of this city. The second resolution comprised the basic principles of the Progressive Party which are, (1) the diffusion of education among the depressed classes and their elevation; (2) giving of the necessary educational facilities to the backward classes and their social uplift; (3) social and socio-religious legislation on liberal lines; (4) economic and moral elevation of all classes and (5) removal of all the political disabilities of Indians by all constitutional methods. The third resolution authorised a Committee of five persons to intimate to the organizers of the Tilak-Address meeting that unless they presented the address only on behalf of Mr. Tilak's admirers, they would be compelled to protest against it by resorting to all constitutional methods which the Committee may deem proper.

The Poona concordat indicates the basis on which a constructive programme can be built up to justify the continuance after the Reform Bill is passed, of a progressive party which favours a temperate pace in politics in order to consolidate political gains by adequate and suitable re-adjustments in the social and religious life and thought of the people. The Poona programme is necessarily an emergency one which should be amplified both in depth and width before it can become the full programme of Indian Progressives.

The Khilafat Question: The replies given by Mr. Montagu to questions in Parliament last week show that there is no foundation for the allegation that His Majesty's Government are not intent on supporting the Prime Minister's declaration regarding the future of Turkish Turkey. We quote Reuter's telegrams: "In the House of Commons, Colonel Aubrey Herbert asked whether the Greek landing at Smyrna had occasioned any anti-British feeling in India. Mr. Montagu replied that the Greek occupation of Smyrna had certainly led to grave apprehensions lest the Entente contemplated a division or partition of Turkish Turkey, but this policy, Indians both Mussulman and Hindu, and the Government of India, and those who represented them in Paris, always opposed. Replying to another question by Colonel Aubrey Herbert, Mr. Montagu emphasised that he had continually urged upon the Peace Conference the importance to India of a peace with Turkey consistent with the policy contained in Mr. Lloyd George's speech of January 5th, 1918. The Government of India and the representatives of India at the Peace Conference had always opposed the partition of Turkish Turkey. In the House of Commons at question-time, Mr. Cecil Harmsworth stated that the Government had pressed that the Peace Negotiations with Turkey should be taken up with the least possible delay and the Allies were now discussing the question of the resumption of negotiations in Paris." We are glad to note in this connection that the probability of a breach with Germany, owing to the delay in the ratification of the Peace Treaty, which seemed imminent some days ago, appears to have been warded off, thanks chiefly to the moderating influence of the British Government. In the House of Commons, replying to Sir Donald Maclean on the 8th instant, Mr. Bonar Law stated that there was little reason to doubt that the communications which were now being held between the Allies and the German Government with a view to the immediate ratification of the peace would result satisfactorily.

The Church of England and Parliament: The device of a standing Joint Committee of Parliament, introduced in the Indian Reform Bill, as a means of shortening the passage of a Bill through Parliament, has also been introduced in the so-called Enabling Bill to facilitate reforms in the Church of England. In the original Bill as it passed the House of Lords, it was provided that a Bill emanating from a new statutory body to be called the National Assembly of the Church, on being passed by the Ecclesiastical Committee of the Privy Council, shall become law by a resolution of Parliament, instead of having to pass the usual stages of legislation. Lord Haldane took the lead in opposing this provision as annulling the jurisdiction of Parliament. The House of Commons has substituted a Joint Parliamentary Committee as a compromise. The following excerpt from the leading article in the Challenge received last week explains the position: "This Bill deals with Parliamentary procedure only. It provides that when a measure has passed the Church Assembly, constituted in the way set forth in the Address of the Convocations to the Crown, it shall be examined by a Committee of experts on behalf of the State; if the Report of this Committee is favourable, the measure can be carried into law if each House of Parliament carries a resolution directing that it shall do so. In effect the Bill substitutes one resolution in each House for the five stages mentioned above, and provides a reviewing Committee so as to secure that Parliament does not act in the dark."

Sir Ratan Tata: A public meeting was held on Tuesday to record a resolution in appreciation of the public services of the late Sir Ratan Tata. His Excellency the Governor presided and Sir Narayan Chandavarkar moved the principal resolution which ran as follows: That this meeting desires to place on record its deep sense of the loss the country has sustained by the untimely death of Sir Ratan Tata, who was greatly esteemed for his catholic charities, and for unostentatious aid to the relief of suffering humanity and for other deeds of philanthropy, having for their object the physical and social welfare of his countrymen, (b) That the chairman be authorised to communicate the resolution to the bereaved widow Lady Tata, and to Sir Dorab Tata.

The Viceroy's Madras Speeches. The Indian Mirror thinks that Lord Chelmsford's speeches in Madras read very much like the valedictory utterances of a parting pro-consul. Our impression of them is quite the contrary: they rather show that His Excellency is at last feeling his feet on solid ground. In any case, a parting pro-consul does not create a separate portfolio for the reform scheme and take it into his own hands as the Viceroy is reported to have done.

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, DECEMBER 14, 1919.

THE ANGLO-ARABIAN ENTENTE.

We referred last week, in a paragraph on the Khalifat question and the proposal to take no part in the Peace Celebrations, to the telegram published in the previous week to the effect that His Majesty the King of the Hedjaz is sending delegates to a Conference of Moslem powers to deprecate the dismemberment of the Turkish Empire. It is as well here to give the words of this message which has passed without comment in the Indian press. It was dated the 20th November from Constantinople, and was published in the dailies on the 4th instant. It ran as follows: "It is reported that deputations from the King of the Hedjaz and Azerbaidjan have arrived at Sivas, whither an Afghan deputation is stated to be coming to attend a Congress which will appeal to the Supreme Council in Paris to respect the integrity of the Ottoman Empire. An appeal will also be addressed to Indian Moslems. There is a report, which is not confirmed but is thought to be not improbable, that Mostapha Kemal is endeavouring to exploit pan-Islamism." Sivas is the capital of the province of that name in Asiatic Turkey. The Hedjaz is the part of Arabia between Mecca and the southern end of the Dead Sea. Azerbaidjan is the northernmost province of Persia, and had been under Russian occupation till recently. We are not aware that the King of the Hedjaz has also been granted sovereignty over Azerbaidjan. Probably what is meant is that delegates from Azerbaidjan have also arrived. Azerbaidjan has a large Christian population, but the bulk of the Moslem population is of Mongol Turkoman descent, and speaks a form of Turkish. On the withdrawal of Russia, Persia has not been able to enforce law and order in the province which has nominally relapsed to her. The adhesion of Azerbaidjan does not, therefore, mean the participation in the Sivas Congress of Persia, the Shah of which was quite recently an honoured guest in England and who recently entered into a treaty continuing and confirming the traditional friendship between the British and the Persian Empires. The statement that the King of the Hedjaz has sent delegates to the Congress at Sivas to appeal to the Peace Conference to preserve the integrity of the Ottoman Empire is, on the face of it, inexplicable. The constitution of the Hedjaz into an independent Kingdom was itself a violation of that integrity, and it is improbable that His Majesty the King of the Hedjaz prefers once again to subside into his old role of Shereef of Mecca. What is meant by the message probably is that the Powers should preserve the integrity of Turkish Turkey, to use Mr. Montagu's precise phrase. This is exactly what the British Government and the people of India also wish to be done, and in joining a Congress to promote this object the King of the Hedjaz is in no wise departing from his policy of Arabian independence. Not much importance need be attached to the unconfirmed report about Mostapha Kemal's attempt to exploit pan-Islamism. Some people have pan-Islamism on their brain and nothing can dispel their obsession. For our part, we do not see why it should be regarded a greater danger to seek to unite all the Moslem nations than to seek to unite all the Christian or European nations.

An interesting account of the revolt of Arabia and the principal personalities involved therein, is published in Asia, the Journal of the American-Asiatic Association, published in New York. Mr. Lowell Thomas, an Associate Editor of our contemporary, was a member of the staff of Emir Feisal, Commander-in-Chief of the Arabian army, and in that capacity, he saw the inside of the brilliant campaign by which the Turks were successfully ousted from the Arabian peninsula. As regards the genesis of the Arab revolt, Mr. Lowell Thomas says that the Arabs thought they saw in the young Turk movement the dawn of a new era of freedom and liberty. In fact, they played an important part in the revolution which resulted in the overthrow of Abdul Hamid. But they soon discovered that the Young Turk leaders were more tyrannical oppressors than the old Sultan himself. Shereef Hussein and other patriotic Arabs despaired of seeing a happier day for their country, when suddenly the world war pulled Turkey into the maelstrom with Great Britain, France, Russia and Italy pitted against her. "It was the hour of opportunity for Arabia. The Arabian nationalist leaders immediately took advantage of it. With all the pent-up fury and hatred of five hundred years of slavery and dishonour, they leaped at the throats of their villainous masters. From all parts of the desert came the swarthy, leau, picturesque sons of Ishmael to avenge and free themselves at last." Shereef Hussain and his four sons had worked out a plan for the revolution. On the 13th July, 1918, the Shereef gave the signal to all the tribes of holy Arabia, who had been previously warned to be ready to rise at a moment's notice. Simultaneous attacks were launched against the holy cities of Mecca and Medina. The Shereef himself led the attack on Mecca. The revolutionaries failed in Medina. In Mecca they succeeded. Mr. Lowell Thomas says that the Ottoman troops could have held out for many months longer, but for their incredible fatuity in bombarding the mosque of the holy Kaaba, the shrine built over the famous black stone and sanctified by the veneration of generations of pious Mahomedans. One shell, we are told, actually struck the rock, burning a hole in the holy carpet and killing nine persons who were kneeling in prayer. This infuriated the Arabs who swarmed over the walls of the great fort, and were soon in undisputed possession of Mecca. But this effort exhausted them. All their ammunition had been expended. A long pause ensued. Shereef Hussein appealed to the Allies. And with the hour came the man.

Thomas Lawrence, a young Oxford graduate, had heard the call of the East, and was excavating Hittite ruins in the valley of the Euphrates, when the war broke out. Before he finished his University career, he had proceeded to Syria and, adopting native costume, had tramped barefoot over hundreds of miles of desert country, living with the various Bedouin tribes through whose villages he passed. He returned to England merely to finish his archaeological studies, but this done, he went back to his ancient ruins, to toil over undeciphered inscriptions that unlocked the secrets of by-gone civilizations. When the war broke out he was called to Cairo as an expert in the topography and languages of the Near East, and was given a commission as second Lieutenant in the map department. He was twenty-six years old at the time. He had already spent seven years wandering through Turkey, Syria, Palestine, Arabia, Mesopotamia and Persia, and acquired a more intimate knowledge of the peoples of those parts than any other European. When the Arabs appealed to the Allies for help, the British were the first to respond. They not only sent supplies to them, but gave, writes Mr. Lowell Thomas, more important military encouragement: they sent a number of their young military officers to cooperate with the Arabs and offer them advice. Prominent among those sent was Thomas Lawrence. His services in organising the Sheresian army and in leading it to victory, were so highly appreciated and he won the confidence of the King of the Hedjaz to such an extent, that he was permitted to sign the King's name to state papers. Out of gratitude for his services to their country, the Arab leaders made him an emir and prince of Mecca, an honour unparalleled in Arabian history. King Hussain himself presented his British commander with the curved gold sword, worn only by the descendants of the Prophet. Here is Mr. Thomas Lowell's pen-portrait of this great Anglo-Arabian: "The five-foot three Englishman standing before me in his brown camel's hair gown, over which hang his kuffieh or head-dress of heavy white brocaded silk covered with gold embroidery, underneath a snowwhite robe tied with a gold embroidered belt in which he carried the curved sword of a prince of Mecca, all set off regally by the agal, the head-band of heavy cords wrapped with silver and gold threads that held the kuffieh in place—was the real ruler of Arabia." Lawrence always wore the Bedouin dress in Arabia even to the bare-feet, and never put himself forward, always preferring to act through Arabian hands and minds. If Lawrence had been of the type of the "strong men" so adored of Anglo-India, the freedom-loving Arabs would never have taken him to their hearts as they have done.

Divorce Among Sikhs. The Khalsa Advocate learns from a correspondent that the Sikh brotherhood of Kahuta District, Rawalpindi, has introduced the system of Talaq Nama (Divorce) among themselves, "Would any responsible body of that place throw more light on the matter?" comments our contemporary. "It is a serious step and we want a corroboration of the allegation before commenting on the propriety or otherwise of the step taken by the Kahuta society."

THE REFORM BILL IN PARLIAMENT.

After a three days' discussion, the Reform Bill passed the third reading by agreement in the House of Commons on the 5th instant. Several amendments were moved but none was adopted. One of these related to the inclusion of Burma in the scheme. It was moved by Mr. Spoor, the Labour member who sat on the Joint Committee, but withdrawn on Mr. Montagu's assurance that Burma would get without delay one of two things. It will either become a Governor's province under the Indian Reform Bill or if it was desired to give Burma a different constitution from the rest of India, then new legislation would be introduced at the next session. Mr. Montagu himself thought that Burma would prefer a special Act of Parliament. The Times in a leading article strongly disagrees with this view and hopes that the question will be carefully considered in the House of Lords. It points out that Burma is an integral part of India and that the declaration of August 1917, constituted as much a pledge to Burma as to every other province of India. The Burmese are as much entitled and qualified to share responsible government as other peoples under British control in the Indian Empire. It declares that at present Burma's communications with the outside world are worse than any region in tropical Asia. Rangoon and Mandalay ought to have been linked up with Calcutta by rail long ago. If the present purpose is carried out Burma will be sandwiched between India and the federated Malay States. These are cogent arguments. An equally strong reason for including Burma in the scheme of the Bill, is that unless this is done, the continuance of Burma under the Government of India with Burmese representatives sitting in the Indian Legislative Assembly and the Council of State, will be an anomaly. Sooner or later it must mean a clean cut, and neither the people of India nor those of Burma wish to have it brought about. The future of Burma lies with India, and to separate Burma from India, apart from its administrative inconvenience, is shortsighted policy. Whatever may be the immediate outcome, the Burmese, like the Ceylonese, will ere long look to the Indian mainland for guidance and inspiration in national movements.

The other amendments fall under two heads: the reactionary and the progressive: those intended to make the Bill less liberal, and those intended to make it more generous. The former came exclusively from the small number of Unionists, the latter from Labour and Liberal members. The restrictive amendments covered familiar ground and their only, or chief, interest was that it drew some noteworthy observations from Mr. Montagu and the Labour and Liberal benches. The most important of them moved by Colonel Yate, to do away with Ministers, and appoint members of the Executive Council from among the elected members of Legislative Councils, was negatived without a division. Even Sir Henry Craik, a fellow-Unionist, declined to support

Colonel Yate's amendment. Sir Henry Craik's amendment providing that Governors must have served ten years in India under the Crown prior to their appointment, met the same fate, but it drew from Mr. Montagu a warm compliment to Sir George Lloyd who would be ineligible under Sir Henry Craik's amendment. It would not be right to say that there have been no good Governors who were Indian civilians, but it is true nevertheless that these have been exceptions, just as the narrow bureaucratic administrator has been the exception among Governors recruited from English public life. Indian opinion has long been unanimous in its decided preference for direct recruits from England, and it is an opinion resting on a broad basis of experience. The Labour amendments showed more breadth and vision than the Unionist ones. It is not easy to follow the telegraphic summary of the debates as obviously the provincial and the central governments are not sufficiently distinguished. For instance, Colonel Wedgwood is said to have contended that public health and sanitation would be much better looked after by Indian Ministers. The Feetbam Committee recommended these for transfer, and we do not think they have been omitted in the revised list placed before and accepted by the Joint Committee. Colonel Wedgwood's remark is intelligible only on the assumption that it refers to the Government of India. The discussion on the amendment drew from Mr. Montagu the remark that it would be possible to extend the list of transferred subjects before the Statutory Commission sat. Mr. Montagu declined to accept an amendment for preferential treatment to Bombay on the ground of its greater progress than the other provinces. An amendment leaving the Central Government to raise its own revenues, led to Mr. Montagu announcing that Lord Meston was coming to India to preside over a Committee which would decide impartially between the provinces and Central Government and arrive at a solution.

The only other amendment of importance was one moved by Mr. Spoor rednoing the probationary term to within ten years. Mr. Montagu explained in the course of his speech deprecating the amendment that the Bill laid down that a commission must be appointed, but that it did not mean that investigation was impossible earlier, and that if there was remarkable and unforeseen development in Indian conditions within ten years, a commission could always be appointed in the interval. Colonel Wedgwood speaking in support of the amendment said that the amendment was moved because the Labour Party (to which both Mr. Spoor and himself belonged) might be in power in four years, and they wished to make it clear that, if so, they would not be tied down by the terms of this provision. Mr. Bonar Law told a Glasgow meeting on the same day as the passing of the third reading, that there would be no general election for at least three years. He had no doubt good reasons for his statement, but the conciliatory and even deferential tone adopted by Mr. Montagu to the Labour party in the debates and in his concluding speech shows that he at any rate was not going to minimise the importance of the intervention of the Labour representatives on the progressive side in the course of the debate. On the third reading of the Bill, Mr. Montagu received what can be fairly described as an ovation. The Labour and Liberal leaders blessed the Bill, and prophesied an early extension of its provisions. Sir Donald Maclean joined Colonel Wedgwood in paying a hearty tribute to Mr. Montagu's high qualities, but Mr. Montagu himself perhaps appreciated most Sir Henry Craik's observation that, after doubts, he had learned to place much confidence in Mr. Montagu's statesmanship. Mr. Montagu acknowledged these congratulations in a fine speech in which he declared that that was the proudest moment of his life. There were several remarkable statements in his speech. He declared that his only conception of Imperialism had always been that there could be no pride or pleasure in a Crown Colony in domination or subordination, in flying the British flag for the benefit of British trade, but the only Imperialism worth having was a trusteeship intended to develop the country under the British flag into a partnership in the Commonwealth. He went on to observe that the constitution provided in the Bill would be of little use unless it was carried out by those responsible for the Government of India on behalf of Parliament, namely, the Secretary of State and the Government of India, in the letter and in the spirit. The powers reserved to the Government must be exercised, as though they were applicable to a country of growing national consciousness on the road to self-Government and not as if we were administering a great estate. If we remember, the Government of India in one of their despatches had said that they conceived their position to be that of one administering a great estate for the benefit of a minor who was to come of age at some indefinite future date. Speaking on one of the amendments in the early stage of the second reading, Mr. Montagu gave the following timetable for the inauguration of the reforms. He said that he had had correspondence with the Viceroy and the Government of India with regard to what would happen if, as was hoped, the Bill received the Royal assent before Christmas. They hoped that the rules under the Bill after being published in India and after receiving the opinions of all concerned, including the local Governments, would be brought home in time to hold new elections in November, 1920, and that the new Legislative Assembly would sit in India in January, 1921. That was what the Government of India and the India office were aiming at.

The Taraka Lipi. Mr. N. M. Rama Ayyar, tutor in the National College of Commerce, Madras, sends us a copy of his pamphlet entitled "the Taraka Lipi, the ideal alphabet for India." He does not think that the Roman script will be a satisfactory substitute for the several scripts at present in use. The Taraka Lipi is an attempt to find a script which can be used by the Dravidian as well as the Sanskritic languages. The Malayalam alphabet provides for the sounds peculiar to the Dravidian as well as Sanskrit languages, and Mr. Rama Ayyar has worked out his system on the basis of that alphabet. He claims for his Taraka script that the writing is easy, the script may be learnt in half an hour, it considerably reduces the number of types in printing, and that it is admirably suited to the typewriter as the letters are few and of equal size. It involves only one style quite unlike the Roman which has three distinct styles, the cursive style, the book alphabet, and the capitals. The pamphlet is priced four annas and can be obtained from the author, 23, High Road, Egmore.

THE LABOUR PROBLEM IN AMERICA.

What concessions Capital is willing to make to labour in the United States is indicated in a platform of principles enunciated by the group representing Capital in the Industrial Conference called at Washington in October to find a solution for the national industrial unrest. The principles are as follows:

PRODUCTION—There should be no intentional restriction of productive effort or output by either the employer or employee to create an artificial scarcity of the product or of labour in order to increase prices or wages.

THE ESTABLISHMENT AS A PRODUCTIVE UNIT—The establishment rather than the industry as a whole or any branch of it should, as far as practicable, be considered as the unit of production and of mutual interest on the part of employer and employee. Each establishment should develop contact and full opportunity for interchange of view between management and men, through individual or collective dealing or a combination of both.

CONDITIONS OF WORK—It is the duty of management to make certain that the conditions under which work is carried on are as safe and as satisfactory to the workers as the nature of the business reasonably permits. Every effort should be made to maintain steady employment of the workers both on their account and to increase efficiency.

WAGES—The worker should receive a wage sufficient to maintain him and his family at a standard of living that should be satisfactory to a right-minded man in view of the prevailing cost of living. Women doing work equal with that of men under the same conditions should receive the same rates of pay and be accorded the same opportunities for training and advancement.

HOURS OF WORK—The standard of the work schedule should be the week, varying as the peculiar requirements of individual industries may demand. Overtime should, as far as possible, be avoided, and one day of rest in seven should be provided.

SETTLEMENT OF DISPUTES—Each establishment should provide adequate means for the discussion of all questions and the just and prompt settlement of all disputes, but there should be no improper limitation or impairment of the exercise by management of its essential function of judgment and direction.

RIGHT TO ASSOCIATE—The association of men, whether of employers, employees or others, for collective action or dealing, confers no authority and involves no right or compulsion over those who do not desire to act or deal with them, as an association. Arbitrary use of such collective power to coerce or control others without their consent is an infringement of personal liberty and a menace to the institutions of a free people.

RESPONSIBILITY OF ASSOCIATION—Every association, whether of employers or employees, must be equally subject to public authority and legally answerable for its own conduct or that of its agents.

FREEDOM OF CONTRACT—With the right to associate recognized, the fundamental principle of individual freedom demands that every person must be free to engage in any lawful occupation or enter into any lawful contract as an employer or an employee, and be secure in the continuity and rewards of his effort.

THE OPEN SHOP—The principles of individual liberty and freedom of contract upon which our institutions are fundamentally based require that there should be no interference with the "open shop." While fair argument and persuasion are permissible, coercive methods aimed at turning the "open shop" into a "closed union" or "closed non-union shop" should not be tolerated. No employer should be required to deal with men or groups of men who are not his employees or chosen by and from among them.

THE RIGHT TO STRIKE OR LOCK OUT—In the statement of the principle that should govern as to the right to strike or lock out, a sharp distinction should be drawn between the employment relations in the field (a) of the private industry, (b) of the public utility service and (c) of government employment, federal, state or municipal.

In private industry the strike or the lock-out is to be deplored, but the right to strike or lock out should not be denied as an ultimate resort after all possible means of adjustment have been exhausted. Both employers and employees should recognize the seriousness of such action and should be held to a high responsibility for the same. The sympathetic strike is indefensible, anti-social and immoral. The same may be said of the blacklist, the boycott and also of the sympathetic lock-out.

In public utility service the public interest and welfare must be the paramount and controlling consideration. The strike should, therefore, impose such regulations as will assure continuous operation, at the same time providing adequate means for the prompt hearing and adjustment of complaints and disputes.

A strike of government employees is an attempt to prevent the operation of government until the demands of such employees are granted, and cannot be tolerated. The right of government employees to be heard and to secure just redress should be amply safeguarded.

TRAINING—Practical plans should be inaugurated in industry and outside of it for the training and upgrading of industrial workers, their proper placement in industry, the adoption and adaptation of apprenticeship system, the extension of vocational educational and such other adjustments of our educational system to the needs of industry as will prepare the worker for more effective and profitable service to society and to himself.

TRADES UNION'S PRINCIPLES: The Trades Union representing almost five million workers, has declared, through its representatives at the Industrial Conference, these principles:

Right of wage earners to organize.

Right of collective bargaining.

Right of wage earners to be represented by representatives of their own choosing in negotiations with employers.

Freedom of speech, of the press and of assemblage.

Right of employers to organize and bargain collectively.

Minimum eight-hour day, with one day of rest in each week, and with a half holiday on Saturday encouraged, and over-time discouraged.

Payment of a living wage.

Women to receive the same pay as men for equal work.

Prohibition of labour for children under 16 years of age.

"To secure a greater share of consideration and co-operation to the workers in all matters affecting the industry in which they are engaged," a National Conference Board was proposed to provide for the systematic review of industrial relations and conditions, the Board to consist of an equal number of representatives of employers and workers, having due regard to the various sections of industry and classes of workmen. Formation of these Boards would be encouraged by the Department of Labour.

Prohibition of all immigration for at least two years after the declaration of Peace and at such times thereafter as there may be an abnormal condition of unemployment, was favoured in the declaration. At no time would immigration be permitted to exceed the nation's ability to Americanize the incoming foreigners.

P.

THE PROBLEM OF CHRISTIANITY IN INDIA.

I.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

I have read your periodical with considerable regularity for twenty years and what I have admired most is your habit of courtesy to those with whom you differ and of fairness to those who oppose you. It has been seldom that you have seemed to me to vary from this rule. Hence my surprise is the greater that you should publish the article that appears in your issue of November 23rd called "The Problem of Christianity in India."

The writer makes this extraordinary statement: "The first thing (that a Missionary does with his converts) is to make them eat beef and meat and even drink wine." The only possible reply to such a statement is that it is an unrelieved and unconvincing falsehood. The writer either knows nothing of Indian Christians and their ways or Missionaries and their methods or he does know and twists his facts. In either case, he is incompetent to write on the subject he has chosen. But, you, Sir, do know. Hence my surprise at your giving hospitality to such gauche abuse. Many missionaries are vegetarians from personal preference and practically all are abstainers and never in any circumstances whatsoever would any one of us dream of forcing any convert to eat meat. Many Indian Christians are vegetarians.

The origin of the hoary lie which your contributor foists on your readers is this. In the early days of missionary enterprise, say eighty to hundred years ago, the converts were few and of good position. They were invariably outcasted and as a consequence they had to come into the compounds and frequently into the homes of the Missionary. At that time, the drinking of spirits was a universal custom among Europeans. There was no conscience against it. That has risen in the last fifty years or so. Hence quite naturally the convert learnt the customs of his Padre. Hence also unfortunately in the popular mind in parts of India, becoming Christian became associated with eating meat and drinking alcohol. But that was generations ago. It is inconceivable that any missionary would in these days use influence in the way alleged.

Yours etc.,

J. T. M.

[We sent a copy of this letter to Mr. Manilal Parekh, the writer of the article in which the statement occurred, and we print his reply below. Mr. Manilal does not attempt to prove the specific statement regarding beef to which objection is taken by our correspondent. In the circumstances, we can only express our regret for having published the particular statement. At the same time, we cannot but admit the force of Mr. Manilal's complaint that, on the strength of this single statement, his competence to deal with the subject should have been questioned. Mr. Manilal, we may add, is a Gujarati Brahmin, a graduate of the Bombay University and a quite recent convert to Christianity, and we have no reason to think that he has any animus against Christian Missionaries. The danger, which he fears is, however, disapproved by such expressions of the Indian Christian attitude to national problems, as that exemplified by Mr. Paul's paper on constitutional reforms, which we printed last week. The fact is that there are deeper forces at work which both Mr. Manilal and the average Missionary ignore.—Ed. I. S. R.]

II

MR. MANILAL'S REPLY.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

You will kindly allow me to make the following reply to your correspondent.

He pays you a handsome compliment for "your habit of courtesy to those with whom you differ and of fairness to those who oppose you," and then in the very next sentence shows his surprise that you should have published my article. Is that his idea of fairness?

Further on he says that I am incompetent to write on the subject I have chosen. May I ask him the reason why? What main conclusions of mine does he object to? What has he to say against so many things I have said, things which are vital to the matter? Leaving all my chief propositions and conclusions entirely aside, he has chosen only one sentence of mine to find fault with, and thereupon to hang his charge of incompetence on my part and want of wisdom on your part for publishing my article. It is more than unfair, though of a piece with that missionary intolerance which would brook no difference of opinion whatsoever. The missionary would condemn whole systems of religion but must needs be infallible himself.

Your correspondent objects to my statement that the converts are made to eat beef and meat and even drink wine as the first step in that process of de-Hinduising (this 'de' in 'de-Hinduise' was lost through the printers' neglect along with other mistakes that had crept in this second part of my article, a matter of which I wrote to you last week) for which the missionary is mainly responsible. Your correspondent says in reply that there are many missionaries as well as Indian Christians who are vegetarians. I know that and I said at the end of that very paragraph that there are some converts who withstand this process of de-Hinduising. But these are exceptions. Will the gentleman assure me that out of every hundred vegetarian Hindu converts, even five remain so to the end? It would be a very small proportion, but I am afraid even that would not be found to be true.

Further, your correspondent says that wine-drinking was common in former times when the missionaries harboured their high-caste converts of respectable families. Now no such converts come forward and so the missionaries have closed their doors against all comers. I was told recently by an Indian Christian of note from Madras that he had seen Brahmin boys made to lodge by missionaries with grooms and men of that class. I have myself seen such converts as come now-a-days, though they be Brahmins, boarding and lodging in a way not much better than in the grooms' quarters. Converts' Homes are coming into fashion now, and they are part of the mission-compound-system. The process of de-Hinduising in the manner I spoke of is in full swing today, perhaps more than ever, now that the converts of old type do not come. The missionary may abstain from drink, but his converts or their children know better how to enjoy the sweets of western civilization when they can afford them. I have seen such converts in a most flourishing business of this kind, students of theology, indulging in drink on the first day of the month when they get their pay. From the missionary's home to the mission 'compound or converts' Home is no progress: rather otherwise.

It is not at all a question of forcing the converts to eat meat and drink wine. It is not the missionary who does it, now at least. The system does it, and the missionary, as a class, is mainly responsible for it. I said in my article that some missionaries are victims of the system, and your correspondent perhaps may be one such. My main contention is that the present method of evangelisation has resulted in the creation of a Christian community which is entirely proletarianised, denationalised, anglicised and materialised: that inasmuch as the missionaries have kept their caste or varna pure it is unjust to the higher castes of the Hindus: that inasmuch as this community would have separate political privileges it would end in organising in India what is nothing less than an anti-Hindu counter-State which would be ruinous to the best interests of both the Indian civilization and the Kingdom of Heaven: and that all this is absolutely contrary to the command of St. Paul and of the Lord Jesus Christ as set forth in I Timothy 6-1-5. Your correspondent has said nothing whatsoever with regard to this. I wonder if he has ever thought of the problem in the way I have put it, or if he has understood my meaning fully. In case he has, and has nothing to say in reply to this main contention, his is indeed a case of one who would swallow camels and yet strain at a gnat.

Yours truly,
MARILAL C. PAREKH.

ALL-INDIA HINDU WIDOW REMARRIAGE CONFERENCE.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer,

Sir,

It was in December 1914 when the Punjab Vidhya Vivaha Sabaik Sabha, Lahore came into existence by the good nature, broad-mindedness and charitable disposition of a donor, who does not wish to disclose his name in public. In the beginning, he gave a building, yielding a monthly rent of Rs. 100 or so, which was collected by the Hony. Secretary of the Sabha for spending in the cause. Over and above this, he contributed more money, whenever required unstintedly. In the first year 12 and in the second year 13 widow marriages could be arranged under the auspices of the Sabha by its workers. In the third year the donor allowed the Hony. Secretary to make his budget upto Rs. 200 P. M. During this period (1917), the Sabha succeeded in celebrating 81 marriages. In 1918, 40 widow marriages took place and the annual expenditure in the year came to Rs. 2835. During the current year viz. 1919, it may give pleasure to the well-wishers of the cause to learn that till the writing of this letter 81 marriages have been arranged so far, and it is hoped there will be some more still in the remaining 1½ months of the year. The donor has now been pleased to set apart for the expenses of the Sabha two new decent buildings, fetching a monthly rental of Rs. 705. Thus we started work with a monthly income of about Rs. 100 and now we have got Rs. 705 P. M. at our disposal through the kindness of the donor. In the end of December 1919, the Sabha will complete its fifth year. Now to encourage and to enlarge the scope of this noble cause as well as to take advantage of the experience of others in various provinces of India, it has been resolved by the Committee held on the 18th November 1919 that we should make it an All-India Movement if it could be at all possible. Hence in order to gauge the situation, it has been decided to hold an "All India Hindu Widow Remarriage Conference" during the Christmas week at Amritsar for a few hours, where prominent social reformers and other important workers interested, in the movement should be invited.

As this is a heavy responsibility, I request the sympathisers to co-operate with the Sabha on this occasion. For this, all persons and officials of the societies working for social reforms in various parts of India including the Punjab without any distinction of caste among the Hindus, are requested to address the undersigned on the following points:—

1. Probable proposals for consideration at the time of the Conference.
2. Names of gentlemen to whom special invitations should be sent in India including the Punjab.
3. Names of the gentlemen who may be requested to send papers.

Those who wish to know the cause we espouse, can address the office for literature, prepared by the Sabha in English,

Urdu, Hindi and Gurmukhi, which will be supplied free of any cost. Enquiries will be promptly attended to. Sympathisers are requested to co-operate and support the movement. In the end, I have a sanguine hope that my this appeal will receive an earliest response and not go in vain. The Hindu editors and other journalists devoted to the social reform are requested to please make comments on it, so that this appeal may attract public attention.

Any help from whatever direction and quarter, in any form, will be thankfully received and utilized.

Yours Faithfully,
LALPAT RAI SAHNI,
Hony. Secretary,
The Punjab Vidya Vivaha Sahaik Sabha, Lahore.

GURU GOBIND SINGH'S BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY
AND THE NATIONAL WEEK.

The Tribune of Lahore has been requested to publish the following letter:—

DEAR BROTHERS,—Guru Gobind Singh's Birth Day Anniversary falls this year in the Xmas week. In those days prominent men from all parts of India shall gather at Amritsar, the sacred city of the Sikhs. It is proposed to entertain Hindu, Muhammadan, Christian and other leaders, gathered on the occasion, at a dinner or Tea Party in commemoration of the great Guru's work in the direction of national unity. The Dinner or Party will be given on the birthday of the Guru on behalf of the Sikhs. It will be purely a social function. Prominent Sikhs from Amritsar, Lahore, Gujranwala, Lyallpur etc., have already expressed their willingness to join and take an active part. It is desired that about 1000 non-sikhs be invited on the occasion. Expenses for the Tea Party will be about Rs. 1500 and for Dinner Rs. 5,000. Those interested will kindly communicate with the undersigned,

SARDUL SINGH CAFFESSIEUG,

Nazir House,
Gwalmandi, Lahore.

THE TITLE "HON'BLE".

The Editor The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

Now that the Reforms Bill is sure to be passed, may I just draw the attention of the powers-that-be to the suggestion in the Reforms Report that the title "Hon'ble" for Council members should be dropped. It was a very wise suggestion and we have no idea whether they are going to drop it as proposed or whether are likely to retain it. If I may say so, it is not very desirable or healthy from the political standpoint, to let loose 1000 or 1500 Hon'bles before a bewildered country—not to speak of the other thousands, among the would-be and prospective aspirants to the title. Joke apart, it is also a point to be considered whether the dropping of the "Hon'ble" will not help to a considerable extent in the purity of electioneering campaign and politics and in the coming to the front of men with real desire to work for the public welfare but not for the sake of the glory or title behind such memberships in the Council. In addition to the passing of the Corrupt Practices Act, the Government might well take this step also to purify Indian politics and its parties. The appellation "Hon'ble" can be dropped to all except for Executive Council Members and Ministers, Presidents and Vice-Presidents of Councils.

But, in the Councils and Assemblies, the members must adopt the practice of the House of Commons and address one another as the Hon'ble member so and so or the Hon'ble member for Bombay or Poona or Madras or Tanjore.

X.

THE BANK OF TAIWAN, LIMITED.

The Bank of Taiwan, Limited, have received mail advice from their Tokyo Office that the Directors have decided to double their present capital making it Yen 60,000,000 and have added Yen 500,000 to the Reserve Fund making it Yen 7,030,000 and the Paid up Capital now stands at Yen 87,500,000.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postages
In advance. In arrears.

Per annum..... Rs. 5—0—0. Rs. 6—0—0
Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, twelve shillings (Rs. 6).

Single copies of the current year can be had at 4 annas each and any back copies at 6 annas each.

"PEEPS INTO THE FUTURE"

Is everybody's everyday book. The codified experience of generations of Astrologers and Indian Yogis—an astrologer in moments of anxiety & suspense—answers short and succinctly clear on the thousand and one points of doubt and uncertainty. Everybody may consult the book—no date of birth or horoscope necessary. Must be in every pocket for it suits all. Price one rupee only. Foreign two shillings. Apply to the Proprietor.

TATA MYSTIC ASTRAL STUDIO
24-8-19. Chodavaram, Vizagapatam District.

"MESMERISM AND HYPNOTISM."

Complete Course Rs. 1-8 only. Contents. 1. Instructions. 2. Breathing Exercise or Yoga Practice. 3. Exercises to develop this will and memory. 4. Various Hypnotic processes. 5. To wake up a subject. 6. Clairvoyance. 7. Telepathy. 8. Levitation. 9. Wonderful methods of Hindu Healing. 10. Various diseases. 11. Hindu Catelepy or Burial alive. 12. The secret method of telling future events most wonderfully by the Indian Yogees without horoscope or birth time. Mr. Ratikantha Bhowmik, Head Master writes from Senhatix on 22-10-19:—I have become successful hypnotist with the help of your course. The methods are far easier and simpler than in any other courses. Mr. B. Sitaramurty, B.A., B.L., Government pleader writes: Your book really reveals the wonderful hidden powers of man. The methods are of the easiest kind and the book in short is the best of its kind in the field.

THE EASTERN HYPNOTIC HOME,
P. O. Chodavaram, (Vizagapatam, Dt.)

"COMMERCE AND INDUSTRIES."

An Interesting Monthly Journal of Indian Material Progress.

Annual Subscription Rs. 10-0 and Single Copy Rs. 1 Post Free.

A Specially valuable advertising Medium.

Wanted Agents throughout India.

Address:—P. Box. No. 353, and 5 Mount Road
Madras S. C. 12-10-19

ON DUIY!

THE YOUNG COLLEGIATE IS OUT.

An educational Monthly for Young and Old.
Editor:—Mr. R. S. NIMBARK.

The "It's of it:—

1. If you are a Student, it will help you to the Examination Hall because your professors contribute to it.
2. If you are an active worker, it will show some field for you to solve problems, because it contains articles of your leaders.
3. If you are an artist, it is illustrated for you.
4. If you are a Social reformer, it will discuss all problems of Social reform and will give you views of male and female reformers.

Whatever you are, the Monthly gives you whatever you want.
Annual Subscription Rs. 3. Single Copy Annas 8.
Wanted Agents throughout India.

For advertisement rates & other particulars apply to—

S. A. DANGE,
Manager.

Young Collegiate Office,
Sandhurst Road, Bombay No. 4.
14-12-19.

THE TATA INDUSTRIAL BANK, LD.

HEAD OFFICE, BOMBAY.

BRANCHES—CALCUTTA and HYDERABAD (Deccan)
CAWNPORE and LUCKNOW.

Sub-Branches.—

Bombay—Share Bazaar, Shroff Bazaar.

Calcutta—Bara Bazaar.

London Agents. LLOYDS BANK LIMITED.

NEW YORK AGENTS: THE GUARANTY
TRUST COY. OF NEW YORK.

AUTHORISED CAPITAL... Rs. 12,00,00,000.

SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL..... " 7,56,00,225.

PAID UP CAPITAL..... " 1,50,99,225.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Sir D. J. Tata, Kt., Chairman.

Sir Sassoon David, Bart.

Sir R. N. Mookerjee, K. C. I. E.

Sir Francis Stewart, Kt.

Sir Henry Proctor, Kt.

R. D. Tata, Esq.

F. E. Dinshaw, Esq.

F. C. Rimington, Esq.

Narottam Morarjee, Esq.

Hajee Gulam Mahomed Ajar, Esq.

The Hon'ble Mr. Parshottandas Thakorlas. C. I. E.

A. J. Bilimoria, Esq.

Secretary, R. H. Parker.

Current Accounts opened and interest allowed on daily credit balances from Rs. 500/- to Rs. 1,00,000/- at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum. If the balance to the credit of any account does not fall below Rs. 25,000/- at any time between 1st January and 30th June, interest will be allowed during that period at 2½ per cent. per annum. No interest is allowed unless the sum accrued amounts to Rs. 8/- Half-yearly.

Fixed Deposits. Interest allowed on Deposits fixed for one or two years and for shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank. Interest allowed on Savings Bank Accounts at 4 per cent per annum. Rules may be obtained on application.

Loans and Cash Credits are granted on approved securities.

Purchases and sales of Securities and shares effected.

Bills of Exchange purchased and collected and every description of Banking and exchange business undertaken.

14-4-18. L. D. L. BUCKLEY, General Manager.

THE YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK, LIMITED.(Registered in Japan.)
Established 1880.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 48,000,000.

Paid up Capital.....Yen. 42,000,000.

Reserve Fund.....Yen. 28,100,000.

Head Office:—Yokohama.

Branches and Agencies at Bombay, Buenos Aires, Calcutta, Changchun, Chi-Nan, Dairen, Fengtien, Hankow, Harbin, Hongkong, Honolulu, Kaiyuan, Kobe, London, Los Angeles, Lyons, Manila, Nagasaki, Newchwang, New York, Osaka, Peking, Rangoon, San Francisco, Seattle, Shanghai, Shimonoseki, Singapore, Soerabaya, Sydney, Tientsin, Tokio, Teingtao.

Current Deposit Accounts are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at the rate of 2 per cent per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 100,000, provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of banking and exchange business transacted.

N. IGARASHI

Post Box No. 207, Hornby Road, Bombay.

I. NISHIMAKI

Manager, Calcutta.

1-12-17,

Post Box No. 406, Clive street, Calcutta

THE BANK OF BARODA, LD.

Under the Patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja Gekwar.
Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1891

HEAD OFFICE BARODA.

Branches—Ahmedabad, Navsari Meshana, and Sure

Capital Subscribed.....Rs. 60,00,000,

Capital Paid up " 30,00,000.

Reserve Fund " 12,50,000.

DIRECTORS :

The Hon'ble Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas, C. I. E., Chairman

Sir Vithaldas Demodar Theokerey, Kt.

Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti Nagar Sheth

Baroda.

Sheth Manlal Revadas, Vadnagar.

Rao Bahadar Gunajirao R. Nimbalkar, Sur Sabha, Barod

State.

Bhakerrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., Advocate, High Court

Bombay.

M. H. Kantavalla, Esq., Agent, Maharaja Mill Co., Ltd

Baroda.

R. R. Shirgaokar, Naib Sabha, Baroda State.

A. N. Datar, Accountant General, Baroda State.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balance from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest which does not come to Rs. 8 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application. C. E. RANDLE, General Manager

THE CENTRAL BANK OF INDIA, LTD

Subscribed Capital... Rs. 50,00,000

Paid Up Capital ... " 49,59,900

Reserved liability of

Shareholders ... " 25,00,000

Reserve Fund ... " 6,00,000

Head Office:—Alice Building, Bombay.

Local Branches:—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar, (3) Share Bazaar.

Branches:—Amritsar, Calcutta, Delhi, Jharis Karachi.

London Agents:—London Joint City and Midland Bank, Ltd.

Current Accounts:—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June
2½ % allowed on Daily Balances from July to December.

12 months Deposits received at 5 % per annum.

Long and Short period Deposits received at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking Business transacted.

For farther particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA,

Manager.

25-2-17

THE BANK OF TAIWAN, LTD.

Incorporated by Special Charter of the Imperial Japanese Government, 1899.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 60,000,000
Paid-up CapitalYen. 87,500,000
Reserve FundYen. 7,030,000

Head Office:—Taipeh, Formosa.

BRANCHES:—

LONDON	SHANGHAI	TOKIO
NEW YORK	HONGKONG	OSAKA
MOY	SINGAPORE	KOBE
ANTON	SOERABAJA	YOKOHAMA
COOHOW	SEMARANG	AKO
ANKOW	MAKUNG	GIRAN
SIUKIANG	BATAVIA	KAGI
WATOW	PINAN	KARENKO
AINAN	SHINCHIKU	KEELUNG
AKOW	TAICHU	TAMSUI

The Bank has also a large number of Correspondents at home and Abroad.

Current Deposit Accounts—are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at 2 per cent. per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 1,00,000 provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of Banking and Exchange business transacted.

K. TAKEMURA,
Manager

12-17. 56, Esplanade Road, Fort, BOMBAY

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

Established 7th September 1906.

Incorporated under the Indian Companies' Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE:

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.

Capital Subscribed Ra. 1,00,00,000

Capital Called up " 50,00,000

Reserve Fund " 15,00,000

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½% p. a. throughout the year. On sums exceeding Rs. 1,00,000 interest is allowed by special arrangement. No interest will be allowed which does not amount to Rs. 8 per half year.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short periods @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, & CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stocks at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

H. P. STRINGFELLOW,

3-1-11.

Manager.

A Lady's Best Ornament is a Glorious Head of Hair.

A profusion of rich, soft silky, lustrous, wavy hair—where's the woman who would not like that?

There's only one oil that makes such hair and it's the far-famed

KAMINIA OIL (Regd.)

Invaluable for ladies, and just as much for Brain-Workers and Students.

Heated head cooled, aching disappears and dandruff becomes a thing of the past. Added to all these it possesses a beautiful fragrant smell.

For superiority, awarded a Gold Medal at the Mysore Exhibition, and in great demand all over the country.

If you have not yet used KAMINIA OIL, you

have missed a fine delight and a real boon; use it now, if only once; and like many people you will prefer to use also always

Price per bottle, Re. 1. V. P. Charges 6 annas extra
Price for 3 bottles Rs. 2-10. V. P. charges 14 annas extra
Write now, Do not delay.

Sole Agents:—

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,
(5-3-16) No. 155, Jamma Masjid Market, BOMBAY.

Now-a-Days.

All things have advanced in price. Even the vegetable ingredients used in our Atank Nigrah Pills have advanced in price.

Even the labourers demand heavy wages being dearer. Even the users have increased yet the Atank Nigrah Pills for Toning up the system are sold at before war price i. e. at a Rupee.

Valdyia Shastri
Manishanker Govindji,

Atank Nigrah Pharmacy,

Head Office:—Jamnagar—Kathiawar.

Branch:—Kalbadevi Road, Bombay.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours. Publish Fine Art Pictures, & c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.
1-12-10. HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS-

ROYAL TONIC PILLS.

Powerful Nutritious and Strength Restorer. Price Re. 1-4 per 1/2 of 30 Pills.

PREPARED BY—GOVINDJEE DAMODER & Co.,

Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Commission Agents.
1-12-10. No. 3 Sutar Chawl Market, BOMBAY.

Timely advice to the Wealthy

Costly but certain remedies are in the long run cheaper than cheap and uncertain ones.

KANDARPA SANJIVINI PILLS AND OIL

are the safest and surest remedies for indigestion, constipation, loss of appetite, memory, mental, physical and nervous debility and all sorts of urinary disorders, improve impoverished blood.

Price per tin of 40 Pills Rs. 5 & per tola of Oil Rs. 10.

Both Purchased at a time Rs. 11/4 -

Medical Advice and a Medical Book containing 128 pages sent Gratis and Post Free.

RAJ VAIDYA NARAYANJI KESHAVJI

Head Office :-Jamnagar, Kathiawar, (India.)

Branch :-No. 187, Kalbadevi Road,
24-8-1919. BOMBAY.

Empire Hindu Hotel

Opposite Victoria Terminus
Bombay.

(Central Situation)
Strictly Vegetarian
Charges Moderate

Fitted with
Electric Lift, Fans and Lights.

TELEGRAMS: } TELEPHONE

"FOOD," BOMBAY. } 2789.
22-8-19.

Saffron ? Saffron ?? Saffron ???
If you wish to buy genuinely pure and best Saffron it is
SUN

BRAND

SAFFRON

ONLY

It has been largely used by Jain Temples, Maharajas, Durbars, Hakims and Vaidyas all over the country for the last 75 years and is well known for its purity and genuineness.

S. NARAYEN & Co.,

17-2-18

21, Humnum Street, Fort Bombay.

REVOLUTION IN SHORTHAND.

There are systems and systems, but that one is the most "practical" which can be written with a pen or pencil straight away on unruled paper, without thickening, positions, grammalogues, multitudes of rules and exceptions, arbitrary word-signs and contractions, long lists of phrases and various other impediments to speed. The New "ROYAL-SPEED" Course of 12 Lessons, incorporated by Expert who introduced the Original Duployan Joined-Vowels Scheme in the East, has all the advantages of a modern down-to-date system, and is acquired by Boys and Girls of 12, in a fraction of time. Quickest Results and Highest Efficiency are Guaranteed. Personal or Postal Tuitions Prospective pupils must investigate, as interested parties seem to recommend the only system known to them.

NATIONAL BUSINESS COLLEGE,
1st Floor, Luxmi Bldg., Lamington Road, Bombay.

"EVERYTHING FOR EVERYBODY"

National Standard Portable Typewriter No. 3 (10 lbs.) Rs. 100
Oliver No. 5 (American Rebuilt) B.S. & Tab. Rs. 175; No. 7 " 200
Empire No. 1 (Do.) in good working order " 80
Multikopy Typewriter Carbons, per Box of 100 sheets, " 1
Webster Brand " Ribbons for all machines, Doz. " 21
Typewriter Oil (best 1 oz. bot.) or Eberhard Erasers, Doz. " 1
Safety Razor, Rivals Gillette, with 6 Gillette Blades (best) " 1
Envelope Making Machine (to make 30,000 per day), New " 30
Conklin's Self-filling Fountain Pen (non-leakable) Gold Nib " 6

GENERAL CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE,
20-4-19. Post Box No. 424, Bombay.

HYPNOTISM

PERSONAL MAGNETISM,
WILL POWER,
NERVE FORCE—

Call what you will—

Is the intangible power that controls human destiny. It is the key to all business and social success. This power is no special gift of any one. It is latent in every one. We help you how to display it. By our system, you can learn in a few days at your own home and not only achieve success yourself, but you can influence the mind, health and actions of others to a remarkable degree.

Write immediately for our free booklet—The Pride of India.

THE LATENT LIGHT CULTURE,
TINNEVELLY, S. INDIA.

Batlivala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 1 each
bottle of 100.

Batlivala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 2 each
bottle of 100.

Batlivala's Ague Mixture of Fever, Malaria, Influenza etc.

Batlivala's Ague Pills for Malaria, Fever, Influenza etc.

Batlivala's Tonic pills for pale people & nervous breaks down.

Batlivala's Tooth Powder of Preserving Teeth

Batlivala's Ringworm ointment for Ringworm Dhobi Itch etc.

May be had from all dealers in medicines or from
Dr. H. L. Batlivala Sons & Co., Ltd.

No. 12, Worli, 18, Bombay.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESS :—" Doctor Batlivala Dader "

THE BOMBAY CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK.

HEAD OFFICE :—Apollo Street, St., Bombay.

DIRECTORS:—The Hon. Sir Fazalbhoy Currimbhoy (Chairman), Sir Vithaldas D. Thackersey, the Hon. Mr. Lalabhai Samaldas, Sir Stanley Reed, the Hon. Mr. C. V. Mehta, the Chief of Ichalkaranji, G.K. Devadhar, Esq., the Hon. Sir P. D. Pattani, the Raja Saheb of Malegaon.
Share Capital (fully paid)Rs. 7,00,000

1 Deposits fixed for one year and shorter or longer periods are accepted. Rates and other particulars may be ascertained from the under signed.

2 The Bank finances only registered Co-operative Societies in the Bombay Presidency on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency.

3. Accounts are audited half-yearly by a special Government Auditor, and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the "Bombay Government Gazette."

20-5-17. VAIKUNTH L. MERTA, Manager.

Clean
 Wholesome
 Intelligent
 Entertainment
 IS A GREAT STEP

IN

SOCIAL REFORM.

When deciding on a
PLACE OF AMUSEMENT TWO
 ESTABLISHMENTS

Should at once leap to the mind,

THE EXCELSIOR
 BOMBAY'S PREMIER MODERN THEATRE
 AND

THE EMPIRE
 BOMBAY'S MOST PALATIAL
 PICTURE THEATRE

Where Film Plays of Distinction are shown
 Every Week.

A
 Great Cinema Masterpiece
 is shown,

Both theatres are near the Bori Bunder
 and are run by the

EXCELSIOR SYNDICATE.

The Pioneer of Bombay's
AMUSEMENT WORLD.

FURUKAWA & CO.

TOKIO

The Largest Manufacturers
in the East

OF

ELECTRIC BARE COPPER CONDUCTORS,

ELECTRIC UNDERGROUND CABLES,

ELECTRIC INSULATED WIRES,

ELECTRIC ACCESSORIES,

INGOTS, RODS, WIRES,

SHEETS, TUBES,

Etc., Etc.,

All our wires are made in accordance with the standard of the British Cable Makers' Association and are tested and approved by leading firms in India.

SOLE AGENTS IN INDIA AND BURMA.

TATA, SONS & CO.,

BOMBAY & CALCUTTA.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS Ltd.

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.
Narsari Building, Fort, BOMBAY.

Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

11-8-17.

When YOUR EYES

need to be examined by QUALIFIED OCULISTS or by SCIENTIFIC REFRACTIONISTS of 26 years experience, FREE OF CHARGE, you cannot do better than GO TO

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR & CO.

The leading firm of Oculists, Eyesight Specialists, Manufacturing Opticians and suppliers of the patented

"KRYPTOK"

(Invisible one-piece bifocal lens.)

Toric, and all kinds of lenses,—Cylindrical, Spherical, cylindrical, Prismatic, &c., from pebbles as well as from best quality crown glass.

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR

Eyesight Specialist,

With 26 Years' Practical Experience.

Holds Exceptional Testimonials from H. H. The Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, the Hon'ble Sir Lawrence Jenkins the Hon. Mr. Justice Batty, Mrs. Batty, the Hon. Sir N. S. Jhondavarkar, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beaman, the Hon'ble Sir S. L. Bachelor, the Hon'ble Sir John Heaton Mr. H. G. Jell, M. V. O., Col. R. H. Forman, B. A. M. C., P. M. O. Bo. Brigade, Lieut. Col. G. H. Bull, M. D., I. M. S., Lieut-Colonel Peters M. B., I. M. S., and other high personages.

(7) 379, HORNBY ROW,

Opposite the Government Telegraph Office,
Fort, BOMBAY.

INTENDING ASSUREES ARE INVITED TO COMPARE THE RATES AND CONDITIONS OF

The Empire of India Life Assurance Company, Limited.

WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.

Head Office 11 Elphinstone Circle, BOMBAY.

SEE REPORT AND OPINIONS OF THE PRESS AS TO THE REMARKABLE PROGRESS MADE BY THE COMPANY.

ENDOWMENT NON-FORFEITABLE POLICY FOR RS. 3,000.

PAYABLE AT AGE 60 OR AT DEATH, IF PREVIOUS, WITH PROVISION

If, at any time, the assured under this plan should desire to cease paying any more premiums, he may obtain a paid-up Policy for such a proportion of the original sum assured as the number of premiums paid bears to the number of premiums payable. Thus a gentleman who had assured at age 30 for a Policy of Rs. 3,000 payable at age 60 or at Death, if previous, after 5 years' payments, would be entitled to a Free paid-up Policy for Rs. 500 free of future payments.

SOME OF THE DISTINCTIVE FEATURES.

- * Funds invested in Government Securities and in accordance with the Indian Trusts Act
- Policy holders can appoint their own Directors.
- 90 per cent. of Profits to Participating Policy holders.
- Lapsed policies revived without Medical Certificate.
- Liberal Surrender Values 40 per cent. of the Tabular premium paid.
- Immediate payment of Claims.
- Medical fees and stamps on Policies are payable by the Company.

The sum assured is PAYABLE IN FULL should death occur even immediately after payment of the first premium.

GUARANTEED INSURANCE.—This Company issues Guaranteed Policies in situation of trust and responsibility. It is specially authorized to guarantee the employes of the Post Office

Proposal Forms and full Particulars may be obtained from any local Agent in India or from

ALLUM, BHARUCHA & CO. Managers.

MONTHLY PREMIUM.

AT AGE 20, Rs. 6-9-0.

AT AGE 25, Rs. 7-8-0.

AT AGE 30, Rs. 8-14-0.

AT AGE 35, Rs. 10-18-0.

AT AGE 40, Rs. 13-12-0.

AT AGE 45, Rs. 18-10-0

11-9-10.

IN INDIA

EVERY ONE KNOWS.

whom it does concern that we are foremost in supplying the best COSSI SILK SUIT PIECES available for the season. These pieces are strong, fancy and comparable, and have been specially manufactured for India's Market. Each piece guaranteed for One Suit Complete.

Price Rs. 10 per piece.

Write to—THE BHARGAVA COMMERCIAL SOCIETY,
3-18, Benares City.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER. Contract Rates for Advertisements.

Number of insertions.	1 Inch.		2 Inches.		3 Column.		4 Column.		5 Column.		Page.
	Rs.	s.	Rs.	s.	Rs.	s.	Rs.	s.	Rs.	s.
18	11	0	18	0	26	0	30	0	60	0	67	0
26	16	0	25	0	30	0	50	0	87	0	155	0
52	25	0	38	0	50	0	87	0	155	0	300	0

Casual advertisements at Rs. 4 per line for the 1st insertion and Rs. 2 per line of succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

WONDERFUL TONIC AND

MOUTH-REFRESHER

JINTAN.

This is a safe and efficient remedy in all kinds of diseases or disturbances of the digestive organs. It is composed entirely of VEGETABLE INGREDIENTS made from the prescription of the following eminent medical men viz—

NORIHRO MIWA, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy,
ZENJIRO INOUE, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy
and testified as to its efficacy by

Baron J. MATSUMOTO, M.D., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Army.

T. MITAMURA Esq., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Navy.

As a digestive it is unequalled and will not disturb the functions of the most delicate stomach. Its antiseptic properties render it very efficacious in warding off disease and at the same time it imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath of the user.

By virtue of its aroma, it effectually masks the odour of Tobacco and Alcoholic Spirits.

It acts beneficially on the vocal cords and has found much favour with public speakers, actors, singers and those whose vocation necessitates a severe strain on the throat.

GOOD FOR

Biliousness, Headache, Vertigo, Nausea, Indigestion, Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, etc., etc.

To maintain general health 2 to 3 pills may be taken occasionally, well masticated.

Price—Small Packet Rs. 0-1-0. Middle Packet, with Tin case., Rs. 0-4-0. Large Packet with fancy case., Rs. 1-0-0

Prepared by Messrs. MORISHITA Co., OSAKA, JAPAN.

Sole Agents: Jintan Agency (G. R. Chaubal), Juma Masjid, BOMBAY.

FOR PAINS
AND ACHES
SPRAINS ETC.
USE:—

AMRUTANJAN.

The magical pain balm extant. Cures all aches & pains. Costs 8 As. Sold everywhere.

By Appointment to H. E. the Governor Sir George Sydenham Clarke of Bombay.

HARIDAS VALJI,
(KING OF INDIAN CONFECTIONERS)
Highest Confectioner, Caterer and Grand Military Contractor.

Proprietor—RATINATH,
Chitra Bazar & Grant Road,
BOMBAY.

20-4-19.

DENTISTRY.

Extractions Painless;
Terms Very Moderate;
Gold Crown, Bar and Bridge Work a Speciality (teeth without plate);
Latest Successful Treatment for Pyorrhoea (pus in gums).

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

Hours: 8-1-30 & 5-7-30; Daily.
(Sundays—From 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.)

ADROOS BUILDING,
NEW CHARNI ROAD,
GIMBORN, BOMBAY. } 1-4-19.

K. R. AMAT,
Surgeon Dentist.

THE INDIAN * SOCIAL * REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY MORNING.

Office:—EMPIRE BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD, FORT.

Editor:—K. NATARAJAN

Vol. XXX. BOMBAY—SUNDAY, DECEMBER 21, 1919. No. 16.

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard."
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

The Rev. D. Mackichan. The English Press on Martial Law Excesses. The Reform Bill in the House of Lords. The Gandhi-Candler Correspondence. An Unseemly Controversy, Indians in East Africa. The New National Platform. I. The Problem of Christianity in India.	Recollections of the Late Mr. Viresalingam Pantulu. The Borstal System, in the Punjab. I. What Bombay is in most Need of. Rural Credit in the Philippines. "Culture, the Underlying Purpose of the Nation." The Presidency Women's Sports and Games Tournament.
---	--

NOTES.

The Rev. D. Mackichan: The impending retirement from the Principalship of the Wilson College and early departure to his native land of the Rev. Dr. Mackichan, will cause a gap in the educational and civic life of Bombay. His great gifts of mind and character, his towering personality, have left their impress on higher education in this Presidency. Several times Vice-Chancellor of the Bombay University, and always during well-nigh half-a-century a most influential member of its Senate, Dr. Mackichan's share in shaping the course and policy of its educational system has been necessarily very striking. That, during recent years, the natural caution of his Scottish ancestry, has been rather strongly reinforced by the equally natural reluctance of advancing years, to move with the times or even to recognise that the times are moving, goes without saying. But in all that he has advocated or opposed, he has been actuated by the sole object of making the education imparted by the Bombay University the very best in India, and by a transparently sincere love for the Bombay student and the earnest desire to advance his interests. In fact, during several years of association in the Senate, one does not remember ever hearing Dr. Mackichan speak of Indian students except as "our students," "our young men," showing how intimately inwoven in his deepest consciousness the well-being of the Indian student had become. His great and commanding talents, had they been applied to any other walk of life, would have brought him to the front rank. They were devoted in the spirit of his religion—which he, if we may be forgiven for making the observation, rather interpreted in a certain spirit of Imperialism which became the dominating principle of English and European politics during the last quarter of the last century—to the cause of Indian education. Even before the destruction of the German Empire with which the spirit of dominant Imperialism originated, thoughtful Christians had begun to perceive that their religion had departed from and should be brought back to its pristine ideal of service to, not the mastery of, mankind. We are inclined to think that Dr. Mackichan did not feel himself quite in sympathy with this changed angle of vision. However that may be, we shall miss the impressive presence, the genial spirit and the ripe experience of the Rev. Dr. Mackichan, and our kindest thoughts and wishes are with him and Mrs. Mackichan in, we trust, the many years of helpfulness to mankind and to India which await them in their native land.

The English Press on Martial Law Excesses. Reuter has sent some excerpts from the comments in the English press on the revelations before Lord Hunter's Committee. Though non-official witnesses on the peoples' side, acting on the advice of the Congress Committee, have refrained from tendering evidence before the Committee on account of the Indian leaders undergoing sentences of imprisonment not being allowed to attend the enquiry, the admissions of the officials responsible for the administration of Martial Law in Amritsar and Lahore, constitute a damning indictment of the spirit and the policy of the measures adopted by military and other officers. Jallianwala Bagh, where five hundred people were shot down in cold blood, was the climax, though the bombing at Gujranwala ran it close. General Dyer who personally directed what the London Times and Manchester Guardian do not hesitate to call the Jhallianwala massacres, produced a telegram from the Lieutenant-Governor approving of his action. The Viceroy, it will be remembered, took upon himself the responsibility for giving Sir Michael O'Dwyer a free hand, in his speech at the last meeting of the Legislative Council at Simla. The Government of India introduced and passed an Indemnity Act to cover the measures which are so severely commented upon in the English press. The Manchester Guardian is an independent, well-balanced, Liberal daily, and it describes the shooting at Amritsar "as though a madman had been let loose to massacre at large." The Daily News regards the concealment of the whole affair for eight months as one of its most shocking features. The Indian press was muzzled. Pleaders were not allowed to enter the province. The Anglo-Indian press so far as it had knowledge of these happenings, and yet preserved rigid silence, or rated the Indian press for its criticisms, cannot be acquitted of complicity in the whole affair. He who allows oppression shares the crime. The best of the Anglo-Indian papers in this matter have been no better than the worst. Lord Acton has left behind him some hints to the historian as to the proper discharge of his duties. The journalist is the historian of contemporary events and Acton's last injunction applies to him as much as to the historian of events that are past. "Crimes by constituted authorities worse than the crimes by Madame Tussaud's malefactors. Murder may be done by legal means, by plausible and profitable war, as well as by dose or dagger." We trust that the British public, now that it knows some of the facts, will take adequate measures to mark its sense of these "crimes by constituted authorities in the Punjab."

We say "some of the facts", for the burden of letters from the Punjab has been that the full truth of what the province has had to go through is yet to be known.

The Reform Bill in the House of Lords: The second reading of the Reform Bill was passed unanimously by the House of Lords on the 12th instant. Lord Sinha is reported to have read so rapidly his speech in proposing the motion, that he could hardly be heard in parts of it in the gallery. The unique privilege and responsibility which devolved on him, might well have weighed heavily on even a forensic veteran like the Indian Under Secretary. The death of his daughter-in-law, married only two months ago, which occurred two days previously in London, no doubt, added to his trepidation. When allowance is made for these considerations, one cannot still help feeling that Lord Sinha's speech was far more apologetic than it need and should have been. Mr. Montagu in the House of Commons argued on the whole that the Bill did not give too little, while his lieutenant in the House of Lords largely based his plea on the ground that it did not give too much. It is not necessary to go in detail over Lord Sinha's grounds. An Indian in that position could certainly have exhibited a more robust faith in his country and his countrymen, and we are not sure that even the Lords were not surprised at the extreme moderation of Lord Sinha's pleading for the cause of his country. Moderation, after all, is good only as a leaven—it is not meat and drink to man or beast. Lord Sinha had, no doubt, a great purpose in keeping such a tight hold on his natural emotions. The Lords passed the second reading unanimously. In spite of Lord Selborne's great prestige, this result is unlikely to have been achieved without considerable preliminary negotiation, not excluding perhaps the exercise of the very highest influence in the Empire. Reuter cabled that Mr. Montagu had the honour of being received in audience by His Majesty on the 10th instant.

The Gandhi-Candler Correspondence. The letters which have been exchanged between Mr. Candler, Editor of the Haq, the Punjab official newspaper, and Mr. Gandhi, regarding certain animadversions in the Haq on Mr. Gandhi's efforts to promote Hindu-Muslim unity, illustrate the dangers of official journalism controlled by an Editor who, on his own confession, is ignorant not only of Indian etiquette but the amenities of public controversy. Mr. Candler seems to have thought that he was putting a poser to Mr. Gandhi by asking in his journal whether he (Mr. Gandhi) was prepared to get his daughter married to a Mahomedan, in proof of his sincerity regarding Hindu-Muslim unity. Mr. Candler professes that he was unaware that this was offensive until he was told by a Hindu friend that the question might appear to be deliberately offensive and in bad taste, in view of Indian etiquette and tradition. We do not think that there is anything intrinsically offensive in such a question if asked in the right spirit; but we may take the liberty of telling Mr. Candler that, Indian etiquette and tradition apart, a question such as this, put in the course of a political controversy, would be regarded as violating the decencies of public controversy in every part of the world where gutter journalism does not bask in the sunshine of official patronage. We are sure that Mr. Candler would never have dreamt of asking whether Earl Curzon will give his daughter in marriage to Mr. Lloyd George's son or whether Mr. Lloyd George would care for such a matrimonial alliance, as a proof of the sincerity of the Coalition of the parties in England. The Punjab Government has enough on hand to vindicate without the addition of the irrelevant vulgarities of such essays in official journalism. The sooner it closes down the Haq and sets Mr. Candler to the kind of work for which, as his article which we print today shows, he is eminently qualified, the better will it be for itself and the province.

An Unseemly Controversy. We regret the unseemly controversy that has ensued on the presentation of an address in the name of the Poona people to Mr. Tilak on his return from his legal and political mission to England. We had occasion recently to allude to the opposition to social reform which has so conspicuously marked his career as a political leader, and to point out why social reformers should hesitate to enroll themselves in a political party which derives its inspiration from him. His opposition to social reform has been all the more inexplicable on the ground of conviction, owing to the fact that in his own circle he has in some notable respects given effect to the principles of social reform. His voyage to England was itself an act of practical social reform, even though Mr. Tilak may in deference to orthodoxy undergo prayaschit for having done so. But, apart from these differences, we think that all shades of opinion might well have joined in welcoming home a veteran of his great intellectual ability, his scholarship, and unblemished private life. It was a plucky act on Mr. Tilak's part, at his age, to have undertaken the long sea voyage and the discomforts of a prolonged stay in England, during a large part of which he engaged himself in public work on behalf of his country. It is to us a matter of much satisfaction that his influence in England was steadily exerted on the side of moderation. Serious as our differences with Mr. Tilak have been in the past, and hesitate as we must to forecast the course of his politics in the future, we cannot but recognise that in his own way he has filled an important (and, who can say, unnecessary?) role in our public life, and that he may yet prove a potent constructive force, if he brings his great powers, hitherto chiefly employed in pulling down, to the task of building up an Indian nation in the new opportunities that are opening out to Indian workers.

Indians in East Africa. Mr. Gandhi has received the following cablegram from Mr. Andrews, who is at present in East Africa at Nairobi:—"East African situation now most critically dangerous because united attempt being made by European Associations to close the door against future immigration and to stop Indian franchise. The chief reason is stated to be that through Indian contact depravity is the result but advance under Christian western civilisation. Government economic commission report recently published takes same attitude mentioning specifically Indian moral depravity and approving South African exclusion policy. Intense indignation expressed here by local Indian Congress gathering which was remarkable for its weight and numbers. I have decided on urgent request to stay till January here. Congress Committee decided on my suggestion to abandon claim for preferential treatment in German East Africa while demanding complete continuance of all existing rights. Circulate and explain situation." Knowing as we do that Mr. Andrews has the same aversion to superlatives as we have, we regard this message as of alarming significance. We trust that the Government of India will promptly intervene with all its resources of remonstrance and protest. Surely, we are not so helpless as to suffer this kind of thing to happen.

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, DECEMBER 21, 1919.

THE NEW NATIONAL PLATFORM. I.

We are glad to see that the urgent need of drawing up a programme based on the social and national needs of the country, and of making a concerted effort to give effect to it, is coming to be generally recognised. The Hon. Mr. Paranjpye outlined such a programme on a limited scale recently in Poona. Professor Kale in a letter to the press last week urges the same view. The Leader of Allahabad has enlarged on the idea and the Sanj Vartman of Bombay has pressed it forcibly on its readers in a recent number. We have been working at the idea for a considerable time now. The time is now come to indicate briefly our conclusions which, we need hardly say, are of a tentative character. Such a programme can be finally drawn up by a number of trained and experienced men sitting down together and applying their minds to it free from the distractions of party strife.

The first thing that strikes one in trying to visualise the Indian national problem is the division of the population by a number of religions. It is futile to hope that any one of these religions will ever establish itself as the sole religion of the Indian people even nominally. The problem of relieving the country of the dangers of sectarian rivalries should be solved in a different way. Religion should become a personal matter—a thing between a man and his Maker. It should make no rift in social or family life if one member is a Christian, another is a Mahomedan, a third is a Hindu and so on. In other words, Indian nationalists should cultivate and encourage the spirit of active religious toleration, in place of the passive one which has prevailed in India from time immemorial. In doing so, they will set an example to many other nations besides our own. The idea of religious toleration was born in India centuries before it was recognised and adopted in Europe. Let India have the glory of giving a new and more fruitful interpretation to this ancient heritage of ours, in view of the present needs of the country. On the forefront of the new programme we place the promotion of this active religious toleration. We realise that it will be the one which can be most easily utilised to create prejudice and opposition against the programme. But it is, in our view, the most important in our scheme, and prejudice and opposition must be faced and satisfied.

The question of caste is one affecting the Hindu population alone. It is curious that while Hindus will admit the potentiality of other religions to raise their votaries in the spiritual scale, they do not think that their own religion can do an equal service to persons of all castes within its fold. Because of this, our new programme must declare in emphatic terms that all men have absolutely equal spiritual, moral and intellectual potentialities, and it should be the aim of the Indian statesman and reformer to convert by every means these potentialities to actualities. And this applies to women also. Women and Sudras were specially marked out by the ancient lawgivers, for reasons the merits of which we need not discuss, for repressive treatment, and it should be the object of the new programme to remedy this ancient wrong. Not only justice but expediency and national necessity dictate this policy. Women and Sudras are, after all, the foundations on which society rests. It is they who do the daily drudgery, the divine drudgery, which keeps the wheels of the social machine going. It is by enabling them to rise to the full height of their stature, that the Indian nation can be helped to make its full contribution to the service of humanity.

There is a great danger which we must take immediate steps to guard against. Our social drawbacks and defects are many, but in one respect we enjoy an advantage over western nations. We refer to the sentiment against strong drink inculcated by all our religions and ingrained in our Indian nature. This sentiment has been somewhat disturbed by the impact of western example and, we regret to have to say, by the attitude of Government. This is no time for recrimination. The department of drink will be soon under the control of Indian Ministers and Indian electorates. Total Prohibition, should be the motto of all Indian statesmanship. No Indian Minister should have any truck with this evil. Firmly, unhesitatingly, resolutely, the policy of Total Prohibition should be proclaimed at the first opportunity on the opening of the new Councils, and we should never rest till this terrible racial poison is placed totally beyond the reach of our men, women and children. This has been done in the United States in spite of the absence of a national tradition, such as we have, against the use of liquor, and it could and should have been done in India long ago. But there is no excuse any longer for us to hang back.

If we have to keep liquor out of reach of our people, we should bring education within the reach of all. The ultimate goal should be to make the educational highway from the primary to the post-graduate stage free to all, to men as well as women. No child should be debarred by penury to make the utmost of its God-given talents by suitable education. Much more shall have to be done to redeem the childhood of India from the criminal neglect and consequent wastage which is its lot at present. A recent writer has said that the rate of infant mortality in a country is the crucial test of the efficiency of its administration and of the soundness of its civilisation. All credit is due to Lady Chelmsford for taking up the work of child-welfare and pushing it to public notice. The tendency of thought now reveals the essential unity of the spiritual and the political. The final verdict of history on Indian statesmanship will turn on what it does for India's little ones. Inasmuch as he does his utmost for them, the Indian administrator will ensure for himself salvation here and hereafter.

The education of women should take a specially prominent place in the national education programme. Indian education has fallen short of expectations, because women have been practically left out of it. It cannot be too often repeated that the education of a single girl is of more social value than the education of a single boy. For this reason. The mothers of a race make the tradition of a race and conserve it more than men. Slowly the Bible of each race is writ, and the pen that writes it is in the hands of the mother and wife. If we had attended to women's education as much as to men's, the notion that education is a means of money-making would have gained far less ground than it has unfortunately done. Our programme must give women's education its rightful place. This will be useless, unless the social customs which abbreviate a girl's schooling, be dealt with. Infant marriage must be legally prohibited and the marriage of a girl below the age of secondary education, discouraged. The age of consent should be raised. The franchise should be conferred on women at the first opportunity, to mark the acceptance in our national movement of women on a footing of absolute equality with men.

From every side, come complaints regarding the alarming growth of prostitution. There has evidently been a break-down of the social system, due chiefly, we think, to the high rates of mortality since the beginning of this century from famine, plague and other epidemics. The subject has to be carefully investigated by a commission and legislation undertaken on its recommendations. The subject has been studied carefully by devoted men and women in England and America, and the results of their experience should be utilised. Empirical action inspired by the desire to get the evil out of sight, will do more harm than good. The roots of the evil must be exposed, and the remedy applied at the roots. Above all, it should not be forgotten that the woman is more often than not the victim and not the criminal. She is more sinned against than sinning. There should be one standard of purity for men and women, and no law which, expressly or impliedly, recognises a difference in this respect, is likely to do good. The women of India should make their voice heard on this point, and our new platform should furnish them with ample opportunities for doing so.

THE PROBLEM OF CHRISTIANITY IN INDIA.

(By "KOTGARH.")

I.

Mr. Manilal Parekh's two articles upon this subject are intensely interesting. With the facts of denationalization, lack of colour, of life, of spirituality in large sections of the Christian community, the present writer agrees. Even with Mr. Parekh's conclusion as to the only remedy he feels impelled to agree also, if "come ye out and be ye separate" means for those who are true lovers of India and of the Lord Christ, that they should break for God's glory and India's good from the shackles of that great foreign system of thoughts and discipline which arrogates to itself the name of "The Indian Church."

Possibly the writer misapprehends Mr. Parekh's position upon one point, if so he craves indulgence in advance for his error. Does Mr. Parekh mean that it is a defect in the Christian community that caste differences are not recognised, or does he mean that difference of position is ignored and that complete equality of social status is taught, resulting in a highly unpleasant attitude of self-assertion upon the part of converts from the lower classes towards those who are their social superiors by right of generations of education, culture, and self-respect? If the latter is his meaning one can appreciate it, and even sympathize—especially as regards the astonishing lack of perception displayed by so many missionaries and other Europeans in this respect, together with the evils and complications resulting.

If, however, he would wish to perpetuate differences upon a basis of caste, rather than upon that of culture, refinement and education, one is inclined to trust that he will not carry the more thoughtful section either of Christians or Hindus with him. Surely the only basis upon which a family or individual can be considered to be upon a higher plane than another will be in the possession of finer traits of character, a nicer sense of honour, a higher intellectual and spiritual life, and a wider and deeper culture. Any other basis of differentiation—whether of caste or wealth or official position—is artificial, and as we grow towards the light, should be less and less able to win our allegiance and support.

One agrees with Mr. Parekh that the indiscriminate baptism of multitudes of ignorant outcastes, has operated against Hindus of a higher social order accepting the Christian religion. But is it merely because they are outcastes? It is not true to the spirit of the noblest and truest in Hinduism. Valmiki, Tiruvalluvar, Ram Das, Kabir and a host of other saints and sages, are not the less revered because they were of low-caste. It is even held their glory, and it is the glory of India that this is so.

Had the multitude of outcastes whom the missionaries have swept into the Christian fold, come to the Lord Christ with the simple devotion exhibited by Sudama Bhagat when he went to Dwarkapuri, and subsequently evinced that indifference to worldly advantage displayed by him, can those who know even a little of the heart of India doubt for a moment that the impression made upon spiritually-minded Indians would have been tremendous?

It would seem rather that the repelling feature of the transaction lay not so much in the fact that the converts were outcastes, as in the knowledge that these people had changed their religion without undergoing any spiritual experience which would justify such a step, and that their object in deserting the gods of their fathers, was material and worldly rather than spiritual.

Obviously they were not to blame; their ignorance and degradation are sufficient justification for their action. If they came "for the loaves and fishes" who will fail to sympathize with them in their desire to improve their condition? At the same time it cannot but repel a thoughtful man to feel that a large portion of the community with which he will have to cast in his lot if he feels impelled to accept a great spiritual truth, are themselves quite unconscious of that truth, and look upon the path which he has come to consider the way of salvation, as a way of gain and worldly aggrandizement. In this way, the reckless proletarianising of the Indian Christian body undoubtedly must repel those who feel the call of Christ and must hinder many from following Him.

This is but one of a number of factors at present operating to make it difficult for a self-respecting man to become a Christian in India.

And yet in considering Mr. Parekh's article it must be born in mind that long before "proletarianising" began to take place, Hindus were disinclined to accept the religion of Christ as brought to them from the West. Indeed it might almost be said that the attempt to bring about the so-called "mass-movement" among the outcastes was "a council of desperation" upon the part of the missionaries—the outcome of their lack of success in converting the higher types of Indian manhood to their doctrine and system.

The above would seem to indicate that the causes of the failure of Christianity to win a place in the heart of India, as enumerated by Mr. Parekh, are more or less subsidiary and that if we are to get at the real difficulty we must go deeper.

About this deeper ultimate cause, the writer of this article ventures a suggestion. In order to do so he must perforce touch upon his own personal experience since arriving in India nearly sixteen years ago, and in doing so wishes to beg the indulgence of his readers, and to ask them to remember that he is a Christian, and is writing as one.

He came to teach not only Christ, but Christianity in the garb in which he had received it from his fathers. He considered it axiomatic that the message he brought was the perfection of all truth—that anything beyond it was superfluous, that any truth taught by any other religion was better taught by his own, and that India in order to achieve her salvation had nothing to do beyond accepting that truth with regard to the Lord Christ which the West had worked out for her under the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

In the course of time he began to study the propagandist literature of missions, and soon came to the conclusion that if Christianity had been presented to him in such a manner he would himself have been unable to accept it.

As a consequence he decided to study the greater Upanishads, the Darśanas and Vedānt Sūtras, and also to steep himself in the atmosphere of the later Puranic literature which so largely influences the minds of the masses, with the object of being able to demonstrate to Indians how untrue to all experience and unworthy of consideration the whole Hindu attitude towards life was.

As regards his purpose for beginning this study, the result was distinctly unsatisfactory. Of course he found much that was intellectually unacceptable, much that was demonstrably fallacious, as he would have found in the scripture of his own or any other religious system. On the other hand, it began to dawn upon him "before many months had elapsed that these works contained the intellectual efforts of those who were seeking to grapple in the boldest and noblest manner with the deep problems of life, its meaning and its purpose.

Before long he discovered to his astonishment that in attempting to solve some of these problems the ancient thinkers of India had often shown a finer spirit and a human intellectual perception than the great minds of the early Church during the centuries when it was taking shape and evolving its creeds.

The writer made another, to him, most interesting discovery. He found that there were vast and important areas of thought and speculation upon the meaning of life with which the Church had never dealt, or with which it had dealt most unsatisfactorily. Upon turning to the Hindu scriptures he found—not so much in the actual solutions arrived at as in the general tendency of thought and method of approach—the key to much that the Christian Religion as evolved in the West, has never attempted to explain, or about which its teachings have been frankly agnostic.

II

As these new vistas opened out it was a shock to discover how highly disconnected and fragmentary the religion taught by the West as Christianity really was even at its best. As ordinarily taught in this land it was worse than that—it was puerile. The Lord Christ has taught that if we desire to enter the Kingdom of Heaven we must become "as little children," but this does not mean that we are to become childish, and a man would have to be that to accept much of what is taught here in the name of Christ.

However, and admitting the above, the greatest defects of Christianity as taught here at present appear to be negative rather than positive. It consists in an array of mighty life-giving truths, each of them developed one-sidedly, laying vast stress upon certain aspects of life and entirely oblivious to others equally important.

While the above view-point was taking possession of the writer, he found that it in no sense diminished his faith in Christ; on the contrary, the Lord shone with a new and higher glory in the light of a clearer understanding of the significance of much that hitherto had lain hidden. The light from the Hindu scriptures had come to fill the gaps in Christianity as he had known it, and to make of it a connected whole.

This has been your correspondent's own experience. He came to teach and staid to learn. He has found the idea at the back of the whole Hindu religious development of intense spiritual significance to his own spiritual progress, and has been deeply influenced by it. Yet he is not less Christian—only more Hindu in his concept, and he humbly believes that in being more Hindu in his outlook upon life he is more Christian than he could otherwise have been.

You may ask the relation of all these to the Problem of Christianity in India. The answer is that individual experience lies very close to the solution of any spiritual or religious problem. In this case it has been, and is, most difficult to express, and your correspondent has re-written this paper four times in his attempts to do so. Even now he feels far from satisfied that it makes clear the truth he wishes to convey.

His conviction is this:—The missionaries came strong in the belief that they had everything to teach and nothing to learn. They came to make India Christian, and by Christian they meant that she should accept whole and entire the Christian system of the West, developed as the truth of Christ had reacted upon the Western temperament. Their conception was that Christianity should replace the age-long religious development of India. This was their purpose, but unless the writer greatly errs, the Divine purpose was very different. It was the will of God that the truth of the Lord Christ should be brought to India to be completed and rounded out and made a perfect whole—a soul-satisfying and intellect-satisfying philosophy of life, its meaning and its purpose—by conjunction with what it lacked and the ancient treasure-house of Indian thought and spiritual experience contained. His conviction is further that, though in a great variety of points the Indian spiritual ideal at its best has been both nobler and intellectually sounder than that of Christianity as developed in the West, it nevertheless needs Christ within it in order to realise the goal of its aspirations and the object of all its spiritual labours. All else—all ecclesiastical systems of discipline, all Western modes of thought, may go, but the future faith of mankind, whether it be called Hinduism or Christianity, must settle its relation to that stupendous Personality and the message He brings to the heart of man.

For India's sake and for Christ's sake—aye, and for the world's sake—the poor emasculated parody of what Indian Christianity might be, must go. In East or West, as Mr. Parekh says, there never was such a thing before. Whether it will simply die out, or, waking to a higher ideal, break its bonds, and freed from outside money and outside control be born anew in self-respect and spirituality, no one can say.

One thing seems certain to the writer: When Christian Indians learn to be true to Christ by being true themselves to India, when the voice of the ancient saints of this land, and all the true wisdom of her sages, have their rightful place in their devotions, when it dawns upon their consciousness that all these came before the Lord—partakers in His purpose and preparing man's soul for His advent, and that their teachings are a priceless spiritual heritage—the Old Testament of Indian Christianity, when the Indian followers of Christ turn to the deepest and best in the spiritual life and thought of Hinduism to find the wherewithal to bridge the gaps in their faith we brought them from the West, and thereby learn to fashion it into a coherent and satisfying whole, then and then only will Christ find His true place in this land. Then only will the Indian Christian community cease to be denationalised and at the beck and call of foreigners, and its members will see that the Lord came not to destroy Hinduism but to fulfil it.

