By order of the Hon'ble the Governor in Council, J. P. WILLOUGHBY, Chief Secretary.

FOREIGN DFPARTMENT.

Camp Forozepore.

The state of the state of

The 30th December 1845.

The Governor General having received from the Commander in Chief in India the Despatches, dates of which are noted in the margin,* directs that they be published for the information of the Army and the people of India.

The first Despatch from His Excellency reports the operations of the Army on the evening of the 18th instant at Moodkee, where the Enemy attempted to surprise the British Camp and were repulsed at all points with the loss of 17 Guns.

The second Despatch reports the glorious successes obtained by the Army under the immediate Command of His Excellency on the evening of the 21st and the morning of the 22nd at Ferozshah, where the British Army assaulted the entrenched Camp of the Sikhs, defended by 108 pieces of Cannon, some of heavy calibre, and after driving the Enemy from his position, captured 74 Guns. Thus the Enemy have been forced to relinquish to their Victors on these occasions upwards of 90 pieces of Artillery, with all the Munitions of War in their Camp.

All the objects which the Governor General desired to effect have been accomplished by His Excellency the Commander in Chief. The British Force posted at Ferozepore thus suddenly and treacherously surrounded by the Sikh Army, with a large Park of Artillery, has been relieved; the brave Garrison under its able Commander, Major General Sir J. Littler, not only maintained a firm attitude of defence, but had the satisfaction so grateful to brave Soldiers, of skilfully forming a junction with the Umballa Force, and gallantly taking part in the discomfiture of the enemy which had so recently invested them.

The Governor General again cordially congratulates His Excellency General Sir Hugh Gough, G. C. B., on the great and important Victories obtained by the Army under his immediate Command.

The Governor General, in the name of the Government and of the people of India, gratefully acknowledges the noble services rendered to the public by His Excellency the Commander in Chief, by all the General and other Officers, and by the Non-Commissioned Officers and Soldiers of the brave Indian Army.

The Governor General's thanks are due to all the Infantry Regiments of H. M. and to the 1st European Light Infantry of the E. I. C.'s Service, all of which Regiments distinguished themselves by the most devoted courage in braving the destructive fire of the Enemy's Batteries, and valiantly capturing their Guns.

The Governor General offers his thanks more especially to H. M.'s 3d Dragoons, who on all these occasions sought opportunities of useful conflict with the Enemy, and fought with that superiority over their opponents which skill and discipline impart to brave and determined men.

The European and Native Artillery maintained their accustomed character for steady, unyielding courage when exposed to a very heavy and galling fire.

The Governor General's thanks are justly due to the brave Infantry of the Native Army, whose valor so mainly contributed to these Victories, and he cannot withhold his admiration for the patience and perseverance with which they endured privations inseparable from forced marches.

The Artillery, Cavalry, and Infantry, united together by the bonds of mutual esteem, may be confident that when they rely on each others courage, the three arms combined and acting together will ever be found to be an invincible Army.

The Government of India, as a tribute of their esteem for the meritorious conduct of the Troops engaged in the recent operations, will grant to every Officer and Soldier in the Service of the Government of India, engaged in these Battles, a Medal to be worn with their Uniforms, on which the word Ferozshah shall be inscribed, as denoting that they have served in this important Campaign.

The Commander in Chief will be so good as to furnish the Governor General with lists of all the Officers and Soldiers engaged in the operations of this Campaign.

The Governor General is further pleased to order that the following Corps be permitted to wear the word "Ferozshah" upon their Appointments, Standards and Colors, in perpetual commemoration of their gallant services;

1st and 3d Brigade Horse Artillery.
2d, 3d and 4th Co. 4th Battn.
2d and 4th Co. 6th Battn. and
2d Co. 7th Battn. Foot Artillery.
Governor General's Body Guard,
4th, 5th and 8th Regts. Lt. Cavalry.
3d, 8th and 9th Regts. Irregular Cavalry.

1st European Lt. Infantry.
2d, 12th, 14th, 16th, 24th, 26th, 33d, 42d, 44th, 45th, 47th, 48th, 54th and 73d Regiments of Native Infantry.

By order of the Rt. Hon'ble the Govr. Genl. of India,

From His Excellency the Commander in Chief to the Right Hon'ble the Governor General of India.

Dated Head Quarters, Army of the Sutlej,
CAMP MOODKEE, 19th December, 1845.

RIGHT HON'BLE SIR,

It would be a superfluous form in me, to address to you a narrative of the Campaign which has opened against the Sikhs, and the successful action of yesterday, since you have in person shared the fatigues and dangers of our Army, and witnessed its efforts and privations; but that my position at its head renders this my duty, and it is necessary from that position I should place these events on record, for the information of all Europe as well as of all India.

