PRUSSIA

Menace to Poland and Peace

A powerful plea for the transfer of East Prussia to Poland. Little is known about the province by the British or American public. This book shows how many of the deep troubles that darken Europe and the world today find a most significant share of their origin in Germany's hold on that tract of land on the Southern Baltic. It was Germany's bastion thrust towards the East, but will lose that character when handed over to Poland.

Mr. Machray demonstrates the economic failure of German exploitation of East Prussia, and explains why greatly improved results are to be expected if it is peopled by Polish peasants in the future. The book also deals fully with the population problems involved in such a policy.

"Mr. Machray has done a useful work in presenting the problem of Poland to the British public in a cheap and readable form. The book is also illustrated by excellent maps."—The Times Literary Supplement.

"Helps to set the facts in proper perspective and his maps are clear and useful. When peace comes to be worked out, this book will demand careful consideration."—Great Britain and the East

Men, women, and even children, risk imprisonment and death to hear broadcasts from London. They are the inhabitants of the occupied countries of Europe. They do so because they have learned that the British broadcasts tell them the truth.

All over the world, and in many languages, you can listen to the truth from London. The British radio sticks to the facts—giving the latest, most authentic news as soon as it is known.

In addition to news, the BBC brings you every night its world-famous "Radio Newsreel." It brings you talks from leaders of the Allies, stories from people in every walk of life, from war workers, from men in the forces at Home and Overseas; and programmes of music and entertainment.

Full details of all the programmes in English are broadcast from London in Morse every Sunday, and are made available to the Press, almost everywhere, a week in advance. If you cannot find them in your own paper, enquire for them. Many items are re-broadcast, too, by stations all over the world. The wavelengths and times of broadcasts from Britain, in all other languages, are available from your local British authorities or your own radio stations.

The Making of To-Morrow

by Raoul de Roussy de Sales Demy 8vo 10s. 6d.

"An admirable journalist whose premature death was a loss, not only to America where he worked and to France whose spirit he represented through very dark days, but to all the United Nations. For he brought to the discussion of current problems an acute and wise mind. . . . French reasonableness, French scepticism, French sense of the mean, make of this book a pleasure to read . . . a very valuable and illuminating book."

—Times Literary Supplement

Agenda for a Post-War World

by J. B. Condliffe Author of "Reconstruction of World Trade," etc.
With maps Demy 8vo 7s. 6d.

"Worthy of the closest study. . . . No summary would do justice to the successive items on Dr. Condliffe's 'agenda'. . . . Ideas . . . are the vitamins in Dr. Condliffe's book. Solid fare in the form of facts is not lacking when he comes on to practical problems."—Headway

The Totalitarian War and After

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS AND POLITICAL CONSIDERATIONS

by Count Carlo Sforza Cr. 8vo Paper 3s. 6d.

"A confession of political faith which is as honest as it is timely."
—Times Literary Supplement

"It is always an intellectual pleasure to read a book by Count Sforza . . . a rich crop of personal recollections and political thoughts."—Free Europe

Plan for Permanent Peace

by Hans Heymann With charts Demy 8vo 16s.

"The author thinks in international terms, the only terms on which the modern world can live in peace . . . the book is heartening. It is reason operating at its highest and best . . . Dr. Heymann's mind represents liberalism and reason operating on a very high level."—Inquirer