Christianity and Hinduism need each other. The best in each is incomplete without the other. The truths of each remain but half truths without the light which each can shed upon the other. As men have learned to see with eyes unblinded by the age-old prejudices and preconceptions that shackle them to-day, they will come to understand that when the divine synthesis has been effected a true Christian will be able to call himself a Hindu, and a true and perfect Hindu will be able to say, "I also am a Christian."

RECOLLECTIONS OF THE LATE MR. VIRESALINGAM PANTULU.

(By Mr. R. VENKATA SIVUDU.)

My recollections of the late Rao Bahadur K. Viresalingam Pantulu date from 1882, the year of my removal from my native village to Rajahmundry for my study, though my intimate acquaintance with him began later on, in the year 1889, when I became his pupil in the College at that place. During those seven years I shared with my boy-comrades of Rajahmundry several of the wild and exaggerated notions current in that town about the reformer. We used to think of him as a hard-headed and even hard-hearted man, who was bent on forcing down the throat of an unwilling society those terrible, nauseous things, the "reforms"! We would therefore shrink from such a one whenever we chanced to meet him in the streets. Some of us even thought that he was entrusted by the powers that be with the function of a General Censor over the conduct of men, and that whatever emanated from his lips was gospel truth to the Government. At times I heard in some public meeting his voice, quavering as much from enthusiasm as from a stubborn asthma, though what he spoke was beyond my comprehension or immediate interest. People, we surmised, naturally dreaded this man who was concerned in ushering in hostile reforms, and who, moreover, did not hesitate to holding up for punishment bribery and other malpractices.

But this was only one side, the sterner side of the man. In those days, the farces of Mr. Viresalingam were a dainty alike to young and old. The weekly Vivaha Varthani might have been a source of dread to those concerned. But to us younger folk, mighty was the interest provided in its lighter, literary side. The sarcastic humour of the leader, the fun and frolic of story and comment—these unreservedly commended themselves to the reader.

Later on when I became his student, I saw things more closely and clearly. Mr. Viresalingam was a power in the College. Not even the good Principal Metcalfe who, like the poet's village preacher, "Nor e'er had changed, nor wished to change his place," had dedicated the full term of his educational service in India to the prosperity of the Rajahmundry College, wielded half the influence which Mr. Viresalingam exercised over the students. I do not refer merely to his popularity. And it must be said once for all in justice to the deceased that if ever there breathed a man who set a defiant face against the vile art of courting popularity, it was most emphatically Mr. Viresalingam. He was never a hunter after popularity; and yet on many a critical occasion, he was surrounded by scores of loyal students who were most ready to do anything for him. He was most popular and most influential, not because he catered to the whims and fancies of his pupils, nor chose to be guided by them, but because he convinced them of the truthfulness of the cause he advocated and took the reins of guidance entirely into his own hands. Often would Mr. Viresalingam engage himself in earnest and spirited conversation with his pupils on the burning questions of the day. He appeared to us in the class-room, like Socrates before the marketplace of Athens, with an ever-ready and unassailable dialectic. He opened his bosom to us and freely spoke to us of things great and small, without reserve or ceremony. Thus he sought to foster in his students a spirit of bold and independent thinking, especially on the subject of social reform which was dearest to his heart.

THE BORSTAL SYSTEM, IN THE PUNJAB I. (By Mr. EDMUND CANDLER.)

It is only during the last twenty years that we have learnt wisdom in the treatment of the young criminal. Our grandfathers used to hang him; our fathers used to thrash him; we of to-day are very well satisfied if we can make a decent citizen of him. The old notion was that the youthful offender was naturally depraved, an ineradicable sprout of Satan. The treatment prescribed was to whip "the offending Adam" out of him, as a dreadful example, a pariah to be shunned by respectable society. We, of a more merciful generation, have substituted surgery for execution. The jail has become a kind of moral hospital, very much in the manner predicted by Samuel Butler in his "Erewhon."

From fifteen to twenty-one is the plastic age in which character is formed. Statistics compiled after enquires from convicts as to the age in which they commenced a career of crime, show that some sixty per cent practise dishonesty before the age of fifteen, and the remainder, all save a small fraction, before they are twenty-one. Gradually it came to be recognised that the reformation and training of the young offender were the business of the State, and that those who were left to go their own way were as much sinned against as sinning. Such was the primary dictation of humanity and mercy. Apart from the ethical, there was the economic argument,—the salvage of waste, material which might serve a useful purpose in the social system.

The reformatory for juvenile offenders has been a recognised institution since the Reformatory Act was passed in 1854. But it is only in the present century that the "juvenile adult" class of criminal has been provided for in a similar way. The first House of Detention was established at the village of Borstal near Rochester in Kent, from which the Borstal Jail in Lahore and similar institutions derive their name.

The aim of the Borstal institutions is the formation of character by hard work, discipline, drill, combined with individual attention, religious and moral training, and the teaching of some trade,—that is to say, the application in the treatment of adult lads, of the ideals aimed at in the Reformatory. But the peculiar and special feature of the Borstal system is the conditional release of the young prisoner to an approved society, or individual, and a period of one year's probation after the completion of the sentence. How great a stimulus this is to effort, and how admirably it lends itself to the design of the institution, will be gathered from every page of the second and third sections of Mr. Cowan's report. But a visit to the jail itself, better than any abstract exposition, will show what kind of salvage work is being done. Here one will see how the system is calculated to put new heart into a lad, to bring out his personality, and to encourage in him a sense of responsibility and self-respect.

WHAT BOMBAY IS IN MOST NEED OF.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer,
Sir,

Bombay is now passing through an Industrial boom the like of which was never witnessed before. It is the earnest hope of all that it is only an industrial boom of a very healthy kind. There have been several industrial booms in all Western Countries, but, on each occasion, many companies of a questionable nature sprang up, which ultimately came to grief and which even affected the sound concerns. Also, there is the danger of too great an imitation or rivalry in one single line of business. One hopes that the present company promoters instead of adopting the get-rich-quick method, will look to the interests of the companies and of the country and will apply themselves honestly and enthusiastically to the successful management of their concerns. It is most gratifying that, after all, Bombay has awakened herself to the necessity and advantages of having Fire Insurance Companies of her own and that she has also launched on other industries like Woollen Mills, Chemical works, etc. She may also venture, if possible, on Ship-building, Steam Navigation Companies and Machinery and Mill stores manufacture and other key and minor industries for which we now depend on other countries.

But, with all her industrial greatness, there is one thing, Bombay is in most need of and the lack of which has been, more or less, a handicap to her interests. And that is the absence of a weekly Journal, commercial and financial. In England and in America, the number of commercial and financial Journals are legion. Each industry or trade has its own Journal, mostly weeklies; and each industrial or trading centre can boast of several Journals. Whereas, it is most surprising, and it is most lamentable too, that Bombay has not got a powerful commercial weekly to safeguard her various interests. Bengal has in its two Journals, the Capital and the Commerces not to speak of the other journals like Railways, Engineering and Planter's Gazette etc., two powerful commercial weeklies most vigorously and zealously guarding and supporting the interests of jute, coal, tea and other industries. In the whole world, Bombay is the only manufacturing centre, including of course Ahmedabad, that has gone on all these years without a Journal of such a kind and it is wonderful the need for it is not felt even now. Perhaps, the idea is there and it has not been given shape or fulfilled owing to inertia. It is also surprising that no English journalist has thought of starting a financial weekly there. But there is one aspect to be clearly borne in mind in this city of predominantly Indian interests that any journal of the usual Anglo-Indian type or sympathies has not much chances of success. It should be started under Indian auspices with possibly an Indian Board of Directors and it must be an organ to safeguard the several manufacturing and trading interests of Bombay. An English Editor with great Indian Financial experience might be appointed as Editor and there is really no harm in appointing an Englishman as Editor notwithstanding the possible ridicule as against Swadeshi precept and example.

I am quite sure a weekly would be a real success and would pay its way. Why! if there had been a journal started last January, it would have received considerable sums by publishing the prospectuses of the innumerable companies that were floated. Even now, it is not too late. In addition to company prospectuses, it should publish the reports and meetings of all companies with above one or two lakhs of capital. It should have the share and stock market list not only of Bombay but also of other cities; it should have correspondents in all cities and countries where Bombay has business connection as for example, China, Japan, Persian Gulf Region, East Africa etc.; and it should give separate pages for Banks, Insurance Companies, Railways, Mills, Import and Export trade and other trades and industries. In a word, it should be like the Economist or Statist of London or even like the Commerces of Calcutta. I hope the leading Indian merchants will soon start a Journal of this nature.

In this connection, I would like to draw the attention of financial people to one point, though not quite relevant to my theme. To all appearances, it is quite clear Bombay is bursting with money. Also, by our greater exports than imports, exchange is affected and considerable balance is due to India. Will it not be advisable to buy all Indian Securities which are now held in London? The Government, themselves, might encourage this policy of Indians holding the sterling securities which are now held in London. In that way, Bombay will find employments for its surplus funds and also, the balance in favour of India will be decreased. The Government securities held in England run to many millions and then, there are the shares of Railway and other companies. There is no reason why these should not be bought at their market price by Indians. At present, we don't find quotations for these in Indian papers. The proposed weekly should publish the market quotations of all Indian securities and shares held in England.

K.

RURAL CREDIT IN THE PHILIPPINES.

Mr. Mack Cretcher, Assistant Director of Agriculture, contributes an interesting article to the current number of the "Philippine Review" on the remarkable progress of rural credit in those islands during the last three years. He observes: "It may be noted, that the first rural credit society in the Philippine Islands, under Act No. 2508, was organized at Cabanatuan, Nueva Ecija, October, 19, 1916, practically three years ago. By October, 1917, one year from this date, there were about one hundred rural credit associations in operation representing a combined capital stock of over P. 800,000, of which over P. 80,000 had been paid in and was being loaned-out in sums ranging from P. 30 to 100 to members of the association, small farmers who were using the money thus obtained or strictly agricultural purposes, the total membership of the associations at that time being estimated at 20,000 farmers.

At present writing (September, 1919) there are 372 incorporated associations and over one hundred more in various stages of incorporation. The combined capital stock approximates P. 2,500,000 of which more than P. 500,000 has been actually paid in. The total membership of these associations is now more than 40,000, and small loans which aggregate over P. 450,000 have been made to more than 8,000 members. In addition to the above financial activities, the legislature designated the rural credit associations as agents to loan the fund of one million pesos to responsible farmers, to aid them in planting uncultivated areas to rice and corn. The Secretary of Agriculture and Natural Resources finally passes on all applications for loans from this fund received through the associations. Applications for loans to the amount of P. 700,000 through some 200 associations have already been received and favourably acted upon by Secretary Apacible. From this it can readily be seen that a fund of more than P. 1,150,000 has been made available to small farmers through rural credit, where three years ago these same farmers received nothing at all from this source and were forced to accept small loans usurers at ruinous rates in order to carry on their small farming ventures.

"CULTURE, THE UNDERLYING PURPOSE OF THE NATION".

This is the key-note struck by the October-November issue of the Vivekachintamani the organ of the Children's Educational Movement which begins with the culture of women as "wife in India illustrating the triumph of soul over environment" by the thrilling story of a great woman with the child-heart (Mrs. Henry Fawcett) who like "Victoria the Good," though born in the west, has lived to fulfil in her own life and person, the ancient ideal of noble "women" as wife in the land of Aryavarta, the land of noble ideals. Thus doth it call attention to the "Central purpose" of the ancient Indian civilisation. "Underlying every civilisation is a spiritual purpose"—for which the nations have fought valiantly while they live, bequeathing it as an heirloom to a child,—to the young world of the future. This culture, the dearly "cherished treasure" of the nation, is the outcome of their leading thought, which in turn, is their manner of looking at life,—a thing which must be realised as the nation's religion, using that word in its broadest sense. Thus is the "Artha-Narisvara" the highest embodiment of the religious ideal which permeates the "culture"—the "central purpose" of the nation's existence in India and its activities in life. The Indian is the greatest Home-lover in the face of the world, and there is not a soul among them, be he the saint or sinner, hero or walking, who in his heart of hearts does not reverence the noble divine form of women as "shakti" the embodiment of soul-power, at whose feet he will lay down his very life, if need be subordinating all other purposes of life to the "central purpose" of the nation the "casket" so to speak, in which the best traditions of the ancient spiritual civilisation of India is preserved. A man will easily renounce the world, the world of passions, of poll, power and position, in the ecstasy of his devotion to God; but even, such a man like the great Sri Ramakrishna Paramahansa Deva, cannot bear to see a womanly woman (i.e. the ideal woman) in tears. "All his devotion to God will take wings and fly" as the great Saint said if he sees her in tears. No simply "cannot afford it." All honour to the Sadler Commission that they have been able to catch a glimpse of this "central purpose" round which revolves the great spiritual civilisation of national India.

The Presidency Women's Sports and Games Tournament: We have been asked to state that a meeting will be held in Vanita Vishram Hall, Sandhurst Road, opposite the Servants of India Society's Home, to explain the objects and scope of the Bombay Presidency Women's Sports and Games Tournament, on Monday the 22nd instant at 5 P. M. Lady Tata has kindly consented to preside.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postage in advance. In arrears.

Per annum..... Rs. 5-0-0. Rs. 6-0-0

Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, twelve shillings (Rs. 6).

Single copies of the current year can be had at 4 annas each and any back copies at 6 annas each.

"An Open Letter to the Men of India."

The Child.

His deadly peril from prostitution.
Six annas per dozen. V. P. P
Orders may be sent to Methodist Publishing House, LUCKNOW.

"PEEPS INTO THE FUTURE"

Is everybody's everyday book. The codified experience of generations of Astrologers and Indian Yogis—an astrologer in moments of anxiety & suspense—answers short and succinctly clear on the thousand and one points of doubt and uncertainty. Everybody may consult the book—no date of birth or horoscope necessary. Must be in every pocket for it suits all. Price one rupee only. Foreign two shillings. Apply to the Proprietor.

TATA MYSTIC ASTRAL STUDIO

24-8-19. Chodavaram, Vizagapatam District.

"MESMERISM AND HYPNOTISM."

Complete Course Rs. 1-8 only. Contents. 1. Instructions. 2. Breathing Exercise or Yoga Practice. 3. Exercises to develop this will and memory. 4. Various Hypnotic processes. 5. To wake up a subject. 6. Clairvoyance. 7. Telepathy. 8. Levitation. 9. Wonderful methods of Hindu Healing. 10. Various diseases. 11. Hindu Catalepsy or Burial alive. 12. The secret method of telling future events most wonderfully by the Indian Yogees without horoscope or birth time. Mr. Ratikantha Bhowmki, Head Master writes from Senhatix on 22-10-19:—I have become successful hypnotist with the help of your course. The methods are far easier and simpler than in any other courses. Mr. B. Sitaramurty, B.A., B.L., Government pleader writes: Your book really reveals the wonderful hidden powers of man. The methods are of the easiest kind and the book in short is the best of its kind in the field.

THE EASTERN HYPNOTIC HOME,
P. O. Chodavaram, (Vizagapatam, Dt.)

"COMMERCE AND INDUSTRIES."

An Interesting Monthly Journal of Indian Material Progress.

Annual Subscription Rs. 10-0 and Single Copy Re. 1 Post Free.

A Specially valuable advertising Medium.

Wanted Agents throughout India.

Address:—P. Box. No. 353, and 5 Mount Road Madras S. C. 12-10-19

ON DUTY!

THE YOUNG COLLEGIATE IS OUT.

An educational Monthly for Young and Old.
Editor:—Mr. B. S. NIMBKAR.

The "If's of it:—

1. If you are a Student, it will help you to the Examination Hall because your professors contribute to it.
2. If you are an active worker, it will show some field for you to solve problems, because it contains articles of your leaders.
3. If you are an artist, it is illustrated for you.
4. If you are a Social reformer, it will discuss all problems of Social reform and will give you views of male and female reformers.

Whatever you are, the Monthly gives you whatever you want. Annual Subscription Rs. 3. Single Copy Annas 8.

Wanted Agents throughout India.

For advertisement rates & other particulars apply to—

S. A. DANGE,
Manager.

Young Collegiate Office,
Sandhurst Road, Bombay No. 4.
14-12-19.

THE TATA INDUSTRIAL BANK, LD.

HEAD OFFICE, BOMBAY.

BRANCHES—CALCUTTA and HYDERABAD (Deccan)
CAWNPORE and LUCKNOW.

Sub-Branches.—

Bombay—Share Bazaar, Shroff Bazaar.

Calcutta—Bara Bazaar.

London Agents. LLOYDS BANK LIMITED.

NEW YORK AGENTS: THE GUARANTY TRUST COY. OF NEW YORK.

AUTHORISED CAPITAL... Rs. 12,00,00,000.

SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL..... „ 7,56,00,225.

PAID UP CAPITAL..... „ 1,50,99,225.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS,

Sir D. J. Tata, Kt., Chairman.

Sir Sassoon David, Bart.

Sir R. N. Mookerjee, K. O. I. E.

Sir Francis Stewart, Kt.

Sir Henry Proctor, Kt.

R. D. Tata, Esq.

F. E. Dinshaw, Esq.

F. O. Rimington, Esq.

Narottam Morarjee, Esq.

Hajee Gulam Mahomed Ajam, Esq.

The Hon'ble Mr. Purshottamdas Thakordas. C. I. E.

A. J. Bilimoria, Esq.

Secretary, R. H. Parker.

Current Accounts opened and interest allowed on daily credit balances from Rs. 500/- to Rs. 1,00,000/- at the rate of $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. per annum. If the balance to the credit of any account does not fall below Rs. 25,000/- at any time between 1st January and 30th June, interest will be allowed during that period at $2\frac{1}{2}$ % per annum. No interest is allowed unless the sum accrued amounts to Rs. 8/- Half-yearly.

Fixed Deposits. Interest allowed on Deposits fixed for one or two years and for shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank. Interest allowed on Savings Bank Accounts at 4 per cent per annum. Rules may be obtained on application.

Loans and Cash Credits are granted on approved securities.

Purchases and sales of Securities and shares effected.

Bills of Exchange purchased and collected and every description of Banking and exchange business undertaken.

14-4-18. L. D. L. BUCKLEY, General Manager.

THE YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK, LIMITED.

(Registered in Japan.)
Established 1880.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 48,000,000.

Paid up Capital.....Yen. 42,000,000.

Reserve Fund.....Yen. 28,100,000.

Head Office:—Yokohama.

Branches and Agencies at Bombay, Buenos Aires, Calcutta, Changchun, Chi-Nan, Dairen, Fengtien, Hankow, Harbin, Hongkong, Honolulu, Kaiyuan, Kobe, London, Los Angeles, Lyons, Manila, Nagasaki, Newchwang, New York, Osaka, Peking, Rangoon, San Francisco, Seattle, Shanghai, Shimonoseki, Singapore, Soerabaya, Sydney, Tientsin, Tokio, Tsingtao.

Current Deposit Accounts are opened for approved customers and Interest is allowed at the rate of 2 per cent per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 100,000, provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of banking and exchange business transacted.

N. IGARASHI

Post Box No. 207, Hornby Road, Bombay.

I. NISHIMAKI

Manager, Calcutta.

1-12-17,

Post Box No. 406, Clive street, Calcutta

THE BANK OF BARODA, LD.

Under the Patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja Gaekwar.

Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897

HEAD OFFICE BARODA.

Branches—Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, and Surat

Capital Subscribed... ..Rs. 60,00,000.

Capital Paid up " 30,00,000.

Reserve Fund " 12,50,000.

DIRECTORS :

The Hon'ble Mr. Lalubhai Somaldas, C. I. E., Chairman

Sir Yithaldas Demodar Thackersey, Kt.

Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti Nagar Sheth, Baroda.

Sheth Manilal Revadas, Vadnagar.

Rao Bahadur Ganajiroo R. Nimbalker, Sur Sabha, Baroda State.

Bhaskarrao Vibaldas Mehta, Esq., Advocate, High Court, Bombay.

M. H. Kantavalla, Esq., Agent, Maharaja Mill Co., Ld. Baroda.

R. R. Shirsogkar, Naib Subba, Baroda State.

A. N. Datar, Accountant General, Baroda State.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balance from Rs. 500 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest which does not come to Rs. 8 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application. O. E. HANDLE,—General Manager.
15-4-12.

THE CENTRAL BANK OF INDIA, LTD

Subscribed Capital... .. Rs. 50,00,000

Paid Up Capital „ 49,59,900

Reserved liability of

Shareholders „ 25,00,000

Reserve Fund „ 6,00,000

Head Office:—Alice Building, Bombay.

Local Branches:—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar, (3) Share Bazar.

Branches:—Amritsar, Calcutta, Delhi, Jharla, Karachi.

London Agents:—London Joint City and Midland Bank, Ld.

Current Accounts— 3% allowed on Daily Balances from January to June
 $2\frac{1}{2}\%$ allowed on Daily Balances from July to December.

12 months Deposits received at 5% per annum.

Long and Short period Deposits received at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking Business transacted.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA.

Manager.

25-2-17

THE BANK OF TAIWAN, LTD.

Incorporated by Special Charter of the Imperial Japanese Government, 1899.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 60,000,000
 Paid-up CapitalYen. 87,500,000
 Reserve FundYen. 7,030,000

Head Office:—Taipeh, Formosa.

BRANCHES:—

LONDON	SHANGHAI	TOKIO
NEW YORK	HONGKONG	OSAKA
AMOY	SINGAPORE	KOBE
CANTON	SOERABAJA	YOKOHAMA
FOOCHOW	SEMARANG	AKO
HANKOW	MAKUNG	GIRAN
KIUKIANG	BATAVIA	KAGI
SWATOW	PINAN	KARENKO
TAINAN	SHINCHIKU	KEELUNG
TAIPEH	TAICHU	TAMSUI

The Bank has also a large number of Correspondents at Home and Abroad.

Current Deposit Accounts:—are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at 2 per cent. per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 1,00,000 provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of Banking and Exchange business transacted.

K. TAKEMURA,
 Manager

9-12-17. 56, Esplanade Road, Fort, BOMBAY

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

Established 7th September 1906.

Incorporated under the Indian Companies' Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE:

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.

Capital Subscribed Rs. 1,00,00,000

Capital Called up ,, 50,00,000

Reserve Fund ,, 15,00,000

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 500 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½% p. a. throughout the year. On sums exceeding Rs. 1,00,000 interest is allowed by special arrangement. No interest will be allowed which does not amount to Rs. 5 per half year.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short periods @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application".

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, & CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stocks at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

H. P. STRINGFELLOW,

5-1-11.

Manager.

A Lady's Best Ornament is a Glorious Head of Hair.

A profusion of rich, soft silky, lustrous, wavy hair—where's the woman who would not like that?

There's only one oil that makes such hair and it's the far-famed

KAMINIA OIL
 (Regd.)

Invaluable for ladies, and just as much for Brain-Workers and Students.

Heated head cooled, aching disappears and dandruff becomes a thing of the past. Added to all these it possesses a beautiful fragrant smell.

For superiority, awarded a Gold Medal at the Mysore Exhibition, and in great demand all over the country.

If you have not yet used KAMINIA OIL, you

have missed a fine delight and a real boon, use it now, if only once; and like many people you will prefer to use also always.

Price per bottle, Rs. 1. V. P. Charges 6 annas extra

Price for 3 bottles Rs. 2-10. V. P. charges 14 annas extra

Write now, Do not delay.

Sole Agents:—

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,
 (5-8-16) No. 155, Jamma Masjid Market, BOMBAY.

Now-a-Days.

All things have advanced in price. Even the vegetable ingredients used in our Atank Nigrah Pills have advanced in price.

Even the labourers demand heavy wages being dearer. Even the users have increased yet the Atank Nigrah Pills for Toning up the system are sold at before war price i. e. at a Rupee.

Vaidya Shastri

Manishanker Govindji,

Atank Nigrah Pharmacy,

Head Office:—Jannagar—Kathiawar.

Branch:—Kalbadevi Road, Bombay.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours. Publish Fine Art Pictures, & c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.
 1-12-10. HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS-

ROYAL TONIC PILLS

Powerful Nutritious and Strength Restorer. Price Rs. 1-4 per 1/2 of 30 Pills.

PREPARED BY—GOVINDJEE DAMODER & Co.,

Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Commission Agents.
 1-12-10. No. 3 Sutar Chawl Market, BOMBAY.

Timely advice to the Wealthy

Costly but certain remedies are in the long run cheaper than cheap and uncertain ones.

KANDARPA SANJIVINI PILLS AND OIL

are the safest and surest remedies for indigestion, constipation, loss of appetite, memory, mental, physical and nervous debility and all sorts of urinary disorders, improve impoverished blood.

Price per tin of 40 Pills Rs. 5 & per tola of Oil Rs. 10.

Both Purchased at a time Rs. 11/4=

Medical Advice and a Medical Book containing 128 pages sent Gratis and Post Free.

RAJ VAIDYA NARAYANJI KESHAVJI

Head Office :- Jamnagar, Kathiawar, (India.)

Branch :- No. 187, Kalbadevi Road,
24-8-1919. BOMBAY.

Empire Hindu Hotel

Opposite Victoria Terminus
Bombay.

(Central Situation)
Strictly Vegetarian
Charges Moderate

Fitted with
Electric Lift, Fans and Lights.

TELEGRAMS: } TELEPHONE

"FOOD," BOMBAY. } 2789.

22-8-19.

Saffron? Saffron?? Saffron???

If you wish to buy genuinely pure and best Saffron it is
SUN

ONLY

It has been largely used by Jain Temples, Maharajas, Durbars, Hakim and Vaidyas all over the country for the last 75 year and is well known for its purity and genuineness.

S. NARAYEN & Co.,

17-2-18

21, Humnum Street, Fort Bombay.

REVOLUTION IN SHORTHAND.

There are systems and systems, but that one is the most "practical" which can be written with a pen or pencil straight away on unruled paper, without thickening, positions, grammalogues, multitudes of rules and exceptions, arbitrary word-signs and contractions, long lists of phrases, and various other impediments to speed. The New "ROYAL-SPEED" Course of 12 Lessons, incorporated by Expert who introduced the Original Dopylan Joined-Vowel Scheme in the East, has all the advantages of a modern, down-to-date system, and is acquired by Boys and Girls of 12, in a fraction of time. Quickest Results and Highest Efficiency are Guaranteed. Personal or Postal Tuition. Prospective pupils must investigate, as interested parties seem to recommend the only system known to them.

NATIONAL BUSINESS COLLEGE.

1st Floor, Luxmi Bldg., Lamington Road, Bombay.

"EVERYTHING FOR EVERYBODY"

National Standard Portable Typewriter No. 3 (10 lbs.) Rs. 190
Oliver No. 5 (American Rebuilt) B.S. & Tab. Rs. 175; No. 7 " 200
Empire No. 1 (" ") in good working order " 85
Multikopy Typewriter Carbons, per box of 100 sheets " 8
Webster Brand " Ribbons for all machines, Doz. " 21
Typewriter Oil (best 1 oz. bot.) or Eberhard Brassers, Doz. " 6
Safety Razor, Rivals Gillette, with 6 Gillette Blades (best) " 8
Envelope Making Machine (to make 30,000 per day), New " 38
Conklin's Self Filing Fount Pen (non-leakable) Gold Nib " 9

GENERAL CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE,
20-4-19. Post Box No. 424, Bombay.

HYPNOTISM

PERSONAL MAGNETISM,
WILL POWER,
NERVE FORCE—

Call what you will—

Is the intangible power that controls human destiny. It is the key to all business and social success. This power is no special gift of any one. It is latent in every one. We help you how to display it. By our system, you can learn in a few days at your own home and not only achieve success yourself, but you can influence the mind, health and actions of others to a remarkable degree.

Write immediately for our free booklet—The Pride of India.

THE LATENT LIGHT CULTURE,
TINNEVELLY, S. INDIA.

Batlivala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 1 each bottle of 100.

Batlivala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 2 each bottle of 100.

Batlivala's Ague Mixture of Fever, Malaria, Influenza etc.

Batlivala's Ague Pills for Malaria, Fever, Influenza etc.

Batlivala's Tonic pills for pale people & nervous breaks down.

Batlivala's Tooth Powder of Preserving Teeth

Batlivala's Ringworm ointment for Ringworm

Dhobi Itch etc.

May be had from all dealers in medicines or from

Dr. H. L. Batlivala Sons & Co., Ltd.,

No. 12, Worli, 18, Bombay.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESS:—"Doctor Batlivala Dadar"

THE BOMBAY CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK.

HEAD OFFICE:—Apollo Street, St., Bombay.

DIRECTORS:—The Hon. Sir Fazulbhoj Currimbhoy (Chairman), Sir Vithaldas D. Thackersey, the Hon. Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas, Sir Stanley Reed, the Hon. Mr. C. V. Mehta, the Chief of Ichalkaranji, G. K. Devadhar, Esq., the Hon. Sir P. D. Pattani, the Raja Sahab of Malegaon.

Share Capital (fully paid)Rs. 7,00,000

1 Deposits fixed for one year and shorter or longer period, are accepted. Rates and other particulars may be ascertained from the under signed.

2 The Bank finances only registered Co-operative Societies in the Bombay Presidency on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency.

3. Accounts are audited half-yearly by a special Government Auditor, and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the "Bombay Government Gazette."

20-5-17. VAIKUNTH L. MEHTA, Manager,

Clean
 Wholesome
 Intelligent
 Entertainment
 IS A GREAT STEP

IN

SOCIAL REFORM.

When deciding on a

*PLACE OF AMUSEMENT TWO
 ESTABLISHMENTS*

Should at once leap to the mind.

THE EXCELSIOR

BOMBAY'S PREMIER MODERN THEATRE

AND

THE EMPIRE

BOMBAY'S MOST PALATIAL

PICTURE THEATRE

Where Film Plays of Distinction are shown

Every Week.

Great Cinema Masterpiece

is shown,

Both theatres are near the Bori Bunder

and are run by the

EXCELSIOR SYNDICATE.

The Pioneer of Bombay's

AMUSEMENT WORLD.

FURUKAWA & CO.

TOKIO

The Largest Manufacturers
in the East

OF

ELECTRIC BARE COPPER CONDUCTORS,

ELECTRIC UNDERGROUND CABLES,

ELECTRIC INSULATED WIRES,

ELECTRIC ACCESSORIES,

INGOTS, RODS, WIRES,

SHEETS, TUBES,

Etc., Etc.,

All our wires are made in accordance with the standard of the British Cable Makers' Association and are tested and approved by leading firms in India.

SOLE AGENTS IN INDIA AND BURMA.

TATA, SONS & CO.,

BOMBAY & CALCUTTA.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely graded, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS Ltd.

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.
Baysari Building, Fort, BOMBAY.

Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

When YOUR EYES

need to be examined by QUALIFIED OCULISTS or by SCIENTIFIC REFRACTIONISTS of 26 year experience, FREE OF CHARGE, you cannot do better than GO TO

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR & CO.

The leading firm of Oculists, Eyesight Specialists, Manufacturing Opticians and suppliers of the patented

"KRYPTOK"

(Invisible one-piece bifocal lens.)

Toric, and all kinds of lenses,—Cylindrical, Spherical, Prismatic, &c., from pebbles as well as from best quality crown glass.

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR

Eyesight Specialist,

With 26 Years' Practical Experience.,

Holds Exceptional Testimonials from H. H. The Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, the Hon'ble Sir Lawrence Jenkins the Hon. Mr. Justice Batty, Mrs. Batty, the Hon. Sir N. S
Chandavarkar, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beaman, the Hon'ble
Sir S. L. Bachelor, the Hon'ble Sir John Heaton Mr. H. G.
Bell, M. V. O., Col. R. H. Forman, R. A. M. C., P. M
O., So. Brigade, Lieut. Col. G. H. Bull, M. D., I. M. S., Lieut. Colonel Peters M. B., I. M. S., and other high personages.

(7) 379, HORNBY ROW,

Opposite the Government Telegraph Office,
62-11-10. Fort, BOMBAY.

ATTENDING ASSURERS ARE INVITED TO COMPARE THE RATES AND CONDITIONS OF

The Empire of India Life Assurance Company, Limited.

WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.

Head Office II Elphinstone Circle, BOMBAY.

REPORT AND OPINIONS OF THE PRESS AS TO THE REMARKABLE PROGRESS MADE BY THE COMPANY.

ENDOWMENT NON-FORFEITABLE POLICY FOR RS. 3,000.

PAYABLE AT AGE 60 OR AT DEATH, IF PREVIOUS, WITH PROFIT.

At any time, the assured under this plan should he so disposed, paying any more premiums, he can obtain a paid-up such a proportion of the original sum assured as the number of premiums paid. The assured can also obtain a paid-up policy sum who had assured at age 30 for a Policy of Rs. 3,000 payable at age 60 or at Death, if previously agreed upon he would be entitled to a Free paid-up Policy for Rs. 500 free of future payments.

SOME OF THE DISTINCTIVE FEATURES.

- * Funds invested in Government Securities and in accordance with the Indian Trusts Act
- Policy holders can appoint their own Directors.
- 90 per cent. of Profits to Participating Policy holders.
- Lapsed policies revived without Medical Certificate.
- Liberal surrender Values 40 per cent. of the Tabular premium paid.
- Immediate payment of Claims.
- Medical fees and stamps on Policies are payable by the Company.
- The sum assured is PAYABLE IN FULL should death occur even immediately after payment of the first premium.

GUARANTEE INSURANCE.—This Company issues Guaranteed Policies in situation of trust and responsibility and is specially authorized to guarantee the employees of the Post Office

BY PREMIUM.

1. Rs. 6-9-0.

2. Rs. 7-8-0.

3. Rs. 8-14-0.

4. Rs. 10-15-0.

5. Rs. 12-12-0.

6. Rs. 12-10-0

Best Forms and full Particulars may be obtained from any local Agent in India or from

ALLUM, BHARUCHA & CO. Managers.

INDIA

EVERY ONE KNOWS.

whom it does concern that we are foremost in supplying the best
COSSI SILK SUIT PIECES

for the season. These pieces are strong, fancy and and have been specially manufactured for India.
Each piece guaranteed for One Suit Complete.

Price Rs. 10 per piece.

THE BHARAVA COMMERCIAL SOCIETY,
Benares City.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER. Contract Rates for Advertisements.

Number of Insertions.	1 Inch.		2 Inches.		3 Column.		4 Column.		5 Column.		Page.
	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.
15	11	0	16	0	20	0	30	0	50	0	87	0
25	16	0	25	0	30	0	50	0	87	0	155	0
52	25	0	35	0	60	0	87	0	155	0	300	0

Casual advertisements at Rs. 4 per line for the 1st insertion and Rs. 2 per line of succeeding insertions Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

WONDERFUL TONIC AND MOUTH-REFRESHER
JINTAN.

This is a safe and efficient remedy in all kinds of diseases or disturbances of the digestive organs. It is composed entirely of VEGETABLE INGREDIENTS made from the prescription of the following eminent medical men viz—

NORIHURO MIWA, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy,
ZENJIRO INOUE, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy,
 and testified as to its efficacy by
Baron J. MATSUMOTO, M.D., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Army.
T. MIFAMURA Esq., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Navy.

As a digestive it is unequalled and will not disturb the functions of the most delicate stomach. Its antiseptic properties render it very efficacious in warding off disease and at the same time it imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath of the user.

By virtue of its aroma, it effectually makes the odour of Tobacco and Alcoholic Spirits.

It acts beneficially on the vocal cords and has found much favour with public speakers, actors, singers and those whose vocation necessitates a severe strain on the throat.

GOOD FOR

Biliousness, Headache, Vertigo, Nausea, Indigestion, Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, etc., etc.

To maintain general health 2 to 3 pills may be taken occasionally, well masticated.

Price—Small Packet Rs. 0-1-0. Middle Packet, with Tin case, Rs. 0-4-0. Large Packet with fancy case, Rs. 1-0-0

Prepared by Messrs. MORISHITA Co., OSAKA, JAPAN.

Sole Agents: Jintan Agency (S. R. Chaudai), Juma Masjid, BOMBAY.

FOR PAINS
 AND ACHES
 SPRAINS ETC.
 USE:—

AMRUTANJAN.

The magical pain balm extant. Cures all aches & pains. Costs 8 As. Sold everywhere.

DENTISTRY.

Extractions Painless;
 Terms Very Moderate;
 Gold Crown, Bar and Bridge Work a Speciality (teeth without plate);
 Latest Successful Treatment for Pyorrhoea (pus in gums).
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.
 Hours: 8-1-30 & 3-7-30 Daily.
 (Sundays—From 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.)
 ADDRESS BUILDING, NEW CHARJI ROAD, GIBSON, BOMBAY. } 1-8-19.
 K. R. AMAT, Surgeon Dentist.

By Appointment to H. E. the Governor
 Sir. George Sydenham Clarke of
 Bombay.

HARIDAS VALJI,
 (KING OF INDIAN CONFECTIONERS),
 Highest Confectioner, Caterer and Grand Military Contractor.

Proprietor—RATINATH,
 Chira Bazar & Grant Road,
 BOMBAY.

20-4-19.

INDIAN * SOCIAL * REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY MORNING.

Office:—EMPIRE BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD, FORT.

Editor:—K. NATARAJAN

Vol. XXX. BOMBAY—SUNDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1919. No. 17.

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not course, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard."
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

Jesus the Man.	Peace and Plenty.
The Moderates' Reply to the Congress Leaders' Appeal.	The Borstal System in the Punjab.
The Indemnity Bill and the Hunter Committee's Enquiry.	The Problem of Christianity in India.
The Royal Proclamation.	The Bombay Presidency Association.
Jesus the Man.	Towards Religious Reconstruction.

NOTES.

Jesus the Man. The current number of the Pravardhana Bharata, the monthly journal of the Ramakrishna Mission, published at Mayavati, prints a remarkable paper on "Jesus the Man" read at the Belur Math, the headquarters of the Mission near Calcutta, by Brahmachari Gurudasa. The paper begins as follows: "This being the day on which all Christians celebrate the greatest of their religious festivals, the day of the birth of Jesus the Christ, it is but fit that we Hindus who pride ourselves on the fact that we revere all Incarnations and that we do an worship in all temples, should pay special homage to Him who, for nearly twenty centuries, has been a solace to millions of human hearts." The Brahmachari concludes a singularly sympathetic and reverent appreciation of the incidents in the life of the great Teacher, with these words: "And now let us remember that Jesus' voice was the voice of the Spirit that spoke through all the Avatars, the voice of the great Physicians that came to save us from the world-disease, the disease of birth and death. "Seek and you shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you," that is the secret of religion. "And ye shall know the Truth and the Truth shall make ye free." We print today the concluding passages from the Brahmachari's paper and commend his loving appreciation of Jesus' life to Christians and non-Christians alike, for its deep insight into and sympathy with the Christ-ideal. That a Hindu revival movement so nationalistic in aim as the Ramakrishna movement, made famous by Swami Vivekananda, should find place within it for the Brahmachari Gurudasa's view of the illustrious founder of the Christian Church, is a conclusive rebuttal of all allegations about the prevalence of an anti-Christian spirit in this country.

The Moderates' Reply to the Congress Leaders' Appeal: We deprecate the hasty and angry comments in the Radical papers on the reply which has been published over the names of prominent Moderate leaders, to the appeal of Swami Shraddhanand and the Hon. Pandit Motilal Nehru for their co-operation in the Amritsar Congress. We advisedly say "over the names" and not "over the signatures," for we doubt if every one of those whose names are invoked put their signatures to the document, or approved of it in the form in which it is issued. The Hindu of Madras takes it to mean that the rupture between the two parties is now complete. We interpret it in quite a contrary sense. The Allahabad epistle is evidently conceived in a spirit of irritation and alarm at the unforeseen moderation displayed by the Punjab Congress leaders. There is a section of the Congress party which is also dissatisfied with the Punjab overtures. The extreme Moderates and the extreme extremists would like to keep the experience and ripe wisdom of the country apart from its ardour and enthusiasm. But the wisest among the Moderates and the wisest among the Congress leaders are uncomfortable at the thought of a needless prolongation of the separation, and we confidently expect an early and final end to the split. Meanwhile, may we say a word of counsel to the extremists on both sides? We may or may not all be able to leave the country better than we found it, but, at any rate, let us not leave it—without very strong reason—more divided than we found it. We have ourselves come to the conclusion that the only reason which justified the division last year no longer exists and that, on the other hand, the tragic happenings in the Punjab have emphasised more than ever the crowning duty of unity which, of course, does not mean uniformity. For the rest we have too much faith in the strength of our political principles to fear that they may suffer in collision with those of men who do not realise the truth of the adage, "more haste, less speed."

The Indemnity Bill and the Hunter Committee's Enquiry: In the course of the debate on the Indemnity Bill in the Indian Legislative Council in September last, the Hon. Sir Dinshaw Wacha wished to know from the Hon. the Law Member or the Hon. the Home Member "whether the enquiry that is now going to be made will clash with the Bill, that is to say, what will be the effect if the Commission think that certain officers had committed such excesses that they could not be tolerated and therefore of course that they must not be indemnified." The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes replied: "I have not the least hesitation in answering that question. The only thing that we by the Bill seek to validate are acts done bona fide for the maintenance of law and order, and the Council may take it from me that the Bill will not in any way prejudice the Commission of Inquiry." The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha thereupon said that "I am satisfied, my Lord, and I hope other members of Council are satisfied too. I support the Bill." It will be interesting to know how far the assurance given by the Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes apply to some of the revelations made before the Hunter Committee, especially as regards the Jallianwala Bagh tragedy.

FURUKAWA & CO.

TOKIO

The Largest Manufacturers
in the East

OF

ELECTRIC BARE COPPER CONDUCTORS,

ELECTRIC UNDERGROUND CABLES,

ELECTRIC INSULATED WIRES,

ELECTRIC ACCESSORIES,

INGOTS, RODS, WIRES,

SHEETS, TUBES,

Etc., Etc.,

All our wires are made in accordance with the standard of the British Cable Makers' Association and are tested and approved by leading firms in India.

SOLE AGENTS IN INDIA AND BURMA.

TATA, SONS & CO.,

BOMBAY & CALCUTTA.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS Ltd.

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.
Narsari Building, Fort, BOMBAY.

Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

When YOUR EYES

need to be examined by QUALIFIED OCULISTS and by SCIENTIFIC REFRACTIONISTS of 26 year experience, FREE OF CHARGE, you cannot do better than GO TO

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR & CO.

The leading firm of Oculists, Eyesight Specialists, Manufacturing Opticians and suppliers of the patented

"KRYPTOK"

(Invisible one-piece bifocal lens.)

Toric, and all kinds of lenses,—Cylindrical, Spherical, cylindrical, Prismatic, &c., from pebbles as well as from best quality crown glass.

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR

Eyesight Specialist,

With 26 Years' Practical Experience.

Holds Exceptional Testimonials from H. H. The Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, the Hon'ble Sir Lawrence Jenkins the Hon. Mr. Justice Batty, Mrs. Batty, the Hon. Sir N. S. Chendavarkar, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beaman, the Hon'ble Sir S. L. Bachelor, the Hon'ble Sir John Heaton Mr. H. G. Fell, M. V. O., Col. R. H. Forman, B. A. M. C., P. M. O. Co. Brigade, Lieut. Col. G. H. Bull, M. D., I. M. S., Lieut-Colonel Peters M. B., I. M. S., and other high personages.

(7) 379, HORNBY ROW,

Opposite the Government Telegraph Office,
Fort, BOMBAY.

ATTENDING ASSUREES ARE INVITED TO COMPARE THE RATES AND CONDITIONS OF

The Empire of India Life Assurance Company, Limited.

WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.

Head Office II Elphinstone Circle, BOMBAY.

SEE REPORT AND OPINIONS OF THE PRESS AS TO THE REMARKABLE PROGRESS MADE BY THE COMPANY.

ENDOWMENT NON-FORFEITABLE POLICY FOR RS. 3,000.

PAYABLE AT AGE 60 OR AT DEATH, IF PREVIOUS, WITH PROFIT.

At any time, the assured under this plan may surrender the policy, and in doing so may obtain a paid-up policy for such a proportion of the original sum assured as the number of premiums paid up to the date of surrender bears to the number of premiums payable under the policy. A policyholder who had assured at age 30 for a Policy of Rs. 3,000 payable at age 60 or at Death, if previous, agreed upon, would be entitled to a Free paid-up Policy for Rs. 500 free of future payments.

SOME OF THE DISTINCTIVE FEATURES.

- * Funds invested in Government Securities and in accordance with the Indian Trusts Act
- Policy holders can appoint their own Directors.
- 90 per cent. of Profits to Participating Policy holders.
- Lapsed policies revived without Medical Certificate.
- Liberal Surrender Values 40 per cent. of the Tabular premium paid.
- Immediate payment of Claims.
- Medical fees and stamps on Policies are payable by the Company.

The sum assured is PAYABLE IN FULL should death occur soon immediately after payment of the first premium.

GUARANTEE INSURANCE.—This Company issues Guaranteed Policies in situation of trust and responsibility to specially authorized to guarantee the employes of the Post Office

MONTHLY PREMIUM.
At 30, Rs.	6-9-0.
At 35, Rs.	7-8-0.
At 40, Rs.	8-14-0.
At 45, Rs.	10-12-0.
At 50, Rs.	12-12-0.
At 55, Rs.	13-10-0.

Propose Forms and full Particulars may be obtained from any local Agent in India or from ALLUM, BHARUCHA & CO. Managers.

INDIA

EVERY ONE KNOWS.

whom it does concern that we are foremost in supplying the best COSSI SILK SUIT PIECES for the season. These pieces are strong, fancy and and have been specially manufactured for India.

Each piece guaranteed for One Suit Complete.

Price Rs. 10 per piece.

THE BHARGAVA COMMERCIAL SOCIETY,
Benares City.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER. Contract Rates for Advertisements.

Number of insertions.	1		2		3		4		5
	Inch.	Page.	Inch.	Page.	Column.	Page.	Column.	Page.	Column.	Page.
15	Rs. 11 0	16 0	Rs. 20 0	30 0	Rs. 30 0	40 0	Rs. 40 0	50 0	Rs. 50 0	60 0
25	16 0	25 0	30 0	40 0	50 0	60 0	70 0	80 0	90 0	100 0
52	25 0	38 0	50 0	67 0	87 0	105 0	125 0	150 0	175 0	200 0

Casual advertisements at Rs. 4 per line for the 1st insertion and Rs. 2 per line of succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

WONDERFUL TONIC AND

MOUTH-REFRESHER

JINTAN.

This is a safe and efficient remedy in all kinds of diseases or disturbances of the digestive organs. It is composed entirely of VEGETABLE INGREDIENTS made from the prescription of the following eminent medical men viz—

NORUHIRO MIWA, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy,
ZENJIRO INOUE, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy
and testified as to its efficacy by

Baron J. MATSUMOTO, M.D., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Army.

T. MIYAMURA Esq., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Navy.

As a digestive it is unequalled and will not disturb the functions of the most delicate stomach. Its antiseptic properties render it very efficacious in warding off disease and at the same time it imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath of the user.

By virtue of its aroma, it effectually takes the odour of Tobacco and Alcoholic Spirits.

It acts beneficially on the vocal cords and has found much favour with public speakers, actors, singers and those whose vocation necessitates a severe strain on the throat.

GOOD FOR

Biliousness, Headache, Vertigo, Nausea, Indigestion, Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, etc., etc.

To maintain general health 2 to 3 pills may be taken occasionally, well masticated.

Price—Small Packet Rs. 0-1-0. Middle Packet, with Tin case., Rs. 0-4-0. Large Packet with fancy case., Rs. 1-0-0

Prepared by Messrs. MORISHITA Co., OSAKA, JAPAN.

Sole Agents: Jintan Agency (G. A. Chaubal), Juma Masjid, BOMBAY.

FOR PAINS
AND ACHES
SPRAINS ETC.
USE:—

AMRUTANJAN.

The magical pain balm extant. Cures all aches & pains. Costs 8 As. Sold everywhere.

DENTISTRY.

Extractions Painless;
Terms Very Moderate;
Gold Crown, Bar and
Bridge Work a Speciality
(teeth without plate);
Latest Successful Treatment
for Pyorrhoea (pus in gums).

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

Hours: 8-1-30 & 5-7-30; Daily.
(Sundays—From 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.)

ADROOS BUILDING,
NEW CHARWI ROAD,
GIBSON, BOMBAY.

H. R. ANAT,
Surgeon Dentist.

1-6-19.

By Appointment to H. E. the Governor
Sir. George Sydenham Clarke of
Bombay.

HARIDAS VALJI,
(KING OF INDIAN CONFECTIONERS).

Highest Confectioner, Caterer and Grand
Military Contractor.

Proprietor—RATINATH,
Chira Bazar & Grant Road,

BOMBAY.

20-4-19.

THE INDIAN * SOCIAL * REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY MORNING.

Office:—EMPIRE BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD, FORT.

Editor:—K. NATARAJAN

Vol. XXX. BOMBAY—SUNDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1919. No. 17.

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard."
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

Jesus the Man.	Peace and Plenty.
The Moderates' Reply to the Congress Leaders' Appeal.	The Borstal System in the Punjab.
The Indemnity Bill and the Hunter Committee's Enquiry.	The Problem of Christianity in India.
The Royal Proclamation.	The Bombay Presidency Association.
Jesus the Man.	Towards Religious Reconstruction.

NOTES.

Jesus the Man. The current number of the Prabuddha Bharata, the monthly journal of the Ramakrishna Mission, published at Mayavati, prints a remarkable paper on "Jesus the Man" read at the Belur Math, the headquarters of the Mission near Calcutta, by Brahmachari Gurudasa. The paper begins as follows: "This being the day on which all Christians celebrate the greatest of their religious festivals, the day of the birth of Jesus the Christ, it is but fit that we Hindus who pride ourselves on the fact that we revere all Incarnations and that we can worship in all temples, should pay special homage to Him who, for nearly twenty centuries, has been a solace to millions of human hearts." The Brahmachari concludes a singularly sympathetic and reverent appreciation of the incidents in the life of the great Teacher, with these words: "And now let us remember that Jesus' voice was the voice of the Spirit that spoke through all the Avatars, the voice of the great Physicians that came to save us from the world-disease, the disease of birth and death. "Seek and you shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you," that is the secret of religion. 'And ye shall know the Truth and the Truth shall make ye free.'" We print today the concluding passages from the Brahmachari's paper and commend his loving appreciation of Jesus' life to Christians and non-Christians alike, for its deep insight into and sympathy with the Christ-ideal. That a Hindu revival movement so nationalistic in aim as the Ramakrishna movement, made famous by Swami Vivekananda, should find place within it for the Brahmachari Gurudasa's view of the illustrious founder of the Christian Church, is a conclusive rebuttal of all allegations about the prevalence of an anti-Christian spirit in this country.

The Moderates' Reply to the Congress Leaders' Appeal: We deprecate the hasty and angry comments in the Radical papers on the reply which has been published over the names of prominent Moderate leaders, to the appeal of Swami Shradhanand and the Hon. Pandit Motilal Nehru for their co-operation in the Amritsar Congress. We advisedly say "over the names" and not "over the signatures," for we doubt if every one of those whose names are invoked put their signatures to the document, or approved of it in the form in which it is issued. The Hindu of Madras takes it to mean that the rupture between the two parties is now complete. We interpret it in quite a contrary sense. The Allahabad epistle is evidently conceived in a spirit of irritation and alarm at the unforeseen moderation displayed by the Punjab Congress leaders. There is a section of the Congress party which is also dissatisfied with the Punjab overtures. The extreme Moderates and the extreme extremists would like to keep the experience and ripe wisdom of the country apart from its ardour and enthusiasm. But the wisest among the Moderates and the wisest among the Congress leaders are uncomfortable at the thought of a needless prolongation of the separation, and we confidently expect an early and final end to the split. Meanwhile, may we say a word of counsel to the extremists on both sides? We may or may not all be able to leave the country better than we found it, but, at any rate, let us not leave it—without very strong reason—more divided than we found it. We have ourselves come to the conclusion that the only reason which justified the division last year no longer exists and that, on the other hand, the tragic happenings in the Punjab have emphasised more than ever the crowning duty of unity which, of course, does not mean uniformity. For the rest we have too much faith in the strength of our political principles to fear that they may suffer in collision with those of men who do not realise the truth of the adage, "more haste, less speed."

The Indemnity Bill and the Hunter Committee's Enquiry: In the course of the debate on the Indemnity Bill in the Indian Legislative Council in September last, the Hon. Sir Dinsbaw Wacha wished to know from the Hon. the Law Member or the Hon. the Home Member "whether the enquiry that is now going to be made will clash with the Bill, that is to say, what will be the effect if the Commission think that certain officers had committed such excesses that they could not be tolerated and therefore of course that they must not be indemnified." The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes replied: "I have not the least hesitation in answering that question. The only thing that we by the Bill seek to validate are acts done bona fide for the maintenance of law and order, and the Council may take it from me that the Bill will not in any way prejudice the Commission of Inquiry." The Hon'ble Sir Dinsbaw Wacha thereupon said that "I am satisfied, my Lord, and I hope other members of Council are satisfied too. I support the Bill." It will be interesting to know how far the assurance given by the Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes apply to some of the revelations made before the Hunter Committee, especially as regards the Jallianwala Bagh tragedy.

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, DECEMBER 28, 1919.

THE ROYAL PROCLAMATION.

His Majesty the King's proclamation which heralds the Royal assent to the Reforms Bill conveys a message of conciliation and hope and alludes to the Prince of Wales's projected visit to India next winter. "Another epoch has been reached in the annals of India," begins the proclamation, "I have given my Royal assent to an Act which will take its place among the great historic measures passed by the Parliament of this realm for the better Government of India and for the greater contentment of the people." The growth of popular influence can be seen but dimly through the course of legislation referred to here. Reforms in the Indian Administration have hitherto been largely determined by other considerations, but the present measure does give "hopes of the future," and the proclamation will be welcomed by the country for the gracious invitation to join in these hopes as also for the other important matters with which it deals. His Majesty has expressed his "earnest desire at this time that so far as possible any trace of bitterness between my people and those who are responsible for my Government should be obliterated"; and to that end H. E. the Viceroy is directed to exercise clemency to political offenders in the fullest measure which in his judgment is compatible with the public safety. The details of the announcement to be made in pursuance of these instructions are no doubt already definitely settled and may be published any moment. Whether they are arranged genuinely in the spirit of His Majesty's desire and in the measure to suit the occasion remains to be seen. These may be expected to include, among others, the political leaders and others of the Punjab. All will appreciate His Majesty's clemency in these cases; but it must be obvious that the one subject over which the whole of India has been more sore than over any other is the Martial law administration in that Province. Amnesty in this case goes only half the way. For the other half we must wait for the results of the inquiries—both official and non-official—now in progress. These are developments which need not have remained unforeseen; and the declining even of temporary relief, becomes all the more regrettable in the light of events. As the British people are now aware of the need for their attention to the question, it may be hoped that on the completion of the inquiries, the claims of justice will receive the fullest consideration without loss of time so that painful memories may have time to be effaced long before the arrival of the Prince of Wales. For then will he, in the words of the proclamation, find "mutual goodwill and confidence prevailing among those on whom will rest the future service of the country." It is somewhat of an irony that the Reforms should have to be ushered in in the existing state of the country's mind; but as the people's representatives are in session in more than one body the moment has been well chosen, and the balm of His Majesty's words must prove valuable and soothing.

THE FULL TEXT.

George V, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, King Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India, to my Viceroy and Governor-General, to the Princes of Indian States and to all My subjects in India of whatsoever race or creed, Greeting:

1. Another epoch has been reached to-day in the annals of India. I have given My Royal assent to an Act which will take its place among the great historic measures passed by the Parliament of this Realm for the better Government of India and for the greater contentment of her people. The Acts of 1773 and 1784 were designed to establish a regular system of administration and justice under the Honourable East India Company. The Act of 1883 opened the door for Indians to public office and employment. The Act of 1858 transferred the Administration from the Company to the Crown and laid the foundation of public life which exists in India to-day. The Act of 1861 sowed the seed of representative institutions and the seed was quickened into life by the Act of 1909. The Act which has now become law entrusts the elected representatives of the people with a definite share in the Government and points the way to full responsible Government hereafter. If as I confidently hope the policy which this Act inaugurates should achieve its purpose, the results will be momentous in the story of human progress; and it is timely and fitting that I should invite you to-day to consider the past and to join Me in My hopes of the future.

2. Ever since the welfare of India was confided to us it has been held as a sacred trust by our Royal House and Line. In 1858 Queen Victoria of revered memory solemnly declared herself bound to her Indian subjects by the same obligations of duty as to all her other subjects; and she assured to them religious freedom and the equal and impartial protection of the law. In his message to the Indian people in 1903 My dear father King Edward VII announced his determination to maintain unimpaired the same principles of humane and equitable administration. Again in His Proclamation of 1906 He renewed the assurances which had been given fifty years before and surveyed the progress which they had inspired. On My accession to the Throne in 1910 I sent a message to the Princes and Peoples of India acknowledging their loyalty and homage and promising that the prosperity and happiness of India should always be to of the highest interest and concern. In the following year I visited India with the Queen Empress and testified My sympathy for her people and My desire for their well being.

3. While, these are the sentiments of affection and devotion by which I and My Predecessors have been animated, the Parliament and the People of this Realm and My Officers in India have been equally zealous for the moral and material advancement of India. We have endeavoured to give her people the many blessings which Providence has bestowed upon ourselves. But there is one left which yet remains and without which the progress of a country cannot be consummated; the right of her people to direct her affairs and safeguard her interests. The defence of India against foreign aggression is a duty of common imperial interest and pride. The control of her domestic concerns is a burden which India may legitimately aspire to take upon her own shoulders. The burden is too heavy to be borne in full until time and experience have brought the necessary strength but opportunity will now be given for experience to grow and for responsibility to increase with the capacity for its fulfilment.

4. I have watched with understanding and sympathy the growing desire of My Indian people for representative institutions. Starting from small beginnings this ambition has steadily strengthened its hold upon the intelligence of the country. It has pursued its course along constitutional channels with sincerity and courage. It has survived the discredit which at times and in places lawless men sought to cast upon it by acts of violence committed under the guise of patriotism. It has been stirred up to more vigorous life by the ideals for which the British Commonwealth fought in the Great War and it claims support in the part which India has taken in our common struggles, anxiety and victories. In truth the desire after political responsibility has its source at the roots of the British connection with India. It has sprung inevitably from the deeper and wider studies of human thought and history which that connection has opened to the Indian People. Without it the work of the British in India would have been incomplete. It was therefore with a wise judgment that the beginnings of representative institutions were laid many years ago. Their scope has been extended stage by stage until there now lies before us a definite step on the road to responsible Government.

5. With the same sympathy and with redoubled interest I shall watch the progress along this road. The path will not be easy and in the march towards the goal there will be need of perseverance and of mutual forbearance between all sections and races of My people in India. I am confident that these high qualities will be forthcoming. I rely on the new popular assemblies to interpret wisely the wishes of those whom they represent and not to forget the interests of the masses who cannot yet be admitted to franchise. I rely on the leaders of people, the Ministers of the future, to face responsibility and endure misrepresentation, to sacrifice much for the common interest of the State, remembering that true patriotism transcends party and communal boundaries; and, while retaining the confidence of the Legislatures, to co-operate with My Officers for the common good in sinking unessential differences and in maintaining the essential standards of a just and generous Government. Equally do I rely upon My Officers to respect their new colleagues and to work with them in harmony and kindness; to assist the people and their representatives in an orderly advance towards free institutions; and to find in these new tasks a fresh opportunity to fulfil as in the past their highest purpose of faithful service to My people.

6. It is My earnest desire at this time that so far as possible any trace of bitterness between My people and those who are responsible for My Government should be obliterated. Let those who in their eagerness for political progress have broken the law in the past respect it in the future. Let it become possible for those, who are charged with the maintenance of peaceful and orderly Government to forget the extravagances which they have had to curb. A new era is opening. Let it begin with a common determination among My people and My Officers to work together for a common purpose. I therefore direct My Viceroy to exercise in My name and on My behalf My Royal clemency to political offenders in the fullest measure which in his judgment is compatible with the public safety. I desire him to extend it on this condition to persons who for offences against the State or under any special or emergency legislation are suffering imprisonment or restrictions upon their liberty. I trust that this leniency will be justified by the future conduct of those whom it benefits and that all My subjects will so demean themselves as to render it unnecessary to force the laws for such offences hereafter.

7. Simultaneously with the new constitutions in British India, I have gladly assented to the establishment of a Chamber of Princes. I trust that its counsel may be fruitful of lasting good to the Princes and the States themselves may advance the interests which are common to their territories and to British India and may be to the advantage of the Empire as a whole. I take the occasion again to assure the Princes of India of my determination ever to maintain unimpaired their privileges, rights and dignities.

8. It is My intention to send My dear son, the Prince of Wales, to India next Winter to inaugurate on My behalf the new Chamber of Princes and the new constitutions in British India. May He find mutual good-will and confidence prevailing among those on whom will rest the future service of the country, so that success may crown their labours and progressive enlightenment attend their administration.

And with all My people I pray to Almighty God that by His wisdom and, under His guidance India may be led to greater prosperity and contentment, and may grow to the fullness of political freedom.

JESUS THE MAN.

A HINDU APPRECIATION.

We reprint below from the full text of the paper read by Brahmachari Gurudasa at the Belur Math, which is published in the current number of the Prabuddha Bharata, the following concluding passages:

The Bible contains many touching incidents in the life of Jesus. Once a thoughtful young man of great wealth and high position, suddenly seized with the conviction that Jesus would be able to explain to him the true meaning of life, came running, breathless and eager; and prostrating himself at the feet of Jesus, exclaimed: "Good Master, what shall I do that I may inherit life?" "Keep the commandments," was Jesus' reply. "Master," replied the young man, "all these I have observed from my youth."

And Jesus seeing his sincerity, looking on him,—loved him. And then he gave him one short, crucial test of his real condition. "One thing," Jesus said, "thou lackest. Go, sell all thou hast and give it to the poor and come and follow me." It was too much! The young man went away sorrowful, for he had great possessions. He did not realise that Jesus, the Lord of all, is beyond both good and evil, that he did not care for his good deeds. Jesus wanted him not as a virtuous youth, but stripped of possessions and stripped of self,—naked and poor and humble,—to make him his own, his child, that he would carry to the bosom of his Father.

The youth preferred the comforts of life to the treasures of the Spirit; he would not purchase the things eternal by abandoning those of time. And instead of making the great renunciation of the saints, he made the refusal of the worldly. And so he vanishes from the Gospel history. But we may hope that light dawned afterwards on that sincere but weak soul, for Jesus as he looked on him, loved him.

The failure of the youth to meet the test saddened Jesus. And looking round at his disciples, he said: "how hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of Heaven. It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God." Few are they who can possess their wealth and remain unattached to it, "Not by wealth, but by renunciation alone the goal is reached," says the Hindu saint, "we cannot serve God and mammon," said Jesus.

But where Jesus had his disappointments, he also had his moments of quiet joy and satisfaction. It must have been a great relief to him after days of travel and preaching and satisfying large crowds, to take rest in the quiet village homes of his friends. Perhaps the house of Lazarus was to him what the little convent of Saint Clara was to St. Francis of Assisi. Nowhere perhaps did Jesus pass more happy restful hours than with that little family at Bethany. The family consisted of Martha, Mary and their brother Lazarus. Their holy and happy home was always at his disposal for they loved and revered Jesus.

A touching incident once took place at this home. Martha has invited Jesus, and the busy hostess hurried to and fro to prepare for his proper entertainment. Her sister Mary knowing that Martha was only too happy to do all that could be done for Jesus' material comfort and also anxious to receive him fittingly, sat at his feet in deep humility, listening to his words. Perhaps Martha was in need of help, perhaps she was slightly jealous of her sister, anyhow she showed vexation at Mary's attitude and she asked Jesus, "would he not tell Mary to assist her in her work." But Jesus seeing her over-anxious in her hospitality said to her: "Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things. But one thing is needful. And Mary has chosen that good part which shall not be taken away from her." Are we not reminded here of another saying of Jesus, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by the Spirit which is of God."

Jesus' love for the sisters and their brother must have been deep, for we read that Jesus wept when he received the tidings of Lazarus' death. And how could it be otherwise, considering the absolute trust and faith they had in him. They knew that Jesus was all-powerful and that he could have prevented Lazarus' death even had he chosen to do so. And when Jesus before raising Lazarus from dead asked Martha whether she believed in him, Martha without the least hesitation answers, "Yes Lord, I believe that thou art the Christ, the son of God, which should come into the world."

How sweet these words of faith must have sounded in Jesus' ears?

But now the scene changes. Dark, threatening clouds are gathered on the horizon of Jesus' life on earth. The priests offended with him, conspired against him that they might take his life.

Jesus had spoken many harsh words and these words fell on evil soil. And then,—there was a traitor in the camp,—Judas, one of the twelve disciples. What induced this unfortunate man to betray his master we cannot say. We do not know whether Judas' final act of selling his Lord was a sudden impulse or a long pre-meditated act. It is better to remain silent on the subject. We do not know what was his hidden motive. Judas repented and threw down the silver pieces. But his repentance only led him to self-destruction.

Jesus knew the plan that was brooding against him. "What thou art doing, do more quickly," he said to Judas at the last feast. And Judas left the room and it was night. And Jesus opened his heart to the little band that loved him. And then he made to his little children (as he affectionately calls his disciples) the blessed promise. "Whither I go thou canst not follow me now, but thou shalt follow me afterwards."

And then he told them that in spite of all the anguish which the coming separation would bring, it was better for them that this personal presence should be withdrawn in order that his spiritual presence might be felt yet nearer to them than it had been before. For he who was now with them, was even part of them in his spiritual form. And he had told them on another occasion that the kingdom of God is not 'Lo here and lo there,' but within them.

A few days more and Jesus, God incarnate, was nailed to the Cross. There was one cry of agony "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me!" And then peace descended on Jesus' soul. He realised again that he was God himself, one with the Father. "Father," he said, "unto thy hands I recommend my Spirit."

This final act of submission was the end. "It is finished," were his last words.

Faithfully he had carried his message; his task was done. And Jesus entered into the source from which he had proceeded. For all eternity he is united with the fountainhead of all Existence.

Jesus' message was not a new message; it was but an echo of that eternal Truth that first found expression in the forest recesses of the Himalayas, in this our beloved India. Jesus revealed once more to forgetful humanity that One Eternal Truth. Many a time that message has come to man. But we forget. And then the Lord takes human birth again to save his own, to rescue drowning humanity. For though heaven and earth will pass away, God's truth remains for ever.

Long, long ago, on the battlefield of Kurukshetra, Arjuna, heard the sweet message from the lips of Lord Krishna: "Give thy heart to me, be to me devoted, worship me, and unto me thou shalt attain, truly do I promise this to thee" And that promise vibrates through all the ages. And now and then a son of God is born to catch the sound of that ancient promise, to embody it and to give it new strength and volume. And wondering humanity halts and listens.

And so that promise vibrated over the hills of Galilee and Jesus caught the sound and understood. And the echo came back from his hallowed lips: "I have come to save that which was lost. He that cometh unto me I shall no wise cast out."

And then, not long ago, came one who gathered up within himself all that had gone before. In the Temple garden of Dakshineswar a voice was heard, sweet and gentle, a voice that caught up the dying cord. And once more the world listened to that ancient but ever new refrain: "Come unto me, I have prepared the food, come all ye that hunger and eat of the bread of life."

And there was rejoicing in the highest spheres. And they that had been the Saviours of man came to do him homage. And there was one who had given his life to save the world. One glance of recognition, one intimate embrace and the form of Jesus the Christ melted away unto the very being of him who spoke

And then came the Swami Vivekananda who gathered up his Master's message, and in trumpet voice proclaimed it before the world. And East and West rejoiced at the glad tidings.

And now let us remember that Jesus voice was the voice of the Spirit that spoke through all the Avatars, the voice of the great Physicians that come to save us from the world-disease, the disease of birth and death. "Seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you," that is the secret of religion.

"And ye shall know the Truth and the Truth shall make you free."

PEACE AND PLENTY.

(BY MR. M. C. BENSON)

Nearly five years ago the national sins of the world had reached a climax. It needed purification; and in God's great plan there could be no better and more suitable means to bring about this end than the great national and international upheaval and confusion that He caused throughout the length and breadth of the world. The Arts and Sciences of modern civilization were considered to be 'Towers of Babylon' whereby the people could save themselves from the Divine wrath. National crimes are always punished with national calamities. German 'militarism' and German 'kultur' were two great national crimes which reduced Germany to her present low and degenerate state. God punished her and took from her His gifts of Peace and Plenty which she had enjoyed for many decades past.

The Allied nations of England, France, Belgium, America and others are not without the terrible effects of this sinister War. They have suffered economically and sustained heavy losses in men and material which it will take at least a century to make good. How many millions of the best youths have run their course of life! How many thousands have been rendered totally unfit to do any kind of work! Wives are weeping for their deported husbands; mothers are lamenting over their sons who are never to be seen by their mortal eyes; sisters are shedding their tears for their brothers who have passed through the shadow of the valley of death. Friends are mourning over their friends who have gone 'beyond'. How terrible to think of this! It is proposed in Germany that every man and woman who has lost some dear one in the War will lay a stone in a certain place as a memorial of War. Should the Allies follow this scheme, there is no doubt a fairly big mountain would be raised to remind them of their heroic martyrs.

But the storm is over and the atmosphere is clearing. There is, in almost every part of the world that was once dark and clouded, bright silver lining to be seen. The eyes that once shed tears of grief are now bringing forth tears of joy. There is a smile on every face. The people are now forgetting all their past sorrows at the promise of a permanent Peace and Plenty. The whole world was looking forward to the day of Peace and it has come. But Peace has been secured by the shedding of the most precious blood of millions of men. It is easier to secure Peace than to maintain it; for, in the words of one of England's greatest statesmen, 'the real war will begin when the Peace Treaty is signed'. It has taken nearly five years to secure Peace but it might take fifty long years of patience and perseverance to maintain it. It means the suppression of man's greatest enemy—Self, both from a personal and national point of view. Peace is Struggle, therefore. When the firing of guns and the clashing of arms have finished, a great inward moral struggle begins. The physical conflict is over and now begins the spiritual conflict. It is the conflict between friendship and enmity, humility and pride. If we show true generosity to our enemies and are sincerely humble in our ways, we shall be a great help towards the maintenance of Peace. Love to man is love to God, and unless we love God we cannot be truly humble and God exalts those who are humble.

How long the Peace will last, no one can foretell; but it is certain that it will last just so long as we honour it, value it, and love it. If we do not do so, it will last just so long as the piece of paper on which the Treaty has been signed. Unless there is peace in our own personal lives, in our families, in our societies and in our country, there is no possibility of a permanent Peace and Plenty. If there is no such thing, the present World-Peace is but a delusion. Let us, therefore, as peace-loving members of a peaceful Empire sink all our differences of caste and creed, race and religion, and strive on towards the establishment of real and perfect 'peace that passeth all understanding.'

THE BORSTAL SYSTEM IN THE PUNJAB.

(BY MR. EDMUND CANDLER.)

II.

The Borstal system for juvenile adults was adopted in India within a few months of its adoption in England, but the underlying principle of it had been recognised in the Punjab some years earlier. The system of transferring adolescent prisoners from the other jails in the provinces and segregating them in the Lahore Central District Jail had long been in force. In this way the youthful offenders were saved from the contamination of hardened jail birds and were given special disciplinary and educative training.

The Punjab offers a finer field for Borstal work than any other Province. Indeed, it is doubtful if there is such good material for reclamation to be found elsewhere. The Borstal Jail at Lahore has the moulding of many young men who, though eligible for transportation or the gallows, are not really criminals at all. Homicides and cattle thieves, there is nothing inherently vicious in them. They are true to their primitive code. And after all it is not so much by the nature of the code that they should be judged, as by their fidelity to it and their readiness to make sacrifices for their ideal, such as it is. It is often the duty of a young Pathan to kill or loot. Honour demands it. A departure from the tradition, to neglect for instance to prosecute a blood feud to a finish, would bring as much shame to a young Pathan among his own people as the refusal to accept a challenge would have brought to a British ensign when duelling was in vogue. The regimental officer knows this, and if he has any particularly sad story to tell about the men in his battalion, it will generally be of some high spirited lad arraigned by our code for a crime sanctioned by his own. The great distinction between the Borstal in Lahore and that in Kent, from which it derives its name, lies in the material that is brought to the mould. In the Lahore jail more than half the lads imprisoned are of the agricultural class, the stock from which our sepoy are drawn, the real backbone of the country, many of them with land to inherit and an honest livelihood to look forward to on their release. The stunted thieving class, that fill the jails in England, the scum of the cities, constitute a very small minority.

One marks the difference of the material, and the turn the Borstal treatment has given it directly one enters the jail yard. One can spend an evening there, and, except in the penal cells, never feel the depression that hangs over the inmates of ordinary jails like a blanket. Nothing, of course, can obliterate the adobe drabness, the caked mud and dust of a jail compound in the Punjab; but in the human atmosphere there is no taint of prison. One misses the slouching gait and sullen hang-dog look of the habitual jail bird. From the noise and laughter you would think you were on a college play ground. There is cricket in one corner, football in another, and a young Pathan on a ten years' sentence is drilling his company in a third. The company is formed in squads. It is physical drill, army system, to the accompaniment of the jail band. The time is quite up to regimental form, and the pipers march in front with something of the pride, in the eye and the step, of the Highland drum major. The first piper and the commandant of the company are both "Star Special" men, — two of the dozen most privileged youths in the jail. The young Pathan was a budding dacoit captured in the rounding up of a frontier gang out Tochi way six years ago. He has still four years to put in. But owing to the remissions he has earned, he is to be released in a few days on probation. The "Star Special" men earn six days remission of sentence in the month. It is this system of graded privilege and conditional release that gives the moral stimulus to the Borstal.

There is a long stair to climb, with Tartarus at the bottom for the impenitent and something remotely approaching elysium at the top—a state, indeed, which must carry the young detenu very near it if happiness is really only a manner of contrast. The "Star Special" man is a monitor of sorts. He is dressed like a Havildar in the Indian army, wears a smart belt, and is very well set up. He is drill-sergeant on parade, assistant overseer in the workshops, in charge of a block of 250 prisoners, and responsible for barrack discipline. He is not eligible for the grade until he can drill a battalion. Drill is an essential test for promotion. There are three classes of companies, and failure to pass from A to B, or from B to C, within a prescribed time means the forfeiture of some remission. The Borstal aims at the regimental spirit; the penal side of the life is paraded as little as possible. The Superintendent (Major Findlayson, I.M.S.), under whom the institution has grown, is attempting to create something of the House feeling of our Public Schools, a spirit of emulation between companies and barracks, and thus insensibly to evolve esprit de corps. The graded system lends itself admirably to this.

There are four grades. The Penal, the Ordinary, the Special and the Star Special. The bulk of the lads fall into the Ordinary grade; the special comprises some seventy—these wear a distinctive badge; the Star Special form a picked dozen. When we had watched the Punjabi games, the Jailer Sardar Sahib Hukm Singh, who after the Superintendent, is the "ma-bap" among the young offenders took me to the Penal cells. Here I was shown the impenitents at the bottom of the scale. Theirs was hard work, the plainest diet, solitary confinement. They wear sack-cloth, press oil, pound fibre and grind corn. Outside each cell lay the inmate's upper millstone, like a symbol or a badge. These are detached from the neiter stones and removed in the evening lest the inmate grind his head between the two in a fit of despair. There were 16 prisoners in the penal grade at the time of my visit, two or three of them reconvicted lads for whom the hard hand is necessary; otherwise they will drift back to the Borstal after release as to their home. Others had shown themselves impenitent, sulky, slow to work, defiant of authority. But none are defiant after a day or two. Many of them made gestures of remorse and supplication to us as we passed, standing rigid and raising their closed palms to their ears. The Jailer spoke kindly to them. "We have to break them in," he explained, "like young horses." The difficulty, of course, in the Borstal is to strike the happy mean between the life of the college student and the convict. This is not easy in spite of grades. There must be no softness, or easing off of discipline, and there must be a great deal of hard work. In the early phases particularly the punitive side of the treatment must be emphasized. The whole success of the Borstal hangs on the personality and tact of the Superintendent and the Jailer. In the Lahore Jail there is no instance of a conditionally released inmate who has failed to make good his probation. From this it would appear that the staff have the admirable knack of the middle way.

THE PROBLEM OF CHRISTIANITY IN INDIA.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

I thank you for the withdrawal, in your issue of December 14, of the charge that missionaries insist on their converts eating meat and even drinking wine. Your correspondent has unintentionally done the Christian community a service by giving wide publicity to the fact that becoming Christian has no necessary connection with either of these.

Still, you think that there is force in Mr. Manilal's complaint that "on the strength of this single statement, his competency to deal with the subject should be questioned." I bow to your ruling, but I suggest that a writer who makes a statement which casts a slur on the good name of thousands of devoted men, both Indian and European, and who when called upon to substantiate, has not a thread of evidence to produce, puts himself out of court as a controversialist. There was nothing in the letter referred to—I missed the first and so cannot speak of that—to indicate that the writer was a Christian. That fact, of course, increases his competency in the matter.

He asks a reply to his main contentions. Unfortunately I have not kept the paper and cannot trust my memory sufficiently to do so in detail, but his recent letter takes, I presume, the main points.

As regards the question of meat eating, given as an example of the denationalising effect of missionary teaching, apart from the charge of compulsion which is withdrawn, it seems to me that your correspondent is mixing different things. Is there anything essentially un-Indian in meat eating? If so, the Mohammedans are not Indians, and the great mass of the farming population (I speak of the South India which only I claim to know) all the outcastes are all non-Indian. This is, of course, absurd. I dare say he may be right in saying that out of one hundred vegetarian converts not five per cent remain non-meat eaters ultimately. But what of that? Are they thereby denationalised? Not in the least. The whole matter becomes one of personal preference. The religious conception that is at the root of Indian vegetarianism—the oneness of all life, no longer holds. The right or wrong must be decided by the convert on other grounds and Christian freedom on all such matters is absolute. However, this is giving prominence to what is after all a very secondary matter.

The brunt of the other charges is on two counts: First that the Christian community is "entirely proletarianised" denationalised, anglicised and materialised" and that missionaries are responsible. I think mere quotation is refutation. Does Mr. Manilal reflect before he uses such a word as "entirely"? Can't he recall many among his acquaintances about whom the statement sounds absolutely unjust? I know very many.

And what does it indicate? "Proletariat" means, according to my dictionary, "belonging to the labouring class". If your correspondent means that missionaries have "proletarianised" their converts, reduced them to the status of labourers that is peles asunder from fact. Every mission is embarrassed with just the opposite tendency. If he means that converts are drawn mainly from the proletariat, I admit. But in defence I remind him of a little word that means much "The common people heard Him gladly". It always has been so.

The charge of materialism is more difficult to meet, because it is so indefinite. I suppose the Christian community can be blamed with it, but who can not? To say that Christians are more so than others would be exceedingly hard to prove and could at best be only an opinion. My opinion would be on the other side.

The charge of being anglicised has obviously no meaning as regards the great bulk of Christians who are simple village folk, but it has relevancy in regard to educated town-Christians. Personally I regret this and very many, probably most missionaries do so, but it has to be said that this tendency has been by no means confined to Christians and it is among them as elsewhere, I believe decreasing, with the growth of national self-respect.

But probably Mr. Manilal has mainly in mind the political future of Christians as a body and his fear lest they become what he calls an "anti-Hindu counter state"—surely not a happy or an accurate phrase. I know that there is among the younger educated Christians a strong feeling that Christians have not taken the place in political matters as they should have done. So far as this is true it is a pity, but I do not think it amounts to much more than saying that they have been on the Moderate wing in politics. The reason is patent. It is exactly that which causes the non-Brahman movement. They know that, in the South at least, that extremists' activity is largely of Brahmin origin and they know from experience, all too keen, the attenuated connection that exists between platform perorations and daily practice. They fear Brahman domination and believe the British Government is the only protector against that. Mr. K. T. Paul has publicly repudiated this fear and every weight must be given to his opinion, but it is not the general opinion amongst the Christians. Of that I am sure. The only way to solve this problem is Social Reform—democracy in the true sense—not the tinselly stuff that is so prominent at present. A saying lingers in my memory, by whom I cannot recollect, but it is full of meaning. "True democracy does not say 'I am as good a man as you.' It says, 'You are as good a man as I', and therein lies a world of difference.

I fear I have not taken all your correspondent's points. But your space has limits. As regards the quotation from St. Paul, I do not agree with Mr. Manilal's interpretation, but that cannot be discussed here. If he cares to correspond with me, I shall be glad.

Your sincerely

J. T. M.

THE BOMBAY PRESIDENCY ASSOCIATION.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

In the Reformer of the 14th instant writing under the heading "the Reformers and the Radicals," you say "on the other hand it is only fair to note that the Bombay Presidency Association and the Bombay branch of the National Home Rule League, both Radical organisations, the one by capture, the other by original constitution have welcomed the Reform Bill as revised by the Joint Committee." As the above statement contains some weighty inaccuracies so far as the Bombay Presidency Association is concerned, I shall be much obliged if you would kindly allow me—one who can speak with authority on the point—to explain them through the columns of your Reformer.

Firstly, the Bombay Presidency Association, as it is, is not a Radical organisation if you accept the current meaning of the term 'Radical' as applied to Indian politics. If it were so, it would never have welcomed the Reform Bill. From the composition of its members, it will be found that the Association is far from being Radical. It has on its roll members belonging to various shades of political thought—ranging from ultra-moderate to ultra-extremist. It will not be an exaggeration to say that the Bombay Presidency Association is the only political institution in India which is non-sectarian and which has a representative character and it is no small credit to Bombay that, in spite of personal and party differences, it has a representative institution which provides a common platform for political discussions.

Secondly, the implication that Radicals have captured the Bombay Presidency Association can be successfully challenged to be incorrect by facts and figures. The management of the Association is in the hands of a Council consisting of a President, Vice-Presidents, Members and Secretaries. A glance through the names of persons forming the Council will show that Radicals are in a minority. As a matter of fact, working at the present constitution of the Council, it will not be far from truth to call the Association a Moderate organisation. Being so, it is very unfair to the prestige and past record of the Association to say that it has become a Radical organisation and that Radicals have captured it when the facts are quite the reverse. I may also mention that, at no stage of the evolution of the Reform Bill, the Association has expressed any radical attitude towards the same. In conclusion I request that you will be good enough to publish this letter lest the Indian public should be under a mistaken idea as to the political view of the Association.

Tripuray, Valapad, }
19th December 1919. }

N. V. SARMA.

TOWARDS RELIGIOUS RE-CONSTRUCTION.

(FROM A CORRESPONDENT.)

In connection with the Peace Celebrations in Bandikui three religious services were held under the auspices of the Local Arrangements Committee. On Sunday morning, the 14th December, there was a parade of the I. D. F. in church, and in the evening two united meetings took place. More than once during the war the Hindus, Mohammedans and Christians of Bandikui had met and offered prayers together. On this occasion an endeavour was made, not to say separate prayers in one place, but to join in common worship.

One of these united services was held in the European Institute, which was beautifully decorated with palms and chrysanthemums. There was a large and representative attendance. The hymns chosen were of a truly catholic nature. These included the 100th psalm ("All people that on earth do dwell") and the children's hymn—"All things bright and beautiful." The prayers likewise were such that all could take part in them sincerely from beginning to end. One was of a composite nature, consisting chiefly of sentences from the Hindu scriptures, the Coran and the New Testament.

An interesting feature of the service was the reading of passages from or representing various sacred books. A Hindu gentleman read something from one of the Upanishads and a few verses from one of the Bhakti school of religious poets. An Englishman, a member of the Church of England, read from Sir Edwin Arnold's Light of Asia an incident illustrating the teaching of Buddhism. A Mohammedan gentleman read part of one of the chapters of the Coran. A Presbyterian Scotsman read the passage from the Jewish scriptures which sums up the essence of religion in the memorable words—"Do justly, love mercy and walk humbly with thy God." Lastly, a young Indian Christian read from the Gospel of Luke the parable of the good Samaritan. All these readings were, like the rest of this service, in English, but it was pointed out that all were translations, as every one of the great religious books of the world had its origin in Asia.

In a short address some hopeful features of the present universal unrest were touched upon. The emphasis, however, was laid on the urgent duty of re-building our shattered civilisation on a more unselfish basis, with special reference to the need of religious re-construction on less exclusive and more catholic lines. At the close of the address the whole congregation was asked to join, in spirit if not audibly, in the beautiful hymn known to many as the 30th paraphrase.

"Come, let us to the Lord our God
with contrite hearts return,
Our God is gracious, nor will leave
the desolate to mourn," etc.

After the benediction the organist struck up the National Anthem, two verses of which were heartily sung. Later in the evening, the other gathering referred to was held in the Indian Institute, where Mr. O. S. M. Jacob, the well-known baker of the place, who is devout and broad-minded Mussalman, read what he called "a religious and scriptural thanksgiving drama." This was partly in the vernacular and partly in English, and was, with religious songs interspersed, an earnest thanksgiving for victory and peace on the one hand, and on the other a call to men of all religions to abandon sectarianism and with charity towards one another worship and serve the one God who is the Creator and Protector of us all. Here also various faiths and Churches were re-presented, and an effort made in the right spirit towards the re-construction of religion.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

States of Inland subscription inclusive of postages
In advance. In arrears.
Per annum..... Rs. 5-0-0. Rs. 6-0-0
Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, twelve shillings (Rs. 6).