You, Sir, know, but others have to be told, that the sudden and unprovoked aggression of the Sikhs, by crossing the Sutlege, with the great proportion of their Army, with the avowed intention of attacking Ferozepore, in time of profound peace, rendered indispensable on our side a series of difficult combinations for the protection of our Frontier Station so unjustifiably and so unexpectedly menaced.

From the advanced and salient situation of Ferozepore, and its vicinity to the Sikh Capital, its defence against a sudden attack, became a difficult operation. It was always possible for the Sikh Government to throw a formidable force upon it, before one sufficiently numerous could, on our side, be collected to support it. But when, upon the 11th instant, it became known at Umballa, where I had established my Head Quarters, that this invasion had actually taken place, the efforts to repel it followed each other in rapid succession; notwithstanding I had the fullest confidence in Major Genl. Sir John Littler, Commanding at Ferozepore, and in the devotedness and gallantry of the Troops occupying it.

The Troops from the different Stations in the Sirhind Division were directed to move, by forced marches, upon Bussean, where, by a most judicious arrangement, you had directed supplies to be collected, within a wonderfully short space of time.

The main portion of the Force at Loodianah was withdrawn, and a Garrison thrown into the little Fortress there. From this central position already alluded to, both Loodianah and Ferozepore could be supported, and the safety of both places might be considered to be brought, in some measure, within the scope of the contingencies of a general action to be fought for their relief.

All this is soon related; but most harassing have been the marches of the Troops in completing this concentration. When their march had been further prolonged to this place, they had moved over a distance of upwards of one hundred and fifty miles in six days, along roads of heavy sand: their perpetual labour allowing them scarcely time to cook their food, even when they received it, and hardly an hour for repose, before they were called upon for renewed exertions.

When our leading Corps reached Wudnee, a small Jagheer of the late Maharaja Shere Sing, its Garrison shut the gates of the Fortagainst them; and as our Battering Guns were far in the rear, it was determined to reserve it for future chastisement, and we remained content with compelling the village to furnish supplies—it could however provide little, except for our overworked Cattle, under pain of enduring a cannonade and assault: this it did without the necessity of firing a shot.

When we reached Wudnee, it was evident that the force before Ferozepore felt the influence of our movements, as we heard that a very large portion of that force had been detached to oppose our further advance: their feeling parties retired on the morning of the 18th before our Cavalry Picquets, near the Village and Fort of Moodkee.

Son after mid-day, the Division under Major Genl. Sir Harry Smith, a Brigade of that under Major General Sir John McCaskill, and another of that under Major Genl. Gilbert, with 5 Troops of Horse Artillery and two Light Field Batteries, under Lieut. Col. Brooke, of the Horse Artillery (Brigadier in Command of the Artillery Force) and the Cavalry Division, consisting of Her Majesty's 3d Light Dragoons, the Body Guard, 4th and 5th Light Cavalry, and the 9th Irregular Cavalry, took up their encamping ground in front of Moodkee.

The Troops were in a state of great exhaustion, principally from the want of water which was not procurable on the road, when, about 3 p. m., information was received that the Sikh Army was advancing; and the Troops had scarcely time to get under arms and move to their positions, when the fact was ascertained.

I immediately pushed forward the Horse Artillery and Cavalry, directing the Infantry, accompanied by the Field Batteries, to move forward in support. We had not proceeded beyond two miles when we found the enemy in position. They were said to consist of from fifteen to twenty thousand Infantry, about the same force of Cavalry, and forty Guns. They evidently had either just taken up this position or were advancing, in order of battle against us.

To resist their attack, and to cover the formation of the Infantry, I advanced the Cavalry under Brigadiers White, Gough, and Mactier, rapidly to the front, in Colums of Squadrons, and occupied the plain. They were speedily followed by the five Troops of Horse Artillery, under Brigadier Brooke, who took up a forward position having the Cavalry then on his flanks.

The country is a dead flat, covered at short intervals, with a low but, in some places, thick Jhow jungle, and dotted with sandy hillocks. The Enemy screened their Infantry and Artillery behind this jungle, and such undulations as the ground afforded; and, whilst our twelve Battlions formed, from Echellons of Brigades, into line, opened a very severe cannonade upon our advancing Troops, which was vigorously replied to by the Battery of Horse Artillery, under Brigadier Brooke which was soon joined by the two Light Field Batteries.

