AGREEMENT made the thirteenth day of February One thousand nine hundred and thirteen BETWEEN WILLIAM CLAXTON DOORIS of 120 West 11th Street New York U. S. A. of the first part and THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL of the second part.

WHEREAS the Secretary of State for India in Council has engaged the party of the first part to serve His Majesty in India as Engineer for managing deep borings for artesian Water supplies in the Bombay Presidency for the term of Five years from the date of his reporting his arrival at Bombay as hereinafter mentioned and subject to the conditions and agreements hereinafter contained.

1. THAT the party of the first part will be reimbursed the cost of his journey from New York to London and will be entitled to a subsistence allowance of Ten pounds per week from the date of his sailing from New York up to the date of his reporting his arrival at Bombay.

2. THAT the party of the first part will on being provided with a first class passage to Bombay proceed thither within such time as may be prescribed by the Secretary of State for India in Council.

3. THAT the party of the first part will on arrival at Bombay forthwith report himself to the Officers of Government there and will submit himself to the Orders of the Government and of the officers and authorities under whom he may from time to time be placed by the Government and that he will at all times obey the rules prescribed for the time being for the regulation of the branch of the public service to which he may belong.

4. THAT the party of the first part will devote his whole time to the duties of the service and will not engage directly or indirectly in any trade business or occupation on his own account and that he will not (except in case of accident or sickness certified by competent medical authority) absent himself from his said duties without having first obtained permission from the Government or its authorised officers.

5. THAT if the party of the first part shall during the said term of five years relinquish the service of the Government (whether after having given notice or otherwise) except in consequence of ill-health certified to the satisfaction of Government he shall unless the Government shall have previously consented to such relinquishment forthwith on demand pay to the Secretary of State for India in Council the cost of his passage to Bombay.

6. THAT from the date of the party of the first part reporting his arrival at Bombay the Government will pay him so long as he shall remain in the said service and actually perform his duties a salary at the rate of Rs. 700 per mensem for the first year and Rs. 800 per mensem for the remaining four years. He shall not be entitled to House allowance or free quarters nor to Exchange compensation allowance nor to any pension or gratuity on retirement.

7. THE party of the first part shall while on duty in India and during the period of his engagement be entitled to such travelling allowance as is payable to Executive Engineers under the Civil Service Regulations for the time being in force and travelling allowances on the same scale shall also be payable to him in respect of his journeys (1) from Bombay to his station on first joining the appointment and (2) from his station to his port of embarkation if and when he leaves India under circumstances which entitle him to the grant of a passage to New York as specified in Clause 9 of this agreement.

8. THAT the Government may at any time during the said term of five years dispense with the services of the party of the first part without notice in the event of misconduct on his part or of a breach by him of any of the conditions herein specified.

9. THAT on the determination of the service at the expiration of the said term of five years or if prior to the expiration of the said term of five years the service shall be determined by the Secretary of State for India in Council or by the Government in India under the provisions of Clause 10 of these presents and if the party of the first part shall quit the same in India the Government will provide him with a first class passage back to New York at the public expense provided he claims such passage within three months from any such determination of the service as is mentioned in this Clause and leaves India on his return to New York within such time as he may be directed.

10. THAT it shall be lawful for the Secretary of State for India in Council or for the Government prior to the expiration of the said term of five years if satisfied on the medical evidence before him or it (as the case may be) that the party of the first part is unfit and is likely for a considerable period to continue unfit by reason of ill-health for the discharge of his duties in India to determine the service under these presents (the decision of the Secretary of State for India in Council or the Government being conclusive) and thereupon his services shall be terminated.

11. THAT the party of the first part shall within two years after his reporting his arrival at Bombay pass such examination as may be prescribed by the Government in one of the vernacular languages and if he shall fail to do so the Government may dispense with his services.

12. THAT this Agreement shall be terminable at any time by either party giving to the other three months' previous notice in writing.

13. THAT the party of the first part shall be entitled to leave according to the provisions of paragraph 395 of the Public Works Code and of Article 826 of the Civil Service Regulations.

14. THAT in any payments which may be made in Great Britain under these presents the rate of Exchange between England and India fixed from time to time by the Secretary of State for India in Council in communication with the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury shall be observed.

IN WITNESS whereof the party of the first part and Sir Steyning William Edgerley, K.C.V.O., and Abbas Ali Baig, Esquire, C.S.I., being two members of the Council of India have hereunto set their hands the day and year first above written.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

MEMORANDUM PRESENTING THE BUDGET FOR 1920-21.

With reference to No. 29 (1) of the rules for the discussion of the annual Financial Statement, I present the Budget of the Presidency for 1920-21 as finally sanctioned by the Government of India.

The preliminary estimates of Provincial revenue and expenditure embodied in the Revised Financial Statement for 1920-21 as modified by the memorandum issued from the Financial Department on 12th March 1920 have been finally accepted by the Government of India without any modifications. The Chief Secretary's memorandum which was printed as Part III of the Revised Financial Statement has been brought up to date and forms Part II of the budget statement. The figures in appendices A and B have also been brought up to date.

The budget proposals were explained on presentation of the Revised Financial Statement in March last and as there has been no alteration in the figures, the only important matter that need be referred to now is as regards the revision of the pay of establishments, how the revision proposals stand and how their introduction will affect the budget for 1920-21. In March last it was stated that the provision of 20 lakhs under the Land Revenue head and of 27 lakhs under specific heads for revision of the pay of establishments might be found insufficient. Practically all the establishment proposals either have been sanctioned or are undergoing examination preparatory to sanction and it is possible now to calculate more closely what the total requirements will be. The estimate, including other emergent requirements not foreseen at the time of the budget, exceeds the total provision of 47 lakhs mentioned above by another 47 lakhs. To meet this essential expenditure, it will be necessary, in view of the already large draft on provincial balances which the budget proposals involve, to postpone expenditure on other less urgent proposals which are included in the budget. A close scrutiny is being made to ascertain what reductions can be made without grave inconvenience.

P. J. MEAD,
Chief Secretary to Government.

PART II.

Memorandum explanatory of the figures under each Major Revenue head and under each Major Expenditure head of account.

Introductory.

1. The conditions of Provincial finance are determined by the terms of an administrative arrangement subsisting between the Government of India and the Local Government and known as the Provincial Settlement. The revenue and expenditure of the province as classified in the public accounts are divided between the two Governments in accordance with the terms of this settlement.

With effect from the 1st April 1911 this Provincial Settlement, which had hitherto been subject to change, was made permanent subject to the following conditions :—

(1) It shall not be subject to revision in the future, except by way of commuting fixed assignments into growing revenue ;

(2) in case of serious famine the question of assistance from Imperial revenues will be duly considered by the Government of India ;

(3) in special cases where the Local Government are unable to meet their requirements from their current revenues or by drawing on their balances, they should take the necessary amount as a short interest-bearing loan from the Government of India repayable in suitable instalments ; and

(4) the Government of India reserve the right to call for assistance from Provincial revenues in case of serious embarrassment in their own finances.

At the same time Excise and Forest revenue and expenditure, which had hitherto been divided, were made wholly Provincial.

2. The present statement does not deal with the heads which are wholly Imperial. The following table shows the several heads of revenue and expenditure which are divided between Imperial and Provincial :—

4. Ordinary Revenue.—The budget estimate for last year postulated normal conditions. The revised estimate anticipated a good harvest and the budget for 1920-21 took into account the suspended arrears and allowed for additional collections on the basis of experience in other post-famine years. The figures of the estimated demand, collections, remissions and suspensions of ordinary revenue for the years 1919-20 and 1920-21 are given below :—

Expenditure.

5. Charges of District Administration.—The increase in the revised estimate is caused mainly by larger expenditure on service postage, telegrams and other contingencies and works in connection with the development of Salsette. The increase in the budget for 1920-21 as compared with the budget for 1919-20 is due chiefly to the provisions made for the following items:—

(a) Lump provision for the revision of the pay of subordinate establishments of all departments	20,00
(b) The Bombay development Department	5,00
(c) Revision of the pay of Indian Civil Service Officers ...	2,50
(d) Revision of the pay of Deputy Collectors, Mamlatdars and Mukhtyarkars	2,05

Item (a) needs little explanation but it may be noted that provision is made under specific heads in respect of schemes of revision which were under the consideration of Government at the time of framing the first edition of the budget, and a lump sum of 20,00 is shown under this head for other schemes.

Item (b).—It is proposed to establish a Directorate of Development with large powers to undertake schemes for the development of "Greater Bombay" and to co-ordinate the work of local authorities and public bodies. Pending issue of orders regarding the constitution of the proposed directorate and its precise powers, a lump provision of 5,00 is made to meet expenses in connection with the working of the Department.

6. Allowances to District and Village Officers.—The increase in the revised is due chiefly to the grant of extra allowances to village officers for famine duty.

7. For work connected with the Reforms Scheme, a lump provision of 7,50 is made in the budget for 1920-21 as shown below :—

District electoral rolls	3,00
District election expenses	1,00

8. The receipts represent the share of sale proceeds of unified stamps, the sale proceeds of bills of exchange and other general stamps, and of court fee stamps, duty on embossing receipt, cheque and other stamps, duty levied on documents voluntarily brought for adjudication and on documents unstamped or insufficiently stamped and fines and penalties levied under the Indian Stamp Act, 1899, on instruments not duly stamped.

The increases in the revised estimate for 1919-20 and in the budget estimate for 1920-21 over last year's budget reflect commercial activity.

Expenditure.

9. Superintendence.—The decrease in the revised estimate as compared with last year's budget is due to smaller expenditure on account of packing and conveyance charges of post cards supplied from Calcutta. No provision on account of these charges is made in the butget estimate for 1920-21 which allows 9 for the revision of the establishment of the Central Stamp Depôt, Karachi.

Revenue.

10. License and distillery fees, etc.—There has been a steady increase of revenue under this head due mainly to the successive enhancements of rates of still head duty on country spirits. The increase received a slight check in the year 1914-15 from the disturbance of economic conditions caused by the war, but there has been a marked recovery since 1916-17. The open auction system coupled with the abolition of the maximum selling prices for country spirit, toddy and opium was introduced in the year 1918-19, and has led to a further increase of receipts in the form of vend fees. A review of the figures showing the growth of the excise revenue as well as the consumption of country spirit during the ten years ending 1918-19 shows that—

(i) the average yearly consumption of country spirit in thousands of proof gallons was 27,00 during the five years ending 1913-14 while during the five years ending 1918-19 it was 26,40—or a decline of 2·2 per cent.;

(ii) the average revenue for the first period was 1,99,80 while for latter period it was 2,80,29 or an increase of 40 per cent.

It is clear that the objects which Government set before them of securing a mixmum revenue, while at the same time restricting consumption by high rates of taxation, have been successfully achieved.

11. Gain on sale-proceeds of excise opium.—This Presidency is supplied with Ghazipur opium at a price of Rs. 13 per seer, which is credited to imperial revenues under the head II, Opium. The gross sale-proceeds less the cost price are credited to Provincial revenues under this head. The rentals derived from opium shops are, however, credited to the head License and distillery fees, etc.

12. Duty on Ganja.—The rate of this duty which stood at Rs. 15 per seer has been increased to Rs. 17½ from 1st April 1920. With effect from the same date the duty on charas has been raised from Rs. 30 to Rs. 40 per seer. These increases apply to the whole of the Bombay Presidency. The rate of duty on bhang in the Presidency proper and Aden, viz., Rs. 2-8-0 per seer, remains unaltered but the Sind rate, which was Re. 1, has been increased to Rs. 1-8-0.

Expenditure.

13. The increase in the revised estimate is due mainly to the payment of freight on molasses imported from Java. The large increase in the budget for 1920-21 as compared with last year's budget is due to the provisions noted below:—

(a) Expenditure in connection with the supply of country spirit to licensed retail vendors in certain areas (8,99).

The contract of Messrs. Carew & Co. for the supply of country spirit in the Town and Island of Bombay, the districts of Surat, Thána and Kolába and the Dangs expired on 31st March 1920. The new contracts have been enterd into with effect from 1st August 1920. This course was adopted in order to enable tenderers to have full information regarding the prospects of the new mhowra crop. Arrangements, therefore, had to be made for the supply departmentally of spirit to the areas in question from 1st April to 31st July 1920 and a quantity sufficient for one month's supply from 1st August 1920 to be handed over to the new contractors.

Arrangements have therefore been made to obtain 8,00,000 proof gallons from Messrs. Parry & Co. of Madras and Messrs. Arratoon & Co. of Bombay at a cost of Rs. 16,87,500. Against the payment of Rs. 16,87,500 a recovery of about Rs. 8,00,000 is expected from licensed vendors at the usual supply rates. It is not proposed to recover the full cost as the licensed retailers have bid high at shop auctions and when the licenses were issued the heavy rise in the cost of spirit was not anticipated. In addition to the amount of Rs. 16,87,500 mentioned above, a sum of Rs. 10,000 will be required for the extra staff and Rs. 1,600 for rent of private warehouses.

(b) Compensation to licensed manufacturers of country spirit owing to the abnormally high prices of distilling materials (7,39).

Owing to the failure of the mhowra crop throughout India mhowra flowers were not available in sufficient quantities for distillation purposes and what stocks were available had to be purchased at exorbitant rates. This deficiency in the raw materials has to be made good by importing molasses from Java at prices far in advance of those payable for mhowra flowers in normal times. Licensed distilling contractors are therefore faced with ruinous losses, as their contract supply rates were fixed with reference to normal conditions. Owing to the altogether abnormal circumstances and as the total collapse of all contractors would not be in the interests of Government it has been decided to examine the accounts of all contractors and to compensate them to such extent as may be reasonable after consideration of all circumstances. A provision of Rs. 7,39,000 is made for this purpose.

A scheme for the reorganization and amalgamation of the superior controlling and supervising (gazetted) staffs of the Salt and Excise Departments in the Bombay Presidency proper was sanctioned in 1917, and has proved very successful. The existing rates of pay of the non-gazetted staff are found to be inadequate and it is difficult to obtain suitable recruits. It is now proposed to amalgamate the non-gazetted executive and clerical staffs of the two departments, with scales of pay which will attract men with educational qualifications sufficient to fit them for the higher posts and which will give adequate remuneration to those who are fit only for clerical duties, while at the same time keeping open the door for the promotion from lower to higher groups of able and deserving men who have shown their fitness for more responsible work. The scheme involves a net extra outlay of about 5,00 in the first year and has been submitted for the sanction of higher authorities. The expenditure will be divisible between the heads 5, Salt (Imperial) and 7, Excise (Provincial) and provision for about one-half of the charges is made under the latter head.

(d) Scheme for (i) completely pumping the Khanapur Distillery spent wash into a trenching ground, including the cost of acquisition of land in connection therewith (77), and (ii) the repacking of the purification filters at the Distillery (42).

These schemes are to be undertaken with a view to prevent the pollution of the water of the Malaprabha river owing to the discharge of the Khanapur Distillery effluent.

(e) Construction of quarters for Excise menials (30).

The greater part of the menial establishment of the Salt Department is provided with rent-free quarters. The Excise menial staff is also entitled to rent-free quarters, but the accommodation hitherto provided is on a very limited scale thus entailing great hardship. When the Salt and Excise menial establishments are amalgamated and brought on one list, it will be necessary to provide them with free quarters; an amount of Rs. 30,000 for constructing the quarters is accordingly provided in the budget and it is included in the provision of Rs. 37,900 for Petty Construction and Repairs.

14. The collections under the Super Tax Act and the Excess Profits Duty Act are credited to wholly Imperial minor heads and are not included in the figures given above, which relate to the divided head of Income-Tax.

With effect from 1st April 1916 enhanced rates of taxation have been introduced by the Government of India for Imperial purposes, but as the receipts are credited to the divided head of Income Tax, the local Government has to make an assignment from Provincial to Imperial revenues equal to its share of the additional revenue.

15. In the budget and revised estimates for the current year allowance has been made for the loss of income-tax on account of the levy of excess profits duty and on account of the exemption of incomes below Rs. 2,000 per annum from assessment to income-tax. In order to recoup the loss a compensatory assignment is made from Imperial to Provincial revenues.

16. The increases in the revised estimate for 1919-20 and in the budget estimate for 1920-21 are due mainly to the greater profits made by mills and other commercial enterprises. Allowance is made in the budget estimate for the fact that the loss of income-tax in 1919-20 on amounts paid as excess profits duty will not continue during the current year.

Expenditure.

17. Owing to the rapid development of revenue from Income Tax it is necessary to provide for increased staff, both permanent and temporary. This accounts for the increase in the budget estimate for 1920-21.

18. Timber, etc., removed by Government agency.—The actuals for 1918-19 include special receipts to the extent of 21,40 from famine fodder operations. The increase in the revised as compared with last year's budget is due mainly to higher receipts (15,07 against 2,50 entered in the budget) on account of famine fodder operations, the general rise in prices, and the recovery of outstandings from the Munitions Board. The budget for 1920-21 provides for larger receipts in view of the extensive demand for, and the high prices of, timber and firewood and other forest produce.

19. Timber, etc., removed by consumers or purchasers.—The increase in the revised is due mainly to larger receipts expected from firewood and other minor produce. The budget for 1920-21 provides for higher receipts from timber consequent on the general rise in the prices of coupes.

Expenditure.

20. To the minor head Conservancy and Works are debited (a) the outlay on the improvement, extension and protection of forest generally, (b) the outlay on communications and buildings in charge of the Forest Department, (c) the cost of the extraction and transport to sale depôts of timber and other forest produce exploited departmentally, (d) the cost of supervision of the removal of similar produce by private agency, (e) charges for the survey and demarcation of forests, and (f) the cost of live-stock, stores, tools and plant. The actuals of 1918-19 were very high owing to large expenditure on account of famine fodder operations and the supply of timber and other forest produce to the Munitions Board, and the Military Department. The increase in the revised estimate for 1919-20 as compared with the budget is due mainly to higher expenditure (18,00 against 54 estimated in the budget) on famine fodder operations, and communications and buildings (9,25 against 5,63 in the budget). As compared with last year's budget, the budget for 1920-21 includes larger provisions for departmental operations connected with the exploitation of timber and firewood, the construction of communications and buildings, the purchase of stores and tools and plant, and the demarcation, improvement and extension of forests. Also an increased provision of 67 is made for the appointment of 8 new forest engineers.

21. Establishments.—The increase in the revised estimate for 1919-20 as compared with the budget is due mainly to larger expenditure on travelling and other allowances and on service postage and telegrams. The increase in the budget for 1920-21 is chiefly due to the increments payable to officers under the time-scale of pay, larger expenditure on travelling allowances, and provisions for the three items noted below:—

The Government of India have decided that the Imperial College at Dehra Dun should carry on the training of candidates for the Provincial Forest Service only and that the training of students for the forest rangers' course should be decentralised. It is accordingly proposed to build a Forest College at Dharwar for the purpose of training candidates for the rangers' course for this Presidency. A provision of Rs. 3,50,000 is made for the building and of Rs. 5,500 for the pay of two Provincial Forest Officers who will be required as Instructors at the College.

(b) Revision of the pay of Rangers, Foresters and Guards (2,68)—

The existing pay and prospects of promotion in all the three classes are inadequate. It is proposed to introduce a system of time scale promotion, which will go far to remove this objection. The Rangers are at present divided into six grades on pay varying from Rs. 50 to Rs. 150 a month. It is proposed to reduce the number of grades to four and to fix the pay of the lowest grade at Rs. 50—5—100 and of the remaining three grades at Rs. 125, Rs. 150 and Rs. 200 respectively. The extra cost of the scheme is estimated at 5,36 per annum, but as the sanction of the Secretary of State is necessary, provision is made to meet expenditure for six months only of 1920-21.

In view of the shortage of Forest Officers, the Government of India have authorised this Government to employ temporary Forest Officers on a maximum pay of Rs. 800 a month for a period of two years. Provision is made for ten such officers.

The figures given above represent the debits to Provincial funds of the expenditure under Refunds in proportion to the Provincial shares of the revenues under the respective heads in connection with which refunds are made. The charges under this head are of a fluctuating character and are not subject to any departmental control. The revised estimate for 1919-20 and the budget for 1920-21 allow for larger estimates of refunds of income-tax which is subject to adjustment under section 19 of the Indian Income Tax Act, 1918. In the revised estimate the decrease under Excise refunds is due to anticipated savings in last year's provision for refund of a portion of the vend fees recovered from certain shopkeepers whose shops had to be closed owing to the temporary failure of supplies of country spirit consequent on inadequate transport facilities. No provision is made in the current year's budget on this account.

23. Excise compensations.—The increase in the revise estimate over the budget for the year 1919-20 is due mainly to the payment of 52 to the Sachin State being the excess of the actual abkari receipts for the year 1918-19 over the provisional compensation of 32 paid for the period. The excise compensations have been fixed for ten years from 1st August 1914 on the basis of the average revenue for three years preceding that date. The amounts are subject to revision after the third year of leases with reference to the actual revenue collected. The first adjustment will be made in 1920-21 and will, it is anticipated, involve payments to the extent of about 11,05 in excess of the present compensations. This accounts for the large increase in the budget estimate for 1920-21 as compared with last year's budget.

24. The revenue represents mainly the interest received by the Local Government and advances on loans made from the Provincial Advance and Loan account. This account, the capital transactions of which are outside the current budget figures, provides for the grant of loans to agriculturists, local bodies, Indian States, etc. The money required for the loans is furnished by the Government of India. The Local Government pay interest thereon and bear any losses on account of bad debts. In order to cover risk and cost of management, the Local Government charge a higher rate of interest than that which they have to pay to India. The revenue under this head also includes interest on Government securities belonging to institutions taken over by Government along with the endowments for the upkeep of such institutions. In spite of the enhancements, which are noticed below, of the rate of interest charged by the Government of India to this Government no change has been made in the rate of 6¼ per cent. charged by this Government for loans to agriculturists. The rate of interest charged on loans to local bodies made after the enhanced rates fixed by the Government of India came into force has, however, been raised to 6 per cent. and that to Indian State has been raised to 6¼ per cent.

Expenditure.

25. The interest which is paid to the Government of India by the Local Government on sums placed at the disposal of the latter for advances and loans to local bodies, agriculturists, etc., is shown as expenditure under this head, this interest being calculated on the mean of the outstanding balance of the Provincial Advance and Loan account at the beginning and at the end of each year. The rate of interest charged to the Local Government was 3½ per cent. per annum, but with effect from the 1st October 1916 this rate was raised to per 4½ cent. in respect of loans sanctioned on or after that date, and again to per 5½ cent. in respect of loans sanctioned on or after 1st April 1917.

26. The question of taking over from the Government of India the Provincial Loan Account by repaying from Provincial balances a part or whole of the outstanding balance, which is estimated to amount to 3,01,89 on 31st March 1921, is at present under consideration. If the account is taken over, Provincial Revenues will save the amount payable to the Government of India as interest on the moneys taken from them to finance the Loan Account.

27. The transactions of the last and current years from the Provincial Loan Account are shown in the following statement :—

*Statutory charges under this head are not open to discussion.

28. The amounts of the sumptuary allowance and contract allowance of His Excellency the Governor have lately been raised to 30 and 1,00 respectively. The revised estimate for 1919-20 includes certain arrear payments.

29. Staff and household of the Governor.—The increase in the revised estimate for 1919-20 is due mainly to larger expenditure on the maintenance of Government House gardens and on contingencies. In the budget for 1920-21 provisions have been made for increased expenditure due to the revision of the establishments of the Private and Military Secretaries and for the purchase and repair of furniture.

30. Tour Expenses.—The revised estimate for 1919-20 includes provision for the construction of metre gauge and standard gauge saloon carriages for the use of His Excellency the Governor. The estimated cost of 76 for the standard gauge saloon was not paid last year and will have to be met this year by a reappropriation of funds.

31. Civil Secretariat.—The increase in the revised estimate for 1919-20 is due chiefly to the salaries of temporary officers and increase in the postage and telegram charges. The budget for 1920-21 includes a lump provision of 1,14 for the revision of the Secretariat establishments. Also provision is made for the pay of a Deputy Secretary in the Revenue and Financial Departments, and the employment of a special officer and a temporary Assistant Secretary in the General Department.

32. Commissioner in Sind.—The increase in the revised estimate for 1919-20 is due mainly to larger expenditure on service postage, telegrams and other contingencies. The budget for 1920-21 includes larger provision for this expenditure as well as for travelling and other allowances.

33. Commissioners.—The decrease in the revised estimate for 1919-20 is due to the non-utilization of the provision for payments to officers of other provinces and to smaller expenditure on allowances and contingencies. Larger estimates for charges on account of salaries, establishments and contingencies account for the increase in the current budget as compared with last year's budget.

34. Civil Offices of Account and Audit.—To this head is debited the expenditure connected with the Local Audit Branch of the Accountant General's office, which is classed as Provincial. The budget for 1920-21 provides 10 for temporary establishment required for the clearance of certain arrears and for the verification of cancelled currency notes.

* Statutory charges under this head are not open to discussion.

Revenue.

35. The principal source of revenue is general fees, fines and forfeitures. The increase in the revised estimate for 1919-20 and the budget estimate for 1920-21 occurs mainly under magisterial fines.

Expenditure.

36. High Court.—The budget estimate for 1920-21 provide for the following new items:—

(a) Appointment of an eighth Judge in the High Court for work on the Original Side 61

The Honourable the Chief Justice represented to Government the necessity of appointing as a permanent measure an eighth Judge. The Government of India were asked to obtain the sanction of the Secretary of State to the proposal, but they have for the present sanctioned the appointment for a period of one year. A provision for a full year on account of the salary of the additional Judge, office establishment and other connected charges is made in next year's budget.

(b) Revision of certain establishment in the High Court 54

37. Law Officers.—The increase in the revised estimate for 1919-20 over last year's budget is due chiefly to Pleaders' fees in connection with the special Tribunals at Akola and Ahmedabad and to larger provision under "charges for special counsel".

38. Civil and Sessions Courts.—Larger expenditure on account of contingencies and payments to officers of other provinces is responsible for the increase in the revised estimate for 1919-20. The budget estimate for 1920-21, besides providing for the following items, allows increased provision for the entertainment of temporary Assistant Judges and their establishments, and for payments to officers of other provinces.

(b) Establishment of separate courts of Subordinate Judge at Khed in the Ratnagiri District and at Hukeri in the Belgaum District ... 20

Item (a).—The revenue districts of Kaira, East Khandesh, Kolaba and Nawabshah are at present unprovided with District and Sessions Courts of their own, but are included in the jurisdictions of the District and Sessions Courts of the adjacent districts, viz., at Ahmedabad, Dhulia (in West Khandesh district), Thana and Hyderabad (Sind), respectively. A scheme for the constitution of separate District and Sessions Judgeships for these four revenue districts is under consideration. The cost of the whole scheme is estimated at 1,49 but for the present a provision of 75 for two new District Judgeships is made in the current year's budget.

39. Courts of Small Causes.—The decrease in the revised estimate for 1919-20 is due mainly to savings anticipated in the provisions for the Judges of the Courts of Small Causes due to changes in personnel. The budget estimate for 1920-21 provides 7 for the appointment of an additional temporary Judge in the Court of the Small Causes, Bombay, and 34 for the revision of the establishments of that Court.

40. Criminal Courts.—The increase in the revised estimate for 1919-20 and the budget estimate for 1920-21 as compared with last year's budget is due chiefly to larger provision for diet and road money to witnesses in consequence of the enhancement of the rate of subsistence allowance from six to eight annas per diem for witnesses of the class of smaller cultivators and labourers attending criminal courts.

Total ...	13,35	13,97	20,07	18,04	26,00	23,81

Revenue.

41. The receipts under this head consist of hire of convict labour, recoveries of transportation and jail charges from Indian States and sale-proceeds of articles manufactured in jails.

42. The high prices of jail manufactured articles and a larger demand for them account for the increase in the revised estimate for 1919-20.

Expenditure.

43. To this head are debited the expenditure connected with the staff employed in the supervison of jails, the charges for the maintenance of convicts and the cost of raw materials purchased for jail manufactures. Subventions to the Released Prisoners' Aid Society and to the Salvation Army for charges for reformation of criminal tribes and in connection with Released Prisoners' Home are also debited to this head. Expenditure in connection with the settlement of criminal tribes which were debited to the head "3, Land Revenue" are brought to account under this head with effect from 1st April 1920.

44. Jails.—The increase in the revised estimate for 1919-20 is due mainly to larger estimate for dietary and hospital charges, clothing and bedding of prisoners, charges for moving prisoners and miscellaneous services, and supplies owing to increased jail population and to the high prices of articles. As compared with last year's budget the estimate for the current year provides for larger expenditure on account of some of these items. The inclusion under this head of charges connected with the settlement of criminal tribes has also contributed to the increase.

45. Jail manufactures.—The increase in the revised estimate for 1919-20 is due to larger expenditure for the purchase of raw materials and to an increased demand for jail-made articles.

Revenue.

46. Till the year 1916-17 the following items of revenue used to be credited to the head XVII, Police, but are now adjusted by deduction from charges under the head 20, Police:—

(i) Contributions by the Bombay Port Trust in respect of the harbour and dock police;

(ii) Contributions by the Bombay University in respect of University Police;

(iii) Contributions from Municipalities for police supplied to them;

(iv) Contributions from the Karachi and Aden Port Trusts in respect of harbour police;

(v) Receipts from private companies and persons in respect of additional and other police;
(vi) Superannuation receipts; and
(vii) Contributions from stations (Thanas) in Kathiawar.

This change accounts for the fall in revenue since 1917-18. The increase in the revised estimate for 1919-20 as compared with the budget is due to higher receipts from fees for licenses granted under the Police and the Motor Vehicles Acts. The latter are not expected to be so high during 1920-21.

Expenditure.

47. Presidency Police.—The increase in the revised for 1919-20 over that year's budget is due to (i) the grant of war allowances to the constabulary at revised rates, (ii) larger expenditure on account of travelling and house-rent allowances and contingencies, (iii) the revision of the clerical establishment of the Commissioner of Police and (iv) the revision of the pay of gazetted officers of the Police Department. The budget for 1920-21 provides for all these charges and further includes lump provisions of (i) 2,09 for increase in the pay and allowances of the European cadre of the Bombay City Police, and (ii) 2,31 for revised pay (1,06) and grain compensation (1,25) of the Bombay City Police.

48. Superintendence.—The increase in the revised estimate for 1919-20 is due mainly to the revision of the pay of gazetted officers. The budget for 1920-21 also includes a provision of 9 for the re-organization of the clerical staff of the Inspector General of Police.

49. District Executive Force.—The decrease in the revised as compared with the budget for 1919-20 is mainly due to savings in the lump provisions amounting to 14,69 made for the grant of special war allowance and grain compensation allowance to the constabulary. The savings are partially counterbalanced by larger expenditure mainly on salaries and travelling allowances, and the grant with effect from 1st July 1919 of compensatory allowances (in addition to the existing war allowance) to the constabulary in the Presidency proper at rates varying between Rs. 3 and Re. 1 per mensem each. The budget for 1920-21 provides for the increased expenditure mentioned above, and for the items noted below :—

(a) Lump provision for the re-organization of the Sub-Divisional Police and the revision of the pay of Deputy Superintendents and Inspectors of Police .	3,46
(b) Clothing allowance to Inspectors, and free clothing grant to officers of and below the rank of Sub-Inspectors of Police	2,05
(c) Grant of compensatory allowances to the constabulary in Sind and Kathiawar, in addition to the present war allowances, at rates varying between Rs. 3 and Re. 1 per mensem each. (The grant of similar allowances to the constabulary in the Presidency proper has been sanctioned with effect from 1st July 1919)	1,90
(d) Reconstitution of the mounted police in the Presidency proper	1,92
(e) Lump provisions for the grant of (i) house-rent to Sub-Inspectors of Police who have been posted to places where house-rents have risen considerably and (ii) bad climate allowance to police officers stationed in unhealthy localities	1,25
(f) Lump provision for the grant of increased rates of pay to the constabulary in the Presidency proper in view of the large increase in the cost of living in recent years	1,00
(g) Additional police establishment required at Nasik and Trimback on account of the Sinhast fair ...	43
(h) Hutting allowance to police constables in Sind ...	36
Total ...	12,37

50. Special police.—The increases in the revised for 1919-20 and the budget for 1920-21 as compared with the budget for 1919-20 are due mainly to the revision of the pay of gazetted officers and the re-organization of the Agency police of Palanpur and Mahikantha.

51. Railway police.—The Government of India have lately sanctioned a revised system of apportionment of the cost of Railway police, under which the Railway companies will meet the cost of the watch and ward police, and Government that of the crime and order police with effect from 1st April 1919. The extra charge involved is estimated at 3,00 a year, and a recurring assignment of this amount is made from Imperial to Provincial revenues through the head "Transfers between Imperial and Provincial." This accounts mainly for the increase in last year's revised and in the budget for 1920-21 as compared with the budget for 1919-20.

52. Criminal Investigation Department.—The increase in the revised over the budget for 1919-20 is due mainly to the revision of the pay of gazetted officers and the police force, and larger expenditure on contingencies. The budget for 1920-21 allows for these higher charges and also includes provisions for the re-organization of the department and the establishment of a Criminal Investigation Department Training School.

Revenue.

53. The registration and other fees collected in the Shipping Offices at Bombay, Karachi and Aden are credited to the first minor head.

54. The receipts from the levy of dues on vessels for the provision of lights on the Sind Coast and the receipts of the Steam Vessels Survey Department are credited to the minor head Miscellaneous. The receipts and charges of this Department, which formed a Local Fund, were provincialized in December 1918 and, as the Department was not self-supporting, revised rates of survey fees were notified on the 3rd December 1918.

Expenditure.

55. The charges in connection with the steamer Jhelum and Flat Multan, which are placed at the disposal of the Commissioner in Sind for touring purposes, are recorded under the first two minor heads.

56. Ports establishments.—The increased expenditure during last year as compared with the actuals for 1918-19 is due to the provincialization of the Steam Vessels Survey Department in December 1918. The current year's estimate includes also provision for the revision of the pay of the shipwright surveyors in Bombay and for the entertainment of a shipwright surveyor for Karachi. The duty of surveying vessels at Karachi has hitherto been performed by Port Officers or private surveyors, but in view of the growing importance of the port it is now proposed to appoint an Engineer Officer of the Royal Indian Marine as shipwright surveyor for Karachi.

57. Light-houses and light-ships.—A saving occurred in last year's grant for Sind Coast lights as the light-ship "Sindhi" was temporarily employed in the Persian Gulf.

Revenue.

58. Fees, Government Colleges—Professional.—Owing to increased number of students seeking admission in the Government Law School, arrangements have been made for holding more classes. In 1918-19 the Second LL.B. class was held in duplicate and the First LL.B. class in triplicate. Another additional class was formed with effect from last year. The increase in last year's revised estimate and the current year's budget estimate is due mainly to the larger number of students in this school.

59. Fees, Schools—General.—It has been the policy of Government to maintain as far as possible in each district one high school to serve as a model and to leave the further development of secondary education to private endeavour with the assistance of grants-in-aid from Government. Some districts are not yet provided with Government high schools and it is now proposed to establish them in those districts. Thus the Municipal secondary school at Larkana has already been taken over and converted into a Government high school and new high schools will shortly be established in the other districts. The current year's estimate under this minor head includes provision for fee receipts from the new high schools.

60. Miscellaneous.—The following receipts are chiefly credited to this head :—

(i) Sale-proceeds of books,
(ii) Workshop receipts,
(iii) Yeravda Reformatory school receipts,
(iv) Cambridge Senior Local Examination fees,
(v) School Final Examination fees,
(vi) London Chamber of Commerce Examination fees,
(vii) Drawing and Arts Examination fees at the School of Art,
(viii) Royalty on Vernacular text books,
(ix) Government Scholarship Examination fees, and
(x) Secondary Teachers' Examination fees.

The actuals of 1917-18 include the refund of the advance of 3,50 given in 1915 to the V. J. Technical Institute in connection with the scheme for the removal of the institute to a new site at Matunga.

Item (v).—The departmental School Final Examination has been discontinued with effect from 1918-19 and so no fees are now received by Government in respect of this examination.

Item (viii).—Government have decided to forego with effect from 1st April 1920 the royalty at present payable by Messrs. MacMillan & Co. on the Vernacular readers, the sale prices of which will be correspondingly reduced. The last year's revised estimate also allows for somewhat smaller receipts from this source.

Expenditure.

61. University.—The following annual grants have been sanctioned from Imperial Revenues for the objects specified below :—

(a) 10 for administration, inspection and travelling allowances ;
(b) 45 for the appointment of University lecturers, and for other University reforms (sanctioned in 1912) ;
(c) 12 for the appointment of a Professor of Economics (sanctioned in 1915).

67 Total

The Imperial grant referred to in (a) has been merged into the Provincial Settlement which came into force on 1st April 1911. Grants (b) and (c) are being given every year from Imperial to Provincial revenues through the head "Transfers between Imperial and Provincial Revenues". The grant-in-aid (c) was not paid to the University since 1915-16 as no Professor of Economics was appointed by the University.

62. Inspection.—The last year's provisions of 54 for the scheme for the medical inspection of school children and of 19 for the scheme for the appointment of an Educational Inspector for the Bombay Division were not unutilized owing to the delay in the introduction of the schemes. On the other hand larger expenditure was incurred on "Establishments", "Travelling allowances" and "Contingencies".

The current year's budget contains increased provisions on account of (i) the scheme for the medical inspection of school children (71 against 54 in last year's budget), as Government have now decided to entertain six doctors, instead of five as originally proposed, (ii) additional Inspector for the Bombay Division, (iii) service postage and telegram charges and (iv) magic lanterns and slides. The inspecting agency for the Mulla Schools has recently been reorganized and provision for the additional inspecting staff for these schools is made in the current year's budget. The budget contains also provision for the additional inspecting staffs required for several districts. The scheme for the time-scale of pay for assistant masters and mistresses and assistant Deputy Educational Inspectors, for which a provision of 25 was made in the last year's budget, has been sanctioned by the Secretary of State. A lump provision of 2,00 for the extra charge on account of the scheme is made in the budget estimate of 1920-21. Out of this amount a sum of 40 is entered under this minor head.

63. Government Colleges—General.—The last year's budget contained a lump provision of 1,00 for the construction of a building and a hostel for students for the Arts College, Dharwar. A greater part of this provision remained unexpended. The small expenditure which was incurred last year was not debited to the head Education but appeared under Civil Works. This accounts for the decrease in the last year's revised estimate. The last year's provision of 1,00 for the Dharwar College buildings is not repeated this year under the major head 22, Education but on the other hand a sum of 3,50 for the buildings is provided under the head 45, Civil Works. Excluding the special provision of 1,00 in the budget of 1919-20 the small increase in the current year's budget is due chiefly to larger provisions for establishment and contingent charges.

—	Accounts, 1918-19.	Budget estimate, 1919-20.	Revised estimate, 1919-20.	Budget, estimate, 1920-21.

Item (i)—Owing to the increase in the number of students in the Law School, Bombay, Government sanctioned the formation in 1919-20 of an additional First LL.B. Class and the entertainment of two extra Professors. The budget of 1920-21 contains provision for the two Professors and their peons.

Item (ii)—The last year's provision of 24 for the scheme for instituting apprenticeships in the Public Works Department for Civil Engineering students was not utilized as Government have decided that the question of the introduction of the scheme should await the orders of the Government of India on the recommendations of the Public Works Department Re-organization Committee. The provision is, however, repeated in the current year's budget. There were also savings in last year's provision for salaries of officers.

Item (v)—The last year's provision of 1,00 for the equipment of the Institute remained unutilized and is therefore repeated in current year's budget. The Secretary of State has sanctioned the appointment of Dr. C. J. Fox as Principal of the Royal Institute of Science. A lump provision of 61 is made in the budget of 1920-21 for the pay of two professors—one for Physics and one for Botany—and for subordinate staff, etc., in addition to the pay of Dr. Fox which is already included in the provision for professors of the College of Engineering.

Item (i).—The Municipal Vernacular School at Larkana has been converted into a Government High School and the special provision of 19 which was separately made for the purpose in last year's budget is now merged into this head in the current year's estimates. In addition lump provisions of 1·20 for the revision of the pay of assistant masters and mistresses in secondary schools and of 12 for the revision of the pay of clerks in the Educational Department are made in the budget of 1920-21.

Item (iii).—The last year's provision was not utilized during that year and is repeated in the current year's budget.

Item (vi).—In response to a popular demand a lump provision of 8 was made in last year's budget for a scheme for the introduction of the teaching of English in primary schools. Government have sanctioned English classes to be attached to five vernacular schools in each Division as an experimental measure. The full estimated cost of this is provided in the budget of 1920-21.

Item (vii).—At the session of the Legislative Council held on the 29th July 1918 and subsequent days two Resolutions regarding the establishment of new girls' Anglo-Vernacular schools and the admission of girls into Government High Schools for boys, were accepted on behalf of Government and passed by the Council in modified forms. Accordingly the Director of Public Instruction was asked to submit proposals in the matter. The proposals approved by Government are summarised below :—

	Recurring (average) cost. Rs.	Non-recurring. cost. Rs.
(a) Separation of girls' High School at Ahmedabad from the Mahalaxmi Training College for Women ...	2,663	3,000
(b) Establishment of three new middle schools at Dharwar, Thana and Ahmednagar	27,152	12,000
(c) Opening of two branches at the Nasik and Bijapur boys' High Schools	14,080	4,000
(d) Provision of suitable arrangements (i.e., matrons, retiring rooms and sanitary arrangements) for the admission of girls into boys' High Schools	1,200	8,800
Total ...	45,095	27,800

A provision of 65 (37 for the recurring expenditure and of 28 for the non-recurring expenditure) is made for the purpose in the budget of 1920-21.

Item (ix) (a).—The provision of 22 in last year's budget was intended for local normal classes for training primary school teachers. As additional training schools will be opened from the increased provision referred to in item (ix) (i), some of the normal classes will be abolished, and a reduced provision is accordingly made in the current year's budget.

Item (ix) (c).—The current year's provision includes a sum of 20 for non-recurring expenditure required for a school house and teachers' quarters at Sholapur and for teachers' quarters at Bijapur.

Item (ix) (e).—The budget estimate for 1920-21 includes the following new provisions :—

69 for giving code pay, according to revised scale, to District Local Board primary school teachers sent out from training colleges during the year;

11 on account of extra pay and pension contribution of the second year trained men sent out as teachers from the several training colleges under the schemes sanctioned in 1912 from the recurring Darbar grant of 6,70.

Item (ix) (g).—The current year's budget contains an additional provision of 2,75 for bringing the grants to Municipalities for primary education to one-half of their total expenditure on this object during 1919-20.

Item (ix) (i).—In last year's budget a provision of 1,50 was made in connection with the scheme for the training of additional primary teachers to which the Secretary of State has now accorded his sanction. Pending the sanction a certain number of local training classes were opened provisionally. A further provision of 75 is made in the current year's budget to meet expenditure on opening new training classes.

Item (ix) (j).—The increase in the current year's estimate is due to the provision of 4,00 for opening new primary schools.

66. Government Schools—Special.—The details of the figures under the minor head are given below :—

	Accounts.	Budget estimate.	Revised estimate.	Budget estimate.
	1918-19.	1919-20.	1919-20.	1920-21.

(iv) Reformatory schools ...	55	49	65	51
(v) Committee of Direction for Industrial and Technical Schools.	...	15	6	15
Total ...	6,08	6,91	7,16	7,84

Item (i).—The last year's provision of 50 for the construction of a building for the Training College for Women, Poona, has not been utilized and is repeated in the current year's budget under the head 45, Civil Works. On the other hand larger expenditure is anticipated on contingencies and scholarships. The increased expenditure on scholarships is due to—

(a) the raising of the rate of stipends recently sanctioned by Government owing to the high prices of food-stuffs, and

(b) the additional stipends sanctioned in connection with the opening of the Urdu Training Class at Poona and the reorganization of the Urdu Training Class at Ahmedabad.

These factors mainly contribute to the net increase in last year's revised and current year's budget estimates. The current year's budget contains also a lump provision of 40 for revision of pay of assistant masters and mistresses.

Item (ii).—The increase in last year's revised estimate is due to larger expenditure on contingencies.

Item (iii).—The decrease in the revised estimate of 1919-20 occurs under salaries of officers and is due mainly to the deputation of officers to other Departments.

Item (iv).—The increase in last year's revised estimate occurs under contingencies on account of the present high cost of food-stuffs, etc.

Item (v).—The total sanctioned grant for the Committee is 40, but as their expenditure has not been worked up to this amount owing to war conditions a provision of 15 is made in the current year's budget.

67. Grants-in-aid.—The increase in last year's revised estimate is due mainly to the debit to this head of grants paid from special provisions, e.g., lump provisions for expenditure—(a) from Imperial grants and (b) from the surplus excise revenue. The current year's estimate includes the following special provisions :—

	Rs.
(a) Increase in the allotment for grants-in-aid to aided secondary schools	2,20,800
(b) Additional provision for grants to Mulla schools ...	65,608
(c) Additional grant in connection with the education of the children of the poorer sections of the domiciled community	44,628
(d) Additional grant-in-aid to the Sind Madressah-tul-Islam, Karachi	21,000

	Rs.
(e) Increased grant-in-aid to the David Sassoon Reformatory Institution on account of rations and clothing to the boys	20,000
(f) Education of defectives	12,620

Item (a).—Although the amount for grants-in-aid was raised by 2,25 in last year's budget (thus making a grand total of 10,33), it is reported that it will not fully meet the requirements of this year for all aided schools in municipal and local board areas at the usual one-third rate. It is estimated that an additional amount of Rs. 2,20,800 will be required to satisfy in full claims from aided schools in the several Divisions and this sum is provided in the current year's budget.

Item (b).—The amount of Rs. 65,608 is made up of the following provisions :—

	Rs.
(1) Additional grant for providing qualified assistants to Mulla schools	26,148
(2) Grant for the improvement of accommodation and equipment in Mulla schools	15,000
(3) Grant for lungis and other rewards	1,000
(4) Grant for the purpose of circulating libraries	4,000
(5) Grant for the distribution of books and writing materials ...	5,000
(6) Grant for prizes	3,000
(7) Grant for scholarships	11,460
Total ...	65,608

These provisions are intended to give effect to certain recommendations made by the Sind Mahomedan Education Committee.

Item (c).—The amount of Rs. 44,628 is made up of the following provisions :—

	Rs.
(1) for raising the age limit for boarding and tuitional grants (including the extra cost on account of the increase in the rate of boarding grant from Rs. 8 to Rs. 12 per mensem) ...	7,500
(2) for giving free education to poor children (i. e., those who are strictly neither orphans nor positively destitute) by means of tuitional grants	6,000
(3) additional allotment for tuitional grants to destitute children required as a result of the removal of the limit of Rs. 3 per mensem imposed up to now on the amount of State aid to this class of pupils	3,000
(4) for raising the rate of boarding grants for orphans and destitute children from Rs. 8 to Rs. 12 per mensem per child ...	28,128
Total ...	44,628

These additional grants have been sanctioned with effect from last year.

Item (d).—The Sind Madressah at present receives an annual grant of Rs. 18,000. In consideration of its financial stringency and with a view to improving its teaching staff Government have sanctioned, as a special case, an additional grant of Rs. 21,000 per annum with effect from last year. At the same time the Madressah Board has been asked to take steps to raise subscriptions from the public and to report the result to Government.

Item (e).—This is due to the increased cost of articles of foodstuffs and clothing.

Item (f).—Government have decided to increase the rate of Government grants to schools for the blind and deaf mutes from one-third to two-thirds of their expenditure.

68. Scholarships.—The increase in the revised estimate for 1919-20 is due chiefly to the transfer to this head of the expenditure on scholarships from the lump provision for Mahomedan education. This cause accounts also partly for the increase in the current year's estimate which includes an additional provision of 12 for grant of scholarships to daughters of indigenous midwives.

69. Lump provision on account of recurring and non-recurring Imperial grants.—The current year's provision of Rs. 3,36,000 is made up of the following amounts :—

	Rs.
(1)	55,425	from the unexpended balance of the Darbar grant of Rs. 6,70,000.
(2)	26,657	from the unexpended balance of the Imperial grant of Rs. 5,93,000.
(3)	40,278	from the unexpended balance of the Imperial grant of Rs. 1,00,000.
(4)	1,57,190	from the unexpended balance of the Imperial non-recurring grant of Rs. 31,00,000.
(5)	32,800	for capital expenditure from the unexpended balances of Imperial grants for hostels.
(6)	23,330	from the Imperial grant of Rs. 2,50,000.
(7)	694	from the unexpended balance of the Imperial non-recurring grant of Rs. 11,02,000.
	3,36,374	or Rs. 3,36,000 in round amount.

In addition to this amount a large sum is provided from the Imperial grants under the head 45, Civil Works, for educational buildings.

70. Lump provision for Mahomedan Education.—The last year's lump provision for Mahomedan Education in Sind was Rs. 49,000 and included Rs. 21,580 for special scholarships in secondary schools and Rs. 17,280 for similar scholarships in Arts Colleges. In the current year's budget a sum of Rs. 10,000 is provided under the minor head Scholarships and the balance is provided in lump.

71. The total expenditure estimate of 1,48,80 for 1920-21 under the major head 22, Education is exclusive of the following items which are provided under other heads for purposes connected with education :—

(1) Grant Medical College, Medical Schools at Poona, Ahmedabad and Hyderabad, College of Physicians and Surgeons of Bombay, and School of Tropical Medicine and Hygiene ...	19,24
(2) Construction and maintenance of Government educational buildings	13,25
(3) Agricultural education	6,95
(4) Veterinary College in Bombay	80
(5) Donations to scientific societies	21
(6) Allowances to Dakshina Fellows and others (Provincial share)	10
(7) Preservation and translation of ancient manuscripts ...	3
Total ...	40,58

The total provincial expenditure on educational objects in 1920-21 is thus estimated at 1,89,38.

72. The receipts and charges on account of sanitation were prior to the year 1917-18 exhibited under the major head "Medical." In view of the increased interest now taken in sanitation, it was decided to create a separate major head for the purpose in order to bring out more prominently the provision made and the expenditure incurred on that object. The former heads XX and 24, Medical were accordingly sub-divided into XX-A and 24-A, Medical and XX-B and 24-B, Sanitation.

Revenue.

73. The contribution of the Bombay Port Trust towards the charges on account of seamen treated at the St. George's Hospital is to be increased from 26 to 31 from the current year.

Expenditure.

74. Medical Establishment.—Enhanced salaries of Indian Medical Service Officers and the larger number of senior officers on duty mainly account for the increased expenditure provided in last year's revised and current year's budget estimates.

75. Hospitals and Dispensaries.—Large expenditure on supplies and services and contingencies of Government hospitals owing to high prices and increased number of patients, and enhanced salaries of Indian Medical Service Officers were mainly responsible for the increase in the revised estimate for last year. Current year's estimate provides for the salaries of Indian Medical Service Officers according to the revised scale. As compared with last year's budget larger provision is made for dieting and clothing charges of patients, but this provision is less than that included in the revised estimate. Moreover, provisions for the following objects have contributed to the increase in the budget of 1920-21 :—

(a) Reorganization of the nursing arrangements in the Presidency and increase of Government grants in aid of nursing at certain hospitals ;

(b) Opening of new dispensaries and increase of the Government grant-in-aid to the Lady Dufferin Hospital, Karachi ;

(c) Building grant for the Leper Asylum at Palghar ;

(d) Revision of the quinquennial contract grants of medical institutions.

Item (a).—The question of providing all Government institutions with nurses is under consideration. At present some institutions are fully equipped with nurses, others only partially so and the great majority not at all. It is therefore proposed to create a unified nursing service for the whole Presidency under the Bombay Presidency Nursing Association, and a scheme is being worked out in detail. In the meantime a provision of 2,50 (50 recurring and 2,00 non-recurring) is made in the budget of 1920-21. The budget also provides for increased grants to some of the existing nursing associations in the proportion of one-half of their expenditure.

Item (b).—The usual provision of 60 (20 recurring and 40 non-recurring) for opening new dispensaries is repeated in the current year's budget. In addition, a provision of 10 is made for increasing the grant-in-aid to the Lady Dufferin Hospital, Karachi, from 10 to 20 as the expenditure of the hospital, which was 31 when the original grant was sanctioned, has nearly doubled this year.

Item (c).—The Mission to Lepers in India and the East have under consideration a scheme for the establishment of a Leper Asylum at Palghar and they have applied to Government for a contribution towards the initial expenditure. Government have given an undertaking to bear two-thirds of the cost of constructing and equipping the asylum subject to a maximum of 16. Provision is made for the proposed grant-in-aid in the current year's budget.

Item (d).—The revision of the contract grants for the quinquennium beginning with 1920-21 is being undertaken. It is anticipated that owing to the general rise in prices, the grants will have to be raised. A lump provision of 40 for the increased charge is made in the current year's budget.

76. Medical Schools and College.—The scheme for the establishment of a school of Tropical Medicine has been submitted for the sanction of the Secretary of State. No part of the last year's provision of 1,00 for the scheme was utilized and a provision of 1,50 for the purpose is made in the current year's estimate. In addition a sum of 73 is included under this head for the establishment of a Central Hygiene Laboratory in connection with the school.

77. Lunatic Asylums.—Increased expenditure on diets of patients mainly accounts for the excesses in last year's revised estimate and the current year's budget estimate under this head.

79. Sale-proceeds of quinine, Sanitary Surveyors' Examination fees, and contributions for sanitary purposes are credited to this head.

Expenditure.

80. Sanitation and Vaccination Establishment.—The expenditure shown under this minor head relates mainly to (i) Sanitary Commissioner, Deputy Sanitary Commissioners and Health Officers and their establishments, (ii) Inspectors of Vaccination, and (iii) Charges of the Sanitary laboratory for Sind. A part of the charges on account of the Port Health Officers is recovered from the Port Trusts and these recoveries are deducted from the expenditure. The charges of the Belgaum Vaccine Depôt are also debited to this head, but a major portion of these is recouped by contributions from Local Boards, Municipalities, etc. The charges on account of the vaccination establishments employed under local bodies are almost wholly recovered from them. The last year's revised estimate and the current year's budget estimate include provisions for salaries of Indian Medical Service Officers on the revised scale and this, coupled with a larger number of senior officers on duty, accounts for the increased expenditure in last year's revised and current year's budget estimates.

81. Grants for Sanitary purposes.—The main items of expenditure recorded under this minor head are the following:—

(a) Grants for special expenditure in connection with sanitation;

(b) Grants-in-aid to local bodies in connection with the employment of Health Officers and Sanitary Inspectors;

(c) Grants to village Sanitary Committees; and (d) Pilgrim charges.

Item (a).—A provision of 16,37 (including 9,37 from the surplus excise revenue) was made in last year's budget for this item, but about one-third of this provision remained unutilized. Moreover, a large portion of the outlay on sanitary objects has been debited in the accounts to other major heads. These factors account for the decrease in last year's revised estimate. In the current year's estimates a provision of 22,00 (including 11,00 from the surplus excise revenue) is made for this item.

Item (b).—Government pay local bodies, subject to certain conditions, grants-in-aid equal to 2/3rds of the pay of Health Officers and 1/3rd of the pay of Sanitary Inspectors employed in mofussil towns. Provision of 40 is made for this item in the current year's estimates.

Item (c).—Government give grants to Village Sanitary Committees in the proportion of one-fourth of their expenditure, the other three-fourths being contributed by local bodies and villagers. The last year's provision of 70 for the purpose has been raised to 81 in the current year's estimates.

Expenses in connection with bubonic plague, malaria and epidemics.—The increase in the current year's budget is due to the lump provision of 22 for an isolation camp at Karachi for the prevention of yellow fever.

82. Bacteriological Laboratories and Pasteur Institutes.—The decrease in current year's estimates is due to a larger estimate of recoveries from local Bodies, etc., on account of the plague serum supplied from the Bombay bacteriological Laboratory. These recoveries are deducted from the total expenditure and the net expenditure only is shown under the minor head.

84. The above figures under "Political Agents" show net expenditure after deducting contributions from Indian States and Agency Funds concerned.

85. The increase in the revised estimate for 1919-20 was due to changes in personnel and privilege leave allowances of officers.

86. The increase in the budget estimate for 1920-21 as compared with last year's budget is due to the revision of the scale of pay of the Deputy Assistant Political Agents and to a larger estimate for salaries of officers.

87. Agricultural receipts are made up mainly of the sale proceeds of farm produce and cotton seed and implements sold by the Agricultural Department. The last year's revised estimate included also the proceeds of the special famine operations of the Department.

88. Veterinary receipts consist mainly of the sale proceeds of bulls and stallions and the Bombay Veterinary College fees.

Expenditure.

89. Agriculture.—The Agricultural Department is being gradually expanded. The expert staff under the Director of Agriculture at present consists of the following officers:—

Five Deputy Directors for Sind, Gujarat, C. D., S. D. and Konkan.

One Deputy Director of Animal Breeding.

One Agricultural and Mechanical Engineer.

One Plant-breeding Expert.

One Sugarcane Expert.

Four Divisional Superintendents of Agriculture.

The post of Deputy Director of Animal Breeding was created last year and cattle breeding operations have been transferred from the Civil Veterinary Department to the Agricultural Department under the charge of this officer.

90. The figures of expenditure under the various sub-heads of this minor head for the years 1918-19 to 1920-21 are shown below :—

Item (ii).—The increase in last year's revised estimate was due to larger expenditure on contingencies. The budget for 1919-20 included also a lump provision of 1,00 for storage of fodder. With reference to this it may be mentioned that the Director of Agriculture has been asked to make arrangements for the installation at Karajgi in the Dharwar district of a shredding and baling plant to deal with purchased karbi. A commencement is to be made with two shredders and one press, but provision will be made for the doubling of this plant, if necessary, later. Contracts will also be given on certain conditions for the right to remove grass from certain forests and Government waste lands with a view to maintaining reserves of grass in steam pressed and hydraulic pressed bales. In accordance with the arrangements thus made the stocks, which will now be available as reserves if no famine years intervene, will be as follows :—

575 lakhs pounds for the Northern Division and Kathiawar, to be stored at Nawapur, Palghar and Godhra as against nearly 13½ crores despatched during the past famine ;

485 lakhs for the Deccan and Southern Maratha Country, consisting of three crores of grass at Manmad and 185 lakhs of karbi at Kopargaon and Karajgi, as against 630 lakhs moved during the past famine.

The provision thus made is only intended to meet the necessities of the first few months of a fodder famine and cannot be expected to cover the demands of a year of widespread distress.

Item (iii).—The scheme of agricultural education at present being carried out consists in the provision of an Agricultural College at Poona, of University rank, where an endeavour is made to give the most thorough education in scientific agriculture, and a number of agricultural boarding schools conducted entirely in the vernacular. The number of students in the College increased from 104 in 1912 to 170 in 1919 and the demand for the graduates is now so great that a good man can always obtain a suitable outlet for his energies and the number of landholders' sons who intend to manage their own lands tends to increase. There is a demand for specialized courses in dairying, in horticulture and in several other branches of agricultural work. It is proposed to extend the College in six years to accommodate 250 students and to provide within that time the land, the buildings and the staff necessary to deal with this number. A provision of 1,09 is made under this sub-head for the acquisition of land, construction of certain buildings and equipment for the College in addition to the provision of 2,20 from the current year's Imperial grant of 3,47 shown under item (xi). A provision of 13 is also made under this head for recurring expenditure on account of the entertainment of a Professor of Horticulture and a Mycologist. Nine agricultural schools are at present established or will shotly be ready. Government propose to establish at least one vernacular school in every disrrict. With this end in view a provision of 45 is made under this head for three new schools and an additional amount of 1,20 for three such schools is included in the provision of 3,40 under item (xi). Provision for recurring expenditure for the whole year on account of the new schools is also made in the budget. This explains the large increase in the budget estimate for 1920-21.

Item (iv).—The charges of cattle breeding farms are now transferred from the minor head Veterinary Charges to this sub-head. Larger expenditure is also being incurred on contingencies of these farms. These factors contribute to the increase in the last year's revised and current year's budget estimates. The budget for 1920-21 includes also the following important new provisions :—

(a) Special grant in connection with the Cbharodi Cattle farm in North Gujarat, for dividing the farm by fencing into seven plots of about 400 acres each, for constructing new silos for keeping fodder, etc.	40
(c) Recurring and non-recurring expenditure on the Willingdon Cattle farm at Karachi	65
(d) Opening of new demonstration farms at Baramati in the Poona district and at Bagalkot in the Bijapur district ...	20
(e) Construction of office and quarters at the Karjat farm ...	23

Items (ix) and (xi) to (xiii).—The provisions in the current year's budget against these items represent unspent balances of Imperial grants. Item (xi) is the balance of the new grant of 3,47 given during last year, the other items represent unspent balances of old grants. The grant of 3,47 is intended for agricultural education and is to be spent on the following objects :—

(a) Additional land for the Agricultural College, Poona ...	1,00
(b) Buildings and equipmenmt for the Agricultural College, Poona	1,20
(c) Construction of three new agricultural schools ...	1,20
(d) Additional buildings for the agricultural school at Jambul	7
Total ...	3,47

91. Veterinary Charges.—As noticed in the preceding paragraph the charges on account of cattle breeding operations are now transferred to the minor head "Agriculture" and the charges on horse breeding operations continue to be debited to the head "Veterinery charges." The increase in the current year's budget estimate as compared with the last year's revised estimate is due mainly to the non-utilization of the last year's provision of 20 for the reorganization of the Glanders and Farcy Departments, and of 24 for the expansion of the Civil Veterinary Department, for which provisions of 25 and 24 respectively are made in the budget estimate of 1920-21.

92. Co-operative Credit.—The gradual increase of expenditure under this head is due to the growth of the operations of the department and to the increased provision for the pay of the Registrar, as a senior Indian Civil Service officer is now appointed Registrar.

93. Examination fees.—The fees on account of the Vernacular Final Examination and the Public Works Accountants' Examination and the fees recovered by the Civil and Military Examination Committee are credited to this head.

94. Fees for Inspection of Steam Boilers.—The receipts and charges of the Steam Boiler Inspection Department, which formed a Local Fund, were provincialized with effect from 1917-18. The actuals of that year include also the sale proceeds of the securities belonging to the old fund.

95. Miscellaneous.—The fees for registering Companies and Societies are credited to this head, and the increase in the last year's revised estimate is due to the present boom. The current year's estimate of receipts from this source allows for a small increase over the last year's budget.

Expenditure.

96. Provincial Museums.—Government have promised an annual grant of 30 towards the maintenance of the Prince of Wales Museum of Western India. The premises which were occupied by Military authorities will not be ready for use as a Museum for some time, and a provision of 20 for the Governmen$_t$ contribution for eight months is made in the current year's budget. The Museum Committee also receives an annual contribution of 25 from the Bombay Municipality towards the Museum. This contribution is also in effect a grant from Government as the amount of the contribution was taken as a set off against the Municipality's share of the City Police charges taken over by Government in 1907.

97. Donations to Scientific Societies.—The actuals of 1917-18 include a grant-in-aid of 30 to the Cama Institute of Oriental Learning as a special endowment fund for the formation of a fellowship. The current year's budget contains a provision of 10 for the proposed increase from 5 to 15 of the Government grant to the Natural History Society.

98. Inspector of Factories and Steam Boiler Inspection establishment.—Proposals for the amalgamation of the Factory, Steam Boiler and Smoke Nuisance Departments, and for the increase of the salaries of the Inspectors in those Departments have been recently sanctioned by the Secretary of State. The current year's budget contains provisions for the additional cost involved in these proposals.

99. Provincial Statistics.—The charges on account of establishments entertained for collection of statistics of rail-borne traffic are debited to this head.

100. Miscellaneous.—The amount shown in the last year's budget and revised estimates are in connection with the charges incurred by the Controller of Prices and Director of Civil Supplies. These charges are covered by corresponding assignments from India. No specific provision for such expenditure is made in the current year's budget. The amount of 36 provided in the budget of 1920-21 is intended for the charges of the Director of Information whose appointment has recently been sanctioned.

101. Development of Industries.—The Department of Industries has recently been established. It is intended to develop the Department on the lines indicated in the Report of the Indian Industrial Commission. The constitution of the Department upto now, in addition to the Director and the Deputy Director, is briefly as follows :—

(i) Weaving.—The weaving establishment under the Registrar of Co-operative Societies has been transferred to the Director of Industries and has been strengthened.

(ii) Industrial Engineering.—The appointments of a Deputy Director and three Industrial Engineers have already been made. The Dapuri Workshops have been transferred from the Public Works Department to the Department of Industries.

(iii) Fisheries.—The appointment of a Superintendent of Fisheries has been created. It may be expected that this Department will ultimately be controlled by a Marine Biologist with two Superintendents to assist him. Negotiations are in progress for the purchase of a steam trawler and for the appointment of a master and skipper and a first hand to work it.

(iv) Pottery.—The services of the Superintendent of Pottery in the Educational Department have been placed temporarily under the Department.

(v) Chemists.—An Assistant Chemist and a research scholar have been appointed temporarily. Their work is supervised by two part-time advisers to the Department—Mr. Turner of the V. J. Technical Institute and Dr. Meldrum, Professor of Physics and Chemistry at the Gujarat College.

The current year's budget of 7,77 includes a provision of 5,00 for the development of the Department and of 42 for the Dapuri Workshops transferred from the Public Works Department.

102. The figures do not call for any special remarks.

Expenditure.

103. Government presses.—The decrease in the revised estimate for 1919-20 was due to the non-utilization of the provision for the purchase of a monotype key board and caster for the Government Central Press, and to savings in the provision for piece-work establishments at that Press. The current year's budget estimate provides for the following important items :—

	Rs.
(i) Purchase of machinery for the Yeravda Press ...	50,000
(ii) Purchase of monotype key boards and casters complete with motors for the Government Central Press	30,000

The decrease in the total provision as compared with the budget estimate for 1919-20 is however due to smaller provision for piece-work establishment under Government Central Press.

Revenue.

104. Miscellaneous.—The increase in the revised estimate over last year's budget arises from the special recovery of over-payments made in connection with the sale of rice to Messrs. Ralli Brothers.

Expenditure.

105. Donations for charitable purposes.—The increase in the Budget estimate for 1920-21 as compared with the budget for 1919-20 is due mainly to the provisions on account of the following items :—

Annual grant-in-aid of 5 and a building grant of 75 to the Society for the protection of children in Western India	80

106. Charges on account of European Vagrants.—The decrease in the last year's revised estimate as compared with the budget is due to the non-utilisation of the provision for the construction of a building for the European Workhouse. The budget estimate for 1920-21 includes a larger provision, viz., 68 against the last year's provision of 28, for this object. The increased provision is necessary because it is intended to erect a self-contained two-floor building with accommodation for the residence of an officer instead of the mere work and living shed originally planned, and because the cost of labour and materials has greatly increased.

107. Special Commissions of Enquiry.—The increase in the revised estimate for 1919-20 is due to the expenditure on account of the printing of records of the Rasai Committee and to the charges for the special Tribunals at Ahmedabad.

108. Rents, Rates and Taxes.—The budget estimate for 1920-21 provides for an increase of 29 in respect of the payment to be made to the Bombay Municipality on account of General Tax on Government properties.

109. Contributions.—The chief items of expenditure which are debited to this head are grants made for no specific purpose to Municipalities, Local Boards, etc., such as grants to cover a deficit balance or a compensation for revenue resumed, etc., which cannot be classed with reference to the objects to which they are to be devoted. The large increase in the budget estimate for 1920-21 is due to the following items:—

(a) Additional provision for grants-in-aid to District Local Boards in the Presidency proper in connection with the abolition of tolls on their roads ...	1,69
(b) Additional provision on account of subventions to District Local Boards to which non-official Presidents with a self-contained office may be appointed.	15
(c) Subsidy to the Bombay Municipality in connection with the abolition of tolls leviable on vehicles entering Bombay City from Salsette	25

Item (a)—In last year's budget a sum of 1,40 was provided for the purpose. Out of this, grants aggregating 56 have so far been sanctioned to the following District Local Boards :—

Ahmedabad.	Bijapur.
Satara.	Nasik.
Kanara.	Thana (for abolition of tolls on Bandra-Ghodbunder Road).

It has been decided that the tolls on the remaining Local Board roads should be abolished with effect from 1st April 1920 and compensation paid to the boards concerned and that those local boards which abolished tolls suo motu before 1914, either partially or wholly, should also be paid compensation. The amount required in this connection is estimated at 3,09 against the last year's provision of 1,40, and a further sum of 1,69 is provided for the current year.

Item (b)—The budget estimate for 1920-21 provides 91 against the last year's provision of 76.

Item (c)—The Bombay Municipal Corporation have agreed to the repeal of section 190 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act with a view to discontinuing the toll leviable on vehicles entering the city from Salsette which are not liable to the tax leviable under section 180 of the Act in return of an annual subsidy of 25 from Government.

110. Miscellaneous and unforeseen charges.—The high figures of the actuals of 1918-19 are due to the adjustment in the accounts of the loss in respect of rice transactions with Messrs. Ralli Brothers. The budget estimate for 1919-20 included a provision of 2,00 for reserve with the Financial Department for unforeseen charges and for additional postage and telegram charges. As expenditure met from this provision will be debited to the heads concerned, the revised estimate shows a large decrease. The absence of a lump provision under this head for additional postage and telegram charges is responsible for the decrease in budget estimate for 1920-21 as compared with the budget for last year.

111. War Boards.—The War Purposes Board and the Committees under it except the Re-settlement Committee were closed during last year. This accounts for the decrease in the revised estimate for 1919-20. The small provision in the budget estimate for 1920-21 is on account of the charges of the Re-settlement Committee which continued till the end of last year.

112. Peace Celebrations.—The revised estimate for 1919-20 takes account of the amounts placed at the disposal of district officers in connection with the peace celebrations. These amounts are exclusive of the charges on account of illuminations which will be debited to Public Works grants.

33. Famine Relief.

* This item is not open to discussion.

114. For purposes of classification in the accounts, irrigation works are divided into (a) Productive Works, (b) Protective Works and (c) Minor Works and Navigation.

115. Productive Works are of a remunerative character undertaken for the improvement of the country. The capital outlay on these works is met from borrowed money and is recorded under the wholly Imperial head 49, Irrigation Works. The interest and the cost of maintenance and working are provided out of current revenues, the income being credited thereto. The receipts are credited to the head XXIX, and the interest and working expenses are debited to the head 42, Irrigation—Major Works and both are divided equally between Imperial and Provincial.

Works which, although not directly remunerative to the extent which would justify their inclusion in the class of Productive Works, are calculated to guard against or diminish future expenditure on famine relief are termed Protective Works. The cost of the construction of such works is paid out of the annual grants under famine relief and insurance and is charged to the wholly Imperial head 35, Protective Irrigation Works. The receipts and interest and working expenses are, as in the case of Productive Works, classed under the heads XXIX, and 42, Irrigation—Major Works.

116. The head Minor Works and Navigation includes all classes of irrigation works other than the above. These are paid for out of current revenues and are classed under the head 43, Irrigation—Minor Works and Navigation.

Revenue.

117. Land Revenue due to major productive and protective works is shown under Portion of Land Revenue due to Irrigation, no separate account being kept for a considerable amount of land revenue earned by minor irrigation works. The decrease in the revised for 1919-20 is attributed to deficiency of water in the Eastern Nara, Unharwah, Jamrao and Dad canals. The budget for 1920-21 is based on the estimates furnished by District Officers.

118. Direct receipts.—The increase in the revised for 1919-20 is due mainly to the recovery of arrears on account of the sale of water from certain irrigation works. The increase in the budget for 1920-21 is due to better receipts anticipated from the Hathmati and Khari Cut canals and larger sale of water expected from the Godavari and Mutha canals.

Expenditure.

119. Working Expenses.—The increase in the revised for 1919-20 is due to larger expenditure on works, repairs and establishments. The increase in the budget for 1920-21 as compared with last year's budget is due mainly to higher cost of labour and materials.

120. Interest on Debt.—Interest on the irrigation debt is calculated at the average rate of interest paid during the year on the total public debt of the Government of India. The capital outlay upon which interest is calculated in 1920-21 is that incurred up to the end of 1919-20, plus half the estimated outlay during 1920-21. The average rate of interest adopted for 1919-20 and 1920-21 is 3·4818 per cent.

121. The revised estimate for 1919-20 is based on the latest actuals available and the budget for 1920-21 nearly follows the revised estimate.

Expenditure.

122. Civil Department.—The outlay represents charges on account of the repair of small irrigation tanks and free grants for the encouragement of irrigation in precarious tracts.

123. Public Works Department.—The increase in the revised estimate for 1919-20 is due to the large additional grants sanctioned during the year for works and repairs. Larger provision is made in the budget for 1920-21 for new works, while the higher cost of labour and materials helps to swell the charges.

Revenue.

124. Civil Officers.—Fees for masonry graves and receipts in respect of travellers' bungalows and miscellaneous public improvements are credited to this head. Recoveries of overpayments in past years and refunds of grants-in-aid are treated as miscellaneous receipts under this head. The actuals for 1916-17 included 1,07 on account of the refund by the Alandi municipality of the amount of grant-in-aid paid in 1915-16 towards its water-supply scheme.

125. Public Works Officers.—The receipts consist mainly of rents of buildings in charge of the Public Works Department, sale-proceeds of buildings, materials and produce, net profits from workshops and fines levied from contractors for failure in the execution of works. The increase in the revised for 1919-20 as compared with the budget is due to higher receipts expected from sales of buildings and from fines, etc. The budget for 1920-21 follows the revised estimate for 1919-20 after making allowance for the larger receipts from sales of buildings during last year.

Expenditure.

126. Civil Department.—The following are the principal items of expenditure during the three years 1918-19 to 1920-21 :—

No.	Particulars.	Accounts, 1918-19.	Budget, 1919-20.	Revised, 1919-20.	Budget, 1920-21.
1	Grants to the Mahabaleshwar Local Fund and to local bodies other than District Local Boards for local public works.	75	7	45	7
2	Grants to Local Boards for village water-supply.	1,65	1,00	2,08	1,20
3	Grants to District Local Boards for local public works.	7,16	15,63	16,13	15,73
4	Discretionary grants to Commissioners for general purposes of a public nature, rewards to specially deserving persons, and other objects.	...	20	...	20
	Total ...	9,56	16,90	18,66	17,20

Under item (1) provision is made for normal charges. The expenditure under item (2) for 1918-19 and 1919-20 is high owing to special grants sanctioned for the improvement of village water-supply in the districts affected by scarcity. Under item (3) provision has been made for the additional grants of 8,24 to District Local Boards for communications and other local improvements sanctioned with effect from 1919-20 and for a grant-in-aid of 10 for the construction and repair of roads in irrigated tracts.

127. Public Works Department.—The budget grants allotted for expenditure under this head vary from year to year according to the financial situation. The grant for the current year has been fixed at 1,71,75. The recurring charges are estimated by the Public Works Department at 58,50 as shown below :—

Repairs		34,00
Establishment		20,00
Tools and plant		4,50
Total ...		58,50

129. The decrease in the revised estimate for 1919-20 is due mainly to the larger assignment from Provincial to Imperial Revenues in connection with the new scheme of taxation under "Income Tax". The decrease is partially counterbalanced by (i) a recurring assignment from Imperial to Provincial revenues in connection with the revised system of apportionment of Police charges between Government and the Railway Companies, (ii) the non-recurring assignments from Imperial to Provincial revenues on accoun of certain agricultural objects, the equipment of Victoria Jubilee Technical Institut Bombay, and the establishment of a new pottery school near Bombay, and (iii) a large assignment to meet the cost of Provincial Director of Civil Supplies, his establishme

NOTE 1.—The non-recurring expenditure shown in column 6 is inflated by the following items, which are covered by special receipts :—

7,74	for expenditure on education	met from the grants made for the purpose from Imperial revenues.
5,00	for expenditure on sanitary objects
50	for expenditure on medical relief
4,95	for expenditure on agricultural objects
2,00	for industrial education

The balance of non-recurring expenditure which is met from ordinary revenues amounts to 2,16,35.

NOTE 2.—The total expenditure provided in the budget estimates of each year is divided into three classes—permanent recurring (column 3), fluctuating recurring (column 4) and non-recurring (column 6). The fluctuating recurring expenditure includes items (like temporary establishments, plague allowance and contingencies) for which provision has to be made every year, but of which the amount varies from year to year. The lowest figure in the "Budget Estimate, 1920-21", "Revised Estimate, 1919-20", "Budget Estimate, 1919-20", and "Accounts, 1918-19", has generally been taken as the minimum recurring charge for each item, and the total of all such items is entered under column 4 against the major head concerned. The difference between the total budget provision for such items and the minimum recurring charge entered in column 4 is taken as non-recurring, and this, together with the provision for purely temporary objects, has been classed as non-recurring and entered in column 6. This method is adopted in the case of all major heads, except 29, Superannuation Allowances and Pensions, 42, Irrigation—Major Works, 43, Irrigation—Minor Works (Public Works Department) and 45, Civil Works (Public Works Department). In the case of 29, Superannuation Allowances and Pensions, the provisions for gratuities and refunds are classed as fluctuating recurring, while all other items are treated as permanent recurring. The whole provision under 42, Irrigation Major Works—Interest on Debt is classed as permanent recurring. Under the heads 42, Irrigation—Major Works—Working Expenses and 43, Irrigation—Minor Works (Public Works Department), the provision on account of ordinary repairs establishments and tools and plant is classed as permanent recurring, the provision for special repairs and the minimum provision considered absolutely necessary for works in progress, new works, discretionary grants and reserve is classed as fluctuating recurring, and the balance is classed as non-recurring. Under the head 45, Civil Works (Public Works Department), the provision on account of repairs, establishments and tools and plant is classed as permanent recurring, the minimum provision considered absolutely necessary for works in progress, new works, discretionary grants and reserve is classed as fluctuating recurring and the balance is classed as non-recurring.

To

HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,

The undersigned the Inamdar of Ralej begs to lay the following lines in connection with the Village Panchayat Bill for Your Excellency's kind consideration.

If the Village Panchayat Bill as introduced by the Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola be applied in the whole of the Bombay Presidency without excluding Talukdari, Inam and such other lands from its operation the Talukdars and Inamdars would be deprived of many of their rights enjoyed as at present.

Some of the clauses which if not omitted would be detrimental to the interests of Talukdars and Inamdars may be noted as below.

All the trees, pastures and fruits on roadside and other trees in Inami and Talukdari villages are at present owned by Inamdars and Talukdars as it is proposed to raise some income from these trees, etc., for the purposes of the Village Panchayat the rights of the Inamdars and Talukdars cannot but be infringed upon if no change is made in the clause referring to the raising of the income.

Even the rights of Chamars and Khalpas on dead bodies of animals will be marred if the bill be allowed to pass in its present form.

If the work of the Village Panchayat be exacted from village servants who are mostly given their pay and other remuneration by Talukdars and Inamdars, the double burden laid on the shoulders of the village servants might prove a heavy obstacle in the way of the work of villages held by Inamdars and Talukdars.

The fact that the village patel is to be the ex-officio member of the Panchayat while the Inamdar or Talu dar of the village has to take the chance of election for securing a place in the Panchayat is equally objectionable.

Be it said in this connection that the amendments moved by the Honourable Mr. Gokuldas Kahandas Parekh and the Honourable the Thakor of Kerwada if carried would protect the interests of Inamdars and Talukdars to a great extent.

In conclusion the undersigned hopes that the objections referred to above against the Village Panchayat Bill will be fully considered before the bill reaches its final stage and becomes a law.

Thanking in anticipation of a favourable consideration.

I beg to remain,

Sir,

Your Excellency's most obedient servant,

BAPOOJEE C. MODY,
Inamdar of Ralej.

Ralej, District Kaira,
16th May 1920.

Substance of a memorial, dated 26th June 1920, from Chudasama Takhatsangji Narsangji and 18 other Talukdars of Mouze Tagdi, taluka Dhandhuka, district Ahmedabad, to His Excellency the Governor and President of the Legislative Council.

Bill No. 11 of 1919 (the Village Panchayat Bill) introduced in the Legislative Council of Your Excellency's Government, if passed, will prove not only very harmful to our interests but it will also affect very adversely our position and rank. Moreover, we shall be held in low esteem amongst our ryots. For these and other reasons we crave leave to approach Your Excellency with this representation.

2. Facts based upon the records of Government prove that :

(i) We and our ancestors began to be called Talukdars and our villages 'Talukdari Villages' after the advent of British rule in this part of the country. Prior to that, like the Kathiawar Chiefs, we were also Zamindars and Rajas of our villages and enjoyed supremacy over them.

(ii) We paid to the Mogul Emperors and thereafter to the Peshwas and the Junagadh State a tribute or peshkash only. We were independent in every respect, and we neither asked for the protection of our villages from, nor were subject to, any other State.

3. After the advent of British rule, local officers tried to establish the sovereignty of the British Government and obtain the acknowledgments of the Talukdars in that respect, but they failed. Thereupon they gave up these attempts and endeavoured to bring us under subjection gradually, broke our power and imposed the civil and criminal jurisdiction of the Government on us, and, enacting suitable laws, made them applicable to us.

4. Thereafter the local officers endeavoured to rank us not as independent landlords though we were such, but as leaseholders only and began to treat us accordingly. We, however, remained loyal to Government, created no disturbance and bore all the hardships which befell us.

5. At last in about 1860, when this state of affairs reached the ears of the then Government, and they found that our rights had been suffering gravely, though we were absolute owners, they declared the above conceptions erroneous, acknowledged the truth of all our representations, accepted them as proved, and recognized in law, i.e., in the Act of 1862, the ownership of the Talukdars of the Ahmedabad District over the Talukdari villages. They further provided in it for the undisturbed enjoyment by the Talukdars of these villages as absolute owners, and for the redemption of their debts, and even paid off the debts of those who were debtors. Such was the kind, impartial and just policy adopted by the then Government and promises were given to restore the Talukdars to their original position.

6. Once again in 1885, the local officers with a view to interfering with our absolute rights, endeavoured to throw obstacles in the way of the enjoyment of our rights to sell or mortgage property and, assuming the powers of surveying our villages though the Government had no such powers, meddled in affairs connected with our private property, and in spite of our protest, Act No. 6 of 1888 was passed.

7. Under the said Act we were at first Rajas and Zamindars like the Rajas of Kathiawar. It gave equal status to Chárans, Kasbátis and other communities and it was made applicable to them also. Though Government had no right to interfere with the administration of our lands, survey powers were assumed and even a Settlement Register was prepared.

8. Not only this, but the local officers introduced, in the said Register, columns for which the said Act contained no provision and brought us to a miserable condition.

9. Therefore, through the pressure of the local officers, the Bill of 1912 was prepared with a view to restricting our undoubted rights, and the local officers acted illegally in order to get the Bill passed. But the then Government mercifully dropped it and saved us.

10. Such is our present condition, and now the Bill called 'the Village Panchayat Bill' with clauses calculated to interfere with and destroy our proprietary rights has been brought before the Legislative Council. We, therefore, trouble Your Excellency with this representation and beg to submit that if this Bill is passed and is made operative in our Talukdari villages, not only will our rights be destroyed, but our position also will suffer gravely. In order that this may not happen, we crave leave to approach Your Excellency with this memorial on the grounds set forth below :—

(i) We have appended herewith extracts from the records of the British Government to show that we, the Talukdars of the Talukdari villages in Pragana Dhandhuka, paid only a contribution or peshkash or a tribute to the Moguls, to the Peshwas and then to the British Government at their advent and were not subject in any other respect.

(ii) We have also given in the appended extracts authorities to show that the British Government do not own an inch of land in our Talukdari villages.

(iii) The Bombay Government have publicly acknowledged our old proprietary rights and given promises to restore us to our original position. We have also shown this in the appended extracts.

(iv) From the appendix attached, it will appear that we Talukdars are also landholders like the Rajas of Kathiawar and are of the same race. We give our sisters and daughters to them in marriage and they do the same thing in their turn; and hence the people of our villages regard us as their masters in like manner and respect us. Accordingly, if the said Act is made applicable to our villages, we shall lose altogether our position and rank in Kathiawar and amongst our people.

11. The above facts and the documents attached herewith in support will convince Your Excellency's Government that in Talukdari villages all rights including those attached to lands belong to Talukdars only and the Government own no land whatsoever there. Accordingly, if the Village Panchayat Act is made applicable, the following provisions in the Act will gravely harm our status and privileges.

12. Now if we examine the clauses of the said enactment, we can see that it cannot apply to our Talukdari villages inasmuch as Government own no land in them. The Act cannot be made operative there owing to the following reasons also:—

(1) The enactment provides for the establishment of a 'Village Panchayat' consisting of not less than five members all of whom are to be elected. The Sar-Panch is also to be elected.

(2) It empowers the Panchayat to have a Secretary and other servants.

(3) It gives the Panchayat the power of performing the following functions:—

(i) The cleansing of the village roads.

(ii) The regulation of the use of tanks, streams and rivulets and the provision of the water-supply to the village.

(iii) The construction of roads and streets in villages, the grant of permission to build sanitary buildings, the maintenance of grazing lands for the cattle of the village and the regulation of the use of bridges, rivers, etc.

(iv) The disposal of sweepings, manures, hides, etc.

(v) The imposition of a house-tax in accordance with rules made by Government and the levy of a tax on the owners or occupiers of houses or lands.

(vi) The imposition of further taxation in case the income falls short of the expenditure.

(vii) The recovery of taxes, the imposition of fines for defaults, the distraint or sale of moveable property for recovering any tax, house-tax or fine.

(viii) Imprisonment in case of default of the payment of a fine.

(ix) And several other powers exclusive of the entire executive power which it vests in the Sar-Panch.

13. The facts stated in the above 12 paragraphs and the authorities quoted in the appendix will show Your Excellency that all rights in Talukdari villages without exception belong to the Talukdars and all their properties are private properties. When such is the case, how can the said enactment be made applicable in Talukdari villages? Your Excellency's Government are aware that Talukdars have also proprietary rights over the village sites in the Talukdari villages and the ryots are tenants at will. Hence Talukdars are the owners of buildings and lands and to them alone belongs the right of keeping the ryot in or expelling him from the village. Please see the authorities quoted in the appendix. From all these facts it will appear to Your Excellency that in Talukdari villages, the Talukdars alone have all rights on lands or buildings. The Government have no right even on an inch of land. In these circumstances, the said enactment cannot be enforced at all in Talukdari villages. For the cleansing of the village roads are employed Bhangis who have been granted lands for that service. Further, waste lands which are given for the purpose of erection of buildings also belong to Talukdars. They are the owners and holders of lands in the village boundaries which are given for cultivation. As owners they make arrangements in connection with the improvement of waste-lands and making them fit for cultivation; they also enjoy as owners the grass growing in Kharaba or waste-lands, maintain the necessary pasture lands for the grazing of the cattle of the ryots, and regulate the use of tanks, wells, rivers, etc., and do the work incidental thereto. The Local Board has executed the repairs of wells and tanks in certain villages, but as we contribute to the Local Fund, it is utilised in consultation with us. Tanks and wells being necessary to us and our ryots, repairs are executed and done with our consent. Hence, our ownership is not affected in any way. We solely make use of the village earth, and allow our ryots to use it if they want to. The same thing happens in the case of sweepings. Those utilise them for manuring the land given by us which they cultivate. We get its benefit; and the sweepings of non-agricultural ryots we get stored at a place set apart for the purpose and we utilise for manuring our Gharkhed lands or those of our tenants, and we enjoy the benefit. The Talukdars also have a right over the hides of cattle. But by Act No. 19 of 1844 Government have stopped the giving of contracts for hides by us. Owing to the restriction imposed by the said Act we are prevented from giving contracts; but the ryots and the tenants whose cattle die, get a share in the hides of their respective cattle. This share is called Adhodun. The remaining portion of the hides goes to the Chamars for their trouble, as they remove the cattle outside the village to the spots appointed by us for flaying and cleansing them. Kankar and stones are Talukdar's property and we permit our ryots to take them when they require them. When Government require land for any purpose they ask for it from us, and we give it voluntarily in order to comply with their wishes. In short, Government have hitherto recognized our proprietary rights and have acted and act accordingly. There is no big navigable river in this district. There are only small rivers which dry up mostly fifteen days after the last fall of rain in the season. All these small rivers are Talukdar's property (vide Indian Law Reports, Bombay, XXII). Settlement Registers have been prepared in respect of our villages under sections 5 and 6 of Act No. 6 of 1888. In them, too, we are shown to be owners of all lands, as will be seen if they are referred to. In villages where partition is made amongst brothers, the Talukdars in possession of their respective shares are shown as their owners and in respect of joint land they are shown as joint owners. Before the enactment of Act VI of 1888, the Civil Courts also passed decrees for division amongst Talukdars according to their respective shares and got them executed through Collectors, and the Collector's office performed the functions of the bailiff. We, Talukdars, give village lands and houses to Kheduts for residential and other purposes, take them back into our possession and again give them to others, or in other words, we enjoy all proprietary rights over them. In the matter of construction of buildings, too, we exercise supervision in order to prevent people from building in such a way as to obstruct their neighbours, and fix the limits for making erections. In short, just like a private individual who owns a plot and builds a bungalow, rooms for servants, stables for horses and carriages, provides a special way for vehicles to come and go and an open space in it, and who is considered the owner of all these and none can interfere with his possession and enjoyment thereof, the Talukdars are the owners of all lands in talukdari villages and they regulate the residing of the ryots and the agriculturists, in the village as stated above. When such is the position, how can the 'Village Panchayat Bill' be made applicable to Talukdari villages? On a careful consideration of all that is stated, it will manifestly appear to Your Excellency that the said enactment cannot possibly be applied to Talukdari villages, and in the event of its application to them our rights will be grievously affected and there will be a conflict in the exercise of rights.

14. We submit further in reference to the Panchayat Bill as under:—

(1) The Bill provides for the establishment of a Panchayat by election. The Talukdars and their ryots only live in Talukdari villages. Hence, if there is to be an election in Talukdari villages, the voters, the members as well as the Sar-Panch will be from the same class of persons, i.e., our ryots. Should the Panchayat, then, enjoy mastery over us, i.e., the Talukdars, who at present are the masters, and over our ryots? If we are deprived of the powers of control we exercise over our ryots, the village buildings, the lands, and other powers mentioned in the Bill, and they are vested in the Panchayat, it is easy to imagine what harm our proprietary rights, and rights of possession and enjoyment will suffer, and though we are the landlords or the masters of the Talukdari population, we shall have to be under their control and respect their orders. Our position will thus be reversed, a result which will be quite apparent if Government will consider the situation with usual grace.

(2) It may be argued that a Talukdar can become a member of the Panchayat if he offers himself as a candidate and tries to secure votes from the electors. But the argument is not fair, because it is derogatory for a Talukdar to seek votes from people who are his ryots, and in the case of refusal by any one to vote, the present relation of a landlord and a ryot cannot be sustained. Again the Talukdar's dignity will be lowered, if a ryot stands as a rival candidate against him, and, securing more votes than the Talukdar, succeeds in getting elected. In that case there will be a rupture between the relations of the two, and should this happen, there would be trouble over the question as to whether he should be allowed to reside in the village as a ryot and this may lead to litigation.

(3) The village roads, of which the ownership vests in the Talukdars who employ Bhangis to clean them and who have granted them lands for the performance of that service, will pass under the management, control and possession of the Panchayats.

(4) By it the tanks, streams and rivulets, the ownership, use and regulation of which also vests in Talukdars, will similarly pass into the possession and enjoyment of the Panchayats, which is calculated to interfere with our rights and status.

(5) It deprives Talukdars of the rights of disposal which they enjoy over the land, earth, sweepings, etc., of the village, with or without charge and also that over the hides of cattle, and transfers it to Panchayats.

(6) The burden of the house-tax leviable under the enactment from the owners and occupiers and lands by Panchayats will fall directly or indirectly on the heads of Talukdars, because they are their owners while the ryots are their tenants at will and the lands in their possession are given to them merely for use and residence.

(7) On inquiry, Your Excellency will find that in almost all the villages, the houses in occupation of our ryots are built of clay supplied by us free of charge and on waste-lands belonging to us which revert to us when they leave or die heirless or are made to vacate. Similarly, the houses the Talukdars live in are also made of clay. Your Excellency will, it is hoped, consider that the imposition of a house-tax in such villages is very injurious to the Talukdars.

(8) Further the Bill provides for the levy of a land-tax. If it is levied from the ryot-tenant, the levy will cause hardship in the matter of his livelihood, which may lead to desertion of the village by him, entailing a loss on the Talukdars, and if it is levied from the Talukdars, it will be a new tax, as only tributes are leviable from them.

(9) The Bill further empowers the Panchayat to impose a tax other than a house-tax, if its income falls below the expenditure to be incurred on its establishment composed of a Secretary and other employees engaged for the proper discharge of its functions, viz., the cleaning of village roads and of lighting them and of the supervision of the construction of buildings, maintenance of schools, sanitation, etc. The expenditure involved in carrying out the above functions is heavy and the burden on villages to meet it will be unbearable to them and will ruin them. The Bill does not specify definitely the minimum population which will render a village liable to its application.

(10) The Bill empowers the Panchayat to regulate the use of grazing lands. The vesting of that power is harmful to Talukdars in relation to their rights of possession and enjoyment.

(11) Further, the Bill gives power to Panchayats of regulating the construction of buildings and streets. The bestowal of this power on the Panchayats is tantamount to depriving the Talukdars of these privileges, which they have enjoyed hitherto.

(12) The Bill empowers the Panchayat to impose fines and imprison men in case of an infringement of the orders and rules issued thereunder and it is for Your Excellency's Government to consider how much it will humiliate us if at any time, without any infringement on the part of the Talukdar, he is brought before the Panchayat to answer a charge of such infringement.

(13) The Police Patel is our servant and we pay him. His appointment as Sar-Panch is, therefore, very objectionable to us.

16. We, therefore, pray that taking the above representation, as well as our rights, into consideration, the Bill may not be made applicable to our Talukdari villages.

Clause 5.—The clause should stand as below :—

"A District Pleader holding a Sanad to practise in any one District shall be allowed to practise in Courts of other Districts on payment of additional requisite fees."

Clause 6.—For the words "Unexceptionable character" substitute "Good moral character" (Vide High Court Manual of Civil Circulars).

Clause 7.—Sub-clause (a). Insert the words "Both on its original and appellate side" after the words "In the High Court".

Clause 8.—Sub-clause (a) should be read thus :—In any Civil or Criminal Court.

Sub-clause (b) should be deleted.

To sub-clause (c) the following be added :—And in all other proceedings under any Act in which parties have a right to appear.

Clause 9.—Insert the following words "or any proceeding under any Act in which parties have a right to appear" between "Proceeding" and "Unless".

Clause 10.—Insert the following words "or any proceeding under any Act in which parties have a right to appear" between "criminal case" and "until".

From sub-clause (4) delete the words "With the permission of the Court". (Vide the Manual of Civil Circulars, Chapter XVIII, rule 9, page 258).

Clause 11.—In sub-clause (1) for "Not less than eight annas" substitute "Not less than ¼ of the remuneration agreed upon".

Delete sub-clause (2) altogether.

Clause 13.—Add "on demand" after "shall" and before sub-clause (a).

Clause 20.—In sub-clause (1) the word "shall" be substituted for "may".

In sub-clause (a) add the words "or any contested execution proceedings" after the words "in any original suit".

In sub-clause (a) substitute Rs. 2,000 for Rs. 5,000.

In sub-clause (b) substitute Rs. 2,000 for Rs. 5,000.

In sub-clause (c) delete the words "To the High Court from a decree deciding on the merits any suit or any contested proceeding of the kind referred to in clause (a) or clause (b)".

In the proviso, delete the words "or suits or appeals governed by the Dekkan Agriculturists' Relief Act, 1879."

Clause 21.—In sub-clause 2, substitute "shall" for the words "may in its discretion".

Clause 24.—In this clause, the words "gross moral turpitude" be substituted for the words "a defect in his character".

Clause 25.—In this clause, insert the word "wilful" between the words "of" and "neglect".

Delete the words "or otherwise" in the last line.

Clause 26.—In sub-clause 1, insert the word "wilful" between "of" and "neglect".

Delete all the words within the brackets and substitute the words "in his professional character".

Delete the whole of the sub-clause 2 including the proviso and substitute the following for it :

"Where the Court holds such matter to be proved, it may, if it deems fit, report the matter to the High Court".

Provided that when the Court holds such inquiry the pleader against whom an allegation is made may appear in person or by pleader or counsel".

Add sub-clause 3 as follows :—

"In any such case the Court may make such orders as to costs as it thinks fit".

Clause 29.—Delete the words "and not otherwise" and substitute the words "or by lien".

Clause 30.—In sub-clause (J), delete the semicolon at the end and add the words "or sub-section 23 of section 26".

Schedule :—In Schedule 3, Rule 6, sub-rule b, add the words "or the Court of a Mamlatdar under the Mamlatdar's Courts Act, 1906".

From Schedule C delete the words "or in the Court of a Mamlatdar under the Mamlatdar's Courts Act, 1906".

My Lord,

I have submitted to His Majesty the King-Emperor the first two of the three resolutions passed by the Bombay Legislative Council and the resolution passed by the Central Provinces Legislative Council transmitted with the letters from your Home Department Secretary, Nos. 910 and 961, Political, dated the 15th and 22nd April last. His Majesty has commanded me to request Your Excellency to cause the Councils concerned to be informed that he has received their loyal messages with much appreciation.

2. As regards the third resolution passed by the Bombay Legislative Council, I desire to express my warm thanks for the sentiments therein expressed, so far as they relate to myself personally, and to say that I have had much pleasure in communicating this resolution to His Majesty's Government.

BOMBAY, HIGH COURT
Pleaders' Room, 20th July 1920.

From

THE HONORARY SECRETARY,
The Pleaders' Association of Western India, Bombay;

To

G. DAVIS, ESQUIRE,
Secretary to the Legislative Council of
His Excellency the Governor of Bombay.

Sir,

I am directed by the Pleaders' Association of Western India to forward to you the following amendments which in its opinion it is necessary to make in the Bombay Pleaders' Bill No. VI of 1920 with a request that you will be pleased to place them for the consideration of His Excellency the Governor in Council and of the Legislative Council.

2. Sub-clauses 3 (b), (c) and (d) of clause 10 of the Draft Bill submitted by the Pleaders' Association of Western India (and hereto annexed) should be added as sub-clauses (e), (f) and (g) in clause 7 of the Bill.

3. For sub-clause 4 of clause 10 of the Bill should be substituted Rule 60 of the High Court Rules, Appellate Side, which runs as follows:—

"When a Vakil is prevented for any reason from appearing in any case in which he has been retained, he may appoint another Vakil to appear on his behalf, and the hearing shall proceed unless the Court sees reason to the contrary."

4. In sub-clause 1 of clause 26 of the Bill the words in brackets 'Whether' and 'or otherwise' should be deleted; and in sub-clause 2 of the same clause the words from 'Fine' to 'itself' should be deleted, so that the amended sub-clause 2 should run as follows:—

"Where the Court holds such matters to be proved, it may report the matter to the High Court."

5. In the Forms of the Sanads, A and B, given in Schedule II, the Nota Bene should be deleted.

6. Clauses 26 and 27 of the Draft Bill submitted by the Pleaders' Association of Western India should be inserted in the Bill.

I have the honour to be,
Sir,
Your most obedient Servant,

PRESENTATION OF THE BUDGET.

His Excellency the President:—Presentation of the Budget of the Government of Bombay for the year 1920-21 and discussion thereon. The Honourable Sir George Carmichael.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—Your Excellency,—I rise to present the budget for 1920-21. The budget statement with the memorandum and the explanatory statement has been placed on the table and copies of detailed estimates have been supplied to honourable members. The budget proposals were explained on presentation of the revised financial statement in March last and there has been no alteration in the figures. Nor was there any resolution passed by the Council which Government have not accepted. It seems to me, therefore, and I think the Council will agree, that it is hardly necessary for me at this stage to go into further details. I propose, therefore, to confine the few remarks I have to make to one or two general points. The budget has been framed as usual on the assumption that the monsoon will be a normal one. So far that assumption is proving correct except in certain parts of the Presidency. In the eastern parts of the Deccan and of the Southern Maratha Country the rainfall up to date has been very scanty; elsewhere it has been quite good, very good in some parts, and in Sind the inundation began rather late but is quite up to the average. It is perhaps too early yet to anticipate how the harvest will finally develop but this much is certain that there will be this year no shortage of fodder in Gujarat and Kathiawar and that therefore we shall not have to deal with what is nowadays the most serious consequences of failure of the monsoon. The second point to which I wish to refer is that dealt with in the last paragraph of my memorandum presenting the budget, in the printed statement. This budget might almost be called an establishment budget. Large grants have been provided for meeting the pay of all Government establishments in face of the great rise in the cost of living. As stated in the last paragraph of the memorandum we had provided 20 lakhs under the land revenue head and another 27 lakhs under specific heads for the revision of the pay of establishments. On closer examination this amount of 47 lakhs has been found to be quite inadequate; it is just about half of what we are likely to require. Now, it would not be, I think, wise to increase any further the already large deficit in the budget. We are drawing on the provincial balances to the extent of Rs. 93,74,000. The proposals which have been made for the increase and the revision of the pay of establishments are not extravagant, they do not go beyond what is required to secure a contented and efficient service. Now, if these two premises are granted it follows that we must make reductions under other heads in order to provide completely for the increased pay of Government establishments. Scrutiny is being made to ascertain possible reductions and the case is now under examination in the Finance Department and I am unable at present to say in which directions or from which grants reductions will be made, but it is anticipated that it will be possible to meet the greater portion of the 47 lakhs—the additional 47 lakhs, which will be required to meet the revision scheme. In most years in which I have been privileged to listen to the debate on the budget in this Council one or more honourable members have likened it to the flogging of a dead horse, because the budget was fixed and unalterable when it came to be discussed and it had already come into operation before the debate. I never agreed with this view as it seemed to me that discussions always showed where changes might be made with advantage in the future proposals. But in the circumstances of this year I am prepared to admit that there would be some force in such a criticism. Well, this is the last budget under the existing scheme. Next year an entirely new settlement comes into force. The revenues on which provincial finance will depend will be new. There will be greater freedom in adjusting taxation to meet the demands for expenditure and, lastly, the most important point of all with reference to the discussion in this Council is that the Legislative Council itself will be the authority which will give approval to every grant of expenditure which will be provided in the budget. With these remarks I beg to present the budget for 1920-1921.

BUDGET DEBATE.

[2ND AUGUST 1920.] [Sir G. Carmichael; Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas.]

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—Your Excellency,—In spite of the admission of the honourable mover of the budget in this Council, I make bold to offer a few remarks. The Honourable Sir George Carmichael admits that any discussion on this budget that is just presented to the Council would be, owing to the special circumstances that he mentioned, just like flogging a dead horse. I wish, sir, to put before the Council a few observations regarding certain items of expenditure and certain departments in the Presidency which I think require some sort of immediate attention at your Excellency's hands. I will first take the Department of Industries. That Department, your Excellency, has been organized as a department of industries for nearly two years. Before that department came on as a result of the Indian Industries Commission's report we had a similar department or at any rate we had an advisory committee with a special officer in charge of it. May I ask what work has been done by that department during the two years that it has existed? I had the honour of being nominated by Government to the committee which was called advisory committee for the department, and I may say that during these eight months of this year I do not think we have met more than once, and certainly not more than twice. The department when started was under Mr. Thomas and then later on with Mr. Mead. When it came to be a full-fledged department under the report of the Industries Commission Mr. Bell was put at the head of it. Mr. Bell has gone on leave and now Mr. Thiselton-Dyer presides over the department. I do not wish at all, sir, to indicate that the present incumbent or the acting officer of the department has not been doing his work properly. What I protest against is that in a department like this where we want progress and push from the officers concerned, the Government of Bombay should have agreed with the Government of India in transferring the post of the Director of Industries to that Government and in winding up the operations of the Munitions Board in Bombay. Nobody would grudge the Government of Bombay a helping hand in this matter, and I feel I am justified in the interests of industries and commerce and in the interests of the mercantile community in saying that the Director is being overwhelmed with work. At present that department is not a Bombay Government department and the Director of Industries is practically doing nothing or doing very little in that department where most urgent and earnest work in the matter of industries is necessary. Of course I am not certain whether your Excellency's Government has given your consent to this arrangement, but I hope that before the Government of India introduce their permanent arrangements in the matter of lessening the general pressure of work in that department, your Excellency's Government will be well advised to carry us over the next year or two.

BUDGET DEBATE.

[Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas; Sir G. Carmichael.] [2ND AUGUST 1920.]

What I, however, feel, sir, is that the Indian Industries Commission have submitted their report to the Government of India about two years back. That report is a most valuable one and one should have expected that in view of the numerous recommendations made by them the Government of India would have taken action under that report long before now. As the Council knows, we have Government control over the cotton trade of Bombay. I dare say it is not news to Government but it is to non-officials that your Excellency has received some petitions from some sections of the cotton trade in Bombay saying that now that the war is over the Government control may be removed or the control relaxed. May I venture to submit, sir, that this is a matter that is very important, not only in the interests of the cotton trade in Bombay, but also in the interests of the cotton growing cultivators who suffer owing to the indiscriminate mixing that is going on in the kapas or cotton grown in the districts ?

I should like also to refer to the question of fodder supply. As your Excellency knows, I had the honour of moving a resolution on this same matter about two years back. From a reply given to me at this Council, I see that Government have been able to stock only about eighteen lakhs and a half pounds of grass. I am told that they would have stocked more, but unseasonable rain prevented them from doing so. I only venture to suggest, sir, that this particular item should not be overlooked because a certain season has been good. As it is, in Ahmednagar the rainfall has been very short and I understand that there would be another stringency of grass there unless the Collector and the local people there begin to look round and do their best in anticipation of higher prices. I would beg your Excellency's permission to assert with all the emphasis at my command that the Government of Bombay should not overlook this matter under any circumstances or for any reasons whatever.

The question of export of cattle has loomed large before the public eye during the year we have just passed through. Owing to some exaggerated figures being quoted in this Council, it assumed a disproportionately large figure. But there is no doubt that the high prices of milk and ghee have been telling on the resources of the people, and in very many cases they are responsible for undermining the stamina of the people in the districts. The census of cattle taken in this Presidency after the closing of the last famine period shows that, after all, when you take the Presidency as a whole the decrease in the number of cattle has not been as big as was at one time feared. But I would submit, sir, that that is not all. The stamina and the quality of cattle is also a very important item for consideration, and I have heard it admitted by practically all that I consulted, either officials or non-officials, that much cannot be said in regard to the quality of the cattle. In the budget that is now before this Council I see that there are only two items of expenditure in the direction of cattle breeding. One is a special grant of Rs. 40,000 in connection with the Chharodi cattle farm and the other a grant of Rs. 34,000 non-recurring out of the wheat profits for purchase of cattle in connection with the farm at Bankapur. These two small items are about all that one could trace as having met with the approval of Government for any further action in the direction of preserving the breed of cattle.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael :—Might I draw the honourable member's attention to one more item? Government have entertained a cattle breeding expert.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—I do not seem to have noticed it. May I know where it is referred to?

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—The appointment of a cattle breeding expert has been recommended by the Agricultural Department and that has been sanctioned and an expert has now been engaged.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas :—I am very glad to hear of it. Before I conclude, I would just like to refer to the head of revenue under the item of Forests, page 10 of the copy of budget placed on the table of honourable members. In the first column, the item 'Timber and other produce removed from the forests by Government agency' shows for the budget estimate a figure of Rs. 37,46,000, while the item 'Timber and other produce removed from the forests by private agency' shows a figure of Rs. 50,96,000. The Council may remember that about two years back I showed by some figures that the average revenue received for timber removed by Government and dealt with by them was higher and considerably higher than when Government allowed the timber to be removed by private contractors. This higher figure of Rs. 50,96,000 on timber removed by private agency shows that Government are still unable to deal with the timber that has to be removed from forests in spite of the fact that the average return on the timber that is removed by themselves is considerably higher than the return on timber if it is removed by contractors. I would, sir, just refer to the budget figures of 1919-20 and the revised estimate of 1919-20. In the revised estimates you see, sir, that the item is put down of Rs. 49,17,000 as being the proceeds of timber removed by Government, that is, departmentally, and Rs. 44,50,000 as being the proceeds of timber removed by private contractors. If you look at the accounts of 1918-19, there also you will see that the quality of work has been higher when undertaken by Government than when the timber was removed by private contractors. I feel that the explanation for this may be perhaps a very simple one, that during these years the Munitions Department wanted a considerable quantity of timber from the forests and removed it for their own purpose. I venture, sir, to submit that if this could be done by the Munitions Department, which is practically a Government department after all, it should be feasible also for Government to do the work departmentally. The difference between the proceeds per unit when timber is removed by Government and when removed by private agency is considerably higher. I just venture to draw the attention of the Honourable Member in Charge to this matter.

BUDGET DEBATE.

[2ND AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas; Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah.]

The Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah:—Your Excellency,—It is gratifying to see under the head of communications a provision of two lakhs allotted to Sind for two roads, one from Karachi to Hub river and the other the Karachi Cemetery-Drigh road. We are very thankful to your Excellency's Government that we Sindhis, who used to get only a few hundreds before for communications, have come to two lakhs now. Some time back I moved a resolution about the provincial roads in Sind and that was accepted by this Council. But in this budget I do not find, except for these two roads, any item for the sixteen roads of the district local boards which Government wanted to provincialise. All that I find, in answer to my question, is that sixteen roads belonging to the district local boards are being provincialised and orders will be issued soon. I hope your Excellency's Government will soon see that these sixteen roads belonging to the district local boards are provincialised because communication in Sind is very defective and the prosperity of the province of Sind more or less depends on good communications.

Referring to another item in the budget, about the civil buildings on the old jail site, I find about two lakhs of rupees allotted for these civil buildings in Karachi on the jail site at Karachi. I am glad that after all a provision has been made in the budget in this connection, but I would draw the attention of this Council to a much greater need of the city of Karachi, and that is the building of the Judicial Commissioner's Court. At present the Judicial Commissioner's Court is a very old and rickety building. I think Government should take up its building soon. The building of the Judicial Commissioner's Court depends on the artillery being removed to Quetta, that is, when the quarters for the artillery are built at Quetta, then at that site the Judicial Commissioner's Court is to be built. I hope Government will give serious attention to the building of the Judicial Commissioner's Court at Karachi.

I would like to refer to one other item, the salaries of provincial service officers. The salaries of the Judicial Department have been revised, except that of the Small Cause Court Judge at Karachi. I really cannot understand, when the salaries of the subordinate judges, assistant judges and all other judges have been revised, why the salary of the Small Cause Court Judge has not been revised. The sub-judges are now to start with Rs. 300. Presumably Government has considered it necessary to compensate them in these hard times. One does not grudge that; but the lot of the mamlatdar or mukhtiarkar, who has to perform onerous and responsible duties, should be improved in the same proportion. The mamlatdar or the mukhtiarkar has to do executive, judicial and revenue work. His services to the administration are of very great importance and, so far as I know, in my part of the country there is very great discontent amongst the mamlatdars. I do not think this discontent amongst the mamlatdars is good in the interests of the administration. I am afraid, instead of doing any good it may do positive harm. Again, referring to the salaries of the deputy collectors, it is gratifying to see that the improved scale is from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,000 and they will be getting an increment of Rs. 25 annually; that is, after two years they will get Rs. 50, but looking to the revised scale of salaries of the Punjab Government, I find that they have given an increment of Rs. 40 annually. I think the present salary of Rs. 300 should be increased to Rs. 400; that is, a deputy collector should start with Rs. 400 with an annual increment of Rs. 40 as is done in Punjab. Otherwise I think the revised scale of the deputy collectors is worse than the old scale owing to the slow increase in their salary and the fact that the few additional appointments that are created are in the highest grade. More relief is needed in the lower grade appointments. I therefore submit that Government should try to satisfy them.

BUDGET DEBATE.

[Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah; Mr. P. A. Desai.] [2ND AUGUST 1920.]

Now coming to the branch of local self-government, that is, the district local boards, I find that Government have appointed non-official presidents in the Presidency and in Sind, and Government intend to appoint more non-official presidents. But when we come to the actual working of the district local boards, what I find is that though the district local boards have non-official presidents, they have no effective control over the administration. They are, I might call them, the repositories of funds. Budgets are prepared by the various departments, the medical, sanitary, educational, and so forth, and they have only to disburse money accordingly. I hope progress will be made in that direction too. As regards the district local board roads in Sind, I think, there is the same complaint as in the Presidency, namely, that they are in a very bad condition. No doubt we have lately received a special grant of Rs. 20,000 in each district, but that is not sufficient. I would point out to your Excellency's Government that more liberal grants are needed if the roads are to be in good condition. With these remarks I resume my seat.

The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai :—Your Excellency,—I should like to make a few observations with regard to the items of the budget which has been presented this morning by the Honourable Member in Charge. The first item to which I should like to allude is land revenue. The provincial share under this item is Rs. 2,44,20,000. Now, a lump provision for the revision of the pay of the subordinate establishments has been made, namely, Rs. 20,00,000, and we have heard from the Honourable Member in Charge that under another head Rs. 27,00,000 have been provided for this purpose. So, the total provision is Rs. 47,00,000, and we have heard this morning that another Rs. 47,00,000 would be necessary to provide for the revision of all the subordinate establishments. Certainly we are very thankful to Government for making this necessary reform. But I am sorry to see that no provision has been made for the improvement of the pay, or the salary, or the allowance which is paid to the village accountants. I have been pressing for this ever since I came into this Council. Since 1916 each year I have been pressing upon the attention of Government that the condition of the village accountants is deplorable. In most cases, their salary is from Rs. 8 to Rs. 24. But, at any rate, it is not even sufficient for keeping the body and soul together. The duties which are performed by these village accountants are onerous duties. There are several registers, the keeping of which entirely depends upon them. They are concerned with the actual revenue collections, and I submit that taking into consideration the work this class is doing and their miserable salary, Government should be graciously pleased to have some reform or some improvement in their salary. The next class of public servants which is unfortunate is the police patels of the Ratnagiri district. Honourable members of this Council would be wonderstruck to hear that, in most cases, their pay is only Rs. 24 a year. I would like to ask what work Government can expect from a man who gets only Rs. 24 a year. So far nothing has been done for the improvement of their condition. I hope Government will be kind enough to take this matter into consideration, and make some provision, at least in the next year's budget, for some improvement in the police patels' remuneration.

Then I refer to head IV and 6. Stamps. The provincial share of the revenue from stamps is Rs. 82,50,000. Regarding the charges for the sale of general stamps, we find that Government is spending only Rs. 1,40,000. That will clearly show that the revenue is six times more than the expenditure. We find that there is not a sufficient number of stamp vendors. There are only 1,200 stamp vendors in the whole of the Presidency, while there are 25,000 villages. This means that there is only one stamp vendor for 22 villages. This provision is most inadequate. The agriculturists who want stamps for their purposes are obliged to leave their villages and go long distances for getting stamps. I submit that Government should make some provision in the near future for increasing the number of the stamp vendors.

Then I come to the head of Excise. We have found that the estimated income this year is Rs. 4,30,00,000. One redeeming feature is that the consumption of liquor has declined by 2·2 per cent. this year. I therefore do not say much about this income, although it is appalling.

BUDGET DEBATE.

[2ND AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. P. A. Desai.]

Then, regarding forests, we are thankful to Government for the proposed establishment of the forest college at Dharwar. There was an absolute necessity for the establishment of such a college, and that necessity has been removed.

Then, coming to the head of Registration, the revenue from this source is about Rs. 30,00,000, and the expenditure comes to Rs. 5,07,000. Now, registration is not a department from which Government should expect any profits. Most of the documents that are registered are the documents passed by the agriculturists to money-lenders, and if the income is more than double the expenditure, I think Government should take it into its head to reduce the fees, and lighten the burden of the agriculturists as far as possible.

Then I come to the head of XVI-A and 19-A Law and Justice, Courts of Law. I find that under this item Rs. 30,000 have been debited as charges for special counsel. This was for paying the special counsel for working for Government before the Akola and Ahmedabad special tribunals. This Rs. 30,000 is a huge amount, and I think that if Government had engaged the public prosecutors of those places, or the senior pleaders of those places, much would have been saved under this item. It is not necessary that a counsel from Bombay should be taken to these mofussil towns to represent Government in their prosecutions. The prosecution did not require any knowledge of English law, nor were there any intricate matters to be dealt with. There were riot and burning of property cases which are tried every day by the courts of session in the district places, and I think that most of the Rs. 30,000 spent on this account is a waste of public money.

Then, coming to the head of XVII and 20, Police, we find that the expenditure estimated is Rs. 1,67,69,000. Of course, I have been saying that this expenditure is growing by leaps and bounds, and Government should see their way to curtail it, if possible.

Then, regarding the item of XIX and 22, Education, we are really thankful to Government for the liberal policy which they have pursued in making large grants for educational purposes. But, in making use of these grants, I think the needs of each district should be taken into account, and in this connection I would request the Honourable Member in Charge to take note of the fact that there is a great necessity for a high school at Bagalkot. There is at present a municipal school there, and I am told that a proposal has been made to Government by the Honourable the Director of Public Instruction that this school should be taken over by Government and should be converted into a high school. I hope immediate steps will be taken in this connection.

Then, regarding the item of XXI-A. and 26-A Agriculture, I should like to submit that, owing to the scarcity of labour, the lands in my district as well as in the surrounding districts are growing grass bound, and it is necessary that steam ploughs should be purchased and lent, one or two at least to each district. Unless that is done, the lands will not be improved, and they will deteriorate. Therefore, some steps should be taken in this direction.

Then there is the question of cattle breeding. A cattle breeding farm is necessary in the district of Bijapur. Your Excellency, the district of Biajpur is one of the famine and scarcity districts. If there is rain in Bijapur, we must assume that there is rain all over the world. This year, your Excellency, we have learnt from the Honourable Member in Charge that most of the districts of the Presidency are favoured with rain. But in Bijapur, we got only 2 inches in the first week of June, and not a drop since then. So, practically the whole of the kharif crop is almost gone. The effect of this is that the cattle are dying and deteriorating. Therefore, it is absolutely necessary for the relief of the cultivators that a cattle breeding farm should be started as early as possible. My honourable friend Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas has referred to the matter of fodder storage, and I hope Government will take early steps to improve the condition of the cattle in this respect.

Then, regarding the head XXI-B and 26B, Scientific and Miscellaneous Departments, I find that in the year 1916-17, Rs. 6,000 were provided for rewards for the destruction of wild animals. In the year 1917-18 this amount was reduced to Rs. 2,000, and in subsequent years not a single pie was spent over this matter, probably because there was the war, and Government could not spare the money for this purpose. If we refer to the latest administration report, we see that there were 1,486 deaths from snake-bites, and there were also 42 deaths from wild animals. In these circumstances, I should like to have some explanation from the Honourable Member in Charge as to why, in the face of these facts, no amount was provided for making rewards for the destruction of wild animals.

With these remarks I conclude my speech.

BUDGET DEBATE.

[Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole.] [2ND AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—Your Excellency,—I am not going to take a review of the whole budget as the preceding speaker has done. I will confine my remarks to a few items in the budget.

Reference has been made in the Council to the establishment of the forest college at Dharwar. I have been making enquiries as regards this item, and I find that the college is intended for the recruitment of rangers; and what is the number of these rangers? I find that the number is 175. The question is whether an expensive college, the buildings of which are going to cost Rs. 3,50,000, and the teaching staff of which is going to cost Rs. 5,500 per year is required for supplying the wants of a service the strength of which is 175. I think a college simply for training rangers is hardly wanted. The want would have been equally well served if a forest class had been attached to the Agricultural College or to the College of Engineering at Poona. Unless, therefore, Government have in view the training of others than rangers, the expenditure on the college seems to be—I will not call it a mistake—one that might very well have been saved by the institution of the class that I have referred to.

Then I find, sir, another item that has been provided in the budget and that is new agricultural schools. I find that these schools are to be boarding schools, and the boarding cost is to be borne by Government. There is going to be one school of this description attached to each district which means, eventually we will have 30 schools in the Presidency, probably containing 40 scholars each, and the boarding of all these scholars will have to be paid for by the tax-payer. I do not think that this is right. In the case of boarding schools that are required in the Presidency in the case of our agricultural schools, it would probably be permissible, as an encouragement, to charge the cost of the boarding of boys to the state for the first 5 or 6 years. After that, the boarding cost ought to be borne by the guardians of the pupils. The only assistance or the only encouragement that these schools should expect from the general tax-payer after the first five or six years, would be scholarships for the encouragement of agricultural education. I submit, sir, that the idea of continuing this free boarding arrangement in the case of agricultural schools should be discontinued when each school has been in existence for five or six years.

Then, I want to invite the attention of the Council to the special department that Government have for stationery and printing presses. I find that Government have kept a special department for stationery. Now, I ask the Council to consider whether the stationery that is required for public offices cannot be obtained from respectable dealers in Bombay and other trade centres. I also ask the Council to consider whether all the printing that is to be done on behalf of Government would not be equally well done if it were entrusted to private enterprise in the Presidency town and in the mofussil. I submit that these suggestions of mine are quite practicable, and Government should consider whether they cannot abolish the Stationery and Printing Presses Department altogether, and entrust the work that is being executed by it, to private enterprise in a progressive Presidency like Bombay.

The remarks that I wish to make with reference to another item have been already referred to in the budget. The item is the provincial loan account that we have with the Government of India. The position about this account is this. The provincial Government borrows from the Government of India money for advancing to agriculturists and to local bodies and others, and pay 5½ per cent. interest on this account; while they hold in the treasury accumulated balances of from Rs. 3,00,00,000 to Rs. 4,00,00,000. Now, I ask why out of this inflated balance of Rs. 3,00,00,000 or Rs. 4,00,00,000, a large proportion, say Rs. 2,00,00,000 or Rs. 3,00,00,000 should not be taken away and utilised for making the advances that have to be made to agriculturists and to local bodies and others, and thus save the interest charges that the provincial Government have to pay to the Government of India. The matter is already, I find, receiving, the attention of Government, and I think the arrangements should be carried out as early as practicable. If, out of the Rs. 3,89,00,000 that we are going to have as balance at the end of the year, say, Rs. 3,00,00,000 were taken away and utilised for repaying the advance from the Government of India, the provincial funds would benefit to the extent of over Rs. 17,00,000.

Then, sir, I want to make a few remarks with reference to the Public Works Department to which I had the honour to belong some time ago. This department, I am glad to see, is going to spend Rs. 1,72,00,000 in place of Rs. 1,44,00,000 that it spent in the previous year. But the Council must not be under the supposition that there will be a greater number or extent of public works with the increased grant than were constructed before the war. I find the public works expenditure in 1912-13 was Rs. 83,61,000. The prices of materials and labour have gone up to about 150 per cent. since that time, and for executing the same number and extent of works as were carried out in 1912-13 the grant that is available this year will hardly prove sufficient. I am glad to note that we are going to get a substantial grant, but with this substantial grant the extent of public works that we are going to get will be practically the same as we had before the war. In connection with this department I want to invite the attention of your Excellency's Government to the necessity of seeing that the expenditure incurred by the department is really effective and incurred on economical lines. I am compelled to make this remark by what has happened in connection with the drainage works in Poona. Your Excellency was good enough to ask a specialist, Mr. Watson, to examine the drainage and water supply works at Poona and to make a report regarding them. I have had an opportunity of seeing Mr. Watson's report in which he has made certain adverse remarks as regards the works as carried out. He has pointed out that the service and settling reservoirs in connection with the water supply works as constructed by the Public Works Department are leaking to a frightful extent. He has also pointed out that the mains that are laid in the city should have been 7 inches in place of the existing 4 inches put in, to carry the sullage water from 4 inch house connections, which in the case of some mains number twenty or thirty. This mistake should not have occurred, but it has been made.

BUDGET DEBATE.

[2ND AUGUST 1920.] [Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole; Mr. G. S. Curtis.]

Then, the city of Poona has got road-side gutters for surface drainage and many of these gutters have been blocked in carrying out the house connections. Many of the house connections have been badly made, and considerable provincial funds have recently been allotted, for correcting the mistakes that have been made. What I submit, sir, is that the general tax-payer is entitled to see that the money that he gives for public works is really spent in an efficient manner, and that mistakes like those which have been pointed out by the specialist, Mr. Watson, should not occur in future.

Then again, sir, I find in the case of the distillery at Khanapur, there are two items provided in the budget: an amount of Rs. 77,000 for pumping spent wash of the distillery and an amount of Rs. 42,000 for re-packing purification filters. I do not know the details of this scheme, but it seems to me that some mistake has been made in selecting the site for this distillery, and on account of this mistake such a large expenditure is now being provided for. I submit, sir, that if a mistake has been made, a recurrence of such mistakes should be avoided in future.

Then, sir I want to advert to the head of Education. The Honourable Member in Charge has provided a very large amount for education, and I congratulate him upon having secured such a large amount. But the side of education which requires urgent attention in these days is technical education. This, however, finds a very small place in the educational programme that he has put forward. The matter of technical education is probably under the consideration of Government, but what we pray for is that the consideration should be expedited. As your Excellency has pointed out in more than one educational address that you have recently given, we have had too much of literary education in this Presidency and now more attention should be given to technical education. The only provision that I find for technical education in the budget is the provision of a meagre sum of between Rs. 4,00,000 and Rs. 5,00,000 and this amount is allotted to the College of Engineering in Poona, the Ranchhodlal Chhotalal Technical Institute in Ahmedabad and the School of Art in Bombay. I submit, sir, that this matter of technical education should receive early attention from your Excellency's Government.

Then I want to advert to another department of Government and that is the department of development of industries. I find that the amount Rs. 7,77,000 has been set aside for this department in the budget. It is proposed to utilise this amount almost entirely in the entertainment and appointment of a certain number of high officers. .....

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—I beg the honourable member's pardon. What is the scheme?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—The outline is given at page 87 of the budget under head Development of Industries. What Government proposes to do during the year has been put down there. What do we find? We find that Government intend to appoint a number of high paid officers. In my opinion, sir, the correct way would have been to appoint only a few special officers necessarily required and the next step should be to start one or two small factories for demonstration purposes. I would have expected the starting of a small pottery or a fish-oil and guano factory in one of our sea coast districts, either on the same lines as followed in Madras. If about a lakh of rupees had been spent in setting up small factories in this manner, some factories of fish oil and some small pottery factories would have been started by this time. Instead of this, Government propose to have experts and pay them salaries of Rs. 1,000 a month and upwards. In the case of fisheries, Government want a superintendent of fisheries, a marine biologist and a costly staff to assist. Negotiations are in progress for the purchase of a steam trawler and for the appointment of a master and skipper and a first hand to work it. The latter is again all establishment. What I submit, sir, is that instead of this heavy establishment charge a better way would have been to start a demonstration factory just as they have started in Madras. Sir Frederick Nicholson has been on this work for a number of years. He has already done all pioneer work. We should take advantage of this and start one of these fish oil and guano factories as an example to be followed in our Presidency. These would have been more correct lines to adopt. The proposed specialists will certainly be useful but before they come in, a commencement in starting small industries should be made on the lines that have been indicated. With these remarks, sir, I resume my seat and hope that the remarks made will have some effect on the framing of the next budget.

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat:—Your Excellency,—The Honourable Member in Charge of the Finance Department has characterised this year's budget as an establishment budget. I wish to confine myself mainly to a few points arising out of the revision of the establishments which is the outstanding feature of the present year's budget. In the first place, I must say the subordinate establishments in the Presidency will be thankful to your Excellency's Government for having taken up this question very earnestly in hand and pressed it upon the attention of the Government of India for final permanent solution. Yet I believe there are certain points which have left, I think, a good deal of heartburning among the lower subordinates to which I feel it my duty to invite your Excellency's attention. In the first place, that heartburning is due to the fact that certain lower grade services have not at all yet been finally dealt with in regard to revision so far as the Government of India is concerned; and, in the second place, regarding the revision which has been already sanctioned, there are certain defects in giving effect thereto which possibly, if Government are very liberal in the consideration of the rules, it is possible for them to remove. Well, regarding the lower paid services there are two or three which have not yet been satisfactorily dealt with. One of them has been referred to by my honourable friend Mr. Pandurang Desai, I mean the talatis in the districts. I have received in the same way as my honourable friend Mr. Desai has perhaps done, numerous letters from talatis in the Ratnagiri district, so also from the Northern Division, complaining of their present state owing to the poor salary they are getting and the urgent need for revision. Now, in the recent general revision for subordinates I believe it has been laid down that the lowest paid clerk gets Rs. 30. I think it is time for your Excellency's Government to come to a similar decision regarding what the talatis should get under the revised scale. For, if it is necessary for the clerks to have Rs. 30 as a minimum, I believe it is time to decide what the minimum should be in the case of talatis, who have been given considerable work in the record of rights. They have some sort of status as vernacular clerks in the Revenue Department and I believe their case deserves serious and sympathetic consideration. The second class is the class of vaccinators who should also have better pay and they deserve early consideration. Their salary has been revised, I am told, only last year; but still, as in the case of the others, their case also deserves a good deal of consideration. Thirdly, there is a very large class of public servants, viz., the primary teachers. Now, one characteristic feature of the revision that Government has been pleased recently to sanction seems to me that they have cared more in the first instance for the better paid class of servants. Looking at the Financial Statement we see, for instance, provision has been made for the revision of pay of deputy collectors, of something like Rs. 2,75,000. Similary, for the revision of forest rangers Rs. 2,68,000; and a good deal of provision has been made for the revision of pay and allowances of the police department, which comes to Rs. 59,00,000. Now when the more highly paid services get such consideration the lower paid services, like the primary teachers, or talatis, require, I contend, still better consideration, but their case has not yet been decided. I therefore very strongly urge that the case of primary teachers should be soon dealt with. Numerous conferences have been held by the teachers and this question has been urged upon the attention of the members of this Council. Although other departments, other subordinates, have had their due, still primary teachers have been left behind. I believe before the next budget is framed, Government will take into consideration the revision, the permanent and final revision, I mean, of the pay of primary teachers and deal with their case on a liberal scale. If Rs. 30 has been fixed as a minimum wage for a clerk, a similar minimum wage should be provided for teachers and should be fixed once for all.

BUDGET DEBATE.

[2ND AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. B. S. Kamat.]

Having referred to these two or three lower paid serivces, I shall now, with your Excellency's permission, point out the defects which struck me in the circular granting the revision this year, for which provision has been made in the budget. In giving effect to the time scale and new pay, as announced in a Press Note, I suppose the whole of the budget is framed on the basis that the revision would be brought into force with retrospective effect only from the 1st of April 1920. I believe in this connection there is a feeling among the subordinates that effect should be given to the new scale from the 1st April 1919. Hopes have been raised—I do not know whether justifiably or otherwise—hopes have been raised in this respect by certain remarks contained in the Revised Financial Statement of this year, on page 6. On page 6 of the Revised Financial Statement published in March last by Government, it was stated that certain proposals were submitted by the Bombay Government to the Government of India recommending certain scales of war allowances and that effect should be given to the revised scale of allowances from the 1st April 1919. I wish the Honourable Member in Charge of the Finance Department will kindly elucidate this point for me by a statement whether it was the intention of Government to give such retrospective effect from April 1919 in the case of the war allowances only and not in respect of the revised scale of pay. Then again in Government Resolution No. 8311 issued in December last in the Finance Department, Government had invited proposals for the general revision of pay of the lower establishments. It was stated at the end of that Press Note that in certain cases Government would have to, or Government proposed to give retrospective effect to the revised scale of pay. Well, that Press Note was issued in December last. That also raised hopes in certain quarters that when this revision of pay was sanctioned by the Government of India, effect would be given to the revised pay not from the date of sanction but retrospectively, namely, possibly from the 1st April 1919. I am therefore asking this point to be made clear because in the Press Note issued last month giving effect to the revised scale of pay it is said that the retrospective effect would commence from the 1st April 1920, that is, this year and not last year. The next point is about the method which would be followed regarding what are called "advance increments" of certain clerks when they draw their pay under the revised scale. Now, there is a certain anomaly in giving effect to this rule of increments, and I wish the Honourable Member in Charge of the Finance Department would make some sort of allowance for it. Well, according to the Press Note and the recent circular which has been also published later, it seems that supposing a clerk is drawing a certain salary and has been recently promoted to that salary, he would get the advance increment according to the calculation of the number of years he has put in on his present salary and not based on the total length of his service. I shall give an illustration to make my meaning clear. Take the case of two clerks: both are drawing, say, a salary of Rs. 25 at present, but if one has been promoted to the pay only last year, from Rs. 20 to 25, so that he has enjoyed this pay of Rs. 25 only one year, and if the other clerk has been getting his pay of Rs. 25 for a long time, then the man who has had a recent promotion is worse off in the increments he would get than the man who has had no promotion; that is to say, a man who has been ten years in the service on the same pay would get according to the scale Rs. 55, whereas a man with less service but who was promoted only last year from Rs. 20 to 25 would get Rs. 45. This is an anomaly on which I think Government should make an announcement. The third point to which I wish to draw your Excellency's attention is regarding what is called the permissible cost. What is now declared to be the policy of Government in applying this revision to certain offices? Now, the heads of offices in applying the revision scale have to calculate the redistribution of the posts in their department or in the offices on a certain basis. That basis, as declared by Government, is this. They have to take into account the pre-war cost of the offices, and to it add the present percentage of increase, and the additional percentage which has been sanctioned by the Government of India, to find out the total which is to be the maximum, or what is called 'permissible cost'. Within that permissible cost they have to readjust and redistribute the total number of posts which they have at the present moment, and so fix the increased salaries of the different clerks as not to exceed the permissible cost.

BUDGET DEBATE.

[Mr. B. S. Kamat; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai.] [2ND AUGUST 1920.]

Now this is so far all right. But when in actual practice this is applied by the head of a department to his office, it does so happen that because there are a large number of posts on the lowest paid salaries, that is, on the salaries ranging from Rs. 30 to 80, there is a congestion and the holders of those posts have to linger on for promotion till they get to Rs. 80 and no further. The proportion of low paid posts is so vast that it is absolutely impossible for men who are getting a salary of Rs. 30 to 80 to be promoted in the natural course to higher posts because they are very, very few. The so-called revision is therefore ineffective. That fact was brought to my notice and I take this opportunity of placing it before Government with a view that although Government have given orders to the heads of departments to redistribute the particular posts, I think, it will be better if that redistribution of these particular posts is made in such a manner as to have more posts in the higher grades rather than a very large number of posts in the poorly paid grades. When there is such a large number of posts in the category of clerks drawing Rs. 25 to Rs. 30, there is no possibility whatsoever of men getting a steady flow of promotion and coming into higher posts of Rs. 125 and onwards. The fact is that the number of posts carrying the salaries of Rs. 30 to Rs. 80 is so enormous and posts carrying the salary of Rs. 125 and Rs. 175 are so few that the number of the former is say 115 while that of the latter is only 10 or 15—it is absolutely impossible for the low paid men in spite of the revision to get higher posts and retire on Rs. 150 or Rs. 175. That is a grievance, and I take the opportunity of bringing it to the notice of this Council.

As regards the other departments, I wish to make only one remark about the excise department. I wish to know from the Honourable Member in Charge whether Government is committed to the present system of giving away the liquor shops by auction for the next few years. I raise this point for the simple reason that in the coming years the whole basis of the financial position of the Presidency will depend upon the excise revenue. The present excise revenue to my mind is inflated by the system of selling the liquor shops by auction. It is just possible that in the new councils when the excise portfolio which is a transferred portfolio goes to a Minister and if the system of selling individual liquor shops by auction to individual purchasers is done away with, then possibly we may not have the same amount of revenue from excise for our general expenditure. The whole budget will depend and will hang on the revenue which we might derive from the system of contracts on fixed fee system or auction. I wish to know from Government whether Government are committed to sell these shops to individual purchasers for the next two or three years by the same system or whether they will leave it to the new Minister in charge of excise to have his own excise policy unfettered by any previous commitment and will allow him to give away the liquor shops as best he likes according to the system he might think fit.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Your Excellency,—More than one honourable members have congratulated the Honourable Member in Charge for the liberal grants under the head Education. Of course that is all right so far as it goes but it occurs to me as to what will be his position next year, or what will be the position of the Minister who will be in charge of the portfolio of education on account of the new policy which Government have announced in the last financial statement. I think your Excellency is aware what the policy is. The new policy is that the pro-forma account of the surplus excise revenue is to disappear altogether with this budget. It is said that the Government has been compelled to revise their policy as regards the earmarking of certain sources of revenue for specific purposes as being financially indefensible, and on this account it seems that the surplus excise profits which were allocated to education, sanitation and medical would entirely disappear.

Now I wish to say that this Council is aware of the circumstances under which additional revenue under the head of excise was obtained from the changed system of the disposal of the right of retail vend of country liquor. It was then said, if I am not mistaken, that the licensees pocketed large profits and that they corrupted excise officers, and that consequently it was necessary that Government should pocket the profits and devote the surplus towards laudable objects. Now, honourable members of this Council are aware that the public regard excise revenue as morally indefensible. But on that ground the critics appear to have been silenced by a loaf of sugar at the time in the shape of an offer to devote the surplus revenue to good objects such as education, sanitation and medical relief. Practically it seems that Government at that time undertook to atone for obtaining revenue from that source by devoting it to purposes which would be for the uplift of the masses in the shape of offering to them better prospects for primary education, in the shape of giving them more medical relief and in the shape of improving the sanitary arrangements of the Presidency.

BUDGET DEBATE.

[2ND AUGUST 1920.] [Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; the President; Mr. C. V. Mehta.]

Now I submit, sir, that the plea which is put forward, that the earmarking of certain sources of revenue for certain purposes is financially indefensible is one which I am unable to appreciate quite properly and I would request your Excellency to be so good as to explain the position how it is financially indefensible. I would indicate my difficulty upon that point. With reference to expenditure where we make certain grants we earmark them for particular purposes and we say that it shall be devoted to the particular purposes and we come upon the local bodies to whom such grants are made and it is financially defensible or administratively defensible to earmark a certain grant for a certain expenditure.

His Excellency the President :—Order, order. I am sorry to interrupt the honourable member. I am not aware that anybody has yet said that the system is indefensible.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai :—It is stated in the last paragraph of the Financial Statement presented in March last.

My submission is that our position at present is that we are in the near future likely to lose our expanding source of revenue, I mean the chief expanding source of revenue, which is the income tax, and there are hardly other expanding sources of revenue which will remain to us. Under these circumstances education, sanitation, and medical relief are likely to suffer in the near future and it is for this reason that I refer to this subject and request for an explanation why this change of policy has been made after once securing the revenue. It was a grant obtained with the concurrence of the Council for additional revenue under the head of excise and after having secured that revenue and having worked it for three years Government now seek to change the policy.

It looks to me personally at least a sort of administrative juggle. I have only to refer to one other subject, namely, the revision of establishments which the previous speakers have referred to. I think the grievances of the talatis and the police patels and primary teachers are very real grievances and I trust that in their case the matter will be dealt with early and in a proper spirit.

His Excellency the President :— The Council will now adjourn till 2-45 p.m.

The Council then adjourned for lunch.

After lunch.

The Council re-assembled at 2-45 p.m.

His Excellency the President :—Further discussion on the budget.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta :—Your Excellency,—I wish to make a few remarks in connection with the expenditure on the department of industries, to which reference has been made by the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole. I have the honour to represent the Indian Merchants' Chamber on the committee appointed by the Director of Industries. I think I must point out that the statement that the expenditure in the budget amounting to over seven and a half lakhs consists mostly of establishment charges is not quite accurate. It will be noticed in the first place, sir, that in the budget estimate for the year 1919-20 the expenditure was put down at Rs. 5,05,000. In the revised estimate it was Rs. 1,40,000, which shows that the amount that was anticipated as likely to be spent last year was not spent, and the reason for it was that an expenditure of something like Rs. 3,50,000 which was to be made on the steam trawlers for fishing—it was one of the points to which the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole referred—could not be undertaken in the last year. You will also notice, sir, that in the budget notes which were circulated with the civil estimates a recurring expenditure of Rs. 33,000 was provided for the demonstration pottery factory which is proposed to be put up in the current year. So it will be seen that the other matter to which the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole referred, namely, that he would like to see the establishment of a demonstration factory has also been taken in hand. Quite apart from these two points, to which he referred and for which he will now see that provision has been made, it is necessary to employ men with technical knowledge if you wish to make your industries a success, and I think, it is also necessary to provide for salaries which will attract the right sort of men that we require, and it is because it was not possible to obtain these men during the last year that the expenditure that was anticipated has not been worked up to. On the whole it will be seen that not only has capital provision been made for the purchase of the steam trawler and for the demonstration pottery factory, but arrangements have been made to obtain the right type of men who will see that the expenditure in the direction of industrial development will meet with results that we all desire.

BUDGET DEBATE.

[Mr. M. de P. Webb; Sir G. Carmichael; the President; Mr. R. P. Paranjpye.] [2ND AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable Mr. M. de P. Webb:—Your Excellency,—Speaking as one of the representatives of the remote province of Sind—I say remote because it takes two and a half days to get here, as compared with one and a half days to Simla or Delhi and only one day to Lahore,—I should like to give expression to the satisfaction which we feel that the province of Sind is receiving a much greater share of attention at the hands of your Excellency's Government than we have enjoyed in previous years. We see evidence of this attention in the provision of money for additional lights on the Sind coast,—in the provision of money for construction of roads in Sind, very badly wanted, and also in the substantial sums allotted for public buildings in Karachi and elsewhere. We should certainly like to see our new Judicial Commissioner's Court built as soon as possible, but there are still more important matters that urgently call for attention, and I should like to take this opportunity, with your Excellency's permission, of mentioning them. There are four things in particular which we in Karachi are most urgently in need of. The first is the payment of the arrears equitably due by Government to our local bodies—the Karachi municipality and the Karachi Port Trust for services rendered—which arrears run into nearly twenty lakhs of rupees,—not payable by your Excellency's Government, but by departments of the Government of India—and we look to your Excellency's Government for assistance in having the matter attended to by the Government of India as soon as possible.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—I rise to a point of order. I think that the honourable member is referring to what really is an Imperial subject and not a Provincial one.

His Excellency the President:—On the point of order, the honourable member is entitled to illustrate his argument by any reference of that kind, but he is not entitled to go further into an Imperial Government subject.

The Honourable Mr. M. de P. Webb:—I do not propose, your Excellency, to say more than merely appeal to your Excellency's Government for assistance in this matter. The second subject—a most important matter—is the provision of larger and better water supply, both for the province of Sind and the city of Karachi. The city itself which is at present sadly short of water, is awaiting the results of the experimental borings now being made in the Malir valley and the sanction of your Excellency's Government to the construction of an additional water conduit to Karachi. With regard to the Sukkur barrage and high level Sind canals project which I believe your Excellency's Government is giving the very closest attention to, we are most anxious to see a start made with this long overdue scheme. Perhaps the most important matter of all is the question of Karachi's railway connections. We are now looking first and foremost to the early construction of our Great North Central trunk railway from Karachi to Cawnpore via Mirpurkhas, Jodhpore, Beawar, Gungapur and Gwalior, and we would ask your Excellency's Government's assistance to secure the earliest possible construction of the Sind section of this most important lined railway communication.

These, sir, are the four most urgent matters for which we beg your Excellency's powerful assistance. I should like in conclusion once more to express on behalf of the Karachi Chamber of Commerce, which I represent, our great satisfaction at the allotments made in the present budget to the province of Sind.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—Your Excellency,—I did not intend to rise at all on this debate, especially as the Honourable Member in Charge of the Finance Department has told us that the present discussion is in an especial measure like flogging a dead horse, but I would only utter one word of protest against some steps which are being taken which will commit the future councils in a permanent manner. I refer to the large number of new appointments that have been made by Government, which will tie not only the Government as it is constituted at present but as it will be in the future. At the last session of the Council I asked a question about the number of new appointments that have been made recently and we find a list of about 40 appointments, and several of these appointments are not only temporary but appointments which will fetter the hands of the future councils. Now, therefore, if I make a protest in this direction, it is not like merely flogging a dead horse, but it is like saying that the horse should not come in the way of the new councils. Our new Government of India Act distinctly lays down that the new councils are not empowered to add to the emoluments of any of the appointments or reduce any appointments or make any change in the appointments made by the Secretary of State. Now it is exactly this that Government is doing at a furious rate in recent times, and I only wish to emphatically point out that this is not treating the new regime in quite a fair manner. With these words, I do not wish to take up any more of the time of the Council.

BUDGET DEBATE.

[2ND AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. S. B. Upasani.]

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—May it please your Excellency,—In discussing the last year's budget I had drawn attention to the fact that a disproportionately large share of our total revenue goes to the Government of India and a disproportionately small share remains for expenditure within our Presidency. Last year I pointed out that out of a total revenue of over 33 crores 22 crores went to the Government of India and only a little over eleven crores remained for our Presidency. Even this year the amount available for our provincial share comes to only Rs. 11,73,00,000 as against Rs. 19,68,00,000 going to the Government of India. I had suggested that in any new arrangement that may be come to, a more equitable distribution of the total revenue from the Presidency may be secured. I hope something in that direction will be done and that the proposals which have been made by the Meston Committee will not be readily assented to by our Government.

Now the next point to be noted in connection with the budget is the large increase in expenditure under several heads that has taken place. More than three years ago, my friend the Honourable Mr. Patel brought a resolution asking for the appointment of a committee for an enquiry with a view to the reduction of the expenditure. Instead of any reduction having been made, or an enquiry in that direction instituted, we find the expenditure mounting like anything.

The increase of expenditure under the head of Education is welcome, and we congratulate the Honourable Member in Charge of Education for having secured a large increase in the allotment for that department. As regards other departments, I do not think we can say the same.

If we go over the figures of police expenditure during the last two years, we find that it has increased from Rs. 1,19,33,534 in 1918-19 to Rs. 1,67,69,000.

Now, coming to the other heads, we find that even in the matter of land revenue there has been an increase during the last two years, in spite of famine having occurred only two years back. Even this year, the conditions are not as favourable as they should be, and I hope that the increase budgetted will not be enforced. The total amount budgetted for, I think, is nearly Rs. 1,54,00,000 more than what it was in 1918-19, and considering the present conditions, I hope that the land revenue demand will be reduced. In connection with this I wish to say that the expenditure on famine relief during the famine year was disproportionately small, and I hope more liberality will be shown in the future in dealing relief in a famine year.

Attention was drawn by the Honourable Mr. Desai to the very small remuneration that is paid to the village servants, who collect the revenue, I mean the talatis. But the talatis' lot is not so bad as that of the vatandar kulkarnis. The talatis are getting from Rs. 12 to Rs. 20 and even more per month, but the case of the kulkarnis is very hard indeed. I think something must be done to increase the emoluments of these subordinate officers if we are to keep them from starvation or from being driven to corruption.

Then as regards Excise also, the increase in the revenue is a matter for regret. The total revenue from this head in 1916-17 stood at only Rs. 2,60,00,000. Now it has mounted up to Rs. 4,30,00,000. This very large increase in the course of only four years, is, I think, not justified, and I hope steps will be taken to see that this revenue is reduced.

As regards Income tax, it is not open to me to discuss this head of revenue, but nevertheless it is a matter which calls for comment as regards its increase and the share taken by the Government of India.

Then as regards forests also, we find that the expenditure which stood at only Rs. 25,00,000 in 1916-17 has now gone up to over Rs. 54,00,000. It has more than doubled. The income has not proportionately increased. The fact that we have to spend Rs. 54,00,000 for an income of Rs. 90,00,000 is, I think, from a commercial and economic point, not very satisfactory. The whole of the forests are owned by the state, and probably very little has to be spent otherwise than on the remuneration of the staff.

As regards Registration, attention has been drawn by my honourable friend Mr. Desai to the small expenditure incurred thereon. The total income has risen from Rs. 8,37,000 to Rs. 13,00,000. The Honourable Mr. Curtis assured us, when I brought a resolution on this point, that the surplus would be utilised in part for an increase of the clerks' pay. I do not know how much of this increased income will be required for the increase of the clerks' pay, but if the whole is not needed, I hope some reduction will be made in the fees charged at present.

BUDGET DEBATE.

[Mr. S. B. Upasani.] [2ND AUGUST 1920.]

The same may be said of stamp revenue. The stamp revenue comes to Rs. 1,65,00,000, and the expenditure for its collection comes to only Rs. 3,30,000. We might say that it is the most economically managed department, but I think this economy is carried too far, and something must be done to remove the inconvenience to the public, to which attention has been drawn by the Honourable Mr. Desai, and was drawn by me in the resolution which I had moved in this Council for increase of the existing number of stamp vendors and the fees paid to them.

Then as regards the head of Education, I think the increased allotments, shown in detail in the budget, are very satisfactory. I should, however, like to know the details about the appropriation of the surplus excise revenue, which is reserved as a lump provision for educational expenditure. The total amount comes to Rs. 25,46,000, and the details given only cover a portion of that amount. Then, as regards particular items of expenditure, I should desire to know how much has been actually spent so far for the introduction of compulsory education, and for trying the experiment of teaching English in vernacular schools, and how far that experiment has been successful, and whether it is proposed to spend a larger amount on this experiment in this year; also as to what is being done for extension of visual instruction for which grants have been provided. When I moved a resolution in this matter I received an assurance from the Honourable Member in Charge that the grants would be utilised. I think action should be taken to give effect to the suggestions made by me in my resolution on this subject. I would also suggest the great need that there is for opening new medical colleges and law schools, considering the overcrowding in the existing institutions, and the need of prompt action to remove the hardship at present suffered by the medical college and law class students in Bombay. Adequate hostel accommodation should be provided for them, or, if that is not possible, new institutions should be opened elsewhere.

Then with regard to another medical item, I might point out that a resolution was moved by me and was accepted by Government to start a laboratory for examining the properties of indigenous drugs. I do not know whether any progress has been made in that direction. A committee was appointed, but little has come out of it, and I think that if a moderate scheme is adopted, it would be possible to give effect to the resolution.

As regards Sanitation, a large amount has been allotted, but I do not know how much would be actually utilised. In 1916-17 only Rs. 1,12,000 were spent out of these grants, in 1917-18 Rs. 3,83,000 and in 1918-19 Rs. 2,65,000. In 1919-20 Rs. 17,67,000 were budgetted but only Rs. 5,31,000 were spent out of that sum and the balance remained unutilised. This year the allotment is Rs. 23,63,000, and I hope that the whole of this allotted sum will be utilised. There is great need for sanitary projects in the mofussil, and I think that help on a liberal scale should be given. In connection with this I would like to say that the grant-in-aid to village sanitary committees is only one-fourth of this expenditure on sanitation. I think that it must be at least three-fourths of the expenditure, and if we cannot afford to spend as much as that, it should be at least one-half.

Then as regards medical expenditure, it will be noticed that a very large proportion of it goes to the Presidency hospitals. The total expenditure on them is over Rs. 10,00,000, whereas for all the mofussil hospitals it comes only to Rs. 8,27,000. Taking into consideration the population of Bombay city and that of the mofussil, I think the amount spent for the mofussil hospitals is disproportionately small. The need for increasing the expenditure on the mofussil hospitals, and also for putting the mofussil hospitals and dispensaries on a better footing than they are at present will, I hope, be seriously considered. Then again we find that on account of the I. M. S. medical officers engaged the expenditure has increased beyond reasonable proportion. It was Rs. 89,582 for Lieut.-Colonels in 1918-19, and this year it has gone up to Rs. 2,55,000 and in the case of Majors from Rs. 22,350 in 1918-19 to Rs. 1,08,600 this year. Then as regards vaccination, I have to point out that a very large burden is placed on the municipalities and local boards. The expenditure on local vaccination establishment is saddled upon them as also the greater portion of that incurred on the Belgaum Vaccine Institute. Considering their very moderate means, I think they ought to be relieved of this whole expenditure, and it ought to come from provincial revenues and not from the very limited incomes of these poor bodies.

Then as regards the expenditure on agriculture, it has no doubt doubled since 1916-17. but I think it is more in the direction of strengthening the staff than of starting new schools. A resolution was moved by me, suggesting the starting of agricultural schools in each district, and it was accepted by Government. But very few schools have yet been opened, and I hope that steps will be taken to give effect to my resolution this year as it is in the interests of the general mass of the agriculturists that this should be done. At present a good deal is being spent on the administration of this department for demonstration farms, but I think that if we wish to have any permanent improvement, we ought to begin with the younger generation. The older generation cannot be taught new methods so easily through demonstration farms and therefore schools for teaching scientific agriculture should be opened not only at the district headquarters, but also in talukas, and the instruction should be given in the vernacular so as to be available to the sons of poor and illiterate agriculturists. At present there is only one agricultural college in Poona and for admission to it students have to pass the P. E. examination before they can get entrance. Poor agriculturists have neither the means nor the desire to educate their children up to the P. E. examination and for these children the agricultural college is not accessible at all. Therefore, I think, that the best method will be to have some provision made for giving instruction in elementary knowledge in scientific agriculture in the higher vernacular schools or at least in the high schools up to which probably the student agriculturists can go under the present circumstances. Your Excellency was pleased to observe in your recent speech at Dharwar that there is need for improvement of the school curriculum so as to make it more practical than literary, and I hope that necessary steps will be taken for a radical change in this direction, so that the curriculum may suit the actual needs of the public. At present the education given is only literary, and very little is done to give any practical education.

BUDGET DEBATE.

[2ND AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. S. B. Upasani; Mr. P. J. Mead.]

Then as regards industries. Several of my honourable friends have already drawn the attention of Government to this subject, and I regret to have to observe that while most sustained efforts have been made in other countries even during the war, to do the needful in the matter, we are practically sitting with folded hands and very little has been done in spite of a special department having been created for that purpose. The reports received from the Director of Industries have been meagre and probably more or less apologetic, and I hope that the next year's report will show not merely additional appointments of highly paid expert officers for the department but some more tangible results as regards industrial progress. In Bengal private efforts have been made to send more than 50 students abroad for higher industrial education, but very little has been done here. I think it would be better if arrangements were made for sending 50 or 60 of our best graduates to other countries to advance their education than wait for the opening of new institutions. We might even work at both ends, sending out students and also by starting new industrial institutions and strengthening the existing ones.

As regards public works, provision is made for increased expenditure, but communications get very little. Repeated complaints have been made by us in this Council about the inefficiency of communications in the northern talukas of the two districts of East and West Khandesh, which bring in to Government more than Rs. 50,00,000 of land revenue and we have pressed for a bridge on the Tapti for each of these two districts. Early steps must be taken to remove this inconvenience.

With these few words, I close my remarks on the budget.

The Honourable Mr. P. J. Mead:—Your Excellency,—The department with which I was formerly connected has come in for a good deal of criticism, but fortunately I need not add very much to the able defence by the Honourable Mr. Chunilal Mehta. The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole is like the famous Budge, and 'wants to see the wheels go round.' As the Honourable Mr. Chunilal Mehta has explained, it is mainly a question of establishment. We are quite ready to start pioneer industries and demonstration factories as have been recommended by the Industrial Commission. But we must have the necessary establishment. Mr. Bell is at present home on leave, and he is endeavouring to collect both information and the necessary technologists and engineers and whatever may be required. Further it is only quite recently that the Government of India have communicated their proposals as regards an all-India Chemical Service, and an all-India service of Mechanical Engineers is also projected. This will form the common pool into which we will doubtless dip to borrow any men that may be needed for the department.

As regards the pottery factory, the Honourable Mr. Chunilal Mehta has explained the position. The site has been selected, and estimates have actually been worked out. I may even say that with a view 'to see the wheels go round,' some button-making machinery was taken up, cleaned, put into working order and an experiment made which has, however, not resulted in anything of practical importance so far. Then as regards the steam trawler, negotiations for its purchase are practically complete. Mr. Walke who is Superintendent of Fisheries, has already been down at Madras, and he has made practical experiments himself as regards the possibilities of preparing fish manure and extracting oil from sardines. But before you start an industry even of so simple a character as extracting oil from sardines, you must first catch your sardine, and I think the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole must admit that practically every industry and certainly a Fisheries Department must have a scientific basis and we must know more of the life history of our fish. He complains of the establishments which are projected and which have already been entertained. But in Madras analogous establishments have already been entertained. There is a soap factory working under a scientist, Mr. Menon. Mr. Hornell looks after the fisheries. A certain amount of knowledge is required before any practical experiments or demonstrations can be carried out.

BUDGET DEBATE.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas made a point as regards the amount of time that probably the Director of Industries has to devote to the Indian Munitions Board. That point has not escaped the notice of Government. It was fully discussed, and I may remark that various deputy controllers were supplied to Mr. Thiselton-Dyer and a personal assistant also at the expense of the Government of India; and so far as my own knowledge goes—I do not know whether the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas is in a position to correct me—the amount of time which Mr. Thiselton-Dyer has to spend on the Munitions Board is not considerable, while certain advantage is gained by his both getting into touch with markets, and also utilising, to a great extent, the literature and the services of experts at the disposal of the Munitions Board.

I will now turn to the question of fodder storage in which the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas is interested. Honourable members will recollect that in the press note issued by this Government the main fodder storage centres were given as, what we call the Nawapur area, a certain area to be selected in Gujarat, and an area in the Central Provinces which would cover the Deccan, and Karajgi in the Southern Maratha Country, where it would be possible to get kadbi at extraordinarily cheap prices, and shred and press the kadbi for distribution along the Southern Maratha metre gauge railway. The proposals have not been sanctioned so far but collecting centres have been selected at Godhra, Palghar and Mahim. This will supply the quantities originally projected for Northern Gujarat. As regards Mandwa, some difficulty has arisen. Our negotiations with the Central Provinces are not at an end, but the present proposal is that we should enter into negotiations with local traders and the rates at which the grass is at present offered—the grass I may mention is suitable for the purpose—make it quite prohibitive, and I fear there is great danger that the proposals for a Mandwa centre will fall through. As regards Karajgi, some difficulty is also experienced in arranging for the necessary machinery. However, we are making still greater efforts, and we hope that something will be done in time for the next harvest. The Nawapur area is fully organised, and terms have been drawn up for this area as well as for Gujarat also. I may mention that there will be a conference held in Simla very shortly to which this Government is deputing an officer, when questions probably of transport and inter-departmental transfers and the like may also be considered.

I now turn to the various questions raised by honourable members as regards the revision of pay of various establishments, and I will first take the case of the talatis which has attracted the sympathy of almost all honourable members. I doubt whether Government would accept the proposition that the position of the talatis is precisely the same as the position of clerks, and whether the terms that we are proposing to give to our clerical establishments could justly be meted out to the talatis. In the first place, the terms offered to clerks were intentionally ultra favourable for this reason that we considered that not only is the present clerk badly fed; badly supplied in every way, but that he is not of the class that we hope to obtain. The talati is probably the last relic of the old vernacular karkun, but his case is under consideration. As orders have not been taken, I cannot say what terms will be sanctioned, but a substantial improvement has been suggested, and orders will issue shortly.

With regard to the question of police patils which was raised mainly, I think, in regard to Ratnagiri, orders, if not issued, will issue very shortly.

The Honourable Mr. Kamat, if I remember right, raised the question why retrospective effect should not be given from the first of April 1919 in the case of the new terms offered to clerical establishments. He pointed to certain orders under which the temporary and provisional allowances were given such retrospective effect. To this I would say that from the very beginning this Government has dealt first with the most urgent cases. The menials and the poor paid clerks were all dealt with at once because it was impossible to expect that they could stand the strain. We went a little further with our temporary and provisional allowances, and we gave the retrospective effect to them, to which the Honourable Mr. Kamat has referred. But it does not follow that we should follow the same precedent—all precedents are dangerous, and extremely so in the case of finance—with all the clerical establishments and indeed the number of lakhs of rupees involved would probably make the Honourable Mr. Kamat shudder.

BUDGET DEBATE.

I may also remark in passing one point which perhaps has not occurred to all honourable members, that nothing is so expensive as raising the pay of the low paid establishments. They are far the most numerous. You may add secretaries or members without entailing much burden on Government. But if you touch the pattewalla and the low paid clerk, the amount runs into lakhs at once.

Another point raised by the Honourable Mr. Kamat was the question of increments. If I remember right, under the circular to which he has referred, increments are only allowed if a clerk has been three years in one grade. No account is taken of the number of years of total service. The Honourable Mr. Kamat asks, why? The answer is simple. It would have been quite impossible to calculate the results of any such proposals. We could have made no budget provision. Further, I think, it would undoubtedly be most extravagant to do so. Experience of the ordinary land revenue establishment teaches one that there are always, at present at any rate, a certain number of clerks who rise to Rs. 30 to Rs. 40 and there they stick and probably they remain there deservedly. They are not worth more. Eventually they will be eliminated we may hope. If the inefficient men who have remained on Rs. 30 under the present regime were suddenly promoted to Rs. 80 because they had 20 or 23 years' service, the charge would have been enormous and it would have been quite impossible to meet it. We could not have estimated the cost in the first place, but we could safely have surmised that it would have been more than the provincial finance could afford. That is the only reason.

It is necessary to remember the fact that the Finance Department has no widow's cruse, and the oil is running low. The figures of additional demands which the honourable member has quoted are probably on the low side. I am not in a position to give more accurate figures, but the Council may take it that resources are really strained to the utmost.

One last point, the forest question raised by the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole. He referred to the ranger classes and the amount to be spent on the Dharwar college for a small number of appointments. The figures he quoted were for the number of rangers at present in service. I imagine that the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole is not aware that the establishment is under revision and very large additions are under consideration. Further it is proposed that the college will take in students from the Central Provinces—the Central Provinces are not going to have a college of their own—as well as, I think, from native states.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud:—Your Excellency,—The Honourable the Finance Member told us that no changes have been made in the figures that were put down in the budget estimates that were presented to the Council in March last. I think there are a number of items that will probably not be expended at all during this year and that the amounts provided for in the budget will therefore ultimately lapse. I wish the honourable member had told us what he was going to do about the reappropriations or whether there are any items sanctioned by Government till now to which reappropriations were to be made and, if so, what items; whether there are any items in the budget which it was definitely ascertained could be dropped during this year and the amount provided for which could be reappropriated for other items. I recollect four or five lump provisions for which no definite provision has yet been made and those items run into several lakhs of rupees. I am sure many of them will not be expended during this year. At any rate I do not think, one figure, for instance, the amount provided for the Dhulia drainage, Rs. 2,00,000, will be expended this year. The amount will remain unexpended and will probably be available for reappropriation. If any such reappropriations are proposed I request that Government should first take into consideration the schemes that were placed before them in the form of budget resolutions at the meeting of March last and try to provide for such items. I hope the suggestion will be considered and if it is considered many of the items and many of the suggestions placed before Government may have the chance of being carried into effect.

The Honourable Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas:—Your Excellency,—I propose to confine my remarks only to two points relating to the requirements of Sind and will not take up much time of the Council. I have been specially tempted to speak by the remarks that have fallen from my predecessor, the Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud. He has shown, and I think satisfactorily, that there are several items of expenditure provided in the budget which do not stand any chance of being spent. Well, if that be the case, I want, with your Excellency's permission to crave your Excellency's Government to divert those items to Sind. Now it was remarked, if I understood the Honourable Mr. Webb rightly, that the provision for spending on public buildings in Karachi was not of such pressing importance as some other items of expenditure which he suggested. With due submission, your Excellency, I will recall attention to certain resolutions which have from time to time been passed in this Council. Now, whilst I am referring to certain requirements of Sind and drawing your Excellency's particular attention to these particular items of expenditure I do not lay any claim to originality but I am referring to matters which have been the subject of resolutions in this Council from time to time.

In the first place I am referring to public buildings in Karachi. Now I might recall the event which took place 10 years ago and which must be within the recollection only of the Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola and the Honourable the Advocate General. The very first proposition that was moved before this Council as reformed in March 1910 related to public buildings in Karachi and it was unanimously accepted by the Government and generally in this Council that public buildings in Karachi ought to be constructed. I well remember at that time the Honourable Sir John Jenkins remarked that this subject had been first mooted twenty-one years before making a total of thirty-one years. Now that is over a generation. Again the Honourable the Advocate General put forward last year a proposition which received the unanimous support of the Council under your Excellency's Government. He described the squalid and undesirable environments of the Judicial Commissioner's Court in Karachi, and it was unanimously accepted that this was a most pressing need and ought to be supplied without the slightest difficulty. Add to that the fact that your Excellency only recently performed the solemn ceremony, in connection with public buildings in Karachi. If, your Excellency, it appeared to your Financial Department that any of the items of expenditure that have been provided in the budget need alteration, then I most earnestly beg your Excellency to make a provision for these public buildings, at least for the Judicial Commissioner's Court in Karachi.

The next point which I wish to touch was also the subject matter of very great discussion and I may as well say accepted by this Council. I mean the roads in Sind. About four or five years ago it was pointed out to the utmost dismay of almost every member in the Council that whilst the Southern Division received a grant of eight lakhs of rupees for its provincial roads, Sind received only as many hundreds; only Rs. 800 was spent upon provincial roads in Sind. Ever since then honourable members from Sind have been from time to time pressing upon the attention of Government the great necessity and desirability of making provision for roads in Sind and it is a matter of the utmost gratification to me that I find in the answers to questions by honourable members, answer No. 12 to the Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein, that Government propose to provincialise sixteen roads in Sind. I say that is a matter for congratulation and for gratification. However, I am not a little bit disappointed that none of these roads have been provided for in the present budget. I wish that had been so. Of course we are thankful for small mercies, in so far as we find that the Cemetery-Drigh Road and Karachi-Hub Road have been provided for in the present budget. As pointed out by the Honourable Mr. Webb there is another item of Rs. 50,000 for roads in Sind also for which I am grateful. Now whilst I recognise the pressing importance of Cemetery-Drigh Road, because it is intended to have communication with the aerodrome, which I think, will be a great boon to Karachi, because Karachi will then be on the aerial route from abroad to India, I do not see the equal importance of Karachi-Hub Road. However that may be, I think it would have been just as well if Government had been able to see its way to providing some few new roads, which in answer to the Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein were promised to be soon taken in hand, because I find that all attention of providing roads has been concentrated on Karachi which, in my humble opinion, is not fair to the other parts of the province. There are some roads like, say, the Jungshahi-Tatte and Shikarpur-Jacobabad Roads which deserve equal if not more attention than this road from Karachi to Hub. However, I do not wish to take up the time of the Council more.

In conclusion, I join with the Honourable Mr. Webb in thanking and congratulating the Government for the closer and closer attention which they have been of late giving to the interests of Sind.

(At this stage His Excellency withdrew and the Honourable the Vice-President occupied the chair.)

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas referred to one question in connection with forests with which the Honourable the Chief Secretary did not deal. His point was with regard to the higher profits of departmental working. The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas pointed out that in 1918 a very large amount of forest work was done departmentally and that proposals for the current year involve a decrease in departmental work in spite of the admitted fact that departmental working gives the larger profit. I would however invite his attention to paragraph 18, page 11, of the Budget for 1920-21. It will be seen that the figures for 1918-19 were swollen very largely by famine fodder operations. The grass was extracted by the Forest Department departmentally and in return they were paid by the Revenue Department for what they extracted. This, however, is an unusual feature in the budget occurring in 1918 and 1919 and of course in the following year 1919-20 when famine operations were going on. As a matter of fact the Chief Conservator of Forests has been asked to experiment on an expansion of departmental working where this is not carried on to the extent it is in the Southern Circle. In the Central and Northern Circles work is done mainly through contractors but now the forest officers have been asked to undertake departmental working in the Northern Circle to see what can be done under the departmental system there.

With regard to the remark that the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas made as to the Director of Industries being overwhelmed with work from the Munitions Board I think that those who actually know what work had to be done realize that the Bombay Government were justified in giving the assistance which they did to the Munitions Board through the Director of Industries.

With regard to the fodder storage question I do not know whether the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas would like to have any further explanation in addition to what was stated by the Honourable Mr. Mead. It seems to me that the Honourable Mr. Mead's remarks have met his point very fully.

With regard to the question of putting the Cotton Contracts Board on a permanent basis, the matter is still under discussion with the Government of India. As the honourable member is aware the Indian Cotton Committee recommended that the legislation which they advised should be undertaken for the benefit of cotton cultivation in this country should be Imperial legislation and the question is still under the consideration of the Government of India. I have always thought with regard to the question of deterioration of staple that it would have been better if the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas had brought in the bill which he and I had discussed together, without waiting for the decision of the Cotton Committee.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—May I say, sir, that the bill was stopped as you suggested that it should be put off till the Committee's report was out?

