

2199

Dhananjayrao Gadgil Library

GIPE-PUNE-002199

POPULAR PROGRESS IN ENGLAND.

1660—1820.

CHAPTERS IN THE HISTORY
OF
POPULAR PROGRESS
CHIEFLY IN RELATION TO
THE FREEDOM OF THE PRESS
AND TRIAL BY JURY.

1660—1820.

WITH AN APPLICATION TO LATER YEARS.

BY JAMES ROUTLEDGE.

London:
MACMILLAN AND CO.
1876.

[The Right of Translation and Reproduction is Reserved.]

V3. 58(M2)

A876

LONDON:
R. CLAY, SONS, AND TAYLOR, PRINTERS,
BREAD STREET HILL,
QUEEN VICTORIA STREET.

2199

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
CHAPTER I.
INTRODUCTORY	1
CHAPTER II.
A RETROSPECT	3
CHAPTER III.
JAMES II.—THE WHIG REVOLUTION OF 1688.—ANNE	36
CHAPTER IV.
FRESH CENTRES OF HISTORY : THE HANOVERIAN LINE	60
CHAPTER V.
A CHASM OF THIRTY-FIVE YEARS.—THE EVENTS OF GEORGE THE SECOND'S REIGN ; FROM THE REIGN OF GEORGE III.	75
CHAPTER VI.
THE SAME CHASM OF YEARS ; FROM ANOTHER SIDE	94
CHAPTER VII.
FROM 1763 TO 1789.—NEW TIMES	109

CHAPTER VIII.
FROM 1763 TO 1789.—SOCIAL AFFAIRS	PAGE 137
CHAPTER IX.
FROM 1789 TO 1794; THE FRENCH REVOLUTION AND ITS REACTION; REIGN OF TERROR IN ENGLAND	174
CHAPTER X.
FROM 1794.—STATE TRIALS.—THE SPY SYSTEM.—SCOTLAND AND IRELAND	200
CHAPTER XI.
AT THE END OF THE GREAT WAR	240
CHAPTER XII.
WILLIAM HONE, PUBLISHER AND "PARODIST"	267
CHAPTER XIII.
SUSPENSION OF HABEAS CORPUS IN 1817	284
CHAPTER XIV.
GOVERNMENT IN 1817: SPIES AND INFORMERS: ARREST OF WILLIAM HONE	315
CHAPTER XV.
HIGH TREASON IN 1817: WATSON, THISTLEWOOD, AND OTHERS . . .	343
CHAPTER XVI.
THE THREE TRIALS OF WILLIAM HONE: THE FIRST DAY'S TRIAL . . .	364

CONTENTS.

vii

CHAPTER XVII.

	PAGE
SECOND TRIAL OF HONE	394

CHAPTER XVIII.

THE THIRD TRIAL, AND AFTERWARDS	419
---	-----

CHAPTER XIX.

MR. HONE'S AFTER-YEARS	452
----------------------------------	-----

CHAPTER XX.

LIBERTY AND RESPONSIBILITY: THE FREEDOM OF THE PRESS	493
--	-----

CHAPTER XXI.

LIBERTY AND RESPONSIBILITY.—SECURITY AGAINST FOREIGN FOES	537
---	-----

CHAPTER XXII.

THE CHANGES OF SIXTY YEARS.	560
-------------------------------------	-----

ERRATA.

- Pages 67 and 68, for "Forster" read "Foster."
Page 186, line 29, for "Granville" read "Grenville."
Page 195, line 1, for "or" read "for;" line 12, for "saying" read "said."
Page 266, line 11, read "four and a half."
Page 270, line 12, read "exceedingly."
Page 296, line 14, a comma at "people" alters the sense.
Page 313, line 14 in extract, read "to be regretted."
Page 323, line 24, at "information" substitute a comma for a period; line 33, a comma at "this;" line 35, read "against."
Page 417, line 16, read "character as well as of."
Page 426, line 34, read "Mr. Hone's absolute hatred to."
Page 558, line 13, for "aboard" read "abroad."

INDEX.

A.

Abbott, Justice (Lord Tenterden). Hone charged before, 364; career, past and future, of Mr. Justice Abbott, 372; skirmishes with Hone, 380—389; not guilty, 390.

Act of Union, England and Scotland, 49.

Act of Union, Great Britain and Ireland, 222.

Addison, Joseph, the "Spectator," 56; as a Whig party writer in support of King George, ibid.; first-fruit of the reward of his zeal, 65, 66; see also Preas, and 565.

Althorp, Lord, his doubt with respect to Brougham, 297, dissatisfaction with the court, 563.

"Alton Locke," Mr. Kingsley's, an incorrect picture, 259.

America, emigration of Puritans to, 12; opposition, not so much to an Established Church as to Episcopacy, 27; Roger Williams driven to the desert, ibid.; the colonies to be taxed, 110; Mr. Grenville's financial resolutions, 118; Franklin the representative of the colonies, 119; Stamp Act passed, 120; wild defiance of the Government in America, ibid.; fresh proposals of Mr. Charles Townshend for colonial taxation, 127; Wedderburn denounces Franklin, 130; the "olive branch" offered by America, and rejected, 132; decisive march of events, ibid.; Lord North's last effort to retain the form of taxation rejected by the colonists, 129; motion of the Duke of Richmond, praying the King to make peace with America by even the recognition of independence, opposed by Lord Chatham, Lord Camden, and Lord Temple, 133;

surrender of Lord Cornwallis, ibid.; the Rockingham ministry, and peace with America, 134; Horne Tooke's declaration that the King's troops have butchered the American colonists at Lexington and Concord, 141; strong popular feeling in favour of the colonies, ibid.; Cobbett in America, 187; returns to England, 212; war between England and America, 238; Cobbett's flight to, in 1817, on suspension of the Habeas Corpus Act, 323; the common interests of both great branches of the Anglo-Saxon race, 354, 355; noble conduct of America after the great rebellion, 541; action and reaction of the free life of America and England, 579.

Anne, Queen, beginning of her twelve years' reign, 47; a reign of wars, ibid.; warlike exploits, ibid.; character of Marlborough's wars, 48; Tory ministry and parliament, ibid.; laws against schism, ibid.; Defoe in the pillory, 49; "Semper Eadem," ibid.; the Queen and the Church, ibid.; new churches for London, ibid.; union of Scotland and England, ibid.; the Union Jack, ibid.; first Parliament of Great Britain, ibid.; influence of Lord Somers, 50; Sacheverell mobs for Church and Queen, 51; great privileges of the Church, 52-56; literature of Anne's reign, 58; national debt, ibid.; property qualification for members of Parliament, ibid.; Schism Bill, &c., 58, 59; death of the Queen, 59; Marlborough's reputed character of her, ibid.; her favourites, and intrigue to prevent the Hanoverian succession, ibid.; Walpole, ibid.; the Whig counterplot, 64-66.

R

R R

- Arkwright. See Hargraves.
- Army, standing, in the reign of Charles II., 19, 20; the old feudal tenure gone, ibid.; James II. sends out Kirke with troops to aid Jeffreys, 37; James resolves to employ Roman Catholics in, 39; the army cheer the defeat of the King, 41 (see also wars of Marlborough and of William III.); Mutiny Act, 44 (see also Rebellions of 1715 and 1745; Chatham, America, French Revolution, and Rebellion in Ireland); new views and questions with respect to the army, 537; popular error as to great soldiers and sailors, ibid.; error of Kossuth and Mazzini as to the power of opinion, 542, 543; patriotism of Englishmen abroad, 546; questions of a general arming, 548; the real difficulties in the way of recruiting, 553—556; the Duke of Cambridge and an old soldier, 557; "No vote no musket," 598; see also Navy.
- Atterbury, Bishop, his partizanship in the reign of Queen Anne, 56; character of, 70; detected in a Jacobite plot and banished, 71.
- B.
- Baines, Mr., of Leeds, unravels the spy system, 316, 318; statement of, in Parliament on Reform, 518.
- Bamford, Samuel, the Radical, 1; his opinion of Lord Sidmouth and Henry Hunt, &c., 282, 310—313; his Reform Toast, 442.
- Bank of England founded, 46.
- Bartholomew's, St., Day, an anniversary of, 10; the influence of, as a memory, 14.
- Bath, and its ruler, Beau Nash, 270; life of William Hone the elder, in, ibid.
- Bathurst, Lord, 90.
- Baxter, Richard, influence on, of the laws of Charles the Second's reign, 12; attempt to frame a liturgy, 29; in the hands of Judge Jeffreys, 33.
- Beaconsfield, Lord, position of, in the House of Commons and as a statesman, 533, 569, 571.
- Beckford, Lord Mayor, addressing the King at St. James's Palace, 139; statue to, in the Guildhall, ibid.
- Bedloe, co-perjurer with Titus Oates, 14, 17.
- Bell, Dr., National School System, 266, 530.
- Bennett, Mr., son of Lord Tankerville, vigorous attacks of, on Lord Castlereagh, 305, 306, 308.
- Bible Society, the, its great work, 257.
- Bill of Rights, Settlement in accordance with, 44, 46.
- Binney, Mr., and Bishop Blomfield, 606.
- Birmingham in 1815 and 1876, 581.
- Blomfield, Bishop, of London, 606.
- Bolingbroke, Lord, a Tory journalist, 56; his indecent Schism Bill, 58; his intrigue, 59; meets King George I., 63; caught in treason, 64; his seals taken away, 66; goes into exile, 67; permitted to return from exile, 71.
- Boyne, battle of, 45.
- Brandreth, execution of, for complicity in the Derbyshire riots, 316.
- Bright, John, denounces the taxes on knowledge, 517; at the court of the Queen, 563; true success of in the House of Commons, 568; the corn laws, 586.
- Brougham, Lord, his account of Wilkes, 115; his removal to the House of Peers compared with that of Lord Chatham, 126; on Horne Tooke, 141; and Junius, 145, 148; condemns Lord Loughborough's "harangue" on the trials for the Lord George Gordon riots, 161; on Horne Tooke, 210, 211; on Lord Castlereagh, 222; defence of the "Examiner" newspaper, 235; on Old Kingliness, 260; attempt to enter Parliament, 265; satirises Garrow, 292; opinion of Canning, 294; bitter attacks of Hone upon, 295; Radical opposition to, 296; his great services to the nation, 296—297; enmity between and Lord Campbell, 298; attacks on Castlereagh, 306; opposes the Liverpool Government, 308; his account of Lord Ellenborough, 395.
- Bruce, James, returns from Africa, 153.
- Burdett, Sir Francis, at the time of the French Revolution, 177; his election to Parliament, 230; party of, 253, 262; terms the thanksgiving for the Prince Regent "a solemn mockery," 301; opposes the Government, 305, 306; what he might have been in office, 309; on the spy system, 320; at the trial of Wooler, 349; and of