The rapid and well directed fire of our Artillery appeared soon to paralyse that of the Enemy; and as it was necessary to complete our Infantry dispositions without advancing the Artillery too near to the jungle, I directed the Cavalry, under Brigadiers White and Gough, to make a flank movement on the Enemy's left with a view of threatening and turning that flank, if possible. With praiseworthy gallantry, the 3rd Light Dragroons with the 2nd Brigade of Cavalry, consisting of the Body Guard and 5th Light Cavalry, with a portion of the 4th Lancers, turned the left of the Sikh Army, and sweeping along the whole rear of its Infantry and Guns, silenced, for a time, the latter and put their numerous Cavalry to flight. Whilst this movement was taking place on the Enemy's left, I directed the remainder of the 4th Lancers, the 9th Irregular Cavalry, under Brigadier Mactier, with a Light Field Battery to threaten their right. This manusure was also successful. Had not the Infantry and Guns of the Enemy been screened by the jungle, these brilliant charges of the Cavalry would have been productive of greater effect.

When the Infantry advanced to the attack Brigadier Brooke rapidly pushed on his Horse Artillery close to the jungle, and the cannonade was resumed on both sides. The Infantry, under Major Genls. Sir Harry Smith, Gilbert, and Sir John McCaskill, attacked in Echellon of lines the Enemy's Infantry, almost invisible amongst wood and the approaching darkness of night. The opposition of the Enemy was such as might have been expected from Troops who had every thing at stake, and who had long vaunted of being irresistible. Their ample and extended line from their great superiority of numbers far outflanked ours; but this was counteracted by the flank movements of our Cavalry. The attack of the Infantry now commenced, and the roll of fire from this powerful arm soon convinced the Sikh Army that they had met with a foe they little expected; and their whole force was driven from position after position with great slaughter, and the loss of 17 pieces of Artilley, some of them of heavy calibre. Our Infantry using that never failing weapon, the Bayonet, whenever the Enemy stood. Night only saved them from worse disaster, for this stout conflict was maintained during an hour and a half of dim star light amidst a cloud of dust from the sandy plain, which yet more obscured every object.

I regret to say, this gallant and successfull attack was attended with considerable loss. The force bivouacked upon the field for some hours, and only returned to its encampment after ascertaining that it had no Enemy before it, and that night prevented the possibility of regular advance in pursuit.

I beg to congratulate you, Right Hon'ble Sir, on this first defeat of our Invaders by the Army I had the honor to command. The perseverance by which success was attained you personally witnessed; and the Troops I am sure, felt proud of the self-devotion with which their Governor General exposed himself to every danger amongst them. I before said that our loss has been severe; it could not be esteemed small if we had no other to record when I mention that, towards the conclusion of the affair, Major General Sir Robert Sale, to whom India and England are so much indebted, had his left thigh shattered by a grape shot, and that the wound has since proved mortal; Sir John McCaskill, an old and valued Officer, who has done his country much good service, received a ball through his chest on the advance of his Division and immediately expired. Brigadiers Bolton and Macier, and Lieut. Cols. Bunbury and Byrne, and other valuable Officers are amongst the wounded. These losses our country and the service will deplore, but not consider unvailing when Ferozepore shall be rescued from the Invader, and the insult to our Territory and Rule fitly punished.

I have every reason to be proud of, and gratified with the exertions of the whole of the Officers and Troops of this Army, on this arduous occasion; with the conduct and dispositions of the Generals of Divisions; the Brigadiers of the several Arms; the General, Personal, Divisional and Brigade Staff; and the Commanding Officers of Regiments. But this Dispatch is necessarily completed in the utmost haste, and in the midst of most important operations, I must therefore reserve to a future oportunity the pleasing task of bringing specially and by name to the notice of Government, the particular merits of individual Officers.

I cannot however refrain from expressing my deep sense of obligation to the Heads of the two principal Departments. Major General Sir James Lumley was unfortunately prevented, by severe sickness, from taking part in the active duties of this great crisis; Major Grant, Deputy Adjutant General, therefore supplied his place, and it is my duty to say how ably this has been done, and how great a loss. I have endured in being deprived, for the present, of his services in consequence of two wounds which he received whilst urging on the Infantry to the final and decisive attack of the Enemy's Batteries. Neither must I fail to record the valuable aid which has upon this as on a former Campaign been afforded me by the Quarter Master General, Lieut. Col. Garden: his Departmental arrangements demand my highest commendation. Major General Sir Harry Smith having been appointed to the Command of a Division, the charge of his Office, as Adjutant General of Her Majesty's Forces, devolved upon Lieut. Col. Barr, who, not only in the performance of these duties, but in every way in which assistance can be rendered, in active operations, has been to me a most valuable Staff Officer.