Single copies of the current year can be had at 4 annas each and any back copies at 6 annas each.

"An Appeal to the Men of India."

The Child.

His deadly peril from prostitution.

Six annas per dozen.

Orders may be sent to Methodist Publishing House, LUCKNOW.

"PEEPS INTO THE FUTURE"

Is everybody's everyday book. The codified experience of generations of Astrologers and Indian Yogis—an astrologer in moments of anxiety & suspense—answers short and succinctly clear on the thousand and one points of doubt and uncertainty. Everybody may consult the book—no date of birth or horoscope necessary. Must be in every pocket for it suits all. Price one rupee only. Foreign two shillings. Apply to the Proprietor.

TATA MYSTIC ASTRAL STUDIO

24-8-19. Chodavaram, Vizagapatam District.

"MESMERISM AND HYPNOTISM."

Complete Course Rs. 1-8 only. Contents. 1. Instructions. 2. Breathing Exercise or Yoga Practice. 3. Exercises to develop this will and memory. 4. Various Hypnotic processes. 5. To wake up a subject. 6. Clairvoyance. 7. Telepathy. 8. Levitation. 9. Wonderful methods of Hindu Healing. 10. Various diseases. 11. Hindu Catelepsy or Burial alive. 12 The secret method of telling future events most wonderfully by the Indian Yogees without horoscope or birth time. Mr. Ratikantha Bhowmki, Head Master writes from Senhatix on 22-10-19:—I have become successful hypnotist with the help of your course. The methods are far easier and simpler than in any other courses. Mr. E. Sitaramurty, B.A., B.L., Government pleader writes: Your book really reveals the wonderful hidden powers of man. The methods are of the easiest kind and the book in short is the best of its kind in the field.

THE EASTERN HYPNOTIC HOME,
P. O. Chodavaram, (Vizagapatam. Dt.)

"COMMERCE AND INDUSTRIES."

An Interesting Monthly Journal of Indian Material Progress.

Annual Subscription Rs. 10-0 and Single Copy Re. 1. Post Free.

A Specially valuable advertising Medium.

Wanted Agents throughout India.

Address:—P. Box. No. 353, and 5 Mount Road
Madras S. C. 12-10-19

ON DUTY!

THE YOUNG COLLEGIATE IS OUT.

An educational Monthly for Young and Old.

Editor:—Mr. R. S. NIMBKAR.

The "It's of it:—

1. If you are a Student, it will help you to the Examination Hall because your professors contribute to it.
2. If you are an active worker, it will show some field for you to solve problems, because it contains articles of your leaders.
3. If you are an artist, it is illustrated for you.
4. If you are a Social reformer, it will discuss all problems of Social reform and will give you views of male and female reformers.

Whatever you are, the Monthly gives you whatever you want
Annual Subscription Rs. 3. Single Copy Annas 8.

Wanted Agents throughout India.

For advertisement rates & other particulars apply to—

S. A. DANGE,
Manager.

Young Collegiate Office,
Sandhurst Road, Bombay No. 4.
14-12-19.

denationalised, anglicised and materialised" and that missionaries are responsible. I think mere quotation is refutation. Does Mr. Manilal reflect before he uses such a word as "entirely"? Can't he recall many among his acquaintances about whom the statement sounds absolutely unjust? I know very many.

And what does it indicate? "Proletariat" means, according to my dictionary, "belonging to the labouring class". If your correspondent means that missionaries have "proletarianised" their converts, reduced them to the status of labourers that is peles asunder from fact. Every mission is embarrassed with just the opposite tendency. If he means that converts are drawn mainly from the proletariat, I admit. But in defence I remind him of a little word that means much "The common people heard Him gladly". It always has been so.

The charge of materialism is more difficult to meet, because it is so indefinite. I suppose the Christian community can be blamed with it, but who can not? To say that Christians are more so than others would be exceedingly hard to prove and could at best be only an opinion. My opinion would be on the other side.

The charge of being anglicised has obviously no meaning as regards the great bulk of Christians who are simple village folk, but it has relevancy in regard to educated town-Christians. Personally I regret this and very many, probably most missionaries do so, but it has to be said that this tendency has been by no means confined to Christians and it is among them as elsewhere, I believe decreasing, with the growth of national self-respect.

But probably Mr. Manilal has mainly in mind the political future of Christians as a body and his fear lest they become what he calls an "anti-Hindu counter state"—surely not a happy or an accurate phrase. I know that there is among the younger educated Christians a strong feeling that Christians have not taken the place in political matters as they should have done. So far as this is true it is a pity, but I do not think it amounts to much more than saying that they have been on the Moderate wing in politics. The reason is patent. It is exactly that which causes the non-Brahman movement. They know that, in the South at least, that extremists' activity is largely of Brahmin origin and they know from experience, all too keen, the attenuated connection that exists between platform perorations and daily practice. They fear Brahman domination and believe the British Government is the only protector against that. Mr. K. T. Paul has publicly repudiated this fear and every weight must be given to his opinion, but it is not the general opinion amongst the Christians. Of that I am sure. The only way to solve this problem is Social Reform—democracy in the true sense—not the tinselly stuff that is so prominent at present. A saying lingers in my memory, by whom I cannot recollect, but it is full of meaning. "True democracy does not say 'I am as good a man as you.' It says, 'You are as good a man as I', and therein lies a world of difference.

I fear I have not taken all your correspondent's points. But your space has limits. As regards the quotation from St. Paul, I do not agree with Mr. Manilal's interpretation, but that cannot be discussed here. If he cares to correspond with me, I shall be glad.

Your sincerely

J. T. M.

THE BOMBAY PRESIDENCY ASSOCIATION.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

In the Reformer of the 14th instant writing under the heading "the Reform and the Radicals," you say "on the other hand it is only fair to note that the Bombay Presidency Association and the Bombay branch of the National Home Rule League, both Radical organisations, the one by capture, the other by original constitution have welcomed the Reform Bill as revised by the Joint Committee." As the above statement contains some weighty inaccuracies so far as the Bombay Presidency Association is concerned, I shall be much obliged if you would kindly allow me—one who can speak with authority on the point—to explain them through the columns of your Reformer.

Firstly, the Bombay Presidency Association, as it is, is not a Radical organisation if you accept the current meaning of the term 'Radical' as applied to Indian politics. If it were so, it would never have welcomed the Reform Bill. From the composition of its members, it will be found that the Association is far from being Radical. It has on its roll members belonging to various shades of political thought—ranging from ultra-moderate to ultra-extremist. It will not be an exaggeration to say that the Bombay Presidency Association is the only political institution in India which is non-sectarian and which has a representative character and it is no small credit to Bombay that, in spite of personal and party differences, it has a representative institution which provides a common platform for political discussions.

Secondly, the implication that Radicals have captured the Bombay Presidency Association can be successfully challenged to be incorrect by facts and figures. The management of the Association is in the hands of a Council consisting of a President, Vice-Presidents, Members and Secretaries. A glance through the names of persons forming the Council will show that Radicals are in a minority. As a matter of fact, working at the present constitution of the Council, it will not be far from truth to call the Association a Moderate organisation. Being so, it is very unfair to the prestige and past record of the Association to say that it has become a Radical organisation and that Radicals have captured it when the facts are quite the reverse. I may also mention that, at no stage of the evolution of the Reform Bill, the Association has expressed any radical attitude towards the same. In conclusion I request that you will be good enough to publish this letter lest the Indian public should be under a mistaken idea as to the political view of the Association.

Tripuray, Velapad, }
19th December 1919. }

N. V. SARMA.

TOWARDS RELIGIOUS RE-CONSTRUCTION.

(FROM A CORRESPONDENT.)

In connection with the Peace Celebrations in Bandikui three religious services were held under the auspices of the Local Arrangements Committee. On Sunday morning, the 14th December, there was a parade of the I. D. F. in church, and in the evening two united meetings took place. More than once during the war the Hindus, Mohammedans and Christians of Bandikui had met and offered prayers together. On this occasion an endeavour was made, not to say separate prayers in one place, but to join in common worship.

One of these united services was held in the European Institute, which was beautifully decorated with palms and chrysantheums. There was a large and representative attendance. The hymns chosen were of a truly catholic nature. These included the 100th psalm ("All people that on earth do dwell") and the children's hymn—"All things bright and beautiful." The prayers likewise were such that all could take part in them sincerely from beginning to end. One was of a composite nature, consisting chiefly of sentences from the Hindu scriptures, the Coran and the New Testament.

An interesting feature of the service was the reading of passages from or representing various sacred books. A Hindu gentleman read something from one of the Upanishads and a few verses from one of the Bhakti school of religious poets. An Englishman, a member of the Church of England, read from Sir Edwin Arnold's Light of Asia an incident illustrating the teaching of Buddhism. A Mohammedan gentleman read part of one of the chapters of the Coran. A Presbyterian Scotsman read the passage from the Jewish scriptures which sums up the essence of religion in the memorable words—"Do justly, love mercy and walk humbly with thy God." Lastly, a young Indian Christian read from the Gospel of Luke the parable of the good Samaritan. All these readings were, like the rest of this service, in English, but it was pointed out that all were translations, as every one of the great religious books of the world had its origin in Asia.

In a short address some hopeful features of the present universal unrest were touched upon. The emphasis, however, was laid on the urgent duty of re-building our shattered civilisation on a more unselfish basis, with special reference to the need of religious re-construction on less exclusive and more catholic lines. At the close of the address the whole congregation was asked to join, in spirit if not audibly, in the beautiful hymn known to many as the 30th paraphrase.

"Come, let us to the Lord our God
with contrite hearts return,
Our God is gracious, nor will leave
the desolate to mourn," etc.

After the benediction the organist struck up the National Anthem, two verses of which were heartily sung. Later in the evening, the other gathering referred to was held in the Indian Institute, where Mr. O. S. M. Jacob, the well-known baker of the place, who is devout and broad-minded Mussalman, read what he called "a religious and scriptural thanksgiving drama." This was partly in the vernacular and partly in English, and was, with religious songs interspersed, an earnest thanksgiving for victory and peace on the one hand, and on the other a call to men of all religions to abandon sectarianism and with charity towards one another worship and serve the one God who is the Creator and Protector of us all. Here also various faiths and Churches were re-presented, and an effort made in the right spirit towards the re-construction of religion.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

States of Inland subscription inclusive of postages
In advance. In arrears.

Per annum..... Rs. 5-0-0. Rs. 6-0-0

Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, twelve shillings (Rs. 6).

Single copies of the current year can be had at 4 annas each and any back copies at 6 annas each.

"An Appeal to the Men of India."

The Child.

His deadly peril from prostitution.

Six annas per dozen.

Orders may be sent to Methodist Publishing House, LUCKNOW.

"PEEPS INTO THE FUTURE"

Is everybody's everyday book. The codified experience of generations of Astrologers and Indian Yogis—an astrologer in moments of anxiety & suspense—answers short and succinctly clear on the thousand and one points of doubt and uncertainty. Everybody may consult the book—no date of birth or horoscope necessary. Must be in every pocket for it suits all. Price one rupee only. Foreign two shillings. Apply to the Proprietor.

TATA MYSTIC ASTRAL STUDIO

24-8-19. Chodavaram, Vizagapatam District.

"MESMERISM AND HYPNOTISM."

Complete Course Rs. 1-8 only. Contents. 1. Instructions. 2. Breathing Exercise or Yoga Practice. 3. Exercises to develop this will and memory. 4. Various Hypnotic processes. 5. To wake up a subject. 6. Clairvoyance. 7. Telepathy. 8. Levitation. 9. Wonderful methods of Hindu Healing. 10. Various diseases. 11. Hindu Catalepsy or Burial alive. 12. The secret method of telling future events most wonderfully by the Indian Yogees without horoscope or birth time. Mr. Ratikantha Bhowmki, Head Master writes from Senhatir on 22-10-19:—I have become successful hypnotist with the help of your course. The methods are far easier and simpler than in any other courses. Mr. B. Sitaramurti, B.A., B.L., Government pleader writes: Your book really reveals the wonderful hidden powers of man. The methods are of the easiest kind and the book in short is the best of its kind in the field.

THE EASTERN HYPNOTIC HOME,
P. O. Chodavaram, (Vizagapatam. Dt.)

"COMMERCE AND INDUSTRIES."

An Interesting Monthly Journal of Indian Material Progress.

Annual Subscription Rs. 10-0 and Single Copy Re. 1. Post Free.

A Specially valuable advertising Medium.

Wanted Agents throughout India.

Address:—P. Box. No. 353, and 5 Mount Road Madras S. C. 12-10-19

ON DUTY I

THE YOUNG COLLEGIATE IS OUT.

An educational Monthly for Young and Old.

Editor:—Mr. R. S. NIMBKAR.

The "It's of it:—

1. If you are a Student, it will help you to the Examination Hall because your professors contribute to it.
2. If you are an active worker, it will show some field for you to solve problems, because it contains articles of your readers.
3. If you are an artist, it is illustrated for you.
4. If you are a Social reformer, it will discuss all problems of Social reform and will give you views of male and female reformers.

Whatever you are, the Monthly gives you whatever you want Annual Subscription Rs. 3. Single Copy Annas 8.

Wanted Agents throughout India.

For advertisement rates & other particulars apply to—

S. A. DANGE,
Manager.

Young Collegiate Office,
Sandhurst Road, Bombay No. 4.
14-12-19.

THE TATA INDUSTRIAL BANK, LD.

HEAD OFFICE, BOMBAY.
BRANCHES—CALCUTTA and HYDERABAD (Deccan)
CANNING and LUCKNOW.

Sub-Branches—

Bombay—Share Bazaar, Shroff Bazaar,
Calcutta—Barr Bazaar.

London Agents. LLOYDS BANK LIMITED.
NEW YORK AGENTS: THE GUARANTY
TRUST COY. OF NEW YORK.

AUTHORISED CAPITAL... Rs. 12,00,00,000.
SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL..... " 7,56,00,225.
PAID UP CAPITAL..... " 1,50,99,225.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS,

Sir D. J. Tata, Kt., Chairman.
Sir Sassoon David, Bart.
Sir R. N. Mookerjee, K. O. I. E.
Sir Francis Stewart, Kt.
Sir Henry Proctor, Kt.
R. D. Tata, Esq.
F. E. Dinshaw, Esq.
F. O. Rimington, Esq.
Narottam Morarjee, Esq.
Hajee Gulam Mahomed Ajam, Esq.
The Hon'ble Mr. Purshottamdas Thakordas. C. I. E.
A. J. Bilimoria, Esq.

Secretary, R. H. Parker.

Current Accounts opened and interest allowed on daily credit balances from Rs. 500/- to Rs. 1,00,000/- at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum. If the balance to the credit of any account does not fall below Rs. 25,000/- at any time between 1st January and 30th June, interest will be allowed during that period at 2½ % per annum. No interest is allowed unless the sum accrued amounts to Rs. 2/- Half-yearly.

Fixed Deposits. Interest allowed on Deposits fixed for one or two years and for shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank. Interest allowed on Savings Bank Accounts at 4 per cent per annum. Rules may be obtained on application.

Loans and Cash Credits are granted on approved securities.

Purchases and sales of Securities and shares effected.

Bills of Exchange purchased and collected and every description of Banking and exchange business undertaken.

14-4-18. L. D. L. BUCKLEY, General Manager.

THE YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK, LIMITED.

(Registered in Japan.)
Established 1880.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 48,000,000.
Paid up Capital.....Yen. 42,000,000.
Reserve Fund.....Yen. 28,100,000.

Head Office:—Yokohama.

Branches and Agencies at Bombay, Buenos Aires, Calcutta, Changchun, Chi-Nan, Dairen, Fengtien, Hankow, Harbin, Hongkong, Honolulu, Kaiyuan, Kobe, London, Los Angeles, Lyons, Manila, Nagasaki, Newchwang, New York, Osaka, Peking, Rangoon, San Francisco, Seattle, Shanghai, Shimonoseki, Singapore, Soerabaya, Sydney, Tientsin, Tokio, Tsingtao.

Current Deposit Accounts are opened for approved customers and Interest is allowed at the rate of 2 per cent per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 100,000, provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of banking and exchange business transacted.

N. IGARASHI
Post Box No. 207, Hornby Road, Bombay.
I. NISHIMAKI
Manager, Calcutta.

1-12-17,

Post Box No. 406, Clive street, Calcutta

THE BANK OF BARODA, LD.

Under the Patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja Gaskwar.
Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1887

HEAD OFFICE BARODA.

Branches—Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, and Surat
Capital Subscribed.....Rs. 60,00,000.
Capital Paid up " 20,00,000.
Reserve Fund " 12,50,000.

DIRECTORS :

The Hon'ble Mr. Lallubhai Samaldas, C. I. E., Chairman
Sir Vithaldas Damodar Thekersey, Kt.
Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti Nagar Sheth, Baroda.
Sheth Manilal Revadas, Vadaagar.
Rao Bahadur Gunajiroo R. Nimbalkar, Sur Sabha, Baroda State.
Bhaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., Advocate, High Court, Bombay.
M. H. Kantavalla, Esq., Agent, Maharaja Mill Co., Ld. Baroda.
R. B. Shirgaokar, Naib Sabha, Baroda State.
A. N. Datar, Accountant General, Baroda State.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balance from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest which does not come to Rs. 8 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application. C. E. BANDLE, —General Manager.
15-4-12.

THE CENTRAL BANK OF INDIA, LTD

Subscribed Capital... .. Rs. 50,00,000
Paid Up Capital " 49,59,900
Reserved liability of Shareholders " 25,00,000
Reserve Fund " 6,00,000

Head Office:—Alice Building, Bombay.

Local Branches:—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar, (3) Share Bazar.

Branches:—Amritsar, Calcutta, Delhi, Jharis, Karachi.

London Agents:—London Joint City and Midland Bank, Ld.

Current Accounts :—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June
2½ % allowed on Daily Balances from July to December.

12 months Deposits received at 5 % per annum.
Long and Short period Deposits received at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking Business transacted.
For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA
Manager.

25-2-17

THE BANK OF TAIWAN, LTD.

Incorporated by Special Charter of the Imperial Japanese Government, 1899.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 60,000,000
Paid-up CapitalYen. 37,500,000
Reserve FundYen. 7,050,000

Head Office:—Taipeh, Formosa.

BRANCHES:—

LONDON	SHANGHAI	TOKIO
NEW YORK	HONGKONG	OSAKA
AMOY	SINGAPORE	KOBE
CANTON	SOERABAIA	YOKOHAMA
FOOHOOW	SEMARANG	AKO
HANKOW	MAKUNG	GIRAN
KIUKIANG	BATAVIA	KAGI
SWATOW	PINAN	KARENKO
TAINAN	SHINCHIKU	KEELUNG
TAKOW	TAICHU	TAMSUI

The Bank has also a large number of Correspondents at Home and Abroad.

Current Deposit Accounts—are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at 2 per cent. per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 1,00,000 provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of Banking and Exchange business transacted.

K. TAKEMURA,
Manager

9-12-17. 56, Esplanade Road, Fort, BOMBAY

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

Established 7th September 1906.

Incorporated under the Indian Companies' Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE:

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.

Capital Subscribed Rs. 1,00,00,000
Capital Called up ,, 50,00,000
Reserve Fund ,, 15,00,000

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 200 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½% p. a. throughout the year. On sums exceeding Rs. 1,00,000 interest is allowed by special arrangement. No interest will be allowed which does not amount to Rs. 8 per half year.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short periods @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, & CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stocks at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

H. P. STRINGFELLOW,

15-1-11. Manager.

A Lady's Best Ornament is a Glorious Head of Hair.

A profusion of rich, soft silky, lustrous, wavy hair—where's the woman who would not like that?

There's only one oil that makes such hair and it's the far-famed

KAMINIA OIL
(Regd.)

Invaluable for ladies, and just as much for Brain-Workers and Students.

Heated head cooled, aching disappears and dandruff becomes a thing of the past. Added to all these it possesses a beautiful fragrant smell.

For superiority, awarded a Gold Medal at the Mysore Exhibition, and in great demand all over the country.

If you have not yet used KAMINIA OIL, you

have missed a fine delight and a real boon, use it now, if only once; and like many people you will prefer to use also always.

Price per bottle, Re. 1. V. P. Charges 6 annas extra. Price for 5 bottles Rs. 2-10. V. P. charges 14 annas extra. Write now, Do not delay.

Sole Agents:—
The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,
(5-8-16) No. 155, Jamma Masjid Market, BOMBAY.

Now-a-Days.

All things have advanced in price. Even the vegetable ingredients used in our Atank Nigrah Pills have advanced in price.

Even the labourers demand heavy wages being dearer. Even the users have increased yet the Atank Nigrah Pills for Toning up the system are sold at before war price i. e. at a Rupee.

Valdya Shastri
Manishanker Govindji,
Atank Nigrah Pharmacy,

Head Office:—Jamnagar—Kathiawar.

Branch:—Kalbadevi Road, Bombay.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours. Publish Fine Art Pictures, & c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.
Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.
1-12-10. HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS-

ROYAL TONIC PILLS

Powerful Nutritious and Strength Restorer. Price Rs. 1-4 per tin of 30 Pills.

PREPARED BY—GOVINDJEE DAMODER & Co.,
Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Commission Agents.
1-12-10. No. 3 Sutar Chawl Market, BOMBAY.

Timely advice to the Wealthy

Costly but certain remedies are in the long run cheaper than cheap and uncertain ones.

KANDARPA SANJIVINI PILLS AND OIL

are the safest and surest remedies for indigestion, constipation, loss of appetite, memory, mental, physical and nervous debility and all sorts of urinary disorders, improve impoverished blood.

Price per tin of 40 Pills Rs. 5 & per tola of Oil Rs. 10.

Both Purchased at a time Rs. 11/4 -

Medical Advice and a Medical Book containing 128 pages sent Gratis and Post Free.

RAJ VAIDYA NARAYANJI KESHAVJI

Head Office :-Jamnagar, Kathiawar, (India.)

Branch :-No. 187, Kalbadevi Road,
24-8-1919. BOMBAY.

Empire Hindu Hotel

Opposite Victoria Terminus
Bombay.

(Central Situation)
Strictly Vegetarian
Charges Moderate

Fitted with
Electric Lift, Fans and Lights.

TELEGRAMS: TELEPHONE

"FOOD," BOMBAY. } 2789.

22-8-19.

Saffron? Saffron?? Saffron???

If you wish to buy genuinely pure and best Saffron it is
SUN

BRAND

SAFFRON

ONLY

It has been largely used by Jain Temples, Maharajas Durbars, Hakims and Vaidyas all over the country for the last 75 year and is well known for its purity and genuineness.

S. NABAEN & Co.,

17-2-18

21, Humnum Street, Fort Bombay.

REVOLUTION IN SHORTHAND.

There are systems and systems, but that one is the most "practical" which can be written with a pen or pencil, straight away on unruled paper, without thickening, positions, grammalogues, multitudes of rules and exceptions, arbitrary word-signs and contractions, long lists of phrases, and various other impediments to speed. The New "ROYAL-SPEED" Course of 12 Lessons, incorporated by Expert who introduced the Original Duployan Joined-Vowel Scheme in the East, has all the advantages of a modern, down-to-date system, and is acquired by Boys and Girls of 12, in a fraction of time. Quickest Results and Highest Efficiency are Guaranteed. Personal or Postal Tuition. Prospective pupils must investigate, as interested parties seem to recommend the only system known to them.

NATIONAL BUSINESS COLLEGE,
1st Floor, Luxmi Bldg., Lamington Road, Bombay.

"EVERYTHING FOR EVERYBODY"

National Standard Portable Typewriter No. 3 (10 lbs.) Rs. 190
Oliver No. 5 (American Rebuilt) B.S. & Tab. Rs. 175; No. 7 " 200
Empire No. 1 (Do.) in good working order. " 85
Multikopy Typewriter Carbons, per Box of 100 sheets, " 8
Webster Brand " Ribbons for all machines, Doz. " 21
Typewriter Oil (best 1 on. bot.) or Eberhard Brassers, Doz. " 6
Safety Razor, Rivals Gillette, with 6 Gillette Blades (best) " 8
Envelope Making Machine (to make 30,000 per day), New " 35
Conklin's Self Filling Fountain Pen (non-leakable) Gold Nib " 9

GENERAL CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE,
20-4-19. Post Box No. 424, Bombay.

HYPNOTISM

PERSONAL MAGNETISM,
WILL POWER,
NERVE FORCE—

Call what you will—

Is the intangible power that controls human destiny. It is the key to all business and social success. This power is no special gift of any one. It is latent in every one. We help you how to display it. By our system, you can learn in a few days at your own home and not only achieve success yourself, but you can influence the mind, health and actions of others to a remarkable degree.

Write immediately for our free booklet—The Pride of India.

THE LATENT LIGHT CULTURE,
TINNEVELLY, S. INDIA.

Batilwala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 1 each bottle of 100.

Batilwala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 1 each bottle of 100.

Batilwala's Ague Mixture of Fever, Malaria, Influenza etc.

Batilwala's Ague Pills for Malaria, Fever, Influenza etc.

Batilwala's Tonic pills for pale people & nervous breaks down.

Batilwala's Tooth Powder of Preserving Teeth

Batilwala's Ringworm ointment for Ringworm Dhobi Itch etc.

May be had from all dealers in medicines or from
Dr. H. L. Batilwala Sons & Co., Ltd.
No. 12, Worli, 18, Bombay.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESS:—"Doctor Batilwala Dadar"

THE BOMBAY CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK.

HEAD OFFICE Apollo Street, St., Bombay.

DIRECTORS:—The Hon. Sir Fazulbhai Currimbhoy (Chairman), Sir Vithaldas D. Thackersey, the Hon. Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas, Sir Stanley Reed, the Hon. Mr. C. V. Mehta, the Chief of Ichalkaranji, G. K. Devadhar, Esq., the Hon. Sir P. D. Pettani, the Raja Sahab of Malegaon.

Share Capital (full paid) Rs. 7,00,000

1 Deposits fixed for one year and shorter or longer periods are accepted. Rates and other particulars may be ascertained from the manager signed.

2 The Bank finances only registered Co-operative Societies in the Bombay Presidency on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency.

3 Accounts are audited half-yearly by a special Government Auditor, and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the "Bombay Government Gazette."

20-5-17. VAIKUNTH L. MEHTA, Manager,

Clean
Wholesome
Intelligent
Entertainment
IS A GREAT STEP

IN

SOCIAL REFORM.

When deciding on a
*PLACE OF AMUSEMENT TWO
ESTABLISHMENTS*

Should at once leap to the mind.

THE EXCELSIOR
BOMBAY'S PREMIER MODERN THEATRE

AND

THE EMPIRE
BOMBAY'S MOST PALATIAL
PICTURE THEATRE

Where Film Plays of Distinction are shown
Every Week.

A

Great Cinema Masterpiece
is shown,

Both theatres are near the Bori Bunder
and are run by the

EXCELSIOR SYNDICATE.

The Pioneer of Bombay's

AMUSEMENT WORLD.

FURUKAWA & CO.

TOKIO

The Largest Manufacturers
in the East

OF

ELECTRIC BARE COPPER CONDUCTORS,
ELECTRIC UNDERGROUND CABLES,
ELECTRIC INSULATED WIRES,
ELECTRIC ACCESSORIES,
INGOTS, RODS, WIRES,
SHEETS, TUBES,
- Etc., Etc.,

All our wires are made in accordance with the standard of the British Cable Makers' Association and are tested and approved by leading firms in India.

SOLE AGENTS IN INDIA AND BURMA.

TATA, SONS & CO.,

BOMBAY & CALCUTTA.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS Ltd.

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.
Narsari Building, Fort, BOMBAY.

Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

11-8-17.

When YOUR EYES

need to be examined by QUALIFIED OCULISTS and by SCIENTIFIC REFRACTIONISTS of 26 year experience, FREE OF CHARGE, you cannot do better than GO TO

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR & CO.

The leading firm of Oculists, Eyesight Specialists, Manufacturing Opticians and suppliers of the patented

"KRYPTOK"

(Invisible one-piece bifocal lens.)

Toric, and all kinds of lenses,—Cylindrical, Spherocylindrical, Prismatic, &c., from pebbles as well as from best quality crown glass.

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR

Eyesight Specialist,

With 26 Years' Practical Experience.,

Holds Exceptional Testimonials from H.H. The Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, the Hon'ble Sir Lawrence Jenkins the Hon. Mr. Justice Batty, Mrs. Batty, the Hon. Sir N. S. Chandavarkar, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beaman, the Hon'ble Sir S. L. Bachelor, the Hon'ble Sir John Heaton Mr. B. G. Hall, M. V. O., Col. R. H. Forman, R. A. M. C., P. M. O. Bn. Brigade, Lieut. Col. G. H. Bull, M. D., I. M. S., Lieut-Colonel Peters M. B., I. M. S., and other high personages.

(7) 379, HORNBY ROW,

Opposite the Government Telegraph Office,
Fort, BOMBAY.

INTENDING ASSUREES ARE INVITED TO COMPARE THE RATES AND CONDITIONS OF

The Empire of India Life Assurance Company, Limited.

WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.

Head Office || Elphinstone Circle, BOMBAY.

SEE REPORT AND OPINIONS OF THE PRESS AS TO THE REMARKABLE PROGRESS MADE BY THE COMPANY.

ENDOWMENT NON-FORFEITABLE POLICY FOR RS. 3,000.

PAYABLE AT AGE 60 OR AT DEATH, IF PREVIOUS, WITH PROFIT.

If, at any time, the assured under this plan should desire to cease paying any more premiums, he can obtain a paid-up Policy for such a proportion of the original sum assured as the number of premiums paid bears to the number agreed upon. Thus a gentleman who had assured at age 30 for a Policy of Rs. 3,000 payable at age 60 or at Death, if previous, after 5 year payments, would be entitled to a Free paid-up Policy for Rs. 500 free of future payments.

MONTHLY PREMIUM.

AT AGE 20, Rs. 6-9-0.

AT AGE 25, RS. 7-8-0.

AT AGE 30, RS. 8-14-0.

AT AGE 35, Rs. 10-18-0.

AT AGE 40, Rs. 12-12-0.

AT AGE 45, Rs. 18-10-0

SOME OF THE DISTINCTIVE FEATURES.

* Funds invested in Government Securities and in accordance with the Indian Trusts Act Policy holders can appoint their own Directors.

90 per cent. of Profits to Participating Policy holders.

Lapsed policies revived without Medical Certificate.

Liberal Surrender Values 40 per cent. of the Tabular premium paid.

Immediate payment of Claims.

Medical fees and stamps on Policies are payable by the Company.

The sum assured is PAYABLE IN FULL should death occur even immediately after payment of the first premium.

GUARANTEED INSURANCE.—This Company issues Guaranteed Policies in situation of trust and responsibility to a specially authorized to guarantee the employees of the Post Office

Proposal Forms and full Particulars may be obtained from any local Agent in India or from 22-9-10.

ALLUM, BHARUCHA & CO. Managers.

IN INDIA

EVERY ONE KNOWS.

whom it does concern that we are foremost in supplying the best

COSSI SILK SUIT PIECES

suitable for the season. These pieces are strong, fancy and durable, and have been specially manufactured for Indiaⁿ Market. Each piece guaranteed for One Suit Complete.

Price Rs. 10 per piece.

Write to—THE BHARGAVA COMMERCIAL SOCIETY,
4-18, Benares City.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER. Contract Rates for Advertisements.

Number of Insertions.	1 Inch.		2 Inches.		3 Columns.		4 Columns.		5 Columns.		Page.
	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.
13	11	0	16	0	20	0	30	0	50	0	87	0
25	16	0	25	0	30	0	50	0	87	0	156	0
52	25	0	38	0	50	0	87	0	156	0	300	0

Casual advertisements at Rs. 4 per line for the 1st insertion and Rs. 2 per line of succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

WONDERFUL TONIC AND

MOUTH-REFRESHER

JINTAN.

This is a safe and efficient remedy in all kinds of diseases or disturbances of the digestive organs. It is composed entirely of VEGETABLE INGREDIENTS made from the prescription of the following eminent medical men viz:—
 NORIHIRO MIWA, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy,
 ZENJIRO INOUE, M. D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy
 and testified as to its efficacy by
 Baron J. MATSUMOTO, M. D., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Army.
 T. MITAMURA Esq., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Navy.

As a digestive it is unequalled and will not disturb the functions of the most delicate stomach. Its antiseptic properties render it very efficacious in warding off disease and at the same time it imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath of the user.

By virtue of its aroma, it effectually makes the odour of Tobacco and Alcoholic Spirits.

It acts beneficially on the vocal cords and has found much favour with public speakers, actors, singers and those whose vocation necessitates a severe strain on the throat.

GOOD FOR

Billiousness, Headache, Vertigo, Nausea, Indigestion, Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, etc., etc.

To maintain general health 2 to 3 pills may be taken occasionally, well masticated.

Price—Small Packet Rs. 0-1-0. Middle Packet, with Tin case., Rs. 0-4-0. Large, Pocket with fancy case., Rs. 1-0-0

Prepared by Messrs. MORISHITA Co., OSAKA, JAPAN.

Sole Agents: Jintan Agency (G. R. Chaubal), Juma Masjid, BOMBAY.

FOR PAINS
 AND ACHES
 SPRAINS ETC.
 USE:—

AMRUTANJAN.

The magical pain balm extant. Cures all aches & pains. Costs 8 As. Sold everywhere.

By Appointment to H. E. the Governor
 Sir George Sydenham Clarke of
 Bombay.

HARIDAS VALJI,

(KING OF INDIAN CONFECTIONERS)

Highest Confectioner, Caterer and Grand
 Military Contractor.

Proprietor—RATINATH,

Chitra Bazar & Grant Road,

BOMBAY.

20-4-19.

DENTISTRY.

Extractions Painless;
 Terms Very Moderate;
 Gold Crown, Bar and
 Bridge Work a Speciality
 (teeth without plate);
 Latest Successful Treatment
 for Pyorrhoea (pus in gums).

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

Hours: 8-1-30 & 5-7-30; Daily.
 (Sundays—From 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.)

ADROOS BUILDING,
 NEW CHANNI ROAD,
 GINOAON, BOMBAY. } 1-6-19.

K. R. AMAT,
 Surgeon Dentist.

THE INDIAN * SOCIAL * REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY MORNING.

Office—EMPIRE BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD, FORT.

Editor:—K. NATARAJAN

Vol. XXX. BOMBAY—SUNDAY, JANUARY 4, 1920. No. 18.

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard."
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

Non-Brahmins in Conference.	The Borstal System in the Punjab.
The Scope of Social Reform.	The Indian National Social Conference.
The Karnatak Education Society.	The Indian National Congress.
Sir Sankaran Nair in the India Council.	Swami Vivekananda's Birthday.
The Amritsar Congress.	Export of Cattle.
The Moderate Conference.	The Bombay Presidency Social Reform Association.
The National Social Conference.

NOTES.

Non-Brahmins in Conference: The Non-Brahmin movement in Madras inaugurated by the late Dr. T. M. Nair is, we are glad to see, turning its attention to social and religious reform. A non-Brahmin Social Workers' Conference was held last week along with the political Conference. The resolution advocating the installation and daily worship of a Hindu idol by educationally qualified Hindus not necessarily belonging to hereditarily priestly communities, is not the kind of religious reform which will advance Brahmins or non-Brahmins. Still, it is satisfactory to note that the fact that religion is at the root of reform, is being recognised. Rao Bahadur O. Kandaswami Chetti moved the following resolution: "That in the opinion of this Conference, the time has come when the Non-Brahmins of Southern India should give up altogether the Brahminical customs of infant marriage and enforced widowhood and the Brahminical habit of treating several classes as untouchable." With the general purport of this resolution, we are wholly in sympathy. But surely infant marriage was not originally a Brahminical custom. The late Pandit Iswar Chandra Vidyasagar, Dewan Bahadur Raghoonath Rao, and scholars have maintained that the remarriage of widows was permitted in ancient times. We do not know if the institution of "untouchables" is of Brahminical origin, but the fact remains that it prevails most widely in Southern India where non-Brahmin influence has been paramount. It was the practice some years ago to ascribe all our bad social customs to Mahomedan influence, but a better acquaintance with history has led to this convenient theory being largely given up. Surely social reform need not be made the plaything of caste rivalries.

The Scope of Social Reform: We print today Sir Narayan Chandavarkar's important message to the Amritsar National Social Conference recommending the enlargement of the scope of the movement to subjects which in the West are comprised in the term social reform. In this connection, the following timely observations by the Modern Review are worth noting: "It will not do for us merely to play to the gallery by sneering at either the "Moderates" or the "Extremists." Among the ranks of both, in varying proportions in different places, we find men who are wise enough to appreciate the great need for social reform if political reform is to make much progress. And we should remember that with us social reform must not concern itself only with such comparatively easy matters (from the point of view of moral courage and facing unpopularity) as the housing of the poor, the shortening of the hours of labour, the throwing open of places of innocent amusement on Sundays, and the like. In India, it has to concern itself with much more vital and fundamental problems which have been long solved in the advanced countries of the West. Our hoary traditions, our hidebound customs, our rooted superstitions, our slavish and blind submission to religious authority, our immemorial social usages, make the task a tremendously up-hill one. The whole outlook, the entire spirit, must be transformed in order to bring social life in conformity with our political aspirations." Care will no doubt be taken that the Social Conference does not, in its widened scope, lose sight of the deeper things mentioned by our contemporary.

The Karnatak Education Society. A correspondent writes:—"The Karnatak Education Society has come forward with a timely proposal to open a second grade Arts College at Dharwar. All preparations for the opening of the College seem to have been made and the Government referred to in the matter of granting affiliation. The demand for higher education in the Karnatak seems to be fast growing and the Government will do well to liberally help the society to meet the increased need of provision in the first two years classes, and immediately raise their own college to its full status. The large saving so secured, can profitably be directed towards founding technical and other institutions for professional education in the Karnatak, where approved private enterprise in these directions is not readily available. Moreover, we learn that the Karnatak students, resorting to Poona or Bombay for their collegiate education, suffer considerable difficulties with regard to hostel and other arrangements and that their health is exposed to great risk. Dharwar is the central city of the Karnatak and is known for its bracing climate. Under these circumstances, we feel no justification possible in compelling even a few Karnatak students to go to these mofussil cities when a recognised local body has voluntarily come forward to make the necessary provision."

Sir Sankaran Nair in the India Council: The Secretary of State for India has appointed Sir Sankaran Nair a member of the India Council. The appointment is made under the terms of the new Act.

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, JANUARY 4, 1920.

THE AMRITSAR CONGRESS.

For sudden the worst turns the best to the brave,
The black minute's at end,
And the element's rage, the fiend-voices that rave,
Shall dwindle, shall blend,
Shall change, shall become first a peace out of pain,
Then a light, then thy breast,
O thou soul of my soul! I shall clasp thee again,
And with God be the rest!—Prospice, Browning.

The outstanding impression left by Amritsar on one's mind is of a great, a vast popular upheaval. The Reception Committee of the National Congress, under the able guidance of Swami Shraddhanand, had done its best in circumstances of unprecedented difficulty. But the people of Amritsar had taken the matter in their own hands, and the most marked feature of Amritsar's welcome to her guests was its gracious spontaneity. When the downpour of rain had laid the Congress grounds under water, and made the tents provided for the delegates uninhabitable, scores of householders moved into the houses of friends and relatives, and placed their own homes at the disposal of the men who came in their hundreds by every train. The streets, the approaches to the railway station, the railway station itself, were a mass of humanity. Heaps of bright yellow flowers are everywhere: girls and women wait on the wayside with garlands of them in their hands to welcome the leaders. The stranger finds himself courteously stopped in the street with kind enquiries as to his name and province, and welcomed with a glad namaskar from gray-bearded, great-turbaned men. Amritsar, it is clear, is delighted to have her guests from far and near within her gates. They have come to mourn with her—the badge of the Congress delegate is a plain black rosette—but the Punjab will not let her hospitality be clouded by her sorrows. It would be rash to generalise about a whole province. But the people who crowded the streets of Amritsar during Congress week, were not a calculating lot: they were a generous, impulsive, emotional people who took you to their hearts at first sight, and gave you all their confidence, and took infinite pains to make you feel that you were one of themselves, and not a stranger and a guest. The Punjab has won the hearts of all those who were at Amritsar. Always the martyr province of India, receiving the first shock of invasions and invaders, she is now in a special sense endeared and sanctified in the heart of India. One figure stands prominent in one's impression of the Amritsar week—Swami Shraddhanand who, like Savonarola, took upon himself secular duties at the dire hour of his people's need. The tall figure, clad in the immemorial Kashaya of India's world-renouncers, with striking features beaming with power and benignity, was here, there and everywhere, attending to the humblest visitor and to the minutest detail of a tremendous organisation. One railway authority estimated that twenty-thousand persons had arrived at Amritsar.

JALLIANWALA.

One of the first things on arrival at Amritsar is a visit to Jallianwala Bagh. The place has been described so often that it is needless to do it again. A narrow bottle-neck between brick-structures leads to a large open space overlooked on all sides by houses. At the far end to the right is a sort of narrow doorway—the only exit. Towards the middle, also slightly to the right, stands a small temple, also of brick. Half-way in the middle to the left is a well without any protecting walls. At the end and at the sides towards it, are walls, mostly of mud, in attempting to clamber over which many men appear to have been shot down. Half the space at present is now dug up for foundations, for a market, it was said. The other half, it had been proposed to buy up as the site for a monument to those who fell there on the disastrous Vaishak day. Streams of men and women are constantly to be seen walking all over the place, examining the bullet marks on the walls, securing souvenirs of blood-sodden earth which seems to be especially frequent round about the small temple. Another much visited locality is called, as far as one can make out, Kaurianwala's Khu. This is a narrow paved lane between high buildings, and it was here that the crawling order was enforced indiscriminately on all, because a few ruffians committed the brutal and cowardly assault on the missionary lady, Miss Sherwood. Jallianwala Bagh and Kaurianwala's Khu form the back-ground against which one pictures Amritsar during Congress week. The Town Hall, the National Bank, and the Prayer Hall stand, in their dismantled state, humiliating reminders of the destructive fury of the mob. It is the Indian view—not only politicians, but retired Government servants and prosperous merchants who never took part in politics, say the same thing—that the mob was exasperated by being fired upon while peacefully on its way to make a representation to the chief civil authority regarding the sudden deportation of two local leaders.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ADDRESS.

In order to do justice to the Hon. Pandit Motilal Nehru's presidential address to the Congress, it is necessary to remember that he has been in the Punjab for weeks, foregoing his lucrative legal practice in Allahabad, investigating the occurrences of April last. He knows a good deal more of the inner truth of these things than any one else, with the exception only of the Hon. Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and Mr. Gandhi. From what we have heard independently from absolutely reliable sources, we are able to say that the presidential address, so far as the Punjab trouble is concerned, errs, if at all, on the side of moderation. We do not know what the report of the Congress Sub-Committee of Enquiry, of which Mr. Motilal was till recently chairman, will contain. But we have heard, we repeat from unimpeachable sources, enough to convince us that the view that the Punjab trouble was mainly the result of gross maladministration is thoroughly sound. These matters, it is said, are sub-judice and Mr. Motilal should not have referred to them. But it is Government, by passing the Indemnity Act, that has made such abstinence impossible. The announcement that there is to be an enquiry was made some time in June or July. The enquiry actually began in November. Meanwhile, in September, Government had introduced and carried through the Legislative Council a measure relieving of legal consequences every officer whose actions are certified by the Secretary to Government as having been done in good faith for the preservation of order. We do not think that Government had at the time a full knowledge of all the actions that were to be covered by the Indemnity Act. They were, for instance, not aware of the extent of the execution done under General Dyer's orders at Jallianwala Bagh. We are not inclined to exempt the Secretary of State from responsibility for the untimeliness of the Indemnity Act. After having promised an enquiry, he should have insisted on such a measure being postponed until after the completion of the enquiry, protecting the officers concerned from any action at law in the interval by means, if necessary, of a suspensory Act. We ought to say, in passing, that Sir Dinshah Wacha's hasty and ill-judged support of the Indemnity Act in the Legislative Council, has been taken to heart in the Punjab. One heard it said again and again that that went a great way to estrange the Punjab from the Moderates few of whom, as a matter of fact, approve of Sir Dinshah's action in this regard.

PANDIT MOTILAL NEHRU ON THE REFORM ACT.

While we appreciate the restraint and moderation of the presidential address in so far as it relates to the Punjab trouble, we think that Mr. Motilal fell far short of justice, both to himself and to his subject, in his comments on the Reform Act. The scheme of the Act is admittedly a compromise, and any one can point out weak points in a compromise. But a publicist of Mr. Motilal's standing and experience, was expected to take the scheme as a whole and to judge of its parts, not as isolated pieces, but in relation to the entire scheme. It is clear that he has not studied the subject with as much care as he has devoted to the Punjab troubles. His criticisms are academic and even his information is incorrect. He errs much in the same way—though in the contrary direction—as the Government of India's final despatch on the scheme. If we wish to be trusted, we do not do well to begin by intensely distrusting those whom we want to trust us. It is wise to be generous even in politics. The President's criticisms are conceived in a carping, petulant spirit. He has not in this matter risen to the occasion. One cannot help feeling that Mr. Motilal was not quite true to himself in this part of the address: that he was more concerned with keeping up with a party than with doing justice to a great experiment. Perhaps, if the King's Proclamation had come a week earlier, the President would have had time to readjust his angle of vision. It took him unawares. A more practised and resourceful leader would have flung the printed address aside, and dealt with the Reform scheme in the spirit of His Majesty's Proclamation. The President's peroration, however, makes up for any defects:

We must aim at an India where all are free and have the fullest opportunities of development; where women have ceased to be in bondage, and the rigours of the caste system have disappeared; where there are no privileged classes or communities; where education is free and open to all; where the capitalist and the landlord do not oppress the labourer and the ryot; where labour is respected and wellpaid, and poverty, the nightmare of the present generation, is a thing of the past. Life will then be worth living in this country, it will be inspired by joy and hope, and the terrible misery we see around us will become a bad dream which has faded away from our memory, on our awakening to welcome the morning sun. But that day is yet distant. We have still a difficult path, full of obstacles and pitfalls, before us. Let us march ahead with truth for our guide and courage our watchword and before long we shall reach the promised land.

CONGRESS RESOLUTIONS.

The National Congress conveyed its loyal acknowledgments to His Majesty for his gracious Proclamation and recorded a resolution welcoming the announcement of the intended visit of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. Of the other resolutions, interest naturally centres on those relating to Punjab affairs and the Reform Act. It was a foregone conclusion that the Congress resolutions on the Punjab occurrences should give adequate expression to the public feeling in the province. The resolutions dealing with the official acts and policy, were appropriately preceded by a resolution of emphatic condemnation of the excesses and violence of the mob, moved by Mr. Gandhi and supported by Swami Shradhdhanand, the two great moral influences at the last Congress. Mr. Gandhi maintained that there was no greater resolution before the assembly than this, "the whole key to success in the future lies in your hearty acceptance of this resolution—the hearty recognition of the truth underlying this resolution and acting up to it to the extent that we feel in recognising the eternal truth that underlies this resolution." Swami Shradhanand said that in condemning their own people for their misdeeds, they were merely cutting off a diseased limb for the good of the body. Opinions may differ as to the expediency at the present stage of passing the resolutions urging the relieving of General Dyer of his command, the removing of Sir Michael O'Dwyer from the Army Commission, and the recall of the Viceroy. The Congress, in our view, would have done better to have contented itself with condemning measures leaving the men concerned to be dealt with by the proper authorities. But local feeling regarding the first two officers demanded recognition, and the fact that the resolutions were moved by Mrs. Besant and Professor Ruchi Bam—an educationist and social and religious reformer for the first time appearing on a political platform—conveys its own significance. The resolution urging the recall of Lord Chelmsford is without precedent in the annals of the Congress. The Bombay Presidency Association, we think, once passed a resolution demanding the recall of Lord Curzon. But the Congress had not followed the Association. We ourselves suggested on a recent occasion that a change of Viceroyalty would appreciably assist the restoration of public confidence in the Government of India. Nobody can question the right of the Congress to suggest the recall of a Viceroy who has proved a failure, as Lord Chelmsford has done, but the greater the restraint it shows in regard to personal topics the more weight is it likely to carry with the public here and in England. The Viceroy, when all is said, has been confronted by unprecedented difficulties, and this fact should not be omitted in any responsible judgment of his career in this country.

THE CONGRESS AND THE REFORM ACT.

But it is in regard to its resolution on the Reform Act that the Congress, we are sorry to say, utterly discredited itself as the mouthpiece of responsible opinion in the country. And it did this at the instigation of Mr. Tilak and against the earnest appeals of Mr. Gandhi and the Hon. Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya. The curious part of the matter is that Mr. Tilak had not many days ago expressed himself in regard to the reforms in a sense quite the contrary of the line he took in the Congress. He had cabled to the Secretary of State promising co-operation, when the King's Proclamation was published. Mr. Gandhi used very strong language in denouncing the tergiversation of Mr. Tilak. But Mr. Tilak has ever been, for all his great personal talents, a very slippery politician, and he cannot afford at this stage of his career to let Mr. C. R. Dass or Mr. Satyamurti outdo him as expounders of the creed of irreconcilable extremism. He is one of the men who are interested in widening and perpetuating the breach between Moderates and Radicals, as Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya is to heal the differences and to close the division. We are grieved that the Congress allowed itself to follow the guidance of Mr. Tilak and to turn a deaf ear to the pleadings of men vastly his superiors in wisdom and political insight. The resolution which it has passed does not reflect the opinion of any informed person in this country, and, as we said, Mr. Tilak himself had accepted the reforms. No honest thinker can deny that the Reform Act is vastly superior to the Reform Bill as it was introduced in Parliament. The King's Proclamation has emphasised and, in the opinion of competent judges, enlarged the hopes held out by the Act. A great opportunity has been lost of bringing the Congress once more into line with the considered judgment of the country. We had hoped that, after his utterances in England, Mr. Tilak would turn over a new leaf and utilise the new opportunities to build up instead of pulling down. That hope has been destroyed. But it is a mistake to assume that the Tilak policy is in the ascendant. On the contrary, there are unmistakable signs that the country is getting tired of his barren tactics, and the Congress resolution marks really the climax of his egotistic and unprincipled opportunism.

THE MODERATE CONFERENCE.

The all-India Moderate Conference met at Calcutta on Tuesday with Sir P. S. Sivaswami Iyer, late member of the Madras Executive Council, for President. The presidential address was, as might have been expected, an able, impartial and thoughtful pronouncement, and it touched on almost all the important questions of the hour. As a contribution to our political literature, it is above the level of the Congress presidential address. Sir Sivaswami Iyer's estimate of the merits and potentialities of the Reform Act, is much nearer the right one than Pandit Motilal's. On one point, however, we do not agree with Sir Sivaswami. He was evidently referring to the demand for a declaration of rights when he said "while stoutly opposing all improper measures of repressive legislation, we shall not seek to fetter the powers of the Indian Legislature." This demand was preferred long before the Punjab occurrences. It was, if we remember, first put forward shortly after Mrs. Besant's internment. There is, therefore, no point in the criticism that a declaration of rights will not prevent the declaration of martial law. Nobody said that it would. But it will prevent the suppression of public meetings and of the freedom of the press, and it will prevent the passing of Rowlatt Acts. The example of the United States is probably a safer one for us to follow than that of Great Britain in matters of his kind, as our conditions more approximate to those of the United States than that of the latter country. There is still less point in the objection that there will be more Indian members in the Government. We all know that an Indian member can be as much an obstinate bureaucrat as an English member of Council, and three such Indians—not by any means an impossibility—would not add to the security of the subject. It will be even worse if the Indians differ among themselves.

Sir Sivaswami's analysis of the Punjab situation was acute, penetrating and, in some respects, more damning, because of its very detachment, than Pandit Motilal's. Take, for instance, the following comment on the happenings at Amritsar under Martial law :

It is a strange feature of the mental constitution of those military officers that they should have imagined that the steps they took were a remedy for the sullenness of the people and a means for promoting the popularity of the Government. We are naively told by General Sir William Benyon that instead of being unduly severe, the administration erred on the side of leniency and that he and Sir Michael O'Dwyer approved of General Dyer's exploit. It is inconceivable that such things can ever happen under the name of martial law in England or even in Ireland. That they could have happened in India shows the ineptitude of the present system of government. It is obvious that the Government of India must have regarded the opposition to the Rowlatt Bill as a direct challenge of their authority and as a trial of strength between the people and the government and that, having given their promise of support to the local authorities, they were prevented by panic and love of prestige from listening to the representations of Indian leaders, or making any attempt to see things for themselves. It is no wonder that the hearts of our people have been stirred by these doings to their inmost depths. The indecent haste with which the Indemnity Bill was rushed through the Imperial Council is now intelligible. It will also be clear how well-founded the objection of the people was to the provisions of the Rowlatt Bill which entrust the liberty of the subject to the mercy of the Executive.

The main defect of Sir Sivaswami's address is that it gives no evidence, contains no hint, that its author has a perception that there are aspects of the national problem which are neither administrative nor, in the narrow sense of the term, political. Pandit Motilal in his peroration showed that he could look beyond politics. Sir Sivaswami has no word about the position of women in the national life, or, of caste though he comes from a province where caste is now the prominent factor in politics.

On the whole, while we are inclined to agree that there is room for a Moderate Conference (by whatever name it may be called), we do not think that it is as a distinct party, but as a second chamber, a revising, delaying device, of our unofficial Parliament. The Congress has become impossible for purposes of deliberation. It is more and more becoming an institution for imparting knowledge of and interest in politics to the masses. The increasing use of the vernaculars has broken the partition between the English-educated classes and the masses, and the result is a sense of strength and power in both which was hitherto inappreciable. The Congress is thus a dynamic force which needs a guiding and restraining influence. On the other hand, according to Sir Sivaswami Iyer's own statement, the Moderate Conference's part is to co-operate with officials and non-officials in advancing public welfare. An individual or institution with co-operation as its distinctive feature and method, is as a rule not likely to be abounding in initiative. A person who is ready to cooperate with all, has seldom any end or aim of his own. The programme laid down at Calcutta for the Moderates, is too cautious and calculating to evoke enthusiasm. We want a combination of intellect and enthusiasm to push forward national progress—the former to take charge of the steering gear, the latter to supply the driving power. The Moderate Conference may supply the steering skill but the Congress must provide the driving-power.

THE NATIONAL SOCIAL CONFERENCE.

The National Social Conference was held in the Congress pandal on Sunday evening, the 28th December, and was attended by about 8,000 persons, of whom over 1,000 were women. Rai Bahadur Ganga Ram, a staunch and munificent supporter of the widow re-marriage movement, welcomed the delegates in a forceful Urdu speech in which he emphasised the need of widow re-marriage reform in Hindu society. Lala Hansraj, retired Principal and Founder of the D. A. V. School and leader of the Arya Samaj movement, was elected President and he delivered a comprehensive and eloquent speech on the social reform movement. Then Mr. Devdhar read the following message from Sir Narayan Chandavarkar the General Secretary :

"It is a matter to me of the deepest regret and disappointment that owing to illness in my family I am unable to attend the session of the Indian National Social Conference at Amritsar, which, in kind response to so many, you and other ardent social reformers of the Punjab, have at such short notice and in the midst of Punjab's sufferings, organized. For that prompt and patriotic action you all deserve the warmest acknowledgements of all earnest lovers and servants of the Motherland. You deserve them all the more because the Social Conference at Amritsar this year will be held at an epoch-making period in the history of this ancient and living land of ours. A new era, throbbing with the aspirations of a higher life of union and achievement, is dawning upon us or has already dawned. Of the many signs of that new life none is more marked than the spirit of patriotism and nationality, and of service to the Motherland and sacrifice in her cause which have more or less diffused themselves among all classes and communities. If it is easy to exaggerate the extent and character of that diffusion, it is just as easy to ignore and underestimate them. Whatever the extent or character, there is an awakened conscience and there is an awakened consciousness of higher life in the country. It is true that that conscience and that consciousness have during the last few years, when they have made their voice heard before the world more forcibly than ever before, been almost wholly political in their outlook and activity so much so as to give one the impression that we have in India thrust back social reform and deified instead the political. But the social reform movements and agitations during the last 100 years in India will show that with the growth of years and under the stress of a variety of circumstances both kinds of reform, have been thinning the partition wall which divided them, and seeking to coalesce and absorb each other. Not to go further back than the last five years, witness how Indian politics of these years have caught the social reformers' views and pleaded for women's emancipation and the untouchable's elevation. The fact is after nearly a century of political and social work, begun by our first political and social reformer, Raja Ram Mohan Roy, after varied experiences, diverse struggles, painful controversies and some sufferings, we have arrived at that stage in the line of our progress when we are able to perceive most clearly than ever that social reform is the whole of which the political, the industrial, the educational etc., are but parts and that these parts are interactive and interdependent. In Europe and America when they speak of social reconstruction now, they mean all the categories of national life. The time has come for us, social reformers and workers to enlarge the meaning and scope of social reform and extend our activity and outlook to such questions as the education of the masses, the sanitation of the country, the housing of the poor, the care of the sick and the feeble, the employment of labour on rational lines, the provision of healthy recreation and amusements for the masses, village sanitation and rural education, instead of confining social reform as we have hitherto confined it to female education, widow remarriage removal of caste restrictions and such other items.

By so enlarging this Conference and the scope of social reform, we shall not be trenching upon the sphere of political bodies or purely industrial and economic organisation or sanitary institutions, provided we adhere faithfully to and keep prominently before our minds' eye the distinguishing aim of this Conference, which is to touch, purify, elevate, and invigorate the political, industrial and municipal life of the country by developing its domestic and social forces, which are the feeders and makers of that life. It is said we live in times of democracy, when the age calls for equality of opportunity for all, high and low, rich and poor. Democracy is more a social, than a political force and must find, to be healthy, its life, first in our home life and social life to make our political and industrial life wholesome. That is the call of the times to us from the spirit of the Age and may the Social Conference meeting under your blessed auspices help the spirit by a hearty response for the inauguration of the New Era.

THE BORSTAL SYSTEM IN THE PUNJAB,

(BY MR. EDMUND CANDLER.)

III.

To perfect the Borstal system and to secure its aims legislation is necessary. In the first place, the short period of detention must be abolished; the full period is necessary for an adequate training. The next important point is the provision for conditional release for all classes confined in the jail, not merely for the limited classes dealt with in the English system. Mr. Cowan is very strong on these points. In conclusion he canvasses the sympathetic interest and assistance of the educated classes. Unofficial support is essential. One way in which the public can show their interest in the work, is by forming societies for the care of conditionally released inmates during their period of conditional release, and if necessary, after their release.

"The direct responsibilities of Government" Mr. Cowan points out, "end with providing a really sound training for the lads in the institution and the necessary machinery, also perhaps of a Central Committee, itself partly unofficial, to keep in touch with local philanthropic societies and individuals and supply them with suitable lads. After that, Government can help in, but cannot and should not undertake, the after care of all the lads. The ultimate success of the movement depends on unofficial interest of a practical kind, combined with sympathy. For, as Sir Ruggles-Brise has so well said—"Of all the human factors making for reformation (of the juvenile offender) the greatest is the personal interest of good and manly men."

Mr. Cowan concludes with some practical suggestions which we quote in full. "Large landlords can take some lads trained in agriculture; industrial concerns can take those trained to trades; philanthropic societies connected with particular religions can take boys of that religion and arrange for their employment while themselves supervising their conduct. There is also no reason why Co-operative Societies which already take an interest in education should not also take an interest in the reformation of local young criminals. The doors of the services may even be opened as they have been in many cases for members of criminal tribes. One or two have actually been enlisted as jail warders and have done well. The Salvation Army has for some years had a settlement at Dandpur, Lahore, for conditionally released lads, and indeed it was General Booth Tucker who initiated the movement for conditional release. An enterprising European landlord in the Lower Bari Doab colony has made a very good offer for agriculturists and the management of the New Egerton Mills at Dhariwal is taking a great interest in the movement. Lahore Municipality has also taken one or two lads as carpenters on conditional release; these lads live just outside the jail under the supervision of the Jailor."

"In short, the possibilities are very great indeed, if real public interest and sympathy can be created. Representative societies of all the great religions of the province have come forward to help in the reclamation of the criminal tribes and this is a hopeful sign for the future of the Borstal system, once Indian interest in it is created."

THE INDIAN NATIONAL SOCIAL CONFERENCE.

RESOLUTIONS.

WIDENING MEANING OF "SOCIAL REFORM."

That this Social Conference recognizing the fresh life opened out to the country by the new era upon which it is entering and the urgent call that fresh life makes for the social reconstruction of India's national life, is of opinion that the term Social Reform should be widened so as to comprehend besides the items of reform hitherto advocated by the Conference those additional measures which are necessary for the development of the industrial, economic, sanitary, and educational interests of the Indian people in rural and urban areas, and towards that end the Conference resolves that an All-India Council of the Social Conference, consisting of about 100 willing workers all over the country, be formed and the General Secretary in Bombay and other Secretaries of the National Social Conference with the help of Provincial Secretaries newly appointed be empowered to move in that matter to concert measures for the propagandist and practical work all over the country and in that behalf to collect the necessary funds and take such steps as may be deemed useful in furtherance of the specific object.

THE ELEVATION OF THE DEPRESSED CLASSES.

That in the opinion of this Conference the position of the depressed classes in the Hindu Community is very distressing and the main difficulty in the way of their elevation and social improvement is untouchability. This conference therefore while appreciating the measures taken so far by Government and a number of Religious Bodies and Social Reform Associations for their uplift is still of opinion that the action taken is quite inadequate to meet the serious needs of the problem affecting a large portion of the Hindu population. This Conference therefore urges upon Government, Social Reform Associations, Religious Reform Associations and Philanthropic bodies, the need for providing greater facilities for their education, economic and sanitary improvement and thus make it easy for the question of untouchability to be solved and to enforce equality of treatment in all public institutions so as to remove the prejudices and disabilities of untouchableness attaching to them.

ABOLITION OF CASTE AND INTER CASTE MARRIAGES.

That in the opinion of this Conference the system of caste, as it prevails in the Hindu Society, constitutes a serious obstacle to the growth of a social, industrial and national life on sound lines. The Conference therefore urges upon Social Reform Associations all over the country as well as other public bodies and workers the necessity of sustained endeavours for the abolition of caste by measures such as inter-dining inter-marriages, etc., etc.

THE EDUCATION OF WOMEN.

That while expressing satisfaction at the progress of education among women in this country though slow and small, this Conference strongly urges upon the attention of Government and the people the great and urgent need for much larger and speedier expansion of the elementary and higher education among women and specially calls upon Government to make more liberal grants of funds and provide ample suitable facilities such as girls schools in rural areas, Girls' high Schools in urban areas and Arts, Training and Medical Colleges for women. Copies of this resolution be sent to the Imperial and all Provincial Governments in the country.

WOMEN FRANCHISE.

That this Conference accords its hearty support to the demand for the enfranchisement of Indian women. While expressing its regret and disappointment at the fact that this claim has not been conceded in the new Government of India Act, it trusts that no time will be lost in affording the necessary facilities to Indian womanhood in exercising the ordinary rights of citizenship for which the Conference notices with great satisfaction a genuine desire on the part of women themselves. This resolution should be submitted to the proper authorities.

THE EDUCATION AND TRAINING OF WIDOWS.

That in order to ameliorate the condition of widows and to enable them to utilise their talents and services for the benefit of the society on the basis of a self-reliant and self-respecting life this Conference recommends very strongly the establishment of institutions for their education and training to achieve that purpose and expresses its high appreciation of the existing institution-like the widows' home at Poona, Madras, Mysore, Indore and Cawnpore and commends the efforts that are being made in this direction by Poona Seva Sadan, Bombay Seva Sadan, and the Vanita Vishram of Bombay and Surat and Ahmedabad. It further highly appreciates the recent endowment of Rai Bahadur Ganga Ram C. I. E. M. V. O. to promote the widows' cause as announced by Sir Edward E. Maclagan in his recent convocation address.

THE REMARRIAGE OF WIDOWS.

That this Conference welcomes the growing support to the widow remarriage movement in the country and appreciates the work of the Punjab Vidvya Vivaha Sabaik Sabha, and further urges upon the other social reform associations throughout the country to follow its example and to co-operate with it in extending its sphere of activities in other Provinces so as to carry on more active propaganda on the subject of widow remarriage and to enlist the practical sympathies of the people to the cause of improving the lot of poor widows by the advocacy of remarriage.

TEMPERANCE WITH A VIEW TO TOTAL PROHIBITION.

In the opinion of this Conference the evil of drink increasing in the country needs to be attacked vigorously with a view to securing its total prohibition, and therefore urges upon the Government and public bodies to carry on a vigorous propaganda to check the evil and to strive for securing its total abolition by legislative measures at an early date.

THE INDIAN NATIONAL CONGRESS.

SWAMI SHRADDHANANDA'S ADDRESS.

The following is a summary of the address delivered by Swami Shraddhanand in Hindi as Chairman of the Reception Committee of the Indian National Congress at Amritsar on the afternoon of the 27th of December.

Swami Shradhanand as Chairman of the Congress Reception Committee delivered an address of welcome in Hindi beginning with a short prayer. In the course of his address he dwelt chiefly on the occurrences in the Punjab and Delhi and on the Hindu Moslem unity and national awakening that have followed in their wake and declared that the incidents of April last had accelerated the political advance of the Punjab by fifty years.

On the Reform question Swami Shradhanand said he would ask the Congress to accept the reforms, recognise their liberal features and Mr. Montagu's services and constitutionally agitate for more. Swami Shradhanand accorded the delegates a cordial welcome. The leaders who had invited the Congress to their city had commenced the educative work of making the people of the Punjab realise the significance and importance of holding the Congress soon after returning from Delhi and had achieved the first important step in bringing about Hindu-Moslem unity on the last Ramnavami day. Swami Shradhanand then dwelt on the incidents of the 10th April at length and said that people who went to see the Deputy Commissioner as their ruler were needlessly fired upon and in this connection strongly condemned in scathing terms the excesses committed by the mob which the Swami characterized as the black deeds of evil elements in the mob which constituted an indelible stain on the fair name of India. Continuing the Swami said that while Martial Law cost the lives of many men, women, and children, old and young, it also ended in a triumph for the people by cementing all the communities, creeds and castes into one homogenous whole. The Swami then paid a tribute to the services rendered to the Punjab by Pandits Malavia and Motilal Nehru who had infused the people of Amritsar with energy and determination to hold the Congress in Amritsar. That day saw the realisation of their resolve and they were able to welcome the sons and daughters of India from all parts of the country. The Swami then dwelt on the need for unity and said he himself would not have accepted the Chairmanship of the Reception Committee but for the united voice of the leaders in jail and of the Amritsar Public.

He appealed to all political parties to make sacrifices so that they might be united and in unity achieve strength. In addition the way to a common platform was smooth and did not present insurmountable difficulties. All parties were striving towards the common goal of freeing the Motherland from political subordination and securing for India an equal and real partnership within the Empire and an honoured place amongst the nations of the world. Mr. Montagu's Reform Act was said to be the apple of discord but in reality there did not appear to be great divergence of views between the Moderates or the Liberals and the Radicals. The Moderates were for accepting the scheme but so were the Radicals. For instance, had not Mr. Tilak declared the country should accept and work the reforms and continue constitutional agitation for more? He would say that the Congress was the greater body, being a representative national assembly though some of the Liberals might have a monopoly of wisdom.

Continuing the Swami said the country should recognise Mr. Montagu's services to India and ought to feel thankful to Mr. Montagu. He said he had made history. There were some who said that Mr. Montagu had done nothing more than his duty. He asked how many had done their duty by the six and a half crores of their unfortunate brethren, the so-called untouchables? They must not lose count of what they had gained while agitating for more. The Swami then dwelling on the incidents in Delhi in March and April last said that while they reminded them of the despotic days of old they also demonstrated that their heroism was not dead but only lay dormant. The blood of the citizens spilt in Delhi had cemented hearts which had been cleft for long. The Swami then paid a tribute to Mr. Gandhi and the passive resistance movement strongly criticising the prohibition order on Mr. Gandhi's entering Delhi or the Punjab and recounting at length the excesses inflicted on the people during the Martial Law regime. He said it was an official reign of lawlessness in which no value was attached to human life and all men, women and children lived in jeopardy of life, limb and honour, every moment. He then referred to the Jallianwala Bagh incident and to General Dyer's evidence before the Hunter Commission and said that though the crowd might have been dispersed without firing he fired as the crowd would have come back and laughed at him, Proceeding the Chairman said: My purpose in reminding you again of all these events is not to raise hatred in your hearts against the British nation which has given us a Ripon, a Bright, a Bradlaugh, a Wedderburn, a Hume, and a Cotton and a Hardinge, a Montagu, a Besant and an Andrews and they should remember that O'Dwyer, Dyer, Johnson and O'Brien belong to the same race. They must cast off root and branch anger and ill-will towards the authors of the incidents of April last and learn to conquer anger with peace, evil with good, and untruth with truth. Summing up the effect of the trouble through which the Punjab had passed the Swami said they were Hindu-Moslem unity which it was the foremost duty of the nation to sustain. The second result was the power of endurance and lastly they had learned the value of agitation. Proceeding he said he was not a politician at all and he would not interfere with a political programme but he would however, set before them a few proposals. The first need of the nation was the formation of character, which was the solid foundation on which nations should stand and which was an all-embracing term. In securing for every child, boy and girl national education parents ought to lead in this field. Self-sacrificing patriots like Subramania Iyer, Rabindranath Tagore and Sankaran Nair were a handful and their spirit had to be imbued if the country was to advance. The Congress had so long been doing political work and it was solely political in character but the time had come for it to accept for its motto that Politics is Religion and a rise to the summit of religion. The time for the policy of expediency and compromise in principles had gone and it was time they fearlessly and unflinchingly adhered to the truth. His second proposal was that they should resolve to reclaim the untouchables and recognise that they were also their brethren and resolve then and there that they would allow them to enter their hearts and homes. This formed the second dream of his which he wanted to be fulfilled, Hindu-Moslem unity having already been achieved. The Swami after appealing to the generous feelings of the delegates to overlook any inadequate arrangements wound up with a prayer invoking benedictions on the assembly.

SWAMI VIVEKANANDA'S BIRTHDAY.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

The fifty-eighth Birthday Anniversary of the Swami Vivekananda will be celebrated by his disciples, friends and admirers at the above address on the 18th January, 1920.

The Seva of the poor will be an important item in the programme of the celebration.

We shall look forward to the pleasure of the company and co-operation of yourself and of your friends on the occasion.

With our blessings and best wishes,

we have the honour to be

Dear Sir,

The Math, Belur, Howrah. } Always Yours in the Lord, 15th December, 1919. } BRAHMANANDA.

EXPORT OF CATTLE.

The Government of Bombay have issued the following press communique: Government understand that a recent question in Council has given rise to exaggerated rumours about the export of cows from Gujarat and Kathiawar in particular. From enquiries made it appears that the total exports of cattle during the last calendar year from Bombay have been little over 1,500. The exact figures reported are given below:—

To Brazil	1,178
To Belgium	110
To France	100
To Zanzibar	155

THE BOMBAY PRESIDENCY SOCIAL REFORM ASSOCIATION.

A HINDU WIDOW REMARRIAGE.

Under the auspices of the Hindu Widows' Home, Bombay, the remarriage of Shrimati Anasuyabai of the Gowd Saraswat community with Mr. Manilal Muljibhai Modi belonging to Khaidata Bania community was celebrated on 20th December 1913 at the premises of the Hindu Widows' Home. The ceremony was performed by Mr. A. S. Wagh, the Superintendent of the Home. A large number of ladies and gentlemen was present to witness the marriage. Among those present were the Hon'ble Mr. G. K. Parekh, Mr. Balkrishna Sharma, Mr. A. V. Chitre, Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Devrudhar, Mrs. Ramabai Gothoskar and Mrs. Adibai Vallabhdas. The marriage is registered under the Civil Marriage Act.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postages
 In advance. In arrears.
 Per annum..... Rs. 5-0-0. Rs. 6-0-0
 Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, twelve shillings (Rs. 6).
 Single copies of the current year can be had at 4 annas each and any back copies at 6 annas each.

SELF-GOVERNMENT IN ANCIENT INDIA

BY
M. V. GOPAL RAO.

"India is no stranger to Self-rule"
 "Kings elected by the people."
 "Kings deposed for mis-rule."
 "King to exercise executive functions only."
 "Taxation with the consent of the people."
 "Doctrine of the sovereignty of the people recognised."
 "Divine right no personal attribute to kings."
 MODERN REVIEW:—"This neatly printed pamphlet of 24 pages makes an admirable attempt to show that Self-rule was not a strange thing in India in olden times."
 Price 4s. 4 Four annas only. V. P. Charges extra.
 Apply to:—

ANDHRA GRANDHA RATNAGARAM,
 4-1-20. Pithapuram, (Godavari Dt.)

The following two books on trade and industries, by J. L. Dubeji, M. A. V. P., are indispensable to every English-knowing Indian gentleman:—

(1) Vyapar Mitra.—It consists of 4 parts containing more than 325 original recipes for making marketable articles for trade, such as Soap, Varnish, Polish, Ink, Sealing Wax, Rubber Toys, Imitation Gold, Silver, Pearl, Ruby, Coral, etc., Cigarettes, Matches, Carbon Paper, Pocket Press, Buttons, Gilding Powder, Hair Killer, Hair Oils, Scent, Syrups, Essences, Medicines, etc., etc. Price Rs. 1, V. P. As. 2.

The book "First Lessons in Photography" will be given free to every purchaser of Vyapar Mitra.

(2) Trade Secrets or How to become healthy and wealthy.—This book consists of 10 parts of chapters, each dealing with a series of articles on trade and industries, such as perfumery, dairy farming, agriculture, manures, etc. It also deals with cattle and human diseases with suitable prescriptions for all of them. Besides, collection of several hundreds of other useful informations and money-making secret formulas and processes have greatly increased the usefulness of the book. Reduced prices Rs. 1, V. P. As. 2.

N. B.—On account of the scarcity of paper, the next edition of these books is not expected soon, hence to avoid disappointment send for them to-day.

Address:—MANAGER, THE WALKER PRESS,
 MANGALURU U. P.

"An Appeal to the Men of India."

The Child.

His deadly peril from prostitution.
 Six annas per dozen.
 Orders may be sent to Methodist Publishing House, LUCKNOW.

"PEEPS INTO THE FUTURE"

Is everybody's everyday book. The codified experience of generations of Astrologers and Indian Yogis—an astrologer in moments of anxiety & suspense—answers short and succinctly clear on the thousand and one points of doubt and uncertainty. Everybody may consult the book—no date of birth or horoscope necessary. Must be in every pocket for it suits all. Price one rupee only. Foreign two shillings. Apply to the Proprietor.

TATA MYSTIC ASTRAL STUDIO
 24-8-19. Chodavaram, Vizagapatam District.

"MESMERISM AND HYPNOTISM."

Complete Course Rs. 1-8 only. Contents: 1. Instructions. 2. Breathing Exercise or Yoga Practice. 3. Exercises to develop this will and memory. 4. Various Hypnotic processes. 5. To wake up a subject. 6. Clairvoyance. 7. Telepathy. 8. Levitation. 9. Wonderful methods of Hindu Healing. 10. Various diseases. 11. Hindu Catalepsy or Burial alive. 12. The secret method of telling future events most wonderfully by the Indian Yogees without horoscope or birth time. Mr. Batikantha Bhowmki, Head Master writes from Senhatir on 22-10-19:—"I have become successful hypnotist with the help of your course. The methods are far easier and simpler than in any other courses. Mr. B. Sitaramurty, B.A., B.L., Government pleader writes: Your book really reveals the wonderful hidden powers of man. The methods are of the easiest kind and the book in short is the best of its kind in the field."

THE EASTERN HYPNOTIC HOME,
 P. O. Chodavaram, (Vizagapatam, Dt.)

"COMMERCE AND INDUSTRIES."

An Interesting Monthly Journal of Indian Material Progress.
 Annual Subscription Rs. 10-0 and Single Copy Re. 1 Post Free.
 A Specially valuable advertising Medium.
 Wanted Agents throughout India.
 Address:—P. Box. No. 353, and 5 Mount Road
 Madras S. C. 12-10-19

ON DUTY!

THE YOUNG COLLEGIATE IS OUT.

An educational Monthly for Young and Old.
 Editor:—Mr. R. S. NIMBKAR.

The "If's of it:—

1. If you are a Student, it will help you to the Examination Hall because your professors contribute to it.
2. If you are an active worker, it will show some field for you to solve problems, because it contains articles of your readers.
3. If you are an artist, it is illustrated for you.
4. If you are a Social reformer, it will discuss all problems of Social reform and will give you views of male and female reformers.

Whatever you are, the Monthly gives you whatever you want
 Annual Subscription Rs. 3. Single Copy Annas 8.

Wanted Agents throughout India.

For advertisement rates & other particulars apply to—

S. A. DANGE,
 Manager,
 Young Collegiate Office,
 Sandhurst Road, Bombay No. 4.
 14-12-19.

THE TATA INDUSTRIAL BANK, LD.

HEAD OFFICE, BOMBAY.
BRANCHES—CALCUTTA and HYDERABAD (Deccan)
CAWNPORE and LUCKNOW.

Sub-Branches.—

Bombay—Share Bazaar, Shroff Bazaar.

Calcutta—Baza Bazaar.

London Agents. LLOYDS BANK LIMITED.

NEW YORK AGENTS: THE GUARANTY
TRUST COY. OF NEW YORK.

AUTHORISED CAPITAL... Rs. 12,00,00,000.

SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL..... " 7,56,00,225.

PAID UP CAPITAL..... " 1,50,99,225.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS,

Sir D. J. Tata, Kt., Chairman.

Sir Sassoon David, Bart.

Sir R. N. Mookerjee, K. C. I. E.

Sir Francis Stewart, Kt.

Sir Henry Proctor, Kt.

R. D. Tata, Esq.

F. E. Dinshaw, Esq.

F. O. Rimington, Esq.

Narottam Morarjee, Esq.

Hajee Gulam Mahomed Ajam, Esq.

The Hon'ble Mr. Parshottamdas Thakordas, C. I. E.

A. J. Bilimoria, Esq.

Secretary, R. H. Parker.

Current Accounts opened and interest allowed on daily credit balances from Rs. 500/- to Rs. 1,00,000/- at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum. If the balance to the credit of any account does not fall below Rs. 25,000/- at any time between 1st January and 30th June, interest will be allowed during that period at 2½ % per annum. No interest is allowed unless the sum accrued amounts to Rs. 8/- Half-yearly.

Fixed Deposits. Interest allowed on Deposits fixed for one or two years and for shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank. Interest allowed on Savings Bank Accounts at 4 per cent per annum. Rules may be obtained on application.

Loans and Cash Credits are granted on approved Securities.

Purchases and sales of Securities and shares effected.

Bills of Exchange purchased and collected and every description of Banking and exchange business undertaken.

14-4-18. L. D. L. BUCKLEY, General Manager.

THE YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK, LIMITED.

(Registered in Japan.)
Established 1880.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 48,000,000.

Paid up Capital.....Yen. 42,000,000.

Reserve Fund.....Yen. 28,100,000.

Head Office:—Yokohama.

Branches and Agencies at Bombay, Buenos Aires, Calcutta, Changohua, Chi-Nan, Dairen, Fengtien, Hankow, Harbin, Hongkong, Honolulu, Kaiyuan, Kobe, London, Los Angeles, Lyons, Manila, Nagasaki, Newchwang, New York, Osaka, Peking, Rangoon, San Francisco, Seattle, Shanghai, Shimonoseki, Singapore, Soerabaya, Sydney, Tientsin, Tokio, Tsingtao.

Current Deposit Accounts are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at the rate of 2 per cent per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 100,000, provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of banking and exchange business transacted.

N. IGARASHI

Post Box No. 207, Hornby Road, Bombay.

I. NISHIMAKI

Manager, Calcutta.

1-12-17,

Post Box No. 406, Clive street, Calcutta

THE BANK OF BARODA, LD.

Under the Patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja Gaekwar.

Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897

HEAD OFFICE BARODA.

Branches—Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, and Surat

Capital Subscribed.....Rs. 60,00,000.

Capital Paid up " 20,00,000.

Reserve Fund " 12,50,000.

DIRECTORS :

The Hon'ble Mr. Lallubhai Samaldas, C. I. E., Chairman
Sir Vithaldas Damodar Thackersey, Kt.

Raj Rains Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti Nagar Sheth,
Baroda.

Sheth Manilal Revadas, Vadnagar.

Rao Bahadur Gunajirao R. Nimbalkar, Sur Subha, Baroda
State.

Bhaskerrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., Advocate, High Court,
Bombay.

M. H. Kantavalla, Esq., Agent, Maharaja Mill Co., Ltd.
Baroda.

R. R. Shirgaokar, Naib Subha, Baroda State.

A. N. Datar, Accountant General, Baroda State.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balance from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest which does not come to Rs. 8 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application. C. E. HANDLE,—General
15-4-12. Manager.

THE CENTRAL BANK OF INDIA, LTD

Subscribed Capital... .. Rs. 50,00,000

Paid Up Capital " 49,59,900

Reserved liability of

Shareholders " 25,00,000

Reserve Fund " 6,00,000

Head Office:—Alicia Building, Bombay.

Local Branches:—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri
Bazar, (3) Share Bazar.

Branches:—Amritsar, Calcutta, Delhi, Jharis,
Karachi.

London Agents:—London Joint City and Midland Bank, Ltd.

Current Accounts :—3 % allowed on Daily
Balances from January to June
2½ % allowed on Daily
Balances from
July to December.

12 months Deposits received at 5 % per annum.

Long and Short period Deposits received at rates
to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking Business transacted.

For further particulars please apply to the
Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA

Manager.

25-2-17

THE BANK OF TAIWAN, LTD.

Incorporated by Special Charter of the Imperial Japanese Government, 1899.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 60,000,000
Paid-up CapitalYen. 87,500,000
Reserve FundYen. 7,030,000

Head Office:—Taipeh, Formosa.

BRANCHES:—

LONDON	SHANGHAI	TOKIO
NEW YORK	HONGKONG	OSAKA
AMOY	SINGAPORE	KOBE
CANTON	SOERABAJA	YOKOHAMA
FOOHOOW	SEMARANG	AKO
HANKOW	MAKUNG	GIRAN
KIUKIANG	BATAVIA	KAGI
SWATOW	PINAN	KARENKO
TAINAN	SHINOHUKU	KEELUNG
TAKOW	TAICHU	TAMSUI

The Bank has also a large number of Correspondents at Home and Abroad.

Current Deposit Accounts—are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at 2 per cent. per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 1,00,000 provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of Banking and Exchange business transacted.

K. TAKEMURA,
Manager

9-12-17. 56, Esplanade Road, Fort, BOMBAY

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

Established 7th September 1906.

Incorporated under the Indian Companies' Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE:

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.

Capital Subscribed Rs. 1,00,00,000

Capital Called up " 50,00,000

Reserve Fund " 15,00,000

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 500 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½% p. a. throughout the year. On sums exceeding Rs. 1,00,000 interest is allowed by special arrangement. No interest will be allowed which does not amount to Rs. 8 per half year.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short periods @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

*Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application".

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, & CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stocks at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

H. P. STRINGFELLOW,

15-1-11.

Manager.

A Lady's Best Ornament is a Glorious Head of Hair.

A profusion of rich, soft silky, lustrous, wavy hair—where's the woman who would not like that?

There's only one oil that makes such hair and it's the far-famed

KAMINIA OIL (Regd.)

Invaluable for ladies, and just as much for Brain-Workers and Students.

Heated head cooled, aching disappears and dandruff becomes a thing of the past. Added to all these it possesses a beautiful fragrant smell.

For superiority, awarded a Gold Medal at the Mysore Exhibition, and in great demand all over the country.

If you have not yet used KAMINIA OIL, you

have missed a fine delight and a real boon; use it now, if only once; and like many people you will prefer to use also always

Price per bottle, Rs. 1. V. P. Charges 6 annas extra

Price for 3 bottles Rs. 2-10. V. P. charges 14 annas extra

Write now, Do not delay.

Sole Agents:—

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,
(5-3-16) No. 155, Jamma Masjid Market, BOMBAY.

Now-a-Days.

All things have advanced in price. Even the vegetable ingredients used in our Atank Nigrah Pills have advanced in price.

Even the labourers demand heavy wages being dearer. Even the users have increased yet the Atank Nigrah Pills are being sold at before war price i. e. 1 Rupee.

Valdyia Shastri

Manishanker Govindji,

Atank Nigrah Pharmacy,

Head Office:—Jamnagar—Kathiawar.

Branch:—Kalbadevi Road, Bombay.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours. Publish Fine Art Pictures, & c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.
1-12-10. HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS—

ROYAL TONIC PILLS.

Powerful Nutritious and Strength Restorer. Price Rs. 1-4 per box of 30 Pills.