- Roger O'Connor, 356; reference to, 442; speech at public meeting, 444.
- Burke, Edmund, "Essay on the French Revolution," with reference to the succession of George I., 62; folly of the controversy, ibid; recommends the prosecution of Paine, 188; his position in the Government of Lord Rockingham, 122; Mr. W. J. Fox, M. P. for Oldham, on pension of, 203.
- Burnet, Bishop, Jacobite squib on, 66.
- Burns, Robert, his great merit and value as a writer, 171; rejects a pound a week offered to him by a London newspaper, 501.
- Burritt, Ethlu, efforts of, for peace, 544.
- Bute, Lord, Prince Frederick's opinion of, 76; favourite of the mother of George III., 77, 88; succeeds Pitt as Premier, and retires, 111; opposed by the "North Briton," ibid; "Boot Jack," 112; alleged intention of the court to appoint him regent, 121.
- Byron, Lord, influence of, on his time, 173.
- C.
- Cahal, origin of, 20.
- Camden, Lord, Attorney-General, 90; grants Wilkes a writ of Habeas Corpus, 112; great popularity of, 114; Lord Chancellor, 122; his view of Lord Loughborough, 131; his challenge of Lord Mansfield's view of the law of libel, 138; his last great service to England, 132.
- Camden, Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, 219—222.
- Campbell, Lord, his account of Lord Mansfield, 89; the arena which comprised the scope of his "Lives," 91; reference to Wedderburn against Franklin, 131; account of Horne Tooke and Lord Thurlow, 140; on the Lord George Gordon Riots, 161; on Erskine's first brief, 163; on the case of the Dean of St. Asaph, 165; on Thurlow's dismissal from the Lord Chancellorship, 188; Erskine's defence of Paine, 189; the trials of Tooke and others for high treason, 205—211; story of Lord Chancellors, &c., 287; on Lord Brougham, 297; his own life, 298; on Lord Ellenborough, 350; on Lord Chief Justice Abbott, 372; picture of Lord Ellenborough, 397; on Lord Thurlow, 414; on Lord Ellenborough after Hone's third trial, 433.
- Canning, Mr., reference to, 177; in the Government of Pitt, 227; duel of with Castlereagh, 232; policy of, 244; opposed to reform, 295; Brougham's view of, ibid; in the Secret Committee, 300; pronounced a parodist by Earl Grey, 338; the "Praise Lepaux," ibid; the charge repeated by Hone, 339; reference to, in relation to Southey, 358; Hone's denunciation of, during the trials, 386, 387, 390, 430, 434; Hone's denunciation of, in subsequent squibs (Lord Folkestone's attack), 467 "The Spouter of Froth by the Hour," 468, 482; Canning as a politician, 487; one of the founders of the satire that means scandal, 510; Canning in foreign affairs, 586.
- Carlike, Richard, introductory reference to, 1; prevents Southey from buying up his Republican poem, "Wat Tyler," 358; curious life and character of, 357—360.
- Carlyle's, Mr., view of the workmen of the Chartist days, 248, 309—311; his great service to the press, 524.
- Cartwright, Major, generous character of, 441; Samuel Bamford, on, 442.
- Cartwright, see Hargraves.
- Cashman, John, execution of, in connection with the Spa Fields riot, 316.
- Castlereagh, Lord, member for County Down, 219; a patriot, ibid; is converted to the court, ibid; Emmett, Bond, Wolfe Tone, and others, 220; Lord E. Fitzgerald and the brothers Sheares, 221; the Irish rebellion, ibid; great loss of life—death of Tone, ibid; work of Castlereagh, 222; shameless bribery as a prelude to the Act of Union, 223; the Act of Union, ibid; Pitt's promise of Catholic Emancipation broken, 224—225; Castlereagh and the Addington ministry, 226; duel of, with Canning, 232; Foreign Secretary in the Government of Lord Liverpool, 233; moves the suspension of the Habeas Corpus Act, 305; is denounced by Mr. Bennett, 306; charges against by Lord Brougham, ibid; defence of spies and informers, 320; attacks on Castlereagh in Hone's squibs,

- 465—472; asserted regret of Hone for the injustice done to Lord Castlereagh—evidently fictitious, since Castlereagh died in 1822, and Hone republished the squibs in 1827, 487—488.
- Catholics, the position of after the Restoration, 4; relation to of the followers of Archbishop Laud, 7; harsh general laws against, and against Nonconformists, 10—12;
cruel persecution of Catholics, 12,
13; Test Act, and Parliamentary
Test especially directed against Catholics, 13, 14; Protestant Parliament, 15; the Duke of York presented as a "Popish Recusant," ibid.; Perjuries of Oates and Bedloe, 14—17; Bill to exclude James from the throne carried in the Commons, 16, 17; Catholics and Protestants alternately in power, 18;
the Catholics contending for a falling cause, 20, 21; their unfortunate position socially, 22; their views of the "Church of England," 28;
what was involved in their defeat,
31; privileges accorded to, by James II., 38; Declarations of Indulgence, 39; desire of the King to enrol Catholics in the army, ibid.;
Parliament refuses to repeal the Test
Act, ibid.; the King tries the law courts and succeeds, ibid.; trial and acquittal of the seven Anglican bishops, 41; a Catholic defeat, ibid.;
Catholics excluded from Toleration Act, 44; the Catholics in Ireland in the reign of William III., 45; La
Hogue, 46; Sacramental Test, 47;
(see also Established Church and James II.); exclusion of Catholics from the throne, 61; probable influence of Catholic neighbours on Burke, 125; cruel laws against,
160; the Lord George Gordon Riots, ibid.; promise to with respect to Emancipation distinctly made and broken, 224, 225; O'Connell's services to, 603.
- Cave, Edward, founds the "Gentleman's Magazine," 94; charged with reporting proceedings in Parliament,
99; his victory, 101.
- Charles II., enactments of the reign of,
5; accession to the throne, 9; the Act of Uniformity, 10; the Pension
Parliament, 11; the Drunken Parliament, ibid.; the Conventicle Act, ibid.; the Five Mile Act, 12; the Test Act, 13; the Parliamentary
Test, 14; Titus Oates, ibid.; Habeas
Corpus Act, 15; the Exclusion Bill,
16; the Duke of York, James II.,
presented to a grand jury by Lord
Shaftesbury, ibid.; last Parliament of Charles II., ibid.; the King pensioned by France, ibid.; Jeffreys and Scroggs sent out to stifle rebellion, 17;
the Rye House Plot, ibid.; suicide of Lord Essex, ibid.; execution of Lord
William Russell and Algernon Sydney, 18; Monmouth, Duke of, ibid.;
death of Charles II., 18—19; Whig and Tory, first use of the terms, 19;
a standing army, ibid.; the Guards,
ibid.; abrogation of the Feudal Tenure, 19—20; a penny post, the General Post Office, the "London Gazette," London lighted with oil, ibid.; position of the three creeds—
the Catholic, the Anglican, and the Nonconformist, 21—32; the Quakers, 32; literature of the Restoration, 34.—See also Church,
Established, and Nonconformists.
- "Chronicle, Morning," comment of on Hone's first trial, 391; dispute with the "Times," 392; on Hone's second trial, 417; Mr. Perry, editor, ex-pounds the law of libel, 445; on the third trial, 450; see also Press.
- Church, the Established, at the Restoration, 7; previous suffering of the clergy, ibid.; their revenge, ibid.;
divine right, 8; forces opposed to,
ibid.; virtual claims and declaration of the clergy, 9; the Savoy Conference, 10; enactment of laws against Nonconformists begin, ibid.
(see also Nonconformists); the Anglican Church as one of the three chief religious organisations of the time, 20; the apparent harshness and real tolerance of the clergy, ibid.; their accord with the instincts of English life, 21; Laud and Prynne, 23;
Bishop Ken—the Evening Hymn, ibid.; the principle of compromise in the Church, 24; was an Established Church necessary at the time? 25;
our great cathedrals, 28; high ground taken by the clergy as to what they deemed the rights of the Church, 30; if, moreover, an established church was necessary, was the Anglican Church, as then established, the best for the purpose? 31; the op-

- position of the "Society of Friends," 32; Nonconformist opponents to the principle of Establishment, 34; feeling and position of the clergy on the accession of James II.; their dread of Roman Catholic ascendancy, 37; the great Universities and benefices opened to Roman Catholics, 39; Declarations of Indulgence to be read in all churches, ibid.; Primate Sancroft and six other bishops petition the king that they may not be compelled to break the law, 40; only four clergymen read the declaration, ibid.; the seven bishops committed to the Tower, ibid.; supported by Nonconformists, 41; their trial and acquittal, ibid.; position and popularity of the National Church at the end of the trial, ibid.; Lord Macaulay's view of, 42; proposal of William III. to include certain classes of Nonconformists in the Established Church rejected, 44; Episcopacy abolished in Scotland, 45; Occasional Conformity Act, 48; mocked by Defoe, 49; Queen Anne's love for the Church, ibid.; fifty new churches to be built in London, ibid.; Queen Anne's bounty, ibid.; High Church mobs, 51; Sacheverell against freedom, ibid.; the most senseless and stupid of all our historical mobs, ibid.; a century of Church history, 52; what had the Church done for education? ibid.; the scholarship of the clergy, and endowments owing to their efforts, 53; the work of the clergy as teachers, 54; the parochial system altogether opposed to Uniformity, 55; the Scotch system of John Knox much more conducive to Uniformity, ibid.; but, nevertheless, a great boon to Scotland, ibid.; the exceptional and great advantages of the clergy in wealth and position, ibid.; their undoubted popularity, ibid.; Bishop Atterbury as a Tory journalist, 66; the clergy receiving George I., Mr. Thackeray's view, 63; Archbishop Tension for George I., 65; the Duke of Ormond and High Church mobs, 67; Convocation receives notice to discontinue its sittings, 69; Bishop Atterbury exiled, 71; Sir Robert Walpole and the bishops, 81; a bishopric sold by the mistress of George II., 102; edifying verses of Bishop Porteus on the death of the King, 103; John Wesley a clergyman, 104; Horne Tooke in holy orders, 142; the penalty of great privileges, 143; case of the Dean of St. Asaph, 165; the Church and the Prince Regent, 237; Christianity as a social power, 246; Dr. Malthus a clergyman, 257; question as between the Established Church and Dissent, 260; various missionary societies, 272; the Church Missionary Society, 273; see also Horne's parodies on the Book of Common Prayer.
- Clergy, Ejection of 2,000 of the, on St. Bartholomew's Day, 10.
- Clive, Lord, see India.
- Cobbett, William, remarks of, on the Quakers, 32; in America, 187; denounces Paine, Priestley, and others in "Peter Porcupine," ibid.; welcomed to England as a Tory by a Tory Society, 212; Cobbett and Hone, 276; Weekly Register, 291; found guilty of libel, ibid.; resolves to leave England, if the Habeas Corpus Act is suspended, 293; the intention carried out, 323; questioned by Leigh Hunt and defended by Hone, ibid.; error of Cobbett, 327; Samuel Bamford's toast to, 442; Cobbett's position as an independent journalist, 510.
- Cobden, Richard, alleged view of newspaper writing, 535; defence of Mr. Bright, 568; the Corn Laws, 586
- Cochrane, Lord, elected to Parliament, 230; party of, 262; motions of, against the Government, 292, 293; ill-treatment of, by Lord Ellenborough, 302, 397, 435; Samuel Bamford on, 442; speech after Hone's trials, and subscription towards, 446; great services to England, 549.
- Coleridge, S. T., 173; at the breaking out of the French Revolution, 177; editor of the "Morning Post," 501;
- Commonwealth, the, its principles in opposition to the divine right clergy and laity, 8.
- Conventicle Act passed, 11.
- Convocation, prays Queen Anne for more churches for London, and obtains fifty, 49; suspended by the Whigs on the accession of George I., 69.
- Conway, General, alone opposes the - proposal to tax the colonies, 118; in Ministries, 122, 125, 134; proposes an address to the King informing him that whoever advises the continuance of the war with America are the enemies of the country, 134.

