GENERAL DEPARTMENT.

Bombay Castle, 20th August 1890.

No. 3335.—In exercise of the powers conferred by Section 53 (2) and (3) of the Native Passenger Ships Act X of 1887, the Governor of Bombay in Council is pleased, with the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council, to issue the following rules for observance by coasting steamers sailing under general passes granted to them under the provisions of Section 164 of the Sea Customs Act VIII of 1878 when embarking or discharging passengers at the ports under the control of the Collector of Salt Revenue, Bombay Presidency:—

I.—The owner of every such steamer shall provide two separate gangways on each side, two fore and two aft.

II.—It shall be the duty of the master of every such steamer to have two of such gangways, one fore and one aft, lowered immediately after the signal referred to in Rule I of the Rules issued under Section 6 of the Indian Ports Act X of 1889 (Government Notification No. 1735 of the 5th March 1890) is exhibited.

III.—No master of such vessel shall permit passengers to embark except by the aft gangway so lowered, or shall permit passengers to be discharged except by the fore gangway.

Every owner of such steamer shall for every breach of Rule No. I of these Rules be punished with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees and, when the breach continues, shall be punished with a further fine which may extend to twenty rupees for every day after the first during which the breach continues.

Every master of such steamer shall for every breach of No. II or III of these Rules be punished with a fine which may extend to two hundred rupees.

No. 3337.—The following Despatch from the Government of India to Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India regarding the Draft Bill to make provision for the isolation of lepers and the amelioration of their condition is republished:—

"No. 39 ^{Public Medical} dated Simla, the 22nd July 1890.

From—The Government of India,

To—The Secretary of State for India.

With reference to the correspondence marginally noted, we have the honour to forward, for Your Lordship's information, a copy of the papers entered in the enclosed list, containing the views of the Local Governments and Administrations on the draft Bill to make provision for the isolation of lepers and the amelioration of their condition.

2. Before referring to the general opinions expressed by the Local Governments and Administrations and by the public bodies and individuals consulted by them, we desire to draw Your Lordship's attention to the fact that many of the medical men who have given their opinions in regard to the Bill have not stated whether they consider that leprosy in its different stages is communicable or not, and have apparently abstained from doing so under the impression that the Bill is based upon the assumption that leprosy is contagious. We think it right, however, to inform Your Lordship that many of the highest medical authorities in India consider that the evidence at present available goes to show that leprosy is only contagious in the sense that it is inoculable, and that inoculation plays only a very subordinate part in determining the spread of the disease. The very small number of authentic and unequivocal cases of communication of the disease from one individual to another, which even the strongest advocates of a belief in the influence of contagion are able to adduce, is considered by our medical advisers strongly to support this view. They also consider that the phenomena of the distribution of the disease within leprosy countries are altogether adverse to a belief in contagion playing any important part in causing the general diffusion of the disease. In Norway, for example, the disease appears to be almost limited to certain areas, such as the districts around Bergen, Molde, and Trondhjem; and in India the very unequal incidence of the disease over different parts of the peninsula is equally striking. Your Lordship will find an able paper on the subject by the late Dr. Lewis and Surgeon-Major D. D. Cunningham, F.R.S., printed as Appendix B to the Twelfth Annual Report (for 1875) of the Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India. Dr. Cunningham, who in his capacity of Special Assistant to the Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India is our chief scientific adviser, is of opinion that the evidence at present existent in regard to the communicability of leprosy is very imperfect, and that, such as it is, it is opposed to the theory that the disease is readily communicable by contagion in any stage, or that, even in the ulcerative stage of the disease, lepers are a source of any considerable danger to those with whom they may associate.

3. The opinions on the objects and scope of the Bill given by the Local Governments and Administrations, and by those whom they have consulted, exhibit, as might be expected in the present state of uncertainty as to the cause and character of the disease, great divergence.