PREPARED BY—GOVINDJEE DAMODER & Co.,

Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Commission Agents.
1-12-10. No. 3 Sater Chowk Market, BOMBAY.

Timely advice to the Wealthy

Costly but certain remedies are in the long run cheaper than cheap and uncertain ones.

KANDARPA SANJIVINI PILLS AND OIL

are the safest and surest remedies for indigestion, constipation, loss of appetite, memory, mental, physical and nervous debility and all sorts of urinary disorders, improve impoverished blood.

Price per tin of 40 Pills Rs. 5 & per tola of Oil Rs. 10.

Both Purchased at a time Rs. 11/4--

Medical Advice and a Medical Book containing 128 pages sent Gratis and Post Free.

RAJ VAIDYA NARAYANJI KESHAVJI

Head Office :-Jamnagar, Kathiawar, (India.)

Branch :-No. 187, Kalbadevi Road,
24-8-1919. BOMBAY.

Empire Hindu Hotel

Opposite Victoria Terminus
Bombay.

(Central Situation)
Strictly Vegetarian

Charges Moderate
furnished with

Electric Lift, Fans and Lights.

TELEGRAMS: } TELEPHONE

"FOOD," BOMBAY. } 2789.

22-6-19.

Saffron? Saffron?? Saffron??
If you wish to buy genuinely pure and best Saffron it is
SUN

BRAND

SAFFRON

ONLY

It has been largely used by Jain Temples, Maharajas, Durbars, Hakims and Vaidyas all over the country for the last 75 year and is well known for its purity and genuineness.

17-2-18

S. NARAEN & Co.,
21, Humnum Street, Fort Bombay.

REVOLUTION IN SHORTHAND.

There are systems and systems, but that one is the most "practical" which can be written with a pen or pencil straight away on unruled paper, without thickening, positions, grammalogues, multitudes of rules and exceptions, arbitrary word-signs and contractions, long lists of phrases, and various other impediments to speed. The New "ROYAL-SPEED" Course of 12 Lessons, incorporated by Expert who introduced the Original Duployan Joined-Vowel Scheme in the East, has all the advantages of a modern, down-to-date system, and is acquired by Boys and Girls of 12, in a fraction of time. Quickest Results and Highest Efficiency are Guaranteed. Personal or Postal Tuition. Prospective pupils must investigate, as interested parties seem to recommend the only system known to them.

NATIONAL BUSINESS COLLEGE,
1st Floor, Luxmi Bldg., Lamington Road, Bombay.

"EVERYTHING FOR EVERYBODY"

National Standard Portable Typewriter No. 3 (10 lbs.) Rs. 190
Oliver No. 5 (American Rebuilt) B.S. & Tab. Rs. 175; No. 7 " 200
Empire No. 1 (Do.) in good working order . . . " 85
Multikopy Typewriter Carbons, per Box of 100 sheets. " 8
Webster Brand " Ribbons for all machines, Doz. . . " 21
Typewriter Oil (best 1 oz. bot.) or Eberhard Brasers, Doz. " 8
Safety Razor, Rivals Gillette, with 6 Gillette Blades (best) " 8
Envelope Making Machine (to make 30,000 per day), New " 35
Cooklin's Self Filling Fountain Pen (non-leakable) Gold Nib " 8

GENERAL CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE,
20-4-19. Post Box No. 424, Bombay.

HYPNOTISM

PERSONAL MAGNETISM,
WILL POWER,
NERVE FORCE—

Call what you will—

Is the intangible power that controls human destiny. It is the key to all business and social success. This power is no special gift of any one. It is latent in every one. We help you how to display it. By our system, you can learn in a few days at your own home and not only achieve success yourself, but you can influence the mind, health and actions of others to a remarkable degree.

Write immediately for our free booklet—The Pride of India.

THE LATENT LIGHT CULTURE,
TINNEVELLY, S. INDIA.

Batlivala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 1 each bottle of 100.
Batlivala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 2 each bottle of 100.
Batlivala's Ague Mixture of Fever, Malaria, Influenza etc.
Batlivala's Ague Pills for Malaria, Fever, Influenza etc.
Batlivala's Tonic pills for pale people & nervous breaks down.
Batlivala's Tooth Powder of Preserving Teeth
Batlivala's Ringworm ointment for Ringworm Dhobi Itch etc.

May be had from all dealers in medicines or from
Dr. H. L. Batlivala Sons & Co., Ltd.
No. 17, Worli, 18, Bombay.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESS:—"Doctor Batlivala Dadar"

THE BOMBAY CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK.

HEAD OFFICE Apollo Street, St., Bombay.

DIRECTORS:—The Hon. Sir Fazulbhai Currimbhoy (Chairman), Sir Vitthaldas D. Thackersey, the Hon. Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas, Sir Stanley Reed, the Hon. Mr. G. V. Mehta, the Chief of Ichalkaranji, G. K. Devadhar, Esq., the Hon. Sir P. D. Pattani, the Raja Sabab of Malagaon.

Share Capital (full paid)Rs. 7,00,000

1 Deposits fixed for one year and shorter or longer periods are accepted. Rates and other particulars may be ascertained from the under signed.

2 The Bank finances only registered Co-operative Societies in the Bombay Presidency on the recommendation of the Register, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency.

3 Accounts are audited half-yearly by a special Government Auditor, and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the "Bombay Government Gazette."

20-5-17.

VAIKUNTH L. MEHTA, Manager,

Clean
Wholesome
Intelligent
Entertainment
IS A GREAT STEP

IN

SOCIAL REFORM.

When deciding on a
*PLACE OF AMUSEMENT TWO
ESTABLISHMENTS*

Should at once leap to the mind,

THE EXCELSIOR
BOMBAY'S PREMIER MODERN THEATRE
AND

THE EMPIRE
BOMBAY'S MOST PALATIAL
PICTURE THEATRE

Where Film Plays of Distinction are shown
Every Week.

A
Great Cinema Masterpiece
is shown,

Both theatres are near the Bori Bunder
and are run by the

EXCELSIOR SYNDICATE.

The Pioneer of Bombay's

AMUSEMENT WORLD.

FURUKAWA & CO.

TOKIO

The Largest Manufacturers
in the East

OF

ELECTRIC BARE COPPER CONDUCTORS,
ELECTRIC UNDERGROUND CABLES,
ELECTRIC INSULATED WIRES,
ELECTRIC ACCESSORIES,
INGOTS, RODS, WIRES,
SHEETS, TUBES,
Etc., Etc.,

All our wires are made in accordance with the standard of the British Cable Makers' Association and are tested and approved by leading firms in India.

SOLE AGENTS IN INDIA AND BURMA.

TATA, SONS & CO.,

BOMBAY & CALCUTTA.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS Ltd.

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.
Narsari Building, Fort, BOMBAY.

Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

11-8-17.

When YOUR EYES

need to be examined by QUALIFIED OCULISTS and by SCIENTIFIC REFRACTIONISTS of 26 year experience, FREE OF CHARGE, you cannot do better than GO TO

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR & CO.

The leading firm of Oculists, Eyesight Specialists, Manufacturing Opticians and suppliers of the patented

"KRYPTOK"

(Invisible one-piece bifocal lens.)

Toric, and all kinds of lenses,—Cylindrical, Spherical, Prismatic, &c., from pebbles as well as from best quality crown glass.

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR

Eyesight Specialist,

With 26 Years' Practical Experience.,

Holds Exceptional Testimonials from H. H. The Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, the Hon'ble Sir Lawrence Jenkins the Hon. Mr. Justice Batty, Mrs. Batty, the Hon. Sir N. S. Jendavarkar, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beaman, the Hon'ble Sir S. L. Batchelor, the Hon'ble Sir John Heaton Mr. H. G. Vell, M. V. O., Col. R. H. Forman, R. A. M. C., P. M. O. Co. Brigade, Lieut. Col. G. H. Bull, M. D., I. M. S., Lieut. Colonel Peters M. B., I. M. S., and other high personages.

(7) 379, HORNBY ROW,

Opposite the Government Telegraph Office,
62-11-10. Fort, BOMBAY.

INTENDING ASSUREES ARE INVITED TO COMPARE THE RATES AND CONDITIONS OF

The Empire of India Life Assurance Company, Limited.

WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.

Head Office II Elphinstone Circle, BOMBAY.

SEE REPORT AND OPINIONS OF THE PRESS AS TO THE REMARKABLE PROGRESS MADE BY THE COMPANY.

ENDOWMENT NON-FORFEITABLE POLICY FOR RS. 3,000.

PAYABLE AT AGE 80 OR AT DEATH, IF PREVIOUS, WITH PROFIT.

If, at any time, the assured under this plan shows a tendency to cease paying any more premiums, he can obtain a paid-up Policy for such a proportion of the original sum assured as the number of premiums paid bears to the number agreed upon. Thus a gentleman who had assured at age 30 for a Policy of Rs. 3,000 payable at age 80, if he ceases to pay after 5 years, would be entitled to a Free paid-up Policy for Rs. 500 free of future payments.

SOME OF THE DISTINCTIVE FEATURES.

- * Funds invested in Government Securities and in accordance with the Indian Trusts Act
- Policy holders can appoint their own Directors.
- 90 per cent. of profits to Participating Policy holders.
- Lapsed policies revived without Medical Certificate.
- Liberal Surrender Values 40 per cent. of the Tabular premium paid.
- Immediate payment of Claims.
- Medical fees and stamps on Policies are payable by the Company.

The sum assured is PAYABLE IN FULL should death occur even immediately after payment of the first premium.

GUARANTEE INSURANCE.—This Company issues Guaranteed Policies in situation of trust and responsibility to specially authorized to guarantee the employees of the Post Office

Proposal Forms and full Particulars may be obtained from any local Agent in India or from ALLUM, BHARUCHA & CO. Managers.

MONTHLY PREMIUM.

AT AGE 20, Rs. 5-9-0.

AT AGE 25, Rs. 7-8-0.

AT AGE 30, Rs. 8-14-0.

AT AGE 35, Rs. 10-18-0.

AT AGE 40, Rs. 12-12-0.

AT AGE 45, Rs. 15-10-0

22-11-10.

IN INDIA

EVERY ONE KNOWS.

whom it does concern that we are foremost in supplying the best

COSSI SILK SUIT PIECES

available for the season. These pieces are strong, fancy and durable, and have been specially manufactured for India's Market. Each piece guaranteed for One Suit Complete.

Price Rs. 10 per piece.

Write to—THE BHARGAVA COMMERCIAL SOCIETY,
2-19. Benares City.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER. Contract Rates for Advertisements.

Number of Insertions.	1		2		3		4		5
	Inch.	Page.	Inches.	Page.	Columns.	Page.	Columns.	Page.	Columns.	Page.
18	Rs. 11 0	Rs. 16 0	Rs. 20 0	Rs. 30 0	Rs. 50 0	Rs. 87 0	Rs. 155 0	Rs. 300 0
26	16 0	25 0	30 0	50 0	87 0	155 0
52	25 0	38 0	50 0	87 0	155 0

Casual advertisements at Rs. 4 per line for the 1st insertion and Rs. 2 per line of succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

WONDERFUL TONIC AND MOUTH-REFRESHER

JINTAN.

This is a safe and efficient remedy in all kinds of diseases or disturbances of the digestive organs. It is composed entirely of VEGETABLE INGREDIENTS made from the prescription of the following eminent medical men viz—
NORIHITO MIWA, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy,
ZENJIRO INOUE, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy,
 and testified as to its efficacy by
Baron J. MATSUMOTO, M.D., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Army.
T. MITAMURA Esq., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Navy.

As a digestive it is unequalled and will not disturb the functions of the most delicate stomach. Its antiseptic properties render it very efficacious in warding off disease and at the same time it imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath of the user.

By virtue of its aroma, it effectually masks the odour of Tobacco and Alcoholic Spirits.

It acts beneficially on the vocal cords and has found much favour with public speakers, actors, singers and those whose vocation necessitates a severe strain on the throat.

GOOD FOR

Billiousness, Headache, Vertigo, Nausea, Indigestion, Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, etc., etc.

To maintain general health 2 to 3 pills may be taken occasionally, well masticated.

Price—Small Packet Rs. 0-1-0. Middle Packet, with Tin case., Rs. 0-4-0. Large Packet with fancy case., Rs. 1-0-0

Prepared by Messrs. MORISHITA Co., OSAKA, JAPAN.

Sole Agents: Jintan Agency (G. R. Chaubal), Juma Masjid. BOMBAY.

At each opening here automatically

FOR PAINS
AND ACHES
SPRAINS ETC.
USE:—

AMRUTANJAN.

The magical pain balm extant. Cures all aches & pains. Costs 8 As. Sold everywhere.

By Appointment to H. E. the Governor
Sir George Sydenham Clarke of
Bombay.

HARIDAS VALJI,

(KING OF INDIAN CONFECTIONERS),

Highest Confectioner, Caterer and Grand
Military Contractor.

Proprietor—RATINATH,
Chitra Bazar & Grant Road,

BOMBAY.

20-4-19.

DENTISTRY.

Extractions Painless;
Terms Very Moderate;
Gold Crown, Bar and
Bridge Work a Speciality
(teeth without plate);
Latest Successful Treatment
for Pyorrhoea (pus in gums).

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

Hours: 8-1-20 & 5-7-30; Daily.

(Sundays—From 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.)

ADDRESS BUILDING,
NEW CHARNI ROAD,
GIRGAON, BOMBAY. } 1-6-19.

H. R. AMAT,
Surgeon Dentist.

THE INDIAN * SOCIAL * REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY MORNING.

Office:—EMPIRE BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD, FORT.

Editor:—K. NATARAJAN

Vol XXX. BOMBAY—SUNDAY, JANUARY 11, 1920 No 19.

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard."
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

A New Year's Message. Lord Sinha.	The Congress Declaration of Rights.
The South African Commission.	The Amritsar Session of the Moslem League.
Europeans and the Reform Scheme.	The Great Strike.
The Moderate Reply to Swami Shradhananda's Appeal.	Dangers of a Flesh Diet.
Nefarious Journalism.	The Problem of Christianity in India I.
Sir Rash Behari Ghose's Gift to the Calcutta University.	The Annual Mahotsah of the Dev Samaj.
A Plea for Unity.	Rao Bahadur K. Viresalingam Pantulu Garu.
	The Bank of India Limited.

NOTES.

A New Year's Message: A Reuter's telegram was published on the 3rd instant announcing that a New Year's message from the Premiers of the British Commonwealth of Nations was issued over the signatures of Mr. Lloyd George, Sir Robert Borden, Mr. Hughes, General Botha, Mr. Massey and Mr. Squires of Newfoundland. The message, which is addressed to "Fellow-citizens of the British Empire," emphasises that, in recognition of the Fatherhood of God and the Divine Purpose for the world, Christianity will be discovered the ultimate foundation for the reconstruction of ordered, harmonious life for all men. As that recognition could only come as an act of free consent on the part of individual men everywhere, the message appeals to men of good-will to consider the eternal validity and truth of those spiritual forces which are the one hope for the permanent foundation of world peace. On the 6th instant a correction was published inserting the words "which is central to the message of" before Christianity in the first version of the message. The difference between the original and amended message is important. The original message was virtually an invitation to the whole Empire to accept Christianity as the ultimate foundation for the reconstruction of ordered, harmonious life for all men. The amended message lays the stress on the recognition of Fatherhood of God and the Divine Purpose. That such a recognition is central to the message of Christianity, does not prevent its being central to the message of other great religions as well. The amended message is less inappropriate as coming from the Prime Ministers of the British Commonwealth, the vast majority of whose subjects are Hindus and Mahomedans. Even so, the message, we think, was uncalled for. Nobody expects six gentlemen because they have climbed the tortuous stairs of politics, to be competent to give the lead to the world in matters of religion. In the case of some of them at any rate, the exhortation ill consorts with the policies adopted and enforced by them in their respective territories. With what consistency does General Botha (should it not be General Smuts?), to take the most glaring instance, proclaim the eternal truth of the Fatherhood of God, while he is engaged in carrying out measures to deprive the Indian children of God, domiciled in the Transvaal, of their means of livelihood by prohibiting their holding of land and taking out trading licenses? Honestly, we regard this as nothing less than blasphemous. God is not to be mocked like this. A message like this, proceeding from the heads of the great religions professed by the people of the British Empire, would have carried greater weight with thinking men. If the six gentlemen had addressed the message in their private capacity, there would be no cause for criticism, but their issuing it in their official capacity is as unprecedented as it is, we think, unconstitutional. The British Empire stands on the firm foundation of religious freedom and never was it more inopportune for the Prime Ministers to appear as missionaries of one particular religion.

Lord Sinha: We offer a cordial welcome to Lord Sinha on his return to India. It has been his lot to be tried in positions not before held by Indians and it is to his great credit that he has on each occasion emerged from the ordeal not only with distinction to himself but with, we believe, material enhancement of the reputation of his countrymen for capacity and character. As Advocate-General of Bengal, as member of the Government of India, as India's representative at the Colonial and War Conferences, as Under-Secretary of State for India, and as the official responsible for piloting the Indian Reform Bill in the fastidiously critical atmosphere of the House of Lords, he has borne himself with an ability and dignity, which has earned the high praise of such English statesmen as Lord Selborne. Ill-health and cruel domestic affliction notwithstanding, Lord Sinha has unflinchingly stood at his post of immense and, for an Indian, unprecedented responsibility, and the successful emergence of the Reform Act, with its provisions greatly liberalised, is largely due, next to Mr. Montagu's statesmanship, to the high talents and deep devotion which Lord Sinha brought to bear upon the measure which will ever stand out as a landmark in our national evolution. Lord Sinha may justly claim in the memorable words of Burke that he has not been rocked and dandled into a legislator. He has had to produce his credentials at every gate and portal, where there was no admission for him. He has had to overcome, besides, a deep-rooted race-prejudice, and he has done so in a way which few Indians have yet been able to do.

The South African Commission. The same day as the corrected New Year's message from the Prime Ministers was published, was also published the following official announcement from Delhi. "Information has been received that the South African Commission will commence its sittings by the end of next month or early in March and it is understood that Sir Benjamin Robertson will leave India by the 20th instant. The Commission will enquire into the question of trades and trading licenses to Indians and holding lands by Indians in the four colonies of the Union. Sir Benjamin, on completion of his duties in South Africa, will return to India after visiting East Africa, where the Indian question has taken an acute turn and, also Uganda, where economic questions may arise. Sir Benjamin will be accompanied by Mr. Corbett, Deputy Secretary of the Government of India, Commerce and Industry Department." The silence of the communication regarding an Indian representative who was to have been included in the deputation, demands attention. Has the Government of South Africa refused to receive an Indian or has it proposed terms on which no self-respecting Indian would care to go to South Africa? The public are entitled to an explanation of this sudden omission. We trust that the Government of India will lose no time in explaining the circumstances in which the Indian people are not to be represented by a representative of their own race.

Europeans and the Reform Scheme. At a meeting of the European Association at Calcutta last week there was some interesting talk as to the need of the Europeans to ally themselves with an Indian political party. Mr. Arden Wood observed: "Naturally, they would wish to act with the party which called itself the Moderate party, but they had some doubts as to what the real policy of that party was. After referring to the opposite opinions of a Calcutta newspaper on a recent Moderate Conference, he said that the Moderate party was in a very difficult position. No doubt some of the resolutions passed at the recent Moderate Conference supported the view that their expressed opinions were the watered down opinion of the Extremist party. If they stop there, they missed a point of real cardinal importance, namely, that the Moderates were sincerely desirous of acting with the general body of Europeans, official and non-official, to carry out in the best interest of India the provisions of the new Bill for the improvement of the Government of India. He believed that the Moderates were prepared to take the stand on the platform of co-operation with the European community. If that was so, it was of the greatest importance to this Association and to Europeans generally that they should at least meet the Moderates half way." With all respect, we would say that this is not the way to approach the question. No party in this country will be willing to co-operate with the European Association except on terms of absolute equality. The first question, then, is, are the Europeans frankly and freely willing to accept this position? We do not refer to social intercourse which, in our opinion, will follow, and cannot be forced to precede, the growth of mutual appreciation through co-operation in public work. The Europeans should frankly regard themselves as His Majesty's subjects in India in no way superior to or to be distinguished from their Indian fellow-subjects. If this psychological feat—for to most it will be no easy feat—is accomplished, then the rest is easy. They will join the political party, just as in England, to which they are attracted by temperament, personal sympathy, and unity of aim and ideal. Then, it will come naturally to them—more naturally than to Indians because of their longer political training—to have foremost before their minds not what they can get out of, but what they can give of themselves, to India. This is but a particular application of the great universal rule: "Seek ye the kingdom of Heaven and all things will be added unto you."

The Moderate Reply to Swami Shradhdhananda's Appeal: The Leader of Allahabad writes: "The Indian Social Reformer referring to the reply sent by a number of Moderate leaders to the appeal of the Chairman of the Reception Committee and the President-elect of the Congress urging the Moderates to join the Amritsar session, expresses a doubt 'if every one of those whose names are invoked put their signatures to the document, or approved of it in the form in which it is issued.' The paper has no warrant for implying as it does that the reply did not accurately represent the views of the signatories or their previous approval had not been taken to the form in which the document was issued. It is over-anxious to prove to the world that some at least of those who signed are not in favour of separation. It may 'confidently expect an early and final end to the split', but knowing the facts as we do, we may inform it that there is a considerable body of influential and prominent Moderates which is not yet prepared to merge itself with the Extremists." We do not wish to prolong this controversy, but we are bound in justice to ourselves to say that we had excellent warrant for the statements referred to. Is it not rather that the Leader is over-anxious to see the split prolonged and perpetuated?

Nefarious Journalism. We call attention to a contribution headed "From the Indian stand point, by N", in the Advocate of India of the 3rd instant. A more contemptible and bare-faced attempt to create illwill between Hindus and Mahomedans, it is hardly possible to imagine. Taking Pandit Motilal Nehru's address to the Amritsar Congress as his pretext, the writer "is tempted to say something concerning the caste to which the prosperous Pandit belongs especially in connection with the historic relations of that caste with Islam." But before proceeding further he stops to make a preliminary observation. Then he proceeds to remind the Pandit and "his two accomplished daughters"—what on earth have they to do with the question?—of two episodes. He, however, mentions only one though and that relates to Malabar of which Kashmir is not likely to have memories. The writer quotes a proclamation attributed to Tippu Sultan "which" he adds, "possibly is an infamous fiction but which, I fear, I must believe until persuaded to the contrary". He concludes by bidding his fellow Indians to remember that whatever the authors and agents of martial law inflicted on the Punjab they held the honour of their women sacred, is a curious state of mind which asks Indians to condone Jalliaiwala in consideration of their women not having been violated! We believe there is a law which makes it an offence to foment ill-feeling between communities of His Majesty's Indian subjects. That, however, is a question for Government. We have thought it our duty to call public attention to this cowardly and contemptible effusion in the interests of journalistic decency.

Sir Rash Behari Ghose's Gift to the Calcutta University: Sir Rash Behari Ghose has made a further gift of Rs. eleven lakhs and forty-three thousand in Government securities to the Calcutta University. The proceeds are to be employed in developing the departments of applied Chemistry and Botany in connection with the Science College which his previous benefaction of ten lakhs, conjointly with Sir Saraknath's gift, brought into existence. How wisely, says the Indian Messenger, did Rammohun look forward to the day when his countrymen would be instructed in the knowledge of modern science. His dream is coming to be realised and Sir Rash Behari is one of the very few who are helping that realisation. No small measure of the endless gratitude of the unborn generations will be his due.

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, JANUARY 11, 1920.

I am neither a Moderate nor an Extremist :

ADAPTED FROM GURU NANAK.

A PLEA FOR UNITY.

That the people of India are divided and subdivided into numerous castes and sects, is a fact. Equally is it the fact that this division comes to a greater or less degree in the way of national progress. Any one who proposes to add to these existing divisions another founded on political considerations, has the onus on him to show that the new division is essential and cannot be dispensed with without great injury to the country's lasting interests. We have more than once recently expressed in these columns the opinion that there is no longer good reason for the division between Moderates and Radicals or rather, Immoderates, in Indian politics. The Hon. Mr. Srinivasa Sastry seems to have expressed a similar opinion to a representative of New India. The present Moderates and Extremists did not in his opinion represent genuine divisions in ideals or programmes with reference to future work. The basis of the present differentiation, he added, has lost whatever meaning it had. The present differentiation has come to centre round persons. Referring to the hope he had expressed at Calcutta that the Congress at Amritsar would pass a resolution about the reforms on substantially the same lines as the Moderate Conference, Mr. Sastry confessed that he was disappointed. Nevertheless, he added, he adhered to his opinion that, if the Punjab occurrences had not complicated the situation, the Congress, as a whole, would have abandoned the impossible position adopted at the Delhi Congress. We entirely agree. Even with the complication of the Punjab occurrences, we believe that the Amritsar Congress would have resiled from the Delhi position, had members of the Moderate party gone there in larger numbers and strengthened the hands of Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, Swami Shradhdhananda, Mr. Gandhi, and other local leaders. Mrs. Annie Besant writing in New India says that if Mr. Gandhi and Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya had stood firmly by their first amendment, they would have carried it, for, she says, Mr. Tilak had told his followers to yield at the last moment. We do not know what the source of Mrs. Besant's information is, as regards Mr. Tilak's instruction to his followers. Whether her information is right or not, we have no doubt that the Pandit and Mr. Gandhi would have carried the Congress with them had they stood firm, and we are almost sure that they would have stood firm had there been a large force of Moderates to back them up. We yet think that if the Moderate leaders rouse themselves up and resolve not to make a present of the national movement to an arrogant opportunist like Mr. Tilak, they will succeed. But the country must know that they are determined to succeed and are not merely willing to accept success if somebody would place it on their laps. Their present attitude strikes us as being that of a man who having by his labours created a vast storehouse of power, hands it over to untrained, inexperienced hands, merely because he does not care to stand the noise and dust of the effort which is needed to resist their clamour.

Let us examine whether there are such fundamental differences between the principles and the policy of the Congress even as they appear from the Amritsar resolutions and those of the Moderates, as to make re-union out of the question. The editor of the Leader of Allahabad is one of the two General Secretaries of the National Liberal Federation, the name which the Moderates have adopted at their last session. He is also, what for our present purpose is an advantage, a determined advocate of the continuance of the schism between the two parties. In the Leader of the 5th instant, the leading article is devoted to proving at some length why the two parties should not work together and must continue to remain separate. Our contemporary begins by pointing out that when in the year 1918 it was decided by a majority of the Congress leaders that they should abstain from the special session held at Bombay, the main difference between the two parties in Indian politics related to the Montagu-Chelmsford scheme. That difference, it affirms, still exists. This statement is in diametric opposition to that of Mr. Srinivasa Sastry which we have quoted above. Mr. Sastry is interested in the success of the reforms as much as any other Indian publicist, and he tells us that the basis of the present differentiation has lost whatever meaning it had. But Mr. Sastry attended the Amritsar Congress and might have been unconsciously biased by that fact against the continuance of the present differentiation. The onlooker, moreover, often sees more of a game than the player. What did the Times of India, a perfectly impartial commentator with marked sympathy for the Moderate point of view, say about the Congress resolution on the reforms? "The main and important fact is," it said, "that the Congress pledged itself openly to do, namely, to co-operate in the Reforms so that this work will be the avenue to the establishment of full responsible institutions. Halting as the final resolution was in many respects, in comparison with the resolute motion which Mrs. Besant and her friends put before the Congress, nevertheless it was in the right direction." Thus, we think, is the statesmanlike view to take of the resolutions of a huge and unmanageable public gathering like the Congress as it has come to be at present. The attitude of the Congress and the Moderates to the Montagu-Chelmsford scheme is one thing and their attitude to the Act of Parliament is quite another. Lord Chelmsford himself changed his attitude towards many parts of the Joint Report which he, with Mr. Montagu, had drawn up of the main features of the reform scheme. The scheme of the Act is neither that of the Joint Report, nor of Mr. Montagu, nor of Lord Chelmsford. It is the scheme of the Joint Committee of Parliament, different in many essentials from that of the Joint report and that of the Government of India, sanctioned by Parliament and binding upon all subjects in India.

But, contends the Leader, since the decision to abstain was taken in August, 1918, the divergence between the two parties has widened. It mentions as fresh causes of offence on the part of the Radicals 'the mendacious and discreditable campaign of calumny against the Moderate members of the Viceroy's Council in connection with the Rowlatt Act', the Satyagraha demonstrations, the Congress sub-Committee's boycott of the Hunter Committee, the Congress resolution to build a memorial in Jallianwala Bagh, the resolution demanding the recall of Lord Chelmsford. Our contemporary says that it can point to several other resolutions, but these are sufficiently testing. Of these, the first, namely, the reference to the campaign against the Moderate members of the Viceroy's Council, cannot be a valid ground for a separate party. If it were, there should be as many parties as there are newspapers which prefer adjectives to facts. The Satyagraha demonstrations were not organised by the Congress but by Mr. Gandhi. So far as we know, several Congressmen were against it, though their reasons might not have coincided with those of our contemporary. Certainly, the movement did not take root in the Punjab. It is relevant in this connection to note that the original point of differentiation being the attitude towards the reform scheme, the justice of imputing to the anti-schemers a movement started by a supporter of the scheme, Mr. Gandhi, is not quite apparent. Then, as regards the boycott of the Hunter Committee, what are the facts? Public opinion in this country demanded a Royal Commission to enquire into the Punjab trouble and was profoundly dissatisfied with the constitution of the Hunter Committee. Mr. Gandhi, almost alone among Indian publicists, advocated the acceptance of the Hunter Committee as a sufficiently competent tribunal. He went to the Punjab to collect evidence which was intended, we are sure, to be placed before the Committee. The Leader is wrong in thinking that the Moderates as a whole and everywhere disapproved of the boycott of the Hunter Committee. The released leaders have proved their bona fides by offering to appear and give evidence before the Committee now that they are free. But the Committee has refused their offer. We shall await with interest our contemporary's comments on the grounds of the refusal. For the rest, the use of the word boycott is by no means altogether unfamiliar to Congress ears. There was no Moderate split at Benares in 1906, though the idea and the thing 'boycott' was very much in evidence and though the then Viceroy was compared to Aurangzeb in the presidential address.

The reference to the resolution about the memorial at Jhallianwala only shows the eagerness of the writer to establish his case. So far as we know, the Cawnpore memorial has not ceased to be maintained out of deference to our contemporary's very creditable susceptibilities, and those who know and understand Mr. Gandhi, may rest assured that nothing in the least calculated to affront the feelings of any community or sect will be countenanced by him or those whom he accepts as fellow-workers. The last point on our contemporary's indictment, is the resolution of the Amritsar Congress for the recall of the Viceroy. It is impossible to justify—indeed, we are frankly ashamed of—some of the speeches made on the resolution and we think that the President would have been well-advised if he had enjoined on the speakers self-restraint and dignity. But, surely, there is nothing wrong in passing a resolution of the kind. As we said last week, the Bombay Presidency Association, under the inspiration of Sir Pherozesha Mehta, urged the recall of Lord Curzon who was certainly a far less unsuccessful Viceroy than Lord Chelmsford. Lord Chelmsford has openly avowed his responsibility for giving the Punjab Government a free hand, but that does not, as the Leader makes out, stand alone. In the teeth of the solid opposition of the non-official members of his Council and of the country, he forced the Rowlatt Act through by using his official majority. He left the Indian member of his Government no alternative but to throw up his office by his attitude towards him. Does the Leader believe Sir Sankaran Nair would have resigned out of pique on some particular issue? And what of the Indemnity Act? We have repeatedly recognised in these columns Lord Chelmsford's high personal qualities, but the Viceroyalty of India in these times has been too big a burden for him.

We have dealt at some length with our contemporary's reasons for continuing the schism, and we think we have shown that there is not much substance in them. Immediately following the article from which we have drawn so largely, is another enlarging in the luminous style of Leader on Mr. Lloyd George's appeal for national unity at the Manchester Reform Club. We venture to suggest to our contemporary that the need of national unity is not less in this country today than in Great Britain. In that country, the idea of nationality, of national unity, is well-established by centuries of political development. In our country, on the other hand, it is only now beginning to be understood and appreciated as the result of English education and British rule. The existence of political parties in England does not affect national unity, but in India where national unity is a tender shoot, surrounded by numerous destructive growths in the shape of caste and sectarian divisions, the premature institution of political parties may work irreparable ruin. Young India may be impatient, hasty, easily excitable, but it is sound at the core. It has a higher sense of self-respect, a quicker feeling for the things which really count, a keener conscience for truth and purity than many of us who are its elders and ought to be its betters. We have the fullest faith in young India and we can but regard it as a gross dereliction of their duty on the part of elderly experienced leaders to withhold from it for any reason whatsoever their seasoned guidance. We beg the Leader to spare some of its charity for the Congress leaders. In a moving elegy dedicated to his father, Matthew Arnold has described two types of leaders. The first, in their ardour, allow their comrades and companions to fall by the wayside and press forward to their goal, 'the lonely inn 'mid the rocks,'

Where the gaunt and taciturn host
Stands on the threshold, the wind
Shaking his thin white hairs,
Holds his lantern to scan
Our storm-beat figures, and asks:
Whom in our party we bring?
Whom we have left in the snow?
Sadly we answer: we bring
Only ourselves.

But the poet's father was of not of that type. He would not alone be saved, alone conquer and come to his goal, leaving the rest in the wild. This is the type of leader that uplifts nations and ennobles humanity. Moses and Mahomed, Buddha and Sir Krishna, Ram Mohan Roy and Ranade, were of this gracious type. They would not be saved alone either. They realised that their people needed their guidance and that it was their duty on no account to desert their people. Opposition and calumny could not deter them from carrying out their God-appointed task. They realised in their hearts the meaning of the pathetic words of Mathew Arnold's elegy:

See! In the sands of the world
Marches the host of mankind,
A feeble, wavering line.
Where are they tending?—A God
Marshall'd them, gave them their goal.
Ah, but the way is so long!
Years they have been in the waste!
Sore thirst plagues them; the sands,
Spreading all round, overawe;
Factions divide them, their host,
Threatens to break, to dissolve.
Ah, keep, keep them scummed,
Else, of the myriads who fill,
That army, not one shall arrive,
Sole they shall stray, in the sands,
Flounder for ever in vain,
Die one by one in the waste.

And in sunshine and storm, they stood at their post, and posterity holds them, therefore, in honoured memory.

The Congress Declaration of Rights. The Amritsar Congress passed a resolution praying for a declaration of rights by statute to guarantee the civil rights of His Majesty's Indian subjects, embodying the following provisions:—(1) British India is one and indivisible and all political power is inherent in the people thereof to the same extent as in any other people or nation of the British empire. (2) That all Indian subjects of His Majesty and all subjects naturalised or resident in India are equal before law and there shall be no penal or administrative law in force in this country whether substantive or procedural, of a discriminative nature. (3) That no Indian subject of His Majesty shall be liable to suffer in liberty, life, property or in respect of free speech or writing or of right of association except by a sentence by an ordinary Court of justice and as a result of lawful and open trial. (4) That every Indian subject shall be entitled to bear arms subject to the purchase of a licence as in Great Britain and that the right shall not be taken away save by a sentence of an ordinary Court of justice. (5) That the Press shall be free and that no license or security shall be demanded on the registration of a Press or newspaper. (6) That corporal punishment shall not be inflicted on any subject of His Majesty except under conditions applying equally to all other British subjects. (7) That all laws, ordinances and regulation now or hereafter in existence that are any wise inconsistent with the provisions of this statute shall be void and of no validity whatever.

THE AMRITSAR SESSION OF THE MOSLEM LEAGUE.

The session of the Moslem League held at Amritsar was in many ways a notable one. The Reception Committee had as its chairman, Dr. Kitchlew, who was released just in time to welcome the delegates on its behalf. The President of the session was Hakim Ajmal Khan of Delhi. In his address, he dealt with the Martial law administration in the Punjab very much on the lines of the Congress Presidential address, but was rather more appreciative of the Reform scheme than Pandit Motilal Nehru. The question of Turkey and the Khilafat naturally received a good deal of attention in the Hakim Sahib's address. The President of the Moslem League urged that the declaration of Mr. Lloyd George on January 5, 1918, must be strictly adhered to in the treaty of Peace. Mr. Lloyd George's words were explicit. They were: "Nor are we fighting to deprive Turkey of its capital, or of the rich and renowned lands of Asia Minor and Thrace which are predominantly Turkish in race." That these words have lost none of their force by what has happened since they were uttered, is clear from Mr. Montagu's statement on a recent occasion in the House of Commons that he had continually urged upon the Peace Conference the importance to India of a peace with Turkey consistent with the policy in the Prime Minister's declaration. The rumoured establishment of a Joint Allied administration in Constantinople and the removal of the seat of the Ottoman Government to some other place, even if the Sultan is, as foreshadowed in a later message, is allowed to reside at Constantinople, will not be in accord with Mr. Lloyd George's pledge. Apart from that fact, the deprivation of the Ottoman Empire of its historic capital, while there has been no thought of depriving Germany or Austria of their capitals, cannot but raise disquieting apprehensions of religious prejudice in non-Christian minds. Turkey after all was a minor belligerent—a mere tool—as compared with Germany and Austria, and if the arch-offenders are to retain their capitals, it is unjust to deprive a mere accessory of his. We trust that the Government of India will represent the Indian view of any such contemplated arrangement in time to His Majesty's Government. We are much reassured to learn from a Renter's message that Mr. Montagu will accompany the Prime Minister to Paris this week, specially with a view to assist in the final stages of the Turkish Peace Treaty.

The Hakim Sahib suggested in his address that, as a means of cementing the Hindu Moslem entente, the Mahomedans of India should initiate the practice of sacrificing animals other than the cow at their principal religious festival. A resolution embodying this suggestion was passed by the League. As a beginning, the President suggested that the principle should be adopted by the Mussulman residents of Kashi, Ayodhya, Muttra, and Brindaban, four sacred places of the Hindus, and the effort should be simultaneously made to spread the idea all over the country. The Hakim Sahib confessed that this was a question which, concerning as it did, a vast, heterogeneous population of seven crore Mahomedans scattered all over India, would take time to bear fruit, but he urged that that consideration should not discourage them from making an immediate beginning. For our own part, we would rejoice to see the day when, like all other great religions, Islam too renounces animal sacrifices altogether. Sir Abbas Ali Baig in a recent public speech declared that Islam does not demand such sacrifices. If that is so, why should not the enlightened leaders of Indian Mahomedanism, the inheritors equally with the Hindus of the glorious humanitarian tradition of Gautama Buddha, immediately initiate a movement to do away with blood sacrifices? One of the greatest Indians of the day, a man of ripe experience and wisdom, told us not long ago that, to his mind, the greatest achievement of Hinduism was the discovery of the doctrine of Ahimsa and the bringing about its acceptance in practice by the renunciation of flesh-food by the vast masses of the Indian people. We learnt a curious fact in the Panjab. The practice of vegetarianism in that province is far from strict so far as the men are concerned, but the women of the principal Hindu castes rigidly abstain from meat. We trust that our Mahomedan countrymen will, now that they have begun with the renunciation of cow sacrifice, soon go further and renounce all animal sacrifice. That will, indeed, be a blessed result of the Hindu-Mahomedan brotherhood. After all, it is far easier to kill a goat or a sheep at the altar of the Supreme than our own lusts and passions. Meanwhile, we welcome the resolution in regard to cow sacrifice as a first step to this great and humane end.

Another significant occurrence at the Amritsar session of the Moslem League is worth being noted. A resolution was proposed urging upon Government that definite provisions for the protection of Mahomedan interests in the Public Services and as regards the use of the Urdu language and Persian character, should be inserted in the scheme of constitutional reform. One of the delegates present opposed it on the ground that these matters ought to be settled by private conference with the Hindus instead of appealing to Government. The resolution was eventually negatived and in its place a motion was unanimously adopted requesting the All-India Congress Committee to appoint a Committee at an early date to confer with the Committee of the Council of the League in order to arrive at an understanding on questions arising out of the Reforms Act any the demand for complete self-government. The League warmly thanked His Majesty for the Proclamation and the amnesty to political prisoners, and recorded a resolution welcoming the announcement of the visit of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. It repeated the Congress resolutions regarding General Dyer, Sir Michael O'Dwyer and His Excellency the Viceroy. Let it be said to the League's credit that there were no unseemly speeches such as disgraced the proceedings of the Congress. On the subject of reforms, the League's resolution, while conceived in the same spirit as the Congress resolution, is free from equivocation. It calls upon Indians to demonstrate their capacity for complete self-Government by availing themselves of such opportunity as is now offered to them in the Reforms recently enacted, which it frankly recognises to be a definite step towards the goal of full self-Government. The Congress resolution, as amended, does not exclude the alternative of endeavouring to get full self-Government by obstructing the working of the present instalment of it. We cannot help thinking that the resolution expressing adherence to the principle of separate representation for the Moslem community and strongly urging upon the Government the immediate necessity of applying the said principle to local bodies in provinces where it has not been applied, sounds rather incongruous in the midst of the other resolutions of the League. We are among those who hope that the day is not distant when communal electorates and representation will cease to exist in this country. Nobody wants to upset existing arrangements till there is a united demand that they need not be continued, but, surely, it is time that we did not think of extending the principle. This also is a question which can be settled by the sort of Conference the League has accepted for the solution of the problem of the proportion of Mahomedans in the Public Services.

The Great Strike. A strike has been in progress in Bombay for the last few days. It promises to become general and has already reached such dimensions that it inaugurates a new era in the industrial life of the country. In the beginning it was only confined to the mill hands of the Dadar district. It gradually spread to the other mill districts and has become a general strike of the mill hands of Bombay. In a circular issued on Monday last, the strikers embodied their demands the chief of which are shorter hours of labour and increase in wages. Considering the rise in prices of the articles of food and clothing and the monotony of mill work, the demands cannot but be said to have a legitimate basis. So far as the strikers keep within their legitimate rights, they will have the sympathy and support of the public, including many reasonable-minded employers. There are signs of a sympathetic extension of the strike to others besides the mill-industry.

Dangers of a Flesh Diet: Mr. Labshankar Laxmidas of Junagad whose humanitarian propaganda is animated by a lofty idealism, has issued a striking tract pointing out the dangers of a flesh diet. An American doctor declared that, in his practice of forty years, he has never succeeded in curing cancer and consumption unless his patients stopped flesh-eating and lived on vegetable food. Another medical man, apparently French, states that there is clear evidence in medical practice of the part played by meat in causing dyspepsia, enteritis, and appendicitis; in favouring the outbreak of typhoid and dysentery; in forming the rallying-ground for the germs of tuberculosis and cancer. Those who are not moved by the cruelty and the loathsomeness of flesh-eating, may perhaps be deterred from it by considerations of their own safety from some of the worst diseases. We wish Mr. Labshankar success in his noble endeavours to spread humane ideas in respect of this and other subjects.

THE PROBLEM OF CHRISTIANITY IN INDIA I.

(By Mr. MANILAL PAREKH.)

One can only be thankful after reading the article of "Kotgarh" containing his account as to how he came to teach and stayed to learn, and ultimately attained to a standpoint where he can call himself a Hindu as well as a Christian. I perfectly agree with him in this as well as in what he says about the vital need of India and even of the world for the divine synthesis of Hinduism and Christianity, particularly as I have been a follower of Keshub Chunder Sen, the Apostle of the Harmony of Religions, while going on the path he had elected especially in his last years. I came to differ more and more from his other followers on the question of Christo-centre which he wanted his Church of the New Dispensation to have, and I even thought of starting a Hindu Church of Christ some years ago. Later on, on learning that the Christian Indians were evolving a national Church, I joined the Christian Church, but only to find what I have already described in my first article in this paper. Suffice it to say, however, in this connection, that I am in perfect agreement with "Kotgarh" in thinking that a divine synthesis of Hinduism and Christianity such as he speaks of, and such as was spoken of by Keshub Chunder Sen, is the only solution of the problem.

If I differ from him at all in anything, it is in some of the details concerning practical life, and whatever I may say I say with a view to compare notes and even to learn from such persons as have like him thought over these problems very seriously.

He misapprehends my position with regard to caste, and in this he is not alone. Before making my position clear, however, I would say one or two things more concerning myself. I am a Jain by birth, and as such am "freer," to however small an extent it be, from caste prejudices than other Hindus. Then again I joined the Brahmo Samaj nearly fifteen years ago and identified myself with it to such an extent as to be even ordained as a missionary thereof, a thing which would have been impossible if I had any misgivings whatsoever on the subject. I have written during these years some of the strongest things against caste, and all my Brahmo friends all over India will testify that I never kept it in any form whatsoever, though remaining a vegetarian all the while. I may say further that I had not even so much as a doubt that there was anything wrong in our denunciation or practiced abolition of it. This, I believe, was largely due to that communal consciousness which the Brahmo Samaj and especially the Church of the New Dispensation were cultivating and realising, and which more than supplied the place of the same in the caste-system. But when I joined the Christian Church, instead of finding a greater sense of community among so-called Christians, either among Indian Christians themselves or between them and the Europeans, I found a veritable wilderness of individualism or bolshivism (barring its military features), and I said to myself that if caste-abolition came to this in the Christian fold, the caste-system is to be preferred indeed.

Let me be clearer still. I found whole communities from the lowest classes of Hindus coming in, not for any spiritual gain, but because they had found a way whereby their material condition would be improved from every point of view. Another thing that I found from personal observation and talks with converts of even forty years standing, was that these people were exceedingly jealous of all high-caste converts, and wanted all to come down to their level. In course of time they receive education and become civilized. They understand their rights better and come to think that they are the only true Christians since they have no caste-feeling, and naturally begin to look down upon high-caste converts for their harbouring the least little bit of caste-feeling. Very often the missionary takes their side and things are made as hot as possible for the high-caste converts both by the missionaries and these other Christians. That I am not drawing from my own imagination I shall show by quoting a great mission-historian. He says with regard to the results of this policy of the missions concerning caste:—

"What have been the practical results of this decisive and consistent policy? In the first place, it has here and there led without doubt to arbitrary proceedings and hard dealing, to hypocrisy and dishonesty, for Christians of long-standing and higher castes conformed only outwardly to the clearly-expressed will of those placed in authority—it would have needed more character than the average Hindu possesses to withstand this temptation. And the lower caste Christians of Pariah descent commended themselves to their superiors by punctiliously observing the external signs of a complete break with caste in order to place themselves in as favourable a light as possible to ensure their own advancement and obtain a higher salary, or any other advantages."

He says again:

"The relations between Sudras and Pariahs in the evangelical churches have in the course of the century turned more and more to the disadvantage of the former and at the present time the Pariahs tend in ever-increasing proportions to form an overwhelming majority. The change in caste policy whilst not the only one, has yet been a very powerful factor in bringing about this condition of affairs."

If this is so with Sudras, how much more so it is with convert of the highest castes, who are very few comparatively? They live in constant dread of submerging and there is nothing to keep them from it long, unless they make themselves free from that system of bondage which makes such things possible.

Now let us see what should happen next. The progressive Christianization of India is inevitable. The defects of the Hindu social system on one side, and the advantages that follow on becoming Christians for many communities and classes of people on the other side, make this absolutely certain. Nobody from outside can understand fully what possibilities there are of this, with the heaps of money at the command of Missions, and the powers of organisation and devoted earnestness of so many missionaries both men and women. Besides the Christian community is fairly on the way to respectability of a particular kind. In literacy they stand the highest. Their number is already large. Hence whatsoever converts come and however large their number be, they must find their place among these and be necessarily submerged. Thus, since the Christian community is altogether proletarianised and progressive Christianisation of India is inevitable, to build a new Christian India which is the aim of all missionaries would mean nothing less than building it from the bottom upwards, a process which would turn topsy-turvy the entire foundation of the Hindu Society and civilization. This dawned upon me very soon after I joined the Christian Church, and when I discussed it with one or two missionaries who were candid enough to discuss the matters over with me, I found that they too had the same misgivings.

THE ANNUAL MAHOTSAB OF THE DEV SAMAJ.

(FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY, DEV SAMAJ, LAHORE.)

The Annual Mahotsab of the Dev Samaj, held in commemoration of the 69th birthday anniversary of its most worshipful founder, Shri Dev Guru Bhagwan, was celebrated at Lahore from the 6th to 10th December, 1919 in the spacious and most beautifully decorated hall of Shri Dev Guru Bhagwan Memorial Ashram, with intense enthusiasm and remarkable success. More than 750 persons flocked from about 100 far and near stations of the Punjab, N. W. F. Provinces, Dalhi, Sind, Baluchistan, Bombay and Bengal. There were besides hundreds from amongst the public who joined the various meetings and lectures.

There were in all sixteen engagements including three public lectures and one ladies' gathering. The most important feature of the entire occasion was the meeting held on the 8th instant, the special day of the Mahotsab being the birthday of our master. As Shri Dev Guru Bhagwan had been continually ailing for nearly past two months, it was simply impossible for him to deliver an ex-tempore address but even in that delicate state of health, he to avoid disappointing his followers had written out a most illuminating address which was read out by the secretary in his presence. The address is a most valuable document showing the scientific psychology of the origin of fictions and fictitious beliefs in religion, as due to the incomplete soul-organism of man, as also dealing on the need and blessedness of the manifestation of Dev Atma, who owing to His having evolved complete soul-organism was able to develop that unique psychic light and power which while revealing the Nature and organism of soul-life and the immutable cosmic laws of its growth, decay and death liberates man from the grip of lower and destructive courses of soul-life and develops in it higher and altruistic powers. In conclusion, the master announced that during the last year two of his followers had presented to him nearly Rs 50,000 in cash and Rs. 15,000 in landed property which he dedicates in its entirety to the purpose of unique cause, and a third venerable old Sevak had promised two squares of land worth Rs. 30,000 for the permanent fund of the Dev Samaj High School, Maga.

After this, in response to an appeal made by the Assistant Secretary, Dev Samaj Finance Department, upwards of Rs. 23,000 was subscribed on the spot in cash besides promises by the members and sympathisers.

In another meeting the election of the Dev Samaj Prati Nidhi Sabha (Representative Assembly) consisting of thirty-two members took place and this assembly in its turn elected the members of the Executive Council of the Dev Samaj.

The annual report of the Dev Samaj for the last year read in a separate meeting showed that during the year under report 80 new persons were accepted as lowest grade members and 181 persons enrolled as associates and sympathisers. There were besides 750 persons weaned from various sins and evils such as drinking, opium-taking, tobacco smoking, dishonest dealings, theft, adultery, gambling, infanticide etc. There were in all twenty-four educational institutions including two high schools for boys, one for girls, two middle schools for girls, and one for boys, and also four schools for the Depressed Classes.

RAO BAHADUR K. VIRESALINGAM

PANTULU GARU,

AN APPEAL.

The activities of the Bangalore Cantonment Brahma Samaj have considerably increased in recent years. In addition to its work of spreading liberal religious ideas among the people, the Samaj has been helping the cause of social reform. It has also undertaken educational work and is maintaining a girls' school in the C. & M. Station. It is now proposed to extend the activities of the Samaj further in keeping with the progress of the times. Steps are being taken to improve the organisation and increase the establishment of the Samaj, but the difficulty with regard to accommodation seems to stand in the way of all social and educational activities. At present there is only one building, and as it is consecrated for religious purpose, only divine service could be held there. There is no accommodation for holding social gatherings, Sunday schools, night classes, etc. Immediate building requirements of the Samaj are:—(1) a hall for a free reading room, (2) a hall for social gatherings and educational work, (3) residence for missionaries, (4) out-houses and quarters for watchmen, etc. It is estimated that to erect these buildings at least Rs. 10,000/- will be required. This sum could only be obtained by donations from the public, as the income from subscriptions from membership at present is hardly sufficient to meet the expenses for the maintenance of the Samaj. In view of the useful work the Brahma Samaj is doing for the religious, social and moral well-being of the people, and as its work is not confined to any particular caste or community, and the buildings will be to perpetuate the memory of the late Rao Bahadur K. Viresalingam Pantulu Garu, the great pioneer of Social Reform in Southern India, the Committee of the Bangalore Cantonment Brahma Samaj hope that a generous response will be made to this appeal. The donations may be sent to the Secretary or to Mr. M. Kothandaram, Hon. Treasurer, Brahma Samaj, 9, Cavalry Road Bangalore. The Secretary will acknowledge receipt of them in the Brahma Samaj organs and other newspapers. Donors of Rs. 250/- and over will have their names inscribed on a slab which will be fixed at a prominent place in the building.

V. Balasundaram,

Hon. Secretary.

THE BANK OF INDIA, LIMITED.

The profit of the Bank of India Limited, for the year ended 31st December 1919, including sum of Rs. 42,692-11-11 brought forward, amounts to Rs. 11,61,471-6-0. Provision for Income Tax and Super Tax for the current year will absorb Rs. 89,981 and the payment of an advertisement dividend at the rate of 12 per cent per annum, made on the 30th June 1919, absorbed a further sum of Rs. 2,00,000. The balance now available for distribution is Rs. 7,71,490-6-0.

The Directors propose:—To pay a final dividend, for the half year ended 31st December 1919, at the rate of Twelve per cent per annum, on the paid up capital of Rs. 50 lacs, and to give Bonus to the shareholders of One Rs. per share, equal to a further Two per cent per annum, making Fourteen per cent for the year,—these payments will be free from Income Tax and will absorb Rs. 4 lacs—to place Rs. 1 lac to the Reserve Fund; to write down the value of Bank's holding in the British War Loan, owing to the rise in Sterling exchange by Rs. 1 lac; and to carry forward to the next account the balance Rs. 1,71,490-6-0, subject to a donation to the Bank's provident Fund and the payment of a Bonus to the staff of the Bank.

During the past year the Capital of the Bank has been raised to Rs. 2 crores by the creation of 1,00,000 New Shares of Rs. 100 each, which were offered to shareholders at a premium of Rs. 50 per share. These shares have been fully taken up, and at date, the calls made in respect thereto, Rs. 50 per share towards Capital and Rs. 50 per share towards Reserve Fund, have resulted in the raising of the Bank's paid up Capital to over 99 lacs and the Reserve Fund to over 64 lacs.

The New Capital will rank for dividend from the 1st January 1920. The audited Balance Sheet, which will be published shortly, will disclose a strong and satisfactory financial position, the Cash in hand and with Bankers amounting to Rs. 181 lacs, and the Bank's Investment in Treasury Bills and other Government Securities to over Rs. 145 lacs.

ANNOUNCEMENT

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postage, 6 annas in advance. In arrears.

Per annum..... Rs. 5-0-0. Rs. 6-0-0
Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, twelve shillings (Rs. 6).

Single copies of the current year can be had at 4 annas each and any back copies at 6 annas each.

The following two books on trade and industries, by J. L. Daveji, M. A. V. P., are indispensable to every English-knowing Indian gentleman:—

(1) Vyapar Mitra.—It consists of 4 parts containing more than 325 original recipes for making marketable articles for trade, such as Soap, Varnish, Polish, Ink, Sealing Wax, Rubber Toys, Imitation Gold, Silver, Pearl, Ruby, Coral, etc., Cigarettes, Matches, Carbon Paper, Pocket Press, Buttons, Gilding Powder, Hair Killer, Hair Oils, Scent, Syrups, Essences, Medicines, etc., etc. Price Rs. 1, V. P. As 2.

The book "First Lessons in Photography" will be given free to every purchaser of Vyapar Mitra.

(2) Trade Secrets or How to become healthy and wealthy.—This book consists of 10 parts of chapters, each dealing with a series of articles on trade and industries, such as perfumery, dairy farming, agriculture, manures, etc. It also deals with cattle and human diseases with suitable prescriptions for all of them. Besides, collection of several hundreds of other useful informations and money-making secret formulas and processes have greatly increased the usefulness of the book. Reduced price Rs. 1, V. P. As 2.

N. B.—On account of the scarcity of paper, the next edition of these books is not expected soon, hence to avoid disappointment send for them to-day.

Address:—MANAGER, THE WALKER PRESS, MAINPURI U. P.

SEL-GOVERNMENT IN ANCIENT INDIA

BY M. V. GOPAL RAO.

"India is no stranger to Self-rule"
"Kings elected by the people."
"Kings deposed for mis-rule."
"King to exercise executive functions only."
"Taxation with the consent of the people."
"Doctrine of the sovereignty of the people recognised."
"Divine right no personal attribute to kings."

MODERN REVIEW:—"This neatly printed pamphlet of 24 pages makes an admirable attempt to show that Self-rule was not a strange thing in India in olden times."
Price As. 4 Four annas only. V. P. Charges extra.

Apply to:—
ANDHRA GRANDHA RATNAGARAM,
4-1-20. Pithapuram, (Godavari Dt.)

"PEEPS INTO THE FUTURE"

Is everybody's everyday book. The codified experience of generations of Astrologers and Indian Yogis—an astrologer in moments of anxiety & suspense—answers short and succinctly clear on the thousand and one points of doubt and uncertainty. Everybody may consult the book—no date of birth or horoscope necessary. Must be in every pocket for it suits all. Price one rupee only. Foreign two shillings. Apply to the Proprietor.

TATA MYSTIC ASTRAL STUDIO
24-8-19- Chodavaram, Vizagapatam District.

"MESMERISM AND HYPNOTISM."

Complete Course Rs. 1-8 only. Contents. 1. Instructions. 2. Breathing Exercise or Yoga Practice. 3. Exercises to develop this will and memory. 4. Various Hypnotic processes. 5. To wake up a subject. 6. Clairvoyance. 7. Telepathy. 8. Levitation. 9. Wonderful methods of Hindu Healing. 10. Various diseases. 11. Hindu Cataplexy or Burial alive. 12. The secret method of telling future events most wonderfully by the Indian Yogees without horoscope or birth time. Mr. Batikantha Bhowmki-Head Master writes from Senhatix on 22-10-19:—I have become successful hypnotist with the help of your course. The methods are far easier and simpler than in any other courses. Mr. B. Sitaramurty, B.A., B.L., Government pleader writes: Your book really reveals the wonderful hidden powers of man. The methods are of the easiest kind and the book in short is the best of its kind in the field.

THE EASTERN HYPNOTIC HOME,
P. O. Chodavaram, (Vizagapatam, Dt.)

"COMMERCE AND INDUSTRIES."

An Interesting Monthly Journal of Indian Material Progress.

Annual Subscription Rs. 10-0 and Single Copy Re. 1 Post Free.

A Specially valuable advertising Medium.

Wanted Agents throughout India.

Address:—P. Box. No. 353, and 5 Mount Road
Madras S. C. 12-10-19

ON DUTY I

THE YOUNG COLLEGIATE IS OUT.

An educational Monthly for Young and Old.

Editor:—Mr. R. S. NIMBKAR.

The "It's of it:—

1. If you are a Student, it will help you to the Examination Hall because your professors contribute to it.
2. If you are an active worker, it will show some field for you to solve problems, because it contains articles of your cadets.
3. If you are an artist, it is illustrated for you.
4. If you are a Social reformer, it will discuss all problems of Social reform and will give you views of male and female reformers.

Whatever you are, the Monthly gives you whatever you want: Annual Subscription Rs. 3. Single Copy Annas 8.

Wanted Agents throughout India.

For advertisement rates & other particulars apply to—

Young Collegiate Office,
Sandhurst Road, Bombay No. 4.
14-12-19.

S. A. DANGE,
Manager.

THE TATA INDUSTRIAL BANK, LD.

HEAD OFFICE, BOMBAY.
BRANCHES—CALCUTTA and HYDERABAD (Deccan)
CAWNPORE and LUCKNOW.

Sub-Branches.—

Bombay—Share Bazaar, Shroff Bazaar.
Calcutta—Barr Bazaar.

London Agents, LLOYDS BANK LIMITED.
NEW YORK AGENTS: THE GUARANTY
TRUST COY. OF NEW YORK.

AUTHORISED CAPITAL... Rs. 12,00,00,000.
SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL... .. 7,56,00,225.
PAID UP CAPITAL... .. 1,50,99,225.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Sir D. J. Tata, Kt., Chairman.
Sir Sassoon David, Bart.
Sir R. N. Mookerjee, K. C. I. E.
Sir Francis Stewart, Kt.
Sir Henry Proctor, Kt.
R. D. Tata, Esq.
F. E. Dinshaw, Esq.
F. O. Rimington, Esq.
Narottam Morarjee, Esq.
Hajee Gulam Mahomed Ajam, Esq.
The Hon'ble Mr. Purshottamdas Thakordas, C. I. E.
A. J. Bilimoria, Esq.

Secretary, R. H. Parker.

Current Accounts opened and interest allowed on daily credit balances from Rs. 500/- to Rs. 1,00,000/- at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum. If the balance to the credit of any account does not fall below Rs. 25,000/- at any time between 1st January and 30th June, interest will be allowed during that period at 2½ % per annum. No interest is allowed unless the sum accrued amounts to Rs. 8/- Half-yearly.

Fixed Deposits. Interest allowed on Deposits fixed for one or two years and for shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank. Interest allowed on Savings Bank Accounts at 4 per cent per annum. Rules may be obtained on application.

Loans and Cash Credits are granted on approved securities.

Purchases and sales of Securities and charges effected.

Bills of Exchange purchased and collected and every description of banking and exchange business undertaken.

14-4-18. L. D. L. BUCKLEY, General Manager.

THE YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK, LIMITED.

(Registered in Japan.)
Established 1880.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 48,000,000.
Paid up Capital.....Yen. 42,000,000.
Reserve Fund.....Yen. 23,100,000.

Head Office:—Yokohama.

Branches and Agencies at Bombay, Buenos Aires, Calcutta, Changchou, Chi-Nan, Dairen, Fengtien, Hankow, Harbin, Hongkong, Honolulu, Kaiyuan, Kobe, London, Los Angeles, Lyons, Manila, Nagasaki, Newchwang, New York, Osaka, Peking, Rangoon, San Francisco, Seattle, Shanghai, Shimonoseki, Singapore, Soerabaya, Sydney, Tientsin, Tokio, Tsingtao.

Current Deposit Accounts are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at the rate of 2 per cent per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 100,000, provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of banking and exchange business transacted.

N. IGARASHI,
Post Box No. 207, Hornby Road, Bombay.
I. NISHIMAKI,
Manager, Calcutta.

1-12-17.

Post Box No. 406, Clive street, Calcutta

THE BANK OF BARODA, LD.

Under the Patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja Gaekwar.
Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897

HEAD OFFICE BARODA.

Branches—Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, and Sarad.
Capital Subscribed.....Rs. 60,00,000.
Capital Paid up .. " 30,00,000.
Reserve Fund .. " 12,50,000.

DIRECTORS :

The Hon'ble Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas, C. I. E., Chairman.
Sir Vithaldas Damodar Thackersey, Kt.
Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti Nagar Sheth, Baroda.
Sheth Manilal Revadas, Vadnagar.
Rao Bahadur Ganajirao R. Nimbalkar, Bar Sabha, Baroda State.
Bhaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., Advocate, High Court, Bombay.
M. H. Kantavalle, Esq., Agent, Maharaja Mill Co., Ltd. Baroda.
R. R. Shirgaokar, Naib Sabha, Baroda State.
A. N. Datar, Accountant General, Baroda State.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balance from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest which does not come to Rs. 8 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application. C. E. BANDLE,—General Manager.
15-4-12.

THE CENTRAL BANK OF INDIA; LTD

Subscribed Capital... .. Rs. 50,00,000
Paid Up Capital " 40,59,900
Reserved liability of
Shareholders " 25,00,000
Reserve Fund " 6,00,000

Head Office:—Alicoe Building, Bombay.

Local Branches:—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar, (3) Share Bazar.

Branches:—Amritsar, Calcutta, Delhi, Jharia, Karachi.

London Agents:—London Joint City and Midland Bank, Ltd.

Current Accounts:— 3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June
2½ % allowed on Daily Balances from July to December

12 months Deposits received at 5 % per annum
Long and Short period Deposits received at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking Business transacted.
For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA,
Manager.

25-2-17.

THE BANK OF TAIWAN, LTD.

Incorporated by Special Charter of the Imperial Japanese Government, 1899.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 60,000,000
Paid-up CapitalYen. 37,500,000
Reserve FundYen. 7,030,000

Head Office :—Taipeh, Formosa.

BRANCHES :—

LONDON	SHANGHAI	TOKIO
NEW YORK	HONGKONG	OSAKA
AMOY	SINGAPORE	KOBE
CANTON	SOERABAJA	YOKOHAMA
FOOCHOW	SEMARANG	AKO
HANKOW	MAKUNG	GIRAN
KIUKIANG	BATAVIA	KAGI
SWATOW	PINAN	KARENKO
TAINAN	SHINCHIKU	KEELUNG
TAKOW	TAICHU	TAMSUI

The Bank has also a large number of Correspondents at Home and Abroad.

Current Deposit Accounts :—are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at 2 per cent. per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 1,00,000 provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of Banking and Exchange business transacted.

K. TAKEMURA,
Manager

9-12-17. 56, Esplanade Road, Fort, BOMBAY

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

Established 7th September 1906.

Incorporated under the Indian Companies' Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE :

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.

Capital Subscribed Rs. 2,00,00,000

Capital Called up ,, 99,00,000

Reserve Fund ,, 64,00,000

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 800 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½% p. a. throughout the year. On sums exceeding Rs. 1,00,000 interest is allowed by special arrangement. No interest will be allowed which does not amount to Rs. 8 per half year.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short periods @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

*Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application".

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, & CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stocks at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

M. P. STRINGFELLOW,

15-1-11.

Manager.

A Lady's Best Ornament is a Glorious Head of Hair.

A profusion of rich, soft silky, lustrous, wavy hair—where's the woman who would not like that?

There's only one oil that makes such hair and it's the far-famed

KAMINIA OIL
(Regd.)

Invaluable for ladies, and just as much for Brain-Workers and Students.

Heated head cooled, aching disappears and dandruff becomes a thing of the past. Added to all these it possesses a beautiful fragrant smell.

For superiority, awarded a Gold Medal at the Mysore Exhibition, and in great demand all over the country.

If you have not yet used KAMINIA OIL, you

have missed a fine delight and a real boon; use it now, if only once; and like many people you will prefer to use also always

Price per bottle, Re. 1. V. P. Charges 6 annas extra

Price for 3 bottles Rs. 2-10. V. P. charges 14 annas extra

Write now, Do not delay.

Sole Agents :—

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,
(5 8-16) No. 155, Jamma Masjid Market, BOMBAY.

Now-a-Days.

All things have advanced in price Even the vegetable ingredients used in our Atank Nigrah Pills have advanced in price

Even the labourers demand heavy wages being dearer. Even the users have increased yet the Atank Nigrah Pills for Toning up the system are sold at before war price i. e. at a Rupee.

Valdya Shastri

Manishanker Govindji,

Atank Nigrah Pharmacy,

Head Office:—Jamnagar—Kathiawar.

Branch:—Kalbadevi Road, Bombay.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours. Publish Fine Art Pictures, & c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.

1-12-10. HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS-

ROYAL TONIC PILLS

powerful Nutritious and Strength Restorer. Price Re. 1-4 per tin of 30 Pills.

PREPARED BY—GOVINDJI DAMODER & Co.

Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Commission

1-12-10. No. 3 Sutar Chawl Market.

Timely advice to the Wealthy

Costly but certain remedies are in the long run cheaper than cheap and uncertain ones.

KANDARPA SANJIVINI PILLS AND OIL

are the safest and surest remedies for indigestion, constipation, loss of appetite, memory, mental, physical and nervous debility and all sorts of urinary disorders, improve impoverished blood.

Price per tin of 40 Pills Rs. 5 & per tola of Oil Rs. 10.

Both Purchased at a time Rs. 11/4 -

Medical Advice and a Medical Book containing 128 pages sent Gratis and Post Free.

RAJ VAIDYA NARAYANJI KESHAVJI

Head Office :- Jamnagar, Kathiawar, (India.)

Branch :- No. 187, Kalbadevi Road,
24-8-1919. BOMBAY.

Empire Hindu Hotel

Opposite Victoria Terminus
Bombay.

(Central Situation)
Strictly Vegetarian
Charges Moderate

Fitted with
Electric Lift, Fans and Lights.

TELEGRAMS: TELEPHONE

"FOOD," BOMBAY.

2769.

22-6-19.

Saffron? Saffron?? Saffron???

If you wish to buy genuinely pure and best Saffron it is

SUN

BRAND

SAFFRON

ONLY

It has been largely used by Jain Temples, Maharajas, Durbars, Hakim and Vaidyas all over the country for the last 75 year and is well known for its purity and genuineness.

I-1-

S. NARAYEN & Co.,

21, Humam Street, Fort Bombay.

REVOLUTION IN SHORTHAND.

There are systems and systems, but that one is the most "practical" which can be written with a pen or pencil, straight away on unruled paper, without thickening, positions, grammalogues, multitudes of rules and exceptions, arbitrary word-signs and contractions, long lists of phrases, and various other impediments to speed. The New "ROYAL-SPEED" Course of 12 Lessons, incorporated by Expert who introduced the Original Daployan Joined-Vowel Scheme in the East, has all the advantages of a modern, down-to-date system, and is acquired by Boys and Girls of 12, in a fraction of time. Quickest Results and Highest Efficiency are Guaranteed. Personal or Postal Tuition. Prospective pupils must investigate, as interested parties seem to recommend the only system known to them.

NATIONAL BUSINESS COLLEGE,

1st Floor, Luxmi Bldg., Lamington Road, Bombay.

"EVERYTHING FOR EVERYBODY"

National Standard Portable Typewriter No. 3 (10 lbs.) Rs. 100
Oliver No. 5 (American Rebuilt) B.S. & Tab. Rs. 175; No. 7 " 120
Empire No. 1 (Do.) in good working order " 40
Multikopy Typewriter Carbons, per Box of 100 sheets. " 8
Webster Brand " Ribbons for all machines, Doz. " 21
Typewriter Oil (best 1 oz. bot.) or Eberhard Brasers, Doz. " 6
Safety Razor, Rivals Gillette, with 6 Gillette Blades (best) " 3
Envelope Making Machine (to make 30,000 per day), New " 35
Conklin's Self Billing Fountain Pen (non-leakable) Gold Nib " 8

GENERAL CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE,

20-4-19. Post Box No. 424, Bombay.

HYPNOTISM

PERSONAL MAGNETISM,
WILL POWER,
NERVE FORCE—

Call what you will—

Is the intangible power that controls human destiny. It is the key to all business and social success. This power is no special gift of any one. It is latent in every one. We help you how to display it. By our system, you can learn in a few days at your own home and not only achieve success yourself, but you can influence the mind, health and actions of others to a remarkable degree.

Write immediately for our free booklet—The Pride of India.

THE LATENT LIGHT CULTURE,
TINNEVELLY, S. INDIA.

Bhatiwala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 1 each bottle of 100.

Bhatiwala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 2 each bottle of 100.

Bhatiwala's Ague Mixture of Fever, Malaria, Influenza etc.

Bhatiwala's Ague Pills for Malaria, Fever, Influenza etc.

Bhatiwala's Tonic pills for pale people & nervous breaks down.

Bhatiwala's Tooth Powder of Preserving Teeth

Bhatiwala's Ringworm ointment for Ringworm

Dhobi itch etc.

May be had from all dealers in medicines or from

Dr. H. L. Bhatiwala Sons & Co., Ltd.

No. 12, Worli, 18, Bombay.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESS:—"Doctor Bhatiwala Dadar"

THE BOMBAY CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK.

HEAD OFFICE Apollo Street, St., Bombay.

DIRECTORS:—The Hon. Sir Fazulbhai Currimbhoy (Chairman), Sir Vithaldas D. Thackersey, the Hon. Mr. Lalubhai Esmaldas, Sir Stanley Reed, the Hon. Mr. U. V. Mehta, the Chief of Ishaikaranji, G. K. Devadhar, Esq., the Hon. Sir P. D. Pattani, the Raja Sahab of Malagaon.

Share Capital (full paid)Rs. 7,00,000

1 Deposits fixed for one year and shorter or longer periods are accepted. Rates and other particulars may be ascertained from the manager signed.

2 The Bank finances only registered Co-operative Societies in the Bombay Presidency on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency.

3 Accounts are audited half-yearly by a special Government Auditor, and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the "Bombay Government Gazette."

20-5-17. VAIKUNTH L. MEHTA, Manager.

Clean
Wholesome
Intelligent
Entertainment
IS A GREAT STEP

IN

SOCIAL REFORM.

When deciding on a
*PLACE OF AMUSEMENT TWO
ESTABLISHMENTS*

Should at once leap to the mind,

THE EXCELSIOR
BOMBAY'S PREMIER MODERN THEATRE

AND

THE EMPIRE
BOMBAY'S MOST PALATIAL
PICTURE THEATRE

Where Film Plays of Distinction are shown
Every Week.

A
Great Cinema Masterpiece
is shown,

Both theatres are near the Bori Bunder
and are run by the

EXCELSIOR SYNDICATE.

The Pioneer of Bombay's

AMUSEMENT WORLD.

FURUKAWA & CO.

TOKIO

The Largest Manufacturers
in the East

OF

ELECTRIC BARE COPPER CONDUCTORS,

ELECTRIC UNDERGROUND CABLES,

ELECTRIC INSULATED WIRES,

ELECTRIC ACCESSORIES,

INGOTS, RODS, WIRES,

SHEETS, TUBES,

Etc., Etc.,

All our wires are made in accordance with the standard of the British Cable Makers' Association and are tested and approved by leading firms in India.

SOLE AGENTS IN INDIA AND BURMA.

TATA, SONS & CO.,

BOMBAY & CALCUTTA.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS Ltd.

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd
Narsari Building, Fort, BOMBAY.

Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.
11-8-17.

When YOUR EYES

need to be examined by QUALIFIED OCULISTS or by SCIENTIFIC REFRACTIONISTS of 26 year experience, FREE OF CHARGE, you cannot do better than GO TO

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR & CO.

The leading firm of Oculists, Eyesight Specialists, Manufacturing Opticians and suppliers of the patented

"KRYPTOK"

(Invisible one-piece bifocal lens.)

Toric, and all kinds of lenses,—Cylindrical, Spherical, Prismatic, &c., from pebbles as well as from best quality crown glass.

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR

Eyesight Specialist,

With 26 Years' Practical Experience.

Holds Exceptional Testimonials from H. H. The Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, the Hon'ble Sir Lawrence Jenkins the Hon. Mr. Justice Batty, Mrs. Batty, the Hon. Sir N. S. Chandavarkar, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beaman, the Hon'ble Sir S. L. Bachelor, the Hon'ble Sir John Heaton Mr. H. G. Bell, M. V. O., Col. R. H. Forman, B. A. M. C., P. M. O. Bo. Brigade, Lieut. Col. G. H. Bull, M. D., I. M. S., Lieut-Colonel Peters M. B., I. M. S., and other high personages.

(7) 379, HORNBY ROW,
Opposite the Government Telegraph Office,
62-11-10. Fort, BOMBAY.

INTENDING ASSUREES ARE INVITED TO COMPARE THE RATES AND CONDITIONS OF

The Empire of India Life Assurance Company, Limited.

WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.

Head Office 11 Elphinstone Circle, BOMBAY.

SEE REPORT AND OPINIONS OF THE PRESS AS TO THE REMARKABLE PROGRESS MADE BY THE COMPANY.

ENDOWMENT NON-FORFEITABLE POLICY FOR RS. 3,000.

PAYABLE AT AGE 60 OR AT DEATH, IF PREVIOUS, WITH PROFIT.

If, at any time, the assured under this plan should desire to cease paying any more premiums, he can obtain a paid-up Policy for such a proportion of the original sum assured as the number of premiums paid bears to the number agreed upon. Thus a gentleman who had assured at age 30 for a Policy of Rs. 3,000 payable at age 60 or at Death, if previous, after 5 year payments, would be entitled to a Free paid-up Policy for Rs. 500 free of future payments.

MONTHLY PREMIUMS.

AT AGE 20, Rs. 6-9-0.

AT AGE 25, Rs. 7-8-0.

AT AGE 30, Rs. 8-14-0.

AT AGE 35, Rs. 10-13-0.

AT AGE 40, Rs. 13-12-0.

AT AGE 45, Rs. 18-10-0

SOME OF THE DISTINCTIVE FEATURES.

* Funds invested in Government Securities and in accordance with the Indian Trusts Act Policy holders can appoint their own Directors.

90 per cent. of Profits to Participating Policy holders.

Lapsed policies revived without Medical Certificate.

Liberal Surrender Values 40 per cent. of the Tabular premium paid.

Immediate payment of Claims.

Medical fees and stamps on Policies are payable by the Company.

The sum assured is PAYABLE IN FULL should death occur even immediately after payment of the first premium.

GUARANTEE INSURANCE.—This Company issues Guaranteed Policies in situation of fast and responsible. A specially authorized to guarantee the employees of the Post Office

Proposal Forms and full Particulars may be obtained from any local Agent in India or from ALLUM, BHARUCHA & CO. Managers.
22-9-10.

IN INDIA

EVERY ONE KNOWS.

whom it does concern that we are foremost in supplying the best COSSI SILK SUIT PIECES

suitable for the season. These pieces are strong, fancy and durable, and have been specially manufactured for India Market. Each piece guaranteed for One Suit Complete.

Price Rs. 10 per piece.

Write to—THE BHARGAVA COMMERCIAL SOCIETY,
2-10. Benares City.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER. Contract Rates for Advertisements.

Number of insertions.	1		2		3		4		5
	Inch.	Column.	Inch.	Column.	Inch.	Column.	Inch.	Column.	Inch.	Column.
13	Rs. 11	Rs. 16	Rs. 20	Rs. 30	Rs. 50	Rs. 87	Rs. 155	Rs. 300
26	16	25	30	50	87	155	300
62	25	40	50	87	155	300

Usual advertisements, at Rs 4 per line for the 1st insertion and Rs. 2 per line of succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-yearly or yearly in advance.

WONDERFUL TONIC AND MOUTH-REFRESHER
JINTAN.

This is a safe and efficient remedy in all kinds of diseases or disturbances of the digestive organs. It is composed entirely of VEGETABLE INGREDIENTS made from the prescription of the following eminent medical men viz—
NORIHITO MIWA, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy,
ZENJIRO INOUE, M. D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy
 and testified as to its efficacy by
Baron J. MATSUMOTO, M. D., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Army.
T. MITAMURA Esq., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Navy.

As a digestive it is unequalled and will not disturb the functions of the most delicate stomach. Its antiseptic properties render it very efficacious in warding off disease and at the same time it imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath of the user.

By virtue of its aroma, it effectually takes the odour of Tobacco and Alcoholic Spirits.

It acts beneficially on the vocal cords and has found much favour with public speakers, actors, singers and those whose vocation necessitates a severe strain on the throat.

GOOD FOR

Billiousness, Headache, Vertigo, Nausea, Indigestion, Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, etc., etc.

To maintain general health 2 to 3 pills may be taken occasionally, well masticated.

Price—Small Packet Rs. 0-1-0. Middle Packet, with Tin case., Rs. 0-4-0. Large Packet with fancy case., Rs. 1-0-0

Prepared by Messrs. MORISHITA Co., OSAKA, JAPAN.

Sole Agents: Jintan Agency (G. R. Chaubal), Juma Masjid, BOMBAY.

FOR PAINS
 AND ACHES
 SPRAINS ETC.
 USE:—

AMRUTANJAN.

The magical pain balm extant. Cures all aches & pains. Costs 8 As. Sold everywhere.

By Appointment to H. E. the Governor
 Sir George Sydenham Clarke of
 Bombay.

HARDAS VALJI,
 (KING OF INDIAN CONFECTIONERS),
 Highest Confectioner, Caterer and Grand
 Military Contractor.

Proprietor—RATINATH,
 Chitra Bazar & Grant Road,
BOMBAY.

20-4-19.

DENTISTRY.

Extractions Painless;
 Terms Very Moderate;
 Gold Crown, Bar and
 Bridge Work a Speciality
 (teeth without plate);
 Latest Successful Treatment
 for Pyorrhoea (pus in gums).

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

Hours: 9-1-30 & 5-7-30: Daily,
 (Sundays—From 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.)

ABROOS BUILDING,
 NEW CHARNI ROAD,
 GINAGOR, BOMBAY.

K. R. AMAT,
 Surgeon Dentist.

1-8-19.

THE INDIAN * SOCIAL * REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY MORNING.

Office—EMPIRE BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD, FORT.

Editor:—K. NATARAJAN

Vol. XXX. BOMBAY—SUNDAY, JANUARY 18, 1920. No. 20.

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard."
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

The Congress and the Moderates.	Spiritual Forces and Secular Duties.
Mr. Sastri on the Congress.	The Bombay Mills Strike.
The Challenge on Indian Constitutional Reform.	Keshab Chandra Sen.
The Virtue of Law.	Social Reconstruction.
Pandit Motilal Nehru.	The Ramakrishna Students' Home, Madras.
A Progressive Dewan.	The Bombay Commercial Congress.
The Punjab High Court.	The Problem of Christianity in India, II.
It!	Character and Marriage.
Protesting too Much.
Hindu Appreciation of Christ.

NOTES.

The Congress and the Moderates:—The Commonwealth, li' ourselves, takes the view that it was the duty of the Moderates to have attended the Congress in larger numbers. "It is not to be denied, however," writes our contemporary, "that the Moderate party were very ill-advised in abstaining from attending the Congress session. Such abstention gives rise to an impression that the Moderates are afraid of facing a majority hostile to their views, and that they only regard the Congress as a National body in so far as it submits to their guidance and advice. Indeed, from the British standpoint, the refusal to join issue in the open cannot but be regarded as a most unfortunate weakness, involving a timidity hardly suggesting vigorous leadership, or programme. All the more must we congratulate the Hon. Mr. V. S. Sastri on his patriotism and on his recognition of the undoubted fact that the Congress is the Congress, even though in any particular year it may fail—as this year it has failed—to reflect the National outlook. Mr. Sastri has shown himself able to rise superior to mere party outlook, and we are more than glad that his sense of statesmanship dominated those personal friendships and political comradeships which he must to some extent have tried."

Mr. Sastri on the Congress: We are not sure, judging from some of his observations after his return to Madras from Amritsar via Calcutta, that Mr. Srinivasa Sastry is now likely to appreciate the congratulations and compliments of our contemporary. His criticisms comprise almost every fault which may be imputed to a public movement. Curiously enough, Mr. G. B. Trivedi, a leading Prarthana, Samajist, preaching on Sunday before last at the Mandir at Girgaum, is reported in the Sudh Patrika to have drawn from the proceedings of the Amritsar Congress the comforting conclusion that spiritual ideals were permeating Indian politics. Certainly he was right in saying that never before has a Congress heard an address like that of Swami Shradhanand or passed a resolution such as the penitential resolution regarding the excesses of the mobs in April last. If both Mr. Sastri and Mr. Trivedi be right, we shall be confronted with the paradox of the Amritsar Congress being at the same time lacking in moral authority and abounding in spirituality. The fact, however, is that, while to the devout Mr. Trivedi, the Congress seemed all Shradhanand, to a political virtuoso like Mr. Sastry, it probably seemed to be charged with Satyamurti's from the flag which floated on the top to the wet and slush at the bottom. The truth in this as in most other cases lies between the two extremes. The Congress was neither a congregation of saints nor a gang of sinners. The only particular in respect of which the average of the Congress probably differed materially from that of the Moderate Conference was perhaps the age of the individual members. There were probably proportionately more men above 45 at the Moderate Conference than at the National Congress. In that single fact may be found a sufficient clue to the character and tendencies of the two national assemblies.

The Challenge on Indian Constitutional Reform: The organ of democratic Christianity to which we have often occasion to refer, the Challenge, published in London, has the following suggestive editorial of the Government of India Act: "By the passing of the Government of India Act," writes our contemporary, "a great step forward has been taken in the course marked out by successive Royal Proclamations. To train up a nation in self-government is always difficult. The difficulty is greater rather than less in connection with a people of ancient civilisation. The existence of caste will prove a great source of trouble. But it is possible that the greatest difficulty may come from the British side. We have heard it said that if the Indians are to be partners with us in the administration of their country, the best men will no longer enter the Indian Civil Service. We hope that is not true: for if it is true, it means that the splendid qualities of our administration of India have been, after all, rooted in Paganism. To a great extent it is true that our Public Schools train men in the pagan virtues—honour, courage, self-control, justice, all rooted in pride. The test comes now; shall we find enough men who have honour, courage, self-control and justice, all rooted in humility? Have we a sufficient stock of Christian virtue for the task, to which we have set our hand?"

The Virtue of Law: In the course of a thoughtful and suggestive article in a recent number of Everyman on the League of Nations, the Right Hon. Sir Frederick Pollock insists that what is needed above all is the clear and lively sense of honour, justice and fair dealing, as due in equal measure to all members in the Commonwealth of Nations; to the weaker not more than to the stronger, but not less. "Many years ago," he writes,

"I heard a speech at Calcutta which assumed from beginning to end, quite innocently, that the purpose of the British empire in India was to enable Scottish merchants to make their fortunes in the jute trade. We are not all tradesmen, neither are all tradesmen narrow-minded, but we all have our jute somewhere trying to warp our sense of justice. Let us beware of it, and remember that the virtue of law is to do justice truly, that is, for the common good, and indifferently, that is, rendering even to the unjust no less than their due, and giving no more to ourselves and our friends."