- Cook, Captain James, his noble life and character, 153.
- Corn Laws, the, 249—253.
- Corporation Act, passed, 10.
- "Courier," the, organ of the Liverpool Government, 300; mockery of Cobbett's flight to America, 323; see also Press.
- Coutts, Lady Burdett, 575.
- Crompton; see Hargraves.
- Cromwell, Elizabeth, granddaughter of the Protector, dies in London, 98; the Cromwellian fibre still in English life in 1731, when the "Gentleman's Magazine" began, ibid.
- Cromwell, Oliver, great political liberty during the rule of, 6, 7; attempt during the Restoration to undo the marks of the Commonwealth, 7—14; his continued influence in English life, 260.
- Cruikshank, Mr. George, admirable illustrations of the Political House, that Jack Built, 463—469; of Sidmouth's Six Bills, 470; the "Joss and his Folly," 471; "the Bridge Street Gang," &c., 473; Mr. Cruikshank in the Westminster Aquarium, 479.
- Cumberland, Duke of, defeated at Fontenoy, 84; victorious at Culloden, 85; "the butcher," ibid.; intrigues against Pitt, 86.
- Cumberland, Duke of, intriguing for the throne, against the Princess Victoria, 599; finds his way to Hanover, 601.
- D.
- Debt, National, in 1693, 46; Bank of England founded, ibid.; in 1713, 58; in the reign of George III., 75; sinking fund for reduction of, 83; the Debt and Subsidies, 241; grappled with by Joseph Hume, 571.
- Defoe, Daniel, in the pillory for his "Shortest Way with Dissenters," 49; our first great journalist, 496—498.
- Disraeli, Mr., see Beaconsfield.
- Dissent; see Nonconformist.
- Dissenting Lord Mayor, a, attends his chapel in his robes in the reign of William III., 48.
- Duncan, Admiral, victory of, 215.
- Dundas, Mr., Lord Melville, 178; charged with peculation, and compelled to resign, 227; course of the Times with respect to, 306.
- Dundee, cruelties of in Scotland, 16; at Drumlog, ibid.; death of, 45.
- E.
- Education. National, Established Church efforts for, 52, 53; position of at the present time, 604.
- Egypt, Napoleon in, 216; an English force in from India, 217.
- Eldon, Lord, Attorney-General during the Reign of Terror, in England, 188, 190; his earlier career, ibid.; brother of Lord Stowell, ibid.; Lord Chancellor, 226, 230; Lord Eldon to his wife and brother, 283, 289; retains the Great Seal, 302; position of in 1817, ibid.; his devotness, 533.
- Ellenborough, Lord, counsel for Warren Hastings, 160; derided by Burke and Sheridan, ibid.; Attorney-General for the County Palatine, 194; Attorney-General for Mr. Addington (Lord Sidmouth), 226; Lord Chief Justice, 229; presides at the trial for libel of John and Leigh Hunt, 235; a political judge, 288; Hone charged before, on an ex-officio Information, 332, 337; presides at the trial of the Spa Fields rioters, 343; writes a solemn prayer in falling health, 346; Wooler, editor of the "Black Dwarf," charged before, 347; danger of playing with, 350; presides at Hone's second trial, 394; his determination and career, 395; incidents of his career, 395; opposes Horne Tooke's entry to Parliament, ibid.; prosecutes Governor Wall, ibid.; presides at a Special Commission for the trial of Colonel Despard, 396; satirised by Lord Holland, ibid.; and by Charles Matthews, 397; first altercation with Hone, 403; another altercation, 405; declares he will bear no more, 409; second "Not Guilty," 415; Lord Ellenborough a Cumbrian, 419; Hone's "His Lordship is no judge of me," 423; expounds the Act of - Uniformity, 431; the third "Not Guilty," 433; Lord Campbell on what followed, ibid.; Lord Ellenborough buys red herrings, ibid.; resigns the Lord Chief Justiceship, ibid.; attacks on in lists of subscriptions for Hone, 434-440; and at public meeting in favour of Howe, 442-450.

- Erskine, Lord, his first brief, 163; defends Admiral Keppel, 164; and the Dean of St. Asaph, 165; advocate for Mr. Stockdale, printer, 166; his defence of Paine, 189, and Horne Tooke, 190; varied great services during the English Reign of Terror, 194; against Fox, 195; advocate for Mr. Horne Tooke, 196; defence of Tooke and others on a charge of high treason, 204; determined conduct of Erskine, 206-211; his opinion of ministers, 212; Lord Chancellor, 229.
- Essex, Lord, commits suicide on the discovery of the Rye House Plot, 17.
- "Examiner," the newspaper, prosecution of, in 1811, 235; second prosecution of, for terming the Prince Regent "An Adonis of fifty," ibid.; Leigh Hunt in prison, 236; on a Form of Thanksgiving for the escape of the Prince Regent from a stone, 300; on Cobbett's flight to America, 323; on the death of the Princess Charlotte, 362; on Hone's trials, 460; see also Press.
- Exclusion Bill, passed by the Commons, 16, 17.
- Eyre, Chief Justice, presides at the trial of Horne Tooke and others for high treason, 204; humour of Tooke, and great victory of Erskine, 209-212.
- F.
- Fawcett, Mr., in the House of Commons, 569.
- Feudal Tenures and Purveyance, end of, 20.
- Finch, Solicitor-General, refuses to sanction the attempt of King James II. to set aside the Test Act, 40.
- Fitzwilliam, Lord, dread of the French Revolution, 218; wise and generous government of Ireland, ibid.; refuses the money offered as compensation for the losses arising from the Act of Union, 222.
- Five-Mile Act passed, 12; operation of, ibid.
- Fleet, mutiny of the, 213; see also Navy.
- Flower, Benjamin, prosecution of, for libel, 234; his daughter writer of the hymn, "Nearer to Thee," ibid.
- Forster, Mr. W. E., in the House of Commons, 568.
- Fox, Charles James, maiden speech of, 129; relation to Wilberforce, 150; Fox as compared with Pitt, 151, 152; a prosecutor of Warren Hastings, 159; his view of a great speech of Erskine's, 166; opposes the slave trade, 167; mistakenly proposes the regency as the right of the Prince of Wales, ibid.; position at the beginning of the French Revolution, 176; separation from Burke, 180, 181; proposal to repeal the Test and Corporation Acts, 181; advocates Parliamentary reform, 183; his last great effort to preserve peace, 191; conflict in the law courts with Horne Tooke, 196; death of Pitt, 227; Fox, Foreign Secretary, 229; vigorous attempts to secure peace, ibid.; death of Fox, ibid.; the subsidies that in 1792 he would have granted to ministers, 286; a few final words on Fox and Pitt, 587; see also Holland.
- Fox, W. J., member for Oldham, papers in the "People's Journal," 204; on war costs, 241; a writer in the "Weekly Dispatch," 512.
- Franklin, Benjamin, in England as colonial agent, 119; his early career, ibid.; denounced by Wedderburn; Lord Loughborough, 130; in Paris as representative of the United States, 132; signs the treaty between France and America, ibid.; is denounced by Cobbett in "Peter Porcupine," 187.
- Frederick, Prince of Wales, father of George III., 76; Pitt's relation to, ibid.; unwholesomeness of the associations of Leicester House, 77; Lord Bute, favourite of the mother of George III., 88.
- Freemasons, the, as a benefit society, 562.
- French Revolution of 1789, difficulty to Englishmen of the new questions it involved, 175; position and views of distinguished men in England, 176-178; echoes of the storm, 179;

- writings of Burke, Paine and Mackintosh, 181; English Reform Societies, 183; the effect in England of the massacres, 185; last effort of Fox for peace, 191; reign of terror in England, 194; harsh sentences in the Law Courts, 201—207; trials for high treason, Tooke, Thelwell, Hardy, &c., 209; French attempt to invade Ireland, 215; Napoleon in Egypt, 216; an English force from India, 217; continued French intrigue, 220; caution of Irishmen with respect to France, ibid.; the peace of Amiens, 226; renewal of the war, ibid.; Austerlitz, 227; death of Pitt, ibid.; Wellington in the Peninsula, 232; the Walcheren Expedition, ibid.; Napoleon in Russia, ibid.; condition of England at the end of the war, 240.
- Fry, Elizabeth, slight reference to, 584.
- G.
- Garrick, David, arrival of in London, 95.
- Garrow, Sir William, declares a petition⁺ for parliamentary reform libellous, 292; satirised by Brougham, ibid.; "Old Filch," ibid.; member of secret committee, 300; prosecutes William Hone, 330, and Jonathan Wooler, 336; takes affectionate leave of the bar, ibid.
- Gatton, borough of, 321, 322.
- George, King, I., birth of, on the day preceding the coronation of Charles II., 9; the Act of Settlement, 61; the royal line of descent, ibid.; controversy with respect to, of Dr. Price, Mr. Paine, and Mr. Burke, ibid.; landing of the King at Greenwich, Mr. Thackeray's account of, 63; Whig ascendancy, 67; the rebellion of 1715, 69; the men who supported and the men who opposed the succession, 68; the South Sea scheme, 71; birth of the "Young Pretender," ibid.; Bishop Atterbury exiled and Bolingbroke pardoned, ibid.; press prosecutions, 72; immoral clubs, 73; death and character of the King, ibid.; Mr. Thackeray's view, ibid.; value of the change from the Stuarts, 74.
- George, King, II., on the throne, 76; Frederick, Prince of Wales, father of George III., ibid.; his character and opposition court at Leicester House, ibid.; Pitt (Lord Chatham), and Walpole, 76, 77; death of the Prince of Wales, 77; the Marquis of Bute, favourite of the Princess, ibid.; Pitt's withdrawal from Leicester House, 78; fall and death of Walpole, 82; intermingling of parties, ibid.; Dettingen, 84; Fontenoy, ibid.; the rebellion of 1745 and its suppression, 84—86; cruel policy after Culloden, ibid.; Pitt in office, 86, 87; the law of libel, 89; Johnson and Goldsmith, 95—98; the press, 98; laws against combination of workmen, 99; privation of the poor, 102; death of the King, 103; Mr. Thackeray's picture of, ibid.; Wesley and Wesleyanism, 104—108.
- George, King, III., a retrospect from the third year of the reign of, 75; father of the King, 76; and mother, 77; bad school for a young prince, ibid.; Lord Hardwicke hastening to the coronation of the King, 88; proceedings of the reign of, 110; Wilkes, 111; taxation of the colonies, 118; fall of the Grenville Government, 121; Grenville's discourtesy to the King, ibid.; the Rockingham Government and its fall, 122, 123; the King's Friends, 123; the Chatham-Grafton Government, 126; obstinacy of the King with respect to America, 132; the Shelburne and Portland administrations, 135; Lord Mayor Beckford addressing the King, 139; danger from the narrowness joined to the undisputed morality of the King, 147; fatal illness of George III., 167; the "Times" punished for articles on the rejoicing of royal dukes for the King's recovery, 177; Bill for protecting the King's person, 212; opposition to Catholic Emancipation, 218, 224, 225; melancholy lot of the King, 225, 230; the Prince of Wales made Regent, virtual end of the reign of George III., 233.
- George IV., birth of, takes his seat in the House of Lords, 135; Fox proposes his regency as a right, and is opposed by Pitt, 167; attempt to coerce Erskine, 189; marriage of to the Princess Caroline, 219; made Regent, 233; "An Adonis of fifty," 235; position of the Prince and his advisers, 237; alleged attack upon,

