мог remember.

How long has this form been in use in the irregular cavalry of the Bengal army?

he form was only introduced since 1856, after sift the irregular cavalry.

Can you recommend any improvement in the wording or matter of the oath administered to the recruit of the irregular cavalry of the Bengal army when first enrolled?

Not having seen the oath, I cannot form and

. Should the irregular cavalry corps of the Bengal army be raised each in a prescribed district, and be recruited there and there' only?

No; a mixture is good.

3. Or should the irregular cavalry corps of the Bengal army be recruited over a wide area; in fact, without reference to districts? Yes; without reference to districts.

Should the corps of irregular cavalry of the, Bengal army be homogeneous as to race or, caste?

No.

15. Should the corps of irregular cavalry of the, Bengal army be composed of ressalahs, each, of which shall consist of separate tribes or castes, or should the tribes or eastes be mixed up together in the whole corps?

Ressalahs of different tribes would be desirable, ou can always pit the one against the other in case

- 16. If the corps of irregular cavalry of the Bengalarmy are not homogeneous, but composite, in what proportions should the races, tribes, or castes enter?
- 16. Equal, as near his they chait be procised, but assulmans will always preponderate.
- 17. What agency should be employed for recruiting?

17. The commanding officer alone.

18. What precautions should be taken before the, the local authorities or through their instru-mentality, in connexion with recruits for the irregular cavally of the Bengal army?

18. Every man entertained ought to be registered y the local authorities in the district from whence he omes, and security taken from the head man of the allege of possible. ıllage, ıf possible.

- 19. Should a troop or squadron of Europeans form a component part of the friegular corps of cavalry of the Bengal army? 19. I do not consider this necessary.
- - 20. If so, should such troops or squadrons be enlisted for this special purpose, or be composed of men selected from the European cavalry corps serving in India, or be integral portions of European corps, and subject to periodical relief?

20. If it should be considered necessary, I would ist specially for this purpose.

- 21. How should the barracks and stables of such isolated European troops or squadrons be placed?
- 21. In rear of the regiment, and in front of the Euroean officers' quarters.
 - 22. Would such detachments of Europeans seriously complicate commissariat arrangements?
- 22. Most certainly. Besides, in my opinion, a reginent of irregular cavalry ought to be able to move at n hour's notice, and this they could not do if they add to get commissariat stores, &c.

native troopers with whom they would be associated?

23. With sabres and carbines, the same as the native troopers.

24. How should the irregular cavalry of the Bengal army be armed.

24. With tulwars and carbines.

No reply required to No. 25.

- 26. Do the existing dress and equipments admit of improvement? If so, state in what respects.
- 26. No; I consider the dress and equipments of my old regiment—the 9th irregular cavalry—perfect, and I believe all the old regiments are dressed much the same. In some regiments of irregular cavalry the dress of the European officers is far too flash and expensive. I would recommend their being restricted to a plain, soldier-like uniform, and as like their men as possible.

J. CHRISTIE, Brigadier, Commanding Dinapore Division.

II .- RULES OF DISCIPLINE AND MILITARY CODE.

1. Can you suggest improvements in the articles war now in use in the irregular cavalry of the Bengal army?

1. Since the irregular cavalry have been subjected to the articles of war, they have deteriorated very much. I would most earnestly recommend that the old punchayet system be re-introduced, which was invariably found to answer so well.

2. Should the special rules regulating punishment in the native army be retained, or should they be assimilated to the rules which obtain in the British army?

2. I would have nothing to say to the special rules regulating punishment in the regular native army, or in the British army either.

3. Does the system of native courts-martial work satisfactorily in the irregular cavalry of the Bombay army ?

3. Most certainly not. I recommend they should be abelished in the irregular cavalry, and trial by punchayet introduced again.

4. What means are adopted to acquaint the troopers of the Bengal irregular cavalry with the military code under which they serve and are governed?

4. In my regiment I had the old articles of war read which concerned the men, once a quarter.

5. What proportion of the troopers of the Bengal irregular cavalry can read and comprehend the articles of war in their own vernacular?

5. Very few indeed can read, but all understand them when read and explained to them.

J. Christie, Brigadier, Commanding Dinapore Division.

III .- ORGANIZATION, PROMOTION, AND REWARDS.

1. In the irregular cavalry of the Bengal army what is the system of promotion; is it based on merit alone, on seniority alone, or on merit and seniority combined?

1. Merit; but if both seniority and merit are combined, of course the latter.

2. Are the native commissioned officers and non-commissioned officers of the irregular cavalry of the Bengal army generally intelligent, useful, and efficient?

ligent, useful, and efficient?

2. Yes, if they are promoted as above, and it is the commanding officer's own fault if any but efficient commissioned and non-commissioned officers are pro-