Pandit Motilal Nehru. The President of the Indian National Congress, Pandit Motilal, says the United India and Indian States, is a great social reformer, but unlike many so-called reformers he has had the courage to practise whatever he preaches to others. In his very early boyhood, we are told, he defied the orthodoxy of his parents by openly dining with Principal Harrison, and he was the first man in the community of Kashmir Pandits to break the institution of Purdah. He gave a further blow to orthodoxy when in 1899, on his return from England, he refused to undergo the customary ordeal of Prayashchit, or purification ceremony. He is an ardent champion of equal rights for women, and opposed Pandit Malaviya, his friend, when the latter opposed female franchise in the National Congress held at Bombay. The Pandit Motilal presided at the Provincial Social Conference held at Allahabad and the All-India Patel Marriage Bill Conference at Delhi.

A Progressive Dewan: The West Coast Spectator (Calicut) writes as follows of the Dewan of Cochin, Rao Bahadur T. Vijayaraghav Charya: "The Dewan of Cochin has recently been saying some very good things in regard to the depressed classes and female education. In one of his speeches he said that he would strongly put down any attempt on the part of the so-called higher castes to hold down the untouchables and the unapproachables. We are also told that a second grade college for women would soon be an accomplished fact. Cochin has advanced far in female education, and it is only in the fitness of things that the Darbar should provide more facilities, and a second grade college is a badly felt want."

The Punjab High Court: There seems to be a strong consensus of opinion in Lahore that the vacancy in the office of Chief Justice of the Punjab High Court should be filled by the appointment of Mr. Justice Shadi Lal. This gentleman seems to have all the qualifications, statutory and other, for the post, and his colour, in these days, cannot be a bar to the office. It is high time that the practice of not appointing Indians, however qualified, to the post of Chief Justice in our High Courts, were done away with. There is every reason why such a desirable innovation should be started in the Punjab at the present time. Some time ago there was a talk of an Indian Chief Justice being appointed to some other High Courts, and the appointment of an Indian as governor is no longer regarded as beyond the realm of probabilities.

If commenting on an address delivered by the Hon. Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya on the Reform Act at Allahabad, the Leader observes: "If the hon. Pandit had himself proceeded to England and observed the situation with his own eyes, we venture to think that he would have formed a quite different judgment." The other day, a friend remarked: "If the editor of the Leader had been at Amritsar during Congress week, I think his views would have undergone considerable modification." Since neither of these things have happened, is it too much to hope that the two gentlemen would pool their experiences and formulate an opinion which gives due weight to the situation in England and to the situation created by Jallianwala? Everybody, after all, cannot see everything with his own eyes.

Protesting too Much: We have expressed our opinion of some of the speeches made at the Amritsar Congress on the resolution urging the recall of the Viceroy. But when Mr. Simpson told the Viceroy at the meeting of the Chambers of Commerce at Calcutta that he was sure that every Britisher, apart altogether from the ordinary feelings of loyalty, would always rally round the Governor of the province or the Viceroy, surely he forgot the treatment meted out to the late Lord Ripon, and the attitude of the Anglo-Indian Press, of Calcutta to Lord Hardinge, after the transfer of the capital to Delhi.

Hindu Appreciation of Christ: The Standard a Roman Catholic weekly, published in Madras, comments on our paragraph in a recent issue inviting attention to Brahmachari Gurudasa's address on Christ, delivered at the Ramkrishna Math, of which we reprinted a large part in a recent issue. It observes: "The Indian Social Reformer of a recent date called the attention of its Christian readers to the eulogy pronounced on Christ by a Hindu preacher who was willing to recognise Christ as one of the avatars of the Deity. And it adduces this as an example of the tolerance of Hindus and the Hindu Religion, and to rebut the charge that there is any anti-Christian spirit in the country. We are quite willing to recognise that Hindus are tolerant to Christ and have no difficulty in looking upon Him as an avatar. But the trouble with us Christians is that we look upon Christ as the avatar of God. And so the benignant attitude of Hindus to Christ leaves us unmoved. Especially when we know that much smaller personages than Christ have been given this title of avatar." We are obliged to our contemporary for making it clear that "the trouble" is with Christians who will not recognize any avatar except Christ, and not with the Hindus who recognize that Christ is an avatar of God. The talk of an anti-Christian spirit among Hindus is thus absurd on the face of it. What is fact is the anti-every-other-religion spirit of Christianity as understood by our contemporary and several other professors of it.

Spiritual Forces and Secular Duties. A Christian Missionary journal cites the following as an illustration of the efficacy of spiritual forces in connection with secular duties. "A brigade had been on a raid but had failed and had suffered considerable casualties. Consequently a second attempt had to be made, and the most careful precautions were taken in order to ensure success. One of the officers happened to remark that not one thing had been overlooked. "I beg your pardon," said the chaplain, "the most important thing of all has been overlooked." The Colonel looked up and said: "What is that, padri?" "The spiritual, Sir. We have had no service though we are going over the top to night." "You are quite right, padri. Is it too late? May we not even yet have one?" That evening a service was held under a tree, both chaplains taking equal part. Those present felt the nearness of spiritual forces. The raid was a success, they gained their objective, they captured prisoners and their casualties were slight. Surely it was the moral superiority of the Allies, both as regard rightness of cause and of methods that turned the scale in the final issue of this momentous conflict."

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, JANUARY 18, 1920.

THE BOMBAY MILLS STRIKE.

On the 2nd instant several of the Bombay cotton mills had to cease work—owing to a strike of their operatives. The movement spread to other mills. Some societies which have been working for the amelioration of the condition of the working classes, held meetings of the operatives with a view to ascertaining their grievance and getting them redressed. About ten days ago the Social Service League of Bombay entered the field and the other agencies agreed to the formation of a joint organisation to bring about a settlement of the strike. This organisation assumed the name of the Bombay Labour Settlement Committee. Sir Narayan Chandavarkar was elected its president and among its members were men from all the different societies interested in promoting a speedy and satisfactory settlement. The Bombay Labour Settlement Committee set before itself a two-fold object: first, to ascertain the demands of the mill labourers, and, secondly, to represent their case as to those demands to the Mill-Owners' Association and to take the necessary steps to end the strike and prevent its recurrence. With the object of ascertaining the demands of the workers, the Bombay Labour Settlement Committee arranged for public meetings of the work people in ten important centres. Sir Narayan himself presided at the first of these meetings and explained in the vernacular, Marathi, the objects for which the meeting was called and invited the representatives of the workers to state their grievances. A similar procedure was followed at all the meetings. In addition to formulating their grievances, the workers were asked to elect their own representatives to join the Committee. A list of 15 grievances was drawn up by this enlarged Committee which authorised Sir Narayan to submit them to the Mill-Owners' Association with the request that that Association would meet and confer with the Committee with a view to a prompt settlement of the strike. The President's letter requesting a Conference was sent on Wednesday and on the next day the Mill-Owners' Association replied declining to enter into any conference with the representatives of the mill workers until the workers resume work.

The Bombay Labour Settlement Committee selected 4 of the 15 grievances as demanding immediate consideration. These relate to the wages of the workers, their hours of work, the question of bonus, and wages for the days on which the men were on strike. The men want a permanent increase of 15 per cent. and a temporary increase of 35 per cent. for the duration of the present high prices. A table appended to Sir Narayan's letter shows that between the prices of certain staple commodities now and six years ago there is a difference on an average of 181 per cent. As the result of the strike this time last year, the men obtained an increase of 35 per cent. As regards the hours of labour in the mills, Sir Narayan points out that the mill workers feel that the present system of 12 hours for men is oppressive, weakens vitality, ruins health, depresses and demoralises home life, and altogether grinds the men and women working in the mills as machines with no opportunities to enjoy the domesticities of life. The annual bonus is demanded because it is felt that the profits of the mills are as much due to labour as to capital, and that the workmen are equitably entitled to a substantial share in the bonus from the profits. As regards the payment of wages during the strike period, Sir Narayan, while admitting that the men were wrong in going on strike without notice to their employers, observes:

As against these two considerations on the other hand it may be urged that if the mill workers have some solid grievances, arising from the hard conditions of life due to high prices and the long and oppressive hours of labour making life miserable, and, if, on account of their ignorance and inability to act according to the methods of organised and regular agitation such as mill agents and other educated people are accustomed to take for the purpose of the redress of their grievances, it is Society, as a whole, which by doing nothing to lead them aright has left them to the sole alternative of the action of going on strike without either regular previous notice to the employers or without an organised and responsible representation of their grievances. One outstanding fact of the strike is the general complaint of the aloofness of the mill agents—the want of human touch on the part of the employers. The mill workers in Bombay feel that they have no responsible guidance and that somehow their employers hold aloof instead of cultivating sympathy, mutual understanding and harmony of interest by means of their human touch.

We regret that the Mill-Owners' Association have rejected a proposal conceived in the best of goodwill to themselves as to their workers. The curt refusal to enter into a conference with a view to a settlement has produced a painful impression on the public mind. The Mill-Owners seem to be under the impression that the strike is due to wire-pullers. The readiness with which all have co-operated with the Social Service League, shows that so far the wire-pullers have had no chance with the workers. The surest means of keeping wire-pullers out altogether is to redress the real grievances of the workers promptly and cheerfully. That the workers have real grievances can not be doubted. We have been assured on high authority that there is a consensus of opinion among the Mill-Owners—and has been for at least ten months—that twelve hours is too much and that with a 10 hour day the industry would do quite as well as, if not better than, with the present 12 hour day. Why not declare a ten hours' day at once? If it is a right thing to do, the fact of the operatives having struck without notice can not make it wrong. Then as regards wages, surely some increase is absolutely essential in view of the high range of prices. Whether it should be 50 per cent. as the workers ask, or any lower percentage is a question for consideration. A right settlement can be arrived at only by calculating and comparing the real wages prior to and since the war. No one can deny at this time of day that the workmen are entitled to a share of the enormous profits which the mills have been making. The question of strike pay, in our opinion, should be settled on the basis of a compromise. The workmen should lose something for their abrupt behaviour, but the mill owners also are to blame for making the men feel that unless they "down tools" there was no chance of their employers or the public interesting themselves in their affairs. The refusal of the mill-owners to accede to a pre-eminently reasonable request coming from a gentleman of Sir Narayan's standing and character, creates a situation which no one will have more cause to regret in the long run than the mill-owners themselves. Since the above was written, the representatives of the mill operatives, consulted by the Bombay Labour Settlement Committee, have declared that the workmen did not wish to resume work until settlement of their demands is effected. In view of this, Sir Narayan Chandavarkar has requested the Mill-Owners' Association to reconsider their decision.

KESHAB CHANDRA SEN.

We are indebted to the Express of Bankipore for the report of a very interesting gathering held on the 8th instant at the Patna College Hall to celebrate the thirty-sixth anniversary of the great religious and social reformer, Keshab Chandra Sen. As the Hon. Sachchidananda Sinha observed in proposing to the chair His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of Bihar and Orissa, it is much to be desired that the cooperation between officials and non-officials of which one hears so much, should not be confined to the narrow field of politics, but should be extended to the wider fields of education and social life. Syed Hasan Imam was one of the speakers on the occasion, and he remarked that, in the year 1884 when Keshab Chandra Sen died, he was a student in the Patna Collegiate School and he remembered the remark then made that Keshab Chandra Sen by his preachings had stemmed the tide of Christianity in India; but when afterwards the speaker had gone to England and had come in contact with master minds of other religions, he realized that never a greater calumny was heaped upon the head of Keshab Chandra Sen. He was a cosmopolitan in religion; he did not hate Christianity. To him all people of whatever faith or religion were alike.

Sir Edward Gait's presidential remarks were scholarly, thoughtful and sympathetic. Speaking of Keshab's work as a religious reformer, His Honour said the doctrines of the unity of the God-head, of salvation through faith, and of passionate devotion to God, which were the main features of Keshab Chandra Sen's religious beliefs, had been preached by many previous Indian reformers, including Ramanuja, the South India Brahman, Kabir, the Punjab weaver, and Chaitanya the revivalist of Vaishnavism in Bengal, but they were propounded by Keshab with a vigour and eloquence which procured for them a far wider acceptance than they had ever previously attained. His Honour went on to observe: "The motto of Ram Mohan Roy the distinguished founder of the Brahmo Samaj, seems to have been "back to the Upanishads." On the other hand, the outstanding feature of Keshab Chandra Sen's creed was its eclecticism. He assimilated whatever seemed good to him, whether in Buddhism, Muhammadanism or Christianity. He was, I venture to think, especially indebted to Christianity, and his lecture on the "Great Mystery" as he calls it, "of the Trinity" shows the fuller appreciation of this fundamental doctrine of Christianity than any non-Christian, before or since his time, has ever given expression to."

The most interesting part of His Honour's speech was that which related to Keshab's influence in the direction of social reform. Sir Edward was inclined to think that the success which attended Keshab's efforts against the trammels of caste, the seclusion of woman, infant marriage and other social evils, was so great that it overshadowed his work as a religious reformer. He observed: "There are now very many men belonging to the higher castes in Bengal who, while benefiting by the social reforms introduced by Keshab Chandra Sen and sharing to a large measure his religious beliefs, still call themselves Hindus, and the 5504 persons who returned themselves as members of the Brahmo Samaj at the Census of 1911 constitute only a very small fraction of those who in their hearts are followers of Keshab Chandra Sen. This circumstance may be distressing to me as a former Census Commissioner who would like to plume himself on the accuracy of his statistics, but it is perhaps the best possible proof of the effectiveness of Keshab Chandra Sen's efforts as a social reformer."

SOCIAL RECONSTRUCTION.

(By the Hon. Mr. JUSTICE T. V. SESHAGIRI IYER.)

In the lecture delivered by me at Madras, I pointed out that the nation as a whole should be organised for social work. I am glad, therefore, that the veterans of the Social Reform movement have resolved to enlarge their sphere of work. True, the expansion has become possible only because of the energetic spade-work done by Social Reformers in the past and of the ideas which they have sown broadcast having taken root. Without in any way belittling the value of that work, I may respectfully say that their work in the main has hitherto been directed towards the advancement of classes, of communities and of units in those classes and communities. What the country now stands in need of is the bringing about of social regeneration among all classes and communities and among all creeds. The old outlook to a great extent was to develop the sense of innate justice in the educated male population and to direct their attention to their blundering treatment of their women and to the necessity of re-adjusting their own social conditions. It is true that, in recent years, endeavours for the elevation of the depressed classes have gained some attention. If I am not mistaken, the active propaganda in this direction was generally left to be undertaken by special organisations. What we want now is the preaching of social equality for all classes and creeds and educating the submerged classes to a sense of their civic rights and responsibilities. The outlook must be to build up a nation, self-respecting, and dominated by a sense of justice towards all persons without distinction of colour or creed.

The new political rights which have been conferred upon the Indian nation will not fructify unless the work of Social Reconstruction is taken in hand even before the new Legislative Assemblies sit in the various provincial centres. So long as the educated Indian makes no attempt to carry with him the vast majority of the population, sunk in ignorance and leading unhealthy and unwholesome lives, no permanent success on the political side is possible. We, who take pride as belonging to the higher castes, have been censured as having purposely kept down the lower classes. There is an intense feeling of soreness on this question. I must say that there is considerable justification for this bitterness. So long as this feeling of hatred and of distrust prevails, the body politic cannot move on. The first and the foremost step in the programme of reconstruction must be to equalise opportunities for all classes and communities. Places of worship, institutions intended to give education, partially at least at the expense of the Government, public buildings, reservoirs built at the expense of the Government which ought to be the common property of everyone, have been regarded as the special property of particular classes and communities. The slightest vestige of such a complaint must disappear at once.

There are at least three reasons why this matter should engage the early attention of the educated classes. The first is that the lower classes who are slowly awakening to the sense of their rights, are making capital of these inequalities and are suggesting that political rights should be withheld because of the proved incapacity of the higher classes to treat the lower classes justly and humanely. Secondly, there is no precept of Hindu religion which justifies any one community arrogating to itself the privilege of worship to the exclusion of others. Thirdly, in schools and colleges, the exclusion of the untouchables would perpetually bring home to the children of the higher classes the idea that they are superior to others. It would strike at the root of the sound education to implant in our children this unjustifiable belief. It would influence badly their after-career in a way which will not conduce to harmonious co-operation with the other communities. I am, therefore, of opinion that these matters should receive the earliest possible attention from social workers.

One thing must be made clear to the people amongst whom we have to work. They should understand that we are in no way interfering with religion in its best sense. These caste distinctions are no part of the true religion of this land. People have very vague ideas on this subject. A vigorous programme of work should be undertaken to educate the people regarding the true line of demarcation between religion and social life. If this work progresses, we will find less opposition in dealing with the amelioration of the lower classes.

I am also of opinion that the new Social organisation should invite members belonging to other religions to co-operate with them. No religion is more fitted than the Hindu religion to preach the gospel of Universal Brotherhood. In the Gita, Sri Krishna states that honour and obeisance done in all lands and by all nations are accepted by Him, although the name and description of the Deity may be different. We must live up to this teaching fully. In no other religion, so far as I am aware, is there such a bold and humane statement of the oneness of religion. If this precept is properly practised the work of social reconstruction will have for its councillors men of all castes and creeds; and the problem would take within its fold the depressed classes in every community inhabiting this land.

Upon this matter it may be said that I am indulging in visionary ideas, but I am sure that, whether it takes root to-day or not, this principle of universality of religions will gain its recognition some day. Shall we prepare the way? The root of this great principle is to be found in our teachings and in my opinion the time has come for its active propagation.

If you examine the religious philosophies of India, you will find that every religious faith found acceptance among the Hindus. The idol worshipper, the Charvaka and the Atheists, who deny the existence of God, the dualist and the Adwaiter, have all been accepted as belonging to the Hindu creed. I may at some future time develop this idea. I think I have said enough to induce earnest workers to move on the lines of religious co-operation. The Hindu is peculiarly fitted to preach the universality of religions. It ought to be one of the planks in the platform of social reconstruction, because, in this land which consists of so many classes and communities, the uplift of the lower classes will not be easy, if our vision is circumscribed by notions of religious exclusiveness. I have endeavoured in what I said to draw pointed attention to some of the most pressing problems of social reconstruction. I am sure that the movement which has for its sponsors Sir N. G. Chandavarkar, Mr. Devdhar, yourself and a number of other self-sacrificing men, will not suffer by including in the agenda these somewhat immature ideas of probably the newest recruit to the cause.

The Ramakrishna Students' Home, Madras - The Ramakrishna Mission, founded by Swami Vivekananda, is doing much quiet work of a most useful character in many parts of the country. One such institution is the Ramakrishna Students' Home, Madras, where poor and talented young men are maintained evidently free of cost. From the tables appended to the report for 1919, of which we have received a copy, it appears that the inmates came from all parts of the Presidency and were drawn from all castes. The Raja of Pithapuram in his remarks during a recent visit, expressed the hope that it will be found possible to admit students of the Depressed Classes. In this hope, we cordially concur. The institution was started fifteen years ago with 10 boarders. It has now 40, of whom 20 are college students. The average monthly cost per head has risen from Rs. 3-11-6 to Rs. 12-9-6. The Home is under the management and supervision of Swami Sharvanandaji of the Ramakrishna Mission. From the list of subscriptions, it is evident that the Ramakrishna Students' Home has won its way to the hearts of rich and poor, as an exceedingly useful institution carried on by the Mission.

THE BOMBAY COMMERCIAL CONGRESS.

In the issue of the Reformer of Dec. 21st last year, I wrote a letter on "What Bombay is in most need of" suggesting therein the starting of a commercial and financial weekly to safeguard the interests of Bombay trade and industry just as there are innumerable trade and industry weeklies and journals in England and U. S. A. Since then, I find that Bombay is going to hold a combined Commercial and Industrial Conference or Congress thus reviving Sir Fazulbhoj Carrimbhoj's Commercial Congress. This step of holding a Congress almost exclusively of merchants, financiers and industrialists is likely to yield far better results than the old method of holding the Industrial Conference as an appendage to the National Congress, when all and sundry took part in the discussion and very little of good or progress came thereby. May I just take the opportunity of suggesting through the columns of your valuable paper a few points for the consideration of the Congress?

(1) First, I shall reiterate the suggestion of a commercial weekly representing the Mill-Owners' Association and Indian Merchants' Chamber and Bureau.

(2) There is the long-standing and vexed question of Railway Nationalisation on which Bombay is so strong and almost unanimous and the Congress must declare in emphatic terms its views. We have had a serious set-back by the curious somersault of Sir D. E. Wacha. Also, there is the question of the increased Railway Fares and Freight. While benefiting nobody and while doing much harm to the Indian people, the increase of fares and freights has simply put more money into the pockets of the shareholders of our Railways. Curiously enough, and let all take note of the fact, that while the Railways all over the world in these years of war have paid less to the shareholders and are even losing, Indian Railways have paid more dividends than before the war. As a consequence of the war, the dividend in many cases in Indian Railways has increased, even to the extent of double its previous dividend. All due to the fiat of a benign and solicitous Government increasing the fares, thus causing hardship to the people and rejoicing to the stock-holders! Will not Railway Nationalization lead to the increase of the financial resources of the Government?

(3) Imperial Preference: While we owe a duty to Britain in giving preference, there is a danger of our being asked to sacrifice too much or it may be an eye-wash. Imperial Preference, while keeping out foreigners, England may monopolise Indian raw materials, thus depriving India of the benefit of rivalry and competition. This was laid stress on by Mr. Bomanji, though on a totally different occasion.

(4) The transfer of Industries to Ministers, the re-constitution of the Munitions Board into a new Department of Industries and the coming in of Sir Thomas Holland: To take the last first, it is well-known, all the Indians who have followed the career and the opinions of Sir Thomas Holland have not much confidence in him. There is not the slightest expectation that Sir T. Holland would look on Indian interests with more than step-motherly affection. His whole record, Headship of the Geological Department, Presidentship of the Industrial Commission, Chairmanship of the Munitions Board, his evidence before the Joint Committee, all show what a bad choice they have made to work a newly-created Department which would require an officer with real sympathy and enthusiasm for India. It is a mystery why Sir M. Visvesvaraya's talents are not availed of in the newly-born interest for Industries on the part of the Government of India. Besides, Sir T. Holland, in the brief period of Executive Council Membership, made quips at leaders like the Honble. Mr. Sarma, signed a reactionary despatch. And what a pity that in the period of midsummer madness of last summer, there were not Sir George Barnes, Sir William Meyer and Sir Claude Hill also, perhaps, to preach conciliation and moderation! The Congress will have to consider the results of the Munitions Board from the Indian point of view, the activities of the New Department and the powers of Ministers.

(5) The Japanese inundation, the place of Indians in the Import and Export trade and the position of Indian Merchants in Africa, Persian Gulf, China, Japan etc. Bombay must closely study the domination of Indian markets by foreigners, especially Japanese. It is regrettable Bombay Merchants don't extend their activities very much either in India or abroad.

(6) It is gratifying that in the present Industrial boom, more Cotton Mills, Woollen Mills, Fire Insurance Companies, Chemical works, etc., have been started. For the present, the number of Fire Insurance Companies is enough and they should start Branches. As for Cotton Mills, there is need for starting Mills on the lines suggested by Mr. Narottam Morarjee on his return from England. But it is surprising that one fails to find companies being started for manufacturing articles of such universal consumption, as Paper, Matches, Umbrellas, Porcelain and Pottery Glass, etc. Japanese silk cloth is driving out even the Swadeshi Hand-loom silk saris.

(7) Buying up the Indian securities held in London. The Government themselves can buy and sell them here, thus making a profit.

I hope these few points will attract the attention of the organisers of the Congress. In this connection, I want to make a small complaint. That is, the several Indian Chambers of Commerce are not as vigilant, tenacious, clamorous and expert-like as the European Chambers of Commerce. And Bombay should lead the way in the matter of providing the country with financial and commercial experts. What a pity that amongst our so-called political leaders, except three or four, all others are financial ignoramuses! That ought not to be. Bombay should create leaders who are good financial and commercial experts. There should be a bureau of commercial and industrial information.

K.

THE PROBLEM OF CHRISTIANITY IN INDIA, II.

(By MR. MANILAL PAREKH.)

That this is not an imaginary evil may be seen from other testimony also. Almost exactly a century back, Raja Ram Mohan Roy, just when the missionaries were beginning their operations in Bengal, expressed a fear that the higher classes of Hindus through increasing poverty, might become Christians. That was one of his greatest fears, and even the very starting of the Brahma Samaj had not a little to do with it. But in spite of all that, the country has become poorer and poorer during these hundred years, and Heaven alone knows how many of the middle and higher classes, orphans, widows, women, men and whole families, have taken their place among the lower and lowest classes and all this not for the sake of the glory of Christ but for money. But to this is added now another motive and perhaps it may prove more powerful in the end. The standard of education is very high among women in the Christian community, sometimes even higher than among men, and often there are no suitable husbands for them. On the other hand, in many communities among the Hindus, very often brides are lacking and at times it is very hard to get a wife at all. Therefore many young men are tempted to become Christians for this reason. I know Brahmans, Baniyas, Marathas etc., came even to me for this very purpose, and though I may ask them not to become Christians for such a purpose, they have no-where else to go and there are others among Christian Indians who are ready to welcome them. Thus money and women, Kanaka and Kamini, come to be associated with the holy name of Christ, the purest of prophets and sweetest of saints, as the main means of recruitment to the Christian Community from the middle and higher classes of the Hindus. And all those who came in this way together, with those very few who come purely for the sake of Christ and who are some of the noblest sons of India, must take their place among those who form the majority of the Christian fold. And this inevitable submerging of the higher among the lower to such an extent that if allowed to go on progressing in the same way, would be a serious menace to the whole of the Hindu Social fabric and might even subvert it altogether. It is this that I call a wilderness of individualism or bolshevism (minus militarism of course), and I ask in all seriousness if the caste-system with all its evils is not better if our choice lay between these two? The situation that has been thus created is the most critical one, and along with many other causes the present caste-policy of the missions is largely responsible for it. Apart from the fact that the Protestant Missions had no justification for such a policy whether from the point of view of principle or the practice of the missionaries themselves, who would not move a step out of their own colour-line, the very results show that it has been a most disastrous failure if the success of Christian Missions is to be judged not by their carrying on so many flourishing Depressed Classes Missions but by the promotion of the Kingdom of Heaven which is essentially Godliness and very little else. As the Roman Catholics have done long since, and as many of the Indian Religions such as Jainism, Vaishnavism etc., which aspired to be universal, have done ages since, I would separate the question of caste from the Religion of Christ which is essentially a way of salvation, and treat it on its own merits. It has been said again and again that it is the intolerance of the caste-system that has made this problem I am speaking of possible, but to say so is to add insult to injury of the gravest kind, for let me say with all the force at my command that it is the Caste-system that is the aggrieved party, and the Protestant Missions and Missionaries began their work with a wanton attack against the institutions and even the religions of this land without even caring to understand them, and they did all these against the very spirit of true Christianity. In spite of all this the Hindus who are the most tolerant of all people as every great people cannot but be, have revered Christ as their own, and many of their greatest leaders such as Ramkrishna Paramhansa, Keshub Chunder Sen, Vivekananda, Swami Ram Tirtha etc. have gone to the length of worshipping Him as an Incarnation of God. Christian Saints have been honoured like the Hindu Saints, and Christian literature has been read almost universally. Converts like Nilkanth Shastri, N. Tilak, Krishna Mohun Mukerji, Kali Charan Banerji, Brahma Bandhan Upadhyaya, Sadhu Sandersingh and a host of others have been respected and honoured by all who knew them, and this was done perhaps more by the orthodox section of the Hindus than the reformed one. It is not therefore the fault of the Caste-system if it became intolerant. The fault lies entirely with the Protestant proselytising Christianity.

Pratap Chunder Moozumdar in his famous biography of Keshub Chunder Sen describes those early days when Mission-work began as follows: "The Christian missionaries, the state officials, the youthful journalists, the unfledged reformers all united to raise a warcry against caste, and the entire population of our colleges and schools joined the crusade. It meant the introduction of the European luxuries of food and drink, the free and easy ways of the West, the abolition of social discipline, of the exactions of Brahmin priests, and in impecunious relatives. Excessive indulgence in the use of alcoholic liquors characterised the educated community." He says again after describing such corruption: "And what is worse, neither the missionaries nor their converts showed any inclination to protest against the tide of corrupt civilised self-indulgence which upset the character of the rising generation. One of the newspapers of the time characterised Dr. Duff's pupils, as well as other free-and-easy youngmen of the time as "cutting their way through ham and beef, and wading their way to liberalism through tumblers of beer." The prince of Hindu converts, the late Dr. K. M. Banerji, a little before he was baptised, got with his friends into serious difficulty through some of these habits. In the face of all this let no one say that the aggressive intolerance began with the caste-system.

CHARACTER AND MARRIAGE.

(By SRI PRAKASA, B. A., LL. B. (CANTAB.), BAR-AT-LAW.)

It is a matter of infinite pain to all well-wishers of the country that both individual and national character in India is not, at the present moment, high enough to enable us to push on with works for individual betterment and national uplift with any reasonable hope of success. Character, for the purposes of my thesis, I should describe not as denoting its ethical aspects of goodness, humility, honesty, charity, harmlessness, etc.—of this we have plenty, of a sort; not even denoting its physical aspect of sexual purity—of this too we have at least as much if not more than what any other people can lay claim to; but character, to me, means the earnestness, the steadfastness in our respective works, the grim determination to carry our tasks through to a definite conclusion; the passion that attaches us to our work irrespective of what people say or are supposed to say or do. We are, as a rule, deterred in our undertakings by the first hostile breath; we swerve from our purpose at the first ridicule or discouragement; we desist at the approach of the first failure. That is the reason why, I maintain, our public and private institutions do not prosper. We lack initiative; and, even more than that, we lack courage.

Now it is not enough to say that it is so. But few will deny it. The actual conditions of our society are evidence of its truth. The problem before us is to propose ways and means that may improve our tone and give some pertinacity to our nature. Thinking over all these and other allied problems, my deliberate conclusion is that the fault lies with our home life; and home being the pivot on which the whole of the social, economic and political life of a nation moves, we must begin by reforming the root itself. Hence is the resultant of the institution of marriage; and I intend to dwell, in the course of this article, on the subject of marriage; for a reform—and that too of a drastic nature—is absolutely essential for the improvement of our character—as I understand and have tried to explain the word—and thereby ensure the general well-being of the people and the prosperity of all our private and public undertakings.

The main aspects of the Indian marriage may be summed up as follows: (1) The choice of the parties rests with the parents and not with themselves; (2) The marriage takes place at a fairly early age; (3) The newly married pair comes to the parents' house and does not set up its own home. These three customs are interwoven. The choice can rest with the parents only when there is early marriage. A grown-up man or woman would not, as a rule, allow others to choose for him or her. And when there is early marriage i. e., before the husband can make his own living and the wife can look after herself and her separate establishment, they must come under the roof of their elders; they cannot set up a fresh home for themselves. So either all these customs in connection with our marriages must remain or all must go. We cannot tinker here. We cannot find a via media without doing violence to human nature and giving rise to endless difficulties and reactions. And I submit that all these customs must go; the parties must choose themselves; they must be sufficiently advanced in years to be able to look after themselves and after marriage they must set up their own households. I am not blind to the immense possibilities of evil; I am fully sensible of the dangers in this course; I know that this is not a counsel of perfection, that it does not necessarily ensure more happiness than exists at the present time. Granting all this, I advocate the change and that for a single reason.

I feel assured that the change will bring about a change in the character of the race; make it more self-reliant and more fit for adventures, more capable of determination; more self-willed and pertinacious, if you will; more free and courageous. The change, I honestly feel, will give us a number of qualifications that we lack; and though it may give rise to certain evils, I believe that the good to the individual and the race that will follow, will counterbalance the evil greatly and effectively.

Kipling has a good story in which an English officer of a regiment, Major or Colonel, confesses that he has not the same daring and recklessness after marriage and children that he had before. In this statement we had the greatest condemnation of early marriage. If a military officer who is no novice, who had been in the din and roar of battle many a time, could suddenly feel his heart failing after he had passed from bachelorhood to the married state, we can easily imagine how soul-tamping and heart-barrowing efforts marriage would have on one who, being young, has probably never seen any danger, and who has never been in a situation where courage and pertinacity were required, and who finds himself on the very threshold of life, already wedded and thus already a slave and, already flying from the very first dangers that face him. All his potential courage has been sapped. His wife, and probably a child too, are there swimming in his mental horizon beckoning him to take care of himself and fly at the first breath of danger. This is the first great cause why our people cannot have any high ambitions, cannot aspire to great and noble ends, and have eternally to be satisfied with whatever little they get because that little at least helps to maintain the family at home and most often other relatives as well—near and distant.

Then there is the question of self-choice or parental choice as to whom to marry. Marriage has been regarded as one of the great adventures of life but in India, unfortunately, it is no adventure at all. One gets married as easily—at least as far as he or she is personally concerned—as one may take a cup of tea. All romance, all search, all adventure, all the small and great things that give light and colour to a wedding—all are non est, because the parents search out the mates for their children. They are obtained, so to say, ready made. Now the search for a mate is natural to all sentient creation. If a mate were not given to us, we shall search for her or him ourselves. We must have a mate. A major portion, if not absolutely the whole, of animate creation searches and yearns for mates and sacrifices much to obtain the desired partner. This adventure is denied to us. On other adventures we may or may not embark, but on this we were bound to if others did not come to fill the gap. Embarking on one adventure may make us desirous and eager of embarking on others. When we are denied the privilege of the adventure that we would certainly have undertaken, we are denied, side by side, the possibility of any desire or eagerness for further adventures. Thus most of us make no adventures in life at all. We are afraid of the small-st. We have thus become almost incapable of great and stirring deeds.

Then I may briefly deal with the question of a separate home for each married pair. This is very important. The best of homes, the best of parents cannot be the same as one's own home, however bad, poor or ill-organised. Separate housing teaches self-reliance; it brings us in daily contact with a great number of difficulties and situations which every home has to face. Then it would enable the flowering out of individuality. This is greatly dwarfed and stunted because of the hesitation that the boldest of young men feel before elders in whose home he is, when desirous of doing certain things. In Indian homes, the youngsters, however old, have a very unfortunate time. They find it difficult to have any privacy for themselves; they cannot even receive and entertain their friends as they like, let alone the notions of embarking on personal ambitions or doing courageous deeds. Thus all personal desires and ambitions have to be ruthlessly smothered. And this goes on from generation to generation. Can this be for the well-being of the race?

All these considerations lead me to the inevitable conclusion that drastic changes in our home-life are necessary if the soul of the race—and not only its meagre and emaciated body—are to be preserved; if we have something original to contribute to human civilisation; if we desire that the individuality of the race should be maintained and that our young persons should flower out into decent and dignified specimens of manhood and womanhood. We must now seriously take in hand our institution of marriage and, with courage, undo the great wrong we are inflicting on our future—our moral and material future.

I know there would be evils. We cannot have all good. All institutions have their advantages and disadvantages, their good and evil sides. I know for a fact that at English Universities—and, no doubt, at other European Universities as well—there is a great deal of sexual vice and immorality. A pious man would say, let us have early marriage to eradicate this vice. First of all, marriage is no absolute safe-guard against sex-immorality. Still it is, to a certain extent. But ought we, because of the possible danger of having a few—or even many—immoral men, to ruin our youth in its flowering by early marriage, by hardening its shoulders so soon. These sexually immoral young men of European Universities, are able, later on, to do great things. It is not sexual immorality that is so morally and physically weakening as the soul-damping, ever-present fact that there is a family for whose sake one's own life must not be risked in 'fool-hardy' enterprises, in ambitious, daring or reckless undertaking.

It is, I feel, not the sex-relationship that is so harmful as the bondage of marriage even without, it may be, the sexual relationship. I should not be understood as preaching immorality. I stand for the uttermost purity of sex-life. I also stand for the utmost fidelity of wedded love. But if I were given the option—in the present conditions of India—between a sexually immoral hero and a sexually pure idiot-medicore, I would unhesitatingly prefer the former. Moreover I am not so sure that a great deal of sexual immorality—despite early marriages—does not exist in our educational institutions. We seem to be lost both ways.

Be that as it may, I am honestly convinced that to raise the general level of our character, to teach us courage, dignity, fearlessness, manliness, to fit us for great undertakings and ambitious enterprises, to nerve us to face the buffets of the world—it is essential that early marriages must go. As a first step for the building up of our character, for the teaching to us of the love of adventure as a promise for future further and different adventures, we must allow our young men and young women to find out their own spouses. And for the recovery of our lost individuality, for the affording of opportunities to learn self-reverence, 'self-knowledge, self-reverence and self-control', we must allow our young wedded pairs to make their own nests, to work out their own ideals and to yearn for and realise their own hopes in their own way; in short to find their own self-expression in the form and manner that appeal to them first and foremost.

ADVERTISEMENT

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

Rates of inland subscription inclusive of postages
 In advance. In arrears.
 For annum..... Rs. 6—0—0. Rs. 6—0—0
 Foreign subscription inclusive of Postage, twelve shillings (Rs. 6).
 Single copies of the current year can be had at 4 annas each and any back copies at 6 annas each.

The following two books on trade and industries, by J. L. Daveji, M. A., F. P., are indispensable to every English-knowing Indian gentleman:—

(1) Vyapar Mitra.—It consists of 4 parts containing more than 325 original recipes for making marketable articles for trade, such as Soap, Varnish, Polish, Ink, Sea-lug Wax, Rubber Toys, Imitation Gold, Silver, Pearl, Ruby, Coral, etc., Cigarettes, Matches, Carbon Paper, Pocket Press, Buttons, Gilding Powder, Hair Killer, Hair Oils, Soaps, Syrups, Essences, Medicines, etc. etc. Price Re. 1, V. P. As 3.

The book "First Lessons in Photography" will be given free to every purchaser of Vyapar Mitra.

(2) Trade Secrets or How to become healthy and wealthy.—This book consists of 10 parts of chapters, each dealing with a series of articles on trade and industries, such as perfumery, dairy farming, agriculture, manures etc. It also deals with cuts and human diseases with suitable prescriptions for all of them. Besides, a list of several hundreds of other useful informations and money-making secret formulae and processes have greatly increased the usefulness of the book. Reduced price Re. 1, V. P. As 2.

As the account of the scarcity of paper, the next edition of these books is not expected soon, hence to avoid disappointment send for them to day.

Address:—MANAGER, THE WALKER PRESS, MAINPURI U. P.

SELF GOVERNMENT IN ANCIENT INDIA

BY M. V. GOPAL RAO:

"India is no stranger to Self-rule"
 "Kings elected by the people."
 "Kings deposed for mis-rule."
 "King to exercise executive functions only."
 "Taxation with the consent of the people."
 "Doctrine of the sovereignty of the people recognised."
 "Divine right no personal attribute to kings."
 MODERN REVIEW:—"This neatly printed pamphlet of 24 pages makes an admirable attempt to show that Self-rule was not a strange thing in India in olden times."
 Price As. 4 Four annas only. V. P. Charges extra.

Apply to:—
 ANDHRA GRANDHA RATNAGARAM,
 4-1-20. Pithapuram, (Godavari Dt.)

"PEEPS INTO THE FUTURE"

Is everybody's everyday book. The codified experience of generations of Astrologers and Indian Yogis—an astrologer in moments of anxiety & suspense—answers short and succinctly clear on the thousand and one points of doubt and uncertainty. Everybody may consult the book—no date of birth or horoscope necessary. Must be in every pocket for it suits all. Price one rupee only. Foreign two shillings. Apply to the Proprietor.

TATA MYSTIC ASTRAL STUDIO
 24-8-19. Chodavaram, Vizagapatam District.

"MESMERISM AND HYPNOTISM."

Complete Course Rs. 1-8 only. Contents. 1. Instructions. 2. Breathing Exercise or Yoga Practice. 3. Exercises to develop this will and memory. 4. Various Hypnotic processes. 5. To wake up a subject. 6. Clairvoyance. 7. Telepathy. 8. Levitation. 9. Wonderful methods of Hindu Healing. 10. Various diseases. 11. Hindu Catelepsy or Burial alive. 12. The secret method of telling future events most wonderfully by the Indian Yogees without horoscope or birth time. Mr. Baikantha Bhowmli, Head Master writes from Senhatiz on 22-10-19:—I have become successful hypnotist with the help of your course. The methods are far easier and simpler than in any other courses. Mr. B. Sitaramurty, B.A., B.L., Government pleader writes: Your book really reveals the wonderful hidden powers of man. The methods are of the easiest kind and the book in short is the best of its kind in the field.

THE EASTERN HYPNOTIC HOME,
 P. O. Chodavaram, (Vizagapatam, Dt.)

"COMMERCE AND INDUSTRIES."

An Interesting Monthly Journal of Indian Material Progress.

Annual Subscription Rs. 10-0 and Single Copy Re. 1 Post Free.

A Specially valuable advertising Medium.

Wanted Agents throughout India.

Address:—P. Box. No. 353, and 5 Mount Road Madras S. C. 12-10-19

ON DUTY I

THE YOUNG COLLEGIATE IS OUT.

An educational Monthly for Young and Old.

Editor:—Mr. B. S. NIMBKAR.

The "If's of it:—

1. If you are a Student, it will help you to the Examination Hall because your professors contribute to it.
2. If you are an active worker, it will show some field for you to solve problems, because it contains articles of your cadets.
3. If you are an artist, it is illustrated for you.
4. If you are a Social reformer, it will discuss all problems of Social reform and will give you views of male and female reformers.

Whatever you are, the Monthly gives you whatever you want. Annual Subscription Rs. 3. Single Copy Annas 8.

Wanted Agents throughout India.

For advertisement rates & other particulars apply to—
 S. A. DANGE,
 Manager.

Young Collegiate Office,
 Sandhurst Road, Bombay No. 4.
 14-12-19.

THE TATA INDUSTRIAL BANK, LD.

HEAD OFFICE, BOMBAY.
BRANCHES—CALCUTTA and HYDERABAD (Deccan)
CANNING and LUCKNOW.

Sub-Branches.—

Bombay—Share Bazaar, Shroff Bazaar.
Calcutta—Barr Bazaar.

London Agents. LLOYDS BANK LIMITED.
NEW YORK AGENTS: THE GUARANTY
TRUST COY. OF NEW YORK.

AUTHORISED CAPITAL... Rs. 12,00,00,000.
SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL... .. 7,56,00,225.
PAID UP CAPITAL... .. 1,50,99,225.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Sir D. J. Tata, Kt., Chairman.
Sir Sassoon David, Bart.
Sir R. N. Mookerjee, K. O. I. E.
Sir Francis Stewart, Kt.
Sir Henry Procter, Kt.
R. D. Tata, Esq.
F. E. Dinshaw, Esq.
F. O. Rimington, Esq.
Narottam Morarjee, Esq.
Hajee Gulam Mahomed Ajam, Esq.
The Hon'ble Mr. Parshottamdas Thakordas, C. I. E.
A. J. Billimoria, Esq.

Secretary, R. H. Parker.

Current Accounts opened and interest allowed on daily credit balances from Rs. 500/- to Rs. 1,00,000/- at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum. If the balance to the credit of any account does not fall below Rs. 25,000/- at any time between 1st January and 30th June, interest will be allowed during that period at 2½ % per annum. No interest is allowed unless the sum accrued amounts to Rs. 8/- Half-yearly.

Fixed Deposits. Interest allowed on Deposits fixed for one or two years and for shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank. Interest allowed on Savings Bank Accounts at 4 per cent per annum. Rules may be obtained on application.

Loans and Cash Credits are granted on approved securities.

Purchases and sales of Securities and shares effected.

Bills of Exchange purchased and collected and every description of Banking and exchange business undertaken.

14-4-18. L. D. L. BUCKLEY, General Manager.

THE YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK, LIMITED.

(Registered in Japan.)
Established 1880.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 48,000,000.

Paid up Capital.....Yen. 42,000,000.

Reserve Fund.....Yen. 23,100,000.

Head Office:—Yokohama.

Branches and Agencies at Bombay, Buenos Aires, Calcutta, Changchun, Chi-Nan, Dairen, Fengtien, Hankow, Harbin, Hongkong, Honolulu, Karyuan, Kobe, London, Los Angeles, Lyons, Manila, Nagasaki, Newchwang, New York, Osaka, Peking, Rangoon, San Francisco, Seattle, Shanghai, Shimoda, Singapore, Soerabaya, Sydney, Tientsin, Tokio, Tsingtao.

Current Deposit Accounts are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at the rate of 2 per cent per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 100,000, provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of banking and exchange business transacted.

N. IGARASHI,

Post Box No. 207, Hornby Road, Bombay.

I. NISHIMAKI,

Manager, Calcutta.

1-12-17,

Post Box No. 406, Clive street, Calcutta

THE BANK OF BARODA, LD.

Under the Patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja Gaekwar.
Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897

HEAD OFFICE BARODA.

Branches—Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, and Surat

Capital Subscribed.....Rs. 60,00,000.

Capital Paid up .. 20,00,000.

Reserve Fund .. 12,50,000.

DIRECTORS :

The Hon'ble Mr. Lalubhai Somaldas, C. I. E., Chairman
Sir Vithaldas Damodar Thackersey, Kt.
Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti Negar Sheth Baroda.

Sheth Manilal Revadas, Vadnagar.

Rao Bahadur Gunajiroo R. Nimbalker, Sur Subba, Baroda State.

Bhaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., Advocate, High Court Bombay.

M. H. Kantavalla, Esq., Agent, Maharaja Mill Co. Ltd. Baroda.

R. R. Shirgaokar, Naib Subba, Baroda State.

A. N. Datar, Accountant General, Baroda State.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balances from Rs. 500 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest which does not come to Rs. 8 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application. C. E. BANGLE.—General Manager. 15-4-12.

THE CENTRAL BANK OF INDIA, LTD

Subscribed Capital... .. Rs. 50,00,000

Paid Up Capital 42,52,600

Reserved liability of

Shareholders 25,00,000

Reserve Fund 6,00,000

Head Office:—Alicia Building, Bombay.

Local Branches:—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar, (3) Share Bazar.

Branches:—Amritsar, Calcutta, Delhi, Jharra, Karachi.

London Agents:—London Joint City and Midland Bank, Ltd.

Current Accounts :—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June
2½ % allowed on Daily Balances from July to December.

12 months Deposits received at 5 % per annum.

Long and Short period Deposits received at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking Business transacted.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA,

Manager.

25-2-17

THE BANK OF TAIWAN, LTD.

Incorporated by Special Charter of the Imperial Japanese Government, 1899.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 60,000,000
Paid-up CapitalYen. 37,500,000
Reserve FundYen. 7,030,000

Head Office:—Taipeh, Formosa.

BRANCHES:—

LONDON	SHANGHAI	TOKIO
NEW YORK	HONGKONG	OSAKA
AMOY	SINGAPORE	KOBE
CANTON	SOERABAJA	YOKOHAMA
FOOCHOW	SEMARANG	AKO
HANKOW	MAKUNG	GIRAN
KIUKIANG	BATAVIA	KAGI
SWATOW	PINAN	KARENKO
TAINAN	SHINCHIKU	KEELUNG
TAKOW	TAIOHU	TAMSUI

The Bank has also a large number of Correspondents at Home and Abroad.

Current Deposit Accounts:—are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at 2 per cent. per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 1,00,000 provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of Banking and Exchange business transacted.

K. TAKEMURA;
Manager

9-12-17. 56, Esplanade Road, Fort, BOMBAY

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

Established 7th September 1906.

Incorporated under the Indian Companies' Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE:

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.

Capital Subscribed Rs. 2,00,00,000
Capital Called up ,, 99,00,000
Reserve Fund ,, 64,00,000

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½% p. a. throughout the year. On sums exceeding Rs. 1,00,000 interest is allowed by special arrangement. No interest will be allowed which does not amount to Rs. 8 per half year.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short periods @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

"Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application".

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, & CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms, to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituent the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stocks at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

H. P. STRINGFELLOW,

10-1-11.

Manager.

A Lady's Best Ornament is a Glorious Head of Hair.

A profusion of rich, soft silky, lustrous, wavy hair—where's the woman who would not like that?

There's only one oil that makes such hair and it's the far-famed

KAMINIA OIL
(Regd.)

Invaluable for ladies, and just as much for Brain-Workers and Students.

Heated head cooled, aching disappears and dandruff becomes a thing of the past. Added to all these it possesses a beautiful fragrant smell.

For superiority, awarded a Gold Medal at the Mysore Exhibition, and in great demand all over the country.

If you have not yet used KAMINIA OIL, you

have missed a fine delight and a real boon; use it now, if only once; and like many people you will prefer to use also always

Price per bottle, Re. 1. V. P. Charges 6 annas extra
Price for 3 bottles Re. 2-10. V. P. charges 14 annas extra

Write now, Do not delay.

Sole Agents:—

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,
(5-8-16) No. 155, Jamma Masjid Market, BOMBAY.

Now-a-Days.

All things have advanced in price. Even the vegetable ingredients used in our Atank Nigrah Pills have advanced in price.

Even the laborers demand heavy wages being dearer. Even the users have increased yet the Atank Nigrah Pills for Toning up the system are sold at before war price i. e. at a Rupee.

Vaidya Shastri

Manishanker Govindji,

Atank Nigrah Pharmacy,

Head Office:—Jamnagar—Kathiawar.

Branch:—Kalbadevi Road, Bombay.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours. Publish Fine Art Pictures, & c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.
1-12-10. HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS-

ROYAL TONIC PILLS

powerful Nutritious and Strength Restorer. Price Re. 1-4 per tin of 30 Pills.

PREPARED BY—GOVINDJEE DAMODER & Co.,

Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Commission Agents.
1-12-10. No. 3 Sutar Chawl Market, BOMBAY.

Timely advice to the Wealthy

Costly but certain remedies are in the long run cheaper than cheap and uncertain ones.

KANDARPA SANJIVINI PILLS AND OIL

are the safest and surest remedies for indigestion, constipation, loss of appetite, memory, mental, physical and nervous debility and all sorts of urinary disorders, improve impoverished blood.

Price per tin of 40 Pills Rs. 5 & per tola of Oil Rs. 10.

Both Purchased at a time Rs. 11/4.-

Medical Advice and a Medical Book containing 128 pages sent Gratis and Post Free.

RAJ VAIDYA NARAYANJI KESHAVJI

Head Office :- Jamnagar, Kathiawar, (India.)

Branch :- No. 187, Kalbadevi Road,
24-8-1919. BOMBAY.

Empire Hindu Hotel

Opposite Victoria Terminus
Bombay.

(Central Situation)
Strictly Vegetarian
Charges Moderate

Fitted with
Electric Lift, Fans and Lights.

TELEGRAMS: } TELEPHONE

"FOOD," BOMBAY.

2789.

22-8-19.

Saffron? Saffron?? Saffron?? ?
If you wish to buy genuinely pure and best Saffron it is
SUN

BRAND:

SAFFRON

ONLY

It has been largely used by Jain Temples, Maharajas, Durbars, Hakims and Vaidyas all over the country for the last 75 year and is well known for its purity and genuineness.

S. NARAEN & Co.,

17-2-18

21, Humnum Street, Fort-Bombay.

REVOLUTION IN SHORTHAND.

There are systems and systems, but that one is the most "practical" which can be written with a pen or pencil, straight away on unruled paper, without thickening, positions, grammalogues, multitudes of rules and exceptions, arbitrary word-signs and contractions, long lists of phrases, and various other impediments to speed. The New "ROYAL-SPEED" Course of 12 Lessons, incorporated by Expert who introduced the Original Dnjoyan Joined-Vowel Scheme in the East, has all the advantages of a modern, down-to-date system, and is acquired by Boys and Girls of 12, in a fraction of time. Quickest Route and Highest Efficiency are Guaranteed. Personal or Postal Tuition. Prospective pupils must investigate, as interested parties seem to recommend the 'only system known to them.

NATIONAL BUSINESS COLLEGE,

1st Floor, Luxmi Bldg., Lamington Road, Bombay.

"EVERYTHING FOR EVERYBODY"

National Standard Portable Typewriter No. 3 (10 lbs.) Rs. 190
Oliver No. 5 (American Rebuilt) S.S. & Tab. Rs. 175; No. 7 " 200
Empire No. 1 (Do.) in good working order " 145
Multikopy Typewriter Carbons, per box of 100 sheets " 8
Webster Brand " Ribbons for all machines, Doz. " 21
Typewriter Oil (best 1 oz. bot.) or Eberhard Erasers, Doz. " 6
Safety Razor, Rivala Gillette, with 6 Gillette Blades (best) " 3
Envelope Making Machine (to make 30,000 per day), New " 35
Conklio's Self-filling Fountain Pen (non-leakable) Gold Nib " 9

GENERAL CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE,

20-4-19.

Post box No. 424, Bombay.

HYPNOTISM

PERSONAL MAGNETISM,
WILL POWER,
NERVE FORCE—

Call what you will—

Is the intangible power that controls human destiny. It is the key to all business and social success. This power is no special gift of any one. It is latent in every one. We help you how to display it. By our system, you can learn in a few days at your own home and not only achieve success yourself, but you can influence the mind, health and actions of others to a remarkable degree.

Write immediately for our free booklet—The Pride of India.

THE LATENT LIGHT CULTURE,
TINNEVELLY, S. INDIA.

Batlivala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 1 each bottle of 100.
Batlivala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 2 each bottle of 100.
Batlivala's Ague Mixture of Fever, Malaria, Influenza etc.
Batlivala's Ague Pills for Malaria, Fever, Influenza etc.
Batlivala's Tonic pills for pale people & nervous breaks down.
Batlivala's Tooth Powder of Preserving Teeth
Batlivala's Ringworm ointment for Ringworm Dhobi Itch etc.

May be had from all dealers in medicines or from
Dr. H. L. Batlivala Sons & Co., Ltd.
No. 12, Worli, 18, Bombay.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESS:—"Doctor Batlivala Dadar"

THE BOMBAY CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK.

HEAD OFFICE Apollo Street, St., Bombay.

DIRECTORS:—The Hon. Sir Farnibhoy Currimbhoy (Chairman), Sir Vibhadas D. Thackersey, the Hon. Mr. Lalubhai Semaldas, Sir Stanley Reed, the Hon. Mr. C. V. Mehta, the Chief of Iobalkaranji, G. K. Devadhar, Esq., the Hon. Sir P. D. Pattani, the Raja Sahab of Malegaon.
Share Capital (full paid) Rs. 7,00,000

1 Deposits fixed for one year and shorter or longer periods are accepted. Rates and other particulars may be ascertained from the manager signed.

2 The Bank finances only registered Co-operative Societies in the Bombay Presidency on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency.

3 Accounts are audited half-yearly by a special Government Auditor, and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the "Bombay Government Gazettee."

20-5-17.

VAIKUNTH L. MEHTA, Manager,

Clean
Wholesome
Intelligent
Entertainment

IS A GREAT STEP

IN

SOCIAL REFORM.

When deciding on a

*PLACE OF AMUSEMENT TWO
ESTABLISHMENTS*

Should at once leap to the mind.

THE EXCELSIOR

BOMBAY'S PREMIER MODERN THEATRE

AND

THE EMPIRE

BOMBAY'S MOST PALATIAL

PICTURE THEATRE

Where Film Plays of Distinction are shown

Every Week.

A

Great Cinema Masterpiece

is shown,

Both theatres are near the Bori Bunder

and are run by the

EXCELSIOR SYNDICATE.

The Pioneer of Bombay's

AMUSEMENT WORLD.

FURUKAWA & CO.

TOKIO

The Largest Manufacturers
in the East

OF

ELECTRIC BARE COPPER CONDUCTORS,

ELECTRIC UNDERGROUND CABLES,

ELECTRIC INSULATED WIRES,

ELECTRIC ACCESSORIES,

INGOTS, RODS, WIRES,

SHEETS, TUBES,

Etc., Etc.,

All our wires are made in accordance with the standard of the British Cable Makers' Association and are tested and approved by leading firms in India.

SOLE AGENTS IN INDIA AND BURMA.

TATA, SONS & CO.,

BOMBAY & CALCUTTA.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS Ltd.

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd
Narsari Building, Fort, BOMBAY.

Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

11-8-17.

When YOUR EYES

need to be examined by QUALIFIED OCULISTS and by SCIENTIFIC REFRACTIONISTS of 26 year experience, FREE OF CHARGE, you cannot do better than GO TO

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR & CO.

The leading firm of Oculists, Eyesight Specialists, Manufacturing Opticians and suppliers of the patented

"KRYPTOK"

(Invisible one-piece bifocal lens.)

Toric, and all kinds of lenses.—Cylindrical, Spherical, cylindrical, Prismatic, &c., from pebbles as well as from best quality crown glass.

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR

Eyesight Specialist.

With 26 Years' Practical Experience.

Holds Exceptional Testimonials from H. H. The Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, the Hon'ble Sir Lawrence Jenkins the Hon. Mr. Justice Batty, Mrs. Batty, the Hon. Sir N. S. Chundavarkar, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beaman, the Hon'ble Sir S. L. Batchelor, the Hon'ble Sir John Heaton Mr. H. G. Gell, M. V. O., Col. R. H. Forman, B. A. M. C., P. M. O. So. Brigade, Lieut. Col. G. H. Bull, M. D., I. M. S., Lieut-Colonel Peters M. B., I. M. S., and other high personages.

(7) 379, HORNBY ROW,

Opposite the Government Telegraph Office,
Fort, BOMBAY.

62-11-10.

ATTENDING ASSUREES ARE INVITED TO COMPARE THE RATES AND CONDITIONS OF

The Empire of India Life Assurance Company, Limited.

WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.

Head Office 11 Elphinstone Circle, BOMBAY.

SEE REPORT AND OPINIONS OF THE PRESS AS TO THE REMARKABLE PROGRESS MADE BY THE COMPANY.

ENDOWMENT NON-FORFEITABLE POLICY FOR RS. 3,000.

PAYABLE AT AGE 60 OR AT DEATH, IF PREVIOUS, WITH PROFIT.

If, at any time, the assured under this plan should desire to cease paying any more premiums, he can obtain a paid-up Policy for such a proportion of the original sum assured as the number of premiums paid bears to the number agreed upon. Thus a gentleman who had assured at age 30 for a Policy of Rs. 3,000 payable at age 60 or at Death, if previous, after 3 year payments, would be entitled to a Free paid-up Policy for Rs. 500 free of future payments.

MONTHLY PREMIUM.

AT AGE 20, Rs. 6-9-0.

AT AGE 25, RS. 7-8-0.

AT AGE 30, RS. 8-14-0.

AT AGE 35, Rs. 10-18-0.

AT AGE 40, Rs. 13-12-0.

AT AGE 45, Rs. 18-10-0

SOME OF THE DISTINCTIVE FEATURES.

- * Funds invested in Government Securities and in accordance with the Indian Trusts Act
- Policy holders can appoint their own Directors.
- 90 per cent. of Profits to Participating Policy holders.
- Lapsed policies revived without Medical Certificate.
- Liberal Surrender Values 40 per cent. of the Tabular premium paid.
- Immediate payment of Claims.
- Medical fees and stamps on Policies are payable by the Company.
- The sum assured is PAYABLE IN FULL should death occur soon immediately after payment of the first premium.

GUARANTEED INSURANCE.—This Company issues Guaranteed Policies in situations of trust and responsibility. It is specially authorized to guarantee the employees of the Post Office.

Proposal Forms and full Particulars may be obtained from any local Agent in India or from ALLUM, BHARUCHA & CO. Managers.

22-9-10.

IN INDIA

EVERY ONE KNOWS.

whom it does concern that we are foremost in supplying the best

COSSI SILK SUIT PIECES

suitable for the season. These pieces are strong, fancy and durable, and have been specially manufactured for India's Market. Each piece guaranteed for One Suit Complete.

Price Rs. 10 per piece.

Write to—THE BHARGAVA COMMERCIAL SOCIETY.

2-18.

Benares City.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER. Contract Rates for Advertisements.

Number of Insertions.	1		2		3		4
	Inch.	Pages	Inches.	Pages	Columns.	Pages	Columns.	Pages
15	11 0	16 0	20 0	30 0	40 0	50 0	60 0	87 0
25	16 0	25 0	30 0	50 0	67 0	87 0	155 0	155 0
52	25 0	38 0	50 0	87 0	155 0	300 0	300 0	300 0

Casual advertisements at Rs. 4 per line for the 1st insertion and Rs. 3 per line of succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-year or yearly in advance.

WONDERFUL TONIC AND

MOUTH-REFRESHER

JINTAN.

This is a safe and efficient remedy in all kinds of diseases or disturbances of the digestive organs. It is composed entirely of VEGETABLE INGREDIENTS made from the prescription of the following eminent medical men viz—
NORUHIRO MIWA, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy,
ZENJIRO INOUE, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy
 and testified as to its efficacy by
Baron J. MATSUMOTO, M. D., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Army.
T. MITAMURA, Esq., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Navy.

As a digestive it is unequalled and will not disturb the functions of the most delicate stomach. Its antiseptic properties render it very efficacious in warding off disease and at the same time it imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath of the user.

By virtue of its aroma, it effectually makes the odour of Tobacco and Alcoholic Spirits.

It acts beneficially on the vocal cords and has found much favour with public speakers, actors, singers and those whose vocation necessitates a severe strain on the throat.

GOOD FOR

Billiousness, Headache, Vertigo, Nausea, Indigestion, Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, etc., etc.

To maintain general health 2 to 3 pills may be taken occasionally, well masticated.

Price—Small Packet Rs. 0-1-0. Middle Packet, with Tin case., Rs. 0-4-0. Large Pocket with fancy case., Rs. 1-0-0

Prepared by Messrs. MORISHITA Co., OSAKA, JAPAN.

Sole Agents: Jintan Agency (G. R. Chaubal), Juma Masjid. BOMBAY.

FOR PAINS
 AND ACHES
 SPRAINS ETC.
 USE:—

AMRUTANJAN.

The magical pain balm extant. Cures all aches & pains
 Costs 8 As. Sold everywhere.

By Appointment to H. E. the Governor
 Sir George Sydenham Clarke of
 Bombay.

HARIDAS VALJI,

(KING OF INDIAN CONFECTIONERS),

Highest Confectioner, Caterer and Grand
 Military Contractor.

Proprietor—RATINATH,
 Chitra Bazar & Grant Road,

20-4-19.

BOMBAY.

DENTISTRY.

Extractions Painless;
 Terms Very Moderate;
 Gold Crown, Bar and
 Bridge Work a Speciality
 (teeth without plate);
 Latest Successful Treatment
 for Pyorrhoea (pus in gums).
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

Hours: 8-1-30 & 5-7-30; Daily.
 (Sundays—From 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.)

ADROOS BUILDING,
 NEW CHARJI ROAD,
 GIDDEON, BOMBAY. } 1-4-19.

K. R. AHAT,
 Surgeon Dentist.

THE INDIAN * SOCIAL * REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY MORNING.

Office—EMPIRE BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD, FORT.

Editor:—K. NATARAJAN.

Vol. XXX. BOMBAY—SUNDAY, JANUARY 23, 1920. No. 21.

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard."
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

Satyagraha.	Mr. Justice Ranade's Life.
Swami Vivekananda's Anniv- ersary.	Mission.
The Bolshevik Peril.	The Problem of Christia- nity in India, III.
The Bombay Mills Strike.	The Depressed Classes
The Bombay Labour Settle- ment Committee.	Mission, Mangalore.
The Montagu Memorial Movement.	Ladies' Conference at Amritsar.
A Plea for Disunity.	Indian Olympic Association.
A Mysore View.	An Appeal on Behalf of the Namasudras.
Lord Sinha in Bombay.	Racialism at Amritsar.

NOTES.

Satyagraha. The significance and propriety of Satyagraha have been once more brought into controversy by the examination of Mr. Gandhi by Lord Hunter's Committee at Ahmedabad. The difficulty which some people evidently feel in regard to them is due to the fact that what Mr. Gandhi understands by Satyagraha is not merely Satyagraha but Satyagraha plus Ahimsa. Mr. Gandhi himself defined it to the Committee as the pursuit of truth and non-violence. Now Satyagraha does not necessarily include non-violence. Mahomed and Christ were Satyagrahis, according to every definition of the term. But they did not exclude the idea of Himsa in a good cause. This is indisputable in the case of the Prophet of Islam. As regards the Founder of Christianity, there is good reason to think that He ultimately adopted the doctrine of Ahimsa. But that He did not do so always is evident from the incident of His driving out the money-changers in the Temple with a whip of small cords. In India, however, for the last twenty-five centuries and more Satyagraha and Ahimsa have so consistently gone together that they may be said to constitute a single idea. When, therefore, Mr. Gandhi speaks of Satyagraha without feeling that it is distinguishable from Ahimsa, he is under the influence of the immemorial tradition of Hindu thought and culture. The assurance with which he holds that the Satyagraha movement can do nothing but good is likewise due to this intimate association in his mind of the idea of Ahimsa with the idea of Satyagraha. If Ahimsa were always and ever the concomitant of Satyagraha, or if Satyagraha were the concomitant of Ahimsa, Mr. Gandhi's position would be unassailable. But it is not the case. Many people who will not kill a worm will not hesitate to tell a lie, if it is to their interest to do so. Conversely, there are many men who patronise the slaughter-house, but would die rather than depart from the truth. If the populace understood Satyagraha in the sense that Mr. Gandhi understands it, there will be no safer or more efficacious means of national salvation. Incidentally, Mr. Gandhi was asked if it did not ment to apprehend truth. The question in our opinion betrays a strange ignorance of what truth is. The test and credential of truth is that it can be apprehended by all. This is especially and pre-eminently true of moral and spiritual truth.

Swami Vivekananda's Anniversary: On Sunday last Swami Govindananda, the local representative of the Ramakrishna Mission, organised a public celebration of the fifty-eighth anniversary of the birth of Swami Vivekananda. Sir Narayan Chandavarkar presided on the occasion, and spoke in warm appreciation of the career of the late Swami and his lasting service to his countrymen. The Swami came at the right psychological moment. Sir Narayan thought, to remind Indians that their national contribution to the cause of humanity should be spiritual not material. Swami Vivekananda further illustrated in his own person the enlarged application of the ancient idea of Sanyas to the service of society and not merely to contemplation. Mr. Gokhale's conception of the Servant of India Society working in the political sphere, was a partial application of the same principle, and we should not be surprised if it had been suggested by the Belur Math. Mr. Gandhi's Ashram at Sabarmati is another endeavour to apply the ancient Sanyas idea to modern conditions. The last issue of the Prabhudda Bharata, the monthly organ of the Ramakrishna Mission, published at Mayavati, narrates a conversation in the course of which the late Swami outlined at some length a scheme of a Convent for women as a means of developing the great spiritual potentialities latent in Indian women for use in the regeneration of the country. The condition of the depressed classes moved the Swami to indignation, and he had far-reaching plans for elevating them and bringing them up to the same level as other Hindus. Swami Vivekananda was undoubtedly one of the dynamic forces of modern India, and it is well that we remind ourselves now and then of his great example.

The Bolshevik Peril. It is difficult for us in this country to decide how far the fear of the Bolshevik peril which seems to have cast in the shade the dread of German recidivism and postponed the settlement of the fate of Turkey, is a political creation and how far it represents a real danger to civilisation. The question has been complicated by the fact that some sort of arrangement has been recently come to permitting of the exchange of commodities with Bolsheviks. One thing, however, seems certain, that the Bolsheviks have triumphed over their opponents in Russia and that they are at present in possession of a military organization which enables them at will to strike westward in Europe, eastward towards the Pacific or southward towards Persia, Afghanistan and India. The Bolsheviks may or may not be devils incarnate—opinion seems to differ on the point even among English publicists—but they are not wanted on our borders. It has always seemed to us to be folly to interfere with them in their own country and, perhaps, if they had been let alone, the danger of their spreading beyond it would have been much less. Probably even now if we do not seek to intermeddle in Russian affairs, they may not seek to interfere with ours. In any case, it is of the first importance that we keep a cool head on our shoulders, and lose no time in adopting such measures—internal as well as external—as will be effective in warding off the menace, if there is really one. The Government of India should make it clear once for all that it will not countenance the doctrine of "terrorism as a means to an end", said to be Lenin's maxim, by marking in a way which can not be mistaken its disapprobation of General Dyer's exploit at Jhallianwala. In this and other ways it must put itself in sympathetic touch with Indian sentiment which, we are sure, will respond readily and generously to such advances on the part of Government.

The Bombay Mills Strike. The Secretary of the Mill-Owner's Association announced in yesterday's morning papers the decision of the Committee of the Association on each of the fifteen requests set forth in the appendix to the representation submitted to the Association, on the 14th instant by Sir Narayan Chandavarkar, as President of the Bombay Labour Settlement Committee. Sir Narayan had indicated in the representation that four of the fifteen points should be settled as an inducement to the workers to resume work. These related to increased wages, annual bonus, hours of labour, and strike pay. Of these four, the Mill-owners have wholly rejected the last, taken the view that the question of bonus must be left to be decided from time to time, and made concessions in the direction of increase in wages and hours of labour. They have agreed to introduce the 10 hours' day from the first proximo, and to give 20 per cent more wages to permanent and 40 per cent to piece-work employees. As regards the eleven other requests they wholly or partially concede some, point out that some others are in accord with existing practice, and refuse only two altogether. It will be the general opinion that, on the whole, the Mill-Owners' concessions have not been conceived in a niggardly spirit. At the same time, they also show that the requests of the operatives were not unreasonable. That being the case, it may well be asked, why should there have been a delay of three weeks in announcing these terms, involving much suffering to thousands, loss of one life, and acute anxiety to Government and the public? This question will have to be taken up for earnest consideration immediately by all concerned. But for the vigorous intervention of His Excellency the Governor, the strike situation, so far as it affected the mill operatives, might not have yet reached its solution. Sir George Lloyd very properly waited to see whether the employers and the employed could not come to a settlement without his intervention. But when the Bombay Labour Settlement Committee placed before His Excellency the results of its negotiations with the Mill-Owners' Association and conveyed to him the confidence universally felt among the operatives in His Excellency's deep sympathy for them and strong desire to see justice done to them, Sir George Lloyd did not hesitate for a moment as to his course. His Excellency has once again proved his capacity as an administrator in circumstances of great difficulty and the public feel grateful to him. We ought not to omit in this connection to add a word of appreciation for the admirable tact and discipline with which the Police and the troops quartered at various centres, have borne themselves in a situation which put a severe strain on their endurance and energies.

The Bombay Labour Settlement Committee. Next only to His Excellency's share of the credit of the present settlement of the strike in the Bombay Mills, is that of Sir Narayan Chandavarkar and his colleagues on the Bombay Labour Settlement Committee, who have sat evening after evening anxiously discussing each phase of the movement as it developed and devising measures to allay unrest among and counsel patience to the operatives, on the one hand, and to ascertain their views and communicate them to the Mill-Owners on the other. We, for one, have never believed that the Mill-Owners as a class are hard-hearted and unsympathetic, and no one who attended the meetings of the Bombay Labour Settlement Committee could have missed being impressed by the fact that the operatives as a class, though they are illiterate, are not wanting in intelligence and good sense. Sir Narayan Chandavarkar at once realised that what was wanted was an agency to put the Mill-Owners in touch with their employees and that when once this was effected the situation would satisfactorily solve itself. All the agencies which had been working among the operatives happily agreed to co-operate in one joint movement. The thanks of the public are due to all of them. But they will all admit that they are in a special measure due to Sir Narayan who, with a terrible domestic anxiety weighing on his mind, sat for hours every evening, explaining, expostulating, interpreting, counselling, and several hours most mornings in drafting, revising, recasting and replying to representations. The Dnyanodaya, the Anglo-Marathi organ of six Christian missions working in the Bombay Presidency, pays a well-merited tribute to Sir Narayan Chandavarkar's labours in connection with a pacific settlement of the strike of millhands. Our contemporary writes: "Sir Narayan Chandavarkar has done a noble and patriotic thing in forming a Bombay Labour Settlement Committee, particularly as he has been anxious for some time past about the health of Lady Chandavarkar. It is to the good of all concerned that the leadership of the two hundred thousand workpeople in Bombay's eighty-five mills has been espoused by so sane and balanced a man as Sir Narayan is, and we earnestly trust his efforts will soon lead to a resumption of work. That twelve hours a day are much too long to work in an Indian factory every one, millowners included, will readily admit. And with Bombay food prices 181 per cent higher than six years ago, as Sir Narayan has shown from official figures, the need for higher wages is quite clear. Perhaps a graver need still is that of better housing."

The Montagu Memorial Movement. A movement has been started in Bombay to raise a memorial to Mr. Montagu. Without desiring in the least to detract from the credit undoubtedly due to Mr. Montagu for his work in regard to constitutional reform, we feel that the movement at the present moment is premature. The rules under the Reform Act, on which so much has been left to depend, are yet to be framed. In the absence of these rules, the significance of the whole measure and of the parts thereof, can be but imperfectly appraised or appreciated. The Punjab affair with its pendant, the Indemnity Act, has created a new perspective in which the Reform Act has to be viewed, and there is a section of weighty opinion which is not satisfied that the responsibility for it ceases with the Government in India. A definite apportionment of responsibility must await the publication of the reports of the Hunter and Nehru Committee. We are not sure that Mr. Montagu himself would like it at this juncture.

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, JANUARY 25, 1920.

A PLEA FOR DISUNITY.

We are obliged to the Leader for the courteous and considered reply to our criticism on its grounds for keeping up a division of political parties. It heads its reply "Fact and Sentiment." We suppose our contemporary relegates our criticism to the realm of sentiment because we quoted some lines of Mathew Arnold's in our article entitled "A Plea for Unity." But "poets never dream: prose-folk always do." The Vedic rishis "saw" their hymns, and the poet-mind in all ages and lands apprehends as in a flash the deepest truths of life, which, we sometimes think, it is the main business of us, journalists and politicians, to obfuscate. If we may say so without offence, our contemporary has shifted its grounds considerably in its latest plea for disunity. In the first article, our readers may remember, it adduced six reasons why the Moderates should continue to work apart from the Congress. Among these were (1) the Amritsar Congress resolution on the Reform Act, (2) the resolution about the recall of the Viceroy, (3) the violent language of the Radical journals in criticising Moderate members of the Indian Legislative Council, (4) the Satyagraha movement, (5) the boycott of the Hunter Committee and (6) the proposed memorial at Jhallianwala Bagh. We pointed out that the Times of India had interpreted the Congress resolution on the Reform Act as being in the right direction. Since then the Mahratta voicing Mr. Tilak's views, and Young India, those of Mr. Gandhi, have accepted and endorsed the Times' interpretation. We had pointed out that the Congress resolution regarding Lord Chelmsford's recall had a good precedent in the Bombay Presidency Association's resolution for the recall of Lord Curzon, that violent language is not a legitimate cause of party divisions, that the Satyagraha movement was initiated by Mr. Gandhi and not by the Congress, that the boycott of the Hunter Committee was not disapproved by all Moderates, and that the proposed memorial at Jhallianwala should not hurt any susceptibilities. We may state in passing that our objection to the Cawnpore memorial is not that it perpetuates the memory of a massacre, but that the exclusion of Indians from the premises, implies that the massacre has the sympathy of all Indians, past, present and to come. We are sure no Englishman will be excluded from the memorial at Jhallianwala because General Dyer happens to be an Englishman.

We need not, however, labour this point, as the Leader in its reply does not lay much store by it or the other five points. Our contemporary has discovered a new reason. It is that the whole fabric of modern responsible Government rests on the party system, and that a party in power without a party in opposition cannot be trusted to run efficiently the complicated machinery of responsible Government. Assuming for argument's sake that responsible government and party system are inseparable, we may point out that the party system means that the Ministers belong to a single party and have a single policy. The Indian Ministers under the scheme of the Act are to be nominated by the Governor and there is nothing to bind the Governor to select the Ministers from one party. He may, and probably will, select them from more than one party. In fact the underlying idea of the scheme with its numerous checks and safeguards seems to deprecate the institution of party Government at the present stage. And what is the party system without party Government? As for opposition, there is likely to be no lack of it without party opposition in the new councils. With the official executive government, the Services accustomed to frame policies as well as to administer them, and the Legislative Council with its communal elements, we may assure our contemporary that the administration of Ministers is not in the least likely to come to grief owing to lack of helpful and healthy friction. Further, so far as we can judge, the conditions under which the new scheme will come into force are such as to constrain every Minister to one programme which cannot differ fundamentally in its essential features. Will the Moderates oppose a measure for universal compulsory education? Will the Radicals oppose a policy which has total prohibition of the manufacture and sale of liquor as its goal? Will Moderates and Radicals seek a conflict on the subject of rural sanitation? All the subjects in the Moderate programme outlined at Calcutta are on the programme of the Radicals. We say that there is no material for two programmes. We go further. We say that it is the duty of all patriotic leaders to seek and discover fresh ground which will unite all creeds, races, castes and sects. The working power of a machine depends on a balance of the centrifugal and centripetal forces generated by it. Any disturbance of this balance will either bring it to a dead halt or scatter it to pieces. In Indian society the centrifugal principle has been developed to an excessive degree, and to add to it by the creation of political parties is to court destruction. We may differ in respect of individual measures, but our reading of Indian history and Indian socio-political conditions absolutely preclude our assenting to a policy of deliberate and determined disunity. Our contemporary recapitulates the circumstances which led to the holding of the first Moderate Conference. We are not concerned with the past, but with the present. We say that whatever might have been the case in 1917, there is no reason in 1920 to maintain a distinction which has ceased to be a difference or exists only as a difference of taste and temperament.

The Leader says that appeals for unity, however entitled to respect, do little good. But our appeal seems to have done some little good, if we may judge from the letters which we have received from men of all parties. "Public life must be a black dreary thing," writes our contemporary, "if it is to be divorced from charity of judgment or fairness of criticism." We entirely agree but no one is entitled to quit his life, public or private, because it is deprived of the things which make it a thing of pleasure and beauty. In our opinion, the Moderates' action in resolving to stand apart from the national movement is nothing less than political suicide. We do not remind our contemporary that some of the most prominent Moderates have in their own younger days enjoyed a reputation for intemperate speech and unbalanced writing. But we do think that they have no right to be so thin-skinned as to squirm at the imputation of motives by unfledged orators and journalists. We are glad that our contemporary recognises this. Our contemporary concludes :

Surely it cannot be contended that it is enough for the Liberals to join the Congress on the three days of its sessions to receive the courtesy of a patient hearing, and for the rest of the year to be kept out of all the executive bodies of the Congress. Taking the constitution of the Congress as it is at present, we cannot see how the Liberals with the views they hold and which they are not prepared to abandon, can find themselves in those bodies. If those who are in power in the Congress think that the Liberals are not yet political 'untouchables' and that they may be yet again admitted into their sacred precincts a radical alteration in the constitution of the Congress seems to be necessary. It is for those who address such appeals to consider what practical means of achieving this end are open to them. It would be a mistake to suppose that their whole duty is done by issuing letters of invitation to the Liberals.

We gladly reproduce this passage because we seem to discern in it a ray of light. We entirely agree that it will not do for the Liberals or the Moderates to join the Congress for three days and to vegetate for the rest of the year. But we hope that the Leader does not contend that the Liberal party's position is similar to that of the Mohammedans or Sikhs in the body politic: that so many seats should be reserved in the Congress Executive for Liberals and so many thrown open to the generality of Congressmen. The same opportunities of winning the confidence of the Congress are open to Liberals as to Radicals. To ask for more is a sheer plea of weakness. For the rest, our contemporary knows perhaps better than we do by whom the present constitution was devised and with what object. We agree that it is radically wrong and should be altered. But how can it be altered if those who wish to see it altered refuse to take the steps necessary to get it altered? Finally, let us remind our contemporary that constitutional reform is not an end in itself. It is a means to a greater, nobler end. Let Liberals and Radicals see to it that they do not push their enthusiasm for or against it to such a point as to impede the great social forces which, under Providence, are impelling this ancient land to achieve its mighty destiny among the world's nations.

A Mysore View: The Karnataka (Bangalore) writes: "We, like the Indian Social Reformer, feel that the Moderate body is a sort of second chamber in our un-official parliament, its object being to revise and to supplement the work of the first chamber which the Congress is and which of course, must be held to be the organ par excellence of the Nation."

LORD SINHA IN BOMBAY.

Lord Sinha arrived in Bombay on the 15th, and spent that day and the next in this city. He was received with the cordial hospitality so characteristic of Bombay by all classes and nearly all shades of political opinion. If there were not such demonstrations of popular enthusiasm as those which greeted the home-coming of Dadabhai Naoroji after his election to Parliament, neither were there any of the ungracious, and almost spiteful, demonstrations on the part of some malcontents, which seem to have marred the great welcome which Calcutta accorded to her distinguished citizen on Sunday last. The Students' Brotherhood was the first body to welcome Lord Sinha at a public function in Bombay. His Lordship's reply to the address presented by it showed that the interests of the student population is very close to his heart. The Western India Liberal Association and the Bombay Presidency Association entertained Lord Sinha, and his speeches on both the occasions were characterised by modesty, chivalry, and sound sense. While expressing his pleasure that all sections of his countrymen were agreed as to the necessity of working the Reform Act to the maximum advantage of the country, he did not, as some others have done, fall foul of those who honestly hold that it could, and should, have gone farther and done more. As regards our work in the immediate future, Lord Sinha gave wise advice. "To my mind," he said, "the best agitation for the purpose of increasing the sphere of our responsible government would be to try and discharge in the manner most satisfactory to the people of India the responsibilities which are now proposed to be devolved upon us." His lordship proceeded to illustrate this by a concrete example. He said:

I will assume that local self-government, education and sanitation will become transferred subjects. They are all important and will tax our energies to a very great extent. Instead of diverting our energies in asking for other subjects like law and order to be immediately transferred, I venture to think that it is part of wisdom to begin from now to formulate a policy with regard to each of those subjects of local self-government, education and sanitation. How are we going to finance them, in what directions can we expand them? Probably a survey is necessary in addition to what has already been accomplished by the local Governments. We shall have to begin to carry out that policy early next year. Are we ready with one? I think not. It will therefore be a waste of energy, of which we do not have a superabundance, to begin an agitation for the purpose of obtaining control over the departments of law and order.

We think that there is much more political energy, potential and even actual, in the country than Lord Sinha believes. Indian politics is no longer the pallid, anæmic thing that it used to be when Mr. Hume, with a cake in one hand and a cane in the other, used alternately to cajole and cudgel his followers to carry on the semblance of political agitation once a year. Even the Congress of 1915 over which Lord Sinha presided, was a pale shadow compared with the thing of flesh and blood which it became at Amritsar. The point, indeed, admits no doubt. Apart, however, from the question of quantity of political energy in the country, we agree with Lord Sinha that we would be far more actively compassing the early extension of responsible government, by working at the Act than by waiting for it. Perhaps, his lordship and ourselves may not agree as to the precise way in which this working at the Act will lead to the desired result. Lord Sinha, no doubt, means that the British Parliament would be so pleased and satisfied with our success that it will hasten to add more to what it has already given. We are inclined rather to the view that it will be found, when it comes to practical working, that the spheres accorded by the scheme are so closely impinged upon by those withheld by it, that Parliament itself must realise that, without these others also being made over to Indians, it is unfair and impossible to expect them to carry on with the rest without serious detriment to administrative efficiency. Parliament must not but come to realise that if Indians are expected to make bricks they must be given a sufficient quantity of straw.

Let us illustrate our meaning by the concrete example used by his lordship himself. How are we going to finance local self-government, education and sanitation, which may be transferred to Indians and which, all agree, need a lot of financing? There are only two ways of financing a department of the administration: by retrenching in some other departments or by fresh taxation. We do not consider the question of loans, because ultimately the device of loans involves one or both of these alternatives. Now, the Indian Minister casting about for ways and means to finance measures of local self-government, education and sanitation, has his back to a wall. The contribution to the Central Government and the expenditure on the reserved departments, are sacrosanct, however grievous may be his needs for his nation-building operations. One course only is open to the Minister—fresh taxation. Now, successive Finance Members of the Government of India, as well as others, have repeatedly declared that Indian revenue is inelastic and that almost all possible sources of taxation have been tapped? What the untrained, inexperienced Indian Minister called upon to do is what the trained, experienced Indian Civil Service had virtually given up as impossible. Not only that, British statesmen with centuries of political experience behind them, would blush if they were required to work a government system in which the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Ministers for the Army and Navy, and the Home Secretary, are to be permanent officials while their colleagues for Education and Public Health and Local Government are to be responsible to Parliament. While welcoming the improvements which the scheme of reform contemplates in the existing system, we have never concealed our opinion that the task imposed on the Indian Minister is no light one, and we feel constrained to point out that exaggerations on the one side are not more propitious to a favourable reception of the measure than exaggerations on the other. One more point. Lord Sinha said that if the Ministers worked the Act to the satisfaction of the Indian people, the extension of the sphere of responsible government would be assured. He also repeatedly affirmed that the future is in our hands to make or mar. As a general proposition, applying to all human affairs, the maxim has a certain validity, but the complaint of the Congress party is that it is the very thing which is denied in the preamble to the Act. If it is in the hands of the Indian people to make or mar their political future under the Act, why not have said so plainly in the preamble? That there is more than an element of truth in the Congress contention is borne out by Lord Sinha's own exhortation to his countrymen.