- 289; death of the Princess Charlotte, 362; and of her father, twelve years later, ibid.; picture of, on opening Parliament in 1817, 289; fiercely satirised by Hone and Cruikshank; see Hone's squibs.
- Gerald, Mr.; see Palmer.
- Gibbs, Sir Vicary, with Erskine in trial for high treason, 205; prosecutes the "Examiner" newspaper, 235.
- Gibson, Milner, struggle for freedom of the press, 516; for free trade, 586.
- Gillray, parodies of, 387, 389; pensioned by the Government, ibid.
- Girdlestone, Canon, 575.
- Gladstone, Mr., invaluable service to the press, 517; position as a statesman, 570.
- Glasgow, progress of, 581, 582; petition from operatives of, 596.
- Glencoe, "massacre of, 45.
- Godolphin, rise of, to power, 48.
- Godwin, William, "cursory strictures" on the charge of Chief Justice Eyre, 204; great services of, to Horne Tooke and others, charged with high treason; ibid.
- Goldsmith, Oliver, life and works, 96.
- Gordon, Lord George, riots, 160; escape of the principal culprit, 162.
- Grafton, Duke of, Premier, with Pitt,—created Lord Chatham—Privy Seal, 125; ill-treatment of by Chatham, 128; and by Junius, 129; his retirement, ibid.; a student of theology, ibid.
- Granville, Lord (Lord Carteret), character of, 78.
- Grattan, Mr., his work in Ireland and great fame, 201; public spirit of, 218, 224; deceived by Pitt, 224.
- Great Towns, view of Lord Kaims with respect to, 154; great progress in, 577-582; the dark side of, 583.
- Greenwich Hospital, founded by Queen Mary, wife of William III., 46.
- Grenville, Lord, son of George Grenville, Foreign Secretary, 186; Prime Minister, 229; member of secret committee, 300; believes the danger of revolution to be imminent, 304.
- Grenvilles, the; George Grenville and Lord Temple, brothers-in-law of Chatham, 78; desert Bute, 111; George Grenville, Premier, ibid.; prosecutes Wilkes, 113; resolution to tax Americans, 118; fall of his ministry, detested both by the King and the nation, 121; Lord Temple and Pitt, 122; policy of reversed by Lord Rockingham's Government, 123.
- Grey, Mr., afterwards Earl, member of the Society of the Friends of the People, 183; memorable reform petition of the society, ibid.; beginning of his long struggle for reform, ibid.; Lord of the Admiralty in "All the Talents," 229; reference to his manly refusal to join the Perceval Government, 261; character of his Whiggery, 262, 293; resists the enactment of repressive laws by the Liverpool Government, 293, 296, 307; opposition to Sidmouth's circular, 328; calls attention in Parliament to the prosecution of Hone, 338; watchfulness of, 354.
- Guards, the, first formation of, in the reign of Charles II., 19.
- Gwynne, Nell, commended by Charles II. to the care of his courtiers, 18; the Prebend of Winchester (Bishop Ken) refuses to give up his house to Mrs. Gwynne, 24.

H.

- Habeas Corpus, Act of, passed, 15; see also Parliament, Hone, Shaftesbury, and Libel.
- Halifax, Lord, a Trimmer, 22, 39, 43; prompt action of for Protestant succession, 65; death of, 67.
- Hardwicke, Lord (Sir P. Yorke), hastens to court at seventy years of age, to hail the accession of George III. to the throne, 88; his condemnation of the rebel lords, 89; ruling on the law of libel, ibid.
- Hargraves, James, the spinning-jenny, 154; also Arkwright, Crompton, Cartwright, and Wyatt, ibid.
- Harley (Lord Oxford), intrigue of, his struggle against Walpole, 64; repulsed at the first court of George I., 67; downfall of and retirement, ibid.; the Harleian manuscripts, ibid.; revenge of, on Walpole, 79, 82; reference to, 129.
- Hastings, Warren; see India.
- "Herald, Morning," on Hone's first trial, 392; see also Press.
- Herbert, Admiral, leaves England with an invitation to William, Prince of Orange, to rescue the nation from the tyranny of James II., 41.
- Herbert, Lord Chief Justice, declares

- the law to be the King's, and to be set aside at the royal pleasure, 40.
- Hetherington, Henry, struggles against the stamp duty, 515; the "Poor Man's Guardian," 516.
- Hill, Rowland, and popular progress, 583.
- Hoadley, Bishop of Bangor, in Convocation—the Bangorian Controversy, 69; causes the suspension of Convocation, ibid.
- Hobbes, Thomas, philosophical genius of the principles of the "Glorious Restoration," 8; unselfish character of, as a man, ibid.; founder of an ignoble creed, ibid.
- Hoche, General, attempted invasion of Ireland, 215; "Apotheosis" of, 387. "Hoche, La," capture of, with Wolfe Tone, 221.
- Holland, Lord (Mr. Henry Fox), character of, 79; raised to the peerage as, 111; remarks on, 151.
- Holland, Lord, nephew of Charles James Fox, in the Government of "All the Talents," 229; considerate conduct of, 296, 304; denounces Sidmouth's "Circular," 328; satirises Lord Ellenborough, 396.
- Hone, William, father of the "Parodist," autobiography of, 267; his religious experiences, 268; strong prejudice against the Established Church, 269; view of his son's victory over Lord Ellenborough, ibid.
- Hone, William, the younger, a ripe Tory at twelve years of age, 275; his political influence, 276; undue account taken of his physical suffering, 277; his much greater mental suffering, 279; the friends of his later years, 279—281; suspension of Habeas Corpus in 1817, Hone's "Reformists' Register," 291; his parodies, 303; his defence of Cobbett, 324; arrest of Hone on an ex-officio information, 330; charged before Lord Ellenborough, 333; second interview with Lord Ellenborough, 337; his case brought before the House of Lords by Lord Grey, 338; a third time before the Court, 339; strong animus of Lord Ellenborough, 341; Hone's comment on the trials of Wooler and Thistlewood, 351; great service rendered to him by Mr. Pearson, 352; Hone's view of his position, 364; blasphemy or political satire, 367; points in his favour, 369; first trial before Mr. Justice Abbott, 371; Sir Samuel Shepherd, Attorney-General, 373; parody of the Apostles' Creed, 375; Hone's production of parodies that had not been prosecuted, 381—384; Mr. Canning's parodist, 386; not guilty, 390; the London press on the trial, 391; second trial, before Lord Ellenborough, 395; parody on the Litany, 399; fierce altercations of judge and defendant, 403—414; second—not guilty, 415; third trial for the Sinecurist's Creed, 417; Hone takes his "stand" against Lord Ellenborough, 422; his account of Dr. Stoddart, 425, and of his own poverty, 427; more parodies by eminent men, 428—430; the third—not guilty, 433; bitter feeling of Lord Ellenborough, 435; public subscription for Hone, 437; curious signatures of subscribers, ibid.; public meeting, 442; opinions of the daily press, 450; Hone's position and prospects, 452; cruel persecution of him through his brother, 455; Apocryphal New Testament, 458; Hone's mistake, ibid.; his squibs, 463; Mr. Cruikshank, ibid.; imprudent imitation of the Prayer Book, ibid.; "The Political House that Jack built," ibid.; the Prince Regent, Lord Castlereagh, Lord Sidmouth, Mr. Canning, and others, as pictured by Mr. Cruikshank and Mr. Hone, 464—473; satirical advertisements, 475; Mr. Cruikshank in the Aquarium, 479 Hone's "Every Day Book," "Year Book," &c., 480; keeper of a coffee-house, 481; pictures of him by his later friends, 481—485; politics and religion, 485; absurd representations 487; Hone's death in 1842, 490.
- Howe, John, a foe to Hobbesism, 8; the friend of Archbishop Tillotson, 21; reproves Tillotson for a divine right sermon, 25.
- Howe, Lord, victory of, 193.
- Huddleston, Father, Catholic priest, attends the last hours of Charles I., 18.
- Hume, Joseph, his great position in the House of Commons, 572.
- Hunt, Henry, connection with the Spa Fields Riot, 262; Bamford's and Lovett's opinion of, 313.

Hunt, John and Leigh. See the "Examiner."
 Huntingdon's, Lady, preachers in Bath, 271, 492.

I.

India, reminiscences of, 1857, 68; influence of India on England, 156; beginning of the Great Company, ibid.; Job Charnock, Warren Hastings, and Clive, 157; death of Clive, 158; trial of Hastings, 159; force from in Egypt, 217; victories in, ibid.; Wellington leaves for Europe, 227; the old and the present civilisation of India, 547.

Ireland, shut out from the common interests and action of England and Scotland at the time of the Commonwealth, 11; campaign of Schomberg, 45; battle of the Boyne, ibid.; Sarsfield's defence of Limerick, and his voluntary exile with 12,000 of his men, ibid.; Marlborough, Schomberg, and Ginkell in Ireland, 47; O'Connell at St. Omer's College, 177; bitter discontent in, 215; attempted invasion of by General Hoche, ibid.; Lord Fitzwilliam, Lord-Lieutenant, 218; Lord Castlereagh in two phases of character, 219; the Act of Union, 223 (see also Castlereagh); Pitt's promise to emancipate the Catholics broken, 225; first Parliament of Great Britain and Ireland, ibid.; curious case of Mr. Roger O'Connor, 355; rejoicing for the death of Lord Castlereagh, 468; O'Connell's service to Ireland, 603; see also Grattan, and Pitt.

J.

James II., Test and Parliamentary Acts directed against, as Duke of York, 13, 14; James withdraws to the Continent, 15; presented to a jury as a "Popish Recusant," ibid.; bill to exclude him from the throne, 16, 17; the Rye House Plot for the same purpose, 17; James on the throne, 36; his relations to the Established clergy, 37; his treatment of the Duke of Monmouth, ibid.; the Bloody Circuit, ibid.; the name of James as the future watchword of the Jacobites, 38; issues a Declaration of Indulgence, 39; tries to make Kirke of the Bloody Circuit a Roman Catholic, ibid.; attempts the repeal of the Test Act and the Act of Habeas Corpus, and fails, but succeeds in the law courts, 39; trial and acquittal of the seven bishops, 41; birth of a son to James, ibid.; Admiral Herbert carries an invitation to the Prince of Orange, ibid.; the expelled king at St. Germain's, 42; relations with Marlborough, 43; James in Ireland, 45; La Hogue, 46; see also Rebellious of 1715 and 1745; Prince James Edward, son of James II., and Prince Charles Edward, grandson of James II.

Jeffreys, Judge, begins the bloody circuit, 37; his fearful work within a year, 38; Baxter in the hands of, ibid.

Jervis, Sir John, victory of, 193, 215.

Johnson, Samuel, life of and influence on literature, 94; his alleged sorrow that he had ever made, while affecting to report, speeches in Parliament, 99.

Jones, Gale, influence of, on his time, 1, 360, 361.

Junius, introductory reference to, 1; the secret of, 144; great value and place of Junius in history, 146—149.

Jury, trial by, victory of, in the acquittal of the seven bishops, 41; endangered by Lord Hardwicke, Lord Mansfield, and others, 88—89; see also Libel, law of, and Press.

K.

Kaims, Lord, on great towns, 154.

Ken, Bishop, refuses to receive Nell Gwynne, 23; the Evening Hymn, 24.

Kent, Duke and Duchess of, married, 863; Miss Martineau on the life of the Duchess of, 599.

Kenyon, Lord Chief Justice during the Reign of Terror in 1794, 188, 190; refuses a verdict, 194; is browbeaten by Horne Tooke, 196; passed over for Justice Eyre in the trials for high treason, 204, 205.

Killiecrankie, battle of, 45.

Knight, Mr. Charles, his account of the spy system, 319; and of Hone's trials, 371; on the Manchester massacre, 466; services of, to literature, 518.

 Knox, John; see Scotland.
 Kossuth, M., his views of English great towns, 542, 589.

L.

