SATTI BRIBERY CASE : RESULTS.

*Rao Bahadur S. N. ANGADI (Belgaum District): (a) Will Government be pleased to state the total expenditure incurred by them on account of the Satti Bribery case throughout, both on account of investigation and also the actual trial ?

(b) What was the result of the case ?

(c) Have Government taken steps against Shamji Narayan Kulkarni of Satti and his brothers, who, on their own admission, offered bribes to responsible officers in the Police Department ?

(d) If not, do they intend taking steps against them in the near future ?

The Honourable Mr. G. A. THOMAS: (a) The collection of this information would involve time and labour altogether incommensurate with the result that would be achieved.

(b) All the accused were acquitted.

(c) and (d) No.

Rao Bahadur S. N. ANGADI: May I know why this simple work of collecting information would involve much labour ?

The Honourable Mr. G. A. THOMAS: An attempt was made to collect the information and we found that we would have to examine so many account books in different offices that it was practically impossible to give even approximate figures.

SLAUGHTER OF COWS AND BULLOCKS : STATISTICS.

*Mr. G. M. KALBHOR (Poona District): (a) Will Government be pleased to state what are the numbers of cows and bullocks slaughtered in the cantonment areas of the presidency during the last four years ?

(c) If so, which, and what is the approximate number of cows and bullocks slaughtered therein ?

Nadiad, Dohad, Broach, Ankleshwar, Baramati, Sholapur, Bhusaval, Karachi, Larkana, Kamber, Ratodero ?

SIR M. VISVESVARAYA'S REPORT ON THE LLOYD BARRAGE AND CANALS PROJECT IN SIND: RECOMMENDATIONS.

*Mr. SHAIKH ABDUL MAJID: (Karachi District): Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether they intend to take any action with regard to the suggestion made in the "Report on the Lloyd Barrage and Canals Project in Sind" by Sir M. Visvesvaraya, K.C.I.E., M.I.C.E., and Nawab Ali Nawaz Jung Bahadur, F.G.H., to the effect that "This work is without question an all-India responsibility and its burden should be borne by the broader shoulders of the Central Government";

(b) if so, whether they will place all the correspondence on the subject on the Council table? If not, what are the reasons therefor;

(c) whether they intend to act upon recommendations (ix) and (x) made in the Report by the Visvesvaraya Committee;

(d) if not, why not?

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: (a) to (d) The Honourable Member is referred to the appendix to the White Book "Sind and the Lloyd Barrage" (copies of which have been furnished to honourable members) which gives a summary of the principal recommendations of the Report in question and of the action taken thereon by Government.

VETERINARY SERVICES: REORGANIZATION.

*Mr. J. S. KADRI for Mr. SYED MUNAWAR: Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether they intend putting into effect the recommendations contained in paragraph 26 on page 7 of "A Review of the Veterinary Service in the Bombay Presidency" published by Government in April 1931;

(b) whether they have decided that in view of the present financial stringency the proposed reorganization of the Veterinary Services be kept in abeyance?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur S. T. KAMBLI: (a) and (b) Some of the recommendations which do not involve increased expenditure will be put into effect from 1st April 1932. Consideration of the others has been postponed in present financial circumstances.

CONVICT B. G. DESHPANDE: FORFEITURE OF INAMS PROPERTY.

*Dr. V. G. VAISHAMPAYAN (Sholapur City): Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether it is a fact that Mr. Bhimrao Gopal Deshpande, a convict, is in the Bijapur District Prison;

(b) whether he has got any inam lands in the Sholapur District;

(c) whether it is a fact that Mr. Knight, the Collector of Sholapur, gave a letter on the 8th August 1931 to the Jail Superintendent at Bijapur, asking the latter to give an interview to the convict's brother Mr. V. G. Deshpande;

(d) whether the convict's brother got the letter of apology signed by the convict;

(e) whether they issued any order regarding the forfeiture of the convict's share on the 9th/10th December 1931?

The Honourable Mr. G. A. THOMAS: (a) Yes.

(b) and (e) He had, but they were forfeited on the 4th May 1931.

(c) Yes.

(d) Government have no information on this point.

Dr. V. G. VAISHAMPAYAN: This apology was tendered on the understanding arrived at between the convict's brother and the Collector that the lands were not to be forfeited. How is it that they have now been forfeited?

The Honourable Mr. G. A. THOMAS: There was no understanding with the Collector or Government at all.

Dr. V. G. VAISHAMPAYAN: It was only on that understanding that the apology was tendered.

The Honourable Mr. G. A. THOMAS: I have said that there was no understanding.

Dr. V. G. VAISHAMPAYAN: That is why the apology was tendered.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

RAILWAY ACCIDENT: M. & S. M. RAILWAY.

Mr. A. J. BANGI (Southern Division): (a) Are Government aware that a serious railway accident took place between Bijapur and Hotgi on the M. & S. M. line some time last September?

(b) If so, what was the cause of the accident?

(c) How many persons were killed and how many injured?

(d) Have any steps been taken or are any proposed to be taken to prevent the recurrence of such accidents?

The Honourable Mr. W. F. HUDSON: (a) Yes.

(b) According to the report of the Senior Government Inspector of Railways, Madras, the accident was due to slacks in the railway line aggravated by the excessive speed of the train.

(c) One person was killed, four persons died of injuries and 32 were injured.

(d) Steps are being taken by the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway Administration in the direction of arranging that the passenger trains on this section are worked with engines fitted with vacuum brake equipment. Engines so fitted are now under order and are expected shortly.

ASSISTANT MANAGER, GOVERNMENT CENTRAL PRESS: HOUSE RENT BILLS.

Rao Bahadur S. K. BOLE: Will Government be pleased to state—

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: As the Honourable Member has already been informed in July 1931, Government do not think that any useful purpose would be served by placing the house-rent bills on the Council table: Copies of Government Resolution, General Department, No. 854, dated the 25th March 1922 and 20th April 1922 are placed on the Council table.

PLOUGHS: TRIALS.

Khan Bahadur D. B. COOPER (Satara District): (a) Will Government be pleased to state what action the Agricultural Department of this Presidency has taken to put the following recommendation of the Royal Commission on Agriculture in India into effect:—

"Sound advice can only be given to the cultivator on the basis of exhaustive trials of the comparative merits of the country and of the inversion ploughs, carried out under his conditions and extending over a period of at least 5 years. Such trials should be combined with the investigation into the draught capacity required for different implements suggested above." (vide page 112, paragraph 107 of their Report) ?

(b) Are Government aware of the fact that this work was carried out in Cawnpore in the United Provinces during the quinquennium 1923-28, and that as a result of these extensive trials it was found that the increased value in crops consequent upon the adoption of a medium and light type of soil inverting ploughs in place of the country non-inverting ploughs, averaged Rs. 39 and Rs. 28 per acre respectively—vide pages 52-54 of the Annual Report of the Department of Agriculture, United Provinces, for the year ending 30th June 1928 ?

(c) If the reply to (b) is in the affirmative, what action has been taken to make this information known throughout the Presidency in every vernacular language in the Province ?

(d) Is it a fact that improved seeds and other crops are reared on Government Farms by the use of the latest ploughing and tillage implements and that these improved seeds and other crops are indiscriminately sold to cultivators who are using the most primitive methods ?

(e) Is it a fact that some of these improved crops have proved a failure in the hands of cultivators on account of inefficient tillage, and that the cultivator is forced to revert to the old indigenous seeds and crops which he has found by experience to be the most suitable for the implements which he is using ?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur S. T. KAMBLI: (a) Researches of the degree of intensity recommended by the Royal Commission on Agriculture have not yet been organised by the Department of Agriculture in this Presidency. The point at issue is not so much the relative merits of the two types of ploughs as the relative merits of two types of tillage, viz. breaking up and stirring as contrasted with cutting slices and inverting them. The country plough performs the former operation in a very imperfect manner. What is required is careful research upon what is called "rotary tillage" as contrasted with good class ploughing with iron ploughs. Researches of this type are usually carried out by the Agricultural Engineer to Government but as his post has been held in abeyance as a measure of retrenchment, owing to the prevailing financial stringency, no progress can be made at present in the matter.

(b) Yes; but the Agricultural Department has no information as to whether good results were obtained from inverting the soil.

(c) The Agricultural Department has not stressed this point in its propaganda as it is not prepared to endorse the findings of the United Provinces Agricultural Department as regards the explanation of the results obtained by that Department.

(d) No. Ploughing with inverting plough is not in general use on clean land on Government farms.

(e) No. The failure may be due to poor germination of seed on grass-bound land.

PRIMARY SCHOOLS: COST.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE (Poona City): Will Government be pleased to state whether they are aware that the average cost per pupil in a Primary School in this Presidency is far in excess of that in the Major Provinces of India? If so, what steps they intend to take to reduce the cost as far as possible?

The Honourable Sir RAFIUDDIN AHMAD: Yes. The control of primary education now vests in Local Authorities and it is for those bodies to take suitable steps to reduce the cost.

SCHOLARSHIPS FOR UNIVERSITY EDUCATION TO HINDUS OF SIND.

Mr. GOVER RORA (Karachi City): (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether there are any Government scholarships available for Hindus of Sind residing in the mofussil for higher education?

(b) How many Hindus from the mofussil in Sind applied to Government for scholarships for University or Collegiate education in 1931-32?

(c) Was any scholarship granted to any of the applicants? If not, what were the reasons therefor?

(d) Is it a fact that the Hindus of rural areas in Sind are generally backward in higher education?

(e) Is it a fact that Government grants scholarships to Mahomedan students coming from rural Sind for higher education, on the ground of their backwardness in such education?

(f) Have Government sanctioned any scholarships for mofussil Hindus of Sind on the same principle?

(g) If not, what are the reasons therefor?

The Honourable Sir RAFIUDDIN AHMAD: (a) Yes.

(b) 9, of whom only 6 were eligible for the grant of scholarships.

(c) Yes: one.

(d) Yes.

(e) and (f) Special scholarships are provided for all classes backward in education in Sind, whether they are Hindus or Mahomedans and come from urban or rural areas.

(g) The question does not arise.

CANALS IN SIND: BREACHES.

Khan Bahadur M. A. KHUHRO (Larkana District): Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) what districts have suffered owing to River Bund breaches and canal breaches in the last inundation season in Sind;

(b) the number of breaches that were caused in each district;

(c) the nature of each breach and the causes for it;

(d) whether Government appointed any independent inquiry committee to ascertain the causes for the breaches;

(e) what is the report of each inquiry committee, if appointed and whether it was purely official or official and non-official;

(f) whether Government will place on the Council table a copy of the report of the Inquiry Committee;

(g) what action have Government taken on the report of each Inquiry Committee;

(h) to what extent the officers of the department are responsible for the damage caused and what steps Government have taken to deal with them;

(i) the extent of loss sustained in each district in revenue by Government and the loss sustained by people owing to the destruction of their crops;

(j) what steps Government propose to take in regard to those zamindars and cultivators who have suffered owing to breaches that were caused mainly by the negligence on the part of the administration;

(k) what steps Government have taken to remedy the defects that caused havoc in the last Abkalani?

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN:

(a) Sukkur, Larkana and Nawabshah.

Upper Sind Frontier.

There was a breach at mile 6/4 of the Tori Bund which is constructed of treacherous 'kalar'. Between the 4th and 9th July 1930 a rise of over 8 feet of water occurred against the Tori Bund. The cause of the breach was an underground leak.

Sukkur District.

There were 19 breaches in the Adurtakio Bund consequent on the erosion of the front Sukkur Begari Bund at mile 26/6.

Larkana District.

There was a breach at mile 2/4 of the Naurang wah which at this place flows through low land. A leak occurred through the masonry of a sluice, which could only be detected when the leak had caused excessive flow in the karia. This was detected at 2 a.m. on the 23rd July 1930 and shortly after one side of the sluice collapsed resulting in a breach.

There were 23 breaches in the Magsi Bund in miles 43 to 43/4 and 44/4 which occurred at a very critical time when there was a gale blowing with heavy rain at the same time.

There was a breach at mile 54/4 of the Magsi Bund near Sita. Due to Kalarish soil in the length from mile 53/5 to 54/5, a few leaks occurred in this length, but they were all successfully closed. On the 19th July 1930, however, a leak occurred at mile 54/4, which was not detected for some time and later on the same day it developed into a breach. This breach was a small one and of no great importance.

There was a breach at mile 0/6 of the diversion of the Western Nara Right Bank. The set of the river in the year 1930 at the head of the Western Nara was directly concentrated on the right bank. On 19th July 1930, a leak occurred in the diversion at mile 0/6. This was twice closed but it broke out again and on the third occasion developed into a serious breach in spite of the efforts of 125 men to close it.

Nawabshah District.

There was a breach in the left bank of the Nasrat Canal Feeder at night time when there was heavy rain which interfered with patrolling.

(d) Government directed the Indus River Commission to hold a special inquiry.

(e) The Committee appointed was official in its personnel. The report dealt with the origin and causes of the floods in 1930 and made certain recommendations which were printed as an accompaniment to the Government Resolution issued thereon. A copy of the Government Resolution is placed on the Council table.

(f) No.

(g) The Government Resolution referred to in reply to clause (e) shows what action has been taken.

(h) The breaches were accidental and Government, while taking all possible measures to safeguard the country from floods, cannot guarantee that any river bund or canal will be immune from breaches.

(i) The extent of loss to Government in revenue and the loss sustained by the people is reported to have been approximately as under :—

Name of the District.	Loss to Government in revenue.	Loss sustained by the people
	Rs.	Rs.
Sukkur	2,23,537	4,90,000
Larkana	3,20,000	6,84,850
Nawabshah	83,803	2,15,350

(j) Does not arise—vide reply to clause (h).

(k) The defects have been remedied as far as possible by taking measures as under :—

(i) All the breached portions of bunds and canal banks have been reconstructed, the weak portions strengthened and raised where necessary.

(ii) The Western Nara Bank from mile 4/3 to the head of the diversion and the right bank of the Wahurwah in front of the Magsi Bund have been converted into river bunds.

(iii) A sand trench has been provided in the Magsi Bund.

(iv) Protective bunds have been constructed where gaps previously occurred, so as to prevent the river spill flooding the interior at times of very high river levels.

Accompaniment to Government Resolution, Public Works Department, No. 830/27, dated 6th February 1931.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

The recommendations, which the Commission considered it desirable to make, are given below :—

I.—Points to be carefully observed in the construction of bunds.

(a) All bunds must have a free-board of 4 feet above the Maximum High Flood Level. The Maximum High Flood Level is liable to change over a period of years, as the set of the main channel of the River changes ; hence, as the Maximum High Flood Level rises, so the top of the Bund in that locality must be raised.

*Printed as an accompaniment to this Resolution.

(b) It is particularly necessary that Cross Bunds and Loop Bunds forming compartments (i.e. where pocketting can occur) be raised to as so give 4 feet free-board above the Maximum High Flood Level at the upstream end of the compartment.

(c) Where bunds have to pass through "dhoros" or where soil is bad (i.e. cracked or kalar) a brick core wall, 1 foot thick with weep holes at intervals, or other form of diaphragm should be constructed in the Bund. Core walls have been tried in America and found successful. The matter should be referred to the Indus River Commission to consider in detail.

(d) Where a Canal Bank has to be used as a bund it must be made to bund section and any sluices in the bank must be made according to the Indus River Commission type design for sluices in Bunds.

The maintenance of such canal banks should be from Bund Funds and not from Canal Funds.

II.—Villages and cultivation in compartments.

Owing to the existence of villages and cultivation in compartments between Bunds and Loops there is sometimes a tendency for Executive Engineers not to flood such compartments. Flooding in such circumstances is much resented by the inhabitants of the villages and the owners of the cultivation and this may influence officers and lead them to abstain from flooding such a compartment. It is recommended that the whole question should be gone into carefully by the Indus River Commission.

III.—Rules for the maintenance of Bunds and a Manual for the guidance of those concerned with Bunds.

It must frequently happen that an officer, with considerable experience in the Public Works Department, may be placed in charge of Bunds though he has had no previous experience of them. It is recommended that "Rules for the maintenance of Bunds" and a "Manual" describing the method of organising the maintenance of a bund should be drawn up. In the manual such information as how to close a breach, how to distinguish between a leak and percolation water flowing out of a bund and similar information of this type should also be given. In short it should be a vade mecum for a Sub-divisional Officer in charge of bunds and it will be invaluable for young officers joining the I.S.E. and B.S.E.

IV.—Bunds round towns.

It was considered that all towns and villages of any importance whatever which are likely to be flooded, should be legally bound to construct bunds for their own protection. The towns and villages which should be so protected should be named by the Indus River Commission.

BOMBAY ACT XVIII OF 1925: RULES AND BY-LAWS.

Mr. SHANKARRAO JAYARAMRAO ZUNZARRAO (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts): Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) how many municipal boroughs in the Presidency have framed the Rules and By-laws under the Bombay Act XVIII of 1925;

(b) whether it is a fact that Government have entrusted the work of preparing model rules and by-laws under Bombay Act XVIII of 1925 to an experienced retired Deputy Collector;

(c) if the reply to (b) is in the affirmative, when the work was so entrusted;

(d) whether the work has been completed, and if so, when;

(e) whether the rules and by-laws so framed have been examined further by the Legal Department, Accounts and Audit Department or by an administrator having municipal experience;

(f) if so, when and with what result;

(g) if not, whether they intend to get the draft so examined;

(h) when the model rules and by-laws will be printed and sent out to the borough municipalities;

(i) whether it is a fact that these local bodies are working without a proper set of up-to-date rules and by-laws for the last 6 years;

(j) whether it is a fact that Government have issued instructions to a municipal borough not to submit fresh rules and by-laws for sanction until the model rules and by-laws have been framed, printed and sent out by Government to municipalities ?

The Honourable Sirdar Sir RUSTOM JEHANGIR VAKIL : (a) Five have framed complete sets of rules and by-laws, of which one complete set has been sanctioned. In the case of the other 4 and of 21 other municipalities rules and by-laws under certain clauses only of sections 58 and 61 of the Bombay Municipal Boroughs Act have been sanctioned.

(b) Yes.

(c) In August 1930.

(d) Yes, in March 1931.

(e) No.

(f) Does not arise.

(g) Yes—if necessary, after the views of the municipalities and Commissioners are received.

MOTION TO PRESENT AN ADDRESS TO H. E. THE GOVERNOR re THE POLITICAL SITUATION

Rao Bahadur R R KALE (Bombay University) Sir, the motion which I wish to move is,

"That the following humble address be presented to His Excellency the Governor of Bombay

May it please Your Excellency,

We, the Members of the Bombay Legislative Council, respectfully pray that in view of the present political situation, Your Excellency will be pleased to convene a Conference of leaders of various parties in the Province in order to find the means of establishing a peaceful and calm atmosphere and secure the co operation of all parties in facilitating the work of the several Committees set up to help the framing of the New Constitution"

Mr President, the motion involves four questions for consideration. The first is the present political situation, the second is the need for establishing a peaceful and calm atmosphere, the third is securing the co-operation of all political parties in facilitating the work of framing the constitution, and the fourth is the calling of a conference to devise ways and means for the purpose of bringing about this result

Last year at this time, you are aware, Sir, that I had tabled a motion, in the first instance, welcoming the declaration of the Prime Minister made by him on the 19th January and had expressed an earnest hope that the necessary atmosphere of peace and goodwill would be created for the purpose of implementing the conclusions of the first Round Table Conference Before the motion could be reached, however, circumstances came about which I was glad to see rendered it necessary to amend the clause containing the expression of hope because the hope was in fact fulfilled and the necessary atmosphere was created by the well-known Irwin-Gandhi Pact, which was brought about on the 6th March 1931. We then took the opportunity of congratulating the Government and others who had laboured to bring about that settlement, and we expressed our grateful appreciation for the success which they had attained in bringing about that settlement Well, Sir, we then thought that the trouble was over as the largest political party in the country had expressed its desire to co-operate in the great work that lay before the country It seemed that our hopes would be fulfilled when we found that the Congress deputed Mr Gandhi as its sole and accredited delegate to participate in the deliberations of the Round Table Conference

I am only going into the genesis of the political situation and shall but briefly refer to these events which are well-known I need not dilate

* Printed in today's Debates.

[Rao Bahadur R R Kale]

upon what took place up to the point when again there arose circumstances which have resulted in the present deadlock Whilst the second Round Table Conference was doing its work—in fact before it was finished—there had arisen circumstances in this country and there came remedies which the Government had to resort to—I mean the terrorist activities in Bengal and the no-rent campaign in the United Provinces and the ordinances that were promulgated to meet the situation in those provinces It was very unfortunate that the situation should have taken such a turn at the very time when it was necessary to continue to preserve the atmosphere of peace and goodwill and when the prospect of a final solution of the constitutional problem was hopeful, but as fate would have it, there came this dramatic, tragic end to all the good work that was done at the beginning of this year The seed of bitterness and discord had already been sown, and when Mahatma Gandhi landed in India, he said—these are the words he uttered

"I landed in the hope that I shall find out ways and means of tendering co operation, but when I find that at every step there is a huge boulder, what am I to do ? I am dying to find those ways and means On the top of the Bengal Ordinances, the United Provinces and the Frontier Ordinances have been passed and several important persons arrested"

In these circumstances, Mr Gandhi proceeded to seek an interview with the Viceroy Whether the granting of an interview would have saved the situation or not is more than I can say But in this connection Mr Brailsford's dispassionate analysis of the Indian situation in which he refers to Mahatma Gandhi's letter seeking the interview with the Viceroy as tactless may be quoted This is what Mr Brailsford says on the situation

"His (Mahatma Gandhi's) rule is to conceal nothing, and he plainly said that his Committee was considering, in certain eventualities, a return to 'civil disobedience.' Everyone knew it, but this plain dealing offended Lord Willingdon, a smaller man than his predecessor Apart altogether from this question of tact, the Viceroy bluntly refused, under any circumstances, to discuss the Ordinances That was on his part a pose as petty as it was unreasoning If a Government asks the leaders of Indian opinion to co operate with it in combating terrorism (as Lord Willingdon did) it cannot reasonably refuse to discuss with them the methods by which it should be fought. The case for consultation was all the stronger, since in fact these ordinances are being used as much to repress an economic movement of a normally patient peasantry as to deal with a revolutionary conspiracy. One can govern India with Indian opinion or against it If one desires to enlist its support, one must consult its leaders. It is fantastic to summon Mr Gandhi to London to discuss the rights which Indians shall enjoy to morrow, and at the same time to refuse to listen when he would defend such rights as they ought to enjoy to-day"

Now, Sir, I do not wish, as I said, to go into the question of what would have happened if an interview had been granted The Government of India, however, published a long statement on the 4th January justifying the action they took in arresting Mr Gandhi and promulgating the various general ordinances Be it noted that the ordinances promulgated on the 4th January were general ordinances, and on the same date that the ordinances were promulgated, it was stated that they might be applied and extended from time to time Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya in issuing an earnest appeal to the Viceroy to reconsider the position and undo the wrong has given a long rejoinder to the Government

[Rao Bahadur R R Kale]

Statement justifying their action and both will speak for themselves The power taken under the general ordinances was twofold, the first related to the territories to which they should be applied That power was reserved by the Governor General The second power, namely, that of applying the ordinances to various areas in the presidency at particular times and on such dates as may be appointed by a notification, was entrusted to the Local Governments These were the terms of the general ordinance No 2 of 1932 One would have thought that it was not the intention to apply those ordinances to all the areas at once nor was it perhaps intended to declare it to be in operation simultaneously in every nook and corner of the Presidency Otherwise, I cannot understand why it was necessary to say that the ordinances may be extended to different areas by the Governor General from time to time and that its operation may be commenced from time to time on and from such dates as may be notified by the Local Government But we find, Sir, that on the very date, that is, the 4th of January, when this general ordinance was pronounced, there are other notifications issued by the Government of India and by the Local Government simultaneously on the same date extending the ordinances to all areas except Aden and also by the Local Government making the date of operation the same, i e , 4th of January 1932 I submit that at the moment it is not necessary to go further into this matter, but it seems to me that we, i e those who are opposed to the cult of civil disobedience, are faced at this time with a situation which is certainly embarrassing to ourselves no less than to Government, because we are engaged at this time with speed and sincerity—those watchwords of Mr Wedgwood Benn—in carrying on the work of the Round Table Conference by means of the committees that have been appointed, and the question for consideration is therefore whether at such a juncture the unrest and excitement should occupy the attention of almost all the population of this presidency The question which I wish to ask Government is, we have the ordinances in force for nearly 10 weeks, and may I ask whether the situation has fundamentally improved during this period ? It may be said that it has improved to some extent because I may at once concede that the movement has not been allowed to assume serious proportions Last time the movement was in operation for nearly ten months before the settlement was reached This time it is only ten weeks, but my point is that we cannot say that that atmosphere of peace is prevailing which is necessary as I have already indicated, and I am not going into the question about the promulgation of ordinances because that is a matter first and primarily for the Central Government, and secondly, I do not wish to enter into any further details about either the civil disobedience movement or the drastic nature of some of these ordinances They have been sufficiently discussed in the press and authoritatively stated by His Excellency the Viceroy in his address to the Assembly, in the debate in the Assembly on the motion of Sir Harisingh Gour, by Sir James Crerar, the Honourable the Home Member, when he spoke in defence of Government's policy and by His Excellency the Governor while addressing us at the opening of this session and recently by the Secretary of State when he spoke on the India Office Estimates in the House of Commons In the course of his speech, he talked about the Government of India's solicitude and warning to Local Governments and quoted one or two extracts shewing the instructions issued by Government on the 8th of February, under which the emergency powers were to be carried out First he said

"The Government of India recognises the responsibility attaching to the assumption of extraordinary powers and would again bring to the notice of the Local Governments the great importance of exercising control and supervision over the exercise of those powers, and secondly, they would request the Local Governments to satisfy themselves with regard to alleged instances of abuse brought to their notice which is of course the normal practice and procedure Some of the powers contained in the ordinances are drastic and the Government of India attach the greatest importance to control by the local Governments of their exercise"

That is a statement which does show that the extraordinary powers which have been given to the local subordinate officers are really of a drastic nature, and therefore a great deal of control and supervision is necessary on the part of the local Government, and therefore I submit that the few criticisms which will be offered on this side of the House will be considered by the Honourable the Home Member with a view to seeing whether the kind of control and supervision which is implied in the instructions is being exercised I know last time when the settlement was brought about, there was an attempt made in the House by some of the honourable members to give expression to their criticisms. The then Honourable Leader of the House, Sir Ernest Hotson, advised us to forget and forgive and I for one associated myself fully with that expression and we did not go into the question any further This time, however, I could have wished that I would have been in the same position; but, Sir, the facts and circumstances are different and therefore I am sorry to find myself in no similar position at this moment Now, therefore, I wish to bring to the notice of the Honourable the Home Member certain aspects of the exercise of the power which is at this moment one of the vital points to be considered by the local Government May I ask if the Government could not do what lies in their power to lessen the bitterness and the hardships in areas which really arise under such drastic or extraordinary powers? His Excellency, while addressing us, was pleased to say that the measures which Government is putting into force have been adopted to ensure peace, that they are not an end in themselves but as a means only to secure their end, namely, the end of bringing a new constitution which he said "we have promised to India and under which she will"—in the words of His Excellency the Viceroy—"become in due course an absolute partner with the other Dominions" His Excellency went on to say, "Let me add that my Government has no quarrel with any political party as such however widely their views may differ from our own provided that they endeavour to give them effect through the regular constitutional channel" That being so, my submission is that the Government must see whether the application of the extraordinary remedy of ordinances is really extraordinary or whether it has become ordinary What I mean is that these powers are given to deal with a certain movement, namely, the movement of civil disobedience on a wholesale scale which was threatened by the Congress and, so far as we are concerned, I quite understand that Government will be justified in doing what is necessary for that purpose, but when there are political parties and political parties, is it not necessary, Sir, to use a certain amount of discrimination in applying these extraordinary powers? At the present moment particularly speaking, it may be said that there are three political sections in the different parts of the country Of course, there is the revolutionary movement or the terrorist movement in Bengal and the no-tax campaign in the United Provinces, both of which have a particular aspect and there is in the Bombay presidency, so far as I can see, the civil disobedience movement considered generally, and the other type of political agitation, which so far as Maharashtra is concerned is carried on by a section which is called the Responsive Co-operation Party which came into existence in 1924 I belong to Maharashtra and may be said to possess some firsthand knowledge about it, and I can say that that is a party headed by leaders like Mr N C Kelkar and Mr M R Jayakar and was brought into being by them as distinct from the party pledged to non-co-operation at all times My own knowledge of the situation is that that party, whose creed is more or less allied to the creed of the liberal party and being a political party, certainly carries on agitation but an agitation of a nature which is different from the agitation of the civil disobedience movement Of course, I do not deny that there may be persons, there are persons, who may have also indulged in the civil disobedience movement even in Maharashtra I do not deny that, but the point is whether that movement has taken such deep root in every nook and corner of this wide area that the application of the ordinances was rendered necessary in each and every nook and corner of the area That is the point which I am making, and it is because, Sir, I feel that the way in which several persons and several associations were dealt with and are being dealt with certainly requires to be criticised I can concede that it is difficult for Government to distinguish the activities of congressmen from those of others who have not joined the civil disobedience movement, and yet who do carry on political agitation for the redress of grievances or against certain policies of Government But surely Government are expected to know where and for what reason the agitation is carried on, where and whether a particular movement has taken deep root, and whether and where it is necessary to enforce the ordinances Is it not up to Government to find out what the position is, with all their paraphernalia of police agency and their executive officers? But what seems to me is that the executive officers seem to be over-zealous in resorting to these extraordinary powers as if they were ordinary powers and in cases where they are not strictly necessary Therefore, I would request Government to ask their officers to refrain from making such a wide and unrestricted use of these powers and on such a large scale in all places, whether their enforcement is called for or not I submit that it is this aspect which rather deserves to be considered when we are here to see whether the atmosphere is convenient for any purpose, I mean to say the purpose of constitution-building that we are proceeding with. Being connected with one of the committees, the Franchise Committee, I can say that to my own knowledge, in the Deccan, there is a kind of depression, there is a kind of feeling which has come over the country which certainly disables the people from assisting or co-operating with Government even in their own interest Of course, His Excellency the Governor thinks that he expects co-operation from us in putting down the civil disobedience movement He asked us to take courage and come to the assistance of Government, but, apart from that, even in the matter of this constitution-making, which is of vital importance to us, the people seem to be rather taken aback I do feel that that is not an atmosphere congenial to the evolving of a constitution which will be acceptable hereafter I know Government may not care whether certain people come up and make their representations and put forward their case as to how the franchise is to be widened and so on, or not Government may say "Those who do not care, we do not care for them We shall proceed in our own way" I really do think that because a certain section of the politically minded public keeps aloof, if you proceed to do your work ex-parte, I am sure that your work is not likely to receive satisfaction when the new constitution is brought into existence What happens in the case of a decree passed ex-parte by a court? The court says, the defendant does not appear, and therefore the decree is in favour of the plaintiff But, Sir, later on, when the defendant comes to know about it, a lot of trouble has to be undergone The proceedings are to be re-opened and the whole case has to be gone into again Therefore, I certainly appeal to the Government to see that, before the final constitution is brought out, they will do the utmost that lies in their power to secure co-operation

Before proceeding to the second and third aspects of my motion, I shall refer to only one or two points I know it is a very difficult task in this motion not to refer to various incidents, but I would really advise honourable members, and I would myself follow the advice, that instead of dealing with the instances which may have happened and which are happening in various parts of this presidency on the present occasion, they should adopt the procedure which I intend to adopt, that is, pick up certain cases and submit them in writing to the Honourable the Home Member The present motion no doubt might enable certain aspects of the ordinances to be discussed, and the Honourable the Home Member also said that he would reserve his remarks on this matter till the discussion of the address comes up Even if we to-day mention some instances, he will not be prepared, I am sure, to give any off-hand reply He must necessarily require time to investigate, and unless he does so, the reply which he will give will be merely some sort of general reply Therefore, I would not take the time of the House in dealing with such instances.

[Rao Bahadur R R Kale]

But I may point out that I have in my possession two instances of individuals and one instance of an association in my own district (Satara), where I have reason to think that the matter has been dealt with in a manner in which it should not have been dealt with The persons were not as a matter of fact concerned in this movement They may have had their political views, but simply because they hold political views which differ from the views of Government, it does not follow that action should be taken under the very wide power which is vested in section 3 of the ordinances, and which has now become a sort of by-word known throughout the length and breadth of this land, viz the power of issuing a direction under clause (d), which allows the direction to be in any form, because the wording is, " shall conduct himself in such manner, abstain from such acts, or take such order with any property in his possession or under his control, as may be specified in the order " The words " shall conduct himself in such manner " give very wide powers indeed, and it says " any direction " Supposing a police officer takes into his head to give a direction that the man shall stand in the courtyard, or in the sun for five hours, certainly he can issue that order He will say " I think it is necessary in the interest of the public peace that the man must stand or sit in the chavdi [An Honourable Member Or crawl], yes, or crawl, or do anything else for the matter of that That is how, Sir, the word " parole " has come into so much prominence in these days I find again, Sir, that persons have been arrested under this section, and detained for a fortnight or two months——

The Honourable Mr G A THOMAS May I correct the honourable member ? The arrest is under section 3, and the order under section 4

Rao Bahadur R R KALE Yes, the order is issued under section 4 clause (d) The power to arrest and detain suspected persons is under section 3, and, as I was saying, any person can be arrested and kept in prison for a fortnight The wording in section 4 (1) is, " The Local Government, if satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing that any person has acted, is acting, or is about to act, in a manner prejudicial to the public safety or peace " These things are necessary he must be acting in a manner prejudicial to public safety or peace, or in furtherance of a movement prejudicial to the public safety or peace Then, the person may be ordered in writing to do so many things Now this order remains in force for not more than a month from the making thereof, unless the Local Government by special order otherwise directs So that, that is the period which is in the discretion of the authority In many cases, with the consent of the Local Government, the period has been extended to two months At the expiration of the two months, the man is let out He is asked to give an undertaking, or rather, he is asked to do several things, viz , that within 24 hours of his release, or within half an hour of his release, whatever the period may be, he is to report himself to the police, or to reside within certain limits, or to report himself to the police once a day, or twice a day, or twice a week, and lastly, to abstain from taking any part, directly or indirectly, in the civil disobedience movement or in the furtherance of that movement, or from doing anything which has a tendency to cause a breach of the public peace or safety Now, Sir, my submission is that it is to this notice or order which is issued as a matter of course in the case of every individual who after his detention, is released, that these conditions are attached I can well understand that this is a preventive measure, and what the Government is concerned with is that they should take steps to prevent the occurrence of anything which will endanger the public safety There are similar powers under section 108 of the Criminal Procedure Code For instance, although a man is not guilty of any particular offence, still if there are reasons to believe that he is a habitual offender, whether politically or otherwise, he can be asked to enter into a bond for good behaviour, or something of that kind But when, in addition to this condition, in the cases I have mentioned, the other conditions are attached, when a man is asked to stay in a village where he has no relations, no accommodation, no convenience for taking his food, and he is asked not to leave that village, or that he should visit the police station, I must say it is the sentiment which is associated with this attending the police station that comes in the way of the person obeying such an order This is what is called hajri in the mofussil The hajri is regarded as being a method which is applied to the Mangs, Ramoshis, habitual thieves and law-breakers. It is a matter no doubt of very great sentiment indeed, and necessarily, when a man of position and status in society is asked to observe this rule of hajri, not only the man himself but society in general and the public in general certainly consider it most humiliating, and no man with self-respect would care to obey such an order, he would rather go to jail In this way the jails are being filled There are no other offences at all If the records are examined, I think it will be found that a very large number of offences consist of disobeying orders like these What are the punishments ? The punishments are two years of rigorous imprisonment and large amounts of fine for the disobedience of such an order as this. I mean to point out that such hard cases create an impression in one's mind that Government is proceeding in a spirit of vindictiveness and humiliation If that is the impression that goes round in the country, it is impossible to have an atmosphere of peace and good-will where we can proceed to do anything of service to the country

Passing now from this aspect of the question to the other aspects, I may point out that there have been impressions created in other bodies and associations These are not the impressions of the party concerned, I mean the Congress Party, who are bent upon disobeying law But it is the considered opinion of various other parties, associations or bodies, for instance, the Liberal Federation, the Western India National Liberal Association, the Welfare of India League and so many other bodies which have passed resolutions, which I believe are in the possession of Government They go to show the widespread general feeling in the country or in the province and that is sufficient to give them an idea as to how the atmosphere is at present The Council of the Liberal Federation which met at Allahabad on the 13th of last month have passed resolutions saying that in the absence of the policy such as has been outlined above—they say the things that are necessary on some such lines as I have already indicated—it is becoming increasingly difficult for anybody or for any political party of Indians to continue to co-operate with Government. I only state this as an instance of a party which has behind it a long standing I submit, therefore, in these circumstances it is necessary to devise means by which an atmosphere of peace will be created. A situation of bitterness retarding the progress and making a settlement more difficult cannot be allowed to continue for ever. I am rather making these observations with a view to point out that the gulf is made more and more wide and unbridgeable between the people and the Government I am afraid that it will make the task of building a future constitution difficult, if not impossible Sooner or later the new constitution will have to be inaugurated and since it is to be a democratic constitution, all other procedure of election and so on will have to be proceeded with. For all this, is not a suitable condition of things necessary? Unless such settled state of affairs is established, it will be impossible to do anything in way of carrying on the administration, even if you do get provincial autonomy Conciliation will have to be the method to be used, if not to-day, to-morrow, if not to-morrow, day after to-morrow, or at some future date But, unless some method of conciliation or reconciliation is adopted, I do not think that it will be possible to carry on the administration of this country My point is therefore the sooner the causes for the bitterness are eliminated the better it will be

Now, I have to submit, Sir, one more point, before I conclude The proposal which I have made in the resolution is that a conference should be convened of leaders of various political parties [An Honourable Member: For the presidency?] I am confining myself to the bounds of this presidency As a matter of fact, if this Government does something which will be reasonably possible, it can then forward its own proposals to the higher Government, but for the present it must be our own Government which must make up its mind to proceed in a certain way Therefore I am saying if this proposal materialises and if any conference is called, my further submission is that the conference may result in making certain useful suggestions by which the present deadlock may be solved It may be asked whether the Congress party would be willing or ready to come to this conference My answer to that is that that party is not at present available The leaders of that party, most of them, are in jail We cannot know their mind I am quite conscious that it is not possible to know their minds But my point is that at least Government knows its mind If Government says "no compromise", then there is an end of that Compromise means give and take I do not mean to say that one party must go down My point is that, when there is a course and when we have proceeded to a certain stage in that course, then there arises the possibility of the two parties coming together. If by any means we have any indication of the mind of the Government then it is for the Government to find ways and means in consultation with such people as will be available by which a settlement of this question may be rendered possible I am very sorry to see that this civil disobedience movement was launched on an issue which really was not before the country—whether the peasantry is harassed to pay land revenue I do think that it was not an important issue When you have provincial autonomy, you will have the revenue administration in your own hands and you can give such redress to the people who may be oppressed. The real question is that of getting that power in your own hand For this purpose, we should consider the broad issue, and even from the point of view of Government, if they think that they can assist in this matter, it will certainly be a good reason to think that there will be a compromise forthcoming Before concluding, I may refer to the words of Lord Irwin, our late Viceroy He said

"All Governments ultimately rest upon consent and in the great problem of India they must apply themselves to the fact that law must be the fundamental basis of all society We will be doing a disservice to India if we allowed the basis of that society to be undermined and subverted That obviously imposes on us a double policy during the present unhappy situation in India, on the one hand of maintaining the stability of the State, . "

That has been done in the interest of law and order

" and on the other hand, of recognising that force by itself never solved any political problem

All that force can do is to create a position in affairs in which reason, argument, persuasion and conciliation will have no chance of finding the solution we seek."

I therefore do appeal to Government to seek the means by which it may be made possible to know the minds of others who are in jail and if by such mutual ascertainment it is possible to bring about a peaceful atmosphere, even at this late stage,—I should say it will not be too late as it is only 10 weeks as I said It is not yet too late Perhaps the other side may have learnt something by this time With the object that an attempt may be made to consider this question, I have moved this motion, which I hope will find support from all sides of the House.

Question proposed

The Honourable Mr G A THOMAS Mr President, I am rising very early in this debate because I think it may shorten and will facilitate the discussion if I endeavour to show to the House the spirit in which Government and Government officials have been putting into operation the provisions of the Ordinances I am aware that by speaking now I shall deprive myself of an opportunity of replying to any specific charges of maladministration of the Ordinances that may be recited in the course of the debate One of my objects, however, is to urge subsequent speakers on the opposite side of the House not to recite such charges. I hope the general feeling of the House is that this discussion should be maintained at the high level, upon which the honourable mover has placed it, and should be kept as free as possible from accusations and recriminations on either side I may at a later stage in my remarks quote a few cases to illustrate some of the difficulties which Government have had to encounter in giving effect to the Ordinances, but I shall avoid all reference to names and shall not take this opportunity, tempting though it is, to rebut specific allegations of harshness that have been brought against officials entrusted with the onerous duties of putting the Ordinances into operation

During the course of the general discussion of the budget, a few members of the opposition did mention cases in which, according to the information available to them, an unnecessary amount of severity had been displayed by Government officials I have investigated those cases and am in a position completely to refute those allegations I do not, however, propose to do this, as I feel that such action on my part might ruffle the peaceful atmosphere in which I am confident that every member of this House desires the present debate to proceed

The object of the honourable mover is, as I understand it, not to make an attack upon Government and their officers for deliberately working the ordinances with lack of restraint and consideration but to prepare the way for a discussion with His Excellency, if he consents to meet a deputation of the leaders of this House, as to the ways and means by which the present unfortunate political situation can be brought to an end and a fitting atmosphere created for the introduction at the earliest possible date of the Reforms which will give this country her rightful place in the comity of Nations

I am not going to discuss the necessity for the promulgation of the ordinances They have not been promulgated by this Government but by the Government of India with, however, I must add, the fullest approval and support of this Government I would invite the attention of those who question the necessity of the ordinances to the debate on the subject in the Legislative Assembly in the month of January and to the speech of His Excellency the Governor of Bombay on the opening day of this session Whatever view one may take of government by ordinance or of the necessity or duration of these particular ordinances, one thing is clear and that is that for the time being they form part of the ordinary law of the presidency All that this Government is now concerned with is the manner in which effect has been given to them, and I shall, therefore, confine my remarks almost exclusively to this aspect

My endeavour will be to satisfy this House that the ordinances have been operated in this presidency with the greatest possible measure of humanity and moderation [Honourable Members Hear, hear] It may be thought that some of the steps taken by Government have been severe, and I do not deny that The primary duty of Government is to govern and it is my duty as Home Member to see that law and order is preserved Although Government have always tried to temper severity with justice, they cannot in any circumstances relax even the harshest conditions that they may have found it necessary to impose

under the ordinances if they consider them to be essential both for the maintenance and restoration of law and order in this presidency To the misguided Government have shown both lenience and clemency, but to the determined law-breaker no mercy can be shown now or at any time I do not suppose, however, that this House will be satisfied with mere pious expressions and general observations from me It wishes me to take it into my confidence, and this I propose to do I shall, therefore, to some extent depart from precedent and quote such extracts as are relevant from the various instructions that have been issued by Government from time to time to their officers for the working of the ordinances I hope and believe that this procedure will convince the House that whilst Government have omitted to take no step by which full advantage of the main provisions of the ordinances for dealing with the present subversive movement can be taken, they have shown no vindictiveness and no undue harshness towards any one Before proceeding, however, to quote from these instructions to officers, I would like to refer the House to certain announcements that have been made by His Excellency the Governor and the Government of Bombay and published in the Press Firstly, I would draw attention to His Excellency's original message to the people of this presidency, of which the latter half runs as follows

"While I and my Government have considered it desirable to arm ourselves with special powers those powers will be used solely for the purpose of combating the attempt which has been made by Congress to hinder the machinery of Government and to interfere with the rights of the people No law abiding citizen has anything to fear from the ordinances that have been issued" On the contrary, the ordinances will assist Government to protect law abiding citizens in the pursuit of their lawful activities and usual avocations We cannot, however, tolerate open or secret help to persons or bodies whose objects are avowedly unlawful and have been so declared It is the duty of all law-abiding citizens to abstain from participating in or giving any encouragement direct or indirect to the programme of civil disobedience with which Congress has now identified itself"

That is from His Excellency's original message From this I pass on to a Press Note of February 8th and quote the following extracts from it

"The object of section 3 of the Emergency Powers Ordinance"—

that is, the power to detain

"is to protect the public from the machinations of persons known to be engaged in the furtherance of the present anti-Government civil disobedience movement. It is not intended to be used, nor has it been used, for the purpose of making indiscriminate arrests of innocent people. Persons arrested under this section who have given an undertaking to abstain from unlawful activities in future have not been detained

"Section 4 of the Emergency Powers Ordinance, No II, is, to some extent, complementary to section 3 It gives powers to the Local Government and to all District Magistrates, to whom alone these powers have been delegated by the Government of Bombay, to control the conduct and movements of a person when there are reasonable grounds for believing that such person has acted, is acting or is about to act, in a manner prejudicial to the public safety or peace or in furtherance of a movement prejudicial to the public safety or peace This control is exercised by serving an order upon a person in such terms as will ensure that the individual ceases to be a danger to the public and also enables Government to be satisfied that the order is being observed

"Severe restrictions have been imposed under this section only upon such persons as have refused to undertake to abstain from future unlawful activities, whose movements must, therefore, be definitely restricted

[Mr G A Thomas]

"Government have armed themselves with full powers to give effect both to the Ordinances and to the Criminal Law Amendment Act, but these powers have been used only to the extent justified by the situation No loyal and law abiding subject of the King Emperor has the slightest need to fear that they will be used against him"

Now, as regards the first of these extracts, I wish to disabuse people of the idea, to which I have occasionally heard expression given, that persons are arrested and detained under this section 3 of the Emergency Powers Ordinance on mere suspicion only This is not a fact Persons are not arrested on mere suspicion They are only arrested on their past record There are many people walking the streets of Bombay and other big cities of this presidency today who are objects of suspicion,—I would not say that of any one in this House [Laughter] They have not, however, been arrested, and they will not be arrested until there is a reason for doing so, and the reason must be that there is sufficient evidence that they are engaged in unlawful activities Moreover, although the actual arrest may be made by an officer not below the rank of Sub-Inspector of Police, it is the District Magistrate and the District Magistrate alone who is empowered to order the arrest One case only—there may be others—but one case only has come to the notice of Government in which an officer below the rank of District Magistrate made such an arrest without the express orders of the District Magistrate, and that officer was duly cautioned No other such cases have come to the notice of Government As regards the second extract, that is, the one dealing with orders under section 4, I must point out that it is only the District Magistrate or the Commissioner of Police, Bombay, that can issue an order under section 4 It is absolutely wrong to think, as so many seem to think, that Government have placed such a weapon in the hands of subordinate officers.

Next I would invite the attention of the honourable House to a portion of the reply made by His Excellency to a deputation from the Welfare of India League He said

"In this connection,"

(that is, in connection with orders to report to the police)

"I draw your attention to the fact that, except where special reasons make this precaution necessary, an order to report daily at a police station is not ordinarily imposed upon any person who is willing to give a satisfactory undertaking that he will take no further part in the civil disobedience movement When people refuse to give such an undertaking it is necessary for Government to take some action to prevent their assisting the movement in future"

Again, in speaking to a meeting of representative business men, His Excellency said

"I also understand that section 3, Emergency Powers Ordinance"—

(that is, the power to detain)

"has caused some apprehension This, I think, must be due to failure to realise that this section is intended to be not punitive but preventive in effect Power therefore has been given to those officers taking action under this section to release people against whom they are proceeding on their giving adequate and satisfactory security that they will not take further part in any subversive activity You will no doubt have noticed that some people have already been released under these provisions in Bombay City and elsewhere."

[Mr G A Thomas]

Finally, let me quote two extracts from His Excellency's reply to the Western India National Liberal Association. The first is "Government have no reason to believe that any of their officers will take advantage of their powers under section 3, Emergency Powers Ordinance, to satisfy personal spite It may be noted that persons arrested under this section are not detained if they can satisfy the officers concerned that they will take no part in the civil disobedience movement"

The second extract is

"The general practice is to ask persons against whom orders under section 4 of the Emergency Powers Ordinance are issued whether they will undertake not to engage in unlawful activities It is only if they refuse to give such an undertaking that orders are passed against them to report to the police In the case of such refusal it is obvious that their movements have to be restricted and suitable orders have to be passed against them accordingly"

I hope this House will be satisfied from these assurances by His Excellency that His Excellency's Government have shown that whilst they are resolved to take the firmest possible action under certain provisions of the ordinances, they do at the same time desire not to administer them with any undue severity or in any spirit of vindictiveness

I shall now supplement these assurances, all of which have been published in the Press and presumably read by honourable members of this House, with certain relevant extracts from instructions which Government have issued to their officers But before doing that, I would like to mention one or two public references that have been made to the moderation with which the Government of Bombay have exercised their powers Two of these occurred in the debate in the Legislative Assembly on the Ordinances Sir Hugh Cocke said that in Bombay there had been no great protest against the ordinances Sir Cowasji Jehangir went further and said "I admit in Bombay City the powers have been used with consideration and great judgment" These utterances, coming as they do from prominent public men, are not without their significance and they are confirmed by many sections of the Press, from one of which I will quote the following words

"We must say that if there is any Government among all the Provincial Governments in India that has imbibed the greatest amount of wisdom from the satyagraha struggle of the last year, it is the Government of Bombay The admirable behaviour of the Bombay City Police during this year's struggle bears testimony to this fact and the latest press note issued by Government indicates that the Government of Bombay are alive to the effects which the behaviour of their officers produces on the minds of the people."

This extract is not from the Times of India, which has sometimes been accused of pro-Government leanings, it is from the Hindustan and Praja Mitra, which has never been so accused.

I will now give some extracts from instructions that have from time to time been issued by Government on sections 3 and 4 of the Emergency Powers Ordinance The first of these sections deals with arrests of persons who there is reason to believe have been, are or are likely to be participating in unlawful activities. As regards this section the original instructions were as follows:

"The power conferred by the notification will be general, but it is intended that this should be used in the first instance only against persons on the lists approved by Government in consultation with District Magistrates. The District Magistrate may, however, at any time use his discretion in arresting under this section a person not included in the list without a previous reference to Government, if he considers that strong and urgent reasons exist."

I hope this extract will satisfy the House that indiscriminate powers of arrests have not been given by Government. It is only the District Magistrate that can issue orders for such arrests, and except when there are special and urgent reasons to the contrary, Government themselves direct what persons should be arrested. All original arrests were directed by Government themselves.

Again:

"District Magistrates may use their discretion in arresting persons if they judge immediate detention to be necessary, but where circumstances permit, the service of an appropriate order under section 4 (1) will often prove even more effective."

This shows that it has been and it is the policy of Government to make use of section 3 only as an emergency measure.

I now come to section 4 of the same ordinance, under which Government have power to control the residence and movements of persons participating in unlawful activities and to regulate their conduct. The honourable mover, I think, quoted this section in full. The following instructions have been issued:

"In the case of persons whose arrest is not considered necessary, some kind of order should ordinarily be served in order to ensure that such persons do not use their freedom to continue supporting or organising the movement. Where it is clear that the person is prepared to sever himself entirely from the movement the order may be in general terms. In other cases specific directions can be added according to individual needs, but restrictions of a penal or quasi penal character should not be imposed on persons who will not be likely to disregard a general order."

And again, a further extract:

"Government have noticed that in a good many cases where copies of orders served on persons under section 4 (1) of Ordinance II have been received, one of the directions included has been an order to report periodically to the police. It is recognised that such a direction will often be justified, e g, to enable the police to check the presence of a person in a particular place to which his movements have been restricted. It may also be appropriate in some cases where it is certain that whatever directions are imposed the person concerned will not be deterred from engaging in unlawful activities either openly or secretly. But except where there is some definite purpose to be served by such an order Government do not desire it to be imposed as a matter of routine, particularly in cases where the person concerned would be likely to abide by a more general order requiring him to refrain from unlawful activities. In doubtful cases the test will often be whether the person is prepared to give a written undertaking to that effect. Where the District Magistrate is satisfied that a milder type of order is likely to be effective and to be observed, there is no object to be gained in combining with it a condition which is generally regarded as involving a certain amount of humiliation. It is always open to District Magistrates to cancel a direction to report to the police in any case in which they do not consider it really necessary and similarly to impose such an order as a supplementary direction on any person whom there is reason to suspect of evasion of the orders already served on him."

These instructions bring out three important points to which I invite the special attention of the House. The first point is that Government recognise that it is some humiliation to have to report to the police The second point is that orders to report to the police are not imposed if there are reasons to believe that more general orders will be obeyed, and the third point is that a man can avoid the humiliation of reporting to the police by giving an undertaking that he will obey a more general order. Such being the facts, it may seem surprising that so many orders to report to the police are being imposed The reason is simply that persons participating in the movement as a rule will not give the necessary undertaking A refusal to give an undertaking is tantamount to the declaration of an intention to engage in further unlawful activities, and I think no one can justly accuse Government of harshness if they take the necessary steps to restrict such persons' movements

It may interest this House to hear an extract from a circular in this connection issued by a notorious Congress leader It runs

"If the order simply asks us not to help the civil disobedience we need not express disobedience by an open action immediately like holding public meetings and calling upon people to join civil disobedience, etc We must not be trapped thus by our enemies But our duty in that case will be to organise our forces and strengthen our finances"

Then follows a list of such activities in which congressmen are urged to engage This circular proves the necessity of some order restricting and watching the movements of persons participating in unlawful activities

There are alternatives to reporting to the police For example, Government can serve an order upon a man to leave his place of residence and not to return to it without permission This order has on a very few occasions been imposed, but as it inflicts a great hardship in that it involves a man breaking up his home and perhaps having his business or profession ruined, it is thought to be much harsher in its incidence than an order to report to the police once a day, which in no wise interferes with a man's following his lawful avocations Curious to say, a case recently came to my notice in which a man had been obeying an order to report to the police, but when he was given a further order not to leave his usual place of residence without permission he disobeyed it on the ground that it was a greater humiliation than reporting to the police

The House will also, I have no doubt, be interested to hear the contents of a letter recently addressed to His Excellency by one of its most distinguished members He wrote that in his opinion orders to remain in certain areas and report change of residence to the police and orders to report to the police between certain hours on a particular day were humiliating to any self-respecting person He therefore suggested in his letter that before such orders were issued the persons concerned should be given an opportunity of explaining any circumstances that may be against them in the possession of the authorities, so that it might be possible for the latter to abstain from issuing such orders after taking from them, if necessary, an undertaking that they will not take any part in the civil disobedience movement. This, he went on to say, would avoid any occasion for complaints that persons are asked to report to the police without any cause If, he wrote, after this any person is found acting in furtherance of the civil disobedience movement, he may be punished and dealt with according to law or ordinance I have quoted this letter as it reveals the fact that many right-minded and well-affected persons are genuinely of the opinion that the ordinances are being worked harshly and at the same time recognise that if a person is given an opportunity of undertaking not to participate further in the movement, he has only himself to blame for any action that Government may take, if he refuses to give such an undertaking

I think the extracts I have quoted from instructions issued by Government will convince the House that Government are giving full opportunities for such undertakings to be given One further extract—that will be the last which I shall quote—goes further still

"In cases where orders of a severely restrictive character have been served before release from jail custody or in other circumstances which preclude a personal interview (with the District Magistrate) it is desirable that a subsequent opportunity should be taken of ascertaining the attitude and intentions of the persons concerned in order to decide whether any restrictions can safely be relaxed District Magistrates may use their discretion whether to accept an oral or a written undertaking from persons who profess their willingness to sever themselves from the civil disobedience movement"

I contend that moderation and consideration can go no further It must be remembered that the Congress had declared war upon Government It was, therefore, necessary for Government to take all measures necessary to take up this challenge for the maintenance of law and order and in the interests of public safety and of the police No one need take part in this war against Government. No one taking part in it has a right to expect quarter Government have given and will continue to give sufficient opportunity to any one willing to dissociate himself from the movement to do so, but I fail to see how any one who refuses to avail himself of that opportunity has any right to complain of severity or harshness on the part of Government War is not made with gloves on.

I am fully aware, Sir, that many honourable members may say "We recognise that Government have done all in their power to work the ordinances with moderation, but their officers have shown less restraint". It may be—I hope not—that subsequent speakers will quote instances in support of such a contention I sincerely hope that they will not do so, partly because, as I said just now, and as the honourable mover said in his speech, we do not wish to import a note of recrimination into this debate, and partly because it is obvious that I cannot reply to any ex-parte allegation against any individual officer without making a careful enquiry If any honourable member had any legitimate complaint to make—and again I am following in the footsteps of the honourable mover—I submit that he should have brought it to the notice of the District Magistrate concerned or of Government, or both, at once, the moment it occurred, instead of bottling it up and uncorking the bottle on the floor of this House.

[Mr G A Thomas]

I am not going to suggest that there has never been a single cause of complaint To any instructions that have been issued, however carefully they may be worded, there must occasionally be different interpretations by different officers "Quot homines, tot sententiae" That is to say, there are as many opinions as there are men Mistakes must sometimes be made either from excess of zeal or excess of caution To some officers perhaps the curb must now and again be applied, to others the spur But my contention is that the ordinances and action taken under the ordinances must not be judged by mistakes that may be made They should rather be judged by the mistakes that are not made, When we reflect that, including Bombay City, there are 29 districts and 58 District Magistrates and District Superintendents of Police (I am including the Commissioner of Police, Bombay,) it is, in my opinion, astonishing that so few cases of excess of zeal on the part of Government officers administering the ordinances have come to light even in the extremist sections of the press I may be prejudiced, but I hope this House will give me credit for honesty and veracity, and I say deliberately that I am proud of the manner in which executive officers serving under me have done their duty,—both Europeans and Indians And I say Indians particularly because their task has been more difficult The task of all these officers has been difficult They have to steer between the Scylla of severity and the Charybdis of softness, and there is not a single one of them that has not steered a safe course Their position is in many ways far more difficult than that of Government itself It is a comparatively easy matter to lay down a policy, it is often superlatively difficult to give effect to it and to translate it into executive action

I gladly take this opportunity, therefore, to give public expression to my deep appreciation of the magnificent work that is being done by the district officers in the preservation of public safety, and I have not the least hesitation in saying that it is entirely due to their devotion to duty, their unremitting labours and their conspicuous self-restraint that this Presidency at the present moment is in a vastly more peaceful condition than any one could have anticipated three months ago and that there are now unmistakable signs that the Congress menace has been scotched, if not yet finally killed

It is, I believe, a common impression that the ordinances have been used to imprison thousands and tens of thousands of innocent persons To the best of my belief, not a single innocent person has been imprisoned. If any such exist, it is open to them to declare their innocence and obtain release by giving a satisfactory undertaking It may interest the House to know the figures of convictions that have taken place since the inception of the present movement in this Presidency The number of convictions up to March 1st was 5,165 Of these, 1,562, or 30 per cent only, were under the Ordinances and the remainder were under the ordinary laws of the land Taking the population of this Presidency as 21 millions, the number of convictions during the first two months of the movement was only ·02 per cent of the population, that is, less than 1 in 4,000

That, Sir, is all I have to say in the matter of the ordinances

Before I sit down, I would like to make a few observations on the address that has been moved by the honourable member for the University It is not the intention of the Government benches to vote on this motion, although it has their sympathy But what I wish to emphasise very strongly is the absolute necessity of submitting to His Excellency, if he is pleased to accord the desired interview to the party leaders, a definite concrete scheme of action If my honourable friends on the opposite benches and those on the non-official benches on this side of the House also will forgive me for delivering to them something in the nature of a short lecture, I must say that I do not think that any really useful purpose can be served by making complaints regarding the severity of the ordinances or Government action and by requesting that the ordinances should be removed and the action of Government modified I must repeat what has been so often said by so many people in so many places The ordinances have been issued to meet an abnormal situation deliberately brought into existence by the ill-wishers of Government So long as that abnormal situation exists, and not a day longer, will the ordinances remain as a temporary part of the law of the country If there is a genuine desire on the part of the elected members of this House, as there obviously is, and it is a desire, I may add, that is shared to an equal degree by every member of Government, that the ordinances should be removed, then I submit it is the clear and bounden duty of every member of this honourable House to do his utmost to remove that abnormal situation and create in this Presidency the peaceful atmosphere that is imperatively necessary for the successful introduction of the reforms and a transfer of power from what is called the bureaucracy to the elected representatives of the people

I am not going to ask this House to co-operate with Government I am not greatly enamoured of the word "co-operation" unless it is freely offered In some ways I prefer an active and open enemy to an inactive and unwilling co-operator In my opinion the leaders of the various parties represented in this House can do much better by organising themselves to bring about the peaceful atmosphere, to which I have referred, independently of Government, than by merely offering co-operation We have a common goal, namely, the restoration of normal conditions and the early introduction of reforms Government and the public can proceed along different paths towards this common goal The greatest need at the present time is to prepare the way for the coming of the new constitution Ordinances are a side-track and must not be drawn like a red herring across the broad path that leads to the goal in view What is wanted is propaganda, propaganda and more propaganda Government and their officers are doing what they can in this direction, but their range is necessarily limited They can and do supply authenticated information to the press, and they are issuing many leaflets for the instruction of the public But it must be remembered that the greater part of the press is not well disposed towards Government, so that the readers of newspapers are constantly being misled by their contents and are kept in ignorance of the steps that are being taken towards the realisation of Indian ambitions Leaflets do good but do not reach far enough To the illiterate they are useless and even to those that can read they are often unintelligible What is required is personal contact Every opportunity is taken by the touring officers of Government to get into personal contact with the people Durbars and meetings are being held and no other opportunity is lost of explaining to the people what the reforms will bring to them and what progress is being made towards their introduction In many places members of the public have come forward to speak on behalf of Government at meetings organised by Government officials In several places, prominent members of the public have themselves organised such meetings and given expression to their loyalty, but there is not nearly enough of this There should, I suggest, be some central unofficial organisation for making the true position known to the people Every elected member of this House has a constituency Why cannot every elected member make himself responsible for educating the minds of his electors and for creating a favourable atmosphere for the introduction of the reforms ? Once that atmosphere is created, the ordinances will automatically disappear, and I for one will welcome their disappearance. I get no pleasure out of them Lip service is of no avail, action is required, and it is to the party leaders that one looks for action Are they prepared to take it ? Is it too much for me to suggest that if a deputation of party leaders is given an interview by His Excellency that they will go to him with definite proposals for the organisation of a Loyalty League or a Peace Party, call it what you will, with the express object of explaining to the people what is actually being done at the present time for the speedy introduction of reforms and urging them to give their whole-hearted support to Government during the brief interval that remains ? India stands to-day on the threshold of her birthright The door is wide open to the promised land beyond Will the party leaders be real leaders ? Will they lead the way through that open door and conduct their followers to peace, contentment and freedom unshackled by the chains of Congress ? [Applause]

Mr SHAIKH ABDUL MAJID (Karachi District) Sir, may I at this stage request permission to incorporate one or two lines in the address that has been proposed ?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT By way of an amendment to the address ?

Mr. SHAIKH ABDUL MAJID. Not by way of an amendment but just a few words——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT That should have been submitted long before this Will the honourable member let me know what they are ?

Mr SHAIKH ABDUL MAJID I want to add, after the word "atmosphere" the words "on the lines suggested and the declaration of the Premier at the conclusion of the Round Table Conference coupled with the Minorities Pact"

The Honourable the PRESIDENT I do not think I would allow that

Mr G L WINTERBOTHAM (Bombay Chamber of Commerce) Sir, if you are discussing the possibility of a verbal amendment, which may make the address more acceptable to the House, I suggest to the honourable the mover that instead of the words "leaders of various parties in the Province" he might use the words "leaders of various parties in this House" There is obviously very great difference between the two——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT I think that would limit the scope of the motion The honourable the mover intends that it should be leaders of the parties in the province

Rao Bahadur G K CHITALE (Ahmednagar District) Sir, I feel considerably embarrassed by the words of the address and the two speeches that have been delivered in this House so far, and if I were to sum up the discussion so far, it might be done in this way, namely, that the Bombay Presidency being the western Presidency, "All is quiet on the western front" Not only all is quiet, because the war is on and the war is between the mighty Government represented in a way by the mighty arms of the ordinances on the one hand and the people who are not before us to defend themselves I believe that is an embarrassment which I feel and which the House must feel It is all very well to indulge in generalisations, but when the mental attitude of the highest officer in whose hands the destinies of this Empire rest is such that he starts with the mental attitude of "Dogs bark and still the caravan passes on," if that is the mental attitude which governs the whole action of the Secretary of State and the Government of India and the subordinate power represented by the local Government, what shall I say on the floor of this House and what shall I expect by the passing of this motion which asks in the words of the Honourable the Home Member to go upon bended knees and to ask for certain favours however uncertain in effect ? Who are we ? In fact, we are the butterflies and not the toad that feels the teeth of the harrow, but I am appealing to those others who have come here and who want as a matter of fact to put before this House the agonies of those people who are behind the bars I do not think for a moment that the mighty Government, the brutal nature of which is manifested by ordinances, is in a mood to listen There must be at least the mood, there must be the mental attitude, in fact the Government benches are not even eager to hear the other side, as many of them are leaving in batches This is the House in which the opposition is entitled to speak out their minds in a freer atmosphere in the boldest manner they can in order that these views may be considered by the powers that be

The Honourable the PRESIDENT Did the honourable member use the word brutal ?

Rao Bahadur G K CHITALE In the form of Ordinances, I did

The Honourable the PRESIDENT That is a strong word

Rao Bahadur G K CHITALE That is a parliamentary word, I think I mentioned the brutal nature of it I coupled it with the Ordinances I might have used the word "draconian" There are other words which have the same meaning, but I thought they may not be understood, and this word may be easily understood

The point of view that I wish to put forward before this House is this : before that appeal is made to this House for taking action on the advice which has been so sweetly tendered by the Honourable the Home Member, at least the leaders of the parties, whoever they may be, must be assured of the mental attitude, of the frame of mind of those whom we have to approach to suggest a solution of our present difficulties Throughout the address of the Honourable the Home Member we come across phrases which leave on our minds an impression that there is no mellowing influence in his heart, phrases which show the ire of the steel-frame. Their mental attitude is to be gauged by the bending knees which they expect

What shall I say with respect to this motion before the House ? It is said, and very well said, and perhaps the Honourable the Home Member is right in saying, that, after all, we have touched an infinitesimally small number, which does not count, which need not count As there is war, it does not matter if we administer the Ordinances and give sentences disproportionate to the nature of the offences That from his point of view does not matter a bit After all, this is war, and the combatants must take the consequences of their own action The Honourable the Home Member styles them law-breakers, as if to inspire terror in our minds, law-breakers as if they had committed murders, dacoities and robberies, requiring punishment of two years' imprisonment and a fine of Rs 500 or Rs 1,000 and more And for what offences are these punishments awarded? In a raging and heart-rending war, for not reporting themselves to the police! If the civilised nations existing on the face of this earth do come to know the nature of the sentences, which are altogether dispro portionate to the offences, we do know that civilised nations all over the world will think that such sentences are brutal, which are inflicted for a nominal or technical offence of not reporting to the police, apart from the fact whether even a technical offence is or is not made out. That is one phase of it.

Another phase of it is that no doubt we have this fact, that we have not got those scenes, those ugly scenes which have disfigured our public places last year But apart from that fact, though it may be that we have only a small number in prison so far, that is because the general public do feel convinced that the true spirit of nationalism is intended to be killed by the letter and the spirit of these Ordinances, and so long as the authorities cannot be persuaded to accept a contrary view, I say it is futile for anybody to come forward and say that a peaceful atmosphere can be created in a moment, as if it were by a magic wand.

So far as the Honourable the Home Member's speech is concerned, he wants conciliation, but conciliation on his own terms, after killing the whole nationalistic spirit in the body politic of the people who are aspiring for higher rights Shall I be right in assuming that those people who were in the front rank, who were following their peaceful avocations, such as pleaders, doctors, hard-headed business people, presidents, vice-presidents and members of municipalities and local boards are so foolish that they are trying to go to prison for the mere fun of the thing ? Shall I be right in assuming that these people who are now behind the bars are actuated by the meanest possible motives ? And in order to obtain, what ? I should think that no member of this House would ever think that these people, who are now courting imprisonment by way of protest, are at all actuated by selfish motives, which may be lying in the bosoms of those other people I am sure, Sir, they are only actuated by only one factor, which is at the back of the minds of all politically-minded classes, and it is this, that though it is assumed that the Round Table Conference methods are going to give us our promised land, they refuse to believe that any such serious thing is ever meant by the constitution which is being forged It is perfectly possible to take that view If we care to look into the Round Table Conference proceedings, if we care to see what was said just about the end of it, if we care to see also the circumstances which manifested themselves in those proceedings, I should think that there s plenty of room for not believing or putting the strongest possible faith in the Round Table Conference method To give an instance, one of the main factors, on which the self-respect of a nation which wants Home Rule depends, is the power of defence No doubt certain constitutional phases of that question were considered at the Round Table Conference, but shall I be far wrong if I were to say that the main question and discussion were postponed ? Take another instance The Princes were willing to come into the Federation at the first Round Table Conference, but at the second Conference, they were as a matter of fact very diffident about it at the close of the second Conference, and if we, the politically-minded classes do say that certain influences in Britain and in India were at the back of it, shall we be wrong ?

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN I rise to a point of order Is the honourable member right in bringing into this discussion the Princes, who are not represented in this House ?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT No Apart from that, it appears to me that now the honourable member is digressing beyond the scope of the motion

Rao Bahadur G K CHITALE If that is the ruling of the Chair, I will bow to it I thought that was very necessary, because I wish to point out in this House, which is the only place where I can do it perhaps with safety [Laughter] the mental attitude which is responsible for sending these good men to prison

The Honourable the PRESIDENT This is not the occasion to go so far into those wider questions

Rao Bahadur G K CHITALE Why should the Government be so ticklish about this? They are facts If I refer to the various Committees which are going round the country now, I think I shall be perfectly right, because that matter was referred to by the honourable member The main point which I wanted to make is that there is not the right mental attitude However, as I am digressing, I will take the hint I would then point out that even with regard to the work which is being done at present by the Franchise Committee, disclosures have been made about the way in which the committee is being packed in a way to ascertain only certain views Is not that itself an object lesson to us? Certain circulars have now been published in which the trades union people were asked to give evidence—the way in which the printed questionnaire was issued with the replies almost ready If that is the way in which the work of the Franchise Committee is going to be accomplished, shall we be far wrong if we do not put faith in this kind of work and if we feel hopeless about the result, which stands at the root of all our ambitions The power is no doubt to be transferred, the British people have certainly made up their minds to part with that power But that power, in essence, must be transferred to the people, not to certain other interests which form the minority, and so far as the outer world is concerned, they do believe that the object is not to transfer the power to the people, whose in fact it is, but to small and influential minorities As a result of these labours, Government will be——

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN Is all this relevant, Sir?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT I do not think that this really concerns the motion before the House I pointed it out to the honourable member, and I do not think I need point it out again to an honourable member of his experience I do hope he will limit himself to the motion before the House

Rao Bahadur G K CHITALE Then what is relevant? To sing praises in the way in which the motion wants us to do? If I cannot usefully serve the purpose, what is the use of continuing my speech? It is much better and bolder to oppose the motion tooth and nail

Sir SHAH NAWAZ BHUTTO (Larkana District) Sir, after listening to the three speeches of the honourable members who spoke before me, I think there is very little left, by avoiding repetition, to say on the matter Well, Sir, I have tried my very best to understand the object of the motion moved by my honourable friend, but I must admit that I have not been able to follow it.

[Sir Shah Nawaz Bhutto]

At least I believe that it is a superfluous resolution which serves absolutely no useful purpose Of course, apparently as it stands there could be no two opinions inside or outside the House to achieve this object Who will not desire to restore peace and order in our own country? Surely even with the party which is non-co-operating with us we sympathise in their sufferings These miseries are not only confined to the extremist party but by their action the masses, millions and millions, are suffering far more miseries than even the non-co-operating party. Therefore, the universal anxiety is to restore peace and order in the country I would rather have been particularly grateful to the honourable mover, if he had suggested some practical ways to achieve that object Our experience in the past has been that all sorts of efforts have been made, greater heads, wiser brains and people with greater influence, have all tried their very best, including Government Not only here in India but even at a distance of 7,500 miles away, we did our very best to convince the extremist party of what we people at least and even the great moderate leader of the people considered to be in the interest of India itself I do not want to say whether their point of view was right or wrong At least so far as this side of the House, the co-operating side of the legislature, is concerned, we feel and believe that unfortunately they had adopted a wrong attitude and they have bent their minds towards a destructive programme

Rao Bahadur G K CHITALE Is that in order?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT That is in order [Laughter]

Sir SHAH NAWAZ BHUTTO Of course, nobody appreciates rule by Ordinance, much less I believe Government themselves But my honourable friend has not made suggestions how to maintain law and order or how to provide security of freedom of action to individuals We have had enough experience of Lord Irwin's Government, when Government tried to play a duel of beggar and government What was the consequence? Absolute chaos in the country Now, leniency, reconciliation and all other possible methods and efforts have failed They are no good whatsoever At the same time, the great majority of people who felt that they had a real genuine grievance against Government thought that Government had ceased to exist People had no protection In some parts of my country, Sind, it was not only that Government ceased to protect people but even people were not allowed to protect themselves Things went so bad that even friends of Government got disgusted, and those who believed in constitutional progress ceased to offer their co-operation The object of Congress is to be master in their own country and manage their own affairs and that the power should be transferred to the people That is what we all want We want that Indians should control their affairs, to the extent to which they are capable to manage and that no one particular class should dominate That is the very thing What is the object of the minority pact? To offer them security and make them feel that they are part and parcel and have equal claim and opportunity to feel that it is their Government as much as that of majority community The chief of the extremist party, (the Congress), ignored it absolutely He would accept Sikh representation—they are not even one per cent of the population in India—but he would take no notice of the depressed classes He would come to placate the Mussalmans, he was prepared to do anything for them, he was prepared to give a blank cheque to us if we keep out of the pact and leave other minorities to look after themselves.

Rao Bahadur G K CHITALE Is it in order ?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT The honourable member is now digressing

Sir SHAH NAWAZ BHUTTO If at all we want the transfer of power it is in the name of India and for all Indians and for the benefit of India Under these circumstances, the past experience of the conferences is that, whenever they were tried, they proved a failure Unless the honourable mover suggests some practical ways, means and methods, unless he has got any gesture outside the House that by opening negotiations, our extremist friends will come round to negotiate,—I do not think any one of us will lag behind and much less Government who are more anxious than many of us—or unless the honourable mover himself would like his name to be added to those great people who have tried to bring about a reconciliation and failed, I do not think any purpose would be achieved at all

Mr G L WINTERBOTHAM (Bombay Chamber of Commerce) Mr President, Sir, in view of the motion which has been moved, it seems to me that an opportunity has been given which must be availed of by every section of the House to state quite clearly how they stand in present conditions in this presidency We on these benches, a small proportion of the House, stand for full responsible Government, with, of course, necessary safeguards, at the earliest practicable date We are the first to recognise that the present system of Government is played out. Government for the past so many years has rested on the basis of authority, the ultimate authority of the British Parliament Times and conditions have changed and we are now on the eve of a new era, when the basis of Government will be the will of the people Now, Sir, the change from one basis of Government to another cannot be made abruptly. There must be time to work out the essential details in the absence of which the new system will not function No one is in a better position to realise the extent of the difficulties in working out the details than those honourable members of this House who have been working on the Franchise Committee In their behalf, though I am perfectly certain that they will speak for themselves at a later stage, I would like to dissociate myself and those other honourable members of that committee from the insinuation made by my honourable friend from Ahmednagar (Rao Bahadur Chitale) that the aim and desire of the Franchise Committee is to benefit in the end only a section of the people of India I ask the honourable mover of the motion himself to refute this insinuation, when he gets the opportunity of replying to the debate It is a grossly unfair charge which should never have been brought on the floor of the House, especially by a member who has no means of knowing what happens in the proceedings of the committee, except the reports in the press

And, Sir, granted that the present system of Government is played out, the present authority is the de facto Government until something better can be substituted, and as I view it, it is the particular duty of those who are most anxious for the institution of the new Government at the earliest possible date, to support the old Government until the time of the transfer of power The position would be different if there remained any doubt in the minds of reasonable people as to the intentions of the present authority to grant the transfer of power But it has been made abundantly plain that the British people speaking through the Parliament are definitely in earnest, and we on these benches at any rate, whatever the honourable member from Ahmednagar (Rao Bahadur Chitale) may say, are convinced that the British Parliament is committed to the establishment of self-government in India at the earliest possible date in the terms of the Prime Minister's recent speech in the Parliament as recorded in the White Paper

This being the position, there can logically be two parties only in the State to-day—those who support authority and those who seek to undermine and destroy it I would ask honourable members one perfectly plain and straight question Which of those two parties is best serving the country's interests ? Is it more for India's good to work in co-operation with the authority for the quickest possible transfer of power or to follow the path which leads to chaos and which will not only cause inevitable delay in the transfer of power but will leave a legacy of bitterness and disorder which will be the gravest handicap to the functioning of the new Government when it comes ? If honourable members provide the answer to this perfectly straight question, the issue will be greatly clarified

It is fashionable to-day to say that the ordinances create bitterness I do not believe that this attitude represents a square facing of the facts We none of us like rule by Ordinance The honourable member the Finance Secretary in the course of the budget debate said that it was no more possible to continue to carry on the administration on borrowings than to continue to rule for all time by ordinances It is obvious that government by ordinances can only be a temporary and emergency measure They must be regarded as a most unpalatable necessity, as emergency measures which established authority requires to deal with a situation which is none of their choice but is forced upon them In passing it is relevant to mention that government by ordinances is not at all unknown in free and self-governing countries If the honourable member from Ahmednagar is a student of up-to-date political affairs, he will know that in the Free State of Ireland there are ordinances even now in existence of unparalleled severity as compared with the ordinances promulgated by the Government of India

Rao Bahadur G K CHITALE: Not even a hundred have been imprisoned

Mr G L WINTERBOTHAM: I yield to none in my anxieties to see the need for the ordinances pass away at the earliest possible date, but I cannot honestly say that because I dislike the ordinances, the necessity for them does not exist. I believe myself that the Government of Bombay is making no more use of the ordinances than is necessary to secure to the average citizen the security of life and property to which he is entitled. But even if I believed otherwise, I could not honestly say that because I disapproved of the tactics of the leaders of my army it was therefore necessary for me to desert and join the other army. I believe that the other side is a powerful force for good or for evil in the life of the country. But if I am right in supposing that there is no honourable member present who approves of civil disobedience, then I can only conclude that the other side has either misjudged the minds of the people as a whole or is seeking to impose a course on the country which is not acceptable to the country as a whole.

This, then, is how we on these benches stand, and, in view of the motion which has been moved, I regard it as necessary to make our position plain. It is perfectly clear that honourable members of the same mind as the honourable member from Ahmednagar do not believe in the goodwill of the British Parliament, the Government of India or of any person. The only doubt which I feel is what the honourable member is doing here at all in that case, because surely honourable members come here to co-operate.

Rao Bahadur G K CHITALE: To co-operate with self-respect.

Mr G L WINTERBOTHAM: If it is the intention of this motion to strengthen the hands of Government, and if it is made clear that that is the intention in no uncertain words, we shall find no particular difficulty in supporting it. But I am bound to say that in view of what I understand to be the attitude of the honourable mover in connection with the very small adjustment in wording which I have suggested, I suspect that there must be other motives behind this motion than that of strengthening the hands of Government. In that case, it would be impossible for us on these benches to lend our support to it. I can only say, Sir, that we would support any motion the clearly expressed intention of which was on the lines clearly indicated in the last portion of the Honourable the Home Member's speech.

Mr. B S KAMAT: Mr President, I do not intend to import into this debate unnecessary heat if I can help it. But it is necessary for me on this occasion, in visualising the political situation of the day, to refer to two aspects of the question, namely, the ordinances and the progress which is being made with reference to the constitutional reform now under discussion.

[Mr B S Kamat]

With reference to the ordinances, I concede that at the beginning of this year, when probably the civil disobedience movement was revived, Government were forced to adopt certain methods to maintain law and order, of which the ordinances were a part I take it that the ordinances are a passing phase, a temporary arrangement, in the maintenance of authority, and will soon disappear But, Sir, when I concede that there was a necessity for ordinances at the beginning of this year, it is also my duty to analyse and see if Government in administering the ordinances have carried out their duty by paying regard to those canons of justice, humanity and moderation which are incumbent on every civilized government in its administration of law and order I am glad, Sir, that this morning the Honourable the Home Member has been good enough to place before this House a considered statement regarding the general policy maintained by Government in working certain provisions of the ordinances I wish the Government of Bombay had come forward with an announcement of this character much earlier, for, it need not be concealed that the general public during the last two months have been greatly in the dark with reference to the general policy of district officers and, for the matter of that, even of Government as a whole in regard to certain provisions of the ordinances, especially the question of parole and committing people to jail if they do not give a certain kind of undertaking The Honourable the Home Member has referred, in this connection, to one or two facts which are of a great deal of significance. He has assured the House that there has been no motive on the part of Government of humiliating people and that Government have never been vindictive, and have issued instructions to the district officers not to be vindictive in carrying out the elementary duty of maintaining law and order I welcome that statement on the floor of this House this morning But, Sir, as I have said, the instructions to officers and the general assurance given now about parole should have been made known to the public far earlier Even now, accepting this assurance, as I do, I have to ask the Honourable the Home Member whether he is prepared to go a bit further in order to convey to the general public the sincere desire of Government towards paving the way for a calm atmosphere in the country to do one or two things I am inclined to believe that at the end of these ten weeks of the administration of the ordinances, certain circumstances have changed, changed for the better from the Government point of view I believe that His Excellency the Viceroy of India in one of his statements has made it perfectly clear that the ordinances will remain in force only as far as circumstances require I for one think that it is time to take stock of these circumstances and to see whether they have not changed for the better. If on a consideration of the changed circumstances, Government are really in a mood to re-examine the position and to show further moderation, there are one or two proposals which I wish to make, especially as my honourable friend from Sind, Sir Shah Nawaz Bhutto, has asked us to make concrete proposals to Government I venture to think, Sir, that there are one or two ways in which Government can show that they are in a mood to revise their policy and the instructions issued by Government under section 4 of the ordinance The direction is this In order that a man who is considered to be a danger to the public should, as a preventive measure, be secured in jail, it is now open to any district officer to detain him in jail if he is only satisfied that he had acted in the past in a manner prejudicial to the public safety Now, it is perfectly true I admit that people who had taken part in the civil disobedience movement in the year 1930 should be considered to be a danger to public safety, and as it is, it is perfectly open to district magistrates to consider these people as undesirable and, therefore, as a preventive measure, to put them in jail Now, we know this has been tried for ten weeks Will not Government moderate their caution ? Is it necessary now, I ask, to work that section in the manner it has been so far worked, and consider those who had taken part in the civil disobedience movement in the year 1930 as persons dangerous to the public safety even to-day ? Is it not desirable to give such people locus pœnitentiae as a gesture of moderation and to issue instructions to the district magistrates not to raise a presumption against those who were involved in 1930 but to give such people first of all a notice, a warning, that they should not act in any undesirable manner in the present movement and if they disregard the warning then only to put them in jail ? I consider, Sir, this will be a real gesture showing that you are paving the way to secure a calm atmosphere, which my honourable friend the mover of this motion desires

The second direction to show further moderation is this It is about the parole The Honourable the Home Member assured the House that it was never the intention of Government to put into jail people who although they belong to the civil disobedience movement gave an assurance or an undertaking that they would not take part in that movement any further But, Sir, what is really objected to is the insistence on the giving of an undertaking with a threat of force behind it If instead of enforcing the giving of an undertaking Government would leave it to the good sense of such leaders to behave well in the future, or at best ask them not to take part in such activities in the future after they are once released from jail, I believe there are a good many prominent men in the civil disobedience movement who will observe good behaviour What they resist is the compulsory written undertaking to do so Sir, it is open to Government to issue revised instructions to their officers that persons who have come out after serving two months of imprisonment should not be asked at the point of the bayonet, so to say, to give an undertaking to be of good behaviour in the future, but that it should be left to the good sense of the leaders not to take further part in the civil disobedience movement If they still misbehave, it is then perfectly open to Government to prosecute them under the ordinance and get them sentenced to the maximum punishment of 2 years' imprisonment I consider this would be a good gesture now giving an indication that Government mean on their part to pave the way for a better atmosphere than we have had during the last ten weeks I feel, Sir, that the duty to set this example rests more on the Bombay Government than on the other local governments in India, for this simple reason, that it is in this province that the leader of the Congress movement has his centre of activity, and in Bombay which is the centre of activity Bombay Government can show that they have their finger on the pulse I read certain favourable indications, Sir, at present; as the Honourable the Home Member put it, the Congress menace has been scotched, although the movement has not been killed I ask Government whether they are determined to kill and crush the movement under their heels I have not the slightest sympathy with the Congress people, but I hold that it would not be statesmanlike for Government to continue their present policy if it is intended to put down their heel more and more vigorously until they see that that particular organisation is entirely crushed That would not be politic at all All that one need do in order to restore the prestige of Government, in order to restore respect for authority amongst the general public, is to see that the back of the civil disobedience movement is broken, and the activities of the movement in certain undesirable directions are stopped As soon as respect for authority in the general public was restored, the purpose of Government would be served Now, I think Government should stop and consider whether the time is not ripe for showing the gesture by modifying their policy of arrests in the directions which I have indicated I think such a gesture should emanate in the first instance from Government It would be unwise to go on and continue this policy until Government are satisfied that the whole Congress organisation is practically crushed There should be no question of crushing it to death

My honourable friend the member representing the European Chamber of Commerce (Mr Winterbotham) referred to one or two points in the speech of my honourable friend to my left (Rao Bahadur Chitale), and I think it my duty to reply to the points raised by him in the debate I can make it perfectly plain to this House that I never had any soft corner in my heart for the civil disobedience movement or those who are conducting it I have never belonged to the Congress, nor do I think their methods are in the long run to the welfare of India, but I can quite recognise that some of the misguided people or even the wiser people in the Congress are pursuing their present methods in order to bring political pressure to bear on the authorities both in India and outside India while the reforms are being discussed But in carrying out their object of bringing political pressure to bear, we must not misinterpret certain phases, even though temporary phases, of political life in India I do not consider that the vast bulk of the people treat the Round Table Conference with such distrust which the honourable member representing the Bombay Chamber of Commerce assumes There is a vast portion of the population who really believe that a great deal of good will come from the Round Table Conference, also there are people in India, who think that when the Prime Minister made his two statements—one at the end of the First Round Table Conference and the second when he reaffirmed his first statement at the end of the second session—that he means business and he meant it in right earnest And yet on the other hand it is necessary for me to add that there are again large numbers of people, very sensible people, who have perhaps a little distrust at the back of their minds about those safeguards which are being talked about If there is a little lingering suspicion in the minds of the people of India, it is with reference to those safeguards which are still being kept for discussion at the last stage It is this feeling, I expect, which my friend to my left voiced in his speech I am sure there is no wholesale distrust about the Round Table Conference, the only distrust is that about these safeguards and that under these safeguards the fear that they may not give to India all that India aspires for. The honourable member Mr Winterbotham referred to an insinuation which, he alleged, my honourable friend on my left (Rao Bahadur Chitale) made against the Franchise Committee I am not concerned in defending my friend when he spoke of the composition of the committee I am not concerned in showing whether he was right or wrong But I think I would be failing in my duty again if I did not voice the fact that there is a strong feeling in the presidency on two points One is that as the destiny of the future councils is in the hands of those who are now forging the constitution—amongst them is my honourable friend opposite, and also my honourable friend representing the University—they and their colleagues on the Central Committee should not be carried away too far by mere academic principles such as that of adult franchise. So far as my personal view is concerned, this is one point Secondly, there is also a feeling that in giving every possible direction and succour to the minorities, there should not be the danger of overdoing it——

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN How is that relevant, Sir?

Mr B S KAMAT——overdoing in the sense that the intelligentsia of the people should not be entirely subordinated to the minorities Those are the two points, and I think those are important points which require careful consideration

Sir, I have indicated one or two directions in which the working of the ordinances can be moderated If this is done, I expect it will go to secure the calm atmosphere which this resolution desires

Mr J B PETIT (Bombay Millowners' Association). Mr President, I have much pleasure in supporting the proposal of my honourable friend, the member for the University (Rao Bahadur Kale) He has spoken of the necessity of creating an atmosphere of peace and goodwill in the country in view of the impending introduction of the reforms and has made certain proposals to attain this end I need hardly assure him that he carries with him in this effort the best wishes of this honourable House I confess, however, that I am not quite enamoured of the wording of his resolution ; but I take it that he is himself not quite enthusiastic about it. I understand that it is merely his intention to raise a debate on the present political situation and to create for the members of this honourable House an occasion for expressing their views thereon and particularly on the ordinances. I accordingly take this opportunity of making a few observations on this subject, and simultaneously of drawing the attention of the Government to what I consider to be very grave defects in the manner in which the ordinances are being put into operation. As I have already declared before, both in this House and elsewhere, I may say at once, that on principle I am absolutely against government by ordinances, except of course in very rare and extraordinary emergencies. Such an emergency, I submit, Sir, has not arisen in the country, the laboured statements of the Governments of India and of Bombay to the contrary, notwithstanding. It appears to me that the promulgation of the ordinances in the country by the Government of India and their application to this province by the Government of Bombay, were the result of panic and weakness ; and their indefinite continuance only shows that the Government have not yet got over this feeling.

In this whole drama, the one point which impresses us most, is the question of the necessity of these ordinances. I have not yet understood why it was ever felt necessary to promulgate these extraordinary measures. I fail to see even now why the ordinary laws of the land—of which there are plenty and to spare in the armoury of the Government—could not have coped with the situation that these ordinances are intended to remedy. I have not heard, either during to-day's debate or in the many statements that have been previously issued on behalf of the Government, a single valid argument advanced in favour of the promulgation of the ordinances ; much less have I noticed any justification for their continuance for this inordinate length of time. I am sure, Sir, this honourable House will value very much any information on this point which the Honourable the Home Member in the course of his reply may be able to give.

The Honourable Mr. G. A. THOMAS : On a point of order, Sir. The ordinances have not been promulgated by this Government. They have been promulgated by the Government of India. They have been discussed and the situation has been explained in the Legislative Assembly. This Council, I submit, is not competent to discuss the question.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : I do not know whether the honourable member meant to criticise the promulgation of the ordinances. I understood him to say that the application of the ordinances which have been promulgated was not justified. That is, I think, the point which he is trying to make.

The Honourable Mr. G. A. THOMAS : I do not know if I am correct, but I understood him to say that the ordinances are not necessary and that the laws of the land are quite adequate to deal with the situation. I do not think that question can be discussed here.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Does the honourable member mean that the ordinances are not necessary and that the laws of the land are quite enough?

Mr. J. B. PETIT: Yes, Sir. That is what I mean.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: That is out of order.

Mr. J. B. PETIT: I know that the ordinances have been promulgated by the Government of India. I did not say that they were promulgated by the Government of Bombay. My complaint, however, is that the Government of Bombay should have applied these ordinances to this province, when there was no occasion for such a step.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I thought that was what the honourable member meant.

Mr. J. B. PETIT: That is exactly what I meant and said. I shall go a step further and say that I do not understand why these ordinances, having been once applied to this Presidency, should be continued for this length of time. Let us assume for the sake of argument that at one time there was some justification—which, by the way, I deny—for the application of these ordinances to the Presidency of Bombay. On the Government's own showing, the Congress has now been crushed and everything is quite normal. Why, then, unnecessarily prolong the application of these ordinances to this Province, when such satisfactory results have already been achieved? I hope we shall get a convincing explanation on the matter from the Honourable the Home Member in the course of his reply.

The Honourable Mr. G. A. THOMAS: I shall have no reply.