MR. JUSTICE BANADE'S LIFE-MISSION.* (By, MR. G. K. DEVDHAR, M. A.)

To understand fully Mr. Ranade's claims to greatness, his life must be studied in relation to the time in which he was born and the environment that moulded his character. The two illuminating addresses delivered by Mr. Ranade at the meetings of the National Social Conference in dealing with the conditions of India in the pre-British period—one at Lucknow in 1899 on the subject of "India a thousand years ago"; and the other at Madras in 1898 on "Southern India a hundred years ago", clearly portray to our minds the India of those times. Later on when partition after partition of India began to come under British rule as a result either of conquest or commercial policy followed by periods of either consolidation, conciliation or administrative construction, and when the introduction of Western education and science as a result of British connection which, according to Mr. Ranade, was an act of divine dispensation calculated "to lift us up from the mire of our wretchedness", set in motion the process of liberalization of minds and thoughts of those that came under their beneficent influence, there was an influx of several vigorous and patriotic ideas suggesting directions for the rapid growth of the nation. Bengal which was probably the earliest to come under the sway of western influence sent forth a generation which came to be filled with the conviction that the basis of the society needed modification and our old religious notions and practices badly needed a radical change. In Bombay and elsewhere it was thought that the backwardness of our country was due to political conditions. It was at such a juncture when different people were suggesting different remedies for national advancement, each one in his own way, and when conflicting ideas were floating in the air and the country was budding into a new progressive life that Mr. Ranade was born.

He very powerfully felt, as a result of his vast reading and experience, that what India needed was a social evolution, or a radical change in spirit and not in form.

* From an address delivered at a public meeting held on the 10th. instant in the Satara New English School to celebrate the anniversary of the death of Mr. Justice Mahadeva Govind Ranade.

of the things which make it a thing of pleasure and beauty. In our opinion, the Moderates' action in resolving to stand apart from the national movement is nothing less than political suicide. We do not remind our contemporary that some of the most prominent Moderates have in their own younger days enjoyed a reputation for intemperate speech and unbalanced writing. But we do think that they have no right to be so thin-skinned as to squirm at the imputation of motives by unfledged orators and journalists. We are glad that our contemporary recognises this. Our contemporary concludes:

Surely it cannot be contended that it is enough for the Liberals to join the Congress on the three days of its sessions to receive the courtesy of a patient hearing, and for the rest of the year to be kept out of all the executive bodies of the Congress. Taking the constitution of the Congress as it is at present, we cannot see how the Liberals with the views they hold and which they are not prepared to abandon, can find themselves in those bodies. If those who are in power in the Congress think that the Liberals are not yet political 'untouchables' and that they may be yet again admitted into their sacred precincts a radical alteration in the constitution of the Congress seems to be necessary. It is for those who address such appeals to consider what practical means of achieving this end are open to them. It would be a mistake to suppose that their whole duty is done by issuing letters of invitation to the Liberals.

We gladly reproduce this passage because we seem to discern in it a ray of light. We entirely agree that it will not do for the Liberals or the Moderates to join the Congress for three days and to vegetate for the rest of the year. But we hope that the Leader does not contend that the Liberal party's position is similar to that of the Mohammedans or Sikhs in the body politic: that so many seats should be reserved in the Congress Executive for Liberals and so many thrown open to the generality of Congressmen. The same opportunities of winning the confidence of the Congress are open to Liberals as to Radicals. To ask for more is a sheer plea of weakness. For the rest, our contemporary knows perhaps better than we do by whom the present constitution was devised and with what object. We agree that it is radically wrong and should be altered. But how can it be altered if those who wish to see it altered refuse to take the steps necessary to get it altered? Finally, let us remind our contemporary that constitutional reform is not an end in itself. It is a means to a greater, nobler end. Let Liberals and Radicals see to it that they do not push their enthusiasm for or against it to such a point as to impede the great social forces which, under Providence, are impelling this ancient land to achieve its mighty destiny among the world's nations.

A Mysore View: The Karnataka (Bangalore) writes: "We, like the Indian Social Reformer, feel that the Moderate body is a sort of second chamber in our un-official parliament, its object being to revise and to supplement the work of the first chamber which the Congress is and which of course, must be held to be the organ par excellence of the Nation."

LORD SINHA IN BOMBAY.

Lord Sinha arrived in Bombay on the 15th, and spent that day and the next in this city. He was received with the cordial hospitality so characteristic of Bombay by all classes and nearly all shades of political opinion. If there were not such demonstrations of popular enthusiasm as those which greeted the home-coming of Dadabhai Naoroji after his election to Parliament, neither were there any of the ungracious, and almost spiteful, demonstrations on the part of some malcontents, which seem to have marred the great welcome which Calcutta accorded to her distinguished citizen on Sunday last. The Students' Brotherhood was the first body to welcome Lord Sinha at a public function in Bombay. His Lordship's reply to the address presented by it showed that the interests of the student population is very close to his heart. The Western India Liberal Association and the Bombay Presidency Association entertained Lord Sinha, and his speeches on both the occasions were characterised by modesty, chivalry, and sound sense. While expressing his pleasure that all sections of his countrymen were agreed as to the necessity of working the Reform Act to the maximum advantage of the country, he did not, as some others have done, fall foul of those who honestly hold that it could, and should, have gone farther and done more. As regards our work in the immediate future, Lord Sinha gave wise advice. "To my mind," he said, "the best agitation for the purpose of increasing the sphere of our responsible government would be to try and discharge in the manner most satisfactory to the people of India the responsibilities which are now proposed to be devolved upon us." His lordship proceeded to illustrate this by a concrete example. He said:

I will assume that local self-government, education and sanitation will become transferred subjects. They are all important and will tax our energies to a very great extent. Instead of diverting our energies in asking for other subjects like law and order to be immediately transferred, I venture to think that it is part of wisdom to begin from now to formulate a policy with regard to each of those subjects of local self-government, education and sanitation. How are we going to finance them, in what directions can we expand them? Probably a survey is necessary in addition to what has already been accomplished by the local Governments. We shall have to begin to carry out that policy early next year. Are we ready with one? I think not. It will therefore be a waste of energy, of which we do not have a superabundance, to begin an agitation for the purpose of obtaining control over the departments of law and order.

We think that there is much more political energy, potential and even actual, in the country than Lord Sinha believes. Indian politics is no longer the pallid, anæmic thing that it used to be when Mr. Hume, with a cake in one hand and a cane in the other, used alternately to cajole and cudgel his followers to carry on the semblance of political agitation once a year. Even the Congress of 1915 over which Lord Sinha presided, was a pale shadow compared with the thing of flesh and blood which it became at Amritsar. The point, indeed, admits o doubt. Apart, however, from the question of quantity of political energy in the country, we are with Lord Sinha that we would be far more actively compassing the early extension of responsible government by working at the Act than by waiting for it. Perhaps, his lordship and ourselves do not agree as to the precise way in which this working at the Act will lead to the desired result. Lord Sinha, no doubt, means that the British Parliament would be so pleased and satisfied with our success that it will hasten to add more to what it has already given. We are inclined rather to the view that it will be found, when it comes to practical working, that the spheres provided by the scheme are so closely impinged upon by those withheld by it, that Parliament itself must realise that, without these others also being made over to Indians, it is unfair and impossible to expect them to carry on with the rest without serious detriment to administrative efficiency. Parliament must not but come to realise that if Indians are expected to make bricks they must be given a sufficiency of straw.

Let us illustrate our meaning by the concrete example used by his lordship himself. How are we going to finance local self-government, education and sanitation, which may be transferred to Indians and which, all agree, need a lot of financing? There are only two ways of financing a department of the administration: by retrenching in some other departments or by fresh taxation. We do not consider the question of loans, because ultimately the service of loans involves one or both of these alternatives. Now, the Indian Minister casting about for ways and means to finance measures of local self-government, education and sanitation, has his back to a wall. The contribution to the Central Government and the expenditure on the reserved departments, are sacrosanct, however grievous may be his needs for his nation-building operations. One course is open to the Minister—fresh taxation. Now, successive Finance Members of the Government of India, as well as others, have repeatedly declared that Indian revenue is inelastic and that almost all possible sources of taxation have been tapped? What the untrained, inexperienced Indian Minister called upon to do is what the trained, experienced Indian Civil Service had virtually given up as impossible. Not only that, British statesmen with centuries of political experience behind them, would beaghast if they were required to work a government system in which the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Ministers for the Army and Navy, and the Home Secretary, are to be permanent officials while their colleagues for Education and Public Health and Local Government are to be responsible to Parliament. While welcoming the improvements which the scheme of reform contemplates in the existing system, we have never concealed our opinion that the task imposed on the Indian Minister is no light one, and we feel constrained to point out that exaggerations on the one side are not more propitious to a favourable reception of the measure than exaggerations on the other. One more point. Lord Sinha said that if the Ministers worked the Act to the satisfaction of the Indian people, the extension of the sphere of responsible government would be assured. He also repeatedly affirmed that the future is in our hands to make or mar. As a general proposition, applying to all human affairs, the maxim has a certain validity, but the complaint of the Congress party is that it is the very thing which is denied in the preamble to the Act. If it is in the hands of the Indian people to make or mar their political future under the Act, why not have said so plainly in the preamble? That there is more than an element of truth in the Congress contention is borne out by Lord Sinha's own exhortation to his countrymen.

MR. JUSTICE BANADE'S LIFE-MISSION.* (By MR. G. K. DEVDHAR, M. A.)

To understand fully Mr. Banade's claims to greatness, his life must be studied in relation to the time in which he was born and the environment that moulded his character. The two illuminating addresses delivered by Mr. Banade at the meetings of the National Social Conference in dealing with the conditions of India in the pre-British period—one at Lucknow in 1899 on the subject of "India a thousand years ago"; and the other at Madras in 1898 on "Southern India a hundred years ago", clearly portray to our minds the India of those times. Later on when partition after partition of India began to come under British rule as a result either of conquest or commercial policy followed by periods of either consolidation, conciliation or administrative construction, and when the introduction of Western education and science as a result of British connection which, according to Mr. Banade, was an act of divine dispensation calculated 'to lift us up from the mire of our wretchedness', set in motion the process of liberalization of minds and thoughts of those that came under their beneficent influence, there was an influx of several vigorous and patriotic ideas suggesting directions for the rapid growth of the nation. Bengal which was probably the earliest to come under the sway of western influence sent forth a generation which came to be filled with the conviction that the basis of the society needed modification and our old religious notions and practices badly needed a radical change. In Bombay and elsewhere it was thought that the backwardness of our country was due to political conditions. It was at such a juncture when different people were suggesting different remedies for national advancement, each one in his own way, and when conflicting ideas were floating in the air and the country was budding into a new progressive life that Mr. Banade was born.

He very powerfully felt, as a result of his vast reading and experience, that what India needed was a social evolution, or a radical change in spirit and not in form.

* From an address delivered at a public meeting held on the 10th. instant in the Satara New English School to celebrate the anniversary of the death of Mr. Justice Mahadeva Govind Banade.

He said "It is not the outward form, but the inward form, the thought and the idea which determines the outward form, that has to be changed if real reformation is desired." Another passage from Mr. Ranade's writings makes the meaning of this phrase clear. "The change which we should all seek is thus a change from constraint to freedom, from credulity to faith, from status to contract, from authority to reason, from unorganised to organised life, from bigotry to toleration, from blind fatalism to a sense of human dignity. This is what I understand by social evolution, both for individuals and societies in this country." As philosophy aims at perfection, as religion aims at salvation, as education aims at harmonious development of natural gifts, so nationalism should aim at a full and all round development of the various sides of national life. Mr. Ranade did not believe in progress of either the individual or society by compartments. He was fully convinced that if a nation were to rise to its full status it could only do so by systematically developing all sides or the aspects of its national or social life. According to him the dwarfing of a part meant the dwarfing of the whole. To him the various national activities such as political, industrial, social, religious &c., &c., were so many branches of the main trunk of the social growth or the phases of one and the same thing. That is why he was not content in starting ideas about work in one particular direction at the cost or exclusion of others. He wanted, if possible, that the national problem should be tackled in its entirety.

In fact, he desired the improvement of the whole man as a necessary condition for the growth of the society. That was the key to his life and that would supply a clue to the question as to why Mr. Ranade did not favour one particular branch of human or national activity to the entire neglect of other branches of human life. He recognised the need for specialization but his was the work of direction and like a general in possession of a commanding position he was directing the national efforts into various channels. Moreover, Mr. Ranade's optimism was so robust that he believed that "there is no cause for despair if we only remember one great lesson of history and science, viz., that no development of the body politic is possible, unless the new heat animates all our powers and gives life and warmth to all our activities." This distinguishes a towering leader of a new order of society like Mr. Ranade from others and that constitutes his real greatness. Unlike his many contemporaries, therefore, he devoted his attention and energy to the various needs of the nation and did not set one above the other. High and generous motives always prompted his work. He laboured for all causes that made for progress. His motto was "to love all, work with all, and feel for all. This, in his opinion, was the work of a true reformer. A true national reformer always takes into account the varied needs of the country, closely analyses the causes of its slow or stagnant growth and sets the stream of national enthusiasm for work in various channels.

In his opinion progress in a country like India rich in its traditions and civilisation in its glorious past was bound to be slow and by successive stages, if it was to be sure and permanent, because all organic and structural growth was such. This line of thought and action distinguished Mr. Ranade from the rest of the men of his times and placed him in the forefront as a safe leader of India as she stands now. That was the lesson of his strenuous life.

To him the national problem appealed very differently. He says "What is the inner spring of action which is setting in motion both reform and orthodox workers almost against their will, even where their will does not consent to move? That inner spring, the hidden purpose not consciously realised in many cases, is the sense of human dignity and freedom, which is slowly asserting its supremacy over the national mind. It is not confined to one sphere of family life. It invades the whole man, and makes him feel that individual purity and social justice have paramount claims over us all, which we cannot ignore long without being dragged down to a lower level of existence. This or that particular reform, or revival of ancient practices, as some would like to call them; the removal of this or that particular defect or vice, is not and should not be the only end and aim of the agitation to improve our social condition. The end is renovate, to purify, and also to perfect the whole man by liberating his intellect, elevating his standard of duty, and perfecting all his powers. Till so renovated, purified and perfected, we can never hope to be what our ancestors once were—the chosen people, to whom great tasks were allotted and by whom great deeds were performed. Where this feeling animates the worker, it is a matter of comparative indifference in what particular direction it asserts itself, and in what particular method it proceeds to work. With a liberated manhood, with buoyant hope, with a faith that never shirks duty, with a sense of justice that deals fairly to all, with unclouded intellect and powers fully cultivated, and, lastly, with a love that overleaps all bound, renovated India will take her proper rank among the nations of the world, and be the master of the situation and of her own destiny. This is the goal to be reached—this is the promised land."

THE PROBLEM OF CHRISTIANITY IN INDIA, III.

(By Mr. MANILAL PAREKH.)

But when I say all this I am not forgetful of the fact that neither the caste-people are with me, for their intolerance and suspicion are already aroused and rightly so: nor will I "be able to carry with me the more thoughtful section either of the Hindus or Christians with myself" as 'Kotgarh' says. The thing is that the situation is the most serious one and requires the wisest handling on the part of the most thoughtful among both the Hindus as well as Christians. Nor would I ever have dreamt of dealing with it if I had not felt myself, as a disciple and spiritual son of Raja Ram Mohan Roy and Keshub

Chunder Sen, in a line with all the teaching of the great sages in spite of or rather for the very reason of my being a member of the Body of Christ. In addition to this my personal experiences with my people, my family members and caste-brethren, twice during the last decade, first when I joined the Brahmo Samaj and next when I joined the Christian Church (and I was the first to join the Brahmo Samaj in the whole of Gujarat) have been such as to satisfy me in dealing with the problem in the way I do. Not that everything is smooth or yet may be smooth, for a true follower of the path of the Cross must be ready to be a veritable scandal in the eyes of the world, whether that world with its evil spirit is in the caste-people or in liberal Hindus or in so-called Christians. But apart from that, there is not the least doubt that with the expansion of the whole of the national life in India there has been a corresponding expansion in the caste-system itself and it is ready to tolerate much provided those who are thus tolerated know their proper responsibility. Mr. K. T. Paul has spoken of such an expansion in the whole of the Hindu life in his article on "How Missions denationalise us," and he thinks that the Missions must therefore change their policy with regard to high-caste converts, a suggestion which has been favourably received in more than one quarter. But what I would plead for is that such an expansion of the Hindu Society, instead of contributing to the expansion of a separate Christian community in however indirect a manner, should mean a halt to all proselytisation whatsoever, whether among high and low, and is the sign for a new order of things altogether.

When I say all this I am not forgetful that a thousand and one forces are slowly but none the less surely, making the caste-system yield its ground on all sides. If it does this in order to make room for rank individualism and anarchy in social life, for Bolshevism and class-system such as it prevails in Europe and America where the weakest and poorest go to the wall and wealth and success are the two gods which people worship, if the caste-system made room for all this, then certainly it is a result that is not desirable. But if instead of old castes new communities arose, in which there would be larger love and greater purity, then and then only it is a consummation devoutly to be wished for. But to reach such an end perhaps a progressive modification of the caste-system along with a truer appreciation and toleration on its part of personal, political, social and above all religious liberty which is the foundation of all liberty, may yet be the very best means of taking the great Hindu community several stages forward in the path of true progress. The caste-system has acted all along as a most powerful brake on the liberty of the individual; and though it has often denied him any liberty except in the religious sphere where a larger latitude has been given to him, there is not the least doubt that it has often prevented whatever liberty it gave from degenerating into licence. Thus, in spite of all its defects, and they are many as admitted by all, the caste-system does offer a vantage-ground from when it may be perhaps easier to evolve a higher social system for the Hindus than it would be by the way of the wilderness of individualism. If the Christians or others now feel that it is too late for them to do this, their first duty is to organise themselves into such communities as would show to the rest of the Hindus the great superiority of these to the caste-system and consequently lead them out of it. Mohomedanism has succeeded in doing this to a far greater extent than Christianity, and it is high time for the latter in India to set its own house in order before asking other people to break theirs.

Unfortunately in India we have no true Christianity. Only once in a while Robert de Nobili, the Italian Jesuit who was the true St. Paul of India, and his successors worked in the right way and showed that Christianity is nothing else but the Atmic Rajya, kingdom of the Spirit, of the son of God, and to spread it as such they became even Hindus. The rest of Roman Catholicism and almost all of Protestantism has come as cultural and political assimilation, and this is the main cause of the extreme denationalisation and proletarianisation, especially in the latter. Had the missionaries come as servants and not as masters, as Fakirs and Sadhus and Sannyasis without money and political power behind them, had they come in the manner of or according to the commands of Jesus Christ and St. Paul and all the other great Evangelists of Europe, and even if their converts had been the lowest of the low, the Hindus would have fallen at the feet of both such missionaries and their converts. It has been the glory of Hindustan and of the Hindus that they have practised the greatest toleration of all religions for centuries, and paid their reverence wherever they found spiritual worth irrespective of caste, colour or country.

On the Indian side this Pearl of great price, the Atmic Rajya, was found out by many, but above all by Keshub who wanted to nationalise it in the form of the New Dispensation, a Christo-centric synthesis of Hinduism and Christianity. But it was too great a possession for his followers to be made proper use of and has been lying almost unused since his time. Max Muller wanted Keshub's followers to call themselves Brahmo or Arya Christians and form a nucleus round which a truly National Church of Christ might gather. But what was found impossible by his followers may yet be found possible by those among Christian Indians who are trying to nationalise Christianity by forming a truly National Church. Let all such come out of their present bondage, and with the spirits of Robert de Nobili on one side and of Keshub Chunder Sen on the other, advance to form a Church which is truly national, Hindu as well as Christian in the best sense of the term, a Church which is nothing less than the Hindu Church of Christ.

The Depressed Classes Mission, Mangalore. Rai Sahib K. Ranga Rao, Secretary Depressed Classes Mission, Mangalore writes: "The Government has been pleased to give us 34 acres and 29 cents of land in Udipi for forming an agricultural settlement for the depressed classes. This is the second gift from the Government for the purpose. We request our helpers and sympathisers—and all who believe in the uplift of the depressed to give us whatever help they can to carry out the scheme. Any amount however small will be most thankfully received."

He said "It is not the outward form, but the inward form, the thought and the idea which determines the outward form, that has to be changed if real reformation is desired." Another passage from Mr. Ranade's writings makes the meaning of this phrase clear. "The change which we should all seek is thus a change from constraint to freedom, from credulity to faith, from status to contract, from authority to reason, from unorganised to organised life, from bigotry to toleration, from blind fatalism to a sense of human dignity. This is what I understand by social evolution, both for individuals and societies in this country." As philosophy aims at perfection, as religion aims at salvation, as education aims at harmonious development of natural gifts, so nationalism should aim at a full and all round development of the various sides of national life. Mr. Ranade did not believe in progress of either the individual or society by compartments. He was fully convinced that if a nation were to rise to its full stature it could only do so by systematically developing all sides or the aspects of its national or social life. According to him the dwarfing of a part meant the dwarfing of the whole. To him the various national activities such as political, industrial, social, religious &c., &c., were so many branches of the main trunk of the social growth or the phases of one and the same thing. That is why he was not content in starting ideas about work in one particular direction at the cost or exclusion of others. He wanted, if possible, that the national problem should be tackled in its entirety.

In fact, he desired the improvement of the whole man as a necessary condition for the growth of the society. That was the key to his life and that would supply a clue to the question as to why Mr. Ranade did not favour one particular branch of human or national activity to the entire neglect of other branches of human life. He recognised the need for specialization but his was the work of direction and like a general in possession of a commanding position he was directing the national efforts into various channels. Moreover, Mr. Ranade's optimism was so robust that he believed that "there is no cause for despair if we only remember one great lesson of history and science, viz., that no development of the body politic is possible, unless the new heat animates all our powers and gives life and warmth to all our activities." This distinguishes a towering leader of a new order of society like Mr. Ranade from others and that constitutes his real greatness. Unlike his many contemporaries, therefore, he devoted his attention and energy to the various needs of the nation and did not set one above the other. High and generous motives always prompted his work. He laboured for all causes that made for progress. His motto was "to love all, work with all, and feel for all. This, in his opinion, was the work of a true Reformer. A true national reformer always takes into account the varied needs of the country, closely analyses the causes of its slow or stagnant growth and sets the stream of national enthusiasm for work in various channels.

In his opinion progress in a country like India rich in its traditions and civilization in its glorious past was bound to be slow and by successive stages, if it was to be sure and permanent, because all organic and structural growth was such. This line of thought and action distinguished Mr. Ranade from the rest of the men of his times and placed him in the forefront as a safe leader of India as she stands now. That was the lesson of his strenuous life.

To him the national problem appealed very differently. He says "What is the inner spring of action which is setting in motion both reform and orthodox workers almost against their will, even where their will does not consent to move? That inner spring, the hidden purpose not consciously realised in many cases, is the sense of human dignity and freedom, which is slowly asserting its supremacy over the national mind. It is not confined to one sphere of family life. It invades the whole man, and makes him feel that individual purity and social justice have paramount claims over us all, which we cannot ignore long without being dragged down to a lower level of existence. This or that particular reform, or revival of ancient practices, as some would like to call them; the removal of this or that particular defect or vice, is not and should not be the only end and aim of the agitation to improve our social condition. The end is renovate, to purify, and also to perfect the whole man by liberating his intellect, elevating his standard of duty, and perfecting all his powers. Till so renovated, purified and perfected, we can never hope to be what our ancestors once were—the chosen people, to whom great tasks were allotted and by whom great deeds were performed. Where this feeling animates the worker, it is a matter of comparative indifference in what particular direction it asserts itself, and in what particular method it proceeds to work. With a liberated manhood, with buoyant hope, with a faith that never abirks duty, with a sense of justice that deals fairly to all, with unclouded intellect and powers fully cultivated, and, lastly, with a love that overleaps all bound, renovated India will take her proper rank among the nations of the world, and be the master of the situation and of her own destiny. This is the goal to be reached—this is the promised land."

THE PROBLEM OF CHRISTIANITY IN INDIA, III.

(By MR. MAVILAL PAREKH.)

But when I say all this I am not forgetful of the fact that neither the caste-people are with me, for their intolerance and suspicion are already aroused and rightly so: nor will I "be able to carry with me the more thoughtful section either of the Hindu or Christians with myself" as 'Kotgarh' says. The thing is that the situation is the most serious one and requires the wisest handling on the part of the most thoughtful among both the Hindus as well as Christians. Nor would I ever have dreamt of dealing with it if I had not felt myself, as a disciple and spiritual son of Raja Ram Mohan Roy and Keshub under Sen, in a line with all the teaching of the sages in spite of or rather for the very reason of my being a member of the Body of Christ. In addition to this my personal experiences with my people, my family members and caste-brethren, twice during the last decade, first when I joined the Brahmo Samaj and next when I joined the Christian Church (and I was the first to join the Brahmo Samaj in the whole of Gujarat) have been such as to justify me in dealing with the problem in the way I do. Not that everything is smooth or yet may be smooth, for a true follower of the path of the Cross must be ready to be a veritable scandal in the eyes of the world, whether that world with its evil spirit be in the caste-people or in liberal Hindus or in so-called Christians. But apart from that, there is not the least doubt that with the expansion of the whole of the national life in India there has been a corresponding expansion in the caste-system itself and it is ready to tolerate much provided those who are thus tolerated know their proper responsibility. Mr. K. T. Paul has spoken of such an expansion in the whole of the Hindu life in his article on "How Missions nationalise us," and he thinks that the Missions must therefore change their policy with regard to high-caste converts, a suggestion which has been favourably received in more than one quarter. But what I would plead for is that such an expansion of the Hindu Society, instead of contributing to the expansion of a separate Christian community in however direct a manner, should mean a halt to all proselytation whatsoever, whether among high and low, and is the sign for a new order of things altogether. When I say all this I am not forgetful that a thousand and one forces are slowly but none the less surely, making the caste-system yield its ground on all sides. If it does this in order to make room for rank individualism and anarchy in social life, for Bolshevism and class-systems such as it prevails in Europe and America where the weakest and poorest go to the wall and wealth and success are the two gods which people worship, if the caste-system made room for all this, then certainly it is a result that is not desirable. But if instead of old castes new communities arose, in which there would be larger love and greater purity, then and then only it is a consummation devoutly to be wished for. But to reach such an end perhaps a progressive modification of the caste-system along with a truer appreciation and consideration on its part of personal, political, social and above all religious liberty which is the foundation of all liberty, may yet be the very best means of taking the great Hindu community several stages forward on the path of true progress. The caste-system has acted all along as a most powerful brake on the liberty of the individual; and though it has often denied him any liberty except in the religious sphere where a larger latitude has been given to him, there is not the least doubt that it has often prevented whatever liberty it gave from degenerating into licence. Thus, in spite of all its defects, and they are many as admitted by all, the caste-system does offer a vantage-ground from when it may be perhaps easier to evolve a higher social system for the Hindus than it would be by the way of the wilderness of individualism. If the Christians or others now feel that it is too late for them to do this, their first duty is to organise themselves into such communities as would show to the rest of the Hindus the great superiority of these to the caste-system and consequently lead them out of it. Mohomedanism has succeeded in doing this to a far greater extent than Christianity, and it is high time for the latter in India to set its own house in order before asking other people to break theirs.

Unfortunately in India we have no true Christianity. Only once in a while Robert de Nobili, the Italian Jesuit who was the true St. Paul of India, and his successors worked in the right way and showed that Christianity is nothing else but the Atmic Rajya, kingdom of the Spirit, of the son of God, and to spread it as such they became even Hindus. The rest of Roman Catholicism and almost all of Protestantism has come as cultural and political assimilation, and this is the main cause of the extreme denationalisation and proletarianisation, especially in the latter. Had the missionaries come as servants and not as masters, as Fakirs and Sadhus and Sannyasis without money and political power behind them, had they come in the manner of or according to the commands of Jesus Christ and St. Paul and all the other great Evangelists of Europe, and even if their converts had been the lowest of the low, the Hindus would have fallen at the feet of both such missionaries and their converts. It has been the glory of Hindustan and of the Hindus that they have practised the greatest toleration of all religions for centuries, and paid their reverence wherever they found spiritual worth irrespectively of caste, colour or country.

On the Indian side this Pearl of great price, the Atmic Rajya, was found out by many, but above all by Keshub who wanted to nationalise it in the form of the New Dispensation, a Christo-centric synthesis of Hinduism and Christianity. But it was too great a possession for his followers to be made proper use of and has been lying almost unused since his time. Max Muller wanted Keshub's followers to call themselves Brahma or Arva Christians and form a nucleus round which a truly National Church of Christ might gather. But what was found impossible by his followers may yet be found possible by those among Christian Indians who are trying to nationalise Christianity by forming a truly National Church. Let all such come out of their present bondage, and with the spirits of Robert de Nobili on one side and of Keshub Chunder Sen on the other, advance to form a Church which is truly national, Hindu as well as Christian in the best sense of the term, a Church which is nothing less than the Hindu Church of Christ.

The Depressed Classes Mission, Mangalore. Rai Sahib K. Ranga Rao, Secretary Depressed Classes Mission, Mangalore writes: "The Government has been pleased to give us 34 acres and 29 cents of land in Udipi for forming an agricultural settlement for the depressed classes. This is the second gift from the Government for the purpose. We request our helpers and sympathisers—and all who believe in the uplift of the depressed to give us whatever help they can to carry out the scheme. Any amount however small will be most thankfully received."

He said "It is not the outward form, but the inward form, the thought and the idea which determines the outward form, that has to be changed if real reformation is desired." Another passage from Mr. Ranade's writings makes the meaning of this phrase clear. "The change which we should all seek is thus a change from constraint to freedom, from credulity to faith, from status to contract, from authority to reason, from unorganised to organised life, from bigotry to toleration, from blind fatalism to a sense of human dignity. This is what I understand by social evolution, both for individuals and societies in this country." As philosophy aims at perfection, as religion aims at salvation, as education aims at harmonious development of natural gifts, so nationalism should aim at a full and all round development of the various sides of national life. Mr. Ranade did not believe in progress of either the individual or society by compartments. He was fully convinced that if a nation were to rise to its full status it could only do so by systematically developing all sides or the aspects of its national or social life. According to him the dwarfing of a part meant the dwarfing of the whole. To him the various national activities such as political, industrial, social, religious &c., &c., were so many branches of the main trunk of the social growth or the phases of one and the same thing. That is why he was not content in starting ideas about work in one particular direction at the cost or exclusion of others. He wanted, if possible, that the national problem should be tackled in its entirety.

In fact, he desired the improvement of the whole man as a necessary condition for the growth of the society. That was the key to his life and that would supply a clue to the question as to why Mr. Ranade did not favour one particular branch of human or national activity to the entire neglect of other branches of human life. He recognised the need for specialization but his was the work of direction and like a general in possession of a commanding position he was directing the national efforts into various channels. Moreover, Mr. Ranade's optimism was so robust that he believed that "there is no cause for despair if we only remember one great lesson of history and science, viz., that no development of the body politic is possible, unless the new heat animates all our powers and gives life and warmth to all our activities." This distinguishes a towering leader of a new order of society like Mr. Ranade from others and that constitutes his real greatness. Unlike his many contemporaries, therefore, he devoted his attention and energy to the various needs of the nation and did not set one above the other. High and generous motives always prompted his work. He laboured for all causes that made for progress. His motto was "to love all, work with all, and feel for all. This, in his opinion, was the work of a true Reformer. A true national reformer always takes into account the varied needs of the country, closely analyses the causes of its slow or stagnant growth and sets the stream of national enthusiasm for work in various channels.

In his opinion progress in a country like India rich in its traditions and civilization in its glorious past was bound to be slow and by successive stages, if it was to be sure and permanent, because all organic and structural growth was such. This line of thought and action distinguished Mr. Ranade from the rest of the men of his times and placed him in the forefront as a safe leader of India as she stands now. That was the lesson of his strenuous life.

To him the national problem appealed very differently. He says "What is the inner spring of action which is setting in motion both reform and orthodox workers almost against their will, even where their will does not consent to move? That inner spring, the hidden purpose not consciously realised in many cases, is the sense of human dignity and freedom, which is slowly asserting its supremacy over the national mind. It is not confined to one sphere of family life. It invades the whole man, and makes him feel that individual purity and social justice have paramount claims over us all, which we cannot ignore long without being dragged down to a lower level of existence. This or that particular reform, or revival of ancient practices, as some would like to call them; the removal of this or that particular defect or vice, is not and should not be the only end and aim of the agitation to improve our social condition. The end is renovate, to purify, and also to perfect the whole man by liberating his intellect, elevating his standard of duty, and perfecting all his powers. Till so renovated, purified and perfected, we can never hope to be what our ancestors once were—the chosen people, to whom great tasks were allotted and by whom great deeds were performed. Where this feeling animates the worker, it is a matter of comparative indifference in what particular direction it asserts itself, and in what particular method it proceeds to work. With a liberated manhood, with buoyant hope, with a faith that never shirks duty, with a sense of justice that deals fairly to all, with unclouded intellect and powers fully cultivated, and, lastly, with a love that overleaps all bound, renovated India will take her proper rank among the nations of the world, and be the master of the situation and of her own destiny. This is the goal to be reached—this is the promised land."

THE PROBLEM OF CHRISTIANITY IN INDIA, III.

(BY MR. MANILAL PAREKH.)

But when I say all this I am not forgetful of the fact that neither the caste-people are with me, for their intolerance and suspicion are already aroused and rightly so; nor will I "be able to carry with me the more thoughtful section either of the Hindu or Christians with myself" as 'Kotgarh' says. The thing is that the situation is the most serious one and requires the wisest handling on the part of the most thoughtful among both the Hindus as well as Christians. Nor would I ever have dreamt of dealing with it if I had not felt myself, as a disciple and spiritual son of Raja Ram Mohan Roy and Keshub

Chunder Sen, in a line with all the teaching of the Aryan sages in spite of or rather for the very reason of my being a member of the Body of Christ. In addition to this my personal experiences with my people, my family members and caste-brethren, twice during the last decade, first when I joined the Brahma Samaj and next when I joined the Christian Church (and I was the first to join the Brahma Samaj in the whole of Gujarat) have been such as to justify me in dealing with the problem in the way I do. Not that everything is smooth or yet may be smooth, for a true follower of the path of the Cross must be ready to be a veritable scandal in the eyes of the world, whether that world with its evil spirit be in the caste-people or in liberal Hindus or in so-called Christians. But apart from that, there is not the least doubt that with the expansion of the whole of the national life in India there has been a corresponding expansion in the caste-system itself and it is ready to tolerate much provided those who are thus tolerated know their proper responsibility. Mr. K. T. Paul has spoken of such an expansion in the whole of the Hindu life in his article on "How Missions denationalise us," and he thinks that the Missions must therefore change their policy with regard to high-caste converts, a suggestion which has been favourably received in more than one quarter. But what I would plead for is that such an expansion of the Hindu Society, instead of contributing to the expansion of a separate Christian community in however indirect a manner, should mean a halt to all proselytisation whatsoever, whether among high and low, and is the sign for a new order of things altogether.

When I say all this I am not forgetful that a thousand and one forces are slowly but none the less surely, making the caste-system yield its ground on all sides. If it does this in order to make room for rank individualism and anarchy in social life, for Bolshevism and class-system such as it prevails in Europe and America where the weakest and poorest go to the wall and wealth and success are the two gods which people worship, if the caste-system made room for all this, then certainly it is a result that is not desirable. But if instead of old castes new communities arose, in which there would be larger love and greater parity, then and then only it is a consummation devoutly to be wished for. But to reach such an end perhaps a progressive modification of the caste-system along with a truer appreciation and toleration on its part of personal, political, social and above all religious liberty which is the foundation of all liberty, may yet be the very best means of taking the great Hindu community several stages forward in the path of true progress. The caste-system has acted all along as a most powerful brake on the liberty of the individual; and though it has often denied him any liberty except in the religious sphere where a larger latitude has been given to him, there is not the least doubt that it has often prevented whatever liberty it gave from degenerating into licence. Thus, in spite of all its defects, and they are many as admitted by all, the caste-system does offer a vantage-ground from when it may be perhaps easier to evolve a higher social system for the Hindus than it would be by the way of the wilderness of individualism. If the Christians or others now feel that it is too late for them to do this, their first duty is to organise themselves into such communities as would show to the rest of the Hindus the great superiority of these to the caste-system and consequently lead them out of it. Mohomedanism has succeeded in doing this to a far greater extent than Christianity, and it is high time for the latter in India to set its own house in order before asking other people to break theirs.

Unfortunately in India we have no true Christianity. Only once in a while Robert de Nobili, the Italian Jesuit who was the true St. Paul of India, and his successors worked in the right way and showed that Christianity is nothing else but the Atmic Rajya, kingdom of the Spirit, of the son of God, and to spread it as such they became even Hindus. The rest of Roman Catholicism and almost all of Protestantism has come as cultural and political assimilation, and this is the main cause of the extreme denationalisation and proletarianisation, especially in the latter. Had the missionaries come as servants and not as masters, as Fakirs and Sadhus and Sannyasis without money and political power behind them, had they come in the manner of or according to the commands of Jesus Christ and St. Paul and all the other great Evangelists of Europe, and even if their converts had been the lowest of the low, the Hindus would have fallen at the feet of both such missionaries and their converts. It has been the glory of Hindustan and of the Hindus that they have practised the greatest toleration of all religions for centuries, and paid their reverence wherever they found spiritual worth irrespective of caste, colour or country.

On the Indian side this Pearl of great price, the Atmic Rajya, was found out by many, but above all by Keshub who wanted to nationalise it in the form of the New Dispensation, a Christo-centric synthesis of Hinduism and Christianity. But it was too great a possession for his followers to be made proper use of and has been lying almost unused since his time. Max Muller wanted Keshub's followers to call themselves Brahma or Arya Christians and form a nucleus round which a truly National Church of Christ might gather. But what was found impossible by his followers may yet be found possible by those among Christian Indians who are trying to nationalise Christianity by forming a truly National Church. Let all such come out of their present bondage, and with the spirits of Robert de Nobili on one side and of Keshub Chunder Sen on the other, advance to form a Church which is truly national, Hindu as well as Christian in the best sense of the term, a Church which is nothing less than the Hindu Church of Christ.

The Depressed Classes Mission, Mangalore. Rai Sahib K. Kanga Rao, Secretary Depressed Classes Mission, Mangalore writes: "The Government has been pleased to give us 34 acres and 29 cents of land in Udipi for forming an agricultural settlement for the depressed classes. This is the second gift from the Government for the purpose. We request our helpers and sympathisers—and all who believe in the uplift of the depressed to give us whatever help they can to carry out the scheme. Any amount however small will be most thankfully received."

LADIES' CONFERENCE AT AMRITSAR.

PARDAH CONDENSED.

At the session of the Ladies' Conference held at Amritsar during the national week, Mrs. Hessa Imam spoke as follows:—

"Sisters,—I think it a privilege to be asked to address this distinguished gathering and I am sincerely grateful for it. In my opinion the question which immediately needs our attention is the question of Pardah. Practically half the woman-population of our country yet remain in seclusion, and are to all intents and purposes, unable to take advantage of the expansive times now ahead. We have heard many platform speeches in the various Conferences and have read innumerable literature on the subject. Yet the progress that we see around us is very limited and hardly commensurate with the urgency of the problem. We are a people very slow to move and it is specially so in regard to the removal of Pardah from our Social System. While it is the duty of our men to do all they can to remove this evil from our midst, I think it the duty cast upon those of us who have shed the trammels of Pardah is infinitely greater. It is too late in the day to demonstrate that the kind of Pardah that is practised in India has sanction in religion or can be tolerated by any living and progressive community. The causes which led the growth of Pardah in our Social System are now too well-known and it will be needlessly taking up your time to dilate on that aspect of the subject. All the reasons that are usually brought out in support of the system are now fully exploded and all thinking persons realize that Pardah is not only now a meaningless anachronism but also a source of great hindrance to the onward progress of our country. With the new opportunities that are to-day being offered to our country for progress and advancement, our ideals and aspirations are naturally set on a future for our country which should in every way be worthy of her past. Then, why not let us go back in imagination to the past history of our land when women were as free as men, held their own in philosophical and political discussions and were in the true sense of the word the inspirers of men. To Indians the names of Sita and Savitree and so many others in Hindu history have not only been objects of adoration and pride but have served as examples of womanly perfection worthy of emulation. The Muslim History has her own heroines whose lives amply prove that women are never destined to live that demoralised and devitalized life which unhappily is the misfortune of so many of our sisters in Pardah. What does Pardah mean to-day as life is constituted? It simply means the division of home. Division of home leads to division of function which carried to its logical conclusion means division in the nation. There is not that harmonious concord, no blending of functions for common national good, and therefore success of all constructive national programmes is bound to be hampered if not altogether denied. It is, therefore, to my mind of the highest importance that Pardah should disappear as soon as possible if our ideal of National emancipation is to be attained within the time we want. With these few words I shall resume my seat."

INDIAN OLYMPIC ASSOCIATION.

AN APPEAL.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

I shall be glad if you will kindly spare space in the next issue of your paper for the following appeal to the citizens of India on behalf of the Indian Olympic Association.

The institution is started with the object of securing representation for Indians on the International Olympic Committee and of selecting, training and sending a representative body of Athletes to take part in the next Olympic Games to be held in Belgium in July 1920.

The time at our disposal is very short—barely two months—to satisfactorily accomplish the big task of properly selecting and training a body of representative Indian Athletes and of collecting the sum of about three lacs of Rupees necessary to meet their expenses. But we cannot let go this opportunity of meeting the athletic representatives of the various races and nations who are all inspired by the same ideals of physical excellence and compete with each other in friendly rivalry. As the official report of the fourth Olympiad says:—

"These young men are also representative of the generation into whose hands the destinies of most of the nations of the world are passing at this moment, and we may hope that their meeting thus periodically, the enthusiasm which they share, and the opportunity afforded of mutual knowledge and mutual respect may have beneficent effect hereafter on the cause of international peace.

"The underlying idea of these International Olympic Games is that there is something in these periodical gatherings which gives promise of results more important than those to be hoped for from an ordinary athletic meeting, however representative and however extended in scope.

"The old Hellenic Games were the expression of good fellowship between Greek and Greek, and was the only institution, indeed, which united the Hellenic race during a history of continuous internal conflict. They formed a sort of cord of unity by which the race was held together not only through their internal bickerings, through the temporary ascendancy of one state or another, the civil strife of the Peloponnesian war and the downfall of Athens, but through the greater disasters of foreign domination like those of Macedonia and Rome."

The high ideals of peace and unity form the bases of this whole movement. To achieve any degree of success in such a short time at our disposal, support and co-operation from every citizen of India and every member of the Association is the first essential thing, and the best way of co-operating is to become a member of the Association and then to induce friends and relatives to do the same. This can easily be done by anybody without any great sacrifice or loss of time and I do not think that any one will grudge to grant us this simple request.

Full particulars regarding progress of the movement are published from time to time in the periodical progress reports and I shall be very happy to send copies of the same to those who may require them.

I trust that our people will rise to the occasion and help these national movement, about the importance and utility of which there can hardly be any two opinions.

S. R. BHAGWAT,

General Secretary,

Poona, 15th January 1920.

Indian Olympic Association.

AN APPEAL ON BEHALF OF THE NAMASUDRAS.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer, Bombay.

Sir,

The Namasudras (the so called "untouchables") of my village, Koyra, a place not very far from the sub-divisional town of Baraset (District 24 Pergunnas) have started a school for the education and upliftment of their children as also for poor Moslem boys. The school has been in existence for more than a year and the number of scholars receiving education is fairly satisfactory. The school is located in a thatched building constructed by the Namasandras themselves but as they are too poor and cannot afford to pay anything in cash they have been appealing, through me, for some furniture such as a table and a chair for the teacher and half a dozen benches for the boys. The Education Department has been written to for a small aid, and a general appeal is extended to my educated countrymen to contribute their mite for the up-keep of the school. Any donations sent in for this laudable object will be thankfully received and acknowledged by me or my esteemed and patriotic friend, Mr. I. B. Sen, M. A., B. L., Bar-at-Law, 57-1, Harish Chunder Mookerjee Street, Bhowanipore, Calcutta.

6, Jackson Lane,
Calcutta.

Yours truly,
R. N. Dyer.

RACIALISM AT AMRITSAR.

Brigadier General Dyer's action at Amritsar is still sub-judice, although the Press as a whole has already passed judgment. The Morning Post and The Daily Herald have each been biased unduly in the directions which their readers would expect. As a nation public opinion has been rudely shocked, but it is doubtful whether the ultimate cause of such catastrophes is apprehended. The keyword which explains the severity in the method of the repression of the Punjab outbreak, no less than the outbreak itself, is "racialism." It was only for their skins being white that bank officials were clubbed to death by the mob, and if the skins of the Jullianwala crowd had not been dark the casualties would at the most have been by the score instead of by the thousand. It may be a gain for the moment that a rebellion was nipped in the bud, it will be a loss that will go down into the ages if the shooting which stopped the rebellion and the widespread misery that must have accompanied it, is to go into history as a massacre.

In the "crawling order" the racial passion comes even more emphatically into evidence. In a certain street Miss Sherwood, a Zenana missionary, was murderously attacked and left for dead. The General considered that some collective punishment was called for. The form of punishment adopted was to compel any Indian wishing to pass along the street to crawl along it. That is to say, because certain Indian malefactors had brutally and murderously assaulted an English lady all Indians entering the street were to be humiliated as above, not because they had any responsibility whatever for the assault, but because they were of the same colour as the men who had committed the assault. The motive given for such retribution was that "we look upon women as sacred and . . . I felt the street should be looked on as sacred." There is no hypocrisy here as the words rather tend to suggest, but only misconception. Side by side with the racial passion was the indignation of chivalry. If there is one offence that before all others makes an Englishman see red, it is the ill-treatment of women. But this does not make the impulse which produced the "crawling order" the less wrong; and it was revoked by superior authority as soon as it came to notice.—The Challenge.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postage
In advance. In arrears.

Per annum..... Rs. 5-0-0.—Rs. 6-0-0

Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, twelve shillings (Rs. 6).

Single copies of the current year can be had at 4 annas each and any back copies at 6 annas each.

The following two books on trade and industries, by J. L. Duvell, M. A. V. P., are indispensable to every English-knowing Indian gentleman:—

(1) Vyapar Mitra.—It consists of 4 parts containing more than 325 original recipes for making marketable articles for trade, such as Soap, Varnish, Polish, Ink, Sealing Wax, Rubber Toys, Imitation Gold, Silver, Pearl, Ruby, Coral, etc., Cigarettes, Matches, Carbon Paper, Pocket Press, Buttons, Gilding Powder, Hair Killer, Hair Oils, Scent, Syrups, Essences, Medicines, etc., etc. Price Re. 1, V. P. As 2.

The book "First Lessons in Photography" will be given free to every purchaser of Vyapar Mitra.

(2) Trade Secrets or How to become healthy and wealthy.—This book consists of 10 parts of chapters, each dealing with a series of articles on trade and industries; such as perfumery, dairy farming, agriculture, manures, etc. It also deals with cattle and human diseases with suitable prescriptions for all of them. Besides, collection of several hundreds of other useful informations and money-making secret formulas and processes have greatly increased the usefulness of the book. Reduced prices Re. 1, V. P. As 2.

N. B.—On account of the scarcity of paper, the next edition of these books is not expected soon, hence to avoid disappointment send for them to-day.

Address:—MANAGER, THE WALKER PRESS,
MAINPURI U. P.

SELF GOVERNMENT IN ANCIENT INDIA

BY

M. V. GOPAL RAO.

"India is no stranger to Self rule"

"Kings elected by the people."

"Kings deposed for mis-rule."

"King to exercise executive functions only."

"Taxation with the consent of the people."

"Doctrine of the sovereignty of the people recognised."

"Divine right no personal attribute to kings."

MODERN REVIEW:—"This neatly printed pamphlet of 24 pages makes an admirable attempt to show that Self-rule was not a strange thing in India in olden times."

Price As. 4 Four annas only. V. P. Charges extra.

Apply to:—

ANDHRA GRANDHA RATNAGARAM,

4-1-20.

Pithapuram, (Godavari Dk.)

"PEEPS INTO THE FUTURE"

Is everybody's everyday book. The codified experience of generations of Astrologers and Indian Yogis—an astrologer in moments of anxiety & suspense—answers short and succinctly clear on the thousand and one points of doubt and uncertainty. Everybody may consult the book—no date of birth or horoscope necessary. Must be in every pocket for it suits all. Price one rupee only. Foreign two shillings. Apply to the Proprietor.

TATA MYSTIC ASTRAL STUDIO

24-6-19.

Chodavaram, Visagapatam District.

THE TATA INDUSTRIAL BANK, LD.

HEAD OFFICE, BOMBAY.

BRANCHES—CALCUTTA and HYDERABAD (Deccan)
CANNANPORE and LUCKNOW.

Sub-Branches.—

Bombay—Share Bazaar, Shroff Bazaar.

Calcutta—Barr Bazaar.

London Agents. LLOYDS BANK LIMITED.

NEW YORK AGENTS: THE GUARANTY
TRUST COY. OF NEW YORK.

AUTHORISED CAPITAL... Rs. 12,00,00,000.

SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL... " 7,56,00,225.

PAID UP CAPITAL... " 1,50,99,225.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Sir D. J. Tata, Kt., Chairman.

Sir Sassoon David, Bart.

Sir R. N. Mookerjee, K. O. L. E.

Sir Francis Stewart, Kt.

Sir Henry Proctor, Kt.

R. D. Tata, Esq.

F. E. Dinshaw, Esq.

F. O. Rimington, Esq.

Narottam Morarjee, Esq.

Hajee Gulam Mahomed Ajam, Esq.

The Hon'ble Mr. Purshottamdas Thakordas. C. I. E.

A. J. Billimoria, Esq.

Secretary, R. H. Parker.

Current Accounts opened and interest allowed on daily credit balances from Rs. 500/- to Rs. 1,00,000/- at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum. If the balance to the credit of any account does not fall below Rs. 25,000/- at any time between 1st January and 30th June, interest will be allowed during that period at 2½ % per annum. No interest is allowed unless the sum accrued amounts to Rs. 8/- Half-yearly.

Fixed Deposits. Interest allowed on Deposits fixed for one or two years and for shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank. Interest allowed on Savings Bank Accounts at 4 per cent per annum. Rules may be obtained on application.

Loans and Cash Credits are granted on approved securities.

Purchases and sales of Securities and shares effected.

Bills of Exchange purchased and collected and every description of Banking and exchange business undertaken.

14-4-18. L. D. L. BUCKLEBY, General Manager.

THE YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK, LIMITED.

(Registered in Japan.)
Established 1880.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 48,000,000.

Paid up Capital.....Yen. 42,000,000.

Reserve Fund.....Yen. 28,100,000.

Head Office:—Yokohama.

Branches and Agencies at Bombay, Buenos Aires, Calcutta, Changchun, Chi-Nan, Dairen, Fengtien, Hankow, Harbin, Hongkong, Honolulu, Kaiyuan, Kobe, London, Los Angeles, Lyons, Manila, Nagasaki, Newchwang, New York, Osaka, Peking, Rangoon, San Francisco, Seattle, Shanghai, Shimonoeki, Singapore, Soerabaya, Sydney, Tientsin, Tokio, Tsingtao.

Current Deposit Accounts are opened for approved customers and Interest is allowed at the rate of 3 per cent per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 100,000, provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of banking and exchange business transacted.

N. IGARASHI,

Post Box No. 207, Hornby Road, Bombay.

I. NISHIMAKI,

Manager, Calcutta.

1-12-17,

Post Box No. 408, Clive street, Calcutta

THE BANK OF BARODA, LD.

Under the Patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja Gaekwar.

Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897

HEAD OFFICE BARODA.

Branches—Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, and Surat

Capital Subscribed.....Rs. 60,00,000.

Capital Paid up " 20,00,000.

Reserve Fund " 12,50,000.

DIRECTORS :

The Hon'ble Mr. Lallubhai Samaldas, C. I. E., Chairman
Sir Vithaldas Damodar Thackersey, Kt.

Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti Nagar Sheth, Baroda.

Sheth Manilal Revadas, Vadnager.

Rao Bahadur Gunajirao B. Nimbalkar, Sur Subha, Baroda State.

Bhaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., Advocate, High Court, Bombay.

M. H. Kantavalla, Esq., Agent, Maharaja MMI Co., Ltd. Baroda.

B. R. Shirgeokar, Naib Subha, Baroda State.

A. N. Datar, Accountant General, Baroda State.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balances from Rs. 200 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest which does not come to Rs. 8 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application. C. E. RANDLE, General Manager. 15-4-12.

THE CENTRAL BANK OF INDIA, LTD

Subscribed Capital... .. Rs. 50,00,000

Paid Up Capital " 49,59,900

Reserved liability of

Shareholders " 25,00,000

Reserve Fund " 6,00,000

Head Office:—Alice Building, Bombay.

Local Branches:—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar, (3) Share Bazar.

Branches:—Amritsar, Calcutta, Delhi, Jharis, Karachi.

London Agents—London Joint City and Midland Bank, Ltd.

Current Accounts—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June
2½ % allowed on Daily Balances from July to December.

12 months Deposits received at 5 % per annum.

Long and Short period Deposits received at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking Business transacted.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA,

Manager.

25-2-17

THE BANK OF TAIWAN, LTD.

Incorporated by Special Charter of the Imperial Japanese Government, 1899.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 60,000,000
Paid-up CapitalYen. 87,500,000
Reserve FundYen. 7,030,000

Head Office:—Taipei, Formosa.

BRANCHES:—

LONDON	SHANGHAI	TOKIO
NEW YORK	HONGKONG	OSAKA
AMOI	SINGAPORE	KOBE
CANTON	SOERABAJA	YOKOHAMA
FOOCHOW	SEMARANG	AKO
HANKOW	MAKUNG	GIRAN
KIUKIANG	BATAVIA	KAGI
SWATOW	PINAN	KARENKO
TAINAN	SHINCHIKU	KEELUNG
TAKOW	TAICHU	TAMSUI

The Bank has also a large number of Correspondents at Home and Abroad.

Current Deposit Accounts—are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at 2 per cent. per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 1,00,000 provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of Banking and Exchange business transacted.

K. TAKEMURA,

Manager

9-12-17.

56, Esplanade Road, Fort, BOMBAY

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

Established 7th September 1906.

Incorporated under the Indian Companies' Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE:

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.

Capital Subscribed Rs. 2,00,00,000

Capital Called up „ 99,00,000

Reserve Fund „ 64,00,000

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½% p. a. throughout the year. On sums exceeding Rs. 1,00,000 interest is allowed by special arrangement. No interest will be allowed which does not amount to Rs. 8 per half year.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short periods @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

“Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application”.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, & CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stocks at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

H. P. STRINGFELLOW,

Manager.

15-1-11.

A Lady's Best Ornament is a Glorious Head of Hair.

A profusion of rich, soft silky, lustrous, wavy hair—where's the woman who would not like that?

There's only one oil that makes such hair and it's the far-famed

KAMINIA OIL
(Regd.)

Invaluable for ladies, and just as much for Brain-Workers and Students.

Heated head cooled, aching disappears and dandruff becomes a thing of the past. Added to all these it possesses a beautiful fragrant smell.

For superiority, awarded a Gold Medal at the Mysore Exhibition, and in great demand all over the country.

If you have not yet used KAMINIA OIL, you

have missed a fine delight and a real boon; use it now, if only once; and like many people you will prefer to use also always.

Price per bottle, Rs. 1. V. P. Charges. 6 annas extra

Price for 3 bottles Rs. 2-10. V. P. charges 14 annas extra

Write now, Do not delay.

Sole Agents:—

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,
(5-8-16) No. 155, Jumma Musjid Market, BOMBAY.

Now-a-Days.

All things have advanced in price. Even the vegetable ingredients used in our Atank Nigrah Pills have advanced in price.

Even the labourers demand heavy wages being dearer. Even the users have increased yet the Atank Nigrah Pills for Toning up the system are sold at before war price i. e. at a Rupee.

Valdya Shastri

Manishanker Govindji,

Atank Nigrah Pharmacy,

Head Office:—Jamnagar—Kathiawar.

Branch:—Kalbadevi Road, Bombay.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours, Publish Fine Art Pictures, & c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours,
1-12-10. HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS.

ROYAL TONIC PILLS

powerful Nutritious and Strength Restorer. Price Rs. 1-4 per bottle of 30 Pills.

PREPARED BY—GOVINDJEE DAMODER & Co.,

Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Commission Agents.
1-12-10, No. 3 Sutar Chawl Market, BOMBAY.

Timely advice to the Wealthy

Costly but certain remedies are in the long run cheaper than cheap and uncertain ones.

KANDARPA SANJIVINI PILLS AND OIL

are the safest and surest remedies for indigestion constipation, loss of appetite, memory, mental, physical and nervous debility and all sorts of urinary disorders, improve impoverished blood.

Price per tin of 40 Pills Rs. 5 & per tola of Oil Rs. 10.

Both Purchased at a time Rs. 11/4 -

Medical Advice and a Medical Book containing 128 pages sent Gratis and Post Free.

RAJ. VAIDYA NARAYANJI KESHAVJI

Head Office :- Jamnagar, Kathiawar, (India.)

Branch :- No. 187, Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY. 24-8-1919.

Empire Hindu Hotel

Opposite Victoria Terminus
Bombay.

(Central Situation)
Strictly Vegetarian
Charges Moderate

Fitted with
Electric Lift, Fans and Lights.

TELEGRAMS: } TELEPHONE

"FOOD," BOMBAY. } 2789.

22-8-19.

Saffron? Saffron?? Saffron?? ?
If you wish to buy genuinely pure and best Saffron it is
SUN

BRAND

SAFFRON

ONLY

It has been largely used by Jain Temples, Maharajas, Durbars, Hakims and Vaidyas all over the country for the last 75 year, and is well known for its purity and genuineness.

S. NARAYAN & Co.,
17-2-18 21, Humnabai Street, Fort Bombay.

"MESMERISM AND HYPNOTISM."

Complete Course Rs. 1-8 only. Contents: 1. Instructions. 2. Breathing Exercise or Yoga Practice. 3. Exercises to develop this will and memory. 4. Various Hypnotic processes. 5. To wake up a subject. 6. Clairvoyance. 7. Telepathy. 8. Levitation. 9. Wonderful methods of Hindu Healing. 10. Various diseases. 11. Hindu Catalapay or Marial alive. 12 The secret method of telling future events most wonderfully by the Indian Yogees without horoscope or birth time. Mr. Ratikantha Bhowmik, Head Master writes from Senhatiz on 12-10-19:—I have become successful hypnotist with the help of your course. The methods are far easier and simpler than in any other courses. Mr. B. Sitaramurti, B.A., B.L., Government pleader writes: Your book really reveals the wonderful hidden powers of man. The methods are of the easiest kind and the book in short is the best of its kind in the field.

THE EASTERN HYPNOTIC HOME,
P. O. Chodavaram, (Vizagapatam, Dh.)

"COMMERCE AND INDUSTRIES."

An Interesting Monthly Journal of Indian Material Progress.
Annual Subscription Rs. 10-0 and Single Copy Rs. 1 Post Free.

A Specially valuable advertising Medium.
Wanted Agents throughout India.
Address:—P. Box. No. 353, and 5 Mount Road Madras S. C. 12-10-19

HYPNOTISM

PERSONAL MAGNETISM,
WILL POWER,
NERVE FORCE—

Call what you will—

Is the intangible power that controls human destiny. It is the key to all business and social success. This power is no special gift of any one. It is latent in every one. We help you how to display it. By our system, you can learn in a few days at your own home and not only achieve success yourself, but you can influence the mind, health and actions of others to a remarkable degree.

Write immediately for our free booklet—The Pride of India.

THE LATENT LIGHT CULTURE,
TINNEVELLY, S. INDIA.

Battiwala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 1 each bottle of 100.

Battiwala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 2 each bottle of 100.

Battiwala's Ague Mixture of Fever, Malaria, Influenza etc.

Battiwala's Ague Pills for Malaria, Fever, Influenza etc.

Battiwala's Tonic pills for pale people & nervous breaks down.

Battiwala's Tooth Powder of Preserving Teeth

Battiwala's Ringworm ointment for Ringworm Dhobi Itch etc.

May be had from all dealers in medicines or from
Dr. H. L. Battiwala Sons & Co., Ltd.
No. 12, Worli, 18, Bombay.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESS:—"Doctor Battiwala Dadar"

THE BOMBAY CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK.

HEAD OFFICE Apollo Street, St., Bombay.

DIRECTORS:—The Hon. Sir Fazulbhoj Currimbhoj (Chairman), Sir Vitthaldas D. Thackersey, the Hon. Mr. Lalubhai Samsidas, Sir Stanley Reed, the Hon. Mr. O. V. Mehta, the Chief of Ichalkaranji, G. K. Devadhar, Esq., the Hon. Sir P. D. Pattani, the Raja Sahab of Malegaon.
Share Capital (full paid) Rs. 7,00,000

1 Deposits fixed for one year and shorter or longer periods, are accepted. Rates and other particulars may be ascertained from the notes signed.

2 The Bank finances only registered Co-operative Societies in the Bombay Presidency on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency.

3 Accounts are audited half-yearly by a special Government Auditor, and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the "Bombay Government Gazette," 20-8-17. VAIKUNTH L. MERTHA, Manager,

Clean
 Wholesome
 Intelligent
 Entertainment
 IS A GREAT STEP
 IN

SOCIAL REFORM.

When deciding on a
 PLACE OF AMUSEMENT TWO
 ESTABLISHMENTS

Should at once leap to the mind,

THE EXCELSIOR
 BOMBAY'S PREMIER MODERN THEATRE

AND

THE EMPIRE
 BOMBAY'S MOST PALATIAL
 PICTURE THEATRE

Where Film Plays of Distinction are shown
 Every Week.

A

Great Cinema Masterpiece
 is shown,

Both theatres are near the Bori Bunder
 and are run by the

EXCELSIOR SYNDICATE.

The Pioneer of Bombay's

AMUSEMENT WORLD.

FURUKAWA & CO.

TOKIO

The Largest Manufacturers
in the East

OF

ELECTRIC BARE COPPER CONDUCTORS,

ELECTRIC UNDERGROUND CABLES,

ELECTRIC INSULATED WIRES,

ELECTRIC ACCESSORIES,

INGOTS, RODS, WIRES,

SHEETS, TUBES,

Etc., Etc.,

All our wires are made in accordance with the standard of the British Cable Makers' Association and are tested and approved by leading firms in India.

SOLE AGENTS IN INDIA AND BURMA.

TATA, SONS & CO.,

BOMBAY & CALCUTTA.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS Ltd.

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.
Narsari Building, Fort, BOMBAY.

Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

11-8-17.

When YOUR EYES

need to be examined by QUALIFIED OCULISTS and by SCIENTIFIC REFRACTIONISTS of 26 year experience, FREE OF CHARGE, you cannot do better than GO TO

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR & CO.

The leading firm of Oculists, Eyesight Specialists, Manufacturing Opticians and suppliers of the patented

"KRYPTOK"

(Invisible one-piece bifocal lens.)

Toric, and all kinds of lenses,—Cylindrical, Spherical, cylindrical, Prismatic, &c., from pebbles as well as from best quality crown glass.

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR

Eyesight Specialist,

With 26 Years' Practical Experience.

Holds Exceptional Testimonials from H. H. The Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, the Hon'ble Sir Lawrence Jenkins the Hon. Mr. Justice Batty, Mrs. Batty, the Hon. Sir N. S. Chundavarkar, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beaman, the Hon'ble Sir S. L. Bachelor, the Hon'ble Sir John Heaton Mr. M. G. Gell, M. V. O., Col. R. H. Forman, B. A. M. C., P. M. O. Bo. Brigade, Lieut. Col. G. H. Bull, M. D., I. M. S., Lieut-Colonel Peters M. B., I. M. S., and other high personages.

(7) 379, HORNBY ROW,

Opposite the Government Telegraph Office,
Fort, BOMBAY.

INTENDING ASSUREES ARE INVITED TO COMPARE THE RATES AND CONDITIONS OF

The Empire of India Life Assurance Company, Limited.

WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.

Head Office II Elphinstone Circle, BOMBAY.

SEE REPORT AND OPINIONS OF THE PRESS AS TO THE REMARKABLE PROGRESS MADE BY THE COMPANY.

ENDOWMENT NON-FORFEITABLE POLICY FOR RS. 3,000.

PAYABLE AT AGE 60 OR AT DEATH, IF PREVIOUS, WITH PROFIT.

If, at any time, the assured under this plan should desire to cease paying any more premiums, he can obtain a paid-up Policy for such a proportion of the original sum assured as the number of premiums paid bears to the number agreed upon. Thus a gentleman who had assured at age 30 for a Policy of Rs. 3,000 payable at age 60 or at Death, if previous, after 5 year payments, would be entitled to a Free paid-up Policy for Rs. 500 free of future payments.

MONTHLY PREMIUM.

AT AGE 20, Rs. 6-9-0.

AT AGE 25, RS. 7-5-0.

AT AGE 30, RS. 8-14-0.

AT AGE 35, Rs. 10-13-0.

AT AGE 40, Rs. 13-12-0.

AT AGE 45, Rs. 18-10-0

SOME OF THE DISTINCTIVE FEATURES.

Funds invested in Government Securities and in accordance with the Indian Trusts Act

Policy holders can appoint their own Directors.

90 per cent. of Profits to Participating Policy holders.

Lapsed policies revived without Medical Certificate.

Liberal Surrender Values 40 per cent. of the Tabular premium paid.

Immediate payment of Claims.

Medical fees and stamps on Policies are payable by the Company.

The sum assured is PAYABLE IN FULL should death occur even immediately after payment of the first premium.

GRANTER INSURANCE.—This Company issues Guaranteed Policies in situations of trust and responsibility. It is specially authorized to guarantee the employes of the Post Office

Proposal Forms and full Particulars may be obtained from any local Agent in India or from 22-9-10.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER. Contract Rates for Advertisements.

Number of Insertions.	1 Inch.		2 Inches.		3 Columns.		4 Columns.		5 Columns.		Pages
	Rs.	s.	Rs.	s.	Rs.	s.	Rs.	s.	Rs.	s.
13	11	0	16	0	20	0	30	0	50	0	87	0
25	16	0	25	0	30	0	50	0	87	0	155	0
52	25	0	38	0	50	0	87	0	155	0	300	0

Casual advertisements at Rs. 4 per line for the 1st insertion and Rs. 2 per line of succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-year or yearly in advance.

IN INDIA

EVERY ONE KNOWS.

whom it does concern that we are foremost in supplying the best

COSSI SILK SUIT PIECES

suitable for the season. These pieces are strong, fancy and durable, and have been specially manufactured for India's Market. Each piece guaranteed for One Suit Complete.

Price Rs. 10 per piece.

Write to—THE BHARGAVA COMMERCIAL SOCIETY,

2-18.

Benares City.

WONDERFUL TONIC AND

MOUTH-REFRESHER

JINTAN.

This is a safe and efficient remedy in all kinds of diseases or disturbances of the digestive organs. It is composed entirely of VEGETABLE INGREDIENTS made from the prescription of the following eminent medical men viz—
NORHIRO MIWA, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy,
ZENJIRO INOUE, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy
 and testified as to its efficacy by
Baron J. MATSUMOTO, M. D., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Army.
T. MITAMURA Esq., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Navy.

As a digestive it is unequalled and will not disturb the functions of the most delicate stomach. Its antiseptic properties render it very efficacious in warding off disease and at the same time it imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath of the user.

By virtue of its aroma, it effectually makes the odour of Tobacco and Alcoholic Spirits.

It acts beneficially on the vocal cords and has found much favour with public speakers, actors, singers and those whose vocation necessitates a severe strain on the throat.

GOOD FOR

Billiousness, Headache, Vertigo, Nausea, Indigestion, Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, etc., etc.

To maintain general health 2 to 3 pills may be taken occasionally, well masticated.

Price—Small Packet Rs. 0-1-0. Middle Packet, with Tin case., Rs. 0-4-0. Large Packet with fancy case., Rs. 1-0-0

Prepared by Messrs. MORISHITA Co., OSAKA, JAPAN.

Sole Agents: Jintan Agency (G. R. Chaubal), Juma Masjid, BOMBAY.

FOR PAINS,
AND ACHES
SPRAINS ETC.
USE:—

AMRUTANJAN.

The magical pain balm extant. Cures all aches & pains. Costs 8 As. Sold everywhere.

ON DUTY!

THE YOUNG COLLEGIATE IS OUT.
 An educational Monthly for Young and Old.
 Editor—Mr. B. S. NIMBARKAR.

The "It's of it:—

1. If you are a Student, it will help you to the Examination. Half because your professors contribute to it.
2. If you are an active worker, it will show some field for you to solve problems, because it contains articles of your readers.
3. If you are an artist, it is illustrated for you.
4. If you are a Social reformer, it will discuss all problems of Social reform and will give you views of male and female reformers.

Whatever you are, the Monthly gives you whatever you want.
 Annual Subscription Rs. 3. Single Copy Annas 8.

Wanted Agents throughout India.
 For advertisement rates & other particulars apply to—
S. A. DANGE,
 Manager.

Young Collegiate Office,
 Sandhurst Road, Bombay No. 4.
 14-12-19.

DENTISTRY.

Extractions Painless;
 Terms Very Moderate;
 Gold Crown, Bar and
 Bridge Work a Speciality
 (teeth without plate);
 Latest Successful Treatment
 for Pyorrhoea (pus in gums).

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

Hours: 8-1-20 & 5-7-20; Daily.
 (Sundays—From 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.)

ADROOS BUILDING,
 NEW CHARNI ROAD,
 GINAGOR, BOMBAY. } 1-6-19.

K. R. AMAT,
 Surgeon Dentist.

THE INDIAN * SOCIAL * REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY MORNING.

Office:—EMPIRE BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD, FORT.

Editor:—K. NATARAJAN

Vol. XXX. BOMBAY—SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1920. No. 22.

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard."
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

The Late Lady Chandavarkar. Late Mrs. Narottam Morarji, Is India Ripe for the Party System? A Moderate Leader on Party Politics. The Montagu Memorial Movement. A Sequel to the Newington Tragedy. Hindu and Christian Toleration. The Kundanmal Girls' School.	The Bombay Prarthana Samaj. Orthodox Hinduism Penitent. Industrial and Commercial Conference. Commercialised Vice. Accommodation on G. I. P. Railway. The Hindu Appreciation of Christ. The Indian National Social Conference. To Sincere Social Reformers.
--	---

Late Mrs. Narottam Morarji. We deeply regret to announce the death after a day's illness of Mrs. Narottam Morarji, the wife of our well-known mill-owner and distinguished citizen. The Chandavarkar and Morarji families have been most intimately connected by ties of friendship for many years. Sir Narayan and Lady Chandavarkar have been looked up to as their deepest well-wishers by the Morarji family. We cannot help feeling that the sudden and untimely death of Mrs. Narottam is to no small extent due to the severe shock caused by Lady Chandavarkar's death.

NOTES.

The Late Lady Chandavarkar: Lady Lakshmbai Chandavarkar died on Monday night after an illness of several months, borne with exemplary courage and equanimity. Unflinching in her devotion to the ideal of Hindu womanhood, she combined with it to a rare degree the larger outlook and the broader conception of women's place in society, which are conspicuous features of modern life. She had too strong a character merely to acquiesce in the bold and striking departures from orthodoxy of which Sir Narayan Chandavarkar set the example in so many directions. She thought out the problems involved in them patiently for herself, and her sympathetic attitude to social reform was the result of convictions she had formed as the result of her own thinking. Fastidiously shrinking from every one and every thing with the faintest suggestion of unwomanliness, she upheld by precept and example the rights and claims of Indian women to take their full share in movements for national regeneration. She was, till ill-health obliged her to give up all public engagements, the life and soul of many women's institutions, philanthropic and educational, and had a wonderfully clear grasp of the details of their working. Her judgment was always valued for its clarity and wisdom by her co-workers. Her death leaves a gap in the ranks of our women leaders which cannot be easily filled. In private life, Lady Chandavarkar's distinguishing characteristics were a deep solicitude for every one in her very large circle of relatives and friends. She never missed a single opportunity of showing that she felt with and for them in all their joys and sorrows and even when she was ill, she could with difficulty be deterred from performing what she regarded as a duty she owed to them. Every one who knew her will miss the gracious presence, and the always helpful counsel of the noble lady who has passed away. The loss to the bereaved husband and children is too deep for words.

Is India Ripe for the Party System? New India (Madras) writes in its issue of the 24th January. "We do not know if the Leader, which has frequently written on the inevitability of party politics in democratic life, means that the time is now ripe for the country to plunge into party politics. But, generally speaking, the opinion has been confined to the Extremists who have declared that not a single Moderate should get into power. At any rate to that end their efforts will be directed. Those who speak of party divisions accept the responsibility also of producing party programmes. Can it be contended that on questions of sanitation, agriculture, education, co-operation and the like, programmes of work can be put forward to which all cannot subscribe? Obviously only when progress has been made to a certain extent will our political life branch off into parties."

A Moderate Leader on Party Politics. Dewan Bahadur Ramchandra Rao, one of the Moderate delegates to England speaking at Masulipatam a few days ago, took the same view. He considered that while the Nationalists and the Liberals differed in National Politics on the value of the Montagu-Chelmsford Report he could not see much difference between what a Liberal or a Nationalist could achieve in the Council. He thought that any possible practical programme of work in the Council to be framed by a Liberal or a Nationalist cannot be very much different from the other. The Nationalist programme for elementary education or for industrial expansion or for sanitation or for the betterment of the Depressed classes cannot be anything different from those of the Liberals. Under these circumstances he failed to see the soundness of the cry now that has been raised. Moreover the electorates have not been formed and it is idle to say that there is an electorate now in existence or likely to come into existence. There are no political organisations as yet in the country to form the backbone of any party in the electorates. He therefore thought that political parties with definite political programmes would emerge only after one or two terms of the new councils and till then it will be wise to send into the Council the best talent available.

The Montagu Memorial Movement. The promoters of the Montagu Memorial movement have wisely given up the idea of a personal memorial to Mr. Montagu in favour of one in commemoration of the passing of the Reform Act and Mr. Montagu's splendid work in connection therewith. The memorial is to take the form, first, of some object of public utility and, secondly, a monumental work of art to be erected on a suitable site and associated with the name of Mr. Montagu. It is undeniable that Mr. Montagu's work in connection with the Reforms has been such as to deserve recognition in India.

A Sequel to the Newington Tragedy: The Madras papers state that the project of converting Newington College, the school for Zemindar's sons, where the Principal was shot dead some months ago, into a Rajkumar College has been put off and that the scholars who remained at the school have been distributed among the educational institutions in and about Madras. We are sure that they will learn in contact with their fellow-students more than they would have ever learnt in the isolation of a Rajkumar College.

Hindu and Christian Toleration: The following paragraph from the Roman Catholic weekly the Standard (Madras), is interesting as a specimen of casuistry, and may be useful for future reference: "We are willing to make a present of the fact that we as Christians are 'anti-every-other religion' to the Indian Social Reformer. But we should like to define the character of our opposition to other religions. What opposition there is, is a pure, disinterested, intellectual opposition to any creed which is not such a complete account of religion as the religion of Christ. We are opposed to Hinduism, we do not hate Hindus. It is not so with the Hindu attitude to Christianity in India. Hindus are sympathetic to Christianity but they do not like its spread in their country. They are tolerant towards Christ but not towards Christians. They like Christianity in the abstract but dislike Christians in the concrete. The sub-conscious feeling behind the desire to Indianise Christ is the feeling that Christianity is the religion of the foreigner and the pariah. Christianity must be made respectable before Hindus will look at it. Now this is not exactly a vulgar anti-Christian spirit. But it is the patronising air of the super-man which is more hateful than the honest hatred which is a compliment between man and man." Mr. Manilal Parekh's suggestive letter which we publish today propounds a different view of the matter.

The Kundanmal Girl's School: We have perused the eighth report of the Kundanmal Girls' School, Hyderabad, Sind, with much interest. The School is in its fifteenth year, and presents the too familiar spectacle of a Girls' School overflowing with pupils but in want of resources and in debt. A Boys' School which was similarly full would be self-supporting. We are inclined to think that managers of Girls' Schools do not realise that a good many more people nowadays are willing to pay reasonably high fees for the schooling of their daughters than was the case some years ago. The report, lamenting the failure of two girls in the Matriculation, complains that the University does not see its way to make a little, "just a little concession," in the matter of grace marks in favour of girls who labour under several disadvantages. We recognise that girls labour under a great many disadvantages, but, in the long run, we think that the strictness of the University is beneficial to them. Parents should see that school-going girls are relieved of some at least of the disadvantages from which they suffer. We are glad to see that the managers attach importance to good furniture, building and playground, and to the need of keeping out noises and smells from the class rooms. It is impossible to turn out good work in circumstances of positive physical discomfort—a truth which is too little recognised by Indian managers of schools.

The Bombay Prarthana Samaj: The following short history of the Bombay Prarthana Samaj, taken from the 52nd annual report, will be found interesting: "The Samaj was established on 31st March 1837 (Falgun Vadya Ekadashi) for the spiritual worship of One true God in place of the worship of many gods and goddesses. Its purpose and principles were the same as those of the Brahma Samaj that was established in Calcutta by Raja Ram Mohan Roy in 1830. Its founders were Dr. Atmaram Pandurang Turknad, Messrs R. V. Madgaokar, W. B. Navarange, B. M. Wagle, B. H. Bhagvat, N. M. Parmanand and others who were later on joined by the late Hon. Mr. Justice M. G. Kanade, Dr. R. G. Bhandarkar, and Mr. V. A. Modak, and others. This Samaj has not identified itself with any of the three sections of the Bengal Brahma Samaj, yet it is in no way different from the Brahma Samaj movement except in name, for its principles, aims and objects are the same. This Samaj is highly indebted to the Brahma leaders of Bengal, past and present, for the help that they have always given it and the bond of spiritual and social brotherhood which they have sought to strengthen between this Samaj and the Brahmos in other parts of India." The Samaj maintains the Ram-Mohan English School, a Night School, the Bhandarkar Free Library and Reading Room, and the Orphanage and Foundling Home at Pandharpur. The Arya Mahila Samaj is an institution conducted by ladies belonging to the Samaj. The Bombay Prarthana Samaj carried on some famine relief work during the year.

Orthodox Hinduism Penitent: We are pleased to read the following editorial note in the current number of the Mahamandal Magazine, the organ of Sri Bharat Dharma Mahamandal, Benares: "It is clear to men of ordinary understanding that that country alone attains progress where the women will have no sorrows. If you leave India and look at other countries, you will see to what extent women are free from sorrows and to what extent the country has advanced in the path of progress. How can we prosper who have brought the women to the present condition of degradation, though knowing that they are the mothers of the future generations? How can we prosper having subjected them to manifold sorrows and practically ruined them? Do you know why the Indians living in India are deteriorating both in physique and mental vigour day by day? Though arrived in this insufferable condition we have not learnt the causes of this condition but are acting like one who having cut a big tree at the trunk got smashed by its fall. If we want to be happy through wisdom, or through wealth and zeal, we must know that it is by keeping the women in comfort and free from pain. Again, in what miserable and degraded state are the Hindu widows especially of higher classes, kept in our society? We generally take no care for them, we generally take no interest in them, no thinking about them for their progress and prosperity. Take the case of the case of the poor, helpless Hindu widow. They are utterly neglected; they are subjected to undergo hideous physical ugliness and are treated worse than the dogs that watch our doors—an object of ill-omen and curse."

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1920.

INDUSTRIAL AND COMMERCIAL CONFERENCE.

Fifteen years ago the Industrial Conference was started and it used to be held, like the National Social conference, along with the National Congress. The credit of originating this movement and of conducting it as General Secretary for several years belongs to Rao Bahadur R. N. Mudholkar. Four years ago at the instance chiefly of Sir Fazulbhoj Currimbhoj the Indian Commercial Congress was inaugurated in Bombay. As might have been expected, the two movements have been amalgamated and a joint session of the two bodies was held on the 23rd and 24th January in Bombay. By a formal resolution the two bodies have been amalgamated and henceforth the combined movement will be known as the Indian Industrial and Commercial Congress. Mr. Jehangir B. Petit, as Chairman of the Reception Committee, welcomed the delegates in a trenchant speech criticising the policy of the Government in regard to several features of its fiscal policy. Mr. Petit's criticisms reflect a widespread feeling in the country. He summed up his views in the following forcible sentences :

"When one comes seriously to consider the entire policy adopted in the past by the Government of India and England, under one pretext or another towards the trades and industries of this country, one cannot escape the inevitable conclusion that both these Governments are not always serious in the oft repeated professions of solicitude for the mercantile and industrial welfare of this country. The new era that has now dawned, will, I sincerely hope, mean a different, and may I add a more honest and straight-forward attitude towards India."

Mr. Petit's observations on the Labour problem were lamentably one-sided and superficial. His advice to those whom he called pseudo-philanthropists was gratuitous to say the least of it. It is difficult really to take him seriously when he insinuates that those who show sympathy with mill operatives are doing so "on the off chance of becoming popular heroes". Nothing can be in greater and more refreshing contrast to Mr. Petit's interested onslaught on those who plead for just and humane treatment for factory-workers than the thoughtful and wise observations on the same topic in the presidential address.

Sir Fazulbhoj Currimbhoj presided over the joint session and his presidential address while lacking no whit in incisiveness and point, was characterised by true statesmanship and breadth of view. His address traversed nearly the whole commercial and industrial field, and while expressing lively appreciation of the brighter side of Indian fiscal policy, put the case and the claims of India for just treatment with force and dignity. Speaking of Indian fiscal autonomy, Sir Fazulbhoj thought that the recommendation of the Joint Parliamentary Committee though it fell short of full fiscal freedom was a real first step towards it. Not that he was insensible to the possibility of the concession being whittled down by a narrow interpretation being put upon the two conditions affixed to it. It will be remembered that fiscal autonomy has been promised to India subject to the reservation that any measure not consistent with the international obligations of the Empire or was opposed to the fiscal arrangements within the Empire to which His Majesty's Government was a party, might be disallowed by the Imperial Government. Sir Fazulbhoj said :

I am sure there is no need for us to give the assurance to the British public that India will exercise her fiscal power with due regard to all her obligations to the Empire. There are several questions, for instance, the abolition of the excise duties on the manufacture of cloth, whereon the Government of India and Indian commerce and industry are at one, although an autocratic Secretary of State may be given an elastic meaning to the proviso above referred to; and though there may be occasions on which the Government of India and the Imperial Legislative Assembly may not agree—at least as long as the constitution of the Central Government remains as it is—yet I hope that the concessions secured will prove fruitful.

One of the most striking passages in Sir Fazulbhoj's address is his reply to those who hold that the commerce and industries department of Government should not be transferred to Indian control.

Of the trade and industry if this were made a transferred subject. It is, unfortunately, a peculiarity of this country that exotic trade and industry think their interests demand that the administration of trade and industries should be in hands other than Indian. Indians have proved their capacity to hold the highest positions under the State. They have proved also their fitness to establish and manage commercial and industrial enterprises of a great magnitude. I do not know in what words to characterise the attitude of those people who, in face of this tangible evidences of the fitness of Indians to manage above all the departments of commerce and industries, seek to make out a case against transferring these branches of the administration to Indian control. In fact, I go further and say that the backward condition in which India finds herself in regard to her industrial growth is due to the official machinery being in the hands of the members of the Indian Civil Service who, in the majority of cases, are practically out of touch with the realities of Indian trade and industries. British trade and British industry flourish in all countries, even where they have no preponderating voice; I see no reason why in a self-governing India they should be threatened with any risk. In fact, the greatest argument against this outside contention is afforded by the experience of several newly started industrial and commercial concerns a majority of which have decided to adopt British management.

It should not be thought however, that Sir Fazulbhoj is oblivious of the need for encouraging Indian talent and initiative in industrial matters. He is too strong a nationalist to ignore the fact that foreign management of Indian industries can be but a transitional device. The true objective of the Indian industrialist was that stated by Mr. Petit in his address, in his characteristic uncompromising style. Said Mr. Petit.

If India is to be industrially great and self-supporting the whole country should be studded with industrial concerns and should be entirely under Indian ownership, should be manned by Indians from end to end and should be financed only with Indian money.

Sir Fazulbhoj as we said is not oblivious to this aspect of the matter. Speaking of the new Industries department in the Government of India he said :

What, I hope however, in this connection is that Government will not overlook the claims of Indians for employment to the different services to be created, as I venture to believe that an Indian agency is best suited to the staffing of such an organisation as the Department of Industries. Sins of omission on this score are sometimes belittled under the plea of the absence of suitable men. With the establishment of technical and technological colleges and the opening of Government and Railway workshops for the apprenticeship of Indians, such a plea will not hold good. It is moving in a vicious circle, surely, to refuse appointments to Indians on the ground of their want of experience and then to put bars against their getting such experience.

Sir Fazulbhoj's indignant protest against the shameless attempt to oust Indians from East Africa is worth quoting.

