INDIAN ROUND TABLE CONFERENCE.

Tabular Statement collating recommendations in Nehra Peport, All-India Muslim Conference kesolution of 1st January 1929, Indian Central Committee's Report, Indian Statutory Commission's Report, Despatches from Provincial Governments and Government of India on proposals for Gonstitutional Reform (1930).

Note.

The general arrangement of the statement by subjects is shown in the table immediately below.

As the Indian Statutory Commission's report and the governmental despatches are much more voluminous, and more closely inter-related, then the other documents, it has been found convenient to follow very largely their order of subjects and to place their recommendations first under each head. In instances when it was impossible to classify recommendations in the other documents under the same heads, some separate notes have been recorded at the end of the appropriate part of the statement.

It will of course be understood that the purpose of the compilation is not to provide a readable short "summary" of the recommendations in the different reports, but simply to act as a kind of concordance to facilitate reference to the views expressed on any given topic by the various reports.

Secretariat General. St. James's Palace, S.W.1. November 24th, 1930.

I.S.C. Report (Fara.46.)

Abolition of Dyarchy. Provincial cabinets to be unitary and jointly responsible. No statutory necessity to confine cabinets to members of the legislature. Ministerial salaries not to be liable to be reduced or denied by vote and to be alterable only by a Provl. statute. Vote of censure to be possible only against ministry as a whole. Appointment of Under-Secretaries may be desirable.

Eombay. Para.4 No ministers from outside Council.

Madras. Para.6. Accept generally but consider that Chief Minister should always be appointed and that no person outside the legislature should be appointed a Minister unless on his recommendation or with his consent and other Ministers appointed on his recommendation.

Assam.
Paras.7. 8.

Accept generally but consider that only elected members should be appointed ministers. Ministers should not be less than four and this and their emoluments and the pensions recommended should be prescribed in a schedule to the Act unalterable for ten years. Finance Member would allow an outside non-official agreed to by the Ministers to be appointed. Under-Secretaries not likely to be available.

Punjab. Para.15.

Accept, but a non-elected Minister must be elected to a seat in Legislature within six months of selection.

Central Provinces.
Para.4.

Dyarchy to be abolished. Unitary Government with joint responsibility. All members of Cabinet chosen from legislature.

Bengal. Paras.4, 7, 11.

Accept generally. All Ministers, except officials, must be members of Legislature (some members of Government would exclude nominated members from Ministry).

United Provinces. Para.7.

Governor and Council support Under-Secretaries but Ministers see no need for them.

Bihar and Orissa. Para.8.

Accept.

Covernment of India. Accept proposals that provincial cabinets Paras. 22, 42, 44. should be Unitary with every member accepting joint responsibility for the whole policy of Government. Agree also as regards vote of censure and alteration of salaries by statute only, but consider that non-official non-elected persons appointed Ministers should be required to get themselves elected within 6 months.

As regards non-elected non-officials would continue the requirement that no minister shall hold office for a longer period than six months unless he is or becomes an elected member of the legislature.

Indian Central Committee.
Paras.41, 42, 43, 49, 50, 51.

Agree to abolition of dyarchy, except that in Bengal law and order should be reserved. Except for this all Ministers should be elected members of the legislature or obtain election within 6 months of appointment. Motions of no confidence in the ministry should require the vote of two-thirds of members present. Salaries of ministers should be fixed by a Statute of the local legislature. Sir Arthur Froom, however, considers that, except in Madras, law and order should be in the hands of an official or non-official directly appointed by the Governor.

p.182 p.362. p.410.

Nawab Ali Khan thinks law and order should be transferred in Bengal, so does Gour. Premchand considers that a bare majority should be sufficient for a vote of no confidence.

Government of India.

Disagree except that in Bengal law and order might be held by an official. Three members recommend (if communal electorates are not abolished) in the Punjab the appointment of a fourth minister who might be an official.

pp.148, 159.

Froom thinks officials might hold portfolios of law and order everywhere except Madras.

Madras. Para.6. Consider that there should always be a Chief Minister.

United Provinces. Para.10.

Official members would agree to provision for minority representation in Instrument of Instructions. Indian member and Ministers desire statutory obligation to include minority in Cabinet.

Government of India. Para.45.

Agree that it would be difficult to make statutory provision for the representation of minorities in cabinets but consider that in practice the desire for peaceful administration etc. will lead the majority to enlist support of minorities in cabinet.

Recognising the strength of minority apprehension would give general support to the suggestion that the Instrument of Instructions should include an obligation on the Governor to attempt to secure representation of a minority community in the Cabinet where such minority is in his opinion of sufficient importance to warrant it.

Indian Central Committee. Para.44. page 204.

Do not recommend the statutory inclusion of a Muslim in the Ministry. For the opinion of three members as regards the Punjab see note re para.54.
Two members recommend that the inclusion of a Muslim Member in provincial cabinets should be made obligatory.

Governor should have power to take any steps and issue any order in the name of the Government necessary to preserve peace and order. For similar purposes he should have power to over-rule an order issued by a Minister. He should have power to order or stop the transfer of district Magistrates and district Superintendents of police. He should have no other powers to over-ride his Cabinet except that he should be able to refer to Governor-General for decision any question affecting

- (1) the religion of any class;
- (2) any central subject;
- (3) the interests of another province.

Premchand would however retain the powers of certification possessed by the Governor at present.

I.S.C.Report

Ho statutory provision as to attendance of Governor at Cabinet meetings but minutes of meetings from which he may be absent should be sent to him and he should have power to suspend a decision until the matter is discussed at a meeting at which he is present.

Rules of business to be made by Governor . Secretary to Cabinet should be appointed. As few matters as possible should be put to the vote.

It has been strongly represented that over-riding powers of Governors will be ineffective and that separate provision should be made for this purpose by a recital in the Act of fundamental rights. They have not yet reached final conclusion but consider that vague generalisation will be useless and there are difficulties about resort to the courts. This is likely to form subject of keen discussion at the Round-Table Conference.

Indian Central Countittee (Para. 139)

Consider it essential to embody in the Government of India Act a declaration of equal rights and opportunities for all, irrespective of birth, descent, colour or easte (excepting legislation of the nature of the Punjab Land Alienation Act).

Governor's/

QUESTIONS NOT DEALT WITH IN THE STATUTORY

COMMISSION BUT RAISED BY THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA OR

PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS.

1. Governor's need of experienced advice in the exercise of his special powers.

The Government of India recognise this need and attach importance to the continuance of the present practice by which Secretaries to the various Departments have free access to the Governor but they consider that the Governor must be free to take advice from all sources (para.48). The Government of Madras apparently contemplate that Secretaries will not in future have this free access to the Governor as they recommend that they should keep the Cabinet Secretary informed of all important administrative proposals (para.7). The Government of the United Provinces doubt whether Secretaries can in future have free access to the Governor (para.8).

Provinces, Assem and Bihar & Orissa, consider that it is essential that the duty of advising the Governor should devolve on a senior official of administrative experience. The official members of the United Provinces Government would prefer that that official were appointed a Minister with a minor portfolio, but the non-official members of that Government recommend that he should be the principal Secretary to Government and also hold the post of Cabinet Secretary (para.8). The Punjab Government also recommend the combination of the posts of Principal Secretary and Cabinet Secretary. The Government of Bengal (para.14) consider that the Governor's adviser should not be the Cabinet Secretary. The Governments of the Central Provinces and the Punjab consider that the Governor's adviser should take part, if required to do so, in Cabinet discussions (para.4). The Government of Assam consider that he should also be the permanent head of the Civil Service (para.7). The Governor of Eambay deals with the difficulty which a Governor appointed from home will experience in exercising his powers unless some official advice is available.

2. The Governor's vote.

The Governments of Assam, Punjab and the United Provinces recommend, or assume, that the Governor will have no vote at Cabinet meetings at which he is present.

A note on the proposals of the All Parties Conference will be found on p.76.

In Punjab a similar system should be applied in the case of Sikhs and Hindus.

In bongal there should be no reservation of seats for Muslims or Hindus.

I.S.C.Report. (para, 30)

There should be reserved seats for depressed classes in all provinces. Governor, after consultation with Associations, should certify candidates for depressed class constituencies. If sufficient depressed class candidates not forthcoming Governor may nominate persons who have shown interest in their welfare. This power should exist for only 10 years and only in respect of half of the reserved seats as a maximum. Proportion of depressed class seats should be three-quarters of the proportion of the depressed class population to the total population.

Bombay. para, 6(3) Proposals inadequate. Recommended that depressed classes be given separate electorates, with half the number of seats to which they are entitled on numerical basis. Franchise qualification to be same as for other Communities. Separate electorates to continue only for 10 years.

Madras. para.12. Proposals impracticable. Recommend separate electorates where possible, and nomination where such electorates cannot be formed. Emphasise that there must be no reduction of representation of this class.

Vesseru. para, 18, Question must be left to Franchise Committee. Reserved seats impracticable. Nomination probably only solution, but would prefer some system of separate electorates if this could be devised.

Inlian Central Connittee.

No nomination. Scats should be reserved in joint electorates on a scale suggested by the Committee save in Madras where separate electorates should be formed for 10 years. In Bombay Depressed Classes should have seats reserved on population basis or voting strength.

Sir SenkaranNair (p.130) recommends nomination owing to pressure to which Depressed Classes are liable.

Proom (page 162) prefers separate electorates for Depressed Classes.

Premehand (page 401) opposed to separate electorates even in Madras: would reserve seats for 5 years only and up to a maximum of 4% of the membership of the Councils.

Government of India. Para.28.

Agree as regards extension but consider it impossible to form conclusions as to the extent until Franchise Committee has investigated. Their recommendations will have to be adjusted to local conditions. The Committee should be instructed to examine in each province the feasibility of introducing an educational qualification. It will be impossible for the Committee definitely to secure that there should be in each community the same proportion of voters to population and that at the same time the franchise qualification for all communities should be on the same level.

Genuine and effective representation of rural interests is important. Doubted if the proposals as regards women would be acceptable to any considerable section of opinion and therefore suggest that the decision should be left to the provincial Councils, and the Commission's proposals further investigated by the Franchise Committee.

After 10 years, it should be within the power of the Council to carry a "constitutional resolution" providing for

- (a) changes in the number, distribution or boundaries of constituencies, or in the number of members returned by them:
- (b) changes in the franchise or in the method of election; or
- (c) changes in the method of representation of particular communities.

If resolution calculated to prejudice the rights of any community it should have no effect unless supported both by two-thirds of the votes of the Legislature and as part of this majority by two-thirds of the members representing the community affected. The Governor should decide whether this condition is satisfied. If the Governor is prepared to certify that the resolution in his opinion reflects the general opinion of the province and of any community specially affected, his Government should prepare a scheme for transmission to the Governor-General with a view to the framing of new electoral rules embodying the changes proposed.

Bombay. Para.b. Subject to safeguards in paragraph 95 of Report recommends that a constitutional resolution passed by Council and signed by Governor should have effect without any further sanction. Power to make such resolution should extend to gradual expansion of financial and legislative powers of Councils. Central Provinces. Para.9.

A modified form of dyarchy at Centre is suggested, but there should be common discussion on all subjects.