The Madras Government considers that there is no reasonable room for doubt that, if it is intended to stamp out or materially reduce the disease, something far more thorough than the proposed legislation is essential. It holds that to effect this object it would be necessary to enact that any one found to be suffering from leprosy should be compulsorily removed to an asylum and detained there until cured or until death. The cost of such a measure would in the opinion of the Government of Madras be prohibitive and it regards the small measure of seclusion proposed in the draft Bill as likely to have no appreciable effect on the spread of the disease, while the expenditure necessary to carry it out would absorb money which can, the Local Government thinks, be devoted with greater utility to general medical relief. The Governor in Council is therefore unable to approve of the proposed legislation, but he would give his support to an amendment of the law which would render it possible to control the carrying on by lepers of various avocations, such as those of butcher, baker, bazaar-keeper, barber, or washerman, likely to spread the disease, provided that such control should be exercised not with the object of generally prohibiting lepers from earning their own livelihood, but with that of dealing with any special cases in which the danger of contagion might be shown to exist.

The views of the Bombay Government are in close accord with those of the Government of Madras. It considers that the Bill will be ineffectual in stamping out the disease unless it is made compulsory, so as to affect all lepers in every condition of life, and that its effects in mitigating the disease will be limited to removing from public view and providing for lepers who are unable to earn their own living. It would extend the operation of the Bill by including in it stringent provisions for the detention of persons who by working in various capacities may spread the disease among the public, and would have it declared to be an offence under the Indian Penal Code for a person consciously suffering from leprosy to omit to take effectual means for his own segregation, or to take measures to get himself placed by lawful authority in a retreat.

The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal is prepared to accept the Bill as a tentative and experimental measure, intended only, should experience and further scientific enquiry demonstrate that it is required, to pave the way for more stringent legislation in the future; but he would add to it a provision similar to that suggested by the Governments of Madras and Bombay for controlling the exercise of trades by lepers, and to prohibit their use of public tanks, and possibly of public means of conveyance. The opinions of the numerous public bodies and associations consulted by the Bengal Government demonstrate how much public opinion in India is at present divided upon the subject of the segregation of lepers. The associations which are composed of natives of India do not regard the need for isolation as having been established, and are generally apprehensive lest diseases which are admittedly quite innocuous may be confounded with leprosy: those associations, on the other hand, which are composed mainly or entirely of Europeans and Eurasians regard the Bill as of too permissive a character.

The Lieutenant-Governor and Chief Commissioner of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh accepts the main lines of the Bill as it has been drafted, but is also in favour of extending its application to lepers engaged in trade or other occupations calculated to spread the disease, and of prohibiting any leper from using a public conveyance or attending a place of public resort.

The Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab would limit the provision of the Bill regarding the detention of lepers found asking for alms to wandering lepers or lepers begging in towns or cities or fairs, but would, at the same time, widen its terms so as to include all lepers, of whatever rank in life, if it can be shown that their behaviour is a source of danger to the public.

The opinions of those consulted in the Central Provinces is that legislation should be undertaken to check the spread of leprosy, and the Chief Commissioners both of those Provinces and Assam advocate the extension of the scope of the Bill so as to restrain lepers from pursuing avocations which are likely to favour the extension of the disease.

The Resident at Hyderabad would accept the draft Bill as it stands for Berar.

4. After considering the very conflicting opinions received from those whom we had consulted regarding the Bill, we deliberated whether it would not be desirable to allow the introduction of the Bill in an amended form, limiting its application, on the one hand, to persons suffering from the disease in an advanced and specially dangerous stage, and, on the other, extending the power of arrest and compulsory detention so as to cover all such dangerous lepers who might, after warning, persist in coming out and mixing with the public. We were, however, advised, as we have already observed in paragraph 2, that there is no safe basis for an enactment even of this restricted description.

5. His Excellency the Viceroy has recently received two unofficial communications from the Honorary Secretary of the National Leprosy Fund. With the former of these were sent copies of a pamphlet reporting the proceedings at a subscription dinner lately held in connection with the National Leprosy Fund under the presidency of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. It is stated in this pamphlet that one of the objects of the Fund is the appointment of a Commission for not less than one year, to consist of three members nominated in England and two nominated by an Indian Auxiliary Committee, for the purpose of investigating the disease of leprosy in India. From the subsequent communication, which has just been received, it appears that the Committee of the National Leprosy Fund has determined that, before sending a Commission to India, it is desirable to collect by correspondence as much information as possible, and that with this object a Technical Secretary should be appointed for the term of not more than a year to collect from the medical officers of leper establishments and from others interested in leprosy throughout the world all available and useful information relating to the causes of, and cures for, the disease. The Committee proposes to publish in a condensed form in a journal the details thus collected, and to circulate the journal among those interested in the matter. We are instructing those of our medical officers who have had special opportunities for studying the phenomena of leprosy in this country to supply to the Secretary appointed for the purpose all particulars which they may have to communicate. We desire at the same time to inform Your Lordship that, while we cannot now pledge ourselves to accept the conclusions of such a Commission as the Committee of the National Leprosy Fund proposes to appoint, we shall be prepared, in the event of three members being eventually sent out as proposed from England, to depute two medical officers in the service of Government to co-operate with them, and to bear the cost of such deputation. We think that this would be preferable to leaving the selection of two Commissioners to an Auxiliary Committee to be formed in India.