Unfortunately, even after the great services India rendered to the British Empire in clearing East Africa of Germans, the fate of our Indian brethren there is at present far worse than it was in pre-war days. You must have recently read the pathetic message of the Rev. C. F. Andrews regarding the condition of Indian settlers in East Africa. One cannot maintain calmness of mind when he perceives that Indians who have contributed their utmost to the development of East Africa, who were the first settlers in the country and who co-operated during the war to such large extent, are now threatened with eviction and deprivation of all their rights and privileges through the narrow vision of British settlers. The grounds adduced for such action are the most damaging to our self-respect; and all our countrymen should raise a united protest against the unjustifiable allegations made by a handful of European settlers to serve their own interest. The Congress is vitally concerned in this question for Indian traders and merchants had no little hand in developing East Africa, and I hope that you will all support the resolution which will be placed before you dealing with this subject.

We have already referred to Sir Fazulbhoj's wise remarks on the Labour problem. He rightly referred to the housing question as a very important issue of that problem. Good housing, as he said, will do much to improve and stabilise our labour; it has direct bearing on the efficiency of the labour for efficiency is attainable only through the establishment of healthy living conditions. The enthusiastic praise which he bestowed on His Excellency the Governor for his deep interest in the housing problem will be endorsed by everyone in Bombay.

We have no space left for the resolutions passed at the joint session. But we must not omit to refer with intense satisfaction to the resolution which demanded that total prohibition should be the goal of our excise policy. Hindu and Muhammadan sentiments are strongly in favour of total prohibition. Several Christian Missionary Conferences have passed resolutions supporting it; Indian political, social reform and temperance conferences have done the same; and now the best and most influential industrial and commercial opinion in the country has, from a purely business point of view endorsed this demand. It behoves the Government of India to give some early proof of its responsiveness to Indian opinion on this vital question. We quote below the text of the resolution :

This Conference urges that in view of the great benefits to trade and industry which have already been secured by the United States of America through their prohibition of liquor and in view of the fact that the efficiency and welfare of Indian Labour have greatly suffered through the liquor traffic, the Government of India should set before themselves the early adoption of the policy of total prohibition of the manufacture import and sale of liquor in the country for intoxicating purposes."

COMMERCIALIZED VICE.

CAN IT BE MADE ILLEGAL ?

(BY Mrs. F. S. HALLOWES,)

This crusade is to raise public opinion against Commercialized Vice or Prostitution, an ancient and deeply entrenched evil, which blights every country, even the most civilized. Evils, as old as prostitution, have given way before an enlightened public opinion. Our fathers uprooted the enormous upas of slavery! As reformers, lecturers and writers were needed to set forth the enormity of slavery, so are they needed to advance against this evil of commercialized vice. Mr. Alexander Coote, that veteran worker of the London Vigilance Association, and of the Bureau for the suppression of the White Slave Traffic, declares—that if a law were passed prohibiting the buying and selling of woman's honour, the result will be :—

- (1) To abolish the prostitute.
- (2) To close markets for vice.
- (3) Places of amusement would be purified.
- (4) Disorderly houses would cease to exist.
- (5) Vested interests in immorality would die out.
- (6) The procurer and the bully would be no more.
- (7) The White Slave Traffic would be killed.
- (8) The most fruitful source of contagion in venereal diseases would be cut off.

It is perfectly safe to say that were it not for the money, a very large percentage of girls and women would never be tempted to leave the path of virtue. For they are subject to penalties, while there is no corresponding punishment for the profligate man who buys their services. Commercialized Vice or prostitution is a regular business, employing many hundreds of thousands of women; it is the business of supplying sexual gratification for payments made. It is carried on in various ways according to the class of the trade; but much of the business is done by tempting innocent girls and women into houses of ill-fame, or by causing ruined girls and women to walk the streets. Those engaged in its conduct, regard it as a regular business; in its higher walks it is even most carefully organized—and in very many cases, the prostitute is not so much making her living as earning a dividend, or making a living for some man or woman in the background. It must not be thought that all prostitutes are tricked into the life. In some nations, and in some of the lowest classes, prostitution is looked upon as an ordinary method of increasing the weekly earnings of the family. In other cases, sheer starvation forces many to prostitute themselves, so that their babies, or sick or lazy husbands, may have bread and shelter. Others of low morals or weak intellect, deliberately choose the life. The great majority enter it under 18 years of age, many in actual childhood. It is said that 25 per cent. are of weak intellect. Lecky in his "History of Morals" writes about the prostitute: "She is the most mournful and awful figure of history." Most mournful because few girls enter this awful abyss until they have been seduced. A frequent crime of lovers is seduction. Lovers are often "worse than murderers," for their desertion of the girl means, that she sinks into a hideous infamy from which society bare her return. A vast proportion of those whose reputations have been blasted by a momentary sin, and are doomed to extremity of life-long wretchedness, are not those who are incapable of virtue, they have been led astray more by the ardour of affection, and ignorance, than by vicious propensities. Infected by venereal disease, they become loathsome creatures, not wanted even by the lowest. Dead to honour and heaven, they commit suicide or die a premature death; their career being about five years.

RESCUE.

Good women and righteous men, have for centuries past put forth efforts to pluck these "brands from the burning." But they have dealt with results rather than with causes; they have, to use a homely simile, "been mopping up the floor instead of turning off the tap." The tap being the demand for such women! What heroic sacrifices have been made! What magnificent work has been done in thus "mopping up the floor"! Time forbids to tell of the Societies and Federations, and Homes, Preventive as well as Rescue, which the nineteenth century set on foot for this purpose. The Acts of Parliament put in force for the protection of women and children would take many pages to describe. Good people, philanthropists, and statesmen, have made frantic, but futile, efforts to destroy the effect of immorality, without dealing with the chief cause. Society is like the foolishly-fond mother who shields her son by ascribing his vices to everything but the right cause. So the law imposes restriction on every one but the authors of the evil. "History shows that punitive measures against the woman alone, are powerless to raise the moral level; they merely add the guilt of injustice and cruelty to man's share in the sin." "It has been said with justice, that if it is true that prostitutes must exist in order to preserve the parity of other women, then they should be given a highly-honoured place, as one who sacrifices her very self for the good of Society."

ONE-SIDED LEGISLATION.

Must be changed for legislation which shall penalise both the profligate man who buys a woman's honour for immoral purpose, and the profligate woman, who sells it. For the woman may now be prosecuted and fined for solicitation, while the man who solicits may not be touched. Profligate men have so long been legally immune from the consequences of their immorality, that the mere suggestion of giving them the same treatment as their companions in sin, appears to them to be an unjustifiable and vindictive attack upon their rights. How the law differentiates, may be seen in the raiding of gambling houses and the raiding of brothels. In the former, both men and women are arrested and charged. In the latter, although the man-profligate, by his presence, proves his guilt, he is not interfered with! Not even the knowledge that prostitution is the chief source of venereal diseases, this curse of the innocent as well as of the guilty, has induced our legislators to penalize Commercial Vice! Dr. W. Osler, describing the diseases which are the greatest scourges of the human race, wrote of venereal diseases: "They are in one respect the worst we have to mention, for they are the only ones transmitted in full virulence to innocent children, to fill their lives with suffering; and which involve equally innocent wives in misery and shame." The veil of secrecy stamps this vice as shameful. Evil rarely assumes such inveterate and perverting form, as when it is shrouded in obscurity and veiled by a hypocritical appearance of innocence. Those who demand prostitutes, vainly imagine that they remain unknown.

ALCOHOL AND COMMERCIALIZED VICE.

There is a historic connection between Alcohol and Commercial Vice, and a wider understanding of this fact would give an added zest to the propaganda for the prohibition of the Liquor Traffic. Alcohol is the indispensable adjunct of prostitution. The depravity in human nature is stimulated and kept alive by strong drink. Even a slight exhilaration from alcohol relaxes the moral sense. It "quiets the conscience, quickens the passions, and quenches the reason" of both young men and women. Girls are drawn into a bad life by means of strong drink. They live under its influence day and night. They are expected to sell liquor to their patrons, and to be "treated" by them. The profit on these sales of liquor can be traced in connection with Commercialized Vice in every country. The use of strong drink prevents men from practising self-control, keeps morality at its present low standard, and causes the hideous trade of prostitution to flourish.

WANTED ORGANISED ACTION.

Sin is organised, we must also organise for good. No haphazard attack will succeed. Re-construction of the social order is not possible unless a great phalanx stand shoulder to shoulder against the common foe. We summon to our ranks every chivalrous man and every good woman who love their children, their country, and their God. If these stand aloof, who will procure a safer, cleaner world for the young lives which are thronging up from the gates of birth? "Every obstacle, moral as well as physical to the health and happiness of the people, must be removed," wrote England's Premier. Shall we not incur a great responsibility, if we do not demand that this obstacle be taken away? As mothers and wives, the work of raising public opinion against the continuance of this obstacle to the health and happiness of their children and husbands, is our plain duty. We call upon every man who bears office in Government, be it national, provincial, or municipal, to demand legislation which shall be a deterrent to vice and disease. The State finds it necessary to enact stringent laws against murder and theft: these undoubtedly act as deterrents, though they do not abolish killing and thieving altogether. We ask for a deterrent of prostitution as absolutely necessary to the Public Health of India. Legislation which shall teach the young men of India that purity is as essential in the father as in the mother: that awful is the crime of being an unclean channel through which the current of polluted life flows to descendants.

ACCOMODATION ON G. I. P. RAILWAY.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

I travelled from Secunderabad to Bombay on the 21st January. As soon as I came to Wadi, "The Bombay Mail" which had three III class compartments and the rest I and II classes, was signalled line clear, after removing one III class compartment, detaining about 108 passengers, leaving them to suffer heavy cold. Passengers who were men, women and children, who had purchased Mail Tickets and who had to go long distances, were not only inconvenienced, but also left without food. The suffering of the poor and rich passengers, where there is no hotel on this G. I. P. Railway is indescribable. I do not know whether the G. I. P. Railway authorities have authorized the Wadi Station Staff to remove the III class compartment Truck, detaining all passengers to suffer hunger, cold &c

PULLAPAN RANGANDRIAS.

Jan. 25th, 1920.

Land Lord, KARNOOL.

THE HINDU APPRECIATION OF CHRIST.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

Will you kindly allow me to say a few words on this subject? The word "Avatar" is very loosely used by the majority of Hindus, and this is due chiefly to most of the Hindu thinking being monistic in its character. This persistent habit of looking at things in this way, the way of Vedant, makes most people entirely overlook the serious differences that have been made between one Avatar and another by such Theistic schools of thought as the Vaishnava. Most of these schools, which alone can consistently use that term, look upon only Krishna as the Purna Avatar, and others as Amsha Avatars. This practically means that Krishna is the Avatar for them in the same sense in which Christ is the Avatar for the Christian. But even the way of looking at avatars as Purna and Amsha shows that the heaven of monistic thought is not quite absent.

On the other hand, the Christian conception of Avatar is altogether qualitative. The Christians can say however that God, though He incarnated Himself in Jesus Christ alone, did speak "by diverse portions and in diverse manners" not only in the Jewish Prophets, but in the Teachers of other nations as well. This can be understood as Amsha Avatars if we use the term Avatar loosely. Christian thinkers in the past have looked upon even Socrates and Plato in this light and the Roman Church has even canonised Buddha under a different name. There is nothing in Christianity itself, whether of the New Testament or of the Early Fathers, Medieval Mystics or Modern Scholars, to make "anti-every-other-religion." It appears as such in India because it came with what is called "Dissidence of Dissent and Protestantism of the Protestant" allied to what I may call Europeanism of the European.

MANILAL PAREKH.

THE INDIAN NATIONAL SOCIAL CONFERENCE

We print below the full text of the resolutions passed at the last National Social Conference held at Amritsar, with the names of the speakers:

CONDOLENCE RESOLUTION

That this Conference places on record its sense of great loss sustained by the cause of social reform movement by the very sad deaths, during the past two years, of three veteran social Reformers (1) Rao Bahadur Vama Rao Kolhatkar of Nagpur, (2) Rao Bahadur K. Veeresh Lingam Pantakoo of Rajamahendry in Madras Presidency both of whom presided over the sessions of the National Social Conference and (3) Rai Bahadur Mangoo Mal of Lahore. The lives of these three great social workers were devoted to the uplift of Indian womanhood and especially to the cause of the remarriage of widows and their names will be remembered with gratitude by all who are interested in the cause of social Reform in India.

(Moved from the Chair and passed in silence standing).

SCOPE OF SOCIAL REFORM.

That this Social Conference, recognising the fresh life opened out to the country by the new era upon which it is entering and the urgent call that fresh life makes for the Social Reconstruction of India's National life, is of opinion that the term "Social Reform" should be widened so as to comprehend, besides the items of reform hitherto advocated by the Conference, those additional measures which are necessary for the development of the Industrial, Economic, Sanitary, and educational interests of the Indian people in rural and urban areas and towards that end the Conference resolves that an all India Council of Social Conference consisting of about 100 willing workers all over the Country be formed and the General Secretary in Bombay and other Secretaries of the National Social Conference with the help of the Provincial Secretaries newly appointed be empowered to move in that matter, to concert measures for propaganda and practical work all over the Country in that behalf, collect the necessary funds, and take such steps as may be deemed useful in furtherance of the specific object.

Proposed by Mr. K. Nataraajan B. A. (Bombay) in English.

Seconded by Mrs. Avantikabai Gokhale (Bombay) in Hindi

Supported by Dr. Satyapal (Amritsar) in Hindi.

THE STATUS OF INDIAN WOMEN AND THE IMPROVEMENT OF THEIR POSITION

That this Conference, at this important stage in India's national development, emphasizes the need for improving the status of women in India in such a way as to enable them to participate fully in the progressive national life of the country and to achieve this end urges the quick abolition of such evil customs as stand in their way of full growth such as (1) early marriages, (2) Pardah system, (3) the practice of extortionate dowries &c, &c., and speedy promotion of education and wider culture among women these being so very necessary for the growth of public spirit and national service, and the raising of the marriageable age of girls to at least, 16.

Proposed by Srimati Miss Lajjavati Devi (Jallandhar City) in Hindi Seconded by Dr. Keshav Dev Shastri M. D. (Delhi) in Hindi

THE EDUCATION OF WOMEN.

(a) That while expressing satisfaction at the progress of education among women in this country though slow and small, this conference strongly urges upon the attention of Government and the people the great and urgent need for much larger and speedier expansion of the elementary and higher education among women and specially calls upon Government to make more liberal grants of funds to provide ample suitable facilities such as girls' schools in rural areas, Girls' High Schools in urban areas and Arts, Training and Medical Colleges for Women. Copies of this Resolution be sent to the Imperial and all provincial Governments in the Country.

Proposed by—Rai Bahadur Sunder Das Suri M. A. (Lahore) in Hindi.

Seconded by—Bakshi Gopal Dass Raies (Amritsar) in Hindi.

(b) That the custom of pardah should be done away with as it has no definite legal sanction.

Mrs. Hसरत Mohani (Aligarh) in Urdu. Read a paper on Pardah and its evils.

RE-MARRIAGE OF WIDOWS AND THE WORK OF PUNJAB VIDHVA VIVAHA SAHAYAK SABHA OF LAHORE.

That this Conference welcomes the growing support to the widow remarriage movement in the Country and appreciates the work of the Punjab Vidhva Vivaha Sahayak Sabha, and further urges upon other social reform associations throughout the Country to follow its example and to co-operate with it in extending its sphere of activities in other Provinces so as to carry on more active propaganda on the subject of widow remarriage and to enlist practical sympathies of the people to the cause of improving the lot of poor widows by the advocacy of remarriage.

Proposed by Lala Khushalchand (Lahore) in Hindi.

Seconded by Pandit Thakur Dutt (Lahore) in Hindi.

Supported by Rao Sahab Kashiram Suri (Lahore) in Hindi.

THE EDUCATION AND TRAINING OF WIDOWS.

That in order to ameliorate the condition of widows and to enable them to utilise their talents and services for the benefit of the Society on the basis of a self-reliant and self-respecting life this Conference recommends very strongly the establishment of institutions for their education and training and to achieve that purpose expresses its high appreciation of the existing institutions like the widows' Home at Poona, Madras, Mysore, Ludore and Cawnpore and commends the efforts that are being made in this direction by the Poona Seva Sadan, Bombay Seva Sadan, and the Vaidya Vishram of Bombay and Surat and Ahmedabad. It further highly appreciates the recent endowment of Rai Bahadur Ganga Ram O. I. E., M. V. O., to promote the widows' cause as announced by Sir Edward E. Maclagan in his recent coronation address.

Proposed by Mr. G. K. Devadhar M. A., Honorary Organiser & General Secretary of the Poona Seva Sadan (Poona) in Hindi.

Seconded by Lala Mukund Behari Lal (Meerut) in Hindi.

Supported by Rai Sahab Dr. Murari Lal (Cawnpore) in Hindi.

ABOLITION OF CASTE AND INTER-CASTE MARRIAGES.

That in the opinion of this Conference the system of caste, as it prevails in the Hindu Society, constitutes a serious obstacle to the growth of a social, industrial and National life on sound lines, the Conference, therefore, urges upon Social Reform Associations all over the Country as well as other public bodies and workers in the cause of social reform the necessity of sustained endeavours for the abolition of caste by measures such as inter-dining, inter-marriages &c. &c.

(Moved from the Chair.)

THE ELEVATION OF THE DEPRESSED CLASSES.

That in the opinion of this Conference the position of the depressed classes in the Hindu community is very distressing and the main difficulty in the way of their elevation and social improvement is untouchability. This Conference, therefore, while appreciating the measures taken so far by Government and a number of Religious Bodies and Social Reform Associations for their uplift is still of opinion that the action taken is quite inadequate to meet the serious needs of the problem affecting a large portion of the Hindu population. This Conference, therefore, urges upon Government, Social Reform Associations, Religious Reform Associations, and philanthropic bodies, the need for providing greater facilities for their education, economic and sanitary improvement and thus make it easy for the question of untouchability to be solved and to enforce equality of treatment in all public institutions so as to remove the prejudices and disabilities of untouchableness attaching to them.

(Moved from the Chair.)

TEMPERANCE WITH A VIEW TO TOTAL PROHIBITION

In the opinion of this Conference the evil of drink increasing in the Country needs to be attacked vigorously with a view to securing its total prohibition, and therefore, urges upon the Government and public bodies to carry on a vigorous propaganda to check the evil and to strive for securing its total abolition by legislative and other measures at an early date.

(Moved from the Chair.)

WOMAN FRANCHISE.

That this Conference accords its hearty support to the demand for the enfranchisement of Indian Women. This Conference while expressing its regret and disappointment at the fact that this claim has not been conceded in the new Government of India Act, trusts that no time will be lost in affording the necessary facilities to Indian womanhood in exercising the ordinary rights of citizenship for which the Conference notices with great satisfaction a genuine desire on the part of women themselves. This resolution should be submitted to the proper authorities.

(Moved from the Chair.)

APPOINTMENT OF A GENERAL SECRETARY, TWO ASSISTANT GENERAL SECRETARIES OF THE NATIONAL SOCIAL CONFERENCE AND PROVINCIAL SECRETARIES.

That the following gentlemen be appointed as General Secretary, Assistant General Secretaries and Provincial Secretaries as shown below:—

GENERAL SECRETARY.

Sir Narayan G. Chendavarkar, Bombay.

ASSISTANT GENERAL SECRETARIES.

Mr. G. K. Devadhar M. A., Bombay and Poona. // ✓

Mr. D. G. Doshi M. A., LL.B., Bombay.

PROVINCIAL SECRETARIES.

Bombay	... K. Natarajan.
Madras	... Hon'ble S. Srinivasa Iyengar.
Bengal	... Sir P. C. Ray, Calcutta.
United Provinces	... The Hon'ble Mr. C. Y. Chintamani, Allahabad.
Punjab	... Lala Lajpatrai Sahni, B. A., Lahore.
Central Provinces	... The Hon'ble Mr. M. V. Jishi B. A. LL.B., Nagpur.
Mysore	... M. Ram Rao, Bangalore.
Cochin	... To be nominated hereafter.
Hyderabad (Deccan)	... Mr. M. A., Hydari, Hyderabad.
Baroda	... Dr. S. B. Sament Balukram Mehta.

Indore ... Dr. V. A. Sakhtankar.
Gwalior ... To be nominated hereafter.

(Moved from the Chair).

CONSTITUTION FOR THE CONFERENCE AND ORGANIZATION OF ITS WORK.

That the General Secretaries of the Conference and the Provincial Secretaries newly elected be requested to make a report to the next Conference regarding the question of framing a constitution for the Conference and also the question of better organization of the Conference in consultation with the leaders of Social Reform movement in all provinces and to bring into being a council of National Social Conference with a view to organizing the work of social reconstruction on national lines all over the country by selecting an influential and representative body of men and women numbering about one hundred and the General Secretaries in Bombay should be authorized to take the initiative in this matter and collect the necessary funds for the work outlined, and adopt measures for achieving the object in view.

(Moved from the Chair).

VOTE OF THANKS TO THE RECEPTION COMMITTEE.

That a hearty vote of thanks be accorded to the Reception Committee of the National Congress for the loan of the Pandal for the purpose of the session of the National Social Conference.

Proposed by Mr. G. K. Devadhar M. A., (Bombay) in Hindi,

Seconded by Prof. Ruchi Ram Sahani M. A. (Lahore) in Hindi,

VOTE OF THANKS TO THE PRESIDENT.

That a most hearty vote of thanks be accorded to the President of this Conference for presiding over this great gathering.

proposed by—Mr. G. K. Devadhar M. A., (Bombay) in Hindi.

Seconded by—Prof. Ruchi Ram Sahani M. A., (Lahore) in Hindi.

TO SINCERE SOCIAL REFORMERS.

The Editor, The Indian Social Reformer.

Sir,

With the kind indulgence of your numerous readers, I beg to open a new subject—a question that has but just been thrust into prominence by the exigencies of the times through which we are passing and the truth of which is gradually being brought home to all thinking minds. It has apparently, one thinks, nothing to do with the world crisis; but in fact the proper solution of it can alone save a community from certain destruction in the grave and perilous situation the whole civilised world is to-day facing. We have before us this moment the unprecedented and inspiring scene of a whole world exerting its best to recover its lost balance. This process of rehabilitation is in some cases carried on almost in a feverish haste as in Russia, and the result is Leninism, which, to use the words of Sir Narayan Chandavarkar in another context, is simultaneously "a caste, creed and a curse." It is at present aiming at world-mastery and bids fair to succeed benefiting by the befogged brains of more than nineteenth of mankind, befogged both by the misery it has suffered and the system of its sudden deliverance! To come to the point, I wish to impress, this new theory of mob-rule paraded at times under the guise of Democracy, is both a challenge and a threat to wealth and art, religion and morals—law and etiquette. Great minds in all nations are busy finding out what can assure their safety and guarantee, their resurrection from this universal death! We in India have been fighting for political reforms and we have just received a first instalment of the same. Whether that much be sufficient as some assert or be too little as others declare is beside my aim in writing this letter. I am sure like all my political friends that soon India shall possess all the most up-to-date paraphernalia of a modern Democracy. But I beg to inquire whether that alone can make for 'Indian Renaissance.' To one who has read history, and more, who can prophesy for the future on the strength of the past, it will be perfectly plain that the political form of government is only one of the many factors that can either make or keep a nation free and happy. All this lengthy diversion may to some appear unnecessary as the truth of these statements is accepted on all hands. So, by way of an apology I must say that acceptance in theory is one thing and to put it into action is quite another. There is before us at present a large school of politicians which wherever cornered by this kind of potent reasoning pretends to espouse the cause of Social Reform—that sure, great, and the most important foundation of a people's health and happiness—but observed by its undying bias it fights might and main to frustrate every practical measure of reform! Social Reformers! Pray, enough of this self-deceit. Lions among you have laboured life-long sowing seeds of healthy life but the seedlings have been walled away by gales of passion and prejudice! A whole harvest thus dreamed and forgotten! That attitude of mincing matters must now be given up. Social Reformers must themselves be a party now. A perfect solid phalanx with an undivided mind and purpose. They must speak in no uncertain word what they think 'must be done.' Political squabbles, personal jealousies and party bickerings, all these and more must be clear out of their path. They must be willing to join hands with all who believe in their faith. They must utilise to the fullest extent every opportunity whether political, economic, or religious that may arise. For their task is all too inclusive and their identity both this or that political school has but hindered their success so far. With those who would have none of Social Reform till they get complete Home Rule we can have nothing to do. With the others we shall be for him who bids higher. For that we must have strength of number, organisation, argument and action. I feel quite sure that such an opinion is fast being developed. It will be a new spirit, a fresh platform of love and amity work and no ostentation. Let not ragged old disputes damn our efforts. Nation-building was never a simple game. It was never a platform of abuse and recrimination. Such a party as I find springing into life to-day will purify our political life, it will rejuvenate religion, it will mend morals and will altogether make India a far happier and greater nation with a strong foot-hold in the present and an inspiring prospect in the future as she has behind her a grand and a noble past. So a strong organisation must be formed forthwith and a persistent propaganda set on foot. We must be prepared to secure full premises of progress along social times from all those who wish to enter the new Councils. And for that steps must at once be devised to strengthen our position. Will all Social Reformers rise like one man and achieve it? I hope they will.

S. G. BHAT.

B. A. LL. B.

Vakil High Court,

Poona 18th Jan. 20.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postages
In advance. In arrears.

Per annum..... Rs. 5-0-0. Rs. 6-0-0

Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, twelve shillings (Rs. 6).

Single copies of the current year can be had at 4
annas each and any back copies at 6 annas each.

The following two books on trade and industries, by J. L. Duvell, M. A. V. P., are indispensable to every English-knowing Indian gentleman:—

(1) Vyapar Mitra.—It consists of 4 parts containing more than 326 original recipes for making marketable articles for trade, such as Soap, Varnish, Polish, Ink, Sealing Wax, Rubber Toys, Imitation Gold, Silver, Pearl, Ruby, Coral, etc., Cigarettes, Matches, Carbon Paper, Pocket Press, Buttons, Gilding Powder, Hair Killer, Hair Oils, Scent, Syrups, Essences, Medicines, etc., etc. Price Re. 1, V. P. As. 2.

The book "First Lessons in Photography" will be given free to every purchaser of Vyapar Mitra.

(2) Trade Secrets or How to become healthy and wealthy.—This book consists of 10 parts of chapters, each dealing with a series of articles on trade and industries, such as perfumery, dairy farming, agriculture, manures, etc. It also deals with cattle and human diseases with suitable prescriptions for all of them. Besides, collection of several hundreds of other useful informations and money-making secret formulas and processes have greatly increased the usefulness of the book. Reduced prices Re. 1, V. P. As. 2.

N. B.—On account of the scarcity of paper, the next edition of these books is not expected soon, hence to avoid disappointment send for them to-day.

Address:—MANAGER, THE WALKER PRESS,
MAINPURI U. P.

SELF-GOVERNMENT IN ANCIENT INDIA

BY

M. V. GOPAL RAO.

"India is no stranger to Self-rule"

"Kings elected by the people."

"Kings deposed for mis-rule."

"King to exercise executive functions only."

"Taxation with the consent of the people."

"Doctrine of the sovereignty of the people recognised."

"Divine right no personal attribute to kings."

MODERN REVIEW:—"This neatly printed pamphlet of 24 pages makes an admirable attempt to show that Self-rule was not a strange thing in India in olden times."

Price As. 4 Four annas only. V. P. Charges extra.

Apply to:—

ANDHRA GRANDHA RATNAGARAM,

4-1-20.

Pithapuram, (Godavari Dt.)

"PEEPS INTO THE FUTURE"

Is everybody's everyday book. The codified experience of generations of Astrologers and Indian Yogis—an astrologer in moments of anxiety & suspense—answers short and succinctly clear on the thousand and one points of doubt and uncertainty. Everybody may consult the book—no date of birth or horoscope necessary. Must be in every pocket for it suits all. Price one rupee only. Foreign two shillings. Apply to the Proprietor.

TATA MYSTIC ASTRAL STUDIO

24-8-19.

Chodavaram, Visagapatnam District.

WANTED.

For the Bombay Municipal Schools Committee:

(A) One Urdu knowing and one Gujarathi knowing Office clerk well up in English (Metric or School Final preferred) on Rs. 30-3-45-5-2-50 plus Rs. 20. War allowance p. m.

(B) One Marathi knowing and one Gujarathi knowing teacher i. e. two in all for each of the following:

(a) Indian Music and Harmonium playing.

(b) Drill (must know English and have experience)

(c) Drawing (must have passed the teachers' or the 4th Year Painting Examination)

(d) Sewing (wanted a lady).

(e) Knitting (wanted a lady knowing Knitting on machine too)

(f) English in Girls' Schools (wanted a lady and must have studied upto Metric)

The salary of the first three kinds of teachers shall be Rs. 40-4-100 p. m. and of the last three kinds Rs. 30-3-75 p. m. plus Rs. 16- War allowance p. m. in each case.

Apply sharp to:

The School's Committee's Office)

D. G. Padhye,

Bombay (1). 26-1-1920) Secretary, Schools Committee.

NEW INDIA ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.

Authorised Capital Rs. 20,00,00,000

Subscribed „ 11,86,84,250

Paid Up „ 1,18,68,425

DIRECTORS.

Sir D. J. Tata, Kt., (Chairman)

Sir Sassoon David, Bart., (Vice Chairman)

The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoj Currimbhoj, Kt., O. B. E.

Sir Henry Procter, Kt., C. B. E.,

Sir S. B. Bharucha, Kt.,

The Hon'ble Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas, C. I. E.,

Kai Bahadur Jamsalji Bachhrji.,

Ramnarain Harnandrai, Esq.,

R. D. Tata, Esq.,

B. J. Padshah, Esq.,

The Hon'ble Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna,

The Hon'ble Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas, C. I. E.,

A. J. Bilimoria, Esq.,

F. E. Dinehaw, Esq.,

On and after 2nd FEBRUARY the Company will be prepared to accept Fire and Marine risks at current rates of premium.

TEMPORARY OFFICES

Waterloo Mansions, Mayo Road, Bombay.

Chief Agents:—Tata Sons, Ltd. Navsari Buildings, Hornby Road.

London Agents:—Sedgwick Collins (Agencies) Limited
4, Moorgate Street, E. C. 3.

R. P. GANDHI.

Secretary.

GALE'S MAGAZINE.

Linn A. E. Gale, Editor and Publisher.

Champion of Socialism, New Thought, Occultism
Internationalism and Birth Control

Contains such articles as:

"The Birth Pangs of Revolution"

"The World That Is To Be"

"The Psychic Meaning of the War"

"Judas Iscariot and the Bolsheviki"

"Are We Hypnotized?"

$ 2 year, American money. $ 1 for 6 months
20c. a copy. No Free Samples. Remit by bank draft on New York or personal check.

GALE'S MAGAZINE,

P. O. Box 518

2-19-19.

Mexico City, D. F., Mexico.

THE TATA INDUSTRIAL BANK, LD.

HEAD OFFICE, BOMBAY.

BRANCHES—CALCUTTA and HYDERABAD (Deccan)
CANNINGPORE and LUCKNOW.

Sub-Branches—

Bombay—Share Bazaar, Shroff Bazaar.

Calcutta—Barn Bazaar.

London Agents. LLOYDS BANK LIMITED.

NEW YORK AGENTS: THE GUARANTY
TRUST COY. OF NEW YORK.

AUTHORISED CAPITAL... Rs. 12,00,00,000.

SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL... .. 7,56,00,225.

PAID UP CAPITAL... .. 1,50,99,225.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Sir D. J. Tata, Kt., Chairman.

Sir Sassoon David, Bart.

Sir R. N. Mookerjee, K. C. I. E.

Sir Francis Stewart, Kt.

Sir Henry Proctor, Kt.

R. D. Tata, Esq.

F. E. Dinshaw, Esq.

F. G. Rivington, Esq.

Narottam Morarjee, Esq.

Hajee Gulam Mahomed Ajam, Esq.

The Hon'ble Mr. Purshottamdas Thakordas. C. I. E.

A. J. Billimoria, Esq.

Secretary, R. H. Parker.

Current Accounts opened and interest allowed on daily credit balances from Rs. 500/- to Rs. 1,00,000/- at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum. If the balance to the credit of any account does not fall below Rs. 25,000/- at any time between 1st January and 30th June, interest will be allowed during that period at 2½ % per annum. No interest is allowed unless the sum accrued amounts to Rs. 8/- Half-yearly.

Fixed Deposits. Interest allowed on Deposits fixed for one or two years and for shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank. Interest allowed on Savings Bank Accounts at 4 per cent per annum. Rules may be obtained on application.

Loans and Cash Credits are granted on approved securities.

Purchases and sales of Securities and shares effected.

Bills of Exchange purchased and collected and every description of Banking and exchange business undertaken.

14-4-18. L. D. L. BUCKLBY, General Manager.

THE YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK, LIMITED.

(Registered in Japan.)
Established 1880.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 48,000,000.

Paid up Capital.....Yen. 42,000,000.

Reserve Fund.....Yen. 28,100,000.

Head Office:—Yokohama.

Branches and Agencies at Bombay, Buenos Aires, Calcutta, Changchun, Chi-Nan, Dairen, Fengtien, Hankow, Harbin, Hongkong, Honolulu, Kaiyuan, Kobe, London, Los Angeles, Lyons, Manila, Nagasaki, Newchwang, New York, Osaka, Peking, Rangoon, San Francisco, Seattle, Shanghai, Shimonoseki, Singapore, Soerabaya, Sydney, Tientsin, Tokio, Tsingtao.

Current Deposit Accounts are opened for approved customers and Interest is allowed at the rate of 2 per cent per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 100,000, provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of banking and exchange business transacted.

N. IGARASHI

Post Box No. 207, Hornby Road, Bombay.

I. NISHIMAKI

Manager, Calcutta.

1-12-17,

Post Box No. 406, Clive street, Calcutta

THE BANK OF BARODA, LD.

Under the Patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja Gaekwar.

Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897

HEAD OFFICE BARODA.

Branches—Ahmedabad, Navsari Meshana, and Surat

Capital Subscribed.....Rs. 60,00,000.

Capital Paid up .. 10,00,000.

Reserve Fund .. 12,50,000.

DIRECTORS :

The Hon'ble Mr. Lallubhai Samaldas, C. I. E., Chairman
Sir Vithaldas Damodar Thackersey, Kt.

Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti Nagar Sheth, Baroda.

Sheth Manilal Revadas, Vadnagar.

Rao Bahadur Ganajiroo R. Nimbaliker, Sur Subba, Baroda State.

Bhaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., Advocate, High Court Bombay.

M. H. Kantavalla, Esq., Agent, Maharaja Mill Co., Ld. Baroda.

R. R. Shirgaoker, Naib Subba, Baroda State.

A. N. Datar, Accountant General, Baroda State.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balance from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest which does not come to Rs. 8 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application. C. E. RANDLE, General Manager.

THE CENTRAL BANK OF INDIA, LTD

Subscribed Capital... .. Rs. 50,00,000

Paid Up Capital 49,50,000

Reserved liability of

Shareholders 25,00,000

Reserve Fund 6,00,000

Head Office:—Alice Building, Bombay.

Local Branches:—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar, (3) Share Bazar.

Branches:—Amritsar, Calcutta, Delhi, Jharis, Karachi.

London Agents:—London Joint City and Midland Bank, Ld.

Current Accounts :—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June
2½ % allowed on Daily Balances from July to December.

12 months Deposits received at 5 % per annum.

Long and Short period Deposits received at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking Business transacted.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA.

Manager.

25-2-17

THE BANK OF TAIWAN, LTD.

Incorporated by Special Charter of the Imperial Japanese Government, 1899.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 60,000,000
Paid-up Capital.....Yen. 87,500,000
Reserve Fund.....Yen. 7,030,000

Head Office:—Taipei, Formosa.

BRANCHES:—

LONDON	SHANGHAI	TOKIO
NEW YORK	HONGKONG	OSAKA
AMOY	SINGAPORE	KOBE
CANTON	SOERABAJA	YOKOHAMA
FOOCHOW	SEMARANG	AKO
HANKOW	MAKUNG	GIRAN
KIUKIANG	BATAVIA	KAGI
SWATOW	PINAN	KARENKO
TAINAN	SHINCHIKU	KEELUNG
TAKOW	TAICHU	TAMSUI

The Bank has also a large number of Correspondents at Home and Abroad.

Current Deposit Accounts:—are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at 2 per cent. per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 1,00,000. provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of Banking and Exchange business transacted.

K. TAKEMURA,
Manager

9-12-17.

56, Esplanada Road, Fort, BOMBAY

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

Established 7th September 1906.

Incorporated under the Indian Companies' Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE:

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.

Capital Subscribed Rs. 2,00,00,000
Capital Called up ,, 99,00,000
Reserve Fund ,, 64,00,000

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½% p. a throughout the year. On sums exceeding Rs. 1,00,000 interest is allowed by special arrangement. No interest will be allowed which does not amount to Rs. 5 per half year.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short periods @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

* Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application".

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, & CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stocks at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

H. P. STRINGFELLOW,

13-1-11.

Manager.

A Lady's Best Ornament is a Glorious Head of Hair.

A profusion of rich, soft silky, lustrous, wavy hair—where's the woman who would not like that?

There's only one oil that makes such hair and it's the far-famed

KAMINIA OIL (Regd.)

Invaluable for ladies, and just as much for Brain-Workers and Students.

Heated head cooled, aching disappears and dandruff becomes a thing of the past. Added to all these it possesses a beautiful fragrant smell.

For superiority, awarded a Gold Medal at the Mysore Exhibition, and in great demand all over the country.

If you have not yet used KAMINIA OIL, you

have missed a fine delight and a real boon, use it now, if only once; and like many people you will prefer to use also always.

Price per bottle, Re. 1. V. P. Charges 6 annas extra.

Price for 3 bottles Rs. 2-10. V. P. charges 14 annas extra. Write now, Do not delay.

Sole Agents:—

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,
(5-8-16) No. 155, Jumma Masjid Market, BOMBAY.

Now-a-Days.

All things have advanced in price. Even the vegetable ingredients used in our Atank Nigrah Pills have advanced in price.

Even the labourers demand heavy wages being dearer. Even the users have increased yet the Atank Nigrah Pills for Toning up the system are sold at before war price i. e. at a Rupee.

Valdya Shastri

Manishanker Govindji,

Atank Nigrah Pharmacy,

Head Office:—Jamnagar—Kathiawar.

Branch:—Kalbadevi Road, Bombay.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours. Publish Fine Art Pictures, & c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.
1-12-10. HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS-

ROYAL TONIC PILLS

powerful Nutritious and Strength Restorer. Price Re. 1-4 per tin of 30 Pills.

PREPARED BY—GOVINDJEE DAMODER & Co.,

Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Commission Agents.
1-12-10. No. 3 Sutar Chawl Market, BOMBAY.

Timely advice to the Wealthy

Costly but certain remedies are in the long run cheaper than cheap and uncertain ones.

KANDARPA SANJIVINI PILLS AND OIL

are the safest and surest remedies for indigestion, constipation, loss of appetite, memory, mental, physical and nervous debility and all sorts of urinary disorders, improve impoverished blood.

Price per tin of 40 Pills Rs. 5 & per tola of Oil Rs. 10.

Both Purchased at a time Rs. 11/4--

Medical Advice and a Medical Book containing 128 pages sent Gratis and Post Free.

RAJ VAIDYA NARAYANJI KESHAVJI

Head Office :—Jamnagar, Kathiawar, (India.)

Branch :—No. 187, Kalbadevi Road,
24-8-1919. BOMBAY.

Empire Hindu Hotel

Opposite Victoria Terminus
Bombay.

(Central Situation)
Strictly Vegetarian
Charges Moderate

Fitted with
Electric Lift, Fans and Lights.

TELEGRAMS: } TELEPHONE

"FOOD," BOMBAY. } 2789.

22-8-19.

Saffron? Saffron?? Saffron???

If you wish to buy genuinely pure and best Saffron it is
SUN

BRAND

SAFFRON

ONLY

It has been largely used by Jain Temples, Maharajas, Durbars, Hakims and Vaidyas all over the country for the last 75 year and is well known for its purity and genuineness.

S. NARAYEN & Co.,
17-2-18 21, Humam Street, Fort Bombay.

"MESMERISM AND HYPNOTISM."

Complete Course Rs. 1-8 only. Contents: 1. Instructions. 2. Breathing Exercise or Yoga Practice. 3. Exercises to develop this will and memory. 4. Various Hypnotic processes. 5. To wake up a subject. 6. Clairvoyance. 7. Telepathy. 8. Levitation. 9. Wonderful methods of Hindu Healing. 10. Various diseases. 11. Hindu Catalepsy or Burial alive. 12. The secret method of telling future events most wonderfully by the Indian Yogees without horoscope or birth time. Mr. Ratikant Bhowmik, Head Master writes from Senhatiz on 22-10-19:—I have become successful hypnotist with the help of your course. The methods are far easier and simpler than in any other courses. Mr. B. Sitaramurty, B.A., B.L., Government pleader writes: Your book really reveals the wonderful hidden powers of man. The methods are of the easiest kind and the book in short is the best of its kind in the field.

THE EASTERN HYPNOTIC HOME,
P. O. Chodavaram, (Visagapatnam, Dt.)

"COMMERCE AND INDUSTRIES."

An Interesting Monthly Journal of Indian Material Progress.

Annual Subscription Rs. 10-0 and Single Copy Rs. 1 Post Free.

A Specially valuable advertising Medium.

Wanted Agents throughout India.

Address:—P. Box. No. 353, and 5 Mount Road
Madras S. C. 12-10-19

HYPNOTISM

PERSONAL MAGNETISM,
WILL POWER,
NERVE FORCE—

Call what you will—

Is the intangible power that controls human destiny. It is the key to all business and social success. This power is no special gift of any one. It is latent in every one. We help you how to display it. By our system, you can learn in a few days at your own home and not only achieve success yourself, but you can influence the mind, health and actions of others to a remarkable degree.

Write immediately for our free booklet—The Pride of India.

THE LATENT LIGHT CULTURE,
TINNEVELLY, S. INDIA.

Battiwala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 1 each bottle of 100.

Battiwala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 2 each bottle of 100.

Battiwala's Agee Mixture of Fever, Malaria, Influenza etc.

Battiwala's Agee Pills for Malaria, Fever, Influenza etc.

Battiwala's Tonic pills for pale people & nervous breaks down.

Battiwala's Tooth Powder of Preserving Teeth

Battiwala's Ringworm ointment for Ringworm

Dhobi itch etc.

May be had from all dealers in medicines or from

Dr. H. L. Battiwala Sons & Co., Ltd.

No. 12, Worli, 18, Bombay.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESS:—"Doctor Battiwala Dader"

THE BOMBAY CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK.

HEAD OFFICE Apollo Street, St., Bombay.

DIRECTORS:—The Hon. Sir Fazulbhai Currimbhoy, (Chairman), Sir Vithaldas D. Thackersey, the Hon. Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas, Sir Stanley Reed, the Hon. Mr. C. V. Mehta, the Chief of Ichalkaranji, G. K. Devadhar, Esq., the Hon. Sir P. D. Pattani, the Raja Sahab of Malegaon.

Share Capital (full paid) Rs. 7,00,000

1 Deposits fixed for one year and shorter or longer periods are accepted. Rates and other particulars may be ascertained from the under signed.

2 The Bank finances only registered Co-operative Societies in the Bombay Presidency on the recommendation of the Register, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency.

3 Accounts are audited half-yearly by a special Government Auditor, and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the "Bombay Government Gazette." 20-5-17. VAIKUNTH L. MERTA, Manager.

Clean
 Wholesome
 Intelligent
 Entertainment
 IS A GREAT STEP

IN

SOCIAL REFORM.

When deciding on a

*PLACE OF AMUSEMENT TWO
 ESTABLISHMENTS*

Should at once leap to the mind.

THE EXCELSIOR
 BOMBAY'S PREMIER MODERN THEATRE
 AND

THE EMPIRE
 BOMBAY'S MOST PALATIAL
 PICTURE THEATRE

Where Film Plays of Distinction are shown
 Every Week.

A
 Great Cinema Masterpiece
 is shown,

Both theatres are near the Bori Bunder
 and are run by the

EXCELSIOR SYNDICATE.

The Pioneer of Bombay's

AMUSEMENT WORLD.

FURUKAWA & CO.

TOKIO

The Largest Manufacturers
in the East

OF

ELECTRIC BARE COPPER CONDUCTORS,

ELECTRIC UNDERGROUND CABLES,

ELECTRIC INSULATED WIRES,

ELECTRIC ACCESSORIES,

INGOTS, RODS, WIRES,

SHEETS, TUBES,

Etc., Etc.,

All our wires are made in accordance with the standard of the British Cable Makers' Association and are tested and approved by leading firms in India.

SOLE AGENTS IN INDIA AND BURMA.

TATA, SONS & CO.,

BOMBAY & CALCUTTA.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS Ltd.

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd.
Narsari Building, Fort, BOMBAY.

Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad

11-8-17.

When YOUR EYES

need to be examined by QUALIFIED OCULISTS and by SCIENTIFIC REFRACTIONISTS of 26 year experience, FREE OF CHARGE, you cannot do better than GO TO

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR & CO.

The leading firm of Oculists, Eyesight Specialists, Manufacturing Opticians and suppliers of the patented

"KRYPTOK"

(Invisible one-piece bifocal lens.)

Toric, and all kinds of lenses,—Cylindrical, Spherical, Prismatic, &c., from pebbles as well as from best quality crown glass.

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR

Eyesight Specialist,

With 26 Years' Practical Experience.,

Holds Exceptional Testimonials from H. H. The Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, the Hon'ble Sir Lawrence Jenkins the Hon. Mr. Justice Batty, Mrs. Batty, the Hon. Sir N. S. Jhondavarkar, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beaman, the Hon'ble Sir S. L. Bachelor, the Hon'ble Sir John Heston Mr. H. G. Jell, M. V. O., Col. R. H. Forman, B. A. M. C., P. M. O. Bo. Brigade, Lieut. Col. G. H. Bull, M. D., I. M. S., Lieut-Colonel Peters M. B., I. M. S., and other high personages.

(7) 379, HORNBY ROW,

Opposite the Government Telegraph Office,
2-11-10. Fort, BOMBAY.

INTENDING ASSUREES ARE INVITED TO COMPARE THE RATES AND CONDITIONS OF

The Empire of India Life Assurance Company, Limited.

WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.

Head Office 11 Elphinstone Circle, BOMBAY.

SEE REPORT AND OPINIONS OF THE PRESS AS TO THE REMARKABLE PROGRESS MADE BY THE COMPANY.

ENDOWMENT NON-FORFEITABLE POLICY FOR RS. 3,000.

PAYABLE AT AGE 60 OR AT DEATH, IF PREVIOUS, WITH PROFIT.

If, at any time, the assured under this plan should desire to cease paying any more premiums, he can obtain a paid-up Policy for such a proportion of the original sum assured as the number of premiums paid bears to the number agreed upon. Thus a gentleman who had assured at age 30 for a Policy of Rs. 3,000 payable at age 60 or at Death, if previous, after 3 year payments, would be entitled to a Free paid-up Policy for Rs. 500 free of future payments.

SOME OF THE DISTINCTIVE FEATURES.

- Funds invested in Government Securities and in accordance with the Indian Trusts Act
- Policy holders can appoint their own Directors.
- 90 per cent. of Profits to Participating Policy holders.
- Lapsed policies revived without Medical Certificate.
- Liberal surrender Values 40 per cent. of the Tabular premium paid.
- Immediate payment of Claims.
- Medical fees and stamps on Policies are payable by the Company.

The sum assured is PAYABLE IN FULL should death occur even immediately after payment of the first premium.

GUARANTEE INSURANCE.—This Company issues Guaranteed Policies in situation of trust and responsibility. It is specially authorized to guarantee the employees of the Post Office

MONTHLY PREMIUM.

AT AGE 20, Rs. 6-9-0.

AT AGE 25, Rs. 7-8-0.

AT AGE 30, Rs. 8-14-0.

AT AGE 35, Rs. 10-13-0.

AT AGE 40, Rs. 13-12-0.

AT AGE 45, Rs. 18-10-0

Proposal Forms and full Particulars may be obtained from any local Agent in India or from 22-9-10. ALLUM, BHARUCHA & CO. Managers.

IN INDIA

EVERY ONE KNOWS.

whom it does concern that we are foremost in supplying the best COSSI SILK SUIT PIECES available for the season. These pieces are strong, fancy and durable, and have been specially manufactured for India's Market. Each piece guaranteed for One Suit Complete.

Price Rs. 10 per piece.

Write to—THE BHARGAVA COMMERCIAL SOCIETY,
2-16. Benares City.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER. Contract Rates for Advertisements.

Number of Insertions.	1		2		3		4		5
	Inch.	Rs. a.	Inches.	Rs. a.	Column.	Rs. a.	Column.	Rs. a.	Column.	Page
18	11 0	16 0	16 0	20 0	20 0	30 0	30 0	37 0	37 0	37 0
28	16 0	25 0	25 0	30 0	30 0	40 0	40 0	47 0	47 0	155 0
52	25 0	38 0	38 0	45 0	45 0	60 0	60 0	67 0	67 0	300 0

Usual advertisements at Rs. 4 per line for the 1st insertion and Rs. 2 per line of succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-year or yearly in advance.

WONDERFUL TONIC AND MOUTH-REFRESHER
JINTAN.

This is a safe and efficient remedy in all kinds of diseases or disturbances of the digestive organs. It is composed entirely of VEGETABLE INGREDIENTS made from the prescription of the following eminent medical men viz:—
NORIHURO MIWA, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy,
ZENJIRO INOUE, M. D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy
 and testified as to its efficacy by
Baron J. MATSUMOTO, M. D., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Army.
T. MITAMURA Esq., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Navy.

As a digestive it is unequalled and will not disturb the functions of the most delicate stomach. Its antiseptic properties render it very efficacious in warding off disease and at the same time it imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath of the user.

By virtue of its aroma, it effectually makes the odour of Tobacco and Alcoholic Spirits.

It acts beneficially on the vocal cords and has found much favour with public speakers, actors, singers and those whose vocation necessitates a severe strain on the throat.

GOOD FOR

Billionness, Headache, Vertigo, Nausea, Indigestion, Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, etc., etc.

To maintain general health 2 to 3 pills may be taken occasionally, well masticated.

Price—Small Packet Rs. 0-1-0. Middle Packet, with Tin case., Rs. 0-4-0. Large Packet with fancy case., Rs. 1-0-0

Prepared by Messrs. MORISHITA Co., OSAKA, JAPAN.

Sole Agents: Jintan Agency (J. R. Chaubal), Juma Masjid. BOMBAY.

At once broken here automatically

FOR PAINS AND ACHES SPRAINS ETC. USE:—

AMRUTANJAN.

The magical pain balm extant. Cures all aches & pains Costs 8 As. Sold everywhere.

ON DUTY!

THE YOUNG COLLEGIATE IS OUT.
 An educational Monthly for Young and Old.
 Editor:—Mr. R. S. NIMBKAR.

The "Ifs of it:—

1. If you are a Student, it will help you to the Examination Hall because your professors contribute to it.
2. If you are an active worker, it will show some field for you to solve problems, because it contains articles of your readers.
3. If you are an artist, it is illustrated for you.
4. If you are a Social reformer, it will discuss all problems of Social reform and will give you views of male and female reformers.

Whatever you are, the Monthly gives you whatever you want. Annual Subscription Rs. 3. Single Copy Annas 8. Wanted Agents throughout India.

For advertisement rates & other particulars apply to—

S. A. DANGE, Manager.

Young Collegiate Office, Saadburat Road, Bombay No. 4. 14-19-19.

DENTISTRY.

Extractions Painless;
 Terms Very Moderate;
 Gold Crown, Bar and Bridge Work a Speciality (teeth without plate);
 Latest Successful Treatment for Pyorrhoea (pus in gums).

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

Hours: 8-1-30 & 5-7-30; Daily.
 (Sundays—From 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.)

ADROOS BUILDING, NEW CHANNI ROAD, GINGAON, BOMBAY. } 14-19.

K. R. AMAT, Surgeon Dentist.

THE INDIAN * SOCIAL * REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY MORNING.

Office:—EMPIRE BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD, FORT.

Editor:—K. NATARAJAN

Vol. XXX. BOMBAY—SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1920. No 23.

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard."
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

Indians Overseas. The Deputation from British Guiana. The Newington Tragedy. The Non-Brahmin Question in Madras. The Viceroy and Indian Opinion. The Next Viceroy. The End of the Bombay Mills Strike.	The Indian Currency Committee Report. The Game of Politics. The Hindu-Muslim Unity. The Nickel Rupee Invention. A Christmas Message to India. Indian Currency Committee's Report. Appeal to Christian Humanitarians.
---	---

NOTES.

Indians Overseas. The problem of the position of Indians overseas is becoming acute. Only in one part of the British Empire, Fiji, has there been a gleam of light. All existing indentures have been cancelled in this island. The thanks of the Indian public are due first, to Mr. Andrews who called attention to the hardships of the Indian labourers in Fiji, and, next to the Government of India for their vigorous action in the matter. As if to make up for this slight gain, the position of Indians in the Crown Colony of East Africa is being seriously menaced by the interested agitation of white adventurers in that colony. The most extraordinary part of the affair is that these gentlemen profess to be moved by love of morality, the Indians being depicted as a depraved people. There is not a shred of evidence to show that the Indians are more depraved than the Europeans, and there is some evidence to show the contrary. Mr. Andrews sends us a statement by Dr. Albert Cook, O.B.E., in charge of the G. M. S. Hospital, Kampala, Uganda, in which he certifies that in his over 20 years' experience of the largest hospital in Uganda, it is his deliberate opinion that there is less venereal disease among the Indians resident in Kampala than in any other section of the community. On the strength of this unfounded libel, and on the familiar argument that the white man must live, whoever else may have to die, some white settlers in East Africa are agitating to ruin the Indians in that part of the British Empire. From South Africa, Mr. Andrews sends an alarming cable. No one is less of an alarmist than he, and we, for one, are quite sure that what he says in his latest cable is absolutely true. "Worst situation since 1913, every right endangered," he says, and no other evidence of this is needed than that the Government of South Africa which welcomed Mr. Gokhale and showed him every courtesy during his tour in South Africa, have declined to receive an Indian representative with Sir Benjamin Robertson except, if our information be correct, on humiliating terms. That shows the spirit now prevalent in responsible quarters, and there is no use being annoyed when we are told of things which disturb over complaisant belief that the world we live in is the best of all worlds.

The Deputation from British Guiana. At this juncture, there has come a deputation from British Guiana offering to receive five thousand Indian agriculturists every year for three years. A Committee of non-official Indian members of the Indian Legislative Council has been appointed to go into the matter. For our part, we are not against Indians going abroad to improve their fortunes, and if a suitable scheme can be devised, receiving just and equal treatment with all other British subjects, we see no objection and much advantage in encouraging Indian settlers to carry their culture and intelligence to other lands. The difficulty, however, lies in ensuring that the advantages held out are really granted. In Natal and East Africa, Indians had a great share in developing the countries, but what is their position to-day? The terms proposed by the deputation from British Guiana seem to be inviting on the face of them, but how far they represent real advantages can only be determined after careful enquiry. For example, the prospectus issued by the British Guiana representatives states that several acres of prepared land will be given free or at nominal rates to immigrant Indians. In the report of Messrs. MacNeil and Chimanlal, written about eight years ago, we read "very little land in this colony (British Guiana) can be occupied unless it is properly drained and irrigated. Holders of small allotments cannot be expected to combine to construct or maintain irrigation dams and channels and irrigation systems." What has been done since this report was made to improve drainage and irrigation? Those who drew up the prospectus do not seem to have perused the MacNeil-Chiman Lal report. If they had, they should have pointed out in what respects matters have improved since that report was written. Another point to be borne in mind is that the Indian's position to hold his own in other countries entirely depends on his being able to hold his own here. Paper promises are worse than worthless unless they are backed up by a determination on the part of the Government and the people of India to see them carried out in the spirit and to the letter.

The Newington Tragedy. The trial of the minor zemindar of Kadambur, a student of Newington School, Madras, accused of murdering the late Principal, Mr. De la Hey, was transferred to the Bombay High Court by order of the Government of India passed on the application of Counsel for the Defence, Dr. Swaminathan. The case was taken up on Monday at the Criminal Sessions, before the Chief Justice, Sir N. C. Macleod, and a special jury. After a four days' trial, the jury brought in a unanimous verdict of not guilty and the accused was acquitted and discharged. The verdict, we think, coincides with the impression left on the public mind by a perusal of the proceedings in the Bombay High Court as reported in the papers. The Chief Justice's summing-up was a powerful and searching criticism of the prosecution case, and the jury did not take more than a few minutes to make up their minds as to their verdict. The Madras investigating authorities have come badly out of the business, and we trust that the Government of Madras will not rest content till every one responsible for this cruel prosecution of an innocent boy is brought to book. The question remains, who shot Mr. De la Hey. A further question for the consideration of the Government of Madras arises from the revelations regarding the state of things in the Newington School. There were only nine students. A costly establishment was maintained for the benefit of the nine men, under European management and supervision. They were supposed to be imbibing the best features of an English public school education in this expensive establishment. What they were really imbibing there is hinted at in one or two remarks in the course of his lordship's able charge to the Jury. "The standard of truth did not appear to have been very high at Newington. Talavankottai was known as the champion liar at Newington. There is no champion unless there is a competition."

The Non-Brahmin Question in Madras: We are sorry to read in the Hindu (Madras) that at the Conference of Brahmins and non-Brahmins which met at the invitation of His Excellency the Governor of Madras to decide the question of reservation of seats in the territorial constituencies for non-Brahmins, no agreement was reached, and that His Excellency will report to this effect to the Government of India. If an arbitrator has to be appointed, adds our contemporary, it will probably be Lord Meston. We deeply regret that the repeated efforts of His Excellency the Governor of Madras—this, we believe, was the third—to get the question settled by a process of give-and-take, have failed. Whoever is responsible for the failure, has incurred a heavy responsibility. The non-Brahmins, we are glad, have been doing very well in the last Legislative Council as well as in the recent Municipal elections in Madras. All the six or seven nominations for the Indian Civil Service have gone to them this year. Considering that, of the seven successful candidates for the all-India open competitive examination for admission to the Indian Finance Department, as the results published last week show, three are, judging by their names, Madras Brahmins, it is evident that the selection entirely of non-Brahmins for the Indian Civil Service is really a triumph of the non-Brahmin movement. The following passage taken from a letter signed "Aggrieved Vellala" which appeared in Justice of the 31st January, however, portends a danger against which it behoves the leaders to guard the movement:

The Madras Government have ignored the Vellalas in selecting candidates for the Indian Civil Service. The selection though very laudable, so far as it goes, is defective in this respect. The West Coast is well represented, one of the nominees being the son of a member of an ancient royal family and the other a nephew of one who has rendered loyal service in the Judicial Department. The Midland and the Andhra Province are well represented too, for the Kamma Reddy and the Balija have been worthily selected. But the East Coast, Madras, and Southern districts, where reside some of the largest owners of the land, have been left in the cold. Even those who imagine that the Brahmin "is the intelligentsia" of the country often proclaim that the Vellala is next to the Brahmin. It cannot be said for a moment that the East Coast Vellala does not possess the requisite intellectual qualifications for the service.

The Viceroy and Indian Opinion: There has been a noticeable reaction in Indian public opinion in favour of the Viceroy as a result, primarily, of the extravagant denunciation to which His Excellency was subjected by some of the speakers at the Amritsar Congress. This has been appreciably assisted by Lord Sinha's tribute to Lord Chelmsford for his share in advancing the Reform Act. The Viceroy's speech at the opening of the Indian Legislative Council, we think, will greatly help the progress of this good feeling in the country. It was one of the happiest speeches which His Excellency has made in India. Lord Chelmsford has always seemed to us to observe a certain amount of detachment, not to say aloofness, from Indian interests but there is nothing of that in this speech where, indeed, he completely identified himself with Indian sentiments and aspirations. Some papers said that the appointment of Sir Sankaran Nair to the India Council was a slur on His Excellency's Government. Lord Chelmsford told the Council that he himself had strongly supported the proposal to make the appointment. It is impossible to say that we are in calm waters as yet, but we believe that the situation today is more propitious for a good understanding between the Viceroy and the people, and we earnestly trust that the best use will be made of it. General sympathy will be felt for the Viceroy in the death of his brother, reported last week.

The Next Viceroy: We hope there is no truth in the rumour that Field Marshal Earl Haig has been offered and is likely to accept the Viceroyalty of India in succession to Lord Chelmsford. Apart from the disadvantage of having an absolute stranger at the head of the Government at a time when so much has to be done in the way of putting the reforms in train and preparing for the reception of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the objections which Lord Morley urged against the appointment of a soldier-Viceroy in the person of Lord Kitchener apply with manifold greater force to the appointment of Earl Haig. It will be misunderstood both in India and the outside world in a way which will be exceedingly unfortunate. If a change in the Viceroyalty is deemed absolutely unavoidable, we hope Great Britain will be able to spare us a statesman of high calibre and proved merit such, for instance, as Lord Selborne or Lord Haldane.

The End of the Bombay Mills Strike: On Monday last the Great Cotton Mills Strike in Bombay came to an end by the operatives quietly returning to work. Even after the publication of the concessions granted by the mill-owners the workers kept back for a whole week. Owing to the death of Lady Chandavarkar, Sir Narayan Chandavarkar could not attend the Bombay Labour Settlement Committee's meetings. On Thursday evening, however, he resumed his work on the Committee, and the next day he drew up an exceedingly impressive tract, appealing to the workers to join their work at once. It is evident that this tract which was widely distributed on Saturday and Sunday, had a most beneficial effect. Writing of the strike of Bombay Mill operatives, the Searchlight (Patna) observes: "We are glad that responsible leaders like Sir Narayan have thought it necessary to take the lead. Not to Sir Narayan Chandavarkar, the Moderate politician, but to Sir Narayan, the social reformer, do we look for a resolute lead. It is not a few rupees to pay to a few men that will solve the labour problem, but a permanent betterment of the social conditions—better housing, better salary, and schools for children."

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1920.

THE INDIAN CURRENCY COMMITTEE REPORT.

The long awaited report of the Indian Currency Committee has at last been published. The Committee consisted of ten English and one Indian member, Mr. Dadabhai Merwanji Dalal. The English members were Sir H. Babington Smith (Chairman), Lord Chalmers, Sir Marshall Reid, Sir James Brunyate and Messrs. F. C. Goodenough, C. S. Addis, C. T. Needham, M. M. S. Gubbay, W. B. Hunter, and T. W. McMorran. All the English members have signed the majority report, but Mr. Dalal found that the divergence of opinion between his colleagues and himself was so great as to render it impossible for him to concur with their views. He has, therefore, written a separate report. So far as we can see, the most acute differences between Mr. Dalal and his colleagues relate to the causes of the rise of the price of silver and the measures adopted by Government to meet that rise. But these, however, are now past history. As regards the policy to be adopted to restore to normal conditions the situation that has arisen, he and his fellow-members seem to us to be in substantial agreement. He and his colleagues are at one in holding that it is desirable and, indeed, of the first importance to restore stability to the rupee and to re-establish the automatic working of the Indian currency system. Whether the rise in the price of silver was the result of the decrease in the Mexican output or of the embargo on the export of Indian silver, is an interesting question. The majority hold that it was due to the former; Mr. Dalal is convinced that it was due to the latter. It is evident that both causes contributed to the result which had such untoward consequences for India. As regards the steps adopted by Government to meet the situation created by the rise of the price of silver, we are in sympathy with much of the criticism which Mr. Dalal passes on them. We cannot understand the manner in which the majority completely ignore Mr. Dalal's arguments. We cannot help thinking that had there been at least one more Indian on the Committee as fully conversant with the theoretical side of the subject as Mr. Dalal is with the practical, the majority would have found it far less easy to overlook so completely the Indian point of view in adjudging the results of the policy hitherto followed. Indeed, their anxious attempt to make out that whatever the authorities did was the best that could have been done in the circumstances, is palpably untenable. There was very little "skill, courage and resource" in waiting upon the movements of the silver market and putting up the rupee value, not once or twice, but eight times in two years, (five times in one year), thus keeping the world of commerce in a state of protracted suspense and uncertainty. The tribute in the majority report to the authorities for these qualities, is obviously undeserved.

The most important difference between Mr. Dalal and his colleagues is as to whether the exchange value of the rupee should henceforth be one shilling and four pence or two shillings. One shilling and four pence, it will be remembered, was the rate fixed in 1893, and maintained more or less up to 1917. Mr. Dalal pleads for the one shilling and four pence rupee, while the majority are for two shillings. We think that the Committee's recommendation is preferable, if for no better reason than that two shillings are much nearer to 2s-4d, the present value of the rupee, than 1s-4d. Mr. Dalal observes: "The Indian money standard was definitely changed from silver to gold so recently as 1893. But it is impossible to contemplate another permanent change in the rupee value of the sovereign." It is not now proposed to revert from gold to silver. As for the sterling value of the rupee, the old limit has been eight times changed, and the reversion to 1s-4d will now be a more serious change than the adoption of 2 shillings. There is no meaning in differentiating between a permanent and a temporary change in such matters. Every change is permanent while it lasts and temporary, when it is past. The plea of custom will not avail either. If we had been accustomed to the 1s. 4d. rupee for twenty years, we had, previous to the seventies, been much longer accustomed to a 2 shilling rupee. The point must be decided on its merits. In our opinion, the reasons given in the majority report for preferring 2 shillings to any other limit are sound. That the reversion to the 1s-4d rupee cannot at present be effected, as acknowledged by Mr. Dalal himself, without debasing the rupee or producing a debased coin to take the place of the rupee, is, to our mind, a conclusive argument against it. It is a curious paradox that, while Mr. Dalal, who has no rooted objection to a debased silver coin, will not look at the nickel half rupee, the majority who shrink with horror from debasing the rupee, actually propose making the nickel eight-anna legal tender up to ten rupees! We protested against the nickel eight anna piece when the idea was mooted, and we continue to think it to be a highly objectionable measure. Government have found it necessary to contradict a persistent rumour that they are contemplating the introduction of nickel rupees. We hope that the contradiction will have the desired effect. Whether it has or not, we strongly feel that the silver half-rupee at least should be reverted to, as it enjoys nearly as much as the rupee the status in the popular mind of a standard coin of the realm.

That a relatively lower exchange is more beneficial to the export trade and to industries than a higher one, cannot, we think, be denied. The arguments of the majority to the contrary are unconvincing. No doubt there will be other causes coming into play to counteract to some extent the detrimental effect of a 2 shilling rupee as compared with an one shilling four pence rupee on our industries and exports, but these causes, with an one shilling four pence rupee, will be of much greater benefit to them, if by any possibility we can have both. Mr. Dalal's fears may be exaggerated but that there is a solid substratum for them, is unquestionable. The country is entitled to demand that as far as possible this should be obviated. The majority report refers to it in a sentence. "We recognise," they observe, "that competitive imports into India may be temporarily stimulated by the high rate of exchange, especially from countries where the cost of production is low; but even in the period which may elapse before the adjustment of prices and other conditions to the new level is complete, this influence so far as manufactured articles from Europe and America are concerned, is likely to be counteracted by the greatly increased cost of production in the exporting countries at the present time." This as well as the subsequent argument based on the assumption that high exchange necessarily means low wages, is of the nature of unsubstantial speculation. Indian producers cannot be expected to be satisfied with such airy nothings. In our judgment, concurrently with the new currency arrangements, a well-considered tariff giving adequate protection to our industries from foreign competition, whether from Europe, America or Asia, ought to be devised and applied. If the Indian factory worker is to have his standard of living raised, his wages will have to be raised, he will have to be better housed, better fed and better clothed. All this must add to the cost of production. And if our industries are not to be protected adequately from foreign competitors who have an advantage over us, whether of longer experience, greater facilities, of cheaper labour or subsidised freight, we cannot expect our manufacturers willingly to incur all this additional cost. They may find it impossible to continue their industries. The disadvantages to which they are exposed by this alteration in our currency policy should be made good to them by a protective tariff. That is the right way of meeting the problem of a 2 shilling rupee. The loss to the producers of raw materials for export cannot be as much and can be only temporary.

THE GAME OF POLITICS.

Writing in New India on the resolution of the Reform Scheme, passed by the Amritsar National Congress, Mrs. Besant had remarked that Mr. Tilak had declared at some time that he was using her as his tool, and that now he was using Mr. Gandhi and Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya as his tools and he would throw them aside when he no longer needed them. Young India, which is edited by Mr. Gandhi, replied to this suggestion in its issue of 14th January. It said that it was unable to accept the suggestion, and that even if there was any truth in it, "if they (Messrs. Gandhi and Malaviya) allowed themselves to be so used, it would not be the Lokamanya (Mr. Tilak) who would be to blame, but Messrs. Malaviya and Gandhi would be clearly held blameworthy for their simplicity." Our contemporary went on to say :

L. Tilak represents a definite school of thought of which he makes no secret. He considers that everything is fair in politics. We have joined issue with him in that conception of political life. We consider that the political life of the country will become thoroughly corrupt if we import western tactics and methods. We believe that nothing but the strictest adherence to honesty, fairplay and charity can advance the true interests of the country. But we refuse, because of the essential difference just pointed out, to believe that in accepting the amendment L. Tilak was guided by any motive other than that of meeting his opponents' views so far as it was possible.

A letter from Mr. Tilak with reference to the above is published in Young India of the 28th January. He writes :

I am sorry to see that in your article on 'Reform Resolution' in the last issue, you have represented me as holding that I considered 'every thing fair in politics.' I write this to you to say that my view is not correctly represented herein. Politics is a game of worldly people and not of Sathua, and instead of the maxim 'अक्रोधेन जितं क्रोधे' (by dispassion is conquered passion) as preached by Buddha, I prefer to rely on the maxim of Shri Krishna 'देवता नो भूयते तांस्तथैव अजाययद्' (As each one approaches Me so do I receive him.) That explains the whole difference and also the meaning of my phrase 'responsive co-operation.' Both methods are equally honest and righteous but the one is more suited to this world than the other. Any further explanation about the difference will be found in my Gita Rahasya.

Mr. Gandhi appends a footnote to the letter in which he maintains that, for him, there is no conflict between the two texts quoted by the Lokamanya (Mr. Tilak), that they embody a law which is not for the unworldly, but essentially for the worldly and that "the epitome of all religions is to promote purushartha, and purushartha is nothing but a desperate attempt to become Sadhu i.e., to become a gentleman in every sense of the term." Mr. Gandhi concludes :

Finally, when I wrote the sentence about 'everything being fair in politics' according to the Lokamanya's creed, I had in mind his oft-repeated quotation 'सर्वे प्रति साठयम्' (Meet guile with guile.) To me it enunciates bad law. And I shall not despair of the Lokamanya with all his acumen agreeably surprising India one day with a philosophical dissertation proving the falsity of the doctrine. In any case I pit the experience of a third of a century against the doctrine underlying 'सर्वे प्रति साठयम्' (Meet guile with guile.) The true law is 'सर्वे प्रत्यपि सत्यम्' (Meet even guile with truth.)

Mr. Gandhi is absolutely right in holding that in the long run honesty is the best policy even in politics. Abraham Lincoln, Gladstone, and President Wilson, are conspicuous illustrations, though all these great statesmen have been at times denounced as dishonest, insincere and hypocritical by their contemporaries who were opposed to them in politics. Napoleon, Bismarck and ex-Kaiser William, on the other hand, preferred and practised the doctrine of "the end justifies the means." No doubt, they earned the plaudits of their countrymen, but the stern verdict of history, in each case, is unmistakably clear. Mr. Tilak, in a spirit of over-weening self-conceit, applies to himself the words which Shri Krishna applied to Himself. Now, Shri Krishna was an Avatar, in whatever sense we understand the term, the incarnate Cosmic Soul. He could understand and appreciate in their true inward significance the motive and the act and the aspiration of the worshipper; and can respond exactly in that sense and significance. Can Mr. Tilak claim to do that? Has he any special endowment beyond "the rude world's finger and thumb" to assess motives, to see behind the effect to the inner cause? Omniscience alone can understand and undertake the meting out to us in exact measure what we mete out to our brothers and sisters. Because our acts are not merely the outward impact but also the inner thought which is behind it. Does Mr. Tilak claim omniscience? The audacity of his appropriating to himself the text of the Gita, takes one's breath away. We expressed our astonishment the other day at some six gentlemen who occupy the positions of Premiers in the British Empire preannouncing to the world on religion. Their presumption is as nothing to that of Mr. Tilak. The man who can talk of himself as Mr. Tilak does, is standing on the edge of a disastrous precipice well-marked in the chart of every spiritual voyagers. Let him beware in time!

THE HINDU-MUSLIM UNITY.

WHAT IT LACKS IN.

(BY PANDIT CHAND NARAIN ZUTSHI, M. B. F. A.
(LONDON.)

There can be no doubt that the animosity between the Hindus and the Mohammadans was historic and that the two great communities of India showed no signs of cohesion ever since their co-existence through various stages of their historical evolution in the country—in a word between them unity was unknown. None can say definitely whether it was the loss of political power of the Hindus or the superciliousness of the Mohammadans that deepened their resentment and hatred towards each other and made unity impossible in those times, but this much is certain that a greater and greater gulf yawned between the two communities ever since their lots were cast to be the inhabitants of India. It cannot be denied that, whatever might have been the motives, political, religious or social, that actuated them, there had been certain Mohammadan emperors who adopted a conciliatory policy towards the Hindus and enlisted their sympathy and support. But there had been also some reactionary successors who undid the work of their predecessors and contributed a great deal to the estrangement between the two communities which hitherto made progress impossible in this country. Besides, the recurrences of coercions and conciliations making things uncertain as they stood, rather fomented their excitement than cowed their warring spirit and left the two communities in a highly electrified condition rendering their tempers so sensitive that a slight provocation was enough to throw them off their balance and this often bred disorders and led to bloodshed in the realm. The events leading up to the year 1918 quite substantiate these remarks. Such a state of things naturally gave rise to pessimism. Men were not wanting who could see a dark future awaiting the country and no bright star rising on the horizon of Hindu-Muslim unity. Happily among these were the apostles of Unity whose voice, in spite of unfavourable circumstances, vibrated with the message of hope of Hindu-Muslim unity however delayed, and who treated many a dark event as but a prelude to a bright future awaiting the country. To quote one of them, Sir William Wedderburn who said in his presidential address to the Congress in 1910 thus: "No doubt certain events have brought into prominence the differences between the two communities, but these differences should not be exaggerated, and we should rather direct our attention to the solid interests in which all Indians are equally concerned.....A recognition by the two great communities of the essential identity of their real interests, however long it may be delayed, is, I feel convinced, bound to come at last". The attempts of such men to bring about the Hindu-Muslim unity, however strenuous and sincere, failed to produce any satisfactory results until the year 1918 which marked the climax of Hindu-Muslim animosity, but after which a dividing line has been reached in the Hindu-Muslim relations, so that men standing on the brink of 1918 witnessed a change in the order of things and that the dawn and eve of the year 1919, presented quite different spectacles even to a superficial observer.

Let us now consider what are these changes and what has brought about them, and also whether or not are there any factors wanting to make the Hindu-Muslim unity a complete and permanent feature of the times.

To find answers to these questions we must picture to our mind the gloom of the year 1919, and recalling to our mind the various dark events that took place in it, we cannot but call it a dark one: perhaps no darker chapter could be added to the annals of this country than the one afforded by the year 1919 which witnessed the spilling of innocent blood of hundreds and thousands of Indian youth, both Hindus and Mohammadans, in the wake of the Satyagraha movement, the Jallianwallah massacre and the Reign of Terror in the Punjab, and in which year many untold calamities overtook the country in various spheres of human activity. But, as a dark cloud has a silver lining, the year 1919, however dark in other respects, stands as an unprecedented epoch and forms a landmark in the history of Hindu-Muslim unity as is evinced from the bold front the Hindus and the Mohammadans made against the common danger that faced the motherland and shared, in common, the fate of martyrdom. It was this common danger that made the two great communities of India identify their interests and realise at last the importance and need of unity, like the man and the wolf in the legend. Never were the two communities, vested with differences, religious, social or racial, witnessed participating in the weal and woe and rejoicing in the success and happiness of each other, the Hindus mourning with their Mohammadan brethren during Moharram and the Mohammadans taking part with their Hindu brethren in Dasharath celebrations: both the communities participating in public rejoicings at the release and mourning at the interment of the Allis or the Pals. In a word the two communities are drifting spontaneously towards unity to which end mere words and addresses utterly failed to move them an inch. These are the happy signs of the times, portending, as they do, a change for the better in the Hindu-Muslim relations.

Judging from the signs can we say that the unity is complete and is likely to grow permanent? The answer is emphatically in the negative. The unity would only be complete when both the communities have arrived at that stage of existence when they can freely participate in their undertakings whether political or commercial and whether owned by a Hindu or a Mohammadan: when caste prejudices have been given up and when each one of them feels the help and co-operation of the other essential and desirable. For instance, if a few Mohammadans form into a limited company for starting say a periodical, it should, on no account, be the policy of the Directors to appoint the Editorial staff exclusively from among their class. Rather an undertaking of this kind must in all fairness be represented by peoples of as different shades of views and sects as possible within the scope allowed for the choice. In the same way if a few Hindus start a business they should not make it a point to enlist only Hindus as co-sharers and office bearers: one should not move an inch without taking the other in his train—every undertaking of theirs must make for the mingling of both.

A word for the Indian Potentates and I have closed this paper. All the Potentates whether Hindu or Mohammadan, should regard Hindus and Mohammadans on the same footing and admit into their service both Hindus and Mohammadans without any sense of communal partiality. They should not adopt an extreme policy and the Muslim Potentates admit only Muslims into their service and the Hindu Potentates admit Hindus only or both doing the exact reverse, rather both should give up their time-honoured spirit of communalism and adopt a liberal policy in matters of taking into service the Hindus and the Mohammadans. I take these instances all the more because we must be on our guard against communal prejudices retarding Indian progress and communal interests over-ruling all other considerations of common concern that make for Hindu-Muslim unity, and because it is in this respect that the Hindu-Muslim unity lacks a great deal. In conclusion I feel that unless these considerations begin to weigh upon the minds of the Hindu and Muslim Potentates and the people alike, the Hindu-Muslim unity is not likely to be a permanent and complete feature of the times and India will certainly be a long way off to be called "united".

THE NICKEL RUPEE INVENTION. (Communicated)

The persistence with which the rumour is repeated that Government contemplates the issue of a nickel rupee suggests the existence of some deliberate purpose in the minds of those responsible for this invention. Such purpose, if it exists, can hardly be a good or honest one, for we are informed on trustworthy authority that there is not a word of truth in the report, nor any hint of justification in facts for its repetition. There are possibilities of mischief in the spreading abroad of a misstatement of this kind, and this particular fiction should be contradicted wherever it is heard.

A CHRISTMAS MESSAGE TO INDIA.

(BY THE REV. R. A. HUME.)

It is Christmas Day in America where I am on a furlough absent from my native land of India. There is a Latin proverb of mariners of old, Coelum, non animus, mutant qui trans mare current, which translated means, "They change their sky, but not their hearts, who cross the sea." My body is ten thousand miles away. My heart is in my beloved India where I was born nearly seventy-three years ago, and where I have served my country for over forty-five years. Though I cannot to-day use my voice, I will use my pen on one of the supreme days of the year briefly to interpret the significance of Christmas to some of my fellow-countrymen.

There were four different classes of persons connected in differing spirit with the birth of Jesus. They well represent four types of spirit which still come in touch with the One who was born in Bethlehem nineteen centuries ago. First, there were three wise men from the East who, influenced to believe that an unusual star proclaimed the coming of a king worthy of their worship, had journeyed long over trackless deserts following that star-gleam, and had brought rich gifts to present to the mysterious unknown king whom they sought. But marvelous to relate, that star-gleam brought them, not to a royal palace, but to a stable in which in a manger they saw a new-born babe. Nevertheless, through loyalty to their belief that even stars give divine guidance they were not deterred from accepting as worthy of their search and reverence the babe whom they found. Then, according to the story, "They rejoiced with exceeding great joy. And when they saw the young child with Mary his mother, they fell down and worshipped him; and opening their treasures, they offered unto him gifts, gold and frankincense and myrrh." These three wise men typify the spirit of reverence. Men sometimes wrongly assume that there is some conflict between religion and science. There can never be a conflict between true religion and true science. The spirit of science and of wisdom is always the attitude of open-mindedness and of readiness to receive and to follow facts wherever found, however these facts may differ from what has been assumed or anticipated. Equally the spirit of true religion is joyful, reverent regard for facts and for the divine in the human.

In particular, the long, long search of those Magi and their worship of the Christ whom they found, so different from the king whom they expected to see, is typical of the present and coming attitude of non-Christian wise men in the East for the spiritual king of men. As Christmas Days and Christmas experiences return and increase, reverent and wise men of the East will more and more fall down in spirit before that One born in Bethlehem, will worship Him, and will offer Him their spiritual gifts.

The second group who were connected with the first Christmas Day consisted of unlettered shepherds who had seen a wondrous light shine around them in darkness, and had heard good tidings of great joy and of peace and goodwill to men. The story relates that under the inspiration of the message that there was born a Saviour for them and for all peoples, "the shepherds said one to another: Let us now go to Bethlehem and see this thing that is come to pass which the Lord hath made known unto us. And they came in haste and found Mary and Joseph and the babe lying in the manger." Then when they had gone away they told other what they had seen and heard, and "all that heard it wondered. These shepherds represented the spirit of curiosity rather than that of worship. Nevertheless, it was they who soonest and most fully benefitted by their experience, and widely told the story to others. They are typical of the unlettered masses in our India who to-day are being drawn toward the Christ, and who through Him find development of all kinds of good, and who lead in telling others about Him. As of old, so to-day, not many mighty, not many noble are called.

The third person prominent on the first Christmas Day was Mary the mother of Jesus who naturally was amazed at her own experience, at the worship and gifts of the Magi, and at the visit of the shepherds. Of her the story says, "Mary kept all these sayings pondering them in her heart." Her's was the spirit of love, the spirit of wonder at contact with mystery and of meditating effort to interpret its meaning. To any observer of that babe in the manger how little he could anticipate what the Wonderful One has for centuries been doing for mankind. Even now how inadequately anyone can forecast what He will still do for all men! The most rewarding attitude for Christmas is that of love pondering in heart what the meaning of Christ is for the individual and for mankind.

But there was a fourth participant in the experiences of the first Christmas. He was King Herod, an incarnation of selfishness, materialism and cunning. Of him the story says, "When Herod the king heard it he was troubled." Therefore desiring immediately and for ever to put out of the way one who might oppose his selfish ambition he bade the Magi, "Go and search out exactly concerning the young child, and when ye have found him, bring me word, that I also may come and worship him." Herod's was the worldly selfish spirit of secret opposition to the Christ, the outward, insincere, crafty spirit, which dares not outwardly oppose the Christ, but desires craftily to put him out of the way. For the Magi, for the Shepherds, for Mary the first Christmas was a day of joy. Herod was troubled.

On this Christmas Day of 1919 there are wise and reverent men in East and West, both who take and do not take the Christian name, who revere Him who was born in Bethlehem centuries ago. There are multitudes of unlettered men, who while inadequately understanding Him yet are flocking to His name and side. There are some devout and mystic souls who with love ponder His life and who in loving hearts incarnate Him. There are worldly men who outwardly profess respect for Him, but who dislike His spirit and who would put Him out of the way.

Right here in America, while the very great majority of Americans earnestly desire a League of Nations which would promote peace and goodwill among men, there are some in the seats of the mighty who in Herodian spirit are "troubled" and conspire. But like Herod, they must and shall for ever have the Herodian reputation, and shall pass into dishonour. Eventually at the name of Christ every knee shall bow. A true and universal Christmas Day shall come.

In our India, too, four types of men hold the same four differing attitudes toward the Christ and to His Day. To one of the four each of us belongs.

INDIAN CURRENCY COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

The majority report, which is signed by the Chairman and all members of Committee except Mr. D. M. Dalal, states as its object the restoration of a stable and automatic system and the maintenance of the convertibility of the note issue. The fundamental recommendations of the report are as follows:—

(a) That the present rupee, unchanged in weight and fineness, should remain unlimited legal tender;

(b) That the rupee should have a fixed exchange value and that this exchange value should be expressed in terms of gold at the rate of one rupee for 11.30016 grains of fine gold, that is, one-tenth of the gold contents of the sovereign;

(c) That the sovereign which is now rated by law at rupees 15 should be made legal tender in India at the revised ratio of rupees ten to one sovereign;

(d) That the import and export of gold to and from India should be free from Government control as soon as the change in the statutory ratio has been effected, and that the gold mint at Bombay, should be open for the coinage into sovereigns of gold tendered by public;

(e) That the notification of Government undertaking to give rupees for sovereigns should be withdrawn;

(f) That the prohibition on the private import and export of silver should be removed in due course and that the import duty on silver should be repealed unless the fiscal position demands its retention.

These recommendations develop with the necessary modifications required by altered circumstances the principles on which the Indian currency system was established before the war, and are accepted by the Secretary of State in Council as expressing the goal towards which Indian administration, following the previous policy, should now be directed.

