¹ Large belts were worn with the buckle before; and, for wresting, the buckle was turned behind, to turn the buckle over a fairer grasp at the girdle. To buckle the buckle behind was therefore a challenge.—Holt White. Mr. Hallwell-Phillips offers, however, a better explanation. "The challenge was to fight; to turn the girdle was to put the sword-sheath a little back in order to draw the weapon." This proverbial form of expression lasted as late as the beginning of the eighteenth century; for, in Dean Swift's "Polite Conversation," we read—"Lady Answerall." "Mr. Neverout, if Miss will be angry or nothing, take my counsel, and tie her, turn the buckle of her girdle behind her."

¹ Delighted=delicate, refined. The monks taught that there were two hills, one of fire, the other "passing cold," like ice. Shakespeare's "thrilling region" reminds one, however, of the ninth circle in Dante's Inferno.—

"Thereupon I turn'd
And saw before and underneath my feet
A lake, whose frozen surface liker seemed
To glass than water."

Compare with Milton, p. 6, ll. 601:—

"The bitter chance
Of fierce extremes, extremes by change more fierce,
From beds of raging fire to starve in ice,
Their soft ethereal warmth."

 he burn himself in love. Ibid. 5.—O sweet-suggesting Love, if thou hast sinned, Teach me, thy tempted subject, to excuse it. Ibid. ii. 6.—Love, lend me wings to make my purpose swift, As thou hast lent me wit to plot this drift! Ibid.—
 Even in kind love I do conjure thee. Ibid. ii. 7.
 —Didst thou but know the inly touch of love,
 Thou wouldst as soon go kindle fire with snow
 As seek to quench the fire of love with words.
Ibid.—I do not seek to quench your love's hot fire, But qualify the fire's extreme rage, Lest it should burn above the bounds of reason. . . The more thou damm'st it up the more it burns. Ibid.
 —With twenty odd-conceited true-love knots.
Ibid.—Only deserve my love by loving him.
Ibid.—Scorn at first makes after-love the more.
Ibid. iii. 1.—Love is like a child, That longs
 for every thing that he can come by. Ibid.—
 This weak impress of love is as a figure Trench'd in ice, which with an hour's heat Dissolves to water, and doth lose his form. Ibid. iii. 2.—
 As you unwind her love from him, Lest it should ravel and be good to none, You must provide to bottom it on me. Ibid.—You are already love's firm votary. Ibid.—This discipline shows thou hast been in love. Ibid.—Yet, spaniel like, the Lost*, i. 2.—Love is a familiar; Love is a devil: there is no angel but Love. Ibid.—Thou art an old love-monger, and speakest skillfully. Ibid. ii. 1.—As if you swallowed love with singing love. Ibid. iii. 1.—As if you snuffed up love by smelling love. Ibid.—And I, forsooth, in love! I that have been love's whip. . . . What! I love! I rue! I seek a wife! Well, I will love, write, sigh, pray, sue, and groan: Some men must love my lady, and some Joan. Ibid.—This love is as mad as Ajax. Ibid. iv. 3.—I will not love: if I do, hang me: 'faith, I will not. Oh, but her eye,—by this light, but for her eye I would not love her; yes, for her two eyes. . . . By heaven, I do love; and it hath taught me to rhyme, and to be melancholy. Ibid.—On a day—alack the day!—Love whose month is ever May, Spied a blossom, passing fair, Playing in the wanton air. Ibid.—Oh, but for my love, day would turn to night! Ibid.—Love, first learned in a lady's eyes, Lives not alone immured in the brain. Ibid.—Love's tongue proves dainty Bacchus gross in taste: For valour, is not Love a Hercules, Still climbing trees in the Hesperides? Subtle as sythynx; as sweet and musical As bright Apollo's lute, strung with his hair; And when Love speaks, the voice of all the gods Makes heaven drowsy with the harmony. Never durst poet touch a pen to write, Until his ink were tempered with Love's sighs. Ibid.—For revels, dances, masks, and merry hours, Fore-run fair Love, strewing her way with flowers. Ibid.—Love doth approach disguised, Armèd in arguments. Ibid. v. 2.—Therefore, ladies, Our love being yours, the error that love makes Is likewise yours. Ibid.—My love to thee is sound, sans crack or flaw. Ibid.—Though the mourning brow of progeny Forbid the smiling courtesy of love. Ibid.—Since love's argument was first on foot, Let not the cloud of sorrow justle it From what it purposed. Ibid.—Love is full of unbecoming trains, All wanton as a chit skipping, and vain, Formed by the eye, and, therefore, like the eye, Full of strange shapes, of habits, and of forms. Ibid.—The party-coated presence of loose love. Ibid.—Things base and vile, holding no quantity, Love can transpore to form and dignity: Love looks not with the eyes, but with the mind, And therefore is winged Cupid painted blind. Nor hath Love's mind of any judgement taste; Wings and no eyes figure unheedy haste; And therefore is love said to be a child, Because in choice he is so oft beguiled. As waggish boys in game themselves forswear, So the boy-love is perjured everywhere. Ibid. N. Dr., i. 1.—Your buskined mistress and your warrior love. Ibid. ii. 2.—A certain aim he took, And loosed his love-shaft smartly from his bow, As it should pierce a hundred thousand hearts. Ibid.—A sweet Athenian lady is in love With a disdainful youth. Ibid.—Thy love ne'er alters till thy sweet life end! Ibid. ii. 2.—With sighs of love that cost the fresh blood dear. Ibid. iii. 2.—What though I be not so in grace as you, So hung upon with love, so fortunate, But miserable most, to love unloved? Ibid. iii. 2.—You thief of love! what, have you come by night And stolen my love's heart from him? Ibid.—Verses of feigning love. Ibid. i. 1.—Thou hast given her rhymes, And interchanged love-tokens with my child. Ibid.—You have her father's love, Demetrius; Let me have Hermia's: do you marry him. Ibid.—Ay me! for aught that I could ever read, Could ever hear by tale or history, The course of true love never did run smooth. Ibid.—O hell! to choose love by another's eye! Ibid.