Mr. J. B. PETIT: In this connection, I think I may reiterate what I have already said before, on more than one occasion, that the war of extermination declared by the Government against the Congress is most unfortunate. I want the Government to realise that it will not be possible for them to crush out of existence, a country-wide organisation of the magnitude and importance of the Congress which has laid its roots deep into the life and soul of the people. I am not a Congressman myself. I am not a follower of Mr. Gandhi. I have no sympathy with his tactics. But, in spite of these facts, I wish to impress upon this honourable House the gravity and the far-reaching effects of the error that the Government have committed by this policy. As we are all aware, the Congress is the largest, the most vocal and the most active political party in the country; and it is the only body that is in a position to deliver the goods. Even His Excellency the Viceroy has admitted this. I put it to the Government themselves, whether it is wise under these circumstances to antagonise this body in this manner? After all, Mr. President, a stage must be reached, if it has not been reached already, when all those Congressmen and women who have been arrested and imprisoned, will have to be set free. The Government are not going to kill them and they cannot keep them in prison for all time. It is for them to consider what they will be, when they come out of the jails, with their self-respect injured beyond repair, with their feelings wounded without any justification, smarting under the humiliation and injustice of their incarceration, and seething with bitterness, revenge and contempt towards the Government! The result will be that the Government will simply drive the Congress movement underground, and compel its adherents, who will be thus soured and embittered against the Government, to carry on their activities in the dark like rats, slowly but surely undermining the very foundations on which the structure of the Government stands. It is needless to add that very strong feelings of indignation, of resentment and of uncertainty have been aroused in the public mind in consequence of the manner in which the powers obtained by the Executive, are being used and applied, or rather, misused and misapplied by the Government. People in various walks of life feel, and I think very rightly feel, that the ordinances give such extraordinary powers to the authorities, that nobody with any opinion worth the name or with a desire to act with any degree of independence, or in a manner disagreeable to the authorities, is safe. Among the divers ways in which the tyranny of these ordinances is being and has been exercised may be mentioned, the denial of the elementary rights of citizenship; the suppression of the freedom of speech and action; the gagging of the press; the censorship of news; the prohibition of public meetings; and last though not least, the forcible opening of shops and businesses, even against the wish of those owning them. It would be interesting to know if the compulsory opening of shops is a necessary item in the programme of the Government for the eradication of lawlessness and the production of an atmosphere of peace and goodwill. But the worst phase of these ordinances is the perfect indifference and callousness with which thousands of people have been spirited away and clapped into the jails, not only for offences of omission and commission, but also of imagination; not only for one's doings in the present, but also for one's actions in the past and the contemplated ones of the future! In many cases rigorous and vindictive sentences have been inflicted, and heavy fines imposed, which, when not recovered, have been followed by distress warrants, not only against the property and assets of those fined, but also of their kith and kin, who may have no connection or sympathy with, and in many cases, absolutely no knowledge of the alleged offence. These are only a few methods indicative of the oppressive and capricious manner in which these ordinances are being used for terrorising the people. I know the instances of many people who have suffered in this manner. I will not, however, trouble the House with their details, but, in accordance with the suggestion of the honourable the mover in that behalf, will send them to the Honourable the Home Member for inquiry and redress. It is for the Government to see that such activities are suppressed at the earliest possible moment.

[Mr. J. B. Petit]

The Honourable the Home Member, in the course of his remarks, said that if any useful purpose was to be served by this motion, some sort of concrete proposals ought to be made, either by this House or by the honourable the mover, which might be considered by His Excellency, and if possible, given effect to. I entirely agree with him in thinking that by merely asking for the appointment of a committee or the summoning of a conference, we will not be able to remedy the present state of affairs. As I have already said more than once, I contend that there never was any occasion for the application of these ordinances to the Presidency of Bombay, much less is there any justification for their continuance to this day. I admit that many aspects of the activities of the Congress are exceedingly harmful, mischievous, seditious and subversive, and that they deserve to be put down with a strong hand. But, I submit, Sir, that the laws at the disposal of the Government are ample, strong and stringent enough to enable them to deal effectively with them, if they wish to do so. I am unable to understand their resort to the ordinances instead. My chief complaint is that these extraordinary measures should have been resorted to, when it was wholly unnecessary to do so. I have heard only two excuses advanced against the operation of the ordinary laws of the land : one, of the delays of the law and another one of giving notoriety to the miscreants. Neither of these is convincing. If a resort to the ordinary laws of the land means delay and gives some publicity to the proceedings, they are necessary evils and must be faced. There can be no royal road to the attainment of justice and good government. I do not think a case has been made out for such an unusual and out-of-the-way step ; and I am sure that this House will not be carried away by such arguments. In justification of the ordinances and their scope, the Honourable the Home Member referred us to various countries of the world where more stringent measures have had to be taken and are even to-day being taken. May I, however, remind him of one fact, namely, that the conditions there are totally different from those prevalent here ; and that if such extraordinary measures are ever introduced in those countries, they are invoked only in very rare cases and in times of the gravest crisis ? I submit, Sir, that such a pressing emergency has not arisen and such a grave crisis has not occurred. At least, we do not know of either of these events having happened. Unless and until such an emergency has been proved to be in existence, I am afraid that these ordinances and all actions taken under them, must stand self-condemned.

Sir, it is a matter of profound regret that at a time like this, when the country is on the eve of great and momentous changes, and when the most cordial sentiments of friendship and goodwill should rule supreme, the atmosphere is charged with the bitterest feelings of hostility, of antagonism, of distrust, of revenge and of hatred towards the Government, as the result of the application of these ordinances to this Province. Sir, there are moments—full of promise and pregnant with great possibilities—in the lives of men as of Governments, when the utmost amount of circumspection, of wisdom, of patience and of tolerance, is absolutely necessary in all those occupying positions of authority and responsibility, if they are to fulfil their obligations adequately and evoke the co-operation and contentment of the people committed to their charge. This is one of those supreme moments in the history of this country, when the exercise of these virtues is most urgently needed. Is it too much to appeal to the Government of Bombay and to the Honourable the Home Member, who represents the department directly responsible for the present situation, to take immediate steps to withdraw the application of these ordinances to this Presidency, and to resort, if necessary, to the ordinary laws of the land to deal with the situation which he described so graphically during the course of his remarks a little while ago? Nothing will be easier for him than to give effect to this request, if he only makes up his mind to do so, without endangering in the slightest degree the peace and goodwill of the people of this Presidency.

My honourable friend Mr. Winterbotham, representing the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, speaking on this question, told us among other things that he and the group he represents, gave their full support to complete self-government for India with the necessary safeguards. I think I may very appropriately add, without meaning any offence, that he and his group seem to me to be giving their "full support" also to ordinance rule! But I would like to remind him of the fact, and I hope he will pardon me for doing so, that there is a very strong feeling of resentment and indignation prevalent throughout the Presidency, in consequence of these extraordinary, uncalled-for and unheard-of measures. I hope therefore that the Government will come to the rescue of this Presidency and generate an atmosphere of peace and goodwill, which the honourable the mover of the motion suggests, in order to smooth the path for the introduction of the new reforms and to ensure their success. And what better way can there be to bring about such a happy consummation than by the immediate withdrawal of the application to the Presidency of Bombay, of these obnoxious measures, which are at once an insult to our self-respect and dignity, and an unwarranted outrage upon the liberty and the integrity of our people!

Dr. P. G. SOLANKI: Sir, I am really very glad that my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Kale has brought this motion for an address to be submitted to His Excellency to restore peace and order by convening a conference of leaders of various parties in the province. Sir, I am aware of a certain conference having been held in Bombay which was called by His Excellency the Governor and leaders of all parties and communities at Government House. There, every man was called upon by His Excellency to express his views and to suggest certain constructive proposals to bring about order and peace and to calm down the atmosphere. But, Sir, many of those who had assembled there refused to come forward and give out their ideas and to express their views. Some did co-operate and did obey the orders of His Excellency and gave out their opinions, and we all thought that after that conference a calm atmosphere would prevail, but to our great surprise and to our great sorrow we find that, though a calm atmosphere which always prevailed amongst the masses and amongst the illiterate people, did not prevail amongst the dissatisfied congress creed people and these are the people who carry on the propaganda of destroying the existing peace and order and to overthrow the British Raj. May I ask the honourable member Rao Bahadur Kale, in the name of which people he appeals, does he appeal in the name of the advanced and educated minority classes or is he appealing in the name of the masses, the Mahomedans, the depressed and the backward classes and Anglo-Indians and Europeans? I will request him to enlighten us on this particular point when he replies to the debate.

Rao Bahadur R. R. KALE : I recognise no community at all.

Dr. P. G. SOLANKI : As the facts stand to-day and if we were keenly following the proceedings of the Round Table Conference and if we are following what goes on in the Franchise Committee, we are thoroughly satisfied as to the honesty of purpose of the Government and the honourable member Rao Bahadur Kale also ought to be satisfied. The Franchise Committee proceedings mostly are not open to the public yet, I am really surprised, Sir, that some of the so-called nationalist newspapers are carrying on a mischievous propaganda against the proceedings of the Franchise Committee and attribute certain motives to it and they come out with some coloured and twisted reports which upset the minds of the people outside. It is none of the business of such newspapers to mislead the public or to throw dust in the eyes of the people and trumpet the doing of the Congress.

Dr. M. K. DIXIT : Is this in order, Sir ?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : No, that is not in order.

Dr. P. G. SOLANKI : I made that remark only to point out what amount of harm is being done by such propaganda in these papers.

As regards the remarks passed by my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Chitale from Ahmednagar against the motives of the Franchise Committee and against the motives of Government, I differ from him and I do say that Government has been trying to do their best seriously, honestly and sincerely to bring about good relations, good understanding and peace between the people and themselves. May I ask my honourable friends Rao Bahadur Kale, Rao Bahadur Chitale and other honourable members of their ways of thinking, how many times they themselves have come forward, and how many times they have held public meetings of people whom they call their followers, how many times they have exercised their influence and spoken to them in public and convinced them that the Government are trying to do their level best to bring about a better atmosphere and that they should in return try to offer the hand of co-operation and friendship to Government ? As far as I know, Sir, nothing of that sort has been done uptil now in the public by these honourable members. In private they may be talking to their friends on this subject but my experience tells me that these members talk privately amongst themselves as well as to other honourable members but they do not do so in public meetings. What is the result of these private conversations? It is that the people have come to believe that whatever is said at public meetings on the Azad Maidan is good for the people and that whatever is done by Government either at the Round Table Conference or elsewhere is only moonshine and detrimental to the welfare of the country, that nothing is going to come out of this Round Table Conference or out of the Committees appointed by Government. These are the expressions which people give utterance to, in public. Sir, if that is the attitude of such men, what can we expect? I do not remember the exact words of the appeal which His Excellency made but I think he appealed to the people present there to come forward boldly irrespective of any interference with Government to work independently and to assure the people that Government is serious and if they have to find fault with Government, they themselves should come forward and see His Excellency or any Members of the Cabinet and tell them that in such and such a way they can improve matters, but nothing of that sort has been done uptil now. A sort of a panic has come upon the minds of such of my honourable friends who talk in private conversations or in their houses or at their dinner tables, and magnify matters. Beyond that nothing comes out of such talks. Had it not been for these emergency measures, which are otherwise known as the ordinances, I believe it would have been difficult for us to sit in this very Council House and I think it would have been still more difficult for us to sit in the Franchise Committee if the rowdy elements had been allowed to have their own sway. We saw it two years ago, Sir, as I spoke in the Governor's conference and I think it my duty to say it here to-day that the ordinances were timely and that if they had not come in time, worse things would have happened. Government never say that the ordinances are to remain permanently. Both Government and His Excellency have said that the ordinances have come only as temporary measures because their hands were forced and it lies in the hands of the leaders of the people, the influential leaders of the people, to come forward and show to Government that there is no more necessity for such ordinances and that these ordinances could be safely withdrawn. But no such effort has yet been made by any of my honourable friends here as well as outside by any person.

My honourable friend Mr. Petit has boldly said that there is no necessity for continuing these ordinances but there are differences of opinion on this question. Mr. Petit goes out from his bungalow in his motor car and goes direct to his office and so he does not know how many heads are broken in the streets by the rowdy elements misled by the Congress propaganda or other propaganda of a political kind carried on by some interested people. If my honourable friend Mr. Petit had gone through the ordeal of rough handling at the hands of masses,

[Dr. P. G. Solanki]

I think he would have been the first man to run to Government and to ask Government to issue ordinances at once without any delay. Unfortunately, these rowdies have not yet approached the big folks, they have ransacked only poor men and tried to cut each other's throats, whilst the agitators and wire-pullers are enjoying the fun. What is the use of my honourable friend Mr. Petit talking like a philosopher if he cannot come out in the open and tell the masses to go on the right path and to strengthen the hands of the Government? Instead of that, the so-called leaders very silence in public shows that they neither disapprove of their conduct nor do they approve or like their action, which means that their silence may be construed as an approval of their actions. I appeal to the patriotic honourable members of this House who have brought or supported this motion to come forward at once as the time is not yet lost, it is not too late, Government themselves are not anxious to keep or continue these ordinances and if we can assure Government, Government will to-morrow remove the ordinances. The remedy still lies in our hands. If you go and just consult the people outside, you will see what they think of the whole situation. It is very well for the educated people of the higher strata and for the advanced classes to talk of these things, because they are safe in their houses which are protected by Pathans and Bhayyas, but the houses of the poor people and their properties, their wives and their children are in danger when they go out for their daily avocations. I believe and the Government also do believe that the time is not yet come, nor are we in a position to assure Government that there is no more need for ordinances. Over and above that, the motion which has been brought here before the Council is rather too late, it is a day after the fair, a lot of things have been done, the Government is anxious and is every day trying to restore peace, the Members of the Cabinet are trying their level best to restore peace. I believe the Honourable the General Member and the Honourable the Home Member are no less anxious than ourselves to restore a calm atmosphere and to have their fair name kept on and continued as good and tactful and able administrators. It is not an easy task for them to sleep over all these things. They are every moment vigilant, but, Sir, when will that pleasant day come when members on the opposite benches will come forward and co-operate whole-heartedly and in a friendly way with the members of the opposite benches on the official side. I have found such persons always finding fault and criticising the Government and the measures adopted by them and never an attempt was made in a friendly way to bring about some constructive work and thus restore peace and order.

Sir, finally I might come to particular questions which the Chair, I am afraid, may rule out of order. But as my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Chitale and some other members were allowed to refer to them, I believe I also will be allowed to ask one pertinent question to the leaders on the opposite benches. Where was the necessity for the Government to interfere in the internal matters of the people when the ordinary laws were enough to cope with the situation ? If there was love and friendly feeling and brotherly love existing between the different communities of this Presidency then such a state of things would not have arisen Sir, was there not a lack of friendly and brotherly feeling among these different communities, the Mahomedans, the Anglo-Indians and the depressed classes versus the advanced classes and the orthodox Hindus ? Leaving aside the small minorities, what about the two major communities ? Has anything happened in these years which made the Mahomedans go against their Hindu brethren ? Hindus always professing to be elder brothers, should come forward and make common cause with the Government and make up the differences Do they not know that it is better to make common cause with such a Government, which is very enlightened and wise Government, and with whom the advanced classes for the last 150 years had made common cause ? What has come upon both of them today ? They (the Hindus) are finding fault with the very Government whose hands they had strengthened in the past, and had monopolised the political and administrative powers in their own hands It is of late that the Hindus are finding fault with the Mahomedans and the depressed classes, and they say these are the people who are the enemies of our country, because they do not walk meekly and submissively in the parlour of the Congress

The Honourable the PRESIDENT The honourable member is now getting on to his pet subject I must point out that unless the House desires to carry over the discussion to the next day for non-official business, the speeches must be limited I hope the honourable member who is now speaking has concluded his remarks I must then give a chance to only one more member for a few minutes before calling upon the honourable the mover and the Honourable the Home Member for a reply So the honourable member Dr Solanki must conclude his speech in a few more words

Dr P G SOLANKI I expected so, but anyhow I have done my duty by expressing my views

Rao Bahadur R R KALE There are some members on this side who want to speak I fear the discussion will have to be continued on a subsequent day

The Honourable the PRESIDENT If it does not conclude today, it will have to be carried over

Dr P G SOLANKI Finally, Sir, my appeal to my elder brothers (the Hindus) is—let us make up the differences amongst ourselves, let us show to the Government that we are united, let us show to the Government that we are not quarrelling for petty interests and selfish motives, and then alone the Government, all the three Governments, the Government of India, the Home Government and the Bombay Government, will come forward and declare that there is no necessity for the ordinances and the ordinances will be removed spontaneously

[Dr P G Solanki]

With these words, I oppose the motion moved by my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Kale

Mr A N SURVE (Bombay City, North) Sir, I had no mind to take part in the debate on this motion, but the mention of the Franchise Committee has compelled me to be on my legs to represent the view of the section of the public which I represent Sir, in this connection we are told that there should be co-operation But may I enquire whether all the parties are given an equal opportunity ? I must place certain facts before this House Sir, in our present constitution, 7 seats were allotted for the Maratha and allied castes

An Honourable MEMBER How does that arise ?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT What is the difficulty of honourable members in understanding the limitations of the debate on the motion before the House ? These are all foreign matters dragged into discussion I have pointed out to honourable members all this morning that the discussion goes beyond its proper limits, and yet they would insist on bringing in matters which have nothing to do with the motion before the House

Mr A. N SURVE We are required by this motion to offer our co-operation, as certain committees have been set up I refer to the last paragraph of the motion It says " and secure the co-operation of all parties in facilitating the work of the several Committees set up to help the framing of the New Constitution " We have the Franchise Committee in Bombay at present It was mentioned by several honourable members in their speeches and I am bringing out that one section of the public is ignored Therefore, what I have been suggesting is——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT No instructions are to be given under this motion to the various committees, as to what they should investigate and how they should proceed These committees have been mentioned with a view to calling a conference, so that the conference may consider measures to create a peaceful atmosphere, so that the public may co-operate with the committees and the various activities in the framing of a new constitution That has nothing to do with the individual work of any committee working in India or here

Mr A N SURVE My only point is that the committee that is in Bombay, the Franchise Committee, is deprived of the opportunity of knowing the needs of one section——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT The honourable mover wanted to show what the situation was and he took the Franchise Committee as an example We have nothing to do with the Franchise Committee All these matters are foreign to the subject under discussion I must stop the honourable member, because we are wasting time

Mr A. N. SURVE I have no other remarks to offer, if such a narrow view is being taken

Mr A B ACHREKAR (Satara District) Sir, I rise to support the motion moved by my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Kale Sir, I have heard the honourable member Dr Solanki saying that but for the Ordinances, it would have been impossible for him to sit in this Council Sir, I think that my honourable friend should be rather grateful to that great institution, the Indian National Congress, for bringing him here in this Council and giving us the Montford Reforms

Dr P G SOLANKI Question

Mr A B ACHREKAR Sir, it should be understood that I am not at all for the civil disobedience movement I represent the backward communities, but at the same time I say that the backward communities and all the other communities and the Indian people are getting the benefit of the Congress I am not for non-co-operation nor for the civil disobedience movement, but, at the same time, I am of opinion that the political progress which the country is at present getting is out of the work of the Congress people I do recognise that with great humility [Rao Bahadur G K Chitale "Hear, hear"] Of course, we cannot associate ourselves with the present civil disobedience movement, but that does not debar us from recognising whatever good there is in that great institution which came into existence long before I was born Sir, last year we had the civil disobedience movement, and it was recognised by the then highest authority in the land, Lord Irwin, that it was not possible to carry on the work of the Round Table Conference without the help of that best organised party, the Congress, and, Sir, it was thought by him advisable to get the co-operation of the Congress as a whole

Sir, the honourable mover of this motion perhaps wants the co-operation of all parties in the land When he refers to all parties in the province, I think he is also desirous of getting the co-operation of the Congress party Sir, the Working Committee of the Congress decided to embark upon the civil disobedience movement I have nothing to say against that, they may be right, they may be wrong But I do not think that the bulk of the Congress, which has been functioning for the last 45 years, or all those who are in the Congress are for law-breaking There may be people who were once Congressmen, but they may not like to be Congressmen now with the present badge of civil disobedience and the co-operation of such people in my opinion may be sought That is perhaps the motive of the honourable mover in bringing this motion before this honourable House I do personally realise, Sir, that it is the Congress, and not the members of the depressed classes, nor the members of the non-Brahmin party, nor the members of the Liberal party, which is responsible for giving these Reforms to us, Indians I do want to recognise that it is the Congress which cooks, and we all want to eat or sit at the table at the cost of the real workers.

An Honourable MEMBER Government

Mr A B ACHREKAR Government also grants reforms when it is forced It is the creed of the non-Brahmin party, to which I belong,

[Mr A B Achrekar]

that India should have Dominion Status All now want Dominion Status, but that Dominion Status was much feared some 20 years before I do not mean to say that we should adopt all the Congress methods, when I say that without the Congress support it is not possible for us to have that calm atmosphere which is necessary for the working of the Reforms Sir, it has been admitted that the Congress is the party with the overwhelming majority, representing all shades of opinion, and that the Congress represents India as a whole with all her communities That has been admitted, and we need not go back to that point It has been admitted in the second Round Table Conference that Congress wields the greatest influence in the land I want therefore to appeal to the House that the House should vote for this motion and try to seek the co-operation of those Congressmen who are not for civil disobedience movement, who are for following other methods and working in other ways for getting Dominion Status for India I would appeal, especially to the members of the non-Brahmin party to support this motion, because they are likely to get something out of this motion, if it is resolved that His Excellency be given an address and His Excellency agrees to convene such a conference of the leaders of the various parties I would therefore appeal to the non-Brahmin leaders especially to go in for this motion and to support it, as the non-Brahmin members are not going to lose anything thereby I do see the necessity of the ordinances, but I differ as regards their application I do not like such action as is being taken under the ordinances to humiliate people by putting them on parole and asking them to report to the police These things, Sir, are really humiliating Although I am not a Congressman, I would not like any of my brothers who is a Congressman having to go everyday to the police station to report himself The Honourable the Home Member has told us that if any person gives an undertaking he will not be asked to go and report himself to the police But the asking of that undertaking, I hold, involves a presumption that he was acting illegally in the past In the city of Satara wherefrom I come, for the last two years I have not seen any movement of civil disobedience going on there In spite of that, forty or fifty people are being kept under arrest I know personally that they have not the courage to actually associate themselves with the civil disobedience movement, but they are still being kept under confinement probably on the suspicion that they are likely to act in a manner prejudicial to the public safety There are certain pleaders also among them All those pleaders still hold sanads from the High Court If they are so dangerous, why are their cases not taken to the notice of the High Court to have their sanads cancelled before they are asked to report themselves to the police ? It is humiliating to a lawyer who has been given a sanad by the High Court to practise in the law courts, who is practically an officer of the court, to go to the police station and report himself there everyday If in consideration of this humiliation he refuses to report himself to the police, he has to go to jail That is too much If they are found dangerous to the public safety, you can take disciplinary action against them and get their sanads cancelled first before they are asked to report themselves to the police I take these pleaders to be officers of the court, and as such they are the servants of this Government Even pleaders of high reputation are being asked to report themselves to the police, and if they refuse to go to the police station, then, Sir, they have to go to jail This part of the ordinance is working too harshly against the self-respect of the citizen. Then, Sir, the honourable member representing the Millowners' Association has referred to the practice of serving notices on shopkeepers that they should open their shops That is encroaching too much on the personal liberty of these people Such application of the ordinances is likely to promote the spirit which Government wish to combat What the Congress has not been able to do, the ordinances have been able to do, namely, alienating the masses from Government and spreading discontent among them I speak with a knowledge of the masses Up till now, the Congress was not able to do anything to alienate the sympathies of the masses from Government, but now owing to the application of these ordinances and the continuation of the ordinances, even the agriculturist has come to know that there is going on something wrong So many people are kept under confinement that he has come to think suspiciously about the methods of Government Discontent and disaffection is being spread by the continuation of the ordinances Sir, there is no necessity now for continuing the ordinances The ordinary law is quite sufficient to control such disturbances as there may be I am, Sir, for the discontinuance of the ordinances

With these words I support the motion brought forward by my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Kale

Mr S H. PRATER Sir, the present political situation has produced one very unfortunate result it has diverted men's minds from the main issue before the country and concentrated attention upon the struggle between the Congress and the Government The main issue before the country is not whether Congress or Government will win in this struggle, it is not the activities of Congress or the measures taken by Government to suppress them The main issue before the country is the introduction of such reforms in the government and administration of the country as will place the responsibility for that government in the hands of the Indian people All parties are agreed upon the issue As a result of the break of Congress with the Government, two alternatives have now been placed before this country, namely, whether the country is to win its goal by constitutional means, by methods of conference and negotiation, such as were adopted by the Round Table Conference, or whether it is to win its goal by force, by methods which would make the present system of government untenable and compel those in authority to yield to the country's demand In judging between these two alternatives, we must review what has been achieved so far by methods of conference and negotiation and see if the confidence that has been placed in these methods has been justified or whether the results have been so disappointing and so ineffective as to compel us to abandon constitutional means and to employ the alternative I do not propose to review what so far has been achieved by methods of conference, the results are apparent to everybody in this House Whatever might have been said for or against the Round Table Conference, this much can be said, that an enormous advance has been made and the country brought within sight of its goal by the pains and labour of her sons and the way made clear for its attainment At this, the penultimate stage of the work, Congress decided upon the tragic step of giving up methods of co-operation and adopting the alternative of force I do not wish to go into the reasons which led the Congress to take up this unfortunate and almost unbelievable step It is sufficient to say that there existed in the Congress Executive a powerful party which did not want to compromise with Government, which did not want to compromise with minorities who differed from their views, which wanted to force their whole programme upon the country, a programme which would place the country under the domination of the Congress executive . [Interruption]

Mr HAJI MIR MAHOMED BALOCH (In Urdu) They want everything

Mr S H PRATER Yes The result has been that the Congress has broken with the Government and the country is thrown once again into the disorder and chaos of the civil disobedience campaign with all its attendant misery and its attendant suppression The avowed intention of this campaign is to destroy the Government, destruction means war and the dividing of the country into two opposing camps, Government and their supporters and those who wish to destroy Government There can be no neutral The issue before the country is not whether Government or Congress will win, but whether the political freedom of India can be achieved by force or can be achieved by constitutional means And if we are convinced that in the peculiar circumstances of this country the argument of force will only lead to chaos and ruin, we are bound to accept the alternative of constatutional methods, and if we accept that method on the results that have been achieved, then we are bound to give our unqualified support to Government in the present crisis Patriotism is not the monopoly of those who wish to destroy Government, it can also be attributed to those who wish to co-operate with Government in framing a system of Government and administration which will give India the political freedom which she desires The present situation is this a deadlock has been reached and nobody can foretell what is going to be the result of that deadlock But recriminations against Government and against the methods pursued by Government will not help to relieve that deadlock or to solve the present problem The resolution before this House advocates conciliation Everybody will admire the spirit of that resolution, but everybody will realise the difficulties of its practical application When two parties are opposing each other, when they are at death grips and one of them has expressed an intention of making this a fight to the finish, conciliation cannot come through them It must come from a power without, and that power can only be the force of public opinion, the force of same public opinion which realises that so grave and so complex an issue as the political future of this country cannot be solved by the argument of force but can only be solved by methods of conference and negotiation Only when the weight of public opinion is thrown on the side of law and order, on the side of constructive work and constructive effort, will the energies of the people be turned into channels which will be most effective, into channels whereby the problem of the future of this country can best be solved And we as co-operators with Government should help to form that public opinion by word and counsel at every opportunity that we have, for it is only by co-operation and compromise between the British and the Indian peoples that a solution can be found eventually which will be acceptable to all classes of people in this country, including the minorities, for it is only by this co-operation that we will be able to find a solution which will tend to the security and contentment of the people of this country

[Mr S H Prater]

NEW MEMBER SWORN

Mr P B Advani made the prescribed affirmation of allegiance to His Majesty the King-Emperor, and took his seat in the Council

MOTION TO PRESENT AN ADDRESS TO H. E. THE GOVERNOR re : THE POLITICAL SITUATION.

Question again proposed—

"That the following humble address be presented to His Excellency the Governor of Bombay —

May it please Your Excellency,

We, the Members of the Bombay Legislative Council, respectfully pray that in view of the present political situation, Your Excellency will be pleased to convene a Conference of leaders of various parties in the Province in order to find the means of establishing a peaceful and calm atmosphere and secure the co operation of all parties in facilitating the work of the several Committees set up to help the framing of the New Constitution"

Rao Bahadur D R PATIL (East Khandesh District) : Sir, the motion moved by the honourable member Rao Bahadur Kale is innocent in its nature, as innocent as his views on the civil disobedience movement I understand that the honourable member Rao Bahadur Kale's object is to bring about a reconciliation between the Government and the Congress, two parties which stand on their own solid principle, the one for law and order and the other for the civil disobedience movement I for one have no sympathy with breakers of law or with their unlawful activities His Excellency the Governor has clearly stated in his speech, "but we will not permit coercion because in my opinion no movement should have coercion as its basis" Further, His Excellency said, "We will enter into no treaties with law-breakers And let me warn those who resort to these methods, that they must be prepared to suffer the full legal penalties which they have deliberately provoked by embarking on this line of action" I am of the opinion that under any form of Government the breaking of laws will not be tolerated as such a procedure is necessarily detrimental to the best interest of the country Now, Sir, the position is this The honourable member Rao Bahadur Kale is very anxious to bring about peace and harmony between the Government and the Congress I do not know his scheme or whether he wants to act as an intermediary between the Government and the Congress like Mr Jayakar and Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru If he gets that honour, I shall be very glad to congratulate him upon that We know, Sir, that both the parties are unbending, and the question is, how to effect a compromise On that I hope the honourable the mover will throw some light I want to know definitely from him on what lines he is going to proceed if His Excellency is pleased to call a conference as he desires If we leave aside the question of the Congressmen, all the other parties are in favour of co-operation and they are all against the movement of civil disobedience. We have heard the speeches of the honourable friends here and we know that there is not a single member of this House who likes the idea of the civil disobedience movement Of course some members might have got certain grievances as regards the use of powers under the ordinances, but to that the Honourable the Home Member has given a reply that instructions have been issued to all officers concerned to see that they exercise every possible moderation in the use of their powers.

As for myself, Sir, I am doubtful whether any useful purpose will be served by passing the motion because the leading Congressmen are in jail and their sympathisers and followers are bent on carrying on their propaganda and naturally they will not like this idea of a conference Government on their side knows the views of us all, co-operators What is to be done at the conference ? I do not understand for a moment what good is likely to come out of such a conference even if one is called. All the same, I am not going to stand in the way of my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Kale if he succeeds in paving the way for a compromise and gets the credit for restoring peace and order in the country

Dr M D. GILDER (Bombay City, North): Sir, when I heard the honourable mover Rao Bahadur Kale introducing his motion on the floor of this House, I wondered whether the address would serve any useful purpose or whether we should be in the same position as that in which my honourable friend Mr Baloch said the other day he found himself, namely, "Those who want to ventilate their grievances do so again and again but who is there to listen to them ?" However, I must congratulate the honourable mover and the honourable member who followed him on the high tone in which they initiated the debate, and I must express my admiration for the Honourable the Home Member's missionary zeal in preaching to the opposition to go over bag and baggage to the Government side, and not only to go over but to serve as their propagandist agents in the war they have declared against the Congress

Sir, I was highly struck with the first part of the Honourable the Home Member's speech, but when he talked about war and not only about crushing but killing the Congress, I once again wondered whether the honourable mover of the motion would be able to do anything more than what the Pope did during the Great War or what we see being done now from Geneva in addressing letters full of pious hopes to the combatants at Shanghai——

The Honourable Mr G A. THOMAS May I correct the honourable member, Sir ? I did not say anything about killing the Congress but killing the menace of the Congress, two different things "

Dr M D GILDER I stand corrected, Sir , but, after all, that is war mentality, killing the one or the other I will not enter into the origin of the ordinances nor will I touch upon them except just to say that in all wars both sides claim that the challenge came from the opposite side We are living too near the events, we do not know the secret despatches that might have passed between the Congress executive and their sole representative in London and also between Simla and Whitehall as to the preparations that were being made So, I do not think that it is worth our while entering into the origin of the ordinances But, Sir, when we are appealed to to join the war on one side or the other, we, who have so far remained neutral, have a right to see whether the war is conducted according to the conventions of civilised warfare Sir, my honourable friend the preceding speaker quoted His Excellency's speech where he said that the Congress must undergo the full legal penalties I have not known so far any Congressmen who have shirked the responsibilities for their acts It is not the Congress that is talking about these things, it is we, Sir, who are standing between Government on the one side with whom we cannot see our way to agree, and the Congress on the other side from whom also we are in some of our opinions as the poles asunder, and we only wish to see that the combatants, if there is to be war, will carry on that war according to the recognised canons of civilised warfare In war if an officer is arrested, he is given the option of either remaining in prison taking his chance of making an escape and taking the consequences, or of giving his parole and coming out I do not know who invented the word "Parole" in connection with the Congress, whether Government or journalists, but the way in which this affair is managed is certainly not what would be called in accordance with the conventions of civilised warfare The man is simply given an order to report, he does not accept it of his own free will, and as he has not agreed to it, naturally as an officer and soldier according to his own mentality he would think of going to visit his family or of going to the front. He is immediately arrested and not kept as an officer would be kept, but he is sent to a prison for a long term of rigorous imprisonment and perhaps also of fine When only recently a paper, which was not a Congress paper but a paper which criticised without bias both the Government and the Congress, openly stated these facts, that paper was asked to provide security Then, Sir, might I ask why is there a difference made between different papers and why are some papers not allowed even to report the names of those who are convicted whereas no such notice has been served on other papers? Sir, this sort of thing, this gagging of the press, is certainly prejudicial to the Government itself We know how rumours spread like wild-fire in this country The press, owing to the ordinances can take no notice of them, they do not come to the attention of the Government and the Government has no means of contradicting them, though we would like them to be contradicted if they are false Rumours have come to my knowledge that in Gujarat men have had to take their clothes off and they were then beaten with hunting crops and with canes on that part of their anatomy where our fathers used to inflict punishment upon us with their slippers when we were little boys As they are rumours, I will not speak more about them in this House, but I would certainly request the Government to see that news is not left to be spread as rumours but to take steps to see that authentic information on these and other points is furnished to the public

[Dr M D Gilder]

Now, Sir, let us see what the effect of the working of the ordinances is If you talk to anybody about the civil disobedience movement in the streets, he looks round to see if there is anybody about listening, so great is the terrorism that has been spread by these ordinances Such is the contrariness of human nature that though Mother Eve had the run of all the fruits in the Garden of Eden excepting the apple, she must needs go and eat the apple first. Similarly, the more rigorous you make the ordinances, the greater the rigour with which you work them, the greater will be the crimes under those ordinances, more particularly if there is a halo of martyrdom attached to them at the other end When people in good class of society have had to spend some years of their life in jail or have been otherwise severely punished, are they ever going to forget these facts? Is not the Government building up for itself in future an implacable opposition, an opposition which it can never placate? Think of Egypt, during the war, Zaglul Pasha was exiled; it is long since the end of the War, long since the death of Zaglul Pasha, but his shadow is still hovering over Egypt and is preventing any settlement in that country to-day

Sir, His Excellency the Governor gave us the instance of Ireland. Ireland is in a lucky position to-day, of having its own Government, and the prisoners of yesterday under the Ordinances are the heroes of to-day And who knows whether these very Ordinances may not be applied to those people who actually framed them? We in India unfortunately are not in a position ever to apply them to the opposite side

Sir, I am in touch with my constituency It is my business to keep myself in touch with it, and I know that the movement has spread underground, that there is a growing admiration for the sacrifices made by the Congress people, that as time goes on there is greater and greater alienation of sympathy from the Government If, as a result of the Round Table Conference, the Reforms fail to satisfy the public, the position of the Moderates would be absolutely untenable, and the Government would find itself without a friend

I would, therefore, conclude with an appeal to this honourable House to follow in the footsteps of another Council, another provincial legislature, which has passed a motion to this effect, and I would appeal to my honourable friends opposite, whose country has ever stood for the under-dog, whose doors have always been hospitably open to the refugees of political and religious persecution of all countries, to reconsider the whole position, and see if they cannot end the present situation by a conference of the kind proposed by the honourable mover of this address

Mr SHAIKH ABDUL MAJID (Karachi District) Sir, let me state at the very outset that I am perfectly in agreement with the object of the motion under discussion The object is very laudable and praiseworthy The honourable member Rao Bahadur Kale himself is a man of peace, and he has suggested the way of peace, the way for restoring a peaceful atmosphere in the country But I am afraid the conference suggested by him will not bring about the desired object In the first place, he proposes that His Excellency the Governor should be requested to convene a conference of leaders of various parties in the province, and then ultimately to secure the co-operation of all parties in facilitating the work of the several committees set up to help the framing of the new constitution I submit, Sir, that it will not be possible for a conference of a provincial character to secure the co-operation of all parties and facilitating the work of the several committees that have been set up by the Round Table Conference The scope of the question is much wider than a provincial legislature can venture to undertake It would have been better if a motion of this character had been brought before the Legislative Assembly or the Council of State, and then perhaps some hope could have been entertained of restoring a peaceful atmosphere in the country, because the situation in the province of Bombay is a part and parcel of the situation as it exists in the country as a whole, and the policy that is being pursued by the Government is a part and parcel of the policy of the Government of India, in the same manner as the movement that is being carried on by the Bombay Provincial Congress Committee is under the programme of the All-India Congress Committee The conference, I believe, will have to face at the very outset practical difficulties for tackling the question which concerns not only this province but the whole of India, and not only India but England as well, because it aims at securing the co-operation of all parties represented on the various committees of the Round Table Conference, and I think it is beyond practical politics to suggest a measure of this kind to His Excellency the Governor of Bombay

Then, Sir, before I enter into a detailed examination of the present political situation and the other contributory factors that have brought it about, I want to say a word or two as to the object of this unfortunate war that is being waged in our country, to the detriment of the interests of the vast majority of its inhabitants I characterise this war as a sort of civil war between the two parties in the country, one representing the present Government and the other representing the future Government It is a war between two Governments for dominating each other as well as for dominating the whole of the country But the position of my community in this state of war is extremely delicate I am prepared to co-operate with both the parties, with the intention of settling the question of the Indian constitution as well as the claims of the various communities and interests, but no party is in a mood to co-operate with me I stand in a way between the devil and the deep sea On the one hand, there is the Government who would not say anything as to the future position of my community in the future constitution of the country, on the other hand, there is the Congress, with whom I am willing to co-operate in framing the future constitution, but it would not concede my birthright, my minimum demands Sir, it is a most unenviable position in which I find myself and the community whom I have the honour to represent Further, Sir, as far as I can see, no sufficient effort was put forth by both the parties in bringing about a better understanding I believe that, if Government on the one hand and the Congress on the other had made up their mind not to resort to war but to frame the future constitution with mutual co-operation and have a peaceful atmosphere, their efforts would have proved successful But both parties were chafing under some imaginary insults and both were determined to prove their prowess, and hence we see that a state of war exists between the Congress and the Government I, Sir, look upon war as a profession of monsters I do not believe in war I think we are living in an age in which wars can be avoided by resorting to arbitration, by resorting to constitutional agitation, and by resorting to peaceful methods If there is any party which is suffering the most in this state of war, it is neither the Government nor the Congress—it is the people of this country The Congress and its volunteers are getting a sort of training in fighting the Government for the achievement of their ideals and aims, and the Government on the other hand want to inflict its will by means of force on the other party In the long run, I may say that neither repression will pay Government, nor the civil disobedience movement bring freedom to the country It is the way of peace that both the parties will be compelled to adopt sooner or letter Political history demonstrates very clearly that repression has not succeeded anywhere, no less than that the civil disobedience movement has not brought, freedom to any country So, both the parties will miserably fail in destroying each other, and they will come to their senses sooner or later There has been some reference to the excesses that have been committed here and there on either side, but war is war and nobody should be surprised if some excesses are committed on either side But I think the excesses that are committed upon me by both the parties are absolutely ignored in this state of war For instance, I invite the attention of this honourable House to the activities of the Congress, their social ostracism, their commercial boycott, their compelling the people to follow their ways injure me more than even the Government In the same manner, while the Congress is carrying on the war with the Government, the Franchise and other committees are busy with their programmes They are framing the future constitution for the so-called rebels, and I do not know what is my position in that constitution So, Sir, it is on account of this that I say that I am the greatest sufferer on account of this war In discussing the present political situation, I may have to go as far back as the time when the Simon Commission visited our land I think that is the origin of the present situation Almost all the parties, political as well as communal, at least of my community co-operated with the Congress in boycotting the Simon Commission Then followed the famous announcement by Lord Irwin about the holding of the Round Table Conference in London and inviting all the parties in the country to avail themselves of that opportunity

[Mr Shaikh Abdul Majid]

I think, Sir, Mahatma Gandhi blundered at the very outset by refusing that offer, when it was given with the best of intentions He began to lay down certain conditions, before participating in the Round Table Conference As these conditions were not fulfilled, he came out with the civil disobedience movement and a demand for complete independence We all know the meaning of the civil disobedience movement and the demand for complete independence, originated by Mahatma Gandhi It was as expressed by the honourable member Mr Kamat to bring pressure on the Government in order that the future government should be in accordance with the ideals of the Congress. Then, Sir, the civil disobedience movement was followed by the historic Gandhi-Irwin pact Mahatma Gandhi, the sole delegate of the Indian National Congress, joined the Round Table Conference After his landing here he began to tackle the question of ordinances that had been promulgated not by the Government of Bombay but by the Government of India He then preferred to go to jail, not because the constitution as proposed by the Round Table Conference was not up to the mark, but because he was refused an interview by His Excellency the Viceroy. What I want to submit is that this is the second blunder committed by him If he had declared war against Government on some essentials, on the fundamentals of the future constitution, he would have been perfectly justified But he declared war on a non-essential thing—the promulgation of the ordinances and the refusal of interview by His Excellency the Viceroy. I still believe, Sir, that if the civil disobedience movement is withdrawn, the ordinances must be withdrawn If the ordinances are withdrawn, the civil disobedience movement must go to dogs At least, if there was a desire on either side to have peace, I still maintain that, with a little broadmindedness and foresightedness, the present situation would not exist. But that course was not followed by the Congress, and now we are called upon to present an address to His Excellency the Governor for convening a conference of the various parties—I believe including the Congress party as well—to seek the co-operation of all the parties in facilitating the work of the several committees that have been set up to help in framing the new constitution and to establish a peaceful and calm atmosphere I confess that, unless the honourable mover convinces me that the Congress is going to participate in this conference, no useful purpose will be served by requesting His Excellency to convene this conference

Then, Sir, I wanted to say a word or two about the excesses that are being committed on either side in furtherance of their respective militant programme I may bring to the notice of the Honourable the Home Member, if he can do anything in the matter, that if Government can treat sympathetically respectable and highly patriotic men in a better manner, this will remove a great cause for heartburning and bitterness In my province a man like Mr. Bechar who was a member of this honourable House and who has been a member of the Karachi Municipality for a number of years and who is a well-to-do man of high status is awarded the "C" class I think that is not the moderation which we have been assured by Government that they maintain in putting down the civil disobedience movement and in sending the civil resisters to their destination On the other hand I can give a recent instance about the city of Bombay as to how the Congress is interfering with the commercial activities of the people I am in possession of a Congress Bulletin, issued by the emergency council The heading is "Boycott"—"To merchants and mukadams of Sewree" Then it goes on to say

"You all know that Messrs Mahomed Suleman and Co have disregarded the Congress Mandate and had dealings with Messrs Ralli Brothers and Co and Bombay Company On asking for an explanation of this they have given an extremely insolent reply They are not inclined to leave the association of English merchants who have been robbing India for the last 150 years We should therefore give them every convenience for their association with the English. It is therefore declared that no one should either sell goods to them nor should buy from them No one should have either direct or indirect mercantile dealings with them Let them know that however insolent or wealthy they may be still they cannot live in India and be treacherous to that country"

There is another notice under what I would call Congress ordinance. The first one I read is dated 1st March 1932 The second one which I am going to read is dated 2nd March 1932 It reads

"Yesterday it was announced in the bulletin to boycott the firm of Messrs Mahomed Suleman and Co It should also be noted that the firm of Messrs. Osman Suleman is also to be boycotted, because both the firms belong to the same owner"

"Issued by the Bombay Emergency Council of the Congress"

Now, Sir, in this warfare, I have already stated that I am the greatest sufferer from the political as well as from the commercial point of view. I know a number of people have been fined by Congress Committees all over India for refusing to abide by the instructions of the All-India Congress Committee They are being financed by interested firms to carry on their programme of militancy When any national organisation tries to interfere with the private rights of the people and interfere with their business, nobody should be surprised that those who are affected by the activities of the Congress approach Government for help and Government may help them in the best way possible

One thing that is mentioned in this notice is that the English merchants have been robbing India for the last 150 years I do not know how far it is correct I wish to submit that my community has no part in it My community has no part in the robbing of India by association with English merchants It is the majority community that is responsible for the destruction of the industries of India by its trade with foreign merchants and countries I am not responsible also for the other thing, namely, in the selling of liquor and the using of liquor which is said to be another cause of India's enslavement and ruin At least in Northern India, you will find not a single Mussalman as a liquor vendor There may be a few Mussalmans using liquor but that too secretly But as a matter of fact, you will find liquor in almost each and every house of my neighbours Without going into the discussion of this notice, Sir——

Rao Bahadur R R KALE May I know whether the document which the honourable member has read is a genuine document, and if so, whether it has been produced before the Council? The honourable member cannot refer to a document which is not produced before the Council.

Mr SHAIKH ABDUL MAJID I do not understand the point, Sir

The Honourable the PRESIDENT The honourable member has referred to a document Is that a genuine document, is it reliable ?

Mr SHAIKH ABDUL MAJID I have seen the genuine document under the signature of the Police Commissioner of Bombay, and I have got a copy of it

The Honourable the PRESIDENT Apart from that I might point out that the honourable member is now entering upon a criticism of the action of the Congress, which is not the point before the House

Mr SHAIKH ABDUL MAJID What I was dealing with was whether any amicable settlement was possible under the present circumstances, firstly, between the Government and the Congress and, secondly, between the different political parties in the country A political settlement to be lasting must not be a settlement only between England and India, but also between the various peoples and communities inhabiting India When this is the mental attitude of a party that is in power and that is in the majority towards the minorities, I rather feel very much diffident if the conference, even if it is called, will prove a success

With all that, Sir, I finish my speech with an appeal for peace Peace is the greatest need of the day The economic depression, the communal unsettlement, the restlessness, and the world conditions demonstrate the necessity of peace. The sooner it is established the better I would, therefore, make an appeal to both the parties, to the Government to withdraw the ordinances and to the Congress to stop civil disobedience Let there be peace That is the only method by means of which peace can be achieved under the existing circumstances.

Khan Bahadur ABDUL LATIF HAJI HAJRAT KHAN Sir, I have given my most anxious consideration to the implications of the motion and I have come to the conclusion that no useful purpose will be served, in the present state of the public feeling by accepting the motion Nobody I think will be more pleased or happy than Government themselves to find out means to establish a peaceful and calm atmosphere to facilitate the work of the Round Table Committees But a conference of the kind proposed by the honourable member from Satara (Rao Bahadur Kale) is not, in my opinion, likely to prove successful Does the honourable member from Satara expect peace and calm atmosphere to prevail when Government have to resort to extraordinary measures to preserve law and order ? And does he seriously believe that the calm atmosphere which he so ardently desires will be produced in the present state of public feeling unless the present rule of ordinances is brought to an end ? And does he expect that Government will or can change the present policy unless and until the challenge given to law and order by the Congress is withdrawn ? Sir, no Government worth the name will hesitate to accept such a challenge Either they have to abdicate when such a challenge is given or they must rule with a firm hand There is no half way open to Government. So the chief condition precedent to any such peaceful and calm atmosphere is that the present revolutionary and subversive movement must be stopped So long as the present civil disobedience movement is going on, in other words, as long as defiance of law and order is going on, so long there is no hope, in my humble opinion, of any such peaceful and calm atmosphere prevailing in the country I expect that nobody regrets more the necessity of having had to resort to such extraordinary measures than the Government themselves and I believe that the ordinances will not be allowed to be in force a day longer than the time when the necessity for them is removed Government have thus a clear duty to perform and they will be ill-performing it if they show any slackness or weak-mindedness in the discharge of their duties It must be recognised at the same time that Government have shown ample proof of their sincere desire to push on the work of the Round Table Conference by setting up three different committees So, it is easier, for obvious reasons, for the Congress to make the first move to bring about a peaceful and calm atmosphere in the country than for the Government

Dr J ALBAN D'SOUZA (Bombay City, South) Mr President,——

Rao Bahadur S K BOLE rose

The Honourable the PRESIDENT Dr D'Souza has been allowed to speak, and he is in possession of the House I should point out that honourable members who wish to address the House must rise in their places every time the chance arises until they catch the eye of the President The Chair will not call upon them because they had risen several times before

Dr J ALBAN D'SOUZA Mr President, there cannot be a shadow of doubt that the motion tabled by my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Kale, which is now under discussion, is a highly praiseworthy and commendable effort at bringing about a conciliation between those who, at the bidding of His Majesty's Government, are now actively engaged in introducing a process of reforms with federation as the aim, based on the one hand on self-governing provinces and on the other on Indian States—between these and those who either by acts of indifference or positive negation seem, for reasons of their own, to be opposed to the process Sir, the principle of conciliation necessarily connotes the existence of at least two parties, and, further Sir, for any measure of success to be achieved by conciliation, the only earnest for it lies in genuine advances made by both parties towards one another, in other words, conciliation is based on the all-important principle of give and take Sir, my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Kale referred to the present political situation, and it is, I believe, the present political situation that has actuated him to put forward this effort to effect a conciliation. Before we get any further with the pros and cons of the necessity of bringing about this conciliation, as arising from the present political situation which, as I have indicated means a process of give and take, I feel it behoves us to search our consciences a little I propose to conduct this search of our consciences and particularly so, of that of my honourable friend Mr Petit by means of the following queries The first query is, what does India basically demand from His Majesty's Government ? The second is, what has India already received and is likely to receive at the hands of His Majesty's Government ? Thirdly, in the matter of the proposed conciliation, has the "give" portion, in the principle of give and take been complied with to a genuine and satisfactory extent by his Majesty's Government ? And, lastly, in the matter of the proposed conciliation, has the "give" portion been complied with to a genuine and satisfactory extent by India ? Sir, I request the House to bear with me for a few short minutes, while I search my conscience and the conscience of the honourable House with these queries

Sir, the first query is what is India's basic demand from His Majesty's Government ? Put briefly, succinctly yet comprehensively, I say, Sir that India rightly and legitimately demands a fuller share in the responsibility of her own government The second query is, what has India received so far ? I need not go into this question very minutely The very first bench on the official side indicates what has already been achieved Out of seven Members of Government only two are Europeans and five are Indians, that is, 72 8 per cent of the Members are Indian Further, Sir, as the Honourable the Home Member said in the course of his speech the other day, in the superior services, the ratio of Indians to Europeans is progressively on the increase in favour of Indians Coming now to consider what India can expect to receive in the near future——

Rao Bahadur R S ASAVALE On a point of order, Sir Are we discussing the question of the constitution now, or are we discussing the motion before the House ? Is the honourable member in order ?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT Has the honourable member anything to say in respect of the point of order ?

Dr J ALBAN D'SOUZA I wish to emphatically point out Sir, that the motion of my honourable friend the mover aims at a conciliation which as I have indicated involves the principle of give and take. I therefore submit, Sir, that the consideration of what has been given is perfectly justifiable and quite in order

The Honourable the PRESIDENT Ever since the discussion started, I have been pointing out to honourable members that they should speak within the scope of the motion But I think almost every speaker has digressed from the main point The honourable members should understand that the present proposal is to present an address to His Excellency to convene a conference to consider ways and means of bringing about reconciliation and of restoring peace in the country

Dr J ALBAN D'SOUZA Mr President, the idea underlying the motion is that of conciliation I therefore hope the House will consider it from the point of view I have mentioned To resume the line of my argument what may India expect in the near future from His Majesty's Government? In answer to this I will refer the honourable House to the statement made by the Prime Minister at the close of the second Round Table Conference on the 1st December 1931 There he has said

'The view of His Majesty's Government is that responsibility for the Government of India should be placed upon Legislatures, Central and Provincial, with such provisions as may be necessary to guarantee, during a period of transition, the observance of certain obligations and to meet other special circumstances, and also with such guarantees as are required by minorities to protect their political liberties and rights"

The Honourable the PRESIDENT That passage is irrelevant to the question at issue

Dr J ALBAN D'SOUZA Sir, as conciliation, involving a give and take, is concerned, what I wish to indicate is what His Majesty's Government has done, in the way of giving, by definite and decisive steps taken to meet the demands and wishes of India This, Sir, I believe, will give the honourable House an idea as to how to proceed in the matter of the suggested conciliation In his opening remarks the honourable mover actually suggested that a spirit of conciliation should prevail If the advances made on both sides justify it, conciliation will be possible I am trying to indicate that the spirit of conciliation is not going to prevail if all the "give" has got to be done on one side and a proportionate amount of "give" is not done on the other. I hope this will convince the honourable House that what I am saying is in perfect accordance with the principle directly concerned in the matter of the conciliation solution that has been suggested

Sir, one of the members on this side of the House doubted the sincerity of the advances made by His Majesty's Government I think there is all the genuineness and sincerity possible in the move made by His Majesty's Government We cannot get a better proof of this than in certain statements made by the Prime Minister and particularly in the statement which I have quoted——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT I must point out to the honourable member again that he is entirely digressing from the point. The question raised by the honourable mover of the motion is the situation that has arisen out of the issue of the ordinances by the Government of India, with which of course he would not deal, but since the application of certain sections of the ordinances to this Presidency has created that situation in this Presidency, one of the methods he suggests, to remedy that situation, is the holding of a conference That has been fully explained That is the issue before the House

Dr J. ALBAN D'SOUZA Since you have ruled it so I shall leave the subject of the spirit of conciliation and get on to the ordinances I heartily believe, Sir, that the ordinances both in their institution and in their application are the most hateable and sickening of processes.

[Dr J Alban D'Souza]

I must however say that inasmuch as these are a desperate remedy for a desperate disease and are not the result of ordinary ailments resulting from normal and legitimate demands they naturally fall outside the scope of the process of give and take the suggested conciliation calls for The reference made by my honourable friend the mover to a spirit of vindictiveness and of repression for repression's sake, therefore, does not arise I heartily agree with the view expressed by the Honourable the Home Member when he said that it is a case for propaganda, propaganda, and yet more propaganda. I believe that this will do it better than any conferences of the kind suggested by the honourable the mover We have had a number of such conferences in the past and we know that the results thereof have been very small I feel very strongly that it ought to be the earnest desire of each individual member of this honourable House, if he has any interest and stake in the land to do his best to create a public opinion in his constituency in favour of arriving at a friendly understanding between the several parties that are responsible for the present state of affairs

Rao Bahadur S K BOLE Sir, I also think, like the honourable member Sir Shah Nawáz Bhutto, that the present motion is unnecessary Sir, His Excellency the Governor is a shrewd statesman and he himself, without anybody asking him, held a conference of leaders in the city of Bombay Men of different shades of opinion were present there and His Excellency asked all of them to express their views I very well remember that His Excellency called out the name of the honourable mover Rao Bahadur Kale But he was conspicuous by his absence When an opportunity was offered to him, he failed to take advantage of it Now he has come before this House with his motion It is, I think, just after the fair

Now, the civil disobedience movement is not confined to this Presidency It is being carried on all over British India The ordinances also are not confined to Bombay Presidency, they are applicable to the whole of British India The ordinances were promulgated by the Government of India So the subject matter of the motion is an All-India affair I therefore think that instead of requesting His Excellency the Governor to convene a conference, the honourable member who moved this motion would have done better if he had requested His Excellency the Governor to convey to the Viceroy of India the recommendation of this Council to convene a conference of All-India leaders But he has not done that I had submitted an amendment to this effect; but that was disallowed on the ground that it would widen the scope of the motion I have, therefore, to oppose the motion, as I think it will serve no useful purpose

Now, I come to the question asked by the honourable member Mr Achrekar, as to who is responsible for the introduction of the reforms I may tell him that it is the Indian soldiers belonging to the backward and depressed classes and the Muhammadan and other martial communities who fought on the battle-fields of Europe and Asia and shed their blood during the last war who are responsible for the introduction of the reforms which we are now working by entering this Council Sir, a large number of soldiers lost their lives on the battle-fields and the merchants and millowners hoarded wealth by making huge profits Therefore, they are quite safe in the civil disobedience movement It is the masses that are suffering on account of the civil disobedience movement

It is very risky to speak against the Congress [An Honourable Member Why ?] You may ask the millowners and merchants They know how risky it is They are so much afraid of the Congress ban Though they speak against the Congress in private, they dare not utter a single word against the Congress in public Some of the millowners may behave as if they were wolves towards their workmen, but in their behaviour towards the Congress, they are like meek lambs I admire the spirit and courage that is shown by my friend Dr Solanki in expressing boldly his views about the Congress He has rightly followed the advice given by our All-India leader, Sir A P Patro, who asked the public to come out boldly into the open in order to support Government to complete the work started by the Round Table Conference Sir, the Congress does not represent the masses It has done nothing for the backward and depressed classes On the contrary, it refused to help the backward and depressed classes to get freedom and equality in social matters Those classes, therefore, are against the Congress movement The civil disobedience movement started by the Congress is ruining the masses [Interruption] Therefore, if the honourable mover wants Government to remove the ordinances, he should first of all prevail upon the Congress leaders to abandon the civil disobedience movement and then only will there be the necessary peaceful atmosphere With these words, I oppose the motion

Mr L R GOKHALE (Poona City) Sir, the motion for an address to His Excellency the Governor is a very simple one, but I find various interpretations have been put on it Some of the honourable members have detected a personal element in the motion of the honourable member representing the University (Rao Bahadur Kale) I do not see anything personal in it which would lead us to believe that he wants to act the role of a peace-maker like Mr Jayakar or anybody else All that the motion suggests is that leaders of all parties in the Presidency should be asked to meet in a conference with a view to restore peaceful and calm atmosphere for the working of the new constitution I fail to see any personal element in it If anything, it is an attempt to bring together the various parties which had no opportunity to meet together for many days As a matter of fact, in this Council we see there is no representation of certain sections In this honourable House there are no representatives who can speak on behalf of the Congress movement It is all very well for some of us here to run down the Congress or to misrepresent the Congress or its motives or its working because it is safe here as there is no one to reply to that I am afraid also there is not one here——

An Honourable MEMBER You are one

Mr L R GOKHALE If I were a Congress representative, I would not have been within the precincts of this honourable House All those who are in this House are not representing the present Congress, otherwise we have no place in this honourable House

An Honourable MEMBER Are there not friends of the Congress in this House ?

Mr L R GOKHALE Yes, there are friends and there are enemies also. I know there are those who are its enemies in season and out of season, so, there are friends of the Congress, but that will not enable us to say that the Congress is represented here

Another element of the country is not represented here and that is the Indian mercantile community, I mean the native Indian community of merchants There is a representative of the European communities, there is a representative of a limited interest of the millowners, but the vast Indian commercial community has been for one reason or another kept out of this honourable House There are other interests also not represented, I mean the depressed classes not headed by Dr Ambedkar or the honourable the nominated member Dr Solanki Then again, the representatives of that minority of my Moslem brothers who do not see eye to eye with those who are present here, are not here These are some of the communities and some of the interests and some of the minorities who are not represented here

Rao Bahadur R S ASAVALE There are two elected members

Mr L R GOKHALE I know, but those who have been non-co-operating with the Council and the elections have not sought entrance in this honourable House and therefore they are not here The main object and the purpose of this motion is to bring together all those who are co-operating with Government and those who are not able to co-operate with Government It was suggested by the honourable member the representative of the European Chamber of Commerce that an amendment should be made in this resolution and a conference of the representative leaders of this House should be called by His Excellency I think there would be no particular advantage in having such a conference, in fact to make that amendment would be to lose the spirit and the purpose of this motion, Sir The object of this motion, as I say, is to bring together all those elements which have not been able to meet on a common platform for various reasons It was suggested just now that there was a conference called by His Excellency very recently and there representatives were called to meet and there my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Kale was conspicuous by his absence Why he absented himself is not a question for this House to consider, but at any rate that conference could not speak for all the parties That conference was of persons who were co-operators or members who previously were or now are members of this honourable House How could there be representation of those who were not in the Council in that conference ?

The question raised by this debate is of great importance 'Is it or is it not necessary to make an attempt to restore peace and order in the country ?' If it is, what are the means of doing it and is not this suggested conference one of the very important means of achieving that object ? I find, Sir, all the speakers who have spoken on this debate have begun with paying a compliment to my honourable friend the mover of this motion by saying that his object is a very laudable one and they have also gone so far as to say that it is necessary to restore peace and order and to find out means for doing that Having said so much, I was surprised to find that for one reason or another representatives of the so-called minorities were slipping away from that position and advancing one reason or another why this resolution should not be supported. Having given the best thought and the most sympathetic thought to this trend of argument, I fail to see either the propriety or the logic of this statement that though the motion is such as should be accepted, yet it should not be voted for What is the meaning of it ? I for one fail to see its meaning or its logic If really all of us are serious and do believe that an honest attempt ought to be made, should not a chance be given for such an effort to be made under the auspices or under the aegis of His Excellency the Governor ? Suppose this motion is successfully accepted by this House and His Excellency is pleased to call a conference and if at that conference the Congress or the other elements which are not represented here refuse to come and associate with us, that will not cost us anything It is not a question of prestige, but on the other hand it will be clearly shown to the world outside that every effort was being made by Government and the co-operators with Government to approach an understanding and that they had put forward a hand which was refused by our friends of the Congress cult. I don't think it likely, but that will not in itself be a small advantage. Sir, I think I should not omit to say that the Congress is a real, patriotic, powerful element in the country Whether you speak of it as a disloyal movement or whether you speak of it as a movement of only the majority community or whether you speak of it as confined to interested persons in the country, all that talk will have no value when we see actual realities Go wherever you like in the country, go to any village, go round rural or urban areas of the Presidency and you will find that the Congress has taken a firm hold on the minds of all sections of the community, whether they are Mahomedans, whether they are Parsis, whether they are Hindus or whether they are Anglo-Indians. Everyone of the communities has been thinking that the Congress is certainly fighting honestly for the rights and privileges of the people No doubt, the methods may differ, but nobody can find fault with the Congress element and can honestly say that they are fighting for selfish interests It was for the first time, Sir, that I had the great pleasure and privilege of hearing that the Congress was dominated by persons who had personal motives in this struggle To go to jail, to suffer rigorous imprisonment, to be separated from their families, to be dragged away from their professions, to lose their property acquired during a whole-lifetime, and then perhaps to be belaboured if there is a lathi charge, is this all selfishness ? Is this all personal interest ? Is this all an attempt to gain something for the individuals or the community ? I put it to every honest thinker about the question May be the Congress people have been led away or misguided in their ways of remonstrating or in their ways of fighting for the motherland, but that is no reason for running down the people in their motives, in their aspirations Has the Congress asked for any particular boon or a particular privilege for any certain privileged classes ? The Congress was started in 1885 Up to now it has been speaking in the name of the country I know that some of those honourable gentlemen who are sitting on the opposite benches at one time had great respect for the Congress movement and they had identified themselves with that movement heart and soul Can they really say that the Congress movement is either a sectional movement or an interested movement or a movement of persons with selfish, personal motives or for personal gains ? I appeal to the House to think about it Let us make an honest effort to meet those whom we call misguided and see whether we cannot sit round a table and hear each other and converse with each other and come to a solution of the difficulty which lies in their way of giving up the movement on which they have launched It is true that unless the ordinances are withdrawn or rather the application of the ordinances is removed, there cannot be a peaceful atmosphere, and it is equally true that unless the civil disobedience movement is brought to a stand-still, there cannot be a suitable atmosphere for a compromise, but how is that to be achieved ? Can it be achieved by sitting at the ends of the table or can it be achieved by one side being outside somewhere in the country and one being inside here in the Council ? Is that a method which would do ? I believe there is a concurrence, a strong united feeling, that some effort must be made to bring back a peaceful atmosphere in the country if the coming constitutional reform is to be worked satisfactorily to the benefit of all That is the feeling of every honest politically minded person But then the next question is, how that can be done Some of us are fighting shy of the opposition, are reluctant to meet face to face those who are our opponents, to meet those who are now our adversaries so to say, but I say, let us take a chance and come and meet together I do not think that those who are our friends and compatriots of some of us two or three or four years ago, are fools enough not to understand this properly They are patriotic men not thinking of personal and selfish advantages, they are intelligent, they are as much able to appreciate the benefits of the country as any one of us and its position We are not going to meet people who are mere school-boys or who are mere riff-raffs of the community We are going to ask leaders of the parties to meet together Is it possible to conceive that popular leaders, Government-side leaders, pro-Government leaders, pro-Mahomedan leaders, pro-majority leaders or all those leaders will sit together and confer together for a time for nothing, that it will be a mere wasted effort on our part or a mere waste of our energies or of our money ? That is the question that is before this honourable House, and really I think that question has been raised at a very opportune time and not a bit too late——

Rao Bahadur S N ANGADI Who will speak on behalf of the Congress ?

Mr L R GOKHALE That is really a relevant question, which is easily answered Once this Government decides on holding a conference of leaders of all parties, I know Government knows the ways and means of securing the presence of those very persons whose presence they may require Government certainly knows its mind, Government knows the leaders of various parties, and I for one would ask His Excellency to help us to get at the conference such leaders as can speak on behalf of the Congress party authoritatively I can appreciate the motives of those great men who have sacrificed everything for their country and I can also appreciate that those men are not now free men, but that does not mean that they shall not ever be free, that does not mean that Government will not allow them to come out of jail for all time and to confer with us, and that is the reason why I believe my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Kale comes forward with a prayer to His Excellency to hold such a conference I do not think either that the Government means to perpetuate these ordinances I do not believe it, I certainly cannot believe that the leaders of the Congress party do not know that civil disobedience is not a permanent measure for achieving freedom or for achieving political progress of our motherland Both parties to the dispute are wise enough to understand how far these things should continue and when they should cease I do believe that both of them have tried their strength sufficiently Government must have found by this time that dictators after dictators follow each other, no sooner the 22nd dictator is clapped in jail than the 23rd dictator steps into his place ; no sooner the 23rd dictator is put into prison than the 24th takes his place and so on, and the Congress Bulletins are being published notwithstanding all the long arms of the Government of Bombay Similarly, the Congress people, whatever some of them may say to the contrary, must have also seen that their activities have been sufficiently curbed and checked by the coercive measures which Government is taking and both parties must have known by this time just what has been gained and just what has been lost and both of them must now be thinking whether the time has not come for a compromise or for an understanding satisfactory to both parties concerned and in the interest of the mothercountry at large

The day before yesterday we were asked whether a battle was ever fought with gloves on My answer is definitely and positively "No" But I would ask another question "Was there ever a battle fought between a powerful, well-armed, violent party on one hand and a party which was unarmed, non-violent and non-resisting on the other ?" Have we ever heard of a battle in which one party is fighting with arms in its hand and the other is unarmed but ready to suffer and ready to give the other cheek if slapped on the one cheek, as Christ did ? Is that possible ? Is that war ? And if such a war is there, I do believe such a war ought to be fought with gloves on There ought to be sympathy, there ought to be fellow-feeling, there ought to be a humanitarian feeling, there ought to be right understanding I do not know whether it is really a war It is a misnomer to call this fight for freedom, as is being fought at the present time, a war It is a struggle between a people who are unarmed, non-violent—there may be exceptions but they do not form the rule—on the one hand and a powerful, well-armed, and where necessary a violent Government on the other, perhaps helped occasionally by those who think that there lies the salvation of their community in helping the Government against a people who are helpless so far as help can go This is the position Therefore, I put it, Sir, is it not necessary to carry on this war with sympathy, with gloves on ? You are not fighting an enemy, you are fighting your own people, who are fighting for their own freedom In fact, you are ready to give them that freedom You only say "Let us go, at this rate, at this particular pace" and they say "Let us go faster" Cannot a via media be found out as to at what pace they should go ? In order to do that, an effort is being made by my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Kale Should we say "All that you say is very good, all that you are speaking is certainly acceptable, but we do not think our interests require that we should support you, let us hold back from voting in favour of the motion" ? At this moment, if our interests require anything it is certainly the backing up of this motion and showing to the people outside that those who are co operating with Government are equally anxious to co-operate with those who are not with the Government to get a settlement and a happy solution of this difficult problem That is how I look at the motion

Of course, I never expected, Sir, that the debate on this motion would descend down in some cases certainly to some petty fights between community and community The high level of debate that was kept up in the first few speeches dwindled down to a level to which I certainly wish it had not gone down We are tackling a very serious problem in the life history of this great country, certainly of this great province of the country We are on the threshold of new Reforms We want to collect our forces together, to co-ordinate them, and to see if we cannot work these Reforms to mutual advantage and not to the disadvantage of a single community That is our purpose With that purpose at the back of his mind my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Kale has brought up this motion before the House Are we then to run it down, to belittle it, to say that the depressed classes will suffer, and the oppressed classes will have no relief, and the advanced classes will go forward and suppress further the oppressed and the depressed classes' so-called claims ? I can certainly assure honourable members that if they go round the country they will find that nine-tenths of the followers of the Congress do not belong to the advanced classes now The advanced classes form a small community numerically, and naturally the followers of the Congress are certainly the majority of the so-called backward classes and sometimes also from the depressed classes

Dr P G SOLANKI Question

Mr L R GOKHALE My honourable friend will ever be questioning He will even question, I am afraid, if the sun is shining If I were to say that the sun is shining, I am afraid he will say it is not shining I cannot help it But if my honourable friend accompanies me to places in the rural areas, I can give him facts, names, figures, which will prove who are the followers of the Congress, the advanced classes or the backward classes In a certain village there are 6 Brahmins and 606 non-Brahmins The 6 Brahmins who are there have joined the Congress, but out of the 606 non-Brahmins, I can say that more than 150 or 200 are in a sympathy with the Congress But apart from this, there is one other fact which has to be considered Scan very carefully the list of those who have invited upon themselves a jail life See how many of them belong to the forward classes and how many of them belong to the so-called backward classes I have scanned the figures, and I can satisfy my honourable friend Dr Solanki that he is certainly under a delusion Perhaps it suits his purpose to say that the depressed classes are not with the Congress But the fact is otherwise, they are with the Congress, and it is not to be wondered at The Congress is for the people, is asking for rights for the people It is very natural to be influenced by high promises, and the people think that the Congress is honest To them it appears very clear that the co-operators are with the Government and the non-co-operators are against the Government, and the people want to get something from the Government—rights for the people Is it very strange for those who have brains, for those who have heads on their shoulders to come to the understanding that those who are with the Government are pro-Government people and not so much for the country, and that those who are against the Government and who are in the jails, are for the country? It is not very strange My backward friends are human beings, with as much intelligence as other communities have We have lived among them, we have moved among them, and I can positively say that they really think that the salvation of the country is in the hands of the Congress And it is of course true that the Congress people have made sacrifices We are here driving in motor cars, we want good dresses and excellent food What of the Congress? The leader of the Congress we call a half-naked fakir What does it indicate? That indicates the way of thought of the Congress school I need not justify the way of Mahatma Gandhi, but I do not think it is not at all strange that the people in the villages are fascinated by the activities and work of the Congress people Sometimes there are misguided persons, I know it Sometimes there are people who proclaim lip non-violence, but they are one in a thousand Such cases may occur and do occur, but that is no reason why we should refuse to co-operate or invite the co-operation of those who are the most prominent patriotic people moving in the country and accepted as such by the country

So, I would only say that when this conference is called, if it is called at all, across the table a discussion may be really raised over certain questions which we have now discussed, for instance, the question of the minorities Really, if the minorities do believe that their interests are not being properly watched, that question can be discussed in that conference If there are others who really believe that their interests are not safe, can they not suggest ways and means how they can be safeguarded ?

An Honourable MEMBER We have suggested already.

Mr L R GOKHALE They have been suggested and, so far as reports go, they have been accepted But if there is a further occasion, why should you not take advantage of it ? I see, Sir, a peculiar mentality in not being ready to meet and face a conference like this If our cause is fair, honest and just, it will certainly meet with success On the other hand, if it is not fair, it may not meet with success What is wrong there in having such a conference ? I for one would really say that the minority communities should be the first to invite such a conference and be present at its sittings and discuss the various points We see the position to-day of our Parsi friends They are in a minority, they are an infinitesimal minority They have never said that they do not want to be represented on the conference I think it has been made sufficiently clear that the attitude of Parsis is one of favour for this motion I would certainly say that that should be the attitude of all parties concerned I would like to know what we are going to lose by having this conference. Shall we be going back ? Shall we be thrown back somewhere ? Nobody has been able to tell me exactly what is the loss in having this motion passed But what would be the gain, all know An honourable member says that it will be of no use I would like to ask, why ? Why will it not be of any use ? It really we meet together, will not the discussion bring out something ? We have a saying in Sanskrit which means " Out of discussion come truths." If two parties meet together and make an honest effort at understanding, the result is always a good understanding Instead of that we are trying to keep ourselves apart from one another We have here the Government benches I must admit they have expressed their sympathy for this motion They say they have sympathy, though they have gone further to say that they will not take part in the voting I for one should have expected the Government to be courageous enough, and if they really had sympathy for the motion, to vote for it Why should we try to please somebody else except ourselves ? If the Government benches really believe that this is a right motion, and should have their sympathy, is it not their duty to put their weight on its side ? Why should they say that they will not vote ? I do not think Government is afraid that because they may vote against a certain party to-day they will lose that party from their fold for ever I do not think it is likely ' Occasional votes do not disturb the relations that exist between the parties and their leaders I do really think that the Government would be well advised in coming out and voting with the people, according to their convictions If some of them think that the motion should not be accepted, let them oppose the motion On the other hand, let those who are in favour of it go and join the majority, which I hope there will be, for the motion But this attitude of lip sympathy without actual help is not such as can either be understood or appreciated

Sir, I find that one or two Congress Bulletins were read out here, and they were read out probably with a view to let the House know what is the trend of thought of the Congress people I believe no ghost is required to tell us what the mentality of the Congress people is, what boycott they advocate, what their feeling is towards the European mercantile community, and what their feeling is towards those who want to deal in foreign markets For this very reason it is, to convince the Congress people that the good of the country lies not in this direction of distrust but in the opposite direction, that we are going to have a conference called I should say these Bulletins are the best argument in favour of the motion being carried It is only to carry these men from the present path and bring them on to the right path that this motion has been put forward The Bulletins are evidence that there is active intelligence that is being bestowed upon these questions, and it is our responsibility to guide it into the right channels That is how I would look at the question of these Bulletins

I was told, Sir,—I was surprised to hear it—that it is the soldiers that have won the Reforms, not the Congress I do not know, but I do presume that those who say this have read the history of the Congress movement I do not want to remind the honourable member that Hume and Wedderbern among others started the Congress in 1885 It was afterwards supported by the country Some may say that the Congress has been progressing, others may say that it has been drifting I do not want to quarrel with either of them, but there is no doubt the Congress has been progressing, and the Reforms that we received after the War cannot be said to be the result of the War, so that the Indian soldier alone can claim the credit for it to himself It is very easy, once you do not want to give credit to the people who worked for it, to give it to others or to take it for one's self There is something wrong in making such a claim, and history cannot justify it It is nearly fifty years that the Congress has been working, lakhs and lakhs of rupees have been spent over the work of the Congress, Congress pandals from year to year have been packed up with 40,000 or 60,000 people Were they all Brahmins and people belonging to the forward classes? Was there no soldier in it? What is the idea of those who say that the Reforms are the outcome of the sacrifice of the Indian soldiers? Of course, the soldier did his duty, and his reward has been given to him The Congressman has been doing his duty, his reward must be given to him To appropriate all that to one's self, and to deny a proper reward to the other party is not fair It is not true that the Congress has done nothing The declarations would not have been made but for the Congress

With these words, Sir, I say that this motion of my honourable friend should be accepted, and an honest effort should be made to see the happy result of the conference that is suggested in it

Rao Bahadur D. R PATIL I move the closure, Sir

The Honourable the PRESIDENT I accept the closure The honourable the mover

Rao Bahadur R R KALE (Bombay University) Sir, when I moved the motion, the Honourable the Home Member was pleased to get up and state the Government case I did not expect that the debate would take such a turn and in fact take such a long time of the House But at least we have the great benefit of the expression of views by various honourable members Even that is a gain to some extent In reply to the several criticisms that have been made, I should like to say a few words

The motion does not seem to have been properly understood Therefore it seems to me that there has been some misunderstanding about it First of all, in my opening speech, I made it clear that my first object in moving my motion was to see whether, after two months that the ordinances have been in operation, such a stage has arrived when Government might be in a position to bestow some thought on the question which has been raised, namely, whether the ordinances should be kept in full operation in the whole of the areas That was the point which I had made It seems to me that Government at the beginning may have been perhaps justified in fixing a day—the 4th or 5th of January—from which each of the ordinances should come into operation throughout this presidency After a lapse of certain time, is it not fair for them to consider whether the operation of the ordinance should continue in full force and in all parts of the country ? It has been stated by the Honourable the Home Member that the ordinances would not be kept for a day longer than necessary May I ask him whether it is the intention to keep them in force, all of them in all the places, just as they were brought into existence at one moment and in all places, and they were waiting for that moment, when they will do away with them ? Is it not possible for them to consider whether it is necessary to wait for that distant moment or to proceed to withdraw the ordinances from such areas and such places as, in my humble opinion, must have been in a position to show that the real effect of the ordinances in those areas has been adverse for an atmosphere of peace and calm ? That is one point which may be discussed in the conference There are two objects in my motion One is to consider ways and means to bring about peaceful atmosphere and the other is—for what ?—for assisting in framing a constitution—a work of the highest magnitude at the present moment.

[Rao Bahadur R R Kale]

I was surprised to see the honourable member Dr Solanki saying that they would not have been able to sit on the Franchise Committee, but for the ordinances I am afraid I cannot agree with his view If he and others of his persuasion believe that the absence of representation of other views is likely to make their task easy in the framing of the constitution, and also if he believes that the constitution can be framed in this manner in the absence of the co-operation of that vast politically-minded class, does he expect that such a constitution can possibly be worked ? May I ask him only this question ? Though he may find the task easy at the beginning, he must look ahead It is no good looking for the moment and saying we have a calm atmosphere and an ex parte does not matter On paper the constitution will look well but when put into force, are we again to rule the country by ordinance ? If certain honourable members entertain that view, they are welcome to do so But from my humble experience of public life for 40 or 50 years, I do feel, however much I may differ from those of the Congress persuasion, it will be extremely difficult to work a constitution, if it is meant really for the good of the people in general. That is the point which we have to consider I do sincerely believe that there are people even outside the Congress—I mentioned in the opening remarks several associations—who have not been able to bestow any thought, because their attention is distracted They have no rest, they are in a condition of restlessness and from the little I have been able to know from the inside and outside work in which I am engaged, they are altogether in a mood of despondency I mentioned the responsive co-operation party I expected that they would be coming to assist us and that at this time of difficulty and momentous importance they should take their part Do we find anything in the press, any suggestions as to the line of work on which this constitution making should proceed ? Everybody is afraid There is an atmosphere uncongenial for the expression of free opinion I think we cannot shut our eyes to the situation The press has been warned and security has been demanded Of course with regard to persons, they are arrested they are kept in jail up to the period allowed under the ordinance and are let off with a warning to give attendance in a police station up to June or July—give parole for any number of months up to 3rd July That shows the way in which Government seem to have made up their minds not to think of anything else but to continue the whole system of this ordinance in operation up to the full period Ordinances are emergency measures It is admitted. It was stated by the honourable member Mr Winterbotham that there are ordinances in other countries, perhaps, more drastic I may draw his attention to the emergency measures that were passed in England in 1920 when there was a strike movement in England What is the procedure ? Any ordinance or order in Council can be promulgated, but before the expiry of seven days, the matter has to be placed before the Parliament, if it is in session, if not, a special session of the Parliament has to be called and that order in Council or Ordinance has got to be placed for the sanction of the House There we see that that power is centred in the hands of the representatives of the people But here the ordinances are drafted by a judicial or legal Secretary of the Government I do not say that he should be blamed for it It is his duty But he is a Secretary of the Government which is not responsible If we take the instance of other countries, we will see that the ordinances are promulgated but they are operated upon in different ways And though there is a penalty provided, what is that penalty ? In the Emergency Powers Act it is provided "Provided also that no such regulation shall make it an offence for any person or persons to take part in a strike, or peacefully to persuade any other person or persons to take part in a strike"

I may point out that here the people are arrested on suspicion, and they are asked to enter into a parole If they disobey the parole they are given rigorous imprisonment Here the civil disobedience is thus rather encouraged I am sure there has been no disobedience of the laws relating to forests or land revenue or anything in my part of the country But it is only the disobedience of the parole order My point is that people who are out to disobey may create an opportunity for them to disobey Because these are the directions under the ordinance that he must behave in a certain manner, that he must attend a police station, at a particular hour, and if a civil resister disobeys, he is stated to have committed an offence These are the only offences that are committed in the present regime There is no salt satyagraha, there is no forest satyagraha as we witnessed last year But here the only offence is that of disobeying a particular kind of order which I have mentioned My point is that, if those are the people who as I said are likely to be useful in the work of assisting and co-operating with Government in the matter of this reformed constitution, why not give an opportunity to them ? The first thing, therefore, as I said is to try to see if the ordinances could not be withdrawn in certain areas, if not in all, I do not say that they should be withdrawn from all places at once It is for the consideration of the Government if those leaders who are out of jail can be made available for this work Government might be in a position to ascertain whether the situation in certain parts of the country has not been such as not to require any longer the continuance of these ordinances

Secondly, the object is as has been stated by a number of honourable members of this House that, if possible why not seek the co operation of those who long for peace ? I said in the beginning of my speech that the leader of the Congress, as soon as he landed, expressed his desire which I quoted The honourable member Sir Shah Nawaz asks "What is the use ? We tried in India once and we tried in England a second time" That very leader has declared that he is quite willing to co-operate but there were certain reasons why he could not carry out his intention I referred to them in my opening speech The blame may be on both the sides After all, Mahatma Gandhi is a human being.

[Rao Bahadur R R Kale]

There have been some things which could not have been remedied Is it not possible again to try ? Should we be completely hopeless of improving the situation remembering that it was a ticklish cause, as I may call it, which broke the whole pact and rendered the situation as it is being experienced to-day After all, the refusal has something to do with it Cannot such an interview be granted even now ? As I said, we do not know the minds of the Congress people, but Government have every means of knowing it Let the public know the position It cannot be gainsaid that Pandit Malaviya did make out a case for reconsideration of the Government's decision in the rejoinder that he gave to the statement issued by Government It may be that a particular letter or message of the leader of the Congress may have a justification for His Excellency the Viceroy to take umbrage at Forgiveness is only a virtue in the weak, while in the strong it is an ornament, as the verse "Kshamā Guno Ashaktānām Shaktānām Bhūshanam Kshama" shows My honourable friend Rao Saheb Kulkarni is not here ; otherwise, he would have given the correct Sanskrit quotation, which I have translated But I think it is as I have quoted Forgiveness is a virtue in the weak, because he cannot fight , but if a strong man, who can punish, forgives, it will be an ornament to him Why not act in that spirit ? Where was the need for such hurry in precipitating matters and such haste in breaking off negotiations ? It has disturbed the whole atmosphere to attain which tremendous efforts were made by the late Viceroy, Lord Irwin , the partially done work of the Round Table Conference was left at that stage I feel it is essential in the framing of a constitution for this country that no effort should be spared to convene a conference of all leaders in the province By "leaders" I do not mean the people who are sitting here We are no leaders, I must confess Who is going to head us ? The Honourable the Home Member said that we members of the Council should go into the country and carry on propaganda We have attempted this, but who is going to listen to us or pay heed to us ?

The Honourable Sir RAFIUDDIN AHMAD laughed

Rao Bahadur R R KALE It is no use concealing facts , facts are facts The reason is obvious we have not been able to show as a result of our work in the Council that something has been done for the people Unless we can show something concrete to them, we cannot convince them That is the difficult and delicate position in which we are placed The honourable member Mr Winterbotham said that there were only two parties in the country, one the Congress and the other the Government [Mr G L Winterbotham indicated dissent] I thought that was the statement he made The state of having only two parties may come hereafter when responsible government comes in those in power will be one party and the rest the other party But at the present moment the situation is quite different As we all know, there have been other parties In countries where there is responsible government, there is a party in power and members of that party can go out and say to the people, "Here are the measures which we have carried out and they are to your benefit" The position here is different There is suspicion about the way the reforms are being launched I ask the honourable member representing the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, when there is that suspicion that Government are only thinking of carrying out the minority pact that was arranged in England, if Government do that, is that likely to inspire the least confidence in any of the other electors? My honourable friend Mr Achrekar, who belongs to a backward class—I refer to him because if I say anything it may be misinterpreted—gave expression the other day to the feelings which actuate the Marathas and the villagers It is no use the honourable member, Rao Bahadur Bole and Dr Solanki, living in Bombay City, holding no elected seats, parading as the representatives of the people and stating what the sentiments of these people are.

Dr P G SOLANKI I represent the backward and depressed classes of Gujarat and Northern Division Though nominated, I am in no way less patriotic than the elected members parading as representatives of people

Rao Bahadur R R KALE I referred to Mr Achrekar as a representative of the Marathas However that may be, I have always been for placing the facts before Government Government must be put in possession of the facts as they exist in the country If we do that, then our duty is done

I would not take more time of this House I am certainly grateful to the Honourable the Home Member for the sympathetic reception he gave to the resolution He said that the ordinances were being worked with moderation and that he would look into the cases that might be brought to his notice It is the duty of this side of the House to take advantage of that and point out to him cases where injustice has been done I also thank him for his promise to remain neutral I would not blame him for that, because probably Government wants to know what the non-official opinion on this motion is Let us on a point like this be unanimous I know it may be said that time has passed, but it is not yet too late Let us do our duty I appeal to the House to pass my motion I have no particular interest to serve in this matter, but I do feel that we shall be failing in our duty if at this juncture we do not carry to Government the opinion of this House, namely, that there is a feeling outside which does count and we should try to take account of that and proceed accordingly

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN Mr President, I have heard the mover of the address and the other speakers with great interest I find, Sir, that there is great divergence of opinion in regard to this address In spite of these acute differences, I assure the honourable members of this House that no one wishes more fervently than Government that there should be a calm and peaceful atmosphere They desire so not only in connection with constitution-framing, but for all time

[Sir Ghulam Hussain]

At the same time, I must bring to the notice of the Honourable House that it is far from the truth that Government want to govern by ordinances The Honourable the Home Member the day before yesterday explained the various ordinances, their implications and how they are being worked, and he assured honourable members that the ordinances in this presidency were being worked with moderation and restraint He has heard all the criticisms that have been levelled against the working of the ordinances, and I am sure he will take into consideration all reasonable criticisms He has heard that in spite of the ordinances excesses are being committed by the Congress people and he will consider that question also

Sir, to my mind, this conference does not seem to be a remedy The British Government is committed to self-government for India the principle has been accepted once for all that we are to get responsibility in the centre and autonomy in the provinces The real work now is that everyone of us should see that these reforms are introduced as early as possible Then there will be absolutely no complaints about these ordinances Law and Order and Land Revenue, about which we have been hearing all these days, will be in charge of Ministers responsible to the legislature and the people, and then the drafting will be done by a Secretary who will be responsible to a Minister That is the real remedy for all these ills that we have been discussing for the last two days

Coming to the motion of my honourable friend, one of his objects was to consider the political situation——

Rao Bahadur R R KALE Ordinances also

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN ——and, therefore, he brought in the ordinances, if I rightly understood him He will pardon me if I say that there are acute differences about the ordinances in this Honourable House There were members who said that if Government did not continue these ordinances they would not be able to attend this Council.

Rao Bahadur R R KALE Only one member said that

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN There was another honourable member who said—I have taken down the very words—that there were places in the presidency where there was so much lawlessness that people thought that Government had ceased to exist I heard another honourable member saying that in spite of the ordinances the Congress is committing excesses and restraining people from carrying on their ordinary avocations

Rao Bahadur R R KALE Is that so in all places ?

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN Whether all or few, these are the facts that have been placed before this House by members as representative as the honourable mover of this address Therefore, Sir, I submit that there are acute differences about the ordinances and about the utility of this conference The honourable member wants all these difficulties solved by a conference of provincial leaders, I submit, Sir, that the honourable mover and other honourable members of this House are well aware that the civil disobedience movement is not a provincial movement, but an All-India movement The honourable mover will excuse me when I say that provincial leaders, however big they may be, cannot deal with this movement It is only All-India leaders that can deal with it Suppose we acceded to his request and we called such a conference, where is the guarantee that the decisions of the provincial leaders would be accepted by the All-India leaders ?

Rao Bahadur R R KALE There is Pandit Malaviya

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN He is not the only leader The honourable member himself admitted that there were other parties, the revolutionary party, the responsive co-operators who were nearly identifying themselves with the Liberal party to which the honourable member belongs I will draw the attention of the House to several other parties which he has not mentioned There are the Muhammadans who claim that they are a party by themselves There are the depressed classes who say they are a separate party, so also the Non-Brahmins who are a distinct party Now, Sir, if this question is dealt with by the provincial leaders, how are we going to have the revolutionary leaders here ? Will any honourable member advise Government how to invite the revolutionary leaders ?

Rao Bahadur R R KALE Not in this Presidency

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN But the movement is an All-India movement The peaceful atmosphere which is so necessary cannot be created unless all the leaders come and discuss the matter and find out ways and means

My honourable friend Mr Gokhale said that these provincial leaders may settle communal questions Even All-India leaders have failed to arrive at a satisfactory communal solution I was there where Mahatmaji himself was We did not succeed Much less will provincial leaders succeed in the solution of that question

Honourable members have noticed that this resolution has not had a good reception from a large section of the House The Muhammadan leaders opposed it, the depressed class leaders opposed it, and some of the Non-Brahmins also opposed it The honourable mover himself admitted that, though he is an elected member of this Council and leader of a party in this House, he has no influence outside I do not know whether the same can be said of the other leaders of parties That is not my concern

Rao Bahadur S K. BOLE Leaders of other parties have got followers, whilst this leader has no followers

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN But that is not my concern, Sir The honourable mover did not name any leaders who, in his opinion, should be invited to the conference He has thrown the whole burden of finding out the provincial leaders on Government The other day

[Sir Ghulam Hussain]

I was very much amused when my friend Sir Shah Nawaz gave an instance of a leader who was called to a similar conference at Government House At that time the leader told him that if he had his way, he would stop the civil disobedience movement by means of bullets, and to my honourable friend's regret, that very man was found denouncing Government for taking action against the Congress When we have leaders in the country who speak one thing at Government House and quite another thing outside, it becomes very difficult for Government to find out who are the real leaders The attitude of such leaders amounts to "hunting with the hound and running with the hare." There are leaders who cannot carry their parties with them, but in order to continue as leaders, consent to being led by their parties sometimes There are again other leaders who really carry influence with their party and can deliver the goods, but they are few and far between The honourable mover never suggested the names of any leaders in the event of Government deciding to convene a conference [Interruption] Everything must be known I just gave an instance of a leader who gave one opinion in a conference and just the contrary opinion outside it

Suppose we accede to the honourable member's request in spite of the wishes of a very large section of this House Suppose we go to the extent of displeasing the Muhammadan, European, Depressed Class and other parties Suppose we convene a conference The honourable member has not given any indication as to which leaders are to be invited. If we call a conference, the four or five important sections which I have just mentioned will not attend it What will be the result of the conference? Naturally, they will say that they are against the convening of such a conference and refuse to attend it It will be a leap in the dark, just to meet the wishes of one party May I enquire whether the honourable mover has consulted the leaders of other parties, whether he has ascertained if they will attend the conference if one is convened? I am afraid my honourable friend has not taken the trouble to consult honourable members of this House and their leaders, much less the trouble of consulting any one outside

These are the practical difficulties in the way of convening a conference as suggested. This civil disobedience movement is an All-India movement It ought, therefore, to be dealt with by All-India leaders. Even if we accede to his request, I am afraid there is no guarantee that the decision of the provincial leaders will be acceptable to the All-India leaders They will say, "You may discuss the situation in the Bombay Presidency We have nothing to do with it" That is not going to restore a calm and peaceful atmosphere in the country If we convene a conference, we will be displeasing a large section of this Honourable House, most of whom are elected members The honourable mover has heard their views Moreover, we do not know whether the leaders will attend the conference or not Honourable members will, therefore, realise the difficulties of Government We have to please the majority Even if we are prepared to displease the Muhammadan, European,

[Sir Ghulam Hussain]

Depressed class and other parties and convene a conference, is the honourable mover prepared to give us a guarantee that the other parties will participate in the conference? I admit that his object in bringing this resolution is most laudable It is a good intentioned resolution, but the honourable member must know that mere good intentions by themselves are of little or no value. We ought to deal with the question from the practical point of view I have placed these difficulties of Government before the honourable House. I now leave it entirely to the House to decide the question whether the conference is a practicable proposition and whether it is likely to serve any useful purpose

Mr A N SURVE On a point of information, Sir In the course of his speech, I heard the Honourable the Leader of the House to say these words: "There are the non-Brahmins who claim to be a party." May I just enquire whether, after 10 or 12 years' existence of the said party, he still doubts or disputes its existence?

