GENERAL DEPARTMENT.

Bombay Castle, 4th January 1893.

No. 16.—The following Resolution of the Government of India, Revenue and Agricultural Department (Meteorology), No. 59-65, dated 9th December 1892, is republished for general information :—

"Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of India, Revenue and Agricultural Department,—No. 59, dated Calcutta, the 9th December 1892.

METEOROLOGY.

READ—

Letter from the Meteorological Reporter to the Government of India No. 4410, dated 22nd October 1892, submitting the Annual Report on the Administration of the Meteorological Department for the year 1891-92.

RESOLUTION.

1. The number of observatories in charge of the Meteorological Department has increased from 154 in 1889-90 and 159 in 1890-91 to 165 in the year under report. Two old observatories—at Zanzibar and at Camorta in the Nicobars—resumed operations during the year, and two new stations were started at Tinnevelly and Bijápur.

2. During the present year sanction has been given for the establishment of fourteen more observatories, of which four or five will be in Upper Burma and seven or eight on the North-West Frontier and in Persia. The latter will be of special value in connection with the storms to which the cold weather rains of Northern India and the snow fall of the Hymálayas owe their existence. The seven new stations in Hyderabad and the new station at Srinagar in Kashmir, to which allusion was made in last year's review, commenced recording observations in the autumn of 1891. The opening in the spring of 1892 of the first class observatory at Bangalore has been followed up by the organization of a complete battery of stations for the Mysore State under the superintendence of a special department in charge of a skilled officer. This undertaking on the part of the Darbár is likely to be of considerable practical value in a part of the Deccan peculiarly liable to drought. The voluntary observatories continued to do good work, and the best acknowledgments of the Government of India are due to the observers at those stations.

3. Satisfactory progress has been made in supplying the Symons' gauge for ordinary rainfall observations in Madras, the North-Western Provinces, and Native States. The Local Governments and Administrations have also circulated the instructions prepared by the Meteorological Reporter for the fixing of the gauges, record of the rainfall, and inspection of gauge-stations. The degree of interest taken by District Officers in inspection work is, however, by no means uniformly satisfactory. As compared with the importance of securing a correct registration of rainfall, especially in insecure tracts, the time and trouble entailed by inspections are insignificant. The Government of India, therefore, trust that Provincial authorities will take measures, wherever this has not already been done, to ensure a regular and sufficient inspection of gauge-stations by local officers, and the supply to the Meteorological Reporter of a sufficient number of the duplicate reports, alluded to in paragraph 25 of his report, to enable him to judge of the efficiency with which the rainfall record is being maintained.

4. The tabulation and publication of rainfall data have received considerable attention during the year, and the acknowledgments of the Government of India are due to the Provincial Governments which have cordially responded to the proposals for publication of monthly statements of rainfall in forms suggested by the Meteorological Department. The year's results are now comprehended in a single volume showing a most complete and valuable record of rainfall over a large tropical area.

The Reporter has made an interesting comparison between the forecast of the rainfall of the south-west monsoon issued by him on June 6th, 1891, with the actual data subsequently obtained, from which it appears that the general character of the forecast was borne out by the results. His observations on the subject are repeated below—

'The delay in the establishment of the monsoon and the large deficiency in Rájputána were fully anticipated. The deficiency in Bengal was due to the great indraught to the sink in the North-Western Provinces and Central Provinces. This was not anticipated so fully as it might and probably would have been, if the indications of the existence of this sink had been stronger and more decided than they were when the forecast was drawn up, and if the accuracy of the barometric data employed were not occasionally very doubtful.'

The Government of India are confident that the value of these forecasts will increase markedly from year to year as the data available become more numerous.

5. Flood-warnings continued to be furnished with useful results. A new departure, also, was made by the organization of an arrangement for the issue of weather warnings to troops in the field: and an experimental trial was given to the system during the Black Mountain expedition of April and May 1891 and the Cavalry Camp held at Aligarh in December 1891.

6. An unprecedented amount of valuable work was done in the collection of special storm observations and of marine data from ships' logs, and the Government of India have recently sanctioned the publication of these in a suitable form. Record is given of 22 storms as against 10 in the previous year, and the arrangements for storm-warnings, which remain practically unaltered, have proved thoroughly efficient. The services rendered by the Telegraph Department in this connection are especially noted by Mr. Eliot, and merit the best thanks of the Government of India.

Mr. Eliot has explained the circumstances attending the loss of the Enterprise and the Coleroon in the cyclone of November 1891, and his explanation renders it very doubtful whether considering the course and suddenness of the storm, telegraphic communication with the Andamans would have prevented the disaster. It seems clear that no sensible increase in protection to the Port of Calcutta would be gained thereby—a much more desirable undertaking for this object being the construction of a cable from the Eastern Channel Lightship to Saugor Island. With reference to a suggestion from the Calcutta Chamber of Commerce, the Government of India have expressed their inability in the present state of the finances to entertain the proposal for the connection of Port Blair with the mainland by cable, which would have entailed an expenditure of over 15 lákhs of rupees.

7. The Government of India are glad to notice the efficiency of the inspections and the large number of instruments verified during the year. The actinometric observations at Simla and meteorological observations in forests respecting the influence of their growth on rainfall were satisfactorily continued. The Seismic experiments in Assam have again proved useless, and it is for consideration whether they should not now be dropped. The annual weather review has been abandoned for a monthly review which supplies information more promptly and at more suitable intervals; and the publications of the department generally record a considerable amount of valuable work.

8. The thanks of the Government of India are again due to the Imperial Reporter, to his Assistants, and to the Provincial Reporters for the excellence which continues to characterize their work, as well as for the increased practical value which it assumes year by year under the guidance of Mr. Eliot.

ORDER.—Ordered, that the foregoing Resolution be forwarded for communication to the several Departments of the Government of India, to Local Governments and Administrations, to the Director General of Telegraphs, to the Surveyor General of India, to the Surgeon General with the Government of India, and to the Meteorological Reporter to the Government of India.

Ordered also, that it be published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India.

Offg. Secretary to the Government of India."