—Playing on pipes of corn and versing love. Ibid. ii. 1.—She shall pursue it with the soul of love. Ibid.—What thou seest when thou dost wake, Do it for thy true-love take, Love and languish for his sake. Ibid. ii. 2.—Take the meaning in love's conference. Ibid. ii. 2.—Love's stories written in Love's richest book. Ibid.—Speak, of all love's! Ibid.—Reason and love keep little company together now-a-days. Ibid. iii. 1.—Oh, why rebuke you him that loves you so? Ibid. iii. 2.—With sighs of love, that cost the fresh blood dear. Ibid.—If e'er I loved her, all that love is gone. Ibid.—Will you rent our ancient love asunder? To join with men in scorning your poor friend? Ibid.—Wherefore doth Lysander Deny your love, so rich within his soul? Ibid.—Miserable most, to love unloved! Ibid.—With the morning's love have oft made sport. Ibid.—Joy and fresh days of love Accompany your heart. Ibid. v. 1.—Let it not enter in your mind of love. Met. of Ven. ii. 8.—To courtship and such fair ostents of love. Ibid.—Yet I have not seen So likely an ambassador of love. Ibid. ii. 9.—There's something tells me but it is not love, I would not lose you. Ibid. iii. 2.—If you do love me you will find me out. Ibid.—Whose souls do bear an equal yoke of love. Ibid. iii. 4.—Whose loves are dearer than the natural bond of sisters. As You Like It, i. 2.—If thou rememberest not the slightest folly That ever love did make thee run into, Thou hast not loved, Or if thou hast not sat as I do now, Wearying thy hearer in thy mistress' praise, Thou hast not loved: Or, if thou hast not broke from company Abruptly, as my passion now makes me, Thou hast not loved. Ibid. ii. 4.—We that are true lovers run into strange capers; but as all is mortal in nature, so is all nature in love mortal in folly. Ibid.—The worst fault you have is to be in love—'Tis a fault I would not change for your best virtue. Ibid. iii. 2.—He seems to have the quotidian of love upon him. Ibid.—I am he that is so love shaken. Ibid.—He taught me how to know a man in love. Ibid.—But are you so much in love as your rhymes speak. Ibid.—Neither rhyme nor reason can express how much. Ibid.—Love is merely a madness; and, I tell you, deserves as well a dark-house and a whip, as madmen do. Ibid.—You are rather point-device in your accoutrements, as loving yourself, than seeming the lover of any other. Ibid.—I drive my suitor from his mad humour of love to loving humour of madness. Ibid.—But for thy verity in love, I do think him as concave as a covered goblet, or a worm-eaten nut. Ibid. iii. 4.—The sight of lovers feedeth those in love. Ibid.—The wounds invisible That love's keen arrows make. Ibid. iii. 5.—Down on your knees, And thank heaven, fasting, for a good man's love, Ibid.—Who ever loved that loved not at first sight. Ibid.—Think not I love him, though I ask for him; 'Tis but a peevish boy. Ibid.—Break an hour's promise in love. Ibid. iv. 1.—There was not any man died in his own person, videlicet, in a love cause. Ibid.—You have simply misused me, sir, in your love prate. Ibid.—Her love is not the hare that I do hunt. Ibid. iv. 3.—I see, love hath made thee a tame snake. Ibid. iv. 3.—Phœ.: Good shepherd, tell this youth what 'tis to love. Sil.: It is to be all made of sighs and tears. . . . It is to be all made of faith and service; . . . It is to be made of fantasy, All made of passion, and all made of wishes; All adoration, duty, and obedience, All humbleness, all patience, and impatience, All purity, all trial, all observance. Ibid. v. 2.—Is it possible, That love should of a sudden take such hold? T. of Shr. i. 1.—I found the effect of love in idleness. Ibid.—O, despicable love! Ibid. iv. 2.—Love all, trust a few, do wrong to none. All's Well, i. 1.—The ambition in my love thus plagues itself. Ibid.—It is the show and seal of nature's truth, Where love's strong passion is imprint in youth. Ibid. i. 3.—I know I love in vain, strive against hope; Yet, in this captious and intemperate sieve I still pour in the waters of my love, And lack not to lose still: thus, Indian-like, Religious in mine error, I adore The sun, that looks upon his worshipper, But knows of him no more. Ibid.—Who shuns thy love, shuns all his love in me. Ibid. ii. 3.—The great prerogative and rite of love. Ibid.—It is the show and seal of nature's truth, But puts it off by a compelled restraint. Ibid. ii. 4.—I begin to love, As an old man loves money, with no stomach. Ibid. iii. 2.—In your fine frame hath love no quality. Ibid. iv. 2.—But I love thee by love's own sweet constraint. Ibid.—But love that comes too late, Like a remorseful pardon slowly carried, To the great sender turns a sour offence. Ibid. v. 3.—Our own love, waking, cries to see what's done, While shameful hate sleeps out the afternoon. Ibid.—If music be the food of love, play on. . . . O spirit of love! how quick and fresh art thou! That, notwithstanding thy capacity Receiveth as the sea, nought enters there, Of what validity and pitch so'er, But falls into abatement and low price Even in a minute! Tw. Night, i. 1.—With groans that thunder love. Ibid. i. 5.—I will drop in his way some obscure epistles of love. Ibid. ii. 3.—If ever thou shalt love, In the sweet pang of it, remember me. Ibid. ii. 4.—My love, more noble than the world, Prizes not quantity of dirty lands. Ibid.—Mine is all as hungry as the sea, And can digest as much. Ibid.—A murd'rous guilt shews not itself more soon Than love that would seem hid: love's night is noon. Ibid. iii. 1.—Love sought is good, but given unsought is better. Ibid.—More than I love these eyes, more than my life, More, by all mores, than e'er I shall love wife. Ibid. v. 1.—I do confess I loved him as in honour he required, With such a kind of love as might become A lady like me. *Wint. ² John of dreams, dreamy John. In this sense "John-a-dreams" has been used as the title of a clever novelette of Dr. Julian Sturges.