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN I said that there does exist the non-Brahmin party It is the honourable mover who doubted it

BILL No. XL OF 1931 (A BILL FURTHER TO AMEND THE BOMBAY LAND REVENUE CODE, 1879).

First reading

Rao Bahadur D R PATIL (East Khandesh District) Sir, I beg to move the first reading of Bill No XL of 1931 (A Bill further to amend the Bombay Land Revenue Code, 1879) *

Sir, the object I have in view in moving for the first reading of this Bill is that in the interests of justice it is quite essential that when an appeal under the Land Revenue Code is decided, reasons for the decision should be given by the appellate authority Under the Code it is not obligatory upon the appellate authority to give any reasons for the decision of an appeal This amending Bill aims at making it obligatory upon an appellate authority to give reasons for any decision in the appeal.

Even under the Criminal Procedure Code reasons have to be given by the appellate authority and as section 209 of the Land Revenue Code stands the appellate authority is not bound to give any reasons for the decision in appeal My only object is that reasons should be stated whenever an appeal is to be decided With these words, I move that my Bill be read a first time

Bill read a first time

Question put, and agreed to

Second reading

Rao Bahadur D R PATIL Sir, I beg to move that Bill No XL of 1931 (A Bill further to amend the Bombay Land Revenue Code, 1879) be read a second time

Bill read a second time

Question put, and agreed to

Bill read clause by clause

Clause 1 (Short title) ordered to stand part of the Bill

Clause 2 (Amendment of section 209 of Bombay Act No V of 1879)—

In section 209 the following words "with reasons for the same" shall be added at the end of the words "appealed against"

The Honourable Mr W F HUDSON Sir, I beg to move the following amendments to clause No 2

For clause 2 of Bill No XL of 1931 (A Bill further to amend the Bombay Land Revenue Code, 1879), substitute the following —

In section 209 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code, 1879,

(1) after the word "may" where it occurs for the first time, the word "for reasons to be recorded in writing" shall be inserted, and

(2) the following proviso shall be added at the end, namely —

"Provided that it shall not be necessary for the appellate authority to record reasons in writing—

(a) when an appeal is dismissed summarily, or

(b) when the decision or order appealed from is itself a decision or order recorded in appeal, or

(c) when an appeal is made to the Governor in Council under section 204"

* Appendix 17

[Mr W F Hudson]

As regards these amendments, it will be observed that I have ventured practically to redraft the Bill because, as my honourable friend the mover will I think agree, his Bill did not exactly convey what he intended and the first part of my amendment merely elucidates what he did mean to convey, and I have ventured to put it into a more correct legal form

As regards the rest, I should like to tell the House that there has been a very considerable difference of opinion amongst experienced officers as to the desirability of this Bill being supported by Government, and it was only with considerable hesitation that I agreed to do so. Government can only agree to this Bill being passed if the rest of my amendment is accepted

First, the proviso is that it shall not be necessary for the appellate authority to record reasons in writing when an appeal is dismissed summarily As honourable members know, a summary dismissal of an appeal is a recognised part of our judicial procedure Section 421 of the Criminal Procedure Code says.—

"421 (1) On receiving the petition and copy under section 419 or section 420, the Appellate Court shall peruse the same, and, if it considers that there is no sufficient ground for interfering, it may dismiss the appeal summarily,

Provided that no appeal presented under section 419 shall be dismissed unless the appellant or his pleader has had a reasonable opportunity of being heard in support of the same.

(2) Before dismissing an appeal under this section, the Court may call for the record of the case, but shall not be bound to do so"

I think the House will agree that if the summary dismissal of an appeal is a recognised part of our judicial procedure, there is no reason why that procedure should not be permitted in the case of revenue appeals Honourable members will, I am sure, understand that revenue officers receive an enormous number of appeals Some of them require the most careful consideration, while others require practically no consideration at all, because they obviously are frivolous I will give an instance of the sort of appeal which I mean In certain parts of this Presidency, Government laid it down that for special reasons no land in a particular area was to be given out I need hardly say that that does not deter hundreds of applicants from applying for that land. Naturally, the officer, to whom the application is made, in carrying out the orders of Government, refuses to give that land and then the applicant not at all satisfied appeals That obviously is a case in which no further orders are required, and obviously there is no need for the appellate authority to do anything more than dismiss the appeal summarily If he had 20 pleaders before him and he himself thought that it was desirable that the land should be given out, nevertheless, by the executive order of Government, nothing can be done, and it would be quite impossible for our revenue officers to carry out their duties if they had to treat that as a serious appeal and write an order about it. Therefore, I think the House will agree with me that the right of summary dismissal must be permitted

[Mr W F Hudson]

Then, secondly, when the decision or order appealed from is itself a decision or order recorded in appeal, here again it is an obvious waste of time for the appellate authority (he may be the Collector or the Commissioner, as the case may be) to have to record reasons as to why he supports or upholds the order of the officer below him When he does not support the order of the officer below him, I mean when he modifies or reverses it, he practically invariably writes an order explaining why he does so for the instruction and information of the officer below him, but when the case is a perfectly clear one, when the officer below has recorded his reasons for his decision, when he rejects the application, it is quite unnecessary to have those reasons recorded over again, and I do appeal to the House not to throw this burden upon our extremely hard-worked Commissioners I say that advisedly, because there was a time in this House when honourable members used to refer to Commissioners as post-offices—they are not post-offices, I can assure the House that they are very hard-worked officials—and the only result of having to record their reasons on hundreds and hundreds of appeals will be that the decisions on those appeals will be inevitably postponed to the great dissatisfaction of the appellants, who will gain nothing from the appellate court writing over again the reasons which have been already recorded by the authority below As I say, when the second appellate court disagrees with the first appellate court, the order will undoubtedly be explained and the reasons will be given, but when it is a case of merely agreeing with and supporting the officer below, it is a pure waste of time, paper and ink for the second appellate court to attempt to state the reasons

Thirdly, when an appeal is made to the Governor in Council under section 204, here I would appeal to the kindness of the House I have not handy any record of the number of appeals which come to Government, but they are a very large number, and I do not think that the House can expect Government to record its reasons in every case It never has been done, we have got along without it very well and I can only say, if the House insists on Government recording its reasons in every case in which it decides an appeal, that the Secretariat will be hopelessly over-worked Not only the Secretariat, but we know the honourable members on this bench in all probability are going to have a great deal more to do in future—possibly double the work they are doing now,—and I should, even under present conditions, find it extremely difficult, if not impossible, to have to record my reasons for my decision in every appeal which I dealt with If and when Government upset the order of the authority below, it quite frequently happens that they do record their reasons on the same ground as I have just mentioned, that is to say, that they wish the authority below to understand what it is, but when they are merely rejecting the appeal, then it is the purest waste of time for them to make any attempt to write a judgment which I understand my honourable friend the mover would like.

Having said so much, I want the House clearly to understand that this Bill, which as I say I accept with very great hesitation, is going to do

two things First it is going to give our revenue officers a good deal more work than they have had in the past because it is one thing making up your mind clearly about a certain case and quite another recording your reasons for it—it means four or five times as much work as is usually involved in the disposal of an appeal when you have to record your reasons fairly on the whole case, and secondly it is going to lead to inevitable delay in decisions on those cases A Revenue officer reads the papers and makes up his mind as to his decision But he has got to record his reasons, and as this takes some time, he puts aside the papers Then something more urgent comes along which takes up his attention, and in this way the matter is delayed Instead of saying "Appeal rejected", if I have got to state my reasons for it, there is going to be inevitable delay However, in spite of that, if the House thinks that this is a sound provision—I feel grave doubts about it—Government will not oppose this Bill, provided this amendment is accepted

Mr L R GOKHALE Would not the Honourable the Revenue Member like to drop (b) of the proviso ?

The Honourable Mr W F HUDSON No, Sir I am afraid I cannot drop it I regard it in some ways as the most important part of the Bill The appellate court is nearly always going to be the Commissioner, and I think it is quite unnecessary, when the Collector has recorded his reasons, that the Commissioner should record them again I would point out to the honourable member that when the Commissioner differs from the Collector, he does at present almost invariably record his reasons. There will be no change in the existing practice in that respect What I do not want the Commissioner to do is to record his reasons when he upholds the order of the Collector

Mr V N JOG When the appeal is to be dismissed summarily, will an opportunity be given to the appellant to be heard ?

The Honourable Mr W F HUDSON Yes Of course, the appellant is always given an opportunity of being heard

Mr V N JOG There must be a proviso to that effect

The Honourable Mr W F HUDSON Not by pleader In a Revenue court, as the honourable member must be aware, the appellant is always given the opportunity of appearing in person and presenting his petition The practice at present is for the appellant to walk into the office and present his petition There is no change in that respect He is not allowed to be represented by a pleader, and we are not discussing that question at the moment

Rao Bahadur D R PATIL Sir, I have heard the speech of the Honourable the Revenue Member, and I think I should accept his amendment Therefore, Sir, I accept the amendment

Amendment put, and agreed to

Clause 2, as amended, ordered to stand part of the Bill

The preamble ordered to stand part of the Bill

Rao Bahadur D R PATIL Mr President, I beg your permission to move the third reading of the Bill

Third reading

A BILL FURTHER TO AMEND THE DECCAN AGRICULTURISTS' RELIEF ACT

Mr L R GOKHALE Sir, I ask for leave of the House to introduce a Bill further to amend the Deccan Agriculturists' Relief Act, 1879

Mr L R GOKHALE Sir, I introduce the Bill

A BILL FURTHER TO AMEND SECTION 16 OF THE CITY OF BOMBAY MUNICIPAL ACT.

Rao Bahadur S K BOLE Sir, I beg leave of the House to introduce a Bill further to amend section 16 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act, 1888 This Bill seeks, on the lines of the District Municipal Act and the Municipal Boroughs Act, to amend section 16 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act, in order to disqualify members of the Municipal Corporation who are in arrears of municipal dues and taxes

Question put and leave granted

Rao Bahadur S K BOLE Sir, I beg to introduce the Bill

A BILL FURTHER TO AMEND THE BOMBAY UNIVERSITY ACT.

Rao Bahadur R R KALE (Bombay University) Sir, I beg leave of the House to introduce a Bill further to amend the Bombay University Act, 1928 The amendments which I have sought to make in the Act are due to the fact that the Act is new and it has been found that there are difficulties in its administration Consequently, the occasion has arisen for introducing the changes The matter was considered by the

A BILL FURTHER TO AMEND THE BOMBAY CITY MUNICIPALITIES ACT.

Rao Bahadur D R PATIL (East Khandesh District) Sir, I ask for leave of the House to introduce a Bill further to amend the Bombay City Municipalities Act, being Bombay Act No XVIII of 1925

Sir, in introducing the Bill I wish to inform honourable members that it seeks to add the following proviso to section 18

"Provided that when such a fresh election has to be made it shall be held after the expiry of the term of office of a President or Vice President"

I have given sufficient reasons in the Statement of Objects and Reasons

The Honourable the PRESIDENT The honourable member can give the reasons and not refer to the Statement of Objects and Reasons, as it is not yet before honourable members

Rao Bahadur D R PATIL Sir, the object of the Bill is this Sometimes it so happens that before the period of the office of a president expires, he calls a meeting for a fresh election of a president That has actually happened in the city municipality of Bhusawal Therefore I want to introduce the Bill with the object that no president should be allowed to call a meeting for the election of a president unless and until the period of his office expires

A BILL FURTHER TO AMEND THE CITY OF BOMBAY MUNICIPAL ACT.

Mr A N SURVE (Bombay City, North) Sir, I beg to move for leave of the House to introduce a Bill further to amend the City of Bombay Municipal Act, 1888 In the District Municipal and in the Municipal Boroughs Act, there is a provision by which members of the municipality who are in arrears of taxes payable to the municipality become disqualified to continue to be members of that particular body In the City of Bombay Municipal Act, there is no such provision Of late, it has come to light that several members of the Bombay City Municipality are indebted to the municipality in respect of taxes In order to bring the provisions in this Act in a line with those of the other municipal Acts in force in the presidency I have brought forward this amending Bill

Question put, and leave granted

Mr A N SURVE I introduce the Bill

The Honourable the PRESIDENT The Bill is introduced

DISCUSSION OF MATTERS OF GENERAL PUBLIC INTEREST.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT The first resolution is of the honourable member Rao Bahadur Patil, which was part-discussed. I shall read out the resolution for the information of the House

"This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that he be pleased to convey to the Secretary of State for India and His Majesty's Government in England through His Excellency the Governor General in Council that it is the emphatic opinion of the Bombay Legislative Council that in the contemplated revision of the Government of India Act by the British Parliament after the deliberations of the Round Table Conference are over, due provision be made for adequate representation of the rural areas on the Local Legislature of the Province of Bombay and that the rural franchise be so lowered and the number of seats for the constituencies be so increased as to carry out the aforesaid objects."

Rao Bahadur R R KALE (Bombay University) Sir, this resolution and the recommendation which it seeks to make is, if I may use a legal expression, sub judice I do not say that in the strict meaning of the expression The matter is under investigation and certainly a resolution of this kind, if passed, may be forwarded to the committee, which will consider it and give it due weight as a resolution passed by this Council. I think the intention is to secure adequate representation of the rural areas I think that a resolution of this kind might strengthen the hands of those who wish that adequate representation should depend upon the population of the rural areas If the franchise is lowered, as I hope it will be, the number of seats also will have to be increased I hope that this resolution will be supported and carried by this Council

Rao Bahadur R S ASAVALE (Bombay City, North) Sir, I rise to support the motion with one object only The recommendation made by the honourable mover is no doubt a laudable one It is the intention of even the Prime Minister as well as the British Government and also of the Government of India that the franchise should be lowered.

[Rao Bahadur R S Asavale]

If I mistake not, even the Leader of the Congress, Mahatma Gandhi, has mentioned in the Round Table Conference that the franchise should be so lowered that it should go to the masses themselves, and that they should have the real voice in the administration of the country Therefore, with this object in view, I hope this honourable House will accept the resolution unanimously, so that the hands of the representatives at the Round Table Conference will be strengthened to demand the franchise that is really needed in this country, as also the number of seats should be increased in the rural areas specially in order to safeguard the interests of the agriculturists and the masses With these few words I support the resolution.

Mr J B PETIT (Bombay Millowners' Association) Mr President, I should like to bring one important consideration to the notice of this House, and that is, that in giving its support to this proposal, regard must be paid to the interpretation that is likely to be placed on the expressions "due provision" and "adequate," which occur in the concluding portion of the resolution under discussion. Nobody denies, Sir, that the rural areas should have proper representation in the Council. Nobody also wishes that the urban areas should have a preponderance over the rural areas But, Sir, we cannot possibly ignore the important fact that illiteracy is very largely prevalent in our province, in common with the rest of the country, and that it is more marked in the rural than in the urban areas It must always therefore be a very important factor in the decision of such questions, and I want this honourable House to bear this fact in mind I submit that in our zeal to give to the rural areas a very large representation, or even one in proportion to their population, we must not lose sight of the risk of thereby appreciably reducing the level of the Council I am one of those who cannot see much sense in enfranchising an unduly large number of people, without regard to their capacity to use the vote properly I am emphatically of opinion that our main object should be to enfranchise as many educated people as possible, or at least as many as can intelligently exercise their vote and realise their responsibility in the matter If this point is borne in mind, I do not believe that honourable members who have the ultimate good of the country at heart will be over-enthusiastic in giving the franchise, merely for the sake of giving it, to everybody in the province, and particularly in the rural areas where illiteracy is more pronounced, without reference to his educational qualifications or at least his capacity to weigh and appreciate the value of the vote If I am not divulging a secret, it is under contemplation that the present qualification should be so extended as to enfranchise at least 10 to 12 per cent of the total adult population. It is clear therefore to my mind that a very large section of the inhabitants of all the important districts of the presidency, including the rural areas, may confidently look forward to being adequately enfranchised at a very early date I think this proposal goes far enough already, and any extension beyond this ratio, would, in my opinion, be exceedingly dangerous, having regard to the present condition of the country I think that those who allow themselves to be led away by the fetish of wholesale enfranchisement, ignore the fact that the competence and the stability of the future Council are of greater value and will count more in the good government of the country than the mere number of voters who will have the right to send representatives to the Legislature It is, therefore that I would request this honourable House to pause and consider carefully what the exact significance of the question is, that it is being now called upon to decide If it is the opinion of this House that the expressions "due provision" and "adequate" mean the enfranchisement of the people of the rural areas to such an extent as is adequate to their literacy or their sense of responsibility, I have not a word to say against the proposal But if by these expressions is meant the enfranchisement of the entire adult section of the rural classes, then I for one would ask this honourable House to hesitate and not to take a precipitate step of this character I think we are all apt to exaggerate the value of enfranchising as large a number of people as possible on the purely imaginary assumption that the number of those enfranchised should bear some respectable and fixed proportion to the total population, both in the rural and urban areas equally, as though there was something very wicked or reprehensible in having a small but competent electorate, even with some inevitable disparity between the voting strength of the respective areas

I beseech honourable members of this House not to attach any undue importance to such sentimental arguments, but to act with one and only one object in view, namely, the good of the people Our aim should be to so devise the franchise as to ensure the election of a House, which may be representative in its character, responsible in its nature, stable in its constitution and comprehensive in its scope It is for this honourable House to consider and decide for itself, how to bring about such a result in the present condition of the province I have no doubt in my mind that it cannot certainly be done by a headlong and reckless lowering of the franchise, and making it applicable even to people who have no conception of the duties and responsibilities entailed thereby. I submit that in our desire to enfranchise a very large number of people, we ought not to run the risk of electing a House which may be neither responsible nor stable, and which may therefore be open to the danger of being handled and manipulated by designing and unscrupulous people for personal aggrandisement and for the creation of a state of affairs, wholly inconsistent with the best interests of the province As I have already said before, no useful purpose will therefore be served by the acceptance of this resolution by this honourable House, first, because more than 10 per cent of the total adult population is going to be enfranchised almost immediately—which in my opinion is quite adequate for our present requirements,—and secondly because, this resolution, if passed, is likely to be construed as a desire on the part of this House—which I believe does not exist—to enfranchise an unlimited number of people on the population basis, without any reference to their qualifications Under these circumstances, I hope that this House will not accept it

Mr L R GOKHALE (Poona City) Sir, I support the resolution with great pleasure. One reason for my doing so is that the resolution is a pious wish without any definite expression of any particular view I do not find that the resolution gives any idea as to what is due provision and what is adequate representation I think these are pious wishes that justice should prevail everywhere, that there should be no injustice, and that all should be treated equally So, I do not think there is any reason for any one to oppose the resolution We cannot, however, intelligently support it until some idea is given to us as to what is meant by due provision and adequate representation If the rural franchise is to be lowered, one thought that I want to express about it is this that no unnecessary distinction should be made in giving the franchise, no idea should be entertained as regards caste, race or creed It should be open to all above the age of 21 years, provided they satisfy certain qualifications In short, I would expect that there should be uniformity in the franchise and if that uniformity is observed, then I believe it is reasonable to expect that there would be no undue representation of any section or community. It is essential that all interests should be represented adequately.

The second question that arises is this what should be the qualification for the franchise, whether it should be adult franchise which we once tried to give to Bombay City for municipal purposes, or whether the franchise should be limited to property qualification, literacy or any other qualification I think the literacy test is the best test that can be made applicable in giving the vote It is very difficult, however, in India, under the present circumstances, to lay down that, unless a certain individual is literate he should not be allowed to vote If that rule is laid down, I think in the rural areas it will be very difficult to get a sufficient number of voters to go to the polling booth on the election day. Owing to want of funds, we have not been able to introduce compulsory primary education. I am sure this is due to want of funds and not to any neglect on the part of the Minister for Education [Honourable Members. Hear, hear] But the fact remains that we have no money to give compulsory primary education And so long as it is not there, the test of literacy cannot be made applicable That being so, what should be the other test? We have rent and property test My idea is that rent should not be a qualification Ownership of property alone should be the test and not the rental We find in a number of places that tenants are given the vote To my mind in the rural areas only the landlords should be entitled to vote and not the tenants who cultivate the lands for them, because the tenant is not a free agent to exercise the right of vote A person may have twenty tenants under him each paying ten rupees as rent That is a point that also is worth consideration Considering all these points, adequate representation should be given. The honourable mover of the resolution has not told us what should be the number for a district In Poona district, the population is 1,169,000, out of that 256,000 is the urban population

Rao Bahadur R S ASAVALE On a point of information, Sir The honourable member himself had moved an amendment to introduce adult franchise Now, he says that only property holders should be enfranchised He is contradicting himself

Mr L R GOKHALE I thank the Rao Bahadur for reminding me of what I have done But I myself began my speech with a reference to that amendment But as we are not now going to get adult franchise, as I am forced to make a selection, I think we should have some guiding principle I should have been glad if the honourable member Rao Bahadur Patil had moved a resolution for universal adult franchise in rural areas and urban areas

Rao Bahadur R S ASAVALE We want it

Mr L R GOKHALE You did not move it As it is, I have to make a selection I take as an illustration the Poona district Poona District has an urban population of 256,000 and a rural population of 913,000 To give adequate representation to these 913,000, how many representatives should be given to Poona District (Rural) is a question for consideration I should think that if they get something like five to seven representatives——

An Honourable MEMBER Modest

Mr L R GOKHALE I am always modest If these nine lakhs have five to seven representatives, or at the rate of one member for every lakh and a half or two lakhs of the population, that will be adequate representation There should be at least five representatives for the rural population and two representatives for the City I would also suggest that the number of voters in the cities should not be smaller than the number of voters in the rural areas They should not be enrolled on the same plan I have given this only as an illustration of what I consider should be the number of representatives for the presidency and Sind I think that the number of members for a district or city should depend upon the population figures I have given an idea of what I think will be adequate representation With these words, I support this resolution

Rao Bahadur G K CHITALE (Ahmednagar District) Mr President, this resolution was moved and discussed partly by the honourable mover during the last session at Poona What he said then appears to have been forgotten by many of the members of this House Much water has flown under the bridges since then It appears to have been surmised that the resolution is intended to express only pious wishes I am afraid that the real motive behind the resolution is not clearly understood and properly appreciated I believe I will not be far wrong if I suggest that the motive uppermost in the mind of the honourable mover is to put forcibly the case of the rural people in connection with the framing of the constitution that is going shortly to be put on the statute book He wants to emphasize the point that the number of seats should be increased so that the object of proper representation of rural interests may be achieved It is no doubt a fact, and a fact to be regretted, that in the appointment of the Franchise Committee which has been sitting, this House was not taken into confidence This House as a House had no voice None of its members has gone before the Committee and given evidence on behalf of the House on the points which are under enquiry From my point of view, that is a matter to be regretted It is to be regretted the more, because the House was not only not taken into confidence, but so far as I remember, even the questionnaire was not sent to any of the members of this Council as M L Cs I think I ought to bring this point to the notice of this House, and I will be perfectly within my limits in making a grievance of it This House at present is the representative of all the interests and possesses the powers of legislation The first step in the long strides that are being taken now is that of franchise Now, this House has been functioning for the last 10 years on the existing franchise Therefore, it is only members of this House who are competent to say how and in what measure the people have been enfranchised, how polling stations are run, what difficulties are experienced both by the candidate and by the voters, and so on Two or three members of this House would have been very valuable witnesses and would have stood the cross-examination of the Committee very well, in fact better than the witnesses that have been so far called

Mr C W A TURNER On a point of explanation, Sir The questionnaire of the Franchise Committee was published by the Director of Information asking anybody who wished to submit their views to the Committee to do so It was open to any member of this House, therefore, to ask for a copy of the questionnaire and a copy of the questionnaire would at once have been supplied to him. His reply would, of course, have been considered by the Provincial Franchise Committee and in all probability forwarded to the All-India Franchise Committee

The Honourable the PRESIDENT That is not the question raised by the honourable member He does not deny that it was published In fact some honourable members have received the questionnaire and have sent in their replies and probably have been called as witnesses, but not in their capacity as members of this House—not as its representatives What the honourable member is making a grievance of is that this Council, as a Council representing the Presidency, should have been honoured or invited and that the questionnaire should have been sent officially to the House, calling upon it as a body to tender views That is the point he is making

Rao Bahadur G K CHITALE Exactly, that is my point What I do say is this that this House has been treated with very scant courtesy, scant courtesy in this way, that on a matter of such importance as the widening of franchise, the wishes of this House as a House are not before the Franchise Committee, either the local committee or the

[Rao Bahadur G K Chitale]

Central Committee I believe it is a mistake which Government themselves will feel later on when they find that proper material which this House would have liked to put impartially before the Committee, is not in the possession of the Committee Let me say that such opportunities are very rare and if the Government do not give this House an opportunity of saying what it wants to say on a matter concerning its own vital interests, I do not know what impression the acceptance of this resolution will make on the mind of Government It is therefore necessary to speak rather at some length on the points involved in this resolution, because it is necessary that our views should be placed before the Committee, and I think that instead of withdrawing this resolution, the honourable mover will do well to persist in taking it to a division The position is this I do not wish to emphasize the interests of rural vs urban constituencies I do not wish to emphasize the difficulties of representing the rural interests which deserve to be represented in the future Council I do not wish to state the reasons They are all well-known But I must say that so far as this Presidency is concerned, it is one of the most prominent Governor's provinces We have a special claim not only for better treatment, but for more liberal treatment and that liberal treatment must be shown on this question of franchise It is understood, Sir, that the minimum enfranchisement of the people would be on the basis of a representative for one lakh of people I think the Government and this House will do well in having that ideal before them The ideal is 1 lakh of people to be represented by one member. As the present population, according to the 1931 census, is found to be 21,800,000, it might be agreed that the recommendation on this point should be that the Council should consist of not less than 220 members representing the people, apart from special interests That is the view which I wish to put forward, namely, that our ideal should be to have a Council of 220 members representing the people—urban and rural—as contra-distinguished from special interests such as the University, trade, millowners, and so on Including the representatives of those interests and such other interests that the Government might wish to represent in the Council, the strength of the future Council should then not be less than 250 That will be an ideal Council, representing all the interests in the Presidency I am putting forward this view, because Government is trying to suggest as low a number as possible and I think that this Presidency will not be satisfied with a smaller number than the one I have suggested. If that is the deliberate opinion of this House, it will do well to pronounce it now I do not wish to be quite emphatic about it, but that is one of the views which ought to be put before Government

If that position is accepted, as it has been accepted by the National Congress, then the next question to be decided is what should be the first step in the enfranchisement of the people ? As far as we know from the deliberations of the Committee, it is intended to enfranchise the people to the extent of 10 per cent. of the total population The question is whether this House will be satisfied with the 10 per cent enfranchisement ' In order that I may not get the same rebuke from my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Asavale that I am going back on my ideal of adult franchise, let me tell him that I do stand for the ideal of adult franchise That is the only logical method resorted to by all civilised nations in framing their constitutions It is no use telling us in the 20th century that other countries like England have taken at least 80 years to attain that ideal The world has gone far ahead The world has moved so rapidly that it is impossible to argue that this particular step should not be taken because India is a backward country and that there should be a period of 100 years before she can reach that standard Let me say at once that if it is intended to wait for 100 years before adopting adult franchise, I have no patience Adult franchise is the only logical evolution if you do not want any revolution And adult franchise must be adopted without communal electorates You may say that the present times are not suitable But the House will certainly be right and within its power in saying that that is the ideal which this House would adopt Now, Sir, it might be said that there are many administrative difficulties, that the path is beset with so many dangers, that it is not possible to undertake this step now I do not for a moment subscribe to that argument I do not for a moment agree that the problem is insoluble For a government as efficient and as strong as ours is, in measuring every bit of land and recording it in the record of rights register, with all the changes that are made from time to time, to come forward and say that there are administrative difficulties in maintaining a register under adult franchise is a huge joke I should think there is no real will I know, after the Record of Rights Act was passed, with what strength Government officers worked and with what will they tried their best to prepare it from time to time, and I do not think for a moment that Government is so powerless or that its machinery is so weak that it cannot manage administratively the question of adult franchise What is there after all in adult franchise ? What about the census returns ? How are they prepared ? There were three counts and before the very last count came on everything was ready, and all that was to be put up on that particular night and the result was that the tables were all ready How did Government manage to get up these tables showing the caste, creed, the religion and what not of each and every member of each family ? If such a feat is possible and feasible, with what face can Government say that they cannot manage administratively the adult franchise machine ? Can they say so honestly ? I believe not I know what our Government is, I know how efficient it is How many times have we been told that our Governmental machinery is so perfect that nothing is impossible for this Government if only they will it For all these reasons, I say that given the will, the question of adult franchise need not be shelved so far as the Bombay Presidency is concerned

[Rao Bahadur G K Chitale]

What are the difficulties in adult franchise ? Unmanageability Then, if they think that it is difficult, and if I were a member of the committee, I should order an experiment to be done in one district before they pronounce on the impossibility or unwieldiness of the adult franchise If only Government had sent out orders twelve months ago as they did in the case of the census that my district should have adult franchise and if only adequate means or ways had been provided for, I am sure that Government would by this time have had very satisfactory results I therefore say that if that is the ideal, there can be no insuperable difficulty I can understand certain limitations Do not go away with the notion that we have got 218 crores to deal with At most, if I remember rightly, I believe under adult franchise only 51 per cent of the population being adult population would be enfranchised This fact alone solves our difficulty After all you are prepared to give franchise to 10 per cent , just go a step further and enfranchise 50 or 51 per cent The whole point is whether that would be unmanageable If you were to lay down an age limit, you would still cut down the percentage As in England, you might enfranchise women of 30 and over Similarly, in the case of young men, people under 30 need not be enfranchised As for old people, I have not much faith in their being given the vote after a certain age, say over 70 years

The adult franchise solves many communal difficulties A man feels that he is a man because he has a vote What business has one man to say to the other " Because you do not possess property, you should have no vote ? " I say that it is wrong, illogical and inhuman. Why should not a man have a vote when that vote is going to give him the power of benefiting or harming—rather benefiting than harming—his fellow human beings ? The power of vote should be entrusted to as many people as possible, otherwise there would be no object in transferring power as is at present intended to do It would not be either logical or proper These limitations of property that a man should pay so much by way of a tax either to Government or to a local body are a pure innovation brought into being only to take away the rights of others I am really surprised how the representatives of the depressed classes or the backward classes are enamoured of these property qualifications They should stand abreast, take courage in both their hands and go ahead

This resolution is a very timely one The other points I shall leave other honourable members to develop, as I do not desire to monopolise either the time or the reasons in support of the resolution

As regards the next point, namely, the increase of the constituencies, I am of the opinion that in order that the minority interests should be safeguarded, there must be multiple constituencies, not single member constituencies. That is a point which ought to be made on the floor of this House. Single member constituencies for minorities will not do, and therefore, whatever the evidence before the Franchise Committee may be, I should think that our representatives will be well advised in having as large a number as possible I do mean to say that if ten seats are allotted, that all those ten seats, or reasonably a smaller number should have a cumulative vote in favour of one or the other If it is possible in a district to have minority interests properly safeguarded, that should be done If not, there may be a smaller number in larger cities I am afraid my time is up and I shall therefore resume my seat

Mr A B ACHREKAR (Satara District) Sir, I rise to support this resolution———

The Honourable the PRESIDENT I may inform the honourable member that the time limit is 15 minutes

Mr A B ACHREKAR As regards the words which appear in the resolution, namely, " due provision be made for adequate representation of the rural areas ", and which have been misunderstood, I will try to explain according to my lights what the honourable mover means by using these words and tabling such a resolution I say that there is a general disparity between the urban constituencies and the rural constituencies As the honourable member for Poona has stated, there is one honourable member for the City of Poona alone with a population of 2 lakhs but for the rest of the district with a population of 9 lakhs, there are only two seats reserved for it You will therefore agree with me, Sir, when I say that the urban population is being treated more liberally than the rural population According to that proportion, the district of Poona, that is the rural population should have more than 3 members Also, there is a disparity between the rural voter and the urban voter For example, in the City of Satara, which has a population of only 20,000, a man paying Rs 3 rent per month is entitled to vote, while the farmer or cultivator is entitled to vote only if he pays Rs 32 assessment So, there is a disparity between the voter in the rural area and the voter in the urban area In the cities there is a sort of cheap voting In the district a man having property paying an assessment of Rs 32 can only vote Really speaking, this disparity ought to be removed and the honourable mover wishes to remove it by this resolution

Again, in the districts it is a plural seat constituency and not a single seat constituency For example, in the cases of Satara and Poona districts, a candidate has to move over an area of 100 miles in length and 100 miles in breadth But in a city a man can move among his voters within a day if he takes a motor, while in the districts he cannot see his supporters and return to his headquarters in less than 10 days He has to spend something like 30 days to see his voters This is a great disparity, and I would request the House to vote for this resolution, because this disparity has to be removed

The honourable member for Ahmednagar (Rao Bahadur Chitale) spoke against single seat constituencies But I say, when he is advocating single seat constituencies for cities, why should there not be single seat constituencies in the districts also ? I think, if there are single seat constituencies in the districts, the candidate will have to travel over an area of 10 miles by 10 miles for seeing his voters, while as a matter of fact at present he has to make tours over an area 100 miles by 100 miles This extensive and unnecessary touring ought to be done away with

Sir, the honourable mover is also asking for increased number of seats for rural areas I find that at present there is numerically no real representation of the districts in this Council I can vouch for it that the City of Bombay and other big cities dominate these Councils The honourable member the Finance Secretary told us the other day that out of Rs 46-6-0 the cities pay to the provincial administration only 6 annas while the districts bear the rest of the expenditure I attribute this to the fact that the rural interests are not being watched because the number of rural members in the Council is very small I therefore request honourable members to support this resolution, as the honourable mover by bringing this resolution before this House seeks to remove the real difficulties of the rural constituencies, as they have not got due representation in proportion to their population The honourable member for Ahmednagar requested Government that there should be one seat allotted for one lakh of the population I entirely agree with his proposal

The honourable member for the Millowners' Association said that there must be a literacy test for the voters If this test is followed in enfranchising the population, it will not bring in the proper proportion of the representation from the districts and from the rural constituencies It is no fault of the districts that the people there are illiterate It is perhaps the fault of Government as they have been paying more attention to the educational needs of the cities than to those of the districts I do say that the districts are backward in education, but it is not the fault of the districts We have seen that the grant for primary education has been reduced by more than 18 lakhs That means there will be a further decrease in the percentage of literacy in the districts I say therefore that there should be a property qualification as at present, and literacy should not be made the only factor in deciding the franchise With these words, I support the resolution

Mr M M KARBHARI (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts) Sir, I would be failing in my duty if I did not support the resolution moved by the honourable member Rao Bahadur Patil I believe the present franchise does not give adequate representation to the rural areas The rural areas are the areas where the agriculturists chiefly reside Speaking from my own experience, a rural voter is quite at the mercy of the urban voter My constituency is now connected with the Bombay Suburban district In the future franchise even supposing that the Thana district is separated from the Bombay suburban area the representation for the rural area will not be quite adequate The district is to be divided into two portions, the taluka towns where the sowcars, the traders and the commercial community live, and the taluka villages where really the agriculturist lives and where agriculture takes place We have always found that the man who lives in the town has always the advantage over a man who lives in the taluka villages Even then the disparity in the franchise is very great Whereas in the town a man paying a rent of Rs 3 per month is entitled to vote, the man in the country or in the villages is entitled to vote only if he owns land or cultivates lands paying an assessment of Rs 32 This in itself is a great disadvantage to the rural areas to accumulate their votes So far as Thana district is conerned, at least three-fourths of the total number of voters come from taluka towns and one-fourth come from the villages That in itself shows that though Thana is supposed to elect a member who represents the rural area, it is doubtful whether the representative of Thana has at heart the real interests of the rural areas because he will be a man of the town, connected with trade or commerce, having the greatest influence in the town Therefore, the meaning underlying the resolution to my mind is that in the future representation, the district representation should be so arranged that the taluka towns may have representation of their own, and the rural villages where the real agriculturists live must have separate representation of their own

Sir, I cannot quite see why my honourable friend from Poona (Mr Gokhale) suggested that property qualification should be the qualification for a voter I quite fail to see the argument that he advanced I do not know why a poor tenant who is cultivating the land of the sowcar should not have representation Did the honourable member mean that only property holders should have representation in this Council and the real agriculturist should have no representation ? If that is what he means, I think he is thoroughly mistaken I would therefore request this honourable House to pass the resolution moved by my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Patil and give it their wholehearted support, so that this fact may be brought to the notice of Government and adequate provision be made by Government for the representation of the rural areas

Mr J G MORE (Sholapur District) Sir, I rise to support the resolution In doing so, I wish to correct my honourable friend Mr Achrekar He has advocated single member constituency for the districts That is not the view of the backward classes The view of the backward classes is that there ought to be a plural constituency Unfortunately, I am told that Mr B V Jadhav was examined by the Franchise Committee and that he advocated single seat constituency That is not the view of the non-Brahmin communities at large It was discussed by the members of the non-Brahmin communities here and the honourable member the Deputy President of this House (Mr Navle) was to be examined before the Franchise Committee Unfortunately, his name was cancelled from the list of witnesses and even before the date fixed for the examination of the honourable member Mr Navle, Mr B V Jadhav managed to get himself examined It was not as a representative of the Maratha and allied classes that he (Mr B V Jadhav) gave that view The view of the Maratha and allied classes is that there should be plural member constituency If the single member constituency is introduced, it will be harmful to the interests of the backward communities A well-to-do and moneyed man may move in one or two talukas easily, bribe the voters and get their votes If there is a plural member constituency, it will be in the interests of the backward communities, and they can get their representation in the Council With that view, I support the resolution moved by the honourable member Rao Bahadur Patil

Rao Bahadur D R PATIL (East Khandesh District) Mr President, I am thankful to those honourable members who have supported my resolution My honourable friend Rao Bahadur Chitale and the honourable member Mr Gokhale said that my resolution was vague, because I did not definitely state in my resolution what "due provision" and "adequate representation" meant I submit that, if we consider the deliberations of the Round Table Conference, the interests of the agriculturists were not touched to the extent to which we expected Unfortunately, the Government were not kind enough to send sufficient representatives of the agriculturists to the Round Table Conference Therefore, Sir, I thought it proper to table a resolution in this honourable House that at least the British Parliament should know that some persons reside in rural areas, namely, the agriculturist class, whose interests should not be neglected I am very sorry to say that the interests of the agriculturists were not safeguarded there even by Mr Jadhav I am very sorry to make that remark I do maintain that way If I am wrong, the Honourable the Leader of the House who was present at the Round Table Conference will correct me I shall be glad to be corrected if I am wrong If we look to the deliberations of the Round Table Conference, we find that various interests represented their cases I do not grudge that But I am sorry to say that as the interests of the agriculturists were not represented at all and as there was no sufficient representation of the agriculturists at the Round Table Conference, I was bound to table this resolution Everybody knows that the agriculturists form the greatest portion of the population Not only that, they pay very large revenue to the Government coffers We know that there is a saying "No representation without taxation" If the agriculturists pay sufficient tax and if they are really the pillars of the country, I think they must have adequate representation in the new constitution

Sir, I am asked "What do you mean by 'adequate representation'?" Had I used expressly what I wanted to say, a great controversy would have arisen I wanted to bring to the notice of the Parliament "Look to this fact that agriculturists pay large revenue to Government, look to their population also and protect the agriculturists by giving them such adequate representation as their importance demands" That was my only object That was the object which inclined me to table this resolution

[Rao Bahadur D R Patil]

Sir, many things have been said about the widening of the franchise and about the single and plural member constituencies I may submit that in the interest of the rural areas it is quite necessary, as observed by the honourable member Mr More, that they must have plural member constituencies and he has given sufficient reasons for that As regards the widening of the franchise, my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Asavale will, I am sure, do his best to protect the interests of the agriculturists, because he is a representative of theirs In short, I have tabled my resolution in such a mild form that no unnecessary controversies will arise I would like to repeat that I want to bring to the notice of the Parliament that "there is a class known as the agriculturist class living in villages, remember their importance and give them adequate representation"

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN Sir, I find from the speeches of various honourable members that they are inclined to support this resolution In order to respect their wishes, this Government will forward the proceedings of this debate to the proper quarters

Question put, and agreed to

The Honourable the PRESIDENT The honourable member Rao Bahadur Chitale may move his resolution formally and begin his speech to-morrow

Rao Bahadur G K CHITALE (Ahmednagar District) Sir, I beg to move the following resolution which stands in my name

TRANSFER OF ADEN TO GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

Rao Bahadur G K CHITALE (Ahmednagar District) Sir, yesterday evening I had the privilege of moving the following resolution

"This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the civil administration of Aden should not be transferred to the Government of India."

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN It has already been decided to be transferred

Rao Bahadur G K CHITALE Then I may have to move an adjournment motion

There is a long history behind this question, and yesterday, as there was an indication that this resolution would be suddenly reached, I indulged myself rather more freely on another resolution, as I had not studied this question with the care with which I should have done it But to-day I have studied the question from the beginning to the end of it I have read several speeches, and I have brought my information up to date almost If it is true, as the Honourable the Leader of the House states, that it has been actually transferred to the Government of India, still I am going to speak in the wilderness Fortunately for me, I find that, for the first time, we have an Administration Report of Aden for the year ending 31st March 1931 So, we are now in a position to place facts before the House In order that those facts may be properly appreciated, I wish the House would see the map which is attached to the Administration Report We have a large territory, which has been attached to our Presidency for a long time, and I am now launching my suit in this House, that the claim should be decreed by this House, the defendants being the Government of Bombay, who have agreed or who are likely to agree to hand over Aden to the Government of India In the reply given last year by the present Leader of the House to a question by the honourable member Major Ellis Jones, the following was stated

"The question of the transfer has been mooted and is under discussion with the Government of India. While no decision has been arrived at regarding it, the Government of Bombay consider that from the point of view of the administration of Aden and of the finances of the Presidency the scheme has considerable advantages."

When this question was answered in August 1931, the negotiations between the Government of Bombay and the Government of India had reached a stage when, for reasons given, the Bombay Government considered that if the transfer was effected, it would be a considerable advantage to this Presidency In the answer to the question the reasons

have been given, the most potent reason being that the change is necessary on account of administrative convenience No doubt, the Government of Bombay do recognise the sentimental reasons, they do recognise the trusteeship, that it has been part of the Presidency for a long time, and after administering this "Gateway of India" for so many years, they feel that it is better to let it go in the financial stress under which we are now labouring Then there were some questions regarding the administration of Aden put by my honourable friend Mr Surve, which were answered on Saturday last and on some previous day in this session. That brings the history of the question almost up to date, and now we have only to see on which side the weight of reasoning lies, whether on the side of the proposed transfer or on the side of its retention as a part of the Presidency After considering the pros and cons of the question, I have come to this conclusion, which I hope the House will accept, that it will be to the interest of this Presidency to keep on its appendage of Aden which, as I said, is the Gateway of India, where it will be possible for our future Governors to receive and hand over charges, it being the extreme end of the Presidency, much more easily and comfortably This facility might apply to the Executive Councillors also, but perhaps in the future Councils they might disappear But as far as H E the Governor is concerned, he might hand over charge there

Apart from that fact, however, I find from the Administration Report for 1930-31 that the question of administration is a bit complicated They say that some of the revenues come from Central sources, and some from Provincial sources. I was trying to have the whole question in a nutshell, and with that view I was trying to get hold of all the information available, as without it I would not have been able to make up my mind After some effort I got hold of this Administration Report, which is very handy for my purpose, and perhaps Government, on the ground of financial stringency, did not distribute it among the honourable members, as it could only be had in the Secretary's office But I have got it after all On page 2 is given the history of Aden It says that the settlement of Aden is about 75 square miles, and the population is 46,638, made up of about 1,145 Europeans, 29,820 Arabs, 3,935 Somalis, 7,287 Indians, 4,120 Jews, and 331 Miscellaneous I am mentioning these figures because the point appears to have been made that the total population of Indians is very small in comparison with the other population, viz of Arabs On page 3 of the report is given the financial position The Government of India maintain a treasury at the crater The total receipts during the year 1930-31 amounted to Rs 62,83,078-7-4 and the expenditure to Rs 62,52,690-11-3, so that there was a balance of some thousands of rupees, the closing balance being Rs 2,47,125-4-11 Now, there are several sources of revenue In the main, they are salt, excise, income tax and stamps, the same as we have There is one more point which I ought to make There is a good deal of argument and reasonableness in the fact that some of our officers are being absorbed by the Aden administration—in the Police Department, in the Judicial Department, in the Abkari Department, in the Educational Department and in the Excise Department If Aden is handed over to the Government of India, it is possible that we will have to find places for them in our own Presidency

[Rao Bahadur G K Chitale]

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN Not at all

Rao Bahadur G K. CHITALE I say it is possible, because our Presidency will have absolutely no voice It will be administered, territory like the province of Coorg or the North-West Frontier Province, it will be run under a Chief Commissioner

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN They have told us that they will retain our officers

Rao Bahadur G. K CHITALE Let me make my point clear Suppose Aden is taken over by the Government of India Then the Government of India would certainly be right in having their own agent for administering it, just as they have in the North-West Frontier Province or in Coorg Not only that, but Aden will not get the privileges and rights which Bombay will obtain in the new constitution If it is an appendage of the Presidency, it will be counted as one more district We have at present 28 or 29 districts, and including Aden it will make 30 districts for the Presidency, but the point is that if Aden continues as a part of the Presidency, it will have the rights and privileges which this Presidency will get So, the loss to Aden consequent on its separation from the Presidency is a point which has to be considered Then, Sir, since 1840, when Aden was taken, the trade of Aden and everything that is worth having in Aden has been built up by Bombay capital and Bombay people That is a point which is not sentimental but practical In the map I showed you, you will find that there are several salt works which are called Hajibhoy Laljee & Co Ltd Salt Works, Joomabhoy Lalji Salt Works and some Italian salt works with which we are not concerned In the chapter on commerce we find that the trade which passed through Aden was used to be somewhere about 13 crores, in the year of this report It has now fallen by three crores and the total value of the seaborne trade at present is Rs 10½ crores The decrease in merchandise was in cotton, piecegoods, hides and skin, grain, pulse, coal, coffee, sugar, salt, tobacco and spices This fall in trade is due to abnormal fall in prices of commodities Then, the report says that all this trade is mostly from India So, it appears to me that we have so many things to look to It is one of our districts I may say in which our people have prospered, though they may be small in number in the proportion of 8 to 1 For the last 70 or 75 years they built up trade, salt works and other things I know as a matter of fact that my district sends to Aden several bags of jowari and bajri through the merchants over here It may be argued that it does not matter whoever governs Aden, whether it is the Government of India or the Bombay Government, because these facilities will remain there and you need not be afraid that the Government of India will do anything which will be in the nature of the restraint of any trade It is true But I may tell you that it is one thing to have another master, who may be a very kind man For all the purposes of our case, it may be good But it is entirely a different matter to be master in your own house I say so because I know how this presidency was treated not very far back when Sir Ernest Hotson introduced in this Council a Bill with respect to judicial reform in Aden The Bill was read for the first time here He was very anxious to get through the other stages of the Bill but for certain reasons which even the Bombay Government did not know—that was the complaint of Sir Ernest Hotson—the Bill had to be dropped, because certain other negotiations were then under consideration. On the analogy of that—I do not want to read out Sir Ernest's speech and the Honourable the Leader of the House also knows it—I think we must be masters in our own house

If it is to be said that it costs the provincial exchequer two lakhs of rupees a year which I do not find stated in the report, it may be true because the honourable member the Finance Secretary has made that statement, it should not be a reason for giving up a precious possession I know also that our Finance Department fought out a case for us and gained a small mercy from the Government of India for charges for armed police and so on It appears to me that this bugbear of loss of revenue should not be the proper reason If that is to be the reason, then I wish to ask what about the several districts in our presidency which are not self-supporting ? I can name many of them The neighbouring presidency is willing to absorb them Are we to part with our precious possessions acquired by our forefathers and hand these districts over to other presidencies though they may be administered as efficiently as by our administrators ? Because the Government of India are the masters, should this Government meekly submit to it ? When we come to the administrative reasons, the most predominant of them is the military or political one If that is so, then our claim is doomed If for military or political reasons, Aden must be handed over, certainly the Government of India is right and the Bombay Government is wrong But I find that a reasonable compromise has been reached years ago, inasmuch as the military and political factors of the administration have been taken over by the Secretary of State for the Colonies Even the Government of India have, if I remember right has absolutely no concern with the political and military administration of Aden I am told a funny thing that because the Government of Bombay is in a bankrupt condition and they are not able to give financial help in proper time as it happened a year back, the administration is being transferred to the Government of India So far as finances are concerned, the Government of India are not a whit better Unless Aden is going to be a favourite, which I am not quite sure, I doubt whether the Government of India will have a soft corner financially for Aden

Then, Sir, I find another advantage. While reading the history of the whole question, we have the education, the excise and other such subjects under our own administration I find that our popular

[Rao Bahadur G K Chitale]

Ministers have made progress in these departments, whenever complaints were made by the public, either departmentally or on the floor of the House I know Honourable Ministers have given relief There was a question as to what should be the medium of instruction It was ruled by the Honourable Minister that it should be Gujarati, Hindustani and Urdu in addition to Arabic The Honourable Minister for Excise (Mr Jadhav) issued orders that the shops should be open and a particular quantity should be sold and so on These are every day practical administrative subjects which are important from the public point of view

Then, it appears to me that there is only one reason In the year 1925 or 1926 a certain loan was asked of this Government for drainage or for water supply This Government asked the Government of India to give the loan Perhaps this gave offence to the Government of India and they want to be masters of Aden They may say that they can carry on the administration more efficiently Otherwise I think that no strong case has been made out as to why we shoud lose this possession

It has to be stated that the question has been hanging in the balance. It appears in the reply given by Mr Howell to the deputation led by Sir Chunilal Mehta on behalf of several trade associations that the apprehensions as regards the transfer of control of Aden to the colonial office had no substance He also stated that, if the transfer of Aden to His Majesty's Government should arise again, he would give a promise that the case would be considered on its own merits and that this presidency would be consulted Then, he assured the deputation that proposals were made lately for removing administrative inconveniences For my part I have not seen the other side of the picture of the administrative inconvenience. As we see in the report here, there is education, excise, water supply, municipal, port trust and other matters of every day administration I do not see any such insuperable administrative inconvenience It is possible that the whole authority is centered in the hands of the military officer who is the Agent there Perhaps it is his conviction that even the least delay will prove dangerous Even for small proposals he has to go to and fro He is referred to the Government of Bombay, to the Government of India and several officers He is not able to take a decision of his own without reference to all these bodies That is the only inconvenience which I have been able to trace The gentleman who is now administering on behalf of this Government is assisted by a judicial assistant and several other assistants who give him proper advice in all the departments That is the long and short of the whole question The question for the consideration of this House is the present situation We find from the pamphlets that have been circulated and the notices that have appeared in the press that the Governor General himself has promised to look into it and has given a hint which shows that the transfer is as good as a fact Under these circumstances, the resolution has been placed before the House to give its opinion Now, it is for the House to pass the resolution unanimously, apart from the official block which has only one voice and not two, representing as we do the several interests there, and decide that our first district, which I styled as the gateway of India, should remain under our presidency proper And I put it on a higher ground Under a system of provincial and central subjects it is possible that every day administration may be complicated and even small things cannot be done speedily But as provincial autonomy is almost as good as given to this presidency in the coming constitution and the central government will not interfere in the home affairs of this presidency, I think this complication will be reduced to a minimum And the complicated nature of the military administration having been set at rest by a subsidy of £150,000 paid by the Government of India to His Majesty's Government, I ask under what principles of reason or logic Aden can now be dismembered from our presidency and handed over to the Government of India I believe that this Government will be in a better position to administer it, as it is nearer to Aden than the Government at Delhi or Simla The administration of Aden by this Government will also be to the advantage of my honourable friends from Sind After the Lloyd Barrage materialises, trade with Aden in agricultural products will increase, and they will be within their rights in asking that a territory which has so long remained in the hands of the same administration as deals with their own affairs should remain so in the future I find also that there is a considerable population of Europeans, about 1,200 in number Leaving aside those who are officials, these Europeans must have trade relations with this presidency through the Indian merchants or others Therefore, from all points of view it is very convenient that Aden should remain with us

One more point before I resume my seat So far as the Bombay Government is concerned, I think we will only be strengthening their hands if we pass this resolution From that point of view also, it is desirable that we should pass this resolution

With these words I move the resolution, and I hope it will be acceptable to the House

Question proposed

The Honourable the PRESIDENT There is an amendment handed over just now by the honourable member Mr A N Surve With his experience he ought to know that this ought to have reached the Secretary at the latest by yesterday The Standing Order on that is explicit But looking to the change the amendment proposes to make, I am inclined to allow it It is this

Add at the end the following, namely "or any other authority, and should that question arise in future no step in that direction should be taken without first giving an opportunity to this House to express its opinion on the matter"

Rao Bahadur G K CHITALE I would accept it

Mr A N SURVE (Bombay City, North) Sir, I beg to move my amendment which reads thus

Add at the end of the resolution the following—" or any other authority, and should that question arise in future, then no step in that direction should be taken without first giving an opportunity to this House to express its opinion on the matter"

[Mr A N Surve]

Sir, I thank you for giving me this permission The reason for making this amendment is this Unfortunately our Government is in a helpless position The Honourable Leader of the House stated what the position in this matter is,—I am reading from Council Debates, Volume XXXII, page 526

'The honourable member ought to realise that it is not within the competence of this Government to decide the question of Aden"

He thereby gave us to understand that it is really in the hands of the Government of India, and we are quite subordinate to that power Then, there is the other fear also the Government of India is in its turn subordinate to the Secretary of State and the British Government No one knows whether the Colonial Office may not take up this question again Fortunately for us the Colonial Office at this moment is not in the field But that point may arise at any moment, and, therefore, it is prudent policy to make our position quite clear The resolution as it stands does not apply to any future attempts at transfer to any authority other than the Government of India For this reason I am moving this amendment

Now, Sir, though I have tabled this amendment I am quite in sympathy with the principal resolution I am of opinion that there are many weighty reasons why Aden should form a part of the territories of the Government of Bombay It has been stated that Aden came under our Government in the year 1839, and it has, therefore, a connection with this presidency extending over very nearly a century In that period the people from Bombay Presidency have made Aden what it is to-day I might just read a short extract from the statement which the Government of India have issued and which is printed in the Debates of the 9th March 1932 The deputation that waited on His Excellency the Viceroy made this claim—

"Aden as it is to day has been the creation largely of Bombay merchants and industrialists, and Bombay's trade and industries are even now the principal factors in the revenue of Aden."

That is one point

Another point is, as the honourable mover said, out of a population of 46 000, the Indians are over 7,000, and I daresay that most, if not all, of them are from Bombay Presidency

Then, Sir, the third point I would like to make is this The trade of the Bombay Presidency with Aden is very considerable, we are told that it was 13 crores last year— there may be a reduction this year—and this trade consists mostly in cotton goods and grain If we submit to a transfer of authority in Aden and if the future authority in Aden does not treat our people sympathetically and kindly, the consequence will be that our people will leave Aden and there will be loss of trade to this presidency That is a very important point Sir, during the present days of depression every Western nation is trying its utmost to extend its trade If we now consent to losing our trade in Aden, it will be a very unwise thing Whether the revenue goes to the Government of India or comes to the Government of Bombay is a secondary question, because it is the amount of trade that matters If there is trade, the people of this presidency will get employment and money Therefore, whether the tax revenue goes to the Government of India or comes to the Government of Bombay is of secondary importance.

I am very glad that the Government of India have given us an assurance that for the present the question of transfer to His Majesty's Government will not be taken up They say—

"If the question of transfer to His Majesty's Government should arise again in future it would have to be considered on its merits and would be rendered in no way either easier or more difficult by the change now proposed No one could say that the question would never be raised again, but the deputation was assured that the present transfer had not that end in view"

From this, Sir, it is clear that the Government of India has given us an assurance that for the present the question is not finally decided and that——

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN The honourable member should not mix up the two Governments The reference is to the transfer to the Colonial Government

Mr A N SURVE But even about the transfer to the Government they have made it perfectly clear, so far as this answer goes, that an opportunity would be given to this Presidency to express its opinion. I might also say that this question has been raised several times and promises had been given many times that the opinion of this Presidency would be taken into consideration When this question arose last year, these assurances were forgotten I will just read a small portion from the answer which the Leader of the deputation gave This is printed in the Debates of the 9th March 1932,

"In this connection he (the Leader of the deputation) referred to the speech of the Honourable Mr Pratt in the Council of State in September 1921 He complained of a recent disallowance at the instance of the Bombay Government of an adjournment motion regarding Aden He also read the speech of Sir Ernest Hotson in 1927 before the Bombay Council showing how a most important decision in regard to Aden was taken by the Government of India without even informing the Bombay Government He was anxious that this sort of thing should not happen again and that a real opportunity for discussion should be allowed if the problem of transfer to the Colonial Office arose"

You see, Sir, that though assurances were given on a number of occasions, when the question came up for a decision, we were never given an opportunity

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN You did not take an interest in the question. You put a question and asked no supplementary questions

Mr A N SURVE In this connection I might just mention what Mr Howell said He admitted that the assurances were given He says

"If the proposal to transfer to His Majesty's Government were raised again, Mr Howell made it clear that the Government of India were bound by past assurances that full opportunities for discussion would be given",

Notwithstanding past assurances, we found last year that even the Bombay Government was prepared to press for the transfer

[Mr. A. N. Surve]

Now, coming to the question of financial arrangements, it is a good thing that the Government of India made a declaration that the financial consideration is not the main point. But as we are to continue to administer Aden, perhaps to us that point is a vital one. I am happy to say that the position as shown in the answer given on the 1st August last and printed in Volume XXXI at page 676 is satisfactory. There the provincial and central receipts and expenditure are given for two years. I am giving the figures of average for these two years. So far as the Provincial Government is concerned, the receipts are Rs. 4,75,000 and the expenditure Rs. 4,67,000, showing a surplus of about Rs. 8,000. But I may just draw the attention of the House to the answers that are given to my questions which are printed in the Debates of the 12th instant. There I had asked two questions, one about the Chairman of the Aden Port Trust and the other about the Health Officer. From these questions and answers you will see that the establishment there is very costly. There are 8 or 10 officers, very senior officers, drawing large salaries. It has been elicited that those posts were held by officers subordinate in rank like Majors——

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: Major is not a big officer in the military service.

Mr. A. N. SURVE: Majors had held the post of Health Officer thrice since 1889; and a Lieutenant-Colonel is not required for that post. He may be required according to you. According to us a Major can hold that charge. My submission is that on certain previous occasions a Major has discharged the duties of that office satisfactorily and there is no reason why a Lieutenant-Colonel should be entertained. In that way you can effect some saving. I can even go a little further and point out some addition to the revenue side. In the Bombay Presidency we have several salt pans. They are subject to land assessment. Perhaps the Honourable the Revenue Member would bear me out when I say that the salt pans in the Bombay Suburban District, in addition to the salt duty which goes to the Government of India pay a land assessment to the Government of Bombay. May I just ask the Honourable the Revenue Member whether the Aden salt pans will not bring in some revenue to us? I dare say that some addition could be made to our revenues in that way.

Another point that I would like to mention is that it is to the interest of the Bombay Government to see that all the services that Government are rendering are paid for. This question has a very long history. The Government of India has been paying the charges for various services and the benefit has been taken by the British Government. I would refer honourable members to page 675 of Volume XXXI of the Debates of this House where it is stated:

"Until 1900 the entire civil and military expenditure in connection with Aden was borne by India, although as early as 1886, the Government of India urged the propriety of the expense of Aden being divided between Great Britain and India."

Since this dispute arose, the British Government has been making some sort of contribution. Even that point has not been finally decided.

[Mr. A. N. Surve]

There are many things for which we are paying and the benefit is being enjoyed by the British Government. On this question I have submitted a number of questions, but the answers to many of them have not yet been given. In this way I have drawn the pointed attention of Government to certain factors which would help us to augment our revenues. I, therefore, think that the Government will be well advised in accepting the resolution. I request the House to accept my amendment.

Question proposed.

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: Mr. President, I have heard the last two speakers, but am sorry to say that both of them tried to create confusion in the minds of honourable members of this House. The first ground that they have urged is that as our officers are lent for carrying on the administration of Aden, after its transfer they will come back and create some more unemployment in this Presidency. That is not so. The Government of India have agreed,—I should say requested us,—to retain officers from our presidency for carrying on the administration there. They have also agreed—I am speaking from memory—that Aden will continue to be under the High Court of Bombay. So I have disposed of the contention that officers belonging to this Presidency will suffer. They will continue to serve there, and the Government of India will recruit their officers from our services.

Another point which was made much of was that trade would suffer. I fail to realise how our trade is going to suffer by the transfer. Only a part of the administration is going to be transferred, not the whole. Whether it is transferred to the Government of India or remains with us, trade will go on there as before. We cannot interfere with the trade. On the contrary, the Government of India would like Aden to be prosperous because they will get all the income tax from Aden.

Then my honourable friend Mr. Surve said that the income from Aden is 62 lakhs and the expenditure a little less. I quite agree with him. But the income is mostly under heads which are central, and much of the income is therefore taken away by the Central Government. We are entitled to only a few lakhs from excise and stamps.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE: What is the particular purpose of taking it away from Bombay?

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: I am coming to that. Let me first reply to the objection of the honourable member Mr. Surve. The honourable member says that we should carry on the administration of Aden. I have said that almost the whole of the income of 62 lakhs goes to the Government of India. We are ourselves a deficit province. How are we going to provide for the nation-building services in Aden?

Rao Bahadur G. K. CHITALE: You are going to receive income tax.

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: We may not get it. Where is the guarantee that we shall get it? We are already a deficit province. You want to add another deficit province, which will cost us more. As it is, the administration is not efficient there. I will show that by quoting some figures. Is this House prepared to spend 62 lakhs on Aden, when most of the income goes to the Government of India in the shape of salt duty and income tax ? We have no money to give to our transferred departments——

Mr. HAJI MIR MAHOMED BALOCH : How much loss ?

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN : We get only 4 or 5 lakhs. The honourable member Mr. Surve quoted some figures. They show that we get only 4 or 5 lakhs out of the whole income. Our annual revenue from there is four or five lakhs, and the total expenditure is 62 lakhs. Where are we going to bring so many lakhs from to make up that deficit ?

The honourable member who spoke last quoted certain figures of income and expenditure, and that was about 4 lakhs income, and the expenditure was in its vicinity. But how badly are we treating Aden in regard to the nation-building services ? What are we spending on education ? The big sum of Rs. 54.

Mr. B. S. KAMAT : Then why not have all the income transferred to the local Government and get the whole thing done ?

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN : You cannot do that unless you change the whole of the Government of India Act. We are spending in Aden Rs. 54 on education, on medical relief Rs. 48,371, on public health Rs. 9,258, Veterinary Department Rs. 40,733, etc., etc. This is the treatment we are giving Aden. If you want to keep Aden, you must find the money to give them better education, better health, better medical relief, better roads and so on. We cannot have it both ways : if we want to have the control, then we must pay for it.

These were the few points raised, and I do not want to take up the time of this honourable House, but I shall await a reply from the honourable member who has moved the resolution.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : What is the present position ? Has Aden been already transferred to the Government of India ?

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN : The Honourable Sir Charles Watson has made a statement on this subject, and it is to this effect :

"The honourable member has no doubt seen the press note on the subject which was issued in December last. Since then the question has been further considered by the Government of India and they have, with the concurrence of His Majesty's Government, now decided to transfer the control of the civil administration of Aden to the Government of India, the intention being to effect the necessary change by the beginning of the next financial year."

I may further say, Sir, that the Government of India have already made a provision in their next year's budget for the administration of Aden. That clearly shows that they have definitely decided the question once and for all.

Mr. HAJI MIR MAHOMED BALOCH (Karachi City) (Addressed the House in Urdu) : Sir, I rise to lend my wholehearted support to the resolution moved by my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Chitale, who has placed before the House more facts and figures than I can give.

[Mr. Haji Mir Mahomed Baloch]

I see that the Honourable the General Member has pointed out that though the income from Aden is about 62 lakhs, most of it goes to the Government of India and that the Bombay Government gets only a very small portion although we have to spend so much on the Aden administration. In October we got from Government some information to the effect that there is a loss of 2½ lakhs per year, but Sir Chunilal Mehta, an ex-Finance Member of this Government and other merchants recently waited on His Excellency the Viceroy and pointed out by facts and figures that there was no financial loss to the Bombay Government.

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: How can there be a loss when you spend only Rs. 54 on education?

Mr. HAJI MIR MAHOMED BALOCH: Sir Chunilal Mehta may be right or the Honourable the General Member may be right. Even if it means a loss, we should not look at this matter from the point of view of gain or loss. As you know, Sir, Bombay Government has spent about 4 crores of rupees on Aden during so many years past, at least 80 years. When Bombay took over Aden, the population of that place was 4,000 only and now it is about 50,000. The commerce between Bombay and Karachi on the one hand and Aden on the other has grown to the amount of 4 crores and all commodities go from Bombay or Karachi to Aden. The whole of this trade is in the hands of the Bombay Presidency merchants. Even if it involves the Bombay Government in a loss of two or three lakhs a year, Aden should not be transferred to the Government of India. Look at Japan which is fighting China just to get hold of Manchuria as an outlet for her population and commerce. In Europe too, we have seen nations fighting with each other in their hunt after land. Here you are giving away what is already in your hands. The people of Aden, Arabs, Parsis, Hindus, Indian Muslims and local Jews all want to be under the Bombay Government and are opposed to transfer to Government of India. Yet, you agree to its transfer. Now look at Sind. Lakhs and lakhs of Sindhis want separation from Bombay, and although Sind administration costs Bombay a crore of rupees over and above the income derived from Sind yet, you do not want to let it go out of your hands. Where people do not want separation, you agree to their separation, but where people want separation, you sit tight on them and disallow or oppose separation. I should have thought that the Bombay Government would have lodged the very strongest protest possible against transfer of Aden to Delhi, because you have spent crores over Aden and should not agree to hand it over to the Indian Government, as has been suggested by the honourable member Mr. A. N. Surve. I will ask one question namely, when 30 lakhs of Sindhis want and badly want separation of their province from the apron strings of Bombay, why do you put forward so much opposition to that demand when there is a deficit of one crore or 80 lakhs and when all of that amount can be saved by your constituting Sind into a province of its own?

[Mr. Haji Mir Mahomed Baloch]

Naturally, when Aden goes into the control of the Government of India, the merchants who are now dealing with Aden or the people of Aden will lose the opportunity—I may call the advantage—of being able to get into immediate touch with the Bombay Government or with the members of the Bombay Legislative Council. They will have to seek out M.L.A.'s who are too big to be approached with ease, and they will have to go to Delhi or Simla to place their grievances before the Central Government. Now, suppose, for instance, Great Britain wants to push her own goods into Aden in preference to Indian or other goods, what can the merchants interested in Indian goods do to influence the Central Government? It would be different if Aden were to continue under the Bombay Government for reasons which I need not specify. You will not agree to transfer Aden to Arabs or to others because you have invested 4 crores on building up Aden and you would like to keep it, but you cannot keep it, because you have agreed to its transfer to the Government of India.

The object with which Aden is being transferred is that the administration of military control and of foreign relations may be facilitated. Under existing conditions, the Government of Bombay, as mere agents of the Government of India, have to get orders from the Government of India before they can do anything in Aden in those two matters just as the Bengal Government or the Madras Government or the Punjab Government have to take orders from the Central Government. As the rights of Indians are to be in the hands of Indians, the control over this port, which is important from a military point of view, must also be in our own hands. Who knows that the Indian Government will not hand over the administration of the port to the Colonial Government. If handing over of Aden by Bombay Government to the Delhi Government is the beginning of giving Aden to Colonial Government, I strongly protest. We must keep the administration in our own hands, because India will get self-government in the near future. It is only a pretext to say that it is being transferred from the Government of Bombay to the Government of India. That is only the beginning of it; who knows what the end will be?

Sir, I do not want to say much more on this question. If my honourable friends the General Member and the Finance Member were on the non-official benches, I am sure they would have put up a very much stronger case against the transfer of Aden to the Government of India; but on account of their capacity, they have been transferred to the Government benches, and the loss is ours. The mercantile community of Bombay desire that the Bombay Government should not agree to the transfer; the portfolio is in the hands of the Honourable the General Member, who is an Indian, and I have every hope that he will respect the wishes of the mercantile community.

Khan Bahadur A. E. PATEL (Northern Division): Mr. President, I do not know what the effect of the discussion of this resolution will be, in view of the information supplied by the Honourable the General

[Khan Bahadur A. E. Patel]

Member to-day. But, Sir, it is all the more a stronger reason for us to pass this resolution in the nature of a protest that such a step should have been taken without consultation with the people concerned. We know, Sir, that the deputation which was headed by Sir Chunilal Mehta was assured that any final settlement would not be arrived at until the wishes of the people concerned were obtained and taken into consideration.

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: May I ask the honourable member from where he is quoting? What he says is not correct. That assurance related to a transfer to the Colonial Government, and not to the Government of India.

Khan Bahadur A. E. PATEL: To convince the Honourable the General Member, I will quote from a booklet which I have just received, which will show that such an assurance was as a matter of fact given. I am quoting from page 16, paragraph 7 of the Booklet "The Aden Problem (No. IV)".

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: The honourable member stated that in reply to Sir Chunilal this assurance was given.

Khan Bahadur A. E. PATEL: What I am reading from is the address presented to the Viceroy and the reply that was given; it is nothing more than that. It is stated here:

"After hearing the Foreign Secretary and His Excellency, the leader of the Deputation expressed his gratitude for the assurance given by His Excellency that the present transfer was not intended as a step to the Colonial Office."

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: That is what I said.

Khan Bahadur A. E. PATEL: It goes on to say:

"And that should the question ever arise opportunities for consultation would be given."

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: And that is what we say.

Khan Bahadur A. E. PATEL: A reference has been made by the leader of the deputation to the reply actually given by Mr. Howell on behalf of His Excellency——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The difference that the Honourable the Leader of the House is trying to make between his statement and the argument of the honourable member is that the assurance that was given was that the transfer to the Colonial Office would not be made until the people concerned were consulted, not that the transfer of Aden would not be made to the Government of India, without such a consultation.

Khan Bahadur A. E. PATEL: As a matter of principle, whether it is a transfer to the Colonial Office referred to here or to the Government of India, so far as we are concerned the principle underlying the assurance is the same and our protest remains. We say even in the matter of its transfer to the Government of India, our wishes should have been consulted before any final decision was taken. Therefore, I request the honourable members of this House to pass this resolution in the nature of a protest.

[Khan Bahadur A. E. Patel]

Sir, I have heard the Honourable the General Member saying that Aden has been a deficit province, and that therefore it is no longer advisable to continue our connection with such a deficit province. May I ask whether it is really a deficit province or whether it is made to be a deficit province by the special arrangements by which all the income from Income Tax and Customs goes to the Government of India ?

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN : I must again correct the honourable member. These are misstatements. The income from those sources must go to the Central Government ; not you, nor I, nor anybody else has made it a deficit province.

Khan Bahadur A. E. PATEL : I say it is by some arrangement, whether that arrangement is made by the Government of India or any other authority. Taking the total income and expenditure, there is no deficit. It is by certain arrangements that it is made to show a deficit. Therefore, if the Government of India are prepared to undertake charge of a deficit province, it can still be arranged that by some changes in the Meston Settlement, the amount of money which the Government of India are prepared to spend over Aden in order to balance the budget can be transferred to the Government of Bombay.

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN : You are not going to spend any money over it. If you want to have it, you must pay for it. That is the whole position.

Khan Bahadur A. E. PATEL : When the charge of Aden is taken over by the Government of India, they will bear the cost.

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN : Absolutely.

Khan Bahadur A. E. PATEL : If that is the position, why should not the Government of India contribute to the revenues of the Bombay Government by a re-arrangement of the Meston Settlement——

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN : How can they do it ?

Khan Bahadur A. E. PATEL : By some modification in the Meston Settlement, they can allow us to have Aden, which has been developed by the expenditure of crores of rupees by Bombay merchants ? Sir, it has been so many times repeated that every advanced country now wants to find out new centres of trade, and really Aden happens to be a most favourable trade port for the export trade of the Bombay Presidency. The Honourable the General Member said that in no case will trade suffer.

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN : Yes.

The Honourabe Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN : How ?

Khan Bahadur A. E. PATEL : Trade activities depend more or less on the stability of the facilities which are given to the merchants, and if the merchants now trading in Aden think that it would be to their advantage, to their convenience, and to their facility to have connection with Bombay, then Aden should continue as a part of Bombay. It is not we who are to judge the facilities of the traders, but it is the traders themselves who can best understand their own position.

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN : Let them pay for it.

Khan Bahadur A. E. PATEL : They are actually paying ; whether the payment goes to the Bombay Government or to the Government of India is a different question. Almost the whole commercial community is unanimous in demanding that the connection of Aden with the Bombay Presidency should be continued.

Mr. C. W. A. TURNER : May I correct that ? Only the Indian commercial community is against it. The Arabs and the Europeans are all in favour of the transfer.

Khan Bahadur A. E. PATEL : It may be so. I am not in a position to contradict that statement of the honourable member Mr. Turner, but let me be clear. When I am on this point, I am concerned with the Indian community and its interests and the Indian community happens to be the majority community——

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN : Again, that is a misstatement of facts. The Indian community is a minority community there.

Khan Bahadur A. E. PATEL : I mean, Sir, in point of control of trade and commerce, they are a majority community, though not numerically. The Indian community commands the trade and commerce in a greater proportion, and therefore the sentiments of the Indian merchants ought to have been taken into consideration before they are forced to separate from their so to say mother-country, I mean the Bombay Presidency. Sir, it is after all not we who are the best judges of their convenience or the facilities they require, or the advantages to trade and commerce which they will secure by the retention of Aden as part of Bombay. It is they themselves who are the best judges as to what arrangements are in their own interests and in the interest of trade. If the Indian merchants have sunk crores of rupees merely on the understanding that commerce and trade would be stabilised and continue to receive support from the Government of Bombay ; if that was the understanding on which they started——

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN : There was no such understanding.

Khan Bahadur A. E. PATEL : I do not mean any express understanding with Government, but if that was their own implied sentiment that connection with Bombay would stabilise their trade interest in Aden, if that was the thing which led them to sink crores of rupees, then certainly I think they should not be deprived of that facility which they think is best in their own interest. Therefore, I think, from the point of view of the Indian merchants in Aden, it is advisable for Aden to continue its connection with the Bombay Presidency. Apart from the question of Indian merchants in Aden, I say it would be in the interest of the Bombay Presidency to continue the connection with Aden, which happens to be an advantageous port for the trade of the Presidency. Much of the export and import trade of the Bombay Presidency is connected with the trade of Aden, and Aden supplies a good port for extending our trade to Arabia, Abyssinia and Egypt. If all these advantages are to be denied to the Bombay Presidency, then the Presidency will necessarily suffer in the matter of trade.

Finally, I would repeat that our wishes have not been consulted in this matter, and therefore it is up to this House to pass this resolution as a matter of protest.

Mr. PESTANSHAH N. VAKIL: On a point of information from the Honourable the General Member. On page 3 of the Administration Report of Aden it is mentioned that the total receipts during the year 1930-31 amounted to Rs. 62,83,000 and the expenditure was Rs. 62,52,000. I heard the Honourable the General Member remark that in the event of Aden being allowed to remain part of the Bombay Presidency this Presidency will have to bear the whole of the expenditure of Rs. 62,83,000. Now this Rs. 62,83,000 is made up of three items; contribution from the Colonial Office, contribution from the Government of India, and the Bombay Government's local receipts. Are we to understand, or is it suggested that, in the event of Aden remaining part of the Bombay Presidency, the Colonial Office is going to discontinue its grant, as also the Government of India? How otherwise are we going to shoulder the whole responsibility for Rs. 62,00,000?

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: That is our point. If you want to have the control, you must pay for it.

Rao Bahadur G. K. CHITALE: On page 676 (Vol. XXXI) of the Debates in your answer to the question by the honourable member Major Ellis Jones you have given us the figures for 1927-28 in which you say that the receipts under provincial are Rs. 4,29,900; expenditure Rs. 3,74,000. There was a surplus of Rs. 55,900. In the year 1929-30 there was a loss of Rs. 5,000. As regards receipts under central, the receipts are Rs. 3,16,600; expenditure Rs. 9,95,200 and the deficit was Rs. 6,78,600. That is to say, there was a loss of Rs. 6,78,600 to the Central Government. The rest of the amount required for military and political purposes was made up by the Secretary of State for the Colonies and the Government of India.

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: Does not the honourable member see? You must take into consideration that it is only the provincial subjects we are dealing with. We give small sums for primary education and public health. If the Government of India or the Secretary of State tell us that if we want to retain Aden we must pay for the efficient administration of all the provincial subjects, we cannot tell them to pay and leave the control to us. We must be reasonable and not be carried away by sentiment or by anybody's ideas. If this House could spend the money for running the provincial subjects efficiently, there would be some force in the argument. But we have no money. We cannot meet our own expenses.

Rao Bahadur G. K. CHITALE: Will the Colonial Office continue their contribution ?

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: Why should they ? You want to retain the control against their wishes.

Mr. PESTANSHAH N. VAKIL: All the same they do not object to the control being held by the Government of India ?

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: They pay for primary education and for part of the police. As reasonable men, we ought to consider that when we are going to have the control, we must pay for all the services.

Sir REGINALD SPENCE (Bombay City): Sir, I visited Aden last December and I should like to give my opinion as one interested in the question of what the future of Aden is going to be. I met numerous friends among whom were many Indians and merchants from Bombay. The merchants from Bombay are very keen on the retention of Aden under the Government of Bombay, and as regards other people in Aden, they think that they will be handicapped should the administration be transferred to the Colonial Office as was once proposed, but they are now extremely keen on coming under the administration of the Government of India. The Resident at Aden, who had gone to the Government of India for consultation, returned whilst I was there with the decision that Aden should be transferred to the control of the Government of India and this gave pleasure to the majority as I would inform honourable members of this House that the majority in Aden consider Aden will have a better chance of progress under the Government of India. The honourable member Sir Ghulam Hussain has already stated that the Bombay Government had not the money to spend on what may be called nation-building departments. The Bombay merchants seem to fear that if the administration goes into the hands of the Government of India, they will not have that amount of control they have now. But other people who have settled in Aden and round about in Somaliland are anxious to come under the administration of the Government of India. We have to concern ourselves with what the public of Aden wants and not with what a section wants. What the public of Aden want is to go under the Government of India.

Mr. J. B. PETIT (Bombay Millowners' Association): Sir, I confess that this question is somewhat shrouded in the mist of mystery and doubt on account of the contradictory opinions that have been expressed upon it, both in and outside this House. Reading the reply given by H. E. the Viceroy to the deputation of the Indian Merchants that waited on him last year, it appears to me that they have made out a clear case against the transfer of Aden to the Central Government. If as is contended by the Honourable the Leader of the House, the retention of Aden by the Bombay Government is a very costly proposition and its continuance for any length of time is likely to tell adversely on the finances of the Presidency, I would like to know for what purpose and in whose interest the Government of India are so anxious to have it transferred to themselves. Strely it cannot be with the object of relieving the Government of Bombay of this burden. The Government of India are not a philanthropic institution; and, I find it difficult to believe that they have come forward so readily to take over this responsibility from the Government of Bombay merely out of charity. I am inclined to think, Sir, that there is some other purpose at the bottom, perhaps some military reason, and that the object of the transfer is, after all, not so simple as it appears on the surface. If the Government of India themselves were to take over the entire civil administration of Aden and retain it permanently in the interest of the country, it would be all right. But the fear of those who composed the deputation to H. E. the Viceroy, as of the honourable members of this House, is that it is only a stepping stone to its ultimate transfer to the Home Government, to be managed and administered by the Colonial Office. Primarily, of course, there was a very strong feeling in this Presidency against the transfer of control to anyone, merely because of the very legitimate sentiment that the Government of Bombay should continue to carry on the administration of Aden, in consequence of the fact that Bombay merchants and Bombay enterprise had very substantially contributed to the wealth and prosperity of the place, and had made it what it was. But in spite of this fact, it is possible to reconcile this feeling of pride, to its transfer to the Central Government, provided that an irrevocable assurance can be obtained both from the Imperial Government and the Government of India that it will not be transferred to the Colonial Office in due course, as is feared in this country.

The main objection to its retention, if I have been able to correctly understand the Honourable the Leader of the House, is that at present about 50 to 60 lakhs have got to be paid to them annually. But I wish to point out that the reply of the Government of India does not say anything of the kind.

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: These figures were quoted by the honourable mover of the resolution.

Mr. J. B. PETIT: It is not quite clear what the Government of Bombay are spending on Aden. In one part of the representation which the deputation read out, it is stated that the net loss to the Government of Bombay is barely Rs. 2 or 3 lakhs a year.

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: We are spending scarcely anything in fact on the sanitation, medical relief, education and so on in Aden; we are spending very small amounts. In the interests of the people, the Government of India want to have the administration transferred to them, because the Bombay Government cannot spare the money to spend on the nation-building services. That is the only issue. We should not be led away by the sentiments of merchants. Is the Bombay Government able to give the people there efficient education, public health, medical relief, civil works and so on?

Mr. J. B. PETIT: I would like to point out that in the representation which the Indian merchants made to the Viceroy, they say that there is a loss of about 3 lakhs a year.

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: May I interrupt the honourable member for a minute? If we spend in proportion to the population we will require many more lakhs.

Mr. J. B. PETIT: I do not dispute that proposition in the abstract. But what are the present facts? We are at present losing only Rs. 3 lakhs a year and nothing more. On the present basis, the removal of the control of Aden from the Government of Bombay to the Government of India will save 2 to 3 lakhs at the most to the Government of Bombay. That statement was deliberately made by the deputation; and as far as I know, it has not been challenged either by the Government of India or by the Government of Bombay. The military contribution that is being made by the Imperial Government at present, will continue in any case; and that question cannot affect the merits of the point under discussion. Whether Aden ever wanted more grants from this Government for its civil administration and other wants, is a question of which this House is absolutely ignorant. But whether such demands, if at all made, were ever refused, is a matter on which this House is able to give an emphatic reply in the negative. I have been a member of this House for the last 9 years, and I do not remember a single occasion on which a grant was demanded by the Government on behalf of Aden, which was ever refused by this House. If my impression is correct, as I believe it is, then I submit, with all respect to the Leader of the House, that the question of the alleged refusal of this Presidency to satisfy the legitimate needs of Aden, does not arise; and is irrelevant, even if it did. Assuming however for argument's sake that this was so, I cannot believe that the Government of India, whose financial condition is no better than our own, would be willing to spend on a much larger scale for the benefit of Aden, merely out of altruistic motives. That the Government of India are ready to undertake this liability out of love for the inhabitants of Aden, is a proposition, to which, I am afraid, the members of this honourable House,—knowing the Government of India as well as we all do—will not be prepared to subscribe. I need hardly add that it is not at all a convincing argument for the transfer of Aden from the Government of Bombay to the Government of India. I am inclined to think that there is something more at the bottom; and we ought to know what it is.

The honourable member for the European community (Sir Reginald Spence) told us a little while ago, that he knew it as a matter of fact, that the people of Aden definitely wanted the place to be transferred to the Government of India. This is news to me. I had no knowledge of this circumstance before. Indeed, my own impression was in the opposite direction, for I had been authoritatively informed that there was a very strong feeling in Aden against the proposed transfer to the Government of India. But I am prepared to grant that I was misinformed and that my honourable friend is correct. On this assumption, I am willing to admit that this House has no case; and I for one am prepared to bow to the wishes of the people of Aden in this respect. But I would like to make assurance doubly sure. I would like to know whether a plebiscite was taken and if a consensus of opinion was found to be in favour of the transfer of Aden to the Government of India. If not, it is essential to know how the wishes of the people of Aden were ascertained. I have a very clear impression of having read somewhere that the people were very strongly against this transfer, and particularly the natives of the place. But my main objection to the transfer is that no case has been made out for it. If it is costly for the Government of Bombay, it is bound to be equally costly for the Government of India. And we are afraid that this transfer, if agreed to now, will be only a stepping stone to its final delivery to the Colonial Office! It is therefore, Sir, that I wish to support this proposition.

Incidentally, Sir, I think this House is justified in putting on record its most emphatic disapproval of the method employed by the Government of India in taking this important step over the head of the Government of Bombay without giving to this House even an indirect opportunity of discussing it. I think even the Government of Bombay have been very badly treated in this matter as is evident from an extract quoted by the deputation from a speech delivered by Sir Ernest Hotson in 1927 before the Bombay Council, showing among other things, how such an important decision in regard to Aden, had been taken by the Government of India, not only without consulting but even without informing the Government of Bombay.

For all these reasons, Sir, I support the resolution. But I wish to do so with the proviso that if at any future date it is ever proved that the people of Aden are in favour of the transfer to the Government of India, then I for one will be prepared to support their attitude. But at the present moment, on the facts and figures that are before us, the loss that we are incurring in the expenditure on Aden is only a small sum of between two and three lakhs of rupees, which cannot be called a prohibitive figure for the Government of Bombay to bear, as the price of the retention of Aden. I do not think that a case has been made out for its transfer to the Government of India, and I accordingly ask the House to support this resolution, at any rate in order to enable the Government of Bombay to make a comprehensive statement thereon, thereby clarifying the issue and explaining all the facts connected therewith.

Mr. C. W. A. TURNER: Sir, as I have been concerned with the administration of Aden as Secretary in the Political Department for about three years altogether, including the period when I have acted for other officers, I will try and put before the House what the difficulties are in the present system of the administration of Aden, and I trust that I shall convince the honourable House that the difficulties really are serious and the time has come when the connection between Bombay and Aden should come to an end. The Government of Bombay is now practically nothing more than the agent of the Government of India. It is true that theoretically the Bombay Government is responsible for local self-government, medical relief, education and unarmed police force, but in practice the Government of India have hitherto supplied the bulk of the funds which are expended on these departments, except the unarmed police. This is against the terms of the Government of India Act, except in the case of the police, as medical relief, education and public health are all transferred subjects and central revenues cannot be expended on such subjects. They have got over the difficulty by calling these charges which they have accepted—for education, etc.—political charges. And they were ready to go on doing that so long as they had money to spare, but about two or three years ago, when their own finances were becoming difficult, they turned to the Government of Bombay and said: "Now, look here! We have been bearing these charges as political charges hitherto, but we must remind you that they are your charges and the time has come when we must call upon you to bear them." Well, the Government of Bombay were then immediately faced with the fact that they would have to face a serious deficit in the Aden budget, and the only way of getting out of that position was to consider the transfer of Aden to the Government of India. The Government of India said: "We are ready to take over full responsibility and to pay for it, but we cannot go on bearing charges which under the law we are not allowed to bear." That was the position and is the position to-day.

Then, apart from this legal difficulty, the system of administration at Aden is becoming more and more cumbrous and difficult every day. The Resident at Aden has to serve three masters. He has to serve the Government of India at Delhi or Simla; he has to serve the Colonial Secretary in England; and he has to serve the Governor of Bombay. No administration can go on satisfactorily when the administrator has to serve three masters who are at opposite ends of the world.

Mr. J. B. PETIT: On a point of information, Sir; may I know how and why he is responsible to the Colonial Secretary?

Mr. C. W. A. TURNER: He is responsible to the Colonial Secretary for all the political agency work in the Aden Protected Area. The Resident is also the Commander-in-Chief of Aden and he is responsible to the Colonial Office for all his duties in that connection. He is also responsible to the Colonial Office for the administration of the armed police, part of the cost of which is borne by the Colonial Office and part by the Government of India. He is thus intimately connected with the Colonial Secretary, and the intervention of the Colonial Office has complicated the administration of Aden very considerably.

Mr. PESTANSHAH N. VAKIL: Will the honourable member enlighten us on the amount spent by the Government of India as political charges?

Mr. C. W. A. TURNER: I think the figure is Rs. 3,88,000 per annum. The police charges are borne in part by the Government of Bombay, in part by the Government of India and in part by the Colonial Office. Now, I leave it to the honourable members to consider the difficulties which must arise when any charge concerning the armed police comes up. I will only quote one instance. I think it came up at least twelve months ago, or it may be more. The Commandant of the Police applied for permission to purchase a typewriter. The cost of that typewriter was about £ 20. He had to get the sanction of the Government of Bombay, the Government of India and the Colonial Office, because the cost of that typewriter was to be shared between the three Governments. And I do not think he has got that typewriter yet. That is a petty case, but it is typical of what is going on every day in Aden. It must be heart-breaking to any officer who holds the position of Resident at Aden, and I know how he feels it.

[Mr. C. W. A. Turner]

Then, another point which I can never understand is, why the Indian business men of Aden are so terrified of going over to the Government of India. The whole of the business of Aden is really controlled by the Government of India. Salt, customs and income-tax are the main things in which the business men of Aden are concerned. The Government of Bombay can be of no earthly use to them in any matters concerning salt, income-tax and customs. As I say, I have been in this office for three years, and never once in those three years has an Aden merchant come to my office to discuss any commercial matter or any trade matter. The obvious reason is that he knows that he cannot get anything out of me or the Government of Bombay. If he has got any matter to discuss, he must go and discuss it with the Foreign Secretary or some other Secretary of the Government of India. I never can understand why they should think that the Government of Bombay will be of any assistance to them and they should be afraid of going to the Government of India. India is their country, and the Government of India is the government of the whole country. Why should it be inclined to treat the Aden merchants with unfairness?

Another point has been made that there is general opposition amongst the population of Aden. My honourable friend Sir Reginald Spence has pointed out that that is not true of the other communities. It is true, I admit, of Indians. But we know that the Arabs generally are not keen on the connection with India at all, but if that connection remained they would prefer to be under the Government of India than under the Government of Bombay. We know that the Port Trust and the Executive Committee of the local self-governing body there have both declared in favour of the transfer to the Government of India. As for the Indians, I admit their preference to Bombay, but it appears to me that that preference is purely sentimental. The general feeling in Aden, as Sir Reginald Spence pointed out, is in favour of the transfer.

Mr. J. S. KADRI (Northern Division): Sir, I should like to say a few words in connection with Aden, where I was on special duty for over a year and of which I have personal experience and knowledge. In 1916, when I was there, the Great War was going on, and it was at that time that the question of the transfer of military control was considered, and it was in 1917 that the military control of Aden was actually transferred to the War Office. The question of the transfer of the civil administration of Aden to the Colonial Office was also then being mooted, and I knew from my direct contact with the citizens of Aden in those days that they were very much opposed to the idea of being transferred to the Colonial Office.

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: That is a fact.