I have to thank you, Right Hon'ble Sir, for having placed at my disposal, the services of the Officers of your Staff, and to thank them for the valuable assistance they afforded me on this arduous day. It shall be my pleasing duty to mention them, individually, with the Officers of my own personal Staff, in the Recommendation List I shall have the honor of forwarding at an early date to Government.

I have, &c.

It was impossible to compute the quantity of metal in these Guns, but it was evident that they were much heavier than those of a similar calibre in the Bengal Artillery. The Carriages were all in good repair, with the exception of one or two struck by our shot. The whole were destroyed and the Guns left in the Fort of Moodkee. Four more Guns reported to have been dismounted by the men of the Horse Artillery and left on the field from want of means to bring them away.

(Cory.)

From His Excellency the Commander in Chief to the Right Hon'ble the Governor General of India. Dated Head Quarters, Army of the Sutlej. CAMP FEROZESHAH, 22d December, 1845.

RIGHT HON'BLE SIR,

I have again to congratulate you on the success of our Arms. A grand battle has been fought against the Sikh Army at this place, and, by the blessing of Divine Providence, Victory has been won by the valor of our Troops against odds and under circumstances which will render this action one of the most memorable in the page of Indian History.

After the combat of the 18th at Moodkee, information was received the following day, that the Enemy, in encreased numbers, were moving on to attack us, A line of defence was taken up in advance of our encampment, and dispositions made to repel us all; but the day wore away without their appearing, and at night we had the satisfaction of being reinforced by H. M.'s 29th Foot and the H. C.'s First European Light Infantry, with our small Division of heavy Guns.

I must here allude to a circumstance most favorable to our efforts in the field. On this evening, in addition to the valuable counsel with which you had, in every emergency before favored me, you were pleased yet further to strengthen my hands by kindly offering your services as second in Command in my Army. I need hardly say with how much pleasure the offer was accepted.

On the morning of the 21st, the offensive was resumed. Our columns of all Arms debouched four miles on the road to Ferozeshah, where it was known that the Enemy, posted in great force and with a most formidable Artillery, had remained since the action of the 18th incessantly employed in entrenching his position. Instead of advancing to the direct attack of their formidable works our force manœuvered to their right; the second and fourth Divisions of Infantry in front, supported by the 1st Division and Cavalry in 2nd line, continued to defile for some time out of cannon shot between the Sikhs and Ferozepore. The desired effect was not long delayed. A cloud of dust was seen on our left, and, according to the instructious sent him on the preceding evening, Major General Sir John Littler, with his Division, availing himself of the offered opportunity, was discovered in full march to unite his force with mine. The junction was soon effected, and thus was accomplished one of the great objects of all our harrassing marches and privations in the relief of this Division of our Army from the blockade of the numerous forces by which it was surrounded.

Dispositions were now made for an united attack on the Enemy's entrenched Camp. We found it to be a parallelogram of about a mile in length and half a mile in breadth, including, within its area, the strong village of Ferozeshah; the shorter sides looking towards the Sutlej and Moodkee, and the longer towards Ferozepore and the open country. We moved against the last named place, the ground in front of which was like the Sikh position at Moodkee, covered with low jungle.

The Divisions of Major General Sir John Littler, Brigadier Wallace who had succeeded Major General Sir John McCaskil, and Major General Gilbert, deployed into line, having in the centre our whole force of Artillery, with the exception of 3 Troops of Horse Artillery, one on either flank and one in support, to be moved as occasion required. Major General Sir Harry Smith's Division, and our small Cavalry Force, moved in second line, having a Brigade in reserve to cover each wing.

I should here observe that I committed the charge and direction of the left wing to Lieutenant General Sir Henry Hardinge, while I personally conducted the right.

A very heavy cannonade was opened by the Enemy, who had dispersed over their position upwards of one hundred Guns, more than forty of which were of battering calibre. These kept up a heavy and well directed fire, which the practice of our far less numerous Artillery of much lighter metal, checked, in some degree, but could not silence; finally, in the face of a storm of shot and shell, our Infantry advanced and carried these formidable entrenchments. They threw themselves upon the Guns, and with matchless gallantry, wrested them from the Enemy, but, when the Batteries were partially within our grasp, our Soldiery had to face such a fire of musketry from the sikh Infantry arrayed behind their Guns, that in spite of the most heroic efforts, a portion only of the entrenchment could be carried. Night fell while the conflict was every where raging.