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—My recollection is entirely opposed to what you say. I may be wrong. It was some time ago.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—I think I have a letter from the Honourable Mr. Keatinge that the bill should be postponed.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—The next question I have a note of is with regard to the provincial roads in Sind. Honourable members from Sind have all said that they are glad to see that Government have of late been doing something more for their distant province. They doubt, however, whether enough is being done in the matter of provincialising roads. During the last year two new roads have been constructed, namely, the Hub Road and the Malia Road; while the Maureypur Road is under construction. In addition to this, sixteen local board roads have been provincialised in the mofussil outside Karachi. The provision for these 16 roads is included in the Public Works Department grant for repairs. They are existing roads, I understand, and not new roads. They were maintained by the local boards, and now are being provided for out of the Public Works Department grant for road repairs. So it is not correct to say that no provision has been made for them in the budget.

BUDGET DEBATE.

The Honourable Mr. Webb referred to the three schemes, namely, the Karachi Water Supply, the Sukkur Barrage and the better railway communication to Delhi and Central India. I have no information as to the stage which the Karachi Water Supply Scheme has reached. I understand that it is an urgent matter. But it has not come before the Financial Department, nor do I know whether the Karachi Municipality expect to receive any aid from Government beyond expert advice from their engineers. I have not seen any proposal that Government should give them any assistance from provincial funds, and if such a proposal does come before Government, I have no doubt it will be considered with care.

As regards the barrage I think matters are moving as fast as can be expected. The project was I believe submitted to the Government of India quite recently.

As to the Railway communication the Government of Bombay are keenly interested in all improvements in the means of communication by rail and they are always ready to give what support they can to schemes for additional lines.

Coming to the judicial buildings at Karachi I think the Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah said that the progress has been stopped because the land had not yet been made available. I wish to say that that is not quite correct. The land has been handed over, but it is true that until the new buildings which the Government of Bombay are undertaking to provide for the military department in lieu of the existing accommodation at Karachi have been completed, the military must remain in occupation of a certain portion of the land. The military are in occupation of the land at present but it has been agreed that there will be no objection to the commencement of the building work immediately the Government of Bombay are ready with their plans.

The Honourable Mr. Harchandrai said that it was ten years since a resolution on the subject of these buildings was moved in this Council. I remember that resolution very well and also the late Sir John Jenkins saying that the case has been under consideration for 21 years before that. The present Government has been pursuing the matter as fast as possible. The present difficulty has been to secure satisfactory plans and designs, worthy of the great city of Karachi. That has led to some delay. I believe the designs have now been settled and Government hope to be in a position to commence the work very shortly.

The Honourable Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas:—Hear, hear.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—The Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein made another request on behalf of Sind that an increased grant should be made to the district local boards in order that these boards should be in a position to improve their roads. As I have said Government have proceeded in another way. They have taken over from the local boards sixteen of the local board roads for maintenance. He also referred to the fact that mamlatdars' pay has not come under revision. That is unfortunately the case. Orders have not been issued as to the mamlatdars' pay as the matter is under the consideration of Government. The matter has been held up for the reason that in this province the last pay of deputy collector's post has been Rs. 300, and that is the starting pay for deputy collectors which the higher authorities now propose to sanction for this Presidency and for other Presidencies in India. This did not to the Government of Bombay seem sufficient and at present discussion is going on with regard to this matter. If the pay of the lowest grade of deputy collector is to be Rs. 300, this makes it rather difficult to devise a proper scheme for the mamlatdars who come next in order below the deputy collectors. If a satisfactory conclusion is come to about deputy collectors, then the case of mamlatdars can be taken up. The whole case is ready but until that point is settled it is rather difficult for us to move in the matter.

The Honourable Mr. Mead has spoken about talatis. The Honourable Mr. Pandurang Desai referred, I believe, to the kulkarnis also. As regards kulkarnis Government must adhere to the position they have always taken up that they cannot undertake to give any increase to hereditary village accountants. The Honourable Mr. Pandurang Desai asked for an increase in the number of stamp vendors. But, I think, it was shown in the discussion to which he refers that the number of stamp vendors is not unduly small for the amount of business to be done. Both he and the Honourable Mr. Upasani suggest that Government should make no profit out of the registration department. The Honourable Mr. Pandurang Desai said that that revenue comes entirely from poor cultivators.

BUDGET DEBATE.

I hardly think that that is the case. A very large sum under the head Registration comes from large cities in connection with the land transactions particularly in Bombay city and the city of Poona.

The Honourable Mr. Upasani seemed to suggest—I do not know whether that was his intention—that we are taking too much land revenue, too much income tax and too much under registration. He proposes to cut down the revenue and at the same time to increase the expenditure. He must remember that money is required for the additional medical colleges, which he suggests and for his law students whom he takes under his particular care, and also for grants to the municipalities for vaccination. I hardly think it is possible to carry on in that way, cutting down revenue and increasing the expenditure. As I have already said the budget proposals are for a deficit of 97 lakhs.

The Honourable Mr. Mead pointed out that my estimate of 47 lakhs in addition to what is provided in the budget for the revision of establishments might prove insufficient; if the Honourable Mr. Mead's surmise proves correct it will be necessary to find still more money by re-appropriation and that I think disposes of the Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud's proposal that Government should take into consideration again the question of providing for the bull breeding farm on the Satpuras in which he is much interested and other proposals which were left out when the revised financial statement was prepared.

The Honourable Mr. Pandurang Desai proposed that steam ploughs should be provided for the lazy cultivators in Bijapur who have allowed their fields to become grass bound. There is a steam plough working in the Southern Division. It works with considerable profit to Government. But it is not right that Government should undertake industrial work. If it undertakes small industries as recommended by the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole it does it with a definite object for experiment and demonstration. It is beyond their province to undertake to clear the land of every cultivator. The proper function of Government is to demonstrate what can be done with steam ploughs and tractors.

The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai:—Will Government be pleased to ask district local boards to have model steam ploughs for the people?

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Government have a steam plough in use in Dharwar in the Southern Division and they are at present experimenting there with tractors.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole referred to the forest college as being too expensive. The Honourable Mr. Mead explained that the staff of rangers will have to be increased. This increase is necessitated on the introduction of every new working plan, and if we bring in, as is proposed, students from the Central Provinces, they will come in on condition that they pay for the training they receive.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—May I ask whether the Central Provinces are going to contribute to the cost of the college?

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—I think when it was proposed that our students should go to the Coimbatore college in Madras, the arrangement suggested was that Bombay should pay so much per head and I expect that this will be the arrangement which will be followed in connection with the Central Provinces students.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole suggested that the provincial loan and advance account should be financed out of provincial balances. This question formed one of the subjects for consideration by Lord Meston's Committee and this Government suggested that the Government of Bombay should take over a portion, not the whole, of the outstanding tagavi. As it happened, our tagavi debt, at the end of March last, stood at a very high figure, about 380 lakhs. The provincial balance would be absorbed nearly altogether if we took over the whole. So it was agreed to take over a part and from time to time to take over the balance more or less according to a definite programme.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole also referred to the fact that there were defects in the Poona drainage and water supply schemes which were carried by Government on behalf of the local body. It is admitted that there were defects in those schemes, but with regard to the Honourable Dewan Bahadur's reference to the criticisms made by Mr. Watson, one should remember that Mr. Watson was an expert and it was almost certain that an expert would find some defects existing. Mr. Watson came with a ful knowledge of the very latest practice in the matter of drainage and water supply schemes. So it was to be expected that he would be able to point out defects. Government are prepared to admit that there were defects in the schemes as carried out.

BUDGET DEBATE.

[The Vice-President; Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole.] [2ND AUGUST 1920.]

I do not understand why the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole criticises the location of the Khanapur distillery at Khanapur. That distillery is near a river. In this country it is exceedingly difficult to locate a distillery on a river which is not used for drinking purposes. In Khanapur the river water is used for drinking purposes and Government decided to spend money in sterilizing the wash from the distillery which is run into the river. But it does not necessarily follow that because this process was undertaken the distillery is located on a bad site.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—My information, sir, was that the immediate proximtiy of this distillery to the town of Khanapur and to other important villages in the neighbourhood made it necessary that this tank should be set up, otherwise it would not have been set up.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Yes, exactly; but that does not mean that the distillery is on a bad site. You would find in dealing with practically any distillery now that it would be necessary to make arrangements to sterilize the wash which is thrown out from the distillery.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole said that more attention should be given to the technical education. He commented on the comparatively small amount which was provided in the budget for technical or industrial education. It is true that the provision in the budget under that head is comparatively small, but it is not because Government have forgotten the matter. They have had the matter under close consideration for some time. The difficulty is to make quite sure that we are taking the right road when we embark on a programme. Immediately that decision is taken by my honourable colleague, then on his advice the expenditure will be provided.

The Honourable Mr. Kamat asked whether liquor shops would be auctioned for three years. The position is that after the decision to depart from the fixed fee system and to go in for the auction system, which decision was taken in 1918, the orders were that the shops should be sold for three years. The currency of the term for which the shops were sold will expire on the 31st March next. The auctions will be held, if they are to be held, in January next. The Honourable Mr. Kamat asks whether Government are likely to do anything which will commit the Ministers who will be in charge of the Excise Department when they come into power. It seems to me that it will be for the Ministers to decide what course to pursue with regard to the disposal of the shops. Before the time comes for holding the auctions the Ministers will, I take it, be in the saddle and in that case the decision will rest with them. In any case, if the existing Government have to decide the matter, they will not do anything which would commit the Ministers to a particular policy beyond a limited period.

The Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai, on the question of excise, suggested that it was quite wrong to say that the system of earmarking the surplus profits under the surplus revenue received under the auction system as compared with the receipts under the fixed fee system, was not a proper one, and he said that the earmarking of these profits was not financially unsound. I understand that was the position he took up, that it was defensible, and he suggested that Government had bribed this Council to accept the auction system. Well, all I can say to him is that he knows, as well as I do, that in the matter of a bribe the person who is bribed cannot very well say anything about engagements to the one who bribes. But there are one or two points to which I should like to invite the Council's attention in connection with this matter. The first is that in the course of the current year the present Government will disappear and a new Government will come into being which will include Ministers, and the whole control of excise will rest with a Minister. This particular revenue is not derived from a special source. It is impossible to distinguish it from ordinary revenue. It represents the difference between auction fees and imaginary fixed fees. The auction fee varies according to the pitch of the still head duty according as that duty is adjusted on a higher or lower scale. If Government wished to increase the surplus excise revenue all that they have to do is to make the still head duty disappear altogether. On the other hand to reduce the auction fee revenue, all that is necessary is to push up the still head duty to a high figure. When the department goes to the Minister, it cannot be said that the Minister is bound by this system. It was not a Minister who gave the pledge. The pledge was given by the Government as at present constituted which will disappear in December next. That is one point. A still more important point is this. The whole revenue settlement will be changed. We get a new revenue settlement and with it we undertake new liabilities. Provincial finance will have to undertake the whole burden of famine expenditure, of expenditure on irrigation including such schemes as the Sukkur Barrage and its canals in Sind and also the whole cost of protective irrigation projects which at present are carried out at the cost of the Government of India. It seems to me that under new financial circumstances and with new obligations, it would be impossible to consider that a pledge given under entirely different circumstances by a different Government should be expected to continue.

BUDGET DEBATE—BOMBAY CITY PRIMARY EDUCATION BILL.

[2ND AUGUST 1920.] [The Vice-President; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai.]

The arrangement of earmarking is financially unsound. The honourable member said it was defensible. It is, however, really unsound, because there can be only one financial well out of which the allocation of the money must be made with the full knowledge of the benefit for the whole. If the honourable member were to push this particular arrangement to the extreme, then there would be no general revenues at all.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—My point, Mr. President, was whether all these considerations did not occur at the time when the surplus was allocated to particular.....

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—I did not understand that that was the point that the honourable member made. But the decision to earmark this revenue was given in 1918. The Honourable Mr. Curtis, who has a better memory, says that it was in September 1917, just about three years ago, that this arrangement came into existence, and it seems to me that three years is a sufficient time for any pledge of the kind to cover. At that time the Secretary of State's pronouncement had been made in August 1917. I think also that at that time the question of diarchy had been mooted but in the very limited sense of having separate Councils at divisional headquarters. Diarchy was in its embryo stage, and I do not think that Lord Willingdon's Government could be expected to anticipate the ultimate form the Reforms would take. I think that honourable members should be satisfied that due regard has been given to the promise given by Lord Willingdon's Government.

The Honourable Mr. Upasani says that the hospitals in Presidency towns get Rs. 10,00,000, and that the mofussil hospitals get only Rs. 8,00,000. Looking to the figures, I find that we devote Rs. 7,00,000 to the Presidency town, and about Rs. 8,00,000 to the mofussil. I think, out of the Rs. 3,00,000 for grants-in-aid, the mofussil gets a very large share, because the hospitals in Bombay are Government hospitals or are maintained by the municipal corporation.

The Honourable Mr. Upasani also said that a bridge over the Tapti is desirable, and that it would bring in Rs. 50,00,000 land revenue. I think the Honourable Mr. Upasani is right with regard to the bridge being a very desirable object. I think the Public Works Department have already built one very good causeway at Bhusawal, and I believe they are considering the construction of another causeway further west. After that is finished, I hope that the Honourable Mr. Upasani will still maintain that the cultivator benefits so largely by the bridge that he will be able to pay Rs. 50,00,000 more of land revenue. He usually says that the cotton-producing talukas of Amalner, Erandol, etc., are unable to pay the low assessment which is levied.

I think I have now dealt with all the points, except one and that is with regard to the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole's suggestion that the stationery department and the Government printing should be entrusted to private agency. I am very diffident about the proposal. It is certain that if we had been in the hands of a private agency during the war, we should have had to pay very much more than we have actually paid. The department, as a matter of fact, is run on very economic business lines, and I think that if the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole were to look into the management of the stationery and printing departments, he would find that it is not a source of profit to Government, but an item of reduced expenditure to Government.

With these remarks, I conclude my speech.

A BILL TO PROVIDE FOR THE EXTENSION OF PRIMARY EDUCATION IN THE CITY OF BOMBAY (BILL NO. IV OF 1920).

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—In view of the lateness of the hour, I propose to take item No. 4 on the agenda. It is a small and non-contentious bill.

A bill to provide for the extension of primary education in the city of Bombay (Bill No. IV of 1920), first reading. The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.

BOMBAY CITY PRIMARY EDUCATION BILL.

[Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.] [2ND AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Mr. President,—I beg to move that the bill to provide for the extension of primary education in the city of Bombay be read a first time.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola moves the first reading of the bill.

It is peculiarly gratifying to me to be able to place before the Council a bill for the introduction of free and compulsory primary education in the city of Bombay. I cannot help recalling the fact that about twenty years ago, I raised the standard of free and compulsory education in this Council, for the city of Bombay, and the lines which I advocated on the several occasions that I addressed this Council on the subject are identically those which are now embodied in the bill which I am privileged to ask you to read a first time and refer it to a select committee to be passed in due course.

As regards the main features of the bill, honourable members are aware that the corporation wrote in to Government, intimating their intention of applying the principle of compulsion in the matter of primary education to the city of Bombay, within a period of ten years. They submitted that during that period they would make all the necessary preparations, by the extension of primary education, by the provision of school buildings, trained teachers, and various other materials which are necessary to impose compulsory primary education in a big city like Bombay. They asked Government that, in view of this intention, Government should respond generously in contributing towards the heavy cost which would be involved in applying the measure. After careful consideration, Government decided to deal generously with the Corporation in their efforts in this direction and agreed to contribute half the additional expenditure which that body may incur over and above what they were spending in 1918. As a necessary corollary of that arrangement, the corporation desired that an enabling act should be passed, authorizing them to introduce this measure whenever they found it convenient to do so. Honourable members must have observed that the bill is an enabling bill, authorizing the corporation to introduce compulsion in the whole city of Bombay, for both boys and girls, or for boys only, or for girls only, and, in the alternative, to apply it by wards or sections of the city, and to gradually extend it to the whole of it. Honourable members will realize that the question of the introduction of free and compulsory primary education in a growing city like Bombay is a very difficult problem, and that legislation on the subject ought to be based on lines which leaves the hands of the corporation free to apply it in such a manner as may be found convenient by the corporation, provided they keep in mind the goal of the application of free and compulsory primary education to all children, both male and female, throughout the city of Bombay. The bill has been framed on these lines, and it is now for honourable members to give it a first reading and to refer it to a select committee and then to pass it.

The bill has been subjected to some criticism in the press and I should like now to deal with it. It has been urged in some newspapers that the bill should make it compulsory upon the corporation to introduce free and compulsory primary education at once in the city of Bombay, both for boys and girls.

It appears to be overlooked that such a proposal is hardly a matter of practical politics. Apart from that aspect of the question, I should like to invite the attention of honourable members to the fact that when Government tries to force the hands of local bodies in matters of education and sanitation, they are subjected to severe criticism on the ground of undue interference with the self-governing character of these bodies. Surely the corporation is a public body composed largely of elected members whom public opinion can persuade to take any definite line of action they may deem desirable. If in this matter public opinion in the city of Bombay is sufficiently strong and if the corporation want, with a full sense of their responsibility, to apply the measure at once and to the whole of the City, Government will not stand in their way. It is a matter entirely within the responsibility of the corporation who will have to discharge all the obligations involved in introducing compulsion immediately. The only point which will have to be considered by Government will be the payment of the nine lakhs of rupees per annum which they have promised to the corporation when the extension of primary education reaches the stage of compulsion. It is a contribution which will grow from year to year, and I can assure honourable members that if the corporation feel that they are able, at an early date, to efficiently carry out the principle of compulsion in the whole of the city of Bombay both for boys and girls, and require that the Government contribution of nine lakhs of rupees should be paid against the estimated expenditure of eighteen lakhs much sooner than was anticipated, I do not think Government will raise any objection. Government are putting forward this enabling legislation, and if it is passed by this Council they will be glad to welcome as rapid an extension of primary education in the city of Bombay as the corporation is able to accomplish. This act will enable them to do so, and there can be no impediment in their way, so far as Government are concerned.

BOMBAY CITY PRIMARY EDUCATION BILL.

[2ND AUGUST 1920.] [Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola; Mr. C. V. Mehta; Mr. R. P. Paranjpye.]

With these words, Mr. President, I beg to move the first reading of the bill.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta:—Mr. President,—I have great pleasure in supporting the first reading of this bill. I am glad the Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola has dealt with the question of leaving the corporation free in the matter of applying compulsion at once or at a future date when it is convenient. I think it must be remembered that there are various difficulties in attempting to apply compulsion at once. There is the question of housing, of finding suitable and sufficient number of trained teachers, and I might also say that there is the necessity for a response from the public, however earnest may be the wish of the corporation for the immediate application of compulsion. I am glad to be able to say that the corporation are now finding that response. When the corporation approached Government less than two years ago for financial assistance, they laid down a programme which would make the application of compulsion possible within a period of ten years. I am also glad to be able to say that the schools committee of the corporation are anxious to introduce free and compulsory education long before that time, and I hope that this will be done for both boys and girls at an early date.

With these remarks I have much pleasure in supporting the first reading of the bill.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—Sir,—I have also very great pleasure in supporting the first reading of this bill, and I voice the hope as a resident, not of Bombay, but of the mofussil, that the bill will be put into operation at a very early date. Two or three years ago we passed a bill for the introduction of compulsory primary education in the area of district municipalities, but we find that the act has been brought into operation in one or two places only. The high hopes that we founded upon the passing of that act unfortunately have not yet been fulfilled. There has been in this very city of Poona a great deal of controversy about the way in which that act should be introduced, whether it should be introduced for boys only or for boys and girls simultaneously. I hope that in the city of Bombay no such controversy will arise and that the public of Bombay and the corporation will work together and introduce this bill at a very early date. In the present Council we could hardly go further than introducing an enabling bill, and so far as I can see, it has been practically drafted on the lines of the old bill. But I do hope that before very long we shall not be contented with a bill of a merely enabling nature and that public opinion will require even defaulting local bodies to introduce compulsion, whether they wish it or no, because this is an object which cannot be all left to the particular bodies concerned. Of course I am speaking with a little diffidence, but I do trust that the fate of this bill, not so far as the passing of it is concerned but the putting of it into actual practice, will be more fortunate than the fate of the other bill.

With these words I have great pleasure in supporting the first reading of the bill.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Sir,—It is very interesting to find the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye advocating that the measure should be forced down the throats of the corporation which is a largely elected local body. It is forgotten that the application of this principle, though sound in theory, may be found in practice to be unsuitable by representative Councillors. No one would welcome more cordially than myself the introduction of compulsion in primary education throughout the Presidency. My views on that point are perfectly well known. But I do not think that the argument that the Legislature should force down the throats of largely elected local bodies any measures of this character, will commend itself to many. I can, however, tell the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye from my personal knowledge that the corporation, as constituted at present, is very keen and enthusiastic in the matter (hear, hear), and if they can possibly manage it—there are serious difficulties in the way—they will not delay applying the provisions of this bill to the city of Bombay.

I may say one word more, sir. As honourable members will observe, one part of the amending bill deals with the enlargement of the schools committee which will have to carry out these measures, and it is proposed to authorize the corporation to select four educationists from outside their own body, two being gentlemen and two ladies. It is a minor part of this bill which has been agreed to in consideration of the handsome grant that Government are making towards the promotion of primary education in the city, and I do trust that this Council will pass this bill when it comes from the select committee.

Bill read a first time.

The motion for the first reading of the bill was then put to the vote and carried.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola :—Sir,—I beg to move that the bill be referred to a select committee consisting of the Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta, the Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye, the Honourable Sir Dinshaw M. Petit, the Honourable Mr. S. K. Barodawalla, the Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji, the Honourable Major C. Fernandes, the Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna, the Honourable Mr. H. P. W. Macnaghten, the Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh, the Honourable Mr. J. G. Covernton, and the mover, with instructions to report by the 1st September 1920.

Bill referred to a select committee.

The motion to refer the bill to a select committee was then put to the vote and carried.

A BILL TO AMEND THE BOMBAY TOWN PLANNING ACT, 1915 (BILL NO. V OF 1920).

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—A Bill to amend the Bombay Town Planning Act, 1915 (Bill No. V of 1920). First reading. The Honourable Mr. Curtis.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis :—Mr. Chairman,—I rise to propose the first reading of a small bill which has been drafted to remedy certain defects in the actual working of the Act of 1915. The statement of objects and reasons will show what has been aimed at. Shortly speaking, clause 2 interpolates certain words in sub-section (1) of section 15 in order to deal with cases in which owners of certain plots, who were either bought out or given different plots in the final allotment sold the right to excavate earth from their original plots and so depreciated the value of their holdings. The object of the amendment is to enable allowance to be made for such depreciation. Clause 3 is practically a redraft of section 17 of Bombay Act I of 1915. Clause 4 deals with cases in which experience has shown that certain improvements contemplated by the town planning scheme should be taken into consideration, and as it is not possible to provide for every contingency, it is proposed to regulate by rule the manner in which estimates under section 19 of the Act should be made. Clause 5 (a). The amendment is consequential.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis moves the first reading of the bill.

Bill read a first time.

The first reading of the bill was then put to the vote and carried.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—As this Council has approved the first reading of the bill, I beg to move that the bill be referred to a select committee consisting of the Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta, the Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai, the Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat, the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas, the Honourable Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe, the Honourable Mr. P. J. Mead, the Honourable Sir Thomas J. Strangman, the Honourable Mr. E. G. Turner, and the mover, with instructions to report by the 1st of September.

Bill referred to a select committee.

The motion to refer the bill to a select committee was then put to the vote and carried.

A BILL FURTHER TO AMEND THE BOMBAY TOWN PLANNING ACT, 1915 (BILL NO. VIII OF 1920).

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael) :—A bill further to amend the Bombay Town Planning Act, Bill No. VIII of 1920. The Honourable Mr. Curtis.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis :—Sir,—this is another small bill the need for which is obvious. In one or two cases in Bombay proposals have been made for the fusion of areas under one local authority. It has been found it is impossible to give effect to these proposals because one or more local authorities concerned had under execution schemes under the Town Planning Act. The matter was referred to the highest legal authority and it was held that no local authority can be fused in any other local authority until the town planning scheme under each particular area had been entirely completed. It is in order to remedy this obvious defect in this act that this proposal has been made, the result of which will be that when the amendment is made, local authorities in any particular area will be able to take over a town planning scheme or part of a town planning scheme initiated by another local authority which has ceased to exist or has ceased to have jurisdiction over any area included in such a scheme. I beg to move that the bill be read a first time.

Bill read a first time.

The motion for the first reading of the bill was then put to the vote and carried.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Mr. Chairman,—as the Council has approved the first reading of the bill I beg to propose that it be referred to the same select committee as the other bill with instructions to report on the 1st September.

Bill referred to a select committee.

The motion that the bill be referred to a select committee was then put to the vote and carried.

A BILL FURTHER TO AMEND THE BOMBAY SMOKE-NUISANCES ACT, 1912 (BILL NO. IX OF 1920).

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—A Bill to amend the Bombay Smoke-nuisances Act, 1912, (Bill No. IX of 1920). The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Sir,—I beg to move that the bill to amend the Bombay Smoke-nuisances Act be read a first time. Honourable members will have observed from the statement of objects and reasons that it is proposed to amend the rules and regulations reducing the period during which ocean going steamers can emit thick smoke beyond a given density so that the public may not be inconvenienced longer than is necessary. At the time when the original act was passed there was not sufficient experience for the framing of this bill and the rules. That experience has now been gained and it is proposed by the amendment of this act and the framing of the rule noted in the statement of objects and reasons, to introduce necessary improvements. The bill is not contentious and I hope honourable members will agree to give it second and third readings at this meeting.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola moves the first reading of the bill.

Bill read a first time.

The motion for the first reading of the bill was then put to the vote and carried.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—A Bill further to amend the Bombay Smoke-nuisances Act, 1912 (Bill No. IX of 1920). Second reading. The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Sir,—I beg to move that this bill be now read a second time.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola moves the second reading of the bill.

Bill read a second time.

The motion for the second reading of the bill was then put to the vote and carried.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Sir, I now propose that the bill be read clause by clause.

Bill read clause by clause.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Clause 1. The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Mr. President,—I have got a formal amendment to move. It is that "In clause 1 substitute '1920' for '192.'"

The amendment was put to the vote and carried.

Clause 1 was then put to the vote and carried.

Clauses 2 and 3 were then severally put to the vote and carried.

The preamble was then put to the vote and carried.

SMOKE-NUISANCES BILL—DISTRICT POLICE BILL.

[The Vice-President; Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola; Mr. S. B. Upasani; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai.] [2ND AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—A Bill further to amend the Bombay Smoke-nuisances Act, 1912 (Bill No. IX of 1920). Third reading. The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.

The Honourale Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola moves the third reading of the bill.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—With your permission, sir, I now beg to move that the bill be read a third time and passed.

Bill read a third time.

The motion for the third reading of the bill was then put to the vote and carried.

A BILL FURTHER TO AMEND THE BOMBAY DISTRICT POLICE ACT, 1890 (BILL NO. X OF 1920).

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):— A Bill further to amend the Bombay District Police Act, 1890 (Bill No. X of 1920). First reading.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael moves the first reading of the bill.

This bill has two objects. The first, which is the more important, is to enable the Government to appoint an additional superintendent of police in the districts of which the headquarters are large cities. There are three such districts in this Presidency, one is Karachi, another is Ahmedabad and the third is Poona. It is considered that it would be a very great advantage if instead of having one superintendent for the whole district including the city there were two superintendents of police, one for the city area and one for the district outside. The question was referred to at the time of the discussion of the revised financial statement because provision was made for the grant required to give effect to this scheme of having additional superintendents of police in these three large cities. The Police Act as it stands at present does not allow for the separate appointment of superintendents for those separate areas. It provides for one superintendent only in each district and it is impossible to divide up the district, to make two districts out of one district, because the district is in the charge of one District Magistrate.

The second object proposed to be achieved by the bill is the prevention of smoking and spitting in public buildings. As the law stands at present in the mofussil there are no means of preventing these nuisances. Recently we dealt with the city of Bombay and now it is proposed to apply a similar provision to the mofussil.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—Sir,—So far as clause 2 is concerned, I am sorry I cannot see my way to support the bill. I think that it ought not to be necessary to have separate superintendents for the proposed cities. District superintendents have a large staff at their disposal at present. Their duties are not as numerous as those of the District Collector and Magistrate and when we do not require separate Collectors for the cities in question there is apparently no reason why separate district superintendents should be needed for them. The district superintendents have generally experienced deputy superintendents to work as their personal assistants besides assistant superintendents, inspectors and sub-inspectors. If necessary an extra deputy superintendent may be put in separate charge of each of the towns for which separate district superintendents are proposed. The deputy superintendents are experienced officers, specially promoted for special work. They can keep order in the city. I do not think any necessity has been shown to justify the proposed innovation. Already the expenditure of the police department has been increased beyond all measure and this further expenditure will not be a move in the right direction. Assistant superintendents of police are officers who correspond to the assistant and deputy collectors and when these divisional officers can manage their divisions I do not know why the deputy superintendents and assistant superintendents should not be able to manage one city. That being the case, the provision proposed in this clause would appear to be superfluous and unnecessary.

As to the other amendment proposed in the bill I have no objection to urge at this stage.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Sir,—I am inclined to think that this amendment, the amendment of section 3 of the District Police Act, seems to me unnecessary. I agree with the Honourable Mr. Upasani that there is ample provision for assisting the superintendent of police by appointment of an assistant or deputy superintendent of police and there is no reason why you should have a separate superintendent of police for a city. Their assistants can do that work as well. At present there are only inspectors of police in charge of cities and if that arrangement is found unsuitable you can very well, without amending the act, appoint assistant superintendents in the large cities. It is simply multiplying large appointments and increasing the cost of establishment charges by undertaking such an amendment. It is not absolutely necessary. Their assistants can look to it. Therefore on principle I oppose the first reading of this bill.

DISTRICT POLICE BILL.

Again, with reference to clause 4, the amendment proposes to prevent smoking and spitting in any building belonging to Government or appropriated for public purposes in contravention of notice. I do not think any case has been made out by any complaints in public papers or anywhere else of people indulging in spitting in public buildings, and there is no reason why an amendment of this sort should be undertaken. It would simply give a handle to the lower subordinates of the police department to annoy people when they choose. I would not like to give such a handle in the hands of such people.

I am therefore entirely against the principle of this bill and I oppose the first reading.

The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai:—Mr. President,—I also rise to oppose the first reading of this bill. We have seen from the budget that the expenditure which is provided for the police department is Rs. 1,67,00,000. We do not want to have more superintendents of police. The work can be efficiently done by the assistants or the deputies who are men of experience and I therefore strongly oppose the first reading as far as this clause 3 is concerned. Now coming to clause 4, it says, "Smokes or spits in any building belonging to Government." In Bijapur there are several mosques and several places which belong to Government. And if this provision as it stands is passed, it might mean that a visitor who goes there to see the building is not to spit or not to smoke there. It is ridiculous. I therefore submit that the clause as it stands should not be passed. With these words I strongly oppose this bill.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—Sir,—I am giving my opinion on this bill as an outsider not connected with police administration. From the commonsense point of view it strikes me that the bill is unnecessary and I hold with the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai that the police work in connection with large cities can be efficiently done by assistant superintendents working under the orders of the district superintendent of police. I do not see why a special district superintendent of police for a city like Poona or Ahmedabad is necessary. That will involve giving him a big building for his office. It will also involve giving him a set of clerks and in places like Poona he will perhaps want a fan over his head. Provision of separate superintendents should not therefore be made in the interests of economy. I think that an assistant superintendent of police will do very well for doing police work in large cities like Karachi and Poona.

Then as regards clause 4, the Council may be informed that there are several public places which are meant for district ryots to use and sit in as for instance, the ryot sheds of mamlatdars' kacheris or subordinate judges' courts where a ryot has to wait for hours together. If a district magistrate puts a notice according to this clause in a kacheri or court it means that ryots will be prevented from smoking their bidis for hours together while waiting in the ryot sheds for their business which will be a great hardship. I think therefore that clause 4 of the bill is very harmful. I therefore oppose the first reading of this bill.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud:—Mr. President,—I am sorry I cannot see my way to agree with clause 4 of this bill. This clause is principally intended to prevent an ordinary ryot from smoking or spitting in a public building. But it is so unhappily worded that it may prevent a head of an office from doing that. An officer has to keep himself in the building for several hours together at a time and there are several officers who would not go without a smoke at a stretch for several hours. Therefore the provisions might operate hardly against a head of an office than even the poor ryots and I submit that it is a great hardship to have complicated rules and laws for the mofussil which would cause harm in great many cases. The police have in their hands several such small instruments by which they can easily annoy the ryots and any addition to such instruments is not a step in advance.

The Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji:—Sir,—I also rise to oppose clause 4 of the bill as it is likely to cause a great deal of hardship. Once I remember while sitting in the court as an honorary magistrate in Bombay when some 20 or 30 persons were brought before me for smoking in the verandah of the court-house and I can imagine the hardship if this clause is passed that will be experienced by the people who visit several of these places, especially the public places as mentioned in the clause.

The Honourable Shaikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah:—Sir,—I have heard the previous speakers and most of them have objected to clause 3 which deals with the appointment of additional superintendents of police. My honourable friend Rao Saheb Harilal Desai asked where was the necessity of appointing superintendents of police. Why not have inspectors of police? And there were other suggestions as to having deputies or assistants.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—I did not say inspectors.

The Honourable Shaikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah:—I know somebody said so. I ask, why have you in the city of Bombay a highly paid police officer like the Commissioner of Police. In appointing that officer we have to take into consideration the local conditions and importance of the town. It will not be possible to manage a big city like Bombay unless you have there a highly paid officer like the Police Commissioner. Similarly in a place like Karachi it is absolutely necessary to have a highly paid officer. It is a place of commercial importance and there is much police work. Therefore I support wholeheartedly clause 3 of this bill.

I myself being a smoker I strongly object to clause 4 of this bill. There are heads of offices who I know do smoke in their office and I would therefore suggest that this clause should only be made applicable to such part or parts of a public building where there are public records and other documents or some other material which is likely to catch fire, and in such places smoking might be prohibited. But certainly the clause should not be made applicable to the whole of the pubilc building.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe:—Mr. President,—I oppose the first reading of the bill and particularly clause 4. I do not object to it on the ground which was set forth by the previous speaker. I never smoke. But I believe that the insertion of such a clause will not prevent the inconvenience which is now being felt but that it will work hard on the people who visit public offices. It is my experience that particularly in magisterial courts we hardly find the heads of offices whether Indian or European not smoking when they are in their courts or offices.

The effect of such a clause, where the notice is fixed under the proposed section, will be that the officers even if they are within the forecorners of this section, will not be hauled up because under section 73 it lies with the police officer to take action or not. And the others who loiter about or visit public offices or court-houses for business either as witnesses or parties or for the matter of that pleaders who smoke in public buildings might be hauled up at times. All this can be avoided and is, I think, being avoided by having a notice restricting smoking in places where public records are kept. No penalising provision is, I think, necessary. Nobody attempts to smoke in a place in which smoking will have a disastrous effect. But a penal provision in a case like this will rather work hard on the people and will give a handle to subordinate police officers to haul up poor people before magistrates and cause them an amount of inconvenience and trouble.

As for the other clause of the bill, namely, employing additional superintendents of police in big cities, Government has, if I remember aright, in the last budget that was presented to us in March, already sanctioned three places for the cities of Ahmedabad, Poona and Karachi. Now if the work is heavy, even the Honourable Mr. Upasani and the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai said that additional help may be given in the form of employing assistants or deputies. This question has however to be left to those who know the quantity and quality of the work. Looking to the size of the cities, particularly these three cities, I think it does not matter, whether a superintendent is employed or an assistant is employed to meet the requirements of the case. It will always depend both upon the quantity and quality of work and if more officers are required I do not see what difference it makes whether he is a superintendent or an assistant or a deputy. Though I am against clause 4, I am in favour of retention of this clause. With these few observations I resume my seat.

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat:—Mr. President,—There is just one remark which I wish to make regarding clause 4, and with special reference to spitting. In those countries where buildings are kept scrupulously clean as against spitting, I find spittoons are provided in verandahs or in certain specific places. I should like to ask Government

[2ND AUGUST 1920.] [The Vice-President.]

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—I rise to move that the bill be referred to a select committee consisting of the Honourable Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe, the Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai, the Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat, the Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah, the Honourable Mr. L. Robertson, the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas and the Honourable Member in Charge, with instructions to report by the 1st of September.

Bill referred to a select committee.

The motion to refer the bill to a select committee was put to the vote and carried.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—The Council will now adjourn till 11-30 a.m. to-morrow.

The Council then adjourned till 11-30 a.m. on Tuesday, the 3rd August 1920.

DISTRICT POLICE BILL.

[2ND AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. B. S. Kamat; the Vice-President.]

whether, before they wish to pass this clause into law, it is intended also here in this country to provide spittoons in public buildings before the District Magistrate's notice is affixed that spitting would be prohibited in a particular public building. Unless and until we adopt the same precaution and the same facilities against spitting that other Governments have for the safety of their buildings, I believe it is wrong in principle to say that people should not spit or smoke in public buildings.

I know the habits of the people in this country are well known; when this is recognized, I believe, it is incumbent on Government to provide spittoons in public buildings and then only prohibit spitting by law. This is so far as spitting is concerned.

Similarly, with regard to smoking, in other countries, I think, a smoking room is provided wherever possible. May I ask if Government in this country, before they pass such a clause into law, wish to provide in public buildings, in kacheris and in courts, smoking rooms for visitors who have to transact business in these places. Until a part of the building is set apart for smoking I do not think smoking should be prevented. The words used in this clause are "appropriated for public purposes in contravention of a notice fixed to such buildings", not 'a part of such building'. If the District Magistrate fixes a notice for the whole of the building then it would cause a very great inconvenience to those who visit that building. The wording of this clause is I think faulty. The idea of preventing a person from smoking or spitting without certain facilities is wrong in principle, and the section as drafted is also faulty and I oppose it.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Objection has been taken to this bill on two grounds. The first is that it would be simpler, it would be cheaper and it would be better to avoid having two superintendents of police in the heavy districts of Karachi, Ahmedabad and Poona. I think the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe was quite correct when he said that is a matter which should be left to those responsible for the maintenance of law and order. It seems to me that the machinery of having an inspector in charge of the city or a deputy superintendent or an assistant superintendent of police does not give the control which is necessary. Take, for instance, the city of Ahmedabad. Ahmedabad district includes Ahmedabad city at present. In the city the population is well over 200,000; I think about 300,000 now. The district outside is not compact and though not very large in area compared with some of the Deccan districts, it takes a great deal of time to get over it. Now if you have an assistant superintendent of police running the city under the superintendent or a superintendent running the city leaving the district to the assistant superintendent, it follows that the superintendent of police leaves one or other portion of his charge for which he is responsible to an officer who is unable to take the full responsibility. Assuming that the assistant superintendent is in charge of the city and trouble arises, he feels that the entire responsibility is not on him; if it were on him, he would decide at once what action should be taken. As the responsibility is not on him, but on the superintendent who may be at the moment 50 miles away, his action is unduly hampered. The assistant superintendent whom I assume to be in charge of the city knows the city quite well, but there is also the fact that above him there is the superintendent of police and that he is unable to undertake the full responsibility. If he acts in a certain way, he may be liable to be taken to task for having done what he judged to be a proper thing to do in an emergency. It seems to me that that is an unfortunate position into which to put any man and it would be very much better and much more effective to have quite separate charges when there is in fact sufficient work in each charge for a whole time man of a particular grade. The Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe pointed out that a provision has been made in the budget, but that does not mean that the proposal has actually been sanctioned or will be sanctioned. But I think it was agreed to at the time the discussion that took place then that a case had been made out for the extra expenditure involved. It is certainly necessary in the case of the growing city of Karachi, where at present the superintendent is tied very much to work in the city and can give no time at all to work outside the city. Karachi city is expanding very rapidly and it is well to take time by the forelock and make provision for the police staff which the city requires at once.

Coming to the second part of the bill, I think the bogey which the Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai held up was exhibited on a previous occasion when we were discussing a similar provision for Bombay city. Some one said then that the Members of Council would be run in by the policeman outside if he noticed them smoking in the Council building. I do not think that any one suggested that as a matter of fact it would be right for them to smoke in the Council room itself. The fear was expressed of the danger of being run in for smoking in the verandah. It has been pointed out by one honourable member that a safeguard is provided in the bill by the provision that the notice must be signed by the District Magistrate. The District Magistrate will not fix the notice in a room in which it is ordinarily the custom for people to smoke. I am not sure now of the present practice in the mofussil. But I have seen magistrates on the bench—not judges—I certainly have seen magistrates on the bench smoking, and possibly in the mofussil judges also smoke. If a District Judge did not want smoking prevented in his court, he need not ask for a notice to be fixed there. If a notice has been fixed by a previous non-smoking judge, it would be open to the District Judge to ask the District Magistrate to remove the notice. However that may be, the question is one which should be examined by the select committee, and I propose, therefore, instead of adopting the course which is suggested in the list of business of the Council, namely, that the first, second and third readings be taken at this meeting, that the bill, if the first reading is passed, be referred to a select committee.

DISTRICT POLICE BILL.

[The Vice-President.] [2ND AUGUST 1920.]

Bill read a first time.

The motion for the first reading of the bill was put to the vote and carried, 25 members voting for and 12 members against. The Council divided as follows:—

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

In a number of cases short titles have not been given to the Local Acts of the Governor General in Council in force in Bombay and to the Acts of the Bombay Legislative Council. It is convenient for purposes of citation that they should have short titles and this Bill has therefore been prepared on the lines of the Indian Short Titles Act, 1897 (XIV of 1897), which provided short titles for such General Acts of the Governor General in Council as did not have them.

23rd April 1920. (Signed) G. CARMICHAEL.

By order of His Excellency the Honourable the Governor,

G. DAVIS,
Secretary to the Legislative Council
of the Governor of Bombay.

Bombay, 30th August 1920.

(To be translated into Gujarati and the translation to be published in the "Bombay Government Gazette." The date of publication to be reported.)

The following Bill is published under rule 28 (5) of the Rules for the conduct of Business at Meetings of the Legislative Council of the Governor of Bombay :—

Bill No. XIV of 1920.

An Act further to amend the City of Bombay Municipal Act, 1888.

WHEREAS it is expedient further to amend the City of Bombay Municipal Act, 1888, in manner hereinafter appearing; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

1. This Act may be called the City of Bombay Municipal (Second Amendment) Act, 1920. Short title.

2. In clause (c) of section 140 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act, 1888, for the word "twelve" the word "seventeen" shall be substituted. Amendment of section 140 (c). Bom. III of 1888.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The Municipal Corporation of the City of Bombay have to face in the immediate future a very large capital expenditure on works urgently required for the improvement of the present conditions of the city and to meet its rapidly growing demands.

2. It is considered necessary, therefore, not only to enable the Corporation to increase its actual income but so to increase its potential income, that an ample balance of possible taxation against which loans can be raised will be provided and a guarantee that funds will be available to meet all repayment charges will be assured.

3. The object of this amendment is to raise the maximum of the general property rate leviable under section 140 (c) of the City of Bombay Municipal Act (Bom. III of 1888), from twelve per centum to seventeen, thus increasing the power of taxation of the Corporation and its capacity to borrow.

The following report of the Select Committee of the Council of His Excellency the Governor of Bombay on the Bill further to amend the Bombay District Police Act, 1890, and the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, are, in accordance with rule 25 of the Rules for the conduct of business at meetings of the Legislative Council, published for general information :—

BILL No. X of 1920.

(A Bill further to amend the Bombay District Police Act, 1890.)

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

We, the undersigned, members* of the Select Committee appointed to consider Bill No. X of 1920 (a Bill further to amend the Bombay District Police Act, 1890), have the honour to report as follows.

2. We have no change to recommend as regards the first three clauses of the Bill. As regards clause 4 we are of the opinion that the nuisance which it is designed to abate is not sufficiently marked in the mofussil to necessitate legislation at the present time and we have therefore deleted the clause.

* The signature of the Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah will be published when received.

3. This report should be translated into the same languages as was the bill when introduced.

Proceedings of the Council of the Governor of Bombay.

The following report of the Select Committee of the Council of His Excellency the Governor of Bombay on the Bill further to amend the Bombay Rent (War Restrictions) Act, 1918, and to amend the Bombay Rent (War Restrictions, No. 2) Act, 1918, and the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, are, in accordance with rule 25 of the Rules for the conduct of business at meetings of the Legislative Council, published for general information :—

Bill No. XI of 1920.

A Bill further to amend the Bombay Rent (War Restrictions) Act, 1918, and to amend the Bombay Rent (War Restrictions, No. 2) Act, 1918.

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

We, the undersigned, members of the Select Committee appointed to consider Bill No. XI of 1920 (a Bill further to amend the Bombay Rent (War Restrictions) Act, 1918, and to amend the Bombay Rent (War Restrictions, No. 2) Act, 1918, have the honour to report as follows :—

As there is sometimes a considerable interval between the date on which an order for recovery of possession is passed and the date when possession is obtained, we are of opinion that the landlord should be allowed six months from the latter date before an application from the original tenant under proposed section 10A can be made. It is desirable also to fix a time limit within which an application by the original tenant should be made, and to provide that if the premises were reasonably and bonâ fide required for the purposes specified and are not used for such purposes through no fault of the landlord, compensation should not be awarded. Clause 2 of the Bill has been amended accordingly.

2. We are of opinion that in suits for rent, compensation for use and occupation or ejectment, a distinction should be made between houses of which the monthly rental is over thirty rupees and those of which the monthly rental is under thirty rupees. In the former case it is highly improbable that the premises are small premises and the landlord should not be required to obtain an order determining that the premises are not small premises before he can bring a suit of the nature specified.

~~IV of 1915.~~

4. For sub-section (1) of section 17 of the said Act the following sub-section shall be substituted, namely:—

Amendment of sub-section (1) of section 17 of Bom. VII of 1918.

"17 (1) (a) In every suit for rent, compensation for use and occupation or ejectment in respect of any premises of which the monthly rent does not exceed thirty rupees the plaintiff shall annex to the plaint a copy of an order in force, whether under any rule made under section 2 of the Defence of India (Criminal Law Amendment) Act, 1915, or under this act, determining that the premises are not small premises or fixing their standard rent.

IV of 1915.

(b) In every such suit in respect of any premises of which the monthly rent exceeds thirty rupees, the plaintiff shall state in the plaint whether the standard rent has or has not been fixed under this act, and if he states that it has been so fixed he shall annex to the plaint a copy of the order in that behalf in force whether under any rule made under section 2 of the Defence of India (Criminal Law Amendment) Act, 1915, or under this act." IV of 1

By order of His Excellency the Honourable the Governor,

G. DAVIS,
Secretary to the Legislative Council
of the Governor of Bombay.

Bombay, 1st September 1920.

The following report of the Select Committee of the Council of His Excellency the Governor of Bombay on the Bill further to amend the Bombay Port Trust Act, 1879, and the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, are, in accordance with rule 25 of the Rules for the conduct of business at meetings of the Legislative Council, published for general information :—

Bill No. XII of 1920.

(A Bill further to amend the Bombay Port Trust Act, 1879.)

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

We, the undersigned members* of the Select Committee appointed to consider Bill No. XII of 1920 (A Bill further to amend the Bombay Port Trust Act, 1879), have the honour to report as follows.

We discussed at length the question of hotel accommodation and while fully admitting the serious shortage of such accommodation in Bombay we are of the opinion that it is proper only for a Port Trust to provide temporary accommodation for passengers using the port on arriving or departing by sea. We have therefore provided for the construction of waiting and refreshment rooms and we have defined "waiting rooms" as including temporary sleeping accommodation.

We have also had it brought prominently to our notice that owing to defective drafting in an amendment of the original section 68 (7) of the Act a doubt exists as to the sufficiency of the powers conferred upon the Port Trust for the construction of other necessary buildings.

We have by re-drafting clause 3 of the Bill removed this doubt.

~~"(aa) persons employed in any building constructed by the Board under the authority contained in section 68 (7A); and"~~

2. In the proviso to section 21 of the Bombay Port Trust Act, 1879, hereinafter called the said Act, after the word "labourers" where it occurs for the second time, the following words shall be inserted, namely:—

Bom. VI of 1879.

Amendment of section 21.

"and any persons employed in any capacity in any waiting or refreshment room constructed by the Board under the authority contained in section 68 (7A)".

~~3. After sub-section (7) of section 68 of the said Act, the following sub-section shall be inserted, namely:—~~

~~Amendment of section 68.~~

~~"(7A) The construction upon the property vested in the Board and the equipment, maintenance and management of such buildings, including hotels, as may, in the opinion of the Board, add to or improve the facilities of the port."~~

3. (1) After clause (7) of section 68 of the said Act, the following clause shall be inserted, namely:—

Amendment of section 68.

"(7A) the construction upon any part of the property vesting in the Board and the equipment and maintenance of such buildings, including offices, quarters for officers and servants of the Board, waiting rooms and refreshment rooms, as may in the opinion of the Board be necessary for carrying out the purposes of this Act;"

(2) After the proviso to the said section the following explanation shall be added, namely:—

"Explanation.

"Waiting rooms in this section shall be deemed to include sleeping accommodation for passengers arriving or departing by sea and persons escorting or meeting such passengers."

A BILL TO CONSOLIDATE AND AMEND THE LAW RELATING TO PLEADERS IN THE PRESIDENCY OF BOMBAY.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Order, order. I propose to take item No. 6 on the agenda.

I rise to move the first reading of a bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to pleaders in the Presidency of Bombay (Bill No. VI of 1920).

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael moves the first reading of the bill.

It will be seen from clause 1 that the bill does not extend to Sind or Aden. It applies to the Presidency proper only. This bill has been on the anvil for a good many years. The Honourable the Chief Justice and Judges of the High Court have pressed for its enactment, and, as stated in the statement of objects and reasons, their recommendations have been made after ascertaining the views of representative associations of the legal profession and of the District Judges. The bill consolidates the existing law, which is at present contained in various enactments, namely, in Bombay Regulation II of 1827, in three acts of the Government of India, Act I of 1846, Act XX of 1853, and Act XVIII of 1879 in part, besides in sections 9 and 10 of the amended Letters Patent of the High Court. Obviously the consolidation of all these in one enactment will be advantageous.

The amendments proposed in the existing law are of three kinds. Firstly, it is proposed to revise the rate or percentage on which pleaders' fees should be calculated. The existing rate or percentage was fixed over 100 years ago, and now requires adjustment to suit modern conditions. Another class of amendment gives legal sanction to what is at present based on practice or on rules. I think it is hardly necessary for me to go into details with regard to that particular class of amendment. The third class of amendment introduces new matter. The new provisions are contained in clauses 15 and 16 of the bill. These clauses prohibit the giving or taking of commission by a pleader, and prohibit a pleader from taking instructions from any one except from the client himself or from the client's authorised agent. Another new provision is clause 20, which enables the fees for two pleaders to be taxed in certain cases. One of the most important changes introducing new matter is in clause 26. This clause withdraws from all subordinate courts, except the district court, the court of session, the Chief Judge of the Small Causes Court, and the Chief Presidency Magistrate, disciplinary powers and powers to fine pleaders for professional misconduct. It has been found in actual practice that these powers have been rarely used by these subordinate courts, and, if misconduct occurs in such courts, it is more appropriate that notice should be taken of it by the court immediately superior, or by the High Court. It is proposed to alter the law accordingly. The bill also extends, to a certain extent, the powers of the district court, the court of session, the Chief Judge of the Small Causes Court, and the Chief Presidency Magistrate in the matter of discipline. Bombay Regulation II of 1827 and section 10 of Act I of 1846 give every court power to take disciplinary measures in cases of professional misconduct.

Clause 26 of the bill, as drafted, gives these four courts subordinate to the High Court the power of taking action in cases where a pleader has been guilty of neglect of duty or of a violation of any of the provisions of this act or of any other improper conduct (whether in his professional character or otherwise), with reference to any case coming before such court or before a court subordinate to such court. The cases in which these four courts can take disciplinary action include a larger category than they have hitherto done under Act I of 1846 and Bombay Regulation II of 1827.

Clause 27 provides for the presentation of the case against the pleader in the High Court by the Honourable the Advocate General or such counsel or pleader as may appear for the Crown.

Lastly, in clause 30 (1) (h) powers are given to the High Court to make amendments in the Schedule which provides for the rules with regard to the fixing and calculating of pleaders' fees. The High Court is empowered, as occasion arises, to make changes in the rules and in the schedule of fees. There is another important power which it is proposed to be given to the High Court under clause 30 (1) (d). It gives the High Court power to make rules requiring that a pleader shall be a member and submit to the rules of the bar association of the district in which he practises. I think, every one will recognise that it is a great advantage that all the members of the bar should be united in a bar association. The above remarks cover the new matter which this bill introduces.

As a result of discussions which have taken place since the measure was first mooted, the bill is now in what, I hope, the Council will consider, workmanlike form. The bill is full of technicalities, and it can hardly be expected that unanimity of opinion would be secured on all matters of detail. The criticisms and suggestions for amendment which have been received since the publication of the bill are, as this Council will have noticed, very voluminous. I gather, however, from a perusal of the representations which have been made that the critics do not oppose the main idea of the bill, but wish to have their suggestions considered before the bill passes into law. I do not propose to go into details with regard to the criticisms and suggestions, at this stage. They are very largely, altogether I think, matters which can best be dealt with in the select committee. With these remarks, your Excellency, I beg to move the first reading of the bill.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud:—Your Excellency,—I beg to accord my support to the first reading of the bill. I am glad that the law relating to pleaders which was scattered in various statutes and regulations has now been brought together in the form of a bill. I will not at this stage of the bill go into the several clauses or suggest what different changes are needed. I am thankful for the assurance of the Honourable Member in Charge of the bill that the suggestions for the amendments of various clauses will be carefully gone into, and I hope the select committee will consider those suggestions and make the necessary changes before the bill comes up for second reading.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Your Excellency,—The bill in so far as it seeks to consolidate and amend the existing law about the pleaders is indeed a welcome measure in a general sort of way. But there are, as there are bound to be, certain differences of opinion in matters of detail as well as in matters of principle. Of course the details could be dealt with in the select committee. But there are certain matters of principle involved in this bill, so far as I am able to see, which require to be discussed at this reading of the bill.

PLEADERS' BILL.

[Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; Sir G. Carmichael.] [3RD AUGUST 1920.]

The one main feature of the bill is that it seeks to provide that a pleader shall not perform any service for a person unless he receives a retaining fee. Now, I submit, sir, that the profession of a lawyer is an honourable profession, and if any member of that profession wishes to work without any fees or any retaining fee, why should legislation compel him to be mercenary? Clause 11 of this bill enunciates the principle which I have just referred to, that without receiving a retaining fee a pleader shall not perform any service. There are occasions when there is a friend who is in need of advice, or there is a relation, or a poor person, or a person who is considered to be oppressed, who is in need of help. Why should it not be open to a pleader to work for him without receiving any retaining fee? That is, I respectfully submit, a principle which is more or less mercenary and the profession would be very unwilling to accept it.

Then the next provision is, that having received a retaining fee, whether he receives any further fee or not, he is bound to act for the client in courts. That also is a provision which is very embarrassing and very awkward.

Thirdly, there is a provision that a pleader can recover his fees only through a court and in no other way. Now, if there is any dispute between a pleader and his client about his fees, the provision, as it stands, debars him from referring the matter to the arbitration of some independent people, and it also infringes upon the right of a pleader by way of lien. Consequently that provision also is a provision which is one of principle, and will require to be revised in the select committee in case it is left open to the select committee to go into this question.

Then the Honourable Member in Charge described the provisions of clause 26—provisions about the disciplinary powers—in a fashion which is rather topsy-turvy. He said that powers of disciplinary jurisdiction are taken away from some courts and retained in district courts, presidency magistrates' courts and such other courts. At present the disciplinary powers are with the High Court, and there is no reason why those powers should be delegated to the officers referred to in clause 26.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—With your Excellency's permission I should like to controvert the honourable member. Will the honourable member say whether the sections to which I referred in Act I of 1846 and Act XX of 1853 have been repealed, or are they still in force? The sections give disciplinary powers to all courts.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Subject to correction, I submit that my impression is that disciplinary powers at present vest in the High Court only and that other courts have merely to report such matters to the High Court. In any case, I think that the power which is left to officers mentioned in clause 26 to either fine or reprimand a pleader should vest only in the High Court, because it would not be quite to the safety and independence of the profession that it should be vested in district courts, or the Chief Presidency Magistrate or the Chief Judge of the Court of Small Causes.

Then there is one other provision in clause 25 which empowers the courts mentioned in that clause to fine or reprimand a pleader for "neglect of duty" or for any other improper conduct whether in his professional conduct or "otherwise". This "otherwise" is a most objectionable word to be introduced into a legislation which refers to the conduct of pleaders and the consolidation of law about pleaders in their professional capacity. A man may quarrel with his neighbour. A man may quarrel with his wife. A man may not give maintenance to his wife for certain reasons. Well, that case should not be included in this "otherwise" and give to the courts mentioned a power to take action for "neglect of duty" which has been put in such a general sort of way, so that this word "otherwise" which we find in clauses 25 and 26 is very objectionable, giving to courts a wide power, which on principle it would not be proper to allow.

Then we find that in form A and form B, provided for sanads to be given to the High Court pleaders and district court pleaders, there is a divergence of phraseology. There is no reason why there should be any divergence of this sort. The sanad should be in one form, whether one is allowed to practise in the district courts or in the High Court, and there should be one standard of duty imposed upon either sort of pleaders, and there is no reason also why obligations should be imposed in one case which are harder and harsher than in the other.

There is one more provision on which I should like to offer my remarks, and that is the provision of clause 10. According to this, a pleader when he is once engaged, is bound down to the case from the beginning to the end. There are occasions when senior pleaders are retained in order to cross-examine a witness, an expert witness or any other tough witness, or to argue a case either at the end or at a preliminary stage. The vakalatnama which is to be in a particular form now lays down that he is bound to conduct the whole case. It is no use tying down a pleader, who appears for a part of a case, or for a special occasion, to conduct the whole case and make himself responsible for it.

PLEADERS' BILL.

[3RD AUGUST 1920.] [Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; Mr. G. K. Parekh; Mr. Rupchand Bilaram.]

These appear to me to be questions of principle, and therefore, when we refer the bill to the select committee, they will, I hope, be fully considered.

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh:—Your Excellency,—I beg to support the first reading of this bill. The legislation on this question has been long overdue. The courts and the pleaders were guided by regulations which are nearly a century old. The reason why no more recent legislation on this side of India exists is that for a long time very eminent gentlemen of a high standard of life led the profession, and they considered that the example of the high standard of conduct which they set was more suited to maintain the honour and dignity of the profession than legislative sanctions. And it may be noted that both the courts and the public felt perfectly justified with the way in which they conducted themselves, in considering legislation unnecessary and superfluous. Of course a good many changes have occurred between 1827 and the present time. Many of the conditions have become completely altered, and therefore, the past legislation has become unsuited to the present conditions. I consider, it is very right, therefore, that there should now be legislation embodying rules of conduct of this body of practitioners. On this ground I support the first reading of the bill. At the same time, I may suggest that there are one or two important questions of principle, which I put before the Council for consideration.

One of these is that the bill rather treats the pleaders as a somewhat mercenary body—something like a money-making machine—deprived altogether of altruistic sentiments or generous feelings. I do not consider that the payment of a small fee is necessary to create the relation of pleader and client. Why should it not be left to the pleader, who feels very deeply the wrong done to any particular individual or where there is a very important question of public interest involved, to offer his services gratis? Why I ask, therefore, that in a profession, the traditions of which are that the fees earned are not remuneration for work done or to be done, but are mere grateful appreciations of gratuitous services—why should it be laid down as a necessary condition of the employment of a pleader that he should demand and receive remuneration, and, unless he does that his action would be considered improper?

Another thing that involves an important question of principle is, that once a vakalatnama is put in, the pleader is bound to do services in connection with the case for the client, of all sorts till the orders of the court are completely executed. I do admit that there should be one man in the case to whom the courts can look to for the purpose of representing the party. But where a party has engaged more than one pleader upon an understanding that any particular pleader should do a particular work, such as arguing a particular question of law or cross-examine a particular witness, in that case it is unreasonable that the pleader should be required to put in a vakalatnama binding himself to do every kind of professional service in the case. In a matter of this kind every arrangement which may be made between the client and the vakil ought to be upheld, and this I believe is necessary both in the interests of the people, the public and the profession. The other thing is that this bill gives a certain amount of power, which has up to now been exercised only by the High Court, to District Judges and others. I should think, looking to the dignity of the profession, that it would be desirable that this power should be confined only to the High Court.

The Honourable Mr. Rupchand Bilaram:—Your Excellency,—This bill deals with the honourable profession of lawyers to which I have the privilege to belong as, I believe, some of the members who have preceded me have also the privilege to belong. This bill is no doubt of a very difficult and delicate nature, and on reading it I find that there are several defects both in detail and in principle which require to be looked into. So far as the details are concerned, we have the assurance of the Honourable Member in Charge that the select committee will look into them. With regard to the matters of principle, the honourable members who preceded me have referred to some, but I might just mention one or two. One of them is this, that in legislating in the twentieth century a pleader should be allowed to appear in all matters where a party is required to appear in person not only in courts but also before revenue and other officers. Where an illiterate man is required to appear in person to represent his case, it would be much better that he should be represented by a pleader. The next point is that which has already been referred to by the former speakers and that is this. The sword of Damocles that is being given to the subordinate judiciary, Small Cause Courts and District Judges, of fining and punishing pleaders would be very harassing to the profession and would perhaps deter pleaders from performing their duties. This power should be given to the High Court alone. Of course the subordinate judiciary will have no doubt the right to recommend for reprimanding any member of the bar who misbehaves. It is no doubt true that on the one hand there may be some black sheep in the fold of pleaders, but the pleaders also require protection at the hands of Government and the authorities from acts of illiterate and misguided clients who would otherwise put them to trouble.

PLEADERS' BILL.

[Mr. Rupchand Bilaram; Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe; Sir G. Carmichael.] [3RD AUGUST 1920.]

The next point I wish to refer to is this. We find that the bill provides for allowing as costs remuneration for two pleaders in certain cases. On principle a client should be made to pay or should pay according to the work which the pleader does for him, and should be able to recover the same as costs. In the Schedule I find, however, that the fees are calculated according to a graded scale. Of course possibly on this side of the Presidency it may be considered proper, but what I wish to point out is this that if two pleaders' fees are to be allowed in non-contested suits where, for instance, a man is unable to pay a debt due on a mortgage or a hundi of the value exceeding Rs. 5,000, and a suit is filed for recovery of the amount due, it would be very hard on the debtor to make him pay double pleader's fee.

It has also been pointed out that the forms of the sanads which are to be issued in the case of district pleaders and High Court pleaders are differently worded. In my opinion there should be no distinction except as regards jurisdiction to restrict the district pleader to the district or otherwise. There should be no distinction in the wording of the sanad granted to a High Court and a district court pleader. With these remarks I support the first reading of the bill.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe:—Your Excellency,—In supporting the first reading of this bill I wish to offer a few remarks. When I do so, I do not intend to enter upon several matters of detail which will be thoroughly considered in the select committee. I will content myself by referring to three or four principal points which will be considered as involving matters of principle, and the first of them is whether powers should be given to the District Judges and Presidency Magistrates and the Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court to take action as is now proposed to be done under clause 26. The Honourable Member in Charge of the bill has told us that such a power does exist under the present act, and he further added that it does not appear that any use has been made of it and that therefore these higher authorities in the districts are being invested with this power.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—What I intended to say was that it has not been used by subordinate courts, that is, the courts subordinate to the district courts and sessions courts. I am not prepared to say that it was not used by the district court or sessions court but only by subordinate judges' courts, and very rarely.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe:—The fact that it has not been used by the subordinate judges speaks in favour of pleaders practising in the mufassil. That means that very few occasions do arise even under the existing law where the sub-judges were required to make use of section 54 of the Regulation. Apart from this, the point which I want to make out is this, whether it is desirable, in the interests of purity and independence of the profession, that these powers should vest in officers before whom pleaders have to practise every day of their life. Now, it has been provided for under the present proposed clause that in cases where these officers find it necessary they should make a report to the High Court. In fact a discretion is given to them not to decide matters themselves but to leave it to their Lordships for final decision if they so desire. I am not against giving powers to District Judges to report to the High Court, but I do not think that the final decision should be given by the District Judges or by other officers mentioned in clause 26. As at present all judicial officers, sub-judges, District Judges, should continue to have powers to report in the case of dereliction of duty or any other matter to their Lordships for such action as they might think necessary to take. In the cases which have gone up to the High Court with reports made by those officers against individual pleaders, the reports of subordinate officers have on very many occasions not been accepted. I do not wish to cast any aspersions against the officers who made these reports, but what I want to say is that if an independent authority is asked to consider this question, then there is greater chance of getting justice done to pleaders than at the hands of local officers.

The second point which I want to make is about the differentiation in the sanads of the two classes of pleaders. Particularly in view of the fact that the district court pleaders'

PLEADERS' BILL.

[3RD AUGUST 1920.] [Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe; Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas.] examination has now been abolished and that those who pass the High Court pleaders' test prescribed by the High Court, are allowed to be enlisted as pleaders of the High Court, there seems to be no necessity for differential treatment so far as the wording of the sanad is concerned. Perhaps there may have been good grounds for such differentiation when Regulation II of 1827 was passed, but to my mind no such necessity does now exist.

The third point which I wish to emphasise is about clauses 15 and 16. As regards these clauses, I have no special remarks to offer, because practically what is stated in these two clauses has been the law and has also been recognised under the Legal Practitioners Act of 1879. One more point which I want to place before the Council is, whether a pleader cannot work gratis for his client. This difficulty was hinted at by one of the previous speakers. Perhaps it may strike honourable members of this Council that such a case may never arise. I know of a case which is within my personal knowledge and which was in my own district. About sixteen years ago it so happened that in a sensational case, where the question as to the action taken by a certain municipality was disputed in the court, a pleader offered to serve for the client gratis. I am not making any breach of etiquette because it was a question which was placed before our bar association. The District Magistrate made a reference to the District Judge asking him to take notice of the pleader who worked gratis. The District Judge had more sympathy for our class than the revenue officers, and he went into the whole question, and taking precedents from Indian and English Law, he decided that there was no unprofessional conduct on the part of the pleader, and returned the correspondence to the District Magistrate. It may be an isolated case but it only shows that a provision to that effect ought to be embodied in the act so as to avoid any trouble of such kind in future.

Then comes the question of misbehaviour, professional or otherwise, mentioned in clauses 25 and 26. I am conscious when I make these observations that conduct which was not strictly professional misconduct, has at times been considered by their Lordships as calling for disciplinary action at the hands of the High Court. The real point is, whether any kind of conduct should come within the purview of this clause, or whether that conduct should have something to do with the profession, and I, at any rate, think that when there is a provision in one of the clauses that any conviction for any criminal offence which involves or which amounts to a defect in character or to moral turpitude, that ought to disentitle the pleader to continue to practise, and that ought to suffice. This is clause 25. Clause 26 says that conduct, professional or otherwise, should be taken notice of by the District Judge and other officers mentioned therein, and it would be much better if the word 'otherwise' is further explained and the matter is made more clear.

Then there are a few more points which I consider as points of detail, and therefore, I would not take up the time of the Council by referring to them. But there is one subject on which I intend to make only one observation, namely, requiring a pleader to be a member of the bar association. The existence of bar associations is considered as very salutary and those associations have been started in a good many districts. But when it is intended to make it compulsory on every member of the bar to be a member of the bar association, I wish some provision be made under which notice could be taken by their Lordships or by the District Judge, of the opinion of the bar association touching either the conduct of the judicial officers, or touching the conduct of pleaders. So far as the matters stand at present, the bar associations have no voice in matters which I have already referred to. With these few words, sir, I support the first reading of the bill.

The Honourable Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas :—Your Excellency,—Agreeing with the previous speakers I premise that there is no opposition to this legislation being on the anvil, but the various speakers who have given expression to their opinion intend that their suggestions should be taken account of by the select committee when arranging the details of the bill. In the light of that supposition I, with your Excellency's permission, offer a few observations.

I almost entirely endorse the suggestions that have fallen from the various speakers who have preceded me as regards the clauses that are picked out of the bill and commented upon. When the Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai said that the present bill contemplated the conferment of higher disciplinary powers upon courts other than the High Court, that opinion was challenged. On looking into the latest legislation on the subject which has been referred to in the bill and referred to also by the honourable mover, namely, Act XVIII of 1879, I find that the sections which deal with the subject are sections 13 and 14 of Act XVIII of 1879, which was a Government of India Act. Of course that act was in the first instance made applicable to limited areas in which the Bombay Presidency was not included, with power of extension to any other part of India. However, as that has been referred to in the present legislation, and very rightly referred to, and as that represents the latest expression of the legislature on this question, I think I am quite justified in appealing to those provisions, namely, sections 13 and 14 of Act XVIII of 1879. Those provisions do justify the observations of the Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai that these powers are being newly enacted. Of course I am speaking subject to any correction that may appear from the honourable mover in the end by reference to another enactment.

PLEADERS' BILL.

[Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas.] [3RD AUGUST 1920.]

Section 13 says:

"The High Court may suspend or dismiss any pleader or mukhtiar holding a certificate issued under section 7, who is convicted of any criminal offence implying a defect of character which unfits him to be a pleader or mukhtiar, as the case may be".

Section 13 says;

"The High Court may also, after such inquiry as it thinks fit, suspend or dismiss any pleader or mukhtiar holding a certificate as aforesaid—

(a) who takes instructions in any case except from the party on whose behalf he is retained, or some person who is the recognized agent of such party within the meaning of the Code of Civil Procedure, or some servant, relative or friend authorized by the party to give such instructions, or

(b) who is guilty of fraudulent or grossly improper conduct in the discharge of his professional duty, or

(c) who tenders, gives or consents to the retention, out of any fee paid or payable to him for his services, of any gratification for procuring or having procured the employment in any legal business of himself or any other pleader or mukhtiar ....." and so on.

Then section 14 relates to a charge being brought up in any subordinate court if any such pleader or mukhtiar practising in any subordinate court or in any revenue-office is charged in such court or office of taking instructions except as aforesaid or any such misconduct as aforesaid, and it empowers the presiding officer to send him a copy of the charge and also notice of the day therein appointed to take into consideration such charge. Then if such officer finds the charge established and considers that the pleader or mukhtiar should be suspended or dismissed in consequence he shall record his finding and the grounds thereof and shall report the same to the High Court and the High Court may acquit or suspend or dismiss the pleader or mukhtiar.

Then the only power that I find is given to the District Judge, is contained in the last but one clause of section 14. That clause says:

"Any District Judge, or with his sanction any judge subordinate to him (any Judge of a Court of Small Causes of a Presidency town), any District Magistrate, or with his sanction any Magistrate subordinate to him, and any Revenue-authority not inferior to a Collector, or with the Collector's sanction any revenue-officer subordinate to him, may, pending the investigation and the orders of the High Court, suspend from practice any pleader or mukhtiar charged before him.

So if my study is correct, excepting the powers of suspension pending investigation by the High Court, no higher powers are given to courts subordinate to the High Court, and therefore, I am quite in sympathy with the recommendation that has been suggested by the various speakers. But, your Excellency, the power of actual punishment should not certainly be given to the subordinate courts but should vest only in the High Court. I would not quarrel with the qualifying clause that has been just read regarding the power of suspension vesting in the District Judge or the District Magistrate as the case may be, and so far as my own experience is concerned, I remember various cases of disciplinary jurisdiction being tried in the courts in Sind, and I do not remember a single instance where these powers have been exercised by the district court. The action of the district court has been confined to mere investigation and report to the High Court. And I dare say that had it not been for the legislation to that effect, that practice would not have been so invariable and uniform as I have noticed it to be.

Then coming to the question as to whether any conduct other than professional should be dealt with in the disciplinary jurisdiction, I agree with the previous speakers that the disciplinary jurisdiction should be confined only to professional conduct. Otherwise it will open a very wide power over the private life of a pleader, and will give power to inquisitive and hostile officers of making all kinds of reports against pleaders. I do not suppose that in England or in continental countries men belonging to the legal profession are amenable to the High Court or other authorities above them for any conduct other than that which relates to their own profession, and so far as the conduct of the case is concerned, and I am strongly reminded of Sir Edward Carson actually preaching civil war in connection with the Irish question, and not being dealt with professionally.

PLEADERS' BILL.

[3RD AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas; the President; Mr. P. A. Desai.]

His Excellency the President:—Order, order. That is not a matter which affects the first reading of this bill.

The Honourable Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas:—I was saying that in other countries conduct other than professional, of howsoever objectionable a nature, is not taken notice of by the authorities who have jurisdiction over men belonging to the profession of law. Therefore such an enactment would be entirely out of place in this country also.

Then as regards the question of fees, I might tell your Excellency that the same question was raised some years ago in Calcutta, namely, as to whether it was permissible or unprofessional for a pleader to act gratis and without receiving any fees. I do not know whether the question was taken to the High Court, but I remember, the Advocate General's opinion was that it was open to any pleader to act without any fees. I think, probably there would be no difference of opinion between those who have spoken on this subject to-day and Government, or probably the select committee on this point may insert a kind of discriminating qualification which will on one hand make provision for this retaining fee in all cases where the intention of the parties is to pay fees, and at the same time leave room for an exception where it is the intention of the parties that no fees should be paid. For instance, the most glaring case of a pleader appearing without fees is that of two relatives. Supposing a brother of a pleader has got some litigation in a court, and his brother who is a joint member of the family with him is a pleader in that court, surely it cannot be said that in such a case it was necessary for the brother to give a retaining fee for the pleader, because that would be taking money from one pocket and putting it in another. Likewise a pleader may like to work gratis for a poor man, and there are sometimes cases which happen as the one referred to by the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe where a pleader wants to fight for a question of principle. Such cases ought to be excepted from this clause.

At the same time I do not think the question of retainer should be entirely excluded. There are certain cases in which it would become necessary that there should be relationship of payer and payee between the pleader and client, and I do not think any question of the mercenary nature of the relationship comes in as contended by some of the previous speakers.

As regards barristers' fees they are traditionally considered as mere honoraria which come from the custom of the ancient law of Rome where juris consulta whose position is now occupied by barristers were considered to be advisers of a court without payment. But now it is treated as a mere legal fiction, because these gentlemen who are supposed to take honorarium do really take the fattest fees. So I do not think that illustration is an apt one at all.

Then another provision that has been touched upon by the various speakers is the one that relates to pleaders being allowed—I think it was the Honourable Mr. Rupchand Bilaram who referred to it—to practise in other places than law courts also. In the Act of 1879, to which I referred, there is a provision that revenue agents may be allowed to act and appear in revenue courts. I am also in favour of this. But I do not think it will be really practicable or desirable that a pleader should be allowed to appear before every officer or in any place. If any member of the select committee has got any suggestions to make, I think, the number of officers or authorities before whom any appearance by a pleader should be permitted should be defined and limited.

Now, as regards the observations of the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe, I think, I have got several years' experience, as well as he has, of bar associations. I think this provision is entirely sound, and I should rather like the powers of the bar associations to be extended beyond what they are at present. I would suggest that they should be invested with disciplinary powers, so that before the matter reaches the High Court in case of any misconduct on the part of a pleader arising, it is appropriate that he should be first of all judged by his own peers. Therefore, I am entirely in favour of the provision with regard to the bar associations, and we are in Sind rigidly enforcing the provision, and therefore, I would recommend its retention, to the select committee. With these few observations, your Excellency, I conclude.

The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai:—Your Excellency,—I rise to support the first reading of the bill. I endorse every word that has fallen from the lips of the members who have already spoken on this subject. It is quite clear that this bill puts certain restrictions upon the liberty of pleaders. Much has been said, and I endorse the same remarks, that it would be dangerous to leave to the District Judges to decide the matter without referring it to the High Court in cases of misconduct. It is said that the choice is left to the District Judge either to take action himself or to report the matter to the High Court. I say the choice ought to be left to the pleader himself. If the pleader thinks that the District Judge is not competent to deal with the matter, it should be open to him to request the District Judge to send the matter to the High Court for decision.

PLEADERS' BILL.

[Mr. P. A. Desai; Mr. D. V. Belvi; Sir G. Carmichael; the President.] [3RD AUGUST 1920.]

Then, your Excellency will see that certain restrictions which are quite unnecessary are to be placed both upon the clients and upon the pleaders. In the case of agreements which take place between a pleader and a client, many times less fees are charged by the pleaders, and clients agree to give them inams on the result of the case. Now provision has been made in this bill also for a private agreement between the parties and the pleaders, but it is said in clause 29, that no such agreement can be enforced without going to a civil court. I cannot understand why it is necessary that the agreement should be enforced by the civil court. All other matters can be referred to arbitration and can be decided by arbitrators chosen by the parties. Why should there be an objection in the case of the enforcing of an agreement which has taken place between the pleader and his client? Why should the parties be compelled to go to the civil court? I say there are such points in the bill and, as far as possible, these points may be considered by the select committee.

There is another point that we see in the bill. There is a long standing cry in the High Court that pleaders are not allowed to practise on the original side of the High Court. Clause 7 simply says that the pleaders should be allowed to practise in the High Court, but I think they should be allowed to practise both on the original and the appellate side. Of course, that can be done by the select committee. But I think the members of the select committee should kindly take into consideration this principle that there should be no unnecessary restriction placed upon the liberty of the pleaders. With these remarks I conclude.

The Honourable Mr. D. V. Belvi:—Your Excellency,—I welcome this bill as a useful measure. It is a bill which is intended to consolidate the law or the various laws which regulate the conduct of the legal profession—I mean vakils and pleaders—in this Presidency in one act. We are now discussing the first reading of this bill, and I can only refer to matters of general principle in considering this measure. I do not wish to repeat what has already been stated by the honourable members who have already spoken. I wish only to supplement what has been said. My honourable friend Mr. Pandurang Desai thinks that vakils of the High Court should be at liberty to practise on the original side of the Bombay High Court. Nobody will be more glad than myself were such permission granted to High Court vakils. I am myself a High Court vakil of many year's standing, but unfortunately for us it is not open to us, the provincial legislature, to introduce such a change. The original side of the High Court and proceedings obtaining there are regulated by the Royal Letters Patent of 1865 granted to the High Court. Under these Letters Patent the Bombay High Court has framed certain rules and rule 40 of the High Court rules makes the original side of the High Court a close preserve for one section of the legal profession, namely, barristers and advocates. I believe that my honourable friend Mr. Desai has done a distinct public service by calling attention of this Council to this glaring defect in the law. We know that in the Presidency.....

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—I rise to a point of order. This Council has no authority to make any alteration in the Letters Patent of the High Court and it seems to me that the honourable member is going outside the discussion of principles of the bill which is now before the Council.

His Excellency the President:—The honourable member may only touch very lightly on the point, but he must not go into any details.

The Honourable Mr. D. V. Belvi:—Your Excellency, my only idea was to call attention to this defect in the law. I have already stated that it is not in the power of this legislature to correct the mistake.

Now, so far as the present bill is concerned, there are one or two points to which, I think, I should refer. The first is the table of fees. I find the table of fees which is now in force is to be revised and a successful party is to get a little more of his costs than he has been able to get hitherto. But to my mind it is not the whole relief which is needed in the interests of litigants. After all, the costs awarded to a party by a court of law represent a very small proportion of his actual costs. Why should not the costs be taxed as costs that are actually incurred between a party and a party? We know that a man who brings a suit, say, for a thousand rupees gets only Rs. 30 as his pleader's fees, but the pleader charges a considerably large amount as his retainer in addition to his fees. The party may have to pay even Rs. 100 as a retainer. Under the present scale the successful party gets about Rs. 30, and under the revised scale, which is to come into force if this bill passes into law, the court will pay the party a little more. That is a point which should be carefully considered. On the continent of Europe I am advised that costs are in most cases taxed as costs between man and man, that is, the real costs are awarded to the successful party. This legislature should see if is not feasible to introduce a provision of that kind.

PLEADERS' BILL.

[3RD AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. D. V. Belvi; Mr. S. B. Upasani.]

Then, there is another point and that point has already been touched by one of my honourable friends. My honourable friend Mr. Rupchand Bilaram has referred to the provision which says that it should be open to a party to retain two pleaders. That is a principle to which I must respectfully demur. It means adding unnecessarily to the cost of a litigant. There is no reason why a man should have the luxury of retaining two pleaders in that way. If he is a moneyed man, he can retain ten vakils or five barristers, but so far as his case is concerned, it would be wrong to award to him the fees of two vakils. I know, in saying this, I am going against the interests of a profession to which I myself belong, but, after all, the interests of the public must outweigh the interests of a profession to which an honourable member belongs.

There is still another point which has not yet been touched. I find that under one of the provisions of this measure if a pleader accepts a vakalatnama in a case and if he wishes to transfer it to a brother pleader, he can only do so with the permission of the court. That is a matter with which I am not prepared to agree. It must be left as a matter entirely as between the pleader and his client. We know in many cases judges are not disposed to grant such permission and serious inconvenience in such cases will be caused both to litigants and to practising pleaders, if this provision is retained in the bill.

Now, as for the question of professional misconduct, I believe that the matter has been thoroughly discussed by the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe and the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai. In the High Court of Madras a decision was given recently that being a director of a bogus company was improper conduct for a pleader and a pleader could be hauled up before the High Court for misconduct in such circumstances. That decision has been given under the Legal Practitioners Act. It will be for this legislature to consider whether it is right to subject a pleader to liability to be hauled up on the ground of professional misconduct for conduct which cannot strictly fall within the purview of his profession. Where are we to stop if such laxity is to prevail? What may be thought proper by one man may not be necessarily thought proper by another man. After all, it is the dignity of the profession that has to be maintained. Let that dignity be maintained with all possible rigidity, but to import considerations which are extraneous to a man's profession in weighing his conduct would surely be not only oppressive on the members of the legal profession, but to my mind it would be an unfair encroachment on the independence of the legal profession. If that is done, pleaders will always be in dread of the courts before which they have to practise. These points should be carefully considered by the select committee.

There are other points in the bill, but I do not think I should dilate upon them. I know that representations with regard to this bill have been submitted by members of the bar of various districts. At any rate, so far as I know, the members of the bar at Satara and also at Belgaum have sent in representations to your Excellency. Perhaps these representations were not received in time, and copies thereof have not been circulated among honourable members of this Council. But they will be circulated, I make no doubt, in due course and they should be given such weight as they deserve. This bill is very important and it ought to be very carefully considered by the select committee. With these few observations I have much pleasure in supporting the first reading of the bill.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—Your Excellency,—I have much pleasure in according my support to the first reading of the bill. This legislation was long overdue and I am glad that it has come before the Council now. After the speeches that have already been made I need not take up much time of the Council; however, I shall refer to a few points which I think require some notice. In the first place, as regards clause 8, which refers to the places where district pleaders are entitled to practise, I may observe that sub-clause (b) of the clause lays down that in the case of a district pleader he may practise in the court or courts which the District Judge may assign to him. But I think that when a pleader has got a sanad to practise in a district he ought to have the right to practise in any court in that district, without any permission from or restriction by the District Judge. When a pleader is admitted as a High Court pleader, the court does not restrict him to practise in any one district. In the same way, when a pleader is admitted as a district pleader, he ought to have the right to practise in any court in the district. The pleader is the best judge as to the particular place where he will practise. He will no doubt permanently choose one court, but if occasion arises, he should have the right to appear in the other courts of the district if he happens to get an engagement in any case pending in them. The restriction proposed does not apply to magistrates' courts and there is apparently no reason for it in the case of civil courts. I hope these points will be considered in the select committee.

PLEADERS' BILL.

[Mr. S. B. Upasani.] [3RD AUGUST 1920.]

Then we come to the question of fees. I think the fees allowed to be charged under the old regulation are inadequate, and the increase now provided for in the bill was necessary. However, I think that if the provisions embodied in the bill allow separate fees for every execution application, it would impose a very serious charge upon the litigant public. I think, for execution applications we need not allow separate fees unless the court specially thinks it reasonable in any case, considering the nature of the contest or the time involved in the hearing of the application. In such cases it may be necessary, but it ought to be left to the discretion of the court to allow it in any particular case for special reasons. I hope, this point will also be considered in the select committee.

As regards the point, which was referred to by some of the honourable members, as to the pleaders being allowed the option to appear without charging any fee if they so choose in any case, I think, a provision to that effect is necessary, and this should be made clear, as doubt exists regarding it, and the provisions in the bill as they stand may be interpreted to mean that he is not allowed to do so. I remember a case in which a suit was filed against a local municipality by a private individual who was a ratepayer. He was a poor man. As the subject matter concerned the whole town, two pleaders appeared for him without charging any fees. The first official notice which the plaintiff received was to be charged with income-tax, and when he appealed against the imposition of the tax the main question inquired into was as to what he had paid to the pleaders who appeared for him in the case, and when he stated that he had not paid them anything, a report was made by the District Magistrate moving the District Judge to take action against the pleaders for unprofessional conduct; but the District Judge after consulting the bar association took a sane view, and no action against the pleaders was taken. Next as to allowing fees of two pleaders to be taxed in certain cases, I may observe that two pleaders are not always engaged in the cases referred to in clause 20 of the bill, but occasionally a senior pleader is engaged at the final hearing or for argument and he is engaged by the day, and if that is so, the provision now in the bill should, I think, not be allowed to stand as it is. Clause 20 allows double fees only where a party has engaged more than one pleader before the first hearing of the suit, but even if he be engaged them after the first hearing, I think, the fees actually paid may be allowed to be taxed. I think this point should also be considered by the select committee.

There is a proviso to clause 19 which lays down that where costs are awarded to a party and the pleader's fee taxed is greater in amount than the fee settled under clause 17, the pleader shall be entitled to the excess when recovered. I do not see why, when the pleader has agreed to accept a certain amount, the party should be made to pay him any part of the excess which is recovered by him from the opposite party. In case the party had agreed to pay more than the taxed costs the pleader would not have consented to receive less. Therefore, when the matter is settled by a contract binding on the pleader as well as the party, any excess that is ordered by the court should go to the party himself and not to the pleader.

Then, as regards the punishment of a pleader by the High Court for professional misconduct, I think, the words "or otherwise" in clause 25 of the bill are rightly objected to, and I hope, those words will be removed.

As regards the point that district courts and subordinate courts should not take notice of unprofessional conduct but should report it to the High Court, I think it is asking for too much. I think that the presiding judge in the case of every court is always anxious to keep good relations with the bar, and he ought to have the inherent power of taking notice of unprofessional conduct in any case heard by him, and he should draw the attention of the pleader, and in only more serious cases should he report the matter for action by the High Court.

PLEADERS' BILL.

[3RD AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. S. B. Upasani; Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah; the Advocate General.]

It is suggested that the bar associations should have the power to report any misconduct on the part of the presiding judge. While some of our friends claim that right, they do not leave the judge to exercise the powers of discipline which he ought to possess, and this would be hardly fair.

Then as regards the wording of sanads for practising in the High Court and the district courts, I think, the differentiation proposed in the forms given in Schedule II is not justified. In most cases now, the district pleaders, like the High Court pleaders, are men who have passed the LL.B. examination, or the High Court pleaders' examination, and I think, any differentiation in the wording of their sanads is unnecessary and invidious.

Then in Schedule III it has been said that Rs. 15 should be the minimum fee to be charged in sub-judges' courts. If that is to be the limit, I think, it will, in some cases, exceed the amount of claim involved. I think, we may retain the prescribed minimum as regards the High Court and the district courts, but as regards subordinate judges' courts, I think, it may well be reduced to Rs. 10, if not to Rs. 5. With these few remarks, I support the first reading of the bill.

The Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah:—Your Excellency,—I want to say a few words so far as clause 25 is concerned. That clause lays down that the High Court may suspend or remove from practice, or may fine or reprimand, a pleader who has been guilty of a breach any of the provisions of this act or of any other improper conduct, whether in his professional character or otherwise. This, I submit, is simply restricting the liberties of pleaders. These are too wide terms. They may include anything. I know of an instance in Sind in which a pleader, who happened to be a member of the municipality, had a passage at arms with the president, and he was reported for the disciplinary jurisdiction of the Sind High Court. But luckily the High Court did not take any action against him. I am sure if the words "or otherwise" were in force at that time, the pleader would have been doomed for what he did as a member of the municipality. I think the select committee should carefully consider the words. They ought to be defined if it is decided to retain these words.

Then, I refer to a point raised by the Honourable Mr. Belvi. He said that the revised scale of fees was not sufficient. I quite agree with him that they might be increased. But I do not agree with him that the successful party should be given the actual costs incurred. It would be exceedingly difficult to ascertain the actual expenses. But I am quite in sympathy with him that the revised scale should be further revised. With these remarks I support the first reading of the bill.

The Honourable the Advocate General (Sir T. J. Strangman):—Your Excellency,—I think we are all agreed that it is in the highest degree desirable that the law relating to pleaders be consolidated and improved. At present it is scattered about in a number of ancient enactments, and it is exceedingly difficult for the ordinary person to ascertain what it is.

The provisions as to fees in the existing law are notably obsolete. They were settled, as the honourable mover said, something like 100 years ago. The present bill gives substantial advantages to the pleaders, and indeed to the litigant public in these respects.

Now, there is no doubt that there are numerous matters of detail, which involve very considerable difficulty in this bill, some of which have not been touched on here. I refer in particular to those dealing with the High Court, because we have to be particularly careful to avoid doing anything which may infringe the provisions of the Letters Patent. But, after all, these are all mainly matters of detail. There are, however, two matters of principle, with which I should like to deal. The first is in reference to the question of punishment. At present the provisions in regard to punishment are contained in Act I of 1846 which is a Government of India Act. It provides, among other things, that—

> "Where a pleader renders himself liable to a fine in the Court of a Principal Sadr Amin or Sadr Amin, it shall be competent to such Principal Sadr Amin or Sadr Amin to impose such fine:
> "Provided that an appeal from all orders imposing such fines shall lie to the Zila or City Judge, whose decision thereon shall be final."

And there is another provision, namely:

> "The rules applicable to pleaders in the courts of the Zila and City Judges shall henceforth be applicable, so far as they are capable of application, to pleaders in the Munsiffs' Courts."

PLEADERS' BILL.

[The Advocate General; Mr. B. S. Kamat; Sir G. Carmichael.] [3RD AUGUST 1920.]

As things stand at present, the subordinate courts have powers to fine pleaders practising before them. My honourable friend Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas referred to Act XVIII of 1879 as the latest pronouncement on the subject, and he read sections 13 and 14. There is only one clause of secton 13 that applies to Bombay, and that is clause (e). None of the other clauses apply to Bombay at all, nor does section 14. Clause (e) provides that the High Court may suspend or dismiss a pleader or mukhtiar who accepts any employment in any legal business through a person who has been proclaimed as a tout. In matters relating to touting, therefore, it is the High Court only which can deal with the offender. In other matters he may be dealt with by the subordinate courts. It is not, therefore, that this bill gives the subordinate courts powers which they had not got before. The truth of the matter is that the bill restricts the powers of the subordinate courts and confines the power of punishment to fewer people than those who possessed it before.

Now, the only other point to which I should like to refer is the one raised by my honourable friend Mr. Belvi. Supposing A litigates with B. A obtains a decree and B is directed to pay his costs. The Honourable Mr. Belvi asked why should A not get the whole of the costs that he has incurred. Curiously enough, he gave the answer to this question in another argument that he put forward in connection with another point. The answer is this. A may be unduly nervous or he may be unduly rich, and in either event he may be unduly free with his money. He may engage, as the Honourable Mr. Belvi said, 5 barristers and 3 pleaders. Why in reason should B be made to pay all the expenses of engaging them? The present policy of the law is that where B is directed to pay the taxed costs of A, he should pay such costs as the court considers it was reasonable for A to incur in the prosecution of the litigation. That policy is maintained in the bill. And, as I said before, the scale of fees has been increased with the result that the successful litigant will be very much more likely, when he gets a decree for costs, to recover the whole of the costs which he has incurred. At any rate, he will certainly be able to recover a reasonable amount.

The other matters, your Excellency, are really matters of detail and can be more appropriately dealt with in select committee.

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat:—Your Excellency,—All the previous speakers have been lawyers and they have spoken from their own point of view. As one of the litigant public and an unfortunate litigant, I venture to make only one suggestion for the select committee, and that is with reference to clause 18, namely, the computation of fees to be taxed. This bill provides a schedule of fees, Schedule No. III, according to which the bill of costs is to be recovered by the successful party from his adversary. The scale provides a certain percentage of fees from Rs. 5,000 up to Rs. 20,000; above Rs. 20,000 upto any amount the rate provided is half a per cent. What I venture to suggest is that there ought to be a maximum limit placed somewhere. There are civil cases, the value or the subject-matter of which may be, for instance, a lakh of rupees or a lakh and a half. The pains and trouble which the pleader has to take in cases, for instance, where the subject-matter is Rs. 1,00,000 are practically the same as those which he has to take when the subject-matter is, say, Rs. 20,000. In fact where the subject-matter is Rs. 20,000 or less, there may be more voluminous papers; the cases may be very complicated ones, and the pleader may have to take immense trouble; whereas on the other hand, in the other case, the subject-matter of which is, say, Rs. 1,00,000 or Rs. 2,00,000, the suit may very often be a simple one. The record may not be voluminous, and the trouble which the pleader has to take is not very much. Therefore, I think that it is necessary in the interests of litigants to place a maximum limit upon the fees to be taxed. If that is done, there will be a sort of protection to the litigants. The bill, as it stands, gives unlimited power to the courts in taxing the costs, which ought not to be allowed by law. The total maximum limit should be say, Rs. 500 or Rs. 700. How much the amount should be, is a matter for the select committee to decide. But in any case, I think it is necessary to put a maximum limit on the fees to be taxed.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—Your Excellency,—The motion before the Council has produced a most interesting discussion. There has been a general agreement on the main principles of the bill, and as was pointed out by the Honourable the Advocate General, any differences of opinion have been directed mainly to points of detail. Some honourable members have pointed out that some of these points of detail involve questions of principle. The Honourable Mr. Gokuldas Parekh made a remark, with which I entirely agree, that this bill is long overdue. The Honourable the Advocate General pointed out the misapprehension under which some of our legal members have been labouring with regard to the actual law on the subject at present. It certainly surprised me to hear the Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai begin by a statement that the whole of the disciplinary powers in the matter of pleaders vest in the High Court. There is perhaps some excuse for that statement. I find on looking to the publication containing Bombay Regulation II of 1827, that it is printed as if that regulation had been repealed. But in point of fact it has not been repealed. It has been printed not on the page on which it should have come, but in another part of the publication. It is in volume IV, page 1783. That may account for the fact that some of our legal members may have failed to acquire a knowledge of the existing law. The Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe said that the very fact that sub-judges—first, second and third class—very rarely exercise any of the disciplinary powers allowed to them spoke volumes in favour of pleaders. But the fact that they have not done so may possibly be accounted for by assuming that the courts in question were as much unaware of their powers as some of those who have spoken in this Council here to-day. The question of principle on which the discussion has mainly turned is with regard to the disciplinary powers to be exercised. I think the majority who have spoken are opposed to the powers being entrusted to district courts, the courts of sessions, the Chief Judge of the Court of Small Causes and the Chief Presidency Magistrate. This is a point which the select committee will have to consider.

PLEADERS' BILL.

[3RD AUGUST 1920.] [Sir G. Carmichael.]

The other question in connection with this matter of discipline is whether action should be taken not merely in cases of professional misconduct but also in cases of misconduct outside professional matters. It seems to me that some of those who dealt with this question omitted to notice the remark in the statement of objects and reasons that the power is one which the High Court already are exercising. They have the power to take action even in cases outside professional misconduct. The Honourable Mr. Belvi referred to a particular decision which, I think, is the same as that mentioned in the statement of objects and reasons in the remarks on clause 25. I think everyone will agree that it is perfectly right that the High Court should have the power to take action in cases of that kind. I understand that this is the practice in England also, and I am sure that the practice is for the good of the pleader's profession as a whole. I was somewhat statement of objects and reasons in the remarks on clause 25. I think, everyone will agree surprised to hear objection taken to this particular provision of the bill. It seemed to me that the safeguard which is devised for the maintenance of the dignity of the pleader's profession was one which would be welcomed by the members of the profession themselves.

The next point which was discussed was with regard to the payment of a retaining fee. That is a comparatively small matter. I do not think any principle is involved there. But it seems to me that honourable members overlook the fact that in order to establish a contractual relation between the pleader and his client it is necessary that the pleader should receive some consideration from his client. In any case it is a regulation which has been in force for the last one hundred years and I have not heard of any complaint having been made as regards the operation of this part of section 50 of Bombay Regulation II of 1827.

The Honourable Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas has said that it should be free to a pleader to offer his services to his brother or other relative free of charge. I think it is usually regarded as foolish to employ a relative either as one's pleader or doctor. I do not think the practice should be encouraged.

Coming to the question of giving the High Court power to require pleaders to join the local bar association, I think, in this Presidency we are in a very favourable position because of the confidence which exists between the High Court on the one hand and the bar associations on the other, and I feel sure that in the matter of maintaining the profession in its high reputation, the two will work together. Two honourable members rather surprised me by suggesting that such confidence does not exist. The Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe suggested that the High Court may be rather autocratic in ordering pleaders in particular districts to belong to the bar association of that district, and he suggested that the High Court should be required to consult the bar associations in the first place. At least that is what I understood his suggestion to be. But I feel that in these matters the High Court will always consult a bar association before they take action under clause 30. With these remarks, sir, I beg to move the first reading of this bill.

Bill read a first time.

The motion for the first reading of the bill was then put to the vote and carried.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—Your Excellency,—I beg to move that the bill be referred to a select committee consisting of the Honourable the Advocate General, the PLEADERS' BILL—BOMBAY DEVELOPMENT; IMPROVEMENT TRUST AND MUNICIPAL BILL.

[Sir G. Carmichael; the President.] [3RD AUGUST 1920.]

Honourable Mr. Parekh; the Honourable Mr. Belvi, the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe, the Honourable Mr. Sethna, the Honourable Mr. Seddon, the Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai, the Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta and the mover with instructions to report by the 1st of September next.

Bill referred to a select committee.

The motion for referring the bill to a select committee was then put to the vote and carried.

His Excellency the President:—The Council will now adjourn till 2-30 p.m.

The Council then adjourned for lunch.

After lunch.

The Council re-assembled at 2-30 p.m.

A Bill Further to amend the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898, and the City of Bombay Municipal Act, 1888 (Bill No. VII of 1920).

His Excellency the President:—Order, order. A Bill further to amend the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898, and the City of Bombay Municipal Act, 1888 (Bill No. VII of 1920), first reading.

His Excellency the Governor moves the first reading of the bill.

Gentlemen,—I rise to propose the first reading of a bill to amend the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898, and the City of Bombay Municipal Act, 1888. It is, I know, unusual though it is not unprecedented for the Governor of the Presidency to move the first reading of a bill put forward by his Government. But I am doing so because I desire to take this opportunity of personally explaining, not in close detail but in broad outline, the main purport of the policy that takes its beginnings from the measure here laid before you. The amendments are in themselves modest ones and give to the casual observer little indication of the reforms to which they are the necessary prelude, but in fact they represent the first links in a chain of measures, legislative and administrative, which have been receiving the anxious consideration of my Government for the last eighteen months and which are calculated in our opinion to effect a vast and radical improvement in the conditions of life in our great city. I do not think I need insist upon the crying need for this. For years past the need has been realized, for years past some attempts have been made, but, as it seems to me, the problem has never been tackled on sufficiently bold and courageous lines, nor has it been adequately recognized that whilst small improvements were taking place all the time the city was growing far faster than the amelioration, or that actual standards of life were increasing almost as rapidly as the numerical increase of its inhabitants. It is a sufficient proof of the horror of the conditions that two-thirds of the people of this city live in insanitary and airless one room tenements, and that more than 50 per cent. of the children born in this city die before they reach the age of eighteen months. For all that makes home life pleasant—light, air, space and cleanliness, it is indeed a city of dearth,—for the children it is a city of death. Our proposals, then, are intended to make a radical improvement of these conditions to ensure that every possible advantage should be taken of such facilities as nature has bestowed on the place for increasing the area available for building sites within its borders and to arrange, as far as skill and science can provide, that its development shall proceed on the best possible lines. The whole question is too large a one to deal with in one speech, and I cannot to-day attempt to deal with it in all its details. I am keenly anxious to secure the whole-hearted co-operation of the public, and in order to gain this, steps will be taken in the immediate future to place before the public in the fullest and most simple form, the details of the various projects which Government propose to carry out; for the moment, therefore, I propose to confine myself closely to the measure before this Council.

Its main objects are, firstly, to secure funds with which to carry out the scheme for the provision of improved dwellings for the working classes and, secondly, to secure funds for the assistance of the Bombay municipality. The latter are necessary not only to raise the general standard of municipal efficiency but also to enable the municipality to discharge their municipal duties in respect of the new areas that they will have to administer and make large provision for. To these two objects may be added a third, of comparatively minor importance, namely, the amendment of section 32G (1) of the Improvement Trust Act of 1898, so as to allow the payments made under the Poorer Classes Accommodation Scheme to be spread over a period of 50 years instead of 28. The problem of improving the housing conditions for labouring classes has been so continually before this Government and the public during the last twenty years that it will hardly be necessary for me to refer in any detail to its history. Briefly, however, it begins with the passing of the Bombay Improvement Trust Act, 21 years ago. Its object was partly to open up and improve lines of communication to the large vacant areas in the north of the island, and also—and chiefly so—to provide housing for the poorer classes of the people. For various reasons, the merits of which I will not here discuss, the latter policy was not fully carried out, and subsequently in 1913, the act was amended so as to enable employers of labour to utilize the credit of the trust and obtain on easy terms advances for the construction of residences for their employees. The provisions of this law were actually settled in consultation with the representatives of the millowners themselves. It is a matter of some regret that with the exception of one or two cases these facilities have not been taken advantage of.

As regards the areas in the north of the island, a great deal of valuable work has already been done. The eastern avenue is nearing completion and the land which is thereby made available is being rapidly taken up to the great advantage of the city. Furthermore, relief is afforded by the migration of middle class people from the congested areas to the north of the island and will certainly help to relieve the central congestion and indirectly increase the amount of housing accommodation for the lower classes. As against this, however, the rapid increase of the population, the industrial prosperity attracting to the city ever increasing quantities of labour makes it certain that even with the additional accommodation so far provided, the supply of houses in the central and southern parts of the island is still very much below the demand for them. But the creation of the Improvement Trust and the policy I have just outlined was further followed by the renewed careful consideration of the whole housing question by the Bombay Development Committee, which met under the presidency of Sir Claude Hill in 1913. Various recommendations were made then by this committee, and amongst them the principle was enunciated that it was the duty of the employer of labour to provide accommodation for a part of his operatives. To give effect to this principle, they recommended that the owners of mills should be compelled by law to take advantage of the facilities provided by section 32G (1) of the Improvement Trust Act; in other words, they should be compelled to take advantage of the loans offered by the trust and construct adequate accommodation for their employees, and that the other large employers of labour, the railway companies, should construct accommodation for their workers outside the island, at the same time making arrangements to convey them daily to and from their work.

The question was further considered by the Indian Industrial Commission, which visited Bombay in 1916 and devoted considerable attention to the subject. In their report they discussed in detail the recommendations of the Development Committee and considered that there was no precedent for the application of the principle of individual compulsion. Their view was that to force the millowners to erect houses for their employees would be to subject them to a heavy financial handicap. The burden so imposed would fall unevenly on different mills according to their financial position and the cost for which the land was available in each case. Furthermore, they held that it would be unjust to compel millowners to build houses for workmen unless the workmen were bound to occupy them. Finally it would be unfair to compel millowners to contribute in this way and exempt employers of other classes of labour from the obligation. For these reasons, as I say, they condemned the proposal of the Development Committee to apply the principle of compulsion to millowners. In its stead, while emphasizing the cardinal importance of improving the conditions of life, and of laying down a definite standard of industrial dwellings, and working out a regular building programme, they insisted that the cost must be shared by local bodies, namely, the municipality and the Improvement Trust, assisted, if necessary, by the local Government. They concluded by saying:—

> "If the existing resources of these bodies, together with such assistance as Government may be able to spare, are not sufficient for this purpose, then further taxation should be imposed in such a way as to fall mainly on the employers whose co-operation may most suitably be obtained in this form."

Action on these suggestions and those of the Bombay Development Committee was necessarily suspended by the war. But when the war came to an end, and this Government found it possible to formulate a definite line of action, it was found that owing to the increase of population which had taken place during the four years of war, and the recent rise in the prices of materials, which proved an impediment to the extensive construction of the dwellings for lower classes, the conditions were even worse than they were in 1913. The following figures will illustrate this remark.

BOMBAY DEVELOPMENT; IMPROVEMENT TRUST AND MUNICIPAL BILL.

[The President.] [3RD AUGUST 1920.]

In July 1919 the Municipal Commissioner reported that out of a population then estimated roughly at 12,00,000, nearly 8,92,000 resided in one room tenements. That taking four persons per tenement, the number of tenements required was 223,000, whereas the number of tenements existing was only 174,000; that there were further 15,000 tenements which, either because they were unfit for human habitation, or were structures of a purely temporary nature, ought to be replaced. The total shortage, therefore, was 64,000 tenements.

These figures showed clearly the serious shortage in the housing accommodation available for the working classes, and pointed to the necessity of a scheme of a really bold and comprehensive character, in order to effect the removal of an evil which was not only becoming a menace to the general industrial and financial prosperity of the city, but which had already become a serious danger to the health of the citizens of Bombay. Active enquiries were then set on foot as to the best method to effect a remedy. It was first proposed to apply the principle to which effect has been given on a large scale in England, and to arrange for large Government loans to be placed at the disposal of the Improvement Trust on easy terms, in order that the Trust should be enabled to undertake the construction of the houses and necessary buildings as well as to make the necessary financial arrangements. Further consideration, however, showed that the provision of housing accommodation for the working classes on this very large scale was never intended to be the duty of the Trust. Nor was the Trust equipped with resources enabling it to undertake such a great task. Moreover, the Trust had recently undertaken four large schemes of improvement, covering areas which amounted to one-ninth of the total areas of the island, in addition to the task of completing the six improvement schemes already on hand, the work of which had been delayed owing to the difficulties arising out of the war. Hence, it was decided that for the purpose of what may be called the direct attack on industrial housing, the Improvement Trust, except in one direction, namely, that of land provision, would not be able to render sufficient assistance. Out of the large areas which they will acquire under their schemes in the north of the island, the Trust hope to be able to provide land for at least 36,000 tenements.

Simultaneously with these enquiries, efforts were made to enlist the co-operation of leading millowners in Bombay in supplying funds for large housing schemes. Some progress was made in this direction, and offers of co-operation and financial support were secured from a large proportion of the millowners of the city of Bombay. But, on further examination, it was found that the possibilities of success for a scheme of this nature were doubtful. The arrangements were necessarily to be made on purely voluntary basis, and it was obvious that there was a risk of friction if not complete collapse, if at a future date any of the then consenting parties withdrew from the scheme. Further, the scheme was open to the objection that it was to apply to the millowners only. In the end, after careful examination, it was decided to abandon it. A further alternative was considered, namely, of erecting accommodation through the agency of the municipality of Bombay. But for reasons which will be amply apparent from the remarks which I shall make hereafter, this also was rejected.

Consequently, as a last resort Government have been driven to the conclusion that there is no alternative to direct Government action. The problem to be faced is the direct construction of additional housing accommodation, sufficient to supply the deficiency reported by the Municipal Commissioner in July 1919. That deficiency, as I have already mentioned, amounted to 64,000 tenements. Of this number, it is believed that 14,000 tenements can be supplied by the conversion and improvement of tenements now considered unfit for human habitation, and also by vacancies due to the migration of members of the middle classes to the new houses which are being built in the northern part of the island. The balance of 50,000 rooms represents a minimum, for which arrangements will have to be made.

For construction of this magnitude, the first requisite is an adequate area of suitable land. This, as I have already mentioned, is available for 36,000 rooms in the areas covered by the Improvement Trust schemes. The balance can, it is believed, be provided by reclamation in certain parts of the island. I will not at this juncture weary the Council with the detailed calculations, or our justification for those calculations. I will confine myself to saying that our rough estimate of the cost of these

BOMBAY DEVELOPMENT; IMPROVEMENT TRUST AND MUNICIPAL BILL.

[3RD AUGUST 1920.] [The President.]

50,000 tenements is some Rs. 5,50,00,000. It will, however, be quite clear to any one conversant with the conditions of industrial life in Bombay, that it will be impossible to expect a return from the rent of these buildings, which will meet the expenses incidental to a capital expenditure of this amount, much less the return of a profit. According to our estimate, the annual loss entailed by the scheme will amount to Rs. 13,50,000.

But this is not all the money we shall require. The close and careful consideration of the problems affecting this big city has convinced Government that the mere provision of accommodation on this scale will not be sufficient to effect a real improvement in the conditions of life of the lower classes, which is so eminently desirable. If Bombay is to be improved effectively and rapidly, if the municipal services are to be brought up to a standard which will be a credit to a city which claims to be the second city of the Empire, a very large capital expenditure in the immediate future is necessary. The municipality has recently laid down for itself a programme involving a large expenditure on the improvement of the water supply, which will increase the quantity of the water available for distribution from 50 to 90 million gallons a day. With regard to this particular improvement, it is unlikely that the corporation will require assistance, as the income derived from water will no doubt pay for the expenditure, and the corporation's powers of borrowing in respect of schemes of water supply are not restricted. But even if the question of water supply be left out of consideration, it is still estimated that a capital expenditure, amounting to some Rs. 6,00,00,000 will be necessary, if the wants of the city are to be met properly, and if conditions of life are to be improved with reasonable rapidity; and in particular improvements are required in the drainage and sewage of the island. The existence of large drainage works at Love Grove renders utilization of what might be a large area of excellent building sites impossible. The greater part of the northern half of the island has no system of drainage or sewage, so much so that the disposal of land made available by the recent Improvement Trust scheme is hindered by the lack of drainage facilities for houses to be built on it. A drainage expert of world-wide reputation has, Government understands, recently visited the Bombay municipality, and is now at work on a scheme which will, it is hoped, provide for the removal of the pumping station at Love Grove to the north-east corner of the island, and effect a radical and lasting improvement in the general scheme of the disposal of sewage.

The hospital accommodation in the city is much below the standard aimed at in large towns. Heavy expenditure will be necessary in the near future on additional hospital accommodation for infectious diseases, for tuberculosis in particular, also for the construction of the King Edward Memorial hospital in the north of the island, and for dispensaries in the more crowded parts of the island. A number of additional markets have to be provided, and those in existence still need improvement. The existing slaughter houses have for years past required modernizing, and the construction of new abattoirs on the latest pattern is, I understand, absolutely necessary. Larger and better accommodation is wanted for primary schools, in view of the unsuitability of many of the existing buildings and the increase of pupils which is expected on the introduction of free and compulsory education. Roads are in need of widening and improvement everywhere.

The cost of effecting improvements in these and other directions is estimated to amount to at least 6 crores of rupees, the interest on which, at whatever rate you calculate it, shows a formidable figure. The principal security for the payment of municipal loans at the present moment is the general tax, the maximum for which is fixed at present at 12 per cent., while the rate actually imposed is 9½ per cent. As regards this, however, the corporation have asked for an amendment of the act, raising the maximum from 12 to 17 per cent., and Government are taking in hand the amendment of the Municipal Act on these lines. It is calculated that each additional 1 per cent. will yield 7·97 lakhs. Even allowing for a very considerable increase in the rate of general tax, it is clear that the municipality is not in a position, at the present moment, to raise the capital which is necessary if Bombay is to be rapidly developed and improved. Assistance in the form of revenue derived by indirect taxation is indispensably necessary.

In the bill which is now placed before you for consideration, Government propose to take power to impose a town duty not exceeding rupee one on every bale of cotton weighing 3½ cwts., which is brought into the city and island of Bombay. This duty, unlike other town duties, is not likely to be refunded when cotton is exported out of Bombay. The average imports of raw cotton by land and sea other than those received from foreign countries during the past 10 years have been approximately 28 lakhs of bales. Of these, approximately 17 lakhs have been exported. Assuming that the annual maximum yield of the duty of one rupee would amount to Rs. 28,00,000, it is proposed to assign to the municipality the amounts levied on cotton consumed within its limits or 3/7ths, and appropriate the remainder, or 4/7ths, partly for the financing of the housing scheme, the details of which have been placed before you, and partly for other development purposes which will be explained hereafter. The collection of the duty like that of other town duties will be entrusted to the municipality of Bombay.

BOMBAY DEVELOPMENT; IMPROVEMENT TRUST AND MUNICIPAL BILL.

[The President.] [3RD AUGUST 1920.]

I have dealt so far with schemes of which the object is to improve the housing of the lower classes and increase the efficiency of municipal administration. They are schemes of very great magnitude involving large expenditure; but the Government is convinced that they do not exhaust the possibilities of direct action and that the time has come to take a very much wider view of the position. The history of the growth of Bombay has been that of the amalgamation and development by reclamation from the sea of the Heptanesia or cluster of 7 islands. Until 25 years ago the bulk of the resident population were massed about the southern half of the main island. The past 25 years have seen the gradual extension of the residential area towards the north, a process which will be quickened and facilitated in the near future by the large schemes of the Improvement Trust now in hand. But the creek on the north and the north-east has hitherto constituted a physical and, in some senses, an administrative barrier to the further development of the city. Of the two, the physical barrier perhaps has been of less importance as it has been partly surmounted by the Mahim and Sion causeways, and will be further minimised when the new roads now contemplated are built to Chembur and south Trombay. But the administrative barrier requires more careful consideration. It arises out of the fact that the areas which adjoin the other side of the creek and the harbour are included in the revenue divisions administered by Commissioners whose headquarters are situated as far away as Ahmedabad and Belgaum. My Government has studied this problem very carefully, and has come to the conclusion that rearrangements must be made which will remove such barriers altogether. I will not discuss that reorganization in close detail. But for the control of this reorganization as well as for the elaboration of the schemes tending to the rapid, businesslike and orderly expansion of our policy, Government propose to constitute a special department of Government working directly under Government, but hampered by as few red tape rules and as little trammelled by old-fashioned methods as possible. Government has been fortunate enough to secure the services as Director of this department—Development Department as it is proposed to style it—of Sir Lawless Hepper whose reputation as a sound man of business is well known to the Bombay public. It was in my opinion necessary to secure for this post a man not only experienced in the direction of a large organization but a man with wide knowledge of those traffic problems which, after the initial stages, will become so important a factor in the proper development of this city and its suburbs. In addition to this, if no delay was to be incurred, it seemed to me essential not to obtain the services of a newcomer who was unfamiliar with Bombay, its history, geography and problems, and would take a year or two to become conversant with them, but some one who was already fully equipped with all local knowledge and could give all the wealth of his experience to the solution of our difficulties.

As regards the duties of the Directorate, the most important will be of a financial character. The Right Honourable the Secretary of State has throughout taken a very keen personal interest in our housing proposals, and we have similarly received the co-operation and support of the Government of India on this question. The result is that my Government has obtained permission to raise a loan for the purposes of development and for financing such specified local bodies as may desire our assistance. In future such borrowings by these local bodies as well as by Government for development purposes will be handled by the Development Directorate if they need its services, and it will be its duty to keep in touch with the markets and endeavour to see that the demands for financial assistance from the public are made at the most convenient seasons and with the maximum of support. I am sure that when the appeal for subscriptions to our loan is made that it will be cordially received and that the patriotism of the citizens of Bombay will see that schemes put forward by this Government shall not languish for want of funds. Information as to the details of our proposed loan will, it is hoped, be before the public shortly.

Briefly, then, the Directorate will

(a) carry out with the assistance of its engineering staff the Back Bay Reclamation Scheme and any other reclamation schemes which may be found necessary in or near Bombay city.

BOMBAY DEVELOPMENT; IMPROVEMENT TRUST AND MUNICIPAL BILL.

[3RD AUGUST 1920.] [The President.]

(b) It will undertake the whole of the industrial housing scheme.

(c) It will organise systematically the supply of building materials for its own work and of those works with which it is connected. One of the main reasons for the inadequacy of housing for the present day, as I have already mentioned, is the high cost of materials. It seems to us unlikely that the shortage of housing will be made good unless the State steps in and enables private individuals and companies to build more cheaply than they can to-day.

(d) It will take over from the existing Secretariat all questions relating to the acquisition of land in the city of Bombay and all questions regarding the utilization of Government land. It will be consulted with regard to all proposals affecting land in Bombay city which are submitted by local bodies and railway companies. I wish here to emphasize the fact clearly that the Directorate will not have any powers whatever of interference with existing local bodies other than those which Government at present has. It will merely do on a wider scale and in a more efficient manner what Government has already been doing, or I should rather say, what Government would have wished to do but which for lack of personnel and organization it has not been able to do when confronted with such large and imperative reforms. We wished particularly to avoid creating any new authority; we wished our own authority, however, to be as effective, expeditious and prompt as we could make it in view of the immense task ahead of us. Its success must, therefore, depend largely on personal influence and on the public experience of its utility inasmuch as it has no new powers of interference of any sort.

(e) It will carry out large schemes for the systematic development of Salsette. This can be effected in two ways; (1) by town planning schemes to be carried out by local authorities, and (2) by the purchase of areas outright with a view to resale after development with the least possible cost.

(f) It will secure an adequate water supply for the whole of Salsette when it is developed as an urban area. Provisional arrangements for the immediate future have been made with the Bombay Municipality, but it is probable when the area is developed, this will be inadequate. If this is so, an alternative supply must be obtained.

(g) The Directorate will do its best to deal with the supply and distribution of the electrical energy in the area outside Bombay. Transmission lines of one of Messrs. Tata Hydro Electric schemes run across Trombay, while those of another are being erected towards the east of Salsette. A central authority will be useful for the control of the supply of both for domestic and industrial purposes.

(h) The Directorate will also take over the improvement of communications with Salsette. The question of improving railway communication with Trombay is already under discussion with the G. I. P. Railway, but that of linking up with Bombay city large areas in Salsette which are so admirably suited for residential purposes but are practically without communications remains to be considered and grappled with.

(i) The Directorate will co-operate with the Port Trust in the development of the Bombay port, more particularly if the scheme is ultimately adopted, in the development of a new dock area and ship-building area on west Trombay. A proposal to transfer to this area the Royal Indian Marine Dockyard is also under consideration.

I have occupied you long enough—but the subject is so fascinating that I find it difficult to stop. I trust I have said enough to justify the remarks I made at the beginning of my speech that this humble bill which I bring before you to-day is the first link in the chain of measures which will, it is hoped, bring a new era into Bombay city. I appeal to you to give it your best consideration and show your confidence in the schemes we place before you by passing it into law. By so doing you will, I am sure, be securing the interests of your constituents and advancing the ordinary development of the great city of which we are all so proud.

Gentlemen, that concludes the broad outlines, and only the broad outlines, but such an outline as it is proper to give to this Council on the first reading of the bill. We hope to fill in the broad strokes—I have attempted to paint here a very big subject—very shortly, as I told you, by the widest possible information to the public. But there was some newspaper criticism a few weeks ago of a perfectly friendly character complaining that we did not follow up the publication of our bill by immediate information to the public at large on a matter in which it is deeply interested. My colleagues and I felt, as I always feel, that the right place to give information on a matter of this importance was on the floor of this Council to the honourable members who represent the Bombay Presidency, (hear, hear), and I thought, therefore, that the public would forgive me if I withheld giving that information for another two or three weeks so that I might present it to you personally here and hear your opinion upon it. I will only add a few words. You will see, I hope, that we have not been idle in the last eighteen months. At any rate, when you come to examine closely the size of the frame in which the picture, I have depicted, lies, you will realise that it has meant a tremendous lot of work to all concerned, and I would like here to pay the warmest tribute I can to those officers of Government and members of the Improvement Trust and of the municipality who have kindly given us assistance and advice in making our proposals. You will observe that we have tried to cater for four great needs. We have tried to cater on a big scale, but none too big a scale, for the housing of the labouring classes. You will see that in Back Bay, if Bombay is to remain and extend as a great business centre, we have provided for what I call the housing of the wealthier classes or rather I should say the business houses, for offices and all the other big buildings which are necessary in a great town. You will see that in schemes some of which or all of which lie in the hands of the Improvement Trust, we are trying to provide ready made land suitable for the accommodation of the middle classes who need it, the lower paid middle classes particularly whose need in housing is almost as much, if not more, than any other section of society in India to-day. You will have seen that we have spread out in our imagination and in our proposed action, towards those areas which are healthy areas and which seem, but for a few barriers that could easily be overcome, to be the natural suburban areas of this great city. We have taken in hand the question of Trombay. We have taken in hand the question of Salsette. Government recognize their responsibility, and I hope, you will recognize by what I have told you that they recognize their responsibility, but they do not absolve employers of labour nor the local authorities from their responsibility also. Proposals have been framed whereby it is hoped that all three of us may move forward together to the same goal with a fair burden distributed on each of us. You will see that we are intending, so far as in us lies, that no delays of procedure in our Government Departments can be held to our charge.

BOMBAY DEVELOPMENT; IMPROVEMENT TRUST AND MUNICIPAL BILL.

There are a very few people—there are many perhaps—who are better acquainted with the horrors of the slum conditions in Bombay than I am myself. I venture to say that I have been into many of them and been in as close quarters to them as any member of this Council, and anyone who realizes the inevitable results of any delay in a measure of this kind, now already too long delayed, must recognize clearly the responsibilities of breeding up an unhealthy, an unfit and squalid race of people. Unless we give them better air, better light, better cleanliness and better conditions, we shall not breed a race worthy of this great city. It is open to us to do it to-day. We are not ignoring equally the child problem. That has been taken in hand by other people in the Bombay Presidency with a vigour which I cannot but praise and with a success which, I hope, will still further be augmented. We are attempting to tackle this problem on every side, and I am perfectly confident that if you look at this measure with a fair eye and realize that in the end it will appertain not only to Bombay city, but the influence of these great reforms will spread to all the other great industrial cities in this Presidency and elsewhere, you will have the satisfaction yourselves of having taken the first step on the road; for I believe that social service in this country is more important than tons of politics. To improve the conditions of the people is the greatest platform in the policy of the greatest statesman, Mr. Disraeli. You will have taken that step yourselves.

I conclude by asking for the generous and full-hearted support not only of yourselves but of all the public which you represent.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta:—Your Excellency,—While supporting the first reading of this bill, I wish to congratulate your Excellency on behalf of the corporation for the bold and courageous, and I may add, the comprehensive manner in which your Excellency has attempted to tackle the problem which, as you correctly said, has been exercising the minds of local public bodies for the last twenty years. I remember, your Excellency, and I believe it was on the next day after you landed in this country, that you went round with the then Chairman of the Improvement Trust, the Honourable Mr. Orr, to take a complete view of the housing conditions in the city, and while appreciating all that had been done by the Improvement Trust and the municipality—Mr. Orr, who is an old friend of mine, told me—the one remark that your Excellency made was that sufficient provision had not been made by the Improvement Trust for the working classes. That fact alone, your Excellency, shows the keen sympathy and the deep regard that you expressed, directly after you landed, for the great mass of the working population of Bombay. I do not think the most ardent supporter of the Bombay municipality could have produced a more satisfactory catalogue of the work that has been done by that body than was mentioned by your Excellency in your eloquent address. It is difficult to speak, sir, directly after hearing this address embracing the various points that have been touched on by you, and I confess

BOMBAY DEVELOPMENT; IMPROVEMENT TRUST AND MUNICIPAL BILL.

[3RD AUGUST 1920.] [The President; Mr. C. V. Mehta.]

that I should have liked some notice of the very large and very comprehensive schemes that have now been adumbrated. I must say, your Excellency, that I should have also liked some word of appreciation for the work that the municipality and the Improvement Trust have done in the past, even though the city may still be called by your Excellency a city of dearth and death.

His Excellency the President:—I thought I had done so. I am recognizing the immense amount of work done by these bodies. If I did not say so, it was purely an omission on my part.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta:—I thank your Excellency.

I am now speaking with considerable diffidence and I am reserving to myself the liberty of obtaining the views of the Bombay municipality, whom I have the honour to represent in this Council, on the scheme of administration which has been so suddenly placed before us and which practically gives no voice to the Bombay municipality. I think, sir, that it may be said that a scheme of this magnitude and of this complexity could not perhaps straight away be handed over to a body which is going to be composed of 100 members. At all events, I appreciate the opening remarks of your Excellency where you stated that you were anxious to obtain the co-operation of the public and where you further stated that you wish to make the public teachable. I would like to add, your Excellency, on behalf of the corporation that the corporation in a matter of this character would give the most whole-hearted and earnest support, and that they would like to share in this important work. I believe, sir, that in the recent legislation that has been adopted in England to overcome the difficulties which apparently are not confined to the city of Bombay alone but which are felt in all parts of the world, I believe, it has been provided that local bodies are to do the housing on a large scale, and that because of the high cost of materials and the high cost of building, and because rents will not be obtained at a remunerative rate, assistance by Government is to be given to the local authorities, for a certain number of years, if my recollection is correct, in order that the housing problem may be solved. I venture to think, your Excellency, that this is not a matter which pertains only to Bombay city, and perhaps it would be agreed that there are many other worse cities in the Presidency of dearth and death. And I should like to ask, sir, whether it is the intention of Government to take up the work of the expansion and housing for all these cities by means of independent bodies. And I venture to think, sir, that it would be necessary, if the work has to be carried out in the same broad-minded manner in which Bombay is going to be dealt with, to take the assistance of local bodies and to get the work done through local bodies assisted by Government. In some part of your speech your Excellency rejected the alternative of the agency of the Bombay municipality for reasons that were to follow later on. I am afraid I could not find the reasons specially stated, and I venture to point out to your Excellency that it was when the housing conditions became acute in Bombay, that more than two years ago the Improvement Trust, which I take it, is practically now the municipal corporation, put forward schemes which, your Excellency correctly pointed out, involved the expansion of the city to the extent of about one-ninth of its area involving over 1,500 acres. So also the municipality of their own account have handled the improvement of other large areas known as Mahim Woods. And I must say, sir, that while the recommendations of the committee that was appointed by Government to which your Excellency referred, presided over by Sir Claude Hill, did not bear fruitful results, the municipality and the Improvement Trust have been doing their best with the small resources at their command. The municipality have of their own accord raised the general tax from 12 per cent. to 17 per cent. They have undertaken the sewage problem and the removal of the Love Grove pumping station, and of its own initiative it is at present considering the widening of the limits of Bombay. I may mention here, sir, that this particular point of the extension of the limits of the city of Bombay, has not been turned down by the corporation. But on the contrary there are several members of the corporation who desire that not only Coorla and Ghat Cooper be included within the limits of Bombay, but that Bandra should be added also.

Now, sir, it is difficult for me at the present moment to exactly appreciate what will be the relations between this new board and the Bombay municipality.

His Excellency the President:—It is a department of Government and no new board.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta:—It is difficult to appreciate what will be the relations of this new department of Government and the municipality. I do not know, sir, whether it is not right that the municipality should have some voice or share in a work appertaining to local self-government.

Your Excellency referred to the question of reclamation. It is well known that the committee appointed by Lord Sydenham's Government on which I had the privilege to serve, very favourably reported upon the scheme and pointed out convincingly that it would be a great financial success. This necessary development of the city was, however, vetoed by the Government of India.

BOMBAY DEVELOPMENT; IMPROVEMENT TRUST AND MUNICIPAL BILL.

[Mr. C. V. Mehta; Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna.] [3RD AUGUST 1920.]

I do not wish to take up the time of the Council any further. I would only add that conceived in the broad spirit and pushed on with the persistence and drive of your Excellency, I feel sure the scheme will achieve the success which the late reclamation scheme failed to do, and I am sure every possible assistance will be forthcoming from the corporation to solve what it has recognized as a very serious problem of the day. I should only wish to reserve to the corporation the right to consider this question themselves and to offer any suggestion they may wish to make.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna:—Your Excellency,—The public of Bombay will hail with delight the momentous pronouncement you have made to this Council to-day and for which they have been waiting for many months. The Honourable Mr. Chunilal Mehta has referred to your visit to the slums of Bombay the day after you arrived in this city. So far as I remember on the very day of your landing, in reply to the municipal address, your Excellency observed that the housing question of the city of Bombay would receive your earnest attention. From what your Excellency has said to-day we quite realise why it is that it was not possible for your Excellency to lay before the public a full and a complete scheme any earlier than now.

The scheme as propounded by your Excellency will lay the foundations of a greater Bombay and enable us to deserve that title which at present is disputed by other cities in the Empire, the title which your Excellency referred to, viz., that Bombay is the second city in the Empire.

You, sir, have acquainted us with the programme which you propose for the capital city of this Presidency. It will I am sure take many years to accomplish all that you have planned out, but you have set the ball rolling and we feel confident that, because of the energy and push which is so characteristic of your Excellency's administration, you will have the satisfaction of seeing a great deal during the time that you will continue to be with us.

Your Excellency quoted figures giving the number of the citizens of Bombay who occupy one room tenements which works out at nearly eighty per cent. of the total population. The conditions of these one room tenements are such that 80 per cent. of the population live in filth and squalor, and what you are now proposing will give to the poorer classes better habitations than what they have been accustomed to. The immediate effect of this change will tell on the health of the public and reduce the present heavy rate of mortality. Our labouring classes will become healthier and stronger which will enable them to earn more money and consequently all this will contribute to the prosperity of the city itself. Therefore, sir, directly and indirectly the scheme will be doing incalculable good, the full benefit of which we will realize more and more as time goes on.

A reference has been made by the Honourable Mr. Chunilal Mehta to the reclamation scheme which was initiated so far back as Lord Sydenham's time. It is, sir, unfortunate that the development of the city of Bombay was not taken in hand at that time. If it had been taken in hand then, we would not have had to put up with the hardships that face us to-day in the matter of the shortage of houses. It is said that the mistakes of to-day ought to prove the stepping stones of to-morrow's success. We have made serious mistakes in the past. Let us profit by that experience and set to work in a manner that will ensure success in the future.

Your Excellency, conditions in the city of Bombay are at present so abnormal that values of lands have been unduly inflated, and it is a matter of common knowledge that lands at present have appreciated in value to the extent of not being doubled or trebled, but in many cases have increased to ten times what they were only five years ago. Speculators have entered the field, but profiteering has gone on to such an extent that reaction has begun to set in with the result that there are already many who find themselves in the position of not being able to complete their purchases at the prices agreed upon. I sincerely hope that the Back Bay reclamation you have referred to, the proposed area of which we have not been told, but I am informed, is to be about 1,100 acres, will help to improve the situation. It is well known that land in the Fort is at present sold at Rs. 1,000 to Rs. 2,000 per square yard. At a most liberal estimate the reclamation of Back Bay cannot cost Government more than rupees twenty per square yard, and if that estimate is correct and if Government choose to sell reclaimed land at say, about Rs. 100 per square yard, it will mean a handsome profit to Government, and at the same time will help to bring down the price of the neighbouring land from its present giddy heights and check the heavy speculation that has been so rampant of late.

Your Excellency observed in reply to the criticism which is made in the press that your Government did not make public the scheme earlier, that you did not do so because you thought that this Council was the proper place to announce it at first. After that explanation I shall not persist in the criticism I intended to make, viz., that so far as I know, whenever the Bombay municipality offers any amendment, or whenever Government choose to amend the Municipal Act, the draft of the bill showing the amendment is invariably sent in advance to the corporation for its opinion, before the bill is presented for the first reading. I take it, sir, that your reasons for not doing so on the present occasion were what you have explained, and I have, therefore, nothing further to say in the matter.

BOMBAY DEVELOPMENT; IMPROVEMENT TRUST AND MUNICIPAL BILL.

[3RD AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna; the President.]

Whilst you have told us that out of the revenue of 28 lakhs to be raised by the proposed town duty on cotton you will allot to the municipality three-sevenths therefrom or a revenue of 12 lakhs, we have not been told whether these 12 lakhs are to be earmarked for any particular purpose. I am in the same position as my friend the Honourable Mr. Chunilal Mehta, namely, that the entire scheme has come upon us as a perfect surprise and we are not in a position, on the spur of the moment, to offer any considered remarks as we would like to do. But, sir, we understand from what your Excellency observed that because of the proposed developments, the Bombay municipality, in addition to the very large amount of money which it will have to spend in the increase of its water supply, will also have to spend, as you stated, about six crores of rupees in building new markets, widening roads, extending hospitals, putting up new abattoirs, etc.

His Excellency the President:—I was only giving a rough estimate and was speaking in general terms.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna:—I quite admit it, your Excellency. What I am trying to point out is that we do not know what exactly the municipality is expected to do in return for the twelve lakhs which your Excellency's Government propose to give them. That is my point, and as I say, in the absence of any previous information, we are more or less at sea in regard to what comments we make to-day. You are allowing us a revenue of twelve lakhs of rupees. Now, sir, at to-day's rate of interest we could not possibly borrow at less than $6\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., when the Government of India are themselves borrowing at 6 per cent. free of income-tax. Therefore, twelve lakhs a year will allow us to borrow from the public at the very most to the extent of a crore and a half, and it appears to me very doubtful whether a crore and a half will allow us to meet all the liabilities which the municipality will be saddled with in connection with the proposed improvements. I hope, sir, that before the second reading of the bill comes up, the municipality will be put in possession of all details, so that we may put forward our case before your Excellency's Government.

Now, sir, with regard to the development directorate, your Excellency has told us that it will be a part of Government, but fortunately it is to be free from red tape. I hope, sir, that this department will work more expeditiously than most departments of Government are wont to do, and that your Excellency's expectations in the matter of the development directorate will be realized. But, sir, my honourable friend Mr. Chunilal Mehta, who is the representative here of the Bombay municipality, has drawn our attention to the fact that there will be no representative of the municipality on this directorate, and further we have not been told if, like the Improvement Trust or the Port Trust, Government contemplate that the Director of Development is to have the benefit of the advice of local men in the shape of an advisory board or aught else. I appreciate all that has fallen from your Excellency in regard to the merits and worth of a man like Sir Lawless Hepper. Bombay knows him and he knows Bombay, but with due deference there will be many citizens in Bombay who will perhaps be able to give points even to Sir Lawless Hepper in connection with development schemes, if they happen to be on the board. Your Excellency has not informed us whether the Director is going to have autocratic powers. If, sir, as I hope, he is not to have autocratic powers, I would suggest that the select committee on this bill should recommend the appointment of an advisory board consisting partly of some members of the Bombay municipality. All these points will have to be carefully considered by the select committee before the bill is brought forward for the second reading.

One more point, sir, and that is that no indication is given to us in regard to the period for which this directorate is to exist. Is there to be any time limit, or is it to continue indefinitely until whatever programme is put before it is accomplished? When the Improvement Trust was started in 1897 we were distinctly given to understand that that Trust would last for about 20 to 25 years, and your Excellency's Government has now promised to transfer it to the Bombay municipality. I would like to know, sir, if it is possible to inform me whether there is any intention that some day this directorate will cease to exist or be transferred to the municipality, and whether there is any time limit

BOMBAY DEVELOPMENT; IMPROVEMENT TRUST AND MUNICIPAL BILL.

[3RD AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna; the President; Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas.]

fixed or that Government desire that this directorate shall continue as long as everything that is contemplated has been completed by it. With these few remarks, sir, I support the first reading of the bill.

His Excellency the President:—May I just once more remark, in view of the speech of the honourable member and of other speeches that may be made, that the honourable member has fallen into the same error, which I once before pointed out, in looking upon this department of Government with the same analogy as would apply to the existing organization. It is actually going to be a department of Government. If the existing departments could undertake the work, it should have been done, for instance, in the Revenue Department. I might have asked the Honourable Mr. Mead here to do the work; but he has got other important work to do, and we shall have to put on a new department. That department is going to handle development and only development. It is merely a department of Government. I inform honourable members of it because it is a very important feature for co-ordination of all our schemes. I should not like honourable members to be under any misapprehension; it is purely a department of Government.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna:—We yet know nothing about the details, your Excellency. Admitting that this will be a Government Department, I hope that the suggestions which have fallen from me will be duly considered in regard to this new Government Department being helped by an advisory board.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—Your Excellency,—Before I commence my remarks on the bill before the Council, I should like to add my humble voice to the note of appreciation voiced by the previous two speakers in admiration of the bold and statesmanlike scheme which your Excellency's Government has put forward before the Council. The scheme is for Bombay city alone and will benefit Bombay city. Inasmuch as Bombay is the capital city of the Presidency and claims to be the most important port, aye, the gateway of India, I suppose Bombay has the right to count on assistance from other parts of India in financing this scheme. As a citizen of Bombay it may not be quite natural for me to strike a jarring note on this occasion. But I feel, sir, in connection with the remarks which your Excellency made in introducing the bill, that you have referred lightly to the source from which the scheme is going to be financed. Your Excellency will certainly pardon me if I happen to strike a rather discordant note on this occasion. I refer, sir, to clause 3 of the bill before the Council, and this has been explained in the statement of objects and reasons by the Honourable Mr. Curtis, who says—

> "It is proposed to empower the corporation to levy a town duty of one rupee per bale of cotton that comes to Bombay."

In fact, the whole of this scheme is to be financed, if I may say so, at the expense of the cotton cultivators, both of the Bombay Presidency and of those outside districts whose cotton happens to pass through Bombay. I do ask your Excellency's permission to dilate a little on this subject which I am sure will be a question of principle, and an important principle, in the consideration of this bill. The important question is, who is likely to pay this tax of one rupee per bale that the Bombay municipality will levy on cotton that passes through Bombay?—a tax which, speaking in commercial terms, comes to Rs. 2 per candy, the "candy" being the unit of weight in the cotton market. I submit, sir, with all deference that, as long as India is not the principal cotton market of the world, this duty will be coming out of the pockets of the cotton growers. As the Council knows, the biggest cotton growing country in the world is America, with a produce of anywhere up to about 15 million bales. India comes a bad second, with about 5 million bales. The majority of the cotton grown in India has to be exported and the value of the cotton that has to be exported depends upon the value of the American cotton as the standard. If this is the case—and these are bare simple facts—I cannot help feeling, and I hope that the Council also may be convinced of it, that when all is said and done, this duty that will be collected by the Bombay municipality will mean so much loss to the cotton cultivator. I do not know if it is an exploded theory of political economy, but when I was at college, if I remember it rightly, I remember to have read that when a country has a surplus to export, the price of the whole quantity is decided by the price available for the surplus that has to be exported. If this theory has not been exploded since I left college about twenty years back, I submit, sir, that for every bale going out of Bombay—and Bombay at present exports the bulk of the Indian cotton—we shall be paying two rupees less to the Indian cotton grower; and inasmuch as Bombay is the most leading and the first cotton market in the whole of India, it may mean two rupees per

BOMBAY DEVELOPMENT; IMPROVEMENT TRUST AND MUNICIPAL BILL.

[3RD AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas.]

candy less to our cotton growers. I admit that this may be considered too much of a technical view of the thing. I may be told that cotton fluctuates anywhere from Rs. 200 to Rs. 300 a candy and that it has done so during the last few years. That is true, but may I point out that some cotton which could be sold in 1917-18 and 1918-19 at Rs. 600 per candy is unsaleable to-day at Rs. 150 a candy. The full significance of this point may not have been appreciated when the bill was drafted or when the scheme was under the consideration of Government. As your Excellency may remember, I offered only to strike a discordant note. I do not propose, sir, in the slightest degree to vote against the first reading of the bill. But I do wish that this rather important aspect of the bill should not be overlooked by the Council, and I am very anxious that the Council passing a measure like this should not be quoted in the future as a precedent. I have been told that it is only a weak man's excuse to plead that this may prove to be the thin end of the wedge. I submit, sir, that we may have to plead that it is the thin end of the wedge and I want it to be very emphatically on record that this shall be no precedent to be quoted hereafter.

Most of the cotton that is grown in India finds its way down to Bombay and owing to the enterprise and the boldness of the mercantile community in Bombay, Bombay has got the most important, even though it be a most fluctuating, cotton market in the whole of India. But owing to the general rise in things generally there has been a rise in the charges of handling cotton; cartage, transport charge and godown hire have all gone up, and one way or another the cost of handling cotton has gone up considerably in recent years. Only a few years ago a cotton bale could be handled at a cost of eight to ten annas. You cannot do it to-day under two rupees a bale. I may be told that, if these additional charges have been stood, why not an additional rupee per bale imported into the city? I would only point out that there is open competition between the various mukadum firms, and if these charges for handling cotton are put up, the Council may take it from me that they are put up only when it is absolutely necessary to do so, and not otherwise.

During the four years of the war, owing to various difficulties, especially as regards the supply of wagons and transport facilities, a good deal of cotton found its way from the Central Provinces to Calcutta for export to Japan. It will be satisfactory to know that Karachi is growing as a very important shipping port, and although Bombay need in no way be jealous about it, that is not a matter that can be lost sight of. We have before us the prospect of a broad gauge railway line straight to Karachi, and it is quite possible that if the handling and transit charges at Bombay are avoidably piled up like this, the cotton market in Bombay may suffer in its turnover.

I do not wish to be styled as offering merely destructive criticism. A question may be asked as to the alternative. I take it, sir, that our claim to charge the cotton that comes to Bombay for consumption or export, is, that it is after all Bombay city, and the municipality if you like it, that has built up Bombay, and brought it to its present state of utility. If so, I submit that the same would apply to imports into Bombay from outside. Nobody would like to suggest for such taxation articles necessary for industry or for purposes of life. But surely there can be very little objection, sir, to imposing a duty on motor cars, wines, tobacco, jewellery, etc., and I venture to say that it may have to be imposed, in order to get the rather big sum of Rs. 30,00,000 a year, also on piecegoods from abroad. I was discussing the same subject with a few honourable members of this Council yesterday, and very naturally I asked "Supposing you had a free hand in this matter and you had not to refer to anybody"—that was only a hypothetical suggestion—"Would you tax raw products of the country or the manufactured articles that are imported from outside, a tax which would give some protection to your own local industries." I can easily guess, your Excellency, the probable reasons why this may not have suited Government. Your Excellency has very emphatically put it to us that the whole scheme could not or ought not to be delayed a minute more or a day more than we can possibly help. I am fully aware that the Government of India control the Customs, and if a town duty had to be imposed on articles imported from outside, perhaps some sort of very important discussion would have to be carried on with the Secretary of State, and also with some of the chambers of commerce in England. It is for this reason and on this understanding, sir, that I said that I did not propose, in spite of the remarks that I have made, to oppose the first reading of the bill. But I do wish, and I beg your Excellency's permission to repeat it, that it should be on record that this shall not be considered as a precedent, and that if this is sanctioned by this Council, it is only being sanctioned as a very exceptional step. Personally, I wish that some other substitute could have been found for taxation. After all, it is a raw produce of the country, and the return to the cultivators on it is not always uniform, nor has it been anything very big so far.

BOMBAY DEVELOPMENT; IMPROVEMENT TRUST AND MUNICIPAL BILL.

If the end is not to be taken to justify the means, then in spite of the usefulness of the scheme to finance which this town duty is being put on, I submit that it is not quite correct. At the same time, for considerations which I have just referred to, I would be quite satisfied with a record on the Council minutes of my humble views in this connection.

The Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji:—Your Excellency,—I also rise to support this bill, and join in the congratulations that have been offered to your Excellency by the previous speakers. I congratulate your Excellency because you have taken a very bold and a very wise step in the direction of ameliorating the condition of the people of Bombay. That is a matter which was found, up till now, a very difficult one, and your Excellency's Government is determined, I am glad to say, to tackle it very boldly, and I hope that it will meet with complete success at your Excellency's hands.

Speaking as a member representing the trade and commerce of Bombay, I wish to draw your Excellency's attention to one thing and that is that when these schemes are properly considered, I hope, your Excellency's Government will devote due attention to the expansion and development of trade and commerce in this city. As the Honourable Mr. Sethna has pointed out, the difficulty as regards office accommodation in the fort is getting to such a pitch, that if there was no Rent Act, it would have been impossible for anybody to get office accommodation at all. That is the position in the fort of Bombay, and the same is also the case with regard to the other requirements of trade in the heart of the city. There also the same difficulty is being experienced, and I hope, your Excellency's Government will take into due consideration the future expansion of trade and commerce.

Speaking on the point raised by my honourable friend Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas, as to who will pay the tax of Rs. 2 per candy which is proposed by this bill, I think, the consumer will ultimately pay it, and not the cultivator. Of course, so far as the cotton exported from Bombay is concerned, it will be a loss to the cultivator, but so far as consumers in India use this cotton, they will have to find the money to pay this tax. Of course, there is one point—and a very important one—which has to be taken into consideration, and it is this. I am afraid that perhaps this Rs. 2 may act as a means of diverting the trade of Bombay to another port, and if that should happen, we shall have to be very careful about it, and I think, due consideration will have to be paid to this point. Another thing is that the mills will have to pay this tax in the first instance. Bombay mills are using about 11 to 12 lakhs of bales of cotton every year. That means that the duty that will be paid by Bombay mills will be about Rs. 12,00,000. Taking Ahmedabad as our competitor, and a very strong competitor, the industry in Ahmedabad will be benefited to that extent, and therefore, that point has to be taken into consideration also.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas pointed out that instead of taxing cotton we should tax piecegoods. Your Excellency knows that the imported piecegoods are subject to 7½ per cent. Imperial import duty, and if that is increased, it will be the consumers that will have to find that extra duty. With these remarks, I congratulate your Excelleney once more for placing this bill before us.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Your Excellency,—I quite appreciate the value of the great scheme which is at the bottom of this legislation, but the main point with which one coming from the mofussil areas is concerned, is on whom the burden of financing the scheme which is to form part of this bill is going to fall. It is apparent that all the cotton which is imported into Bombay is not consumed in Bombay, and that all the cloth which is manufactured in Bombay is not used in Bombay. Consequently, the chief question with which we are concerned is, granting the value of the great scheme which has been placed before us, whether the proposal to finance it is a sound one or not. If the town duty is to fall on the grower, then it will affect the man in the mofussil, and he will be unjustly dealt with. If it falls on the consumer, then the Indian consumer outside Bombay will have to pay, because all the cloth manufactured in Bombay is not used in Bombay, but goes outside, so that the question is, whether we are wedded to the imposition of town duty on raw cotton in order to finance the scheme, and whether we cannot find any better scheme for the purpose of meeting the expenses or making sufficient provision for paying interest and creating a sinking fund. While appreciating the big scheme, I have my own apprehensions with reference to the incidence of this town duty,

BOMBAY DEVELOPMENT; IMPROVEMENT TRUST AND MUNICIPAL BILL.

[3RD AUGUST 1920.] [Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; the President; Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas.] and I think, if it is possible, it ought to be open to the select committee to consider whether they can devise any other means in order to finance the scheme. Of course, if articles of luxury were taxed, and if they could yield sufficient income, that would be a proper direction in which to look for the money, but I have my own apprehensions with reference to the incidence of the town duty proposed, and I, therefore, place my views before the Council.

His Excellency the President:—I should like to express my thanks to the various honourable members who, apart from minor criticisms of details, have been good enough to congratulate my Government on the attempt they are making to deal with a big reform. My honourable friend Mr. Chunilal Mehta seemed to take something that I had said as being somewhat inappreciative of the efforts of the municipality. I think he need not have done so. When I said, as I do say, that I thought this problem has not in the past been tackled on sufficiently bold and courageous lines, I referred not to the municipality only, but to every other authority that has had to do with it. My Government is, to some extent, to blame. I think, everybody has been unable for various reasons—I do not say it is impossible to do it, but I think it is now necessary—to redress the evil by taking bolder measures than it has been possible to take in the past. And I hope my honourable friend understands that.

One honourable member—I think it was the Honourable Mr. Sethna—wished to know roughly what the acreage of land available in the Back Bay Reclamation Scheme would be. The acreage we expect to get is 1,143 acres. He also said that he would have liked Government to consult various local bodies before introducing this bill. I cannot entirely agree with the honourable member there. In any case it would not have been practicable. I am sure the honourable member will realize the great difficulty there is in dealing with so many authorities as a local government has to deal with, first of all, with itself, then with the Government of India, then with the Secretary of State, and finally with the Treasury. He will thus realize that to get a scheme of this magnitude and so much of detail passed through these four authorities with the intervening series of delays, is a much bigger task and requires a great deal more of telegraphy than some honourable members are aware of. The result of all this was that we received the necessary sanction only a very few days ago, just in time to introduce this measure in the Council, so that we might not be delayed for the whole of another year, or, in practical working, a year and a half. If the sanction had been delayed by a few hours, the Bombay Housing Scheme would have been held up for a year and a half. Therefore, I hope the honourable member will recognize that we could not consult any local authorities until we had obtained the sanction. He will, therefore, understand that the matter is not after all quite so simple as it looks.

Now, the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas did not look at this problem entirely with the sheriff's eye. He looked at it, and probably very rightly, from the trade point of view. I shall, however, expect him in future to look at such things from the Sheriff of Bombay's point of view, regardless of all trade considerations. But he felt some anxiety, and I feared he was going to embark upon one of the most vexed questions of political economy, as to the incidence of any particular tax. He was bold enough, I think, to hope that the theory which he enunciated and which was in vogue some years ago, has not been exploded. Well, I myself took part in a very complicated economic controversy that engaged the Home Government and the House of Commons, which split the party into fragments at the time of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain. And I should reply to the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas by saying that I have not the slightest doubt that every theory of political economy has been constantly exploded over and over again within the last 15 years. But I do not entirely share his view as regards the incidence of the tax. After all, the money has to be found from somewhere. The money has to be found in a way that will do as little damage as possible. I am not telling the Council that this way is the most ideal, the most practicable in the world. I think, however, it is the best way that we can manage. As the honourable member himself said, the prices of cotton daily fluctuate within very large sums. He suggested that it was 200 per cent. more than the tax we intended to impose.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—What I said was that they did fluctuate, last year and the year before, three or four times.

His Excellency the President:—It would be quite sufficient for my point of argument to show that if they fluctuated three or four times, the incidence of the tax is not going to be very serious. He has also begged—by this I suppose he means—that the proposals for any town cess should not form a precedent for future action, on the theory that this is the thin end of the wedge.

BOMBAY DEVELOPMENT; IMPROVEMENT TRUST AND MUNICIPAL BILL.

[The President; Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas; Mr. M. de. P. Webb.] [3RD AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—It may be easy to enlarge it in future.

His Excellency the President:—I am glad, at any rate, he recognizes that it is a thin end. As regards the future, I cannot give him any pledge or guarantee. But so long as I am in Bombay, I am not likely to undertake another housing scheme of this magnitude. I quite understand his point of view. But I do not think there is much force in the thin end of the wedge argument at all. In any case this is only the first reading of the bill. And then, future Councils will have even more power than they have now, to have their say in all matters. There will be longer discussions; there will be bigger Councils; they will sit more days; and they will see that Government will not find it very easy to get bills through against popular will, so that, I think, he need have no anxiety on that score. One point he has made of some importance, and that is the possible diversion of trade which one rupee per bale may make. I do not know even the Rs. 200 or Rs. 300 per bale would divert the traffic very much. But I can assure the honourable member that we should watch a matter like that with the very closest scrutiny, and if we ask him to do something and support something—not merely not to oppose something but support something boldly for the good of the whole of the Bombay Presidency—he need not run away with the idea that we are going to do something which is going to weaken the prestige or the financial stability of the Bombay Presidency. Any question of diversion of trade from Bombay in an uneconomic or unfair manner would of course have the attention of my Government.....

The Honourable Mr. M. de P. Webb:—We have already a terminal tax on cotton imported into Karachi.

His Excellency the President:—The honourable member is, I suppose, prepared to defend the position in Karachi.

I think I have dealt with most of the points which honourable members have made. I do not think they can find, if they try, any other method of raising the necessary moneys for a reform which nobody in this Council will, I am sure, gainsay, in a way that will do trade or industry, the consumer or the grower, in this country at any rate, less damage than the proposals we have made.

I forgot to mention one point in reply to the Honourable Mr. Sethna. I did intervene to point out that honourable members had not quite appreciated what the Development Department was going to be. I want to reiterate what I then said, and I think, I have no doubt made it clear. Honourable members went on to suggest that the municipal corporation should be represented on the Development Directorate. It was that request or suggestion which drew my attention to the obvious fact that honourable members had entirely failed to appreciate what form of body this was going to be. No corporation or outside authority could be represented on Government as such. What I have stated is that we merely desire our own authority to be as expeditious and efficient as possible. Instead of dealing with any overworked and highly-charged department, we are creating a department of our own, new and up to date, to deal solely with these matters, with no additional powers of interference of any kind. So the request made by honourable members will at once appear to be an unnecessary one.

There was one other matter as to whether we were going to propose to earmark—as I understood the question, correct me if I am not stating it properly—to earmark any of those funds which the corporation were going to receive under the proposed town duty for any specific purposes. You had not, I think, quite understood the situation. It is shortly this, that the corporation has to discharge many obligatory functions and duties which are imposed upon it under the Municipal Act, some of which were referred to in my speech as pointing to a need for a much larger expenditure. Government realize that with the resources the municipality have at present, it is going to become more and more impossible for them to deal with the ever increasing duties which are being imposed upon them in an expeditious and satisfactory manner without an increase of revenue. We do not propose in that sense to earmark these funds at all. You will get so many lakhs. But as our lands get ready and developed, the obligatory duties of providing sanitation or water or roads or whatever it may be, will naturally fall on the local authority in developing the town. We recognize that these things have got to be satisfied by the municipality. It is no use our preparing new lands for development if you cannot help to make them habitable, and it is obvious that you must have more revenue when we are assigning so large a proportion of the town cess which we propose to raise. I hope I have made myself quite clear. It is for general purposes merely a recognition of your ever increasing duties and responsibilities and expenditure.

Finally I omitted to give this information to the Council. Some anxiety has recently been expressed as to the future of the Improvement Trust. The matter of the transfer of the Improvement Trust to the corporation is not a matter which can be settled by a stroke of the pen. I quite agree that there has been some delay. The delay was unavoidable. It was due partly to myself—very largely to myself—and will be brought to an end at once, that is to say, the draft of the act has been prepared. It is in its final stages, and as far as I can calculate, although I make no absolute pledge, the transfer of the Improvement Trust to the municipality should take place some time in the early spring, that is, in March next year. That is what it looks like as far as we can see. At a greater speed it could not be done. But the fact that you had a new Governor at the time, and the fact that I had to look round dealing with these large improvement scemes, necessitated some little delay, not any delay on the part of my honourable colleagues but on the part of myself, (I should like to be quite frank), delay in deciding as to whether the transfer was quite right. I came to the conclusion that the original decision was right and should be given effect to promptly. Therefore, there will be no further delays other than those which are absolutely unavoidable. I hope that will satisfy any anxiety which any honourable member may have on the matter.

I think that there are no other points which honourable members have raised, and I will, therefore, ask this Council to give this bill a first reading.

Bill read a first time. The motion for the first reading of the bill was then put to the vote and carried.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Your Excellency,—I rise to move that the bill be referred to a select committee consisting of the Honourable Sir Dinshaw Petit, the Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji, the Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta, the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas, the Honourable Mr. H. P. W. Macnaghten, the Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna, the Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh, the Honourable Mr. E. G. Turner, and the mover, with instructions to report by the 1st of September 1920.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Setha:—May I request, sir, that the time be extended to 15th September 1920?

His Excellency the President:—If that is done, I am afraid it will not be possible to take in the second reading of the bill at the next Council meeting.

Bill referred to a select committee. The motion to refer the bill to a select committee was then put to the vote and carried.

(His Excellency the President at this stage withdrew and the Honourable the Vice-President occupied the chair.)

A Bill further to amend the Bombay Rent (War Restrictions) Act, 1918, and to amend the Bombay Rent (War Restrictions, No. 2) Act, 1918 (Bill No. XI of 1920).

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—A bill further to amend the Bombay Rent (War Restrictions) Act, 1918, and to amend the Bombay Rent (War Restrictions, No. 2) Act, 1918. Bill No. XI of 1920. The Honourable Mr. Curtis.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Mr. President,—This bill has been described in the agenda as due for first, second and third readings. In view, however, of suggestions, that have been made to me, I propose to move only the first reading, and suggest that if the first reading is passed in this Council, that it be referred to a select committee.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis moves the first reading of the bill.

The object of the bill primarily is as stated in the statement of objects and reasons which is on the table.

Clause 2 is to prevent a landlord from recovering possession of any premises on the false plea that the premises are reasonably and bonâ fide required for the erection of buildings or for his own occupation or the occupation of any person for whose benefit the premises are held.

Clauses 3 and 4 provide that no distress warrant shall be issued in the case of premises of which the monthly rent does not exceed Rs. 30, and that no suit shall be entertained in the case of any premises unless the applicant or the plaintiff, as the case may be, produces an order which will show their standard rent or that they are not small premises. They are defects which have been found by the experience of the Rent Controller and others to require amendment. I therefore propose that this Bill be read a first time.

Bill read a first time.

The motion for the first reading of the bill was then put to the vote and carried.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis :—Mr. President,—As the Council has approved the first reading of the bill, I now rise to propose that it be referred to a select committee composed as follows :—The Honourable Mr. Seddon, the Honourable Sir Dinshaw M. Petit, the Honourable Mr. Parekh, the Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta, the Honourable Mr. Turner, the Honourable the Advocate General and the mover with instructions to report on the 1st September 1920.

Bill referred to a select committee.

The motion to refer the bill to a select committee was then put to the vote and carried.

A Bill further to amend the Bombay Port Trust Act, 1879 (Bill No. XII of 1920).

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—A Bill further to amend the Bombay Port Trust Act, 1879, Bill No. XII of 1920. First reading. The Honourable Mr. Curtis.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Mr. Chairman,—This bill has also been entered in the agenda of this Council as due for first, second and third readings. Suggestions, however, have reached me that some criticism is likely as regards various features of the scheme which the Port Trust is going to carry out. I therefore desire, if the first reading of the bill is carried, to refer it to a select committee in order that the various criticisms may be threshed out in the circumstances. Therefore, subject to the Council's pleasure, I propose that the first reading be taken to-day and that after it has been referred to a select committee, we should take up the further readings of the bill at the next meeting of this Council, which is to be held on September the 27th. The objects and reasons have, I understand, been correctly stated on the paper appended to the bill. The object of the bill is to amend the Port Trust Act in order to give the trustees of the port power to erect and manage hotels both of a temporary and permanent nature which will meet the convenience of ocean-going travellers and thereby increase the facilities of the port. It is a matter of common knowledge that the port is at the present moment singularly deficient in hotel accommodation and that travellers arriving there have to spend their nights on station platforms, on the bunders and similar places for want of space in which to lay their heads. Therefore, in order to remove this inconvenience, it was necessary to place at the disposal of the Port Trust a large part of the building primarily intended for educational purposes. Prima facie, therefore, any measures taken by a public body which will increase the convenience available for the public will be welcomed.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis moves the first reading of the bill.

As to the actual details of the scheme, that is more for the Port Trust than for an honourable member of this Council. But I think that there will be no honourable member of this Council who will differ from me that the conveniences at present provided in Bombay are not such as should be provided in a port of the magnitude of Bombay. Therefore, any action taken by public bodies to increase those conveniences and to enable the city to remedy, what I am almost tempted to call, the disgrace now arising from the lack of facilities for the accommodation of travellers—any measure taken in that direction will be cordially welcomed. With these words I beg to propose the first reading of the bill.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—Sir,—I conceive, it would be interesting to the Council to know that this bill has been introduced by Government at the request of the trustees of the port of Bombay. I have the honour to be one of them and had the misfortune to differ from the majority of the Port Trustees when this question came up for discussion before the Port Trust Board in February last. In the ordinary course a trustee of the port, if on the Council, would support any demand that the Port Trust may have made for an amendment or alteration in the existing act. But this bill comes before the Council not unanimously from the Port Trust but by a majority. I do not think it is necessary for me to inform the Council of the constitution of the Port Trust,

PORT TRUST BILL.

[3RD AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas.]

but, I think, I may mention in passing that in the Port Trust we have sixteen trustees in all, of whom seven are elected, five being from the Bombay Chamber of Commerce and two being from two Indian bodies; one for the Indian Merchants' Chamber and Bureau, and one from the Grain Merchants' Association. The other nine represent the military, H. M.'s Marine, Customs, the Agents of the two railways, the Municipal Commissioner, and three Indians nominated by Government. When this question was discussed by the Port Trustees there was a division, as I said, and the division was that myself with two elected members of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce opposed the Port Trust approaching Government for the purpose of this amendment in the Port Trust Act. I think, I may read to the Council the grounds that I advanced on the Port Trust Board as opposing their resolution. I said that—

"(1) I consider that the first duty of the trustees is to provide facilities for the trade and that they would not be justified in locking up land which might at some future date be required for shipping purposes;

(2) the capital expenditure involved would be at least Rs. 50 lakhs and having regard to the heavy capital expenditure on new works which the Port Trust will have to finance during the next few years, I consider it unwise to undertake this additional liability;

(3) the difficulty of running a hotel on remunerative lines is always considerable, and if the Port Trust undertook the management, they would run a considerable financial risk, once the present temporary scarcity of hotel accommodation disappears."

One of the Port Trustees who voted with me put forward the grounds thus. He pointed out that under normal conditions the passenger season only extends over six months of the year, and he thought it probable that during the other six months the hotel would run at a loss. He pointed out that it would take the Port Trust as long to erect a hotel as if it were done by private enterprise, and he agreed with the arguments already put forward against the locking up of Port Trust funds for this purpose and the appropriation of a site which might be required for other purposes in the future development of the port.

This would, I trust, be sufficient to give the Council an indication as to the grounds on which there was difference of opinion amongst the trustees of the port when this question was decided upon. Now, I think it would be useful to examine what are the existing facilities provided by the Port Trust for ocean-going passengers. After all it is merely stated that powers are to be given to the Port Trust for the purpose of a hotel for the accommodation of ocean-going passengers. I do not know whether the hotel is to be built for ocean-going passengers only, but there is no doubt, as said in the statement of objects and reasons, that the hotel will be for the convenience of ocean-going passengers mainly. Since the completion of the Alexandra Docks we have got the following facilities provided by the Port Trust. We have got the mole station where special trains come in right up to the wharf, whence mail steamers start. The Port Trust have provided rooms at the mole station for the convenience of ocean-going passengers who may not wish to go straight on board a boat from the railway train and may wish to wait for a day or two in Bombay before getting on board a steamer. During the last two years, or rather since the signing of the armistice, it was difficult to get passages and some people who were anxious to get to Europe tried to secure passages of somebody who may be prevented from going, the steamer companies offering such passages at practically the last moment. At that time there was a dearth of hotel accommodation in Bombay and the Port Trust did allow the use of the upper part of the mole station for the purpose of passengers stopping there, and arrangement was made with a caterer so that they could be served there. I do not at all wish to suggest, sir, that this was anything like adequate provision. But my point is that the Port Trust, as far as the port is concerned, has provided facilities by which passengers coming into Bombay need not stop in Bombay at all. If, however, any passengers must stop in Bombay, in view of the dearth of hotel accommodation, the Port Trust has till now done what it could. I submit to the Council that it is not necessary for the Port Trust to put up a hotel. In view of the liability that is ahead of the Port Trust and in view of the fact that a hotel put up at this time may cost a lot, and when within the next five or seven years' things return to the normal, this would not appear to be an opportune time to amend the Port Trust Act as suggested.

PORT TRUST BILL.

[Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas.] [3RD AUGUST 1920.]

It has been mentioned that in Europe several ports have hotels put up on convenient sites. I suffer from the disability of not having travelled outside India, but I have been making inquiries, and I understand that not only in Europe but in Japan and America, it is the railway companies that put up hotels. I dare say there may be an isolated instance here or there where some Port Commissioners may have put up a hotel. I venture to submit that it is railways in the western countries that are concerned with hotel accommodation and not port authorities. And if the railway companies in India have not thought it necessary to put up hotels, I do not think it is right for the Council to pass this amendment of the act without reference to the commercial bodies that pay for the Port Trust and constitute the Port Trust revenues.

I may say that this question of asking for additional powers from the legislature was decided by the Trustees in last February. There was ample time for Government after that to consult the commercial bodies as to what they thought about the matter. That not having been done, the only opinion that we have before us—I do not know whether it is before honourable members on the table—but what we read in the papers is that the Indian Merchants' Chamber have written to His Excellency protesting against this bill being hurried in this Council.

I submit, sir, that if it is necessary for any public body to put up hotel accommodation, by all means let it do so, and I certainly think that the first duty of that nature lies on the two main railway companies. However, perhaps it may be said that this Council has no control over the railways, and that the control over the railway companies is vested in the Railway Board, and that Bombay wishes to do the best it can out of the resources at its disposal. If that is to be taken as the basis on which to go, I submit that it is not necessary to give the Trustees the power to build a hotel as suggested. The Trustees command vast areas of land which they could lease out either for a lower rent than normal or for a very nominal rent or almost no rent at all. But the reason why this power to build a hotel and to run a hotel is required is, as far as I am able to gather, in order to run a hotel on what is called real first class lines. It becomes necessary that the Port Trust should build, equip and run a hotel. I certainly feel, sir, that that is going too far at the expense of a public body and absolutely too far, when the bodies or persons who pay revenues to the Trust are not even consulted.

The important and urgent works before the Port Trust can be enumerated roughly as follows: To build chawls for labourers and houses for the staff. In this connection I will refer to a question put by the Honourable Sir Dinshaw Manockjee Petit at the meeting of this Council on the 13th of March 1918 when he asked:—

> "Will Government be pleased to state what is the number of employees employed in the Bombay Port Trust drawing a salary of Rs. 40 and under, and have the Port Trust provided quarters for such employees?"

And the reply of Government was:

> "The information asked for by the Honourable Member is available only so far as Port Trust employees drawing Rs. 30 a month and under are concerned. The number of such employees, including those on the temporary staff, is ordinarily about 11,400 and that the Port Trust have provided quarters for 30·6 per cent. of this number."

Now that shows how much remains to be done by the Trustees. Of course this was the state of affairs in 1918. The Chairman of the Port Trust who is here will tell the Council how many more houses have been put up for the labourers. I submit that these are the directions to which the Port Trust ought to turn their attention immediately.

Then there is the new cotton green which is likely to cost a crore and a quarter, and the latest scheme about another dock which is under consideration by the Trustees.

It has been said that there is a lack and dearth of housing accommodation and hotel accommodation in Bombay, and therefore, the Port Trust ought to put up a hotel. An esteemed member of this Council was telling me that there is such a dearth of motor cars and ticca gharies in Bombay that on his way to Poona he could not get a hack victoria or a taxi to take him from Grant Road to Victoria Terminus and he had to go by tram. And might it not, therefore, be suggested that for the convenience of ocean-going passengers the Port Trust ought to provide taxicabs and motor cars? I submit, sir, that in one very substantial direction, the Port Trust could afford facilities for the purpose of hotels being put up. As I said they have land available and they could offer one of these plots to a hotel company. But I do not think that at this stage it is advisable or necessary to give the power asked for by the Trustees by a majority.

PORT TRUST BILL.

[3RD AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas; the Vice-President; Mr. Munmohundass Ramji.]

I wonder, sir, as this bill is being introduced suspending the usual rules, if I move an amendment, at this stage, whether you would allow my doing so.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—I think the bill is quite in order.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—The bill was not published in the Bombay Government Gazette eighteen days before its introduction, as required by the rules. I should have thought that it was always a matter of courtesy from the chair to allow an amendment in such cases.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Under rule 33 of the Rules for the Conduct of Council Business notice of an amendment must be given. His Excellency has already suspended the operation of rule 32 in connection with this bill and has allowed the bill to be brought before this Council.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—This bill was published on the 23rd July and perhaps it was received by honourable members on the 25th, that is, seven days before the meeting of this Council. So there could not be seven days' notice given after the bill was in the hands of the honourable members. I propose therefore,

"That the first reading of this bill be postponed till the September sessions of this Council and that in the meanwhile the bill be referred to the following nine bodies:—The Piecegoods Merchants' Association, the Rice Merchants' Association, the Grain Merchants' Association, the Iron Merchants' Association, the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, the Indian Merchants' Chamber, the Millowners' Association, the Cotton Trade, and the Bombay Trades Association."