Mr. J. S. KADRI: But subsequently circumstances changed a good deal, and in the matter of civil administration under dual control, the people were feeling aggrieved in many respects. I was on special duty in connection with the reorganisation of the Educational Department of the Aden Settlement and I had to submit my report to the Government of India through the Government of Bombay. It was then found that on every important matter involving any additional expense, the Government of Bombay had to refer to the Government of India for final orders. Owing to financial handicaps, many urgent reforms were delayed, and it was felt by the people of Aden that they suffered a great deal on account of the dual control. The result was that their nation-building departments were very much starved, and particularly, the Educational Department was in a very bad condition. There was not sufficient money to develop Government institutions and to aid the private institutions, which were managed by foreign agencies like Spanish, Italian and Danish missions. The indigenous institutions also suffered seriously, as they were not properly and adequately aided by Government, since there were not sufficient funds to aid them. All these difficulties were brought to the notice of the Government in my report and they were to a very great extent remedied and rectified by the Government. But still the people felt that they were not being fairly treated in the matter of their medical, educational and municipal needs. This will go to show that the arguments urged in favour of the transfer of civil control to the Government of India are not unfounded. But at the same time, it should be remembered that the people of Aden in general, including the Europeans, with whom I was in touch, and particularly the Indians who form about 15 per cent. of the total population of Aden were very much in favour of having their political as well as commercial relations maintained with the Bombay Presidency, because there were obvious facilities and advantages for the people to remain in direct contact with the Bombay Government which is not only nearer to them than the India Government but which has played an important part in shaping and stabilising the civil administration of Aden during its century-old connection with the Bombay Presidency. Aden owes its material prosperity chiefly to Indians. The Mahomedans and Hindus of Kathiawar who are very many in Aden carry on roaring business, not only in Aden but in other parts of Arbia viz., Yemen, Hodeida, etc., and also in coast towns of Africa like Port Suakin and Port Sudan, places which I happened to visit while I was in Aden. They were all very much interested in keeping up their relations with the Bombay Government, not only on the score of administrative convenience but also on the score of old business connections with the merchants here. Even now, so far as I can gather from my correspondence with the people of Aden, they are very anxious that they should remain attached to the Bombay presidency, because after all, the India Government is far off, while their close personal and commercial relations with the people of Bombay and Kathiawar necessitate their direct contact with the Government of Bombay. As Aden is an emporium of trade and the gateway of the Red Sea, it occupies a very important position from a strategic point of view, and I think the Government of India was justified in transferring its military control to the War Office. But as regards the civil control, I think, the Bombay Government will be well advised to try their best to retain Aden under their own control. Bombay will be a gainer in good many respects thereby. In the first place it will gain a great deal commercially, because a large amount of business is being carried on between Bombay and Aden. I will just cite the instance of some Bombay firms. The well known firms of Laljees and of Sir Hormusji Cowasji (called Messrs. Cowasji Dinshaw & Co.) are from Bombay. Of course, they are naturally anxious to remain in touch with Bombay. I think, these people have contributed a lion's share in building up the prosperity of Aden and they are justified in expecting the Bombay Government to safeguard their business interests and retain the civil administration of Aden in their own hands. After all, they have large vested interests in Aden. It is the Bombay people who have really made Aden what it is. After 1916, since I left Aden, there has been a tremendous change in the general condition of Aden and there is a very bright future in store for it, if it remains under the Bombay Government. I understand that the Government of India is going to balance the budget of Aden without incurring any expense from its own funds. I think I am not wrong in saying that it is likely to make a profit of a lakh or two in the Aden budget. Under such circumstances, there is no reason why the Government of India should not come to the rescue of the Bombay Government by subsidising it for the various nation-building departments of Aden, with the object of bringing them up to a high level and thereby satisfying the needs of the people. If the Government of India is going to shoulder the extra burden of improving the various departments of Aden, it can as well assist the Bombay Government in putting Aden on a higher level, in so far as educational, medical and other civil amenities are concerned. From my personal experience, I can say that the public of Aden and the commercial interests of the Bombay Presidency are very much concerned about the transfer of civil control to the Government of India, because they are very much afraid, as pointed out by my honourable friend Mr. Petit, that this is simply the first stage in the transitional career of Aden, which is likely to go under the sway of the Colonial Office sooner or later. Aden is not only a very important place, from the strategic point of view, but it holds a unique position from other points of view also. It is a place of international importance and the British Government would certainly like to have it under their own direct control, if not now, a few years hence. In conclusion, I would urge this part of the House to accept this resolution, in order to give expression to our clear and emphatic opinion on this matter and let the Government of India know that the Bombay Presidency is not at all inclined to sever its connection with Aden, which is of permanent and paramount importance to its commerce and trade. With these words, I support the resolution of my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Chitale.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE (Poona City): Sir, in a very able and lengthy speech the honourable member Mr. Kadri has put before the House in a clear way the important issue that is before us for consideration. The question as it arises is this: should Aden be first transferred from Bombay to the Government of India, so that, in course of time, it may be wrenched from the hands of the Government of India ultimately and transferred to some other Government? Let it be the Colonial or some other Government. That is the only issue before us now worth consideration. The question about the cost of maintaining Aden, at any rate so far as its nation-building departments are concerned, is a secondary question. I do not think it is a primary question. We have spent crores of rupees over the Development Department in Bombay City in anticipation of return. We have spent on Sind crores of rupees in anticipation of return, of which we are almost certain. Can we not then spend some amount in the same way on the improvement of Aden, if we anticipate any return from it? We have been borrowing. The Government of Bombay has been a borrower for the last many years. It has spent money wherever it thought necessary in the interests of the Presidency by borrowing. Is it really a wrong argument to say that to-day, because Aden does not pay us anything, therefore, we should be ready to give it up? That is, I think, the question that should be considered. A question was asked just now why it is that the Bombay traders and merchants should be so keen in trying to keep Aden under the Bombay Government. I believe self-interest is the only answer. Are they fools, or are they wise men, business men to see that they are losing their interests in Aden by reason of its transfer from the Presidency. I believe that if any argument is necessary to convince us that Aden should not be taken away from us, it is this argument. Those who have built up their trade in Aden, those who have spent their lives in Aden, those who have spent their money——[Interruption.] The argument is that of self-interest of the traders of Bombay, and the interest of traders of Bombay is the interest of the Presidency of Bombay, and the interest of the Presidency of Bombay ought to be the interest of the Government of Bombay. Unless the Government of Bombay is prepared to sacrifice its own interests, there is no go out of the position. The merchants of Bombay really know what is to their advantage.

The only argument that has been advanced against the retention is that we cannot satisfy the needs of the Aden people as regards nation-building departments. I believe that we have to sow before we can reap. The Government of Bombay has never come before this House and asked for money to invest in Aden in order to improve the condition there. If that has been done, I would like to know when. So far as I can see, such a proposal has never been put forth before this House.

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: Where is the money?

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE: We have been borrowing. A wise borrower is he who utilises the borrowings for a good purpose. We do not say you should borrow money and spend it unnecessarily.

The second question raised was about the triple character of the control. I believe the double character of the control is known to us in many places. For instance, there is military control in Kirkee cantonment and civil control in Kirkee town. The Government of Bombay is certainly not controlling the military operations of these cantonments. They are directly under the control of the Government of India——

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: The Cantonment Authorities do not carry on correspondence with the Civil Authorities.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE: I quite see the force of the argument. All that is required is to adjust the methods of correspondence, to decide through what channels the correspondence should go. If really the Government of Bombay desire to keep Aden for the people of Bombay, they can certainly see their way to do it. They are a mighty Government; they are a very ingenious Government. They have got the resources; but they must have the will to do it.

Another important question raised was that of the adjustment of the finances between the Central and Provincial Governments. Has the Government of Bombay not represented the case about the income tax to the Government of India? When we ask for a large subsidy from them, is that simply a present to us? Is it not true that they receive a very large and substantial contribution out of the income tax receipts from Aden? Is it not our right to claim part of it? I am sure that when the Honourable the Finance Secretary was recently in Delhi, he must have put forward the case of the Bombay Government in regard to the income tax receipts from Aden along with those from the Presidency. It is no argument to say that the Government of India take away the income tax and we get very little by way of other taxes and that therefore we cannot keep up the nation-building departments. I believe it is our right to claim our share of the income tax, it is our privilege.

One more point that strikes me is this: this resolution was tabled by my honourable friend from Ahmednagar (Rao Bahadur Chitale) some time in January or perhaps in December. I put it to the Government of Bombay: have they made a representation to the Government of India asking them to hold up their decision until this House has had an opportunity to express an opinion on it? I hope they have done it, and if they have not done it, I would like to be enlightened as to what has been done in the matter. At the present moment, when this particular resolution was before the House, it was necessary and desirable that the Government of Bombay should have asked the Government of India to wait until this House expressed its opinion on this point. It is not a new question. It is a ticklish question. It was raised in 1910, 1920 and in 1923. Since then this question has been repeatedly brought forward. The Government of Bombay has been trying occasionally to become warm and sometimes lukewarm, while the Government of India have been trying their best to take away Aden from us. I believe the Government of India is sufficiently far-sighted. We can presume and see why they want to take it away from Bombay. It is a strategic point. Undoubtedly it is a key in many respects. If Aden goes away to the Colonial Office, India loses and the Colonial Office gains. There is no doubt about that. I think there is no doubt about that position. As the keepers of the fortunes of the Bombay people, what is the position of the Government of Bombay who are the trustees of the people of Bombay? Should they, as trustees, look to the interests of those whom they represent or should they look to the interests of those beyond the seas? It has been very clearly told to us by my honourable friend Mr. Kadri that a majority of the Asiatic people living in Aden are very keen about continuing under the Bombay Government——

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: No, no. Indians he said, not Arabs.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE: Very well, I accept that correction. The Arabs owned Aden at first. India is not the country of the Britishers. India was not the country of the Aryans who came to India, India belonged to the aborigines. That is no argument, Sir. In the part of Desh to which I belong I am a foreigner, but nobody can drive me out of it. Aden may have been originally in the possession of Arabs, but an Arab is welcomed in India and similarly should not an Indian be welcomed in Aden? What is in this argument? I fail to see anything in that argument. What is our duty as the representatives of the interests of India? Before we are philanthropists, we must be generous and just to our own people who have built up Aden to its present thriving position. Where shall we look? Shall we look at what the Arabs want or shall we see what the Colonial Office wants or shall we see ten years ahead when India may become a free country what she will want? I do not mean to suggest that the question is being hurried up on account of the coming reforms—it may be so or it may not be so, perhaps it may be, but the question now is this namely, if India is to be under a new constitution a Dominion—I will not go for the present beyond that—within the Empire, what would be the strategic position of Aden so far as India is concerned? I ask you, the Honourable Sir Ghulam Hussain, as the mouthpiece of Government because you ought to know it better than I or anybody else, and if you do not, I will ask you to go and represent our cause and pump the Government of India out to our advantage. That is the duty which you owe to all of us. I would put it thus, you wish to remove Aden from our hands in such a hurried way because no complications should arise after the new constitution comes in——

Mr. C. W. A. TURNER: May I inform the honourable member that these negotiations have been going on for the last five years? It is not being done in a hurry.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE: I know they have been going on for the last five years, but the question of the reforms and the new Council and separated India is going on for more than 10 years. Which is anterior in time? I believe the Government of India is farsighted enough, but I want the Government of Bombay to be equally farsighted. I want them as trustees of this Presidency not to allow Aden to be wrenched away from us. They must put our case so strongly before the Government of India that Aden will continue to remain with us. That is exactly what I want to say. I of course expect that the reply will probably be that the Government of Bombay have taken all necessary steps to put the case properly before the Government of India and I also expect that we shall be told in reply by the Government of the steps which the Government of Bombay have taken as regards putting forth our claims. But, I am afraid, I am inclined to believe that both the Honourable the Leader of the House and the honourable member the Political Secretary appear to me to be inclined to take a more sympathetic view of the Colonial Office than of the people for whom or to whom or for whose interest they are responsible. It may be that to-day it may not be to our advantage to keep Aden, but I ask how much money has been already buried in Aden by the people of this country? Has that been calculated? From a desert almost to a thriving city Aden has risen. Many of us have visited that port and we have seen during the last ten, twenty or thirty years what difference it has made. Was not India a partner in doing that? I would like to know exactly whether the Government of Bombay has calculated the amount of money buried in improving Aden by the merchants of Bombay. It is, Sir, now very easy to say "Transfer that thriving city to us now, transfer that strategic point to us now when it is a prosperous town, when there are foreigners, Greeks, Arabs, Europeans all working in that place and it has become a small thriving colony. Why don't you hand it over to us?" But the question arises, when the colony has come to its present position, who are the persons who are primarily entitled to the benefit of it? I will put this question on the basis of pounds, shillings and pence, as that is the argument put before us, but I say that that argument of pounds, shillings and pence should be subordinated for some time to the argument of sentiment and vested interests, and our interests require this very Aden to be with us. The Government of Bombay as our trustees and as our guide and as controllers of our destinies ought to think with us and not against us, they ought to think in the way in which the people of Aden and we, their representatives, like them to think. Let them put themselves in the position of these merchants who have spent the greater part of their lives and money in developing Aden to its present prosperous condition, I mean the people of Bombay. Then only will the Government realise why the people of Bombay want Aden to continue under the Bombay Government. The people of Bombay have spent their money, their energies and their skill in improving Aden and improving Aden's commerce and trade. If it is necessary to do so, Government may come forward with a proposal of a certain subsidy, and this House will certainly be very glad to contribute it. For all these and other reasons, I think we should not be a party to the transfer of Aden from Bombay to Delhi. Aden is and will be a strategic point to the India of the future. That point must be preserved for us and should not be parted with.

Of course, I do not want to take further time of this House but I do think that Indian interest, Indian Colonial interest, is to be considered, not Indian provincial interest. India of to-day may have provincial interest only but the India of to-morrow will have colonial interest and will have foreign interest. Are they not to be preserved ? Let us think for a moment that we are a self-governing dominion under the Empire sitting here in this House and we believe that Aden is a strategic point. We know our kith and kin are there. Let us then see what shall be our mentality ? Shall we then consider whether we should spend a little more or a little less or shall we not think that the strategic point of Aden should be with a self-governing India ? That is how we should all look at this question. That is the way I would ask the Bombay Government to put forth the claim of this presidency in the adjustment to be made between the Bombay Government and the Government of India as regards the income which the latter Government receives from Aden for and on behalf of the Local Government and the people of Bombay. If that income is considered, I believe the Government of India gives us an inadequate contribution. The Government of India gets a large amount of money from Aden. I shall be very glad to be enlightened as to the proportion they spend out of that large income over the people of Aden in return for that income. That proportion I am sure is not very large, rather is not even proper. If that is so, why should we lose Aden to the Indian Government ?

I was certainly very much amused at the reasons which were put forward by the Honourable the Leader of the House in support of the transfer of Aden to the Government of India. The reasons, Sir, are not very sound reasons. The Honourable the Leader said there was triple control and that it has not been possible for the Bombay Government to spend much on the nation-building departments in Aden and that therefore Aden must go to the Government of India. If there is triple control, why not have dual control, or if circumstances do not permit it now, why not wait for some time until the control can be made unilateral or dual, but let us not be in a hurry to lose that place now, because it will be said afterwards that on the verge of India becoming a self-governing dominion, the Government of Bombay, with the help of the honourable member the Political Secretary and the Executive Councillors, managed to part with that strategic point namely, Aden, in favour of the British Colonial Office so that they may make use of it in their own way——

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN : In favour of India.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE : I quite agree, in favour of India for the present only. I say, why not wait for a couple of years when the new constitution is coming into force ? I do not see the point of all this hurry and scurry. The Government of India should have said "Let us hold our hands for a while." The Government of India knew that the time was not opportune, that they could wait for a year or two or even three years, that the people chiefly concerned opposed the idea of a transfer from Bombay Government to the Government of India or for the matter of that to any other Government. They should have said "Let us wait and see for a while."

With these remarks, I strongly support the arguments put forward by my honourable friend from Ahmednagar. In fact, I would go so far as to say that the resolution should be taken to a division and we should very clearly tell the Government of Bombay and the Government of India that this honourable House does not want to part with Aden even if it means a sacrifice on our part in keeping it under our control. Those who have gone before us in this Council have spoken over and over again on this question. There are so many speeches on record. Sir Dinshaw Wacha has pleaded strongly in favour of the retention of Aden under the Bombay Government, and many others have on several occasions discussed this important question, and I believe that this is just the time when we must make it perfectly clear to Government that we are opposed to this partition of Aden and that we refuse to consent to let Aden be dragged away or snatched away from our hands and handed over to the Government of India or any other Government.

Mr. SHAIKH ABDUL AZIZ (Central Division) : Sir, the Honourable the Leader of the House told us that one of the reasons why Government were in favour of transferring Aden to the Government of India was that we had spent so little on education and other nation-building departments in Aden and that if Aden is transferred to that Government, they will be in a position to take proper care of the needs of the people in Aden, i.e., education, health, etc. May I point out that in his reply to the Deputation led by Sir Chunilal Mehta His Excellency the Viceroy did not say a word about education or any other nation-building department in Aden but the reason given was that the present proposals were made solely with the view to remove administrative inconvenience.

I shall now remind the Honourable the Leader of the House of what is being done in Baluchistan for the education of the people of Baluchistan by the Government of India which is now administering that province. In Volume I of the Indian Statutory Commission Report, it has been stated that very little education has been given to a population of 8 lakhs in Baluchistan. I need not go further into this argument of Government. I am fully in favour of the resolution to the effect that Aden should not be transferred to the Government of India.

(After recess.)

Mr. PESTANSHAH N. VAKIL (Ahmedabad City) : Sir, if the financial consideration is the crux of the whole question,—as a matter of fact, it is not, as is apparent from the reply given to the deputation that waited on His Excellency the Viceroy, and also from the replies to interpellations both in this Council as well as in the Assembly—but assuming for the sake of argument that financial reasons played the principal part in the determination of this question—and the Honourable the Leader of the House has reared his whole structure on the foundation of financial reasons, inasmuch as he trotted out the bogey of financial responsibility for the efficient administration of Aden—then, I submit, it was all the more incumbent both upon the Honourable the Leader of the House as well as on the Political Secretary to have attempted to convince this part of the House by adducing facts and figures. The Honourable the Leader of the House gave us to understand, at least we have understood him to mean, that this Presidency will have to shoulder the whole burden, viz., Rs. 62,00,000 for the civil administration of Aden. It was for this reason, Sir, that I rose on a point of information, whether the Colonial Office was going to discontinue its contribution, because, as I pointed out, this Rs. 62,00,000 was made up by the contributions from, firstly, the Colonial Office, then the Government of India and lastly the Bombay Government. Now, this point has not been cleared at all, and, with great respect, I beg to state that the Honourable the Leader of the House appeared to me to be fencing with the question instead of going straight to the answer. That shows that the financial bogey has no substance at all. Further, the Political Secretary told us that certain charges, which ought legitimately to have been borne by the Bombay Government, were as a matter of fact borne by the Government of India, and there was a legal difficulty about it, which, as he very well pointed out, was got over by debiting those charges under the name of "political charges." These charges come to Rs. 3,88,000. Therefore, if I have understood both these honourable gentlemen aright, the extra burden which this Presidency may have to shoulder will be something like 4 or 5 lakhs of rupees, because the major part of the expenses is defrayed by the revenues obtained locally as well as by the contribution of the Colonial Office.

Now, Sir, I know the Honourable the Leader of the House was perfectly right in telling this House that most of the revenues derived from Aden fall under the head of Imperial Revenues, that is to say, revenues properly creditable to the Government of India, for instance, Income Tax which comes to about Rs. 3,00,000 and revenue from Salt Rs. 75,000, and so forth. As my honourable friend Mr. Gokhale argued, this is a special case, and although legally, i.e. under the Government of India Act, that Government are entitled to all that revenue, it can very properly be urged that, under the special circumstances, the Government of India may be requested to forgo these heads of revenue in Aden in order to enable the Bombay Government to bear the entire burden of the civil administration of Aden. To my mind the financial difficulties are not really very serious; at any rate, we have not been thoroughly convinced that the difficulties presented are insuperable. I hold the Administration Report of Aden in my hand—it is bound to be an authentic publication—and the figures given there are exactly as I have stated them a minute ago; and from that it is apparent that, unless the Colonial Office is going to discontinue their contribution in toto, the financial situation for us will not be as embarrassing and hopeless as it has been made out to be.

But, Sir, we are labouring the point to no purpose. The answer given to the deputation is very clear that it is for administrative purposes that the separation is going to be effected. As the Political Secretary pointed out, at present there is triple control in Aden, not only dual. But, as has been rightly pointed out, the administration even in India is dual. There are a number of questions which have got to be referred to the Government of India. For instance, suppose an industry which is carrying on its operations in the Bombay Presidency wants protection, it has to go to the Government of India for it. As a matter of fact, I know of several industries the management of which had had to deal directly with the India Government. Similarly, on a great many other questions. Only yesterday we passed a resolution regarding franchise in rural areas and the Honourable the Leader of the House assured us that he would forward the notes of the debate to the Government of India. That means that at present even here, i.e. in India itself, in certain matters there is dual control. The only question is why there should be triple control. Well, that is a different matter altogether, and if anybody is responsible for it, it is the Government of India or the Bombay Government for having allowed the Colonial Office to obtain control over the administration of Aden at all. But that is a larger question to which we need not refer on the present occasion.

But, Sir, the real motive behind this move seems to be political. I am not one of those who see the cloven hoof of malign Government interest in every step that is taken. At the same time, I have a shrewd suspicion that the real motive is political. There has been or is shortly going to be a change in the orientation of the Near East politics by the admission of Iraq to the League of Nations. The whole outlook of Near Eastern politics is going to be shifted and Aden is on the eve of obtaining increasing importance in the near future. It is not only the entrance to the Red Sea, but is also a very big emporium, as has been graphically pointed out by my honourable friend Mr. Kadri, for the vast hinterland round about Aden. Then, Sir, it is the principal port of export for the produce of India and Arabia to the East African seaboard. So, Aden, both commercially and politically, because of the recent changes in the Near Eastern politics, is going to have very great importance in the near future; and, as was pointed out by my honourable friend Mr. Petit, all this movement may be only a stepping-stone to the transfer of Aden from the Government of India to the Colonial Office. That is, we suspect, how the matter stands. Sir, it has also been pointed out that even under the existing arrangement the merchants of Aden have to deal with the Government of India, and that they do not therefore stand to lose anything by the transfer. I ask this House, do they not? With the instances of Nairobi, East Africa, and of the Transvaal, where we know how the Indians have fared, at least is it not quite on the cards that the interests of Indian merchants will go by the board when Aden is severed absolutely from India ?

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN : It is not going to be severed from India.

Mr. PESTANSHAH N. VAKIL : I am talking of the distant future. As I said before, we suspect that it may merely be the precursor of its absolute severance from the Indian continent. Aden, territorially and geographically, belongs to Arabia, and it may then be urged, " What has India got to do with Aden ? It was only when India was a dependency that Aden was allowed to be kept in administrative connection with India." At that time the interests of the Indian merchants, who have built up the trade of Aden largely by their own enterprise and initiative, will be absolutely jettisoned. Why, Sir ? What has happened in East Africa ? They will be elbowed out by the more virile and more influential settlers from England and other places. By settlement, I do not mean to say that the climate of Aden is so inviting that those European foreigners, with all the modern amenities and the improvement in material comforts, will go and permanently reside there. But they will build up large interests, there will be vested interests, and then who is going to listen to the protest of the Indians ? So, there are suspicions, but they are very well founded.

Regarding the wishes of the residents of Aden, here I admit, Sir, there has been some lack of clear thinking ; I will not say there is confusion of thought, but there has been lack of clear thinking. If there is going to be anything like self-determination, and if a clear-cut issue is placed before the residents of Aden in the shape of a referendum, I am quite sure the residents of Aden, the Arabs—the Somalis do not count, because they are merely workers in the port—who form the bulk of the population will, I am sure, plump solidly for self-government ; and not, I fear, for connection with India or connection with the Colonial Office, but for self-government pure and simple. But it may be argued that the people of Aden have not reached politically that stage where they can take an independent line of action. At any rate when capital is sought to be made out of this argument anent the wishes of the people of Aden, I put it to my honourable friend the Leader of the House whether the issue has been presented to them in that clear-cut form, that is, whether they desire to be with the Government of India or with the Bombay Government. If it is put in that form, if it is held up in front of them in that shape, I for one have no doubt that they will vote for connection with Bombay rather than for connection with the Government of India. I submit, Sir, if there is going to be anything like self-determination, their interests, i.e. of the people of Aden, should count first and foremost, and I am entirely in agreement with what the honourable member Mr. Petit stated that their political interests should be consulted first. Otherwise we shall lay ourselves open to the same kind of reproach that we level against the British people, viz. that they came over here, established themselves in our land and are unwilling to hand over power to us. A similar reproach may rightly be laid at our door that we Indians who do not belong to Arabia,—not one foot of the Arabian land rightly belongs to us,—want to have control over their destinies.

Aden, Sir, is in a transitional stage, both commercially and politically. Nobody knows what is going to happen in the near future, much less what is going to happen in the distant future. As matters stand, the question is whether we are going to submit to a developed territory, which, though geographically not ours, politically and administratively belongs to Bombay, being handed over to the Government of India, as has been actually done, without consulting us, behind our back. And, Sir, I do not know why the Honourable the Leader of the House should have taken up the cudgels on behalf of the Government of India. It is our duty to see that Aden is not transferred to that Government, and before it becomes an accomplished fact, we should express ourselves unequivocally on this question. We have often expressed our gratitude to the Honourable the Leader of the House for his valuable services to this Presidency, and we expect that he will take a saner view of things, and rightly interpret the wishes of this House. With these words I have great pleasure in supporting the resolution.

Dr. M. K. DIXIT (Surat District): Sir, we have been discussing this important subject for some hours and therefore I do not wish to detain the House by making a long speech. I wish to make one or two points. The first is with regard to the eliciting of public opinion. The Leader of the House has read out a few lines from the Government communique and told us that the Government of India had decided to take over the control of Aden from the beginning of the next official year. We have yet 16 days more. If he takes the trouble of representing the views of this side of the House, I think he will be discharging the duty he owes to this side of the House. We have been told that no assurance was given by Government to elicit public opinion on this side. But, Sir, I shall read the reply of the Foreign Secretary, Mr. Howell, which appears on page 13, paragraph 2 of the Book entitled "The Aden Problem":

> "He strongly refuted the belief that the Government of India had made up their minds on the question of transfer without consulting public opinion. The main object of the statements made recently on the floor of the Bombay Legislative Council and the Legislative Assembly was to elicit public opinion, and the Government of India had at present under consideration a number of memorials on the subject."

The only chance that this House had of expressing its considered opinion has occurred only to-day. It is only taken advantage of to-day. The statements made on the floor of this House did not give rise to any debate on this particular point. It is only when a non-official member on this side of the House brought forward a resolution and when debate is raised on it, the non-official members had a chance of expressing their views. It is very unfortunate that the Government of Bombay should have consented to hand over Aden to the Government of India. It is a misfortune, because of the present constitution. If the Government of Bombay, particularly the Members of the Executive Council, were responsible to the House, I think they would not have hurriedly consented to part with Aden. But, now Reforms are going to come and we expect that the whole Government will consist of Ministers responsible to this House. Then they will not part with Aden. It is yet possible for the Bombay Government to see that Aden is not separated from us and transferred to the Government of India, who may later on transfer it to the Colonial Office. That is one point which I wanted to suggest.

Another point which I want to ask the Leader of the House is this. He has repeatedly told us that the administration of Aden costs something like 62 to 64 lakhs of rupees.

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: I never said that. The honourable mover has quoted those figures.

Dr. M. K. DIXIT: The Honourable Member did not dispute that. At any rate a pretty large amount is spent, if not exactly 64 lakhs. May I know from him what is the exact amount of expenditure on civil administration of Aden? I think a major portion of this expenditure is spent on military and political administration. But for the civil administration a few lakhs—6 to 7 lakhs—are spent. That is my information. I still maintain that a major portion of this expenditure is incurred on political and military aspects of the administration. For civil administration a very small amount is spent. Now, I ask if the Bombay Government is responsible for the expenditure that is incurred for military and political purposes. I do not think so. If that were taken into consideration, the Bombay presidency itself will cost more than 15 crores of rupees. We are spending a large amount on military and other affairs. So, I submit that the question of expenditure is of very small importance. It does not deserve any consideration at our hands. If the Bombay Government is out of pocket to the extent of one or two lakhs, we can easily afford to give that, if the Government ask for it. We must admit that, if demands had been made, we would certainly have sanctioned the amount. I do not think during my tenure of membership for the last eight years in this House, there was no demand for any amount for the civil administration of Aden, which was refused by this House. In fact no extra demand was ever made for the civil administration of Aden.

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: The Government of India used to pay for it.

Dr. M. K. DIXIT: That is because the Government of India take away all the income from Aden. The chief revenues from Aden are customs, salt and income-tax. If all the revenues are taken away by them, they are bound to pay for the military expenditure as well as for the civil administration also. In the very near future, we are going to get a revision of the Meston settlement, when the new Government is coming. So, that difficulty will be easily obviated. When the revision of the settlement is made, I suppose we will be getting a larger share even from the revenues of Aden. We will get a share of the income-tax also.

Mr. C. W. A. TURNER: Aden will get its own income-tax for its own purposes.

Dr. M. K. DIXIT: That is, when separated. If it is kept——

Mr. C. W. A. TURNER: The Bombay Presidency will take it and spend it in Bombay.

Dr. M. K. DIXIT: Why should we imagine that the income-tax taken from Aden would be mixed up with the general revenues of this Presidency and spent here? We do not say that income-tax from Bombay——

Mr. C. W. A. TURNER: The honourable member does not speak from the point of view of Aden. He is speaking entirely from the point of view of the Bombay Presidency.

Dr. M. K. DIXIT: We want to keep it as our own child.

Mr. C. W. A. TURNER: It is a very unhappy child.

Dr. M. K. DIXIT: I suspect that the hurry in handing over Aden and separating it from the Bombay Presidency is only due to the fact that in the very near future the question of self-determination will be considered and settled. Therefore the hurry is made. I appeal to the Honourable the Leader of the House that if within 16 days it is possible to represent the views of this House as emphatically as possible, the Government of India will reconsider the question.

Rao Bahadur G. K. CHITALE (Ahmednagar District): Mr. President, there is a great deal to be said in reply. Let me clear the ground. It appears from the question and answers given on 1st of August 1931, we have got two tables given on page 676. The provincial and central revenues I have quoted. Below that what is stated is:

"The expenditure charged under 'central' includes at present certain heads such as Education, Medical, Public Health and General Administration. These items are being booked under the head '29-Political'. The amount involved in these items varied approximately from Rs. 2,26,000 to Rs. 3,65,000 during the years 1927-28 to 1930-31. The propriety of debiting to the Central Government items of expenditure which are really 'Provincial' in nature is under consideration, and the adjustments which may become necessary will convert the small precarious Provincial surplus to a substantial deficit varying from 2 to 3 lakhs or more."

Supposing Aden is taken over, this Presidency will have to bear an additional expenditure of 2 to 3 lakhs. Keep that in mind prominently. It is a question of spending 2 to 3 lakhs on a scale which the Government of India itself kept under that particular head.

Let me point out one more question. Aden is a very valuable property. It was "a barren rock" years back, and was tacked on to the Government of Bombay. Why do the Government of India want it back now? In this published report on page 4, it will be found:

"A dredging scheme estimated to cost about 38 lakhs was sanctioned by Government in May 1928. The work of deepening and extending the harbour and approach channel which was commenced on the 27th December 1928 was completed on the 24th December 1930 at a cost of Rs. 35,57,986. The minimum depth of water at low tide now available in the Approach Channel and Inner Mooring Basin except the 4 feet deep water berths, is 32'-6"...."

That means to say that the port is much improved and a cost of something like 35 lakhs incurred, and the port is now a first class port.

Mr. C. W. A. TURNER: May I point out, Sir, that it was so badly silted that there was a risk that the mail steamers might not be able to call there?

Rao Bahadur G. K. CHITALE: It reads on:

"There are four oil berths connected to the land installation by submarine pipe lines, two of which berths have been dredged to a minimum depth of 35 feet at L.W.; there are two other berths dredged to a similar depth available for the supply of bunker coal and for general purposes."

The point I am making is that in 1930 the port was greatly developed and made suitable for very large steamers. I do not like this hush-hush policy. It appears, Sir, that Sir Denys Bray stated in a demi-official letter, dated the 2nd July 1929, which he wrote to Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas:

"Please refer to your personal letter of 22nd June. It is true, as you surmise, that the question of the transfer of control of the civil administration of Aden from the Government of Bombay to the Government of India has lately been mooted. But the matter has not got beyond the stage of sounding opinions, and you may rest assured that there is no intention of taking any decisive step without first fully ascertaining the views of merchants and others whose interests would be directly affected. Prima facie there is much to be said on both sides."

This was the history of the question up to July 1929. Then, I find that the question did not come to the surface for a long time. Then, a question was asked in this Council by the honourable members Mr. Surve and Major Ellis Jones, and after some delay a lengthy reply was given to them on the 1st August 1931. Then, on the 7th October 1931, that is to say, before the decision of the Government of India materialised, an attempt was made in this Council by the honourable member for the University to move an adjournment motion in order to get some information on this particular question. The House will see that the Honourable the Leader of the House then took shelter under the plea that the question was one pertaining to the Government of India and therefore no adjournment motion could be moved. Technically the defence was perfectly right and was really effective. But whether that reply was effective or not is no matter. But I wish to point out that no less a person than the Foreign Secretary of the Government of India had promised that people would be allowed an opportunity to plead their case and that the merchants would be taken into confidence. Whether secret negotiations were going on between the Bombay Government and the Government of India, I do not know. An effort was made in October 1931, when orders had come to this Government, to get some substantial information from the Government benches. The answers given on that occasion deserve perusal. The Honourable the Leader of the House stated that when in August 1931 answers were given to questions on the point, no supplementary questions were put and therefore he took it that this House did not care about it. I should think that my honourable friend the Honourable Leader of the House, who has experience of this House, ought not to have taken advantage of our want of diligence. It is not always that we are diligent, but sometimes it does happen also that we do not pay much attention to questions which are not at that particular stage mature. The Honourable the Leader said—

[Rao Bahadur G. K. Chitale]

"We had given full replies, and I was surprised that no honourable member took any interest in the question, and I cannot say why they are doing it now."

That question had been elaborately answered, and no supplementary questions were put. That reply runs into a few pages of print. It must take some time to digest it before an intelligent supplementary question can be put. The Honourable the Leader's defence is—"So much time elapsed, but not a single question was sent, and I am afraid the honourable member opposite (Mr. A. N. Surve) also sent his questions very late; I got them yesterday myself, and I understand from my Secretary that the questions were received by him only one or two days back, and when we have to give replies, the whole Cabinet has to consider the matter."

He wound up by saying—

"I understand, Sir, that the papers have not yet reached His Excellency the Governor, and it is his subject."

The complaint that this House has a right to make is this. This House was anxious to have this question threshed out on the floor of this House when a decision on the question was pending. Even as early as 1929 promises were given that the people concerned would be consulted, and those promises ought to have been kept. Now, what do we find? This resolution was sent in, because an adjournment motion could not be moved in October. We had only a two days' session in November in which no non-official day was given, and therefore the resolution could not be taken up then. When the date of this session was announced, notice was given of this resolution. The Honourable the Leader of the House says: "Oh, this is a central matter; what is the use of your crying? We will weep with you; we will sympathise with you; but nothing can come out of it; let us all shed tears together. It is a settled fact now." I know that in politics they do unsettle many settled facts. Many settled facts get unsettled not only on account of agitation, but also because Government themselves sometimes think it necessary and proper that they should be unsettled. The Government of Bombay have not as yet handed over Aden. That was the cryptic reply given by the Honourable the Leader of the House. Shall I say how we are fooled? When the deputation waited on His Excellency the Viceroy, the Governor General through the Foreign Secretary gave a reply from which they understood that no decision would be taken unless all the people were consulted. The Honourable the Leader of the House is correct in interpreting that that promise was given only with reference to the handing over of Aden to the Colonial Office.

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: That was the reply.

Rao Bahadur G. K. CHITALE: That is the reply. But having regard to the whole history of this question, the reply of the Foreign Secretary that the Governor-General was in possession of several memorials which were under consideration naturally led this House, at least some of the members of this House, to understand that this was being considered. I do not, therefore, think that it will be proper for this House to allow this opportunity to pass by. If we do not take this resolution to a division now, the Honourable the Leader of the House may say: "You have acquiesced in what was done." The House must, therefore, clearly understand the position. Whether it is an accomplished fact or not, this House is entitled to express an opinion on the transfer. This House was not given an opportunity to express its opinion, although it is the only representative body which can express an opinion in favour or against. In these circumstances, I think that this resolution must be taken to a division.

Before I conclude, I wish to answer some of the points raised by the Honourable the Leader. The Honourable the Leader lays stress on the fact of want of finance. Now, Sir, if he will see paragraph 2 of the reply given during this session to an unstarred question by Mr. A. N. Surve, it is authoritatively stated—

"His Excellency's willingness to receive the deputation showed the Government of India's readiness to hear the other side before reaching a final decision. The Government of India repudiated the suggestion that they had made the financial consideration the main one."

That shows that the question of £.sh.d. ought not to enter into this question. I believe that the Honourable the Leader will recognise that on such a question like this, tons of money are spent on mere rock, which does not produce anything. Who knows that this Aden may not be worth tons of money in future years? Therefore, the Honourable the Leader of the House ought not to make want of finance a grievance. The cost is not more than two or three lakhs. We want Aden to remain with us. It was stated in reply to the deputation—

"He instanced the existing difficulties of procuring sanction from three different authorities for certain classes of expenditure, for example, Police, and assured the deputation that the present proposals were made solely with a view to removing administrative inconveniences."

That is to say, so far as the Government of India is concerned, it is not a question of money, but only a question of administrative convenience. They do not want to say that the Government of Bombay have neglected Aden; they say that the Bombay Government has done its best. Therefore, on that point the Honourable the Leader was not right.

Now, what are the administrative inconveniences? So far as the departments of education, medical relief, public health and general administration are concerned, I have told the House what amounts were spent from 1927-28 to 1930-31. As I have stated, they vary from two to three lakhs. That was the only amount necessary. Then, Sir, what are the administrative difficulties? The honourable member the Political Secretary, for whom I have the greatest respect, stated that the purchase of a typewriter took a very long time. But these are the defects in the administrative machine which can be removed; these defects are not inherent in the system itself. I know that certain officers do make the purchases first and then go in for pro forma sanction later on. No matter what you spend, nobody questions you if only you produce the voucher.

[Rao Bahadur G. K. Chitale]

These are absolutely small matters. There must be more weighty administrative inconveniences to justify a transfer. Moreover, these inconveniences will disappear with the growth of political power in this House, when the Bombay Government will have larger powers as we hope, if they are going to give us the substance of provincial autonomy and not the shadow of it. Then, we will be masters in our own house and it will lie with us to remove these small administrative inconveniences which occur in everyday administration. Therefore, the case for Government is not at all strong. They have not answered our questions. They have not treated this House with due respect. They have treated it rather contemptuously. I should think this House will be well advised in asserting its own power and going to a division and giving as large a vote as possible in favour of the resolution. I hope the whole House will help me.

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: Sir, all the arguments that I have heard in favour of the resolution are based on mere suspicion and sentiment. The honourable mover appealed to the House to vote for this resolution not on its merits, but on mere sentiment. Sir, I wish they had taken the same interest in the question as they have now taken when I had replied to a question on the subject. I had placed on the table a statement regarding this question, and there was not a single member who cared to put a supplementary question. That shows that they have for the first time awakened to their interest in the transfer of Aden now. Had they such a keen interest in the question, surely one at least of the elected members would have put a supplementary question at the time. Everything passed off smoothly. And yet my honourable friend complains that Government have not been treating this House properly. We actually placed a printed statement on the table containing a detailed reply to the question. We could not do better than that. Honourable members at that time were lacking the interest that they are now showing in the question.

Now, Sir, my honourable friend the mover of the resolution sought to show that only on financial grounds we were in favour of the transfer of Aden to the Government of India. It is not only on financial grounds, but also on administrative grounds, and according to the wishes of the people themselves that we are transferring Aden to the Government of India. The thousands of Arabs and Somalis in the place have not a single representative of theirs in this House; and in the absence of their representatives, you are advocating the cause of the city of Bombay and its merchants. It is hardly fair to those people. More than one honourable member has placed before this House the view that they do not want to be with Bombay——

Rao Bahadur G. K. CHITALE: What is the proof?

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: Two resolutions have been passed, one by the Executive Committee and the other by the Port Trust——

Rao Bahadur G. K. CHITALE: They are all nominated.

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: Whatever they are, they are the representatives of the people there. The honourable member Mr. Kadri told you—he is an elected member of this House—that the original inhabitants of the place do not want to continue under Bombay, because Bombay cannot afford to give them more money for their nation-building services. Is it fair for any honourable member here to oppose their wishes? I appeal to honourable members not to deny the inhabitants of the place self-determination because of your own interests. It is not fair.

Now, I come to the question of administrative inconvenience. The administration in Aden is under three authorities, the Government of Bombay, the Government of India and the Home Government. Every paper, however routine, passes through the hands of these various authorities. It is not once in a way that the papers pass through the hands of all these authorities, as made out by the honourable member Mr. Vakil. If that was the case, we could have overcome the difficulty. But every routine matter has to pass through the three authorities.

Then, even if we spend three lakhs more on the nation-building services in Aden, that amount will not be sufficient to meet the requirements of Aden. The Health Department there is in a very bad condition. There is no proper medical relief. Civil works are in a bad condition. Their education is even in a worse condition. As the honourable member Mr. Kadri told you, the people of the place do not want to continue under the Bombay Government at all.

Rao Bahadur G. K. CHITALE: We do not believe that.

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: It is not for us to sit in judgment on those people. It is hardly fair.

Mr. J. S. KADRI: May I correct the Honourable the Leader of the House, Sir? They do not want the control to be transferred to the Colonial Government.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE rose.

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: Honourable members will thus see that there are administrative difficulties in the way of our retaining Aden. We are faced with deficit budgets every year. Even if we can afford to spend two or three lakhs on Aden, that amount is not sufficient to meet their requirements. The people there want more money to be spent on their nation-building services. We tell them that we cannot afford it, and yet we want to keep them with our Presidency. Honourable members may shake their heads, but it is a fact all the same.

Now, I come to the bogey of loss of trade. I have been in charge of this Department for a long time, and the honourable member the Secretary has told the honourable House that not a single merchant has come and told Government that trade will be affected. Besides, we have nothing to do with trade. Trade, customs, and everything is in charge of the Central Government, and not with the Provincial Government at all.

As regards the appointment of officers, the Government of India have hitherto recruited them from Bombay, and they will continue to do so. Aden will be under the jurisdiction of the Bombay High Court hereafter also.

Now, honourable members are suspicious about this transfer, and think that it is the thin end of the wedge—that the administration of Aden is now going to be transferred to the Government of India, and hereafter it might be transferred to the Colonial Government. But His Excellency the Viceroy, in reply to the address from a deputation, has already assured them that if at any time the Government of India think of transferring Aden to the Colonial Government, they will ascertain the wishes of all concerned. I think that assurance ought to satisfy the honourable members of this House.

To sum up, honourable members on the opposite side do not want to give the people of that place the right of self-determination. They do not want to give them enough money for their nation-building services, such as health, education, sanitation, and so on. On mere grounds of sentiment, they are opposing the transfer of Aden to the Government of India. I do not agree with the views of the honourable members on the opposite side. However, as I find that they are very keen about it, I will communicate their wishes to the Government of India, though I find, from the reply that the latter have given and from their budget, that they have already decided to transfer Aden to themselves. I think this assurance of mine, that we will communicate the wishes of honourable members to the Government of India, will satisfy this honourable House.

Mr. J. S. KADRI: On a point of information, Sir. What about education? Will it be transferred also?

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: Yes; everything will go to the Government of India.

Mr. G. S. GANGOLI: In the White Book at page 146, we have an item of 2 lakhs and odd for police in Aden for the coming year.

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: We will save all that money hereafter.

Mr. G. S. GANGOLI: Then why an entry in the budget, and swell the expenditure?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Order, order. I shall first put the amendment of the honourable member Mr. Surve to the House.

Question put, and agreed to.

Resolution, as amended, put, and agreed to.

BILL No. XL OF 1931 (A BILL FURTHER TO AMEND THE BOMBAY LAND REVENUE CODE, 1879).

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The House had been waiting for the honourable member Rao Bahadur Patil to move the third reading. When his name was called out he was absent, and if the discussion on the resolution had gone on longer, he would probably have lost his chance, as to-day is the last day for private business.

Third reading.

Rao Bahadur D. R. PATIL (East Khandesh District): Sir, I move that Bill No. XL of 1931 (A Bill further to amend the Bombay Land Revenue Code, 1879) be read a third time and passed.

Question proposed.

Mr. G. DAVIS: Sir, I shall move three small drafting amendments. The first amendment relates to the heading. The present heading reads "A Bill further to amend Bombay Act No. V of 1879." I move:

"For the title in the heading, substitute 'A Bill further to amend the Bombay Land Revenue Code, 1879'."

Question put, and agreed to.

Mr. G. DAVIS: The preamble, as it at present stands, reads "Whereas it is expedient further to amend Bombay Act No. V of 1879 known as the Bombay Land Revenue Code, in manner hereinafter appearing:" I move the following amendment:

"In the preamble, omit the words 'Bombay Act V of 1879 known as,' and after the word 'Code', insert the figures, '1879'."

Question put, and agreed to.

Mr. G. DAVIS: Sir, clause 1, as it stands at present, reads "This Act may be called the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Amendment) Act, 1931." I propose to bring it up-to-date by substituting the figures "1932" for the figures "1931." I move:

"In clause 1, for the figures '1931' substitute the figures '1932'."

Question put, and agreed to.

Bill read a third time.

Question, "That the Bill, as amended, be read a third time," put, and agreed to.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The Bill is read a third time and passed into law.

BILL No. XXV OF 1931 (A BILL FURTHER TO AMEND THE BOMBAY CITY MUNICIPAL ACT No. III OF 1888).

Rao Bahadur S. K. BOLE: Sir, I beg to withdraw Bill No. XXV of 1931 (A Bill further to amend the Bombay City Municipal Act No. III of 1888).

Bill withdrawn.

Mr. A. N. SURVE (Bombay City, North): Sir, I beg to move the following resolution which stands in my name:

"This Council recommends to Government to take steps to institute a Government Hospital Lottery or to license a private lottery for the purpose of supplementing the funds required for re-opening the beds in the hospitals which are closed for financial reasons."

Sir, this is a resolution which relates to medical relief in the city of Bombay and incidentally to outside areas. Before I refer to my resolution, I beg to preface my remarks with the conditions that prevailed in this city before the year 1925. At that time medical relief was very deficient, so deficient that many patients in the J. J. group of hospitals were actually accommodated on the ground and to that attention was drawn by a medical committee. At that time Sir Leslie Wilson was the Governor of this Presidency and he was considerably touched with the state that prevailed as regards the medical relief. This bad state had many bad effects. First of all, the students did not get sufficient clinical material on account of there being a deficiency in the hospital, not that there was a deficient number of patients but there was deficient accommodation. The number of students was increasing and the result was that the standard prescribed by the University of Bombay had to be lowered, and as the University lowered the standard of medical education, the British Medical authorities complained. They said "We will not recognise the University degree of Bombay because the students were not fully trained." Another bad effect was that our own students were turned out in an incompetent condition, so that the people in this presidency also suffered. To meet all these difficulties, the last Governor inaugurated a fund which was called Sir Leslie Wilson Hospital Fund. Its name was later on changed and it is known now as the Governor's Hospital Fund. Under this Fund the arrangement was that the Government, the Bombay Municipality and the public were to contribute. The Government and the Municipality undertook to share half and half the recurring expenses but the non-recurring expenses were to be met half and half by Government and the Municipality on the one side and the public which was represented by the Hospital Fund on the other. Under that Fund about 16 lakhs of rupees have been collected and large building operations were undertaken and completed and also the number of beds in the hospitals was increased. In this way the people who subscribed to the Hospital Fund have done their part of the duty, the Municipality has done its part of the duty, but unfortunately the Government of Bombay, on account of its financial stringency, has, if not exactly backed out, at least has curtailed a greater portion of the undertaking which it had assumed. It had assumed certain responsibilities and those responsibilities are now practically not fulfilled as will be seen from a note in the Blue Book at page 65 in which it is stated that there is "a reduction in expenditure on the establishments and contingencies on account of closure in 1931-32 of 142 beds in Bombay hospitals." So, Sir, you will see that at present in the Bombay hospitals accommodation of 142 beds has been discontinued. The net result of that is that many deserving patients are refused admission and that is a very serious matter. Those people who go to the hospitals are really poor people and if they are refused admission, it means that they practically get no medical relief. On that account I have been obliged to move this resolution which at other times I would not have moved, because the resolution tries to recommend to our Government to move the Government of India to obtain the sanction for maintaining a lottery.

In this connection, I must point out that a lottery on moral grounds is certainly objectionable, but taking human nature as it is, I think that situated as we are we cannot escape adopting that course. In to-day's papers, Sir, prominence is given to the Irish Hospitals Sweep stake, in Ireland a lottery is run and even in our Bombay city, if you go to any of the pan-supari shops or any other grocer's shop, you will find, Sir, that tickets of Goa lotteries are openly sold. I am told that in Goa there are three or four lotteries, each run by a hospital. How much of that money is used for really medical purposes, I do not know, but if we see that people from Bombay and all parts of the Presidency and outside send out their own money for the relief of people in Goa, I at least, with all my qualms of conscience, cannot see my way why that money should not be similarly made available for the medical relief of our own people. Sir, human nature is weak, it wants to make easy money and if we do not make it, some one else makes use of that device and carries away our money. In that case I think we shall be justified in adopting the same remedy used for our purposes.

In consequence of this Governor's Hospital Fund, I may state to this House that the hospital accommodation that was brought into use was largely availed of by the patients. I might just read from a press note issued by the Director of Information in the year 1927. Its number be 39, and there we are told:

"The demand for medical relief at public institutions grows year by year and the statistics of attendance are striking. The number of people treated in hospitals during the triennium increased by over 2¼ lakhs, the figures for the year 1925 being nearly 2,836,000 as compared with 2,561,000 in 1923. Moreover, the average number for the three years 1923, 1924 and 1925 was 8½ per cent. more than the average for the three years 1921, 1922 and 1923. Both in-patients and out-patients contributed to the increase, the former numbered nearly 81,000 in 1925 as compared with just over 73,000 in 1923. Out-patients numbered 2,755,000 as compared with 2,488,000 in 1923. The daily average attendance of in-patients and out-patients for the triennium——"

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: What is the object of the honourable member in reading all that?

Mr. A. N. SURVE: I am not going to read the whole of it——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: All that is admitted. The necessity of some means of collecting money is admitted. Why waste time? As the honourable member wishes that his resolution be concluded by this evening, it is to his advantage to save time.

Mr. A. N. SURVE: What I wanted to say was only this, that by giving facilities to the people, the rate of total mortality has decreased. The press-note proceeds:

"The ratio of deaths per thousand to the total treated was 8·3 as compared with 9 for the previous triennium."

[Mr. A. N. Surve]

So in three years we have a reduction of 7 per thousand in a short time. What I mean to say is that if the hospital accommodation is there, it means a saving of human life, and as the matter at present stands, when we have reduced 142 beds, to that extent the death ratio will increase. Sir, I will not pursue that point further.

When that Fund was in progress, everybody took it for granted that that arrangement would run on and that every party to that agreement would carry out its undertaking and on that belief the Bombay Municipality has contributed to the extent of Rs. 42,52,000, and as compared with that, the Government amount was only Rs. 23,17,000. The Municipality has not backed out of its obligation which it undertook, whereas as I have disclosed above in the discontinuance of 142 beds in Bombay hospitals the Government has shirked the responsibility which it undertook.

This curtailment of medical relief has been in force for the past three or four years. First of all, there was a cutting down of diets and thereby Government tried to save some money. But that process was continued till the middle of last year, and then the Government issued orders, the result of which was that the Superintendents of the Sassoon Hospital, Poona, and the Goculdas Tejpal Hospital, Bombay, had to put advertisements in the papers, calling for help from the public for medical diets, or something like that. I am subject to correction; perhaps the Honourable Minister will correct me. But I am saying from memory that there have been notices inserted, and also there have been comments in the press that people were asked to provide their own diets—unless the patient undertook to have his own diet, he was refused admission to the hospital. Such was the case, especially in the Sassoon Hospital in Poona. Then, after that, came the appointment of a committee. Government found that their financial position was going from bad to worse, and therefore they appointed a committee, consisting of several medical and other persons. That committee came into existence by Government Press Note No. P. 130, dated the 22nd April 1931. Now, Sir, that committee has come to certain decisions, and I am reading a few of its decisions. The first decision was that "the joint committee should make efforts to raise funds from the public to meet the recurring expenditure of hospitals in Bombay city in order to supplement the funds at present available." The third decision was that the net receipts should be distributed in equal moieties between Government and the Corporation, and should be primarily devoted to maintaining hospital facilities in the city on a scale not lower than that obtaining on 1st January 1931.

Now, as regards the first decision, viz., raising additional funds, I am very thankful to our Honourable Minister in charge for the mighty efforts that he has been putting forth. I may say that he has been doing his best. He has devised certain means. Among those means are the holding of charitable performances of cinemas and dramas and the holding of exhibitions and extra race meetings. During the course of the last month or so, there have been two or three cinema shows held for the purpose, and there was also an extra race meeting on last Saturday. Then the holding of an exhibition or show is under consideration. But, Sir, these remedies, though good in themselves, have their limitations. These remedies alone will not be able to meet the want that is felt. Take, for instance, a cinema show. A cinema show will not be able to bring in more than a few hundred rupees. Or, take an extra race meeting. I do not know what the proceeds of an extra race meeting are. They may be several thousands of rupees, but whether the Turf Club will consent to give its extra meetings every time is a consideration, because, after all, the Turf Club has a limited number of days for its meetings, and even if the Turf Club is induced to give the proceeds of an extra meeting for charity, they will have to approach Government to sanction one extra day, if it is possible under the Race Courses Licensing Act. So, these are our difficulties. Then I come to exhibitions. Exhibitions cannot be held annually. We have past experience of it. Sir, in 1928 we had the 5-H fete, and in that 5-H fete were collected about Rs. 1,70,000. But His Excellency, while opening that fete, observed that it was impossible to think that such an effort could be an annual one. He said, moreover, that he realised that other very deserving funds were suffering. So, the difficulty about these exhibitions or shows is that they cannot be held annually, and there is the other difficulty. The last 5-H fete was successful only because several ladies and gentlemen worked for a number of days. You cannot expect to have these philanthropic and voluntary workers every year. There is the other difficulty that a hospital fund is not the only charitable fund to which we could ask the public to contribute. That method, therefore, has its limitations.

Then, Sir, I come to the only alternative method, viz., a lottery. About that I have already said that whether it is right or wrong, I am not sitting here in judgment on the morality of the people in that respect. The point is this, that people want to make easy money. Even if we in Bombay do not make use of that device, there are a number of people elsewhere who actually do it. There are so many State lotteries which sell their tickets in Bombay. I have also mentioned the case of Goa. If all this money is being taken away from Bombay and our Presidency by the managers of these lotteries, why should we hesitate to employ that same device for the continuance of charity? At present, Sir, we see that on account of the scarcity of money our own people are suffering. For that reason, I submit that this resolution may be accepted by the Government and also by this House. The difficulty which we find at present in regard to medical relief should be removed at as early a date as possible.

Sir, I have only one more word to add, and it is this. I think, so far as the Government of Bombay are concerned, they are in favour of accepting my resolution. The only difficulty is about the Government of India. But I submit that if this House accepts this resolution and it goes to the Government of India with the seal of approval of this

[Mr. A. N. Surve]

House, perhaps the Government of India may be induced to grant our request. With these remarks, I move my resolution.

Question proposed.

Rao Bahadur R. S. ASAVALE (Bombay City, North): Sir, I have much pleasure in supporting this resolution, which no doubt would be a help to Government in providing the necessary funds for medical relief to the people of this city and of the Presidency. Sir, we know very well that at present Government are not in a position to support this measure, only because the holding of a lottery is in the nature of gambling, but when we allow outsiders to carry away the money of this Presidency to their countries by the sale of their lottery tickets in our province, I do not think Government should take any objection to such a measure, or to the taking of steps whereby they themselves could start a lottery. Sir, by introducing this measure, I am quite sure we will provide a big sum in respect of medical aid to our presidency. We know very well, as has been pointed out by the honourable mover of the resolution, that the Goa Government is taking away a lot of money from the city of Bombay in aid of hospitals in the Goa territory. In the same way, we know that there is the Irish Sweep Stake which takes away from 25 to 30 lakhs every year from our presidency. If we introduce lottery in aid of hospitals, not only the rich but also the poor will bear their quota at least in the hope of getting something in return and aiding a good cause also. Government should support this resolution and take the initiative in the matter.

As regards the grievances made by the honourable mover that there is a reduction of beds in the hospitals, there is no doubt that it has been admitted by Government themselves. But we forget one thing. Charitable people have given us big sums in order to construct buildings for the poor patients in the Bombay city. Such buildings costing 15 and 20 lakhs are lying idle without a single bed. We have spent such large amounts on mortar and chunam and still we are not able to provide beds in them for the poor patients. I hope Government will see its way to introduce the necessary measures to remedy the grievances of the people of this city and the presidency in regard to medical aid.

Dr. J. A. COLLACO (Bombay City, South): Sir, I beg to support the resolution of my honourable friend Mr. Surve. We are well aware that we are short of funds and the question is from where to get money. When times change and when we have to face hard times, we have to do things which we could never have dreamt of at ordinary times. We should have no qualms of conscience for getting money from a lottery which we badly need now for a very good cause, for if the money from a lottery is tainted money, I submit the money we got from the races is also tainted. A lot of money is being spent everyday on races, cotton figures and so on. So, we can well organise this lottery and get the money in order to alleviate the sufferings of humanity. The Irishman is not a fool. He knows how best to get money. The Irish Sweep

[Dr. J. A. Collaco]

Stake tickets are sold in Bombay like hot cakes. We may take the lead from the Irishman but at the same time we must also imitate the Scotchman.

Mr. M. M. KARBHARI (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts): Sir, the object of this resolution is laudable. But I think that it would be legally difficult to get the sanction of the Government of India for this lottery proposed in the resolution. If it is possible to get such a sanction, so much the better. In the event of such a sanction not being obtained, I shall simply throw out a suggestion to this honourable House how to leaven their bread. My suggestion is that the Government of Bombay should issue ten rupee worth medical relief bonds to the public, paying 3 per cent. as interest to the bond-holders which will be lower than the rate of interest that is paid by the Government of Bombay to the Central Government. The money thus contributed should be utilised for reducing the borrowings of the Government of Bombay from the Government of India and out of the savings thus effected by means of the difference in the rates of interest over such bonds subscribed. Government should after utilizing 80 per cent. of this savings for medical relief, should set apart 20 per cent. for giving alluring prizes for certain per cent. of Bond holders and thus liquidate the Bonds after a certain period of years.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Perhaps, this is another scheme. But that is not the resolution.

Mr. M. M. KARBHARI: I thought that a legal difficulty would arise in getting the sanction of the Government of India in regard to the proposal in the resolution. If the scheme contained in the resolution does materialise it is all right. I did not want the honourable House to vote for my scheme. It is for the benefit of Government I threw in this suggestion, if they are willing to take steps in this direction to meet their present difficulties.

The Honourable Sir RAFIUDDIN AHMAD: Sir, I have not much to say on the merits of the case. I may congratulate the honourable mover of the resolution on the dawn of common sense that has now come on him. He has been opposing such innocent measures as a grant of licence for liquors at the 2nd enclosure of the Race Course. He was pleased to nick-name the income therefrom as "Tainted Money." He would not now weigh any motions in the scale of morality. I hope on future occasions when money bills are brought forward he would give up his former attitude.

Mr. PESTANSHAH N. VAKIL (Ahmedabad City): Sir, I was expecting some such taunt as has emanated from the Honourable Minister to be showered on the devoted head of the honourable mover. I could distinctly see my honourable friend Mr. Humphrey listening with amused bewilderment when the honourable mover was developing his arguments. The honourable member was wondering whether it could be the same Mr. Surve who inveighed violently against the Bookies Bill when it was discussed some time ago on the floor of this House whom he was now listening to. But, Sir, adversity acquaints a man with strange bed-fellows. In these hard times, it may be permissible for a man to change his views to suit the changing circumstances. I do not think that should be made a matter for taunt.

Regarding the lottery, I am afraid, a Britisher is a very conservative being, and, whether it is the Government of India or the Bombay Government, there is no chance that they will entertain this request. I remember to have read in the papers that even the British Post Office was officially forbidden to handle the Irish Sweepstake Ticket books issued by the Irish Hospitals. If conservatism is allowed to go to that extent, it is not to be supposed, unless I am very much mistaken, that the honourable member Mr. Surve will find a ready response from the Government of India to his appeal for action.

Hospitals in London are all supported by voluntary contributions and the Britisher makes it a matter of great pride, so much so that His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales a little while ago openly gave expression to this view. These hospitals are some of the finest institutions of their kind in the world, and they are all supported by voluntary contributions. Peers and Peeresses have made it a business of their life to collect funds in aid of them. Only recently we read in the papers of the death of a noble Lord—I forget his name—was it Lord Kylsant ?

An Honourable MEMBER : Lord Kylsant is in jail.

Mr. PESTANSHAH N. VAKIL : Then, it must be another man. He was called the Prince of Beggars, to such good purpose did he exert himself in the cause of hospital philanthropy.

I beg to suggest that the honourable member Mr. Surve should move in another direction. Each hospital in Bombay should be allowed to run a lottery of its own. I think that might be permissible. The public lotteries are prohibited under the Prevention of Gambling Act or some such Act. But I do not think there will be objection to the hospitals running their own lotteries.

As to the propriety of Government's going in for this kind of business, I have my serious doubts. They have always resisted the temptation of doing so both here and in England. The Government of Goa we know have been doing it, but whether our Government will look favourably on such a proposal, I have very great misgivings.

Mr. A. N. SURVE (Bombay City, North) : Sir, the last speaker has alluded to the difficulty of Government carrying on the lottery. But if he will look to the wording of the resolution, he will find that I do not say that Government themselves should do it. They can authorize a private lottery which may be run by anyone. So, I need not speak further on that point. I have only to emphasize the fact that lottery is the only thing which can permanently bring in adequate supplies. All other remedies will fail. There is no difficulty in continuing it from year to year. As a matter of fact, the Goa lotteries are continued from month to month. Every month the lottery results are declared.

[Mr. A. N. Surve]

Then, Sir, the other point is that there is absolutely no burden laid on voluntary workers : that is a great advantage. Then, the third point is that that no burden is promiscuously placed upon the people. In the case of taxes we actually know the persons and put pressure upon them. In this case, it is only willing buyers that will go in and purchase the lottery tickets. After all, I myself am not much enamoured of this device, but situated as we are, what else can we do ? The Government of Bombay themselves has initiated us into this kind of work. Let me remind the Honourable Minister for Excise that when the auction system for excise was introduced in the year 1917 or 1918, Government fixed a limit to that revenue and all revenue accruing beyond that limit was to be employed for the aid of primary education, and medical relief. So, our Government itself has initiated us into this kind of work. So, I think that the authorization of a lottery will not be objected to, especially in view of the fact that it has been adopted by the Irish people and other Western nations. With these remarks I leave my resolution in the hands of this House.

The Honourable Sirdar Sir RUSTOM JEHANGIR VAKIL: Sir, I had no intention of speaking on this motion, but I thought a brief explanation as regards the prospect and progress of this kind of State lottery might help the House to appreciate the position in its correct perspective. The resolution moved by my honourable friend Mr. Surve is intended to convey to Government the recommendation of this Council to take steps to institute a Government lottery, and, failing that, to license a private lottery for the purpose of supplementing the funds. I may inform this honourable House that long before Government came to know of this resolution, they had moved in the matter and had addressed the Government of India explaining the financial difficulties with which the Bombay Government were faced and which had resulted in the curtailment of medical facilities, and requesting them for those reasons to allow us to institute a State lottery. That was done in June 1931 ; that means, about nine months ago. But I am sorry to say that our request was not sanctioned by the Government of India. Then I had a letter from the Chairman of the Hospitals' Maintenance Funds Committee making a similar request. That was in October last. At my request Government again addressed the Government of India on the subject, and again the Government of India turned down the proposal, presumably on the ground that the matter would have to be referred to His Majesty's Government and the recent declarations by members of His Majesty's Government on the subject of the Irish Free State lotteries might make it almost certain that the sanction of the Secretary of State would not be forthcoming. From this it appears that the Government of India did not think it wise to refer the matter to the Secretary of State. Sir, I can assure this honourable House that there is nobody here who has more concern than myself at the necessity of having to reduce hospital facilities in the city of Bombay, and I think it was hardly necessary for my honourable friend Mr. Surve to draw the attention of this House to the hardships caused by the withdrawal of facilities which the hospitals used to enjoy hitherto. In the light of the reply received from the Government of India, Government would not like to take part in this discussion. But if this honourable House is able to pass this resolution, the Government of Bombay will convey the sense of the House to the Government of India in the hope that they may perhaps be induced to revise their decision and see whether it is possible to get the sanction of the Secretary of State, which it appears the Government of India consider necessary.

Question put, and agreed to.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The next resolution stands in the name of the honourable member Mr. Shaikh Abdul Majid. I understand that he has asked that it may be allowed to be moved by the honourable member Syed Miran Mahomed Shah. But there are only fifteen minutes.

SYED MIRAN MAHOMED SHAH: I will take only ten minutes.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: But what will happen to the resolution? The honourable member will hardly be able to move it and it will drop.

SYED MIRAN MAHOMED SHAH: It can go over to the next session.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: If an honourable member rises and moves that consideration of the resolution be postponed to the next session, and if the House accepts it, then alone can it go over to the next session. Otherwise it will have to be talked out in the short time that is at our disposal. I leave it to the honourable member to do what he likes.

SYED MIRAN MAHOMED SHAH (Hyderabad District): I am going to move the resolution first and then going to appeal to the House to allow further consideration to be postponed to the next session. Sir, I beg to move:

"This Council recommends to Government that they be pleased to so amend the Primary Education Rules as to maintain all the rights and privileges in Government service of those Government officers of the Education Department whose services were lent to Local Authorities on the transfer of control and who are acting as Administrative Officers of various School Boards, unless the services of such officers are permanently taken over by the Local Authorities concerned on conditions settled between the said officers and their employers."

This is the resolution I beg to move and I beg to appeal to the House kindly to consent to its consideration being postponed to the next session. If you will permit me, Sir, I will briefly explain what is meant by the resolution.

Mr. G. L. WINTERBOTHAM: If its consideration is to be postponed we shall hear the explanation at the next session. We don't want to hear it twice.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I shall first put the resolution to the House, and if some honourable member moves that the consideration of the resolution be postponed to the next session, I shall put that motion next.

Question proposed.

Rao Bahadur R. S. ASAVALE (Bombay City, North): Sir, I beg to move:

"That the consideration of this resolution be postponed to the next session."

Question proposed.

Mr. J. B. PETIT: On a point of order, Sir. I would like to know whether in the event of this resolution being postponed to the next session, it will take the first place among the non-official resolutions at that session.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: That is a point of information. The resolution will take the first place among the non-official resolutions. It is for this House to consider whether to give it priority during the next session by postponing its consideration now.

Question, "That the consideration of the resolution be postponed to the next session," put, and agreed to.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE.

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: Sir, to-morrow, we shall proceed with the consideration of the Finance Bill.

Honourable MEMBERS: Which Finance Bill?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: There is only one Finance Bill which passed the first reading and was referred to select committee, whose report is out. That will be taken up to-morrow.

The House is now adjourned to 2 o'clock to-morrow, Wednesday, the 16th March 1932.

BOMBAY: PRINTED AT THE GOVERNMENT CENTRAL PRESS.

CROP FAILURES: KARACHI TALUKA.

*Mr. HAJI MIR MAHOMED BALOCH (Karachi City): Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether they are aware that on account of failure of crops the people of Karachi Taluka have undergone heavy losses and debts;

(b) the total amount of debts of the Malir Co-operative Society;

(c) whether there is any irrigation scheme for the area under consideration of Government at present;

(d) if not, what steps do Government propose to take in the matter in the near future?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur S. T. KAMBLI: (a) Yes.

(b) There are three societies in Malir and the total outstandings for each of the three societies are as follows:—

	Rs.	a.	p.
Malir Credit Society	1,37,825	4	5
Malir Seed Society	54,077	12	11
Malir Sale Society	9,902	13	0
Total ..	2,01,805	14	4

(c) and (d) Irrigation of the Malir tract of the Karachi taluka is a physical impossibility except by wells. No scheme for the irrigation of this area is before Government.

Mr. HAJI MIR MAHOMED BALOCH (In Urdu): Sir, the Karachi Municipality is getting water from the upper reaches of the river. Cannot irrigation water be provided for the Karachi taluka as a part of that scheme?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur S. T. KAMBLI: It is a new question entirely, and it does not arise out of this question.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: What does the last sentence of the reply "No scheme for the irrigation of this area is before Government" refer to?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur S. T. KAMBLI: That is in answer to (c) "whether there is any irrigation scheme for the area under consideration of Government at present?"

LIQUOR SHOPS: SITES.

*Rao Saheb B. G. DESAI (Kaira District): (1) Are Government aware that it is very difficult for liquor contractors to secure suitable sites and houses for the location of their shops in these times because of active propaganda for prohibition and picketing of liquor shops?

(2) (a) Do Government intend to undertake any scheme for providing suitable sites and constructing necessary buildings thereon for the location of liquor shops?

(b) If so, what is the scheme and when do Government propose to bring it into effect?

(c) Has any provision been made in the budget for the current year for financing the scheme?

(d) If not, how do Government propose to finance it?

The Honourable Sir RAFIUDDIN AHMAD: (1) Yes, for some.

(2) (a) No.

(b), (c) and (d) Do not arise.

Dr. M. K. DIXIT: May I know whether this difficulty was experienced all over the presidency or only in particular places?

The Honourable Sir RAFIUDDIN AHMAD: If the honourable member will give me notice, I would give him the names of other places.

Dr. M. K. DIXIT: The Honourable Minister has stated that difficulty has been experienced. May I ask where it has been experienced; is it only in Kaira district or outside also?

The Honourable Sir RAFIUDDIN AHMAD: I cannot say off-hand. If the honourable member will give me notice, I will find out in how many districts it has arisen.

RETRENCHMENT COMMITTEE.

*Mr. G. S. GANGOLI (Kanara District): Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether it is a fact that a retrenchment committee with Sir Frederic Gauntlett as the Chairman has been appointed;

(b) if so, who are its members;

(c) the terms of reference of the Committee;

(d) the emoluments proposed to be given to the members on the Committee;

(e) whether members of the Legislative Council will have an opportunity to co-operate with the proposed Committee?

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: The honourable member is referred to my budget speech. Government are not at present able to give any further information, but will do so as soon as a decision is arrived at.

RETRENCHMENT COMMITTEE: SUGGESTIONS.

*Mr. L. R. GOKHALE (Poona City): Will Government be pleased to state—

(1) whether they have considered the suggestion made by the Retrenchment Committee about an inquiry into the possibilities of retrenchment in the Secretariat; if so, with what result;

(2) whether they have examined the Retrenchment Committee's suggestion that a scrutiny of the educational expenditure of this presidency be made; if so, what is their decision on the point;

(3) whether a decision regarding the reduction in the strength of the Bombay Cabinet as recommended by the Retrenchment Committee has been arrived at; if so, will they place a copy of their decision on the Council table?

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: (1) A reduction of 10 per cent. in the cost of non-gazetted establishments has been ordered. The matter will also be referred to the Expert Enquiry.

(2) The honourable member is requested to put a separate question to the Honourable Minister of Education.

(3) No decision has been arrived at.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE: It is stated "A reduction of 10 per cent. in the cost of non-gazetted establishments has been ordered." I would like to enquire why it has not been ordered in the case of the gazetted establishment.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Even as regards gazetted establishments, those posts which are not required are being retrenched, and there is a ten per cent. cut all round.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE: The answer is: "A reduction of 10 per cent. in the cost of non-gazetted establishments has been ordered." Does that mean that the ten per cent. cut has not been ordered in the case of the gazetted services?

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: I see that even deputy collectors and treasury officers are now made mamlatdars. Retrenchment is going on everywhere. Further, there is the reply "The matter will also be referred to the Expert Enquiry."

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE: The answer deals only with the non-gazetted services; it does not refer to the gazetted services. So, I would like to know if the gazetted establishment is being dealt with or not.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: The gazetted establishment in the Secretariat is hardly superfluous.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE: As regards (3), the answer is that no decision has been arrived at regarding the reduction in the strength of the Cabinet. I would like to know whether after this reply was printed any decision has been arrived at.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: There has been no decision up to now.

PRISONERS IN JAIL: RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION: HINDU MAHASABHA.

*Rao Saheb P. D. KULKARNI (Poona District): Will Government be pleased to state—

(i) Central Prisons,

(ii) Presidency Jails,

(iii) District Jails,
(iv) Temporary Prisons, and (v) Sub-Jails
in the Bombay Presidency;

(b) their names and the number of prisoners in each, according to their religion, during each of the years 1929, 1930 and 1931;

(c) the number of the Christian, Mahomedan and Hindu lecturers admitted to give religious teaching to the prisoners in each of the Jails during the period and the names of the organisation or body which each represented;

(d) whether it is a fact that the Poona branch of the Hindu Mahasabha is debarred from sending its own members to give religious instruction to its co-religionist prisoners in the Jails?

The Honourable Mr. G. A. THOMAS: (a) As regards permanent prisons and sub-jails, the attention of the Honourable Member is invited to rules 4–8 of the Bombay Jail Manual, Part I.

There are two temporary prisons at present.

(b) The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to paragraphs 8 and 10 of the Jail Administration Reports for 1929 and 1930, respectively, and to the statement No. II at page 36 of the Reports. The information for 1931 will be included in the Report for that year which will be published in due course.

(c) The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to paragraphs 66 and 68 of the Jail Administration Reports for 1929 and 1930, respectively.

(d) Yes.

Rao Saheb P. D. KULKARNI: Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to give the grounds on which the Hindu Mahasabha representatives are not allowed to give religious teachings to the prisoners in Yeravda Jail?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: To which part of the reply is it supplementary?

Rao Saheb P. D. KULKARNI: Part (d).

The Honourable Mr. G. A. THOMAS: Because of the political activities of that body.

Rao Saheb P. D. KULKARNI: Is it not a fact that they suggested two of the representatives about whom no objection can be taken, one of whom was a lawyer and the other a professor in a recognised college, and both of whom were loyal to the Crown? What was the objection to allowing them?

The Honourable Mr. G. A. THOMAS: Neither of them was very loyal.

Rao Saheb P. D. KULKARNI: Is there any record of their disloyalty?

The Honourable Mr. G. A. THOMAS: I should not have said that unless there was a record of their disloyalty. But perhaps we are at cross purposes. What are the names of the gentlemen he refers to?

Rao Saheb P. D. KULKARNI: The persons I referred to are Professor Dandekar and Mr. Deshmukh, a pleader. Are they not more efficient than others already approved?

The Honourable Mr. G. A. THOMAS: When I said that there was a record of their disloyalty, I was not referring to those gentlemen. I do not know whether they are loyal or not. The Hindu Mahasabha were not allowed to send representatives because of their political tendencies. Government appointed last year one Mr. Balshastri Upasani as a Hindu representative, after consulting various Hindu bodies in Poona, including the Mahasabha.

Rao Saheb P. D. KULKARNI: He is a Government servant; is he not?

The Honourable Mr. G. A. THOMAS: He is an ex-Government servant.

Rao Saheb P. D. KULKARNI: Even if an independent and loyal man is nominated by the Mahasabha, will Government refuse permission on the ground that he is sent by the Mahasabha?

The Honourable Mr. G. A. THOMAS: I think that is rather hypothetical. If the Mahasabha sends names for the approval of Government, then I will consider it.

Rao Saheb P. D. KULKARNI: They have already sent three names, and no reason for disallowing them is given.

GOVERNMENT SECURITIES: INVESTMENTS BY MUSLIM SINDHIS WITHOUT INTEREST: USE OF UNCLAIMED INTEREST FOR EDUCATION.

*Mr. SHAIKH ABDUL MAJID (Karachi District): Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether their attention has been drawn to the statement in writing as well as to the oral evidence given by Mr. Hatim A. Alavi before the Banking Enquiry Committee, as published at pages 54 and 55 of Volume IV of the Bombay Provincial Banking Enquiry Committee's Report, 1929-30, to the effect that there are hundreds of Muslim Sindhis who have invested in Government Securities and are not earning interest thereon and that this money should be utilised for educational purpose;

(b) whether the statement made by him is correct; if so,

(i) what is the total amount invested by Sindhi Muslims in Government Securities without interest;

(ii) what is the interest due on their investments;

(iii) what are the names of those Mussalmans and how much amount is invested by each;

(c) whether it is a fact that the unclaimed interest was once given to a Christian Mission as is recorded in his evidence on page 55 of the Volume IV of the Report of the Bombay Banking Enquiry Committee;

(d) whether they intend to utilise the unclaimed interest, if any, for the educational purposes?

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: (a) Yes.

(b) As 'Government Securities' is a Central subject, Government are not in a position to answer.

(i), (ii) and (iii) accordingly do not arise.

(c) and (d) Same as (b).

Mr. SHAIKH ABDUL MAJID: Is it too much to expect of the Bombay Government that they would ascertain from the Government of India the names of these Mussalmans who have invested in Government securities not charging any interest?

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: They are not bound to supply the information to the Bombay Government. If the honourable member is interested he can ask some member of the Legislative Assembly to put a question in the Assembly.

CULTIVATION IN KARACHI TALUKA.

*Mr. SHAIKH ABDUL MAJID (Karachi District): Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether it is a fact that the lands in Karachi taluka are dependent for cultivation partly on rain water and partly on water drawn from wells;

(b) whether it is a fact that land revenue assessment is recovered from the zamindars for Barani lands (lands cultivated on rain water) even when there is no rainfall in time;

(c) whether it is a fact that Fallow Rules are still applicable to lands in Karachi taluka and Shah Bunder Division;

(d) whether it is a fact that it has been found to be not possible for a khatedar in Karachi taluka to cultivate all his lands within the meaning of the Fallow Rules from the limited supply of well water;

(e) whether it is a fact that the fall in prices has affected khatedars belonging to the Karachi taluka and to other talukas in the province equally;

(f) whether it is a fact that no remission has been granted to the khatedars of the Karachi taluka on account of the fall in prices?

The Honourable Mr. W. F. HUDSON: (a) Yes.

(b) Yes.

(c) Yes, but only to some lands.

(d) Yes, in a few dehs where owing to the Karachi Municipality's excavations for the improvement of its water supply for the Karachi city the water in wells has diminished.

(e) Yes.

(f) Yes.

Mr. SHAIKH ABDUL MAJID: Sir, with regard to (e) and (f), it is admitted in (e) that the fall in prices has affected khatedars belonging to the Karachi taluka and to other talukas in the province equally, and in (f) it is stated that no remission has been granted to the khatedars of the Karachi taluka as was granted to khatedars in other places. Is there any reason for that? May I know whether the claims of the poor khatedars of Karachi taluka will be considered in the same manner as the claims of other zamindars have been considered ?

The Honourable Mr. W. F. HUDSON: They will certainly be considered. But I do not want to give the honourable member the impression that they are likely to get the remission for this reason, that the assessments in the Karachi taluka are so remarkably low that no remission is necessary. For this reason we did not think it necessary to give any remission last year.

Mr. SHAIKH ABDUL MAJID: Is it or is it not a fact that these khatedars have been suffering for the last five years on account of scarcity of rain water ?

The Honourable Mr. W. F. HUDSON: A certain number of khatedars have been suffering owing to the fact that the Karachi municipality takes a certain portion of their water.

Mr. SHAIKH ABDUL MAJID: Do they not deserve sympathy at the hands of Government ? Is it advisable to charge them beyond their capacity to pay ?

The Honourable Mr. W. F. HUDSON: That is a matter of opinion, As I have already told the honourable member, we shall of course consider their case just as the case of everybody else in Sind when the Commissioner's report is received.

Mr. SHAIKH ABDUL MAJID: Sir, I understood the Honourable the Revenue Member to say that the rates of assessment were so low in Karachi taluka that it was not necessary to give any remissions in their case on account of reduction in prices.

The Honourable Mr. W. F. HUDSON: I did not follow the honourable member.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Next question.

DEATHS OF CATTLE IN SIND: ASSISTANCE TO MALDARS.

*Mr. SHAIKH ABDUL MAJID (Karachi District): Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether it is a fact that very large numbers of cattle died in Sind during the last year as a result of a certain disease ;

(b) if so, what is their approximate number ;

(c) whether any measures were taken by the Veterinary Department to combat the disease ;

(d) whether they intend to render any assistance to the Maldars who have lost their cattle ?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur S. T. KAMBLI: (a) Yes.

(b) The total mortality reported was 13,375.

(c) Preventive inoculations were carried out by the Veterinary Department.

(d) No.

Mr. SHAIKH ABDUL MAJID: With regard to (c), will the Honourable Minister state in how many places the preventive inoculations were carried out by the Veterinary Department ?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur S. T. KAMBLI: I want notice.

Mr. SHAIKH ABDUL MAJID: Then, with regard to (d), is the Honourable Minister aware that the Cattle Inquiry Committee have recommended that cattle owners should be encouraged by means of free grant of lands to rear cattle? The cattle lost as a result of the disease last year was 13,375. In spite of the recommendation of the Cattle Inquiry Committee, the Minister's reply is that Government do not intend to render any assistance to the Maldars.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur S. T. KAMBLI: The answer is clear, Sir.

Mr. SHAIKH ABDUL MAJID: What is clear?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur S. T. KAMBLI: That Government do not intend to render any assistance.

Mr. SHAIKH ABDUL MAJID: In view of the recommendation made by the Cattle Inquiry Committee, which had been appointed by Government themselves, is it fair to say that Government do not intend to render any assistance? These Maldars have lost a large number of cattle in one year alone.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I suppose the question simply is, why was assistance not given to them?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur S. T. KAMBLI: Government thought it unnecessary to give any assistance.

BILL No. I OF 1932 (A BILL TO PROVIDE FOR THE LEVY OF A DUTY ON CONSUMPTION OF ELECTRICAL ENERGY IN THE PRESIDENCY OF BOMBAY AND TO AMEND THE COURT-FEES ACT, 1870, AND THE INDIAN STAMPS ACT, 1899, IN THEIR APPLICATION TO THE SAID PRESIDENCY).

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Sir, I present the report* of the Select Committee on Bill No. I of 1932 (a Bill to provide for the levy of a duty on consumption of electrical energy in the Presidency of Bombay and to amend the Court-fees Act, 1870, and the Indian Stamp Act, 1899, in their application to the said Presidency).

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The report of the Select Committee on Bill No. I of 1932 (a Bill to provide for the levy of a duty on consumption of electrical energy in the Presidency of Bombay and to amend the Court-fees Act, 1870, and the Indian Stamp Act, 1899, in their application to the said Presidency) is presented.

Second reading.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Sir, I beg to move that Bill No. I of 1932 be read a second time.

The changes that have been made have been mentioned in the report of the Select Committee, but I will recapitulate only a few important changes which the Select Committee has made. Persons consuming electrical energy up to 10 units are exempted from the levy of the surcharge. It has been made clear that this surcharge will be levied on consumption of energy for lights and fans. In the exemption clause, only hospitals and dispensaries which are not run for private gain are included and the words "charitable institutions" have been omitted. The clause giving the power of granting exemptions to Government has been omitted from the body of the Bill. Under that clause, Government were empowered to declare any persons or bodies as exempt from the levy of this surcharge. The Select Committee has added a new schedule showing the exemptions. These are the main changes which have been made in the Electricity Bill.

* Appendix 18.

[Sir Govindrao Pradhan]

As regards the Court-fees Act, a minimum stamp duty of Rs. 15 was sought to be applied in respect of all items viz. (a), (b), (c), (d) and (e) of section 7 (iv) of the Act. Now, it is sought to be applied only in respect of item (c). As regards the suits for possession of land, according to the Draft Bill, amounts 10 times and 20 times the assessments were to be taken as the basis for the payment of Court-fees. The Select Committee have thought it right to bring down that limit to 7½ times and 15 times, that is, the limit which is in force now.

Then, as regards applications or petitions (Schedule II, article 1 (a), the fee has been brought down to 2 annas from 4 annas. As regards articles (aa), (bb) and (cc), which refer to applications under the Land Revenue Code, the duty has been reduced to one-half of what was proposed in the Bill. The duty which is levied for bottomry bonds was sought to be made the basis for the levy of duty on conveyances. The Select Committee thought that that was not right and so the duty for bottomry bonds has been reduced. The duty on bonds up to Rs. 200 has been left unchanged.

These are the main changes which have been made in the draft Bill. As regards probate and other things, the Select Committee has left the duties as proposed in the original Bill. I submit that the Bill has been made absolutely innocuous and I request this honourable House to pass the second reading.

Another remark which I forgot to make is that the stamp duties on forward transactions have been omitted, because of certain difficulties which were noticed after the expert witnesses were examined.

Question proposed.

Rao Bahadur B. R. NAIK: On a point of information, Sir. It appears from the report of the Select Committee that the Bill and the report are to be translated only in Marathi and Sindhi. Why should it not be translated in Gujarati?

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: That is what the Select Committee decided.

Rao Bahadur B. R. NAIK: Is the decision of the Select Committee binding?

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Yes.

Rao Bahadur B. R. NAIK: I want to know why the Gujarati vernacular has been eliminated by the Select Committee and it has been decided to translate the report and the Bill only in Marathi and Sindhi.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: As the Gujarati members know English, it was thought that it was not necessary to translate it in Gujarati and we are to abide by the decision of the Select Committee. The Select Committee ordered that the report and the Bill should be translated only in two languages. There are so many dialects in the Presidency that if the report is to be translated in all those dialects, it will take about 15 days or a month for the translations to be ready.

Mr. V. A. SURVE (in Marathi): Sir, as we have not yet received the Marathi translation, I beg to move that further consideration of the Bill be postponed till we get the translation.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I understand that the translation has been ordered and probably it will be in the hands of honourable members during the course of the day; but that cannot be said with certainty. However, the main object of the honourable member is to impede the progress of the Bill. That cannot be allowed. The progress of the Bill need not be stopped. I sympathise with the honourable member, however.

Mr. V. A. SURVE (in Marathi): How can we study the Bill and be prepared to discuss it until we get the translation? This is not the first time that that sort of thing has happened. As you, Sir, have the power in this matter, I have placed my difficulty before you.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I understand the difficulty of the honourable member, but I cannot stay the progress of the Bill.

Mr. A. N. SURVE (Bombay City, North): Sir, I move:

"That the consideration of Bill No. I of 1932 be adjourned in order to ascertain whether the subject matter of the Bill does or does not relate to a provincial subject, and pending such adjournment, the decision of the Governor General in Council be obtained under rule 4 of the Devolution Rules framed under sections 45-A and 129-A of the Government of India Act."

You will find that rule on page 97 of the Council Manual. Rule 4 reads:

"Where any doubt arises as to whether a particular matter does or does not relate to a provincial subject, the Governor-General in Council shall decide whether the matter does or does not so relate, and his decision shall be final."

My submission is that the Bill, as presented to this House, infringes certain provisions of the Government of India Act, and I specifically mention three points in favour of my argument.

The first point I wish to refer to is this: on page 110 of the Council Manual, there are certain central subjects mentioned. Article 18 on that page is "Trading companies and other associations." Now, Sir, if you refer to clause 6 of the Bill, you will find that it imposes a duty on the licensee to collect and pay to Government the electricity duty. The first sentence in clause 6 is:

"Every licensee shall collect and pay to the Government, at the time and in the manner prescribed.....etc."

So a definite duty is imposed on the licensee—to take a concrete instance, B. E. S. T. Company in the Bombay City. Now, that company is incorporated under the Indian Companies Act. It has certain objects of its own and they are incorporated in its Articles of Association and Memorandum of Association. The objects that are enumerated in those two documents do not include the collection of this surcharge on behalf of Government. All the transactions are regulated by the Indian Companies Act, and if you refer to section 10 of that Act (which I shall presently read) you will find that the Articles of Association and Memorandum of Association cannot be altered except in the way described there.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: That is a point of order rather than a motion.

Mr. A. N. SURVE: I will explain——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The honourable member has three points and to elaborate those three points, he would like to go into so many books and sections and references. That would take the time of the House. If I have understood the honourable member, and taking the first instance as the gist of his point of order, I might point out to him that there is a difference between a duty imposed on a company and the objects of that company which are mentioned in the Articles of Association. The second point is, this is a central subject. The sanction of the Governor-General was therefore asked for. The Bill having been placed before him in all its details, the Governor-General must be presumed to have gone through each detail before he gave the necessary sanction. When the sanction has been granted, this Council has every right and privilege to proceed with the Bill. The powers are, as a matter of fact, concurrent, except that in central subjects the previous sanction of the Governor-General has to be obtained. That sanction has been obtained in this case. It is mentioned there in the preamble of the Bill. I do not see what the point of order is.

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN: Can this point of order be raised at this stage, Sir? This point should have been taken at the first reading.

Mr. A. N. SURVE: I admit that the sanction of the Government of India has been obtained to this Bill. That the Government of India must have gone through each detail appears to me to be an assumption. Therefore, in order to make it quite clear, I was simply developing my argument and showing how the duties imposed by this Bill are in conflict with the Government of India Act——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: That is just what I wish to prevent. As I have said—and I repeat it now—the Bill was submitted to the Governor-General in all its details and having gone into all those details, he has given the sanction. That is quite sufficient for our purposes.

Mr. A. N. SURVE: My point was this, namely, that as our power is limited, if we were to introduce this Bill into this House——

The Honourable Mr. G. A. THOMAS: May I rise to a point of order? As the Chair has given a ruling, is it in order for the honourable member to dispute that ruling of the Chair?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I have not said in so many words that the honourable member Mr. Surve's point of order does not stand, but I do so now. He cannot proceed.

Mr. A. N. SURVE: Sir, under Standing Order 8 (2) (b), I move that the Bill, as reported, be recommitted to the Select Committee with instruction to the select committee to make additional provision in the Bill on the following points, namely:

(1) That sub-consumers may obtain the benefit of the exemption of 10 units prescribed in second schedule, (7)——

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: I rise to a point of order, Sir. If the honourable member wanted that, he could have moved an amendment.

Mr. A. N. SURVE: The second point is that protection may be given to the consumer as against the sub-consumer as it is given to the licensee by proviso to clause 6 (1).

The third point is that provision may be made for preventing the evasion of the surcharge duty by theatres and cinemas and other places of amusement by generating their own supply of electricity with an oil engine and dynamo. These are the three points on which I move that the report and the Bill be recommitted to the select committee to make additional provision as indicated by me.

Here, the first point is that under the Bill it is only the consumer that is exempted, but I have made it definitely clear in my speech on the first reading of the Bill that in the city of Bombay the conditions are different. In a big chawl there may be a hundred rooms but there is only one meter. The landlord does not reside on the premises. He only charges——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I really cannot allow all that. It will take the honourable member one hour to go through those three points. I am only conserving the time of the House. The honourable member says that the Bill should be recommitted to the select committee to go into further details. He can make a brief statement regarding that and wait for a reply or any opposition from the opposite side or any other member of the House.

Mr. A. N. SURVE: I will try to be as brief as possible. I see that one of the members of the select committee, Mr. Hoosenally M. Rahimtoola, has written a dissenting minute stating the point which I have urged that sub-consumers may get the benefit which the select committee is anxious that the poor consumer should get. I am reading——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Everybody has read the select committee's report. Has the honourable member followed that little point of order raised by the Honourable the Leader of the House? The remedy is still in the hands of the House. In the second reading the House can move an amendment to remedy the defect. There is an amendment to that effect tabled by the honourable member Mr. Hoosenally Rahimtoola and any defects that may exist in the Bill can be remedied in the second reading.

Mr. A. N. SURVE: So far there has been no amendment bringing out the point to which I have referred, namely, that theatres and other places of amusement—

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Why has no amendment been moved? The honourable member himself could have moved it.

Mr. A. N. SURVE: Please take into consideration the fact that the report was submitted to us only yesterday at about 2 o'clock. We got it when we were engaged here all day, especially I was engaged here, all the same I tried my best to note a few points which I am placing before the House now, but, Sir, we are rushed through at such a rapid speed that it is humanly impossible for me to submit amendments——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Evidently the honourable member has carefully read the select committee's report and put down all those points. He could have given all that time to amendments.