Government of India. Paras.102,107, 109-120. Government of India would not consider it wise to emphasise duality by adopting system of formal dyarchy when unity is the ideal. Formal division of responsibility tends to confine effective action of minister to the transferred subjects. On the other hand some lack of unity is better than complete divorce from the legislature, and they would at once introduce into the Governor-General's Council elected members of the Legislature.

Indian Central Committee Para 124. Consider that dyarchy at the centre is justified especially as defence and foreign and political relations, which they recommend should be reserved, are sufficiently distinct from other subjects.

Kebru Report. Para 22.

Would have a unitary Government responsible to the legislature.

I.S.C.Report. Paras.174-179. Members of Governor-General's Council to continue to sit in Legislature and be jointly responsible for action of Government-certain heads will be non-votable. Governor-General will have power of certification and restoration. Responsibility in Central Government cannot be departmentalised - Governor-General has only had to use his special powers on very few occasions. One member proposes extension of committee system.

Pombay. Para.11. Punjab. Para.36. Think responsibility can be departmentalised. Support committee system.

Government of India. Paras. 102, 118,121,222.

Consider that more modification might be introduced in the executive. They contemplate that, unless Parliamentary purposes were infringed, Governor-General should be guided by the advice of those of his councillors who represent the wishes of the legislature but that it should be made plain that if he sees sufficient cause he may disregard the advice of his Council. On the other hand they consider it evident that Governor-General's powers in relation to the legislature must remain unimpaired but the limitation of the Governor-General's special powers to the enforcement of Parliamentary purposes is implicitin their recommendations.

Indian Central Cormittee Pera 125

Consider that members of the Governor-General's Council should continue to sit in legislature. I.S.C.Report. Para.351. Government of India not yet to be responsible to Indian Legislature. Governor-General and Governor-General in Council must therefore remain responsible to Parliament and subject to the orders of the Secretary of State who may however delegate his powers in practice.

Government of India. Paras.18,96, 102,107,113, 116, 120, 222.

Agree that personal powers of Governor-General should be controlled unrestrictedly by the Crown. Complete responsibility cannot yet be introduced into the centre but responsiveness difficult to combine with strict responsitity to Parliament over the whole field. Still there must be some sharing of power between Parliament and the Indian Legislature. Purposes for which Parliament would wish to interfere should be defined - apart from these purposes the Government of India should act closely with the Indian Legislature. One member considers that if paramountcy and defence were excluded the Government of India might be made responsible to legislature with safeguards.

Indian Central Connittee. Para.134.

Hold that Secretary of State's powers of intervention in subjects which they propose to transfer in the central Government should be restricted.

I.S.C.Report. Para.352. The principle of relegation by convention should not be Agreement between Government of India and Legislature but ability of Parliament to waive its right to interfere in the matters concerned. Possibility of such conventions therefore depends on the attitude of Parliament.

Unable to recommend any extension of the principles of the 'fiscal convention'. Would approach problem from a different angle, having regard rather to general purposes which must be secured by Parliament in whatever field of administration they arise, than to particular subjects which can be made impune from or liable to Parliamentary intervention. The purposes for which Parliament should intervene would be (1) subjects entrusted to Secretary of State, (2) defence, (3) foreign affairs, (4) questions between India and the rest of the Empire, (5) international obligations, (6) internal security, (7) financial stability and credit, (8) minorities, (9) unfair observation, (10) Service, (11) maintenance of constitution.

QUESTIONS NOT FRANK WITH IN THE STATUIORY CONTISSION BUT PAISED BY THE COVERNMENT OF INDIA OR PROVINCIAL COVERNMENTS.

1. The Government of India recommend that members of the Governor General's Council who are also elected members of the Legislature, should not be subject to a vote of "no confidence" by the Legislature or considered by Convention as removable by that body (para. 119).

2. Constitutional position of the Secretary of State.

The Government of India recommend that, apart from the administration of matters removed from the jurisdiction of the Government of India, e.g. the making of treaties, exercise of paramountcy, etc., the Secretary of State should only exercise powers of superintendence, direction and control over heads of administrations corresponding to the obligations laid on them. He should retain no primary power of administration devolved on him from the Crown. The government of India would be vested in the Grown and exercisable at the Centre by the Governor General and in the Provinces by the Governor (para. 221). The present position is that the superintendence, direction and control of the government of India is vested in the Governor General in Council (Government of India Act, section 33). The Secretary of State has all rights which would have been exercised by the East India Company if the Government of India Act, 1858, had not been passed, and in particular he may superintend, direct and control all Acts relating to the government or revenues of India (Government of India Act, section 2).

3. Transfer of Commerce.

The Government of India note the popular demand for a national economic policy controlled by Indians (para. 182) and discuss the possibility of transferring the portfolio of Commerce under the heads (1) Customs; (2) Discrimination. They point out that, while the customs tariff is the most powerful instrument available to a Government pursuing an active programme of industrial development, customs are also the main source of revenue and affect international and inter Empire relations. The latter must remain under the control of Parliament, and the Government of India consider that certain conditions must be satisfied before finance can be transferred. They do not, however, consider that financial considerations need prevent substantial 'progress in the matter of customs along the path which India desires and they are of opinion that the necessity of Parliamentary control of external relations need not involve constant interference and that considerable latitude in the matter of commercial relations can be allowed to the Government of India. They suggest that the British Government might be satisfied with receiving the Most Favoured Mation treatment but that preferential rates of duty should be a matter for the Indian Legislature (para. 183).

The Government of India discuss the question of discrimination against British business under the following heads: - (1) professional qualifications;

(2) Public utility undertakings; (3) Ordinary British commercial undertakings.

As regards professional qualifications they consider that it should be a matter for the Indian Legislature to prescribe the qualifications necessary for the carrying on of any profession, but that it would be unjust in doing so to deprive present practitioners of their right of practising (para. 185). As regards public utility undertakings they consider that it will be necessary to retain power to prevent the unfair use by Government of their powers under the concessions by which public service undertakings operate, and to prevent legislation altering the conditions of those concessions (para. 186). They discuss the fears of the British business community that discrimination may be practised against ordinary British commercial undertakings by way of (1) compelling them to adopt a policy of Indianisation as regards either employees or directors; (2) compelling new companies to raise a certain proportion of their capital in India; (3) allowing insurance or banking undertakings to Operate only under license; and suggest that these matters and the Indian desire for the development of Indian industries and the control of national enterprises should be fully and frankly discussed, possibly at the Round Table Conference.

4. Railways.

The Government of India consider that the demand for Indian control of the railways should be met as far as possible (para. 191) and discuss the possibility of transferring this subject under the heads: - (1) purposes for which Parliament must retain control; and (2) the conditions under which control should be transferred. As regards Railways the purposes of Farliament are dealt with under three heads (para. 192):-

- (1) Defence the importance of the strategic lines is obvious but all main truck lines are important.
- (2) Finance Parliament is bound to safeguard the solvency of the railways because of the enomicus capital sums which have been raised in Great Britain and invested in the railways. Also the raising of railway capital depends and reacts on the general credit of the Government of India.
- (3) Services There is a special obligation on Parliament to ensure that the interests of the Anglo-Indian community are protected (see also under services).

The Government of India consider that before transferring railways a system of administration should be set up which leaves to Government and the legislature the control only of broad questions of policy, the commercial management being located elsewhere. A modification of the present method of control is also the best method of securing Parliamentary Control (para. 193). The Government of India, therefore, propose the setting up of a Statutory Railway Authority, including Indians from the start. The control of policy in all important matters would remain with the Government of India and the central legislature, but the statutory authority would be free to manage details. A thorough enquiry should be made into this question as soon as possible. One difficulty will be the existence both of State-owned and managed railways and of State-owned and Company-managed railways (para. 195). statutory authority might be set up by the Government of India Act and details settled by rules.

MOTE OF THE CONSTITUTION PROPOSED BY THE ALL PARTIES COMMERCIA.

The following note summarizes the recommendations of the All Parties Conference 1928 as it was impossible to give an adequate account of their proposals for the Government of India under heads taken from the report of the Indian Statutory Commission. The Conference proposed that India should have the same constitutional status within the British Empire as the Dominions and that the legislative power of the Commonwealth of India should vest in an Indian Parliament consisting of The King, a Senate and a House of Representatives. The executive power was to be exercised by a Governor-General, appointed by the Crown, acting on the advice of an executive council, consisting of a Prime Minister and of not more than six ministers, collectively responsible to the legislature. The provincial governments were to consist of a Governor (appointed by The King) who should act on the advice of an executive council, consisting of a chief minister and of not more than four other ministers and responsible to a legislature. The Governor-General is given power to withhold his assent from a bill of the central legislature or to reserve it for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure and the governors are given power to withhold assent from provincial bills. The Governor-General is also empowered to withhold his assent from provincial bills assented to by the Governor and the King in Council is empowered to disallow such a bill assented to by the Governor General. Besides his powers of withholding assent from and reserving tills the Governor General has the right to return a bill for the consideration of Parliament.

Subjects are classed as provincial and central, the classification being based on the present one, and provincial legislatures are given complete power to legislate in provincial subjects. The central legislature can legislate only for central subjects. There are no provisions, except the Governor-General's power of withholding assent from provincial bills, for control by the centre of the provinces.

A long list of Fundamental Rights is to be included in the constitution of the Commonwealth of India. This list includes provisions of the nature of Habeas Corpus, freedom of conscience and speech, the right of public assembly, the equality of citizens before the law, equal chances of public appointment irrespective of race, caste or creed, etc. It is also laid down that all citizens of the Commonwealth have a right to free elementary education as soon as due arrangements have been made by competent authority and that laws shall be made for the maintenance of health of the citizens, for the security to every worker of a living wage and for the protection of motherhood and provision for old age. Laws are also to be made to ensure fair rent and permanence of tenure for agricultural tenants.

The Nehru Committee propose that the Commonwealth Parliament should have power to alter the constitution by a joint session of both houses, the necessary bill being agreed to by two thirds of the total number of members of both houses. But the Conference asked the committee to reconsider their proposal so as to safeguard the interests and rights of the various minorities in the Central Legislature.

The Commonwealth of India apparently is identical with British India. It would exercise rights of paramountcy over the Indian States.

I.S.C. Report.

A new body called the Pederal Assorbly should be substituted for the Legislative Assembly, the members of which should be chosen by the Provincial Councils, areas not covered by Provincial Councils being also represented. Election should be by proportional regresontation. In an elected candidate should be a member of a Provincial Council, he should be permitted to remain a member of both bodies.

Federal Assembly should have a life of 5 years. New elections to the Moderal Assembly should not normally collow the dissolution of a Provincial Council within its normal period and to ensure this a Governor should have power to extend the life of a Council elected within two years of the normal time of election to a maximum period of 7 years. Seats to be allotted among the Frovinces according to population.

Bombay. Para. 10(1).

Feared that proposals will afford inadequate representation to Bombay. Two members of Government favour indirect, the rest direct election.

Government of India. Paras. 125 - 129.

Would hesitate to put the Mederal argument of the Commission too high since (1) it is far from certain that federation for all India will come about by the inclusion of States in the Assembly (11) even if States did enter the the Assembly (11) Assembly it is not necessary for uniformity in method of representation of States and Provinces. As between systems of direct and indirect election, will defer final conclusions until matter has been thoroughly discussed at the Round Table Conference and Indian opinion has expressed itself fully.