Although I now brought up Major General Sir Harry Smith's Division, and he captured and long retained another point of the position, and H. M.'s 3d Light Dragoons charged and took some of the formidable Batteries, yet the Enemy remained in possession of a considerable portion of the great quadrangle; whilst our Troops, intermingled with theirs, kept possession of the remainder and finally bivouacked upon it. Exhausted by their gallant efforts, greatly reduced in numbers, and suffering extremely from thirst, yet animated by an indomitable spirit. In this state of things the long night wore away, Near the middle of it one of their heavy Guns was advanced and played with deadly effect upon our Troops. Lieutenant General Sir Henry Hardinge immediately formed H. M.'s 80th Foot and the First European Light Infantry. They were led to the attack by their Commanding Officers, and, animated in their exertions by Lieut. Colonel Wood, A. D. C. to the Lieutenant General) who was wounded on the outset. The 80th captured the Gun, and the Enemy dismayed by this countercheck, did not venture to press on further. During the whole night however the continued to base our Troops by fire of Aprillary, wherever more light discovered our resident.

ever they continued to harass our Troops by fire of Artillery, wherever moon-light discovered our position.

But with day-light of the 22d came retribution. Our Infantry formed line, supported on both flanks by Horse Artillery, whilst a fire was opened from our centre by such of our heavy Guns as remained effective, aided by a flight of Rockets. A masked Battery played with great effect upon this point, dismounting our pieces and blowing up our Tumbrils. At this moment Lieutenant General Sir Henry Hardinge placed himself at the head of the left, whilst I rode to the head of the right Wing.

Our line advanced unchecked by the Enemy's fire, drove them rapidly out of the Village of Rerozeshah and their encampment, then changing front to its left, on its centre our force continued to sweep the Camp, bearing down all opposition, and dislodged the Enemy from their whole position. The line then halted, as if on a day of manœuvre, receiving its two Leaders as they rode along its front, with a gratifying cheer, and displaying the captured Standards of the Khalsa Army. We had taken upwards of 73 pieces of Cannon, and were masters of the whole field.

The force assumed a position on the ground which it had won; but even here its labors were not to cease. In the course of two hours, Sirdar Tej Sing, who had commanded in the great lost battle, brought up from the vicinity of Ferozepore fresh Battalions, and a large Field Artillery, supported by 30,000 Ghurehurras, hitherto encamped near the river. He drove in our Cavalry parties, and made strenuous efforts to regain the position at Ferozeshah. This attempt was defeated; but its failure had scarcely become manifest, when the Sirdar renewed the contest with more Troops and a large Artillery. He commenced by a combination against our left flank, and, when this was frustrated, made such a demonstration against the captured Village, as compelled us to change our whole front to the right. His Guns, during this managarre, maintained an incessant fire, whilst our Artillery Ammunition being completely expended in these protracted combats, we were unable to answer him with a single shot.

I now directed our almost exhausted Cavalry to threaten both flanks at once, preparing the Infantry to advance in support, which apparently caused him suddenly to cease his fire and abandon the field.

For 24 hours not a Sikh has appeared in our front. The remains of the Khalsa Army are said to be in full retreat across the Sutledge at Nuggur Puttun and Tilla, or marching up its left bank towards Hurreekee Puttun in, the greatest confusion and dismay. Of their Chiefs, Bahadur Sing is killed, Lall Sing is said to be wounded Mahtab Sing, Adjudeeah Persaud, and Tej Sing, the late Governor of Peshawur, have fled with precipitation. Their Camp is a scene of the most awful carnage; and they have abandoned large stores of Grain, Camp Equipage and Ammunition.

Thus has apparently terminated this unprovoked and criminal invasion of the peaceful Provinces under British protection.

On the conclusion of such a narrative as I have given, it is surely superfluous in me to say, that I am and shall be, to the last moment of my existence, proud of the Army which I have the honor to command on the 21st and 22nd instant. To their gallant exertions I owe the satisfaction of seeing such a Victory achieved, and the glory of having my own name associated with it.

The loss of this Army has been heavy: how could a hope be formed that it should be otherwise? within 30 hours this force stormed an entrenched amp, fought a general action, and sustained two considerable combats with the enemy. Within four days it has dislodged from their positions on the left bank of the Surlege 60,000 Seikh Soldiers, supported by upwards of 150 pieces of Cannon, 108 of which the enemy acknowledged to have lost, and 91 of which are in our possession.

In addition to our losses in the battle, the captured Camp was found to be every where protected by charged Mines, by the successive springing of which many brave Officers and Men have been destroyed.

