The several Reports on the Progress of Education in India during the year 1893-94, with the orders passed on them by Local Governments and Administrations.

RESOLUTION.

In the Resolution recorded in the Home Department, dated the 7th September 1894, the Government of India reviewed at length the state and progress of education in India during the quinquennium 1887-88 to 1891-92 as shown in the Report of Mr. A. M. Nash of the Bengal Educational Service, and noticed also the results of education in the year 1892-93. In publishing for general information the statistics of education for 1893-94, therefore, only a brief summary is necessary of the most important features presented by the figures.

2. The total number of Public and Private Institutions to which the Educational Reports relate rose from 141,793 in 1891-92 and 144,699 in 1892-93 to 147,297 in 1893-94. The increase was shared by both classes of institutions, public institutions having numbered 102,145 in 1892-93 and 103,172 in 1893-94, and private institutions having numbered in those years 42,554 and 44,125. The number of Primary (public) institutions, which had fallen from 97,109 in 1891-92 to 96,409 in 1892-93, rose again to 97,325 in the year under review. There was also an increase in the number of Secondary (public) Schools from 4,962 in 1892-93 to 5,066 in 1893-94. The number of elementary Private institutions rose from 37,111 in 1892-93 to 38,395 in 1893-94, an increase of over 500 having occurred in Korān Schools.

3. The percentage of scholars to the total population of school-going age (calculated at 15 per cent. on the statistics of population according to the last Census) was 11·67 in 1893-94, as compared with 11·38 in 1892-93. The percentages of male (20·82) and female (2·19) scholars on the total male and female population of school-going age showed a slight advance over the figures for the previous year (20·32 and 2·12, respectively). The total number of pupils under instruction in schools of all classes increased from 3,966,267 in 1892-93 to 4,066,235 in 1893-94. Of these, there were 3,602,492 males and 363,775 females in 1892-93, against 3,691,292 males and 374,943 females in 1893-94.

4. The statement given in the margin compares the average monthly attendance at the different classes of public institutions during the years 1892-93 and 1893-94. The average monthly number of scholars attending these institutions rose from 3,228,114 in 1892-93 to 3,308,121 in the year under report. As observed in previous years, similar statistics regarding private institutions (advanced and elementary) are not available. On the 31st March 1894 there were 14,360 students in Arts Colleges, as compared with 13,387 on the 31st March 1893. The number on the rolls of Colleges or Departments of Colleges for Professional Training on those dates were, respectively, 3,824 and 3,344. It is satisfactory also to observe that the increase noticed last year in the number of pupils at Secondary and Primary Schools has been maintained, the former having risen from 488,261 at the end of March 1893 to 507,658 at the end of March 1894, and the latter from 2,890,824 to 2,947,530.

There were 4,370 pupils attending Training Schools for Masters on the 31st March 1894, against 4,327 on the corresponding date in 1893; but the number attending Training Schools for Mistresses, which had risen from 793 at the close of 1891-92 to 1,092 at the close of 1892-93, again fell away to 909 at the close of 1893-94. There was, however, a steady increase in the number attending other special schools from 16,586 at the end of 1891-92 and 17,681 at the end of 1892-93 to 18,363 at the end of 1893-94.

5. Of the total number (4,066,235) of pupils (including those in private institutions) receiving instruction, 404,591 were studying English, as compared with 388,650 in the previous year. The number (579,361) studying a classical language showed a small increase (575,789 in 1892-93); and the number learning a vernacular (3,690,391), a substantial increase (3,607,327 in 1892-93). The greatest increase among pupils learning English was among those attending Secondary Schools (301,376 in 1892-93 and 310,621 in 1893-94). The highest rise in the number of those studying a classical language also occurred among the pupils at Secondary Schools, and the increase among those studying a vernacular was naturally greatest at Primary Schools. The number of pupils in private institutions studying English, a classical language and a vernacular was, respectively, 4,784, 296,176 and 325,979 in 1893-94, as compared with 5,086, 284,132 and 316,445 in 1892-93.

6. The following statement shows the race and religion of the pupils, and the proportion borne by each class to the total number, during the past two years:—

Race and Religion.	1892-93.		1893-94.
	Number.	Proportion to total number.	Number.	Proportion to total number.
Hindus	2,661,136	67·09	2,732,186	67·19
Muhammadians	894,241	22·55	905,571	22·27
Europeans and Eurasians	26,959	·68	27,975	·69
Native Christians	98,423	2·48	99,887	2·46
Miscellaneous races or religions	285,515	7·20	300,616	7·39

Owing to the general increase of numbers, the percentage of Muhammadans to the total has slightly fallen: but the number of Muhammadan pupils shows an increase yet greater than that (from 887,236 to 894,241) in the preceding year. Of the students receiving a Collegiate education, the greatest number (15,303) were Hindus; 1,212 were Muhammadans; 528, Europeans and Eurasians; 548, Native Christians; and 593 belonged to other classes. Of the pupils in Secondary Schools, 367,413 were Hindus, 70,816 Muhammadans, 23,078 Europeans and Eurasians, 26,124 Native Christians, and 20,227 belonged to other classes. Of those under primary instruction in public institutions 2,116,506 were Hindus, 580,272 Muhammadans 3,431 Europeans and Eurasians, 68,311 Native Christians, and 179,010 belonged to other classes.

7. The total Expenditure (direct and indirect) on public instruction, which had risen from Rs. 3,05,19,632 in 1891-92 to Rs. 3,16,72,827 in 1892-93, reached Rs. 3,22,79,706 in 1893-94. The direct expenditure increased from Rs. 2,50,54,254 in 1892-93 to Rs. 2,58,51,608 in the year under review. The increase was mainly due to a rise in the expenditure on Secondary and Primary Schools, from Rs. 1,03,29,480 and Rs. 99,73,177, respectively, in 1892-93 to Rs. 1,06,36,125 and Rs. 1,03,23,937 in 1893-94. The expenditure on Arts Colleges increased from Rs. 21,10,205 to Rs. 22,13,938; that on Professional Colleges from Rs. 7,97,427 to Rs. 8,22,866; and that on Training Schools for teachers from Rs. 6,82,740 to Rs. 7,06,347. The expenditure on all other special schools decreased from Rs. 11,61,225 to Rs. 11,48,395. The indirect expenditure on education (which includes charges on account of direction, inspection, scholarships, buildings and miscellaneous items) fell from Rs. 66,18,573 to Rs. 64,28,098.

8. The expenditure on education was met from Provincial, Local and Municipal funds, from fees, and from miscellaneous sources such as subscriptions, endowments, &c. The following statement compares the sums spent from each of these sources, and the proportion of each sum to the total cost of education, in the years 1892-93 and 1893-94:—

Sources from which expenditure on Education is met.	1892-93.		1893-94.

Total	3,16,72,827	100.0	3,22,79,706	100.0

The Government of India regret that the contribution from Municipal funds, the smallness of which has been noticed in previous reviews, has declined, but the increase in the income from fees and miscellaneous sources is satisfactory; and the general results summarised above afford, in the opinion of the Governor General in Council, satisfactory evidence of the continued progress in the work of public instruction during the year 1893-94.

ORDER.—Ordered that a copy of the above Resolution be forwarded to the Local Governments and