La Hogue, battle of, 4, 46.
 Lancaster, Joseph, and British Schools, 266, 580, 590.
 Langley, Sir Hugh, foreman of jury on the trial of the seven bishops, 41.
 Laud, Archbishop, the Laudian view of the Reformation, 7; Laud prosecutes Prynne, 23; prosecuted by Prynne, ibid.; unanswerable facts against the character of, ibid.
 Lawson, Sir Wilfrid, in the House of Commons, 568.
 "Leeds Mercury," exposure of the spy system in, 316.
 Libel, law of, Lord Hardwicke and Lord Mansfield endeavour to make juries in case of libel mere judges of the fact, and not the law, 88, 89; Wilkes and the "North Briton," 112—117; view of Lord Mansfield vigorously disputed and refuted by Lord Camden and by Junius, 138; case of Mr. Woodfall, the doctrine of Lord Mansfield rejected, ibid.; Erskine's effort to defeat the ruling, in the case of the Dean of St. Asaph, 165; Fox's Libel Bill, 167; prosecution of Paine's "Rights of Man," defended by Erskine, 188; cruel prosecutions for libel in England during the Terror, 1794, and later, 194—196; and in Scotland, 202, 203; case of Gilbert Wakefield, 233, and of Benjamin Flower, 234 (see also "Press" and Trials of Wooler, Hone, and R. Carlile); general view of "The Press"—its Liberty and Responsibility, 492—536.
 Liberty of the Press conceded in the reign of William III., 46.
 Liverpool, Lord, first (Mr. Charles Jenkinson), in the Government of the Duke of Grafton, 126.
 Liverpool, Lord, second, as Lord Hawkesbury, in the Addington Government, 226; Prime Minister, 233; reference to, 262; see also Castlereagh, Canning, and Sidmouth.
 Liverpool, town of, 579; progress of, 579, 583.

"London Gazette," see Press.
 London, Great Plague in, 12; lighted with gas, 19; General Post Office, ibid.; Temple Bar, 38; see also Press; fifty churches ordered by Queen Anne to be built in, 49.
 Loughborough, Lord (Mr. Wedderburn), opposes Franklin on the Massachusetts Petition, 130; his Red Indian warfare, 130, 131; change of party, ibid.; defends Clive, 158; presides over a Special Commission for the trial of the Lord George Gordon rioters, 161; his "opening harangue" condemned, ibid.; Lord Chancellor, 188; attempts to cause Erskine to prove untrue to his principles and profession, 189; refuses to commute a harsh sentence, 195; further account of, 288, 289.
 Lovett, William, representative Chartist, 1; his view of Cobbett and Henry Hunt, 313; and of Feargus O'Connor, 314.
 Luddites, the, 238.
 Lyttelton, Lord, Chancellor of the Exchequer, 78.

M.

Macaulay, Lord, on the literature of the Restoration, 34; his stern picture of the clergy, 42; and of Marlborough, 43; on the absence of Lord Chatham when the American Stamp Act was passed, 119; on "the King's Friends," 123; on the fall of the Rockingham Government, 134; view of as to success in the House of Commons, 565.
 Malthus, Dr., and his teachings, 275.
 Manchester, Mr. Carlyle on operatives of, 309; blanket meeting, 310; in 1817 and 1876, 463; massacre at, 466; progress of, 581, 589.
 Mansfield, Lord, appointed to negotiate with Lord Chatham, 87; Lord Shelburne's extreme view of, ibid.; attempt to undo the jury system in cases of libel, 89; relation to the great traditions of the Bar, 90; sentences John Wilkes, 116; attacks on by Junius, 138; and by Lord Camden, ibid.; judge at the trial of Horne Tooke, 141; delivers the verdict in the case of the Slave Somerset, 153; house of, wrecked by the Lord George Gordon mobs, 161;

- Erskine's opposition to in the case of the Dean of St. Asaph, 165; Mansfield and Camden, 521.
- Mar, Earl of, in rebellion and defeat, 67, 68.
- Margarot; see Palmer.
- Marlborough, Duchess of, 43; her rule over Queen Anne, 59; her intrigue for power, 65; her picture of herself, 66; her legacy to Pitt (Lord Chatham) for his denunciation of Walpole, 78.
- Marlborough, Duke of, assists to defeat the Duke of Monmouth, 37; his successful career, 42; position under James II., ibid.; his high qualities, ibid.; Lord Macaulay's picture of, very questionable, 43; sent to the Tower by Queen Mary, 46; Marlborough in Ireland, 47; his great victories, ibid.; receives the thanks of the House of Commons for "retrieving the ancient glory of the English nation," 48; character of his wars, ibid.; his reputed opinion of Queen Anne, 59; Mr. Thackeray's view of, 63; description of Marlborough in a Jacobite ballad, 66.
- Mary, Queen, influence of her reign on English life and character, 14.
- Mary, Queen, wife of William III., 44; her rule in William's absence, 46; commits Marlborough to the Tower, and releases him, ibid.; founds Greenwich Hospital, ibid.
- Masham, Mrs., favourite of Queen Anne, 59, 66.
- Mathew, Father, apostle of temperance, 603.
- Mazzini, Joseph, his view of an ever active Divine influence kindred to the view of the Quakers, 33; his view of the state of Europe, 543.
- Miall, Ed., misrepresentation of, 496.
- Milton, John, in opposition to Hobbesism, 7; Areopagitica, 8; "Old Priest Writ large," 27; Milton's great battle partly won, 46; the last struggle for Areopagitica, 515; the successors of Milton, 605.
- Ministries—the Cabal, 20; the Triummers, 39—43; the Tories in power under Anne, 48; Lord Somers, Walpole, and the Whigs appealed to in the time of danger of rebellion, 49; Lord Somers, 50, 51; Walpole, 51; plot of the Tories and counterplot of the Whigs on the approach of Queen Anne's death, 65; victory of the Whigs, 65—67; Walpole in power, 67; first Prime Minister, 81; defeat and resignation of Walpole, 82; Pelham in power, 84; the Broad-Bottomed ministry, ibid.; the Duke of Newcastle, ibid.; Pitt and Newcastle ministers, 87; the Marquis of Bute, 88, 110; the Grenville Government, 111; defeated, 121; the Marquis of Rockingham, 123; fall of the Rockingham Government, 124, 125; Pitt again in power, the Duke of Grafton Premier, 125; retirement of the Duke of Grafton, 129; Lord North Prime Minister, ibid.; Lord Rockingham's second administration, 134; the Shelburne Government, ibid.; defeated, 135; the Portland, or Coalition, Government, ibid.; the second Mr. Pitt Prime Minister, ibid.; the Addington Government, 226; "All the Talents," 229; the Portland Government, 230; Mr. Perceval Premier, 233; the Government of Lord Liverpool, ibid.
- Missionary Societies, formation of, 273.
- Mississippi scheme, 71.
- Mob, first use of the term, 20; High Church and Tory mobs in the reign of Queen Anne, 48 and 51; like mobs in the reign of George I., 67.
- Monk, General, raises the regiment which afterwards became the Coldstream Guards, 19.
- Monmouth, Duke of, son of Charles II., victory in Scotland, 16; plot to secure the throne for, 17; escape to France, 18; defeated by Feversham, 37, 38; executed by order of James II., 38.
- More, Mrs. Hannah, on Content, 329.
- Muir, Mr., barrister, prosecution of, in Scotland, 202.

N.

- Nash, Beau, 270.
- Nation, state of, at the end of the French War in 1815, 3—6; political freedom during the Commonwealth, 6; demoralization of the Divine-Right dogma, 18, 27; London as compared with ancient Pompeii, 35; state of the nation in the reign of James II., 37; in the reign of Queen Anne, 58; immoral clubs, 73; bad example of George I., ibid.; and of Frede-

- rick, Prince of Wales, 76 ; education, 98 ; law to prevent combinations of workmen, ibid. ; impressment of seamen, and strikes of workmen, 101 ; scarcity of food, and lowness of wages, 102 ; immorality from the court of George II. downward, ibid. ; George II. canonized by a bishop, 103 ; Wesley, 104—108 ; various features of social progress, 153 ; large towns, 154 ; influence of India on England, 156 ; views and position of poor men, 168 ; the Reign of Terror in England, 200 ; causes of the mutiny of the fleet, 213 ; miners, labourers, prisons, &c., 245 ; the Corn Laws, 249 ; journalism, 265 ; spies and informers, 315 ; profane swearing, 413 ; influence of the press on, 493, 518 ; growing independence, 553 ; material prosperity, 555 ; one problem solved, 563 ; influence on of philanthropic persons, 570 ; of Sunday schools, 577 ; of great towns, 579 ; robust life of the nation, 589 ; influence of the Queen, 601 ; of the teetotalers, 603 ; of national education, 604.
- Navy, its service to the nation at La Hogue, 46 ; mutinies in, 213 (see also Nelson, Howe, Jarvis, Duncan, Cochrane) ; questions of national defence, 540, 550 ; the manning of the navy, 567 ; the service no longer disliked by sailors, ibid. ; the coast-guard and naval reserve, ibid. ; training vessels, ibid. ; flogging in the navy, 558 ; see also Army.
- Nelson, Admiral, a post-captain when the Great War began, 177 ; attack on Santa Cruz, 215 ; the Nile, 216 ; Trafalgar, 227 ; snubbed by Lord Ellenborough, 396 ; mistaken view of, 537.
- Newcastle, Duke of ; see the Pelhams.
- Nightingale, Miss, in the Crimea, 558.
- Nonconformists, their position from the Restoration downwards, 4 ; legislation against, 5—9 ; the Savoy Conference, 10 ; the Corporation Act, ibid. ; the Act of Uniformity, ibid. ; the Conventicle Act, 11 ; the Five-Mile Act, 12 ; the Test Act, 13 ; the Parliamentary Test, 14 ; the Nonconformist position as compared with that of the Established Church and the Church of Rome, 20—22 ; John Howe, 25 ; the Nonconformists in America, 27 ; Roger Williams driven to the desert, ibid. ; the stern principle and habits of the Nonconformists opposed to the instincts of English life, 28, 29 ; the terms on which they were invited to union by the Conforming clergy, 30 ; the Quakers, 32 ; Richard Baxter handed over by James II. to Judge Jeffreys, 38 ; the Nonconformists and the Trial of the Seven Bishops, 41 ; proposal of William III. to admit Nonconformists to civil rights rejected, 44 ; Toleration Act, ibid. ; a Nonconformist Lord Mayor attends his chapel in his official robes, 48 ; fierce Act against Nonconformists rejected by the Lords, but subsequently passed, ibid. ; Defoe's "Shortest Way with Dissenters," 49 ; property of Nonconformists destroyed by the Sacheverell mobs, 51 ; disadvantageous position of Nonconformists as compared with the Established Church in education, 53, 55 ; Schism Bill, moved by Lord Bolingbroke, 58 ; Occasional Conformity Act, 59 ; Bishop Burnet, "a true Dissenting zealot," 66 ; property destroyed by "Ormond" High Church mobs, 67 ; Bishop Hoadley in favour of Toleration in the reign of George I., 69 ; Sir Robert Walpole's contempt for Nonconformist "grievances," 80 ; the Puritan fibre in English life in the eighteenth century, 98 ; Wesley and Wesleyanism, 103—108 ; Stern Nonconformity, 243 ; the Established Church and Dissent, 260 ; Nonconformist Missions, 273 ; Lord Ellenborough's exposition of the Act of Uniformity, 431 ; recent position of Nonconformists with respect to National Education, 604.
- North, Lord, at the time the proposal was made to tax America, 110 ; moves that "No. 45" of the "North Briton" contains a seditious libel, 113 ; succeeds Charles Townshend as Chancellor of Exchequer and renews proposals to tax America, 127 ; beginning of his twelve years' administration, 129 ; resignation of, 134 ; member of the Shelburne Government, 135 ; required by the King to give up his seals immediately, for his support of Fox's India Bill, ibid. ; opposed to the younger Pitt, 178 ; death of, 185.
- Northington, Lord (Mr. Henley), as a