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—I should interpret that as a direct negation of the motion at present before the Council.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—I say that the consideration of the first reading of this bill be postponed.

The Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji:—Mr. President,—We have a precedent of this character. When Mr. Patel was in the Council and we were considering the question of commercial suits, it was proposed by me, if I remember rightly, that the consideration be postponed and that the opinions of the different commercial bodies may be obtained in the meantime.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—I beg to move a motion that the first reading of this bill be postponed till the September sessions and that in the meantime the bill be sent for opinion to a few leading commercial bodies in Bombay.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—I wish to point out with regard to the conditions which the honourable member wishes to attach to his motion that he is not entitled to attach conditions for a motion for the adjournment of business before this Council.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—Then I move only the first part of it, namely, that the first reading of this bill be postponed till the September sessions of the Council.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—This Council will now adjourn till 11-30 a.m. to-morrow.

The Council then adjourned till 11-30 a.m. on Wednesday, the 4th August 1920.

His Excellency the President:—Order, order. A bill further to amend the Bombay Port Trust Act, 1879 (Bill No. XII of 1920). Further discussion on the motion of the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas to postpone the consideration of the bill to the next session.

The Honourable Mr. G. W. Hatch:—Your Excellency,—The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas yesterday afternoon complained that this bill had not been referred to local bodies in Bombay for their opinion. I desire to bring to the notice of the Council that the constitution of the Bombay Port Trust provides for the representation of five elected members of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, and two by such body or bodies as Government shall from time to time select as best representing the interests of the Indian mercantile community. In addition, of the members nominated by Government under present arrangements, two are selected from the municipality. In these circumstances, it will be seen that the Bombay Port Trust is a thoroughly representative body, and I submit that a proposal of this kind, sent up by the Port Trust after due deliberation and considerable discussion extending over several meetings, should be considered by this Council now, and that the suggestion that it is necessary or desirable to refer it back to Bombay and take the opinion of local bodies there, is, in my opinion, purely obstructive, and I hope, will be rejected by this Council. The bill which the trustees have sent up to this Council asks for powers to enable them to construct, maintain and manage such buildings, including hotels, as may, in the opinion of the Board, add to or improve the facilities of the port. There is a subsidiary section to which I will not refer at this stage. Before granting the powers for which we ask, I believe, this Council will require to be satisfied, firstly, that there is a shortage of hotel accommodation and a need for more hotel accommodation for ocean-going passengers; secondly, that it is within the province of the Port Trust to provide that accommodation; and thirdly, that it is within its financial resources.

On the first point I do not propose to say a great deal. In the discussion on the Cotton Duty Bill yesterday, attention was drawn to the fact that people cannot get hotel accommodation in Bombay, and things are going from bad to worse. I have one figure which is rather a remarkable one, and which I would like to put before the Council. It is in the latest report of the Port Officer. He tells me that the number of ocean-going passengers—saloon passengers only and not deck passengers—which arrived in and departed from Bombay, during the twelve months ending 31st March last, was 109,7.7. That is a very remarkable figure.

Of course it will be said that a great many passengers arriving in Bombay do not require hotel accommodation because they go away upcountry at once. But I am quite sure that if in Bombay we had adequate hotel accommodation to offer them, many who now leave by the first train would go to hotels and spend a day or two in Bombay, which would all be to the good of the trade of Bombay. Another point is that ships frequently arrive too late to enable passengers to catch their trains. During the last twelve months we have had many instances in which the Port Trust have been obliged to allow passengers to remain on board their ship in dock on the night of their arrival. Such an arrangement has involved great trouble and inconvenience and a certain amount of expense in the engagement of a special staff.

PORT TRUST BILL.

[4TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. G. W. Hatch.]

The case of the outgoing passengers is still more troublesome. Ships do not always leave on the advertised dates, and passengers coming from upcountry without previously making hotel arrangements, frequently find themselves stranded.

I believe that no further argument is required to prove the proposition that more hotels for ocean-going passengers are necessary in Bombay. I submit that it is the business of the Bombay Port Trust to provide at least one hotel for the accommodation of these passengers, and I will give you my reasons. It is the business of the Port Trust to provide "terminal facilities." "Terminal facilities" may be defined as convenient arrangements for the transfer of passengers and goods between one stage of a journey and another. In so far as a Port Trust provides good terminal facilities, so far is it doing its duty to the public, and it will receive its reward in attracting additional passengers and additional goods. We cannot divorce passengers and goods. We cannot say we will look after merchandise and neglect the merchant. Out of every 20 people that land in Bombay I believe that not less than 19 come to India for some purpose connected with the business or administration of the country. It is our duty to look after them in the same way that we look after the goods that come from overseas; and if we can provide in Bombay better accommodation than is to be found in other ports of India, we shall gain our reward by attracting more passengers. Up to a few years ago the Port Trust had done very little for the ocean-going passengers. Up till a very few years ago passengers were landed over-side in the harbour at all seasons of the year, and people must have compared the facilities that were then existing with those at other ports, very greatly to our disadvantage. Well, we have improved things a great deal since then. We have provided a deep sea pier. We have provided waiting rooms, refreshment rooms and retiring rooms at the Ballard Pier, all of which directly contribute to the convenience of passengers. I am afraid that in the provision of even these facilities we have already gone outside the scope of what is permitted under the act. We, therefore, lie at the mercy of this Council and ask them to legalize what has already been done, by passing this bill. I am sure that public opinion in Bombay will strongly support all that has been already provided for the convenience of ocean-going passengers. As the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas remarked yesterday, we put a certain number of beds last year in one of the waiting rooms which was divided into cubicles. We turned it in fact into a hotel. I do not think the Council would desire the Port Trust to perpetuate these cubicle arrangements.

I do not think it is possible to argue that a hotel on the Ballard Pier would be anything else than a great convenience and facility for ocean-going passengers passing through Bombay, and it is for this reason that the Port Trustees have come to the conclusion that it is their duty to provide such a hotel.

I now come to my third point: our financial ability. The temptation to dilate upon our resources is very strong, but I shall restrain myself and be content with saying that within the last five years our income has doubled. We now have an income of two crores per annum; and it is still rapidly growing. With such an income can we not run to the expenditure of erecting a hotel? So far we have no plans nor estimates of cost. An eminent architect in Bombay whom we consulted told us that a hotel containing 280 bed-rooms would probably cost us Rs. 50,00,000. We do not know yet what is to be the size of our hotel. We have not fixed upon the exact site yet. We are waiting for this legislation before we can get on with this business. We do not desire to build another Taj nor yet a Ritzn or a Carlton. Our idea is to follow the best model of railway terminus hotel in England. With regard to what we expect to get from it, I may say that we did not ask for a money return when we built the Ballard Pier at an expense of 15 lakhs, nor on the further expenditure we incurred in building the Ballard Station, and providing other facilities for passengers. We are content that these works tend to more convenience and more traffic. Personally, however, I see no reason why a hotel should not prove remunerative. We propose to build on a site that we can use for no other remunerative purpose. Therefore, it will not be necessary to make allowances for the loss of ground-rent. Then, we propose to give it to outside management. We do not propose to manage it ourselves. The power to manage that we are asking for is merely a safeguard to be used in the last resort and temporarily if outside management fails, for the time being. If we secure good management, I do not think the hotel will be anything but a success. But the Port Trustees will not be profiteers. They will be content with a small return, and they will cater first and last, and all the time, for the ocean-going passenger.

PORT TRUST BILL.

[Mr. G. W. Hatch; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai.] [4TH AUGUST 1920.]

I noted the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas made a suggestion that the Port Trust should provide a site and allow a syndicate to build a hotel. This suggestion of the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas was carefully considered by the Port Trustees. Assuming that the hotel is to be on the Ballard Pier—and it should be there and nowhere else if it is to do its duty properly for the ocean-going passenger—we decided that we could not afford to allow an outside body to come there; that it was our duty as Trustees of the Port to retain full control over any building going up within the area of the docks. That was the reason why we were not prepared to entertain the proposal. The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas further asked what the Port Trust have done since 1918 to house their own staff. This is perhaps hardly a relevant enquiry. But I have the information here, contained in an answer prepared in reply to a question put to Government by an honourable member of this Council. The amount expended by the Port Trust on building residential quarters since the 1st of April 1918, including those under construction is Rs. 21,23,763; while at the present time there are under construction quarters for 52 superior and for 1,720 inferior employees. That, I trust, the Council will consider a satisfactory answer to the question as to what we are doing for our own employees.

There is one last point. The suggestion has been made that this proposal is a novel one, and I have been asked by various people whether any other Port Trust in the world has so far built a hotel. Well, I do not know. I have not made enquiries. It would take a good deal of time to write to all the Port Trusts in the world and to get their reply. But so far as England is concerned, my information is that no Port Trust has a hotel. There the railway companies have provided hotels wherever they are required. Why they have not done so in India, I do not know. Sir Lawless Hepper, who, I may mention as one of our Trustees, is one of the keenest supporters of this hotel proposition, told us that he had himself proposed to his own Board that the G. I. P. Railway should build a hotel, but without success. I say that if the railway companies have not done it, this is an additional argument why the Port Trust should do it. To revert to the English analogy. It is quite clear to my mind that if for example the North-Western Railway had not built their big hotel at Liverpool, then the authorities of that port would have been compelled to do so. The proposal may be a novel one. I rather hope it is. For, I do not believe for one moment that this Council will be deterred by its novelty from allowing Bombay the privilege of giving a lead in this matter to the other great ports of the world.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Your Excellency,—I feel inclined to think that the proposed amendment is open to serious objection. It was said just now by the Honourable Mr. Hatch that public opinion in Bombay would be very likely in favour of the amendment. The bill was published on the 23rd of July, and it is only about ten days that it was before the public. Consequently there was not sufficient time for the public to express an opinion upon this subject, and I respectfully submit that the public have a right in this matter to express an opinion, because the Port Trust securities and Port Trust bonds and debentures are recognized securities under the Trust Act, and people have been investing in those securities very largely. Consequently it is a matter which certainly concerns the public very much. It concerns not only the commercial community but it concerns the investing public very much, and it is therefore, a question whether it would be proper to allow the Port Trust power to embark upon a catering business of this sort.

In 1879, when the principal act was passed it was a time when it could have been rightly considered that the facilities in Bombay for ocean-going passengers were insufficient and that some accommodation was necessary. But we cannot say the same thing now after about 31 years. Private enterprise has since then come into the field and consequently it is very inopportune at the present day to think of allowing the Port Trust to embark upon hotel catering when, as has been frankly admitted by the honourable speaker who preceded me (the Honourable Mr. Hatch), it will be practically giving a lead to the other Trusts in this matter.

It was said that terminal facilities is a part of the duties of the Port Trust. But if they were so, we would have found something in the principal act about it. But we do not find anything in section 68 which refers to the works to be executed under the act, and I think that the framers of that act were particularly wise in not authorizing the Port Trust power to embark upon business which may turn out to be profitable or unprofitable. In this matter if the business is profitable then private agency would go in for it. If it is unprofitable then the Port Trust may not be allowed to take to it. And as regards the point whether it would be profitable or not, the Honourable Mr. Hatch, Chairman of the Port Trust, was not able to say positively that it would turn out to be so.

PORT TRUST BILL.

[4TH AUGUST 1920.] [Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna; Mr. G. W. Hatch.]

Of course it is one thing to provide building sites for a hotel or waiting rooms being provided somewhere near the pier. But to take power to equip and run a hotel is certainly a matter for serious consideration of this Council, and I hope, honourable members of this Council would pause and consider whether it would be right to give such a power in this case.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna :—Your Excellency,—The object of this bill is to enable the Port Trust to construct buildings including hotels in order to improve the facilities of the port. It has been questioned by my honourable friend, Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas, if the building of a hotel can be considered legitimately to come within the sphere of work of a Port Trust and whether it could be said to improve the facilities of the port. The more people we are able to get from overseas to this city the more they contribute to the enhancement of its trade. And Bombay so far has proved to be the chief port in India for ocean-going passengers. A fair percentage of these passengers consists of trade representatives.

The Honourable Mr. Hatch has given interesting figures. He has told us that in the year ending 31st March 1920 there arrived and departed from Bombay 109,707 ocean-going passengers and a little later in his speech he told us that 90 per cent. of this number were trade representatives.

The Honourable Mr. G. W. Hatch :—May I correct the honourable member? My information was that probably 19 out of 20 represented business interests or administration.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna :—I am surprised at this estimate of 95 per cent. of the ocean-going passengers being reckoned as connected with trade.

The Honourable Mr. G. W. Hatch :—I suggested trade and also the administration of this country.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna :—Again I dispute the statement that 95 per cent. represent business interests and interests representing the administration of the country. I consider the estimate to be very extravagant. However that is beside the point.

I do say that the Port Trust ought to afford facilities to the trade, for if the trade representatives cut out Bombay from their itinerary and land or depart from other ports, say Colombo, Madras or Calcutta, then, sir, they will be conferring an advantage on those ports which really ought to come to us.

Now, sir, much has been said to-day as also yesterday with regard to the shortage of hotels in Bombay. Perhaps no one knows it better than some mofussil members of this Council, for if I remember rightly at the last December sessions, some of the mofussil honourable members had to stay away from the Council meeting just because no hotel in Bombay could offer them accommodation. Whether there are more hotels in Bombay or not, the Bombay Port Trust will be rendering a service to the ocean-going passengers arriving and departing, if they can provide them with a roof over their heads for the short time that they must perforce stay in the city before their steamers arrive and depart, and the people that pass through the city necessarily mean more money to the city.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas observed that terminal hotels come properly within the sphere of work of the railway companies. The Honourable Mr. Hatch has already dwelt upon that point. I would say that when railway companies in Europe provide such hotels, it is generally because more than one railway traverses the same district and it is to draw custom that railway lines put up hotels to compete with one another. Following the same line of argument, we might well say that the Port Trust of Bombay in competition with other Port Trusts in India, might very well provide a hotel to meet the wants of trade representatives. And therefore the Port Trust if it puts up a hotel will certainly contribute to improve its trade facilities.

But, your Excellency, while so far I am strongly in favour of the Port Trust putting up a hotel to meet the requirements of the trade representatives, I am equally strong in the conviction that the Port Trust should by no means lose money over the project. My honourable friend Mr. Hatch, who is the Chairman of the Port Trust, has told us just now that there is no idea of putting up a hotel which will be a Taj, a Ritz or a Carlton. This, sir, to my knowledge is the first time that I have had an admission from the honourable member to that effect, for all along in the course of discussions in the Port Trust meetings he has advocated a large hotel and the very best of its kind in Bombay.

PORT TRUST BILL.

[Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna; the President.] [4TH AUGUST 1920.]

Then, sir, the Honourable Mr. Hatch told us at first that we have not decided upon any site, but again a little later in his speech he said that we propose to build upon a particular site. I think therefore I am perfectly entitled to offer remarks in regard to that site. I contend that if the Port Trust is at all to build a hotel it must be within a stone's throw of the Ballard Pier. It is no use for the Port Trust to build a hotel at any distance from the pier. If that be the intention and if a hotel is to be started by the Port Trust because there is a scarcity of hotels in the city, then the Port Trust has many plots at a distance from the pier which it can lease out for hotel purposes at less than the prevailing rates, and thus help the city in the matter of shortage of hotels. So far as this bill is concerned the Council will understand that a hotel built by the Port Trust will not be of much use for the purpose for which it is intended, unless it is right at or very near the Ballard Pier.

Now, sir, the Council may be aware that the Port Trust has an area known as the Ballard Pier Estate, and it was a positive mistake on our part not to have foreseen the present situation by reserving two or three contiguous plots on that estate for a hotel immediately outside the Ballard Pier. That of course is not possible now, because all the sites except two have been disposed of, and these two sites do not adjoin one another, and each by itself is not large enough for a fair size hotel. They are, therefore, out of question. This will show that we are left with only the one site to which my honourable friend, Mr. Hatch, referred. I would like to say a word or two in regard to this site. It runs parallel to the Ballard Pier Station. It is 560 feet in length and 150 feet in breadth. Its area is, therefore, about 9,300 square yards. If the hotel is to be built of the size which the Port Trust contemplate, namely, consisting of 284 rooms, then, it must take up the whole of this site, and I may add that the entire ground floor is to be reserved for customs purposes. The public rooms and the bed-rooms will all have to be located on the upper floor.

His Excellency the President:—The honourable member must not indulge in a complete discussion of the details of the proposal. We are now discussing the motion for adjournment.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna:—Do I understand, your Excellency, that I shall be entitled to speak on the details again?

His Excellency the President:—The honourable member would certainly be entitled to speak on the main bill. We have now got the motion for adjournment before us. But the honourable member has already referred to the question of site.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna:—I thought, sir, that it would perhaps help if I gave some details now.

His Excellency the President:—The honourable member is perfectly entitled, I have already said, to refer to the question of the site in a general way. I have already told the honourable member that some latitude will be given in discussing the question of site.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna:—Then, in brief, I want to point out that if that site is selected—and that is the only site available—there will be serious congestion at Ballard Pier, and a hotel there will seriously interfere with the convenience of ocean-going passengers. Again, sir, what is more to the point is that several heads of departments of the Port Trust are themselves very greatly against the use of this site for a hotel, because they contend that it is bound to be required for other Port Trust requirements. The Honourable Mr. Hatch has said that the cost of building a hotel is estimated to be Rs. 50,00,000. But going more carefully into the figures, I come to the conclusion that Rs. 50,00,000 will not enable us to put up a hotel of the size and kind that has been advocated, and particularly advocated by the chairman himself. If the building is to cost 50 lakhs, they would have to provide for interest charges, sinking fund, etc., of about 4 lakhs a year. Four lakhs a year would mean Rs. 33,000 a month or Rs. 1,100 a day. Therefore, as the Honourable the Chairman of the Port Trust expects to lease out the hotel to a company, that company will have to collect Rs. 1,100 a day from the number of visitors staying in the hotel. If there are 284 single and double rooms, and assuming the average number of visitors is 250 per day, the hotel company will have to collect Rs. 4-8-0 a day per head from their customers just for the rent of the building. Now, sir, the day has long gone past when one could expect to get a room in a Bombay hotel on Rs. 5, 6 or 7 per day inclusive of all charges.

His Excellency the President:—Order, order. I have already pointed out to honourable members that this is not the correct or appropriate opportunity for an honourable member to go into any very close detail. The honourable member must confine himself to the main question which is now before the Council, which is, whether the first reading of the bill should be taken up now or postponed till the next session. He should not go into any details.

PORT TRUST BILL.

[4TH AUGUST 1920.] [The President; Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna; Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah; Mr. M. de P. Webb:]

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna :—If that is your Excellency's ruling, I shall certainly abide by it. While I strongly advocate the starting of a hotel to help the trade representatives, I regret, sir, that in the absence of further details and in the absence of figures to show that the hotel will be a paying proposition, I shall not be able to support the bill, but I will certainly vote against the amendment.

The Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah :—Your Excellency,—The point before the Council is whether the bill be read for the first time or be adjourned till the next session of the Council. Now my honourable friend Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas has moved an amendment that it be postponed on the ground, first, that under rule 32 of the rules for the conduct of Council business, eighteen days' clear notice has not been given on the part of Government, and that Government has suspended that rule, and has given a notice of only nine or ten days. But in the same rules I find that for an amendment seven clear days' notice is necessary, while my honourable friend Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas himself also has not given proper notice for an amendment. But it might be said that if the rule is going to be suspended in favour of Government, it might have also been suspended in favour of the amendment.

His Excellency the President :—Order, order. I can make clear the point of the honourable member. This is not an amendment but a motion. An amendment requires notice, a motion does not.

The Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah :—Then, I understand that my honourable friend Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas has proposed a motion under rule 7 that the matter be postponed.

Now about this bill, the initiative has come from the Port Trust that they should be vested with the powers of building a hotel, and we have been told in this Council by the chairman of the Port Trust that that body is a representative body and they ask for permission to build a hotel for the ocean-going passengers. It has been admitted on all hands that there is a great dearth of hotel accommodation. No doubt the ocean-going passengers must be finding great inconvenience as we members of this Council do find when we go to Bombay. Therefore, it is very necessary for the Port Trust to build a hotel for the ocean-going passengers.

The other points, whether 50 lakhs will be spent or 20 lakhs, and whether it would pay the Port Trust to build a hotel or not, are matters of detail, and as I think, the bill is going to be referred to a select committee, these matters might be discussed there. No doubt it is very necessary that the opinion of the public of Bombay should be invited, but as the matter is going to be referred to a select committee, I think, the public will have sufficient time to send their opinions, and the bill will be sufficiently advertised in the meantime. If anybody has to offer any criticism, it will come before the select committee, and the select committee will give full consideration to it.

The Honourable Mr. M. de P. Webb :—Your Excellency,—Were I to speak and act solely in the interests of the constituency whom I represent, I should most strongly support this motion, and I should vote in favour of the rejection of the bill, because I am perfectly confident that any delay in providing more hotel accommodation in Bombay will react in favour of Karachi. There is no question whatever about the lack of accommodation in Bombay, but I should like nevertheless, to mention one little incident which happened to me only a few months ago. I arrived from England in Bombay, and, with several friends who had not before visited this country, spent a whole day in walking around Bombay searching for sleeping accommodation. Finding it quite impossible to secure rooms at any of the hotels in Bombay, I was forced to take my friends with me on to Karachi, where I kept them for a week or ten days, and then returned them by the next steamer to Bombay just in time for them to catch their boat to Mombasa! Now I suggest, sir, that this is very ominous. If people nowadays have to go from Bombay to Karachi for hotel accommodation, the time may not be far distant when passengers may elect to travel vid Karachi rather than vid Bombay, and I entirely concur with the view expressed by the Honourable Mr. Hatch that where the passengers go the trade may go, too. I confess I am quite at a loss to understand the apprehension felt by some honourable members with regard to the extra powers which it is proposed to give to the Bombay Port Trust by the bill before the Council. Why it should be assumed that a body of trustees who include in their number some of the leading commercial lights of Bombay, and who at present administer properties worth several crores of rupees, should come to grief if they attempt a relatively small work of a kind involving a few lakhs of rupees, entirely passes my comprehension. Hotel accommodation is urgently needed in Bombay and the Bombay Port Trust are quite an appropriate body for providing that accommodation. The Honourable Mr. Hatch mentioned that he knew of no Port Trust in the world that provided hotel accommodation, but I believe, it is a fact that in some ports in the United Kingdom where the railways are themselves the port authorities, hotels are provided by these port authorities. It seems to me that there are good grounds for doing similarly in Bombay; and therefore, taking the wider view (and not purely the Karachi view), I shall vote against this motion, sir, and support the bill.

PORT TRUST BILL.

[Mr. M. de P. Webb ; Mr. Rupchand Bilaram.] [4TH AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable Mr. Rupchand Bilaram :—Your Excellency,—The Honourable Mr. Hatch admitted that this was a novel proposition. It was also very clear from the statement made by him that this new project was going to cost 50 lakhs or over in order to provide accommodation for about 200 passengers. These two grounds themselves, I submit, are sufficient for giving more time to members of this Council to consider whether they should allow the 50 lakhs of rupees to be spent on a hotel. Then, we have heard from the Honourable Mr. Sethna that there is some dispute about the site and that the only site in the vicinity of the Ballard Pier suited for a hotel may not be available. That is another good ground for adjourning this bill to the next sitting. But, in addition to that, there are other grounds which I submit should also be taken into consideration, in not hurrying through this bill. In the first place, I think, I am right in saying that pre-war hotel accommodation was quite sufficient and the supply was equal to the demand.....

An honourable member:—No, no.

The Honourable Mr. Rupchand Bilaram :—I am told no. It is quite possible that pre-war accommodation was not sufficient, but any way there was not such dearth of accommodation in 1914 and 1915 as now. No doubt after the war there may have been serious inconveniences, but there have been serious inconveniences not only in the matter of hotel accommodation but in every sphere of life. We have put up with such inconveniences and I think we could easily do so for another year and see if private enterprise will not supply that demand which is now wanted. Any way the Bombayites are known as philanthropists and several of them have contributed to the construction of a first class hotel, the Taj Mahal Hotel. They will, therefore, I am sure, not lag behind in providing accommodation for passengers when there is such a great demand for one.

The Honourable Mr. Webb said that if he were speaking only in the interests of Karachi, he would oppose the motion for the first reading of the bill, but he thinks it right to support it in the public interests and the interests of Bombay. I cannot agree with the Honourable Mr. Webb, my reason being that the Port Trust is a quasi-Government body and it should not interfere, as far as possible, with private enterprise unless it is absolutely necessary. The Karachi Port Trust has given on lease a site near the Karachi wharf on which, I believe, there is going to be built a hotel through the exertions of the Honourable Mr. Webb, and a similar thing could easily be done here. The Port Trust is, as I said, a quasi-Government body vested with special powers, as we find, for instance, in section 87 of the act, which provides that :

"No suit or other proceeding shall be commenced against any person for anything done, or purporting to have been done, in pursuance of this Act, without giving to such person one month's previous notice in writing of the intended suit or other proceeding, and of the cause thereof, nor after six months from the accrual of the cause of such suit or other proceeding.

"The Board shall not be responsible for any misfeasance, malfeasance or non-feasance of any officer or servant appointed under this Act".....

And further down,

"Nor shall the Board, or any of the said officers or servants, be liable in damages for any act bona fide done, or ordered to be done, by them in pursuance of this Act".

There are other provisions also providing special powers and exemptions from liability. Now, surely, if the Port Trust is going to take upon itself the business of catering for a hotel, these provisions of the act require reconsideration, and it cannot be said that every servant of such a hotel or every hotel manager can claim exemption under section 87 of the Port Trust Act.

I have noticed the proposed amendment of section 21, in the bill, but that amendment does not at all deal with section 87, though it provides that, for purposes of sections 22 and 23 hotel employees would not be considered as servants.

Then there is another thing also which I should like to be taken into consideration. We find that the amendment which is being proposed is being proposed by inserting a clause in section 68 of the act. Section 68 is headed as "Works," and it is intended by the insertion of clause (7A) to authorize the Port Trust to construct, equip, maintain and manage buildings. We have also got there the words "including hotels". Of course, I see from the statement of objects and reasons of the bill that the object of the bill is to allow the Port Trust to carry on a hotel. But I am not sure if the words used in the clause in question are wide enough to attain the intended object, appearing as they do under the heading "Works". I do not know whether the intention would at all be carried out, and whether or not these words "including hotels" following the word "buildings" would authorize the Port Trust to carry on a hotel. These are all considerations which should be taken into account, and if this bill had been published before, and members of this Council had time to consider it properly, they might have made certain suggestions for amendments. Taking into considertion the objects of this bill and the amount which is intended to be spent if the bill is passed, the first reading of this bill should, in my opinion, be postponed to the next sitting of the Council.

PORT TRUST BILL.

[4TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. Rupchand Bilaram; Mr. H. P. W. Macnaghten; Mr. C. V. Mehta.]

The Honourable Mr. H. P. W. Macnaghten:—Your Excellency,—I rise to oppose this motion for adjournment, as my constituents are most anxious that there should be no delay in providing proper hotel accommodation in Bombay. After what previous honourable members have said, I do not think it necessary to enlarge upon the inadequacy of the present hotel accommodation. After the Honourable Mr. Webb's moving speech, there is nothing more to be said on the subject, except that I belive a certain officer not so ingenious as th Honourable Mr. Webb, was driven, for want of hotel accommodation, to accept the hospitality of His Majesty in a police cell. This, your Excellency, is due to the amount of travelling in India of the residents, whether Indian or European. We have not yet had an influx of visitors into India such as we may reasonably hope to welcome in the course of the next few years.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas gave us, I think, to understand that it is best for all concerned that passengers passing through Bombay should step direct from the steamer to the train, and be whisked upcountry to their destination, with as little delay as possible. I am afraid that I am not capable of the cynicism which describes every visitor to the country as a globe-trotter, and does as little as possible to make him welcome. I am proud of the Presidency town in which I and my family have been resident for five generations, and I should like everybody to have an opportunity of finding himself welcomed in Bombay to share my admiration for the city. I want Bombay to extend a welcome to all the world, the East and the West, and not to look upon itself as a necessary but unpleasant halting place by the way. For this purpose, Bombay needs a growing supply of hotel accommodation. So far from that being the case, I think, the last two years have seen the closing down of at least one first class h tel, and I believe, encroachment is contemplated on another hotel. The reason is obvious. At present, the building of hotels in Bombay is a dual speculation. It is very doubtful whether it is worth while, under the present conditions of the prices of both land and building material, to contemplate the expenditure of Rs. 500 or Rs. 600 a square yard for your building site, and to build a hotel upon that, and for that reason both private syndicates and the railway companies who, I agree with honourable members, are the people to whom one would otherwise look for the building of hotels, have been deterred from building by the fact of the very great cost of the land, which makes a hotel a very doubtful speculation. The best sites in Bombay are still in the possession of the Port Trust, and the Port Trust finds itself in a dilemma. If a hotel is needed, it can only either build one departmentally for itself, or cede the land at a price very much below the present market rate as a concession to some private syndicate. Of the two alternatives, your Excellency, I consider that the maintaining of a hotel departmentally is the best. I do not like the idea of giving as a favour to any private syndicate or even to any railway company a large block of land at very much below the market price, for an indefinite period. Therefore, your Excellency, it seems to me that the only alternative that we can adopt is to support this bill, and give the Port Trust the power of maintaining a hotel departmentally. I am sorry that there is going to be the delay that appears now to be inevitable, because I should have wished that some temporary accommodation would have been made available for the coming cold weather. That appears, by the postponement of this bill to the September session, to be now out of the question. I am very reluctant that this bill should be postponed, after the first reading, to the September session, in the interests of my constituents.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta:—Your Excellency,—I do not refer to the question of the site except only in so far as to say that the docks manager, the port officer and the chief engineer of the Bombay Port Trust have declared that they were opposed to the using of this site for a hotel. I was not, sir, a member of the Bombay Port Trust.....

PORT TRUST BILL.

[Mr. M. de P. Webb; the President; Mr. C. V. Mehta; Mr. G. S. Curtis.] [4TH AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable Mr. M. de P. Webb :—Your Excellency,—On a point of order, are we to listen to the details of this proposed hypothetical hotel on a motion that this bill be postponed to the September session?

His Excellency the President:—I thought it desirable to allow the Honourable Mr. Hatch to go into some small detail in order that honourable members might appreciate the issues as to whether this bill should be postponed or not. But it would not be in order for the honourable member to traverse very far. I propose to allow the same latitude to every honourable member, but not more.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta :—Your Excellency,—I did not propose to go into details. What I was going to say was this. I was not a member of the Port Trust at the time this question was discussed. But the Honourable Mr. Hatch has characterized the motion as obstructive, and he has done so because he thinks that the advice of the public bodies in Bombay has already been obtained. Now, I was looking at the minutes of the Trust, and I think it will be very interesting to hear what the Honourable Mr. Froom, who is now, I understand, the chairman of the European Chamber, said on this point.

His Excellency the President :—Order, order. The honourable member has not yet advanced one single reason why this bill should or should not be postponed. I am afraid I must ask him to confine himself to the motion before the Council.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta:—My point, sir, is that we have not had the opinion of the various bodies in Bombay. For instance, we have not obtained the opinion of the Cotton Trades Association which is not represented on the Trust, nor of the Piecegoods Merchants' Association, which is also not represented on the Port Trust.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Is not the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas a member of the Port Trust?

The Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta :—Yes, your Excellency, but the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas represents just now the Indian Merchants' Chamber and Bureau.

Similarly, sir, when it was stated that the European Chamber have expressed their views in favour of this proposal, I was attempting to state the opinion of the Honourable Mr. Froom. He pointed out that under normal conditions, the passenger season only extended over six months of the year, and that during the other six months, it would probably be a losing concern, and he agreed to the arguments already put forward against the allotting of the Port Trust funds for this purpose, and the appropriation of a site which might be required.....

His Excellency the President:—The honourable member is now going entirely into new considerations, which are germane to the general discussion, and may be taken either on the second reading or in committee, and I cannot allow him to introduce new facts on the motion before the Council.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta :—The views of the various bodies require to be ascertained before we can raise a definite issue whether these additional powers which the Port Trust requires are to be given to them. I would refer, sir, to the point that a large amount of the Port Trust funds would be locked up if these powers were given to it, and I would like to mention the amounts that the Port Trust have spent up to now, on the housing of its employees. The figures are somewhat instructive. Rs. 16,26,000 have been spent on housing 387 of the superior officers out of 1,989, which is about 18 per cent. Another Rs. 16,89,000 have been spent on housing 3,826 of the inferior staff which amounts to 1,375, that is to say, about 28 per cent. It is a matter for consideration whether the Port Trust ought not now to spend much larger sums on the housing of its employees than it has done so far, and I submit that the Rs. 50,00,000 which it is proposed to spend on the hotel would scarcely provide for half of the staff that is at present unhoused. I think, sir, that it would be an advantage to obtain the views of the various bodies, and if I am not mistaken, I think, the Agent of the B. B. & C. I. Railway is contemplating the putting up of a hotel for the railway. The public get far too little consideration and far too few facilities from the Railway Board, and I think, it is up to them to provide hotel accommodation, rather than for the Port Trust. It has been stated that ocean-going passengers are to be provided for first, last, and all the time. Now, if the hotel is going to be a financial success, then there will be no necessity for the Port Trust to obtain these powers, for private enterprise will come forward. If, on the other hand, the hotel is going to be run at a loss, I do not see why, for ocean-going passengers who come from all parts of the country, it should be provided at the expense of the Bombay trade alone. I wish to point out, sir, the facilities will be enjoyed by passengers who travel to all parts of the country, and I think, sir, that if the hotel is going to be run at a loss, surely the trade of Bombay ought not to be made solely to bear it. The railway companies may very well be called upon to do so, because they are practically nationalized. I support the motion for a postponement of this bill.

PORT TRUST BILL.

[4TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. C. V. Mehta; Mr. G. K. Parekh; Mr. B. S. Kamat.]

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh:—Your Excellency,—I support the motion which my friend the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas has brought forward for postponing the consideration of this bill. So far as this Council is concerned, the position is this. In less than five months there will be a body which will replace this Council and do the work of legislation in its place. That body will be far more representative of the views of the people than this Council. And here we are dealing with the property of a very important trust. I should, therefore, think it is desirable that the matter should be dealt with by a body which represents the sense of the whole province, rather than by a body which is not so representative. The matter is in no sense urgent.

The other point that I submit for the consideration of the Council is, that several members of this Council who are able to judge in the matter, do consider that it is very doubtful whether under the present circumstances the concern will be paying or not. It will not be right that a body like the Port Trust should be given powers which, instead of improving the financial condition of the Trust, may affect it injuriously, and particulary when the facilities to be provided for are principally for the benefit of one section of the community in which the other communities will participate to a very small extent.

For these reasons I support the motion for postponing the consideration of the bill.

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat:—Your Excellency,—I rise to support the motion of my friend the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas for postponing the consideration of this bill. In the first place, I think, Government have made a rule that a bill should be published in the Bombay Government Gazette, 18 clear days before the meeting of the Council at which it is to be considered. It is not for the Council, therefore, to say why the consideration of this bill should not be taken up at this meeting; it is for Government to say why it should be taken up to-day when the bill has not been published as required by rules. And as Government have not discharged the onus of doing so, I do not think it is right that they should rush this bill through in such hot haste at this meeting. Well, the only reason that is given us for urgency is that there is a great deal of inconvenience experienced by ocean-going passengers. Surely, that inconvenience is going on for a long time and it can wait for about seven weeks more. If the ocean-going passengers have been put to any inconvenience so long, they can put up with it for seven weeks more when the consideration of the bill may be taken up at the September session.

Then, the Honourable Mr. Hatch, while speaking on the motion to postpone the first reading of the bill, said there was no necessity whatsoever to consult other local bodies in Bombay as suggested by the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas, for the simple reason that the Port Trust Board contains members representing these bodies. I believe that is a fallacious argument. This Council also is representative of all the bodies of the Presidency, of commerce, of territorial divisions, of the University and so on. But before we discuss bills here, it is required that the bills should be published for general information. Is it then an argument to say that there is no necessity whatsoever to publish a particular bill for the simple reason that there are representatives of each and every constituency on the Council? If it is absolutely necessary for Government to publish a bill for the general information of the public, despite the fact that we have representatives of all bodies here, it is equally necessary to follow the same rule in the Port Trust in the present case also, in spite of the fact that there might be representatives of the municipality and commerce on the Port Trust Board. Thus, I have shown that the argument put forward by the Honourable Mr. Hatch is a fallacious and unsound one.

The real consideration before us is, whether the bill ought to be taken up to-day. Well, I should first like to ask whether the Port Trust has exhausted every possible remedy for meeting the inconveniences caused to the ocean-going passengers before asking for the powers which the bill will give them? I endorse all the remarks which fell from the previous speakers in opposing the bill. I am not at all satisfied with what has been stated by the Honourable Mr. Hatch. We want to know whether the Port Trust has tried every other remedy and failed. For instance, he has told us that Sir Lawless Hepper pressed his Railway Board to build a hotel. Have Government, as Government, put some sort of pressure on the Railway Company to build a hotel? It is one thing for Sir Lawless Hepper to say that he approached the G. I. P. Railway Board several times but without success, and it is entirely a different thing whether Government, as Government, has approached the G. I. P. Railway and pressed on them the necessity of building a hotel in the interests of ocean-going passengers.....

PORT TRUST BILL.

[Mr. B. S. Kamat; the President; Mr. Munmohundass Ramji; Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole.] [4TH AUGUST 1920.]

His Excellency the President:—Perhaps the honourable member's argument will be cut short if I answer him that I have put pressure upon the Railway Board in the matter.

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat:—I thank your Excellency for the information. The Honourable Mr. Hatch, however, did not mention this point.

Well, we want to know whether the Port Trust has approached private enterprise and ascertained whether they are able and willing to build a hotel. If the Trust had done so, we should be in a position to know whether we should empower them to go in for private buildings and for hotel accommodation.

Lastly, there is one more reason why we want time. The Honourable Mr. Hatch never told us whether he had gone closely into the estimates of the hotel. He told us that some distinguished architect had estimated that it would be a few lakhs of rupees. Surely, the Legislative Council should not empower the Port Trust, should not give a carte blanche to them to go in for any building for a hotel, the estimates of which have not been tested. And we want time for the simple reason, as I have said, that we want to know whether every other remedy has been tried by the Port Trust to meet the inconvenience of ocean-going passengers.

There is only one more point which I wish to make. The previous speakers have dilated upon the great inconvenience felt by the ocean-going passengers. Surely it is a great inconvenience I know. One honourable member gave us anecdotes of the sorts of inconveniences experienced by passengers landing for going to Karachi. I shall also give an anecdote by way of counter criticism. One of my friends, when he landed in London last year, was put to a great deal of inconvenience. He had to sleep on the floor of a bath room for want of accommodation. Well, that surely is no reason why a member of the House of Commons, for instance, should immediately bring in a motion that the British Exchequer should make provision for building hotels in London for passengers arriving in London. Thus, as we do not know that every other remedy has been tried by the Port Trust without success, I do not think it right that the consideration of the bill should be taken up now, and I, therefore, support the motion for its postponement.

The Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji:—Your Excellency,—I endorse all the arguments that have been advanced by the Honourable Mr. Kamat and support the motion for postponing the bill. I do not want to go into any detail as this is a motion for postponement, and I shall, therefore, confine my remarks as to why the bill should be postponed. First of all, the bill is not before the public long enough. Then, the Honourable Mr. Hatch has told us that the Port Trust has not gone into the figures of the cost of the hotel or into the cost of running it. Surely that is going to take some time. Under these circumstances, why should this Council be asked to hurry up this bill without giving any opportunity to the trade and commerce of Bombay for expressing their opinion? As there will be much loss of time before the estimates can be got, we might as well wait and give an opportunity to every body concerned to have their say. Therefore, I say that this Council should vote for the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas' motion for the postponement of the bill.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—Your Excellency,—I rise to support the motion for the postponement of the bill from a personal point of view, because some of my savings are invested in Port Trust bonds. I wish, therefore, to see that any additional expenditure proposed by the Port Trust and brought forward before this Council for sanction, is a sound financial proposition. The chairman of the Port Trust has not been able to assure us that the concern is going to be a paying concern. I think that the subject should therefore be further discussed by public bodies, and this discussion will enable us to judge whether the additional hotel facilities are going to pay the Port Trust or are going to be a matter of loss. Then we will be able to vote on the measure better, and therefore, I am for the postponing of the further consideration of this bill to September session.

PORT TRUST BILL.

[4TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. G. S. Curtis.]

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—May it please your Excellency,—It seems to me that there has been a certain amount of misunderstanding with reference to the attitude of Government as regards this measure. First of all, however, I shall deal with the motion before the Council which is one for postponing the consideration of this bill until the meeting in September. Obviously one very strong reason for taking up the bill now consists in the fact that the season for building in Bombay is relatively a short one, and if operations are to begin and full advantage is to be taken of the cold weather, the contracts will have to be made very soon. As I have already stated, Government propose, if the first reading of the bill is passed, to refer it to a select committee, and take up the second and third readings of the bill on the 27th September when the Council next meets, so that the necessary contracts may be made and operations may begin in November. If there is to be further delay, obviously such a course will not be possible. That is one strong reason why the motion for the first reading of the bill should be adopted.

As regards the discussion generally, it has extended over a wide range of subjects. But I shall endeavour, as far as possible, to focus the attitude of Government in a few remarks. First of all, it seems to me from the figures quoted and from my own personal knowledge of Bombay, that the amount of traffic which has passed through the Port of Bombay has increased very largely in recent years.

The Honourable Rao Saheb Desai referred to the passing of the Port Trust Act in 1879, and he said, if the legislators of 1879 in their wisdom held that no hotel was necessary, then there is no reason why we, the legislators of 1920, should hold a different opinion. I do not know how many of us remember the Bombay in the eighties. Probably there are only the Honourable Sir George Carmichael and one or two other honourable members here, who do remember it. But I can certify from my personal knowledge for over thirty-two years that conditions are entirely different now from what they were then, and that it is very difficult to find hotel accommodation there at present, as indeed must be inferred from the case cited by the Honourable Mr. Webb, and the example cited by the Honourable Mr. Macnaghten.

But, sir, there are further temporary circumstances which have aggravated the position. Before the war steamers arrived most regularly. Mail trains left at night and arrived in the morning, and many of us who have passed long years in the mofussil have frequently left our station on the Friday evening with the certainty that we should leave Bombay by mail on Saturday. If we arrived in Bombay by steamer we did so in the morning and went on in the evening. But now one mail only leaves at half past nine in the evening. The others leave at a most inconvenient hour. The Gujarat mail which, I remember, used to arrive at seven o'clock in the morning has now been put back to eleven. The train from the Southern Maratha Country arrives at 11-30. The Calcutta mail arrives, I believe, at one o'clock. Consequently it is almost a necessity for any passenger who wishes to take a steamer to pass at least one night in Bombay. Hours of departure of the steamers are uncertain, and when the mail leaves or arrives, no one knows for certain. Consequently it becomes a necessity for passengers departing or arriving, to pass some time in Bombay at a hotel.

Now, sir, I come to the next point, namely, why is it that Government have accepted the proposal of the Port Trust to erect a hotel. Obviously it would be desirable, if possible, that private enterprise would do it. The Honourable Mr. Sethna has admitted that private enterprise cannot do so because there is no land available. The Port Trust not having foreseen the existing difficulty have parted with the best of their sites. It would be possible no doubt for them to lease the existing sites, but, I understand, the main object of the proposal is this: The hotel is merely a temporary convenience and that when other sites are available, when the back bay reclamation or other schemes are completed and land becomes available, and private companies other than the Port Trust will be able to provide the necessary hotel accommodation, the Port Trust will convert their building which they now propose to use for their temporary hotel into an office for administrative purposes. That, I understand, is the main object of the proposal. It is purely a temporary convenience and the Port Trust will, at a later stage when private enterprise can step in and supply this want, consider the desirability of abandoning this hotel if it does not pay, and convert it into offices for other purposes.

We have heard a heart-rending appeal from the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole and other honourable members not to endanger the solvency of the Port Trust by allowing them to embark on an extremely adventurous scheme. The existing debt of the Port Trust is sixteen crores, and I do not think that the half a lakh or so which might be required for this hotel annually would seriously imperil the solvency of the Port

PORT TRUST BILL.

[Mr. G. S. Curtis; Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas.] [4TH AUGUST 1920.]

Trust or affect the capital at present invested in Port Trust bonds. It is possible that they may be affected in other ways. Recently the general rise in the rate of interest has undoubtedly depreciated the capital value of their bonds, and many people who held the bonds will never see again the capital put into them. But as adumbrated by your Excellency, the further borrowings of the Port Trust will be, we hope, conducted through the agency of the Development Directorate on the security of the Government of Bombay. Therefore, any expenditure on a hotel even if it is as large as fifty lakhs, will not affect the rate of interest at which their general loans are raised. That rate of interest will be determined by a general rate of interest which will be settled by the Development Directorate, for the loans raised for development purposes in the Bombay market. It is not the case, therefore, that the credit of the Port Trust can be seriously affected by any slight loss which may happen owing to this undertaking of the adventure of the hotel.

The Honourable Mr. Kamat asked a question as to whether all other expedients had been considered before this hotel was undertaken. His Excellency has answered from his personal knowledge that a reference has been made to the Railway Board on the subject, but I will add that even if the railway company is to erect a hotel there are no sites available for it, as the Honourable Mr. Sethna said that the Port Trust, and the Port Trust lands alone, are the only lands suitable and available, and it is the Port Trust only who can avail themselves of this opportunity of erecting this hotel accommodation.

It has been stated by one honourable gentleman that at present there is no actual shortage of accommodation. But many of us know that one of the hotels in Bombay which was a large one has recently been closed and converted into office accommodation, the fact being that the rent available for office accommodation to the owners made the building more lucrative to the landlord than it was when it was being used as a hotel.

Finally, sir, I would urge this Council to consider seriously the expediency of this bill. There is no wish to rush it. As I stated clearly yesterday, as the first reading is passed, the bill will be referred to a select committee and the various objections raised by the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas and others can be considered. But as to the actual need of the hotel I trust that this Council must have been convinced by the moving speech of the Honourable Mr. Webb who has opposed this motion for adjournment and supported the bill.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—Your Excellency,—I wonder whether the Honourable Mr. Hatch was very impatient and could not control his impatience when he styled my motion as an obstructive one. I should have thought that my co-operation with him on the Port Trust Board for the last eight or ten months would have at least entitled me from him to anything but my motion being called an obstructive one. The Honourable Mr. Hatch has thought fit to use that adjective for my motion, and I propose to deal with that at some length. As to whether he is justified or not in doing so it is for the Council to judge.

In my opening remarks yesterday I mentioned to the Council the extent to which the Board of the Port Trust was directly representative of the commercial interests of Bombay. I said that in all seven elected members representing the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, the Indian Chamber of Commerce and the Grain Merchants' Association are on the board. Out of the total of seventeen including the Chairman there are seven members who represent directly Bombay commerce and the others include representatives of the Military and the Naval authorities, two Agents of the railways, the Collector of Customs, the Municipal Commissioner and 3 Indians nominated by Government. At a board like the one that I have just named, and which I am sure the Honourable Mr. Hatch heard yesterday, the representative of the Grain Merchants' Association was absent at the meeting at which this motion was considered, and some representatives of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce voted against the motion. I really wonder, sir, whether bearing these facts in mind the Honourable Mr. Hatch will not change his mind and withdraw the word 'obstructive' and give me the credit of being one who wished to put the full facts before the Council and suggest to them the correct manner in which to deal with the bill under consideration. I do very strongly hope that a responsible honourable member of this Council will use adjectives with great care and with better justification than the Honourable Mr. Hatch has thought fit to do. I could very well say that the impatience he has shown in listening to my argument before the house is something that is undesirable. But I would rather not say so.

Coming to the various speeches made on my motion I propose to deal with the speech of the Honourable Mr. Macnaghten, representing the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, and of the Honourable Mr. Webb, representing the Karachi Chamber of Commerce, and also the speech of the Honourable Member in Charge. The Honourable

PORT TRUST BILL.

[4TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas.]

Mr. Macnaghten has very frankly told the Council what he wanted. He represents the principal section of the Bombay commercial community that would benefit by this amendment, and I am quite prepared to say that he is correct in advocating it. The whole point, however, is as the Honourable Mr. Macnaghten told the Council, and I am glad for that admission of his, namely, that hotel building in Bombay at the present moment is a doubtful speculation. If that is the admission of the honourable representative of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce on this Council, I venture to say that I have proved my case to the very hilt. I do not want the Port Trust, that has to spend large sums of money on increased facilities for the commerce, to lay out about half a crore of rupees or more on a concern which has been admitted by a representative of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce as a doubtful speculation. Here are the grounds of my opposition, and if I made out no case in my opening speech proposing this motion yesterday my honourable friend, Mr. Macnaghten, has told the Council in a nut-shell very clearly whatever I may have omitted. Not only is it that he has done his duty to his constituency, by telling the Council what they would like, but he has also told us what is the objection in undertaking to build a hotel building at this juncture. I wish, sir, that the honourable representative of the Karachi Chamber of Commerce had been equally frank. His speech has been styled by the Honourable Mr. Macnaghten as a moving speech. May I have his permission to style it as half the truth? He has told us how his friends had to be taken away to Karachi, because they could not get hotel accommodation in Bombay. We, after all, consider that Bombay is the second city in the Empire, and the Honourable Mr. Kamat has told us that in the first city in the Empire conditions are not much better. The Honourable Mr. Webb yesterday interrupted your Excellency while replying to remarks on the first reading of the housing bill, by saying that they had in Karachi a town duty on cotton. I only wish to refer to this, your Excellency; I do not want to dwell on it. I felt then that I had overlooked an important fact when I made my speech yesterday. But on inquiring of my friends from Sind, I find that the Honourable Mr. Webb never mentioned that the town duty in Karachi was a very very small duty. However, I thought he may have only wanted to be brief in interrupting your Excellency yesterday. But to-day he has told us that on behalf of his own town he would do nothing less than what I am objecting to, namely, build a hotel on account of and with the money of a Port Trust. My honourable friend Mr. Rupchand Bilaram, however, has taken us more into confidence and has informed us that my honourable friend Mr. Webb himself has agreed to the Karachi Port Trust only leasing land for a hotel and has not been so bold or venturesome as to get the Karachi Port Trust to put up a hotel. I do wish, sir, that the Honourable Mr. Webb had told the Council the whole truth in this matter. The Honourable Mr. Webb must be a fairly senior Trustee of the Karachi Port, and he might have told us the whole story, because half truths never help any cause and they may tend to mislead the Council.

The Honourable Mr. Curtis in replying on behalf of Government said, "What does it matter if the Port Trust have to lose half a lakh of rupees a year on this hotel?" The Honourable the Chairman of the Port Trust enunciated the principle that it need not be a paying proposition at all. He said, "Why need it be a paying proposition, and why should not the Port Trust do it even if it is not a paying proposition?" The presumption is that both, the Honourable Member in Charge of the portfolio and the Chairman of the Port Trust, are apprehensive that it may be a losing proposition. If the Council feel that they may go on with an amendment of the Port Trust Act that may result in a monetary loss annually to the Port Trust, then they certainly ought to give an opportunity for an expression of opinion to the commercial bodies with whose money the Port Trust works. The Honourable Mr. Chunilal Mehta mentioned a few of the bodies concerned which contribute to the income of the Port Trust. I propose, sir, to give here for the enlightenment of the Chairman of the Port Trust a complete list of those bodies or associations, which I am sure he knows :—

The Piece Goods Merchants' Association, the Rice Merchants' Association, the Grain Merchants' Association, the Iron Merchants' Association, the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, the Indian Merchants' Chamber, the Millowners' Association, the Cotton Trades Association and the Bombay Trades Association.

This is a list of nine principal commercial associations who contribute very largely to the income of the Port Trust. In fact, excepting the period of the war, when Government contributed fairly large amounts, these are the nine associations that are responsible for the prosperity and advancement of the port of Bombay. These are the nine associations with whose money the trustees propose to build this hotel, and if the chairman of the Port Trust, and if the Honourable Member in Charge of the portfolio are both apprehensive that the scheme may not be a paying one, am I wrong in asking the Council

PORT TRUST BILL.

[Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas; Mr. G. S. Curtis.] [4TH AUGUST 1920.]

to postpone the bill till we have given time to these bodies to express their opinions on the amendment to the Port Trust Act? Am I obstructing the Council by asking that the consideration of this bill be adjourned until all the associations and bodies concerned have an opportunity of expressing their opinions? I submit that I am doing a service to this Council in asking for an adjournment. The Honourable the Chairman of the Port Trust said that the Port Trust revenues are going up by leaps and bounds, and he said that their income has doubled itself within the last five years, that is, the income has increased by about a crore of rupees. But the Port Trust owe a duty to the trade, to the commerce and to the industry at whose expense it flourishes. They also owe a duty to their workmen and to the subordinate staff. Have they made all necessary provision for the latter? Because they have got a large income, is that any reason to go in for a scheme which is admitted by the chairman of the Port Trust himself to be a scheme which might cost a very large amount of money and which may not be a paying proposition? The Honourable the Chairman of the Port Trust referred to a question asked by the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai, a question which I did not venture to refer to because that was not a question on the papers laid on the table. But since the Chairman of the Port Trust himself has referred to it, I venture to submit to the Council that he has given a very incomplete answer, and I would ask him to give us the other half of the answer. The Honourable Rao Saheb Desai asked why the work of supplying housing accommodation for workmen and the subordinate staff of the Bombay Port Trust has not been taken in hand on a larger scale than it has been till now. I do wish that when the Honourable the Chairman of the Port Trust said that twenty lakhs had been spent since 1918, he had also thought it necessary to give a full answer to the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai's question, and told us why more amount has not been spent on it. In another part of his question the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai asked, whether Government would be pleased to say when housing accommodation would be provided for the whole of the Port Trust staff, and at what approximate expense. I wish that the Honourable Mr. Hatch had thought fit to give a reply to this, or that he will give it now. The percentage of the staff housed was in 1918, 30 per cent. and the whole of the staff are not yet housed. I agree that the Bombay Port Trust ought to help in reducing congestion that is at present on. When the revenues of the Port Trust are increasing by leaps and bounds, and when they are ready to venture on a scheme of a hotel which would cost a fairly large amount, their first duty is to help in relieving the congestion not by beginning at the top but beginning at the bottom, as charity begins at home, by providing accommodation for their own workmen. If by erecting a hotel they can meet the convenience of a few hundred people, how many more people can they accommodate if they put up single room tenements with the same expenditure? And, sir, what a valuable help and what a good start it would give to the scheme which your Excellency has most at heart!

The Honourable Mr. Sethna appears to be a very hesitating supporter of the bill. He combines his support with good many conditions, which, it strikes me, do not appear to commend themselves either to the Honourable the Chairman of the Port Trust or to the Honourable Member in Charge; however, we are not concerned with it at present. He says he knows of a railway, which is also the port authority, having put up a hotel. All along I have said that a railway may take up such a scheme. We have to consider, first, what the liabilities would be and, secondly, how long the necessity would last. The Honourable Mr. Curtis said that the Port Trust would, first of all, put up a hotel and that later on if they found that the hotel did not pay, they would use it as an office.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—I beg the honourable member's pardon. I said they would hand over the building for the purpose of their own offices.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—Would it not be a white elephant, then?

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—I do not know whether it would be a white elephant or not, but I take it that it would be perfectly possible for any public body to erect a hotel and then convert it into their own administrative offices, if after sometime later, it is found that it is not a paying concern.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—The very fact that it is intended to put up a building which would be useful later on for some other purpose indicates to me little confidence in the scheme itself on behalf of Government. You cannot build a hotel by saying "There, you go up." A hotel for 200 cannot be built in six months or a year or sixteen months! I submit, sir, that the correct attitude to be taken up in this matter was taken by the Honourable Mr. Froom of the P. & O. Company. He pointed out that prices may go back to normal and that under such conditions, as the passenger season

PORT TRUST BILL.

[4TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas; Mr. G. S. Curtis; the President.] only extends over six months of the year, the hotel would run at a loss. The Honourable Member in Charge appears to share this view, and he now proposes to take the precaution of putting up a hotel in such a manner that the building can be used as offices if the hotel scheme does not pay.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis :—I beg the honourable member's pardon. I understand, as the honourable member might have gathered from the speeches yesterday, that there are proposals for engaging additional staff for the Port Trust which will require considerable office accommodation, and they would have to extend their present office buildings apart from the proposal of a hotel, and this can be accommodated in the hotel building if the scheme does not prove a paying one.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas :—Perhaps the Honourable Member in Charge is not aware of all the details of the extension scheme and may want consultation with the Chairman of the Port Trust.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis :—No, no.

His Excellency the President :—Order, order. I hope the honourable member will confine himself strictly to the point under discussion.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas :—Certainly, sir. I bow to your decision. What I was submitting, sir, is that a scheme which has to be launched with so many precautions appears to me to be a very doubtful scheme. If the Council feel that in spite of all this the consideration of the bill may be proceeded with, by all means let them decide accordingly. I have finished, sir, and I commend my motion to the acceptance of this house. If, however, they do not accept my motion for adjournment and the first reading is to be proceeded with, I shall have to vote against the bill, because I do not think it is right to the community that pay the revenues of the Port Trust that their privilege of criticising the proposal should be overlooked and the bill rushed through.

His Excellency the President :—We have had, gentlemen, to my satisfaction, an interesting and more latterly an animated debate on a very simple issue which has occasionally been somewhat obscured, I think, by the speeches of honourable members, as to whether (a) an extra hotel is required in Bombay for the convenience of passengers and, secondly, (b) whether a terminal authority like the Port Trust is the proper authority to build it.

I do not propose to speak for more than two or three minutes, but I should like, in view of the various excursions made into wider subjects, to draw the attention of the Council once more to that issue. The main issue before us is whether it is right or proper to proceed with this bill at the particular moment. I will deal with the last point first. As regards the appropriateness of this moment to proceed with the first reading of this bill, there is this to be considered. It is perfectly true that Government gave honourable members some days' less notice than is customary in the case of these bills, but that was due simply to an administrative reason, the mere fact that we could not get our bill back from the Government of India earlier.

I should like to point out to honourable members that, so far as I can see, there is a very considerable misunderstanding as to what the first reading of a bill means. I have spent, I think, ten years in the House of Commons, and to the best of my knowledge and belief, generally speaking, I do not think I ever saw the first reading of a bill, however controversial, thrown out by the House of Commons, or opposed by any section of the House of Commons. May I remind honourable members for a moment what the first reading is? It would be thought extraordinary in the House of Commons if the first reading were to be opposed, and there it would not be an act of courtesy. Here it is quite different, because I know in this Council there has been an impression that the first reading was the only occasion on which a discussion of principle was allowed, and therefore, in this Council, I have no doubt that first readings have been opposed very often. As long as I have the honour of presiding over this Council, I think, it will be a good plan, as far as we can, to follow the House of Commons' procedure as nearly as possible. In the House of Commons, at the time of the first reading of a bill, it is accepted as a matter of course. Occasion for the discussion of principle is taken on the first reading. That is the appropriate moment for discussing the first principles. It is also equally appropriate to carry on the discussion, both with regard to principle and details on the second reading. The next stage is the committee stage, where the architecture and construction of the bill is criticised or added to, and the third reading is the considered opinion of the whole house. I should propose that the same procedure be followed here.

I can assure honourable members that there has not been the slightest wish—far from it—to avoid giving the public authorities, a long list of which the honourable member has read out, every opportunity for the fullest consideration and the fullest criticism. I would like to point out to this Council that there is going to be ample opportunity for these bodies to offer criticisms on the bill. I do not presume that if the opposition is so large as that indicated by the honourable member, seven days could possibly be sufficient. I think they will need a longer time. We propose to give it between the first and second readings of the bill. If there is opposition, it will tend either to develop, to increase or decrease during that period. Government will be able to watch it, measure it, and to decide accordingly. There will then be the committee stage, when the committee will be able to tear the bill into fragments if they choose, or to construct it, and then there will be the third reading. I really do not know as to why there should be the slightest apprehension in any honourable member's mind that because Government moves the first reading of a bill, it is trying to rush a bill which the public do not like. I would like to remove that impression from now onwards, because I do not think I shall have the opportunity of presiding over this Council on more than one or two occasions, and the President who follows me would certainly wish to follow very largely the House of Commons practice, as being well established and convenient for our purposes. I do assure the Council that they are quite wrong in apprehending that in the case of a first reading where seven or two days' notice is given, Government is intending in any way to rush through the Council that measure. It is perfectly true that my Government would have been very glad to carry all the three readings of this measure during this session, but in view of the fact that there is opposition to the measure, Government is certainly not going to attempt to do it.

PORT TRUST BILL.

[The President.] [4TH AUGUST 1920.]

I now come to the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas' interesting summary of the situation. I think, if I may say so, he was extremely sensitive as to the Honourable Mr. Hatch's characterization of his attitude as obstructive. I tremble to think of what honourable members will feel in future, if they feel so keenly about the word "obstructive" now. When the new Council comes into existence, if there is going to be any vivacity in that assembly, they are likely to hear things considerably more damaging, and more critical adjectives. I would point out to the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas that far from that being an unkind thing to say, the Honourable Mr. Hatch only pointed out that the honourable member was doing his duty, because obstruction to a cause which you think improper is not, and cannot, be wrong. It is incumbent upon the honourable member to obstruct it by every possible means that he can, and it is the duty of Government, if it thinks it is right, to carry the measure by every possible means they can. There was no reason for the honourable member in any way to be sensitive about it. Of course the Honourable Mr. Hatch has said that he was obstructing the passage of the bill by his motion, but I think he meant that this motion cannot and does not accelerate the speed. I hope the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas in future will certainly not be sensitive about what I think to be a perfectly fair remark for an honourable member to make, and a remark made in good spirit.

I now come to the Honourable Mr. Macnaghten's remarks as regards speculation. I think the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas rather misunderstood him. What I understood the Honourable Mr. Macnaghten to say as regards speculation was, that the reason why more private enterprise was not forthcoming for building purposes was, that at the present moment the chief factors of consideration, at present, are the very high prices of land and materials. Therefore, people have to think twice before they embark upon building a hotel, and I understood the Honourable Mr. Macnaghten to say that it would become a speculative business. You had to speculate also on a good many other things that might occur. To that extent, I understood the honourable member considered that that was speculation. I do not think he intended that this Council should infer that the Port Trust's proposition, namely, to build a hotel on land which already belongs to it, and which is, I understand from the Honourable Mr. Hatch, not suited to any other use, is speculation. I cannot think for a moment that the Honourable Mr. Macnaghten intended to characterise such a proposition as speculation. But the broad considerations are shortly these. The Port Trust can take one of two courses. They are the terminal authority. I agree with the honourable member that the railway authorities are most remiss in not providing this accommodation. But surely the trade of Bombay does not stop short at Bombay. It is a far wider thing than that, dependent upon much broader considerations. I think a terminal authority like the Port Trust owes a duty to "the trade of the town," I quote the honourable member's own words, and that the Port Trust would be remiss and would be failing in their duty if by negligence

PORT TRUST BILL.

[4TH AUGUST 1920.] [The President.]

it did anything which would tend to divert the traffic to the port of the honourable member who sits so hungrily in that corner, waiting for it. I cannot help thinking, with all respect to the honourable members who have taken an opposite view, that they are taking rather a narrow point of view with regard to this matter. The Honourable Rao Saheb Desai said that if the business of building hotels was a profitable one, then of course the outside public would come in and do it. I would like to put an alternative before him. If it is really going to be profitable, he cannot object to the Port Trust doing it. No outsider is going to undertake it, if it is not profitable. But are we going to see that movement into Bombay from East and West is more and more restricted, and would we like people choosing Karachi, Calcutta, Madras, or Ceylon as a trade centre? I think I heard some remarks yesterday as regards the duty on cotton bales. It was thought Government were going to do something which would divert the trade from this great city, and I would like to say that negligence can divert it just as much as activity. Looking to these facts, I venture to put it to the Council whether we are right in accepting a motion for postponement. We desire to give this bill a first reading. I have never tried to rush bills through this Council. I have always given ample room for discussion, as I think honourable members will agree. I think that honourable members will be wiser in setting their fears at rest as regards the objects which Government have in view, in pressing for the first reading of this bill. I think honourable members will realize that this will only be the first reading of this measure. Then those who oppose it should gather together such forces as they can, and bring them before Government and this Council on the next occasion, and then we shall be treating the matter in a reasonable way, and not turn down at a moment's notice a proposition which, at any rate, is one that should command great interest in the city of Bombay. It remains to be seen whether it will command approval.

I, therefore, do commend that this Council, whatever its views be on the main issue of the question, should give the bill a first reading, and then give us their fuller views as regards the advisability and the wisdom of the proposal on the second reading, in the committee, and on the third reading. These are, I think, sufficient precautions for any honourable member of this Council.

The motion was put to the vote and lost, 19 members voting for and 24 against it. The Council divided as follows :—

After lunch.

The Council re-assembled after lunch at 2-45 p.m.

His Excellency the President:—Order, order. Further consideration of a bill further to amend the Bombay Port Trust Act, 1879. (Bill No. XII of 1920.) First reading.

The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai:—May it please your Excellency,—I should like to make a few observations about this bill. But before I do so, I should like to be in possession of certain information which I hope the Honourable Member in Charge or the Chairman of the Port Trust will furnish. The information that I want is: How many passengers by sea arrive in Bombay from the southern coast—from Kanara and from Ratnagiri—every year? What provision has been made for them by the Port Trust? The second question I ask is: How many passengers come from Gujarat, Kathiawar, Cutch and Karachi every year, and what provision has been made by the Port Trust in this connection?

His Excellency the President:—Order, order. The honourable member cannot ask questions like that. If he will make his speech now, he will be replied to at the end.

The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai:—Then in the absence of information upon these salient points I shall not be in a good position to say much on this subject. However, we have heard from the Chairman of the Port Trust that the overseas passengers come to about a lakh and odd. From the information received by me, it is clear that the number of passengers that come from the southern and northern side of Bombay comes to several lakhs. It would be most interesting to know if the Port Trust has done anything in connection with the lodging and boarding of these passengers. If they have not done anything, I should like to know why the Port Trust should be so anxious to make provision for the ocean-going passengers only in such hot haste.

We have seen, in answer to one of the questions, that the Port Trust has not made provision for its own employees to the extent of 70 per cent., and we have heard that during the last 4 or 5 years only Rs. 21,00,000 have been spent on providing housing accommodation for the Port Trust employees. I say, the Port Trust must first look to the convenience and comfort of its own employees. That has not been done, and it would be rather unwise for that body to spend Rs. 50,00,000—whether it will be Rs. 50,00,000 or Rs. 70,00,000, who can say—until they have made sufficient provision, until they look to the health, comfort and convenience of its own employees. No case has been made out for the Port Trust risking any money in such movement. We have been told that there are no plans and estimates ready. I submit, under these circumstances, it would not be wise for the Port Trust to launch into such a hazardous movement. I, therefore, submit that the first reading should not take place.

The Honourable Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas:—I rise to a point of order. I should like to have your Excellency's ruling as to whether questions should not be answered in the course of the debate. Rule 16, page 198, of the Council Manual provides for questions being put.

PORT TRUST BILL.

[4TH AUGUST 1920.] [The President; Mr. R. P. Paranjpye.]

His Excellency the President:—Presumably the honourable member refers to Rule 16, page 198 of the Council Manual. It is not an explanation but it is additional information that the honourable member—Mr. Desai—asks for in the course of his speech which can only be supplied at the end. Besides that, I must have the proceedings of this assembly conducted in such a manner that the information can be supplied in the most convenient way and the debate fully brought out. An occasional question may be asked but not necessarily replied to, and I think, it is not convenient to carry on debates by cross-questions and answers.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—Your Excellency,—I wish to oppose the first reading of this bill because it enunciates a principle which in my opinion is dangerous. First, with reference to the remarks that your Excellency was pleased to make in the morning session, I may observe that the usual practice in this Council is to oppose a bill even at its first reading. Some years ago a bill was brought forward into this Council by the Honourable Mr. Patel, a bill to amend the law relating to medical practitioners, and I think it was mainly on account of the attitude taken by Government that that bill was refused a first reading. I am mentioning this illustration to justify the attitude of myself and some of my colleagues in opposing this bill at the first reading.

Then there is another reason why we are opposing this bill. If the bill had rather been a complicated one and it was possible to amend it in the select committee or at the second reading by preserving its framework, then possibly honourable members might legitimately be asked to pass the first reading and then amend it. But the bill in itself is a very short one. There are no complicated questions—I leave out practically the very small clause 2. So, if we allow the first reading of the bill to go on, there is hardly anything left in it that requires amendment. Therefore, I think we are perfectly justified in opposing the first reading.

Coming to the merits of this bill, my friend the Honourable Mr. Pandurang Desai has brought forward the case of several other classes whose convenience the Port Trust is equally bound to consider. The number of passengers on the coasting lines who are seriously inconvenienced by want of facilities for staying in Bombay is several times—I was almost going to say a hundred times—more than that of ocean-going passengers. And from the way in which the Port Trust has catered to the convenience of these passengers, I think we have a right to ask that more attention should be given to the convenience of these passengers even before the conveniences of ocean-going passengers are considered.

There is another point also. I do not think that an authority like the Port Trust is the proper authority for managing a hotel. There are inconveniences no doubt, but I know that oftentimes in the case of hotel management a kind of racial discrimination is observed, and I am not sure, when once permission is given to an authority like the Trust to manage a hotel, whether that authority will not make racial distinctions as to the admission of passengers. My friends from Sind have been so greatly inconvenienced by want of hotel accommodation in Bombay. Place is refused them in some of the Poona hotels also. We non-official members are afraid that a similar thing might occur in the case of hotels managed under the auspices of a body like the Port Trust. Therefore, I do not think that we should be prepared to give a carte blanche to a body like the Port Trust to utilize public funds for the purpose of managing a hotel. We all understand that hotel accommodation is necessary in Bombay, but I think, hotel accommodation of this kind ought to be made on a fair basis if people are prepared to pay for the conveniences that they want. I think private speculators or private syndicates will be quite prepared to come forward and start a feasible scheme for hotel accommodation. But I do not think that a public body like the Port Trust should go in for hotel accommodation.

There is one further point. Last half of the year Government used a portion of a public building like the Royal College of Science for hotel accommodation. I know Government came in for a good deal of criticism for that. I think the criticism was perfectly justified. Although it was necessary to give facilities for the newcomers to Bombay, Government was really not right in stepping in and giving a public building for this purpose.

I think in the same manner a public authority like Port Trust should have nothing to do with similar business. There are lots of pitfalls in connection with it, and I think it is much better that a body like this should keep away from it. My honourable friend, Mr. Chunilal Mehta, has told us that he particularly fears that the supply of visitors to the hotel is not likely to be continuous, specially during half year, and under these circumstances I do not think that we should pass this bill and, therefore, I oppose the bill on its first reading.

PORT TRUST BILL.

[The Advocate General.] [4TH AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable the Advocate General (Sir T. J. Strangman):—Your Excellency,—In spite of the amount of eloquence that has been poured out this morning, the matter remains as it started, a matter in a nutshell.

Now, how do we begin? We began with this, that there is a great lack of hotel accommodation in Bombay. This is a matter of detriment to the city of Bombay as a passenger port. Amongst other bodies and persons interested in the question is the Bombay Port Trust whose business it is to make Bombay an attractive passenger port. That being the case the Bombay Port Trust have approached Government with a proposal to amend the act and Government have placed this proposal before the Council.

Now, what are the arguments which have been put forward against this proposal? They are really threefold. First of all, from a financial point of view; secondly, because it is said that the running of a hotel is outside the natural scope of the business of the Port Trust authorities, and thirdly, because it is said that there are other objects which ought to be undertaken first. I will deal with them in turn, and first with the financial side of the question.

During the discussion it has been generally assumed that the hotel would be run at a loss. But, I say, why assume any such thing? We know that during the last few months a great number of hotel projects have been in the air and that those projects were to be put through by companies. Nobody suggested that those projects were going to end in loss, and the reason that they were dropped was not on account of any anticipated loss but because no sites were available.

Now I ask the honourable members of this Council to consider the composition of the board of the Bombay Port Trust. We find on that board people connected with practically every trade of the city. And I venture to say that the board compares in intelligence, knowledge and experience most favourably with any board of any company which is carrying on business in Bombay. Now, if it was considered by many level headed people in the city of Bombay that a company could run a hotel at a profit and of course they could only do so with expert assistance, why should it be assumed that a body, to put it at the lowest, equally intelligent, equally experienced, with equal knowledge and with similar assistance, should make a failure of such a project. But I propose to put the matter on an entirely different plane to that on which the discussion has proceeded today. I say it is quite a false notion to take this hotel as an item by itself. You cannot do that. You have got to take it as part of a vast undertaking. Now, what I understand from the Chairman of the Port Trust is this that the board have come to the conclusion that it is to the welfare of the Port Trust, and when I speak of welfare, I mean the financial welfare, whether this hotel taken as an item by itself is going to be run at a profit or a loss, that the scheme should be put through in the general interests of the Port Trust.

To illustrate by a very, very humble illustration what they lose on the round abouts they make up on the cocoanuts. Take the case of the Bombay Tramway Company. Members of this Council will find in the streets of Bombay passenger shelters put up in various places. Many might say that was waste of money. It costs money to put up those shelters; it costs money to keep them in order: they bring in no direct return. But of course the answer is that by affording people protection from the sun and rain you attract passengers to the tram cars. The same argument would apply to the hotel. If you have a hotel on Port Trust property you will attract more passengers to the port of Bombay. That is the point which the Port Trust thinks important and they consider, so I understand, that if this hotel is started the general interests of the Port Trust will be served. That is the point which appears to me to have been entirely lost sight of during the discussion by those who oppose this measure.

Then, I come to the question as to whether the running of a hotel is outside the scope of the business of the port authorities. It certainly is outside the scope of the act: indeed that is the reason why this bill is before the Council. But that is not the question which we have got to consider. The question we have to consider is whether it is outside the natural scope of the business of the port authorities. Well, we have more than one precedent in England of authorities, which are in reality port authorities, running hotels. You have the London and South Western Railway Company which owns the docks at Southampton and runs a hotel there. It may be argued that they run it as a railway company and not as a port authority. Surely the answer to that is that to run the hotel is as much to their advantage as a port authority as a railway company. You cannot say that they run it as a railway company rather than as a port authority, the truth of the matter being that they run it in both capacities. In any event it is a good enough instance of a port authority running a hotel. But after all do not let us trouble about precedents: let us consider principles.

PORT TRUST BILL.

[4TH AUGUST 1920.] [The Advocate General; Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna.]

Now, what are the duties of the Bombay Port Trust so far as passengers are concerned? When I say passengers, I mean sea passengers. It seems to me that their duties are to secure the easy passage of passengers through Bombay. That is their business. Now with that object they have constructed spacious wharves at which steamers can embark and disembark passengers. Then they have arranged special trains to run alongside the mail steamers. All passengers, however, who travel by the mail steamers are not able to make use of these trains. Further, all passengers do not travel by mail steamers: many travel by other steamers. Consequently arrangements must be made for these passengers also. Now what are the arrangements that are proposed to be made? They are for the accommodation of these people between the time that they arrive in Bombay and the time that they depart from Bombay, and, how, I ask, do the arrangements proposed differ in principle in any way from the ladder that the Port Trust provide to walk up to the side of the steamer or a waiting room that they provide at the Ballard Pier. I say there is absolutely no difference in principle. The point is this that it is the business of the Port Trust to see that facilities within reasonable limits are granted to passengers from the time that they get out of the train till the time that they get on board the steamer or vice versa; the provision of hotel accommodation is within such reasonable limits and consequently within the natural scope of the business of a port authority. In these circumstances, your Excellency, I heartily support the first reading of this bill.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna:—Your Excellency,—In speaking on the first reading of this bill I will endeavour not to go over the same ground which I covered this morning in the course of my remarks on the motion for adjournment made by the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas. There may however be some points which I may have to refer to as also to elaborate. What we have first to consider is, whether the proposal is one which can be undertaken without any loss to the Port Trust. The Honourable the Advocate General who preceded me said that it is a matter of serious detriment to the city, if we do not have a sufficient number of good hotels. I do admit the force of that contention, as I did in the course of my remarks this morning. But I contend that it is no business of the Port Trust as a body to incur heavy expenditure on a hotel of the kind that is proposed which, I think, I shall be able to convince the Council, cannot but work at a loss.

The Honourable the Advocate General told the Council that there had been of late many proposals for starting hotels in the city of Bombay, but none of them have gone through just because of the difficulty of obtaining sites of land. Sites of land are available, and available from the Port Trust, but the question is of the price at which such sites can be had. To meet that difficulty, I will repeat the argument that I advanced this morning, namely, that if the Port Trust have vacant plots to give away for hotels at some distance from the pier, they may do so at cheaper rates than the ordinary, and thus enable the city to possess more hotels. In this way they will be rendering a service to the city. But for the Port Trust themselves to put up a hotel which is not within a stone's throw from the Ballard Pier is of course a positive mistake.

Now, sir, a few words in regard to the prohibitive cost. The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas observed that 50 lakhs of rupees will not enable a company, if the hotel were leased out, to run it at a profit. I was endeavouring to show this morning that on 50 lakhs, the return the Port Trust would want to enable them to meet the interest and sinking fund charges, would be about four lakhs of rupees a year. Four lakhs a year means Rs 33,000 per month, or Rs. 1,100 per day, and, that would mean Rs. 4-8-0 per head per day to be recovered from an average number of 250 visitors staying in the hotel if the hotel is to consist of 284 single and double rooms which will mean a maximum capacity of 400 visitors. I say that Rs. 4-8-0 can be conveniently charged to a visitor merely for rent, and I will prove this by facts and figures. There is a new hotel going up in Bombay very near Colaba station where the accommodation is 40 rooms, single and double, so that 60 persons could stay in all. The lessee of that hotel has to pay Rs. 4,500 a month as rent. That means Rs. 150 a day. This hotel proprietor, with a maximum number of 60 visitors, may safely reckon upon having an average daily number of 45 visitors. He has got to collect this Rs. 150 from his 45 visitors, which will mean he will have to collect Rs. 3-8-0 per visitor for rent, as compared with the Rs. 4-8-0, the lessee of the Port Trust hotel will do. As the hotel at Colaba is to be more or loss a residential hotel, he will not be able to charge as high as the Port Trust hotel. But if he can afford to include Rs. 3-8-0 for rent in what he charges his visitors, the lessee of the Port Trust hotel can very safely charge Rs. 4-8-0 and get it. I show this to point out that at fifty lakhs, the cost is not prohibitive. I was one of the majority when I voted in the committee of the Port Trust on the proposal to build this hotel. My belief then was that 50 lakhs as estimated would be sufficient. Later information convinces me that it is impossible to put up a hotel on the proposed site, and of the intended type at the estimated figure. In regard to this as well, I propose to substantiate my statement again by facts and figures. The Taj Mahal Hotel, which was built 20 years ago, took nearly five years to construct. The rate per cubic foot then was practically one-third of what it is to-day. It was about five annas per cubic foot including sanitary fittings. etc.; and to-day the same works out at about 15 annas to one rupee per cubic foot. The Taj Mahal Hotel has only 250 rooms, not 284, but these 250 being single and double, provide for a maximum accommodation for 400, and when I said that the Port Trust hotel may safely count upon an average of 250 visitors a day, that number was a fair estimate as compared with the average number of visitors at the Taj Mahal, which is 270 per day. The Taj Mahal Hotel, which was built twenty years ago, has cost nearly 30 lakhs of rupees. It would be fair to assume, therefore, that the proposed hotel cannot cost anything less than 90 lakhs of rupees, if not more, and certainly more if, according to what fell from the Honourable Member in Charge, this building is to be so designed as to be suitable later on for offices if the Port Trust require to convert it for that purpose. Further, Mr. President, if the hotel were to cost 90 lakhs of rupees, then the Port Trust can only run it profitably, if it can get a return of about seven and a half lakhs a year—or say Rs. 60,000 a month as rent from the lessee, which would mean that Rs. 8 at least would have to be collected by him as rent from every visitor per day. I do not think, sir, that any lessee with his eyes open can take a lease on these terms which would make it impossible for him to compete with other hotels in the city. It is, therefore, that I urge, sir, that the proposition is by no means a paying one. As to what the Port Trust may be expected to lose every year on the hotel, the Honourable Member in Charge told us this morning that we may lose up to about Rs. 50,000 a year at the outside. Is it a case, sir, of losing only half a lakh of rupees? Neither did the Honourable Mr. Curtis nor the Honourable Mr. Hatch give any figures to show how they estimated the loss at no more than half a lakh of rupees per annum. If we cannot get a lessee to run the hotel, it will mean that we shall have to equip and manage it ourselves. How much more does this mean? In the Taj Mahal Hotel the equipment has cost more than eight lakhs. Assuming that it does not cost the Port Trust to-day more than twice what it did the Taj, the outlay on the hotel including the building and the equipment would be anything from a crore to a crore and a quarter. The loss, therefore, will not be Rs. 50,000 a year, as is estimated by the Honourable Member in Charge, but nearer ten times that amount, if not more. That, sir, is my reason for opposing the idea of a large hotel and of its being run by the Port Trust and on a particular site. I may mention casually that just to-day and at this very hour the board of the Taj Mahal Hotel are considering in Bombay their results for 1919.

PORT TRUST BILL.

[Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna.] [4TH AUGUST 1920.]

Mr. President, if this bill were passed to-day, the Port Trust would be in a position to take in hand what they have decided upon and which is a sound business proposition, namely, the putting up of a temporary hotel. It is proposed to put up on a narrow strip of land just before the entrance to the Ballard Pier a temporary hotel which will cost about Rs. 3,50,000, with accommodation for about a hundred passengers. The Board have decided to charge a rent of something between Rs. 6,250 to Rs. 6,500 per mensem, which will cover interest, sinking fund, municipal taxes, etc., so that we shall get back our money in full at the end of six years, for which period the temporary hotel is to be put up. That, sir, is a sound proposition. If there is a possibility of the Port Trust leasing out a permanent hotel on the same lines, I for one will accord to it my very hearty support; but it is because, that a permanent hotel of the kind intended cannot prove a paying proposition, that I have given to the bill a 'hesitating' support as the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas has characterized it. The Honourable the Advocate General said that we must take the fat with the lean or, as he put it, if we lose in the ground-nuts we make up in the cardamoms. So far as the Port Trust is concerned, it is a case of cardamoms in all that we do. Why should the Port Trust be saddled with this certain loss when there are other public bodies which can equally if not with greater reason be asked to put up terminal hotels?

PORT TRUST BILL.

[4TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna; the Vice-President.]

Mr. President, this morning His Excellency laid down the principle that we ought in future to follow the practice that is pursued in the House of Commons, and that we may allow the first reading of a bill to go through, if for nothing else, out of courtesy to the mover, and that the select committee may reduce it to fragments if they so desire, and that we shall be at liberty to discuss even the principles of the bill on the second reading. Our experience in this Council, however, has been that we have not been allowed to discuss principles on the second reading, on the ground that the principles are to be discussed only at the first reading.....

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Will the honourable member point out any rule in the rules of business which prevents principles being discussed at the second or third reading of a bill?

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna:—I cannot at the moment quote the rule which prevents it, but we know that His Excellency Lord Willingdon on more than one occasion did not allow principles to be discussed at the second reading, and he confined us in our remarks on the main principles only to the first reading. I am sure my honourable colleagues will bear me out when I say that it was so laid down in more than one instance by His Excellency Sir George Lloyd's predecessor when he presided over this Council.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—I was in the select committee when the rules were framed, and I remember that the Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola contended for the position that the rules should be so framed that it should be permissible to discuss a question of principle at the second reading. There is nothing in the rules which prevents discussion of principles at the second reading of a bill.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna:—But we know as a positive fact that during His Excellency Lord Willingdon's time we were not allowed to discuss principles at the second reading. I think he relied on rule 33 of the Council business rules for his ruling.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—In any case, His Excellency has told the Council this morning what the practice in the House of Commons is, and he will certainly uphold that practice of allowing questions of principle to be discussed at the second reading.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna:—I am not aware, sir, of the rules having been altered.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—They have not been altered. I was referring to the occasion when the rules were framed and adopted in 1910. I was on the select committee on that occasion, and I distinctly remember the Honourable Sir Ibrahim's contending for the position that the rules be so framed that it should be permissible for questions of principle to be discussed on the second reading. I would refer the honourable member to rules 33, 34 and 35 on page 201 of the Council Manual, in none of which there is anything to indicate that questions of principle shall not be discussed at the second reading.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna:—I will not take up the time of the Council in view of the fact that His Excellency himself has told us that he is going to allow questions of principle to be discussed also at the second reading. My point was that his predecessor in office did not allow us to do so. I believe he based his ruling on clause (2) of rule 33 which says—

"Amendments of principle only may be moved at the first reading."

However, sir, I am satisfied that His Excellency is going to allow us in the future to discuss questions of principle at the second reading. But His Excellency's appeal to us that, because of that and of the fact that the select committee if they so choose can reduce the bill to fragments, we should allow the first reading to be passed, if for nothing else, then out of courtesy to the mover, cannot meet with favour, for on the first reading of a bill the principles are to be considered, and we have either got to accept the principles or to throw them out. If the first reading is passed by the Council, it means that the principle of the bill has been accepted, and what is done in select committee is just to change a word here and a word there, that is to say, change the phraseology of the bill if necessary. Therefore, sir, I contend that circumstanced as we are, I do not think we can afford to wait till the second reading if we think that a decision on the first reading will help us in the view that we hold. So far as I know—and I have been a member of this Council for now nearly four and a half years—any bill that has passed its first reading has never been thrown out at a subsequent stage. Our experience shows that the first reading is half the battle. Therefore, I contend that if we think that we are justified in throwing out a bill on the first reading, we ought not to hesitate to do so.

PORT TRUST BILL.

[Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna; Mr. G. S. Curtis.] [4TH AUGUST 1920.]

It may be urged that I am opposed to the erection of a large hotel on this site, because I happen to be on the board of a hotel company. But I should like to assure this Council that, as a director of that hotel company, I will welcome more hotels in Bombay. They are not only necessary but will help the business generally. As to the hotel being put up and run by the Port Trust, it can only be worked at a loss and further, we ought on no account to pass this bill if the intended hotel is to be put up on the particular site referred to in the discussion. This site, as I pointed out this morning, is the one immediately opposite and running parallel to the Mole Station. It is about 9,300 square yards in area. The Taj Mahal site is 10,000 square yards. It is proposed to put up on this site a large hotel, larger than even the Taj Mahal hotel. It follows, therefore, that they will have to build on the whole area of 9,300 square yards. I contend that by doing so we will make the place very congested. At present when we have a large boat coming in or going out, we find the number of carriages and motor cars is so large, that they have to be parked on the proposed hotel site. I know the Honourable Mr. Hatch will retort by saying that we have a sort of curved space a little further on where carriages could be parked. Carriages and motors alone will not be responsible for the congestion. If we have a hotel accommodating 400 passengers, there will be such a large number of people coming to see them, and there will be so much else to do in connection with the hotel, that I leave it to the Council to imagine what serious congestion there will be, particularly, when there is a large boat arriving or departing and many hundreds of friends coming to welcome or to bid adieu. The road dividing the Mole Station from the hotel plot is only 80 feet in width, which is not nearly enough. Again, Mr. Pesident, it is also proposed to have another wharf on the other side, and it is intended to leave between the hotel and that wharf a space of only 40 feet. That space, sir, I contend, is absolutely insufficient, particularly in view of the fact that that wharf is likely to be reserved for the transport of soldiers. Trains will be brought up right along the wharf. Therefore, there will be two lines of railway on that space of 40 feet. Again I leave it to the Council to judge the confusion there will be in that area. I say that this bill is brought forward with the set purpose of putting up a hotel on this the only available site inside the docks. I am glad I am speaking before my friend the Honourable Mr. Hatch, because if he will tell us that he is going to put forward the same proposition in the Port Trust as he has done already, namely, of having a large hotel to take up the whole site, and to provide accommodation for 400 persons, and also that the Port Trust itself will run the hotel, then I am afraid I cannot see my way to accord my support to the bill. He may reply that everything will rest with the Trustees, and he cannot bind them by what he may say here. The Honourable the Advocate General observed that the Port Trustees were level-headed, business men and we could trust them. I admit that this is so, and I am a Port Trustee myself, but perhaps the Advocate General may not consider me level-headed, because of the views I have expressed. As a business man I feel that it will be a positive mistake for the Trust to build upon this site and we will regret the step a few years later.

The Port Trust have arranged to put up a temporary ground floor building on a site just outside the Alexandra Docks to be used as a hotel. That temporary hotel will provide accommodation for 100 people. There is no objection to utilizing this site for a permanent hotel, and in that case there will be no necessity for the present bill, we are now considering, because if the Port Trust leases out that land at a fair rate, anyone will put up a permanent hotel on that site, and if one or two upper storeys are allowed, it will be possible to accommodate 150 passengers or more, and there will not be the necessity of having recourse to legislation of the kind that is now before the Council.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Is the honourable member under the impression that that hotel to accommodate 100 beds can be constructed without any amendment to the law?

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna:—Most certainly, if the land is leased out as I propose. If the Port Trust advertises to-morrow that the land will be leased out for the purposes of a hotel, with the reservation that a certain percentage of the rooms are to be used for no other purpose except for accommodating ocean-going passengers, I contend that it will be taken up at once on those terms. There will be not one but a dozen applications, and all that is wanted to improve the facilities of the trade as the statement of objects and reasons has it, is not to put up a hotel for 400 passengers but for about 150 at the most. If the Chairman tells us here that he accepts my suggestion and will bring forward such a recommendation, I will perfectly agree with him. If he does not, I cannot see my way to support the bill. He will say that it does not all lie with him, and an assurance from him to that effect in this Council will be of no use if the Trustees reject it. But a capable Chairman like Mr. Hatch can influence his colleagues a great deal by his own views as he has already done. If, therefore, when he speaks he is prepared to accept my suggestion of having a permanent hotel built by a lessee on the site outside ths Alexandra Docks, then I can see my way to support the bill. But, if he insists, as I think he does, of getting this bill passed for the purpose of having a large hotel on the site now proposed, not only will I not support the bill, but I would like to point out to the Council and repeat most emphatically, that it will be a serious mistake, for it will result in a recurring loss to the Port Trust, and bring about congestion in a locality which ought to be kept free and open. I say, therefore, that if the Honourable Mr. Hatch is prepared to say here to-day that he does not intend to encroach upon that large plot of land and put up there a hotel for 400 passengers, I am prepared to support the bill, otherwise, I repeat that I shall be sorry to vote against the first reading; for it will be manifest then that the bill is introduced not for establishing a principle, but for carrying out a particular project of the chairman in regard to which the Trustees themselves are divided in opinion, and the chairman's own principal officers who have been longer connected with the Trust than himself are opposed to it as not being in the interests of the Trust.

PORT TRUST BILL.

[4TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai.]

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Mr. President,—As a member of this Council, I think, it is my first duty to see whether the proposal has been placed before the Council in a way in which it ought to have been placed. We are asked to give power to the Port Trust to embark upon a very costly undertaking. As to what will be the cost of that undertaking no one is able to give us any definite idea. As to what would be the loss on it also, no one is able to give us any definite idea. Now, I think that when any legislative sanction is asked for or any power is sought to be taken to incur any expenditure on a very large scale, this Council ought to require, in the first instance, of those who wish to take that power, to say as to what will be the capital cost of the undertaking and the recurring cost in the shape of losses or otherwise. If you turn to section 68 of the Port Trust Act, which is sought to be amended by the insertion of clause 7A, you find there a proviso that when the cost of a work exceeds more than Rs. 2,000, without a plan and an estimate the Board cannot do anything, and when the estimate exceeds Rs. 2,00,000, the Board has to come to Government. Then, sometimes Government have to come to the legislative assembly to take certain power for the purpose of incurring certain expenditure by way of capital outlay and recurring cost. If that is the case, is it not incumbent on the part of the Board or of Government, when they seek to take that power by amending section 68 of the act, in the first instance, to place before this assembly a proper estimate of the cost that will be incurred, and give an idea as to whether it will end in loss or profit? The Honourable the Advocate General says that the question lies in a nutshell. I also say that the question lies in a nutshell. The point is that the Port Trust authorities will have to find the money by a loan. When local bodies require a loan, Government want several details of the scheme, as to sinking fund, payment of interest, estimates, plans, and a great many other things. Here, the Port Trust is also a body similar to a local body like a local board or a municipality, and yet Government have come before the Council to give powers to the Port Trust by amending the act, without putting before the Council any data. What did we find yesterday? His Excellency was good enough to explain the whole position of the development scheme, and give us a fair idea of what they intended to do, and in that way took this Council into his confidence. As regards this bill, we do not find anything of the sort. No estimate is placed before the Council, and the Chairman of the Port Trust, or any other officer if he is referred to, is not able to give us any idea as to what it will be, and from what I have gathered from the Honourable Mr. Sethna, I find that the cost would be double that estimated by the Honourable Mr. Hatch. The question is, as His Excellency said, whether the Port Trust ought not to afford terminal facilities. As regards that the Honourable the Advocate General said that the Port Trust authorities ought to afford such facilities, and that hotel accommodation falls within those facilities. As for precedents, he was unable to give any, except that of a railway which was the owner of a dockyard. But that was a doubtful precedent, and no other precedents have been forthcoming. Then, the next question would be that, if hotels do fall within the purview of terminal facilities, then the question would be, whether the management of hotels by Government would be a paying business. Government have been known to be very bad managers with reference to these matters. I had it from Government officers, who had to admit that Government are a very costly machine.

PORT TRUST BILL.

[Mr. G. S. Curtis; the Vice-President; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas.] [4TH AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Therefore, does the honourable member mean to say that the Port Trust should not have a hotel?

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—I understood the honourable member to be discussing the question of Government management. In this case, there is no such proposal.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—I do not make any great difference between a Government department and a quasi-Government department like the Port Trust, because the latter is managed through a chairman who is himself a member of the I. C. S., and Government departments are also managed by members of the I. C. S. Though perhaps the Port Trust may not be exactly a part of a Government department, it is a quasi-Governmet department, and it is run in the same way in which a Government department is run, and I think that if the Port Trust is going to have a hotel, certainly it would be a very costly management. Consequently, it is a very serious question for us to consider whether we should give this power to the Port Trust.

There is one other question which I would not have referred to ordinarily, but as we are confronted with a question of giving power to the Port Trust, I am constrained to refer to it. It is this, that all along, for so many years, it has not occurred to anybody to give terminal facilities to passengers going out of Bombay harbour, or coming into Bombay harbour, but when the ocean-going passengers found a difficulty, then it becomes a matter of concern to the Port Trust to consider about the comforts of that particular section of passengers, and not to think of the sea-going passengers, either coming in or going out. So that, if you think that terminal facilities include hotels and management of hotels, then you will have to consider the question as a whole. You will have to consider the case of not only ocean-going passengers, but that of sea-going passengers and coasting passengers also. You will have to bring in a bill properly framed, in order to meet those difficulties, and then this Council will consider it, if it is properly accompanied by an estimate. At present, what do we find? The difficulties of the coasting passengers to Kathiawar, Dwarka, and other ports have up to now had no consideration. But, on account of the difficulty of hotel accommodation for ocean-going passengers, the Port Trust wants to look to their convenience, and then Government brings in a bill of this limited character. Certainly, if you think that terminal facilities ought to be given by the Port Trust, consider the question as a whole, and bring in a bill which will meet the whole difficulty. Since this bill does not meet the whole difficulty, we must throw it out, and I, therefore, oppose the first reading of the bill.

The Honourable Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas:—Mr. President,—Even at the risk of being called meddlesome or interfering with a business with which I have no concern, I crave your permission to say a few words on the subject. I will first address myself to the question as to whether the opposition is opportune at this stage of the proceedings, namely, the first reading of the bill. Times out of number it has been shown that there may be differences of opinion as to details, but when there is unanimity about a particular measure being passed on general principles, then the first reading of the bill should not be opposed. I think that is not the position in the present instance. This bill is not like yesterday's police bill which consisted of two clauses, one relating to the appointment of superintendents and the other relating to smoking and spittting, so that whilst one was quite in sympathy with the passing of the measure as regards the first part, although he was against the second part, still his position should have been to pass the first reading of the bill. Here, however, there is only one clause and nothing more, giving power to the Port Trust to erect a hotel. I think, this is the proper time for members of Council to say whether they are in favour of this clause or not. Because to say that the first reading of the bill should be passed and opposition centred upon the measure when it comes up for the second reading, would be tantamount to this, that the members having committed themselves at the first reading—the majority of them at any rate—to this very clause, if they opposed the second reading, it could be very easily argued that they were stultifying themselves by saying one thing at first reading and another at the second, blowing hot and cold. Therefore, I submit, Mr. President, that we should bring our opinion to bear upon the subject and come to a determination now, whether this measure should be allowed or disallowed. After careful consideration I have come to the conclusion that it should not be passed. I will not repeat the grounds which have already been traversed by so many members. I shall take up one or two points.

In the first place, the Honourable the Advocate General said: never mind if the hotel is run at a loss; considering everything, the Port Trust would be gainers. I challenge that proposition. He said that if proper facilities were given by the Port Trust in the matter of hotel accommodation, the trade of this country would be greatly advanced. Now, is it conceivable that because there is no hotel accommodation provided by the Port Trust, there will be less traffic and less travel than if there were greater facilities in this direction? I am very doubtful of that. If anyone wants to come to India from abroad for the purpose of opening trade relations in India, he will not be deterred from his object simply because there is no hotel accommodation provided by the Port Trust of Bombay.

PORT TRUST BILL.

[4TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas; Mr. Munmohundass Ramji.]

Another aspect of the question is this. Why should a body, a local authority, the Port Trust—for the matter of that, the Municipality, or for the matter of that, the Improvement Trust—assume the duties of inn-keepers which are entirely outside the nature of their functions for which they have been originally constituted? I will not deny—I think it will not be honest to deny—that real hotel accommodation is very scanty in Bombay, and requires to be supplemented. But then there are other ways of meeting the difficulty. The Honourable Mr. Sethna has told us that if offers were made, people would be coming forward very eagerly to purchase or take on lease Port Trust property for erecting a hotel. I think, the endeavours of the Port Trust ought to have been directed to see, whether people are not coming forward to take up sites if offered on easy terms. If those efforts had been entirely exhausted, there would be some justification for the Port Trust to ask for the powers that they are now doing, although I would not go the whole hog by endorsing that proposition either. I think the purposes which the Port Trust have in view for seeking this legislation and getting these extra powers can be easily served by letting sites to private enterprise. That is the proper thing to do.

I am entirely at one with the Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai in what he says that you cannot expect management on those economic and business lines from men either of Government departments or Port Trusts or municipalities as you would from men of private enterprise. Men of private enterprise would always see to it that the concern pays them as it would directly touch their pockets, whereas the local bodies of the nature I have described would run the management by their servants and officers who would not be particular about carrying on the management on remunerative lines. That objection which the Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai has taken should not be treated lightly. It is a very serious objection indeed. Therefore, I think, the proposed legislation is rather unnecessary and is burdening the Port Trust with functions which ought not to be within its province, and it is again burdening the Port Trust funds with responsibilities which they ought not to bear and which, I think, the people who contribute to those funds would not like should be borne by the Port Trust. And we have been told by facts and figures quoted by the Honourable Mr. Sethna that it is impossible at the present juncture to arrive at any definite figures either of the cost of this hotel or its maintenance charges, and that it may run on to anything beyond a crore of rupees. That being so, I think, it is not fair to the contributors of the Port Trust funds that their money should be frittered away in this manner. Therefore, sir, I strongly oppose the first reading of the bill.

The Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji:—Sir,—I also rise to oppose the first reading of this bill, because, I think, that there are no proper materials placed before this Council by the Port Trust for them to gauge whether the powers that are asked for are really necessary for the development of trade and commerce of this city. I consider that the prime duty of the Port Trust is to see that proper facilities are given for the accommodation of trade and commerce. I remember, sir, that there was a time when the stock of piecegoods in the godowns of the Port Trust had risen to more than a lakh of packages. There was a sort of notice then put up by the Port Trust that people should clear their goods earlier and more frequently as there was a shortage of room. The war came in the meantime; the imports were checked, and that difficulty was temporarily removed. But, I think, when we get to the normal conditions of trade, the same difficulty will be experienced. Is it not right, therefore, that the Port Trust should foresee this difficulty and prepare for that, instead of borrowing money for carrying out a business which to my mind is not their legitimate business, but simply to prosecute an imaginary idea that more passengers would be attracted if proper facilities were given to the incoming and outgoing passengers? The main object of the Port Trust should be to see that trade and commerce increase and not to provide increased facilities to travellers. There are commercial travellers, but there are other sorts of travellers also, and it would be very difficult to distinguish between them. And even if we put up a hotel, it is doubtful whether the Port Trust can compete with the hotels which are managed by private enterprise.

We are told by the Honourable the Advocate-General that the profits derived by the coming in and going out of passengers, will more than recoup any loss that may be

PORT TRUST BILL.

[Mr. Munmohundass Ramji; Mr. G. S. Curtis; Mr. G. K. Parekh.] [4TH AUGUST 1920.]

incurred by keeping lower charges resulting in any slight loss. I say that it is not right for the Port Trust to compete with private enterprise in the matter of hotel accommodation. The result of such competition will be that private enterprise will suffer, and it will only add greatly to the shortage of accommodation for passengers.

Then again, I say it is not a paying proposition at all. The Chairman of the Port Trust has informed us that one of his friend architects—or perhaps it is the Port Trust architect—has roughly estimated that the cost will come to about Rs. 50,00,000.

The Honourable Mr. Sethna has told us that the price of labour and building materials has gone up three times since the Taj Mahal Hotel was built about 20 years ago at a cost of Rs. 30,00,000. I say it has gone up more than three times. When we take this fact into consideration, it is clear that the loss is not going to be a small one. Indeed it may be a heavy loss. Besides, the Port Trust has more important duties to perform than embarking on a losing business. I say, therefore, that it is not right for a body like the Port Trust to come before this assembly and ask for powers without themselves knowing the exact position into which they will be launched by acquiring these powers. It is, thus, all the more necessary for the Council to hesitate before they give their sanction to this proposition.

Now, there is another point that was very rightly referred to by two of the previous speakers, the Honourable Mr. Desai and the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye, namely, whether any facilities in the way of accommodation are ever sought by anybody for another class of passengers who have to go from port to port. I know that sometimes passengers coming from Ratnagiri and from other interior ports, and from other ports, have to wait for days together in sun and rain, and even simple waiting rooms or any other sort of protection is not afforded for them. Then why is there such a haste to provide for wealthy passengers who can spend any amount of money for coming to Bombay and take advantage of Bombay?

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Will the honourable member refer me to any provision in the Bombay Port Trust Act which would enable the Port Trust to provide for accommodation for such passengers even if they wish to do so.

The Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji:—As the proposal comes from the Port Trust, I ask, whether it is not the business of somebody to accommodate a certain set of passengers. There is another set of passengers and there must be somebody who should look to the accommodation and comfort and convenience of these passengers. Therefore, I put in this argument that there is another set of passengers and to them some facilities ought to be afforded. In the absence of that why is there this haste of providing for only one particular set of passengers?

Now, it is proposed that only fifty lakhs of rupees are to be spent on this hotel. Taking that figure, I ask, whether it is possible to meet the real needs of the port in the matter of affording accommodation to all the passengers. I say that it is not possible to do that within that sum.

Then there is another thing, namely, that it is not the duty of the Port Trust to launch into competition with private enterprise, and therefore, if the Port Trust are so keen about affording accommodation for ocean-going passengers, then I say the best mode would be for the Port Trust to lease out their land on favourable terms to any syndicate or any company on easy terms, and provide in the lease for all the necessary conveniences and comforts of those passengers for whom the concession is proposed to be given. That lease would not be grudged by anybody. But here is a scheme the extent of which is not known to anybody. It is in the air. It may amount to two crores of rupees. After the proposed power is conferred on them the majority of the Trustees, as they have done now, may be willing to spend even that amount and they may get the sanction, and the public may be saddled with this heavy cost of the scheme. And who will be the class of people who will be made to bear this burden? The trade and commerce. Of course the more we burden the trade and commerce, the more it is difficult for them to compete in these days of world competition, and it is but right that we should see that the port of Bombay should be as cheap as possible, if not cheaper than any other port in India. If we are going to saddle more cost on the Trust and make the trade and commerce to pay for it, then I say it is not a businesslike proposition. With these words I oppose the first reading of the bill.

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh:—Mr. President,—I should like to add my voice to the voice of those who have preceded me in opposing the first reading of this bill. I shall shortly state my reasons for doing so.

PORT TRUST BILL.

[4TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. G. K. Parekh; Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah; Mr. G. W. Hatch.]

I should think every honourable member of this Council should form his opinion about this measure upon the basis as to what action he himself would have taken if the property in reference to which he is now called upon to form an opinion, were his own property. How he, as a prudent and reasonable man, would act if the property were his own? The Council will note that the bill wants to give general powers to the Port Trustees.

No area or the extent of the land which is required for the new works is specified. It is not shown how much land the Port Trust owns and where the land for the proposed hotel and other buildings is to come from. No approximate estimate is placed before the Council as regards the cost of the construction, and the equipment of the hotel and the other buildings which it would be necessary to provide for. There are strong differences of opinion as to the amount of accommodation which the hotel should provide. There is no idea whatever, or at all events, the figures are extremely doubtful, as to the amount of profit or the amount of loss which would result upon the trust in consequence of the amendment being sanctioned. I ask, whether under these circumstances you would expect any reasonable and prudent man to plunge into such a scheme and ask his manager to proceed with the work.

I submit, sir, that no reasonable man would be inclined to do this, and I think it would be very unreasonable under the circumstances of this case that the bill should be pushed forward.

The other thing to which I have also to draw the attention of this Council is that the trade of Bombay is in course of development. The development that the trade requires has not yet been completed. We do not know whether some of the places on which it is proposed to build this hotel may not be required for the development of the trade or for other purposes for carrying out the real objects of the Trust. Is it not possible that some of these places may be required for some of the very purposes of the trust and would not be available when so built upon for carrying out more important objects?

I would also draw the attention of the Council to the fact that under the conditions as they exist it would be necessary to consider what the effect of this measure would be on the different communities that inhabit the big city of Bombay. Fortunately for us those questions which are very common in other parts of India do not appreciably exist here, and if this Council decides that a differentiation should be made between the accommodation for passengers who travel in this country from those who have resort to ocean travelling, I am afraid feelings which exist elsewhere may also be introduced into Bombay. I should therefore ask that the first reading of this bill be not proceeded with.

The Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah:—Sir,—I do not agree with my honourable friend Mr. Harchandrai when he says that even if there were no sufficient hotel accommodation, and no sufficient convenience for passengers, yet they would come to Bombay. I am afraid there is a great deal of inconvenience and that the trade of Bombay will suffer for want of proper convenience.

Another point that my honourable friend Mr. Harchandrai raised is that no other body will do the catering like the Port Trust. I might remind my honourable friend Mr. Harchandrai that in the mofussil there are maintained dak bungalows by the district local boards. They are equipped by the district local boards though they are leased out, and the catering is done by the lessee. At the same time there is no distinction made between the passengers that visit those dak bungalows. All kinds of passengers, whether railway or ocean-going, take advantage of them.

Now after hearing the speeches of my honourable friends I have changed my mind considerably, and I really cannot understand why this hotel should be for the convenience of ocean-going passengers only. Why should it not be for railway and other passengers as well?

I have heard the Honourable Mr. Sethna, and unless I hear something in reply from the Chairman of the Port Trust, I am afraid, I shall have to vote against the first reading of this bill.

The Honourable Mr. G. W. Hatch:—Sir,—I do not wish to traverse again the ground or to repeat the arguments that I used this morning. The honourable gentleman in front of me (the Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah) asked why the proposed hotel should be exclusively for ocean-going passengers. I am afraid he is under a misapprehension. The words used in the proposals put up by the Trust were that the hotel should be primarily for ocean-going passengers. We shall certainly not refuse passengers coming to us from Karachi or any places between Bombay and Karachi.

PORT TRUST BILL.

[Mr. G. W. Hatch; the Vice-President; Mr. C. V. Mehta.] [4TH AUGUST 1920.]

It seems to have been assumed by the Honourable Mr. Sethna that the 280 rooms which—it is said—this problematical hotel will contain, are essential to the proposal that I as Chairman of the Port Trust have submitted to Government. I should like to explain the history of the proposal. The idea occurred to myself and Sir Lawless Hepper sometime about last Christmas. I brought it before the board. The board decided to consult an eminent architect, Mr. Wittet. We asked him to consider and report on the suitability of this site which lies parallel to the existing station building; we also asked him to consider an alternative suggestion that a hotel might be erected on the station building which we intend to erect over the platforms where the trains are pulled up. He considered both and gave us a favourable report regarding the site running parallel to the present station building.

He told us that he considered it possible to build on that site a hotel which would contain some 280 rooms and that such a hotel in his estimate would probably cost us Rs. 50,00,000. That was as far as we went then into the question of what accommodation the hotel should provide or what its cost might be. We have never, so far as I recollect, in any committee or meeting of the board entered into any detail as to the appropriate number to be catered for, nor the expense to which we were prepared to go, nor even how much of the Ballard Pier site would be actually required. The Honourable Mr. Sethna apparently after a recent visit to the site has come away with the impression that it would not be suitable for the hotel. He ought to be aware that the trustees discussed that point and considered it very carefully, and came to the conclusion that it was possible to use the Ballard Pier site without undue congestion which is naturally the last thing they would be prepared to have there.

Another suggestion was made by various speakers, and that was that we should provide a site and allow a syndicate to build a hotel. That was a proposition that appealed to a good many of us, to myself particularly, because I thought a good deal of worry would be saved to myself and the officers of the Port Trust if the whole business of the construction of a hotel could be handed over to a syndicate. However, the trustees after anxious consideration came to the conclusion that it would not be right for them as trustees of the port to allow outsiders to erect a large building on the Ballard Pier, our chief passenger landing place; they decided that the control of any such building must remain in the hands of the trustees. That was the deliberate conclusion we came to, and therefore, we had to come to Government with this bill.

One more point, with regard to the coasting steamer passengers. Various speakers have remarked that coasting steamer passengers have had no facilities provided for them at all. Where they obtained their information I cannot imagine. If they visited the Alexandra Dock Harbour Wall they would see that we have provided fairly good facilities there for the convenience of passengers.

There are three large waiting rooms there. Recently we were asked by the Bombay Steam Navigation Company to provide some special accommodation for their higher class passengers and we have provided it.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Is there accommodation at the two bandars, the Lakdi Bandar and the Carnac Bandar?

The Honourable Mr. G. W. Hatch:—No passengers are landed at the Lakdi Bandar; at Carnac Bandar there is a shed which is used by passengers. But the chief passenger traffic goes to the Alexandra Dockyard, and there we have recently erected several sheds for passengers. Within the last few months we have spent considerable sums of money in providing certain shops or eating houses there. Well, I am afraid if this Council refuses to accept this bill, all that action of the Port Trust will be illegal and we certainly shall not be able to provide any further buildings for these passengers. Up till recently we had not troubled to obtain any legal opinion on our action. We have now obtained one and that opinion clearly shows that we cannot put up any buildings in order to afford facilities to passengers under the act as it stands.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta:—Mr. President,—I am afraid we have got to address ourselves on this question to the scheme that has been put before the board of trustees for the port of Bombay. I do not think we can confine ourselves to arguing the abstract principle only whether the Port Trust should have the power that is asked for or not. That is a matter to which I will refer later. But as regards the scheme as it has been put forward before us, it has been rightly pointed out, that no estimates have been formed and no plans have been considered, and we are only told that a site was selected and that a building thereon, in the opinion of a well-known architect, would cost somewhere near 50 lakhs of rupees. I think, Mr. President, it is necessary for me to read the opinion of the various officers of the Port Trust who were consulted as to the suitability of the proposed site for a hotel. It is necessary for two reasons, first, to show that it is not desirable in their opinion that the site should be so used, that they consider that the facilities of the port would be considerably curtailed if the site were so used, and secondly, it will show that in spite of the deliberate opinion of these officers a majority of the board came to the conclusion that they should use that site for erecting a hotel there. That shows they have made up their minds to build a hotel there. The opinions of these officers are as follows :—

PORT TRUST BILL.

[4TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. C. V. Mehta; Mr. G. W. Hatch.]

The Docks Manager expresses the opinion that until sufficient experience has been gained of shipping requirements in the Alexandra Dock under normal trade conditions, the land adjoining the West Wharf, Ballard Pier, should not be allotted for purposes of a hotel. Then follows the opinion of the Port Officer, saying he thinks it probable that when the West Wharf is used for shipping, the adjoining site may be required for sheds and railway sidings, and he is therefore not in favour of erecting a hotel. The Chief Engineer says that at present no large building, other than perhaps a single storied shed, should be erected on the site as it is difficult to foretell for what purpose the wharf may be required in future years.

The Honourable Mr. G. W. Hatch :—There is a further opinion, which the honourable member might also read.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta :—Yes ; the opinion that follows is the opinion of the chairman (laughter).

The Honourable Mr. G. W. Hatch :—There is the opinion of the Railway Manager.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta :—Yes, I will read it. It is as follows :—

"If it is decided not to take any lines to the west of the mole we shall certainly have to widen our west platform and put in another line. This will not fit in well with the design but could be done. In the original designs I left space between the main line leading to the mole and the wall of the Ballard Estate for two lines for stabling purposes and this ground has not been encroached upon, as far as I am aware, These two lines will, I think, be enough for some time for stabling. The existing platforms, even with the space for extensions, are not enough for troop trains. They will have to be lengthened and the approaches adjusted and signalled. If the ground floor of the proposed hotel is kept as a trooping shed, etc., there appears to be no objection to the site being used as a hotel. I see no reason why the railway lines should not be taken under the hotel. They would not be often used and there would be no more noise than at many other places."

I have quoted, sir, all the opinions that are mentioned in the minute. It is perfectly evident that three responsible officers at least of the Port Trust definitely gave their opinion that the land should not be used as a hotel. The acquiescence of the Railway Manager is very half hearted. Furthermore, sir, one of the trustees—a very prominent trustee—of the board, Major-General James, said he was doubtful whether the area of the site was sufficiently large to accommodate a hotel of the type proposed by Mr. Wittet without unduly crowding the Ballard Pier. Yet we find that the majority of the board including the gallant General voted for the hotel. That being the case, it is necessary for the Council to consider whether the much talked of facilities that have been mentioned will accrue. It seems to me, Mr. President, that the point which the Honourable Mr. Munmohundass raised is an important one. If the hotel is bound to lead the trust into a loss, and if that loss is going to be anything like what the Honourable Mr. Sethna estimates, namely, Rs. 5,00,000, then the cost to the trade would be proportionately increased and the trust would put on more taxes. Is it then going to lead to any encouragement to the trade coming to Bombay if a tax is to be imposed on them to recover Rs. 5,00,000 a year?

Let us now consider, sir, what the Honourable the Advocate General said. He said that on general principles we should look at the proposal from a broad point of view and see that the trade will benefit indirectly even if there be loss on this specific venture. I would like to ask him why it is that in no other ports in the world excepting the one that he mentioned, and that indeed was in conjunction with a railway terminus, no one of those ports has thought of bringing in indirect revenue by putting up a hotel. He complimented the board on their business capacity. I am certain he believes that the Railway Board is composed of equally hard-headed persons. Why does it not appeal to the Railway Board to put up hotels and indirectly increase their revenue instead of putting up 3rd class fares? It seems to me that it is a point which ought to be vigorously pressed by Government.

PORT TRUST BILL.

[Mr. C. V. Mehta; Mr. Ali Gohar Bhutto.] [4TH AUGUST 1920.]

I pointed out this morning, sir, that in my opinion the cost, if there is going to be a loss, ought to be spread over the whole country and it ought not to be inflicted on the trade of Bombay alone. The ocean-going passengers are going to roam all over the country, and I see no reason why the cost should not be met by the railways, which as I said are more or less nationalized. The whole question seems to me more a question of housing than of facilities for the port. If it had been a natural duty of the Port Trust to provide hotels, then I am perfectly certain that legislation would have given that power to other bodies in England and in India. But it is not a duty of the Port Trust. It is a question more or less of housing. I venture to think, sir, that it is not the business of the Bombay Port Trust to go in for housing. But if it is contended that housing is the main point which the Port Trust are to attack, then I think, sir, that charity ought to begin at home, and the Port Trust should make provision for all their own employées. I may dilate on the figures to which I réferred this morning. I think it is a sad tale, and I am afraid that if we contrast the expenditure that has been made on the housing or lack of housing of a very large number of people, no other conclusion can be come to except this, that an expenditure of 50 lakhs to a crore of rupees for the temporary convenience of a certain number of ocean-going passengers ought not for a moment to be allowed to take precedence of the housing of the thousands of the employees who serve the Port Trust.

I had these figures, I may tell you, sir, through the courtesy of the Secretary of the Port Trust. I asked him what the expenditure was that had been incurred by the Port Trust on the housing of the superior as well as the inferior staff. The superior staff numbers at present 1,989 persons, including officers and clerks. The number housed is 367; the proportion of those housed is 18·45, and the expenditure is Rs. 16,26,332. Similarly, for the inferior staff, including workmen and labourers, the number employed is 13,275; those housed are 3,826, exclusive of lascars. The proportion housed is 28, and the expenditure on housing is Rs. 16,89,000. Now, I submit, sir, that if, as I understand, it is the duty of the Port Trust to house if not the whole, at all events, a large majority of their employees, then the amount that will be required for that purpose, on an estimate based upon these figures, will be considerably over a crore and a half of rupees. Twenty-eight per cent. of the inferior staff housed took Rs. 16,89,000 in times when building was cheap. It is an easy calculation to say that for the rest at least Rs. 75,00,000 will be required. Similarly, for the superior staff, only 18·45 per cent., that is roughly one-fifth have been housed, and the cost has been Rs. 16,26,000. The remaining would take, on these figures, something like Rs. 80,00,000 at the lowest figure. So that, sir, you will see that an expenditure stares the Port Trust in the face to the tune of about a crore and a half of rupees, and I venture to think that the claims of those officers and the claims of the subordinates are very much more pressing than the temporary convenience that is caused to the ocean-going passengers.

What is the effect of not housing these officers? We have found what it is in the case of various public bodies, and it is the same in the case of the Post Trust. Their salaries have to be raised, and not only that, but other allowances for housing have to be given to these officers, and the indirect loss that is borne by the Port Trust in this way is very considerable. I am leaving out of count the large staff that is at present being recruited and that will be required by the Port Trust for the very extensive schemes that are before them, involving crores of rupees, and if you take into consideration the number of that staff, the amount that will be required for them will be very considerable indeed. I do not think that it is proper that we should spend funds to the extent of anything between Rs. 50,00,000 to a crore of rupees, when we have to leave unhoused such a large number of the Port Trust's employees.

I will now refer, Mr. President, only to one further point, and that is that if it were merely a question of giving the power in the abstract to the board, then perhaps we would not have gone into so much detail, and placed before the Council all these facts. But, constituted as the Board of Trustees is at present, it seems to me that if this power were to be given to them, then there is no saying to what extent and in what manner it will be used, and I therefore think that it is right and that it is the duty of those honourable members who are on the Board of the Port Trust, to place all the facts before this Council, so that they can come to a reasoned conclusion on this matter, and I hope that the conclusion will be nothing else than that, in the circumstances that are placed before the Council, they cannot see their way to support the first reading of the bill.

The Honourable Mr. Ali Gohar Bhutto:—Mr. President,—From what I have heard from the various speakers on the subject, I am thoroughly convinced that the giving away such a large power to the Port Trust to build a magnificent hotel is clearly a mere waste of the public money, and it is, therefore, that I rise to oppose the first reading of the bill.

PORT TRUST BILL.

[4TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas; the Vice-President; Mr. G. S. Curtis.]

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas :—Mr. President,.....

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael) :—As the honourable member has already made a speech on the first reading, in connection with his motion for adjournment of the bill, under rule 14 he is not entitled to speak again.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis :—Mr. President,—I think perhaps I had better preface my remarks by reading clause 3 of the bill. It says :

"After sub-section (7) of section 68 of the said Act, the following sub-section shall be inserted, namely :—

> '(7A) The construction upon the property vested in the Board and the equipment, maintenance and management of such buildings, including hotels, as may, in the opinion of the Board, add to or improve the facilities of the port.'"

Now, sir, our discussion, after lunch to-day, was opened by the Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai, who asked what is the number of passengers arriving by sea from Gujarat and the Southern Division and Kathiawar. I could not answer the question. I cannot do it off-hand. I should be delighted to refer to statistics and do so. I entirely agree with his argument. The more the merrier, that is, whether it is a million or two millions, or more, it is entirely to my point. As the law stands at present, the Port Trust cannot put up one single chappar for any passenger who arrives in Bombay by sea.

(At this stage His Excellency the President returned and resumed the chair.)

The provision which it is proposed to make in the law entirely covers those facilities. As the Chairman of the Port Trust has said, the Port Trust have provided accommodation in the shape of sheds, refreshment rooms, waiting rooms, etc., for coasting passengers at Alexandra Docks. That, according to the opinion recently given, is entirely outside the four corners of the law. Therefore, if this measure is rejected summarily—I am not a member of the Port Trust—but I imagine, speaking as an ordinary man of the world, that the only course open to the Port Trust will be at once to recommend the closing down of all refreshment rooms, waiting rooms, and every possible convenience which is provided either at the Alexandra Docks or elsewhere.

The Honourable Mr. Parekh, as a very old and well-known lawyer, has enlarged on the responsibilities and duties of the Port Trustees. And he has asked, how would a man in this case act with reference to his own property I think there is only one answer, and that is that if the law declares that his maintenance of refreshment rooms, or waiting rooms, or sheds for coasting passengers was illegal, his duty would be at once to close them down; otherwise he would be liable to be proceeded against for breach of trust. So much for one thing. I want to go a little further.

Not very long ago, we had a bill brought up and placed with great eloquence in this Council by the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye. He referred to the matter more than once, and said that there should be a fund for the provision of facilities for passengers landing at coast ports. Now, one prominent advantage of the facilities provided at the expense of that fund, is the provision of dharamsalas, dak bungalows and similar facilities at various ports along the coast. I cannot for the life of me see what the difference is between the provision of a dharamsala for coasting passengers or deck passengers at Ratnagiri and the provision of a hotel for ocean-going passengers in Bombay. Both are provided out of public funds. In the case of the Port Trust the funds are levied and collected from all classes of the population, and in that way these particular facilities are provided. I cannot see how, having supported and constantly drawn attention to the desirability of utilizing the funds to the full for the provision of these facilities at coast ports, honourable members can get up to say that the provision of similar facilities in Bombay, though, I admit on a larger scale, is entirely outside the province of a body like the Port Trust.

I will now go a little further. The Honourable Rao Saheb Desai, I think it was, got up and said that no actual estimates and no proposals were placed before this Council. Now, sir, perhaps members of this Council will remember when the bill for southern ports came up, we had a large number of proposals, calling attention, and rightly, to the lack of facilities at Ratnagiri, Harnai, and at various other places along the coast. I do not remember that the Council refused to pass that Southern Ports Bill, because actual details were not placed before them. It seems to me that it is a new principle altogether. We are often charged.....

PORT TRUST BILL.

[Mr. R. P. Paranjpye; the President; Mr. G. S. Curtis; Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas.] [4TH AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—I rise to a point of order, your Excellency. I would like to point out that I brought forward a resolution and not a bill.

His Excellency the President:—That is not a point of order.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—I think the honourable member supported the bill when it came up. I may be wrong, but that is my impression. But, sir, I want to go a step further.

We have had various bills empowering local bodies throughout the Presidency to undertake certain duties and works, and I am sure the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai would be the last person to deny that local bodies do not include the Port Trust. These bodies are rather slow, and are rather apt to be tied up in red tape, and are inclined to boggle at responsibilities. Now, is the honourable member prepared to come here and say that no power is to be given to a local body to enter upon some big public work, unless full plans and estimates are placed before this Council? I leave the Council to imagine how long members of select committees of this Council will have to sit, if they are to go into the details of all the hotel and port projects which are undertaken by various bodies, out of the profits of the taxation authorized by legislation. It seems to me, sir, that it is an entirely new principle. Of course, in England we are familiar with the practice of the private bill. If the Port Trust wishes to start any particular undertaking, a bill is introduced in the House of Commons, which is referred to a committee, and after it is passed by a committee of lawyers, is brought up before the main body of the house. Now, sir, is it intended that the same procedure should be followed here with regard to any legislation brought up in this Council? Because, if we are going to have that procedure, it is going to mean that we shall have to have standing committees of the Council all the year round, and that so far from expediting the procedure, I can assure honourable members that the delays that will occur under the new system would be far greater than under our existing system.

Now, sir, there is one point more. What has been said? It is said that the plans and estimates are not ready. I have not the slightest doubt that it would be perfectly easy to get them ready. Suppose the Port Trust had paid the fee for preparing the estimates and brought them here before the Council. Would the opposition of the honourable members be any less? I submit, sir, that they would say: "Oh, you are trying to rush this thing. You have come here with the thing cut and dried. Those estimates have probably not been carefully considered. You come here with the thing ready and ask us to swallow it at once." I say, therefore, that the position would not be better in the slightest degree.

Then, as ordinary legal procedure stands, every local body, whether it is a Government department or whether it is a Port Trust—the Port Trust is not a Government Department, with due deference to the Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai—has first to be given the power to raise money. Then the next check is the sanction of Government to the actual scheme and actual estimates. I do not think they should ask for more.

I think, I have shown so far that the objection that no accommodation has hitherto been provided for coasting passengers of the Indian class has no force. On the contrary, I have endeavoured to show that it is entirely on my side. Hitherto what provision has been made, has been made in violation of the law, and if the facilities are to be continued, an amendment of the law is absolutely necessary. Otherwise the mole station must be shut down to-morrow.....

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—Is there something like an audit statement of the accounts of the Port Trust?

His Excellency the President:—Does the honourable member rise to a point of order?

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—What I wanted to know, your Excellency, was whether.....

His Excellency the President:—Will the honourable member only rise to a point of order?

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Now, sir, a further objection has been taken by the Honourable Mr. Pandurang Desai—I think the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye—and by others that if a hotel is provided, there would be a discrimination exercised against passengers of Indian nationality. I speak subject to correction. I think the honourable gentleman spoke from experience. As far as I know, all the hotels in Bombay are Indian-managed, and if any discrimination has been exercised against passengers of the Indian nationalities, I submit that the remedy lies in their own hands. As far as I know, I am not aware of any discrimination. In fact, in most of the hotels that I have been to, lately in Bombay, Poona and Mahableshwar, I have seen a very large sprinkling of Indian residents. Therefore I do not think there is much force in that argument. If there is any discrimination, it must be due to their own countrymen, and they have the remedy in their own hands.

PORT TRUST BILL.

[4TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. G. S. Curtis; Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna.]

Further objection is taken to the fact that the supply of passengers for the hotels might be fitful. I understand,—here also I speak subject to correction—I have not got the exact figures, but from what I have heard, the peculiar feature of this year's passenger season is that the rush of passengers has continued right through the hot weather and rains and that passengers are still hung up in Egypt trying to travel to India. Steamers are arriving and departing full. If that is so, I submit, sir, that the traffic is not fitful, but on the contrary it has reached such a high pitch that the possibility of hotels ever remaining empty is remote.

Now, sir, I have not very much more to say. But I should like to deal with the Honourable Mr. Sethna. The honourable gentleman after, I understand, considering the proposals for a period of something like two months in the Port Trust and voting in favour of it, has suddenly changed his front.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna :—I have given my reasons therefor, sir.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis :—I do not know whether honourable members understood the Honourable Mr. Sethna's reasons. I found them very difficult to follow. He referred to the annual meeting of the Taj Mahal Hotel being held to-day and so on. But I do not wish to make any imputations. I confess, however, that his changing his front is to me extremely puzzling. He gave a mass of figures relating to hotels. They do not coincide with those placed before me lately. Perhaps he knows more than I do. In any case, they do not coincide. What I do want to bring home is this, that if the honourable member's figures are anything like correct, it is perfectly obvious that the position is really worse than what we thought. The bill only gives power to the Port Trust to erect a hotel. After five or six years when the reclamation is ready and when the terminus of the B. B. & C. I. Railway is removed from Colaba, and more space becomes available at a reasonable rate—shall we say Rs. 10 a square yard?—then, the Port Trust may consider the desirability of abandoning their hotel and converting it into office accommodation or other accommodation, which I am advised is a very easy process. Sir, if the costs of construction are as high as the Honourable Mr. Sethna has told us, and if it is really true that you have to allow 10 per cent. for interest and sinking fund, it is obvious that the situation is far worse than we thought. There can be no question of private enterprise coming forward and erecting hotels in Bombay. It cannot be done. The cost of building is so high. Therefore, what we are faced with is a prolonged period of hotel famine. If the Colaba terminus is moved and the Back Bay Reclamation is ready, we hope within six years—it may be ten years—if that is the case, then this prolonged dearth, this extreme scarcity of hotel accommodation is likely to continue for another ten years. In other words we are going to be in a far worse position than before. As the Honourable Mr. Macnaghten pointed out, restrictions on traffic exist at the present time to a very considerable extent, and various steamer companies have notified that they are not at present running their full complement. Before steamers can be put on for passenger service, they require repairs owing to the strain put on them during the war. We hope that we will soon have the P. & O. and other big lines running their service with the same regularity and the same number of passengers as they did before the war. They are certainly not doing so at present. When that comes 12 months hence, the position will be far worse than at present. The number of passengers will probably increase by 30 per cent., and out of the three or four hotels now opened one will be converted to supply office accommodation, so that it will be lost for the purpose for which it was originally intended. Now, if that is so—I am not behind the scenes, probably the Honourable Mr. Sethna is—the position is very serious. If the Honourable Mr. Sethna's figures are correct, if the cost of construction is correct, it is perfectly clear that no private company will come forward to build a hotel now. It is not a speculation at all. It is a certainty that it will be a dead loss. In that case, what is to be the position of Bombay? Are we, we who claim to be the second city in the Empire, are we going to see passengers sleeping on the pavements or crowding round the workhouse for a night accommodation? After all, a great orator many years ago said—130 years ago—that the age of chivalry has passed and the age of economists and sophistry has arrived. I am not going to appeal to the chivalry of the Council, though the stories of tired women and children driving round Bombay in hack carriages in search of a lodging tempt me to do so. But I put it down on a lower commercial basis. I say it is a bad business to consider everything from a pecuniary point of view. If we are really going to draw a balance sheet with regard to everything in Bombay, where are we going to stop? The Band Stand and the Public Park, for instance, are concerns which are not likely to bring a profit. If you come down to rupees, annas and pies, both must be losing concerns. I would ask this Council: Are we really all of us going to look at this matter from that point of view? I confess there has been far too much tendency in this direction in the past. If only there had been less of this tendency and a little more regard for the amenities of life, it would not have been necessary for His Excellency to make the speech that he delivered yesterday.

PORT TRUST BILL.

[Mr. G. S. Curtis; Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna.] [4TH AUGUST 1920.]

I am straying a little away from my point. Honourable members come to the Council and say that the Port Trust are going to lose money over the present scheme. I do not believe, if reasonable care is taken, that the Port Trust will lose money. But, sir, in any case even if they do, it will, I hope, not be very long before the Port Trust will be able to convert the hotel to other purposes. I have not the slightest doubt that in ten years' time when the new docks are taken in hand and the Port Trust staff will certainly be more than doubled, they will convert the hotel building for their other purposes. I do not believe that the Bombay port is going to stand still. It will require increased staff and office accommodation, and if the hotel is not wanted as a hotel, it can be turned to other useful purposes.

One more subject. The Honourable Mr. Sethna has demanded—I am not quite sure how it is to be done—but I understand his point is that he is prepared to vote for this measure if somebody gives a pledge that the expenditure on the hotel is not to exceed a certain figure. Now, sir, I do not quite understand what he intends to do. But I take it that if the Honourable Mr. Hatch was prepared to undertake on behalf of the Port Trust, to pledge that the expenditure will not exceed five lakhs, he is prepared to vote for the first reading. That is what I gathered from his remarks.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna:—I said nothing in regard to the figures. I said, I want an assurance from the Chairman of the Port Trust that he will not insist upon a hotel as large as he proposes and that he will restrict it to accommodation for one hundred or hundred and fifty passengers at the most.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—I hope the honourable member will excuse me for misinterpreting his remarks. If that is so, I think the obvious inference from the honourable member's remarks is that he is in favour of the principle of the bill provided the cost of the hotel shall not exceed five lakhs.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna:—I said nothing with regard to figures. I said the site ought not to be used if possible. It would mean a severe congestion and further that there was one other plot available for a temporary hotel and that the hotel should provide accommodation for about 150 or 200 passengers and in that case, so far as I know, no amendment of the present clause is necessary. That was my point.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—I still fail to see why the honourable member opposes the present amendment of the act. As the act stands at present the Port Trust is not justified in providing buildings for hotels.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna:—There is no necessity for amending the act if, as I contended, the Port Trust would care to lease to an outsider that strip of land which at present is reserved for a temporary hotel. More than one party will come forward to take that block and put up a hotel on it which will meet the wants of trade representatives for whom this hotel is meant.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Well, sir, I will go further. The honourable gentleman has said that carriage traffic is likely to be impeded if this hotel is built. So far the opinions of the Port Trust officers are against him. There is the opinion of the Railway Manager who ought to know and who is sensitive to the provision of circulating space. In his opinion there will be no particular congestion of traffic.

Now, sir, one more matter and I have done. I find some difficulty in following the point made about the housing of the Port Trust staff. Up to date the Port Trust have, I believe, spent approximately about 40½ lakhs on providing quarters for their staff. The provision during the current year is 20 lakhs, and at the present moment they have under construction quarters for 52 superior and 222 inferior employees. I know something about housing now. If you want to tell me that the Trust are allotting in their budget a sum of a crore of rupees for the construction of houses for their staff, I should say that they would not be able to spend it. No public body could suspend all other work of every other kind in order to spend very much more than the 20 lakhs which they have allotted for these houses. I am surprised that they have spent so much. It is not an easy matter at the present moment to secure materials for the housing of the inferior staff. I think, probably employers of labour are aware of that, and the argument that because only 20 lakhs have been expended on housing for the inferior staff, therefore, nothing is to be done to provide facilities for people who pass through Bombay, seems to me to have no force.

Sir, we have had a lengthy debate on this point, and I venture to hope that this Council will take a broad view of the matter. After all, a lot of suggestions have been made as to the necessity of maintaining the fair fame of Bombay as the second city of the Empire. I am a citizen of London, but I am not proud of the incident which the Honourable Mr. Kamat mentioned that passengers who arrive there have to sleep on the platform. I think it was a disgrace to my own town. If I was a citizen of Bombay I should not be proud of the fact that a gentleman arriving in Bombay had to go to Karachi to secure a bed. I venture to submit that that is the point of view from which honourable members of this Council ought to look at the matter.

Bill read a first time.

The motion for the first reading of the bill was then put to the vote and carried the President using his casting vote. The Council divided as follows :—

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[The President; Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola; Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna.] [4TH AUGUST 1920.]

A BILL TO PROVIDE FOR THE CONSTITUTION OF VILLAGE PANCHAYATS (BILL No. XI OF 1919).

His Excellency the President :—A Bill to provide for the constitution of Village Panchayats (Bill No. XI of 1919), second reading. The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola :—Your Excellency,—I beg to move that the bill to provide for the constitution of village panchayats (Bill No. XI of 1919) be read a second time. From the report of the select committee honourable members will have observed that the original bill has been considerably improved by the deliberations of the select committee. Many of the criticisms which were applied to the measure on the occasion of the first reading have been most carefully examined by the members of the select committee, and they have now put forward before you a bill with all those modifications and amendments which were considered necessary in the framework of the bill. The first criticism that was applied to the original bill was in regard to . . . . .

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola moves the second reading of the bill.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna :—May I point out, your Excellency, that a select committee has not been appointed?

His Excellency the President :—Order, order. May I remind honourable members to be careful to remember that, when an honourable member rises to make an interjection, he can only do so if the Honourable Member in Charge gives way or if the other member opposite him gives way? It is impossible for me to interfere if he does not give way. The honourable member who is standing up has the floor of the house, and I cannot interfere unless he gives way. It would greatly assist me in maintaining order if honourable members will observe that point.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna :—May I point out, sir, that a select committee on the Port Trust Bill has not yet been appointed?

His Excellency the President :—The honourable member is not in order in raising that point now. He should not raise a point of that kind on this bill which is quite alien to the bill. We can appoint a select committee on that bill at any moment.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola :—I was pointing out, your Excellency, that the first clause of the original bill which elicited some criticism was as regards the methods for constituting a panchayat. It was urged that the district local board should be given some voice in the determination of the villages which should be constituted into village panchayats. In response to that criticism the select committee has amended clause 3 and it now gives the district local boards both the power of initiating and of expressing its views before a panchayat can be constituted. The power to constitute a panchayat has been given to the Commissioner, but he can only act on the initiative of the Collector or the district local board, and in any case in which either the Collector or the district local board moves him, he must consult the other authority. I hope honourable members will recognise that their criticism on this clause has been fully met.

The next question which led to considerable criticism was the constitution of the panchayat, and whether the patel should be an ex-officio member or not. There is considerable divergence of opinion on this question. Some honourable members hold that the patel should not be an ex-officio member and that the panchayat should be wholly elected. There is another set of opinions which holds that the talukdars, inamdars and khots should be substituted as ex-officio members in place of the patel. The majority of the select committee have decided that the patel should remain as an ex-officio member.

(At this stage His Excellency the President and the Honourable the Vice-President withdrew, and the Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis occupied the chair.)

As there is a considerable amount of feeling on this subject, I propose to explain to honourable members the reasons why the majority of the select committee decided to retain the patel as ex-officio member. In this connection I should like to invite the attention of honourable members to the fundamental principle underlying this bill. Up to now in all local self-government enactments a substantial part has been reserved for nomination. The greatest proportion of election conceded to local bodies at present is two-thirds, while one-third of the members are nominated by Government. It was proposed as a substantial advance in local self-government matters to drop out the principle of nomination altogether from the panchayats and to have only one ex-officio member to provide the panchayats with some administrative experience in the initial stages of their working. It must be remembered that this is an experimental measure and that the villagers have as a rule no experience in the matter. It was, therefore, felt that the assistance of the patel as ex-officio member was very necessary as a contributing factor towards the success of the proposed experiment. The structure of the bill is based on this principle that the panchayats will practically be wholly elected, and that there shall be no nomination whatsoever. I repeat that this is the only local self-government enactment which is so far brought forward before the Legislative Council which does away altogether with the principle of nomination. If that view does not appeal to the Council, and the honourable members are in favour of altering the whole structure of the bill by introducing the dual system of election and nomination, it would be difficult to proceed with this measure. Assuming for argument's sake that the structure is altered and the panchayats are constituted on the principle of even four-fifths elected and one-fifth nominated, it will be interesting to examine what will be the effect. The bill lays down that the minimum number of the members of a panchayat shall be five. Therefore, if a panchayat is constituted on the minimum number of five and one-fifth nomination is provided, then there will be one member nominated by Government, who will most probably be the patel; so that there will be no actual difference. But this will be so only if the panchayats are constituted with the minimum number. Honourable members will have noticed that under the bill as amended the maximum number is left to the discretion of district local boards, which are local bodies, and on which a large number of elected representatives sit. If they constitute a panchayat of ten members, under the one-fifth nomination system Government would have the right to nominate two members, while under the proposed system only one member, the patel, remains ex-officio and all the remaining nine are elected. Supposing a district local board constitutes a panchayat with fifteen members, still there remains only one ex-officio member, the patel, and all the rest would be elected, instead of one-fifth being nominated members whose number would automatically increase if the total number of members of the panchayat is increased by the district local board. It will therefore be apparent that the principle of nomination to the small extent of only one-fifth would bring about a larger number of nominated members, which would include the patel, while in the present bill only one-fifth of the minimum number of members of the panchayat will be represented not by nomination but by virtue of his office. It is, I think, conceding to popular opinion, a substantial step forward. I hope honourable members will realize that only one ex-officio member remains who is not elected, whatever be the total number of members of the panchayat. It does not automatically increase as under any system of nomination it would increase.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[4TH AUGUST 1920.] [Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.]

There is another aspect of the question to which I should like to invite the attention of honourable members in this connection, and that is that the select committee have recommended that the words "if any" be added after the words "officiating patel." Two amendments have been made by the select committee in this clause. The first is that it shall be the revenue patel who shall be the ex-officio member, and not the police patel, where there are two patels, and the second amendment introduced is that the patel shall be ex-officio member only in those villages where there is a patel. The effect of this amendment will be that in those villages in which there are no patels, the panchayats will be wholly elected, as the principle of nomination has been wholly dropped. The ex-officio member is only provided for in those villages where a patel exists, as the addition of the words "if any" signifies. The result will be that in a certain number of villages—a small number, of course, because it is an experimental measure—the panchayats will be wholly elected. I, therefore, think that the amendments introduced by the select committee in this bill are far-reaching and meet to a considerable extent the demand of some of the honourable members.

The next question which has led to a considerable amount of criticism is in connection with electorates. In that respect also I want honourable members to realize that the structure of the bill is based on one principle, that you can either have the structure which Government have placed before honourable members or a different structure altogether. You could not have a mixture of two different principles embodied in this bill. Honourable members are aware that the principle underlying this bill is the recognition of adult male suffrage. I do not think, though a certain amount of feeling has been expressed in the matter, that you can, in carrying out an experiment of this character, start from the bottom, that is, from the villages. Honourable members may be aware of the fact that when the Honourable Mr. Pandurang Desai brought forward his resolution for the admission of female corporators in the Bombay Corporation he particularly urged that the experiment should be made in the city of Bombay as being the most advanced part of the Presidency.

I can quite understand the position that the Honourable Mr. Desai took up on that occasion. But he now says that the principle of adult suffrage should be applied to villages in which even amongst the males illiteracy is widespread. It would hardly be right to make an experiment in that direction and court a clear failure.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.] [4TH AUGUST 1920.]

There are two points in connection with female suffrage involved in the bill. The one is the right of voting, and the other is the right of election. As regards the right of voting, in all local bodies at present females are entitled to vote, and if this bill were based on the principle of property qualification or qualification due to payment of direct taxation, as is the case in local bodies, there would be a clear case, and I would be the first to admit the right of females to vote. But if that is conceded, you must drop the bill on the ground of adult suffrage, and substitute for it, franchise on the principles of property or taxation. It has been proposed that you might have adult suffrage for males, but you must give the right to females on the property or taxation basis. I would ask the honourable member who has sent in such an amendment to realize this, that if his point is that there shall be no sex differentiation, his amendment actually emphasizes it, because a male secures a vote because he belongs to the male sex, irrespective of payment of any taxation or of holding any property, but that in the case of females he wants to lay down that she shall not be entitled to a vote because she is an adult female resident within the village, but because she holds property. Therefore, if the principle is that there should be no differentiation, you could not justify the amendment. So far as this bill is concerned, you cannot have half of the one and half of the other, because it militates against the very principle on which some members are very keen. It is for honourable members to decide whether they will have adult male suffrage to begin with, to be extended to adult females in course of time when experience has been gained, or whether they would prefer to go back on this bill. In that case, the bill will have to be withdrawn and a new bill on a property qualification both for males and females will have to be brought forward. The two principles are distinct. My personal view is that Government are putting forward before the public a measure of far-reaching importance from the point of view of local self-government, and they are, therefore, introducing the principle of adult male suffrage in villages to begin with, to be subsequently extended to females also, when experience has been gained, and in that way to extend the principle of adult suffrage to district local boards and municipalities, in course of time. If honourable members agree with my view that in the interests of the future of local self-government, it is desirable to make this far-reaching experiment of adult male suffrage to begin with in the villages, then they should accept the bill as it is, because, as I pointed out, you cannot have a mixed structure. You must have either the structure that Government have put before you, or have a structure on lines of existing local bodies, where franchise is subject to various qualifications, such as property, etc. I would appeal to honourable members that in the interests of local self-government, they should agree to establish the principle, in this province, of adult male suffrage to begin with.

The second point arising out of this issue is as regards the right of females to vote. Now, I ask honourable members to realize the conditions in the villages, and consider whether there is any possibility of any females being elected. As a matter of fact, the principle which I have explained on the first point also applies to this. If you want franchise on the principles of specified qualifications including both males and females, then only the question of females being elected would become a matter of practical politics. But that could not be so unless you alter the whole structure of the measure. It has also to be borne in mind that the question of female suffrage is going to be decided, so far as their right of election is concerned, under the Reforms Scheme, as recommended by the Joint Committee, by the new, enlarged councils. If they decide that females shall not have the right of being elected, females will not get that right. But if they decide, as I am personally in favour of deciding, that females should get the right of being elected, then ipso facto that will apply to all local self-governing measures, including the panchayats. It is not necessary now to raise that question, having regard to the entirely novel structure that is being raised under this bill.

The third point which arises in connection with this measure is the right of khots, jahagirdars and talukdars to be ex-officio members of the panchayat. The matter has been discussed at considerable length, and it has been felt that it would be very unwise to further reduce the proportion of elected members. That again would be altering the whole basis of the bill. In many cases, the jahagirdars and talukdars and inamdars are not living in the villages where panchayats will be constituted, and to give them the right of being ex-officio members or authorizing them to nominate their representatives would, in my opinion, militate against the principles for which this bill stands. In the various representations that have been received from the talukdars, they have put forward various arguments in regard to the detailed administration of villages and their rights. But they are forgetting one very important factor in connection with this bill. They seem to assume that immediately this bill is passed, panchayats will be constituted practically in all the villages in the Presidency. I hope honourable members will realize that such is not going to be the case, and that the safeguards that are provided in the bill in regard to the constitution of the panchayats are amply sufficient to safeguard their interests. Now, in regard to this matter, it has been said in one of the representations that the khoti villages have no patels. What would honourable members prefer? Would they prefer to have a wholly elected panchayat in khoti villages, or would they put in the khot as an ex-officio member? If you are feeling so very keenly about them, let them have a chance of showing what they can do. The safeguards are ample. The Commissioner is a high Government officer, and when he notifies under the act the constitution of a village panchayat, he moves on the recommendation of the Collector or of the district local board, and if either of these authorities move him in the matter, he consults the other. If the district local board has moved him, he consults the Collector, and if the Collector has moved him, he consults the district local board. You may be sure that when a largely elected body is associated in this manner with the constitution of the panchayat, any special considerations which may apply to special villages will be carefully examined before the panchayat is extended to those villages. I can quite understand that there may be a certain number of villages in the Presidency which may have special circumstances, in which it may be desirable not to expedite the constitution of panchayats, and you may rely not only upon the Collector, but also upon your district local board to put the Commissioner in possession of all relevant facts before a panchayat is constituted. I venture to submit that these safeguards amply provide for any panchayat not being constituted in undesirable places. After all, the selection of the villages for the constitution of the panchayats is an essential matter of importance, if this experiment is going to be a success. Honourable members will therefore realize that in all the points which have led to considerable discussion in this Council, the select committee has met, as far as could reasonably be done, their wishes.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[4TH AUGUST 1920.] [Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.]

The only point with which this bill cannot deal is civil and criminal jurisdiction. In regard to that, it is not my intention to detain the Council for any length of time. It is not a matter of practical politics, as the principle cannot be introduced in this bill. There are only one or two remarks which I wish to make, and they are in regard to what has been urged here on the occasion of the first reading. It was mentioned that in the Central Provinces bill, civil and criminal jurisdiction was provided. I hope honourable members will study the Central Provinces bill and compare it with this measure, and I am sure they will come to the conclusion that they will have none of the other. While we are aspiring ultimately to wholly elected panchayats and to adult suffrage, the Central Provinces bill merely provides for nominated panchayats.

(At this stage the Honourable the Vice-President resumed the chair.)

While in our case we have in every direction provided for control by a non-official body like the district local board, whose constitution honourable members are thoroughly conversant with, and the representative character of which is going to be improved by increased proportion of elected representatives, in the Central Provinces, the Deputy Commissioner by notification constitutes a panchayat board for the whole or any part of the village, and the board shall consist of such revenue officers and of such non-official members as my be appointed in accordance with rules made under section 55. As regards the constitution of the panchayats themselves, it is stated that there will be informal elections, under which the elders of the villages will be brought in. I understand that to mean, having regard to the discussion in which the non-official members of that Council took part, that a revenue officer will go to a village, will consult a certain number of people informally, and then appoint some of them to the panchayat. It should be obvious that it is a wholly nominated panchayat, and that powers of civil and criminal jurisdiction are being given not to a wholly elected body, as it is in the case of the present bill, but to a wholly nominated body. I was also looking up the Bengal bill. There again—I am speaking from memory—there is a substantial proportion of nominated members on the panchayat, and the revenue officers have been given the power to nominate two members out of such panchayats to discharge the functions of civil and criminal jurisdiction. Now, it is obvious that in both these cases the civil and criminal jurisdiction will be exercised by the nominees of Government, that is to say, it will be exercised on the same principles as honorary magistrates in district towns in this Presidency. I do not know, I have got no experience of district towns, but I hope that honourable members are satisfied that the honorary magistrates are discharging their functions to the satisfaction of the people.

An honourable member :—No, no.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai.] [4TH AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—If they are not, if such nominated members in district towns are not giving satisfaction to the people in the discharge of their duties, what would be the condition if wholly elected panchayats in villages, where the people are mostly illiterate, were to administer judicial and criminal functions? We are all carried away by sentiment. But I ask honourable members to bear in mind what the consequences will be. It should also be borne in mind that in pre-British days there were no communications, no railways, no telegraphs, and each village had to be self-contained and had to make what arrangements it could to carry on the local administration. Circumstances are now changed. There are communications, there are railways, there are posts and telegraphs. Therefore, villages cannot remain wholly isolated as they were in the past. What I want to point out is that if these panchayats are found to discharge the obligations that are being imposed upon them satisfactorily, there is nothing to prevent the extension of civil and criminal jurisdiction to them. But to do it all at once in the case of people who have had no knowledge, no experience of these things, would be rather a tall order. I, therefore, ask honourable members to be satisfied with the far-reaching principles, namely, adult male suffrage, practically wholly elected panchayats, and the control being vested in a popular body, and to let this bill go through as it has come from the select committee. I may tell you that in no part of British India any measure analogous to this has yet been tried, and that in the two bills which I had occasion to see, the control of revenue officers has been kept very stringent. As a matter of fact, in the Central Provinces bill the entire power is vested in the Deputy Commissioner. He can do this, that or any other thing. We are trying to meet popular wishes by extending the scope of local self-government under this bill far in advance of every other part of India, and I hope honourable members will extend to it their cordial support, and will help to carry the bill through in its present form.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Mr. President,—Since the bill was referred to, and reported on, by the select committee, I have had several communications from the countryside mainly with reference to the question of the inclusion of the patel on the panchayat as an ex-officio member or otherwise; and almost all communications contained the principal warning that the patel, so far as this Council had it in their power, ought not to be allowed a permanent place on the panchayat. The Honourable Member in Charge has put it to us, sir, that if this Council does not accept the position of making the patel of a village an ex-officio member, then Government will have to re-draft the bill in such a way that there will be a power vested in Government of nominating 1/5th number of members on the panchayat.....

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Sir, I rise to a word of explanation. I did not say that. What I said was that this bill was based upon a particular framework in regard to the patel, male adult suffrage and local board control, and that you cannot have a mixture. If Government had provided for nomination and had nominated the patel, perhaps there would have been no opposition.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Well, I submit that if the choice were left to me whether to accept the patel as an ex-officio member or to accept the other alternative of Government having the power to nominate 1/5th, I would prefer the latter, which would be a lesser evil. I consider, and those who have communicated their opinions to me consider, that the village patel is such a great nuisance that he had better not be put in the position of being always an ex-officio member, and that it would be a much lesser evil to allow Government to nominate 1/5th of the members, if one had to choose between evils. Hence the provision in the bill allowing an ex-officio place to the patel, and the explanation which the Honourable Member in Charge has given about it, does not seem to be satisfactory, and it may be that we may have, at the second reading of the bill, to move amendments with reference to it.

As regards the second point about the adult male suffrage, I think, the Honourable Member in Charge seems to think too highly of the offer which he has made. I regret to say that I cannot take the same view of the structure of the bill as he seems to take. In a family where there are a father and four sons, though there may be five votes, it is actually one vote, because the sons will naturally not vote differently from their father. Similarly in a village instead of having 50 votes, one for each family, if you have 400 votes but if they all come to 50 votes in the end, it does not enhance the value of adult male suffrage. Therefore, I am not much enamoured of this structure of the bill with adult male suffrage. It would be much better to have at present a property suffrage, as low as possible, if necessary, so that not only would the males be there but womenfolk also, who under the present local board franchise exercise the vote, would not be deprived of it. While I am not very particular about having the because he went on to say that if talukdars, inamdars and khots are treated in a particular way so that the panchayats will not be allowed to tax the talukdars, inamdars and khots, that if I gave him that particular assurance, then he would withdraw his motion. In that case the reformed councils, the advent of the Ministers, do not matter. Sir, I cannot understand such an attitude from our veteran councillor. I hope honourable members will realize that the public have demanded legislation for the constitution of panchayats for a long period of years, and that efforts made in the past have proved abortive. We have on the present occasion brought forward a bill which, I submit, meets the demands of the public in the matter of the constitution of the panchayats. We have considered it in the select committee. We are in a position, if honourable members are so inclined, to pass it. At such a stage, to ask for postponement, not on the ground of the coming of the reformed councils, but because an assurance is not forthcoming from Government to further protect the talukdars, inamdars and khots, is a position which I do not think is right and should not be accepted by the Council.

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh :—Mr. President,—I am unable to find in the objections that have been raised any solution of the difficulty that I suggested. I should think in those cases where either a talukdar, inamdar or a khot is not represented, or being represented, is in a very small minority, it would not at all be just that the other members of the panchayat should have a right of taxing him as the owner of properties.

The amendment was put to the vote and lost.

PORT TRUST BILL.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael) :—Before adjourning I wish to take a small item which inadvertently was omitted after the vote taken on the first reading of Bill No. XII of 1920.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis :—Sir,—As the bill to amend the Bombay Port Trust Act, 1879, has been read a first time, I move that the bill be referred to a select committee consisting of the Honourable Mr. Sethna, the Honourable Mr. Hatch, the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas, the Honourable Mr. Macnaghten, the Honourable Mr. Enthoven, the Honourable Mr. Chunilal Mehta, the Honourable Mr. Salebhoy Barodawalla and the mover, with instructions to report by the 1st of September.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna :—May I suggest the names of the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe and the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye in addition?

Bill referred to a select committee.

The motion, as amended by the Honourable Mr. Sethna, was put to the vote and carried.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael) :—This Council will now adjourn till 11-30 a. m. to-morrow.

The Council then adjourned till 11-30 a.m. on Thursday, the 5th August 1920.

By order of His Excellency the Honourable the Governor,

G. DAVIS,

Secretary to the Legislative Council of the Governor of Bombay.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

adult female franchise inserted in the panchayat bill all at once, I do not see the value of adult male suffrage. I would much rather like, as I said before, that there should be a low property suffrage both for males and females so that widows owning properties may not be thrown on the mercy of the adult male population.

As regards the judicial powers, I feel that the bill would have been quite a perfect measure with them, but I am not very keen about the matter.

Then there is the question about the talukdars and inamdars on the panchayat. The several memorials received on the subject will have to be considered very carefully. In any case, at this reading of the bill I think that the question of the patel being an ex-officio member is a very serious question, and if the choice were left to me whether to accept the bill with the patel on the panchayat or to reject it without him, I would rather not have the bill at all than accept it with the patel on the panchayat.

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh :—Before I say anything in reference to the second reading of the bill, I beg to move under rule 7, page 190 of the Council Manual.

That the Council pass on to the consideration of the business next in order.

Notice of a motion of this kind stood in the name of my friend the Honourable the Thakor of Kerwada, but as he is not present, I think it proper to bring this motion before the Council.

So far as other matters are concerned, I am quite indifferent as to what action the majority of the Council may take. I have myself sent notice of some amendments. But there is one matter in reference to which it appears to me that the bill would become altogether unworkable according to the principles of justice. It would occur in this way.

In reference to inamdars, talukdars and khots etc, in many instances they are residing in their own villages and in those cases they would have an opportunity of coming on the panchayats in accordance with the provisions of this bill. But there are lots of talukdars, inamdars and khots who really do not reside in their villages. Also one talukdar or inamdar may posses several villages and he may be residing in one of them and he would not be residing in the others. Under these circumstances what would happen according the provisions of the bill as they are enacted at present, is that the panchayat in which he is not represented at all or in which the opposite interests are predominantly represented, would have the power of freeing themselves from taxation or shifting the whole burden on the talukdar.

You will see, sir, that in five months there will be another Legislative Council which will be far more representative and which will be able to deal with these questions with a greater knowledge than many of the present honourable members of this Council possess. I should therefore hope that the Council will see their way to accept this motion.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael) :—The motion before the House is, that Bill No. XI of 1919 be postponed and that the Council pass on to the consideration of the next item on the agenda.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye :—Sir,—I think my honourable friend Mr. Gokuldas Parekh has almost thrown a bombshell while the discussion of this bill is going on. During the first reading of this bill it was fairly agreed by many of us that whatever our differences on matters of detail might have been, we fairly welcomed the bill in its general form as a bill which will mark a further development of local self-government in this Presidency. We welcomed most of the provisions and only on some matters of detail was there any difference of opinion. Those matters of detail have now even, in my opinion, not been satisfactorily settled, I must frankly admit. On one point for instance, namely, the point about giving of judicial powers to the panchayats, we have been told that it is hardly within the purview of this Council. On another point, namely, the enfranchisement of women, it has not been yielded at present, but we have been told, and with a great deal of force, that when the new councils pass a regulation in favour of the enfranchisement of women so far as the Legislative Councils are concerned, it will have its indirect effect upon our enactments, and it will not be very long before all disqualifications of women are removed from all such enactments.

Then there is the third point about the patel. I think these were all the three points of difference. As to this point about the patel, the Honourable Member in Charge and the select committee have not completely yielded. What many honourable members asked was that the patel should not be an ex-officio member of the panchayat. And a via media has been proposed under which we shall be able to test the panchayats under both systems. It is proposed to have some panchayats with the patel as ex-officio member, and others without the patel, and that after a few years' experience we might be able to judge whether a panchayat can do without a patel. And then a very small bill would do to do away with the patel altogether.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

Then there is the fourth point regarding talukdari or khoti villages. On that point, I think, the non-official honourable members were not all of the same opinion. I think if we take the opinion of the non-official honourable members only, I am not quite certain whether my honourable friend Mr. Gokuldas Parekh's contention, and the contention of some other honourable members like the Honourable the Thakor of Kerwada would get a majority. Personally I do not think that we should consider or treat such villages in any special manner at all. I think that if in Government villages public opinion of the residents of the villages has to be organized in a panchayat, it is still more necessary in such villages, because the inamdar or talukdar or khot is in a far greater degree the virtual master of the village than even a patel or a Government officer might be. I think, therefore, if the interests of the people are to be safeguarded, we must have a panchayat in such villages so that it would be a kind of counterweight to the overweening influence of the landlord. That is my personal opinion. But I think, at any rate, because my honourable friend differs on this single point, I think it would be most impolitic and reactionary to propose a motion of this nature, and for my part, I am strongly opposed to the motion that he has proposed.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole :—Sir,—I believe, the point before the Council at present is whether the bill should be dropped and we should proceed with the next item.

As regards the bill itself I will have an occasion to speak on its merits later on. The present point is whether it is to go on, or whether is to be dropped. I myself think that the bill is very useful and that it is much wanted. I think we should go on with the further consideration of this bill and its second reading. The points that have been raised by the Honourable Mr. Parekh will all be coming forward before us as amendments, and while we are dealing with these amendments, they will be duly thrashed out and decided upon. The bill is very useful and urgently wanted for the local board administration of our districts. The council should therefore reject the Honourable Mr. Parekh's motion and proceed with the further consideration of the bill.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud :—Mr. Chairman,—At the time of the first reading of this bill, I merely contented myself with thanking Government for introducing a measure to authorize the constitution of village panchayats. Some of the principles which Government introduced in this bill are, I think, very progressive and are absolutely needed for the advancement of local self-government. There are of course points on which I do not quite see eye to eye with the select committee and with Government. These will come up as amendments and will be considered by the Council. But the bill as a whole which authorizes the constitution of village panchayats, is absolutely necessary. It introduces some good principles in local self-government administration, and I think, it ought not to be dropped at this stage.

The Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah :—Sir,—The panchayat bill has been before the public for a long time prior to its coming before this Council. When it was for the first time introduced at the last session every one of us admitted that it was a very advanced bill, and I am surprised to see that, when it has come for the second reading, my honourable friend Mr. Parekh should move for an adjournment. He urges that talukdars, inamdars and khots should be nominated on the panchayats, or that they should be ex-officio members of the panchayats. But there are amendments to that effect on the agenda, and I think we should go on with the second reading. I therefore strongly oppose the motion for adjournment.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola :—Mr. President,—Honourable members are aware what an amount of respect I have for my honourable friend Mr. Parekh, the veteran member of this Council, but I am very much surprised at his attitude on the present occasion. I could quite understand the point if he were to say that he does not want this Council to proceed with the second reading of the bill on the ground that the reformed councils will come into being three or four months hence, and that this matter should be left to the Ministers. That would have been a perfectly logical position to take up. But I ask honourable members to consider whether that is his position;

Proceedings of the Council of the Governor of Bombay.

The following report of the Select Committee of the Council of His Excellency the Governor of Bombay on the Bill further to amend the Bombay Town Planning Act, 1915, and the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, are, in accordance with rule 25 of the Rules for the conduct of business at meetings of the Legislative Council, published for general information :—

BILL No. VIII of 1920.

(A Bill further to amend the Bombay Town Planning Act, 1915.)

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

We, the undersigned, members* of the Select Committee appointed to consider Bill No. VIII of 1920 (a Bill further to amend the Bombay Town Planning Act, 1915), have the honour to report as follows:—

We consider it desirable that, before a local authority is made liable for the execution of a town planning scheme in the framing of which it had no say, the consent of such local authority to the proposed transfer should be obtained. We have, therefore, amended clause 2 of the bill accordingly.

BILL No. VIII of 1920.

A Bill further to amend the Bombay Town Planning Act, 1915.

(As amended by the Select Committee.)

WHEREAS it is expedient further to amend the Bombay Town Planning Act, 1915, in manner hereinafter appearing; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Bom. I of 1915.

1. This Act may be called the Bombay Town Planning (Second Amendment) Act, 1920.

Short title.

2. After section 45 of the Bombay Town Planning Act, 1915, the following section shall be inserted :—

Bom. I of 1915.

New section 45A.

"45A. When any local authority ceases to exist or ceases to have jurisdiction over any area included in a town planning scheme the property and rights vested in such local authority under this Act shall, subject to all charges and liabilities affecting the same, vest in such other local authority or authorities as the Governor in Council may, with the consent of such authority or authorities, by notification in the Bombay Government Gazette direct; and such local authority or each one of such local authorities shall have all the powers under this Act in respect of such scheme or such part of a scheme as comes within its jurisdiction which the local authority ceasing to exist or ceasing to have jurisdiction had."

BILL No. XV of 1920.

A Bill further to amend the City of Bombay Police Act, 1902.

WHEREAS it is expedient further to amend the City of Bombay Police Act, 1902, in manner hereinafter appearing; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. This Act may be called the City of Bombay Police (Second Amendment) Act, 1920.

Short title.

2. In sub-section (2) of section 6 of the City of Bombay Police Act, 1902, after the words "Assistant Commissioner" where they occur for the first time, the words "and a Superintendent appointed under section 7 (1)" shall be inserted; and after the words "Assistant Commissioner" where they occur for the second time, the words "or Superintendent" shall be inserted.

Amendment of section 6 of Bom. IV of 1902.

Bom. IV 1902.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Superintendents of Police in the City of Bombay cannot perform certain routine duties such as the signing of licenses and permits, imposed by the Act on the Commissioner of Police as the power of delegation in section 6 is limited to Deputy and Assistant Commissioners. Superintendents are gazetted officers of standing and experience and in view of the increase in the work of the police it is advisable in the interests of police administration that the Commissioner of Police should be able to delegate to Superintendents the less important duties imposed on him by the Act.

Proceedings of the Council of the Governor of Bombay.

(To be translated into Marathi, Gujarati and Urdu, and the translations to be published in the "Bombay Government Gazette." The dates of publication to be reported.)

The following report of the Select Committee of the Council of His Excellency the Governor of Bombay on the Bill to provide for the extension of primary education in the City of Bombay, and the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, are in accordance with rule 25 of the Rules for the conduct of business at meetings of the Legislative Council, published for general information :—

Bill No. IV of 1920.

A Bill to provide for the extension of primary education in the City of Bombay.

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

We, the undersigned members* of the Select Committee appointed to consider Bill No. IV of 1920 (A Bill to provide for the extension of primary education in the City of Bombay) beg to submit our report as follows :—

1. We have amended clause 19 (b) of the Bill to ensure that the persons co-opted shall be persons resident in the City of Bombay who are not members of the corporation.

2. The proposed repeal of section 62-B deprives the corporation of the guarantee given to them under that section. We are of opinion that the corporation should be guaranteed the same treatment as a city municipality in respect of expenditure on primary education, and for that purpose have included new section 62-B in the Bill.

* Signatures of the Honourable Sir Dinshaw M. Petit, Bart., the Honourable Mr. S. K. Barodawalla and the Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji will be published when received.

3. A "child" as defined in section 2 (2) of the Bill includes a child up to the age of eleven years. We considered at length the question whether specific provision should be made in the Bill requiring the Municipal Schools' Committee, to make special arrangements for children employed as half-timers. It was considered, however, that a question affecting the industries of the City might be safely left to the discretion of a committee of the governing body of that city, and we recommend no change in the Bill in this respect.

Bill No. IV of 1920.

A Bill to provide for the extension of primary education in the City of Bombay.

(As amended by the Select Committee.)

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide for the extension of primary education in the City of Bombay; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title, extent and construction.

1. (1) This Act may be called the City of Bombay Primary Education Act, 1920.

(2) It extends only to the City of Bombay.

(3) It shall be construed as part of and supplementary to the City of Bombay Municipal Act, 1888, hereinafter called "the principal Act."

n. III of 888.

Definitions.

2. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context —

(1) to "attend" a recognized primary school means to be present for instruction at such school on such days and at such time or times on each day as may be required by the Schools' Committee with the approval of the prescribed educational authority;

(2) "child" means a child whose age is not less than six and not more than eleven years;

(3) "parent" includes a guardian and any person who has the actual custody of a child;

(4) "prescribed" means prescribed by rules made by the Governor in Council under this Act;

(5) "primary education" means such education as is for the time being recognized as such by the Governor in Council;

(6) "recognized primary school" means a school (or a department of a school) in which instruction in primary education is given and which is for the time being recognized by the prescribed educational authority;

(7) "Schools' Committee" means a committee appointed under section 39 of the principal Act.

Issue of notification making primary education compulsory.

3. (1) The Corporation may with the previous sanction of the Governor in Council declare by notification that the primary education of boys or of girls or of children of both sexes shall be compulsory in the City of Bombay or in any ward or part of a ward thereof from a date to be mentioned in the notification; provided that, where a notification has been issued under this section with reference to children of one sex only, the Corporation may with the like sanction issue a subsequent notification with reference to children of the other sex.

(2) A notification under this section shall be published in the Bombay Government Gazette and shall be posted at the municipal office and at such other places, if any, as the Corporation shall deem necessary.

Corporation to make provision for primary education.

4. A notification shall not be issued under section 3 unless the Corporation satisfy the Governor in Council that they are in a position to make and will make adequate provision in municipal or other recognized schools for free and compulsory primary education.

Resolution to be passed before issue of notification.

