PREFACE

ALL that has been attempted in this book has been to put before the public, in a readable and concise form, the events in the Egyptian Soudan which have led up to, and resulted in, the downfall of the Dervishes.

Every one knows that Gordon was killed at Khartoum and that Kitchener has avenged his fate, but comparatively few understand—for instance—why Gordon was ever in the Soudan at all, or why the British have reconquered that country. As for Pasha, Bey, Sirdar, Bimbashi—people seem to shy at the very sight of these words, and to almost wonder how an Englishman can belong to the Egyptian Army and yet retain his nationality! The sequence of events on the Nile, has extended over so long a period, in such an apparently disjointed fashion, that it is perhaps only natural there should be some vagueness on the subject.

This book is not put forward in any way as a professional study of the Campaigns herein dealt with. Whilst endeavouring to be as complete and accurate as possible in every point that can interest the general reader, all those minor technical details which belong to a military treatise, or an official Blue-book, rather than to a popular history, have been purposely omitted.

Part II. is merely a plain unvarnished tale of our experiences during the Dongola Expedition, and we would not have ventured to intrude them on the public, were it not for the fact that we were urged to do so by friends, on the ground that an insight into the actual details of active service on the Nile would be of interest to the general reader.

With regard to the Appendices, the lists of officers who have served in the recent Expeditions forms a record which will doubtless be appreciated by those who took part in them, whilst the roll of British officers and men who lost their lives cannot fail to have a certain melancholy interest attached to it.

Our thanks are due to the following gentlemen. To Messrs. Bassano (for portraits of the Sirdar and Major-General Hunter), Russell and Sons (Major-General Rundle), Lekegian—Cairo—(the Dervish Emir and the officers of the 21st Lancers) : to the proprietors of the Graphic and Black and White, for kindly allowing us the use of a number of their pictures and portraits ; to Mr. Joy, the eminent artist, by whose courtesy we are enabled to reproduce his famous picture, "The Death of General Gordon ;" to Messrs. Frost and Reed, owners of the copyright of this picture ; to the Authorities of the Intelligence Department, War Office, to whom we are indebted for the admirable maps dealing with the campaign around the Atbara, and the final march on Omdurman, and, above all, to our numerous friends with the troops in the Soudan, who stipulated that they should be nameless, but without whose valuable assistance we could not have written so full an account of the Fall of the Khalifa.

In a book of this nature, unavoidable errors of omission and commission are bound to creep in, which we beg our readers to excuse. Any corrections will be thankfully received and acknowledged by the authors.
