PREFACE.

THE old Gazetteer of Agra was compiled by Messrs. H. C. Conybeare and F. H. Fisher, who mainly relied on the settlement and rent-rate reports of the last assessment for the account of the district, and for the city and towns on notes provided by Mr. T. Benson, I.C.S., and on Mr. H. G. Keene's Hand-book to Agra. The work, which covered 365 octavo pages, has proved of considerable value in the preparation of the present volume, the more so as it was carefully revised by Mr. J. P. Fanthome; but the scheme of the new Gazetteer involved an entire reconstruction, and it was found impossible to reproduce any portion of the original letterpress as it stood. I am much indebted to Mr. W. H. Cobb, I.C.S., and to Mr. H. M. R. Hopkins, I.C.S., for their ready help in providing new material, while the latter has given me much further assistance in reading the proofs. The district itself is a large one, and the city of Agra is of greater historical and archæological importance than any other place in the Provinces; so that several volumes would not suffice for an exhaustive account, and this limitation may be pleaded as an excuse for the absence of any attempt to do justice to the æsthetic claims of buildings whose artistic merits are surpassed by none within the confines of the old Mughal empire.
