

V34.29

C2.4

1964

1964

Dhananjayrao Gadgil Library

GIPE-PUNE-001964

HISTORY OF IRELAND

IN THE

XVIIITH CENTURY

VOL. IV.

WORKS BY WILLIAM EDWARD HARPOLE LECKY.

HISTORY of ENGLAND in the EIGHTEENTH CENTURY. Library Edition. 8vo. Vols. I. and II. 1700-1760. 36s. Vols. III. and IV. 1760-1784. 36s. Vols. V. and VI. 1784-1793. 36s. Vols. VII. and VIII. 1793-1800. 36s. Cabinet Edition. ENGLAND. 7 vols. Crown 8vo. 6s. each. IRELAND. 5 vols. Crown 8vo. 6s. each.

The HISTORY of EUROPEAN MORALS from AUGUSTUS to CHARLEMAGNE. 2 vols. Crown 8vo. 16s.

HISTORY of the RISE and INFLUENCE of the SPIRIT of RATIONALISM in EUROPE. 2 vols. Crown 8vo. 16s.

POEMS. Fcp. 8vo. 5s.

London : LONGMANS, GREEN, & CO.

A
HISTORY OF IRELAND
IN THE
EIGHTEENTH CENTURY

BY
WILLIAM EDWARD HARTPOLE LECKY

NEW EDITION

VOLUME IV.

LONDON
LONGMANS, GREEN, AND CO.
1892

All rights reserved

V34.L9

C2.4

PRINTED BY

SPOTTISWOODE AND CO., NEW-STREET SQUARE
LONDON

1964

CONTENTS

OF

THE FOURTH VOLUME.

CHAPTER IX.

	PAGE
Superficial character of much Irish disloyalty	1
Probability that Ireland would for a time have been lost if Hoche had landed	3
Increased loyalty.—Dr. Hamilton	4
Meeting of Parliament (Jan. 16).—First debates	5
Absentee tax proposed and rejected	7
Bank of Ireland suspends cash payments	8
 Disturbances in the North
Their general character	9
State of Donegal and Roscommon	10
Tyrone and Donegal—Murder of Hamilton	11
Derry	12
Armagh.—Letters of McNally	14
Grattan's proposed volunteers	16
Lake ordered to disarm the North	18
His proclamation	20
Opposition of Grattan	22
Fox, with Grattan's assent, brings the state of Ireland before the British Parliament	22
The necessity of conciliating the Catholics urged	25
Determination of the Government to refuse.—The King's message to Camden	27
Ireland considered in a state of rebellion.—Seizure of arms	29
Dean Warburton's letters from Armagh	30
Letters from other parts of Ulster	32
Military force in Ireland.—Difficulties of disarming	35

	PAGE
Situation and sentiments of the yeomanry	37
Military outrages inevitable	39
The 'Ancient Britons' near Newry	40
Other military outrages.—Lord Moira's speech	42
Rebels sent to the fleet	46
Transformation of Orangism.— It becomes the chief counterpoise to the United Irishmen	47
Lake on the methods that should be employed in Ulster	49
Correspondence of General Knox with Pelham	50
•
Dissatisfaction of the Government with the Ulster gentry	60
Attitude and wishes of the gentry	61
Addresses in favour of reform	63
Possibility that reform might have prevented rebellion	64
The Irish Government consider that it would be useless	65
Their estimate of the parties in Ireland	66
Their opposition to Catholic emancipation—Ponsonby's reform resolutions	67
Grattan's last speech on reform	69
His secession from Parliament.—Debates no longer published at length	73
Grattan's conduct and position in 1797	73
He acknowledges the failure of parliamentary government in Ireland	75
Disaffection among the troops.—Orangemen, Archbishop Troy and other priests suspected	76
Arrest of O'Connor &c.—The 'Northern Star' stopped.— Newell's information	78
Alleged complicity of the United Irishmen with assassina- tion	79
The 'Union Star'.—Cox's confessions	83
Improvement in Ulster.—Proclamation of May 17—many captures	85
Command of Ireland and Viceroyalty offered to Lord Cornwallis	87
Refused on account of his views on the Catholic question. —Offer repeated	89
Revival of Orange outrages	89
Flight of the Catholics	90
•
The Disarming
Lord Blayney's severities—events in Westmeath	91
At Multifarnham and Charleville	94
State of Tyrone and Dungannon &c.	95
Evidence of increase of the religious hatreds in the North	97
Green and Orange badges—Religious riots	98

	PAGE
Distrust of the militia.—Success of the disarming in Ulster	100
The September Assizes	102
The case of William Orr	103
Responsibility of the Government in producing the rebellion	116
Spread of sedition to Catholic Ireland—its first centres	120