Room for misgiving whether so great a degree of provincialization as Commission's proposals involve would be desirable in the Lower House. Doubtful whether provincial contingent at The dentre would acknowledge any real responsibility to provincial councils.

It might introduce divergent issues into provincial politics and invest them with an element of confusion and unreality. Indire Indirectly elected Assembly would be incapable of occasional dissolution, which must be definitely regarded as an objection in the scheme.

Also impressed by objections to allocation of seats on a purely population basis. Practical working of proportional representation scheme gives rise to troublesome and perplexing details e.g. large number of preferences to be expressed by members of provincial legislatures, and very small number of votes necessary for a candidate's election. On the whole, would consider unsuitable a method whereby Assembly would be wholly or mainly constituted by indirect election; but we suggest that certain advantages of indirect method might be secured if Assembly comprised elements drawn from both systems - on the one hand "territorial representation through indirect election by provincial councils, and, on the other, representation of the "All-India" point of view, and of special interests partly by direct election and partly by nomination.

Suggest Round Table Conference should consider such a scheme. Method of election is essentially a matter on which considered judgment of Indian opinion should have great weight.

Government of India (Para.212.)

Government of India accept 'some sort of federal arrangement' as the ultimate ideal, but doubt utility of trying to sketch ultimate form of association.

Advance may lie rather in development of Council of Greater India than in adhesion of States to Indian Legislature.

It may be necessary to have both a British India and an All-India Legislature.

(Para.213.)

Exercise of paramountcy should be vested in Governor General, not Governor General in Council - one dissentient.

(Para.217.)

There should be an early general review of financial relations with states - it may be necessary to finance the 'political' budget from state's contributions.

(Para.218.)

There is a possibility of conflict not only in regard to finance and taxation but also in industrial matters etc.

(Para.219.)

Whole question requires discussion at Round-Table Conference but Government of India put forward following principles:-

- (1) Government cannot abandon rights in regard to customs but can agree to review position on equitable grounds.
- (2) Simultaneously States' contribution to cost of defence and other Imperial services should be reviewed. No settlement should be made with individual states without regard to entire account.

States should bind themselves to uniform policy in commercial and industrial legislation, excise duties and income tax.

(Para.220.)

An alternative to an agreement on principles at Round-Table Conference would be an agreement to refer to arbitration.

Hehru Report (Chapter V.

Indian States cannot be dealt with on assumption that dynamic forces now in operation in British India will not cross the bordars.
Entler Committee regarded as attempt to convert the Indian States into an Indian Ulster.

(Para.73.)

Relationship with the Crown does not mean relationship with the King alone. The enforcement of the treaties has been among the normal functions of the Government of India. The Government of India have acquired certain powers by usage etc. which are outside scope of the treaties.

(Page 75.)

British India can sympathise with States in their legitimate grievances; it should not be impossible to define the limits of interference. But there is no constitutional objection to a dominion government of India stepping into the shoes of present Government of India.

(Pages 75-80)

Sir L. Scott's propositions controverted.

In fact and in practice it is the Government of India with whom the States are in contact.

An organisation distinct from Government of India for dealing with States questions will not solve conflict between States and British India and will be a vicious extension of dyarchy.

(Page 83.)

If States join federation they must submit to common legislation and there must be a modification of their systems of government and administration.

(Page 84.)

Disputes between Commonwealth and States as to treaties should be referred to Supreme Court.

(Page 85.)

Federation can be the only solid foundation for responsible government, but unwillingness to join federation does not mean that British India must be denied full responsible government or dominion status, merely because obligation owed by Crown to States necessitate an undemocratic central government.

PART VII.

NORTH-WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

Constitution ... p. 96.

Financial Relations with Central Government ... p. 104.

Statutory Commission. para.119 - Vol.11 Responsibility for the administration of the Horth West Frontier Province cannot be separated from responsibility for the peace and control over tribal area.

Chief Commissioner.

In those subjects which would be classified as provincial the relations between the Central and the North-West Frontier Province Government would be the same as between the Central and other Provincial Governments. There would however, be central subjects peculiar to the North-West Frontier Province in which the Lieutenant-Governer would be acting directly as the Agent of the Central Government and under their orders.

Expenditure which is classed as "central" as distinct from "provincial" should if possible be withdrawn from the arena of discussion in the Central Legislature, on the same lines as, in the case of the Army expenditure.

Covernment of India. pp.76, 77.

The Commission rightly emphasize the need for vesting responsibility both for the five districts and for the tribal tracts in the same executive authority. The Chief Commissioner's scheme recognizes this essential requirement. The head of the administration of the North-West Frontier Province, to be known under these proposals as the Lieutenant-Governor, would remain the Agent to the Governor-General in Council for the tribal area. But for the administration of the five districts it is suggested that he should be assisted by two ministers, of whom one would be an official.

This departure from the recommendations of the Commission involves other important consequences. Instead of remaining a centrally administered area under the direct control of the Governor - General in Council, it is proposed to devolve authority on the provincial administration with a classification of subjects into central and provincial, following broadly the lines of the classification in other provinces. But there would be exceptions in the case of certain subjects peculiar to the North-West Frontier administration, which would be classified as central subjects and dealt with on the existing basis. The Chief Commissioner has enumerated some of these, for instance, the frontier constabulary and scouts, frontier remissions and allowances, and strategic reads as illustrations of matters roads as illustrations of matters chiefly relating to the tribal areas and to the defence of India, and properly classed as central subjects for that reason. He also mentions the extra police and other forces necessitated by the geographical position of the province. We think it probable that on further examination these should be classed as provincial. These, however, are matters of detail which need not here detain us. The broad point is that in making the dividing line between central and provincial subjects, regard would be had to the need for all against an approximate and provincial subjects. classifying as central certain subjects of all-India importance peculiar to the present administration of the North-West Frontier Province, which could not properly be entrusted to the provincial legislature.

We look for a constitution which shall be so framed as, on the one hand, to safequard the peace and security of the frontier, and, on the other hand, to recognize the local aspirations with which we fully sympathize for a form of local government, containing a popular element, for the administration of purely provincial subjects.

The Morth West Frontier Province and all newly formed provinces by separation from other provinces shall have the same form of government and the same status as the other provinces in India. The All Parties Conference has already agreed to this and we gather that no considerable group oppose this reasonable demand.

Statutory Commission
Report)

The introduction of constitutional reforms in the North West Frontier Province and Baluchistan along such lines as may be adopted in other provinces of India is essential not only in the interests of those provinces but also of the constitutional advance of India as a whole, the Hindu minorities in those provinces being given adequate and effective representation in excess of their proportion in population, as is given to the Muslim community in provinces in which it constitutes a minority of the population.

Statutory Commission. para.120 Vol 11.

Situation of the province and its intimate relation with the problem of Indian defence are such that special arrangements are required.

Chief Commissioner.

No remarks.

Government of India para. 75 p.74

The Commission's proposals concede a legislative council but deny any popular share in the executive. In effect the Commission, equally with the Indian Central Committee would leave the North-West Frontier Province, with some variation very much at the stage which other provinces reached with the introduction of the Morley-Minto reforms in 1909. There would be in the executive no element of responsibility to the legislature. The undertaking of His Majesty's Government set out in the announcement of the 20th August 1917 would still remain unexpressed in the constitution of the North-West Frontier Province at a time when the other provinces are rapidly moving forward to responsible government. We fully recognize the particular conditions of the North-West Frontier Province so well described in the report, and do not overlook the weighty considerations which influenced the Commission in favour of a strictly cautious advance. At the same time the realities of the situation, and we here have in mind the events of the past few months, make it a matter of the first importance that the scheme adopted should attract a reasonable measure of public support.

Statutory Commission para.121 Vol.II

There should be a begislative Council consisting of some 40 persons with powers of legislation, interpellation and discussion of resolutions and with the power of imposing certain taxes and voting supplies in respect of those services which are maintained out of Provincial revenues.

Chief Commissioner.

Suggests a total membership nominated and elected, of between 30 and 40 - the exact figure to be determined by the convenience of constituencies.

Also suggests that franchise should be fixed with reference to local conditions, social and economic, but to be worked out by a Franchise Committee - possibly local in its composition. The Legislature should have powers of discussion and interpellation together with the power to vote supply for provincial subjects. Its legislative powers would extend over provincial subjects; but the power to make regulations under section 71 of the Government of India Act would remain with the Governor General in Council. Latters which involve considerations of tribal affairs and the defence of India whether arising in Tribal Territory or the settled districts would be excluded from the purview of the Provincial Legislature in the same manner and by the same means as the affairs of the Indian States are at present excluded from the purview of the Central Legislature.

Government of India - See above under (a) and (b).

Statutory Commission. para.122 VolII.

The council should consist of an elected and a nominated member in about equal proportions (as recommended by the Bray Committee). The former should be representatives of Khans elected from a special constituency, of members elected by Hunicipalities and district boards and of ex-soldiers.

The nominations would be by the Chief Commissioner - partly of officials and partly of non-officials.

Due provision should be made for the representation of minorities, including Hindus and Sikhs.

Chief Commissioner.

(A legislative council containing only a bare majority of elected lembers will not long satisfy the politically minded elements in the population of the Province, even though it satisfies them in the immediate future. There must, however, be a substantial nominated element and official assistance in the cabinet.)

Agrees with Commission and suggests that the elective element should be given a slight majority of 51 per cent of total seats: direct election to be substituted for the Commission's scheme of partially indirect election if there is found to be any strong local feeling in favour of a body of elected members wholly chosen by direct election.

Suggests a division of constituencies into urban and rural and special representation of great landholders and of ex-soldiers.

Suggests that Hindus and Sikhs be given choice between various modes of representation and the representation of non-Muslimsmight be double of that to which they would be entitled on a population basis.

Statutory (commission. para.122 p.164 Vol.II

The Legislative Council in the North West Frontier Province should not have power to deal with Land-revenue and law and Order. The Governor-General in Council should make rules to fix the range of legislative power. The Chief Commissioner should preside over the Legislative Council and should have power to appoint a deputy to take his place in the chair when necessary.

Chief Commissioner.

Suggests that the Chief Commissioner might be known as the Lieutenant-Governor. For the first term of the Council there should be an official member to be followed in the second term by an elected Resident.

The Chief Commissioner contemplates a constitution on unitary lines so as to have no division between reserved and transferred subjects. There would be two Ministers with the Lieutenant Governor - one of whom would be an official.

Government of India

Agrees with Chief Commissioner.

Statutory Commission. para.123 Vol.II.

The representation of the North West Frontier Province in the central Legislature should be strengthened and the right of the Province to take part in discussing all-India questions should stand on the same footing as that of the Covernors' Provinces. The Province should have four members in the Assembly (3 Muhammedans and one Hindu) and one in the Council of State.

Chief Commissioner.

No remarks.

Government of India. p.127. There should be three representatives of the North West Frontier Province on the Legislative Assembly - one hindu and two Mussalmans - in a house with a total maximum strength of 200 members, including 150 members returned by territorial constituencies.

PINANCIAL RELATIONS BETWEEN THE NORTH WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE AND THE CHATRAL GOVERNMENT.