6. Under these circumstances, and in consequence of the doubts which exist as to the contagious character of leprosy, even in an advanced stage, we have come to the conclusion that it is expedient to postpone legislation for the present, and we hope that the investigations above referred to may provide more definite information as to the causes of leprosy and the best means to be adopted for its prevention.

7. As the subject has evoked much interest in this country, we propose to make this Despatch public at the end of the week in which it will reach Your Lordship.

(Signed) C. J. LYALL,

Offg. Secretary to the Government of India."

By order of His Excellency the Right Honourable the Governor in Council,

J. NUGENT,

Chief Secretary to Government.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

(RAILWAY.)

Bombay Castle, 20th August 1890.

No. 30.—The following Notification by the Government of India in the Public Works Department is republished for information:—

"No. 343, dated 12th August 1890.—The Governor-General in Council is pleased to publish the following rules under section 22 of the Indian Railway Act, 1890, defining the cases in which, and in those cases the extent to which, the procedure prescribed in sections 17 to 20 (both inclusive) of the Act may be dispensed with:

1. For the following works mentioned in section 20, namely, deviation lines, stations, junctions and crossings on the level, and any alteration or reconstruction materially affecting the structural character of any work, any of which form part of or are directly connected with a railway used for the public carriage of passengers, and have been constructed after the inspection which preceded the first opening of the section of railway in which they are situated, only such notice will be required from the Railway Administration, in lieu of the notice prescribed in section 17 (I), as may from time to time be prescribed by the Inspector concerned, it being understood that in no case are such works to be opened by the Railway Administration concerned without giving the required notice, and without receiving in writing the permission of the Inspector to open the work, whether the Inspector considers an inspection of the work necessary or not.

2. With reference to sections 18 and 25 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, power is hereby conferred on all Inspectors of Railways, without previous report under section 19, to sanction the opening for passenger traffic of the following works, when forming part of, or directly connected with, a railway used for the public carriage of passengers, if, on careful inspection, it is found that provisions (b), (c) and (f) of sub-section (I) of section 19 have been duly fulfilled:

(a) any temporary diversion, including temporary bridges and their approaches;

NOTE.—Such temporary diversions may, in cases of accident, be opened under section 21 on the responsibility of the Railway Administration; but the Inspector should, if the use of the temporary diversion be likely to be extended for more than three days, take the earliest possible opportunity of inspecting the temporary diversion.

(b) New bridges on a line already opened;

(c) extensions of existing bridges on open lines;

(d) new sidings to be used for the working of passenger trains;

(e) any interlocking apparatus to be used for the working of points and signals in connection with passenger trains;

(f) any extensive alterations in the arrangements for signalling;

(g) any crossing of one line by another by means of a diamond crossing on the level.

It is to be clearly understood that such works are, with the single exception mentioned in the 'Note' to clause (a), to be inspected by Inspectors previous to their being opened for passenger traffic.

In all cases coming under this rule, the Inspector will, on authorizing the opening of the work, report in full detail to the Director General of Railways in regard to the work thus permitted to be opened.

3. In the case of minor works other than those named in the preceding rule, and which form part of or are directly connected with a railway already opened for the public carriage of passengers, the Inspector will exercise his discretion as to carrying out an inspection or not.

Power is also conferred on all Inspectors of Railways to sanction the opening of such minor works not only without inspection in any cases in which the Inspector considers such inspection to be unnecessary, but also without previous report under section 19, provided that the Inspector is otherwise satisfied that such opening will not be attended with danger to the public.

In regard to these works it will be sufficient if the Inspector, either with or without inspection at his discretion, authorizes in writing the Railway Administration to open the work."

By order of His Excellency the Right Honourable the Governor in Council,

K. A. JOPP, Colonel, R.E.,
Acting Secretary to Government.