Influences that acted on the Catholic masses

Catholic emancipation and parliamentary reform had little part	120
The tithe question	121
The question of rent	123
The revived sentiment of nationality	123
Comparison between 1641 and 1797.—Prophecies of Columkill	125
Fear of Orange massacres.—The pretended Orange oath	126
Defenderism in the King's County	127
Carlow, Kilkenny, Kildare, Wexford, and Wicklow tainted Political opposition of Kildare gentry	129
Pollock's report of the condition of the central counties	130
Pollock's report of the condition of the central counties	131
Illustrations of the panic about the Orangemen	131
Troubles near Dublin.—State of Tipperary	132
Cork and Bandon	133
Mallow.—Reports about the Methodists	135
Appalling spread of crime	136
Connaught less tainted than the other provinces—Sligo— Ennis—Mayo	139
General state of Ireland	140
New hope of foreign assistance—Mission of Lewins	142
Dutch fleet in the Texel—Mission of Jagerhorn	144
Mission and memoir of McNevin	145

Negotiations at Lille

Vicissitudes of the war in 1796, 1797	147
Preliminaries of Leoben	149
Pitt offers to negotiate.—The plenipotentiaries at Lille	149
Pitt's ardent desire for peace	150
Majority of the Directory hostile to peace.—Their demands Secret understanding between Lord Malmesbury and Maret	152
Double object of Pitt	153
Peace signed between Portugal and France.—Indignation of Grenville	156
Possibility of corrupting the Directors	157
Revolution of 18 fructidor	158

	PAGE
Lord Malmesbury ordered (September 16) to quit France	159
Lingering hopes of peace dispelled	160
Proofs that Irish interests had no real place in French diplomacy	161
Parallel from the history of the Irish Brigade	162
Death of Burke	163
Renewed French negotiations in Ireland. Channels of information of the Government	165
 Disaffection in the Fleet
Mutiny at Spithead	169
Mutiny of the Nore	171
Its suppression.—The 'Hermione'	172
Restoration of the tone of the navy.—The British sailor	173
The Dutch fleet in the Texel	174
Long-continued adverse winds	176
Reports received from Ireland	177
Probable effects of the invasion.—Postponement of the expedition	178
Battle of Camperdown	179
Death of Hoche.—Indifference of Buonaparte to Irish affairs	180
Dissolution of the Irish Parliament	181
Honours conferred.—The Kenmare peerage	182
Election of the last Irish Parliament	185
Grattan's 'Letter to the Citizens of Dublin'	186
State of Ireland at the end of 1797.—Pelham's estimate	192
Clare's estimate of the situation.—Expectations of invasion	193
Alarming report from McNally	195
Establishment of 'The Press'	196
Abercromby made Commander-in-Chief	197
His estimate of the state of Ireland	199
Attempts to restore discipline and legality	201
The general orders, February 26, 1798	203
Cabal against Abercromby	205
His resignation and letters	208
His expedition through Leinster and Munster.—Martial law	211
Lake made Commander-in-Chief	214
Abercromby on the prospects of Ireland	215
Concession to Catholics refused.—Higgins pleads their cause	215
Letter from the Bishop of Derry	217

	PAGE
Meeting of Parliament, January 9.—Speech of Parsons	219
Acts of military violence	220
The Opposition.—Plunket	223
The absentee tax	225
Calm in Ulster	227
Anarchy and growing sedition in the other provinces	227
Letters of Beresford	231
Change of sentiment among the gentry	233
Knox's correspondence with Bell	234
Rapid growth of religious animosity	236
The Spring Assizes, 1798	237
The trials at Maryborough	239
No resolution yet taken in England about the introduction of an Union Bill	241
English ministerial policy towards Ireland—favourable to the Catholics	242
Close connection between England and Rome.—Lord Hood's fleet, &c.	243
Burke desires diplomatic connection with the Vatican	243
Hippisley and Erskine	244
Signs of friendly feeling between the Vatican and the Court of St. James	245
Views of Camden	246
Conclusion	248

CHAPTER X.

THE REBELLION.

Recapitulation of the phases of the United Irish Society	250
Its strength and weakness	251
McCormick, McNevin, and Bond	252
Emmet	253
Arthur O'Connor	255
Lord Edward Fitzgerald.—An immediate rising proposed, but rejected	256
Arrest of O'Connor at Margate	258
Tardiness of the Government in arresting leaders	259
Thomas Reynolds	260
Arrest at Bond's house.—Flight of Fitzgerald.—His interviews with Reynolds	262
Reynolds consents to give evidence	264
Proclamation of martial law (March 30).—Its causes	265
Burnings of houses.—Free quarters, &c.	268
Military proclamations	269
Disarming by flogging	275

	PAGE
Thomas Judkin Fitzgerald	277
His conduct indemnified by Parliament	287
Motives and effects of the severities	288
Holt's account of the origin of the rebellion	291
Attempts to reconstruct the Directory.—The Sheares's	291
The weeks before the rebellion	292
Catholic declaration of loyalty	294
Pursuit and betrayal of Lord Edward Fitzgerald	295
Trial of the Earl of Kingston	299
Project to attack the peers assembled for the trial	301
Capture of Lord Edward Fitzgerald	303
Information on which the Government acted	305
Importance of the capture.—Higgins and Magan	307
Last days of Fitzgerald	309
Arrest of the Sheares's through the information of Captain Armstrong	312
Arrest of Byrne and Neilson.—Flight of Lawless	316
The plot announced to the Lord Mayor and to the House of Commons.—Address of the Commons to the Lord Lieutenant	317
Trial of O'Connor and his companions	317
O'Coigly found guilty and executed.—O'Connor and three others acquitted	318