The Honourable Mr. G. A. THOMAS: Might I point out, Sir, that when the Honourable the Finance Member expressly asked whether the House had any objection to the select committee submitting its report on the 14th instead of on the 10th as was originally intended, no objection was raised, and, therefore, it is too late now to raise an objection? I think the honourable member is estopped from doing that.

Mr. A. N. SURVE: The second point which I was making is this that it is the wish of the select committee that theatres, cinemas and other places of entertainment should not be given exemption and yet no provision has been made in the Bill with the result that they are not prevented from generating their own supply of electricity. In that way I say that the Bill is materially defective and it only encourages the evasion of payment.

The third point is that the consumer, who is the special object of compassion with the select committee is not protected, and so far as I can see no amendment to protect him on the lines contained in proviso to clause 6 (1) has been tabled.

An Honourable MEMBER: Five amendments have been proposed.

Mr. A. N. SURVE: I therefore want that the select committee's report and the Bill should be sent back to that committee.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Sir, I oppose this amendment. All those points were considered by the select committee. If any point remains, there are amendments already tabled. As regards generating private energy, it is not such a thing as would cost less expense, in fact it would be more costly for a person to generate electric power because he would have to buy all the plant, to put it in position and to work it. This Bill is intended to be in operation only for one year, and we do not know whether it will be extended or not by this honourable House. All these points were considered by the select committee and there is no reason why the select committee's report with the Bill should go back to that committee again.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I have not put the motion to the House. Does the honourable mover insist upon my doing so?

Mr. A. N. SURVE: I think it should be put so that it will form part of the record.

Question put, and negatived.

Bill read a second time.

Question, "That the Bill be read a second time," put, and agreed to.

Bill read clause by clause.

Clause 1 (Short title) ordered to stand part of the Bill.

Clause 2 (Extent and commencement and duration) :

(1) Except where it is otherwise provided in this Act, this Act extends to the whole of the Presidency of Bombay.

(2) It shall come into force on the 1st day of April 1932.

(3) This section and sections 3 to 15 containing Parts II, III and IV shall remain in operation for one year from the date on which this Act comes into force.

Mr. A. N. SURVE (Bombay City, North) : Sir, I move :

"Clause 2 (3), lines 3-4. Substitute the clause "up to 31st March 1933" instead of "for one year from the date on which this Act comes into force".

You will see, Sir, that under sub-clause (2) the Act comes into operation on the first day of April 1932 and it is to remain in force for one year. Therefore it is but proper to use the words "up to 31st March 1933", as otherwise I fear that if the Act does not come into force on the first day of April, some difficulties will arise should the Act actually come into operation, say, on the 10th April or 15th April. In that case, if it is to remain in force for one year, I am afraid this Act will go beyond the one year's period which was intended. My fear is——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : How can it remain in force beyond one year's period ? The one year will be counted from the date it comes into operation.

Mr. A. N. SURVE : Sir, if it comes into force on the 10th April because it will have to be submitted to the Governor-General for his assent, and a Bill becomes an Act and comes into operation only after the Governor-General's assent is received and not before.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT : Under that clause it will come into operation on the first day of April.

Mr. A. N. SURVE : No, Sir. It will come into force on the date on which it receives the assent. The difficulty will be that the Bill will have to be sent on to the Governor-General for the requisite assent before it can acquire the force of law. In that case the actual date on which it will come into force will depend on the date of publication after it receives the Governor-General's assent and if it is received after 1st April, the duration of the Bill may go beyond the 1st day of April 1933 and therefore the date of its expiration may go beyond the one year intended by this Bill.

The Honourable Mr. W. F. HUDSON : The honourable member does not seem to understand the procedure. I suppose he suggests that His Excellency the Governor-General's sanction may not be received till the 3rd or the 4th of April. That makes no difference to the operation of the Bill. The Bill will have come into force on the first day of April, and I really do suggest that the honourable member be not allowed to waste the time of the House with such purely frivolous objections.

Mr. A. N. SURVE : If the Honourable the Revenue Member takes up that attitude, I should be protected, Sir. I come here to discharge my duty to the public, and I am doing that to the best of my ability.

The Honourable Mr. W. F. HUDSON : The honourable member should make himself acquainted with the ordinary procedure.

Mr. A. N. SURVE: I claim your protection, Sir. The attitude which the Honourable the Revenue Member has taken up comes, I think, within the Chair's jurisdiction, and I claim your protection because I am interrupted while placing my views before the House to which I am entitled by reason of my being its member. I submit, Sir, the provisions of the Government of India Act, Section 81 (3) is sufficient authority for me for the statements I am making.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: It is a matter of commonsense that the Bill, if it comes into force on the first day of April next, will last for one year. The honourable member Mr. Surve imagines a number of difficulties. He has been told that even if the sanction came later, the Bill would have its operation from the 1st of April.

Mr. A. N. SURVE: I have no more remarks to offer, Sir.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The honourable member does not move his amendment, I understand?

Mr. A. N. SURVE: I have pointed out my difficulties, Sir.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Is the honourable member not moving it then?

Mr. A. N. SURVE: I have said what I had to say. If it does not appeal to the House, I cannot do anything more.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I am afraid it does not appeal to the House, but is the honourable member going to move it?

Mr. A. N. SURVE: I have already moved it.

Amendment put, and negatived.

Clause 2 ordered to stand part of the Bill.

Clause 3 (Extent of Part II) ordered to stand part of the Bill.

Clause 7 (Licensee to keep books of account and submit returns) ordered to stand part of the Bill.

Clause 8 (Inspecting Officers) ordered to stand part of the Bill.

Clause 9 (Recoveries):

Any sum due on account of electricity duty, if not paid at the time and in the manner prescribed, shall be recoverable, at the discretion of Government, either from the consumer, or, subject to the proviso to section 6 (1), from the licensee, and either through a civil court or as an arrear of land revenue.

Mr. A. N. SURVE (Bombay City, North): Sir, I move that:

"In clause 9, lines 6 to 7, omit the words 'and either' in line 6 and 'or as an arrear of land revenue' in lines 6 and 7."

I beg to submit that a great difficulty is likely to arise in the administration of this section. The procedure followed in reading the meters in Bombay is that they are not read exactly after a month. Sometimes, they are read after four or five days. If a meter is read exactly after a month, there may be less than 10 units. The meters in Bombay are read four or five days after a month. In that case, if the meter is read two or three days after the completion of the month, and if the reading will show 11 units, the consumer is placed at a disadvantage. If the meter had to be read exactly after a month, he could have claimed exemption. As the meters are read 4 or 5 days after the completion of the month, the consumer cannot claim exemption and he has to pay surcharge duty.

If this duty is to be collected as arrears of revenue, the consumer will be at a disadvantage and he will not be able to clear up the point. On these points only a civil court is the competent authority to settle these doubtful points. For that purpose I move this amendment.

Question proposed.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Sir, I oppose the amendment. The procedure ordinarily prescribed is that the licensee will recover the amount and pay it to Government. If in any case Government collect the amount from the consumer, a simpler procedure is laid down. I know that all the meters cannot be read on the same day. If they are not read on the same identical date, they are read on approximately the same date. The units consumed are there and the consumer can claim exemption. Can we get over the difficulty by the remedy suggested by the honourable member? Are we to go to the civil court for the recovery of the amount? A simpler procedure is laid down that the amount should be recovered as arrears of revenue.

Question put and negatived.

Clause 9 ordered to stand part of the Bill.

Clause 10 (Penalties) ordered to stand part of the Bill.

Clause 11 (Power to make rules) ordered to stand part of the Bill.

FIRST SCHEDULE.

(See Section 5.)

For lights and fans.

(a) In respect of all premises not falling under clause (b) and not exempted under section 5 and second schedule.	Six pies for each unit of energy consumed.
(b) When flat rates are charged by the licensee:—
For a 20 Watt light	.. Two annas per mensem.
For a 30 Watt light	.. Three annas per mensem.
For a 40 Watt light	.. Four annas per mensem.
For a 60 Watt light	.. Six annas per mensem.

Explanation.—In calculating the rate of duty under clause (b) each 20 Watt light shall be presumed to have consumed three units during a month.

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN (Nasik District): Sir, I move:

"In Part II in the first schedule in clause (a) instead of 'six pies' substitute the words 'four pies'."

[Rao Bahadur G. V. Pradhan]

I have moved this amendment for a particular reason. When the representatives of the electric companies were examined before the select committee, it was brought to the notice of the committee, rather late—I mean the difficulty that has been raised by the honourable member Mr. Surve—that the month cannot be properly calculated. The first reading of the meter may be taken on the 4th January in one month and in the second month the reading may be taken on the 5th of February; and on the third month on the 10th and so on. Then, it leads to difficulty as regards the exemptions. In the second schedule, paragraph 7 says:

"any consumer using not more than ten units in any one month."

It is quite possible, as the readings are not taken and cannot be taken from month to month on the same date—this duty of reading meters every 30 days cannot be imposed upon the electric supply company—that the consumer cannot claim the exemption provided in clause (7) even when in 30 days he may have consumed less than 10 units.

The second difficulty that has been pointed out by the representatives of the electric supply companies is that the six pies is so large a surcharge in the case of big consumers, like the theatres, which my honourable friend quoted, or the Taj Mahal Hotel, that these companies would rather produce electricity at their own cost, than paying to the company and in addition a surcharge. Those companies are at present paying a little less than one anna per unit. If the tax is levied, they will have to pay this one anna per unit and 6 pies surcharge. We also ascertained what would be the maximum charge that they would be able to pay without having resort to an independent installation. We came to the conclusion that it is a little more than one anna and a little less than 1¼ anna. This reduction from 6 pies to 4 pies will effectively stop them from resorting to any other course and the electric companies will not lose these customers. The difficulty in Bills like this is that it is only nominally going to be in force for one year. In future years, a Bill in this form or in a modified form is sure to be presented to this House. So, the surcharge should be such as not to allow the total bill of the consumer to exceed the cost that will be incurred by the consumer by the installation of the oil engine and so on, the initial cost being distributed over a certain number of years. For this purpose this suggestion of reducing the surcharge from 6 to 4 pies is made.

There is a third difficulty. This is as regards the holders of small tenements. We have been told that in Bombay and Ahmedabad one-roomed and two-roomed tenements have got electric lights, for which the owner of these tenements has a common meter. The owner recovers this charge from the tenants in addition to rent. So, if there are 10 one-roomed tenements, each room will have a light. Inasmuch as a separate meter cannot be had for each room on account of the prohibitive rent of meters there will be one meter for the ten rooms. These ten tenements together may consume 40 to 50 units in a month. The lower middle class people who are the occupants of these rooms cannot get exemption though their individual consumption will work out at 4 to 5 units. This is why I say that the exemption clause as it stands at present would serve no useful purpose. If on the contrary the rate is reduced, all these tenements will be benefited and then we can as well forgo the exemptions. I understood from Government when the Bill was introduced that they expected to get about 12 lakhs revenue from this source. Over and above this 12 lakhs, the select committee has given them much more by taxing the theatres and illuminated signs, which will be charged not at the originally proposed rate of 3 pies but at the rate of 6 pies per unit. The detailed figures as to how much would be consumed in a city like Bombay, for example by these illuminated signs and theatres were tried to be ascertained from the representatives of the electric companies that came before the select committee, but they were not ready with those figures, and so they cannot be ascertained. One fact, however, is true, and it is that the total revenue to be collected from this electricity duty would be more than 12 lakhs, and inasmuch as the illuminated signs and theatres are now to be charged at a higher rate than the one proposed originally, I think it would be about 13 or 14 lakhs.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: No, no.

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN: I have not got the figures; if the figures are provided, I will correct myself. I am trying to discuss the position as to what would be the position if no exemptions are given. We have been told that if persons consuming 10 units and less are given an exemption, the amount lost by the exemptions would be something like Rs. 70,000, but if, on the contrary, the exemption limit is extended up to 15 units, then the amount would be something like Rs. 2,00,000, or a little more or less. We know that there are amendments on the notice paper to raise the limit of exemption from 10 units to 15 units, and in order to satisfy all these requirements and to cut short the matter as well, it is far better to reduce the tax to 4 pies to all the people, without giving any exemptions to anybody. Ultimately, it would be more profitable to Government. Otherwise, there are likely to be so many difficulties to the consumers for no fault of theirs with which Government will be faced. It may or may not be the fault of the company if they do not arrange for the reading of the meter every month, but if the meter is not read in any one month, the difficulty to the consumer would be enhanced as the reading of the meter may be for two months. I am further told that in Bombay the minimum charge is fixed not per month but for every three months. If that is so, the company would not at all be blamed if they do not take meter readings once every month, but take them once in three months. I therefore hope that the amendment that I have proposed will be adopted.

Question proposed.

Mr. G. WILES: Sir, the honourable member, in order to escape certain technical difficulties, is proposing to cut down the receipts from this tax from the estimated 12 lakhs to something under 8 lakhs. Let me go through, one by one, the reasons which he has given for this reduction by 4 lakhs. The first is that there is some difficulty in reading the meters of small consumers who may be on the marginal line of about 10 units. I submit, Sir, that is a matter of detail which, I think, can be satisfactorily arranged with the companies. There cannot be a very large number of consumers on the marginal line of 10 units, and it should be a comparatively simple matter for the company to arrange that the meters of such consumers shall be read on the same day in each month. There is nothing in the Act which says that a month shall run from the 1st to the 31st. The exemption is for any consumer using not more than 10 units in any one month.

Now, with regard to the difficulty of chawls, surely it is better to deal with this in a specific manner rather than cut the Gordian knot, thereby losing 4 lakhs. There is a specific amendment dealing with this particular difficulty tabled by my honourable friend Mr. Hoosenally Rahimtoola. It seems to me a much more satisfactory way of dealing with it.

The third point is that there is considerable objection on the part of some honourable members to fixing the limit of exemption at 10 units only, instead of some higher figure. Well, 10 units was fixed for very definite reasons, which were given to us by the experts. There are considerable difficulties about raising it to as high as 15 units, partly because it will discourage the use of electric current, through the efforts to get down to 15 units. We were told it was much easier to get down to 15 than to 10. But the difference in the cost of exemption of 10 units and the exemption of 15 units is out of all proportion. It is half a lakh in one case and a lakh and a half in the other; the difference is one lakh. But why should we run the risk of losing 4 lakhs in order to remove this difficulty which, at the most, will cost one lakh?

The honourable member has exaggerated greatly the effect of the recommendation of the select committee to raise the rate from 3 pies to 6 pies on theatres and illuminated signs. He talks in lakhs; whereas, he should talk in thousands. There is not the least probability that the 4 lakhs which he is cutting off is going to be got back by his amendment. I am told by my honourable friend on my right that it is much more likely to be Rs. 10,000 than 4 lakhs.

Rao Bahadur R. S. ASAVALE (Bombay City, North): Sir, as I have tabled an amendment in the same form in which it has been proposed by my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Pradhan, I rise to support it on that ground. But, as has been stated by the Finance Secretary and if Government are going to accept the amendment of which notice has been given by my honourable friend Mr. Hoosenally M. Rahimtoola, I would rather——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: How can Government accept an amendment which has not yet been moved? Possibly the honourable member concerned may not move it.

Rao Bahadur R. S. ASAVALE: Then, Sir, the points which have been made by the honourable the mover in support of his amendment are quite correct. It would be very difficult for people living in one-room or two room tenements to get the benefit from the exemption which the select committee has proposed, viz., up to 10 units. Also the small shopkeepers and small traders such as grocers, bidi shopkeepers, etc., who always are obliged to use one or two lights will generally have to consume more than 10 units, and it would therefore be that there is no exemption whatsoever given to such people of the city of Bombay. Also, the figures are not before us as to how many tenements are consuming 10 units and under. As far as my information goes, in the city of Bombay, the small traders and shopkeepers do consume more than 10 units. Coming to the one-room or two room tenements in the chawls occupied by the lower—middle and poorer classes, unless these chawls are exempted, the occupants of such tenements will get no exemption. That means that we are taxing actually the poorer more than the richer classes. The taxation would fall actually on the poorer classes, and not, as promised by the Government when the Bill was introduced, on the richer classes. The Honourable the Finance Member then said that this tax is not to fall on the poorer and the labouring classes, but it is not so. It will fall on the poorer classes the most because the landlord gives the lights on his own behalf to his tenants, and the energy consumed is recorded on the one meter of the landlord, and he is charged by the electric company for the units consumed by all his tenants in single or double-room tenements in his chawl. And the landlord charges one rupee or so for any energy consumed by his tenant per month. If exemption is confined to 10 units only and under, then these tenants will not get the benefit of it at all, but they will have to pay something more than what they pay at present to their landlord. In the same way the small traders and shopkeepers who have separate meters will have no exemption. We know the present difficulty of the traders, that on account of the present depression they are not in a position to carry on their business smoothly. So, it means that even in these times of depression they are to be taxed more. We have also got a further Bill of taxation, viz., the Tobacco Duty Bill, imposing an extra tax on the consumers of tobacco in the city of Bombay which is also to fall on the poorer labouring classes in the city. It means that we are going to burden the poorer classes instead of burdening the richer classes with taxes.

Then, Sir, the Honourable the Finance Member has given exemptions to certain bodies. Of course, religious and other similar bodies should be exempted and I have my full support to such a proposal, but I would not agree to the exemptions proposed to be given to certain companies mentioned in the Bill. If any exemption is to be given at all, it must be given to small traders and poor class tenants.

I hope that the House will accept the proposal that the rate should be reduced to 4 pies instead of keeping it at 6 pies as proposed in the Bill.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Sir, I think I should intervene at this stage to point out for the information of the House as to how many persons are exempted under this limit of 10 units. I may also assure honourable members that, when the Finance Secretary pointed out that there is an amendment tabled by the honourable member

[Sir Govindrao Pradhan]

Mr. Hoosenally Rahimtoola and also the honourable member Mr. Kadri, for exempting small consumers the idea of Government was that persons consuming less than 10 units should be exempted, and if a way is found for it, that exemption will be given. But Government certainly are not prepared to reduce the rate from 6 pies to 4 pies, which means a direct loss of 4 lakhs. The honourable member Rao Bahadur Asavale said that in the city of Bombay we are not exempting anybody. The total number of consumers of energy from the Bombay Electric Supply and Tramways Company in Bombay city is 49,971, and the number of those who consume less than 10 units is 12,701, which is more than 25 per cent. of the total. We have also the total number of consumers of energy from all the 24 or 26 electric supply companies in all the cities of the Presidency; they are 74,137, of whom 20,514 consume less than 10 units. How far can we possibly go? The Finance Secretary has told us that the moment you reduce the rate from 6 pies to 4 pies, there is a loss of something like 4 lakhs of rupees. Now, Sir, this is a Finance Bill. We brought it up because we are hard up. We want the amount for wiping out only a part of our deficit. If you cut down revenue like this, where is the good of bringing up such a Bill at all?

Therefore, I particularly emphasise the point that we are exempting even at present more than one-fourth and a little less than one-third of the total number of consumers, and we are proposing to exempt the persons in these small tenements, because there is an amendment tabled to that effect. With this assurance, I submit that the House would be well advised in rejecting this amendment.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE: If the Honourable the Finance Member can give an assurance that—

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN: Can this amendment not be held over till the amendment of the honourable member Mr. Rahimtoola is reached?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: This amendment is to the Schedule.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: I can give an assurance that a way will be found for giving exemption to tenants of one-room tenements. We will provide that the number of units should be divided by the number of occupied tenements, and if it comes to less than 10 units, it will be exempted. The object of Government is to give exemption to consumers of 10 units and under. A way will be found out for incorporating this in the Bill. That is the wish of Government, and they are not going behind it.

Mr. PESTANSHAH N. VAKIL: Sir, I want to know why the marginal line is fixed at ten units, considering the fact that the minimum charged by the Bombay Electricity Company is Rs. 3. It was mentioned in the circular letter addressed by the 35 electric companies that the minimum bill payable in Bombay was Rs. 3, i.e. for 12 units. Those who have independent installations are not, therefore, going to get any benefit at all. Ten units as the minimum has absolutely no meaning, unless I am mistaken.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Even where the rate is 4 annas per unit, ten units will give Rs. 2-8-0, and the meter charge being eight annas, the total will be Rs. 3. When the rate is higher, the total will be more than Rs. 3.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE (Poona City): Sir, our position is this. The first question for consideration is whether the revenue to be raised from this duty should be 12 lakhs or whether it should be reduced from 12 lakhs to 8 lakhs. Government propose to have an additional revenue of 12 lakhs by the Electricity Bill. The reduction proposed from six pies to four pies per unit will bring down that revenue not by 4 lakhs, but by 3 or 3¼ lakhs, because there are two classes of rates in the schedule, one charged per unit and the other on the scale laid down in sub-clause (b), when flat rates are charged. As the amendment refers only to the charge per unit, the other is not included. Therefore, the figure of 4 lakhs is not quite accurate.

Secondly, if we keep the charge at six pies per unit, the advantage to those who are using electricity to a limited extent will be taken away. There are many tenements where there is only a single light, and one light burnt for one month at the rate of 5 hours per day will bring the total consumption just near the present limit of 10 units. Therefore, unless we make up our minds to increase the exemption limit to 15 units, I do not think this charge of six pies should be accepted. I quite see the assurance that has been made to us, and probably Government may accept an amendment to sub-clause (7) of Exemptions to increase 10 units to 15 units—

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: I never said that. I never said that I would accept an amendment to increase the limit from ten units to fifteen units. I said that a way would be found to give reasonable facilities for exempting poor people.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE: I never said that Government said that. What I said was that possibly Government may accept an amendment to increase the 10 units to 15 units. I find that the Honourable the Finance Member sticks to 10 units. From his point of view, the rate of six pies should not be maintained and then the exemption limit should also be maintained at 10 units. Generally speaking, Sir, 10 units are hardly sufficient for one light. If a tenant burns only one light for one month for more than six hours a day, he will exceed the limit of 10 units.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: And yet 25 per cent. of the users are to-day using less than that.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE: I think there is agreement on this that if one light is burnt more than six hours a day for one month, the exemption limit of 10 units will be useless. It will not benefit the poor consumer. Government have made it clear that they will not agree to increase the limit from 10 units to 15 units. So, the position is that no person using electricity will benefit by the exemption.

Mr. G. WILES: Will the honourable member read the explanation to the first schedule?

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE: I have read the first schedule, the second schedule, section 5—the whole bill. The explanation is:

"In calculating the rate of duty under clause (b) each 20 Watt light shall be presumed to have consumed three units during a month."

Now, this presumption is one that is liable to be—

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: The wording is "shall be presumed".

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE: Whether that quantity of energy is burnt or not, it will be taken to be 3 units. Three such lights will bring it up to 10 units. If it is more than three such lights, there will be no exemption. What I want to point out is that this exemption is very limited and is practically useless. If we are really honest in our intention to benefit poor tenants from this duty, either we must reduce the charges per unit from 6 pies to 4 pies or increase the exemption limit from 10 units to 15 units. Unless either one of the two courses is followed, there will not be any relief to the poor tenant. That is how I want to put the case. We have an assurance from Government that they are not inclined to increase the exemption limit from 10 units to 15 units. Therefore, the only course for this honourable House is to reduce the charge per unit from six pies to four pies, and thus reduce the charges to the poor man for using God's light.

I am told that this limit of 10 units has been come to, calculating that a light will be burnt five hours a day, three hours from sunset and two hours before sunrise. But I think there are many people who do have to burn the light for more than seven hours a day, from 6 to 11-30 at night and 4 to 7 in the morning. The millhands have to get ready for their work in the morning; their women-folk have to get up and do the cooking; they have also to take their bath. That means three hours' burning of the light in the early morning. They will have to burn the light five hours from sunset, because after they come back from the mill tired, they naturally want some relaxation, such as card-playing. That means, seven or eight hours' burning of the light. And therefore they will be charged under this Act. Therefore, my appeal to the House is that as we cannot get an increase of the limit from 10 units to 15 units, let us have the unit charge reduced from six pies to four pies. If they have a large number of lights, the number of units consumed may even go up to more than 15 units and the exemption limit will not be useful to them. With a view to help the poor people this amendment should be accepted. I am sure the honourable members of this House will help the honourable mover of the amendment by accepting the amendment to reduce the charge from six pies to four pies.

Mr. PESTANSHAH N. VAKIL (Ahmedabad City): Sir, if the object of the Electricity Bill is to provide further sources of revenue in these times of difficulty, I am afraid the amendment which seeks to cut down the revenue by fully 30 per cent. should not be acceptable to the House. But I am absolutely at one with my honourable friend (Mr. Gokhale) in proposing that the marginal limit should be raised. I am not at all convinced by the explanation which was tendered by the Honourable the Finance Member. My difficulty, Sir, is this. I am not aware of the conditions obtaining in Bombay. The system of having one common meter for a chawl is one peculiar to Bombay. I come from a different city. Bombay is only one of the forty odd townships which are electrically lighted. Even supposing that fixing the limit at ten units is likely to give relief to the poor of the city of Bombay, I cannot for the life of me understand why the poor of the remaining forty cities are to be excluded from this boon. I know the minimum charge in Ahmedabad is Rs. 4, the meter charge of 8 annas being extra. I am open to correction. I was just corrected by the Honourable the Finance Member that the minimum in Bombay is not Rs. 3, but Rs. 2-8-0 plus eight annas for the meter. I do not know: that was not what was explained to us by the expert of the Tata Company who came here to enlighten the honourable members on the intricacies of the problem. In Ahmedabad at any rate the minimum charge is Rs. 4-8-0, Rs. 4 for energy and eight annas for the meter. The charge for 10 units at the rate of six annas per unit comes to Rs. 3-12-0, just short of the minimum chargeable by the supply company, because the lowest bill for electricity is Rs. 4; anything less than Rs. 4 is not considered by the company at all. There are individual installations in the city of Ahmedabad. Similar perhaps is the case with the other cities also. Where is then the boon to the poor? But supposing the people in Bombay for some reason take it into their heads to have individual installations, unless the company is prepared to submit bills of Rs. 2-8-0—I am not considering the meter charges—there will be absolutely no advantage to the poor by the limit being fixed at 10 units. As I have pointed out, the relief to the poor of the mofussil is likewise nil. I therefore submit that the limit should be raised; that is to say, instead of ten units it should be raised to 12 units at the lowest. If there is any amendment to that effect we shall have to support that amendment.

I personally am not inclined to support the amendment to reduce the present rates of duty, because we are told it will reduce the income by 4 lakhs. The object of the Finance Bill is to vote supplies to the Government in these times of difficulty. I am absolutely for giving relief to the poor people, provided it could be done in another way. This amendment may have a very laudable object, viz. giving relief to the poor. But you are thereby reducing the revenue to a great extent and giving relief, I cannot say to the poor alone, but to the rich as well, who are very well able to bear the burden. Personally, Sir, I am of opinion that the Finance Department is to be congratulated on finding out this new source of revenue. For years past the charge has been levelled at them for sticking to the stereotyped methods of taxation, the same sources of revenue, e.g. land-revenue, court-fees and so on. But when once in a way they strike out a line for themselves, it is hardly fair to blame them for the tax not being a perfect tax. I have yet to know of a tax which is absolutely faultless.

I am inclined to quote here McCulloch's adaptation of Pope:

"Whoever hopes a faultless tax to see, Hopes what ne'er was, or is, or e'er shall be."

So it is clearly a case of expecting the Finance Department to invent a tax which will be accepted with open arms as soon as it is announced. The fact of the matter is that taxation is not liked by any section of the community. That is certain. Sir, the opposition to this tax has been engineered by powerful electrical corporations backed by the weight of an influential daily of Bombay. But the tax itself, to my mind, is not so very objectionable, provided the poor people are really given the relief which it is the intention of the framers of the Bill to give. But as matters stand, the members of the Select Committee have not given that relief by fixing the limit at 10 units. I beg to submit that the Honourable the Finance Member should raise the limit to at least 12, if it could be done, or accept the amendment to raise it to 15, if there is no other way open to him.

Rao Bahadur G. K. CHITALE (Ahmednagar District): Mr. President, it is said that Columbus discovered America centuries ago; and the Finance Department discovered this tax only in the Grace year 1931—

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I do not think old men like Pope and Columbus need be trotted out on the floor of this House. [Laughter.]

Rao Bahadur G. K. CHITALE: The point is that we start from the presumption that Government have mismanaged the finances and do not deserve to be given the slightest chance of getting any more taxes. I start from that. This House, at the time of the first reading, wanted to throw out the Bill altogether. Now that we have entered the second reading stage, I do not wish to congratulate the Government on the modified form in which the Bill has been presented to us. I say so, because the Finance Department, or for the matter of that, the whole Government, has not taken courage in both hands; they do not want to balance the budget. I make a grievance of it. What is the use of not balancing the budget, if you are prepared to borrow——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I am very sorry to interrupt the honourable member, but while putting the second reading to the House I did ask honourable members if they desired to speak on the second reading by way of raising an objection. Now I am taking the Bill clause by clause and we must confine ourselves to the amendment which is before the House.

Rao Bahadur G. K. CHITALE: I am very thankful to you, Sir. Perhaps I was absent then. However, the position now is this: we want to give Government as little as we can, and I support the amendment only with that view.

[Rao Bahadur G. K. Chitale]

The Honourable the Finance Member is not prepared to unfold his views at present and state up to what limit he would be pleased to go in the matter of exemption. There is really no question of pleasure. I am really surprised at the way in which prayers are made to Government benches. Why should they be "pleased"? The House must be pleased. Have we not got our own strength to bend the Government? Government will not be bent so long as we ourselves do not follow one method of thinking.

I am not a believer in the assurances given across the benches; sometimes capital is made of the fact that no supplementary questions are asked. Perhaps we will not get the slightest relief after the imposition of this tax, if the limit of exemption is not raised. I say this is the thin end of the wedge. People are really in distress owing to various causes. If the tax, which is always unpopular, is to be popularised in these days, let us do so on the lines of least resistance. If it appeals to this House and they accept the taxation proposal at the rate of 4 pies per unit, Government, I think, should feel obliged, if that part of the amendment is passed unanimously. What is the use of bringing the official bloc always for the purpose of passing finance Bills and taking revenue from an unwilling House? The calculations on which that particular amount of revenue is based are not yet quite clear to us. Very few of us understand this "watt" measure. The people in the mofussil do not yet know what is a "20 watt" light. All that they know is that the company's man comes and presents his bill for a particular amount. They do not care even if the meter is wrong. Add to that this arbitrary measure, that a 20 watt light means 3 units, and the calculation of the rate at 6 pies per unit when there is a variation in the rates charged by different companies. I should think Government ought to be pleased if we are prepared to give them 4 pies per unit. They have not based their calculations on correct figures. Sometimes we find that their figure is not accurate. Who knows whether the exemption will be enjoyed to the extent of 25 or 30 per cent.? The estimate may prove wrong in practice. In these circumstances, this House will be well advised in accepting the lower rate of 4 pies per unit.

Rao Bahadur S. N. ANGADI (Belgaum District): Mr. President, you know, Sir, that I yield to none in this House in sympathies for the poor, but so far as this amendment is concerned, I am afraid I cannot support it, for the simple reason that in the name of the poor, we are really making the rich people escape the tax. I do understand that there ought to be sufficient sympathy for the poor and there ought to be some relief to them. I do not know how far the exemption of 10 units will go towards giving relief to the poor. We are told that in the case of the city of Bombay there is a special difficulty. The system of a common meter is a peculiar feature which is not to be found in other cities where they use electricity. But so far as that aspect of the question is concerned, I think the Honourable the Finance Member made it clear that a way will be found by which it will be possible to give the necessary relief to those who live in tenements. If that is done our object will be achieved. After all, we are concerned to see that poor people are not hit hard. That is the concern of every honourable member here. Only, the dispute is about the method. I do not know whether the object of those who advocate a uniform rate of 4 pies is to benefit the poor classes, but I am afraid a large class of people who are able to pay will escape being taxed and thereby our object will not be achieved. Our object is merely to give relief to the poor. The Honourable the Finance Member has assured us that he will see to it that a way is found by which the poor people living in Bombay will get the necessary relief. I do not know whether that can be done by raising the limit of exemption from 10 to 12 or in some other way. I am not sure of that. But certainly I hope Government will devise a method by which they will be able to give relief to the poor. For this reason, I oppose the reduction of rate per unit from 6 to 4 pies.

Khan Bahadur M. A. KHUHRO (Larkana District): Sir, I am sorry I have to oppose the amendment moved by my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Pradhan, because I do not believe in the argument that if we reduce the rate of taxation from 6 pies to 4 pies, the poor people will be benefited. On the contrary, as has been suggested, if people who consume 10 or 15 units or whatever the limit fixed, are exempted, it will go a long way towards achieving the object which we all have in view. In the alternative, if we reduce the rate, as proposed by the honourable mover of the amendment, and do not exempt entirely a certain number of units, the result will be that those who can afford to pay the tax will benefit to a certain extent. Since we have accepted the principle of the electricity duty, we must make it worth the while of Government. If you reduce the rate, it takes away a great portion of the tax that Government expect to get. In that case, it is no use supporting the Bill at all. Therefore, my opinion is that it is much better to exempt consumers up to a certain number of units, say 10 or 15, or whatever is decided upon, than bring down the rate of the tax. I therefore oppose the amendment.

Mr. HAJI MIR MAHOMED BALOCH (Karachi City) (Addressed the House in Urdu): Mr. President, I rise to support the amendment moved by my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Pradhan. We have been given to understand that if the rate is reduced to 4 pies as proposed, the revenue will be reduced by about 1 lakh of rupees. The budget has been passed by this honourable House without a single pie being reduced from it.

The honourable member Rao Bahadur Angadi does not seem to have seen big cities. He seems to have confined his experience only to small towns with 20,000, 25,000 or 30,000 population where no electricity is used, and so he says there is no meter except in Bombay. In every city where electricity is used, meters are there. Time will come when every village will have electricity for all domestic purposes, such as lights, fan, cooking, heating and for various other uses.

Rao Bahadur S. N. ANGADI: I think the honourable member misunderstands me. I referred to a common meter system which was pointed out by the honourable member Mr. Gokhale and which obtains in a big city like Bombay where in big chawls there is only one meter for the whole building. The honourable member Mr. Baloch thinks I have not seen cities where there is electricity.

Mr. HAJI MIR MAHOMED BALOCH: I do not say that. I want to show to the two honourable members that in big cities like Bombay, Karachi and so on, there are innumerable buildings in which there are 6 or 7 or 8 or more tenants who are provided one or two lamps in their rooms and pay fixed sum to the landlords monthly for lights. If I am their landlord or if anybody else is their landlord, he will of course recover the extra charge from his tenants the moment his consumption of electrical energy goes beyond the ten units which are exempted; so how will these poor tenants be exempted from this extra charge?

My honourable friend Khan Bahadur Khuhro says there should be separate meters. Does he not know that separate meters are charged one rupee extra every month? Does he want all this extra money to go into the coffers of the electric company which supplies the energy? Who will bear that extra rupee? I am really surprised how these honourable members have come forward to agree to this fresh taxation when all of us know that the taxable capacity of the people has been reached long ago. What my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Chitale said is right, that we, the honourable members of this House, have this right of saying to Government "No, we shall not allow you to levy any more taxes on the over-burdened people". If we do not exercise that right and if we do not throw out this Finance Bill, we shall have to thank ourselves for it. Now you find that only big cities and towns like Bombay, Karachi, Hyderabad and Ahmedabad have electric supply. But in course of time it will extend to every small town and village.

Khan Bahadur M. A. KHUHRO: You have it at Larkana and Sukkur.

Mr. HAJI MIR MAHOMED BALOCH: No, my friend, you do not recognise the elephant's eating teeth from his other tusks which are merely for show. Be sure that in due time the whole countryside will have electric lighting and then where will your poor people be? Will they not be saddled with this extra charge?

With these remarks, I support the amendment moved by my honourable friend that the charge should be reduced from six pies to four pies.

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN: I have nothing more to say, Sir.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Sir, I have not been able to understand the reasoning of the honourable members who propose that this should be reduced from six pies to four pies on the ground that it will afford some relief to the poor. You are going to give relief to the rich also by reducing it from six pies to four because the argument of the honourable member who moved that motion is that all exemptions should be taken away and that the charge be reduced from six pies to four and that all, rich or poor, should be charged alike. If you want to charge alike, how will that bring relief to the poor?

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE: Keep the exemption at 10 units as it now is.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: I could not understand what the honourable member Mr. Gokhale from Poona was arguing. The explanation in the schedule is as clear as A B C, namely, that if you use a lamp of 20 Watt and if you burn it for 12 hours or 24 hours a day, the presumption shall be that that lamp consumes only three units during a month. Does a millhand require more than three lights? Does any poor man require more than this? This argument that the charge of six pies will work a hardship is an argument which I do not understand and which I cannot accept. Even in the island of Bombay 25 per cent. of the people are being exempted under the 10 units rule. I oppose the motion to reduce the charge from six pies to four pies.

Tellers for the Noes : Mr. S. H. PRATER and Mr. P. B. ADVANI.

Mr. G. L. WINTERBOTHAM (Bombay Chamber of Commerce) : Mr. President, Sir, with your permission, I desire to make a slight alteration in the wording of the amendment of which notice has been given by me. The amendment will read as follows :

"In part II, First Schedule, after the words 'six pies for each unit of energy consumed' add the words 'up to a maximum of 25 per cent. of the sum payable by the consumer for the energy consumed by him in any one month'."

The purpose of my amendment is to provide that the incidence of the taxation should not fall unduly harshly on those people who, for one reason or another, pay less than 4 annas per unit for the energy they have consumed. There are certain people who, by reason of the large amount of current they consume, secure from the licensees rates lower than those secured by an ordinary consumer. There is at least one consumer I know who gets current at the rate of one anna. If the surcharge of six pies is applied without any qualification to that consumer, the tax falls on him to the tune of 50 per cent. [An Honourable Member : Simply because he is getting cheap ?] In the mofussil, the consumers will pay a surcharge of 8⅓ per cent. In this city an ordinary consumer will pay a surcharge of 12½ per cent.

I should like to make it perfectly clear to the House that I am not in the remotest way connected with any consumer who gets current cheaply. It is not with that motive I move this amendment. My two motives in bringing forward this amendment are, firstly, that it should not be said that this House passed taxation which bears unduly harshly on any particular consumer and, secondly, that those consumers who get their current cheaply may, if nothing is done to qualify this charge of six pies, be driven to generate their own electricity. Honourable members, I am perfectly certain, will say that those people who get energy at a cheap rate are rich and they must pay. That is not a genuine argument. The House should bear in mind that this proposed tax will bear harshly on those who pay less than 4 annas per unit. The effect of my amendment will be that, if anybody pays less than 4 annas per unit for his energy, he will either pay the charge of 6 pies or 25 per cent. of his monthly bill, whichever is higher, that is to say, supposing there is a consumer who gets his energy at the rate of one anna per unit he will be charged 25 per cent. of his monthly bill, or, expressed as percentage, double the percentage which a consumer who pays 4 annas per unit will pay. My object is, as I have said, only to remove the inequality in the incidence of taxation in connection with those consumers who for reasons of large consumption pay less than the standard rate to the licensees. I hope the House will see the justice of this and support the amendment.

Question proposed.

Rao Bahadur S. N. ANGADI (Belgaum District): Sir, I am afraid I should oppose this amendment also. My honourable friend Mr. Winterbotham told us that in bringing forward this amendment he was actuated by two motives: one was that the incidence of taxation should not unduly harshly fall upon certain persons who have been getting their electric energy rather cheap. That is to say, there are certain consumers of electricity who are getting energy at a tremendously cheap rate of one anna per unit. He compared this with the rate in the mofussil which is 6 annas per unit. Those in the mofussil will have to pay 6 pies surcharge per unit, i.e. 6 pies for 6 annas, while some of those in Bombay will pay 6 pies for one anna. I wish I were in the position of those consumers. It was pointed out that, because they were getting at the rate of one anna, if they pay six pies, the percentage would work out at 50 per cent. I may go further and state that if they get for no payment to the licencee then the percentage will be much higher. My honourable friend is a business man and he has made very shrewd calculations indeed. What I say is that they have been enormously benefitted by the fact that they are getting electric energy very cheap. I do not know why such people should grumble to pay 6 pies surcharge, while others paying 6 times this rate per unit pay the surcharge of 6 pies. If those people who pay a higher rate per unit are willing to pay, why should these people make a grievance of it?

Secondly, it was pointed out that if the rate is kept as it is, there is a fear that these people who are getting electric current very cheap may try to generate electric current themselves. I do not know that. I have not much experience of Bombay. I do not know whether there are any people who would undergo the luxury of installing a special machinery, when they could get electric light at a cheap rate of one anna per unit.

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN (Nasik District): Sir, we are not told as to how many consumers there are approximately at least who are likely to be affected by this tax to more than 25 per cent. It is only those cases which could be considered or which will have to be considered under the present proposal. The honourable member Mr. Winterbotham has given us only one instance. Probably he is thinking of the Taj Mahal Hotel which was mentioned to us by the representatives of the electric companies. So far as the Taj Mahal Hotel is concerned, the electric energy they get is at the rate of ·9 annas or in other words a little less than an anna. If the Taj Mahal Hotel is to be charged subject to a maximum of something like 25 per cent of the electric bill, the tax in their case will be less than quarter of an anna per unit. When I proposed that it should be four pies for all, my honourable colleague Mr. Winterbotham opposed it, inasmuch as he feared that along with the Taj Mahal Hotel other poorer people will also get the benefit. He says now that it should be reduced to less than 3 pies for concerns like the Taj Mahal Hotel. This is not for the benefit of the ordinary consumer and the middle class. This is only for big consumers who take thousands of units per month. I and my party would certainly oppose it.

Sardar BHASAHEB RAISINHJI (THAKOR OF KERWADA) (Gujarat Sardars and Inamdars): Sir, I am sorry to say that I cannot agree with the proposal of my honourable friend Mr. Winterbotham. It comes to this. The sum total of the amendment, if it is given effect to, is that those who, by some special arrangement, get power at a cheaper rate than the ordinary persons should be given a further concession by charging them a lesser rate of tax. I think there must be very few cases in which the parties concerned have made a direct contract with the company, and those persons cannot be classed as poor. They are extremely rich people; they are people like the owners of the Taj Mahal Hotel and other people of a similar character who are making a large profit. I do not think the House would be well advised in charging a lower rate to these people, simply because the House has agreed to give an exemption to the poorer people. These rich people can very well afford to pay this tax. If they get a concession from the company by some private arrangement, we have nothing to do with it. They should be charged according to the number of units consumed by them.

Mr. J. HUMPHREY (Karachi Chamber of Commerce): Sir, I have much pleasure in supporting this amendment. When I spoke on the first reading of the Bill, I described it as a tax on progress; my honourable friend the mover of the amendment has suggested a way by which the tax can be ameliorated. The excessive charge to the heavy consumer as provided for in the Bill would result in accentuating the bar to progress. I believe the electricity supply companies, in order to encourage the consumption of electricity, charge on a sliding scale, the larger the consumption of energy the lesser the unit charge. That is to say, up to a certain point the company will charge so much per unit; then from that point up to a certain higher figure they will charge so much less, and so on. If that is what the electricity supply companies are doing, I consider that Government should have the same consideration and that the tax should also be imposed on a similar basis, because the large consumers want encouraging, not discouraging. I therefore support the amendment.

Mr. G. L. WINTERBOTHAM (Bombay Chamber of Commerce): Sir, I have nothing to add except that I should make it clear that it is not a question of this House giving a concession. It is a question of this House seeing that the taxation which it imposes falls fairly on all classes of consumers.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: I submit, Sir, that on the percentage basis it looks equitable that the charge should be reduced, but as the tax is based on units, I cannot accept the amendment.

Amendment put, and negatived.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Sir, I move the following amendment:

In clause (b) in the first Schedule, before the word "when" the following words shall be inserted, namely:—

"In respect of premises not exempted under the proviso to section 5 and the second Schedule."

Question proposed.

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN (Nasik District): Sir, I will explain my position with regard to this amendment. Clause (b) of Schedule I gives us a flat rate, but the idea is that this flat rate also should be subject to clause 7 of second schedule, or rather, all the other clauses under the exemption either under section 5 or second schedule. That is not so clear in clause (b) as it stands at present. So, I tabled my amendment after a little discussion. There are some further difficulties. I say, there is a difficulty as regards the drafting. For a 20 watt light the charge is 2 annas. What is the charge for a 15 watt light? It is nothing according to the present table. Then for a 60 watt light, the charge is 6 annas. What is the charge for a 100 watt light? It is nothing according to the present table. We have gone into this difficulty, because that position has not been explained. Therefore, I suggest that the whole of clause (b) will have to be redrafted.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Has the honourable member tabled his amendment with that object in view?

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN: Yes, Sir.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Then the honourable member may move it as an amendment to this amendment.

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN: In both the amendments that paragraph will be common.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: As a matter of fact, it works out at the same rate.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE: I wish to point out that in clause (b) for a 20 watt lamp the rate is 2 annas, but the point is, what is the charge for a light which is 25 watts? The clause provides the charges for a 20 watt, a 30 watt, a 40 watt, and a 60 watt light, but there is no provision made for a 25 watt, a 35 watt, or a 45 watt light.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Honourable members would like to know if there are lights of that power.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: There are no such lamps.

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN: I have got in my own house 15 and 25 watt lights.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: They are on the meter. There is no flat rate for them.

Mr. F. O. J. ROOSE: Lamps on flat rates which do not come on meters are usually 20 watt, 30 watt, 40 watt and 60 watt lamps. Anything bigger than 60 say, 75 watt, or 100 watt, or 200 watt, or 300 watt or 500 watt lamps are usually on meter.

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN: Why not make provision for it? It is entirely on the sweet will of the companies to give flat rates for any kind of lamp. It is not also in the interest of the Government to say that no flat rate should be charged on 50 watt, or 100 watt lights, and so on.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: There should be no loophole left.

(After recess)

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Sir, I beg permission to withdraw my amendment. The honourable member the Legal Remembrancer will move another amendment which will satisfy the opposite benches.

Amendment, by leave, withdrawn.

Mr. G. DAVIS: Sir, I have a draft amendment which I hope will meet the objections of the honourable members. It reads as follows:

For sub-clause (b) in the first schedule, substitute the following:—

for every light of less than 30 watts	.. two annas per mensem;
for every light of 30 watts or more but not exceeding 40	.. three annas per mensem;
for every light of 40 watts or more but not exceeding 60	.. four annas per mensem;
for every light of 60 watts or more but not exceeding 100	.. six annas per mensem;
and for every additional 15 watts light or its equivalent in excess of 100 in any light	.. one anna per mensem.

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN: Sir, my amendment seeks to change the schedule as well as the explanation.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: We have not come to the explanation yet.

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN: When we are speaking in terms of watts in this schedule we must do the same in the exemption also. That is my idea.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I wish the Honourable the Finance Member or the Legal Remembrancer will understand the position and meet it if possible.

Mr. G. DAVIS: Will the honourable member tell us what his idea is?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The honourable member's amendment is—

In Part II, first schedule (b), after the words "by the licensee" add the following words:

For every ten watt or its fraction, if not exempted under section 5 and the second schedule	.. one anna per mensem.

Well, that is met by the amendment of the honourable member the Legal Remembrancer. But further he says:

"And delete the table mentioned under (b) and the explanation, and in second schedule, exemption (7), after the word 'units' add the following words:—

'or 70 watts in cases where flat rates are charged.'"

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: That is only a question of calculation.

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN: In the explanation as it stands at present, we have fixed the units only for 20 watts; we have not stated what the basis of calculation will be for the others.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: You want a calculation made for the higher watts also?

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN: If you only amend clause (7) of the Exemptions, so as to make it read "any consumer not using more than 10 units, or 70 watts in cases where flat rates are charged" that will be all right.

Mr. G. DAVIS: Perhaps this will meet the honourable member's case:

"Explanation.—In calculating the rate of duty under clause (b) every 10 watts shall be presumed to consume one and a half units during a month.".

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: So, the explanation also will stand amended.

Mr. G. DAVIS: Yes, Sir.

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN: I would now not propose my amendment.

The Honourable Mr. G. A. THOMAS: The word "Watt" has been spelt with a capital "w" in one place and with a small "w" in another. Which is correct?

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: It should be small.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I shall read the whole amendment again, so that it may be quite clear to the House:

"In the first Schedule, for clause (b), substitute the following:

'(b) In respect of all premises not exempted under the proviso to section 5 and the second Schedule, when flat rates are charged by the licensee, for every light of less than 30 watts	.. two annas per mensem;

every light of 30 watts or more but not exceeding 40	.. three annas per mensem;
every light of 40 watts or more but not exceeding 60	.. four annas per mensem;
every light of 60 watts or more but not exceeding 100	.. six annas per mensem;
and for every additional 15 watts light or its equivalent in excess of 100 in any light	.. one anna per mensem.

Explanation.—In calculating the rate of duty under clause (b) every 10 watts shall be presumed to consume one and a half units during a month.'"

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN: Sir, we are of course drafting it in a hurry, but there is still one difficulty which the honourable member the Legal Remembrancer might look into. In the second item "every light of 30 watts or more but not exceeding 40 watts . . . three annas per mensem" and in the third "every light of 40 watts or more but not exceeding 60." So, is consumption of 40 watts to be charged 3 annas or 4 annas?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: There must be some change there.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: We shall change that into "not exceeding 39," "not exceeding 59," and so on.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Now I will put the corrected amendment to the House:

"In the first Schedule, for clause (b), substitute the following:

'(b) In respect of all premises not exempted under the proviso to section 5 and the second Schedule, when flat rates are charged by the licensee, for every light of less than 30 watts	.. two annas per mensem;

every light of 30 watts or more but not exceeding 39	.. three annas per mensem;
every light of 40 watts or more but not exceeding 59	.. four annas per mensem;
every light of 60 watts or more but not exceeding 100	.. six annas per mensem;
and for every additional 15 watts light or its equivalent in excess of 100 in any light	.. one anna per mensem.

Explanation.—In calculating the rate of duty under clause (b) every 10 watts shall be presumed to consume one and a half units during a month.'"

Question put, and agreed to.

[The President]

Schedule I, as amended, ordered to stand part of the Bill.

"SECOND SCHEDULE.

(See section 5, proviso.)

EXEMPTIONS.

(1) Government, save in respect of premises used for residential purposes;
(2) a railway administration as defined in clause (6) of section 3 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, save in respect of premises used for residential purposes;
(3) a local authority, save in respect of premises used for residential purposes;
(4) a tramway company, save in respect of premises used for residential and office purposes;
(5) an industrial undertaking, save in respect of premises used for residential and office purposes;
(6) a hospital or dispensary which is not maintained for private gain;
(7) any consumer using not more than ten units in any one month.

Explanation.—For the purpose of this Schedule,

(a) 'industrial undertaking' means all buildings or premises wherein or within the precincts of which the manufacturing process is carried on; and

Rao Bahadur R. S. ASAVALE: Sir, I request that my amendment to this Schedule may be held over till the amendment of the honourable member Mr. Hoosenally Rahimtoola is reached.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The amendment in the names of the honourable members Mr. Gokhale and Rao Bahadur Pradhan, viz., "In clauses (1) and (2) add 'and office'" is not covered by the sanction of the Governor General.

Mr. SHAIKH ABDUL AZIZ: Sir, the honourable member Syed Miran Mahomed Shah has authorised me to move his amendment.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: That cannot be allowed.

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN (Nasik District): Sir, I move:

"In the second Schedule of Part II, clause (7), substitute the word 'fifteen' for the word 'ten'."

Sir, the basic idea in moving this amendment is that small consumers of electrical energy should be exempted from this surcharge. This limit of 15 units has been calculated on a certain basis. The minimum charge levied by certain companies is Rs. 3, at any rate in Ahmedabad and certain other places. The rate in some places is 4 annas per unit and in some others 6 annas per unit. So, even if we exempt consumption up to 10 units, the consumer will have to pay more, as the cost of 10 units will not cover the minimum rate levied by the company. If that is so, the exemption of 10 units will not give any relief to the small consumer. In order that that relief should be given to the poor classes and lower middle classes, I move this amendment.

Question proposed.

Rao Bahadur R. S. ASAVALE (Bombay City, North): Sir, I have an amendment in the same form, but I would like to know if Government are prepared to accept "twelve" instead of "fifteen" as the limit of exemption. If that is accepted, I shall withdraw my amendment.

Rao Bahadur S. N. ANGADI: Sir, I move an amendment to the amendment of the honourable member Rao Bahadur Pradhan:

"For the word 'fifteen', substitute the word 'twelve'."

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Order, order. Honourable members seem to have got into a talking mood to-day. There is an amendment by the honourable member Rao Bahadur Angadi to the one moved by the honourable member Rao Bahadur Pradhan. I put that amendment to the amendment to the House.

Question proposed.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Sir, I accept it.

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN (Nasik District): Sir, I move:

"In the second Schedule of Part II after clause (7) add the following:

(8) consumer who has taken electric power for the first time on or after the 1st April 1931."

My object in moving this amendment is that it has been represented by electric companies that the number of consumers is increasing year by year and that if the surcharge is placed upon such consumers, there is likelihood of an appreciable decrease in the number of people going in for electric energy. Moreover, when a person takes electric connections into his house, he has to lay out a considerable sum of money on the fittings etc. and this amount cannot be recouped in one year. The net result is that for the first year, he will have to bear the initial charges plus the charges for the electrical supply and also the surcharge. I therefore seek by this amendment to exempt those people who for the first time since the 1st April 1931 go in for electric energy.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Sir, I oppose this amendment.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE (Poona City): Sir, I too oppose this amendment. The reason advanced by my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Pradhan is neither sound nor convincing. In fact I am afraid he is not serious about his amendment.

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN: Sir, I beg leave to withdraw the amendment.

Amendment, by leave, withdrawn.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: So far as I have been able to see, Sir, all the subsequent amendments are for one special object. So, if the honourable member Mr. Hoosenally Rahimtoola moves his amendment in the amended form, the other amendments will become unnecessary.

Mr. HOOSENALLY M. RAHIMTOOLA (Bombay City): Sir, whatever is the best form may be allowed to be moved and the others may not be moved.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Exactly.

Mr. HOOSENALLY M. RAHIMTOOLA: Sir, I move:

"In second Schedule of Part II, after clause (7), insert:

'Consumer' shall be deemed to include a landlord who shall supply electrical energy to one or two roomed tenements in any one building in respect of any one of which tenements not more than twelve units of energy shall have been consumed during any one month.

Explanation.—Whether more than twelve units shall have been used by or in respect of any one tenement during any one month shall be determined by dividing the number of units used by the number of tenements in that building."

The object of this amendment is what I have stated in my minute of dissent to the Select Committee's Report, namely, to give the benefit of exemption to private individuals and to one or two room tenements where the meter stands in the name of one man and the energy is consumed by a number of people. The total consumption will exceed 12 units but the consumption of each individual will be less than 12 units. So, to give the benefit of exemption to each individual consumer I have moved this amendment.

Question proposed.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: The word "Explanation" should come first and there must be the two paragraphs.

Mr. HOOSENALLY M. RAHIMTOOLA: I have used the word "landlord." There are cases where a number of tenants join together and take a meter. If you will allow me I will use the word "a person" instead of "a landlord," which will cover such cases too.

Rao Bahadur R. S. ASAVALE (Bombay City, North): Sir, I rise to support the amendment. I have also tabled an amendment that single-room tenement chawls should be exempted.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: I have said that I am going to accept the amendment.

Rao Bahadur R. S. ASAVALE: With these few remarks I congratulate the Honourable the Finance Member on having accepted our amendment.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: The wording should be "a landlord or a person." I accept the amendment.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I shall put the amendment which runs as follows:

"Explanation.—'Consumer' shall be deemed to include a landlord or a person who shall supply electrical energy to one- or two-roomed tenements in any one building in respect of any one of which tenements not more than twelve units of energy shall have been consumed during any one month.

Whether more than twelve units shall have been used by or in respect of any one tenement during any one month shall be determined by dividing the number of units used by the number of tenements in that building."

Question put, and agreed to.

Second Schedule, as amended, ordered to stand part of the Bill.

Clause 12 (Amendment of section 7 of VII of 1870):

In section 7 of the Court-fees Act, 1870, in its application to the Presidency of Bombay, in this Part referred to as the said Act,—

(a) to clause (d) of paragraph (iv) the words "or other consequential relief" shall be added;

(b) after the word "appeal" in paragraph (iv) the words "with a minimum fee of rupees fifteen in the case of suits falling under clause (c)" shall be inserted; and

(c) in clauses (1), (2) and (3) of the proviso to paragraph (v) for the words "five," "ten" and "ten" the words "seven and a half," "fifteen" and "fifteen" shall, respectively, be substituted.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE (Poona City): Sir, I move the following amendment:

"In clause 12, sub-clause (b) shall be omitted."

It is now proposed under the Bill to add the words—

"with a minimum fee of rupees fifteen in the case of suits falling under clause (c)."

I want to retain the clause as in the original Act.

The clause as it stands at present says:

"to obtain a declaratory decree or order, where consequential relief is prayed, according to the amount at which the relief sought is valued in the plaint or memorandum of appeal."

[Mr. L. R. Gokhale]

My object is that the additional fee now proposed should not be levied and the provision should stand as it is. The cases falling under clause (c) are to obtain a declaratory decree or order where consequential relief is prayed. As at present the claim is valued according to the desire of the party, say 6 annas or Rs. 10. If the provision as in the Bill is accepted, a minimum fee of Rs. 15 will have to be paid. Suppose an injunction is asked for for stopping a water course, the party will have to pay Rs. 15, irrespective of the value of the claim or the nature of the relief asked for. There is no question of possession that is to be considered under clause (c). It is a question of declaratory decree or order, where a consequential relief is prayed. If possession is asked for, there are other clauses which apply in that case. That is the change sought to be made by my amendment.

Question proposed.

Rao Bahadur D. R. PATIL (East Khandesh District): Sir, I support the amendment. As the law stands, if any person wants a declaratory decree or order with a consequential relief he has to pay six annas as court-fee. That is the present law. Now, the fee from 6 annas is to be raised to Rs. 15. It is a very high figure indeed. It might be argued by the Honourable the Finance Member that certain parties try to ask for consequential relief, though they really want declaratory decrees. If that is so, there is the taxing officer in the civil court who can bring this matter to the notice of the court and the court can say to the parties concerned: Your real object is to get a declaratory decree and you must pay the necessary court-fee which is now Rs. 15 for that relief!! As a safeguard against such a position that may be adopted either by the lawyers or the parties, there is the taxing officer and the court. In that way the interests of Government in the matter of the court-fee will be thus protected. I may submit that Government have been kind enough to accede to the wishes of the House to the extent of 95 per cent. I think they can accede to the wishes of the House to the extent of the remaining five per cent. by accepting the amendment and give full satisfaction to the House. The Honourable the Finance Member said that he would never go against the wishes of the select committee. The select committee has decided that the status quo should be maintained. I do not think that it would be proper for the Government to refuse to accept this amendment, which would be against the declared aim of the Honourable the Finance Member.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The select committee has decided that the rate should remain as it is in the Bill now before the House.

Rao Bahadur D. R. PATIL: I beg to correct myself. The original duty was 6 annas, and the select committee decided by a majority that it should be raised to Rs. 15. I would like to correct myself in that respect.

Sir, a relief under sub-section (c) of section 7 of the court-fees act is generally asked for by agriculturists, and my honourable friends Mr. Gokhale and Rao Bahadur Chitale will bear me out in this respect, as they have been practising for a long time. That being the case, if the duty is raised, the agriculturists will suffer. It is the object of Government that taxation should fall on broad shoulders. In the interests of the agriculturists I think Government will come forward to accept this amendment. So far as the electricity duty is concerned, we know very well that it will fall upon broad shoulders, and therefore we supported it. Now, it is in the fitness of things that Government should be inclined to accede to the wishes of the members on this side, so far as this amendment is concerned.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Sir, I am sorry I cannot accept this amendment. If you will refer to page 38 of the Court-fees Act, to obtain a declaratory decree or order where no consequential relief is sought, the stamp is Rs. 15. Now, here is a suit which not only seeks for a declaration but also asks for further relief, and advantage is taken of this. Every practising pleader knows that the suit can be so worded that some consequential relief is added by way of injunction or some such thing, and to get over the difficulty of Rs. 15, a six-anna stamp is fixed. These are the suits which trouble the courts most. If you want a declaration of your title, you also want an injunction, and a suit of this kind is fought over for three months and sometimes 6 months. In the Bill as originally drafted the minimum fee was Rs. 15 in all cases. When it was pointed out to me that in some cases it may work as a hardship, I said "All right; it does look as if in some cases it will work a hardship" and I deleted all that from the original Bill, and only added this to clause (c). I submit that it is a proper amendment which the select committee has made.

Rao Bahadur D. R. PATIL (East Khandesh District): Sir, the Honourable the Finance Member stated that in some cases under clause (c), sometimes complicated questions arise, and the court has to deal with them, and it takes a long time. But suppose a man brings a suit on a promissory note of Rs. 10,000, why is he made to pay a high court fee on Rs. 10,000, though the court disposes of the suit in a very short time? What about that?

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: I do not want to add anything to what I have already said.

Khan Bahadur M. A. KHUHRO: Sir, I beg to move the following amendment:

In clause 12 (b), for the word "fifteen" substitute the word "five."

I move this amendment by way of a compromise. I agree with the view that 6 annas is ridiculously low. Several times, these suits are very contested and they take up much of the time of the court. As explained by the Honourable the Finance Member, it is really very hard that these cases should take up so much time of the court and the parties concerned get off cheaply by the payment of a fee of only 6 annas. On the other hand, I submit it is not fair that from 6 annas Government should at once jump up to Rs. 15 straightway. In some cases it will really work adversely, because sometimes there are suits, of course very rarely, when the value of the property is very small. In that case if the rate is fixed at Rs. 15 it will operate very harshly on the people concerned. Under these circumstances, Sir, I think, as a via media, this figure of Rs. 5 would be fair for both sides. I do hope that Government as well as this House will accept my amendment. Five rupees is very reasonable by way of compromise. I hope it will be supported unanimously.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The amendment practically amounts to substituting the word "five" for "fifteen".

Question proposed.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Sir, I accept it.

Question put, and agreed to.

Clause 12, as amended, ordered to stand part of the Bill.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Before we proceed to the next clause, I may point out to the House that canvassing is not allowed within the precincts of this House. I had occasion to give this warning a few sessions back and honourable members abided by that. There is every facility for canvassing outside this hall in the lobby. I hope there will not be many divisions hereafter, but, if there are, honourable members, if they wish to canvass, should do it in the lobby. At the same time, I may suggest that divisions should not be asked for on questions which do not signify the assertion of a principle.

Clause 13 (Amendment of Schedule I to VII of 1870.)

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Sir, I have an amendment to that clause.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Two amendments.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: The amendment to the schedule is consequential. I move—

"In Part III, clause 13, schedule I, for the words 'Twelve rupees and eight annas' occurring in column 3 against article 1, substitute the words 'Fifteen rupees'."

In the original Bill, it was as follows—

"When such amount or value exceeds five thousand rupees, for every two hundred and fifty rupees, or part thereof, in excess of five thousand rupees, up to ten thousand rupees .. .. Fifteen rupees."

The select committee has put in "Twelve rupees and eight annas" in place of "Fifteen rupees." Now, my reasons for seeking to restore "Fifteen rupees" are these. The Bill, as it was drafted, wanted to raise the ad valorem fees for suits above Rs. 1,000. The select committee has omitted all changes made up to Rs. 10,000. My submission to the honourable House is, if any change is to be made, it has to be made in the interests of the poor and lower middle classes. How many poor persons are there who are sued for amounts of more than Rs. 5,000? You are aware, Sir, that uptil very recently Rs. 5,000 was the limit for a second class subjudge's jurisdiction, and suits above Rs. 5,000 were suits of special jurisdiction. So, by making this change, we are only making a change in the fees payable on suits of special jurisdiction. You will notice from the amendments made to the schedule, that no attempt is made to restore the fees fixed in the original Bill. It is only above Rs. 5,000 that a corresponding change is made. Whereas in the original Bill the fee for Rs. 5,250 was Rs. 390, under this amendment it will be only Rs. 290, and in place of Rs. 405 in the original Bill, it will be Rs. 305 under the amendment. Every Rs. 250 above Rs. 5,000 is sought to be charged at Rs. 15 instead of Rs. 12-8-0. I urge that the honourable House should accept this change. We have given up all changes from Rs. 1,000 to Rs. 5,000. There is no reason why people who are well-to-do and are involved in suits of special jurisdiction should not pay this small enhancement.

This amendment and the amendment to the table of rates of ad valorem fees will probably go together, because the one follows the other. If my amendment is accepted, then the schedule should be corrected.

Question proposed.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: The other amendment to the table of rates of ad valorem fees may also be put as a consequential amendment. If this is accepted, the second one is accepted automatically.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I would wait for that.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE (Poona City): Sir, it will be seen that the Select Committee has reduced the rate from Rs. 15 to Rs. 12-8-0. Now, the Honourable the Finance Member wants to go back on what the Select Committee has done and wants to increase the amount from Rs. 12-8-0 to Rs. 15. The court-fees are being increased from year to year. In fact, in the original Court-fees Act it was Rs. 10. Subsequently, from Rs. 10 it was increased to Rs. 12-8-0. Government again wanted to increase it to Rs. 15, but the Select Committee wanted to stick to the amount of Rs. 12-8-0 and that is what they have done. The argument which the honourable member Rao Bahadur Patil advanced as regards the opinion of the Select Committee applies in this case very well. The Select Committee is a select committee. It is well selected, and the views of all persons are before the Select Committee. The Select Committee consists of members selected by the Honourable the Finance Member and nobody else——

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: By the House.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE: By the House at the instance of the Honourable the Finance Member, and his voice is paramount in this matter. It is his own selection. And that Select Committee has stated that the fee should be Rs. 12-8-0. Is it fair that that amount should be increased again?

There is one more point that I ought to mention. No doubt the jurisdiction of second class sub-judges was at one time Rs. 5,000 and now it has been increased because the value of money has decreased. What was Rs. 5,000 is less than Rs. 5,000 now in terms of money. It was for this reason that the jurisdiction of second class sub-judges was increased, and it is for this reason also, I think that the Select Committee has selected this figure of Rs. 12-8-0.

There is another point. It is not true that only rich men are concerned in suits of Rs. 10,000 and over. In very many cases agriculturists who grow sugarcane are concerned in these suits. In the majority of cases in the mofussil, so far as I know, the litigants are agriculturists with lands and crops on those lands. The crops sometimes are valued at Rs. 10,000 and the land is valued at Rs. 2,000. It is such cases which generally come under the jurisdiction of Rs. 10,000. I do not think it will be fair to say that it is only the rich man who is to be affected. If the Honourable the Finance Member had said that agriculturists were to be excluded from this levy, that would have been something. But he has not tried to make any distinction. The principle is there. Therefore this increase will affect the agriculturists. As has been said in this House often, whoever pays the court-fee in the first instance, ultimately in cases of bonds, promissory notes and such other claims, the decree is in favour of the creditor and invariably against the debtor. The Court, in passing the decree, generally awards costs from the defendant. So the Government wants to fill its coffers from the poor purse of the agriculturist who is the debtor. It has not been laid down that the agriculturist is to be exempted from the payment of court-fee. Of course the creditor is always ready to pay whatever amount is demanded, whether it be Rs. 15 or Rs. 12-8-0, because he knows that he will recover it ultimately from his debtor. That is why this affects the agriculturists. I do not think the times are such as to justify an increase of taxation by leaps and bounds. These are times of depression. I do not think the prices have increased and the people are happy. Therefore, Government will do well to adopt the rate recommended by the Select Committee.

As regards the subsequent items, after Rs. 10,000, the fee is Rs. 22-8-0. Nobody has complained about that increase. Therefore, looking to the commonsense view which the House has taken in regard to greater amounts, I hope Government will be pleased to accept the recommendation of the Select Committee.

Rao Bahadur D. R. PATIL (East Khandesh District): Sir, I oppose the amendment before the House for the simple reason that the members of the Select Committee belonging to the various parties have carefully considered and come to the conclusion that the Court-fees on amounts up to Rs. 10,000 should not be raised at all as that would affect the interests of the poor agriculturists. The Honourable the Finance Member says that the agriculturists are not affected when suits of such high value are brought. There are certain honourable members who belong to legal profession here and I am sure that I shall be corroborated by them when I say that in the mofussil—I am not talking of the High Court—in the mofussil courts in the cases referred to above the majority of defendants are agriculturists. In recent years the jurisdiction of some of the sub-judges has been increased from Rs. 5,000 to Rs. 7,500. In these Courts too the majority of the defendants are agriculturists. The first class subordinate Judges try cases above Rs. 5,000 or Rs. 7,500. I do not want to help the rich people but the poor people. So far as the agriculturists are concerned, I think their interests ought to be safeguarded, and as the honourable member Mr. Gokhale has also said that in the majority of cases suits up to Rs. 10,000 affect the agriculturists as defendants. That is the opinion of the practising pleaders, and I am certain I shall be supported by the other honourable members who belong to the legal profession. If that is the real state of affairs, I think Government is not justified in raising the Court-fees. I may say that when the Court-fees were raised last time, the people complained about it, and I actually found that the agriculturists suffered very much on account of the increase. Those increased fees have been still increased. We are in favour of the status quo being maintained, and that is the view of an overwhelming majority of the Select Committee. In these circumstances, it will be quite proper on the part of Government to respect the wishes of the members of the Select Committee. I request the Honourable the Finance Member to withdraw his amendment.

Mr. V. N. JOG (Dharwar District): Sir, with regard to this amendment, I submit that there is no reason why particularly people who come to courts with suits of Rs. 5,000 up to Rs. 10,000 should bear an additional burden. I shall be more clear. You will be pleased to see, Sir, that in the Schedule all other rates are retained as they were and only the rate of duty for suits of Rs. 5,000 up to Rs. 10,000 is changed and raised. I cannot understand why the same principle has not been followed. Formerly, when the Act of 1870 was in force, only Rs. 10 was charged as duty for these suits. But in the Act of 1926 the duty was raised to Rs. 12-8-0. The principle as observed in fixing the fees is to begin with the highest rate and to come down. It is 7·8 per hundred as the schedule shows. Now, you will see that when the amount or value of the plaint, etc., exceeds one thousand rupees, for every one hundred rupees, or part thereof, in excess of one thousand rupees, up to five thousand rupees, the duty is reduced and brought down to Rs. 5. It was intended to be raised to Rs. 7-8-0 but the Select Committee reduced it to Rs. 5. By the amendment the same ascending scale has been sought to be maintained, namely for every two hundred and fifty rupees, or part thereof, in excess of Rs. 5,000, the duty is Rs. 12-8-0 because as you go down, you will find when such amount or value exceeds ten thousand rupees, for every five hundred rupees, or part thereof, in excess of ten thousand rupees, up to twenty thousand rupees Rs. 22-8-0 is fixed. It will be about Rs. 4-8-0 per hundred. Thus we find that instead of the scale of fees going up as the amount goes up, the scale comes down in all other items but between 5,000-6,000, the scale is raised only in the middle to 6 per cent. having once come down to 5. I therefore say that no principle has been followed in drafting this schedule. I cannot understand why the people who are involved in suits of Rs. 5,000 up to Rs. 10,000 should be made to pay higher. I therefore submit that the rate should be brought down to Rs. 12-8-0 as proposed by the Select Committee and then there would be a uniform principle. With these remarks, I oppose the amendment.

Mr. G. WILES: Sir, I wish to bring back the discussion to the point at which we started, that this is a Finance Bill, designed to bring in money. Honourable members seem to have forgotten what the amendments already made in the Finance Bill have cost us. I estimate that the changes which have been made hitherto in the House and by the select committee have cost us no less than ten lakhs already out of the estimate put before you. An estimate of the loss we shall suffer from this recommendation of the select committee to exclude suits between Rs. 1,000 and Rs. 10,000 is no less than five lakhs. The amendment which the Honourable the Finance Member has now proposed to you will save something out of that.

It is not quite true, as my honourable friend Mr. Jog said, that no principle has been followed in making these recommendations. He has overlooked the fact that in the year 1926 suits of Rs. 10,000 and above were raised but that suits of Rs. 5,000 and below were not touched, so that the fees which are now proposed by the select committee are the fees which have been in existence for about 50 years.

I would also just draw attention to the fact that even under the Act of 1922, which was in force for four years till it was superseded by the Act of 1926, the rates throughout were far higher than the rates which have been proposed in the original Bill. Whereas on Rs. 5,000, the institution fees were Rs. 275 under the Act of 1926 and were proposed to be raised to Rs. 375 in the original Bill, they were no less than Rs. 394 under the Act of 1922 which was in force for four years. The fees on suits of Rs. 10,000 during the years 1922 to 1926 were Rs. 694. They have now been reduced to Rs. 525, and it was proposed to raise them to Rs. 675, considerably less than the figure at which they stood during the four years.

I trust that the honourable House will not, by refusing to accept this amendment, whittle down yet further the estimates which we expected to get from this Finance Bill.

Rao Bahadur G. K. CHITALE (Ahmednagar District): Sir, I do not accept the argument that this Finance Bill should be accepted in a way other than that which has been accepted by the select committee. The select committee, which is a small committee of this House and which is accepted by the Honourable the Finance Member, looks into all questions, the pros and cons, and there a regular debate goes on, with the result that certain compromises are reached. If in the select committee there was a give and take on certain other matters also, I do not think it is fair for the Honourable the Finance Member, after pocketing the taxation bill of this kind, to come forward against the wishes of the select committee and ask for something more than what has been accepted by that committee. But apart from that question, I am looking at it from a detached point of view and it is this, is the contention of the Honourable the Finance Member right that the litigation for suits of Rs. 5,000 and Rs. 10,000 really causes more trouble and occupies more time of the judicial officers? From my experience, which is pretty large, for the last 35 years of all the suits, whether they are tried by the First Class Subordinate Judge or the Second Class Subordinate Judge—after all jurisdiction does not much matter—the least trouble which the judicial courts feel is about these suits for higher and higher amounts. There the points of contention are very few indeed because they are usually written in documents which are usually registered. After the registration of documents, the defendants, poor fellows, are bound by the recitals and always and usually the burden is on them to show that the contents of those documents are not real—usually they do not succeed—and therefore if Government is to be paid for the labour which their officers bestow on those particular kinds of suits as the Honourable the Finance Member said as regards the cases of easements and declaratory suits (which contention and which suits require a lot of labour and energy), if that is so, if that principle is sound, I say in such suits if that principle is taken into consideration, there is no case whatsoever as to why a higher fee should be paid. The honourable member the Finance Secretary's argument is that somehow we want money. Let it be said bluntly, let no attempt be made to put it on the higher basis of equity or reasonableness. I can understand the argument "It does not matter how we take it, we want to take it as meekly as possible but if you do not pay it, we will take it by force and if this taxation bill is not given, we will bring in another, a third and a fourth." As that is not possible, usually the Government of course brings in these bills in rather a bloated form. They know that the House is not likely to swallow these pills though sugar-coated in that particular manner. So, always they put the taxation at a higher pitch, knowing that some concessions will have to be made either in the select committee or in the open House. So, the argument of the honourable member the Finance Secretary that "we really wanted so much and you have not given us that" does not appeal to me. They knew when they brought forward this taxation proposal that even with the greatest hopes, the Bills would not be passed in the form or shape in which they brought them. They knew it perfectly well. What concessions to make is a point of practical politics and as practical politicians, they have taken whatever they could in the select committee and the select committee has stood them in good stead—they should thank their own stars that the select committee has been able to give them at least so much with contentment—and therefore, Sir, the point that I am making is that really a large bulk of litigation which comes between suits for Rs. 5,000 and Rs. 10,000 affects the poorer classes. It affects the poorer classes as I tell you from my own experience in the districts that out of the suits which are not very many—may be about 100—90 per cent. you might take it are against agriculturists or people who are in very bad circumstances. You will find, Sir, as the result of the depression for the last four years, these people have been passing promissory notes not exceeding Rs. 5,000. It is not to the interest also of the sowkars to bring in suits all at once because they have to pay the court-fee. Naturally, therefore, the sowkars are satisfied if their debtors give them some security and also a bond, so that they will be bound down hand and foot in a court of law. So then they wait and meanwhile the interest is of course added. After that, when the decree is passed, surely the costs will fall as a matter of course on the debtors. How is it that they can escape, how can it be argued for a moment that however exorbitant the costs may be in the form of additional court-fee, that they would be paid in the first instance by the creditors and in the last instance—which matters most as it comes out of the pockets of the poor man who is sued and who stands as the defendant. There is therefore no substance in the argument "Oh, these people are fat, these people are rich people and therefore this fee is proper, equitable or reasonable". Therefore, I should think that the fee which has been now accepted by the select committee should stand at that figure and the amendment should be thrown out.

Mr. HAJI MIR MAHOMED BALOCH (Karachi City) (Addressed the House in Urdu): Mr. President, the members of the select committee appointed by this House have already raised the fee by 12½ per cent. Now, the Honourable the Finance Member wants that it should be further increased to 15 per cent. The cost of litigation is getting very heavy and the parties are put to a great deal of expenditure. Some suits drag on for three years. The party concerned has to leave his legitimate occupation and devote his time to the several stages of litigation in the different courts, thus losing the income from his occupation. Over and above this, he has to pay the lawyer's fees, court-fees, fees for the copies of documents and much other expenditure he has to incur. The cost of litigation should be as low as possible, so that justice may be within the easy reach of the poor. If we offered to co-operate with Government at the present crisis for finding the necessary money it does not mean that we should be asked to vote any proposal that the Honourable the Finance Member may bring. Our co-operation must be confined to reasonable limits. That the tax will fall on the rich and will not affect the poor is no convincing argument. I hope the Honourable the Finance Member will withdraw his amendment and accept the proposal of the select committee.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Sir, honourable members went on referring to the proceedings of the select committee and gave to the House what took place there. As a reference has already been made, I may also refer to it. My honourable friend Mr. Jog was in the select committee. He was for raising the fees for claims over Rs. 5,000.

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN: Sir, no reference was made in this House as to what a particular member did in the select committee, and reference to such details should be prohibited.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: I have got the proceedings of the select committee in my hands.

Mr. V. N. JOG: No. I suggested the same fees as before as a compromise up to Rs. 5,000. See the voting. I voted in favour of the reduction. I said: "You begin with the highest and come below——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: That is not proper. The select committee proceedings should not be brought before the House.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: I bow to your ruling, Sir. Honourable members seem to think that this is a very great change. What is the net effect? According to the Bill as it was originally introduced, the fee was Rs. 390 for a claim of Rs. 5,250 and now it has been reduced to Rs. 290. There is a reduction of Rs. 100. If the House carefully looks into the schedule I have given, they will find that there is a decrease not only up to Rs. 10,000 but right up to the highest amount. We are seeking to raise Rs. 2-8-0 for every Rs. 250 above Rs. 5,000. It is urged by honourable members that it is a very heavy increase. The honourable member the Finance Secretary has already pointed out that far higher fees were in existence, with the sanction of the House, from 1922 to 1926. The Bill as framed was diluted and considerably more so by the amendment. I have reduced it actually by Rs. 100. I hope this House will be well advised in accepting my amendment.

DISCUSSION ON THE FINANCE BILL—resumed.

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN (Nasik District): Sir, I move:

"In Part III, Schedule I, clause 11, second column, 1st paragraph, substitute 'ten thousand' and omit 2nd paragraph in the second and third column."

If we refer to page 55, we find that under the Bill as it has emerged from the select committee, the rate for probate on properties worth Rs. 1,000 to Rs. 5,000 is 2 per cent.; from Rs. 5,000 to Rs. 10,000 2½ per cent. Previously the rate for properties worth Rs. 1,000 to Rs. 10,000 was 2 per cent. I do not know why the rate for properties worth from Rs. 5,000 to Rs. 10,000 has been increased. In spite of the assurance given to us by the honourable member the Finance Secretary and the Honourable the Finance Member that this is a Finance Bill which will introduce sources which will give more taxation, there is not the least idea of reducing the present tax. But we find in paragraph 11, there are several items where the duty has actually been reduced. It is only for properties from Rs. 5,000 to Rs. 10,000 that the duty has been increased. If probate is to be taken on a property worth two lakhs of rupees before the 31st of March 1932, a man will have to pay Rs. 1,050 more. But if he takes out a probate on the same property after the 31st of March 1932 he will save Rs. 1,050. May I ask if this is meant by a finance bill? On the contrary, if a man takes out a probate on a property worth Rs. 10,000 before the 31st of March he will have to pay Rs. 180. If he takes out a probate on the 1st of April, he will have to pay Rs. 205. As far as the smaller properties are concerned, the bill seeks to increase the tax by approximately 13 per cent. As for the bigger properties like the one mentioned above the duty has been reduced by 17 per cent. I do not understand why a taxation Bill has been introduced with these details. We have been often told that taxation should fall on broad shoulders. In this particular case it has fallen on weak and imperfect shoulders. I do not know whether there was any representation to Government that the duty on big properties should be reduced. At any rate, this side of the House is not aware of any such representation. The position is clear. I for one think that the Bill must have been drafted by some one whose property is worth lakhs and lakhs of rupees. He seeks to reduce tax on his property and is probably prepared to tax poorer people to make up deficit caused by this reduction. That must be the only reason. Perhaps he wishes that the duty on big properties should be reduced and the burden shoved on poor shoulders. I do not blame anyone for that. The draftsman of the Bill must have thought of the principle that "charity begins at home."

[Rao Bahadur G. V. Pradhan]

It might be stated that the probate and letters of administration duties will affect only the presidency town. That may be stated over and over again. That is not correct. As a matter of fact probate and letters of administration are absolutely necessary in Bombay; whereas in the mofussil they are not necessary for certain communities. We shall be presented with a Bill No. 2 of 1932 which will make it necessary in the mofussil also. So far as the probate and letters of administration duties are concerned the elected portion of the House must remember that only last December, we threw out a bill of a similar nature as not being applicable to the mofussil. The Government failed and every time they fail they will bring it again and again. The schedule that will be fixed to-day may apply automatically to the villages and towns later on. So, the duties that will fall on the poor shoulders must not be allowed to increase. I feel certain that this House will help me in carrying through this amendment.

Question proposed.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Sir, I will explain at this stage why the changes have been made. I will put before the House, if they want to go back to the original duties, what further changes must be made.

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN: I have also given notice of an amendment that the original schedule should be brought into force.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: When the changes were made, the original duties were 3 per cent., 4 per cent. and 5 per cent. When it was changed into 3½, 4½ and 5½, naturally the amounts had to be split up. It is not a question of the man who drafted the Bill having a large property. It is a question of equitable arrangement as regards the levying of duty. If it is the desire of the honourable House that the duty of 2 per cent. should be restored up to Rs. 10,000, I request them to restore the old rate up to one lakh of rupees. Government should not be hit both ways. If the House wants that 2 per cent. should be maintained up to Rs. 10,000, then the duty from Rs. 10,000 to Rs. 50,000 should be 3 per cent. and from Rs. 50,000 to Rs. 1,00,000 should be 4 per cent. Above that the changes will remain. But I may inform the House that we have now arranged the duties in an equitable way. If it is the desire of the honourable House, I will move an amendment to this amendment. It will be as follows: Up to Rs. 10,000 the duty will be 2 per cent.; the second paragraph will go; the third paragraph will remain; in the fourth paragraph in the last column, it will be 4 per cent. instead of 3½ per cent.; the fifth paragraph will go; and from one lakh to two lakhs the duty will be 4½ per cent. The other changes will remain. If that is acceptable to the House, I have no objection.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Under the amendment proposed to the amendment,—

(1) the first item will be amended as proposed in the amendment;
(2) the second item will be omitted;
(3) the third item will remain as it is;

[The President]

(4) the fourth item will remain, with a change in the third column from "three and a half" into "four";

(5) the fifth item will be omitted;

(6) and the sixth item will read thus:—

"When the amount or value of the property in respect of which the grant of probate or letters is made exceeds one lakh of rupees, on the part of the amount or value in excess of one lakh, up to two lakhs of rupees....Four and a half per centum."

Amendment to the amendment put, and agreed to.

Amendment, as amended, put, and agreed to.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Sir, honourable members are aware that yesterday my amendment to clause 13 was accepted by the House. So a consequential amendment has got to be made in the figures. To effect that, I move—

Part III, Clause 13, Schedule I .. In the table of rates of ad valorem fees leviable on the institution of suits, for the figures mentioned in column 1 below substitute the figures respectively shown against each in column 2:—

Rao Bahadur D. R. PATIL (East Khandesh District): Sir, I beg to move:

"In Schedule II, sub-clauses (aa), (bb) and (cc) shall be omitted."

Sir, in the original Bill the stamp duties on these were eight annas, one rupee and two rupees respectively. The select committee have reduced these to four annas, eight annas, and one rupee. But I beg to submit that under section 86 of the Land Revenue Code suits are brought by landlords against the tenants who cultivate their lands, that is to say, against agriculturists. If I am right, formerly there was no stamp duty on petitions or applications to the Collector under the Land Revenue Code. These are new additions. If I am wrong, the Honourable the Finance Member will correct me. They are altogether new additions. Landlords file suits against their tenants as I have said, and the amounts do not usually exceed Rs. 300 or Rs. 400. In such cases there was no duty before. I hope the Honourable the Finance Member will be kind enough to see that no additional burden is put upon poor shoulders. In cases under section 86 of the Land Revenue Code, it is poor tenants who are involved. They find it very difficult to pay their rents to the landlords. It will therefore be a great hardship on these poor people if any additional burden is imposed on them. That is my submission and thus I move the amendment.

[Rao Bahadur D. R. Patil]

Question proposed.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Sir, I do not think the honourable member is correct in saying that no stamp was affixed on these applications or petitions. There was a one anna stamp to be paid, and afterwards when the schedule was revised it was two annas stamp. I think they must be affixing a stamp of two annas now. No doubt, clauses (aa), (bb) and (cc) are being newly introduced, in order to make it clear that applications or petitions presented to revenue courts should have stamps affixed to them. At the same time, I admit that this duty does fall upon the tenants, because ultimately the tenants have to pay the cost. However, I am not prepared to omit the duty altogether. If the honourable member thinks that eight annas and one rupee are too much, I am prepared to have four annas in the case of all.

Rao Bahadur D. R. PATIL: I accept it, Sir.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: I beg to move:

To the amendment proposed, the following be substituted—

"In clause 14, Schedule II, paragraph (aa), omit the words 'in relation to any case in which the amount or value of the subject matter is less than fifty rupees,' and omit paragraphs (bb) and (cc) with the figures shown in column 3 against each of these paragraphs."

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN: I have not filed any suits of this type in the revenue courts. But will it be ascertained by the Honourable the Finance Member?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Ascertain what?

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN: What duty is paid at present. I am told at present it is eight annas on these applications.

Rao Bahadur B. R. NAIK: It may be at Nasik; in other places it is only two annas.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: So far as I know, the stamp for an application to a revenue officer was at one time one anna and it was raised to two annas. After all, these suits take some time of the court, and four annas is very reasonable.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The point raised by the honourable member Rao Bahadur Pradhan is that it is eight annas now, and the amendment will reduce it to four annas.

Rao Bahadur D. R. PATIL: That is not so: it is not eight annas now.

Amendment to the amendment put, and agreed to.

Amendment, as amended, put, and agreed to.

Clause 14, as amended, ordered to stand part of the Bill.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: There are amendments to this clause standing in the name of Rao Bahadur Patil. I do not know if he is moving the first.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: I beg to submit, Sir, that we have made no change whatever.

Rao Bahadur D. R. PATIL: I am not moving the first, Sir. But I move the amendment relating to "Divorce."

"In clause 15, article 29 of the Schedule, for 'Five rupees', 'One rupee' shall be substituted."

Perhaps the Honourable the Finance Member does not know that in the mofussil, especially among the backward classes such as Kunbis, Muhammadans, Depressed Classes and other people, unfortunately, the custom of divorce exists. And sometimes it so happens, as everybody knows, that the husband and wife do not pull on well together and have to separate. We find this generally among the lower classes. And we know that among the classes amongst whom this custom prevails, the people are very poor! The duty formerly was Re. 1. That is sought to be increased to Rs. 5.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: It was Rs. 2 and not Re. 1.

Rao Bahadur D. R. PATIL: All right, let us have a duty of Rs. 2. I do not mind, because, Sir, it is our object to see that the taxation does not fall harshly upon poor shoulders.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The old rate was Re. 1 and not Rs. 2.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: I have got the Stamp Act. The duty is Rs. 2.

Rao Bahadur D. R. PATIL: Sir, divorce deeds are excluded in the mofussil and I am sure that I shall be supported in this view by those honourable members who belong to the mofussil.

Rao Bahadur G. K. CHITALE: I will not support you.

Rao Bahadur D. R. PATIL: Of course divorce is not permissible among the class to which my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Chitale belongs, so he does not care whether the fee is increased or decreased. That is perhaps the ground on which he is going to oppose my amendment. Whatever that may be, the point is that the tax should not fall on poor shoulders. We find that among Bhils, Kolis, Malis, Wadars and others who are poor people this custom of divorce exists. The honourable member Rao Bahadur Chitale does not know about that. I hope that the Honourable the Finance Member will be pleased to accept my amendment, and if he is not prepared to accept the rate which I have proposed, viz. Re. 1, let him at least be kind enough to retain the old rate.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The honourable member can put his amendment in that form. I give him the necessary permission.

Rao Bahadur D. R. PATIL: All right, Sir. I shall amend it as required. In view of the fact that we have been reasonable in accepting the taxation proposals of the Finance Member and have thus co-operated with Government, I hope the Finance Member will accept my amendment and co-operate with us, in this item which is the last.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The amendment moved is:

"In Clause 15 of the Schedule, article 29, for 'five rupees', 'two rupees' shall be substituted."

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: I may bring to the notice of this House the fact that in the Punjab, United Provinces,

[Sir Govindrao Pradhan]

Bengal, Madras, Assam and everywhere it is Rs. 5. A person who wishes to have the luxury of discarding one wife and marrying another should, I think, be made to pay Rs. 5. He is prepared to spend on his second marriage. He wants to get rid of one wife; so let him pay Rs. 5. It is not a very unreasonable demand.

Rao Bahadur G. K. CHITALE (Ahmednagar District): Mr. President, I oppose the motion of my honourable friend on the ground that amongst a large number of people no divorce is allowed. It is a very good rule no doubt. Even amongst the higher Marathas and other classes, divorce is usually not allowed. It is only amongst a few classes who are not governed by our laws. This is the case among the wild tribes and others for whom my friend is feeling. They do not recognise our laws regarding stamp duty. They can divorce their wives as freely and they can take new ones as freely as they like.

I do not agree that poor people indulge in divorce. It is rather the richer people amongst the poor classes who indulge in this luxury of divorcing one wife and taking another, and they must be penalised. I would agree to the duty being even Rs. 50. They spend on liquor parties and other luxuries on the occasions of marriage to an enormous extent. In these circumstances, I must co-operate with Government at least once, and I think the provision made by Government quite proper.

Mr. G. S. GANGOLI (Kanara District): Sir, I oppose the amendment moved by the honourable member Rao Bahadur Patil. The honourable member in his anxiety to co-operate encourages a married couple to non-co-operate with each other. We are opposed to the encouragement of such a thing.

Mr. HAJI MIR MAHOMED BALOCH (in Urdu): On a point of information, Sir. May I know whether this duty is compulsory in the case of Muhammadans?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: It is not compulsory. But if they wish to rely on the divorce record in a court of law, it will be necessary.

Mr. HAJI MIR MAHOMED BALOCH (in Urdu): Some time after if a divorce case goes to a court, will the payment of this fee be compulsory?

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: No.

Rao Bahadur S. N. ANGADI (Belgaum District): Mr. President, I beg to support the amendment of the honourable member Rao Bahadur Dongarsing Patil, because he is speaking for a very large number of people amongst whom this custom of divorce prevails. It is true, as was pointed out, that there are people who want to indulge in the luxury of marrying a new wife and discarding the old one. That sort of thing must be punished, but all the same, since my honourable friend is very anxious about a very large section of people amongst whom this custom prevails, I think the duty ought to be restored to Rs. 2. If not, it should not be raised to more than Rs. 3.