³ Unready (or perhaps lethargic) in my cause.

⁴ The folio reads "Judean," but that Indian is correct may be inferred from the following passages—

From Halington's Castara—

"So the unskillful Indian those bright gems,
Which might add majesty to diadems,
'Mong the waves scatters."

From Dryden's Legend of Matilda—

"The wretched Indian spurs the golden ara."

PREFACE.

THE compiler's original intention was to have put before the public a revised edition of Ayscough's well-known work ; but on examination its omissions and erroneous readings proved to be so numerous that it was considered better to begin de novo. The present volume is, therefore, the result of arduous and prolonged labour. It is not a Verbal but a Phrase Concordance ; and the compiler believes it to be at once the most comprehensive and the most accurate that has yet been published. He trusts that no phrase of any value, interest, or importance has been omitted ; while the key-words have been chosen carefully with the view of rendering reference as easy as possible. Even as a collection of "the beauties of Shakspeare"—of fine passages, images, allusions, sentiments—the present volume, it is hoped, will be acknowledged to possess more than ordinary claims to the reader's attention. A Verbal Concordance is useful only for purposes of reference ; but a Phrase Concordance, so copious as that which the compiler now submits, may serve to remind the reader of favourite quotations, of choice and cherished lines, and supply him with a liberal compendium of Shakspearian thought.