The Statutory Commission considered that an examination should be made of the expenditure in the N.W.F.P. with a view to separating those items which are solely concerned with the five districts from those which are incidental to the performance by the Chief Commissioner of his functions as Agent in the unadministered tracts and are due to the proximity of those tracts to the five districts.

The division of empenditure in the five districts between ordinary expenditure and the extraordinary expenditure due to the tracts is not to be arrived at merely by considering where the expenditure was incurred, for a substantial part of the expenditure inside the administered area is really occasioned by the circumstance that the unadministered area is adjacent to and immediately associated with the districts. Consequently there would be some items of expenditure inside the five - districts, e.g., for roads and bridges, which ought not to be regarded as part of the ordinary local outlay. In addition, the cost of at any rate a part of general administration will have to be divided, since administration is made more expensive by the special character of the province. The salary of the Chief Commissioner himself should be allocated.

As regards the responsibility of the Provincial Council, the Statutory Commission was of the opinion that it should be limited to the raising of the necessary funds for normal civil expenditure. The powers of local taxation would correspond to the powers possessed in any other province, and the proceeds will be supplemented. as in the case of other provinces, by the quota due to the province from the Provincial Fund which the Commission propose to set up. The Financial Secretary will present to the N.W.F.P. Legislative Council his budget in respect of normal civil expenditure, and the Council will have the opportunity of voting the necessary demands in so far as these fall within the class of votable items. The Chief Commissioner must have powers of restoring rejected grants, and he would exercise this power under the superintendence, direction and control of the Governor-General. Similarly, and subject to the like supervision, he would have in the field of legislation power to certify in cases where the Bill is essential for the safety, tranquillity, or interests of the N.W.F.P. or any part thereof. (para.124 Vol.II).

The Chief Commissioner has no remarks on this subject beyond the statement that the Pay and Accounts Officer, N.W.F.P., has been directed to suggest on the basis of certain figures worked out in 1922 the allocation of empenditure between the heads "Provincial" and "Central" and the amount required as a subvention from Central revenues to meet the excess of "Provincial" empenditure over "Provincial" revenues. When this information/

information has been collected and considered he should be in a position to examine the matter in further detail.

The Government of India accept the Chief Commissioner's suggestion that the subvention fixed on this basis should not be variable from year to year but should be subject to quinquennial review by the Assembly.

PART VIII.

Defence. pp.108-117.

Indian Statutory Commission.

Para.200 p.170.

Para.198 p.169

Para.199 p.169

Para.209. p.175

The Commission proceeds on the basis of two fundamental propositions. First, control of an Army, including a British element cannot be made over to an Indian legislature. Secondly so far as it is possible to forecast the future the evolution of an entirely Indian military force, capable of undertaking unaided the tasks now discharged by the Army in India must be a very slow process indeed. It is impossible to contemplate the use of British troops to quell civil disturbances at the unrestricted bidding of Ministers popularly elected and answerable to popularly elected legislatures. Moreover it is impossible for the Crown to lose control of the instrument by the use of which in case of need the obligations of the Crown to Indian Princes could be discharged.

The definite suggestions of the Commission are as under:-

- (a) The forces composing the existing Army in India should no longer be under the control of the Government of India but should be under an Imperial authority which would naturally be the Viceroy acting in concert with the Commander in Chief.
- (b) Imperial authorities would undertake the obligations of Indian defence in return for the continued provision of definite facilities as to recruitment, areas, transport and other matters.

- (c) An equitable adjustment of the burden of finance should be attempted. It might naturally take the form of an agreement to provide from Indian Revenues an annual total sum subject to revision at intervals and with the opportunity of sharing in economies. The contribution would be non-votable. The Central Legislature as now, would not vote supply for the Army: appropriations of revenues for this purpose would be authorised by certificate of the Governor General.
- (d) In the case of entraordinary or war expenditure the charges relating to expeditions or operations which are the result of tribal activities should fall entirely, as hitherto, on Indian Revenues. In the case of extraordinary or war expenditure rendered necessary by the attack of a foreign power there would be a case for spreading the financial burden more widely.

Tama.310 p.176.

- (e) The Commander in Chief would cease to be a member of the Indian Legislature and while remaining a colleague of the Governor General he would cease to be the holder of a portfolio of the Government of India.
- (f)A Committee on Army Affairs, might be constituted on which the Central Legislature and in time the Indian States also would have representatives for the purpose of discussing and keeping in touch with military questions

Para.211 p.176.

- (g) The obligation to go forward with the Indianisation of the Army should encourage the organisation, training and equipment of certain military, and it may be, naval forces, of its own which would contain no British element.

Fully accept the Commission's view that Parliament cannot now or in the future which is within sight divest itself of all responsibility for the Army in India. The problem is the most serious of the difficulties in the way of fully responsible Government but not the only difficulty. Somewhat apprehensive of a premature decision. If Indian opinion expressed itself definitely in favour of the idea, its-further examination would be desirable.

Open to doubt whether (1) the endeavour to avoid a special constitutional difficulty may not cause the greater danger of attempting to detach an important function of Government from its true place in an organic whole. (2) control of defence can in fact be isolated as proposed.

Would apprehend that the plan would greatly increase friction between Army Department and a Central Government responsible to Legislature. Position of Army Secretary in the Assembly would be anomalous and embarrassing.

The dissociation of the Army from the Government as a whole might in time produce reactions unfavourable to the Indian soldier during his Army career, and tend also to deprive him of protection and sympathy of civil administration after retirement.

Conclude that it would be preferable for Government of India to retain control of the administration of defence, but would reconsider this view in event of decided expression of Indian opinion in favour of the Commission's scheme.

Portfolio of Defence would thus continue to be held by member of Central Government, but agree that a civilian member should hold it, and not as in the past the Commander-in-Chief. The questions of an Imperial subsidy and of a fixed contribution by India for cost of defence are matters for His Majesty's Government.

In favour of proposal for constituting a Committee on Army Affairs to include members of central legislature.

In favour of the suggestion that military expenditure from Indian revenues should take the form of a fixed annual sum for periods of years, revised at intervals.

General position of legislature regarding defence matters should remain unchanged - in particular the facilities for annual discussion of military policy and expenditure in course of Budget debates in the Assembly.

Indianisation. Of paramount importance to Indianisation. Of paramount importance to satisfy Indian public opinion that our policy is earnestly directed towards definite goal, but efficiency must be regarded as indispensable condition of progress. In due course the eight units set apart hitherto for Indianisation will be insufficient to accommodate the increasing number of Indians commissioned through Sandhurst. Procedure then to be followed has not yet been decided.

Divided on question of an Indian Military College - some would prefer to retain advantages of Sandhurst as long as possible, others to start an Indian College as soon as practicable. Indian feeling might be ascertained by His Majesty's Government at the Conference.

Separate Dominion Army and alternating scheme for provincial battalions.

Consider that the creation of any new type of

Consider that the creation of any new type of armed forces would be an unnecessary complication; would greatly prefer that all units hereafter selected for Indianisation should retain status and functions of regular fighting troops; consider that any advance in the Indianisation of officer ranks must be made within the Army itself, and that units selected for this purpose must continue to be trained and employed in same way as others which retain British Officer establishments.

- Indian Central (a) The use of regular troops should be evoided for dealing with disturbances in Provinces which have been granted complete control over their own affairs. It is recommended that it should be open to the Government of Madras and Bombay to equip and maintain a local military force and a local militia. The minimum numbers of the force or militia, its equipment and qualifications, should be prescribed by the Government of India. The Viceroy and the Commander-in-Chief should always be entitled to inspect the troops and pass orders for their efficiency and maintenance; but they should not be entitled to direct a reduction of the force or any other step which will render the force less efficient.
 - Para.137. (b) The immediate establishment of a military college in India is recommended. The recommendations of the Skeen Committee should be carried out in the manner referred to in that Committee's Report.
 - pp.170 & 172. (c) Sir Arthur Froom in his Minute of Dissent: (i) My colleagues have questioned the desirability of employing regular troops of the Indian Army in communal and religious disturbances, which unfortunately are at present only too frequent. On all hands the neutrality of British troops in such disturbances has received widespread recognition and approval. It would, I think. be exceedingly unwise to withdraw this aid from Provincial Governments, and it is necessary therefore to make constitutional provision accordingly.

(ii) A commencement should be made at once to relieve the Army of internal security duties other, of course, than the protection of strategic railways, and to place these duties on the police. This would naturally entail a large increase in the strength of the present Police Forces in many Provinces and be beyond the capacity of existing provincial revenues. The provinces, with some degree of reason, say that the cost of the Army in India includes the task of internal security and that it is impossible to find in addition the money for ingreased Police Forces. I therefore recommend that within a period of five years, after the introduction of any new provincial constitution and after the new Local Governmentshave had experience of the problem, that a conference between the Provinces and the Central Government should be set up to examine the position and to see to what extent increased Police Forces in the Provinces would lessen the responsibility of the Military Authorities for internal security, so that by a corresponding reduction in the Hilitary Budget the necessary finance might be made available to the Provinces.

(iii) It appears to be generally necessary that the whole question of the existing organisation of the Indian Army should be examined by a Technical Corruittee with a view to seeing what changes would be required to make it a Dominion Army of the future.

(d) Mr. Kikabhai Premchand in his Report: p.415.

- (i) There is no room, in present conditions, for Provincial Armies, or even Provincial Militias. The existence of two bodies of armed men, independent of each other and under separate control, would inevitably lead to confusion and unnecessary expense; moreover it might, in circumstances which can easily be visualised, become a source of conflict and a danger to peace and order.

(2) The Minister of Defence (5) The Minister of Foreign Affairs (4) The Commander-in-Chief.

- (5) The Commander of the Air Forces (6) The Commander of the Maval Forces (7) The Chief of the General Staff, and two other experts.
- (b) The proposals of the Governor General in Council for the appropriation of the Revenues or monies classified as "Defence" shall be submitted to the vote of the house or representatives.
- (c) The Governor General in Council may in the event of any foreign aggression or reasonable apprehension of such aggression authorise such expenditure as may be necessary for the safety of British India or any part thereof. Such action taken by the Governor General shall be reported by him immediately to the Legislature, if in session, or if the Legislature is not in session, to a special session to be summoned as soon as possible thereafter.

PART X.

Burma.

PART IX. BURMA.

I.S.C.Report pp.181-191.

recorded two main grounds for the separation of Burma from the Indian polity.

- 1. The strength of Burman sentiment in favour of that course.
- 2. The constitutional difficulty of giving to Burma a satisfactory place in any centralised system designed to advance the realisation of responsible Government in British India.

The Commission formed the view that nothing but the most overwhelming considerations could justify the continued retention of Burma within the Government of India. The two main grounds of objections were -

1. Military; 2. Financial and economic.

The first was in their opinion not sufficient in the circumstances of Burma to amount to a controlling factor, though the defence arrangements of the North East Frontier should continue to be concerted with the authorities responsible for the defence of India.

As regards the financial objections the Statutory Commission endorsed their Financial Assessor's conclusion that separation could be effected in such a way as to do no financial injury to either country and to leave Burma with adequate resources for her present needs and a balance for development. An effort should, in their opinion, be made to arrange some special trade convention between India and Burma to the mutual advantage of the two countries on separation.