Rao Bahadur D. R. PATIL: I am sorry, Sir, to see that this matter is being treated very lightly by some of the honourable members———

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The honourable member himself gave it that start. [Laughter.]

Rao Bahadur D. R. PATIL: If the Chair takes that view, I am really sorry. I may tell this honourable House that so far as my community is concerned, there is no custom of divorce amongst us, so I do not mind if the duty is increased to any amount. But there is a class of persons which is really a poor class and the custom of divorce prevails in that class. Those people do not divorce for the sake of pleasure, as my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Chitale made out. I do not know whether he knows about this pleasure personally, but so far as the poorer classes are concerned, they resort to divorce not for the sake of pleasure, but they do so by force of circumstances. Nobody would like to part with his wife unless he is compelled to do so———

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: How is all this relevant—as to why a man resorts to a divorce? There might be one hundred and one reasons, and the honourable member is repeating the argument which he has already placed before the House.

Rao Bahadur D. R. PATIL: I am not repeating the argument, Sir. I am replying to what the honourable member Rao Bahadur Chitale said. I never said what I said just now. So there is no question of repetition. The question is, when there is such a custom prevalent and when the people who want divorce have to execute these documents, we are to see whether they belong to the rich class or the poor class. If the Honourable the Finance Member thinks that the class which will be affected by this high duty will be the rich class, then I don't mind. But my experience is that in the mofussil the people among whom the custom of divorce prevails are very poor and require relief in the stamp duty. Take the case of the Wadar or Mahar who earns 4 annas per day. Whenever he has to get a divorce a deed of divorce is executed in many a case, though of course it is not quite compulsory. When such is the case, the duty will act very harshly on such poor people. With the object of giving these people some relief, I move the amendment.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: I have nothing more to add, Sir.

Question put, and negatived.

Clause 15 ordered to stand part of the Bill.

Clause 16 (Extent of Part V):

This Part extends to the cities of Bombay, Ahmedabad, Poona and Karachi only.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The honourable member Mr. Baloch's 3 amendments seeking to delete clauses 16, 17 and 18 altogether are out of order. The honourable member may speak on the clauses and oppose them, but the amendments seeking to delete the clauses are not in order. Clause 16 is now before the House. That clause seeks to extend Part V (stamp duties on certain instruments) to the cities of Bombay, Ahmedabad, Poona and Karachi only. That was a matter of principle. The honourable member may now oppose it when it is before the House.

Mr. HAJI MIR MAHOMED BALOCH: I oppose it.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: When it is put to the House he can oppose it. What is it that the honourable member wishes to say?

Mr. HAJI MIR MAHOMED BALOCH (Karachi City) (Addressed the House in Urdu): I rise to oppose this clause which seeks to extend these special duties to only four cities in the Presidency. They have taken in Bombay, Karachi, Ahmedabad and Poona. In due course, other cities also will be roped in. So, the representatives of others cities need not be under the impression that they will escape this taxation. In Sind, Hyderabad, Larkana, Mirpurkhas or Sukkur will all have this duty increased for the simple reason that the Government is going from bad to worse every year in the matter of finances and unfortunately they cannot and do not think of any other source of raising revenue except fresh taxation, fresh taxation and fresh taxation. The people in Bombay Presidency already pay taxes to the Government of India in the shape of income tax, other taxes to the Bombay Government, municipal taxes and it looks as if these people earn money only to pay it over into the coffers of Government, never mind if their wives and children have to starve. For all these reasons I think I should oppose this amendment and I hope the whole non-official side of this House will join hands in throwing out this proposal.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE (Poona City): Clauses 16, 17 and 18 go together, and you know, Sir, amendments have been put in to clause 18. So, I will not deal with that at this stage.

Sir, the scheme of this part V is somewhat peculiar. In this part the cities of Bombay, Ahmedabad, Poona and Karachi are given special treatment; the rest of the presidency is divided and only four towns or cities are selected for special treatment and that treatment pertains to three things namely, (1) Conveyances, (2) Settlement and (3) Transfers of Leases.

At this stage I rise only to draw the attention of the honourable members of this House who do not belong to these four towns to consider the situation so far as these four towns are concerned. What is done now is that the duty which will be leviable on a conveyance or a settlement or a lease transfer will be less than what it will be in these four towns. So, probably it may be thought by those honourable members who do not belong to these four towns that they have no concern with this part V or with this amendment of this Bill. I want them not to take that view, Sir. It has been suggested by the honourable member Mr. Baloch that it is a thin end of the wedge and once the Government sees that these four towns have quietly, or at least this honourable House has, accepted the increased duty in these four cities, the next question will be, what is there to distinguish Poona from Sholapur and Surat from Ahmedabad or Belgaum from Poona or Surat. In this way, Sir, probably every town in the presidency will be covered in due course of time by this increase of duty. That increase of duty is tremendous, beyond all proportion. I will not go into the details now because when we deal with clause 18, we shall have to compare the different increases in duties, but I may say without fear of contradiction that the duty increase is abnormal, Sir. I do not find really such a heavy duty levied in any other province in India. India is making progress and Bombay is going to make that progress faster than any other province as regards taxation. I do not really see what has induced the Bombay

Government to take this exceptional step and to increase this taxation abnormally. So my submission to this House is that if we oppose this clause, then the other clauses—clause 18 and sub-clauses—will not be before us. If we throw out by a vote this Part V, which extends to Bombay, Poona, Ahmedabad and Karachi, then there is no extension to these four cities and consequently there is no fear of any extension so far as we are now concerned to any other part of the presidency. That will be the natural consequence. My honourable friend Rao Bahadur Pradhan tells me I am wrong. I hope I am not wrong. I know I am not wrong. If we throw out clause 16, then we can similarly deal with clause 17 and clause 18. I want the honourable House to oppose all these three clauses one after another so that it will not be necessary to distinguish and to create a sort of a division. I do not want to say that in making this special provision for these four towns there is a policy of divide and rule as they say. It is nothing of the sort I know. It is the same rule. It is a policy of strong commonsense and taking people in in a peculiar way. As I said it is aiming to take from us more than double, in some cases, the tax that we are paying now. How heavy that tax will be we shall later on think about, but at this stage I oppose this clause 16 and I request all the honourable members of this House to join with me and the honourable member Mr. Baloch in opposing this clause 16.

Mr. J. S. KADRI (Northern Division): Sir, I join my voice in opposing this part of the Finance Bill, which aims at levying enhanced stamp duties on certain instruments in the city of Bombay, as well as in the cities of Ahmedabad, Poona and Karachi. Bombay is already paying this duty, but the conditions prevailing in Bombay are not the same as those obtaining in the cities of Ahmedabad, Poona and Karachi, and there is, therefore, no good ground to saddle these cities with the high duties paid by Bombay. It is not advisable to approve of this new departure in the matter of fresh taxation on account of stamp duties for these three cities.

I endorse fully the arguments advanced by my honourable friend Mr. Gokhale in opposing these duties as it is almost certain that once they are made applicable to these cities, the next year, other cities will surely come in for their share and the result will be that those people who do not feel much concerned to-day in connection with this clause or with Part V of this Bill will find themselves in a serious predicament. I disapprove of the unfair discrimination made against these three cities and I hope the House will put in a united front and throw out this part of the Bill altogether.

Mr. PESTANSHAH N. VAKIL: What is the situation at present with regard to Bombay? Is not Bombay at present paying a higher duty on certain transactions?

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Yes, Bombay pays a higher duty on article 23, conveyances.

Mr. PESTANSHAH N. VAKIL: What will be the position if the clause is thrown out?

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: The Bombay duties will remain. Clause 19 will also have to be omitted. Clause 19 repeals the Indian Stamp (Bombay Amendment) Act of 1926. If this goes, then that also goes, otherwise that Act will lapse. Clause 19 will also have to go.

Rao Bahadur G. K. CHITALE (Ahmednagar District): Sir, I was just looking up the old discussion when this was put in in the year 1926. My impression is that when this duty was put in for the first time in 1926 it was understood that the conditions of Bombay were peculiar and were such that this duty would bear lightly on the people who were likely to be hit by it. Now this particular measure is brought in as a finance measure, but I am not quite sure whether the conditions then obtaining, as far as the population of Bombay is concerned when compared with the population either of Karachi, Ahmedabad or Poona is concerned, are the same. May I say, Sir, that in these days especially these conveyances or transfers of leases and other transactions concern people who are, to say bluntly, really in very bad circumstances in the year 1932 owing very largely to factors which are not under their control. The Government does realise that owing to the world-wide trade depression, the profits of these people have gone down immensely. Naturally therefore it follows that there would be a larger number of transfers which are now sought to be brought in. Under these circumstances I am not sure what revenue is intended to be brought by this measure of catching more districts, but I should think, Sir, that it ought not to be extended this year. It ought not to be extended this year because as regards clause 18 we shall have our say with respect to the pitch of assessment. I should think, Sir, that no case is made out by the Honourable the Finance Member except a case of "We want money and we want to put our hands into your pockets in these cities." I should think this is their attitude but I do not see that there is any logical reason why the same Act should not be extended to Sholapur, Belgaum or Surat. Those cities are also as well or as bad as the other cities and there should be no such distinction. Very probably, after this pill is swallowed by this House, next year we will have the three other cities brought in and perhaps more and more cities and towns in the same way. This House will therefore be well advised in throwing out this motion.

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: Sir, I have heard with great interest the last speaker. Up to now he has been advocating the cause of the poor agriculturists and the poor, but to-day for the first time I find him pleading the cause of the rich——

Rao Bahadur G. K. CHITALE: No, no.

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: The honourable member says that if this Act is extended to big cities now, it will be made applicable to smaller cities later on. I assure him that that is not the present intention of Government at all. You cannot get from the smaller cities a sufficiently large income from this provision of the Act. It is therefore proposed to apply it to the big cities. In Bombay this provision is already in force, and it is proposed that it should be applied to three other big cities.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Sir, I have nothing to add to what the Honourable the Leader of the House has said.

Mr. HAJI MIR MAHOMED BALOCH: Am I not entitled to a reply, Sir?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: No. It was not an amendment that the honourable member has moved and spoken upon.

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: May I point out to the House what will be the result if this clause is thrown out? The result will be that the old provision of the Act will be applicable to all the cities.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE: Suppose the clause is thrown out, then the increased taxation will not apply to the 4 cities. Beyond that I do not see any other effect.

Question, "That clause 16 do stand part of the Bill," put. The House divided. Ayes, 46; Noes, 25.

Clause 16 ordered to stand part of the Bill.

Clause 18 (Amendment of Schedule I to II of 1899) :

Notwithstanding anything contained in Part IV, in Schedule I to the Indian Stamp Act, 1899, in its application to the cities of Bombay, Ahmedabad, Poona and Karachi, for the entries in columns 1 and 2 relating to Articles 6, 23, 58 and 63, the following entries shall, respectively, be substituted, namely :

23. Conveyance [as defined by section 2 (10)], not being a Transfer charged or exempted under No. 62—

	Rs.	a.	p.
Where the amount or value of the consideration for such conveyance as set forth therein, exceeds Rs. 200 but does not exceed Rs. 300 ..	8	8	0
Where it exceeds Rs. 300 but does not exceed Rs. 400 ..	12	0	0
Where it exceeds Rs. 400 but does not exceed Rs. 500 ..	15	8	0
Where it exceeds Rs. 500 but does not exceed Rs. 600 ..	19	0	0
Where it exceeds Rs. 600 but does not exceed Rs. 700 ..	22	8	0
Where it exceeds Rs. 700 but does not exceed Rs. 800 ..	26	0	0
Where it exceeds Rs. 800 but does not exceed Rs. 900 ..	29	8	0
Where it exceeds Rs. 900 but does not exceed Rs. 1,000 ..	33	0	0
and for every Rs. 500 or part thereof in excess of Rs. 1,000 ..	17	8	0

* * * * * * *

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE (Poona City) : Sir, I beg to move the following amendment :

"In clause 18 omit the whole of article 23."

Article 23 is "Conveyance (as defined by section 2 (10) not being a Transfer charged or exempted under No. 69". This is article 23. It deals with conveyances.

Sir, at present, with regard to article 23, there is a distinction as regards the rate prevailing for conveyance. Conveyance means the transfer of property by one person to another. It is distinguished from mortgage and other instruments. It is a complete transfer of property. On page 51 of the Indian Stamp Act in its application to the Presidency of Bombay, article 23 reads as follows :

"Conveyance (.....) not being a Transfer charged or exempted under No. 62—where the amount or value of the consideration for such conveyance as set forth therein does not exceed Rs. 50 .. .. .. Eight annas.
Where it exceeds Rs. 50 but does not exceed Rs. 100 .. One rupee."

and so on. This is the scale of fees in certain cases. At present, as regards the Island of Bombay, there is a larger fee already charged.

"Conveyance, not being a Transfer charged or exempted under No. 62—where the amount or value of the consideration for such conveyance as set forth therein does not exceed Rs. 50. .. Eight annas.

Up to Rs. 200 the charges for conveyance are the same in the mofussil as well as in the presidency town. After that there is an increase for the Island of Bombay only. This is the state of law as it at present stands. By the amendment that is now proposed in the Bill, it will be seen that the increased rate of Bombay will be extended to Karachi, Poona and Ahmedabad. Up to now the higher rate was prevalent in Bombay only. In the mofussil the lower rate is prevalent. I do think that my amendment will go so far as even to affect the rates prevailing in the city of Bombay, which will be reduced to the level of the rates in the mofussil. I do not think that even for Bombay the higher rate should prevail. When there is a conveyance, say a sale deed, for Rs. 1,000, we have to pay Rs. 33 for stamp and then other fees. For every Rs. 500, we have to pay Rs. 17-8-0. Look at the abnormal increase in the rate in Bombay, Ahmedabad, Karachi and Poona. Why have Sholapur and other equally important towns like Surat not been included? [Interruption.] I am for excluding Bombay also. Perhaps the object of Government is to secure the sympathy or disregard of those who are not concerned with these three cities. It looks like that. Otherwise, what is the difference between Sholapur and Poona? [An Honourable Member: "Money"] Mentality, not money. That is my explanation. Sholapur is a commercial town and has got more mills than Poona. It has got more money than Poona. If you take the income-tax returns, you will find the truth of what I say.

Dr. V. G. VAISHAMPAYAN: The revenue from income-tax is much more in Poona than in Sholapur.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE: Because the population in Poona is more than in Sholapur. I wish to point out that you may place these three cities on a line with Sholapur. [An Honourable Member: "You say it is not money."] It is not money in my humble view. [An Honourable Member: "Never mind."] As I said, this is only the thin end of the wedge. Government want to continue the top-heavy administration and without money they cannot go on. So, the best way they have found is to select some people and bleed them white. I am positive that next year the other cities also will be included. I do not know how my honourable friends from Karachi look at the question. I do not know whether they have excluded themselves from the presidency proper because they are going to have a separate province. That point will come after the separation actually comes into force. But at the present stage we want their help and co-operation.

I have spoken about article 23. This article 23 has connection with article 63. Article 63 says "Transfer of lease by way of assignment and not by way of under lease." If we increase the duty under article 23, naturally the duty under article 63 will also be increased. In fact article 23 and article 63 are connected together. I am not able to find why the select committee has put its pen through article 63. I wish they had put their pen through article 23 also. Therefore, we come to this House and make this complaint.

One more point about this increase. The increase in conveyance governs all transfers. It should be noticed that if a mortgage property is sold or a mortgage on a house is sold, it becomes liable to a conveyance duty. That conveyance will be under the increased schedule. In order to remove the doubt about article 63, this Bill makes an increased provision there also. For this reason I wish this honourable House to accept my amendment.

Question proposed.

Rao Bahadur S. N. ANGADI (Belgaum District): I think, Sir, that my honourable friend Mr. Gokhale from Poona seems obviously to be labouring under some misapprehension. I do not know what procedure Government adopted in singling out these three cities for a little more tax than in the case of other cities. But I do not think that they have drawn lots as to which cities in the presidency should be singled out for this increase in the tax. I think they must have proceeded on a definite set of principles. If they have selected those three cities, it is because that they are more thriving and more prosperous. Obviously every honourable member ought to know that in this presidency, if there is wealth concentrated any where, it is in these four cities. The tax is therefore increased in the case of those cities. It was pointed out by the honourable mover that, if to-day these four cities come in for a little more increase in the tax, next year or year after the next other towns also would come in for further taxation. That is the philosophy of my honourable friend Mr. Gokhale.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE: It is not philosophy. It is practical life.

Rao Bahadur S. N. ANGADI: That is the philosophy which my honourable friend Mr. Gokhale has trotted out on the floor of this House. I do find from my own experience that if Government have not travelled beyond the borders of these four cities, it must be for good reasons. If they ever attempted to go beyond the limits of these four cities, they would find nothing but mud. The whole object in levying the duty on those four cities is to have a substantial revenue. If that is the object, why should they pounce upon Belgaum and Dharwar. The honourable member Mr. Gokhale must know that the people there are very poor.

Rao Bahadur S. N. ANGADI: It is a very serious mistake to suppose that Dharwar and Belgaum are as rich as Poona. If the honourable member Mr. Gokhale wants to be convinced as to the wealth of Belgaum and Dharwar, I will certainly at my own cost take him to Belgaum and Dharwar to let him have a view; then he will find that the average man there is much poorer than the average man in Poona. Poona is a big city, where commerce and industry have developed on a large scale. In regard to education, they have been extravagantly fed with facilities. They have got an engineering college and an agricultural college in their city. In that way all these facilities have added to the wealth of the city of Poona. It is for that reason Poona has been singled out. If my honourable friend Mr. Gokhale unfortunately has to live in the city of Poona, he must thank his own stars for that. If he wants to leave Poona in order to avoid the tax, he can go and settle with us. I oppose this amendment.

Mr. G. WILES: Sir, in proposing this amendment, the honourable member is making another attempt to throw out the whole of Part V. The effect of the amendment, if carried, will be to deprive the whole of Part V of any meaning—it is to omit the conveyance clause. I will explain to the honourable member the method by which these figures have been arrived at. I gather from his arguments that he has not understood why these figures are there. It would have been clear to him, if he had been able to study the debate when the Bombay Act was introduced. This Transfer of Property Act, as it is called, is adding 2 per cent. to the ordinary conveyance duty on conveyances in the town of Bombay. If he looks, he will see that the figures in our Bill are exactly 2 per cent. addition to conveyance duties laid down in article 23. It was pointed out when the Act was passed for Bombay that there is a similar transfer of property duty in Calcutta City of an extra 2 per cent. In Madras, there is an Act which enables the levying of an extra 2 per cent. I am not quite certain exactly what duty has been fixed, but the Madras Act provides for a duty of 2 per cent. in addition to the ordinary duty on conveyance. Now, in spite of what the honourable member says, I must maintain my point that it is money and not "mentality" which has selected these cities. As far as I know, there is no adverse mentality on the part of the front benches against Poona City. But from the figures which have been supplied to us by the Registration Department it was evident that we should get more revenue from these three cities than from any other cities which might be selected in the presidency. The revenue that may be derived from Poona is very much larger, strange as it may appear, than the revenue which would be derived from Sholapur from this tax. I am inclined, purely from the Finance Department's point of view, to agree with the honourable member that it would have been much better to extend this Bill to the whole of the presidency. However, that was not the policy of Government, and it is not for me to criticise it. But, obviously, from the point of view of revenue, it would have been much better to extend it.

As the Honourable Member said, the other portions and the other article are merely to extend the new duties on conveyances to transfers of leases. Transfers of leases already pay the same duty as conveyances, and by including that in this Bill transfers of leases will now pay the same duty as conveyances within the same area.

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN: Sir, I must confess that when I sent in the amendment, it was not quite clear to me whether Bombay was paying more than the rest of the presidency. Now, I find that it is so paying. Bombay is paying a duty on conveyance as laid down in this Bill, which other cities, Poona, Karachi and Ahmedabad are not paying. If that had been sufficiently clear to me, then my amendment would have been in a different form. The intention of the amendment was not that what Bombay is paying should be reduced; the intention really was that the other three cities should not be brought to the same level as Bombay by this Bill.

So far as this tax on conveyances is concerned, I have once drawn the attention of the House to the fact that the Taxation Enquiry Committee is very much against this tax. They say that the tax at present levied in India is one and a half times what it is in England and thrice what it is in the United States of America. They have, therefore, recommended that this tax should be reduced as early as possible. This being the recommendation of that committee, this House will be well advised at least not to increase the tax, if it cannot reduce it. It was from that point of view that the amendment was moved. I would again appeal to the Government benches to find some way, if necessary, by means of an amendment to this amendment, by which Bombay will pay the tax that it is paying now, and at the same time the tax will be reduced in the case of Poona, Ahmedabad and Karachi.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: That is not the proposal now.

Mr. PESTANSHAH N. VAKIL (Ahmedabad City): Sir, I am partly forestalled by the honourable member (Rao Bahadur Pradhan) in his reference to the Taxation Enquiry Committee. If I mistake not, the same authority has recommended that this form of tax should be reserved for "local authorities" i.e. mofussil municipalities and district local boards. With their slender resources those public bodies are not in a position to undertake improvement schemes. If I remember aright, one of the city municipalities did apply to Government for permission to allow it to impose this 2 per cent. extra duty on transfer of property. This and similar requests were invariably turned down by the Bombay Government. One by one we have been appropriating sources of revenue which really should belong to the mofussil municipalities. I may also add the instances of the entertainments tax and the tax on passengers. These are also not permitted to be levied. The Bombay Government have gradually been throwing out their tentacles in fields which mofussil municipalities may appropriately claim as their spheres of influence.

Sir, it will be news to many to hear that Poona is a thriving commercial city. That has fallen from the lips of my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Angadi. There is only one solitary mill there, which I am told is in a state of suspended animation. On the other hand there are about half a dozen mills in Sholapur which may be considered to be a thriving industrial town. Similarly, Sir, I do not think my honourable friend is acquainted with the conditions in Gujarat. Viramgam, for instance, and Surat, and such like places, though not very wealthy, are thriving industrial towns and are fairly well off. And the contention is perfectly justifiable that the Government will not stop short at these four cities as there is nothing to prevent them from throwing out their nets wider and wider in years to come. It is, therefore, up to the representatives of all cities, who represent the interests of the people of urban areas to consider very carefully the implications of this tax.

The Honourable the Leader of the House, if I mistake not, referred to the capacity of the payees; he thereby meant to convey that this tax would fall on the shoulders of the rich. Sir, by looking into the table I find that even conveyances of Rs. 300 are brought within the scope of the duty. Is it suggested that it is only the rich who are concerned with these transactions of Rs. 300, Rs. 400 or Rs. 500? It could hardly be so. I am sorry, Sir, the Government have all along been treating very lightly the contention of this side of the House that the taxable capacity of the people has been reached. With their unlimited resources in men and money, why do they not undertake an authoritative enquiry into the condition of the people? This sort of enquiry is not going to be a wild goose chase if its scope can be limited to certain selected areas, typical districts. The other day, my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Naik submitted certain figures regarding his own district and threw a flood of vivid light on the condition of the people in that locality. Government, I submit, should, to begin with, undertake an enquiry in that locality and refute the arguments urged by the honourable member that the taxable capacity of the people of his district has been reached." At present we really do not know whether it has in fact been reached or not. But surely it is up to Government, when they ask for sanction for increased taxation, to convince us that the taxable capacity has not been reached. I appeal to the Honourable the Finance Member to seriously consider this suggestion and set up an enquiry at an early date.

Mr. G. S. GANGOLI (Kanara District): Sir, I rise to support my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Pradhan. I submit that some way should be found out by the Government benches. The honourable member the Finance Secretary said that the increase is only two per cent. But when I compare the rate at page 71, "Four rupees eight annas," with the rate at page 80, "Rs. 8-8-0," I find that there is a difference of Rs. 4. When I first moved an amendment that this part also of the Bill should be for one year, I think some members on this side were rather negligent and they threw out my amendment. But this part alone happens to be the permanent portion of the Act.

I find also that there was no member in the select committee from Ahmedabad, Poona and Karachi. I really think that they have a grievance. The Government benches should remedy the evil if they can do so. If the Chair permits, I want to move an amendment. My amendment would be—

> Add the following proviso to article 23:
> "This article shall apply to the City of Bombay only."

Rao Bahadur B. R. NAIK (Surat District): Sir, I do not belong to any of the places which are going to be affected by the extension of stamp duty on conveyances and bringing them in line with Bombay, namely, Ahmedabad, Karachi or Poona. I rise to get some enlightenment from the Honourable the Finance Member. When the Stamp Act was revised in the year 1926 by this House, the values of property were higher than they are to-day and the people were in a more prosperous condition than at present. These three cities were not then thought fit to be brought under the rates applicable to Bombay. I would like to know from the Honourable the Finance Member why they are being brought under the enhanced rates to-day. It has been argued on the floor of this House times without number, and it has been admitted also by the Honourable the Finance Member, that owing to the trade depression, property values have gone down considerably. When values have depreciated, I do not understand how property can bear further taxation in the form of enhanced conveyance duties. People are not selling their properties for making profits. Most of the people on account of indebtedness have to convey their properties to the sowkars or money-lenders. Ultimately, therefore, this tax, whatever the increase may be, will fall on the debtors, that is, the poor people. I, therefore, think, Sir, that the time is not opportune for extending the enhanced duties to these three cities. I again say I would like to know why they were not brought into operation in 1926 when the act was revised and why they have been thought fit to be brought in line with Bombay. The commonsense viewpoint is that when the values of properties appreciate Government should get some advantage on the unearned increment, but when the values depreciate Government should try to reduce the conveyance charges.

[Rao Bahadur B. R. Naik]

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Sir, the present amendment seeks to omit article 23—Conveyances—from clause 18. At present in Bombay City we are having an increased duty on conveyances. The acceptance of this amendment will mean that the revenue which we are getting to-day will be lost. I cannot understand for a moment how, if the object of the honourable member is that there should be some differentiation between Bombay and other cities, such an amendment will serve that object. The effect of this amendment will be actually to put Government to a loss instead of giving them any revenue.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE: Is there not a provision in the existing Act about the City of Bombay itself? There is an increased scale of taxation given in the Act as it now stands.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Clause 19 of the Bill repeals it.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE: So far as this clause is concerned, if that is changed, then the object will be served. That is why my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Pradhan or Mr. Gangoli is going to move an amendment. The object of the amendment is to keep the rates in Bombay City unchanged.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The position must be understood. Clause 19 says: "The Indian Stamp (Bombay Amendment) Act, 1926, is hereby repealed." So, if this amendment is carried and clause 19 is retained, Government would lose what they are now getting.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE: In order to save Government from losing what they are now getting, an amendment seeking to delete clause 19 may be moved and accepted.

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN: That clause 19 will have to be struck out so that the Act of 1926 will not be repealed.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Yes; that would be the correct position.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Sir, I am not prepared to accept this position, namely, that these three cities should not pay anything in excess of what the mofussil cities are paying. These three cities which have been selected ought to pay something more for conveyances than the other cities are paying. Whether they should pay as much as Bombay City, is the only question.

Mr. PESTANSHAH N. VAKIL: Why should they pay?

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: That is another matter. Because we want revenue, to be plain. There is an amendment that the rates for Bombay should be higher. There is an amendment that they should be 1½ times those prevailing in mofussil cities. That would be some reasonable proposition. But I am not prepared to concede the position that the same stamp duty for conveyances should be levied in these cities which is levied in mofussil towns.

Question put, and negatived.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The next amendment stands in the name of the honourable member Rao Bahadur Pradhan. He wishes to alter the figures in that amendment. I give him permission to do so. He will move the amendment as altered.

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN (Nasik District): Sir, I move:

"In Part V, clause 18, sub-clause 23, the rates mentioned in the Bill will be applicable to Bombay only, while for the remaining three cities, i.e. Poona, Ahmedabad and Karachi they shall be as follows:—

	Rs.	a.	p.
Where it exceeds Rs. 200 but does not exceed Rs. 300 ..	6	4	0
Where it exceeds Rs. 300 but does not exceed Rs. 400 ..	9	0	0
Where it exceeds Rs. 400 but does not exceed Rs. 500 ..	11	4	0
Where it exceeds Rs. 500 but does not exceed Rs. 600 ..	13	8	0
Where it exceeds Rs. 600 but does not exceed Rs. 700 ..	15	12	0
Where it exceeds Rs. 700 but does not exceed Rs. 800 ..	18	0	0
Where it exceeds Rs. 800 but does not exceed Rs. 900 ..	20	4	0
and for every Rs. 500 or part thereof above Rs. 1,000 ..	11	4	0"

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: On what basis has the honourable member calculated the figures? We shall have to work them out. [After an interval.] May I make a suggestion, Sir? We shall have to work out the figures. We have now calculated the duty on this basis: the duty in the island of Bombay is 2 per cent. in excess of the duty charged in the mofussil. I said I am prepared to give a concession of 50 per cent.; that will be 1 per cent. more in the case of the three cities than the duty which is levied in the mofussil, and the Schedule can be worked out accordingly. The Bombay duty will remain the same. My Secretary is working out the figures.

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN: We can adjourn till 5 o'clock in that case, Sir.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The honourable member Rao Bahadur G. V. Pradhan may move his amendment now.

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN (Nasik District): Sir, I beg to move:

In Part V, in clause 18, in item 23, before the word "where," where it occurs for the first time insert the words "for the City of Bombay." After the words "and for every Rs. 500 or part thereof in excess of Rs. 1,000.....Rs. 17-8-0," add the words "for the cities of Ahmedabad, Poona and Karachi.'] Where the amount or value of the consideration for such conveyance as set forth therein

	Rs.	a.	p.
exceeds Rs. 200 but does not exceed Rs. 300	6	8	0
exceeds Rs. 300 but does not exceed Rs. 400	9	0	0
exceeds Rs. 400 but does not exceed Rs. 500	11	8	0
exceeds Rs. 500 but does not exceed Rs. 600	14	0	0
exceeds Rs. 600 but does not exceed Rs. 700	16	8	0
exceeds Rs. 700 but does not exceed Rs. 800	19	0	0
exceeds Rs. 800 but does not exceed Rs. 900	21	8	0
exceeds Rs. 900 but does not exceed Rs. 1,000	24	0	0
and for every Rs. 500 or part thereof in excess of Rs. 1,000	12	8	0

Question proposed.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Sir, I may tell the honourable House that there was an addition of 2 per cent. for all the towns, but if the desire of the House is that the same rate should be for Bombay as well as for the three towns, Government will be right glad to have them, but then as there was a feeling in the House that the three mofussil towns are getting an addition of 2 per cent. but that there should be an addition of only one per cent. and not two per cent., that is why those figures were worked out. But I plainly tell this House that Government do want more revenue, and if it is the desire of the House that the rates which are prevalent in Bombay which we are not prepared to reduce should be the rates for the three mofussil towns which are included in the Bill, Government will not accept this amendment.

Rao Bahadur R. S. ASAVALE (Bombay City, North): Sir, I wish to move an amendment to the amendment that the rates for the City of Bombay also should be the same as have been proposed——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: That will not be allowed as it will require the sanction of His Excellency the Governor.

Rao Bahadur R. S. ASAVALE: It is certainly strange that the honourable members representing the mofussil should come here and agree to increase of rates in Bombay and try to get lower rates for the mofussil——

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: I rise to a point of order, Sir. If it is sought to lower the rates which are now prevalent in Bombay, the honourable member will have to obtain the sanction of the Governor under section 80C of the Government of India Act.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Yes, I have already told him that.

Rao Bahadur R. S. ASAVALE: I am not going to propose that, but I say, Sir, that the honourable members coming from the mofussil appear to be against the interests of the Bombay City——

Honourable MEMBERS: No, not at all.

Rao Bahadur R. S. ASAVALE: They are, because at present the increase in duty is to be 2 per cent. in the City of Bombay——

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: It is already there.

Rao Bahadur R. S. ASAVALE: It is not existing, but it is——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: That is not the position. The clause having been restricted to the mofussil, there is an amendment which is in order, and the Honourable the Finance Member is agreeable to accept the rates as proposed by the honourable mover of the amendment.

Mr. G. L. WINTERBOTHAM: If the House wants it.

Rao Bahadur R. S. ASAVALE: I beg your pardon, Sir. I do not wish to propose any amendment to the amendment.

Mr. G. L. WINTERBOTHAM: There is no amendment moved yet.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: It has been moved and I have just read it out.

Mr. G. L. WINTERBOTHAM (Bombay Chamber of Commerce): Sir, I oppose this amendment, and I am also strongly opposed to the attitude of the Honourable the Finance Member in this matter, because there has been already a discussion in the select committee, and yet, without consulting anybody in the select committee, merely because three voices have been raised on the other side of the House, the Honourable the Finance Member gives away further revenue which is badly needed by Government. The principle of this Bill is bad to start with, but the principle as accepted by this House was to make the same rates applicable to the four cities alike. That principle is now being abandoned for no reason that I can understand. I entirely fail to understand the differentiation between Bombay and Ahmedabad, and as far as I can understand, the whole opposition is being engineered by my honourable friend from Poona who feels that his particular city is being hardly treated. I strongly protest against this and I hope every Bombay member will vote against the amendment. I also hope that all members of the select committee will protest against this attitude of Government in going beyond the considered recommendations of the select committee for no reason at all.

Mr. HOOSENALLY M. RAHIMTOOLA (Bombay City): Sir, I would like to know from the Honourable the Finance Member the amount of revenue which will be lost if this amendment is accepted by the House.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: I think it will be about 2 lakhs.

Mr. HOOSENALLY M. RAHIMTOOLA: Yesterday, the Honourable the Finance Member fought tooth and nail when an amendment was moved to reduce the rate of electricity duty from 6 pies to 4 pies. He said Government could not afford to lose 2 lakhs of rupees. Now, I do not understand what has made him change his mind with regard to this amendment. I do not know whether it is because he comes from Thana. [Laughter.]

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Thana is not included.

Mr. HOOSENALLY M. RAHIMTOOLA: He wants to give away these 2 lakhs of rupees. Sir, whereas the electricity duty is going to fall on all people, rich, poor and middle class, this stamp duty is going to fall only on landlords and not on others. I do not therefore understand why this amount should be given up, and why this distinction should be made between Bombay and other cities in the Presidency.

Then, I would like to know further from you, Sir, as to why you say that an amendment to bring the duty for Bombay down to the same scale as is proposed for other cities in the Presidency would be out of order, because, if you are of opinion that the sanction of His Excellency the Governor is necessary, I beg to submit that in the past it has been ruled that any amendment for giving lesser revenue to Government does not require the sanction of His Excellency the Governor.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: No, no.

Mr. HOOSENALLY M. RAHIMTOOLA: For increasing the revenue asked for by Government it requires the sanction of His Excellency the Governor.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The amendment to the amendment suggested was to reduce the existing revenue. By the Act a certain rate is levied. To reduce that requires the sanction of the Governor.

The point is this, and I am glad of getting this opportunity of explaining the position: If the honourable members remember, I think it was last year in the Budget session that the honourable member the Finance Secretary raised a point of order on the ground that the existing rate can neither be increased nor reduced without sanction. A ruling of my predecessor was referred to, and I gave a ruling that it could be done, holding the sanction given to the Bill as a comprehensive one. Afterwards, I came to modify my view after consulting various authorities on the point. The principle is this: By an Act on the Statute Book, revenue is already being raised up to a certain rate. That is the existing revenue. An amending Bill is brought up to raise it, say, by 50 per cent. An amendment to lower it from 50 per cent. to 40, 30, 15 or 1 per cent. would be in order. But if the amendment goes beyond that, and lowers the existing rate which is charged under the Act, that would be out of order.

Mr. HOOSENALLY M. RAHIMTOOLA: You, Sir, are now making a distinction between existing rates and the proposed rates in an amending Bill. That is the distinction you make. My impression is that, on former occasions your predecessor had ruled that, when Government bring in any Bill, the House is seized of it, and it can do what it likes with it, provided that in a Finance Bill it cannot raise the rates proposed by Government without the sanction of His Excellency the Governor, but in lowering the rate or in giving Government lesser revenue than they asked for, the House was entitled to do it without the sanction of His Excellency the Governor.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: If it is an amendment to lower the revenue that is asked for in a Bill, that would be in order, but any amendment proposing to give to Government lesser revenue than the existing revenue would be out of order without the requisite sanction of the Governor. That is the ruling. The point of order raised by the Finance Secretary in the last budget session was perfectly correct.

Mr. HOOSENALLY M. RAHIMTOOLA: Then, I oppose this amendment.

Rao Bahadur G. K. CHITALE (Ahmednagar District): I am sorry, Sir, that the honourable member for the Chamber of Commerce (Mr. Winterbotham) was not in the House when it was remarked in the open House that none of the members from Poona, Ahmedabad or Karachi was on the select committee. Naturally, therefore, in the select committee the view which was wanted to be pressed on the attention of the whole of the committee went by default. When that point was made, it was pointed out that it was necessary to ascertain the views of those honourable members. It is not true, I may say, that the honourable member for Poona City (Mr. Gokhale) took the slightest part in this amendment; if any party is guilty, I plead guilty to the charge. I suggested yesterday that in order that we may have this taxation on the lines of least resistance, it is necessary to square up, as far as possible, the differences of opinion; and whatever the interests of Bombay and other mofussil towns may be, I believe the honourable member for the Bombay Chamber of Commerce or, for the matter of that, the honourable member representing the Bombay Mahomedans will not insist upon this distinction of Bombay versus the mofussil. I would appeal to them to take up their stand on higher ground, and that higher ground is certainly logical and very consistent. The Honourable the Finance Member rightly pointed out that this tax, which is considered to be a tax on the transfer of property, obtains in Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, but not in the mofussils of any of those Presidencies, and I may also say, speaking from memory, that even in Calcutta and Madras the pitch of the assessment is not 2 per cent. It is much lower. The Taxation Enquiry Committee examined this source of revenue, and in their report they have stated that this taxation differs so widely in all the civilised countries, because in America, which is perhaps the richest country on the face of the earth, this taxation is much less than 2 per cent.

Mr. G. WILES: It does not exist at all.

Rao Bahadur G. K. CHITALE: I am told it does not exist at all there. Therefore, we are on this ground of logic and consistency.

For the first time this House wants to see that the mofussil towns are touched by this taxation. In other Presidencies, this tax does not affect the mofussil areas at all. Therefore, in the Bombay Presidency, if they are to be touched, then they must be touched on the lines of least resistance. It was because of that that I tried to find out a via media between the Government benches and this side of the House, an office which is usually avoided, and I suggested to the honourable mover that, if the Honourable the Finance Member had no objection, to move it himself. It is under these circumstances that this amendment is being moved.

Now, Sir, we have to see whether on the merits we ought to support this amendment. You cannot support the Government proposal only on this ground, that because Bombay pays a higher rate, others also shall pay a higher rate. That will be too narrow a ground. That will stiffen the opposition of this side not only to this question but to all other questions. Of course, we on this side may think "Now that Government have got so much, we do not mind if they get this also. Let us be reconciled to our bad luck." But that does not mean that we have given up the fight. We do say most emphatically that it does not matter if by their vote and the weight of their opinion the Bombay members insist upon forcing this taxation on these mofussil towns, when, as a matter of fact, Government are in a position to conciliate us. But that will be a very strong ground for us on other occasions to see whether we also cannot combine in the same way in any legislation whenever it comes before us. I should think, Sir, that it is a wrong attitude of mind altogether. I remember myself being chided by the Honourable Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola when I made the point that Government had been spending more on Bombay rather than on the mofussil. He appealed to me for once, and since then I have not opened my lips on that point up till this time. No doubt, Sir, phrases are used sometimes, and sometimes speeches are made without the slightest intention or motive of that character. But the moment it is known that in a Finance Bill or taxation measure, the Government benches being very strong, are insisting on their proposals, we deprecate that attitude, and if they are able to carry their proposal with the help of the Bombay vote, they may do so, but let them understand that in future, even in a small matter, whatever it is, we will tooth and nail oppose it, whether it is good or bad. Is that an attitude which it is desirable to be taken up in this House?

Coming to the question under discussion, can you at all compare the rich city of Bombay with the cities of Ahmedabad, of Poona, or Karachi?

Rao Bahadur R. S. ASAVALE: Ahmedabad is richer than Bombay now.

Rao Bahadur G. K. CHITALE: Suppose I concede that Ahmedabad is equal to Bombay, what ground have you to say that Poona is equal to Bombay? On what ground do you say that Karachi is equal to Bombay? [Interruption.] In Karachi perhaps there are large European interests, but I have myself seen Karachi, and it is as bad as ever. Well, Sir, the point is that even for the city of Poona, if you agree that it is not so rich as the two other cities, why should it be brought in line with them? But this is the attitude which Government themselves are taking. They have made up their mind, and now they want to change——

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: No word was given. I said if such a proposal is made, it may be considered. Those are my words.

Rao Bahadur G. K. CHITALE: I have something more to say, and I will do it after the tea interval.

(After recess.)

Rao Bahadur G. K. CHITALE (Ahmednagar District): Mr. President, I was just narrating to the House the way in which this particular proposal came to take a shape. While this proposal was being discussed, the Honourable the Leader of the House suggested to me whether this particular amendment would meet the wishes of this part of the House. [An Honourable Member: "Private talk?"] After that was done, it was pointed out to me that a certain scale which was suggested by the honourable mover in regard to article No. 23 which stood in his name had been withdrawn. He did not press it to a division to which he was entitled. As a compromise, later on, a higher figure was suggested and the Honourable the Finance Member accepted it. After that a little hitch arose. The Honourable the Finance Member suggested even a still higher figure and pointed out that it worked out to 1 per cent. and not 2 per cent. It is under those circumstances, this amendment comes before the House.

I was for taxing forward transactions. I am one of those who think that it is a legitimate source of revenue to Government. As a matter of compromise, that tax was given up by the select committee. We would have been justified in tabling amendments so that the proposal may be discussed, because I was not satisfied with the reason that was given, namely, that no satisfactory definition of "forward transaction" could be devised. Having regard to the weight of opinion that was brought to bear on the Honourable the Finance Member in the select committee——

Mr. G. L. WINTERBOTHAM: May I know whether it has got anything to do with the amendment before the House?

Rao Bahadur G. K. CHITALE: I do not want this distinction to be made between the presidency town and the mofussil. That is the point made by the honourable member representing the Chamber of Commerce (Mr. Winterbotham). I am pointing out that we are not going on that proposal. I am putting it to the honourable member for the Chamber of Commerce whether he is right in attacking the Government in that way. I am absolutely sure that the House will sympathise with the position of the Honourable the Finance Member when he had to run down these taxation proposals which were not liked by the House, even by the European members on the other side. For all the reasons I have given, I expect the Honourable the Leader of the House to give effect to the compromise which has been accepted by Government. It is, after all, a question of Rs. 50,000 or a lakh of rupees. But I should like to see that there is no distinction made between the mofussil and Bombay, so that it may not be trotted out in this House. I hope, Sir, better sense will prevail.

Rao Bahadur S. K. BOLE: Mr. President, I rise to oppose the amendment. Some Maharashtrians want Maharashtra to be made into a province and the city of Poona aspires to be its capital. Then, the city of Karachi is going to be the capital of Sind, when it is made into a separate province——

An Honourable MEMBER: May I know how it is relevant?

Rao Bahadur S. K. BOLE: My honourable friend Mr. Kadri the other day pleaded that Ahmedabad should be made the capital of the Bombay Presidency. When these cities aspire to be the capital and deprive the position of Bombay, it is quite fair and just that they should be prepared to bear the brunt of taxation equally with Bombay. They want ghee; they do not want badga. That is very absurd. Besides, now-a-days Ahmedabad has become richer than Bombay. [An Honourable Member: "Certainly not."] The mills there are making huge profits and it is very difficult for the Bombay millowners to make both ends meet. Under these circumstances, I oppose the amendment.

Dr. J. A. COLLACO (Bombay City, South): Sir, I am sorry that this amendment has created such a lot of heat. I do not see why Bombay should pay more than the other cities. The honourable member stated that Bombay is a rich city. A few years ago Bombay was a very rich city. But the Congress by its constant boycotts and hartals and by closing the different exchanges has driven the trade to other centres. Its mill industry has been driven to Ahmedabad and its imports and exports to the Karachi and Kathiawar ports. So, Bombay from its position as the first city in India has now gone down to the fourth city.

The honourable member has thrown out a threat that at any future time the mofussil members may combine against Bombay. We are here very few city members and we are always at the mercy of the mofussil members, but we expect them to do justice! Justice demands that all the cities should pay equally. I do not think there is any difference in the matter of transfer of property between one city and another. The tax is on the value of individual property; wealth or poverty of a city has nothing to do with it. I hope for this reason the honourable mover will withdraw his amendment.

Mr. A. N. SURVE (Bombay City, North): Sir, I am trying to pour oil on troubled waters. The amendment that has been moved draws a sort of distinction between the city of Bombay on one side and the cities of Karachi, Ahmedabad and Poona on the other. In this connection I wish to appeal to the local sentiments of the members representing the mofussil constituencies here. If you take into account the customs revenue you will find that the prosperity of Bombay has been diverted to Karachi and other ports. Take for instance the city of Ahmedabad. The textile industry of Bombay is being invaded by the textile industry of Ahmedabad. If the honourable members want to draw any distinction, it is but fair that they should come to the rescue of Bombay. I have pointed out in this session how Bombay has fallen from its premier position. Therefore, my submission to them is that they should not draw this distinction. If they persist in that, the result will be that the prosperity of Bombay will still more be involved and the fall of Bombay will be hastened. Therefore it is up to them to come to the rescue of the city of Bombay. As a matter of fact, during my speech on the Finance Bill, during this session, I have quoted figures from statistics and pointed out the actual revenue Bombay city alone contributes as its share to the provincial revenue.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The honourable member may be reminded that there is no question of the rescue of Bombay before the House.

Mr. A. N. SURVE: I am making an appeal to the sentiments of——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: That point, namely, that the duty on Bombay should be reduced, is not before the House.

Mr. A. N. SURVE: That is exactly what I say. They want that the duty on those growing cities should be reduced, whereas the duty in Bombay should remain as it is. Therefore, I am trying to show that they are hastening the fall of Bombay. On those grounds I have already stated and on the facts and figures I have already quoted, Bombay city contributes a very great share to the revenues of Government.

There is another point. There is some dispute between the city of Bombay and Government. In 1926, it was pointed out in the course of the debate that the income from the duty on transfer of property should be earmarked for the local bodies. I appreciate that the Honourable the Finance Member is anxious to repeal this Act and incorporate it in the General Stamp Act. The result of that action will be this. At present there is a doubt whether the revenue coming out of this transfer of property duty should be a municipal revenue or a Government revenue.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: All this is irrelevant.

Mr. A. N. SURVE: I will finish——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Cannot be allowed to finish anything irrelevant. The honourable member may proceed to speak on the amendment. The amendment is whether the mofussil cities should be taxed or not.

Mr. A. N. SURVE: I will finish in a few minutes.

Therefore, my submission is that there should be no discrimination in the matter of taxation. I oppose both the amendment and the clause in the Bill.

Mr. V. N. JOG (Dharwar District): Sir, I am sorry that this discussion has taken an altogether wrong turn. There is no question of our doing any injustice to Bombay. We would have welcomed it if the same scale of tax had been made applicable to Bombay. But as a point of order has been raised that we cannot reduce the existing revenue, our hands are tied, and, therefore, we have moved this amendment to reduce the taxation with respect to other cities. We do not want to discriminate against Bombay, but it is not open to this House to reduce the duty at this stage. Therefore, I appeal to the honourable members representing Bombay not to go against the mofussil because they themselves are not getting any benefit. There are cities and cities, and when Poona has been selected I do not know why it should be selected. As has been stated by the honourable member representing Poona, Poona has not got any commerce or industry, although it may be more populous than the other towns. Therefore, the question should be decided on its merits. Perhaps Ahmedabad is a rising and a rich city. But Bombay should not say that because they are not getting the benefit therefore the other cities should not get the benefit.

In regard to the argument about the loss of revenue, I would point out that in the case of the Court-fees Bill we have by common consent amended article 11 of the Schedule increasing the rate of duty on properties of the value of Rs. 50,000 and above, from 3½ per cent. to 4 per cent., although when the Bill was sanctioned by the Government of India the rate was only 3½ per cent. Thus, we gave more revenue to Government than what they had asked for, and no objection was raised then. Therefore, the Honourable the Finance Member should not go back on his promise. The rate for Bombay will be maintained as at present, and Bombay members should not be ungenerous to the other parts of the Presidency.

Mr. PESTANSHAH N. VAKIL (Ahmedabad City): I thought, Sir, that my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Chitale deserved the best thanks of every member of this House for his gallant attempt to put the discussion on the high pedestal on which it should be, but I am afraid that his noble appeal has fallen on deaf ears and the discussion has degenerated into a battle between the cities. Sir, as consciously or unconsciously a red-herring is sought to be drawn across the trail, I take this opportunity of making things clear. So far as the Bombay members are concerned, they may be given distinctly to understand that the proposed amendment is not going to affect Bombay at all. Bombay does not stand either to gain or to lose by the passing of this amendment. Bombay has been paying the increased scale of duties for several years past, and the Government now want to bring the three mofussil cities within the purview of the Act; that is to say, they want the three cities to be placed on the same level as Bombay. Those of us who represent these three cities took the opportunity of pointing out that the people of those places are not able to bear this extra burden. The Finance Member was kind enough to take that protest into consideration. Then the pistol was held to his head because he had not consulted the members of the Select Committee, as if the Honourable the Finance Member is bound to consult all the members of the Select Committee on every occasion and as if there is a constitutional practice whereby he has got to consult the Select Committee on the departure he deems it expedient to make on certain occasions from the recommendations of the Committee. He was kind enough to consider the request of the mofussil members to the effect that if the three cities must needs be made to pay, that payment must be gradual. The city of Bombay has been paying the two per cent. extra duty on transfer of property, and it was suggested to the Honourable the Finance Member that the rate for the three cities should be one per cent. extra. To all intents and purposes, if I am not wrong, he distinctly accepted the amendment. But the honourable member representing the Bombay Chamber of Commerce held out a threat that if he did that he would withdraw the support of his group, and the Honourable the Finance Member began to wobble. I am of opinion, Sir, that the concession he was on the point of making was a triumph of moderation and, I am afraid, he will be doing less than justice to himself if he now resiles from that attitude of conciliation which he had previously assumed. The least he can now do is to see that the members on the Government benches do not vote if this is taken to a division. [An Honourable Member: "Why should they not support?"] He should insist on his word being honoured. Sir, I need not point out that the deliberations of this House were postponed for fully half an hour and intricate calculations were gone into. Were all these things done for the mere fun of it? No. It was absolutely obvious that the amendment was accepted and what remained was merely a matter of calculation; there were some slight errors here and there which had to be put right. It is not proper for the Finance Member at this stage to leave the whole thing to the vote of the House simply because a threat has been held out.

Now, Sir, comparisons are always odious. The members representing Bombay are justified in taking up the cudgels on behalf of Bombay. But the interests of Bombay are not at all threatened. However, conceding for the moment that they are threatened, they should look upon the mofussil towns as their younger brethren. After all, what are Poona, Ahmedabad and Karachi as compared with Bombay, a city whose streets are paved with slabs of gold [Laughter], a city whose palatial buildings rear their heads to the skies, a city whose shop-windows are the wonder of the mofussilites? Does it lie in the mouths of the citizens of that city to say that they are poorer than Poona? Poona depends for its present prosperity on the adventitious aid of the sojourn of Government officers. [Interruption]. Whatever it may be, take away this six months' residence of Government from Poona, and Poona will be reduced to a third-rate city. [Honourable Members: "Poona races."]

Sir REGINALD SPENCE: Sir, does the honourable member from Ahmedabad echo the wish of a certain citizen of Ahmedabad that this magnificent city with its wonderful shop-windows should disappear beneath the seas for the benefit of Ahmedabad?

Mr. PESTANSHAH N. VAKIL: Sir, the sooner that impression is removed the better—that Ahmedabad wants to prosper at the expense of Bombay. No, Sir. As has been pointed out by my honourable friend Dr. Collaco, due to special circumstances and the inroads Japan has been making on the mill industry of Bombay, Bombay has been gradually losing ground. Ahmedabad has nothing to do with the ills and miseries of Bombay. The market is wide enough for both. [Honourable Members: Oh!] It need not be stated on the floor of this House that all the Indian mills put together supply barely 50 per cent. of the total requirements of India. So, there is field enough both for Ahmedabad and Bombay, and half a dozen other cities into the bargain. It is not Ahmedabad which is to blame for the misfortunes of Bombay.

I still repeat that after having assured us that the amendment of the honourable member Rao Bahadur Pradhan was acceptable to the Government benches, it will not be decent for the Honourable the Finance Member to disappoint us. We repeat that the people in these three cities are really poorer than the poor of Bombay, if there is any degree in poverty. But if extra taxation must needs be imposed it must be gradual. Bombay, I repeat, is not going to be affected one way or the other whether the amendment is accepted or not. Bombay will stand where it is, and I cannot understand why the members representing Bombay are so anxious to make us comrades in misfortune.

[Mr. Pestanshah N. Vakil]

Mr. J. S. KADRI (Northern Division): Sir, I am very much surprised at the attitude of some of the honourable members in dealing with this question. I wish extraneous matters were not imported into this question, which ought to be judged on its own merits and from a broad statesman-like point of view. As pointed out by the previous speaker, no invidious comparison should be made between Bombay and other cities. Bombay is the premier city of the Presidency enjoying special privileges. Of course, Ahmedabad is a progressive city, but compared to Bombay, it stands rather low in regard to numerous amenities which Bombay enjoys at present through the munificent patronage of Government. If the honourable members choose to compare Ahmedabad with Bombay and give credit to the latter as being superior to Bombay in commercial and other matters, I should indeed feel myself proud of the compliment. But as matters stand, Ahmedabad is labouring under various disadvantages and drawbacks, which are the outcome of no fault of hers but the result of the partial treatment meted out to Bombay at the expense of Ahmedabad and other cities of the presidency. Ahmedabad had had no Back Bay and Development Schemes and Improvement trust, on which crores of rupees have been sunk in Bombay and for the financial consequences whereof the whole Presidency has been held responsible. If it were not for Bombay we would not have been under the painful necessity of considering so much extra taxation for the presidency. I think Bombay is chiefly responsible for the financial ills and misfortunes of the Presidency and it is, therefore, meet that Bombay should not grudge other cities like Ahmedabad the little prosperity, which they have built up by dint of their honest and hard labour. If Bombay mills are not thriving, it is the fault of their management. Ahmedabad is noted for the thrifty and sagacious management of its mills, and I think Bombay will do well to copy the example of Ahmedabad, if it is to prosper in respect of its textile industry. It is the careful, hard and honest work and shrewd business methods of the mill managers of Ahmedabad, which have brought about the prosperity of its textile industry, while it is the extravagant ways and slack supervision of the mill managers of Bombay, which are mainly responsible for their gradual degradation and decline.

On the other hand, Sir, the mofussil cities which are not yet mature in their trade and industries should not have their future advance to prosperity blocked by heavy extra taxation. Ahmedabad City is already overtaxed, and we find there hundreds of people who are unemployed and living from hand to mouth. During recent years, of course, Ahmedabad is making rapid strides in commerce and trade; but I think Bombay should be glad to see it thrive along its own lines and thereby help Bombay in an indirect way by stimulating her import and export trade. Bombay should try to follow in the footsteps of Ahmedabad and copy the economic ways of its business men, in order to rise in the scale of prosperity.

Mr. G. L. WINTERBOTHAM: May I ask the honourable member on a point of information whether it helps the trade of Bombay for Ahmedabad to import cotton through Bhavnagar?

Mr. J. S. KADRI: That is a question of Customs and freight for the Imperial Government to decide. If it were in the power of this Government, I think they would have certainly devised some means to stop it, but Bombay should thank herself for this state of affairs.

The point I wish to stress is that the people of Ahmedabad are already overtaxed, and I think the same is the case with the cities of Karachi and Poona too. These cities cannot be fairly compared with Bombay so far as financial and economic conditions go. Ahmedabad is also very hard hit at present by the Congress movement. As a matter of fact, it is the home of that movement, and I think hundreds of its merchants are very hard hit by the troubles created by the Civil Disobedience and boycott movement.

Rao Bahadur S. K. BOLE: The Congress is on the contrary helping the millowners of Ahmedabad.

Mr. G. L. WINTERBOTHAM: Is it not a fact that there are five new mills building in Ahmedabad?

Mr. J. S. KADRI: Yes, but several mills are also going into liquidation. I think the honourable member Mr. Pestanshah Vakil will bear me out, when I say that there are various concerns in Ahmedabad, which are going into liquidation and there are hundreds of properties which are being sold day by day, of which you can find ample evidence from the records of the Sub-Registrar of Ahmedabad.

What I mean to urge is that if the proposed amendment is not carried, the result will be that there will be extra duties imposed on middle class and poor people, whose properties are being sold for debts which they have incurred. The poor people will in the long run suffer. A point has been made that this tax will fall only on the rich. That is not correct. The extra taxation will really fall on the shoulders of those who are not able to bear it under the present economic depression. I beg to urge that this aspect of the question should not be lost sight of and due justice should be done to the cities which come in for extra taxation for the first time. I think the House should take a broad and liberal view of the whole matter and should not grudge a little concession in the proposed rates for the three cities, which has been accepted so discreetly by the Honourable the Finance Member. The Finance Member deserves to be congratulated on his spirit of conciliation and compromise. I think he is justified in moderating or lowering down the high rates of duties which are proposed to be imposed on the three cities. With these words, I request this section of the House to go in solidly for this amendment, which is not likely to meet with favourable reception at the hands of the other side.

Sir REGINALD SPENCE (Bombay City): Sir, may I appeal to the House and to the Honourable the Finance Member in a spirit of conciliation that he should conciliate Bombay and should not differentiate between Bombay city and other cities?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Before I allow other honourable members to speak, I must point out that honourable members get up and bring in extraneous matters. The question here has nothing to do with the prosperity or otherwise of Bombay. The question before the House is, why these three cities should not be equally taxed with Bombay, and if the tax is to be reduced, the reasons therefor.

Mr. HAJI MIR MAHOMED BALOCH (Karachi City) (Addressed the House in Urdu): I rise to support the amendment moved by my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Pradhan. I congratulate the Honourable the Finance Member for his wise decision in modifying the Select Committee's report in differentiating Bombay city from the other three cities. If the original amendment before the house was carried, Government would have lost more revenue.

The honourable members from Bombay opposed the amendment and said that the other cities should pay equally with Bombay. I ask honourable members to compare the prosperity of Bombay with that of other cities, Karachi, Ahmedabad and Poona. I have seen Poona, I have seen Ahmedabad and I live in Karachi. From my experience I can without hesitation say that Bombay is more prosperous than the other three cities. The earning capacity of Bombay is greater than any of these three cities. If the mofussil merchants make a profit of ½ anna to one anna on every rupee, Bombay merchants make a profit of 2 annas and 4 annas in every rupee. If a house fetches a rent of Rs. 5 in Karachi, a similar house would fetch Rs. 10 in Bombay. So also in the case of doctor's fees, pleader's fees and every other income in Bombay it is three times more than other places. From this it is clear that Bombay is far more prosperous than any of the three cities.

When I moved an amendment to omit clause 16 altogether, no Bombay member supported me. If my amendment had been accepted, this question of differentiation would not have arisen at all. When an exemption of 15 units was asked for, all the Bombay members voted for an exemption of 12 units. They do not mind getting their city heavily taxed, as they do not want to displease the Government. Bombay members say, let us die and make others widows.

I ask my honourable friend Mr. Winterbotham: what harm is there in giving this small concession to the poor cities of Karachi, Ahmedabad and Poona? It is said that on account of the reduction in the rate Government will be losing 2 lakhs. Had the amendment of the honourable member Rao Bahadur Pradhan been carried in the house Government would have lost a revenue of Rs. 10 lakhs, but the Honourable Finance Member did a wise act whereby Government should feel thankful to the House for having given them a revenue of about 10 lakhs and they should not grudge a concession of 2 lakhs. I hope the amendment will be supported by the whole House.

Khan Bahadur M. A. KHUHRO (Larkana District): Sir, I want to say just a few words in favour of the amendment. I am one of the members of the Select Committee and I certainly do not maintain that it is in any way derogatory to the position of the members of the Select Committee if Government accept any amendment by way of compromise. This is not the first time that an amendment by way of compromise has been accepted by Government. There have been many instances before. Even in the case of the present Bill yesterday's experience shows that Government do adopt such an attitude when it is considered necessary. I do not think that the European group of this honourable House or other members belonging to Bombay like my honourable friend Mr. Hoosenally Rahimtooola are justified in opposing this amendment. It is very clear indeed, and it has been repeated by so many honourable members in their speeches that there is a very great difference between the prosperity of the city of Bombay and the prosperity of other cities which are now being taxed. This is the first time we are applying this tax to these cities. Therefore, when we are applying a new measure of taxation to these cities, it is but fair that we should go slowly. We should start with the minimum. The Honourable the Finance Member has no objection to this amendment. It is really unfair that the representatives of the city of Bombay should take such an attitude and try to increase the taxation in respect of other cities. If they continue to adopt such an attitude in this House, I am sure the city of Bombay will suffer and suffer heavily. It is better always to work in a spirit of conciliation rather than adopt such an antagonistic attitude against each other in such times. I therefore appeal to the honourable members representing the city of Bombay not to adopt such an attitude. Government have no objection to this amendment. No honourable member should, in fairness, oppose this amendment.

Mr. M. M. KARBHARI rose.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: I think the discussion should stop now.

Mr. M. M. KARBHARI (Thana and Bombay Suburban Districts): Only three minutes, Sir.

Sir, I believe there is one important factor which this honourable House has forgotten. The reason why they should support this amendment is this: whereas Bombay is simply a commercial and industrial city, it should not be forgotten that Ahmedabad, Karachi and Poona, though they are industrial towns, have their own talukas and their own villages from which Government derive a large portion of their revenue by way of agricultural assessment. That is a material distinction which this House should understand. That is why a distinction in this particular form of taxation should be made between Bombay and other towns of the mofussil. I hope the Honourable the Finance Member will give due consideration to the amendment that has been moved, and I am sure that the honourable member representing the Bombay Chamber of Commerce (Mr. Winterbotham) will also use his judgment and advise the Honourable the Finance Member to accept this amendment.

Mr. G. L. WINTERBOTHAM: It has been my experience many times that the Honourable the Finance Member never accepts my advice.

Dr. M. K. DIXIT: Please withdraw your threat.

Mr. G. L. WINTERBOTHAM: I have made no threat.

Rao Bahadur G. V. PRADHAN (Nasik District): Sir, I am extremely sorry that the way in which the discussion has been drifting has put the whole question and the real question as a side issue. If honourable members will look at the original amendment as tabled, they will see that I had absolutely no idea of making any distinction between Bombay and other cities. In fact I am connected more with Bombay than with other cities like Karachi, Ahmedabad or Poona. I have no interest whatever in those three cities which are sought to be protected. On the contrary, so far as Bombay is concerned, it was Bombay where I was educated and it is Bombay which I love most, but that is not the question before us. The amendment, as it had been put, had some difficulties. In fact, if the honourable members of this House were in a mood to reduce the tax on these conveyances all through, then there was the amendment of the honourable member Mr. Gokhale from Poona, but that amendment was lost and lost without a division. That opportunity having been lost, the next best had to be taken up and the next best was the amendment I had tabled in the beginning. Before I could reach that amendment, it was brought to my notice that that amendment stood the chance of being ruled out of order inasmuch as it seeks to reduce the taxation in Bombay to a level which is even below the present level. If that is so, then I was perforce obliged to accept a suggestion that Bombay may remain where it is, if the other cities at least be taxed less. It is not a question of my leaving Bombay or leaving any other places to be taxed as Government liked, but I was compelled by circumstances, namely, the possibility of my amendment being out of order, and in deference to that possibility I had to leave Bombay where it was, and not seek to tax Bombay more than it is being taxed now, and to seek redress for other cities at least. That was the position. That position having been gone into, the next difficulty that arose so far as the amendment that was tabled was concerned, was that for the first figure, namely, Rs. 8-8-0 I had tabled Rs. 4-4-0. It was brought to my notice that the mofussilites pay Rs. 4-8-0, and am I going to reduce that to Rs. 4-4-0 for Bombay and the other cities? That difficulty was placed before me. I had confessed even in the beginning that at the time when these amendments were tabled, I had not seen the special Bombay Act of 1926 nor was it brought to my notice by anybody, and it was therefore that the amendments were put up in the way in which they appeared on the original agenda. These circumstances having been now before me, there was no other alternative but to accept such an amendment which would be amenable to most of the members of the House, and everything you know is not decided on the floor of this House, but there are other means as well, such as "give and take" that is being done everywhere and at all times. I had suggested a table which was found to be wrong in some respects. The other side was consulted. The other side said that a certain table would be more amenable to them, and I was perforce obliged to accept that amendment. As I said, things are not always decided on the floor of this House, and the word given outside the House and the word which we have given from this side ought to be respected, as, if there is no respect for that word, the difficulty will be, never again shall any Government be respected at any time so far as their words go. We also have to see the same thing. If our party gives its word, that word must be respected.

I only speak on one more point, and it is this, namely, the difficulty of taxing Bombay and not taxing mofussilites. That difficulty did occur during the last year and may occur again. But, I may assure you all that this part of the House had never consented to any taxation, on Bombay or in the mofussil, to the charas taxation and the opening of bucket shops. Of course those things were passed, and you ought not to suggest that the motive behind these amendments is the motive of taxing Bombay more than other cities or districts. That is not really the motive. The motive is to tax the presidency as little as possible and in the best way possible, and if that is the motive, it is from that point of view that this amendment has been tabled. My Bombay friends need not be angry with me. I could not help them on account of certain technical difficulties. If I could not help them on account of my inability, they should not blame me. On the contrary, when I saw that I could not help the Bombay city, I said I might at least help the other three cities. That is the only position I could take and which I have taken.

Sir, I again move the amendment with a fervent hope that the misunderstanding caused in this debate should be left aside, the only question before us being as to whether the amendment which was semi-officially accepted at one time should be accepted by the whole House without a division as it seeks to reduce some tax.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Sir, I think I should make the position of Government quite clear and as to what actually happened. The position of Government has been repeatedly stated to this House that not only they need all the taxation which they can get out of this Bill, but they still want more money for which they shall have to borrow. That has been repeatedly made clear. It is not in the hands of Government to pass any Bill. It is in the hands of this honourable House to decide. So, if Government want more money and if the honourable members of this House are ready to give it, there is no reason why Government should refuse it, because they want it.

The honourable member from Ahmednagar wanted the Honourable the Leader of the House to state what actually happened by his own mouth. What happened was that when the amendment was under discussion, he approached the Honourable the Leader of the House and made a certain suggestion, and that was put to me by the Honourable the Leader. The first suggestion was that it should be 50 per cent. for the mofussil rates, then the next suggestion was that it should be 1 per cent. and in the beginning I stated that I should never for a moment accept for these three cities the same rates which apply to the mofussil cities, otherwise there is no reason why the Transfer of Property Act should be extended to those cities. So I submit, Sir, this amended proposal was brought and calculations were asked to be made, and naturally the honourable members thought that the Government were going to accept this amendment. But it is not in the hands of Government, otherwise Government would have brought some other finance bills and would have levied taxation according to their sweet will, but it is for the honourable House to decide.

Then the honourable member for the Bombay Chamber of Commerce (Mr. Winterbotham) said that the honourable members of the select committee ought to be consulted. That is not the correct position. Members of the select committee are not consulted before anything is accepted because every taxation is a matter of give and take. When yesterday I moved an amendment which was against the recommendations of the select committee, I myself thought that the select committee had gone wrong in my humble opinion and that I should raise the duty on suits for amounts from Rs. 5,000 to Rs. 10,000. But all the same when the honourable members of this honourable House are anxious to supply funds which Government are in so much need of, I do not think that Government will be well advised to throw away that money. So I submit, Sir, in that case my clear duty here is to vote against the amendment and to support the original proposal.

Clause 19 (Repeal of Bom. II of 1926) ordered to stand part of the Bill.

The Preamble ordered to stand part of the Bill.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: With your permission, Sir, the third reading of the Bill will be moved to-morrow, as some consequential changes have to be made.

BILL No. II OF 1932 (A BILL TO EXTEND CERTAIN PROVISIONS RELATING TO INTESTATE AND TESTAMENTARY SUCCESSION OF THE INDIAN SUCCESSION ACT, 1925, IN ITS APPLICATION TO THE PRESIDENCY OF BOMBAY, TO CERTAIN COMMUNITIES).

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Sir, I introduce Bill No. II of 1932 (a Bill to extend certain provisions relating to intestate and testamentary succession of the Indian Succession Act, 1925, in its application to the Presidency of Bombay, to certain communities).*

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The Bill is introduced.

First Reading.

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: Mr. President, I beg to move the first reading of Bill No. II of 1932 (a Bill to extend certain provisions relating to intestate and testamentary succession of the Indian Succession Act, 1925, in its application to the Presidency of Bombay, to certain communities). In moving the first reading I have to make a few observations as regards the present state of the law and the way in which it makes a differentiation as regards the tax according to race, religion or locality.

*Appendix 19.

[Sir Govindrao Pradhan]

The assets in India of Europeans, Eurasians, Armenians, Jews and persons of foreign domicile have to pay duty, whether there is a will or not and whether they seek the aid of the court or not in establishing any right to any property. The estates of Parsis are liable to stamp duty whether there is a will or not, and the estates of the Indian Christians when there is a will and where a right is sought to be established in a court of law.

As regards the Hindus, under the Hindu Wills Act, if there is a will made in Bombay or if there is a will relating to parties situated in Bombay, it has got to be admitted to probate before any right to such a will is established. The estates of Mahomedans, whether they die testate or intestate, and the estates of Hindus to which the Hindus Wills Act does not apply, and the estates of the Indian Christians who die intestate pay no duty. The exemption as regards the Indian Christians for intestacy is granted under the Indian Christian Administration of Estates Act VII of 1901. There are certain other Acts like the Succession Certificate Act of 1889, which contain provisions which are intended to facilitate the collection of debts and to offer protection to parties paying these debts to representatives of the deceased persons. In this Presidency also there is Bombay Regulation VIII of 1827, which offers an alternative to probate or letters of administration or a succession certificate. There are several other different Acts passed for the purpose of representation for deceased persons, such as the Government Savings Bank Act of 1873, the Post Office Cash Certificate Act of 1917, the Provident Funds Act of 1897, the Imperial Bank of India Act of 1920, the Indian Companies Act of 1930 and the Indian Securities Act of 1920. They are intended to enforce representation indirectly, as under them the production of a probate or letters of administration can be insisted upon as a condition precedent to the making of any payment. These different anomalies were noticed time after time, and they have been forcibly brought to the notice of the public in the report of the Indian Taxation Enquiry Committee, and in order to bring about a change, so that all the different communities may be treated as far as possible on an equal level, the Indian Succession Act is sought to be amended. By the amendment it is not obligatory for the other communities, who are sought to be brought under the purview of the Act, to obtain probate or letters of administration in each and every case. It is only when a person goes to seek the aid of the court with regard to the property of any deceased person that the court will refuse to pass a decree unless a probate, if there is a will, or letters of administration with or without the will annexed, is produced. In such cases the defendants never pay any duty. It is only when you figure as a plaintiff in a particular case and you seek the aid of the court that it becomes necessary for you to produce such probate or letters of administration. Even now, by the different enactments to which a reference has been made, in several cases, in order to establish representation to a deceased person, a succession certificate or an heirship certificate or letters of administration have to be produced. This differential treatment based on race, religion and place has been commented upon on several occasions, and the object of this Bill is to remedy this difference or discrimination.

As this is a very simple matter, it is not intended to send the Bill to a select committee, and if the House permits the first reading to go through, it is intended to take it through all the three readings at this session.

With these words, I move the first reading of the Bill.

Question proposed.

Rao Bahadur R. R. KALE (Bombay University): Sir, I rise to oppose the first reading of this Bill. I do not wish to make a long speech, because I feel that the time of the House need not be taken up with a discussion on this matter.

In the first place, this Bill seeks to impose a duty which really has been never imposed so far. The honourable mover of the Bill said that there have been various enactments like the Regulation of 1827, the Succession Certificate Act, and so on. But the very fact that those various enactments were passed from time to time limiting the operation of the succession duty to particular cases is evidence to show that the wholesale levy of a duty on succession or inheritance was never approved by the Government, and the reason of that is very clear. I shall only content myself with stating what the reason is. The rule which is enacted under section 212 of the Indian Succession Act is that no right to any part of the property of a person who has died intestate can be established in any court of justice unless letters of administration have first been granted by a court of competent jurisdiction; and there follows the second clause which says:

"This section shall not apply in the case of the intestacy of a Hindu, a Mahomedan, a Buddhist, a Sikh, a Jain, or an Indian Christian."

That rule is founded upon the English law of personality which never recognised the heredity of property. So, under the English law, on the death of a person intestate, his property was taken charge of originally by the Crown and then by the Church, whose duty was to appoint some person to administer the property. This duty is now carried out by the Probate Division of the High Court in England. So, in every case of intestate death, if it is necessary to deal with the deceased's property, an administrator representing it has to be first appointed; whereas, Sir, that principle does not apply to a Hindu, a Mahomedan, a Buddhist, a Sikh, a Jain or an Indian Christian. The reason for such exemption is the fact that under the personal law of all these communities, upon death the property of an intestate person passes by succession to his heirs and does not go abegging for a representative, so that the creditor can follow such property in the heir's hand, and is not put to the necessity of securing representation for the intestate's property. That is the fundamental principle on which this succession duty was not levied on the property of persons who died intestate and who belonged to the various faiths. That being so, for the first time in the history of this country I should say, an attempt has been made to make an encroachment on the personal law of Hindus, Mahomedans, Buddhists, Indian Christians, who are named here. In the first instance it is an all-India question. If at all this legislation is to be undertaken, it must be an all-India legislation. I do not mean to say that this House is not competent to undertake this legislation, because under the Devolution Rules power has been given to it. In order to keep uniformity in a matter of so vital an importance, I do feel that it should have been the Indian legislature which should have undertaken this duty and not the local Council of this Presidency.

Besides, this Bill differs from the other Bills which were brought in this House, in that this is going to be permanently put on the statute book. The reason given for the introduction of this Bill is that the finances of the Bombay Presidency require more money. This is not merely an emergency Bill, but it is going to be placed on the statute book permanently. As I said I do not want to take much time of the House. I am opposed to the principle of the Bill. May I appeal to the communities who are not at present exempted, to think that if they were in our position, would they like their personal law of property to be encroached upon for the sake of finance? I know that money is needed, but when it becomes a question of affecting personal law relating to property of certain communities, how would they like an encroachment of that right? It is in that light that this measure should be looked at. This Bill or rather a part of it which is now put before the House was included in a Bill which was published a year ago but was not put before the House. Last time when the Bill was before the House in another form, it was rejected. That having been rejected, this fresh attempt, which stands on almost the same footing as the two previous Bills, will not, I am sure, meet with any success at the hands of this House.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: If it is the desire of the House that they should speak, I hope they will be short in their speeches and help in saving the time of the House.

Mr. J. B. PETIT (Bombay Millowners' Association): Mr. President, you will remember, Sir, that this measure was before this honourable House last session, when all of us had the opportunity of expressing our views thereon, either for or against it. It was on that occasion, Sir, that I felt and said that, so far as the principle underlying the Bill was concerned, there was nothing inherently wrong in it and that this honourable House should readily accept the proposal. It was, however, unfortunately rejected, for reasons which are already well-known. It has now come to us again in another form, but with the object of attaining the same purpose. My appeal to this House to-day, is therefore on the same lines as the one that I made then, because the facts and the reasons are still the same. I do not understand why there should be so much opposition to the principle underlying the Bill. Having very carefully followed the objections that were raised against it on the last occasion, as also the speech that has just been delivered by my honourable friend, the member for the Bombay University (Rao Bahadur Kale), I feel bound to assert that I do not find a single valid argument advanced therein in justification of the opposition, except perhaps the ground of "personal law", which has been urged for the first time to-day and repeatedly emphasised by the honourable member for the University, with some semblance of reason.

Let us now pause for a moment and examine what this argument amounts to. First of all, it is difficult to understand what he means to convey by the expression "personal law." My information is that lawyers disagree as to the exact significance of this expression, as applied to this practice. I am not a lawyer myself and am therefore unable to put my own interpretation on it. But I would like to ask my honourable friend, the member for the University, who is himself a practising pleader of long standing, what it is exactly that he means by this expression. Honourable members of this House may be perfectly certain that it is not "religious law" that is meant; for, if it had been meant and could have been substantiated, a shrewd and experienced lawyer like him, would have been the first person to say so and make capital out of it for bolstering up his case. The mere fact that he has not done so, is proof positive that there is no such justification. It is clear from the context of his speech, that by "personal law" is only meant, a law that has the sanction of custom and has been enjoyed by certain communities to the exclusion of others, by virtue of such practice. At any rate, we are entitled to come to this conclusion in the absence of any proof, conceding to this expression, religious sanctity or superior status of any other kind. Shorn of all its verbiage, this claim of "personal law" has therefore neither the sanctity of religion nor the sanction of equity, to justify it. In a word, this argument accordingly boils itself down to a claim based merely on long and undisputed practice.

Judged from this standpoint, I do not see why certain charges, leviable in the shape of probate duties and fees on letters of administration, should be paid by everybody in the land, except the members of the two communities concerned. I cannot understand why the Hindu and Mahomedan communities should be exempted from the payment of these taxes, when everyone else is subject to them. Under one and the same Government, there cannot be two laws for the same purpose, one applicable to one set of people and a different one to another. We are to-day living in the 20th century; and still it is amazing that such strenuous opposition should be levelled against such a simple measure on such grounds as have been advanced. There is no reason why a practice which was established years ago, should still continue under altered conditions and be perpetuated for all times. I cannot understand how this Bill can be held up and opposed, merely because it happens to run counter to what is loosely described as "personal law", but what at the same time, by inference, is sought to be invested with the dignity of a religious injunction. I fail to see the force of the expression "personal law"! and how it can over-ride the law of the land. If there is no justification in equity for the existence of such a practice, why should this honourable House give it the sanction of law? If it is not a religious injunction, why should it accord to it the immunity which religious tenets and practices usually get under British rule? If it is now sought to remove this anomaly, why should there be so much feeling on that point? At one time, it was urged that the property of a deceased person was transferable to the heirs under their respective religious codes in certain fixed proportions; and that therefore any endeavour to compel them to take out probates or letters of administration, was contrary to their religious tenets and would hurt their religious susceptibilities. But it was then clearly proved that such a ground had no foundation in fact, that members of these communities could and did as a matter of fact make wills and dispose of their properties differently, that the direction if any in the religious codes was merely optional, and that therefore the argument was wholly untenable. It was also proved that numerous members of both these communities had on various occasions, of their own accord, paid probate duties and taken out letters of administration to suit their convenience. That argument has therefore not been advanced this time and appears to have been wisely abandoned, perhaps because it was realised that it was untenable. If it is not "religious law"—as, under these circumstances, it cannot possibly be,—then it cannot command, even in this country, the sanctity that religious law does, and is consequently not entitled as such to any special consideration at the hands of this honourable House. It is thus clear that it is sought to be justified and perpetuated for all times, only on the grounds of practice and custom. It is for this honourable House to consider and examine the reasonableness and justice of this claim and to decide accordingly. If considered in the light of justice and equity, I have no doubt in my mind as to the answer that this honourable House should give to this attitude.

Coming to the provisions of the Bill, there is nothing unfair or inequitable in them; and nobody can blame the Government for the same. The Honourable the Finance Member has told us that he is not making the provisions of the Bill compulsorily applicable to all those who, rightly or wrongly, are exempted at the present moment. I do not agree with him in this leniency; but, at any rate, those who oppose this measure, cannot complain of it. According to him, it is only when there is some dispute and the matter goes to a court of law, that the provisions of the Bill are to apply; and either a probate has to be taken out or letters of administration obtained. Ordinarily, properties could be transferred as now, to the names of the heirs, and no difficulty would arise, except of course in cases where the help of the law-courts is sought, under which circumstance they would refuse to interfere unless the provisions of this Bill were complied with. Personally, I think the Bill does not go far enough; and this concession emasculates it still further. But that being the intention, the opponents of the Bill at least ought to be grateful to the Government for the same. Indeed, if anything, this attitude of the Government takes away all the force of the opposition and of any justification, however feeble, that they may have had at one time in putting up a fight for the perpetuation of what they call "personal law". But if even this indirect and halting application of the ordinary law to the members of the Hindu and Mahomedan communities is resented and blocked by them in this manner, then good-bye to all reforms on modern and progressive lines.

Let us now consider the Bill from yet another point of view. The opponents of this measure seem to forget that at present even the members of the Hindu and Mahomedan communities, when transfering their properties during their life-time, pay the necessary fees thereon according to the laws of the land. If they transfer shares, they have to pay transfer-fees and stamp charges on them. If they transfer landed properties, they have to do likewise. Is there any special reason then why they should not do so when they die and when their properties are transferred ? I frankly confess that I see none.

Under all these circumstances, I think this honourable House would be perfectly justified in accepting the principle underlying this measure and passing its first reading. I have accordingly much pleasure, not only in supporting the motion for the first reading but also in asking the House to do likewise.

Mr. H. C. B. MITCHELL : Mr. President, Sir, the honourable mover of this Bill stressed the view that it was a taxation Bill,——

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN : I said that it would also equalize the practice for all communities.

Mr. H. C. B. MITCHELL : —— but I do want to ask the honourable members of this House rather to regard it as a Bill of progress in the communities which are going to be affected. Now, Sir, this is dealing with probate and administration. A very large number of the honourable members of this House, I believe, do not understand what exactly it does mean. I have some experience of these two transactions, and I have found even people of our own profession who do not rightly understand the effect. The grant of probate or administration does not alter the personal law or alter the succession at all. As regards probate, it is true that a court does declare a will valid. But administration does not alter it at all. All that is done under these two documents is : the court creates a manager for the property and sees that there is somebody who is responsible to see that the property is, first of all, collected, afterwards paid to the creditors and paid to the right heirs. The administration has to be done according to law and it has to be done according to the personal law. But the obtaining of administration by anybody does not mean that they are entitled to the property ; all it means is the court authorizes them to see that the property goes to the proper hands. So, there is no infringement of the personal law at all. I want to stress that because the honourable member opposite (Rao Bahadur Kale) said that it was an infringement——

Rao Bahadur R. R. KALE: I quoted from a decision of the High Court that it is an infringement.

Mr. H. C. B. MITCHELL: I still say, Sir, that it is not an infringement of the personal law in spite of what the honourable member says. It is simply creating a proper channel through which the property can be administered.

I want the honourable members to realise what is the effect of taking this grant. I say, Sir, that it is an enormous advantage to the people who have to obtain it. If this Bill were making it compulsory to take a grant out on every death, I would welcome it. What is the position if you do not take a grant? What protection have the heirs or the successors? They have absolutely none. I feel sure that a very large majority of the members of this House have seen cases where there has been no grant and where somebody else has unauthorizedly administered the estate and has had the money and not the heirs. Now, if in the case of a probate, as I said, the will is sought to be made authentic and the court authorizes the executor named in the will to administer the estate, that is the wish of the deceased; but it does not necessarily mean that the property under the will should not be administered under the law. It merely says that this is the man who administers the estate. With regard to letters of administration, where there is no will, the court goes one step further and takes an administration bond. If the heirs do not get the money, not only can they sue the administrator and recover the sum, but if they cannot recover they have the security of bond. It is an enormous protection to the heir, and the heir, as we all know, is very often an infant or a widow or somebody who is not strong to enforce a claim. When they get this protection from the court they are better off. I ask honourable members of the communities affected to think that they are better off too. Are their children not going to be better off if they have a properly appointed manager to manage the estate; are they not more likely to get the money?

As regards the taxation, it is a very, very small duty. The court performs a function and you pay for it, and it is really worth it. So much for the heirs.

What about the creditors? As a commercial community, as a community depending on trade, are we not in a better position if there is money owed, to know whom to sue, and if money is owing, to know whom to pay? Take the case of a debtor who has got to pay his debt to the heir. He does not know the position and pays it to the man who comes to him and says, "I am his son; I want the money." He pays off. What happens when the true heir comes along? He has got to pay again. The position is that you can only do without a grant in a primitive society. If you have a very simple community in a small village, they all know each other's position better than the people themselves. They are prepared to take the risk of paying somebody whom they know to be the heir or who they think ought to be one. They take the risk and pay the money. But the moment you begin to get dealings with people outside, they do not know who the heir is; they are not prepared to take the risk. And when you go to big commercial cities, you find that these communities have to take out letters of administration. If they own shares, if they have got a bank account, the banks are not going to take the risk of transferring accounts or the Directors of a Company shares to people who do not take out letters of administration or probate. I know the communities in the mofussil are primitive; but are not they going to progress? And this is a step of progress which helps. Take the case of land which passes through inheritance. If it passes through inheritance without letters of administration it is worth less than otherwise. It spoils the value of the land. That is particularly the case in the joint Hindu family. It is the same with Muhammadan properties which are inherited without proper letters of administration. It frightens the purchaser and he won't pay its worth. I have experience; I have to handle these estates and I know. It does affect the value of the land. This Bill tends to encourage people to take out letters of administration and this is a definite step of progress.

Then I come to another point which is important. I have never had to practise outside Bombay, and I do not know the procedure outside. But how are courts going to get through their work if a defendant suddenly calls on the plaintiff to prove that he is the heir?

Rao Bahadur R. R. KALE: In case of shares etc. the law is already applicable.

Mr. H. C. B. MITCHELL: On a simple question of a debt in the mofussil you can raise a preliminary issue: is this the right heir? The judicial time wasted to settle this must be enormous. I must admit that I do not know about the practice in the mofussil, as I have never practised there.

Rao Bahadur R. R. KALE: Unless the certificate is produced, the court won't proceed. The law is already in force.

Mr. H. C. B. MITCHELL: The point I want to make is this: what is the duty you are going to pay? Two per cent. What is it, compared to the protection that is going to be given to the heirs and the community at large? I am trying to make it clear that it becomes most extraordinarily difficult if you have no proper proof of succession. Lack of title, lack of stability. You do not know who is the successor to a man. No proper means either to pay or to receive. The personal laws are tremendously intricate. The personal law of succession is different, quite apart from the mysterious question of the Joint Hindu family. You go into the question of Hindu female succession, Muhammadan succession and Parsi succession, which I defy any ordinary laymen to understand at all. And all that is overcome by the simple method of asking somebody who has been appointed by the court to take out letters of administration or probate, and the protection afforded is so great. I hope people will look at the Bill not as a Bill purely of taxation. I think people will appreciate that there is a great deal in the Bill besides imposing a tax. Governments in other countries have piled taxation on deaths enormously. That is not the case here. We are having a very small duty. I would particularly stress that the principle of taking out probate or letters of administration is well worth the money, and any encouragement to do it is an encouragement to definite advancement in the progress of society. With these words, I support the Bill before the House.

Sir SHAH NAWAZ BHUTTO (Larkana District): Sir, I had no mind to take part in this debate, but my colleagues have insisted that I should say only a few words in order to make the position of Muslim members of this honourable House clear. Sir, it is very difficult for honourable members like Mr. Petit to realise our difficulties. It is only Muslims who know fully well their religion and the rights, privileges and the obligations of Muslims. The succession question, so far as the Muslim community is concerned, is governed by our Holy-Book and Muhammadan law is based on Shariat and the exceptional cases are governed by personal law, and it makes the case so clear that there is no difficulty whatsoever to avoid litigations. We cannot agree to pay for probate certificate, before one can be legally considered heir, when our Shariat entitles us automatically to succession. The particular difficulty with Muslims is that even their ladies and other different relatives are entitled to a share in property. Once a bill like this is passed, it will create such a complication that there will be bogus claimants springing up, unless one guards oneself by means of a certificate. Sir, we considered and reconsidered this Bill at a very great length, and at our meeting of Muslim party we decided unanimously that it would not be possible for the Muslim party to support this Bill. This is the third attempt Government have made, knowing fully well that all the non-official members whether Hindus or Muslims are opposed to this Bill. Government have before this brought forward this Bill twice with no better results and it was only in the interest of smooth sailing of other finance bills and harmony that Government were prevailed upon not to press this Bill. When, however, I approached the Honourable the Finance Member the other day with the mandate from Muslim party members, I am sorry to say that my request, which was in a very friendly spirit, made out of the best of motives, was misunderstood as a threat to Government—mind you, as a threat to Government—and perhaps that may be one of the reasons why Government have decided to insist on the introduction of this Bill. It was absolutely no threat of any kind, it was the unanimous decision of the Muslim members of the Muslim party and I only went to convey it and to request the Honourable the Finance Member not to make our position difficult with our constituencies, as in these hard times people are not prepared to tolerate even the idea of fresh taxes, so that it should be easier for us to support the remaining Bill. However, we had to reconsider our decision realising our responsibility in the interest of good Government, finding Government in a hopelessly bad plight financially, and it was with very great persuasion that the Muslim members decided to deal with each Bill on its merits. But when we started with the second reading of Finance Bill, I was surprised at the changed attitude of the Honourable the Finance Member towards the members of other parties. He has made two or three bargains with them and effected a reconciliation. Why were their suggestions not taken as threats? When the Muslim members who were vitally concerned in this taxation and who knew that this Bill had not even a grain of chance to get through this House, approached the Honourable the Finance Member, he took their request as a threat? Whatever he may have thought then, he can feel the pulse and understand now that none of the non-official members—Hindus and Musalmans—of this House are inclined to support a Bill of this nature. We cannot take notice of the advice of the members who are not affected by this proposed measure; they should put themselves in our position and realise our difficulties. Perhaps they don't see eye to eye with us and are wrong in thinking that they can be more loyal and greater well-wishers to our children than we can. There is no need of advice and persuasion here. We do earnestly feel that we should go to the help of Government when their financial condition is so bad and when they need money so badly and we have given enough proof by supporting the finance Bill but at the same time Government should appreciate our difficulties as well. It is, however, a matter for keen regret that the Government could not find out some other kinds of sources of revenue in preference to the present Bill, when it would have been possible for us to help them and that they depend on the support of honourable members who are not concerned, have no interest and who are not to be affected by this measure which Government want to thrust and force upon an unwilling House. With these remarks, I oppose the motion before the House.

Dr. J. ALBAN D'SOUZA (Bombay City, South): Sir, I confess that I am rather surprised at so much being made of the infringement of personal law by the provision of the Bill now under discussion. I cannot help feeling that the fears expressed on this score are entirely groundless. It is up to this Honourable House to see whether the arguments that have been adduced are sound or not sound. Personally I do not believe that the arguments advanced against the Bill are convincing enough to induce me to vote against it. The question I wish to ask this Honourable House is: Are the personal laws of the various communities generally made applicable to them? For the information of the House I may be permitted to cite the instance of the Catholic section of the Indian Christian Community in whose case its marriage laws, to its utter discomfiture, are not personal to it.

Another ground put forward against the Bill is the question of prestige, prescriptive right and immemorial practice. An objection has been raised on this ground and it has been held that a change is not possible. Sir, there is a well known saying in Latin: "Tempora mutantur et nos cum illis," the English version of which is "Times change and we change with the times." [An Honourable Member: "We are not prepared to change."] The question, Sir, is not whether we are prepared to change. If the times demand the change we must be prepared to accept it. The times gone by were normal. The demand for a change did not arise. The present times are abnormal in the extreme. The demand arises as an urgent measure. It must be accepted. It is news to me, Sir, that the Indian Christian Community is in certain respects exempt from the measure now under discussion. We have been told that it is not applicable to Hindus, Mahomedans, Jains, Buddhists and Indian Christians. I am an Indian Christian and as such I am in certain respects exempt from the measure. Far from this being an argument upon which to base an opposition to the provisions of the Bill, I feel it provides a good reason for upholding the view I have expressed. I stand for fairness and justice. I would request this honourable House to look at this measure chiefly from this point of view.

Another point in favour of this Bill, as has been pointed out by the Honourable Finance Member in his speech introducing this Bill is, that it will not operate universally but only in such cases where the parties wish to go to Court in order to secure certain rights. It is obviously therefore a measure which in addition to securing to citizens certain advantages will also prevent frauds. I shall next refer to the strong argument put up by the Advocate General, when he spoke on this Bill when it was introduced on the last occasion. He said that when a transfer of property occurs during one's lifetime there is not the slightest hesitation or quibbling over the payment of fees and other dues as demanded by law. Why is it, he enquired, that after death of a party the inheritors feel the burden and create an uproar when a duty of the same kind is sought to be made ?