Great attention has been paid to the text of every passage cited with an anxious desire to decide always on the best reading. For this object, the compiler has compared the original issues with the best editions by Dyce, the Cambridge editors, Knight, Collier, Staunton, Grant White, Sidney Walker, J. O. Halliwell-Phillips, and others, and with the occasional renderings suggested by Notes and Queries, The Athenæum, &c.

It is with reverence the compiler places this colossal cairn which the industry and intelligence of our countrymen, critics, and interpreters has slowly accumulated on the tomb of Shakspeare.

¹ George Peele, in his "Edward I.," says: "He can ring rhyme with reason, and rhyme without reason, and without reason or rhyme."

Some lines attributed to Spenser, but probably written by Charles Churchill, run thus:—

"You bid your treasurer once a time

To give me reason for my rhyme;

But from that time and [from] that reason,

I have had nor rhyme nor reason."

² This is supposed to be "limbeck," the use of which was considered to "lend malice." Shakespeare's bold application of the effect to the cause reminds us of a simiilar instance in Keat's Isabella—

"So the two brothers and their murdered in us

Rode on towards Florence."

If I had a thousand sons, the first humane principle I would teach them should be,—to forswear thin potatoes,

¹ For "Run-away" has been suggested "Rumour," "Luz's eye," "rude day," etc.; but the obvious allusion, as Mr. Halpin points out, is to Cupid, a necessary actor in all hyphenal scenes. This very name of "Runaway" is applied to Cupid by Thomas Heywood, in his masque of "Love's Mistress." See too, Mac Fair's "Hue and Cry":—
 "Beauties, have you seen this toy
 Called love—a little boy
 Almost naked, wanton, kind,
 And now, and now as kind—
 If he be amongst ye, say:
 He is Venus' Run-away."
 Shakespeare, in his Cymbeline, ii. 4, places "two winking Cupids." The whole passage (in Juliet's soliloquy) is thus paraphrased by Mr. Halpin:—"Secrecy is essential to our safety. Let the day, therefore, depart, and let night spread her curtain around, and let not Cupid discharge his ministry of lighting up the bride-chamber. If (as painted by some) he have eyes, let them wink—i.e., be darkened, for we have need of darkness; that the interview, being invisible, may be untalked of; and we have no need of light, because lovers can see by their own beauties. If, however, (as depicted by others), he be blind, it is all as it should be: his blindness agrees with that darkness, for the sake of which the presence of night is so desirable."—Shakespeare's Society Papers, ii. 26, 27.

York. And we create, in absence of our self, Our uncle York Lord Governor. Rich. ii. ii. 1.—If thou be not then created York, I will not live to be accounted Warwick. 1 Hen. vi. ii. 4.—I arrest thee, York, Of capital treason 'gainst the king and crown. 2 Hen. vi. v. 1.—If that the bastard boys of York Shall be the surety for their traitor father. Ibid.—So York may overlook the town of York. 3 Hen. vi. i. 4.

York-place. You must no more call it York-place, that's past; For, since the cardinal fell, that title's lost; 'Tis now the king's, and called Whitehall. Hen. viii. iv. 1.

Yorkshire. In Yorkshire rebels are in arms. Rich. iii. iv. 4.

Young. Few taller are so young. Love's L. Lost, v. 2.—Elder brother, you are too young in this. As You Like It, i. 1.—Is the day so young? Rom. & Jul. i. 1.

Youngling. Youngling! thou canst not love so dear as I. T. of Shr. ii. 1.—Youngling, learn thou to make some meaner choice. Tit. And. ii. i.

Youngly. How youngly he began to serve his country. Cor. ii. 3.

Younker. How like a younker, or a prodigal, The skarfed bark puts from her native bay. Mer. of Ven. ii. 6.—'I'll not pay a denier: what! will you make a younker of me? 1 Hen. iv. iii. 3.—Trim'd like a younker, prancing to his love. 3 Hen. vi. ii. 1.

Yours. One half of me is yours, the other half yours,—Mine own I would say; but if mine, then yours, And so all yours. Oh, these naughty times Put bars between the owners and their rights, And so, though yours, not yours. Mer. of Ven. iii. 2.

Yourself. Good madam, keep yourself within yourself. Ant. & Cleo. ii. 5.