The Commission therefore strongly recommend an early declaration that Burma should be separated from India immediately in order that the necessary further inquiries might be made in time for Burma to receive a new constitution at approximately the same time as the new constitutions were introduced in British India. The new constitution would be framed as a further stage towards Burma's complete self-government. The backward tracts would not be placed under the Burman legislature but would remain the special charge of the Governor who would also represent the Crown in relation with the States of Karenni. Modified arrangements would be required for such important matters as Burman currency and loans and protection for the legitimate interests of Indians domiciled in Burma.

The present distribution of spheres between the different Secretaries of State in London dealing with Empire affairs would possibly come up for reconsideration in connection with, inter alia, the separation of Burma.

Binne

regarded the case for separation as overwhelming. Separation should be complete, entending to the military as well as to the political sphere. It should however be made very clear that the pledge in the preamble to the Government of India Act 1919 would still hold good for Eurma on separation.

They agree that provision to protect Indian interests should be made in the new constitution for a separated Bukma.

The time-table for Burma should keep pace with the developments regarding the reforms in India. The earliest possible steps should be taken by His Majesty's Covernment to arrange for the necessary constitutional enquiry if separation were approved. If a Commission is to be appointed Burman epidion would favour a joint Body of Members of the Home Parliament and Burmans, but the Government of Burma would consider this to be too large a body and would favour a purely Parliamentary Commission which would collaborate with a select Committee of the Burma Legislature.

As regards terms of sattlement, statements of the case on each point should be prepared by Burma in collaboration with the Government of India for final decision and assessment by a Board of neutral expert arbitrators.

are advised that there is no military reason why India and Burma should not possess their own separate defence organizations; as regards financial objections to the separation of Burma they are advised that the possible revenue loss to India would not be so great as to constitute a factor of over-riding importance. The economic effects may be considerable but it should be possible to make arrangements mutually advantageous to both countries. There appear to be no administrative objections of sufficient importance to influence decision as to separation; Government of India support separation in principle, but Indian opinion should be given full opportunity to express itself on the subject at the Round Table Conference.

An early declaration of His Majesty's Government's policy is desirable in order that the introduction of a new constitution for Burma may keep pace with the time-table for India.

A decision to separate would involve the consideration of -

- (1) a new constitution for Burma.
- (2) separation of Indian and Burman finances.
- (3) agreements about trading and commercial arrangements.

As regards (1) an authoritative ad hoc body would have to be appointed; the 1917 pledge to India should be re-affirmed to a separated Burna and this should be included in the Commission's terms of reference. It is agreed that separation should be complete. As regards (2) the Government of India agree with the Government of Burma's suggestion for agreed statements of the various cases to be referred to a special impartial tribunal which must be a different body from the Constitutional Commission; perhaps a Committee of the Privy Council would be the most likely to satisfy Indian opinion.

As regards Trade agreements, an agreed statement of facts should be drawn up in collaboration between the two Governments which both, as they stand to-day, should agree to accept as a basis for future arrangements.

Indian Central Committee p. 27.

The Backward Tracts.

I.C.S. Report Vol.II.

346.

(b) Temporary judges to be appointed by Governor General after consulting provincial Governor.

Bombay.

No change should be made in existing arrangement. (Judges of Bombay High Court offer no definite opinion).

Madras.

Present arrangement to continue. (The judges of madras High Court would accept Commission's recommendation).

Officials.

Punjab.

- (a) Courts should remain under Provincial Governments.
- (b) Accept. (Judges of High Court at Lahore agree generally with Commission's proposals).

Non-Officials.

- (1) Agree with official view, except that all judges should be appointed by Crown on recommendation of local Government and removable on joint recommendation of Governor and Legislature.
- (3) Agrees with all Commission's recommendations re High Courts.

Central Provinces.

Accept in principle.

Bengal.

High Court of Bengal to remain under Central Government if other Courts are transferred, otherwise it should be transferred to Local Government. If present arrangement stands Central Government should meet charges for Bengal court.

United Provinces.

Courts should remain under Provincial Government. (Five judges of Allahabad High Court would accept Commission's proposal. Chief Justice and one other judge are against acceptance, and one judge while having no decided views, does not think the Commission have established case for change. The Chief Court at Oudh accepts Commission's proposals).

Indian Central Committee. p.535.

Mehru Report.
(Paras.54;59)

Sir Hari Singh Gome recommends that High Courts should be placed under the central government who should delegate their control to a Supreme Court.

Recommend that the local government should have the power of making temporary appointments to High Courts and that permanent appointments should be made by the Governor-General-in-Council.

Note on formation of a Supreme Court.

This matter is only dealt with by the Central Indian Committee and the All-Parties Conference.

The Central Indian Committee (para. 138) recommend the creation of a supreme court to deal with disputes between one province and another or between the provinces and the centre. Such a court need not oust the jurisdiction of the Privy Council.

The All-Parties Conference also recommend the creation of a Supreme Court (para. 49) and would allow appeals from the Supreme Court in matters certified by the Supreme Court as fit to be determined by the King in Council or in matters in which the Privy Council may grant special leave to appeal.

Governments (except Bengal) - of the respective despatches of Provincial Government.

in the case of Bengal - of the supplementary despatch of the Government of Bengal dated 15th September 1930.

Armeye: A brief summary of the Financial Proposals of the Indian Central Committee.

158

239: Public Revenues can be increased without taxation being intolerable provided incidence is adjusted to the capacity of tax-payers.

Government of India: Representatives of people in the Provinces may well feel reductance to impose new burders of the magnitude suggested (p.56).

255)
A The sources of Provincial Revenue are with the 253) exception of stamps - incapable of expansion unless (1) state gets a share in the increased land value as Land Revenue or Irrigation less (2) allocation of sources is altered

B The expenditure is likely to increase by 40 to 50 crores

C New taxes are necessary.

I.S.C. Approved ((p.150).

Ecobay: Agree: Emphasis is laid on the immediately prospective loss of excise revenue (p.15)

Bengel: Press for a preliminary adjustment on his basis of needs. (p.2).

United Agree (p.50). Provinces.

There should be some preliminary adjustment on the basis of needs before automatic principle is applied (p. 46)

- (267: A. The examption limit of income tax and super tax should be lowered.
 - B. There should be a steepening of the progression of the rate of income tax between Rs.5000 to Rs.100,000.
- $\rag(268)$: C. Income from foreign investments should be taxed.
- (289: D. Yield will rise by at least 4 crores.

- Punjab: A: Provinces should have the power to lower the exemption limit of income tax (p.82). . (Ir.Mandharbal dissenting (p.250). .
 - C: Approved (p.02).
- Bihar and A:) Doubt the advisability of the proposal and Orissa:

 B) consider the estimate as optimistic (p.48).
- Government A) There are considerable practical objections.

 of India. B) Possibility might again be explored.
 - C: Is under consideration.

Even without change of taxation in a normal year coinciding in Bombay and Calcutta, there should be increase of two crores now and three crores in the course of 10 years -

Sir Walter Layton's figure is optimistic (p.58).

Agricultural income should be taxed and the present exemption removed by stages at specified dates.

287)

296)

Should be collected by Central Government and distributed to provinces according to province of origin. Expected yield 5 crores.

Madras:

There are serious objections to the proposals as applying to all the provinces; would accept an arrangement which leaves it to the discretion of the Provinces to withdraw the exemption. There are serious difficulties re its withdrawal in Madras. (Paras. 51 and 52).

Bombay:

Majority in favour of abolition of exemption gradually. Minority would retain exemption or modify it only to the extent of including Agricultural income for the purpose of determining whether income is taxable or not (p.16(1)).

Bengal:

This is a tax which should be levied only by a responsible Government. The present proposal should be rejected. (p.8).

United Provinces: Not prepared to support the proposal. It should be imposed by responsible Government on the vote of provincial legislature. 'r 53).

Funjab:

Official memo: No likelihood of the proposal being adopted (p.84).

Bihar & Orissa:

Do not favour the proposal (p.50).

Central Provinces: Proposal presents obvious difficulties (p.17).

Assam:

Yield should accrue to the province of origin (p.47)

of India:

Government The serious economic problem is the decline in the value of India's Agricultural produce (p.56).

> Involveshighly controversial issues (p.56) and therefore it would be unsafe to count on the increase which would be obtained from higher rate of taxation on composite incomes (p.58)

Regard imposition as unlikely. They have some sympathy with the view that it should be imposed by a responsible and representative Government (p.62)

162

271:

Death Duties:

Sir Walter Layton: Not a fruitful source of revenue.

Bombay: Should be introduced early (p.16(2))

Bengal: No definite opinion reached (p.21).

Punjab: Official memo: No likelihood of imposition (p.83)

An excise duty on factory produced tobacco is needed and is needed by the Provinces. (Yield 5 crores).

Madras:

No objection (para. 53)

Bombay:

Accepted. It should be accompanied by tax on retail sales by the issue of licenses. There should also te licenses to cultivate (p.16(3)).

Bengal:

Excise should be fixed at uniform rate. The question of taxing raw tobacco or imposing vend fees should be left to provinces.

United Provinces: No objection (p.53).

If the tax is introduced on the scale proposed it is open to serious objection from economic point of view. (p.56). It would be a serious burden on trade. There are grave practical difficulties. Moonomic disadvantages are sufficient to condenn its introduction as a general provincial tax, There may be occasions when it will be the best available method, if used for special purposes and to a properly limited extent. Special powers of control will have to be reserved to Central Government - in order to cafeguard sources of central revenue and to prevent imposition of discriminatory taxation which may involve breaches of International treaties or agreements (p.62).

- 76. A. Certain sources of further revenue must be levied, regulated and collected by central agency.
- B. The system of grant-in-aid is undesirable.
- C. The revenues should be distributed
 (1) partly on the basis of population and
 (2) partly on the basis of origin.

Press for Preliminary adjustment on the basis of needs (p.2

nited Agree (p.50).

Approve of the "per capita" basis of distribution but ask for preliminary adjustment to cure the existing equalities before applying automatic principles (p.46).

Approved generally (p.17).

overnment Are of opinion that general adjustment as between provinces on the basis of 'needs' must be ruled out.

Preliminary adjustments would be necessary -

(1) on account of the abandonment of Rule 15.

(2) on account of exchange between Foreign Liquor and commercial stamps.

(3) Provincialisation of accounts as against transfer of High Courts (P.64)
(P.65)

Central Government revenue is capable of expansion :250) especially in customs and the expenditure is 252) likely to be stationary or diminishing. Custom revenue will expand at the rate of 3/4 crore 289 a year giving 72 crores in 10 years -Empenditure on Army will drop. Central Surplus in the next 10 years will be -7½ crores from Sustoms, By changes suggested in Income Tax. Reduction in Army Empenditure. Hothing under Railways. 192 - 3 Civil Expenditure. 2 Opium. 141 available for distribution. Doubt whether such surplus will be available (p.3) engal: Realise that the transfer will have to be gradual ited (p.āl): This is an optimistic view of the surplus ovinces: likely to be available (p.53). Official memorandum: Estimate may prove to be optimistic miab: (p.81).  er & Estimate appears optimistic (p.49) isea. itral ovinces: Estimate appears optimistic (p.17)  Tarmment India: Scheme conceived in a spirit of optimism which Government of India find difficult to share (p.56). If Economic conditions are reasonably good and there are no substantial changes in the Governments tariff policy, agree there will be a surplus of $7\frac{1}{2}$ crores at the end of ten years - (p.58). Income Tam: Do not anticipate an increase of more than 3 crores in 10 years - (p.58).
Civil Expenditure may jump - owing to further burdens for contribution to expenditure in North West Frontier Province and possibility of new demands if new provinces are created (p.58). Army reduction is drastic and possibility of saving depends on contribution from His Hajesty's Government for Imperial Defence element in army expenditure (p.58). Transfer of High Courts may involve extra charge (p.58). Uncertain Tactors.