5. A notification shall not be issued under section 3 unless the Corporation have so determined by resolution passed at a general meeting specially called in this behalf, and unless such resolution has been supported by at least two-thirds of the councillors present at the meeting and by at least one-half of the whole number of councillors.

Duty of Schools' Committee.

6. Where a notification has been issued under section 3 for any ward or part of a ward, it shall be the duty of the Schools' Committee, subject to the provisions of this Act and the principal Act, to enforce the provisions of this Act respecting the attendance of children at school and the employment of children.

Duty of parents to cause children to attend school.

7. Where a notification under section 3 is in force in any ward or part of a ward, the parent of every child to which such notification applies shall, in the absence of a reasonable excuse as hereinafter provided, and if such parent and child ordinarily reside in such ward or part of a ward, cause such child to attend a recognized primary school therein.

Meaning of reasonable excuse.

8. A parent shall be deemed to have a reasonable excuse for failure to cause a child to attend a recognized primary school in any of the following cases:—

(a) where the child is prevented from attending school by sickness, infirmity or other unavoidable cause;

(b) where the child is receiving, otherwise than in a recognized primary school, instruction which in the opinion of the Schools' Committee is efficient, or has already completed his primary education;

(c) where there is no recognized primary school within one mile, measured according to the nearest road, from the residence of the child.

Issue of attendance order.

9. Where the Schools' Committee is satisfied that the parent of any child who is bound under the provisions of section 7 to cause such child to attend a recognized primary school, has failed to do so, the Schools' Committee, after giving the parent an opportunity of being heard and after such enquiry as it considers necessary, may pass an order directing the parent to cause such child to attend a recognized primary school on and from a date which shall be specified in the order.

Penalty for failure to cause child to attend school.

10. (1) Any parent against whom an order with reference to a child has been passed under section 9 and who fails to comply with the provisions of section 7 with respect to such child on and after the date specified in such order, shall, on conviction before a magistrate, be liable to a fine not exceeding five rupees.

(2) No court shall take cognizance of an offence under this section except on the complaint of the Schools' Committee.

Penalty for employing child liable for compulsory education.

11. (1) Whoever knowingly takes into his employment, either on his own behalf or on behalf of any other person, any child in respect of whom the provisions of section 7 apply, so as to interfere with the efficient instruction of such child, shall, on conviction before a magistrate, be liable to a fine not exceeding twenty-five rupees.

(2) No court shall take cognizance of an offence under this section except on the complaint of the Schools' Committee, and before making any complaint under this section against any person, the Schools' Committee shall, unless such person has previously been convicted under this section in respect of the same child, cause a warning to be given to such person.

Schools' Committee may authorize person to appear.

12. A complaint to a magistrate under section 10 or section 11 may be made on behalf of the Schools' Committee by such person as may be authorized by the committee in this behalf.

Taxation for the purposes of this Act.

13. For the purposes of this Act the Corporation may, under the provisions of the principal Act, impose any fresh tax or increase any tax which is already levied in the municipal district.

Remission of fees.

14. Where a notification under section 3 is in force in any ward or part of a ward, no fee shall be charged in any municipal school in respect of the primary education of any child of the sex specified in such notification whose age does not exceed eleven years.

Power to exempt particular classes or communities.

15. The Governor in Council may by notification in the Bombay Government Gazette exempt any particular class or community from the operation of this Act.

Withdrawal of notification on default.

16. If in the opinion of the Governor in Council, the Corporation have made default in any of the requirements of this Act, after giving the Corporation an opportunity of furnishing an explanation the Governor in Council may by notification in the Bombay Government Gazette cancel any notification which has been issued under section 3.

Fines to be credited to Corporation.

17. All fines levied by any magistrate in respect of any offence against the provisions of this Act shall be credited to the municipal fund.

Rules.

18. (1) The Governor in Council may by notification in the Bombay Government Gazette make rules for the purposes of this Act.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing provision, such rules may be made—

(a) prescribing the educational authority by whom the duties imposed by section 2, sub-sections (1) and (6), shall be performed;

(b) prescribing the manner in which application may be made for sanction to issue a notification under section 3;

(c) determining generally what shall be considered to be adequate provision for free and compulsory primary education under section 4;

(d) requiring the Corporation to prepare and publish a register of children liable for compulsory primary education in the municipal district; and

(e) when the local Government determine to share the cost of providing free and compulsory primary education, specifying the extent to which the cost thereof shall be borne by the local Government.

Amendment of section 39 (1) of the principal Act.

19. In sub-section (1) of section 39 of the principal Act

(a) for the word "twelve" the word "sixteen" shall be substituted; and

(b) the following words shall be added to the sub-section:—

~~"Of these sixteen members twelve shall be elected by the corporation from among the councillors and the remaining four, of whom two shall be ladies, shall be selected by the corporation.~~

"Of the members so appointed twelve shall be councillors and the remaining four, of whom two shall be women, shall be persons, not being councillors, resident in the City of Bombay."

Repeal of section 62B of the principal Act.

20. ~~Section 62B of the principal Act is hereby repealed.~~

New section 62B of the principal Act.

For section 62B of the principal Act, the following section shall be substituted, namely:—

62B. If there should be at any time a change in the general policy of Government in regard to their liability in respect of primary education, the corporation shall be entitled to benefit by such change in policy to the same extent as a city municipality.

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

We, the undersigned, members* of the Select Committee appointed to consider Bill No. V of 1920 (a Bill to amend the Bombay Town Planning Act, 1915), have the honour to report as follows :—

We have no change to recommend as regards the first three clauses of the bill. As expert opinion is at variance as regards the desirability of the changes in the original Act contemplated by the amendments embodied in clause 4 of the bill, we propose the deletion of this clause and of sub-clause (a) of clause 5 as consequential thereto.

Bill No. V of 1920.

A Bill to amend the Bombay Town Planning Act, 1915.

(As amended by the Select Committee.)

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Bombay Town Planning Act, 1915, in manner hereinafter appearing; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Bom. I of 1915.

1. This Act may be called the Bombay Town Planning (Amendment) Act, 1920.

Short title.

2. In sub-section (1) of section 15 of the Bombay Town Planning Act, 1915, hereinafter called the said act:—

Amendment of section 15 of Bom. I of 1915.

Bom. I of 1915.

(a) in clause (a) after the word "work," the words "or remove, pull down, or alter any building or part of a building or remove any earth, stone or material" shall be inserted;

(b) the following clause shall be added:—

"(e) any diminution in the value of an original plot occasioned by any contravention of clause (a) or clause (b) shall, notwithstanding anything contained in sections 16, 17 or 19, be taken into account in fixing the market value of such plot."

3. For the first paragraph of section 17 of the said act, the following shall be substituted:—

Amendment of section 17 of Bom. I of 1915.

"For the purposes of this Act the increment shall be deemed to be the amount by which at the date of the declaration of intention to make a scheme the market value of a plot included in the final scheme estimated on the assumption that the scheme has been completed would exceed at the same date the market value of the same plot estimated without reference to improvements contemplated in the scheme:"

~~4. In section 19 of the said act:—~~

~~Amendment of section 19 of Bom. I of 1915.~~

~~(a) after the word "and" occurring for the third time, the words "with or" shall be inserted;~~

~~(b) after the word "boundaries," the following shall be inserted:—~~

~~"in accordance with rules framed under clause (gg) of sub-section (2) of section 52 of this act."~~

5. 4. In sub-section (2) of section 52 of the said act

Amendment of section 52 of Bom. I of 1915.

~~(a) after clause (g) the following clause shall be inserted:—~~

~~"(gg) the manner in which the estimate shall be made under section 19;"~~

(b) in clause (l), for the words "local authority" the words "Governor in Council" shall be substituted.

By order of His Excellency the Honourable the Governor,

G. DAVIS,

Secretary to the Legislative Council of the Governor of Bombay.

Bombay, 7th September 1920.

(To be translated into Marathi and Gujarati, and the translations to be published in the "Bombay Government Gazette". The dates of publication to be reported.)

The following report of the Select Committee of the Council of His Excellency the Governor of Bombay on the Bill further to amend the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898, and the City of Bombay Municipal Act, 1888, and the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, are, in accordance with rule 25 of the Rules for the conduct of business at meetings of the Legislative Council, published for general information :—

Bill No. VII of 1920.

A Bill further to amend the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898, and the City of Bombay Municipal Act, 1888.

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

We, the undersigned members of the Select Committee appointed to consider Bill No. VII of 1920 (a Bill further to amend the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898, and the City of Bombay Municipal Act, 1888), have the honour to report as follows :—

1. We are of opinion that the Bill should contain a statement of the purposes on which the duty will be spent, the area to which these purposes will be limited and the proportion in which the proceeds of the tax shall be allotted to the City of Bombay and the Bombay Suburban Revenue Division. The preamble to the Bill has been amended, and sub-section 195B (2) added accordingly.

2. As it is the intention of Government that the buildings erected within the City of Bombay shall be handed over to the Corporation as soon as the scheme of building operations has been carried to completion and rents are stabilised, we are of opinion that provision should be made in the Bill for this purpose. New clause 195C. provides for separate accounts being kept of expenditure on providing tenements within the municipal limits ; for giving the Corporation in the year 1936 the option of taking over such tenements, subject to all liabilities in respect thereof ; for the adjustment of such liabilities by arbitration ; and where the income in the year 1936 from such tenements is less than the expenditure to be incurred on account thereof, for the deduction by the Corporation from payments to be made under section 195B of the amount of such loss.

3. We discussed the question of having an executive or advisory board to supervise or aid in the execution of the proposed works and decided that the question was outside the scope of the Bill. The appointment of an executive board would require further legislation ; but it was decided by the casting vote of the Chairman, to recommend that two advisory boards should be constituted, one for the City of Bombay and one for the Bombay Suburban Revenue Division. The advisory board for the City of Bombay should consist of two representatives elected by the Corporation, one by the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, one by the Indian Merchants' Chamber and Bureau, one by the Millowners' Association and one by the Improvement Trust. The board for the Bombay Suburban Revenue Division should be representative of local authorities and important interests in the sub-division.

A Bill further to amend the City of Bombay ~~Improvement~~ Municipal Act, ~~1888~~, 1888, and the City of Bombay ~~Municipal~~ Improvement Act ~~1888~~, 1898.

(As amended by the Select Committee.)

~~WHEREAS it is expedient further to amend the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898, and the City of Bombay Municipal Act, 1888, in manner hereinafter appearing; It is hereby enacted as follows:—~~

Bom. IV of 1898. Bom. III of 1888.

WHEREAS there is an extreme shortage of housing accommodation for the working classes in the town and island of Bombay, And Whereas it is expedient that Government should as a primary object construct fifty thousand tenements for such classes in the town and island of Bombay and should further as a secondary object carry out certain schemes of improvement and development in the vicinity thereof, namely, in the Bombay Suburban Revenue Division, And Whereas it is intended by Government to raise a loan or loans for the above purposes And Whereas it is expedient that the municipal corporation of the City of Bombay should carry out divers large and important works And Whereas it is accordingly expedient further to amend the City of Bombay Municipal Act, 1888, and it is also expedient further to amend the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898, in manner hereinafter appearing; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title.

1. This Act may be called the City of Bombay ~~Improvement~~ Municipal and ~~Municipal~~ Improvement (Amendment) Act, 1920.

New sections 195A and 195B and 195C of Bom. III of 1888.

~~3~~ 2. After section 195 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act, 1888, the following sections shall be inserted, namely:—

Levy of town duty on raw cotton.

"195A. (1) In addition to the town duties referred to in section 192 and notwithstanding the provisions of section 128 a town duty shall be levied on raw cotton imported into the city, by sea or land, from any part of India, at the rate of one rupee for every bale weighing approximately 3½ cwts.

(2) Notwithstanding the provisions of sections 194A and 195 no such raw cotton intended for immediate exportation shall be exempted from the levy of such duty nor shall such duty be refunded on its export.

Payment of 4/7ths of gross revenue to Government: allocation of duty.

195B. (1) On the tenth day of each month the Commissioner shall pay to Government or to an officer designated by Government for this purpose 4/7ths of the gross revenue derived from such duty during the preceding calendar month after deducting the cost of collection of such proportion of such revenue.

(2) Of the moneys received under sub-section (1) a sum of four lakhs of rupees shall be allotted yearly to schemes of improvement and development in the Bombay Suburban Revenue Division as constituted on the 1st day of October 1920; the balance shall be devoted to the provision of tenements for the working classes in the City of Bombay, as constituted on the 1st day of October 1920.

Accounts to be kept: Exercise by Corporation of option to take over: Arbitration.

195C. (1) Government shall keep a separate account of the moneys received under sub-section (2) of section 195B for the purpose of providing tenements in the City of Bombay and of the expenditure incurred from or with the aid of such moneys; and shall supply the Corporation with a copy of the account for each year.

(2) The Corporation shall have the right, after giving six months' previous notice in writing, to take over from Government on the 1st day of April, 1936, or on the 1st day of April of any subsequent year the right, title and interest, vesting in Government from the expenditure referred to in sub-section (1), in lands and buildings, on indemnifying Government against its liabilities in respect of such lands and buildings, including liabilities in respect of any outstanding loan or loans utilised for the purpose of providing tenements as aforesaid.

(3) For the purpose of enabling the Corporation to determine whether such right shall be exercised Government shall at all reasonable times after the 1st day of April 1935 cause inspection of such separate account to be given to the Corporation.

(4) On the giving of such notice as is referred to in sub-section (2), the question as to the amount and form of the indemnity referred to in the said sub-section shall stand referred to the sole arbitration of some person to be nominated by the Chief Justice of Bombay who shall be assisted by two assessors, one to be nominated by Government and one by the Corporation, and his decision shall be final.

(5) Upon the Corporation giving such an indemnity the right, title and interest of Government in such lands and buildings and in any sinking fund formed for the repayment of any loan or loans utilised for the purpose of providing tenements as aforesaid, shall vest in the Corporation.

(6) In the event of the Corporation taking over the right, title and interest of Government in such lands and buildings the amount payable under section 195B for each year ending the 31st day of March thereafter shall be reduced by such sum as may be shown to have been the loss to Government upon such lands and buildings, for the year ending the 31st day of March immediately preceding such event, such loss to be estimated without reference to the payments referred to in section 195B.

(7) Any dispute as to the loss referred to in sub-section (6) shall be referred to the sole arbitration of some person to be nominated by the Chief Justice of Bombay who shall be assisted by two assessors, one to be nominated by Government and one by the Corporation, and his decision shall be final."

2. 3. In sub-section (1) of section 32G of the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898, for the words and figures "of 28 years" the words and figures "not ~~exceeding~~ less than 28 years and not more than 50 years as may be agreed upon by the Board and the employer" shall be substituted.

Amendment of section 32G of Bom. IV of 1898.

Bom. IV 1898.

By order of His Excellency the Honourable the Governor,

G. DAVIS,

Secretary to the Legislative Council of the Governor of Bombay.

Bombay, 8th September 1920.

The following Bill is published under rule 28 (5) of the Rules for the conduct of Business at Meetings of the Legislative Council of the Governor of Bombay :—

Bill No. XVI of 1920.

A Bill further to amend the Bombay Boiler Inspection Act, 1917.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Bombay Boiler Inspection Act, 1917, in manner hereinafter appearing; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Bom. V of 1917.

1. This Act may be called the Bombay Boiler Inspection (Amendment) Act, 192 .

Short title.

Bom. V of 1917.

2. After section 39 of the Bombay Boiler Inspection Act, 1917, the following section shall be inserted, namely :—

"39A. The Governor in Council may, by notification in the Bombay Government Gazette, direct that all or any of the powers or duties conferred or imposed by or under this act upon the Collector of Bombay or so conferred or imposed on the said officer in respect of the City of Bombay as Collector thereof shall be exercised or performed by the Director of Industries, Bombay."

Director of Industries to perform the duties of the Collector of Bombay.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

As the powers and duties conferred and imposed upon the Collector of Bombay by the Bombay Boiler Inspection Act, 1917, in connection with the inspection of boilers, more properly appertain to the department presided over by the Director of Industries, it is proposed to empower the Governor in Council to delegate to the Director of Industries the powers and duties of the Collector of Bombay under the act.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael) :—Order, order. In the temporary absence of the Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola, who is in charge of the bill for the constitution of village panchayats, I propose to proceed to the discussion of matters of general public interest, and I shall take resolution No. 1 standing in the name of the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye.

"This Council recommends that Government be pleased to open a new medical college at Poona in June 1921."

The Honourable Mr. Paranjpye.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta :—Mr. President,—Are we not proceeding with the Tobacco Bill ?

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael) :—His Excellency will, I presume, make a statement about it when he comes.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye :—Mr. President,—I beg to move the resolution that stands in my name, and which has been read out by you. Honourable members will remember that about three years ago, when our Presidency began to have a larger excise revenue, and we were considering what was to be done with that excess excise revenue, we decided that a part of it should be devoted to the extension of education in all its branches, and that another part of it should be devoted to purposes of public health and sanitation, and at the very first meeting, I believe, when the Honourable Mr. Curtis met some of the members, he sketched out a plan, by means of which medical education in this Presidency was to be helped forward rapidly, and among the proposals that he had mentioned was a medical college in Poona, a medical school at Sholapur, one at Hubli or Dharwar, another at Surat, and one more in Sind. Three years, I believe, have passed since then.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis :—I beg the honourable member's pardon. Two years and a quarter.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye :—Very well, Mr. President. Two years and a quarter have passed since then, and these plans appear to have been so far only on paper, for anything that the Council knows. I think the general public has a right to complain that progress in this direction has not been more rapid. We have been having this excess excise revenue so long, and one does not know what is going to happen to it afterwards, because in this year's budget it has been practically swallowed up in the general revenues of the Presidency, and has not quite distinctly been shown as a separate item. I think it was pointed out to the Honourable Member in Charge that the need of another medical college was very insistent, and it was practically decided that one more medical college, if not two, one at Poona and another at Ahmedabad, would be taken in hand directly.

MEDICAL COLLEGE AT POONA.

[5TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. R. P. Paranjpye.]

The conditions of medical education in the Presidency are getting more and more serious as the days pass. A large number of students are wanting to get medical education, and are knocking at the doors of the only medical college that exists in this Presidency, and I think that Government is bound, in duty as well as in policy, to help on the spread of medical education, because, when we are trying to tackle problems of public health and sanitation, a larger number of well educated medical men is an essential necessity. Consequently, I think that we must take immediate steps to provide for the proper education of medical students. At present we have only a single medical college in Bombay, the Grant Medical College, which teaches for the higher medical degrees. We have got three medical schools in the Presidency, at Poona, Ahmedabad, and Hyderabad, which prepare students for the L. C. P. S. examination, that is, for men suitable for the posts of sub-assistant surgeons. But the number of people that can be trained in these institutions is comparatively small. I do not know the exact number, but I think, it is about 200 or so. On the other hand, in the single medical college in Bombay, there is a very great rush of students. For the last three or four years, various arts colleges in the Presidency have been affiliated for the first year of the medical course, and they are sending up students for what is called the Preliminary Scientific examination for the M. B. B. S. degree, and the rush upon the medical college has, to a certain extent, been relieved at least to that extent. At least in my own college, we have about 100 students preparing for the Preliminary Scientific examination, and I think, there are also very large numbers in the St. Xavier's College and the Wilson College. Now, after these students get through their Preliminary Scientific examination, they must of course get admittance into a regular medical college. The arts colleges are not provided with the necessary facilities for teaching the higher parts of the medical courses. We teach them the purely scientific courses. But they must be provided with facilities to obtain further training. Now, it only shows what kind of reckless inattention is paid to the interests of the student community when only three months ago the Dean of the Grant Medical College, one fine morning, put up a notice on the board of his college, saying that he would admit in the second year only 150 students, and no more. About 300 students had already passed the Preliminary Scientific examination, and out of these 300 students, only 150 were to be admitted to the college, and the remaining 150 were to be left absolutely stranded. I think, a thing like that is possible only in a country like India. In no other country would such a thing have happened, and the students left stranded without the slightest notice. However, public opinion was very greatly roused at this very high-handed proceeding, and for the moment the authorities of the medical college had to yield and had to consent to admit all the students that offered themselves. Then, another regulation was also promulgated that people who had failed in the examination three times were not to be admitted into the medical college again. But that regulation has not been rescinded. But this regulation was made at the instance of the medical pandits of our University. A few years ago, students who had failed at any of the University examinations were allowed to appear for the same examination, without being again required to attend a college, as ex-students. But the medical pandits of the University thought that that was not enough, and rules were made that even those who had failed once should be compelled to attend college before they could be allowed to appear for the examination. And the consequence has been that these students who have gone through all the teaching that the college can afford, still crowd the rooms and the laboratories of the medical college, leaving less room for those who have to go in for medical education for the first time. This regulation has to a certain extent come in the way of the students. The Medical Faculty of the University has reconsidered this regulation of not allowing ex-students, and I believe, the University will soon make an alteration in the regulation, allowing in future ex-students to appear for medical examinations without keeping terms any more. That will to a certain extent relieve the situation. But I do not think that the situation will be relieved appreciably until we have more colleges. We have, in our Presidency, a population of something like 19,000,000 or 20,000,000, and we have only one superior medical institution for training medical graduates. In other countries, for instance, in England with a population double this, I think, there are over 10 schools of a very high standard which impart medical instruction to the highest pitch, whereas we have only one medical college in this Presidency. I think, we should have several medical institutions considering the amount of ill-health and sickness in this country. We can only get over it by having more institutions for medical instruction. I think, therefore, that the need for new medical institutions or a new medical college is admitted on all hands.

MEDICAL COLLEGE AT POONA.

[Mr. R. P. Paranjpye.] [5TH AUGUST 1920.]

How are we to get over that need? I propose in my resolution that a new medical college should be started in Poona, and I have already explained to this Council that the need is so insistent that we must wake up and take the step immediately. Here, of course, I shall be confronted with a large number of difficulties before a start can be made with a medical college. First of all, I should say that these difficulties are to a great extent our own creation. We created these difficulties because we have not been up and doing during the last quarter of a century. If we had waked up betimes, we would not have been confronted with these difficulties now. Whatever the difficulties may be, I think it is our bounden duty to bestir ourselves and take all steps—and those steps immediately—in order to get over this impasse. Poona, I think, is on the whole a very suitable place for the starting of a medical college immediately. Here we have already a fairly well equipped medical school. It takes in about 60 students every year. It has got, at any rate, the beginnings for having a complete medical college. In the second place, the proposed medical college in Poona may not have the first year class at all. The first year subjects which consist of practical work in physics, chemistry and biology are taught quite as well by an arts college. My own college at any rate is coaching up students in these subjects. Consequently the new medical college in Poona may be started only with the second year class. I do not wish that it should start with all the classes all at once in June 1921. What I do wish is that we must make a beginning and try to take away the pressure from the Bombay Medical College as far as possible. The second year students will go on to the third year in 1922, so that in 1922 two classes, one of the second year and the other of the third, will be in existence. In 1923 there will be the fourth year class, and only in 1924 will there be a complete college which will be able to send students up for the final M.B.B.S. examination in April 1925. I think, therefore, if we are earnest about it, four years is not too small a time to have a full college. For the class next year, I think, we might somehow or other make the necessary arrangements. We have got here a hospital. It is not perhaps quite as big as is absolutely necessary, but the hospital has something like 300 beds. Then there is the King Edward Memorial hospital for women students, which can be made use of. In fact, arrangements can be made, if only one wants to make the arrangements, somewhere in Poona. The hospital also requires a little extension and a good deal more of land is required, which I understand, Government are acquiring. But during the course of four years, I think, the necessary building can be put up, and that at the end of four years, say by June 1924, when we open our fifth year class, there will be no difficulty.

We may be asked: "What about the various requirements?" We are particularly told that the amount of clinical materials at the disposal of the college will be comparatively small. In the first place, I might point out that in all medical colleges the number of bodies that the students can get for dissection is now very small. According to the rules of the University every student who appears for the intermediate medical examination is supposed to have dissected complete two bodies. There are about 250 or 300 students that appear for the examination every year, and it is not altogether possible to get 500 bodies a year to dissect for them. A number of students, therefore, work on co-operative principles, two or three taking part and helping in the dissection at a time. The difficulty in getting the necessary number of bodies is one that is felt not in Poona or Bombay only, but it is experienced in all parts of the world. I know several stories are told of the way in which professors of anatomy and their students are said to have violated the sanctity of the grave in order to get bodies to dissect. Those may be mythical stories. However, they illustrate what great difficulty there is in getting the proper amount of clinical material. However, we should not be deterred by that fact. In matters like this some of our experts go on the idea that we should have absolute perfection before taking any step. But, I think, from the point of view of education, it would be much better to have a slightly imperfect institutione rather than have none at all. That is the opinion which people in general would take. Try your best to have an institution as perfect as possible. But because it is not perfect, therefore, we must have none, is an argument which I do not think will be admitted by the general body.

Then the starting of medical schools at Sholapur, Dharwar or Hubli and Surat, along with the medical college in Poona, will have to be taken in hand. For a year or two the medical school and medical college may go hand in hand. That school will probably have to be located at Sholapur. Sholapur is a very good place. A new hospital has been erected there, and probably you will be able to have an efficient medical school there.

I do not think there will be any difficulty in getting the necessary staff. As such, institutions give facilities for doing research work, many eminent medical men would be content to work on comparatively less emoluments on the staff of medical institutions than practise privately. Thus there would be no difficulty whatsoever in getting the most competent men to staff our medical college. New buildings that will have to be erected can be easily put up during the course of four years which are allowed for the completion of this medical college. The need for it is so patent that it is needless for me to say more on the subject. What I want the Council to do is to ask Government to hurry up and not go on in its own red tape manner about which His Excellency spoke yesterday. I want them to get out of their red tape rules and proceed more quickly, and get rid of the difficulties which students are experiencing. There can be no doubt that we must encourage our young students to go in for medical education. If we want our health and sanitation improved, a large number of suitably trained men are required who would be practical medical and sanitary missioneries in this Presidency. With these remarks I commend this resolution to the acceptance of this Council.

MEDICAL COLLEGE AT POONA.

[5TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. R. P. Paranjpye; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; Mr. G. S. Curtis.]

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Sir,—It is no doubt true that the need for greater facilities for medical education is urgent, but it is not confined to Poona only, and I really wonder why it has not occured to my honourable friend to include in his resolution Karachi as well as Ahmedabad. If there is need for additional facilities for medical education, that need is greater for Karachi and Ahmedabad than for Poona, because Poona is so near Bombay and can very well avail itself of the college at Bombay than the other two places. I am sorry to have to refer to this drawback of the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye's resolution, because, I believe, it is the duty of every public man not only to look to a particular portion of the Presidency but to treat all the portions of the Presidency equally, justly and fairly. Knowing as I do that the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye has a great desire to give educational facilities all round, I wonder why he has not included Ahmedabad and Karachi.

I think this resolution is a little inopportune. The new councils will be coming into existence very shortly, and then perhaps there will be greater opportunities for doing what may be necessary with reference to affording larger facilities for medical education. I do not think that any resolution of this extreme character should tie down the freedom of those who are shortly to take charge of the educational portfolio.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Sir,—I think the Council will be glad if I rise to make a statement on behalf of Government at once, because, I think, I can show that Government have done all in their power to give effect to the policy which the honourable mover of this resolution has just enunciated. I say that with great pleasure, because, Government policy has been worked on the lines laid down by Surgeon General Lyons to whom this Presidency is under great obligation for his exertions in the matter of medical education.

The honourable mover has said that three years ago I made an announcement with reference to the opening of medical institutions in the Presidency. I interrupted him and said it was two years and a quarter. From further consideration of the matter I find the remark was made by me in December or January 1918, that is, as a matter of fact, scarcely eighteen months have elapsed since that announcement. He further asked where the balance of the excise revenue, which is called whisky money and which was proposed to be allocated to medical education and relief in this Presidency, has gone to. I refer him to page 204 of the Civil Estimates. There he will find that in the budget estimate for 1920-21, excise revenue of Rs. 18,63,000 appears in the medical budget under Head 24A.

I now propose to show shortly what has been done in order to improve the facilities for medical education during the past eighteen months. I must start with saying that it is not desirable that the only medical college in the Presidency should be the Grant Medical College which is at present attached to the J. J. Hospital. It is unquestionable that the number of students has increased there out of measure, and the problem of dealing with the large number of young men who are joining that college for medical education has given the Honourable the Surgeon General and the Dean of the Grant Medical College and my humble self, a good deal of anxious thought during the past two or three years. But that is unavoidable. We cannot in the matter of medical education proceed too quickly. After all, the license to practise medicine connotes, at any rate in this Presidency, a high standard of professional attainments, and I think, this Council will endorse the view already expressed by my humble self on various occasions, that it is necessary, as far possible, to keep that standard up to the level of the degrees granted by European Universities. At the present moment we have, as this Council are aware, one medical college in Bombay, and medical schools at Hyderabad, Ahmedabad and Poona. These medical schools originally taught for the appointment of the grade of sub-assistant surgeons, but since the constitution of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, the authorities now insist that all students anxious to obtain the grade of sub-assistant surgeon should qualify for the license examination of the College of Physicians and Surgeons. This postulates possession of a considerable degree of education on the part of students, and eventually a very much higher standard of professional attainment will be obtained. The mere fact of the existence of these schools which already confer one degree, complicates the question of a college alongside considerably. Government has not been slow to take up the problem. Recently a strong committee of which the Vice-Chancellor of the Bombay University and the Honourable the Director of Public Instruction were members, has been sitting at Ahmedabad with a view to working out the arrangements by which a medical college can be started and the students who join the medical college can receive the scientific part of their first year's education at the Gujarat College. The conclusions of the committee have not yet been reviewed by Government but the general principles laid down by that committee will be of general application to any centre in which Government may hereafter wish to establish a medical college.

MEDICAL COLLEGE AT POONA.

[Mr. G. S. Curtis.] [5TH AUGUST 1920.]

As regards Poona itself, we have for some time past contemplated the establishment of a medical college, but it is not a thing that can be started in a day. As the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye has told the Council in his opening speech a very large area of land is necessary. An area adjoining the medical school has already been acquired and some more lands further up are being acquired. In connection with the acquisition of the former an appeal is likely to be made to the district court on the question of compensation.

At the same time it will probably be necessary to transfer the medical school for the training of sub-assistant surgeons at Poona to Sholapur, but I am not quite clear on the subject as that will require a certain amount of careful thought. It is a fact that there is a new hospital at Sholapur, but that hospital until quite the other day was occupied for the purposes of war by certain German internees who had been removed to Sholapur from Siam. Recently it has been placed at our disposal once more. I believe at the present moment the equipment of the hospital is still proceeding, and it will take some time before the hospital is put in working order. And when it is possible to place at Sholapur a competent officer, Government will probably at once proceed with the constitution of a medical school at that place to take the place of the existing medical school of sub-assistant surgeons in Poona. When that transfer is complete it will be a comparatively simple matter to evolve arrangements for the constitution of a medical college at Poona. At the same time I understand from the Honourable the Surgeon General in whose place I am explaining to the Council the details, that the organization of a fully equipped medical college requires a certain amount of thought and co-operation on the part of those concerned in the management of the adjoining colleges. I venture to hope that when time comes to consider the details, we shall have the co-operation of the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye and others in Poona.

As regards other matters which the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye mentioned they are not strictly within the scope of this resolution, namely, a medical school at Dharwar and Belgaum. The Honourable the Surgeon General's proposal was to start a medical school at Dharwar. But there are various difficulties which are at present being considered. Belgaum would be a suitable place for such a school, and I understand that point is being considered. The question as to which centre is to be selected is under the consideration of Government.

The question of improvement of the medical school at Hyderabad has also been actively considered. One important change has been made in that school. It was originally formed as a semi-local board institution and now it has been made a Government institution. The question of the acquisition of land for the extension of the school is under consideration. I think a great deal has been done in that matter. At any rate, a start has been made and the matter is under the serious consideration of those concerned.

That, sir, is the position as far as I can give it. With reference to the terms of the resolution, I think, I should endorse what has fallen from the Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai. The honourable mover asks us to say that the college shall be opened in June 1921. I am advised that that is physically impossible. But apart from that fact I entirely agree with the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai that we cannot in a few months specify for our successors from what date we can start a college. It may or it may not be the pleasure of the new council that the particular college shall be opened on this particular date.

I would, therefore, ask the honourable member to withdraw the resolution with the assertion that Government have not been idle in the matter and everything is being done that can be done.

I only want to mention that the honourable Mr. Paranjpye makes no reference in his opening speech to the King Edward Hospital and the medical college attached to it on which 12 lakhs are to be spent. That college is, I understand, to be managed by the Bombay municipality. I understand that plans for its erection are ready and the construction will be shortly taken in hand. With these remarks, I hope, the honourable member will withdraw the resolution.

MEDICAL COLLEGE AT POONA.

[5TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. R. P. Paranjpye; Mr. D. V. Belvi; Mr. G. S. Curtis.]

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye :—Mr. President,—With reference to the remarks of my honourable friend Rao Saheb Harilal Desai I would only point out that I fully agree that there should be a medical college at Ahmedabad and also at Karachi.

The Honourable Mr. D. V. Belvi :—And also at Dharwar.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye :—Well, and also at Dharwar. But Dharwar has not even the beginning of a medical school as yet.

I hope at least three medical colleges would probably be started in the near future. But at present Poona is probably a bigger educational centre than Ahmedabad, although Ahmedabad is in a fair way to be a rival to Poona in course of time. But particularly the number of students in the preliminary scientific class in Poona is far larger. I know of course to a certain extent what the Honourable Mr. Curtis has told us about the plan to start a medical college in Ahmedabad, and I quite welcome that idea. I also would point out to the Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai that it might probably be a question whether the Presidency can absorb three new medical colleges at one and the same instant. If one medical college is started at first in Poona it will also help directly the other places like Ahmedabad, as the students from the Deccan will not go to Bombay, and much more room will be available in the Grant Medical College for the students from Gujarat. The medical college in Poona will attract students from the Deccan and also other parts of the country.

The Honourable Rao Saheb Desai told us, and the Honourable Mr. Curtis echoed his remarks, that we should not commit our new councils to any new line of policy. I would seriously ask my honourable friend Rao Saheb Harilal Desai whether he thinks that there is likely to be any objection or opposition to an increased grant for medical education from the new councils. I think on the contrary they will welcome any beginning that we might have made. It is rather curious to see the Honourable Mr. Curtis echoing the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai in his remarks about committing our new councils to a new policy. But is not Government committing the new councils to various new things ? In the course of my speech on the budget two days ago, I protested against the creation of a large number of appointments and thus tying the hands of the new councils, but it was the Honourable Mr. Curtis who opposed me, and now, I think, it is rather awkward, to say the least, for the Honourable Mr. Curtis to come and say that we are tying the hands of the new councils.

The subject-matter of my resolution is a point on which the representatives of the people and the people are very keen, and therefore, there would be no danger of committing the new councils to things on which the public are not keen. However, I leave that point where it is. I only wanted to show the inconsistency of the Honourable Member in Charge. It is an argument which might possibly sound very well in the mouth of my honourable friend Rao Saheb Desai, but it does not sound quite so well in the mouth of my honourable friend Mr. Curtis. However, from what I have heard from the Honourable Member in Charge, I gather that he is prepared to undertake to go into the whole subject. What I want is a distinct undertaking that such and such a thing is going to be done. He told us that some schemes are under consideration but that they will take a large amount of time and thought. We all know a very great amount of thought and also time is required for any scheme to materialize. What I want, and what the country wants, is a distinct undertaking that you are prepared to do something immediately in the matter. He also told us that it was no use lowering the standard in the matter of law or medical education. I am not at all in favour of the lowering of any standard. But that is no reason why we should not make a beginning by having an institution even with a lower standard, rather than go without any. It may not be an ideal or a perfect institution to begin with. It takes time for any institution to come to a perfect state. Are we, therefore, stopped from starting any institution ? Can we say even of our Grant Medical College that it is a perfect or ideal institution and can be compared with the best institutions of the West ? It is a good institution, but it took a certain amount of time and required a great many improvements to come to its present state. That college did not come into being all at once like a Minerva from the head of Jupiter. Some medical members of the Council might be able to tell us what exactly was the state of the Grant Medical College in their own days, what it was then and what it is now. You will find, then, that even the Grant Medical College is capable of evolution, and similarly any institution will be capable of evolution and improvement. I therefore want a beginning to be made without any delay. Further, I want an undertaking from the Honourable Member in Charge that until more provision has been made the refusal of admission to the numerous students who knock at the door of the Grant Medical College will not be put into effect.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis :—I rise to a point of order. We are not concerned, in discussing a resolution of this kind, with the internal management of the Grant Medical College.

MEDICAL COLLEGE AT POONA—VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[Mr. R. P. Paranjpye; the Vice-President; Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole.] [5TH AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye :—Well, I might point out that the order for refusing admissions into the Grant Medical College was given after obtaining the sanction of Government, and my proposition is.....

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael) :—I hardly think that any decision or order affecting the internal management of the Grant Medical College in Bombay is relevant to the subject of the resolution, which is, whether we should open a medical college in June 1921 in Poona.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye :—My point, sir, was that the authorities of the Grant Medical College are refusing admissions with the sanction of Government, and I want Government to undertake that the doors of the Grant Medical College will not be closed to students until some other arrangements are made for them. I submit that this is quite a legitimate point to make on a motion of this kind. However, I hope that the result of the discussion that we have had on this motion to-day, will speed up Government, and make them take all the necessary steps without giving too much attention to red tape, of which His Excellency the President himself complained the other day, and I, therefore, ask for permission to withdraw this resolution.

The resolution was by leave withdrawn.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael) :—Further discussion of Bill No. XI of 1919. The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole :—Mr. President,—I rise to accord my hearty support to the Village Panchayats Bill as amended by the select committee. The bill as it has come from the hands of the select committee, contains one serious defect which we have all been speaking about, and that is that it contains no provision as regards the exercise of judicial functions. The essential idea of a panchayat as understood in this country is, that it should be an institution for the settlement of disputes. The word "panchayat" means that, and it is a disappointment to us all that the bill makes no provision for giving judicial functions to panchayats. Apart from this deficiency, however, I think the bill is very useful so far as it goes. The district local boards, as constituted at present, experience great difficulty in managing the areas under their control, because the funds at their disposal are small, and the agency that they have at their disposal is very limited. The bringing into existence of a local agency for dealing with village problems is, therefore, very welcome to them. I find from experience that in the case of local board works that are carried out in the different parts of the district, the works though executed satisfactorily at first, go into disrepair and oftentimes to ruin on account of the want of a local agency on the spot to keep the works in adequate repair from time to time. It is heart-rending to see that a fine local board well, constructed by a district local board for the village water supply gradually goes into disrepair, and after a time the special repairs needed for that well cost almost half the amount that has been spent on its original construction. The villagers, on account of want of any one on the spot to see that the well is kept in proper order, allow the gutters round the well to be choked up, the ráháts attached to the well to be stolen, and the parapet of the well to get damaged, and so on. What the district local board has been doing is thus brought to naught. In the case of dharamsalas also we find that the tiles of dharamsalas are stolen, and that the rafters are broken and taken away by people to be used as fuel. All this happens because there is no one on the spot to see that the district local board property is kept in proper repair. There is one overseer in a taluka, who visits the works in a village perhaps once in a year and the only thing that he does then is to give some whitewash to the work and execute some petty repairs. He then comes away. He visits the village again probably after one year more. In the case of roadside trees also I find that the district local board expenditure on maintaining these trees often is lost and becomes useless. The board places fences round young trees; these fences after two or three months are found to have been removed by the villagers and used as fuel. The young trees then go to ruin. The road-side trees are also lopped and cut by villagers and used as fuel. In this way the property of the district local board, on account of want of an efficient agency on the spot to look after it, very soon goes to ruin. I think, therefore, that the village panchayats which will come into existence after the passing of this bill will be a great help to local boards in the management of their areas.

An ideal system of local self-government would be to have the central district local board to administer the whole district, and a series of panchayats under it working in all the villages in its charge. In the Poona district we have got about 1,200 villages. If about 25 or 30 panchayats are established in each taluka, some panchayats dealing with three or four villages, and in the case of bigger villages a panchayat being formed for each village, the system would be ideal. The district local board will have a central office and a set of officers for supervising and directing the execution of all the works which are to be carried out by the village panchayats, and under the guidance of the central agency the works will go on all right. Each local area itself will have a local agency that will execute its works with local knowledge and with local interest. The best part of the arrangement will be that there will be a local agency on the spot to watch the works from day to day and to see that they are kept in proper and efficient repair after they are constructed.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[5TH AUGUST 1920.] [Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole; Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah.]

I find also that if the Village Panchayats Bill is passed, it will place at the disposal of the district local boards a large set of additional funds. The district local boards spend a lot of money at present on the improvement of village water supplies and on the improvement of sanitation in villages, but, as I have been telling the Council, the efforts of the district local boards have yielded up to date very unsatisfactory results on account of the want of local upkeep agency. The villages in our Presidency are in a most deplorable state as regards sanitation. Government officers and those that have business transactions in a village find how dirty an average village is. The environs of the village and all the open places in the village are used as latrines; and the water supply which is used by the villagers is polluted. The consequence is that many villages have become unhealthy and hot beds of fever and other diseases. I have observed villages where half the village was down with guinea worm on account of bad water supply. The prickly pear is allowed to grow to such an extent as to almost knock at the doors of the villagers' houses. I ask this Council, therefore, to support this village panchayat legislation and bring these village panchayats into existence as early as possible. That is the only way of improving the sanitation of villages and that is the only way of making district local board administration really effective as it should be. I repeat once more that the district local board as the central administrative body and a number of panchayats spread over the whole district, each panchayat administering its own works and other affairs with funds collected by themselves, and with funds allotted to them by Government and the district local board, will be an ideal scheme of local self-government, and I have no doubt it will be successful.

I have already remarked that this legislation will bring into existence additional funds for the improvement of village areas, and those funds will be the proceeds of the house taxation that the village panchayats will impose. In the Poona district local board which I am administering at present, we have got about 180,000 houses in rural areas altogether, and even if half of these houses pay the tax that the panchayats will impose, the yield will amount to about Rs. 90,000, or say Rs. 1,00,000, and this amount will be available for the improvement of the water supply of villages and for the improvement of the general sanitation of villages. The bill is therefore extremely useful. The best feature of it is that the tax which it proposes to impose is comparatively very light. Probably the tax that will be sanctioned will be a house tax of Re. 1 per year, and, what is Re. 1 per year? The cost of labour even in the outlying places of districts has risen, and what the panchayat will ask will be that one adult member of a family is to give his two days' wages as the house tax. I do not think that that is a great amount to ask.

Considering all aspects of the case, the village panchayat will be a great boon, and the sooner it is brought into existence the better. I therefore accord my hearty support to the second reading of the bill, drawing attention again to the deficiency which I mentioned at the outset of my speech, namely, the absence of assignment of judicial functions to panchayats. I am sure the new Council will supply this deficiency after the present Village Panchayat Act has been in operation for three or four years.

The Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah :—Mr. President,—Yesterday we were told by the Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai that he preferred nomination to the panchayat to the extent of one-fifth, to the patel being an ex-officio member. We all know that the minimum number of the members of a panchayat will be five; the maximum might be ten, fifteen, or twenty. Let us take it at ten. If there be ten members, and if we adopt the principle of the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai, there will be two nominated members. Now, the probability is that one of them will be the patel, the hereditary officer of the village, so that he will come in by nomination. Therefore, I submit that nomination will only make matters worse. We know that all these patels are hereditary officers, and have some administrative experience. This is so far as the Presidency proper is concerned. In Sind and some other parts of the Presidency there are no patels; so that we shall have wholly elected panchayats, and panchayats with patels as ex-officio members. We will thus have experience of both, and if we find that the patel obstructs the progress of the panchayat, legislation might be brought forward to do away with the patel as an ex-officio member. Further the patel is only one of the five. Supposing a panchayat consists of ten members, I do not think he will be able to influence all the ten.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah ; Mr. P. A. Desai.] [5TH AUGUST 1920.]

The next point that the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai raised was with regard to adult suffrage. He wanted to introduce instead of it a small property qualification, and his grounds were, first that adult suffrage only increases the number of votes. He said that if a father had five adult sons, the result would be that all the five sons would vote as the father desired, and he introduces the low property qualification in order to give each family only one vote. I also think that females will naturally have somebody to guide them, and if males follow their elders, I am sure the females do it much more. Therefore, I do not think a property qualification is better than adult suffrage. Besides, my honourable friend is very anxious that franchise be given to females, and therefore he wants to introduce the principle of property qualification. I am afraid there will be many adult males and females who might not have any property, and they will go without a vote, but if we adopt the principle of adult male suffrage, after some time, when education has progressed, it might be extended to females also.

The third point that was urged was that the talukdars, inamdars and jahgirdars ought to be nominated as ex-officio members, like the patels. It is strange that, on the one hand, the principle of the patel being appointed as an ex-officio member, should be disapproved of and on the other hand the principle of the jahgirdars and talukdars being nominated as ex-officio members should be advocated. Most of these jahgirdars, at least in my part of the country, do not reside in the villages. If at all they ought to be on the panchayat, they can come in by election, and in these days of democracy, I do not think we ought to advocate special rights to jahgirdars, inamdars, or others.

Much was tried to be made of the absence of judicial functions. When this bill was introduced, I myself was one of those who advocated that these panchayats be invested with criminal and civil powers. But as an experiment, I think, we ought to try to see how far panchayats work satisfactorily. If they work successfully, supplementary legislation might be brought in to invest such panchayats as have worked satisfactorily with criminal and civil powers. In this connection reference was made to the Central Provinces Bill. The honourable mover yesterday told us that there the panchayats are wholly nominated. Here we have got elected panchayats, and if after a little experience we find that they have been working satisfactorily, they might then be invested with judicial powers.

The one great need that this bill supplies is the local agency for the district local boards. As was pointed out by the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole, all the works of local boards will be very well looked after and maintained by these agencies. In fact, this bill is of a very far-reaching character in the direction of local self-government. It gives us, with the exception of the patel, wholly elected panchayats, adult suffrage, and non-official presidents. With these remarks I support the second reading of the bill.

The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai :—Mr. President,—I should like to support the second reading of this bill. If two alternatives are placed before me, either to accept the bill in its present form without any amendments, or reject it without the amendments being accepted, I say that the first alternative, namely, to accept the bill even in its present form without the amendments is preferable, because the bill is a distinct advance in the matter of local self-government.

There are three features which are welcome in this bill. The first is adult male suffrage. The Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai said that a property qualification ought to be placed there. But the present arrangement is more advantageous than property qualification, because we see that in the villages there are many people who have no property worth the name. The second distinct advantage is that except in villages where there is a patel, the body will be wholly elected. Of course there is an amendment that the patel should not be an ex-officio member, and I will say later on what I have to say about it, but even assuming that the amendment is not accepted, I say that the body, except in villages where there is a patel, will be a wholly elected one.

The third and most important feature is the freedom from official control. So, I say that the present bill gives us these three distinct advantages in its present form. It is most advantageous, and therefore I say that I support the second reading of the bill.

Now, the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole has pointed out to us that at present there is nobody in the village to take care of the district local board property. There is nobody to look to the supply of good drinking water, there is nobody to cleanse the public roads, the drains, the tanks and wells, there is nobody for the construction, maintenance and repairs of the roads, drains, and so on, and there is nobody to take care of sanitation, conservancy, and so on. So, I say that as these matters are urgently needed, the establishment of panchayats is urgent. With these remarks I support the second reading of the bill.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[5TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. P. A. Desai; Mr. D. V. Belvi; Mr. S. B. Upasani.]

The Honourable Mr. D. V. Belvi :—Mr. President,—I rise to support the second reading of the bill in a few words. I do not agree with all that has been said by the honourable mover in support of his motion for the second reading of the bill. I do not agree with his argument as to why the franchise is to be confined at present only to adult males. I should have been better pleased to see that the franchise had been extended even to adult females. There is no reason whatever as to why the franchise should be withheld from adult women. If we take the standard of literacy we find that in the case of the rural population, at least 92 per cent. of the people are illiterate. Why should adult males be allowed to vote, and why not adult females also? No satisfactory reason is adduced, and at any rate, to my mind, the argument advanced by the honourable mover of the bill, is unconvincing and inconclusive. But I do not wish to see the bill wrecked on this ground. I should like to have what is offered to us at present, and I should be glad to have this legislation amended in course of time.

It is contended by some of my honourable friends that the bill is next to nothing as it does not confer civil and criminal powers on village panchayats. There is considerable force in that argument. But we have to take the bill as an experimental measure, and as I have already said at the first reading of this measure, it is rather difficult to believe that these powers would in all cases be satisfactorily exercised. I have grave misgivings as to whether such judicial powers will be satisfactorily exercised, at any rate in my part of the Presidency. I should like to wait, say for a period of five years, and I should like to see that education is developed, and then these powers may be conferred on panchayats in due course.

The bill is based upon the great principle of universal election. It is true that the village patel will be an ex-officio member, and we cannot strictly say that it will be election pure and simple. But if we take into consideration the traditions of our country, before the introduction of British rule into India, I am not at all sorry that the hereditary patel is to be a member of the panchayat. It would have given me greater pleasure to see that village accountants were also included as ex-officio members of panchayats. Our idea of the old panchayat was that the village patel and the village kulkarni were members of the panchayat. The latter has unfortunately now fallen on evil times; he is not in the good graces of Government at present. However, I am quite sure that despite the disfavour into which he has fallen, he will find his way into the panchayat in many cases by the open door of election. He is a man of some influence. Generally he is a man of education, and he will get himself elected in 99 cases out of 100. All I want to say is that I am not at all sorry that the village patel is to be an ex-officio member of the village panchayat. The only cases in which a difficulty will arise will be cases of inam villages or alienated villages in which inamdars have a right to nominate the patel. It is rather awkward to find that the nominee of an inamdar sits on the village panchayat ex-officio, whereas his master, an inamdar, has to get himself elected. This is rather a curious position to understand. But with all that, this is not an adequate reason why the bill should be thrown out altogether. There are difficulties in everything. But difficulties will have to be solved. Let us accept in good spirit what has now been offered. Let us have half the loaf rather than no bread. In accordance with this principle, I have much pleasure in according my support to the second reading of the bill.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani :—Sir,—at the discussion of the first reading of the bill several points were suggested by honourable members for the consideration of the select committee; and I have no doubt that they must have all been duly considered. Very few of them, however, appear to have been adopted, and the framework remains as it stood before. No doubt some amendments have been embodied in the bill by the select committee, but they are on minor points, and it appears there was difference of opinion in the select committee on the more important points, and six out of eleven members of the select committee have recorded minutes of dissent.

The first point of difference was as to the constitution of the village panchayat. As regards this, I think, all members congratulated the honourable mover of the bill on his having extended the adult male franchise and made panchayats practically elected. The main difference was about extending the franchise to females and appointing the patel as an ex-officio member. As regards the latter point, the amendment embodied in the bill shows that the revenue patel has been put in instead of the police patel. This amendment was accepted by way of compromise. But I am afraid it will work more hardship than if the police patel only were retained. If the revenue patel be an ex-officio member, the police patel who is ordinarily more influential than the revenue patel will easily get himself elected. Then there is also the village kulkarni who will also get in with the patel. Thus instead of one member being on the panchayat ex-officio, we shall probably have three members out of five, who will be official members—and more or less under the influence of the local authorities—and the non-official members will be in the minority. This is a point which will have to be considered at greater length when we come to deal with the amendment thereon.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[Mr. S. B. Upasani.] [5TH AUGUST 1920.]

The next point of difference was as regards the functions which these bodies were to exercise. Those embodied in the bill are more or less on the lines of those which are entrusted to our municipalities, notified areas and sanitary committees. I think that unless some greater voice in the local administration of the village is given to these panchayats, there will not be much enthusiasm among the village people to work on them. So far back as 1882 no less an authority than the late Justice Ranade stated as follows :—

> "There can be no doubt that local self-government limited to conservancy and charitable functions, is more or less a misnomer, and is doomed to inevitable failure. For, it will never secure the same enthusiastic support by the population which would have been enlisted if local bodies had been organized on the English plan of appointing the representatives of the local gentry, conservators of peace and guardians of law, and associating with them representatives of rate payers in every local board. It will be found that in no single self-governed country of Europe or America has the power and responsibility of magisterial and police functions been denied to the local governing bodies."

The object of this measure is not merely to create bodies similar to our sanitary committees but bodies which will be the training grounds for the new responsibilities that are to be transferred to the people under the Reforms Scheme. The object of a measure like this was well explained by the Honourable Mr. Jathar who moved the bill that was brought before the Central Provinces Council. He said :—

> "The main object of the bill is to develop the corporate life of the individual villages, and to give the villagers an interest in, and some control over, local village affairs in a manner which will enable them to learn how to co-operate for the common benefit of the village, for realizing the common responsibilities and for bearing the common burdens. It is thus intended that the village with a panchayat should be a real and self-reliant unit, competent to give useful assistance not only in the administration of civil and criminal justice, but also in the discharge of various administrative functions. It is hoped, that with this assistance it would be easy to effect material improvement in the present village administration."

Thus it was desired that those who will have to work on these panchayats should have an effective voice in the details of the village administration, if not absolute control over them.

As regards civil and criminal powers, I may point out that they were included not only in the bill brought before the Central Provinces Council, but also in the bill that was brought in the United Provinces Council. The Honourable Mr. Keane who moved the bill in the latter Council said as follows :—

> "For many years officers and people who are familiar with the working of our administrative system have deplored the ruinous effects on the peasantry of the country, of their growing familiarity with litigation and their growing habit of resorting to litigation. Petty disputes are continually being taken to distant headquarters and are being fought out for days, and even for months, until the longest purse eventually wins. The restraint of local opinion is removed at far headquarters and perjury and advocacy help to make the worse appear the better cause. Naturally many men have inquired what the best remedy is for this state of affairs, and the first idea that strikes most people is to make use of the model of caste panchayats which are already in vigorous existence."

In the bill moved in the United Provinces Council elaborate provisions are embodied as regards the offences to try which the panchayats are to have jurisdiction and also as regards the civil suits which they may entertain. In our Presidency the village patel has criminal powers under the Village Police Act in petty criminal cases, which powers are often abused. The patel is generally a very illiterate man, and even at headquarters we often hear complaints of abuse of power by him. When the Police Act Amendment Bill was before us, I made it a point to bring those abuses to the notice of the Council, and Government did contemplate going into the matter and taking the necessary action. The Commissioners, however, did not recommend any change. So the evil continues. I think, the powers that are exercised by the patel alone may more usefully and without any danger of abuse be exercised by the panchayats. There would be less chance of abuse when five men sit to dispose of a matter than if it were left to one individual only.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[5TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. S. B. Upasani; the Chairman; Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.]

As regards honorary magistrates, I may observe that they are invested not only with third class but with second and even first class powers. Many of them, however, are far from having the legal knowledge and experience necessary for the satisfactory discharge of their functions. Even as regards petty civil suits of Rs. 10 or Rs. 20, I may point out that villagers have to go to distant taluka courts, and where there are no such courts, to courts in another taluka. Now, instead of putting the villagers to this inconvenience, would it not be better if five people sitting as panchayat were given the power to dispose of these suits up to say Rs. 50 as village munsiffs? If that is done, I think, there would be no danger of abuse, and our bill would be very much improved without much risk.

Then comes the question of the duties that are imposed on the village panchayats under the bill. Among these duties are the construction and maintenance of roads and bridges. I do not know whether villages with their limited means would be able to discharge these duties at present. Much of the income of the local boards is absorbed by these roads which ought to be taken up as provincial, and constructed and maintained out of provincial funds, instead of being charged to the local boards. Out of the one anna cess, eight pies in the anna are expended on these works. Very little is thus left for doing the needful as regards education and sanitation. I think that this burden as regards roads and bridges should not be thrown on the panchayats especially when no limit is placed as regards the share which they should bear of the cost required for these works. These are, however, matters of detail.

Another defect in the bill which I should like to have remedied is the absence of any express provision as regards the extent of the help which the panchayats are to receive from the district boards and the Government for the discharge of their duties. In the first place, we have made statutory provision to impose obligatory duties on the panchayats and to require them to impose house-tax and other taxes on the village people, but as regards the help that they are to expect from Government or the district boards, it is all left to the discretion and sweet will of Government and the district boards.

In the United Provinces it was very wisely decided not to give these bodies the power of taxation for the present. While introducing the United Provinces Panchayat Bill the Honourable Member in Charge, Mr. Keane, in the course of his speech said:

> "For the present it is not proposed to give to the panchayats any power of taxation. The panchayats will be elected according to the ascertained wishes of the majority of the inhabitants of the villages."

Then as regards the financial portion of the bill the Honourable Mr. Chintamani also said:

> "I heartily agree with the honourable member that it is quite wise not to give to these panchayats, in the beginning at all events, the power of new taxation. The Decentralization Commission have urged very strongly that the establishment of panchayats should not be associated with the imposition of the new taxation by them, for then they would start with an atmosphere of prejudice, and the motive of Government and the objects of the panchayats will both be misunderstood and misinterpreted."

The Honourable the Chairman (Mr. G. S. Curtis*):—The honourable member has only half a minute more.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—I do not think there is any time limit for a speech on the second reading of a bill.

Then Mr. Chintamani continues:—

> "At the same time I think some provision more definite in its character than the provision actually inserted in the bill should be made to provide these panchayats with adequate funds."

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Let me say one word in connection with the point. Honourable members are aware that we are in the fourth day of our sitting. The wording of some sections forms the subject of the amendments, and those amendments will be debated. I would therefore ask honourable members whether they would not briefly refer to the principles involved on the second reading. Otherwise there will be such a long time that the Council may have to sit for several days more. Of course they are entitled to do so but I would merely ask honourable members whether they would not be brief.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—We were told only yesterday by His Excellency that we would be allowed to speak at length on the second reading, and it is under that ruling that I tried to refer to the main points in detail. As I read from the proceedings of the United Provinces

* The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir George Carmichael) was temporarily absent at this stage.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[Mr. S. B. Upasani; Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe.] [5TH AUGUST 1920.]

Legislative Council, the Decentralization Commission urged very strongly that the establishment of panchayats should not be associated with the imposition of any new taxation by them. And, therefore, it would have been better if the power for the imposition of taxes had been withheld from them at least for the present, or, at any rate, some corresponding definite provision had been inserted to assure the villagers that adequate help or at least an equal share of the expenditure will be forthcoming from Government and the district boards. With these few remarks I resume my seat.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe :—Sir,—I should have been really inclined to listen to the sound advice given by the Honourable Member in Charge. But sometimes it becomes difficult while one speaks on the amendment not to go outside the purview of that amendment. Therefore, I intend to offer a few remarks on the several points raised in the debate and on the questions referred to by the honourable members who have preceded me. I was on the select committee, and I am one of those who have supported the inclusion of the patel as an ex-officio member on the village panchayats, and also I have supported the recommendations of the select committee on the other points, namely, the adult male suffrage and not to have recognition of adult female suffrage.

On the third point, viz., investiture of judicial powers, I have also appended a minute of dissent. Looking to the fact that if we were to press that point to a vote the whole bill will be delayed, and one did not know when it would be coming again for discussion before the Council, many of us thought that it was not opportune to press the question of the inclusion of the judicial powers in the Village Panchayat Bill. It was therefore that we allowed the present bill to pass through the select committee in the form in which it has now emerged. Howsoever desirable it may be to invest panchayats with judicial powers, still one need not press that point at this stage, because, it is yet to be seen how far the village panchayats become a success so far as the administrative side of the business is concerned. If favourable experience is gained, then certainly under the new regime it would be open for any of us to tack on this to the present act or introduce a separate bill giving judicial powers to these panchayats. It is on that ground that, though I was very keen on that point and though I did press it on the attention of the select committee, I do not propose to oppose the second reading on that ground. Before I go to the other points, let me say that I really am thankful to the Honourable Mr. Belvi for the broad view he has taken of the bill though he does not agree on certain points involved in the bill.

The greatest opponent to the form in which this bill has been presented is my honourable friend, Rao Saheb Desai, and to a certain extent my honourable friend, Mr. Upasani. The Honourable Rao Saheb Desai's objection appears more to the village patel being on the panchayat ex-officio. He has given his reasons in extenso in the minute of dissent. I will not read them out, but it appears to me from the manner in which he has described this officer of a village, that he has a very strong dislike for him. I do not mean to say that there may not be instances of patels who may be of the description which he has depicted in his minute of dissent, but at any rate they must be few indeed. Let us examine the several alternatives to which my honourable friend has referred. He told us that personally he would prefer to have one-fifth nominated members. When he said so, I think, he said it merely in opposition to the present form of the bill without considering the effect of it. In adopting the present form the select committee has thought it fit to depart from the usual formula on which these local bodies' constitution has been built up, namely, of securing some seats by election and some by nomination. It was to give away the principle of nomination which stinks in the nostrils of many that this procedure was thought fit to be adopted.

If there is such a dread for this patel, how can my honourable friend, Rao Saheb Desai, avoid his coming in through election; because, we know how elections are governed in the municipalities and local boards, and we have only to picture to ourselves how they will be controlled in small villages. If he is such a powerful man in a village of whom the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai has to be afraid, then I am quite sure that he will strain his every nerve to come through election and be a member of the panchayat.

Then, sir, there is another ground which he did not tell us here in the debate but which he has put forward in the minute of dissent, and that is, that the other members will be his slaves. I was very sorry to read that word, coming from the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai, which has the underlying assumption that we are not fit for standing against one single voice of a petty officer like that of the village patel in a village.

An honourable member :—Hear, hear.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[5TH AUGUST 1920.] [Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe.]

The Honourable Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe:—If that is going to be the case, I think it is much better not to have the Village Panchayat Bill rather than have it in the circumstances which have been mentioned by the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai.

It was stated by my honourable friend, Mr. Upasani, that the village accountant, and—he also mentioned—the village police patel were important men in a village. He is afraid that when we are putting forward the patel as ex-officio, the village police patel and accountant would come through election. I put it to him, what objection should there be if they command the confidence of the people. Is it because of that that my honourable friend says that the patel should not come through nomination? Then I have to give the same reply to him which, a minute before, I gave to my friend the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai.

Then, sir, in drafting this section, out of respect to the feelings of so many who were on the select committee, the majority of us thought it desirable to draft it in a manner which would raise the least opposition and at the same time which would give us an opportunity of examining side by side, the working of the village panchayat wherein patels are ex-officio, and work of the village panchayats wherein there is no patel. So great scope has been provided for in the bill to make an experiment on both these lines, and if it be found in the near future that this ex-officio patel not only is a great nuisance but hinders the growth of local self-government in a village, by all means every one of us will be glad to support the deletion of the present clause and make the panchayats wholly elected bodies.

Another argument that was put forward by some speakers against this patel being ex-officio, was that in cases of inam villages and in cases of talukdari villages, and in cases of khoti villages, it would be very improper that an inamdar's nominee should be there by virtue of the statute, while the master he should have to seek election. When I am dealing with this point it would be better to answer the two points together. Whether it would be desirable to have an inamdar ex-officio? If we take the position of an inamdar in a village he is much more powerful than the village patel. If there is objection to the village patel being there ex-officio on the ground of his influence which is likely to be abused by him, then I go a step further and take objection to the inamdar who is by far the influential gentleman in the village. If he is outside it, and the village patel is his nominee, I am quite sure that his influence will always be felt not only by the panchayat but by the village patel, and he will have an indirect voice in the workings of the panchayat. So on these grounds which I have stated, I think that there should be no objection, at any rate at present, to a village patel being a member of the panchayat.

It is not as if this bill is going to be a perfect one. Time may show that we are wrong in various places, and therefore, we need not fight for the deletion of the patel at this stage.

The second point is as regards adult female suffrage. This is a question on which feeling is very intense. I do not wish to dispute for a moment the proposition that there ought not to be any distinction in the eligibility of voters between two sexes. The question before us is, are we going to begin it from the bottom or to begin it from the top? The argument is, that as the village panchayat is the first rung of the ladder in local self-government, we should begin it there. The argument appears to be very fallacious, because it is in these villages that we find a majority of the voters illiterate. One honourable member gave the percentage as something like 92. When the percentage of illiteracy is so great, would it be desirable in the interests of getting good men elected, that we should extend this franchise, to start with, to all the females living in that locality. It would be a different matter if that concession were given in cases like the city of Bombay or in cases of Council elections, where we may expect to get literate women able and competent to exercise the right of vote in the best possible manner. The only request I have to make to some of my honourable friends who advocate or press for adult female suffrage is not to be so impatient but to wait and see how the demand for female suffrage develops, and a time will surely come when we shall have to extend the right of vote to them.

Another point which was pressed by the Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai was to have a right of vote on property qualification. In a village the property which is owned by the villagers is only of two kinds, land or houses. Land is not generally within the precincts of the gaothan proper and the village panchayats are constituted for the village precincts, and therefore, we can only take account of the villagers who have houses, if we have to take the vote on property qualification. And what would be the property qualification? Only the possession of a house, and nothing more. It is our experience that in villages the majority of the inhabitants have their own houses. Are we not extending the franchise in the case of adult males in the present bill when we do not restrict it to the property qualification? If there are in a village 200 adult males and if you restrict the vote to property qualification, then you will reduce that number to a considerable degree, and to that extent we will be doing harm to a majority of people who live in the village but who do not own houses in the strict sense of the term, being members of an undivided Hindu joint family. To my mind the qualification which we have provided for in this bill is more comprehensive and is a distinct advance on the lines which we have adopted in our municipal and local board elections.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe; Mr. B. S. Kamat.] [5TH AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable Mr. Upasani looked at the whole thing as if it was only an enlarged edition of our sanitary committees, and he paid us a very poor compliment when we spent a day and a half last time, and when we are spending a day and more here on this bill to-day. Let me assure him that if he goes through the several provisions of the bill, he will find that the functions that are assigned to these bodies are not merely those that are covered by the Village Sanitation Act. They are many more and it is intended that these village panchayats should supply a training ground for people to take part in local administration. He quoted from the United Provinces Council proceedings a portion of the speech made by the Honourable Mr. Chintamani, and he then said that no taxation was introduced there, and it was not well for us to introduce the principle of taxation here. My own view in the matter is that you can never take interest in your own affairs unless you feel for it, and when people have to pay for a certain thing, then they pay more attention to their own requirements. Their sense of responsibility is increased, and they are put on their mettle when they have to pay something out of their pocket and show to their fellow-people and the residents in the village, that they are utilizing their own money for their own requirements, for instance, on sanitation, roads and other things which have been mentioned in this bill. So, I do not really approve of the principle that we should have these local self-governing institutions without imposing taxation upon those bodies. With these remarks I heartily support the second reading of the bill.

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat :—Mr. President,—I rise to accord my cordial support to the second reading of this bill. While doing so I wish very briefly to deal with some of the points that have been raised by the Honourable Member in Charge and some of the speakers this morning. I frankly confess that the bill with all its imperfections is far in advance of bills introduced into any other province in India, and this Presidency must thank the Honourable Member in Charge for giving us a bill conceived in a spirit of broad statesmanship, a bill which introduces some perfectly democratic principles in the matter of local self-government. I would therefore ask the Council that the bill with all its imperfections be accepted. Yet, I feel it my duty to discuss some of the remarks which fell from the Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola and also the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe just now. Regarding the question of the ex-officio patel, Government, in the bill as amended, have admitted the principle that in villages where there are no patels, they are prepared to have panchayats even without the administrative experience of a patel. Well, if that is so, and if the Honourable Member in Charge wants the panchayats to be thoroughly democratic, I think, it logically follows that there cannot be a halfway house. If you want to be thoroughly democratic, let there be panchayats where patels are not ex-officio members, for the simple reason that when you have a patel as an ex-officio member, you perpetuate a man who, in some cases at least, you know is obnoxious. It is admitted on all hands that in a good many villages the patel is perhaps the evil genius of the village. Now it is one thing to have him by the door of election, and it is entirely a different thing to perpetuate him as a member who is entitled to come on the panchayat as ex-officio member. The Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe argued, if a patel is an objectionable man, why should the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai want him by election? What difference does it make whether he comes in by election or ex-officio, if he is an objectionable man? Well, the method of election makes all the difference in the world. If he has to come in by election, he has to seek the good graces of the village people, thereby he comes down from his position of mischief or authority, and has to be amenable to the wishes of the people. I, therefore, think that if Government think that in some villages, where there are no patels, panchayats can be constituted without the benefit of the administrative experience of the patel, well, surely there is no reason why in all the villages he cannot be dispensed with.

Now, speaking about the question of woman suffrage, what fell from the Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola yesterday was that we must not begin things from the bottom. He referred to the remarks of the Honourable Mr. Pandurang Desai, made some two years ago, that in the case of woman suffrage in municipalities a beginning ought to be made in Bombay. Here again, logically speaking, may I ask, if Government thinks that adult male suffrage could be introduced at the bottom, why should female suffrage be introduced at the top? If adult male suffrage can be introduced at the bottom, ex hypothesi, I do not see why female suffrage should only be started at the top? I personally think that, after all, the introduction of adult male suffrage is a gamble, a speculation. If that is a gamble, surely, female suffrage must also be a gamble and we must be prepared to take our chances. Logically, I think, there is no ground to stand upon why we should accept female suffrage for Bombay city and object to it in villages. Of course, from the point of view of expediency I do admit that the country is not so far advanced as to have woman suffrage all over. But that is a point of view of expediency. But speaking from the point of view of logic, I do not think one can be accepted and the other objected to.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[5TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. B. S. Kamat.]

As to vesting the panchayats with judicial functions, here again, the Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola was not very convincing. He argued and he hinted that honorary magistrates either through ignorance or from illiteracy were not entirely a desirable institution. Well, I know the honorary magistrates and their work. It is perfectly true that some of them are innocent of English and much more so of law. But, with all that, Government is continuing and perpetuating that institution, only because it is a sort of advantage. If, therefore, we even tolerate honorary magistrates innocent of law and innocent of English, may I ask, if there is, logically speaking, any really valid reason why we should not have men on the panchayats who would deal some sort of rough justice in the village? We have got in the villages even at the present moment police patels who are invested with certain judicial powers, who can fine and inflict other punishments on the village people. Are the police patels ideal magistrates? If we tolerate the police patels' exercising judicial power of fining—they may even be inflicting fines on certain of the innocent people—what reason is there for us to believe that panchas on the panchayats will not be able at the present stage of literacy to deal justice when they sit as panchas? Here, again, the thing is, we are making an experiment, an experiment which may give us some bad results. It is, after all, as I say, a gamble. It has often been told that in a village there are factions, and therefore, they ought not to be given these powers of judicial functions. May I ask whether there are not factions in municipalities, whether there are no factions in towns? So far as municipal administration is concerned, I think, factions have been existing for the last 35 or 36 years, since 1884, the beginning of local self-government. If, therefore, there are factions even in the best municipalities, do we expect that there will be no factions in villages and in the panchayats, even if we wait for ten years more? We are assuming that if we wait for ten years, see this legislation in working order for that time, and then address the Government of India and ask them to give judicial functions to the panchayats, we shall have by that time done away with factions. I for one do not think so. Whether it is ten years or twenty years hence, judging by the experience of municipalities, there will remain factions in all places. Factions there are not only in this country, but even in western countries, where the literacy of the people is far advanced. I think that the argument of factions is entirely wrong. I say this from the experience of the state of mind of the Bombay Government themselves. Is it not true that the Government of Bombay were prepared, when they framed a panchayat bill some years ago, to give judicial functions to the village panchayats of the Presidency? Has the Presidency gone back in advancement since that time? I for one do not think so. We have, in fact, advanced. And if at one time Government thought that the state of the country justified the giving of judicial functions to these panchayats, there is absolutely no reason why the Government of India will come in our way at the present moment. Has not the Government of India given sanction to other provinces like the Central Provinces, Bengal, etc., for similar functions to be given to the panchayats? Is the Bombay Presidency far behind the Central Provinces? And is the Bombay Presidency far behind Bengal in such matters? Surely not. If the Government of India see no reason why those other provinces should not get these judicial functions, I think, the Government of India would not come in our way and advance such an unsound argument. Lastly, have we pressed on the Government of India the necessity of giving these judicial functions to the panchayats? I think, if we did so, instead of opposing our request, they will take a better view. It has been said that we want to try an experiment of the ex-officio patel in two spheres. Similarly, on the same analogy, if we had tacked on one more chapter to the Panchayat Bill, giving power to Government to invest certain given panchayats with these functions, we would have cut short time, and could have made a dual experiment by giving in certain cases a few panchayats judicial functions, and having certain others without judicial functions; so that, even without once again going to the Government of India, we should have had in the same bill a dual experiment.

These, we must admit, are the principal shortcomings of the bill, in whatever spirit they may be considered. The Government of Bombay have taken a very bold step, and a courageous step in framing the bill on democratic lines. But in certain other matters there is a sense of timidity on the part of Government, especially in view of the fact that in the past the Bombay Government were prepared to invest the panchayats with judicial functions, although they are not prepared to do so at present.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[The Vice-President ; Mr. B. S. Kamat ; Rao Bahádur S. D. Garud.] [5TH AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael) :—Order, order. The Council will now adjourn till 2-30 p.m.

The Council then adjourned for lunch till 2-30 p.m.

After lunch.

The Council re-assembled after lunch at 2-30 p.m.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael) :—Order, order. Further consideration of the bill for the constitution of village panchayats. The Honourable Mr. Kamat.

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat :—Sir,—As I was saying before we adjourned for lunch, the Bombay Government were at one time of mind to give the panchayats judicial functions. I do not know why they have dropped the idea now. I think the Government of Bombay would be doing a great service to this Presidency if they added these functions to the duties of the panchayats in deference to popular wishes. In any case, I think, the present Council ought to take the good points in the bill and pass it.

There is only one point to which I wanted to refer, and that was the point raised by the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai. If we want to be democratic whole-heartedly, then I for one am not in favour of the khot or the inamdar coming on the panchayat at all. If he is a popular man, I think he will be elected. Let us be democratic in right earnest and in all sincerity, and do away with the inamdars on such institutions.

Lastly, I would at once rather abolish the institution of the police patel than invest the panchayats with judicial functions. The police patel who is more unsafe than the revenue patel, is more or less a danger in many ways and he ought not to be retained when the panchayats are formed. This is all that I have to say with regard to this bill, and I whole-heartedly support the second reading.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud :—Sir,—I had the honour of serving on the select committee, and in spite of the consideration given to the bill in that committee, I could not persuade myself to agree to three or four points in the bill. At the first reading of the bill, I congratulated the Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola on giving us such a progressive legislation, but at the same time I reserved my remarks about the defects that I saw in the bill. I have, therefore, sent amendments which I shall presently move.

Speaking generally on the second reading, I may be permitted to say, sir, that there are three or four glaring defects in the bill. The first is the inclusion of the patel as an ex-officio member on the panchayat. The bill does not make any provision for his removal. Certain points seem to have escaped the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe in considering this ex-officio membership of the patel which he has defended. In the first place this patel will be a permanent fixture on the committee. He will be a life-long member and there is no provision in the bill to authorize his removal from the committee. If the elected members of the board do not behave properly or do not discharge their duties properly, a representation can be made to the district local board, and they can be removed. But this patel, once he goes there, remains fast. Who is going to remove him? There are often several patels in a village. This senior patel will be permanently acting on the committee, and though his work is found to be not at all satisfactory, there is no power, under this bill, to remove him. The patel is not always the most desirable man in the village. There are several things against him, and generally he is the most unpopular man in the village. Therefore, his inclusion, his permanent retention, on the board would not be the most popular measure. That is why we are so strenuously pressing Government to remove him from the panchayat. If he is a good man, I am sure he will find support in the village and get elected. But then he will be responsible to the electorate and behave properly, or he may not be returned if he does not behave himself, or he may be removed by the district local board if necessary. But, when he is an ex-officio member he cannot be removed by them. I do not know whether even the Collector will have the power, if he has a mind, to remove him. This will cause a great deal of inconvenience. So his permanent fixture on the village panchayat will certainly be the most undesirable thing. It was pointed out in the select committee that there are several villages that have no patels, and several villages that have several patels. This led to a number of complicated reservations which have somehow brought in this ex-officio member. As this bill gives an almost wholly elected board to the panchayat, I do not see why the Honourable Member in Charge should not take courage in both hands and make it wholly elected. That would be a very popular measure. In the select committee opinion was almost evenly divided on the point of making the patel an ex-officio member. There was practically a very small margin of votes by which it was passed. Therefore, it is for the Council now to consider whether, in face of so many difficulties in the way of his removal by the district local board or the Collector, none of whom have the power under this bill to deal with him, he should be a permanent fixture on the board. I for one would not have him for the simple reason that an elected member who is found to be a bad man may after all be thrown out some time or other. But here we are not going to escape from him at all. He is going to be there for all his life. As soon as the patel of a village dies, his son becomes the patel, that is revenue patel, by right of succession, and the representative vatandar of the village, and he will be entitled to act on the board. There is further no provision even for a deputy being appointed. So that, when this ex-officio membership leads to so many complications, and when it tends to make the measure in that respect unpopular, I do not see why this ex-officio membership should not be abolished altogether and credit taken for making the board entirely elective.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[5TH AUGUST 1920.] [Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud.]

The second question on which I differed from the select committee, sir, was about the sex bar. In the first place we shall not have many women either going to vote at the polls or expressing their willingness to act on the board. But when the Council have adopted a particular policy about the inclusion of women in the municipal franchise of Bombay, I do not know why that same policy should not be extended, with the Council's approval, to these panchayat boards also. It is said that this will tend to make more voters of the same family. But the male adult suffrage also leads to the same difficulty. A man may have five sons, all staying in the same house, and those five sons and the father may turn out at the polls at the election time and vote. Since we have allowed adult male suffrage in spite of this difficulty, I do not see why it should not be allowed in the case of adult women, if and when they wish to exercise the right of voting. I submit there should be no bar in their way merely on the ground of sex. So far as ignorance and other things are concerned, they may perhaps be inclined to follow the elders. The same might happen in the case of adult male suffrage, so that women, merely as women, should not be excluded.

The third point on which I could not persuade myself to agree with the select committee was about investing these panchayats with judicial powers. I sent up an amendment on this point which has been disallowed as not coming within the scope of the bill. As has been pointed out by my honourable friend Mr. Kamat, it was at one time practically settled to give the panchayats these powers. But somehow this has been dropped now. As a result of the criticism outside and the criticism in this Council, I hope the Honourable Member in Charge of the bill will see his way to give these powers to the panchayats in petty cases. Let the panchayats get some experience with these powers in petty cases, and if they satisfactorily discharge their duties, their powers might be increased, but if they are not satisfactory, their powers might be decreased. But there must be some authority in the bill to give them such powers, in cases where Government find that the panchayats are ably conducted.

The police patel, sir, already enjoys a very large power. Under section 14 of the Village Police Act he can pass a sentence of imprisonment for 24 hours and can impose no fine in lieu of that sentence. He is obliged to pass the sentence of imprisonment if he has to pass any sentence at all and that sentence is not appealable. There is no appeal to the prant officers and no appeal to the Collector though sometimes the High Court may be approached in revision. So that practically there is no appeal at all. The procedure is very summary. When such extensive powers as powers of imprisonment without the option of fine are given to a man like the police patel, I do not know why panchayats should not be invested with power to impose fines. They have been invested with power to impose fines in cases of offences against their own bye-laws, but this is hardly sufficient, and some small cause jurisdiction or some powers of imposing fines or simple imprisonment in petty cases might be given to them. I think a good many of the honourable members who preceded me have pointed out that these powers were necessary, and I do not feel convinced that the panchayats would be effective or popular without these powers. One wonders whether the most able men in the village would be tempted to seek admission to these bodies unless some such powers are conferred on them. These powers, I am sure, would be wisely exercised by the panchayats. We need not apprehend that they will not wisely exercise them, and it is certainly time to make at least a beginning when we are considering this bill.

Then, sir, we find the panchayats entrusted with several duties, but we do not find a corresponding provision made for financing them. Some definite item of village revenue should be assigned to the panchayats for carrying out the duties entrusted to them, and I do not think that their duties will be adequately carried out unless they have some funds at their disposal. The usual method of imposing further taxation is not in many cases admissible. The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole pointed out that a rate per house will not be a very heavy tax, but I submit, sir, that a rate per house will not be sufficient to defray the expenses which they will have to incur. Therefore they will have to find other sources to cover their expenses. Unless, therefore, Government allow them some sources it will not be possible to carry out their duties. I have sent up an amendment on that point, and I hope, the amendments which have been sent up to support the point which I have made will be considered by Government. When I put the amendments to the Council I shall say what I have to say about them.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud; Mr. C. N. Seddon; Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.] [5TH AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable Mr. C. N. Seddon:—Sir,—I had the honour to be a member of the select committee which considered this bill, and I have the honour to be an experienced district officer, and with your permission, I will say a few words about one, or perhaps two, aspects of the bill.

In the first place about the patel. We have heard a good deal about the wickedness of the patel and about the iniquity of including him on the board. But I am astonished to see how unpopular this functionary appears to be among the honourable members of this Council. But the framers of the bill were practical men, and they had practical reasons for appointing the patel ex-officio. Two reasons may be mentioned: The first is that unless we have the patel or one of the patels on the panchayat, we shall probably have him against it.

Now we are starting an entirely new institution, and an institution the success of which cannot be assumed, and we want to start it—as practical men—with as great a chance of success as possible. We do not want to start with powerful opposition in the village, if we can help it; and if both patels are left out of the board, probably they will oppose this new institution, and their opposition may be a serious matter for the panchayat to deal with and it may cause serious difficulties in the progress of this movement.

There is another thing which perhaps has escaped the notice of honourable members. There is a provision in the act for appointing servants for the panchayats. As things are, it will be necessary to appoint in most cases the village servants. These village servants are accustomed to obeying the orders of the patel and to carrying out his behests, and if they are asked to work for the panchayats, it is in every way desirable that they should be able to work to some extent under the patel and that they should not feel that the patel is against the panchayat. We shall depend upon these servants to a very considerable extent as regards the practical work of the panchayats, and we want to do everything we can to carry the village servants with the panchayats. This seems to me very good reason for associating the patel with the panchayats.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud said the patel could not be removed when once he has become a member of the panchayat. The patel is amenable to the discipline of the revenue officers, and if it is found that he is in any way working against the panchayat he can be controlled or even dismissed. The danger of his doing serious wrong is only a slight danger, and it is nothing compared to the disadvantage that would result if he were to oppose the working of the panchayat, because he has not been put on it.

With regard to the matter of judicial functions for the panchayats, it seems to me that it is not worthwhile discussing it. The less we say about it the better, because, it is quite impossible to give judicial functions by the present bill. If an amendment is carried that judicial functions should be given to these panchayats the bill must be withdrawn; because the proposal will have to go to the Government of India for their sanction. I myself in the select committee opposed the giving of these functions for the same reason that I wanted the patel on the board. I felt that it was a dangerous thing to give these powers to panchayats. The dominant factor in a village is faction. The Honourable Mr. Kamat said that factions exist in municipalities, but I have never heard it suggested that municipalities as municipalities should be given judicial powers. Although factions may be serious in municipalities they are not absolutely deadly as they are in villages. There is a very strong feeling in villages that nothing should be done which is likely to introduce fresh enmities. That is one of the main reasons why proposals for redistribution of land are opposed so much. Villagers say if redistribution is done they will have fresh quarrels; and when considering this question of redistribution, I have been greatly struck by the fear in the minds of all villagers that further enmities would be created. I ought not to say anything more on this matter, and I hope honourable members will refrain from pressing any amendments which would seek to add to the present bill sections giving judicial functions to the panchayats.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Sir,—I am quite content with the amount of support which this bill has elicited from honourable members. There has been some criticism, which is inevitable when we are considering such a progressive measure of local self-government. But on the whole, I think, I have no reason to be dissatisfied with the debate which has taken place, and I appreciate the manner in which honourable members have taken part in the discussion on the second reading.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[5TH AUGUST 1920.] [Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.]

I hope the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai, and the Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud who supported him, are satisfied that so far as non-official members of this Council are concerned they prefer adult suffrage to a panchayat constituted on the principle of election by tax-payers and Government nomination. I think that point has been made clear in the debate. The majority of non-official members prefer not to have any nomination on these panchayats, and I cordially share their sentiments. When we are introducing a measure of this character putting these panchayats on an advanced democratic footing, the principle of nomination is out of place. I would ask the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai to remember that if his idea appealed to the Council, namely, that the panchayats should consist of four-fifth elected and one-fifth nominated members, the patel will be the first who will be nominated. In any case he will not have to seek election. I ask honourable members to consider whether that is in any way a desirable thing. I hope that the frame work of the bill so far as this point is concerned will receive almost unanimous support of honourable members, and they will agree that we should make a beginning in the panchayats of doing away with the principle of nomination.

The second point which the Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai made was that he would prefer a vote to be given on the principle of property qualification and not on the principle of adult suffrage. He said that there may be a family consisting of a father and four adult sons and that under adult male suffrage they will get five votes which will in reality be one vote, as they will all vote together for the same candidate. If that is a fact then the whole case for women suffrage fails, because while there is some remote chance of grown up adult sons not seeing eye to eye with their father, there can be none so far as women are concerned. Having regard to the enlightenment which villages have reached, women will vote as ordered by their husbands or their fathers or brothers. I hope the honourable member now realizes the effect of the measures he advocates.

It was said, I believe, by the Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud and the Honourable Mr. Pandurang Desai, that panchayats are understood to mean settlement of disputes. I admit that. I have quite a clear conception of what we Indians understand by the word 'panch' But I ask them to consider one thing. There is nothing in the bill once a panchayat is constituted to prevent the villagers referring to the panchayats any disputes between them. If the panchayat is agreeable to adjudicate disputes referred to it on the voluntary basis, there is nothing to prevent them doing so. This bill does not propose to compel the villagers to submit their disputes to the village panchayat. Voluntary submission of disputes is open to them. Compulsion at the present stage is out of the question.

It must be pointed out that while voluntary reference to the panchayats for the settlement of disputes would result in the enforcement of the awards of the panchayats by themselves, compulsory reference under legislative enactments will mean that Government officers will be called upon to enforce the decrees. To ask for these powers at the initial stage, when the panchayats have had no previous experience, is, in my opinion, going too far. The Honourable Mr. Seddon has given a complete answer to the plea put forward by the Honourable Mr. Kamat that though there are factions in municipal towns there are municipal councils there. The same thing is being done in villages. The panchayats are going to be given certain powers, but for the same kind of work which the municipalities are now doing. The municipalities are discharging municipal duties in municipal towns in spite of the factions. So will the panchayats do in spite of the factions. Municipalities have no civil and criminal powers given to them, and the same are not at present being conceded to the panchayats. The analogy, therefore, of factions in municipal towns and in villages does not apply so far as the concession of judicial functions is concerned.

The Honourable Mr. Upasani said that the patel, the kulkarni and the village accountant are very influential people in villagesand that the patel being ex-officio, the other two will be elected by the villagers, and that therefore,there will be a majority of these officials in the constitution of a panchayat if it is to consist of five. I do not know whether that will be actually the case, but the act provides a remedy for it and that remedy is in the hands of a local body, not in the hands of the revenue officers of Government. The district local board is not bound to restrict the number of members of a panchayat to five, but immediately they find that the majority of a panchayat consist of officials or that the people of the villages are not fully represented, they can raise the number of members to ten or even twenty if they like, so that these men, the patel, the kulkarni and the village accountant, may be in a hopeless minority. That is a complete answer to any fear that these elections will not produce the right kind of men. But, after all, we have got to remember that adult male suffrage is an educational measure, which brings home to these people the power of the vote. It may be that at the commencement they may not realize the importance of this vote, but they will be educated within a reasonably short time to realize the importance of the vote and then to exercise it in the best interests of their villages. We are providing for the first time the right of vote to the villagers, and that ought to serve as a great educative influence in their future discharge of public duties. From that point of view alone I ask honourable members to agree to the adult suffrage as giving political education to the largest number of people who will be enfranchised under this bill.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

Considerable discussion has taken place in regard to the patel being an ex-officio member. Honourable members cannot have forgotten that when district local boards and district municipalities were constituted, Government retained in their hands the power of nominating half the number of municipal councillors and local board members. That was only with the object of making available to these local bodies in the initial stages of their work sufficient administrative experience to enable them to go on and to reach a stage when they can stand on their own legs independently. We started with half the number of elected members and have now gone up to two-thirds. It is proposed to go up to even four-fifths under the amended legislation which the ministers will place before you. These are the stages in which gradually the official or the nominated element is taken away and local bodies are made really democratic. In order to meet the wishes of non official members to a considerable extent this bill has been amended by the select committee. As I pointed out to the Council in my opening speech and as has been so well pointed out by the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe to-day, the clause as now amended provides that the village panchayats may be constituted in those villages where there are no patels on the wholly elected principle. Though Government realize that it is rather in the nature of a gamble—I use the Honourable Mr. Kamat's own word—to take the risk by having a few panchayats wholly elected, they are prepared to do so to that limited extent. Now, I ask the Honourable Mr. Kamat to realize that gambling, as everything else, has got its stages and degrees. While it is wrong to do so, a man may gamble to an extent which will not hurt him. It is hardly logical to argue from that, that because he gambles to an extent he can easily afford, that therefore he should gamble recklessly to the extent of ruining himself. That is not a kind of gamble which any sane man would engage in. We are prepared, in order to meet the wishes of non-official members, to take a little risk in a few villages by having wholly elected panchayats. The experience of the patels on the whole will be of such material assistance that their presence on the panchayats is necessary and they must be retained at present as ex-officio members. The Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud's point that the patel will be irremovable has been effectively answered by the Honourable Mr. Seddon, and I do not think I need dilate further upon it. In regard to some form of civil and criminal jurisdiction it must be remembered that the bill as it stands does give the panchayats the power of punishment in regard to the breach of the by-laws. It remains to be seen how the panchayats exercise these powers. I may point out that the municipalities have no power themselves to award punishment for a breach of their by-laws, while the panchayats are being given that power, and it will be for the public and Government to watch the manner in which these functions are being discharged by them, before a claim can be put forward that the liberties of the villagers should be entrusted to their sweet mercy. I ask honourable members to realize that this is a measure of very far-reaching importance, not only from the view of democratic progress, but in the every day life of the villagers. I think it would be hardly right to make experiments which would adversely affect the every day life of the villagers, and Government and honourable members of this Council are, in my opinion, bound to see that nothing is done which would injure the every day life of the villagers even by those whom they may elect. It is a measure which does not merely lay down the principles of a very substantial democratic advance, but it provides certain safeguards in the interests of the villagers themselves. Once this measure has been in force for some time it will be for the villagers to demand—and in the enlarged councils they will have their direct representatives—what further progress they want, and the Legislative Council will, I am sure, respond to the demands of the villagers for additional powers after they have had some experience of the working of these institutions.

I do not propose, Mr. President, to detain the Council any further. I again repeat that I am quite satisfied with the amount of support that the bill has elicited from honourable members, and I wish to repeat what I said in my opening speech that this bill is based on a special structure and there cannot be any admixture in it. There are two different forms in which panchayats can be constituted, the one on the lines that we have embodied in this bill and the other on the lines which the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai has advocated. I do hope that honourable members will accept the bill as it is, and give it a chance of working with a view to gaining experience of the manner in which the villagers elected to the panchayats work it, and also as to what the villagers who have got to submit to the decisions of the panchayats feel about it. When that experience is available, further progress can easily be made.

Bill read a second time. The motion for the second reading of the bill was then put to the vote and carried.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[5TH AUGUST 1920] [Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola; the Vice-President; the President; Mr. G. K. Parekh; Mr. S. B. Upasani.]

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Sir,—I now propose that the bill be read clause by clause.

Bill read clause by clause.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Clauses. Clause 1, the Honourable Mr. Parekh.

"At the end of sub-clause 2, substitute a comma for the full stop and add the following :—'but it does not apply to alienated villages or to villages held on Talukdari or Khoti tenures'."

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh:—Mr. President,—As regards the amendment which stands in my name, I would ask that the consideration of this amendment be put off till after the amendments Nos. 24 and 25 have been considered, because under certain circumstances I may not have to press this amendment at all. Therefore, I should ask that the consideration of this amendment be put off till after amendments Nos. 24 and 25 have been considered.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—I understand the position of the honourable member to be that if amendments Nos. 24 and 25 are approved by this Council, then he will withdraw amendment No. 2, which stands in his name, and therefore he would like to postpone consideration of his amendment till amendments Nos. 24 and 25 are taken up. I agree.

(At this stage His Excellency the President resumed the chair).

His Excellency the President:—Clause 2 (a).

"After the word 'area' in line two add 'with a population not exceeding one thousand which is not constituted a municipal or notified area and any local area with a population of less than one thousand which may be'."

The Honourable Mr. Upasani.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—May it please your Excellency.—If the amendment which I propose is accepted, the clause will read as follows :—

(a) The word "village" means any local area with a population not exceeding one thousand which is not constituted a municipal or notified area and any local area with a population of less than one thousand which may be duly declared to be a village for the purposes of this act.

What I mean to propose is that ordinarily villages with a population of one thousand and over should have these village panchayats, and in the case of small villages, it may be left to the discretion of the Collector and the district local board to have them constituted or not.

Now, I have already pointed out in my speech on the second reading, that the object of the village panchayats, as stated in the extracts I read to the Council, is to give training in self-government to people in the rural areas, and it is, therefore, not only desirable but necessary that these panchayats should be introduced in the rural areas as extensively as possible. At present, so far as urban areas are concerned, we have municipalities in only 157 towns. They do not cover the rural area. So far as local boards are also concerned, they too are confined to the taluka headquarters and the district headquarters and do not serve as training grounds for the villagers in rural areas. The panchayats are meant to serve these areas. The honourable mover very rightly and correctly put it that our object in starting these panchayats is to train the village people, and to make them realize the power of the vote and their responsibilities, with regard to the further rights that are proposed to be given in local self-government. Now, under the Reforms Scheme, the right to vote not only for the local councils but for the Imperial Legislative Assembly and even the Council of State is given to all those who hold the required qualification for electors whether they live in towns or villages, without any population limit, and if those of them who reside in rural areas are to be trained, I think, it is desirable that the village panchayats should be as widely established in these rural areas as may be possible. The village should therefore be taken as the proper unit for them, and at least one with a population of 1,000 and over.

In 1908, Lord Morley as Secretary of State for India, in forwarding his reform despatch, said :—

"Your Excellency will recall that the Resolution (of the Government of India issued in 1882), from which I have quoted, treats the subdivision, Taluka or Tahasil as the smallest administrative unit. It is a question whether it would not be a wise policy to go further. The village in India (generally) has been the fundamental and indestructible unit of the social system surviving the downfall of dynasty after dynasty. I desire your Excellency in Council to consider the best way of carrying out a policy that would make the village the starting point of public life in India."

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[Mr. S. B. Upasani ; Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola ; the President ; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai.] [5TH AUGUST 1920.]

That is said of every village and we have in all not less than 26,253 villages in our Presidency, but my proposal is for the present to give the panchayats to only villages with a population of one thousand and over and these number only 2,345. It may be said that these villages will not be able to exercise the functions and perform the duties that are to be laid upon the panchayats. I think they will cut their coat according to their cloth, and with needful help from Government and the local boards, there will be no difficulty in their discharging their duties, and this will prepare them for the training which it is desired they should have for the higher responsibilities under the Reforms Scheme. With these few words, I move my amendment and trust that it will commend itself to the Council.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Your Excellency,—I do not think that the amendment which the Honourable Mr. Upasani has placed before the Council will be acceptable to honourable members. What does the amendment mean ? If I understand him correctly, it means that village panchayats shall at once be constituted in every village with a population of one thousand and over, and that they may be extended to villages with a smaller population. I hope I have correctly interpreted his meaning.

Now, I would ask honourable members to consider whether it is at all right for the legislature to order at once that village panchayats shall be constituted immediately, in all villages with a population of one thousand and over. The framework of the bill is that no panchayat shall be constituted, unless the Commissioner has had reports from the Collector and the district local board, and the local conditions have been examined. Surely, that is a far better way than laying down by statute that in all villages with a population of one thousand and over panchayats shall be forthwith constituted. I hope the Council will reject the amendment.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani :— Your Excellency,—In the bill, as it stands, nothing is left to the discretion of the villages. It is not left to their self-determination whether to have or not to have a panchayat. It is left to the discretion of the Collector and the district local board.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola :—The district local board will do what the villagers want.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani :—That is not certain. Even if the villagers desire to have a panchayat there will be nothing to prevent the Collector and the district local board refusing their request or from establishing one even if the people may not want it. If in the case of the villages proposed by me, the villagers be unwilling to have a panchayat, they will have an opportunity of urging their objections and if they appeal to the Commissioner he will under clause 43 of the bill have power to cancel the panchayat. If villages with a population of one thousand and over are not considered as deserving of the benefit of the training to be given through the panchayat, I do not know what use there will be in extending the franchise to vote for the seats in the Council and the Legislative Assembly and the Council of State to qualified voters in every village, irrespective of population.

As to other difficulties apprehended by the honourable mover of the bill I do not see that they are in any way serious so as to require particular notice. Therefore, I think the amendment should be accepted.

The amendment was put to the vote and lost.

Clause 2 was then put to the vote and carried.

Clauses 3 and 4 were then severally put to the vote and carried.

His Excellency the President :—Clause 5.

"Substitute the following for the present clause:—'The Panchayat shall be wholly elected.'"

The Honourable Rao Saheb Desai.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai :—Your Excellency,—The whole difficulty is with reference to making the patel of the village a fixture on the panchayat. If we give him the security of his seat as an ex-officio member of the panchayat, he will be more mischievous than if he came through the door of election. The position is this: some villages belong to talukdars, some to inamdars and khots, and some are khalsa villages. Now, let the talukdar, the inamdar, the khot, as well as the police patel come through the door of election on the panchayat, if they wish to do so. In that case, they will be amenable to the public opinion of the village. There is no sufficient data before the Council as to the number of villages where there are patels, and as to the number where there are no patels. I had asked Government a question regarding the number of villages per district in which the offices of police and revenue patels are combined

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[5TH AUGUST 1920.] [Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah; Sir G. Carmichael; Mr. D. V. Belvi; G. K. Parekh.] in one person and those in which they are held separately, and the number of villages per district in which a single family hereditarily holds the offices of police and revenue patels. The answer of Government is, that the information required cannot be obtained except at the expense of an amount of labour which, in the opinion of Government, is not justified. I think that if Government in the Revenue Department cannot supply or gather this information, we are being asked to embark upon a measure without proper information.

The position is this. In Sind there are no patels. That is what the Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein told us, and the other members.....

The Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah :—One or two talukas may have patels, but in the rest of Sind there are none.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai :—Consequently, honourable members from Sind are very secure, because they know that wherever a panchayat may be constituted in Sind, there will be no difficulty to them about the police patel and his wiles or wickedness. Now, in the Deccan as well as in Gujarat, there may be small villages which would hardly come under the operation of the Village Panchayat Bill, which have not got patels. Consequently, they do not count for anything. But villages which do count for something have patels.....

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael :—I believe that in every village in the Presidency proper, a police patel has been appointed. In some there are no revenue patels.

The Honourable Mr. D. V. Belvi :—Is that the case in Sind?

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael :—I said the Presidency proper. With regard to Sind, what the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai said is correct, but in the Presidency proper for every village there is a police patel appointed by the District Magistrate.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai :—Every large village does contain the police patel, and he is also the revenue patel, and in some cases there are separate revenue patels. According to the clause in the bill, it is the revenue patel who is sought to be put in. Wherever there is a revenue patel, he is to be an ex-officio member. But there may be many villages in which the offices of the police and the revenue patel are combined. So far as Gujarat is concerned—and honourable members who have served in Gujarat will bear me out—there are patidari, inamdari and bhagdari villages. The patel always belongs to the class of patidars who form a strong community. People who live in the villages are called the vashti. There he is the boss. The position in the Deccan is not the same as in Gujarat. Consequently those who are not acquainted with the conditions of the power of the patel in the Gujarat villages may think lightly of my objection. But those who know the conditions would certainly realize that in a Gujarat patidari village, if a patel is secure of his seat on the village panchayat, it would be a serious block to the success of the village panchayat, and the only way to put him on his good behaviour is to make the panchayat wholly elective. If he knows that he has to find a seat on the panchayat only through the door of election, he will be amenable to the opinion of his neighbours. Therefore, I have moved this amendment to clause 5 to the effect that the panchayats shall be wholly elective.

The Honourable Mr. Seddon has said that if you do not take the patel in and keep him out, he would be troublesome. But if the panchayats are made wholly elective, he will have to find his way to the panchayat through the door of election, and instead of being troublesome he will be more amenable and helpful to the cause of village panchayats. But if you make him secure without the power of removing him, and if he is refractory, you are creating a very difficult situation; and until a fresh amendment is undertaken the refractory patel would not be removed. Therefore, it would be much better to make the village panchayat wholly elective and to let the inamdar, the talukdar or the khot find his way to the panchayat through the door of election.

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh :—Your Excellency,—I much regret that I have to oppose my friend the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai's amendment. If the Council wishes that the panchayat elections should not be a mere farce but real elections, and that the electors should give their votes for the persons whom they consider to be the best to protect the village interests, I think the patel should not be allowed to stand for election. My friend the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai has already told you of the large amount of influence that the patel in Gujarat enjoys, and I believe he enjoys the same influence everywhere else. Now, which of the ordinary villagers would think of displeasing the patel by voting against him? I am, therefore, of opinion that if you require the patel to go in for election, you will make the elections a mere farce. In order to keep elections quite free, it is necessary that the patel should not be required to seek election. Again the patel who has so much influence and who has the command of the village servants should not be excluded from the village panchayat. Under these circumstances, there is no other alternative but to make the patel an ex-officio member of the panchayat. I, therefore, oppose this amendment.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[Mr. G. K. Parekh; the President; Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud; Mr. P. A. Desai.] [5TH AUGUST 1920.]

His Excellency the President :—The Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud has a similar amendment.

Omit paragraphs 1 and 2 and the words "save as aforesaid" at the beginning of paragraph 3.

If the honourable member wishes to speak on it, perhaps he will do so now.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud :—Your Excellency,—Since my amendment is of the same character as that moved by the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai, I beg to be permitted to speak on it now. This amendment, I consider, is a very important one, and I was sorry to see my friend the Honourable Mr. Gokuldas Parekh opposing my friend the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai's amendment. However, I think that if he gives this question sufficient consideration, it will be possible to persuade him that the view he holds is not a correct one.

Now, in the first place, the Honourable Member in Charge of the bill relied upon the arguments advanced by the Honourable Mr. Seddon in support of the clause which retains the patel as an ex-officio member on the panchayat. The Honourable Mr. Seddon advanced the arguments that the village servants were accustomed to obey the patel and it was necessary to have him on the board to utilize their services and that a panchayat would not be able to carry on its work if he were kept out. The select committee refused to put in the police patel as an ex-officio member, and they have now put in the revenue patel who is not a very important man. The police patel is the most influential man in the village, and is also the most troublesome. And since he is recognized to be the most troublesome man, the select committee put in the revenue patel. The revenue patel is not the most important man, and the village servants are not accustomed to obey him to the same extent to which they obey the police patel. Therefore, the arguments of the Honourable Mr. Seddon do not apply to the present case.

Now, in regard to the inconvenience of having the patel as an ex-officio member on the panchayat, I made that clear in my remarks on the second reading. I shall, however, recapitulate some of them, and I shall put it to the Council whether it is right that a man who is so much of an inconvenience should be there. The first difficulty is that he will be a member for life and that no one else can be nominated for him. If he is found unfit, how can he be removed? It has been pointed out that the revenue officers can control him. But can they remove him? No revenue officer has any power to dismiss any patel from his post.

An honourable member:—He may be transferred.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud :—He cannot be transferred and he cannot be removed. He can only be dealt with under the Vatan Act, and that too by Government only, for certain offences enumerated in the Vatan Act. If the panchayat finds that he is remiss, not doing his duties properly, and instead of helping the panchayat he is simply obstructing it, and even if the panchayat brings this matter to the notice of the revenue officers, he cannot be removed. When there is such a difficulty, I do not know why he should be put in at all. Suppose the patel sends in his resignation. There is no authority empowered by this bill to accept it. He still remains an ex-officio member even though he tenders his resignation. Can anybody else be nominated in his place? No. So that we have this one man sitting on the board all his life. It is a hereditary office. Anyone who is the eldest son of a patel can claim the appointment of a revenue patel. The police patel is a nominee of Government. He is chosen from among the people—usually from amongst the patels, but sometimes from the outside public also—as being the most competent man in the village. It is not so in the case of the revenue patel. Even if he is an idiot, he will still be an ex-officio member. There is no provision, sir, in the act which prevents him from being an ex-officio member of the panchayat if he is a criminal or an idiot or anything else. Merely by the demise of his father, the son becomes the revenue patel. Government cannot refuse to make him the revenue patel of the village, though they can refuse to make him the police patel. So this idiot.....

The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai :—An officiating revenue patel cannot be an idiot.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud :—He cannot be a lunatic; he may be an idiot. What I mean to say is that however useless the revenue patel may be, he comes on the panchayat board as an ex-officio member.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[5TH AUGUST 1920.] [The President; Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud; Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; Mr. P. A. Desai.]

His Excellency the President :—Order, order. There are a very large number of amendments still, and I would ask honourable members not to repeat the same arguments over and over again. The Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud has repeated his arguments three or four times now.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud :—I repeated my arguments, sir, just to convince my honourable friend Rao Saheb Desai (laughter).

So there are so many difficulties. I think under these circumstances it is a very important amendment, and I hope, the Council will agree to drop the patel as an ex-officio member and make the panchayat purely elected.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola :—Sir,—I do not propose to detain the Council by repeating what was fully explained on the occasion of the second reading. The Honourable Mr. Gokuldas Parekh has a very extensive knowledge of districts, and the Honourable Mr. Seddon has also an extensive experience of village work. Both these honourable members, one official and the other non-official, have stated that this is a desirable provision. The general principles underlying the bill have already been explained both in my opening speech and in my reply on the second reading. The Honourable Mr. Seddon has stated that the patel can be dismissed. One of the advantages of having a hereditary revenue patel was that revenue officers of Government would not have any power over him except in extreme cases, and that, therefore, there will be no official interference with the panchayat. It must be remembered that the ex-officio patel will be the officiating patel, and if in an extreme case he can be dismissed, another man appointed in his place will automatically become the ex-officio member.

This amendment has already been dealt with fully before, and I do not, therefore, wish to detain the Council any further. I hope the amendment will be rejected.

The amendments were then severally put to the vote and lost.

Clause 5 was then put to the vote and carried.

His Excellency the President :—Clause 6, item No. (7), the Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai.

"Omit sub-clause (a) and re-letter the other sub-clauses."

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai :—Your Excellency,—With reference to this clause my amendment is that sub-clause (a) comprising the words "is a female, or" be omitted.

The previous history of this amendment is that in the select committee we had voted on this and it was decided to omit it. Thereafter the Honourable Member in Charge said the consideration of this should be kept over for a future sitting. Thereafter one of the members of the select committee having absented himself, the voting was the other way, and the clause which in the beginning was agreed upon for being omitted was maintained.

I submit, sir, that there should be no sex bar for a person being a member of a panchayat. You may not give a female a vote but we have got several places in Gujarat where adult females hold a mata and have a voice in the election of the patel; consequently I think that there should be no difficulty in allowing this amendment, so that a woman can be a member of a panchayat though she may not have a vote. There are villages where a woman holds a mata and elects a patel and therefore, I submit, why should she not have a seat on the panchayat. I do not know why should the sex qualification of the members be taken into account.

Under these circumstances I move this amendment.

The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai :—Your Excellency,—I strongly support the amendment. Two years back I had brought a resolution for the removal of a disqualification which is imposed by the Bombay Municipal Act, and my Bombay friends came down upon me in a fury and said that I should try to have the application of that to my own place first and then come to the top. Now here is an enactment, here is a bill which gives an opportunity to me to begin at the bottom. I say we are living now in the twentieth century. We know what women have done in the last war. We know that the education of females is now spreading. Under these circumstances, I cannot understand, why should we retain a disqualification upon the sex. Remove it. It does not mean that you are to appoint every female in the village as a panch. It simply removes the disqualification. Why should there be a disqualification bar? The power of election is in the hands of adult males of the village. If they think that there is a competent woman who can discharge the duties, why should there be this bar ? Why should not an opportunity be given to males to try a competent female on the panchayat ? Why should a competent female be barred because she is a female ? I submit, the election lies in the hands of adult males. It is, therefore, just that if they feel that a competent female is available they should have a right to elect her. Why should we restrain their choice ? To impose such a disqualification in the twentieth century would, I submit, be a slur upon us. I, therefore, submit that we must try to remove this sex disqualification. I appeal to everyone of the honourable members, I appeal to the conscience of all honourable members, to try to remove this disqualification. Although my resolution was passed two years ago, the municipal corporation has not as yet given effect to that resolution. When I moved my resolution on this question of the removal of sex disqualification, I had appealed to His Excellency Lord Willingdon to leave members of Government to vote according to their conscience, and His Excellency was good enough to announce that members of Government are allowed to vote according to their conscience. I submit, your Excellency will do the same thing with regard to this amendment. This is a time when we must give an opportunity to females to learn and train themselves in the first lessons of politics. I, therefore, submit that when there is an opportunity for training our women in the groundwork of politics, why should we not allow them to take advantage of the same. There would not be very serious politics in a village. Then why lose this opportunity ? Panchayats would be the first training ground for females in politics. Suppose there would arise some cases where advice of a female would be most effective. If there is a school in a village and if power is given to the panchayat of the village to control and inspect that school—in a case where there is a school there may be some girls—and if there is a female on the panchayat of that village, she might take more active interest in the welfare of the girls of that school than males do. Why should we in such a case come in the way of the appointment of a female on the panchayat if the villagers like that a female should serve on the panchayat ? Under these circumstances I think that this clause which is pernicious ought to be removed. With these remarks I resume my seat.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[Mr. P. A. Desai; the President; Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud; Mr. G. K. Parekh.] [5TH AUGUST 1920.]

His Excellency the President :—I will take items Nos. (7), (8) and (9) (1) together as they are all similar.

(8) "Omit sub-clause (a)."

(9) (1) Drop the 5th Line "(a) is a female, or" and substitute for the letters (b), (c) and (d) at the commencement of subsequent sub-clauses, (a), (b) and (c) respectively.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud, item No. (8).

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud:—Your Excellency,—My amendment is of the same nature as that moved by my honourable friend, Rao Saheb Desai. I also have strongly urged that this disqualification should be removed and that women should have an opportunity of at least sometimes seeing that some of their own sex act as panch in some villages. I know of certain villages where the wife of the inamdar is a capable woman. Such a woman may be taken on the panch. It is quite possible that in that village she would be preferred and would be allowed to become a panch. In that case it would be an example to other women in that locality and her example may perhaps make them take the necessary pains to fit themselves for such offices. I submit that if at this stage we remove the bar we may find some women fit and ready in some villages to serve on the panchayat. I can think of several cases where competent women would be willing to take up this office and carry out its duties efficiently. In such cases I do not know why the legislature should put any bar which would prevent them altogether from taking any interest in their village panchayat. I submit, sir, that I commend this amendment to the acceptance of this Council.

His Excellency the President :—Item No. (9) (1). The Honourable Mr. Parekh.

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh :—Your Excellency,—Item No. (9) (1) which stands in my name, is similar to the amendments moved by my honourable friends who preceded me. What I say in reference to this amendment is this. So far as the power of voting is concerned, I should think it would be exceedingly hard if women who have talents or education are not given the power of voting. The most ignorant man even is to be given the franchise, and, I think, it would be very hard if women, who manage estates, who represent minors and who are holders of property in their own interest, are deprived of the right of voting. Under these circumstances, I think, it would be very hard if only male population should have the right of voting and if females, who are sometimes the holders of large property, have not the privilege of voting.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[5TH AUGUST 1920.] [Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah; Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.]

The Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah :—Your Excellency,—The Honourable Mr. Pandurang Desai drew the attention of the Council to the resolution regarding the removal of sex disqualification in connection with the election to the municipal corporation of the city of Bombay which he had moved in this Council some time ago. But my honourable friend should bear in mind that the conditions of the city of Bombay are quite different from the villages in which the panchayats according to this bill would be introduced. There are various faculties in the city of Bombay from which women can be returned to the municipal corporation, but taking the case of Bombay as it is, I do not think any female candidate has a chance of being returned to the corporation.

As regards villages, I do not think there are sufficiently educated women there who could be returned by the males to the panchayats even if we remove this sex bar. In some mofussil places we find that women even do not go for ordinary voting purposes in connection with the municipal elections.

Another point urged by my honourable friend is that supposing that there is a girls-school in a village the services of a female on the panchayat would be useful. But we have got a provision in the Municipal Act that a female can be co-opted on a municipal committee, and if we do not find women being co-opted on a municipal schools committee in towns, there are very little chances of getting females in a village to come on the panchayats. So, I think, even if the sex bar is removed, no female would be returned on the panchayats.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola :—Mr. President,—This point has been fully debated on the occasion of the second reading. I do not see that any new argument has been brought forward in support of the amendment. I have already pointed out that the power of removing sex disqualification has been conceded by the Joint Committee of the Houses of Parliament to the new councils, and that immediately the reformed councils meet and pass a resolution in favour of removing sex disqualification for membership, such disqualification embodied in all legislative enactments such as municipal acts, District Local Board Act, the Panchayats' Act, etc., will be automatically removed. On the contrary, if the reformed councils come to the conclusion that sex disqualification should remain, then the present provisions will continue to operate. I hope it will be recognized that there must be uniformity in this respect in all local self-government legislation. As sex disqualification exists in all other local self-government legislation it will have to remain in this bill till the new councils decide the point. I would further ask whether it is right that this Council should at this stage within a few months of the introduction of reforms raise this question on the present occasion. After all, by putting this sex disqualification in this bill, we are enacting a local self-government measure strictly on the same lines as other local self-government legislation in force, and that is to my mind a very strong reason why no departure should be made in this case. The Honourable Mr. Pandurang Desai urged that he was criticised when he brought forward his resolution on the question of removing sex disqualification in the Bombay municipal corporation, and he wants now to justify his attitude as against that criticism on the ground that he is supporting the removal of sex disqualification in this bill. May I be allowed to point out to him that the criticism was that he did not begin at home, that he did not begin with his own Bijapur municipality, of which he was the president. He could have acted under the District Municipal Act which empowers district municipalities to co-opt ladies as members of the schools committee. That was the criticism. Whether it was justified or not, it is not my intention to discuss, but it can be said that the Honourable Mr. Pandurang Desai advocates the removal of sex disqualification at the top in the case of the Bombay municipality, wants to remove it at the bottom in the case of panchayats, but says nothing of the district municipalities, with which he is directly concerned. However, that is beside the question. If, as the Honourable Mr. Desai says, a rare specimen of a woman having studied up to the seventh standard is to be found in the villages, there must be many more such in district towns and cities. There the power already exists to co-opt ladies. It would have largely strengthened the hands of the Honourable Mr. Desai if he had acted on it by co-opting ladies on the committee of his own municipality and then asked every one else to follow his example. Personally I should have liked to accept a proposal to remove sex disqualification altogether, but that is not the issue which honourable members have to consider on this occasion. Immediately the reformed councils are formed, they will deal with the question of sex disqualification, and their view will prevail.

In conclusion I should like to draw attention to the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai's minute of dissent. In paragraph 2, in which he advocates the passing of the amendment which is now under consideration, he says :

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola ; Rao Saheb H.D. Desai ; Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud ; the President ; Mr. G. K. Parekh.] [5TH AUGUST 1920.]

" At several places there are females who hold the mata. They have a voice in the election of the patel ; and they often act as patels through their deputies. "

Now I want honourable members to note that the honourable mover of this amendment points to some instances in which ladies have a voice in the election of the patel and others in which ladies act as patels through their deputies. I wonder whether he advocates that ladies should be elected to the panchayats and that they should be allowed to act through their deputies. Is that his idea ? Let us be practical ; let us face the problem as we find it and restrain our impatience for about three or four months, till the new councils declare their decision on this point. If their decision is against the removal of the sex disqualification, the provision will remain. If they are in favour of its removal, this clause will automatically disappear by a new act which will have to be passed removing sex disqualification from all local self-government legislation. By this means sex disqualification will be removed not at the top, not at the bottom but throughout. That is a perfectly clear and logical position to take up. I hope honourable members will reject the amendment.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai :—Your Excellency,—I am not open to the charge which the Honourable Member in Charge made against my honourable friend Mr. Pandurang Desai, because in Ahmedabad we have co-opted two lady graduates on the schools committee, and at least in our part of the Presidency there is no lack to take advantage of the opportunities offered by the Municipal Act as it exists at present. If the Municipal Act and the District Local Board Act had come on the anvil during this year, as it was originally expected, there would have been an opportunity of introducing amendments of this character there. After the Honourable Mr. Pandurang Desai's resolution about removing the sex bar, this is the first opportunity where we are enacting a new measure in the matter of local self-government, and there is no reason why this Council should not pronounce upon the removal of sex bar from our local bodies and why it should wait for a new body to come into existence. We are called upon to enact this act, not the Ministers, and consequently it is open to us to remove the sex bar if there are sufficient grounds urged for not maintaining it. I do not think we are losing anything by removing the sex bar. It may be that some of our Mahomedan friends may not be in a position, owing to any special circumstances, to take advantage of the removal of this bar, or to benefit to the same extent as some other communities. But that is no reason why you should maintain it. If the bar is removed, they will be able to make as much use of it as possible ; otherwise it does not take away anything from you. Therefore, in a new measure which is to form the adminstrative unit of our local self-government administration, I think, it is very right that we should remove the sex bar and it is on that account that I moved this amendment, and I hope that the Council will be prepared to give the females the power to vote as voters and in any case that they will remove the bar to membership of the panchayats.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud :—Your Excellency,—Have I got the right of reply ?

His Excellency the President :—Only the mover of an amendment has got the right of reply. The Honourable Rao Saheb Desai has had an opportunity of a reply.

Amendments Nos. 7, 8 and 9 (1) were then put to the vote and lost.

His Excellency the President :—Amendment No. 9 (2). The Honourable Mr. Parekh.

" Drop sub-clause (e) and substitute for the letters (f), (g) and (h) at the commencement of subsequent sub-clauses, letters (d), (e) and (f) respectively.

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh :—Your Excellency,—I move the amendment which stands in my name and I commend it to the acceptance of the Council.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola :—Your Excellency,—This amendment deals with clause (e) of section 6 which reads as follows :—

" has been permanently debarred from practising as a legal practitioner by order of any competent authority. "

The history of the case is that in all legislation of this character a legal practitioner who has been permanently debarred from practising is permanently disqualified. Honourable members are a ware that no legal practitioner can be debarred without a judicial enquiry at which he gets ample opportunity of putting forward his defence. No one can be disbarred by executive action. As a matter of fact, in similar legislation permanent disqualification is provided against people disbarred. On the select committee I had the advantage of some legal practitioners and

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[5TH AUGUST 1920.] [Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola; Mr. G. K. Parekh; the President; Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai.]

they pressed that this clause should be modified. In response to their request we all agreed to modify this disqualification, and you will observe that a new paragraph has been added to the section reading as follows:—

"A disqualification under clause (d) shall cease on the expiration of five years from the order of whipping or the termination of the period of imprisonment, transportation or security, as the case may be, and a disqualification under clause (e) shall cease on the expiration of five years from the date of the order."

In spite of the permanent disqualification which is now imposed in other similar legislations, in response to the wishes of honourable members of the select committee who belonged to the legal profession, this has been reduced and brought down to five years. It must be a very serious offence when a judicial court disqualifies a legal practitioner for life. Even then the disqualification under this act has been reduced from life to five years only. I thought we had met the honourable members as far as we could be reasonably expected to do. I hope the amendment will be rejected.

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh :—Your Excellency,—I have nothing to say in reply.

The amendment was put to the vote and lost.

Clause 6 was put to the vote and carried.

His Excellency the President :—I will take amendments Nos. 10 and 11 together, as they are almost identical.

Clause 7. Item No. (10). "From line 6, delete the word 'male'."

Item No. (11). "Omit the word 'male' in line 6".

The Honourable Mr. Parekh.

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh :—Your Excellency,—My remarks on this amendment will be a repetition of what I had to say on my previous amendment. I do not, therefore, wish to press the amendment.

His Excellency the President :—The motion before the Council is that in line 6 of clause 7 of the bill the word 'male' be omitted.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud :—Your Excellency,—

His Excellency the President :—I gave the honourable member an opportunity of getting up and making a speech. He has not taken advantage of it.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud :—I do not want to make a speech. I only wish to point out that the Honourable Mr. Parekh has withdrawn his amendment.

His Excellency the President :—He has not asked my permission to do so.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud :—Shall I ask, sir, the Honourable Mr. Parekh whether he has withdrawn his amendment or not?

His Excellency the President :—If the honourable member wishes to ascertain points of order, he must refer to me, and wait for a reply.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud :—Your Excellency,—There is only one thing I have to say on this amendment. The Honourable Mr. Curtis told us yesterday that the age of chivalry had gone. I hope the Council will show that it has not yet gone.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola :—Your Excellency,—This amendment need lead to no discussion. The principle was decided on clause 6. Since the Council has decided that sex disqualification is to remain in clause 6, adult suffrage cannot be accepted. I hope the Council will therefore reject the amendment.

Amendments Nos. 10 and 11 were put to the vote and lost.

His Excellency the President :—Clause 7, item No (12).

"Insert the following words after the word 'residents' in the clause :—

'and by every adult female resident who either holds immovable property in her own right or has passed the vernacular fourth standard'."

The Honourable Rao Saheb Desai.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai :—Your Excellency,—My object in moving this amendment is this. At present women holding certain property enjoy votes in the local board area; but according to the present bill they would lose their votes. Consequently, it was suggested that the clause be amended by putting in a property qualification such as is proposed, and also a literacy qualification. I think that it is not inconsistent with the foregoing amendment.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[Sheikh Ghulam Husssein Hidayatallah; Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola; the President; Mr. B. S. Kamat; Mr. R. P. Paranjpye; Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole.] [5TH AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah :—Your Excellency,—The principle of the Panchayat Bill is to give adult male suffrage. My honourable friends, in addition to that principle, want to introduce other principles, namely, property and literacy qualification. That amounts to saying that the Panchayat Bill should be governed by three principles. I would like to ask whether it will not be invidious to lay down that all the male adults should have a vote, whether they possess any movable property or not, but that the females only when they possess any property. Further, why should we lay down that males, whether they are literate or not, should have the vote, but that females may vote only when they have passed a certain educational test ? The principle that has been accepted is that of property or other tax in the case of local boards, but adult male suffrage has been accepted in the case of panchayats. With these remarks, I oppose the amendment.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Your Excellency,—This point has been amply debated at the time of the first and second readings. The principle that there should be no differentiation is perfectly sound and logical, but as I have already pointed out the proposal makes a mixture in the framework of the bill, and cannot be accepted. The bill provides for adult male suffrage, and males alone will be qualified to be elected. We could not possibly have this mixture. I hope the Council will reject the amendment.

The amendment was put to the vote and lost.

Clauses 7 to 11 were then severally put to the vote and carried.

His Excellency the President :—Clause 12 (1), item No. (13). The Honourable Mr. Kamat.

"After the words 'one of themselves' insert the words 'excepting the ex-officio member'."

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat :—Your Excellency,—The object of this amendment is to preclude the ex-officio member, that is, the patel, from becoming the sar-panch of the panchayat. We have been told that the framework of the bill is based on the principle that the panchayat should be, as far as possible, wholly elected, that is to say, the administration should be in the hands of the non-official members. It is just conceivable, if the wording of clause 12, sub-clause (1), stands as it is, that the members of the panchayat may elect the patel as their sar-panch. The patel, either on account of his active or his passive influence may so contrive that the members should elect him as the sar-panch. I submit that the patel should not be the sar-panch, and I expect Government also do not contemplate that the executive power of the panchayat should fall, in any case, into the hands of the patel. Taking the analogy of municipal comm ttees, there are cases where it does happen in districts or talukas that the mamlatdar, owing to his influence though not by active canvassing, is elected the chairman of the particular committee, and petitions pour in to Government against such a procedure. That shows the trend of feeling on the point, and I want to make it impossible that the patel should be the sar-panch of a panchayat. I therefore hope that the Council will accept my amendment.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye :—Your Excellency,—I wish to support this very small amendment of my friend the Honourable Mr. Kamat, because if the Council accepts this amendment, it will not interfere in any way with the framework of the bill. On the other hand, just as in the case of inamdars or talukdars, I want the free, independent opinion of the village to have its full scope, so also I think it would be unwise to allow the patel, who is put in a position of official responsibility, to canvass to get elected as sar-panch. I think this Council has accepted one or two resolutions recommending that officials should not stand as candidates for the presidentships or vice-presidentships of local bodies. I think the Honourable Mr. Kamat's amendment follows the same line of policy. Cases, as he says, have occurred in which it has been almost impossible for an independent man to resist certainly the indirect, and very often the direct, influence of an official in competing for the presidentship of a local body. I therefore hope that honourable members will see their way to support this amendment.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole :—Your Excellency,—I also support this amendment that has been brought forward by the Honourable Mr. Kamat. The patel on this side of the Presidency is not such an objectionable individual as he is made out to be in Gujarat. From what I have heard from the Honourable Mr. Parekh and the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai, it seems to me that the patel in Gujarat is a far different individual. I understand that he is mischievous, and as sar-panch, he will have all the executive and spending powers of the panchayat. I think such an objectionable individual should not be in a position to take upon himself all the executive functions of the panchayat, as he will do in case he is appointed as sar-panch. Though in the Deccan I do not object to it, it is necessary in Gujarat to keep the patel out of the office of sar-panch. I, therefore, think that the Council will do well to accept the amendment that has been proposed by the Honourable Mr. Kamat.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[5TH AUGUST 1920.] [Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole; Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola; Mr. B. S. Kamat.]

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola :—Your Excellency,—My objection to the amendment which has been proposed by the Honourable Mr. Kamat is that it creates differentiation, amongst members of the panchayat. May I ask what has been the history of district local boards ? Is it not a fact that up to very recently there were official presidents in the case of all district local boards ? Is it not a fact that in almost all taluka local boards Government officers were appointed presidents ? It has got to be remembered that the president, or the chairman, or the sar-panch, by whatever name you may call him, will be, as the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole has pointed out, the executive officer of the panchayat, and there appears no reason why the legislature should by statute debar the patel from being elected as sar-panch by the votes of elected panchas. If it is apprehended that in a small council, consisting of five, the patel may have his own way by the help of only two votes, the remedy is in the hands of the local body. The district local board may constitute all panchayats with not less than ten members. If they can be constituted with a larger number of members there appears no reason why the legislature should by statute debar a member of a panchayat, whether ex-officio or elected, from being elected as the sar-panch. It must be obvious that, in course of time, when panchayats become wholly elected, this question will not arise. I would personally much prefer the panchas electing an elected member as sar-panch. If they thought that the man they proposed to elect would discharge the obligations and duties which are imposed upon him there is nothing to prevent it. I cannot understand the attitude that the panchas are very weak; that they are unfit to discharge the obligations which are imposed upon them under the act, and that the district local boards are incompetent to lay down in special cases that the membership of the panchayat should be sufficiently large to counteract any evil influences of this character. If you say that, you are admitting the weakness of these local self-governing institutions, and therefore want to safeguard it by a statutory bar against the free choice of elected members of the panchayat.

How can that be justified ? From a democratic point of view it is a very retrograde step. I ask honourable members not to interfere with the free choice of the electors and to reject the amendment.

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat :—Your Excellency,—I am not satisfied with the arguments that have been advanced by the Honourable Member in Charge of the bill. In the first place, in the report of the select committee we are told that the presence of this ex-officio member is necessary on the panchayat simply for giving them administrative experience. But this experience they can gain by his being there simply as an ex-officio member, and not necessarily as a sar-panch having all the executive power centred into his own hands. This is just what is likely to happen if my amendment is thrown out. The second argument of the Honourable Member in Charge was that the taluka local boards and district local boards even up to now have official chairmen. Perfectly so. But the trend of public opinion is against them. And now official chairmen are being supplanted by non-official chairmen on some of these boards.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—But after how many years ?

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat :—After a pretty long time no doubt. But when we are entering upon a new era and passing a very democratic and progressive legislation, we would be undertaking a retrograde step if we were to perpetuate an official as the chairman of the panchayat. In my opinion, this is not a democratic step in the real sense but a most undemocratic one.

The amendment was then put to vote and lost, 17 members voting for and 20 against.

The Council divided as follows :—

AYES.	NOES.
The Honourable Mr. Dattatraya Venkatesh Belvi, LL.B.	His Excellency Sir George Ambrose Lloyd, G.C.I.E., D.S.O., Governor of Bombay, President.

Clauses 12 to 14 were then severally put to the vote and carried.

His Excellency the President :—Clause 15. Amendment No. (14).

"Omit the following words in lines 11 and 12 :—

"unless he be an ex-officio member of the panchayat."

The Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai :—May it please your Excellency,—This amendment was based upon the amendment which I previously proposed to make the panchayats wholly elected, and as that has not been accepted, with your Excellency's permission, I beg to withdraw this amendment.

The amendment was by leave withdrawn.

Clauses 15 to 17 were then severally put to the vote and carried.

His Excellency the President :—Clause 18 (1) (c). Amendment No. (15). The Honourable Mr. Kamat.

"In the third line omit the words 'and bridges ;' also in line 7 omit the words 'or bridge.'

Make the consequential change by inserting 'and' after the word 'roads' in line 2."

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat :—Your Excellency,—The object of this small amendment is to take away from the panchayat the responsibility of repairing bridges. Although this clause says that it shall be the duty of the panchayats within the limits of the funds at their disposal to make reasonable provision for the construction, maintenance and repair of minor roads, drains and bridges, still I consider it is much better that the responsibility of repairing bridges should not be thrown on the panchayats which after all are very small bodies financially, and which have not the technical skill and knowledge to carry them out. I, therefore, trust Government will accept this amendment. The rest are consequential changes.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole :—May it please your Excellency,—I do not think there is much point in the amendment that has been placed before the Council by the Honourable Mr. Kamat. In the case of these village panchayats, they will never be entrusted with the construction of new bridges. But, ordinary small repairs, like cement pointing, lime pointing or removing small vegetation may be required for bridges for which it will not be economical that the district local boards should send out their own engineers except say once in a year to see that the repairs have been duly executed. There will be no harm done if power is given to village panchayats to execute the small repairs mentioned. The district local boards will then be saved the necessity of sending out their professional establishment for carrying out petty repairs. I think, therefore, that the amendment need not be pressed and that clause 18 may be allowed to stand part of the bill.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola :—Your Excellency,—I have nothing to add to what the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole has said. He has dealt with the point fully. I might merely draw the attention of the Honourable Mr. Kamat that all these obligatory duties are subject to the words "Within the limts of the funds at the disposal of the panchayats." Under the circumstances, I hope the honourable member will not press his amendment.

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat:—Your Excellency,—I myself alluded to the limitation that all this liability is subject to the funds at the disposal of the panchayat. But regarding what fell from the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole, if he thinks that big repairs will never be entrusted to the village panchayats and that all that they will be called upon to do is cement-pointing or lime-pointing, then the wording of this section should be changed. As it stands, it means that the panchayats are bound to look after even the construction of bridges. I think, therefore, either the wording ought to be changed, or some other additional safeguard introduced. However, if the Council thinks that this is a minor matter, I will not press the amendment.

His Excellency the President :—Does the honourable member withdraw his amendment?

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat :—Yes, sir. I wish to withdraw the amendment.

The amendment was by leave withdrawn.

His Excellency the President :—Clause 18 (1) (f). Amendment No. (16). The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh.

"In sub-clause (1) (f) add before the words 'grazing lands' the word 'village.'"

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh:—May it please your Excellency,—The object of this amendment is to make it clear that the properties which the panchayat has to maintain, and the use of which it has to regulate, are not private properties or private grazing lands but those belonging to the village. I therefore think it is necessary to put in the word "village" before "grazing lands" in clause 18, sub-clause (1) (f). I hope Government will accept my amendment.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael :—Sir, with regard to this small point, I would like to give an instance in the Poona district within my knowledge which will show that the amendment proposed by the Honourable Mr. Parekh might act very disadvantageously for the panchayat. In the Khed taluka, I think, a village as a whole took over a small kuran from the Forest Department and ran it by means of a panchayat of their own. If the word "village" is inserted in this clause 18, it would rule out any such possibility in the future. It seems to me it might work to the disadvantage of the panchayats in certain areas.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola :—Your Excellency,—I should like to draw the honourable member's attention to sub-clause (1) (f) of clause 18 which reads as follows :—

> "It shall be the duty of the panchayat within the limits of the funds at its disposal to make reasonable provision for carrying out the requirements of the village in respect of as many of the following matters as the district local board shall direct, viz. :—
> (f) the maintenance and the regulation of the use of public buildings vesting in the panchayat, grazing lands, tanks and wells (other than tanks and wells used exclusively for irrigation);"

Grazing lands will be governed by sub-clause (1) (f) of clause 18. The obligation imposed is in regard to the requirements of the "village," and that meets the honourable member's points completely. The amendment is therefore superfluous.

The amendment was then put to the vote and lost.

Clauses 18 and 19 were then severally put to the vote and carried.

His Excellency the President :—Clause 20, amendment No. (17).

In sub-clause (d), omit the word "administrative" occurring before the word "duties" and add the words "and functions" after the word "duties".

The Honourable Rao Saheb Desai.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; the President; Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola; Mr. G. K. Parekh; Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe; Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole] [5TH AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai :—Your Excellency,—I may be permitted to withdraw this amendment.

The amendment was by leave withdrawn.

Clause 20 was then put to the vote and carried.

His Excellency the President :—Clause 21, amendment No. 18.

In sub-clause (1) the following words shall be deleted :—

(a) "The Governor in Council or"
(b) "Government or"
(c) "Respectively."

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola :—Your Excellency,—This amendment has become necessary because the Government of India have drawn attention to the fact that all these properties vest in His Majesty and that the Local Governments have no power to alienate any property so vested. The Government of India have asked that this amendment should be introduced in order to make the bill consistent with the existing enactments dealing with properties vesting in His Majesty the King. It has, therefore, become necessary to bring forward this amendment.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai :—Your Excellency,—With reference to this amendment I wish to submit that we are faced with a very ridiculous position. Government tell us you have your panchayats, you find the money, we shall give you nothing, we shall vest no property in the panchayats. That is a very funny position. The Honourable Sir Ibrahim has asked us to accept this bill at any cost, but as for giving anything for running the show for which there was a promise in the select committee, he now chooses to withdraw it. This is the sort of bill that we are going to have, and if this is also the sort of co-operation that we are going to have from Government, then there is an end to any expectation for the success of the measure.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola :—Your Excellency,—I understand that the provincial legislatures have no power to enact anything of this kind. Honourable members will remember that in the select committee it was, I think, the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe, who asked for this provision and I readily agreed to it. I have still no objection to it. So far as the Bombay Government are concerned they are perfectly willing to help the panchayats, but they cannot go beyond statutory limits. It does not mean that Government will not be prepared to do the right thing by the panchayat. If that is the idea in the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai's mind, I would ask him to take it from me that Government will do everything in reason to help the panchayats. This amendment is necessary because the clause as drafted goes beyond the statutory powers of the local legislature.

The amendment was then put to the vote and carried.

Clause 21 was then put to the vote and carried.

Clause 22 was then put to the vote and carried.

His Excellency the President; Clause 23, amendment No. (19).

In line 10 add the words "A written" before the word "order".

The Hodourable Mr. G. K. Parekh.

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh :—Your Excellency,—The object of this amendment is that in the case of any orders which are made for fines, suspensions or dismissal of servants, these official orders should always be in writing, and in order to make it clear I propose to add a word in order to show that the orders should be in writing.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe :—Your Excellency,—I support this amendment, because, we find in the second clause that an appeal has been provided against the order of dismissal, and the appellate Court or the appellate authority must have something to go upon when it is called upon to examine the reasons as to the order given by the panchayat, and it is but quite fair that a person who is fined, suspended or dismissed should know what the reasons were for the infliction of that sentence, and I, therefore, think that the amendment certainly is not only a modest one but that it is really necessary in the interests of persons against whom these orders will be made.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole :—Your Excellency,—I also support this amendment.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[5TH AUGUST 1920.] [Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola; the President; Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud; Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe; Mr. S. B. Upasani.]

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola :—Your Excellency,—I am very glad to accept the amendment as I see the force of it.

The amendment was then put to the vote and carried.

Clause 23 as amended was then put to the vote and carried.

Clause 24 was then put to the vote and carried.

His Excellency the President :—Clause 25, (h), amendment No. (20).

" Add the following at the commencement of the sub-clause :—

' One anna in the rupee of the land revenue of the panchayat village, and.' "

The Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud :—Your Excellency,—The panchayat has been entrusted with several duties and we, therefore, must provide sufficient funds for carrying out these duties. Unless they have sufficient funds at their disposal they will not be able to carry out their duties. Therefore some provision from the village revenue should be made for them to enable them to carry out those duties, and this provision is suggested by me for that purpose, I hope the amendment will be accepted.

(His Excellency the President at this stage withdrew and the Honourable the Vice-President occupied the chair.)

The Honourable Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe :—Sir,—I oppose this amendment on the ground that if this amendment is accepted it reduces the position of the one anna cess to this that every amount which is collected in the shape of local fund cess in a village must go to that village. At present under the Local Fund Act, and under the District Local Board Act, all these sums first come to the district local board. There is another clause in this section which is clause (f); it runs

" sums contributed to the village fund by a district local board ; "

Instead of making it compulsory that every local fund cess collected in that village ought to go to form the fund of that village, this clause (f) is really enough to meet the requirements of the case which my honourable friend, Rao Bahadur Garud, has put forward. Otherwise it would mean that the local board cess which is collected in the village will be appropriated entirely by that village, and nothing would be left to the district local board to carry on other big works in which the particular village is interested directly or indirectly. Therefore I oppose this amendment.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani :—Sir,—I wish to support the amendment. I think the view which the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe has taken is not quite correct. The Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud does not propose that the one anna local fund cess which the people pay on the land revenue should be transferred to the panchayats. What he desires is not that the local cess which people pay on the revenue should be made over to the village panchayats, but that Government itself should pay one anna in the rupee of the land revenue it may receive from the village, and that is necessary, because, we have imposed so many duties under clauses 18 and 20 of the bill on the panchayats which are obligatory duties besides those under clause 19 which are optional. As a matter of fact the local boards with their present very limited resources are not able to provide funds for all these villages for even the obligatory duties. That being the case, it is, I think, necessary that when statutory duties are imposed, definite provision should be made for needful help by Government. When funds are required the panchayats will have to depend upon the sweet will of Government or the district local board. It is much better, therefore, that the definite provision suggested in the amendment should be embodied in the statute. The income would not be very large but only equal to that derived from the one anna local fund cess.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola :—Sir,—I do not think the Honourable Mr. Upasani has appreciated the point which was made by the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe. The point is this. One anna cess which is leviable at present goes to the district local board. It is intended that certain contributions will be made to the panchayat from district local board funds. If it is advocated that the whole of the revenue from the one anna cess should be made over to the panchayat, then the district local boards will find it difficult to discharge their obligatory duties in the benefits of which these villages share. Such a procedure will result in the villages benefiting without paying anything for it. I do not think this can be justified.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[Mr. P. A. Desai; Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud; Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola; the Vice-President; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai.] [5TH AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai :—Does the honourable member mean that this one anna cess means the local fund cess ?

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud :—One anna local cess.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola :—Then I misunderstood him. Such an amendment cannot be moved as it deals with provincial revenues. The Government of India Act lays down that it shall not be allowable to any member of the Legislative Council to introduce without the previous sanction of the Governor any measure affecting public revenues of the province or imposing any charge on those revenues. I thought the honourable member wanted the one anna cess which was now being paid to the district local board to be transferred to the village panchayat. If he wants part of Government land revenue then that is quite out of order.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael) :—Will the Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud explain what is the basis of his amendment ?

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud:—The District Local Board Act has made a certain provision like this, and I wish the same kind of provision to be made in the Village Panchayat Bill.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola :—The one anna cess paid to the District Local Board is additional taxation over and above the Government land revenue. It is not part of the sixteen annas levied by Government. The Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud must know that.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael) :—Will the honourable member explain whether this one anna is an addition to the one anna local fund cess? Is that the intention of this amendment ?

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud :—One anna in addition to the local fund cess. That is what I mean.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—I am compelled to rule that amendment out of order. The Honourable Rao Saheb Desai:

Amendment No. 21 (a) :—

"(a) Add the following as sub-clause (i):—'(i) The proceeds of such incomes as may be assigned to the village fund by any general or special order of the Governor in Council'."

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Mr. President,—With reference to the amendment of clause 25, it will be noticed from sub-clause (h) that the words are.

"Such other sums as may be assigned to the village fund by any general or special order of the Governor in Council."

Now here only the assignment contemplated is for sums assigned. But it may be that Government may assign particular incomes to a particular village by any general or special order, and in such a case Government ought to have the power to make such an assignment. If only sums are assigned, then there will be no incomes, but if certain incomes are assigned, these village panchayats can manage them better than Government officials and may derive better income, and consequently an additional sub-clause has been suggested by me as an amendment, namely:—

"The proceeds of such incomes as may be assigned to the village fund by any general or special order of the Governor in Council."

This is an enabling provision and there should be no objection, because, whenever Government choose or intend to assign any income to a village fund, it ought to be open under the act for them to do so. It does not compel Government or anybody else to make any assignment, but the clause as it stands contemplates that only particular sums could be assigned to the village fund. What I mean is to add a further clause which enables Government whenever in their discretion they choose to do so to assign the proceeds of any incomes to the village fund, so that the incomes may be assigned. And also in addition to clause (h), I suggest that a clause (i) be added so that whenever they decide to assign any incomes, it may be possible for the Government to do so. Under these circumstances Government do not part with anything, but it is simply an enabling provision where you are reciting what may be assigned. So there will be no harm in giving power to Government to assign any incomes.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Mr. President,—I do not know what the special merit of the proposed amendment is. After all, what the panchayats will want will be funds to carry on their administration, and whether these come to them in the shape of cash

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[5TH AUGUST 1920.] [Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; the Vice-President.] or in the shape of incomes is immaterial as far as their administrative duties are concerned. Sub-clause (h) clearly defines what will be credited to the village fund, namely, such other sums as may be assigned to the village fund by any general or special order of the Governor in Council. The question whether in future the contributions from provincial revenues should be by way of assigned incomes or cash grants is a very big problem and can only be dealt with comprehensively under the general principles applying to all local bodies. It cannot be introduced here. All that is material for the success of the panchayats is that they should get from Government sufficient grants for the purpose of carrying out their duties, having regard to other sources which have been provided for them. That is amply provided for by this clause, and I do not think we can, at this stage, enter into the general question as to whether Government contributions to local bodies should be in the shape of assigned incomes or assigned funds. I think at present Government grants to district local boards and municipalities are in cash, and the same principle is proposed to be applied to the panchayats.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai :—Mr. President,—In reply I wish to say that the Honourable Member in Charge insisted in the select committee and wants to insist here that Government grants shall be cash grants. What I mean to say is that in villages where there will be panchayats there will be assessed unoccupied waste and such other lands. If Government try to realize the income thereon, they will be realizing half a rupee or a rupee, while if they are left to a panchayat they may be able to realize Rs. 50 or even Rs. 100. Do you wish to make a loss to the administration simply because you do not want to assign any incomes to the panchayats and insist on cash grants ?

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola :—If that is the intention that the honourable member has, it has already been met, because under other clauses in regard to which he has given notice of amendments, Government can assign certain administrative duties to the panchayats, and if Government are satisfied that the panchayats will be able to carry out a certain duty, they will easily come to an arrangement with the panchayat without there being any provision in the act.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai :—That is very good ; then where is the difficulty to include this provision that the proceeds of such incomes can be assigned to the panchayats. The question is what can be assigned to panchayats ? You should not only make it possible to assign certain duties to the panchayats but also to make assignments of income, so that the proceeds of such assignments can feed the funds of the panchayats. If you wish to merely realize the Re. 1 or Rs. 2 out of the village waste lands, whereas the panchayat could realize out of it anything up to Rs. 100 or even more, you can do so, but that would be simple waste. That is the present policy. In a village Government could ordinarily realize half a rupee or a rupee for an assessed waste land, while if it is in the hands of the villagers themselves they would realize about Rs. 100. Do you want to realize less revenue simply for the sake of the fun of only making cash grants and not making any assignments of revenue ?

The amendment was then put to the vote and lost.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael) :—Amendment No. 21(b). The Honourable Rao Saheb Desai.

"Add the following as sub-clause (j) :—'(j) the incomes of any property vesting in the panchayat under clause 21 '."

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai :—This amendment, sir, is practically an omission which I am seeking to supply. It was intended that this should be added here, but by some oversight, I think, it was not added. The income of any property.....

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola :—Sir,—I do not think it is very necessary, but if it satisfies the honourable member, Government have no objection to accept that amendment. It has been suggested to me that as the honourable member 's previous amendment, 21 (a), was lost, this clause will be (i) instead of (j). With that alteration Government are prepared to accept the amendment.

The amendment as altered was then put to the vote and carried.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola :—Mr. President,—My attention has been drawn to the fact that by accepting this amendment a consequential amendment will have to be made in sub-clause (g). The word " and " appears at the end of that sub-clause and it will have to be removed from there and added to sub-clause (h). I therefore propose the following amendment :—

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola; the Vice-President.] [5TH AUGUST 1920.]

Delete the word "and" appearing at the end of sub-clause (g), and add the word "and" at the end of sub-clause (h).

The amendment was put to the vote and carried.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael) :—This Council will now adjourn till 11-00 a. m. to-morrow.

The Council then adjourned till 11-00 a. m. on Friday, the 6th August 1920.

By order of His Excellency the Honourable the Governor,

G. DAVIS,
Secretary to the Legislative Council
of the Governor of Bombay.

Substitute the following for paragraph 2 of the debate on Pleaders' Bill printed on page 684 of the Bombay Government Gazette, Part V, dated 4th September 1920:—

The other question in connection with this matter of discipline is whether action should be taken not merely in cases of professional misconduct but also in cases of misconduct outside professional matters. It seems to me that some of those who dealt with this question omitted to notice the remark in the statement of objects and reasons that the power is one which the High Court already are exercising. They have the power to take action even in cases outside professional misconduct. The Honourable Mr. Belvi referred to a particular decision which, I think, is the same as that mentioned in the statement of objects and reasons in the remarks on clause 25. I think everyone will agree that it is perfectly right that the High Court should have the power to take action in cases of that kind. I understand that this is the practice in England also, and I am sure that the practice is for the good of the pleader's profession as a whole. I was somewhat surprised to hear objection taken to this particular provision of the bill. It seemed to me that the safeguard which is devised for the maintenance of the dignity of the pleader's profession was one which would be welcomed by the members of the profession themselves.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Order, order. Further consideration of a bill to provide for the constitution of village panchayats. The Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai.

Clause 26, item (22). "Add the following words at the end of the clause:—

'unless the Governor in Council directs otherwise.'"

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Mr. President,—Clause 26, as it stands, is as follows:—

"In every village a house tax shall be levied in accordance with rules made by the Governor in Council."

I propose to add the following words at the end of it:—

"unless the Governor in Council directs otherwise."

Now, here, I do not touch the main provisions of this clause, namely, that a house tax shall be levied in accordance with the rules. My only point is to enable the Governor in Council, in cases where a house tax would work heavily, or in cases where it will be difficult to obtain sufficient revenue out of it, to have any other tax, and I hope that this amendment is one which it may be possible for the Honourable Member in Charge to accept, and if he does not see his way to do it, then certainly the Council, I hope, will be prepared to accept it, because, it does not go against the principle underlying the clause. It only enables the Governor in Council to consider hard cases, and to direct as he considers necessary in particular places.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—Mr. President,—I oppose this amendment. The grounds for my opposition are that house tax will be the principal income that will be available to panchayats, and that the same can be imposed without any serious objection on the part of the residents of the village. The limits of the house tax are going to be laid down by the Governor in Council, and the limit being there, the panchayat will not be at liberty to make the tax excessive or beyond the powers of the house-owners to pay. The villagers generally consider this tax as a proper one, and they are not likely to raise any serious objections against it. On the whole, I think the tax will not be unpopular.

This will be the first taxation that all the panchayats will go in for, and if this tax is found to be insufficient for the purposes of the villages, then only the panchayats will have to resort to other forms of taxation. I think, that house taxation will be a proper source of income to panchayats, and the panchayats should be left free to levy it. I therefore oppose the amendment.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[6TH AUGUST 1920.] [Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; the Vice-President; Mr. G. K. Parekh.]

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola :—Mr. President,—Government have given very careful consideration to this amendment on the grounds which have been urged by the honourable mover, but they have come to the conclusion that it would be unwise to accept it. If any such proviso is enacted, the temptation will always be to approach Government to be relieved of this tax. It is human nature that we do not want to pay taxes if we can help it. The panchayats need revenues, and this is a form of revenue which, as the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole has pointed out, will be popular. It is, therefore, unwise to enact in the law any provision which would raise hopes, and keep Government constantly inundated with applications for relieving the villagers of this tax.

Another reason why the amendment cannot be accepted is that I do not think, in these matters of internal administration. Government should have any discretionary powers of this character. Government want these panchayats to be self-governing institutions, and to be in a position to refer to Government as little as possible. For these reasons, Government are not prepared to accept the amendment.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai :—Mr. President,—I am sorry I am unable to accept the ipse dixit of the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole when he says that the village people accept this tax, and that it is the only source of revenue. There may be places where house tax will be very inappropriate, and a proper source of revenue may be some other tax. Should we not enable Government to meet such hard cases by an amendment of the bill? Are we going to say that it would not be wise at this stage to enable Government to have a power to deal with such hard cases?

As for the villagers accepting the house tax willingly, I cannot say anything with reference to the conditions of the Deccan, but I know that in Gujarat of course there is an amount of opposition to this tax, and there are cases where it would be a very inappropriate tax, and where there may be other sources of revenue.

In these circumstances, I would request this Council to consider whether they would not accept this amendment, which does not go to the root of the principle underlying the clause.

The amendment was put to the vote and lost.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael) :—Clause 26, Item No. (23). The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh.

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh :—Mr. President,—The amendment that stands in my name runs as follows :—

"(1) Between the figure '26' and the word 'In' add the figure '(1)'

(2) After clause 26, sub-clause (1), add the following :—

'(2) In alienated villages or villages held on Talukdari or Khoti tenures in which the holder of the village owns the houses, the house-tax shall be leviable from the occupiers thereof and not the owners.'"

I may say in connection with this amendment that it is not my desire either to delay the passing of the bill or to add to the interests or the dignity of the talukdars or inamdars. My only object is to make the provisions of the act more workable. It will be noted that under the clauses of the bill which this Council has accepted, the talukdar, in order to be eligible to be a member of the panchayat, must be resident in the village. If he is not a resident of the village, he is not at all eligible for being a member of the panchayat. Therefore there would be many instances where the talukdar would not be represented on the village panchayat at all; for instance, where the talukdar is not a resident or where he is a minor or is a female. In all these cases the result will be that on the panchayat the talukdar's interests will not at all be represented. Let us take the other instance of the talukdar being a resident of the village. There will be one vote for the talukdar against four votes of the occupiers. The occupants' voice will be predominant, considerably larger than that of the talukdar. Under these circumstances, I think, it would rather be hard that the occupants of houses should have the opportunity of escaping themselves from any liability towards the payment of tax by making the landlord liable for the same. It would be for the panchayat to say who is liable to pay the tax, whether the landlord or the occupant. I should therefore think that it would not at all be just that the act should give the occupants the right of saying that they themselves are not liable, and that all the burden of the panchayat should be borne by the talukdars. It would be exceedingly unjust to give this power to the panchayats. I therefore submit that in the case of such villages it is proper not to give them the power of taxing the landlord.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

The Honourable Mr. C. N. Seddon:—Sir,—The Honourable Mr. Parekh's amendment practically amounts to this, that where a property owner in a village is a small man, he should be liable to be taxed, but where he is a big man owning a large property he should be specially exempted.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—Sir,—As far as I can see, there is no necessity for this amendment as the tax will be collected under rules made by the Governor in Council, and the rules will probably lay down whether it is to be collected from the owner or occupier of the house. But as a principle I think that the tax should be collected from the owner. In the case of the Deccan alienated villages I do not see the least objection to this being done. What is usual in the case of the Deccan alienated villages is that the inamdar owns one or two houses in his village, and it is but proper that he should pay the tax on those houses along with others. If he lets them out as shops or as tenements to other villagers, the house tax that the panchayat will levy upon the landlord will be transferred by the landlord to the occupant in the shape of enhanced rent. I, therefore, do not see why an amendment of this character is necessary. As soon as a village panchayat levies the house tax, it should be collected from all owners irrespective of whether they are inamdars or ordinary occupants. Unless, therefore, the conditions of Gujarat talukdari villages are very different from what they are in the case of the Deccan alienated villages, I do not see the least necessity for an amendment of this description. For these reasons I oppose it.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Sir,—I beg to support the amendment proposed by the Honourable Mr. Parekh. I think, the Honourable Dewan Bahadur is under a misapprehension as to the scope and effect of the amendment, and also as to the conditions prevailing in the talukdari villages particularly. It is not the object, as I understand it, of this amendment, to exonerate the owner of a house who lets it to another person, from the liability to pay the tax, because he will be recovering the rent. But the position with reference to talukdari villages is quite different. There the owner of the sites is the talukdar both in the village and outside.....

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—Is he the owner of the houses also?

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—He is the owner of the sites. The people living in the village, who are called the vasti, have no right to the site. The talukdar is the owner of the site. A man may take land from the talukdar on lease and build houses on it. But he has no right to the land itself. Though the person occupying the house has a right on the building materials of the house, namely, the superstructure, he has no right over the ground on which it is built, and when that man leaves the village or dies without heirs, the right of reversion vests in the talukdar. So far as I know he does not collect any rent for the use of the ground on which the houses are built. Under these circumstances, really speaking, it is the occupier of the house who should pay the tax for the purpose of running the expenses of the panchayat, and not the talukdar. But I do not interpret the honourable mover to mean that where a talukdar or an owner is the owner, not only of the ground on which the building is built but also of the superstructure, he should be exempted from the payment of tax. If the reversionary right is in the talukdar or the inamdar, then it is the occupier who should be responsible for paying the tax and not the owner.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe:—Mr. President,—I oppose this amendment. In considering this question we need not complicate matters by bringing in the talukdar's right of reversion or other legal technicalities. In municipal areas the occupier in the absence of the owner is liable to pay the house tax. The question whether the ground belongs to the talukdar, or whether the materials of the houses are to revert to the talukdar, are questions which do not really affect the clause as it is now worded. In addition to this, we have sub-clause (d) of clause 42 which says that rules may be framed under section 26 regulating the levy of a house tax. So in talukdari villages if a case is made out that talukdars ought not to be made to pay in the first instance, Government can by rules prescribe that under such peculiar circumstances the tax would be recovered from the occupiers. On these grounds this amendment is not called for. I therefore oppose it.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Sir,—I think the reply which the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole and the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe gave, will satisfy

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[6TH AUGUST 1920.] [Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola; Mr. G. K. Parekh; the Vice-President.] the honourable mover that there is no case for the amendment. There appears to be some misconception underlying the arguments advanced by the supporter of the amendment. We have, in Bombay city, fazandars, that is to say, owners of the land, while the buildings thereon are owned by people who built upon it. Take the case of the Improvement Trust. Large areas of land are leased to lessees. They do not own the land which they lease from the Improvement Trust for a period of 99 years or 999 years; but they are the owners of the buildings. Though the land does not belong to them, it is they who pay the whole of the municipal taxation. In the case of the fazandars also municipal taxes are paid by the lessees. Take the case which the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai referred to. A man takes land on lease from the inamdar or the talukdar or the khot and puts up a structure upon it. He is called an occupier by the supporter of the amendment. That is not really so. If he possesses the right of letting it to others he is the owner and not the occupier. The owner of a building is perfectly entitled to live in it or to let it, and charge rent. In such cases he is the proper party to pay the house tax. All these matters of detail will be examined when rules are being drafted. The clause to which this amendment is proposed runs as follows :—

"In every village a house tax shall be levied in accordance with rules made by the Governor in Council."

It will be observed that an amendment of this character is hardly consistent with the clause as it stands. The wording of the clause is quite clear. It lays down that rules will be framed under which house tax will be levied. If there are any special cases, they will be taken into consideration when the rules are being formulated. It must, however, be remembered that all these properties will secure the benefits of the services which the panchayats will render, and they must contribute towards the funds for those services. If, as has been pointed out, the talukdars are the owners of land on which houses have been built by others, they can transfer the liability to the owners of the buildings as is common in municipal areas. I do not think any case has been made out for this amendment.

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh:—Sir,—I am afraid I have not been able to explain the position that I have taken. The condition in talukdari villages is this. In a large number of villages, in order that those may become habitable the talukdar himself tries to build sheds or houses in which the tenants live. He is the owner of the property, and for the convenience of cultivation and in order that the lands may become profitable, he allows his tenants to remain upon the property without payment of any rent in some cases. So, it is more the case of convenience than profit to the landlord from his land.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—May I point out, sir, that if a talukdar builds sheds or houses in the talukdari lands, in order that the ryots may occupy them and thus help in improving cultivation, then the honourable member admits that the talukdar gets the benefit indirectly though not actual rent of these sheds and houses. He gets substantial benefits through the lands that are cultivated by the ryots who occupy those sheds and houses, and therefore, the municipal services must be paid for.

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh:—But it is both in reference to the lands as well as houses. What I submit is that he does not receive the rent, and in most cases even a share of the profits is not received by him, and therefore, so far as the houses are concerned they are enjoyed free. As regards the lands the tenant has to pay a fixed tax, and the whole question would be, on whom the house tax to be levied under this clause will fall. If the tenant benefits by his occupation of the land and his occupation of the house, I submit that the tenant has to pay the customary rent. The tax which the tenant has to pay is not liable to change and it remains fixed. Under these circumstances, I do think that it would be a hardship that the occupants should have a right or a predominant voice in fixing the question as to which party should be liable to pay the tax.

The amendment was then put to the vote and lost.

Clause 26 was then put to the vote and carried.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[Mr. G. K. Parekh; the Vice-President; Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.] [6TH AUGUST 1920.]

The Hononrable Mr. G. K. Parekh :—Sir,—I do not want to press this amendment.

The amendment was by leave withdrawn.

Clause 27 was then put to the vote and carried.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Let us now revert to clause (1), item No. (2). The Honourable Mr. Gokuldas Parekh.

"At the end of sub-clause 2, substitute a comma for the full stop and add the following :—

'But it does not apply to alienated villages or to villages held on talukdari or khoti tenures.'"

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh;—Sir,—I beg leave to withdraw this amendment.

The amendment was by leave withdrawn.

Clause 1 was then put to the vote and carried.

Clauses 28 to 33 were then severally put to the vote and carried.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Clause 34, item No. (25). The Honourable Mr. Gokuldas Parekh.

"At the end of sub-clause (1) add the following :—

'But the District Local Boards shall not direct the panchayats to pay any sum larger than is available to the panchayats at the time of the order either as cash or deposit in the treasury in which the funds of the panchayats are lodged or both taken together.'"

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh :—Sir,—In reference to this amendment I submit that where the work that the panchayat is called upon to do is beyond the means with which it is provided, I do not think that it would be right or reasonable that it should be called upon to pay more than it is within its power to provide for. So far as the revenues are concerned they are altogether of a definite character which the panchayat would not have any power to increase. Under these circumstances the expenses that it should have to incur should be in accordance with its ability to provide for the same. And I should think it would really be hard that the panchayat should be called upon, even in reference to works in connection with sanitation or health of the village, to provide for works which are beyond its capacity to bear. Under these circumstances, I think, the panchayat should only be called upon to pay in accordance with the means which are within its power, and should not be called upon to undertake works which are beyond its power.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola :—Sir,—There appears to be some misapprehension in regard to this clause. This is a special clause which deals with emergencies. Similar provisions in municipal and local board legislation give the power to the Collector. On this occasion following the principle of control by local bodies it is the district local board which is being given this power. The emergency to be dealt with may be an outbreak of an epidemic or some such serious and emergent matter in which, in the interests of the lives and health of the villagers, immediate steps may be required to be taken. The legislature wishes to give the local board the power of putting into effect this emergency clause to save the lives and the health of the villagers, and if any expenditure is incurred it is but right that the panchayats should pay it.

Sub-clause (1) of clause 34 reads as follows :—

> "In cases of emergency the district local board may provide for the execution of any work, or the doing of any act, which a panchayat is empowered to execute or do, and the immediate execution or doing of which is, in its opinion, necessary for the health or safety of the public, and may direct that the expense of executing the work or doing the act, shall be forthwith paid by the panchayat."

Sub-clause (2) says :—

> "If the expense is not paid, the district local board may direct the officer in charge of the treasury in which the village fund is kept to pay such expense or as much thereof as is possible, from the balance of such fund in his hands."

It will be observed that the district local board is authorized to draw from the treasury "such expense or as much thereof as is possible, from the balance of such fund". That is exactly what the amendment wants. That has already been provided. There is a further safeguard provided in the bill to the effect that the district local board shall report to the Governor in Council every case in which these emergency powers are exercised by

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[6TH AUGUST 1920.] [Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola; Mr. G. K. Parekh; the Vice-President; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai.]

it. It will be apparent to honourable members that every care has been taken to see that these emergency powers are properly exercised by the district local boards. Government control over the district local boards is provided in this respect. I do not see what more is wanted by the honourable member.

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh :—Sir,—According to clause 34 as it is framed, I understand that where directions are given to carry out an emergency work, the panchayat is bound to carry it out, that is, even if the work is not limited either to its means or to its ability. The whole thing is that the panchayat would be bound to carry out an emergency work or any work that it is directed to carry out without any provision from the district local board. Then the question is, when a work is directed to be done by the local board, has it the power of recovering the expenses from the moneys that are in the hands of the panchayat or kept for the benefit of the panchayat? But still one contingency does remain. In the event of the fund not proving sufficient, I do not think this provision of sub-clause (2) makes the panchayat responsible.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola :—It would perhaps save time if the honourable member allows me to point out that sub-clause (1) which he proposes to amend does provide for this. It says "In cases of emergency the district local board may provide for the execution of any work, or the doing of any act, which a panchayat is empowered to execute or do". They are not going to be called upon to do anything whatsoever which is not covered by the act.

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh :—What I submit, sir, is that the expenses probably may be considerably more than are contemplated, and it is for those contingencies that I should wish that the panchayats should not remain liable in reference to those additional expenses that are incurred.

The amendment was then put to the vote and lost.

Clauses 34 and 35 were then severally put to the vote and carried.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael) :—Clause 36, item No. (26) :—

"Insert the following between the words 'Government Gazette' and 'supersede' in line 10, viz. :—

'in the first instance dissolve the panchayat and order a re-election thereof' and if the panchayat so re-elected is found equally remiss or refractory may '.',

The Honourable Rao Saheb Desai.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai :—Sir,—The amendment which I propose seeks to give an oportunity of a locus penitentiae to the panchayats in cases where the Governor in Council thinks it necessary to exercise his powers under the clause. The clause as it stands says :—

> "If in the opinion of the Governor in Council a panchayat exceeds or abuses its powers or makes persistent default in the performance of the duties specified in section 18, the Governor in Council may, after reference to the district local board, by an order in the Bombay Government Gazette, supersede such panchayat for a period specified in the order."

The amendment that I propose would make the clause run this way :—

> "If in the opinion of the Governor in Council a panchayat exceeds or abuses its powers or makes persistent default in the performance of the duties specified in section 18, the Governor in Council may, after reference to the district local board, by an order in the Bombay Government Gazette, in the first instance dissolve the panchayat and order a re-election thereof, and if the panchayat so re-elected is found equally remiss or refractory may supersede such panchayat for a period specified in the order."

Whenever there have been cases of supersession of municipalities the general protest is that if particular representatives of the ratepayers of a local area were found to be remiss or refractory or making persistent default, that is not the fault of the ratepayers; and therefore why should you not give the ratepayers an opportunity of sending another set of representatives? Before exercising the power given under this bludgeon clause, the ratepayers ought to have an opportunity of sending other representatives by way of a locus penitentiae. If the fresh representatives whom they may send also persist in abusing their powers, then it would be for Government to consider whether they are right in superseding the panchayat or whether the persistency with which a certain body sticks to its opinion is worthy of consideration. Under these circumstances, this would be rather a step in advance, and I do not see why the Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola, who has always the privileges and rights of the ratepayers at heart, should fight shy of an amendment of this character which would give what the popular cry always asks for, namely, an opportunity to the ratepayers of considering the whole matter, and not taking the action of supersession before giving such an opportunity. I hope this amendment will commend itself to the Honourable Member in Charge as well as to the members of this Council.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—Mr. President,—I do hope, sir, that the Honourable Member in Charge will look upon this amendment with a favourable eye and accept it. I think that if public opinion in many cases, at any rate in some cases, objects to Government's high-handed ways, it is to a great extent due to the fact of their not doing things properly. In the case of supersessions of some municipalities which were really unsaisfactory, people think that the whole thing might have been managed better. Give the electors a chance of sending better representatives and see if they cannot show improvement or better management. In the case of panchayats, where there is to be adult suffrage, everybody ought to be interested in seeing that the panchayat is going on efficiently, and therefore, if they appear to have made a mistake once in electing unwisely the members who cannot manage their affairs properly, I think, the electors should have an opportunity of appointing different people to carry out the objects of the bill. I do, therefore, hope that this amendment will be carried. I may say that I am not one of those who think, that whenever there is a supersession of a municipality, Government is always in the wrong and the municipality is right. I do admit that there may be occasions when a municipality or a panchayat has to be superseded, but it should be done only as a last resort. If the electors of a panchayat are given the opportunity of returning fresh representatives, Government may be saved the necessity of doing the unpleasant duty of removing a panchayat, because occasionally a remedy may be found for better management by getting better representatives, and the final unpleasant step of superseding the panchayat may be avoided altogether. I do hope, therefore, that the Council and Government will accept this amendment.

The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai:—Mr. President,—I have one difficulty in regard to the amendment that has been proposed by the Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai. His amendment is that when a panchayat is superseded for remissness or negligence in the discharge of their duties, another panchayat should be constituted. The difficulty which arises in my mind is this, that supposing you want a panchayat for a second term of six months, how can a new panchayat be constituted for that period? Under clause 10 of the bill we say that members elected at a periodical election shall ordinarily hold office for a term of three years, and unless that clause is changed and a separate provision is made, I cannot understand how under that provision a new panchayat can be constituted for the period for which the panchayat has been dissolved or suspended. Therefore, the amendment is unworkable unless the other provisions are amended.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe:—Mr. President,—I support this amendment and I support it on the ground that it gives a further opportunity for the villagers or for the electors to send in a better class of representatives to avoid an order of supersession. This principle of dissolution of a local body has been recommended by the Government of India in their local self-government resolution of 1918, and in recommending it, amongst the reasons which they have given, one is that the representatives who come in through election have always a dread that in case they do not behave properly the panchayat or local body stands a chance of being dissolved. What is the object of Government in framing this clause regarding supersession? The object is that people should realize their responsibilities and that such occasions should be very rare. It might be said by the Honourable Member in Charge of the bill that this clause about supersession is to be put into operation after consulting the local board. That is true. That only shows that Government will not take that step at once; the district local board, which is likely to be an almost elected body, will advise Government as to whether a case has been made out for supersession or not. So far, that is good indeed; but the amendment which has been put forward by the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai takes us a step further, namely, that instead of superseding the panchayat and getting in men nominated by Government to act as a panchayat for the time being, you give by this amendment a further opportunity for people to send in better representatives to avoid the stigma of supersession at the hands of Government. From this point of view nothing is lost in accepting this amendment. On the contrary we would be teaching a good lesson to the panchayats and we would be asking electors to send proper persons when one body is dissolved. I have, therefore, great pleasure in supporting this amendment.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[6TH AUGUST 1920.] [Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe; Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole; Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai.]

