CUSTOMS CIRCULAR No. XVI.

From—The Government of India, Finance and Commerce Department, No. 3276-S. R., dated the 10th July 1895.

To—The Chief Secretary to the Government of Bombay.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 1756, dated the 2nd March 1895, referring for consideration and orders the following questions which have arisen in connection with the working of the Indian Tariff Act as amended by Act XVI of 1894:

(1) Whether materials for foot-bridges and over-bridges, which are not part of the permanent way of a railway, are included in the exemption of ‘railway material for permanent way’ under No. 93 of Schedule IV;

(2) Whether, in the same number, the words ‘component parts thereof’ refer to all the articles mentioned before those words, or only to engines, tenders, carriages, waggons, trollies and trucks; and whether signal wire comes within the exemption as a component part of a signal;

(3) Whether the component parts of articles specified as ‘railway material’ are to be charged with duty on the analogy of component parts of machinery, though capable of being used for other purposes;

(4) Whether parts of telegraph instruments and apparatus, such as wire, carbon blocks and plates, copper wire covered with silk or cotton, and ebonite sheets, are included in the exemption in No. 64 of Schedule IV; and if so, whether such parts and materials as are capable of being used for other purposes than those of a railway should be charged with duty;

(5) Whether imports of copper coin of the Government of India are chargeable with duty;

(6) How the words ‘a public place’ in No. 19 of Schedule IV are to be interpreted, and whether statues and pictures intended for erection in the places marginally noted are exempted under this entry.

(a) A Roman Catholic church.

(b) An institute consisting of a library and a lecture hall.

(c) A railway station.

(d) A hospital.

(e) A municipal hall.

(f) A cemetery.

2. In reply I am to communicate the views and orders of the Government of India on the several points raised, in the order in which they are noted in the foregoing paragraph.

(1) The whole of Article 93 of Schedule IV down to the word ‘also’ is governed by the phrase ‘for permanent way and rolling stock,’ and nothing is exempt which does not come within that limitation. Over-bridges, whether for foot-passengers or wheel traffic, cannot ordinarily be regarded as part of ‘permanent way.’

(2) The words ‘component parts’ refer to all the articles mentioned in the entry precedent thereto. Component parts of railway signals are therefore exempt. Whether any particular importation of wire is or is not a component part of a signal must be decided by the Collector of Customs on the facts of each case, his decision having reference to the size of a wire, its shape, and other qualities, and the circumstances of the importation.

(3) The limitation applied to component parts of machinery by the second proviso to Article No. 14 should be held by Customs officials to apply equally to component parts of railway material.

(4) Telegraphic instruments and apparatus, when imported by or under the orders of a railway company, are exempt under No. 64, and the heading of the entry shews that component parts of such instruments and apparatus are included in the exemption. Whether or not any particular articles of the kind mentioned in this question are component parts is a point which must be decided by the Collector on the facts of each case, as with machinery and railway material.

(5) Copper coin of the Government of India, which is legal tender, should not be held to be taxable.

(6) Much risk of error would attend an attempt to give a precise and exhaustive definition of the words 'public place,' although for the purpose of Article No. 19 of Schedule LV it will probably not be difficult to determine, on the merits of the case, whether any particular picture or statue comes within the exemption or not. The principle of the exemption lies in the distinction between works of art imported for the benefit, use, or enjoyment of private persons, and those imported for devotion to general public use. In elucidation of this principle, the following illustrations are given:

- (a) A place which is private property cannot be a 'public place,' for example, a shop, a private gallery or museum.
- (b) A place devoted to the uses of a portion only of the community cannot be a 'public place,' e.g., a church, or a cemetery. The public have not free access to any of these places, for it is in the power of certain private individuals or bodies to exclude them.
- (c) A place which is the property of a public body, such as a municipality, and is by it opened to public use, is a public place. A municipality is expressly constituted to hold property and manage local affairs as trustees for the public.
- (d) A railway station is not a public place for the railway company have the right to exclude people from it.
- (e) Neither is a hospital from which, by the nature of the case, the public are excluded. At the same time it may be admitted that a statue erected in front of a hospital and in full view of the passengers on a public road is erected in a public place, just as much as any other statue which stands in the middle or on the side of a public road, from which it is fenced off by a railing.

It is believed that there will be no difficulty in disposing of individual cases in accordance with the principles here explained, but I am to say that definite rulings can be given by the Government of India only as actual cases arise in which it is necessary to come to a definite decision. Works of art, such as are exempted under Article No. 19, are not likely to be very numerous, and it will always be easy to obtain the orders of the Government of India in any case of doubt.

(Signed) J. F. FINLAY,
Secretary to the Government of India."