I must bear testimony to the valour displayed in these actions by the whole of the Regiments of H. M.'s Service employed and the H. C.'s 1st European Light Infantry. The Native Force seconded in a most spirited manner their gallant conduct.

To Lieutenant General Sir Henry Hardinge, my Second in Command, my warmest thanks are due, not only for his personal exertions, which were conspicuous to all, but for the able assistance which he afforded me through all the eventful scenes of this well-fought action.

To the General and my Personal Staff I feel deeply indebted for their unceasing exertions, Major Generals Sir Harry Smith, Gilbert, and Sir John Littler, and Brigadier Wallace, (who nobly fell in the hour of Victory) fully realized the high expectations I had formed of their conduct as leaders of Divisions. With the Brigadiers, the Commundant of Artillery, and the Chief Engineer, the Communding Officers of Regiments, and with the Departmental Staff, I was also greatly pleased. Their exertions were most unremitting and highly praiseworthy.

The Reports I have received from the Generals of Divisions of Infantry, the Brigadiers of Cavalry, and the Commandant of Artillery, speak in the highest terms of their respective Staff; and it is my intention as soon as possible, to forward to you, Right Hon'ble Sir, a list containing the names of all the Officers I have just enumerated, together with the names of all those who appear to me specially to merit approbation and favor.

The hurried manner in which I am forced to collect information, and prepare these numerous details, may (I fear) cause the omission of the names of some Officers well deserving of notice; but I shall not fail to send in a Supplementary List, when I can assure myself of their individual merits, as it would be most painful to me to feel that I had not done justice to any one of the brave men who shared with me the glories and dangers of this ardous conflict.

I beg now to mention the conduct of an illustrious Nobleman, Count Ravensburg, who, with the Officers of his Suite, Counts Greuben and Oriola, did us the honor to accompany the force during our operations. They were present at Moodkee, and in this great battle. It is with the greatest pleasure and sincerity I can bear my testimony to their gallant conduct on these occasions, worthy of the high reputation in arms of their countrymen, and of the great ancestor of one of them. I lament to add that Dr. Hoffmeister, the Medical Attendant on the Count, was killed in the action of the 21st instant.

I herewith enclose the Report of Lieutenant General the Right Hon'ble Sir Henry Hardinge, Second in Command.

I have, &c.
(Sd.) H. GOUGH, Genl.,
Commander in Chief, East Indies.

DATED CAMP FEROZEPORE, 22D DECEMBER, 1845.

SIR. I have the honor to report to your Excellency that, when the Army under your Command had formed its junction with the forces from Ferozepore, under Major General Sir John Littler, and was drawn up in order of battle, on the 21st instant, I proceeded with the two Left Brigades commanded by Colonels Wallace and McLaren to attack the enemy's entrenched position at Ferozeshah.

2. The line advanced with great steadiness, notwithstanding the nature of the ground intersected with jungle. When the Troops had cleared these impediments, and had opened out into the plain, they continued to press on, without a check, under a very heavy fire of Grape and Musketry from the Enemy's batteries, and having borne down all opposition, entered the Enemy's Camp and captured the Guns in their front.

3. This portion of the Camp was, soon after, on fire, compelling the Troops to desist from their attack of the remainder, and as it was now dark, the Troops formed on the ground, nearly on a line with the burning From that period till the morning, these brave men were exposed to an incessant fire from the Enemy's Guns, the darkness of the night being illuminated by the explosion of mines, tumbrils, and shells.

4. I need not dwell on the events of this night, so remarkable in Military History, because your Excellency witnessed them, and with me admired the fortitude and resolution of these brave men, ready to encounter any danger, although harassed by fatigue and suffering from thirst.

- 5. I have personally reported to your Excellency my admiration of the conduct of H. M.'s 80th Regiment and the 1st European Light Infantry, in obeying with alacrity the order I gave about midnight, to stand to their arms and charge a Battery which bore destructively on our ranks. Lieut. Colonel Bunbury, assisted by Lieut. Colonel Wood, my Aid-de-Camp, led the attack, on which occasion the latter officer was wounded. The Guns were spiked, the Enemy driven away with loss, and this part of our line left undisturbed for the remainder of the night. Their conduct in the preceding part of the action came more immediately under your Excellency's own observation
- 6. Your Excellency having formed the Troops before daylight, led the right of the attack, intrusting the left to me. The whole line instantly advanced, and animated by your example, carried every thing before them, and, having traversed the Camp from one extremity to the other, drew up in a perfect line, expressing, by loud cheers, as we rode up the line, their conscious pride that every man had done his duty.