- lawyer, 89 ; unmanly intrigue against Lord Rockingham, 123.
- Nottingham, Lord, author of a fierce Act against Nonconformists, 48.
- Nottinghamshire, Luddite riots in, 238.
- Noy, Sir William, prosecutes Prynne for an attack on the Queen, 23.
- O.
- Oates, Titus, the perjurer, 14, 17.
- Occasional Conformity Bill, passed on the accession of Queen Anne, 49 ; repealed in the reign of George I., 59.
- O'Connell at St Omer's College, 177 ; in the House of Commons, 567 ; service to Ireland, 603.
- O'Connor, Feargus, and Chartism, 591, 596 ; picture of, by Lovett, 597.
- O'Connor, Mr. Roger, curious charge against, in Ireland, 355.
- Orange, see William III. ; plot to seize the crown for the Duke of Cumberland, 599
- Owen, Robert, reference to, 1 ; alleged views of property, 247 ; social and political reformers, 254 ; character of, 360 ; the originality of his work, 575 ; opposition of Radicals to, 597.
- P.
- Paine, Thomas, his "Rights of Man," and the Succession to the Throne, 62 ; attacked in France by Marat, ibid. ; denounced by Cobbett, 188 ; first prosecution of his "Rights of Man," ibid. ; defended by Erskine, 189 ; prosecution of his "Age of Reason," 359.
- Palmer, Mr., Rev., prosecuted in Scotland, 202 ; with Muir, Skirving, Margarot, and Gerald, ibid.
- Palmerston, Lord, reference to, as Prime Minister, 81 ; Secretary of War, 233 ; defeat of, 517 ; success in the House of Commons, 567, 568 ; successor of Canning, 586.
- Parliament, oaths to be taken by members of, 4 ; demand for reform of, 5 ; Pension Parliament, 11 (see also Charles II.) ; Drunken Parliament, 11 ; Scottish Parliament in the reign of Anne declares against Episcopacy, ibid. ; marked changes in the temper of the Pension Parliament, 14 ; the Parliamentary Test, ibid. ; Dissolution of the Pension Parliament, 15 ; passing of the Exclusion Bill, 16 ; dissolution of the third and fourth Parliaments of Charles II., ibid. ; fifth Parliament meets at Oxford, Exclusion Bill again carried, 16 ; Dissolution of the last Parliament of Charles II., 16, 17 ; haughty treatment of the House of Commons by James II., 38 ; Test Act maintained in defiance of James, 39, and broken by the judges, 40 ; settlement on the basis of the Bill of Rights, 44 ; Mutiny Act, ibid. ; Toleration Act, ibid. ; dissolution of Parliament by William III., 45 ; new Parliament (1690), Tory, ibid. ; consolidation of the King's revenue, 45 ; National Debt begun, 46 ; Bank of England established, ibid. ; refusal of William III. to pass a bill for Triennial Parliaments, ibid. ; Triennial Bill passed, ibid. ; Treason Bill passed, ibid. ; Liberty of the Press, ibid. ; the twelve Parliaments of Queen Anne, 47 ; first Parliament (1702), Tory, 48 ; insult offered by it to the memory of the late King, ibid. ; harsh Occasional Conformity Bill against Dissent, ibid. ; vote of fifty new churches for London, 49 ; Act of Union of England and Scotland, ibid. ; the first Parliament of Great Britain and Ireland, ibid. ; impeachment of Dr. Sacheverell by the Commons, 51 ; complaint of the Commons that England had been made to pay the war expenses of Queen Anne's allies, 58 ; property qualification of members of the House of Commons instituted, ibid. ; Schism Bill passed, ibid. ; repeal of, and of the Occasional Conformity Bill, at a later period, ibid. ; repeal of the Triennial Parliament Act, 69 ; Septennial Act, ibid. ; First Septennial Parliament, 70 ; wicked Act to Encourage Loyalty in Scotland, ibid. ; Whig attempt to restrict the number of Peers defeated by the Lords, 70 ; a "Prince's Party" in Parliament, 76 ; Mr. Pitt (afterwards Lord Chatham) in Parliament, ibid. ; Walpole and the "Boy Patriots" (see "Walpole") ; the new men with and against Walpole, 78, 79 ; motion to dismiss Walpole

- from the service of the King, 81; resignation of Walpole, 82; Secret Committee to examine his administration futile, ibid.; Pitt in office, Militia Bill carried by Pitt, 86; Fall of the Pitt ministry, 88; lawyers in Parliament, 90—91; law to prevent combination of Workmen, 98; Samuel Johnson, reporter of Parliamentary debates, 99; non-publication of the proceedings of Parliament, a reflex of the rule of English public life generally, ibid.; Mr. Cave and Mr. Astley made to apologise to Parliament, 101; claim of Parliament to tax the American colonies, 110; Wilkes, member of Parliament, 111; expelled by vote of the House, 113; elected five times member for Middlesex, 117; the House orders the minutes for his expulsion to be erased from its records, ibid.; Mr. Grenville's resolution to tax the colonies, carried, 118, 119; Parliament opened 1765—the Stamp Act in force, 120; fall of the Grenville Government, 121; Lord Rockingham's brief term of office, 122; Pitt again in office with the Duke of Grafton, 124; and raised to the peerage as Lord Chatham, ibid.; Mr. Charles Townshend proposes fresh taxes on the Colonies, 126; difficult position of the Duke of Grafton, owing to Pitt's caprice, 128; Chatham and Lord Camden denounce the policy of the Government, 128, 129; maiden speech of Mr. Charles James Fox, 129; Lord North in office, ibid.; punitive measures towards America, 130; motion of the Duke of Richmond, begging the King to make peace with America, 133; death of Chatham, ibid.; resignation of Lord North, 134; Lord Rockingham called to the Premiership, ibid.; death of Lord Rockingham, ibid.; the Shelburne Government—Pitt, son of Lord Chatham, Chancellor of Exchequer, ibid.; Peace with America; and with France, Spain, and Holland, ibid.; Fox's India Bill defeated by the unconstitutional interference of the King, 135; Mr. Pitt, the younger, Prime Minister, ibid.; Lord Camden challenges in the House of Lords the ruling of Lord Mansfield in cases of libel, 138; curious dispute of the House of Commons and the City of London, 140; freedom of Parliamentary reporting secured, ibid.; attempt of Mr. Horne Tooke to enter Parliament, 142; Fox's Martyrs, 151; prosecution of Hastings and Clive, 159; the Lord George Gordon Riots, 161; Erskine in the House of Commons, 164; Fox's last effort to preserve peace, 191; debate in the Lords on Lord Fitzwilliam's Lord-Lieutenancy of Ireland, 218; Lord Castlereagh a "patriot," 219; the Act of Union of Great Britain and Ireland, 223; retirement of Pitt, 225; the Slave Trade doomed, 229; the National Debt, 241, 242; the Corn Laws, 249; electioneering falseness, 260; a new spirit in some of the Whigs, 261; Lord Castlereagh, fresh from the victories of the Treaty of 1815, 262; beginning of the repressive measures of the Liverpool Government in 1817, 284; insult to the Prince Regent, 289; Parliamentary Reform, 293; denounced by Canning, 295; Secret Committees appointed, 305; the struggle for reform, 322; Lord Sidmouth's circular, 327; attacked in Parliament, 328; case of William Hone before Parliament, 338; leading men in, 565—573.
- Parliamentary Reform, first proposal of Chatham, 129; see also Charles James Fox and Earl Grey.
- Parliamentary Test enacted, 14.
- Party action; see Whigs and Tories.
- Peabody, Mr., reference to, 575.
- Pearson, Mr. Charles, solicitor, his manful conduct for the revision of the jury lists, 352; testimony to, of Sir Francis Burdett, 444; speech of, at a public meeting after the trials of Hone, 447.
- Peel, Sir Robert, in the House of Commons, 565; relation of to the Anti-Corn Law League, 586.
- Pelhams, the, Mr. Henry Pelham and his brother, the Duke of Newcastle, 79; character of both, ibid.; Pelham Prime Minister, 84; his death, 86; the Pitt-Newcastle Ministry, 87; the Duke of Newcastle in the Government of Lord Rockingham, 122; warns the Marquis against Burke, 124.
- Penn, Richard, Governor of Pennsylvania, descendant of William Penn, sent to England with the "Olive Branch" by the colonists, 132.

- Penn, William, receives the grant of land afterwards Pennsylvania, 20.
- Perceval Government, 232; murder of Mr. Perceval, 233.
- Phipps, Captain, voyage of, to the Polar Seas, 153.
- Pitt, William, the first, birth and parentage, 76; a member of Prince Frederick's party, ibid.; cornet in the Blues, and dismissed therefrom by Walpole, ibid.; in the "household" of Prince Frederick, 76, 77; nicknamed by Walpole, 77; receives a legacy from the Duchess of Marlborough for his hatred to Walpole, 78; his lofty spirit, 82; in office with Pelham, 85, 86; agrees to take office with the Duke of Newcastle, 87; his great triumphs in war, 87, 88; displaced by Lord Bute, 88, 111; anomalous conduct with respect to the proposals of his brother-in-law, George Grenville, to tax the American colonists, 119; large legacy to, ibid.; adheres to the Grenvilles, 122; presumed adherence to the Rockingham Government, ibid.; Privy Seal in the Government of the Duke of Grafton and created Lord Chatham, 125; strong public feeling on his elevation to the peerage, 125, 126; his ill-treatment of the Duke of Grafton, 126—128; pleads for conciliation towards the colonists, 132; opposes the Duke of Richmond's motion, praying the King to make peace with America, 133; death and burial, ibid.; reference to character, 151.
- Pitt, William, the second, Chancellor of the Exchequer at 23 years of age in the Shelburne Government, 134; Prime Minister at 25 years, 135; statue to, in the Guildhall, 140; numerous defeats in Parliament, 151; great majority after a general election, ibid.; character of, as compared with Fox, 151; difficult position of, in view of the French Revolution, 176; his opponents, 178; influences Mr. Addington's election to the House, ibid.; compliments Burke, 180; beginning of repressive domestic administration, 184, 185; Reign of Terror in England, 194, 201; called as a witness by Horne Tooke, 210; policy towards Poland, 214; rejects Lord Fitzwilliam's calm policy towards Ireland, 218; the Act of Union, 223; Pitt's promise of Catholic Emancipation, 224; broken, 225; his retirement, ibid.; return to power, 226; the blow of Austerlitz, 227; his death, ibid.; his power as a minister, 228; his home policy, 238, 244; a few final words on, as compared with Fox, 587.
- Plague, great, in London, 11
- Poland, partition of, 214.
- Portland, Duke of, his administration, 135; introduces the future George IV. to Parliament on his coming to age, ibid.
- Portland, Ministry (of 1807), 230; Canning and Castlereagh members of, 230, 232; resignation of, 232.
- Post Office, General, and Penny post for London, established, 19.
- Pounds, John, the Portsmouth shoemaker, educational work of, 575, 590.
- Presbyterian Church; see Scotland.
- Press, the, during the Commonwealth, 6; the Mercuries and Intelligencers of the time, ibid.; Milton's Areopagitica, 8; Hobbes and Hobbesism, ibid.; Prynne's book on females acting on the stage, 23; "A Friendly Call to Unity," 29; literature of the Restoration, 35; Richard Baxter prosecuted for a paraphrase on the New Testament, 38; Defoe's "Shortest Way with Dissenters," 49; literary works of Lord Somers, 50; great theologians of the Established Church, 53; new era in the history of the press—the "Spectator," the Tory and Whig Examiners, the "Tatler," the "Guardian," &c., 56; Dr. Price on "Love of Country"; Burke on the French Revolution, and Paine's "Rights of Man," with reference to the succession to the throne, 62; the song "Lillibulero," 65; prosecution of a Jacobite journal—the "Weekly Register," and of Richard Burridge and Nathaniel Mist in connection with it, 72; execution of John Matthews for a pamphlet, ibid.; honours to Addison and Steele, ibid.; Sir Robert Walpole's contempt for literature 80; his wholesale bribery of the press, ibid.; great writers gone, 94; Mr. Edward Cave and the "Gentleman's Magazine," ibid.; Samuel Johnson, a reporter for, 55; Johnson's great services to the Tory party and the nation, 96; Oliver