I think, Sir, this argument ought to prove convincing. We have no hesitation in paying a charge on transactions over properties, which we have possibly worked ourselves off to acquire. Why is it, I ask, when these properties are left as legacies, that there should be so much opposition to pay the same sort of charges on the part of those who have obtained these properties without having to work for them. I am in hearty agreement with the remarks that fell from my honourable friend Mr. Mitchell who implied that probate is for the purpose of establishing one's right in a Court of law. Wills may thereby be declared valid. It therefore appears that probate far from militating against personal law is only a hand-maid to it.

Rao Bahadur G. K. CHITALE: You have not understood him properly.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Order, order.

Dr. J. ALBAN D'SOUZA: Am I out of order again, Sir ?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Not this time.

Dr. J. ALBAN D'SOUZA: Sir, my honourable friend Sir Shah Nawaz Bhutto made a very impressive speech, and in the course of this speech he said that it is impossible for those who are non-Mahomedans—and I am one of that lot—to realise the intricacies connected with the Act of succession in their case, and he spoke about religion being implicated in the intricacies to which he referred. Here again, most probably, he was referring to personal law on which he took his stand. As I have indicated already, the personal law is there with the object of establishing his rights. Far from infringing it, it tends to support and maintain the force of personal law.

Now, Sir, another point I wish to refer to is that my honourable friend Rao Bahadur Kale said that it is not proper that this Bill should be introduced here as it is a measure that rests more with the Central Government than with the Local Government. My reply to this, Sir, is that inasmuch as the Local Government have the right to introduce the Bill and have done so for the definite purpose of raising funds to carry on the Government of this Province its introduction here must be held to be in order. [Interruption.]

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: Order, order. The honourable member must proceed without minding the interruptions. There are hardly a few seconds now left.

Dr. J. ALBAN D'SOUZA: These interruptions are certainly not mine. I have got only a few words to say. There is only one small point I would refer to.

We have been informed by this side of the House that this Bill is introduced as a permanent measure. The Honourable House ought to realise that it need not necessarily be a permanent measure, a measure that is going to last the lifetime of this Presidency. It is open to any honourable member to move an amendment limiting the life of the Bill to a year or two. I feel there should be no difficulty about this. The Honourable the Finance Member has clearly indicated that the Bill is introduced specifically for the purpose of meeting an urgent need. He should therefore have no objection to the limitation. With these remarks, Sir, I support the first reading of the Bill.

The Honourable the PRESIDENT: The House is now adjourned to 2 o'clock to-morrow, Friday the 18th March 1932.

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

LLOYD BARRAGE AT SUKKUR, TRIAL FOR OPENING CEREMONY.

*Mr. HAJI MIR MAHOMED BALOCH (Karachi City): Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) Whether their attention has been drawn to a letter published on the 5th page of the Alwahid, Karachi, dated 23rd December 1931, wherein a correspondent has reported that for experimental purposes the gates on the Bar on the Indus were closed to raise the level of water on the Bukkur Gauge so as to permit of water flowing into the Canals in connection with the opening of the Barrage by His Excellency the Viceroy ?

(b) If the reply to the above is in the affirmative,

(i) the number of persons injured in the course of the experiment of lowering the gates ;

(ii) the number of persons treated in hospital ;

(iii) the number of days of treatment ;

(iv) the number of persons who died of injuries ;

(v) the extent of damage done to the gates or masonry ;

(vi) the amount of compensation paid to the labourers so injured ?

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN: Sir, the honourable member's question is not correct. However, whatever the nature of the question, this is the modified reply which I wish to make :

There was no "experiment" of lowering the gates. What the honourable member presumably refers to was the accidental partial collapse of one of the counterweights. If this is the case, supplementary information is as follows :

(b) (i) The number of persons injured when the counterweight collapsed was 11.

(ii) Seven of the injured were treated as indoor patients in the Barrage hospital.

(iii) The period of treatment as in-patients is shown below :

1 man for 32 days,
1 man for 21 days,
1 man for 18 days,
1 man for 8 days,
1 man for 7 days,
1 man for 5 days.

(iv) No person died.

(v) No damage was done to gates or masonry.

(vi) The accident has not resulted in permanent injury to any of the above men and no compensation is payable, but all the above 7 men were paid hospital leave salary and the total payment on this account amounted to Rs. 60. All the men were re-employed on discharge from hospital, except No. 1 who was not discharged until after the work was completed and there was then no further need of his services.

KOLABA DISTRICT: AGRICULTURISTS AND RELIEF IN ASSESSMENT.

*Mr. N. N. PATIL (Kolaba District): Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) Whether it is a fact that there is a partial failure of rice crop in the Kolaba District generally and particularly in the Kharapat portion of the Alibag Taluka? If so, what is the percentage of failure?

(b) What relief in assessment they have given to the agriculturists of the District?

(c) Whether it is a fact that the prices of paddy have gone down by about fifty per cent. below the price on the basis of which the revision settlements in the various talukas of the District were made?

(d) Whether they intend to give any relief to the agriculturists of the District in regard to the assessment for this year?

(e) Whether they are aware that at the present rates the assessment of land goes as high as 75 per cent. of the net produce of land?

The Honourable Mr. W. F. HUDSON: (a) Yes. The percentage of failure has not been ascertained.

(b) In addition to resuspending all authorised arrears throughout the district Government have granted a further suspension of three annas in the rupee of the current year's demand in the following talukas and mahals—

(1) Karjat including Khalapur Petha.
(2) Panvel including Uran Mahal.
(3) Pen.
(4) Roha.
(5) Alibag.

(c) No.

(d) Vide reply to clause (b).

(e) No.

Mr. N. N. PATIL: With regard to (a) may I know why the percentage of failure has not been ascertained by Government?

The Honourable Mr. W. F. HUDSON: There is no reason to ascertain the percentage of failure. I do not know what the honourable member refers to. Does he mean per village, per holding or per taluka?

Mr. N. N. PATIL: Per taluka.

The Honourable Mr. W. F. HUDSON: There is no method of ascertaining the percentage of failure of crop in a taluka.

Mr. N. N. PATIL : With regard to (b), will Government be pleased to state why Mangaon and Mahad talukas have been excluded from the grant of suspensions ?

The Honourable Mr. W. F. HUDSON : Because the rates there are low.

Mr. N. N. PATIL : With regard to (c), I want to know from Government what was the price of paddy per khandi at the time of the revision settlement and what it is at present according to their information ?

The Honourable Mr. W. F. HUDSON : In which taluka ?

Mr. N. N. PATIL : In the district.

The Honourable Mr. W. F. HUDSON : It varies in every taluka.

Mr. A. N. SURVE : With regard to (a), if the percentage of failure had not been ascertained, on what principle were the concessions mentioned in part (b) of the question granted ?

The Honourable Mr. W. F. HUDSON : The percentage of failure is one thing ; the relation of prices to the assessment rates is another. The concession was granted, not on the failure of crops, but on the relation of prices to those assumed for the purposes of settlement.

Rao Bahadur B. R. NAIK : As regards (c), the question is " whether it is a fact that the prices of paddy have gone down by about fifty per cent. below the price on which the revision settlements in the various talukas of the district were made." The reply to that is in the negative. Had the Honourable Member ascertained the average price of paddy in the district when the assessments were fixed last time ?

The Honourable Mr. W. F. HUDSON : Certainly ; I should not have given that reply without ascertaining it.

Dr. M. K. DIXIT : May I know what is the average ?

The Honourable Mr. W. F. HUDSON : I do not know whether the House would like to know the figures for every taluka, but they vary between 41 and 9.

GRAZING FEES, SIRSI AND SIDDAPUR TALUKAS.

*Mr. A. N. SURVE (Bombay City, North) : (a) Is it a fact that the ryots in the Sirsi and Siddapur talukas of the Karwar District are charged grazing fees, irrespective of the betta lands which they hold ?

(b) What is the proportion fixed between garden land and betta land in a holding ?

(c) What assessment per acre of garden and betta lands is charged in the two talukas named above ?

(d) What is betta land ?

(e) Is it a fact that under rule 6 (2) regulating grazing fees, a forest officer can exempt villages in which the owners have got their lands or other facilities of their own from payment of grazing fees ?

(f) Will Government kindly place a copy of the rule on the Council table, and explain under what circumstances the ryots possessing betta lands are charged grazing fees ?

(g) What are the rates of grazing fees charged in the abovenamed two talukas and the total amount for the year 1930-31 realised in them as grazing fees ?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur S. T. KAMBLI : (a) Yes, except in villages where owing to abundance of grazing in betta lands or other occupied land the village cattle do not make use of the grazing in forest areas.

(b) The scale is 9 acres of betta for each acre of garden land.

(c) Prior to 1924, no separate assessment was levied or fixed for garden and betta lands. The assessment on garden lands included the charges on account of betta. But since 1924 an extra assessment of Rs. 8 per acre of new garden land to which "betta" is assigned is charged.

(d) A "betta" is an area of Protected Forest assigned to a group of betelnut and spice gardens for the supply of "soppu" or green leaf manure.

(e) Yes.

(f) A copy of rule VI (2) of the Grazing Rules is placed on the Council table. Ryots who possess "betta" lands but who graze their cattle in other Government forest, are charged grazing fees in accordance with the Grazing Rules. Exemption may be obtained by proof to the satisfaction of the Divisional Forest Officer that cattle do not graze in forest outside betta lands on account of their being stall-fed or for any other valid reason.

(g) The rates are Re. 0-2-0 per head of cattle and Re. 0-1-0 for a sheep or a goat. The total amount of grazing fees collected during 1930-31 was—

	Rs.	a.	p.
Sirsi	3,001	12	0
Siddapur	2,355	2	0

Copy of Rule VI (2) of the Grazing Rules.

(2) In forest villages the fees will ordinarily be levied on all cattle, subject to the limitations imposed by rules III and V. But in villages where stall feeding is practised on a large scale, or where owing to abundance of grazing in private lands all the cattle do not make use of the forest grazing, or for other satisfactory reasons, fees may at the discretion of the Divisional Forest Officer in consultation with the Collector be levied only on such cattle as actually graze in forest.

Mr. G. S. GANGOLI : With regard to (a), is a village charged collectively, and are not the owners of cattle charged individually ?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur S. T. KAMBLI : What part of the question ?

Mr. G. S. GANGOLI : Part (a).

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur S. T. KAMBLI : A copy of the rule relating to grazing is printed in the reply. That will explain the whole position.

Mr. G. S. GANGOLI : The answer comes in the way of individual rights. Is the payment of taxes made by a group, or is it made by individuals ?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur S. T. KAMBLI : Sir, the same rule explains the system prevailing there.

Mr. G. S. GANGOLI : Well, I have tabled other questions on this point. Now with regard to part (2) of question (g), is grazing on bettas not allowed ? I am referring to rule VI (2) on page 6.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur S. T. KAMBLI : That does not arise out of the question at all. I want notice.

GOVERNMENT CENTRAL PRESS, BOMBAY : PIECE WORKERS' WAGES.

*Mr. J. S. KADRI for Mr. SYED MUNAWAR : Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether the task workers and the piece workers employed in the Government Central Press, Bombay, were originally excluded from the 10 per cent. reduction in wage ? If so, what were the reasons therefor ;

(b) whether the 10 per cent. reduction in wage has been recently made applicable to those workers ? If so, what are the reasons therefor ?

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN : (a) No, but orders were issued late and Government did not consider it equitable to apply them retrospectively.

(b) Yes. There were no reasons for giving exemption.

Mr. A. N. SURVE : May I enquire whether task workers and piece workers are employed on a permanent basis or temporary basis ?

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN : The honourable member knows this as much as I do. The very name "piece workers" is clear.

SHOLAPUR MERCHANTS CHAMBER.

*Dr. V. G. VAISHAMPAYAN (Sholapur City) : Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether it is a fact that the Sholapur Merchants Chamber was started in the year 1929 ;

(b) whether this Chamber ever passed any political resolutions since its inauguration ;

(c) whether the Collector or the police at Sholapur ever examined the minute book of the Chamber :

(d) whether it is a fact that Mr. Gulabchand was the unanimously elected President of the Sholapur Merchants Chamber from year to year ;

(e) whether it is a fact that the office of the Merchants Chamber at Sholapur was searched on the 7th January 1932 ;

(f) whether Mr. Ranade, the Secretary of the Chamber, was asked to resign his post from the Chamber ;

(g) whether it is a fact that the building occupied by the Merchants Chamber is not the property of the Chamber ; if so, whether the Chamber is paying the rent regularly every year ;

(h) whether it is a fact that a notice has been served upon the owner of the building to the effect that they have taken possession of the building and that, in future, the rent thereof should be paid to them;

(i) what is the name of the owner of the building;

(j) whether he is the father of Mr. Gulabchand?

The Honourable Mr. G. A. THOMAS: (a) The chamber was formed on the 13th December 1928.

(b) It has dealt with subjects of a political nature.

(c) The minute book was examined by the police.

(d) From the minute book it appears that Mr. Gulabchand was elected President of the chamber from year to year. Government is not aware whether he was elected unanimously.

(e) Yes.

(f) No. Mr. Ranade, the Assistant Secretary of the chamber, consulted the District Magistrate, Sholapur, suo motu as to how he could resign his post, as the President of the chamber was under arrest and the Secretary was away, and he could not communicate with any of them. The District Magistrate accordingly advised Mr. Ranade to send his resignation to himself with a view to save him any possible trouble.

(g) The building occupied by the chamber does not belong to it. The chamber pays rent for it at the rate of Rs. 200 per mensem, but this is only a paper transaction for an equal amount is again credited to the chamber by the owner as a gift.

(h) A notice to the effect that Government had taken possession of the building and that tenants should pay rent to Government was served on the owner.

(i) Hirachand Nemchand.

(j) Yes.

Dr. V. G. VAISHAMPAYAN: What particular action or resolution of this Chamber made the District Magistrate declare it as unlawful?

The Honourable Mr. G. A. THOMAS: Because the Chamber dealt with political subjects.

Dr. V. G. VAISHAMPAYAN: Did the District Magistrate give any chance or notice to the Chamber to get its conduct cleared before it was declared unlawful?

The Honourable Mr. G. A. THOMAS: It was not necessary.

Dr. V. G. VAISHAMPAYAN: Was the owner of the property ever served with a notice bringing the conduct of the Chamber to his notice?

The Honourable Mr. G. A. THOMAS: That was not necessary.

The Honourable Mr. G. A. THOMAS: (a) The numbers are:—

Total	.. 1,490

(b) The information asked for is not available, as members of the Indian Territorial Force are not classified as belonging to fighting classes or to allied classes.

(b) the number of persons on the staff in the Central Division Field Party under the control of the Superintendent of Land Records, C. D., Poona, and their designations, grades and castes;

(c) the number of persons on the staff in the Phalni establishment under the control of the Superintendent, Land Records, C. D., Poona, and their designations, grades and castes;

(d) the number of years for which the present Survey Mamlatdar is holding the same post and the reasons why he is not transferred;

(e) whether any representation was made to them as regards the inadequate number of non-Brahmins employed in the departments under the control of the Superintendent, Land Records, C. D., Poona;

(f) if so, what they propose to do in the matter?

The Honourable Mr. W. F. HUDSON: (a) to (c) The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the answer given to the question asked by Mr. N. E. Navle during the September-October session of 1931 printed at pages 532-533 of the Council proceedings. Government trust that the information given on that occasion will be sufficient for the Honourable Member's purpose. They regret that, on account of retrenchment and reduction in staff, they are not prepared to collect information afresh on the lines suggested by the Honourable Member.

(d) The present Survey Mamlatdar has been holding the post since 30th November 1912 with an interval of 6 weeks in 1930 when he acted as Superintendent of Land Records. He has been retained in the post in the interests of the public service.

(e) Yes.

(f) Nothing. Government are satisfied that the recruitment of backward classes has been quite satisfactory.

DAPURI WORKSHOP.

Khan Bahadur D. B. COOPER (Satara District): (a) Will Government be pleased to state the total amount of capital invested by them in the P. W. D. Workshops at Dapuri up to the 31st March 1931?

(b) What was the annual net income of the workshop for the past 3 years ending March 1931 ?

(c) What was the average annual gross expenditure on these workshops for the same period of 3 years ?

(d) Are Government aware that the paid up capital of only the 26 registered engineering firms in the Bombay Presidency is Rs. 99·71 lakhs vide the annual report of the Department of Industries 1930-31, page 6, paragraph 12 ?

(e) Do Government consider that private commercial firms are not competent to meet the needs of the Public Works Department at cheaper rates than the Dapuri Works ?

(f) If the reply to (e) be in the negative, why do they maintain these works ?

(g) If the reply be in the affirmative, will they give at least some details in support of their reply ?

(h) Are Government aware that the Bombay Municipality which requires probably four times as much material as the Dapuri Works could turn out, get all their material and castings from private firms on the tender system, which they find infinitely cheaper than running their own workshops ?

(i) Will Government be pleased to place on the Council Table the Annual Administration Report of the Dapuri Workshop for the year 1930-31 ?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur S. T. KAMBLI : (a) The total amount of capital invested in the Government Central Workshops at Dapuri up to 31st March 1931 is Rs. 8,04,111-12-2 as detailed below :—

	Capital cost. Rs.	a.	p.
1. Land and buildings	4,09,412	1	9
2. Plant and machinery	2,55,220	14	7
3. Furniture and fixtures	16,204	8	8
4. Small tools	1,23,274	3	2
Total	8,04,111	12	2

(b) and (c) The statement containing the requisite information is furnished.

(d) Yes.

(e) Yes.

(f) Does not arise.

(g) The Public Works Department Central Store and Workshop fulfils the following functions :—

(1) The training and launching into life of apprentices generally from the illiterate classes.

(2) Repairs to Public Works Department tools and plant are carried out at the Workshops at a cost which would considerably be exceeded if the repairs were entrusted to outside commercial firms.

(3) Special tools and plant are required for a particular work and become surplus on its completion and cannot be brought into use again for a number of years until similar work comes to be in progress elsewhere. In the absence of the Government Central Store and Workshop there would be a great risk of such plant being left uncared for and consequently deteriorating seriously. Such tools and plant are repaired and stored at Dapuri and made available for use when required.

(4) Dapuri keeps down the prices of outside firms.

(5) Rush jobs can be dealt with expeditiously with consequent saving to Government.

(h) Government are not aware of this, nor are they aware that the Bombay Municipality have ever produced figures to show that work done in their own workshop is any dearer than work done by private firms.

(i) A copy of the report is appended.

Rao Saheb B. G. DESAI (Kaira District): Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether they are aware of the reform effected by the Academic Council of the Madras University by adopting a regulation providing for the admission of L.M.P. diploma holders to the various examinations held by the University and permitting them to qualify themselves for the M.B. and B.S. degrees on certain conditions;

(b) whether they intend to move the University of Bombay to adopt a similar measure providing for the admission of the holders of the L.C.P.S. diploma to the M.B.B.S. and other higher examinations in medicine held by the University of Bombay;

(c) whether they have taken any steps in this behalf; if so, what are they?

The Honourable Sardar Sir RUSTOM J. VAKIL: (a) Yes.

(b) No.

(c) No.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE (Poona City): Will Government be pleased to state whether they are aware that very few students take advantage of the "Short Course" in the Agricultural College; if so, what steps they intend to take to make it popular?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur S. T. KAMBLI: The short course has been advertised in the College prospectus every year. The number of applicants applying for admission to this course is not insufficient but it has failed to attract the right type of man, as many of those who take up the course, are not keen on the work. Thus during the year 1931-32 of the 19 applicants who applied, 13 were admitted but 2 failed to join. One man left during the session while three were sent away as they did not work. The number who appeared for examination was seven only. The question of improving or abolishing the course is under consideration.

AGRICULTURAL SCHOOLS.

Mr. L. R. GOKHALE (Poona City): Will Government be pleased to state whether they are aware that the agricultural schools maintained by the Agricultural Department are not popular? If so, what steps they intend to take to make them attractive and useful?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur S. T. KAMBLI: Government are aware that there is no genuine demand for this type of schools which are unduly expensive to run. Three of them have already been closed as a measure of retrenchment and one more will be closed shortly. When funds become available, it is hoped to start a new type of school on remodelled lines, which would be self-supporting and where work would be provided for the students to enable them to earn while they learn.

The Honourable Sir RAFIUDDIN AHMAD: (a) The percentages are 42·6 and 61 respectively.

RATNAGIRI HARBOUR PROVISION OF LIGHT

Rao Bahadur L V PARULEKAR (Ratnagiri District): Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether their attention has been drawn to the fact that the arrangement for moving light made in the Ratnagiri harbour has been stopped since last year,

(b) if so, whether they have any objection to continue that arrangement,

(c) whether they are aware that the fixed Kitson light is not used four days before and four days after the full moon and even on other days when the moon-light is dim it is not used at the time of embarking and disembarking, (d) whether they will take steps to remove this grievance?

The Honourable Mr W F HUDSON (a) and (b) The Landing and Wharfage Fund Committee sanctioned a portable Kitson lamp at the landing place at Ratnagiri for sorting luggage, etc, only from the year 1930. This light, however, went out of order and had to be sent to Bombay for repairs It has since been returned and has been in use since the first week of February 1932

(c) and (d) In accordance with a resolution of the Landing and Wharfage Fund Committee passed in October 1923, the Kitson lights at some ports in the Ratnagiri District were not being lighted on moon-light nights On the representation of the steamship companies' local agents the Collector has however issued orders to the local officers not to withhold lighting on days when lighting is really required irrespective of moon-light The matter will also be placed before the Committee at their next meeting for formal sanction

RATNAGIRI HARBOUR WAITING HOUSE

Rao Bahadur L V PARULEKAR (Ratnagiri District) Will Government be pleased to state—

(e) whether any steamer company or the Ratnagiri public was consulted regarding the utility of the building as a waiting house there,

(f) whether they are aware that almost all the passengers use a pandal and that the house is vacant

(g) whether, if the house is proved to be inconvenient as a waiting house, they will provide for a more suitable and convenient waiting house for the passengers?

The Honourable Mr W F HUDSON (a) Yes

(b) It is intended for the use of passengers by steamers only

(c) The site chosen is within 30 feet of the site of the old Dharamshala and is about 150 yards from the landing place It is the nearest site to the landing place not subject to erosion by tidal water The building is largely used by passengers for the whole 24 hours

(d) The cost of the building together with the site is Rs 11,450 and it has been met from the Landing and Wharfage Fees Fund.

(e) The construction of the building on the site was unanimously approved by the Landing and Wharfage Fees Fund Committee on which there are two representatives of the two steamship companies and a representative of the District Local Board who happens to belong to Ratnagiri Town itself The Ratnagiri public were not consulted as the building is meant for all passengers using the port

(f) Passengers use the pandal which is adjacent to the ticket office of one of the steamship companies when steamers are expected to arrive but the Dharamshala is used day and night

(g) The present building is not inconvenient, and it would be a waste of public money to build another

BILL No. II OF 1932 (A BILL TO EXTEND CERTAIN PROVISIONS RELATING TO INTESTATE AND TESTAMENTARY SUCCESSION OF THE INDIAN SUCCESSION ACT, 1925, IN ITS APPLICATION TO THE PRESIDENCY OF BOMBAY, TO CERTAIN COMMUNITIES).

Question again proposed "That the Bill be read a first time"

Mr G DAVIS Sir, I gathered the impression from some of the speeches of honourable members yesterday that they were under a misapprehension both as to the scope and application of this Bill For instance, one of the honourable members from Sind said, in a tone of sincerity which one must respect, that this Bill was an attack upon their personal law, and under that personal law they had made a wise provision for the shares of women Well, there is no such intention in the Bill and none such can be read into it It was never intended to be an attack upon such a wise and humane provision The Bill is not directed against any particular form of inheritance at all All that it is designed to do is to provide and ensure that in the making of wills and in the administration of estates of intestacy there is a certain regularity and safeguard

[Mr G DAVIS]

I turn first to the case of the Hindus, because the case was first put by the honourable member for the Bombay University (Rao Bahadur Kale) on the high ground of personal law I may be mistaken, but my impression was that this Bill was not objected to on the ground that it imposed a duty, or on a pecuniary level, but on a higher level, as an attack upon the personal laws of the Hindus The honourable member thought it wise to base that argument not only on his own representation, which embodies in itself the representation of the University of Bombay, but on a High Court ruling Well, I do not know what that High Court ruling was, but in any case I am bound by my profession to respect all High Court rulings But I give to some High Court rulings less respect than I do to others The honourable member says that it is against the Hindu personal law that the Bill should be made applicable to them. All I can say is that there is authority for the contrary proposition, that in Hindu law itself, in its learned books, there is no provision for the making or revoking of wills, and that that element of Hindu law which relates to the making of wills is derived in fact from the English testamentary law. When the honourable member takes the attitude that it is against the Hindu personal law that wills should be made in a particular fashion, all I can say is that we are entitled to ask that arguments against our proposals should be based on more precise authority than he has given If it is against the principle of Hindu personal law that wills should be made in a particular manner and that a probate should be taken under certain circumstances, I would like to draw the attention of honourable members to the fact that since 1870 this particular form of Hindu law has been encroached upon time after time, because in 1870 an Act was brought in whereby this particular provision, which it is now desired should be made of general application, was applied to Hindus in Bombay City, to Hindus in Madras, to Hindus in Calcutta and, I believe I am correct in saying, to Hindus living in what were then territories of Lower Bengal Sir, so far as I can see, there is no difference in the personal law of a Hindu who happens to live in Bombay City or one who happens to live in Madras So, I think one is justified in saying that as this invasion of personal law has been submitted to by the Hindus in Bombay City for a period now of over 60 years, the contention of the learned honourable member can have no particular weight

Then we pass from the question of wills of the Hindus to the administration of estates. The Hindu system of course is fortified by the joint family Some people have described this as a mystic entity, while others think that it is a means of keeping the money in the family, but I think I am correct when I say that so far as the letters of administration are concerned, they are applied to self acquired property of a Hindu who dies intestate and will not affect the joint Hindu family property Therefore, with all respect, I should think that so far as the argument is concerned that this Bill is objected to and should be objected to by the Hindus on the ground that it affects their personal law, that argument can have no particular weight.

[Mr G Davis]

Then I pass from the Hindus to the Muhammadans; and here I may stress again that there is no intention, no desire, and no power in the Bill to affect the Muhammadan law of succession In the Muhammadan law there is a humane and wise provision that women of the family are entitled to certain shares But I remember a case which came up before me where after 20 years after the death of the father, the sister had to sue the brother for her share in the property, and it was very difficult to ascertain what the property was at that particular time Well, Sir, I suggest that if letters of administration had been taken out, there would have been a schedule of assets, the position would have been regularised on the death of the father, and far from there being any hardship to the women of the household, they would have been protected So far as wills are concerned, it may be that there is to a certain extent a certain case made out when they say that the making of wills is provided for by their own testamentary laws When I had occasion to go into this matter so long ago as in 1925, I found a certain quotation cited in a particular authority which said, relating to the Muhammadans

"Let there be witnesses between you when death draweth nigh to any of you at the time of making the testament, two witnesses, just men, from among yourselves and two others of a different tribe from yourselves if ye be journeying in the earth and the calamity of death surprise you" (Koran V, 106)

With all respect, I submit that if it is provided that wills should be properly attested, there is nothing in that against the personal law of the Muhammadans When we enforce a particular provision, that the wills of Muhammadans should be attested, there is nothing in that which violates or strikes at the personal law of Muhammadans, and I submit, with all respect, that it is a fact, that we do not strike at the inheritance, nor do we influence in any way the law of succession, but we only safeguard those who are most in need of protection, namely, the widows, and the orphans we safeguard the inheritance, and so, when the affliction or calamity of death does come, then a father can know, at least, that the administration of his estate or the carrying out of his will, will be properly supervised and that those who are left behind will be properly protected

There is another aspect of the matter and it is this It is hoped that if these particular formalities which are provided in the Indian Succession Act relating to wills and relating to the administration of estates were insisted upon, then fraud or perjury amongst litigants would decrease I will give one instance that came under my notice When I was Judge at Ahmedabad, I had a case come up before me, where the plaintiff, who was the priest of a Hindu temple, sued a widow He sued the widow upon the basis that the widow's husband had made an oral will and that he, the priest, was entitled on behalf of the temple to all deceased's property upon which the life of that widow might be sustained. The judgment came up before me I went through it very carefully and I found that there was no evidence at all to justify the decree which was a decree by the subordinate judge in favour of the priest and so I set it aside. Some time after, I had another case from another temple against another widow and the same allegation was made that there had been an oral will and that because of that oral will the plaintiff was entitled to the property, and again there was a decree in favour of the priest I suggest that if an oral will were not recognised, frauds of this nature could not have been perpetrated, and the barring of such wills would be a great protection for those who are deprived by death of their husbands or protectors and who are most in need of protection. And yet I suppose it may be argued that because oral wills can be made by Hindus now in the mofussil, because unfortunately the Bill is not going to make it compulsory on Hindus in all circumstances to take out letters of administration or probate, it merely provides that before a suit is filed in a court or before a claim is based upon inheritance, there shall be probate or letters of administration as the case may be, this Bill is an attack upon the Hindu personal law. But, of course, in the case of the priest and the widow, if the priest had desired to sue upon the will or to make the will the basis of his suit, he would have had to produce a written will and thus this Bill, if law, would have provided a very great protection for the widow Therefore, so far as I can see, there is nothing in this Bill that violates the personal laws either of the Hindus or of the Mahomedans, and what it really does is to strengthen and fortify them

There is yet another aspect of this matter and it is this Why, when certain communities have to take out letters of administration or probate, should certain other communities be exempted? After all, the State does render very valuable services, it renders the service of protection. And when property passes on death—when it passes from the father to the son or to the cousin as the case may be—and there is a transfer of property, there appears to me no reason whatever why the State should not say that this fortune has been accumulated, no doubt as the result of thrift on the part of the person who has died, but only under the protection of the State, and that it is only under the protection of the State that it is passing to the son or to the nephew or to the cousin, and therefore there is no reason whatever why the State should not receive at the time of that transfer a small part of the estate, whether it be in the form of an estate duty or whether it be in the form of a probate duty or whether it be in any other form And, therefore, it appears to me on all these grounds, namely, that it protects those who most need protection, that it does not violate the personal laws either of the Hindus or of the Mahomedans and that it is merely giving to the State what is due to the State, that this is a good Bill and that it should be supported by this honourable House

Rao Bahadur G K CHITALE (Ahmednagar District) Sir, I am very much obliged for the exposition of this Bill as put forward by the honourable member the Legal Remembrancer, Mr Davis, and the honourable member the Administrator General, Mr Mitchell Both of those honourable members have been very careful to state the present state of the law and to distinguish the future if this Bill is allowed to be passed. I must say at once that they are afraid to characterise this Bill as a taxation measure, lest it may be said that there is a narrow viewpoint such as of getting money and naturally, therefore, they have tried their best to put it on the higher ground of non-interference with rights and certainty which is to be desired Let us for a moment consider first whether it is a finance bill or not When in another form it was introduced in last December, it was wholly and solely a measure of finance and was intended to catch more estates at the proper time and to bring in more revenue That attempt having failed, it is now sought to bring it in this form It is stated in the preamble of the Bill that it is expedient to amend the Indian Succession Act of 1925 in its application to this Presidency, so as to extend certain of its provisions to Hindus and Mahomedans, who are at present not touched by them

Then it is stated that since 1870 there have been inroads on the personal laws, which have been acquiesced in by members of the communities concerned in the larger cities of Bombay and Madras It is said that even now there are certain other communities, such as the Parsis, the Europeans and the Anglo-Indians who are governed by that law, and there is no logical reason as to why the other communities should not be brought into line, and the law amended so as to include in its provisions the other communities, viz, Hindus, Mahomedans, Buddhists, Sikhs, Jains and Indian Christians, who have been exempted so far

The honourable member the Remembrancer of Legal Affairs justifies the Bill on various grounds First, as regards the non-violability of personal law, he says there is no intention or desire to interfere in any form of inheritance, and the Bill is for the purpose of regulating a certain kind of uncertainty which is likely to arise after the death of a person who is either a Hindu or a Mahomedan May I ask the House to consider the question from a proper point of view, apart from the question whether the present Government wants a little money out of this enactment or not? I would also put it on a higher ground of expediency, and argue still that this measure is not at all needed

Sir, the Remembrancer of Legal Affairs cited some cases and pointed out the advantages which would have accrued if the proposed law had been in existence He said that if such a law had existed, then there would have been no difficulty in deciding certain cases and giving speedier justice in a proper way. That is not the way, in my humble opinion, to look at this measure You have to remember that there was that protection There was the Indian Succession Act of 1865 which applied to certain communities, and they have continued to be governed by that Act, but it was laid down that the Hindus, the Mahomedans, the Buddhists, the Sikhs, the Jains and the Indian Christians were excluded from its operation. So also by section 3 of Act VII of 1903 the same protection was given to these communities which they have continued to enjoy May I ask, what evidence Government have in their possession to show that this particular measure, which, in my opinion, touches the personal laws of both Hindus and Muslims—and I will show how—is necessary ? What overweighing reasons have been suggested so as to carry conviction for an interference with their personal laws in this fashion ? So far, no such reasons have been given, but there are other reasons on which this House would be very well justified in throwing out the Bill in its present form

Now, the Hindu Law, I may say, is an inheritance from many, many ages No doubt, the English courts, after they were established here, have been making various inroads into the tenets of that ancient law by various rulings, and I am prepared to say that in various matters they have successfully interfered, for instance in the matter of adoption, which has simplified the position But, so far as I know, this matter of inheritance, the joint family system and the right of survivorship have so far not been at all touched by any rulings from the second class subordinate judges to the judges of the Privy Council . That right is kept intact and I may point out that, as a matter of law, the Hindu's estate, like estates in the hands of persons belonging to some other communities, does not go abegging for want of a will In the Hindu law of survivorship and inheritance certain heirs are mentioned, and as soon as one person disappears by death others come in, in their own right as co-parceners, and their right is inviolate, though it may change by subsequent deaths in the co-parcenary family So also, among the Mahomedans, their law is absolutely certain, and I should think that, if there is any law which gives certainty to the heirs, as to what shares they should have on the death of a Muslim leaving behind him an estate, it is Mahomedan law Certain shares are mentioned , they are defined, and as soon as the man dies, those shares take effect, and the Mahomedans divide the estate according to those shares mostly amicably. It is only in a very few cases, both under the Hindu law, and the Mahomedan law of inheritance, that possession established according to the rule of personal law, by which they are governed in a joint family, is challenged in any court After all, this will-making is a Western institution We had our wills , there was so much respect for the eldest member of the family in the joint family that whatever he stated on his death-bed was respected without a written word on his part, and those wishes are respected both by Mahomedans and Hindus The Mahomedan law goes a whit further in order to have that certainty In their case, even though the will may be proved, may be genuine, still, unless and until the heirs consent to the making of the will by the deceased, it operates only to the extent of one-third of the property , it does not operate as regards two-thirds of the estate Where then is the uncertainty which has been referred to by two honourable members from the Government benches ? Well, even under the English law, an up-to-date law, with its will-making and other things, do we not come across cases which are fought tooth and nail in the English courts, as to whether a particular will was made or not, as to whether the deceased was in a sound disposition of mind at the time of making the will, and so on ? So, I do not think that the real motive behind this particular legislation is to avoid uncertainty, and to know exactly what the property left by a deceased is How is the State as a matter of fact affected by what property I leave and what property my heirs will take ? If the heirs fight amongst themselves, they first pay to Government the proper court-fee for carrying on that fight, they have to pay the lawyers also, and they usually find that they have been fools enough to quarrel among themselves when the law is certain, both in the case of Hindus and Mahomedans

Then the honourable member the Remembrancer of Legal Affairs curiously styled the joint family system as a mystic entity Well, I must say, with due deference, that the joint Hindu family is not a mystic entity at all It is no doubt mystic to those people who do not understand, and who do not take care——

Mr G DAVIS: On a point of correction I did not say so I said that some people have described it as a mystic entity and others have described it as a means of keeping the money in the family

Rao Bahadur G K CHITALE You want either to rely on it or not to rely on it When you quote a particular authority, there is some meaning behind it If you quote it with approval, then I join issue with you, if you do not, then I have nothing to quarrel about. If you quoted it in order to induce this part of the House to accept your view, then it is my duty to point out that it is not the correct view That is all

I was saying, Sir, that some say no doubt that the Hindu joint family is a mystic entity, but they are ignoramuses, they do not understand, they have not cared to look into the Hindu law, which is quite simple, and is not at all difficult to understand so far as a coparcenary family and the rights of its various members are concerned As a result of several decisions after the establishment of British courts in this country, you will find that this law is particularised to the remotest heir, and everybody in a joint family knows as to who is the heir either on the male or the female side So, there is no difficulty with respect to that But we find it stated, how are the other people to know ? And it is argued that the people who have dealt or who may not have dealt with the deceased are entitled to know as to how they stand with respect to that family If a claim is made that it is on their behalf that this legislation is sought to be passed, I say that there is no substance in that contention The House will remember the illuminating speech made by the Honourable the Finance Member, when he stated that certain inroads have been already made and the public have been protected So far, you have the Bank Securities Act and the Joint Stock Companies Act, and others in which the bodies concerned have been protected It has been provided that when the investments of a deceased person belonging to either of these two communities, the Hindu or the Mahomedan, are concerned, the heir or heirs must produce a succession certificate, either under the Act of 1889 or under the Regulation of 1827, or some of the other Indian Succession Acts So, then, the public are fully protected—

the public that want protection, that deserves protection from the State, from a higher point of view Then, Sir, if it is contended that that protection is also needed by other sowcars who have not dealt with the deceased person, I say that such sowcars do not need that protection, and they have not asked for it Not only that, but it is the case of the Government themselves that sowcars do not need such protection, when the sowcars do not want to protect the other people with whom they usually have transactions So, I have dealt with that phase of the question

Then it is argued that if this law is allowed to be enacted, then there would be certainly a kind of certainty with respect to the property of a deceased person, and whoever the heir may be, in years to come, he will know exactly what his position is

The honourable member the Legal Remembrancer said that a particular sub-judge was wrong and a particular sub-judge was right. I am not prepared to accept his dictum. We know sometimes judgments are given which do not exactly represent the truth We are bound down by the Civil Enactments, the Evidence Act and others, and we have to lead evidence in that particular way Our judges want to give justice as far as humanly possible on the evidence before them No further claims can be made that one judge is right and the other judge is wrong It is within the knowledge of the members of the legal profession that sometimes the Privy Council sets aside judgments of the High Courts and restores the judgments of the District Courts, though lakhs and lakhs of rupees are involved in those judgments Even though the honourable member has cited instances, I do not think that they prove anything

Then, he appealed to the Mussalmans and said that the schedule of property should be attached, which would stand in good stead, because many difficulties could be surmounted thereby May I present him with a piece of information? If it is a question of paying certain fee, then the schedule of property attached will not disclose the whole of the property, because the property is liable to a certain tax. So, many a time the schedule attached to such applications does not surely represent the truth I know many cases wherein, I am justified in saying, the schedule attached did not disclose the whole property. If the Hindus and Mahomedans had asked for such protection, I am not quite sure whether Government would have given it. The British Government have proclaimed religious neutrality since the transfer of India to the Crown They say that they adopt a neutral attitude with regard to the personal or religious laws of Hindus and Mahomedans We know that in matters of social legislation, which is for the welfare of the country, the Government are afraid to interfere So, I do not think that this legislation is brought forward with any such high motive which has been attributed to it by the previous speakers.

Lastly, I wish to say that I look upon it as a taxation Bill. Nothing else Several attempts have been made Government have got several strings to their bow. They have failed in one attempt and they wisely think that they may succeed in this attempt But purely and simply it is a measure of taxation The question of benefiting communities is a misnomer They have not done it with that high motive for which they claim some credit So, the Bill must be considered on its own merits There is no point in their contention that, if this enactment is made, it will benefit the communities concerned on those high grounds Under these circumstances, I feel it my duty to oppose the measure I think the House will be well advised in throwing it out

Mr A KIRKE-SMITH Sir, the object of this measure cannot be purely for the purpose of taxation. Honourable members may be under this misapprehension in view of the present financial condition of the presidency that the Government have brought forward this Bill as a financial measure But this measure is a want that has been felt for a long time in this country There is no reason why the Hindus and Mahomedans should not be able to take probate or letters of administration like other communities on whom it is obligatory To say that the making of a will is a western institution is not tenable for the reason that even so far back as 1870 the Indian Wills Act was passed making it obligatory in certain localities to take out probate or letters of administration Now, more than 60 years are past Still, though Hindus and Mahomedans make wills, they are, speaking generally, exempt from taking out probate or letters of administration That being so, it appears wrong that the legal representative, belonging to these communities, should not be made to take out probate of the will, after the testator dies The Taxation Enquiry Committee also recommends that something of the kind must be done. They say in paragraph 363 on page 282.

"Apart from any question of taxation, the extension of general system of representation to the communities in which it is not at present in force, would be of manifest advantage to the communities themselves."

There is no doubt that, if there is to be a general system of legal representatives to the Hindu and Mahomedan communities, the advantage will be much greater That is the real principle of this Bill Although it may have been brought forward now as a finance measure, its real purpose is to extend certain provisions of the Succession Act relating to intestate and testamentary succession to the other communities also As I said, this is a long felt want. I hope it will be passed by the House

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN Sir, many of the objections which have been raised have already been replied to I am not able to understand how this Bill interferes with the personal law of the Hindus or Mussalmans What is the personal law of the Hindus? There is what is called the joint family which gets the incidence of survivorship Even the law of survivorship, what is it? During the lifetime of a man, he can claim partition, he can create a mortgage on the property and so on He can do so as regards self-acquired property also As far back as 1870, the Hindu Wills Act was passed, the whole of Bengal is governed by the Dayabhaga system, and the Act applies to it. The presidency town of Bombay is governed by the Mayukha system, and Madras is under the Mitakshara system. The Act extends to these two towns It also applied to wills relating to the property situated in the Island of Bombay During the past 62 years nothing has been done to interfere with the personal law of Hindus Under the Mahomedan Law, there are certain heirs mentioned But the testamentary powers in their case are limited to a certain extent and they can make a will up to a certain extent of their property. This Bill is intended to remove the anomalies which have remained during all these years between races, religions and places, and which have been repeatedly pointed out The Taxation Enquiry Committee examined several witnesses I shall read what they say about this tax Before doing so, I may inform this honourable House that this measure will no doubt bring some revenue But this was not included in the Finance Bill as a finance measure, because it relates more to a matter of procedure, laid down under sections 212 and 213 of the Indian Succession Act, which are sought to be amended by corresponding changes in other clauses The Taxation Enquiry Committee in paragraph 362 say

"The extension of these duties to the communities to which they do not apply has often been advocated in the past, and is supported by a number of non official witnesses who have given evidence before the Committee. Item (2) of Schedule I of the Scheduled Taxes Rules is a 'tax on succession or on acquisition by survivorship in a joint family,' and under part II of Schedule I of the Devolution Rules, taxes included in the schedules to the Scheduled Taxes Rules are sources of provincial revenue"

Again in paragraph 367, they say

"While it is desirable to effect the extension of the existing law of probate to the communities that are at present exempted from its operation with as little disturbance of the existing provisions as possible, it is not easy in the confused state of the law as above described to suggest means of doing so

The first step would appear to be to delete from the Bill now before the Central Legislature for the consolidation of the law applicable to intestate and testamentary succession the clauses exempting various communities from the operation of the provisions therein which reproduce sections 187 and 190 of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, subject to an exemption in the case of small estates : This would have the effect of rendering it impossible for any person to establish a right in a court to any part of the estate of a deceased person unless he had taken out probate or letters of administration"

This was the first step which was proposed The suggestion of the Taxation Enquiry Committee is that these anomalies in the Indian Succession Act, by which certain communities are exempted from the operation of certain clauses, should be removed What are the sections relating to this? Sections 212 and 213 Section 212 runs as follows

"No right to any part of the property of a person who has died intestate can be established in any court of justice, unless letters of administration have first been granted by a court of competent jurisdiction"

There is an exemption clause If you want to go to a court of law and establish a right to the property of a person who has died intestate, you have to take out letters of administration This does not interfere with the personal law of any community We know what the law of different communities is Removing the exemptions which are now being enjoyed by all communities cannot for a moment interfere with the personal law of any community Then section 213 goes on—

"No right as executor or legatee can be established in any Court of justice, unless a Court of competent jurisdiction in British India has granted probate of the will under which the right is claimed, or has granted letters of administration with the will or with a copy of an authenticated copy of the will annexed"

Then, why should a person who goes to a court of law to establish his rights as legatee or executor be permitted to go through the proof of the whole will? Supposing a person claims as legatee a certain legacy under a will made by some ancestor ten or twenty years ago, the court has to go through the process of getting that will proved The probate is a judgment in rem: as soon as a will is admitted to probate, then that will is a valid document and no further proof of that will is necessary in any court of law You produce the probate and say "Here is a will which has been admitted to probate, and under this will I get such and such rights" The Taxation Enquiry Committee have pointed out that oftentimes wills ten, twenty or thirty years old are put forward So, it is made obligatory upon an executor or legatee who wishes to establish his right as executor or legatee to get that will admitted to probate When certain communities are under that obligation, why should other communities escape? This has been pointed out time after time for the last sixty-two years The Bill is no doubt brought in with the intention of getting some revenue, but it has also been brought in because of the suggestion of the Taxation Enquiry Committee that the discrimination between community and community should be removed

Then, I submit, Sir, as I have already pointed out to some of my honourable friends privately, that the Succession Certificate Act is not removed from the statute book If you want to recover any debt and you have to go to a court of law, you have to pay stamp duty only on the amount of that debt Say, you have to recover Rs 2,000 from the National Bank and the National Bank is not prepared to give you the money unless you produce a certificate, you merely pay the stamp duty on that Rs 2,000 You can also get it extended later on, supposing another bank, the Imperial Bank of India, wants a similar certificate You can go again to the court of law and say that the Imperial Bank owes you money and you want a certificate for that, the first certificate will be extended on payment of the fee but fifty per cent more So, that provision is not taken away It is not necessary for any one to pay a stamp duty upon the whole property If it is possible for you to collect your debts either privately or by the production of a succession certificate or heirship certificate, you are at liberty to do so If the property goes by survivorship, the honourable members who are lawyers know that the right of survivorship prevails even over the right of creditors unless an attachment has taken place before the death of the man or the deceased himself has created a charge But if you want to establish your claim to an intestate property as the heir, then in that case the court may write a judgment but will not give you a decree unless you produce letters of administration I do not for a moment understand on what principles certain communities were exempted at the time the law was passed. The change that is sought to be made in no way interferes with the personal law of any community The Parsi Intestate Succession Act and the Indian Succession Act which governs the intestate succession of Indian Christians, define the heirs in case of intestacy, yet the Parsis are compelled to take out letters of administration and the Indian Christians a probate when there is a will If you do not want to pay the duty, why should you bring in the argument that it interferes with the personal law, that it interferes with this and that, etc ? You can plainly say, "We have been enjoying the privilege of not paying the duty for all these long years, why should that privilege be taken away now ?" I can understand that position But the reply to that is that it is anomalous that there should be this differentiation between community and community That has been pointed out time after time Now, consider it from that higher point of view I consider, Sir, that this House will be well advised not to oppose the first reading of the Bill

BILL No. I OF 1932 (A BILL TO PROVIDE FOR THE LEVY OF A DUTY ON CONSUMPTION OF ELECTRICAL ENERGY FOR THE PURPOSE OF LIGHTS AND FANS IN THE PRESIDENCY OF BOMBAY AND TO AMEND THE COURT-FEES ACT, 1870, AND THE INDIAN STAMP ACT, 1899, IN THEIR APPLICATION TO THE SAID PRESIDENCY)

Third reading

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN Sir, I beg to move that Bill No I of 1932 be read a third time

Question proposed.

Mr Haji Mir Mahomed Baloch rose

The Honourable the PRESIDENT Does the honourable member wish to speak on the third reading ?

Mr HAJI MIR MAHOMED BALOCH (Karachi City) (Addressed the House in Urdu) I wish to oppose the third reading, Sir

Sir, when the honourable member Rao Bahadur Pradhan moved his amendment lowering the rates of stamp duty for the four cities of Bombay, Ahmedabad, Poona and Karachi, by 5 per cent on the figures recommended by the Select Committee, the Honourable the Finance Member his Secretary and others showed a favourable attitude for modifying the stamp duties The business of the House was suspended for about ten minutes The mover the honourable member Rao Bahadur Pradhan accepted the reduced rates of the stamp duty When one or two European members of this House opposed this reduction of stamp duties, the Honourable the Finance Member changed his mind at once and said, "I now leave it to the House to decide" This sudden change on the part of the Finance Member has lowered the prestige of the Government When the amendment was put to vote, they went into "Noes" lobby But fortunately it was passed in spite of the Government opposition The Honourable the Finance Member is a responsible representative of the Government and by his conduct yesterday he has done great harm to and lowered the prestige of the Government Here I wish to give one example Government gave its word to Mr Harvey that his expenses in the case against Mr Nariman would be paid. Mr Harvey lost the case In spite of the opposition of the elected members of this House, the Government to keep its word given to Mr Harvey got the amount of expenses passed anyhow and paid I am sorry to say that the Honourable the Finance Member who gave his word in the House did not keep it

Therefore, I earnestly request the honourable members to combine and throw out this Bill at the third reading and thus defeat the purpose of the Government to add to their revenues

Rao Bahadur G V PRADHAN (Nasik District) Sir, I may remind the House that we have passed through two readings of the Bill Some of the honourable members said that Bombay was being taxed more than other cities Some members complained that the electricity surcharge was higher than it should have been This is the last occasion for any of us to express his opinion in a forcible way, if he so chooses This is the last opportunity for those whose amendments have been lost either in select committee or in this House I therefore appeal to all honourable members to take advantage of this opportunity and make the best of it

The Honourable Sir GOVINDRAO PRADHAN: I have nothing to say, Sir

Mr G DAVIS Sir, there are certain small drafting amendments which I propose to move with your permission. The first one seeks to set right a misprint which occurred in the press On page 52 of the Bill, instead of the word "working", the word "making" should be inserted Therefore, I move

"In sub-clause (3) of clause 11, for the word 'working' the word 'making' shall be substituted"

Question proposed

Rao Bahadur G K CHITALE I want to know whether it is a substantial amendment or whether it is merely verbal

Mr G. DAVIS In the Select Committee it was decided that the rules, before they come into operation, should be placed on the table of the Council and that the House may rescind them or modify them and that Government might accept the modification, or, if they did not accept the modification, rescind them By some mistake, the word "working" has been put in instead of the word "making".

The Honourable the PRESIDENT. It is perfectly evident from the context that the word ought to be "making" and not "working".

Question put, and agreed to

Mr G DAVIS The next amendment, Sir, relates to our old friend, Schedule I I think honourable members remember that it was drafted in haste, and although it stands technically correct, so far as the wording is concerned, it is not extremely happily worded I therefore propose to point out the precise words to be altered and then I shall ask that I may be allowed to substitute the schedule which has been typed and which is now before the House—with the omission of certain words, which, again, have been put in by mistake, for the schedule that now stands For instance, in clause (a), we propose to put in the word "proviso" before "section 5" Really the exemptions come under the proviso of section 5 That is merely a matter of precision As regards the word "light" also, I have been advised by the honourable member the Electrical Engineer to Government that the correct word is "lamp" and not "light" If this question came to a court and if the Electrical Engineer were called in to interpret this clause, he would say that the correct word is "lamp" and not "light" Therefore, where the word "light" occurs, I propose to substitute the word "lamp"

As regards the scale of duty, the words "not exceeding" were used in the schedule which was finlly agreed to The words "not exceeding" do not read as well as the words "but less than" I re-drafted the clause I believe correctly, but again in the office they put in some words which should not be found there The amended Schedule, clause (b), should read

"(b) In respect of all premises not exempted under the proviso to section 5 and the second schedule, when flat rates are charged by the licensee, for

	Annas per mensem
every lamp of less than 30 watts	2
every lamp of 30 watts or more but less than 40	3
every lamp of 40 watts or more but less than 60	4
every lamp of 60 watts or more but not exceeding 100	6
and for every additional 15 watts or fraction thereof in excess of 100 in any lamp	1"

I therefore move that this Schedule which I shall read out be substituted for the First Schedule

"FIRST SCHEDULE

(See section 5)

FOR LIGHTS AND FANS

(a) In respect of all premises not falling under clause (b) and not exempted under the proviso to section 5 and the second schedule	Six pies for each unit of energy consumed

(b) In respect of all premises not exempted under the proviso to section 5 and the second schedule, when flat rate are charged by the licensee, for

	Annas per mensem
every lamp of less than 30 watts	2
every lamp of 30 watts or more but less than 40	3
every lamp of 40 watts or more but less than 60	4
every lamp of 60 watts or more but not exceeding 100	6
and for every additional 15 watts or fraction thereof in excess of 100 in any lamp	1

Explanation.—In calculating the rate of duty under clause (b) every 10 watts shall be presumed to have consumed one and half units during a month"

Question put, and agreed to.

Mr. G. DAVIS: Sir, as regards the second schedule there are two verbal alterations which amount merely to a re-arrangement of the explanations and one misprint. The amendment proposed is

"(3) In the second schedule to Part II, for the explanations the following shall be substituted, namely

'Explanation (1).—For the purpose of exemption (5)—

In the printed report the word 'the' came in in the place of the word 'any'

'and

(b) "manufacturing process" has the meaning assigned to it by section 2 (4) of the Indian Factories Act, 1911'

There is no other alteration in that

'Then I have added explanation II after explanation I and that reads;

Explanation (2).—For the purpose of exemption (7)—

(a) "Consumer" shall be deemed to include a landlord or a person who shall supply electrical energy to one or two roomed tenements in any one building in respect of any one of which tenements not more than twelve units of energy shall have been consumed during any one month, and

We have re-arranged the explanations in the two paragraphs (a) and (b) so that they would read more appropriately, but there is no substantial alteration in any way. Honourable members have a copy of these amendments and so there is nothing which they have not had notice of. Therefore I move

"(3) In the second schedule to Part II, for the explanations the following shall be substituted, namely

'Explanation 1.—For the purpose of exemption (5)—

(a) "industrial undertaking" means all buildings or premises wherein or within the precincts of which any manufacturing process is carried on, and

(b) "manufacturing process" has the meaning assigned to it by section 2 (4) of the Indian Factories Act, 1911'

'Explanation 2.—For the purpose of exemption (7)—

(a) "Consumer" shall be deemed to include a landlord or a person who shall supply electrical energy to one or two roomed tenements in any one building in respect of any one of which tenements not more than twelve units of energy shall have been consumed during any one month; and

(b) whether more than twelve units shall have been used by or in respect of any one tenement during any one month shall be determined by dividing the number of units used by the number of tenements in that building'".

Question put, and agreed to.

Mr. G. DAVIS: Sir, there is another small error that has crept in in the press, namely, the words "Four annas" appear against the exemptions to article 5 shown on page 68 of the select committee's report. I therefore move

"(4) In sub-clause 5 (c) of clause 15, the words 'Four annas' occurring against the exemptions to article 5 shall be deleted".

Question put, and agreed to.

BILL No III OF 1932 [A BILL TO AMEND THE TOBACCO DUTY (TOWN OF BOMBAY) ACT, 1857].

The Honourable Sirdar Sir RUSTOM JEHANGIR VAKIL Sir, I introduce the Bill *

The Honourable the PRESIDENT The Bill is introduced

The Honourable Sirdar Sir RUSTOM JEHANGIR VAKIL Sir, I rise

First reading

to move the first reading of Bill No III of 1932 [A Bill to amend the Tobacco Duty (Town of Bombay) Act, 1857] This Bill, it should be understood, affects Bombay City only It is an amendment to a very old Act dating from the year 1857 My remarks will be as brief

* Appendix 20

as possible, and I shall take advantage of the fact that the circumstances in which it has become necessary to obtain increased funds for the Bombay Improvement Trust are already a familiar subject to this House. I will divide my remarks into three parts; first, the choice of tobacco as a subject of further taxation; secondly, the incidence of the tax; and, thirdly, the application of the proceeds, if the Bill meets with the approval of the House.

As you know, Sir, the Improvement Trust has now entered upon the period, always anticipated, when there is a substantial gap between the receipts from its properties and its expenses, which consist principally of interest on the money expended in acquisition and development. The object of this Bill is to help to bridge that gap.

In his letter No. 7488, dated the 12th November 1931, His Worship the Mayor of Bombay reaffirmed the anxiety of the Corporation to amalgamate the Trust with itself. This amalgamation of course has long been the accepted policy and was contemplated when this House passed Act No. XVI of 1925, the City of Bombay Improvement Trust Transfer Act. The Corporation, however, is naturally anxious to see the financial future of the Trust stabilised before it accepts a responsibility which it has itself always demanded.

In his letter referred to, the Mayor stated that the Corporation anticipated that additional revenue of 28½ lakhs would be needed to enable the Trust's finances to reach equilibrium within twenty years. The picture may be a trifle overdrawn. I am inclined to think it is. But this estimate is based on the assumption that new sources of revenue would be provided from the 1st of April next. It is clear that time is the essence of the problem and that even a short delay in providing the necessary revenue will throw all estimates out of gear. This is the reason why the present Bill is now before this House. Government propose to introduce a new Transfer Act in the next session of this Council. Before that Bill is introduced, they propose to give as full consideration as they can to all available means of increasing the receipts of the Improvement Trust. But in the meanwhile it is essential that some steps should be taken to see that the position meanwhile does not by delay grow entirely out of hand.

Government have given anxious consideration to the question whether the increase of duty which is now proposed is not too high. They are convinced that it is not. They are also convinced that nothing less than the amount of duty which it is hoped to raise by the present Bill will be really adequate to restore the credit and the prospects of the Improvement Trust.

I will briefly recapitulate the proposals which the Corporation have made with a view to providing 28½ lakhs. They include the allocation of an additional 1 per cent. from the municipal general tax, a tax on rail and steamer tickets, an expert tax on cotton bales, and an increase in tobacco duty. I have little doubt that a tax on tobacco is a better tax in every way that you look at it than any of the other proposals for new taxes which the Municipality have made However that may be, it was not possible to bring these other proposals before this House at the present session, because they would have involved very careful enquiries and the sanction of the Government of India Whether we shall have to proceed with them hereafter, or will be enabled to drop them, or at any rate reduce them to a milder and more acceptable form will depend primarily on whether this House passes the present measure Of course, Government are not restricted to the tax proposed by the Municipality We have had correspondence with the Municipality concerning other proposals, for instance a marriage tax, which has been suggested by one of the honourable members opposite But this tobacco tax appeared to be the only measure which would give a really substantial immediate additional revenue I would ask those honourable members who have tabled amendments which will reduce the rate of duty to reflect very carefully before they move them, remembering that a reduction in the rate of duty which is proposed in this Bill can only be made up by taxes which are likely to hit the working classes far more seriously than this Bill will ever hit them

Now as regards the incidence of the tax, the first question which arises is whether a fourfold increase would not be an excessive increase I do not labour the fact that tobacco is a suitable source for taxation and can well bear a considerable duty, because, as you know, almost every foreign country and very many States in India raise a substantial proportion of their revenue from tobacco.

In the United Kingdom the cheapest grade of tobacco pays an excise duty of over Rs 500 per maund In the State of Travancore all grades pay a duty of Rs 41 a maund The case of Goa is parallel to that of Bombay There the duty is Rs 31-8-0 a maund. When the maundage of Rs 7-8-0 was imposed in 1857, Bombay was a village British India in fact stands almost alone in leaving indigenous tobacco substantially untaxed The rate in Bombay City would certainly have been raised long ago if it were not for the fact that there is no duty in the mofussil The reason for this is the difficulty of raising a tax in a large country which grows a great proportion of its own tobacco None of these difficulties exists in Bombay City, where there is no tobacco cultivation and everything must be imported The conditions for taxing tobacco are ideal We do not of course intend to hit the export trade at all It is proposed to secure refunds to regular dealers in tobacco on such tobacco as is imported into the City only to be re-exported But all tobacco of whatever description, which is consumed in the City of Bombay, whether it is foreign tobacco which has already paid the Customs duty, or the indigenous tobacco, will pay this new duty

Now, let us consider the incidence of this tax on the Bombay working man It is an interesting fact that bidis are dearer in Bombay than elsewhere, not because of the existing tax but because of the superior class of bidi which is sold in Bombay. Three-quarters of Bombay's consumption of tobacco in bidi form consists of the best Karnatak tobacco The bidis made from this tobacco sell at 2 a pie or 4 annas a 100 and Rs 2-8-0 a thousand Those made from the cheaper tobacco sell for 8 a piece, 3 annas a 100 and Rs 1-8-0 a thousand Let us consider the effect of the duty on the class of bidi generally smoked in Bombay which sells at 4 annas a 100 Out of this 4 annas, the present duty of Rs 7-8-0 a maund represents just under 1½ pies The incidence of a 30 rupees duty will be six pies a 100 and this is under 13 per cent of the ultimate cost Smokers of the working class consume about 12 bidis a day On this basis, the extra cost to the working class man of the enhancement of the duty should be 3¾ pies a week Of course, the question arises whether the retailers will not raise their prices to a greater extent than is justified by the increase of tax In most countries this would undoubtedly be the case, but in Bombay the competition among the sellers of such articles as bidis is really infinite, and it is more than probable that the retailers will seek to neutralise the increase of duty by mixing the better class tobacco with the cheaper tobacco, or by some other means which will not raise the present selling price This supposition of mine can of course only be verified or falsified by experience But in any case the extra tax which the working class man will pay will not be burdensome and will be slight compared with the benefit which the activities of the Improvement Trust have conferred upon him The incidence of tax on cigarettes will be about 15 annas a thousand, that is, 4½ pies a tin of 26 cigarettes I will not deal at present with the incidence of the tax on cigars and smoking and chewing tobacco, but it will be all on the same light scale The main consideration is that it will fall equally on all tobacco that is consumed in whatever form in Bombay City, and since this duty is very light in comparison with the heavy customs duties, the enhancement of duty cannot upset the relation existing between the prices of indigenous and imported products

Now, Sir, I come to the most pleasant part of my task, and that is the consideration of the allotment of this extra duty which I earnestly trust that the House will vote The money will be Government money Although the duty is called a municipal duty, this is a name only, and Government will have a free and unfettered right to dispose of it in any way they choose You will see, however, from the statement of objects and reasons that it is Government's intention to use the whole of the increased revenue for the benefit of the Improvement Trust The only objection which I can conceive being raised to this proposal would come from the mofussil members They might argue, why should the proceeds of a Government tax which is rightfully a source of provincial revenue be expended entirely for the benefit of Bombay? The answer is that there is no corresponding tax raised in the mofussil, and until the mofussil is able to contribute something substantial from its tobacco no unfairness can possibly arise Well, here again we are up against hard facts The money must be found somehow and it is little use indulging in academic discussions It has always been the policy of Government to insist that as far as possible the expenses of any municipal area should be met from taxes raised within that area But to this there have always been large exceptions The Calcutta Improvement Trust has enjoyed regular contributions from the provincial exchequer Government grants are given to all local bodies In the present case, a Government grant is an absolute necessity

During the calendar year 1930 the revenue from the existing tobacco duty amounted to Rs 4,34,000 Of this amount Rs 69,000 came from the duty on foreign tobacco and Rs 3,65,000 from the duty on country tobacco The expenses of collection were Rs 77,000 It is hoped that these expenses will not be increased by the enhancement of the tax It is Government's intention, as I said, that the Improvement Trust should benefit to the full extent of the increase in net receipts It would be fair to pay to the municipality's account not less than the average net receipts of the last few years If the increased duty does not act to depress consumption, it should yield as much as 13 lakhs I think we may hope for something like 12 lakhs, after the Act has been in operation for some time We shall expect the Municipality to do something soon and something substantial on their part, as indeed they have undertaken to do, to meet the Improvement Trust deficit If we assume that they provide another 12 lakhs from their general tax it will be seen that the remaining deficit, after 24 lakhs have been allocated, will be a small one and that the bogey which has been held over us in the shape of the cotton cess and the tax on railway tickets may be said to have been very nearly laid

Before I sit down, I will add a word about the fourth clause of the Bill The present limit of exemption for tobacco privately imported is extremely high It is as high as 4 seers or 8 lbs Those of you who have travelled in Europe will realise that a rate of exemption as high as this is wholly incompatible with a substantial rate of duty We have placed the exemption rate at 1 lb This is high, but of course the circumstances of Bombay, adjoining as it does a vast untaxed area, are peculiar and we must be liberal in this respect The rate of free import is 1 lb in Cochin and half a pound in Travancore I hope the House will consider that the rate of exemption which we propose is sufficiently liberal Sir, I hope this honourable House will pass the first reading of this Bill

SIR REGINALD SPENCE (Bombay City) Mr President, I rise to oppose the first reading of this Bill I have no objection to increased taxation on the citizens of Bombay which will provide money to enable the municipality to pay for the magnificent heritage it has received from the City of Bombay Improvement Trust and I have no objection to increased taxation on tobacco for this purpose, provided the tax is only paid by smokers who live in the Island of Bombay, or perhaps Salsette, as the majority of the inhabitants of Salsette benefit from the work of the Improvement Trust I do object, however, to a tax which, introduced at the present time, will damage an important trade in Bombay and prove

yet another nail in the coffin we are all so zealously building for the emaciated corpse of Bombay's greatness

Under the existing scale of taxation 1,000 cigarettes pay 3 annas 9 pies in tobacco duty over and above the duty which imported cigarettes, cigars and tobacco pay in customs duty Members who do not smoke tobacco may be surprised to know that the customs duty on cigars is over 100 per cent, and on all imported cigarettes invoiced at over Rs 10-8-0 per 1,000 c i f duty is Rs 15 per 1,000 Cigarettes invoiced at Rs 10-8-0 per 1,000 and under pay Rs 10-10-0 in duty Now, this tax of 3 annas 9 pies was too small to affect the trade done in cigarettes upcountry The tax was non-refundable and I doubt if people upcountry buying cigarettes in Bombay knew of its existence

It will be quite different if this Bill before the House is passed The new duty works out to 15 annas a thousand—15 annas is or will be Re. 1 a thousand A great deal of the upcountry trade done by Bombay in cigarettes is done in lots of 5,000 or 10,000 The tax on these will be in round figures of Rs 5 or Rs 10

Unless a refund of this tax is obtained without undue difficulty, the trade which was done by Bombay merchants upcountry will be done by merchants outside Bombay, and I think in the main, by merchants who will not import their cigarettes and tobacco through the port of Bombay The port of Bombay will suffer Traders who deal in articles other than tobacco will suffer—a large part of the upcountry trade is done by provision merchants who anticipate that with lost trade in tobacco will come lost trade in provisions More people will be thrown out of work, less revenue in house and residence taxation will accrue to the municipality of Bombay We are told, or shall be told, that these dire calamities will be averted because Government will arrange for the duty to be refunded in respect of cigarettes and tobacco sent upcountry and that this can be arranged on the same lines as is done in the case of refund of vend fees and excise taxation on wines and spirits sent from Bombay for consumption outside the presidency of Bombay Now, I should like to take this opportunity of paying a tribute to the way in which the Commissioner of Excise and his staff, whilst keeping a firm check on the possibilities of fraud, do afford every facility for the trader in Bombay to obtain a refund of Bombay presidency duties he has paid on goods he is sending outside of this presidency

But, with the best will in the world, the Commissioner and his staff cannot get a scheme in working order by the 1st April which will enable Bombay traders to obtain a refund of this duty when sending tobacco and cigarettes outside the town and Island of Bombay Once a man has known that he can do equally well by trading with some other cities, he will not come back to Bombay

I am told that the needs of the Bombay Municipality are urgent, and the Bill shows signs of precipitate drafting Not only is the Bill premature because arrangements will not be ready to allow for refunds, but the taxation as proposed falls too heavily upon the poor man who buys cigarettes which cost about Rs 5 per thousand Firms in Bombay tell me that on cigarettes which are made from a pound of tobacco six annas worth the duty is going to be Re 0-5-10½ That is a heavy charge on a very poor man who buys cigarettes which cost about Rs 5 a thousand, eight annas a hundred or say one anna for ten These cigarettes are to be taxed 15 annas a thousand and cigarettes costing Rs 30 a thousand are to be taxed the same—so are cigarettes at Rs 60 a thousand! I am told, however, that the biggest seller in Bombay is a cigarette retailed at 2½ annas per 10 cigarettes or one pice per cigarette That is a good bit higher than the figure the Honourable Minister gave us If the tax is heavy on the one pice cigarette it will be far heavier on the cigarette costing one anna per ten Panwallas selling these cigarettes make a profit of Rs 1-14-0 per 1,000 The new tax at Rs 30 a maund will reduce this profit to Re 1-3-0 per 1,000. They will lose 11 annas a thousand, if they pay the tax. But it will pay the panwalla to buy a season ticket to Bandra and go to Bandra and buy it at Bandra as often as he likes and bring it into Bombay If the limit of exemption is half a seer a man may be able to bring 400 cigarettes free of duty. When he has exhausted that, he has only to go back and buy another 400 in order to escape the duty If the exemption is higher, the maximum number he can take at one time will be much more The point I want to make is that this exemption will encourage smuggling When you take a drive to Bandra and come back again, you do not expect to be stopped and you yourself searched You do not expect when you get into the train at Bandra to have somebody put his hand into your pockets to find out how many cigarettes you have got on you The smuggling which will take place in all parts of Bombay will be terrific With smuggling comes also crime and we know also that with that comes tremendously increased expenditure, the one thing which we want to avoid

Sir, I am in favour of taxation which will enable the Municipality and the citizens of Bombay to benefit from that taxation But the introduction of this Bill and this taxation on the citizens of Bombay, when there is no other city in India taxed in this way is wrong Let us have this extra taxation all over India, and let the Municipality be given the ten or twelve lakhs of rupees that you want them to have But do not go and tax the citizens of Bombay when all the rest of the world is free from this tax Sir, I oppose the first reading of this Bill

SYED MIRAN MAHOMED SHAH (Hyderabad District) Sir, I rise to support the first reading of this Bill I thought the arguments that would be advanced by the honourable member Sir Reginald Spence would go a long way to convert me to his own way of thinking, but after hearing them I stand in the same position as I was when I had listened to the speech of the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government The case for the opposition has been put from various points of view One point that the honourable member Sir Reginald Spence wished to make out was that this is a new tax imposed on the City of Bombay only and not prevalent anywhere in the world. That is what I understood him to say But if we refer to the report of the Taxation Enquiry Committee and reports by other financial experts, we see that they have given expression to the feeling that this is a commodity which ought to be taxed in this country I will refer the honourable member Sir Reginald Spence to Sir Walter Layton's recommendations in his note on Finances of India (in the Simon Commission's Report) He has investigated the various heads of taxation in India and has recommended tobacco as one of the sources of revenue that might be appropriated either to the provincial revenues or to the revenues of local authorities The Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government has made it clear that he was moving for the imposition of this tax in the City of Bombay because tobacco was not cultivated in the City of Bombay.

Sir REGINALD SPENCE. It is already taxed a hundred per cent

SYED MIRAN MAHOMED SHAH If my honourable friend (Sir Reginald Spence) complains only about the severity of the tax, then I will give up this part of my argument If he has no objection to the principle of the tax——

Sir REGINALD SPENCE I said that taxation on tobacco was already too heavy

SYED MIRAN MAHOMED SHAH Now, I come to the point whether it is too heavily taxed I am not going to discuss all the figures which my honourable friend has placed before the House I will only urge that this is one of those articles which ought to be taxed as much as other luxuries are taxed The tendency of this House, especially of the non-official side, has been not to hesitate in supporting Government in any proposal to tax luxuries, because the burden of those taxes falls on broad shoulders [An Honourable Member. No] Tobacco is not a necessity of life, whatever people may say, whatever may be the extent of its consumption We cannot deny that it is a luxury as much as wine, gambling, or any other luxury in life We can do without it Would any of the honourable members urge that it is a necessity of life, that people cannot carry on or live without smoking tobacco? I think there are many who can live without it I would urge that it is even injurious, and many doctors have proved that In my own experience whenever I have taken to tobacco, I have suffered from sore throat So that, from the medical point of view also, it is not an article for which we should have any mercy We need not hesitate to impose as much tax on it as possible, especially when we take into consideration what an amount of revenue it will give to the City of Bombay to enable it to bear the burden of this Improvement Trust There is a corresponding advantage to the citizens of Bombay in that they have spacious houses and sanitary areas in which they live and breed. So, one has to take stock of the whole thing, weight the disadvantages with the advantages, and if one does that one will find that they will not be losers. Therefore, I think the non-official section of this House should be willing to give support to the first reading of the Bill

[Syed Miran Mahomed Shah]

My honourable friend (Sir Reginald Spence) tried to touch the weakest point of our heart by bringing in the question of unemployment He tried to make out that many of the hands who live on this industry would be thrown out of employment But I assure him that this will not be the case If we conceded that argument, then we might feel pity even for those who carry on the business of illicit distillation of mhowra flowers and many other illicit trades I think, however, only an infinitesimal percentage of the population are living on this industry It is a very small industry, and people living on it, if thrown out of employment, can revert to some other industry which is neither injurious to the health of the people nor contrary to the morals of the people Weighing the advantages and the disadvantages, we should not give much weight to the question of unemployment

Coming to the question of double taxation, my honourable friend tried to make out that tobacco is being taxed twice customs duty is first imposed on foreign tobacco and again when it goes out of the precincts of the City of Bombay, then also it is taxed a second time May I point out that there are many such goods which are taxed several times when they pass through various areas ? Therefore, if that argument holds good, then many of the taxes will have to disappear So, that is not a valid argument

What we have to take into consideration is whether the commodity which is sought to be taxed is a necessity of life or comes under the category of luxuries I have made it clear that it is not one of the necessities which we should hesitate to tax I have also pointed out the corresponding advantages that will accrue to the citizens of Bombay by the acceptance of this tax Moreover, this Bill was not initiated by Government themselves It was brought in at the instance of a representative body, I mean the Corporation of the City of Bombay The City fathers of Bombay after due deliberation have thought it fit to impose this tax on the residents of Bombay I do not know if we are wiser than those representatives who have the interests of the people at heart and who must be coming into more direct touch with their constituents It is at the instance of a representative body, whose members are more representative of the people of the City of Bombay than we are, and come into closer contact with the people of the City of Bombay than we do, that this Bill is brought forward before this honourable House So, from these points of view the House will be well advised to accord sanction to the Bill

(After recess)

Mr B S KAMAT Mr President, I have no hesitation in supporting this Bill, thereby giving 13 lakhs of taxation to the executive For one thing, this taxation bill stands entirely in a different category to the one which we just passed, namely, the taxation of light and air, which to my mind is fundamentally wrong In this case, however, as one of my honourable friends on the other side pointed out, smoking is not a necessity of life, and from that point of view, we are only taxing a luxury.

[Mr B S Kamat]

Then, again, as it has been pointed out, this taxation has been asked for by the Bombay Corporation and we need not stand in the way of that Corporation in getting this money for improving their own financial position

There is one point, however, which I think the Honourable Minister might clarify I am not in favour of earmarking any particular revenue for a definite purpose I know that is not a very good, sound general principle All the same, equity requires that if Bombay people are taxing themselves for their tobacco, the Bombay Corporation should get the advantage of this taxation, and the revenue so raised should be their sure asset beyond the possibility of any legal quibble on the part of Government Whether it is the moral binding on Government to transfer the proceeds of this tax to the Bombay Corporation, or whether it should be a statutory obligation on them is a point worth consideration The Bill is not clear And I venture to think that this point should be cleared up by the Honourable Minister when he gives his reply As I said, equity requires that there should be a permanent claim, so to say, on this revenue in the hands of Government in favour of the Bombay Corporation On the other hand, I feel that this Council should be absolutely at liberty either to reduce or to enhance any subsidy or contribution to the Trust as the financial circumstances for the time being permit I believe this year the contribution is something like 35 or 32 lakhs of rupees Subject, therefore, to the right of this Council to reduce or enhance the contribution to the Improvement Trust as circumstances may require, the proceeds of the tobacco duty may be——

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN May I interrupt the honourable member? Which contribution is he referring to?

Mr B S KAMAT I beg your pardon Yes, this 32 lakhs is a loan If there is no contribution or subsidy this year, any way it should be within the competence of this Council to deal with the provincial revenues and grants as we like

Now, with reference to the objection which was raised by my amiable friend Sir Reginald Spence, who, I am sorry to say, is not in his seat [Honourable Members He is here]—I am sorry With reference to his objections I say I sympathise with him, perhaps he is a smoker of cigars But, Sir, if the incidence of this taxation owing to the additional proposed duty is adverse so far as imported cigars and cigarettes are concerned, it may perhaps mean that many people in Bombay will go in more for the country bidi as a cheaper smoke and thereby to a certain extent, I expect, the indigenous industry will be helped The bidi industry employs a large number of helpless women and widows, and because of the fact that the cigarettes and cigars are going to be costly comparatively, it would not be a great calamity for the bidi makers from the point of view of indigenous industry

As regards the difficulty about refund, my honourable friend Sir Reginald himself admitted that in the case of wines and spirits the machinery for refunds has been working very smoothly If that is the case, it is only a question of a little time, and the refunds of the duty on tobacco to upcountry dealers would work equally smoothly I do not think, therefore, that his apprehension is well-founded I think the tobacco duty is, if not an ideal form of taxation, at any rate an unobjectionable form of taxation as compared with the taxation of light and air, and I have great pleasure in supporting this Bill

Mr G L WINTERBOTHAM (Bombay Chamber of Commerce) Sir, I would like to say that I support the first reading of this Bill, not because I think it is an ideal measure, but because the necessity for some increase of taxation to finance the transfer of the Bombay Improvement Trust to the Bombay Municipal Corporation is urgent, and the need for that is admitted My main reason for supporting this Bill is that this taxation proposal for this purpose is a good deal better than any of the other alternative proposals which have been put forward by the Municipal Corporation for the consideration of Government

There are one or two points in connection with the Bill which have already been touched upon by my honourable friend representing the European constituency and which I do think require the special consideration of Government One is the question of smuggling I do not think the dangers of increased smuggling are very great, but after all, that is an administrative difficulty, and I do not think that it is right to oppose the Bill merely because there are administrative difficulties Those difficulties must be got over, and I think we can safely leave it to those responsible for the working of the Act to get over those difficulties

The other point is the question of the effect on Bombay city, as compared with other cities If I seriously felt that Bombay and Bombay's trade would be adversely affected as compared with the other cities, I should hesitate a very great deal before supporting the Bill That is my main objection to a great many alternative proposals which have been put forward, and I do not honestly think that it really applies to this particular Bill, because as the Honourable Minister has pointed out, refunds will be given to exporters of tobacco out of the city There again, I can quite understand the honourable member Sir Reginald Spence's fears that it will not be easy to obtain the refund But I think Government may safely be trusted to see that the question of refunds is properly looked after, and I do not see why, when the honourable member Sir Reginald Spence has presented to the Excise Commissioner so handsome a bouquet in connection with the other articles, he should be unduly apprehensive about the working of the refunds in connection with tobacco I think on all these grounds that the Bill must be supported, and I would like to make it clear that I do so

Rao Bahadur R R KALE (Bombay University) Sir, there are one or two features of the Bill which certainly make out a case for giving our support to it Firstly, we are trying to tax a luxury, and therefore we should not hesitate to accord our sanction to the Bill The second point is that the money is to go to the Bombay City Improvement Trust which is to be amalgamated with the Bombay Municipal Corporation No doubt the Improvement Trust, or, for the matter of that, the Bombay Municipal Corporation, require additional funds, and looking to the fact that the Improvement Trust has done a great deal of good to the city of Bombay, it is but fitting that more funds should be found to meet the liabilities of that Trust But, Sir, my difficulty is this here is an attempt made to introduce a Bill by the Local Government, and it is not stated—though the Honourable Minister may correct himself—it is not stated in the preamble that the proceeds of the duty will be utilised for the purposes of the Improvement Trust If there is no specific provision, then the preamble does not help us, much less a statement of objects and reasons You are aware, perhaps, that when we have to give the correct interpretation in a court of law, if we attempt to refer to the objects and reasons, we are at once called to order by the presiding judge He says "No, you cannot refer to the objects and reasons You must construe the section without any reference to the objects and reasons" That being so, I doubt whether any reference in the statement of objects and reasons would be of any use We are told that at present the tobacco tax which is being levied according to the old Act goes to the Corporation It is a municipal tax I do not know what was the constitution of the Corporation in 1857 when this Act was passed In fact, I do think, although I do not possess any information on the point, that it was a sort of department closely allied to Government Then in that year there could be no provision by which this tax would go to that body. Section 2 of the Act merely says that all tobacco except such small quantities as are hereinafter mentioned imported from any place in the town of Bombay and intended for consumption therein shall be liable to a duty of Rs 7-8-0 per maund of 40 seers of 80 tolas That duty is called the municipal duty There the section stops and the next section, namely, section 3, goes on to say

"The same municipal duty may be paid at the option of the importer either on the importation of the tobacco or after it has been warehoused as hereinafter provided"

There is nothing in the Act as to to whom the duty is to be paid, and it seems to me therefore that if the object in levying this additional duty is to create more funds for the purpose of meeting the needs of the Corporation, then I do feel that the Bill, as it stands, will be enough to ensure that this amount will go to the municipality In fact the Honourble Minister in his speech made it clear that it will be a tax levied by Government and it will be a part and parcel of the revenues of this Government and this Government may dole out as a grant to the Corporation——

Rao Bahadur R S ASAVALE Not may, but will have to dole out.

Rao Bahadur R R KALE That is the whole point I mean there is nothing in the Honourable Minister's opening speech to make it clear that it will be merely an addition to the general revenues and that Government will make a grant to the Corporation just as it makes grants to local bodies even at the present day I may quote the case of the

[Rao Bahadur R R Kale]

Municipality of Bombay versus the Bombay Government which was recently disposed of There, there was an obligation or a liability which was said by the Judge to be a sort of a moral obligation but it was held that there was nothing legal which would compel the Government to contribute whatever it had promised or agreed to contribute towards the cost of compulsory primary education to the corporation of Bombay My point is therefore this that unless some safeguard or safeguarding provision is introduced into the Bill, whether it will be imperative on the Government to pay all the proceeds of this tax which may be realised by them to the Improvement Trust I know, Sir, that it is not possible in an Act to earmark certain revenues It is stated that we cannot make a provision in the Act for earmarking the proceeds of a particular tax for the purpose of meeting a particular need, but here I think the case is different Here it is not that the Government is being asked to earmark the proceeds of this tax for a particular department of theirs or a particular object which the Government themselves are carrying out. Here the case is that the Government is in the position of a mere agent or a trustee to collect the tax and then to pay it over to the municipality Therefore, I see no objection I mean my point is that there cannot be any objection on the score of saying that the money raised by this particular form of taxation will be paid to the Bombay Municipal Corporation. I do not know if any amendment can be suggested by an addition to section 2 Section 2 stops at saying that all tobacco imported shall be liable to payment of a duty It stops there Here we have an amendment of section 2 namely, for the words " seven rupees and eight annas " the words " thirty rupees " shall be substituted That is all Suppose we proceed to say "and shall, as such, be paid to the municipality " It is called a municipal duty, that wording is there in section 2 of the Act of 1857 in which we find that this Rs 7-8 per maund is called a municipal duty, it says so, it is called a municipal duty, there it stops What I mean is, whether it will not be possible or open to us to say by way of an addition to this section that the duty shall be at such and such a rate and shall as such be paid to the municipality I mean if that is embodied in the Bill, then I do submit that there should be no objection whatever to achieve the object which we have in view and for which the Bill is brought Therefore, Sir,——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT The amendment that the honourable member suggests would make the whole revenue go to the municipality ?

Rao Bahadur R R KALE Yes, Sir

The Honourable the PRESIDENT The Bill aims at increasing the rate charged and at letting that go to the municipal corporation for the purpose of meeting its needs in connection with the Improvement Trust. How is that going to be achieved ?

Rao Bahadur R R KALE My information is, if I am correctly informed, that even at the present time whatever tobacco duty is levied——

The Honourable Sirdar Sir RUSTOM JEHANGIR VAKIL This tobacco duty since the year 1857—the year in which this Act came into existence—is being paid to the municipality, even now

The Honourable the PRESIDENT The whole of it ?

The Honourable Sirdar Sir RUSTOM JEHANGIR VAKIL Yes, and it is contemplated to continue to pay that duty and in addition the increased duty also to the municipal corporation to meet the deficit Now, the question that the honourable member Rao Bahadur Kale has raised is to make it a statutory obligation on the part of the Government to give the whole duty to the corporation for ever I think Government will have to consider whether it will be necessary for them to allow this source of provincial revenue to be converted for this particular purpose even after the needs of the city improvement trust are satisfied So, it requires consideration, but I can give an assurance on behalf of Government that so long as the city improvement trust is not able to balance its budget, this amount will continue to be given to the corporation for that specific object

Rao Bahadur R R KALE I mean to say the position is clarified so far as the wording of the present amendment goes, namely, whatever is being levied and whatever the rate at which that is being levied, all that is being given to the municipality and whatever will be collected by way of an addition will also be given to the municipality as heretofore The only other argument of the Honourable Minister is that the Bombay Government will go on paying this amount so long as it is necessary for the municipality to get the amount and it may not be necessary to do so perhaps I do not know when but at some future date That is however another matter The difficulty that you raise is met, I mean it is not as if the Bill seeks to give the additional yield to the municipality It is not like that. There is an Act under which some duty is being levied at the present moment and——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT I myself am not very clear on the point, but as I understand it, the idea is to levy this extra taxation or raise the duty, without disturbing the old arrangement existing under the Act, and the additional taxation that is put on would be collected and handed over by the Government to the Corporation for certain purposes which the Honourable Minister has mentioned viz, to meet the demands of extra expenditure of the Improvement Trust Further that Government would hold back whenever they think the need does not exist, and this increased taxation, being in the nature of a permanent tax, would go to the general revenues of the Government Is that correct ?

Rao Bahadur R R KALE, My point is——

Mr B S KAMAT Sir, the Corporation is getting for the last 75 years this duty at the rate of Rs 7-8 When you substitute the words "Thirty rupees," would you be in a position to withhold the whole of the proceeds at the rate of Rs 30 so that they lose even what they were getting all these 75 years at the rate of Rs 7-8-0 ?

The Honourable Sirdar Sir RUSTOM JEHANGIR VAKIL But it is open to Government even now according to the present state of things to withdraw the amount which is being given to the Corporation, but for the last 75 years this is being done and it is not the intention of the Government to withdraw it Now we find that there is need for increasing this duty in order to meet the increased liabilities which the Corporation will be very shortly incurring on account of the Improvement Trust——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT Then the question arises naturally that this increased amount is to be levied to meet the increased expenditure of the Corporation, and so, when that need does not exist, what is Government going to do? I thought Government would continue to allot what it is giving to-day and to credit the rest to the general revenues

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN As far as I understand, the tobacco tax is a provincial tax We, as a matter of grace or, I might say, as a sort of a dole, have been paying this to the Bombay Municipal Corporation at present Now the Honourable the Minister for Local Self-Government has brought this amending Bill to raise the duty from Rs 7-8-0 to Rs 30 for the benefit of the Improvement Trust, because they are very badly off financially, and we will continue to give the Improvement Trust the increased revenue so long as they continue in a bad condition financially, and as soon as their financial condition improves, it will be open to us to reconsider the question again

Rao Bahadur R R KALE So, my information was correct, namely, that the tax to be levied at present goes to the municipality and whatever will be levied now by raising the rate will also continue to go to the municipality

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN To the Improvement Trust

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN Not yet

Rao Bahadur R R KALE Their amalgamation is under contemplation Therefore the position is this, the tax is a municipal tax, it is called a municipal tax and dates back to 1857 Whether the machinery of the municipality at that time was as it is to-day I do not know, but my point is that it may have been necessary, in those days when the tax was initially levied, for the Government to levy and pay it over to the municipality That practice has been continued I understand from the Honourable Minister that he also has no intention of discontinuing that practice hereafter, but he wants to raise some more money by increasing this tax in order to meet the increased needs of the Improvement Trust When you are asking this House for additional money for a particular purpose, I think it will be necessary for this House to be careful to see that the money is paid to the Improvement Trust or to the Corporation as the case may be only so long as it is necessary, and as soon as the need of the Corporation or the Improvement Trust ceases, it will be a question for consideration whether the increased taxation should continue Therefore, would it not be possible to limit the life of this Bill ? It is now going to be placed permanently on the statute book Is all this increased taxation to go for ever to the Corporation or the Improvement Trust ? We are in a position to support it on the ground that more money is required for the Improvement Trust, and in the interest of the improvement of the city we are prepared to sanction this extra taxation But if at some future date that need ceases, then the question is whether this tax should also continue to operate That is the difficulty with which we are faced The Honourable Minister's statement amounted to this, that he is prepared to say that whatever is collected will be paid to the Corporation or the Improvement Trust, so long as there is a need for it But that statement is not a legal solution of the question, and therefore I have put forward my own views There must be something more either in the Act or in this Bill to decide as to how this can be brought about It can be done, as I have suggested, by an addition to section 2 of the Act, that such duty shall be paid to the Corporation, or by some provision in clause 2 of the Bill that this will remain in force for a period of some years, either 10 or 7, or some such period At the end of that period we will be in a position to see how things have developed Unless either of these two alternatives are possible, it seems to me that there is a difficulty, which I at least feel, in coming to a decided conclusion in this matter

[Rao Bahadur R R Kale]

The Honourable the PRESIDENT Before other honourable members rise to speak, there is a legal difficulty, I should say, which has been pointed out by the honourable member Rao Bahadur Kale I do not know what Government have thought about it Two things have to be made clear In the Bill there is nothing to show that this increased taxation is being given to the Corporation to meet its increased need, or its increased expenditure in regard to the Improvement Trust That is not clear, and certainly, as the honourable member pointed out, the question is whether the Honourable Minister is going to make it clear in the body of the Bill by some amendment to the effect that this amount is intended to be handed over to the Corporation The second point is, when that need does not exist, whether the whole amount is going to be at the disposal of the Government and the Corporation is going to lose what it is getting now, or whether there is a method in the Bill itself by which Government can withdraw its extra aid that they propose to give by this Bill I think that must be made clear before other honourable members can speak

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN Sir, I might make the position of Government clear As I have already stated, as a matter of courtesy, or whatever you like to call it, Government give the Corporation the proceeds of the tobacco tax that is collected at present in the city of Bombay Now, we have brought this amending Bill to increase that tax for the purpose of giving the proceeds to the Improvement Trust, because they are——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT That is not apparent from the Bill at all It is nowhere provided in the Bill that it is for the purpose of meeting the extra expenditure of the Improvement Trust

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN It is stated that the object of this Bill is to increase the rate of duty on tobacco imported into the town of Bombay, so as to enable the Bombay Municipal Corporation to meet its increased liabilities on account of the proposed amalgamation of the Bombay City Improvement Trust with the Municipality It is in the statement of objects and reasons

An Honourable MEMBER That is no part of the Bill

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN The object is clearly specified in the statement of objects and reasons We cannot introduce any taxation Bill, earmarking the proceeds from it for any particular department We can only say that we want the money for a certain purpose, and in the case of this Bill we have specified, in the statement of objects and reasons, that it is for the purpose of assisting the Improvement Trust The tax is levied by Government, it is collected by Government, and we are going to give the proceeds to the Improvement Trust so long as its financial position is bad I do not think there is any legal difficulty which stands in the way of the House voting for this Bill

Mr B S KAMAT If we are to be in a position intelligently to vote on this question, we want to know whether the smoker is to be permanently taxed at the new rate or whether he is to be taxed as long as the need of the Improvement Trust lasts When the need is no longer there, we do not see the necessity of taxing the smoker for ever at the higher rate and giving the proceeds to the Corporation

Mr G WILES Sir, this amending Bill, I would like to remind the House, is for the amendment of an Act which has been in force for about 70 years This tax on tobacco in Bombay is a Government tax It is not a municipal tax The money belongs to Government, and by an arrangement which has been in existence for about 70 years the proceeds of this tax have been given to the Municipality to meet the cost of certain functions which were handed over at that time to the Municipality Now, as was made quite clear in the debate the other day, the Improvement Trust requires additional revenue We are quite unable to say within what period the finances of the Improvement Trust will reach such a stage that they can do without this additional revenue, but the estimates which have been prepared by the Chief Officer and by the Municipal Commissioner himself show that this revenue will be required for 20 years I suggest it is not reasonable for us, that being so, to specify any period We do not know what will be the attitude of this House in 20 years' time Tobacco tax is a perquisite of the province, for this House to impose for its own purposes But we have come to you very deliberately and told you that Government intend, for so long as it may be necessary, to hand over the proceeds of this tax for the purposes of the Improvement Trust It will not necessarily be handed over directly to the Municipality without any condition That would be improper That is why it is impossible to put into this Bill any clause handing it over to the Municipality, even with a condition that the money must be earmarked for the purposes of the Improvement Trust We do not yet know whether the Municipality are going to amalgamate with the Improvement Trust We hope that legislation to that effect may be possible in the course of the year, but we do not know, it is not a fact yet It is of the utmost importance that the Improvement Trust finances should be improved forthwith, and we are going to earmark the proceeds of this tax for the benefit of the Improvement Trust I do not know how we can make that more clear even by putting it in the Act Even if it were put in the Act that, so long as the Improvement Trust requires the proceeds are to be utilised solely for the Improvement Trust, I do not know how that could help us You would still have to repeal this Act when the necessity arose, and utilise the proceeds for something else if you wish to do so I suggest it should be quite sufficient for the purposes of this honourable House understanding the position for Government to give an undertaking that the proceeds of this Bill will be utilised, for so long a period as may be necessary, for the purposes of the Improvement Trust I believe that is the procedure which has been followed also in the case of the Improvement Trust in Calcutta, where certain revenues which have been put on by the Province have been earmarked by the Provincial Government for the purposes of the Improvement Trust

Dr J A COLLACO On a point of information What happens when the liabilities of the Improvement Trust are satisfied after 20 years? Does this tax still remain, or will it be repealed?