7. I again most cordially congratulate you on the brilliant success of the Army under your Excellency's Command.

8. It is now my duty to report to your Excellency that Major General Gilbert, commanding a portion of this Division of the Army, gave me the greatest satisfaction.
9. Colonel Wallace fell bravely at the head of his Troops.

10. Colonel McLaren led his Brigade with his accustomed judgment and resolution.

My own personal Staff having been all disabled, with the exception of one most dear to me, and who still remained by my side, I derived, on the morning of the 22d, the most valuable aid from Lieut. Colonel Birch, Judge Advocate General, from Lieutenant Colonel Parsons, and from your Excellency's intelligent and brave Aid-de-Camp, Captain West. These Officers, riding several paces in front of the line, regulated the advance, animated the men, and prevented any unnecessary firing.

12. I have great obligations, during the whole of these operations, to Colonel Benson, a Member of the Military Board, and acting as my Aid-de-Camp, who has constantly accompanied me in the field, and on whose cool judgment and experienced ability, I place great reliance.

13. My Aid-de-Camp, Lt. Colonel Wood, has shewn all the qualities which make a good Officer.

14. I beg to bring to your notice my Aid-de-Camp Lieutenant Hillier, who is wounded, and Lieutenant Peel, of the 37th Native Infantry, Acting Aid-de-Camp, who is slightly wounded. Captain Beecher, of the Quarter Master General's Department, attached to my Camp, also accompanied me, and I recommend him as a very promising Officer.

15. I also recommend the Officers belonging to the Political Agency of these Provinces, who acted as my Aides-de-Camp, Captain Abbott and Lieutenant Lake are both wounded. Captain Mills, Acting Aid-de-Camp, took the command of a Troop of Horse Artillery, with his usual spirit

16. It is now with great pain that I have to record the irreparable loss I have sustained, and more especially the East India Company's Service, in the death of Major Broadfoot, of the Madras Army. my Political Agent. He was thrown from his horse by a shot, and I failed in prevailing upon him to leave the field. He remounted, and shortly afterwards, received a mortal wound. He was as brave as he was able in every branch of the Political and Military Service.

Major Somerset, my Military Secretary, much about the same time was shot through the body, conducting himself with the hereditary courage of his race. He was always foremost where difficulties required to be overcome. I deeply regret his loss.

- 18. I have also lost a most promising and brave Officer by the death of Captain Herries, on the night of the 18th at Moodkee.
- Lisut. Munro, of the 10th Lt. Cavalry, my A. D. C., a most amiable and excellent Officer, I have also had the misfortune to lose, whilst at your Excellency's disposal in the affair at Moodkee.

20. (aptain Hore, Assistant Military Secretary, and a valuable Officer, acting as my Aid-de-Camp, was killed about the same time as Major Somerset received his wound.

21. I have now to request your Excellency's notice to the conduct of an illustrious Nobleman, Coun Ravensburg, who, with the Officers of his suite, Count Greuben and Count Oriola, accompanied me in the field These Prussian Officers nobly sustained the reputation of their countrymen.

- 22. The Prince's Surgeon was struck to the ground by a hall. I saw his Royal Highness instanly spring from his horse to his assistance. The Prince's humanity was unavailing, death had already closed the Surgeon's
- I am aware of the respectful regard which your Excellency entertains for this illustrious Nobleman and his companions, travellers in the East, and I know that this brief record of their actions will be gratifying to your Excellency.

I have the honour, &c.

TO THE ADJUTANT GENERAL, BENGAL ARMY,

In pursuance of instructions received from the Right Hon'ble the Governor General under date the 20th instant, I moved out of my position at Ferozepore at 8 A. M. on the 2 Troops Horse Artillery. 21st instant, with the Corps as per margin, leaving the defence of the Cantonments to the 63d Regiment N. I. under the command of Lieut Co-lonel Wilkinson, and that of the Town to the 27th Regt. N. I. under Lieut. Col.

Carnegy, together with Detachments of Sappers and half a Field Battery in the Town, and 2d Company (reserve) of Artillery in the entrenchment.

I effected a junction with the Troops under the personal command of His Excellency the Commander in Chief and agreeably to his instructions moved into position or order of battle on the same evening about 4 P. M The first advance in line was very steady, and the approach to the Enemy's works made under a most galling and destructive fire. The casualties in the ranks were awful. The Troops however still moved on with great firmness and resolution, and approached the Enemy's Battery to within about 150 yards, when I considered the prize to be within their grasp,

Brigadier T. Reed gave the order to charge, supported by the left or Brigadier the Hon'ble T. Ashburn-ham's Brigade. This charge was commenced with such determined gallantry and spirit that the result seemed certain: The Enemy however having great confidence in their guns continued to serve them with extraordinary activity, and to make such havoe in our ranks, as to cause an immediate panic and hesitation in H. M. 62nd Foot, which of course had a similar effect on the Native Regiments on the flanks, notwithstanding all our exertions to induce them to advance by cheering and encouraging them, pointing at the same time to the short distance which they had to proceed, when the day would be their own. It was all in vain and they retired out of gun shot, to where II. M 9th Foot and 26th Regiment N. I. were drawn up in reserve. A part of the 14th Regt. N. I., with their colours, accompanied these two regiments, and entered the Enemy's Batteries.