- Goldsmith, the "Vicar of Wakefield," ibid.; the "Gentleman's Magazine" and the "London Magazine" before Parliament, 101; the Rev. Sydney Smith on Wesleyanism in the "Edinburgh Review," 105; John Wilkes and the "North Briton," 111; the "Briton" edited by Dr. Tobias Smollett, ibid.; Wilkes arrested, 112; the "Essay on Woman" pronounced libellous, 113; prosecution for the sale of the "North Briton," 116; (see also Law of Libel;) literary work of Edmund Burke, 124; "Life of Lord Shelburne," the view it presents of public men, 127; Junius, 129, 138; prosecution and acquittal of Mr. Woodfall, publisher of Junius, 138; the brothers Woodfall, 139; the daily newspapers begin to publish the debates in Parliament, 140; apprehension of printers and their discharge at the Guildhall, ibid.; issue between the House of Commons and the City of London, ibid.; the Commons quietly drop the prosecution, ibid.; numerous actions for libel, 141; Horne Tooke apprehended on an ex-officio information for a denunciation of the American War, ibid.; sentenced to a fine and imprisonment, 142; his "Divisions of Purley" and other works 144; Junius, statement of Lord Shelburne with respect to, ibid.; dedication of Junius to the English nation, 146; great value of the letters, 146—148; the Dean of St. Asaph sued for libel, 165; case of Mr. Stockdale, the printer, 166; literature not yet for the poor, 168; Robert Burns, 169; Gibbon's "Decline and Fall," 177; Mr. Walter imprisoned, ibid.; Fox's Libel Bill, 182 (see also Lord Camden); Paine defended by Erskine, 189; cruel press prosecutions in Scotland, 201; prosecution of the Rev. Gilbert Wakefield, 233; two prosecutions of the "Examiner" newspaper, 235; imprisonment of the brothers Hunt, 236; prosecution of and habits of blasphemy, 246; writings of Robert Owen and others, 254; Dr. Malthus on population, 257; "Alton Locke," 258; the "Quarterlies," 264; newspapers out of London, 265 (see also Canning, Hone, Cobbett, Pearson, and Wooler—the Black Dwarf); the daily press on an outrage on the Prince Regent, 290; opposition of the "Quarterly Review" and the "Edinburgh Review" to Radical literature, 295; Lord Brougham and the Rev. Sydney Smith, 298; law against irreligious publications, 307; Samuel Bamford, Radical poet, and Lord Sidmouth, 310; William Lovett, 312; Mrs. Hannah More on Content, 329; "Silas Marner," 330; Southey's "Wat Tyler," 358; the freedom of the press, 493; Puritan literature, 495; a representation of the "Non-conformist" newspaper, 496; old provincial newspapers, 497—499; Defoe an editor in Edinburgh, 498; Defoe's "Review of the State of Public Affairs," the "North Briton," and the "Public Advertiser," 499; the "Morning Chronicle," the "Courier," the "Morning Post," and the "Oracle," 500—501; the "Morning Herald" and the "Sun," 502, 503; the story of the "Times," 504; Canning and satirical productions—the "Anti-Jacobin," the "Age," the "Satirist," 510; Cobbett as a fifth estate, 511; the "Examiner" and the "Weekly Dispatch," 512; the "John Bull," 514; Hetherington's "Poor Man's Guardian," 516; repeal of the stamp, advertisement, and paper duties, ibid.; struggles for a free and honourable press, 517—519; an editor's stratagem, 520; the law of libel as altered from time to time, 522; Mr. Carlyle's great service to the press, 524; recent libel cases—the "Times" and the "Examiner," 527.
- Price, Dr., sermon of, on "Love of Country," 61, 62, 177.
- Priestley, Dr., at the hearing of the case of the Massachusetts Petition in 1774, 181; receives the Copley Medal, 153; his house wrecked by the High Church mobs, 182.
- Prince Charles Edward, birth of, 1720, in the reign of George I., 71; see rebellions of 1715 and 1745.
- Prince James Edward, son of James II., birth of, in the year of the expulsion of James from the throne, 41; lands in Scotland in the reign of Queen Anne, 49; see rebellion of 1715 and 1745.
- Prynne, prosecution and suffering of, 23; prosecutes Archbishop Laud, ibid.

- Pulteney, Mr., opponent of Walpole, 79; supports Pelham, 84; witty verse on Lord Hardwicke's ruling as to the law of libel, 89.
- Puritan and Puritanism; see Non-conformists.
- Q.
- Quakers, the, rise of, 32; great influence in politics, 32—34; relieved from the necessity of giving evidence on oath, 69; Edmund Burke educated by a Quaker schoolmaster in a Catholic country, 124; address of Quakers on the birth of George IV., 465.
- R.
- Raikes, Mr., establishes a Sunday school, 105.
- Rebellions, 1715 and 1745—proclamation in 1715 of Prince James Edward in the north of England and Scotland, 67; Lord Mar and Mr. Forster advance into England, ibid.; landing of the prince at Peterhead, ibid.; retreat of the rebels, 68; defeat of Mar at Sheriff Muir, ibid.; flight of the prince, ibid.; punishment of the rebels, ibid.; traditions of the rebellion, ibid.; landing in 1745 of Prince Charles Edward at Inverness, 84; defeats Cope at Prestonpans, ibid.; march into England, ibid.; retreat, 85; defeats Hawley at Falkirk Moor, ibid.; is defeated by the Duke of Cumberland at Culloden, ibid.; the Duke of Cumberland after Culloden, ibid.; cruelties of the Government, 85, 86; Mr. Pitt (Lord Chatham) in the Government at the time, 86; Lord Hardwicke as judge condemning the rebel lords, 89.
- Reform, Parliamentary, societies for, in 1789, 177, 183; memorable petition for, of the Society of the Friends of the People, ibid.
- “Register, Reformists,” see Hone.
- “Register, Weekly,” see Cobbett.
- Restoration, the importance of, in English history, 2; protest of against the Reformation and the Commonwealth, 7; see also Charles II., Established Church, and Nonconformists.
- “Review, Edinburgh,” its opposition to the Radicals, 264, 296; Brougham, 297; and Sydney Smith, 298; see Press.
- “Review, Quarterly,” in opposition to Whigs and Radicals, 264; see Press.
- Richmond, Legh, influence on his time, 170—360.
- Rights, Bill of, 44; the settlement of the Protestant succession in accordance with, ibid.; first great result of the Bill of Rights, 46; Lord Somers one of the chief authors, if not the author of, 48.
- Robespierre, blasphemy of, 17.
- Rockingham, Marquis of, his first administration, 122; defeated by the intrigue of Lord Northampton and others, 123; second administration of Lord Rockingham, 134; Lord Macaulay on, ibid.; death of Lord Rockingham, ibid.; uncle of Lord Fitzwilliam, 218.
- Romilly, Sir Samuel, parentage, 177; Solicitor-General, 229; proposes to abolish the slave trade, ibid.; advocates Parliamentary Reform, 293; opposition to the Liverpool Government, 305, 308.
- Russell, Earl, unwavering course of, 262; in opposition to the Liverpool Government, 307; in the House of Commons, 567, 593.
- Russell, Lord William, execution of, 17.
- Rye House Plot, discovery of, 17.
- S.
- Sacheverell, Dr., preaches against Non-conformity and the Revolution of 1688, 48—51; trial of Sacheverell, ibid.; the High Church riots, ibid.; Samuel Johnson a Sacheverellite in petticoats, 95.
- Saltoun, Fletcher of, in the Scotch Parliament that declares episcopacy an “iniquity,” 11.
- Sancroft, primate, and six bishops, beg King James II. not to compel them to break the law by reading the Declaration of Indulgence, 40; the primate and bishops sent to the Tower, ibid.; their trial and acquittal, 41; Sancroft refuses to crown the Prince of Orange, and is expelled from the primacy, 46; a promoter of education, 53.
- Sandys, Mr., moves the dismissal of

- Walpole from the King's Councils, 81.
- Sarsfield, his glorious defence of Limerick, 45; and voluntary exile, ibid
- Savoy Conference, 10; utter failure of, ibid.
- Schism, infamous, Act, passed at the instance of Lord Bolingbroke, 58; repealed, 59.
- Scotland, during the Commonwealth, 6; hatred of Charles II. to Presbyterianism, 8; Presbyterians in the Savoy Conference, 10; the Solemn League and Covenant burned by the common hangman, ibid.; the Druunken Parliament, 11; declaration of a Scotch Parliament against episcopacy, ibid.; Scotch sermons, 13; preachers from, to England during the Commonwealth, 14; Claverhouse, 16; the Bishop of St. Andrews murdered, ibid.; Duke of Monmouth in Scotland, ibid.; Drumclog, ibid.; the Duke of York (James II.), supersedes Monmouth, and perpetrates fearful cruelties, ibid.; "Presbyter Old Priest Writ large," 27; adherence of Scotchmen to James II., 38; Scotch regiments refuse to embark for Holland, leading to the passing of the Mutiny Act, 44; massacre of Glencoe, 45; Act of Union of England and Scotland, 49; the Union Jack, ibid.; first United Parliament, ibid.; landing of Prince James Edward, son of James II., in Scotland, in the reign of Queen Anne, ibid.; education in Scotland, John Knox, 52; the Scotch system as compared with that of England, 54, 55; the rebellion of 1715, 67; Mr. Forster and Lord Derwentwater advance into England, ibid.; landing of Prince James Edward, ibid.; final collapse of the rebellion of 1715, 68; what followed, ibid.; traditions of the rebellion in the north of England and Scotland, ibid.; Act for Encouraging Loyalty in Scotland, 71; birth of the Young Pretender, ibid.; Prince Charles Edward lands at Inverness, 84; battle of Prestonpans, ibid.; the march into England, ibid.; retreat from Derby, 85; defeat of General Hawley at Falkirk Moor, ibid.; Culloden, ibid.; cruelties after Culloden, 85, 86; first Highlanders enlisted by Mr. Pitt (Lord Chatham), 86; Mr. Wedderburn grossly insults the Dean of Faculty, and leaves Scotland for ever, 91; Robert Burns, 170; cruel prosecutions of Muir, Palmer, Skirving, Margarot, and Gerald, 202; execution of Robert Watt; 207.
- Scroggs, Chief Justice, defeats Lord Shaftesbury's presentment of the Duke of York, 16; sent out to root up rebellion, 17.
- "Semper Eadem," the motto of "Good Queen Anne," 49.
- Septennial Parliament Act, a Whig Measure, 69.
- Septennial Parliament, first, 70.
- Shaftesbury, Lord, and the high statesmanship of moral and social improvement, 571—574.
- Shaftesbury, Lord, the Trimmer, author of the Habeas Corpus Act, 15; character of Shaftesbury, ibid.; presents the Duke of York as a recusant, 16; marked dangerous, 22.
- Sharp, Granville, elicits the decision of the judges that a slave who lands on English ground is free, 153.
- Shelburne, Lord, life of, and attack on Mansfield, 87; pitiable view presented of politicians, 127; premiership of, 134; and retirement, 135.
- Sheldon, Bishop of London, in the Savoy Conference, 10.
- Shelley, influence of, on literature, 173.
- Shepherd, Sir Samuel, succeeds Sir William Garrow as Attorney-General, 350; has charge of the prosecutions of Wooler, ibid.; and of Hone, first trial, 371—378; second trial, 398—402; third trial, 420.
- Sheridan, Mr., his work in literature and entry into Parliament, 151; a manager of the trial of Warren Hastings, 159—167; withdraws from Parliament, 213.
- Sidmouth, Lord, as Mr. Addington, speaker of the House of Commons, 225; Prime Minister, 226; and Viscount Sidmouth, 227; "All the Talents," 229; Home Secretary, 233; curious intercourse with Samuel Bamford the Radical, 282, 311; bitterly attacked by Hone, 301; moves the suspension of the Habeas Corpus Act, ibid.; a mass of repressive legislation moved for by, 307; famous circular of Lord Sidmouth against irreligious litera- ture, 327; Hone's testimony to the reputed amiability of, 330; bitter attacks upon, by Hone in his squibs, 464—472.