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—Mr. President,—I am not inclined to support the amendment that has been brought forward by the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai and my grounds are these. These panchayats as constituted have a life of only three years and elections are made for this period of three years. The bill provides that if a panchayat fails in the performance of its duties Government will consult the district local board, which is another elected body, and this elected body will never agree to the supersession of a panchayat until it really sees that the grounds are strong. That is one safeguard. Then, after the panchayat is superseded, who is to take the place of the displaced panchayat? It is another elected local body and that is the district local board again. The Honourable Rao Saheb Desai proposes that in case a panchayat is found to be inefficient and incapable of performing its duties it should be suspended, another election should be held and a fresh set of village representatives should work on the panchayat. This new body may have to work for two or three months only. Will it be proper to hold a fresh election, when the newly constituted panchayat will have to work only for six months and in some cases for three months? I think it is not worth while going in for the trouble of having a second elected panchayat; it would suffice if the work of the inefficient panchayat is transferred to the district local board until the next election, which will take place in due course. I am inclined to think that the clause, as it stands at present, will serve the purpose adequately and that the proposed change is unnecessary.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Mr. President,—I think the explanation which the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole has given completely meets the point raised by the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai. The point for consideration is this. Honourable members should not mix up municipalities and panchayats. In the case of municipalities, Government can supersede them, and constitute a committee of management. This practically means taking over municipal administration in their own hands and working it through their own nominees. Any intervening measure of this character, under those conditions, would perhaps command considerable support. I can quite appreciate the desirability of providing some such measure before supersession of municipalities. But the case of the panchayat is entirely different. Government cannot supersede a panchayat without, in the first instance, referring the matter to the district local board. I should like to invite the attention of the Council to the fact that the words "after reference to the district local board" have been introduced in the original bill by the select committee. The district local board will, therefore, have a voice before a panchayat is superseded. Let us now examine what would happen when a panchayat is superseded. Government do not, as in the case of municipalities, nominate a committee of management to carry on the work, but it is the district local board, a largely elected body, which will have to do so till the panchayat is re-constituted. In the case of a municipality, no public body is consulted; Government take action, and appoint a committee of management themselves. In the case of a panchayat, it is the district local board which will really be responsible for supersession, though the orders will be issued by Government, and that body will have to carry on the work in the interval.

There is another reason why this amendment is unnecessary. Within a very few months, local self-government will be a transferred subject, and a Minister responsible to the Legislative Council will be in charge. Therefore, a supersession can only take place after a district local board is consulted and a Minister has given his sanction. I believe that under those circumstances, the provision of the bill as it stands will more than adequately meet all the requirements of the case. I hope honourable members will reject the amendment.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Mr. President,—The arguments advanced by the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole, and endorsed by the Honourable Member in Charge appear to me not to bear examination. It is said that the ordinary life of a panchayat is for three years, and we need not trouble ourselves for the sake of two or three months with an intervening dissolution and re-election; it has worked for two years, it is found refractory, and there is only a year which remains. As the clause of supersession is there, we have simply to consider whether it would be proper to allow the operation of the supersession clause at once, without the intervention of a dissolution in the intermediate stage. Now, you will find from clause 36 (2) (b) that all powers and duties of the panchayat shall, during the period of supersession, be exercised and performed by such person or persons as the district local board may from time to time appoint in that behalf. If you turn to the Municipal Act, there also there is a similar provision. Section 179 (2) says that when a municipality is superseded all powers and duties of the municipality shall, during the period of supersession, be exercised and performed by such person or persons as the Commissioner may from time to time appoint.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL.

[Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; the Vice-President; Mr. G. K. Parekh; Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.] [6TH AUGUST 1920.]

In these circumstances, in the case of the panchayat, it is not the district local board which will assume the management to itself. The district local board will appoint one or two persons to carry on the panchayat, as in the case of municipalities. Consequently, it is not direct management by the district local board, and therefore it is quite necessary that there should be a locus penitentiae before the clause is put into operation.

The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai found difficulty with reference to this amendment as compared with the provisions of clause 10. Clause 10 says:—

"Members elected at a periodical election under this Act shall ordinarily hold office for a term of three years and shall be eligible for re-election."

He thinks that unless we amend that clause, this amendment will conflict with it. I do not see how it can, because the ordinary term of a panchayat is three years. When, in the circumstances contemplated in this clause, some intervention becomes necessary, the panchayat could be dissolved and a re-election ordered. To have such a thing would be to teach them a lesson that their administration was not good, so that the successors who may be sent by the ratepayers may behave in a better way. That would be a proper step to take, preliminary to an order of supersession. It is no use using all the powers of supersession all at once. It is better to teach these people a lesson if they are perfunctory or are making default, and in the first instance call upon the ratepayers to send out new men, and see whether they improve. That would be a proper way of taking public opinion than simply taking the whip and lashing it round all at once, without giving the members any notice or any opportunity of reforming themselves.

The amendment was put to the vote and lost.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Clause 36 (2), Item No. (27).

"(a) Insert the words 'dissolved or' before the word 'superseded' in sub-clause 2 of the clause."

"(b) Insert the words 'dissolution or' before the word 'supersession' in line 21 of sub-clause 2 (b) of the clause."

The Honourable Rao Saheb Desai.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Mr. President,—This amendment is consequential on the one which I just moved, and which was lost. I therefore withdraw it.

The amendment was by leave withdrawn.

Clauses 36 to 39 were then severally put to the vote and carried.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Clause 40, Item No. (28). The Honourable Mr. Gokuldas Parekh.

"In line 7 substitute for the words 'a third class' the word 'any'."

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh:—Mr. President,—This is only a very small amendment, and I should think of a very formal character. I do not at all object to the third class magistrates taking cognisance of cases of this kind, but all that I say is that if there are other magistrates of higher classes who are available, and who can take up the cases, why should it be said that these cases should be triable only by third class magistrates? I think they may be taken up by any magistrate, which would include every class of magistrate.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Mr. President,—Government is prepared to accept the amendment.

VILLAGE PANCHAYATS' BILL—SLAUGHTER OF CATTLE—PUNITIVE POLICE, NADIAD.

[6TH AUGUST 1920.] [The Vice-President; Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola; Mr. D. V. Belvi; Mr. G. K. Parekh.]

The amendment was put to the vote and carried.

Clauses 40 to 43 were then severally put to the vote and carried.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Clause 44. Item No. (29). The Honourable Sir Ibrahim.

"The proviso shall be deleted."

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Mr. President,—This amendment is merely consequential to clause 21, which was amended yesterday. It does not call for any remarks.

The amendment was put to the vote and carried.

Clause 44 was then put to the vote and carried.

The preamble was put to the vote and carried.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Mr. President,—My attention has been drawn to a small verbal amendment which will be necessary in consequence of the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai's amendment to clause 25 having been carried. It is that "in clause 25 (i) substitute the word 'section' for the word 'clause'."

The amendment was put to the vote and carried.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Bill to provide for the constitution of village panchayats (Bill No. XI of 1919). Third reading. The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Mr. President,—I beg to move that the bill be read a third time and passed. I hope honourable members will join with me in wishing complete success to this measure, which provides considerable advance in local self-government matters. I hope every effort will be made to make this experiment a success, and thereby to contribute towards further progress on democratic lines. With these words I beg to move the third reading of the bill.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola moves the third reading of the bill.

The motion for the third reading of the bill was then put to the vote and carried.

Bill read a third time.

DISCUSSION OF MATTERS OF GENERAL PUBLIC INTEREST.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Yesterday we took the first resolution of the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye. In the same way we will take to-day the first resolution of another honourable member. Resolution No. 3. The Honourable Mr. Belvi.

"This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council to be pleased to take such steps, legislative or otherwise, as will prevent the slaughter of agricultural and milch cattle beyond a prescribed minimum in the Presidency of Bombay including the Province of Sind."

The Honourable Mr. D. V. Belvi:—Mr. Chairman,—I regret my inability to move this resolution at this session of the Council inasmuch as certain information for which I have applied to Government in the form of an interpellation has not yet been furnished to me. So I request that the consideration of this resolution may be allowed to wait until the next meeting of the Council.

The resolution was by leave postponed.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Resolution No. 6. The Honourable Mr. Parekh.

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh:—Mr. President,—The resolution which stands in my name runs as follows:—

"The Council recommends that the Governor in Council be pleased to remit the collection from the Bania and Patidar inhabitants of Nadiad of the cost of the additional police stationed at Nadiad between August 1919 and February 1920 and the damages sustained by the B. B. & C. I. Railway by the removal of the rails and the cutting of the telegraph wires on the night of the 11th of April 1919."

Before I proceed to the resolution, I should like to place before the Council a few facts for a clear understanding of the real merits of the case. During the first 9 days of April 1919 in consequence of the passing of what is known as the Rowlatt Act in the teeth of the unanimous opposition of all the Indian members, there was, throughout the whole country, a considerable amount of excitement. On the 10th of April disturbances took place at Ahmedabad, Viramgaum and some other places owing to the rumour which had then spread that Mr. M. K. Gandhi, while journeying by the railway between Bombay and Delhi, had been arrested and that the order for his internment was being carried out. Though there were disturbances in Ahmedabad and Viramgaum, so far as Nadiad was concerned, the leaders of the village used considerable efforts to see that there was no contagion of the disturbances in Nadiad, and to that extent their efforts were quite successful. Some mischief occurred at a place within the limits of Nadiad. About a mile and a half from the town itself some rails of railway line were removed with the object of preventing a train that was coming from Bombay with troops, proceeding to Ahmedabad.

PUNITIVE POLICE, NADIAD.

[Mr. G. K. Parekh; the Vice-President.] [6TH AUGUST 1920.]

On the 21st of April the Collector of Kaira sent a letter to the Municipal Board of Nadiad in which he appreciated the action of the leaders of the Nadiad society in having kept the town quiet during the time of strain and excitement. In that letter the Collector also expressed his wish that so far as the people of Nadiad were concerned, they should publicly show their condemnation or dislike of the action in reference to the removal of the rails. Not very long after the Collector's letter was received, the municipality convened a meeting at which the acts of those persons who had committed the mischief were condemned, and they went further by offering a reward to the person who would give information which would lead to the detection of the offenders. They expressed regret that the thing should have occurred in Nadiad, and a reward of Rs. 500 was offered by the municipality to any person who would give information that would lead to the detection of the offenders. I do not think, sir, that under the circumstances under which the act took place, it was possible for the municipality to do anything more. The act must have taken place after midnight of the 11th or the early morning of the 12th, and at a considerable distance from the town, and I do not think that the people themselves could know or procure information about the persons who were concerned in the improper act. The matter went before the police. They made enquiries, and 14 people were placed before a Special Tribunal. The Tribunal considered that the evidence produced before it was not at all convincing and could not bring home the offence against 13 of the persons who were brought before it. There was one man who made a confession that he was an accomplice, and that man only was convicted. The rest of the persons were discharged by the Tribunal.

On the 26th of May the Collector wrote a letter to the Commissioner in which he explained the reasons for stationing additional police in Nadiad and also suggesting that the cost of this additional police be made payable by the Bania and the Patidar population of Nadiad. I think it will be necessary to put before the Council what has been alleged to be the reason for stationing the police and for requiring the Patidar and the Bania population of Nadiad to pay the cost of the special police. These reasons are:—

> "This offence is clearly the direct outcome of the persistent agitation against Government which has been going on among the people of Nadiad for some years, and to my personal knowledge since the beginning of 1918. Nadiad is the centre of the agitation in the district, it was the headquarters of Mr. M. K. Gandhi last year during the passive resistance movement, a movement of opposition to the payment of Government dues and thus directly calculated to undermine, as it did in fact undermine, all respect for the officers of Government and for Government itself."

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—May I ask the honourable member what he is reading from?

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh:—I am reading from the letter of the Collector.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Was it published?

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh:—It was not published. But the copies of this letter were furnished. .....

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—To whom?

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh:—They were furnished to the members of the municipality.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—By whom?

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh:—That I am not able to say at present. I have no instructions to say from whom they were received. But then my honourable friend Rao Saheb Desai tells me that all this appeared in the newspapers.

The District Magistrate further states in his letter to the President of the Municipality:

> "The probable results of the agitation were not unforeseen; several months ago I personally warned Mr. Gokaldas Talati, President of the Municipality, who was also

PUNITIVE POLICE, NADIAD.

[6TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. G. K. Parekh.]

President of the Home Rule League, that the younger generation was getting out of hand as a consequence of what was going on, but no attention was paid to the warning as the leaders in their own conceit, were not at the time prepared to take any advice from Government officers.

"(c) The Patidars of Kaira District affect to despise the Banias as their gumastas or clerks, but the agitation against the payment of land revenue, organised by the latter, became popular with the Patidars who are the principal land owners, as it held out to them the prospect of some temporary pecuniary advantage. When things came to a head the active part was naturally taken by the more enterprising Patidars, while the Banias remained in the background; it may be mentioned here that Mr. M. K. Gandhi himself, and the two leaders of the agitation in Nadiad, Mr. Gokaldas Talati and Mr. Fulchand Shah, the Secretary of the Home Rule League, are all Banias.

"(d) In my letter P.O.L. dated 21st April 1919, a copy of which was forwarded to you with my No. P.O.L. dated 1st and 2nd May 1919, the people of Nadiad through the President were given an opportunity of dissociating themselves from the outrage and assisting in bringing the offenders to justice. Except for the perfunctory offer of a reward of Rs. 500 they have done nothing; no leader of the Nadiad public has given me any information worth having, and the perpetrators of the crime have been discovered without any assistance from the people of the town. It is clear, then, that they have not taken the opportunity which was offered to them, and that they have done nothing to absolve themselves of responsibility."

Then Government issued orders for stationing the additional police and the additional police was accordingly stationed. The additional police remained at Nadiad till the month of February, the cost of which, when estimated, came to nearly Rs. 24,000, and this has been ordered to be paid by the Bania and Patidar inhabitants in Nadiad. Now from the reasons which I have already mentioned to this Council, honourable members will see that there is none which is connected with the mischief of April 1919. It is not made out that except one, any other persons of Nadiad were concerned with these acts. It was just possible that people of Ahmedabad or from some other villages in the district might have done it. The time was such that there could not have been any premeditation on the part of several persons to encourage the action, and looking to the hour at which the act should have been done and the place where it was done, it was most unlikely that any man in Nadiad knew what had taken place.

These, I submit, are the reasons upon which Government consider that they were justified in requiring the Nadiad people to pay the expenses of the additional police. Nadiad was never in any disturbed condition. It has always remained quiet, loyal and peaceful both before the 11th of April and after the 11th of April. It was not a place where the people were prone to any sort of disturbances, they have shown themselves to be peaceful people. Even during the times of the greatest strain and excitement, quiet and order was maintained. And in respect of the stationing of the additional police there was not any condition created among the people of Nadiad which would have justified the stationing of it for the purpose of maintaining peace and order. The next question is, whether it was right to make the circumstance of the previous action of the inhabitants of Nadiad in concerning themselves with the passive resistance campaign and the Home Rule League, a ground for throwing on them the cost of the additional police, when they took not the slightest share in the acts of April 1919.

In the first place I submit that the carrying out of the Home Rule campaign which was a constitutional movement going on under the orders of the Indian National Congress, should not be regarded as a ground for punishing the people. There is nothing mentioned about their having said or done anything which they could not have legitimately said or done. It was a matter of argument and persuasion on the most important public question, and I think, therefore, that the circumstances that these people took part in the Home Rule League propaganda in 1917-18, and thereby weakened the authority of the officers of Government, is certainly not a ground for the purpose of requiring them to pay the cost of the additional police.

Then there is the question of Mr. Gandhi and Mr. Talati and Mr. Shah being Banias. The population of Nadiad consists of several thousand Banias and Patidars, and I say that Mr. Gandhi does not belong to Nadiad, he belongs to Kathiawar. But he is not a native of Nadiad, and of the other two gentlemen, one was the President of the Home Rule League and another was secretary of the Home Rule League. The circumstance that two out of the several thousand Banias of Nadiad were officers of the Home Rule League is no reason for imposing on the Banias of Nadiad the burden of the expenses of the additional police.

PUNITIVE POLICE, NADIAD.

[Mr. G. K. Parekh; Mr. L. Robertson.] [6TH AUGUST 1920.]

Then with reference to the passive resistance movement, that movement commenced long before April 1919. Though subsequent to April 1919, there may be some ground for apprehending that there is some danger of breach of peace in consequence of the campaign going on, at the time no man had the slightest conception that the carrying on of the campaign in the manner Mr. Gandhi was doing, would lead to any sort of disorder.

Under these circumstances I should think that there was not the slightest necessity for the stationing of additional police, and even if Government thought that the additional police was necessary, I submit further that there is no legitimate ground whatever for requiring the inhabitants of Nadiad to pay the expenses of this aditional police. With these words I request that this resolution be adopted by the Council.

The Honourable Mr. L. Robertson:—Sir,—It may assist the consideration of this resolution if I place before this Council somewhat more fully than the Honourable Mr. Parekh has been able to do, the occurrences that took place at Nadiad on the 11th April 1919 and about that time. The honourable member mentioned only, I think, the derailment of a troop train. There were however other occurrences at Nadiad to which I should like to draw the attention of the Council.

On the morning of the 11th of April 1919 a mob headed by a man well known in Nadiad went to the high school at Nadiad and attempted to coerce the head master to close the school. The head master refused to do so. The police interfered and the mob dispersed. The leader, however, was arrested later by the police and was prosecuted before the District Magistrate for being a member of an unlawful assembly, was convicted, was fined Rs. 300 and was bound over in Rs. 500 with two sureties of the like amount to be of good behaviour for one year. On the night of the same day the troop train proceeding with reinforcements for Ahmedabad, where they were very urgently required, was derailed about a mile and a half from Nadiad town, and it was only by the mercy of Providence that the derailment did not cause the troop train to run down the embankment. If that had happened, a large number of His Majesty's soldiers would have been done to death. Fortunately, no one was injured. On the same night the telegraph wires along the railway lines were extensively cut, both south and north of Nadiad. The person I have mentioned as the leader of the mob that invaded the Nadiad high school was arrested and on his person there was found an inflammatory leaflet. He was subsequently prosecuted before the second Special Tribunal for spreading false information and was convicted. Of the falseness of the information which he was spreading, the following extracts will convince the Council:—

> "The English people are very tyrannical, they are perfidious and treacherous; post offices, railways and telegraph offices must be destroyed first; the police must also be destroyed to ensure a positive success; Collectors, Commissioners and Governors in particular; to slaughter the white people take up swords; form plots and have courage, but do not have at heart the slightest mercy; then only will success be achieved, understand, oh, India."

This leaflet was headed "Din Din Jagao: Har Har Mahadev", which means, as the Council are probably aware, the Mahomedan and the Hindu war cries. The appeal was, therefore, to both communities.

Now, I think, the Honourable Mr. Parekh urged the plea that the people of Nadiad may not have been responsible for the derailment of the troop train. On this point I am content to rely upon the judgment of the Tribunal which tried the case. Thirteen inhabitants of Nadiad were placed before the Tribunal and charged with the offence. Only one, however, was convicted and the reason for that was not that the case in itself was a false one, but that the witnesses, many of whom had made statements before magistrates prior to the case coming on, resiled from their statements and the Tribunal had not, therefore, before it evidence upon which to convict the accused. This is what the Tribual says:—

> "In conclusion on the general aspects we are of opinion that the police inquiry, into the aspects of which we have gone at some length, was on the whole absolutely honest and fair. There is no doubt that the statements which the witnesses brought to corroborate the approvers made to the police and District Magistrate, Kaira, or Resident Magistrate, Nadiad, were true in the main though pressure had to be exercised probably to get the truth out of these witnesses. In the criticisms levelled by us at the police and magistrates we feel we must take into consideration the state of feeling in Nadiad which was undoubtedly very hostile to the European and Indian officials and police, thanks to the activity of the Home Rule League, the Satyagraha and other revolutionary agitations, and it is possible that any other procedure might have resulted in an outbreak in Nadiad which the authorities were anxious to avoid."

PUNITIVE POLICE, NADIAD.

[6TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. L. Robertson; the Vice-President; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai.]

The judges were there commenting on the fact that enquiry into the offence was delayed, that the enquiry was not taken up immediately. And the reason as found by the judges was that the authorities were anxious to avoid an outbreak at Nadiad of which there appears to have been great probability. Then they go on to say :—

"We must also recognize that pressure has probably been exercised on the witnesses who have now resiled from their evidence given on oath to the District Magistrate, Kaira, or Resident Magistrate, Nadiad. The manner in which these witnesses gave their evidence in this Court shows that they were undobutedly tutored and that by people with some legal knowledge and not a little cleverness."

In the course of this passage which I have read, the Tribunal gives us an accurate description of the state of affairs at Nadiad at that time which, as the judges say, was undobtedly very hostile to the European and Indian officials and police, thanks to certain agitations which I named.

Now, that being the state of affairs, I think, the authorities were quite right in taking strong measures to secure the safety of the law-abiding part of the population and the Government treasure and buildings. Accordingly a force of 200 Indian infantry was stationed at Nadiad as soon as it could be made available, and a substantial portion of this force remained at Nadiad until the special police referred to in the resolution could be organized and sanction could be got from Government to their location at Nadiad. They were actually located there in July 1919 and were removed in February 1920 when Government were satisfied that the agitation had died down.

Another point made by the honourable mover was that it is unfair to saddle the Patidars and Banias only with this levy, and he read us a part of the letter from the Collector of Kaira in which reasons for imposing the levy on these two communities were explained. He did not, however, finish the letter. I do not know whether the part I am now going to read is in the copy which the honourable member possesses, but I think I should bring it to the notice of the Council. After the passage which the honourable member read, the following passage occurs :—

"Special blame attaches to the Banias for two reasons; first because the leaders who created the spirit of opposition to Government which culminated in the derailment belong, as has been pointed out, to that community, and secondly because by closing their shops all the shopkeepers, who are mostly Banias, gave the signal for commotion and excitement to the unruly elements in the town. There is nothing in itself illegal in closing a shop, but the hartal, or organised closing of shops, has been for centuries, as the promoters and participants well knew, a sign of civil disturbance, and when it is done without cause, it has the effect of an incitement to disorder. No man can be blamed for closing his shop when a riot has started, but when the hartal comes first those who take part incur a grave responsibility. In Nadiad the first hartal took place on Sunday, April 6th, without any reason whatever, and thus prepared the way for the disturbances of the 11th which were ushered in by a general closure of shops."

In the circumstances which I have endeavoured to. . . .

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—I would bring to the honourable member's attention the fact that his time is nearly up.

The Honourable Mr. L. Robertson:—In conclusion, I trust that the Council will be convinced that not only was the location of the additional police necessary at Nadiad, but that the imposition of the cost on the Patidars and Banias was also quite justifiable.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Mr. President,—Neither myself nor the Honourable Mr. Parekh have anything to do with the Nadiad town or with any of the political organizations there. But this is a question of far wider importance than at first sight would appear. It is not as if it only related to Nadiad. Government oftentimes take resort to special provisions of section 25 of the District Police Act, which empowers them to employ additional police in cases of special danger to public peace. The section says :—

"Government may, from time to time, by notification, direct the employment of additional police for such period as it shall think fit in any local area which shall appear to it to be in a disturbed or dangerous state, or in which the conduct of the inhabitants or of any particular section of the inhabitants shall, in its opinion, render it expedient temporarily to increase the strength of the police."

PUNITIVE POLICE, NADIAD.

[Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; the Vice-President.] [6TH AUGUST 1920.]

Now, in reply to my question in September last it was said that after the 11th and 12th April of 1919 there was no disturbance in Nadiad, and from all that the Honourable the Inspector General of Police said, all that I am able to gather, and also all that honourable members of this Council must have gathered, is that additional police was imposed not for preventive purposes but for punitive purposes for political agitation in the past which had created a state of excitement.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—May I point out that the Honourable Mr. Robertson has not said anything of the kind? He said that the military were engaged to protect Government buildings and the railways, and that police were imposed when it was possible to replace the military by these police.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Well, in the answer of Government to my question in September last they related what took place on the 11th and 12th April and said that no subsequent cases of violence were reported. So it is apparent that after the 13th April nothing happened which made it expedient to prevent a disturbance and for that purpose to employ additional police. The gist of the whole position is this, whether Government were justified in employing additional police for the political opinions and excitement which had taken place in the past year, in order to prevent anything which was likely to occur again in the future. Well, in view of the answer that was given and in view of the absence of any allegation of that sort, from all that the Honourable the Inspector General of Police said, it appears that after the 13th April there was no reason to employ additional police in Nadiad, and for that reason I say it was more for punitive purposes than for preventive purposes that the additional police was employed. My question in September last was pointedly directed in this way. I asked whether the employment of additional police in Nadiad was not in fact a punitive rather than a preventive measure, and the answer was "The honourable member is referred to section 25 (1) of the District Police Act which specifies the grounds on which additional police may be employed." Here the question is not confined to Nadiad alone, but there is a larger question involved in this resolution. The question is whether, as has happened in the case of Nadiad, it is proper that Government should employ additional police even after the danger has passed, and there is no real cause for apprehension and prevention. In these circumstances, if additional police are employed, it will be simply a punitive measure, with a view to teach the people a lesson in view of what happened in the past. Whether it should be done or not is the principle underlying the resolution. The judgment of the Special Tribunal, to which reference was made by the Honourable the Inspector General of Police, also says that the Superintendent of Police in charge of the railway,—I believe it was Mr. Kelly—ought to have taken the investigation into his own hands, and ought not to have left it to the local inspectors and sub-inspectors.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—The honourable member must confine himself to the actual resolution.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—I am confining myself to the resolution. My point is this, that if the case before the Tribunal, with reference to the derailment, failed against the other people, that was more due to the want of proper investigation, as remarked by the Tribunal. That happened for no fault of the people of Nadiad. I, therefore, say that the failure of a case would not be a proper ground for the imposition of additional police. If somebody in a class room committed mischief, and the teacher was not able to find out who committed the mischief, would there be any justification in it if he fined the whole class?

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—I must ask the honourable member to keep to the point. I do not think that the Honourable Mr. Robertson or any other honourable member suggested that the additional police were imposed because the case against many of the accused failed.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—The Honourable the Inspector General of Police has not been able to show that the Patidars had anything to do with the derailment, and there is nothing of that sort in the judgment.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—I must ask the honourable member to confine himself to the resolution.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—I am confining myself to the resolution. As I said, the judgment also to which he referred contains nothing, because otherwise it would have been possible for the judges to convict the other people. The only facts which are referred to by the Honourable Mr. Robertson in support of the order passed by Government for imposing additional police are the past acts from which future danger may be apprehended, and I think that that is not a sufficient ground, under section 25 of the District Police Act, for imposing additional police. I, therefore, hope that the Council will pass this resolution.

PUNITIVE POLICE, NADIAD.

[6TH AUGUST 1920.] [Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; the Vice-President.]

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Before coming to the real matter at issue, it seems to me that the Honourable Mr. Gokuldas was somewhat inconsistent in what he said. He referred to the agitation which has gone on at Nadiad. He read a letter written by the Collector of Kaira, describing the course of proceedings, leading up to the trouble in Nadiad and Gujarat. The Honourable Mr. Gokuldas said that the fact that the preaching of the home rulers weakened the authority of the officers of Government, should not be taken as a reason for imposing additional police. I do not know whether he admits that the preaching in 1918 of the doctrine of payment of no taxes, and again in 1919 of the civil disobedience, did weaken the authority of Government officers. I think every one who knows the Kaira district holds the opinion that it did very seriously. After that, he proceeded to say that no man had the slightest conception that Mr. Gandhi's civil disobedience would lead to disturbances. It seems to me an extraordinary statement to make, after the warning which the Collector had given to the president of the Nadiad municipality. The Honourable Mr. Gokuldas referred to a letter which was written by Mr. Ker on the 21st of April, in which Mr. Ker had expressed appreciation of the action of the leaders of Nadiad society in keeping the town quiet. The Collector's intention in writing that letter was to make a strong appeal to the leaders to see that nothing happened in Nadiad in the very dangerous times through which the whole of Gujarat was passing. He may have expressed appreciation of the action of the leaders, but the gist of his letter was an appeal to them to make themselves really useful, and to come forward and help Government. He sent a copy of his letter to Government, and he said in reporting the fact to Government that he was anxious to give the people of Nadiad and the president of the municipality an opportunity of dissociating themselves from the outrages, and assisting in bringing the offenders to justice. No advantage was taken of that opportunity. The Honourable Mr. Gokuldas referred to the fact that the municipality offered a reward of Rs. 500 for information leading to the detection of that dastardly offence, the derailment of a troop train. But it is also a fact that no leader from Nadiad came forward to give the Collector any information worth having.

The Honourable Rao Saheb Desai suggested that no one connected with Nadiad committed the dastardly crime of removing the rails and upsetting the troop train. It seems to me that he is determined to disregard the probabilities of the case altogether. There can be no doubt that the crime was initiated in Nadiad city itself, and it certainly was not carried out by people of the Dharala class. The people who committed the crime must have had behind them the influence of the higher classes.

The Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai further said that it was more a matter of punitive police than of additional police. The question, however, is whether, in the condition existing at that time in Gujarat, this additional police was necessary for the protection of property and for the prevention of disorder. Perhaps the Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai knows how long it was necessary to maintain troops for the protection of Ahmedabad. Very serious riots took place there. I think, if the Collector had ordered the withdrawal of the troops on the 12th April altogether, the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai would have had a very just complaint to make against the authorities. It is no use locking the stable door after the horse has bolted. It is necessary for Government to foresee as far as possible future developments, and make provision for them. I think in Gujarat a sudden outburst might occur at any moment. I remember sitting peacefully in my tent in Mehamadabad some years ago. I got information of a sudden outburst near Nadiad at Chaklasa, where a mahatma spread the news that the British Government had come to an end. That was sufficient to induce a large number of the leading men of Nadiad to go out and see what he was doing, and offer their devotion to this particular holy man. The mamlatdar thought it necessary to take some steps and went to the place with one or two policemen. But immediately he appeared, the mamlatdar was attacked. He had gone there simply to make enquiries, in order to be able to make a report. One of the policemen was killed, and the mamlatdar fled under a shower of arrows. This illustrates the possibility of sudden outbursts in that part of the country. The two danger points in Gujarat in 1919 were undoubtedly Nadiad and Ahmedabad. Nadiad is astride the railway line between Ahmedabad and Bombay, and the Government telegraph line passes through that town. It seems to me that it would have been very unwise for Government not to have taken any precautions or not to have maintained them, until it was quite certain that there was to be no further trouble in Ahmedabad. The Nadiad people had indicated that they were ready to give trouble, in order to help the people in Ahmedabad. That was the reason why the mail train was derailed. The mob seems to have said "There are disturbances in Ahmedabad, and we should help the people there. Let us derail the train and break the telegraph wires", and so on. The people who said these things were not the common people, the Dharalas; they belonged to the Patidar and Bania class. Possibly they included some of the Brahmins, I do not know. The Collector knew the district very well. He had been through Mr. Gandhi's first campaign of passive resistance, and had then seen the beginnings of a civil disobedience campaign, and he had a very good idea of who were the people who were giving trouble, causing unrest, and who would be ready to start trouble in Nadiad again, and he made a recommendation as to who should pay for the police. I am sure honourable members who represent the Deccan would have been annoyed if, on account of disturbances in Gujarat, they had to pay for the additional police. It is only right that the people who caused danger should pay for the expense of averting it. There was no idea at all of imposing police for punitive purposes but for the protection of Gujarat as a whole. I think that covers the whole point. It is a very simple issue whether Government were justified, in the circumstances which existed at that time, in thinking that additional protection was required for the purpose of maintaining law and order in Gujarat. In the light of these remarks I hope that this Council will reject this resolution.

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh:—Sir,—It is said that Government would have been unwise if they had not stationed the additional police at Nadiad. On the other hand, I submit that it would have been very proper if Government had not taken the course that they did. The whole question is: was there any disturbance in the town which would make section 25 of the Bombay District Police Act applicable? When the town is altogether peaceful, when it remains peaceful during the time of the greatest excitement, would it be right for Government to exercise the powers under section 25 and post additional police? So far as the first portion of this section is concerned, there was complete absence of a disturbed or dangerous condition in the town. As regards the second portion of the section, there was also nothing to show that any particular portion of the inhabitants did anything which would render it expedient to station additional police.

Then, with reference to the observations as to what the Collector said, I shall read to the Council the very words of the Collector which would show whether he did intend to express the appreciation of what the people had done for the purpose of maintaining order in the town, or whether he did not intend to do so. The letter of the Collector of 21st April proceeded in this way:—

> "I have the honour to address the municipal board of Nadiad as the representatives of the people of the town and in the first place to convey to them through the board my appreciation of the very general respect for law and order which they maintained through the period of strain and excitement which happily has now passed away."

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—I think that the honourable member, in order to be fair to this Council, should read further and also read what the Collector said in his letter of 26th May, paragraph (d).

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh:—I will read the paragraph. But what I was reading was what the Collector said within 10 days of the occurrence, about the services that had been rendered by the people of Nadiad.

The next thing that I have to refer to is the statement that the municipal board merely made an offer of a reward and that it was all that it did, and did not furnish any information. There is not the slightest evidence, nor have I been able to find anything which would show, that there was any information in the possession of the people of Nadiad which they did not furnish to the authorities. I submit that it was most unlikely, under the circumstances under which the act was committed, that any of the inhabitants of Nadiad could have any information as to what had taken place. I, therefore, consider that no inference could be drawn against the inhabitants of Nadiad or any section of the Nadiad society that they, knowingly or having knowledge of the facts kept them back from the authorities. It would not be proper to use that circumstance as a circumstance showing the guilt of the Nadiad people. So far as their participation in the act is concerned, I find no evidence which would show that any portion of the Nadiad society liked the disturbance or wished that the disturbance should take place in the town. As a matter of fact, everything was done by them to prevent the occurrence of any sort of disturbance. All that is now before the Council and before the public is this that there were certain statements made before the police by persons who subsequently retracted them. This at once established that they were persons who could not be relied on. No statements of an approver and of other people would under these circumstances be used as evidence against the persons against whom they are made. I think, it would not be fair to make use of statements of those who are not prepared to confirm or adhere to such statements at the time they are cross-examined in the court. I submit that statements once made but retracted later on ought not to be used for the purpose of putting liability on the people.

PUNITIVE POLICE, NADIAD.

[6TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. G. K. Parekh; Mr. D. V. Belvi; the Vice-President.]

I may say one thing more. At the time the order for establishing additional police was issued by Government no circumstance justifying the employment of additional police existed. My friend the Honourable Mr. Robertson has referred to the existence of a pamphlet in the pocket of a boy. Now, what has that to do with the people of Nadiad, or to show that the whole of Nadiad or any large portion of the community or any appreciable portion of the community knew or encouraged or liked the circulation of this pamphlet or were aware even of its existence? So far as the information placed before the public is concerned, I submit, there is not a scintilla of reliable material, which can be accepted as evidence, which would establish that the people of Nadiad were really concerned in the affair or that they attempted to shield the offenders or encouraged the act.

I have referred to the reasons which are the only reasons available to us for the purpose of showing on what grounds the police was stationed. If there are other reasons, I submit that Government should have put them before the public and allowed the Nadiad people an opportunity to meet them. I do not think it would be just that those people whom it is sought to charge should be kept ignorant of the reasons which led Government to act as they did, and that they should be held answerable for the payment of the money which Government are required to pay.

In reference to the portion of the letter of 26th May to which you, sir, directed my attention, and which I shall read presently, I may say that the argument that is put forward in that letter is most unsatisfactory. To expect information from the people leading to the detection of the offenders, when the regular police, after making all their enquiries, have failed to trace the perpetrators, is to expect from the people something which is impossible for them to supply. And to say that people were guilty or concerned in guilt, because they do not give information leading to the finding out of the offenders is certainly no ground to justify Government in stationing additional police in Nadiad. I submit, sir, that here we have to bear this fact in mind that notwithstanding the excitement, the peace of the town was actually maintained. It is, therefore, perfectly clear that the act was one that the majority of the people of Nadiad did not approve, and the attitude of the inhabitants of Nadiad on the 10th and 11th of April was altogether inconsistent with the share of guilt that Government attribute to them. I, therefore, ask that the resolution be accepted.

The Honourable Mr. D. V. Belvi:—May I ask you, sir, to read that portion to which you referred and to which the Honourable Mr. Parekh did not refer?

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—My point was to show how the Collector regarded the occurrences at Nadiad. The Honourable Mr. Gokuldas Parekh read the letter which the Collector sent to the president of the municipality on the 21st August, and I wanted him to read another letter of Mr. Ker showing the intention of his letter to the president of the municipality and how the Collector regarded the occurrences at Nadiad. The Collector in paragraph (d) of his letter to the Commissioner, writes:—

> "In my letter P.O.L. dated 21st April 1919, a copy of which was forwarded to you with my No. P.O.L. dated 1st and 2nd May 1919, the people of Nadiad, through the president, were given an opportunity of dissociating themselves from the outrage and assisting in bringing the offenders to justice. Except for a perfunctory offer of a reward of Rs. 500 they have done nothing; no leader of the Nadiad public has given me any information worth having, and the perpetrators of the crime have been discovered without any assistance from the people of the town. It is clear, then, that they have not taken the opportunity which was offered to them, and that they have done nothing to absolve themselves of responsibility."

PUNITIVE POLICE, NADIAD—SUBDIVISION OF AGRICULTURAL LANDS—ROADS AND COMMUNICATIONS—CENSUS RETURNS—RENT ACTS.

[The Vice-President; Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole; Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna.] [6TH AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable Mr. Gokuldas Parekh in ending his speech said that the peace of the town of Nadiad had been maintained. It seems to me a curious thing to say that peace had been maintained when we have the fact that the headmaster of a high school was obliged to close his school and a troop train was derailed outside the town.

The Honourable Mr. Gokuldas Parekh has said nothing about the second part of the resolution. I am not aware myself whether any damages were ordered to be recovered by the District Magistrate. Government have no information about the matter.

The resolution was then put to the vote and lost.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—The Council will now adjourn till 2-30 p.m.

The Council then adjourned for lunch.

After lunch.

The Council re-assembled at 2-30 p.m.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Order, order. Discussion of matters of general public interest. Resolution No. 7. The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole.

"This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that legislation should be adopted in this Presidency towards checking the excessive subdivision of agricultural lands that is taking place."

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—Mr. President,—I am quite prepared to go on with this resolution, but some of my honourable friends have been asking me to defer it to the next session of the Council as they want time to read the correspondence that has been published by Government on 29th November 1919 in shelving Mr. Keatinge's bill. So with your permission, sir, I will postpone the consideration of this resolution till the next session.

The resolution was by leave postponed.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Resolution No. 10. The Honourable Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas.

"That this Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council, that a department be created, whose duty will be to see to the maintenance, renewal and repairs of old and construction of new roads and communications, in both urban and rural areas of the Presidency including Sind, the expenditure of such works to be met from the resources of authorities respectively responsible for the same."

The Honourable Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas not being present his resolution is deemed withdrawn.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Resolution No. 11. The Honourable Mr. Sethna.

"This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council to suggest to the Government of India that in the next census returns in the table known as 'Occupation or Means of living (unproductive)' beggars be shown separately and not be included as at present under the heading 'Beggars, prostitutes, receivers of stolen goods, cattle poisoners'."

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna:—Sir,—Might I be allowed to take resolution No. 15, instead of resolution No. 11?

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Yes.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Resolution No. 15. The Honourable Mr. Sethna.

"This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council the desirability (a) of amending Bombay Act II of 1918 and Bombay Act VII of 1918 in the light of the experience gained by the working of the said acts so far, or (b) of appointing a committee to recommend to Government what amendments should be made in these acts."

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna:—Mr. President,—I beg to move the resolution which stands in my name and which you have kindly read out to the Council. Sir, when I sent in my resolution I had no idea that Government themselves intended to bring in amendments to some sections of the Rent Acts. These amendments were brought in by a bill, the first reading of which we passed three days ago without, I was glad to find, a single dissentient. I myself was quite in accord with those amendments, but, sir, I think in the light of the experience we have gained, perhaps some more amendments are necessary, and the more so because it is likely that the Rent Acts will continue for perhaps a fairly long time. Some days ago there was published a Reuter's telegram dated London, July 18th, which ran as follows:—

RENT ACTS.

[6TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna; Mr. G. S. Curtis.]

> "An order in Council states, in order to remove misapprehension, that the date of termination of the war with Germany was January 10th, but that the termination of the war as a whole will be when the last peace treaties have been signed and ratified."

Now, even if all the remaining peace treaties are signed and ratified to-morrow, I am afraid we shall be compelled to keep these acts in force not only for the full period of two years thereafter as provided in the acts but perhaps by special legislation extend them for a longer period, until the house shortage in Bombay is removed by the operations of the development scheme which His Excellency propounded three days ago. In the United Kingdom, where also there exist Rent Restriction Acts, a committee was appointed in February of this year for the purpose of considering whether it was necessary to take any steps, and if so what steps, to extend, continue or amend these acts. This committee after taking oral evidence of representative witnesses as also written evidence of representative bodies came to the unanimous conclusion that in their opinion the protection afforded by the Rent Restriction Acts against the eviction of tenants or unreasonable increase of rents, should not be allowed to lapse at the time the present acts expire. In the opinion of that committee it was thought that the emergency would perhaps continue for another three years and their recommendations were made for that period. Following, sir, the amendments which Government have introduced by a bill, the first reading of which we passed three days ago, I think, Government would do well to propose further amendments in the light of the experience we have gained by the working of these acts for now nearly two and a half years, or if Government are so disposed, they may appoint a small committee with power to take the evidence of those who are qualified to speak on the subject and ask such committee to submit its recommendations for further amendments, if any.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Sir,—I think perhaps it will save time if I say that, as the Council is already aware, two amendments are before them. They are amendments based on experience. As regards the particular question of policy raised by the honourable mover, Government have no objection whatever to appoint a committee. I understand the questions of policy which he wishes to raise are in particular the term of the act, that is, the number of years it should be kept in force, and under what conditions. Government have no objection to appoint a committee.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna:—No, sir. I am not dealing just with the term of the acts. I know, sir, that conditions are such that the term of the acts will have to be extended, but I should like to give the Council some idea as to the directions in which I would recommend the amendments. It is admitted, Mr. President, that the acts which we have passed have helped the tenants as far as possible. That they have done so there is no question. But I do not think the same thing can be said in regard to the landlords. If in the beginning some landlords were perhaps very greedy, the sins of a few have been visited on the class as a whole. I do not deny, sir, that the tenants deserve every sympathy and consideration. It has been extended to them in full measure and when further amendments, such as the two amendments which the Honourable Member in Charge just now referred to, are brought forward, they too will be accepted, probably again without a single dissentient. But, sir, I would like to ask Government to look at the question also from the landlord's point of view. At the time we passed the act we gave the landlord an increase of 10 per cent. on the rent which he was receiving on 1st January 1916. That was a fair percentage of increase when the act was passed on the previous normal rate of increase. Since then, however, circumstances have greatly altered. The costs of repairs have increased; higher wages have to be paid to the men they employ to look after their property; and the insurance premium is now double what it was before, for the reason that a building which was worth say one lakh before is now worth perhaps two lakhs or more owing to the higher value of materials. Therefore, sir, the percentage of increase allowed to the landlords for determining standard rent should be reconsidered. In their report which was published on the 30th March last by the committee in February last in the United Kingdom which I referred to, they observe that the increase in the cost of repairs in England is about two and a half times what it was when the act was passed. From the landlord's point of view it is time that the 10 per cent. allowed in Bombay should now be reconsidered and increased.

RENT ACTS.

Next, Mr. President, a serious grievance with the landlords is that even their monthly tenants are profiteering to their heart's content. They sublet the premises they occupy at a very much higher rent than what they are paying to the landlord. But I think, sir, the landlords ought to be safeguarded against this, and the tenants not allowed to profiteer when the act is so down upon the landlords themselves. The act, sir, prevents the landlord from charging more to the tenants than the standard rent, but it turns out that in many cases it is the tenant who is profiteering and becoming opulent. If a man has a shop or an office for which he paid Rs. 500 before the act was passed, then as a result of the act he is now paying Rs. 550 as the standard rent, but it not infrequently happens on account of the heavy demand which exists that he lets a portion of his shop or officce, not the whole, for, say, Rs. 1,000. Not only therefore, in such cases, does he sit rent free but in addition he is also Rs. 450 to the good every month. That, sir, is a position from which the landlord ought to be relieved. In such cases I would say, sir, ...

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—I would ask the honourable member to suggest the heads on which he thinks some amendment is necessary, without discussing the actual proposal. I think it would be better if he does this in view of the shortness of time which is at the disposal of this Council now.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna:—I wish to give a general idea of what might be done. I do not suppose I will speak for more than another five or seven minutes. As I say, in such cases the tenant ought to be made to surrender that portion of his premises which he does not want to keep himself and the landlord should be allowed to sublet instead of the tenant. The act contemplates that the landlord will not receive and the tenant not pay more than the standard rent. It is a matter of every day experience and of common knowledge, that " pugree " as it is called here or " key-money " as it is called in England is freely paid and received, and yet scarcely any claims have come before the courts for the repayment of " pugree " amounts as can be done under the acts. Therefore, if we do not hear of cases of " pugree " coming before the courts, it proves that those who pay such " pugree " are bonâ fide in need of the premises they are renting in respect of which they are paying the " pugree " amounts, but such " pugrees " are paid more by sub-tenants to tenants than by tenants to landlords. In trying to clip the wings of the landlord we have unconsciously helped the tenant to profiteer. I know very well, Mr. President, that a tenant has a right to sublet under the Transfer of Property Act provided there is no express stipulation to the contrary. But we can get over this and help the landlord by laying down that if a tenant sublets without the permission of the landlord such tenant should not have the right of ejecting the sub-tenant and further that the sub-tenant in such cases should not be given the protection of section 9 of the act.

I may be allowed to quote a recent case in the High Court of Bombay. A firm of lawyers arranged to enter into a lease of their office premises for a period of three years commencing 1st January 1918. The lease had not been executed when the Rent Acts were passed and came into force on 10th April 1918. The landlord insisted on the lease being executed and this was done in July 1918. After executing the lease, the tenants took advantage of the Rent Act, and paid only the standard rent, namely, Rs. 275, although the lease stipulated that the rent was to be Rs. 400. Thereafter, the landlord was given notice by his own landlord to vacate his office in Church Gate street because the building was to be pulled down for the improvement of the road. The tenant, namely, the landlord of the lawyers' firm, in his turn, gave notice to his tenants, the firm of lawyers, to let him have the premises, as he wanted them for his own occupation. He could claim this under the Rent Act, and yet the court held that because there was a lease, the tenant could not be removed, and this in spite of the fact that the tenant was not paying the rent stipulated in the lease. That is a positive hardship, and it can be removed, if it is provided by the act that should any lease be executed after the Rent Act was passed, and the tenants endeavour to take advantage of the standard rent, then such act should on their part be deemed to amount to a forfeiture of the lease.

Then again, sir, the definition of a tenant in the act includes a rent farmer. Surely, the act does not contemplate that the rent collector should be benefited in any way. Even if he has no agreement for any fixed period, and he only collects the rents, he claims the same privileges as an ordinary tenant, and the courts allow him to claim it. I think that it was always intended that the act was for the benefit of those who needed residences or places of business such as offices and shops, and therefore, I contend that the benefit of the act should not be extended to the rent collector, and it is necessary to exclude him from the definition of a tenant. Since the sessions of this Council commenced, another interesting case under the Rent Act has been decided and particulars of which are to be found in the Times of India of only two days ago (4th August). The Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation purchased a house for their employees near the bandstand on the Cooperage in Bombay. There were eight tenants in the premises. On the bank giving them notice, six of the tenants vacated. Two others claimed that they could not be turned out, and consequently a suit for ejectment against these tenants had to be filed. On behalf of the bank, as the landlord, it was urged that under section 9 of the act, because the premises were wanted for their own purposes, for the use of persons in their employ, the tenants should be made to go. On behalf of the tenants it was urged that the words " or some other person in his employ ", which are the exact words used in the English act, are not used in the Bombay act. I would like to point out to the Council that this very point was raised in the select committee, and I observed that if for example the Honourable Sir Dinshaw Petit, who was another member of the select committee, wanted a tenant to vacate in order to enable him to give the premises to his own mill-manager, this should be construed to mean that he wanted the premises for his own purpose, and it was explained to us in select committee that that would be the interpretation, when we allowed the section to remain as it is. Now, sir, in the High Court judgment in this case it was held that the bank could not be said to want the premises for their own purpose. If the other tenants had persisted in the same fashion, they also would have been allowed by the court to remain in the premises.

RENT ACTS—TRANSFER OF BOMBAY IMPROVEMENT TRUST.

[6TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna; Mr. G. S. Curtis; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; the Vice-President; Mr. C. V. Mehta.]

These are some of the defects of the act which now require to be looked into, after our experience of them of the last two and a half years. I would like Government to appoint a committee, which would lay its recommendations before Government, and Government may then introduce necessary amendments. My resolution is only a recommendation to Government for the appointment of a committee to go into the matter or for Government themselves to take action. I do not stand here as an advocate for the landlords. I hold no brief for them. I was out and out in favour of the Rent Acts when passed, and I am still of the same opinion, with the idea of helping the tenants as best as possible. But, sir, if in trying to help them, we are doing any injustice to the landlords, it is our duty as legislators to see that such injustice is removed.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Mr. President,—I am extremely pleased to promise that the points which the Honourable Mr. Sethna has mentioned will be referred to a committee. But I cannot help saying that the matter might have been boiled down by shorter comments. I trust the honourable member will be satisfied with that assurance.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Are the points to be referred to the select committee on the Rent Bill, or is it going to be a separate committee?

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—It will be a separate committee appointed for the purpose.

The resolution was put to the vote and carried.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Resolution No. 12. The Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta.

"This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that the transfer of the Bombay Improvement Trust to the Bombay Municipal Corporation be completed without delay."

The Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta:—Mr. President,—There is considerable feeling on this matter in the corporation, and I should be compelled to go into details and facts to show how much justification there is for this resolution. But, as I understand that Government are disposed to accept this resolution, I will content myself with only moving it.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—In connection with this matter, Mr. President, I would refer the honourable member to the speech made by His Excellency two days ago.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta:—Is Government prepared to accept the resolution?

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Mr. President,—Two days ago, His Excellency announced that the bill for the transfer is almost ready, and it will be placed before this Council in March. This is a practical acceptance of this resolution. I have repeated what TRANSFER OF BOMBAY IMPROVEMENT TRUST—SLAUGHTER OF CATTLE—RECRUITMENT OF MAMLATDARS.

[Mr. G. S. Curtis; Mr. C. V. Mehta; the Vice-President; Mr. Munmohandass Ramji; Mr. S. B. Upasani.] [6TH AUGUST 1920.]

His Excellency said that there were difficulties with regard to drafting, and that the bill will not be ready before March.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta:—I understand the honourable member to say that if the resolution is altered to read "not later than March", that will meet his wishes.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael): —I do not think it worth while making any amendment.

The resolution was put to the vote and carried.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael): -Resolution No. 13. The Honourable Mr. Munmohundass.

"This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council to take steps to prohibit the slaughter of young and useful milch and agricultural cattel in the Presidency with a view to save a useful economic and agricultural asset of the Presidency."

The Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji—Mr. President,—I beg to ask for permission to postpone this resolution to the September session of the Council. In a question which I had put to Government, I asked for certain information, and it has not been furnished to me yet.

The resolution was by leave postponed.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael): —Resolution No. 16. The Honourable Mr. Upasani.

"This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that appointments to mamlatdars' posts be made by direct recruitment from graduates and not members of the subordinate revenue service."

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—Mr. President,—I propose to move this resolution in the interests of the efficiency of the executive branch of the provincial service. The Council is aware that so far back as 1878, earnest efforts were made to improve this service and to make it more efficient by limiting its recruitment to graduates so far as possible. That was done under the rules issued in the time of Sir Richard Temple. With a view to prevent any hardship to persons who were already in the service, two years were allowed to them to qualify themselves for mamlats by passing the lower and higher standard examinations prescribed for graduate candidates. The graduates were required to pass the lower standard examination within 18 months from the date of joining the service and the higher standard examination within six months more, and then they were to be held qualified for mamlatdars' posts which were reserved for them. If these rules had been worked strictly this service would long ago have been wholly manned by graduates. But shortly after Sir Richard Temple left the rules were relaxed in favour of old hands who were in the department, and one-third of the mamlatdars' appointments were reserved for them. That was in 1885. In 1904, a further relaxation was made in their favour and half the posts were reserved for non-graduates. Under the operation of these rules half the appointments were taken away from graduates, and more subsequently, when appointments to deputy collectors' posts came to be made by direct recruitment, the graduates who had entered the service found their promotion doubly blocked. As a matter of fact, if you go through the list of mamlatdars, you will find that several of them have stagnated far too long, and that many of them, although in service for over 20 years, have not succeeded in getting promotion to a deputy collector's place. So far back as 1903, Government itself proposed that the mamlatdars' service should be made part of the provincial service. That proposal was not immediately accepted, but more subsequently this service has been included in the provincial service. That being the case and in view of the fact that in the near future a larger number of appointments held by I.C.S. officers will be thrown open to the provincial service, it is desirable that this service should be improved by better recruitment at its very base. It is not possible to do it under present conditions. Under the rules, as they stand at present, a graduate, if he goes in, has to start on a low salary of Rs. 30, and then, after he passes the required qualifying examinations, he gets only Rs. 35 or Rs. 40, and takes eight to ten years or even more to get a mamlat. In these circumstances, it is not possible to attract the right type of men, and the efficiency of the service has in consequence suffered. That being the case, it is desirable that this recruitment should be on the lines laid down in the rules of

RECRUITMENT OF MAMLATDARS.

[6TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. S. B. Upasani; Mr. G. S. Curtis.]

1878, so as to allow the graduates who may enter the service, a chance of getting a mamlat within a reasonable time, say three or four years at the outside. Further it is necessary that the starting pay should also be reasonable enough to attract the right type of men. For the judicial branch of the provincial service, the rules are far more liberal, and Government themselves have recognized that the mamlatdar's service is as important as that of the sub-judges. They have observed that the mamlatdars are the most useful, honourable, and responsible body of public servants, with duties far larger in volume, infinitely more varied in character, with far higher responsibilities and far wider opportunities for doing good or evil than even sub-judges of the second class. That being the case, it is but desirable that we should make the conditions of service in this branch as attractive as those for the sub-judge's line. For the latter service it is expressly provided by statute that only LL.B.'s or those who have passed the High Court Pleaders' Examination will be held eligible. The same educational and legal qualification should be strictly insisted on for those who may wish to join the executive branch. The mamlatdars have to discharge important judicial functions as magistrates, not only of third class and second class but of first class, and also to do civil work of an important nature. That being the case, it is in every way desirable that we must recruit for this service men with sufficient legal knowledge preferably LL.B.'s. Even in the police service it has been found possible to attract men of this type, and it would be more desirable to offer the same inducements, if not more, for those who are to be recruited for this branch. This is a very opportune time for instituting this reform inasmuch as under the new revision there will be sufficient provision for promotion up to Rs. 250 for the lower subordinates. If my resolution is, therefore, accepted it will improve this important branch of service so far as future recruitment is concerned. With these remarks I place the resolution before the Council.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Mr. Chairman,—I confess I have found considerable difficulty in following the trend of the honourable member's remarks, and I am not quite sure what arguments I have to meet.

The present arrangements which are the result of a good many years' experience provide for double recruitment: partly from graduates and partly from men who spend their early years on the lower rungs of the ladder of revenue service, and who by dint of hard work and merit manage to rise to higher posts. The honourable member has justified his proposals I think,—I had great difficulty in hearing what he said, I always have,—by stating that the present starting pay of a graduate is the small sum of Rs. 30 a month and that a graduate, of a good class, who has taken a satisfactory degree, could hardly be expected to join Government service on a salary of this amount. The honourable member is not correct in his figures. According to the new scale, the starting pay admissible to graduates is not less than Rs. 70 a month, and it seems to me that that pay ought to be sufficient to attract graduates of a good class. It must be remembered that from the date of their joining Government service, their services count for pension, and I think it is probable that the starting pay of the mamlatdars will be very considerably improved and their prospects very much brightened.

We have, now, to consider what the consequences would be if we accept this resolution. Members of this Council will realize the utter stagnation that will follow in the subordinate revenue service. If you shut off from these people all chances of rising to a post of responsibility and greater emoluments, it is perfectly obvious that there will be no incentive to them to display their energies, or shall I say higher powers? A mere reference to the number of mamlatdars in the Civil List will show that the two classes of mamlatdars are on the whole very satisfactorily placed. I speak from my experience—I was a Collector and Commissioner—and I think on the whole the best arrangement seems to be a mixture of the two classes: those who spring from the bottom and rise to the post of mamlatdars, and those who have got university degrees from the top. Under the present arrangements they supplement each other's deficiencies, one giving the benefit of his experience and the other of his knowledge. That, I think, is a very good arrangement, and I see no reason why it should be disturbed. I am aware that the honourable gentleman has had a long and distinguished career in the judicial service. But I am sure he is not aware of the working of that rather wonderful machine, the taluka kacheri. And until he has—I had it—I do not think that he should come to this Council and propose that an arrangement, which has been the result of many years' experience, and moreover found by experience to work satisfactorily, should be disturbed. Therefore, I would ask the Council to reject the resolution.

RECRUITMENT OF MAMLATDARS—REVISION OF PRE-WAR PENSIONS.

[Mr. S. B. Upasani; the Vice-President; Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud.] [6TH AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—Sir,—It is owing to the complaints that I hear from those who have already joined the subordinate revenue service as candidates for mamlat and who now regret their having joined it at all, that I have ventured to bring this resolution before the Council. Graduates who have been in the service for many years and have not yet got a mamlat have reason to be dissatisfied as also those who have not got their due promotion to deputy collectors' posts even after more than 20 years' service, and these feel humiliated when they find their juniors who hold the same educational qualifications promoted over their heads, and particularly when young men without their experience selected and given deputy collectors' posts by direct recruitment. All this discontent will be avoided if recruitment for the mamlatdar's service itself is made directly from graduates who possess distinguished educational qualifications, and promotions to deputy collectors' posts made from among them after they have sufficiently long administrative experience. At present there are in mamlatdar's grade graduates and non-graduates who have been there for 20 years or more, and it is rather hard that they should not have chances of promotion to a higher grade and that young men should directly be recruited for the deputy collectors' posts. This has produced dissatisfaction and discontent. Under the present rules Government expect that a graduate should be prepared to start on Rs. 30 and to serve for 10 years on Rs. 40 to Rs. 45. Would it be possible to get the right type of graduate for the mamlatdar's grade under these conditions, and especially when even after that period, in many cases, he gets no promotion for many years? A glance over the several grades of mamlatdars will show that there are far more supersessions among them than in the sub-judges' line, and that they have been kept far too long in the mamladar's grade without due promotion. Now, 60 per cent. of deputy collectors are recruited from the mamlatdar's line. If that is the case, is it not desirable that mamlatdars' service itself should be recruited from those who possess the qualifications which are insisted upon for those who are directly recruited to the deputy collectors line? If you improve this service, the higher service will improve automatically. Otherwise both branches will be inefficient and there will be just cause for discontent for those who fail to get due promotion. Even now men with much lower calibre and of much less capacity, are promoted to deputy collectors' posts in preference to seniors with equal or better qualification, and this is hardly in the best interests of the service. During the last few years the mamlatdar's line has ceased to attract graduates and the lower grades are filled by non-graduates who have no university qualification at all. Every year the work is more exacting and more elaborate, and it is but desirable that a high preliminary qualification should be insisted upon to make the service efficient. A large number of graduates are turned out by the university every year, and I do not think Government will find any difficulty to introduce this reform which I propose in my resolution. With these few remarks I place the resolution before the Council.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Before I put this resolution to the Council, I have to make one remark, and it is this, that the three members of Government who are present here are none of them graduates (laughter), and personally are not very strongly in favour of the motion.

The resolution was then put to vote and lost.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Resolution No. 20. The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud.

"This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that a Committee be appointed to consider the question of the revision of pre-war pensions of the retired members of the provincial and subordinate services."

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud:—Mr. Chairman,—Early in the war Government realized that the old rates of pay for their subordinate servants would not go very far, and therefore they gave them war allowances and promised that those war allowances would be turned into substantive rates of pay. Soon afterwards the revision of their pay was taken up. But the Council will, I hope, see that this revision was necessitated by the rising prices of food. It might be said that in the case of pensioners Government would not be able to afford the large outlay which may be needed. But the Council will, I hope, remember that the rates of pay of the subordinate service were raised and revised not because Government could afford the money but because it was absolutely necessary to keep them going. The pensioners who have served Government faithfully and loyally for 30 years are the persons who are now very hard-hit. They have spent the best part of their life in serving Government, and now at the age when they are able to do nothing more to help themselves, they deserve all the sympathy that can be extended to them. When Government loan out the services of their servants to local boards and municipalities, their pension contribution is fixed and recovered from those bodies. It is a certain proportion of the pay which the employees receive from those bodies.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—The honourable member seems to be under a misapprehension about the pensioners contributing to their pension fund. They get their pay without any deduction to the contribution of pension fund.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud:—I do not say, sir, that Government lay aside an actual contribution for their servants, but I submit that when Government loan out the services of their subordinates, they take from those bodies to whom such services are lent, a contribution towards their pension.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael): –This seems to be rather irrelevant to the actual case before us.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud:—Well, I will not press that point further. I will only say that the pension contribution which accumulates in this manner is also not wholly spent upon the pensioners so loaned out, and considering the same analogy we might say that the pension contribution which would at that rate accumulate for the members who are actually in the service of Government would certainly be a very considerable sum and would be quite enough to cover the necessities of the few pensioners who survive after the age of 55 years. There is a very small percentage of Government servants who long survive that age. It would, therefore, be no hardship to provincial revenues to keep the survivors in good condition. The case for the revision of pensions is very strong in view of the high prices, and I hope it will commend itself to the Council.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—Mr. President,—I have great pleasure in supporting this resolution, because I feel that the lot of pensioners is one that should certainly commend itself to this Council. Pensioners are people who are no longer able to work any more. Government give them the pensions sanctioned according to their old scale, and now when the prices have increased the pensioners have to spend far more than what they get as their pension for their subsistence. It is, I think, one of the most heartless effects of these high prices. Their cries have been heard in the newspapers and these cries are certainly justified. The cost of living has more than doubled but the amount of their pensions measured in rupees remains the same. If a person can eat silver rupees and digest it, then the amount that they got before may be sufficient. But silver cannot be changed into the same amount of food and clothing as before. I think whatever the difficulties of Government may be they are bound in honour to see that their old servants are not kept in a state of semi-starvation. We always hear of the cruel master who turns away his horse after it is no longer able to work, but, I hope, Government is better than such cruel masters, and I hope the Council will accept this resolution.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Sir,—I am sorry I feel inclined to oppose this resolution. I do not believe the position that if a Government servant retires at 55 and earns his pension, that he is solely to rely upon the pension and not to do anything else in order to supplement it. Government officers after they retire from active work suffer from want of active work and die early, and those who take to other work and supplement their income and keep up their energy fare well generally both in point of health and resources, and I certainly do not subscribe to the view that an officer after retiring from service should do nothing and court an early death by inactivity. He should employ himself in some work to supplement his resources. Of course we have the European method of not maintaining a horse after he has become old. I really do not see, therefore, that Government should take pity on these pensioners.

The only ground on which the resolution will be defensible is that if Government take into consideration the question of the revision of the pensions of the higher services and do not take into consideration the revision of pensions of the provincial and other services, then there is some case for them. But I do not think it would be proper to ask this Council to invite an additional burden upon our resources which are at present already overburdened.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—Mr. President,—As an old pensioner of Government it would be my duty and not that of the Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud to bring the sad tale of the pensioners before this Council. But as selfish motives would have been imputed to me I refrained from taking the initiative. I am glad that my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Garud has brought the present proposition before the Council, and I accord my hearty support to it.

REVISION OF PRE-WAR PENSIONS.

[Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole; Mr. G. K. Parekh.] [6TH AUGUST 1920.]

The position that has been enunciated by the Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai that old pensioners who are incapable of doing any work should be shot like old horses is not a position that would commend itself to this Council. What he says is that old servants of Government after they are unfitted for Government service and after they retire should earn additional income and make both ends meet. In the case of those who are incapable of doing work on account of infirmity his remedy is very drastic. He says such old men must die.

Taken seriously this is a question which deserves consideration at the hands of Government. There is a moral obligation on Government to see that its old servants get a living allowance from the pensions that are given to them. An old peon puts in a service of 34 years and after the end of this service he gets a pension of Rs. 4 a month. I am talking of pensioners who took pension in 1900. According to the prices ruling in those days Rs. 4 a month were quite sufficient to keep a man alive. His bajri bread and a small room in which he could live could be procured for Rs. 4 a month. What is the state of things now? It costs him upon the lowest calculation Rs. 12 a month to keep body and soul together. Now, I ask this Council to consider whether it is not the duty of Government to treat these old pensioners of theirs in an adequate manner and to give them sufficient pittance to enable them to live. It is the duty of the state to see that its old servants are treated in a just manner. Any commercial house in Bombay would do so, and I do not see why Government should not do likewise.

As my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Garud has explained to the Council, in the case of the present servants of Government, 35 per cent. and 40 per cent. have been added to their salaries because prices have gone up generally. If Government will not take high prices into consideration in dealing with pensioners who are earning small pensions of Rs. 5 and Rs. 10, they will be shirking their moral obligation.

Coming to the case of big pensioners like myself, what do we find? When I retired from Government service in 1903, I made calculations for myself as to the cost of living after retirement. I said to myself that I could get a bungalow in Poona for Rs. 50 a month and keep a carriage and servants. I calculated the cost of these to be Rs. 150 per month. But what do I find now. Instead of Rs. 50, if I hire a bungalow I will have to pay at least Rs. 250 a month. For two servants, for whom I estimated in those days Rs. 18 a month, I have to pay Rs. 40 per month, and my carriage is going to cost me Rs. 100, in place of my estimate of Rs. 50. The Council will thus see that on account of great rise of prices the life of pensioners is becoming unbearable and in the case of small pensioners life has become almost impossible. I know several cases of pensioners drawing Rs. 10 and Rs. 15 as pensions who have to go and beg of their rich relations to give them doles from time to time in order to keep themselves and their families in food and the necessary amount of clothing. Many a pensioned schoolmaster has come to me to ask for notes of introduction to the Honourable Principal Paranjpye and other principals, because he is unable to provide the school and college fees for his school-going children out of the small pension that he gets. They want certificates from me and notes of recommendation to get their children admitted free into schools and colleges. Their state is pitiable in the extreme.

I am told that in the midst of the great war the case of some high officers of Government who had retired during the previous three years was considered by Government and they were given additional pensions on account of increased cost of living. Now just fancy Government taking up the case of pensioners drawing more than Rs. 5,000 a year and giving them extra pensions on account of the increased cost of living.

The resolution before the Council deals with the case of smaller pensioners including peons, clerks and schoolmasters drawing Rs. 10 and Rs. 15 and in some cases even Rs. 4 per month as pensions. I think it will be a very wrong attitude for Government to take if they were not to consider the case of these poor old servants of theirs.

The moral obligation rests on the Government especially in the case of petty pensioners. Government must give them at least a living allowance which in these days comes to about Rs. 12 per month. With these remarks I heartily support the resolution that has been put forth by the Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud.

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh :—Sir,—I think that the resolution ought not to be accepted. Duty always takes precedence over charity, and we have a large number of duties under the reformed Government which would entail a considerable amount of

REVISION OF PRE-WAR PENSIONS.

[6TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. G. K. Parekh; Mr. C. V. Mehta; the Vice-President.] expenditure. It is all very well to plead for charity, but at the same time we ought to bear in mind that here is a proposal which would make a very indefinite call upon the purse of Government, and I am afraid possibly prevent us from carrying on some of the reforms which we expect the reformed Government shall have to take in hand. I, therefore, think that it is a matter in which we have no right whatever to hamper the new Government by putting burdens upon the Government purse at a time when we really do not know what the amount of the burden is or what we have to expend in carrying out large reforms which the country has to undertake. My honourable friends probably do not see the difference between people who are actually employed in Government service and those who have actually retired. The great difference is that so far as the servants at present employed in Government service are concerned, it is the duty of Government to keep them above want, contented, and for that purpose it is necessary that they should be adequately paid, but in the case of the servants who have retired, where the administrative Government derives no benefit from them, I think we must be very cautious before incurring very heavy expenditure in helping them.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta:—Mr. President,—I am afraid I cannot accept the principle that is attempted to be laid down by the Honourable Mr. Gokuldas Parekh. It seems to me, sir, that there is really no difference between a servant who is serving you now and one who has retired or has been made to retire on reaching the age of 55 years after putting in a long and faithful service with Government. The principle to my mind, sir, is exactly the same. Before we take up any new functions it is our duty to see that our servants are properly treated and are adequately paid, and it seems to me that the mere accident of a servant having retired in the past should not disentitle him from consideration at the hands of his masters. The whole object of our pensions is that the man in the evening of his life shall have something to fall back upon, something to keep him in easy circumstances, and it seems to me, sir, that when an extraordinary rise in prices occurs some kind of consideration must be given to circumstances which could not possibly have been foreseen when the pensions were fixed. The present proposal is a very modest one. It merely asks Government that a committee be appointed to consider whether such a thing could be done, and whether it would not be within the range of practical politics. I think, sir, that on that ground on such a modest recommendation there need not be any opposition on general principles. Let a committee go into the whole matter fully and if they are able to make out a case which will satisfy us, then no doubt the Council will accept it.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—I wish to refer to a small point which arises with regard to the observation made by the honourable mover as to pension contributions. I should like to make it clear that Government do not keep an account of pension contributions while their officers are in their own service. When a local body or what is technically called a "foreign employer" asks for the services of a Government officer, it is but right that the local body or foreign employer should pay towards the cost of the pension for the officer who would be serving under them for some time. In that case a pension contribution is taken from the other employer as a condition on which the services of the officer are lent. Apart from this, there are no contributions towards the payment of pensions. Pensions come entirely out of the general revenues. They cost at present, at least the budget for next year is for Rs. 46,21,000, and under the present arrangement we pay for pensions of those who receive their pensions from the treasuries under the Bombay Government, i.e., under the Accountant General in Bombay. They include pensioners of the Government of India and of other Governments, and if we were to increase these pensions now, we should be paying for the pensions which will under the new Reforms Scheme be payable entirely by the Government of India and other Governments. Under the new arrangement each Government will be responsible for the pensions on account of its past employees only. I think every one will agree that the case of Government pensioners, particularly small pensioners, in the face of the very rapid rise in the cost of living which has taken place in the last three or four years, is a very hard one and everyone would like to be able to do something if one could. But it is not quite right, in my opinion, to distinguish between Government pensioners in this matter and other old persons who are living on fixed incomes. Their claims are equally strong and deserving. They probably have rendered efficient service to the state in their own line and if we have to provide for Government pensioners, it seems to me we should provide equally for other persons in the same position. Government have received from time to time in the last two or three years applications from officers asking for an increase to their pensions on the ground of the high cost of living, and latterly, I think, we have received an application from an association on the same ground. Government have considered these applications and they decided that they could not take any action upon them for various reasons. The first reason was that the pensioner usually retires at the age of 55 or less and he is a perfectly free man when he takes his pension, and can take up any employment to supplement his income, and he is very often able to find some employment. There is nothing to prevent him from taking up some new work. The second reason was that the increase in the pension would involve a very heavy charge on our finances. I entirely agree with what has fallen from the Honourable Mr. Gokuldas on this question. At present we are paying, as I said, Rs. 46,21,000 in pensions. A very small percentage on that would bring a very big bill and a bill coming at a time when we are finding it very difficult to provide for the establishments at present employed by us. In discussing the budget I mentioned the fact of the very heavy charges which the improvement in the scale of pay of the establishments under all departments of Government was involving on provincial finances, and it seemed to Government that it was very necessary, first of all, before holding out any hope that we could do anything for our pensioners, to concentrate on providing a sufficient pay for the staff at present doing work for Government. That is the first consideration, and until that matter has been dealt with and funds have been provided, it is quite impossible to consider the question of increasing the pensions of those who have already retired.

REVISION OF PRE-WAR PENSIONS.

[The Vice-President; Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud.] [6TH AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable Mr. Chunilal Mehta said that it is, after all, a very simple resolution and that it merely asks for a committee to advise. It is true that the resolution recommends the appointment of a committee, but they will have to go into the whole question and, I presume, to make recommendations to Government on the subject. The difficulty about this is that if you appoint a committee in a matter of this kind, it inevitably gives rise to hopes in the minds of the pensioners that something will be done for them. Now, I think it would be quite wrong and also unfortunate at this stage, in view of the approaching change of Government and of the heavy demands for funds which will be made on Government and on the provincial finances by Ministers on the one hand and Members of Council on the other hand, for the proper administration of Government, if we were to hold out any such hopes. We should not, in my opinion, do anything to raise or to create any hope in them until it is quite clear that we shall be able to afford the necessary funds. With these remarks I venture to express the hope that this Council will not approve of the resolution.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud :—Sir,—If I had merely to convince the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai, I would say that this resolution should commend itself to him since we cannot shoot our pensioners; because the easiest way of killing them is to put no temptation in their way to supplement their pension by additional work, and thus to keep themselves fit and to live to a great age to burden the provincial revenues. The best way to induce them to lead inactive lives and to die off soon is to increase their pensions. But the matter, sir, deserves more serious consideration at the hands of the Council.

It is a surprise to me that there should be any opposition to this resolution from my old friend the Honourable Mr. Gokuldas Parekh on the ground that the reforms are coming and that they will require all the funds at our disposal. Well, sir, if we cannot first look after our old servants and our present servants, if we cannot even feed them properly or provide them with a living wage, simply because the reforms are coming, then, the reforms can very well wait. It is not right to tell our starving pensioners and servants that we cannot help them because the political reforms are coming and they will need all the money. It is like telling a hungry man to keep a fine garden to develop his æsthetic sense.

Well, sir, I was not saying, as you pointed out, that Government maintain a pension account. What I did say was that if Government did maintain a pension account, they would find that they were making a very large saving in that account, and what the present Government savings.....

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael) :—I should be delighted if the honourable member would explain how a saving is made or could be made. It would facilitate our financial problem very much if the honourable member can suggest a way.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud :—If a calculation were made on the basis of the pension contribution we charge to local bodies for the services of our servants, and if we set aside the amount which we would have to pay as pension contribution at that rate for our present staff, it will be found that we are making a large saving, because the average life in India is very short. After they reach the age of 55 the average expectation of life in this country is very short indeed, so that the time for which we have actually to maintain a pensioner is also very short. Considering it from this point of view, if we made a calculation—a hypothetical calculation—and calculated the cost of pension of our present establishments we would find, sir, that there is a large saving. All these things would, however, be examined at length if we appointed a committee, and that is why I have come up to Government with a request to appoint a committee to examine this question. We shall examine it from this point of view or from any other point of view that suggests itself, and we shall be able to ascertain what the charges are. My first submission is that whatever the charge, it must be met, because it is a question of keeping our old servants, who have put in approved service, in good condition in the evening of their life, and that, I think, should be the first charge on our revenues. These things can be definitely ascertained and examined in a committee. It will not be possible to take the whole Council into these figures, and it will not be possible for the Council to pronounce a verdict upon these very important matters. What the Council can say at this stage is whether we shall or shall not give anything to our pensioners, whether we shall merely give them excuses and excuse ourselves from doing one of our most important duties, whether we shall tell them that we are now contemplating reforms, that a new scheme is going to come into operation, and that they had better not place their needs before us, because our needs are greater. I submit that this is the point of view from which this Council has to consider the question, and if they come to the conclusion that these pensioners should be helped, and we owe a duty to them in that respect, then their obvious duty would be to pass this resolution, and to ask a committee to examine the whole situation. I commend it to the Council for its acceptance, with the hope that honourable members will show their approval of this resolution and the policy contained in it.

REVISION OF PRE-WAR PENSIONS.

[6TH AUGUST 1920.] [Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud; the Vice-President.]

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—I am rather disappointed to find that the saving which the honourable member suggested we could make is merely a hypothetical saving.

The resolution was put to the vote and lost, 16 voting for and 17 against. The Council divided as follows:—

STATE LIQUOR CONTROL.

[The Vice-President; Mr. G. S. Curtis; Mr. B. S. Kamat; Mr. R. E. Enthoven; Mr. R. P. Paranjpye.] [6TH AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Resolution No. 23. The Honourable Mr. Kamat.

"This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that in the interest of temperance reform, Government may be pleased (a) to try as an experimental measure in a suitable area, preferably in Bombay city, a system of State management for the sale of country liquor, (b) to constitute a Board of Liquor Control composed of officials and non-officials in the selected area, (c) to control the sale price of liquor, and (d) to improve the internal arrangements in public houses by providing on the premises counter attractions such as non-alcoholic refreshments."

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Mr. President,—Before the honourable Mr. Kamat begins his speech, I venture to make an appeal to him. We are now on the fifth day of our deliberations. I venture to make an appeal to him. He is entering on a discussion of a matter of special interest, which I warn him, will require at least two hours. I imagine that he is prepared to take half an hour, and I am prepared to speak more if necessary.

I venture to put it to the sense of the Council that after five days' strenuous labour on various subjects in this Council, we are not in a position to express our views on excise policy with any great facility or clearness of judgment. Furthermore, sir, I would urge that we could not, in any possibility, make any arrangements that are likely to be of a novel character. Excise will be transferred in a few months more, and there will be ample time for the honourable member to place his views and great erudition before the Minister, when the new Council comes into existence.

I think, sir, that the discussion should therefore be adjourned under rule 7, and I hope that the Council will accept my motion.

I propose that:—

The discussion of this resolution be adjourned under rule 7 of the Rules for the conduct of Council Business.

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat:—Mr. President,—Regarding this motion for adjournment, my reply is that, in the first place, there is no necessity to pass to the next item of business for this reason that I am only advocating an experiment, an experiment which does not tie the hands of Government or of the incoming Minister. Secondly, it is not certain that a member of this Council now advocating an experiment may come into the next Council; and thirdly, because of an impending change in the Council, it is not necessary for this Council to put a stop to all its resolutions. We need not in fact be at a standstill. Just as the ordinary machinery of Government goes on whether a new Governor comes in or an old one goes out, similarly, the ordinary machinery of this Legislative Council ought to go on so far as the items on the agenda are concerned. Lastly, I think it would be an advantage to an incoming Minister if we set up an experiment for him to see if he can profit by it. If we do not do it at the present moment, all the time will be lost. I, therefore, say that this motion for adjournment should not be accepted, and we should consider the resolution.

The Honourable Mr. R. E. Enthoven:—Mr. President,—At the beginning of this Council, we had, from the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye, a reference to the somewhat jejune process of flogging a dead horse. The Honourable Mr. Kamat, if he will permit me to say so, is attempting to race a horse that has not been foaled. He wishes to bring in a resolution in connection with the excise system, and he tells us that it is desirable to make an experiment very soon. But, sir, at the present moment, as the honourable member is perhaps aware, we have auctioned the shops for three years, and that period will come to an end in March 1921. The honourable member will see, therefore, that we cannot make experiments immediately, and considering that argument, I hope he will be prepared to allow the reasonable course of adjourning this motion. The matter will certainly come up, in due course, before an entirely different authority, and I think, therefore, that he should allow the normal course to be followed. We cannot interfere with the period of auction. The shops must be held till the end of March, and therefore, to discuss now what is going to be done later on, by an authority that is not here, is, I think, a process really considerably worse than the flogging of the dead horse, to which the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye so rightly referred.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—Mr. President,—I wish to oppose this motion for proceeding to the next item of business, because I feel that it is just the proper time when we can consider an item like this. The Excise Commissioner, the Honourable Mr. Enthoven, has told us that the period of auction will come to an end in March next.

STATE LIQUOR CONTROL.

[6TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. R. P. Paranjpye; Mr. D. V. Belvi; Mr. B. S. Kamat; the Vice-President; Mr. G. S. Curtis.]

I do not suppose that he is going to put a stop to all his plans till after March, till the new Council comes into being. I suppose he must make arrangements about letting out the shops, because, after all, when the new Minister comes into office in January or so, he will not have time to look to every detail of the administration, during the course of the month or two that will be at his disposal, and the Honourable Mr. Enthoven will take a great many steps in advance. I do not think the machine of Government will stop in the least, on account of the new régimé, and therefore, I think it is exactly the proper time for us to consider the policy. At any rate, such a resolution would guide the Excise Commissioner in making arrangements for letting the shops for experimental areas. It should be quite possible later on to make arrangements for a few of these shops if it is decided to continue the old policy, but I say this that, considering the opinion of this Council, he might, in his next programme of auctions, keep a few of these shops unlet. In this manner the opinion of this Council would have a very great weight in giving guidance to the Excise Commissioner when he makes out his programme. I, therefore, think that the present is just the time to move a resolution of this kind, and I think that the motion for adjournment should not be accepted.

The Honourable Mr. D. V. Belvi:—Mr. Chairman,—I have the misfortune to differ from my honourable friend Mr. Curtis in reference to his motion for adjournment of this resolution. The question of excise is of such absorbing and paramount importance to the public that it is not desirable to shut out any light falling on it even at the cost of some time.

The only argument that has been advanced for the postponement of this resolution is that this Council has been sitting for the last four days or so, and that every member of it feels tired. I do not think it is a valid argument. It is our duty to go through the whole business. If necessary we might even sit to-morrow, but we are bound to see that every resolution that can possibly be moved is thoroughly discussed and considered.

The passing of a resolution like this does not bind Government to carry out the recommendations contained in it even after six months. But let us know what the Honourable Mr. Kamat's views are, and if his ideas are such as may commend themselves to Government, it is necessary to give the Honourable Mr. Kamat a fair opportunity of placing his views before the Council. On these grounds I oppose this motion for adjournment.

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat:—May I rise to a point of order? Rule 7 to which the honourable member refers is not contained in the rules regulating matters of general interest. It applies to legislative procedure.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—I may point out that the honourable member's argument is not valid. These rules govern all matters.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Mr. Chairman,—I rise to say a few words. I will deal with the Honourable Mr. Belvi first. His argument is practically this. Whatever the number of resolutions, whatever the vagueness or relative unimportance of the resolutions placed before the Council, this Council is bound to sit here until the whole business is finished. I tremble to think what would be the fate of the new Council with 113 members if that doctrine is once accepted. Those of us who are familiar with the procedure in the House of Commons know that private members' resolutions have, as a matter of course, no very great chance of ever being discussed. A ballot is always held at stated intervals, and a very small percentage of private members' resolutions or bills ever attain the dignity of being discussed. It is a practice there—I do not suppose that for many years that practice will be followed here—that private members' resolutions and bills are formally printed but many of them rarely come up for discussion. So much for the Honourable Mr. Belvi's argument. We have still a long list, and if we are really to do justice to the importance of the subjects therein contained, we shall have to go on until Monday next.

As regards the main question, I submit, sir, that the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye and the Honourable Mr. Kamat, two or three days ago, insisted on the importance of leaving the incoming Minister an absolutely free hand. My honourable colleague in the chair fully accepted the suggestion the other day that the incoming Minister should have a free hand in matters of excise, untrammelled by any previous directions either from the officials responsible for the department or presumably the members of this Council. Now sir, this motion practically goes dead counter to the statement of the honourable members. In other words, they want it both ways. I submit, sir, that this Council ought not to tolerate that. They must have one thing or the other. If there is anything done now in this direction, well, the incoming Minister is bound to pay very considerable respect to it. Besides, the constitution of a board of liquor control by the state as is now suggested is absolutely unworkable, and unknown in any big established system of excise administration anywhere in the world.

STATE LIQUOR CONTROL—ERANDOL REVENUE SETTLEMENT.

[Mr. G. S. Curtis; Mr. R. P. Paranjpye.] [6TH AUGUST 1920.]

Putting that aside, I think no profit will be gained by a further discussion of the subject, and I would recommend that this resolution be adjourned.

The motion for adjourning the discussion of the resolution under rule 7, was then put to the vote and carried.

[At this stage the Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael) withdrew and the Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis occupied the chair.]

The Honourable the Chairman (Mr. G. S. Curtis):—Resolution No. 2. The Honourable Mr. Paranjpye.

"This Council recommends that the new revenue settlement of the Erandol taluka as recommended by the settlement officer be not sanctioned."

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—Mr. President,—I rise to move this proposition with some diffidence. I must say in the first place that we all hear of the esteemable person, or rather the unesteemable person, who quotes scriptures for his own purposes, and from that point of view when we hear members of Government bringing forward the excuse when it suits them of not committing the future Council to any distinct lines of policy, I wish they had followed the same lines of policy in this case. Now, under the new councils honourable members will remember that the settlement of land revenue is to come within their purview. We should have thought that under these circumstances during the very last gasp of the present Council no definite step would have been taken by Government; and those members of Government who are particularly keen about leaving the future councils free, should themselves not have taken steps which would commit them for a period of 30 years. Now, what do we find? The new proposed settlement about which my resolution speaks has been already sanctioned.

The Honourable the Chairman (Mr. G. S. Curtis):—I will remind the honourable member that land revenue is a reserved subject. Excise is transferred.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—I may be wrong, but the Joint Committee distinctly says that the settlements have to be considered by Legislative Councils. In any case I think that the new councils, from my way of looking at the point, are being unfairly treated in having this new settlement sanctioned just during the last six months of the present régime. What is more curious still is that I sent a notice of this motion nearly two months ago. I am not quite certain of the date of the Government order, but I rather feel that the sanction was given to this settlement after the notice of my resolution was received by Government. That will show to the honourable members of this Council the attitude which Government takes when it suits them and also when it does not suit them.

The question which I wish to bring before the Council is that the new settlement that has been proposed, at any rate when I sent in the resolution, is of such an exorbitant nature that the Council will doubtless recommend to Government that that settlement should not be sanctioned. I shall now explain the exorbitant nature of the settlement. Erandol is a taluka in East Khandesh. The last settlement was promulgated in the year 1889, and honourable members know that according to the rules, at any particular settlement the maximum rise should never exceed 33 per cent. At the last settlement this maximum rise of 32·6 per cent. was actually made on the old settlement. Now it is proposed that the same rise is to be made on the new settlement, so that a man who paid Rs. 100 in 1889 will have now, just 31 years after, to pay 170 or 172 per cent.

The Honourable the Chairman (Mr. G. S. Curtis):—What does the rise come to?

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—My honourable friend will see that 33 per cent. rise on Rs. 133 comes to 177, if Rs. 100 was paid in the year 1889. I think that is a very simple sum in arithmetic, and I need not go further into that. Now according to the rules of Government, the maximum increase is to be 33 per cent. Honourable members will agree that in order to make out a case for this maximum increase, you ought to show that all the conditions have altered in an eminently favourable manner. On every point you must show that the change has been in favour of an increase in the assessment; it ought not to be simply a case of a few points in favour and a few points against. If it were a case for keeping the assessment as it was or at the most for increasing it by 7 or 10 per cent., then it would not much matter. But here we are told that the proposed increase is 33 per cent. I think, therefore, a very strong case has got to be made before such an assessment can be sanctioned. Now, what are the conditions? The settlement reports are generally very exhaustive, but the report that has been made—not printed and published, but put up in various places—is only of a very moderate character. First of all, we have got to consider whether the prosperity of the taluka has increased or decreased. This prosperity can be looked at from various points of view. From the point of view of population, the report itself says that the population has decreased. Then consider industries in the taluka. There again you find that the industries have all practically disappeared. Before 1890 the non-agricultural population was 61·4; in the year 1911 that population diminished to 46·3 per cent., and in the year 1919 it is only 32·5 per cent. What does that show? The non-agricultural population is rapidly disappearing and the pressure on agriculture is increasing more and more. Then there are various other things. Is the fertility of the land increasing? If we look at the report again we find that the number of cattle has decreased. The amount of manure available for fertilizing the land has therefore consequently decreased, and also on account of the further fact that people are using a great deal of manure for fuel purposes because fuel has also become expensive. The number of plough-cattle has decreased. In fact formerly a pair of bullocks had to plough 17 acres of land. Every pair now is required to plough 21 acres of land. Honourable members will see that these figures show that the fertility of the land is not likely to increase.

ERANDOL REVENUE SETTLEMENT.

[6TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. R. P. Paranjpye; Mr. G. S. Curtis.]

Now consider the rainfall. The figures of rainfall are very interesting. In recent years you find that rainfall is getting more and more uncertain. Take the details from the report itself and you find that while during the first 20 years of this existing settlement there were only two years of bad rainfall, out of the last ten years there was only one year of good rainfall, three or four of normal rainfall and five years of deficient rainfall.

I do not think all these points show that the land can bear greater burden. One does not know exactly whether the conditions of deficient rainfall are going to be permanent or not. There are some authorities who think that bad rainfall has come to stay, but that, at any rate, would require further experience before one dogmatizes on that point. But one can easily see that conditions of the people in that taluka are certainly not better on account of these various factors. As I have already mentioned the weaving and other industries have practically all disappeared. Most people are going in for agriculture and consequently a larger population of the taluka is going in for agricultural pursuits.

Then take the indebtedness of the agriculturists. The report says that the indebtedness of the agriculturists is increasing. It says "the money lenders' circulating capital means so much indebtedness of the agriculturists." Money lenders are more prosperous; quite naturally. Their very prosperity shows that peasants are decreasing in prosperity.

The Honourable the Chairman (Mr. G. S. Curtis):—Will the honourable member read out the paragraph of the report that he is quoting? Is it paragraph 21, page 11? The honourable member has made a statement to the effect that the total indebtedness of the taluka is increasing. I want the authority for that remark.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—The report says money lenders are prosperous. So apparently one can say.....

The Honourable the Chairman (Mr. G. S. Curtis):—May I help the honourable gentleman? I will read from page 11:

> "The general condition of the agriculturists is also very prosperous. Though the total amount of debt has increased still that is much below their credit or the paying capacity in these days."

I suppose the honourable gentleman was not correct.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—I just read one line above that. So apparently we can say that the indebtedness has increased.

The Honourable the Chairman (Mr. G. S. Curtis):—I differ from the honourable member.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—The cost of cultifation has largely increased. Then the report says:

ERANDOL REVENUE SETTLEMENT.

[Mr. R. P. Paranjpye; Mr. G. S. Curtis.] [6TH AUGUST 1920.]

"It is true that on account of scarcity of labour and high wages the cost of cultivation has largely increased and that their home charges have also increased largely on account of the high prices of the necessaries of life they have to purchase. Still I can say that other favourable factors mentioned above have contributed very largely to increase their material prosperity."

What I point out is that the report is written with a distinct bias. All these facts that I have mentioned are there. But the effect of the facts is gauged wrongly, and finally the conclusion is that the assessment should be increased. Curiously I will just only read one paragraph in which the report goes so far as to say that the very diminishing of the population is so much to the good of the taluka. When a report is written in that manner.....

The Honourable the Chairman (Mr. G. S. Curtis):—Which is that paragraph?

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—Paragraph 17.

Referring to population the report says:

"This means that the population is less by 11,718 + 9,121, i.e., 20,839 or 16·2 per cent. less than what it ought to have been. This result is due to the epidemic of cholera, plague and influenza and not due to the poverty or similar causes arising out of the depressed material condition of the people. On the contrary I may venture to say that in the materially prosperous condition of the taluka there have been so many mouths less to feed and the decrease has partially improved the status of the labouring classes by creating more demand for labour."

I would only point out by means of a remark like this the underlying object of the report that has been published. I take it, and anybody that reads that report will find, that here is one thesis to prove whether the argument supports it or not. Whatever the effect the final conclusion is that the assessment has got to be increased. In the Statistical Atlas we find in 1906 the following sentence:—

"At the present time, i.e., in 1906, the economic condition of the cultivator cannot be said to be more than fair, the succession of bad seasons since 1896-97 combined with extravagance having materially impaired it."

Mr. Kelkar, the Settlement Officer, does not of course agree with many of these things. But he has for my convenience given me all these facts, and I come to an altogether different conclusion from the one that he has arrived at.

I say that all the conditions ought to be favourable for justifying such an increase in the assessment. There are one or two things at which the settlement officer is supposed to look to. One is the price of land. Now it is quite true that the actual value of the land has increased largely. That is the effect of larger pressure on land and the disappearance of industries. As everybody wants some land, he pays fancy prices for that land.

The Honourable the Chairman (Mr. G. S. Curtis):—Will the honourable member tell me what industries have gone?

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—Hand gins have gone, looms have gone. Oil-presses have practically disappeared. These were the industries that were in the Erandol taluka.

I have read out figures of non-agricultural population that are given in the report itself. What I say is that the selling price of land has certainly gone very considerably up. But that is due to the fact that a number of people wanted the same piece of land. And some people who make money outside want to invest money in their own native lands. Similar things have occurred in my own village. Every man wants to buy lands and to invest money in land. So you cannot draw any inference from the selling price of land. The Land Revenue Code gives us a real guide in fixing the assessment and that is as follows:

"In revising assessment of land revenue regard shall be had to the value of land for the purposes of agriculture and the profits of agriculture."

I think you have got to hold fast to that one principle. You have got to consider whether the profits of agriculture have decreased or increased. Now, I think, in this particular taluka there is no doubt at all that profits of agriculture have not increased. There again you find that there is a distinct preparing of a case by the Settlement Officer. In the last Settlement Report made by Mr. Pitt you find that the letting value of land, which practically gives an idea as to the profits of cultivation, is something like Rs. 6-1-0.

ERANDOL REVENUE SETTLEMENT.

[6TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. G. S. Curtis; Mr. R. P. Paranjpye.]

The Honourable the Chairman (Mr. G. S. Curtis):—Will the honourable member refer me to the page of the report in support of his statement?

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—Yes, I will read it.

"Now to come to the figures of the bona fide rents of leased lands we have to examine the appendices II H, H_2 comparing the figures of rent per acre and per rupee of assessment with those mentioned in Mr. Pitt's report and appendix O. I find that they give a favourable aspect for the settlement purposes."

This is very very curious. Mr. Pitt's figures are such that they are unfavourable for making out a case for increase.

I think honourable members of this Council will easily see that every point which was coming against was supposed to be wrong and every point which by hook or crook he made was distinctly right. He said about Rs. 6-3-0 would be the letting value of the land now, and so far as the profits of land are concerned this did not justify any increase in assessment. I therefore want to ask the Council to say that here no case has really been made out for an increase in the assessment. People have been very greatly troubled by disease, scarcity, lack of rain for many years. Pressure of prices is very heavy. You must remember that the Khandesh district is one which does not produce sufficient food for itself. In this taluka for instance the amount of land under food grains is comparatively small and the taluka has got to import its food grains, and therefore, the high prices of food grains weigh very heavily on the taluka which produces money-making crops for export like cotton and wheat. Well, they might, therefore, make more money by selling those money-making crops; still they have got also to spend very much more on their food and other necessaries. I do not think, therefore, considering also the increase of price of labour, manure, and so on, that a case has at all been made out for an increase.

Finally, I would just ask the Council to remember one point. This is what the Settlement Manual says:—

> "The first principle and the foundation of success was that of 'moderation in demand.' Both Goldsmid and Wingate had grasped the principle which, though so obvious nowadays, was then hardly realized, that a fixed money assessment, in a country like India, must be studiously moderate if it is to be regularly collected and the necessity for constant remissions and the resultant peculation done away with. . . . . In pressing this policy upon Government they were backed by a powerful advocate in Mr. Frazer-Tytler, whose influence as Mr. Stewart remarks 'did much to pave the way for the present Bombay system of settlement.' As that officer urged in submitting his proposals for the settlement of the Nasik Dangs: 'We cannot possibly err on the side of lowness of assessment as regards the ryots, and total exemption would be the furthest point to which we should go, had we solely their interests to look to. In framing an assessment therefore, in which the well-being of the ryots is what we have in view, the question becomes—What is the utmost that Government can let them have? and not—What is the utmost they can let Government have? Hitherto the latter question has unfortunately been too often considered; and it is one which it is impossible to settle with nicety, without rendering the ryots liable at any time to be called upon for more than a fair share of his profits in the soil. How much can Government let the ryot have? does not appear so difficult a question. It may sometimes be a struggle to be generous, but it will always meet with its return: and it is now generally allowed, that to yield much to the ryots is to receive much from them. All reason and experience lead to this conclusion and we have lately had practical proof of it. The interest of Government then, as well as that of the ryot leads us to lowness of assessment. Give as much therefore to the ryot as Government can spare, and take only as much as the present necessities of the state demand, ought, it appears to me, to be the standard of our revised assessment.'"
> [Bombay Survey and Settlement Manual, Vol. I (1917), pp. 34, 35.]

I think, therefore, that if I am asking Government not to be a very hard landlord and take the utmost farthing that the ryots can give, I am erring in very good company. Let me make one point very clear. There is a school of public men in this country who want a permanent revenue settlement. Now, frankly I may say that I do not belong to that school. I am not in favour of the permanent settlement, and I am in favour of Government realizing its proper share of the unearned increment of the soil. What I contend, however, is that that share should be a fair and reasonable share, and that increment should be shown certainly and definitely without any possibility of a doubt to the ryot's interest. If that is shown, I shall not be prepared to criticise any increase in the assessment. But my contention is that in the case of the Erandol taluka the existence of these conditions has not been shown beyond the possibility of a doubt. I think, therefore, that if we are to make a mistake at all in the matter of a new settlement, we should make it in favour of the ryots and not in favour of Government. Government should not be rack-renting landlords. After all, Government can charge the last penny to the ryot if they like until the man feels it absolutely futile to cultivate the land. But the policy of Government is not, and should not be, to get the utmost farthing in this manner. There are certain rules which Government have put down on paper, but I want to point out that all of them cannot be put into effect strictly according to the mere letter; they have to be applied with due consideration. I, therefore, ask Government and this Council to pass this resolution.

ERANDOL REVENUE SETTLEMENT.

[Mr. R. P. Paranjpye; Mr. G. K. Parekh; Mr. G.S. Curtis.] [6TH AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh:—Sir,—I support the resolution that has been moved by my honourable friend Mr. Paranjpye. I am not going to trouble the Council by a repetition of facts upon which he has relied to show that the increase in the settlement now made is excessive. I will only confine myself to two or three points to show that these grounds justify the view that Government should reconsider their decision in reference to the acceptance of the revision settlement. My honourable friend has already told the Council that it is necessary in the case of assessments that the conditions of the ryots should be taken into consideration and that the assessments should be of a moderate character. We have, sir, before us the result of assessments made when the prices were ruling very high. I put before you, sir, the case of the talukas of Matar and Mehamadabad, where Government recently had to make a fresh settlement reducing the Government demand by something like Rs. 2,07,000 from these talukas. The conditions both in Matar and Mehamadabad talukas led to a complete deterioration of the lands in these talukas, and the result was that the ryots' condition deteriorated, the lands deteriorated, and a considerable amount of land fell into disuse. That condition should not be repeated in Erandol or any other place.

Another circumstance which I want to bring to your notice and which bears upon the report on the Erandol settlement is that there has been a decrease in the rainfall. During the last ten years the rainfall has been less than what it used to be before. Now it would have been different if during one or two years the rainfall was deficient owing to casual conditions, but I shall try to show the Council that in this case the deficiency of rainfall was not due to casual conditions but to conditions which have come to stay. For this purpose I have to show to the Council several cases which prove that for a considerable time past there has been a deficiency of rainfall in the ghat talukas to the east of longitude 74. You have before you, sir, the case of Erandol. I place before you, sir, the case of the Sheogaon taluka of the Ahmednagar district where there has been the same condition for a long number of years.

The Honourable the Chairman (Mr. G. S. Curtis):—Will the honourable member tell us how far is Sheogaon from Erandol?

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh:—I was going to show, sir, the grounds upon which a conclusion would follow, that the conditions of deficiency of rainfall do exist for some time. It is for that purpose that I am going to put before you instances of talukas other than Erandol where there has been deficient rainfall in order to show that these conditions would not exist unless the causes were of a permanent character. If I am permitted to go into that question, I will try to show that these conditions are not casual but are.....

[At this stage the Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael) resumed the chair.]

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—I only asked the honourable member whether he would kindly tell me how far is Sheogaon from Erandol.

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh:—Well, all these places, sir, are to the east of the 74th longitude. I put before you, sir, the conditions of rainfall in Sheogaon and those talukas where the rainfall.....

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—I rise to a point of order. In discussing the question of Erandol settlement we cannot, I think, go into the economic conditions of Sheogaon and Ahmednagar, and other places.

ERANDOL REVENUE SETTLEMENT.

[6TH AUGUST 1920.] [The Vice-President; Mr. G. K. Parekh; Mr. S. B. Upasani.]

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—I think the honourable member is travelling somewhat outside the scope of the main question which is now before the Council.

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh:—I will only explain that there has been a deficiency of rainfall all over in talukas to the east of the 74th longitude not only during one, or two or three years, but for a succession of years, from fifteen to twenty, and therefore, if you consider that what I say is not relevant to the present question, I am in the Council's hands.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Order, order. I understand the honourable member wishes to show that the rainfall generally has been very short in the last few years and on that ground he is supporting the resolution. So far, I think, his argument would be relevant to the resolution which we are discussing at present.

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh:—The other talukas, sir, to which I intended to refer were Junnar and Sirur in the Poona district and Badami in the Bijapur district for the purpose of showing that rainfall in all those talukas has been deficient for a number of years owing to new conditions which are not casual. Considering that this is a new development and that there is no likelihood of an improvement in the economic conditions of Erandol taluka during the next settlement, and in order that the conditions of the taluka may remain good, it is necessary that the assessment should be moderate.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—Mr. President,—I wish to support this resolution. I would congratulate the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye on his good luck in having got this resolution admitted. Similar resolutions previously sent by me were disallowed on the ground that they did not relate to matters of general public interest; however, that is another matter.

Now, as regards the resolution before us the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye has stated in detail all the facts referring to the present settlement. I shall, therefore, only refer to a few figures referring to the last revision settlement, which will more clearly show how the present increase was not justified. At the original settlement this taluka was divided into six groups of 227 villages, of which only three villages were assessed at Rs. 2-12-0, 52 at Rs. 2-4-0, 93 at Rs. 2-2-0, 40 at Rs. 2, 34 at Rs. 1-14-0, and five at Rs. 1-12-0. All these villages at the last revision in 1890 were made into one group, and that one group was assessed at Rs. 2-10-0. Thus the assessment rate,, which excepting only the three villages assessed at Rs. 2-12-0, ranged in the case of the remaining 224 villages at Rs. 2-4-0, Rs. 2-2-0, Rs. 2, Rs. 1-14-0, and Rs. 1-12-0, was at one stroke raised to Rs. 2-10-0, and the total increase for the taluka came to nearly 33 per cent. This increase was proposed and sanctioned among other reasons on the ground that the population had increased by 57 per cent., and now it is further increased on the ground that the population has gone down, and that there are less mouths to feed. This argument based on increase and decrease of population would thus appear to be a double-edged sword to increase the assessment whether the population may increase or decrease. That is rather hard.

I submit that whenever these revision settlements have to be made, it is, in the first place, necessary that actual crop experiments should be made to show actually what the return is. Instead of doing that, the Settlement Officers propose increase in the rates on mere inferential arguments which can be turned either way, as may suit the recommendations which they may wish to make. I think, we must insist that unless actual crop experiments are made and full account is taken of the cost of cultivation, and that too not only in one year, but in a series of years, no increase in the assessment should be allowed. In the present case, as in the case of most revisions sanctioned during the last few years, no crop experiments have been made and the increase is proposed and sanctioned on mere inferential arguments. The Honourable Mr. Paranjpye has cited facts and figures showing that the alleged prosperity of the taluka is more apparent than real. That being the case, it stands to reason that after the full increase that was made in the last revision, the further full increase allowed under the Government standing orders was not justified. At the last revision, the increase of the assessment came to over 40, 50, and 60 per cent., in the case of several villages, and in the case of one village, I think, it is Bhandar, it came to over 84 per cent. In the case of all these villages, the present further increase will, I think, cause much harm and great hardship. With these few remarks, I heartily support the resolution of the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye, and I trust that Government will accept it.

ERANDOL REVENUE SETTLEMENT.

[Mr. G. S. Curtis; Mr. R. P. Paranjpye.] [6TH AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis :—Mr. President,—I rise to oppose this resolution. In the first place, I propose to deal with the preliminary remarks of the honourable mover. The honourable mover said that Government were inconsistent in asking this Council to hold their hands in deciding the excise policy, and the present orders which they have passed in this case, which is a revenue matter. I have no doubt whatever that under the new arrangements, revenue questions are an entirely reserved matter, and that therefore, the control over the Revenue Department, by the Legislative Council, will not exceed what it is at present. Therefore, the argument of the honourable mover has no application to the case.

The second point made by the honourable member was that he had given notice of his resolution two months ago, and that Government must have known this momentous fact before they were so bold as to pass orders. Of course, I do not know to which secretary the honourable member sent his letter. But I do not imagine that the momentous fact that the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye was to move a resolution on a revenue matter was at once known to the revenue secretary. But, sir, the facts do not bear out the honourable member's contention. I find that the orders were passed on the 18th of May, nearly three months ago. Therefore, there is no foundation for the allegation that Government rushed through these orders, knowing that discussion was going to take place in the Legislative Council.

I now proceed to deal with the so-called facts brought forward by the honourable mover. I have a complaint to make, first of all, as to the manner in which he has used facts to support his contentions. His main contention, first of all, was that agricultural indebtedness had gone up. But when I pinned him down to the report, he justified it by saying that the money-lenders were prosperous. The report says :—

> "The general condition of the agriculturists is also very prosperous. Though the total amount of debts is increasing still that is much below their credit or paying capacity in these days. The intrinsic material condition of this class of people has vastly improved during these 30 years, as will be apparent from the statistics about the value of land, rents, prices of food grains and cotton and figures of cultivation of dry and irrigated crops. It is true that on account of scarcity of labour and high wages the cost of cultivation has increased and that their home charges have also increased largely on account of the high prices of the necessaries of life they have to purchase. Still I can say that other favourable factors mentioned above have contributed very largely to increase their material prosperity."

Therefore, sir, I contend that the honourable member's statement that the agricultural indebtedness is increasing has no justification in the remarks from the report. The actual sum in figures may be larger but as we know, the return from the produce of the soil is larger, and consequently the surplus of income over indebtedness is larger. Anybody who knows the district knows that Erandol is the most prosperous taluka of the most prosperous district in the Presidency. Reports from Erandol come to me very often, and I may describe the extent to which gold and silver chalan has been absorbed in the last few months in this very fortunate district. Everybody knows that during the last three years the prices of cotton have at least doubled, if not trebled.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye :—That was only for a time.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis :—They are not, at present, at their original figure, but there is every reason to believe that the general level of prices, owing to the depreciation of the value of money, will be higher than what they were four years ago. I do not know whether the honourable member is personally acquainted with the taluka. I am, and I can say without hesitation that it is the most prosperous taluka in the most prosperous district in the whole of the Presidency. I can assure the honourable member that if he will compare the prices of Khandesh cotton in the decade preceding 1890 with the prices which obtained in the last ten years, he will find that if the prices are alone followed as a basis for settlement, an increase of something like 200 per cent. would be fully justifiable.

As regards rents, again I cannot follow the honourable mover's reading of the report. Mr. Kelkar is an honest man. He puts facts perfectly clearly. He says he cannot understand why the rents given by Mr. Pitt are so high. He quotes the three different stages of rent for three different periods in the settlement, and remarks that the rate before the last decade of the settlement was 5·13 as compared with 3·07 for the first decade of the settlement. Then the honourable member talked about the decrease in the cattle. Again, the report does not quite justify what he said. The report says :—

> "A glance at the figures shows that during the last 30 years the total number of cattle has gone down by about 5,600 and that in the famine year 1899-1900 the decrease was very marked showing that about 24,000 of the cattle-head had disappeared in the famine. It has, however, to be noted that the system of recuperation was going on for the last 18 years and now the number of cattle has reached its first limit."

ERANDOL REVENUE SETTLEMENT.

[6TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. G. S. Curtis; Mr. R. P. Paranjpye.]

Further on, the report says that the number of breeding bulls and buffaloes has increased a bit more during the 30 years. The report also says :—

"The number of plough-bullocks is now less by 3,993 than in 1891-92 though the cultivable area is now increased somewhat. The area of cultivable land per pair of plough-cattle comes to be 21½ acres as compared with 17 acres in 1891."

Generally speaking, sir, I am not prepared to follow the honourable member who supported the honourable mover, into his discussion of rainfall, and I do not think that there is any justification for taking up the time of the Council in considering the relation of rainfall to the richest taluka in the richest district of the Presidency with a famine stricken tract like Sirur, or Parner in the Nagar district or Badami in the Bijapur district. We know that in these talukas the rainfall fails three years out of four. But as regards Erandol, the Honourable Mr. Parekh has the report before him, and he is entitled to prove, if he can, that the rainfall has been very deficient there. I can see no justification for it. The rainfall figures will show that it has been steady, except the famine year of 1918. Therefore, there is no justification for any general theory which the honourable member tried to establish that the rainfall in Erandol has proved inadequate.

The honourable mover of the resolution seemed to paint the picture of a tract, with a large number of industries extinct, disappearing oil-presses, looms and paper factories, and cotton gins. There was once a small paper factory, but I do not imagine that it employed more than 50 men. But as regards gins, I do not know where he got his remarks from. The report says that there are now 6 cotton-presses and gins and steam-presses.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—I was talking of hand-presses.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis :—I am quite aware that he tried to make capital out of the fact that the hand-presses have disappeared. But the steam-gins employ very many more hands than the hand-gins ever did. I think that the steam-gin in Erandol employs something like 1,000 hands, and I am sure that the hand-gins never employed anything like that number. I do not know what other industries there are in Erandol which can employ a large section of the population. I admit that there is an inconsistency in the population figures, but the one fact the honourable member cannot get away from is that the land is fetching very large prices, though there is no pressure whatever on the soil, that the rents have gone up very largely, that the prices of produce have also gone up, and there has been a new railway built through the taluka. The taluka has been opened up north and south. Probably no other taluka has better markets than Erandol, and there are railways on both sides.

Generally speaking, as I say, the tract is the most prosperous in the most prosperous district in the Presidency, and we have no reason whatever why the ryots of that taluka should not contribute a fair quota towards the increasing expense of the administration. If we recognize that prosperous tracts are not to contribute to the rising cost of administration, as evidenced by the honourable mover's appeal, and if we are to treat our pensioners justly, pay higher wages to Government servants, and spend larger amounts on education, bankruptcy must face us. Therefore, I would ask this Council to reject the resolution.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—Sir,—I do not think that the honourable member has met the gravamen of my arguments about the unsatisfactory nature of the impost and the justification for increasing the assessment by 33 per cent. It is curious to see the way in which the heads of revenue officials run; they appear to think that until the agricultural population gets indebted to the utmost of their capacity they are a fair field for increasing the agricultural assessment to the utmost extent. The Honourable Member in Charge says Mr. Kelkar is an honest man, but I would ask whether Mr. Pitt who made the settlement 30 years ago was a dishonest man. At that time Mr. Pitt arrived at certain figures; now Mr. Kelkar says that they are not right. I do not see why the figures that are not suitable to your own case should not be accepted.

About the industries, I am reading from the report of the Settlement Officer of Erandol, last year :—

"There are no important manufactures or local industries in the taluka. At Erandol there are a few Mahomedans who are called Kagdis and who manufacture

ERANDOL REVENUE SETTLEMENT.

[Mr. R. P. Paranjpye.] [6TH AUGUST 1920.]

some kinds of rough and thick paper by hand from the pulp prepared from useless paper sold in offices, etc. The best of these papers is used for making account books for Khandesh and Berar Banias. The industry is however no way flourishing .....

"There is some hand-loom weaving industry. There are about 250 and 200 families of Hindu and Mahomedan weavers at Dharangaon and Erandol respectively and they make ordinary sarees worth Rs. 5 to 15 from imported yarn. This industry is also not quite flourishing. The men are generally poor and are given to drinking and entirely in the hands of the middlemen.

"At Kasoda there are some Mahomedan weavers who are experts in making carpets and Zoryas. These things are generally of coarse and thick texture but wear very well. Some of these men make some excellent and costly specimens of carpets resembling Galichas. A specimen was lately seen by me which was only 12′ × 6′ but was said to be worth Rs. 120. .....

"There are in all 6 cotton-gins and 4 presses in the taluka, which do work for about 4 or 5 months in a year and engage in all about 600 workers."

These are all the industries in the taluka. They also are not flourishing. Therefore, I believe that the Council will agree with me that I have made out a case for no such large increase of assessment, to the extent of 33 per cent. In fact the assessment has been increased more than 33 per cent. The one-third per cent. above this figure may be a negligible quantity, but still that shows that they have almost passed the maximum limit allowed. I do not believe that anyone who reads the report as a whole dispassionately will consider that there is a case for increasing the assessment. One man says that the prosperity of the taluka has increased, another person says that it has decreased. Unless we have got definite facts and figures, I do not think the opinion of a man—I will not say interested, but a man who had absolutely made up his mind—can be taken as gospel truth by members of this Council. I think the policy of this Council is not to rack-rent the agriculturists to this extent. I need not say anything more, and I hope the Council will pass the resolution.

The resolution was put to the vote and lost, 9 voting for and 15 against.

The Council divided as follows:—

SCHOLARSHIPS FOR UNTOUCHABLES—HYDRO-ELECTRIC SCHEMES—CENSUS RETURNS—EXPORT OF CATTLE.

[6TH AUGUST 1920.] [The Vice-President; Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna; Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.]

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Resolution No. 4. The Honourable Mr. Belvi.

"This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council to be pleased to direct that at least 15 per cent. of the scholarships available in each Government educational institution be reserved for pupils from the untouchable classes in the Bombay Presidency."

As the Honourable Mr. Belvi is not present, I proceed to another resolution. This resolution is deemed withdrawn.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Resolution No. 8. Dewan Bahadur Godbole.

"This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that in granting concessions for new hydro-electric schemes in this Presideny in future, involving the acquisition by Government of 1,000 acres and above of agricutural lands, the following conditions should be made:—

(a) that all excess profits after paying 10 per cent. dividends to shareholders should be divided between the company using the concession and Government, half and half,

(b) that one-fourth of the power generated should be reserved for the production of nitrate fertilizers from the atmosphere or driving agricultural machinery, if such use of the power is financially practicable according to expert advice received by Government."

As the honourable member is not present, I will proceed to the next item. This resolution is deemed withdrawn.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Resolution No. 11. The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna.

"This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council to suggest to the Government of India that in the next census returns in the table known as 'Occupation or Means of living (unproductive)' beggars be shown separately and not be included as at present under the heading 'Beggars, prostitutes, receivers of stolen goods, cattle poisoners'."

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna:—Sir,—The reason why I have brought forward this resolution is that if we have the exact number of beggars in the census returns, it will enable not only Government but also public bodies who are interested in the question as well as desirous of ameliorating the condition of these unfortunates, to know how many they have to provide for. It will be within the recollection of this Council that in December 1917, I had brought forward a resolution asking for the appointment of a committee to formulate proposals for the prevention of professional beggary in the Presidency. On that occasion there was considerable difference of opinion between the Honourable Member in Charge and the non-official members who spoke on the question as to the exact number of beggars in the Presidency. If the exact number of beggars is known, it will be a great help indeed, particularly now when the general public are of late taking a keen interest in the matter of affording relief to beggars.

I may mention incidentally that the non-official committee which was appointed in April 1918 sent in its report in April 1919, and I have the assurance of the Honourable Member in Charge that the report will soon be published. As regards the definite and practical recommendations made by the committee, I am informed by the Honourable Member in Charge that on account of the heavy work which Government have had of late, they propose to leave the carrying out of the recommendations or otherwise to the new Council. It will be a great help to the new Council therefore if in the census returns of 1921, beggars are classed separately and their exact numbers given.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Sir,—I have much pleasure in accepting the resolution on behalf of Government. If the Council passes it, the suggested recommendation will be made to the Government of India.

The resolution was then put to the vote and carried.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Resolution No. 14. The Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji.

"This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council to move the Government of India to take necessary steps for the prohibition of the export of useful milch and agricultural cattle."

EXPORT OF CATTLE—PROMOTIONS OF MAMLATDARS—PAY OF VERNACULAR TEACHERS—PUPILS OF DEPRESSED CLASSES.

[Mr. Munmohundass Ramji; the Vice-President; Mr. S. B. Upasani; Mr. B. S. Kamat; Mr. J. G. Covernton.] [6TH AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji:—Mr. President,—I ask permission that this resolution be postponed to the September meeting.

The resolution was by leave postponed.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Resolution No. 17. The Honourable Mr. Upasani.

"This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that the appointments of mamlatdars and their promotions be made by Government and not by the Commissioners."

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—Sir,—I beg leave to withdraw this resolution.

The resolution was by leave withdrawn.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Resolution No. 21. The Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud.

"This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that the pay of vernacular teachers be revised on the lines adopted by Government, for the revision of pay of the clerical establishment in other departments."

As the Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud is not present, I will proceed to the next item. This resolution is deemed withdrawn.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Resolution No. 24. The Honourable Mr. Kamat.

"This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that Government may be pleased to direct—

(a) that all pupils belonging to the depressed classes studying in local board primary schools up to the vernacular fourth standard be supplied free with school books, slates and pencils, and

(b) that all pupils belonging to the Depressed Classes studying in secondary schools or colleges, whether Government or aided, be exempted from fees."

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat—Mr. President,—I believe the resolution speaks for itself. It is intended to give educational facilities to pupils of the depressed classes who are backward in education. I am sure Government is already doing something for them so far as primary schools are concerned. But the object of this resolution is to request Government to make a ruling that all pupils shall receive the benefit of slates, pencils and books who are studying in the local board primary schools up to the fourth standard, and also that all pupils belonging to the Depressed Classes in secondary schools or colleges shall receive similar help in order that their secondary education and college education might be facilitated. I think no further words are needed from me to commend this resolution to the acceptance of this Council.

The Honourable Mr. J. G. Covernton:—Mr. Chairman,—The resolution seems quite harmless on the face of it, and I may even say it is meritorious. As regards the first part of the question, namely, provision of slates, pencils, books, etc., we are already doing a good deal in that way especially for the particular classes which are mentioned by the honourable member, and provided that funds permit, we should have no objection to extending what we are doing a good deal further. It is very largely a question of funds so far as the first part of the resolution goes. As regards the second part of the resolution there are considerably more difficulties than would appear on the face of what the honourable member has said. In the first place it must be remembered that nearly all these depressed class people are very poor. That at first sight seems to be an argument particularly in favour of the honourable member's resolution. But when you look deeper into it you can realize that this is not quite the case. It is no good giving a poor man an opportunity to go somewhere if he cannot maintain himself when he sits there. It is no use giving an opportunity of going to a school to a poor man when he cannot derive benefits from the instruction which he receives. It is not only a question of exemption from fees, but in most of these cases it is a question of providing scholarships from which to maintain the scholars at the places to which they may wish to go. That entails a considerable expenditure. I have not got most recent figures for the depressed classes by me but those of the previous year came to about 36,000. That is taking the depressed classes only as apart from the criminal tribes, and I do not know why we should do more for the depressed classes than for the so-called criminal tribes and aboriginals. There is again

PUPILS OF DEPRESSED CLASSES.

[6TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. J. G. Covernton; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola; Mr. B. S. Kamat.]

this fact that we do provide a good many scholarships for these people in various institutions and at present people do not take advantage of them. A good many of them are going a-begging. And, therefore, to increase the number until we fill up all those which we have already, is useless.

I find many honourable members in dealing with subjects of this kind forget the question of aided schools. We can make regulations for Government schools and practically, at present, for every local board school. But we cannot do that for municipal schools, and least of all can we do it for every aided institution. I cannot say to the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye that he should take any number of the depressed classes free, nor can I do it for any other manager of any aided institution. If we were to do that we should have to find money to compensate them for the fees which they would lose.

Lastly, Government some time ago, I do not remember when, but fairly recently, in a communication about education specially in connection with free education, enunciated the policy that so far as primary education was concerned no boy should go without the means of obtaining instruction. That is to say, then we are practically pledged already in regard to primary schools to help these boys and they can be exempted from paying fees even now. But we are not in a position at present to extend that policy and to lay it down as a generally requisite or desirable policy for higher institutions.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Sir,—I feel inclined to agree with the views of the Honourable the Director of Public Instruction, and I think that when we are very near the new councils it would not be proper to tie the hands of those who are to be in charge of the Department of Education from now. We are near to the elections for the new councils and perhaps the resolution may be found unworkable; I would much rather wish that we had better defer doing anything on a resolution of this character now when we are at the fag-end of our career.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Sir,—Honourable members are aware that Government are in complete sympathy with the object of promoting education amongst the backward classes. They can only deal on the present occasion with the existing budget. The new budget in regard to transferred subjects will be framed by the Ministers and will for the first time require the sanction of the new Legislative Council. So far as this Government is concerned they can only deal with the question raised, within the financial provisions made in the budget for the current year. There is, as honourable members are aware, a provision of one lakh of rupees for the education of the backward classes and Government have issued orders that, apart from that grant for students' books, slates, etc., the following general allotments should be made for scholarships and prizes: In the N. D. 4,600, S. D. 12,000, C. D. 17,950. For scholarships and supplying books and writing materials in Sind, a sum of Rs. 7,520 has been provided. It will therefore be observed that so far as the first part of the resolution is concerned Government are already doing all they can. I have, therefore, no objection to accept that part of it provided the honourable mover agrees to the addition of the words "as far as funds permit".

As regards the second part of the resolution there are obvious difficulties which cannot be met at present. The Honourable the Director of Public Instruction has pointed out that even in regard to the free studentships and scholarships which have already been provided there are not sufficient applicants from this class. I do not think it is any use dealing with the problem when candidates for the assistance already provided are not forthcoming. So far as Government secondary schools are concerned five per cent. out of a total of 15 per cent. free studentships are open to them in the Presidency proper, and it has been several times noticed that some of these studentships remain vacant for want of candidates of this class. That being the case this Council cannot accept the second part of the resolution.

It may interest the Council to know that Government have recently announced four scholarships in professional colleges for backward classes. The question of awarding similar scholarships in other colleges is under the consideration of Government. All this shows that Government are trying to put in practice their sympathy for the progress of education of backward classes. I hope honourable members will be satisfied that so far as the administration of the Education Department of this Government is concerned everything is being done to help the backward classes. I hope the honourable mover will be content with the acceptance of the first part of his resolution with the addition of the words I have mentioned and will withdraw the second part.

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat:—Sir,—I agree to the addition of the words suggested by the Honourable Member in Charge and I am thankful to Government for accepting the first part of the resolution with the addition. I recognize that there are certain difficulties as pointed out by the Honourable the Director of Public Instruction regarding the second part, although I say from the figures contained in his annual report that the number of students in secondary schools was not very much. It was 215 in secondary schools and 419 in private institutions, and I want Government that they should be admitted free. However, if there are any departmental difficulties I do not wish to press for the second part of the resolution.

The first part of the resolution as amended was then put to the vote and carried.

The second part of the resolution was by leave withdrawn.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Resolution No. 5. The Honourable Mr. Belvi.

"This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council to be pleased to direct that at least 5 per cent. of posts carrying a monthly salary of not more than Rs. 400 in each department of civil administration in the Presidency of Bombay including Sind be reserved for qualified candidates from the untouchable classes."

The Honourable Mr. D. V. Belvi:—Sir,—I applied for certain information to Government so far back as the month of February, but I am sorry to say that that information has not as yet been supplied to me, and I am constrained to ask your permission to get this resolution adjourned to the next session of the Council.

The resolution was by leave postponed.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Resolution No. 9. The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole.

"This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that when land has to be acquired for commercial companies in future for cultivation purposes it should, as far as practicable, be leased from landholders and not acquired outright."

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—Sir,—Instead of moving resolution No. 9, I ask the indulgence of being permitted to move resolution No. 8 which also stands in my name. Unfortunately when it came up I was away for only a few seconds.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—I cannot allow the honourable member that indulgence. As the honourable member was not present when the resolution was called, the resolution is dropped altogether.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—Circumstances prevented me from coming just at the moment.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Garmichael):—We cannot go back to resolution No. 8, and I rule that we must pass on to the consideration of resolution No. 9.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—Sir,—the resolution that I wish to move reads thus (reads).

The cardinal principle of land tenure in this Presidency is that no one will be disturbed in the possession of his holding while he is paying Government assessment. So long as he pays the assessment, and the increased assessment when revised, to the Collector no one has the right of dispossessing him of his holding. That principle is highly valued by the country-side, and by all landholders and agriculturists in this Presidency. When this principle is departed from there is naturally great discontent and unrest. I would not say unrest, but there is great discontent. The provisions of the Land Acquisition Act go against this principle, and therefore, whenever Government have occasion to apply the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act the parties concerned are greatly dissatisfied. In the case of acquisition for such works as are obviously works of public utility, such as railways, roads, canals, irrigation tanks, dharamsalas, wells, hospitals, etc., where the advantages of the work requiring the land reach the whole mass of people, the dissatisfaction is not so pronounced and is not so marked. The parties concerned realize that land is being acquired in such cases for a purpose which is really a public purpose and which will benefit not certain individuals but the whole mass of population residing in the vicinity. The case is quite different when Government acquire land for the benefit of private companies. When cultivators see that lands are being acquired for private commercial companies, they say to themselves, "What is Government doing? Here is a commercial company coming into our district and saying that they want 6,000 acres, and Government say, Oh, you want 6,000 acres; we will dispossess our tenants, we will remove them, and hand over the land you want to you," or, which comes to the same thing, "we will acquire the land ourselves and lease it to you for the period you want." The cultivator considers this to be a very strange proceeding in the face of the distinct understanding that no one will be interfered with in the possession of his holding so long as he pays the Government assessment. The position is one which the cultivator cannot understand. All the revenue officers of Government are aware of the feeling I am referring to. I am aware that the Industrial Commission, after going into and seeing the condition of things in India, have considered this question and they have laid down certain guiding principles. The main principle is that when land is indispensable for the development of an industry and the development of the industry is in the interests of the general public, then acquisition should be permitted. But they say that when land is acquired in such cases every endeavour should be made to give the same extent and description of land to the parties dispossessed as the land from which they have been turned out. They have said that as far as practicable this may be done. Now, I hold generally that in cases where companies require land for cultivation purposes, in order that the produce of those cultivated lands should be available to them for their factory operations, the case must be treated quite differently. Government should say to such a company: "Here, you want to get hold of certain lands. The lands belong to private tenants as occupants. You can take the lands from the parties concerned by purchase or lease. Government won't interfere in the matter." There are special industries, however, that are really required for the development of the country and for the good of the people which will not come into existence if particular lands cannot be made available for them. In such cases there will be a necessity, according to the recommendations of the Industrial Commission, for Government to interfere. Government will not, however, be justified in interfering in the case of existing industries and industries that are not new to the country. Take the case of sugar industry; there are sugar factories in this country; already there are sugar factories in the United Provinces and in Bengal, and elsewhere. The question is whether Government are justified in dispossessing cultivators of their lands, for the establishment of sugar factories in this Presidency under the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act. I do not think they are. The guiding principle in such cases should be that when such companies want land, for cultivation purposes, they should be asked to put themselves into communication with the ryots and acquire the land from them by purchase or on long lease or in any other way that may be found convenient by them. Government should only interfere in the case of new industries that are required for the development of the Presidency. When land has to be acquired for companies for new industries, Government should not acquire the land outright, but should assist the companies in getting the same on long lease. Our ryots hold to land as a legacy which they are extremely loath to part with. They have sentimental attachment to the soil which has come to them from their grand-fathers and great-grand-fathers. They will stick to their lands till the last moment at any sacrifice. In deference to this sentiment and feeling, what I say is, that land should not be taken away from these people outright but it should be leased from them. If the industrial companies are unable to lease it, the revenue officers of Government might interfere and negotiate for the lease. I hold that leases will be easily practicable, with the sword of this Land Acquisition Act hanging over the heads of cultivators. They all will readily agree to give their land on the lease system rather than lose it altogether under the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act. A commercial company wants 500 acres of land for cultivation purposes and Government make up their minds to give it to them. The Collector then approaches each cultivator concerned and tells him, "I want your land for this new factory. Government have decided that the factory should be established here and I want your land for the same. Shall I proceed with acquisition proceedings under the Land Acquisition Act, or are you willing to agree to lease the land for 50 years? The company wants the land for 50 years. I give you the alternative of leasing the land to the company on fair terms." I am quite sure that every cultivator concerned will agree to the second alternative. He will say, "All right, I agree to give the land to the company on lease. I do not want to give it outright; I will keep my ownership on the land." I think this is the proper position for Government to take in this matter. Considering the great discontent that arises from dispossessing landholders of their holdings, and the acute sentiments that they have as regards the holding of land, it should be the policy of Government to see that the discontent is reduced to a minimum by seeing that the land is only leased when practicable and not acquired outright. Government should arrange to settle fair terms for the lease, and if the lease option fails, then only the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act should be made to apply. That is my contention. I am quite sure that in the case of the Belapur Syndicate even, where 6,000 acres have been acquired, if an alternative even at this stage is placed before the landholders of leasing their lands, they will readily accept the alternative. Compensation for land has been settled at present. Suppose "B" is to get Rs. 1,000. Now if "B" is approached by the Collector and told "You don't want to part with your land. Your land is valued at Rs. 1,000. I will ask the company to lease the land from you for 50 years and they will give you 6½ per cent. on the amount settled as compensation for your land, namely, Rs. 1,000. You will get Rs. 65 as rent for your land per year so long as it is required by this company." I am sure "B" will jump at the idea and accept it at once. What I want Government to do is that when a company requires land for cultivation purposes and when the land is not going to be swamped and obliterated altogether, as it will be in hydro-electric schemes, every attempt should be made to lease the land on long term leases rather than acquire it outright. If an attempt is made in connection with the Belapur dispossessed people, they will also, I think, agree to the alternative of leasing. They will have to be paid not less than 6½ per cent. on the amounts that have been settled as compensation. Government themselves borrow at 6 per cent. free of income tax, which means Rs. 6-6-0 per cent. If an offer of lease on the 6½ per cent. basis is made to the Belapur cultivators, they will, I think, accept this alternative at once. My proposition before the Council is that in cases where land is required for cultivation purposes every attempt should be made to obtain the same on long lease, and that the Land Acquisition Act should be resorted to at the last stage. With these remarks, sir, I place the resolution before the Council for their acceptance.

LAND ACQUISITION FOR COMMERCIAL COMPANIES.

[6TH AUGUST 1920.] [Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole.]

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—Mr. President,—I am afraid I have not been able to follow the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole very clearly when he talked of the Collector sending for the manager of a sugar company and saying to him "Will you take the land on lease for 50 years?" The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole said that you might offer the cultivator or landholder interest at 6½ per cent. on the capitalized value of the land as it may be estimated at the time. I should have thought, sir, that the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole was one of those who believed that the Indian cultivator, the average cultivator, was a very poor man and paid a much higher rate of interest than 6½ per cent. I do not see how he reconciles that general opinion with his theory that the holder of land will be quite satisfied if, instead of getting a lump sum of, say, Rs. 400 or Rs. 500 in return for his land, with which he could go and buy other land elsewhere, he is given a sort of rental based on 6½ per cent. return. I am sure there must be some points in his speech which I unfortunately must have missed, for we are accustomed to very sound statements from the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole, and I really fail to understand how he possibly expects the average poor landholder to be satisfied with 6½ per cent. return.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole said that the great attachment of the ryot in the districts to the British Raj was that his tenure of land was secure, and that it could never be taken away from him. He said that the fact that land has been acquired for companies or syndicates has made the ryot very nervous. He almost used the word unrest.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—I withdrew it.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—I really wonder, sir, whether it would be better, in the interests of the ryot to tell him "Take Rs. 63 a year, whilst you have got to pay your sowcar perhaps Rs. 163 as interest on your debt", instead of giving him a lump sum, and asking him to go and settle his debt with the sowcar without any delay. I leave it to the Council to judge which is going to cause more discontent. I certainly think that if we ask the man to go to the office of the Collector once every year, to get Rs. 63, he will be more displeased than if we give him a lump sum.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole also said that the ryot has great sentimental attachment to the land. We know that very well. But, if the honourable member had not postponed resolution No. 7 on to-day's agenda, the resolution on the question of subdivision of land being prevented beyond a certain point, I certainly would have liked him to reconcile his great solicitude for the sentiment of the ryot for the land where companies acquire land for industrial purposes, with his lack of sympathy for the ryot when he wants to make it impossible for the ryot to subdivide the land beyond a certain minimum limit, which the honourable member advocates the legislature should fix. I fully realize that in the latter case he advocates it in the interests of the ryot himself and the return to the ryot on his land. I certainly expect the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole to see that, after all, when Government do put the machinery of acquisition in motion for industrial purposes, they do not do it very lightly. They certainly go into the possibilities, they also examine very minutely whether it is necessary for a company to have land acquired, and I certainly think, sir, that it is hardly right that resolutions of such far-reaching effect should be considered in the Council in the manner in which they have been done last session, and are proposed to be done to-day. If the honourable member wants Government to give the ryot the option of doing it, I do not suppose Government would refuse to do it. I do not know what this resolution indicates. He has the words " as far as possible ", a very convenient phrase, and perhaps a harmless one. What I wish, sir, to bring out is that resolutions of a nature like this require very considerable enquiry and also opinion from the interests concerned, like chambers of commerce and other commercial bodies. I therefore fail to see my way to support the resolution.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Mr. President,—I am inclined to think that this is a harmless resolution, and suggests a course of action to Government, which they may, in the circumstances stated, take into consideration. It is never likely to work to the detriment of the person holding the land. If the land is outright acquired from him, he suffers, but if it is leased from him, then certainly his interest is kept up, and in these days, I think, it is an alternative which Government may take into consideration in cases referred to in the resolution. I do not see any objection to such a resolution being accepted by the Council and placed forward for the consideration of Government.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—Mr. President,—I think the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole has brought forward a very reasonable and simple resolution. The resolution is a recommendation to Government. He has already told us that the Collector, if he finds that the man is recalcitrant, and does not wish to lease out the land, can hold out before him the threat of acquiring the land outright, and when that threat is held over his head, I think, the man will accept the lesser evil of the two, and agree to let the land, at a reasonable rate.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas shed very copious tears upon the amount of interest that the ryot has to pay to the Bania, at 25 to 30 per cent. But the man has got an alternative; if he finds that he is so far involved in debt, then he would sell the land outright. Of course he will tell the Collector " Acquire my land and give me the value of the land." But if he is not involved in debt, and has not got to pay heavy rates of interest to the money-lender, he will say " All right; I am prepared to let you have the land on lease for 50 years, and I will keep my right in the land." At the last session of the Council, when we debated upon similar matters, we were told that when the landholders, who are ignorant, get a lot of money, they immediately waste the money, and this will stop their extravagance. If we once accept the condition of giving him 6½ per cent. regular yearly income, there will not be so much money in his hands. He will have a regular and certain income for the next 50 years, and, I think, many agriculturists will be found who are prepared to accept this alternative.

The question is rather a large one, and I cannot help bringing to the notice of the Council the fact that there is a comparatively widespread fear that is entering into the minds of agriculturists. There is a feeling abroad that rich syndicates who are likely to have the ear of the Government more easily than poor agriculturists, are likely to crop up more and more in the future. Everybody, without considering the sentiment at all, understands that if land is cultivated on a large scale, by hundreds of acres rather than by units of acres, the land will give more profit. But the question before the agriculturist is not merely a question of money. The agriculturists have their sentiment in the land, and we want to preserve that love for the land as far as possible. We do not wish in this country, even though it is economically sound, to convert our Presidency at least into a large number of plantations, for a large number of syndicates, with the old landholders remaining merely as labourers on the land. That, I say, is the fear that is at the bottom of many of these complaints. I do not say that that fear is immediately justified. But there is no doubt at all that the recent acquisitions for these industrial purposes, have created a certain kind of panic. Take the district of Khandesh for instance, which the Honourable Mr. Curtis was telling us was one of the richest in the Presidency. An American syndicate or some other syndicate in Bombay might come round and want to establish a plantation, and they might tell Government "Cultivation there is not as efficient as it might be; give us the whole of Khandesh district, and we shall produce so much more, and pay you more land revenue than you get from the cultivators." It is an arguable proposition.

LAND ACQUISITION FOR COMMERCIAL COMPANIES.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael): —What companies is the honourable member referring to?

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—I am talking of commercial companies. A syndicate may come forward and ask Government to buy out the whole of the Khandesh district, in order to work it as a cotton cultivating area. Are we prepared, although we might get more revenue, and the companies more profit out of it, to agree to such a course being adopted? These acquisitions for commercial development, or cultivation purposes have created this panic among the general public, and I want Government to do something that will allay it. Even the acceptance of a small resolution brought forward by the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole will give the impression to the people that Government is not entirely unaware of the deep sentiment that attaches people to the soil, and I hope the Council will, therefore, accept the resolution.

I see just one difficulty. I am not a lawyer, but I feel that the Land Acquisition Act at present has got no definite compulsory clause for making people let their land out on lease. In the last resort of course there is compulsory acquisition, but before that is done, I wish to see that the ryots should be persuaded to let their lands on lease. I think that the proposal is sound, and I hope the Council will accept it.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Mr. President,—I do not think there is very much to discuss in this resolution, nor is there any need for long orations. In fact, I think that the speech of the honourable member who moved the resolution might, with advantage, have been cut down to one-fourth of its length.

The cardinal principles laid down in the report of the Industrial Commission are, as I said at the last meeting of the Council, always observed. Government see whether the industry is indispensable, and whether it is the fact that if land is not given to the company, it is impossible for it to start the industry elsewhere, and whether there is any absolute necessity for these industries. The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole asks that question, but he answers it both ways. He said no, and then he said yes. I do not think his remarks help us very much. But, sir, as a matter of fact, as I said, Government do not make use of the bludgeon clause against the present holders, unless it is absolutely necessary.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas has rightly pointed out that the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole is not quite so fair in the case of the legislation which he is so anxious that this Council should undertake. He proposes that every member of the family other than the only son is to be expropriated without mercy, and that he cannot have his holding below a certain area. That is my reading of the law, and I think that is what any lawyer would accept. Such legislation can only be described as unjust, brutal, cruel, and nothing less than that. You cannot have it both ways. Government always feel that they should do everything to avoid expropriation. In the Belapur case, Government did their very best to induce the ryots to accept other areas in exchange, or let some area in a different form, so as to enable the requisite area to be made available for the establishment of an important industry. Owing, however, to certain advice, the present holders refused, and there was practically no alternative for Government but to expropriate them. At the present moment attempts are being made, and will in future be made, to induce the ryots, if possible, to give leases to companies. The legal aspect of that particular proposal has not yet been examined and my cursory reading of the Land Acquisition Act is that that method of dealing with lands might be altogether irregular. Well, assuming that the lawyers pronounce in favour of it, Government have no objection to endeavour—they always do—to lease the land rather than expropriate the present holder. Moreover, at the present moment the whole subject of land acquisition for industrial purposes is under correspondence, and it is possible we may hear further proposals for legislation.

As far as the resolution is concerned, Government will always acquire land for industries to set up. They are not concerned whether the title of private owners to land is good enough or not. All that they are concerned is whether the land acquisition will result in the establishment of the industries. The only question is, of course, whether a particular concern is going to be a sound one. That is a difficult question. The honourable member gives no assistance in the solution of it. I think I must leave the subject there.

LAND ACQUISITION FOR COMMERCIAL COMPANIES.

[6TH AUGUST 1920.] [Mr. G. S. Curtis; Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole; Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas; the Vice-President.]

We will endeavour, as far as we can, to steer a middle course between the denunciations by the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye of the capitalists on the one hand, and the protests of the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas and the Honourable Mr. Sethna on the other, who will no doubt say that we are restricting the activities of industrial concerns. The question is extraordinarily difficult, and Government will always give due consideration to arguments on both sides. With these remarks I will ask the honourable member to withdraw his resolution.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—Mr. Chairman,—The only members that have spoken rather doubtfully about the proposals that I have placed before the Council are the Honourable Member in Charge and the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas. Perhaps in my speech I did not make it quite clear that in the case of the Belapur Syndicate I would certainly give an option to the dispossessed landholders: they might take the amount settled or take 6½ per cent. on the amount as rent, whichever they wish, and I am quite sure that if I am allowed at this stage to go to the ryots and to make this alternative offer, half the number of cultivators, if not more, will agree to the rent proposals.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—May I ask what happens at the end of 50 years?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—Then the land goes back to the cultivator. That is exactly the point; because if the company goes fut, as some of these companies are likely to in the near future, then. . . . . .

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—I hope the honourable member will continue to use parliamentary language.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—What I mean is that when the company ceases its operations, the landholder has the right of getting back his land. That is the thing that he values most of all, and it is that that will prevail upon him to lease the land rather than to give it up altogether. He says to his brother villagers: "You see, I have not been dispossessed of my land. I have leased my land to the Belapur Company, and they are prepared to give Rs. 65 per year for my land, which Government value at Rs. 1,000. I will take the Rs. 65 every year and at the end of 50 years I will have the land back." That is the sentiment that appeals to the ryot. If even at this stage I am allowed to go as an emissary on behalf of Government, I am quite sure that half the dispossessed landowners, if not more, will agree to this 6½ per cent. rent basis lease. Perhaps it may be news to the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas to learn that the attachment of the people to the soil and the pride of being the owner of a piece of land is so strong that I have seen new men coming to settle on agricultural lands and purchasing land which they know would never give them more than 1½ per cent.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—I know it very well. It is no news to me.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—That being the feeling of the cultivator, I am surprised at the attitude which the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas has taken. The feeling is so deep among the people that they do not like to be dispossessed, and rather than be dispossessed they will readily agree to an alternative proposal of a lease.

I do not think there is anything else for me to say but only to remark that the resolution that has been placed by me before the Council has been practically admitted by the Honourable Member in Charge, because he said that Government will always try to proceed on the lines indicated in the resolution. I am aware that the Land Acquisition Act does not lay down any clauses based on the principle of a lease. There is no provision in the Land Acquisition Act as regards the leasing of land. But as I have been telling this Council, the sword of Damocles in the form of acquisition is hanging over the land-owners, and immediately an alternative of leasing is offered, they will at once agree to the leasing. And if that is agreed to, a large amount of discontent that is on the country-side will decidedly decrease. I, therefore, strongly urge that Government should accept my resolution without any modification.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—It is rather too late to discuss any modifications of the resolution. My honourable colleague has indicated the attitude of Government that they will do as much as they can to prevent any hardship on the part of ryots, so far as conditions will permit, and will observe the condition that land will be taken only when absolutely necessary for an essential industry in this Presidency.

LAND ACQUISITION FOR COMMERCIAL COMPANIES— FEES OF LAW STUDENTS.

[The Vice-President; Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; Mr. S. B. Upasani; Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.] [6TH AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—Before you put the resolution to the vote, sir, I wish to say one word. I have considered the matter further and with the partial assurance that we have had from Government, I am prepared to withdraw the resolution.

The resolution was by leave withdrawn.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Resolution No. 18. The Honourable Mr. Upasani.

"This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that the fees at present charged to law class students be reduced by one-half."

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Are we not sitting since 11?

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—I beg the honourable member's pardon.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—We have been sitting from 11 a.m. Can we not keep the rest of the business for to-morrow?

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Yes, but we are now going on with resolution No. 18.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—Mr. President,—While moving my resolution at the last Council meeting for the opening of new law classes at Poona, Ahmedabad and Karachi, I referred particularly to the hardships which the law students experience in Bombay owing to the excessive cost of living and the serious difficulty of obtaining house accommodation. I, therefore, need not dwell at great length on those points. As my resolution at the last meeting was not carried, I now propose that some relief may be given to these hard pressed students in the form of a reduction of their fees. Now, all the colleges cost a great deal to Government, but the Law College in Bombay is the only institution which not only pays its own cost, but brings surplus income to the coffers of Government. I do not think it proper that the students should be made to pay more than what it costs Government to provide for their education. In this case, the fees collected considerably exceed the amount of expense. In the case of the Engineering College the fee receipts are shown in this year's budget estimate at Rs. 20,000 whereas the expenses stand at Rs. 1,89,974; in the case of the College of Commerce, the fees are shown at Rs. 26,000 and the expenses at Rs. 1,02,408 this year, and the expenditure for these colleges stood at Rs. 1,36,656 and Rs. 88,925 in 1918-19. In the case of the Law College the expenses came to only Rs. 42,816 in the amounts for 1918-19, and this year they are expected to come to Rs. 59,288, whereas the fees came to Rs. 65,000 in 1918-19 and this year are estimated to come to Rs. 77,000. Thus it will be seen that while the College of Commerce costs 4 times the income from fees, and the College of Engineering more than 9 times, the law class fees cover its whole expense and yield a profit to Government. This would appear to be the more significant when it is noted that all the other colleges are whole time institutions, whereas the law class is a part time institution in which instruction is given for only an hour in the day. For that one hour the students have to go long distances from their residence to the Elphinstone College . If the reduction which I propose is made in their fees, that will cover the tram fare required for going to the College, and they would then go in trams instead of on foot as they do at present. The reduction will not mean any serious loss to Government, especially when no hostel accommodation is provided for the students, and they have to stay in Bombay and pay high rents and to incur the high cost of living in the city. I hope, therefore, that this small relief that I press for them will be allowed.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Sir,—I am sorry Government cannot accept this resolution at this stage. I pointed out in speaking on the Honourable Mr. Kamat's resolution that it would hardly be right to lay down any new policy at this stage of the Council's term of office. Education is a transferred subject, and so far as the next budget is concerned, we must leave the hands of the Minister free both in regard to the revenue that is obtained by the department and in regard to the expenditure which will have to be incurred. We can now only carry out, as far as possible, the requirements of education within the amounts which have been provided in the present budget.

FEES OF LAW STUDENTS—DIVISION OF KHANDESH.

[6TH AUGUST 1920.] [Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola; Mr. S. B. Upasani; the Vice-President; Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud.]

This resolution raises a question of principle as to the fees to be charged to the law school students and necessitates a reduction of revenue. On the general grounds of reform alone, this resolution should be rejected. I propose, however, to deal with the merits of the case to show to honourable members that in addition to the question of principle to which I have referred, there is no case for it on merits. The honourable mover bases his case on the ground that in the working of the institution there is a profit. I should like to ask honourable members to consider in the first instance whether there is actually any profit or not. It is perfectly true that according to the published statistics there is a so called profit of Rs. 18,000. I have got the latest figures showing the fee receipts for 1920-21, and they amount to Rs. 79,000 and the expenditure is shown at about Rs. 59,000. That would show a profit of about Rs. 18,000. But is that a real profit? Honourable members have got to bear in mind that the law school is held in the Elphinstone College building and, therefore, no charge for rent is debited to this institution. The Council can well understand that if the law school is located in a building of its own, it would cost a heavy capital expenditure or a very high rent. To calculate profit and loss on a mathematical basis, proportionate charge of the Director of Public Instruction's Department, and other supervising charges will have to be added in addition to a charge for occupation of a building. The item of rent alone would swallow up more than Rs. 18,000 which is represented as profit. Government do not propose to deal with this question in any niggardly spirit. This will be evidenced by the fact that a Government Resolution No. 217 was issued in 1899 to the effect that the surplus income of the school should be held available for expenditure on the law school. It will be observed that Government do not propose to prepare a balance sheet on the lines mentioned but have kept this amount available for the benefit of the school alone. Amongst the needs of the school are a building of its own and additional hostel accommodation. Efforts have been made in the past and it has been found that the total cost of erecting a building for the school and hostel comes to Rs. 78,000. I am sure honourable members will agree that it is much better to spend this money on providing hostels and building rather than in the direction of reducing the fees. The fees levied in this school are lower than those in any Government college. The first LL.B. students are charged Rs. 90, and the second LL.B. Rs. 100 per year. This charge compares very favourably with the fees levied in other institutions both for arts and professional teaching.

Another point for consideration is that there is already a very large demand on the existing accommodation and any reduction of fees may result in more applications for admission, which cannot be accepted. The greater need of the institution is additional accommodation and not more applications at present.

For these reasons both on the ground of principle which I have explained, and on the merits of the case, I hope, honourable members will reject the resolution.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—Sir,—I am thankful to the Honourable Member in Charge for assuring us that the surplus income received from the fees is being earmarked for being spent on the needs of the school. But that does not appear in the budget.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—I have quoted the Government Resolution No. 217 of 1899.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—I was not aware of the resolution as it has remained a dead letter for so many years.

As regards the fees not being heavy they may not be comparatively heavy, but we have to bear in mind that in this college instruction is given for only an hour, while the other colleges are full time colleges. However, in view of the assurance given that the amount that is being accumulated will be utilized for the immediate needs of the college, I beg leave to withdraw this resolution.

The resolution was by leave withdrawn.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Resolution No. 22. The Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud.

"This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that a committee be appointed to consider the question of readjusting the existing division of Khandesh for revenue and judicial purposes."

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud:—Sir,—I beg to be permitted to postpone this resolution to the next session.

The resolution was by leave postponed.

[The Vice-President.] [6TH AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—The Council will now adjourn till 11 o'clock to-morrow.

The Council then adjourned till 11 a.m. on Saturday, the 7th August 1920.

By order of His Excellency the Honourable the Governor,

G. DAVIS,
Secretary to the Legislative Council
of the Governor of Bombay.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Discussion of matters of general public interest. Resolution No. 25. The Honourable Mr. Kamat.

"This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that Government may be pleased to take steps (a) to provide for the benefit of primary school teachers a provident fund, (b) to fix a scale of contributions thereto, and (c) to allow the teachers an option, either to avail themselves of the provident fund or the existing pension system."

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat:—Mr. President,—May I know if this question is open to discussion on merits or whether in view of what was stated by the Honourable Member in Charge of the department it is worth while discussing it now?

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Sir,—Government have no objection to allowing a discussion if the honourable member so desires, but I would explain to him that the question of starting a provident fund for non-pensionable teachers is now under the consideration of Government. When that takes place, it will be open to the Ministers to consider whether the pensionable teachers should be given the option of pension or provident fund. But nothing can be done at present. Government have at present under consideration the question of starting a provident fund for non-pensionable teachers and nothing, I think, will be decided till the Ministers have taken over charge and have dealt with the whole problem.

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat:—If Government, while they are considering the question of non-pensionable teachers, will also give an assurance that this suggestion of mine will be considered, I am prepared to withdraw my resolution.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—It will be considered by the Ministers and not by Government.

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat:—In view of what has been stated, I think it is not desirable to press the resolution at this particular time. I, therefore, ask for leave to withdraw it.

The resolution was by leave withdrawn.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Resolution No. 19. The Honourable Mr. Upasani.

"This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that Government be pleased to share two-thirds of the expenditure incurred by municipalities on education."

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—Mr. President,—With your permission I will postpone this resolution.

The resolution was by leave postponed.

CHILDREN OF SCHOOL TEACHERS.

[7TH AUGUST 1920.] [The Vice-President; Mr. B. S. Kamat; Mr. S. B. Upasani; Mr. J. G. Covernton.]

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael) :—Resolution No. 26. The Honourable Mr. Kamat.

"This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that Government may be pleased to direct that the boys of primary school teachers studying in municipal or local board primary schools, so also boys and girls of these teachers studying in secondary schools and colleges, whether Government or aided, be exempted from the payment of fees."

(At this stage His Excellency the President entered and occupied the chair.)

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat :—Your Excellency,—I take it that the suggestion contained in this resolution does not open as large a question of policy as the suggestion contained in the previous resolution standing in my name. This resolution proposes to give a concession to the children of the primary school teachers whose condition, so far as the finances are concerned, is so well known to all of us. The suggestion contained in the resolution is that Government should be pleased to direct that children of primary school teachers, whether studying in municipal or local board schools, or secondary schools or colleges, should be exempted from fees. I know there was a strong feeling among the primary teachers when they held their conferences in this district and elsewhere that such a concession should be given in favour of their children, and in consideration of the very hard lot of the primary teachers, so far as their poor salaries are concerned, if Government are pleased to give them this liberal concession, I believe, they will be conferring on these hard worked public servants a great boon. I do not think many words are necessary to commend this resolution both to Government and the Council, and I have great pleasure in moving it.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani :—Your Excellency,—I wish to heartily support the resolution. The prayer embodied in this resolution is a very modest one and, I hope, it will be readily granted in the interests of the schoolmasters, who are paid very poor salaries, especially in the local board and municipal schools, and in the numerous aided institutions for primary and secondary education. This relief is absolutely necessary, particularly in the case of students who join secondary schools and colleges and have to pay high rates of fees. I hope, therefore, that the concession prayed for will be granted.

The Honourable Mr. J. G. Covernton :—Your Excellency,—This resolution is not unlike the one which was brought yesterday, and some of the objections which apply to that resolution apply to this also. On the surface it seems a plausible resolution, and naturally the Director of Public Instruction would be the last person to wish to put any obstacle in the way of concessions to teachers. But when you come to look into it a little more closely, I think, you will see that there are difficulties. In the first place, I may point out that concessions of a similar kind are granted to the children of mistresses. It is natural, I think, and only right that special consideration should be shown to female teachers. The profession of teaching in this Presidency is not one that naturally attracts them and we have great difficulty in getting a good class of woman to come forward as teachers, and when we have got a good woman and a trained mistress, we do not want to lose her because she is married, and therefore we want to make such concessions as will induce married female teachers to remain in the profession. But the case is not the same with the ordinary teacher, the male. There are a large number of them and there are other ways of meeting the difficulties that they may suffer. In the first place, the obvious way of providing for teachers is not by giving them special concessions of this kind, but by giving them pay which will enable them to live decent lives and bring up their children in conformity with reasonable ideals and ambitions. We have recently improved the pay of the teachers to a certain extent and schemes are under consideration for further improvements which, if approved, will bring very solid relief, I trust, to all concerned. Again, there are teachers and teachers. I do not quite gather from the resolution whether we are supposed to grant these concessions to all teachers or whether it is meant that they should be given only to teachers who are in some sort of public service, either directly under Government or under the local boards or under municipalities. My own impression is that the honourable member intended to restrict his concession in the way that I have indicated; but, if so, it hardly seems fair to teachers of aided schools. On the other hand, if we are to deal with teachers in aided schools, we are put in a very great difficulty. These teachers come and go; sometimes they are doing teaching and at other times they are in an office; at other times again they are reading for the bar and occasionally, when they are supposed to be engaged in teaching, they are doing other work in addition. It would, therefore, be very difficult to find out whether a man was a bona fide teacher at the time when he applied for the concession, and still more so to say that he remained a bona fide teacher throughout the period when his children were under instruction. I do not think that we could apply the concession to the teachers of aided schools. At the same time it would be wrong to grant it to one class and not to another. Again, we have the difficulty that the funds of aided institutions have to be considered. I pointed out these difficulties yesterday, and it is exactly the same in this case as it was in the other. If you exempt from fees the children who attend aided schools, then aided schools have naturally got a right to compensation, and that compensation would eventually amount to a very considerable item, and at the same time it would be rather difficult to assess the incidence of it.

CHILDREN OF SCHOOL TEACHERS.

[Mr. J. G. Covernton; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole; Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.] [7TH AUGUST 1920.]

Lastly although, as I said at the beginning of my remarks, I am in favour of doing all that can reasonably be done for teachers, I do not myself personally feel convinced that because a man is a teacher, therefore he should claim the right to send his son or daughter to any school free. I know that in certain professions concessions of that kind are made. I understand that in the railway they get passes, and again doctors will often attend the families of brother doctors free. But I do not think the case is quite the same in this instance. We do not find for instance that a grocer expects to get his groceries free from another grocer, or his meat free from the butcher. In the same way, I do not quite see why, because a man is a teacher, he should expect to be able to send his children to any school, and get them educated free. For these reasons, therefore, your Excellency, I oppose this resolution.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai :—Your Excellency,—After the remarks made by the Honourable the Director of Public Instruction, I think it is not opportune to press this resolution now. The revision of the salaries of the teachers is shortly coming up, and after that event happens, if their resources are still very limited, this Council can very well consider the question thereafter, but to forestall that event would not be proper, because it may come in the way of a proper revision of their salaries. Therefore, in the interests of the teachers themselves, I would request the honourable mover of the resolution to just wait until the revision of the teachers' salaries comes up.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—Your Excellency,—I also cannot see my way to support the resolution that has been placed before the Council by the Honourable Mr. Kamat. The right step to take in this matter is to put schoolmasters on proper level as regards their pay. Attempts are being made to raise the salaries of primary and other school-teachers, so as to put them on the same status as their compeers in other walks of life, and when the taxpayer does this, I do not see why the teachers should get any special concessions. The teachers should be treated as regards pay exactly like their compeers in the other branches of the public service. All that can legitimately be claimed for them is adequate salaries, and when the taxpayer pays these salaries, I do not think that the principle of giving additional concessions in the way that is sought for in this resolution would be right. As pointed out by the Honourable Mr. Covernton, if, because they are teachers, we allow them to have their children educated free, I do not see why engineers in Government service should not press a similar claim and ask that their sons should be educated free in the engineering college, or why doctors in Government service should not claim that their sons should be educated free in the medical college. On these grounds, I cannot see my way to support this resolution.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Your Excellency,—I hope the Honourable Mr. Kamat will be satisfied with the explanation which the Honourable Mr. Covernton has given, and that he will agree that it is undesirable to raise this question now. The real remedy, as has been pointed out, is to revise the pay. To introduce this form of relief would lead to many complications in various directions. As a matter of fact, the pay of primary school-teachers was revised within recent times. But there is considerable force in the agitation which is still carried on that the present revision is inadequate. Government have under consideration fresh proposals for further revising their salaries, and the amount involved is a very heavy one. This Government, as has been previously pointed out, cannot deal with this problem within the means at their disposal under the present budget provisions, and therefore, the question will have to be tackled immediately by the Minister when he takes over charge. He will have to allocate the funds which he will obtain in various directions in connection with education. The further revision of the pay of primary school-teachers will be the immediate problem which he will have to solve. That being so, I hope the honourable member will not press his resolution.

CHILDREN OF SCHOOL TEACHERS—SUNDAY CLOSING.

[7TH AUGUST 1920.] [Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola; Mr. B. S. Kamat; the President; Mr. G. S. Curtis.]

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat:—Your Excellency,—With reference to the analogy quoted by the Honourable the Director of Public Instruction, namely, that of the children of midwives and school mistresses, I wish to point out that facilities like this are given not only in the case of females, but I understand, also in the case of children of Indian soldiers. If children of Indian soldiers are given similar concessions, I venture to think that the children of the primary teachers also deserve a concession.

With reference to his remarks regarding the difficulty about aided schools, if necessary, I am willing that this concession should be granted, in the first instance, in the case of Government schools only.

Regarding the general argument that I should wait till a further revision comes into force, I appreciate the force of that argument. I am glad to hear that the teachers are likely to get a further revision in a short time.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—That will depend upon the Minister.

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat:—Till then, I think it is not worth while pressing this resolution. It is only a few months hence, and I, therefore, wish to withdraw it.

The resolution was by leave withdrawn.

His Excellency the President:—Resolution No. 27. The Honourable Mr. Kamat.

"This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that Government may be pleased to direct that all country liquor shops be closed on Sundays."

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat:—Your Excellency,—With reference to this resolution, may I ask the Honourable Member in Charge whether this opens up a question of policy?

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—It is open to the honourable member to discuss it; whether there is any advantage to be gained, I cannot say.

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat:—Your Excellency,—This is simply a resolution in the interests of the poorer classes of the people. I do not think it is an opportune time for this Council to-day to go into the question of the figures of the consumption of country spirits. But I think that it is necessary to put into force certain constructive measures, in order to check the consumption of liquor.

I have figures to show that owing to the present system, although we have been told that the consumption of liquor has gone down by 2 per cent. during the last ten years, still as there is no restriction whatever on the maximum selling price, the result is that the shopkeeper exploits the consumer. Therefore, although the principle of Government is to impose a very high incidence of taxation, I regret that it has not had the desired effect, namely, to check the consumption which we all wish to have. If we refer to the last annual report of the Excise Commissioner, it will be seen that in spite of the fact that Government have enhanced the still head duty, and the heavy prices charged by the licensee to the consumer .....

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Will the honourable member be kind enough to say in what districts of the Presidency the still head duty was increased last year?

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat:—The general policy of Government has been to increase it from year to year. As I said, although there has been an enhancement of the duty, still the consumption of intoxicants, if not of country spirits alone, namely, toddy and other things, is not checked. The last report of the Excise Commissioner tells us that after the introduction of the auction system, although the consumption of country spirits has gone down by something like 184,000 gallons, still the consumption of toddy has gone up by 500,000 and odd gallons. That is to say, although the result of the enhancement of the duty is to check consumption of country spirits, because of the very high prices charged, still people go in for toddy drinking, and after all, although there is a reduction on the one side of 184,000 gallons, on the other side there is an increase of 500,000 odd gallons. However, I do not want to go into all these elaborate figures at the present moment.

One of the ways by which consumption can be reduced is, I think, the closing of the liquor shops on Sundays. I wish that Government should give a trial to this experiment, and I hope that my resolution will be acceptable to the Council.

SUNDAY CLOSING.

[Mr. R. E. Enthoven; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; Mr. G. S. Curtis; Mr. B. S. Kamat.] [7TH AUGUST 1920.]

The Honourable Mr. R. E. Enthoven:—Your Excellency,—I had occasion to remark yesterday that resolutions dealing with excise policy at the present moment seemed academic, because our hands are tied for the next few months by the fact that we have auctioned the shops up to the end of March, and therefore, even if any change was thought to be desirable, we are not in a position to introduce it. As I pointed out before, by the end of March, these excise questions will be dealt with by another authority, and therefore it seems undesirable to discuss them at present. It seems to me that the Honourable Mr. Kamat does not take those remarks to heart.

This proposal to close liquor shops on Sundays could hardly be introduced during the term of the present contracts, because it will inflict a heavy loss on the shopkeepers. It will involve compensation, and, therefore, loss to Government. If the Honourable Mr. Kamat means that after the end of March next we should adopt a system of Sunday closing throughout the Presidency, I say that that is a question which we had better not discuss. After the end of March next, we might be required to adopt a system of closing the shops from Monday till Saturday. I do not think that it is likely, and I do not think that it is desirable. My point is, that is not a question that we can discuss now, and I hope that the Honourable Mr. Kamat, when he replies, will withdraw the resolution, and take another opportunity of bringing it forward in a place where the results will be more fruitful.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—May it please your Excellency,—I am inclined to think that the principle underlying the resolution is not open to question, and there should be no serious difficulty in accepting this resolution as an indication of the policy of the members of this Council. If it cannot be immediately put into effect, it may be done so later at a convenient time. But it would not be proper for that reason to wait until March next for the reformed council, and not to express an opinion upon the subject now. I, therefore, heartily support the resolution.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—May it please your Excellency,—It will be within the recollection of this Council that yesterday I moved an adjournment of the discussion of another question of excise policy—the desirability of instituting a board of liquor control. On that occasion the Council endorsed my view that it was not desirable, for the reasons which have already been stated by the Honourable Mr. Enthoven, to start discussion on questions of excise policy in view of the fact that from 1st December onwards the excise portfolio would be transferred to the incoming Minister. On that ground I would urge the Council to reject this resolution. Beyond that, I would add that a deeper question is involved than purely excise policy. Sunday after all is a Christian holiday. There is no particular reason in foisting upon this country, in the mofussil at any rate, the closing of shops on Sunday. If it is accepted as an item of policy that consumers are to be able to indulge in liquor on other days, I do not see why on Sunday only they should be compelled to go without. The case may be different in Bombay where a large number of the labouring classes, millhands, do not work on Sundays. It is not so upcountry where the closing day for the labouring classes is something different. This is, however, a minor matter.

In view of the fact that discussion on questions of excise policy should at present be deferred to the new Council, I would ask this Council to reject the resolution.

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat:—Your Excellency,—If it is contended that because a few months hence we shall have Ministers for Excise and Education, therefore, no question relating to these subjects is to be discussed now in this Council, then there is an end of the matter. But at the very beginning I asked the Honourable Member in Charge whether on merits of the question it was permissible to discuss this resolution, and on his reply in the affirmative, the discussion of this resolution was proceeded with. I do not think we should be deterred from discussing the merits of the question for the simple reason that even if it is a recommendation from this Council to the next Minister, it is open to him to accept it or throw it away. Just as all other departmental matters are going on undeterred by the fact that a few months hence Ministers are going to come in, similarly I do not think there should be a block placed on this question of excise also. The machinery of this Council, as I said, ought to go on until it comes to an end, whether recommendations are accepted or not. If they actually interfere with the policy of Government, then it is an entirely different matter.

Now, regarding what fell from the Honourable Member in Charge as to Sunday closing, I insisted upon Sunday not because it is a Christian holiday, but because there should be no drinking one day out of the week. Whether it is Sunday or Friday, I don't mind. As long as we insist upon the reduction of consumption, I think, we shall be carrying out a constructive policy of excise.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis :—Am I to understand that the honourable member's resolution also applies to European liquor shops?

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat :—My wording of the resolution refers to country liquor shops.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis :—Then, all European liquor shops will remain open?

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat :—I do not mind if they do.

So, as a matter of policy towards the reduction of the consumption of liquor, I wish that this recommendation should be considered by Government, that out of 7 days of the week, there should be at least one day when country liquor shops should not be open, which will indirectly help the reduction of liquor consumption, so far as the labouring classes, at any rate, are concerned.

The resolution was put to the vote and lost.

BOMBAY TOBACCO BILL.

His Excellency the President:—A Bill to amend the law relating to the duty payable on tobacco and to the import, transport, retail sale and warehousing thereof in the City of Bombay (Bill No. IV of 1919).—Second reading. The bill is postponed under Rule 6 until the next meeting.

His Excellency the President:—Gentlemen,—Before adjourning this session of this Council I desire to express the hope that all honourable members will, in the intervening period between now and the time this Council re-assembles, study to the best of their ability the large and comprehensive proposals that have been laid before this Council, so that when we meet next time these proposals may meet, as I hope, with practically unanimous support. And I desire also to take this opportunity of expressing how much we owe in the matter of these housing proposals to the energy and knowledge of my honourable colleague on my left, the Honourable Mr. Curtis. He, for years past, has made a special study of the infinite complexities of this question, and had it not been for the accumulated information and the inspired energy with which he has studied these proposals, it would have been absolutely impossible for me to bring them before this Council even after eighteen months. I think that this Council owes a very great debt of gratitude to my honourable colleague, probably far more than they know, for the immense devotion and skill which he has shown in working up one of the largest housing problems that have been ever contemplated by any Government. (Cheers).

Gentlemen, this Council will now adjourn.

The Council then adjourned sine die.

The following Bill is published under rule 28 (5) of the Rules for the Conduct of Business at Meetings of the Legislative Council of the Governor of Bombay:—

BILL No. XVII of 1920.

A Bill to amend the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898.

WHEREAS it is expedient further to amend the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898, in manner hereinafter appearing; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Bom. IV of 1898.

1. This Act may be called the City of Bombay Improvement (Amendment) Act, 1920.

Short title.

2. For clause (a) of sub-section (2) of section 60 of the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898, the following clause shall be substituted, namely:—

Amendment of section 60.

Bom. IV of 1898.

"(a) In respect of the lands referred to as the Flats, specified in Schedule C as plots 1 (a), 1 (b), 1 (c) and 1 (d), the Board shall, subject to the power of resumption reserved by sub-section (7), set apart plot 1 (a) as an open space and may at any time lay out the said plot as a recreation ground or park for the free use of the public; and may, subject to the aforesaid power of resumption, at any time lay out the whole or any part or parts of plots 1 (b), 1 (c) and 1 (d) as recreation grounds or parks for the free use of the public, or appropriate the whole or any part of the said plots to building purposes."

The Flats.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The purpose of the amendment is to allow of certain lands, appropriated hitherto as open spaces, to be used as open spaces or for building purposes; provision has been made in the neighbourhood for a public park and the reservation of these lands as open spaces is no longer required.

LIST OF QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

THE HONOURABLE MR. D. V. BELVI, LL.B.