Under the conditions existing prior to the war sterling and gold were identical standards. The existing disparity has made a choice between these standards necessary, and the Committee's recommendation is in favour of placing the rupee on a gold basis.

In recommending a rate, namely that above mentioned, for the exchange value of the rupee the Chairman and majority have taken account of the high range of silver prices and of the importance of safeguarding the convertibility of the Indian note issue by providing so far as possible that the token character of the rupee shall be restored and maintained, i. e., that the India Government may be in a position to buy silver for coinage into rupees without loss. They were also impressed by the serious economic and political risks attendant on a further expansion of Indian prices such as must be anticipated from the adoption of a low rate.

The arguments advanced in favour of a gold basis and of a high rate of exchange appear to the Secretary of State in Council to be conclusive and he has decided to take the necessary steps to give immediate effect to the recommendations on these points. Accordingly the Government of India have to-day announced that the rate which they will pay for gold, tendered to them under the Gold Import Act by private importers will henceforth be fixed at one rupee for 11.30016 grains of fine gold, i. e. Rs. 10 for the gold contents of the sovereign. The consequential changes in the regulations relating to the sale of council drafts by the Secretary of State in Council and of reverse drafts by the Government of India will be notified separately.

The question of the internal ratio presents special difficulties. The Committee recommend the maintenance of gold on a legal tender footing especially in view of possible difficulties in obtaining adequate supplies of silver. A fixed ratio must, therefore be established between the rupee and gold, as used in the internal circulation, either one sovereign for Rs. 15 as at present or one sovereign for Rs. 10 in correspondence with the new exchange ratio. The former alternative would give the sovereign the status of an overvalued token coin, necessitating permanent control over the import of sovereigns, and making an open gold mint impossible. The Secretary of State in Council agrees with the Committee that such conditions ought not to be contemplated as a permanent arrangement. On the other hand, the lower ratio cannot be effectively introduced while a great disparity continues to exist between the commercial price of gold in India and the intended Indian mint par of one sovereign for Rs. 10.

Present conditions are a product of the war and in some sense artificial. They cannot be immediately remedied without risk of shock to the economic and monetary system in India, and of reaction elsewhere to which India cannot in her own interests be indifferent: a gradual process of rectification and of adjustment to new conditions is required. For some time past action has been taken in India to reduce the premium on gold by regular Government sales of bullion to the public and this measure will be further developed. It may be expected that in that way a natural adjustment may be effected until the path to legislation is cleared.

The Secretary of State has decided, therefore, first, that the import of gold shall continue for the present to be controlled by license under the Gold Import Act, with fixed acquisition rate as mentioned above; second, that meanwhile, periodical sales of gold bullion to the public shall continue; and third, that as a provisional measure during the transition period sovereigns shall remain legal tender at the present ratio of Rs. 15.

In arriving at these decisions the Secretary of State in Council has not failed to give careful consideration to the minority report signed by Mr. D. M. Dalal. Mr. Dalal's main object is the effective restoration and maintenance of the ratio of 15 rupees to a sovereign as a measure both of exchange and of the circulating value of the rupee. In order to secure this he relies upon freedom for the melting and export of rupees and correspondingly to freedom for the import of gold. To meet the possible result in shortage of silver coins he recommends that as long as the New York price of silver remains above 92 cents Government should coin two rupee silver coins of reduced fineness, the coinage of rupees of the present weight and fineness being meanwhile suspended, and only resumed when the price of silver falls to the figure named. He also recommends that sterling drafts on the Secretary of State should be sold only at 1s. 3 29/32d.

The Secretary of State in Council satisfied that this programme could not be adopted without untoward consequences. The heavy exports of silver coin to be anticipated under the scheme must threaten not only the whole silver circulation but also the Government reserves of silver coin, and entail the gravest risk of inconvertibility of the Government note issue. The demand for the gold required continually to make this deficiency good must greatly aggravate any strain there may be on the gold stock of the world when the freedom of import is restored. Nor is it safe to assume that these difficulties could be met by issuing new silver coins of inferior fineness; the evidence against the acceptability of an inferior substitute for the present rupee has impressed the majority, and their recommendation on this head is accepted by the Secretary of State as decisive. Mr. Dalal's recommendation in regard to the rate for sterling drafts, if adopted, must produce an immediate crash in exchange bringing unmerited disaster to those who have reasonably relied on some continuity of policy. The only cover which his scheme affords is the export of the country's circulating currency. In any case, even if a return to the pre-war level of exchange could be accomplished without a shock to trade or risk to the Currency system, it would lay India open to a further serious inflation of prices, while the majority's recommendation would tend towards a reduction of general price levels in India.

Both during and since the war Indian currency and exchange have presented problems previously unanticipated and more perplexing than any encountered since the decision to close the mints in 1898. I as the Secretary of State in Council is satisfied that decisions reached promise an eventual solution, and he desires to express his acknowledgments to the Committee and their Chairman for the ability and thoroughness with which they have explored the issue and have framed their recommendations."

APPEAL TO CHRISTIAN HUMANITARIANS.

I beg to draw the attention of all Christian humanitarians to the following editorial protest of Mrs. Annie Besant, published in the Theosophist, (Adyar, Madras, India,) August 1914, :—

"I am astonished to learn from The Church Missionary Gleaner that Christian Missionaries in China refuse to accept into Church membership any converts to Christianity who are vegetarians. It seems incredible that eating dead animals should be made sine qua non of Christianity. In its issue of May 1st 1914, under the heading 'Broken Vows' the Gleaner says :—'One of the difficulties in the way of the spread of the gospel in China has often been the vegetarian vows taken by Buddhists. The breaking down of these stumbling blocks is always gladly welcomed by the Missionaries.' This editorial introduction is followed by stories of the removal of the stumbling blocks. A Mrs. Deng was 'in great trouble with a bad foot. She had been in great pain, day and night, for over a year, and asked for treatment. In years gone by she would never come near the Christians, but the pain had been so great that she was only too willing to accept an invitation to come to the Mission House for treatment, even on condition of having to break her fast.' Mrs. Deng's mother, Mrs. Wang, 'also decided to break her fast,' and 'broke her last connection with outward idolatry by partaking of a meat dinner, thus discontinuing her fast of thirty years.'

"A sister of hers, living here in Chungpa, who several years ago was a catechumen, but never gave up her vegetarian vow, and therefore could not be taken into membership, has taken courage, and followed her elder sister in also breaking her fast. She—Mrs. Sie—had been ill for many months. Whenever she was exhorted to put her whole trust in the Lord, and give up her vow, she replied that she was afraid to break it. But when she heard of her elder sister doing so she at once expressed a wish to do so too. I brought her some cooked meat, and after prayer she took the long feared step, and said she would now really trust the Lord wholly and solely. She was in such a weak condition that one felt the little remnant of life might any time be finished, and therefore we were very thankful to see her enter the fold. Only two days after breaking her fast she died quietly. Her son and daughter-in-law, who had tended her with great care, have also promised to 'learn the doctrine.'

"The picture of the sick woman induced to pollute her body, and dying two days later is rather ghastly. The whole proceedings, with his unfortunate family forced out of taking clean food, is the first case by the refusal of medical help until meat was eaten, would be incredible if they were not in Missionary Journal."

I pray that Christian humanitarians of the world may kindly protect against the Christian Missionaries spreading flesh-eating with all its attendant horrors in the East, and may kindly urge the Missionary Societies to send only Vegetarian Missionaries to the Eastern countries.

THOU SHALT NOT KILL,
LAKSHMANAR LAKSHIDAS,

JUNAGAD, INDIA,

ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

Rates of Inland subscription inclusive of postages
In advance. In arrears.

Per annum..... Rs. 5-0-0. Rs. 6-0-0
Foreign Subscription inclusive of Postage, twelve shillings (Rs. 8).

Single copies of the current year can be had at 4
annas each and any back copies at 6 annas each.

The following two books on trade and industries, by J. L. Dubeji, M. A. V. P., are indispensable to every English-knowing Indian gentleman:—

(1) Vyapar Mitra.—It consists of 4 parts containing more than 325 original recipes for making marketable articles for trade, such as Soap, Varnish, Polish, Ink, Sealing Wax, Rubber Toys, Imitation Gold, Silver, Pearl, Ruby, Coral, etc., Cigarettes, Matches, Carbon Paper, Pocket Press, Buttons, Gilding Powder, Hair Killer, Hair Oils, Scent, Syrups, Essences, Medicines, etc., etc. Price Rs. 1, V. P. As. 2.

The book "First Lessons in Photography" will be given free to every purchaser of Vyapar Mitra.

(2) Trade Secrets or How to become healthy and wealthy.—This book consists of 10 parts of chapters, each dealing with a series of articles on trade and industries, such as perfumery, dairy farming, agriculture, manures, etc. It also deals with cattle and human diseases with suitable prescriptions for all of them. Besides, collection of several hundreds of other useful informations and money-making secret formulas and processes have greatly increased the usefulness of the book. Reduced prices Rs. 1, V. P. As. 2.

N. B.—On account of the scarcity of paper, the next edition of these books is not expected soon, hence to avoid disappointment send for them to-day.

Address:—MANAGER, THE WALKER PRESS,
MAINPURI U. P.

SELF-GOVERNMENT IN ANCIENT INDIA

BY
M. V. GOPAL RAO.

"India is no stranger to Self-rule"
"Kings elected by the people."
"Kings deposed for mis-rule."

"King to exercise executive functions only."
"Taxation with the consent of the people."
"Doctrine of the sovereignty of the people recognised."
"Divine right no personal attribute to kings."

MODERN REVIEW:—"This neatly printed pamphlet of 34 pages makes an admirable attempt to show that Self-rule was not a strange thing in India in olden times."
Prices As. 4 Four annas only. V. P. Charges extra.

Apply to:—

ANDHRA GRANDHA RATNAGARAM,

4-1-20. Plithapuram, (Godavari Dt.)

"PEEPS INTO THE FUTURE"

Is everybody's everyday book. The codified experience of generations of Astrologers and Indian Yogis—an astrologer in moments of anxiety & suspense—answers short and succinctly clear on the thousand and one points of doubt and uncertainty. Everybody may consult the book—no date of birth or horoscope necessary. Must be in every pocket for it suits all. Price one rupee only. Foreign two shillings. Apply to the Proprietor.

TATA MYSTIC ASTRAL STUDIO

24-8-19. Chodavaram, Visagapatam District,

THE WORLD MUDDLE

Toiling Millions of Human Beings

Living in Poverty!

An Idle Few

Living in Luxury!

THE MILLIONS WORK—

For Their Living

THE FEW OWN—

For Theirs

THE SOLUTION

IS GIVEN, WEEK BY WEEK
IN

The Equitist.

YOU NEED IT

TO READ IT

AND HEED IT

$1.50 outside U. S.

Box 128, BAY VIEW
STATE OF WASHINGTON.

NEW INDIA ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.

Authorized Capital Rs. 20,00,00,000

Subscribed " 11,86,34,250

Paid Up " 1,18,63,425

DIRECTORS.

Sir D. J. Tata, Kt., (Chairman)

Sir Sassoon David, Bart., (Vice Chairman)

The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoj Currimbhoy, Kt., C. B. E.

Sir Henry Procter, Kt., C. B. E.,

Sir S. B. Bharucha, Kt.,

The Hon'ble Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas, C. I. E.,

Rai Bahadur Jannalal Bachraj.,

Ramnarain Harnandrai, Esq.,

R. D. Tata, Esq.,

B. J. Padshah, Esq.,

The Hon'ble Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna,

The Hon'ble Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas, C. I. E.,

A. J. Bilimoria, Esq.,

F. E. Dinshaw, Esq.,

On and after 2nd FEBRUARY the Company will be prepared to accept Fire and Marine risks at current rates of premium.

TEMPORARY OFFICES

Waterloo Mansions, Mayo Road, Bombay.

Chief Agents:—Tata Sons, Ltd, Navsari Buildings, Hornby Road.

London Agents:—Sedgwick Collins (Agencies) Limited
4, Moorgate Street, E. C. 3.

R. P. GANDHI.

Secretary.

GALE'S MAGAZINE.

Linn A. E. Gale, Editor and Publisher.

Champion of Socialism, New Thought, Occultism,

Internationalism and Birth Control

Contains such articles as:

"The Birth Pangs of Revolution"

"The World That Is To Be"

"The Psychic Meaning of the War"

"Judas Iscariot and the Bolsheviki"

"Are We Hypnotized?"

The only Advanced Thought Magazine in English in Mexico. A Journal That is Indispensable to All Who Want to Understand the Signs of the Times.

$2 year, American money. $1 for 6 months
20c. a copy. No Free Samples. Remit by bank draft on New York or personal check.

GALE'S MAGAZINE,

P. O. Box 518

2-19-19.

Mexico City, D. F., Mexico.

THE TATA INDUSTRIAL BANK, LD.

HEAD OFFICE, BOMBAY.

BRANCHES—CALCUTTA and HYDERABAD (Deccan)
CANNINGPORE and LUCKNOW.

Sub-Branches—

Bombay—Share Bazaar, Shroff Bazaar,
Calcutta—Bara Bazaar.

London Agents. LLOYDS BANK LIMITED.
NEW YORK AGENTS: THE GUARANTY
TRUST COY. OF NEW YORK.

AUTHORISED CAPITAL... Rs. 12,00,00,000.
SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL... " 7,56,00,225.
PAID UP CAPITAL... " 1,50,99,225.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Sir D. J. Tata, Kt., Chairman.
Sir Sassoon David, Bart.
Sir R. N. Mookerjee, K. O. I. E.
Sir Francis Stewart, Kt.
Sir Henry Proctor, Kt.
R. D. Tata, Esq.
F. E. Dinshaw, Esq.
F. O. Rimington, Esq.
Narottam Morarjee, Esq.
Hajee Gulam Mahomed Ajam, Esq.
The Hon'ble Mr. Purshottamdas Thakordas. C. I. E.
A. J. Bilimoria, Esq.

Secretary, R. H. Parker.

Current Accounts opened and interest allowed on daily credit balances from Rs. 500/- to Rs. 1,00,000/- at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum. If the balance to the credit of any account does not fall below Rs. 25,000/- at any time between 1st January and 30th June, interest will be allowed during that period at 2½ % per annum. No interest is allowed unless the sum accrued amounts to Rs. 3/- Half-yearly.

Fixed Deposits. Interest allowed on Deposits fixed for one or two years and for shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank. Interest allowed on Savings Bank Accounts at 4 per cent per annum. Rules may be obtained on application.

Loans and Cash Credits are granted on approved securities.

Purchases and sales of Securities and shares effected.

Bills of Exchange purchased and collected and every description of Banking and exchange business undertaken.

14-4-18. L. D. L. BUCKLEY, General Manager.

THE YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK, LIMITED.

(Registered in Japan.)
Established 1880.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 48,000,000.
Paid up Capital.....Yen. 42,000,000.
Reserve Fund.....Yen. 23,100,000.

Head Office:—Yokohama.

Branches and Agencies at Bombay, Buenos Aires, Calcutta, Changchun, Chi-Nan, Dairen, Fengtien, Hankow, Harbin, Hongkong, Honolulu, Kaiyuan, Kobe, London, Los Angeles, Lyons, Manila, Nagasaki, Newchwang, New York, Osaka, Peking, Rangoon, San Francisco, Seattle, Shanghai, Shimonoseki, Singapore, Soerabaya, Sydney, Tientsin, Tokio, Tsingtao.

Current Deposit Accounts are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at the rate of 2 per cent per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 100,000, provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of banking and exchange business transacted.

N. IGARASHI
Post Box No. 207, Hornby Road, Bombay.
I. NISHIMAKI
Manager, Calcutta.

1-12-17,

Post Box No. 406, Clive street, Calcutta

THE BANK OF BARODA, LD.

Under the Patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja Gaekwar.

Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897

HEAD OFFICE BARODA.

Branches—Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, and Surat

Capital Subscribed.....Rs. 60,00,000.
Capital Paid up " 20,00,000.
Reserve Fund " 12,50,000.

DIRECTORS :

The Hon'ble Mr. Lalubhai Somaldas, C. I. E., Chairman
Sir Vithaldas Damodar Thackersey, Kt.
Raj Ratna Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhakti Nagar Sheth, Baroda.
Sheth Manilal Revadas, Vadnagar.
Rao Bahadur Ganajirao R. Nimbalkar, Sur Subha, Baroda State.
Bhaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., Advocate, High Court Bombay.
M. H. Kantavalla, Esq., Agent, Maharaja Mill Co., Ld. Baroda.
R. R. Shrigaokar, Naib Subha, Baroda State.
A. N. Datar, Accountant General, Baroda State.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balances from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest which does not come to Rs. 2 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividends and interest thereon; it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government Paper and all descriptions of Stock at moderate charges, particulars of which may be learnt on application.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS.

Deposits received and interest allowed at 4 per cent. per annum. Rules on application. C. E. BANDLE,—(General Manager. 15-4-12.

THE CENTRAL BANK OF INDIA, LTD

Subscribed Capital... .. Rs. 50,00,000
Paid Up Capital " 49,59,900
Reserved liability of Shareholders " 25,00,000
Reserve Fund " 6,00,000

Head Office:—Alice Building, Bombay.

Local Branches:—(1) Mandvi, (2) Zaveri Bazar, (3) Share Bazar.

Branches:—Amritsar, Calcutta, Delhi, Jharra, Karachi.

London Agents:—London Joint City and Midland Bank, Ltd.

Current Accounts :—3 % allowed on Daily Balances from January to June
2½ % allowed on Daily Balances from July to December.

12 months Deposits received at 5 % per annum.

Long and Short period Deposits received at rates to be ascertained on Application.

Every kind of Banking Business transacted.

For further particulars please apply to the Manager.

S. N. POCHKHANAWALA
Manager.

25-2-17

THE BANK OF TAIWAN, LTD.

Incorporated by Special Charter of the Imperial Japanese Government, 1899.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 60,000,000
Paid-up CapitalYen. 37,500,000
Reserve FundYen. 7,030,000

Head Office:—Taipeh, Formosa.

BRANCHES:—

LONDON	SHANGHAI	TOKIO
NEW YORK	HONGKONG	OSAKA
AMOY	SINGAPORE	KOBE
CANTON	SOERABAJA	YOKOHAMA
FOOCHOW	SEMARANG	AKO
HANKOW	MAKUNG	GIRAN
KIUKIANG	BATAVIA	KAGI
SWATOW	PINAN	KARENKO
TAINAN	SHINCHIKU	KEELUNG
TAKOW	TAICHU	TAMSUI

The Bank has also a large number of Correspondents at Home and Abroad.

Current Deposit Accounts:—are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at 2 per cent. per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 1,00,000 provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of Banking and Exchange business transacted.

K. TAKEMURA,
Manager

9-12-17. 56, Esplanade Road, Fort, BOMBAY

THE BANK OF INDIA, LD.

Established 7th September 1906.

Incorporated under the Indian Companies' Act VI of 1882.

HEAD OFFICE:

ORIENTAL BUILDINGS, BOMBAY.

Capital Subscribed Ra. 2,00,00,000
Capital Called up " 99,00,000
Reserve Fund " 64,00,000

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest is allowed on daily balances from Rs. 500 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2½% p. a. throughout the year. On sums exceeding Rs. 1,00,000 interest is allowed by special arrangement. No interest will be allowed which does not amount to Rs. 8 per half year.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Deposits are received fixed for one year or for short periods @ rates of interest which can be ascertained on application.

"Savings Bank accounts opened on favourable terms. Rules on application".

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, & CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved security.

The Bank undertakes on behalf of its Constituents the safe custody of Shares and Securities and the collection of dividend and interest thereon, it also undertakes the sale and purchase of Government paper and all descriptions of Stocks at moderate charges, particulars of which may be had on application.

M. P. STRINGFELLOW,

5-1-11,

Manager.

A Lady's Best Ornament is a Glorious Head of Hair.

A profusion of rich, soft silky, lustrous, wavy hair—where's the woman who would not like that!

There's only one oil that makes such hair and it's the far-famed

KAMINIA OIL
(Regd.)

Invaluable for ladies, and just as much for Brain-Workers and Students.

Heated head cooled, aching disappears and dandruff becomes a thing of the past. Added to all these it possesses a beautiful fragrant smell.

For superiority, awarded a Gold Medal at the Mysore Exhibition, and in great demand all over the country.

If you have not yet used KAMINIA OIL, you

have missed a fine delight and a real boon; use it now, if only once; and like many people you will prefer to use also always

Price per bottle, Rs. 1. V. P. Charges 6 annas extra

Price for 3 bottles Rs. 2-10. V. P. charges 14 annas extra

Write now, Do not delay.

Sole Agents:—

The Anglo-Indian Drug & Chemical Co.,

(5-8-16) No. 155, Jamma Masjid Market, BOMBAY.

Now-a-Days.

All things have advanced in price. Even the vegetable ingredients used in our Atank Nigrah Pills have advanced in price.

Even the labourers demand heavy wages being dearer. Even the users have increased yet the Atank Nigrah Pills for Toning up the system are sold at before war price i. e. at a Rupee.

Vaidya Shastri

Manishanker Govindji,

Atank Nigrah Pharmacy,

Head Office:—Jamnagar—Kathiawar.

Branch:—Kalbadevi Road, Bombay.

A. K. JOSHI & Co.

Kalbadevi Road, BOMBAY.

We undertake every kind of Lithographic Art Printing in Colours. Publish Fine Art Pictures, & c.

Wholesale & Retail Dealers in Calcium Carbide.

Large Importers of Finest Printing Inks and Colours.
1-12-10. HIGH CLASS FRAME MAKERS-

ROYAL TONIC PILLS

Powerful Nutritious and Strength Restorer. Price Rs. 1-4 per box of 30 Pills.

PREPARED BY—GOVINDJEE DAMODER & Co.,

Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Commission Agents.
1-12-10, No. 3 Sutar Chawl Market, BOMBAY.

Timely advice to the Wealthy

Costly but certain remedies are in the long run cheaper than cheap and uncertain ones.

KANDARPA SANJIVINI PILLS AND OIL

are the safest and surest remedies for indigestion constipation, loss of appetite, memory, mental, physical and nervous debility and all sorts of urinary disorders, improve impoverished blood.

Price per tin of 40 Pills Rs. 5 & per tola of Oil Rs. 10.

Both Purchased at a time Rs. 11/4.-

Medical Advice and a Medical Book containing 128 pages sent Gratis and Post Free.

RAJ VAIDYA NARAYANJI KESHAVJI

Head Office :- Jamnagar, Kathiawar, (India.)

Branch :- No. 187, Kalbadevi Road,
24-8-1919. BOMBAY.

Empire Hindu Hotel

Opposite Victoria Terminus
Bombay.

(Central Situation)
Strictly Vegetarian
Charges Moderate

Fitted with
Electric Lift, Fans and Lights.

TELEGRAMS:

"FOOD," BOMBAY.

22-8-19.

TELEPHONE

2789.

Saffron? Saffron?? Saffron???

If you wish to buy genuinely pure and best Saffron it is
SUN

BRAND

SAFFRON

ONLY

It has been largely used by Jain Temples, Maharajas Durbars, Hakims and Vaidyas all over the country for the last 75 year and is well known for its purity and genuineness.

S. NARAYEN & Co.,

17-2-18

21, Humnum Street, Fort Bombay.

"MESMERISM AND HYPNOTISM."

Complete Course Rs. 1-8 only. Contents. 1. Instructions. 2. Breathing Exercise or Yoga Practice. 3. Exercises to develop this will and memory. 4. Various Hypnotic processes. 5. To wake up a subject. 6. Clairvoyance. 7. Telepathy. 8. Levitation. 9. Wonderful methods of Hindu Healing. 10. Various diseases. 11. Hindu Catalepsy or Burial alive. 12 The secret method of telling future events most wonderfully by the Indian Yogees without horoscope or birth time. Mr. Ratikantha Bhowmik Head Master writes from Sanhatix on 22-10-19:—I have become successful hypnotist with the help of your course. The methods are far easier and simpler than in any other courses. Mr. B. Sitaramurti, B.A., B.L., Government pleader writes: Your book really reveals the wonderful hidden powers of man. The methods are of the easiest kind and the book is short is the best of its kind in the field.

THE EASTERN HYPNOTIC HOME,
P. O. Chodavaram, (Visagapatam, Dt.)

"COMMERCE AND INDUSTRIES."

An Interesting Monthly Journal of Indian Material Progress.

Annual Subscription Rs. 10-0 and Single Copy Rs. 1 Post Free.

A Specially valuable advertising Medium.

Wanted Agents throughout India.

Address:—P. Box. No. 353, and 5 Mount Road
Madras S. C. 12-10-19

HYPNOTISM

PERSONAL MAGNETISM,
WILL POWER,
NERVE FORCE—

Call what you will—

Is the intangible power that controls human destiny. It is the key to all business and social success. This power is no special gift of any one. It is latent in every one. We help you how to display it. By our system, you can learn in a few days at your own home and not only achieve success yourself, but you can influence the mind, health and actions of others to a remarkable degree.

Write immediately for our free booklet—The Pride of India.

THE LATENT LIGHT CULTURE,
TINNEVELLY, S. INDIA.

Battiwala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 1 each bottle of 100.

Battiwala's Genuine Quinine Tablets gr. 2 each bottle of 100.

Battiwala's Ague Mixture of Fever, Malaria, Influenza etc.

Battiwala's Ague Pills for Malaria, Fever, Influenza etc.

Battiwala's Tonic pills for pale people & nervous breaks down.

Battiwala's Tooth Powder of Preserving Teeth

Battiwala's Ringworm ointment for Ringworm

Dhobi Itch etc.

May be had from all dealers in medicines or from
Dr. H. L. Battiwala Sons & Co., Ltd.

No. 12, Worli, 18, Bombay.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESS:—"Doctor Battiwala Dader"

THE BOMBAY CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK.

HEAD OFFICE Apollo Street, St., Bombay.

DIRECTORS:—The Hon. Sir Fazlulbhoj Currimbhoy (Chairman), Sir Vihaldas D. Thackersey, the Hon. Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas, Sir Stanley Reed, the Hon. Mr. C. V. Mehta, the Chief of Ichalkaranji, G. K. Devadhar, Esq., the Hon. Sir P. D. Pattani, the Raja Sahab of Malgaon.

Share Capital (full paid) Rs. 7,00,000

1 Deposits fixed for one year and shorter or longer periods are accepted. Rates and other particulars may be ascertained from the under signed.

2 The Bank finances only registered Co-operative Societies in the Bombay Presidency on the recommendation of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Bombay Presidency.

3 Accounts are audited half-yearly by a special Government Auditor, and quarterly statements of financial position are published in the "Bombay Government Gazette," 20-5-17. VAIKUNTH L. MEHTA, Manager.

Clean
Wholesome
Intelligent
Entertainment

IS A GREAT STEP

IN

SOCIAL REFORM.

When deciding on a

*PLACE OF AMUSEMENT TWO
ESTABLISHMENTS*

Should at once leap to the mind.

THE EXCELSIOR

BOMBAY'S PREMIER MODERN THEATRE

AND

THE EMPIRE

BOMBAY'S MOST PALATIAL
PICTURE THEATRE

Where Film Plays of Distinction are shown

Every Week.

A

Great Cinema Masterpiece

is shown,

Both theatres are near the Bori Bunder

and are run by the

EXCELSIOR SYNDICATE.

The Pioneer of Bombay's

AMUSEMENT WORLD.

FURUKAWA & CO.

TOKIO

The Largest Manufacturers
in the East

OF

ELECTRIC BARE COPPER CONDUCTORS,

ELECTRIC UNDERGROUND CABLES,

ELECTRIC INSULATED WIRES,

ELECTRIC ACCESSORIES,

INGOTS, RODS, WIRES,

SHEETS, TUBES,

Etc., Etc.,

All our wires are made in accordance with the standard of the British Cable Makers' Association and are tested and approved by leading firms in India:

SOLE AGENTS IN INDIA AND BURMA.

TATA, SONS & CO.,

BOMBAY & CALCUTTA.

Best Portland Cement.

"GANPATI" BRAND.

Guaranteed to pass the British Standard and all Engineering Specifications.

It is absolutely uniform and most finely ground, which means economy in use and strength in constructional work.

TATA SONS Ltd.

Agents, The Indian Cement Co., Ltd
Narsari Building, Fort, BOMBAY.

Works at Porbunder, Kathiawad.

11-8-17.

When YOUR EYES

need to be examined by QUALIFIED OCULISTS and by SCIENTIFIC REFRACTIONISTS of 26 year experience, FREE OF CHARGE, you cannot do better than GO TO

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR & CO.

The leading firm of Oculists, Eyesight Specialists, Manufacturing Opticians and suppliers of the patented

"KRYPTOK"

(Invisible one-piece bifocal lens.)

Toric, and all kinds of lenses,—Cylindrical, Spherical, Prismatic, &c., from pebbles as well as from best quality crown glass.

PHIROZE M. DASTOOR

Eyesight Specialist,

With 26 Years' Practical Experience.,

Holds Exceptional Testimonials from H. H. The Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, the Hon'ble Sir Lawrence Jenkins the Hon. Mr. Justice Batty, Mrs. Batty, the Hon. Sir N. S. Chundavarkar, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beaman, the Hon'ble Sir S. L. Bachelor, the Hon'ble Sir John Heaton Mr. H. G. Gell, M. V. O., Col. R. H. Forman, R. A. M. C., P. M. O. Bo. Brigade, Lieut. Col. G. H. Bull, M. D., I. M. S., Lieut-Colonel Peters M. B., I. M. S., and other high personages.

(7) 379, HORNEY ROW,

Opposite the Government Telegraph Office,
6-11-10. Fort, BOMBAY.

ATTENDING ASSUREES ARE INVITED TO COMPARE THE RATES AND CONDITIONS OF

The Empire of India Life Assurance Company, Limited.

WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.

Head Office 11 Elphinstone Circle, BOMBAY.

SEE REPORT AND OPINIONS OF THE PRESS AS TO THE REMARKABLE PROGRESS MADE BY THE COMPANY.

ENDOWMENT NON-FORFEITABLE POLICY FOR RS. 3,000.

PAYABLE AT AGE 60 OR AT DEATH, IF PREVIOUS, WITH PROFIT.

If, at any time, the assured under this plan should desire to cease paying any more premiums, he can obtain a paid-up Policy for such a proportion of the original sum assured as the number of premiums paid bears to the number agreed upon. Thus a gentleman who had assured at age 30 for a Policy of Rs. 3,000 payable at age 60 or at Death, if previous, after 3 year payments, would be entitled to a Free paid-up Policy for Rs. 500 free of future payments.

SOME OF THE DISTINCTIVE FEATURES.

Funds invested in Government Securities and in accordance with the Indian Trusts Act
Policy holders can appoint their own Directors.
90 per cent. of profits to Participating Policy holders,
Lapsed policies revived without Medical Certificate.
Liberal Surrender Values 40 per cent. of the Tabular premium paid.
Immediate payment of Claims.
Medical fees and stamps on Policies are payable by the Company.

The sum assured is PAYABLE IN FULL should death occur even immediately after

GUARANTEE INSURANCE.—This Company issues Guaranteed Policies in situation of trust and responsibility. A specially authorized to guarantee the employees of the Post Office

MONTHLY PREMIUM.

AT AGE 20, Rs. 6-9-0.
AT AGE 25, RS. 7-8-0.
AT AGE 30, RS. 8-14-0.
AT AGE 35, Rs. 10-13-0.
AT AGE 40, Rs. 13-12-0.
AT AGE 45, Rs. 18-10-0

Proposal Forms and full Particulars may be obtained from any local Agent in India or from 22-9-10. ALLUM, BHARUCHA & CO. Managers.

IN INDIA

EVERY ONE KNOWS.

whom it does concern that we are foremost in supplying the best
COSSI SILK SUIT PIECES

suitable for the season. These pieces are strong, fancy and durable, and have been specially manufactured for India's Market. Each piece guaranteed for One Suit Complete.

Price Rs. 10 per piece.

Write to—THE BHARGAVA COMMERCIAL SOCIETY,
1-18. Benares City.

THE INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER. Contract Rates for Advertisements.

Number of Insertions.	1 Inch.		2 Inches.		3 Columns.		4 Columns.		5 Columns.
	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.	Rs.	a.
13	11	0	16	0	20	0	30	0	50	0
28	16	0	25	0	30	0	50	0	87	0
52	25	0	40	0	50	0	87	0	155	0

Casual advertisements at Rs. 4 per line for the 1st insertion and Rs. 2 per line of succeeding insertions. Advertisement charges are strictly payable half-year or yearly in advance.

WONDERFUL TONIC AND MOUTH-REFRESHER
JINTAN.

This is a safe and efficient remedy in all kinds of diseases or disturbances of the digestive organs. It is composed entirely of VEGETABLE INGREDIENTS made from the prescription of the following eminent medical men viz—
NORIHURO MIWA, M.D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy,
ZENJIRO INOUE, M. D., Professor of the Imperial Medical Academy
 and testified as to its efficacy by
Baron J. MATSUMOTO, M. D., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Army.
T. MITAMURA Esq., Surgeon-Inspector-General of the Imperial Japanese Navy.

As a digestive it is unequalled and will not disturb the functions of the most delicate stomach. Its antiseptic properties render it very efficacious in warding off disease and at the same time it imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath of the user.

By virtue of its aroma, it effectually masks the odour of Tobacco and Alcoholic Spirits.

It acts beneficially on the vocal cords and has found much favour with public speakers, actors, singers and those whose vocation necessitates a severe strain on the throat.

GOOD FOR

Biliousness, Headache, Vertigo, Nausea, Indigestion, Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, etc., etc.

To maintain general health 2 to 3 pills may be taken occasionally, well masticated.

Price— Small Packet Rs. 0-1-0. Middle Packet, with Tin case., Rs. 0-4-0. Large Packet with fancy case., Rs. 1-0-0

Prepared by Messrs. MORISHITA Co., OSAKA, JAPAN.

Sole Agents: Jintan Agency (G. R. Chaubal), Juma Masjid, BOMBAY.

At each opening here automatically

FOR PAINS AND ACHES SPRAINS ETC. USE:—

AMRUTANJAN.

The magical pain balm extant. Cures all aches & pains Costs 8 As. Sold everywhere.

ON DUTY!

THE YOUNG COLLEGIATE IS OUT.
 An educational Monthly for Young and Old.
 Editor:—Mr. B. S. NIMBKAR.

The "It's of it:—

1. If you are a Student, it will help you to the Examination Hall because your professors contribute to it.
2. If you are an active worker, it will show some field for you to solve problems, because it contains articles of your readers.
3. If you are an artist, it is illustrated for you.
4. If you are a Social reformer, it will discuss all problems of Social reform and will give you views of male and female reformers.

Whatever you are, the Monthly gives you whatever you want.
 Annual Subscription Rs. 3. Single Copy Annas 8.

Wanted Agents throughout India.

For advertisement rates & other particulars apply to—

S. A. DANGE,
 Manager.

Young Collegiate Office,
 Sandhurst Road, Bombay No. 4.
 14-12-19.

DENTISTRY.

Extractions Painless;
 Terms Very Moderate;
 Gold Crown, Bar and
 Bridge Work a Speciality
 (teeth without plate);
 Latest Successful Treatment
 for Pyorrhoea (pus in gums).

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

Hours: 8-1-30 & 5-7-30; Daily.
 (Sundays—From 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.)

ADROOS BUILDING,
 NEW CHARNI ROAD,
 GINSAON, BOMBAY. } 1-6-19.

K. R. AMAT,
 Surgeon Dentist.

THE INDIAN * SOCIAL * REFORMER.

PUBLISHED EVERY SUNDAY MORNING.

Office:—EMPIRE BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD, FORT.

Editor:—K. NATARAJAN

Vol. XXX. BOMBAY—SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1920. No. 24.

"I will be as harsh as truth, and as uncompromising as justice; I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse, I will not retreat a single inch—And I will be heard."
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON in the Liberator.

CONTENTS.

Maternity and Child Welfare Exhibition, Delhi.	A Correction.
Constitutional Reform in Hyderabad (Deccan.)	Indian Olympic Association.
The First Non-official Municipal President in Madras.	The Dacca University Bill I. Redemption, Hindu and Christian.
Christian Missionaries and the Jhallianwalla Massacre.	Non-Brahmin Representation in Madras.
Sir P. S. Sivaswami Iyer's Unpleasant Experience, Satyagraha and the Masses	The Prohibition Act in the United States.
	A Useful Book of Reference.
	Surat Hindu Orphanage.
	An Interview with Mr. Gandhi.

NOTES.

Maternity and Child Welfare Exhibition, Delhi.
We have received the programme of the forthcoming Maternity and Child Welfare Exhibition to be opened at Delhi on the 21st instant by Her Excellency Lady Chelmsford, the Patroness, who has been taking a deep interest in the subject. The Committee of the Exhibition hopes that many people will go to Delhi from all parts of India to see the Exhibition with a view to organizing and carrying out similar work in their own stations. The Exhibition programme covers seven days and includes various items. After the opening ceremony on the first day, the students of the Lady Hardinge Medical College will enact Shakuntala to an audience of women only. On Monday Her Highness the Begum of Bhopal will deliver a lecture in vernacular on the duties of Indian women in connection with Maternity and Child Welfare. On the same day in the evening a lecture will be delivered on Infant feeding and rearing by Dr. Ruth Young. There are several other lectures for women by women and demonstrations. The visitor will not find time hang heavy on her bands during the days of the Exhibition. All railways will grant concession tickets for second and third class on payment half fares and inter-class tickets on payment of third class fares to medical students, medical subordinates, nurses, midwives, school teachers and missionaries, provided they travel in parties of not less than four by the same train and produce certificates of bona fides from prescribed authorities.

Constitutional Reform in Hyderabad (Deccan.)
His Exalted Highness the Nizam has issued the following important Firman Mobarick dated King Kotli, the 5th February, 1920: "In my Firman dated the 22nd of Safar-ul-Muzaffar 1338 II. under which I established an Executive Council for the more efficient administration of my Dominions, I had directed that my Legislative Council would continue to work under the existing rules until they should be modified. This Council was one of the outstanding features of the Reforms introduced by my revered father. Since its establishment, some minor changes have been effected, but they are not sufficient to meet the requirements of present times, nor do they give promise of the fulfilment of those duties and functions which I consider necessary for the prosperity and advancement of my beloved subjects. The Constitution I have given to my Executive Council has set it on the high road of administrative efficiency. It has made an excellent start and I feel confident that its working will demonstrate the wisdom of the steps taken. The next important move in the direction of Reforms I have in contemplation, is a thorough and complete investigation of the conditions most favourable to the enlargement of the Legislative Council and the expansion of its usefulness as an integral part of the Government machinery. I, therefore, direct the Sadar-i-Azam, Sir Ali Imam, to take immediate steps to collect all necessary materials on which a liberal scheme for the attainment of the above mentioned objects may be based. It is my desire that, with due regard to the social and educational advance made by my people, particular attention should be paid to the following points in conducting the investigation:—(a) Substantial introduction of the Elective Element, (b) Direct Voting, (c) Representation of all important Classes and Interests, (d) Effective protection of Minorities, (e) Conditions of Franchise, (f) The Official Element, (g) Powers and Functions. The Sadar-i-Azam is authorized to appoint special officers and constitute Committees on whose reports a comprehensive scheme with definite proposals shall be drawn up for presentation to my Executive Council for opinion prior to its submission to me for consideration and orders."

The First Non-official Municipal President in Madras. Dewan Bahadur P. Theagaraya Chetty was elected first President of the Madras Municipal Corporation, under its new constitution, on Tuesday. The Dewan Bahadur is the doyen of the Madras Municipality, having been a member continuously for 36 years. It is a proof of his keen interest in civic affairs that he should have never thought of breaking his connection with the Municipality all these years. His choice for the first Presidentship is most appropriate, and it would have been a graceful thing if it had been made unanimously. We are sorry to see his name in the list drawn by lot for retirement next November under the Act. We are sure his constituency will return him at once to the Corporation, and we trust that his colleagues will unanimously re-elect him to serve his full term of Presidentship and to present the address which the oldest Municipal Corporation in India will, no doubt, vote to His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales when he comes to us next cold weather. A long career of public usefulness such as the Dewan Bahadur's is one of which every citizen, Brahmin or non-Brahmin, may well be proud. We congratulate Mr. Chettiar on his election.

Christian Missionaries and the Jhallianwalla Massacre: The Bengalee, edited by the Hon. Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee, gives expression to the surprise felt by many Indians friendly-disposed to Christian Missions, when it observes, commenting on the Rev. S. Winslow's letter in a recent issue of the Challenge:

"We hope these words will strike a sympathetic chord in the hearts of many European missionaries who, we are pained to think, have taken upon themselves a vow of silence even when the heart of the people is so sore over the affair. If we had now stalwart European missionaries who participated so whole-heartedly in the joys and sorrows of the people in the olden days, the whole country would have resounded with their indignant protest. But it grieves us to find in these days even missionaries figuring in the performances of the Indo-British Association. However, the Rev. Mr. Winslow gives a true picture of the effect which the abominable massacre at Amritsar has produced upon the minds of our countrymen. It has gathered into "one blazing point all the smouldering resentment awakened by a hundred lesser acts of cold superciliousness and cynical contempt, of callous indifference on the part of Englishmen to Indian susceptibilities" and branded it indelibly upon their hearts. With one or two exceptions, there is a conspiracy of silence over the matter. The Rev. Mr. Winslow asks, "how can we missionaries hope to preach Christianity with any success in the face of such deeds as these?" We wonder this question did not trouble the mind of other missionaries. We are surprised beyond measure to find that it altogether escaped their serious attention. It is of the highest importance for the fair name of Christians that a declaration should be made that such acts as were done in Amritsar are utterly contrary to the true spirit of Christ and as such they are repudiated. Let the plain thing be said straight and without camouflage. So long as acts like the Amritsar massacre remain unrepudiated by the general Christian consciousness, it will create a very unfavourable impression in the public mind in India." In a later issue of the Challenge, Miss Sherwood, the Missionary lady who was assaulted by the mob at Amritsar, writes a letter with reference to Mr. Winslow's letter. In this, she says that General Dyer deserves to be placed in the same category as Havelock and Outram, though she concludes that the words in her ears are not "Kill, Kill," but "Leave her alone, she is a woman," and that "it was Indians who rescued me, an Indian house that gave me shelter, and Indian hands that first dressed my wounds." The terrible ordeal through which she passed has evidently affected the good lady's sense of proportion.

Sir P. S. Sivaswami Iyer's Unpleasant Experience : Sir P. S. Sivaswami Iyer, late member of the Executive Council of the Governor of Madras, and President of the All-India Moderate Conference held at Calcutta last December, has had an unpleasant experience while travelling in Burma. He gave the following account of it to a representative of the Rangoon Mail. A European entered his compartment and asked him to vacate it as a lady was with him (the European.) "I told him that they might get into the next compartment. He said it was occupied by a gentleman and went out grumbling. The guard or station master then came up to me, and asked me if I would vacate the compartment. I asked him why they could not go into the next compartment. He said that a gentleman was travelling in the next compartment. I told him that they might ask the other gentleman to come into my compartment and that it would be inconvenient for me to turn out with my luggage, etc. After a few minutes, the European officer re-entered my compartment with his wife, and said "you are a damned brute, it is disgraceful. I have never heard such a thing in my life, a refusal to oblige a lady." I said "you have no business to talk to me in this way," and then he said "shut up." He and his wife then took their seats in the opposite berth which was quite vacant. When I got up at seven o'clock he said,

"I want to let into you if you will." I did not quite follow him, and then he asked me, "do you understand English?" I said "yes." Then he said, "I have known lots of respectable people in India, Sikhs, Punjabis, and Hindus, and there are many whom I am proud to call my friends. None of them would have behaved to a lady in the way you have done. The Maharajah of Bikanir, Maharajah Sir Pratap Singh would have vacated the compartment. No Englishman worthy of the name would have behaved to an Indian lady in the way you have done." I told him "I have also travelled with lots of Englishmen and this is the first time I have seen such language used." This man is a Government officer, Captain Childers, of the Military Police at Pyawbe, and we hope that his superiors will lose no time in impressing on him the unwisdom of behaving like a bully to Indian travellers. We should be surprised if even Sir Sivaswami's seasoned moderation did not suffer momentary eclipse when the dawn of the 15th January was breaking on the way from Pagan to Mandalay.

Satyagraha and the Masses : Writing on Satyagraha in a recent issue we remarked that if the populace understood Satyagraha in the sense which Mr. Gandhi understands it in, there will be no safer or more efficacious means of national salvation. Young India refers to a tradition current in Northern India of the people having used Satyagraha against Aurangzebe in connection with a bathing ceremony at Mathura. As we do not happen to know of this tradition, we are unable to say anything about it. As for the example of the Quakers in England, the Doukhobors in Russia and, we may add, the Babis in Persia, these were religious sects bound together by a common belief and pledged thereby to suffering in common. The same effect was mechanically produced on the South African Indian passive resisters by their alien environment enforcing on them scrupulous obedience to the general body of laws as the first condition of their being free to break the special law which they deemed objectionable. The absence of any parallelism between these examples and the recent Indian endeavour at a reproduction of them in very different conditions, should be obvious. At the same time, we may point out to those who object to Satyagraha as a weapon of protest against a needlessly repressive measure, that they virtually leave no alternative but armed or unarmed insurrection as the only means whereby a people can seek to induce an irresponsible and irresponsible Government to undo a public wrong.

A Correction: We were in error in stating last week that seven men were selected from Madras for the Indian Civil Service. The actual number is five only, and the nominees are Mr. C. Vijiathavan B.A., B.L., a nephew of the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Krishnan, Mr. K. Vallodi B.A., a son of Rajah K. O. Manavedan Rajah, retired District and Sessions Judge, Mr. Ramakrishna Chaudri M.A., of Guntur District, Mir Shabuddin B.A., B.L., nephew Mr. Bazalullah, Collector and District Magistrate of Guntur and Mr. Bhaskar Rao Naidu, son of Mr. Krishnaaswamy Naidu, sub-Judge.

Indian Olympic Association: We are requested to state that the preliminary sports to select a representative body of athletes to represent India at the next International Olympic Games to be held in Belgium in August 1920, will take place at Bombay or Poona during the first week of April 1920. Exact dates and place will be announced later. Only entries recommended by the Provincial Branches of the Association or other authorised institutions will be accepted. Particulars can be had from the General Secretary, Indian Olympic Association, Poona City.

INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER.

BOMBAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1920.

THE DACCA UNIVERSITY BILL, I. COMMUNAL REPRESENTATION.

The Bill for establishing a University at Dacca in East Bengal, which was introduced in the Imperial Legislative Council in September last, was referred after a somewhat excited discussion to a Select Committee on Wednesday. East Bengal has a large Mahomedan population and a Dacca University has all along been regarded as specially required to encourage higher education among them. It is an admitted fact that University education has so far failed to appeal to Indian Mahomedans, and that if it is to do so, it is necessary that the special needs, difficulties and, it may be, prejudices of the community should be adequately represented in the various parts of the University. With this object in view, the Bill provides for a due representation of Mahomedans in the general body of the University and its important organs, in addition to the provision of a Mahomedan Advisory Committee to look after the special requirements of Mahomedan students. Mr. Surendra Nath Banerji fastened upon these provisions and protested against the introduction of the communal principle in the proposed University. He was followed by other members among whom were Mr. Sastry, Sir Dinshah Wacha and Pandit Mohan Malaviya. Mr. Shafi, the member of Government in charge of the Bill, seems to have been a little excited and to have expatiated on the inconsistency of gentlemen who signed the Lucknow Compact and advocated Hindu-Mahomedan unity, opposing communal representation in the constitution of Dacca University. We are unable to agree that advocates of Hindu-Muslim unity should never in any circumstances object to the extension of communal representation. That would mean that Hindu-Muslim unity can be maintained only on one condition, namely, that the Mahomedans must have their way, however irrational or extravagant it may seem to others. This, we need hardly say, would be good neither for the country nor for the Mahomedans themselves. The petted child is often a spoilt child and Indian Mahomedans have been alternately the petted children of Government and of politically-minded Indians. And we are seriously afraid that they are in the way of suffering from this circumstance. But as regards communal representation in Dacca University, the protest of Mr. Surendra Nath Banerji and the other gentlemen who supported him, was clearly misplaced. We have insisted in these columns over and over again that Education is the department of State activity, which bears most closely on the social and domestic life of the people. Holding that view, we cannot but feel that communal representation, if it is needed at all, is needed more in the educational than in the political organs of the State. We have no hesitation in saying that, in the special conditions of East Bengal, the provision for communal representation in the proposed University is a wise and statesmanlike provision. It does not follow, we need hardly say, that a similar provision in Universities in other parts of India will be similarly wise and statesmanlike; though we have always felt that it is a source of strength to have all communities represented on the Boards and Committees of our Universities by the best men available from among the members.

SOME SUBSTANTIAL OBJECTIONS.

The proposed scheme for the Dacca University is open to substantial objections. The scheme purports to follow the lines laid down by the Sadler Commission. We think that while it does this to a large extent, in the letter, it violates in essentials the spirit of the recommendations of that Commission. Apart from that, there are serious objections to the scheme of the Sadler Commission itself. The most fundamental of them all is that it throws away altogether the experience gained in the Universities of India during three-quarters of a century, imposes on Indians an altogether new and strange conception of a University, and, indeed, obliges them to learn a new terminology for understanding and working the scheme. At any time, such a violent breach of continuity in the highest organ of education in a country, would be inconvenient and embarrassing. At this time, when our political system has been cast into the melting-pot so thorough-going a revolution in our educational system is simply bewildering. We can only understand innovations such as this scheme involves to mean that Indian education is to be treated not as a living organism, growing and adapting itself to and drawing nourishment and inspiration from its environment, but as a rare exotic to be prevented from becoming acclimatised in the country, and striking root in its soil, by being dug up from time to time in order to give place to a different species which has been found to be demanded by the altered political and social conditions of England. Not even Scottish experience is to be considered. The Sadler Commission actually seem to think that the conditions of student life in Bengal are much nearer to those in England than to those in Scotland or Germany! That is the only meaning we can attach to the following passage in their report:

The examples of Scotland and Germany, where suitable and respectable lodgings for students are abundant, quoted by Sir Gooroo Dasa, do not move us so much as the actual conditions of Bengal. We cannot accept his presentation of life at a hostel as being one of rigid routine and dead level uniformity. That is far removed indeed from the happy and varied life as we know it in English Colleges and University Colleges and University hostels, from the life that we have seen in residential Colleges in India like Aligarh, Serampore, Bankura or St. Paul's."

Some people have not seen in Aligarh a conspicuous success in the introduction of English University life. Serampore and St. Paul's are, we believe, Christian missionary institutions attended mostly by converts and their children over whom the Missionaries exercise paternal sway. We do not know anything about Bankura. We have recently had the extreme case of Newington which, in one respect at least, namely, the extreme fewness of its scholars, was ideally situated for an experiment. In any case, we are not able to dismiss Sir Gooroo Dass's testimony about the Indian hostel system as lightly as the Commission has done. The Dacca University scheme is a particular application of the general principles laid down in the Sadler Commission's report. What we have said above shows that these general principles are by no means non-controversial. The country has had no time to discuss those principles and to express a considered opinion on them. The Report has been published in parts, and as the Reform scheme came to a head at about the same time, the recommendations of the Sadler report have been thrown into the background. Even the Universities have not been able to deal with the Report in the time that has elapsed since its publication. They have appointed Committees which will take not less than three or four months to make their reports to the Senate. It is utterly impossible to criticise the Dacca University scheme in a constructive sense, except in the light of the views one forms of the general principles enunciated in the Sadler Commission's Report.

ARBITRARY AND REVOLUTIONARY.

Evidently even Mr. Shafi, the Member in charge of the Bill, feels this difficulty but he is helpless. Nawab Ali Chowdhri, a member from East Bengal, quoted the opinion of leading educationists in his province, who were all agreed that the schools and colleges in the province, outside Dacca, should be affiliated to Dacca University rather than continue affiliated to distant Calcutta. The Chief Commissioner of Assam had urged that the educational institutions in that sub-province should not be under any University outside it, but if that had to be, he would much prefer Dacca to Calcutta. The Member for Education could only say in reply that he was sorry that Government was bound by the recommendation of the Sadler Commission and they would not depart from it. The Sadler Commission's treatment of this important point is perfunctory and by no means convincing. They reject the ground that the Calcutta University has grown to unmanageable dimensions, as having no bearing on the proposal to have a new University at Dacca. We had always thought it had a good deal to do with it. In any case the Sadler Commission itself was called into existence principally in view of the unwieldy dimensions to which Calcutta University had grown. The Commissioners have themselves put that fact in the forefront of their case for drastic reform. In our opinion, the line of right development in University reform in India is progressively to increase the number of Universities, thus reducing the area of their jurisdiction, in every province, until at last by a natural and easy process involving no violent dislocation of existing ideas and experience, each University has a jurisdiction not too large to admit of its being compacted into a teaching University. Our main aim in this country immediately should be to bring education of all kinds as far as possible to the doors of the people. The Dacca University scheme deliberately pursues the opposite policy. It rejects the idea of affiliating colleges in the neighbouring districts of East Bengal and concentrates itself on providing what it believes to be an ideal scheme for persons within a five miles' radius of Dacca. And Government, we are told, cannot depart from this plan.

CONFORMING TO THE LETTER BUT NOT THE SPIRIT.

We remarked above that while the Dacca University Bill to a large extent follows the letter of the recommendations of the Sadler Commission, it is not in essential respects in conformity with the spirit of them. The Sadler Commission observe:—

We have shown in another place the grave disadvantages of the existing dissociation between detailed knowledge of academic matters and responsibility for their administration, and have suggested that while the State cannot and ought not to rid itself of the ultimate responsibility for the larger questions of university policy which affect the country as a whole, the attempt of the State to manage a university in detail leads to confusion; it weakens the sense of responsibility of the University in advising Government as to the changes in their regulations, since Government is not bound to take their advice; and the responsibility of Government in dealing with university administration becomes somewhat unreal, since it is an obvious impossibility for the Government department concerned to be acquainted with the details of university management in regard to which they are legally obliged to make decisions.

We have no doubt that this picture is largely true of Calcutta University. But no one who knows will find much resemblance between it and the relations between, for instance, the University and the Government of Bombay. As both the Universities are governed by the same statute, the defects noticed by the Commission in the Calcutta University are clearly not inherent in the statute itself. They arise either from errors of administration or from the unwieldy jurisdiction of Calcutta University. The one, no doubt, has a bearing on the other. But the point we wish to note here is this: the obvious meaning of the quotation that we have made from the Sadler Commission's report, is that the Government power of control over the Dacca University should be considerably less than what is provided in the Universities' Act of 1904. How does the Bill give effect to this idea? It packs the University with ex-officio members, while giving it nominally power to manage its affairs. Let us compare the number of ex-officio members in Bombay University which controls a whole province besides several Indian States, and in the proposed Dacca University with its five mile radius. In Bombay University we have, besides the Chancellor, the Members of the Executive Council, the Chief Justice, the Bishop and the Director of Public Instruction, seven in all. The Act lays down that they shall not exceed ten. Take the case of the proposed Dacca University. First, we have the Viceroy as visitor with large powers which we have, no doubt, will rarely be used. Then there is the Governor of Bengal as Chancellor, and the Chancellor's powers are considerably more than those of the Chancellor of the older Universities and extends to matters of administration. The Vice-Chancellor is to be a paid full-time officer to be appointed by the Chancellor. The Treasurer is another such officer to be appointed also by the Chancellor. The Court which is the outer body of the University loosely corresponding to the Senate in the order of Universities, is to have as ex-officio members, these three gentlemen, the Directors of Public Instruction in Bengal and Assam, the members of the Executive Council of Bengal, the Vice-Chancellor of Calcutta University, the Commissioner, Collector and District Judge of Dacca, the Director of Agriculture, the Civil Surgeon, the Superintending Engineer, the Chairman of Dacca Municipality, the Inspector and Inspectress of Girls' Schools, Dacca Division, and a number of others, without apparently any limit as to number. There is not much reality in the independence of a University, a point on which the Sadler Commission lay so much stress, in which so many persons hold seats in virtue of their official positions.

REDEMPTION, HINDU AND CHRISTIAN. *

The series of volumes published by the Oxford University Press, under the joint editorship of Dr. J. N. Farquhar and Dr. H. D. Griswold, with the suggestive title of the "Religious Quest of India," marks an epoch in the history of Christian contact with India, and more generally, indeed, of the relations between the East and the West. It has always been our conviction that the consummation so devoutly longed for by men of goodwill all over the world, namely, the union of the East and the West, must begin in the highest realm of thought, the spiritual. Complete mutual understanding of each other's attitude of mind by the religious-minded in every country, will achieve wonders, where the calculated efforts of the politically and commercially minded only will fail. In this series the editors, admirably selected for their respective subjects, bring to their task a mind well-equipped with information, high scholarship, and, above all, a resolute goodwill. The result is a growing sense, among thoughtful Christians and non-Christians alike, of the solidarity of the spiritual. We have called attention before to the curious fact, which goes to confirm our view of the fundamental importance of religion as the binding force of races and civilizations, that the movement of thought represented by the "Religious Quest of India" series preceded and precluded by several years the corresponding movement in politics which has found statutory expression in the Indian Reforms Act. It is fitting to acknowledge that the credit of initiating this beneficent movement, so far as it can be ascribed to any single man, belongs to Dr. Farquhar whose "Crown of Hinduism" was its first and most striking landmark. We have had with us for some months now one of the most remarkable books in this remarkable series, "Redemption, Hindu and Christian" by the Rev. Sydney Cave. The subject dealt with lies at the very heart of the two religions, and we should like especially to congratulate the author on the atmosphere of deep reverence which he has succeeded so wonderfully in diffusing over every page of his book. No conscious effort would have been able to achieve this result. The reader feels that he is dealing with a writer to whom the names are nothing and the ideals behind them everything. He can see God, recognise Truth, under Hindu as well as under a Christian nomenclature. He is far too deeply and vitally interested in the grand movement by which the material world is slowly being transmuted to the spiritual through the soul of man, to waste attention on the verbal eddies that have at times delayed and even temporarily diverted it to ends seemingly irrelevant to its main great purpose.

NEED FOR RE-STATEMENT OF CHRISTIANITY.

We were privileged recently to publish an article from the pen of a highly-valued contributor with the assumed name of "Kotgarh" who told us in beautiful words how his deepening insight into Hindu thought helped to deepen his insight into Christ's thought also. Many a Hindu can say the same of the effect on him of a sympathetic understanding of Christ's message. Mr. Gandhi, in an interview with a Christian Missionary gentleman on a recent occasion, acknowledged in striking language his deep debt to the New Testament. We are glad to recognise Dr. Sydney Cave as of the group of pioneers who are boring a passage from either side through the great mountain range of prejudice and misunderstanding which has kept the East and the West asunder for centuries. That the men engaged in this task, and Dr. Cave among them, should differ sharply in some respects from the rank and file of their coreligionists, is inevitable. He acknowledges at the outset—though he holds, and rightly, we think, that they had excuse for it—that the earlier Christian Missionaries in India had no access to the higher Hinduism. In other respects, too, there have been fundamental changes in the conditions of the problem of Christian Missions in India. "Even the moral supremacy of Christianity," writes Dr. Cave, "can no longer be spoken of as a truism. Men are aware that not all in England are Sabibs. The 'slum' there, the social vice, misery, are familiar facts. The victory of Japan did much to rehabilitate Oriental self-respect. Now, on the gigantic scale of a world war, Indians have seen not only the failure of Christianity to preserve Christendom from war, but its failure to keep war free from needless cruelty and lust. And Indians can point with pride to the equal comradeship of their troops with British on the field of battle and their proved discipline and valour." If these changed conditions have made a restatement of Christianity, in terms of Indian spiritual culture, imperative, the fact that Christianity has made most of its converts from the depressed classes, interposes a serious obstacle in the way of such a restatement. "The great mass-movements," writes Dr. Cave, "have been chiefly among the outcastes. For such, religion meant devil-worship, and Hinduism, the system which sanctioned their degradation, and denied to them the elementary rights of manhood. It is not surprising if those whom Hinduism has thus treated should regard the very phrase 'Higher Hinduism' as an oxymoron. With no tradition from the East, they have grasped eagerly at the culture of the West. It is scarcely to be wondered at if many such out-western and Westerners. Christians themselves are often as incredulous as Hindus that Christianity will ever supersede Hinduism. And in our great Christian communities even men of university education are often almost incredibly ignorant and indifferent in their attitude to Hinduism." The average Christian Missionary has himself been infected with this feature of the Indian Christian mentality with which he is most closely and constantly in contact. And when thinkers like Dr. Cave, among Westerners, and Mr. K. T. Paul, among Indians, endeavour to restate Christian truths in terms of Indian religious culture and national self-reverence, it is no wonder that they should at first meet with little sympathetic response from those who have come to constitute the conservatism of Indian Christianity. And conservatism in India is the root factor, whether it bear the label of Hindu, Mahomedan, Christian, Anglo-Indian or even Animist. It is the Indian religion of religions. Every one who wants to move a step is up against it in one form or another.

* Oxford University Press, 10 Shillings.

THE TWO GREAT RELIGIOUS TYPES.

Dr. Cave briefly states the purpose of his book thus: "That Christianity is a religion of deliverance and, as such meets the aspiration of Hinduism, it is the main purpose of this essay to show. The presentation of Christianity as ethics and not redemption is one-sided, and, as such, false to the Christian Gospel. Christ came to deliver men not from guilt only, but from bondage to the temporal. Born on the Semitic soil of Jewish legalism, Christianity went out into the Aryan world of Greek culture, where the craving for redemption was so intense, and found there a congenial home. It redeems from the world, yet gives moral content to life in this world. If there be a universal religion, we may expect it to be adequate to the spiritual necessities revealed by the two great types of world religions. We may look for it in a reconciliation of the two types in the higher synthesis of an ethical religion of redemption—a religion which redeems from the world, and yet enables us to find in the world a sphere of moral activity and progress. Just such a religion is the Gospel of Jesus Christ." The phrase we have italicised concedes the possibility of there being other such religions. And therein, if we may venture to say so, is the distinctive merit of Dr. Cave's book—its appeal to all men of good-will of whatever faith to cooperate in finding the Universal religion, whether among the old-established religions, if it is to be found there, or in a new one if one has to be evolved hereafter. Dr. Cave classifies the great world-religions in two groups—the religion of redemption and the religion of ethics. These he further identifies with the Aryan and the Semitic respectively. The Aryan or redemptive, he says, seeks to meet men's mystic yearnings, but fails to give life in the world a moral content and meaning. The Semitic or ethical, on the other hand, is interested and influential in the conduct of this life, but fails to meet man's mystic yearnings. Every classification of this kind can be but a rough and general indication of the main characteristics of the categories concerned. Yet we would prefer to indicate at once that we do not think that either of these two types of religion is to be met anywhere at any rate in historical times in its pure, or rather crude, form; and that everywhere the two elements, ethical and redemptive, are to be found (in Mendelian phrase) recessive or dominant, but ready to develop in congenial environment. Even Judaism has its "Song of Solomon," while Mahomedanism has its Sufism. Buddhism is the ethical phase of Hinduism. Not only that, Christianity which, as Dr. Cave conceives it, is both ethical and redemptive, has developed predominantly as an ethical or a redemptive religion at different periods of its long history. It has had its mystics and it has had teachers and reformers who looked only to its ethical contents. Indeed, we think that in every great religion, though the ethical or mystic might predominate, the other has never been altogether absent. In other words, a certain minimum of both is required to make a religion, which suggests that religion is neither ethics nor mysticism but something from which both ethics and mysticism spring and in which they both have their being. The Universal religion therefore, must obviously be found not in a certain proportional blend of ethics and mysticism, but in the heart of Being which holds both in fusion. All great Teachers were in direct contact with the heart of Being, and their teachings were adapted to the needs of their times and their generation. Beyond these, their words pointed to and revealed a vast vista of meaning applicable to all times and all conditions by men of faith and foresight and noble unselfishness. Men of goodwill will, therefore, find in all religions the clue to a solution of the problems and perplexities of life. It follows that each individual will find the clue more readily in the teachers of the faith in which he is born and brought up than in others, just as one finds his way about in his own home even if ill-lighted than in a strange house though brilliantly lit up.

NON-BRAHMIN REPRESENTATION IN MADRAS.

In the last issue we referred to the Conference of Brahmins and non-Brahmin representatives, held by His Excellency the Governor of Madras, to bring about an understanding regarding the number of seats in the new Provincial Legislative Council to be reserved for the non-Brahmins in the territorial constituencies. Justice, the organ of the non-Brahmin movement, published in its issue of the 5th February an open letter addressed to the non-Brahmins of the Madras Presidency, signed by five non-Brahmin gentlemen who were present at the Conference, giving their version of the proceedings. It was agreed at the outset that those present at the Conference would be free to publish a full account of the proceedings but that, before doing so, they should submit a copy to His Excellency "to see that such report was accurate." In view of this distinct understanding, the signatories have not done the correct thing in publishing their version without the omission and alterations suggested by His Excellency. No doubt, they have indicated in marginal notes that His Excellency had taken exception to them, and they have also published the correspondence between Dewan Bahadur Theagaraya Chetty, and Mr. F. B. Evans, the Secretary to Government on special duty in connection with the reforms, who conveyed His Excellency's corrections. His Excellency was requested to be present at the Conference by representatives of the Brahmin and non-Brahmin sections. It was characteristically kind-hearted of Lord Willingdon to have agreed to the request. The Hindu thinks that the tone of His Excellency's remarks was not quite calculated to soften asperities, but we fail to see what was wrong in them even according to the version of Dewan Bahadur Theagaraya Chetty. On the other hand, Mr. Kasturi Ranga Iyengar's attitude at the Conference is really unintelligible. Mr. Kasturi (who is the Editor of the Hindu) is said to have supported Dewan Bahadur Kesava Pillay's proposal to reserve 36 out of 63 seats for the non-Brahmins, but he qualified his support by the condition that "if all did not agree, he would withdraw it." If it was right and fair to reserve 36 seats, why on earth should not Mr. Kasturi urge such reservation regardless of what others thought of it?

Dewan Bahadur Ramachandra Row said that not more than 28 or 29 seats should be reserved for the non-Brahmins. His Excellency, however, thought that 50 per cent of the seats (that is, 32) would be a very fair number. Dewan Bahadur Theagaraya Chetty did not say how many seats he wanted but he regretted that he could not accept 50 per cent as he was answerable to others, which clearly meant that, for himself, he was not unwilling to accept that number. Under these circumstances, His Excellency had no course open but to have the matter referred to an arbitrator as provided in the Report of the Selborne Committee. We strongly feel that those who declined to accept His Excellency's very fair proportion, whether Brahmins or non-Brahmins, have shown themselves to be wanting in foresight and political sagacity. The non-Brahmins are clearly entitled to demand that they should, independently of the seats open to Brahmins and non-Brahmins alike, be assured of a minimum capable of effectively representing their point of view. Under Dewan Bahadur Ramachandra Row's proposal they will not be assured of such a minimum. But with the proportion favoured by His Excellency, they will be completely assured of it. Their rejection of it, puts them clearly in the wrong. The Arbitrator, whether he be Lord Meston or anybody else, when he is asked to concede a decisive majority to the non-Brahmins, will have to enquire on what grounds such a demand can be substantiated. He will doubtless enquire how far and in what way the gentlemen who profess to speak for the non-Brahmin millions really do so. Table IX, Volume II, of the Madras Census Report, 1911, gives the statistics of education by castes. There are some 80 Tamil castes, nearly as many Telugu castes, about half as many Malayalam castes, the same number of Canarese castes, and about 60 Oriya castes. The Brahmins are to be found in each of the four groups but the different linguistic groups, Brahmin or non-Brahmin, do not inter-marry. For all practical purposes the Telugu Brahmin is an altogether different caste from the Tamil, Canarese, Malayalam or Oriya Brahmin. And so the Tamil and the rest from one another. If we leave out the Brahmin, there are 79 Tamil castes, as many Telugu castes, and 39 Canarese and Malayalam castes and 59 Oriya castes, all comprehended in the term non-Brahmin. Each of these scores of non-Brahmin castes is as exclusive from the rest and from one another as the Brahmin. The leaders of the movement which goes by the name of non-Brahmin, belong to one or other of about half a dozen (if so many) of these nearly 300 castes. It can be easily proved from the Census figures of literates, especially literates in English, that the Brahmin's influence in the Tamil and Telugu districts is due entirely to his superior literacy, and that in the Malabar districts the Nair caste, which has most literates in English, enjoys a much larger secular influence than the Brahmins whose intense conservatism has stood in the way of their taking to English education.

If the leaders of the present non-Brahmin movement had exerted themselves in the past to minimise, if not to abolish, caste distinctions in the Hindu community, the multiplicity of the non-Brahmin castes will not be the forcible argument which it is against their claims to represent the whole Hindu community minus the Brahmins. Taking the five signatories to the statement in Justice, and speaking with some knowledge of the social and religious reform movement in Madras during the last thirty years, we do not remember to have heard or read of any of these gentlemen as having ever been prominently associated with the social reform movement which, during the last three quarters of a century and more, has aimed at bringing about the extinction of caste. There are, we gladly admit three or four gentlemen, in the less prominent ranks unfortunately of the present political movement, who have worked whole-heartedly in the cause of social reform. The most distinguished of them, one of the recognised leaders of the Brahmo Samaj and the social reform movement, whose name is well known and highly respected all over the country, is Dewan Bahadur Venkataratnam Naidu. And what did the Dewan Bahadur say at a meeting of non-Brahmin social workers over which he presided on the 31st of December last?

The other day reading a brief report of a preliminary meeting of the People's Service League I found it stated that Dr. Kurup had moved a resolution that Brahmins might be allowed to become members if they gave up their sacred thread. Without considering whether that resolution was rightly or wrongly rejected, shall we not put this test to ourselves? We have no sacred thread to be cast away. But we have caste pride to be humiliated. We have caste prejudices to be given up and we have caste relations to be tested. Until we do this—that is one of the factors in the triple Sadhana I have spoken of—our social service will only be a patching up and healing up, which is not a permanent and complete cure.

If all workers are imbued with the triple sadhana of which this eminent social and religious reformer so eloquently impressed the necessity on his audience, where is the need for differentiating between non-Brahmin and Brahmin? Dr. Kurup's suggestion that Brahmins who discarded their sacred thread might be allowed to become members of the People's Service League, and, even more, its rejection by the members of the League, are extremely significant. None of our readers is likely to mistake us for champions of the caste system. But we do very strongly object to the electoral machinery being utilised, at the instance of men who most of them are bigoted adherents of this pernicious system, to penalise one particular caste because it has been quicker to react to the educational and political conditions introduced by British rule. After all, the spirit which rejects caste is the outcome of English education. It follows that men who are imbued with that spirit are likely to be proportionately more numerous in communities which have benefited by English education than in those which have not benefited by it to the same extent. Nevertheless, holding as we strongly do that any concession is worth making to induce educationally backward communities to interest themselves in national questions, we would earnestly advise that Dewan Bahadur Kesava Pillay's suggestion of 86 reserved seats may be accepted even at this eleventh hour. The Dewan Bahadur is a veteran publicist who has fought many hard battles against vested interests and corruption in championing the cause of the poor and oppressed, and any suggestion emanating from him is entitled to respectful consideration from all Brahmins as well as non-Brahmins.

The Prohibition Act in the United States. The Indian Witness writes: "The 'Pioneer' states that President Wilson will now make no effort to rescind war time prohibition, in view of the failure of the Senate to ratify the Peace Treaty. Evidently the Pioneer does not know that the Prohibition Amendment of the Constitution of the United States became effective on the 16th day of the present month; and can not be rescinded by President Wilson or any other man or group of men. The fact that every State which has adopted prohibition, and some of them have tried it more than thirty years, prospers far beyond its wet neighbours, has proven to the American people the desirability of making prohibition a part of the constitution of the United States."

A Useful Book of Reference: A very useful book of reference, modestly priced at annas twelve only, is the "Useful Information for Missionaries" compiled by Mr. W. E. Boggs and published by the Christian Literature Society for India, Memorial Hall, Madras. It is a veritable mine of information in many matters of everyday reference especially to persons living far away from towns, such as measurement, time, currency, building materials, and so on. The compilation is capable of considerable expansion, in future issues.

SURAT HINDU ORPHANAGE.

AN APPEAL FOR FUNDS.

This appeal is made on behalf of the Surat Hindu Orphanage which was established during the most severe famine of 1900, to alleviate the miseries of homeless orphans in Gujerat. Since its foundation it has maintained its position as one of the foremost Hindu Orphanages in this Presidency and upto now has given shelter to over a thousand children of all ages. It has never shut its doors against any orphans brought under its protection. Indeed, they have been cordially welcomed. This Orphanage has also pioneered a systematic training of its inmates in arts and industries, and made it its first care to see that under its protection they have been well educated and trained as well as they would have been in normal surroundings. Its working has received the highest commendations from the Government and the Princes, also from the people and representatives of various public institutions who have visited it. The policy of the management has all throughout been the saving of child life as of primary importance and all its resources had been spent for this purpose. No attempt was made to lock up any moneys received in land and buildings which would have prevented that number of lives that have been actually saved. This policy must now be revised. The Buildings occupied at present are getting more and more dilapidated and unhealthy in condition and the surrounding land is found to be insufficient for the wide and beneficent programme the management has set before it. In consequence of the prevailing high prices of land and buildings, it is found difficult to obtain another suitable premises and since it is imperative that the undesirable conditions should not prevail any longer, the provision of having its own home is essential. The institution has attained its usefulness to such a high degree, that it has received continuously destitute children coming from other charitable institutions such as the Beva Sadan, the Children's Refuge in Bombay and several other kindred organisations. A feature of this institution is that it never has limited the number of orphans to whom it should give protection. Any number at any time is always welcomed. The Orphanage has till now been closed to a section of the untouchable class, but in the new programme that it has set before it, it hopes to be able to provide adequate arrangements for the reception of the children of this unfortunate class.

As the institution has hitherto maintained its most cherished feature, the protection of old inmates during those years of their young life immediately after their leaving it, a settlement will also be provided for them as it has been done to a limited extent at present. To carry out these most pressing needs of the orphanage, an appeal is now made for raising two lakhs of Rupees for land and buildings and settlement. It is earnestly hoped that the public will give it a hearty and substantial response. The Committee have pleasure in acknowledging a gift of Rs. 20,000 towards the object from Mr. Kapilram H. Vakil in memory of his father,

DINSHAW EDULJI WATCHA.

TRISHOVANDAS N. MALVI,

HANSRAJ PRAGJI THAKURJI.

GULABCHAND DHOORAND ZAVKSI.

Bombay, 21st January 1920.

[The excellent work of the Surat Hindu Orphanage is widely known and appreciated. The appeal for funds to provide a permanent home for it will, we are sure, meet with generous response Mr. Kapilram's magnificent gift in memory of his father is an auspicious beginning—ED. I. S. R.]

AN INTERVIEW WITH MR. GANDHI

(FROM THE Indian Witness, Lucknow.)

As I talked with Mr. Gandhi, I marvelled at the simplicity of his dress. He wore coarse white cloth, with a kambal thrown over his body to protect him from the cold. A little white cap was his only head covering. As he sat on the floor facing me, I asked myself, how can this little man, with his thin face and large protruding ears, and quiet brown eyes, be the great Gandhi about whom I have heard so much? All doubts were set aside, when we began to talk. I do not agree with all the methods that Mr. Gandhi employs to bring about the desired end; but I do want to hear this personal testimony of the man himself. Mr. Gandhi is a spiritual man. He is a thinker. In my short interview, I had the same heart-to-heart fellowship with him as I have had scores of times with some of God's saints. I took knowledge that this man had been to the Source of Christian strength and had learned from the great Christ.

"Mr. Gandhi, what can nations of the West do in furthering the all-round development of the East, and particularly of India?" Mr. Gandhi answered the question indirectly: "India is just now in the state of unlearning. She has learned a lot that is useless and unprofitable. From my observation of the West, and particularly of your own country, I have learned two outstanding facts: First, cleanliness; second, energy. I am fully convinced that my people cannot advance spiritually, until they clean up. Your people are wonderfully energetic. To a large extent, it has been energy after things material. If Indian people could have that same amount of energy, rightly directed, they would receive a great blessing."

"Mr. Gandhi, will you kindly tell me how Christianity can best help India, in view of the spirit of nationalism that is abroad." He replied, "What we need, most of all, is sympathy. When I was down in Africa, I found this illustration. I had to dig some artesian wells. In order to reach the pure flowing streams, I had to dig deep. Many of the people who come out here to study my people only scratch the surface. If they would dig deep by means of sympathy, they would find a stream of life there, pure and clear."

"And will you kindly tell me, Mr. Gandhi, what book or person has influenced you the most?" Of course, I was prepared to hear him say something about the Vedas and several other Indian books with which Christian people should be conversant; but I was not prepared to hear from the lips of this man the mention of three English books that had shaped his life and thought. He frankly confessed that he was not an omnivorous reader, but rather a careful selector of the very best. The order in which he spoke of the books was as follows: The Bible, Ruskin, Tolstoi. Speaking of the Bible, he said "There have been many times when I did not know which way to turn. But I have gone to the Bible, and particularly the New Testament, and have drawn strength from its message."

I was anxious to know how our Meerut Graduates' Association, composed of the finest of the educated men in the city, could further the city's welfare. In reply to the question, he gave me this one word, "Scavenger." He said, "I employ that word in all its meaning. If the members would get out and lend a helping hand to clean up the city, literally and morally, they would be doing a great work."

When I told Mr. Gandhi that I was going up to Lucknow to a Conference of the leaders of Methodism, and that I would like to take a message from him to them, he said: "Tell your leaders to live up to the teachings of Paul, as he stated them in 1st Corinthians, 13. Love and humility are the two messages that I would like to leave with them."

Meerut.

S. W. CLEMES.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

NEW INDIA ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.

Authorised Capital Rs. 20,00,00,000

Subscribed „ 11,86,34,250

Paid Up „ 1,18,63,425

DIRECTORS.

Sir D. J. Tata, Kt., (Chairman)
 Sir Sassoon David, Bart., (Vice Chairman)
 The Hon'ble Sir Fazalbhoy Currimbhoy, Kt., C. B. E.
 Sir Henry Procter, Kt., C. B. E.,
 Sir S. B. Bharucha, Kt.,
 The Hon'ble Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas, C. I. E.,
 Rai Bahadur Jannalal Bachraj.,
 Ramnarain Harnandrai, Esq.,
 R. D. Tata, Esqr.,
 B. J. Padshah, Esq.,
 The Hon'ble Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna,
 The Hon'ble Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas, C. I. E.,
 A. J. Bilimoria, Esq.,
 F. E. Dinshaw, Esq.,

On and after 2nd FEBRUARY the Company will be prepared to accept Fire and Marine risks at current rates of premium.

TEMPORARY OFFICES

Waterloo Mansions, Mayo Road, Bombay.

Chief Agents:--Tata Sons, Ltd. Navsari Buildings, Hornby Road.

London Agents:--Sedgwick Collins (Agencies) Limited
 4, Moorgate Street, E. C. 3.

R. P. GANDHI.

Secretary.

The following two books on trade and industries, by J. L. Duvell, M. A. V. P., are indispensable to every English-knowing Indian gentleman:—

(1) Vyapar Mitra.—It consists of 4 parts containing more than 325 original recipes for making marketable articles for trade, such as Soap, Varnish, Polish, Ink, Sealing Wax, Rubber Toys, Imitation Gold, Silver, Pearl, Ruby, Coral, etc., Cigarettes, Matches, Carbon Paper, Pocket Press, Buttons, Gilding Powder, Hair Killer, Hair Oils, Scent, Syrups, Essences, Medicines, etc., etc. Price Re. 1, V. P. As. 2.

The book "First Lessons in Photography" will be given free to every purchaser of Vyapar Mitra.

(2) Trade Secrets or How to become healthy and wealthy.—This book consists of 10 parts of chapters, each dealing with a series of articles on trade and industries, such as perfumery, dairy farming, agriculture, manures, etc. It also deals with cattle and human diseases with suitable prescriptions for all of them. Besides, collection of several hundreds of other useful informations and money-making secret formulas and processes have greatly increased the usefulness of the book. Reduced prices Re. 1, V. P. As. 2.

N. B.—On account of the scarcity of paper, the next edition of these books is not expected soon, hence to avoid disappointment send for them to-day.

Address:—MANAGER, THE WALKER PRESS,
 MAINPURI U. P.

THE TATA INDUSTRIAL BANK, LD.

HEAD OFFICE, BOMBAY.

BRANCHES—CALCUTTA and HYDERABAD (Deccan)
CANNANORE and LUCKNOW.

Sub-Branches.—

Bombay—Share Bazaar, Shroff Bazaar.

Calcutta—Barr Bazaar.

London Agents. LLOYDS BANK LIMITED.

NEW YORK AGENTS: THE GUARANTY
TRUST COY. OF NEW YORK.

AUTHORISED CAPITAL... Rs. 12,00,00,000.

SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL..... „ 7,56,00,225.

PAID UP CAPITAL..... „ 1,50,99,225.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Sir D. J. Tata, Kt., Chairman.

Sir Sassoon David, Bart.

Sir R. N. Mookerjee, K. C. I. E.

Sir Francis Stewart, Kt.

Sir Henry Procter, Kt.

R. D. Tata, Esq.

F. E. Dinshaw, Esq.

F. O. Rimington, Esq.

Narottam Morarjee, Esq.

Hajee Gulam Mahomed Ajam, Esq.

The Hon'ble Mr. Purshottamdas Thakordas, C. I. E.

A. J. Billimoria, Esq.

Secretary, R. H. Parker.

Current Accounts opened and interest allowed on daily credit balances from Rs. 500/- to Rs. 1,00,000/- at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum. If the balance to the credit of any account does not fall below Rs. 25,000/- at any time between 1st January and 30th June, interest will be allowed during that period at 2½ % per annum. No interest is allowed unless the sum accrued amounts to Rs. 8/- Half-yearly.

Fixed Deposits. Interest allowed on Deposits fixed for one or two years and for shorter periods at rates to be ascertained on application.

Savings Bank. Interest allowed on Savings Bank Accounts at 4 per cent per annum. Rules may be obtained on application.

Loans and Cash Credits are granted on approved securities.

Purchases and sales of Securities and shares effected.

Bills of Exchange purchased and collected and every description of Banking and exchange business undertaken.

14-4-18. L. D. L. BUCKLEY, General Manager.

THE YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK, LIMITED.

(Registered in Japan.)
Established 1880.

Subscribed Capital.....Yen. 48,000,000.

Paid up Capital.....Yen. 42,000,000.

Reserve Fund.....Yen. 28,100,000.

Head Office:—Yokohama.

Branches and Agencies at Bombay, Buenos Aires, Calcutta, Changchun, Chi-Nan, Dairen, Fengtien, Hankow, Harbin, Hongkong, Honolulu, Kaiyuan, Kobe, London, Los Angeles, Lyons, Manila, Nagasaki, Newchwang, New York, Osaka, Peking, Rangoon, San Francisco, Seattle, Shanghai, Shimonoseki, Singapore, Soerabaya, Sydney, Tientsin, Tokio, Tsingtao.

Current Deposit Accounts are opened for approved customers and interest is allowed at the rate of 2 per cent per annum on daily balances of Rs. 1,000 upto Rs. 100,000, provided that the amount of half-yearly interest is not less than Rs. 5.

Fixed Deposits are received for one year and shorter periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

Every description of banking and exchange business transacted.

N. IGARASHI.

Post Box No. 207, Hornby Road, Bombay.

I. NISHIMAKI.

Manager, Calcutta.

1-12-17,

Post Box No. 406, Clive street, Calcutta

THE BANK OF BARODA, LD.

Under the Patronage of and largely supported by the Government of H. H. the Maharaja Gaskwar.

Registered under the Baroda Companies' Act III of 1897

HEAD OFFICE BARODA.

Branches—Ahmedabad, Navsari, Mehsana, and Surat

Capital Subscribed.....Rs. 60,00,000.

Capital Paid up „ 20,00,000.

Reserve Fund „ 12,50,000.

DIRECTORS :

The Hon'ble Mr. Lallubhai Somaldas, C. I. E., Chairman

Sir Vithaldas Damodar Thackersey, Kt.

Raj Ramesh Sheth Maganbhai P. Haribhatti Nagar Sheth, Baroda.

Sheth Manilal Revadas, Vadnagar.

Rao Bahadur Gunajirao R. Nimbalkar, Sar Sabha, Baroda State.

Bhaskarrao Vithaldas Mehta, Esq., Advocate, High Court, Bombay.

M. H. Kantavalla, Esq., Agent, Maharaja Mill Co., Ltd. Baroda.

R. R. Shirgaokar, Naib Sabha, Baroda State.

A. N. Datar, Accountant General, Baroda State.

CURRENT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

Interest allowed on daily balance from Rs. 200 to Rs. 1,00,000 at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum and on sums over Rs. 1,00,000 by special arrangement. No interest which does not come to Rs. 8 per half year will be allowed.

FIXED DEPOSITS.

Received for long or short periods on terms which may be ascertained on application.

LOANS, OVERDRAFTS, AND CASH CREDITS.

The Bank grants accommodation on terms to be arranged against approved securities.