It is doubtful whether receipts of interest on the balances of paper currency and gold standard Reserve can be treated as normal revenue (p.59) Financial results of adjustment with Native States have to be considered (p.59)

169.

289 Government of India (contd.)

Separation of Burma creates an uncertain factor - (p.59)
Restoration of normal trade conditions, absence of war, political unrest and frontier trouble are also governing factors.

Therefore estimates of surplus are hypothetical. (p.59).
Sir Walter Layton's scheme does not leave

Government of India with sufficient elasticity of resources - especially after salt is transferred (p.61).

291. Provincialisation of excise on Foreign Liquors and Centralisation of Commercial stamps offset each other ($1\frac{1}{2}$ in each case).

Madras: Madras would lose $13\frac{1}{2}$ lakes by such exchange and therefore claim balancing contribution - if the scheme is given effect to. (Para. 47).

The two items will not cancel each other. The revenue from stamps will in the ordinary course of business go up and that from excise on Foreign Liquor go down. (p.18).

Bengal: Would involve Bengal in a loss of $17\frac{1}{4}$ lakhs annually. Do not oppose if this lee-way is made up elsewhere. (p.6)

As regards provincialisation of Excise on Foreign Liquor there are administrative difficulties and therefore uniform custom duties should be levied and distributed through Provincial Fund according to population or according to consumption (p.16)

Bihar & There will be difficulty of administering it. There orises:

should be uniform custom duty and the proceeds should be distributed to provinces on the basis of population. (p.48)

The proceeds should go to Provincial Fund (p.52)

Government Have no objection, but there are administrative difficulties. The question requires further examination and adjustment - as it affects different provinces in varying degrees. (p.62).

Eubstantial portion of income tax should be allotted to Provinces on the basis of the tax paid by residents on their personal income:

(15 eners total income = 9 croses on personal means 4th to be distributed In 10 years it would be 6 croses).

gas: Accepted: Would benefit by 35 lakhs (para. 48).

lay:
Accept, provided that an equitable solution can be found for the distribution of centrally collected taxes.

ted As much as possible should be given to the provinces tinces:

as soon as possible (p.51)

ist: Official memo: Welcome the proposal (p.82).

2m & Agree - (p.48)

The proposal is accepted in principle (p.62)

If now Devolution Hule 15 is done away with and marged in the new scheme, the benefit to the provinces of the proposed scheme is considerably reduced.

Therefore some sort of proliminary adjustment will be necessary (p.62)

Salt duty should be transferred to Provinces and distributed on population basis.

្ឋានន:

, 4.

Accepted (para.49).

ngal:

Central Government should fix the rate at which the levy should be made (p.3).

ited ovinces: As much as possible should be given to the Provinces as soon as possible (p.51).

್ಷಣ ಜಿ 198ಟ: Welcome the proposal (p.48).

rernment India:

Do not oppose transfer of salt tax at its present rate, when the Central Government is in a position to do so, further increase in the rate should not be permissible as a source of provincial revenues. The margin of increase should be considered as a potential energency reserve for Central Government (p.61).

- A. Time table should be drawn up under which each of the above items should be transferred according to a definite schedule with a yearly loss of 11 to 1 crores a year: Reginning should be made with income tax.
- B. Exceptional circumstances might cause temporary postponement but the transfer should be a first charge on the surplus and delay should be made good in subsequent years.

Accept the proposal but they realise that the time and amount of transfer must depend on the judgment of Central Government (P. 20).

Doubtful whether time-table can be drawn up (p.3). It would not make difference to Bengal whether beginning is made with Salt or Income tax. It would be fair if $\frac{1}{2}$ surplus is taken under one head and half under the other (p.24).

As accurate an estimate as possible should be provided as to the amount that provinces will get each year. (p.51).

Beginning should be made with salt which would benefit all except Bombay (p.49).

Approved (p.54).

Provinces should share in non recurring surplus by its being given to the Provincial Fund (p.54)

Estimates of surplus are so hypothetical that anything like a time table, though in theory desirable is not possible. If in principle the transfer of salt and ½ income tax on personal incomes is accepted, the times and amounts of transfer must depend on the judgment of Central Government.

B. The formula is too rigid and also requires qualification in that it must be left with Central Government to decide whether a surplus in one year is a recurring surplus before making a permanent sacrifice. (p.80)

A fair method of transfer would be to transfer first 2 crores of revenue in the form of income tax and thereafter each surrender in equal amounts of both taxes (p.66).

Provinces should be permitted to levy a surcharge amounting to 4 of the tax on personal incomes or 5 of that which will be transferred to them under 297.

- A. If a surplus remains with the Centre after meeting demands under the scheme, certain definite and increasing portions should be paid to Provincial Fund.
- B. Central Government must also have power to raise additional revenue in energencies by making surcharges on taxes collected centrally and distributed either according to origin or population.

Indian Statutory Cormicsion. (B) Approved (p. 163)

Bengal.

Approved and suggest a rule on the lines of D.R. 19. (B. Para.3).

Provinces should also share in temporary substantial surpluses with Central Government while waiting to share in the results of permanent improvement in the Central Governments Financial position (p. 4).

Government of India.

B: Accepted. (p.61)

In case of emergency, a central Government may require contributions to be paid to it by the Provinces with the sanction of and subject to the conditions approved by Secretary of State - on the lines of Devolution Rule 19.

All-India Taxes for Provincial Fund.

- 305. The body which imposes and controls them should be directly representative of provincial legislature. Federal assubly sitting in a special session. 506
 - В. Provincial Fund to be separate from Sentral Budget.
 - Finance Member of Government of India may introluce legislation and take part in the deliberation, but should not take responsibility for initiating or forcing the proposals. An inter-provincial Council of Finance Ministers should be established.
 - The initiation for imposition or change should come from Pinance Ministers of at least three Provinces.
 - Finance Ministers of Frovinces should attend and take part but not vote.
 - Governor General thould not have the right to certify taxes to Fravincial Fund.
 - Changes should not require approval of Council of State.
 - H. Provincial Commeils and Intimate their views by way of a mesolution.
 - Constitutional madriner; to be set up by succeiving proviolens.
 - Altering the allocation to the Fund of particular
 - taxes should require the approval of (a) majority of representatives of 2/3rds of the Province.
 - & (b) 3/3rds of the members of the assembly.
 - Distribution of proceeds according to population should be laid fown by Devolution Sale, and this basis should be altered only by substantive majority of both Provinces and representatives voting.

Indian Statutory Commission.

Approved generally (paras.189 and 163). As regards K. the alteration should have the approval both of 2/37ds of the members of the Federal Assembly and also of a simple majority of representatives of 2/3rds of the Governor's provinces (including N.W.P.P.)

Madras.

As regards D. they think that it should not be open to a minority of inter Provincial Financial Council to bring proposals regarding taxation. (para.53).

Rombay:

Accepted generally. Legislature imposing excise duties need not be voted every year (p.23).

Bengal:

An indirectly elected legislature is not necessarily required to vote federal taxation (p.3).

Approve generally, but consider 'J' above too rigid (p.10).

As regards 'D' above, they consider that the power to initiate taxation should be reserved to Central Government (p.10).

United Provinces: The scheme is open to objection on theoretical grounds. On practical grounds this may involve disclosure of new taxation before legislation is actually introduced. scheme would have better chance if absolute majority of ministers of 'Interprovincial Council' were made necessary before introduction of legislation (p.52).

Punjab:

Official memo: Agree generally. As regards 'D' more populous provinces should not impose their will on the majority of provinces. Any change by way of reduction of Fund should take effect after one year (p.86 and 87).

Bihar & Orissa: D. There should be a clear majority (p.52)

 \mathbb{X}) Approved (p.52)

There might be a review of the scheme after a fixed period.

Central Provinces: Approve generally (p.17).

Government of India:

Even if the Commission's proposal for representation of Provinces in the Assembly is altered, a separate inter-provincial Council with representatives from Provincial Councils might be formed to consider proposals for Provincial Fund Taxation before their submission to Central Legislature (p.55).

D. On the whole they are of opinion that if not less than 3 provinces desire that proposals for taxation should be placed before the Assembly, they should have an opportunity of presenting their case and secure - if possible-a majority in the Assembly (p.67)

There should be no review of the scheme as suggested by Eihar and Orissa (p.67). Settlement should be embodied in Statutory rules (5.67).

Legislation imposing provincial Fund taxation need not be voted every year but only when the Inter-provincial Council of Finance Members makes proposals for a change (p.67).

Indian Central Committee's Financial proposals.

F. 107:

- 1. Provincial revenues are incapable of expansion, while the development of nation building Departments will call for even increasing expenditure.
- 2. The expanding sources of revenue income tax and customs are in the hands of Central Government.
- They are against financing provinces through grants-in-aid.
- 4. Until the Government of India is constituted on a popular basis by the transfer of Departments to Ministers all the revenues of the province should be at the disposal of the local Government. All revenues including tax, salt, customs would rest in the Government of Province in which they are collected.
- An importial tribunal in which Government of India and provincial Government are equally represented should determine the amount of contribution payable by a particular province to the Centre. The tribunal should consider the financial position and requirement of each province the rich contributing more than its poorer neighbours.

Arthur Froom:

l.

- Opposed to the system of grant-in-aid.
- 2. Government should not depend for its revenue on subscription from Provinces.
- 3. All the revenue should not be at the disposal of Local Government.
- 4. Taxes such as Income Tax, Super Tax, Salt Excise should be levied at Uniform rates and collected centrally.
- 5. There should be additional taxation as recommended by Indian Taxation Committee.
- Government should be given to provinces, in some cases wholly, in others in a fixed proportion.
- 7. In emergencies the Central Government would be able to levy a surcharge.

178(b)

8. There should be coordination in borrowing and therefore conferences with provinces are desirable.

Kikabhai emchand.

- 1. A committee should be appointed to allocate to each province a share of central revenues proportionate to its meeds.
- 2. This system of grants is essential.
- 3. Income Tam, Customs and Railways are sources of revenue central and federal in their nature. Therefore is unable to accept the proposal that provinces should retain whole of the revenue collected within their borders.

Borrowing Powers:

- A. There should be a Provincial Loan Council consisting of Finance Member of Government of India and Finance Ministers of Provinces.
- B. The Council should establish a borrowing programme; lay down standard regulations subject to the approval of Government of India and arrange terms with Government of India.
- C. The function of the Council should be advisory for the present.

- F. Borrowing operation in London should be entrusted to the High Commissioner.
- G. The provision which requires the authority of Imperial Statute for Sterling Loans raised by Secretary of State should be done away with.

Indian Statutory Commission: Apparently accept the proposals.