Questions.	Answers.
1. (a) (i) Will Government be pleased to state if their attention has been drawn to a letter from Mr. R. M. Sane of Barsi under the heading "Government Servants and Ryots' money" published on page 2 of the "Kesari" newspaper in its issue of the 15th June 1920? A letter in the "Kesari" dated 15th June 1920.	1. (a) (i), (ii), (iii) These have already been replied to.
(ii) if so, are the allegations made in the letter correct?
(iii) if not, what are the real facts of the case?
(b) to lay on the Council table copies of the orders issued by Mr. Simcox to the Mamlatdars in the Sholapur District about the collection of funds for the erection of dharmashalas at Pandharpur?	(b) No orders were issued by Mr. Simcox to the Mamlatdars in the Sholapur District for the collection of funds beyond sending them the printed appeal a copy* of which is placed on the Council Table. Vide* Appendix D.
(c) (i) to state what is the total amount collected and what is the exact amount of money now lying in the office of each Mamlatdar in the Sholapur District?	(c) (i) The total amount collected is Rs. 42,327-11-3. No money remains with any Mamlatdar in the Sholapur District, as they were asked to stop collections and send the money collected to Mr. V. N. Jakkal, Honorary Secretary of the Committee.
(c) (ii) if receipts have been regularly and officially passed to subscribers to the fund?	(c) (ii), (iii) The sums received by the Collector and Mr. Jakkal were all acknowledged. Printed receipts were given in those cases where money was received direct. Their counterparts are available. In some cases typed receipts were given and their duplicates are not available. For money collected in villages in many cases manuscript receipts were passed by kulkarnis and their duplicates are available. No receipts seem to have been passed in the few cases where money was collected by Panchas. In some villages only lists of subscribers were kept and are available, no individual receipts being given.
(c) (iii) if duplicate copies of the receipts are available at present?
(c) (iv) what is intended to be done with the money?	(c) (iv) The money is intended to be spent for the comfort of pilgrims coming to Pandharpur and especially in building Serais for them.
(c) (v) if any interest is running on the money now lying in Government Treasuries?	(c) (v) None of the money is in any Government Treasury. Rs. 42,000 are deposited in the Bank of Bombay, Sholapur Branch, as a fixed deposit at 4 per cent., and the remainder, Rs. 327-11-3 is kept in the current account.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

Questions.

Answers.

2. Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) if their attention has been drawn to a complaint over the signature of "A poor teacher" published on page 6 of the issue of the "Kanara Leader" newspaper, dated the 8th June 1920?

A complaint in the "Kanara Leader" dated 8th June 1920.

(b) if so, are the allegations made true?

(c) if not, what are the real facts of the case?

(d) if Government have received a copy of the Resolutions passed in the District Conference of Primary School Masters of the Kanara District on the 26th, 27th and 28th April 1920?

2. (a), (b), (c) & (d). Owing to pressure of work the office of the Deputy Educational Inspector, Kanara, could not complete the bill work to be done in March by the end of the month and had to spend part of April on it. The pay bill of the Local Board teachers for the month of March was consequently not submitted to the Treasury till the 8th of May. It was cashed on the 18th idem. Orders have been issued to prevent a recurrence of such delay in future. With reference to the allegation made in the article in the "Kanara Leader" regarding the transfer of teachers, it is reported that owing to the natural division of the District into two parts by the western ghats, it is necessary to transfer teachers from one part to the other. As the only months suitable for transfer (having regard to the convenience of all concerned) are March, April and May, transfer orders were issued during this period. Repairs to schools in the District have to be done twice a year, just before the monsoon and in the cold season. The orders referred to in the article in question were in respect of repairs to be carried out just before the monsoon and were issued in April last, the masters being directed as usual to see that the work of repairs was completed before the rains set in.

A copy of the Resolutions mentioned in part (d) of the question has been received by the Director of Public Instruction and is under his consideration.

3. (a) Is it a fact that vernacular school-masters in the Southern Division have recently been prohibited by the Educational Department from subscribing to a magazine in Kanarese called "Prathamik Shikshaka"?

A Kanarese magazine.

3. (a) Yes.

(b) If so, what are the grounds of such prohibition?

(b) It was not considered useful to spend public funds on the purchase of the magazine.

4. (a) When is the Training School for primary teachers likely to be established at Belgaum?

Primary teachers' training school.

4. (a) This part has already been answered.

(b) What is the comparative percentage of trained teachers in Marathi and Kanarese schools in the Belgaum District with reference to the total number of pupils taught in the two languages?

(b) 1·3 and 2.

(c) Is it a fact that some of the teachers in the Marathi primary schools in the Belgaum District were refused admission into the Training Colleges in the

(c) No admission was refused to the 1st year class. Some had to be refused admission to the 2nd and 3rd year classes for want of room, but this did not apply

(d) If so, is it intended to open a combined training school for both Marathi and Kanarese teachers at Belgaum?	(d) No.
5. (a) Will Government be pleased to say whether it is a fact that Rs. 200 contributed by the villagers of Timmenahalli in Ranebennur Taluka as their contribution to the Local Board for building a well in their village has been invested in the Byadgi Housing Association by the Mamlatdar of the Taluka and the Byadgi Housing Association is now refusing to return the money to either the Local Board or the villagers on the score that one of the bonds is in the personal name of the then Mamlatdar who is now transferred elsewhere and that they require his permission to pay back the money? Well at Timmenahalli, Ranebennur, Dharwar.	5. (a) As the villagers requested the Mamlatdar to deposit the money in some Society till the project of the well was matured, he invested Rs. 100 in the Byadgi Housing Association and with the remaining amount purchased a war bond in the name of the Vice-President of the Association. The Association did not decline to pay the money but delayed the payment as its accounts were not ready. Rs. 100 have already been paid and the balance will be paid shortly on the sale of the war bond being sanctioned by the Association.
(b) Will Government be pleased to state why the Mamlatdar has purchased the bonds in his own name?	(b) The Mamlatdar did not purchase any bond in his own name.
6. Will Government be pleased to state with reference to the reply given to my question No. 34 put at the March sessions of the Legislative Council regarding the "Toungya" system. Toungya system, Kanara.	6. The terms are as follows:—
(a) the terms on which the Kumri lands are assigned to the cultivators?	After the Forest Department has removed all marketable material the coupe is handed over to the Kunbi Marathas to burn off all the useless scrub and branchwood and cultivate 'ragi' (Nagli) free of any charge. In some cases the Marathas have to sow teak seed with the 'ragi'; in other cases this work is carried out by the Forest Department after the 'ragi' crop is reaped. The Marathas take the whole of the 'ragi' crop.
7. Will Government be pleased to state—	7. (a) 63.
(a) the total number of school mistresses who obtained a Second Year's Certificate in the Training College for Women at Dharwar before the year 1913 and who are still in service in the Educational Department; Promotion of school mistresses.
(b) the curricula of studies for the said certificate before the year 1913 and the Third Year's Certificate after the year 1913;	(b) The two curricula* are attached. * Vide Appendix K.
(c) if it is true that many of the school mistresses trained before 1913 were teachers of those that obtained their Third Year's Certificate after 1913;	(c) No definite data are available, but only one of the 63 mistresses concerned is a teacher on the staff of the Training College for Women.

year 1913 are much better than those of their former mistresses that taught them;	line and is at present in the grade of Rs. 100. She has thus much better prospects, than the present day third year mistresses. As regards other former 2nd year mistresses, the answer is in the affirmative.
(e) if so, what are the grounds for such differential treatment?	(e) The differential treatment is due to the fact that the two classes of teachers concerned are not equally qualified and that different scales of pay laid down for the various classes of certificate.
8. Will Government be pleased to state—	8. (a) The estimated average annual yield per acre is Rs. 41-15-0.
(a) the average annual revenue per acre of the Casurina plantations in Kanara, basing the average on the period necessary for the full growth of the trees? Casurina plantations, Kanara.
(b) what is the land revenue per acre of garden land situated adjacent to or in the vicinity of the Casurina plantation?	(b) The rate of assessment per acre of garden land in the vicinity of the plantation is from Rs. 6 to Rs. 8.
9. Will Government be pleased to state what is the total of the pound fees levied in the Kanara District from owners of cattle in the years 1917-18 and 1918-19 for infringing and grazing rules? Forest Fines.	9. The following amounts of pound fees were levied in the Kanara District:—
	Rs.
	1917-1918 814
	1918-1919 604
10. Will Government be pleased to state—	10. The facts are as follows:—
(a) if the attention of Government has been drawn to stray note No. 4 published on page 3 of the issue of the "Raja-Hansa" newspaper dated the 19th July 1920 complaining against oppressive prosecutions under the Indian Forest Act, 1878, against whole villages in the Mundgod Mahal and the Kalghatgi Taluka of the Dharwar District? Indian Forest Act, 1878: Dharwar.
(b) whether the allegations made in the said newspaper are true and accurate?	(b) & (c). A fire broke out in the forest of Kalghatgi village but the villagers did not help to put it out although the forest subordinates called on them to do so. Orders were therefore passed to prosecute the people who were bound to help but did not do so. Shortly afterwards the Conservator of Forests, Southern Circle, received a petition from the villagers complaining against the hardship of being prosecuted. On going through the papers the Conservator found that the fire occurred on bazzar day and that the absentees were 183 in number. In the circumstances he withdrew the prosecutien and ordered that application should be made to the Collector for enhancement of grazing fees of the cattle belonging to the people who did not help. The same procedure was followed in another case in which a much smaller number of people was implicated. The people were liable to prosecution in both cases, but the cases were dropped as a matter of clemency.
(c) if not, what are the real facts?

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. D. V. Belvi.]

Questions.	Answers.
(d) how many men and women in the Dharwar District were prosecuted under the said Act during the year ending with the 30th June 1920 and how many of them were convicted?	(d) 70 prosecuted, 37 convicted.
(e) what was the total amount of fines imposed on the accused persons that were convicted under the said Act during the aforesaid period of time in the Dharwar District?	(e) Rs. 338-2-0.
(f) the total number of persons that have yet to be put on their trial under the said Act in the said district?	(f) 65.
11. (i) Will Government be pleased to state how many persons in the Ranebennur Taluka of the Dharwar District have made applications to the Commissioner, S. D., the Collector of Dharwar, the Prant Officer in charge of the II Division, Dharwar, and the Mamlatdar of Ranebennur respectively since the close of the second Indian War Loan complaining that they did not get War Bonds in return for the money they had paid to the Revenue authorities for the purchase of War Bonds and enquiring as to what had become of their money? War Bonds: Ranebennur, Dharwar.	11. (i) There were joint applications from the people of 12 villages in all to the Commissioner, S. D., the Collector of Dharwar, the District Deputy Collector and the Mamlatdar and the number of signatories comes to about 150 in all.
(ii) to say what has been the result of these applications?	(ii) The amounts paid by these applicants were traced in the accounts of the (1) Ranebennur Co-operative Society, (2) Kadar Mandalji Co-operative Credit Societies, and (3) Byadgi Housing Associations. The Societies have now agreed to repay the amounts, and the Ranebennur Society, which at first had refused to repay the small deposits till the expiry of 5 years, has already started repayment. The applicants have been informed of this. Eight persons of one village, Itgi, in that taluka have complained that Rs. 75 in cash and Rs. 285-2-0, the value of postal cash certificates paid in by them as contribution towards the second War Loan, have not been accounted for. This matter is under separate inquiry.
(iii) to lay on the Council Table the report of the Deputy Collector, II Division, of the Dharwar District, to the Collector of the District who for the last nine months has been making inquiries to trace where the amounts contributed by the ryots of the Ranebennur Táluka have been invested?	(iii) No. The inquiry is still in progress.
(iv) to say whether it is a fact that the District Deputy Collector in charge of II Division has ordered the Co-operative Credit Societies in the Ranebennur	(iv) Vide answer to clause (ii).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[Mr. D. V. Belvi; Mr. P. A. Desai.] [27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

Questions.	Answers.
Taluka, in whose names the bonds were applied for by the Mamlatdar and were issued either by the Postal authorities or by the Public Debts Office, to pay back the money to the ryots?
(v) to say whether it is a fact that during the investigation of these war loan affairs the District Deputy Collector repaid monies to certain contributors after recovering the same from certain village officers?	(v) As the result of the investigation the prosecution of a kulkarni who had misappropriated a sum of Rs. 270-12-0 has been sanctioned. The kulkarni of Itgi, without the permission or knowledge of the Mamlatdar, withdrew from the Byadgi Housing Association a sum of Rs. 193-11-0, forming a part of the amount collected on account of the war loan and deposited with that Society, and disbursed the amount to seven persons. On the representation of four of them that they had received Rs. 14-1-0 less than the amount stated by the kulkarni in their joint receipt, the amount was recovered from the kulkarni and paid to the persons concerned.
(vi) If the reply to the above question be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the reasons why this money remained unaccounted for and to state if they have taken any steps against those who were responsible for retaining the ryots' contributions?	(vi) The answer to clause (v) contains the requisite information.
(vii) Will Government be pleased to say whether it is a fact that the District Deputy Collector in his inquiries has found out that in the case of one contributor War Bonds to the extent of Rs. 1,000 more than the amount he contributed were issued and this excess amount was recovered by the Taluka authorities without crediting the same in the Taluka War Loan accounts?	(vii) A contributor of Ranebennur had received a war bond for Rs. 1,050 in excess of the amount paid in by him. On his handing over the bond, the Mamlatdar sold the bond and the proceeds were paid to 15 persons who had subscribed that amount. There is a discrepancy in respect of Rs. 57-3-6 out of the amount of Rs. 1,050 and the District Deputy Collector, II Division, is holding an inquiry into the matter.
[These questions were asked at the meeting held on the 2nd August 1919, when ad interim replies were given.]
THE HONOURABLE MR. P. A. DESAI, LL.B.

(b) how many meetings of such committees were held during the years 1915 to 1920?
(c) what were the suggestions made at such meetings and which of them were given effect to?

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. P. A. Desai.]

Questions.	Answers.
11. (a) Is it a fact that the Government intend to acquire lands for the Khopoli Land Company in Khalapur Petha in the Kolaba District? (Khopoli Land Co.: land acquisition.)	11. (a) Yes.
(b) Is it a fact that the Government intend to lease these acquired lands on annual tenure to the agriculturists till they require them for leasing the same for the intending factories?	(b) No.
(c) Will Government be pleased to state how many villages and villagers will be affected by the acquisition of the above-mentioned lands?	(c) & (d) The Honourable Member is referred to the Company's agreement dated 23rd March 1920 printed at pages 154 et seq. of the Supplement to the Bombay Government Gazette dated 15th April 1920.
(d) Whether Government intend to place any restrictions which the Company should observe in charging rent to the intending factories?
(e) Whether there will be any proportion between the compensation to be allowed to the land-holders who will be affected by the acquisition and the rent to be charged to the intending factories?	(e) No.
12. (a) Is Government aware that Messrs. Tata Power, Limited, have erected iron towers on lands in the Panwel táluka for conducting electric power from the Andhra Valley Works to Bombay? (Tata Power, Limited: land acquisition.)	12. (a) & (b) Government have received a report regarding unauthorised encroachments on private land by some officers of the Tata Company in connection with the latter's works.
(b) If so, are the notices of acquisition issued to land-holders affected by the Company?
(c) If not, is the Company going to pay any compensation to those affected?	(c) The Company will certainly have to pay compensation in any case to those affected and steps are being taken to see that no private rights are illegally infringed.
13. Is it a fact that Government intend to abolish the agricultural farms at Veshvi and Versoli in the Alibág táluka and Banotra in the Pen táluka? (Agricultural Department farms, Alibag.)	13. It had been suggested that in view of the fact that a new rice farm had been opened near Karjat the farm at Veshvi should be abolished. Several protests against the proposed abolition of the Veshvi farm were received by the Director of Agriculture and he has stated that he will take no steps in the matter until he has visited Alibág and consulted the local people. The farm at Versoli is a small sub-station for the purpose of finding out the best method of improving manat land. The work there will be continued until some definite results are obtained. There is no farm or sub-station at Banotra in the Pen táluka. If the Agricultural Department is doing any work there it is presumably on a temporary demonstration plot.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[Mr. P. A. Desai; Rao Saheb Harilal Desaibhai Desai.] [27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

Questions.	Answers.
14. (a) Is it a fact that Government intend to abolish the agricultural school at Veshvi in the Kolába District for want of students? Agricultural school, Veshvi.	14. (a) & (b) It is found very difficult to recruit students for the agricultural school at Veshvi. Only three new students could be secured this year and the school is now being carried on with three students in the first year and eight students in the second year. Efforts have been made, and are being made, to secure more students; but if these efforts fail it will be necessary to consider the question of closing the school next year. At present no decision to close the school has been arrived at.
(b) If so, what are the subjects taught at present in the school?

THE HONOURABLE RAO SAHEB HARILAL DESAIBHAI DESAI, LL.B.

1. Will Government be pleased to give the following information, viz.— Village Acher, North Daskroi, Ahmedabad.	1.
* * * * * *
(c) The area of the Government grass land (Bid) near by.	(c) There is no Government grass land (Bid) in Acher village.
2. Will Government be pleased to state (a) whether the Assistant Deputy Educational Inspectors are given any conveyance allowance? Educational Officers: Conveyance allowance.	2. (a) The Assistant Deputy Educational Inspectors are not given any conveyance allowance except in the case of those stationed at Bombay, Poona, Ahmedabad, Surat and Karachi, who receive special conveyance allowance for inspection work at head-quarters.
(b) whether Government is aware that the teachers in charge of primary schools have in Gujarat to arrange for the conveyance of the inspecting staff and in some cases to bear the cost?	(b) The teachers referred to have not to arrange for the conveyance of the inspecting staff except in cases where the village police patels, whose duty it is to arrange for conveyance for touring officers, are unable to supply them. In no case are school masters required to bear the cost.
3. Will Government be pleased to state (a) whether any orders have been passed by the Educational Department or by them or whether any are in contemplation to transfer the power of giving promotions to school masters and teachers in primary schools under municipalities and any other similar powers to the Educational Inspector? Municipal School Masters: promotion.	3. (a) & (b) In continuation of the ad interim reply given to the question at the last meeting, inquiries made of the Director of Public Instruction show that no such orders have been passed by the Educational Department. A circular on the subject issued by one of the Divisional Commissioners is under the consideration of Government.
(b) if so, the exact scope of such proposals?

[These questions were asked at the meeting held on the 2nd August 1920, when ad interim replies were given.]

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

Questions.

4.* Will Government be pleased (a) to put on the table a statement showing the amount spent by the Bombay Port Trust on building residential quarters for their staff since 1st April 1918?

Bombay Port Trust Staff housing.

(b) to say how many more residential quarters the Port Trust has still got to build for their staff (superior and labouring) and why the work has not been taken in hand till now on a larger scale in this direction?

(c) to say when the Port Trust expects to complete the quarters for the whole of the Bombay Port Trust staff and the approximate expense for the same?

5. Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) the present age of Khan Bahadur Husseinkhan Dhanekhan, Honorary Magistrate, Ahmedabad?

An Honorary Magistrate, Ahmedabad.

[Rao Saheb Harilal Desaibhai Desai.]

Answers.

4. (a) The amount expended by the Trustees on building residential quarters for their staff since 1st April 1918 is:—

	Rs.
Superior staff ...	12,86,233
Menial staff ...	8,37,527
Total ...	21,23,760

(b) The Trustees in July 1918 considered the housing question very fully and laid down the following standard percentage for quarters to be provided for their employees:—

Permanent Superior staff.	50 per cent.
Permanent inferior staff.	100 per cent.
Temporary staff (including workmen and dock labour).	According to the number in regular employ required to be housed near their work.

The number of quarters provided up to date or under construction is—

	Number employed.	Number for whom quarters (a) have been or (b) are being constructed.
Superior staff	1,989	(a) 367+(b) 52= 419
Inferior (average number including workmen and dock labour).	13,275	(a) 3,826+(b) 1,720=5,546

The Trustees are dealing with the housing of their staff on a liberal scale. Up to date they have expended approximately Rs. 40½ lakhs on providing quarters. During the current year they have provided for a total expenditure of Rs. 19,37,000 on staff quarters and at the present moment they have under construction or are about to commence quarters for 52 superior and 1,720 inferior employees.

(c) It is not possible to say by what date quarters will be provided for the whole of Port Trust staff or to state the approximate amount to be expended on quarters. The number of persons employed by the Trustees is increasing each year in proportion to the development of the Trust's operations and it is therefore impossible to foresee the number of quarters that will have to be provided. For the present the Trustees intend to work up to the programme laid down in 1918 and an annual provision will be made in their Capital Budget on those lines.

5. (a), (b), (c), (d), (e) & (f) Time does not permit of collecting the detailed information asked for by the Honourable Member. Government however have no reason to believe that Khan Bahadur Husseinkhan Dhanekhan is otherwise than efficient in the discharge of his magisterial duties.

* This question was asked at the meeting held on the 2nd August 1920. The answer to it was not then ready.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[Rao Saheb Harilal Desaibhai Desai.] [27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

Questions.	Answers.
(b) the number of years he has been an Honorary Magistrate in Ahmedabad?
(c) the number of days from 1st January to 31st August 1920 for which he issued processes and the number thereout on which he did not attend his court?
(d) the number of cases tried by him in 1920 and the number of adjournments in each?
(e) whether it is a fact that on some of his court days he does not attend the court?
(f) the time he sits in his court?
6. Will Government be pleased to state the number of days the various Educational Inspectors toured for inspection in their divisions in 1918 and 1919 with the names of each? Educational Inspector's tours.	6. The information is being obtained.
7. Will Government be pleased to state whether they have considered the question of locating the head-quarters of the Assistant Deputy Educational Inspectors at each Taluka head-quarters and of decentralizing certain powers to them as regards their charge? Head-quarters: Assistant Deputy Educational Inspectors.	7. Enquiries are being made.
8. Will Government be pleased to give the following information for each division of the Presidency for 1919-1920, viz.— New Primary Schools, 1919-20.	8. (a), (b) & (c) The information is being obtained.
(a) The number of new primary schools budgetted for?
(b) The number of such new schools opened?
(c) The number of such schools closed?
9. Will Government be pleased to state—	9. (a) Since January 1911.
(a) since when the Jambusar Taluka of the Broach District is without a senior Mamlatdar with First Class powers? First Class Magistrate, Jambusar, Broach.
(b) why the Jambusar Taluka has been left without a senior Mamlatdar with First Class Magisterial powers?	(b) The taluka has been left without a First Class Magistrate owing to improved means of communication. There have been improvements in the direct road between Broach and Jambusar and facilities have been afforded by Railway communication, first by the Baroda State Railway via Masar Road and then by the direct Railway opened between Broach and Jambusar. A First Class Magistrate was formerly posted to the taluka solely on account of the difficulty of communication.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Rao Saheb Harilal Desaibhai Desai.]

Questions.	Answers.
10. Will Government be pleased to state the number of cases from the Jambusar Taluka tried by Magistrates outside the limits of the Taluka during the last three years? (Trial of cases, Jambusar, Broach.)	10. The information being obtained.

12. Will Government be pleased to give the reasons for withdrawing from the acquisition of a plot of land originally selected for the construction of a bungalow for the Excise Inspector in the City of Broach and for selecting instead a site acquired by Mr. Vithaldas Bhagwandas for building a Hindu Sanatorium? (Land Acquisition, Broach.)	12. Government have received no information regarding the change of site.
13. Will Government be pleased to state whether all the talukdars of Bhankoda in the Viramgam Taluka of the Ahmedabad District owning 100 Dokdas have applied to the Collector or Talukdari Settlement Officer to remove the management under section 26 of the Talukdari Act and to restore the estate to them? If so, what impediment exists to grant their prayer? (Talukdars, Bhankoda, Viramgam, Ahmedabad.)	13. Information has been called for.
14. (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they have passed any orders limiting the revision of the salaries of the clerical establishment sanctioned by Circular No. 438 dated 25th June 1920, Financial Department, only to hands considered efficient, and whether the rest of them are only to have their war allowances consolidated to their present salaries? (Circular No. 438, Financial Department, dated 25th June 1918.)	14. (a) Yes.
(b) Will Government be pleased to state the reasons for modifying the orders contained in their Circular No. 438 of 25th June 1920, Financial Department?	(b) To promote efficiency.
15. Will Government be pleased to state whether they have passed any orders about the revision of the salaries of talatis; and if so what those orders are; if not when they are likely to pass any orders on the subject? (Pay of talatis.)	15. The orders are about to issue at once.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud.] [27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

Questions. Answers.

THE HONOURABLE RAO BAHADUR S. D. GARUD.

1. Will Government be pleased to state—

Arunavati bridge, Shirpur, West Khandesh.

(a) whether the people of Shirpur in West Khandesh have raised and deposited in the Government Treasury popular contribution for the building of the Arunavati bridge?

1. (a) Yes, but for a causeway and not a bridge.

(b) whether the same was raised on account of official assurances that adequate help will be given by Government and that work will be immediately taken up?

(b) No.

(c) what is the amount of the popular contribution?

(c) Rs. 8,000.

(d) when it was collected?

(d) In the year 1916.

(e) why the work was so long delayed?

(e) Subsequent to the raising of the contribution, the people desired that a masonry bridge should be provided instead of a causeway. As, however, the cost of the former was found to be beyond the resources of the District Local Board, West Khandesh, the work could not be undertaken.

2. Will Government be pleased to lay on the Table the following information regarding East and West Khandesh Districts respectively for the years 1908-09 and 1918-19, viz.—

Information regarding Khandesh District.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

[Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole; Shaikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah.]

Questions.

Answers.

THE HONOURABLE DEWAN BAHADUR K. R. GODBOLE.

1. Is it a fact that the teachers of Municipal and Local Board primary schools have not been given the concessions of temporary and provisional allowances sanctioned in Government Resolution No. 210 of 16th March 1920 in the Financial Department for Government servants whose salaries have not been revised?

Pay of school teachers.

1. Yes. The question of granting temporary and provisional allowances to the teachers referred to is still under consideration.

THE HONOURABLE SHAIKH GHULAM HUSSEIN HIDAYATALLAH, LL.B.

1. Will Government be pleased to state what powers and facilities, if any, have been given to the special Mahomedan Deputy Educational Inspectors provided for the advancement of Mahomedan education in each division of the Presidency for the furtherance of the end in view?

Mahomedan Education.

1. The function of the special Deputy Inspector for Urdu Schools is mainly advisory. On account of administrative difficulties he is not given the sole charge of Urdu schools within his jurisdiction but he is allowed an influential voice in their administration. All possible facilities and powers short of the actual administration of Urdu schools are accordingly given to the several special Deputy Inspectors for Urdu Schools. The accompanying extract* from a letter of the Educational Inspector, N. D., to the special Deputy for Urdu Schools in the N. D., indicates in detail the facilities and powers given.

* Vide Appendix I.

2. Will Government be pleased to state what steps, if any, have been taken to explain "local option" in regard to the medium of instruction, and what is the method, if any, adopted for arriving at decisions in that respect, in the three divisions of the Presidency?

Education: Local Option.

2. The District Deputy Educational Inspectors in the three (now four) divisions of the Presidency proper arranged that local option in respect of the medium of instruction should be explained to the Mahomedans of each village concerned through a circular and also by means of personal advice offered by the Urdu inspecting officers. The Mahomedan community in each case was given time to come to a decision in the matter of selection, and the medium agreed to by them, or where there was disagreement, the one agreed to by the majority was sanctioned in consultation with the Deputy Inspector of Urdu Schools.

In the case of Municipal Urdu Schools, a similar procedure was adopted in consultation with the Municipal authorities.

3. Will Government be pleased to state if uniformity was observed in the introduction of the new alternative sets of standards in February 1919, in the three divisions of the Presidency?

Education: Alternative standards.

3. The new standards referred to were not introduced simultaneously in the several Divisions, but in other respects uniformity was observed in their introduction.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Questions.

Answers.

4. Will Government be pleased to state—

Urdu School : Tankaria, Broach.

(a) whether the Central Urdu School at Tankaria is intended for the benefit of the Mahomedans of the whole Northern Division, or only for the benefit of the Mahomedans of the Broach District?

4. (a) The school is intended for the benefit of the Mahomedans of the Broach District only.

(b) if it is a fact that Urdu was the medium of instruction at the Central School, Tankaria, before "local option" was given?

(b) Yes.

[These questions were asked at the meeting held on the 2nd August 1920, when ad interim replies were given.]

5. Will Government be pleased to state—

Pay of graduates : Educational department.

(a) if it is a fact that the minimum pay of a graduate subordinate in the educational department has remained the same, viz., Rs. 50 in the Presidency and Rs. 60 in Sind, and that his minimum in the revenue department has been raised from Rs. 25 to 70?

5. Enquiries are being made.

(b) if it is a fact that the maximum pay of the same subordinate in the educational department also remains the same, viz., Rs. 150, and that the maximum pay attainable by him, among others, has been increased from Rs. 150 to Rs. 300?

(c) if the replies to (a) and (b) be in the affirmative, if it is a fact that the department is not able to get graduates, that posts in Government High Schools remain vacant, and that the efficiency of the department is likely to suffer?

(d) if so, whether Government have done, or propose to do, anything to maintain the comparative superiority of the scale of pay of the educational department to that of other departments to the same extent as before or to an extent sufficient to attract the best men to the department?

6. Will Government be pleased to state from what date the revised scheme for the Provincial Educational Service, fixing the minimum salary at Rs. 250 and the maximum at Rs. 800, is to come into force, and when orders regulating the intermediate grades are likely to be issued?

Provincial Educational Service : Revised pay.

6. Government are unable to give the information asked for by the Honourable member as the matter is under their consideration.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

Questions.

7. (a) Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) if it is a fact that graduates in the educational department rise to be head masters or deputies after about 18 to 20 years' service, and that after that they ordinarily retire after 10 to 12 years' service in that grade?

Educational Department: Promotions.

(b) if so, if it is a fact that the rumoured annual increments of Rs. 25 will thus cause them to retire on about Rs. 500, and render it impossible for most of them to reach the maximum of Rs. 800?

(c) if so, whether Government have done, or propose to do, anything to ensure the possibility of the attainment of the maximum pay by the majority?

8. Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) in how many cases the places of the first and second assistants to the Deputy Educational Inspectors have been given to English-knowing teachers during the last five years;

Assistant deputy educational inspectors.

(b) in how many cases the places of the first, second or third assistants to the Deputy Educational Inspectors have been given to the Head-masters of Vernacular schools during the last five years?

9. Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) the amount of land forfeited under the fallow rules during the last ten years in Sind;

Sind: fallow land.

(b) the amount of such land restored to the original occupants;

(c) the amount of such land which has finally lapsed to Government?

*10. Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether the orders of the Secretary of State on the recommendations of the Public Service Commission in regard to the Provincial revenue and Police services have been received?

Public Service Commission.

(b) if so, what are those orders; and when are they to be carried into effect, and if any retrospective effect is to be given to them; and, if so, from what date?

[Shaikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah.]

Answers.

7. (a), (b) & (c) The question of the revision of the scale of pay of the members of the Bombay Educational Service is still under the consideration of Government.

8. (a) & (b) Enquiries are being made.

9. (a), (b) & (c) Information will be called for.

10. The orders of the Secretary of State for India on the Commission's recommendations regarding the pay of the Provincial Police are contained in paragraph 5 of the letter from the Government of India, Home Department (Police), No. 196, dated the 31st January 1920, a copy† of which is laid on the Council Table.

Questions. Answers.

THE HONOURABLE SARDAR GULAM JILANI BIJLIKHAN.

1. Will Government be pleased to state (a) how many Mahomedan students have been admitted in all the newly started training classes and schools in the different Districts of this Presidency?

Mahomedan students in training classes.

1. (a) 152.

(b) whether it is a fact that since the establishment of the Urdu training classes in Poona many Mahomedan students have been discouraged or refused admission from joining the District training classes on the plea of an existing institution especially meant for Mahomedan teachers?

(b) No.

2. Will Government be pleased to state how many Anglo-Urdu Schools there are in the Central and Northern Divisions?

Anglo-Urdu Schools.

2. There are at present no Anglo-Urdu Schools in the Central and Northern Divisions. An English class has, however, been attached to the Urdu primary school at Nasirabad (East Khandesh) and another to the Central Urdu Girls' School, Poona. The question of the establishment of Anglo-Urdu Schools at Poona in the Central Division and Surat in the Northern Division is under consideration.

[These questions were asked at the meeting held on the 2nd August 1920, when ad interim replies were given.]

3. (a) Will Government be pleased to state how many Urdu schools are there in this Presidency?

Urdu Schools and Colleges.

3. (a) & (b) Enquiries are being made.

(b) Is the supply of Urdu trained teachers adequate enough to meet the requirements of these schools?

(c) When does the Government propose to start Urdu training colleges in the Central and Northern Divisions?

(c) There are at present two Urdu Training Classes teaching a two years' course—one at Ahmedabad in the Northern Division and the other at Poona in the Central Division. Proposals to develop the Ahmedabad institution into a full training college are under consideration. The question of developing the Poona Class cannot be considered until it has been provided with a building of its own.

4. Will Government be pleased to state when the scale of pay of the Civil Assistant Surgeons of this Presidency was last revised?

Pay of Civil Assistant Surgeons.

4. In 1898.

5. Will Government be pleased to say whether—

(a) it is not a fact that the House Surgeoncies of all the Civil Hospitals in the important cities like Bombay, Poona and Karachi are reserved for Military Assistant Surgeons?

House Surgeons: Bombay, etc.

5. (a) & (b) Yes.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Sardar Gulam Jilani Bijlikhan.]

Questions.	Answers.
(b) these appointments were not filled up by Civil Assistant Surgeons during the war when the Military Assistant Surgeons were recalled for military duty?

4. With regards the remarks by the Honourable Sir George Carmichael during the Budget debate at the Council meeting on the 2nd August last, to the effect that Government are prepared to admit that there were defects in the Poona Drainage and water-supply schemes as carried out by Government for the Poona City Municipality, will Government be pleased to place on the Council Table the report of Mr. Watson, the Drainage expert, as regards the defects ? Will Government also be pleased to state what steps Government intend to take to rectify the defects ? Poona drainage system.	4. A copy of Mr. Watson's report on the drainage system of Poona is laid on the Table. It is at present under the consideration of Government.
5. Will Government be pleased to say if it is intended to create new posts of Professors of Horticulture, Animal Husbandry and Plant Diseases, in the Agricultural College, Poona, for the improvement of the teaching of these subjects ? If so, will Government also be pleased to say if the posts are to be filled by European specialists from England, or whether it is intended to appoint eligible Indians to the posts in accordance with the recommendations of the Public Services Commission to Indianise, as far as possible, the Agricultural Department ? Appointments : Agricultural College, Poona.	5. Sanction has been received to the posts of Professors of Horticulture and Plant Diseases. For the former recruitment in England is proposed as experts with the required qualifications are not available in India. For the latter a suitable Indian Officer has been designated.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[Mr. B. S. Kamat.] [27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

Questions. Answers.

6. Will Government be pleased to state the present number of students studying at the Agricultural College, Poona? Is it true that a congestion is being felt in the class rooms, and that a restriction on the number of admissions is intended by the College authorities from the next year?

Overcrowding: Poona Agricultural College.

6. The number of students now at the Agricultural College is 203, as compared with 115 in 1916. The rapid increase in the number of students during the last four years is causing congestion, but this is temporarily met by using some of the buildings put up for use of the Deccan War Hospital. It is probable that restriction on the number of admissions will have to be enforced next year.

Proposals for additional buildings and for additional staff have been made and are under consideration.

7. Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) the number of Sub-Inspectors in the Excise Department who have been served by Government with three months' notices of discharge under the Civil Service Regulations, owing to a proposal to abolish the posts?

Excise Sub-Inspectors.

(b) the object of the proposal, the advantage in view, and the amount of saving in expenditure, if any, the proposal will effect in the Excise Department?

(c) if it is a fact that many of the Sub-Inspectors affected by the proposal have been in Government service for over ten years; and have Government tried to provide for the men in other Departments, if possible?

7. The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the reply to question No. 6 put by the Honourable Rao Bahadur V. S. Naik which is laid on the Council Table.

8. With reference to the answer to my Question No. 14 (b) (iii) and (iv) at the last meeting of the Council, regarding malaria at Lonavla and Khandala, will Government be pleased to state whether the Collector of Poona has since submitted a report to Government as to whether the Tata Hydro-Electric Company are prepared to construct a drain to remove the leakage swamps near the Khandala Convalescent Home, and, if so, when they will start the work?

Lonavla and Khandala malaria.

8. The report of the Collector of Poona has not yet been received; details of the action to be taken by the Company remain to be settled by discussion on the spot, and the final report is expected to be ready by the end of October.

9. Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that certain lottery tickets, called the Goa lottery tickets, are being sold in many places in Bombay, and, if so, whether such sale has any permission from the Bombay Government?

Goa lottery tickets.

9. Yes. The sale has not been permitted by Government. Recently two cases of the sale of the tickets of the lotteries known as "Santa Casa da Misericordia de Goa lottery" and "Hospicio do S. C. de Maria de Margao lottery" were brought to the notice of Government and sanction was given to prosecute the agents concerned.

(b) have Government received any representations from the establishment, or any recommendations from the Commissioner of Customs, Salt and Opium in the matter of the revision of their pay and the grant of allowances to the men in this office and, if so, how they have been dealt with?	(b) No.
(c) is it true that the pay of this office has not been revised during the last 37 years?	(c) No. The pay of the Customs Branch of the office was revised in 1914 and that of the Salt Branch in 1917.
(d) is it a fact that the recommendations on two previous occasions from the Commissioner of Excise for the grant of temporary and provisional allowances at the higher rate to this office were not accepted by Government owing to the impending revision?	(d) Yes.
THE HONOURABLE RAO BAHADUR V. S. NAIK.
1. Will Government be pleased to say whether it is a fact that graduates directly recruited in the Southern Division under rules of 1910 have been recently appointed to Mamlat in preference to the graduates fully qualified for Mamlats under the old rules? (Appointments to Mamlat, Southern Division.)	1. The answer is in the negative.
2. Will Government be pleased to say— (a) how many graduates directly recruited under rules of 1910 have been appointed as Mamlatdars or to offices equal to or higher in rank than Mamlats during the last three years in preference to those that entered service under old rules and were fully qualified to hold Mamlats? (Appointments to Mamlat, new rules.)	2. (a) None.
(b) if there are still any graduates who have entered service under 1915 rules and who have not yet got Mamlats although they are fully qualified to hold such posts?	(b) 30, but of these 13 are acting as Mamlatdars, 3 are sub. pro tem. Mamlatdars and one has been appointed to a post equivalent in rank to Mamlat.
(c) if there are any such graduates for what reason these graduates have been held back from being made Mamlatdars?	(c) Mamlatdars are chosen by selection and those not chosen were not the most suitable candidates.

Questions.

Answers.

3. Will Government be pleased to say whether it is a fact that the Dharwar Municipality had exempted certain merchants, some of whom were municipal councillors, from payment of octroi on goods imported by them into the Municipal areas?

Dharwar Municipality: octroi dues.

[These questions were asked at the meeting held on the 2nd August 1920, when ad interim replies were given.]

3. No. In March 1918, the General Committee of the Dharwar Municipality passed a resolution exempting one Mr. Basaya Hiremath from the payment of octroi on consignments of jowari to enable him to help the poor by selling it at cost price. Accordingly, the jowari imported by him from 26th February 1918 to 31st March 1918 and from 23rd September 1918 to 10th October 1918 was exempted from the octroi duty, which amounted to Rs. 44-5-4. This exemption was noted by the Local Fund Audit Department in its note on the municipality's accounts for the year 1917-18 and as it was suggested therein that the amount should be recovered from Mr. Basaya, he was asked to refund it, but he refused to do so on the ground that he was exempted under the General Committee's resolution. Mr. Basaya was the father of Mr. Chanamallaya, a municipal councillor, who died in the same year. Two other merchants, Messrs. Gurappa Toragal and Nilkantappa Sambrani, were also similarly exempted from octroi duty on wheat imported by them on the 9th September 1918. This duty in their case amounted to Rs. 15-12-0, and was subsequently recovered from them. Neither of them was a municipal councillor. The three merchants mentioned above are no longer exempt from the payment of octroi duty.

4. Will Government be pleased—

(a) to lay on the Council table a comparative tabulated statement of the number of licenses held by people in different districts of this Presidency for possession of rifles, guns, revolvers and pistols for the purpose of self-protection, crop-protection and protection of property in 1919 before the revised rules framed under the Arms Act as amended last year came into operation and the same held by them during this year under the revised rules?

Licenses and exemptions, Arms Act.

(b) to say in how many cases of originally exempted persons in different districts of this Presidency they had to issue licenses for rifles, guns, revolvers and pistols under the new rules and for how many weapons of each of these firearms?

(c) to say how many Europeans, Anglo-Indians, Eurasians, and Native Christians who enjoyed exemption under the old rules have had to

6. Will Government be pleased to say— (a) whether it is a fact they have recently ordered a reduction in the number of Excise Sub-Inspectors with the object of giving revised and increased pay to the remaining Sub-Inspectors, Inspectors and higher officers of the Excise Department? (b) if so, how many permanent Sub-Inspectors they have allowed to be reduced with their length of service and the pay they are now getting? (c) whether they are providing these Sub-Inspectors with similar service elsewhere either in the excise or other departments, or in which way they think of compensating them for the loss of their service? (d) whether they are reducing any inspectors or other high officers of the Excise Department with the object of giving higher pay to those that remain in the Department? (e) if so, the number of Inspectors and officers, with their pay, whom they propose to reduce? Excise Department: Reduction of staff.	6. Provisional notices of discharge were served by the Commissioner of Customs, Salt and Excise on 89 Sub-Inspectors on pay of Rs. 40 and below in connection with the impending reorganization of the non-gazetted ranks of the Salt and Excise Departments. Final orders have not yet been issued in the matter.
7. Will Government be pleased to say— (a) whether it is a fact that the Excise Department was reorganised in 1907 and 1917 and that they are now thinking of further reorganising the same? (b) if the answer to the latter part of the above question is in the affirmative, what necessity they have in reorganising the department so soon? Excise Department: Reorganisation.	7. The Department was reorganised in 1907. In 1917 the superior controlling and supervising staffs of the Salt and Excise Departments were amalgamated and there were some slight modifications in the pay of gazetted officers in order to admit of the amalgamation, but there was no change in the pay of the non-gazetted establishment of the Excise Department. The non-gazetted establishments (excluding menials) of the two Departments will be amalgamated shortly. Owing to the great increase

[Mr. R. P. Paranjpye.] [27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

Questions.

7. Will Government be pleased to supply information on the following points :—

(a) has Government sanctioned the Sholapur Development Scheme ?

(b) at what rate per acre did Mr. Simcox expect to sell lands under this scheme ?

Sholapur Development Scheme.

(c) did Mr. Simcox sell some of these lands by auction ? What were the prices realized therein per acre ?

(d) is it true that Mr. Simcox immediately or a very short time before the eve of his departure, sold some of the lands at prices lower than those realized in the auction ? If so, will Government be pleased to furnish a statement giving names of persons, their occupation, the area of lands given, the amounts charged and the dates of sales ?

(e) will Government be pleased to place all the papers in connection with this scheme on the table and also the resolution sanctioning the scheme ?

(f) is it true that Government has acquired several lands and bungalows held by owners under the Cantonment tenure ? If so, will Government be pleased to place on the Council Table a statement giving the following details :—

(i) number of plots resumed,

(ii) number of bungalows resumed,

(iii) first valuation of these bungalows as made by the Executive Engineer and dates of such valuations,

(iv) revised valuations if any as made by the Executive Engineer,

(v) amounts paid to the respective owners ?

(g) is it true that Mr. Simcox gave in some cases more than the estimates—either original or revised—of the Executive Engineer ? If so, will Government be pleased to state the names of the persons to whom such payment was made ?

(h) is it true that people having bungalows on sites alleged by Government to be Cantonment tenure sites, sent a petition on 22nd December 1919 to the Commissioner, C. D., and to Government ?

(i) is it not true these sites were not covered by any Development Scheme ?

Answers.

7. Final orders have not yet been passed on the Sholapur Development scheme. When they are, a statement will be placed on the table, giving as far as possible the information required by the Honourable Member.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. R. P. Paranjpye.]

Questions. Answers.

(j) will Government be pleased to state what action Government has taken or intends to take on this petition?

(k) is it true that Mr. Mirams, Government Architect, made inquiry in each individual case of these petitioners?

(l) did Mr. Mirams make any report to Mr. Simcox or to Government, and will Government be pleased to place this report on the Council Table?

(m) has Government's attention been called to the correspondence in the vernacular paper "Kesari" of date 3rd February 1920 under signature of Mr. Benkatlal Kisanlal Soni?

(n) is it not true that the inhabitants of Sadar Bazaar and other owners of bungalows treated the sites and buildings thereon as transferable and heritable property to the knowledge of Government?

8. Will Government be pleased to state whether any correspondence has passed between them and the Director of Public Instruction, Bombay, in connection with the recent removal of Moulvi Abdul Bari from the Gujarat College, Ahmedabad? and if so, will they be pleased to place the same on the table?

Moulvi Abdul Bari, Gujarat College.

8. Yes, Government are not disposed to place the correspondence on the table.

9. Will Government be pleased to state whether any allowances which are paid to teachers in secondary or primary schools are also paid to the English teachers in the twenty full primary schools in which English classes have been opened?

If the answer to the above is in the negative, what are the reasons for this difference?

Primary and secondary school teachers.

9. If, as is presumed, the Honourable Member refers to the war (now temporary and provisional) allowances paid to primary and secondary school teachers, it may be stated that orders have recently issued sanctioning the grant of these allowances to the teachers of the English classes in question also.

10. Is it a fact that in the proposals for the revision of pay and prospects in the Secretariat establishments, the Oriental Translator's office establishment is not treated on the same scale as the others; if so, what is the reason?

Oriental Translator's office; revised pay.

10. The fact is as stated. The work in the Oriental Translator's office is not equal to the work in the Secretariat.

11. Will Government be pleased to state whether the recent revision in the pay and prospects of subordinate establishments have been made applicable to the Poona Cantonment Staff? Also whether an Poona and Kirkee Cantonment staffs: revised pay.

Questions.	Answers.
increased pay has been granted to Kirkee Cantonment Staff?
12. Sinnar Municipal school teachers. Have Government received any petitions from the teachers in Sinnar, District Nasik, that they have received no war allowance from the Municipality since July 1918 and that they also do not receive their pay regularly every month?	12. The answer to the first part is in the negative.
Have such petitions been received by the Educational Inspector, the Director of Public Instruction, the Collector of Nasik and the Commissioner, Central Division? If so, what answer has been given to these petitions?	As regards the second part, enquiries are being made.
13. Graduates: Registration Department. Will Government be pleased to state how many graduates there are in the Registration Department; do they get a higher initial salary than non-graduates just as graduates employed in the revenue establishments are to get under the new scheme of revision?	13. The information regarding the number of graduates serving in the Registration Department will be called for. The reply to the second portion of the question is in the negative.
THE HONOURABLE MR. G. K. PAREKH, LL.B.
1. Karamsad, taluka Anand. Will Government be pleased to say—(a) whether in the village of Karamsad in the Anand taluka, in consequence of bad seasons, portions of the Government land revenue demands of 1917-18 and 1918-19 had remained uncollected?	1. (a) In 1917-18 land revenue in Karamsad remained uncollected to the extent of Rs. 5,000 as unauthorised arrears owing to contumacy. The season of 1917-18 was not unfavourable in Karamsad. In 1918-19 the crops were poor and the land revenue was therefore fully suspended.
(b) is it true that in 1919-20, the rice, tobacco, tuver, cotton and math crops suffered from frost, unseasonable rains and other causes?	(b) No.
(c) is it true that in respect of the land revenue demands of Government, sub-sharers' quota of the demand were not recovered from them as usual but orders were issued for the recovery of the entire demands from the registered holders?	(c) The facts are not as stated by the Honourable Member. Land revenue due to Government from sub-sharers whose names were registered was recovered from them. In cases where names were not registered, it was recovered from the registered moksh narvadars or peta-narvadars in accordance with Government orders and usual practice.
(d) what was the annual Government land revenue demand from Karamsad for 1919-20?	(d) In 1919-20 the land revenue demand was as under:—

Rs.
23,585	for 1919-20.
22,787	„ 1918-19.	Authorised arrears.
3,599	„ 1917-18.	Unauthorised arrears.
49,971

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. G. K. Parekh.]

Questions.	Answers.
(e) what was the amount of penalty imposed on the Karamsad landholders for default in the punctual payment of the land revenue demands for 1919-20?	(e) The penalty imposed amounted to Rs. 1,403-8-0. Out of this only Rs. 535 were actually collected and the balance was remitted.
(f) what is the total amount of penalty imposed on the landholders of the Anand taluka for having not punctually paid their Government demands for 1919-20?	(f) Excluding Karamsad, Rs. 416-8-5 were recovered as penalty in the remaining villages of the Anand taluka.
2. (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the issue of the "Hindustan" newspaper of the 11th (12th?) June last giving a statement of murders, robberies, dacoities and other offences of violence that occurred in the talukas of Kapadvanj, Thasra, Anand and Nadiad of the Kaira District during the last two years? Dacoities: District Kaira.	2. (a) Yes.
(b) In how many cases have the offenders been arrested, prosecuted and punished, and in how many have they been acquitted, and in how many cases have the offenders not been found out?	(b) A statement* giving the information asked for by the Honourable Member is placed on the Council Table. * Vide Appendix E.
(c) Will Government be pleased to say what are the causes of the increases of crimes of violence in these talukas of the Kaira District during the last two year?	(c) The Dharalla community whose lawless tendencies are well known is mainly responsible for those crimes. The district officers report that the political agitation which has been actively maintained in the district since the beginning of 1918 has promoted a disregard of authority which has tempted the Dharallas to give rein to their lawlessness and has adversely affected their relations with the patidars. It is significant that the first serious outburst followed closely on the 'no rent' or passive resistance movement of 1918.
(d) Will Government be pleased to say what measures have been taken by them to prevent offences of violence in these talukas to arrest offenders and to bring them to justice?	(d) For the suppression of dacoity a Deputy Superintendent of Police with a force of 140 extra police is specially employed in the Kaira District. The adjoining States are actively co-operating with the British Police. Additional Police are being posted in certain villages at the cost of the Dharalla population in them.
3. Will Government be pleased to say— (a) what was the number of students who had passed the First Year's Course Examination at their respective colleges and presented themselves for admission into the College of Commerce? College of Commerce: Admission of students.	3. (a) It is not possible to give the exact number as no record is kept but probably it was 130.
(b) were these students required to submit to an examination at the College of Commerce before their admission?	(b) Yes.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[Mr. G. K. Parekh; Mr. A. F. I. Pathan.] [27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

Questions.	Answers.
(c) what were the subjects in which they were examined?	(c) The students are required to write a short composition on some simple subject involving no previous knowledge with a view to ascertain whether they have sufficient knowledge of English and in order to have some idea of their mental calibre. They are also personally interviewed by the Principal and the staff.
(d) what percentage of marks obtained qualified them for admission?	(d) Only 3 classes of marks, A, B and C, are given, and normally only those who get at least class B are admitted.
(e) how many of these students were admitted and how many refused admission?	(e) Forty-three of these students were admitted and the remainder were refused admission.

THE HONOURABLE MR. A. F. I. PATHAN.

1. (a) * * * *

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to state how long have these depôts been in existence, the places where they have been opened, the cost of establishment and other expenditure of each of these depôts and the net profits realised each year from these depôts for the last five years and to state further whether the local forest contractors cannot supply the demand for fuel at the places where depôts have been opened.

Government fuel depôts: district Kanara.

[This question was asked at the meeting held on the 13th March 1920, when an ad interim reply was given.]

1. (a) * * * *

(b) The accompanying statement† furnishes the information required by the Honourable Member. When depôts are run by contractors a loss is incurred by Government, as coupes sold on condition of supplying fire-wood at depôts at fixed rates always fetch a lower price than they would if sold without such a condition.

† Vide Appendix B.

2. (d) Will Government be pleased to state the number of Mahomedans in the Revenue Service in the division that have passed the qualifying test for Mamlat and periods of their service?

Mamlatdars' posts, Southern Division.

2. (d) Two, one of whom entered the service on 10th October 1899 and the other on 7th April 1903.

3. Will Government be pleased to state the present number of Urdu Schools in each district of the Presidency proper and the number of pupils attending them?

Urdu Schools.

3. The accompanying statement‡ furnishes the requisite information.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[Mr. S. B. Upasani.] [27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

Questions.	Answers.
Government notification No. 7884 published on page 1455 of the Bombay Government Gazette, Part I, dated the 1st of August 1918, under which lands in the nine villages in the Newasa and Kopergaon talukas of the Ahmednagar district were to be acquired under the Land Acquistion Act?
(b) was the redistribution contemplated in the scheme to be made amongst the ryots of villages in which the lands were situated or were the lands to be taken up for the Bellapur Syndicate?
(c) if for the latter, will Government be pleased to state on what terms the lands are to be given to the Syndicate and to state the details of the Syndicate's scheme for their redistribution for the better development of the irrigated area?
(d) what is the total area of the land proposed to be taken for the Syndicate in the several villages and the area irrigated and dry-crop which will be left to the ryots in the villages in which the lands are situated?
(e) is any provision proposed to be made to give lands elsewhere to villagers who will be evicted from their lands in these villages?
8. (a) Will Government be pleased to place on the Table the detailed schemes which may have been sanctioned for the revision of the pay of the clerical establishments in the several departments of the Presidency? Revised pay: clerks, school teachers, talatis,	8. (a), (b) & (c) The general principles on which revision of the pay of clerical establishments is proceeding have been published. Government do not propose to lay on the Council Table the detailed proposals for each office.
(b) has any scheme of revision been sanctioned for (1) vernacular teachers and (2) talatis?	The question of revising the pay of vernacular teachers is under consideration. Orders regarding talatis are about to issue.
(c) if so, will Government be pleased to lay it on the Table?
9. (a) Will Government be pleased to state if a scheme has been proposed for the revision of the pay of Mamlatdars? Mamlatdars; revised pay.	9. (a) Yes.
(b) If so, will Government be pleased to lay it on the Table?	(b) Yes, when the scheme is finally sanctioned.
10. Will Government be pleased to state if it is true that a lower scale of pay has been proposed for the Mamlatdars than for second class sub-judges? Mamlatdars and Sub-Judges.	10. Yes.

[Mr. S. B. Upasani; Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas.]

Questions.

Answers.

11. (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is true that in the new time scale of pay introduced for secondary teachers no distinction is made between under-graduates and double graduates or those who have secured a first class diploma of the secondary teachers training college?

Pay: secondary school teachers.

(b) Is it true that sub. pro tem. teachers are not given the benefit of the time scale of pay?

(c) What is the number of such teachers and after what length of service are they likely to get the benefit of the time scale of pay?

11. (a), (b) & (c) Enquiries are being made.

12. Will Government be pleased to state what action has been taken to give assistance and allowance to Head-masters of vernacular schools at Taluka headquarters for the work they have to do in connection with the local board schools in the taluka?

Head-masters: vernacular schools.

12. The matter is under consideration.

13. (a) Will Government be pleased to state if the appointment of an Inspector of Visual Instruction for which provision has been made in the Budget has been sanctioned?

Inspector of Visual Instruction.

(b) if not, when is the appointment proposed to be made?

(c) what steps have been taken to prepare magic lantern slides illustrating the history and geography of the several districts for which also provision was made in the Budget?

13. (a) & (b) In view of the financial situation and the more pressing demands on the resources of Government in other directions, the question of sanctioning the appointment referred to has been held up for the present.

(c) For the reasons given above, the preparation of the slides has been postponed.

14. (a) Will Government be pleased to state if temporary provisional allowance has been sanctioned for local board and municipal vernacular teachers?

Local board and municipal vernacular school teachers.

(b) if not, will Government be pleased to state the reasons for withholding this relief in their case?

14. (a) & (b) The question of the grant of temporary and provisional allowance to the teachers referred to is under consideration. The delay is due to the difficulty of finding the extra amount required which is estimated at Rs. 9 lakhs per annum.

THE HONOURABLE MR. HARCHANDRAI VISHINDAS, C.I.E., LL.B.

(a) Is it a fact that first and second class passengers arriving by steamer from Bombay to Karachi are not allowed to land until after the Police have boarded the steamer and checked the names of passengers?

Restrictions upon steamer passengers.

1. (a) Yes. The Police board all vessels entering Karachi Harbour to make inquiries concerning foreign first and second class passengers and non-Asiatic third class passengers.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas.] [27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

(b) If so, is it a fact that if steamers arrive at midnight, the passengers are prevented from landing until the arrival of the Police at 8 a.m. the next morning?	(b) No. Under the orders of the Commissioner in Sind, when a vessel arrives at night the Police and Customs Examinations take place at once, and passengers are then allowed to land.
(c) Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that no similar restriction is observed in respect of arrivals in the Bombay Harbour from Karachi or the Persian Gulf?	(c) & (d) No. Any ship which arrives in Bombay Harbour and anchors in the stream is immediately boarded by an officer of the Harbour Police; if the ship has come from Karachi only, and carries no passengers from outside India, there is no examination of passports as passengers from Ports in India do not require them. In the case, however, of boats carrying Persian Gulf or other passengers from outside India, all passports are examined. Passengers are allowed to disembark immediately the ship has been berthed either at the Mole or in the Docks and passports have been examined. In the case of passengers from any Port outside India, the procedure is the same in the case of first and second class and also deck passengers, no distinction being made.
(d) If so, will Government be pleased to state why it is necessary to impose the restriction in one port and not in the other?
(e) Is it true that even in Karachi the rule does not apply to deck passengers?	(e) & (f) As stated above the inquiries made by the Police extend to deck passengers as well as the first and second class passengers.
(f) If so, will Government be pleased to state what useful purpose is served by only the first and second class passengers being subjected to a restriction from which passengers of an inferior class are exempt?
2. Will Government be pleased to state—	2.
(a) the number of permanent and temporary preventive officers in the Karachi Customs and how many of these are Indians and how many non-Indians?	(a) There are at present 19 permanent preventive officers in the Karachi Customs, two of whom are Indians. There are 3 temporary officers, none of whom are Indians.
Preventive Officers, Karachi.
(b) if it is a fact that Mr. Younghusband, a former Commissioner in Sind, appointed 2 Indians as Preventive Officers?	(b) & (c) In 1911 two Indians were appointed preventive officers, but there is nothing on record to show that they were appointed by Mr. Younghusband.
(c) if it is a fact that when one of these was transferred later, his post was filled up by a non-Indian?	One of these reverted later to a clerical post at his own request as he found the duties of preventive officer uncongenial and his post was filled by a non-Indian.
(d) How many posts of permanent and temporary preventive officers have fallen vacant since 1912 and how many of these have been conferred on Indians and how many on non-Indians?	(d) Seven permanent posts of preventive officers have fallen vacant since 1912 and all have been filled up by non-Indians, except one sub. pro tem. post which is held by an Indian. Temporary preventive officers are engaged from time to time as required. They are paid by fees only and their services are liable to be dispensed with at 24 hours' notice. It is therefore difficult to state how many temporary officers were appointed and discharged since 1912.

(e) If it is a fact that whenever there is a vacancy of a preventive officer, Indian wharfingers and tally clerks already working in the Preventive Department are passed over and non-Indians from different parts of India imported?	(e) & (f) The cadre of preventive officers is entirely distinct from that of wharfingers and tally clerks, who have no claim whatsoever to promotion to the rank of preventive officer. They earn promotion in their own grades. There is therefore no question of passing them over. In cases of exceptional ability wharfingers can be and are promoted to the rank of preventive officers. The two Indian preventive officers appointed in 1911 had served as wharfingers. An Indian preventive officer draws exactly the same pay and allowances as a non-Indian, while wharfingers and tally clerks draw both overtime fees and temporary and provisional allowances.
(f) If it is a fact that Indians in the preventive service of about 20 years' service are drawing Rs. 60 to Rs. 70 plus war allowances, while non-Indians in the preventive service are getting at least Rs. 200 pay plus free quarters plus overtime fees after the same period of service?
[These questions were asked at the meeting held on the 2nd August 1920, when ad interim replies were given.]
3. Will Government be pleased to place on the table a statement showing the number of employees drawing the following grades of salaries, in the Karachi Port Trust, their nationalities; and whether they are Indians, Anglo-Indians or Europeans:— Employees, Karachi Port Trust. (a) Rs. 3,000. (b) Rs. 2,500 to Rs. 3,000. (c) Rs. 2,000 to Rs. 2,499. (d) Rs. 1,500 to Rs. 1,999. (e) Rs. 1,000 to Rs. 1,499. (f) Rs. 500 to Rs. 999. (g) Rs. 300 to Rs. 499. (h) Rs. 150 to Rs. 299. (i) Rs. 80 to Rs. 149. (j) Rs. 50 to Rs. 79. (k) Rs. 50.	3. Information is being obtained.
4. Supplementary to question 9 (a) to (f) put at the last Council Meeting to which an ad interim reply was given.
(a) Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that no Indian has been offered a post of a Preventive Officer ever since Mr. Younghusband appointed two Indians as Preventive Officers? Sind Custom Service appointments.	4. (a) & (b) The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the replies given to clauses (b), (c) and (d) of the main question.
(b) If the reply to the above question is in the negative will Government be pleased to state if the records show that an Indian was offered such post and he refused it?

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas.]

Questions.	Answers.
(c) Is it a fact that several Indians have applied for the post of Preventive Officer?	(c) Government have no information.
5. Will Government be pleased to state the date when the clerks whose pay has been raised under Circular No. 438 of 25th June 1920 will draw the increased pay? (Circular No. 438 of June 25th, 1920.)	5. The revised rates of pay will be drawn with effect from 1st March 1920.
6. Is it a fact that the price of charcoal has risen very much in Sind? If so, will Government be pleased to state what steps they have taken to prevent this rise which is higher than at any time during the war? (Price of charcoal, Sind.)	6. Information has been called for.

Home Department.
Police.

Delhi, the 31st January 1920.

SIR,

I am directed to refer to the correspondence ending with the Home Department letter no. 816, dated the 12th August 1919 (1026-C., dated the 17th February 1919), on the subject of the recommendations of the Public Services Commission regarding the Police Services. The orders of the Secretary of State on certain points have now been received and are set out below.

2. The Secretary of State agrees with the Government of India that the existing rates of pay of Inspectors General of Police are sufficient in all provinces, except in the North-West Frontier Province. In the case of that Province he has been pleased, in view of the fact that the maximum pay of Deputy Inspectors General is now Rs. 2,000, to raise the pay of the Inspector General to Rs. 2,000 rising by annual increments of Rs. 100 to Rs. 2,400 a month. [This sanction will have effect from the 2nd December 1919.] {In view of the responsibility and importance of the posts of Commissioner of Police in Bombay and Calcutta and the heavy expenditure which their incumbents necessarily have to incur, the Government of India considered that the present rates of pay do not sufficiently differentiate these onerous appointments from those of Deputy Inspectors General of Police, for which the maximum salary now is Rs. 2,000. The Secretary of State has been pleased to accept their recommendation that the pay of these two appointments should be increased to Rs. 2,000 rising by annual increments of Rs. 100 to Rs. 2,500 a month. This sanction will have effect from the 30th October 1919.}

3. In the case of the Indian (Imperial) Police generally the Secretary of State has decided to adopt a system of pay plus overseas allowances, and he has also found it necessary, in view of the new rates of pay sanctioned for officers of the Indian Army, to

( ) To Bihar and Orissa only.
[ ] To North-West Frontier Province only. { } To Bombay and Bengal only.

revise the scales of salary for the first seven years. The following scales of pay have accordingly been sanctioned for the Indian (Imperial) Police in lieu of those shown in the Home Department letter no. 1206-C., dated the 17th February 1919 :—

Year of service.	Junior scale per mensem.	Senior scale per mensem.
	Rs.	Rs.

22nd	...	1,050
23rd	...	1,100
24th	...	1,100
25th and over	...	1,150

(a) Efficiency bar.—An officer who is not considered fit for a superior appointment will not be allowed to rise above Rs. 450 in the Junior scale.

(b) Efficiency bar.—An officer who is not considered fit to hold charge of a first class district will not be allowed to rise above Rs. 950.

The scale of pay for Deputy Inspectors General of Police remains unaltered, i. e., it commences at Rs. 1,600 a month and rises to Rs. 2,000 by annual increments of Rs. 100.

4. All officers appointed as Assistant Superintendents in the United Kingdom or in India will draw pay according to the scales shown above, and officers of non-Indian domicile will receive in addition overseas allowances at the following rates :—

Years of service.	Overseas allowance, per mensem.
	Rs.
1st to 6th	125
7th to 10th	150
11th to 13th	200
14th to end of time-scales	250

The system of overseas allowances does not apply in the case of Deputy Inspectors General and officers holding appointments outside the time-scales on special rates of pay.

These scales of pay and allowances will have effect from the 1st January 1920, and officers now in service will get the benefit of them. Officers at present entitled to exchange compensation allowance will retain their right to draw the allowance whenever the rate of exchange renders it admissible in the future.

5. As regards the Provincial Police Service (Deputy Superintendents of Police) the Secretary of State has, after considering the recommendations of the Public Services Commission and the views of the local Governments and the Government of India, decided to adopt an incremental scale in place of the present graded system of pay. The scale will be as follows :—

Year of service.	Scale of pay per mensem.
	Rs.
1st (probationers)	200
2nd ditto	200
3rd	250
4th	275

22nd	560
23rd	580
24th	580
25th and over	600
Selection grade for 7 per cent. of the total cadre.	700

Local Governments will have authority in the case of officers promoted to the grade of Deputy Superintendent to place them in the Rs. 300 grade, or in any suitable grade below that. (For Burma, where the expenses of living are higher, the rates will be increased by Rs. 50 in each grade.)

The orders in this paragraph will have effect from the 30th October 1919.

6. A Press communiqué announcing the decisions on the foregoing points will be issued on the 5th February 1920.

7. The Secretary of State's orders on the administrative questions dealt with by the Public Services Commission will be communicated to the local Government / Administration later.

( ) To Burma only.

APPENDIX D.

Shri Pandharinathki Jaya.

Hindu Brothers,

You all know that owing to the late great War expenditure on peaceful objects has been curtailed. In that great War some of you have given your sons and brothers to die on the field of battle. Some of you have happily returned victorious, after receiving wounds and suffering hardships, to enjoy pension and repose. Most of those who could not personally go to fight have helped forward the cause of Victory and Right with their money and their prayers.

Now that the blessings of peace have been restored, the benevolent Sarkar is anxious to commemorate the bravery of the Hindu Army and the loyalty of the people in a noble manner.

You know that people of the Bombay Presidency flock to Pandharpur to worship Shri Vithoba, the God of peace and happiness, and that a visit to His Shrine makes them all happy and contented. At present they suffer a great deal of trouble and hardships.

The Sarkar intends therefore to inaugurate a scheme for the benefit of the worshippers of Shri Vithoba. It is hoped that this scheme will eventually comprise many details, such as grand approaches to the temple, thorough drainage of the town, and a complete hospital for the sick. The grand approaches will allow pilgrims to view with freedom and comfort the temple they have journeyed so far to see, without fear of crushing or suffocation. The drainage of the town will lessen the risk of those distressing attacks of epidemic disease which so often afflict the pilgrims not only at Pandharpur but on their return home. The Hospital will assure comfort and good treatment to all those who may fall sick during their pilgrimage.

All these matters are being contemplated by the Sarkar and each will be attended to in turn. But there is one more pressing need which calls for immediate action. Those of you who have attended the great fairs are well aware that many thousands of persons are compelled to camp in the open, in the fields or on the river banks, exposed to the rain and the heat. Others, who obtain lodging in the town, are crowded into dark and ill-ventilated rooms. The existing dharmashallas are open sheds, affording no security to property.

It is therefore in the Sarkar's mind to erect at once enough good dharmashallas in suitable places near the station and the town to accommodate many thousands of pilgrims in comfort. These dharmashallas will be in blocks containing family quarters. Each set of quarters will contain a living room, a cook room and a verandah. Each set of quarters will be locked up, and there will be a guard who will keep watch. Every family party arriving at Pandharpur on pilgrimage will be entitled, without payment beyond the pilgrim tax, to one set of quarters during its stay in Pandharpur. In this way each family will be able to take food, sleep and keep its property in security and peace, and will be free the whole day for its devotions.

It is plain that many thousands of quarters will be needed to house all the pilgrims, and that all of them cannot be built at once. But it is intended to build first quarters that will cover the whole open space between the Railway, the City, the Station Road and the Poona Road. With good arrangements we can get over 2,000 sets of rooms built on that space, and can accommodate over 2,000 family parties. But the cost will be nearly Rs. 20 lakhs, for each set of rooms will cost over Rs. 800, and we shall have to build guards' houses and roads, and provide water.

The Sarkar is willing to advance the money if necessary. But looking ahead to the other parts of the scheme mentioned above, it seems that the Sarkar will eventually have to meet very heavy charges. The provision of housing for pilgrims is one of the best and most praiseworthy forms of Hindu charity, and it is hoped that many will respond to this appeal and give according to their means. The appeal is to all Hindus, from Maharajahs and great merchant princes to the humblest.

It may be added that if any person or any collection of persons sends a subscription of Rs. 800 or more, suitable memorials of the donors will be inscribed over the door of one or more quarters.

Subscriptions may be sent to me at Sholapur, and will be duly acknowledged. It is hoped shortly to circulate a ground plan, showing the location of the new dharmashallas.

Collector of Sholapur.

Copy of Sholapur District Superintendent of Police's No. C.—30, dated the 17th February 1920.

Yesterday evening at about 5-30 p. m. matter came to a head with the crowd of some thousands of strikers who had attended the evening meeting on the Maidan making for the mills in a mass. I was at the Head-Quarters of the troops with the Collector when news came that the crowd had passed through the picket posted near the Veterinary Dispensary, whereupon the Collector with Rao Bahadur Gudi and a few police set off towards the Narsinggirji mill which is situated some 300 to 400 yards along the direct road to the Old Mill where Head-Quarters are situated. Within a few minutes a messenger arrived from the Collector asking for assistance which was promptly despatched and the Officer Commanding troops called out all his reserve to meet eventualities. Within a short time a large crowd of strikers appeared on the road making for the Old Mill gate where the Officer Commanding troops and myself were standing, and these were brought to a standstill by the troops still available. Soon after this shots were heard and it was also noticed that a crowd of strikers were being driven down the road by the Military towards the Old Mill and into the Chawl gallies bordering the road side. With difficulty the crowd facing us was then headed off and moved off on to the road parallel to the road on which we were standing. Further bursts of firing then broke out and the crowd then rapidly moved off and finally broke up into small gangs moving in the direction of the town and the direction whence the firing had occurred. No firing occurred on the part of the troops and military engaged with the crowd where the Officer Commanding and myself were posted, but the crowd were completely beyond the control of their leaders and only the sound of the firing to their rear caused them to finally break up and make off. The District Magistrate's report to the Commissioner copy of which is attached will make clear what happened where he was attacked. That the strikers were out for trouble was abundantly clear from their behaviour and demeanour and only the action taken seems to have averted far more serious consequences. During the night and this morning no further trouble has occurred but as a precautionary measure I wired to the Superintendent of Police, Bijapur, to send as many armed Police as he could spare to assist my already heavily worked men and some 50 men are expected this evening. This morning the bodies of three of the strikers were claimed by their relatives and taken off by them after inquests had been held, and one body had already been taken off on the previous evening. Three wounded strikers are in the hospitals. All the casualties were caused by the firing of the military and the Police did not fire.

Copy of letter No. Confidential 3, dated the 16th February 1920, from the Collector and District Magistrate, Sholapur, to the Commissioner, Central Division, Poona.

In continuation of my confl. No. 3 of to-day, I have the honour to report as follows:—

1. I was at head-quarters while this afternoon's meeting was going on. When it was reported to be dispersing no one knew where the crowd was going. I walked along a few yards to the Narsinggirji Mill, to see what was going on. The District Superintendent of Police who came on duty but is not strong remained at head-quarters. Near the Narsinggirji Mill I was confronted suddenly with the whole crowd, which swung round the corner and were on me. With the few police and Rao Bahadur Gudi who were with me, the crowd was brought to a standstill. It had passed the Narsinggirji gate and was obviously making for the old Mill. To my surprise it stopped in a semi-circle round me. I sent for troops at once, and with the few men I had tried to persuade the men to go home. They remained obstinate. When the troops arrived I tried to force the crowd back using the buls. Unfortunately the road is very wide, and some of the crowd got round the line, while other went round and passed into the road behind me through various openings between chawls. I was thus surrounded by a crowd of some 3,000 people with sticks. As I gave the order to push back the men on the way, the crowd in rear attacked. It was not till the stoning, both in front and from the chawls at the side, grew very bad that I gave the order to fire. Very few shots were fired and none took effect, owing I suppose to the fact that many sepoys had been bruised with stones.

2. The mob then got behind the low chawls besides the road and threw stones over the roofs. They had to be moved, and a small party was sent to do this. They were stoned, and a few shots were fired, resulting in two casualties. As the mob had moved off the main road behind the chawls, I went there with the remaining soldiers. We were in small party, surrounded on all sides by crowds with ample cover and plenty of loose stones. I advanced the men on the most threatening crowd and not until we were again heavily stoned was firing allowed, which resulted so far as I know in 3 more deaths among strikers and one wounded. After this the mob slowly dispersed home.

3. In this last affair I regret to say that the Huzur Deputy Collector was wounded. He was behaving admirably and was going along a line of chawls by the roadside, in each door of which many men were assembled, trying to move the men. When the firing began, he naturally wished to get behind the line, in front of which he had gone in his zeal and was doing so, but got struck with a bullet in the forearm which was fractured.

4. All being quiet, I arranged for removal of unclaimed bodies to the Municipal Dispensary, and made arrangements with the Officer Commanding troops for to-night and tomorrow. I then called up the available I. D. F. men and placed them at the disposal of the Officer Commanding and interviewed Mr. Strutton, whose men are, mercifully, stricken with fear.

5. I have wired for two more companies of troops, for this evening's experience has shown us that we were as drops in an ocean. Had it not been for the extreme steadiness of both troops and police, we should have been overwhelmed.

6. I cannot report personally what occurred opposite the old Mill where the Military Head-quarters is. No firing took place there. At the outbreak, I was unfortunately away and had left the District Superintendent of Police who is still very ill, at Head-quarters. But from what I hear, there were very large crowds at that point also, which were moved along as occasion arose. A mischievous act was committed by some one in my direction who fired off a lot of crackers, giving the sound of machine gunfire. This diverted part of the crowd in my direction.

7. I am more than sorry that I should have occasioned the death of any of Sholapur people. But no firing took place until after all other efforts had failed, and the police and troops had used every other means. I may instance that Lieutenant Cates had been hit with a stone severely, and I myself slightly, while many sepoys had been hit.

8. I have appointed Rao Saheb Deshmukh to act as Huzur Deputy Collector and Mr. Chandorkar as Chitnis pending further orders. I trust that Mr. Mahajani will at once be given that leave he wants, and will be commended for his brave conduct.

9. I am sending several copies of this letter to your care by a parcel train which leaves to-night. Kindly give General Officer Commanding Division, his copy, and forward two copies to Bombay as addressed, by first train.

Camp Bijapur, 19th February 1920.

Copy submitted to Government in the Judicial Department for information.

2. As the force at Bijapur would be seriously depleted by the despatch of such a large contingent to Sholapur, the Inspector General has ordered parties consisting of 20 constabulary each to be sent from the Dharwar and Belgaum districts, and an equivalent number of the Bijapur men to be returned to Bijapur where escort duties happen to be excessively heavy at the present time.

Copy of letter No. 469, dated the 20th February 1920, from the District Superintendent of Police, Sholapur, to the Inspector General of Police, Bombay Presidency, Poona.

Since my yesterday's report all has remained quiet and the mills re-opened today as usual. The attendance was approximately some three thousand hands including members of the Criminal Tribes Settlements. So far as enquiries in the Town go the strikers are remaining quietly at their homes and no attempt has been made to hold any meetings or in any way to disturb the peace. Last evening the telephone wire laid down by the military was cut in two places and portions of the wire removed, but so far it has not been ascertained by whom this was done and whether it was simply done for mischief or what.

2. As regards the Barsi strike the latest report received shows that all is quiet there, but the mill is closed as the strikers refuse to return on the terms offered.

APPENDIX I.

Extract from a letter from the Educational Inspector, N. D., to the Special Mahomedan Deputy Educational Inspector for Urdu Schools, N. D.

(1) It will be your duty to formulate proposals on behalf of the Mahomedans and co-ordinate them for the whole Division. These proposals will usually deal with schemes for extension of education among Mahomedans, the opening of Mahomedan Central schools, a system of scholarships, rendering service more attractive to Mahomedan teachers, alterations in curricula and bringing to notice suitable Urdu text-books.

(2) The administration of Local Board schools will remain with the Deputy Educational Inspector, but you may represent to the Educational Inspector such changes in staff, etc., as you consider necessary and you may be called upon to represent the special financial needs of Urdu boys' schools in each district before the preparation of the Annual Budget.

(3) You may correspond with Deputies in charge of Districts on matters of detail, but with regard to policy, administration and funds you correspond with the Educational Inspector. Assistant Deputies are not allowed an office and should not be corresponded with directly.

(4) You will receive from the Deputy of each District a copy of the monthly returns for Urdu schools and a copy of the Inspection Report of each Urdu school inspected.

(5) When visiting Municipal schools you should keep in touch with the Municipal authorities and local Mahomedans who are likely to help in the advance of Mahomedan education. Proposals for improvement of Municipal schools should be sent to the Educational Inspector and they will either be forwarded, if approved, to the Municipalities at once or embodied in the annual report on Municipal schools. Proposals should be made after due consideration of the financial resources of Municipal Boards.

(6) Most of your work will be connected with primary education but the possibility of extension of secondary education among Mahomedans should not be lost sight of and Secondary schools may be visited in order that enquiries may be made about the attendance of Mahomedans.

(7) A full and detailed report on Mahomedan education in the Division should be submitted annually as soon as possible after the close of the official year.

(8) For the remaining months of the current official year you had better occupy yourself in visiting the larger towns in each district which have Urdu schools and Local Board schools in the vicinity. You will also arrange to inspect some of these schools in consultation with the local Deputy Inspector and submit to this office Inspection Report in the prescribed form through the Deputy, one spare copy being supplied for his record.

You will also make yourself acquainted with the work of each of the Mahomedan Assistants and take the advice of the local Deputy as to conditions in their districts.

(9) You will inspect regularly every year at least 25 Urdu schools with the help of the Mahomedan Assistant Deputy of the circuit submitting Inspection Reports as directed above. Your remarks or reports on schools visited by you should be sent to me direct in duplicate.

(10) Advice which does not interfere with administration may be given direct to the teachers of Urdu schools, on your own initiative or in connection with the monthly returns which masters are being instructed to send direct to you.

(11) Villages without Urdu schools which have sufficient Mahomedan population may be visited by you to ascertain whether an Urdu school is really wanted and to increase the demand for such schools. Indigenous school masters may also be persuaded to qualify for registration.

(12) Deputy Educational Inspectors are being instructed to supply you with the present expenditure on Urdu boys' schools. There is usually every year some additional provision in the District Local Fund Budgets for teachers and a proportionate part will be proposed by the Deputy of the district for improving the strength and pay of the staff of Urdu teachers after consultation with you. You should arrange with the Deputy of each district at what times it will be convenient for you to send in your requirements. As regards appointments, transfers and promotions of lower paid teachers, the Deputy of each district will make them in consultation with you. Where my sanction is required, proposals will be made by the Deputy of the District after consultation with you. You may at any time send in your suggestions on these matters to the Deputy concerned.

(13) When grants are given for opening new Local Board schools the Deputies will consult you as to the number of Urdu schools that can be opened in each district. Throughout the year you should in the course of your tours take note of suitable places.

(14) An important part of your duty will be to persuade Mahomedan candidates to appear for the College Entrance examination and assist the heads of both Training Institutions in selecting them for admission.

APPENDIX L.

The Labour Commissioner in Madras who has been appointed for two years in the first instance is a senior officer of the I. C. S. of the grade of Collector whose pay according to length of service varies from Rs. 2,150 to 2,500 plus a deputation allowance of Rs. 250 p. m. His appointment was made with a view to coordinate the various measures which were being undertaken both by official and non-official agency for the amelioration of the condition of the depressed and labouring classes including the aboriginal and the criminal tribes. Generally speaking, his duties are to study the economic condition of these classes, submit to Government proposals for improving it in co-operation with philanthropic bodies working with the same object, to deal with the problems connected with their education and to take steps to provide them with house-sites and wells, to encourage co-operation, to improve their labour conditions and otherwise to raise their standard of living. The control of criminal settlements, the supervision of the wage census, the administration of those portions of the Factories Act which deal with factory labour and questions connected with the emigration of Labour fall within the purview of his functions. He also deals with all matters affecting the welfare of labour such as the organization of labour, the recognition or registration of labour unions, the settlement of labour disputes and the prevention of strikes and lock outs and this at present is perhaps the most important part of his work.

An Advisory Board of persons informed on, and interested in, labour questions has been associated with the Commissioner in order to advise him on the complex problems that arise.

Bill No. IV of 1920.

A Bill to provide for the extension of primary education in the City of Bombay.

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.*

We, the undersigned members of the Select Committee appointed to consider Bill No. IV of 1920 (A Bill to provide for the extension of primary education in the City of Bombay) beg to submit our report as follows :—

1. We have amended clause 19 (b) of the Bill to ensure that the persons co-opted shall be persons resident in the City of Bombay who are not members of the corporation.

2. The proposed repeal of section 62-B deprives the corporation of the guarantee given to them under that section. We are of opinion that the corporation should be guaranteed the same treatment as a city municipality in respect of expenditure on primary education, and for that purpose have included new section 62-B in the Bill.

3. A "child" as defined in section 2 (2) of the Bill includes a child up to the age of eleven years. We considered at length the question whether specific provision should be made in the Bill requiring the Municipal Schools' Committee to make special arrangements for children employed as half-timers. It was considered, however, that a question affecting the industries of the City might be safely left to the discretion of a committee of the governing body of that city, and we recommend no change in the Bill in this respect.

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.*

We, the undersigned, members of the Select Committee appointed to consider Bill No. V of 1920 (a Bill to amend the Bombay Town Planning Act, 1915), have the honour to report as follows:—

We have no change to recommend as regards the first three clauses of the bill. As expert opinion is at variance as regards the desirability of the changes in the original Act contemplated by the amendments embodied in clause 4 of the bill, we propose the deletion of this clause and of sub-clause (a) of clause 5 as consequential thereto.

BILL No. VI OF 1920.

(A Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to pleaders in the presidency of Bombay.)

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.†

We, the undersigned members of the Select Committee appointed to consider Bill No. VI of 1920 (a Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to pleaders in the presidency of Bombay), have the honour to report as follows.

We have had the advantage of certain proposals to amend the Bill which were put before us by the Honourable the Advocate General in the form of draft amendments. The general principles on which the proposed amendments proceed are as follows:—

(a) that the position of pleaders should be assimilated to that of attorneys of the High Court as regards a lien in certain respects for and the recovery of taxed costs;

(b) that disciplinary jurisdiction in respect of pleaders should vest in the High Court;

(c) that the form of sanad for High Court Pleaders and District Pleaders should be, as far as possible, the same;

(d) that pleaders should be allowed to appear before public officers in judicial and quasi-judicial matters.

* The Bill as amended by the Select Committee was published in the Bombay Government Gazette, Part V, dated 8th September 1920.

† The Bill as amended by the Select Committee was published in the Bombay Government Gazette, Part V, dated 11th September 1920.

These principles were approved by the Committee and the amendments submitted have with slight alteration been embodied in the Bill. The notes on clauses appended will further explain the grounds on which the amendments made in the Bill are based.

Clause 2.—The definition of pleader has been amended to indicate what at present has to be gleaned from several sources, viz., that attorneys of the High Court are entitled to practise outside Bombay in the same manner as High Court Vakils.

Clause 5.—The provisions restricting a pleader to a particular district must be retained to render effective the power given to the District Judge under section 8 (a) of providing for courts in which the number of practising pleaders may be insufficient. A sub-clause, however, has been added to allow of a district pleader appearing in a district court for which his sanad is not available. This should be sufficient to provide for exceptional cases.

Clause 6.—The provision that a person in Government service should not be admitted as a pleader is in accordance with present practice.

Clauses 7 and 8.—We consider it desirable that pleaders should be allowed to appear in certain proceedings before public officers exercising judicial and quasi-judicial functions. It is not however desirable that they should appear in the less important matters which are dealt with by such officers and we have adopted the course of specifying the more important proceedings in which they should appear and of empowering the local Government to add to the list by notification. We have omitted proceedings under the Land Acquisition Act and the Registration Act. These being Government of India Acts we think the more correct procedure will be for Government to issue a circular giving pleaders a right of appearance in certain proceedings thereunder, i.e., under section 11 of the former act and all appeals under the latter act.

Clause 10 (4).—This has been redrafted on the lines of rule 60 of the Appellate Side Rules of the High Court.

Clause 12.—As in certain cases a pleader may be retained with no intention of instructing him in the case, it is desirable that in such cases the pleader should be allowed, with the permission of the court, to appear on behalf of the opposite party.

Clause 13.—The provision requiring a receipt in writing for a document is not in practice complied with: and as it would in many cases involve a considerable increase in the pleader's work, we are of opinion that the provision should be restricted to cases where a demand for a receipt is made. At the same time we think the giving of receipts for important documents should be encouraged so far as possible. We have accordingly confined a pleader's lien over documents to those for which he has given a receipt.

Clause 18.—As costs are awarded as an indemnity, we are of opinion that the amount of pleader's fee awarded should not be in excess of the amount actually paid or agreed to be paid by the party to whom costs are awarded. So far as the pleader for the successful party is concerned, he should not receive more than what he has agreed to receive.

Clause 19 (1).—The omission of the proviso in clause 19 (1) is consequential on the amendment in section 18.

Clause 19 (2).—In the absence of any agreement, the full amount of pleader's fee allowed on taxation should be recoverable by the pleader.

Clause 21.—The clause has been redrafted without making any change in the substance.

Clause 25.—The amendment does not introduce any change of substance, but we have considered it advisable to adopt the wording of the sanad, Schedule II (Forms A and B).

Clause 26.—The power of fine and reprimand vested in certain courts under this clause is one that has not been availed of to any extent in the past.

We consider that it would be more suitable that the authority which grants the sanad should be the authority to deal with misconduct. The clause has been amended accordingly.

Clauses 29 and 30.—We are of opinion that a summary remedy should be given to the pleader for recovery of his taxed costs and further that he should have a lien in certain cases.

Clause 31 (1) (C).—We have amended the clause as it may be found convenient to have other than district bar associations.

Clause 31 (1) (G).—Provides for the allowance and taxation of pleader and client costs in both litigious and non-litigious business. It will be for the High Court to decide whether and when they should frame such rules.

Schedule II, Form A.—We have omitted the note appended to the form as it is not in our opinion necessary to specify any particular causes for which a pleader may be removed or suspended from practice.

Schedule II, Form B.—This form has been amended to assimilate it to the form of sanad for High Court Vakils.

(Minute of dissent by the Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desaibhai Desai, LL.B.)

While sincerely appreciating the concessions so fairly made in the Select Committee by the Honourable the Member in charge and the Honourable the Advocate General as regards many of the important objections to the provisions of the bill as originally drafted, I regret to have to record my dissent about the provisions regarding the retaining fee (clause 11).

2. A pleader combines in him the functions of an attorney as well as an advocate. An attorney is under no obligation to insist on a retaining fee being paid to him. There is no reason why for work as an attorney or before the case has gone to court a pleader should be required to demand a retaining fee and not to " perform any services " until it is paid.

3. The existing provision about retaining fee in the second clause to section 50 of Regulation II of 1827 only refers to the engagement of a pleader to act on behalf of a party in a proceeding in court. It lays down that if the retaining fee be not paid the pleader shall abstain from all proceeding until it is delivered. Clause 11, sub-clause (2) of the bill, however, lays down that a pleader shall not perform any services for such party until the fee has been paid. This provision imposes a limitation as regards a pleader's work as an attorney out of court, and goes far beyond the existing law. No reasons are forthcoming for such a far reaching provision. In the matter of conveyancing, drafting documents, notices, etc., a pleader acts as an attorney, and no retaining fee ought to be necessary for such work. Under Act I of 1846, section 9, pleaders are entitled to give opinions on payment of fees settled by private agreement, and retaining fee is not obligatory of the work.

4. Again, the obligation sought to be imposed on a pleader is unilateral. The acceptance of retaining fee binds the pleader to appear, plead or act for a party until relieved by court; but the party is not bound to further employ him and to avail himself of his professional services by paying him fees under clause 17. Further, a pleader's liberty to perform any services gratis for social or charitable considerations is also taken away. In actual working the provision would be either evaded or would only serve to embarass a conscientious man.

5. At any rate, therefore, clause 11 requires to be so amended as to impose no obligation on a pleader to levy a retaining fee for his work as an attorney or for services rendered gratis.

6. I would, therefore, add the words "to act in a proceeding in court" after the word "pleader" in sub-clause (1) of clause 11, and the words "unless the services are performed gratis" at the end of sub-clause (2).

(Signed) HARILAL DESAIBHAI DESAI.

Bill No. VII of 1920.

A Bill further to amend the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898, and the City of Bombay Municipal Act, 1888.

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.*

We, the undersigned members of the Select Committee appointed to consider Bill No. VII of 1920 (a Bill further to amend the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898, and the City of Bombay Municipal Act, 1888), have the honour to report as follows:—

1. We are of opinion that the Bill should contain a statement of the purposes on which the duty will be spent, the area to which these purposes will be limited and the proportion in which the proceeds of the tax shall be allotted to the City of Bombay and the Bombay Suburban Revenue Division. The preamble to the Bill has been amended, and sub-section 195B (2) added accordingly.

2. As it is the intention of Government that the buildings erected within the City of Bombay shall be handed over to the Corporation as soon as the scheme of building operations has been carried to completion and rents are stabilised, we are of opinion that provision should be made in the Bill for this purpose. New clause 195C. provides for separate accounts being kept of expenditure on providing tenements within the municipal limits; for giving the Corporation in the year 1936 the option of taking over such tenements, subject to all liabilities in respect thereof; for the adjustment of such liabilities by arbitration; and where the income in the year 1936 from such tenements is less than the expenditure to be incurred on account thereof, for the deduction by the Corporation from payments to be made under section 195B of the amount of such loss.

3. We discussed the question of having an executive or advisory board to supervise or aid in the execution of the proposed works and decided that the question was outside the scope of the Bill. The appointment of an executive board would require further legislation; but it was decided by the casting vote of the Chairman, to recommend that two advisory boards should be constituted, one for the City of Bombay and one for the Bombay Suburban Revenue Division. The advisory board for the City of Bombay should consist of two representatives elected by the Corporation, one by the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, one by the Indian Merchants' Chamber and Bureau, one by the Millowners' Association and one by the Improvement Trust. The board for the Bombay Suburban Revenue Division should be representative of local authorities and important interests in the sub-division.

BILL No. VIII of 1920.

(A Bill further to amend the Bombay Town Planning Act, 1915.)

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.*

We, the undersigned, members of the Select Committee appointed to consider Bill No. VIII of 1920 (a Bill further to amend the Bombay Town Planning Act, 1915), have the honour to report as follows:—

We consider it desirable that, before a local authority is made liable for the execution of a town planning scheme in the framing of which it had no say, the consent of such local authority to the proposed transfer should be obtained. We have, therefore, amended clause 2 of the bill accordingly.

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.†

We, the undersigned, members of the Select Committee appointed to consider Bill No. X of 1920 (a Bill further to amend the Bombay District Police Act, 1890), have the honour to report as follows.

Bill No. XI of 1920.

A Bill further to amend the Bombay Rent (War Restrictions) Act, 1918, and to amend the Bombay Rent (War Restrictions, No. 2) Act, 1918.

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE. *

We, the undersigned, members of the Select Committee appointed to consider Bill No. XI of 1920 (a Bill further to amend the Bombay Rent (War Restrictions) Act, 1918, and to amend the Bombay Rent (War Restrictions, No. 2) Act, 1918, have the honour to report as follows :—

As there is sometimes a considerable interval between the date on which an order for recovery of possession is passed and the date when possession is obtained, we are of opinion that the landlord should be allowed six months from the latter date before an application from the original tenant under proposed section 10A can be made. It is desirable also to fix a time limit within which an application by the original tenant should be made, and to provide that if the premises were reasonably and bonâ fide required for the purposes specified and are not used for such purposes through no fault of the landlord, compensation should not be awarded. Clause 2 of the Bill has been amended accordingly.

2. We are of opinion that in suits for rent, compensation for use and occupation or ejectment, a distinction should be made between houses of which the monthly rental is over thirty rupees and those of which the monthly rental is under thirty rupees. In the former case it is highly improbable that the premises are small premises and the landlord should not be required to obtain an order determining that the premises are not small premises before he can bring a suit of the nature specified.

Bill No. XII of 1920.

(A Bill further to amend the Bombay Port Trust Act, 1879.)

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.*

We, the undersigned members of the Select Committee appointed to consider Bill No. XII of 1920 (A Bill further to amend the Bombay Port Trust Act, 1879), have the honour to report as follows.

We discussed at length the question of hotel accommodation and while fully admitting the serious shortage of such accommodation in Bombay we are of the opinion that it is proper only for a Port Trust to provide temporary accommodation for passengers using the port on arriving or departing by sea. We have therefore provided for the construction of waiting and refreshment rooms and we have defined "waiting rooms" as including temporary sleeping accommodation.

We have also had it brought prominently to our notice that owing to defective drafting in an amendment of the original section 68 (7) of the Act a doubt exists as to the sufficiency of the powers conferred upon the Port Trust for the construction of other necessary buildings.

We have by re-drafting clause 3 of the Bill removed this doubt.

Poona, 27th July 1920.

Sir,

I have the honour to forward for your consideration my humble suggestions regarding alterations and amendments of the Bombay Pleaders Bill (No. VI of 1920) and to request you to be pleased to support them, wherever it is necessary, to have them embodied in the Bill, and to submit the same to His Excellency the Governor and President of the Council.

I have the honor to be,
Sir,
Your most obedient servant,
R. S. SULE.

* The Bill as amended by the Select Committee was published in the Bombay Government Gazette, Part V, dated 1st September 1920.

Alterations and amendments suggested to the Bill No. VI of 1920.

Alterations or amendments.	Objects and reasons therefor.
Delete clause 3 altogether	It is proposed to abolish the distinction between the District Court Pleaders and the High Court Vakils as the examination for the District Court Pleaders was stopped 8 years ago. The examinations that qualify a candidate for a pleader's profession are LL.M. and LL.B. of the Bombay University and the Pleaders Examination conducted by the High Court. Pleaders' profession is considered and judicially pronounced to be of a very honourable and high character and in order to keep the prestige, a high and uniform license fee should be levied and there should be one class of pleaders. There will be some apparent difficulty as to what to do of the existing District Pleaders. Whether the class is to be abolished altogether or whether all of them are to be compelled to pay Rs. 500 for the new Sanad or whether they are to be retained as they are, till the entire class vanishes by death or otherwise, are the principal questions to be considered. At the present times in every sphere of life an evolution is either deserved or desired. There has been no allurement or encouragement held in view of this class for betterment as it is held before the High Court Vakil's class to become advocates after fulfilling certain terms. All of them except a very small number have been practising over 10 years and it is but legitimate to give them the option of coming to the level of the High Court Vakils. So far as my little experience goes I notice that District Pleaders are at the top in Poona, Thana and Kolaba Districts though High Court Vakils have crowded for competition. A suitable provision is suggested for the requirements of those who do not choose to take advantage of the new sphere but who wish to stand where they are at present.
Substitute for clause 3 clause 6 with the following alterations and additions :—	As the distinction is abolished the provisions for admission should precede the provisions for Sanads.
Substitute — "Admission of Pleaders" for the marginal note.
Substitute— "of good moral" for "unexceptional" in sub-clause (1).	As the class of pleaders has been all along loyal and as every investigation is already made into the character of the candidate for the pleaders' examination a more stringent word like "unexceptional" should not be used but the usual term "good moral character" be used.
Add a new sub-clause— (3) Pleaders who are practising at the commencement of this Act shall be deemed to have been admitted under this Act.	As all the pleaders are to be brought on the same level, sub-clause (3) is added.

Alterations or amendments.	Objects and reasons therefor.
Clause 4.
Delete last portion of sub-clause (1) from words "or form C, etc. :—" Delete sub-clause (2).
Clause 5.
Delete altogether and substitute— (1) A pleader who has completed his standing of 10 years shall be called a "Senior Pleader". (2) A pleader who has not completed his standing as above or a pleader who shall not have converted his District Court Pleader's Sanad into the form A in II Schedule according to the provisions next hereinafter mentioned shall be called a "junior pleader".	As no longer required.
Clause 6.
Delete it altogether and substitute the following:— 6. The High Court shall issue a Sanad in the form A in Schedule II to a pleader holding a District Court Pleader's Sanad at the date of the passing of this Act on his application and payment of the prescribed fee made within one year from the date of the passing of this Act.	An option has been given to the existing District Court Pleaders to have their Sanads converted into the Standard form. They have got thus the choice of enlarging their sphere and importance which seems due to them after a length of practice. By this enabling provision a very few pleaders who have not completed their 10 years' standing will get this advantage a little earlier than they are due but nobody has got any grievance against them and they are to get this position not without paying Rs. 500.
Clause 7.
Amend the clause so as to stand thus:— 7. A senior pleader or a junior pleader holding a Sanad in the form A and who has filed a joint Vakalatnama with a senior pleader shall be entitled to practise— (a) Stet. (b) Do. (c) Do. (d) Delete all the words after "person" and add after "person" "or officer of Government or Councillor or Minister."	This enabling provision is made to enlarge the sphere and to remove all obstacles in the way of litigants to have their cause represented, not only before the courts but before any officer of any Department before whom some enquiry regarding the party is, or is required, to be made.
Clause 8.
Substitute the following:— 8. A junior pleader holding a Sanad in A form shall be entitled to practise in or before the Courts, tribunals, persons or officers mentioned in the last preceding section except— (a) in the High Court, (b) in the Court of the Chief Presidency Magistrate, Bombay, (c) before the Tribunal of Appeal constituted under the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898, (d) before the Commissioner of a Division, (e) before a Minister, Councillor or the Chief Secretary to Government.	Some time ago there was a proposal that a pleader fresh after his scholastic course and quite raw at practice should not at once be allowed to practise in the High Court but should be asked to work for some period with a senior. In order to develop the idea and to bring it into practice the juniors or raw pleaders are restricted from practising before the higher authorities without the aid of the seniors.

Alterations or amendments.	Objects and reasons thereof.
Add a new clause—	In order to remove the doubt whether a District Court Pleader can practise in any Criminal Court outside the district, express provision is made. The practice hitherto has been to allow any District Court Pleader in any Criminal Court. The practice will thus be recognised.
8-A. A junior pleader not holding a Sanad in A form shall be entitled to practise— (a) in such Civil Courts as are assigned to him by his Sanad, (b) in any Criminal Court, (c) in or before any Court, tribunal, person or officer except those mentioned in the exception to section 8.
Clause 10.
Add a new clause (e) at the end of sub-clause (2)— (e) a pleader appearing for a minor or for a person of unsound mind in a criminal or quasi-criminal proceeding when instructed by any of the persons mentioned in section 16.
In sub-clause (4) delete the words "with the permission of the Court".
Add a new clause— 10-A. (1) No Vakalatnama need be stamped when presented to any Criminal Court; or to any tribunal, person or officer, an application to whom made by a party requires no stamp. (2) In proceedings in which application requires only a stamp duty of one anna, the Vakalatnama in such proceedings shall be stamped with one anna stamp only.
Clause 11.
Delete the clause and substitute the following:— 11. (1) A party wishing to retain a pleader for a specified case or a cause shall pay him a retaining fee of an amount not less than Rs. 15 for the current year. (2) The pleader retained shall be entitled to an equal amount of retaining fee as paid under sub-clause (1) for each subsequent year if the case or cause continues.	The retaining fee of annas 8 as proposed in the original Bill is too trifling and it is ridiculous that a pleader should be held in bondage for an eight-anna piece for years.
Clause 13.
Amend it so as to stand thus— 13. A client may obtain a receipt for such papers as the client may desire to leave with the pleader for his perusal or for filing them in the case; and the pleader shall be absolved from any liability when he shall have filed the papers in the case or shall have returned them to the person producing and delivering the receipt.	If the clause as originally drafted be retained then it will compel a pleader to pass a receipt for a document of any kind such as copy of plaint, summons or notice handed over for perusal and most of the pleader's time will be spent in giving and obtaining receipts.
Clause 14.
Substitute the following for sub-clause:— 14. (1) A pleader shall be bound to work according to the terms of his engagement whether express or implied and to use his professional skill and intelligence for the benefit of his client.	When a pleader who is practising generally in the High Court is engaged by a party in a case he is generally engaged by the day and is supposed to attend on such days as the party pays for. The suggested clause will cover all cases.

Alterations or amendments.	Objects and reasons therefor.
	Clause 16.
Delete the following words in sub-clause (a) :— "authorized by such party"	The proposed change will cover up a case where a person is arrested and kept in lock-up abruptly while he is away from his relations and friends who are not authorized to instruct a pleader.
	Clause 17.
Add at the end— "and such agreement to be embodied in Vakalatnama." Provided that the amount settled shall not be less than that mentioned in Schedule III or IV.	This will provide against the base practice inducing clients by accepting their work for lower amount than the standard prescribed fee.
After clause 19 add a new clause as follows :— 17-A. Except when otherwise agreed between the pleader and his client, a pleader, in addition to the fee prescribed in the III Schedule shall be entitled to the fees prescribed in the IV Schedule and marked against the respective items of work done by the pleader either himself or through his clerk, except to the fees marked for attendance in Court.	It is commented upon by the circuit High Court Judges that pleaders in the moffusil do not follow the various enabling provisions embodied in the Code of Civil Procedure such as those mentioned in Orders XI, XII, etc. It is not that the pleaders in the moffusil are incompetent to follow them nor is it that clients don't like it but it is that pleaders are not sufficiently paid for it. There has been no provision for payment to pleaders for drawing and settling plaints and written statements and also for engrossing and fair copying them. Strange it is that a petition-writer attached to the Court who merely copies out the draft plaint or written statement is entitled to a certain amount for his writing labour while a pleader who has to bother his brain over drawing and settling pleadings has got no payment in proportion to his work. The fees mentioned in Schedule III are fees for the work in Court before the Judge. A pleader in the moffusil is both an attorney and a counsel, i. e., he has to perform the duties of both but his remuneration is too meagre. In order to give a proper mould to the practice and to encourage pleaders to follow it Schedule IV is proposed which enables the pleader to claim pro rata for his intellectual labour. So also there is a good deal of writing to be done by the pleader's clerk such as copies of plaint to be given for defendants, copies of written-statements, applications, affidavits and many other documents of similar descriptions but there has been no provision for recovering the costs thereof. Schedule IV also covers all these. Many a time it so happens that on the very day fixed for a case the client sends a Vakalatnama and a letter of instructions through Post saying "your fees will be paid" but as to the amount the letter is silent. In such cases the pleader ought to have some standard measure by which his labour is to be compensated. The lump sum prescribed in Schedule III is for the work done in a civil court by attending before a Judge. The attendance charges therefore are excluded in cases coming under the proposed clause. Where, for instance in a criminal case, the Schedule III is not applicable, the

Alterations or amendments.	Objects and reasons therefor.
	Schedule IV will be serviceable. This schedule will also act as a check on the pleaders demanding fancy fees, which even the Advocates of the High Court are not entitled to under the table of fees, prescribed for them by the rules prescribed for the Original Side of the High Court.
Clause 18.
Add at the end of sub-clause (1)— "and Schedule IV."
Clause 19.
Delete 2nd paragraph.
Add the following clause after clause 19 :— 19-A. All fees agreed or payable according to the provisions of this Act become due on the acceptance of the engagement by a pleader.
Clause 20.
Delete the words :— "before the first hearing" in sub-clause (1).
Clause 26.
Delete the last portion of sub-clause (1) from— "hold an enquiry" and substitute it by— "may refer the case for enquiry and trial to the nearest Court"
Add the following new clause after clause 26:— 26-A. Provided that enquiries under sections 25 or 26 shall be made in or before a Court which is neither inferior nor subordinate to the Court accusing the pleader and that the person accusing shall offer for cross-examination.	This is to provide for the full and unbiassed inquiry by an independent tribunal. The right of cross-examination is based upon the fundamental principles of justice and this will also tend to check the whims of the judiciaries who are under no restraint.
Clause 27.
After sub-clause (1) a new sub-clause (1*a*) be inserted above sub-clause (2) :— (1*a*) In any such case the High Court shall, if demanded by the pleader, give him opportunity to cross-examine his accuser and also to lead evidence in his defence.
After the clause 28 insert the following new clause :— 28-A. No suit shall be instituted against the heir or a legal representative of a pleader for refund of any fees; and no suit for such refund shall be continued against the heir or representative of a deceased pleader in which the deceased pleader shall not have filed his written statement.	This provision is made to prevent the harrasment of the orphans or widow or such other heirs of the deceased pleader who dies all of a sudden even before making any defence to the suit and the heirs are left either in absolute dark or to the mercy of the pleader's clerk. This provision is based upon the equity that greater danger is averted at the risk of a smaller one.
Clause 29.
Delete the whole clause and substitute the following:— 29. A pleader shall be entitled on an application to the Court having jurisdic-	The procedure of a suit to recover the ordinary dues of a pleader has been considered too cumbrous and a lighter and a speedy remedy such as followed by the tion, to an order awarding the amount of his fees payable under the provisions of this Act, against his client. The order made under this section shall have the force of a decree of such court. Procedure prescribed for the Civil miscellaneous applications shall be followed mutatis mutandis in inquiries under this section.	Taxing Master in the High Court was much longed for to have inforced the every day agreement as a matter of routine.

After clause 29 add the following clause:— 29-A. A pleader is entitled to have deducted his fees from the amount which comes to the pleader's hand and which is payable to his client and the pleader shall have a general lien described in section 171 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, on any paper coming into the pleader's possession in his professional capacity as a pleader.

To

THE SECRETARY, LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL,
Bombay.

Bijapur, 29th July 1920.

Sir,

I have the honour to forward the accompanying memorandum containing the amendments adopted by the Bar Association, Bijapur, in its meeting of the 25th instant, in the Bill No. VI of 1920 to consolidate and amend the Law relating to Pleaders in the Presidency of Bombay, and request you to place the same before the Council when the said Bill comes up for consideration.

I have the honour to be,
Sir,
Your most obedient servant,
J. M. DESHPANDE,
Honorary Secretary, Bar Association,
Bijapur.

Amendments suggested by the Bar Association, Bijapur, in Bill No. VI of 1920 to consolidate and amend the Law relating to Pleaders in the Presidency of Bombay.

Clause 4—Sub-clause (1)—

In form B, the words "or suspended" should be inserted between "removed" and "office". Subsequent words "During your good behaviour, etc., ... in force" be deleted and the words "Except for reasonable cause" be substituted.

N. B. to form A should be substituted for N. B. to form B.

In sub-clause (2) insert the words "or Districts" between "District" and "For."

Clause 5—Sub-clause (1) to be deleted.

Sub-clause (2)—Delete the word "District" between "one" and "the" and in its place substitute the words "or more Districts."

Clause 6.—In sub-clause (1) substitute the words "good moral" for "unexceptionable."

Clause 7.—In sub-clause (a) add the words "both on its original and appellate side" after the word "court."

Clause 8.—Insert the words "or Districts" between "District" and "in."

In sub-clause (a) insert the words "Civil Revenue or" between "any" and "criminal."

Sub-clause (b) to be deleted.

Put sub-clause (c) for sub-clause (b) and add sub-clause (c) as follows:—

"And in all other proceedings under any Act in which parties have a right to appear or in which evidence is recorded."

Clause 10.—In sub-clause (1) delete the word "or" between "Civil" and "Criminal" and insert the words "or Revenue" between "criminal" and "case."

In form C of wakalatnama, the following changes should be made:—

In the brackets, add the words "or other proceeding" after the word "criminal."

In sub-clause insert the words "or section 144" between "152" and "of."

In sub-clause (4) delete the word "with the permission of the court."

Clause 11.—Delete sub-clause 2.

Sub-clause (3) should be numbered as (2) and in it, delete the words "a receipt" and substitute "an acknowledgment."

Clause 12.—In sub-clause (b) insert the word "wilfully" before "omit."

Clause 13.—In sub-clause (a) insert the words "on demand" between "receipt" and "in."

Clause 14.—In sub-clause (2) delete "necessary" and substitute "reasonable."

Clause 18.—Sub-clause (1): In rules in schedule III in (c) (III) substitute the words "Rs. 5,000 at 5 per cent." for the words "Rs. 2,000 at 5 per cent."

Delete the next line.

Substitute the words "3 per cent." for "2 per cent."

Substitute "2 per cent." for "1 per cent."

Substitute "1 per cent." for "½ per cent."

In V (e) delete the word "of" and insert the words "not less than" in its place, and add at the end of that line the words "as the court thinks reasonable."

In VI (b), add the words "or in the court of a Mamlatdar under the Mamlatdar's Court Act, 1906" after "Judge."

In (c), delete all the words after "1840."

Clause 24.—Delete the words "a defect in his character" and substitute "moral turpitude."

Clause 25.—Insert the word "wilful" between "of" and "neglect" and delete the words "of a" before "violation."

Add the words "which renders him unfit to hold office as pleader" after "otherwise" in the last line.

Clause 26.—In sub-clause (1), insert "wilful" between "of" and "neglect" and delete the words "of a" before "violation."

Delete the words in the brackets.

Delete the whole of sub-clause (2) and the proviso and substitute the following:—

"Where the court holds such matter to be proved, it may, if it deems fit, report the matter to the High Court."

"Provided that when the Court holds such enquiry, the pleader against whom any allegation is made may appear in person or by pleader or counsel."

Add sub-clause (3) as follows:—

"In any such case, the court may make such orders as to costs as it thinks fit."

Clause 29.—Delete the words "and not otherwise" and substitute the words "or by him."

Clause 30.—In sub-clause (j) delete the semicolon at the end and add the words "or sub-section 3 of section 26."

BILL No. VI OF 1920.

A Bill to consolidate and amend the Law relating to Pleaders in the Presidency of Bombay.

Whereas it is expedient to consolidate and amend the Law relating to Pleaders in the Presidency of Bombay, and whereas the previous sanction of the Governor General required by section 79, sub-section (2), of the Government of India Act, 1915, has been obtained for the passing of this Act; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

The Text of the Bill. | The amendments proposed.

Section I.

(1) This Act may be called the Bombay Pleader's Act 192 .

(2) It extends to the whole of the Presidency of Bombay except Sind and Aden.

Section II.

In this Act unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context —

1. "The High Court" means the High Court of Judicature at Bombay.

2. "Court subordinate to the High Court" means any court, tribunal or person whose decree, order, decision or award is or may hereafter be, subject to the appellate or revisional jurisdiction of the High Court.

3. "Pleader" means a pleader admitted under this or any previous Act, and includes an attorney of the High Court in so far as, and in respect of the courts in which, such attorney is entitled to practise in accordance with any enactment for the time being in force or any rule made by the High Court in this behalf.

4. "District" means the local limit of the jurisdiction of a principal civil court of original jurisdiction other than the High Court.

5. "The Letters Patent" means the Letters Patent of the High Court of Judicature for the Presidency of Bombay, dated the 28th of December 1865.

6. "Prescribed" means prescribed by rules made under this Act.

Section III.

Class of Pleaders. Pleaders admitted by the High Court under this Act shall be of two classes, viz., Vakils of the High Court and District Pleaders.

Section IV.

Sanads. 1. The High Court shall issue to every pleader on his admission a Sanad in form A or form B in schedule II as the case may be or in such other form as the High Court may prescribe.

2. In the case of a Sanad of a District Pleader, the name of the district for which the Sanad is available shall be specified therein.

The Text of the Bill.	The amendments proposed.
Section V.
1. No District Pleader shall hold a Sanad in respect of more than one district at the same time. (Extent and Transfer of Sanads.)
2. On the application of a District Pleader holding a Sanad which is available for any one district the High Court may, from time to time by endorsement on such Sanads, render the same available for any other districts.
Section VI.
1. Any person who is duly qualified and is of unexceptionable character shall be entitled to be admitted as a pleader. (Conditions of Admission.)	1. Any person who is duly qualified and is of good moral character shall be entitled to be admitted as a pleader.
2. The number of pleaders shall not be limited.	2. The number of pleaders shall not be limited.
Section VII.
Subject to the provision of any law for the time being in force and, with respect to the right of Vakils of the High Court to practise in the High Court subject to any rules for the time being in force under section 10 of the Letters Patent a Vakil of the High Court shall be entitled to practise — (Where Vakils of High Court are entitled to practise.)
(a) In the High Court.	(a) In the High Court both on its original and appellate side.
(b) In any court subordinate to the High Court.
(c) Before the tribunal of appeal constituted under the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898; and
(d) In or before any other court or person in or before which or whom Vakils of the High Court are or may hereafter be entitled by law to practise.	(e) In all Revenue Courts and judicial proceedings before any officer.
Section VIII.
Subject to the provisions of any law for the time being in force, a District Pleader shall, within the district in respect of which he holds a Sanad, be entitled to practise — (Where District Pleaders are entitled to practise.)
(a) In any criminal court.
(b) In such Civil Court or Courts as the District Judge may assign to him; and
(c) In or before any other court, tribunal or person before which or whom District Pleaders are or may hereafter be entitled by law to practise.	(d) In all Revenue Courts and judicial proceedings before any officer in such district.

The Text of the Bill.	The amendments proposed.
Section IX.
No person shall appear, plead or act for any party in any civil suit, appeal or proceeding unless he is a pleader as defined in this act and is entitled and duly empowered to appear, plead and act for such party in such suits, appeal or proceedings; provided that nothing in this section shall apply (a) to any party appearing, pleading or acting on his own behalf, or appearing or acting by his recognised agent or (b) to any advocate of the High Court.
Appearance in Civil Courts by unauthorised person forbidden.
Section X.
1. Except as otherwise in this section no pleader shall appear, plead or act as a party in any civil or criminal case until he has obtained from such party and filed in court a Vakalatnama in form C in schedule 2 or in such other form as the High Court may prescribe.
Cases in which Vakalatnama is required.
2. It shall not be necessary for the following persons to obtain a Vakalatnama for the purpose of appearing, pleading and acting in the capacity respectively mentioned hereunder:—
(a) A pleader appointed by a court to defend a person accused of a criminal offence, who has not sufficient means to enable him to employ a pleader.
(b) A pleader appointed by a court as amicus curiæ.
(c) A Government pleader.
(d) A public prosecutor, or a person permitted or empowered under section 495 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, to conduct a prosecution.
3. Where a pleader has filed a Vakalatnama at the original hearing of a case it shall not be necessary for him to obtain a fresh Vakalatnama for the purpose of an application for review of judgment or of an application under section 152 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, or under Order XLV in the first schedule to the said Code or for the purpose of an appeal under the Letters Patent.
4. Where a pleader has filed a Vakalatnama in a case he may with the permission of the court transfer his brief to another pleader and it shall not be necessary for such other pleader to obtain a Vakalatnama.	4. Where a pleader has filed a Vakalatnama in a case he may transfer his brief to another pleader, and it shall not be necessary for such other pleader to obtain a Vakalatnama (vide High Court Manual of Civil Circulars, Chapter XVIII, Rule 9, page 258).
Section XI.
1. A party engaging a pleader shall pay him a retaining fee of an amount not less than 8 annas.	Such retaining fee, not less than eight annas, as may be agreed upon between the party and his pleader.
Retaining fee.

The Text of the Bill.	The amendments proposed.
Section XI—continued.
2. Where a party fails so to do, the pleader shall demand such fee and shall not perform any services for such party until the fee has been paid.
3. Every pleader receiving such fee shall give a recepit in writing for the same specifying the date of receipt if demanded.	shall, if demanded,
Section XII.
Pleader not to act for party adverse to his client, and not to refuse to act for his client. No pleader after accepting a retaining fee shall, (a) appear, plead or act or agree so to do on behalf of any other party whose interest in the case is adverse to that of his client, or
(b) without the permission of the court refuse or omit to appear, plead or act for his client	unless otherwise agreed upon between the pleader and his client as per section 17.
Section XIII.
Receipt to be given for documents. Every pleader receiving a document of any kind from his client shall —	Every pleader receiving a document of any kind from his client shall whenever demanded—
(a) give a receipt in writing for such document at the time when he receives it, and	(a) give a receipt in writing for such document at the time when he receives it, and
(b) if his client requires the receipt of such document and gives a receipt in writing for it return it to his client.	(b) if his client requires the receipt of such document and gives a receipt in writing for it return it to his client.
Section XIV.
Pleaders bound to attend on day fixed for case except in certain cases. A pleader shall be bound to attend in court on any day which, by notice duly given or in accordance with the practice of the court is fixed for the hearing of a case in which he is employed.
2. Where a pleader employed in any such case is, from indisposition or any other necessary cause, unable to attend on any such day, or at the time when the case is called on, he shall notify the same to the court and thereupon the case shall be stayed for such time as the court may deem reasonable.
Provided that in cases in which a party is represented by more than one pleader and one of such pleaders is present, the court may proceed with the case.
3. In any case where a pleader ceases, temporarily or permanently, to act for his client because he has accepted an official appointment, or has been permitted to withdraw from the case, or has been suspended or dismissed or has died or for any other reason, the case shall be stayed for such time as the court may deem reasonable.

The Text of the Bill.	The amendments proposed.
Section XV.
Pleaders not to give or take commission. No pleader shall tender, give, retain or consent to retain any gratification for procuring or having procured the employment of himself or of any other pleader in any legal business.
Section XVI.
Pleaders not to take instructions except from client or authorized agent. No pleader shall (a) take instructions in any case except from the party on whose behalf he is retained, or from some person who is, within the meaning of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, the recognised agent of such party or from a servant, relative or friend authorised by such party to give such instructions or (b) accept any employment in any legal business through a person who has been proclaimed as a tout.
Section XVII.
Fee may be settled by private agreement. Any party employing a pleader may settle with him by private agreement the terms of his engagement and the fee to be paid to him for his professional services.
Section XVIII.
Computation of fixed fee. 1. Where costs are awarded to a party in any suit, appeal, application, reference or proceeding, the amount of the pleader's fee to be taxed in the bill of costs as recoverable by such party, if represented by a pleader, from his adversary, shall be computed in accordance with the rules in schedule III. 2. Nothing contained in such section (1) of this section or in section 20 shall apply to fees payable to pleaders in the Court of Small Causes of Bombay.
Section XIX.
Amount payable by client to pleader. 1. Each pleader employed by any party shall be entitled to receive from him the fee, if any, settled under section 17. Provided that where costs are awarded to such party and the pleader's fee taxed is greater in amount than the fee settled in section 17, the pleader shall be entitled to the excess when recovered. 2. Where no fee has been settled under section 17, the pleader shall be entitled to receive from his client a fee computed in accordance with the rules in schedule III. 3. The fee which a pleader is entitled to receive from his client under sub-section 2 and except when otherwise agreed between the pleader and the client the fee which a pleader is entitled to receive under sub-section (1) is payable in respect of the pleader's services until the final decree or order in the suit, appeal, application, reference or proceeding is passed.	Section 20 to be added after section 19. Unless the Court otherwise directs a party to any suit engaging a pleader is entitled to recover from his adversary one set of pleader's fees.

Section XXI.
1. Where there are more plaintiffs—appellants or applicants than one having the same cause of action they shall not be entitled to recover more than one set of pleader's fees. Cases where there are more Plaintiffs and where there are more Defendants than one. 2. Where there are more Defendants, Respondents or Opponents than one, and where such Defendants, Respondents or Opponents have been represented by different pleaders, the Court, if it is of opinion that their grounds of defence are substantially distinct, may in its discretion award more than one set of pleader's fees.	This section to follow the section suggested to be added as section 20 above.
Section XX.
1. Where a party has, before the first hearing of a case, engaged more than one pleader, the fees of two pleaders may be taxed in the bill of costs in the following cases :— When fees of two pleaders may be sanctioned. (a) in any original suit, of which the amount or value of the subject-matter exceeds Rs. 5,000 in any Court subordinate to the High Court. (b) in any contested proceeding under the Succession Act, 1865, the Probate and Administration Act, 1881, or the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, of which the amount or value of the subject-matter exceeds Rs. 5,000 in any Court subordinate to the High Court. (c) in any appeal to the High Court from a decree deciding on the merits any suit or any contested proceeding of the kind referred to in clause (a) of clause (b). (d) in any suit of which the amount or value of the subject-matter is less than Rs. 5,000 where the Court certifies by order in writing that the fees of two pleaders may be taxed. Provided that.....Act, 1879. 2. Except in the cases specified in this section, a party employing more than one pleader shall not be entitled to recover from his adversary more than one set of pleader's fees.	1. Where a party has, before the first hearing of a case or where issues are settled at or before the settlement of issues, engaged more than one pleader, the fees of two pleaders shall unless the Court for reasons to be recorded in writing otherwise directs, be taxed in the bill of costs in the following cases :— Proviso to be deleted.

Repeal. The enactments contained in Schedule I are hereby repealed to the extent specified in the third column thereof.

Ahmedabad, 6th August 1920.

To

HIS EXCELLENCY SIR GEORGE AMBROSE LLOYD, G.C.I.E., D.S.O., Governor and President in Council, Bombay Presidency,
Poona.

May it please your Excellency,

The Legal Practitioners' Association, Ahmedabad, most respectfully begs to suggest the accompanying omissions, additions and alterations in the Bill (Bill No. VI of 1920) to consolidate and amend the law relating to pleaders in the Presidency of Bombay. I hope your Excellency will be graciously pleased to find that they are quite essential and to recommend them as such to the Council.

I beg to remain,

Sir,

Your Excellency's most obedient servant,

G. R. DABHOLKAR,
Honorary Secretary, Legal Practitioners' Association.

Omissions, additions, and alterations in the Bill to amend the law relating to pleaders in the Presidency of Bombay, suggested by the Legal Practitioners' Association, Ahmedabad, and submitted on its behalf by its Secretary, Mr. G. R. Dabholkar, to His Excellency the Governor and President in Council, Bombay Presidency.

Clause 4.—The form of Sanad attached to this section for the offices of High Court Pleader should be adopted for that of District Court Pleader, i.e., in Form B the words 'During your good behaviour, etc., ... in force" be deleted and the words 'Except for reasonable cause" be substituted.

Clause 5.—The clause should stand as below:—

"A District Pleader holding a Sanad to practise in any one District shall be allowed to practise in Courts of other Districts in payment of additional requisite fees".

Clause 6.—For the words "Unexceptionable character" substitute "Good moral character" (vide High Court Manual of Civil Circulars).

Clause 8.—Sub-clause (a) should be read thus :—In any Civil or Criminal Court.

Sub-clause (b) should be deleted.

To sub-clause (c) the following be added :—And in all other proceedings under any Act in which parties have a right to appear.

Clause 10.—Insert the following words " or any proceeding under any Act in which parties have a right to appear " between " Criminal case " and " Until ".

From sub-clause (4) delete the words " with the permission of the Court " (vide the Manual of Civil Circulars, Chapter XVIII, Rule 9, page 258).

Clause 11.—In sub-clause (1) for " Not less than eight annas " substitute " in the case of small causes suits and Rs. 15 in other cases ".

In sub-clause (2) substitute " will not be bound to perform " in place of " shall not perform ".

In sub-clause (3) of this clause add " on demand " after " receipt ".

Clause 12.—In sub-clause (b) add " without reasonable cause " before " omit ".

Clause 13.—Add " on demand " after " shall " and before sub-clause (a).

Clause 20.—In sub-clause (1) the word " shall " be substituted for " may ".

In sub-clause (a) add the words " or any contested execution proceedings " after the words " in any original suit ".

Clause 24.—In this clause the words " gross moral turpitude " be substituted for the words " a defect in his character ".

Clause 25.—In this clause insert the word " wilful " between the words " of " and " neglect ".

Delete the words " or otherwise " whenever they occur. The amount of fine should be mentioned.

After the words " provisions of the Act " add the words " constituting professional misconduct " and delete the last three lines.

Clause 26.—In sub-clause (1) insert the word " wilful " between " of " and " neglect ".

Delete all the words within the brackets and substitute the words " in his professional character ".

Delete the whole of the sub-clause (2), including the proviso, and substitute the following for it :—

" Where the Court holds such matter to be proved, it may, if it deems fit, report the matter to the High Court ".

" Provided that when the Court holds such inquiry the pleader against whom an allegation is made may appear in person or by pleader or Counsel ".

Add sub-clause (3) as follows :—

" In any such case the Court may make such orders as to costs as it thinks fit ".

Clause 29.—Delete the words " and not otherwise " and substitute the words " or by way of lien ".

Clause 30.—In sub-clause (j) delete the semicolon at the end and add the words " or sub-section (3) of section 26 ".

Schedule.—In Schedule 3, Rule 6, sub-rule (b), add the words " or the Court of a Mamlatdar under the Mamlatdars' Courts' Act, 1906 ".

From Schedule C delete the words " or in the Court of a Mamlatdar under the Mamlatdars' Courts' Act, 1906 ".

Delete the two Nota Benes altogether.

reference to any case coming before such Court or before a Court subordinate to such Court, such Court may hold an inquiry into such matter and may take evidence thereof and in rebuttal thereof, in the presence of such pleader.
Clause 2.—Provided that the Court holding such enquiry may, if it deems fit, instead of taking any action itself report the matter to the High Court.	Clause 2 to be deleted altogether. The Court holding such inquiry may, if it deems fit, report the matter to the High Court.
Section XXVII.
1. Where any case under section 24, section 25 or section 26 is heard by the High Court the Advocate General or such Counsel or pleader as may appear for the Crown shall argue the case against the pleader against whom the allegation is made and such pleader may appear in person or by counsel or pleader*	*and shall be entitled to be heard in reply.
Conduct of case in High Court against pleader.
2. In any such case the High Court may make such order as to costs as it thinks fit.
In all proceedings under sections 25, 26 and 27 the Court concerned shall give the pleader concerned a copy of the matter alleged against him and also a notice that on a day to be therein appointed such matter shall be taken into consideration. Such copy and notice shall be served upon the pleader at least 15 days before the day so appointed.	This is to be added as a new section after section 27 in the Bill.
Section XXVIII.
Nothing in this Act shall be deemed to preclude any party from taking any legal proceedings in respect of any loss or injury sustained by him in consequence of such pleader's act or omission.
Legal proceedings against a pleader not affected.
Section XXIX.
An agreement between a pleader and his client respecting the remuneration payable to such pleader for his professional services may be enforced by a suit in a Civil Court of competent jurisdiction and not otherwise.	(1) A pleader shall be entitled to recover the balance of fees assessed in the bill of costs by an application which shall be treated as an application for the execution of a decree. (2) Where an agreement between a pleader and his client respecting the remuneration payable to such pleader for his professional services is for an amount in excess of the assessed fees it may in respect of such excess be enforced by suit in a civil court of competent jurisdiction and not otherwise.
Agreement for fee enforceable by civil suit.	Recovery of fees by a pleader.
Section XXX.
1. The High Court may make rules consistent with the provisions of this Act:—
Rules.
(a) prescribing the qualifications and mode of admission of pleaders and the fees payable for admission.

(c) regulating and providing for the recognition of district bar associations and for granting sanction to the rules of such associations.	To be deleted.
(d) requiring that a pleader shall be a member of and submit to the rules of the bar association of the district in which he practises.
(e) requiring that a pleader shall be a member of and subscribe to the Law Library in the District in which he practises.
(f) providing for the taxation of costs between party and party and between pleader and client.
(g) prescribing in lieu of forms in Schedule II the form of Sanad to be given to pleaders and the form of Vakalatnama.
(h) prescribing in lieu of or in addition to the rules in Schedule III the manner in which the pleader's fees shall be computed and the amount of the pleader's fee and determining the amount of the value of the subject-matter in particular classes of cases or in cases generally, for the purpose of calculating the pleader's fee.
(i) prescribing the manner in which costs in appeals or applications to the High Court from Decrees or Orders of Courts subordinate to the High Court shall be taxed in cases where costs between party and party are awarded by the High Court.
(j) fixing the scale of costs which may be awarded in cases under sub-section 2 of section 27.
(k) Generally to give effect to such provisions of this Act as may require to be provided for by rules.
2. Where the High Court prescribes any new forms in lieu of the forms in Schedule II, or makes any new rules in lieu of in addition to the rules in Schedule III, such new forms or rules respectively shall on publication be deemed to be enacted in such schedule in lieu of or in addition to the forms or rules now therein enacted.
3. All rules made under this Act shall be published in the Bombay Government Gazette and shall thereupon have effect as if enacted in this Act.
Section XXXI.
Savings. Nothing in this section shall be deemed to limit or otherwise affect the powers conferred upon the High Court by sections 106 and 107 of the Government of India Act, 1915, or by sections 9 and 10 of the Letters Patent or by any law for the time being in force.

Surat, 22nd August 1920.

From

KALYANJI H. DESAI, Esq., B.A., LL.B.,
Honorary Secretary, the District Bar Association, Surat;

To

THE SECRETARY TO THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL,
Bombay.

Sir,

The Executive Council of the Surat District Bar Association have carefully considered the provisions of Bill No. 6 of 1920 which has now been submitted to a Select Committee for consideration and report. The Council, while welcoming several of the provisions of the Bill as a distinct advance in many directions, where such an advance was desirable, are emphatically of opinion that the Bill requires to be amended in many particulars in order to make it acceptable to the Members of the Bar in the Presidency. They, therefore, propose to suggest the amendments, which in their opinion should be made in the several clauses of the Bill seriatim :—

Clause 4.—The form of Sanad attached to this section for the office of a District Pleader should be similar to the form of Sanad for a High Court Pleader. Therefore the words "During your good behaviour etc. . . . . in force" be deleted and the words "except for reasonable cause" be substituted.

Clause 5.—At the end of clause 5 (1) the following words may be added: "But a District Pleader holding a Sanad to practise in any one District shall be allowed to practise in Courts of any other District on payment of a prescribed fee for a particular case." Such a practice obtains in all Courts of Baroda State and other Native States and will enable a party to have a pleader of his own choice from any other District.

Clause 6.—Clause 6 should be amended by substituting the words "Good moral character" for the words "the unexceptional character".

Clause 7.—Clause 7(a) may be amended by inserting words "Both on its Original and Appellate Side" after the words "in the High Court".

Clause 8.—Clause 8(a) may be amended by adding the words "Civil or" after the words "in any" and by omitting clause (b) altogether.

Clause 9.—In clause 9 after the word "proceeding" add the words "in which a party has a right to appear".

Clause 10.—In clause 10 between the words "Criminal case and until" add the words "or any proceeding under Act in which parties have a right to appear"; and in sub-clause 4 of that clause delete the words "with the permission of the Court". Vide Chapter XVIII, rule 9, at page 258 of the Manual of Civil Circulars of the High Court of Bombay.

Clause 11.—The retaining fee in clause 11 shall be not less than Rs. 15 in the District Court or in the Court of a Subordinate Judge and Rs. 5 in a Small Cause Court case.

Clause 13.—In clause 13 add between "shall" and beginning of clause (a) the words "on demand".

Clause 19.—In clause 19, a sub-clause may be added by which pleaders be authorized to recover their fees from their client or from the opposite party by an application in execution in the nature of an allocator in the High Court.

Clause 20.—In clause 20 (1) the word "shall" be substituted for the word "may".

Clause 21.—In clause 21, sub-clause (2), substitute "shall" for the word "may" in his discretion.

Clause 24.—In this clause the words "gross moral turpitude" be substituted for the words "a defect in his character".

Clause 25.—In this clause insert the word "wilful" between the words "of" and "neglect". Delete the words "or otherwise" in the last line.

Clause 26.—In sub-clause 1 insert the word "wilful" between "of" and "neglect".

Delete all the words within the brackets and substitute the words "in his professional character".

Delete the whole of the sub-clause 2 including proviso and substitute the following for it:—

"Where the Court holds such matter to be proved, it may, if it deems fit, report the matter to the High Court."

"Provided that when the Court holds such inquiry, the pleader against whom an allegation is made may appear in person or by pleader or Counsel."

Add sub-clause 3 as follows:—

"In any such case the Court may make such orders as to costs as it thinks fit."

Clause 29.—Delete the words "and not otherwise" and substitute the words "or by lien".

Clause 30.—In sub-clause (j) delete the semi-colon at the end and add the words "or sub-section 23 of section 26".

Schedule.—In Schedule III, rule 6, sub-rule (b), add the words "or the Court of a Mamlatdar under the Mamlatdars' Courts Act, 1906."

From Schedule C, delete the words "or in the Court of a Mamlatdar under the Mamlatdars' Courts Act, 1906."

From

SORAB B. DADYBURJOR, Esqr., B. A., LL.B., Honorary Secretary, Bombay Vakils' Association;

To

THE SECRETARY TO THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL,
Government of Bombay,
Poona.

Sir,

I am directed by the Bombay Vakils' Association to forward to you the accompanying resolutions regarding the Pleaders' Bill before the Legislative Council, with a request that you will be pleased to place the same before the President and members of the Select Committee on the bill.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

SORAB B. DADYBURJOR,
Honorary Secretary.

RESOLUTIONS.

That the Bombay Vakils' Association strongly protests against the provisions contained in sections 4, 11, 12, 13, 25, 26 and 30 of the Bombay Pleaders' Bill.

That this Association is of opinion that the provision in section 25 of the Bill for the High Court to suspend, remove from practice or fine, should be confined strictly to the Pleader's misconduct in his capacity as a pleader and should not be extended to anything beyond his professional character as is intended by the words "or otherwise" at the end of the section and that the said words be deleted.

That provision in section 26 of the Bill empowering the District Court, Court of Session, or the Chief Judge of the Presidency Small Cause Court, or the Chief Presidency Magistrate, to fine or reprimand a pleader after holding an inquiry in the matter of a pleader's misconduct should be deleted and the said powers should be confined to the High Court only, and the other Courts should be given the powers to hold inquiry and report to the High Court.

In section 29, a provision should be made for a lien on papers by pleaders with respect to their unpaid fees.

The section 30 (c) should not be confined to District Bars' Association but to all properly constituted Bar Association in Bombay City.

Sections 11 and 12 should be deleted and the matter should be left to be dealt with by the different Bar Associations. If they are to be retained, then provisions should be made for a retainer to be optional, and for a proper brief fee being paid after a retainer and for determination of disputes as to fees to be settled by the President of the Bar Association.

Section 13 should be amended making it obligatory to give receipt only on demand.

The N. B. in the form of the Sanad should be deleted as derogatory to the dignity of pleaders who are considered as officers of the Court.

Sir,

We have the honour to address this letter to you and to forward to you herewith the accompanying Resolution passed at a meeting of the members of the Bar practising in the Presidency Magistrates' Courts at Bombay under the auspices of the Bombay Police Court Bar Association on 7th August 1920.

We shall thank you to place the same at your early convenience before the Chairman and Members of the Select Committee of the Bill for their consideration before the next Session of the Legislative Council.

Resolution.

"That this meeting of the pleaders practising in the Presidency Magistrates' Courts, Bombay, and held under the auspices of the Police Court Bar Association, emphatically protests against the powers proposed to be given to the Chief Presidency Magistrate, Bombay, and to the Chief Judge of the Small Causes Court, Bombay, under clause 26 of Bill No. VI of 1920, as, in the unanimous opinion of this meeting, such powers will have the effect of seriously interfering, with the conscientious and fearless discharge of professional duties by pleaders, and will be greatly detrimental to the prestige, dignity and independence of the profession, thereby prejudicing materially the interests of the public in general. Further this meeting is unanimously of the opinion that such disciplinary powers should solely be vested in and exercised by the High Court."

Broach, dated 7th September 1920.

To

THE SECRETARY TO THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL,

Bombay.

Sir,

I have the honour to submit the following representation on the Bill No. 6 of 1920 (Law relating to pleaders).

The Bill was considered at a meeting of the Bar here on 28th August and it was decided that it should be submitted with a request that you will place it before proper authorities.

In the first place it was said that the Bill may well await the formation and coming into operation of the new reformed council. The grievances of the pleaders have remained long unheeded, and nothing will be lost by a short interval.

However if the Bill is to be proceeded with, it is requested the suggestions herein contained may be duly considered.

The word "unexceptionable" in clause 6-i may be removed, and the word "good" may be put instead.

The words "if demanded" be added at the end of clause 11-3, and at the end of clause 13-a before the word "and".

In clause 20 the words "before the first hearing of a case" be omitted, and the words "before the suit is heard on the merits" be substituted in their place.

The words "or otherwise" at the end of clause 25 be omitted.

Clause 26 should be so amended as to leave the power of "fine, reprimand or punishment" in the hands of the High Court alone.

Clause 30. The power to settle the form of sanads need not be delegated by rules to the High Court. It should be reserved to the legislature.

It is further submitted that the difference in the form of sanads for the High Court and District pleaders may be done away with.

And it is submitted that unless a very precise definition of the words "disloyal movement" be possible, the words should not be incorporated in a sanad.

In the matter of fees, my brethren have decided to request that 6 per cent. up to the limit of Rs. 5,000 should be allowed.

And it is also desired that in the schedule 3, clause 2-c, the words "one half" be substituted for the words "one fourth".

We have not thought it necessary to give detailed reasons for the suggestions herein contained as they are very clearly required to be accepted in the interests of the Bar as well as in the interests of the public.

I need hardly say that the remuneration for the pleaders was settled nearly a century ago and now that the legislature have been moved to do some justice to the class, it is hoped full justice will be given to them. The nature of the litigation is becoming more and more complex and difficult and the need for precision greater and greater. Considerable demand is made on the energy and the time of the members of the legal profession and the lot of the pleaders in the mofussil is particularly to be pitied as they have to enforce law and procedure amongst a class of litigants not very much in sympathy with the exigencies of the procedure laws, and it is no small consolation to them to know that the mofussil bar have hitherto maintained the traditions of their profession.

It is a matter of regret that the legal profession is sought to be kept in dread of the slippery definition of the words "disloyal movement". As the desire of the people for their advancement grows stronger and stronger, as the supporters of the liberty of the people, the bar cannot stand out of the arena of discussion, and in their endeavours to advance the cause of their country's progress, the bar in this country simply follow the illustrious examples of the lawyers in Europe and America. In every country the lawyers have taken a leading part in the country's progress, as well as in the administration and it is hoped the Bombay legislature will do nothing that they may deter any member of that class from doing his duty according to his light consistently with his duty to the State and society.

I may say that it will be advisable, if the Bill is passed into law, if immediate effect is given to it, so as to apply to pending suits and proceedings. Concessions have been given to the solicitors and there is no reason why the principle should not apply to the mofussil bar.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

ANTOLDAS HARGOVANDAS,

President, Bar Association, Broach.

To

HIS EXCELLENCY SIR GEORGE AMBROSE LLOYD, KT., G.C.I.E., D.S.O., Governor of Bombay.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY:

(1) On behalf of the Anjuman Islam Sunnut-Jamat of Bombay and in virtue of a special resolution passed at its general meeting held on 28th of July 1920 I have the honour as the President of the said Anjuman, to convey to Your Excellency the sense of its keen appreciation and gratitude for the measures Your Excellency has resolved to adopt in assisting the Municipal Corporation of Bombay, in its policy of introducing free and compulsory primary education for boys and girls within the Municipal limits of Bombay.

(2) In acknowledging the high principles actuating Your Excellency in this matter, I beg leave to invite the attention of Your Excellency to the following points which reflect the ideas and sentiments of the Sunnee Musalmans (forming ninety per cent. of the Musalman population) on this question, and which I venture to hope will merit Your Excellency's gracious and sympathetic consideration.

(3) With regard to imparting primary education to Musalman boys and girls I beg leave to represent that considered from a social and religious point of view, it is desirable that separate schools should be established for Musalman boys and Musalman girls, which does not offer insuperable difficulties. Considering the education to be imparted, and the class of people which will be compelled to receive it, the ideal of the elementary education of a Musalman will not in any way be attained. The social and the religious life of the Musalmans is far apart from the rest of the City's population. It is obligatory on the Musalmans to impart religious instruction to their children at the very beginning of their educational course.

(4) Since in almost all cases the primary course will complete the education a boy or girl will receive from the Municipal Schools, the Musalmans cannot but view with apprehension the completion of the education of their children without religious instruction. The Musalmans naturally regard such education as subversive of their religion and will in consequence not be able to appreciate the benefits of free primary education. Further at present some of the primary Urdu Schools of the City are mixed schools for boys and girls. I submit, that so far as the Musalmans are concerned mixed schools for boys and girls are not desirable for various reasons which I need not bring before Your Excellency.

(5) As regards the compulsory education of girls, considering the present social and religious sentiments of the community no one would regard compulsory education of girls with favour. Almost all the Sunnee Musalmans, as Your Excellency must be aware, strictly observe the purdah system. According to the canons of our Holy Religion purdah becomes obligatory after a girl reaches the age of nine years. Under these circumstances Your Excellency will perceive that it will indirectly affect the policy of non-interference in religious matters so long observed by the British Government. It would appear that the Municipal Corporation overlooked this aspect of the question. The purdah system is at present a living institution among the Musalmans as it is sanctioned by the usage of centuries and sanctified by the mandates of our Holy Religion. It is cherished as a fortress of refuge for our moral and social system. In no case will the primary schools be able to observe the purdah system even in its crude form.

Further the want of female Musalman teachers will not induce Musalman parents to entrust their girls to male Musalman or to female non-Musalman teachers, and from some very grave facts which have come to my notice in my capacity as an Honorary visitor of the Municipal Urdu Schools, they would be justified in their fears. If compulsion were to be used for girls it would be a grievous hardship felt by all Musalmans with families. I would respectfully beg leave to urge upon Your Excellency that the prevailing opinion of the Musalmans on the compulsory education of girls under present day conditions is totally against such education, on religious grounds. Apart from this, it is well known that serious cases of immorality have come to light, which have been due to the employment of male teachers in schools where girls receive education. As a matter of fact a fairly large population of Musalman girls of the middle class receive the rudiments of their education, embracing secular and religious, at home. This is imparted either by the parents or relatives or by professional Musalman lady teachers who give tuitions from house to house.

(6) I have drawn Your Excellency's attention to the necessity of religious education for Musalman boys and girls. The Municipal Authorities have merely allowed the reading of the Holy Koran in the Urdu Schools, but obviously this is not all that is required. What is required is an amplified and complete course of religious instruction supplementing the reading of the Holy Koran. It is therefore desirable that arrangements be made to give sound religious instruction to boys and girls, for which at least two hours per day should be set apart.

(7) There is no objection for compulsory primary education for Musalman boys, provided religious instruction is given. I would, however, bring to Your Excellency's attention, the position of the poor of my community who by nature of their extreme poverty are compelled to send their boys to earn when they are scarcely seven years of age. To such people compulsory education will mean serious hardship. It would therefore be advisable to limit their attendance at schools to two hours per day, otherwise they will have to starve.

(8) The distribution of schools to the distance of a mile apart will inflict great hardship on many children. It would be advisable therefore to distribute these schools to certain streets, and as most of these streets have particularly one class of population, the provision of exclusive Musalman schools for boys and girls will not be burdened with difficulties. It will be noticed that motor car and other accidents are so numerous in Bombay, that the anxiety of parents will be almost unbearable when the children are away from home if the schools are located at a long distance from the residence of children.

(9) There is one more fact which I would beg leave to impress upon Your Excellency and that is that since children of such tender years will have to find their way to school and back, it is very desirable that female chaprasis be employed to accompany the children to and from school, a provision which will be much appreciated by all alike.

(10) In the absence of compulsion for Musalman girls, I submit that female Musalman Inspectors may be appointed to make primary schools for girls popular among the Musalmans of Bombay. Prominent Musalmans should also be appointed on different Ward Committees to use their influence for the attendance of Musalman girls to the primary schools. After a few years of experience of the compulsory attendance of the Musalman boys at the Urdu Primary Schools, we shall be able to evolve an effective system of primary education for the Musalman girls also, but this system must be based on the voluntary attendance of girls to the primary schools.

(11) I beg to impress upon Your Excellency that the feeling of the Musalman community as regards the necessity of employing female Musalman teachers in the girls' schools is very keen, as no self-respecting community can view without anxiety the system of mixed schools now in vogue which inevitably leads to serious laxity in the morals of its youth.

(12) In conclusion I beg to assure Your Excellency of our best wishes and prayers for Your Excellency's happy and successful rule of this important Presidency.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your most humble and obedient servant,

Buildings for primary schools—Revised procedure relating to the approval of plans and estimates of

GOVERNMENT OF BOMBAY.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

Order No. W.—15125.

Bombay Castle, 19th August 1920.

ORDER OF GOVERNMENT.

In order to expedite the procedure followed at present in obtaining official approval to plans and estimates of buildings for primary schools, Government are pleased to direct that the revised procedure detailed in paragraphs 2 and 3 below should now be followed.

2. In cases of projects for primary schools under Local Boards, the Deputy Educational Inspector, who is in the first instance the Officer responsible for the selection of a site, should, after choosing a site that he considers suitable, at once communicate direct with the Educational Inspector. If the latter considers the site proposed by the Deputy primâ facie suitable, he (the Educational Inspector) should communicate without delay with the President of the Local Board giving details of the site as per the Deputy's description and ask the President of the Board, if he approves of the proposal, to have a proper site plan prepared as early as possible. The officer responsible for preparing this plan should send it to the President, District Local Board, through the Deputy Educational Inspector and the Educational Inspector, who should sign it and pass it on. The President, District Local Board, will next get the approval of the Sanitary Department and the Executive Engineer and then, if necessary, ask the Collector to acquire the land. The Collector will, as usual, submit the case (which should include the site plan signed by the Educational Inspector and the Deputy) to Government in the Revenue Department, through the Commissioner and the Director of Public Instruction. When the President, District Local Board, addresses the Collector regarding acquisition of land, he should at the same time ask the Executive Engineer to get the necessary plans and estimates for buildings prepared without waiting for the completion of acquisition proceedings.

3. Municipal authorities usually take the initiative in the case of selection of sites, but these have to be approved by the Deputy Educational Inspector and the Educational Inspector. Once this approval is obtained, the Municipality should get the approval of the Executive Engineer and the Sanitary Department, after which plans and estimates can be prepared at once. If a building grant is desired, the case should be submitted to the Director of Public Instruction (through the Educational Inspector), only when all the plans, etc., have been approved by the officers below.

4. The officers concerned are requested to see that matters relating to projects for primary schools are dealt with expeditiously. Type unit plans have now been sanctioned for primary schools, and the adoption or adaptation of these should considerably expedite the work of the Executive Engineer.

5. It has been observed that much delay is often caused by the non-observance of the rules regarding construction of schools by local bodies and others, whose attention has then to be drawn to them, which results in fresh proposals having to be submitted. It is therefore requested that aided managers who desire grants should be supplied with copies of the type plans and printed rules regarding construction of schools and they be asked to follow them. This should be done by the Director of Public Instruction.

His Excellency the President:—Questions.

The numbers of questions were then called (and the following supplementary questions were put).

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud:—Your Excellency,—With regard to my Question No. 1 (b), will Government be pleased to state who raised the subscription for the Arunavati Bridge? Was it the district local board, or some one amongst the people, who raised that subscription?

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—I must ask the honourable member to give notice of that question.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—Your Excellency,—As regards the answer to my Question No. 10, I want to inquire whether the Oriental Translator's office is recruited on a different footing from the other departments of the Secretariat?

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—I do not think I can add anything to the answer already given. The office establishment of the Oriental Translator is included in the cadre of the Secretariat but the work done in the Oriental Translator's office is of a different nature.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—Your Excellency,—With regard to the answer to my Question No. 3, may I ask whether any check is exercised by Government on the export of cattle?

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—The answer to the question is in the negative.

BOMBAY TOBACCO BILL.

His Excellency the President:—A bill to amend the law relating to the duty payable on tobacco and to the import, transport, retail sale and warehousing thereof in the city of Bombay, Bill No. IV of 1919. The Honourable Mr. Curtis.

BOMBAY TOBACCO BILL—BOMBAY CITY PRIMARY EDUCATION BILL.

[27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. G. S. Curtis; Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas; the President; Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.]

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Your Excellency,—The report of the select committee on the bill to amend the Tobacco Act has been before the Council for some time. The report is not unanimous and to it is appended a dissenting minute by the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas in which stress is laid upon the severity of the taxation as far as the cheaper sort of tobacco is concerned, and the harassing nature of the impost which its continuance imposes.

Under the reformed councils the subject of excise will be a transferred subject, and as there is some difference of opinion regarding the desirability of continuing this act, as there is considerable conflict of interest between the municipality on the one hand and the tobacco trade and the consumer on the other, Government thought it desirable to refrain from proceeding with this bill with a view to its being later introduced in the reformed councils by the Minister in Charge if he thought that course desirable. I, therefore, beg leave to withdraw this bill.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—Your Excellency,—May I address the Council on this subject? I must say honestly that I am very much disappointed with the statement that the Honourable Member in Charge has made in bringing this motion before this Council, namely, that this bill be withdrawn.

My minute of dissent to the report of the select committee may not perhaps be fresh in the minds of honourable members as this amending bill has been before every meeting of this Council ever since October last.

His Excellency the President:—I understood the honourable member wanted to ask a question. But he is certainly not entitled to make a speech on this bill as it is being withdrawn.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—I do not think, sir, I will be out of order in showing to this Council that this motion to withdraw this bill is hardly justified.

His Excellency the President:—Once Government withdraws a bill there is no motion before the chamber and no discussion will be allowed. I will of course give leave to ask a question, but no leave will be given to make a speech on this bill which is withdrawn by Government.

The bill was by leave withdrawn.

A BILL TO PROVIDE FOR THE EXTENSION OF PRIMARY EDUCATION IN THE CITY OF BOMBAY (BILL No. IV OF 1920).

His Excellency the President:—A bill to provide for the extension of primary education in the city of Bombay, Bill No. IV of 1920. Second reading. The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Your Excellency,—I beg to move that the bill to provide for the extension of primary education in the city of Bombay be read a second time.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola moves the second reading of the bill.

Honourable members will have observed that the select committee on the bill is unanimous. There are two or three points which involve consideration, and they have been dealt with in the report of the select committee. The first point is in regard to the constitution of the schools committee. It has been provided that four additional members will be co-opted from outside the corporation, two of whom must be ladies. That is merely carrying out the original intention. The second point deals with the deletion of section 62 B of the existing Municipal Act. Under that section certain provisions were made for the payment of grants to the municipality. The new arrangement which has been recently made alters the situation, and in addition to the clauses dealing with that matter, it has been provided that the Bombay City Municipality should receive the same treatment as other city municipalities in regard to expenditure on primary education. The effect of this is merely to put the city of Bombay on the same footing as other cities in the Presidency.

The third point deals with the question of the employment of children in factories. The matter was very carefully considered by the select committee and they came to the conclusion that the provision as it originally stood met all the points. Honourable members will observe that the power to regulate the hours of attendance at school was vested in the schools committee which will administer compulsory primary education, and that committee will be wholly elected. I think honourable members will trust such a body to deal suitably with the best interests of the city and frame regulations which will leave no room for any serious objections. With these few words I ask honourable members to pass the second reading of this bill.

BOMBAY CITY PRIMARY EDUCATION BILL.

[Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola; Mr. C. V. Mehta.] [27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

The Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta:—Your Excellency,—In supporting the second reading of this bill I wish to refer to the petition that has been sent to this Council by the President of the Anjuman Islam Sunnut-Jamat of Bombay. That petition, sir, argues against compulsory education for Moslem girls and makes a statement that the municipal corporation overlooked the Mahomedan aspect of the question while asking for the passage of this bill.

I should like, your Excellency, to point out that this bill follows in this particular, as in most others, the powers that are given to other district municipalities inasmuch as a notification can only be issued after satisfying the department of education that satisfactory provision for the compulsory education of children has been made. This will meet the contention for the provision of female teachers in girls' schools. I wish to point out, sir, that there are various safeguards even if we recognize the difficulty of making education compulsory in the city of Bombay for Mahomedan girls. I may say at once, sir, that there are some sections of the Hindu community, at any rate, which consider that the time is not quite ripe for the wholesale introduction of compulsory education for girls. But the safeguards provided in this bill will be a sufficient guarantee, your Excellency, that the power will not be abused. In the first place, as I said, you have got to satisfy the department of education that provision has been sufficiently and adequately made which will meet the point that is made in the petition, that you should have female teachers in girls' schools. Then, further, it is provided that the corporation can only pass a resolution asking for compulsory education on obtaining the votes of at least two-thirds of the councillors present and of more than half of the whole number of councillors. I should mention that amongst the members of the Bombay Municipal Corporation the Mahomedans are strongly represented both on the corporation and on the schools committee, and they number more than one-fourth of the total number of the members of the corporation, so that there will be sufficient opportunity for them to convince the corporation of any difficulties that they might feel. There is also a provision, your Excellency, that if the parents satisfy the schools committee that a girl is receiving satisfactory instruction in other than a recognized school, she will not be bound to attend a municipal school. That was another point that is made in the petition saying that Mahomedan girls already receive education. If they do so, then there is no necessity for compulsory attendance. Moreover, section 15 reserves to Government the right to exempt a particular class or community from the operation of the act. Finally, sir, I may state that the corporation do not desire to push through a measure of this character unless it gets the backing and the support of the community for whose benefit action will be taken.

There remains only section 62 B, and I take this opportunity of thanking the Honourable Member in Charge for having met the select committee in a reasonable spirit. When first the corporation officially asked for the retention of section 62 B, which provides that the Bombay municipality will be treated on the same footing as any other city municipality should there be a change in the general policy of Government, I regret to say that Government refused that request. But when this matter was again brought up in the select committee, the Honourable Member in Charge saw the reasonableness of our request, and I take this opportunity of thanking both him and Government for acceding to the wishes of the corporation.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Your Excellency,—I do not think many remarks are called for in reply. The only thing I should like to say is that the corporation is a popular body and its constitution is going to be enlarged with a substantially increased element of representation by election. Government have full confidence in the corporation and they feel confident that the provisions of this enabling act will be put in force by them in such a manner as to carry public opinion with them. I have nothing further to add.

Bill read a second time. The motion for the second reading of the bill was then put to the vote and carried.

A BILL TO AMEND THE BOMBAY TOWN PLANNING ACT, 1915. (BILL NO. V OF 1920).

His Excellency the President: —A bill to amend the Bombay Town Planning Act, 1915 (Bill No. V of 1920). Second reading. The Honourable Mr. Curtis.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Your Excellency,—The report of the select committee, which is unanimous as regards this bill, is on the table. The only matter which we have to notice is the omission of clause 4, on examining which we found that experts were somewhat at variance as regards the desirability of the changes in the original act contemplated by the amendments embodied in that clause, and we decided to drop it. Otherwise the bill remains as it was published. I beg to move that it be read a second time.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis moves the second reading of the bill.

A BILL FURTHER TO AMEND THE BOMBAY TOWN PLANNING ACT, 1915. (BILL NO. VIII OF 1920).

His Excellency the President:—A bill further to amend the Bombay Town Planning Act, 1915 (Bill No. VIII of 1920). Second reading. The Honourable Mr. Curtis.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Your Excellency,—I rise to present the report of the select committee on a bill further to amend the Bombay Town Planning Act, 1915, which is intended to add a new section 45A. The only change made by the committee in the bill as presented before this Council has been the addition of the words shown in italics in the papers before the Council. Practically it means, therefore, to take the instance which I gave before, that Santa Cruz cannot be amalgamated with Bandra unless Bandra agrees. The report of the committee is unanimous, and I, therefore, beg to propose that the bill be read a second time.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis moves the second reading of the bill.

A BILL TO CONSOLIDATE AND AMEND THE LAW RELATING TO PLEADERS IN THE PRESIDENCY OF BOMBAY.

(BILL NO. VI OF 1920.)

His Excellency the President:—A bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to pleaders in the Presidency of Bombay (Bill No. VI of 1920). Second reading. The Honourable Sir George Carmichael.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—Your Excellency,—I rise to move the second reading of Bill No. VI of 1920 to consolidate and amend the law relating to pleaders in the Presidency of Bombay. The bill has been subjected to a very thorough revision at the hands of the select committee in the light of the discussion on the first reading and also of the representations which were received from the several bar associations throughout the Presidency. The committee are unanimous in their recommendations except on one point on which my friend the Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai has appended a dissenting minute. The recommendations will, I think, be found to meet, in a very reasonable manner, all the criticisms which have been made on the provisions of the bill as originally drafted. Some new matter has been introduced. It is proposed to give a pleader a lien on documents for which he has given his client a receipt, and also it is proposed to enable the pleader to come to court and obtain a summary order for the recovery of costs which have been taxed by the court. These proposals are entirely new. These were not included in the original bill, nor were they suggested, I believe, in the discussion in this Council, nor were they proposed in any of the representations which came from the bar associations. The committee, however, were of opinion that in a matter of the recovery of the taxed costs pleaders should have the benefits of the same facilities as are provided for the attorneys in the High Court. The Government of India, to whom the select committee's report was reported, have drawn attention to these provisions. They are inclined to think that the desirability of this innovation is open to question, but they leave it to the Council to decide whether they should retain them or not. Government would be very glad if these new provisions are discussed fairly fully in this Council, and if any honourable member wishes to move an amendment for the exclusion of clauses 29 and 30 of the bill, then I feel sure that His Excellency the President will give the necessary permission to do so without the honourable member's having given any notice on the subject.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael moves the second reading of the bill.

Under the original bill it was proposed to give disciplinary powers to certain courts subordinate to the High Court, and this provision came in for very considerable criticism. The select committee were of opinion that the rational arrangement was for the authority which grants the sanad to be the authority to deal with misconduct. They also felt that to entrust the disciplinary jurisdiction to the High Court and to the High Court alone was better calculated to maintain the dignity of the pleaders' profession, and to strengthen the sense of responsibility in the mind of every one who has the honour of belonging to that profession.

The select committee have recommended that the sanads for district pleaders should, as far as possible, be in the same form as for High Court pleaders. The wording they have adopted follows that of the form at present in use for High Court pleaders. The select committee considered it unnecessary to specify any particular form of misconduct as constituting reasonable cause, and have accordingly deleted the note to the forms in schedules A and B, under the existing form of sanad. The assimilation of the forms makes it possible to simplify clause 25, which as amended gives the High Court power to take action against a pleader on reasonable cause.

The last of the important changes to which I should like to refer is the addition made to clause 7. This clause gives pleaders the right to plead in certain proceedings before public officers. The select committee were generally in favour of this extension, and the main question was how best to effect it. It was felt to be impossible to define the proceedings in which a pleader might appear by any general phrase. There were two reasons against this. In the first place, proceedings are taken under acts of the Government of

PLEADERS' BILL.

[27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Sir G. Carmichael; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai.]

India as well as under Bombay acts. This Council is not competent to do anything which would affect the Government of India acts. In the second place, practically every action taken or order passed by a public officer is taken or passed after some enquiry, and an extension in general terms would be quite unnecessarily wide, and it might operate very disadvantageously towards the public. It is to be remembered, too, that the great majority of the orders passed by public officers are not final orders, but may be contested in a suit in a civil court. The device adopted by the select committee is to specify the more important proceedings in which pleaders should be given the right of appearing, and to empower Government to add to that list by notification. The list in the bill as amended by the select committee does not include any of the Government of India acts, as it was considered that the correct procedure in dealing with these acts would be for Government to give the right by executive order, as has in fact been done in the case of proceedings under the Income Tax Act. However, since the select committee submitted their report, the Government of India have given authority for the inclusion of any Government of India enactment in force in this Presidency in the notification, and when the clause by clause stage is reached, I propose, with His Excellency the President's permission, to move an amendment to give effect to this extension.

The point on which the Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai differs from the rest of the select committee was raised in the discussion in this Council on the first reading. It concerns a comparatively small matter, namely, the compulsory retaining fee. This retaining fee gives the payee a lien on the services of the pleader. The minimum amount has been fixed at a conveniently low figure. The Honourable Rao Saheb Desai says that this arrangement is unilateral. But I cannot understand this. It appears to me that both parties are bound. The pleader is not prevented from fixing his fee at a figure sufficient to cover any risk of his not being further employed in the case, while, if the circumstances are such that the pleader is entitled to be relieved from his engagement, the bill empowers the court to give him the necessary relief. Clause 11, which provides for the retaining fee, is necessary for the protection of the client. It also protects the pleader. If no retaining fee is paid till the pleader is instructed, the client has nothing to show that there have been any preliminary dealings with the pleader, which would preclude the pleader from appearing on the other side; similarly, the pleader, if he had not been retained, could call upon the client to produce his receipt in case the client was inclined to maintain that the pleader should not appear against him.

With these remarks, sir, I beg to move the second reading of the bill. I feel confident that the measure will commend itself to the Council as a bill which will secure a satisfactory position and status for the pleaders, and, at the same time, is a reasonable measure from the point of view of the general public.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai :—Your Excellency,—I have great pleasure in supporting the second reading of the bill, and I beg to take this opportunity of thanking the Honourable Member in Charge as well as the Honourable the Advocate General for the concessions that they have been good enough to make in the select committee on many important points. There is only one point about which we were not at one in the select committee; and that was with reference to the retaining fee, referred to in clause 11 of the bill. With reference to that, I have given notice of two amendments to clause 11, but, at this stage, I would like to state my views in order to elucidate the matter sufficiently well.

The present provisions with reference to retaining fee are contained in Regulation II of 1827, section 50, and these provisions are only limited to the levy of a retaining fee with reference to any suit or proceeding, and clause 2 of that section provides that if the fee is not paid though demanded, then the pleader is to abstain from all proceeding until it is furnished; so that, at present, a retaining fee is to be charged with reference to work which is in court or which is to be done in court. The present provision, however, seeks to lay down a far-reaching limitation on a pleader. The words of clause 11 are very wide. A party may engage a pleader not for any proceeding in court, but simply for any work out of court also, and clause 2 lays down that he is not to perform any services until he is paid. Now, it is well known that a pleader combines in himself the duties of an attorney as well as an advocate. We have attorneys only in the Presidency town, and all over the rest of the Presidency the pleaders do the work of an attorney, which may consist of drafting documents and such other work, which has no reference to any case in court. Now, an attorney in Bombay is not bound to charge a retaining fee for any such work. Sub-clause (3) of clause 2 in defining a pleader lays down that nothing in section 11 shall apply to any attorney of the High Court. Thus, an attorney, for the purpose of drafting a will or any other document, has not to charge a retaining fee. But, under the provisions of the bill

PLEADERS' BILL.

[Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; Sir G. Carmichael; the President; Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud.] [27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

as they stand at present, a pleader working in the mofussil will be bound to charge a retaining fee for such work. I look at this provision as either not clearly expressed, or leading to an absurd position. If it is only meant to apply to proceedings in a court, then it has not been sufficiently clearly worded. If, however, it is meant to apply to a pleader's work as an attorney out of court, then my view is that that is a very far-reaching provision and it is rather putting a halter round a pleader's freedom restraining him to act in reference to matters which do not appertain to any work in court without first levying a retaining fee. There is also another side to it. If a pleader wishes to do any work gratis, on social or charitable considerations, why should he be prevented from doing that work? If he accepts a fee, then he must be bound by the provisions, and he cannot change sides; that is intelligible. But if a friend or an acquaintance comes to a pleader and asks him a question or two with reference to certain entanglements in his family or anything of that sort, should a pleader be put to the necessity of demanding a retaining fee, before he would advise the friend upon that point? That is putting the whole thing on a mercenary basis, and I think, therefore, that the provisions of the bill as they stand are very wide, go far beyond the present provisions, and are uncalled for, and therefore, that is a point which the Council will have to consider at the time when my amendment is moved.

At the initial stage a pleader cannot know what will be the length of the litigation that may come on thereafter, and consequently he cannot insist upon a very large fee before he is bound down according to the provisions of the bill. If he accepts a small fee of say Rs. 20 or Rs. 30 for giving an opinion or advice or for drafting a small document, then according to the provisions he is bound. The client, however, is not bound to utilize his services, and is not bound to pay him for any further services, but still he is in the predicament of having every now and then to go to court and to ask the permission of the court. Under these circumstances, the provisions, as they stand, are very embarrassing. They would be really embarrassing to a conscientious man, or they will, in practice, be evaded. I do not like that a legislative provision of that sort should be either evaded or embarrassing. Therefore, while supporting the second reading of the bill, I beg to draw the attention of the Council to this question, which is very important.

Bill read a second time. The motion for the second reading of the bill was put to the vote and carried.

Bill read clause by clause. The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—Your Excellency,—The bill may now be read clause by clause.

Clause 1 was put to the vote and carried.

His Excellency the President:—Clause 2, sub-clause (3). Amendment No. 1. The Honourable Sir George Carmichael.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—Your Excellency,—I beg to move that:

"In clause 2 (3), for the number '29-A' substitute the number '30'."

This is merely a clerical mistake, and requires revision in printing.

The amendment was put to the vote and carried.'

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—With your Excellency's permission I beg to move an amendment, the notice of which was not given, namely:—

"At the end of sub-clause (5) of clause 2 add the words 'or of section 106 (1A) of the Government of India Act'."

That section reads as follows:—

"The Letters Patent establishing or vesting jurisdiction, powers or authority in a High Court may be amended from time to time by His Majesty by further Letters Patent."

The amendment was put to the vote and carried.

Clause 2 was then put to the vote and carried.

Clauses 3 and 4 were then put to the vote and carried.

His Excellency the President:—Amendment No. 2. Clause 5, sub-clause (3). The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud.

"In clause 5 (3) omit 'District Judge' and substitute 'presiding judge of the court' and add at the end 'on payment of a prescribed fee for a particular case'."

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud:—Your Excellency,—Clause 5, sub-clause (3) permits a pleader to appear in special cases in another district where he does not hold a sanad, with the previous written permission of the District Judge. I beg to move an amendment that the words "District Judge" be omitted and that the words

PLEADERS' BILL.

[27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud; Mr. G. K. Parekh; Mr. P. A. Desai; Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe.]

" presiding judge of the court " be substituted in their place. A pleader gets the right to plead in a particular district because he has received a sanad for that district by paying a particular fee for it. I submit that all that is necessary for permitting him to appear in another district is to prescribe a fee which he shall pay for the privilege of conducting a particular case and to leave it to the presiding judge of the court to grant the necessary permission. The District Judge is often far away. The presiding judge is the judge who is most concerned in any particular form of proceeding, and I submit, his permission should ordinarily be sufficient. If, for instance, a pleader happens to be present in any particular court, and the client is anxious to engage him in that court, then the permission of the presiding judge on the payment of a prescribed fee should be sufficient to enable him to appear for that client in that particular case. The procedure involved in an application being made to the District Judge, and obtaining his written permission, is very cumbrous and is liable to delay. I, therefore, submit that in the interests of the clients this provision might be amended, and the presiding judge might be permitted to issue this permission when necessary on the payment of a prescribed fee.

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh:—May it please your Excellency,—I rise to support my friend's amendment. The object of this amendment is this. In certain cases it so happens that all the pleaders of the court in a particular district are engaged by one side, and it becomes difficult for the other side to obtain professional assistance in that district. It is, therefore, necessary that there should be some means for the other party to obtain the services of a pleader who is not a pleader of that district but a pleader of another district. Now, the remedy of going over to the District Judge for permission to act in another district appears to me to be a somewhat difficult remedy, a remedy which may cause an amount of inconvenience; and I should, therefore, think, that it would be desirable that a pleader, in order to appear in a case in another district, should be permitted to do so by the presiding judge. It appears to me that the amendment proposed, saves considerable inconvenience, and therefore it ought be accepted.

The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai:—Your Excellency,—I rise to support the amendment which has been proposed by the Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud. But there is one point which I should like to know from him. His amendment reads:—

> " In clause 5 (3) omit ' District Judge ' and substitute ' presiding judge of the court ' and add at the end ' on payment of a prescribed fee for a particular case '."