Youth. Home-keeping youth have ever homely wits. Two G. of Ver. i. 1.—Wear out thy youth with shapeless idleness. Ibid.—Knowing that tender youth is soon suggested. Ibid. iii. 1.—A purpose More grave and wrinkled than the aims and ends Of burning youth. Mea. for Mea. i. 4.—Thou hast nor youth, nor age. Ibid. iii. 1.—I see by you I am a sweet-faced youth. Com. of Err. v. 1.—He that is more than a youth, is not for me; and he that is less than a man, I am not for him. Much Ado Ab.

Noth. i. 1.—A man loves the meat in his youth, that he cannot endure in his age. Ibid. ii. 3.—Flat treason 'gainst the king's state of youth. Love's L. Lost, iv. 3.—Welcome hither; If that the youth of my new interest here Have power to bid you welcome. Mer. of Ven. iii. 2.—In pity of the challenger's youth, I would fain dissuade him. As You Like It, i. 2.—I come but in, as others do, to try the strength of my youth. Ibid.—In my youth I never did apply Hot and rebellious liquors in my blood. Ibid. ii. 3.—If the quick fire of youth light not your mind, You are no maiden, but a monument. All's Well, iv. 2.—Your son was misled with a snip-taffeta fellow there, whose villainous saffron would have made all the unbaked and doughy youth of a nation in his colour. Ibid. iv. 5.—Yet I suppose him virtuous, know him noble, Of great estate, of fresh and stainless youth. Two Night, i. 5.—For youth is bought more oft, than begged or borrowed. Ibid. iii. 4.—And many unrough youths that even now Protest their first of manhood. Macb. v. 2.—Will the king come, that I may breathe my last In wholesome counsel to his unstaied youth? Rich. ii. ii. 1.—Lascivious metres, to whose venom-sound The open ear of youth doth always listen. Ibid.—He that no more must say is listened more Than they whom youth and ease have taught to glose. Ibid.

And chid his truant youth with such a grace. 1 Hen. iv. v. 2.—There is my hand. You shall be as a father to my youth. 2 Hen. iv. v. 2.—Now all the youth of England are on fire. Hen. v. ii. (Chorus).—Last and liberty Creep in the minds and marrows of our youth. Tim. of Ath. iv. 1.—In the morn and liquid dew of youth. Hamlet, i. 3.—Youth to itself rebels, though none else near. Ibid.—To flaming youth let virtue be as wax, And melt in her own fire. Ibid. iii. 4.—Youth no less becomes The light and careless livery that it wears, Than settled age his sables and his weeds. Ibid. iv. 7.

Z.

Zanies. I take these wise men, that crow so at these set kind of fools, no better than the fool's zanies. Tw. Night, i. 5.—Some slight zany. Love's L. Lost, v. 2.

Zeal. Intend a kind of zeal both to the prince and Claudio. Much Ado Ab. Noth. ii. 2.—The constraint of hospitable zeal. K. John, ii. 1.—Lest zeal, now melted by the windy breath Of soft petitions, pity and remorse, Cool and congeal again to what it was. Ibid. ii. 2.—Let not my cold words here accuse my zeal. Rick. ii. i. 1.—This doth infer the zeal I had to see him. 2 Hen. iv. v. 5.—With whom an upright zeal to right prevails. 3 Hen. vi. v. 1.—Had I but served my God with half the zeal I served my king, he would not in mine age Have left me naked to mine enemies. Hen. viii. iii. 2.—Like those that under hot ardent zeal would set whole realms on fire. Time of act. iii. 3.

Zed. Thou whoreson zed! thou unnecessary letter. Lear, ii. 2.

Zenelophon. The pernicious and indubitate beggar Zenelophon. Love's L. Lost, iv. 1.

Zenith. Zenith doth depend upon a most auspicious star. Temp. i. 2.

Zephyrs. They are as gentle As zephyrs, blowing below the violet, Not wagging his sweet head. Cymb. iv. 2.

Zodiac. This new governor Awakes me all the enrolled penalties Which have, Like unscoured armour, hung by the wall So long, that nineteen zodiacs have gone round, And none of them been worn. Meas. for Meas. i. 3.—Gallops the zodiac in his glistening coach. Tit. And. ii. 1.

Zounds. Zounds! how hath he the leisure to be sick. 1 Hen. iv. iv. 1.—Zounds, I never was so bethumped with words. K. John, ii. 2.

Zwaggered. Zwaggered out of my life. Lear, iv. 6.