Central Government should have power to control borrowing by Provincial Governments. Central Government should be in a position to refuse loan for meeting revenue deficit or impose discriminatory rate of interest in such cases. Provided that the objects for which loan is asked comes within terms of regulation relating to Provincial Loans, the approval of Central Government should be dependent primarily on consideration relating to monetary and credit situation (para.189).

- 182. The supervision, direction and control of the Governor General should be exercisable over the raising of loans.
- 187. It should be rendered constitutionally possible, under suitable restrictions, to assist provincial objects from Central Funds and vice versa.
- The Governor should have no special power to secure financial stability but a certain corrective power should reside in the Central Government through a right to control borrowing the power being quite general: Central Government being in a position to refuse loan to a province to meet deficit or if need be to impose discriminatory rate of interest when the loan is granted. Provided that the objects for which loan is asked comes within the terms of regulations relating to provincial loans, the approval of Central Government should depend primarily on considerations relating to monetary and credit situation.

Problem of transfer of the control of finance from a Lember responsible to Parliament to a linister responsible to an elected Indian Legislature.

The Mahru Report contemplates complete transfer of Central Government including the responsibility for Finance to the hands of a Prime Minister and six other ministers collectively responsible to the Legislature.

The Indian Central Committee, by a majority, are of opinion that the Control of Finance may be transferred to ministers. This is in consonance with their general scheme for the introduction of dyarchy in the Central Government. Sir Arthur Froom considers that the Finance portfolio should be retained in the hands of a European member of the Governor General's Executive Council, which must remain responsible to Parliament. Sir Zulfikar Alikhan and Dr. Suhrawardy would preserve the functions of the Government of India as they are but increase the number of executive councillors to ten. Lr. Kika Bhai Premchand thinks that when Finance is transferred certain charges such as interest on debt sinking funds, of services, the principal of the debt, and other obligatory charges should be first charges on the revenues on the lines of the consolidated Fund in Great Britain.

The Indian Statutory Cormission do not specifically deal with the question of the transfer of finance to a Minister responsible to Legislature. In Chapter 2, Part IV, of their Report they deal generally with the possibility of transfer of the control of all Departments to Ministers responsible to the Legislature. After confirming that dyarchy at the Centre is impossible and that the joint responsibility of the Central Executive must be preserved at all cosss, they proceed to , suggest a few changes by which the rigidity of the structure of a Central Executive may be reduced. They suggest that the Governor-General himself should appoint his Cabinet and that the Executive Councillors should not, as at present, be appointed under the advice of the Secretary of State by warrant under the Royal Sign Lanual. They further recommend that the present provision in Section 36 of the Government of India Act. which lays down certain restrictions in the way of appointing the Executive Councillors, should be laid down in statutory rule so that it may be more capable of amendment without resorting to the cumbrous procedure of an Amending Act. Lastly, they suggest that the Henbers of the Governor-General's Executive Council should, if possible, be appointed from elected Members of the Central Legislature. In paragraph 173 of the Report they give expression to their view that, beyond these changes, they are unable to recommend any further change.

The Government of India in their Despatch explain in detail the problem of the transfer of finance in view of the financial significance of various purposes in respect of which Parliament cannot divest itself of responsibility, such as those of

- (a) cost of defence;
- (b) honouring of debts and
- (c) the payment of pays and pensions of officers recruited by the Secretary of State.

They say that Parliament should require a guarantee before surrendering the security provided by direct constitutional power over control of taxation and empenditure through Lembers responsible to itself.

Secondly, in view of the possibility that removal of the authority and responsibility of the Secretary of State might shock India's credit as a borrower and have a detrimental effect on the future of private enterprise, they affirm that the establishment of confidence in the Indian administration is necessary before a change in the present system is made.

Thirdly, they point out that the task of maintaining exchange and assuring adequate remittances is now undertaken by Government. This task would be all the more difficult if the control of currency were to pass into the hands of the Minister responsible to Legislature relying for support on a political party. They therefore think that the formation of a reserve bank, free from danger of political influence, with adequate sterling reserves, would be a necessary condition to the transfer of financial responsibility.

Fourthly, they point out that the present is a particularly unfavourable time for an immediate change of policy on account of the following considerations:

- (a) All agricultural countries are in economic distress at present;
- (b) The political disturbances and the programme of the organisans of the Civil Disphedience movement movement have had already an undesirable effect on both public and private finance;

- (c) During the next three years they are under an obligation of redeeming the existing loans of the Government of India;
 - (d) New regime is being inaugurated in the Provinces and simultaneous changes in Centre and the Provinces would be undesirable.

From all these considerations, the conclusions reached is that the transfer of control cannot be reached apart from the fulfilment of certain conditions, such as

- (a) Restoration of normal economic conditions;
- (b) The re-establishment of credit and confidence;
- (c) Inauguration and successful working of a reserve bank.

Although, owing to the foregoing considerations, the immediate transfer of responsibility is not possible, they suggest that the first step may be taken in embarking upon a period which is definitely acknowledged to be a period of preparation for the eventual transfer of responsibility. They also emphasize the immediate necessity of creating confidence in Indian administration by

- (a) Responsible leaders of Indian opinion openly discountenancing the doctrine of the repudiation of debts and
 - (b) mobilising private resources for establishing national financial position.

They also advise that His Majesty's Government should define with clarity the conditions which must be satisfied and should state with certainty His Majesty's intentions, and thereafter giving Indians a fair chance of making their response with the assistance generously given from the British side.

The Government of India further point out that, when ultimately the responsibility for the administration of finance is transferred to Ministers responsible to Indian Legislature, certain safeguards will have to be laid down, as, for instance,

- (a) the creation of Consolidated Fund charges to cover debts, railway amuities, pays, pensions and family pensions of civil officers appointed by the Secretary of State, Army officers and defence;
- (b) powers of supervision in the Governor-General for maintaining financial stability and to hold up inadvisable action rather than veto it after it is taken;
- (c) resumption of control by the Secretary of State in the event of threatened financial breakdown or actual default in respect of items falling under (a) above.

THE FINANCIAL POWERS OF THE CENTRAL LEGISLATURE

Limitation on its powers through the Executive and the Governor General.

Mahru Report contemplates complete transference of the control of all the Departments of the Central Government to Ministers responsible to an elected Indian Legislature. It would therefore appear to follow from this that the Legislature would enforce its will on the Executive in respect of all financial matters. It is, however, stated that only the lower house, namely, the House of Hopresentatives, should have the power to deal with money bills andian Central Committee.

Under the scheme of the Central Executive, as contemplated by the majority of the Indian Central Committee, finance would be a subject administered by a Minister responsible to the Legislature, which would control and direct his policy. The specific powers of the Central Legislature have nowhere been defined in detail except in one instance. It is suggested that without the previous sanction of the Governor General the Legislature should not have any power to deal with any measure affecting public debt or public revenue of India, or imposing any charge on the revenues of India (page 183).

Sir Sakaran Neir, Raja Newab Ali Khen and Shivdev Singh Uberoy while expressing their adherence to the Committee's recommendation that finance should be transferred and Army reserved, have sected with conviction that the military budget should be under the control of the Legislative Assembly, that in this regard the Committ 's recommendation should not be accepted (page 140).

Bir Arthur Froom has differed from the Committee's view that finence should be a transferred subject and has expressed his opinion that the finance portfolio should continue to be held by an Executive Councillor not responsible to the Legislature. his view the Cabinet appointed by the Governor General must remain responsible to Parliament and the Governor General must retain his powers of veto and certification. He however considers that any measure considered by the Governor General or by the Governor General in Council as essential for the safety, tranquillity or interests of British India should be introduced, in the first instance, as a recommended Bill. Presumably this applies to a Finance Bill if it happens to fell within the category described by Sir Arthur Froom. As regards other bills he suggests that Government should leave it to the Legislature to accept or reject them as it thought fit, the Covernment only reserving the power to ithdraw any measure which had been amended in such a manner as to render it unacceptable (pages 175-176).

- Dr. Gour in elaborating the recommendation of the Committee affirmed his opinion that although Army has been recommended to be a reserved subject, it must not be assumed that the entire Army Eudget should escape the scrutiny of the Legislature. In his opinion the Legislature should be free to vote upon the military grant but the Governor General should be armed with general powers of certification up to the minimum cost which might be settled by agreement or convention (page 310).
- Er. Mikabhai Premchand subscribed to the Committee view that Finance should be a transferred subject and Army should be a reserved one but he thinks that a sum of 50 crores in the Military Budget should be considered as reserved and that it should be a Statutory obligation on the military authorities to reduce their expenditure by 5 crores of rupees during the next seven years. He considers that economy and efficiency are more likely to be secured/secured by leaving it to the military authorities to make this reduction in their own way and within this period at their own time rather than carry out the process by erbitrary ends at the discretion of an authority not cognisant with the detailed forking of the military machine. If finance is transferred certain charges, such as interest on debt, sinking fund, pay or services, the principal of the debt and other obligatory charges, should be a first charge on the revenues on the lines of the consolidated fund in England. He thinks that although ordinary legislation may be introduced in either the Council of State or the Legislative Assembly money bills must originate in the Assembly alone. All bills, including the money bills, must be passed by both Houses and revised and sent to the Vicercy before they become 1600. case arises where a Bill, passed by the Assembly, is rejected by the Council of State, or vice versa, the Prime Minister, if he considered the matter of importance, can convene a joint If then the Bill is passed by twosession of both the Houses. thirds majority of the Joint Session it should be sent to the Vicercy for his approval. Presumably this procedure is intended to apply to Finance Bills also (pages415 and 419).

dian Statutory Commission.

According to the scheme of the Indian Statutory Commission the Central Legislature should be composed of two units, the Federal Assembly and the Council of State. The Federal Assembly should inherit all the powers of its predecessor (the Legislative Assembly) and should perform a fual function. It should be the Central Legislature for all India and should also be a Federal instrument for providing additional funds for Provincial Governments (paras.153 & 159).

Its Power as Central Legislature.

Although the central Legislature would have power to make laws for all persons, places and things within British India, still this general power would continue to be subject to the important limitation contained in pare.67 of the present Government of India Act vis. that without the previous sanction of the Governor General, no legislation could be introduced which affects public debt, or public revenues of India or imposes any charge on the revenues of India. As the Contral Logishatume for India it would have exclusive power to impose certain taxes which should, for various reasons, be imposed end collected centrally as suggested in Sir Welter Layton's report. It should. be a representative body for the purposes of imposing taxation and for the needs of the Central Government and for voting estimates and controlling expenditure at the centre. The power of initiating measures of taxetion for central purposes would, under the Statutory Commission's scheme be vested exclusively in the Executive and all such measures would be required to be passed by the Central Assembly and also the Council of State. bodies would have power to smend or reject any measure and the present provision would continue Thereby if the Governor General considers that its passing is essential for the safety, tranguillity or interests of British India or any part thereof, he may certify the measure which, thereupon, would have all the force of law. The Commission recommend that the provision of taxes need not be voted every year, as is at present the general prestice (paras.154,159 & 160).