At present a district pleader has to pay a fee of fifty rupees for a sanad authorizing him to practise in all the courts of a district. So, I should like to know what my friend means by saying " a prescribed fee ". Who is to prescribe? Whether the presiding judge who is to grant the permission, or the Government under the rules which Government is to frame in this connection, or what? I say in no case should the fee exceed five rupees for giving a pleader permission to appear in a case in the court of another district for which a sanad is not granted to him.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe:—Your Excellency,—I rise to support this amendment. I was one of the members of the select committee, and when this question was discussed, it did not occur to me—I frankly admit—that such a concession should be extended to pleaders. After the select committee dispersed, this point occurred to me, and I wrote to the Honourable Member in Charge of the bill. However, as we had met and discussed all these questions, perhaps it was not considered desirable to incorporate my suggestion in the clause.

The point on which I wish to support this amendment is this. It must be conceded, sir, that this is a concession which has been for the first time extended to district court pleaders who hold sanads for one district only. Remembering this fact, we have to judge whether the clause, as it now stands, is going to really benefit the pleaders to give them the advantage of this concession—or whether it will simply be a dead letter on the statute book. The District Judge is always at the headquarters, and it may oftentimes happen that a pleader of one district is called in a particular case in a taluka court to appear and conduct it in the subordinate judge's court. Even in such a case under the clause as it now stands, if an application were to be made to the District Judge, he would not decide the point unless he were to refer the matter to the presiding judge to ascertain from him whether there has been a dearth of pleaders in his court, or whether the particular client would not obtain the assistance of the local pleaders, or whether the case was really of such importance as to necessitate the concession being extended to a pleader of another district. This means, when advantage has to be taken of such a concession, that an application has to be made pretty early before the case is called on for hearing.

PLEADERS' BILL.

[Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe; Mr. S. B. Upasani; the Advocate General; Sir G. Carmichael; Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud.] [27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

And it is on that account that this would work hard upon both, the client who wishes to engage a pleader in another district for his case, and upon the pleader who accepts the engagement.

Another point on which I wish to support the amendment is as to whether the District Judge or the presiding judge should have the power to allow a pleader from another district to appear in a particular case. To me it appears that the presiding judge is the best authority and if the matters are left to him there is no apprehension that he will exercise that right too often. In the first instance such cases will be very few and if, as my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Garud has proposed in his amendment, a certain prescribed fee is to be taken for each case, I apprehend that the cases may be fewer still. So on this point as the concession has already been extended, I submit that instead of the power being left to the District Judge it might be left to the presiding judge to consider whether a pleader from another district should be allowed to appear on behalf of a client in a particular case arising in another district.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—Your Excellency,—I wish to support the amendment moved by my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Garud. The concession provided by this amendment is meant to meet exceptional cases, and I think, if at all it is to be granted it should be granted in a manner which would best meet the desired convenience. The clause as it stands will cause great inconvenience as has been pointed out by the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe who preceded me. Some time will be required to make a reference to the District Judge and for him also to make inquiries and then he will not be in the same position in which the presiding judge will be to know all the facts necessary to form a correct decision. The presiding judge before whom the case is being heard will be able to know all the actual facts necessary to decide whether the pleader from another district should be allowed to appear in that case or not. That being the case, I think it would be better to meet such cases by allowing the amendment proposed by the Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud.

The Honourable the Advocate General (Sir T. J. Strangman):—Your Excellency,—I beg to oppose this amendment. Clause 5, sub-clause 3, was inserted to meet an exceptional case. For example a man might be sued in a district in which he did not reside in regard to a matter in which he had acted upon the advice of a pleader of his own district. It was considered that it would be a matter of some hardship that he should not have the services of the pleader on whose advice he had acted. The provision was based upon the analogous powers of the Judges of the High Court to admit an advocate of another High Court when they think fit to do so in a particular case. The power under this clause was left to the District Judge as the highest judicial authority in the district. It was considered by all of us in select committee at the time when the point was raised that there could be no real difficulty in obtaining the permission of the District Judge, for presumably it would always be known some time beforehand when the case was likely to come on.

Now it would be quite out of place for anybody except the District Judge to give such permission. For, if honourable members will look at clause 8 of the bill, they will see that it is for the District Judge to assign the courts in his district to the various pleaders. The amendment if allowed would lead to this anomaly that any court in a district inferior to the District Court might permit a pleader from another district to appear in a particular case, whereas that court would have no power to admit a pleader from within the district to appear in any particular case, that power being reserved to the District Judge. In these circumstances I beg to oppose the amendment.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—Your Excellency,—I do not wish to add very much to the debate. It seems to me that the case against this amendment has been made sufficiently clear by the Honourable the Advocate General. The District Judge is the authority for assigning pleaders to the various courts in the district. It can never happen, in my opinion, that there will be any urgency in the matter of obtaining his sanction. It cannot be a matter of merely a day. It must be known beforehand when the services of a pleader from another district are likely to be required in a particular case by a particular client. So it would be very much better to leave the power with the District Court as is proposed by the clause of the bill as it stands.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud:—Your Excellency,—The Honourable Mr. Pandurang Desai asked me what I meant by the words "prescribed fee for a particular case." What I mean by that is, such fee as is prescribed for the sanad, and such fee as may be prescribed by the authority who makes rules. Regarding the other difficulty

PLEADERS' BILL.

[27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud.]

as to whether the District Judge should be empowered or whether the presiding judge should be empowered to grant this permission, I may point out that we are now, under the clause as it stands, about to experience the same difficulty at least in Khandesh. For instance there is at Jalgaon a first class subordinate judge's court and the District Judge resides at Dhulia. Now if permission is to be obtained for the appearance of a pleader from another district before the first class subordinate judge at Jalgaon, the client has to apply to the District Judge at Dhulia which is far off from Jalgaon. But if the presiding judge is empowered to grant this permission, it would be easy for the first class subordinate judge at Jalgaon to grant this permission on an application to him. I do not understand why this unnecessary hardship of making an application in the matter to the District Judge at Dhulia should be imposed on the client. In the matter of issuing a sanad it is the District Judge who prescribes the court and in that case he is the proper authority to assign the court or courts in which a particular pleader is to be allowed to practice. In that case if he sees that there are obvious reasons for which a certain pleader should not be allowed to practise in a certain court, he does not assign that court to that pleader. But in the case in which a client wants that a pleader from another district should appear for him in a particular case, I do not know why he should be subjected to this particular hardship of making an application to the District Judge.

The motion was put to the vote and lost, 16 members voting for and 25 against.

The Council divided as follows :—

Clauses 5 and 6 were then severally put to the vote and carried.

His Excellency the President:—Clause 7, sub-clause (1) (e), Amendment No. 4. I will take the wider amendment of the two first. The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai.

For clause 7 (1) sub-clause (e), substitute the following:—

(e) before any public officer when exercising any judicial or quasi-judicial function.

The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai:—Your Excellency,—Under the assurance given to me by the Honourable Member in Charge I should like to withdraw this amendment.

The amendment was by leave withdrawn.

His Excellency the President:—The Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud. Amendment No. 3.

Clause 7 (1) (e).—Substitute "before any public officer when exercising judicial or quasi-judicial functions under Bombay Land Revenue Code, Bombay Hereditary Offices Act, Khoti Settlement Act, Gujarat Talukdars Act, Bombay Town Planning Act, and in such proceedings under any Bombay Act as the local Government by notification in the Bombay Government Gazette may specify."

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud:—Your Excellency,—I am not aware of what assurance has been given to my honourable friend Mr. Desai by the Honourable Member in Charge, and I am, therefore, constrained to move this amendment.

His Excellency the President:—The honourable member's amendment is included to a certain extent in a wider amendment which was proposed to be moved by the Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai. Do I understand that the honourable member wishes to move the amendment standing in his name, or does he not?

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud:—Yes, sir. I find myself in some difficulty, because, I do not know what assurance has been given to the Honourable Mr. Desai and why he has withdrawn his wider amendment.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—Your Excellency,—I have had a private conversation with the Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai before the Council met this morning. What I said to him was that Government had accepted the principle of providing that the pleaders should have the right of appearing in such cases, and I said that they would not be niggardly in drawing the line between the cases in which pleaders would be allowed to appear and those in which they would not. Practically every revenue order is passed after an enquiry of some sort, but it would not be appropriate if in minor matters or matters of little importance, matters too in which the orders are not final, permission were given to pleaders to appear. I said that Government would not be niggardly, if the power was given to them under this bill, in defining the cases in which pleaders should have the right of appearing. I propose, after the Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud's amendment is disposed of, to move, with His Excellency's permission, a further amendment to alter the wording of the clause so as to make it include all enactments in force in the Bombay Presidency. I said before that orders have been issued allowing pleaders the right of appearing in cases coming under the Income Tax Act, which is a Government of India Act. The matter was discussed in the select committee and though we held that Government of India acts could not be dealt with in the bill, it was agreed that in appeal cases coming under the Indian Registration Act also pleaders should have the right of appearing. The assurance given by me was that Government would not be niggardly at all in notifying the cases in which pleaders might have the right of appearing.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud:—Your Excellency,—Government assured me on a previous occasion that pleaders would be allowed to appear in cases under two or three acts, for instance, the Income Tax Act, the Hereditary Offices Act and the

PLEADERS' BILL.

[27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud. The Advocate General; Sir G. Carmichael; the President; Mr. S. B. Upasani.]

Land Revenue Code, and that circulars would be issued to that effect. Now I want to include these acts particularly in this clause, for the reason that Government have pratically agreed to allow pleaders to appear in cases under these acts. But I find that in this clause there are only a few sections of those acts in which pleaders are allowed to appear. I, therefore, submit that before Government pursue the wider policy which they now say they will pursue, the bill should be amended. Government will have the power to widen the scope of this particular clause by the power which they have to include by special notification any cases which they may desire to include in this clause, and I, therefore, submit that these acts should be wholly included in this clause now. With these remarks I beg to move my amendment.

The Honourable the Advocate General (Sir T. J. Strangman):—Your Excellency—I am afraid I am to some extent responsible for this amendment, inasmuch as in a tentative redraft that I put before the select committee, I used these expressions "an officer exercising judicial or quasi-judicial functions". The idea was to simplify the bill so far as possible in a matter of drafting. But in select committee it was pointed out that the suggestion would go very much too far and it was realized by all of us that it would be quite sufficient for pleaders to have the right of appearance at the final stage. Now when it is remembered that there were pleaders of the standing of the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe, of the Honourable Mr. Belvi and of the Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai on the committee, I think, honourable members may rest satisfied that the interests both of the profession and of the public have been very amply safeguarded. I would also draw the honourable mover's attention to the last clause in the section which gives power to Government to add to the list of proceedings in which pleaders shall have the right of appearance.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—Your Excellency,—The Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud's main point, I think, is that the list of the sections which have been entered in the bill by the select committee is not sufficiently complete. But the select committee entered in clause 7 as many provisions as they could conveniently remember at the time, and if the bill is passed in this form, then Government will have all the acts reviewed in order that the notification under this bill defining the sections under which pleaders will have the right of appearance may be as complete as possible. The committee were pressed for time and it was not possible to ask all the departments to report as to which sections should be included in the scheme of clause 7 of the bill.

The amendment was then put to the vote and lost.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—Your Excellency,—With your Excellency's permission I beg to move that:—

> "In clause 7 (1), sub-clause (e), for the words 'Bombay Act' the words enactment in force in the Bombay Presidency' be substituted."

This will give Government power to include in any notification sections under the Government of India acts as well as under the local acts, while the clause as at present drafted refers entirely to the Bombay acts.

The amendment was put to the vote and carried.

Clause 7 as amended was then put to vote and carried.

His Excellency the President:—Amendment No. 5, clause 8, sub-clause (a). The Honourable Mr. Upasani.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—Your Excellency,—The amendment which I propose to move is to amend sub-clause (a) of clause 8 which runs as follows:—

> "in such civil court or courts as the District Judge may from time to time assign to him."

The amendment which I propose is as follows:—

> For clause 8 (a) substitute '(a) in any civil court in the district.'

Under the clause as it stands, a district pleader would be allowed to practise only in those courts which may be assigned to him by the District Judge. I propose that this discretion is both unnecessary and inconvenient and should be removed. In the first place, the very connotation of the words "district pleader" requires that a pleader who holds the sanad of a district pleader should have the right to practice throughout the district, i.e., in all the courts which are within the jurisdiction of the District Judge. In the case of the High Court pleader we allow him to practise in all the courts under the jurisdiction of the High Court and in the same way a district pleader should have the right to practise in all the courts in a district instead of being restricted to practise only in some particular court or courts at the District Judge's discretion. The reason is this. Generally, the choice of a particular district or court depends upon the convenience of the individual pleader. The District Judge will look at it only from the standpoint of the court's convenience and of the number of pleaders in a particular court. The pleader's own personal convenience will not be necessarily consulted, and therefore, the pleader who may have better prospects of getting practice in one taluka may be compelled to practise in another taluka where his prospects of practice may be not at all favourable. Well, that would defeat the object for which the pleaders enter the profession. And then, different District Judges adopt different policies in this respect. Some are rather lenient and indulgent and allow the pleaders permission to appear in most of the courts in the district. Others on the other hand are rather too strict in the matter and allow permission only with very great restriction. Therefore, this anomaly should not be allowed to continue. Another thing is that certain districts have got a smaller number of courts while other districts have a larger number of courts. The operation of this restriction, therefore, results in varying amount of inconveniences in different districts. So considering all the circumstances, I think it better to allow the small amendment which I propose. No such restriction is placed in the case of criminal courts; as regards these courts the district pleaders are allowed to appear in any criminal court in the district. In the same way they should also be allowed to appear in all the civil courts in the district. With these few remarks I beg to move my amendment.

PLEADERS' BILL.

[Mr. S. B. Upasani; Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas; Mr. G. K. Parekh; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe.] [27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

The Honourable Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas:—Your Excellency,—I think the amendment suggested is a reasonable one. As far as I remember, in Sind there is the practice of allowing a pleader who holds a district sanad to practise throughout the district, and I do not see that it will serve public interests to provide the restriction that is laid down in the clause. Besides, a pleader will be at the mercy of the District Judge, as he selects the places that he will assign to the pleader. I think it will be also in the interests of the public that a pleader should be allowed to practise in every part of the district. Then, people from outside the division to which otherwise the District Judge may allocate him would also have the liberty of securing his services. I do not think it will be a gain to anybody, or in the interests of anybody to have the restriction that is now provided in the clause. Subject to correction, I think it will be in consonance with the practice that is now prevailing.

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh:—Your Excellency,—I beg to support the amendment. The reason why pleaders are assigned to a particular court is that sometimes in some courts the business is so meagre and unremunerative that pleaders very often do not like to stay in the place where these courts are located. In the circumstances, it has been considered advisable that a certain number of pleaders should be assigned to such courts. But there is no reason why these pleaders should not be permitted to go to other courts in the same district, to conduct cases in which they are engaged, and I should, therefore, think that even though pleaders may be assigned for a particular court of a district, it would be reasonable and proper that they should be permitted to practise in all the courts of that district, and I, therefore, think that the amendment is a proper one.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Your Excellency,—I beg to support this amendment, and in doing so I will only give one illustration. A gentleman held a sanad for a district, and the District Judge had assigned to him all the courts of the district for his practice. Thereafter, he accepted a sub-judge's post, and rose to be a first class subordinate judge. When he retired, he felt himself sufficiently vigorous and consequently wanted to return to the bar, and the District Judge then presiding, instead of allowing him to practise as before at Ahmedabad, assigned the Dholka court to him to practise. Thereafter, the matter was put before the High Court, and the High Court seeing the absurdity of the thing intervened in his favour, and he was allowed to practise in all the courts of this district. What actually happens is that, where a District Judge for the time being takes a lenient view, he assigns all the courts of the district to the pleader. But his successor may not take the same view, and when a new pleader applies for a sanad, he assigns to him particular courts. From district to district the practice varies according to individual idiosyncrasy. Under these circumstances, it is much better that there should be a provision in the act which would leave no margin for differences of this nature.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe:—Your Excellency,—I wish to support this amendment. When I do so, I must explain my position, as I was a member of the select committee. I was very strong on the point that this clause should be deleted, but when I could not get the support of my colleagues—it might be due to my weakness—I yielded. It was argued that this provision has been in the old regulation, namely Regulation II of 1827, and the Honourable Member in Charge drew my attention to the fact that if

PLEADERS' BILL.

[27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe; Sir G. Carmichael.]

this provision was there for nearly 100 years, there was no necessity to change that provision by deleting this clause, and allowing every pleader the right to get a sanad issued to him for all the courts in a district.

But what I want to press upon the attention of the Council is that the state of affairs in the early twenties, even later on, was quite different from the conditions prevailing now. If we take the number of pleaders now practising in all the taluka courts, you will hardly find a taluka where the District Judge will have to send pleaders because a client suffers for want of pleaders. The old state of things does not now exist. If I am right in stating what I have now done, then it does not appear to me that there is any necessity for restricting the right of the pleader to practise in all the courts, when he pays Rs. 50 to get a sanad for the district. To take the case of those who get sanads issued for the High Court, they have to pay Rs. 500, and for that amount the High Court pleaders are allowed to practise all over the Presidency in any court whether it is a district court or a taluka court. A district pleader pays Rs. 50 for a sanad for the district, and having paid the amount, he does not get the right to practise in all the courts subordinate to the District Judge, but the District Judge is given the power to restrict his sanad to particular taluka courts, and it is to this provision that objection is taken. There are instances, no doubt, which show that this provision even though it was in existence under the Regulation of 1827, was not being uniformly exercised by all the District Judges. I know of a good many cases where this clause was never taken account of, and the district pleaders were allowed to practise in all the courts. On the contrary, there are some cases where pleaders are allowed to practise only in particular courts, and not in all the courts of the district. In a case where he pays the fee, where he has to build up a practice, and where he is the only judge as to the place where he can try, on account of various circumstances which he can best judge for himself, I do not see why the District Judge should come in and ask him to go to a particular court. It is, in a way, putting a restriction on his liberty of choosing the courts where he thinks he will prosper and thrive in practice. With these remarks, sir, I think the amendment is correct, and I support it.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—Your Excellency,—The Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe has complained of being overborne in the select committee. I have a representation to make on this point. He was not overborne by my personal influence nor by suasion of the Honourable the Advocate General but by a vital argument which he has not mentioned to-day. The overpowering argument was that pleaders are given a monopoly of certain business, and in the interests of the public that monopoly must be regulated. That was the one argument which carried weight in the discussion in the select committee. My honourable friend Mr. Parekh correctly expressed the point, but he proceeded to speak in support of the amendment. The Honourable Mr. Parekh pointed out, and it is a fact, that certain courts are unpopular. Pleaders do not wish, if possible, to be posted to these courts by the District Judge, and if they were perfectly free, they would not go there at all. The Honourable Mr. Parekh said that they ought to be free to go elsewhere. That would mean that they might nominally have their headquarters at the place assigned to them by the District Judge, but their practice would be elsewhere. In this country it happens frequently that a man's headquarters are no guide to his sphere of activity, and that would certainly happen in the case of pleaders, if the amendment were accepted. As I said, the pleaders have a monopoly of appearing in these civil cases, and it is in the interests of the public that that monopoly should be regulated so far as possible by providing that in these unpopular courts, as I may call them, a person who wishes to have his case represented by a pleader should be able to obtain the services of a pleader, without his having to engage a pleader from some other part of the district, which would mean considerable extra expense to a poor man. I think in passing this legislation, we have a right to assume that the disposition of men by the District Judge will be reasonable. The Honourable Rao Saheb Desai has given a case in which he thinks that the order of a certain District Judge was unreasonable. But he proceeded to tell us that it was immediately corrected by the High Court. The whole scheme of this bill is for work under the control and direction of the High Court. It is they who issue a sanad to the pleader, and the District Judge comes in under the High Court, and disposes of the pleaders to the best advantage of the public in a district. So much has been said about the convenience of the public, but not a word has been said about the fact that this amendment will not be to the convenience of the public in out of the way places, where only any necessity arises for the use of the powers which this bill proposes to give to the District Judge. I hope, for these reasons, that the amendment will not be accepted.

PLEADERS' BILL.

[Mr. S. B. Upasani.] [27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—May it please your Excellency,—I do not think the Honourable Member in Charge has been able to meet the arguments urged in support of my amendment by myself and by the honourable members who supported it. As the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe has pointed out, the conditions and the state of things which existed in 1827 when this provision was embodied in the regulation, do not exist now. Then it was difficult to secure pleaders for certain courts, and it was also difficult for pleaders to move from one place to another. So, there was some necessity to fix them to particular courts to provide the required number even for unpopular courts. But that state of things does no longer exist. Now facilities for communication have increased; it is also easier for a pleader to move from one place to another in any district. We have made provision for pleaders from outside districts being allowed to appear in other districts. If that is so, I do not see why a pleader from the same district should not be allowed to appear in all the courts of the district. My own experience is that this restriction causes serious inconvenience and acute hardship to not a few individual pleaders. And to get over the restriction they have to pay the required higher fee and get a High Court pleaders' sanad though they have to practise only in one district and not in all the district courts under the High Courts' jurisdiction. As a matter of fact, as I said before, the old state of things does not exist. In the old days, the district pleaders were men who had passed only the inferior tests. Now, most of them are law graduates. They pass the same test which qualifies them to practise even in the High Court. If they have passed the same test, why should there be any restriction imposed, requiring them to practise only in a limited number of courts. If you call them district pleaders allow them to practise in all the courts in the district. If you restrict them to only certain taluka courts why not call them taluka pleaders. To call them district pleaders is not consistent with the treatment that is meted out to them. I think, therefore, that it is necessary in the interests of the pleaders as well as of the litigants themselves that these restrictions should be removed, and I hope that the amendment which I propose will be accepted by the Council.

The amendment was then put to the vote and lost, 17 members voting for 24 against. The Council divided as follows:—

His Excellency the President:—The Council will now adjourn till 2-45 p. m. The Council then adjourned for lunch till 2-45 p. m.

After Lunch.

The Council re-assembled at 2-45 p.m.

His Excellency the President:—Clause 8. The Honourable Sir George Carmichael.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—Your Excellency,—Consequential on the amendment to clause 7 (1), (e) which I moved and which was passed by this Council I beg to move the following amendment to clause 8 (d) :—

For the words "Bombay Act" substitute the words "enactment in force in the Bombay Presidency."

The amendment was put to the vote and carried.

His Excellency the President:—Amendment No. 6. Clause 8, sub-clause (d). The Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud.

Clause 8 (d).—Substitute "before any public officer when exercising judicial or quasi-judicial functions under Bombay Land Revenue Code, Bombay Hereditary Offices Act, Khoti Settlement Act, Gujarat Talukdars Act, Bombay Town Planning Act, and in such proceedings under any Bombay Act as the local Government by notification in the Bombay Government Gazette may specify."

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud:—Your Excellency,—I beg leave to withdraw this amendment.

Amendment by leave withdrawn.

His Excellency the President:—Amendment No. 7. Clause 8, sub-clause (d). The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai.

For clause 8, sub-clause (d), substitute the following :—

"(d) Before any public officer when exercising any judicial or quasi-judicial function."

The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai:—Your Excellency, I beg leave to withdraw this amendment.

The amendment was by leave withdrawn.

Clause 8 as amended and clause 9 were then severally put to the vote and carried.

His Excellency the President—Amendment No. 8. Clause 10, sub-clause (3). The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai.

The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai:—Your Excellency,—With your permission, I want to propose a change in the amendment that stands in my name on the agenda. I beg your Excellency's leave to make this alteration in the amendment. And the altered amendment that I propose to move is as follows :—

Insert the words "section 144 or" before the words "152 of"

This present clause empowers a pleader to appear without a vakalatnama for application for review of judgment, and also for an application under section 152 which is to correct errors, accidental slips or to make an application for permission to appeal to His Majesty the King in Council. My amendment is that an application under section 144 of the Code of Civil Procedure should be allowed to be made by a pleader without a fresh vakalatnama. That section 144 relates to restitution. If a decree is passed against a person, suppose for Rs. 1,000 and he prefers an appeal and that decree is modified to the amount of Rs. 500 in execution of the original decree the whole amount of Rs. 1,000 is recovered by the decree-holder. Now by the modified decree in appeal the judgment debtor is entitled to recover Rs. 500 which has been paid in execution of the original decree. An application is made by the judgment-debtor for the recovery of this amount. My amendment says that there should be no fresh vakalatnama when an application is to be made for the restitution of the amount to which the judgment-debtor is entitled by the reversal or the modification of the decree in appeal. So my amendment is a most modest amendment which simply requires that there should be no fresh vakalatnama for the appearance of a pleader when he makes an application for the restitution of the amount when the decree has been reversed or varied in appeal. I submit that in the case of an application for the review of judgment or in the case of an application for correction of an error or a mistake, no fresh vakalatnama is needed. Under the existing law if a pleader conducts a case and if a decree is passed, and if the decree-holder wants to execute that decree, the execution can be proceeded with by the pleader appearing without a vakalatnama. In the same way I say that if an application is to be made for the restitution no fresh vakalatnama should be needed.

PLEADERS' BILL.

[Mr. P. A. Desai; Sir G. Carmichael; the President; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; the Advocate General.] [27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—Your Excellency,—The clause as it is worded might suffice the purpose for which the amendment is proposed but in order to make matters quite clear perhaps it would be better to accept the proposed amendment.

The amendment was then put to the vote and carried.

Clause 10 as amended was then put to the vote and carried.

His Excellency the President:—Amendment No. 9. Clause 11, sub-clause (1). The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—May it please your Excellency,—I beg to move that

In Clause 11, sub-clause (1), add the words "to act in a proceeding in court" after the word "pleader".

By the proposed addition, sub-clause (1) will read like this:—

"A party engaging a pleader to act in a proceeding in court shall pay him a retaining fee of an amount not less than one rupee."

In the absence of these words, it reads—

"A party engaging a pleader shall pay him a retaining fee of an amount not less than one rupee."

Now, as I stated in my remarks on the second reading of the bill, the existing provision about the retaining fee as laid down in Regulation II of 1827 only relates to engagement with reference to any proceeding in court, and I submit that there is no reason why that provision should be enlarged by making the levy of a retaining fee obligatory in all cases. As I submitted before, a pleader in the mofussil has often to work as an attorney in the matter of drawing up wills or drafting documents or giving opinions and in such other matters. Ordinarily an attorney is not under any obligation to charge any retaining fee and there is no reason why a pleader when acting as such should be compelled to charge any retaining fee. When a person comes to a pleader to have a will drafted, there is no likelihood of any litigation coming up and there is no likelihood of his changing sides. At that time he has to draft a will according to instructions. He is given certain instructions for drafting the will and he drafts it. At that time there is no likelihood of any litigation and consequently there is no necessity of charging a retaining fee. He charges his fee for the work and there is an end to the matter. For such work it would be very embarrassing to be compelled to charge a retaining fee, and then, whenever, after several years any litigation crops up out of a draft made or an opinion given he should be bound to appear in court and not to be engaged on the other side. At that time one hardly remembers anything. He naturally forgets whether he did anything of the sort. Such cases, therefore, ought to be excluded from the operation of the liability to charge a retaining fee. That is all that my amendment seeks, and when the attorneys are under no obligation, there is no reason why the pleaders should be compelled to charge a retaining fee. I hope the Honourable the Advocate General will be good enough to see his way to support my amendment.

The Honourable the Advocate General (Sir T. J. Strangman):—Your Excellency,—I am afraid I cannot support the Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai's amendment. The object of having a retaining fee is to leave no manner of doubt as to the establishment of the relationship of pleader and client, and that is equally important whether the business be litigious or non-litigious. It is to the interest of the profession as much as it is to the interest of the public to leave this clause as it is, for if any question arose as to whether that relationship subsisted or did not subsist, the production or non-production of the receipt would be practically conclusive on the point. Certainty in this respect is of the utmost importance to the profession themselves. If A comes to a pleader and says "Do not act for B against me", the pleader's retort would be "Produce my receipt". Now, so far as litigious business is concerned, clause 12 provides sufficient safeguards. Supposing that the litigant retains the whole of the local bar and refuses, let us say, to give instructions to any of them except to one; then under clause 12 any of the others could go to the judge and could get leave to appear against the litigant. With regard to non-litigious business, there is nothing whatever in the bill to prevent a pleader from acting for the other side. Clause 12 only applies to litigious business. In regard to non-litigious business the only thing that does prevent a pleader from acting for the other side in a matter in which he should not so act is this, that if he does so, he is guilty of professional misconduct and would be punishable accordingly. Really and truly, therefore, there is no force in the amendment which has been put forward. As I said before, the real point is that one wants to have certainty as to the establishment of the relationship between pleader and client. With regard to litigious business any hardship that there may be can always be removed by clause 12 of the bill. With regard to non-litigious business, there is nothing at all in the bill to prevent a pleader from acting for the opposite party: though if he acts wrongly for the opposite party, he is guilty of professional misconduct and could be punished accordingly.

PLEADERS' BILL.

[27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [The Advocate General; Mr. Rupchand Bilaram.]

The Honourable Mr. Rupchand Bilaram :—Your Excellency,—I rise to support the amendment. I cannnot agree with the Honourable the Advocate General in his remarks. Bombay Regulation II of 1827 provides for a pleader getting his retaining fee only in cases where a matter goes to court, and requires the pleader to abstain from all court proceedings until he has received his retaining fee. The present bill goes much further than Regulation II of 1827. It requires a pleader to get his retaining fee and insists upon his getting his retaining fee and giving a receipt even in matters which may not be taken to court at all, or may be taken to court after a very long interval. This innovation may cause several difficulties. For instance, instructions are sometimes received by pleaders from persons outside the Presidency to give a notice. Now, under clause 11 before the pleader can send the notice he must write to the client to send him the retaining fee. If there is a client in the Punjab who desires a notice to be sent and instructs a solicitor or a pleader in the Punjab to write to a pleader in any town in the Bombay Presidency, say in Ahmedabad, to give the notice, before the Ahmedabad pleader gives that notice he must ask for his retaining fee though he has got his instructions in writing, so that there may be no dispute that he was not duly instructed. He cannot send that notice unless he writes back and says "According to the Bombay act I cannot do it unless you send me a retaining fee and unless you have a receipt for it." By the time he receives his retaining fee, the object of the notice is frustrated. Now, it is not only that instructions are received from clients or pleaders from different places to act in British India but from outside India. I know a pleader having received instructions from South Africa through solicitors there to take certain measures in the nature of protecting a party residing in South Africa, and if the pleader had been required to write to South Africa to get his retaining fee, any amount of injury would have been done. The Honourable the Advocate General referred to a safeguard in clause 12. But sub-clause (b) of clause 12 provides that a pleader cannot refuse or omit to appear, plead or act for his client without the permission of the court. "Act for his client" does not necessarily mean in a proceeding, but in other matters as well. Now, there may be certain instances in which a pleader has received his retaining fee for doing work outside court, but when it comes to the question of doing the work, the pleader wants a higher fee for doing the work than what the client wishes to pay. The client can very well tell him that he cannot refuse to act because he has received his retaining fee. What is to happen then? Take again the case of an intended court litigation. A client retains two or three pleaders who he thinks might be engaged to appear against him and then neglects him. His opponent goes to one of the neglected pleaders to file a suit. The pleader cannot file a suit, because before he files the suit he has to obtain the permission of the court. How can he get the permission unless a suit is filed? If A, a pleader, is paid a retaining fee by X and is subsequently neglected altogether by X, still his opponent Y cannot engage A unless he engages another pleader B, files the suit and subsequently A applies to the court for permission of the court to appear against X. If you take into consideration the provisions of sub-clause (b) as also take into consideration the fact that a pleader is not required only to appear in judicial cases but also in quasi-judicial cases, where there is no court to grant the permission, clause 12 will work a very great hardship instead of being a protection. It is said that a pleader would be protected against his client by having written proof of his relationship recorded in the receipt. If the pleader wants to protect himself, he can protect himself by giving a receipt for his retaining fee in writing. But there should be no obligation imposed upon him as is intended to be imposed by sub-clause (2) of clause 11, except, as the amendment provides, to restrict clause 11 to only court proceedings. In the case of court proceedings that safeguard may be allowed. It is not only in the ordinary instance where a client requires any notice to be given that the difficulty of obtaining the retaining fee will be experienced. Before a director of a company can get his articles drawn up or amended by a pleader, he must pay his Re. 1 retaining fee before the work is done. I do not think there is any need for providing a clause like clause 11. It will be quite sufficient if clause 11 is restricted to ordinary court proceedings. With these words I support the amendment of my honourable friend Rao Saheb Desai.

PLEADERS' BILL.

[Mr. Rupchand Bilaram; Sir G. Carmichael; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai.] [27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—Your Excellency,—I do not see any difficulty in the case of a director of a company, as is felt by the Honourable Mr. Rupchand Bilaram, The director can go to a pleader and pay his 8 annas retaining fee, like a cultivator who goes and engages a pleader to help him about a suit about land. This is not an amendment which Government can accept. It is intended for the protection of the client of the pleader particularly, but it also protects the pleader at the same time.

If no retainer is paid, and the client wishes the pleader to appear in court, the client who may be an ignorant man, should have something to show that he has actually engaged the pleader. It is all very well for the Honourable Mr. Rupchand Bilaram to refer to the big merchants in Karachi who do not require this protection. That is quite true. But when you come to the case of the ignorant cultivator in the village, it is quite another matter. Moreover, this bill does not apply to Karachi at all; it applies to the Presidency excluding Sind and Aden.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Your Excellency,—I do perceive that so far as proceedings in a court and work of a litigious nature are concerned, the relationship between a pleader and a client must be established by the acceptance of a retaining fee, so that the pleader may be bound not to change sides. Upon that ground, there is no objection. But there are several kinds of work which are of a non-litigious nature, which are not likely to lead to any litigation, and which work may be done by a pleader. Under these circumstances there is no occasion for the establishment of relationship between a pleader and a client, and, as the Honourable the Advocate General says, such cases would not fall within the purview of the clause. If that is so, where is the use to let the language of the clause remain mystic, as it stands at present, and where is the objection to making the language clear, by the insertion of the words which I have proposed? To act in proceedings in a court would include all engagements of a litigious nature, and the relationship will be established in all those cases between a pleader and a client, where it is necessary for the protection of the client. But where there is no reason to protect, where it is only a case of drafting of articles or memorandum of association, or anything of that sort, is there any need to expect any litigation thereafter? There may be or there may not be future litigation, and under such circumstances why should there be the necessity to charge a retaining fee and a liability to be bound for all time because you have drafted a will, because you have drafted a conveyance, or because you have drafted some articles of association. That is what appears to me to be unreasonable, and this class of cases ought to be excepted from the clause. I do not think, ordinarily, in a court of law, when an interpretation of a section is in question, debates in Council or proceedings in the select committee, and things of that sort, are taken into consideration, but the actual words as they stand are looked at. When, so far, the Honourable Member in Charge as well as the Honourable the Advocate General are agreed that the clause does not apply to work of a non-litigious nature, then where is the objection to the Council accepting the amendment? It is not my object to leave any loophole for the profession to get out of the relationship of a pleader and a client in cases where it is necessary that such a relationship should exist. Sometimes, jocularly, an anecdote of a counsel is related where a counsel was asked to give an opinion, and he did so. Then he appeared on the other side, and when the client went to him and said "You have given me an opinion, and it is not right that you should appear on the other side," the counsel turned round and said, "Show me your name in my fee-book." That is the sort of answer the Honourable the Advocate General has given to my argument. But that rather is a way how to put off the provision of an act, or to evade it. I rather want that there should be no evasion, and that all cases of conscience ought to be sufficiently provided for by making matters clearer. I, therefore, request the Council to accept my amendment because it does not relax the rigour of the liability of relationship between a pleader and a client, but makes the matter clearer by compelling a pleader to insist upon the payment of a retaining fee solely for work in court, and not for work which he does as an attorney.

PLEADERS' BILL.

[27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; the President; Mr. P. A. Desai; Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna; Sir G. Carmichael.]

The amendment was put to the vote and lost.

His Excellency the President :—Amendment No. 10. Clause 11, sub-clause (2). The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai.

The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai:—May it please your Excellency,—The amendment which I propose to move is as follows :—

"In clause 11, sub-clause (2), substitute 'will not be bound to perform' for the words 'shall not perform'."

The present sub-clause (2) makes it a condition precedent before any pleader accepts any work, that he should have been paid a retaining fee. I think this clause is mainly in the interests of the profession of pleaders. If it is so, then I think that it should be left to the option of the pleader to perform any services or not. The present clause prohibits a pleader, unless he gets a retaining fee, from rendering any services to a client.

Now, I will give you a practical instance. An old client comes to me and wants to engage me. The retaining fee is fixed at Rs. 30. The poor man has got only Rs. 10 with him. He pays that amount to me, and I give him a receipt. He promises to give the remaining amount in eight days, and asks me to appear and render him services. Even though he is my old client, and even though I have got full confidence in him and I believe that he will pay the balance of Rs. 20 later on, the present clause as it stands prohibits me from working for him. Is this not absurd? I have got full confidence in him when he says "This is all the amount that I can pay at present; I am a poor cultivator; I will pay the balance in a few days," and I give him a receipt. The amount fixed is Rs. 30; he pays Rs. 10 and promises to pay the remainder in eight days. The present clause says that unless I am fully paid I cannot work for him. Is this not absurd? So, I say, instead of having the wording as "shall not perform any services" at least the option should be given to the pleader. If I have got full confidence in him, if I think he will pay me later on, and I am inclined to render services to him, I must be allowed to do so, and this prohibition should be removed; otherwise the position will be absurd. With these few words, I hope that the amendment will be accepted by the Council.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna:—Your Excellency,—I think that the amendment of the Honourable Mr. Desai is unnecessary, for the reason that he mixes up his retaining fee with the full fee he may charge. If he has entire confidence in his client as he says, he can accept Rs. 10 as the retaining fee and trust him for the balance, and receive it later on. In the particular case that he has quoted, I do not think there is anything in the bill which will prevent him from accepting Rs. 10, and trust the client for the balance.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—Your Excellency,—I think that if the amendment proposed by the Honourable Mr. Desai is accepted, it will nullify the clause altogether. It would constitute no agreement, and would not provide for that proof of the existence of the relationship between a pleader and a client which we wish to provide. I hope the Council will reject the amendment.

The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai:—Your Excellency,—The bill provides that one rupee shall be the minimum fee. But if there is nothing in this law to prevent me from fixing the amount at more than one rupee, and if I fix it at Rs. 30, and part of the money is paid to me and I pass a receipt for the amount, and the remaining part is promised to be paid later on, I think that this clause as it stands will come in my way, even though I may be inclined to render services to my old client. I, therefore, submit that the amendment which I propose is reasonable, and should be accepted by the Council.

The amendment was put to the vote and lost.

His Excellency the President:—Amendment No. 11. Clause 11, sub-clause (2). The Honourable Rao Saheb Desai.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Your Excellency,—The amendment which I propose is as follows :—

"In clause 11, sub-clause (2), add at the end the words 'unless the services are performed gratis'."

PLEADERS' BILL.

[Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; Mr. R. P. Paranjpye; Sir G. Carmichael; the President; Mr. S. B. Upasani.] [27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

The addition of these words is not likely to make that sub-clause nugatory. It only provides for cases where services are performed by a pleader gratis, from social or charitable considerations. A pleader goes to meet a friend, and the friend puts into his hand, during his conversation, a receipt or a document, and asks him whether it is all right. Now, according to this clause, he cannot look at it, unless the retaining fee is paid down, and if he looks at it and gives an opinion, then he evades the law. Is it proper to prevent such work being done, which would be performed out of friendship or from other considerations? I think the profession of law had very honourable traditions in its early days in England. But thereafter, it has degenerated, and the counsel who performed their work, gave advice, and acted for a client without fees, or only accepted an honorarium, have fallen on days when without insisting upon prepayment of fees they will never act for anybody. These are the times on which we have fallen, but at least I do not want the pleader class to fall into such mercenary ways. Therefore, I submit, sir, that this amendment is one which ought to be accepted, because, otherwise you will only find that some people would evade it, and the clause as it stands would only embarrass a conscientious man. I see no reason whatever why Government should not accept the amendment.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye :—Your Excellency,—I wish to support this amendment of the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai, because, although several of us who are not pleaders, occasionally consider the pleader class as a parasitic class, or use some such hard words, occasionally at least there are pleaders who are prepared to work gratis for the public benefit. I know of cases where men who are connected with public charitable institutions have been taking the help of pleaders in several local proceedings which are occasionally forced upon them. These pleaders often do this work from charitable motives, and I think it is rather hard upon them to stop them from acting from philanthropic motives and make them accept payment for the purpose. I do not think any hardship will be caused if the clause is amended as my honourable friend suggests, and I hope that the Council will accept the amendment.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael: —I do not think this is an amendment which this Council should accept. The Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai said with regard to his previous amendment that it would not make any loophole in the arrangement proposed by the bill. Surely this one would make a very serious loophole, because it would be open later on to a pleader to say "I did not accept the brief and therefore I received no fee." The retaining fee which is fixed by the bill is put at a very low figure indeed. It is certainly within the competence of most people who have to consult pleaders to pay one rupee, and there is nothing to prevent a pleader from accepting it from his friend client. What the select committee thought necessary was to provide some certainty to indicate that the engagement between the client and the pleader had actually taken place. It is possible, I think, even amongst lawyers, for disagreement to take place. A friend client to-day may be, I will not say an enemy the next day, but unfriendly. In a case of that kind it would be hard on him to prove that the engagement had taken place between him and his pleader. With these remarks I oppose the amendment moved by the Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai.

The amendment was put to the vote and lost.

Clause 11 was put to the vote and carried.

His Excellency the President :—Amendment No. 12. Clause 12, sub-clause (b). The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—Your Excellency,—My amendment reads:—

"In clause 12 (b) retain 'without the permission of the court'."

These words have been put in the first part of the main clause; and if they be taken to govern both the sub-paragraphs, then there will be no necessity for the amendment I propose.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael :—Your Excellency,—May I point out that the words do govern both the sub-paragraphs?

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani: —That should have been made clear. However, I do not press the amendment.

The amendment was by leave withdrawn.

His Excellency the President: —Amendment No. 13. Clause 12, sub-clause (b). The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai.

PLEADERS' BILL.

[27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. P. A. Desai; Sir G. Carmichael; the President.]

"In clause 12, sub-clause (b), insert the word 'wilfully' before the word 'omit'."

The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai: —May it please your Excellency,—The amendment which I propose is to insert the word "wilfully" before the word "omit," in sub-clause (b) of clause 12. Clause 12 reads thus :—

"No pleader after accepting a retaining fee shall without the permission of the Court,

(a) appear, plead or act, or agree so to do, on behalf of any other party whose interest in the case is adverse to that of his client, or

(b) refuse or omit to appear, plead or act for his client."

I only want to insert the word "wilfully" before "omit to appear" in sub-clause (b). Suppose a pleader going to the court gets a nasty accident on the way; he does not appear there in time. If the words "omit to appear" stand as they are without this word "wilfully," then the omission to appear might be considered as impropriety on the part of the pleader. Therefore, what I say is that the word "wilfully" should be put in. If he wilfully omits to appear before the court, then, of course, the pleader is guilty of misconduct. I think this amendment is very simple, and there would be no difficulty for the Honourable Member in Charge to accept it.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—May it please your Excellency,—I think there is the greatest difficulty on my part in accepting this amendment, because it is an unnecessary one. The honourable member seems to be struggling to get more and more elbow-room for pleaders without having regard to the interests of clients. If the word proposed is inserted, it would be possible for a pleader to say that the court had no right to take him to task or to obtain its permission for not appearing. The court is bound to protect the client, and it is much better to leave the clause as it is approved by the select committee, without any addition as proposed by the Honourable Mr. Desai. If the addition is made, it would be assumed by pleaders that they have permission for any reason to refuse to appear in a case.

The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai:—Your Excellency,—I have taken into consideration both the interests of the client as well as the interests of the pleader, and I have given the instance of a pleader who, on his way to the court, gets a nasty accident. He has no time to entrust his business to another pleader, because there is no other pleader near by. Under these circumstances, if the clause stands as it is, there would be misconduct on the part of the pleader, because he omits to appear. Therefore, I submit the word "wilfully" is quite necessary.

The amendment was put to the vote and lost.

Clause 12 was put to the vote and carried.

His Excellency the President:—Amendment No. 14. Clause 13. The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—Your Excellency,—I beg to move that :—

"In clause 13 for the number '29 (A)' substitute the number '30'."

That is a correction of a clerical error.

The amendment was put to the vote and carried.

Clause 13 as amended was put to the vote and carried.

Clauses 14 to 20 were then severally put to the vote and carried.

His Excellency the President:—Amendment No. 15. Clause 21. The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael: —May it please your Excellency,—I beg to move that :—

"In clause 21 add the words 'unless the court otherwise directs'."

This is a small amendment which may be required if any exceptional case arises.

The amendment was put to the vote and carried.

Clause 21 as amended and clauses 22 to 24 were then severally put to the vote and carried.

His Excellency the President:—Amendment No. 16. Clause 25. The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani.

PLEADERS' BILL.

[Mr. S. B. Upasani; the Advocate General; Sir G. Carmichael.] [27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—The amendment which I propose to move is as follows:—

"In clause 25 omit 'on reasonable cause' and substitute 'who has been guilty of wilful neglect of duty or misconduct in his professional capacity'."

The clause as it stood was as follows:—

"On the application of the Government Pleader in the High Court, or on a report from a District Court or Court of Session, or from the Chief Judge of the Court of Small Causes of Bombay, or from the Chief Presidency Magistrate for Bombay, or otherwise, the High Court may suspend or remove from practice, or may fine or reprimand, a pleader who has been guilty of neglect of duty or of a violation of any of the provisions of this Act or of any other improper conduct, whether in his professional character or otherwise."

These words from "Pleader" to "otherwise" in the last three lines have been removed by the select committee, and instead of them the words "on reasonable cause" have been substituted. It appears from this that the words as they stood originally did not meet with the full approval of the select committee owing, I believe, to their making a pleader liable even for improper conduct otherwise than in his professional capacity. I think instead of leaving the matter still doubtful, it should be made clear that the liability to punishment under the section should be limited to misconduct or failure in duty only in his professional capacity. For removal or suspension by the High Court of a pleader convicted of a criminal offence provision is already made in clause 24. Clause 25 provides for punishment for minor misconduct, and that misconduct should, I think, so far as possible, be limited to his professional duties alone. His conduct in any other matter in his private capacity should not be allowed to be taken into consideration in judging of his liability under this section. I think it is in the interests of the pleader class that no uncertainty should attach to this section. Therefore, I propose that we should substitute for the words "on reasonable cause," the words suggested in my amendment, namely, "who has been guilty of wilful neglect of duty or misconduct in his professional capacity."

The Honourable the Advocate General (Sir T. J. Strangman):—Your Excellency,—The object of this bill has been among other things to put district pleaders on the same footing as High Court vakils so far as might be. With that end in view the form of sanad for district pleaders has been changed to bring it in substantial accordance with the form of sanad for High Court vakils. Further as bearing to some extent on this point the power of punishment of both High Court vakils and district pleaders has been confined to the High Court. With regard to High Court vakils the High Court has power under clause 10 of the Letters Patent to remove or suspend on reasonable cause and obviously the corresponding power which is to be exercised by the High Court in regard to district pleaders should be expressed in precisely the same terms.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—Your Excellency,—On account of the beneficial rain which was falling, I had very great difficulty in hearing the Honourable Mr. Upasani. But there is one remark which he made which struck me as peculiar when applied to pleaders. The honourable member said that the pleaders should be given some certainty as to what constitutes misconduct on their part. I should have thought their own consciences and instinct for the right would be a sufficient guarantee in the matter. I am sure in 99 cases out of 100 this will be so. The select committee adopted a simple form because they thought it quite unnecessary to go into any details. The High Court may be trusted to see that misconduct of which notice is taken by them is really serious misconduct. The High Court has already decided two or three cases. I hope there will not be any more such cases. But these cases will afford sufficient guidance for the pleaders for whom the Honourable Mr. Upasani seeks more light.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—Your Excellency,—I admit that in the form which has been adopted for the district pleaders' sanad the words "reasonable cause" have been substituted. But my amendment does not propose any change in the form of the sanad. What I propose is to indicate to the High Court that reasonable cause for punishment under the section is meant to refer only to misconduct or failure of duty in professional capacity alone. The amendment does not imply any want of confidence in the High Court, but only makes clear the intention of the legislature that it is only misconduct in professional capacity that is meant to make a pleader liable to punishment under the section. There is no doubt that the High Court is capable of exercising its discretion reasonably but as the professional class consists of a large number of educated

PLEADERS' BILL.

[27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. S. B. Upasani; the President; Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; Sir G. Carmichael.]

gentlemen, I do not think it proper that any provision of law which makes them liable to punishment should be left in uncertainty even though the punishment may have to be administered at the discretion of the High Court. The act must make it clear whether the High Court should have a hold on the conduct of these gentlemen even in matters which do not relate to their profession. If it is meant that they are to be suspended or punished only for misconduct which may appertain to their professional business, then it is necessary to have it made clear as suggested in my amendment so that their conduct outside their professional matters may not be held to bring them under the section in any case even if their conduct be not approved by the High Court. I gather that the clause as originally worded did not meet with the approval of the select committee, and I, therefore, propose that in the interests of this large number of professional gentlemen their liability should be made as clear and definite as possible by adopting the amendment proposed by me.

The amendment was then put to the vote and lost.

Clauses 25 to 29 were then severally put to vote and carried.

His Excellency the President:—The Honourable Mr. Sethna.

Omit clause 30 and re-number the subsequent clauses.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna:—Your Excellency,—I was a non-legal member on the select committee, and there were only one or two other non-lawyers. I suppose, we were put there to act as a brake against the legal members who were in strong force and could look after the interests of the profession. We were there, I take it, to look after the interest of the general public. Fortunately for them, the legal element on the committee had the entire sympathy of the Honourable the Advocate General who favoured almost all the amendments which the legal members themselves brought, or which were urged in the different representations from the different bar associations in the Presidency. Clause 30 of the bill was also approved by the Honourable the Advocate General and in support of it he quoted the analogy of Bombay attorneys who are allowed a lien in respect of their costs on the documents which their clients leave with them. That appealed to us at the time and we accorded our support. In view of the remarks which fell from the Honourable Member in Charge this morning, namely, that the Government of India do not view the clause favourably, on maturer consideration, I think, perhaps that nothing will be lost if we drop this clause 30.

The bill is introduced as much in the interests of the pleaders of Bombay city as pleaders in the Presidency. The number of pleaders in the Presidency greatly outnumbers the pleaders in the Bombay city, and we have got to consider the class of clients in the mofussil with whom the pleaders in the mofussil have to deal, and who in the majority of cases are illiterate. The power under this clause may prove a very formidable weapon in the hands of some unscrupulous pleaders in the mofussil. That being so, I propose that this clause should be deleted as such deletion will be no hardship to pleaders in the mofussil. Further, pleaders in Bombay city are not given at the present moment any lien on the documents. It is only the attorneys that are given this lien. As the pleaders are sufficiently safeguarded by clause 29 in regard to their costs being allowed to be taxed, and to recover such taxed costs without having to go through the process of filing a suit, I think, the Council will do well in the interests of the general public to delete clause 30.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Your Excellency,—If the amendment of the Honourable Mr. Sethna is accepted what will become of all the amendments we have hitherto made by the insertion of clause 30 in the previous clauses?

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—If this amendment is accepted by the Council we shall have to make consequential amendments in some of the clauses that are passed.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Your Excellency,—I oppose this amendment. In the select committee it was the Honourable the Advocate General who was good enough to concede this point. Ordinarily a pleader is considered to have a lien on the papers of his client for the payment of the amount either of costs or of anything else due to him, and nowadays whether it be in Bombay or whether it be on the countryside the clients going to the pleaders are in a majority of cases such as would on occasions overreach the pleader himself, so that I do not think any miscarriage or mishap is likely to happen by giving pleaders a lien for the taxed costs on the documents which come into their possession for which the pleaders would give receipts, and which are duly returned to him after the amount is paid. And even if you give a pleader a lien on any money or moveable property, that would not jeopardize the interests of the client, because, in execution proceedings when anything is taken by the pleader on behalf of his client he gives a receipt in court and his receipt is there. And if he asks for more than is due to him the client can certainly sue him and get his money back. There is no risk. I fail to see why a pleader who has been working for a client who has not made any prepayment for actual costs should not be allowed to have his lien on the documents in his possession and on the money which may come into his possession in execution proceedings. It is a salutary provision which the attorneys do enjoy, and I submit that the Honourable the Advocate General saw no objection to it in the select committee. It was rather he who willingly conceded it, and I do not see any reason why we should withdraw that provision now.

PLEADERS' BILL.

[Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe; Mr. P. A. Desai; Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud.] [27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

The Honourable Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe:—Your Excellency,—I oppose this amendment. The ground put forward by the mover of the amendment was that no doubt the concession is given to the attorneys in Bombay, but that it would be unsafe to extend it in the case of pleaders in the mofussil, because, the clients in the mofussil are illiterate and that, therefore, this right would be exercised by the pleaders to the prejudice of the clients. If that is the only ground then the underlying assumption of this amendment is that you do not trust pleaders in the mofussil as much as you do the attorneys.

The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai:—Hear, hear.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe:—I am not going to accept that view. Besides it must be fairly conceded that this did not occur to us. This was a special privilege which was extended to us by the Honourable the Advocate General after giving due consideration to the status of pleaders in the mofussil; if this right was conceded on such deliberate consideration to us, mofussil pleaders, unanimously by the select committee then it would not be well to take away that right now.

Besides what is the harm which is going to be done to the clients? In case a pleader exercises his right of lien and keeps the papers and the money recovered by him, it is not the case that the client is left without any remedy. He can go to a court of law and question the right of the pleader to retain the documents and retain the money which was recovered by him in execution proceedings. If he succeeds he gets all the costs from the pleader, and I am quite sure the pleaders will not like to place themselves in such a predicament. On these grounds, I do not think that this amendment is one which this Council should accept.

The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai:—Your Excellency,—I rise to oppose the amendment which has been proposed by the Honourable Mr. Sethna. It appears from the remarks made by him that he has no confidence in the pleaders in the mofussil. This right which is conferred by the present clause 30 has been enjoyed by Bombay attorneys for a century, and I cannot understand why the same privilege should not be extended to the pleaders. The matter, as we have heard from the remarks made by the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe, was discussed in the select committee, where the Honourable the Advocate General was present to safeguard the interests of Government, of the public and also of the pleaders. If after mature consideration it was thought that this provision was reasonable, I cannot understand how all of a sudden it comes in the mind of the honourable member who moves this amendment to get it deleted. I say, what proof is there to say that the pleaders in the mofussil will not safeguard the interests of the clients? Is there any complaint made? And if the attorneys are enjoying that privilege for several years, why should that privilege not be extended to pleaders in the mofussil? And what does this privilege mean? It simply means that if money is really due to a pleader, he has a lien on the papers which are in his hands, and also if there is any movable property recovered in the execution of a decree, then the pleader has his lien on that property. Suppose there is disagreement between the pleader and the client. The pleader says Rs. 500 is due to him, and the client says Rs. 5 is only due to him. It is open to the client to go to the civil court and get his money and papers. But why should the pleader when he has got the papers and money with him be compelled to go to a civil court and saddle the costs on the client? If you make it obligatory on the pleader to go to a civil court, it means that if he is successful, the costs of such suit would be saddled on the client. I, therefore, submit that as no client has come to this Council to make a complaint in this matter, and as the matter has been fully considered in the select committee by the Honourable the Advocate General and other members, this amendment is most unreasonable, and I, therefore, strongly oppose it.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud:—Your Excellency,—I beg to oppose the amendment proposed by my honourable friend Mr. Sethna. I wonder where he got his inspiration from to move this amendment. He was a member of the select committee, where the matter was fully discussed by the Honourable the Advocate General and other members, and I do not know why he rises now to move this amendment. I think the Honourable Mr. Sethna knows that even a trader has a lien on the property of his customer. Why should not a pleader be allowed to have a lien on the documents for which he has passed a receipt? If inadvertently he has passed no receipt, he will have no lien, but for documents for which a pleader has passed a receipt, of which the client is aware, I do not see why he should not have a lien. It is a practice to do it; it is even done now with the consent of the client. The pleaders ought to have a lien on the moneys they recover and they ought not to be asked to hand over all the moneys back to the client before they recover their own taxed costs. I submit, therefore, that the amendment moved is not of a character which, so late in the day, should be accepted by this Council.

PLEADERS' BILL.

[27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud; the Advocate General; Sir G. Carmichael; Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna.]

The Honourable the Advocate General (Sir T. J. Strangman):—Your Excellency,—I confess I can see no ground whatever for the Honourable Mr. Sethna's apprehensions. Now, the suggestion is, as I understand it, that if this clause stands, pleaders in the districts may be guilty of extortion. In the first place, I refuse to believe that pleaders in the districts belong to a class which is likely to commit extortion. But apart from that, I cannot see, even assuming a pleader did want to extort, how this clause would assist him to do so. The provisions of this clause do not enable him to retain documents or to retain moneys for anything which he may say is due. They merely enable him to retain documents or moneys in respect of costs which have been or which are capable of being taxed and to the extent only of those costs as taxed. Therefore, so far as I can see, there is no ground whatever for assuming that this clause will give rise to extortion. For the Honourable Mr. Sethna's information I should just like to point this out that, so far as sub-clause (b) is concerned, the pleaders will get every right which an attorney now gets. So far as sub-clause (a) is concerned, the pleader will not get quite what the attorney gets in two respects. In the first place, the pleader's lien will be confined to documents which have come into his possession in connection with the matter to which the bill relates, whereas in the case of an attorney he has a general lien in regard to all documents come into his possession, no matter what the proceedings or matter may be to which they relate. And in the second place the lien will be confined to documents for which the pleader has given a receipt. In these circumstances, it appears to me that there is an ample safeguard for the client and at the same time a very fair provision in favour of the pleader.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—Your Excellency,—I am very grateful to the Honourable Mr. Sethna for having moved this amendment which has led to a very interesting discussion in this Council. The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai, I think it was, said that no oppressed client had come to seek relief at the hands of this Council. It was quite open to the Honourable Mr. Sethna to move his amendment if he felt that there was any likelihood of a client being oppressed hereafter. The Honourable Mr. Sethna has taken up the case of the client and he has stated it very clearly. From the discussion, however, which has taken place in this Council it is quite clear that there is no great danger of the client suffering any injustice in this matter. There is one reason why I am in favour of this particular provision, and that is that I hope it will help indirectly the establishment of businesslike relations between the client and the pleader in the matter of documents. The lien is given only for documents for which the pleader has given a receipt, that is, the more important of them. I was very strongly in favour in the select committee of providing for a grant of receipt for all documents, but it was represented to me that that would be an impossibility because it would involve the pleader in ordinarily good practice keeping a staff of clerks to list and give receipts for the numerous documents received by him. So the compulsory giving of a receipt was abandoned and instead it was made optional, but in this matter of a lien on the documents the provision has been so devised that it will encourage the granting of receipt for important documents. Government wish to leave this matter entirely to the Council.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna:—Your Excellency,—I have been taken to task by some of my honourable friends for moving this amendment although the matter was considered in the select committee and although the provision was favoured by the Honourable the Advocate General. I think, I said, sir, that we owe this provision to the Honourable the Advocate General. On a fuller consideration and considering the interests of the clients I am now of opinion that this clause will place too great a power in the hands of the pleaders. The Honourable the Advocate General, as I understood him to say just now, observed that the pleader will only have a lien on the documents in so far as the amount of the taxed costs is concerned. But, sir, whether in practice this will be so or go much further, as I fear it will, remains to be seen. I know of a recent case in this very city where an honourable member of this Council has had frequently to run up from Bombay just because his case was postponed time after time for the convenience of the pleaders on either side and to the great inconvenience and annoyance of the party. Now it may happen that when the costs are taxed and the taxing master has not awarded costs for each postponement, the pleader may harass the party and not part with the documents until he has got from the party what extra amount the court has not awarded. I contend, sir, that the pleader has got all that he wants by clause 29. Clause 29 gives him the privilege of having his costs taxed. Once the costs are taxed, he can obtain a certificate to that effect and as soon as he presents the certificate, the client is bound to pay, whether the documents are with him or with the pleader. In view of this, the clause under consideration namely, clause 30, might well be deleted.

PLEADERS' BILL.

[Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna.] [27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

The amendment was then put to the vote and lost, 15 members voting for and 21 against. The Council divided as follows:—

PLEADERS' BILL.

[27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [The President; Mr. B. S. Kamat; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah.]

His Excellency the President:—Amendment No. 17, Schedule III. The Honourable Mr. Kamat.

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat:—Your Excellency,—The amendment which I propose to move is as follows:—

In Schedule III, Rules for computing the pleader's fee, at the end of Rule 1 (c) after the words 'on the remainder at ½ per cent.' add the following:—'Provided that in no case shall the fee exceed Rs. 750, irrespective of the amount or value of the subject matter in dispute in any proceeding'.

We have had so far various amendments in the morning, mostly from my lawyer friends. In fact, we have had a lawyers' day. I venture, in my amendment, to place before the Council a small suggestion in the interests of the litigants, and I trust my amiable friends in the Council belonging to the lawyers' profession will look on my amendment, not from the point of view of rupees, annas, and pies, but from the broader point of view, namely, what the reasonable cost of litigation should be to the general public.

The amendment which I place before the Council is with respect to schedule III, namely, the scale of fees to be paid to the pleaders as against the clients. The schedule lays down a certain graduated scale, commencing from Rs. 2,000 as the subject matter in dispute up to Rs. 20,000, and beyond Rs. 20,000 the scale provides that the pleader's fees shall be computed at ½ per cent. My amendment is that there should be a limit placed on the lawyer's fees, and that limit I propose as Rs. 750, which is the equivalent of what the fees would be as leviable on a suit the subject matter in dispute of which may be Rs. 1,00,000 or so. The justification for this suggestion, sir, is that in various suits where the subject matter in dispute is very heavy, say Rs. 4,00,000 or more, the trouble to the pleader and the exertions which he has to make either in drafting a plaint or in arguing the issues before the court, are not in direct ratio to the value of the suit. In fact, in various cases, I have noticed that in suits say for Rs. 5,00,000 the issues are very simple. The trouble that the pleader has in conducting the case is very little, and I do not think it stands to reason that the computation of fees should proceed at the rate of ½ per cent. beyond Rs. 20,000 ad infinitum. It is desirable, in my opinion, in the interests of litigants, to place a maximum limit somewhere, and that, I suggest, as Rs. 750, and I trust that the Council will accept this suggestion.

The hardship to the client does not end here. In execution proceedings, according to rule No. 4, the fees to be paid are to be one-fourth of the original fees, so that, if in the first instance the original fees are very heavy, then the client has to pay also very heavy fees, namely, one-fourth of the original fees, even in execution proceedings; so that, there is a double hardship entailed upon the party, especially if the case is lost by the party and costs are awarded to the adversary. I, therefore, think that it is desirable to place a limit somewhere, and I suggest that that limit should be Rs. 750 as the maximum fee which the pleader can charge against a client, whatever the value of the subject matter of the suit may be above Rs. 20,000.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Your Excellency,—I oppose this amendment, and for very good reasons. The Honourable Mr. Kamat says that he has moved this amendment in the interest of litigants. But there are litigants and litigants. Of course litigants of the cultivating and poorer classes will not be saved by his amendment. If he had moved an amendment to keep the scale as it has been up to now, then they would have had some benefit, as they would have had to pay less as taxed costs. But it is the capitalist litigant, the rich litigant, in whose favour he has moved this amendment, and I see no reason why such a personage should have any pity from this Council. There will hardly be one case in a hundred where cultivators and other people from the countryside will have to pay a fee of Rs. 750. But big Government contractors or big merchants and other rich people who go in for litigation are the people in whose interests this amendment is brought forward, and as I do not think that it is in the interests of the ryot, there is no reason why the Council should accept the amendment.

The Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah:—Your Excellency,—Since this afternoon, pleaders have been hard hit, and on the top of it, here is an amendment of my honourable friend Mr. Kamat which prescribes a maximum for their fees. I do not wish to take much time of the Council. My friend the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai has already replied to the arguments which he has put forward. But I object to this amendment on principle. This amendment, if it is accepted, will interfere with the rights of the pleaders. Pleaders openly bargain with a client, whether he be rich or poor. Why should a maximum be prescribed for them. The question of fees is a matter for the client to decide. If he does not want to pay higher fees, he may not engage that pleader. Therefore, I submit that on principle this amendment will interfere with the rights of pleaders. I therefore oppose the amendment.

PLEADERS' BILL.

[Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah; Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe; Sir G. Carmichael; Mr. B. S. Kamat; the President; Mr. S. B. Upasani.] [27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

The Honourable Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe:—Your Excellency,—I oppose this amendment on a very different ground. Under clause 17, which was just passed, a pleader has the right to settle any fees by private agreement. If that is so, how is the Honourable Mr. Kamat going to benefit the clients for whose benefit he has brought forward this amendment. Supposing the amendment is carried, and the maximum is fixed at Rs. 750, there is nothing in the act itself to come in the way of a pleader charging fees in excess of Rs. 750, by entering into an agreement with his client under clause 17. For these reasons, and for the reasons given by my honourable friend Rao Saheb Harilal Desai, I oppose this amendment.

There is one more point. The Honourable Mr. Kamat calculates the pleader's labours in rupees, annas and pies. But he forgets that in cases of injunctions and other cases of easement where the costs are little, a pleader has to do more work for the money he gets from the client, and it is not to every individual case that one has to look and see whether a pleader gets the exact return for the labour he bestows on the case in hand. If he gains in one, he loses in another, and it is on that ground that no maximum has been fixed by the select committee. There was no maximum even in the old regulation. On these grounds I oppose the amendment.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—Your Excellency,—Personally, I am not, and I think Government are also not, in favour of attempting to regulate profiteering by the pleaders by legislation in the way in which the Honourable Mr. Kamat recommends. After the treatment which this amendment has received at the hands of honourable members, particularly the knock-out blow given by the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe, I do not think I need say much in opposing the Honourable Mr. Kamat's amendment. It seems to me that what the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe has pointed out, namely, the passing of clause 17 of the bill, makes any proposal regulating the limit of the amount of pleaders' fees under this schedule quite impracticable.

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat:—Your Excellency,—The very fact that all the three honourable members who opposed my amendment belong to the legal profession, is a sufficient answer to the reasonableness of my amendment. I am carrying the principle of the graduated scale to its logical conclusion. I only say that if when we come to Rs. 20,000 we reach a half per cent., at Rs. 1,00,000 and beyond it should reach the vanishing point. That is all I have to suggest. I think my suggestion is a very logical one, and I hope it will be accepted.

The amendment was put to the vote and lost.

His Excellency the President:—Amendment No. 18, Schedule III. The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—May it please your Excellency,—My amendment runs thus:—

In schedule III, Rule 4, after 'one fourth' add 'in contested and one-eighth in other cases'.

Rule 4, as it is, provides that in execution proceedings the pleader's fee to be allowed shall be one-fourth of the fee calculated at the rates specified in rule 1 on the amount or value of the relief or money claimed in the application to execute the decree. Under the existing law no separate fee is allowed in execution proceedings, and the pleader has to appear in such proceedings until the whole decree is executed. Now, under the amended law the pleader's liability to appear ceases with the decision of the suit, and for every execution proceeding he will have to put in a fresh vakalatnama, and charge fresh retaining fee and pleader's fee. As we all know, the decrees of our courts are not executed expeditiously. In fact, it takes a number of execution applications to complete the execution of a decree. A glance at the figures of the disposal of execution applications for 1917 will show that there were in all 183,763 applications for execution presented to the court during that year, and of them only 31,199 were satisfied in full, 33,920 satisfied in part, 553 transferred to other courts, and not less than 76,166 were wholly infructuous. That is, more than 54 per cent. of the applications did not bring in anything at all in execution. So, if we take these figures into consideration, it will appear that the cost of recovery in execution proceedings is already exorbitant. That being the case, it is necessary that the additional fees which will have now to be paid to pleaders for appearing in these cases should be kept down as far as possible. These applications are generally in printed tabular form and beyond filling a few entries in the forms, not much has to be done. I, therefore, propose that in cases where there is no contest, the fee should be one-eighth and in contested cases it should be one-fourth. This, I think, will meet the interests of the pleaders, and at the same time it will show some consideration for the interests of the litigant party, on whom the new burden is going to be imposed. Considering that the number of applications is 183,763 in one year, this new provision will impose a burden of Rs. 1,83,763 for retainer at Rupee 1 in each case and of Rs. 91,881 for stamp for vaklatnama at annas 8 in each case, in all Rs. 2,75,644 besides the additional one-fourth pleaders' fee which will be charged on the value of the relief sought in all cases even if there be no contest.

PLEADERS' BILL.

[27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. S. B. Upasani; Sir G. Carmichael; the President.]

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—Your Excellency,—Schedule III in which the fees are stated was drafted by the High Court after full examination of the special conditions and full enquiry of all the District Judges. It seems to me that it would be inappropriate to make a change in what was deliberately recommended by the High Court. I do not think any case has been made out by the Honourable Mr. Upasani in support of his amendment, merely because the cases that are not contested do not involve a considerable amount of work. I think, this Council should accept what the High Court has recommended as a reasonable and adequate scale of fees.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—Your Excellency,—No doubt we have to pay due regard to the opinion of the High Court, but I think, we cannot ignore our own experience and knowledge of the actual conditions in the mofussil. I am afraid that in Bombay all things are looked at from a magnified point of view, whereas the conditions prevailing in the mofussil do not appeal as adequately as they should. The mass of the population in the mofussil is too poor to pay even the present costs. The costs are more than 12 per cent. as they stand, and, I think, this further addition would make them 20 per cent., if not more. To recover Rs. 100 they should not be made to pay so large a proportion. Now, when pleaders do not get any additional fee for appearance in execution proceedings, I do not think they should be allowed it at the rates proposed in the bill. Additional retainer and vaklatnama are altogether unnecessary. It is no good for a party to get a paper decree. It is on the amount recovered in execution that the cost of litigation should be charged, and if double fee is to be paid to the same pleader for appearing in the suit and in execution proceedings, it will be a great hardship, and the hardship will be the greater when rule VI of schedule III as regards minimum fee is enforced. I, therefore, leave it to the Council to accept my amendment.

The amendment was put to the vote and lost.

His Excellency the President:—Amendment No. 19, Schedule III. The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—Your Excellency,—The amendment which I propose is that:—

"In schedule III, Rule VI (b) insert 'rupees ten' after 'or'."

I propose this with a view to reduce, if possible, the double hardship that I have just pointed out in moving my last amendment. In fact, I should prefer the Council omitting Rule VI entirely after the provision that has already been made for higher fee both in the original litigation and also in execution proceedings under rules I to V of the schedule. The rule, as it stands says:—

> "In no case, whether specifically provided for in this Schedule or otherwise, shall the pleader's fee payable in any civil suit, appeal, application or proceeding be less than
> (a) Rs. 30 in the High Court,
> (b) Rs. 15 in the District Court or in the Court of a Subordinate Judge,
> (c) Rs. 5 in any Court in suits of the nature cognizable by a Court of Small Causes, or in the Court of a Jagirdar or Inamdar exercising jurisdiction under Bombay Regulation XIII of 1830 and Act XV of 1840, or in the Court of a Mamlatdar under the Mamlatdars' Courts Act, 1906."

Your Excellency will notice that out of the total number of 150,223 suits filed in our courts in 1917, the claim exceeded Rs. 500 only in 12,449 cases. The value of the claim did not exceed Rs. 10 in 11,188 suits, Rs. 50 in 56,851 cases, Rs. 100 in 33,485 suits and Rs. 500 in 42,124 suits, Rs. 15 would have been chargeable only on claims of Rs. 300,

PLEADERS' BILL.—BOMBAY TOBACCO BILL.

[Mr. S. B. Upasani; Sir G. Carmichael; the President; Mr. G. S. Curtis; Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas.] [27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

and yet it is the minimum provided for all cases in the subordinate judge's court whatever the value of the claim may be. I do not know why there should be a minimum provided at all when a sufficiently high scale of fee is provided under rules I to IV. In the select committee I have no doubt that the interests of the pleaders were strongly represented; and if the interests of the poor litigants had been as strongly represented, all these facts indicating the excessive incidence of the fees would have been pointed out and taken into consideration by the select committee. I think, in the interests of the litigating public some consideration as I have suggested ought to be shown to them. The provision contained in Rule VI, of Schedule III will enhance the hardship particularly in the case of execution applications, and if the small limitation which I propose is adopted, it will afford some relief against the excessive burden that is sought to be imposed under the double operation of rules I to V and of rule VI of the schedule.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—Your Excellency,—The Honourable Mr. Upasani says this point was not considered in the select committee. I must point out that we went into the schedule very carefully. It is rather inappropriate for the honourable member to bring his motion forward now. If he had suggested it at the first reading of the bill, then the select committee would have given more careful attention to his proposal. There is no particular reason why there should be a distinction between the district court and subordinate judge's court. The distinction is properly drawn between the High Court and the district or subordinate judge's court, and the court of small causes where small causes are taken. The subordinate judge may have very important cases to try.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—Your Excellency,—The matter is an important one and should not, I think, be ignored. Besides that, at the first reading of the bill the question was discussed, and I pointed out that the costs should be kept down as far as possible.

The amendment was put to the vote and lost.

Schedule III was then put to the vote and carried.

The preamble was then put to the vote and carried.

His Excellency the President:—A Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to pleaders in the Presidency of Bombay (Bill No. VI of 1920). Third Reading. The Honourable Sir George Carmichael.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—Your Excellency,—I beg to move that the bill be read a third time and passed into law.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael moves the third reading of the bill.

Bill read a third time.

The motion for the third reading of the bill was put to the vote and carried.

BOMBAY TOBACCO BILL.

His Excellency the President:—I find that I was misled this morning into making an error of ruling over the question of the Tobacco Bill. Under the existing peculiar constitution, which will be changed in the new councils, I find that Government is not empowered to drop its own bill without the sanction of the Council. The motion for the withdrawal of the bill, therefore, has to be moved formally, and honourable members will be entitled to speak on it.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Your Excellency,—I beg to move that the bill to amend the law relating to the duty payable on tobacco and to the import, transport, retail sale and warehousing thereof in the city of Bombay, Bill No. IV of 1919, be withdrawn.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—Your Excellency,—I have to express my sincere appreciation of the opportunity that your Excellency has given to me to reopen this question. I must say that I myself expected, before I came to the Council Hall this morning, that the bill would be withdrawn, but I did not expect the bill to be withdrawn for the purpose of this Government giving a free hand to the new Minister in a subject which is a most difficult subject and to deal with an act that has been standing over for the last 62 years. The act which the bill has been drafted to amend was passed in about 1857, and constant efforts were made ever since then to change the act, and to remedy the various defects that were found in the act. Very unfortunately that has never been done, and now the amendment having been before this Government for more than about 14 months, it is very unfortunate that Government should not see their way to make any final effort to do away with the many eccentricities and annovances that are

BOMBAY TOBACCO BILL.

[27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas; the President.] caused by the act, and that they should propose to leave it as a legacy—a legacy which I am sure would be a very unfortunate legacy—to the new councils.

I propose, sir, with your permission, to tell the Council, as briefly as I possibly can, how incumbent it was upon your Excellency's Government to dispose of this enactment, and how unfortunate is the decision, which is much to be regretted by this Council, that Government are not, at this session of the Council when 13 pieces of legislation are being passed, in a position to pass this particular bill. In order to show the importance of dealing with this legislation without any delay, I will only read to the Council two short paragraphs from a letter written by Mr. H. O. Quin, Commissioner of Customs, Salt and Abkari in 1914. This is what he says :—

> "Stated briefly the case against the present system seems to amount to this. The wholesale trade is in the hands of a small and exclusive ring, the retail trade is carried on by persons of poor position, the majority of whom are financed by the ring, and that consequently this small number of wholesale dealers controls entirely the prices and all other details in connection with the tobacco trade. The result is high prices and exceptionally small consumption with unduly large profits to the wholesale dealers who pay nothing for the value of the monopoly which they enjoy. Furthermore, the condition of the retail dealers is very miserable as they are being ruthlessly exploited by the wholesale men who have them completely under their thumb."

That, sir, was the opinion expressed by Mr. Quin, the Commissioner of Customs, Salt and Abkari in 1914. In publishing the amendment bill which is now proposed to be withdrawn to-day, the Honourable Member in Charge stated in the Statement of Objects and reasons as follows :—

> "This act is very antiquated and contains certain harassing restrictions regarding the sale of tobacco and its removal from one place to another in the city. Members of the tobacco trade have made representations from time to time regarding these restrictions, and the Commissioner of Customs, Salt and Excise has also pointed out defects in the working of the act."

It is for this reason that Government undertook the amendment of the act. Besides this the tobacco trade both European and Indian have been constant in their complaint regarding the various hardships and harassments caused to the trade by the restrictions imposed on the trade by this Act of 1857. Mr. Logan, the Commissioner of Customs, Salt and Excise, in 1908, says :—

> "At present, although tobacco is not like liquor, a thing which by its own nature requires elaborate control, the restrictions on the trade appear to exceed those on foreign spirits (which can be transported freely) and even to some extent on country spirit, where transport and sale licenses are annual."

So much then, sir, as regards the restriction on the tobacco trade by means of the present enactment the amendment to which is going now to be withdrawn by Government. The two sections of the trade that are interested in this legislation are the Indian section of the trade which is interested in the country tobacco, and the other is the European section which is interested in the imported tobacco. There is a long letter in the file that I hold in my hand, from the Director of the British American Tobacco Company, Limited, in which he protests very strongly against the system. I do not propose to read that letter to the Council. If honourable members will refer to that letter they will see how the present system reacts against the country tobacco. A reference also to my minute of dissent which is placed on the table among other papers will show that country tobacco trade pays on an average 50·06 per cent. as duty and the foreign tobacco pays 6·22 per cent. as duty. That by itself, I should have thought more than sufficient cause for your Excellency's Government to take this amendment, whatever your Excellency's Government might have deemed proper, of the Act of 1857. But this is not all. The restrictions on the country tobacco are many and most annoying and are such as would not be convenient to the better class of people.

His Excellency the President :—I should like the honourable member to realize that he is not entitled to discuss the whole field of the Tobacco Bill. He is entitled to say why it should not be withdrawn but he is not entitled to go into the whole field as in the second reading of the bill.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—I am only putting before the Council the reasons why Government ought not to withdraw this bill, or that the Council should not agree to the withdrawal of the bill, in the manner that the Honourable Member in Charge wishes to do. If Government give an undertaking that they will, before the end of this year, settle with the corporation this question, and as soon as the new Council comes into existence will take up the matter, I would most willingly, to save time, withdraw my objection to the withdrawal of the bill. But, if it is proposed to leave this to the Minister, I certainly say that I am entitled to tell the Council how it is detrimental to the tobacco trade.

BOMBAY TOBACCO BILL.

[Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas; Mr. G. S. Curtis; the President.] [27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—I have already pointed out that excise under the reforms will be a transferred subject and it is always open to honourable members to move private bills.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—I am very sorry that Government should have chosen this particular enactment for the purpose of handing it over to the Minister. I am trying to make out a case to show why this legislation should have been handled earlier than any other subject. When we are passing 13 pieces of legislation, this bill ought not to be allowed to be withdrawn without any sort of undertaking by Government as to the future of the legislation. If your Excellency rules that I am not allowed to go into all these reasons I cannot help it.

His Excellency the President:—I only want the honourable member to confine himself to the subject of the motion to withdraw this bill. I am directing the honourable member's attention to the channel of thought in which the debate should run.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—The defects in the act are so many that I may have to touch upon all of them, and I will do it as shortly as I can. To the list of questions and answers of the 18th September 1919 there are attached two forms of licenses, one for country tobacco and the other for foreign tobacco. I will not read the conditions, but I will show that the one attached to the foreign tobacco has no restrictions at all, while as regards the country tobacco there are so many restrictions that a man, if he takes a license, has practically to be at the beck and call of the excise department. I put a question to Government on the point and the reply was that the question is not admissible.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—If this bill had come on for second reading we should have had the report of the select committee which the honourable member has signed, and it would have shown to this Council that excepting a few alterations the honourable member had supported the bill. And I do not think the honourable member is in order in going beyond the report of the select committee. The honourable member has proposed no amendments.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—May I request the Honourable Member in Charge to read paragraph 4 of my minute of dissent. That is what just I thought, that the Council may overlook it. What I have said there is:—

> "In view of all this I think it is necessary for the Council to refer this bill back to the select committee with instructions that they communicate through the Government with the corporation in the light of the various evils resulting from the continuation of the tobacco duty on the lines of Act IV of 1857, and devise some other practical method by which the corporation may get their approximate revenue, etc."

If the Honourable Member in Charge will refer to this he will certainly find that I am not going an inch out of the position that I took up then, and I sent in an amendment to that effect and was told that the bill is to be postponed, and it has been postponed from session to session, and now, when we are quite at the fag-end of this Council, we are told that it may be allowed to be withdrawn.

[His Excellency the President at this stage withdrew and the Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael) occupied the chair].

As I said, I myself wanted the bill to be withdrawn, and I expected the Honourable Member in Charge to withdraw it but certainly not as a legacy to the new Council. I submit that the tobacco trade should be relieved of all these inconveniences which are admitted to be harassing by the Commissioner and Collector of Customs.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Will the honourable member illuminate us how, as Revenue Member, it is for me to arrive at an arrangement with the municipality?

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—I do not want to mention to the Council anything that happened between the officials of the departments of Government and myself. But what I proposed is that Government should arrive at an arrangement with the municipality by which tobacco duty should be treated as a town duty and that this bill should be repealed at the next session. But the Honourable Member in Charge told us this morning that he proposed to leave this intact to the incoming Minister to deal with, and that is the position against which I protest very strongly. The other thing that the bill proposes to do as stated in the statement of objects and reasons is that it is proposed to legalize certain practices which have grown up under the existing act, and which are not legally justified by it. It would be seen that there are also merchants who have entered strong protests against the judicial and executive functions. Many of the practices are not warranted by the Act of 1857. Is not that enough reason why this bill should have been amended or withdrawn in good time for this Government to deal with it adequately before the administration passed on to some new hands? Over and above all this, when this bill came before the Council first, we had before the Council a petition from Rao Saheb Manaji Rajooji, where he quoted the opinion of Dr. Turner saying that the present system under which the women bidi-rollers had to work, seriously affected the health of a large number of this class who fell victims to pulmonary complaints.

BOMBAY TOBACCO BILL.

[27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas; Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola; the Vice-President; Mr. G. S. Curtis.]

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Mr. President,—I rise to a point of order. I hope the honourable member will not mind. The motion before the house is that the Council do allow the bill to be withdrawn. The honourable member is entitled to speak at any length he likes on the point, firstly, whether he agrees to the bill being withdrawn, or, secondly whether he wants the bill to be proceeded with. To my mind there is no third alternative. He can either say that he agrees to the proposed withdrawal or that he opposes it on the ground that he wishes the bill to be proceeded with. At present he is finding fault with the select committee's report; he does not appear to wish that the bill should be proceeded with as it stands, but he wants certain assurances for conducting negotiations with the municipality. This can hardly be regarded as relevant to the motion before the house.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Order, order. I think the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas is in order in discussing what is going to happen if the bill is withdrawn.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—Replying to the Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola, may I point out to him that that is just the attitude which I very strongly protest against at this stage of the proceedings? At the last session of the Council the bill was postponed, and now at the very last session of the Council there is this proposal of withdrawing the bill. You suspend your standing rules and—

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—When I gave my ruling on the point of order, I thought I made it quite clear that the honourable member was in order in telling the Council what would happen if the bill were withdrawn.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—May I ask the honourable member to oblige the Council with his reasons why this decision of Government was not announced at the last session and has been put off for announcement at the very last session of this Council? If it was announced at the last meeting, we then might have had an opportunity to move any amendments we considered necessary. Well, I say that if this Government wanted to stand by its responsibilities, they ought to have given full opportunity to the members before withdrawing the bill in this manner. Not having done that and having taken all this anxiety and trouble, now to hand to the Ministers this legacy of an antiquated act, so badly needing amendment all round, all that I can say, sir, is that the Council must regret the decision to which Government have come. There is still enough of time, sir. There are three months more. Why should not Government negotiate with the corporation still? Some of us at least expected that the Honourable Member in Charge would be able to come to some definite arrangement. Under the present act certain revenues are secured to the corporation. Government has got to stand by the arrangement which was arrived at in 1860. Is it not the duty of the Government now to see that the hardships are removed? And if it is only a question of meeting the corporation in the matter of revenues, it is only a matter of about 3½ lakhs of rupees, which there should not be much difficulty in providing for.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Mr. President,—Really it is the first time to-day that I have heard from the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas an indictment of this act. I may explain that Government is in a position of a third party. As far as possible I have been trying to make peace, as I say, between the municipality on the one hand and the tobacco trade on the other, and it has been impossible to arrive at any settlement. You will find from the printed report of the select committee that that report has been signed by the honourable member and he has accepted the opinion of the majority that Rs. 7-8-0 a maund should be retained as the duty on tobacco, and also clause 4 of the bill, which provides that all the receipts from this duty should be handed over in perpetuity to the municipality. The honourable member is perfectly right when he says that he has been aware that negotiations have been going on with the municipality and Government. Negotiations have been carried on and the matter has remained where it is. I do not think it will hurt anybody at all if the bill is postponed. I may add that I think the honourable member has not worked up his case. I may go further and say that I repeatedly asked him to support his case with facts and figures, but I do not think he has done so. Speaking as a Revenue Member, I may say that I have always been somewhat prejudiced against the act, and I am always ready and glad to receive and consider any information which the honourable member may furnish showing the existing situation and how it could be remedied. But so far there is not very much in this particular minute which would lead one to supopse that the act is a glaring piece of weakness. He is perfectly right in bringing out the fact that the duty is a very heavy charge on the poor man's luxury, but as regards the actual abuses which he has brought out, there is very little in his minute to justify what he has said. I would urge, therefore, that in my humble opinion the act is eminently one which is fit for consideration in the reformed Council. Government itself is not particularly concerned except in so far as it may be necessary to preserve the solvency of the Bombay municipality, which, after all, is not a matter of anxiety. The question really lies between the Bombay municipality on the one hand and the tobacco trade of Bombay on the other. If the tobacco trade of Bombay city headed by the honourable member can pursuade the reformed Council that the continuation of this system in its tyrannical form is undesirable, I feel sure that the matter will receive their best consideration. Full information has been obtained and calculations have been made as to the loss which is likely to ensue from the transfer of tobacco as a scheduled tax under this act to that of town duty, and the process of sweeping away of this act in the ordinary way will be an extremely simple matter. I would repeat, therefore, my motion that this bill be dropped and I ask permission to withdraw it.

BOMBAY TOBACCO BILL—DISTRICT POLICE BILL.

[Mr. G. S. Curtis; the Vice-President; the President; Sir G. Carmichael.] [27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

The motion was put to the vote and carried.

A BILL FURTHER TO AMEND THE BOMBAY DISTRICT POLICE ACT, 1890 (BILL NO. X OF 1920).

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—A bill further to amend the Bombay District Police Act, 1890 (Bill No. X of 1920). Second reading.

This bill was referred to a select committee. The select committee have deleted clause 4 of the bill. Clause 4 provided for the prevention of smoking and spitting in public buildings. It followed a similar provision which was passed in this Council in a bill amending the City of Bombay Police Act. The committee on the present bill were of opinion that there was not at present any case for such a provision in the mofussil, because no complaints had been received of the nuisance against which this clause is directed. The remainder of the bill which provided for the appointment of separate superintendents of police for large cities was unanimously approved, as it stood, by the select committee. I beg to move the second reading of this bill.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael moves the second reading of the bill.

The motion for the second reading of the bill was then put to the vote and carried.

Bill read a second time.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—The bill will now be read clause by clause.

A BILL FURTHER TO AMEND THE BOMBAY RENT (WAR RESTRICTIONS) ACT, 1918, AND TO AMEND THE BOMBAY RENT (WAR RESTRICTIONS, No. 2) ACT, 1918 (BILL No. XI OF 1920).

His Excellency the President:—A bill further to amend the Bombay Rent (War Restrictions) Act, 1918, and to amend the Bombay Rent (War Restrictions, No. 2) Act, 1918. Second reading. The Honourable Mr. Curtis.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis moves the second reading of the bill.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Your Excellency,—I beg to present the report of the select committee on this bill, copies of which have been placed on the table. There are three amendments to be made in clause 2; one, the effect of which is to substitute for the word "order" the words "date when possession has been obtained", because at times possession is not obtained till some time after the order has been passed. Another amendment is to restrict the application of the original tenant to 9 months within the date of such order; and the further amendment is to modify the provisions for payment of compensation so as to make it not payable except in cases where the premises were reasonably and bonâ fide required by the landlord for the purpose specified.

Clause 4 has been redrafted, and with regard to suits for rent, compensation for use and occupation or ejectment, a distinction has been laid down between houses of which the monthly rental is over Rs. 30, and those of which the monthly rental is under Rs. 30, and there is a modification of procedure which has to be followed.

I beg to recommend that the bill be read a second time.

A BILL FURTHER TO AMEND THE BOMBAY PORT TRUST ACT, 1879 (BILL No. XII OF 1920).

His Excellency the President:—A bill further to amend the Bombay Port Trust Act, 1879 (Bill No. XII of 1920). Second reading. The Honourable Mr. Curtis.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis moves the second reading of the bill.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Your Excellency,—I beg to propose the second reading of the bill further to amend the Bombay Port Trust Act, 1879 (Bill No. XII of 1920). The report of the select committee is on the table. During the discussion it was elicited that the existing act makes inadequate provision for the construction and maintenance of waiting rooms for Indian passengers arriving by coasting steamers as well as for passengers arriving by steamers from overseas. In other respects also section 68 of the act was defective. The proposal, therefore, is to amend section 68 by the insertion of a new section (7A), with an explanation, which will provide for the equipment and maintenance of such buildings, including offices, quarters for officers and servants of the Board, waiting rooms and refreshment rooms, as may in the opinion of the Board be necessary for carrying out the purposes of the act. An explanation has been added that waiting rooms shall be deemed to include sleeping accommodation for passengers arriving or departing by sea and persons escorting or meeting such passengers. It is believed that this will provide accommodation on a reasonable scale, and that the inconvenience to passengers which was referred to by the Honourable Mr. Macnaghten and the Honourable Mr. Webb will be avoided.

I beg, therefore, to move the second reading of the bill.

A BILL FURTHER TO AMEND THE CITY OF BOMBAY MUNICIPAL ACT, 1888 (BILL No. XIV OF 1920).

His Excellency the President:—A bill further to amend the City of Bombay Municipal Act, 1888 (Bill No. XIV of 1920). First reading. The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Your Excellency,—I beg to move that a bill further to amend the Bombay City Municipal Act, 1888, be read a first time. This bill is not controversial. The Bombay municipal corporation, finding that they will require very large sums of money for their future capital needs, have had to consider the extent of the borrowing powers they possess under the act. Under the Bombay City Municipal Act, the borrowing powers of the corporation are regulated by the rateable value of the properties in the city. Working on that basis alone, there is ample margin for increased borrowing. All loans raised by local bodies are subject, however, to the previous sanction of the Government of India, and that Government, in the interests of the subscribers, investigate the financial position of each local body as regards its capacity for providing interest and sinking fund charges, before sanctioning them. In calculating the available resources of a local body, the Government of India wish to know what its present and potential income is. If out of their total resources, the current requirements can be met, and a sufficient margin is available to meet interest and sinking fund charges on the loans proposed to be raised, then alone the Government of India give their sanction. Under the existing act, the maximum rate of general tax is fixed at 12 per cent., and therefore, the potential income of the Bombay municipality is estimated as between the rate actually levied and the maximum rate that can be levied. Calculating the extent of their borrowing powers on that basis, the corporation has found that the available margin is inadequate to meet the growing needs for its capital expenditure. They have, therefore, asked that the maximum rate of general tax should be raised to 17 per cent., to give them sufficient margin to meet their future needs for capital expenditure. Government have considered this representation, and have come to the conclusion that the corporation have made out a good case and they have, therefore, introduced this legislation. The council will, I hope, agree to raise the maximum of the general tax to 17 per cent.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola moves the first reading of the bill.

With these words, sir, I beg to move that the bill be read a first time.

A BILL FURTHER TO AMEND THE CITY OF BOMBAY POLICE ACT, 1902 (BILL No. XV OF 1920).

His Excellency the President:—A bill further to amend the City of Bombay Police Act, 1902 (Bill No. XV of 1920). First reading. The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael.

The Honourable Sir G. Carmichael:—Your Excellency,—I rise to move Bill No. XV of 1920, a bill further to amend the City of Bombay Police Act. This bill provides for a small measure of decentralization. It is intended to enable the Commissioner of Police to authorize the divisional superintendents of the city police to dispose of certain routine matters, and to issue over their own signature certain licenses and permits. The system of working, which it will allow, was in actual operation for some time, until it was discovered that it was not in accordance with the strict letter of the law. The work in the office of the Commissioner of Police has increased very largely of late, and it is essential to decentralize as far as possible. When the section which this bill proposes to amend was first enacted, the divisional superintendents of Police in the city of Bombay were not gazetted officers. But they have since been promoted to gazetted rank, and it is not out of place to entrust them with greater responsibility. I trust that the principle of the bill will commend itself to this Council, and that, in view of the urgency of the reform, this Council will not desire that the bill should be referred to a select committee.

BOILER INSPECTION BILL.

[The President; Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.] [27TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

A BILL FURTHER TO AMEND THE BOMBAY BOILER INSPECTION ACT, 1917 (BILL No. XVI OF 1920).

His Excellency the President:—A bill further to amend the Bombay Boiler Inspection Act, 1917, Bill No. XVI of 1920. First reading. The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Your Excellency,—I beg to move that a bill further to amend the Bombay Boiler Inspection Act of 1917 be read a first time. When the act was passed, certain duties for the inspection of boilers were imposed upon the Collector of Bombay. It is now realized that some of these duties should be discharged by the Director of Industries instead of by the Collector, and this bill is introduced merely with the object of enabling Government to confer by notification such of the powers and impose such of the duties under the act on the Director of Industries as may be necessary.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola moves the first reading of the bill.

I hope honourable members will recognize that the question of inspection of boilers appertains more to the Industries department than to the Collector's department. This is merely an enabling piece of legislation, giving Government the power of imposing duties in the proper direction, and I trust that honourable members will agree to pass the bill.

DISCUSSION OF MATTERS OF GENERAL PUBLIC INTEREST.

His Excellency the President:—Order, order. Resolutions. There are three resolutions on the same subject with regard to the exportation of cattle. I propose to take that standing in the name of the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas—Resolution No. 15 on the paper—as being comprehensive of the other resolutions, and give other honourable members an opportunity of speaking on the same resolution. As the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas is not here, I call upon the Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji to move his resolution. Resolution No. 3. The Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji.

The Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji:—Your Excellency,—I beg to move the following resolution:—

> This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council to take steps to prohibit the slaughter of young and useful milch and agricultural cattle in the Presidency with a view to save a useful economic and agricultural asset of the Presidency.

If anything has attracted the greatest attention in these times of soaring high prices, it is the question of high and abnormal prices for all sorts of milk products. Milk products are a necessity to all the countries of the world, and we are familiar with the anxiety experienced in all the belligerent countries owing to the depleted stocks of milch and agricultural cattle and the high prices of milk products. Specially will this be considered in the nature of a calamity in a country like India, where people, and especially the vegetarian section of them, have been considering from times immemorial milk and ghee as their staple food of life, and where a country being agricultural, agricultural cattle are a great and vital necessity. The Council is familiar with the heavy drain on the existing resources caused by successive famines and, if I may be allowed to say so, by the export of cattle. To these factors is always added the indiscriminate slaughter of young and even pregnant milch and agricultural cattle at different slaughter-houses in the Presidency.

SLAUGHTER OF CATTLE—CATTLE QUESTION: COMMITTEE.

[28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. Munmohundass Ramji; Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas; the President.]

Neither I nor any of my colleagues in the Council would wish to come in the way of those of our fellow-citizens in the Presidency who require meat as one of their food items. What I contend is that the Government must interfere and put a stop to the indiscriminate slaughter of young and pregnant milch and agricultural cattle. The Calcutta Municipal Corporation has already adopted this expedient, and it will be a great boon to the Presidency of Bombay if the same expedient is adopted by our enlightened Government. I do not think that even those of our fellow-countrymen who require meat for their food will approve of a course of action which is calculated to deplete the Presidency of its reserve strength in the shape of milch and agricultural cattle and to increase still more the prices of the necessities of life like milk, butter and ghee. The figures given in a recent issue of the "Bombay Chronicle" with regard to the slaughter-house at Bandra are a sufficient index to the terrible loss the Presidency is suffering from such a slaughter carried on without any salutary check. The total number of cows slaughtered in 1909-10 was 37,863 which rose to 49,442 in 1913-14 and again went to 38,446 in 1915-16. The number of bullocks slaughtered in these years was respectively 6,017; 9,499 and 12,929, and the number of calves slaughtered in these years was 442; 1,488 and 2,854. After 1915-16 separate figures for cows, bullocks and calves are not available, but the total of these slaughtered in 1918-19 was 84,749, which means that the number of slaughtered animals has almost doubled in ten years. The total number of milch cattle in the Presidency of Bombay was 25,29,000 in 1919-20, and 28,43,000 in 1895-96, which shows that there is a decrease of 11·2 per cent. in 1919-20 as compared with 1895-96. While the population of cattle has thus decreased instead of having increased in 20 years, the huge slaughter of cattle to the extent of 84,000 in Bombay city alone annually must be considered appalling.

It is interesting to note in this connection that the attention of the committee appointed by Government to consider the measures for the provision of milk supply in the Bombay Presidency was drawn to the slaughter of prime buffaloes, and buffaloes which had calved not more than once or twice. The town gowali is seldom in a position to keep dry animals economically, and therefore it is that good milk buffaloes which under normal circumstances would continue to breed, go to the butcher. It was estimated by the committee that about 13,500 buffaloes from Bombay city were slaughtered in 1914-15. The Honourable Sir John Woodroffe also drew attention in his presidential address at the All-India Cow Conference, Calcutta, in December 1917, to the effect of the slaughter of prime cows and calves. He observed that this problem was peculiar to this country, as in Europe, America and the Colonies, no one thought of sacrificing good dairy cows. One of the remedies suggested is that Government should define the age at which dairy cows, and I may add buffaloes, can be slaughtered, fixing it with reference to the period when their milking capacity declines. His Highness the Nizam also, I may incidentally mention, has prohibited the indiscriminate slaughter of useful and economic animals in his State. With these remarks I beg to commend my resolution for the acceptance of the Council.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—Your Excellency,—I understand that your Excellency has ruled that your Excellency will allow discussion only on one out of the three resolutions that stand on the agenda dealing with this same question.

His Excellency the President:—I had intended the wider resolution standing in the name of the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas to be discussed first, so that the discussion on the other resolutions on the same subject namely, Nos. 3 and 4, may be included in the discussion of that resolution. But the honourable member was not in his seat, and I have therefore taken the resolution of the Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji. If the honourable member considers Mr. Munmohundass Ramji's resolution sufficient for his purpose, I will take that as the wider resolution, but if the honourable member prefers to move his resolution, I will allow him to do so.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—I am sorry I was not in my seat when the Council assembled, but I thought resolutions would not come up so soon for discussion.

As regards my resolution, if the Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji does not mind, in view of your Excellency's ruling, may I suggest that my resolution may be allowed to be moved as an amendment to the Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji's resolution. My resolution includes the purport of the two resolutions that stand in the name of the Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji, and if my honourable friend does not mind, I would like to move my resolution as an amendment to the resolution moved by him.

CATTLE QUESTION: COMMITTEE.

[The President; Mr. Munmohundass Ramji; Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas.] [28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

His Excellency the President:—I have no objection to that being done provided the Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji agrees to it.

The Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji:—Your Excellency,—I agree to the course proposed by the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas.

His Excellency the President:—The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas will then move his resolution as an amendment to the Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji's resolution, and the Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji, if he so desires, may speak on that motion.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—Your Excellency,—I beg to move that—

> This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that the Government of Bombay do represent to the Government of India the necessity of a special committee of officials and non-officials being appointed to submit a comprehensive report regarding the condition of cattle in the whole of India and the advisability of devising checks on slaughter and export of cattle generally and of milch cattle in particular.

I need hardly tell the Council how keen is the feeling that has been aroused lately throughout India on the question of cattle generally and especially with regard to the economic side of it, the feeling being accentuated by the sentimental keenness that is attached to the preservation of cattle generally amongst Hindus who form a majority of the people of India. My resolution, as your Excellency will perceive, is one that does not recommend any specific action being taken by Government either regarding a check on export or of slaughter of cattle. I have been trying to look up figures which would enable anybody who takes an interest in this matter to suggest checks on either slaughter of useful cattle or on export of useful cattle without anything substantial being said to the contrary. The problem is a very complex one, but when I show these figures to the Council it will appear very necessary to have a comprehensive survey of the whole situation as far as the cattle world in India is concerned. I have, your Excellency, in my hand a Monograph issued by the Munitions Board in 1919 giving the figures of trade in tanned hides and skins and leather. The figures given are in Table III under the heading " Export of raw hides from British India by sea to foreign countries ". In 1881 the quantity in cwts. exported was 595,144. It has gone on increasing every year practically and in 1913-14 the figure had gone up to 1,115,747 cwts. The total of exports of tanned hides from British India by sea to foreign countries in 1881 was 62,871 cwts. and that quantity increased in 1914 to 174,028 cwts. So, roughly speaking, the quantity of hides and skins and tanned leather exported from India to foreign countries has gone up cent. per cent. from 1881 to 1914, and in tanned hides it has gone up thrice. With those figures I may be justified in taking it for granted that the slaughter of cattle also must have gone on increasing. I was looking up the figures of cattle census for corresponding years. I have in my hand the Agricultural Statistics of India for 1917-18. I was trying to get figures for all India but I gave up the task, because, in the report the following sentences occurred which show how misleading or, at any rate, how rough these figures possibly can be. The report says—

> " In Bengal a cattle census was taken for the first time in 1912-13, which gave the numbers of bulls and bullocks, cows, buffaloes and young stock. (Young stock represents oxen and buffaloes not old enough for work or to produce young). In Bihar and Orissa a census was taken in 1913-14. The figures for Bihar and Orissa prior to 1913-14, as also those for Bengal for years prior to 1912-13, are based on estimates. Live-stock in cities and cantonments are included wherever it is possible to secure their enumeration. In making up the totals for British India for each year, the figures last collected in the Provinces where the census is not taken annually, are repeated year after year until the next cattle census is taken. It would therefore serve no useful purpose to compare the total figures for one year with those for another, as the totals thus constituted do not really represent the number of stock in the year against which the figures are shown in the table."

When the figures on which we might rely for the purpose of estimating the increase or decrease in the heads of cattle are based on such data as the one I have quoted, it appears to me to be sheer waste of time to put before the Council the approximate or the roughly approximate figures that may be given in this blue book. This by itself, if nothing else, makes out a good case for the question of cattle census being taken up very energetically by the Government of India. But that is not all. It has been conceded without much contradiction from responsible quarters that the quality of cattle has steadily been going down. I am not trying to speak with any sort of authority for the other provinces, but as far as Bombay Presidency is concerned there is no doubt in the minds of those who know that the quality of our cattle has been steadily going down. We have only got to examine what Government have been doing on the other side for the purpose of keeping up the breed of cattle and for the purpose of preservation of the best cattle in this Presidency. I fully appreciated the remark of the Honourable Member in Charge when he said the other day that the Government of Bombay have recently engaged an expert for the purpose of cattle breeding. It is never too late to begin, but I should have thought that an expert was necessary years ago. However, as I will show later on, this expert perhaps may have been appointed at the instance of the Government of India. I submit, sir, that while the export of hides and skins and tanned leather has gone on increasing like this, there has been practically little done till now for the purpose of Government satisfying themselves that these exports are such as do not tend, in any way, wrongly or injuriously to affect the best interests of the cattle which are a necessity for the agricultural purposes of this country. I submit that for an agricultural country like India the preservation of cattle is a question on which there should not have been any avoidable delay or any undue economy exercised. A little extra expenditure would perhaps meet with better results if there is to be an error between either extravagance or undue enconomy. I do not wish to discuss here what are the injurious results that may have resulted owing to the apathy of Government in this direction.

CATTLE QUESTION: COMMITTEE.

[28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas.]

Whenever famine or shortage of rain occur in a lean year Government do their best for the plough cattle and milch cattle of a district which is affected. But what I feel and what I would like to represent is that this solicitude should not be restricted only to years when cattle happen to be in danger, but that some constructive policy of building up the best breed of cattle should be followed from year to year.

Then also comes the question of veterinary dispensaries in various places. I know there are a few in the Presidency at present but looking to the number of cattle concerned, and looking to the ravages that occur from cattle disease, I venture to submit that the provision made by Government in this direction has been far from what has been required by the value that we attach to our cattle.

Next comes, sir, the question of the slaughter of cattle. There have been slaughter-houses in various important centres. I understand that where there are no slaughter-houses there is no prohibition against anybody slaughtering cattle, either agricultural or milch cattle, or goat or sheep. I submit, sir, that in slaughter-houses like the important ones in Bombay, Poona and Ahmedabad, and other places, there is a great necessity of devising such checks on the cattle or animals to be slaughtered there, that no milch cattle or cattle which are at such an age that it can give good milk or are very young and likely to be useful for milk should be allowed to be slaughtered. As the Council perhaps knows, I addressed a letter to the Bombay corporation on this same subject in last April, and the report of the Municipal Commissioner on the subject matter showed that in Bombay City alone 10,000 useful milch buffaloes went to the slaughter-house for certain reasons which I submit were not such as could not be got over. As to whether that was a part of the Government's duty or part of private enterprise, I do not think we are concerned with. But I do submit, sir, that if private enterprise was wanting in its activity to come forward and prevent this slaughter of cattle, it is certainly the duty of Government to see that these milch cattle had no access to the slaughter-house, which would have forced the gowalis to think of some other methods than that of sending the cattle to the slaughter-house.

I asked a question at the last session of the Council as to whether any restrictions were imposed on slaughter-houses in other centres of the Presidency, and the reply given to me was that no restrictions existed, because Government felt that no useful milch cattle were slaughtered at those centres. The best reply to that is perhaps the report of the Bombay Municipal Commissioner which I have just mentioned to the Council, and I understand that in other important parts of the country milch cattle do find their way to the slaughter-house.

Next, sir, comes the question of the export of the best of our milch cattle. Your Excellency has perhaps before now received telegrams from some of the associations concerned in Bombay regarding a large number of cattle that are awaiting export to Brazil from Bombay. Some friends of mine who have seen these cattle tell me that each of these cattle was exceptional not only for milking capacity but also for its health and breed and general turnout as a whole. I know very high prices are being paid for these cattle. I know, sir, that there is a good deal which can be said in favour of people who want to breed the best cattle. If Government made sure that these cattle which go out so easily to foreign countries are cattle which can be exported with safety, and that the people who sell these cattle are the people who really derive encouragement from the very high prices paid and continue their cattle breeding operations, it may be useful. If Government have made some enquiries in this direction and if Government are satisfied, I think, the Council and the public at large would like to know the results of such enquiries that Government may have made. I am aware, sir, of the reply given by the Honourable Member for Revenue and Agriculture in the Government of India at the last meeting of the Imperial Legislative Council. I would like, sir, with your permission to refer to that. The honourable member there said regarding the export of cattle that a committee was appointed by the Agricultural Board to examine the question and they arrived at the conclusion that the most suitable action to meet the situation would be not to restrict the export of cattle that are in demand abroad but to maintain pure herds of such cattle in the middle of the breeding tracts and to assist such breeders in every suitable way to extend and improve their present operations. The Board of Agriculture accepted the report and recommended that as the export of cattle stimulates breeding it should not be discouraged.

CATTLE QUESTION: COMMITTEE.

[Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas; Mr. G. S. Curtis.] [28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

Well, sir, the Government of India appear to have accepted the Board of Agriculture's report. But they appear to have acted on only one part of it. The constructive part of that report does not seem to have been attended to. That report says that the export of cattle should be continued but it also says that action should be taken to maintain pure herds of cattle in the middle of the breeding tracts and to assist such breeders in every suitable way to extend and improve their present operations. The Honourable Rao Bahadur Sarma did not tell the Imperial Council what action the Government of India had taken in that direction. They say the Board of Agriculture had accepted the report, but they gave their approval as conditional on their other recommendation also. The Government of India have satisfied themselves in a very convenient manner with one part of the Board of Agriculture's report, but the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sarma in giving that reply has not said a word as to what they have done regarding the other important recommendation. That, sir, is my complaint and that is the subject that I propose to submit to this Council for their approval. If you allow a free export of the best cattle of the country, I think, it is up to Government also to see that the best breed of the country continues to be replaced and continues to multiply. The Government of India have not said anything on that point and, therefore, I am constrained to say that the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sarma's reply to this question is very imperfect and very unsatisfactory as it goes. The question was again referred to the Board of Agriculture and the reply was that the committee found that in any case the export abroad at present formed a negligible fraction of the total export trade from the breeding areas and that it considered that a control was not called for immediately. That was in the year 1919. I see that whilst giving this reply the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sarma gave certain figures. I am sorry no Bombay newspaper has given these figures. As soon as I saw this reply, I wrote to the Government of India asking for figures, but I have not received them up to now, presumably owing to the existing strike in the Bombay postal service. What I submit is that this export of cattle to Brazil and other foreign countries has gone on increasing, and it is due to the public to assure them that whilst Government allow this export to continue they are taking care to ensure that this does not take away from the country the best breed but that the best breed goes on multiplying owing to the high prices that are available.

Regarding the same subject the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sarma said that the Government of India have instructed provincial governments to keep an eye on the quality of cattle that are being exported, especially from the point of view as to whether that does very effectively depreciate the better breed of cattle. I venture to surmise that the engagement by the Bombay Government of a cattle breeding expert, perhaps, may be due to this part of the instructions of the Government of India.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—I am unwilling to interrupt the honourable member, but this is the second time that he has cast a doubt on the good faith of this Government. This appointment has not been made as a result of the instructions from the Government of India.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—I am very glad to hear that, sir. But the coincidence was rather remarkable; however, that this appointment was made independently by the Bombay Government, I am most glad to hear.

In connection with the question of the export of milch cattle it would strike anyone, therefore, that the only manner in which the public could be satisfied would be by prohibiting all export of the best breed of cattle until the Government are themselves satisfied as to that export not depreciating the best breed of cattle in India, and the export may be reopened later on when Government have satisfied themselves in this most important matter by a comprehensive enquiry into the whole question. I particularly recommend to the

CATTLE QUESTION: COMMITTEE.

[28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas.]

Council to agree to a request to the Government of India to go into this question thoroughly themselves, because, I feel that no provincial action would be sufficient in the question of export of milch cattle, for if the Bombay Government, for instance, said that they would not allow it, it would only mean that the cattle would be taken to Madras or Calcutta or to some other port where there would be no restriction. The policy would have to be uniform for all India.

Regarding the slaughter of cattle, I think, it is up to this Government to issue instructions to all municipalities in every place where there are slaughter-houses, that an efficient veterinary surgeon should be in charge of every slaughter-house to see that no milch cattle or no cattle which are likely to be useful for the purpose are slaughtered there. Until the Government are satisfied that the supply of milch cattle and plough cattle is so free that the slaughter of these does not in any way affect the situation, perhaps this is the least that could be done.

Very closely connected with this question of the cattle is, of course, the question of the supply of ghee and milk in India. It is not unnatural that the keen feeling amongst the people has perhaps been quickened by the excessively high prices which they have had to pay lately for these two articles which are the most important necessaries of the greater part of life of Hindus generally. So much has been said regarding the prohibitive level which these prices have reached lately, so much has been said regarding the difficulty of getting unadulterated milk not only in big cities like Bombay, Ahmedabad and Poona, but also in fairly large towns in the district, that I do not think it is necessary for me to take up the time of the Council in this connection. I fully realize, your Excellency, that private enterprise has not done what it might have done regarding the supply of dairy farming, regarding supply of milk and regarding other activities in connection with cattle generally. But I submit, sir, that that does not mean that Government, who after all are to look after the general interests of the people, are to be absolved from giving a lead to the people. That does not mean either that the Government need not have taken any step, or would be justified in not taking any steps at such a juncture.

I would like to refer to the trade that is being carried on in certain parts of Gujarat by dairies. Gujarat and Kaira especially are great centres where buffaloes are being bred, and a very important section of the community there earn their living by selling milk of these buffaloes to dairies. In fact, the whole thing has gone so far that when I was in Dakor about a month ago, I understood from reliable persons that it was next to impossible to get pure milk, unless one had a cow or buffalo under one's own control. The more the milk was adulterated and the higher the prices the people paid, the people who are carrying on the business of dairying set themselves in competition and pay still higher prices. Of course, nobody wishes to put a check on people who keep cows or buffaloes, and breed them and make a living out of them. They all add to the supply of milk. But, when this milk is used by dairies for the purpose of manufacturing powder out of milk, none of which is sold locally and most of which is exported, some feel that the people of that district have a just grievance against Government if they say that they will not take cognizance of the people's difficulty in their attempts to get what is a necessity of life. I fully realize that this is not at all an easy question to solve either by a study of the figures or by a provincial survey of the whole situation. The supplies of milk are affected not only in a district, but in all the districts which may be easily accessible from or to that centre. It is for this purpose that I venture to submit that it is very necessary for the Imperial Government to appoint a committee of expert officials and of non-officials who are in touch with the people and who would be glad to give very good guidance to the officials in this matter, in order that they may go into the whole question thoroughly, to enable them to lay down certain rules and to devise such means as will lead to the disappearance of the most useful cattle to the least possible extent, and to the best and quickest multiplication of the best of the cattle that are required for agricultural and milch purposes.

Remotely though it may be, but connected with the same question is the question of gocharan, that is, the provision of pasturage for cattle in districts. With the increase of land under cultivation, naturally the encroachment on the gocharan part of the lands has been considerable everywhere. But gocharan is a thing to which the people of India have been accustomed from times immemorial. Of course, the giving out of such land for agricultural purposes would bring in additional revenue, but if lands which have from times immemorial been left as free pasturage for the cattle of a village are given out for cultivation, I feel, sir, that it is part of the duty of Government also to ensure that the cattle which used that part of the village land as free pasturage are provided for elsewhere.

CATTLE QUESTION: COMMITTEE.

[Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas; Mr. S. B. Upasani; Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah; the President.] [28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

This also is a very complicated question. I feel that the revenue officers in charge who allowed such encroachments must have considered this point of view too, but it is difficult to get at their opinions in any of the records that have been made available to the public.

Then comes the question of fodder storage for cattle during famine years, a question about which the Council fully knows my views. I do not wish to weary honourable members at this stage in regard to what Government could do and ought to do in this connection.

I therefore submit that the whole question is a very important one, and in order that the public may feel that Government are taking a very keen interest in this matter, the least that this Council can do is to bring these facts to the notice of the Government of India, and request them to have the whole question examined thoroughly by a representative committee.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—Your Excellency,—I have great pleasure in supporting the resolution of my honourable friend Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas. I think that the appalling loss of cattle during the last famine is well known to the Council. In 1900 a very large proportion of the cattle in Gujarat and the Deccan were lost. The same thing happened in subsequent famines, and during the famine of 1918 not less than 40 per cent. of the cattle perished. The effect of this loss on the agriculture of the country is too well known, and, I think, there is a real necessity for early and effective measures to check further losses on account of slaughter for human food. There is no doubt that in the absence of any check, legislative or otherwise, the slaughter of animals will go on. It does go on. Even in municipal areas, the municipalities are helpless to take action in the matter. The only provision that is to be found in the Municipal Act is section 142, which gives power to a municipality to interfere only in cases where the animals appear to be diseased or unsound or unwholesome or unfit for human food, and in such cases alone the municipality is empowered to seize the animals and prevent their slaughter for food. It is only in these cases, that is, when the animal is diseased that any action can be taken to stop the slaughter. If the animal is in a sound condition, the municipality cannot interfere. If the municipalities are to be empowered to take any action in other cases, then some provision will have to be introduced in the Municipal Act for that purpose.

Then, the slaughter is very indiscriminate, and people wishing to make money do not hesitate. Only recently a case came to our notice where a cow was slaughtered when near delivery time. The calf was found alive, but that was also slaughtered. The question came before the municipality in the form of an enquiry as to whether a separate fee was to be charged for the calf. Such things do happen, and therefore, whenever there is a chance of making any money, those whose profession it is to earn their livelihood out of slaughter, will not hesitate to do it.

The scarcity of milk is telling upon the health of the general public everywhere. In municipal areas the prices have gone up too high to allow of ordinary people getting the needful supply of milk. With all this, the supply itself is so deficient that even when you are prepared to spend money you cannot get good milk.

In these circumstances, I think that besides taking the action suggested by the honourable mover of the resolution in the direction of making recommendations to the Government of India for the appointment of a committee, further legislative action, as suggested by me, by amending the Municipal Act, which the local Government can take should also be taken so that the slaughter which goes on at present may be checked so far as is possible. With these few words I support the resolution.

The Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah:—Your Excellency,—I would like to make a few observations first as regards the resolution and then about the amendment. I hope my remarks as regards the resolution will not be misunderstood by the Council. I am in sympathy with the resolution.

His Excellency the President:—Order, order. The honourable member is under a misapprehension. The honourable member who spoke first, the Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji, withdrew his resolution in favour of the one moved by the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas, and there is no amendment.

The Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah:—While speaking on the resolution, I trust that my remarks will not be misunderstood. In the first place, if we do not allow people to slaughter cattle, then we are interfering with their private rights. Whenever any motion is brought forward in this Council which affects the liberties or rights of the people, we have been crying ourselves hoarse. If we now invite Government to encroach upon the rights of the people and prohibit them from slaughtering an animal of a particular age, that will be encroaching on their rights. Besides, it will be such a difficult matter to determine the age of a cow. It might not be difficult in a big town like Bombay, where the cows are brought to the slaughter-houses, where there are regular veterinary inspectors. But there are difficulties in the mofussil areas. In a place where there is no municipality, a man may bring an animal to be slaughtered. Whom is he to consult as to whether he should slaughter it or not? It will be all very well so far as the big towns are concerned, but in the mofussil areas there will be great difficulty. No doubt the number of cattle, as pointed out by the statistics quoted, has decreased. But there are other remedies for that. We might have a large number of cattle-breeding farms, and request the people to take interest in them, and thus multiply the cattle. Secondly, we might stop the export of the best cattle. Thirdly, attempts might be made to improve their quality. We might have a larger number of dispensaries in the mofussil where cattle could be treated by qualified people. Government might also allow them free pastures. These measures will tend to improve their condition considerably.

CATTLE QUESTION: COMMITTEE.

[28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah; Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas.]

Now, it might be said that I am a Mahomedan, and therefore, I am not in full sympathy with the other honourable members. But I do feel that the cattle of the whole of India have decreased, and there is no doubt that they are very useful so far as agriculture and the supply of milk and ghee are concerned. I do belong to the Mussulman community, which is accused of eating mutton and beef. But in my Province, in the big cities, on the occasion of a Hindu holiday, there is generally a dearth of meat, and hence one community is as much responsible as the other. As to the question of the supply of beef, in the big cities most of the beef is used by the military and by poor Mussulmans for the sake of economy. Coming to the rural areas in Sind, the Mahomedans there are agriculturists, and cattle are as precious to them as to anybody else. They live mostly on curd, milk and butter. Only, cattle are sometimes slaughtered by them when they have some marriage ceremony, to give a feast. But they do it from the point of view of economy, because, they cannot afford to spend a large amount of money on goats, and in slaughtering the cattle it is not because they want to part with their cattle, but because they cannot do otherwise.

Then, sacrifices are made on the Id holiday. But from the recent good feeling between Hindus and Mahomedans, the Mahomedans have been making all allowances to respect the feelings of their Hindu friends. Even on the last Id, they have given ample proof that they are trying to preserve cows as far as possible.

Another point was raised here, and that was with regard to the very high prices charged for milk and ghee, because there are not sufficient cattle in the country, owing to their excessive slaughter. I do not agree with the previous speakers with regard to this matter. The facts are that the price of milk and ghee has been increased owing to the exportation of cattle; secondly, the price of grass and fodder has gone very high, and thirdly, the man who deals in milk and ghee requires more money, in these days of high prices, to keep his body and soul together. Therefore, when we complain about the paucity of milk and milk products, we have to take all these factors into consideration. However, the resolution that stands in the name of my friend the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas, asks for a special committee of officials and non-officials to submit a comprehensive report regarding the condition of cattle in the whole of India. The committee will be appointed; it will investigate the conditions prevailing in the whole of India, and it will suggest the remedies for preventing the decrease in cattle and improving their condition. To my mind, therefore, there is a case for the appointment of such a committee, and I wholeheartedly support the resolution.

The Honourable Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas:—Your Excellency,—My friend from Sind will pardon me if I say that he has got a little bit mixed up in his speech, because, I thought that he had understood your Excellency's ruling that the proposition moved by the Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji had been dropped practically by reason of his accepting the so-called original amendment by the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas, but I found from the first part of his speech that he had not, because, his remarks could be relevant only when combating the resolution of the Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji which was not before the Council. Then again, he eventually finished up by accepting the amendment.

Now, while addressing myself to the subject on its merits, I have only a few remarks to offer after the thoroughly exhaustive ground covered by the mover, the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas. With regard to the Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein's remarks about the consumption of cattle in Sind, I might say that I could not comprehend

CATTLE QUESTION: COMMITTEE.

[Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas.] [28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

what he was driving at, whether he was going to make out that cattle preservation was being very well looked after in Sind, and, therefore, there was no necessity for any action on the part of Government, or whether he was going to make out that the present state of things did not require to be interfered with. At all events, the opening remarks in his speech gave an indication that it would be wrong on the part of Government to interfere with human liberty. I do not know whether this is a question of interfering with human liberty, because, Government have been exercising control over the export of wheat; they have been exercising control over the trade of rice, and in many other directions they have been exercising control. And if they find that the control over the exportation of cattle is in the economic interests of the agriculturists, and that, therefore, the suggestions in the various resolutions should be adopted, I think, the question of interfering with human liberty will not arise at all.

I think the best of the resolutions on the subject is that of the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas. Therefore, I also join with him in thanking the Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji for having dropped his own resolution, because, I find that the best solution of the difficulty will be to arrive at the facts and figures before we make a plunge in the dark as suggested by the other resolutions, which are of an indecisive and indefinite character and the carrying out of which will raise many difficulties in the path of Government.

Now, it is quite obvious that of all the countries in the world India is the one where the preservation and breed of cattle is of the utmost importance for various reasons. First of all, milk is the most important diet both of the rich and the poor. Next, India is—I think, I am quite on safe ground if I venture to say so—more an agricultural country than any other country in the world. The bulk of the buffaloes and the cows contribute more towards the prosperity of agriculture than any other animal; so many products of the cow and of the buffalo enter into the daily economic life of every Hindu, nay of every Indian, and that is the reason why Government should take care that the breeding of cattle is properly carried out and that cattle are not taken away from the country or consumed to such an extent as to be a drain on the economy of the country.

There are three sections into which the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas has divided his remarks. One is the breed of cattle; another is their preservation from slaughter, and the third is their non-exportation. Now, as regards the breed of cattle, his remarks are extremely sound. The question requires to be fully enquired into, especially in view of the criticisms that we have seen in the press which arose from the agitation about the Ratona slaughter-house. The criticisms were to the effect that as a matter of fact the Ratona factory was not a mistake but was rather a move in the right direction, because, by the greater slaughter of the animals would the breed be stimulated, and that there would be a gain instead of a loss to the country. We do not know whether this is true. The question is one which requires investigation, because, we have not got enough data before us just at present. Therefore, the motion of the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas requires to be supported.

Then, as regards the slaughter of cows and cattle for the purposes of meat, I might say that, if my information is correct, the only sections of the community who think it indispensable for them to use beef are the military troops, and some limited sections of the population. I have been informed that the Mahomedans do not think it necessary to consume beef. On the contrary, they think it is rather too costly and that they would be perfectly reconciled to the consumption being limited, if not absolutely stopped. But that appears to me to be not a material point. What I was driving at was that in the present state of things you must have known of the politically-minded people thinking that some kind of modus vivendi can be arrived at in this behalf.

Now, as regards the exportation of cattle, I think, that is a problem of the utmost importance to the country and needs looking into. If it is true that the exportation of cattle is in the interests of the cattle industry in the country, then by all means the committee can give us facts and figures, and we can come to the conclusion whether there should be a restraint on exportation or not. This question is also connected with the question of the preservation of cattle in so far as the criticisms are concerned on the part of some newspapers that it is because there is a sufficient disposal or sale or exportation of cattle that breeders of cattle are encouraged to breed more cattle, and that, as a matter of fact, it will not result in any loss to the country as a whole. All these points are very doubtful. We have not got any statistics or data, and therefore, I strongly commend my honourable friend's resolution to the acceptance of the Council.

CATTLE QUESTION: COMMITTEE.

[28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; Mr. G. K. Parekh.]

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—May it please your Excellency,—I heartily support the resolution moved by the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas. The question as regards the slaughter as well as the export of milch cattle is one which is not free from difficulty. It requires investigation, and consequently the only way to find the solution is by a thorough enquiry into the question. The price of ghee and milk, which are important to the people, has gone up very high. The price of these articles as well as the prices of foodstuffs and clothing have pressed very hard upon the general public, and they are operating in a way which is not very healthy even for our administrative machinery. People are hard hit from all sides, and particularly with reference to ghee as well as milk. Consequently this is a question which is exercising the public mind. The question has two sides: the sentimental side and the economic side. We are concerned with the economic side. And even with regard to this side, so far as the slaughter of young and useful milch cattle is concerned, it is necessary that uncontrolled slaughter of such cattle should be stopped. It is in the interests of the country, and the case of the Bombay Municipality brings the question into prominent relief. There the best of the milch cattle are attracted; and when they get dry, the question becomes one of very serious consideration. The cost of maintaining them, while they are dry, is prohibitive, and there is no other place outside where they can conveniently send them. With proper exercise and food, the cattle in Bombay, I am told, get fatter and fatter, so that it is only the butcher who gives the price, and therefore, the cattle go to him. That is a large economic loss to the country. So far as my knowledge goes, I do not know that Government have at all made any arrangements for placing at the disposal of such cattle in Bombay convenient parts of forest areas for the purpose of sending them down there, in order that this problem may be solved. I know the question is being tackled, and within a short time perhaps all those conveniences may be conceded. The important question, however, which affects the economic condition of the country is that of maintaining the pedigree stock. That is a question which requires to be grappled with, and it is only a thorough and exhaustive enquiry which can do so. I, therefore, welcome the resolution in the form in which it has been moved.

The exponents of the export trade say that breeding is encouraged on account of export, and that for every 100 cattle exported about 500 are bred up in order that the exporter may be able to offer them a good price. Consequently they say that export trade is an impetus to good breeding. At present if we consider the conditions, ordinarily the rabari on the countryside is the breeder of cows and bullocks. He generally feeds his stock on the fields of other people because the gocharan has been hemmed in all round and he does so, because, until very lately a cow did not bring a good price. Of late, however, on account of export trade it fetches a good price, and consequently breeding is being attended to; and if good prices continue to be available, then, the rabari will go in for leasing large areas in order to feed his stock, and in this way the exponents of the export trade say that export encourages breeding, and, therefore, it need not be indiscriminately stopped.

It is further urged in support of it that wherever export trade has thrived the condition of the cattle is better. It is said that in Madras there is a district by name Nellore which is famous for its cattle and its export trade; so also in Mysore there is a taluka named Amrit Mahal which is famous for its breed of cattle and for the export trade. These instances are given in support of export trade as encouraging breeding of cattle. How far these arguments are correct it would be for the committee to examine, and, therefore, I think that the resolution deserves the support of the Council. The preservation of the pedigree stock both by prevention of indiscriminate slaughter of young and useful cattle as well as of export of cattle is necessary.

I would give one more reason why the economic side of breeding of the cattle is important. Just let us look at the number of male buffaloes as compared to the female buffaloes. The buffalo which gives milk is economically valuable, and, therefore, you see a large number of it. The male buffalo except in forest areas is not so useful, and it has not thriven in large numbers. Consequently breeding has a connection with the other conditions, and those conditions must be inquired into. But at the same time I am in complete sympathy with the views expressed by the Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji that indiscriminate slaughter of young and useful cattle as well as indiscriminate export of useful milch cattle which may drain away different pedigree stocks deserves to be checked.

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh:—Your Excellency,—I support the motion that is now before the Council. The general feeling of my community is that the shocking

CATTLE QUESTION: COMMITTEE.

[Mr. G. K. Parekh; Sardar S. C. Mudliar; Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas Mehta.] [28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

infant mortality that you find in the cities of this Presidency, such as, Bombay, Ahmedabad, Surat and others, is to a great extent due to the difficulty of finding cheap and pure milk, and they believe that this is due to the circumstance of the diminution resulting from the slaughter of young cattle. They think that if the slaughter of young cattle is prevented there would be a considerable improvement both in the percentage of general mortality and also in the physique of the people because there are a considerable number of people in this country who depend altogether on milk and milk produce as the chief article of nutriment. If, therefore, the facts which are in the possession of Government in connection with this question justify the view that the people hold in this matter, I submit that Government certainly ought to accept the resolution. If there be any doubt so far as the facts are concerned, it would be very desirable that there should be an inquiry into the matter, because, it would set at rest the general feeling of the people that this evil is remediable, but Government for reasons of their own are unwilling to take drastic measures to stop it. I have not the least doubt that if the facts are made clear they would consider the remedy that is necessary for the purpose of preventing this evil. And, therefore, I consider that this is a proper case in which if there be any doubt about facts, that they should be investigated, and it should be made clear whether the prevention that is sought for would cause any appreciable inconvenience to other communities or whether it is not necessary to check the evils that now exist.

The Honourable Sardar S. C. Mudliar :—Your Excellency,—The resolution put before this Council by the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas is one of national interest. The gravity of the situation has been realized, and, I think, it is time to find out some means to protect young and useful milch and agricultural cattle. These are the backbone of agriculture, on which the prosperity of the whole country depends. We know for certain that owing to the last famine many of the poor agriculturists to-day are not in a position to buy bullocks owing to high prices, and even after paying such prices they are not able to get that strong and healthy breed. At the beginning of this month owing to want of rain we all were getting very anxious, and our first thought was of these poor cattle. But thank God, the situation has been saved by this timely rain. The want of milch and agricultural cattle has been felt throughout the length and breadth of India, and we hear of many societies being formed to discuss and adopt means to save the situation. Under these circumstances, I think, it will be a very right thing for Government to adopt this resolution, and find out means to save and improve milch and agricultural cattle. If any of the proposals put before the Council are not practicable, Government with the aid of the department concerned should recommend to the Government of India such means as would tend to improve the present situation.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas and other honourable members who supported his resolution have in a very elaborate manner discussed this important matter and it is hardly necessary for me to add anything more. With these remarks I strongly support this most important and useful resolution.

The Honourable Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas Mehta :—Your Excellency,—There is no doubt that we have lost faith in committees that are usually started to deal with certain questions. But in this particular case where we have not got sufficient data to make any pronouncement, perhaps this is the best possible way of coming to some definite conclusion in case Government appoint a committee. Therefore, while I support the resolution moved by the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas, I desire to make a few observations on some points which are not quite germane to the main resolution.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas spoke on the main resolution on economic lines only, but while referring to the question of dairies he based his remarks on sentimental grounds. He said in Ahmedabad and Nadiad and other places people sell their milk to dairies at a high price, and ordinary people cannot find milk for their consumption. Surely it is a problem for the man who has cattle, and who has milk to sell. If he gets a better price by selling milk to dairies, he cannot be prevented from doing so. I do not think my honourable friend would like people to be prevented from selling their milk to the highest bidder. Moreover, a man who sells milk does it to get money. Surely dairies that do this kind of work are not in any way robbing the people of their milk. As regards milk sugar, I dare say, my honourable friend's information is not quite correct. It has been found that it does not pay to manufacture milk sugar. The only thing that the dairies are doing is to manufacture butter and ghee from milk and my honourable friend can have no objection to this work, and to convert separated milk into casein which is an industrial product and is valuable.

CATTLE QUESTION: COMMITTEE.

[28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas Mehta; Mr. G. S. Curtis; Mr. P. A. Desai; Mr. R. P. Paranjpye.]

I wish to make only one more remark. The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas said that we, as the public, have not done our duty in constructive work in starting cattle breeding operations. Perhaps we have not done all that we ought to have done. But I may inform the Council that we have some of us done something. We had started a scheme and we consulted the Director of Agriculture, and he told us that there were many practical difficulties in making that scheme a financial success, and we had to drop it. Now that Government have appointed a cattle breeding expert, it is just possible that our efforts may be successful. I do not know whether any honourable members of this Council have noticed that in to-day's papers one gentleman has come forward to say that he is starting a company with a capital of five crores to start cattle breeding operations. He said in his letter that he is floating a company with that capital.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis: —What is the object of the company?

The Honourable Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas Mehta:—The object of the company is to start cattle breeding farms. His letter has appeared in to-day's papers; and that company is capable of doing a good deal of useful work, and I hope that the cattle breeding expert and the Director of Agriculture will give that company all possible assistance to make that scheme a success. With these words I heartily support this resolution.

The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai:—Your Excellency,—I support this resolution with very great pleasure. India is admittedly an agricultural country. Seventy-one per cent. of the population depend upon agriculture, and agriculturists require bullocks for carrying on their agricultural operations. They require cattle for manuring purposes. India is not much advanced in science, and so until scientific fertilizers replace this cattle manure, we are in need of cattle.

Your Excellency, at least in every three years we have got famine or scarcity in the tract which is confined to Ahmednagar, Sholapur and Bijapur. In 1918 on account of scarcity we lost about 50 per cent. of the cattle. That was Divine Will. No body was responsible for that but for the export and for the slaughter, by these two ways, cattle which are left with us are being destroyed from day to day, and it lies in our power, if we have a desire, to check these two ways.

(His Excellency the President at this stage withdrew and the Honourable the Vice-President occupied the chair).

Each year we see the best cattle are exported from the country, and every day we see in big towns a number of cattle are slaughtered. For the preservation of the health of the children, milk is absolutely necessary, and unless good cows are preserved, it is difficult to get a good supply of milk. Therefore, it is a very great problem for the good of the whole country. My honourable friend Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah says if we have these restrictions placed on the individual liberty, it will be very difficult. But I say, when the larger interests of the country are to be taken into consideration, the smaller interests of the individuals are not to be looked to. It is for the interests of the whole country that the cattle should be preserved, and I, therefore, have very great pleasure in supporting the resolution.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—Mr. President,—I have also very great pleasure in supporting the resolution brought forward by my honourable friend Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas. I rise because, with the exception of the Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai, most of the speakers who have spoken so far belong to the Northern Division, and I would add my voice to show that people of this part of the Presidency are not slower in recognizing the value of cattle than those of the Northern Division. Milk and its products till recently have been the most important items of nutritive diet for all the people of this country. Recently, however, from the dietary of the poorer classes of the people milk and its products have largely disappeared. They are so costly that it is impossible for a poor man to afford to buy milk at all. We remember times when in Poona good fresh milk could be had at 8 seers a rupee. Now it is difficult to get good fresh milk even at 2 seers a rupee. Only two days ago I had to buy milk at 10 annas a seer. That shows that the supply of milk has very greatly decreased and consequently the vitality of the people whose only nutritive food was milk is, I believe, considerably deteriorated. There is no doubt at all that the remedies for this state of things have got to be found. First of all, we must see the magnitude of the problem, and my honourable friend's motion gives us a means for finding out the exact state of the problem. As he has well pointed out the problem is not only a problem for this Presidency but it is a problem for the whole country, and a committee should be appointed to find out the actual state of things and to study exactly what remedial measures should be taken. Of course, popularly various measures are suggested, but they are not necessarily the most suitable. But I do not agree with my honourable friend Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah when he says that any remedial measures are likely to be hard upon certain sections of the population and interfere with their freedom. In any case I do not think that Government should withdraw from any remedial measures simply because some of them may trench upon the liberty of individuals. In fact, what is Government but an agency to take measures to trench on the liberty of individuals in order to benefit the larger interests of the whole population? If it is found that greater good can be gained, I do not think that a Legislative Council like this should object to the measures for the purpose. In my own mind although indiscriminate prohibition of slaughter of all kinds of cattle would probably frustrate its own object, I think, a measure like this, namely, prohibition in any talukas, for instance, where the proportion of the population to the number of cattle falls below a certain minimum, some such measures like that, might be taken. Again, so far as the export of cattle is concerned, the export of cattle of certain breeds, the number of which in the country itself falls below a certain level, should be prevented. There are various other measures which might be suggested. Perhaps, for instance, the Revenue Department might encourage the sowing of fodder crops. Everybody has been saying that fodder has been getting more and more expensive. Of course, till now our people are generally accustomed to get fodder from public grazing grounds and from the Forest Department, but with the pressure of population and pressure of agriculture upon land, perhaps this is not likely to last very long. In other countries the state of things to a very great extent has been altered, where instead of public grazing grounds people are going in for sowing fodder crops for the purpose of fodder. The Revenue Department might possibly give encouragement to the sowing of fodder crops and in that way increase the supply of fodder. I only throw out these slight hints which a committee might go into, and in fact many more such proposals might be considered from a wider point of view. But in any case the proposition brought forward by the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas deserves the heartiest support of this Council.

CATTLE QUESTION: COMMITTEE.

[Mr. R. P. Paranjpye; Diwan Bahadur K. R. Godbole.] [28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—Mr. President,—With your permission, sir, I wish to offer a few remarks on the resolution that is before the Council. In the first place, I must say that the effect of this resolution will not be felt in the lifetime of the senior members of this Council. What the proposition suggests is that the local Government should approach the Government of India and ask them to appoint a committee. The committee is to investigate the cattle problem of the whole of India, of all the provinces of which India is composed. After they get the necessary information from these provinces the information will be collated and the committee will then formulate its proposals. The proposals will then be circulated to the local Governments for report and the final action of a committee of the description that is sought to be formed in this resolution will probably come to hand after the next ten or twelve years. I should have better appreciated some resolution that would have dealt with the problem in a manner by which the effect would have reached us earlier. I want to bring to the notice of this Council that in our agricultural tracts every agriculturist is fond of keeping a large number of cattle, a much larger number than he can provide for in the shape of fodder and accommodation. I have seen agriculturists keeping cattle to the extent of 15 and 20; what they do is that they allow them to graze in the common grazing ground of the village so long as the grazing season lasts in the rains, and in the cold weather, and in the hot weather they give them 10 or 15 pullas of kadbi, and this is all that these miserable cattle have to feed upon. What I want is that the sense of the agricultural community should develop, that their sense of responsibility should develop, and they should realize that they should not keep a larger number of cattle than they can efficiently keep in the hot weather. That is the time when these cattle suffer to a most serious extent. If this lesson could be driven into the heads of the agriculturists, that they should keep only such number of cattle as they can adequately provide for in the hot weather, I am sure that the breed of cattle will improve and the condition of cattle will greatly improve.

As regards the milch cattle, the feeling in the countryside is that the really good milkers should never be parted with. The agriculturist will stick to them as long as he can. I do not think the really good milker is ever sent to the slaughter-house. It is only the worthless animals, the animals that cannot be maintained on the countryside on account of the shortage of fodder, etc., that go to the slaughter-house. The remedy seems to me, if it is possible, that Government should have fodder preserves in each district, one large fodder preserve or two or three smaller fodder preserves in two or three different portions of the district, where agriculturists can send their cattle for grazing on payment. If this can be arranged for, then the cattle of the agriculturist during the monsoon and cold weather will be kept up in an efficient condition by himself, and when it gets beyond his capabilities to provide fodder, there is the preserve for him to fall back upon. If some such arrangement were made, I think that would improve the condition of the cattle immensely. But the first thing is that our agricultural community should realize their responsibility and keep only such a number of cattle as they can efficiently keep, and get rid of the cattle which they cannot keep. If they realize that, I think the problem will be greatly helped. As remarked by the previous speakers, the problem is getting more intense every day, and every gentleman who has got two or three children in his house feels it almost every day of his life. The committee that is proposed will do a certain amount of good eventually, but we want more direct methods to be adopted, and one of these methods is what I have suggested that the number of cattle to be kept by each agriculturist should be limited to the number that he can adequately maintain each year.

CATTLE QUESTION: COMMITTEE.

[28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole; Mr. G. S. Curtis; Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; the Vice-President; Mr. H. P. W. Macnaghten.]

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis: —What is to be done with the balance?

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—The balance will go to the slaughter-house!

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole: —The remainder will go to the market, and we need not enquire what will eventually happen to them.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—I should like to know from the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole whether he is against the small cattle breeder and whether he is only in favour of the capitalist cattle breeder, the cattle breeder on a large scale. I have not been able so far to gather what his view is in regard to this particular matter.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—I say that cattle breeding ought to be encouraged whether it is on a large or a small scale. I object to people keeping cattle without being in a position to properly provide for them. In times of scarcity, they allow these cattle to grow into skeletons, and to roam about the country. I object to people keeping cattle under such conditions. I, therefore, support the resolution, but for more direct action I would plead that Government, if possible, should take action in the way that I have suggested. If possible, in each district there should be fodder preserves to which agriculturists, when they are in difficulties, could send their cattle for grazing on easy terms. With these remarks, sir, I support the resolution.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—The Council will now adjourn till 2-45 p.m.

The Council then adjourned for lunch.

After Lunch.

The Council re-assembled at 2-45 p.m.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Further consideration of resolution No. 15.

The Honourable Mr. H. P. W. Macnaghten:—Mr. President,—May I say a few words on the technical side of the question at present before the Council? I entirely agree with everything that has been said in support of this resolution. There is nothing that is more important to this country, and to this Presidency in particular, than the supply of cattle, which is absolutely necessary for the provision of milk and ghee to the poorer classes and for the agriculture of this province. But, at the same time, I should like to say that I consider that any question of appointing a committee to go into the difficulties that have arisen seems to me certain to lead to trouble, and it is likely will not lead to any good results. To legislate on the question of killing milch cattle seems to me a very difficult matter. It is purely an economic question, and any one who is in the habit of killing his milch cattle before they have gone barren ought to be punished by being sent to a lunatic asylum and to no other destination. But it is a very difficult economic question which cannot be settled by legislation pure and simple. It is a different problem in every district, and a different problem in regard to every single animal that comes up for slaughter in this manner. The passing authority will have no notion as to the particular position of the animal which comes up to be passed for slaughter. It may be that there are special circumstances involved, which render the animal in consideration unprofitable. That must be a matter solely for the owner to decide, and to appoint a committee to go into the different circumstances that arise all over India seems to me to be a very slow method of dealing with the case.

CATTLE QUESTION: COMMITTEE.

[Mr. H. P. W. Macnaghten; Mr. H. S. Lawrence; Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas Mehta.] [28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

Sir, there is only one solution that I can find to the difficulties that arise in connection with cattle, and that is, not that we should be asking the help of Government, but that the wealthy gentlemen of this province should do what wealthy gentlemen have done all over Europe to improve the breed of cattle and horses in their respective countries. It can be done, and it can only be done on a moderate scale by wealthy people, who are prepared to lose a certain amount of money, but who may make a very great deal of money in the process for themselves subsequently. But they must risk a certain amount of money to do so. To ask for the help of Government seems to me to be very dangerous, at any rate, to rely entirely upon the help of Government. The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas, when he was speaking on the question of the Port Trust hotel, pointed out to us that the Port Trust could not manage a hotel as economically as a private individual who wished to make a profit out of it. That is perfectly true, and if that applies to a hotel, it applies very much more to cattle breeding, which must be taken up as a hobby if it is to be a success, and if it is to be profitable.

I hope that this debate will lead to a very great number of gentlemen supporting the cause of cattle breeding very much more enthusiastically than has been done in the past, and I think that that is the only way in which the cattle of the Presidency can be put on a proper footing again.

The Honourable Mr. H. S. Lawrence:—Mr. President,—I think we may heartily welcome this discussion, for it will lead to the dissipation of a certain amount of somewhat erroneous thinking on this subject, and if a thorough enquiry be held into the whole question, the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas and those other speakers who have voiced the general feeling that Government are very apathetic in regard to the treatment of cattle, will, I think, be satisfied that on the contrary Government have for many years given a very great deal of time and attention to this matter.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas mentioned that an expert in cattle breeding had been appointed for the first time, in the last year or two. The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas must have misunderstood the situation. What has happened is that an expert in the Agricultural Department has been appointed for the first time. For the last 30 years or so, cattle breeding has been in the hands of the Veterinary Department, and many experts of that department have studied this matter during that period, and probably more. As a matter of administrative convenience the charge of this particular function has been transferred from the Veterinary Department to the Agricultural Department, and a special officer has been appointed in the Agricultural Department.

Then, sir, we have had a large number of statistics to think over, and, I think, several of those statistics quite clearly have led to erroneous conclusions. For instance, one honourable member stated that the export of hides had increased 300 per cent., from, I think, 60,000 cwts. to 180,000 cwts., and he drew from that fact, if it was a fact, the conclusion that the slaughter of cattle had increased three-fold. I think it is fairly obvious that no such conclusion can be based on that fact. The export of hides depends on the movements of world-wide trade, and not on the number of cattle that die or are killed in this country. Perhaps, I ought to explain that a little further: 60,000 cwts. do not represent a very large number of cattle, whereas if you take the cattle census of India, it runs into several millions.

Somebody else stated that the actual number of cattle in the country had decreased very largely. I was looking up an authoritative statistical book, the International Annual, published by the Agricultural Institute of Rome, and the figures there given are very different. They show that in ten years, 1907 to 1916, the cattle population of India had increased by over 50 per cent.; they had grown from 91 millions to 147 millions. I offer these statistics for your consideration. It merely shows that the matter does require very careful consideration. You can have statistics to justify, or at any rate to support, very different points of view.

Then one honourable gentleman gave us the very valuable and interesting information that a company has been started with a capital of Rs. 5,00,00,000, but I am not quite certain to what particular branch the operations of the company refer, whether for cattle breeding or for the manufacture of dairy products.

The Honourable Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas Mehta:—For cattle breeding.

The Honourable Mr. H. S. Lawrence:—Well, Rs. 5,00,00,000 will make a very sound company, no doubt, but I should like to give some figures. In the United States,

CATTLE QUESTION: COMMITTEE.

[28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. H. S. Lawrence; Mr. Munmohundass Ramji.]

the capital invested in farm animals is valued at 2,000 crores, and the annual outturn of dairy products in the form of butter, cheese and dried milk alone is valued at 100 crores a year. It is obvious that one company with a capital of 5 crores, ranging over a country with a cattle population of about 150 millions, is only just touching the very fringe of this subject. There is obviously here an opening for the investment of immense quantities of capital. Some gentlemen perhaps may object to the export of milk products from India. But I think, if they do so, they are going contrary to the experience of trade and commerce throughout the world. The greater the demand for your produce, the greater will be the supply, and the greater the benefit to the country. However, I only wish to point out at this stage that Government, as represented by the Agricultural Department, will welcome very cordially the most detailed enquiry into the efforts that they have made in the past for the protection of cattle and the support of this great industry.

Another point in regard to which the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas complained was that Government have been exceedingly apathetic in regard to fodder. There again, enquiry will be most valuable. When you deal with fodder your figures run into a very large number of cyphers. To support one head of cattle through six months of dearth between one season and another you require 2,000 lbs. of fodder. That is, 1,00,000 lbs. will support 50 cattle. You have 9 million cattle in the Presidency alone, and I see that the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye is busy making a mental calculation, and he will no doubt tell us how many crores of pounds will be required for this purpose.

The Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji:—Mr. President,—Speaking on the resolution that has been moved by the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas, I agree with the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole, who has remarked that this enquiry will cause a certain amount of delay. Whether this recommendation will help the Government of Bombay or not depends on whether the Government of India will accept this proposition and appoint a committee. If they do not do that, there is an end to the matter. My suggestion is that the case would be that the Government of Bombay should take action, and find out what the real thing is that is required to keep up with the times. The point involved in the resolution is an economic one.

What we want to know is, first, how the stock of cattle can be increased. The second point is how the cattle are to be preserved from being destroyed unnecessarily, and the third is, how the breed can be improved. Of course, we all know that when an economic problem presents itself before the Government, it is their duty to see into it and find out whether the complaint is a real one, and if so, what they should do in the matter. My friend the Honourable Mr. Macnaghten said that it was a very unwise thing to expect Government to do such things, and he relied upon private enterprise. The mover of the resolution has admitted that private enterprise has done something less than what it should have done. But the question is this. How is it that the Government of England went to the help of some association to see whether a longer staple cotton could not be grown in the British Empire? If the British Government are so alive to the economic question of the land, is it not then a question for the Government of Bombay or for the Government of India to see whether they can increase the stock of cattle and improve the breed? In reply to a question that I put some time back in this Council, I was referred to the statistical figures that are published about cattle. But these figures do not represent the true state of affairs. There are two things: export of cattle on account of traders or private individuals, and export of cattle on account of Government. The statistics, however, do not give the number of cattle exported for Government purposes but only those exported by private enterprise. Information on this former point is not at all available. One of the previous speakers said that in a publication of Rome there are statistics given for India, and therein he finds a certain state of affairs. Well, if the Government of Rome or the people of Rome take the trouble of collecting statistics about India and publishing them for the wide world, is it not the duty of this Government or the Government of India to have in their possession all the necessary information regarding India?

Now, what do we find the position to be with regard to milk and ghee? We do not find milk sufficient for rearing children. You will imagine, sir, how difficult it is for a poor family with more than one child to buy milk at the rate of eight annas a seer for the purpose of rearing them. About ghee, what is the position? The price of ghee is Rs. 1-8-0 a seer. Even then, perhaps 50 per cent. or 60 per cent. or 75 per cent. of what is sold in the name of ghee is tallow. That is the position. It is, therefore, incumbent on Government to look into these things, and find out some remedy to improve the condition of the cattle and to see that unnecessary waste does not take place. What do we find in the slaughter-houses? Young cows are being killed. For what purpose? For the purpose of satisfying human greed! That is all, and nothing more than that. We have to find out whether it is in the economic interests of the country to kill young cows like this. All these questions require to be enquired into, and therefore, from the economic point of view an enquiry is quite necessary.

CATTLE QUESTION: COMMITTEE.

[Mr. Munmohundass Ramji; Mr. G. S. Curtis.] [28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Mr. Chairman,—I think we have had a most interesting discussion on what is a very important subject. The resolution moved by my honourable friend Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas runs as follows:—

> "This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that the Government of Bombay do represent to the Government of India the necessity of a special committee of officials and non-officials being appointed to submit a comprehensive report regarding the condition of cattle in the whole of India and the advisability of devising checks on slaughter and export of cattle generally and of milch cattle in particular."

There are two points. The first one with which I thoroughly agree with the honourable mover is that the matter must be a Government of India concern. One reason which has occurred to him is that it is not enough to stop the export in Bombay and allow it to go in Madras and Calcutta. More than this is the fact that beef is a cheap and nourishing food, and if you are going to infringe upon the rights of private persons to obtain their beef, you have to undertake legislation of an entirely novel, of an entirely far-reaching character. And it would be absolutely necessary that the penal measure which it would be necessary to introduce should apply to the whole of India. A second reason why the matter must be an all-India one is that you are not dealing with the Presidency of Bombay only. You have to deal with the Native States also. The most important cattle breeding centre in the Bombay Presidency has its home in the Native States, in Dharampur and Palanpur for instance, and in the Madras Presidency, or in the Madras area it is in Mysore. It is perfectly obvious, therefore, that if any measure is at all to be taken, it must be taken with reference to the whole of India.

Further, as regards the appointment of a committee, on behalf of Government I have to say that we shall have no objection whatever to forwarding the resolution to the Government of India with a view to their acceptance. There has been very considerable discussion with reference to the proposed establishment of a slaughter-house in the Central Provinces, and in connection with that representations have been made, and the Government of India will have to take into account what has been said here to consider the possibility of a committee to examine this important question. But, sir, when we get a little further and come down to practical measures, which the honourable mover of this resolution and other speakers wish to take with reference to the problem before us, I find very considerable doubt. I picture myself in the unfortunate position of the secretary who has to draft the letter recommending the resolution to the Government of India, and I find it very difficult indeed to put forward clearly what it is that the Council wishes to do. We have a good reputation in the world as a practical Presidency, and we must see that we are not putting before the Government of India visionary proposals, but only those of a thoroughly practical nature based on facts and figures.

Now, sir, what is the first point? The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas wishes to stop the export of cattle. I understand that the total number of milch cattle exported from this Presidency is 1,500. But I contend that the export of 1,500 milch cattle from this Presidency will make no effect whatever on the supply of milk or milk products. Even if the export were 100 times as much, the effect will not be large. In fact the particular area in Gujerat from which these cattle have gone, the effect has been, as the Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai says, that the professional breeders now no longer allow their cattle to run about. They look after them more carefully. They take up land for grazing them, and they are anxious to breed their cattle carefully in order to get the very substantial prices that the Brazilian dealers offer them. As far as I have been able to view the matter, export, so far from doing harm, has done unmitigated good. I may add that with regard to one shipload that I saw myself, the dealer informed a friend of mine, who informed me later, that the cattle were bought as famine cattle, and if they had not been exported, they would have died in the country. So far, therefore, I do not see that export would do any harm. The Honourable Mr. Lawrence laid stress on the importance as far as possible of encouraging export. In villages in some parts of England, of which I have some knowledge, there was at one time great competition in the wool trade between England and the continent, and there was a very strict prohibition on the export of wool or the export of sheep. This passed away after some time. The sheep industry increased in Argentine and Australia. And breeders there by importing stud rams improved their herds without any assistance from

CATTLE QUESTION: COMMITTEE.

[28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. G. S. Curtis; Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas.]

Government. And what is the result? At the present moment they are offering £1,000 or £1,200 for a stud ram. Residents of Gujerat from which part the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas comes may be surprised at this. But has any resident there or any wealthy merchant taken steps to establish a stud bull farm? Why, is there a single stud bull yard on this side of India?

The Honourable Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas:—In Sind there is one.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—I accept the statement with thanks. I forgot that a movement had been on foot in Sind in this connection. I hope it will meet with success. As far as I know, the only private herd in the Presidency proper was that started by Lord Willingdon and now maintained by His Excellency Sir George Lloyd.

Now, sir, one matter more. The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas has laid considerable stress on the apathy of Government, and he twice made what, I think, is an unmerited sneer on this Government that the recent appointment of a cattle breeding expert had been made at the instance of the Government of India. Sir, if the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas knew a little more about the conditions of agriculture in Bombay, he would realize that Bombay does not wait to be prompted or encouraged by the Government of India. Our Agricultural Department is acknowledged to be by far the most efficient, the most progressive in India, and we have a cattle breeding department in charge of extremely skilled officials now doing work which was done by the Veterinary Department for nearly 40 years. The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas has perhaps never heard of the Chharodi farm that has been in existence for 21 years. We have a pedigree herd there which has done very well. I do not think that it can be laid at the door of the Bombay Government that they have been at all apathetic with reference to the breeding of cattle. The breeding of cattle in the Bombay Presidency is not a very simple matter. In Gujerat and the areas near it, you have a definite type of animal. In the Deccan there is not much cattle breeding. The breeding is mainly in the Satpuras, and there is no fixed type of breed. Efforts are being made to establish a cattle farm in Dharwar and in another place. Time will show how far these will be successful. So much as regards the action of Government.

I come now to a very different question, namely, the restriction of slaughter. We have had various figures given us of the number of horned cattle killed at municipal slaughter-houses. Now I am not quite sure. I have not been able to make out what the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas wishes us to do. As far as I can make out he wishes that the slaughter of cattle or milch cattle below a certain age is to be made a penal offence. The Honourable Mr. Upasani quite rightly pointed out that there is no provision, at the present moment, in the Municipal Act to this effect. What I want the honourable member to tell me in his reply is: Is the legislation making cattle-killing penal to be restricted to municipal areas or is it to be extended to all areas? If Rama Bapu Mahar kills a yearling heifer inside the municipal area of Poona, is he to be prosecuted? What is to be done if he kills it in a nullah at Hadapsar? If he is to be punished it will be necessary to amend the Indian Penal Code. We shall have to instruct the Advocate General to draft some legislation to the effect that if a milch cow of the age of two years or under is killed it is to be an offence of culpable bovicide. It is a very serious question, and I want the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas to tell me in his reply how to draft the letter. It is dangerous to introduce new offences into the countryside, and if you want this offence to be on your criminal register, you are running a very great risk indeed. The amount of village quarrels and crimes and eventually village murders and charges which are likely to arise out of this offence is not a matter to be lightly overlooked.

The Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji made fun of the Honourable Mr. Lawrence's figures because they were taken from a book published at Rome. I say at once that there is no ground for jest. There is a central Bureau at Rome from which the figures collected from the whole world have been published. It is published by an office which is maintained by various countries, and the figures quoted by the Honourable Mr. Lawrence are thoroughly reliable, and they are worth noting. Those figures show that there has been an increase by 50 per cent. in the number of cattle in India in ten years. Now, sir, people who complain of the shortness of cattle have got to get round those figures somehow. The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas is quite correct in alluding to the fact that in Bengal the statistics were not as complete as they are elsewhere. Bengal has no village statistics. But our own statistics are, I think, fairly accurate. We take them once every five years, and we can tell from these statistics whether there has been a very material decrease. At the same time I must not omit to notice the remarks of my honourable friend Dewan Bahadur Godbole. He remarked that the ordinary villager in the Deccan was in the habit of keeping twice or three times as many cattle as he wanted, and the result was that in the hot weather you see these cattle roaming about without anything to eat; and not properly fed. That, sir, is the problem to which the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas's suggestions furnish no remedy. When I interrupted the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole and asked him what he proposed to do with the balance, the Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas remarked "Of course, slaughter-house." Well that is exactly the case. In any other country in the world they would go to the slaughter-house where they would fetch a good price and they do fetch a good price now. Are they to be left starving or are they to fetch a price for the owners?

CATTLE QUESTION: COMMITTEE.

[Mr. G. S. Curtis; Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas.] [28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

One more matter. Throughout the speech of the Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji, I heard no suggestion that any one has a duty in this matter except Government. As I said I have never heard of Government action with reference to this matter. I have heard of a case the other day in which an Englishman who was once a merchant in Bombay went in for cattle breeding in England. He, the other day, sold 25 yearling bulls at £1,150 apiece. There is nothing to prevent any Indian merchant resident in Bombay going into breeding and selling 25 bulls at Rs. 1,150 apiece. I do not know of one at the present moment who is breeding cattle in India. How many millowners of Bombay own a herd of cattle? I guarantee there is no one. The only cattle herd in the Bombay Presidency is that of His Excellency the Governor. I am referring to this matter because the resolution of the honourable mover makes what seems to be an extremely interesting suggestion. He wishes that the Pinjrapols should be utilized for constructive work, that is, instead of merely preserving aged cattle, they should go on breeding and preserving pedigree cattle. I venture to hope that he will follow up that suggestion, and that those institutions will eventually be used throughout the Presidency as the means of preserving a really good type of cattle, and in that way improve the breed. Furthermore, may I appeal to him to use his great influence for the purpose of encouraging societies with which he is connected to take up the matter of cattle breeding and improving the breed of cattle? This is really a matter for private enterprise, not for Government.

There is one more matter. A great deal has been made of the slaughter of ten thousand milch cattle in Bombay. I entirely agree. It is a great pity. But I may point out that it is entirely unnecessary. It is for the sake of milk that these cattle are brought into Bombay. What I submit is that you should provide for more organization in this matter. Organize your milk supply. Do not let cattle be brought to your home for milk but organize dairy farms, start refrigerators and try to supply proper milk, and it will be no longer necessary for the wealthy residents of Bombay to have huge herds of cattle brought on to Malabar Hill in order that the residents may get pure milk. This is a matter purely of private effort and of private capital. A small effort is being made at present but so far it has commanded very little support. I refer to the dairy at Palghar. But with the wealth of Bombay it ought to be possible to have half a dozen dairies in Bombay. It is a most pitiful sight for one to see milk coming in by the B. B. & C. I. Railway in brass pots covered with dried grass. Everybody knows that milk conveyed under these conditions is absolutely unsanitary and it may do more harm than good. So organize the milk supply, improve the train service for milk and organize dairy farms, and all this trouble of milch cattle will disappear altogether.

One more remark, sir. I have great pleasure on behalf of Government in accepting this resolution. I foresee considerable difficulties in giving effect to the suggestion of the honourable member, but when we see the results of the committee's inquiry we can see whether something cannot be done to establish the proper breeding of cattle on a sound footing and thus to ensure improvement.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—Sir,—I have followed with very great interest the debate on my resolution, and although in view of the fact that Government propose to accept this resolution, I do not propose to elaborate any of the points on which honourable members tried to show their agreement with the view that I put before them in my opening speech, I think that the debate on this resolution would be incomplete if I do not refer to some points raised by other honourable members, especially the Honourable Member in Charge who, agreeing generally with the resolution, thought that the resolution was either defective or not feasible. I would, therefore, deal with the points raised by the Honourable Member in Charge and some other honourable members seriatim.

The most shocking proof of the necessity of some action in the direction that I have indicated came from the first honourable member who spoke on my resolution, namely, the Honourable Mr. Upasani. The honourable member, while he did not give us the name of the municipality in whose area the event occurred,

CATTLE QUESTION: COMMITTEE.

[28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas; Mr. G. S. Curtis.] told us of a cow which had conceived having been killed and a living calf came out after the slaughter and that calf was also slaughtered. That by itself shows, if any proof was necessary at all, that the Government of Bombay might well take action and lay down that milch cattle that already carry should not be allowed to be slaughtered in slaughter-houses. I expected to hear some words from the Honourable Member in Charge as regards this fact which was referred to by my honourable friend Mr. Upasani. The Honourable Mr. Upasani said that section 142 of the District Municipal Act did not permit of district municipalities taking any action in that direction. My honourable friend Rao Saheb Harilal Desai has, however, very kindly discovered for me that section 48 (1) (a) does give district municipalities sufficient power to take action if they desire to do so. The Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai would himself perhaps have explained further how action could be taken thereunder, but he discovered the fact of this section giving the power after he had spoken on the subject.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—I beg the honourable member's pardon. Will he kindly read out the section?

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—Yes. Section 48 (1) reads as follows:—

> "(1) Every municipality may from time to time, with the previous sanction, in the case of City Municipalities, of the Governor in Council, or in other cases of the Commissioner, make, alter or rescind by-laws, but not so as to render them inconsistent with this Act, (a) for the regulation and inspection of markets and slaughter-houses," and so on.

The regulation and inspection of markets and slaughter-houses, it has been contended by some, might include a restriction on cattle that may be slaughtered there.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—I can only say that I do not quite accept the honourable member's interpretation of the section.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—Very well, sir, if that interpretation is not correct, all I can say is that the District Municipal Act requires to be amended to include a suitable section in this connection.

Whilst the Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah was speaking on this resolution, I was not at first clear whether he intended to support or oppose the resolution, but later on he very kindly showed his complete concurrence with the resolution. I am sorry, however, that he should have thought it necessary to refer to any question of the hackneyed difference between Hindu and Mahomedan points of view in this matter. As the Council must have noticed, I absolutely refrained from making any reference to any sentimental difference between the points of view of these two communities in moving this resolution, and I moved and discussed it purely from the economic point of view. In fact, I tried to mention all the points from the economic point of view only. The Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah stated that, while all Mahomedans were meat eaters, many Hindus were also meat eaters. But I have not put it from that point of view at all. The pandit of Cashmere, for instance, is a meat eater without any parallel at all. I personally wish that the aspect that he referred to and the question of differences between Hindus and Mahomedans had not been referred to at all.

My honourable friend Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas pointed out that whilst in the major part of my speech I tried to stick only to the economic aspect of this subject in speaking on the question of dairies I had been led away by sentimental points. I do not know whether I was not able to make myself clear in regard to dairies in the Kaira district but what I wished to point out to the Council was not what I thought of it myself, but what the man in the street thought of it. I do not think that I said that I sympathised with the views of the "man in the street" in the Kaira district. I only mentioned them for the purpose of showing that owing to these various sentiments and feelings, it may be very desirable to have the whole question examined thoroughly once for all. The Honourable Mr. Lalubhai mentioned to the Council some news about a company with rupees 5 crores capital having been floated. I unfortunately have not seen the announcement. It will be, I hope, an exception to many of the companies that have been floated in recent times with large capital and the investors thereof may, let us hope, reap the benefit, if not in the shape of dividends, at least, of having done something to ameliorate the condition of the cattle generally.

CATTLE QUESTION: COMMITTEE.

[Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas; Mr. G. S. Curtis.] [28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole was as usual very pessimistic and, if I may say so, very conservative. He felt that there was a surplus of cattle with cultivators and he appeared to think that as long as those continued, Government need not take any action or that no action was desirable. The Honourable Mr. Curtis in the course of his speech asked me a pointed question with reference to the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole's remarks. When I interrupted the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole and said that the balance of the cattle would go to the slaughter-house, I said what in my opinion was the only reply that the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole could give. At any rate the Honourable Dewan Bahadur appeared to put before us no alternative to my resolution. All that I gathered from his remarks was that he was for leaving the cattle question as it is, and for pursuing the policy of laissez faire that has been pursued up to now, and that in his opinion the cattle question was not half as important as many of the questions in which he himself took special interest. His view may be a very correct one, but I am afraid that he will find the majority of the people strongly opposed to the view that he put forward. In my opinion the Honourable Dewan Bahadur is not quite correct in telling us that the average Indian cultivator has got more cattle than he can look after. If it is so, all the more reason for a sort of enquiry which would convince the people as to the best remedy for it. I submit that the remedy that I suggest is the only remedy.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Will the honourable member tell us what that remedy is?

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—The remedy is to get the whole subject enquired into. Let the Government find out what is feasible and suggest some remedies and then ask the people to follow up the same. The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole also swept aside what I had to advance on the fodder question. I know his very tepid sympathy with that part of the necessity of this Presidency, but all that I can say is that the Government of Bombay have not been able to congratulate themselves on their decision of 1914 re fodder storage and find themselves more or less convinced now of the necessity and feasibility of doing something in the matter; they have now begun to take some interest in fodder storage, and my only regret is that they have not yet done anything like what they might have done. What I submit, sir, is that they can do a great deal more in this connection if they take up the question in right earnest.

My honourable friend Mr. Macnaghten thinks that for people who kill young milch cattle the only proper place is a lunatic asylum. I am afraid in that case the owners of the 10,000 cattle which, according to the Bombay Municipal Commissioner's report, go to the Bandra slaughter-house ought to be put in a lunatic asylum. But putting them in a lunatic asylum will not help the question.

The Honourable Member in Charge drew an amusing picture of the difficulties in devising a new section in the Penal Code by which unnecessary slaughter of cattle could be made penal. I was not bold enough at any stage in my opening speech to recommend that it should be made penal. But what I submit is that if after an enquiry it was found necessary to make it penal, it was only a question of drafting, if the Government thought it necessary and the country concurred in it. The difficulty of drafting anything has never been insuperable. As a matter of fact, we ourselves know that most difficult looking things have been put into legal form and drafts. But might I ask the honourable member a simple question? Suppose that unnecessary or unwarranted slaughter of cattle is made penal, would it be difficult to enforce this or to detect such a crime? Is the Government not able to enforce prohibitions regarding illicit possession of opium, bhang, ganja, and in the Bombay City, tobacco over a certain weight? Has the Government not been able to prevent salt being made in the wild runns of Cutch and Marwar? Sir, I submit, if Government have a will to do a thing, they have the way to do it well. If the country wants it and if Government have the will, I do not think there is any difficulty in putting any reasonable enactment in legal form.