First Stages of the Rebellion

It breaks out May 23 in the counties of Dublin, Kildare, and Meath.—Attack on Naas	320
Attack on Clane.—Massacre at Prosperous	321
The treachery of Esmonde	323
Character of the rebellion in its first days.—The religious element	324
State of Dublin and its neighbourhood.—Measures of defence	325
Proclamation of martial law unanimously sanctioned by the House of Commons	328
Great energy of the loyalists	329
The outbreak not displeasing to some supporters of Government	330
The rebellion in the Queen's County	331
Unsuccessful rebel attack on Carlow	332
Character of the rebellion in Carlow	333
Execution of Sir Edward Crosbie	334
Rebel defeats at Hacketstown and Tarah	336
Atrocities at Rathangan.—Conciliatory policy of General Dundas	337
The massacre at Gibbet-rath	338

	PAGE
Failure of the plan of rebellion	340
Cause of the rebellion in Wicklow	341
Wexford Rebellion
Social condition of Wexford.—Defender disturbances	343
Signs of conspiracy.—Reports about Orangemen	345
Martial law proclaimed in the county.—Severities that followed	348
The North Cork Militia accused of introducing Orangism	350
The shooting of prisoners at Dunlavin and Carnew	352
Historians of the Wexford Rebellion	353
Gordon's account of its causes	353
Outbreak at Boulavogue (May 26).—Father John Murphy	355
Rebels defeated at Killthomas Hill	356
Victorious at Oulart.—Camolin and Ferns occupied	357
Character of the rebels.—Enniscorthy attacked and taken	357
Panic in Wexford.—Deputation to the rebels.—Reinforcement of the garrison	360
Uncertainty of the rebels.—They occupy the Three Rock Mountain	361
A detachment sent by General Fawcett cut to pieces.—Repulse of the garrison	363
Surrender of Wexford.—Escape and misconduct of the garrison	364
The rebels enter Wexford (May 30)	365
Bagenal Harvey elected commander-in-chief	367
Rebel rule in Wexford.—Matthew Keugh	368
Capture of Lord Kingsborough.—Cornelius Grogan	372
Events in Gorey	373
Attack on Newtown-barry.—Letter of Alexander	375
Massacre on Vinegar Hill	380
Growing fanaticism.—Treatment of Protestants	382
Elliot defeats the rebels near Gorey (June 1)	384
Defeat of Walpole (June 4)	386
Retreat of Loftus.—Rebel camp near Gorey	387
Battle of New Ross (June 5)	388
Soullabogue Barn	394
Alarm of the Government.—Letters from the Castle	395
State of Ulster
Causes of its tranquillity.—The Orange movement	403
Strict martial law	403
Reaction caused by the religious character of the Southern rebellion	404
Growing distrust of the French	406
Indignation caused by the oppression of Switzerland	407
And by the conduct of the French to America	408

	PAGE
Letters illustrating the state of opinion in Ulster	412
Rebellion in Antrim	416
And in Down	419
Battle of Ballinahinch (June 13)	421
Complete suppression of the Northern rebellion	423

Wexford

Bagenal Harvey at Carrickbyrne Hill	424
His deposition.—Father Roche made commander	426
Camp at Lacken Hill.—Attack on Borris	427
Battle of Arklow (June 9)	428
Alarm in Dublin.—Lady Camden goes to England	431
Government letters calling for help	432
Revival of religious animosities.—Letters of McNally	435
Growing influence of the more violent party	438
Stagnation of trade	440
Arrival of English reinforcements	441
Gordon on the nature of the rebellion round Gorey	442
Evacuation of Gorey.—Events in Wicklow.—Byrne's march to Vinegar Hill	442
Retreat of Father Roche.—Defeat of the rebels at Vinegar Hill (June 21)	444
Massacre in Enniscorthy	445
Keugh and Edward Roche at Wexford	446
Position of the Protestants in Wexford	448
Orange addresses	451
Colonel Le Hunte's fire-screens	453
The Wexford rebels summoned to the Three Rocks.— Battle of Goffsbridge	454
The massacre of Wexford Bridge	454
Keugh's negotiation through Lord Kingsborough	457
Last day of rebel rule in Wexford	460
Wexford reoccupied by the troops (June 21)	461
Capture and execution of Father Roche	462
Of Keugh	463
Of Cornelius Grogan	466
Of Colclough and Bagenal Harvey	467
Other executions.—Military licence	470
General character of the rebellion	471
Lord Cornwallis made Lord Lieutenant and Commander-in-Chief	473