- Sidney, Algernon, his influence, 8; execution of, 18.
- "Silas Marner," George Eliot's, a true picture of one class of English workman, 330.
- Skirving; see Palmer.
- Smith, Rev. Sydney, on the Methodists, 105; his great service to the country, 298.
- "Solemn League and Covenant" burnt by the common hangman, 10.
- Somers, Lord, one of the authors of the Bill of Rights, 48; President of the Council, 49; his character and powerful influence, 53; for the Protestant succession, 65; traditions of, in the law courts, 90.
- Southey, Mr., Poet-Laureate, references to, 173, 177; satirised by Canning, 338; futile endeavour to buy up his Republican poem, "Wat Tyler," 358; Hone's attack on, 463, 475; curious correspondence between, and Hone, 475, 477; reference to, 487.
- South Sea scheme, 71.
- Spence, Mr., name of, given to Radical clubs, 247; the Spenceans at the Spa Fields Riot, 262; denunciation of, by Lord Albemarle, 264; effete character of the Spencean clubs, 595.
- Spy, the, system, 315; the spy Oliver, 316; public spirit of Mr. Baines, ibid.; relation of the spy to Lord Sidmouth and the Government, to Sir John Byng and others, 318; defence of the spy system in Parliament, ibid.; the spy Reynolds, 320; his infamy and his reward, ibid.; the spy Castles, exposure of, by Sir Charles Wetherell, 344; the spies and Richard Carlile, 359.
- Stauhope, Earl, President of the Revolution Society, 177, 180.
- Steele, Richard, a Whig journalist, 56; made Sir Richard, 72; see also the "Press."
- Stephenson, George, England's debt to, 533.
- Stowell, Lord; see Eldon.
- Sunday-schools, in connection with Wesley and Raikes, 105; Samuel Bamford taught at, 310; general view of, 575.
- Swift, Dean, his powerful writing against the Hanoverian succession, 57; his keen satire, ibid.; for Church and King, ibid.; satire against him affixed to the cathedral door when he was made dean, ibid.; see also the "Press."

T.

- Temple, Lord; see the Grenvilles.
- Tennison, Archbishop, at the declaration of the succession of George I., 65.
- Terror, Reign of, in England, 188; see also Wedderburn, Kenyon, and Eldon.
- Test Act passed, 13; repeal of, demanded by James II., 38; refusal of Parliament, 39; Act illegally set aside by eleven judges, including Lord Chief Justice Herbert, 40.
- Thackeray, Mr., on the landing of George I., 63; and on the lines which an "eminent divine" wrote on the death of George II., 103; appeal of, to America, 354; "this fribble of a prince," 414.
- Thurlow, Lord, reference to, 90; entreating the Lords to put down adultery, 91; his cant derided by Wilkes, 92; Attorney-General, 129; Lord Chancellor in the Shelburne Government, 134; prosecutes Horne Tooke vindictively, 142; first meeting of Thurlow and Tooke after the trial, ibid.; their subsequent cordial intercourse, ibid.; defeated by Lord Camden on the law of libel, 182; ignominiously dismissed from the Lord Chancellorship by Pitt, 188; Thurlow a "patriot," ibid.; relation to Tooke, 207; reference to, 412, 414.
- Tillotson, Archbishop, the friend of John Howe, 21; reproved by Howe for a divine right sermon, 25; raised to the Primacy, 46.
- "Times," prosecution of, 177; attack upon by Hone, 324; comment on Hone's first trial, 391; dispute with the "Chronicle," 392; on Hone's second trial, 418; on the third trial, 450; see also Press.
- Tooke, Horne, introductory reference to, 1; a clergyman of the Established Church, 141; charged at the Guildhall on an ex-officio information, ibid.; first meeting and subsequent

- intercourse with Lord Thurlow, 143 ; is refused admission to the Bar, 144 ; his valuable contributions to literature, ibid. ; denounced by Cobbett, 187 ; action of, against Fox, before Lord Kenyon, 196 ; trial of, for high treason, 204—211 ; specimens of his wit and sarcasm, ibid. ; death of, in 1812, ibid.
- Tories, the, introductory reference to, 2 ; party spirit of, and of the Whigs, 4 ; watchword of, 5 ; first use of the term Tory, 19 ; Tory supremacy in the Ministry and Parliament in the reign of Queen Anne, 48 ; long lease of Government under Lord Liverpool, 233.
- Tower of London, Lord Essex commits suicide in, 17 ; the seven bishops sent to, 40 ; Marlborough sent to, by Queen Mary, 46 ; Oxford, Lord, committed to, 67 ; two members of the House of Commons committed to, 140 ; attack on of the Spa Fields Rioters, 263.
- Townshend, Charles, Chancellor of Exchequer, 125 ; proposes new taxes on the Americans, 126 ; death and character of, 127.
- Townshend, Lord, brother-in-law of Sir R. Walpole, 78.
- Treason Bill passed, 46.
- Triennial Parliament Bill rejected by William III., but carried subsequently, 46 ; repealed by the Whigs, 69.
- Trimmers, political, the, in the reign of James II., 39 ; their predecessors and successors, ibid. ; the Trimmers against James, 40 ; the clergy as Trimmers, ibid. ; Trimmers in the reign of William III., 42 ; Marlborough, 43.
- U.
- Uniformity, Act of, passed, 10 ; Lord Ellenborough's view of, 431.
- Union Jack, the, adopted as the flag of Great Britain, 49.
- V.
- Victoria, Queen, the succession, 62 ; relation of the Duchess of Kent to Prince Leopold, 363 ; impartiality of the Queen as between parties, 559 ; John Bright's allegiance to, 563 ; Radical address to, 593 ; healing influence of the Queen's reign, 601.
- W.
- Wakefield, Rev. Gilbert, prosecution of, 233.
- Walpole, Sir Robert, 59 ; temporary disgrace of, 64 ; skilful intrigue for the Hanoverian succession, 65 ; rise to power, 67 ; deals with Convocation, 69 ; Septennial Parliament Act, ibid. ; press prosecutions, 72 ; opposed by the party of Prince Frederick, 76 ; and especially by Pitt, ibid. ; hatred of the Duchess of Marlborough to, ibid. ; his many enemies, 78 ; his isolation, 79 ; his contempt for Nonconformity and for literature, 80 ; cajoles the bishops, 81 ; motion that he be dismissed from his Majesty's councils, ibid. ; first Prime Minister, ibid. ; Lord Orford, 82 ; threatened with impeachment, ibid. ; retirement of, ibid. ; death, ibid. ; and character, 83 ; attempts of, to reduce the debt, ibid. ; reference to his latter days, 84, 129 ; final reference to, 565, 585.
- Walter, Mr., imprisoned ; see the "Times" and the Press.
- Washington, George, "Esquire," 132 ; retirement from public life, 215.
- Waterloo, Sir Sydney, 575.
- Watt, James, and steam-power, 154.
- Wellesley, Marquis of, Governor-General of India, 217 ; Secretary for Foreign Affairs, 233 ; pronounces all theories of reform impracticable, 294 ; objects to suspending the law, 304.
- Wellington, Duke of, position of, at the breaking out of the French Revolution, 177 ; in India, 217 ; leaves Madras for England, 227 ; secretary for Ireland, 230 ; commands the force sent to seize the Danish fleet, 231 ; embarks for Portugal, 232 ; satirised by Hone, 469, 536.
- Wesley, John, great work of, 103.
- Wharton, Lord, a leading Whig, author of the famous ballad, "Lillebuloer," 65 ; character of, 70.
- Wharton, Lord, son of the above, offers in the House of Lords to defend immoral clubs against the bishops and

- from the Bible, 73; Pope's description of, ibid.
- Whigs, public services of, 2; party spirit of, and of the Tories, 4; Whig watchword, 5; the term Whig first used, 19; see also, Charles James Fox, Earl Grey, Press, and French Revolution.
- Wilberforce, Mr., his high position in the House of Commons, 149; motion against the slave trade, 167.
- Wilkes, John, birth and position of, 111; the "North Briton," ibid.; attack on the King's Speech, 112; arrested on a general warrant, ibid.; released by Sir Charles Pratt, Lord Camden, ibid.; his "Essay on Woman" condemned by Lord Sandwich, 113; disgust arising from Lord Sandwich's noted immorality, ibid.; recovers damages for unlawful arrest, 114; Lord Camden denounces the arrest, ibid.; Wilkes withdraws to the continent, ibid.; his return and imprisonment by Lord Mansfield, 116; the judgment challenged by Lord Camden, 117; elected High Sheriff, and Lord Mayor, and five times member for Middlesex, ibid.; Minute against, on the records of the House of Commons reversed, ibid.; character of, 117, 118; releases two printers imprisoned by order of the House of Commons, 140; quarrel of, with Horne Tooke, 144; his conduct during the Lord George Gordon riots, 161.
- William III. as Prince of Orange invited to rescue England from the tyranny of James II., 41; his difficult position on the throne, 42; the intrigue against him, ibid.; his high title to the throne, 43; the Bill of Rights and the Mutiny Act, 44; William's proposal to admit Dissenters to places of trust, ibid.; the Toleration Act, ibid.; William in Ireland, 45; his error in casting off Sarsfield, ibid.; the massacre of Glencoe, ibid.; a Tory Parliament, ibid.; foundation of the National Debt and the Bank of England, 46; Queen Mary, ibid.; La Hogue and Greenwich Hospital, ibid.; Bill for Triennial Parliaments refused and then accepted by William, ibid.; Treason Act, ibid.; liberty of the press, ibid.; William as a general, 47; his hatred to Louis XIV., ibid.; his wars and his kingliness, ibid.; insult offered to his memory in the reign of Anne, 50.
- "Wonderful Walker," a clergyman of the old time, 54.
- Wooler, Jonathan, and the Black Dwarf, 335, 336; libel of, 347; trial and able speech, 347-349; great service to liberty in revision of jury lists, ibid.; his victory, 356; speech at the London Tavern, 447.
- Wordsworth, influence of his writings, 173; opposition to railways to the lakes, 259.
- Wyatt, see Hargraves.

Y.

- Yarmouth, Lady, the King's mistress, sells a bishopric, 102; the last woman of her class ennobled in England, ibid.
- Yorke, Lord Chancellor, son of Lord Hardwicke, 90.

LONDON
R. CLAY, SONS, AND TAYLOR, PRINTERS,
BREAD STREET HILL,
QUEEN VICTORIA STREET.

104