The Honourable Mr. Lawrence has very rightly stood up for the department which has charge of this subject. He seemed to think that I wanted to run down the department. I never ran down the department that has charge of this question. What I did say was as regards Government's general apathy in the matter. I said what I did with the object of spurring on the department to do more than it has done, and I hope my honourable friend and also the Honourable Member in Charge will not think that I had any intention of running down the department. I feel that the Bombay Government has been the best of all provincial governments in India in many directions, but that does not prevent us from asking that we might have a still better and more up-to-date policy followed by them in this subject. I do hope that the Honourable Member in Charge and the Bombay Government will not think that I do not appreciate what Government has done till now, and merely wish to criticise; but we are here not so much to tell the Government "Bravo" for all that they do, but to make suggestions to Government wherever it may strike us in our humble opinion that they can do better.

CATTLE QUESTION : COMMITTEE.

[28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas; Mr. G. S. Curtis.]

The Honourable Mr. Lawrence told us that there are several breeding centres in the Presidency. I certainly know that there are a few of them. But I feel that there have never been anything like enough breeding centres in the Presidency. I do not remember the actual figure that the Honourable Mr. Lawrence mentioned when he made the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye count the quantity of grass that would be required for about 9 millions of cattle. But if there are anything like 9 millions of cattle—I am speaking subject to correction—I would ask the Honourable Mr. Lawrence how many Government cattle breeding centres there ought to be in the Presidency, and how many there are? The Honourable Member in Charge did mention Chharodi. Yes, that was one; but how many more Chharodis have you got, sir?

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis :—There are two others. Tago and Karachi.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas :—I should be very sorry, sir, to have to criticise Government again, but I do wish and hope that you will not take amiss the suggestion that I make here. You began with Chharodi nearly 21 years ago, and at the end of 21 years we do not want you to point only to the Chharodi farm and one or two others, but we would like you to be able to say that you have multiplied the number of cattle farms twenty fold after all this time. Of course we know that the institute at Rome to which the Honourable Mr. Lawrence referred, and to which the Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji also referred, is an international bureau for the collection of statistics of all countries. I suppose what the Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji meant to say was that it is a pity that for purposes of the cattle figures of India we had to refer to what has been compiled in Rome. What the Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji meant was that he expected that the Government of India had figures that were more readily available and more precise.

Now, sir, the Honourable Mr. Lawrence also tried to tell the Council how very difficult it was to provide for any sort of fodder storage. I do not know why neither the Honourable Mr. Lawrence nor the Honourable Member in Charge referred to the question of the encroachment on cattle pasturage, which is of course in deference to the demand for more land being made available for cultivation. I can only think that it must have escaped the honourable member's attention, when he had to deal with so many points. The question of fodder storage is a question, which, I submit, does not need any proof as regards the necessity for action. The large military operations that have been carried on since the outbreak of the war in this connection, and the lakhs of tons of grass which have been exported, are, I think, sufficient reply to the practicability and the advantage of the whole of this question.

You, sir, have referred to the possible difficulty of negotiating with Native States in this connection. We all know that whenever there is an all-India question, Native States generally fall into line with any policy that the Government of India may adopt. But, sir, instead of having the Native States having to follow the Government policy in this connection, they may have by themselves, without any initiative from British India, already put into action restrictions on slaughter of cattle, and latterly also regarding export of cattle from their limits. Why magnify any small trouble that you might have to encounter in making a start? I think it can very fairly be said that the greatest difficulty in this matter will never come from the Native States. It is for British India to make up its mind.

It was stated in the course of the Honourable Mr. Curtis's reply that Government cannot be a party to any visionary proposals being submitted to the Government of India. I did not want to interrupt you, sir, while you were speaking. But I do wish you had indicated to me what part of my resolution you felt as visionary. I may safely say, sir, that I feel that the whole aspect of the resolution is a practical one, and the only difficulty or the only vision if I may so call it, that has been pointed out to me is that the whole process is much too slow. My honourable friend Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas and the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole do not believe in committees. I suppose that is so, because, they have both been members of important committees before now; I think one was on the pilgrim committee, and the other on the co-operative committee. Except these two gentlemen, everybody else has felt that there would be considerable use of the deliberations of an all-India committee considering this question. Any way, I should have liked to know as to what part of my resolution was felt to be visionary.

CATTLE QUESTION: COMMITTEE—MUNICIPAL EDUCATIONAL EXPENDITURE—DIVISION OF KHANDESH—URDU COLLEGES.

Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas; the Vice-President; Mr. S. B. Upasani; Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud.] [28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—I would like to remind the honourable member that he is supposed to address the chair.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—I meant to address the chair all the while.

The honourable member, sir, referred to some famine cattle as having been exported. I suppose he was referring to a matter which took place 18 months ago. I think the Government of India have admitted that the export of cattle complained of does not refer to famine cattle. The main question is as regards the export of cattle to Brazil, and I wonder if the Government of Bombay have any doubt about Brazil taking away the best breed of the cattle in the Bombay Presidency. I would like to refer to the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sarma's reply to a question only the other day in the Imperial Council. He says:—

> "After a careful consideration of the question from all points of view, the Government of India have generally accepted these conclusions....."

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—I would like to bring to the notice of the honourable member that he has been speaking for over 20 minutes, while the time allotted to him for his reply is only 15 minutes.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—I will read only a few more lines. The Honourable Rao Bahadur Sarma goes on to say:—

> "The Government of India, generally accept these conclusions, but they have addressed the local Governments and administrations impressing upon them the desirability of keeping a careful watch on the nature of the animals exported."

In reply to a supplementary question that I put yesterday, the Honourable Mr. Curtis told the Council that there is no check exercised on the export of cattle. Thus what the Government of India think is being done in the provinces is not being done, namely, the nature of the cattle that are being exported is not being carefully watched.

There is only one more observation that I wish to make. I do not in the least minimise the fact that private enterprise has been very slow. I do not want Government to take up the breeding of cattle. I only want Government to provide centres where people who want to get their cows or buffaloes bred in a proper manner can do so. The Honourable Mr. Macnaghten seemed to think that although I was advocating that private enterprise could run a business cheaper than Government, still I wanted Government to undertake the breeding of cattle, or the running of dairies. I have never advocated that. I hope that the Council will accept my resolution.

The resolution was put to the vote and carried.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Resolution No. 5. The Honourable Mr. Upasani.

This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that Government be pleased to share two-thirds of the expenditure incurred by municipalities on education.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—Mr. President,—I beg to ask for permission to withdraw the resolution.

The resolution was by leave withdrawn.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Resolution No. 6. The Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud.

This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that a committee be appointed to consider the question of readjusting the existing division of Khandesh for revenue and judicial purposes.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud:—Mr. President,—I would ask for permission to withdraw this resolution.

The resolution was by leave withdrawn.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Resolution No. 7. The Honourable Sardar Gulam Jilani.

URDU COLLEGES—SUBDIVISION OF AGRICULTURAL LANDS.

[28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [The Vice-President; Sardar Gulam Jilani; Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.]

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Resolution No. 7. The Honourable Sardar Gulam Jilani.

"This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that the Urdu Training Classes at Poona and Ahmedabad be immediately developed into full training colleges, and located in hired buildings till such time as new ones are constructed."

The Honourable Sardar Gulam Jilani:—Mr. President,—Owing to the inadequacy and paucity of trained Mahomedan teachers, Urdu schools can never attain any degree of efficiency. This difficulty can only be overcome by opening fully developed training colleges. At present, only about 120 teachers are being trained in the Ahmedabad and Poona training classes, this number being a fraction of what is actually required. I may be allowed to urge that if this resolution is adopted by this Council, the two training colleges referred to, at Ahmedabad and Poona, would probably turn out at least 500 trained teachers every year to meet the daily increasing demands of the Urdu schools.

The suggestion of locating the training colleges in hired buildings is, I beg to submit, not an unusual one. The present training college for men in Poona city was accommodated in a hired building just as is the case with the training college for women, the camp English school, and the Urdu Central Girls' School, Poona. Moreover, numerous training institutions, I understand, that have been lately started in different districts, are located in hired buildings.

It will take at least three or four years if we wait till the proposed buildings are erected, and in view of the political advancement of the country, I may be permitted to say that the education of the Mahomedans should keep pace with the progressive spirit of the times. Things are moving so fast that we cannot afford to lose time. The present arrangement is very unsatisfactory. The Urdu training class here is attached to the Marathi training college, where the principal has more administrative control over it than the head-master, who is only a figure-head, as he has no free hand in the general management.

The Urdu training class at Poona has no third year class added to it, and the consequence is that no third year Mahomedan teacher is yet available. As a rule, it is a third year man that is put in charge of a full primary school; hence the crying need for opening a third year class in Poona.

Owing to the insufficient accommodation and the discomfort experienced both by the teachers and the students, I do not hesitate in submitting to this Council the urgent necessity of removing it to a hired building.

The practical teaching has been suffering since the very commencement of the Urdu training class in Poona, as the practising school is situated at a distance of a mile and a half from the training college, owing to which circumstance the pupil teachers are greatly handicapped.

It is true that there is no possibility of starting a practising school in the vicinity of the training college, where there is no Mahomedan population; hence the necessity of locating the Urdu training class and the practising school in a hired building and in a Mahomedan locality.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Mr. President,—Government recognize the desirability of providing the same standard of trained teachers for Urdu schools as they are providing for other vernacular schools in the Presidency. It is but right that all the vernacular schools should have the benefit of the third year trained teachers as is the case in regard to Gujarati and Marathi schools. They, therefore, propose to accept this resolution if the honourable mover agrees to amend it to the following effect:—

This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that the Urdu Training Classes at Poona and Ahmedabad be developed into full training colleges, as soon as satisfactory arrangements for accommodation can be made.

The Honourable Sardar Gulam Jilani:—I accept the resolution in the modified form.

The resolution as amended was put to the vote and carried.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Resolution No. 9. Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole.

"This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that legislation should be adopted in this Presidency towards checking the excessive subdivision of agricultural lands that is taking place."

SUBDIVISION OF AGRICULTURAL LANDS.

[Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole.] [28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—Mr. Chairman,—The resolution of which I have given notice has been read out to the Council, and I wish to make some remarks in connection with it. This resolution has been brought before this Council now for the third time. The first attempt made to place this matter before the Council was in March 1916 on which occasion I advocated the appointment of a committee to consider this important question. The Council threw out my suggestion on that occasion, but evidently the matter attracted the attention of Government and the Honourable Mr. Keatinge brought forward a bill dealing with the subject, which he called the Economic Holdings Bill. That bill was, in my estimation, a very feeble measure which would have led to no tangible results, and, therefore, I tried to bring the matter again before the Council in July 1918. On that occasion the discussion of the matter was postponed to enable the honourable members to study the Honourable Mr. Keatinge's bill and the report of the Baroda Commission. The adjourned debate took place in the September 1918 session of the Council. On that occasion also the motion for the appointment of a committee was thrown out by the Council.

The evils of excessive subdivision and fragmentation of land have been before this Council already, and I do not, therefore, wish to recapitulate them on the present occasion. But I might tell the Council that the Board of Agriculture that met in December 1917 in this Presidency thought this matter very important, and they recommended to the local Government that they should take up this question. Again I would remind the Council that Dr. Mann, the principal of our Agricultural College, made enquiries into the economic condition of a Deccan village near Poona and he found that it was not satisfactory, one of the main reasons of the unsatisfactory condition being this excessive fragmentation of land that has been taking place. I have given to this Council a number of heart-rending instances of subdivision, subdivisions extending to half a guntha and in some cases even to a smaller area. On account of this excessive subdivision lands have gone out of cultivation, and I have quoted to the Council some instances of this nature. The expert opinion is that the agricultural produce of land in certain parts of the Presidency would be double of what it is at present if this evil of excessive subdivision did not exist. The Honourable Sir George Carmichael, our chairman to-day, was rather dubious about this point when I brought it forward at first, but even he, I think, is now convinced that the evil is pronounced, and is really an evil which must be tackled. The Honourable Mr. Keatinge has given, in the statement of objects and reasons of his bill, the great evils that have resulted from the excessive subdivision of lands. Mr. Keatinge's bill was referred by Government to their revenue and judicial officers for opinion, and in response to that reference 19 revenue officers and 11 judicial officers of Government have submitted their reports. The reports have been before the Council. They are all unanimous in stating that the bill as drafted by the Honourable Mr. Keatinge would be practically of very little value, and that the question must be tackled in other ways than those proposed by him. One of the judges of the High Court, the Honourable Mr. Justice Marten, considered that the subject was so important that it should be referred to a commission specially appointed for the purpose. Some of the officers consulted have said that the present Partition Act of 1893 might check this evil to a certain extent. I submit to this Council, however, that the relief afforded by this act would be of a very temporary character and will last for a single occasion only. On the second occasion when the question of succession comes up, the land will again be subjected to the sections of this Partition Act, and in this way encumbrances created on the land will mount up, which would make the solution of the problem in this way unworkable. So, the Partition Act is not the real solution of the difficulty at all. The question must be tackled boldly, and we must be prepared to over-ride the laws of succession that prevail in this country, to a certain extent. When the process of subdivision has gone on down to a certain limit, then legislation must step in and must stop further subdivision taking place in accordance with the laws of succession as they prevail in this country. That is the only effective way of tackling this evil, and, I think, the intelligent sections of our Indian communities are quite prepared to accept legislation of this character. Some of us are quite prepared to say that the younger sons of our families, rather than stick to small pieces of land which yield them nothing, should go out of their villages and carve out careers for themselves. The youth of European countries have benefited largely in this way. They have gone to Australia, to East Africa, and have founded new colonies, thereby benefiting themselves and their country also. On analogous lines, when the subdivision of land has gone on to a ruinous extent. I am prepared—and I believe many of my honourable friends here are prepared—for the position that the youth of the country ought to relinquish their uncultivable minute land-holdings and carve out new and more profitable careers for themselves rather than

SUBDIVISION OF AGRICULTURAL LANDS.

[28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole.]

stick to ancestral villages and do nothing there that will benefit the country or themselves. I have, therefore, drafted what I consider to be a scheme of legislation that should be adopted. It is a tentative scheme, and is intended to show the way in which legislation should proceed to secure the objects in view. The scheme has been printed and is already in the hands of honourable members.

The first thing that I want to do is to institute in our Land Revenue Code another system of land tenure, which I would call the impartible holding tenure. In connection with this impartible tenure, different portions of the Presidency will have to be differently dealt with. The rice lands, the bagayat lands and the jirayat lands will have to be differently dealt with. Different districts also will have to be differently treated. So, what I propose is that the Collector of a district in consultation with the district local board as representing the popular voice should say what should be the limit of this impartible holding in his district. In Ratnagiri for instance, in the case of rice lands the limit will be, say, five gunthas. In the case of bagayat lands in the Poona district, in the canal areas and elsewhere, the limit may be laid down as one acre. In the case of jirayat lands like those of Bijapur and Dharwar, the limit may be put down as 5 acres. This is, however, a question of detail which ought to be settled by the revenue authorities of the district in consultation with the district local board.

When these impartible holdings have been instituted, the second condition that I would impose would be that the holding created should not be liable to partition under the laws of succession that prevail in this Presidency. No fresh interest of any party except the holder should be created in that land. The impartible holding should absolutely be the property of the tenant for the time being.

The holder should have the right to transfer his land by will, but in the case of intestacy some method will have to be devised whereby the succession to that piece of land will pass to a single individual only. We will have to adopt the principle of primogeniture; that is, the eldest son of the holder that dies, will inherit the piece of land constituting the impartible holding and the younger sons and other members of the family will have no right to it. The Council has to remember that the pieces of land forming impartible holdings will be very small pieces—five gunthas in Ratnagiri, one acre probably in our canal areas, and five acres in jirayat areas. So, when it comes to a succession of the impartible holding by primogeniture, the succession will not mean any very heavy loss to the younger sons of a family.

Then the third proposal that I want to make is that it should be obligatory on Government that all lands to be given for cultivation in future should be given out on the principle of impartible holding tenure. I am told that there is great scope in Sind for the exercise of this provision. A good lot of land is to be given out for cultivation in Sind and the evil of excessive subdivision and fragmentation of land that has sprung up in the Presidency proper will be stopped in Sind if this principle of impartible holding tenure is brought into operation there at an early date. The new tenure will specially benefit Sind; it will benefit the Deccan and Southern Maratha country tracts also in the case of unoccupied lands and lands to be disforested hereafter. In future no land should be given out for cultivation except on this principle of impartible holding tenure. All the authorities and officers that Government have consulted in connection with the Honourable Mr. Keatinge's bill have stated that this third proposal that I am making is quite practicable and that there is not the slightest objection to its being adopted.

The next suggestion that I have made is contained in clause (d) of my scheme and relates to the case of lands that have been thrown out of cultivation, successively for a series of years on account of excessive subdivision. In such cases the Collector should have the right to intervene and should tell the holders of the land "Here is a valuable piece of land you have allowed to lie idle year after year for 10 years. You cannot utilize this land, and therefore, we will take it up, compensate you for it, divide the land into impartible holdings and thus bring the land into use". It is in my opinion absolutely necessary that some position like this should be taken up if the interests of the Presidency are to be safeguarded. I hold that in these days of world competition we have to compete with European countries in commercial and economic problems and we must make the most of our agricultural assets. This is rather a drastic and startling proposal, but I would adopt it in the interests of the well-being of the whole Presidency.

The last suggestion that I have made is that when the Collector in response to the decree of a civil court proceeds to the partition of land according to the Partition Act of 1893, he should be guided in this division by the principle of impartible holding tenure as fixed for the district. He should parcel out the land into impartible holdings in accordance with the new tenure, and should give the holdings to the parties that have been dispossessed as far as practicable. There will be no injustice involved in this arrangement provided the parties concerned agree, as in most cases they probably will. This is the legislation that I have put forward. I must tell the Council that I have put forward this scheme as an amateur and that there are probably a number of flaws in it, and that the legal members of this Council will consider some parts of my scheme to be not very sound. I am prepared to admit that the scheme is capable of revision, and amendments may be suggested. What I want is that the Council should admit this evil of excessive subdivision and fragmentation as an evil that has to be faced, and the Council should further admit that the only way in which this evil can be satisfactorily faced will be by amending the laws of succession that prevail in this country, to the requisite extent. After a number of partitions the subdivision of land will reach a stage when further partition will become impracticable. What I want is that when the subdivision reaches the stage of what I call impartible holding, then there should be no further division according to the Hindu and Mahomedan Laws and other laws of succession. A survey number of ten acres may be divided time after time until in the case of rice land the division comes to five gunthas. But as soon as that limit of five gunthas is reached, then the legislature should step in and prevent any more subdivision of the same. This is the principle that I want the Council to adopt, and some scheme of legislation on these lines should be formulated in this Presidency, otherwise this growing evil will not be stopped. I do not want to interfere with the existing rights in land that prevail in the Presidency, and I do not want to dispossess any one of the rights that he has acquired at present. But what I do want is that in future when Government give land for cultivation they should admit this principle of impartible holding, after a certain stage in the subdivision has been reached. With these remarks, sir, I trust that the resolution before this Council will be accepted. I also hope that the Council will accept the main principles which I have laid before the honourable members, in dealing with the resolution.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud:—Mr. Chairman,—I am afraid I cannot support the resolution which has been moved by the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole. In the first place this is a proposal which involves the introduction of changes in the Hindu Law and the Mahomedan Law, and also the law of succession. These are matters which can be dealt with only in the Imperial Legislative Council. I think the changes which the honourable mover advocates will have far-reaching effects, and they ought not to be introduced lightheartedly. Then the evil to which he has referred is, I think, not quite so widespread as he tries to make out. The evil as he has tried to make out is, I think, rather exaggerated. There are very few cases in which the lands have been subdivided, to such an extent as to make that small holding uneconomic, and if lands were divided in that manner then there would be two courses open to the cultivator. He would either have to go in for intensive cultivation where a few acres would be quite enough to maintain a family, or he would have to allow the land to remain uncultivated. If the cultivator insists upon having this small and minute subdivision the result of this minute subdivision is that if the cultivator cannot go in for intensive agriculture, he is quickly bought out by the local money-lender and that is how the lands have found their way into the hands of capitalists of the locality. If on the other hand he takes up intensive cultivation there are several forms of cultivation which can very well be taken up profitably, and which need not make the minute subdivision an uneconomic holding. I therefore think, sir, that the changes which the honourable mover advocates are hardly necessary at the present moment, and I do not think our Council will be justified in taking up legislation which would make radical changes in the personal law of the large masses of the country.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—Sir, I heartily support the resolution brought forward by my honourable friend Dewan Bahadur Godbole. I had also accorded him my hearty support when he put forward this question last time about three years ago, and I congratulate him upon the very great persistence and tenacity with which he has handled this question. I have only one slight doubt as to the propriety of his bringing forward this question at the last gasp of our Council. It is obviously not possible for Government to undertake a very complicated piece of legislation in this session of the Council which is the last of our Councils under the old régime, and except possibly giving a lead to the public and having some discussion in the public press, I do not believe that a resolution like this even if carried by this Council would have much practical effect. I myself think that the new Council would probably be the better place to tackle this question. In the first place there will be a very large majority of elected members, and the popular opinion will be better able to have its say upon this matter, and we hope that our friend the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole will be a member of that new Council, and that he will be able to take up this question in right earnest, and bring forward a bill for the purpose. But I think that at this time of the day any discussion on the principle underlying my honourable friend's resolution is practically ineffective.

SUBDIVISION OF AGRICULTURAL LANDS.

[28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. R. P. Paranjpye.]

It is with great surprise that I understand my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Garud to say that the evil is not so great. The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole in a very able speech on the last occasion gave a detailed statement about the extent of this evil. It may not be so perhaps in the district of Khandesh where the holdings are mainly comparatively large and where they might be most of them economic, but in the other parts of the Presidency a large number of holdings are so exiguous that it is very uneconomic to cultivate them, and on which account a good part of the land has almost gone out of cultivation. I know that in the district which is my native place the evil is exceedingly widespread. In the district of Ratnagiri, to which the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole referred, the holdings have become so small that many of them could hardly be properly cultivated. In the village from which I come I can count only a very few holdings which are really economic, and which would maintain a family who works its own land in a fairly comfortable state. I do not want to encourage by legislation a class of big capitalists and landlords. I leave them to take care of themselves, but I would like legislation to stop partition when the holdings are going below a certain size below which it would be in fact uneconomic to cultivate the land. Members of a family that has such a holding will probably have to go out to keep themselves for the whole year, and, I think, it is not right for our system of law to encourage people to depend upon two different occupations and in this manner they will probably not do either satisfactorily.

Well, I think, that the evil is very widespread and on account of our law of succession the evil is getting more and more intense. This fragmentation of holding is going on in various ways. I know of a case in which one man had got three different betelnut gardens in a village adjoining mine. Each of them was a fairly good economic holding. He had three sons, and the proper arrangement would have been to divide them into three different holdings and hand them to one son each and make, if necessary, some monetary adjustments to equalise their shares of the inheritance. What the three sons did was that each took one-third of each garden, and consequently all these three gardens eventually fell into such a bad state that they could no longer be economic holdings, and none of them was properly cultivated. This is not the only one illustration. Many more illustrations could be given. If my honourable friends will read Dr. Mann's report on a typical Deccan village, they will find that it is shown therein that most of the poverty that is found there is due to this fragmentation of holdings. The steps that the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole has proposed are entirely permissive, and in fact at the present stage we cannot go in for any measure of compulsion. But certainly the State, seeing that it is better to encourage economic holdings ought to provide a permissive measure in order that holdings of a particular size shall not be divided. The suggestions which the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole has put forward are worthy of very serious consideration. The objection that my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Garud has brought forward about the effect of Hindu Law and so on is an objection which we all know about, but for a Legislative Council it is not right to say that there are these objections, and, therefore, we should sit with folded hands and do nothing; I say that the Council is the proper body to make changes in the law whenever necessary. We have in our land revenue system occasionally interfered with our old methods. I think the method suggested by the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole is one which is worthy of consideration, and on the lines of which the Council should undertake proper legislation. I myself think that it is a very great pity that the tentative bill which was put forward by Mr. Keatinge was not carried. I think it would have done a very great amount of good if that bill had been proceeded with. I do not know but I rather think that it was the Government of India who came in the way and that that is why the bill was not proceeded with. In these days I think our law must progress. It will not do to say that our Hindu Law is like the law of the Medes and the Persians; it must change according to the necessities and circumstances. Shortly we will have the reformed councils and they should have the right to change the laws according to circumstances. I think a kind of primogeniture system will have to be introduced. It will not do to say that primogeniture is something quite unknown in India and that it is an institution of the West. There are several matters which we have copied from the West, and in the same manner we might possibly have legislation as regards the primogeniture system.

SUBDIVISION OF AGRICULTURAL LANDS.

[Mr. R. P. Paranjpye; Mr. G. K. Parekh; Mr. C. V. Mehta.] [28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

Again, even if some people voluntarily agree to forego their rights on uneconomic holdings, there is no guarantee that in the next generation the same thing will happen. If the Council will permit, I might mention that even in my own family my father had an economic holding, which was enough to maintain one small family. Now we were four or five brothers and we brothers thought it right, being carried away by these new ideas, to say that we would forego our respective rights in favour of one brother. We did this by an actual deal. But there is no guarantee that the brother who has got the holdings will not have a large number of sons between whom that holding will again be divided up, and all our ideas of having an economic holding will be frustrated in a very few years. I think, therefore, that if a permissive legislation on these lines were introduced and passed, the effect of it on some lands at least would be of very great value. Of course, in various parts of the Presidency the size of an impartible holding would have to be considered having regard to the different kinds of lands, whether they are rice lands or bagayat lands, and so on. But this size could be determined by revenue officers taking all the circumstances into consideration. I think there would be no difficulty in pushing forward legislation of this kind. As I say, the whole difficulty is that in this Council such legislation cannot be undertaken, and I do hope that my honourable friend Dewan Bahadur Godbole will be in the next Council to carry out a measure of this kind.

The Honourable Mr. G. K. Parekh:—Mr. President,—I agree with my honourable friend Mr. Paranjpye that this is really a most inappropriate time for bringing in this resolution. Here is a matter in reference to a custom which prevails generally in the country, an evil which has long existed, and I think, a Council which is more representative of the views of the people would be the proper Council which ought to deal with this question. My honourable friends, Dewan Bahadur Godbole and Mr. Paranjpye, have their own peculiar views derived from their studies and their previous occupations, and they suppose that uneconomic holdings are bad for the people. To me it appears that uneconomic holdings are to some extent beneficial inasmuch as they contribute to the producing of Paranjpyes and Godboles, I do think the large enterprise shown by the Ratnagiri people in coming to Bombay, the hard work that they do, and the way in which they help the industries of the country, are all the results of uneconomic holdings. I can understand Brahmin gentlemen thinking of disposing of uneconomic holdings, but I really cannot understand that such a proposal would appeal to the ideas of the agriculturist, the ideas which are common to all the agriculturists in the country. It may be that in an uneconomic holding there may be a certain amount of loss. Perhaps there may come a time when we may learn something of intensive cultivation when what are now supposed to be uneconomic holdings may become really valuable. But apart from it, looking to things as they now exist, may I ask whether it is not likely that the evils that may arise from the destruction of these holdings may not be much greater than the evils which are sought to be removed? Would it be in the interests of the country, in the interests of the cultivators, that one son should take all the property of the family and all its debts? Now look at the condition of a man who has to pay these debts. We know many of our agriculturists are in a very indebted condition; would it be a good thing that instead of each one having to pay a small debt one man should have to pay a very large debt and a very large amount of interest on it. Then, there is a certain amount of pride or attachment felt by these people who are the holders of land, even though the lands may be small pieces, and I should think that it would certainly be very harmful if a large number of these people are driven from the position of landholders to that of day labourers. In my opinion this is not a thing which is likely to be palatable to the people for whose interests the proposal is made, and I do not think it would be appropriate that the resolution should be accepted at present.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta:—Mr. President,—I quite agree that the reformed councils would perhaps be better placed for handling a resolution of this character. Nevertheless, sir, we have spent several years on the consideration of this serious problem. I believe that the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole brought forward a resolution of this character many years ago, and while we have been hammering at it for such a long time, we should at least like to hand over to the reformed Council a resolution expressing our opinion that some action is now urgently necessary. In this connection, sir, it would be interesting to know what has happened to the modest but efficient bill, prepared by the Honourable Mr. Keatinge. It seems to me, sir, that the bill was prepared carefully and that some legislation on those lines would be the most effective way of meeting this undoubted evil, and as in the future land revenue is going to form part of the reserved subjects, it might be as well if this Council were to express their opinion that such legislation was necessary.

SUBDIVISION OF AGRICULTURAL LANDS.

[28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. C. V. Mehta: Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe.]

I ask, sir, whether at this time of the day it is really necessary to argue that excessive subdivision is not an evil, even though it might have, according to the Honourable Mr. Parekh, produced a Paranjpye or a Godbole. It seems to me that if the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye or the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole had devoted his attention to land, he might probably have found some remedy for the cattle problem which we discussed so seriously this afternoon. I do not think that that is any reason why this great evil should go unattended, and if an attempt were made to improve some of the provisions of Mr. Keatinge's bill, if necessary, with the help of the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole and others who have taken a keen interest in this matter, I have no doubt that some kind of permissive legislation could be designed, which might be put on the statute book, which would be taken advantage of in practice, and which would go a small but certain way in improving this great evil.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe:—Mr. President,—I rise to give my cordial support to the resolution moved by the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole. This is probably the third or the fourth attempt of my honourable friend in tackling this question, and I do not agree with my honourable friend Mr. Paranjpye when he says that this is rather an inopportune time to take up such a complex question. If we once admit the evil of excessive subdivisions of lands, then we need not fight shy of the fact that because we are at the close of this Council, therefore, we should not take up this legislation. There is the greater reason for us to set a seal of approval on a resolution like the one which my honourable friend has brought before this Council, so as to make it easier for the reformed Council to tackle this question.

When I support this resolution, I am conscious of the fact that the agriculturists in the mofussil have great attachment to their land. But, is that the only reason why we should not accord our approval to the resolution? This attachment makes them stick to their places, and sometimes the effect of it is that they do not get a sufficient maintenance for the year, and they have to find out some kind of work for six or eight months out of the year. So, the practical result is that the land is not improved. The land does not give adequate return for the subsistence of the land-holder, and his family, and he has to seek for a livelihood somewhere else like the labour centres of Bombay and Ahmedabad.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud put forward an objection on the score that we will be entrenching upon the rules of succession according to Hindu and Mahomedan laws. But we need not do that. What we can do is to compensate the sharers who have a right to inherit the property according to Hindu or Mahomedan law, by money compensation. There is a similar provision on the statute book, namely, Act IV of 1893, which prescribes a certain mode of partitioning house property, when the share is too small and the persons laying claim to these shares are too many. If there is such a provision already on the statute book, what objection should there be to have a permissive piece of legislation when we admit the evil and when it is necessary to find out the remedy to remove that evil? This is not the only case where we set aside the rules of succession according to ordinary Hindu and Mahomedan laws. People have been used to special modes of succession so far as saranjam property is concerned or hereditary watans like Deshpande and Deshmukhi are concerned. There the eldest son succeeds to the property. When the legislation is going to be permissive, several sharers can surely arrange by private agreement between themselves as to how to get over the difficulty, by compensating one or the other by paying money compensation.

Then there is one more point which I wish to refer to while I am on this subject. The Honourable Mr. Paranjpye gave an instance of three garden lands having been divided each into three parts by three sons. When land paying assessment to Government is divided under the decree of a court, what I usually find is that the officers to whom this class of work is entrusted do not really divide according to the convenience of the parties, but the general tendency is to divide each plot into as many portions as there are sharers. This is a case in which if greater care is taken, the evil will be remedied without any legislation. That only shows that if in the proposed legislation, which will be undertaken after a good deal of scrutiny, provision is made as to how these divisions are to be made, how the several sharers are to be compensated, and in what cases this rule is to be applied, there should be no apprehension of any opposition coming from the people on the ground that this legislation is going to supersede or tamper with the ordinary rules of succession, both in Hindu and Mahomedan laws. With these words I beg to support the resolution.

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat:—Mr. President,—While according my support to the resolution of the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole, I feel, sir, that the discussion of this question would have been helped a great deal, if Government had come forward at this stage with an expression of their views as to why the permissive legislation proposed by Mr. Keatinge has been kept back. I believe the evil of uneconomic holdings has been admitted on all hands; the remedy that has been suggested by the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole was formulated in the shape of a bill by Mr. Keatinge. Now, we want to know on what grounds either the Government of Bombay or the Government of India have been keeping back the bill. It will help the solution of this difficult problem better at the hands of the next reformed Council, if we are in a position to know the reasons and the grounds on which the remedy suggested by Mr. Keatinge has not been taken up. It would not be worth while, I think, for this Council to go round and round the same question for any length of time. What we want to know is, what are the fears or the objections, either on the part of the Government of Bombay or the Government of India, regarding the proposed legislation. If those reasons are given out to us, and if the public of this Presidency is taken into Government's confidence, I believe that the next Council will handle this question better. I, therefore, request Government to make a statement of their views regarding the proposals of Mr. Keatinge.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—Mr. President,—I regret I cannot accord my support to the resolution as it stands. I do admit that the evil of excessive subdivision does exist to a certain extent, and that some measures should be taken to check that evil, but I cannot support the suggestion for legislation on the drastic lines that are indicated by my honourable friend. I think, so far as public opinion is concerned, the time has not yet come for interference in the laws of succession both as regards the Mahomedans and the Hindus, which have prevailed for so long a time. The evil which is now complained of was not experienced before, and, I think, it is more due to the feeling of individualism that has been generated in recent times, and in part to other economic causes, over which, I think, the proposal will not have any effect, than to the operation of the Hindu or the Mahomedan law of succession. The old order was that the property should continue to be joint and held by a joint family, and sales were not allowed. Since the introduction of British rule, the sale of landed property has been made easier. It is now too late to go back and to stop it, nor is it possible, I think, to readjust the numerous divisions and subdivisions which have already taken place.

The difficulty will be the greater in the case of lands which form the only means of a livelihood to the people. It is the existence of these lands in the family that enables members to earn some living, and if it is proposed to take away the land the family will be deprived of the only means it may possess for its credit and for maintaining itself. The suggestions of the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole, if carried into effect, will only still further accelerate the transfer of property from the hands of these poor people who still cultivate them to those of the capitalists who cannot cultivate them themselves. The best way for us to proceed would be to create new industries which will afford new outlets for employment and offer inducement to the people to leave their lands. Then they could find other means of livelihood, but without the industrial development, we should not ask the people to leave their lands. I do not think that anything has been done in the mofussil with regard to industrial development in the areas where excessive subdivision of land has taken place. It is very easy for us to put the law on paper, but we have to consider beforehand what will be the effect of its operation? The conditions in India are not the same as those in the West. The operation of the law of primogeniture has not been an unmixed blessing even in the West, and we know that several subterfuges have been found there to get out of it. Moreover, the question of making provision for the younger members of the family is not so difficult in the West as in our country. How many families in our own country are in a position to make that provision? Even the rich Chiefs and Jahagirdars cannot do it to the satisfaction of the junior members of the family. If you put the land to auction as between the sharers, how many of them will be able to pay down the money? They will naturally go to the sowcar, and what will be the effect of going to the sowcar? The effect will be that instead of one or more members of a family having the land in their possession, all the shares will ultimately go into the hands of the sowcar, and the evil will still continue further. It is proposed in the resolution that if for a certain number of years a man is not able to cultivate his land, we should take it away from him. If I keep my house locked up for a time, should Government be asked to take it up, put it to auction and give it to a man who will make use of it? I think these principles are far in advance of the conditions which are yet prevailing in our society. I think socialistic doctrines have yet to invade our country, and I do not think it will be wise for us to proceed as rapidly as is indicated in the resolution put forward by my honourable friend.

On the last occasion when the honourable member brought forward a similar resolution on the subject, it was in a more modest form. He then proposed only the appointment of a committee to enquire into the matter. But even that modest resolution did not meet with the support of either the Honourable Member in Charge or of the Council. Now, instead of suggesting something which would be more acceptable, my honourable friend makes a proposal for a very drastic piece of legislation which, I am sorry, I find myself unable to support.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Mr. Chairman,—I regret to say that Government finds itself unable to accept this resolution moved in various forms, for, I think, a fifth time, by my honourable friend Dewan Bahadur Godbole. I will state my reasons why, shortly. As various honourable members have said, very great labour and very great pains were taken by the Honourable Mr. Keatinge in drafting a bill which was put forward two years back. I did not agree with the bill. It was largely permissive, and it depended on the goodwill of the Hindu families concerned, whether they adopted it or not, but very great labour and trouble was taken over it, and it was circulated for opinion. The opinions received in reply were absolutely unanimous. The opinion of the various judges who considered it was against the bill. From no quarter of the Presidency were the opinions against the bill more emphatic than from Gujarat. The opinions received from Gujarat indicated that the opposition to any legislation on the lines indicated by the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole would be most pronounced. I regret to understand from the Honourable Mr. Kamat and some other honourable members that these opinions have not been made available to them. If that is so, the Revenue Secretary will have great pleasure in sending them forward if they write to him. Never in the course of my experience have I seen a series of opinions more unanimous and more emphatic as regards the undesirability of taking action on the lines indicated by the Honourable Mr. Keatinge.

Now, what are the honourable member's recommendations at the present moment? He wishes for legislation towards checking the excessive subdivision of agricultural lands. In the first place, there have been several references to western custom and western practice. The honourable mover himself confused the primogeniture obtaining in England and the system obtaining in France and other countries. One of the stock reasons adduced for the willingness of Englishmen and particularly Scotchmen to emigrate is the fact that primogeniture is in force there, thereby rendering it necessary for the younger members of the family to emigrate. In France such is not the case. There the properties are subdivided just as they are in accordance with Hindu Law here. It will be interesting for this Council to know that the form, and to a certain extent a good deal more, of the record of rights legislation that became law here, the Act of 1913, was copied from the forms introduced in the Code of Napoleon in 1818 at Cologne.

But, sir, let us consider what it is that the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole wants us to do. He wants us, first of all, to recognize a new land tenure called impartible holding—the same as in Mr. Keatinge's bill—the impartible holding to be incapable of subdivision and to be held by a single individual. All unoccupied lands are to be given for cultivation under the impartible holding, and in the case of survey numbers three-fourths of which have remained uncultivated for a period of 10 years on account of excessive subdivision, Government should have the power of acquiring them and allotting them to others or to owners on condition that they will not be further subdivided. What I would point out is that a great deal has been said about the grant of unoccupied lands to impartible holders. We all know nowadays, except in small areas, there are practically no unoccupied lands. Therefore, the declaration of an impartible holding and the order that unoccupied land is to be given on these terms is practically useless.

What is the next point that the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole proposes? He says that the impartible holding is to be incapable of subdivision and is to be inherited by a single individual on the principle of primogeniture. Well now, what is to happen? Simply this, that the claim would be registered in the record of rights in the name of one man and that the other 4 or 5 brothers would continue to cultivate it jointly. Nothing would give revenue officers, who are responsible for the maintenance of the extraordinarily elaborate registers in Satara and elsewhere, greater pleasure than to be able to say that no one shall cultivate or attempt to cultivate small areas in separate interest. But unless you are going to make it a criminal offence, unless a man is to be sent to prison for giving a share to his brother to run a plough over, there is no means of stopping him. And just consider what this primogeniture would mean to the men in the countryside? It is all very well for men coming from advanced districts, like the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole, the Honourable Mr. Kamat, the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe, and the Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud, to recommend this new principle. But what of the ryots? The ryot does not look at it from the same point of view. He would resent it, and I can imagine nothing is likely to arouse more opposition and more resentment in the countryside than a measure which the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole proposes. In fact, I am perfectly sure that as far as legislation is concerned, it will be quite impossible to enforce it.

SUBDIVISION OF AGRICULTURAL LANDS.

[Mr. G. S. Curtis; Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole.] [28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

The next point is that in the case of a survey number three-fourths or more of which has remained uncultivated successively for 10 years on account of excessive subdivision, Government should have the power of acquiring that survey number under the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole :—And giving it back to the original holders.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—The Honourable Mr. Upasani compared this to the owner of a house in a provincial town who went away for a time locking up his house. The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole's proposal amounts to this, that Government should have the right of acquiring that house and letting it to those who will use it! Well, I will take his argument a little further. Who is to keep a register of these particular holders? In some of these villages, there are as many as 6,000 or 7,000 holdings. Who is to keep a register whether three-fourths of each survey number is or is not cultivable? Then, the Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole spoke of sub-shares. Does he refer to the survey numbers or sub-shares?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—I referred to survey numbers, and I understand, sir, that in all villages a record is kept as to which survey numbers are cultivated in a year and which remain uncultivated. At present registers are kept like that.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—It is perfectly true that an ordinary register does show vaguely whether a survey number is under rice cultivation or not. But to expect any human being to keep up a register as to whether as many perhaps as 6,000 or 7,000 plots of land, in a Ratnagiri village for instance, are under cultivation or not for a period of 10 years, is, I think, to expect too much, and no one has a right to expect that. Further, if any such legislative provision was introduced, it would either lead to wholesale corruption or could not be enforced at all.

Now, sir, I do not wish to take up the time of this Council in considering this matter very much further. I submit that at the end of a session, speaking as we are on the last day but one of the Council under the present era, this is perhaps the last question which should be discussed. It postulates a complete revolution in the ideas of a very important section of the Hindu society, about the opinions of which the honourable member has adduced no evidence whatever. As far as our records show, the opinion of the mass of the people is solidly against it, and obviously if a change is to come—personally I hope it will come—if a change is to come, it is well that it should come after the reformed Council when the mass of the population will send their own representatives. It will be their province and their business to bring to the notice of the Council if and when this great change is wanted. Till then it is far better that the matter should be left as it is. For these reasons, sir, I would ask the Council to reject the resolution.

(At this stage the Honourable the Vice-President [Sir G. Carmichael] withdrew and the Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis took the chair.)

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole :—Mr. Chairman,—I have listened to the discussion very attentively, and I find that the main point raised against my proposals is that the legislation proposed is of a revolutionary character, and that therefore, it should not be accepted by the Council. When I placed my proposals before the Council, I said that I did not want the Council to accept the legislation proposed by me in the exact form in which I had enunciated it. I wanted the Council to accept the general principle that the evil of the subdivision of lands had gone too far in this Presidency and that it should be checked. I gave out a rough scheme which I distinctly told the Council was not to be adopted to the very letter, that the scheme was open to change, and that any reasonable modifications which the Council suggested would be acceptable to me.

SUBDIVISION OF AGRICULTURAL LANDS.

[28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole; Mr. G. S. Curtis.]

Now, as regards the general lines, I believe, the whole Council is in agreement with me that the evil of excessive subdivision does exist in this Presidency. The Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud was the only dissentient in that respect, and he said that the evil was not really very intense. But I have simply to give one or two instances that I know of, in order to convince him that the evil is not so very light as he thinks it to be. In the Poona district I have come across a survey number which is 1 acre and 32 gunthas in extent. It is divided into 40 pot numbers, and these 40 pot numbers are again subdivided into 100 sub-shares. The Council has to note that a survey number of 1 acre and 32 gunthas—that is 72 gunthas—has been parcelled out amongst 100 different co-sharers. The consequence was that the survey number, when I made enquiries, had been out of cultivation for 6 or 7 years. Now, I hold that in the general interest and in the interest of the general prosperity of this Presidency such misuse of state property should not take place. The land belongs to the state; it is only given for cultivation purposes on certain terms, and the Presidency has a right to expect that its property should be put to the best advantage and that its lands should yield their maximum output. It is under this principle which I believe is a sound principle that I advocate that when lands go out of cultivation for a series of years on account of excessive subdivision, they should be acquired and given back for cultivation purposes on the new impartible holding tenure which I advocate.

Some of the previous speakers have objected to my bringing in the principle of primogeniture as it will be very hard on the younger sons of the family; but I would ask honourable members of the Council to remember that I want this principle of primogeniture to step in when the process of subdivision has gone on for several generations and when the limits of impartible holdings have been reached. Five gunthas in Ratnagiri, and five acres in Bijapur will for instance become impartible. Now I ask the Council to consider whether if a further partition of five gunthas of rice land is checked it will have any appreciable effect on the living of the younger sons of the family. I do not think so. This objection, therefore, is not very important. The Honourable Mr. Curtis told us that it would be impossible to find out whether a particular survey number has been under cultivation for the previous ten years or not. There I am inclined to differ from him because I know that in every village, record is continuously kept of the produce that a certain survey number gives year by year. The village records show all this, and so there ought to be no difficulty in finding out which survey number has been out of cultivation for the last ten years. There need not be any punishment for contravening and for the violation of the limits that would be put down in the law. When the law is known the holders of impartible holdings will know exactly what their rights and responsibilities are. They themselves will never allow their rights to be infringed. The Honourable Mr. Curtis said that the legislation that I have proposed is of a very revolutionary character. As the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe has pointed out it is not so revolutionary as is supposed. We have got the saranjam tenure and the watan tenure in this Presidency already which are based on the principle of primogeniture. The principle is well-known, and I do not think that its introduction in the manner suggested by me will be resented to the extent that is made out. This principle of primogeniture has been introduced to a small extent only in my proposals. The main point upon which I want the opinion of this Council is whether the evil of subdivision of lands has not now grown so intense as to require some limit to further subdivision to be imposed by law, and whether the existing laws of succession in this Presidency should not be amended to prevent further subdivision of five gunthas and smaller holdings of agricultural lands. Then as regards the query that was put by the Honourable Mr. Kamat I gather from the reply that was given by the Honourable Mr. Curtis that Government did not go on with the Honourable Mr. Keatinge's bill because it would be unpopular and unacceptable to the people. To put it in plain language, Government recognize the evil of excessive subdivision of lands but they are afraid of taking up new legislation to prevent it.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—I beg the honourable member's pardon. I did not say that. What I said was that the bill put forward by Mr. Keatinge was universally condemned.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—Anyhow Government have abandoned the bill which was of the most harmless character. It was only a permissive piece of legislation but even that was not favoured by Government. It seems, therefore, that the position of Government is that they do not wish to undertake any legislation for checking the subdivision of agricultural lands on account of the discontent it may cause in the countryside. That is apparently the position that they have taken and what I want this Council to do is that they should step in now and take up the question in their own hands. The Council will have to support a private bill—a private bill drafted on the lines that I have indicated. Such a private bill should be drafted and placed for consideration before the reformed Council which will be more representative of the agricultural population of the Presidency. My object in bringing the matter before this Council to-day is to get its support and benediction on the measures proposed. With the approval of this Council the subject will be placed before the reformed Council for their further consideration. It is with that object that I have brought forward this resolution, and, I hope, the Council will accord their approval to it.

SUBDIVISION OF AGRICULTURAL LANDS.

[Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole.] [28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

The resolution was then put to the vote and lost 12 members voting for and 22 against.

PRIMARY SCHOOL TEACHERS: PAY—MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE MEETINGS: QUORUM.

[28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [The Vice-President; Mr. P. A. Desai; Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe.]

[The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael) at this stage returned and occupied the chair.]

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Resolution No. 13. The Honourable Mr. Paranjpye.

This Council recommends that Government be pleased, pending the final consideration of the question by the reformed council to ensure that no teacher in primary schools gets less than twenty rupees per month, by giving them a provisional allowance.

The Honourable Mr. Paranjpye not being present the resolution was deemed withdrawn.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Resolution No. 14. The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai.

The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai:—Sir, the resolution that stands in my name runs thus:—

That this council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council to take early steps to amend the provision regarding the number of members required to form a quorum at committee meetings by clause (3) of section 34 of the District Municipal Act.

In a municipality generally there are three sub-committees, namely, the managing committee, the schools committee and the sanitary committee. In some municipalities they have got a fourth committee, namely, the works committee. And the difficulty that has been experienced by me as president of the municipality is this, that the present clause (3) of section 34 of the District Municipal Act requires for the transaction of any business that more than one half of the members should form a quorum and ought to be present from beginning to end. For instance when there are six members on a committee the clause requires that more than half, namely, four members ought to be present; and so unless there are four, no business could be transacted. Now if for want of quorum the meeting is adjourned, even at the adjourned meeting there ought to be four members present and it is on account of this that meetings are postponed from time to time and no business is transacted.

Section 26, clause (7) of the Municipal Act, allows the municipal business to be transacted without a quorum when one meeting is adjourned for want of quorum, and I want a similar provision in the case of committee meetings; otherwise if the present section stands as it is, the difficulty is that many times there are no members present sufficient to form a quorum, and no business is transacted. Therefore, I want to move this resolution, namely:—

"That this Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council to take early steps to amend the provision regarding the number of members required to form a quorum at committee meetings by clause (3) of section 34 of the District Municipal Act."

The section may be amended by saying that, instead of more than one-half, more than one-third would form a quorum, or the same provision which has been embodied in section 26 of the Municipal Act, namely, if once a meeting is adjourned for want of a quorum then at the adjourned meeting there is no necessity of a quorum and the business could be transacted without it, may be made for committee meetings. Under these circumstances, I hope that the Council will adopt this resolution.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe:—Mr. Chairman,—I oppose this resolution and my reasons for opposing it are these. There may be truth in what the Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai says that he finds difficulty in securing the attendance of the required number of councillors at committee meetings. That really does not reflect any credit on the public spirit of those who come on the municipal council or committees, and if that is the only ground which he urges in support of this resolution, I think, the better course is to spur up the councillors so that they might attend the meetings and transact the business. Apart from this question, sir, if what is asked for by the honourable mover of the resolution is granted, the effect would be very disastrous, because, the sub-committees meet once a week, at least the managing committees meet once a week, and oftener if necessary, and if the number that is required to form a quorum on any particular committee is not present and the meeting is adjourned, the chairman may be the only person present at the meeting and may transact the whole business. Is that a desirable state of affairs? An executive committee has practically the whole work to do. The general committees are deliberative assemblies, and the executive committees are to carry out the directions given by the general committees, and it is on this ground that the quorum has been fixed and has been made compulsory for every meeting. The District Municipal Act is not the isolated case where the quorum is being insisted upon. If I am right, I think that even in Bombay, under section 49 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act, out of twelve unless six are present no business can be transacted. If there is really a difficulty in securing attendance at the proper time, the best course is to prescribe some fee, at least in big cities like Poona, Ahmedabad, Sholapur and others which would induce these people to put in their appearance punctually and transact business. There is a precedent for it in the City of Bombay Municipal Act, and now the time has come, as the business is increasing, to prescribe some fees, whatever it may be, even in city municipalities. Instead of taking this course, the course which my honourable friend Mr. Desai suggests is not the right one, and if this resolution is accepted, it means that we are discrediting our own people and we give power, in the hands of very few, of transacting important business. The analogy which he gave of section 26 of the act is not a correct one, because, as I have already stated, that applies to the general meetings, and there such occasions are very few, and the business transacted at such meetings is more of a deliberative character. Therefore, the analogy does not apply, and, I think, it lies with the chairman at least to induce his colleagues to put in appearance at the appointed time. I, therefore, strongly oppose this resolution.

MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE MEETINGS: QUORUM.

[Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; Mr. R. P. Paranjpye; Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.] [28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Mr. President,—I also cannot agree with the resolution moved by the Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai. If there is want of public spirit among the members who form committees, that is no reason why the legislature should authorize one or two members to run through the business as proposed. I know from my own experience of committees that whenever for one reason or another there is difficulty of a quorum the chairman prepares the papers, drafts resolutions and circulates them, and in that way work is transacted, so that urgent work as well as work with reference to which a quorum cannot be had at the proper time is transacted in this way. At least so far as I am concerned, I have not found that in Ahmedabad any inconvenience is caused by this method or that the work has suffered on that account.

The suggestion made by the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe of providing fees to members of committees does not appeal to me. The standing committee of the Bombay municipality has not enjoyed much credit so far as I know, and fees will bring on a scramble for seats on committees, which is not a desirable thing. We in Ahmedabad once thought of it, as to whether we should not move Government to institute the system of fees for attendance at committee meetings, but after much discussion we came to the conclusion that we should not do so, and that the best men would not come into the committees in that case, and that perhaps the committees would go down in tone and level. But in any case, whatever be the remedy, it is much better to go to the voters and have proper men returned with sufficient public spirit to do the work in committees according to the provisions as they exist at present, rather than that one or two people should transact the business because other people have not sufficient public spirit.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—Sir,—I also wish to oppose this resolution, because, it will lead to an unhealthy state of things in the management of affairs of these committees. As my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Sathe has well pointed out, deliberation and executive action are entirely different objects, and for the committees which have to carry out the functions prescribed by the act there ought to be a sufficient number of members. Well, I myself do not very much like the alternative suggested by the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe, but I would suggest another. There might be a section in the act along with the sections which constitute these various committees, saying that whenever a member absents himself at more than one-third number of meetings of these committees, he shall be deemed ipso facto to have resigned from the committee. If a regulation were there in the act, then it would always bring the fact before the notice of the general committee if a man absents himself so often. I think this would be a better plan for adoption than accepting the resolution of my honourable friend Mr. Desai.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Mr. President,—I do not know whether the honourable mover has realized that his motion is a direct admission of indifference and apathy in the discharge of local self-government duties. Sir, we have had many demands for the extension of local self-government, and it is only recently that Government in response to such demands have issued a notification largely liberalizing the constitution of municipalities. To be told that even a small number of members who are elected by municipalities on committees are so indifferent to the discharge of their responsible duties that they do not care to attend to the extent that meetings have to be postponed for want of a quorum, is a state of things which can hardly be regarded as creditable. The remedy proposed that no quorum should be necessary at meetings adjourned for want of a quorum will lead to wholly undesirable results. Now, I should like to invite the attention of honourable members to the fact that under section 27 of the act it is provided that in every municipality there shall be a committee called the managing committee, consisting of such number of councillors not exceeding nine or less than four, as may have been elected for a period not exceeding one year, in accordance with rules under clause (a) of section 46. The duties of the managing committee are very wide, and all these wide powers are to be discharged by a committee whose constitution shall be not more than nine and not less than four. Now, assuming that a managing committee with all these powers consists of four members, the minimum number, under section 34 (3), to which the honourable mover has alluded, a quorum of three members is necessary. If three members are not present, then the meeting has to be adjourned for want of a quorum. At the adjourned meeting one single member may be present, and he would be entitled, under the amendment proposed by the honourable mover, to discharge all these responsible duties, and the same would be binding on the whole municipality. I wonder whether anything can be more absurd to advocate? I trust that for the reputation of local self-government in this Presidency such a state of things does not actually prevail and that there is sufficient public spirit among the citizens of the Bombay Presidency to discharge the duties which they may have undertaken by election.

MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE MEETINGS: QUORUM.

[28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola; Mr. P. A. Desai.]

As regards the remedies, I think, there is no greater remedy than the force of public opinion, exercised through the voters, who should require these men either to discharge their duties properly or to make room for others who may be willing to do so. I am sorry the payment of fees has been advocated by my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Sathe, as that can only mean a confirmation of the criticism that people are ready to talk of local self-government, but when it comes to sacrificing a little of their time in the discharge of public duties, they want a monetary compensation for it. I hope that the actual state of things in the Presidency is really different, and that there is a sufficient amount of public spirit amongst the citizens of the Presidency to be anxious to discharge the responsible duties of local self-government. The city of Bombay is a very busy city, consisting of a large number of men who are engaged in various avocations of life, and still we find that there is sufficient public spirit prevailing amongst them. They have been found willing to make sacrifices in order to be able to attend to the discharge of their municipal duties.

I hope in the districts, where other engagements, both public and private, could not, in my opinion, be of the same character as they are in Bombay city, men will come forward for the discharge of these duties in a manner which would reflect great credit upon their public spirit.

The other remedy advocated by the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye is well worth consideration. The members of committees are appointed for a year, and if any member does not attend a certain number of meetings consecutively, say three or four, he should be declared to have vacated his seat; and the vacancy should be reported to the municipality, which should forthwith proceed to fill it. That is certainly one way of bringing indirect pressure to bear upon the member. But I do trust that even that pressure is not necessary, and that there is sufficient public spirit in the Presidency to bring forward voluntary workers, ready to sacrifice a little of their time in the interests of the service of the public. For these reasons, I hope the Council will reject the resolution.

There is another reason to which I should like to draw the attention of the honourable mover. At this meeting he brings forward a resolution asking for an amendment of the District Municipal Act. The provision to which he refers is in the act itself. Therefore the elaborate procedure of an amending bill will be necessary to set this matter right, even if he had succeeded in making out a good case for it. But that ought to appear to be out of the question at this time. Government have told the Council that they have decided to leave legislation regarding local self-government to the Ministers, who will deal with the whole problem in due course.

I, therefore, think that the resolution should be rejected on its merits, and also because it is inappropriate at this time.

The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai:— Mr. Chairman,—Notwithstanding the lamentations of the Honourable Member in Charge as well as of many other honourable members of this Council, the fact is there. We find that many times the business is not transacted because there is that provision, and therefore, I wanted an amendment on this score. The Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe said that there is a provision in section 26 (7), but we are to make a distinction between a deliberative body and an executive body. He says the municipality being a deliberative body, the rule that there ought to be a quorum for all meetings is not necessary. I cannot understand the logic of it. It is for deliberative purposes that a particular number of members is required. The deliberative body is to fix the principle, and it is only the executive body's business to carry it out. I, therefore, cannot understand the logic of it that in section 26 (7) provision is made, because, a municipality is a deliberative body. Of course, I admit that this proposition shows that there is an utter want of public spirit in the people. There is no doubt about it; I must confess that it is so. But the difficulty is experienced every day, and therefore, something is necessary to meet it.

MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE MEETINGS: QUORUM.

[Mr. P. A. Desai; the Vice-President.] [28TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

As the Honourable Member in Charge has said that comprehensive legislation regarding local self-government is to be framed after the department is taken charge of by a Minister, I withdraw this resolution.

The resolution was by leave withdrawn.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—The Council will now adjourn till 11-30 a.m. to-morrow.

The Council then adjourned till 11-30 a.m. on Wednesday, the 29th September 1920.

The Honourable the Vice-President (Sir G. Carmichael):—Order, order. Further discussion of matters of general public interest. Resolution No. 16. The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat.

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat:—Mr. Chairman,—The resolution which stands in my name reads as follows:—

> This Council recommends that Government may be pleased to take early steps to investigate, either by the appointment of a special medical officer, or otherwise, the causes of the high mortality and general unhealthiness prevailing in Poona city.

At the outset, I believe, it is necessary for me to explain why I come to Government with such a request in a matter which concerns the Poona Municipality. I am sure both, Government as well as some of my honourable colleagues here, would ask me why I ask Government to interfere in a question of local self-government and the internal management of a local body. I have two or three reasons which I hope will appear to this Council cogent when I explain them.

My first answer to the preliminary objection is that the health of Poona city is not the concern only of the Poona city municipality, inasmuch as Poona is for nearly six months in the year the headquarters of the Bombay Government and also the headquarters of various heads of offices, who draw their staff from the Poona city. Then again a large number of visitors from Bombay and other places come to Poona, and if there is a serious state of things in the Poona city, it reflects on the health of the various visitors from parts of the Presidency.

My second reason, sir, and perhaps a stronger reason, is that there are indications to my mind that the health of Poona city has gone from bad to worse of late years, particularly since 1915 when the Poona drainage system was introduced,—a system which has been carried out by Government agency, and a system in which now, after the examination at the hands of an expert sanitary engineer, Government have admitted that there are certain grave defects. I contend, therefore, that if Government carried out the Poona drainage and sewage scheme and if they themselves admit certain grave defects in it, it stands to reason—I mean there is a prima facie case—that the present unhealthiness, which I shall endeavour to prove by facts and figures, to have been recently aggravated, may also be due to the serious defects in the drainage scheme, and that, therefore, the liability of enquiring into and investigating the subject devolves upon Government.

POONA CITY: MORTALITY.

[29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. B. S. Kamat.]

There is also a third reason, sir, why I think an enquiry of such a nature should be conducted by Government, and that is that, even assuming for the sake of argument that this function of investigating the causes of unhealthiness of Poona is specially the function of the Poona municipality, I think, they have not got the necessary staff, expert in sanitary engineering, in examining the silting of the river-beds and various other things, to do the work. And even assuming that they have such an expert staff, I fear that any finding the municipality may arrive at or any conclusion they may come to, may not be acceptable to Government, inasmuch as it might perhaps conflict with the opinions of the Government expert, and thus may not be of any value at all to Government. For all these reasons, I think, sir, it is better that the initiative should be taken by Government if they find from data that the mortality in the Poona city and the general unhealthiness in the town is of a very serious character. Having answered, therefore, this preliminary objection, I shall now come to the merits of the case.

I believe it is the belief of the general public in Poona that the health of the town has been seriously affected since the introduction of the drainage scheme, that is to say, since 1915. With a view to ascertain the facts and figures, I asked a question in the August session of this Council as to whether the sanitary engineer to Government had gone into the question of comparative statistics of the health and mortality of Poona city, both in the pre-drainage period and since the construction of the drainage system, and whether the popular belief was right from the point of view of Government. Government were pleased to furnish, in answer to that question, certain vital statistics, and although Government do not admit, that is to say, the sanitary commissioner is not prepared to admit that the unhealthiness of the town has been aggravated by the drainage system, still from the figures which Government have quoted in Appendix J in the interpellations at the last session of the Council, I believe, Government cannot draw the conclusion that the health of the Poona city, after the introduction of the drainage scheme, is satisfactory. The figures are to my mind such as rather tend to the deduction that after all there is a prima facie case that the health of the Poona city has been adversely affected. For instance, during the pre-drainage years 1912, 1913 and 1914, the average total mortality of the town per 1000 of the population was 41·59. After the introduction of the drainage system the average mortality per 1000 of the population for the three years 1916, 1917 and 1918 was 47·17. That is to say, taking the two averages, decidedly the average mortality after the introduction of the drainage system is higher than the average for the pre-drainage period. I admit that these vital statistics are likely to be vitiated by the fact that they are collected by the municipal agency, and also by the fact that in the year 1919 influenza appeared in the town, and mortality during that year was very high. But still taking the average after the introduction of the drainage scheme as against the pre-drainage period, I say the figures are conclusive of the fact that the mortality is of late growing. Now, I wish to point out that this high rate in mortality synchronizes with the period since the drainage system was introduced. Before the year 1915, as I have shown, the mortality was 41 per 1000 of the population; after that, it is 47. It stands to reason, therefore, that there is a case for enquiry.

Let me now come to the defects in the drainage system, and see whether I can trace the increase in mortality to these defects. The Poona city or the public of Poona has agitated for some time that in the drainage system and the sewage system as carried out by Mr. Mandy there are certain defects. Although Government were not prepared at one time to admit them, I am glad to say they appointed a special expert from England, by name Mr. Watson, of Messrs. Watson & Company, who after going through the whole thing came to a certain conclusion, and has submitted a report to Government. A copy of his report has been placed on the table, and after going through the report the conclusion is irresistible that even in the opinion of the special expert, Mr. Watson, there are serious defects in the drainage system. I need not worry the Council over the several defects that have been pointed out by him. But there is one thing which would be of interest to this Council, and it is this. Mr. Watson has alluded to the leakage of water which is going on in the Poona city through the settling tanks which have been constructed.

POONA CITY: MORTALITY.

[Mr. B. S. Kamat; Mr. G. S. Curtis.] [29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

Mr. Watson in his report says :—

"The reservoirs are wasteful of water which has to be paid for, the 'head' which it is possible to maintain in them is insufficient to keep up a working pressure in the mains, and in order to obviate leakage, the top water level is kept so low that the supply and distributing mains are incapable of fulfilling their functions properly. They have not been properly constructed; neither floors nor sides have been puddled; little indeed has been done by the engineer who designed them to ensure water-tightness, so that the measurements made by Mr. Collets on 3rd of April 1918 are only what one would expect to find in the circumstances, viz. :—

Date.		Depth of water in Tanks.	Leakage of water in gallons per 24 hours.
3rd April 1918	...	8·20 feet.	1,522,850
24th April 1918	...	5·30 feet.	871,268
24th July 1918	...	2·75 feet.	707,628 "

Then referring to sullage soaking Mr. Watson says :—

"The drainage system, as it has been constructed, provided for 6,000 connections being made to the sewers at public expense. What were called 'extra connections', numbering 1,322 were made subsequently by house-owners at their own expense. The total number of house connections does not now exceed 7,350 although in 1906 when the sewage scheme was sanctioned it was deemed necessary to make 13,000 of them.

"In the great majority of cases these drains are connected to sewers which are much too small (4 inch diameter pipes) to act efficiently and this faulty design is rendered worse in many cases by the absence of flush tanks, ventilators and inspection chambers."

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—I beg the honourable member's pardon. Is he quoting from Mr. Watson's report?

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat:—I am quoting from the report by Mr. Watson submitted to the Government of Bombay on the drainage scheme of the Poona city. Mr. Watson continues :—

"I found cases where the sullage was encouraged to soak into the adjacent ground, because the gullies were put in apparently without purpose, the adjoining moris, etc., not being connected to them."

Then at page 4 of the report Mr. Watson says :—

"The main defects of the scheme are probably due to the curtailment of essential features already referred to, but there are defects which might have been avoided without incurring extra expense, for example, better placing of manholes, more careful determination of gradients to obtain velocities sufficient to carry forward silt and sand, and better apportionment of the sizes of pipe sewers for the work required of them."

So both by the leakage of water, the figures of which I have just quoted from Mr. Watson's report, and by sullage, a great deal of dirt is being silted in the drains. Thus, I think, I have been able to show that probably the mortality has been aggravated by the system of the drainage. I contend that although the health department of the Poona city may not be an ideal one, although I admit that there may be great administrative deficiencies in the health department staff of the municipality, still the fact remains that the mortality is aggravated by means of the drainage system carried on by Government. I have quoted from Government report figures which show that probably owing to the leakage of water the health of the town is affected, and I, therefore, think that we have a reasonable claim on Government to assist us in carrying out an investigation so as to find out whether the serious defects left by Government in the scheme are telling upon the health of the people. It is not a question affecting the health of the residents of the Poona city alone but the whole Presidency, and, I trust, if Government would help the municipality and appoint an officer of the character I suggest, it will help to solve this problem.

There is only one more remark that I wish to make and that is that the Poona city has been doing something on the principle of self-help in this matter. Private medical practitioners of the Poona city held a small conference recently with a view to find out from their own observations and from the cases which came to their own knowledge whether the cases of malaria were now on the increase. At a conference of thirty medical practitioners they considered the question. They inspected different wards. I hold in my hand a tabulated statement prepared for that conference as a result of their private inquiries which were based on the principle of self-help for the town; as a result of these inquiries and after examination by some of them of the spleens of about 3,200 school-going children in the city, the medical conference came to the following conclusion:—

POONA CITY: MORTALITY.

[29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. B. S. Kamat; Mr. C. V. Mehta; Mr. R. P. Paranjpye.]

> "As a result of the examination of spleens of 3,280 school children this meeting of the medical practitioners of Poona expresses its opinion that their is a serious infection of malaria in the city generally. A particularly more serious infection is prevalent in Shanwar Peth, Narayan Peth and a part of Shukrawar Peth and those parts of the city that border on the banks of the river....."

That is the opinion of thirty and odd medical practitioners of Poona city. I believe that every one who goes into the town knows that there are fever cases in almost all the wards, almost in every house; in fact, this fever is now nicknamed "Mandy fever" after the name of the officer who carried out the drainage scheme. In view of the evidence, therefore, that I have just placed before the Council, I submit that there is justification for the appointment of a special medical officer, and, I trust, Government will accept my resolution.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta:—Sir,—I am afraid I fail to understand why this resolution should be brought before this Council. I should like to have heard from the honourable mover as to whether this matter was moved in the Poona municipality.

(His Excellency the President at this stage entered and resumed the chair.)

I should have liked to have heard, sir, whether the Poona municipality had come to any resolution on this point, and whether they have asked for the appointment of a medical officer entirely at the charge of Government, or whether they have asked for some financial assistance in carrying out this investigation. I can readily understand that the Poona municipality probably have not got the staff to carry out the scientific and bacteriological examination as the one suggested by the honourable mover. It struck me from the details which the honourable mover stated that really this is a dispute between Government on the one hand, and the Poona municipality on the other as to who is responsible for laying down the drainage scheme which apparently has not given satisfaction. The honourable mover stated that Government while they placed certain vital statistics before the municipality did not admit that they are in any way liable for the defects in the drainage scheme. What then is the utility of asking Government who in this case appear to be the accused party to appoint an officer of their own, and it would be interesting to know whether the municipality would be content to abide by the decision of any officer that will be appointed by Government. It is not suggested of what character the inquiry should be. On the contrary from the resolution it appears that the inquiry is to be of an ex parte character, and it is interesting to know whether all the conclusions to which the medical officer might arrive would be finally accepted by the municipality.

I submit, sir, that the right course is in the first place to have the matter discussed in the municipality itself. In the second place if the municipality is convinced that Government are to blame then it is for them to fight it out with Government, and finally if there is a necessity for an inquiry of this character, then, at all events, to ask that the municipality should be helped if necessary in making this investigation, and that Government should look into the merits of a request of this character. But I do not think that this Council is the proper place for adjudicating disputes between the municipality and Government, and that the general tax-payers should be asked to bear the whole expense of the investigation.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—Sir,—I was rather surprised to hear my honourable friend Mr. Chunilal Mehta opposing a resolution of this character, because, from my experience, and I hope the experience of other honourable members will agree with mine, I have seen that a great portion of this Council has been taken up with matters which concern Bombay city only. Now if we are to tell Government or other honourable members who do not belong to Bombay city that anything that concerns Bombay city should not be discussed in this Council, I think the work of this Council will be practically stopped, because, hardly any question that comes before this Council has reference to every single individual in the Presidency and other questions cannot be said to be of general interest. Is it, therefore, a proper position for my honourable friend Mr. Chunilal Mehta to take that a question of conflict between Government and the Poona city municipality should not be considered at all in this Council? Only last session my honourable friend brought forward a resolution in this Council that the Improvement Trust should be handed over to the Bombay municipality. If that time we had told my honourable friend that this is a question between the Bombay municipality and Government and that this Council had nothing to do with it, would it have been a fair position to take, and does my honourable friend want us who do not belong to Bombay city to take that position?

POONA CITY: MORTALITY.

[Mr. R. P. Paranjpye; Mr. G. S. Curtis; The President.] [29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

I think the Honourable Mr. Kamat has made the question perfectly clear. Here is a large drainage and water supply scheme of the city of Poona which was not executed by the municipality, for which the Poona municipality has contributed half the expenses and Government have contributed the other half, and which has been executed through the agency of Government. If, therefore, there are defects in that scheme, I submit, and I hope honourable members will agree with me, that Government is bound in duty to remedy these defects. If the mistake had been of the Poona municipality, then it was only in the beginning, in consenting to this arrangement of sharing the expenses with Government and to trust to Government with the scheme. The Poona municipality will be perfectly prepared to bear any odium for that initial mistake. But after that there is no other mistake that has been made by the Poona municipality.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Your Excellency, I think we must shorten the debate. The resolution stands as follows; (reads). It is not a resolution as to who should bear the expenses of the drainage scheme. Therefore, I submit, sir, that it is no use the honourable member's arguing that Government ought to pay for remedying the defects.

His Excellency the President:—I think the honourable member will try to keep fairly within the line of the resolution. But I think he is right in referring to the question of remedy.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—The contention is that the health of the Poona city has deteriorated on account of the drainage scheme, and the honourable mover wants an inquiry to be made into the matter, and, I submit that the defects, if there be any at all, are to be charged to Government and not to the Poona municipality. Therefore, it is right for us to ask that Government should bear the costs of the inquiry and make that inquiry, and if the inquiry shows that there are defects, Government ought to pay for even remedying these defects.

Then again my honourable friend Mr. Chunilal Mehta told us that we are asking that Government should make that inquiry through its own medical officers. Well, of course when it is a question of difference of opinion between a subordinate body like a municipality and the main body of the Presidency, namely, Government of Bombay, there is no third party to which we can appeal, unless we appeal to the Government of India or the Home Government. After all we have got to trust to the public opinion, and to enforce our view upon Government and ask Government to take up the inquiry. There is no third party to which we can appeal unless we go to the High Court and sue Government for thrusting upon us a scheme in which there are defects. I do not know whether my honourable friend Mr. Chunilal Mehta asks us to follow that policy.

But in any case the Council is a kind of body which, in my opinion, will enforce the public view on Government, and it is therefore that my honourable friend Mr. Kamat has brought forward this resolution. I think the Honourable Mr. Kamat has proved fully that the health of Poona city has deteriorated. There are facts and figures to prove that, and moreover, the general impression not only of the residents of Poona, but of all people who have to come to Poona even occasionally is that there are most serious defects in the drainage system.....

His Excellency the President:—Order, order. I think the honourable member must confine himself more closely to the terms of the resolution. The terms of the resolution do not entitle him to refer to defects in the drainage system. That there are defects in the drainage system is admitted by Government, and they will try to see what can be done to remedy them. As the resolution stands, the honourable member is entitled only to go into the merits of the proposition, which is the appointment of a medical committee or a medical officer to investigate into the causes of general unhealthiness, and so on.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—Your Excellency,—There is no doubt that the health of the city has deteriorated. The facts and figures prove it, and also the general impression of the residents of Poona, and also of people who come to Poona for occasional stay confirms that view. Here, I think, there is a perfectly sound case for enquiry, and I think that, although the officer that may be appointed may be an officer of Government, we can still hope that that officer will not come to readymade conclusions beforehand on the questions which he will have to investigate, and that professional etiquette and professional honour will make him give a verdict which is real and not dictated to him by superior officers. With these words I fully support the resolution brought forward by my honourable friend Mr. Kamat.

POONA CITY: MORTALITY.

[29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole; Mr. G. S. Curtis.]

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur K. R. Godbole:—Your Excellency,—I also rise to give my support to this resolution. In the speech that I made at the time of the budget discussion in this Council, I have brought to the notice of the Council the defects of the Poona drainage scheme as executed. What my friend the Honourable Mr. Kamat now wants Government to do is to appoint a special officer to investigate into the causes which have led to the unhealthiness of the Poona city. The case is important not only in the interests of Poona city itself, but in the interests of the whole Presidency, and I will tell the Council why it is important in the interests of the whole Presidency. Every important town in the Deccan and the Southern Maratha Country, and in Gujarat also, is pointing to Poona as the instance of a city which has had a complete water-supply and which has a drainage scheme tacked on to it. We are giving water-supplies to all our principal cities and the necessary appendages to the provision of water-supplies will be the provision of drainage schemes. Several cities at present hesitate to go in for schemes of copious water-supply as very heavy expenditure involved in a drainage scheme is to follow. Many municipalities feel doubtful whether they should go in for water-supply and drainage schemes when the results in Poona are stated to be far from satisfactory. The Poona case must, therefore, be placed beyond doubt. On account of these reasons it is extremely important that the whole question of the unhealthiness of the Poona city and of the causes of the high mortality in it should be properly investigated, and we should be in a position to say authoritatively that water-supply and drainage schemes if properly carried out lead to the improvement of the health conditions of a city. It is absolutely necessary that Government should prove this position, and in order to prove it an investigation of the character that has been suggested by the Honourable Mr. Kamat appears to be necessary. I, therefore, heartily support his resolution.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Your Excellency,—The course of this discussion has rather puzzled me. I have the honour to be the Member in Charge of the medical portfolio, and I came here prepared to meet the various arguments why an additional medical man should be posted to Poona to enquire into the alleged unhealthiness and deterioration of public health in Poona. I have no official information whatever as regards the Poona drainage scheme or its defects. That, coming under the Public Works Department, is in charge of His Excellency the Governor, and I am free to admit that though I had heard about Mr. Watson's report, I had not seen it until it came to my hands to-day. All the arguments I have heard support the conclusion that Government should pay one-half of the cost which would be required to make good the defects discovered by Mr. Watson. The matter has not yet come up for consideration, but I understand that the proposal is likely to be accepted. So far it has not come within my official knowledge.

But, sir, what I have to deal with is the resolution as printed and the arguments in support of this resolution. So far I have not heard one single argument as to why a special officer is necessary. I may mention a fact which has come to my notice, again unofficially, that the Poona municipality has been without a municipal health officer for at least two years, and that the Chief Sanitary Officer of the municipality has been a person without the qualifications of a sanitary inspector. Now, sir, if that statement is correct, I do not think it hard to understand why the general sanitary organization of the city has deteriorated, and why the general health of the city is not as satisfactory as it was some years ago. Most of us would be surprised if it had not deteriorated, under those conditions. Those of us who know Bombay, and are familiar with the work done by the sanitary department in Bombay, and the immense personal care taken by the highly equipped officer in charge of that department, can realize what must happen if the superintendence of that department, which requires skilled training and powers of organization, is placed in the hands of a person without training, without education, and entirely unfitted for the post. I understand, again unofficially,—I have no official information—that the Poona municipality intends to appoint a first class health officer and has asked for sanction to the appointment which I understand has recently been given. That officer has not yet been appointed, but I hope that now that the sanction has been given, the municipality will not be slow in proceeding to discharge their duty of placing the sanitary services and organization under a skilled and efficient charge. I venture to think that when this is done, the tabulation of the mortality statistics will be placed on a more satisfactory footing, and that it may be possible to look upon the statistics as regards the general health of the city with greater confidence than is the case at present. With statistics as at present collected, it is impossible to arrive at any reliable conclusion. Therefore, sir, my suggestion to the honourable mover of the resolution would be this. Let the municipality do their duty, let them appoint an efficient head of their sanitary service, and let them, under his skilled charge, tabulate their statistics and present to us a reasoned statement of the case for believing that the health of Poona city has deteriorated. If they wish for skilled assistance, the Sanitary Commissioner and the Deputy Sanitary Commissioner are at their elbow, always pleased to give them any assistance most ungrudgingly whenever they are called on to do so. As far as my unofficial information is concerned, that request has not yet been made. But once more, following the Honourable Mr. Mehta, let the municipalities remember their duties towards the public. If they will but bear in mind that they too have a duty to perform, I think, they will find that Government, the Public Works Department, will not be slow to remedy such defects in the drainage system as expert opinion has revealed. The fact that Government placed at the municipality's disposal the services of Mr. Watson, shows the Government's readiness to help. Mr. Watson is perhaps the greatest expert in the world on water sewage, and the fact that the services of such an expert were made available, shows that Government have no wish to conceal anything or neglect anything. A further fact which I may mention to the Council is that a special engineer has been brought out from England at Government expense to remedy such of the more important defects, as Mr. Watson's enquiry has brought to notice. That also shows that Government have no wish to blink the matter. But, further, sir, that an elaborate enquiry or the collection of elaborate tabular statistics is necessary has not, as far as I can see, been proved by any of the honourable members, residents of Poona, who have spoken to-day. Therefore, sir, I cannot accept the resolution in its present form. But I would say this, that if and when the municipality have placed their sanitary organization in order by the appointment of a skilled and trained officer in charge, and they make an effort to present statistics sufficiently reliable to arrive at elaborate conclusions regarding the health of the city, if and when that is done, and the Health Officer finds himself unable, with the assistance of the Sanitary Commissioner and the Deputy Sanitary Commissioner, to come to any satisfactory conclusion, Government will then come to their assistance. Under these circumstances, I trust the honourable member will withdraw his resolution.

POONA CITY: MORTALITY.

[Mr. G. S. Curtis; Mr. B. S. Kamat.] [29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat:—Your Excellency,—Regarding the objections that my honourable friend Mr. Chunilal Mehta brought forward, I believe, the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye has very effectively answered each and every one of his points. Indeed, I was surprised to find the Honourable Mr. Chunilal Mehta taking a very narrow view of affairs outside the city of Bombay, and if that is the spirit which would animate the discussions in this Council, I think, our discussions will soon degenerate into parochial matters. I think we ought to take a broad view of things affecting all the parts of the Presidency and not only the city of Bombay.

Regarding what fell from the Honourable Member in Charge, as I myself pointed out in my remarks, the defects in the drainage scheme have been looked into by Government and probably they will also rectify the defects. But I contend, sir, that the health of the people in Poona city has deteriorated as a consequence of the defects, and therefore, it is not proper that Government should stop at merely detecting the engineering defects. As I say, the after-effects of these things are reflected in the health of the people, and from the medical aspect of the thing it is necessary to pursue the enquiry still further, not at the hands of an engineer like Mr. Watson, howsoever expert he may be, but at the hands of a medical officer, say an I.M.S. officer, to go into the root causes of the high mortality and general unhealthiness and various other medical matters. It is with this view that I have asked for an enquiry. It is perfectly true that the present officer doing the duties of health officer is not an expert to conduct a thorough inquiry; it is also true that the Poona municipality has had no health officer for about two years. I admit that fact, but let me also point out that the figures which I quoted of the high mortality do not relate only to the last two years. I quoted the figures of even 1915 to 1917, and during those years there was a health officer with the municipality. So, the non-appointment of a health officer in 1919 has not materially anything to do with the high mortality in 1915, 1916, 1917, in my opinion. It is perfectly true that the organization under the health officer should be exceedingly good. But the figures I quoted relate to the previous years, and not to the years of 1919 and 1920, when there was no health officer, and that fact, therefore, should not have been brought forward to prove that the heavy mortality had anything to do with the non-appointment of the health officer.

Regarding the assistance from the Deputy Sanitary Commissioner and Sanitary Commissioner in Poona, the municipality and the health officer will be perfectly welcome to have that assistance. But, after all, the time at the disposal of the health officer for his ordinary routine duties is so full up that there is hardly any time left for him to go into such difficult and scientific problems as the examination and analysis of water, soils, spleens, or the silting up of the river beds, and to go into other problems such as whether the bund which has been put up on the river is or is not at the root of the whole trouble. All that requires special enquiry at the hands of a special officer. Therefore, the argument that the Sanitary Commissioner and the Deputy Sanitary Commissioner are prepared to give their assistance to the municipality is not a very sound argument. What I contend is that the enquiry is of a medical nature, and it is of such importance that a full time man specially on this duty is a great necessity. However, I understand that Government are prepared to give a modified acceptance to my resolution, and if the municipality come forward to Government with better data and statistics as to the mortality Government would be prepared to appoint an officer to go further into the question. Am I right in understanding that that is the position of Government?

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis :—If the municipality make out a reasonable case, the answer is yes.

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat :—I will accept the assurance that Government will be prepared to help, if the municipality can bring forward better and more reliable statistics; on this understanding I withdraw the resolution.

The resolution was by leave withdrawn.

His Excellency the President :—I would propose that resolutions Nos. 23, 22, 20 and 18, which are all cognate to the Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud's resolution No. 19 should, with the concurrence of honourable members, be taken up together.

I should also wish to postpone resolution No. 24, which would normally have come on at this moment, to the end.

His Excellency the President :—Resolution No. 19. The Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud.

This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that the pay of vernacular teachers be revised on the lines adopted by Government for the revision of pay of the clerical establishments in other departments.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud :—Your Excellency,—In consequence of a resolution I moved, Government were pleased to appoint the finance committee to go into the question of the revision of the pay of the subordinate services of the Presidency. The finance committee met and made recommendations, on which Government have issued definite orders. But the question of settling the details about each department has been left over. In that resolution I recommended that Government should place before that committee the recommendations received from the heads of offices, but I was then told to modify that resolution in that respect, not because Government were unwilling to place the recommendations of heads of offices before that committee, but because the recommendations had not then been received, and all the details had not then been fixed. Now, however, we find that the recommendations made by the finance committee are supposed to apply not to all departments, but only to clerical establishments of the Presidency. The resolution requested Government to appoint a committee to go into the question of the revision of the pay of the subordinate services, and we find that it has only dealt with the grievances of the clerical establishments of the Presidency. The others have been left over. Their case has not yet been considered, and I do not know what Government propose to do in the case of the revision of other departments.

With regard to primary teachers, I may say that their case is a very hard one. I am sure honourable members of this Council have, every one of them, great sympathy with this class of public servants. That class, however, has not been quite liberally dealt with. Their scale of pay was fixed in 1887 at Rs. 5; the village primary teacher was supposed to work on Rs. 5. Then, between 1893 and 1894, this was slightly increased; an increment of Rs. 2 was given and the scale was then fixed at Rs. 7. Thereafter, in about 1911, the scale was again revised; it was taken up to Rs. 9, and finally to Rs. 12, and there it stands at present. This revision has, I think, to a certain extent always followed the revision of the pay of the clerical establishments. When the minimum pay of a clerk stood at Rs. 12, the pay of the primary teacher was supposed to be Rs. 7, and when the pay of clerks was raised to Rs. 15 and to Rs. 20, the pay of the primary teachers was also slightly increased, just to show a small increment on the original pay, and was taken up to Rs. 7 and Rs. 12. I submit that this class of public servants is really a hard-worked class. It has already done a great deal for the education of the boys in the Presidency, but it does not receive that remuneration which it has always deserved. The qualifications which are required of this class are by no means incomparable with those which are required of the clerks. They, too, have to pass the vernacular final examination, and some of them have also to take up special technical training. They go through the training colleges and put in two or three years, but at the end of even the second or third year they do not find that their prospects have materially improved. Their prospects are lower than the prospects enjoyed by men of even lesser qualifications in other favoured departments of Government.

VERNACULAR SCHOOLTEACHERS: PAY.

[Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud.] [29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

I do not know whether the Honourable the Director of Public Instruction takes the same interest in his subordinates which the Honourable the Inspector General of Police takes, but I think, he has not been able, at any rate, to induce the Government of Bombay to take the same interest in his subordinates which the Honourable the Inspector General of Police has been able to arouse for his subordinates. There are also several other departments where revisions have come in frequently and liberally, and it is only this department whose claims have from time to time been shelved, because, perhaps Government had no money at hand. But, sir, it is usual to first meet those expenses which are very insistent, and to provide last for those expenses which may or may not be incurred, and, I think, Government probably consider that they are not to blame if they shelve the case of these poor people, and take it up last. But, sir, from the point of view of those people, I think, it is very necessary that they should at least have a living wage. Government placed before the finance committee a schedule prepared by their experts, which showed the minimum cost necessary to feed a unit of three individuals, which Government regards as the family dependent upon the wages of their subordinates. Government thought that the men who came into the clerical establishments of the Presidency came from classes which had a minimum of three individuals to feed. They calculated upon that basis, and they found that it was hardly possible to keep body and soul together on a pay of anything less than Rs. 35, and the first recommendation which they made, just to meet the absolute necessities of their clerical establishments, was a minimum pay of Rs. 35. The finance committee, however, thought that the proposal was a bit extravagant, and cut it down to Rs. 30, in the case of vernacular final clerks. After all, when Government take anybody in their employment, it is, I suppose, the duty of Government to see that the man who does the work for them at least gets enough to feed himself, and to keep himself fit for the work which he is doing. If this Government thought so and made a recommendation to the Government of India, that a minimum pay of Rs. 35 was necessary for a clerk, I do not know on what grounds they withhold this very necessary relief from their vernacular teachers. Is it not to be supposed that they also have to carry on a fairly decent existence? As everybody knows, they have no perquisites, and if that is so, it is obvious that they have to live entirely on their pay. Then, it also becomes the duty of Government to see that their pay is sufficient to meet the absolute necessities of life. I hope, therefore, that the pay which was suggested as the very minimum by the finance committee, namely, Rs. 30, for vernacular final men will be accepted in the case of the primary school-teachers, and that they will be able to get the benefit of that revision which has been given to the clerks, and with their better qualifications I hope that they will be able to get the benefit of better scales of pay than those which Government have introduced for their clerical establishments.

It may be contended that Government have no funds to meet this large demand from the primary teachers. I submit that it is hardly an argument which can be advanced in this case. Government have a very large balance on hand, and they have only to request the Government of India to allow them to draw upon the balance for this very necessary expenditure. I do not know why in such urgent cases the Government of Bombay should not make a request to the Government of India to allow them to draw on that balance. I once told the Council that I was present at a meeting of the Council when Sir John Muir-Mackenzie congratulated Government and the Council on passing the one crore limit for our provincial balances. As he had accumulated a crore, and passed that limit, he thought he had made a record. We have left that record long behind, and, with a balance of Rs. 4 or 5 crores, if we are not willing to help our servants in their absolute necessities, I think, we shall be failing in one of our duties. They now get a small war allowance which, I hope, everybody will agree hardly sufficient to keep the schoolmasters and their families provided even with their food, let alone the other necessities of life. Schoolmasters, I may tell the Council come from the middle classes of the population, where women do not engage in manual labour and do not earn their living, and it was upon that basis that Government calculated a unit of three individuals as dependent upon a clerk. In this case too, the same family of two individuals and the teacher himself will have to be taken into consideration in determining the minimum pay which is necessary for a vernacular teacher. I submit that it is absolutely necessary that we should consider their case, and that it is necessary that it should be quickly considered, and that relief should be given to a very deserving class of public servants.

VERNACULAR SCHOOLTEACHERS: PAY.

[29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud; Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe.]

The Honourable Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe:—Your Excelleney,—I heartily support the resolution moved by my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Garud. When we are considering the case of these teachers, we may take into account the number of trained and untrained teachers that are affected. The number of trained teachers in municipal areas is 3,004, and that of untrained teachers in the same area is 3,159. I have taken these figures from the report of 1918-19. The number of trained teachers in the local boards is roughly 6,500 and that of untrained teachers is roughly 10,000 and odd. I do not intend to take honourable members back to the years 1887 and 1893. Let us see what state of affairs existed in the year 1918. We find that in that year when the prices had gone high—not as high as they are now—the untrained teacher was getting Rs. 9, and if he was a headmaster he used to get Rs. 11. The first year trained teacher got Rs. 12, and his maximum was Rs. 25. The second year trained teacher got Rs. 15, and his maximum was Rs. 40. The third year teacher began with Rs. 20, while his maximum was Rs. 60. Then early in the year 1919—about February—on the recommendation of the Honourable the Director of Public Instruction some slight change was made in their scale of pay. That was not really very adequate, and to judge the inadequacy of it, I will only give the figures. Instead of Rs. 9, they were Rs. 12; instead of Rs. 12, they were Rs. 15; instead of Rs. 15, they were Rs. 20; in place of Rs. 20, they were Rs. 25; while in the case of third, second and first year trained teachers, the maximum was left as it was with the time-scale of eight annas or one rupee per year. Since 1918 the cost of living has enormously increased; and it is admitted by Government, as I find from the increases given in various other departments that on account of the high cost of living, pay has to be increased. So, nothing need be said on that ground. That the teachers do require a more benevolent treatment at the hands of Government, is an admitted fact.

There was a conference of teachers held in the year 1919 over which my friend the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye presided in Poona and a deputation was headed by him. Although 15 months have passed, I am sorry to say that nothing has yet taken place in the direction of increasing their pay. The disappointment grew, and at the second conference over which I had the honour of presiding in May last the number of teachers gathered was about 400, and teacher after teacher came forward and gave most harrowing stories as to how he was suffering for want of adequate pay, and every one stated that it became practically impossible for him to live a decent life. Every one of us will perceive that in a village the office of a teacher is rather a dignified one. Every one looks up to the teacher, because all the youngsters of the village have to go to school and receive their training at his hands. What impression would be left on the minds of the villagers if they find that the teachers are so miserably paid that they cannot make both ends meet, and that in some cases they have actually to starve or raise loans from petty merchants in the village? Is that a creditable state of things? Surely every one of us will agree that it is not. Side by side, the disappointment has been accentuated, because, they find that Government has been treating other departments more liberally, and has not been paying adequate attention to the proper and due demands of such a useful class of public servants. That such a hard hit set of officers should have been left behind especially after Government have once admitted by their action in other departments that the state of affairs requires to be revised, is a matter of great surprise to me, and it must be a matter of great surprise to many others here. In the interval some arrangement was made to pay Rs. 4 on account of war allowance. So, the pay of Rs. 12 came up to Rs. 16. But if we take into account the pay which peons now receive —it is Rs. 16 per month—we see what the state of affairs is. Are we going to bring these teachers on the same level as that of—or on an equal line with—the sepoys and chapprasis? That only means that our educational system is sure not to command confidence with the general public.

I am told that even in the main training colleges the stipend has been raised now to Rs. 15 a month, and the whole of it is spent on board. When such is the state of affairs, I think it is high time that Government should consider their case immediately, so as to relieve the great stress under which this class is labouring. It may be pointed out—and it was stated by my friend the Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud—that want of funds seems to be the only excuse. Here, sir, Government seems to have begun at the wrong end. Government have revised the scale of pay in the case of high officers who could really have waited for a year or two more. In fact, without meaning any offence to those who were responsible for giving promotions in the higher grades of service, I do say that those servants who get Rs. 500 could really have waited to receive Rs. 700. If these poor people who get Rs. 12 and Rs. 16 are allowed to rot in the same condition in which they have been rotting for so many years, what a great disappointment it is to them. Furthermore, you create a kind of discontent amongst a class of officers from whom such work as the training of young children is expected. Yesterday it was pointed out by my honourable friend Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas that if Government has the will, Government will find the means; and resourceful as Government is, I do not think that any difficulty will really be experienced on that score in meeting the demands of these poor teachers.

VERNACULAR SCHOOLTEACHERS: PAY.

[Rao Bahadur G. K. Sathe; Rao Saheb H. D. Desai.] [29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

There is another point which is involved in the discussion of the question, and I will not weary the Council by giving the figures, because, the resolution of my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Garud refers to bringing the pay of these teachers on the same level as that of the clerical establishment. That means that the untrained teachers ought, at any rate, to get Rs. 30 to begin with. The same scale has been prescribed for the clerical department if a vernacular school final candidate gets admission into that service. The untrained teacher does pass his vernacular final examination, and there is no reason why his case should be differentiated from the case of others. It might be said, sir, that these teachers in villages get some kind of perquisites. It may be a matter of old date. But so far as my own information goes, I do not think a village teacher can count upon anything of that sort now, and particularly when every commodity is getting a fairly good price in the market, nobody would think of giving anything by way of charity or by way of help to these village teachers, as they, I am told, used to do some 30 or 40 years ago.

There is one more point, and that is this. Looking to the number of untrained and trained teachers, and looking to the great hardship which has been felt by these untrained teachers, it may as well do—that does not mean that I am giving up the case of the trained teachers—but it may as well do, if Government makes up its mind at once to relieve the stress of these untrained teachers and pronounce in favour of the scheme as was demanded by the conference of 1920. It does not matter if its operation is postponed by some months. That, at any rate, is the view of these poor teachers, and with a most sympathetic Honourable Member in Charge of this department, I have every reason to hope that this resolution will find favour with Government and that Government will take immediate steps to relieve the distress of these poor teachers. With these words I support the resolution moved by my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Garud.

The Honourable Rao Saheb H. D. Desai:—Your Excellency,—I beg to submit that I have the fullest sympathy with the lot of teachers as regards their salaries. No class of servants exist in our administration who deserve better treatment than they do. If we wish to make teaching efficient, then the teacher must be paid well.

And in these times when we cannot get a pattawala for less than Rs. 20, to expect to get a teacher, even an untrained teacher having passed the vernacular public service examination, for less than Rs. 20, is to look out for finding people who cannot do their work properly. In 1918 I happened to be in charge of the schools committee of the Ahmedabad municipality, and the question was pointedly brought home to me as regards the inadequacy of the salaries of the teachers in the primary schools, and that was just about the time that the department announced the revision of time scale pay. I considered it expedient to move the municipality to raise the minimum salary of teachers in the primary schools of the Ahmedabad municipality to Rs. 20. The general board of the municipality accepted my proposal and at present there is no teacher in the primary schools of the Ahmedabad municipality who gets less than Rs. 20; and over and above that amount he gets also the war allowance. I at that time apprehended some departmental difficulty, and so I informally requested the Honourable the Director of Public Instruction to see that looking to the high cost of living in large cities he would see his way to accord his sanction to our proposal, and he was good enough to do it. Since then that is the rate at least in Ahmedabad. So the minimum pay that the teachers get in the schools of the Ahmedabad municipality is Rs. 20, plus the war allowance, and I think that it is the wage which is barely sufficient to make both ends meet, and therefore, a resolution of that character, which I thought yesterday would be the first to be brought before this Council, would meet with general acceptance. A resolution of this character seems to make rather an extravagant demand no doubt; but for this extravagance of the demand Government have to thank themselves. They have taken the revision of departments piecemeal. They have not considered the whole question together, and consequently

VERNACULAR SCHOOLTEACHERS: PAY.

[29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Rao Saheb H. D. Desai; Mr. S. B. Upasani.]

it is not for them now to blame any one for coming up to them with the revision of the department with demands pitched high. But whatever view may be taken of the question whether it is possible financially to put the salaries of the teachers in line with the revision of the clerical establishment of other departments, at least the question as regards the minimum salary of the primary teachers is one which requires to be immediately solved in order that there may be no mishap and no serious bickering in that line.

I looked up the figures of trained and untrained teachers in order to see what will be the cost even of giving immediately a temporary and provisional allowance as is given in other departments. Roughly the number of teachers is about 26,840, out of which 10,338 are trained and 16,452 untrained. If I am not mistaken the average cost of the salaries of the trained headmasters is put down at Rs. 33, of trained assistants at Rs. 22, of untrained headmasters at Rs. 16 and of untrained assistants at Rs. 13. So calculating on that basis if my calculations are not wrong, it would require about Rs. 8,00,000 to bring up the minimum salary to Rs. 20; and if a provisional allowance is given all round to all the teachers instead of the war allowance, the cost will be at least Rs. 20,00,000. But in any case the position is that while in other departments people have got temporary and provisional allowance instead of war allowance, the teachers of primary schools have been only getting the war allowance. Putting it into figures the untrained teacher gets Rs. 12, and Rs. 4 as war allowance, so that he gets Rs. 16, and if you were to give him at least Rs. 20 as minimum, then the cost will be Rs. 8,00,000. If you were to give a temporary provisional war allowance to all the teachers trained and untrained, it will come to Rs. 20,00,000. But whatever be the cost this is a class of public servants on whom the future of the country depends, and therefore the question deserves serious consideration of this Council.

At the same time I do wish to bring it to the notice of the Council that it is a matter of very serious consideration whether financially it is possible to put teachers on a level with the clerical establishment in other departments. Whether the scale of revision on that line in other departments is a mistake or not, I am not prepared to say. But in any case when you have to treat in the educational department with untrained teachers, first year trained teachers, second year trained teachers, third year trained teachers, the demand as generally made in this resolution seems to me to be rather extravagant and not capable of ready acceptance. But as there are four or five resolutions on the agenda dealing with this subject, I have taken this opportunity of placing before this Council the fact that the minimum that requires to be allowed all at once is to grant the teachers a temporary and provisional war allowance as in the case of other departments so as to bring up the minimum salary to Rs. 20. If that is done the immediate need would be met, and at the same time I would request your Excellency that with reference to the general revision also the question had better be taken immediately on very sound lines so that the complaint may be put a stop to and this class of servants may continue to perform their duties with satisfaction to the public as well as to the department.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—Your Excellency,—I have great pleasure in supporting this resolution moved by my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Garud. It relates to a subject which demanded immediate attention of Government but which for a very long time has failed to receive the adequate consideration which it deserved. Only a few years ago the lot of these teachers, particularly the untrained, was even more unfortunate than it is at present. As pointed out by the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe they used to receive only Rs. 9, as initial pay and could rise to only Rs. 10. It was after I moved a resolution in this Council that the pay was raised from Rs. 9 to 12, and Rs. 12 to 15. But that is found to be quite insufficient now. This resolution concerns not less than 21,168 male teachers and 1,655 female teachers. Of the male teachers all excepting 1,268 are qualified, that is, they have all passed the vernacular final examination which is held to be the qualifying test for admission to the vernacular departments in the Presidency, and of these not less than 8,656 are trained. Some of them are first year trained, some second year and some third year. Now considering the initial qualification of these teachers and particularly of those of them who are trained for one, two and three years respectively, it will be admitted that they deserve far better treatment than is meted out to them, and they ought, I think, to get the same remuneration which servants in the other departments wih equal qualification receive. I need hardly state that these teachers are drawn from the same class from which our clerical class is recruited. For the vernacular clerk Government has fixed the starting salary at Rs. 30, rising to Rs. 80. Now let us compare that scale with the scale of the pay received by the teachers, and it will be seen that the pay that the teachers receive is far too poor to be allowed to be continued in these days. Through a sense of discipline they have submitted to their lot so long in spite of the hardship caused by the abnormal rise in prices, and we can very well imagine their difficulties. But even in their case patience has now reached its limit and if Government is not pleased to take early notice of their hard condition, I am afraid it will be too much to expect that their patience will continue longer. We have been flooded with representations from these gentlemen asking us most imploringly to call the attention of Government to the urgent need for immediate action in their case. I need hardly state to this Council that Government has done a great deal during the last few years to improve the lot of their servants in the other departments. But this class of servants alone has been left out. It was very rightly observed by the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe that Government commenced at the wrong end. They commenced at the top. They overfed the highly paid servants with increase of salaries, personal allowances, travelling allowances, duty allowances, overseas allowances and what not, and these low paid poor teachers have been left to starve in the face of the continued increase of prices. They have been compelled to struggle as best they can on the pretence that the administration is overburdened with other demands. Even as regards their pension the untrained teachers after thirty years' service get a pension of only Rs. 4 the same that is given to peons and menials.

VERNACULAR SCHOOLTEACHERS: PAY.

[Mr. S. B. Upasani.] [29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

Now, as regards the pay that these teachers get, I may state that it is not even half of what the postal peons in Bombay are getting at present. A postal peon in Bombay receives Rs. 27 as starting pay and rises to Rs. 45, and in addition gets Rs. 7 a month for house-rent. Even this is not sufficient to meet their cost of living, and being not satisfied with their lot they have gone on strike. It will be seen from this what amount is necessary for an ordinary family man. How can we expect these teachers to do their duty properly with the small pittance they are receiving at present. Government after an official inquiry have ascertained that the minimum cost required to maintain a small family is at least Rs. 35 to Rs. 40, and I believe the Government of India have accorded sanction to the initial starting pay of the clerical establishment being fixed at Rs. 35 a month. If that be a fact, it is both fair and necessary that the same scale should be applied to the teachers, both male and female. They have to suffer all the inconveniences and discomforts of village life, and in addition to incur expenses for sending their children to headquarter stations for being educated, and they have no other source of income.

They are drawn from the middle classes and are used to the standard of living of that class and their cost of living is the same as that required for that class. Then again in the village they pass for men belonging to the advanced classes and have to keep up that status. Well, if they fail to keep up their status, it affects not only their own position but even the interests of the school children. In fact, the miserable condition of these teachers is reflected even in the condition of our schools. A reference to the latest report will show that out of nearly 7 lakhs and odd pupils in the primary stage only 52,500 are in the upper primary stage and all the rest, 6 lakhs and more, are in the lower primary stage. If these teachers do not get a living wage, how can we expect them to do their responsible work satisfactorily or in a manner which we can approve of? And the future of the children learning under them does depend on the manner in which they are taught while in their charge. The village school is the cradle of education, and if at this tender age the children do not get instruction on right lines owing to the hard lot of their teachers, what do we expect as a result? There is no wonder that the quality of our students is deteriorating, and that the boys have to pass a larger number of years in the school than they ought to. Instead of a boy passing successively in each class, he drags on in the same class for years together. It is hardly a state of things which we can allow to continue. If we pay our teachers a proper wage and treat them in a proper way, then alone shall we be able to exact from them the proper amount of work in the matter of imparting instruction to young children which is so necessary in the interests of the country. I think, I need hardly labour the point further in appealing on their behalf, because, Government and the Honourable the Director of Public Instruction have been pleased from time to time to admit the hard condition of these teachers. The difficulty pointed out in their case is, that these teachers form so large a number that improvement in their pay and prospects will require a very large outlay which Government cannot easily meet. As to this I say that since 1912 this Government have received from the Government of India grants to the extent of Rs. 52,00,000 for education. That has given sufficient relief to the provincial exchequer, and I do not know, when Government have been able to find such large amounts to increase the remuneration of the police and other departments, why this department alone, with an Educational Member like the Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola at the head, should find it difficult to get its adequate share of the provincial revenues. However tight the finance secretary may sit upon the revenues, our Educational Member in the interests of these men ought to be able to persuade Government to relax their purse and give the needful help that is so urgently required in the case of these poor people.

Another thing I wish to complain of is that, while these people receive too low a pay, even the war allowance which was sanctioned to other better paid clerks was not sanctioned in their case. The resolution which I have myself sent up requests that until a revised scale of pay is sanctioned and the teachers get their revised pay they should at least get the war allowance at the full rate at which the clerks in the mofussil at present receive the same. Another complaint is that even the war allowance which the teachers get from the Postal Department for doing postal work is not allowed to be drawn by them in full but is deducted from their total allowance which ought not to be done. With these words I support the resolution.

The Honourable Mr. R. P. Paranjpye:—Your Excellency,—I wish to accord my hearty support to the resolution brought forward by my honourable friend, and I wish particularly to impress upon the members of this Council that the position of the teachers is getting absolutely impossible, that they have almost begun to lose every hope of bettering their condition by petitions and applications, and so on, and that the other methods that are in the air in the country are appealing to some of the wilder spirits among the teachers. Now, as a member of the teaching profession myself I do not wish that the teachers should take to such wilder methods, and I do hope that Government and this Council will come to their rescue at the very last minute of the eleventh hour and make their position at least somewhat satisfactory. The figures about the pay of the teachers of the various grades are pretty well known to the members of this Council. At present the lot of the untrained teachers is the hardest of all. They are getting Rs. 12 a month, with a war allowance of Rs. 4 a month. Now just conceive a man supposed to be presumably working in a respectable profession—not of a manual labourer—getting Rs. 16 a month, when by all statistics the cost of living of a single person is rather over Rs. 16. According to the statistics of the Inspector General of Jails you will find that the cost of maintaining a single prisoner in a jail is Rs. 17 and odd annas, and we pay our untrained teachers the magnificent salary of Rs. 16 a month including Rs. 4 war allowance. Consider the case of the postmen themselves. Now honourable members know that several of these teachers are also administering the post office in connection with the postal work in the villages. The teachers are postmasters also, and curiously enough the postal runners whom they employ get even more than the teachers themselves who act as postmasters, even including their war allowance. Now, is this state of things creditable to Government, or to the Council or to any country at all? I think these facts need only to be stated in order to find a remedy. It is not right for anybody to come and say "We have got no funds". If funds are not available, we have got to find them in some way or another. It is not right that we should ask these teachers, who number about 27,000, to wait and wait. The question is often asked, if these teachers are not satisfied in their present occupations, why do they not leave their profession and take to some other? Now it is a question that is very easily asked, but it is, in my opinion, the hardest question. Labour even in the most advanced countries in the West is not very mobile. You find that in particular cities you are often able to lower the wages below the standard of wages in other professions or other cities. It takes some effort, it is a great wrench, for a person to move from a place to which he is accustomed or from a profession to which he is accustomed. Well, therefore, it is possible, if we stretch it to the breaking point, the teachers might take to another profession. But is it right for Government, is it right for this Council, to force the teachers to do so? I think it is sound policy for Government to see that these teachers are not compelled to take to other professions, and that we take steps at the proper time to stop any manifestations of unfriendliness. Some of the teachers are considering wilder measures and members of this Council like myself have occasionally seen resolutions passed by various associations of teachers that they are thinking of giving up their jobs on such and such dates if Government does not come to their rescue early enough. I hope the Honourable Member in Charge of the department will make a satisfactory declaration on this point. It is not right to say that the Education Department is to be a transferred department in the coming Council and that we should not tie the hands of the new Council at this time. But let me tell the members of Government and the Council that we cannot expect the teachers to continue to work under the present difficult conditions. No teacher can be expected to continue to work at this starvation wage. Whether it is a transferred or a reserved department, the teachers will have to be paid a living wage, a wage which they can get in other walks of life. We are often told that the extension of primary education has not made much progress on account of want of teachers. Can we fail to understand that this want will continue to remain until we put our teachers on a proper economic footing? Even in the countries of the West the teachers' salaries are comparatively low and the primary teachers are none too handsomely paid, but you will see that in a country like England most of the primary teachers are women, who have not got any families to maintain and they have to practically maintain themselves. The social conditions in this country are different; teachers here are generally males and have generally families to maintain, and they have also to maintain some social status. In the case of a manual labourer, for instance, other members of his family, his wife for example, earn at least something. In the case of a teacher here such addition to his income is not possible. We must, therefore, see that we give to the teachers a wage which is not only sufficient to maintain a single individual but sufficient to maintain a family of three persons at least. I, therefore, think that a revision is absolutely necessary.

VERNACULAR SCHOOLTEACHERS: PAY.

[Mr. R. P. Paranjpye; Mr. B. S. Kamat; Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah.] [29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

I did not quite understand the Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai's argument that the scale of teachers' pay should not be raised to the same extent as in the case of other departments which are recruited from a somewhat similar class of people. I think that the finance committee which considered the revision of these establishments thought that Rs. 30 might be just the possible minimum for a vernacular final man to begin his career in the department, and I do not think, with the high rise of prices that we are experiencing, that we can do very much lower than give the teachers a minimum wage at least to that extent. Of course, the case of the untrained teachers is the hardest. That has got to be considered first of all. My honourable friend Rao Bahadur Sathe said that even if we now in a very few days give substantial relief to the untrained teachers, and give a promise to the others that within five or six months a revised scale will be sanctioned and brought into effect, a great part of the restiveness of the teachers will disappear. But I do want the Council and Government to understand that the position is really getting very difficult. We might even one day be faced with a situation of all the schools being locked up and the keys sent by registered post to the deputy educational inspectors of the divisions. That is not a state of things which we would welcome or which is in the best interests of the people. Little children after all, get all their impressions as to what is right from their teachers, and the teachers ought not, in my opinion, to set an example of drastic measures, but we must see that the teachers are not required to undertake these drastic remedies.

The Honourable Mr. B. S. Kamat:—Your Excellency,—After the remarks of the previous speakers, I think, I need not go into details, especially the harrowing details as to how Rs. 16 a month is not enough for a family consisting of more than three or four children. But what I want to emphasize is this. As the Honourable Rao Bahadur Sathe and the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye have said, I happen to know the depth of feeling that has been aroused of late amongst primary teachers from the three Divisions, and I think, their impatience has grown to such a pitch that matters are coming to a crisis, and I think it is my duty to inform Government that it is now high time that the whole question is gone into and some sort of recommendations made. Time is the essence of the situation in coming to a decision. I think fifteen months have been allowed to pass without anything having been done in the matter. Other services have been given a revision; only the primary teachers' case has been kept back. As I said, time is the essence of the situation, and the question requires very early settlement.

There is only one more remark which I wish to make. We have often been told that Government have every sympathy for the primary teachers, but that the difficulty is financial. I should like to make one observation as to this attitude. It is the duty of Government to lay down what the living wage shall be, and having laid it down, I think, the salary of these poor teachers ought to be the first charge on our finances. It is not a sound argument to say that Government recognize that the teachers deserve to get more than Rs. 16, but that Government have not the money. Take the case of a millowner. If he says that he wants 2,000 millhands, and he recognizes that their living wage will be so much, but that he has not got enough money to pay them, I think, the only answer to him would be that he ought to shut up his shop or reduce the strength of his employees. The principle to be laid down is this. First fix a living wage, and when you accept that living wage, then that wage for the 27,000 primary teachers, in fact for all your employees, ought to be the first charge on the finances, whatever they may be. All other matters of public expenditure can stand. If this principle is accepted by the Finance Department, I trust that it will allay the unrest among the primary teachers.

The Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah:—Your Excellency,—I do not think a salary of Rs. 12 and a war allowance of Rs. 4 is a fair wage for schoolmasters. I think that like all other public officers the schoolmasters ought to be given a living wage. I had the honour to preside, recently, at the conference of the Sind primary teachers, and their resolution has been forwarded to Government. There is great discontent among them. The only difference I find between the primary teachers and other public servants is that, if other public servants were to go on strike, it would affect the whole of the administration, but if the poor teachers were to go on strike, that would not affect the administration, but only the progress of the country to a certain extent would be retarted. I think that because the schoolmasters are helpless, Government should not take advantage of their helplessness. I, therefore, trust that your Excellency's Government will revise their salaries as they have done in the case of other public servants. With these words I support the resolution.

VERNACULAR SCHOOLTEACHERS: PAY.

[29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah; Mr. P. J. Mead; Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.]

The Honourable Mr. P. J. Mead:—Your Excellency,—I request permission to elucidate the situation as regards the present state of Provincial balances which, I gather from various speakers, is regarded as an inexhaustible store on which we can draw to meet any of our more urgent demands. In 1919-20 we had an opening balance of Rs. 4,94,00,000. That has been the result of the steady mounting up of the balance since the embargo placed on expenditure generally during the war. In 1917-18 it was Rs. 2,71,00,000, in 1918-19 it was Rs. 3,91,00,000; the revised figures for 1919-20 stood at Rs. 4,40,00,000, and, as I have said above, our balances finally reached the figure of Rs. 4,94,00,000. In the present year's budget we drew on this reserve to the extent of Rs. 3,89,000. We have now reached a stage at which there is a change in the classification of both revenue and expenditure. Whereas the expenditure of this Presidency has mounted steadily under the old classification, from an average of about Rs. 7,00,00,000—that is the pre-war average for five years—to an expenditure of over Rs. 12,50,00,000, under the new classification, without making any allowances for increased establishment charges, the revenue will amount to Rs. 13,99,00,000, roughly Rs. 14 crores, and the expenditure to Rs. 13,41,00,000. Now, in the current year's budget, owing to the rise in the cost of living and the necessity for increasing establishment charges, it has been found necessary to reappropriate largely in order to meet these various charges. We have, in this way, found Rs. 20,50,000 for various establishments not provided for in the budget.

We have had to provide Rs. 16,00,000 for police, and we shall have, under the new arrangement, to provide Rs. 8,88,000 for famine. That is apart from what we have to provide for protective irrigation and other famine purposes. Finally, so far as we are informed at present, we have our contribution to make to the Central Government of Rs. 56,00,000, and, with a small increase in the Secretariat establishment charges of about Rs. 2,25,000, the total bill amounts to Rs. 1,03,63,000. Adding Rs. 1,03,00,000 to the Rs. 13,41,00,000 which has already been calculated under the revised classification, we have a total expenditure of Rs. 14,44,00,000 as against a total revenue in sight of Rs. 13,99,00,000. It takes very little calculation to show that our present closing balance of Rs. 4,00,00,000 will not last for very many years.

I have no figures as regards the cost of any of the proposals which honourable members have in mind, nor am I clear in my own mind that any of them have been worked out, but from figures which I have been shown, I believe that the revision of the educational establishments will probably entail an addition of something like Rs. 28,00,000 to the budget.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Your Excellency,—At the outset, I will recognize that there is a fairly strong case in favour of giving higher wages to primary schoolteachers. So far therefore, as the real issue before the Council is concerned, Government are satisfied that some relief is called for in this direction. I must not, however, be understood to admit that the proposition which the Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud has put before the Council is in any way reasonable. I am inclined to agree with the Honourable Rao Saheb Desai that the demand has been pitched a little too high, but I can appreciate the feeling that on such occasions it is perhaps desirable to pitch a little too high in order to get what may reasonably be considered to be adequate. I think honourable members will recognize that it is not possible, in a deliberative assembly like this, to go into the details of what is a fair wage and what relief should be accorded. That can only be done by the department by itself, or in consultation with a committee. I may invite the attention of honourable members to the fact that this resolution has been brought forward in the middle of the year. This resolution would have been more appropriate if it had been brought forward at the time when the budget estimates were under consideration. The ordinary financial practice in the course of a year is that the allotments given to different departments are to be spent by that department, and if there are any savings under one head, they can be reappropriated towards other heads. It will, therefore, be apparent that unless the Finance Department is willing to provide funds in addition to those provided in the budget, the department concerned is not able to incur any new expenditure. At the same time, as I have said, the case made out, especially for the untrained teachers, is very strong, and calls for relief. To what extent that relief should be given is then the next question.

VERNACULAR SCHOOLTEACHERS: PAY.

[Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola.] [29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

I believe honourable members realize the principles on which provincial finance is conducted. There are only two ways in which any new additional expenditure can be met. One is by reappropriation, and the other is by additional grants from the Finance Department. As regards reappropriations, a substantial part of the savings has already been reappropriated, and the only item in the budget which has recently been sanctioned, but which has not been spent, is the provision of Rs. 6,00,000 for the extension of primary education. Honourable members are aware how very keen I personally am in favour of the extension of primary education, especially in rural areas. I believe honourable members are with me in desiring a substantial extension of primary education in the villages. It was my intention to start a programme of 1,500 additional schools in the villages every year, so that, in the course of six years all the remaining 9,000 villages, which are without schools at present, could be provided with a school. But, as honourable members are aware, education is a transferred subject, and therefore, the views of the Minister and the enlarged Legislative Council will prevail as regards the future programme of extension. So far as the current year is concerned, there is a provision of Rs. 6,00,000 in the budget, from which we hope to open about 1,500 new schools during this year. But this question of the revision of the pay of primary schoolteachers has come up, and it is a question whether honourable members desire to proceed with the full programme of extension, or whether they would prefer to take a portion or the whole of this provision in the budget for giving relief to these teachers. As I said, though I feel very keenly on the question of extension of primary education, I recognize the force of the arguments that have been put forward by honourable members, and I am prepared to consider what is the best way in which to deal with the question of primary education, so far as the present Government is concerned. Personally, I will tell you this, that I will be very glad to use all my influence to persuade the Finance Department to give me as much money as it can possibly spare in order that both the programme of extension and the relief to primary teachers can be carried out. But that is a question in which the Finance Department will have a decisive voice. At the same time, I should like to point out how very difficult the question is. The Honourable the Director of Public Instruction has submitted figures to Government showing that the total cost of a revision on some such lines as have been advocated by honourable members, comes up to about Rs. 38,00,000 per annum. I think it is necessary to point out that some of the honourable members have rather exceeded their criticism by saying that nothing has been done for primary schoolteachers, while a revision in the case of clerical establishments has taken place. They ought to remember that it was only last year that Rs. 15,50,000 recurring annual expenditure has been accepted by Government for giving higher emoluments to primary schoolteachers. It is, therefore, hardly correct to say that while clerical establishments have had relief, the primary teachers have had none. The relief to them since last year has amounted to Rs. 15,50,000 recurring. The balance, therefore, which is needed is 22 lakhs, and, I think, honourable members will agree with me in thinking that it is hardly right that in the middle of the year we should commit this Government, when the Ministers are coming on the scene within two months, to the whole of this programme. I recognize that a reasonable view has prevailed in the debate when honourable members said that if immediate relief is given to untrained teachers, the case of other teachers might wait a little longer. It is, however, difficult to work out all these figures. The relief would, in addition to the 15½ lakhs already provided during the current year, involve another 9 lakhs. Even the saving from the delay in the starting of primary schools is already reappropriated. So, if the whole programme of the extension of schools is dropped, there is not sufficient to meet the requirements of these teachers. Honourable members will, therefore, see that the problem is one which cannot be decided in a deliberative assembly like this Council, but that it must be tackled in a committee on which the Finance Department should be adequately represented. I would, therefore, ask that honourable members should agree to the suggestion which I am placing before them to the effect that a committee consisting of official and non-official members should be appointed to ascertain what immediate relief is required in the case of primary schoolteachers, what is the present position of provincial finance, how much can be made available out of the provision for education which already exists, and whether it is possible to secure some additional grants from the Finance Department to deal with the whole question comprehensively. If honourable members are agreeable to some such solution, I would personally prefer a committee consisting of the Honourable Mr. Paranjpye, the Honourable Rao Bahadur

Sathe, the Honourable Rao Saheb Harilal Desai, with the Honourable Mr. Lawrence as the financial secretary and the Honourable Mr. Covernton and myself, to report to Government as expeditiously as possible. I trust that this is a practical way of dealing with the problem. This Council cannot go into the details, because, it involves a lot of figures about the different classes of primary teachers, and the question of the necessary finance to relieve them has also to be considered. As I said at the commencement of my observations, Government recognize that the case, especially of untrained teachers, is a very strong one, and they will do their best having regard to their financial position, to meet with the requirements of the case, so far as these teachers are concerned. If the Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud withdraws his resolution, I will, on behalf of Government, appoint this committee at once, try to have meetings at an early date and proceed with the consideration of this problem immediately.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud:—I shall accept the suggestion of the Honourable Member in Charge if he is willing to take me on the committee.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Your Excellency,—My point is this. We have already two members of the Central Division on this committee, and out of the three non-official members one represents the Northern Division. If the Council so desires, I will have no objection to add one more member representing the Central Division though that will mean over representation of one Division. I should like to add in that case the name of the Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah for Sind, in addition to the Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud. Under my suggestion there will be two members of the Central Division, and one of the Northern Division. If the Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud is so insistent, I will add his name and also that of the Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud:—I was not, your Excellency, so anxious to secure the representation of my Division. I was only anxious to be on the committee to be able to put this case of teachers more strongly before the committee, because, I do not really believe that this committee is going to decide the question as quickly as the teachers would wish it to do. The Honourable Mr. Paranjpye has already given definite indications of what the teachers wish to do.

The Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola:—Your Excellency, I have already agreed to include the Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud and the Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah.

The Honourable Sheikh Ghulam Hussein Hidayatallah:—Your Excellency, I request that my name be not included on the committee.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur S. D. Garud:—In the light of the remarks made by the Honourable Member in Charge, I beg leave to withdraw the resolution.

The resolution was by leave withdrawn.

The Council then adjourned till 2-45 p.m.

After Lunch.

The Council re-assembled after lunch at 2-45 p.m.

A Bill further to amend the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898, and the City of Bombay Municipal Act, 1888 (Bill No. VII of 1920).

His Excellency the President:—Bill further to amend the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898, and the City of Bombay Municipal Act, 1888, Bill No. VII of 1920, second reading.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Your Excellency,—I have the honour to place before the Council the report of the select committee on the bill to amend the Bombay Municipal Act, 1888, and the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898. The report with the bill as amended and with the further list of amendments which it will be my duty, if the bill is read a second time, to place before the Council, is at first sight a rather formidable document. But if it is more closely examined it will be seen that it is not quite so bad as it looks.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis moves the second reading of the bill.

BOMBAY DEVELOPMENT: IMPROVEMENT TRUST AND MUNICIPAL BILL.

[Mr. G. S. Curtis.] [29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

For though the second list of amendments is formidable, those amendments do not, except in one matter, involve very important principles, and even in that one case, according to the layman's view, the question at issue does not appear to be one of very great importance. However, lawyers are difficult people to please, and my labours on the committee have convinced me and probably other members of the select committee as well, of the importance of following their advice. We hope that the bill as finally amended will prove a workable as well as an intelligible one. For this result my acknowledgments are due to the Honourable the Advocate General and to the Remembrancer of Legal Affairs for the patience with which they have grappled with the problem of expressing in legal phraseology the committee's wishes and ideas.

I will now proceed to deal with the committee's report and with the bill as presented to this Council with that report. The eloquent speech with which your Excellency introduced the original bill dealt with large matters and covered a larger ground than the question covered by the bill before this Council actually necessitated. It would have been easy to avoid this and confine the discussion to the matters actually dealt with in the bill without materially reducing the acceptability of the measure. In fact, if I may say so without disrespect, His Excellency the Governor infringed his own rules. But Government felt that it was incumbent on them to place the whole case before this Council and before the public and take them into their confidence. Efforts have been made outside this Council to supplement the information given here by lectures and lantern-slide demonstrations. We are having the whole scheme placed before the citizens of Bombay and in this way we feel that the citizens of Bombay will understand that the scheme is their own, not Government's, and that it is to their interests and to the interests of the public to support it to the best of their means. As I have said, the Council are aware that an appeal has been made for support to a Government loan to which the response has been favourable. The figures of subscriptions to the loan up to yesterday amounted to very nearly three crores of rupees or approximately one half of what Government require. I think I may claim with confidence that this response of the public of Bombay, in spite of the unfavourable conditions due to the stringency in the money market and slackness in the cotton trade and unfavourable climatic conditions in parts of the Presidency, has shown their keenness to support the policy adumbrated by your Excellency's Government.

The original bill as placed before this Council dealt, first and foremost, with the problem of housing the industrial population in Bombay; secondly, with the development of the area adjoining the island of Bombay. As these two objects were not clearly stated in the bill, the committee have decided to amend the preamble so as to bring them in clearer relief. The purposes are more clearly stated. They are (1) the construction of 50,000 tenements for the working classes, (2) the carrying out of development in the area adjoining the island of Bombay. As regards the latter, a notification is being issued under section 7 of the Land Revenue Code constituting a separate Bombay Suburban Revenue Division, which will consist of the southern two-thirds of Salsette Island; in other words, the area south of the line drawn from Dahisar station on the west, north of Tulsi lake, to Mulund on the east. The object of constituting this new division is to bring the area in question directly under the control of an authority stationed in Bombay and render it unnecessary to refer any question arising out of land and of development, through the Collector of Thana to the Commissioner at Ahmedabad, 300 miles away. It is hoped in this way to secure greater expedition and the necessary concentration of energy which is specially needed for the development of this area. Steps have further been taken to define precisely the proportion in which the money raised by the cotton duty is to be spent on this area. Under section 195B (1) the municipality has to pay to Government monthly four-sevenths of the duty arising out of town duty on cotton. It is expected that this amount will exceed 17 lakhs a year. The amendment placed before you by the select committee prescribes the proportion of the amount which is to be spent on the town area and the area adjoining the island of Bombay. The suburban revenue division will receive four lakhs; the urban division over thirteen lakhs, or more. It may be confidently expected that this is likely to increase.

Section 195C is a new section, the drafting of which has given some trouble. But the idea underlying is as follows: As His Excellency explained in his opening speech, Government have taken up the construction of the industrial tenements themselves, because, they were convinced of the need for direct action, for prompt and vigorous measures for the removal of what is a very great public evil, and they were satisfied that no local body had the staff, or the land or credit to carry out the necessary work, but they have no wish to figure permanently as landlords of working class residences. When the tenements are constructed and the rents stabilized, there is every reason why they should be transferred to a local body. Accordingly, provision is made for the transfer to the municipality, at their option, on April 1, 1936, or on a subsequent date, of the tenements in question on the corporation indemnifying or recouping Government against their liabilities in respect of existing or future loans raised by Government with a view to the provision of these tenements. In order to enable this to be done, the amendments now proposed by the committee provide for separate accounts being kept and for reference to arbitration in the event of dispute as regards the form and amount of indemnity. I shall later, after the bill is read a second time, move an amendment, which honourable members of this Council will see as No. 5 on page 2 of the further amendments, so as to lay down clearly what form the indemnity will take.

BOMBAY DEVELOPMENT: IMPROVEMENT TRUST AND MUNICIPAL BILL.

[29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. G. S. Curtis; Mr. C. V. Mehta.]

The committee in their last paragraph refer to the advisability of constituting advisory boards. There was some difference of opinion regarding the actual personnel of the Bombay City Board, which showed that the matter was not devoid of difficulty. I will only add that I will see that the committee's recommendation is placed before Government and that it receives due consideration.

I have now to refer to the last section of the bill, which refers to the amendment of the Bombay City Improvement Act. There is a small amendment there. The idea of the original amendment was to extend the period of 28 years to 50 years. The committee have now proposed to make it still wider, and the clause will now read, if that amendment is carried, " not less than 28 years and not more than 50 years ". With these remarks I beg to place the bill before the Council and to move that it be read a second time. In doing so I desire to tender my acknowledgments to the members of the select committee for the help they gave in framing the somewhat difficult amendments and to thank them for the great patience with which they have done their work. My acknowledgments are also due to my honourable colleague Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola who regularly attended the meetings of the select committee and assisted me in the deliberations to a considerable extent. With these words, sir, I move that the bill be read a second time.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta:—Your Excellency,—I have very great pleasure in supporting the second reading of this bill. At first sight it might appear that the bill has emerged from the deliberations of the select committee in an almost unrecognizable form. But, sir, all the sections that have been added are fully covered by the objects and reasons that first accompanied the publication of the bill. The main thing that we were striving for was to make statutory provision by which any difference or any doubts as to the objects of this measure should in future be altogether removed, and we have come to a satisfactory arrangement on the main issue whether the major portion of the cotton duty, that is to be paid to Government is to be devoted for the purpose of putting up the houses which every one acknowledges are urgently required in Bombay city. A statutory obligation has been placed by which about thirteen lakhs of rupees will be allotted for the purpose of housing in the city proper and four lakhs for the development of Salsette, to which we hope the city's limits will in the near future be extended. I should like, sir, to tender my acknowledgments to my colleagues on the select committee who on somewhat trying occasions endeavoured their best to look at the municipal as well as the public point of view and have been instrumental in arriving at this satisfactory conclusion.

There is one part of the report of the select committee to which I should like to refer, and that is the agency which is to be associated with Government in advising Government as regards the carrying out of this huge programme. It might appear, sir, from the statement made in the report that there was a definite opinion against what is called an executive board. As a matter of fact, I think, I am correct in stating that several members of the committee voted against an advisory board, because, they desired to have an executive board. Otherwise the majority for the committee's recommendation would have been much larger. Now, sir, the only reason for advocating what we call an executive board is to see that Government do not only get the advice of the committee that is going to be constituted, but that the committee should have a real voice in deciding the general policy of carrying out the work, such as, particularly, the disposal of the lands and the properties that would be created under the scheme. But the agency, however, sir, is a matter which does not arise on the present occasion, and if an attempt were to be made to entrust the whole of this work to an executive committee, then fresh legislation would have to be undertaken and valuable time would be lost. This, therefore, is a matter that must be left to the reformed Council, if there arises a necessity for urging the creation of an executive board, particularly if it is found that more co-ordination in the work of the various public bodies in the city is desirable.

BOMBAY DEVELOPMENT: IMPROVEMENT TRUST AND MUNICIPAL BILL.

[Mr. C. V. Mehta; Sir D. M. Petit; Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna.] [29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

I will now crave leave, your Excellency, to say a word upon the far-reaching effect of what appears to be a simple measure. Credit is essentially due, sir, to the big idea which was that in order to relieve the congestion in the city and blot out an acknowledged evil, what was required was an immediate and increased production on a large scale. When housing conditions have reached this acute stage, all other measures such as rent acts and legislation to prevent profiteering merely touch the fringe of the question, and do not attempt to solve the problem at its root. That, sir, is the underlying idea of the Prime Minister's action in trying to make the wages dependent upon production. In a weary and restless world what is required is more production, and as regards Bombay there is no greater necessity than the production of houses and more houses. But, sir, the more ambitious the programme, the greater is the necessity for the exercise of untiring energy, of great tact and of business acumen, to bring that great idea to fruition. How these are constantly being applied by your Excellency is a matter which is now well known to the public. I feel, sir, that the vigorous measures that are now being pushed forward will remove the blot of congestion from our beloved city and will bring some good, some peace, to the minds of the large number of the working classes who in these days of restlessness nurse a just grievance. I am sure, sir, that when the results of this scheme are seen, they will be a monument to your Excellency's courage and strenuous efforts more lasting probably than marble or bronze.

The Honourable Sir D. M. Petit:—Your Excellency,—At the time of the first reading of this bill, in your Excellency's speech your Excellency inundated the Council with such a large extent of important material that I did not feel equal to the task on that occasion to offer any remarks on this bill.

But, sir, at that time, you were good enough to observe that on the next occasion we could come after digesting the details that were mentioned by your Excellency in your speech, and offer such observations as we could. Taking advantage of that remark, I now rise to express, in the first instance, the deep gratitude of the citizens of Bombay on the great courage with which your Excellency has taken up this subject, the importance of which was felt by the Government of your Excellency's predecessors, but either through want of courage which was necessary in handling such a bold measure, or through want of facilities for raising finances on the gigantic scale which is required for the execution of this scheme, it was not taken up in those days. You, sir, rightly call this bill the first link in the chain of the measures for making Bombay a still greater and a still more important city than what it is at present, and, sir, as a humble citizen of Bombay, I legitimately take pride in being a member of this Council and in being on the select committee which has been instrumental in forging this measure.

I might say, sir, that there is a feeling among the public that the development office should be associated with an executive committee, who should advise the development officer on the various important measures that he will have to deal with in the future, and particularly at a time when the sites for offering to the public will be ready. I trust, sir, that when those sites are ready, they will be offered to the public by open auction and by no other system.

It is somewhat unfortunate that of late a practice has been introduced in a public body of giving sites by preference. I am sorry that my own community is connected with that transaction. But I trust, sir, that the beginning that has been made in that direction will end there, and no more sites will be given either to any community or to any societies by preference, but that all the available sites will be sold to the public by open auction. The system which has been introduced lately of giving sites by preference is harmful in more ways than one. It establishes, to a certain extent, a sort of South Africa in a small measure, where areas are open for use only to certain communities, and other communities are shut out, which is a policy which will not be conducive to the public interest, particularly at the present time when unity amongst the different communities is so essential, and where goodwill is so necessary amongst the various communities residing in the city.

With these remarks, sir, I once again unhesitatingly congratulate Government in taking up at last this measure, and coming to the relief of the city which was so badly in need of it.

The Honourable Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna:—Your Excellency,—I rise to accord my hearty support to the second reading of this bill. The details of the development scheme came upon us, at the first reading, with a certain amount of suddenness, and consequently, when we followed your Excellency after the speech which you made in moving the first reading of the bill at the last session, we were not in a position, as we would have liked to have been, to offer any considered criticism. Nevertheless, we certainly felt it imperative

BOMBAY DEVELOPMENT: IMPROVEMENT TRUST AND MUNICIPAL BILL.

[29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna.]

to tender to your Excellency and to your Excellency's Government our very best thanks for the keen interest displayed by you in trying to improve, as best possible, the housing accommodation for the masses inhabiting the capital city of this Presidency. Since the first reading of the bill seven weeks have elapsed, and during that interval, we have had sufficient opportunities to consider the details of the scheme, and the more we think of it the more we feel that we ought to reiterate our thanks and our appreciation.

In ordinary circumstances, the Bombay municipality would have perhaps felt it a grievance, and considered it an encroachment upon its privileges, that the work of constructing so many thousands of tenements, particularly with the help of the duty to be specially levied on cotton bales arriving in Bombay city, should not have been entrusted to it. But, under existing conditions, the municipality realizes that its hands are full at the moment with several large schemes which it has in view, and also the municipality, within a few months, will have thrown on its shoulders the work of the City Improvement Trust. In view of this, we endorse your action in appointing a special and a separate department of Government for carrying out the scheme, although, as the Honourable Mr. Chunilal Mehta and the Honourable Sir Dinshaw Petit have said, I think, perhaps the task might have better been entrusted to a newly created executive body on the lines of the Improvement Trust or the Port Trust. Sir, at the first reading I had suggested that if such an executive body were not possible, the development officer might at least have the help of an advisory board. That recommendation has been endorsed by the select committee, and I am glad to hear from the Honourable Member in Charge that it will receive due consideration at the hands of Government.

Whilst referring to such an advisory board, I would like to make some observation on the remarks just made by my honourable friend Sir Dinshaw Petit, who objected to the principle which has been adopted by another public body in disposing of the plots of land they lease to the public. The Honourable Sir Dinshaw refers of course to the Improvement Trust and to the manner in which that body has, during the last two or three years, been helping various charitable organizations and co-operative societies, at rates perhaps lower than the market rate. If the Honourable Sir Dinshaw has any objection to the development officer disposing of plots, Government will relieve his anxiety by appointing this advisory committee, for such a body will be able to offer valuable suggestions to the development officer. I cannot, however, endorse all that has fallen from the honourable member. The honourable member has said that all plots which may be available under the development scheme should be dealt with in no other way except that they be sold by public auction, and he criticised the action of the Improvement Trust in the manner it has helped certain bodies, and amongst which is also a society from the community to which both he and I belong. As a member of the Board of the Improvement Trust I certainly see nothing wrong in the practice we follow and the manner in which the Board has helped different organizations. I believe we have only done what a wholesale merchant is accustomed to when he disposes of a large amount of his goods at a somewhat cheaper rate as compared to what he would do if he were selling his goods retail. Again in such cases the Board imposes restrictions whereby the societies can only charge rents which will not mean to them a return of more than 5½ to 6 per cent. interest. If the Honourable Sir Dinshaw, however, has in mind the Improvement Trust's recent negotiations with a certain community in regard to land at Worli, and is afraid that that community is to be unduly favoured, I may assure him that the trustees will treat them on fair basis and on the same basis as they will treat other communities preferring similar applications without in any way prejudicing the interests of the trust or the public.

Your Excellency, in regard to the arrangements provided in the bill, I would like to say that the municipality has been dealt with very liberally. In addition to the three-sevenths share of the duty roughly estimated at Rs. 12,00,000 a year, which they are to retain and spend in any manner they please, Government have agreed to spend out of their four-sevenths share of the cotton duty nearly four-fifths expressly on the construction of tenements in the city, and what is more, the municipality is given the reversion of these buildings. Others, like myself, who are members of the municipal corporation, fully recognize and appreciate the action of Government in this matter. But, sir, what we were anxious about was that such generosity should not be restricted to speeches in the Council or to reports of discussions in select committee, but that they should be translated into so many words and be embodied in the act so that some years later when your Excellency or the present Honourable Member in Charge are not here, there may arise no misunderstandings whatsoever in regard to the intentions of the framers of the act as does sometimes happen. This, sir, has been done to our entire satisfaction, and we have reason to be thankful to the Honourable Member in Charge, and, it is because of the inclusion of these clauses that we have been able to come to the Council with an unanimous report from the select committee.

BOMBAY DEVELOPMENT: IMPROVEMENT TRUST AND MUNICIPAL BILL.

[Mr. Phiroze C. Sethna; Mr. S. B. Upasani.] [29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

Your Excellency, we hope now that the bill will soon become law, that all the details of the scheme will be carried out to their fullest extent and to your entire satisfaction. We are exceedingly pleased to know from the Honourable Member in Charge that the public have already applied for Rs. 3,00,00,000 of the new development loan. We trust that your Excellency's appeal to the public of Bombay will result in this loan being largely over-subscribed, not only this year but in future years when Government will have to go to the public for more funds, without which sinews of war much progress cannot of course be made.

The construction of several thousands of tenements on modern lines by the Development Officer, helped by the contributory work to be done by the municipality in the shape of an increased water-supply, better drainage, larger hospitals and aught else, is calculated to have very far-reaching results, results which we cannot possibly foresee at this date. If in due course, they will only add to the comfort, convenience and well-being of the inhabitants, bring about a reduction in the number of cases of sickness, a consequent decrease in the rate of mortality, a possible increase in the average duration of life, and a proportionate conservation of the physical strength and wealth-producing energy of the citizens, your Excellency, your Excellency's Government and the Bombay municipality will not have worked in vain.

The Honourable Mr. S. B. Upasani:—Your Excellency,—I regret I have to strike a note of discord in saying that I cannot see my way to support the second reading of the bill. Your Excellency, coming as I do from the mofussil, I should have been as glad as anybody to see the congestion in Bombay removed and better provision made for the working classes. I am alive to the great necessity that exists for it. But I wish that the millowners of Bombay and the other industrial interests concerned which have prospered in the capital city should see their way to have the needful done out of their own earnings, rather than that this great development should be financed out of a tax to be levied on the raw material which forms the most important item of export from our country and which is required in the country itself for its main industry, I mean the cotton mills.

The proposed tax is sure to affect the interests of the people in the mofussil. The agriculturists have not resources enough to keep their stocks and command their own price; they are at the mercy of the agents of the merchants in Bombay who come to the mofussil for purchase of cotton. If these have to pay one rupee per bale in Bombay, they will deduct it from the price they may offer to pay to the producers. That is not right. Whenever similar taxes were sought to be imposed in the mofussil, not only this Government but the Government of India intervened and did not allow them.

Then again, I submit that the general policy is that the industries which employ labourers ought to provide the necessary housing accommodation for them. It is the millowners that should provide housing for their workers; it is the duty of the Port Trust to house their staff, and Government should similarly do it for its servants so far as possible. It is being done in the mofussil for the police and other departments. I do not know why Bombay, with its vast resources, should have to draw upon the poor resources of the mofussil for the needful funds for development purposes. Looking to the figures published in the "Times of India", of only to-day's date, I find that the profits earned by the millowners in Bombay last year amounted to 15 crores. If that is the case, why should not some tax be levied upon these millowners for the needful purposes? Then again the income of the Bombay municipality is estimated to exceed that of all the other municipalities in the mofussil put together. Why should not the Bombay municipality contribute to the funds that are needed? Further, I think, a large proportion of the labouring population is employed by the railways, and much of the congestion is due to the large areas of land taken up by them. I do not know why the railways should not be made to pay for the expenditure involved. For the capital expenditure which is proposed to be met by loans the interest will come from general revenues and indirectly affect the people in the mofussil. Already a large amount has been spent out of the general revenues on the development of Salsette, and I think it is much better that the areas which will immediately benefit should contribute their proper share to the funds.

Then, as regards the arrangements made in the bill for removing the congestion, nothing very definite appears to be set out in the bill itself, and the suggestion of the select committee for an advisory board does not also appear in the bill though it was approved by the select committee. I do not also see why three-sevenths of the revenue to be derived from the cotton duty is to be given to the Bombay municipality. It is not subject to any conditions. Nor is it quite clear what the total expenditure will come to,

BOMBAY DEVELOPMENT: IMPROVEMENT TRUST AND MUNICIPAL BILL.

[29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. S. B. Upasani; Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas.]

nor whether the Bombay municipality would be in a position to take up the properties later on. I presume this work is to be done on behalf of the municipality out of the new tax which is to be levied as part of the municipal revenue. If it is to be a part of their income, and if it is to be spent on the building of tenements, I think the machinery that is to be set up for executing the work ought to be under the control and direction of the municipality. Whether that machinery is to be in the form of only an advisory board or any other board with larger powers to assist in the work, is a matter which should be considered in greater detail. So far as the improvement of Bombay was concerned, a special board was created, namely, the City Improvement Trust. The municipality was represented on it, and yet it was not able to control the Trust's proceedings. There were frequent complaints to the effect that the Trust did not discharge its duties properly, and so far from removing the congestion and doing the needful for the poor people living in the slums of the city, large portions of funds were spent by the Trust on providing sanitary housing accommodation for those who could afford to pay high rents. It was also complained that a large number of houses were pulled down by the Trust and that people had to suffer more from the congestion than they did before the Trust came into operation. I am quite sure that under the control of Government these things may not happen in the future. We do trust in that. But nevertheless, if the money is to be a part of the revenue of the corporation, it should be under its supervision. However, I as an outsider need not interfere in a matter which concerns Bombay. But what I complain of is that the reform should not be executed out of the moneys that will come indirectly from the pockets of the people in the mofussil. I may also point out that if the execution of the development scheme be undertaken by a department of Government it will check private enterprise and place private competition at an unequal disadvantage. For all these reasons I feel that this bill, instead of being hurried through at the fag end of this Council, should be reserved for further consideration by the reformed Council on which, I hope, the mofussil will be more strongly represented than it is in the present Council.

The Honourable Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas:—Your Excellency,—I thought that in the fitness of things the speeches on this measure would be confined to members coming from Bombay. But since my honourable friend Mr. Upasani has made a speech, I trust I will be justified in doing likewise; but my move is rather in a contrary direction. I am not opposing the second reading of the bill. On the contrary, I have great pleasure in supporting it, and I hope my honourable friend Mr. Upasani will remain single and isolated in his hopeless minority.

Now, I heartily endorse the opinions that have been expressed by the honourable members of this Council coming from the city of Bombay as to the whole-heartedness of Government in having undertaken this measure. In fact, I was one of that public that was for a long time complaining that Government were not bringing this question to a head. The congestion of the city of Bombay was being complained of for a long time, and the newspapers and the public were always saying that Government were very dilatory in bringing some measure of relief. So, when we heard at the last meeting of this Council your Excellency's excellent speech and found that after all those complaints that were being made on the subject had been provided for in a satisfactory manner, it brought pleasure to the hearts of all of us.

Now, I do not think it is necessary for me to touch any of the details of the measure, because, I think that is properly within the province of the honourable members coming from Bombay, and probably I should simply be repeating what has been said already. But, I think, I am not wasting the time of the Council by saying that I entirely disagree with the Honourable Mr. Upasani in his interpretation of the taxation that is being imposed on the mofussil, while there are other matters he has touched, which also I can very easily reply to. But I do not think it is right on my part to do so, because, it is the proper function of the Honourable Member in Charge of the portfolio to make a detailed reply, and which reply will carry greater weight than mine. However, if the Honourable Mr. Upasani's objection to this taxation is correct, that by imposing a tax upon all the raw cotton that is imported into Bombay, you are imposing a tax upon the mofussil, then, I think, every kind of taxation of this nature will be a taxation upon the mofussil, and the mofussil can come forward and say: "Oh, you have no right to impose a tax upon us." That is a very astounding proposition, and my chief object in getting up to speak was to say that I do not agree with the proposition at all. That is one reason of my getting up and troubling the Council with these remarks.

Another reason is that my city of Karachi is, as your Excellency is aware, governed by very nearly the same conditions as the city of Bombay. It is a sea-port; it is a centre

BOMBAY DEVELOPMENT: IMPROVEMENT TRUST AND MUNICIPAL BILL.

[Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas; Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas Mehta; Mr. P. A. Desai; Major C. Fernandes; Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas.] [29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

of trade; there also the problem of congestion has arisen, although not to the same extent as in the city of Bombay for obvious reasons, one of which is the difference in size between the two cities; but still the problem does exist in the Karachi city. And when we find that your Excellency has inaugurated this measure, we think that in the fulness of time your Excellency will be persuaded to take courage in both hands and go ahead with this policy of development and improvement.

There is another reason why I have got up, and that is to join in the congratulations that have been offered to your Excellency's Government by the previous speakers on undertaking this measure.

The Honourable Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas Mehta:—May it please your Excellency,—I would not have got up to speak had it not been for a remark made by the Honourable Sir Dinshaw Petit. I believe he complained that the City Improvement Trust of Bombay had given lands to certain associations at a lower price. The City Improvement Trust has given lands not to individuals but to housing associations or to co-operative housing societies, and I think that the policy that has been adopted by the Trust is right and should be continued by Government also. Possibly my friend the Honourable Sir Dinshaw does not know that one of the conditions that is laid down in giving land is that the housing associations will not charge more than a certain rate of interest as rent. We want to help the tenants by starting as many housing associations as we possibly can, instead of selling them to the highest bidder at public auction who can charge any rental he likes. This does not help the tenants. It is in the interests of the tenants that I am making the suggestion that wherever possible housing associations should be helped by granting such concessions. I quite see that it is necessary to discriminate between housing associations started by middle class men or lower middle class men, and housing associations started by big capitalists for getting high rents. Now that your Excellency is going to appoint an advisory committee, or if, as suggested by my honourable friend Mr. Chunilal Mehta, an executive body is appointed, that body will see to it that these concessions are given to really deserving societies or associations. With these remarks I join my honourable friends who have spoken before me in congratulating your Excellency's Government on undertaking this legislation.

The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai:—Your Excellency,—I rise to accord my hearty support to the second reading of this bill. In the excellent speech your Excellency has delivered on the previous occasion it has been shown that there was an absolute necessity for improving the deplorable condition of the accommodation of the poor people in Bombay and that unless there were funds, that improvement could not be effected. So the bill is an absolute necessity.

Now, I would not have risen to speak but for the Honourable Mr. Upasani's remarks against this bill. The main ground of his was that the imposition of this tax on cotton imported into Bombay from the mofussil would hit the growers of cotton. His object in saying this was to show that the poor agriculturists would be hit by the imposition of this tax. I cannot agree with him. The tax would be paid ultimately by the consumers and not by the growers of the cotton in the mofussil. I, therefore, submit that there is no objection to this bill being read a second time.

The Honourable Major C. Fernandes:—May it please your Excellency,—I rise to accord my hearty support to the second reading of this bill. As a member of the Bombay municipal corporation I congratulate Government upon the bold and liberal policy they have adopted, a policy that must increase the greatness and prosperity of the first city in India and bring health and happiness to the thousands of its inhabitants. I also welcome the proposals of the select committee, but I hope Government will not be long in giving an earnest of their confidence in the activities of the corporation in faithfully performing their share in this glorious work of development and expansion of the whole city. With these words I once more accord my hearty support to the second reading of the bill.

The Honourable Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas:—Your Excellency,—I rise to give my hearty support to the second reading of the bill. I was the only person who tried to sound what was called a discordant note on the last occasion on the first reading of the bill. But to-day the Honourable Mr. Upasani has far exceeded me and has expressed his dissent to the second reading of this bill.

The Honourable Mr. Upasani's opposition is out of place particularly bearing in mind the fact that more than half of the loan that your Excellency's Government have offered for development purposes has been already subscribed by the public. I must confess

BOMBAY DEVELOPMENT: IMPROVEMENT TRUST AND MUNICIPAL BILL.

[29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. Purshotamdas Thakurdas; Mr. G. S. Curtis; the President.] that the views that I expressed on the first reading still continue to be the same. But as I said on the first reading I feel that the other considerations to which I referred in the course of my speech then, must have weighed with your Excellency in hitting upon cotton as the article on which to impose this tax to finance the housing and development schemes.

It is rather interesting to see the Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai being pitched against the Honourable Mr. Upasani, both gentlemen with widespread experience of the mofussil. The Honourable Mr. P. A. Desai unhesitatingly said that the duty will be paid not by the grower but by the consumer. In the select committee various details that were to be settled as between Government and the Bombay municipality, were so intricate and necessitated so much discussion that there was hardly any time left to consider this question of incidence of the cotton tax. Even if it were possible to consider the question of the source from which the revenue was to be got, especially having regard to the short time during which the report had to be submitted to this Council and for the reasons of urgency that have been touched upon by the Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta, the Honourable Sir Dinshaw Petit and the Honourable Mr. Sethna, I feel that if injustice is being done to the cotton grower, perhaps it is a necessity which cannot be avoided and that if there is to be any selection between the two evils, your Excellency has thought it proper to select the lesser of the two.

I hope that your Excellency's scheme will be a success and that with the downfall of prices which we have heard just commenced in America and England, the necessity of providing housing accommodation by Government may not be quite so great at the end of five or seven years, and that then this duty on cotton may be lessened or even discontinued.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Your Excellency,—I beg to thank the Council for the kind reception accorded to this bill. I would observe with regard to the Honourable Mr. Upasani's remarks that an extensive reading of political economy has taught me that the question under discussion is one of the most vexed questions in the whole range of political science. I trust the Honourable Mr. Upasani when he returns to the mofussil will not fail to bring home to his friends and relations the desirability of investing in this loan although their views may be different as regards the purpose for which the money is to be spent. With these remarks I move the second reading of the bill.

His Excellency the President:—I now desire to reply briefly to some of the remarks which have been made by honourable members on this bill. I must, first of all, express my gratitude not only for the cordiality and the good feeling which has actuated the discussion right through a difficult and complex measure on the part of all concerned, but also for the very genuine anxiety that I have seen on all sides not to create difficulties but to assist and smooth over every difficulty that arose. I want to express my sensibility of this, for I am perfectly well aware that we have touched upon many problems in regard to which many honourable members hold divergent views, and I am glad therefore to think that according to the best traditions of this Council honourable members have submerged minor points of difference with a view of agreement upon the major and more important points for the benefit of all concerned.

The Honourable Mr. Chunilal Mehta has said that this is a measure which is intended to effect the maximum amount of good for the working classes in Bombay. I agree and must honestly confess that this has been my object from the very beginning. When I talk about the working classes, I do not necessarily mean the manual labourers only, but I mean all those of moderate means who work for their daily living, to whom accommodation at small rents is a vital necessity, and to whom the problem of daily needs is always pressing. I think there is no doubt whatever that if we pursue the measures that we have now laid down and to which this Council is, I understand, about to agree, to their proper conclusion, this Council will be able to feel that one of its last acts, at any rate, has been to frame an act as important and beneficial as any it has ever put through before. I would like also to refer to some of the remarks of the Honourable Sir Dinshaw Petit. I will not at this moment enter into the vexed question which he has touched upon as regards the disposal of lands. I would only say this that I can assure him that in these matters which touch very closely all those connected with this scheme, we are most anxious to hear the views and take into consideration the point of view of all concerned. We have to consider the main problem, and that is to put land on to the market at a reasonable, and not an excessive price, in the interests of all concerned. But whilst not venturing into the deep waters of a very difficult and thorny controversy, I can assure him that we shall pay the fullest consideration to the question of the best and most equitable methods of land disposals.

BOMBAY DEVELOPMENT: IMPROVEMENT TRUST AND MUNICIPAL BILL.

[The President; Mr. G. S. Curtis.] [29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

There is one other remark that I should like to refer to, and that is with regard to the Honourable Mr. Upasani's opposition. The note he struck was not so much one of discordance, I should call rather one of differentiation, because, as a matter of fact, I am perfectly certain he does not mean to vote against the bill, and he would himself be much averse to registering his last official act in such a manner. I would at least point out to him that it is not possible arbitrarily to segregate the interests as between the mofussil and the capital city. You cannot talk of them as if they were quite separate. It is impossible to determine how much the mofussil depends upon the capital, or the capital upon the mofussil. They are both absolutely interdependent. The riches, the prosperity and the honour of the capital city, politically and economically do affect the cotton growers, the people who work in the fields and every one right through the Presidency. You cannot have a rotten capital and a healthy mofussil. That is perfectly certain. Therefore, anything that really improves the capital city from which radiate all the activities to the mofussil, is doing good to the mofussil and not harm. Nor will I go into another vexed question of the incidence of duty about which I spoke on the last occasion here. After all, cotton production is entirely dependent upon cotton consumption, and it is the large cities in the Presidency that consume it. And if you make it impossible for this great industry to exist and exist on healthy terms, there can be no demand in those localities for the raw material. But those are all matters which honourable members are as fully aware of as I am myself. I am confident, being a perpetual optimist, that with the assistance of the municipality, of the Improvement Trust and of the local bodies and the advisory committee which is being set up—and let nobody think that the advisory committee's functions will be ignored—it is our desire, in fact, we are bound to work in the closest co-operation with the local authorities. Whatever may be the powers assigned to them, surely you can recognize the huge influence that the public and the press have to-day, and will have increasingly in the future upon all Government functions. The advisory committee, with the press and publicity at their disposal, will have a power out of all proportion to any particular local powers we may invest them with. Therefore, I am perfectly confident that if persons of ability and wide knowledge serve on this advisory committee for development, you need have no fear that Government will either have the desire or be able to turn a deaf ear to their representations.

Well, gentlemen, I would merely conclude with thanking you very warmly—because after all the second reading is the main reading of the bill—for the support you have given this measure. It is true that the subscriptions to our loan are satisfactory now, though I am not sure that my honourable colleague was wise in expressing his satisfaction so early at the response made by the public. I cannot subscribe to what he said in that respect. But we are determined that the first provincial loan, especially issued as it is in Bombay, should be a successful loan, and I am equally determined that we should do all that we possibly can, when the loan is subscribed, to see that the loan is made a stable one; that its stability is maintained, so that it may compare favourably with any other loan issued by any Government in this country. I attribute the greatest importance to this, and I intend certainly to ask for the co-operation of the great financiers and their advice in order that we may make this loan a stable bank-note security as the first provincial loan in India.

I would also thank my honourable colleagues and the select committee for the very able and devoted work they have given to this bill, and I can only hope that this Council will pass this bill through its second and third readings unanimously and with full accord.

Bill read a second time. The motion for the second reading of the bill was then put to the vote and carried.

Bill read clause by clause. The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Your Excellency,—I move that the bill be now read clause by clause.

His Excellency the President:—Clause 1.

Clause 1 was put to the vote and carried.

His Excellency the President:—Clause 2. The Honourable Mr. Curtis.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis—Your Excellency,—I rise to move the amendment that stands in my name. The amendment reads thus:—

Clause 2, section 195B(2)—(a) After the words "Revenue Division as" insert the words "the same may be".

(b) For the word "October" when it occurs for the first time substitute the word "December".

BOMBAY DEVELOPMENT: IMPROVEMENT TRUST AND MUNICIPAL BILL.

[29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [Mr. G. S. Curtis.]

(c) For the word "devoted" substitute the word "allotted".

(d) Add the following sentence:—

"Any moneys so allotted may also be utilized for the payment of interest on loans raised and utilized for the aforesaid purposes respectively and for the provision of sinking funds for the repayment of such loans."

As I said before these amendments are not as serious as they appear at first. But I would start at once to explain them. In the preamble after the words "Revenue Division" the words "as the same may be constituted on the 1st of December 1920" are to be inserted. Also in section 195 B(2) "of the moneys received under sub-section (1) a sum of four lakhs shall be allotted yearly to schemes in the Bombay Suburban Revenue Division as the same may be constituted on the 1st of December 1920." The object of this amendment is to avoid difficulties in connection with the reformed Council elections which take place in the middle of next month. It is, therefore, desirable to put off the constitution of the new division until the 1st of December. That accounts for (a) and (b) of my amendments under clause 2. (c) and (d) go together. The clause will then read "The balance shall be allotted to the provision of tenements for the working classes in the City of Bombay." And then it is proposed to add the following:—"Any moneys so allotted may also be utilized for the payment of interest on loans raised and utilized for the aforesaid purposes respectively and for the provision of sinking funds for the repayment of such loans." That addition was made at the instance of the Government of India on the ground that the expression "provision of tenements" might be taken to include only the allocation of funds received from the cotton duty to the construction of tenements and may not allow of the money coming from the cotton duty being utilized for the payment of interest on loans raised. Accordingly, these amendments (c) and (d) are proposed in section 195 B(2).

I must now ask you to move on to the next section 195C. The amendments which I propose are as follows:—

(a) For the word "the" where it first occurs substitute the word "all".

(b) For the word "received" substitute the word "allotted".

(c) For the words "for the purpose of providing tenements in the City of Bombay and of the expenditure incurred from or with the aid of such moneys" substitute the words:—

"to the provision of such tenements; of all loans raised and utilized for the provision of such tenements and of any sinking funds formed for the repayment of such loans."

I am reading the section as it will read when thus amended:—

"Government shall keep a separate account of all moneys allotted under sub-section (2) of section 195B to the provision of such tenements; of all loans raised and utilized for the provision of such tenements and of any sinking funds formed for the repayment of such loans."

These amendments refer to sub-clause (1) of section 195C. In sub-clause (2) of the same section I propose the following amendments:—

(a) For the words "take over" substitute the word "acquire".

(b) For the words from "vesting in Government" to the end of the sub-section substitute the words "of Government in all lands and buildings acquired and all buildings constructed in the City of Bombay constituted as aforesaid, with the aid of such moneys and loans, on indemnifying Government against all then existing and all future liabilities of Government in respect of such lands and buildings and in respect of such loans."

The next amendment is really the only important one of principle. It requires the insertion of a new sub-section (3) in clause 195C which specified in legal language and as clearly as possible in what way the municipality has to indemnify Government. The amendment reads as follows:—

"Insert new sub-section (3) as follows and renumber remaining sub-sections.

(3) For the purpose of determining the amount of any indemnity in respect of any such loan regard shall be had to any then existing sinking fund formed for the re-payment of such loans: the intention being that the Corporation shall pay to Government from time to time sufficient moneys—

(a) to satisfy all interest on such loan as the same may become payable by Government; and

BOMBAY DEVELOPMENT: IMPROVEMENT TRUST AND MUNICIPAL BILL—CITY IMPROVEMENT TRUST BILL.

[Mr. G. S. Curtis; the President.] [29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

(b) to make up, after taking into account any such sinking fund, the amount which Government may be liable to repay at the maturity of such loan".

In old sub-clause (4), new sub-clause (5), the alterations are purely verbal. The amendment proposed is as follows:—

(a) For the word "the" where it occurs for the fourth time substitute the word "such."

(b) Omit the words "referred to in the said sub-section."

In old sub-clause (5) and new sub-clause (6), the words "and in any sinking fund formed for the repayment of any loan or loans utilized for the purpose of providing tenements as aforesaid" are to be cancelled. That is the most important amendment among these. As already explained, the Government of India objected to a sinking fund maintained by Government being transferred to the municipality. In its stead, therefore, we have provided that Government shall retain the sinking fund, but that the municipality shall pay yearly contributions sufficient to provide for the sinking fund to enable Government to repay the loan in full. The amendment in section 195C (5) reads as follows:—

Omit the word "an" where it first occurs and the words "and in any sinking fund formed for the re-payment of any loan or loans utilized for the purpose of providing tenements as aforesaid."

The other amendments, as shown in the paper which has been circulated to the members of this Council, are of a drafting character and are as follows:—

In clause 2, Section 195C (6)

(a) For the words "taking over" substitute the words "acquiring as aforesaid".

(b) Before the words "section 195B" wherever they occur insert the words "sub-section (1) of".

In clause 2, Section 195C (7)

For the number "(6)" substitute the number "(7)".

Lastly, a new section 195D is proposed to be added and the amendment is as follows:—

Definition of Loan.

195D. Loans raised and utilized for the purpose of repaying (whether directly or indirectly) loans raised and utilized for such schemes of improvement or for the provision of such tenements as are referred to in sub-section (2) of section 195B shall be deemed to be loans raised and utilized for such schemes or for the provision of such tenements as the case may be.

Honourable members who have studied these amendments with care will realize what a great deal of difficulty and trouble the drafting of them has involved. With these remarks, sir, I beg to move that the amendments standing in my name may be passed.

The amendments were then severally put to the vote and carried.

Clause 2, as amended, was then put to the vote and carried.

Clause 3 was then put to the vote and carried.

The preamble as amended was then put to the vote and carried.

A BILL TO AMEND THE CITY OF BOMBAY IMPROVEMENT ACT, 1898. BILL NO. XVII OF 1920).

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Your Excellency,—I desire to invite your Excellency's attention to Bill No. XVII of 1920, which was published under rule 28 (5) of the rules for the conduct of Council business on September 25th. Under the standing orders 18 days' notice is generally required, but in this case the same could not be given. I, therefore, request your Excellency to suspend the standing order, as the measure is, I understand, of a non-controversial character, and allow the bill to be proceeded with.

CITY IMPROVEMENT TRUST BILL—URDU SCHOOLS.

[29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.] [The President; Mr. G. S. Curtis; Mr. C. V. Mehta; Sardar Gulam Jilani.]

His Excellency the President:—I suspend the standing orders. Bill to amend the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898. Bill No. XVII of 1920. First reading. The Honourable Mr. Curtis.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis moves the first reading of the bill.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Your Excellency,—I now desire to move the first reading of a bill to amend the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898, Bill No. XVII of 1920. The object of the bill is to effect an amendment in the City of Bombay Improvement Act as shown in the papers circulated to honourable members of this Council. Under the provisions of section 60 of the act it was incumbent upon the Improvement Trust to maintain certain sites as open spaces in perpetuity. Owing to the construction of a large public park on the area known as "The Flats," north of Clerk Road, by the municipality out of money lent by the Western India Turf Club, it is no longer necessary, as it was in 1898, to specify that these areas which are the subject of this bill should be maintained in perpetuity as open spaces. That being the case, the trust have asked with the consent of the municipality that the act should be amended, so that plots 1(b), 1(c) and 1(d) may now and in future be allowed to be laid out, in whole or in part, as recreation grounds or parks for the free use of the public, or to be appropriated to building purposes. Plot 1(a) is similarly to be set apart as an open space and may at any time be laid out as a recreation ground or park for the free use of the public. With these words, sir, I beg to move the first reading of this bill.

The Honourable Mr. C. V. Mehta:—Your Excellency,—I have pleasure in supporting the first reading of this bill. From the section it might not be quite clear what is intended to be done, but I may briefly state, sir, that the rights of the public, although they are going to be taken away with regard to a particular plot of land to the north of Clerk Road, will be more than safeguarded by the provision of a public park to the south of it, a park which we anticipate will be very largely used by the public. In view of that provision, certain other lands will be released for the purpose of building chawls for which there is a great demand in that neighbourhood. The provisions of this bill were considered carefully both by the Improvement Trust and the municipality, and both those bodies have accepted them.

Bill read a first time.

The motion for the first reading of the bill was then put to the vote and carried.

His Excellency the President:—Bill to amend the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898, Bill No. XVII of 1920. Second reading. The Honourable Mr. Curtis.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis moves the second reading of the bill.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—I now beg to move, sir, that this bill be read a second time.

Bill read a second time.

The motion for the second reading of the bill was then put to the vote and carried.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—Your Excellency,—The bill may now be read clause by clause.

Bil read clause by clause.

Clauses 1 and 2 were then severally put to the vote and carried.

The preamble was then put to the vote and carried.

His Excellency the President:—Bill to amend the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898, Bill No. XVII of 1920, Third reading. The Honourable Mr. Curtis.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis:—I now beg to move, sir, that this bill be read a third time and passed into law.

The Honourable Mr. G. S. Curtis moves the third reading of the bill.

Bill read a third time.

The motion for the third reading of the bill was then put to the vote and carried.

DISCUSSION OF MATTERS OF GENERAL PUBLIC INTEREST.

His Excellency the President:—Resolution No. 8. The Honourable Sardar Gulam Jilani.

This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that the Urdu Schools should not be administered by the District Deputy Educational Inspectors but be placed in charge of the Deputy Inspector of Urdu Schools, both for inspection as well as administrative purposes.

The Honourable Sardar Gulam Jilani:—Your Excellency,—I beg to withdraw this resolution.

The resolution was by leave withdrawn.

His Excellency the President:—Resolution No. 10. The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole.

HYDRO-ELECTRIC SCHEMES—TALATIS: REVISION OF PAY—MOFUSSIL CLERICAL ESTABLISHMENTS: PAY.

[The President.] [29TH SEPTEMBER 1920.]

This Council recommends to His Exeellency the Governor in Council that in granting concessions for new Hydro-electric Schemes in this Presidency in future, involving the acquisition by Government of 2,000 acres and above of agricultural lands, the following conditions should be made :—

(a) that all excess profits after paying 10 per cent. dividends to shareholders, should be divided between the Company using the concession and Government, half and half;

(b) that one-fourth of the power generated should be reserved for the production of nitrate fertilizers from the atmosphere or driving agricultural machinery, if such use of the power is financially practicable according to expert advice received by Government.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Godbole not being present, the resolution was deemed withdrawn.

His Excellency the President:—Resolution No. 17. The Honourable Mr. Kamat.

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that with reference to the revision of pay of the talatis in the Presidency, now under the consideration of Government, Government may be pleased to consider the desirability of fixing Rs. 30 as the minimum, and Rs. 60 as the maximum of their pay in the proposed revision.

The Honourable Mr. Kamat not being present, the resolution was deemed withdrawn.

His Excellency the President:—Resolution No. 21. The Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud.

This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that an advance of two months' pay be given to the clerical establishments in the mofussil till they receive the benefit of the revision scheme sanctioned for them.

The Honourable Rao Bahadur Garud not being present, the resolution was deemed withdrawn.

His Excellency the President:—Gentlemen,—Before closing this last meeting of the Council that has, I believe, lasted longer than any previous Council, I should like to address a few words of farewell to this Council. I would first like to express my sensibility of the constant courtesy which the honourable members of this Council have always displayed to me, whilst I have had the honour of occupying this chair during the last two years. I myself cease from this moment to preside over the Legislative Council. I can, at any rate, say that I am very sorry to leave the chair of this Council and not to be going to preside over any of its future deliberations.

We have a long record of useful work to look back upon. As regards the progressive stages of Council government in this country, we have still with us in Council to-day the Honourable Mr. Goculdas Parekh, the Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola, the Honourable Mr. Munmohundass Ramji, the Honourable Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas and the Honourable Mr. Webb who were present on the last occasion when a Governor marked the rate of constitutional progress so far achieved, and two more honourable members, the Honourable Sir George Carmichael and the Honourable Mr. Lalubhai Samaldas, took their seat on the next occasion on which the Council met under the new constitution.

Well, gentlemen, I will not, as I had intended to, go into any retrospect as was done by a distinguished predecessor of mine, as regards those steps; but I am confident that the historian who looks back over the long and interesting features of Indian history in the last fifty years will see the path marked out much more clearly than those of us who live in the present time can possibly do. We are now about to take one further step on the road towards self-government. I myself look forward to it with unqualified hope and with a very large degree of confidence. I believe, that we, in breaking from this Council, and embarking upon the new, are going to take a step forward which one may be proud of, and which must lead straightforward to the wider institutions which this country is asking for to-day. I have no fear for the future provided the good sense of the Council which has prevailed so far continues in the councils which are to come in the future.

Gentlemen, I thank you for your courtesy once more to myself and to this chair and I herewith close this Council. This Council will now adjourn.

The Council then adjourned.

By order of His Excellency the Honourable the Governor,

G. D. DAVIS,
Secretary to the Legislative Council of the Governor of Bombay.