The Honourable the PRESIDENT That has been explained. The implications of the Bill in all its aspects have been explained The House now understands what the intentions of Government are and what the language of the law as it will become, will be, and it is for the House to decide

Dr J A COLLACO My only fear is——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT Is the honourable member making a speech on the first reading, or asking for some information?

Dr J A COLLACO I am not making a speech

Rao Bahadur G V PRADHAN Will the life of the Bill be treated as the principle of the Bill? If that is so, any amendment as regards the life of the Bill will have to be considered at the first reading

The Honourable the PRESIDENT The honourable member has given an amendment to me, to limit the life of the Bill to 7 years But as the Finance Secretary has pointed out, the Bill might have to be continued for 20 years, and I do not know whether it would be right for any honourable member to say, 3 years or 5 years or 7 years, unless they wish to have this Bill brought up before the House from time to time

Dr M D GILDER At the present moment it is stated that the proceeds of the tobacco tax are given to the Municipality Are they given under any contract, or as a dole ?

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN It is a dole

Mr B P WADKE It was a promise It is clearly mentioned that Government clearly realised the position of the Improvement Trust when it was created, and promised that a substantial measure of assistance would be given to the Trust

The Honourable the PRESIDENT Order, order The honourable member has not understood the question The existing revenue that is collected on tobacco is being given to the Municipality A question was asked whether it was on some contract or legal basis, or as a dole

Mr B P WADKE When the Improvement Trust was started Government promised to give assistance in some form

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN Yes, that is also correct

Mr B P WADKE It is not a dole

Mr G WILES This tax has, for over 70 years, been given to the Municipality as a "dole"

Mr V N JOG (Dharwar District) If the object of the Bill is to relieve the finances of the Improvement Trust, the House may accept the following amendment

"At the end of clause 2, add the words 'and will remain in force for 10 years in the first instance, and the Government may extend it for a further period not exceeding 10 years"

According to their own calculation the finances of the Improvement Trust will be set right in 20 years Therefore, if in the first instance the life of the Bill is made 10 years, and permission is given to Government to extend it for another period of 10 years, if necessary, I think it will meet the case

The Honourable the PRESIDENT It is no use wasting time I will allow honourable members to speak

Mr A N SURVE (Bombay City, North) Sir, I am not speaking on the Bill——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT I want the honourable member to speak on the Bill and along with it to say anything he wants to say

Mr A N SURVE But the position——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT Let the honourable member speak on the Bill and clear the position as he likes

Mr A N SURVE The debate that is going on may be curtailed, if I am permitted to read from this book It contains the whole position from the year 1857 up to the present day and it also states the arrangement that has existed between the Government of India and the Bombay Government It is stated in the Gazetteer

"The collections from the special tobacco duty originally formed a portion of the Imperial revenue In 1857 the proceeds were made over to the Board of Conservancy as a State contribution, but this arrangement was discontinued at the close of the official year 1858 59, in consequence of an impression prevailing that the Act contemplated the absolute and unconditional surrender to that Board of the special duty on tobacco This action of Government was approved by the Secretary of State for India To the end of 1865 the revenue derived from this tax was credited to Government In November of that year the Bench of Justices (the predecessor of our Municipality) renewed their application for the transfer of the proceeds of the special duty on tobacco to themselves, and being supported by the Government of Bombay the revenue was restored to the municipality by the Government of India with effect from the 1st January 1866 The control of the Department has since rested with Government while the revenue has been handed over to the Municipality"

This is most important

"It has always been recognised as a state contribution towards the municipal funds and can be withheld at any time"

I congratulate the Honourable Minister for obtaining the credit of having brought to a definite stage the amalgamation between the Municipality and the Improvement Trust I think it should have been done long long ago At least now Government have recognised it and they are now compelled to seek a source from which to draw upon Better late than never I request Government to continue and persevere in the wise course they have adopted Government should take into their confidence this House in allotting amounts to the municipality.

The reason for this request is to have a comprehensive view We do not know what will be the exact proceeds from any Bills or sources of revenue that may be allotted to the municipality at this moment

Coming to the Bill itself, the present rate has been in force since 1891 At that time the rate was low We are now trying to increase it by nearly 300 per cent. Whether that burden will not be terrible requires to be considered In this connection I may mention that in the statement of objects and reasons, it is stated that this Bill has been brought forward at the desire of the corporation So far, the statement is all right But we would like to know what the recommendation of the municipality was, whether it was that the duty should be increased by three hundred per cent or by any lesser increase This question is very material, because increase of taxation is likely to have action and re-action Unless we know the position exactly as to what effect this abnormal or rather this enormous increase is going to have on the trade itself and on the people of the city, we will be in a very difficult position to make up our minds To me at least the experiment appears hazardous, because the present rate was imposed in 1857

The honourable member representing the Bombay University (Rao Bahadur Kale) has called the using of tobacco a luxury But it is a necessity in the case of the working class To the rich people it may be a luxury

Another point that has to be considered is that there is depression at the present time People have reduced wages all round When there is unemployment everywhere, if the duty is to be raised by 300 per cent we must see that the rate does not work harshly against those people who use bidis We are told that the duty will come to half an anna per 100 But poor men do not purchase bidis in lots of 100 But they go and purchase for one pice or so When you consider the increase for these retail purchases, it will not be 6 pies but it will be 2 annas.

[Mr A N Surve]

Then, we must look to the effect of this duty on the trade itself and on the well-being of the city Now, it is admitted that tobacco is a controlled commodity The implication is that it is subject to the Excise Department It is subject to the control of the Health Department of the municipality and also to the exactions of the landlords As regards the excise duty it is going to be increased by 300 per cent As regards the Health Department, it must be understood that every bidi shop is a miniature 'actory, though it does not come under the Factory Act, because the bidi-makers are made to make bidis in the shop itself The Health Department of the Municipality has a control over the place where bidis are made Certain sanitary requirements have to be observed So, the bidi merchants have to satisfy not only the Health Department, but also the Excise Department The tobacco shops being licensed premises, the landlord will make his exactions Therefore the lot of a small trader is very hard I may state that the licensees of bidi shops are poor widows and crippled persons who work there to earn their livelihood If this duty is raised, I am afraid that the rich may survive and the poor may be squeezed out of the trade There is another aspect also Whenever an article is brought under heavy excise, our experience shows that people go in for cheap foreign things such as cigarettes rather than to swadeshi bidis, if the bidis are made dearer They will go in for cigarettes and the revenue from cigarettes goes to the Government of India

The Honourable Sir GHULAM HUSSAIN The import duty on tobacco goes to the Government of India Cigarettes are also taxed This will affect that also

Mr A. N SURVE If I am informed that if this duty is sanctioned at the rate of 300 per cent the merchants will try to import manufactured bidis from tobacco districts outside The result will be that about 15,000 people, men and women, will be thrown out of employment in the city [Interruption] I am not speaking about the taxes I am speaking about the persons who will be thrown out of employment It will be hard for them

I understand that 28 lakhs which are required by the municipality will be made up partly by the proceeds of this Act and partly by the increase in the general taxes of the municipality I am told that the municipality has agreed to raise their tax by one per cent If these 15,000 persons are thrown out of employment, there will be additional vacancies in the residential buildings The ultimate result will be that the municipality will not realise the additional revenue it expects Therefore, I submit that though we may support the principle of the Bill we should consider to what extent the duty should be increased That matter will have to be considered before the House passes this Bill

Mr V N JOG (Dharwar District) Sir, I beg to move

"At the end of clause 2, add the following words—' and shall remain in force for ten years in the first instance, and Government may extend it for a further period not exceeding ten years'."

The Honourable the PRESIDENT Are the words "in the first instance, and Government may extend it to a further period not exceeding ten years" necessary ? Government will come to the House and ask for the extension of the Act if they think it necessary

Mr V N JOG We want to give them that power even under this Act

Rao Bahadur G K CHITALE Do not give them that power Delete those words

Mr V. N JOG In the first instance, it should be for ten years If they think it necessary, they can by an executive order extend it to a further period of ten years, without coming to the Council again I have moved this amendment, because according to the statement prepared by Mr Delves the deficits of the Improvement Trust will disappear by the the end of 1949-50, and there will be a balanced budget According to Mr Shivdasani, it will be balanced earlier As the Improvement Trust is in difficulty, this additional revenue may be given to them for a period of ten years in the first instance, and then Government can see what the state of affairs of the Improvement Trust is, and if they think it necessary, give them this revenue for a further period of ten years—not more than ten years, because according to their own estimates by then the finances of the Improvement Trust will improve

The Honourable the PRESIDENT Is the honourable member in favour of the Bill ?

Mr V N JOG I am for the Bill, because Government have already given the Improvement Trust loans to the extent of eight crores Moreover, this tax will be levied in Bombay City only, which is immensely benefited by the improvements made in the city by the trust and I think this revenue should be given to them to adjust their affairs by way of relief

Question proposed

Rao Bahadur S K BOLE Sir, I want to offer a few general remarks. But at the outset I would ask the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government, who stated that it was at the instance of the Corporation that he introduced this Bill, to tell us what the proposal of the Corporation was , was it to increase the duty from Rs 7-8-0 to Rs 30 at one stretch or to increase it only to Rs 15 ? I think, Sir, this increase of duty to Rs 30 is too big a jump The Honourable Minister said that the incidence of this duty will not fall on the working classes But I will tell him that it will fall heavily on the working classes who will be hard hit Mostly it is these people who use tobacco They use it with pan , they use it for smoking bidies , they use it as a tooth-powder also [Laughter] They burn it, reduce it to powder, and use it for cleaning their teeth [An Honourable Member "For snuff also"] So, it is these men who will be hard hit My honourable friend Syed Miran Mahomed Shah, who is not here now, preached a sermon on smoking I wanted to tell him that it is very easy to preach but very difficult to practise I wanted to ask him whether he himself has given up the habit of smoking [Interruption] I want to tell those who say that it is a luxury that for these men it is not a luxury but a necessity ; it is a relaxation to them, it gives them relief from their hard work. So it is not a luxury

The prices of tobacco, Sir, vary from Rs 5 to Rs 40 a maund, and this duty will work out in practice from 150 per cent to 1,200 per cent That is a heavy increase Then, there is no such duty in the suburbs If this duty is increased to this extent, smuggling will go on on a high scale Hundreds of passengers come every day from Kalyan, Thana, Kurla, Andheri and other suburban railway stations, and they will bring tobacco and bidies and supply them to their friends and others in the city They will carry on a regular business, which I think it would be impossible for the excise department to check So, I quite agree with the honourable member Sir Reginald Spence that this trade also will be diverted from Bombay Other trades are being diverted from Bombay, and if Government increase the duty to Rs 30 a maund, I am sure this trade also will be diverted from Bombay And what will be the effect of that? There are nearly 1,800 retail shopkeepers, as pointed out by the honourable member Mr Surve, the majority of whom are widows, disabled soldiers, backward class and depressed class men In these days of depression they are hardly able to make both ends meet If the duty is increased, then they will have to close their shops and they will be thrown out of employment The number of bidi-makers is nearly 25,000 The bidi-makers who are daily wage-earners will also be thrown out of employment There will be a great deal of unemployment among them and they will add to the number of the unemployed These unemployed are already swelling the ranks of the Congress. If Government want to help the Congress they may increase the duty to Rs 30 The retail shopkeepers are poor men and they buy tobacco on credit, and if they close their shops, then the warehouse-men who sell tobacco to these men on credit and who have invested large amounts in the trade will also be ruined along with the retail shopkeepers What will be the fate of their outstandings? They will also go to dogs. In these circumstances, I think Government should think twice before taking this big jump

Mr HOOSENALLY M RAHIMTOOLA (Bombay City) Mr President, in the beginning of this session we had two full-dress debates on the affairs of the Improvement Trust The financial position of the Improvement Trust was fully discussed, and it was pointed out that some additional sources of revenue were necessary to be provided to the Improvement Trust to enable the Improvement Trust to reduce its deficits I believe that at that time the Honourable the Finance Member stated that Government were considering proposals of fresh sources of taxation to enable the Improvement Trust to reduce its deficits Government have now come forward with a proposal to raise revenue to enable the Improvement Trust to meet part of its deficits From that point of view, the proposal would be most welcome There is general agreement in this honourable House for supporting this measure Therefore, I need not dilate on this question and waste the time of the

[Mr Hoosenally M Rahimtoola]

House But the Honourable Minister, when moving this Bill, made one or two statements which require further elucidation He stated that this was a Government tax and it was at the option of Government to give a part or the whole of it to the municipality I think the Honourable Minister stated that Government could take away the tax for themselves whenever they liked This question has been raised only to-day in this House I was not aware, and I am not aware yet, of the actual position as regards this matter, but I am sure the Corporation will not accept the position taken up by the Honourable Minister that the tobacco duty belongs to Government I myself was all along under the impression that the tobacco duty was a municipal duty for the benefit of the municipality. However, I do not want at this stage, being not fully aware of all the literature on the subject, to enter into the technicalities of the question The Act, I must say, says that it is a municipal duty I do not know what position the Corporation will take up as regards this matter, but I don't think they will accept the Government contention The commonsense meaning of this word is that it is a duty to be used for municipal purposes The Honourable Minister stated that it was the intention of Government to hand over the extra revenue to the Municipality in order to enable it to meet the deficits of the Improvement Trust when the Improvement Trust was amalgamated with the Municipality Now, Sir, the Municipality had asked from Government three or four different sources of revenue One was the duty on cotton, the other was a terminal tax on passengers and the third was the tobacco duty, and the fourth was, I believe, a cess on land revenue which they subsequently gave up I want to point out that even if the Corporation increased their general tax by 1 per cent and they got an extra revenue of about 11 to 12 lakhs and even if this tax were to produce 11 to 12 lakhs making a total of 22 to 24 lakhs, that would not be sufficient to meet the deficits of the Improvement Trust entirely In the financial forecast prepared by the Chief Officer of the Improvement Trust——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT How does that arise ?

Mr HOOSENALLY M RAHIMTOOLA The Honourable Minister said that if the House accepts this tax and if the Corporation increases its general tax by 1 per cent, further sources of taxation may not be necessary, or words to that effect That is why———

The Honourable the PRESIDENT The question before the House is this The amount is being raised to be given over to the Municipality to meet some of its needs in connection with the Improvement Trust Now, the question as to how much the Improvement Trust needs and that this amount would only serve partially to meet its deficit is not before the House

Mr HOOSENALLY M RAHIMTOOLA I am merely stating this because the Honourable Minister said that after this tax is passed by the House and after the Municipality has raised the general tax by 1 per cent, it is possible that further sources may not be necessary

The Honourable the PRESIDENT That is not the point

Mr HOOSENALLY M RAHIMTOOLA I am replying to that argument I am merely pointing out that even after these two increases in taxation are given, the needs of the Improvement Trust will not be satisfied fully, because the deficits, as forecasted by the Chief Officer of the Improvement Trust are heavier than the 23 or 24 lakhs which both these taxes will produce I hope, Sir, that before the amalgamation takes place, Government will give the Municipality further sources of revenue in order to meet completely the deficit of the Improvement Trust

Mr J B PETIT (Bombay Millowners' Association) . Mr. President, I think the principle underlying the Bill is sound and ought to be accepted by this honourable House

As everyone knows, the Improvement Trust was started at the time of the plague in Bombay, when the whole town was in a state of panic, and when the entire population to a man was determined to wipe off the slums which were held primarily responsible for the scourge and all the havoc that it brought in its train It was during those dark days, when life was more precarious than ever, when people were dying like flies, when our normal routine was seriously dislocated, when all our activities were at a standstill, when our trade and industries had closed down, when our position as an important commercial centre and a great port was seriously threatened, when the inhabitants had forsaken the city in their tens of thousands, when all was sombre and desolate, when everybody's patience was strained to the utmost extent, that it was felt and realised, both by the Government and the people, that the only way to save the situation was to bring into existence, with the least possible delay, an independent body, armed with wide powers and unlimited discretion, that would have the courage to ruthlessly pull down the hovels and all the insanitary spots of the town wherever they existed, and to found a new city upon the debris Such a body was immediately created in the shape of the City Improvement Trust, and charged with the important and onerous duties of securing this end Its constitution was so framed and its powers so devised as to ensure quick and expeditious work So pressing was the necessity and so grave the crisis, that all sections of the community, willingly discarding their predilections and prejudices, were unanimous in the immediate enactment and completion of the scheme Even the Municipality—always jealous of its rights and privileges—whose duties very largely overlapped those of the contemplated body, willingly allowed itself to be shunted aside for the time being in the larger interests of the city, with the consent and active support of the founder and father of the Corporation, the late Sir Pherozeshah Mehta, who was the foremost to recognise the importance and urgency of the scheme, and who in his usual masterful way, made short work of such protests as were raised against the encroachment thus made upon the legitimate sphere of the Municipality

Such were the happy auspices under which the Trust took its birth and entered upon its great work It set about fulfilling the duties entrusted to it in two particular among other methods, one by the opening up of big streets, wherever possible, and another by the carrying out of vast improvement schemes, largely brought about by the complete and wholesale demolition of old and insanitary localities By the former, wide arterial roads were made where none existed before, and narrow lanes were widened and converted into large and beautiful streets, thus bringing the joys of air and sunshine within the reach of those who had never known them before By the latter, miserable and insanitary slums were mercilessly levelled to the ground on a comprehensive scale, and beautiful and sanitary structures were erected in their place on the latest and most modern lines In the hurry and scurry of its work, there is no doubt that some very serious mistakes were committed by the Trust, which at the time evoked very bitter opposition from the people, but the errors were soon rectified and public indignation was very largely allayed.

The result was that in a few short years, the operations of that body, thus inaugurated with the full support and benedictions of the public, even though frequently functioning in the teeth of public opposition, radically changed the face of Bombay and soon brought about very wide and far-reaching improvements, from the wholesome effects of which, all sections of the community alike benefited, to an extent which is only now being slowly but surely recognised It was understood and realised from the very beginning, that such comprehensive alterations in the very structure of the city would entail enormous liabilities which would have to be faced and met, the resources for which, having regard to the special conditions of the case, the Government promised to find in the first instance As it was the primary and statutory duty of the Municipality to develop the city and maintain its sanitary efficiency, it was felt and finally provided in the Act that the financial liability of the Trust should ultimately fall upon the shoulders of the Municipality, which in its turn should be enabled by the Goverment to find additional sources of revenue to recoup itself against all possible losses arising out of these special and comprehensive operations

The Trust has now practically achieved its purpose It has almost entirely destroyed the slums, it has opened up dark and ill-ventilated localities, it has created sanitary conditions where there were none before, it has given us large, wide and arterial roads, it has developed localities which were formerly lying useless and neglected; it has beautified the city beyond recognition; it has substantially added to the amenities of the town, in short, it has practicaly rebuilt Bombay on modern lines and helped to make her position secure as the first city in the Indian Empire All these have necessarily cost huge sums of money. There have no doubt been large losses in the operations of the Trust. These were inevitable But under ordinary circumstances, they could have been wiped off very easily from the profits which would have resulted from the sale of the vast areas of land which the Trust has acquired, developed and created But the unexpected world-depression has made it impossible to do so, with the result that the Trust now finds itself in a somewhat embarrassed condition, with annual deficit-budgets, recurring year after year, and with enormous areas on its hands of valuable land, both developed and undeveloped, which cannot be disposed of for the moment I have no doubt in my mind that with the improvement in the world conditions, and the return of our city's prosperity, it will be possible to dispose of these areas with profit, when the Trust will be able to come out of its difficulty, perfectly sound, and unscathed But meanwhile it must be financed and enabled to meet the two ends of its budget The Municipality which is very soon going to take up the financial responsibility and the uncompleted work of the Trust, must be immediately put in possession of the requisite funds to enable it to complete the transfer, and to shoulder the heavy burden of this additional liability. That is why this proposal is now before this honourable House It is a source of revenue which has already been by common consent made over to the Municipality for the last 70 years It is news to me that it is now sought to be regarded by the Government, primarily as a source of Provincial revenue, alleged to have been made over by them merely as a dole to the Municipality all these years I do not think that the Municipal Corporation will be prepared to accept this position In any case, this is not the time to enter into a discussion on the merits or otherwise of this question All that I wish to urge upon the most earnest attention of this honourable House at the present moment, is the immediate necessity of placing this additional revenue at the disposal of the Municipality to enable it to meet this liability and to hasten the completion of the transfer of the Trust to itself at the earliest possible moment

Among the objections advanced against the Bill, one was raised by my honourable friend, the member for the European Community (Sir Reginald Spence), on the ground that it will cause a diversion of the trade to other ports, which will thus not only put Bombay to a loss but also fail to secure the additional revenue expected from the Bill He has accordingly urged that the idea of raising this duty be therefore abandoned But I am afraid that he has failed to recognise the fact that this is going to be essentially a tax, imposed by the citizens of Bombay upon themselves, and that all duties paid on tobacco, cigars and cigarettes, that are exported, would be refunded There is no reason to suppose that such refunds will not be applied for, or that they will not be easily obtained, if demanded I see no difficulty in this matter, on the honourable member's own showing, and I am unable to admit that there is anything in this argument I am willing to assume, however, that there will be some evasion and also that there will be a certain amount of smuggling These features are almost always the necessary accompaniments of all measures of taxation But I am sure that with effective supervision and vigilant care, it will be possible, if not altogether to suppress them, at least to reduce both these to the lowest possible level As to the possibility of people getting their supplies in small quantities from places immediately adjoining Bombay and thus escaping the duty, the probability, if any, is so remote and is likely to be so troublesome and costly in the end, that it may safely be considered as negligible For all these reasons, I feel bound to say that there is not much force in the objections urged by my honourable friend and that this House may well disregard the same

With regard to the objection raised by my honourable friend representing the University (Rao Bahadur Kale), I think there is considerable force in what he said But I am inclined to believe that it will be met by the acceptance by the Honourable the Minister for Local Self-Government, of the amendment moved by the honourable member from Dharwar (Mr Jog) It may be taken as absolutely certain that the Municipality will not be able within the next 20 years, to wipe off, out of the additional revenue to be obtained from this tax, all the deficits that it will have to bear in consequence of the operations of the Trust To limit the life of this Bill in the first instance, as proposed, to a period of 10 years, with the power of extending it for another period of 10 years vested in the Government, will therefore practically have the effect of limiting the benefit of its revenue to the Municipality only for the period during which it will have to bear the losses of the Trust If however later on, it is found necessary for the Government to help the Municipality in this respect for a longer period than 20 years, the Government will have to come back before this House for its sanction in that behalf This amendment therefore ought to satisfy the honourable member for the University and meet the objections he has raised

It has also been urged during the debate that it should be clearly laid down in the Bill that this additional revenue is being expressly given to the Municipality to enable it to meet the losses which it will have to incur from the operations of the Improvement Trust and that it is not to be used for its general purposes I admit that there is something in this point also, and that if this is the intention of the Government and of this honourable House,—as appears to be the case,—then it should be made quite clear in the Bill The mere mention of this fact in the statement of objects and reasons is of no consequence and will never carry conviction in the courts of law It has been repeatedly held in legal judgments, that it is only the wording of the Act itself, that counts in a court of law and nothing more The statements of objects and reasons, or the speeches and declarations, either of non-official members or even of members of the Government, moving the Bill, do not count in the courts of law and are always unceremoniously brushed aside The late Sir Pherozeshah Mehta always laid down this rule, and invariably advised his colleagues and co-workers in public life never to rely on these statements or the speeches accompanying them but to take their stand only on the wording of the Act itself If honourable members of this House have strong views on this point, my advice to them is to make the matter quite clear by effecting the necessary alterations in the wording of the Act itself and definitely making the object free from all doubt

As I have said before, I am in favour of the Bill, and have accordingly much pleasure in supporting the first reading thereof. I trust that the honourable members who have raised the several objections I have referred to, are now satisfied and will also do likewise

Rao Bahadur G K Chitale rose

Mr C W A TURNER I move the closure

The Honourable the PRESIDENT I accept the closure, unless, of course, the honourable member Rao Bahadur Chitale has any legal point to urge

Rao Bahadur G K CHITALE (Ahmednagar District) Sir, I thought that this measure was non-contentious and I was under the impression that we would be able to go away much earlier, but some of the statements made by the Honourable Minister have rather confused us in the legal interpretation of the Bill now before us So far as I have been able to read the old Act, it appears that the present interpretation, which is not borne out by the Act, may be borne out by the practice but is not a proper interpretation to be put on the old enactment of 1857 It appears from section 3 and section 4 of the old Act that the marginal note of section 2 contains the words "Municipal duty on tobacco for consumption in Bombay" and the marginal note to section 3 says that "the said municipal duty may be paid" My interpretation of the Act is that the practice which is now stated to be an act of "dole" and not by way of a right under which this amount is being paid, is not in consonance with the Act itself Of course, it may be argued that the marginal notes are not law, and my difficulty was that if the Act had confined itself to the marginal notes, then we should have been bound by the ruling that they do not form part of the Act itself, but I find that in section 3 it is said definitely "said municipal duty" Therefore on the true interpretation of the Act itself, it is not a "dole" which is to be doled out by Government but for certain reasons it has been deliberately omitted from the Bombay Act of 1888, i e the Bombay Municipal Act Under section 192 of that Act, wherein the town duties are defined, we find in schedule H certain other matters are included but tobacco is taken out You will find on page 319 "grain of all sorts, flour of all sorts, wines and spirits, beer, sugar, molasses and gur, ghi, timber exclusive of railway sleepers, firewood," but tobacco is omitted It is omitted because it was already provided for under the old Act which was considered to be a municipal source of revenue Under these circumstances, unless the other side is prepared to take back their interpretation and leave it to the courts to decide as to what was meant by the Municipal Act——

The Honourable the PRESIDENT How does that interpretation affect or how is it relevant to the present Bill ?

Rao Bahadur G K CHITALE It affects us in this way that this House is not prepared to accept their interpretation and this portion of the House is not prepared to give them this money if Government says that it is a dole which it will give to the municipality That is the position in which we find ourselves, but if it is a legitimate source of revenue as a municipal duty as it has been in practice and in law,—that is exactly where I differ from them,—which is to be continued, then surely the House will vote for it

Mr G S GANGOLI (Kanara District) : Sir, I move an amendment to the amendment moved by the honourable member Mr Jog

That the words " in the first instance " and the words " and Government may extend it to a further period not exceeding ten years " be deleted

My object in moving this amendment to the amendment moved by my honourable friend Mr Jog is that the present Bill is a sort of an emergency measure and the power of extending it for a further period of ten years should not be given absolutely into the hands of the executive Government They should not be entrusted with a blank cheque of this character This power of enlarging the operation of the bill for a second term of ten years or so, if necessary, should rest with this honourable House, and we should not tie the hands of our successors in this uncontrolled fashion, especially in the case of a taxation and a revenue measure of this kind I think the powers of the House should not be restricted by any unbridled check given in the hands of the executive for the further reason that we are promised full autonomy by that time Excepting this little change, I am in favour of the first reading of this Bill

Question proposed.

The Honourable Sirdar Sir RUSTOM JEHANGIR VAKIL Sir, the financial condition of the Bombay City Improvement Trust has been fully explained on previous occasions It has also been stated that the Government and the Municipal Corporation of Bombay are also deeply involved financially in that scheme Now the question is how to meet that deficit of about 28½ lakhs As pointed out by me before, even if we are able to get about 12 lakhs of rupees out of this new tax and the Municipal Corporation is able to give us 11½ lakhs by increasing by one per cent. the general tax, it will be roughly about 24 lakhs and, as stated by my honourable friend Mr Hoosenally Rahimtoola, there will still be a deficit of about five lakhs of rupees Now the point is that if the duty is reduced, as proposed, from Rs 30 to something under Rs 30, then the difference would increase and that would involve my bringing before this honourable House two other proposals put forward by the Municipal Corporation themselves One is a terminal tax on passengers and another is a duty on cotton

Rao Bahadur R S ASAVALE On a point of information. Who says that the general tax will be increased ? Last time such are commendation was made to the Corporation, and the Corporation has thrown it out That is irrelevant

The Honourable Sirdar Sir RUSTOM JEHANGIR VAKIL With regard to the last amendment, I cannot understand the object of the honourable mover of the amendment to the amendment, in restricting the period to 10 years, when this House is definitely told that it will be nothing less than 20 years before the Corporation, after its amalgamation with the Improvement Trust, is able to establish equilibrium I therefore request this honourable House not to worry about the period at all I do not see any advantage even in limiting the period to 20 years, though I have no objection personally to 20 years, but I do not see very great force in that point, for this reason. In the first place, limiting it to 20 years would be no consolation to the poor consumer for whose benefit so many speeches have been made here this afternoon, because he will continue to pay the increased duty for another 20 years, nor would it be any consolation to the dealers who will be thrown out of employment, because they will continue to be out of employment for another 20 years So, I do not see any particular point in limiting the period to 20 years or any period at all If at any time this honourable House is in a position to find that this tax is no longer necessary, it is quite open to it to bring forward a proposal for its discontinuance

Dr M D GILDER That will require the sanction of the Governor

The Honourable Sirdar Sir RUSTOM JEHANGIR VAKIL One more point is that, by limiting the period to 10 years or 20 years, you will be putting your successors in a very inconvenient position This is a source of provincial revenue You will be getting something like 12 to 13 lakhs of rupees, and I am perfectly certain that your successors will not at all thank you for putting them in that position when there might be considerable opposition to the continuance of this tax

Sir, I have a short amendment to move It is as follows

In clause 2, for the words " 1st day of April ", the words " 19th day of March " shall be substituted

The reasons for this, if the House wants to know, are so many, but the principal amongst them is that, even during the last 10 days that the intention of the Government has been made public, that the duty was going to be increased, the warehouse where tobacco is deposited is very nearly empty, and it is quite possible that within a few days there will be tons of tobacco coming in, at the present low rate of duty, which will result in very unfair competition with the bona fide dealers of Bombay who have been dealing in this commodity for years and years past There would also be serious administrative difficulties For this reason, Sir, as the rate of Imperial duty on salt and other commodities is put up immediately, it is necessary, I consider, that this duty also should come into force, if the Bill is passed, from the 19th of March 1932

Dr M D GILDER Is the Honourable Minister moving this as an amendment of principle ?

The Honourable Sirdar Sir RUSTOM JEHANGIR VAKIL Yes, it is an amendment of principle

Rao Bahadur G K CHITALE Government is coming forward with a proposition that the duty should come into force from tomorrow

The Honourable the PRESIDENT The honourable member understands the difficulty The Bill has to be passed If honourable members so choose, this business can be finished by this evening In that case, the amendment might be moved If the House was in a mood that this taxation should be allowed, there is good reason in what the Honourable Minister proposes If the taxation is allowed, it should be brought into force as early as possible But the Bill is still hanging fire, and how can it be said that it shall come into force from tomorrow when only the first reading of the Bill is going on ?

[The President]

The Honourable Sirdar Sir RUSTOM JEHANGIR VAKIL. Is it not according to the procedure ? My difficulty was this I had no desire to move this amendment earlier than absolutely necessary I thought this was the proper stage when the amendment should come

Rao Bahadur R R KALE The amendment has to be properly drafted Government may ask the Remembrancer of Legal Affairs to do it in a proper way, so that we may dispose of it

The Honourable the PRESIDENT I have not the amendment in my hand

Rao Bahadur R R KALE This is an important point Honourable members on this side may have to say something

Mr G DAVIS Apparently, there is a desire on the part of honourable members to put forward other amendments, for which I shall want time, but as regards this particular amendment, there is nothing in it It is merely substituting one day for another That is all, and there is no difficulty about that

Question proposed

Rao Bahadur G K CHITALE I want to speak on this amendment

The Honourable the PRESIDENT I would advise the House to consider the main question whether to allow this taxation or not, it is in their hands If they do allow it to be passed in the second reading, the Act can take effect from the 19th March

Rao Bahadur G K CHITALE That is reasonable

The Honourable the PRESIDENT I am merely going to put this amendment to the House, so that if this amendment is passed, the subsequent amendments which may be moved would be changed accordingly

Mr A N SURVE (Bombay City, North) Sir, I move

"In clause 3 for the words 'thirty rupees' occurring in the 4th line, substitute the words 'fifteen rupees'"

I have already stated my reasons

Question proposed

Rao Bahadur S K BOLE Sir, I support the amendment I have given notice of a similar amendment I wish again to repeat my question whether the Corporation proposed this heavy duty of Rs 30

The Honourable Sirdar Sir RUSTOM JEHANGIR VAKIL The original proposals came before the Government from the Corporation As I have already stated, there were four proposals and it was intended that the amount of 28½ lakhs should be made up from the proceeds likely to be recovered from the four taxes At that time, on the assumption that all the four proposals would be placed before the House, the Municipal Corporation had mentioned Rs 15 duty I admit that

Rao Bahadur S K BOLE That was the proposal

The Honourable Sirdar Sir RUSTOM JEHANGIR VAKIL But later on, in the light of most severe criticism with regard to the other proposals, as there was very little time for eliciting the considered

opinion of the Corporation, the leading members of the Bombay Municipal Corporation were called and consulted It was pointed out to them that the tobacco duty might be increased to such an extent as to enable Government not to rely upon the other proposals Those members who assembled gave an assurance, not on behalf of the Corporation, but as the leading members of the Corporation, that this course, namely, to increase the duty to Rs 30 would be the most advisable Depending on the opinion of the leading corporators and also in view of the fact that it was probable that we might not perhaps have to bring before this honourable House the other very inconvenient proposals, we decided to increase the duty from Rs 15 to Rs 30

The Honourable the PRESIDENT Does the Honourable Minister accept the amendment or does he not ?

The Honourable Sirdar Sir RUSTOM JEHANGIR VAKIL I do not accept

Amendment put, and negatived

Clause 3 ordered to stand part of the Bill

Clause 4 (Amendment of sections 8 and 9 of IV of 1857)

In sections 8 and 9 of the said Act for the words "four seers" the words "half a seer" shall be substituted

Mr A N SURVE (Bombay City, North) Sir, I move the amendment which stands in my name——

In clause 4, substitute the words "two seers" for the words "half a seer"

Question proposed

Mr G S GANGOLI (Kanara District) Sir, I had also tabled an amendment to the like effect before I openly supported the first reading To-day, I find that we are all in a hurry to pass this taxation measure

The Honourable the PRESIDENT When did the honourable member give notice of the amendment ?

Mr G S GANGOLI Even before the first reading was passed

In the first place, by passing the third clause of this Bill we have increased the duty to four times the present rate This clause seeks to reduce the maximum allowance free of duty from four seers to half a seer, that is to one-eighth of the present maximum I think that it would be very hard Personally, I am not addicted to any form of tobacco But it does seem to me that this is too big a jump I do not know where we will be , I do not know what to say, because it is all being carried in a hurry I do not know what the people affected may have to say So, I wished to afford them an opportunity , I think the maximum of two seers should be accepted by Government

Sir REGINALD SPENCE Sir, I spoke against this Bill, but I must speak against this amendment It is absolutely absurd If you are going to have two seers, chuck your Bill altogether.

The Honourable Sirdar Sir RUSTOM JEHANGIR VAKIL Sir, if there is any measure which is calculated to inflict severe hardship upon the small dealers whom, I understand, it is the general desire of this House to protect, it is an amendment of this nature If we allow more than half a seer of tobacco to be exempted, then there is every likelihood of large quantities being imported into Bombay and a very unfair competition being started with the bona fide dealers of the town

Clause 4 ordered to stand part of the Bill

Preamble

"Whereas it is expedient to amend the Tobacco Duty (Town of Bombay) Act, 1857, for the purpose hereinafter appearing, It is hereby enacted as follows —"

Mr G DAVIS Sir, I move—

In the preamble, after the word "appearing" the following words shall be inserted

"and whereas the previous sanction of the Governor required by section 80C of the Government of India Act has been obtained for the passing of this Act"

It has been held that although the duty is a tax to be handed over to the municipality, yet it is part of the revenues of Government, and therefore the Bill will affect the public revenues of the province Therefore, the sanction of the Governor was obtained, and, by drafting practice, it should be mentioned in the preamble

Amendment put, and agreed to Preamble, as amended, ordered to stand part of the Bill

Third reading

The Honourable Sirdar Sir RUSTOM JEHANGIR VAKIL Sir, I move that Bill No III of 1932 [A Bill to amend the Tobacco Duty (Town of Bombay) Act, 1857] be read a third time and passed

Question put, and agreed to

The Honourable the PRESIDENT I have now to intimate to the House that I have received a Commission from His Excellency directing me to announce that he is pleased to order that the present session of the Legislative Council should be prorogued Accordingly, by virtue of this Commission of His Excellency, I declare the Council prorogued until the date of which due notice shall be given This Council is now prorogued

Bom. II of 1926.

18. Repeal of Bombay II of 1926.—The Indian Stamp (Bombay Amendment) Act, 1926, is hereby repealed.

[Appendix 1—contd.]

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of this Bill is to provide for the levy of a surcharge on the consumption of electrical energy and to enhance the Court-fees and stamp duties in certain cases for the purpose of increasing the revenue of Government. The detailed provisions are explained in the following notes on clauses.

1. PART I.—Preliminary.

The intention is that the provisions in Part II relating to electricity duty should apply to the whole of the Bombay Presidency except Aden; those in Parts III and IV relating to Court-fees and certain stamp duties should apply to the whole Presidency; and those in Part V relating to the levy of enhanced stamp duties on certain transfers of property should apply to the cities of Bombay, Ahmedabad, Poona and Karachi only.

2. PART II.—Electricity Duty.

This Part provides for the levy of a small surcharge on the consumption of electrical energy. It contemplates the collection of the duty by the supply Companies with the monthly bills. The collection will thus be simple and inexpensive and will fall for the most part on those who can best afford to contribute to the revenues. At the same time the duty is fixed so low that it is believed that it will not affect the establishment of cheap power facilities, nor handicap the users of electricity.

The responsibility for collecting the duty is imposed where the energy is supplied to a consumer, on the supplier of such energy and, where the licensee is the consumer himself, on such consumer. The supplier is to collect the duty along with his monthly bills and pay it to Government at the time and in the manner prescribed. In the latter case, the consumer will himself pay the duty direct to Government. If there is default in paying the amount of duty due, it shall be recoverable, at the option of Government, either from the consumer or from the supplier, as an arrear of land revenue. It will thus be seen that although the supplier of energy is primarily responsible for collecting the duty, the consumer is not thereby absolved from his liability to pay it.

Persons responsible for collecting the duty are to keep books of accounts and to submit returns to Government in the prescribed form and these will be open to inspection of inspecting officers appointed by Government.

It is intended that Government, tramway companies and railways and any other person or class of persons, institution, body, concern, undertaking, or premises or thing notified by Government in this behalf should be exempt from liability to pay the duty.

3. PART III.—Court-fees.

The Court-fees (Bombay Amendment) Act, 1926, will expire on the 31st March 1932. Its duration, which was originally limited to two years, has since been extended from year to year as it was intended that if at the end of the period specified the financial position still made it necessary, its life should be extended. The experience of the last six years has amply proved the necessity of enhancing the Court-fees in certain cases. It is, therefore, proposed to allow the Court-fees (Bombay Amendment) Act of 1926 to expire and to introduce a fresh Bill.

In enhancing the Court-fees the general principle followed is that where fixed fees are prescribed as in Schedule II of the Court-fees Act, 1870, the fees should be raised in consequence of the decreased value of the money. In the case of ad valorem fees prescribed in Schedule I of the Court-fees Act, an enhancement is made only where experience has shown that the fees levied are so inadequate that they lead to the abuse of judicial facilities or do not cover the actual cost to Government of the services rendered. The enhancement is effected by clauses 13 and 14 of the Bill which alter the fees in the case of those articles in Schedules I and II to the Court-fees Act in respect of which an enhancement of fee is considered necessary. A few applications have been added to Article 18 of Schedule II to that Act which, it is believed, should properly be brought under that Article as they are on the same footing as applications under paragraph 17 of the Second Schedule to the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908. The table of ad valorem fees is amended where the fee is altered.

Clause 12 of the Bill makes certain amendments in section 7 of the Court-fees Act which are based on the recommendation of the High Court and other judicial officers. The amendment in sub-clause (a) calls for no comment. The amendment in sub-clause (b) is intended to provide against undervaluation of the suits mentioned in clause (iv) of section 7 of the Act which exists at present with consequent loss of revenue. Sub-clause (c) amends the proviso to section 7 (v) so that the amounts payable may bear a better approximation to present-day values of land.

4. PART IV.—Stamp-duties.

The Indian Stamp (Bombay Amendment) Act, 1922, will expire on the 31st March 1932. The experience of the last ten years has amply proved the necessity for its retention. As the Act has been amended from time to time since it was passed and, as further changes are proposed to be made in it, it is considered desirable, from the legal point of view, to allow that Act to expire and to re-enact it in an up-to-date form. Such of the amendments as require an explanation are explained in the following notes on clauses. In revising the law, opportunity has been taken to bring the rates of duty leviable on a Bond, Bottomry-bond, Conveyance, Lease and a Reconveyance of Mortgaged Property to a certain extent in a line with those in force in Bengal.

Notes on Clauses.

Clause 15 (1).—The amendment in clause (b) is intended to make it clear that every entry in a note-book, memorandum book or book of accounts or other writing registering an agreement to sell or buy is an "instrument" within the meaning of the Act and, therefore, chargeable with duty just like an agreement in a prescribed form. If the same transaction is entered both in the buyer's as well as in the seller's books of accounts each entry relating to the transaction in each of the said books of accounts is an "instrument" within the meaning of section 2 (14) of the Act, and, therefore, separately liable to the stamp duty.

Clause 15 (7).—This clause provides that an agreement relating to the sale of a Government security or a share in an incorporated company or other body corporate or to forward delivery and a note or memorandum from a broker to his principal relating to the purchase or sale of any stock or security or to a forward transaction shall not be admissible in evidence unless it is duly stamped.

Amendments in sub-clauses (6), (8) and (9) are consequential.

Clause 15 (10).—This clause prescribes inter alia revised rates of stamp duty leviable on an agreement or memorandum of agreement under Article 5 and on broker's note under Article 43 of Schedule I to the Act. No alteration has been made in the duty levied at present under clauses (a) and (c) of Article 5. Clause (b) of Article 5 applies to transactions in the Stock Exchange and it is proposed to revise the rate of duty leviable under that clause on transactions in shares by prescribing a duty of one anna for every Rs. 1,000 or part thereof of the value of the share. At present the duty leviable is two annas for every Rs. 10,000 or part thereof of the value of the share. The duty leviable at present on transactions in Government securities is not revised. Clause (bb) purports to provide for the levy of duty on certain instruments which do not pay duty at present. Under Article 43 of Schedule I to the Act broker's notes are chargeable with duty; but the great bulk of what are known as "forward" contracts in the various markets is ordinarily not between broker and client but between member and member of the association, that is to say, between principal and principal. It is proposed to make these "forward" contracts or "futures" transactions liable to stamp duty. Clause (bb) provides for this. Such transactions are usually made by entries in note-books, memorandum-books or books of accounts. As explained in the notes on clause 15 (1) above, each of the entries relating to such a transaction in the respective books of the seller and buyer will be liable to duty.

No change has been made in exemptions (b) and (c). Exemption (a) has been slightly amended so as to accord with the provision made in clause (bb).

No change has been made in Article 43 (a). Clauses (b), (bb) and (c) make changes in relation to broker's notes corresponding to those made in Article 5 in relation to agreements or memoranda of agreements relating to transactions in shares or Government securities or for forward delivery.

5. PART V.—Stamp-duties on certain instruments in certain cities.

This Part provides for the levy of an enhanced duty on certain instruments in the cities of Bombay, Ahmedabad, Poona and Karachi only. In revising the duty the rates have been brought, as far as appeared expedient, in a line with those in force in the other provinces. The Indian Stamp (Bombay Amendment) Act, 1926, is repealed as its provisions are substantially incorporated in this Part.

Payment to Mr. R. R. Chaudhari, Probationer, Bombay Forest Service, Class I, of the extra expenditure consequent on his undergoing a course of training at the University of Edinburgh instead of at the Forest College, Dehra Dun.

In accordance with the rules for direct appointment to the Bombay Forest Service, Class I, Mr. R. R. Chaudhari was selected as a probationer in May 1931. Under the terms of his appointment, after receiving practical training in the Bombay forests for a period of six months, Mr. Chaudhari was to take up the Indian Forest Service course at the Forest College, Dehra Dun, at his own cost. Just before the completion of the practical training intimation was, however, received from the Government of India that as a measure of retrenchment, fresh students would not be admitted for the Indian Forest Service course at Dehra Dun. Immediate arrangements had, therefore, to be made for Mr. Chaudhari's training at some other institution, and after consultation with the High Commissioner for India it was decided that he should proceed to Edinburgh. This change in the arrangement for training has thrown on Mr. Chaudhari extra expenditure which was not contemplated when he was selected for the post of probationer and for which he could not be held liable. The course at the Edinburgh University covers a period of 30 months and the extra cost is calculated at Rs. 3,600. Government have decided to bear this expenditure (in addition to the steamer and railway fares) by the payment to Mr. Chaudhari of a monthly stipend of Rs. 100 for 30 months and the balance of Rs. 600 after the completion of his training. Mr. Chaudhari started for Edinburgh by the P. and O. Mail boat which left Bombay on 3rd October 1931, and was given a second class passage and second class railway fare from Marseilles. The expenditure in the current year is estimated at Rs. 1,152 as shown below:—

	Rs.
Stipend	500
Passage and railway fare from Marseilles	652
Total ..	1,152

The charge on account of the stipend is debitable to the High Commissioner's budget, while that on account of the passage and the railway fare has been met from savings under the head "8, Forest." As the expenditure relates to a new service, the sanction of the Legislative Council is requested to the grant of a token sum of Rs. 10.

Strengthening and repairing the bridge over the Krishna river at Udgaon on Umba-Udgaon Section of Ratnagiri-Kolhapur-Miraj-Bijapur Road.

The bridge over the Krishna river at Udgaon which was built between 50 and 60 years ago has become unsafe for heavy traffic. With a view to render it capable of carrying the present day traffic without risk of collapse and to save the valuable property it is absolutely necessary to strengthen and repair it as soon as possible. This work is estimated to cost Rs. 32,595 (inclusive of Rs. 6,930 for Establishment and Tools and Plant charges) and it has been administratively approved by Government. As this bridge is on Ratnagiri-Kolhapur-Miraj-Bijapur Road which is a Class I road, it is eligible for being financed from the petrol tax fund. An allotment of Rs. 12,700 (Rs. 10,000 for works outlay and Rs. 2,700 for Establishment and Tools and Plant charges) has accordingly been sanctioned by Government in view of the immediate urgency of the work out of the provision of Rs. 23,28,000 voted by the Legislative

Providing a thicker apron of big boulders for the rubble mound of the new sea wall at Marine Lines between chainages 1,000 to 2,000.

At the meeting held on 16th December 1930 the Standing Advisory Committee for the Back Bay Reclamation Scheme appointed a Sub-Committee of two members to submit a joint report regarding the condition of the sea wall and to advise regarding its future maintenance. The Sub-Committee recommended the provision of a thicker apron of large stones so as to prevent effectively the displacement of smaller stones behind. The Superintending Engineer, Northern Circle, agreed generally with the report of the Sub-Committee. He also reported that during the last monsoon the rubble mound under the sea wall was displaced and damaged and that, due to sea action, cavities were formed at several places under the sea wall. He accordingly proposed, to provide, at an estimated cost of Rs. 35,000 a thicker apron of big boulders for the rubble mound of the new sea wall at Marine Lines, between chainages 1,000 to 2,000 where the wave action is very intense and to watch the results before arriving at a decision as to whether the apron of large boulders should be extended further. In view of the urgency of the work, an estimate amounting to Rs. 34,914 was administratively approved by Government and technically sanctioned by the Superintending Engineer, Northern Circle, in December 1931 and an allotment of Rs. 10,000 was sanctioned for expenditure during the

The expenditure is debitable to the head "30, Scientific Departments (Transferred)" and as no provision exists in the budget under this Head for the expenditure in question, the sanction of the Legislative Council is requested to a supplementary demand of Rs. 2,000 to cover the excess over the total voted grant. Excess over the voted grant under the head "42, Bombay Development Scheme" on account of write-back of revenue expenditure incurred on certain schemes by debit to the head "59, Bombay Development Scheme" during 1929-30 and adjustment of municipal taxes on certain properties pertaining to the late Development Department debitable to the head "42, Bombay Development Scheme".

In accordance with the orders issued by the Government of India in February 1930, the receipts in the nature of revenue pertaining to Suburban Schemes No. 12—Suburban Trunk Roads, No. 17—Central Salsette Tramway, No. 19—Salsette Water Supply, and General Schemes Nos. I and II, which were classified under the Capital Receipt head "XLII—Bombay Development Scheme" during the year 1929-30 were transferred to the head "XXXI—Bombay Development Scheme" in the accounts of that year, but in the absence of specific orders for the opening of revenue accounts of those schemes and allotment of funds under the head "42, Bombay Development Scheme" the maintenance charges incurred on those schemes during that year were booked under the capital head "59, Bombay Development Scheme". From the accounts point of view, the procedure of charging the revenue expenditure to a capital head, viz. "59, Bombay Development Scheme", and crediting the revenue receipts to the revenue head, viz. "XXXI—Bombay Development Scheme", is anomalous, and the Accountant General has suggested that it should now be rectified. It is therefore proposed to write back in the accounts of 1931-32 to the revenue head "42, Bombay Development Scheme" by corresponding credit to the capital head "59, Bombay Development Scheme" the maintenance charges aggregating Rs. 2,29,297 incurred on the schemes mentioned above during the year 1929-30.

The details of the expenditure are as follows:—

	Rs.
Suburban Scheme No. 12—Suburban Trunk Roads ..	1,985
Suburban Scheme No. 19—Salsette Water Supply ..	2,13,059
General Schemes Nos. I and II	14,253
Total ..	2,29,297

2. The municipal taxes payable by Government on certain properties situated in Bombay and belonging to the late Development Department which are debitable to the head "42, Bombay Development Scheme" amounted to Rs. 7,412 for the year 1929-30 and Rs. 5,715 for the year 1930-31. The taxes in question have been paid by the Accountant General, Bombay, by debit to the head "47, Miscellaneous" in the first instance. As separate account heads are maintained in respect of properties of the late Development Department the Accountant General has suggested that the taxes in question should be debited to the heads concerned. No provision was made in the budget for payment of these taxes under the head "42, Bombay Development Scheme" during the years 1930-31 and 1931-32. An amount of Rs. 7,412 + 5,715 = Rs. 13,127 is accordingly necessary for carrying out the adjustment of municipal taxes in respect of properties debitable to that head during the current financial year.

3. The sanction of the Legislative Council is accordingly requested to a supplementary demand of Rs. 2,29,297 + Rs. 13,127 = Rs. 2,42,424.

Continuance of the establishment entertained for the 11th High Court Judge.

In 1930 the High Court represented that at least 12 Judges were necessary for the volume of work in the High Court, which was getting seriously into arrears. Of the 10 High Court Judges, three and sometimes four were required for criminal sessions and appeals, and the remainder were insufficient for the original and appellate civil work, which included a considerable number of important cases that were several years old. On a thorough examination of the state of work in the High Court, Government sanctioned the temporary appointment of an 11th Judge from 17th November 1930 to 18th October 1931 to relieve congestion and to avoid delays in the disposal of cases. The following temporary staff was entertained to work under the Additional Judge :—

	Cost per mensem.
	Rs.
1 Judicial clerk on Rs. 150 per mensem	150
1 Junior clerk and typist on Rs. 60 per mensem	60
2 Interpreters on Rs. 90 per mensem each	180
2 Chobdars on Rs. 28 per mensem plus house rent allowance of Rs. 7 per mensem each	70
4 Peons on Rs. 20 per mensem plus house rent allowance of Rs. 7 per mensem each	108
Total	568

In October 1931 the state of work in the High Court was reviewed, and it was found that, although substantial progress had been made in clearing off arrears, there had been an increase in criminal work and it was not yet possible to dispense with the Additional Judge. The period of the temporary appointment of the Additional Judge was therefore extended up to 13th October 1932.

In the current year's budget a provision of Rs. 6,816 (Rs. 568 per mensem × 12 months) has been made on account of the temporary establishment of the 11th High Court Judge, and after making a 10 per cent. cut in pay, a provision of Rs. 3,825 has been made in the budget estimate for the next year under "24, Administration of Justice" for the continuance of his establishment up to 13th October 1932.

ment for collecting this tax was to entrust that duty to the Secretary of the Western India Turf Club Government empowered that official under section 9 (2) of the Bombay Betting Tax Act, 1925, to inspect and take copies of accounts kept by licensed book-makers, to collect the tax on behalf of Government and to submit certified returns. For this duty Government have sanctioned to the Secretary an inclusive fee of Rs. 300 per race day. The latest revised estimate of expenditure during the year 1931-32 under this head (including refunds) amounts to Rs. 68,12,000 (voted) against the sanctioned grant of Rs. 60,18,000. Of the excess rather more than four lakhs and a half is due to less recoveries from commercial departments (mainly irrigation) owing to the debit of pensionary charges to those Departments having been reduced from 14 per cent. to 7½ per cent. of establishment charges with effect from the current year. And the balance has been caused by an abnormal increase in expenditure under the minor head "Superannuation and retired allowances" (see also paragraph 212 of the Blue Book for 1932-33).

Expenditure in connection with the Sugarcane Research Scheme for the Bombay Deccan.

The Deccan is one of the finest sugarcane tracts in the world provided proper judgment in choosing the soil and in managing the crop is shown. In particular the climate is very favourable to cane, and prolific crops of the superior thick soft canes can be produced. The great obstacle in the way of this crop has been the high cost of production, incurred by the average cultivator. This has placed the Deccan at a great disadvantage as compared with Northern India, as a cane-field. Apart from its own intrinsic merits cane has a special value in Irrigation Agriculture. It has provided the stimulus to agriculturists to make their lands fit for irrigation by levelling and generally laying them out. It has also been the cause of grading-up the condition of the soil through heavy applications of bulky manures. In fact it is generally admitted that a limited area of cane is, in practice, an indispensable factor in the development of canal agriculture. Owing to several reasons, including the hitherto high cost of production the total area of cane on the main canals in the Deccan has never exceeded 35,000 acres. But the acreage is no criterion of the importance of the crop in the agriculture of the countryside. Moreover, in point of value, even this small area of crops means an annual crop value of over two crores of rupees. It is however a matter of great importance that the cost of production should be reduced.

2. The expansion of cane cultivation which in turn governs the expansion of irrigation in the Deccan depends upon the profits to be made out of—

(a) the gul industry or

(b) the sugar industry, or both.

There is a general consensus of opinion that the market for Deccan gul is saturated for a price level of Rs. 20 to Rs. 25 per palla (of 250 lbs.) of gul. There is no scope for expanding the cane area on a gul basis unless the cost of producing gul can be brought down, substantially below Rs. 20 per palla. As regards sugar the cost figure is still considerably higher than the cost in the North of India and hence if the Deccan is to become an important sugar producing country it is necessary to bring down the cost of production and for this reason to undertake much more fundamental research than has been possible in the past on the Manjri Experimental Station.

3. In August 1930, the Sugar Committee of the Imperial Council of Agricultural Research recommended that arrangements should be made which can be expanded and fitted into a general scheme of agricultural research for an immediate and co-ordinated attack under unified control of the main problems connected with sugarcane in the Deccan, namely, soil management, the production of better varieties and the physiology of the sugarcane plant. The Sugar Committee further expressed the view that sugarcane research should be located at a place which was representative of the environmental conditions obtaining in the Deccan Canals Zone, and considered that a site more representative than the Manjri Experimental Station, should be selected. The Director of Agriculture then framed a scheme of research into the problems of sugarcane cultivation in this area. Under the scheme a simultaneous attack is contemplated in the following spheres:—

1. Soil physics.
2. Sugarcane physiology.
3. Sugarcane breeding.
4. Economics.

As regards sugarcane breeding the primary stage (including hybridization) is intended to be carried out at Coimbatore by the Imperial Sugarcane Expert but the rest of the work including the testing of seedling canes is to be carried out in the Deccan. Hence it is proposed to organise this research scheme on the basis of one officer highly qualified in agriculture proper assisted by two colleagues who will deal with soil-physics and sugarcane physiology, respectively. The period of the scheme will be five years in the first instance.

4. The site chosen for the scheme is on the Nira Right Bank Canal near Lonand Railway Station and is representative of the following environmental conditions of the Deccan Canals tract:—

Soil Rainfall
Temperature Humidity,

while there are adequate perennial irrigation facilities. It is considered that provision should be made for 30 acres of cane annually so as to provide for the large programme of work that is contemplated and to permit of repetition of some of this work on different soil types. The area selected has therefore an area of 100 acres.

5. It is proposed to set up a temporary organisation consisting of three sections, as noted below, each in charge of an officer. The agricultural officer will in addition be responsible for the whole scheme:—

I. Agriculture proper.
II. Soil physics.
III. Sugarcane physiology.

[Appendix 10—contd.]

3 Peons on Rs. 18.

2 Watchmen on Rs. 20.

The posts of Soil Physicist and Crop Physiologist are in the process of being filled up by calling for applications. The salaries attached to both these appointments are Rs. 320—40—1,200 with starting pay according to qualifications but not exceeding Rs. 500 on the average for the two appointments.

6. Free quarters will not be provided for the officers but it is hoped to provide residential accommodation in existing Public Works Department buildings at a rent not exceeding 10 per cent. of the officer's salary. Most of the subordinate staff can also be accommodated in the Public Works Department buildings. The rest of the staff will be provided for in katcha buildings to be erected at the plot site. The laboratory and office will also be accommodated in temporary buildings. A shed to accommodate the sugarcane mill, engine and furnaces and katcha buildings for cattle, implements, stores and coolies will also be required.

7. The following equipment will be required :—

I. Live stock and Dead stock.

II. Land improvements, including fencing.

III. Laboratory fittings and apparatus.

8. The total cost for a five-year period amounts to Rs. 5,22,088 made up of Rs. 67,918 non-recurring, and Rs. 4,54,170 recurring as shown in the appended statement. The present staff and budget of the Manjri Experimental Station will be made available as a Provincial contribution to the scheme. For this purpose the Manjri Station will be closed temporarily. The Department of Agriculture will contribute Rs. 1,30,850 made up of Rs. 6,105 non-recurring and Rs. 1,24,745 recurring as shown in the margin*, the balance of the expenditure being met from the funds of the Imperial Council of Agriculture Research. The Imperial Council will receive the receipts from the cultivation of the lands taken up for the scheme.

9. The scheme was laid before the Provincial Agricultural Research Committee in October 1930. This condition was accepted by Government and the scheme has been brought into effect from the current year. The total expenditure on this account during the current year is estimated to amount to Rs. 52,032. Of this, an amount of Rs. 6,309 will be met by reappropriation from the sanctioned grants for the Manjri Farm under the head 34-A-Agriculture—Agricultural Research and Propaganda. The balance of Rs. 45,723 will be met from the grant of Rs. 57,473 allotted by the Imperial Council of Agricultural Research. STATEMENT OF DEMAND FOR A SUPPLEMENTARY GRANT.

Grant-in-aid for the scheme of investigation of the virus diseases of plants.

Among plant diseases, the virus diseases constitute one of the most important groups, and some of them have been known to be the most destructive. In recent years, this group of plant diseases has assumed considerable importance, and as a result of extensive studies, the knowledge about these diseases has considerably advanced, but their causal nature still continues to be obscure. In addition to the work on the causal agent, a great deal has been accomplished with regard to the dissemination of virus diseases by such agencies as insects, seed, perennial parts of host plants and by perennial weeds. This subject offers a useful field of study, as by this means only is it possible to work out methods of control. Excepting the work in sugarcane mosaic, no investigation of any importance has been made on the virus diseases in India. In fact, no survey of the virus diseases of the hosts of agricultural importance has ever been attempted in this country, and there is no adequate information as to the importance of these diseases in relation to the major crops. But they cause great damage every year, and in certain cases have become limiting factors in the cultivation of crops. The work on the virus diseases of plants is therefore of great practical and scientific importance.

2. The Plant Pathologist to Government therefore framed a scheme of investigations into the virus diseases of plants. This consists of a general survey of the virus diseases of important crops in the Bombay Presidency and investigations into the specific virus diseases of these crops. It is proposed to investigate all the aspects of the virus diseases including pathological histology, physiology of the virus, insect or seed transmission, wild plants as hosts harbouring the virus, transmissibility of the virus to other hosts, etc., and control measures. To carry out the investigations extra staff as shown in the following paragraph is required.

3. The full cost of the scheme for a five-year period is Rs. 65,390. The details of the expenditure are shown below :—

The scheme was laid before the Provincial Agricultural Research Committee which supported it. The Imperial Council of Agricultural Research has sanctioned a grant-in-aid of this amount spread over a period of five years. It has already made available an amount of Rs. 2,650 for expenditure on the scheme during the current year. Though the work will be done by the Agricultural Department in this Presidency, no expenditure will be borne by that Department. As the expenditure in question relates to a new service, the sanction of the Legislative Council is requested to the demand for a grant of a token sum of Rs. 10.

Excess expenditure under "V-Land Revenue—Refunds—1931-32".

The budget estimate for the current year under "Refunds" is Rs. 4,00,000. It is anticipated that the total for the whole year will amount to Rs. 6,50,000. The increase under this item is partly due to the refund of non-agricultural assessment on 'non-osik' lands in the village of Vile Parle in the Bombay Suburban District to the Khot of the village and to the refund of revenue collected before the issue of orders granting remissions in certain districts as a result of the slump in the prices of food-grains.

Savings to the extent of about Rs. 60,000 in the voted grants under 5, Land Revenue, are expected owing to the emergency cut in pay and other retrenchments. The sanction of the Legislative Council is requested to a supplementary grant of Rs. 1,90,000 under the head 5, Land Revenue.

Excess under the head "60, Civil Works."

The demand for the grant voted by the Legislative Council under the head "60, Civil Works" for the year 1931-32, Rs. 8,17,000, was based upon expected progress of works in 1930-31. The actual progress on certain works, the bridges over the Gad, Muchkundi and Savitri rivers, and the police buildings in the Dadu district was however less advanced at the end of 1930-31 than had been anticipated when the budget estimates of the current year were framed. And consequently expenditure anticipated last year was actually incurred at the beginning of the current year, causing an excess of Rs. 79,000 over the current year's provision. Sanction of the Legislative Council is therefore requested to a supplementary grant of Rs. 79,000 under the head "60, Civil Works".

Loan to Improvement Trust.

The Bombay Improvement Trust has reached a period in its programme of development when, owing to the large expenditure in acquisition and development of properties, it is bound to have a series of deficit years, pending full disposal of these properties and the estimated return on the capital expenditure. This position is one which was always anticipated in the sanctioned programme of the Trust and has hitherto been met by floating temporary loans. The situation has however been aggravated in the current year by the general financial distress. Government have therefore decided to sanction a loan of Rs. 35 lakhs in the current year. It will mostly be financed from anticipated savings in loan funds as explained in paragraph 269 of the Budget (Blue Book for 1932-33). Savings to the extent of Rs. 4,98,000 are available in the current year's grant of Rs. 27,24,000 under "Loans and Advances by Provincial Government". The sanction of the Legislative Council is now requested to an additional grant of Rs. 30,02,000 to meet the excess.

Demand voted and now increased.

Excess expenditure anticipated under "37, Miscellaneous Departments (Reserved)—Inspection of Motor Vehicles".

Excess expenditure amounting to Rs. 21,500 is anticipated under the sub-head "Inspection of Motor Vehicles" as follows:—

	Rs.
(1) Excess expenditure under the sub-head "Inspection of Motor Vehicles—Bombay City" ..	12,021
(2) Excess expenditure under the sub-head "Inspection of Motor Vehicles—Sind"	6,734
(3) Excess expenditure on account of Refunds	2,700
or say ..	21,500

The excess expenditure mentioned at (1) is due to the appointment of a temporary staff of 3 Inspectors and 6 Clerks, since the introduction of a new scale of registration fees and the innovation of charging fees for the annual renewal of the registration certificates of motor vehicles made it necessary both to strengthen the clerical staff and also to appoint additional Inspectors to see that the new fees were not evaded. The excess expenditure mentioned at (2) is only technical, because when the new sub-head "Inspection of Motor Vehicles" was opened under "37, Miscellaneous Departments", the amount formerly provided for this purpose under "26, Police" should have been transferred to this sub-head, but through oversight the amount provided under "26, Police" for the regulation of public motor vehicles in Sind was not so transferred. The excess expenditure mentioned at (3) is also technical because when fees are paid in excess by mistake, the refunds of the excess payments are under the rules of public accounts treated as expenditure. Of this amount of Rs. 21,500, Rs. 17,500 will be met from savings within the same major head and the Legislative Council is requested to sanction a supplementary grant of Rs. 4,000 to cover the excess over the total voted grant.

Payment of overtime allowance to the staff of the Posts and Telegraphs Department for overtime work done during the floods of 1929 in Sind.

In order to facilitate the transmission of urgent messages in connection with the situation caused by the floods in August and September 1929 in parts of Sind, instructions were issued to all telegraph offices to accept messages at all hours of the day or night. The staff of these telegraph offices which had to be kept open beyond their ordinary working hours was entitled to overtime pay in accordance with the rules in force in the Telegraphs Department as they had to remain on duty for more than the prescribed period of 8 hours per day. The Postal authorities have incurred an expenditure of Rs. 7,090-10-0 on this account and preferred a bill of this amount. The allowance, if calculated at the ordinary sanctioned rates, would have amounted to a much higher figure but, as in most cases, the work done was neither very arduous nor continuous, a special rate, equivalent to the daily pay of the official concerned, was allowed. Government were satisfied that the claim preferred by the Postal authorities was reasonable and authorised its payment, the charge being met from the provision of Rs. 2,00,000 made in the current year's budget under the head "43-A, Famine Relief". As the expenditure in question relates to a new service, the sanction of the Legislative Council is requested to the demand for a grant of a token sum of Rs. 10.

Bill No. XL OF 1931.

A Bill further to amend Bombay Act No. V of 1879.

(As introduced on the 2nd October 1931 and published in the "Bombay Government Gazette" of the 21st October 1931.)

WHEREAS it is expedient further to amend Bombay Act No. V of 1879 known as the Bombay Land Revenue Code, in manner hereinafter appearing; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Bom. V of 1879.

1. Short title.—This Act may be called the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Amendment) Act, 1931.

[Appendix 17—contd.]

2. Amendment of section 209 of Bombay Act No. V of 1879.—In section 209 the following words "with reasons for the same" shall be added at the end of the words "appealed against".

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

In the interests of justice it is quite essential that when an appeal under the Land Revenue Code is decided, reasons for the decision should be given by the appellate authority. Under the Code it is not obligatory upon the appellate authority to give any reasons for the decision of an appeal. This amending Bill aims at making it obligatory upon an appellate authority to give reasons for any decision in the appeal.

BILL No. I OF 1932.

(A Bill to provide for the levy of a duty on consumption of electrical energy in the Presidency of Bombay and to amend the Court-fees Act, 1870, and the Indian Stamp Act, 1899, in their application to the said Presidency.)

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

We, the members* of the Select Committee, appointed to consider Bill No. I of 1932 (a Bill to provide for the levy of a duty on consumption of electrical energy in the Presidency of Bombay and to amend the Court-fees Act, 1870, and the Indian Stamp Act, 1899, in their application to the said Presidency), have the honour to report as follows :—

We have carefully considered the Bill and have made considerable alterations therein. We have also heard expert evidence from representatives of electricity supply companies and also the representatives of the Stock Exchange, the East India Cotton Association, the Bullion Exchange and of the wheat trade. The evidence of these witnesses and our discussions with them have been of the greatest assistance to us in our deliberations. The reasons for the principal changes that we have made in the Bill are detailed against the clauses in which they occur.

PART II—Electricity Duty.

Clause 5.—We have amended the clause to make it perfectly clear that the duty proposed to be imposed is only in respect of energy consumed for the purpose of lights and fans. We have altered the proviso to indicate in a general way the exemptions which are detailed in schedule II.

Note.*—The signatures of Mr. G. L. Winterbotham, Thakor Saheb of Kerwada, Mr. Syed Miran Mahomed Shah, Rao Bahadur G. V. Pradhan and Rao Bahadur R. S. Asavale will be notified when received.

[Appendix 18—contd.]

As the exemptions have been described in detail in the second schedule, we do not think it is necessary to retain the provision in the original Bill giving Government the power to grant exemptions by executive orders.

Clause 8.—We have slightly modified this clause to make it clear that the inspecting officers appointed by Government should have power to inspect only the prescribed books of accounts of licensees and no other.

Clause 11.—We have provided that the rules to be framed by Government under this clause shall be laid on the table of the Bombay Legislative Council, and that they shall be liable to be rescinded or modified. If any rule is modified, Government may accept the modification and re-issue the rule accordingly or may rescind the rule.

Schedule I.—This Schedule provides for the rates of levy of the electricity duty. We do not think that theatres and illuminated signs should be chargeable with a smaller duty and have, therefore, suggested a uniform rate of 6 pies for each unit of energy consumed.

We have added an explanation to this Schedule to afford the same concession to the users of single lamps—as is granted by the Second Schedule to the user of electrical energy of 10 units and under.

Schedule II.—We have added this new schedule to specify in detail the exemptions which, in our opinion, should be granted. We think that all users of energy of 10 units and under should be entirely exempt from the payment of any electricity duty. We think such a provision would give real relief to the poorer classes who consume electrical energy. We are also of opinion that hospitals and dispensaries which are not run for private gain should also be exempt from the payment of this duty. As regards railways, we think that energy consumed in the residential premises should not be exempt from the levy of this duty. In the case of industrial undertakings, we think that the energy consumed both in the office premises and the residential buildings should be chargeable to duty.

PART III—Court-fees.

Clause 12 (b).—We are of opinion that the minimum fee of Rs. 15 under section 7 (iv) of the Court-fees Act should apply only in respect of (c), namely, to obtain a declaratory decree or order where consequential relief is prayed for.

Clause 12 (c).—We have substituted the words "seven and a half", "fifteen" and "fifteen" for the words "ten", "twenty" and "twenty" and we therefore suggest no change in the law as it stands to-day in the matter of valuation of lands under provisos (1), (2) and (3) to paragraph (v) of section 7 of the Court-fees Act, 1870.

Schedule I: Article 1.—We recommend that there should be no change in the present rates up to Rs. 10,000. We have accordingly substituted the word "five" for "seven rupees and eight annas" and the words "twelve rupees and eight annas" for "fifteen rupees" and have accordingly modified the table of rates of ad valorem fees on the institution of suits.

Clause 14: Schedule II.—We recommend that the fixed fee under article 1 (a) should be retained at the existing rate of 2 annas. We have accordingly modified the entry in the third column.

We think that the fee under article 1 (aa) should be four annas and not eight annas. We have modified the entry in the third column accordingly.

We are of opinion that the fee under article 1 (b) should be 8 annas and that under article (bb) should also be 8 annas. We have modified the entries in the third column accordingly.

We think that the fee under article 1 (cc) should be Re. 1 and not Rs. 2 as proposed in the Bill. We have altered the entry in the third column accordingly.

We are of opinion that the fee for applications or petitions when presented to the High Court should, under article 1 (d), be Rs. 4 and not Rs. 6 as proposed in the Bill. We have modified the entry in the third column against this article accordingly.

PART IV—Stamp Duties.

We have very carefully considered the proposal of levying a stamp duty on forward transactions and have come to the conclusion that this proposal should be omitted from the present Bill. We have been impressed with the difficulty which has been pointed out to us by several witnesses of distinguishing between genuine forward delivery contracts and other contracts which are essentially in the nature of futures. It is possible that a satisfactory definition, which would distinguish between these two kinds of contracts may later be devised; but the definition of "forward delivery", as it stands in clause 15, covers genuine forward delivery contracts which it has never been the intention of taxing. We also realise that there is considerable force in the contention that it is difficult to enforce the imposition of the proposed duty, as only about 1 per cent. of the contracts are or are likely to be taken to courts. We have, therefore, come to the conclusion that a taxation of this type should, if at all, be undertaken separately in which case the responsibility for enforcing the levy and the recovery of stamp duties might be laid on certain recognised bodies controlling the transactions in various commodity, bullion and share markets. We have, therefore, deleted the whole of the sub-clause (1) and sub-clauses (6), (7), (8) and (9). As a consequential change we have deleted the proposed new clause (bb) in article 5 in Schedule I of the Indian Stamp Act, 1899, and the proposed new clause (c) in article 43 in Schedule I of the same Act.

We think that the stamp duty for agreement or memorandum of an agreement if relating to the sale of a share in an incorporated company or other body corporate should be two annas for every Rs. 5,000 or part thereof of the value of the share and not one anna for every Rs. 1,000 or part thereof of the value of the share as proposed in the Bill. We have accordingly altered the entry in column 2 against clause (b) in article 5 as mentioned in clause 15 (10) of the Bill. We have made a similar modification in respect of a note or memorandum sent by a broker or agent to his principal under clause (b) of article 43 as mentioned in clause 15 (10) of the Bill.

Schedule : Article 15.—We think that the rates of stamp duty for bonds from Rs. 200 to Rs. 300, from Rs. 300 to Rs. 400 and from Rs. 400 to Rs. 500 should be as they stand at present, namely Rs. 2-4, Rs. 3 and Rs. 3-12 respectively. We have altered the entries in column 3 accordingly.

Article 16.—We are of opinion that there should be no enhancement of the duty on bottomry bonds. We have, therefore, deleted all reference to this article in the Bill.

Article 23.—We think that there should be no enhancement of duty in respect of conveyances up to Rs. 200. We have, therefore, deleted the first three items under articles 23 as mentioned in the Bill.

Article 35.—We are of opinion that there should be no enhancement of stamp duty in respect of leases including an underlease, or a sub-lease and any agreement to let or sub-let. We have, therefore, deleted reference to article 35 in the Bill.

Article 54.—We think that a stamp duty under article 54 (b) should not be enhanced from Rs. 10 to Rs. 15. We have, therefore, deleted the reference to this article in the Bill.

Articles 58.—As we propose no distinction between the duty on bond and bottomry bonds we have deleted all reference to article 58 in the bill.

PART V—Stamp duties on certain instruments in certain cities.

Clause 17.—We have defined with more precision as to what exactly is comprised in the cities of Ahmedabad, Poona and Karachi to which this part of the Bill is proposed to be extended.

Clause 17.—We are of opinion that 50 per cent. enhancement of duty on agreements relating to deposits of title deeds, pawn or pledge is not justified even in respect of the cities of Bombay, Ahmedabad, Poona and Karachi, in the present circumstances of industrial depression. We have, therefore, deleted all mention of this article in this part of the Bill.

Article 23.—Inasmuch as we have recommended that the stamp duty on conveyances up to Rs. 50, from Rs. 50 to Rs. 100 and from Rs. 100 to Rs. 200 should be maintained at the present level of 8 annas, Re. 1 and Rs. 2 respectively, the mention of these three items under this article in this Part becomes unnecessary. We have accordingly deleted the first three items of the table set forth under this article.

We recommend that the report of the Select Committee, with the minutes of dissent, if any, and the Bill as amended, should be published

(Joint minute of dissent by the Honourable Sir Govindrao B. Pradhan, Kt., Mr. G. Wiles, C.S.I., C.I.E., I.C.S., and Mr. G. Davis, I.C.S.)

The Finance Bill as framed in part III thereof proposed to raise above the existing level ad valorem fees only for suits the subject matter of which was between one thousand and ten thousand. The Select Committee in its report has retained the existing scale. We are prepared to agree to the lowering of the proposed rates for suits of the value of between Rs. 1,000 and Rs. 5,000 but we do not think there is sufficient justification for maintaining the existing scale for suits of the value of between Rs. 5,000 and Rs. 10,000. Poor or even lower middle class men are hardly ever sued for sums even up to Rs. 5,000 (five thousand.) The rise sought to be effected is also not very high. We, therefore, think that ad valorem fees for suits between Rs. 5,000 and Rs. 10,000 should be restored to the level mentioned in the draft bill.

(Minute of dissent by Mr. Hoosenally M. Rahimtoola, M.L.C.)

In Bombay in properties of one or two room tenements the landlord takes the supply from the Electric Company and the meter is in his name. He charges the tenant a fixed sum per lamp per month. The total consumption of all tenants of a property will be more than ten units though each tenant will be consuming less than ten units. The landlord will have to pay the electricity duty and will recover the same from his tenants as an extra charge per month. The exemption will not therefore benefit the poor tenants of Bombay. An amendment will therefore be necessary so that these poor people may get the exemption.

(Signed) HOOSENALLY M. RAHIMTOOLA.

(A joint minute of dissent by Rao Bahadur D. R. Patil, M.L.C., and Mr. A. B. Achrekar, M.L.C., in connection with Bill No. I of 1932.)

1. As regards the insertion of the words "with a minimum fee of Rupees fifteen" in the case of suit falling under clause C of section 7 of the Court-fees Act, 1870, we are of opinion that the fee under the Act, i.e., Annas six should be maintained as the increase is very high and it is not justifiable.

2. On page 12 of the Bill in connection with application or petition new clauses (aa), (bb) and (cc) have been added. We are opposed to this addition as they are new additions to the Act and will work hardship on poor people.

3. The Stamp Duty on bond appearing on page 20 of the Bill has been increased from one rupee and annas fourteen to Rupees two and annas four where the bond exceeds Rs. 200 and does not exceed Rs. 300 and similarly that duty has been also increased from Rupees two and annas eight to Rupees three when the bond exceeds Rs. 300 and does not exceed Rs. 400. This increase is not fair inasmuch as Government themselves have reduced the Stamp Duty and this increase again will be hard upon the poor people.

4. The duty on a divorce deed was one rupee under the Act and it has been raised to five rupees. In the mofussil people from the backward and depressed classes especially execute divorce deeds. We know that the financial position of these people is far from satisfactory. So we think the increase is unjust.

2. Extent.—This Act extends to the whole of the Presidency of Bombay.

3. Sections 212 (1) and 213 (1) of XXXIX of 1925, to apply to Hindus, etc.—Notwithstanding anything contained in sections 29, 57, 58, 212 (2), 213 (2) and Schedule III of the Indian Succession Act, 1925, sections 212 XXXIX (1) and 213 (1) of that Act shall apply whenever and wherever any right of 1925. to any part of the property of a person who has died intestate or any right as executor or legatee is sought to be established in any Court of Justice within the Presidency of Bombay.

BILL No. III OF 1932.

A Bill to amend the Tobacco Duty (Town of Bombay) Act, 1857.

(As published in the "Bombay Government Gazette" of the 10th March 1932.)

IV of 1857. WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Tobacco Duty (Town of Bombay) Act, 1857, for the purpose hereinafter appearing; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. Short title.—This Act may be called the Tobacco Duty (Town of Bombay) Amendment Act, 1932.

2. Commencement.—This Act shall come into force on the 1st day of April 1932.

IV of 1857. 3. Amendment of section 2 of IV of 1857.—In section 2 of the Tobacco Duty (Town of Bombay) Act, 1857, hereinafter referred to as the said Act, for the words "seven rupees and eight annas" the words "thirty rupees" shall be substituted.

4. Amendment of sections 8 and 9 of IV of 1857.—In sections 8 and 9 of the said Act for the words "four seers" the words "half a seer" shall be substituted.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of this Bill is to increase the rate of duty on tobacco imported into the town of Bombay levied under section 2 of the Tobacco Duty (Town of Bombay) Act, 1857, so as to enable the Bombay Municipal Corporation to meet its increased liabilities on account of the proposed amalgamation of the Bombay City Improvement Trust with the Municipality. The Corporation is anxious to take over the Improvement Trust as early as possible and it is obvious that it cannot meet its consequent liabilities without increased taxation. The Bill is brought forward at the desire of the Corporation.

[Appendix 20—contd.]

2. Since an increase in the duty may increase the incentive to evade it, it is necessary simultaneously to reduce the limit of exemption which is now placed as high as four seers. Clause 4 makes the necessary provision.

THE EAST INDIA COTTON ASSOCIATION LIMITED,
TAJ BUILDING, HORNBY ROAD:
Bombay, 19th February 1932.

A Petition from—

To

THE HONOURABLE THE PRESIDENT AND THE HONOURABLE MEMBERS,
Bombay Legislative Council,
Bombay.

Sirs,

The Directors of the East India Cotton Association having resolved to submit a petition to you in connection with Finance Bill No. 1 of 1932, which provides for amending the Indian Stamp Act, 1899, in its application to the Bombay Presidency, I have the honour on behalf of the East India Cotton Association to submit to you the following as bearing on the said Bill.

The Bill seeks to tax all transactions in cotton in Bombay for delivery in future or in other words all transactions in cotton in Bombay except those which are transactions relating to spot cotton. The Association beg to draw the attention of the Council to the result of the non-refundable duty of Re. 1 per bale on raw cotton imported into Bombay as levied by Bombay Act 20 of 1920. As the Council knows the said duty was opposed in the Bombay Legislative Council by representatives of the cotton trade of Bombay and within a few years of the said Act being passed every commercial body in Bombay including the Bombay Port Trust came to the conclusion that the imposition of the said non-refundable duty was helping to divert the cotton trade of Bombay to other ports. As a result of such diversion of trade the cotton grower of India, the bulk of whose crop is marketed in Bombay, has lost the advantage of having the charges on cotton in Bombay reduced as would have been the case with a larger turn-over in the Bombay market.

As honourable members are aware, the bulk of the cotton which is handled in the Bombay cotton market is grown outside Bombay City and outside the Bombay Presidency and it was unfair to the cotton grower of India as a whole to have the duty levied on cotton which might have come to Bombay in transit and the net result of this policy has been that the trade of Bombay, an important City, has been adversely affected. The Bombay Port Trust naturally shared this adverse effect and the Association believe that they can without fear of contradiction submit that although the said non-refundable duty still remained in force, the Government of Bombay have also perceived the hardship and injustice to the cotton grower of India caused by its continuance.

2. The Association have dealt with this non-refundable duty in the paragraph above at some length as they are convinced the way that duty has handicapped the cotton trade of Bombay in general and the cotton grower of India in particular is a special lesson at this juncture and must be submitted to the Council for their serious consideration. Forward trading in cotton on an organised scale is recognised as an unavoidable and inevitable adjunct to marketing of actual cotton during the cotton season months when the grower must sell his crop. If forward trading in cotton were stopped the Association submit that the marketing of actual cotton would be seriously jeopardized. Generally speaking in all countries where cotton crops are marketed the Government of each respective country has given the utmost facility for forward trading in cotton to be conducted with the minimum of charges and taxation of any nature whatsoever. To levy any tax on such forward contracts has been recognised all over the civilised world as practically to be a tax on the grower of cotton in that country and the Association submit that the Bill before the Council requires to be seriously considered from this point of view.

3. The tax proposed by the Government in the Bill before the Council is one anna per contract of 50 bales, but the present unit for a forward contract is 100 bales and it is very likely that for years to come it will be the popular unit for trading. On a hundred bales contract the stamp required therefore will be two annas. The Association are anxious that the Council should know that the system in vogue in the Bombay cotton market involves that in a hundred bales transaction there may be six to eight parties who may have to pass on their notes of purchase or sale or memoranda of such purchase or sale. This can be fully explained to the honourable members if they desire, but it has been explained on behalf of this Association to a representative of the Government in the Finance Department and it is hoped that this will be made clear to the Council by some honourable members intimate with the system of forward contracts in Bombay. The burden, therefore, involved on a hundred-bale transaction by the Bill before the Council will mean a cost of twelve to sixteen annas per transaction to the parties concerned. It may be pointed out in this connection that cotton transactions in the Liverpool Cotton Association and the New York Cotton Exchange are liable to a Stamp Duty of a similar nature but the Association wish to point out that stamp duties in England and in America are being levied not for the purpose of general taxation at all but for the purpose of the finances of the cotton trade and of their organizations in these two countries. This Association here would have resorted to this sort of charge on forward transactions in Bombay if they felt convinced that by such a charge on the volume of forward business they would not handicap the cotton grower of India. The Liverpool Cotton Association has a comparatively small annual fee for its members and makes up for the finances required by means of this stamp duty referred to above. The East India Cotton Association have on the other hand preferred to have a more substantial fee for their members (Rs. 200 per year against £3-3-0 in Liverpool). They, therefore, submit that there is no parallel between the stamp duty in England on the one hand and on the other the stamp duty which the Bombay Government suggest to the Council should be levied by the Bill before the current Council Sessions. Indeed, the measure which is now before the Council for their consideration proves the total departure which the Government of Bombay seek to make from the recognised principle adopted in the cotton markets of the world.

4. 'The Association beg to point out that the business which is being done in the Bombay futures market by persons who deal in forward transactions continuously, and, who are known as jobbers, is of a highly risky and technical nature requiring great experience, and, is almost a fine art, requiring the most continued vigilance by the operator in the tendency of the market from hour to hour all through the day. The turn-over of this class in a day may be a few hundred or a few thousand bales according to the person's standing and his profit or loss at the end of the day may be a few tens or hundreds of rupees depending upon his reading of the fluctuations on that day. If such a person is expected to pay the proposed tax it is not improbable that the tax payable by him on his turn-over for the day may considerably reduce his comparatively small earnings of the day or substantially increase his losses on the working of the day. The effect of such tax would affect this class of operators to such an extent that it is not unlikely that there may be a serious set back to people engaged in this very useful task of creating and continuing the forward market. If the Council have any sort of impression that the tax involved in the Bill will be a tax mainly on those who speculate in forward cotton on a large scale, the Association wish to point out to them that such speculators can only pay the tax when they operate but the humbler and more useful section of the trade, namely, the jobber is not a person who should be in any way handicapped and the Association submit that the proposed tax will act as an assured and definite tax on him which is both unjustified and unfair. The Association wish to point out that if such jobbers as referred to above find that they cannot continue in the Bombay market owing to the new impost which is proposed there will be no option to them but to resort to transactions in unorganised markets outside this Presidency where gambling in forward transactions is being carried on.

[Appendix 22—concld.]

6. The Association have always held the conviction that any impost on cotton either in forward or ready must be an All-India impost, and not a provincial one, as, if a provincial impost is sought to be levied it only results in driving the trade from that province to another province. The Association, therefore, submit that it is not in the interests of the Bombay Presidency to have this tax on forward trading in cotton in Bombay or Karachi or any other part of the Bombay Presidency and they beg to submit with deference that it can without exaggeration be called a short-sighted and suicidal step taken for the purpose of securing to Government a comparatively small amount by way of taxation at the expense of the welfare of the teeming agricultural population of not only this Presidency but of the whole of India.

7. The Association understand that it may be advisable for them to suggest some alternative method of raising money in view of the present financial position of the Government of Bombay. They submit that it is not for them to examine the question of the finances of the Presidency but they consider it their duty to the Legislature of Bombay to submit to them in all earnestness that under the cloak of taking money out of the commercial community of Bombay and Karachi the measure will really mean a handicap on the system of marketing the produce of the cotton grower of India including the Bombay Presidency, a measure which is bound for many years to come to be reflected in the comparatively low prices available to the cotton grower for his crop. The Association feel convinced that it cannot be the intention of the Council to impose such handicap and they, therefore, beg to lodge their emphatic protest against the measure as introduced by the Government and to appeal to the Council to reject this Bill.

I have the honour to be,

Sirs,

For and on behalf of the Board of Directors of the East India Cotton Association Ltd.,
Your most obedient servant,
PURSHOTAMDAS THAKURDAS,
President.

Bills—
Principles contained in the Finance Bill explained ..	304-05, 307-09
The principle of a Bill can be of a multiple nature, as the singular includes the plural (as in Bombay Finance Bill of 1932) ..	309-10
It is within the power of Government to bring a consolidated Bill seeking to amend more than one Act at the same time (as in the case of the Bombay Finance Bill of 1932)	306
Amendments :
Any member who has to move an amendment may speak generally on the Bill and move his amendment also	332
It is wrong on the part of any section of the House to demand from the President, to allow amendments which would suit the convenience of particular sections of the House, and those sections, when relieved of their anxiety, to be in a position to help Government against the wishes of the other sections. The Chair cannot be a party to it	328
Demands for grants—
Cuts of big amounts are not moved for raising a general discussion.	561
Even if there is no motion for a cut, a general discussion can be raised on the total demand	562
A motion to omit a whole demand made under the main head is not in order, but a motion to omit an item under that whole demand or a sub-head of that demand is in order	769
A motion to omit a total demand is out of order	928
If the intention is to raise a general discussion, the correct procedure is to move a cut of a small amount	979
A motion for a cut of one rupee is a censure motion, and it is not advisable to move it, unless it is seriously meant to be pressed ..	1170
A motion seeking to reduce a grant already sanctioned by the House is out of order	1170
Voted and non-voted items :
A motion for a cut under a total demand which includes both voted and non-voted items is in order. But the cut, if carried, will only affect the voted items and not the non-voted ones. Although the non-voted amount cannot be reduced, it cannot go out of discussion. If only one portion—the voted amount —is tabled for a cut, then the non-voted amount cannot be brought under discussion. If the whole amount is tabled to be reduced, then both the heads are brought under discussion ..	918 (See also page 769)
If an item has been included as non-voted by mistake, and even if the House passes it, it will be corrected in the accounts, but neither the House, nor the Finance Department nor the Government Benches can decide the question. If it is put down as non-voted, it has to be taken as such	768
Motions for specific cuts of non-voted items are out of order ..	1138
Resolutions—
The order of H. E. the Governor disallowing a resolution cannot be criticised	180
Tellers—
Any member can be asked to be a teller, irrespective of his views in regard to the subject matter of a division	503

President, the Honourable the—contd.
Unparliamentary Expressions—
The words "mean and self-seeking" as applied to a particular section of the House are unparliamentary	395
A statement that Government are deliberately keeping back the figures of expenditure is tantamount to an accusation of fraud, and cannot be allowed	919-20
Miscellaneous—
A member must not address, in speaking on any motion, individual members of the House	413
One sitting of the House, whatever the period, is counted as a full day	688
Interruptions in the shape of counter-arguments cannot be allowed	922
Strangers are not allowed in the House	1011
Members wishing to address the House must rise in their places every time the chance arises until they catch the eye of the President. The Chair will not call upon them simply because they had risen several times before	1282
Canvassing is not allowed within the precincts of the House ..	1426