The Commission recommend that the division between votable and non votable charges should remain as at present. The distinction has not operated as an impediment to the free criticism/criticism in the Assembly of the Administration of the services concerned. The Assembly would have full power to reject or to make "cuts" in the votable items of expenditure but the Governor General in Council would have power to restore such items where they are essential to the discharge of his responsibilities. In this existing practice is being continued. Although in para.161 the Commission state that the power of restoring grants should vest in the Governor General in Council, (in para.174) they refer to the power of restoration remaining in the hends of the Governor General (para.161).

The Assembly should continue to exercise its influence over Finance through standing Finance Committees. They also recommend the continuance of the Public Accounts Committee (para 162).

Its Powers as a Federal Instrument.

As an instrument whereby additional revenues could be secured for the provinces they suggest that the Federal Assembly should sit in a special Session and legislate with respect to sources assigned to provincial fund by a statutory rule. Only in case of emergency would the Government of India have the right to levy a surcharge on the sources included in that Schedule. The Legislative measures would under this scheme be introduced by the Finance Member of the Government of India on a proposal of at least three Members of Inter-Provincel Council of Finance Members. The Finance Members of the Provinces would be entitled to attend the special session but would have no power of voting. The Governor General would, in such cases, have no powers of certification and the vote of the Council of State would not be required. The Commission have emphasised that provision should be made (a) that no elteration criticism in the Assembly of the Administration of the services concerned. The Assembly would have full power to reject or to make "cuts" in the votable items of expenditure but the Governor General in Council would have power to restore such items where they are escential to the discharge of his responsibilities. In this existing practice is being continued. Although in para.161 the Commission state that the power of restoring grants should vest in the Governor General in Council, (in pare.174) they refer to the power of restoration remaining in the hands of the Governor General (para.161).

The Assembly should continue to exercise its influence over Finance through standing Finance Committees. They also recommend the continuance of the Public Accounts Committee (para 162).

Its Powers as a Federal Instrument.

As an instrument whereby additional revenues could be secured for the provinces they suggest that the Federal Assembly should sit in a special Session and legislate with respect to sources assigned to provincial fund by a statutory rule. Only in case of emergency would the Government of India have the right to levy a surcharge on the sources included in that Schedule. The Legislative measures would under this scheme be introduced by the Finance Member of the Government of India on a proposal of at least three Members of Inter-Provincial Council of Finance Members. The Finance Members of the Provinces would be entitled to attend the special session but would have no power of voting. The Governor General would, in such cases, have no powers of certification and the vote of the Council of State would not be required. The Commission have emphasised that provision should be made (a) that no alteration of the/

Provident Fund should be made, with the result of taking out of it a source already allotted, except after the passing of a resolution supported by a majority of the representatives of two-thirds of the Governor's Provinces, (b) that the distribution of the Provincial Funds should be on the population basis and (c) that this rule should not be altered and enother basis substituted without the approval of two-thirds of the Members of the Federal Assembly and a simple majority of the representatives of two-thirds of the Governor's Provinces (pare, 163).

Views of the Provincial Governments and the Government of India on the Binancial powers of the Fodoral Assembly as a Pederal Instrument:

Government of Madres.

The Government of Madres while approving of the general scheme and of the Provincial Funds think that it should not be open to a minority of Inter-Provincial Council to bring proposals regarding taxation (para.58).

Government of Bombey.

The Government of Bombay accept the scheme generally (subject to a reservation as regards the basis of distribution) and suggest that legislation imposing excise duties need not be voted every year (paras. S2 and S5).

Government of Bengel.

The Government of Bengal while generally approving of the scheme consider that the provision regarding the alteration of the rules too rigid and suggest that the power to initiate texation should be reserved to the Central Government (para.10).

The United Provinces Government see considerable theoretical objection to the scheme regarding the Provincial Dund and on practical grounds/grounds consider that the procedure would involve disclosure of new taxation before legislation is actually introduced. They think that the scheme would have a better chance if absolute majority of Ministers of Inter-Provincial Council were made necessary before introduction of legislation (page 52).

- more populous provinces should not be in a position to impose their will on the majority of the Provinces and that any change by way of reduction of Fund should take effect after one year (paras. 86 & 87).
- majority of the Finance Ministers of Provinces before any legislation for the imposition of taxation is initiated in the Federal Assembly in a special Session (para.52).
- te Central Provinces Government generally approve of the scheme (para.17).
- proposals for the representation of Provinces in the Assembly is altered a separate inter Provincial Council with representatives from Provincial Councils might be formed to consider proposals for Provincial Fund taxation before they are submitted to the Central Legisleture (para.55).

On the whole they are of opinion that if no less than three Provinces desire that proposals for taxation should be placed before the Assembly they should have an opportunity of presenting their case and secure, if possible, a majority in the Assembly. They further endorse the opinion of the Bombay Government that legislation imposing Provincial Fund taxation need not be voted every year but only when the Inter Provincial Council of Finance Members makes proposals for a change (para.67).

Views/

Views of the Government of India on the Financial powers of the Federal Ascendly as General Regislature.

As regards the general powers of the Federal Assembly as a Central Legislature the Government of India are of opinion that the Governor-General must retain the existing powers of provious sanction and assent, of stopping proceedings on any Bill which affects the safety &tranquillity of British India, and of making ordinances in emergencies. They also endorse the Commission's opinion that the Governor General should have powers of certification. the powers of restoring grants and authorising expenditure which he considers necessary for the safety and tranquillity of British India. They think that the power of restoring grants should be exercised by the Governor General and not by the Governor General in Council so that the latter may not be brought in conflict with the Legislature (para. 121). In their opinion the residuary powers of taxation should remain with the centre. They have not recorded any definite opinion on the question of votable and non votable items, but, in the scheme of things which they recommend, the distinction between the votable and non votable charges appears to be implicit. In para, 119 they have definitely recommended that the salaries of the Members of the Government chosen from the Legislature should, like those of the official Members, not be submitted to the vote of the Legislature.

The financial relations of the Secretary of State and his Council with the Government of India.

Under the present Covernment of India Act, the Secretary of State remains the source of power and authority in India. The present position of his financial powers is this. Over transferred subjects, the general powers of superintendence, direction and control have been limited by rules under Section 19A of the Government of India Act and can be exercised only for specific purposes. As regards reserved subjects, the powers of the Secretary of State are unimpaired. They were considerably relaxed in 1921. Certain other powers have been handed over to the High Commissioner and they have now been further limited by the Fiscal Convention. In certain matters the Socretary of State can only act with the concurrence of the majority of his Council, as, for instance, in the cases mentioned in Section 21, 28(1), 29(1) and Section 96M of the Government of India Act. These are assentially matters connected with finance or with the services.

The Views of the Indian Central Committee.

The Indian Central Committee suggest that the power to raise loans should be vested in the Government of India and it should be left to that Government to employ such agency as may seem desirable. With the transfer of all subjects to a responsible Ministry in the provinces, they consider that the rules on the lines of those under Section 19A of the Government of India Act will restrict the Secretary of State's powers of intervention in the whole of the provincial field. They advocate the establishment of more conventions in the nature of the Fiscal Convention.

The Committee recommend the abolition of the Council of the Secretary of State and, if it is retained, they suggest that half their number should be selected from the elected members of the Central Legislature. They further recommend that, so long as the Secretary of State has control over the non-transferred subjects in the Government of India, he should have two Indians as Under-Secretaries of State, one of whom should find a place in Parliament.

Sir Arthur Froom is of opinion that, whatever the fate of the Council of India may be, the Secretary of State should have the advice of some persons with first hand experience of the conditions and customs of India. Dr. Gour suggests that the revenues of India should no longer vest in the Secretary of State but should vest in the Governor-General of India, that the powers of the Secretary of State should be limited within the sphere of the reserved departments and should be strictly defined, and that the India Council should be abolished. As, according to his proposal, the revenues are to vest in the Government of India, there is no longer any necessity to retain in England a body whose primary function is to conscrve these revenues. He thinks that the Council of the Secretary of State has not proved to be independent in its declings with the British Treasury in the matter/matter of military expenditure. He also thinks that the existence of such a body leads to the weakening of the position of the Government of India.

The Views of the Indian Statutory Countriesion.

As regards the govers of the Secretary of State in relation to the provinces, the Commission recommend that it should no longer be open to the Secretary of State to issue orders on natters which are of no concern outside the province itself other than the limited class in regard to which special powers are recommended to be . reserved to the Governors. These include the securing of due fulfilment of any liability of Government in respect of items of expenditure not subject to the veto of the Legislature. As regards the powers of the Secretary of State in relation to the Central Government, they think that the question whether the Government of India should have greater freedom of action in matters which cannot be brought under rule depends very largely on the attitude of Parliament. They do not think it desirable that any extension of the principle of the Fiscal Convention should be made except with the approval, by a resolution, of both Houses of Parliament. As regards the Council of the Secretary of State, they think that it should be an Advisory Council consisting of men with a recent experience of the country. Under Section 963 of the present Act, the rules governing the conditions upon which civil officials are employed can only be made with the concurrence of a majority of votes at a meeting of the Council. They think that this provision should be naintained./

maintained. As regards the power to veto expenditure given by Section 21 of the Act, they consider that the veto of the Secretary of State's Council should be preserved only for expenditure from the revenues of India which is non-votable. They realise that if their claim for the control of the Army is adopted and an agreement is arrived at as to the contribution payable, the continuous control of the Sacretary of State's Council over military expenditure would not be required and there will then be little advantage in reteining the Council for other non-votable expenditure.

The Views of the Government of India.

It had been suggested by the Statutory Commission (paragraph 311) that the task of floating sterling loans for the Government of India should be transferred to the High Commissioner, but the Government of India consider that, until a reserve bank is created, it would only make more inconvenience and delay to transfer the function of borrowing in London from the Secretary of State to the High Commissioner. As regards the general power of the Secretary of State for maintaining financial stability and the observance of rules of sound finance, this could not be defined by rule, but they consider that his control over such matters as budget, taxation, currency, exchange, remittences and borrowings should be confined to broad questions of policy and not to administrative details. With regard to other matters which can be defined by rule (as in the present Central Audit Resolution) they consider that, except in the case of safeguarding the interests of members of the services appointed by the Secretary of State and the question of the Governor-General's amenities, staff, household and such allowances, all restrictions/

restrictions in the Contral Audit Resolutions might be removed, and in the question of the general spirit of financial relations between the Georetary of State and the Government of India, they consider that the Secretary of State's co-operation would be of the greatest possible value if

- (a) he can support Inlia's credit in London;
- (b) he can make available to the Government of India the best advice from the City of London;
- (c) he can, from his own records, supply an element of continuity and knowledge of past history as an aid in assessing the problems of to-day;
- (d) he can, by counsel given in a detached atmosphere, supply at times a balance to views perhaps unduly influenced by local factors.

They further record their opinion that any attempt to control the details of India's financial policy from London must be regarded as an anacronism.

As regards the Council of the Secretary of State, they suggested that it should be abolished. They agree with the Indian Statutory Commission that the financial veto of the Council can be of moment only in regard to non-votable expenditure and for the protection of the interests of India against claims by departments of the Home Government. They therefore see no justification for the retention of the veto in regard to financial proposals emanating from the Government of India. They think that the future constitution would leave little room for the Council of India as an independent authority with power over appropriations and they anticipate that any difference of opinion as might arise between His Majesty's Government and the Government of India could be settled in a manner more consistent with the freedom which the Government of India may suitably enjoy.