At this period it was nearly dark, and as I had heard that the Divisions on the right had also been unable to obtain an entrance, I bivouacked for the night in the vicinity.

On the following morning I obtained information of the Right Division having been directed to renew the attack, and I moved to co-operate, as might be necessary. I then received orders to wait until further instructions, and was moved up to the Town and directed to hold it. The result of this attack was most glorious to the British Army, and I heartily congratulate his Excellency and the Governor General on the happy termination of probably one of the most sanguinary engagements that ever took place in India.

With the conduct of the Troops in general under me I was much gratified, their patience and perseverance in marching through the day, exposed to the sun and want of water, must have no doubt in some measure weakened their energies: but they notwithstanding evinced great firmness and resolution in advancing to the attack. until borne down by the furious and irresistible fire from all arms, that men could be exposed to, the loss of many of their Officers must have tended to relax their efforts and check their ardour, and under such circumstances only could the disappointment to H. M. 62d Regiment themselves and to their country have been for a moment con-

The Native Troops, under the numerous temptations to which they have been exposed for several months past by Sikh Emissaries, have evinced their loyalty to the British Government in a most remarkable manner, not a single desertion having taken place since the Enemy crossed the Sutlej, that has come to my knowlege; they have maintained the character of the Bengal Army in displaying courage and bravery under a heavy fire.

I have much pleasure in bringing to the favorable notice of His Excellency the Commander in Chief the services of those zealous and indefatigable Officers, Brig adiers T. Reed, the Hon'ble T. Ashburnham, D. Harriott, Commanding Cavalry, and E. Huthwaite, Commanding Artillery, whose cool courage throughout the attack was conspicuous. To the several Commanding Officers of Regiments and Divisions Lieut. Col. Gairdner, Commandconspicuous. To the several Commanding Officers of Regiments and Divisions Induct. Col. Galdner, Commanding 14th Regiment N. I., Lieut. Col. Bruce. Commanding 12th Regiment N. I., who lost his arm in the action, Major Wake, Commanding 44th Regiment N. I., Major Shortt, Commanding H. M. 62d Foot, Major Osborne, Commanding 54th Regt. N. I., and Captain Sandeman, Commanding 33rd N. I., I feel much indebted for the Commanding 15th Regt. N. I., who is the several content of the commanding the several content of the content of the commanding the several content of the content of th spirited and gallant manner in which they brought up their respective Regiments during the advance. It is with sincere regret that I have to report for His Excellency's information the death of my Aid-de-Camp Lieut Harvey. of H. M.'s 30th Foot, a very promising and intelligent young Officer, and devoted to his profession. He was shot during the advance in the act of cheering on the men, when within about 250 yards of the Enemy's works. His death will be a loss to the public service and deplored by his friends and relations.

Of Captain Egerton, my Assistant Quarter Master General, whose activity and zeal were conspicuous, I cannot speak too highly; he was severely wounded on the morning of the 22nd. It is with much gratification that I also submit for His Excellency's consideration and acknowledge the obligations to Major P. Innes, my Deputy Assistant Adjutant General and Captain Burnnett, Major of Brigade, for their indefatigable exertions throughout the affair, as well as for their able assistance on all occasions

Lieutenant Goodwyn, of the Engineers, has proved himself a most zealous and indefatigable Officer during the whole time that the Sikh Army has been opposite Ferozep re, as well as on the Evening of the 21st during the engagement, and whom I beg to recommend to His Excellency's notice.

To Captain W. B., Thomson, Commissariat Department, who accompanied me, and to Lieutenant W. Fullerton, Superintending the Sudder Bazar, who volunteered his services as my Aide-de-Camp, and was particularly usful to me in the field, I feel indebted.

Captain Nicholson, late Assistant Governor General's Agent, and Colonel Van Courtland, late of the Soikh Service, who were placed at my disposal by the late Major Broadfoot, C. B., afforded me every assistance in their power during the engagement, and previously, when the Seiks first crossed the Sutlege,
